DEMONSTRATION OF FIRST CANADIAN-BUILT CRUISER TANK AND GUN EQUIPMENT

Impressive Scenes Are Testimony to Quebec's Industrial Effort

Those who are critical regarding Government initiative in providing fighting equipment so urgently needed in the conduct of this war, would do well to inspect for themselves — as The Watchman editor was privileged to do this week — the tremendous undertakings entailed in the construction of the new cruiser tanks and mobile batteries.

It was on October 23, 1940, that the Montreal Locomotive Works Ltd. — of which Mr. W. F. Drysdale, well-known in St. Andrews and associated with this county, is a leading figure — was awarded a Dominion Government contract to build medium cruiser tanks. To carry out the contract it was necessary to construct a building approximately 800 x 400 feet; vacant land was acquired adjoining the company's locomotive shops on Notre Dame Street East, and this site was quickly transformed into a modern, efficient shop of steel and concrete construction.

Monday afternoon, June 30th, on invitation of the Hon. C. D. Howe, we, with many others, were privileged to be present and see the first M. 111 cruiser tank built in the Dominion of Canada. This tank is a product of the designing genius of the Ordnance Engineers of the United States, Great Britain and Canada, and is said to be the most efficient type in existence in the world today.

The cruiser tank is heavily armed with machine guns and a canon capable of great offensive power. The gunners are sheltered by thick, armored steel walls that cannot be penetrated by an ordinary shell and are vulnerable only to amour-piercing projectiles at point-blank range. When the tank is closed for action, heavy steel doors protect all openings and the soldiers inside may view the field of combat through various devices which enable them to see clearly and yet be protected fully from enemy fire. Should one of these vision devices be destroyed by a rifle bullet or other enemy fire; it is quickly replaceable by spare parts carried in the tank.

"A Vehicle of Freedom"

"This fine fighting machine", said Mr. W. F. Drysdale during the course of the demonstration, "will be equally a 'vehicle of freedom'". Mr. Drysdale, speaking in French, was heard in the radio broadcast of the ceremonies. He was the only speaker on the program to employ the French tongue.

Dedication of First Canadian-Built 25-Pounder Gun, at Sorel

The following day a ceremony of similar significance was witnessed by a large gathering at Sorel, Que., where a demonstration of the first Canadian-built 25-pounder guns and gun carriages, as illustrated in these pages, aroused major interest.

Many Problems Met

The manufacture of this gun and carriage includes all varieties of engineering production. All round interchangeability is an absolute necessity with many of the parts, adding to the manufacturing intricacies and problems.

Edouard Simard, vice-president of Sorel Industries Limited and a member of the control committee, which includes W. F. Drysdale representing the Canadian Government and J. C. Crone, the British Government, was the first speaker at the ceremonies and introduced the Hon. Adelard Godbout, Premier of Quebec. Mr. Godbout welcomed the guests from all the Canadian provinces and neighboring countries and told them: "I am glad you have come, and I hope you are satisfied with what we are doing in Quebec."

Mr. Simard spoke again and thanked the workers for the fine work they had done. "To those who maliciously accuse our race as fifth columnists, you have answered not only in words but with such products as guns, corvettes, minesweepers and freighters." He read a telegram from Prime Minister Mackenzie King in which Mr. King expressed his regret at his unavoidable absence.

Mr. Drysdale spoke briefly and introduced his co-worker, James Crone, who drew a roar from the crowd with his concluding remark: "Bravo Sorel! May this gun make it as hot for the Germans as this weather is making it for me today."

Munitions and Supply Minister Howe told his listeners:

"The ceremony marks the coming into substantial production of Canada's largest plant for the manufacture of field artillery and naval guns. So far as I am aware, it is the only plant on the continent of North America manufacturing large guns from the raw material to the finished product. The process is new to this country. To have built this mammoth plant and to have brought it into successful production is an outstanding achievement in Canada's industrial history".

Tells of Difficulties

He went on to tell of the Simard brothers and their efforts to build guns for Britain even before the war. Failing to get co-operation from English manufacturers, they joined forces with French armament makers, Schneider-Creusot, who sent a number of technicians to Canada. The collapse of France caused serious interruption to the work as many of the technicians returned to France.

"At that time", Mr. Howe explained, "it was decided to greatly enlarge the output of the plant and

Hotter Than In Singapore

"I am quite in earnest when I say that it has been hotter here in the past few days than it ever is in Singapore", said N. H. Choon, a Singapore businessman now visiting in Montreal. "That ought to be some kind of comfort to the good people who have perspired so freely of late," he remarked with a smile.

NETHERLANDS OFFICER HERE ON LEAVE

Burned With Oil When Rescue Boat Sunk In Epic Evacuation

Lieutenant Hans Kopmels, clad in shorts and a ruddy sunburn, looked no different from other prosaic sun-bathers whom we encountered last week-end on the North River shore. Tall, dark and handsome—somewhat shy in speech — it was his foreign accent which singled him out as a stranger to these parts. That was before he "opened up" and told his story — a story which stamped him surely as a being from another world. Youthful, lithe and erect, there was little in his appearance to suggest the horror and excitement he had witnessed in war-torn Europe.

Hans Kopmels is not his name, but it will serve; for in the downfall of his native Holland he lost his identity. "Reported missing — believed dead", his parents were officially told; but they know different, for they receive his letters regularly, written in the present quarters where he is a training-officer with Netherlands troops on Canadian soil.

Lieutenant Kopmels speaks four languages, fluently enough for average conversation.

He is a man who has seen and heard Hitler on several occasions. He describes the Feuhrer's fiery oratory on the platform, his wild gesticulations, his appearance of a man hypnotized by the hurricane of his own words.

Kopmels joined the Holland army in 1931. War came, and in 1939 he found himself mobilized for service. At 30 years of age, the last two years of his life have been packed with more thrills than his previous 28 . . .

When Holland was invaded, our friend was fast asleep. No ultimatum; no declaration of war. The Germans came at 3 a.m. and bombed the barracks two miles from where he was situated — then the troops drove in.

The defeat of his country is now a paragraph in the fast-turning pages of history. The Dutch forces were routed; many were killed; many were taken prisoner; but several of the units withdrew as best they could through Belgium and France— some of them even reaching the Riviera. And Kopmels, listed among the missing,

AIRPLANE MADE FORCED LANDING IN A HAYFIELD

A private plane, its progress hampered by poor visibility, was brought down Saturday afternoon in a hayfield on the J. E. Walker farm just east of town. The pilot, Flt.-Lt. Harry Forbell, was en route from St. Jovite to Montreal. Forbell, a St. Jovite man, appeared with his head bandaged, having been a previous casualty in an Air Force training mishap . . . The plane was landed safely on Saturday, near the St. Jerome highway, but the pilot had difficulty in taking off next day owing to the limitations of the field. In his first attempt the tail of the plane caught the fence and flopped in an adjacent corn patch. A portion of the fence was then removed, and, although handicapped by loose hay and the nature of the ground, the flyer took off on his second trial.

The machine was an object of interest to many spectators during its brief stop-over.

PUPILS FOREGO PRIZES; MONEY GOES FOR WAR

No Visitors, No Closing Ceremonies at Cons. School, St. Andrews

St. Andrews E. — The last session for this term of the Protestant Consolidated School was held on Wednesday, June 25th. There were no visitors nor closing exercises, for two reasons. Firstly, the pupils had voted to forego prizes, except one special, so that the money usually expended for that purpose might be devoted to war work. Secondly, some scholars had to make up for time lost from school work through illness, and others were giving their spare time to knitting, etc., for the Red Cross. After receiving their reports and bidding farewell to their teachers, two of whom are not returning, the scholars went happily home, as the percentage of failures was small. Grade X results will not be known for some time.

Mr. Melvin Graham, principal, and Mrs. Harland McOuat, Grades VI and VII, have resigned from the staff.

TELLS OF FIRST AMMUNITION PLANT IN B'BG

15 Persons Engaged in "Gatling Gun" Howard's Early Project, 1886

Industry Now Employing Over 2,000 Workers On War Supplies

The current issue of "The Tracer", local news bulletin for C-I-L and D. I. L. employees, recalls the story of "Gat" Howard's early project which formed the nucleus of the present Brownsburg ammunition industry.

The story begins with the Northwest Rebellion in 1885, when the Canadian Government imported Capt. A. L. Howard to operate a couple of Gatling Guns which had been purchased from below the border. With the termination of the rebellion at Batoche, Saskatchewan, Capt. Howard returned to Ottawa, where he realized that Canada did not possess a single cartridge factory from which to supply her soldiers and sportsmen with ammunition. With characteristic vigor and determination he succeeded in winning the support of some influential men of that day, among them Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, Government Leader in the Senate. Plans were drawn up, and in May, 1886, the Dominion Cartridge Co. Ltd. was incorporated "for the manufacture and sale of cartridges, shells, etc." An idle mill of the Hamilton Powder Co. at Brownsburg was re-opened and the cartridge works built alongside. "Gat" Howard was made works manager, and two months after he had imported four skilled machinists and a carload of machinery, the Brownsburg factory was turning out cartridges.

We have come a long way since that day in October, 1886 — remarks the editor of "The Tracer". From a personnel of 15 persons, including 2 women, 1 boy and 3 girls, the "Dominion" Ammunition Division of C-I-L employs more than 400 persons during peace time, and over 2,000 at the present time with the inclusion of Defence Industries Limited.

HELD RESPONSIBLE IN AUTO FATALITY AT ST. EUSTACHE

St. Eustache — Henri Roche, 8673 St. Denis street, Montreal, was held criminally responsible by a coroner's jury here Monday afternoon of the death of Armand Hamel, of Plage Moderne. The victim was struck by an automobile driven by the accused on Sunday afternoon near the deBellefeuille Bridge.

Evidence given at the inquest by Det. R. Jargaille of the Provincial Police and by Highway Constable J. Martin tended to show that Roche was travelling at an excessive speed when he crashed into Hamel and a tree in the village here. Constable Martin testified he had followed Roche for several miles and that he had overtaken a number of cars while the automobile kept its speed high until it struck Hamel and a tree.

Arraigned in St. Jerome, Roche was freed on three bonds of $950. each. Preliminary inquiry will take place on July 21.

UP-TO-DATE BOTTLING UNIT IS INSTALLED

Last-Word Equipment in J. P. McKimmie & Sons' Soft Drink Works

Floor Space Enlarged, and New Machinery in Action This Week

The progress of local industries makes the most constructive news a community can offer. This week The Watchman notes a long stride in the advancement of a neighbor industry, the J. P. MacKimmie & Sons' bottling works — which, incidentally, will celebrate its 25th anniversary next month.

For several weeks past, extensions and improvements have been made to the premises of this firm on Foundry Street. An additional 15 x 55 feet of floor space was added, and the factory, with its white decoration, presents an airy, clean and modern interior. Office quarters have also been attractively partitioned off.

The unloading of a new automatic washing and bottling outfit last week-end, from a Boyd's Express transport, was a major undertaking. The washing unit alone is over 18 feet long and weighs around six tons. It is constructed on a solid base, and had to be transported in one piece. The new bottling machine is a separate unit, but the two pieces mounted as a joint assembly give a completely automatic outfit, in which soft drink bottles, fed in at one end, are hygienically washed, filled, capped and delivered at the other end to be put into the cases. Between those two extremities they are not touched by the operators. The hand-bottling method is now eliminated.

The size of the washing unit may be judged by the fact that its endless belt has a capacity of 26 dozen bottles continuously in the washing process. This consists of a jet system, during which they receive a three per cent caustic solution and water sprayed at 140 degrees Fahrenheit. Hot water is supplied from a furnace in the basement with aquastat control. From the washer the bottles are conveyed to the bottler, where the syrup formulae and water are injected and the bottles capped. The water comes from a cooling and aerating room, where the town water supply is first passed through filters and activated carbon.

This up-to-date equipment is now installed and may be seen in operation at the MacKimmie plant. An indication of the increasing business handled by the factory may be noted in the four large trucks and a service van which are kept constantly on the road . . . The horse stables, rigs and sleighs of a few years ago have given way to these more speedy conveyances.

GATINEAU POWER OFFICIAL KILLED BY ELECTRIC WIRE

Ste. Adele, June 30 — Ulysses Alie, 39, superintendent of this district for the Gatineau Power Company, was killed here this afternoon at five o'clock while making a service call to repair a refrigerator at the Ste. Adele Lodge.

It is understood that Alie in some manner contacted a 110-volt electrical charge, which caused his death.

Operating in the local area for the Gatineau Power Company for the past seven years, Alie came here from Maniwaki. He is married. The body will be taken to Maniwaki for burial Friday morning.

Following the accident artificial respiration was attempted and the services of Dr. J. Poirier, of Ste. Adele, enlisted in a vain fight to revive the stricken man.

TOWN MAKES 'PARADE' ITEM IN MACLEAN'S

In Monthly Journal's Feature Column of Topical News

In the "Parade" column of MacLean's Magazine, July 1st issue, appears the following item:

"An unusual communiqué concerns the housing situation in Lachute, Que. In that lively small town the Canadian National Railways has closed down its passenger depot because of lack of business, leaving vacant the railway-station building and an old wooden water tank. An exceptionally enterprising citizen bought the empty tank and converted it into four small housekeeping apartments, one above the other. He built a chimney on one side of the tank and an enclosed stairway on the opposite side. Each suite has one bedroom, a living room, kitchenette and bath. A tiny, but practical balcony goes with each apartment, affording a swell view of the meandering North River.

"Our correspondent doesn't say whether or not anything has been done with the station. Should be a grand opportunity for somebody to open a neighborhood store."

—The suggestion comes too late; as previously noted in this newspaper, the station itself has already been converted into tenements . . . The "enterprising citizen" who undertook to convert the water tank, it may be mentioned, was V. A. Paquin, who lives next door and purchased the C. N. R. tank.

PASTEURIZED MILK NOW IN DISTRIBUTION TO CONSUMERS

All Local Supplies Treated According to By-law

According to their antics, some people are more interested in 'working' democracy than in working for it. —Forest Standard.

Pasteurizing Plants Operating in Three Lachute Dairies

Now that Municipal By-law 156 has come into effect stipulating that all milk and cream sold in town must be pasteurized, three of the local dairies — McOuat's, Graham's and Bradford Bros.' — have been equipped with the most modern machinery, and these installations have been approved by the Minister of Health. All other distributors in Lachute are having their milk pasteurized through these plants.

While there may be some who are not quite clear as to what pasteurization means, it is actually very simple. The milk is heated to a temperature of 145 degrees, held for 30 minutes, and then immediately cooled to 45 degrees or less. When it is realized that the boiling point is 212 degrees, it will be readily seen that pasteurized milk is by no means boiled milk. In fact, there are very few people who can tell properly pasteurized milk from raw milk.

Among interesting features in connection with these three local dairies are the recording thermometers. These devices automatically record the temperature to which the milk has been heated, how long it has been held at that temperature, and how long it takes to cool it again. In addition, the thermometer records the temperature to which the equipment has been heated in order to sterilize it. These records are dated and kept on file, so that the Provincial Inspectors can readily see how efficiently the pasteurization has been carried on.

There is every reason to believe, therefore, that the people of Lachute have now as safe a milk as modern science can make it. This is a great forward step as it is generally agreed today among those who should know, that raw milk means dangerous milk.

Considerable credit is due the health authorities and our local physicians in advocating this move, to the Town council for enforcing the necessary legislation, and to the dairymen for their co-operation in putting the by-law into effect. The people of Lachute can be proud of the fact that their town is now, in this particular respect, on a par with the largest centres anywhere on the continent.

Farmer Near Hudson Is Poison Victim, Verdict of Suicide

Rigaud, June 30. — Dr. J. Hébert of Coteau Station, the district coroner, rendered a verdict of suicide today in the death of Arthur Castonguay, St. Lazare de Vaudreuil farmer found dead on his farm on Sunday. A bottle of Paris green was found near the victim's body on a secluded part of his farm. Castonguay had been missing from his home for several days. He had been in ill-health some time.

PROCEEDS OF TOWN SALVAGE CAMPAIGN TO SPITFIRE FUND

Town Council Asked to Investigate Old Age Pension Cases

At the regular town council meeting last evening, the secretary presented a Provincial Government report on citizens receiving old age pensions in Lachute, which came with a request that the Council investigate and report any cases in which there appeared to be fraudulent abuse.

A motion was advanced by Ald. F. S. McGibbon, seconded by Ald. S. Holt, that all proceeds received from sale of the salvage collection in town, be turned over to the Spitfire Fund.

The town is requesting from the Gatineau Power Company a reduction of 25 per cent in cost of power to the town corporation.

On motion of Ald. A. Scott, seconded by Ald. F. S. McGibbon, it was decided ten days' notice be given to Edouard Robidoux, proprietor, to put his property on Foundry Street in a satisfactory state of repair.

Boy on Farm Crushed By A Watering Cask

Seven-Year-Old Lad Meets Death At Ste. Dorothee

Crushed by a watering cask on the farm of Ernest Cousineau at Ste. Dorothee on Wednesday afternoon of last week, seven-year-old Jacques Andre Desrochers died a few hours later at the office of Dr. J. Boileau. The body was taken to the morgue for inquest.

The boy was following a team of horses hauling the cask, it was learned, when the cask toppled and he was pinned to the ground. Det. Albert Oggier of the Provincial Police investigated.

Very few can stand prosperity if it's the other fellow's.

Grass Tracts for Training Fields

Common grass plays a part in Canada's war effort that is both varied and invaluable and in common with flax, potatoes, sugar beets and other farm crops has been mobilized and requisitioned for the service of the Dominion, writes John Robitaille in the current issue of C-I-L OVAL.

Recently grass was given the job of helping to train the Empire's airmen in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. One of the first necessities in setting up such a vast and complex system is the construction of many aerodromes and training centres stretched across the country and each of them must possess a certain acreage under grass. Needed as part of the landing and training fields, the grass must be particularly vigorous and hardy and form a thick, close-growing carpet on the ground.

Those in charge of establishing these aerodromes found themselves faced with a problem they could not solve by looking into treatises on military engineering, writes Mr. Robitaille. They consulted specialists in soil chemistry who came to the rescue and recommended the application of the correct chemical fertilizer. In late spring this fertilizer was generously applied, with the result that all through the hot weather and right into the autumn thick strong-growing grass will cover the airfields. This is one way, concludes the article, in which the lowly plant is on duty, giving its valuable assistance to the cause for which Canada is fighting.

EMPLOYEES OF BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA GIVE CANTEEN UNIT

Toronto, June 25 — An interesting ceremony was witnessed at the University Avenue Armories here in the presence of Bank of Nova Scotia employees and personnel of the Salvation Army, when a fully equipped mobile canteen donated by the bank employees throughout Canada, United States and the West Indies was turned over for use of the Salvation Army in war service. Benjamin Orames, Territorial Commander of the Salvation Army, received the gift from J. A. McLeod, president of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

SEED-BORNE DISEASE FOUGHT WITH POWDER

The thousand natural ills that flesh is heir to have their counterpart in the plant kingdom. In the laboratories and greenhouse of G. A. Scott, Division of Botany and Plant Pathology, Ottawa, many of these vile diseases and their effects may be seen. Some are seed-borne, others infest the soil; all are serious in that they diminish crop yields or render the produce unfit for use.

There are the seed-borne smuts which travel up the stems of oats, wheat and barley to produce their spores in the ear, forming balls of black powder where the kernels should be. This pungent powder pollutes all the grain with which it comes in contact, and the vicious cycle continues if unchecked.

Ear rots of corn are perhaps even more destructive. Mr. Scott has specimens of four ears, each harbouring a different rot, all taken from one farm in Western Ontario, where the diseases caused 90% crop loss in 1940. One affects the kernels from the tip down, another irregularly throughout, while a third, known as basisporum — the names of the others are unmentionable — shows no outward sign of its presence, the disease attacking the base of the kernel. But the cob is rotten to the core and collapses on pressure.

The diseases mentioned can be detected by observation. There are others, however, that cannot be except by laboratory test. These are the root rots whose name is legion and which affect the small grains, corn, peas, beans, beets, flax and cultivated crops, as well as flowers and vegetables. Peas which appeared wholesome to the eye, when germinated in a culture dish developed loathsome masses of disease spores and showed low vitality. This is characteristic of most samples of Ontario and Quebec-grown peas, which Mr. Scott has tested, and explains the too frequent failure with this crop.

Fortunately, there are known remedies for most of these prevalent and costly diseases, and the purpose of Mr. Scott's investigations is to isolate and identify the organism and then discover the appropriate preventive or cure and the rate and method of its application. The results of Mr. Scott's research work in this field have been the means of reducing by millions of dollars the crop losses from disease. This is accomplished by treating the seed with an organic mercury dust, and there is a dust suited to each specific purpose.

The dust seed treatment is inexpensive and easily applied. Further particulars concerning it may be obtained from all Canadian agricultural colleges and experimental stations.

WORLD'S LARGEST ORDER FOR WHEAT

Means 9,500,000 Loaves a Day for Great Britain

(By Mail)

London — The United Kingdom Ministry of Food, largest buyer of wheat in the world, has broken its own record with an order for 120,000,000 bushels (about 3,000,000 tons) placed with the Canadian Wheat Board.

The previous largest purchase was for 100,000,000 bushels, ordered by the Ministry last year. The new consignment is to be delivered during the twelve months ending May, 1942.

Reckoning 563 4-lb. loaves to the ton of wheat and using white flour of 75 per cent extraction, this will provide Britain with 3,378,000,000 of the 2-lb. loaves her housewives favor. There will also be 750,000 tons of wheat-feed in the form of bran, middlings and wheat germ meal, for Britain's dairy cows, beef cattle, pigs and poultry.

If the wheat is converted into 85 per cent extraction national wheat-meal flour, 4,080,000,000 2-lb. loaves would be produced, but only 450,000 tons would be available for livestock feeding.

As Britain does not at present make more than ten loaves in every hundred from the higher extraction flour, a total of 3,448,200,000 loaves, representing about 9,500,000 loaves a day for the twelve months, is what Britain will obtain from this order.

Lachute Man Is Held For Dangerous Driving

Woman in Critical Condition, Struck in Montreal While Standing on Curb

Montreal — An automobile out of control crashed over the curb at the corner of Lajeunesse boulevard and Villeray streets and crushed Miss Mirielle Langevin, a resident of St. Denis St. Taken to St. Luke Hospital, she was reported in a critical condition with a fractured skull.

The driver of the vehicle, Albert Lapointe, 33, of Lachute, was detained on a nominal accusation of driving with deficient brakes while further investigations of the accident were undertaken by Det.-Lt. George Allain of the homicide squad.

Radio patrol officers were called to the scene. Brake marks and the run of the car after it mounted the curb and carried the victim a distance of about 60 feet were measured.

Police held that the "automobile was travelling very fast."

Following investigation by Detectives, Lapointe was arraigned before Judge Jules Desmarais on a charge of dangerous driving, and was remanded to detective headquarters for three days pending trial.

Farm Machine Which Pushes Out the Bushes

British Invention to Clear Land For Food Growing

London — An invention which "pushes" bushes out of the ground is the most recent contribution of a well-known Wiltshire farmer to Britain's food-growing campaign.

Hinged to the front axle tractor, the appliance has two channels which are carried on skids to prevent them sticking in the ground. On the front is a pair of "scissors" kept open by a strong spring from the channels.

When the "scissors" come into contact with a bush, they close and hold it tightly. Then, as the tractor moves forward, it pushes the bush out of the ground, and when the tractor is put in reverse the "scissors" open and leave the bush on the ground, to be collected by a specially designed sweep.

The "bush pusher" is the invention of Mr. Arthur Hosier, famous for his novel agricultural appliances. He was the originator of open-air milking on the bail system, which has rejuvenated many thousands of acres of pasture on Britain's chalk uplands and is in use as far afield as Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

Mr. Hosier has recently brought out a new potato planter for attachment to a 30-furrow plough. With this the potatoes are dropped behind the front furrow and the land is afterwards harrowed once or twice and earthed up in the usual way. The attendant, sitting on the plough; places the potatoes on a travelling belt, compartments in which regulate the planting distance.

If women can make appointments at their hairdressing parlors, why can't men do likewise at their barber shops, instead of frequently having to wait for their turn in the chair? asks the Brockville Recorder & Times.

VIA DUNKERQUE TO "LITTLE HOLLAND" — AND LACHUTE

was pedalling a bicycle through the Lowlands — 400 miles, from one town to the next as the advancing German hordes moved in.

Finally, at Dunkerque he joined the Allied exodus. Under that hell of fire and bombardment he embarked on one of the rescue vessels . . . But it was bombed and sunk, and with hundreds of his fellows the Netherlander jumped into the sea, where he suffered painful burns from simmering oil released from the bunkers of a German craft . . . He was picked up in a small boat and taken back to French soil; and here, still in friendly hands, he was treated at a field station for the burns on his arms, legs and chest. This hasty but expert care saved him many ugly scars — probably saved his life . . . Then finally Kopmels boarded a hospital ship for the friendly shores of Britain. During this time, he said, he went four days without a bite to eat.

Clad in the uniform of a Netherlands officer — of field grey, similar to that of the German miltia — our friend met supicion and reverses. Even when escaping into France, he was held under arrest for several hours until his true identity was proved. And the color of his cloth, he said, brought him perilously in line with the muzzle-end of Allied rifles. The same misunderstanding made his landing formalities difficult again in England. But eventually our young friend found haven in a military hospital near London.

Of England — her hospitality, her morale, and the treatment he received during twelve weeks under hospital care — Lieutenant Kopmels cannot speak too kindly. His arms were strapped to his body, and his burns healed under the latest treatment in medical science. And at last he was sent out here to Canada, where, in "Little Holland", the Netherlands are rallying their forces to continue the fight at Britain's side.

* * *

So ran the narrative of Hans Kopmels, as we talked with him here on the bank of the quiet North River — a scene far remote from the devastated continent he left just a year ago — remote from the bomb-shocked Britain still fresher in his memory.

* * *

We spoke of Holland — pre-war Holland of the children's picture books, with its canals and windmills and colorful tulips. Hans smiled . . . "My country", he sa'd, in grammatical but broken English, " — you think only of tulips; the world's producer of bulbs ! But only one small corner of the Netherlands grows bulbs — and it is very small. Holland is largely a country of industries."

And Canada — our Dominion had surprised him! Two impressions stood out in his brief acquaintance. One was the climate, the extremes of heat and cold. He had heard, back home, about Canada's rigorous winters; but the rumors, he said, had been sadly understated. He had found out, at his "Little Holland" camp last winter !

In his home country there was nothing like it. There, if the temperature in winter dropped to five degrees below freezing, it was a national crisis. A mild panic ensued; schools closed to allow children to skate upon the ice; business stood aghast . . . And they stopped again in summer if the mercury soared far above 80 in the shade.

But his greater reaction was to the mighty distances of this country. Here in Canada, he found, we travel hundreds — thousands of miles, indeed — with little thought or preparation. Such distances were unbelievable to a stay-at-home European, for whom a day's jaunt might carry him across the borders of several neighboring countries.

* * *

In that view across the river lay the quiet Laurentians . . . and we counted ourselves lucky, as we bade our friend adieu.

School Teachers as Community Leaders

A considerable degree of leadership in community enterprise and responsibility should be given by teachers in our schools if the proper foundation for citizenship is to to be laid. This has been brought home in a nearby town where a teacher in a collegiate is to be replaced. One of the Board members, speaking about the teacher in question, stated she was not really "a citizen — she spent her week-ends out of town, leaving Friday evening and returning Monday morning". He also declared that "she took no part in community affairs or campaigns or in extra-curricular duties." We are sure that citizenship entails certain responsibilities from time to time and certainly school teachers should not be exempt.

The Quebec Law Affecting Roadside Food-Vendors

On motoring from Lachute to Montreal during the summer season, one has frequently remarked upon the roadside stands displaying foodstuffs unprotected from flies and dust. — There's "a law against it", and provincial health officials have been reminded by their department that necessary steps must be taken to correct this state of affairs. Fruit, vegetables and home-baked bread have their appeal to the eye of passing travellers, but it is difficult to believe that any could feel impelled to stop and shop, considering the manner in which this produce is displayed. It is given out from Quebec that By-law 39-W governs municipal powers in all such cases.

Hon. Henri Groulx, Minister of Health, and Dr. Jean Gregoire, Deputy Minister, in appealing to country merchants to exercise care in this connection, point out that "the sale of produce on display on the roadsides and on public markets has begun with the advent of summer. In the past few years it has become the custom to sell home-made bread, pastry, preserves and maple sugar by the roadside and these products are exposed to rain, flies and dust. This is the time, consequently, when by-laws of the Quebec Provincial Bureau of Health, relating to municipalities, should be strictly enforced."

Another Idol Totters

One whose name is synonymous with wholesome English humor — P. G. Wodehouse, probably the most widely read British humorist this side of the Atlantic and at the English hearthside — has lost prestige more than casual remarks can tell. Wodehouse was released from internment in Germany and is living in a Berlin hotel, but the price of his freedom is greater than the average Britisher would care to pay — for the author is now broadcasting to America for the Nazis.

We are too far off to judge upon this "honor" accorded to an erstwhile favorite among our authors. But the English newspapers can voice a sounder judgment, being closer to the scene and to the personality of P. G. Wodehouse. Paul Holt, writer for the London Daily Express, wonders if Wodehouse has stopped to think of the British prisoners who are not being so generously "entertained" by the Nazis. "Wooster won't like it, Mr. Wodehouse" says the writer –Wooster being the typical upper-strata Englishman who is the hero of several Wodehouse stories. Holt continues: "Such hospitality likely would be extended to any British soldier who cared to go on the air to America with a message that life in Germany is a good life" . . . Mr. Holt wound up with the poem "Private of the Buffs," ending: "He only knows that not through him shall England come to shame".

The Daily Mirror said Wodehouse has cracked his worst joke "and the laugh is against his own country" . . . "He lived luxuriously because Britain laughed with him, but when laughter is out of his country's heart Wodehouse is not ready to share her suffering."

And like the Express columnist, we quote a line which lingers in the memory — from Rupert Brooks, who died on foreign soil for England in the last Great War. Of a soldier's grave, which might have been his own, he wrote: "There is a spot which is forever England" . . . Haunting words for our humorist to dwell upon, between broadcasts.

News Item . . .

In Camp Bowie, Texas, the army bugler doesn't even leave his cot in order to sound reveille. He leans back on the pillow and blows the notes softly into a microphone. Four huge amplifiers do the rest and the bugler's job is really "a pipe!"

The bugler once was forced to rise
At six, but it was said,
That after he'd aroused the boys,
He would go back to bed,
A cushy job, the soldiers said,
In days of the Great War,
But now the bugler's task is even Softer than before !
The fellow with the horn today
Won't even leave his cot !
A microphone picks up the sound,
And spreads it o'er the lot,
And while the cussing soldiers rise
To start their busy day,
The weary bugler drops his horn,
And sinks back to the hay.

New Crime Wave

England's keeping close check on crime and criminals though the bombs are falling and various civilian services have been curtailed as a result of the war. English bobbies are finding, too, that they've entirely new varieties of crime to cope with and recently a London grocer was fined for offering eggs for sale at prices exceeding the minimum for his district. In pronouncing sentence the Magistrate declared, "I know of no more effective way of assisting the enemy than this type of offence. I see no difference in principle between this type of case and looting." It is a regrettable truth that looting is a common crime in England and men and women are sentenced every day in the courts for this despicable transgression. Looters, frequently attractive young women, show courage of a sort for they are on the prowl during the closing moments of air raids, stealing what Nazi bombs have failed to destroy. Truly, jackals of this type are deserving of the very stiff sentences which British courts are handing out.

The Silly Sex ?

Women have made their mark in this war, living up to every standard in matters of courage, determination and unselfish service and it would be too bad if England's so-called weaker sex earns the title "silly sex" through picking up the Great War practice of handing out white feathers to men not in uniform as a reflection upon their courage. The white feather game, apparently, is becoming popular once more and in one case at least the self-appointed critic handed out her nasty offering to an ex-B.E.F. man who had served at Dunkirk, was wounded in 11 places and burned from head to foot. He was not on active service because two of his wounds had not understanding the reasons why a stranger is not as yet healed. No one is capable of knowing or in uniform and the free handing out of tokens of shame resulted in some embarrassing moments for the unofficial female recruiting officers during the Great War. English women have earned the admiration of the world through their efforts in the battle of Britain. It would be regrettable to see that bright record tarnished through silly action on the part of some members of their sex.

The Civilians Suffer

There's no doubt about this war being vastly different from the Great War of 1914-1918. British losses during the first twenty-one and a half months of this war have amounted to 30,000 killed among the armed forces while civilian deaths from bombing during the same period amounted to 35,000. Army losses during a corresponding period in the Great War numbered 100,000 killed but civilian deaths during the whole of the Great War were less than 1,500. It's a new world and a brand new type of warfare. Mechanized equipment and the vastly exaggerated importance of aircraft have made this new conflict a civilian's war. In the long run it will be the courage and character of the ordinary man and woman that will turn the tide and in this regard Britons have little cause for fear. Men and women across the seas are laughing at Germany's attempt to crumble their morale through continued air raids. Will the German civilians show the same bravery when the R.A.F., steadily increasing in strength, begins its own blitzkrieg on Nazi soil?

Next time you get ready to complain about the heat think of this. During the June battle between British and Axis forces on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, the noon temperature was 131 degrees Fahrenheit. And men operating tanks worked in even higher temperatures.

An English boy scout won a gold medal after he had donned a saucepan for a helmet and dashed out into an air raid to carry an injured woman to the nearest first aid station through a hail of shrapnel . . .

"This gleaming disc of purest gold,
I prize it very highly,"
The brave young scout exclaimed aloud,
Though speaking very shyly,
"'Tis precious metal and I'm proud
As proud as any man,
But in a raid I'd trade it for,
A sturdy, strong sauce pan!"

Have You Changed Your Address?

National Registration regulations make it compulsory for persons changing their address for any reason whatsoever, to record same at the earliest possible date; within a maximum of 14 days. Many people are unaware of these requirements and do not know where to register. All Post Offices have printed postcards (ready stamped) on which details of the new address may be given. These postcards can be obtained for one cent each (which pays for the postage), and various members of a family can be accommodated on the one card . . . It is an offence to neglect advising change of address, punishable by a stiff fine.

SCOTTISH SHEPHERD SHARES WAR THRILLS

By Sirdar Ikbal Ali Shah
(the well-known Muslim author)

Against the harsh background of the Scottish mountain side, the herds stand out — slowly moving shapes upon a field of grey. From the Border Hills to the uplands of Inverness stretch many a league of sheep country, for Scotland was a wool-bearing region long before the tapestries of Arras and the Low Countries were woven from Scottish fleeces.

The rule of Mars has so contrived things that in these strenuous months of war only old men and young lads can 'mind' the folds and keep watch over the sheep-paths.

That, indeed, has always been the manner of it since the beginning. The story of Scotland is full of illustrious names of men who began life as herd laddies, commencing with St. Cuthbert and not ending with James Hogg — saints, poets, creative spirits in literature, mystics, scientists.

Saw a Bomber Shot Down

I heard the story of a shepherd in Berwickshire who watched a dog-fight between a Keinkel bomber and a British Spitfire.

A hail of dropping tracer-bullets fell about his ears and drove him at last to seek the shelter of a dry-stone dyke which parcelled two adjoining stretches of sheep-walk.

Again and again, he told me in his own broad "Doric", the Spitfire attacked the Nazi bomber, discharging its lethal bursts of machine-gun fire, until at last the Heinkel whirled wildly like a wounded fulmar and then planed swiftly downwards to where a level race of heath-clad moorland lay between shaw and brae-side.

From the bowels of the stricken bomber emerged a trio of crop-headed Teutons, looking as sheepish as Jeem's own ewes, one holding an arm which dripped scarlet.

As the youngster approached them they gave the Nazi salute, and enquired in passable English as to where they were.

"And, maister", laughed the herd lad, "wud ye believe it, they didna jaloose whit I said. They askit me what tongue I wis speaking, and when I tellt them it was the Lallan Scots they juist gied their croppit heids a shake."

Feared they would be shot

But if the Nazis could not understand Jeems, Jeems could comprehend them after a fashion.

He guided them across a mile and "a bittock" of moorland to a spot on the highway where stood a road-man's cottage where the guidwife regaled them with tea and bannocks — for even the sharpest racial enmity cannot quench the traditional sense of hospitality in the moorland heart.

"They were great muckle Sumps," Jeems told me. "Stuffy lads, ye ken, but chaps like that'll no' win the war. Awfie sma' herts they seemed to hea, and they kept on askin' me if they wad be shot. When I told them oor way wisna their way and we didna murder folk in cauld blood they seemed awfie relieved."

Then there was the brace of escaped prisoners Jeems helped to track down. They were so weak with cold and hunger that he and his mate of the next sheep-walk "drave" them to the nearest police-station as though they had been a couple of their own half-grown lambs.

So the Scottish herdsman must watch the sky as well as the land, must keep a keen look-out for Nazi wings as well as for fleeces and snowbound ewes and "gimmers".

THEY SAVE A LIFE EVERY FOUR HOURS

Lifeboat Heroes of Britain's Salt Water Girdle

By Noel Barber,
Editor of the Overseas Daily Mail

Every four hours in Britain, all through the day and night, a life is saved by men with rough faces, old blue jerseys and a lot of guts. They are the men of the Lifeboat Service.

Round the salt water girdle of Britain they wait, ready to rescue the merchant seamen of this country or her Allies when danger strikes from the grey hull of a U-boat or the black shadow of a Nazi warplane. On the average, they are now saving six lives a day.

In the first eighteen months of the war the men of the Lifeboat Service — the volunteers of the Lifeboat Service — saved 3,500 lives; more in that vital, vivid year and a half than in the last ten years of peace.

On one single, bleak, storm-tossed day, just before last Christmas, they saved 71 lives in 24 hours. From the beaches of the grey East Coast, from the sheltered coves that face the Atlantic breakers on the west, the lifeboats of Britain slid down the runways. On that day alone they made 19 launches.

What did that cost the Service? It is hard to say. Britain has 157 lifeboats, of which 146 are motor boats, dotted around her coasts. Each one is manned by volunteers — 2,000 of them in all — for the only members of the Service who get a fixed wage are the motor mechanics who are always on duty at the station. They are paid £3 to £4 a week. Such full time men are necessary to keep the engines in order.

Coxswains of each boat, gallant, grizzled men whose faces are wrinkled like parchment, get an honorarium of about £15 a year. This is because they have a good many odd jobs to do, even when there are no services. Every lifeboatman gets compensation if he is injured. But though the men are volunteers — and remember nobody can order them to go to the rescue of broken, battered ships — they get paid after each service they make. The scale of payments is an elastic one, based on a minimum which is nearly always increased.

The men of the Lifeboat Service have not gone unscathed. Lives have been lost for the Nazis make no distinction between any of the men who serve the sea. They, too, face constant dangers of attack by mine, by torpedo, by machine gun.

At night the lifeboatmen must leave their shores without a light to guide them past their coasts. They must launch the boat in the dark. There are no floodlights to help them, and once at sea, they are almost always under fire, as circling warplanes or U-boats try to finish off their work.

Before war broke out in Yugoslavia, an Exeter schoolmaster asked his boys why Bulgaria was "in the news."

A hand shot up and a small boy answered: "Please, sir, because German soldiers are going into Bulgaria disguised as ordinary civilized people."

"The nicest-looking fellow tried to pay for my lunch today. He got away with it, too."

"It Can't Happen Here" — Perhaps

There are many people in the district who, through their own lack of intelligence and microscopic reasoning, are playing Hitler's game with the same telling effect as a paid fifth-columnist. These individuals are those who have been deriding the civil defence organization which has been set up here and elsewhere to study and practice the manner in which air raids should be handled by those subjected to them. These people have adopted the attitude that "it can't happen here." . . . It is high time they stopped making conjectures on their own behalf and left the conduct of the war in more experienced hands. They should be told that there are no anti-aircraft guns stationed around the great industrials plants, the power sub-stations, the great military encampments. They should be told that German pilots could make the Atlantic crossing take leisurely and careful aim at whatever target was assigned to them, drop their bombs, then fly to, say, the Hamilton or Toronto Flying Club, make a landing — and be treated as a prisoner of war, just as are Germans shot down over Britain. This is the time to face up to realities. No chance should be taken. There is too much at stake.

RED CROSS WORKERS URGED TO INCREASE CLOTHING OUTPUT

Need Is Pressing, Despite Summer Season

A letter received by organizers of the local Red Cross work is considered timely to the needs of this community . . . Interests of the summer season, and a mistaken thought that clothing needs are less pressing at this stage, have tended to slacken the enthusiasm of many workers. This message from Red Cross headquarters is therefore given particular emphasis by the local unit . . .

1. The National Work Committee has issued a warning against any slackening of Red Cross work during the summer months. The need for civilian clothing and knitted comforts in Britain is as great as ever and the Chairman of the National Work Committee has stated :—

"It is hoped that every woman will realize how necessary it is to redouble our efforts and do twice as much work this summer, as it would be a disastrous thing if holidays or any other cause would mean the falling off in the quantity of Red Cross supplies."

2. Warm clothing for bombed victims and quilts and knitted comforts for civilians and sailors as well as sweaters, gloves and mitts are all needed.

3. Women war workers are reminded that supplies sent overseas now by Red Cross will scarcely reach England before the cool weather.

4. The following is an extract from a letter received from Yorkshire, England :—

The Kits and Layettes received from the Canadian Red Cross Society are absolutely superb and are deeply appreciated here where the need for them is very urgent. We are most impressed by the splendid way these Kits were tied up and packed."

MINOR COLLISIONS REPORTED ON THE LOCAL HIGHWAYS

Charges Laid Against Hawkesbury Driver in Grenville Accident

On Wednesday of last week, at 5 o'clock on Main Street opposite the Rex Theatre, a truck driven by Vincent Cornette of Pendleton, Ont., collided with a St. Philippe car driven by Jas. Chambers. Mr. Chambers, it is understood, was proceeding west and turned across the street to go eastward. He failed to see the oncoming truck and the collision ensued. The passenger car was damaged.

* * *

On Highway 8-A about 100 yards from the interprovincial bridge, late Tuesday night, a car driven by Eugene Lalonde of Hawkesbury crashed with another machine driven by Owen D. Byrnes, who was proceeding to Brownsburg. Damage was caused to Byrnes' car, and as a result of the crash Traffic Officer H. Jones, of Grenville, laid charges of reckless driving and operating a car under the influence of liquor, against Lalonde. The offender's car was also seized and lodged in a nearby garage.

* * *

Two collisions occurred on neighboring highways Sunday evening, and were investigated by Traffic Officer H. Jones.

At the intersection near the theatres at Brownsburg a Montreal car descending the hill crashed into a machine driven by Ray H. Hunter of Lachute, who, travelling in the opposite direction, turned left at the crossing in the path of the descending car.

At 11 o'clock p.m. a car from Hudson Heights piloted by Ludger Seguin northward on the Brownsburg Road, met a passenger car being driven toward Lachute by Geo L. Thomson, of Arundel.

PROVINCL. POLICE EXAMINE MISSILE DROPPED FOR AIR

Seen by Farm Workers, Flare Lands in Bush North of Calumet

Two men working on the farm of Gilbert Arnold at Grenville on June 27th, heard a plane pass at considerable height during the afternoon. They were alarmed to see what appeared like a ball of fire falling from the aircraft, at a spot about three miles north. They also heard a dull explosion.

That evening the two men set out to investigate, and in the bushland on McIntyre's Mountain, north of Calumet Village, they found a patch of ground about 12 x 12 feet still smoldering, and the remnants of a flare or missile on the ground.

Provincial police were notified and went to inspect the scene. The missile was taken away for closer examination, but to date no exact report of its nature has been received here.

Court Action for Damage in Crash Last December

Before Justice Lalande in District Magistrate's Court, here at Lachute yesterday morning, action was heard arising out of a car crash at Dixon's Bridge on the Brownsburg Road, Dec. 31st last. The crash occurred on an icy road-surface.

The plaintiff, Norman Silverson, of this district, was represented by the law firm of Legault & Legault Lachute, while Maurice Paquin, of Lachute, acted as attorney for the defendant, Roger Morin, of Montreal.

Judgment of the court was reserved.

EXPERIENCED MEN TO SERVE YOU

PAPER MILLS ARE TRAINING WORKERS FOR SKILLED JOBS

Industry Supplies Large Number of Trained Men to Speed War Supplies Output

Montreal — To relieve the current shortage of skilled machinists and to speed production of war supplies, "training-schools" have been created in the pulp and paper mills throughout Canada under the direction of a special committee of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association. Pulp and paper mills have already supplied a large number of skilled workers to war industries and the current educational plan seeks to build up a growing reserve of trained men to fill the places of those who have been released or loaned for war work.

The educational plan, far-reaching and of major importance, is the result of co-ordinated effort on the part of the pulp and paper industry in Canada. The schools provide a relatively short but balanced training in practical shop work and to date applications to take the courses have exceeded the number of men that can be handled. The scheme calls for individual selection of men and individual training; the work of both student and mentor is given voluntarily.

In each of the companies which have adopted the plan, men and staff are getting on with the job with real enthusiasm and progress.

It has been welcomed by the men at the plants, with the result that hundreds of workers are now taking a short practical course in machine shop work and are preparing to fill the gaps created by the release of senior men to war industries.

Because time is so limited and in order that this Training Plan may be of the utmost usefulness to Canada, the training period has been limited to twelve months as a maximum. Actually, since the training is on an individual basis many men make substantial progress in less than the twelve month period. There is no doubt that men who satisfactorily complete any of the given courses will be able to take their places in industry and rapidly acquire the balance of manual skill necessary to assume positions of responsibility in their chosen trades.

The Plan consists of two parts; home study courses to provide theoretical training, and practical machine shop instruction conducted simultaneously with the home study to develop required manual skill. The plan also offers an opportunity to provide the necessary theoretical training more quickly and at an appreciably lower cost then could be arranged under any other circumstances.

Since the pulp and paper industry's Training Plan makes a definite contribution to Canada's war effort, progress is being closely watched by Government officials in Ottawa who heartily endorse this practical method of speeding up production of supplies and materials for war purposes.

When asked the difference between a practical and a theoretical farmer, Farmer Corntossle replied: "A theoretical farmer is one that insists on tryin' to make a livin' off the farm, an' a practical one jes' faces the inevitable an' turns the place over to summer boarders."

PULP AND PAPER FOR FREEDOM

THIS "ARMY" FIGHTS TOO!

THE PULP AND PAPER INDUSTRY is an army of over 100,000 Canadians who work in the woods, in the mills, in the offices. This army is making a wide variety of products which are a vital part of Canada's fight against Nazi slavery — to hold the freedom our fathers won.

Many pulp and paper products are directly used for war needs. Nearly all of them are also sold in the United States and other countries and thus provide the money Canada must have to pay for planes and ships and guns. Last year the pulp and paper industry provided Canada with nearly 250 million dollars of foreign exchange. Exports of mined gold were 203 millions; wheat and flour exports amounted to 145 millions.

The industry's maintenance machine shops have been geared to Canada's munitions output—providing essential units not otherwise available quickly enough to speed the tools of war to Britain.

The pulp and paper industry is in the war. It is Canada's biggest industry and Canada relies on it. This is a serious responsibility. Every worker in this great industry has his part to play in the fight for survival. Every log that comes to the block-pile and every ton that leaves the mill is a blow against Nazi slavery—is a blow for freedom.

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

HINTS FOR HOMEBODIES

By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman

This Canada of ours is a very beautiful country. There are so many lovely spots it is hard to say which is most beautiful. It is a pity that most of us do not see more of our own country. At the Federated Women's Institute, one New Brunswick woman said to the woman next to her "did you ever see anything lovelier than our Saint John River?" And this to a woman from B.C. The answer was a delightfully tactful one. "It is very beautiful and so different from the Fraser River. There, that great volume of water is sometimes confined to a width of twenty feet and the water fairly boils. As I crossed Canada I was simply thrilled with its beauty and so proud to be a Canadian." New Brunswick friends have just returned from a trip to Ontario and they followed the Saint Lawrence River through Quebec and Ontario and they were so enthusiastic over its beauty and the loveliness of the country bordering Lake Ontario and through the Niagara Peninsula. Ontario is a more orderly country and has not the picturesqueness of the Maritimes nor the ruggedness of British Columbia. The Middle West loves its prairies country. It is hard to keep my eyes on my typewriter instead of straying out the window. There is a perfect picture framed there. Trees, hills, and water, and the fog is cuddled around the foot of the hills and the sun is shining brightly on their blue tips.

HANDICRAFTS DEVELOPING

Facing each other in the lobby of the Parliament Buildings at Fredericton was an exhibition of weaving from British Columbia and New Brunswick. It was thrilling to find the East Coast and the West Coast side by side. The B. C. exhibit had the most fascinating buttons made from native woods. The N. B. was a Loomcroft exhibit. This is under the direction of three women who felt that the instruction in weaving, given by the Government, was good as far as it went, but it did not go far enough, as it provided for no commercial application. Just to weave for home use was not sufficient to tempt girls to buy looms. These women have financed the Loomcroft themselves and are giving full-time work for the best of the weavers. The girls work in their own homes and their tweeds and other handwoven articles are meeting with such success that they have not enough workers. They are setting up a studio in an old Loyalist house in Gagetown, right in the heart of the Saint John River Valley to be nearer their workers. The Government is going to provide further training for the girls who do not as yet meet their high standards in weaving. The boys under the Youth Training scheme have made the looms and the girls are able to get these at a reasonable rate on time payments. The Maritimes have made a real beginning in raising themselves by their own bootstraps and can show the way to the rest of Canada. The leadership and education promoted by St. Francis Xavier University has shown what can be done by co-operation. The changes in some of Nova Scotian fishing villages in a few years are almost beyond belief. The people themselves have done it, and they deserve our admiration.

EAT YOUR DECORATION

Are you one of those who likes to eat the parsley decorations off the sandwich plate? Then you're the lucky. That little bit of parsley will probably have more vitamins than the sandwiches. Parsley is very high in vitamin A and has a good share of vitamin B and C. Old-fashioned books sometimes call it the broom of the stomach, and it is found in many old recipes. Don't be content with using it as a garnish but add it to soups, meat and fish dishes, salads, and sandwiches. Did you every try cutting it nice and fine and sprinkling it over your plate of sandwiches. Looks kind of pretty and is a bit of a change. Scissors are the thing to use to cut parsley.

ICE CREAM

1¼ cups milk, 2 eggs, ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon flour, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 1 cup cream, 2 teaspoons vanilla.

Beat egg yolks and add sugar and flour. Scald milk and add the egg mixture. Cook over slow heat until the mixture is like a thin custard. Cool. Beat the egg whites until stiff, add the salt, and fold into the custard. Add vanilla. Pour into refrigerator tray and freeze to mush. Remove from refrigerator and fold in the whipped cream. Freeze 2 to 3 hours. This is a good ice cream to serve with a sauce.

BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE

½ Cup granulated sugar, ½ cup light brown sugar, 2 tablespoons corn syrup, ½ cup cold water, 1½ tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup hot water.

Cook sugar, syrup and cold water until a little dropped into cold water gets quite brittle. Remove from the heat and stir in butter, vanilla and hot water. Serve with vanilla ice-cream.

A Quiz Column For Jelly Makers

— By Betty Barclay —

Q. — Is there a cure for weeping jelly? — Mrs. A.B.M.

A. — How serious is the weeping, Mrs. M.? The separation of a small amount of syrup is normal, and will not harm jellies or jams unless yeast and mold start growing on the seepage. Remove such contaminated glasses from the shelf immediately. To prevent excessive weeping, leave a half-inch space at the top when filling glasses. Paraffin, cover tightly and store in a cool, dry place that is free from dust and mildew.

Q. — Why do air pockets form under the paraffin on my jellies and jams? Eleanor M.

A. — Air pockets under the paraffin are usually due to the thickness of the paraffin. If the coating is too heavy, it will not be elastic enough to keep the shape of the jelly as it cools, in which case the paraffin and jelly surface may separate and from a pocket. The paraffin coating should be only about ⅛ inch thick.

Q. — What is pectin? — Mrs. D. E. L.

A. — Pectin is the natural "stiffener" in fruits. A certain proportion of pectin, acid, and sugar is necessary to jell a jelly, and to jam a jam.

Q. — Why didn't my strawberry jelly set? I used the "cup for cup" rule — one cup of juice to each cup of sugar. It was just like syrup no matter how long I boiled it. My neighbor's strawberry jelly, always sets and has a lovely flavor. Mrs. M. A. M.

A. — Your question is closely related to Mrs. D.E.L.'s. Strawberries have so little pectin of their own that they won't jell by themselves, and this natural stiffener must be added to your fruit and sugar. Trustworthy commercial pectin comes in both bottled and powdered form, with special recipes for each fruit. These directions require only a half-minute boil for strawberry jelly, Mrs. D.

Q. — What size measuring cup should be used in jelly making? — Anne McC.

A. — For best results, a standard half-pint measuring cup should be used in jelly making. And always be sure to measure exactly.

Q. — I have two raspberry bushes in my yard, good ripe fruit but not very tasty. I want to make jam, and always use short-boil receipts. How can I improve the raspberry flavor? — Miss B. B.

A. — An excellent question, Miss B., for we all like to use our own garden products. Whenever jam or jelly fruit lacks tarness, add the juice of 2 medium lemons (¼ cup) with the sugar.

BEAUTY

— By Helen Jameson —

GENERAL COMPLEXION CARE

Most of us expect too much from the use of cosmetics. It just won't do to lug home a jar of fragrant cream, apply its contents every night and enjoy a righteous feeling as if you had done all your beauty chores and should, in return, gain beauty riches. It is not that easy. The cream will do much in the way of youth preservation. It will allay surface roughness. If the first film is removed before massaging, it will act as a cleansing agent. But it will not keep old Man Time at arms's length. It will not make up for the wear and tear of worry or emotional storms. It is a valuable aid, but not a cure all.

The beauty seeker who is on the right path is the one who is a follower of the Goddess Hygeia. She takes excellent care of her health, fortifying herself against the ravages of illness. She stokes up on the right kind of groceries. If she is boss of a home she takes pride in serving appetizing food, providing herself and family with the various elements of nutrition that are necessary for well being. The commissary department is all important. We have no patience with women who will not interest themselves in the culinary art, who are not on the watch for information that will motivate them to set a more varied table.

The woman who is forever sobbing about digestive upsets can not expect to have a complexion of fine texture and good coloring. She is sallow or the pores are enlarged or blackheads disfigure what should be a fair surface.

There is the matter of elimination. Seventy per cent of acne cases suffer from constipation. More fruit and vegetables, especially lettuce and spinach, will often correct a stubborn condition. Two glasses of water before breakfast will help. The skin is an important organ of elimination and that is why the daily bath, a rousing scouring with soap suds and a heavy brush, will improve the complexion. It stimulates the blood streams, affords a sense of well being.

Once a day, preferably at night, the face should be cleansed with cream, washed with soap, creamed again. Close to the surface of the skin are tiny capillaries that create the carnation bloom. Massage keeps these blush makers on the job.

There's the matter of sleep. Without refreshing sleep the facial tissues will soften, wrinkles form. She who drags out tired and spent in the morning cannot expect help from beauty aids.

It is when a woman feels tip-top, is up and at 'em, that she looks her best. To enjoy a feeling of zestfulness she must have interesting work to do, grant herself periods of relaxation, eat wisely, bathe daily and have a sweet disposition.

Once Wore Them

The young lady fitting a hat on this customer in a New York millinery shop is Princess Margrethe of Denmark, a cousin of King Christian. In New York with her husband and four children after losing everything in the Nazi invasion, the princess considers herself fortunate to have a position as saleslady with the firm which once made her hats.

Women Should Play A More Active Part in Country's Legislation

Toronto — Why are there so few women in Canadian legislative bodies? asks Dr. Gordon Bates, General Director of the Health League of Canada, writing in "Health", organ of the Health League.

Women's first concern is human life, contends Dr. Bates, and for this reason he urges Canadian women to take a more active part in the parliamentary activities of Canada.

"There is one lone woman in Canada's House of Commons. Is it that in Canada we believe in the dictum of the Kaiser and Hitler that woman's function is Kinder, Kirche and Kuchen, or do we believe that being a woman is no qualifaction for municipal office?"

The Health League Director contends that humanitarianism is a sane and indeed the only sound political and national objective.

"If health is to be our national objective, the doctors need the help of women, and in all of our municipal affairs it takes men and women together to build a world that makes sense.

"We need more women to give thought to the things that are worthwhile . . . Passing resolutions is not enough. Women by themselves are no more capable of settling the affairs of the world than are men, and women in groups in the long run have little political influence. We need women in our political assemblies and in all of our serious national deliberations. We need women in Parliament, we need women to work with men to decide the future of mankind."

Snake Was Charmed

Patricia Paynter, pretty British model, one of the nine who staged a fashion blitz on South America, finds a live snake makes a nice scarf, though a wriggly one. The models made friends with snakes like this one on a snake farm in Sao Paulo in Brazil, and another model, Susan Hood, descendant of Viscount Hood, after whom the battleship was named, was given a beautiful red, white and blue coral snake at a token of South American friendship. She lost it on the boat on the way back to New York.

HARD HIT PRAIRIE PROVINCES GENEROUS TO QUEEN'S FUND FOR AIR-RAID VICTIMS

Continued Their Support Even Through Campaign for Victory Loan

The Prairiee Provinces, which have suffered so severely in recent years, have continued to give generously for the relief of bombed victims in Great Britain all through the Victory Loan Campaign.

Sholto Watt, Executive Director of the Queen's Canadian Fund, who has just made a tour of the West in the interests of the Fund, stated on his return to Montreal that those who have known hardships and privations are the readiest to give — even from very slender means — in order to bring assistance to those who are in need. It has been particularly touching to look at the list of contributions from counties where drought has wiped out all reserves. They make out by the narrowest of margins, yet they scrape together dollars in group efforts and forward them to the Fund."

An example of the feeling in the Prairie Provinces is a letter just received from Carlea, Saskatchewan, which reads as follows:

"I have no money to buy Victory Bonds, for I am a widow living on Old Age Pension, but would like to help a little those poor, brave people who have lost all their earthly possessions. In thankfulness to Our Heavenly Father for His care I send $2 and will try to do it each month."

In Saskatchewan, Mr. Watt proceeded, the Fund is well represented in the principal cities.

"In Saskatoon, the Star-Phoenix has been leading a very successful campaign for the Fund, while in Regina no fewer than twenty-eight societies are represented on the Council of the Queen's Canadian Fund, under the chairmanship of Mayor Grassick. We have also had admirable support from the Prince Albert Herald, from a group of ladies in Melfort, who have organized themselves into a society to work for the Queen's Fund, and from the Mayor of Yorktown.

"In Alberta, we are also fortunate. In Calgary, the Fund is promoted by the Calgary Herald with happy results. In Lethbridge, the Lethbridge Herald brings consistently good results. In Edmonton, some very hard workers have taken up the cause of the Fund and have been raising appreciable sums through series of small entertainments. We are particularly greatful for such help as this, because we know that a great deal of work has to be done to organize and run such events. Edmonton is another centre where a great many rural subscriptions are received, frequently coming from communities that are very badly off.

"In Winnipeg, a successful Fund run by Mayor Queen is in affiliation and in other parts of Manitoba the Queen's Canadian Fun has met with gratifying response.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste

SISTER'S SHOWER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. A shower is being given for my sister. When she acknowledges a check from my mother, should she specify the amount of the check, or just thank her?

2. When serving a buffet supper, would it be proper to have the foods passed around in large platters?

3. What color scheme would you advise us to use for the decorations? —A.M.

1. It would, in my judgment, be more appropriate for your mother to give her check to your sister at some time other than at the shower. Shower presents are supposed to be of a similar kind, and therefore the other guests at the shower might consider that the mother's check would be out-of-order.

However, if this is still your wish, it would be best for the bride not to mention the amount of the check, but to say something like this, "And a check from Mother! With this amount I'll have a grand time shopping for things I've dreamed of having for my new home. Thank you, Mother, with all my heart."

2. Instead of passing the platters of foods, you can more gracefully and more conveniently abide by the idea of the buffet service — have the table set as charmingly as possible, and have the serving-dishes of foods placed at convenient places on the table. Have piles of plates and rows of the necessary silver near the plates. Then the guests take the plates and serve themselves to the foods.

3. Your decorations — flowers in the rooms and the table-decorations — may be all-white or white and pink.

BEGINNING TO GO OUT WITH BOYS

I am just beginning to go out with boys, and there are several questions that are puzzling me. Will you please be so kind as to answer them for me? Thank you, if you will.

1. When a boy calls for me at my house, should I introduce him to my mother, or to any other member of my family who happens to be around?

2. Is it proper for me to call a boy on the telephone?

3. Is it the girl or the boy who suggests that it's time to start home from a dance or any other party?

4. When a boy gives a girl a compliment, how should she acknowledge it?

5. When a boy has taken me out for the evening, should I thank him? Or is it only necessary that he thank me? —Betty

1. By all means introduce the boy to your mother, who is the hostess of your home. Only girls with shoddy manners omit this introduction. Also introduce the young man to any other member of your family who happens to be around. You owe this courtesy to your family and to your friends, boys as well as girls.

2. It is proper for a girl to telephone a boy if she has a real reason to do so. Don't telephone a boy just to say "hello". Whether girls are willing to admit it or not, men are still old-fashioned about wanting to take the initiative in telephone calls. You'll be a wise girl if you let the boys telephone to you.

3. It is the girl who has the responsibility of suggesting that it's "time to go home". The mannerly boy immediately follows her suggestion.

4. When a boy gives you a compliment, say a gracious "Thank you", or, "Thank you very much, Bob. I'm glad you like my dress". Your words should be appreciative, but a bit on the casual side, so you won't appear overwhelmed.

5. The mannerly boy thanks the girl for the evening, the mannerly girl expresses her appreciation of the boys thoughfulness and of the evening's fun. Don't be afraid to show your enthusiasm and your manners.

SLIGHTLY MIXED

Mrs. J. F. Hannssen, of Liberty, Mo., entered the chicken house on her farm, and the door locked behind her. She pulled out the nails holding the only window, and climbed out. Then she decided to nail up the window again, so she climbed back in and nailed it up, and thus found herself locked again! Repeating the process, she climbed out, but this time remembered to unlock the door before she went into the chicken house again.

WAR INDUSTRIALISTS AND OFFICIALS AT MONT'L AND SOREL

the Department of Munitions staff, the Canadian government joined forces with Messrs. Simard for the first time. A management committee was placed in charge of the operation and William Barascal was installed as manager. Later K. T. Keller, of the Chrysler Corporation, was asked to assume the management of the plant, it being felt that the outstanding managerial ability of the Chrysler Corporation was needed to carry out so large a project.

"Mr. Keller and his vice-president, Mr. Mitchell, undertook the work as a patriotic contribution to Canada, without monetary compensation." He then thanked those concerned with the production of the gun.

Quebec Angle Stressed

Defence Minister Ralston, who had arrived by seaplane from Ottawa only a few minutes before the start of the ceremonies, accepted the first gun and carriage "knowing that it is the forerunner of many more. These pieces of equipment will do yeoman service in the battle for freedom."

"I can think of nothing finer," Col. Ralston continued, than an artillery unit from the Province of Quebec manning 25-pounders built at Sorel in the Province of Quebec. And there will be some."

He particularly thanked the men who had worked since the beginning of the plant, the men "who have seen the guns grow from the most elementary beginnings to finished products. I thank them from my heart and I know Canada thanks them." He, too, paid tribute to the Simards for their work, and to the management of the vast plant.

"Labor Does Not Want Strikes" Says Lapointe

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice at Ottawa, regretted the absence of the Prime Minister from the ceremonies but explained he was in the west occupied with the war effort. He paid high tribute to Mr. Howe for his efforts in maintaining a steady stream of supplies for the war effort, saying: "He has seen to it that when any of our soldiers reaches for a gun, that gun is there."

In connection with war industry Mr. Lapointe claimed:

"Canadian labor does not want strikes; it wants work. Nor does Canadian industry want strikes; it is gearing itself for greater and greater production. Let both sides follow the peaceful and sensible policy of bargaining and conciliation in any dispute that may arise."

A former Boy Scout of Brockville and Ottawa, Scoutmaster of the Rothesay School, N.B., and Rhodes scholar, Sub. Lt. A. G. C. ROUND TABLE DISCUSSION

June 22 found the Sunday Evening Fireside making room for a very interesting, yet educational and informative type of program. In view of the events of the day — the march of Germany into Russia and Prime Minister Winston Churchill's ensuing address — the discussion took the form of a recapitulation of the present Great War. Doug Brown covered the events from Munich to the evacuation of Dunkirk. Fred Soughton brought the audience an account of the happenings from Dunkirk to the present time. Alex Holden surveyed the developments of the weekend. And Ed Hendry followed with an analysis of the significance of recent events as related to the entire picture. Interesting discussion followed as the four participants chatted informally about the conflict and its implications so far as Canada and the Empire were concerned. Winston Churchill's latest book, "Blood, Sweat and Tears", was used as a statistical reference.

AMATEUR NIGHTS

The past three Monday nights have witnessed increasing interest in the Amateur Programs. However, there is much talent in Brownsburg that should find its way on to our stage. Vocalists, instrumentalists, dancers and imitators have displayed their talents on these programs and the list of participating artists includes — Jim Gallagher, Bobby Bruve, Myra Flynn, A. Reneau, Louise Snyder, Jim McDougal, Mike Malone, Jeanne Flynn, Bill Whitby, Ed White and many others. On the Amateur Program of June 23 the newly organized Glee Club made its debut, and gave a very good account of itself as it presented a group of well rehearsed numbers including the currently popular "My Sister and I". Another Glee Club feature was the introduction for the first time to these parts of a catchy tune with patriotic words, "Thumbs-up".

QUIZ NIGHTS

Although the crowds have lessened slightly at the Thursday night Quiz Programs, they still provide an excellent pastime for everyone interested in this popular form of educational entertainment. On June 12 the Ballistic Lab team of Jim Houlden, Jack Langford, Smith Johnson and Bill Whitby was found on top of the heap when they tangled with Alex Holden, Harold Barrie, Jim Hall and Winston Smillie of the Chemical Lab. Bill Whitby batted 100% for the Ballistic Boys. Two pick-up teams from the audience of June 19 gave a good exhibition of mental ability. Jack Ross delivered six correct answers to the six questions fired at him, and along with George Woods, Ken Dakin and Stu Martin, this team outpointed Jack Dorion, Russ Summers, Gordon Reid and Lionel Barrier. Quiz programs will continue each Thursday at 9 p.m.

Chaplin Talks — And Convincingly too — in "The Great Dictator"

A special Victory Loan reel made by Associated Screen News and used in Montreal theatres last week, features Charlie Chaplin's famous final speech in The Great Dictator. The use of the speech by Chaplin is a surprising tribute and climax to an important phase of the comedian's career.

The nearest Chaplin had ever come to speech in a picture before this one, which is now showing at the Rex in Lachute, was the Titina number in Modern Times in which he sang a song in a sort of gibberish.

For many years Chaplin has been so identified with the pantomimic role of "the little tramp", a great number of people came to the conclusion he couldn't speak, forgetting that prior to his entrance into moving pictures in 1913, Charlie was a recognized actor — not only with the Karno Repertoire Company, but had played in support of such well known stars as William Gillette, Irene Vanbrugh and many others.

When President Roosevelt inaugurated the N.R.A., some years ago, Charlie made a radio broadcast in its favor. There were many skeptics who, because they couldn't see him, went so far as to say that though Charlie was announced as the speaker, they didn't believe it was really his voice they heard.

Now, in The Great Dictator, they can see as well as hear, and many will marvel that he stayed silent for so many years. As "the little tramp" Charlie, as well as most of his followers, believed he should have no voice. He was known and understood in pantomime much as the mythical characters of Santa Claus and other people created solely from imagination are known and understood. In The Great Dictator, he deviates only slightly in his interpretation of his character — wears the same clothes — effects the same inimitable mannerisms that have made Charlie famous — but he talks.

Doukhobors will serve Canada's War Effort

"CANADIAN VIEWPOINT"
By Allan McGee

Toronto Invasion Surprises Police and Civilians Quebec Urged to Act on 'Lights' Law

Specially Written for Readers of The Watchman

Because their religious beliefs forbade them to don the King's uniform and fight, the Doukhobors and Mennonites of this country were exempted from military service. Arrangements have now been made to open camps in Ontario where the 21 and 22 year olds will be sent to do labor service instead. The Government decided that the services of these young men could be put to a very practical use and surely if the other boys can spend four months or more doing compulsory military training, there is no reason why the Doukhobors can't do their bit too.

During the last war many members of these peace-loving religions offered their services to the Canadian War Committee in non-combattant activities. They worked in Canada doing work which required hard labor and strong nerves.

It is not that they are afraid to do their share, it is just the fact that their religion teaches against fighting their fellow-men.

They will work and labor for Canada's War Effort by building military roads and camps and so do their part in defeating Hitler.

TROOPS CAPTURE TORONTO

One recent morning the citizens of Toronto were given an opportunity to see a Blitzkreig war.

More than 13,000 troops from Camp Borden were moved, under cover of night, into positions outside the city limits. With the coming of dawn, they were divided into four columns, each one fully mechanized. At 8 a.m. the attack was started and by 8.30 the first shock troops had reached the centre of the city.

Armoured cars roared down the main street with guns bristling and ready for action. Bren carriers and reconnaissance cars led the advance and the City Hall, Post Office, and Telephone Exchange were captured without any trouble.

The attack was a complete surprise to the citizens of Toronto and even the military authorities knew nothing about it until they faced the revolvers and automatic rifles of the "invaders".

All citizens attempting to enter the captured buildings were forced to produce their registration cards as proof of identity. Many people were caught without theirs and, in every case, the soldiers took their name and address for further checking.

American citizens visiting the city were also stopped but they encountered no difficulties with the soldiers. In fact, many of them thoroughly enjoyed the experience and it gave them quite a thrill. Every type of motor vehicle was used in the attack, with the exception of tanks, and modern weapons of warfare were in full and plentiful display.

The attack, according to military authorities, was a complete success and after holding the good city of Toronto for two days, the soldiers retired to their camp for further training.

WILL QUEBEC WAKE UP

For years the people have been trying to get the Quebec Government to pass two laws.

The first, and most important, is to make it necessary for all waggons to carry lamps after dark. The second is for compulsory insurance on motor vehicles.

We have read time after time of fatal road accidents caused by no other reason than an unlit waggon being hit by a car. Some farmers are sensible enough to put lights on anyway, and they are the people who should know what a feeling of confidence it gives to have a tail light.

Just why the others refuse to light-up after dark I never could figure out. Perhaps they have their own reasons for it or maybe they just want to see how quickly they can get a place in the village churchyard.

The second law would save a lot of money and trouble for our car-owners. There are too many jalopies going around without a horn, without good brakes and without a brain behind the wheel.

They speed around hell-bent for election and they risk nothing except their own necks. They can smash a $10,000 sedan or a telephone pole and they won't lose any money. They have no money of their own, they earn very little and they carry no insurance of any kind. Knowing that they cannot be taken to court successfully, the drivers of these cars often neglect even the primary rules of the road and so get into a greater percentage of accidents than the careful driver who wants to play fair.

Mr. Godbout could remove and curtail both these highway menaces by the simple process of law. With a majority such as he has at the present time, he could do it very easily.

What say you now, Mr. Godbout?

GRANBY-LEADER MAN GETS HIS WINGS

Among the Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders to get their 'Wings' at the No. 3 Wireless School, Winnipeg, last week, appears the name of D. C. Legge, of Granby.

Mr. Legge is the son of Mr. Walter Legge, the present owner of the Granby-Leader Mail and until he volunteered for the R.C.A.F., was working in the newspaper office at Granby.

We extend to Mr. Legge congratulations, and hope for continued success in his studies and duties that he may encounter.

LACHUTE SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS TO BE ELECTED

The Protestant property holders of the Town of Lachute and the Parish of St. Jerusalem, will have the opportunity of electing two school commissioners to the board of the Lachute High School, on Monday, July 14.

Chairman Geo. Y. Deacon and Commissioner W. T. Jackson are again in the running for re-election, as their present term of office is concluded. Two new candidates making the opposition are Dr. F. W. FitzGerald of Lachute, and Mr. B. M. Hammond, of St. Jerusalem.

The office of school commissioner is a responsible position to hold, and it is hoped that a rational viewpoint will be taken by those with a ballot. The accomplishments or omissions of the present commissioners should be carefully studied, and the capabilities or handicaps of the new nominees well scrutinized.

The Lachute High School is a protestant institution, and not a sectarian one, and no thought of denominationalism should enter into the election. The only issue at stake is, "who can give us a better and more efficient school?"

GIVES UP PENSION

"By George, blood's thicker than water. I felt I just had to do it." That is why Rex. F. Smith, a Kentuckian who wears a tiny medallion with an enamelled Union Jack shield circumscribed with "C.E.F., for Service at the Front." recently wrote the governor-general of Canada that he wanted to forego his pension for the duration of the war.

AGRICULTURE SOCIETY GIVES $500. CHEQUE TO LOCAL SPITFIRE

The rising barometer of the Argenteuil Spitfire Fund was given a sudden boost this week, when Mr. Alex Bothwell, Secretary-Manager of the Lachute Spring Fair, handed over to the committee the cheque of $500.

The directors of the Fair had promised to give to the Spitfire Fund surplus profits from the intake, and their contribution has put the objective within early reach.

RECKLESS DRIVER FACES CHARGES

At one o'clock a.m. on Thursday, July 10, a crash occurred on Perley Bridge, Grenville, between a Pontiac coupe, driven by Norman Poulter, of Brownsburg, and a Pontiac coach, driven by Henri Menard, of Hawkesbury. Damage estimated at $150. was done to both cars.

Traffic Officer Howard Jones investigated the accident, and probable charges will be laid against Menard for failing to remain at the place of the crash, and of reckless driving.

BUSINESS CHANGES ON MAIN STREET

Jos. Ethier, proprietor of the Lachute Tire Shop, has bought out the business of Mr. Gordon McFaul, who was handling the local trade of the Handy-Andy syndicate of Montreal.

The Lachute Tire Shop is now situated in the Bedard Block where the Handy-Andy Store used to be.

Another change on Main Street, is the transfer of the furniture business of Mr. J. A. Tessier from Lachute Mills, to the location on Main Street, which was previously used by the Lachute Tire Shop.

"HELP THE BOYS OVERSEAS" IS MOTTO

'SPITFIRE' PLYMOUTH TO BE RAFFLED

Citizens and friends in the County of Argenteuil will again have the opportunity of helping their soldier lads overseas, by attending the "Community Field Day" that is being held in the Lachute Fair Grounds on Saturday afternoon, July 19.

The purpose of the meet is to finance the supplying of cigarettes to Argenteuil boys on active service, a work that the club has been doing for many months. Many appreciative cards and letters have been received from across the Atlantic for the parcels received, and naturally, the Lions Club is anxious to carry on with the good work.

There has been a very heavy drain upon the resources of the Club's finance, so an appeal goes forth to the public to attend this community field day.

A splendid diversified program has been arranged for the afternoon, featuring foot races for boys, girls and adults, bicycle races, tumbling and gymnastic acts by an athletic group from Alfred, Ont. Good humour will be had viewing the greasy pole, pie eating and fiddlers' competitions. Horse races will offer keen excitement as county trotters will be running neck to neck down the track.

To cap the program, the drawing for the 'Spitfire' Plymouth Car will take place, and MacRae Motors, sponsors of the drawing request that all tickets and stubs be returned to them before noon, on Saturday, July 19.

In event of rain on July 19th to be postponed until July 26th.

JOHN HADLEY AGAIN MAYOR

On Wednesday, July 9th, the nominations for mayors and councillors in the Township of Wentworth and Parish of St. Jerusalem were held.

In the mayoralty contest at Wentworth, the names of Mr. H. Barlow, gentleman farmer of Laurel and Mr. Clarence Neill, of Dunany were duly put forth for election. For the vacant No. 2 and No. 5 seats in the council Mr. Frank B. Allen, of Laurel and Mr. Melvin Boyd, Dunany, will be opponents for the first mentioned, and Mr. Sylvia Deslauriers, of St. Michel, will contest with Mr. Robert Gain, of Dunany, for the latter. Seat number one was taken by acclamation by Mr. Paul Gagne.

The nominations for the Parish of St. Jerusalem were held in the Court House, and the following were re-elected to office by acclamation, John G. Hadley, mayor; and councillors Roy Morrison, A. C. Pollock, and Simon Wilson, in seats number five, one and six respectively.

LION DR. FITZGERALD PRESENTED WITH PIN

Members of Lachute Lions Club gathered at Desjardins Hotel on Tuesday evening for their fortnightly get-together, — 20 members were present, the chair being taken by Vice-Pres. Lion J. S. Giles, in absence of President Lion Gaetan Valois who was in Quebec City.

Lion Dr. FitzGerald was the recipient of a key membership and special insignia for activity in securing new members, the presentation being made by Past-President Lion P. Roy.

Several letters of appreciation were read from boys overseas, thanking the club for their continued gifts of cigarettes.

The varied committees reported progress on the Field Day enterprise, which is to be held on the Exhibition Grounds on Saturday, July 19th.

REV. W. LECRAS ACCEPTS CALL TO MONTREAL PARISH

The announcement was made in the Anglican churches of Lachute and Brownsburg last Sunday by the Rev. Winter C. LeCras, that he had accepted the invitation of the Bishop to take over ministerial duties in the Parishes of St. Laurent and Cote des Neiges.

The Rev. LeCras came to Lachute almost nine years ago, on December 1st., 1932, from the Parish of Quyon, Que., and since then, both he and Mrs. LeCras have shown keen interest in social welfare of the community, the former being a past-president of the Lachute Lions Club.

In accepting the call, Mr. LeCras said that it is with much regret that he was leaving, and that he and Mrs. LeCras had studied the question thoroughly before making the decision.

The new pastorate will be St. Mark's at St. Laurent, and St. Paul's, Cote des Neiges, and Mr. LeCras will be in charge of church extension work there, which had previously been done by Flt. Lt. Rev. T. V. l'Estrange, who is now in the R.C.A.F.

General Motors Extends Plant

MANUFACTURING HEAVY MECHANIZED UNITS

As the trained observer visits this busy Oshawa city he is impressed with the plant extensions being made by General Motors of Canada, Limited to meet increased war requirements for the Defence program of Great Britain and the Dominion Government.

The extent to which this Company's participation in the war effort has grown can be seen in practically every department of this great Institution in the Automotive Industry.

Additions to increase capacity for work on the war program are being made on the body, engineering and tool division buildings. The stamping plant and tool room are being expanded and a new large receiving building is rapidly approaching completion. Many types of vehicles are under way and new machines are being installed to expedite production. Receiving areas are filled to capacity with rail and transport shipments, daily, from sources of supply from many cities across the Dominion of Canada.

Men in two shifts are working eighteen hours a day, entirely on mechanized equipment, and the number of highly skilled pattern makers and tool and die makers has hit a record peak. It is in this department that the most interesting developments are taking place. An entirely new cab for army vehicles, adopted for all Canadian and British mechanized equipment, as well as a new type of heavy utility wagon, have been designed here. In addition this tooling division is making tools and dies for gun jobs which are being produced by other Canadian manufacturers, engaged in the defence program.

In the stamping plant it became necessary to provide new space and equipment to produce fenders and various other parts for gun carriages and other mechanized units being manufactured elsewhere for the Government. Here, machines are being added for milling, shaping, planing, hardening and other operations.

No effort is being spared by the experienced executives and trained employees of the General Motors organization in making their contribution towards winning the War.

MONTCALM TO VOTE ON LIQUOR QUESTION

The Council of the Township of Montcalm held a special meeting on Friday, July 4th, for the intention of discussing the contemplated sale of liquor in the district.

It was proposed and seconded that the usual procedure would be taken, that a public notice would be published for the required weeks in the county paper, and that the question would be brought before the electors for approval or rejection in August.

Law is the embodiment of the moral sentiment of the people.

Premier Enthused With Military Inspection

Shipyards, Factories, Naval Depots and Air Schools Visited During Western Tour

Wherever Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King has stopped on his long journey through Western Canada, he has seen a zest and an enthusiasm for the job that has seemed as boundless as the mountains and the prairies themselves. With ears and eyes focussed upon the sounds and the sights of a vigorous nation at war, he has toured shipyards, air stations, naval bases, army camps and aircraft plants. One thing was common to every visit. The Prime Minister invariably emerged from his inspection wearing a smile that reflected his satisfaction with and confidence in the things he had seen.

The West's first greeting to Mr. King was a parade of men and war machines which took nearly ninety minutes to pass the saluting base. That was at Calgary. Newspapermen from all parts of Canada who were on hand to see the show just shoved back their hats and whistled in downright admiration as the last of the parade passed by.

Next stop was at Vancouver, where the Prime Minister saw ships of war take shape before his eyes as plates were slammed upon ribs of steel with a rapidity that promised there would be plenty of Canadian hulls riding the seas before many months have passed. He chatted with workmen about their jobs. Each man was obviously proud to explain his part and the Prime Minister seemed eager to listen.

A significant aspect of this tour is the fact that official ceremonies have been cut to a minimum. This is a close-hand inspection of what Canada's Western provinces are doing in the job of ensuring victory and the Prime Minister has personally talked to twenty men in overalls or khaki for one in striped trousers. Constantly, he asks questions. When was this keel laid down? How long before this class graduates? How many men are being trained to operate this gun or that type of airplane?

At Victoria, where ships bid goodbye to Canada as they nose out into the Pacific, the Navy held the spotlight during the Prime Minister's visit. He inspected the big naval training station at Esquimalt and watched while hundreds of brawny sailor lads swung smartly by to the tune of "Hearts of Oak." It was Dominion Day. Speaking to the assembled sailors at the end of their display the Prime Minister said he had lived through sixty-six anniversaries of Canada's Confederation without ever witnessing one quite so thrilling as this.

From Esquimault he journeyed to the new naval college H.M.C.S. Royal Roads where he met the young men who will command the vessels that are sliding from the ways of Canada's shipyards.

"When I look upon your faces," said Mr. King, "I see a vision that gives me confidence in the future of our country."

Straight as ramrods stood these young men as they listened to the leader of their country bid "God be with you in the task you have taken upon your hands."

Sharing the honors in the Prime Minister's busy day of inspection at Victoria was the Officers' Training School at Gordon Head, just outside the city. The cadets put on a realistic show that included smoke screens, artillery drills, and the booming explosions of "bombs" placed at different points on the training grounds.

Returning east, Mr. King will make numerous stops to view war activity. His visit to Victoria made the third inspection tour of his entire journey to the Pacific Coast. Long days of travel have eaten up the remainder of the time, but at practically every station some message has gone aboard to be looked after by the Prime Minister in his "office on wheels."

Cavein Seriously Injures Lachute Town Employees

Shortly before noon on Tuesday morning, a landslide occurred on the Milway Street sewer construction, and two men were seriously injured by the accident.

Paul Ladouceur and Antoine Beausejour, both of Lachute, were the unfortunate victims that were caught beneath the heavy weight of rock and dirt. Dr. F. W. FitzGerald, was summoned immediately to the scene, and upon examination of the injured men, had them removed to the Notre Dame Hospital, Montreal.

Upon latest information, the condition of Paul Ladouceur is very serious, but Beausejour suffered lesser injuries.

Red Cross Ships 15,000 Parcels

AUSTRALIAN PRISONERS OF WAR HELPED BY SOCIETY

Five thousands prisoners of war parcels, for Australians captured in the east by the enemy, will be packed in Montreal each week, according to an announcement made this week by Lt. Col. William Leggat, M.C., President of the Quebec Provincial Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

It is expected that the building and equipment will be in operation within the next three weeks, said Col. Leggat.

The Canadian Red Cross Society, at the direct request of the Australian Red Cross in Melbourne, will pack and ship five thousand parcels of food each week, for which the Australian society will pay all costs. The work has been turned over to the Canadian Red Cross because of the difficulties of shipping in the east.

With the additional 5,000 parcels for Australian prisoners, the Canadian Red Cross Society will then be shipping a total of 15,000 food parcels per week.

Col. Leggat pointed out that the 5,000 food parcels for Australian prisoners are no indication of the number of Australians taken prisoners of war, but the Australian Red Cross, through its secretary Gen. Alfred G. Brown, has set this figure until the exact number of prisoners can be established.

The Australian parcels will be shipped along with the 10,000 food parcels which the Canadian Red Cross sends to British prisoners of war in Germany each week.

TREAT FALL WHEAT, CROP REPAYS CARE

Many a field of fall wheat was plowed up this spring, for the reason that the crop lacked vigour to survive the winter or to withstand the effects of the alternate thawing and freezing of the subsequent period. It is significant and not surprising to find that in nearly every instance of failure the application of a suitable fertilizer was omitted. Some who thought to save money by this omission now realize that it was false economy. Fall wheat is one crop that can rarely be grown successfully without the aid of fertilizer, be it 2-16-6 on the heavier loams, 2-12-6 or 2-12-10 on the lighter soils. A fertilizer high in phosphate encourages rapid and firm establishment of the young plants and the development of sufficient top before winter sets in.

Another measure of protection that should not be neglected is the treatment of the seed grain with ethyl mercury phosphate dust which not only controls smut or bunt of wheat but promotes vigorous germination and growth by destroying other seed-borne organisms that produce root rots if unchecked. The cost of this highly commended treatment is negligible, as only half an ounce of the dust per bushel of seed is required.

As mercury dust is poisonous, precautions are necessary in its use. The directions printed on the label of the container should be read and followed carefully.

CROP REPORT FOR THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Eastern Townships and Ottawa Valley — Growth of all grain and other crops has been retarded by excessive heat and lack of moisture. Corn and tomato plants are making slow progress and root crops are backward. Haying has commenced; in most districts the crop will be well below average. Pasturage is generally in only fair condition. Tobacco plants are making slow progress and have suffered damage from winds and heat. Orchards promise well. The yield of strawberries is light. More moisture is urgently needed in nearly all districts. Lower St. Lawrence and Lake St. John District — Crops generally have made good progress during the past fortnight and recent rains have been beneficial. Hay, while somewhat backward, is in fairly good condition, and a near-average crop is expected. Pastures have improved. Moisture is adequate in most areas and warm weather is required.

ICE CREAM FROM SEAWEED

And Macaroons from New Zealand Fruit Stones

Wall boards from Ceylon coconuts, macaroons from New Zealand apricot, peach and cherry stones, building blocks from the coral mud of British Honduras and canned chicken from India are among the investigations reviewed in its new report by Britain's Imperial Institute.

The Institute has carried out experiments on the production from Malayan seaweed of agar-agar, a substance used for such diverse purposes as cheap American ice-cream, Chinese bird's-nest soup, electro-plating, and a laxative. Malayan tonka beans, which impart to tobacco the scent of new-mown hay, have been examined, as have Australian substitutes for Swedish and Spanish welding rod coating materials.

There are reports on ruby-mica from India, South African chicory seed and New Zealand pigs' hair; sheepskins from Tanganyika and banana stems from Palestine; Antiguan cotton seed, Nyasaland tung oil and Nigerian ginger; soap from Burma, sansevieria fibre from East Africa, raisins from Cyprus, cashew nuts from Sierra Leone and Medicinal plants from Southern Rhodesia.

Under war conditions, much of the Institutes' work is secret, but it may be stated that the Plant and Animals Department made reports on 212 samples and dealt with 1,666 other inquiries from thirty-three Empire countries, while the Mineral Resources Department examined 1,884 samples and dealt with 1,715 inquiries.

OPENING OF MILITARY CAMPS WILL BE REPEATED

Opening of military camps to the public on Canada's first Army Day proved so successful that from time to time similar occasion will be arranged by Military Districts it is announced by the Department of National Defence.

Commenting on Army Day, its originator, Major-General B. W. Browne, D.S.O., M.C., Adjutant General, said, "This first chance for the public to see Army personnel on and off parade, to see the complicated war machines, and to examine everyday life of those who have realized their responsibilities of citizenship in a democracy and have freely volunteered to defend that democracy, has developed a keener interest in the men upon whose self-sacrifice Canada must rely if freedom is to prevail."

WORK PROGRESSES ON LAURENTIAN HIGHWAY

The Hon. T. D. Bouchard announced recently that the highway between Ste. Agathe and Ste. Adele is being rebuilt this year with the expectation that it will be completed before the winter season. Mr. Bouchard said the work was being done as rapidly as possible, taking into consideration the difficulties encountered on the mountain site. The Mulet river bridge in Ste. Adele will also be completed within two months, he said.

GIRL IS HOMESICK FOR LONDON AT WAR

When the British people "go out next morning and find a part of a whole block of London missing," they say, "oh, there's been a mouse nibbling down in Berkley Square—or wherever it is — again;" when they have the misfortune to get an arm broken in the melee they say, when they arrive in Canada, "oh it's nothing to do with the war, it was a twisted muscle."

At least that's the excuse Miss Jean Ritchie, blonde, Australian-born American consular secretary from London gave for a broken arm and soiled arm sling when she arrived here from England last week to take over a post in the United States Consulate here.

"You know," she said, "this arm's been bothering reporters all the way up from Halifax. They really think a German plane or a bomb fell on it." Then she laughed "that's all you think of over here—our blackouts and our bombs.

"Yet if I were sitting chatting with you in London tonight, in a London restaurant instead of a Montreal restaurant, it wouldn't be any different than it is here. We'd hear a bomb flop here and there if they were close, and the occasional rumble of the guns; but as a rule you can't hear either unless you're outside and even then they mean nothing to Londoners now."

Miss Ritchie laughed again. Looking at her you had the idea, in spite of tired eyes, she'd been laughing for the past two years of her experience in London, where she "went to work" from her home in Ayr, Queensland.

"You've no idea" — it was the laugh that made you believe her — "how miserable it is to be away from London," she said. She went on to chatter about Cafe de Paris and the bombing there. "I wasn't there," she said, "but some of my friends were. It was the most popular night club in London. Tell the people of Montreal there are other night clubs in London.

"Tell them, though, that behind the smile England needs Canada, everything Canada can give her."

CHARTING OF ST. LAWRENCE

For many years the safety of navigation in the Gulf and River St. Lawrence was due in large measure to the surveying and charting carried out from 1827 to 1856 by Admiral Henry Wolseley Bayfield, reports the Department of Mines and Resources. A memorial in Queen Square, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, erected on the advice of the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, pays national tribute to the memory of this intrepid hydrographer.

The charting of the St. Lawrence route is a story of ships and men. From the time of the early French explorers in 1678 intermittent attempts were made to sound the waters of the river belt it was not until 1827, when Bayfield, then captain, was appointed by the British Admiralty to chart the river and gulf, that any marked progress was made in this stupendous task. Bayfield's first schooner, the little Gulnare, was built especially for him in a Quebec shipyard in 1828. He spent twenty-nine years sailing up and down the river and gulf, and his ships, his work, and his remarkable personality still live in the memory of the sea-going folk of lower Canada.

GENERAL WAVELL TO INDIA

The circumstances of General Wavell's transfer from command of British forces in the Near East to command of the forces in India indicate growing dissatisfaction with the course of the war in the Mediterranean. This dissatisfaction has been tempered by recognition of the past achievements of Gen. Wavell. The sudden change, which places General Auchinleck in command in the Near East, may well have been prompted by the urgency of the situation created by the Nazi attack on Russia.

This attack may prove Britain's opportunity or, if not seized as such, a big setback for the entire anti-Nazi cause. Interpretations from London — though carefully worded — remind one of passages from Prime Minister Churchill's speeches earlier this year which seemed to rebuke British military leaders for being overcautious. General Auchinleck is noted for "drive". Drive is what is needed if the Nazi-Russian war is to be capitalized by the democracies.

The position of Mr. Menzies in the official picture at this moment is significant. The Australian Prime Minister has come forward with a statement that the shift should not be considered a suppression of General Wavell but that a fresh outlook now seemed desirable in the Near East command. Australian troops have taken the brunt of the Mediterranean fighting. They represent an element in the British Commonwealth which has been exerting an increasing influence in Empire affairs.

FIRST TANK BRIGADE SPEEDILY FORMED

Not even on the Canadian Army program six months ago, the 1st. Canadian Army Tank Brigade arrived last week in the United Kingdom.

Proposal to organize the brigade came by cable from Col. the Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, after consultation with the United Kingdom Government when he was in England just five months ago. Although plans were then underway for an armoured division the proposal for a tank brigade as well was something entirely new. Since that time "Speed" has been the watchword, — speed in mobilizing, organizing as a unit and passing through initial training.

The new unit is under the command of Brigadier F. F. Worthington, M.C., M.M., who flew to England ahead of the Brigade to prepare for their final training in conjunction with Lieut.-General A.G.L. McNaughton, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., General Officer Commanding the Canadian Corps.

FACTS OF INTEREST

Civil aircraft in revenue service in Canada carried 10,634 passengers in February as compared with 10,556 in January.

Coal made available for use in Canada during the first three months of 1941 aggregated 6,453-948 tons, an increase of 12 per cent over the corresponding period of 1940.

REVIEW OF PUBLIC HEALTH EDUCATION

Citing the experience of Ontario with regard to immunization against diptheria and compulsory pasteurization of milk, the Health League of Canada has declared its intention to extend its activities in regard to such safeguards to all Canada.

The announcement was made at the annual meeting of the League's Board of Directors, held at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, when reports of the work of the League for the past year were presented. It was pointed out that toxoid immunization had resulted in a world record for Toronto in 1940, when not one case of diphtheria was registered in that city. The pasteurization of milk had driven bovine tuberculosis and other milk-borne diseases from Ontario.

A growing interest in industrial health was reported, and the League had been consulted on the subject by large industrial employers. Safeguards suggested by the League would cut down on loss of time through sickness and speed up the national war effort.

Much had been done during the past year to educate the public with regard to the menace of venereal disease. This had declined in Canada recently, but an upsurge was to be expected as the result of wartime conditions, and the League had its plans laid to cope with the evil in an effective manner.

Interest shown by women of Toronto and surrounding municipalities in the League's Nutrition classes was evidenced by the fact that more than 5,000 attended these classes during the past year. The instruction had been experimental, in an attempt to test the public interest in such questions. The result would justify greater emphasis being laid on this important work in future.

It was shown that the League had distributed thousands of pieces of free literature on health topics during the year, while its official magazine, "Health", had been an important factor in connection with popular education.

VACATIONS ARE NOT FRIVOLOUS

You will hear people say that vacation are frivolous in times such as these. That money might well be spent for other purposes. That they could not have a good time on a vacation anyway for worrying over the fate of the world.

The machines that are turning out ammunition and war equipment need a rest. The guns in use overseas cannot be fired ceaselessly. Our leaders and generals require periods of change and rest, albeit they must be brief. Is it therefore reasonable for the ordinary citizen to seek relaxation for a time even though he does feel that on his shoulders rests the weight of the world?

A vacation rests the mind and the body. It refreshes the soul, brightens the eye, and puts new energy into lagging steps. It gives an opportunity to obtain a new outlook; to store up energy so that when it is over one can buckle down, work harder, no matter how tough the job may be.

The Argenteuil Spitfire and the War Spirit

Since the inauguration of the Argenteuil Spitfire Fund, we have had time to reflect and study the work accomplished by people, communities and groups.

There have been heart-warming incidents . . . such as unexpected cheques from enthusiastic friends in the States and farmost points in Canada, a golden wedding ring from an anonymous lady in Montreal, symbolizing a dear sacrifice, the spirited work by Young People's Groups and Boy Scouts, of children's inspiration in raising funds, and of initiative shown by a few individuals.

Naturally, there have been a few disappointments, but very few. Some who could have given a little more failed to do so. An odd community or two failed to swing into this patriotic chance to help Britain, but there is still time yet for these sins of omission to be corrected.

There have been difficulties that have delayed the fund reaching its objective sooner, such as the War Certificates Campaign, the War Service Canvass and the Victory Loan drive. These campaigns are absolutely necessary for the successful prosecution of the war. They have meant a drain on certain financial resources . . . but two out of the three drives have been an investment. We believe that there are many people yet in the community who can voluntary offer a small contribution to the Argenteuil Fund.

The objective is in sight . . . our present amount collected is $19,000, and with certain amounts promised will reach over $20,000. We appeal now to those who haven't yet contributed, or to those who find that they are in a position to give a little more.

The Argenteuil Spitfire Fund has created a real war spirit in this County . . . let us therefore reach our objective immediately, so that our banner can again be raised to the top of the mast.

A Gracious Gesture by a Good Neighbor

Many expressions of goodwill and sympathy for the British fight against tyranny have come from our good neighbors to the South.

Among these, the Reader's Digest, of Pleasantville, N. Y., has been unique in showing its appreciation of Britain's battle for freedom, by having a 'fighter fund' of its own.

Since last December, fifteen percent of all Canadian subscriptions has been turned over to the Canadian Finance Minister towards Hurricane Fighters for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Up till May, 1941, a total of $17,390.58 has been forwarded to the Finance Minister, and the amount paid to Canada increases each month.

Few people are aware of this fine gesture and of other sacrifices that this magazine is making during the war. The Digest pays from its own pocket, the Canadian Import Tax, and accepts Canadian currency, which adds up to the fact that this magazine is virtually on a non-profit basis in Canada at this time.

We salute this goodwill publication for the spirit shown, and trust that its friendly efforts will help to cement the ties that bind the democratic peoples of the U.S.A. and the British Commonwealth.

New Zealand's Peter Fraser Would be Welcomed in Canada

Canadians everywhere approve of the cordial invitation of Prime Minister MacKenzie King to the Rt. Hon. Peter Fraser, of New Zealand, to visit our land when he is on North American shores.

It is hoped that we in Canada will have the opportunity of extending welcome and bestowing honor upon this great statesman of our sister nation.

When Prime Minister Michael Savage died suddenly, the reigns of office were handed over to Peter Fraser, and he has been a worthy successor.

Both men were reformers, and their election promises were carried out, to the amazement of many people. Though intense opposition by the Medical Association of New Zealand was evident towards the Health Insurance Scheme, the plan was carried through by the government, because of the promise made to the electorate.

From 1935 to 1938, unemployment was reduced eighty percent, and industry, railway and agriculture shared in the general upturn. The N. Z. housing program compares favorably with the best in the world, with the government building 3,500 new houses a year; a corresponding number for Canada would mean 30,000.

We extend to the Rt. Hon. Peter Fraser, a wholesome invitation, for his presence here would mean enrichment to Canada.

Canada and the Aftermath of the War

Many Canadians are thinking in waves of pessimism about post-war days. Louis XV once said "after me the deluge." These Canadians are uttering the same philosophy, "after the war the deluge". It seems as though there is a spirit of lost hope in Canada, as though our statesmen and leaders have nothing to offer this nation but semi-starvation amongst plenty, unemployment instead of construction, misery where happiness should dwell. We have had our years of depression like all other nations, but surely our future may be planned so that there is at least social security in some form for the majority of Canadians.

Britain is planning for such a society. Churchill, Eden, Atlee, Greenwood, Morrison and Bevan have their minds focussed to the future as well as to winning the war. A new order will be necessary, and many countries are aiming for bettering conditions.

Little is said in Canada about a new order, surely our leaders are not satisfied with the immediate past. Canada is a great country, a rich country, and will be even greater and richer in the future. But we have to face facts. A country is really great and rich, when the least of its citizens can enjoy work, health and security.

Notes of the Hour . . .

What Churchill wouldn't say . . . "we are three months ahead of schedule." There is no such thing as schedule in war time. Only the maximum efforts of production and increased scientific training of fighting forces will be accepted by those wholly behind Canada's war effort.

Before the United States election, Roosevelt was overwhelmingly favored by the British people . . . Wendell Willkie was the question mark. Now we find that Wendell is advocating stronger measures for British support than the President. Their speeches on July the Fourth offer contrast. Little cheer was found by the papers of Britain in Roosevelt's talk. While W. W. came out strongly for the U. S. Navy to help convoy the ships to Britain. Perhaps Wendell is speaking for Franklin.

Beating Plowshares into Tools of War for Canada

This is fact, not metaphor.

A century-old Canadian manufacturing company is doing an efficient job of beating ploughshares into the tools of war.

The factory is situated in an Eastern Ontario town. Not even a crumbling foundation stone remains of the crude blacksmith shop which was the birthplace of the modern, sprawling industry which stands upon its site today.

For more than a hundred years this factory has been turning out farm implements that have played an important role in the development of Canadian agriculture. It still makes some implements, essential to Canadian farmers who are producing wartime food requirements, but there is an ever-increasing diversion of skilled workmen and precious machines to war work.

Many of the employees are veterans whose names have been on the payrolls for 30 or 40 years. There are some whose fathers and grandfathers before them were employed by this same company, handing down their skill and knowledge from generation to generation. They have devoted their lives to making things which stand as a symbol of peace. Now they are toiling as they never toiled before to produce a variety of the weapons of war.

Chief production at present is that of rifle grenades. These are similar to the Mills bombs so familiar to those who served in the First Great War, but they have an attachment which makes it possible for them to be fired from a discharger on the muzzle of an army rifle. This increases both the range and accuracy of the grenade, a versatile and deadly weapon for close combat.

The grenade is egg-shaped, about four inches long and two inches in diameter. The outer surface is corrugated, both to give the thrower a better grip when the grenade is used for hand throwing, and to increase fragmentation of the steel case when it bursts.

A simple operation transforms a rifle grenade into a hand grenade in a matter of seconds.

A spring lever is recessed in the side of the bomb, which is held in place by a cotter pin. When the bomb is thrown by hand, the soldier pulls out the cotter pin, which serves as a safety catch to prevent untimely explosion in handling.

The grenade is still safe so long as the lever in the side is depressed. When the grenade is thrown, removal of pressure on the lever releases a spring which, in turn, set off the fuse. This time fuse burns while the grenade is in flight and ignites the explosive charge after a lapse of several seconds. The steel case is blown to pieces with terrific force, with devastating results to all who happen to be within a radius of 15 or 20 feet.

The rifle grenade differs from the hand grenade in that it has a circular steel plate, known as a gas check, attached to the base end. This gas check fits smoothly into a tubular discharger attached to the muzzle of a rifle. The butt end of the rifle is held firmly upon the ground and a blank cartridge is inserted in the breech and fired in the usual way. The gas from the exploding cartridge builds up terrific driving power against the base plate of the grenade and hurls it upon its mission of death. The cotter pin is pulled out when the grenade is placed in the discharger, and the lever is held down by the walls of the cylinder until the grenade is on its way.

At first glance the rifle grenade seems to be a comparatively simple thing to make, but actually it is a carefully designed device requiring a high degree of precision in manufacture. Some of the tolerances in machining are as fine as 3/1000th of an inch — about one-tenth of the thickness of a human hair. Each tiny component must be cut, shaped, threaded, and fitted with great exactitude.

The steel grenade shells are cast in lots of eight in modern moulding machine. After the roughness of the cast has been smoothed off by grinding, and in giant "rumbling" machines and the shot blast, the egg-shaped bomb goes to the machine shop for drilling, threading and finishing. These operations require much skill.

Young apprentices, each trained to perform a single operation and to do it well, assemble the grenades. The body of the bomb is cleaned thoroughly and varnished inside and out. Workers insert the tubular fuse holder — the firing pin, side lever, cotter pin and ring, filling plug, and other parts.

Every part of the grenade has been subjected to careful inspection at every step of manufacture, but there is a final careful examination before the bombs are packed in wooden cases for shipment to the filling plants, where the explosive and fuses will be put in.

Thousands of grenades are made in this factory every week, and the plant is geared to meet almost any production demand.

The manager of the plant takes a keen interest in this phase of production. He was a grenade instructor in the Canadian army in the first Great War. He knows almost at a glance whether a grenade is right or wrong.

"I had to learn everything there is to know about them," he related. "I know what it may mean to the boys in action if a grenade fails to go off when it should, or goes off when it shouldn't."

"These," as he pointed to a great array of shining grenades in their packing cases, "are as near perfect as we can make them."

IN BRITAIN, the people work, sweat and lose blood. They man the machines by day, they watch for bombs by night, they pay heavy taxes and know not when their last hour is upon them. They do not play . . . they haven't time to participate in their love of sport. They are all in the front line fighting . . . fighting their battle, and our battle for the rights of man.
WE, IN CANADA are also in the fight, but what a contrast. We can work, we can loan our money, we can send bundles to Britain. That is all good. But we must sacrifice some little thing, and give the equivalent in cash in voluntary efforts.
THE ARGENTEUIL SPITFIRE FUND offers to you that opportunity. Volunteers are needed now to finish the job. Ask yourself, "have I done my bit to help this fund?" If the answer is in the negative, send your contribution immediately to J. R. Charron, Provincial Bank, Lachute, Que.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

"Sacrament" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday July 13th.

The Golden Text is from John 13: 34, 35. "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me." (Luke 22: 19).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Are all who eat bread and drink wine in memory of Jesus willing truly to drink his cup, take his cross, and leave all for the Christ-principle?... His true flesh and blood were his Life; and they truly eat his flesh and drink his blood, who partake of that divine Life." (pp. 33, 25).

TEMPERENCE AND THE U. C.

The Montreal and Ottawa Conference of the United Church of Canada, meeting at Montreal recently, urged the Dominion Government (1) that action be taken along the lines suggested by the deputation that waited upon them last July, viz., 1. The elimination of all sale of liquor except through Government agencies. 2. Reduction of hours of sale in such agencies to five hours each week day. 3. Prohibition of liquor advertising except on premises where actually made or sold. 4. If and when No. 1 is granted that wet canteens in military camps be abolished. (2) That the traffic be taxed as heavily as other unnecessary luxuries. The Conference noted with pleasure and commended the action of the Quebec Legislature for its recent restrictive measures to curtail the liquor traffic. It urged voluntary abstention from the use of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes, and commended the efficient leadership of the Ontario Temperance Federation and the Quebec Temperance League, promising their support.

WINSTON CURRY, RADIO SINGER VISITS DISTRICT

Apart from the favored few who may visit a broadcasting studio, it is very seldom that radio listeners are given the opportunity to see and hear, in person, a popular singer whom they are accustomed to hear over the air, but such was the privilege of hundreds of people of this district who gathered in the Dalesville and Lachute Baptist Churches and the Brownsburg Gospel Tent, last Sunday morning, afternoon and evening respectively. The occasion being the visit of Mr. Winston Curry, known from the Atlantic to the Pacific as the singer in the C.B.C. "Sweet Hour of Prayer" program; and of Mr. Roy Campbell, a gifted young preacher who is no stranger to Lachute — where he spent much of his boyhood. These three gatherings replaced the regular services of the Dalesville, Brownsburg and Lachute Baptist Churches, but took a similar form. Mr. Curry conducted the singing and rendered very effectively as solos a number of well-known hymns, whilst Mr. Campbell delivered powerful sermons and each in his own capacity greatly impressing the appreciative congregations. The church members will have a new interest in listening in the future to "Sweet Hour of Prayer" programs, because of this personal contact with the author.

ORDINATION AND INDUCTION OF ELDERS IN LACHUTE UNITED CHURCH

At the morning service in Lachute United Church, last Sunday, two Elders were inducted, and three were ordained for the first time to that high and noble office. Those inducted were Messrs. L. M. Hammond, and E. R. Morrin; and those ordained were Messrs. Stuart Armstrong, Silas Elder and Harry Pollock. In his sermon Mr. Rosborough traced the growth of organization in the early Christian Church, dealt with the meaning and significance of the Eldership in Christian history, and dwelt upon the duties which the faithful Elder is expected to perform in any given church or congregation today.

BURNING PAINS IN LEGS CAUSED BY NERVOUS DISTURBANCE

"Erythro" means red, and "algia" means pain. Erythromelalgia is the name of disease which produces redness and burning pain of the legs. This condition occurs particularly in young adults. The disorder seems to be more common in women. The attacks of redness and pain are brought on by warmth and exercise, may also develop in the hands, but only rarely.

At first, this trouble is noted only during the hot period of the summer. As time goes on, however, and the attacks become more severe and last longer, they also develop in the winter. The pain is of a burning nature, and at first may be limited to the toes or the heel but later involves the feet and then the legs. It is made much worse by warmth and by walking. As time passes, the pain may become so severe as to be almost intolerable.

During an attack, the skin of the legs and feet may be extremely tender and may look as if it has been burned. Keeping the legs raised will lessen the symptoms.

The exact cause of erythromelalgia is not known. However, it seems probable that it is due to some disturbance of the nervous system, particularly of those nerves which control the size of the blood vessels. These are known as vasomotor nerves.

There are other disorders which produce symptoms much like those which occur in erythromelalgia. For example, there may be a blocking of the arteries in the legs due to hardened arteries. This causes a reddish discoloration of the skin. When the legs are raised, this red color disappears and the skin becomes pale. Furthermore, during the early stages of this disorder, there is no pain. The pain does not start until later on and may become constant and severe. It is not made worse by exercise, as does the pain in erythromelalgia.

In the disorder, called thromboangiitis obliterans, symptoms similar to those in erythromelalgia may occur. However, in this condition redness of the skin is not by any means an outstanding symptom. In thrombo-angiitis obliterans, when the legs are hanging and not raised, the pain is relieved to a great extent.

Drs. Evelyn D. Telford and Harry T. Simmons of Manchester, England, have treated a number of patients with erythromelalgia by an operation of cutting the sympathetic nerves supplying the blood vessels in the legs. The patients treated in this way have obtained excellent results.

Since erythromelalgia does produce such severe symptoms, and because the pain is so severe, the operation of cutting the nerves to the blood vessels would seem to be well worth while, since it does tend to bring relief.

TO ASSURE BETTER NATIONAL HEALTH

Suggesting that Canada might well follow the example set by England and other countries in fighting the increase of heart disease among children, the Health League of Canada has released details of a campaign which is planned in San Francisco area. A survey of heart disease in children is now being carried out in three counties included in the area, it was stated.

The program also provides for diagnosis and treatment of all children acutely ill; medical, hospital and after care for children of parents unable to pay; medical, nursing and social service work for all children included in the program; special service in cases of rheumatic fever, and provision of educational opportunities for patients capable of studying.

Children with histories of rheumatism and rheumatic fever will receive special attention.

Reports received by the Health League of Canada show that Britain, despite war conditions, is concentrating on disease prevention and public health measures, it was stated.

One feature of the present British program was said to be the establishment of special hospitals for the treatment of rheumatism. A high incidence of the disease is foreseen as a result of overcrowding in public shelters, lack of heating and shortage of some articles of diet. Special hospitals are recommended because comparatively few physicians are said to have had wide experience in the diagnosis and treatment of the disease.

Another instance of Britain's alertness in public health matters, said an official of the league, is seen in orders that medical research workers stay at their jobs, since they are looked to, to devise methods of disease control.

BRITAIN'S SALVAGE CAMPAIGN IS CHALLENGE TO CANADIANS

Ottawa (Special) — Your enquiring reporter was immensely stirred this week by news of the expansion of Great Britain's already wide-spread salvage operations. The work being done in "Churchill's isle" along these lines by home-front Britons is a direct challenge to Canadians. The latest British monthly figures are proof of that.

The collection of waste paper in Britain has increased from 21,441 tons to 24,099 tons, metals from 19,307 tons to 22,169 tons, and bones from 834 to 981 tons. The value over the preceding month has increased from $895,000 to $1,020,000.

No wonder your reporter was stirred! No wonder H. G. Judd, controller of salvage in the British Ministry of Supply is pleased with the response to his plea to make salvage operations more complete.

"The co-operation of the public is very encouraging," he declared, "and we hope, by means of the special drives we are organizing in various centers, to maintain a steady rise. We need to recover more waste paper, more metal, more kitchen bones. Every scrap salvaged means labor, money, and material saved, and needless risk of life at sea avoided."

The intensity, the scope, and the efficiency of the British attack on waste is an inspiration to Canada, according to William Knightley, supervisor of Canada's National Salvage Campaign.

"We must not overlook a single opportunity to collect secondary materials and to turn them back to industry," he commented. "The British lead the way in trying to achieve one hundred percent salvage. Their expansion over the previous month's operations has brought in an additional 5,567 tons of materials and has made an additional $124,500 available."

More Britons doing more salvage work that is the objective in Britain. More Canadians doing more salvage work — that must be the objective in Canada.

"And for the duration," added Mr. Knightley.

The value of Canada's drive on waste is now fully realized even by those who were most sceptical at the opening of the campaign. The results are three-fold: reclamation of domestic waste lessens the importation of various raw materials for war purposes, the re-use of partially manufactured products helps to conserve labor, there is a general increase in the speed of war production because of the time saved.

Mr. Knightley made a significant remark to your reporter: "The longer the war, the more important salvage must become."

The implication was that the longer the war, the more intense would become the industrial activity supporting it. Men taken from industry, possible difficulties in obtaining essential raw materials, and increased demands upon production, would make the prevention of waste and the reclamation of waste more vital than ever.

"There are various estimates concerning the possible length of the war," Mr. Knightley concluded. "The latest is that by U. S. Senator Claude Pepper who estimates ten years. That is probably over-pessimistic. But all are agreed that it will be lengthy. In Ottawa, recently, H. G. Menzies of Australia said that we are nowhere near the core of the war. General Charles de Gaulle prophesies a long and arduous struggle. Prime Minister Winston Churchill has warned that we must be prepared to fight on into 1944.

"But no matter the length of the war, our National Salvage Campaign is fully set to prevent waste and reclaim waste until the last shot is fired. We know how important the work is. It is part of the war effort. And every Canadian can do his share. The British example is our inspiration!"

DESTROYED BY FIRE

The Manoir St. Donat, a large 40-room hotel on Route 18 six miles southeast of St. Donat, near Lac Ouareau, was completely destroyed last week by fire of undetermined origin. Damage was estimated at $55,000. No one was injured.

Breaking out at 6.15 a.m., the flames spread rapidly and in less than an hour the building was a mass of smouldering ruins.

Jules A. Desloover was the proprietor of the hotel.

STE. AGATHE DANCE

200 Turn Out for Festivities Held in Quarters in the Laurentide Inn

More than 200 guests attended the opening dance of the Ste. Agathe Yacht Club which was held last Saturday night in the yacht club headquarters in the Laurentide Inn.

At a meeting prior to the dance, J. G. Notman was named commodore of the club, succeeding N. A. Timmins who resigned after serving for three successive years.

A dinghy race was held Sunday on Lac des Sables inaugurating the club's sailing season.

At Saturday's dance, a one minute silence was observed for the late L. E. Stoner, director of the club, who died last week.

Mr. Stoner had for many years been a summer resident at Ste. Agathe, and was instrumental in helping this spirited vacation resort to become known in the United States and Canada.

BLACKOUTS

When we heard the Happy Gang talk about having a Blackout, we realized that what has become a common-place on the East Coast is new to most of Canada. At first just the City of Saint John had Blackouts but for some time suburban areas as far out as twenty miles have been included. Practice makes perfect in Blackouts as well as other things. It is harder than one would think to stage one successfully but Saint John has certainly learned how. All lights are out and all traffic stopped. A flier who flew through a blackout said the flare of a match attracted more attention than a light left burning. I can readily believe that. One dark night an A.R.P. warden was on the road just below us and he lit a match and it made a regular flare. The wardens have blue glass in their flash-lights. We usually have left a light burning when we go out evenings but we cannot do that now as a blackout might be held while we were out. We hope the real necessity will never come but the authorities have put a lot of hard work in getting the people practiced in what to do, so that we might be ready.

BORED BY REPORTS

The reading of reports seems to be a bugbear at every convention. They take so much time which might be put to more constructive use. When reports are printed, as they so often are, it does seem as if they might be omitted at a convention. One morning of a joint meeting of the Federated and the New Brunswick Women's Institute was taken up with reading reports. After the meeting was over I strolled around and shamelessly listened in on several groups of women talking the meeting over. Without exception they complained about it. One woman said she had made her report as short as possible. Quick as a flash the other women told her she had taken nine minutes, they had timed her. Her answer to that was you couldn't make a report on a year's work in less time or you might just as well not make it. Another women said she was not interested in hearing of the past, and what was gone, she wanted to plan for the future. Another said any woman making a report should imagine she was writing a telegram and paying five cents for each word she used. There are some good things to be learned from the reports but usually people are too bored to get them. If written reports were sent in and gone over ahead of time and the highlights picked out and only these read, wouldn't that help solve the problem? Unfortunately, this was the only session I had a chance to attend so I cannot report on what must have been an interesting convention.

EAT PROTEIDS WITH SALADS

The tendency is to under-eat in hot weather, especially with those who are working hard and sometimes feel it is too hot to eat. One needs different food but enough of it. Salads, vegetables, and fruits are everybodies' choice for hot weather meals but we need some proteids too. Some meat, fish, eggs, and cheese, are all good accompaniments to the vegetable meals. Did you ever try crackers and cheese as dessert following a salad first course? If you are one of those who like a sweet with cheese, strawberry jam is tops. If you have never eaten a sweet with your cheese try jam, jelly, or marmalade with it and just see how good a combination it makes. Sliced hard-cooked, or devilled eggs, do more than taste good with a salad. They form a natural balance to make a perfect whole.

CANNED CHERRIES

Wash the cherries, then stem and pit them, and pack into sterilised jars. Cover with medium syrup, 1 cup sugar to 1 cup water. Run a knife, which has been dipped in boiling water, down into the jar to remove airbubbles. Put on a new rubber ring which has been dipped in boiling water. Screw the top tight, then unscrew a half turn. Heat the oven to 275 degrees. Set the jars two inches apart on a tray or pan and put in the heated oven for 35 minutes. Remove and screw tight. Never open a jar because the contents has shrunk and left a space at the top of the jar. This is due to air spaces but the contents is sterile and should keep.

SYRUP FOR FRUITS

Thin syrup 1 cup sugar to 2 cups water.

Medium syrup 1 cup sugar to 1 cup water.

Heavy syrup 1 cup sugar to ½ cup water.

Stir the sugar and water and boil five minutes. Pint jars of large fruits require about 1 cup of syrup and pint jars of small fruits about ½ cup.

CHERRY OLIVES

Wash firm ripe cherries, either red or white, leaving them unpitted with the stems attached. Pack in sterilised bottles. Make a vinegar mixture of 1 cup cider vinegar, 1 cup cold water, 3 tablespoons brown sugar, 1 teaspoon salt. Tie ¼ oz. stick of cinnamon and 2 tablespoons whole cloves in a bag. Drop into the vinegar mixture and bring to a boil and boil for five minutes. Cool, remove spices and pour over the cherries. Seal.

Lemon Suggestions

— By Betty Barclay —

A bag of lemons gives the cook a host of culinary tricks to delight family and guests.

The versatile lemon provides flavor magic! turns uninteresting foods into menu top-liners.

A Trick for Tea

This bit of magic makes ordinary tea (any kind) reminiscent of rare and expensive blends. Add 1 teaspoon of grated lemon peel to 4 to 6 teaspoons of tea leaves. Steep as usual. Serve with juiceful, decorative lemon quarters.

Salad Wizardy

A salad is only as good as its dressing. Here again, the fresh tang and flavor of lemon gives a cue to the culinary magician. Try it in your favorite dressing.

Especially good with a fruit salad is Lemon French Dressing. Blend well: ½ cup lemon juice, ½ cup salad oil, 1 teaspoon each salt and paprika, 2 tablespoons sugar or honey.

For other salad tricks, crisp greens by adding lemon juice to water in which they are freshened. Sprinkle bananas, apples, pears and peaches with lemon juice to keep color light.

Lemon Tarts Capture Hearts

Serve him lemon tarts. Eve used this magic on Adam. Mix ¾ cup sugar, 5 tablespoons cornstarch, ¾ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups water or milk, 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel. Cook in double boiler, stirring frequently until mixture thickens (10-15 minutes). Add 2 well-beaten egg yolks and 6 tablespoons lemon juice. Beat well. Cool and turn into tart shells. Top with meringue. Beat 2 egg whites until frothy. Add gradually ¼ cup sugar. When stiff, pile on tarts. Brown in oven.

A Magic Touch for Vegetables

Lemon transforms necessary vegetables into foods that even the children like. As important in serving vegetables as the salt and pepper shakers, is a dish of lemon quarters.

Good with asparagus, cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli and Brussels sprouts, is lemon butter — two parts melted butter and one part lemon juice.

Other Lemon Tricks

A few drops of lemon juice on melon discovers hidden flavor. Try this, too, with avocadoes and with prune, pineapple, tomato and other fruit juices.

Sprinkle buttered waffles or hot cakes with sugar and a liberal squeeze of lemon juice.

Experiment with lemon and be your own culinary magician.

New Blitz Styles in Ladies' Hats

Millinery Show from the "Blitz" Sets New York Talking

London — Women's hats decorated with ping-pong balls, bus tickets, inn signs, and even a tiny copy of the wrought-iron gates of a wrecked London church, are among a collection of London millinery which has set the fashion world of New York talking.

It is the first collection of exclusive millinery ever sent abroad from London.

Only a few of the hats are whimsies. Many are attractive because they are severely practical; others are full of fantasy, each with a story behind it.

Several are historical in motif, deriving from Henry VIII, Anne Boleyn and Edward VI. Others feature Scottish tartans and badges, heraldry, London costermonger's pearls and original medallions in Wedgwood pottery.

There is a becoming model with a ruching of tulle on head and neck in the late Victorian style, and an Australian "digger" hat effect. Two stylish creations are finished in iridescent paint, which scintillates when caught by the light.

The colors featured include Regal, Rendez-vous and Tile Red, Valley Mist, Thames Blues, Windsor and Cloister Grey and Isis Brown. One hat, a natty beret, combines all these colors plaited together in strips.

Novel British materials like oilcloth and flannel appear side by side with furs like mink, ermine and lamb, English lace, velveteens and felts. A particularly tasteful effect is produced by combining Thames Blues lace with mink.

The collection is sponsored by the Associated London Hat Designers, the members of which are the London milliners Hugh Beresford, Aage Thaarup, Braun-Spierer and Pissot and Pavy.

Canada's exports during the five months of 1941 totalled $567,008,000 as compared with $437,316,000 in the similar period of 1940, an increase of 35 per cent.

1,000 Pounds a Day Given Queen's Fund

Press Leadership Is Unique in History of Journalism

The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims has just sent another £20,000 to Great Britain, making £60,000 in all. In addition, nearly £15,000 has been turned over in London itself by Canadian or U. S. citizens in the name of the Queen's Fund.

Further collections in Canada make a total of approximately $440,000 or £100,000 — which has been raised by the Queen's Fund in the first hundred days of its appeal.

All this money is forwarded for distribution in the United Kingdom through the Lord Mayor's National Air Raid Distress Fund. There are no deductions whatever in Canada, as the small operating expenses of the Queen's Fund have been privately subscribed. In the United Kingdom the operating expenses of the Lord Mayor's Fund are registered in hundredths of one per cent.

The Queen's Fund is backed by the great majority of the daily newspapers of the Dominion, and by a number of important weeklies, including The Lachute Watchman.

The leadership of the Press of Canada in the cause of civilian relief in Great Britain is unique in newspaper history. In every city where a daily newspaper is published, with the exception of half a dozen smaller centres, one or more dailies are actively supporting the Queen's Fund or are running independent funds for exactly the same purpose. Furthermore, very considerable sums have been raised through the medium of Canada's weekly newspapers.

The Directors of the Fund — who are newspapermen or have associations with the Press — consider that these happy results are a testimony to the powers of leadership of Canadian newspapers. The public have not been slow to respond, although great variations are noted across the country.

The Mayors of many municipalities have given valuable support to the Fund, and in a number of important centres, such as Winnipeg, Ottawa, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Vancouver and Victoria, funds started by the Mayors for the same purpose are in affiliation with the Queen's Fund or co-operating with it. This is a result of a resolution endorsing the Queen's Fund passed unanimously at the April convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

With the assistance of the Mayors and the continued leadership of the Press, the Queen's Fund should shortly reach the $500,000 mark.

Send your Queen's Canadian Fund subscription to the Royal Trust Company, 105 St. James Street, Montreal, cheques payable to Queen's Canadian Fund.

New C.W.A.C. will Relieve Soldiers for Field Service

The next six months will see between two and three thousand women absorbed in the Army in the "Canadian Women's Army Corps" according to plans now under way to take women on military strength to relieve men for field service.

Duties for which women will be enrolled will include light transport driving, cooking, office work, telephone operating, and for messenger service, canteen help and Army stores.

They will be required to enroll under approximately the same conditions as soldiers, and will be paid at somewhat lower rates. Those called will be selected from a register to be maintained by the Minister of National War Services from whom the Department of National Defence will make its demands as to numbers, type of employment and location. After a probationary period they will be enrolled for service and will then be administered entirely by the Department of National Defence, and will be eligible for promotion up to the equivalent of commissioned rank.

BEAUTY

— By Helen Jameson —

FOOT NOTES FOR THE WEARY

Here we are, harping on the same old string of abuse of the little dogs that carry us around all day. There is much to be said on the subject, especially this season of the year when hot pavements weary the poor trotters. Chiropodists tell us that few women have feet that are free from afflictions. The cause of most of these ills is ill-fitting shoes or lack of proper care. The subject comes under the beauty heading, all right, since even the strongest character cannot endure toe pangs without showing misery on the phiz. Every step is agony. The result may be frown lines, a spinal column under strain that disturbs the central nervous system, or just plain grouch.

The human pedals are wonderfully built and, given half a chance, will carry on the job with no discomfort. The woman who wears proper shoes, who carries her body perfectly balanced so that the weight is distributed, is being kind to hers; the silly dear who insists upon clumping around on spiked heels that send her shoulders forward and interfere with normal poise of the spinal column is not entitled to sympathy. She creates her toe pangs, smarting soles and tense tendons. She fancies that the lifted heels make her feet look smaller, and that's that.

When walking, point toes straight ahead, put as much weight on the ball of the foot as on the heel, so there will be no strain. When high heels are worn, a woman is practically walking on her toes; the result quite often appears in the form of thickened ankles and strained leg muscles. Pains in the legs may extend to the thighs.

When getting shoes fitted see that they are amply large, but that they do not slip. The strap must be snug, to give support to the waist of the foot. There should be no pressure anywhere as that creates corns and calloused spots. If you have to "break in" shoes you can know that they are not the correct last; that they are too small or too heavy for comfort.

Let us hope that you do not cherish a phobia against sensible shoes. Because shoes are sensible does not mean that they must be dowdy. One can find comfort and chic. The shoe manufacturers are doing their best to give you what you should have.

Rubber taps are a help to the housewife who travels the household beat day after day, answering phone and doorbells, scurrying from room to room, scuttling through her household duties. The best shoe for her job is a good old-fashioned oxford. To make it a practice of economy to wear out shoes that have spread or have become misshapen is to invite all the foot ills in the whole miserable list.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste

PLANNING SHOWER FOR GIRL FRIEND

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am planning to give my girl friend a miscellaneous shower.

1. Are men ever invited to a shower of this kind? I should like to invite her fiance, but I am not sure whether he should be invited if no other men are invited.

2. I don't know this girl's friends, but her mother gave me a list of their names. How would I greet her friends?

3. Would it be proper for me to invite my friends also?

4. What foods should I serve?

—Almeda.

1. Yes, men are often invited to this kind of party — but a later hour is mentioned in their invitations. If men are invited, the shower is given in the evening. The girls are asked to come at, say, eight o'clock and the men invited for nine-thirty. Between those hours the gifts are opened. When the men arrive, the refreshments are served, and there may be dancing or bridge or any other game popular with the group.

Sometimes, when the shower is in the afternoon and men are not invited, the fiance is, nevertheless, invited to appear toward the end of the party.

2. If the guest of honor isn't near to introduce you when a guest unknown to you arrives, it is simple for you to introduce yourself . . . "I am Almeda Forbes, and I am delighted that you could come to the shower I am giving for Mary."

3. Usually only close friends of the bride-elect are invited to a shower given in her honor. If you were giving a tea, and not a shower, it would, of course, be proper for you to invite your friends as well.

4. Your refreshments, for either an afternoon or evening shower, might be as simple as assorted sandwiches, small cakes or layer cake, coffee, if you wish, and ice cream, nuts and candy. If your party is to be in the evening and you wish a less simple menu, you might serve chicken a la King on toast, with fruit salad or ice cream and cake for dessert. Or you might serve chicken or tunafish salad with small biscuits or heated rolls, ice cream and cake, and coffee.

NECESSARY TO ANSWER INVITATION?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you please tell me whether or not it is always necessary to answer an invitation to a wedding reception?

I recently received an invitation to a wedding to be held in church, and with this invitation was enclosed a small card which read "Reception at the home immediately following the ceremony" and gave the address. There was no R.s.v.p. on this invitation, and I do not know if I should answer it. I do not know either the bride or groom very well. I shall not be able to attend, but I do want to do the proper thing —Katherine.

Even if there is no request for an answer to this wedding invitation, it should be answered. It undoubtedly would be important for the bride's mother to know approximately how many guests to expect.

Your regret would read:

Miss Katherine Brown regrets that she is unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. John Forbes Smith's kind invitation for Tuesday, the eigth of July.

"I never could see why they called a boat "she".

"Then you've never tried to steer one!"

MOVIE REVIEW OF THE WEEK
THE PENALTY

This picture is what we experts call a sleeper. Behind the hackneyed title lies a tender and moving little yarn sure to please most movie customers. To be sure, the basic story is pretty routine (its really a modern-day variation of the David Copperfield theme) but there is heart-tug and genuine emotion.

Edward Arnold is a cold and arrogant murderer, and it is pleasant to see him, for a change, as a real toughie, rather than as a polished meanie. His son, Gene Reynolds, worships him, and the old man deliberately trains the kid to grow up into a life of crime. The cops catch Gene, send him to reform school and eventually parole him to Lionel Barrymore, a kindly farmer. When Arnold, in hiding, shows up to take the kid away (the cops having figured on just such a move; using the boy, really, as bait to catch the father) there has been a regeneration. The kid refuses to leave Barrymore, and Arnold, making his getaway, is killed by the police.

Young Reynolds is easily the cast standout in a very tough assignment; this boy has the makings of a very important emotional star. Arnold and Barrymore are both topnotch in contrasting roles. Marsha Hunt and Veda Ann Borg are fine in very short bits, but women don't get much to do in the picture. The writing is exceptionally good, making the characters all sound like real human beings. Directed by Harold S. Bucquet. — "The Penalty", is the second feature at the Rex, Lachute, on July 15-16-17.

Exception Taken to Conscription Clamour

Pre-fabricated Homes Help Problem

"CANADIAN VIEWPOINT"
By Allan McGee

The most surprising thing about Mr. Mackenzie King's recent visit to the west coast was the sudden clamour for conscription which arose just as soon as he left the Capital.

The Liberal Government was elected on a no-conscription platform and they are fighting hard to keep those promises. They firmly believe that the voluntary system for overseas service will prove successful and they cite the recent recruiting drive as a good example.

Touring the western provinces, the Prime Minister made it clear also that, unless the war was won quickly and clearly, the agricultural system of Canada would be seriously set back. The cutting off of foreign markets will hit the farmer hard. They must have a market for their goods and the only way we can restore those markets is to smash Hitler and all he stands for.

Mr. King told the farmers of Canada's gigantic war machine. Told them of her 188,000 soldiers and 17,500 sailors. Told them how we have built up our navy from 13 to 200 ships and increased our airforce to supply the needs of the whole empire.

We are increasing our fighting strength every day. Machinery from our factories and those of the United States is turning out armaments to equip our men. Planes are flying daily from more than 60 flying schools to train pilots and gunners and observers for the Battle of Britain.

Above all we are getting the men to man our planes, our ships and our tanks. Just why the yell for conscription came at that time is an unknown secret. Someone must have wanted to embarrass the Prime Minister. I wonder who?

HOUSING SHORTAGE BEING MET

Across the nation, wherever war industries are swinging into full speed, the same problems of housing have to be met.

Towns which have been comfortably filled before the war are now overflowing with munition workers and office personnel.

These people want homes and living quarters as close as possible to the factory or shop in which they work. The demand, in most cases, far exceeds the supply.

Some communities, such as ours, have already taken steps to relieve the shortage and at the same time they have not forgotten that the rush will last only as long as the present hostilities continue. Barracks for single men will help out a great deal.

They take up very little space and, if properly supervised, they are comfortable and convenient.

Men with families present an entirely different problem. They are usually the skilled workmen who will drift away to other parts once their job here is done. They earn good wages and can afford comfortable homes. It is for them that most communities will build low cost, pre-fabricated homes. Original designs and planned distribution will give plenty of individuality to these homes and they will still be usable after the war. And in all, it will be a good thing for the town. These homes will be available for the skilled workman now and for the average worker after the war.

It's the beginning of the end for the slums.

BOOKLET OUTLINES CITIZENS WAR EFFORT

Declaring that democracy must be defended on the home front as well as on the world scene, the Council for Democracy, today issued a guidebook designed to help the average citizen find his most effective place in the national defense effort.

Titled, "Defense on Main Street", the eighty-eight page booklet is an answer to the question, "What can I do?" which thousands of aroused people are asking. Prepared with the co-operation of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, it is an outline of projects and plans of action for individuals, organizations and communities anxious to do their share in safeguarding democracy.

Raymond Gram Swing, radio commentator and chairman of the Council, sounds the keynote of the guidebook in his introduction.

"This booklet is an attempt to catalogue some of the actions open to people who care about the improvement of society through the democratic process. It is compiled in the sense that a person who makes a contribution to his neighborhood makes it to the nation. This is the only internal defense which democracy can be given. It is stronger than sentiments, however loyal. It is stronger than weapons. Participation is the life of democracy. Without it, it dies!"

In my opinion a booklet that can be read with interest by every person of intelligence and one which will help our war effort by helping the country internally.

Too low they build who build beneath the stars. — Young.

Families Chased From Homes by Smoke

CAUTION OF LACHUTE BRIGADE PRAISED

At approximately 10.30 on Tuesday night, the Lachute Fire Brigade answered a call to 269 Main Street, when Mrs. Russell Cleary gave the alarm that smoke was pouring into the apartment from the Pariseau Butcher Store below. Occupants of the Cleary home on the second storey and the MacAllisters on the third storey were driven by the smoke to more comfortable surroundings.

Upon arrival at the scene, Fire Chief Deacon made a quick survey of the situation and decided that the smoke was caused by overheating of electric wires. The door of the Pariseau store was locked and a man was sent through the fanlight to make further investigation and the place was found full of dense smoke. Eye witnesses on the scene noticed the care that the brigade was taking in not causing unnecessary damage to the store or contents by pouring gallons of water into the density, and comments were favorable.

Firemen crawled on their hands and knees to the cellar where the smoke originated, and found that the frigidaire electric motor had become heated and that the wiring was burning. The cause of the overheating was due to the fact that the water supply had been turned off by the town as connections were being made to the new chlorination plant, and the water cooling compressor in the frigidaire had stopped, thereby stalling the electric motor.

Lightning Strikes in West-end

During a severe electrical and rain storm on Wednesday evening, lightening struck a stable behind the house of William Morrissette, on Chatham Street, Lachute Mills.

The local fire brigade was soon on the scene, and two lines of hose were in use, one generated by the pump. The damage was estimated around $500. as the top of the stable was completely burned.

Though the dwelling of the Morrissette's was only twenty feet away, the flames did not spread, which again shows the value of fire protection in this community.

District Phone Book Enlarged

BELL TELEPHONE DIRECTORY HAS PATRIOTIC LAYOUT

Twelve pages thicker than its predecessor, and featuring a green cover with a message on the back urging the purchase of war savings stamps and certificates, Lachute's new telephone directory is being distributed this week. In aid of the national war effort, The Bell Telephone Company is donating advertising space in all its 1941 directories to promote the war savings campaign. Stamps and certificates are on sale at all Bell Telephone offices.

Since there are more than 3,800 new and changed listings in the new edition, the need for discarding the old book and carefully consulting the new one before placing calls is obvious, if the "wrong number" nuisance is to be avoided. The green cover will make it easy to distinguish the new book from the old.

Altogether, more than 11,700 volumes of the directory are printed. Of this total, over 1,000 are distributed in Lachute. The remainder go to subscribers in communities throughout the Laurentians and the Ottawa Valley.

YOUNG GIRL STRUCK BY CAR

Francoise Bazinet, four year-old, of Lac Brule, near Ste. Agathe des Monts, was struck by a car on Monday afternoon near her home and seriously injured. She was taken to the Laurentian Sanitorium at Ste. Agathe where she was treated by Dr. J. L. Phelps and Dr. E. Bousquet. She is suffering from a probable fracture of the skull. The car, according to police, was driven by J. Laing, of Bedford.

RELAXATION AT HALL FOR D. I. L. EMPLOYEES

Employees of Defence Industries Limited at Brownsburg, find rest and relaxation from the intensive strain of wartime production in the newly provided recreation centre at Brownsburg, Que. The pictures produced on the front page and page 4, show an outside view of the recreation hall, an interior view looking towards the stage and another looking toward the large stone fire-place. This hall, operating almost on a 24-hour schedule, in order to be available to all shifts, is provided with comfortable lounge furniture. Music is on tap at five cents a record, ping-pong tables are there for the energetic, and a soft drink counter caters to the thirsty. The activities are in the capable hands of a trained Y.M.C.A. recreational supervisor and the daily entertainment programs, carried through week by week, range from Sunday sing-songs, movies, dances and quiz nights.

Historical Sketch of Brownsburg

RECEIVED NAME IN 1875

"This pleasant little village or hamlet, which has recently sprung into some prominence on account of being the site of the Cartridge Factory, and near the lately discovered granite quarry, was, in early years, made a place of no little importance by the erection of Brown's mills.

"The scenery in the vicinity of the Brownsburg mills is romantic in the extreme; the river on which they are located, and which provides admirable water power, rushing over its rocky bed through deep chasms and woodland bowers, is not the least attractive feature of the landscape."

Capt. A. L. "Gat" Howard, far from being one of the first inhabitants of Brownsburg, arrived comparatively late to the scene of the Cartridge Factory of which he was to be the founder. As far back as 68 years prior to the incorporation of the ammunition works, George Brown arrived in Lachute from England and in 1818 received a grant of land at what we know now as Brownsburg.

Very soon after locating on the land, Mr. Brown began the erection of the mills bearing his name, much of the lumber used, both in the construction of the mills and his residence being transported by river from Lachute. He became a man of great influence in the district, being a magistrate and a Captain of the Militia, from which, on May 21, 1857, he was promoted to the rank of Major.

That Mr. Brown must have persevered under the most discouraging circumstances is recorded in the fact that when he and his family arrived at St. Andrews on coming from England — travelling by way of the Ottawa and North Rivers as far as that village by boat — they had only money enough left to purchase a single loaf of bread. It is further recorded, however, that before closing his career he was able to surround his family with all the comforts of affluence.

It was not until February 10, 1855 that the little hamlet received the name of Brownsburg, at that time Alexander McGibbon, son-in-law of George Brown, becoming Postmaster — the Post Office being established with the name of Brownsburg.

Marked Progress in Recent Years at Lachute High School

For the third time in the 30 year history of the Lachute Protestant School, commissioners were elected by the ballot of the people on Monday, July 14. Two vacancies had to be filled and the retiring commissioners, Geo. Y. Deacon and Wm. T. Jackson were again up for election, and they were opposed by Mr. B. M. Hammond and Dr. F. W. FitzGerald.

Dr. G. A. Clunie, Secretary of the School was the returning officer, and the official count was as follows:

W. T. Jackson	145
G. Y. Deacon	106
B. M. Hammond	105
Dr. F. W. FitzGerald	53

The School Commissioners of five now stand as, Geo. Y. Deacon, W. T. Jackson, Stewart Campbell, Kilgour Wilson and James Gall.

Commissioner Deacon has been the Chairman of the Board since the retirement of the late Dr. J. H. Mason in July 1937, and previous to that time had served on the Board, taking the place of the late Geo. F. Calder.

Commissioner W. T. Jackson has also served many years on the Board, being appointed in 1932 when the consolidation took place.

Consolidation of the Lachute High School was realized in 1932, when a sum of $50,000 was spent in building the additional wing and installation of modern heating system.

Two important subjects, manual training and domestic science, have been added to the curriculum of the Lachute High since 1937, and the wisdom of teaching these subjects has been realized by the teachers and parents. Grants of $300. for the manual training and $500. for domestic science were obtained from the Department of Education.

Through the energy and perseverance of Chairman Deacon, the licence fee for school buses has been reduced from $1.50 per 100 lbs, (which usually cost $75. to $90 per bus), to the small sum of $1. for the bus plate. Mr. Deacon went to the Protestant School Board Convention in Huntingdon, and made this suggestion, and subsequently contacted Dr. Percival, Director of Protestant Education in Quebec, the Hon. Geo. Dansereau and the Provincial Secretary, Mr. Matheson, and was successful in his endeavors.

The life of any school is kept alive by progress, and the present school board have the confidence of the public in making necessary changes for the betterment of the Lachute High standing in this province.

Garage Razed in Laurentians

CARS BURN BUT EMPLOYEES ESCAPE IN STE. MARGUERITE

A spark from an emery wheel which flew into a pail of gasoline started a fire at Ste. Marguerite, on Sunday night, that resulted in the destruction of the Giroux Garage, the home of Euclide Giroux, proprietor which adjoined the garage building, and several cars that were in the structure at the time.

Employees of the garage and Mrs. Euclide Giroux, wife of the proprietor and his year-old son escaped from the buildings before the flames could reach them.

There was a terrific explosion as the flames reached the gas-pumps in the front of the building, witnesses stated, and the fire departments of Esterel and Ste. Adele which rushed to the aid of the Ste. Marguerite volunteer firemen, saved other buildings in the municipality only by soaking them thoroughly with water.

The proprietor was on his way to St. Jerome at the time of the fire and learning of it from the fire apparatus of St. Jerome, which was called to the blaze, turned back to find his house and business premises in ruins with only the chimney standing.

Fire departments from neighboring municipalities as far away as Ste. Agathe and St. Jerome were rushed to the scene to help combat the flames and prevent their spread to other buildings.

The two-storey, wooden garage was quickly swept by the flames which were fed by gasoline from pumps in front of the building.

One man was slightly burned attempting to remove his car, it was learned.

The red glare of the flames could be seen for many miles, residents of the area reported, and citizens of neighboring municipalities flocked to the scene.

This is the third disastrous blaze to sweep this Laurentian community in two years, the large Manoir Ste. Marguerite having burned to the ground last year and the Alpine Inn, one of the largest hostels, in the area.

DO YOUR DUTY SAVE GAS

We make this appeal to the motorists of the County of Argenteuil, for the concern of the Federal Government regarding its gasoline supply which has been publicly made known by them.

Drive only when you have to . . . walking is an excellent exercise. Don't use two cars when one is sufficient. Drive slowly, thereby save lives as well as fuel. Don't display the selfish spirit of 'filling her full' on Saturday evening, for there is no sacrifice in that.

So, do your duty . . . save gas.

Municipalities Hold Elections

H. BARLOW OF LAUREL NEW WENTWORTH MAYOR

The municipality of Wentworth went to the polls on Monday last, and elected a new mayor in the person of Mr. H. Barlow, of Laurel, with a majority of 31 votes over Mr. Clarence Neill, of Dunany.

Frank Allen, of Laurel, was successful against Melvin Boyd for the council seat number two, winning with a majority of 43. A close contest was fought in the other vacant seat number five, as S. Deslauriers, of St. Michel, won by a majority of 1 against Robert Gain. Mr. Paul Gagne was returned by acclamation.

The new council comprises the following: Mayor H. Barlow, and Councillors Allen, Deslauriers, Gagne, Norman Boyd and Clark.

W. H. WATCHORN RE-ELECTED MAYOR OF MORIN HEIGHTS

The municipal elections for mayor and councillors for the Municipality of Morin Heights, were held on Monday last. Contest for the mayoralty was between Messrs. W. H. Watchorn and Edward Watchorn, and the former was re-elected to the office by a large majority.

For council seat number four, William Doherty defeated R. J. Seale, while Councillors J. D. Davis and C. Guenette were elected by acclamation.

LIONS FIELD DAY REMINDER

Saturday next is Community Field Day, and the Lions Club of Lachute are anxious to make this event a complete success. Selling of tickets doesn't necessarily mean guaranteed success . . . what is needed is the attendance of those who buy tickets, or in other words, 'More the Merrier'.

There's fun galore, county horse racing, athletics and gymnastics. The winner of the Argenteuil Spitfire Car will likely be there . . . in fact, IT MIGHT BE YOU.

So remember, Saturday, July 19, Lachute Fair Grounds, at 1.30 p.m. If raining, the following Saturday.

High School Gymnasium is Needed Here

Tax Increase Infinitesimal

In the world of tomorrow, the values of physical training in every community will have an important bearing. In this science, great progress has been made during the past ten years in European countries and in the United States. Canada too has made certain gestures along these lines, but not enough, for the health standards of the military volunteers have been below par.

Many Quebec schools of the same standing as our High School, have the benefit of large gymnasiums and assembly halls, and the Department of Education is willing to help the Lachute High School in the construction of such a necessary item. They have informed our School Board that they have the money at hand to assist, for they are anxious to have a gymnasium in each of the better schools that have not got them. A grant of $10,000 has been offered to the Board for the construction of a $20,000 gym. The remaining $10,000 would be raised by selling bonds.

The financial obligation on the part of the Protestant property owners would indeed be small. Bonds for $10,000, at 4%, would mean an outlay of $745. a year. A special tax of 5c. on $100. valuation would realize $1,000 a year. A property holder with $1,500 municipal valuation, would have a special tax of 75c a year, and if his valuation is $3,000, the tax would be $1.50.

any wide-awake citizens who would deprive our children of the advantages of a modern gymnastic-assembly hall, with dressing rooms and showers, for this small tax increase.

A few people are under the impression that the Protestant valuation has decreased greatly during past years, but figures contradict that impression. In 1934, the valuation was $954,215 and in 1941 it is $944,565, which means that the reduction is less than $10,000.

The building, if erected, will be at the east end of the present school extending out to the Presbyterian Manse fence, and even with the front of the school, then back towards the school grounds about 120 feet. The front entrance will be at the east side, with a manual training room on the ground floor, and dressing rooms, showers, and toilets underneath, with the main hall extending back floor level with basement floor of school, and ceiling, level with ceiling of ground floor, thereby giving a height of 23 feet in the hall.

The advantages are well known, and would include sufficient room for assembling the 400 students, and dramatics or musicales could be held there. For the betterment of the scholars' physical being, gymnastics, acrobatics, basket-ball, soft-ball, badminton and hand ball could be made available to them. The children would be taught the benefit of correct posture, and the necessary discipline in this physical

Glen Gauley is Badly Injured

Glen Gauley, 18-year-old resident of Grenville, was seriously injured at 3.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when a motorcycle on which he was riding was struck by a truck.

The accident happened at the Scotch Road intersection of Route 8, the Montreal-Ottawa highway. The truck was driven by Arthur Tasse, also of Grenville, and he stopped immediately after the accident.

Provincial Traffic Officer Howard Jones, who arrived on the scene a short while later, had the victim taken to Dr. Kelly's Hospital, at Hawkesbury, where he was report-

THE WATCHMAN ENLARGED

Though the enlargement of the Watchman this week isn't very conspicuous to the human eye, a closer examination of the paper will show that its columns have been increased to 21 inches in length. The 21 inch column is generally recognized as the 'standard column' by newspapers everywhere.

Lachute Driver Crashes Bridge

A Buick Sedan, owned by Mrs. J. D. Lemay, of Lachute, and driven by Mr. Jacques Lemay, also of Lachute, was damaged considerably through an accident at the Perley Inter-Provincial Bridge, at Grenville, on Friday, July 11, at 10.30 p.m.

Travelling from Hawkesbury, Mr. Lemay was blinded by the lights of an on-coming car, which compelled the sudden use of brakes. Due to wet roads the car skidded and crashed into the bridge railings on the Quebec side, and severe damage was done to the bridge as well as an estimated dam-

IMPROVING PASTURES BY FALL FERTILIZING

Pasture improvement by means of proper fertilizing and grazing management is considered of so great economic importance today that the Agricultural Supplies Board of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, inserted repeatedly in the farm papers of Canada a prominently displayed advertisement proclaiming Cheaper Milk Production through Improved Pastures. It announced that good pasture provides the most economical feed for dairy cows, that proper treatment will at least double the carrying capacity, and yet pasture is the most neglected crop on the farm. The use of fertilizer is emphasized as one of the most important measures for pasture improvement.

Pastures improved by fertilizing provide a longer grazing season; they come on earlier in spring, are more resistant to drought in summer and endure later in fall. Besides, the herbage is more nutritious and satisfying, more palatable and plentiful. That proper treatment will at least double the carrying capacity is no idle claim but one that has been proven over and over again.

Fertilizing pastures in fall, or any time between mid-September and freeze-up, is a growing practice in the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Ontario, a mixture high in phosphate being preferred for the purpose, since phosphorus promotes deep rooting and vigorous growth of the grasses and clovers, encouraging the increase of clover especially. Applied in fall, the fertilizer becomes incorporated in the soil and fortifies the plant roots, so that the herbage gets away to an early start in spring, probably long before it would be possible to make a spring application.

Where clovers or other legumes are fairly plentiful the 0-16-6 fertilizer is most suitable for fall application, but when the herbage consists almost entirely of grasses the 2-16-6, containing some nitrogen, is usually preferable. Either may be applied at rates of from 300 to 500 lbs. per acre, repeating the treatment every third year on permanent pastures, or every second year if the lighter application is made. In the Maritime Provinces 2-12-6 may be substituted for the 2-16-6, and on some of Quebec's light soils 0-16-10 and 2-12-10 may replace 0-16-6 and 2-16-6, respectively, while in the Prairie Provinces, where interest in pasture improvement is developing, the 2-20 fertilizer is recommended for fall application.

Experiments and demonstrations of pasture improvement by means of fall fertilizing were inspected this spring in Quebec and Eastern Ontario by staff members of two agricultural institutions, who are themselves actively engaged in the practice. In some the fertilizers had been applied in the fall of 1939, others in the fall of 1940. Of the farmers who co-operated none had previous experience in pasture improvement, and all were impressed by the earlier, taller, more vigorous growth on the fertilized areas. In every instance the difference was very plainly marked by the first of May. On the fall fertilized pasture the herbage was a rich green and growing strongly, whereas on the unfertilized it was brownish, the clover plants tiny, sickly and seemingly dormant, having made practically no growth.

Clover in the herbage has an importance that should be more fully recognized. Clover, alfalfa and other legumes possess the unique faculty of fixing and utilizing atmospheric nitrogen, a valuable plant food element which they share with the grasses in their vicinity—an example of true neighborliness. In two experiments where the fertilizers were applied in the fall of 1939 — one on permanent pasture at the Agricultural School Farm, Kemptville, the other on pasture in the rotation at Bainsville, Ont. — the favorable influence of the fertilizing is even more pronounced than it was last spring and especially noticeable in the greater amount of clover, which distinguishes the treated from the untreated areas.

THE TENTED CITY A GREAT ATTRACTION

GENEROUS PRIZES FOR AGRICULTURE EXHIBITS

Entries for the "Tented City" exhibition, as Ottawa's Central Canada from August 18th to 23rd, has already been nicknamed, close within the next few weeks. Prospective live stock exhibitors are urged to secure their prize list at once and to start preparing stock for the show. The exhibition this year is to be housed in more than 70 large tents, more than 100 tents will be on the grounds when concessions and midway are considered.

It will be the largest "Tented City" ever erected in Canada, a sight worth seeing in itself.

Entries for pure bred horses, cattle, sheep and swine all close on July 26th. Light horses, junior agriculture, agriculture and horticulture and hobby show classes have till August 2nd to make entries.

Agriculture is to be the big feature of this wartime exhibition. Horses and cattle will be judged in open air rings before the grand stand where, in the evenings, a great revue and vaudeville show will be featured. To encourage agriculture in its important wartime role is the prime impulse behind Ottawa Exhibition this year. Generous prize money will be paid in all classes.

For prize list and any further information write H. H. McElroy, Manager, Central Canada Exhibition, Journal Building, Ottawa.

OX WAGONS FOR S.A.

Ox wagons are returning to favor in South Africa as a result of higher gasoline costs. Scores of these wagons are now being turned out in famous old workshops of the Western Province. Today there are about ten thousand ox wagons used on farms and natives own a further 40,000. A good wagon costs up to £150 but has a very long life.

WOOD CARVING IN QUEBEC CENTRE

Wood carving is an art characteristic of the Province of Quebec. It was developed in the pioneer days and so great was the demand for wood carvings to embellish the churches and the mansions of the colony of La Nouvelle France that teachers were encouraged to set up schools. These flourished and many specimens of the work of artist and artisan of the early days may be found today throughout the province. Changing fashions and changing methods thrust aside the work of the wood carver. Then the development of the machine left the individual and his tools yet further behind. In time, the wheel began to turn and men came to realize that while the machine was excellent in its utilitarian purposes it was lacking in proper expression. When that was realized a movement began in Quebec to restore the old arts. Provincial Governments established schools to teach the arts and handicrafts of the olden days, the seed took root and multiplied and today arts and crafts are actually flourishing in Quebec.

The work has to some extent developed specialized centres. One such is St. Jean Port Joli, on the main line of the Canadian National Railways, about sixty miles below Levis, a community which has become known for the excellence and the extent of its wood carvings. "St. John Pretty Port" to translate the name literally, was named in 1677 as a seignorial concession to Sieur Noel Langlois and from the latter it passed to the de Gaspe family. Its communal life began in 1721, and it has maintained corporate entity since then, developing to a town of more than two thousand inhabitants, the centre of a progressive agricultural and dairy industry. It has long been known as a pleasant summering place but the work of the Brothers Bourgault in establishing a school for wood carvers has given the place wider fame. Another family, the Leclercs, has seven sons and three daughters engaged in making model yachts, not the formless things of the toy-makers, but smart replicas of America's Cup racers such as the Endeavor, and the fleet of Shamrocks sent as challengers by the late Sir Thomas Lipton. The boys carve hulls and spars, fit and rig their models while the girls design, cut and sew the "canvas."

THEY DRINK HIS HEALTH

From a Winston Churchill "Toby"

A Toby jug of Mr. Winston Churchill's resolute and cheerful face is a best seller in the United States and Canada. The makers have doubled the value of china figures sent to North America since the war.

All told, Britain shipped nearly £2,000,000 worth more pottery overseas last year than the year before, and was at the same time making much more industrial pottery for home use, especially chemical stoneware, to take the place of metals needed for the war.

Chemical stoneware is now being used for pipe lines, valves, tanks, and storage vessels. It compares in strength with grey cast iron; it can be worked with a chisel; and it can even be ground to the most precise measurement. Stoneware, moreover, resists corrosion except by hydrofluoric acid.

Once Germany alone was making laboratory porcelain. Today, Britain is supplying herself with laboratory porcelain and also with porcelain filters for water and acid filtration and for laboratory research.

HEROES AND HEROINES IN HUMBLE ROLES

Ottawa — Your enquiring reporter, on the quest for home-front heroes and heroines, recently came into contact with the work of two of them. They helped make salvage drives in their home towns tremendous successes. The heroine is Mrs. Percy Gilbert, of Moncton, New Brunswick. The hero is Fred R. M. Davies, of Kingston, Ont.

"Canada's National Salvage Campaign," said William Knightley, campaign supervisor, "is uncovering such a number of home-front heroes that it is impossible to keep up with all of them. As a result, most of them go unsung. But here are two who deserve attention. Their efforts on behalf of the national drive are inspirational."

Mrs. Gilbert's exploit is nothing more or less than launching, single-handed, the salvage campaign in Moncton. Early response there to the drive on waste was feeble. Interest was low, skepticism was high.

Unmindful of the apathy, Mrs. Gilbert set out to do the job alone. She managed to get an old garage from the City Fathers for a salvage headquarters. She canvassed homes for old clothing, newspapers, metal utensils, lead wrapping — anything that had resale value. She sorted and piled and stored all contributions she managed to get to the old garage. She filled up the headquarters and tried to look for additional space.

And at last she progressed so far in her work, despite difficulties and handicaps, that she over-burdened herself. She asked Moncton service clubs to help her move salvage items which were beyond her limited physical powers. That let the cat out of the bag.

The former skeptics were amazed at what one small but stout-hearted woman had done. The rallying call went out to an ashamed but proud citizenry. And now Moncton is right in the van of the salvage drive in New Brunswick, thanks to a woman's vision, courage and tenacity.

Similar vision on the part of Fred R. M. Davies made the Kingston campaign successful. Mr. Davies had two ideas. One was to educate the Kingston public on the necessity of salvage. The other was to collect salvage competitively.

Two months before the opening of the drive, Mr. Davies led a group of young men around the surrounding countryside. Six nights a week they exhibited motion pictures of the war and appealed for public support of the campaign. They showed how it was part of the national war service the average citizen might undertake. They explained the need for the collection of raw materials commonly wasted, for war industries. They explained the way in which the various materials would be used.

This aspect of the Kingston campaign was unique. Nothing like it has so far attempted among adult Canadians.

The collection was put on a competitive basis. Ten prizes in War Savings Certificates were offered. The first prize was worth $300, the second $200, the third $100. The other seven graduated down to $10. The various items of salvage were given vote values, and the contestants accumulating the greatest number of votes won the War Savings Certificates.

For example, a pound of rags was worth 5,000 votes, a pound of brass 15,000 votes, a pound of lead foil 20,000 votes, and so on. A car tire netted 5,000 votes, an inner tube 10,000, a battery 50,000, a radiator 100,000 votes.

There were 30 contestants, representing almost as many service clubs, in this unique patriotic contest. They came from an area within a 90 mile radius of Kingston. Each contestant had scores of volunteer assistants.

The Kingston drive netted 600 tons of scrap iron and steel; 125 tons of paper; 20 tons each of bones and rags; four tons of lead; two tons each of brass, copper, car tire inner tubes; a ton and a half of foil, a ton of aluminum, half a ton of zinc. More than 10,000 car tires were collected, over 200 batteries, and 25 car radiators. Five hundred wine jugs were among the other miscellaneous kinds of salvage.

The total came to 1,500 tons of all kinds of scrap useful for war industries.

PAY THE PREMIUM

Apart from the natural beauties that are an ever-present lure and attraction to tourists in Canada, the premium on United States dollars is the greatest possible aid to promotion of traffic from that country. In terms of dollars, it provides a bonus of ten percent. One enterprising group has pictured it as "one day free in ten". To others, it is a pleasing novelty.

For any one of these conceptions to be effective, the premium must be paid by the Canadians catering to the tourist. It is not only a national service to pay the premium, paramount in wartime, but it is the law as well. It is an offence, punishable by severe penalties, to accept United States currency at anything other than the official rate.

Because Canada is in urgent need of United States dollars to buy aeroplanes and other vital war equipment in the U. S. A., this American currency should be turned in to the banks without undue delay. It is an offence to hold it for more than a reasonable period of a few days after it has been received.

No Canadian loses by payment of the premium. Merchants, hotelkeepers and others pay the current premium of ten percent and the banks pay out a like premium in receiving the American currency. The premium is ten percent, whether it be for U. S. paper currency, bank cheques, travellers' cheques or silver.

It is a national service and a patriotic duty — PAY THE TOURIST HIS PREMIUM.

FEDERATION OF BRITISH NATIONS

The grouping of all British nations about the North American world through federal union would facilitate our intellectual, commercial and industrial contacts with the rest of the world on every continent. No matter where we are on this planet where distances are becoming less important from year to year we would feel at home. That is what we would rather see happen than the isolation of the Knights of Jacques Cartier. Life buried in quick lime, like the Groulxists suggest, would only result in our nation's complete loss. Federal union, on the other hand, would stimulate activity and cause all French speaking centres to exert themselves so as to show the federated nations how good the blood that coursed in their veins was. The idea is making headway. The present war is teaching us with tragic eloquence that safety lies in union.

LAW TO CONTROL GAME BOOTLEGGING

Control of illicit traffic in fur and other game products is provided by the Game Export Act, which recently received Royal Assent, reports the Department of Mines and Resources. The new law makes it a federal offence to be in possession outside of a province of game taken therein unless a provincial permit can be produced showing that all the regulations of the province concerned have been compiled with.

The need for this legislation has been long felt, as under provincial laws there was no means of taking action against fur and game bootleggers once they had succeeded in getting their plunder out of the province in which it was taken.

The Game Export Act resulted from discussions at conferences between provincial and Dominion game officers, where it was revealed that unscrupulous persons were able to violate provincial game laws and avoid payment of provincial royalties by removing fur or game in their possession to another province. The new law comes into force in the provinces by proclamation, which is made only at the request of the provincial authorities.

FLATTENED FISH

Means More Food for Britain

Fish which has been flattened and dried so that it looks like a piece of cardboard is Britain's latest device for economizing in shipping space.

It is a modern version of stockfish, which in Tudor times was exported in huge quantities from Scotland to the Catholic countries in Europe. The Spanish Armada, sailing in 1588 on its abortive attempt to invade England, carried 8,000 quintals of stock-fish to feed its crews.

By the modern method, which is applied to ling and cod, much of it from Newfoundland, the fish is sliced open and the inside removed. Then, by a special vacuum process, the water is drained out until the fish is only one-third its original bulk. Packed in salt it will then keep for many weeks.

Although it does not look particularly appetizing in this form, a soaking in warm water brings it back to its original freshness. It is then boiled, fried or grilled according to taste.

Is Germany's Military Might Invincible?

One of the chief weapons in the hands of the United States isolationists, is the potent propaganda that Nazi Germany is invincible in the air and on the land. This line of talk is supposed to soften the backbone of those who are lukewarm towards the democratic cause. Little is said about the force of the British navy on the seas !

Since last September, when the Salvation of Britain was being written in the skies by a few valiant airmen, nine months have passed, and Germany has yet to prove that her air power controls the sky in Britain, occupied France or even Germany itself. In fact, the latest British reports claim exactly the opposite, that Germany is now forced on an air defensive war. So much for the Nazi air invincibility.

In Russia, the German military machine for the first time in this current Great War, is facing an army that packs power . . . man power, anyway. After three weeks' of blitzkrieg methods, the Germanic hordes have goose-stepped into real trouble, and their blood is being equally spilled upon the battlefield with that of the aggressed.

The invincible bubble has been pricked. Now is the time to drive home that lesson to the appeasers and isolationists everywhere.

Montreal Refuses London's Request A Suggestion is Offered

While London burns, Montreal carries on fiddlin' to the tune of "Me First". There is no doubt that the centre of our British Commonwealth of Nations smarts under the refusal of the Canadian Metropolis to send a fire-fighting tower to the Hun-wrecked city.

To use an analogy, we picture the City of Montreal under siege for six months, being continually battered day and night by the Nazi bombers. Graphic pictures show the devilish destruction of beautiful St. James Cathedral, historic Christ Church, the famous Notre Dame edifice and the new St. Andrews and St. Pauls. The council chambers in the City Hall are exposed to the inclement weather, as the roof is blasted over to St. Catherine Street, and mingles with the ruins of Eaton's store. The Montreal firemen are heroic as they subdue the incendiary bombs and control fires in every section on the Metropolis. Hard pressed, the City Fathers cable London for help . . . quick help. We know what the answer would be.

As a suggestion, we offer to the populous of Montreal, an alternative plan. The fire-fighting unit that London needs would not cost a vast fortune. The Montreal public could ignore the refusal of their representatives, and start a special 'London Fire-Fighting Fund' of their own.

A gesture of this kind would show the real patriotic spirit of Montrealers, and not the 'limited' participation of a few.

There is no Bitterness . . .

One remarkable fact stands out is this stupendous fight for the freedom of man. And that is the lack of bitterness amongst the British people generally towards their enemy. That they are fighting mad nobody will deny . . . but they look upon the conquest of Nazism as a job that has to be done, and done with all their might.

Radio talks of all kinds are coming through the ether every day by men of all ranks, including statesmen, soldiers, laborers and farmers, giving their viewpoint or offering an opinion. But there is no bitterness.

Letters are received by relatives every week from loved ones over there, who are doing their bit in the front lines. But not one letter have we found bitter.

There may be many reasons for this condition, but we believe and feel that through the horror and suffering, they have found a truth that many seek but find not.

Daphne DuMaurier in her little book entitled "Come Wind, Come Weather", illustrates this 'truth' in describing the daily happenings of the common people. She doesn't call it religion, for religion can mean almost anything. Rather she calls it a spirit of service and devotion to the betterment of others.

Notes of the Hour . . .

If ex-hero, ex-Colonel Charles Lindbergh really believes that the democracies are decadent and nazism belongs to the new world, why doesn't he get his Spirit of St. Louis out of the museum, take another Atlantic one-way-trip, and offer his services to his idol, Hitler. Many a decadent fighter of the R.A.F. or the R.C.A.F. would jump at the opportunity of taking on Charles Augustus Lindbergh before breakfast.

"Courage and Patience" is Watchword of War Weary Britons

Here is the first of a series of letters written specially for The Lachute Watchman and the Midland Free Press Herald by Margaret Butcher, English journalist, author of "Comet's Hair" and other novels. Miss Butcher is at present living in Reading, a short distance up the Thames from London, and her letters give us an intimate glimpse into the lives of the ordinary, every day men and women of Britain whose determination to see the war through to victory has not been shaken by the horrors of the Hun blitzes.

(By Margaret Butcher)

Reading, England — I met my Boss on the stairs this morning. A nice woman, but she was feeling Monday-ish. One so often feels Monday-ish nowadays.

There are lots of Mondays in a week. Perhaps that's the best way to describe it. You know: back to the same faces, the same old round — and one can get rather tired of faces, even with the best will in the world. And nowadays there doesn't seem to be any getting away from them. Along comes fire-watching night (when one really ought to be at home and in bed, miles away) and there are the Faces again. You shut yourself away in one of the offices and — if it's your lucky night — get a bit of sleep; you tumble out of the bumpy concave bed and go to the bathroom to get a cat-lick of a wash . . . to find the Faces cluttering up the place; and you know that you've got to go on looking at them for the rest of the day.

And if that isn't the quintessence of Mondayishness — well, what is?

My Boss sighed. "I feel awful!" she said, 'You know, I was almost in tears this morning. And I was talking to a man who said, 'You must have courage and patience.' I know he's right."

"Of course he is," I agreed. "It's the only sort of show we can put up when we feel like this. I believe it would be easier to make a sudden spurt of courage, in a way." And that time she agreed with me. Then I told her what I think: that when one feels this everlasting Monday, the best thing is to sit at one's desk, work hard and say nothing at all. If folk don't speak they can't say the wrong thing.

"You help me a lot, you know," I said — and she does. She is not only nice, but she looks nice. Her hair is carefully done; she doesn't always turn up in the same clothes. She speaks pleasantly — even if she has to say something not too pleasant — and she's human. It heartened her to think that she was helping somebody else along, and she smiled.

"We shall get through this patch, of course," she said.

"But when I look round at the lovely fields and things, it — it all gets me down for a moment. You understand?"

I did. Spring here; summer coming . . . and it's all one vast Monday. But as she went up the stairs I called out:

"Don't let's forget 'C. and P.!'"

OUR PRIVATE MOTTO

So that's our private motto now; and not a bad one. We have only to look across the room at each other and it's like a shout. Privately, it's my belief that we're all just getting our second wind. A bit puffed and cross at the moment, but it will pass. One is sorry for the Young Things, though; but I don't worry over them. They'll grasp the C. and P. idea in less than no time. After all, it's so much easier for me than it is for them. I've had grand times, and I've accumulated enough dogged philosophy to expect some more; but kids can't feel that way about it. They just feel cheated, I imagine, down underneath. They're game enough, though. There's no mistake about that. Life goes on pulsing away beneath their skins.

And that reminds me of a little anecdote I heard last week. That stubborn Something which goes on and on — and not only in the young folks. The teller of the story was a man I used to know some years ago; the son of a well-known writer. He lives in London — that sorely punished but unpunishable city — and he saw five men with pneumatic drills working on a road during a bad blitz. Bombs were falling all round, and a fire was blazing not far away; and the steady noise of the drills never stopped, for they were trying to get at a broken gas-main. Bombs fell nearer; men were knocked out, but as one went down he would be carried quickly away and another stepped forward into his place. No delay, no fuss. They mended that main.

"And they were all whiskery old chaps," said my friend. No hot young blood there. Just cold determination to get the job done. Grand old grandpas !

QUEER STREAK OF HUMOR

The Newspaper Man also told me a story, this time with a queer streak of humor in it. An old fellow who works at his office-building came along the other morning looking peevish and flustered. It transpired, upon questioning, that a 1,250 lb. time bomb had been dropped in his back garden, and he and the neighbors had been engaged in watching the Squad dig it out and cart it away to Hackney Marshes. As the lorry bumped off, it seems, the crowd raised loud cheers.

"Well, you were lucky it didn't explode, if you ask me," observed the Newspaper Man.

"I know," replied the old chap a little testily. "But what a hole it's made! Ruined the best bed of lettuce and carrots you could ever hope to see !"

That's something I can begin to understand, too. I was almost in tears myself yesterday, for I went across to the allotment — having been away from it for two days, owing to fire-duty — and found, in place of my two baby marrow-plants, two brown and dead sprouts. A bitter frost in the night had slain them. I sat down on the mound, utterly crushed; and along came the Gardening Partner. In face of his six feet of bluff masculinity I tried to cheer up, fearing harsh ridicule.

"I was only just mourning the marrows," I explained. "They're dead." His face clouded and he sat down beside me.

"I know," he said, "I saw it yesterday and it depressed me for the whole evening."

TRAGEDY IN MINIATURE

Crazy, isn't. But I think one puts so much into this allotment business: so much hard work and hope. The little sprouting things seem so brave and jolly, and it's like a tragedy in miniature when they perish. Anyway, my respect for the Gardening Partner increased marvellously in those few seconds of mutual grief.

How odd this account of our lives must seem to you over there! Perhaps War seems a long way off — as it once did to us. In that distant and almost mythical time of four or five years ago we used to hear about wars; news on the radio, perhaps about China. Then about some corner of Europe; and still it was almost as distant as the moon. One felt sorry for the folk concerned, of course, but in a detached kind of way. Perhaps we even had a suspicion that, bad as it was, they didn't feel quite so intensely as we might feel if it happened to us. But that was one thing which just couldn't happen, of course. These were the things which — like crimes in the newspapers — always happened to Other People.

And it has happened to us, strange though it seems; and pain and discomfort and grief (and that Mondayishness for the luckier ones) have come right home. It's an extraordinary experience. We shall never get that Moonfolk feeling again, I'm sure. How could we? Of course, there are a few people, even over here, who kid themselves along, but they're liable to wake up any day. Just a few who help themselves to somebody else's butter and then sit in a comfortable chair and tell the world how they'd run this old war — you know the type. The intolerant speculate happily on what may happen to them before long; the tolerant regard them as a scourge inseparable from all human communities and go out to do a bit of digging to work it off.

LUDICROUS INCONGRUITY

The other night, on fire-duty, I went out into the garden during

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL gave that pledge to the whole world during one of his momentous radio speeches. At that time, Britain was fighting alone against tremendous odds, and her back was pressed closely to the wall. Britons did not falter and they did not fail when the going was tough.

BUT THE JOB IS NOT YET DONE . . . and the fighting equipment is urgently needed now. The energies of Canada are being harnessed to give the maximum effort to the cause. Citizens of our nation are making sacrifices and volunteering in divers ways.

WE, IN ARGENTEUIL, are showing a splendid example to the whole of Canada in offering our Spitfire to Churchill. WE MUST NOT FALTER NOR FAIL in this task. Only $3,000. more is needed to finish this job. Rally to the cause and give, even if it hurts by giving.

FROM OUR COUNTY CORRESPONDENTS

KILMAR

Miss Myrtle Ayotte, of Ottawa, visited Mr. and Mrs. Jack Parry last Monday.

The weekly Red Cross meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. A. Kenny last Thursday, and twenty-two members were present. Plans were discussed for the coming Social here, and books of tickets, were given to the members to sell on a Cabinet of Rogers Silver, and a War Savings Certificate, which will be drawn for later.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Milne, of Montreal, spent the week-end at the "Lodge".

Mr. and Mrs. L. Reeves, of Calumet, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Dodd, of Kilmar.

Miss Gabrielle Gareau, of Montreal, spent the week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Keay.

A farewell party was given by Mrs. E. G. Baker this week in honor of Mrs. S. C. Chipman, who will be leaving Kilmar shortly to take up residence in Ottawa. A buffet supper was served, afterwards, bridge was played at tables tastefully decorated with red, white and blue trimmings, and tally and place cards beautifully sketched and painted by Mrs. Baker. Mrs. J. Parry received as first prize for bridge, a lovely necklace, of red, white and blue design, and Mrs. Chipman, as second prize, a smart purse, also of red, white and blue colors.

S. O. S. ! S. O. S. ! Calling all cars, Calling all cars ! Accident at the Fiddler's Elbow! Two trucks collided — one driven by Mr. Sanford MacVicar, the other by Mr. Kermit Smith. Nothing serious —just a couple of bent fenders and a few arguments. Who was in the wrong? Why, neither, of course !

Messrs. Grant Dodd, Fred Dewar and Harry MacVicar are three more local boys who have joined the Army. A farewell party was given last Wednesday for them in Grenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown, of Kilmar, spent the week-end visiting Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Davies, in Strathmore, P. Q.

BASEBALL

Kilmar is certainly growing up,
And sports are growing up too !
The other night a baseball game
Created a Hallabalu . . .
The boys from the Lodge found a bat,
And then, happily, a ball,
Then other boys soon joined in too,
And soon, a free-for-all.
They threw and batted and ran and jumped,
And shouted their voices quite hoarse,
But still plugged on, and on and on,
And then it rained, of course ! !
So 'twas a beginning of a famous game,
And a famous team to come,
We must wait and be patient for the results
But there's bound to be lots of fun!

INTERIOR OF BROWNSBURG HALL, FACING FIRE PLACE

CAMOUFLAGE NETS MADE BY W.I.

An important part of the Handicraft work of the Women's Institute in New South Wales is the making of camouflage nets for use in the war. The makers of these nets are taking a leaf out of Hitler's book, for whole German armies have been moved by their aid, marching at night, and sleeping during the day under the nets, where they cannot be seen from the air.

Some authorities claim that these camouflage nets are of more use than comforts for the men. Defence authorities in New South Wales require 100,000 nets within three months, and the Women's Institute in that country are working on them as fast as possible.

The nets are made, strictly according to pattern, out of strong double twine.

MAKING TOOLS OF WAR

THOUSANDS TACKLE TASK EQUIPPING SERVICE MEN

Some conception of the gigantic purchasing task of the Department of Munitions and Supply may be gained from the fact that no less than 377 separate contracts have been awarded to companies scattered across Canada from coast to coast for the manufacture of components of the personal equipment of the Canadian soldier. While no accurate figures are available, possibly 75,000 to 100,000 workers in some 70 Canadian communities, large and small, are employed at least part time in the making of what the soldier wears or the equipment he carries.

The equipment of a single soldier for service in the field — his battle dress, steel helmet, gas mask, rifle and bayonet, haversack and contents, web equipment, eating utensils, water bottle, ground sheet, greatcoat, cap, boots, socks, shirts, clasp knife, cartridge pouches, pay book, identity disc, and a number of minor items — cost in the neighborhood of $120. Almost every item is made in the Dominion.

ALL-CANADIAN DESIGN

A respirator, for example, is a much more intricate piece of equipment than might be indicated by outward appearance. The type worn by the Canadian soldier is of Canadian design. Lieut-General A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian forces overseas and president of the National Research Council, and the late Sir Frederick Banting carried out a great deal of research in connection with it. The mask comprises more than 40 components, which are manufactured in 67 plants and assembled in a central factory in Quebec.

The steel helmet, too, was designed in Canada and is said to be one of the best in the world. The helmet is stamped from a light, special alloy steel plate. It will repel a .45 calibre special jacket bullet fired at a range of three feet. The helmet is fitted with a carefully designed anti-shock lining.

A set of web equipment consists of 22 pieces. Never manufactured in Canada before the war, web equipment is now being made in two plants in the Dominion. The pioneer manufacturer, whose plant is situated in an Ontario town, employs about 1,500 persons and makes nothing but web equipment.

A partial list of Canadian communities which share in the manufacture of personal equipment for the Canadian soldier follows: Amherst, N.S.; Aurora, Barrie, Brampton, Bronte, Burritt's Rapids, Campbellford, Carleton Place, Chatham, Cornwall, Dunnville, Eastview, and Elmira, Ontario; Fredericton, N.B.; Galt, Gananoque, and Georgetown, Ont.; Granby, Que.; Guelph, Hamilton, and Hespeler, Ont.; Hull and Joliette, Quebec; Kincardine and Kitchener, Ont.; Lachute, Que.; Lethbridge, Alta.; London, Ont.; Marieville, Que.; Midland, Ont.; Moncton, N.B.; Montreal, Que.; New Toronto, Ont.; Oshawa, Ottawa, Paris, and Perth, Ont.; Plessisville, Que.; Preston, Ont.; Quebec City, St. Hyacinthe, St. Jerome, St. Lambert, Que.; St. Mary's, Ont.; St. Tite, Que.; Stratford, and Tavistock, Ont.; Three Rivers, Que.; Toronto, Ont.; Truro, N.S.; Vancouver, B.C.; Victoriaville and Village Huron, Que.; Vittoria, Ont.; Walkerville, Waterloo, Watford, Welland, West Toronto, and Windsor, Ont.; Winnipeg, Man.; Woodstock, Ontario.

STYLISH WEDDING AT LACHUTE UNITED

Clark - Rosborough

In the Lachute United Church, at four o'clock last Saturday afternoon, the marriage was solemnized of Edith Jacques, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Wilmer Brydone Rosborough, of Lachute, Que., and Pilot Officer Garfield William Clark, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. David John Clark, also of Lachute. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, the wedding music being played by Miss Ruth Todd. Delphinium and Regal lilies formed the church decorations for the occasion.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. James G. Finlayson, as matron of honor; Miss Audrey Dickerson, of the Town of Mount Royal, as bridesmaid, and by little Miss Gweneth Evelyn Clark, sister of the bridegroom, as flower girl. Mr. James McAllister Clark was his brother's best man, and the ushers were: Aircraftsmen John Dixon, Kenneth Falconer, Robert Woods, Stanley Langille, and Geo. Leggett.

Mr. A. Kirk Cameron, of Westmount, gave the bride in marriage. She wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin and shadow lace, her mother's veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried an arm bouquet of Joanna Hill roses with streamers of blue larkspur.

The matron of honor and the bridesmaid were attired in romance blue chiffon dresses with soft shirtmaker fronts and long bishop sleeves, matching coronets, and carried Colonial bouquets with gold and peach pink streamers. The flower girl wore a frock of apricot net over matching taffeta, a matching coronet, and carried a Colonial bouquet with blue streamers.

Mrs. Rosborough, the bride's mother, was dressed in a queen's blue sheer gown, with navy accessories, and a corsage of Rapture roses. Mrs. Clark, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in a navy blue sheer ensemble, with navy and white accessories, and a corsage of hybrid orchids.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, after which the bridal couple left for a wedding trip to the Laurentians. Ladies' Golf Club To Help Queen's Fund with Dance

Thousands of people in the British Isles have been rendered destitute by the devastation of the Nazi bomb, and in order to help her people, the Queen started a special fund for their welfare. Not only in Britain is this fund being subscribed to, but in all parts of the Empire. Canadians everywhere are contributing to this worthy cause in a generous manner, as individuals and groups do their part.

The ladies of the Lachute Golf Club have planned a dance, to be held at the Club House on Friday evening, July 25, and the proceeds are being devoted to the worthy cause of the Queen's Canadian Fund.

The performance will be held at the Exhibition Grounds, Lachute, and will start at 8 o'clock sharp, (D.S.T.).

The military band which attended the Exhibition will also be on hand to play band selections.

Army Co-operation in recognition and judging of distances with scale models of enemy Squadron who act as the eyes of the ground forces by photographing enemy troop movements and ground defences.

BADGES BEING STUDIED FOR REJECTED RECRUITS

Provision of special badges for young Canadians who have sought to join the army and have been rejected for medical reasons is being considered by the Defence Department, Defence Minister Ralston said recently.

The Minister said considerable thought had to be given the matter, because of cases like that of a man who might be rejected because of some temporary disability and who, if given a badge, would have "moral immunity" ever after.

Col. Ralston said another kind of button would probably be granted men who had seen active service and were returned home because of disability or wounds.

Soldiers experienced in farm work are to be granted limited leave to assist in the harvest. These men in uniform will thus be soldiers of the soil as well as soldiers of the King.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

"Life" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 20th.

The Golden Text is from Psalms 42: 8. "The Lord will command his loving-kindness in the daytime, and in the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "His name shall endure for ever; his name shall be continued as long as the sun; and man shall be blessed in him; all nations shall call him blessed." (Psalms 72:17).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Because Life is God, Life must be eternal, self-existent. Life is the everlasting I AM, the Being who was and is and shall be, whom nothing can erase . . . When we realize that Life is Spirit, never in nor of matter, this understanding will expand into self-completeness, finding all in God, good, and needing no other consciousness." (pp. 289, 264).

WAR MAY END SURPRISINGLY SOON

Cromer, England, July 14 — Field Marshal Lord Ironside predicted today "the war will finish a good deal more quickly than many of us imagine".

Addressing a war weapons week audience, the former Chief of the Imperial Staff said: "Thank God America is behind us. After Dunkerque, I sent a call to America for equipment and I immediately received 900,000 Springfield rifles and over 160,000,000 rounds of ammunition.

"That was what defended England at the moment."

HEALTH ARTICLE

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Pres., Chicago Board of Health

UNWISE TO CHANGE DIET OF ELDERLY PERSON

One of the major health problems ahead of us is changing the eating habits of a nation to include more of the protective foods. No one can estimate the well-being that would result if Americans would drink one more glass of milk a day, or eat one ounce more of fresh green vegetables, or one ounce more of whole wheat each day. However, when we deal with the disorders of aged people, it may be wise not to do much changing of the habits of diet they have. This is the opinion of Dr. James C. Kopelowitz of Los Angeles, Calif.

Many of these older persons know about certain foods that they can or cannot eat. They know foods which tend to upset them and those to which they may be oversensitive. All of these things must be kept in mind when the diet for the older person is planned.

Older individuals do less work and take less exercise than younger persons. Thus they need less food, but the diet must be well-balanced, and contain easily digested foods. A trifle more salt than usual in hot weather is important because salt is lost in greater quantities through sweating. Of course, eating should be moderate, and large meals should be avoided.

The protein foods, such as meat, eggs and milk, should not be restricted to a great extent because the proteins are needed for rebuilding worn-out tissues. In some older persons, it may be better to give six small meals a day rather than three large ones. In persons who have lost their teeth or who cannot chew satisfactorily, the diet should be made up of soft foods.

Elderly individuals often complain of excessive gas. For these persons, the diet should contain no raw fruits and vegetables, and whole grain should be limited. In addition, spices, highly seasoned foods, rich, salty and fried foods might also well be avoided.

In the elderly person, a lack of vitamin B-1 may often occur, producing such symptoms as poor appetite, constipation, neuritis, and possibly heart muscle weakness. Treatment of these persons by giving a vitamin B-1 preparation, either by mouth or by injection under the skin, frequently has great benefit.

Many elderly persons also have a lack of acid in the stomach, and treatment by giving a weak solution of hydrochloric acid is often beneficial. Particular attention should be given to the mouth and teeth of the aged, since proper chewing is necessary for the enjoyment and digestion of food.

Many older persons worry about the appearance of their tongue, because it is frequently coated. They believe that the coating of the tongue is an indication of how the intestines are acting. But this is by no means true. The coating of the tongue, insofar as is known, has no significance.

Proper planning of the diet of the elderly not only may be of great aid in making life more enjoyable but may also contribute to the prolongation of life.

CHLOROPHYLL FOR COLDS

In the American Journal of Surgery, Dr. Benjamin Gruskin announces that 1200 cases of infection ranging from peritonitis to pyorrhoea and the common cold had been treated with a large measure of success by chlorophyll. Green and red are the colors of life. Chlorophyll is the green of plants and human beings eat green plants to the benefit of their health.

Dr. Gruskin says that for lung and brain abscesses, abdominal infections such as peritonitis, a solution of chlorophyll in salt water was applied directly to the infected surfaces either in wet dressings or through soft rubber tubes. Indolent ulcers and weeping skin diseases were treated with a paste of chlorophyll and lanoline. Even floods of the green stuff do no harm to living tissues.

The most spectacular results were obtained in the treatment of sinus infections and common colds. In more than 1000 cases treated at Temple University Hospital, Philadelphia, there was "not a single case recorded in which either improvement or cure did not take place". Patients with mild colds snuffled chlorophyll packs or had large amounts pumped up their noses once every day for a period even as long as seven months.

Chlorophyll seems to act (1) by increasing the resistance to bacteria; or (2) by releasing oxygen which prevents bacteria from forming poison. Chlorophyll is bland and soothing and thus has a great advantage over antiseptics many of which are harsh and irritating. It is usually obtained from nettles.

A large-scale experiment in adult education has been begun by the Australian Army authorities, which aims to "cushion" the change from civil to army life and later to prepare men for their re-entry into a changed society after demobilization.

World's First Toothbrush

London — Britain, where the world's first toobrush was made in 1780, is supplying overseas countries with more brushes than ever before.

Last year she exported from 25 to 30 per cent more brushes than in pre-war years, when sales totalled £400,000 to £500,000 annually, in spite of the loss of European markets, where British brushes have a high reputation.

Among the markets where progress has been made, largely at the expense of Germany, are South Africa, India, and other Empire countries. More sales are also expected from Canada, Australia and South America.

At least nine of Britain's brush-making firms have been established for over one hundred and fifty years, and no fewer than twenty-seven are between 100 and 250. One of them made the first toothbrush by inserting hairs from a cow hide through a few holes in a piece of carved bone, and today they are developing the use of nylon, a synthetic substitute for bristle, as a material for various kinds of toilet brushes. It has been found to have several advantages over natural bristle.

South Africa may shortly be issuing a special set of stamps to commemorate the war effort.

PRAYERS FOR RAIN BRING FLOOD OF CONTROVERSY

The action of Dr. Mowell, Anglican Archbishop of Sydney who requested prayers for rain to relieve this city's acute water shortage, has provoked widespread discussion about his theories.

Dr. Burgmann, Anglican Bishop of Goulburn, said that it was unreasonable to ask God to direct special rainfall on Sydney. He said that the people of Sydney should not pray for rain but they should pray for the water board to realize the urgent need for moisture by using water from the Snowy River, which rises in the Australian Alps.

Rev. W. N. Locke, president of the Methodist conference, said he believed in praying for rain but suggested that the prolonged drought was punishing past sins, while George Cowie, a Presbyterian minister, said it was useless praying for rain when people refused to conserve it when it did fall.

Seely, and Mr. James Stuart Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Johnston, of Lachute, Que. Rev. Harold S. Laws officiated at the ceremony, and Mr. Edward Sweeting played the wedding music. The maid of honor wore a royal blue and green printed silk gown with a white background made on simple lines with a shirred waist line, a full skirt, draped bodice, short draped sleeves, and a large white picture hat trimmed with royal blue and green ribbon, and carried a bouquet of blue and white delphiniums. Mrs. Seely, mother of the bride, was gowned in printed grey sheer with a red flowered toque, grey accessories, and a corsage of rubrum lilies. Mrs. Johnston, mother of the bridegroom, was dressed in black and white printed crepe with a matching cape piped in white, a black hat trimmed with white flowers, white accessories, and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. F. Barclay Robinson, sister of the bride, wore a grey and green figured print frock, a black and white hat, and a corsage of white sweet peas.

A reception followed at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, where the bride's table was arranged with white larkspur, snapdragons and carnations, with bouvardia adorning the wedding cake. Tall baskets of gladioli, blue delphinium and shrubs completed the decorations. The bridal couple left for a stay at the Seigniory Club, the bride going away in an aquamarine jersey silk dress, under a full length coat of the same material, a small hat of aqua and rose silk flowers, brown accessories, and a corsage of white carnations.

They will reside at 17 Chesterfield avenue, Westmount. Out-of-town guests included: Mrs. James Johnston, grandmother of the bridegroom; the Misses Johnston, Lieut-Colonel Hugh Johnston, Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Johnston, Mrs. W. H. P. Hill, and Miss Marianne Hill, of Como; Mrs. F. W. Stephens, of New York; Mrs. M. A. Doane, of Evanston, Ill.; Miss C. E. Seely, of Saint John, N.B.; Mrs. Duncan McTavish and Mr. and Mrs. Justin Bogue, of Ottawa.

The bridegroom is a graduate in engineering of McGill University.

Druce - Foreman

In Trinity Anglican Church, Calumet, at four o'clock Saturday afternoon, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Ellen Emily Foreman, daughter of the late Thomas George Foreman and Mrs. Foreman, of Calumet, and Mr. Henry Druce, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Druce, of Hawkesbury, Ont. Rev. K. N. Brueton officiated assisted by Rev. A. Hawes. Mrs. R. Owens, of Grenville, played the wedding music and Miss Irene Ammond, of Montreal sang "Because" during the signing of the register. Summer flowers of various shades decorated the church, the guest pews being marked with white tulle bows.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Cuthbert Foreman. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Jeremy Murphy, of Halifax, as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. M. R. Robinson and Miss Anne Foreman also sisters of the bride. Mr. George Foreman was best man for Mr. Druce, and Mr. Jeremy Murphy, Mr. M. R. Robinson and Mr. Woodrow Brigden acted as ushers.

The bride wore a gown of white eyelet embroidered organdy, having a sweeheart neckline and full skirt gathered into a slight train. Her floor length veil of tulle illusion fell from a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of talisman roses and baby's breath, her only ornament was a string of pearls the gift of the groom.

The three attendants wore dresses made alike but of different colors, the matron of honor being in yellow dotted organdy, Mrs. Robinson in pink organdy and Miss Foreman in blue organdy, their dresses were made in bouffant style with sweetheart necklines, they wore tiny flowered hats and carried colonial bouquets of carnations and sweetpeas. Mrs. Foreman, mother of the bride, was gowned in black sheer with black accessoires and wore a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Druce, mother of the groom, wore a gown of orchid sheer with white accessories and a corsage of roses.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, and later Mr. and Mrs. Druce left to spend their honeymoon travelling through northern Ontario, the bride travelled in a three piece ensemble of rose crepe with white accessories.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Mott, of Montreal, Miss Mildred Brigden, of Buffalo, Miss Elsie Graham and Mr. Christopher Hartley, of Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. F. Rourke and Miss Grace Rourke, of Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. James Foreman, of Port Arthur, Mr. and Mrs. R. Pattee and Miss Grace Hartley, of Hawkesbury; Miss Frances Irving, of Ottawa; Miss Mavis Hart and Mr. Irwin Storen, of St. Lambert.

COURAGE & PATIENCE

an Alert, just to have a look round and make sure that no chink of light was showing anywhere. It was a beautiful night and the sky was thick with stars. I could hear planes droning overhead, and I stared upwards, expecting their shapes to blot out the starlight for a moment. Great beams of searchlights crawled across the sky; I could hear distant booms and, in the intervals, the voices of Wardens talking quietly near at hand. I stood on the steps of the ugly Victorian villa which is now our headquarters, and I marvelled at the incongruousness of it all: that house built for smug security — and now filled with typewriters and bustle all day, and fire-watchers all night.

There was nothing Mondayish about that, believe me. It was one of those sharp, half-ironical, half-ludicrous impressions which remain as long as anything can be remembered. The iron gate and the Victorian hedge outlined in black against the paler shade of the road; the pointed fir-trees . . . and above them those beams of light and those zooming machines trailing across the quiet of the night. And somewhere there were people standing up to it all with incredible courage — and patience. Little ants of humans performing miracles of endurance and bravery not so many miles away; and this great lump of rock and earth spinning round toward the light — and another Monday.

So perhaps we're quite wrong, after all, to feel like that about another new day. It's never quite like yesterday; not when you look at it like that, is it?

HINTS FOR HOMEBODIES

By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

TOO LAVISH FOOD

When I go to a tea or some affair and there is a lavish quantity of delicious food I feel uncomfortable. It doesn't seem right to have so much and the British to have so little. I was at a large money-making tea the other day and I remarked this to the woman next to me. Her eyes filled and she said she felt guilty with every bite she took, and she told me what I had not known. Her daughter is working in a hospital in England which had been bombed. Her sister had her house demolished, her husband killed, a daughter seriously injured, and her son in Egypt. Conditions in the Old Country are distressing for any of us to think about but what must they be to those who have their families and friends there. The time has come for us to do without unnecessary food. We can still have a cup of tea and something to eat but it should be simple. Even if we cannot send the food across the sea we can save more money to give. I doubt if there was a single cake there that did not take at least a half-cup of butter, that is four ounces and is a week's rations for two people. We need a lead and many women wish the Government would tell us what to do. They have made a start in requesting us to eat less pork and pork products, so let us all co-operate.

CUT YOUR FLOWERS

If you want your annuals to bloom for a long time, you must keep the seeds picked off, as when the seeds form, the plant stops blooming. If you use your flowers freely for cutting, this is not much of a job. Sometimes flowers are wanted for color and show in a garden only and are not cut. This means an eagle eye must be kept on the bloom and just as soon as it gets old it must be cut off before it has a chance to go to seed. This is not a very interesting job and is one which is apt to be neglected. The generous person who cuts her flowers freely is apt to have more bloom than the person who hates to cut her flowers. Life is like that. If we give freely of ourselves we get so much more in return. We must not let ourselves nor our plants go to seed. I had not thought of this when I started to write. All I meant to do was to remind you to cut your flowers.

WORK SAVERS

When a cool day comes, or if I have time early in the day, on a hot day, I like to cook a few things that are good keepers. I do like to have a jar of icing in the refrigerator, and maybe one of lemon butter. When it is too hot to think of heating the oven to bake, these come in handy to dress up some bought cakes. I buy a plain cake or maybe some cup cakes and the home-made icing makes them taste very different. Sometimes I cut a circle in a cup cake, fill the hole with lemon butter and then put back the circle. I try to keep boxes of plain biscuits such as vanilla or lemon wafers, ginger snaps, or chocolate cookies. A dab of icing on top, or two put together sandwich fashion with icing or lemon butter makes a treat out of a commonplace cookie. Work is made so much easier if we can just plan it ahead.

BOILED ICING

2½ cups brown sugar, ½ cup corn syrup, 2 egg whites, ½ cup water, 1½ teaspoons vanilla.

Combine sugar, syrup, and water and cook to 242 degrees or until it forms a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Beat the egg whites until stiff and pour the syrup slowly over them while beating constantly. Add vanilla and beat until almost cold and stiff enough to hold its shape. This may be kept in a covered jar in the refrigerator for some time. If necessary soften with a little boiling water.

LEMON BUTTER

1 cup sugar, 2 lemons, ¼ cup butter, 3 eggs.

Beat the eggs until well-mixed, add sugar, juice of two lemons and the lightly grated rind of one, add butter, and cook over low heat until thick, stirring constantly. Use for cake or tart filling. This will keep for some time.

QUEEN'S CANADIAN FUND

Shattering of British Routine Nazis' Aim

Girls Arrived From Britain Testify To Need of Aid

The objective of the Nazis' air war on Great Britain is to shatter the routine of British life. If they ever succeeded, that would be their greatest success of the war.

This is the opinion of two girls just arrived from England, as expressed to a representative of the Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims. The two are friends and arrived together in Montreal. One of them, Miss Jean Ritchie, has stayed at her job in London since the beginning of the air war and did A.R.P. work as well; the other, Miss Yvonne Davies, was a member of an ambulance unit operating in the Midlands.

Miss Ritchie has come to work at the United States Consulate in Montreal. Miss Davies is on her way to the West Indies to join her fiance, an officer in the British Army. As soon as she heard about the Queen's Canadian Fund, she offered to do volunteer work in the head office of the Fund while waiting for her passage to the West Indies. She is now at work at Fund headquarters.

PHILOSOPHICAL ENDURANCE

Miss Ritchie said that life went on in Great Britain as normally as possible. "That is the only way to live under the circumstances. When it is a matter of staying on the job month after month, you have got to be philosophical about it, and as long as the shops and the offices and the theatres stay open, people can feel they have not lost touch with life as it used to be."

"Is the strain beginning to tell on them?"

"Well, of course, there are a great many cases where hardship has taken its toll, but I think that as long as life can still be made tolerable, as long as there is help for the distressed, and hope for all, you won't see their spirit failing."

Both girls agreed that the ordinary citizen has the greatest faith in the people who compose the air raid services, the Auxiliary Fire Service, the First-Aid Service and the canteens. While those services carry on, staffed by volunteer workers and supported in great measure by private gifts, they give a wonderful confidence to the people in their areas.

A JOB FOR EVERYBODY

"You'll hardly find a person not actively engaged in the war effort. From fire-watchers to factory-hands, there's a job for everybody," say these girls, who have themselves played their part in the great defense.

Miss Davies says that the thing that has impressed her most of all in Canada is the abundance of British goods in the stores. To a visitor from England, where luxuries are almost unheard of and even the bare essentials of life are sometimes hard to come by, "Britain Delivers the Goods" is a welcome slogan. "It's good to see that the strict rationing at home is really helping the war effort and that Canada is buying such a lot of British goods." she said enthusiastically.

Though they would not talk of their own work with the A.R.P. services, the visitors could not find enough praise for the host of office-girls and shop-girls who are serving with the rescue-workers.

"They're a grand lot" said Miss Ritchie. "Night after night they do their spell of duty at the fire stations and the wardens' posts, the first-aid points and the canteens. Raid or no raid, it's a nerve-racking job after a day's work, but they take it all for granted and do a fine job."

CANTEENS ARE USEFUL

Miss Davies and her friend saw many phases of the air-war while they were in England. The work of the mobile canteens came up in conversation—"Why, yes, 'Follow the fires' might well be their motto" said Miss Davies. "And you've no idea how essential and how welcome they can be." That is good news for the Queen's Canadians Fund, some of whose contributions have lately been earmarked for the purchase of more canteens to serve in the bombed areas.

Miss Davies also tells the story of a woman in her district who was aided by the Lord Mayor's National Air Raid Distress Fund, through which the Queen's Canadian Fund operates in England. Victim overnight of a tragedy which took her husband and all her possessions, she was enabled to find lodging and rest by a gift from the Lord Mayor's Fund.

At present, grants must be severely budgeted. Miss Davies and her friend expressed the hope that contributions from Canada would make more liberal relief possible in cases of tragic need.

Like everybody who has come from wartime England, these girls would like to go back. At the moment, with the picture of Britain at war still fresh in their minds, they want people to know that, behind the apparent normality and cheerfulness of it all, the need is urgent, if those who are in the front line of the air-war, the long and trying war of nerves, are to be able to carry on.

Under Vichy Death Decree

Mme. Simone Mathieu, French tennis star, is under a Vichy decree because of her De Gaullist activities, it was disclosed in a letter to friends in New York. Mme. Mathieu is shown saluting in London last December after donning the uniform of commandant of General de Gaulle's Corps of Auxiliary Transport Service for Free French armies.

HIRING DRESSES FOR COPYING AT N.Y.

Hiring out dresses for copying is the latest scheme for bringing American dollars to Britain. It is the idea of Miss Raymond Rahvis, a leading London fashion designer, who has left for New York with fifty dress models and forty coats, together with hats and other accessories, all autumn designs, for day and evening wear.

Miss Rahvis will exhibit her dresses in New York and charge American designers $100. entrance fee, which will enable them to copy one dress. Afterwards, she will take the dresses to Chicago, Hollywood, New Orleans and Kansas City.

This "Hire to Copy" scheme will be an ideal form of export for Britain, for it entails very little use of materials; it is, in effect, an export of British ideas.

The models emphasize the dropped shoulder, achieved with trimming placed down the sleeves, yokes and insets of contrasting color. Collars have incrustations in the shape of lapels and considerable attention has been given to embroidery. The tweed ensembles feature unusual contrasts like grey herring-bone for the skirt and brown herringbone for the jacket.

BEAUTY

— By Helen Jameson — (Mme Qui Vive)

FIGURE CONTROL

Artists love to talk about beautiful bones. Time was when bones were fashionable, but now they're taking a back seat. One doesn't have to have gray hair and walk with a cane to remember the boyish shape, for which girls and women starved themselves half to death, wore brassieres that were as tight as adhesive plaster. Different days, different ways. Now the lady of fashion must carry enough adipose upholstery to produce a rounded slenderness and graceful contour. Unless she is blessed with perfect proportions she will need the help that corsetry art offers.

Slender girls who, through the practice of poor posture, have acquired tummy shelves and backs that lack straightness, will find a foundation garment a big help. It inspires them to carry themselves in a better manner. Relaxed abdominal muscles should be held in place, given enough exercise through bending and twisting movements to restore tone.

Heavyweights should be neatly harnessed. Quivering flesh is not pretty and destroys the lines of a well-cut gown. We wish that some of the busty girls would reform. Considering how many of them display their curves one must suspect that they like them. Good taste requires that a foundation garment be worn with brassiere attached.

The ideal figure has breasts that are of medium size, rounded and lifted, a tummy as flat as a flounder, hips with a slight curve, a slender and rounded waist. A waist that is flat front and back, extends out at the sides, may not measure half an inch more than the cylindrical one, but it looks larger.

Even the ideal figure doesn't mean much if it is not carried beautifully. Let the shoulders drop forward, the back lacks that neat in-dip at the waistline and the body is without spirit. Again we suggest to the slumpy one that a properly selected foundation garment will put her on her toes, start her on the right foot, and give her a chance to step along in the fashion parade.

It is surprising what a carefully fitted foundation will do to create graceful lines. It restrains where restraint is necessary. It goes easy on flesh that is required to give fullness to the lines. With the two-way stretch it is not confining and it does not make for awkward movements or rigidity as did the bird cage affair that pushed grandma's ribs into her gizzard. A lot of water has run under the beauty bridge since her day. The feminine shape has become emancipated.

Go to a high class corsetiere, accept her advice. Her trade is one that is highly specialized. She can spot defects with a keener eye than your dearest enemy, and she will find means of correcting them.

It is easy to realize how the feminine form varies when you hear that a single corset maker will produce hundreds of different models in a season.

EXPERT GIVES HINTS FOR "IDEAL" GUEST

1. Answer your hostess' invitation at once. Don't leave her in doubt as to whether or not you can come. She may wish to invite another guest.

2. Arrive when you are expected to arrive. Your hostess must make her plans too.

3. Be as well-groomed as you possibly can be when you arrive. The first impression is important. When you (or a maid) open your travelling-bags, be proud of the condition of your clothes and traveling accessories. Your clothes should be freshly-laundered or dry-cleaned — they may need pressing, but that's all they should need.

4. Bring sufficient clothes. Try not to bring too many. And try especially hard to bring the right kind of clothes. Bring the necessary clothes accessories too — don't forget, for example, the belts for your various dresses. Bring your own toilet articles.

5. Bring all necessary equipment for any sport in which you plan to take part. The borrowing guest is a pest.

6. Be on time for meals and for engagements with your hostess or with other guests.

7. Be amiable. Be eagerly ready to fall in with your hostess' ideas, even if you don't particularly enjoy some of the plans she has made. If your hostess asks you what you'd like to do, help her out by making some suggestions.

8. Be responsive. The success of a visit depends as much on the guest as on the hostess. It's the guest's responsibility to do his or her best to be entertaining, to make things easy for the hostess, to be pleasant to other guests.

9. Be alert to find out the customary routine of the family, their convenience about serving breakfast, the hours for meals, the usual hour for going to bed. Don't hesitate to suggest when you wish to go to bed; your hostess will probably expect you to do this, especially on the evening of your arrival.

10. Don't expect to be entertained every minute of your visit. Naturally your hostess will want some time to herself and for her duties. The thoughtful guest "disappears", to rest, to write letters, to read.

11. Don't have food notions.

12. Be neat and tidy. Keep your bedroom in order. Keep your bathroom or your part of the family bathroom in perfect order. Don't leave your lingerie thrown around your room. Don't throw the towels in a heap on the bathroom floor.

13. Respect your hostess' property. Don't use the family car without permission; and even with permission, don't use it thoughtlessly or carelessly. Don't be careless with your burning cigarettes, and don't place a damp glass on the furniture. Don't wipe cleansing cream on the towels.

Don't monopolize the telephone, either with outgoing or incoming calls. If you make a long-distance call, offer to pay the hostess — indeed, insist on paying these charges.

14. Be well-groomed, immaculate. No matter how simply dressed, be well and appropriately dressed. Don't loll around in negligees, pyjamas or slacks when you should be wearing a dress.

15. Leave when you are supposed to leave. Even if your hostess urges you to extent your visit, it may be her politeness rather than her real wish or convenience.

16. Take all your belongings with you when you leave. It's a bore and a chore to a hostess to have to send to careless guests the belongings they have left behind.

17. Write an appreciative and sprightly bread-and-butter letter to your hostess, and write it promptly.

EVE'S PINS RATIONED

And Britain Ships £165,000 Worth Overseas

Before the war the women of Britain were squandering pins at the rate of 5,350,000,000 a year.

Now they face a pin famine.

For the pin manufacturers, with limited supplies of raw materials and increased demands from the Government for such State departments as the Stationery Office, and administrative department, has also to push its exports.

In 1940 Eve, used to wasting pins, had to curb her extravagance and keep herself together with a mere 2,500 million of them.

The result is a real pin famine.

While Adam is finding to his consternation that razor blades, once thick as leaves in Vallambrosa, are almost as rare as the onion, Eve is searching in vain for what, a year ago, was handed across the counter to her in place of the draper's farthing — a packet of pins.

The value of this trade to Britain is considerable. In 1940, despite blitz conditions, the makers shipped £165,000 worth of them overseas.

Anti-Nazi Fire Hose From Same Village as Supplied Nelson's Sail

1,000 Miles of Hose from English Weavers (By Mail)

London — To fight the Nazis' rain of incendiaries on Britain one thousand miles of fire-hose have been turned out since the war began by the weavers in a north of England village.

Here craftsmen were weaving on their hand looms two hundred years before the mill from which it came began the manufacture of up-to-date canvas hose. They made by hand the sailcloth, the tradition runs, for Nelson's famous flagship "Victory".

The mill in which their descendants work has produced more than eight thousand miles of fire-hose by modern machine methods. One order was for two hundred miles of it.

It was in this same village that two brothers, working in a cellar, wove the first circular tube which eventually led to the making of flax hose-piping. They hit on the idea when trying to discover a simpler way of making purses.

Quenchers for Hot Weather

By Betty Barclay

It was too hot for golf but we were playing. That's always the way with a game like golf. An enterprising citizen had erected a little booth near the twelfth tee with seats for those who craved a breathing spell while a more ambitious foursome or two went through.

I sat there for half an hour and found that almost every golfer stopped long enough for at least one cooling drink. Some had two — and even three. Summer was here and cooling thirst quenchers were popular.

This craving for cooling drinks in hot weather is a natural one. It is with us at the Bridge party, in the home, at the ball game — wherever we may be. Really, it is old Mother Nature clamoring for liquid to take the place of that lost through perspiration.

When cooling drinks are carefully chosen and iced drinks sipped slowly, they are extremely beneficial. Fruit drinks, such as orange juice supplies enough Vitamin C for a full day — and this is the vitamin that must be obtained daily, as the body refuses to store a reserve.

Here are a few excellent summer thirst quenchers. Try them one by one and choose your favorite. Drink them daily and you'll find they will repay you over and over again for the slight preparation effort needed.

Hollywood Parade

Beat 1 quart orange juice, 1 quart orange sherbet and 1 quart vanilla ice cream with whirl-type beater until well mixed. Add 1 quart chilled ginger ale. Stir and serve at once. (30 punch glasses.)

Lemon Egg-Nog (Serves 1)

1 egg, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, grated lemon peel, 2 tablespoons sugar, milk (fresh or evaporated).

Beat egg yolk with lemon juice and 1 tablespoon sugar, pour into a tall glass. Beat egg white very stiff with 1 tablespoon sugar. Fold ¾ of egg white into egg yolk mixture. Add milk to almost fill glass. Stir well with spoon. Top with remainder of beaten egg white. Grate a bit of lemon peel onto this. Serve at once.

Sunkist Cocktail (Serves 4)

¼ cup lemon juice, ½ cup orange juice, 1 cup carbonated or iced water or ginger ale, ¼ cup sugar, few grains salt.

Combine and pour over cracked ice in cocktail glasses. Garnish, if desired, with mint sprigs, or maraschino cherries.

Lemonades

Plain Lemonade: For each one served, allow:

1 lemon, 1 to 3 tablespoons sugar or honey, 1 cup cold water, crushed ice.

Extract lemon juice, add sugar to taste, stir to dissolve. Add water. Serve over ice in large glasses with lemon slice on rim.

Lemon Fizz: Substitute carbonated water for plain.

Lemon Float: To each glass of lemonade, add a scoop of lemon or Orange Sherbet.

Lemon Juice Bracer: Juice of 1 lemon in glass of hot or cold water. Drink on rising in morning.

Next Winter's Heating This Summer's Worry

When Temperature Soars Around Ninety Wise Houseowners Remember Home Fuel Costs

Midsummer may seem a strange time of year to be thinking of heating costs, but wise Canadian home owners know that fuel is an important item of expense for three quarters of the year and are planning now for next winter's heating.

As the war continues coal prices will undoubtedly go up and fuel will become scarcer and already a number of home owners are considering renovating their homes and adding insulation in order to keep heating costs at a minimum. Of special interest to these home owners are the first results of the nation-wide survey conducted over the past ten months to secure first-hand reports on actual fuel saving resulting from application of insulated sidings or insul-board to uninsulated, or poorly insulated frame houses.

Last fall home owners across Canada modernizing their homes through application of insul-brick sidings were supplied with thermometers and a chart and asked to report on the fuel saving resulting from insulated sidings applied to their homes. First reports began coming in early this spring and by July 1 a fairly representative number had been received. While complete tables will not be compiled until returns are complete, the first reports are of interest to home owners and prospective builders and cover wide sections of Quebec and Ontario. Extracts from these first reports follow: Jonquierre, Que.; Fuel saving estimated $15. to $20. (25 per cent) "Often we go three or four hours without using any heat at all." Pointe Claire, Que.; Fuel saving $25.00 — total fuel from September to May, eight cords of wood. Doon, Ont., Exact record of fuel saving impossible "but I know we were able to be comfortable which we were not before siding was put on." Hamilton, Ont.; Estimated fuel saving, $25.00. Mallorytown, Ont.; "My total fuel cost from September 15th to April 30th was $39.00, the least wood I ever used in that length of time". Birchcliffe, Ont.; Entire winter heating cost, $54.70, for four and a half tons of coal. Toronto, Ont.; "My house was much warmer this winter than the other 14 years I have lived here, and I saved one ton of coal."

Other reports are now being received form the Maritime Provinces and Western Canada.

4,000 TRAINEES TO REPORT IN NEXT 21-24 AGE GROUP

Manitoba Puts Its Able-Bodied Reliefers to Farm Work; Shortage Of Labor for Harvest Season

"CANADIAN VIEWPOINT"
By Allan McGee

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman

The Dominion Government has sent out a call to 4,000 young Canadian men to enter the army for the duration of the war, under the terms of the National Mobilization Act of 1940. These young men, between the ages of 21 and 24, will report for basic training on July 31st, and upon completion of their training they will be posted to advanced bases on the Atlantic or Pacific coasts.

Any person receiving his notice to report for duty and wishing to apply for a postponement must do so within eight days of receipt of the notice. After that time the records are prepared for the various camps and it is impossible to exempt anyone from duty.

English-speaking recruits from this district will be sent to Huntingdon camp for two months of primary training, and French-speaking youths will be sent to St. Jerome or to one of the other camps in the province.

Of the 4,000 who are being called up for the next camp, 1,300 will be men who have already done 30 days training under the old scheme. These men will be credited with that period and therefore will only have to spend one month in the first camp. The other 2,700 will be raw recruits and it will be necessary for them to start right from the beginning of the course.

While in camp the men will be offered every opportunity to go on Active Service with the Canadian Forces. They may join any branch they desire, provided they can meet the necessary requirements of health and education. If they decide to stay with the Reserve Forces they may be sent any place in Canada or its territorial waters at any time.

Men training east of Sault Ste. Marie, generally speaking, will be posted to Atlantic posts.

It is expected that a similar number of trainees will be called up in August.

ANIMAL BLOOD TESTED

In Canadian and American universities the research laboratories have been working overtime to try and find some new source of supplying blood for transfusion to wounded soldiers and civilians in war-torn Europe.

The blood of various animals was tested to see if it could be used in the human body. Cows, horses and sheep were used for the first experiments, but it was found that their blood contained elements that did not agree with our human system. In certain people the blood of a certain animal would not react favorably, while in others the blood could be used without ill effect.

The research efforts are being made under the joint auspices of the Canadian, American and British Governments, and experiments are being carried out in all the leading universities of the three countries. The results of each experiment are made available to all colleges in order to avoid needless duplication.

If they do succeed in discovering some suitable substitute, then it will relieve a great shortage and will help to advance mankind one more step along the road of surgical and medical history.

FARMERS NEED HELP

In all parts of the country the farmers are feeling the loss of man-power caused by the war. There is a great shortage of farm labor, and as a result it is very hard for most farmers to do a good job of harvesting their crops.

In the Western Provinces, especially, where the farms are much larger, the shortage of labor is becoming an acute problem. In Manitoba it has been found necessary to put unemployed men out to work on the farms. Some men who refused to work were cut off the relief rolls, and it is possible that many of the larger cities will adopt the same methods in dealing with their employable unemployed.

Wages on western farm jobs are running to 40 and 50 dollars a month and at the last report there were more than 100 such jobs waiting to be filled. The Manitoba Public Works Department has told the various relief agencies to report the names and addresses of any able bodied men in order that lists may be prepared and the men put to work once more.

The rate of employment in Canada has been steadily rising and in a few months there should not be one single soul on relief who is capable of doing a full day's work. Relief was intended to ease us over a period of unemployment and hardship. It is not to be used as a means of support by those men and women who are too lazy to work for a living.

The people of Canada will see to is that everyone is doing his share of work in this time of need. The poor, the sick and the needy will continue to be taken care of just as before, but the greedy, the lazy and the inefficient will be weeded off the public payroll and put to work.

NAVAL PROMOTION FOR SON OF LATE MAJOR KEEFER

Word has been received at Ottawa of the promotion of Sub Lieutenant William Holland Keefer to Lieutenant in the Royal Navy and to command a high-speed motor craft. Lieut. Keefer is the youngest son of Mrs. T. C. Keefer and the late Major Keefer, of Montreal and Dalesville, Que. He joined the Royal Navy on loan from the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, and proceeded overseas in March of last year.

After a period of training he was assigned to duty on motor craft. He is only 23 years of age and is the youngest to command craft of this nature in his flotilla.

'Panzer' Division Will Stage Show in Lachute

Army Convoy of Armoured Fighting Vehicles Gives Demonstration Here Tomorrow Evening

Canada's answer to Hitler's blitzkrieg methods of warfare will be amply demonstrated at the Exhibition Grounds here tomorrow evening when the mobile army unit from Military District No. 4, Montreal, presents a great demonstration of modern, mechanized warfare.

Fifty vehicles, representing practically all types of present day British army mechanical transport, will bring the unit to Lachute. These vehicles include troop and equipment carrying trucks; mobile field army kitchens, which can actually prepare meals on the move; a huge mobile field workshop — literally a complete lathe shop on wheels; a mobile ambulance, which contains a complete operating room; one of the famous Knights of Columbus mobile canteens, and two miniature tanks.

In addition the convoy will have with them practically all the weapons now being used by the Canadian Army. Two heavy artillery field pieces; Bren guns; Thompson sub-machine guns; 3-inch and 2-inch mortars; Vickers machine guns, and, of course, rifles and bayonets will be on display and will be demonstrated in use. All of them will be fired and demonstrated during the evening.

The convoy arrives at the outskirts of Lachute at 5.30 p.m. A reception committee led by Mayor H. Lamarche will meet the convoy and escort Lieut. Col. W. A. MacKay, Officer Commanding, to the saluting base in front of the Auditorium where Mayor Lamarche will take the salute. The column will proceed to the Exhibition Grounds, where the troops will bivouack for the night.

The demonstration at the grounds commences at 8 o'clock and the public is asked to be on hand shortly before that time. Admission is absolutely free. In addition to exhibitions of equipment and weapons, there will be a band concert by No. 4 District Depot Band which made such a hit in Lachute a few weeks ago. Highlight of the evening, however, will be the sham battle in which troops attack, behind tanks, and under smoke, machine gun and artillery positions, Star shells, Verey lights, blank ammunition and thunderflashes will make this a real firework display which, while presenting a spectacular show, will also give the public of Lachute and district an idea of how modern warfare is carried out.

Blitz Courage

"England is saying 'Thank God' for Canadian help to our sure finish—Victory," says Cecil E. Campbell, of Maxwell Cottages, Union Path, Hitchen, Herts, England, in a letter to Canada. This is a particularly fine compliment, coming from Mr. Campbell. Because, whether this courageous, unassuming Britisher knows it or not, the rest of the democratic world is saying "Thank God" for people like him. Mr. Campbell has only one and one-half legs. In fact, there are only a total of three legs in his immediate family, because his wife has only one and one-half legs, too. Each underwent an amputation three inches below the knee after a bomb dropped near where they were helping to minimize the results of an air raid on London early this year.

Two Auto Crashes, One More Death at Dangerous Curve

Brownsburg Restaurant Worker Crushed by Overturning Car

Verdict is "Accidental"; Jury Recommendation On Danger Signs

At a junction of the highway near Grenville which claims a mounting toll in human life, another victim, Mrs. Dorothy Doyle, 38, of Brownsburg, met her death on Friday night. One of six occupants in a car which sideswiped another machine waiting at the intersection of Routes 8 and 8-A, Mrs. Doyle was taken to a Hawkesbury hospital, where she died early Saturday morning.

Mrs. Doyle, formerly of Montreal, was employed as head waitress at the Crawley & McCracken restaurant in connection with the Brownsburg industries. She was well known among the plant employees.

Three other occupants of the Brownsburg car were injured.

It was learned from police that a car driven by George H. Roberts, returning from the Seigniory Club to Montreal, had halted at the end of the gravel coming into the intersection where the two highways join. The Brownsburg car, driven by Henry Harrison, was veering south toward Hawkesbury but in making the curve collided with Roberts' machine and turned over three times. Mrs. Doyle was thrown out and the car rolled on top of her. Constable A. Leger, of Brownsburg, investigated the accident.

An inquest into the death of Mrs. Doyle was conducted at Grenville Saturday morning by Dr. A. R. Coté of Brownsburg, acting district coroner. A verdict of accidental death was returned; the jury, however, added a recommendation that more adequate signs be placed at this dangerous spot on the highway.

Five persons were treated at a Hawkesbury hospital for minor injuries sustained in a mishap to a U. S. car driven by Jos. Morrissette, of Derby Line, Vt., at this same corner of the Montreal-Hull route. There were six occupants in the car, which was proceeding from Lachute to Hull by way of Hawkesbury, near midnight on Monday last. The driver, who admitted he was fatigued by the long drive, missed the turn into Highway 8-A north of the interprovincial bridge. The machine swung into the ditch and overturned twice.

Constable H. Jones, of Grenville, investigated.

VERDICT IN DROWNING IS 'ACCIDENTAL'

Body of Farmhand Is Recovered Sunday In Long Lake

William Caddick, a 53-year-old laborer working at the farm of Wilbert Sherritt, Lakefield, met his death early Sunday while taking a morning dip in nearby Long Lake. It was learned that Caddick, who had worked on the farm for the past 15 years, had brought in the cows for milking and had afterwards gone down to the lake. A summer resident, Mrs. James Haley, noticed the man's clothing on the bank and notified Wilbert Sherritt at the farm. Sherritt discovered the man's body about five feet from shore, in six feet of water.

A verdict of accidental death was given by Dr. A. R. Coté, of Brownsburg, acting district coroner.

Detective Henri Pinard and Traffic Officer H. Jones investigated.

The victim had one relative living in western Canada. Arrangement were made for burial in the Lakefield cemetery.

TRUCKMAN INJURED UNLOADING LOGS

Albert Pagé, truckman, of Grace Street, suffered injuries at the McGibbon lumber yard just after 12 noon on Monday, while unloading logs which he had brought from the district of Pine Hill.

Fellow workers had left the yard as the noon whistle blew, but Pagé had stayed to finish unloading. He was alone when the mishap occurred, and was seen lying motionless on the ground by Theodore Boyd, who was passing in his car. The man was in a semi-conscious state, and on examination by Dr. R. Percival was found to have suffered severe bruises on the hip where a log had rolled and struck him, also possible internal injuries.

The man was taken to Notre Dame Hospital at Hawkesbury.

Selling Berries At Roadside, Lad Is Killed by Car

Brownsburg Taxi-Man Held on Charge by Ontario Police

Fatality Occurred East of L'Orignal on the Ottawa Highway

Thrown 122 feet when struck by a taxi on the south shore highway one mile east of L'Orignal early Monday afternoon, Yvon St. Jean, 12-year-old son of Philias St. Jean, was instantly killed.

The taxi was driven by Rosario Turpin, of Brownsburg, who was arrested after the accident and charged with dangerous driving. He appeared before Justice of the Peace J. P. Boileau and was released on bail of $500 cash or $1,000 property bail.

According to Ontario traffic officers Rene Labrosse and Arthur De Haitre, who investigated, the boy had been picking berries and had stepped out into the road to offer them for sale to a truck driver, Aurel Tremblay, who was passing. Tremblay shouted that he did not want the berries. At this moment the taxi, which is the property of Marcel Kavanagh, of Brownsburg, passed the truck and struck St. Jean, tossing him 122 feet.

Dr. Roland Laviolette, who examined the boy, stated that his skull was badly crushed and that death had been instantaneous. Dr. H. H. Kirby, coroner, examined the body, and turned it over to a local undertaker.

Passengers in the taxi at the time of the accident were E. Leblanc of Grece's Point, and L. Seguin, of Hull. They had been employed at Brownsburg and were on their way to Ottawa to begin a special course in war work.

ARMY TRUCK KILLS WOMAN AT FASSETT

Heavy Vehicle Strikes Resident Crossing Village Street

A highway tragedy occurred during manoeuvres of the army motorized unit from Sherbrooke, when on Sunday morning one of the 30 odd trucks returning by the Hull highway to their camp at Lachute struck and killed a Fassett resident near her home. The victim was Mrs. Eleodie Desrosiers, dit Laniel, 68 years of age.

The army trucks were proceeding eastward. Mrs. Desrosiers tried to cross the street in front of one of the trucks and was knocked down before the driver could see her.

An inquest was held by Dr. W. J. Costello, of Buckingham, the district coroner, who returned a verdict of accidental death in the case.

Provincial Det.-Sgt. Richer Danis investigated the mishap.

Sherbrooke Fusiliers Here in Cross-Country Manoeuvres

Mobile Unit on Trek From Sherbrooke to Connaught Ranges

900 Men and Assorted Vehicles Take Part In Exercises

A contingent from the Sherbrooke Fusiliers Regiment, with army trucks, motorcycles, Brengun carriers, mobile canteens and first-aid units, camped on the site near White's, just east of town, during the past week. This vacant land, frequented only by picnickers and bathers in normal summer seasons, presented a scene of military activity as the motorized troops engaged in manoeuvres in the course of their cross-country trek. They arrived here via St. Johns, Montreal and St. Eustache, moving on to Ottawa, and to other places unannounced to the men. The unit numbered over 800 soldiers.

Leaving here Monday morning the troops marched to Grenville, where they camped that night. Tuesday night they spent at Montebello, Wednesday night at Gatineau Mills, reaching Ottawa today, Thursday. They marched this entire distance except for a portion of the road under construction, where the men embarked on their army transport vehicles.

Escorted by Traffic Police

Over the entire route from Sherbrooke to Hull the militia was given motorcycle escort and every co-operation from the Quebec provincial police. Constables Leger and Jones accompanied the parades and marches in this division, while two officers in each highway section were similarly assigned.

Local Minister Conducts Sunday Camp Service

As the regiment had no Protestant chaplain in attendance, the Rev. E. Orsborn, minister of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, conducted a service at the camp on Sunday morning.

Officers and men were much pleased with the beauty of this district and expressed appreciation of the hospitable reception they had received.

The encampment east of Lachute was the object of interest to many sightseers, especially among the younger element of the town.

FIRE CALL TO BEDARD BLVD.

Lachute Fire Brigade answered a summons Saturday afternoon to No. 110 Bedard Boulevard, a double tenement owned by Wm. McFaul. The outbreak occurred in a woodshed at the rear of the premises occupied by J. Prevost. A hose line was laid from Bethany Street and firemen confined the blaze to the shed. Half of this building was burned, with damage estimated at around $100.

NO NIGHT OR SUNDAY SALE OF GASOLINE

Use of Credit Cards Prohibited; Pleasure Driving Discouraged

Drastic regulations have been issued to conserve gasoline and oil supplies. The aim is a voluntary cut of 50 per cent in consumption, and the regulations went into effect locally last Monday. Here are steps taken, as announced by George R. Cottrelle, Oil Controller.

(1) Prohibition of sale, distribution and delivery of gasoline form 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. week-days and from 7 p.m. Saturday to 7 a.m. Monday for week-ends.

(2) An increase of one cent a gallon in the price of gasoline and other "white" products of petroleum, including kerosene and distillates used in tractors.

(3) Prohibition of the use of credit cards, putting gasoline and oil sales on the cash and carry basis to private consumers.

(4) National campaign urging motorists to cut down severely on pleasure use of automobiles.

Reduction in gasoline consumption is essential if the war effort of Great Britain and Canada is not to be impeded. Tankers have been lost in the Battle of the Atlantic. Britain has asked for eight Norwegian tankers now supplying Canada. Delivery of these tankers will further reduce Canadian stocks.

"In order to continue and increase our aid to Britain," says George R. Cottrelle, Oil Controller, "to ensure our war effort there is no alternative other than that the citizens of Canada must deny themselves pleasure driving, motor boating, the use of fuel oil where another fuel will do. All non-essential uses must be curtailed at least fifty per cent, and without delay."

Crowd Defies Weather, Sports Events and Program Enjoyed

The field day held on the Exhibition Grounds last Saturday afternoon under auspices of Lachute Lions Club, provided an interesting session for the large crowd who braved the threatening weather. Heavy showers and overcast sky in the early morning kept many away; nevertheless the attendance was very gratifying, and the treasury of the Lions Club received a substantial boost for its purpose of sending cigarettes to local soldiers overseas.

Another patriotic venture reached its climax at this gala occasion. This was the drawing by the local dealers, MacRae Motor Sales, in connection with the Argenteuil Spitfire drive. The winning ticket, No. 2,837, was held by a county resident, Chas. Nixon, of Rawcliffe. The net proceeds of this drawing will augment the Spitfire Fund by the amount of $1,836 — a result with which the organizers are well pleased, and for which all patriotic-minded citizens are appreciative. The conclusion of this drawing had been eagerly awaited, and the event was a major feature in the field day program.

Several hundred soldiers of the Sherbrooke Fusiliers Regt. were encamped near White's bridge, en route to Ottawa, and their band was placed at the disposal of the Lions Club for the afternoon. This added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion, and the Club is deeply grateful for the kindly gesture extended by Major Lyon.

A remarkable display of gymnastic exercises was given by a team from the Christian Brothers' orphanage at Alfred, Ont., under supervision of Brother Eusebe. Their performance drew hearty applause.

There was no lack of enthusiasm in the athletic events, in which both children and adults took part. The results of these contests and of the horse-racing appear on page eight.

Net proceeds of the field day amounted to about $250.

Soldier in England Conveys Thanks to Local Organizations

A letter from Arvon Williams to his mother in Brownsburg contains the following paragraph which The Watchman has been requested to publish. (Arvon Williams is serving with the Canadian Forces and is stationed "Somewhere in England") . . .

"Will you please have printed in The Watchman my thanks to Mr. Giles for sending me the paper, which is very much appreciated by myself the other boys as well. Home doesn't seem so far away after reading it . . . Also my thanks to the Women's Institute, Junior Auxiliary and any others who, I am told, have sent me gifts but have got lost. It is these little acts of kindness that help to 'keep our chins up.' "

6-Lane Toll Gate At Plessis-Belair Bridge, Ste. Rose

Opening of a new tollgate system at the south end of the Plessis-Belair bridge at Ste. Rose Saturday greatly facilitated the movement of traffic at this former bottleneck in the Laurentian highway.

On Saturday five lanes were open and at no time were there more than two cars waiting in line, officials said. Between 4,000 and 5,000 cars passed through the tollgates during the day, 3,000 of them during the rush hours of 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Within two weeks the 175-foot wide entrance to the six-gate tollhouse will be completely surfaced, it is reported, and the sixth gate in operation. A canopy will also be erected over the gates to protect the men from sun and rain. The bridge itself has been resurfaced.

In his report on the new system, the official paid tribute to the efficiency of the collectors, all of whom are bilingual and will be found "completely efficient if given co-operation on the part of the public."

PULP AND PAPER FOR FREEDOM

You Have a Right to be Proud!

If you work in the pulp and paper industry these days, you have a right to be proud. Your industry is doing a good job for Canada and for freedom.

First, many of your industry's products are directly used for war needs — pulps for explosives, wrappings and containers for munitions and food, boards for army buildings, paper to do the Nation's business, newsprint to sustain a free press. You are keeping this supply flowing without a break: here in Canada, to the United States, across the seas.

Second, the products your industry is selling in the United States and other countries are the largest single industrial source of the money Canada must have to pay for munitions. Pulp and paper exports last year gave Canada nearly 250 million dollars of vital foreign exchange. Every export shipment that leaves your mill is a body blow to Nazi slavery.

Whether you work in the woods, or in a mill or in an office, you are part of the war job your industry is doing. You can take pride in the job. Keep it rolling for freedom.

INFORMATION ON DISTRICT REGISTRY FOR NEW TRAINEES

Argenteuil Under Montreal Headquarters for Proposes of Registration

Ottawa — Officials of the National War Services Department report gratifying and ready response from young Canadians being called for military training under the National Resources Mobilization Act.

They state, however, that while each man receives a mailed individual and personal notice of his call to training, as his period arrives, a number of enquiries are still being sent direct to Ottawa. Major-General LaFleche, Associate Deputy Minister of the Department of National War Services, under whose direction the mobilizing of trainees is being carried out, points out that the Regulations have been planned to smooth out possible difficulties for the trainee by dividing Canada into thirteen Administrative Divisions, with officials and headquarters offices in each Dovision, authorized to handle procedure and operations locally.

To the Divisional Register of National War Services in the area in which they are registered should be forwarded all communications concerning business arising from the provision of National War Services Regulations. All men from 19 to 45 are warned that notification must also be given promptly of change of address or material status. Failure to do so incurs the risk of fine or imprisonment.

Young men in this area, liable for military training, requiring further information regarding their obligations or applications for postponement should communicate with the Divisional Registrar for this District, whose name and address are given below for their convenience, along with the names of other Members of the Board:

Division E; Headquarters, Montreal.

Chairman of the Board; Hon. Mr. Justice A. Trahan, Montreal.

Members of the Board; Dr. C. H. Barr, 354 Church St., Montreal; Felix Messier, M.L.A., St. Antoine, Que.

Divisional Registrar; Pierre Decary, 405 Transportation Bldg., Montreal.

This Administrative Division of National War Services includes the electoral district of Argenteuil.

U.S. army engineers were called to demolish a four-storey building at the Watertown, Mass., arsenal. Charges of dynamite were set off, but no dice. They could blow it up but not down. Boom goes charge number one.

Boom ! A second attempt was made. Still the building stands, a lop-sided tribute to its builder. Now Uncle Sam's engineers are trying slower but more orthodox methods of demolition.

Muskrat Restoration Benefits the Indians

Muskrat restoration, near The Pas, Manitoba, is now paying dividends, according to the Indian Affairs Branch of the Department of Mines and Resources, which reports that the 1941 spring catch on the Summerberry Game Preserve yielded 190,000 pelts valued at more than $360,000.

More than 700 trappers, of whom hundred and eighty are treaty Indians and the remainder needy halfbreeds and whites, will share this amount after deductions are made for royalties, cost of operation and marketing, and crop assurance fund. This was the second crop of muskrat pelts from the 135,000-acre preserve, established in 1936 through the co-operation of the Manitoba and Dominion Governments. In the spring of 1940 approximately 120,000 pelts were harvested. Under a plan inaugurated last year, the trappers participating in the 1941 catch will receive a monthly income of twenty-five dollars for the next twelve months.

The success of this undertaking, started with a view to improving the economic conditions of the native population, marks another triumph for Canadian wild life conservation. Decreased relief costs, better health, and improved living conditions among the Indian families of The Pas district who participated have already been noted. These benefits are also notable reflected in the school children who have been attending their classes more regularly and displaying marked improvement in their studies.

LACHUTE CITIZEN LEADS ORCHESTRA AT MONT'L FESTIVAL

Local Musician Impressed With Phases of French-Canadian Culture

An impression brought home by Mr. Angelo Fassio — who conducted the 50-piece Conservatoire National orchestra at the festival in Montreal Stadium on Monday evening — was linked directly with the need for a gymnasium in Lachute High School, which has been a debated topic here. That was Mr. Fassio's own impression, considering local interests first.

Music and physical culture may not be directly related, but Mr. Fassio witnessed and enthused to both, as French-Canadian youths and girls demonstrated their prowess before a crowd which packed the immense Stadium from 7.15 p.m. until midnight.

The performances included sports, folk dancing, aquatics and massed drills, all executed to precision, while the Conservatory choir and orchestra gave excellent renditions in the musical part of the program.

Governor Sends Seeds To Devil's Island

Toronto, July 21 — An example of the good that Salvation Army officers do in all parts of the world was brought back from the West Indies recently by Lt.-Col. Charles Basson, of the international auditors' office, London, England, who has just concluded his annual audit of the accounts for the Salvation Army in the four United States, the Canadian, and the Central American and West Indies territorial headquarters. He arrived in Canada via Russia and the Pacific early in the year after having escaped by inches the Nazi invasion of Norway, when he was carrying out his regular audit duties.

During his visit to Kingston, Jamaica, Col. Basson learned how the inmates and inhabitants of the French Penal Colony off the coast of South America obtained their seeds for planting this spring.

While Devil's Island is actually a part of the French "territory" of the Salvation Army, and hence out of his jurisdiction, the Central America and West Indies territorial commander at Kingston received word that, due to war conditions, the people on the tropical island of world-wide fact and fiction. fame faced a serious situation because they could not obtain seeds normally planted by convicts and citizens for a large part of the island's food supply.

The Salvation Army officer immediately appealed to the governor of the British colonies in the West Indies, who, according to Col. Basson, "gladly and willingly" assured the officer that Devil's Island would get the seeds they required immediately.

"This is nothing more than "British fair play" on the governor's part, of course, but The Army is truly grateful for his help under rather delicate circumstances," Col. Basson added.

In reply to a question, Col. Basson added, "I am amazed to find deep and strongly expressed pro-British sentiment throughout the United States. We in England know that America is with us, but it was a soul-stirring experience to me these last few months to encounter so much of that spirit. I am happy indeed to carry the story of this spirit back to the people of Britain; they don't need moral support to win, but they certainly appreciate receiving that along with the material aid Canada and the United States are giving in ever increasing volume."

Sailing Vessels Bring Fodder for Cattle

Give Britain Wartime Cattle Fodder

Seeds accidentally taken to England last century in the holds of American sailing ship have given Britain's farmers a valuable wartime cattle fodder.

It is rice grass, or Spartina townsendii, a plant flourishing on townsendii, a plant flourishing on ies where it prevents the washing away of banks by the action of tides and currents. Much rice grass has spread naturally, but in recent years extensive plantations have been made for coastal protection.

The modern English variety, discovered at Hythe, in Southampton water, in 1870, is a cross between the native species and that brought from America, and is so vigorous that whenever it comes into competition with either of its parents it eliminates them completely.

Agricultural experts who have carried out cattle feeding trials with rice grass have found that under good conditions it makes splendid hay. It is also grazed readily by all classes of livestock.

In New South Wales rice grass has been planted as fodder in the extensive saltlands of the Riverina district, where it absorbs the overflow from artesian wells.

Experiments with it are also being carried out in South Africa, India and the Sudan.

Creel Census Returns From National Parks

Early returns from the creel census being conducted in a number of Canada's national parks show many fine catches and excellent co-operation on the part of the anglers, reports the Department of Mines and Resources. Visitors to the parks interested in fishing are requested to complete creel census cards indicating their successes and failure in order to assist the park limnological service to maintain and improve fishing in the parks.

Apart from reflecting fishing conditions in the various streams and lakes, analysis of the creel census cards also reveals many interesting sidelights concerning the whims of the fish, and the perseverance, joys and glooms of the anglers. The recording of nil returns are just as important as reports of limit catches.

"Plenty excited!", was the observation one successful angler wrote on his creel census card, which shows that in one hour's fishing in Waterton Lake in Waterton Lakes National Park he landed a lake trout 37½ inches long, and weighing 20¾ pounds. In the same lake a married couple from Hawaii fished for six days to land two large lake trout. The husband made his catch, 39 inches long, in three-quarters of an hour the first time out, while his wife had to persevere until the sixth day, when she landed a 30-inch trout. From the state of Washington another angler caught three lake trout, ranging in length from 18 to 22 inches in two outings, totalling four hours.

Creel census cards from Jasper National Park show that lake trout up to 24 inches in length are being taken in Pyramid Lake, and in Medicine Lake in the same park a lady angler reports catching four speckled trout, each 14 inches long, in three hours of fishing. Her observations were: "Weather dull and windy. Could catch limit, if fine."

Good catches of pike are reported from Prince Albert National Park in Saskatchewan, an angler from Texas landing thirty pike ranging up to 30 inches in length in twenty hours of fishing spread over four days. His remarks were: "Have always had excellent fishing in Prince Albert National Park."

"We were surrounded by natives," related the explorer. "They uttered savage cries, danced madly, and beat the earth with their clubs . . ."

"Sounds like golf," said the bored listener.

"So you complain of finding sand in your soup?"

Yes sir."

"Did you join the Army to serve your country, or complain about the soup?"

"To serve my country, sir — not to eat it."

An Easy Decision, This !

Motor car drivers in Canada are now face to face with the fact that the airmen of the empire need the gasoline which Canadians are using for pleasure purposes.

For several months past every loyal Canadian has been nursing the fervent wish that the young flyers from Canada with their brother fighters in the R. A. F. could pay ten-fold the unspeakable horrors which Nazi airmen have unloosed in the British Isles. Now finally the wings of hundreds of Empire planes are casting their shadows over Germany daily. The hour has come when we have the opportunity to shake the morale of Hitler's millions.

But as each new flight of aeroplanes streak into battle, and as the Empire increases its raiding groups from a handful of attackers to waves of machines which are counted by the hundreds, fuel for these fighting ships stands out as the stark need of the hour.

From London comes the urgent cry, "Give us all the gasoline you can spare".

Canada cannot turn over all her gasoline. That product is vital in our huge production of war material. We need large quantities for the hundreds of air training ships across the country, for the navy and the convoys which touch our shores, for the transportation of war goods. But there is one way in which we can supply more and more gasoline for the fighters — by refusing to use up gasoline unnecessarily in private motor cars.

Millions upon millions of gallons of gasoline are spent every year in private motor cars for purposes which may be considered unnecessary in the light of the drastic need across the Atlantic.

If our fighting forces are to get any help at all from Canada, in so far as gasoline is concerned, fuel experts declare, then owners of private motor cars must reduce their consumption of gasoline by at least 50%.

Armed with this knowledge who of us is going to refuse to co-operate?

The decision is an easy one.

Noise "Ad Libitum"

"Lima is by far the noisiest city I have ever been in", writes Frank Prendergast in a letter to The Printed Word, which is quoted in part by that lively exchange . . . Mr. Prendergast continues—"Automobiles are quite numerous and the part of the car which suffers most wear and tear is the horn. The horn substitutes for the driver's eyes. Seemingly he has no responsibility in so far as anything that can move is concerned. He simply holds down the button and goes. There is an unending din of klaxia. Every now and then there is a contrapuntal-or-something effect achieved by a siren, with which all street cars and garbage wagons are equipped. The garbage wagons are built quite high. The lads hand the cans up tc the emptier-in-chief, who dumps them and then negligently tosses them overboard."

Summer Health Hazards

Summer vacations should restore the bodily health. Sometimes they endanger it, simply because risks are invited or are not recognized. Watch your food supplies, the sources of your milk and water. Don't flirt too long with "old sol" or get familiar with poison ivy. Here are some paragraphs of advice on these hazards, outlined by the Health League of Canada . . .

Food and Water

Whilst drinking water supplies have been improved generally, it is not safe to use water from any and all sources in out of way places. Pollution may be present only at infrequent intervals, but why take a chance? The simplest method of purifying your water is to chlorinate it. This can be done by means of a chlorine outfit supplied for 60c at the Ontario Department of Health, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. Vacationists unable to conveniently secure this chlorine outfit may employ the following method:

Prepare a solution by adding half a teaspoonful of fresh chlorinated lime to one pint of water. Use one teaspoonful of this solution to ten gallons of water to be purified, 36 drops to one gallon, or 9 drops to one quart. Let the water stand at least 15 minutes before dosing. The solution should be freshly prepared for each chlorination. Tablets of calcium hypochlorite and ampules of the dry powder can be produced for this purpose and are the most satisfactory since they do not lose their strength if properly sealed.

Food supplies need watching. Maintain them at an even low temperature. Where ice is used, see that the source is reliable.

Milk Takes A Holiday

If you cannot buy pasteurized milk, then pasteurize it yourself by either of the following methods. Heat the milk in a double boiler and just bring it to the boil and then cool. If you have a suitable thermometer, instead of boiling the milk, heat it in the double boiler to over 143° F. and then place it at the back of the stove or where it will remain at that temperature for half an hour. Cool quickly to 45° F. It is then ready for use, or for storing on ice or in the refrigerator.

Old Sol Burns

Taken in proper doses sunshine has a beneficial effect on one's body. To fully enjoy this benefit, make your first sunbaths brief — just 10 minutes each the first day, 15 the second, and so on. Remember, it takes 16 days to safely tan a child and that their skin is more susceptible to burns than adults, especially blondes and redheads. If you do have a bad burn, treat it as a burn and apply one of the many tannic-acid jelly preparations now available.

Let Poison Ivy Alone

Ivy poisoning is rather widespread in Canada. The three shiny dark-green leaves are not difficult to recognize, hence the rhyme "Leaves three, let it be". You are not immune to poison ivy; no one is. Some people are more sensitive than others. The poison is the milky, oily sap which is slow to evaporate and may remain on your clothes and boots long after your walk through the bush.

There is no sure cure, nor is there a sure preventive treatment except the best of all methods, detour the plants. If you have been exposed to the plants, lather your whole body with suds of any good soap, rinse and repeat. Thus you wash away the oil, forestalling or minimizing irritation. Soothing, protective lotions and hot compresses are standard treatment; they merely give relief. Gardeners and others who must work near poison ivy are recommended to smear all exposed surfaces with vanishing cream mixed with 10% sodium perborate, freshly made. Any druggist can make this cream and the protection lasts for three hours; then it must be washed off and a fresh application made.

Why Worry?

Some people persist in taking their pet office worry with them on their vacation. Don't ! Worry can do no good. It can cause definite harm. It reacts on the nervous system, causing indigestion and insomnia, which in turn causes more worry, and so a vicious circle goes on. Train yourself to accept life for what it is, rather than fretting about what it is not. Learn to relax — it is the only means of treating the vicious circle. This is what your holidays are really for. While you can, Rest and Relax. You owe it to yourself and to your business.

"Had Never Before Been Treated So Considerately"

The "Cincinnati Telephone Bulletin" recently printed the following excerpts by special permission of the Hawley Publication Inc. from the book, "National Defense ! How Can I Help?":

We have read enough history to see how religion can give individuals and nations great power. In the days of the Caesars, a new religion was born. It gave the early Christians the fortitude to face hungry lions in the arena without a whimper. Later it inspired them to erect towering cathedrals, to throw themselves into crusades to the Holy Land and to trek through uncharted forests and deserts to carry the word.

Human Beings Need Religion

We believe that the temporary breakdown of religion in much of Europe — the substitution of a mortal for God and a political ideology for the Bible — simply doesn't gear with the needs of human nature. Human beings have always needed religion — a reliance on ideals and strength above the weaknesses which exist in any mortal leader.

The members of our family are sure that America today needs a re-awakening of religion. There is still much of it in evidence but not enough. We mean real religion.

While we are arming ourselves rapidly with planes, tanks and guns, we will arm ourselves with a greater power — the power of the spirit. It will gain us lasting respect and confidence in ourselves and our posterity, and among human beings in all other lands.

Unmasking the Fifth Column

In our dinner-table talks, someone will occasionally say: "I just heard that Mr. So-And-So is believed to be a foreign spy" or "Mrs. Such-And-Such thinks America should have a dictator." This kind of talk flying loosely around got us into studying the subject of propaganda — the Fifth Column.

Here is an example we ran into. Our family decided to take a motor trip across Canada. Nearly everyone we told about our proposed trip made a comment something like this: "Oh, but you'll have plenty of trouble going into Canada now. They make it very difficult for American tourists, requiring many papers and examinations and delays ! They might even keep you there."

We are somewhat surprised, so we investigated. We found that there had been unusual strictness at a few points but that the situation had been corrected. The Canadians welcome the tourist business from the United States. We know, because we just came back from Canada. We had never before been treated so considerately.

We believe that, if the whole technique of modern propaganda is made clear to us and other families, fewer of us will get tricked. Furthermore we can more quickly spot Fifth Columnists, and we will learn how to develop our own propaganda, using truth which will offset exaggerations or lies.

FROM BRUSH PATCH IN QUEBEC RISES HUGE BOMB PLANT

One of World's Largest Factories, in Remote Part of Province

Ottawa — On August 15, 1940, a contractor's truck plowed through loose sand to the middle of a blueberry patch in an out-of-the-way spot in the Province of Quebec, and began to unload tools. Almost as far as the eye could see in any direction there was nothing but rolling sand dunes and low underbrush.

Today one of the world's largest aerial bomb factories stands in the heart of that blueberry patch. Its normal output will be well over one hundred thousand 500-pound bombs per year.

The bomb plant is an excellent example of what can be achieved by a democracy at war. Construction was begun on August 15. Machines and equipment began to arrive almost before the roof was on. Steel was melted for the first time on January 5. The first trial bombs were moulded on March 7, just a little less than seven months after the first sod was turned. Mass production is now underway and the output is growing each day.

The new factory is one of the largest in the world with but a single product. It has been expertly designed for maximum efficiency and output. The processes are arranged in production line fashion, reducing to a minimum the costly, time-killing handling operations which would be necessary in an old factory adapted to bomb manufacture.

The production has its beginnings at two points, the sand tower and the scrap heap. Miniature mountains of scrap steel stand at one end of the plant. Rusty automobile engine blocks, old bedsteads, broken farm implements, great chunks of railway steel, bales of old wire, and a weird collection of junk from every section of Canada, are picked up by a giant mangnetic crane, loaded in great buckets, and sent to feed the maw of one or other of two seven-ton electric furnaces.

At the other fork of the production line, moulder's sand brought all the way from Illinois is fed from the sand tower into great machines that form the moulds and cores for the bombs. The moulding method is unique, in that four bomb shells, each weighing about 300 pounds, are cast at the same time in the same box. Molten steel, sizzling and gurgling at a temperature of almost 3,000 degrees, is carried along the line of moulds by an overhead crane. The furnaces are charged every three hours and each produces sufficient molten steel to make 32 bombs at each pouring.

After the moulds have cooled they are taken to a "shake-out" machine, a gigantic vibrating platform which jolts the hard-baked sand from the casting and breaks up the central core. At this stage the four bombs are joined together by a criss-cross of metal, but this is removed quickly by acetylene torches. A protruding neck of steel on each bomb, known as the riser, is cut off by a special saw which shears through metal with ease.

The bomb is still rough, but skilled workmen soon finish off the rough spots with portable grinding wheels. The next operation is annealing. About 130 bombs are loaded upon a steel flat car and rolled into a huge oven, where they remain at a temperature of 1,600 degrees for some hours. This softens the steel for machining and makes it more uniform.

The machining operations require a high degree of skill and precision and the operators of the monster special lathes are experts in their art. One set of machines cut and drill and tap the bomb itself so that the tail assembly and exploders will fit perfectly. The other line of machines handle the component base plugs. One of the final operations is that in which a suspension lug is welded to the side of the bomb. This ring, which must withstand a test pull of 3,500 pounds, is used in handling the bomb and in fastening it in place beneath the plane which will carry it to its ultimate destination.

The bomb is then immersed in a tank of water and filled with air at a pressure of 30 pounds to the square inch, to determine if there is the slightest leak in its walls.

From the test tank the bomb goes to the "de-greaser", where it is bathed with chemicals which remove all oil, grit, chips of steel, and other foreign matter. The interior of the bomb is then coated with a special varnish which leaves the inside smooth and gleaming. A coat of white primer paint on the exterior, and a final inspection by Government inspectors, and the bomb is ready for shipment to the filling plant, where its 200-pound quota of high explosive will be put in.

CORRECT FLAG-FLYING

No great crime is committed by flying the flag incorrectly, but it does show an ignorance of something which Canadians should know. Even though it spends most of its time tucked away in the attic, the flag should fly correctly on its public appearances.

JEAN HARVEY ON WAR EFFORT OF FRENCH CANADA

Quebec "Shown in Entirely False Light," Says Noted Writer and Editor

Jean Harvey, French-Canadian writer from Montreal, last week told an Ottawa service club that the average French-Canadian now is more enthusiastic for a British victory than ever before.

Mr. Harfey said the Province of Quebec had been "shown in an entirely false light."

"The honor of French Canada is at stake and this wrong must be righted so that Canadian unity shall not suffer through animosity created by the indiscretion and thoughtlessness of a few," he declared.

Nine out of 10 French language daily newspapers in Quebec province were whole-heartedly behind the war effort.

"The first regiment to reach full strength in Canada when war broke out was French-Canadian," he said. More than 55,000 French-Canadians were in the forces. There had not been a single strike called in Quebec's war industries since the outbreak of hostilities, and in the financing of the war French-Canadians were generously subscribing to loans and projects.

Mr. Harvey said the Province of tance had been attached to speeches made by a small group and ultra-nationalists.

Changed Attitude

He compared the attitude of French-Canadians in 1914 and in 1941, concluding, "they are today informed on world events and they take just as much interest in them as any of their countrymen; their knowledge and viewpoint is the same as that of any other intelligent human being."

Mr. Harvey recalled there were several causes for French-Canadians to complain against some Anglo-Saxon elements, but called them "side-issues".

"There is too much to do for us to waste our time on idle recriminations", he said. "In spite of everything we admire the British world because it is defending us, it is defending Canada and of all known empires it is the one which has shown the most tolerance toward different races, religions and tongues."

Do You Know?

Is There any Dog that Does Not Bark?

Yes, the basenji dog, an ancient breed first brought from the Congo in 1936, is an absolutely mute dog. It is hardy and is used by the natives for chasing wounded game. Basenjis are very intelligent, faithful and good-tempered with children and have extraordinarily clean habits. They stand about 18 inches high. Incidentally, these dogs seem to be immune from ordinary canine ailments.

Is the Kilt Exclusively Scottish?

No, although we generally think of Scottish Highlanders when we speak of kilts. The pleated skirt or petticoat reaching from the waist to the knees was worn by Assyrian soldiers hundreds of years before Christ. In modern times the mountaineers of the Balkan countries wear a short white linen garment called the fustanella, which is really a kilt. And then, of course, even in the British Isles, the kilt forms part of the old national dress of Ireland.

War Services Department Aware of Racketeering In Salvage Activities

Following an experience with salvage racketeers in Lachute, as reported recently in The Watchman, it is reassuring to note from the following news release that these activities are being met by widespread warning to the public.

Letters of salvage activities getting under way in tardy districts, and reports of collections from well organized districts, are encouraging, says the report. Salvage is going over the top.

But all is not entirely smooth sailing. A new type of "racketeer" has developed. He is an unscrupulous person taking advantage of the salvage drive in rural districts. He collects salvage in the name of the Red Cross or some other well known local salvage organization, without in any way being associated with the work and later sells the salvage for his own personal gain.

Several prosecutions for fraud have already been instituted. But officials of the National Salvage Office point out that prevention is better than cure.

"Farmers and rural housewives who gather salvage for bona fide voluntary local salvage organizations," they say, "should make certain that the persons who call to pick it up are accredited representatives, and salvage organizations should have their collectors carry a document of identification."

Such precautions would nip in the bud the activities of these new "racketeers" trying to prey on the generosity of the public in wartime.

However, this is only a slight temporary unpleasantness, salvage officials believe. It will in due course be removed from the salvage picture.

There is another mildly disturbing element, though, which is causing officials a little concern. And that is the problem of sorting salvage. Does the general public realize the complexity of salvage operations? That is the repeated question at the National Salvage headquarters.

"Sometimes we wonder," said the supervisor of the drive. "We are constantly in communication with local salvage organizations whose work is slowed up because those who donate salvage too often neglect to follow the suggestions given for packing. It is most important to see that the various items of salvage are kept separate."

Time may be saved, the amount of energy required from voluntary workers may be reduced, and the returns from the sale of salvage may be increased, by proper sorting and packing in the home, the supervisor explained.

Nevertheless, despite "racketeers" and careless packing, salvage is in a booming condition.

It is fortunate for the average man that he doesn't know half the things he would like to know.

OBITUARY

WAR VETERAN DIES IN SASKATCHEWAN

The death of Archibald Boa, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Boa, occurred on July 8th at Loon Lake, Sask., of angina pectoris. Mr. Boa was a veteran of the last Great War, and was 48 years old. His burial was arranged by the Loon Lake Legion, service being held at Legion Hall, Loon Lake, on Thursday, July 10th. The Rev. H. R. Deering officiated.

Pall-bearers were six fellow war veterans. Burial took place at Old Loon Lake Cemetery.

MRS. HUGH FRASER, JR., DEAD IN 92nd. YEAR

The passing of Mrs. Hugh Fraser, Jr., at the advanced age of 91 years, removes another link with the earlier days of this community. Well known throughout the district, Mrs. Fraser passed peacefully away Tuesday morning at her home in the east ward of Lachute.

Formerly Miss Katherine Ellen Jackson, she was a native of Chatham Township, but had spent the greater part of her life in this town. In her earlier years she was an active member of the Presbyterian, and later the United Church. She had enjoyed good health, and only recently had been visiting her granddaughter, Freda, and great granddaughter, Joan, at Cowansville.

Mrs. Fraser is survived by three sons — Carl, of Ottawa, Roy, in Lachute, and Ivan, of Tillsonburg, and a daughter, Mrs. Jas. H. Mason, also of this town — all of whom spent last week-end with their mother here.

The funeral was held from her residence, Main Street East, this afternoon, service being conducted by the Rev. Arthur Kelly, of Ogdensburg, N.Y. The pall-bearers were her three sons, Carl, Roy and Ivan; her grandson, Hugh; and two nephews, William and John Jackson. The flowers were both numerous and beautiful.

THE LATE EDITH FRASER

The death occurred on Monday evening last of Mary Edith Fraser, at the Western Hospital, Montreal. "Dolly", as Miss Fraser was popularly known to her friends, was the daughter of the late Margaret Rooney and of Geo. Fraser, Lachute. She had been in failing health for the past three years. Two months ago she was taken to hospital for an operation.

As a young girl she played the violin and took part in many local concerts. Before taking sick she was an active curler and played in many of the winning bonspiels.

Service was held at Wray's Undertaking Parlors, Montreal, on Wednesday, the Rev. Mr. Pollard, of St. Bartholomew's Church, Montreal, officiating.

Interment was made at Lachute.

Particular Appeal to Brownsb'g Citizens

Pretty Wedding in Brownsburg Church

Martin - MacAllister

Brownsburg — Attractively decorated with summer flowers, Brownsburg United Church was the scene on Saturday afternoon, at four o'clock of the marriage of Helen Peace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur MacAllister, and Mr. Irwin John Martin son of Mr. and Mrs. John Martin, both of Brownsburg.

The Rev. S. J. Pike officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. C. J. Wheeler played the wedding music. Mr. Alfred Lupien was best man for the bridegroom, and the ushers were Mr. Ronald MacAllister, brother of the bride, and Mr. Gerald Moseley, cousin of the bride.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Melvin MacAllister, of Montreal, the bride wore a gown of white satin and lace, fashioned on long straight lines falling into a full train, her long veil of tulle illusion was fastened at the head with lily of the valley, and she carried Talisman roses and maiden hair fern.

Miss Mildred MacAllister, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore a gown of blue organza made with a jacket effect and full skirt, also wearing a shoulder length veil with a coronet of flowers.

Miss Dorothy Davies, cousin of the bride, wore a gown of pink figured net made on princess lines with a full skirt, also with a shoulder length veil and coronet of flowers. They both carried a nosegay of sweet peas. Mrs. MacAllister, mother of the bride, wore a gown of rose sheer; her hat was of Baku straw and she wore a corsage of sweet peas.

Mrs. Martin, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of Queen's blue sheer and white accessories, and a corsage of American Beauty roses.

A reception was held in the church hall, where over a hundred guests were delightfully served by ladies of the Orange Order. The Rev. Mr. Pike presented the bride and groom with an engraved Bible, to which the groom happily replied. Numerous gifts indicated the high regard in which the young couple are held in the community.

Following the reception, the happy couple left by motor for Gaspe and other points, the bride travelling in a powder blue tailored suit with white accessories. On their return they will reside in Brownsburg.

Germans Bomb British Parliament House

Shattered masonry, charred timbers, rubble and debris fill this picture of the Chamber of the British House of Commons, after it had been hit by bombs from German air raiders. The Nazis have not in reality destroyed the House of Commons; that does not exist in bricks and mortar, but in the long story that has created the free spirit of the British people.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

"Truth" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday July 27th.

The Golden Text is from Psalms 117: 1, 2. "O praise the Lord, all ye nations . . . For his merciful kindness is great toward us; and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "So will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people Israel; and I will not let them pollute my holy name any more: and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord, the Holy One in Israel." (Ezekiel 39: 7).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Marvels calamities, and sin will much more abound as truth urges upon mortals its resisted claims; but the awful daring of sin destroys sin, and foreshadows the triumph of truth."

The spirit of a person's life is ever shedding some power, just as a flower is steadily bestowing fragrance upon the air.

RECRUITING DRIVE BRINGS 34,000 NEW MEN INTO ACTIVE ARMY SERVICE

Ottawa — In response to the recruiting call issued two and a half months ago for 32,000 men, over 34,000 have been enlisted, medically examined, passed and attested as members of the Canadian Army, the Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, announced on Wednesday evening in a nation-wide broadcast, thanking all who had participated in the campaign.

Nearly 48,000 answered the call, but many were found unable to pass the exacting medical test. In addition to the Army, the Minister stated about 12,000 enlisted in the Air Force and about 3,500 in the Navy, making all during the period over 60,000 young men offering to serve in the Dominion's fighting forces.

This campaign the Minister described as only a chapter in Canada's War Book. "We keep right on," he said. "It's a continued story . . . to carry out our plans will require about 7,000 men each month. Men will be needed to keep the Army up to strength and to provide reinforcements. They will be needed to complete new units and to provide increases in existing units."

It is thought, and thought alone, that divides right from wrong; it is thought, and thought only, that elevates or degrades human deeds and desires. —George Moore.

"CALLING ALL CARS"

Save Gasoline

A NATIONAL EMERGENCY

Canada is right up against an acute shortage of gasoline and fuel oil. Tankers that normally supply our country have been commandeered for vitally important overseas service.

The Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the rapid development of Canada's mechanized army units and the great work carried on by our corvettes make the demand for fuel urgent.

Our crude oil intake is limited. There is just one thing to do if our fighting forces are to carry on with a "full tank". Every Canadian motorist is asked to cut his daily gas consumption in half!

There are many ways by which this 50% saving can be made . . . ways and means to give you more mileage per gallon. You can drive slower so that you will use less gasoline. You can go fifty-fifty with your neighbours, inviting each other to share cars . . . for business, and for pleasure. People can readily go to and from work together, using one car instead of four . . . using one gallon of gasoline instead of several. Women as well as men can make these savings.

The amount of gasoline used in Canada for business, social and non-essential activities is amazingly high in proportion to that used by our fighting forces. One look at the figures would convince you that this situation must be reversed.

17 easy ways towards a 50% GASOLINE SAVING
(Approved by Automobile Experts)
Reduce driving speed from 60 to 40 on the open road.
Avoid jack-rabbit starts.
Avoid useless or non-essential driving.
Turn motor off when not in use, do not leave idling.
Don't race your engine; let it warm up slowly.
Don't strain your engine; change gears.
Keep carburetor cleaned and properly adjusted.
Tune up motor, timing, etc.
Keep spark plugs and valves clean.
Check cooling system; overheating wastes gasoline.
Maintain tires at right pressure.
Lubricate efficiently; worn engines waste gasoline.
Drive in groups to and from work, using cars alternate days.
For golf, picnics and other outings, use one car instead of four.
Take those short shopping trips ON FOOT and carry parcels home.
Walk to and from the movies.
Boat owners, too, can help by reducing speed.
Your regular service station man will gladly explain these and other ways of saving gasoline. Consult him.
GO 50 50 WITH OUR FIGHTING FORCES

Canada does not ask or request you to put your car up. She merely asks for your help . . . asks that you walk sometimes when the distance isn't too great . . . that you take a shorter drive on Sunday afternoon . . . that you look after your car and keep it in good condition . . . that you say to your neighbour: "Let's use my car today, Jim; we'll use yours tomorrow."

Every day, in greater and greater quantity, we must release gasoline and oil by the thousands of gallons to our throbbing munitions plants . . . to our tanks and armoured cars . . . to our fighting planes and bombers . . . to our corvettes and merchant ships that ply the vital sea-lanes . . . so that the day of victory may sooner be at hand.

Will YOU help?

•

It is also vitally important that you reduce the use of domestic and commercial fuel oil.

HIBERNATION IN CANCER

Hibernation, or in other words, "freezing," in cases of hopeless cancer has been tried in six cases by doctors in Philadelphia. It was not expected that the treatment would effect a cure. The use of low temperatures was adopted in order to learn if the treatment would retard the cancerous process or alleviate the pain. In the cases subjected to hibernation, as the process is called, the body is subjected to a general reduction of body temperatures below the critical level of 95 deg. F.

It has been observed that cancers occur most frequently in areas associated with higher than usual temperatures, such as the breast, uterus and gastro-intestinal tract. Likewise the occurrence of metastatic tumours, (that is extension of the process) is usually in areas with higher than ordinary temperature of the body (98.6) such as the lungs, liver and brain. Cancer thrives best in organs which contain an abundant blood supply and are warmer than other parts of the body.

The aim of the experiments was to reduce body temperature below the critical level of 95 deg. F., which would cause a constriction of the blood vessels and cause less blood to flow through the cancerous organ. There were no deaths during the treatment. Two of the patients are alive and fairly comfortable seven and eight months after the treatment. A ray of hope was thus afforded by hibernation and all the patients requested the experiment.

The lowest temperatures obtained during treatment was 83.2 rectal. The hours spent in hibernation ranged from nine and a helf to fifty-four and a half. The living patients were entirely free from pain for 3 months and still get on comfortably without narcotics.

X-ray studies of the survivors show that the cancer is progressing so that the only results so far claimed for the procedure is that it relieves pain. The doctors responsible for the experiment say that "Freezing" is hazardous and not justifiable in the treatment of hopeless cancer.

ALLERGY

"What is meant by the term "Allergy"? Mrs. D. A."

Answer

Allergy is a condition of the body in which the individual is is eaten, to some pollen or dust sensitive either to some food that which he breathes in, or to something with which he comes in contact. This sensitiveness results in certain disorders, such as hay fever, eczema, asthma, hives, and a condition of the nose known as allergic rhinitis or it may produce certain mild digestive upsets. Migraine, or sick headache, has been thought to be due to allergy. Skin tests should be made to determine when a person is oversensitive to any of these things.

Vaccine for Colds

"I have heard a good deal about the vaccine treatment for colds. Just how effective is this form of treatment? Ed. C."

Answer

It has been found that in general a vaccine given either by mouth or by injection is helpful in preventing colds or in making them milder in about ten per cent of the cases in which it has been used.

Low Blood Pressure

"Will you tell me what causes low blood pressure? —Mrs. V. M."

Answer

Low blood pressure may be due to weakness of the heart, disturbances in the blood vessels which follow some infection such as typhoid fever, and general nervous weakness. It is found in some cases of hardening of the arteries, in anemia, and in disturbances of the glands of internal secretion. The symptoms consist of headache and dizziness, weakness and sometimes fainting spells.

The treatment depends upon the cause, and one with this disorder should have a thorough examination by a physician so that proper treatment may be carried out.

British Cruiser Tanks

Tanks assume an ever-increasing importance in modern warfare, and Britain, who originated the tank in the last war, is developing new theories in their arms and armament. This picture shows British cruiser tanks in training exercises.

One Flywheel — 40 Tons

World Record in Mine Equipment

In two minutes a load of 8 tons can be brought up from a mine 6,000 feet down by an electric winder sent out from Great Britain to one of the City Deep mines in South Africa.

Two similar equipments completed for South Africa carry drums 36 feet across, believed to be the biggest ever made for electric winders. Forty tons is the weight of the single piece flywheel in cast steel included in each motor generator set for equalisation purposes.

The same engineering shops have turned out many overseas jobs during the past year, including large turbo-alternators for India, Canada and Australia.

They are now building four additional rectifiers for the Natal section of the South African Railways similar to those supplied a few years ago for the main line electrification between Durban and Volksrust — the largest system in the world operating with inverted rectifiers.

A "Dandy" Outfit

No, this is not a style picture from the gay nineties. It is a 1941 style forecast for informal summer evening wear, this year's version of the straw sailor (with wide band) adding to the dandified look. The suit is a two-tone medium blue worn with a Tattersall vest of beige with blue checks. It was seen at a review of summer vacation clothes in New York, June 24.

Burning Forests Injure Canada's War Strength

By Maj.-Gen. the Hon. Sir Eugene Fiset, Lt.-Gov. of Quebec

Forest fire destruction has visited the Province of Quebec, as elsewhere in Canada, to a very severe degree during May and June this year. The loss falls upon all classes of our people, for there is no natural resource that extends its benefits so widely as the forest. No matter in what region a timbered area goes up in flames, the people of the whole province participate in the tragedy, and inevitably must take their share of the economic damage.

In this year of war, the forests of Quebec are a heritage to be guarded jealously against every menace. Not a single acre of woodlands can be spared as tribute to charcoal and ashes. When individuals working or travelling in bush country permit their careless acts to ignite a tract of timber, an injury is done to every fellow citizen, and to the Province and Dominion as well. Few forest fires would happen if citizens would apply to their conduct a few common-sense precautions such as they apply instinctively within the boundaries of their own homes and towns. Thousands of fire fighters have been called upon in recent weeks to counteract the reckless deeds of a handful of persons, thoughtless enough to cause widespread injury to their native province. Such conduct brings no gain to the guilty party and is condemned by every standard of decent citizenship. I am glad to make this appeal to all who value the welfare of the people of Quebec to be vigilant and active in forest fire prevention during the remaining months of fire hazard.

HINTS FOR HOMEBODIES

By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman

FIREFLIES

Fireflies are a delight which few of us have the opportunity to see. Our summer evenings are alive with fireflies. There is a field with lush grass just below us and there are literally thousands of them dancing in the darkness. I have never seen such bright ones before and they are so bright they actually light up the place. They tell us fireflies are beetles and the light comes from a fat-body underneath them. These must be well-nourished with plenty of fat to shine so brightly. A beetle is a very prosaic thing for such a fairly-like creature as a firefly to be. Living in the country brings many simple pleasures.

CARE AND FEEDING OF HOBBIES

Hobbies are a good thing for children to have and summer is the grand time for them to grow. They need careful cultivation by the parents as too much will soon kill them. What has started as fun will become work if parents push too hard. A little encouragement and applause and a lot of hands-off seems to be the best course. A supply of materials at hand is a great help. It may be huge sheets of paper, crayons and water colors, or plasticene to encourage the artists. Plasticene in pound lots of one color is a better bet than the tricky looking sets with sticks of various colors. There never is enough of the desired color and the whole thing soon looks a mess. Wood to work with and of course tools, or maybe balsa wood for the model airplaners. A box full of old clothes for both sexes will encourage the dramatic arts or even just the fun of dressing-up. An assortment of hats is a necessity and scarves and veils and pieces of ribbon all help to make believe.

TWO AT A TIME

After years of experiment and trial and error I have decided fruit preserved in small quantities tastes and looks much better than done en masse. Little by little does it. I now never do more than two boxes at a time. You may think that is a fiddling way of doing it. Actually I find it less work. I don't mean that I just do two boxes a day, although sometimes I do just that. When I have two boxes prepared, or two quarts if the fruit comes in large baskets, I put that on to cook and while it is cooking, get another two quarts prepared. The small quantity is usually ready for bottling by the time the next lot is ready to put on. Because of the small quantity it comes to a boil quickly and cooks in less time. The color is much better and the taste is fresher than that done in large quantity. The small quantity does not require as much heat and neither the kitchen nor the cook get as hot. And finally the smaller saucepans are easier to wash and handle than the large preserving kettle.

LABEL YOUR FRUIT

Each year I think I must be sure to label my jars which go to the cellar and invariably I slip up and some go down unlabelled. You know how it is, you think you are sure to know what they are and anyhow you know exactly where you have put them on the shelves. Maybe your memory is better than mine, but with the passage of time, I can usually manage to forget just where I put what. Time darkens the fruit and after a while you have trouble knowing whether you are getting a bottle of plums, grapes, or black currants. This time it is going to be different and nothing is going to be put away until it is labelled. Labels are quite inexpensive and blank ones are best then you can write your own ticket. That is a job the children can take on and the smaller they are the better they like to do it.

SANDWICH SUGGESTIONS

Mix a jar of devilled ham with a package of cream cheese.

Cucumber slices topped with thinly sliced onions separated into rings.

Peanut butter and marmalade.

Two slices crisp bacon chopped with two hard-cooked eggs.

Chopped ham and onion.

Western Sandwich: Mix one beaten egg, one tablespoon minced onion, 3 tablespoons minced ham. Cook in butter in a frying pan until firm like a pancake. Serve hot.

Mix 1 cup of minced tongue and ¼ cup horse-radish with enough mayonnaise to spread.

BLACK CURRANT-RHUBARB JAM

Wash, stem, and weigh the currants; to two pounds of currants allow a pound of rhubarb cut fine. Put the currants and rhubarb in a kettle and cook until the rhubarb is tender, about 15 minutes. Add three pounds of sugar and cook until the mixture is thick, about fifteen minutes longer. Pour into sterilized bottles and seal.

Regional Conference of Assoc. Country Women To Be Held in Ottawa

A Regional Conference of American and Canadian members and friends of the Associated Country Women of the World is to be held at Ottawa, September 3-10, 1941, with official headquarters at the Chateau Laurier.

The growing practice of having a general theme at such gatherings is being followed at this Conference, the discussion to centre around the subject: "Women's Part in the Defence of the Western Hemisphere", and branching out into such subjects as: Food Problems (Home Production, Conservation and Distribution); Women's Part in Making Democracy Work; Utilizing and Conserving Natural Resources; The Economic Strain of the War; Future Needs of the Youth of Today; Agriculture in the New World; Women at the Peace Table.

The Conference is being arranged by Mrs. Alfred Watt, President of the A.C.W.W., and Women's Institutes and all other rural women's organizations throughout North America are being given a pressing invitation to attend. Mrs. Watt is fully fitted to cope with this great undertaking, having made contacts with friends of the movement who will co-operate with her in her task.

The Ottawa Conference will depend for its values on the exchange of ideas and experiences and friendly contacts, which will contribute to a better understanding between the countries represented.

She came into the police station with a picture in her hand.

"My husband has disappeared," she sobbed.

"Here is his picture. I want you to find him."

The inspector looked up from the photograph.

"Why?" he asked.

Wife: "Silence is golden."

Hubby: "Then you'll never be arrested for hoarding."

300,000 Pounds of Jam For Britain, Preserved In Canadian Kitchens

Voluntary Jam Makers to Relieve Shortage Overseas

A Red Cross Enterprise

Montreal—Three hundred thousand pounds of Canada's fruits will be sent to Britain in the form of jam by the Canadian Red Cross Society during this season, according to the Quebec Provincial Division. Red Cross branches and the Women's Institutes in fruit growing districts all over Canada are organizing canning kitchens to preserve the fruits this summer and fall. Cans, labels and cartons are being supplied by the Red Cross and the W. I. members are giving the fruit, sugar and labor.

This year's undertaking has the support of every province in the Dominion and has been greatly stimulated by the success of last year's jam project when the women of Ontario and British Columbia canned 125,000 pounds of fruit, most of which was shipped overseas for British civilians and military hospitals. Women's church and club groups throughout the country have also offered their co-operation. Col. John A. Cooper of the Canadian Red Cross is national chairman of the Jam Committee. Mrs. Allan Stevenson, Red Cross Nutrition Service, is superintending the project.

In British Columbia and southern Ontario, where the fruit season commences early, strawberries have already been canned in local kitchens by groups of volunteer workers. Great quantities of seasonal fruits will be made into jam or jelly as the summer advances. Red Cross branches outside the fruit belt have offered money or sugar in support of the jam project, and the western provinces will contribute honey instead of fruit.

Great Britain has already signified that all the jam that can be shipped will be greatly in demand, since jam is now rationed at one-half pound per month.

Valuable Rembrandt Etching Lost at Sea

One of the rarest Rembrandt etchings has been lost to the National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne. The ship on which it was being brought to Australia has been sunk by enemy action. The etching, Rembrandt's largest, was a fourth state of "The Three Crosses" the study of Christ crucified between the two thieves. It was bought in England in October for £680 sterling with Felton Bequest funds on the recommendation of Sir Lionel Lindsay.

BEAUTY

— By Helen Jameson —
(Mme Qui Vive)

TREATMENT OF DRY SKIN

It's a toss-up as to which type of complexion makes a woman maddest, the kind that is excessively oily, shines like a good deed in a naughty world, or the one that is as flaky as pie crust. There is a good deal of wailing going on, so much that one wonders sometimes if any complexion really qualifies.

In the winter season, oiliness abates somewhat, but no season is favorable to a dry skin. Hot winds and sunlight make the dry surface feel drawn, winter weather rumples it. Fighting such a condition is an all-year job. She who worries because her facial coat seems bent on self-destruction had better get to the root of the matter, which is likely to be a diet deficiency, not enough fats and oils in the daily menus.

We realize that suggesting better health habits is not what the gentle reader expects of the beauty preacher. Not as interesting as finding solace in a fragrant lotion. That's the trouble. We seek cures, seldom seek causes. Get after the cause and local treatment will be effective, act quickly, bring a sense of satisfaction when one regards that ever-constant companion, the lady in the looking glass.

A little more butter on the bread, lady, more butter on the mashed potatoes, more olive oil in the salad dressing.

One mean quality of the dry skin is its antagonistic attitude toward make-up. Powder goes on in patches, rouge shows up like a house afire. Make-up, to be blended and soft looking, requires a skin surface that is normally moist, slightly filmed with natural oil. The "drys" must use lubricants freely. Powders with any oily base will stick better than those light fluff-stuff preparations that blow away when the first little breezelet comes along. Cream rouge can be managed with better result than the compact.

It is possible that a liquid cosmetic of oily content will work faster and better than a heavy cream in which are incorporated solidifying agents that keep the oily ingredients from penetrating into the skin fabric. There are cosmetics compounded especially for dry skins. Substitutes for them are oil of sweet almonds or olive oil.

Avoid hot water, which is drying. Use just enough soap to get the face clean and no more. Remove make-up with oil, apply soap suds, rinse with tepid water, dry and use oil again. Let it remain on over-

Ten Miles of Carpets

In Designs from a Yorkshire Garden

Ten miles of Axminster carpets in two novel designs have been shipped from Yorkshire to the United States during the past year.

The designs were created from flowers picked by the manufacturer from his own garden in the midst of moorland made familiar to the world by "Wuthering Heights."

The flowers were sketched and incorporated in two patterns named after the home of the manufacturer and that of a fellow director. In design and coloring they were so successful that a group of prominent American carpet manufacturers asked to see them displayed in New York.

During last year, trade with the United States was so good that the makers of these carpets sold more than four times as many Axminster piece goods and Broadloom plain Wilton as in 1939.

The flowers of Yorkshire are now being arranged in other designs. Their success in the United States has already been repeated in Australia and New Zealand.

Women's Institutes' Display and Program At Ottawa Exhibition

Ottawa, July 15 — Women's Institutes of Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec plan an unusual exhibit for Ottawa Exhibition next month which will feature "Women's Opportunities in Wartime" and the slogans "Buy Canadian" and "Buy British". A huge tent one hundred by twenty feet will house the exhibit and daily lectures and a program will be featured.

A strong committe of well known women will be in charge and already they have made complete plans and held many meetings. Mrs. J. K. Kelly, Almonte, is Chairman of the Committee and assisting her are Mrs. C. A. Campbell, Pakenham; Mrs. J. E. Cross, Glen-eagles, Que.; Mrs. Victor Langton, Kemptville; Mrs. Walter Galbraith, Westboro. Miss Mary Clarke, Renfrew and Mrs. W. F. Hayes, Superintendent of the Women's Institute Branch, Toronto, attended the first meeting of the committee and was most enthusiastic about the project.

There will be no competitions in connection with the exhibit but displays of institute work and projects will be shown. Each afternoon there will be a lecture and special exhibit of knitting for the troops with a complete display of all articles needed by army, navy and air force men. Educational programs to be arranged for each afternoon and moving pictures each evening. Monday, first day of the fair, will be devoted to junior activities and junior members will have a part in the daily program.

The whole will be the most complete showing of Institute work ever arranged in Eastern Ontario. night. There's no such thing as giving a dry epidermal surface too much fatty food; it eats it up as a kitten laps up cream.

Never use cold water or friction with ice, both of which may give the complexion a chapped look. Coddle your skin, if you belong to this class of beauty complainers.

And don't forget that a little more fat in the diet will be a great help.

In the Evening Of Life's Day

"If I can put some touches of rosy sunset into the life of every man or woman," said George Macdonald, "then I feel that I have wrought with God."

To make an old person happier, more comfortable, more hopeful—that is to "put the touch of rosy sunset into human life." It is a special privilege of youth to cheer old age. How naturally an old person turns to a young person for sunshine. In some respects, youth and age are as like as sunrise and sunset; and it seems to be God's blessed will and plan that each should turn to the other for the things each lacks.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste

NOTE OF CONGRATULATIONS MUST BE ANSWERED

When you receive a note of congratulation or good wishes, the chapter of politeness isn't closed until you send a note of appreciation of this thoughtful attention.

Your friend's hind words may be to send you good wishes for your birthday, your graduation, your engagement, your marriage, your wedding anniversary, or any other of the milestones of your life. They may be words of congratulation on your new business position or promotion, or on how well you sang at a concert or what a good talk you made at your club meeting, or what fine work you did on a committee, or any other achievement.

It's heart-warming to receive words of approval or best wishes on these occasions from our friends. Courtesy demands that we write to tell these thoughtful friends how happy their words of congratulation or approval have made us.

FIRST MASS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have been invited by a man and his wife, both of whom I know only casually, to attend their son's first Mass, and to attend the reception afterwards.

1. Is it necessary to send him a gift?

2. Is it correct to congratulate him? And is it correct to congratulate his parents? —Anne.

1. No, it is not necessary for you to send a gift, and this would not be expected of you, especially since he and his family are not close friends of yours.

2. You should express sincere words of congratulation to the boy; tell him how honored you were at being invited to this significant occasion. Also congratulate his mother and father for their part in his achievement, and make them feel your understanding of their pride in their son.

DISCONTINUE "JUNIOR"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A grandfather, his son, and his grandson all had the same name.

The grandfather died recently. What form of name should the grandson now use? —P. N.

After the death of the senior John Smith, his son discontinues using Jr. after his name. The son is now John Smith. The grandson becomes John Smith, Jr.

TIP ABOUT R.s.v.p.

Don't use R.s.v.p. when you are writing a note of invitation. This form of request for "Please reply" should never be used except on invitations that are written in the third person or on visiting card invitations.

While, strictly speaking, a wedding announcement does not require an answer, it is friendly and polite to acknowledge this important news with a gracious note of good wishes.

QUEBEC COMMITTEE FOR ORGANIZATION OF AIR CADET UNITS

To Promote Formation of Local Units

Montreal — A Dominion-wide campaign for the enrollment of 25,000 boys between the ages of 12 and 18 in the Air Cadets of Canada was launched for the Province of Quebec, when the nucleus of a Provincial Committee met this week in the Mount Royal Hotel. W. B. Tingle, of Montreal, was named chairman of the Provincial Committee; members of the National Committee attended this Quebec organization meeting.

The National Committee of the Air Cadets has set an immediate objective for an enrollment of 25,000 young men to commence training under the plan by September of this year. A preliminary air training program will be established from which a constant supply of young men may be drawn for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. Several groups have already been organized and are functioning in this province, including a group at the Westmount High School.

"The desirability of providing this organized elementary training in aviation was apparent long before the war", stated W. B. Tingle, provincial chairman. "It has taken the present conflict to focus attention, not only on the desirability, but the necessity of creating such an opportunity for the youth of our country. The organization of the Air Cadets of Canada is the response to the appeal from youth itself for this kind of training."

"During the first year of the war it was impossible to make any appreciable headway. That was the year when that unprecedented undertaking — the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan — was being born and reared, and no diversion from that effort, on which the very safety of the Empire then and still depends, could in those days be justified. While it is still necessary that the maturing of the plan be not hindered or retarded, the Department of National Defence has now seen its way clear to act as godfather to another child — the Air Cadets of Canada."

Royal Canadian Air Force Officers have been appointed to act as liaison between the Service and properly established Air Cadet Units.

Organization

Each Air Cadet Unit will be a distinctly local endeavour, representative of municipal, school or other local authorities, or of the private or industrial life of the community. From such groups Local Committees can form, to be responsible for the financing and administration of a Unit under the guidance of Air Cadet Headquarters. Air Cadet Units will thus be formed wherever there are sufficient boys wishing to secure Air Cadet training, together with sufficient adults desirous of serving on Local Committees or as Officers of Units.

While Units must be self-supporting, it will be the endeavour of the League, through whatever funds are available, to be of assistance to the movement. The Provincial Committee of the League is established to help Local Committees in the organizing of their Units. Due to the difficulties inseparable from the establishment of a new organization, the smallest Unit initially will be one of fifty Senior Air Cadets, but it is hoped that later on an opportunity may be extended to others living in less populous areas. Senior Air Cadets will be those between the ages of 15 and 18, and Units may as they desire enroll Juniors from 12 to 15. No Air Cadet, as such, will be liable to compulsory service in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Those interested in the formation of Air Cadet Units are invited to write to F. S. Auger, Secretary of the Provincial Committee, 1001 Dominion Square Building, Montreal.

TENDERS — will be received for the construction of a new school, No. 7 school district of Chatham, for the School Municipality of Chatham No. 1. Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of the undersigned from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tenders will be received up to 12 noon August 2nd. Lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

PETER PETER, PROCLAIMED BEST SPORT, WANTS TO JOIN R.A.F. TO BEAT HITLER

New York, July 19 — Thirteen-year-old Peter Peter, Jr., who has been proclaimed by the Children's Aid Society here as the young man "exhibiting the highest degree of sportsmanship" during the last year, plans to be an aviator and wants to join the R. A. F.

"Hitler's my idea of a bum sport, wanting to rule the world, and I sure hope the British can lick him," he said. "I think they will!"

Peter Peter, known as The Pumpkin Eater, talked about the war at the New York Medical Centre, where he received an inoculation against poison ivy before going to camp.

He was chosen out of more than 12,000 boys, but was reluctant to discuss his exploits.

"I don't do much the other fellas don't do, but I didn't get in any fights, or anything much." he said. "I lost a couple but I won more than I lost."

"When the gang goes out to take something", he said, "I hang back and try to get them to let it alone . . . Be a good influence. I'm not afraid of the cops because I do nothing wrong."

Peter Peter, Jr.,

His father's name is Peter Peter, too.

"Peter is full of fun and spirit," Bill Kirchner, director of the Centre, stated. "He never gets into any useless arguments of any kind around the club. He will concede an unimportant point rather than let a dispute develop, which is a truly sporting quality."

Two men met on a bridge. Each held out his hand, and they shook and instantly realized that they were utter strangers. Had not one of them been a genuine Hibernian, the situation might have been embarrassing.

"Begorra, that's quare", said Pat. "When we wor so far off that we couldn't see aich other I thot it was you and you thot it was me, and now we're here together it's nayther of us."

HORSE RACES

Class A Trot and Pace

The veteran trotter "Lee Todd", owned by Euclide Ladouceur of St. Andrews East and driven by John Muir, again proved his mettle as a race horse, taking the first two heats in handy fashion.

An unfortunate accident occurred in the third heat when Babe Ruth, driven by Donnie Bradley, making a strong bid for the final stanza, accidentally stepped into the wheel of Lee Todd's bike and unseated the driver. In the mix-up Dixie Direct, veteran of many campaigns, came through to win the heat.

Belle of Lakeland, a beautiful little trotter, owned and driven by Mrs. L. T. Porter, ran a nice race, and, had she been a little more ready, would have made it very interesting for Lee Todd.

Class B

Black Jinnie, owned by Henri Joly and driven by Geo. Nugent, was by far the best in all three heats. While John Dobbie's horses did not prove any match for Black Jinnie, a great deal of credit is due to Mr. Dobbie for his sportsmanship in bringing out his horses knowing they were too long out of training to make any showing.

The unfavorable weather Saturday morning kept several horses in Montreal, their owners believing the races would have to be postponed; these, had they been present, would have made a very attractive program.

SUGGESTS RECOGNITION FOR CENTRES CONTRIBUTING MOST LOYALLY TO NATIONAL EFFORT

Connecticut City Receives Award As Fine Example of Conscientious Industry -- Proves Democracy No Idle Dream

Forty Nationalities In Harmony at Work and Play; Production Undisturbed by Racial or Labor Disputes

"CANADIAN VIEWPOINT"
By Allan McGee

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman

Last Tuesday more than one-third of the 147,000 citizens of Bridgeport, Conn., got together at a Freedom Bell Rally in the amphitheatre to receive an award by the Council for Democracy for their city's outstanding record as a defence production centre and because it is an example to the rest of America of a city which has made democracy work in everyday life.

Back of the fanfare and national recognition lies the story of a remarkable city. For Bridegeport's example is not only important to the country because it is doing a spectacular job of defence production, uninterrupted by strikes. Out of Bridgeport's defence plants are pouring ammunition, firearms, aeroplanes, machine tools and small arms and gun accessories. But Bridgeport takes that job in its stride.

Less spectacular, but of greater long-range importance, is the fact that there in fifteen square miles is concentrated the dramatic proof that the democracy dream can and does work.

For centuries the defeatists and die-hards have been saying, "There'll always be wars; always be trouble between nationalities; different races will always fight". The fact is they won't; they don't.

And Bridgeport is the proof.

According to the last census in the United States, more than 70 per cent of Bridgeport's people are foreign-born, or of foreign-born parentage. Represented are approximately forty different nationalities — an extraordinary diversity of racial and religious backgrounds.

In every walk of life, in banks and among professional groups, in defence industries, in management and labor, these nationalities are represented. By all the traditions of Europe they should be at each other's throats. But Europe is wrong again and Bridgeport is right. Forty nationalities can and do pull together in the same boat for a common goal.

Bridgeport is a strange city.

There is a Scotch bowling green where every player has a thick burr. The Italians play their native game, bocci, in back lots all over town. The local soccer league includes Portugese, Scotch, Swedish and English teams. And the baseball team of the Vought-Sikorsky aircraft plant is a League of Nations with team work added.

We in Canada should have some sort of recognition for the workmen of our country who are doing their part to win this war. One of our national institutions should inaugurate an award of some sort to be presented to the town or city whose work in the national interest is worthy of mention. If the citizens of the United States can honor Bridgeport, why cannot we Canadians show our appreciation of the effort being made by Canadian cities from coast to coast?

Canadians, British and Americans have successfully occupied Iceland. That makes it tough for a native who is trying to learn English.

No one takes a longer range view than the fellow who stocks up on matches because he fears that gasoline rationing may apply to cigarette lighters. —Exchange.

HAPPY CROWD PASS THROUGH TO C.P.R. PICNIC

Three Special Trains Convey Families to Annual Outing

Tender Derailed Near Buckingham

Approximately 3,600 Angus shop employees of the C.P.R., their wives, children and friends, made a mass exodus from Montreal on Saturday on their 18th annual picnic outing at Britannia-on-the-Bay, near Ottawa. The picnic was held under the auspices of the C.P.R. Amateur Ahletic Association.

Though three 16-car special trains were available to accommodate the huge crowds, many attempting to buy tickets at the last minute had to be turned away for lack of accommodation.

Among the day's sports were races for all ages, from toddlers to men over 50. Aquatic sports were foremost in popularity.

The only serious mishap of the day was a hold-up in the return trip, when the tender of the regular eastbound "local" jumped the rails three miles from Buckingham shortly after seven o'clock Saturday evening. No one was injured.

The train stopped almost immediately, officials report, and the crew of the train with the aid of railroad workmen succeeded in placing the tender back on the rails.

Trains following the regular run were held up for more than two hours, and among these was one section of the picnic special returning to Montreal. The section, scheduled to reach Montreal shortly after nine o'clock, did not arrive until after midnight.

TRUCK AND LOAD CAUGHT FIRE ON LAKEFIELD ROAD

A motor truck belonging to Leodas Fournier, butcher, Lachute Mills, loaded with straw, caught fire while travelling towards Lakefield yesterday afternoon and was completely burned. At the rear of Arthur Pollock's property, Hill Head, it was believed that sparks from the exhaust ignited the strawbales; the vehicle and load were soon a mass of flame.

Lachute firemen with their auxiliary truck answered a call to the scene, but arrived too late to save any portion of the truck or contents. It was stated they could have given little assistance anyway, as there was no water supply nearby.

Insurance was held on the truck, for which the owner had purchased a new tire, costing $50, the same day.

HAWKESBURY MAN SAVES TWO LIVES IN OTTAWA RIVER

Two Small Boys Brought Safely to Shore

Edward Frett, 24, a resident of Hawkesbury, made a spectacular rescue in the Ottawa River on Tuesday.

Real Lalonde, 12, and Yvon Deschamps, 11, broke the padlock on a rowboat belonging to the latter's father and were paddling around in the Ottawa River at the top of the fast water known as the Long Sault rapids when the craft was sucked into the current. The boat struck a rock in the middle of the rapids and turned over. Lalonde could swim a little and managed to get his companion, a non-swimmer, onto the overturned boat. As the craft went down the rapids he saw that it would no longer support them both and dropped into the water, hanging onto the chain.

As the boat swept past the end of a pier Lalonde struck the pier violently and was knocked unconscious. Frett, who was swimming nearby, saw the plight of the youngsters and swam to shore, jumped into his own boat and took after the runaway craft. He succeeded in getting Lalonde and then went out after the boat again and brought Deschamps to land.

He then practised artificial respiration on Lalonde and after 20 minutes revived him.

Mock Warfare Staged on Fair Grounds

INSIGHT INTO WORKINGS OF MODERN ARMY; INFANTRY, MECHANIZED UNITS SHOW SKILL

Commentator Explains Tactics; Military Bands And Speakers Heard

Judged on the basis of its attendance, Friday night's free show at Lachute Fair Grounds was one of the most successful of the season's unscheduled events — thousands of residents having witnessed the two-hour military demonstration and discovered that a modern army moves by speedier means than on its stomach . . . The gastronomic factor came in evidence too, for among the 50-odd pieces of fast-moving equipment was a mobile kitchen, in which cooks are equipped to provide mass-meals for the troops while actually in motion.

Other equipment demonstrated in this display included a Bren-gun or universal carrier, artillery trucks with ammunition wagons and Howitzers, a variety of motor transports for machine-gun crews, staff and general purposes, besides a medical transport complete with operating table, a mobile machine shop, a canteen and a K. of C. army service truck.

These units were put through their paces, while infantry drills were also demonstrated in rifle and bayonet exercises and in physical training routines.

The program was interestingly arranged. It opened with the raising of the Union Jack to the strains of "O Canada", and concluded with "God Save the King". Band music, and recruiting talks through a loudspeaker system, interspersed the more exciting entertainment — in a showman-like presentation which spectators never suspected but which served its end in commanding their attention throughout.

Lt. Col. McKay, of the Royal 22nd, a French-Canadian regiment, took the salute; the march past was staged by several component units — in order, the Jeanne Mance Regt., Sherbrooke Fusiliers, Black Watch-Pipe Band (Montreal), Argenteuil Veterans, Lachute Boy Scouts, and Sgt. W. Black's bandsmen of Military District No. 4.

Speakers during the intermission were — Lt. Col. McKay, Mayor H. Lamarche, Pro-Mayor F. S. McGibbon, Jas. W. McGibbon, M.P., and Rev. Father Bouchard, of Brownsburg. Several N.C.O.'s and soldiers from the ranks were interviewed by a senior officer before the microphone — all testifying, with obvious sincerity, to their enthusiasm for army life and the benefits derived from military training.

Among the most interesting drills carried out by these troops was the work of an artillery convoy which, in short order, brought up two guns and an ordnance wagon behind motor artillery trucks, placed their Howitzers, loaded and fired them, promptly packing up and withdrawing on order. A similar action was shown by machine-gun crews in three special trucks. The guns were quickly unloaded, assembled and the cartridge belt inserted ready for the command to fire — this procedure taking 35 seconds, and executed with equal rapidity in the dismantling, reloading and re-embarking of the convoy.

The mechanized manoeuvres showed the high quality of war material and the ability of troops to exact every possible advantage from their equipment. Without doubt our armoured trucks and gun carriers are solidly built and extraordinarily mobile. Those who drove them knew how to exploit the quality of their equipment, every man was in his place, knowing perfectly what he had to do.

It was explained by the commentators, in both French and English, that these manoeuvres exemplify a standard of training achieved by recruits in a period from nine months to two years.

An "act" supervised by Sgt. Maj. Palascio showed the fine effect of brief infantry training. His first demonstration showed the slovenly response of new recruits on parade, as compared with his second turn, in which a few weeks' training had effected clock-work precision in the platoon obeying his commands.

The finale, showing the use of flares, incendiaries and a smoke screen, was perhaps the most spectacular of these presentations.

Watchman Investigates A Life-Saving Enterprise In Voluntary War Work

SMALL TOWN SERVICE CLUB HELPS RED CROSS IN MAJOR UNDERTAKING

Doctors, Nurses and Plain-Clothes Volunteers Form Home-Front Unit

— T. D. Titman, Asst. Editor —

A department of voluntary war work in Canada — a major effort to assist Britain's wartime medical services — was brought to our attention recently in Ontario, where we visited the Red Cross voluntary blood donor clinic in connection with the Hamilton Academy of Medicine.

Red Cross activities in Quebec are identified largely with the work of women, which is efficiently organized and extends to every community of importance on the provincial map. But in the voluntary blood service, centralized at Toronto, one finds an active contribution from the menfolk in civilian life — thousands of them, everyday citizens, having enrolled to step forward periodically and give their blood; these supplies ultimately are shipped overseas for transfusions, to save lives among the casualties in His Majesty's Forces and civilians wounded in bombing attacks . . . It is not as simple as that, of course; the service is a complex organization — from the enrolment and examination of volunteers, through a routine of rigid technique, scientific treatment of the blood, packing of the serum in powdered form, and transmitting it to the distributing centres in Great Britain. Involved in this procedure are many volunteer workers — the Red Cross, executives, doctors, nurses — apart from the actual blood donors, including factory hands, business and professional men.

The blood service, as stated, functions from a central organization. But the source of our information, the Ontario town of Dundas, will aptly illustrate the part played by everyday Canadians in this enterprise. The Dundas Lions Club, incidentally, was the first service group to round up a community blood donors' roll, and from this centre of 6,000 population 140 volunteer donors are called to the Hamilton clinic from time to time to "do their bit." It was through the initiative of a fellow editor, Gordon Anslow, of the Dundas Star, that the Lions embarked on this local effort — the club in Dundas numbering 26 members, with a fine record of achievement to their credit. A large percentage of the blood donors are factory hands, whose employers collaborate whole-heartedly, making no time deductions from workers when called to the clinic. Transportation of the men to and from Hamilton, and all the local organization work, is undertaken by voluntary helpers in this Dundas branch of the enterprise.

Coming closer to the hub of this activity, we were escorted by our confrere, Mr. Anslow, to the clinic at the Academy of Medicine Building, Hamilton General Hospital. Here we were conducted by Dr. J. D. Tyrell through the examining rooms, to the "operating" room and the laboratory. Dr. Tyrell, we learned, was one of the many city physicians who give voluntary attendance. The Hamilton clinics, held two mornings a week, handle 40 subjects an hour, or 200 weekly. In the informal operating room we saw white-uniformed nurses, carefully supervised by attending physicians, dealing with the blood donors at six tables simultaneously. These nurses, we learned also, were graduates in their profession, giving free service to the cause . . . And behind the smooth running machine we gathered something of the detailed organization for which the Academy's staff secretary, Miss Douglass McRobbie, holds cheerful responsibility. The Hamilton blood service is in charge of Dr. G. H. McGee, and is subsidiary to the Toronto laboratories at the Connaught Foundation.

Service Station Issues "V for Victory" Stickers

The Watchman Press has just filled a printing order for gummed automobile stickers bearing the legend: "V for Victory — Lachute, Que." As these signs travel the countryside, they will impress the fact that Lachute is thoroughly victory-conscious and is lending every support to that end . . . This order was executed for the Jas. Duncan Service Station, where the stickers may be obtained for the contribution of a nickel, a dime, or even a quarter for the Spitfire Fund. Mr. Duncan states he will be glad to turn over such donations to the fund committee.

DROWNED IN SWIFT WATER AT CALUMET

Man Slips from Boom of International Paper Co. and Disappears

'Accidental' Is Verdict of Coroner's Jury

The death of Dollard Lamoureux, who was drowned at Calumet when he fell into 40 feet of fast running water from a boom, was pronounced accidental by a jury empanelled Saturday night by Dr. A. R. Coté of Brownsburg, acting district coroner.

At the inquest, held in the Catholic presbytery at Calumet, it was learned that young Lamoureux, 21, of Calumet, had been swimming on Friday afternoon in the river above the town. As he and five companions walked home along the International Paper Company boom, one and one-half miles upstream, he slipped in during some frollicking, and never reappeared.

His companions attempted to dive for him, but failed. The body was recovered on Saturday afternoon. Detective Henri Pinard, of Montreal, and Traffic Officer H. Jones, of Grenville, investigated.

MANY MISHAPS ON HIGHWAYS, ONE IS FATAL

35-Year-Old Indian from Oka Reservation Dies In Sunday Accident

Two Youngsters Are Critically Injured

Indian Resident Killed On Highway at Oka

Struck by an automobile on the highway between Oka and St. Placide at 9.30 o'clock Sunday night, Francis Bonspille, 35-year-old resident of the Indian reservation at Oka, was killed, and a companion, Solomon Etienne, 23, badly shaken up and bruised. According to police, the two men were walking along the highway at the time of the accident. The driver of the car stopped and went to their assistance.

Youngster Suffers Critical Head Injuries

James Edward Underhill, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Underhill, is in a critical condition, with head injuries and concussion, at the Montreal Neurological Institute where he was taken Sunday afternoon after being struck by a car near his home on Brownsburg Road. At the last report, the youngster was still unconscious.

The child was with his sister picking choke cherries at the side of the road. The children went to cross the road; the girl, seeing an approaching car, turned back, but the little boy ran directly into the path of the automobile, driven by W. H. Brady, of Montreal.

Chi'd Struck at St. Philippe

Struck by a car Friday afternoon when she tried to cross the highway in front of her home, Loisette Prevost, two and a half years of age, of St. Philippe, was taken to Ste. Justine Hospital, Montreal, in a critical condition, suffering from concussion and head injuries.

The driver of the car, according to the report, was Gabriel Valois, of this town.

Truck Overturned on Louisa Route

The Dalesville-Louisa road, much travelled on week-ends by summer visitors, was obstructed for a short time when a Troy Laundry truck, returning towards Dalesville, overturned late Saturday afternoon.

The driver, meeting an approaching car on a narrow curve, turned out on a high shoulder and the truck fell sideways across the road. The driver jumped clear from the vehicle, which had no side-doors, but his foot was pinned beneath the truck as it fell.

The approaching motorist, W. Scott, of Montreal, raised the vehicle sufficiently to release the man's foot, and with the help of neighbors the truck was restored to an upright position. The driver was brought to a doctor for medical attention.

A COINCIDENCE FROM OVERSEAS

Corpl. Finds Magazine From Home Town, in Recreation Hut

"Today we received some magazines from one of the Auxiliary Services. I was glancing through them and happened to notice a MacLean's with your name on the address label. I tore the sticker off and am enclosing it in this letter" . . .

Thus wrote Corporal W. R. (Bob) Miller from Somewhere-in-England, to Mr. Fred Roberts, of this town. It is a coincidence that, of the thousands of magazines handed in from Canadian homes to the war service organizations, this one from Lachute should be perused across the Atlantic by a fellow townsman.

Corpl. Miller adds, "I thought I would write to express the appreciation of all the boys who get these magazines." The letter is written on stationery from a Knights of Columbus army hut.

MILITARY VEIN AT DANCE FOR QUEEN'S FUND

Officers on Manoeuvres As Guests, Entire Theme Is Patriotic

Military Bandsmen Provide Music

On Friday evening ladies of the Lachute Golf Club, under the presidency of Mrs. Leonard Ayers, sponsored a successful patriotic dance, the proceeds of which amounted to approximately $225, to be donated to the Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims.

The club-house was attractively decorated and Her Majesty's portrait hung above the huge fireplace.

Officers who were in charge of manoeuvres at the Exhibition Grounds the same evening, were guests of the Club, while music was supplied by Sgt. Black and some of his bandsmen from Military District No. 4, Montreal.

Announcement was made of the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Milnes, and after singing "Happy Birthday to You", congratulations were expressed by their numerous friends.

A red, white and blue ribbon in of form of a V for Victory, was pinned on each person as they were admitted. Many stayed at the close to join in the singing of war songs.

A blanket, donated by Ayers Limited, was raffled and won by Mrs. Geo. Muir, while gladiolus blooms given by Messrs. T. Milnes and T. Iddon, were auctioned to augment the funds in this worthy cause.

Thanks are due to all who assisted in the success of this event.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MUST BE PAID IN ADVANCE FOR COMING ISSUE

Final Notice to Tardy Subscribers

Readers whose subscriptions have not been paid in advance before publication day next week, will receive no further issues of The Watchman . . . It will be their privilege, of course, to re-order and prepay a year's subscription; but to avoid removal of their name from the list and missing future editions, those to whom this notice applies are urged to renew their subscriptions before next week — at $2. a year in Canada and $2.50 in the United States.

SMALL-TOWN SERVICE CLUB HELPS RED CROSS IN MAJOR UNDERTAKING

Our visit to the clinic ended at the laboratory, where blood contributions are assembled in their sealed, sterile containers for prompt shipment to Toronto. We were shown specimens of the finished product, which is in the form of blood serum reduced to a solid state, resembling powdered milk in its color and texture. It was interesting to learn that, although the blood is "typed" in its four classfications during the collection process, it is manufactured into a "universal serum" by laboratory treatment. "Raw" blood can be transfused only between subjects similar in type, but this new packaged product, dissolved in sterile water, can be transmitted promptly to any sufferer, whether of type 1, 2, 3 or 4. Blood analysis of the patient is thus dispensed with, and vital moments are saved in the final phase of this life-saving process.

The Watchman's observations are supplemented by the following description from a Red Cross leaflet on the blood donor service:

An Opportunity to Serve

This Service affords an excellent personal opportunity to men between the ages of 21 to 50 to be of service to their King and Country by supplying, at occasional intervals, 400 c.c. of blood (about 5/7th of a pint) to be used for Serum Transfusion purposes.

The last Great War was the greatest experiment in Blood Transfusion that has ever been made. Many lives of men badly wounded were saved.

Research workers, however, have discovered that by removing the Red Blood Cells, leaving only the serum, the latter, after drying, can be placed in sealed containers and kept indefinitely, and used in the treatment of "Shock" and other conditions. It is for the preparation of dried Human Serum that the Red Cross conducts this Voluntary Blood Donor Service.

Formerly, even under the best conditions, blood, unfortunately, could not be kept safely for more than ten days.

The serum will be distributed in accordance with the suggestions of a sub committee of the National Research Council of Canada. The funds for processing the serum are supplied by the Department of Pensions and National Health, and the Department of National Defence will have first call on all the dried serum prepared.

The Red Cross has been asked to enlist sufficient donors and to arrange clinics to provide 100,000 voluntary donations. The more there are, the less frequent will be the occasion for donating. It takes the blood of five donors to be sufficient for the treatment of one wounded man.

Procedure

The procedure is painless, and with men in good health between the ages of 21 to 50, there is practically no possibility of any ill effect. A local anaesthetic is given, and the arm simply punctured by a needle. The procedure takes only about fifteen minutes and donors are able to return to their work after a short interval.

To prevent the serum from being too fatty, donors are asked to eat nothing containing fat before attending clinic; this includes butter, eggs, cream, fat meat, etc.

The Red Cross Society has a fleet of cars supplied by voluntary workers to pick up donors from any given area and have them returned in about one hour's time. Donors are called not oftener than once in every eight weeks. In England 100,000 people are donating one pint of blood per month; the amount the Red Cross is asking for is just five-sevenths the quantity, in a period of at least eight weeks. Each donor's blood is examined and classified.

A Donor's Enrolment Book is forwarded to volunteers for recording of blood donations. Also, a specially designed lapel button is given the donor after the third donation of blood.

Lightning Kills Young Farmer Near Hawkes'by

Bolt Travels Along Steel Clothesline into Kitchen

Hawkesbury, July 26 — Raymond Raoul Duval, 18-year-old resident of Caledonia Township, was killed by lightning yesterday.

Duval, accompanied by his brother-in-law, Arthur Page, for whom he was working at the time, was walking from the barn to the house, a distance of about 100 feet, under a steel clothes line.

The bolt which killed him travelled along the line into the kitchen, stunning Mrs. Page and demolishing the opposite wall.

Page was stunned by the bolt and suffered severe shock. He said that all he saw was a "ball of fire".

Dr. H. H. Kirby, district coroner, decided an inquest was unnecessary.

A hen and 14 chicks, six feet from the two men, were killed.

At Alexendria, Ont., the barn of John Alexander MacDonald was burned to the ground. A house and granary beside the barn were saved.

WHY DO WE SPEAK OF THE "LYNCH LAW?"

In the early days of the United States, Virginia State was governed by one Charles Lynch who gained notoriety by his harsh administration of justice. Thus 'Lynch Law' came to be synonymous with justice that was not tempered with mercy — with mob rule, in fact.

Netherlands Colonies Buy Battle Aircraft

34 Bombers, 77 Fighters Bought by Dutch Colonists to Help Free Holland

Thirty-four bombers, all Dutch manned, and 77 fighters are the result to date of the aircraft drive in Netherlands colonies to help Britain's war effort. Of the total received from the drive, £1,200,000, or more than ten per cent, has come from Queen Wilhelmina's subjects overseas.

Netherland's East Indies sent £1,000,000 of it, nearly all in dollar exchange. In Batavia, on the anniversary of the invasion of Holland by the Nazis, the people gave one third of their wages. A bootslack there, Kitstoko by name, allotted a daily contribution from his earnings. Even the prisoners gave up their pocket money.

The native people of Palembangsche Bovenlanden (South Sumatra) gathered 41,000 florins. In five months these people sent 3 Spitfires into battle and gave 15,000 florins towards a bomber.

In U. S. A. a show of 14 paintings by Van Gogh netted $18,000.

Suriname (Dutch Guinea) sent £5,000. In Curacao off the Mosquito Coast, the Ladies' Spitfire Committee collected 40,000 florins: the whole colony 400,000. Aruba native folk put 6,000 florins together.

All of them have given freely of their money, asking one thing only, that these avengers of the rape of Holland shall bear names like The Flying Dutchman, Middleburg I and II, Tapanoeli and — Rotterdam.

Largest Potato Farm

Sends to Fighting Forces Millions of Packets of Crisps

London — Two English villages, whose names are recorded in William the Conqueror's Domesday Book, today supply Britain's fighting forces with millions of packets of potato crisps.

They come from 20,000 tons of potatoes, grown on the world's largest potato farm and producing about 125,000,000 packets of "crisps" a year. It is the biggest purely agricultural estate in England, covering an area 7½ miles long by 4½ miles wide of the best Lincolnshire heath and fenland. It is served by a light railway, with 30 miles of track, 120 trucks and 5 Diesel engines, and it takes in the whole of the village of Nocton and most of Dunston.

All the potatoes from the estate, and the output of 80 other farms, are turned into "crisps" in ten factories distributed throughout Great Britain. There are two other factories in Australia, one at Sydney and the other at Melbourne. The English and Scottish factories use 40,000 tons of potatoes a year to produce 5,000,000 packets of "crisps" a week. They supply Britain's civil population as well as Service canteens and troopships.

A special variety of potato, the Muizen, was imported from the Netherlands and this strain, now quite acclimatised to Britain, still gives the best results.

Air Space Makes Efficient Insulator

Wise Builder Takes Advantage of Economic Protection

Cheapest building product available, handed to builders on a silver platter, is air. Thoroughly sealed, between interior and exterior walls of moisture proof insulating board, the air space is worth a quarter of an inch of insulating material and adds nothing to the cost.

Studies of insulation have demonstrated that one good method of ensuring weather protection to every wood frame house is to make sure that the space between the studs in the frame is clear of obstruction and that the air space is sealed and divided into fairly small units. If the space between the studs is filled the value of the free air space is thrown away and there is the possibility of moisture collecting in the filling material unless it is sealed on the inner side with an efficient vapor-seal material.

It is now an accepted practice by modern builders to provide double insulation through lining studs on both sides, inner and outer, with an efficient insulating board. The air space between is thus scientifically sealed. The inner insulation itself performs three jobs — serving, first, as a base for plaster, second, as an insulator and, third, stopping passage of moisture from warm interior air into the wall. For this triple-job a vapor-seal type of insulation such as asphalt-laminated insul-board lath, is required.

The outer insulation, too, can perform more than one job. Over the wood sheathing it is necessary to have an insulator to keep cold air out, asphalt-laminated wood fibre insul-board being the most efficient. At the same time it can provide fire resistant weather surfacing and improved appearance in one product in the form of insulated sidings.

Suicide Verdict Given In St. Janvier Case

St. Janvier, July 27 — A verdict of suicide was returned by District Coroner J. R. Brais, M.D., of St. Jerome, today at an inquest into the death of Arthur Belisle, 62, whose body was found hanging in his cabin on the outskirts of the village this morning. Provincial Det.-Sgt. R. Danis investigated.

Abyssinia to Alberdeen With A 6-Cent Stamp

London — In April Britain's Postmaster General inaugurated the Airgraph service from the fighting forces in the Middle East to England. It was the first postal service of its kind in the world. By mid-June more than 250,000 letters had been transmitted by Airgraph, and the average time of transmission was nine days. Letters are written on special forms taking from 150 to 200 words. They are photographed in miniature, enlarged on arrival, and sent through the ordinary post.

Before this service was introduced these letters from soldiers, airmen and sailors in the Middle East were taking three or more months to get home. In a few weeks, when the tons of essential machinery have been shipped and delivered in the Middle East, mothers, wives and sweethearts of the fighting forces will be enabled to transmit letters to their men in the field with the same astonishing rapidity.

As surprising as this technical achievement by a nation engaged in a war on many fronts is the fact that the cost of the service compares favourably with ordinary postal charges.

It costs 2½d. to send a letter from one side of London to the other: it costs only 3d. to send an Airgraph letter from the heart of the African desert to Aberdeen.

Relief Office to Close At Hawkesbury, Ont.

Hawkesbury — The town council has decided that its relief administration office here will be closed subject to approval from the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs.

There has been a large reduction in the number of citizens on relief and council made the decision at its meeting last week. Two weeks notice of dismissal has been given to Conrad Dubois, relief administrator, and Rene Dumont, relief clerk.

A gallon of gas saved here and there will help to keep the ration cards away. If every Canadian will take this appeal to heart, there should be no need for gas rationing.

The nervous young officer, newly assigned to his regiment, was drilling his men and gave the order "Quick March." They marched and kept on marching as the officer thought desperately for a countermanding order, without success.

Suddenly, the sergeant-major who was standing by his side, spoke:

"Wouldn't you like to say 'Good-bye' to them, sir, before they disappear?"

Two actors who were jealous of each other met. They exchanged frigid bows.

"How are you getting along?" asked one.

"Pretty well," replied the other. "Still keeping alive."

The first man eyed his rival steadily for a few seconds and then asked, casually: "What's your motive?"

PHOSPHATE PIRACY ON ISLE OF NAURU

The German sea raiders who recently shelled the island of Nauru doubtless derived much satisfaction from the devastation wrought, for prior to the war of 1914-18 it was a German possession and has since been under the joint mandate of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand. The unique value of this South Pacific island is represented by its immense phosphate deposits which lie among its corral pinnacles. It is a real treasure island for Australia and New Zealand, being at present their exclusive source of this most important fertilizer which has enriched their soils during the past twenty years and is now recognized as indispensable to the maintenance of the pasture lands and output of dairy produce in those countries.

The acquisition of Nauru by Britain occurred at a time when the "Anzacs" were just beginning to discover that phosphate was the remedy for the depletion of their soils and the consequent decrease in their productive capacity. With superphosphate, prepared from the rich raw material of the Nauru deposits, the soils were rejuvenated, and production reached a new high peak. At enormous cost the most modern equipment and facilities for mining and loading the phosphate expeditiously were installed among the coral reefs of Nauru, these being completed in 1930.

By means of a huge cantilever with two steel-truss arms of 200 feet in length a vessel lying outside the reef could be loaded with 10,000 tons of phosphate in a day, the material pouring into the hold at the rate of 1,000 tons an hour. The full extent of the damage done by the Nazi raiders has not been ascertained, but the cantilever proved an irresistable target, and the buildings, electric railways and belt-conveyors were not spared by the ruthless attackers. The result is a serious blow to the farmers of the Antipodes, who realize more than ever before the importance of their phosphate supply.

NEW CROPS FOR OLD — MINT AND MUSKRATS

Two striking examples of resourcefulness were encountered recently on farms in south-western Ontario. A farmer of Polish origin is growing 30 acres of peppermint and has already installed equipment for distillation of the oil. Next year the crop will extend to 85 acres, and a second still will be constructed. His father was a veterinary surgeon who used to grow and distill peppermint for his own medicines. That's how the son got the notion. The crop, for which a fertilizer with high potash content was applied, was nicely up at the beginning of May. Four crops will be taken before the field is plowed again.

The other story is of a man whose farm grew bumper crops of corn and alfalfa prior to 1929 and had been tile-drained at great cost. Then Lake St. Clair overflowed in a tremendous flood which submerged the farm land. Efforts to reclaim the land from the waters proved unavailing, so this man decided it was futile to buck nature and he would co-operate with her. The once fertile farm is now a swamp, growing bullrushes instead of alfalfa, but stocked with muskrats and wild ducks. The revenue from this back-to-nature area is represented by sales of pelts and the fees which hunters pay for the privilege of shooting at wildfowl. Thus was disaster turned to profit.

Besides the swamp area of 1200 acres, there are others that escaped the flood and are still producing wheat, corn, alfalfa and onions. Here about 25 tons of fertilizer are used annually, which gives some idea of the extent of the regular farming operations.

A Challenge to Our Way of Living

While there are some in Canada who would have preferred some system of rationing gasoline and oil rather than the voluntary plan which has been launched, most Canadians will agree that the Oil Controller's move sets a splendid objective for a democratic people.

If motor car drivers of this country cut down the consumption of motor fuel by 50%, of their own free will, the achievement will stand out as a triumph for our way of living.

Human nature will be a prime factor in the success of the country's undertaking, however. Many of us are prone to sit back and wait for the other man to take the initiative. We require leadership within the ranks, somebody to set the example, before we all commence to do the same thing together.

In this campaign to conserve gasoline and oil for the sake of the bombers overseas, an opportunity is presented to the humblest of our citizens to become a leader. If a man leaves his motor car in his garage for four days a week and proudly announces the fact to his friends in the community, he will be rendering a service to his country of no mean value.

Don't Take Chances !

Drowning accidents command news-space in the papers each season, even though war topics now claim the leading headlines. It is incumbent upon all editors, all teachers and youth leaders, to reiterate the safety theme in swimming and related lines of recreation. Therefore, to the vacation hazards mentioned in this column last week, we add the perennial warning to careless bathers . . .

Here are a few practical hints: Do not swim too soon after eating, nor in isolated places. Do not swim or dive into unknown waters without first checking conditions. Do not use a boat or canoe unless you can swim sufficiently well or unless you have an expert with you. Never change places in the boat or canoe. Do not take chances, nor call for help unless actually in trouble. Do not remain in an air-current out of the water, if troubled with a cold, sinus or ear trouble. Do not remain in the water if you feel cramps of the extremities and of the stomach, or if you have an unnecessary fear of the water. Never over-estimate your ability in and on the water. Remember that unprotected river docks, swimming holes or quarries are unsafe places.

They Came . . . They Saw

Prime motive behind the large attendance at a military demonstration in Lachute last Friday, was — we believe — a genuine desire to learn the trend of modern "warfare on wheels"; which was also the avowed purpose of this display, namely to show the goods . . . Every day the public reads of strategies and manoeuvres of the machanized militia. Few had ever studied its tactics, except on paper . . . Friday the public came to see, and to hear; and they were not disappointed.

The Old Fashioned Sunday

The articles in the magazine "Think" are designed to make people think, and one in the June issue does just that. It is "The Old Fashioned Sunday" by Phillip Curtiss. It is not a religious plea, as some might expect, but a study of the effect on the race of making Sunday the same as every other day in the week.

"The chief social value of the old fashioned Sunday lay in its utter difference from all other days" says Mr. Curtiss. "Sooner or later, however, the world may be brought to realize that the old fashioned Sunday was not a mere rustic survival, but was a social check-valve developed by centuries of human experience, and that a nervous, high-strung society which has suddenly abolished it will rue its loss . . .

"Out of the untidy welter of Sunday papers, cigarette smoke, the chatter of golf scores, and the smell of locker room, the hurried, tardy engagements, the rushed undigested meals, and the long nervous driving on crowded highways that make up a modern week-end, I find myself, with greater and greater longing, looking back to the peace and dignity of the old fashioned Sunday."

You've got something there, Brother.

Write the Boys

The Canadian troops in Britain are not idle. They are kept fit all the time by the most intense training. Few spare moments come to the troops over there except when on welcome leave. Their movements are restricted, too, and there are not so many welcome days now when the mails come in. During the uncertainty it is the privilege of ourselves to write often to the boys over there. They want the news of home, those home details that are not in the newspapers. Nothing is too small to tell them in letters and the more mail they get the less is the monotony of drilling and waiting felt. The day the mail is distributed is one of the soldier's happy days. They want lots of letters. The lack of information from home is the bugbear of the boys and they are interested in all that happens in the home district. We must keep writing to the units overseas, and they more than ever appreciate cigarettes from Canada.

Famous R. A. F. Legs !

Two of the most famous pairs of legs in Britain are in the Royal Air Force. One of them belong to Don Finlay, probably the best 120 yd. hurdler Britain has ever produced. A pilot of a Hurricane fighter, he has already accounted for a considerable number of Nazi bombers.

Winner of many races in different parts of the world, Don's most famous race, strangely enough, was one he lost. In the final of the Olympic Games, he made a bad start and stood last until almost home. Then he spurted and was declared fourth, an American being placed third.

Later, the American saw a film of the race, noticed he had really got in only fourth place and Finlay third, and sportingly told the judges. They altered their decision in favour of Finlay.

Famous Legless !

The other is an artificial pair, worn by Squadron-Leader Douglas Bader, whose achievements are fast becoming legendary. As British Leader of an All-Canadian squadron, Bader's story is particularly interesting to us.

One of the best all-round athletes in the R. A. F. Bader crashed when trying out a new fighter plane in 1931. So badly was he injured that both legs had to be amputated. This would have meant "finis" to most men, but to Duggie Bader it meant simply starting all over again.

Mastering the use of his "new" legs and becoming an expert tennis player, when war broke out in September '39, Bader haunted R. A. F. headquarters until they took him back again.

He has had one slight crash fighting the Huns, but his sole personal injury was — a pair of bent legs, which an artificer straightened out so quickly that Bader was back in the air in 30 minutes.

Movies Play Role in Army Instruction

Motion picture films, both of an educational nature of interest to the whole Army and of a technical type to assist the training of men in specific arms of the service, are being used in increasing numbers in the Canadian Army. Sound projectors have been supplied to almost every training establishment in Canada. Plans are underway to have them in the remaining centres shortly.

In addition to standard films showing the various phases of military training, a special picture is being prepared under the supervision of the Director of Military Training to show German methods of warfare, and will be shown to every class of recruits during their training period.

District Officers Commanding are submitting to Headquarters lists of officers and other ranks with experience in the film industry as actors, writers, cameramen, film editors, soundmen and animators for compilation of a list of personnel suitable for employment in future production of training films.

FINNISH BOY SCOUTS CARRY ON, WITH THE ROTARY CLUB'S SUPPORT

Finland is one of the few remaining European countries in which the Boy Scouts are still carrying on, Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin having abolished the movement in all areas coming under their control. A Rotary International News Letter item from Helsinki mentions a contribution of 20,000 Finnish marks by the Helsinki Rotary Club to the Boy Scouts of that city.

WHERE ARE THE OLD WAR RIFLES?

Where are the old rifles, those which turned the Huns in the Great War and thus became partly wrecked in the struggle? Everybody seems to have forgotten them. They have been retired, pensioned, so to speak, left to a sedentary life in armories and other odd storage places throughout the country.

But the government, like the elephant, has a long memory. It knew where they were. Rifles are hard to get, delivery is slow — so these veterans have been called on for further service. They are now in an Ontario town — thousands of them — undergoing renovation. Fifty men are in the plant doing nothing else but turning old rifles into new.

If they could only speak, what tales these battered veterans could tell. They were in every conflict in the Great War, in every advance, in every retreat. They witnessed magnificent courage, much tragedy, some comedy. Such is life to a rifle on active service. Some of them carry stories on their faces, the initials of the men who held them, the initials of the girls they left behind them. Sometimes they carry the names of battles. The grim notches filed in the barrels are records, between the lines, of foes slain in battle.

Some are worn beyond hope of repair, but they have salvage value. It is always possible to take some parts from one and some from another, also worn and now useless, and by adding the parts together and supplying some which can be made in the plant, provide a new rifle — at least as serviceable as if it were.

What parts wear out first ? It may be the handguards. Quite often it is the barrel or the forends — the wooden section under the back of the barrel. The barrels pass through some rather trying experiences. Sometimes, as is natural in a gun which has served in War it has failed to receive proper attention. It may be left out, partly buried, and for some time uncleaned. The inner surface of the barrel starts to corrode. The rifling is destroyed and it is no longer an effective weapon.

There is another peculier "disease" of gun barrels. It is called "ringing". It is produced when the gun is fired while there is something lodged inside the barrel. When that happens, the bullet may not leave the gun. It becomes thoroughly packed against obstruction and the tremendous volume of the gas, exerting its pressure upon the bullet and the barrel, expands the inside of the barrel and a small area in close proximity to the obstruction is enlarged. If this happened in a shotgun it would be "good-night" to the gun, conceivably also to the man who held it, but a rifle barrel has tremendous resisting power. When it has passed through an experience of this kind, it will never be quite the same again !

When these rifles are gone over there are, of course, some which are scrap, save only for the salvage left in them. Some have a value only as drill rifles that are not to be fired. They serve the purpose of giving trainees, in the first days of their military experience, the "feel" of having a rifle in their hands. There are others which may be termed emergency rifles. They would be all right for the Home Guard, but they would not be turned over to regular troops as service rifles for prolonged use. Then there are the others, and a good many of them, which for all practical purposes, after renovation, are as good as new and quite able to take the "gaff" for another campaign — even if Hitler lasted for longer than seems, at the moment, probable.

There are very few gunsmiths in Canada — that is, men who make a regular business of it. Of course there is always the handyman who can fix anything, but the foreman in this plant knows his guns because guns have been his life. Many of the men who do the work are farm boys, handy fellows with their hands, accustomed to fixing up things at home. They like their work. "It is rather nice", said one chap with a blush, "to take these old guns apart and patch them up and feel them growing young again under your hands until they become almost as good as when they left the factory".

Before it leaves the plant, each rifle is tested. The real test is the firing test, for a good rifle must function smoothly in every part and shoot straight.

"Relax, Mr. Pillsbury. I've already given you a five for this hole!"

"Blackouts" aren't so new. Over 400 years ago, when the German city of Frankfurt was threatened with attack, the civic authorities ordered all upper windows to be darkened to hide the city from the enemy.

More than 1,000,000 panes of glass were required to make good the damage done during the defence of Madrid in the Spanish Civil War.

Interesting Facts for Man-at-the-Wheel

The "man at the wheel" can cut down drastically on the use of gasoline by keeping the speed of the vehicle down to reasonable proportions, speed tests have demonstrated. Every bit of gasoline he conserves helps to release fuel for our tanks and armored cars, our fighting planes and our bombers.

Actually, the experts say, it takes a third more gasoline to go a mile at 60 miles an hour than at 40. The Carter Carburetor Corporation in the United States, which has distributors in Canada, has recently issued figures showing that the normal economy of a car capable of giving 25 miles per (American) gallon at 20 miles per hour, will vary under different driving conditions.

Constant speed tests prove that the motorist will get 25 miles per gallon at 20 miles per hour, as compared with 22.9 miles per gallon at 40 miles and 10 miles per gallon at 70 miles an hour, according to the figures distributed by the corporation.

Tests have shown also that it requires approximately 10 additional horsepower to increase the speed of a six-cylinder car about three miles when it is running at 70 miles per hour.

THE RUBAIYAT OF A TENDERFOOT

—By Walter Jackson,
Lost River, Que.

O Magic Month that Poets call July !
'Tis then that Humble Folks like You and I
Decide to seek the Kingdom of the Wilds,
Jump in their Cars and travel there on high.

One Sultry night I phoned my bosom Pal —
A simple Soul whose Christian Name is Al,
Suggesting that we take a Camping Trip.
"Shall we ?" said I , and he replied "We shall".

An Inventory of the Stuff we took
If written down, would fill a good sized Book,
From Tent to Tinware, Groceries and Guns,
And I decided Al would be the Cook.

We piled the Junk into my ancient Bus
And said good-bye to Guy and George and Gus,
Each vowing we would send some Postal Cards
No Kings of old have ever travelled thus.

What happened next I hardly dare repeat.
We had a Flat upon a Busy Street
And spent an Hour lifting out the Stuff
To get the Jack from underneath the Seat.

While taking off the Tire, Al and I
Remembered Things we had forgot to buy,
So there commenced another Shopping Tour
For Sugar, Bacon, Coffee, and a Pie.
[canned,

Equipped with Grub condensed and dried and
Of distant Mountains 'neath the Setting Sun,
We set our Faces t'ords the Promised Land
Stepped on the Gas, and went to beat the Band.

Out in the Land where Roads give way to Grass,
We bumped along a lonely Mountain Pass
When suddenly the Ancient Bus conked out.
It seems that Al forgot to buy the Gas.

We looked about both spellbound and enthralled.
It was a lovely Place where we were stalled,
So pushed the Car down to the water's Edge
Where Bullfrogs croaked, and Loons and Herons [called.

Mere Words will not describe the Beauty there —
A Rocky Shore, Majestic Pine Trees rare,
So I commanded Al to pitch the Tent
While I inhaled large Gulps of Country Air.

The Sun sank low. The hour was getting late.
The Whippoorwill was calling to his Mate
But Al was slow in finding Firewood
So I chopped up a Farmer's Rustic Gate.

We piled the Pieces in the gathering Murk
Of coming Night where unseen Dangers lurk
Then found that we had not a single Match
And Al remarked his Lighter wouldn't work.

We ate in Darkness on that silent Spot.
A Lantern was one Thing we had forgot.
Poor Al consumed a Bullrush by mistake,
Thinking it was a Hot-Dog, but t'was not.

The Time arrived when we should go to Bed.
The Moon arose, and by the Light it shed
The Scene appeared more beauteous than before,
But Al remarked he wished that he were dead.

It seems that when he went to pitch the Tent
He wondered where those Poles and Tent Pegs went
And then remebered they'd been left behind
In the old Bin that used to hold Cement.

Grabbing our Blankets from their Cardboard Box
We sought a friendly Cave among the Rocks
And snuggled down upon the Sandy Floor.
Removing first our Boots and then our Socks.

Strange, is it not, when One desires Sleep
And would enwrap Himself in Slumber deep
That all that He can do is lie awake
And think of little Things that bite and creep.

An Hour later Al let out a Yell —
"O Holy Moses ! What's that funny Smell?"
T'was then we sensed that we were not alone
Something besides Ourselves was there as well.

A Pair of Skunks — there was at least a Pair —
Wasted their Fragrance on the Midnight Air,
And by the way they acted in the Cave
It seems they did not like our presence there.

Consigning Skunks to Regions of the Damned
We grabbed our Blankets up and promptly
Scrammed,
But Al was so upset and so un-nerved
It took me Half an Hour to get him calmed.

The waning Moon looked down upon the Sight
Of us reclining through the Endless Night
Upon a grassy Bank beneath the Stars
All wet with Dew and shivering with Fright.

Dawn came at last, and each with aching Head
We sought the Car to get some Cheese and Bread
When Al discovered we had spent the Night
Upon a verdant Poison Ivy Bed.

With heavy Hearts we changed into our Suits
Of Khaki Duck and heavy Hunting Boots
And sought the Comfort of the rising Sun
While eating Bread and Dehydrated Fruits.

Strange tho' it seems, the Breakfast tasted flat,
And Al remarked, just like a Diplomat:
"We could have spent the Night inside the Car."
But somehow we had never thought of that.

A Local Farmer chanced upon the Scene,
With Features grim and sinister and mean.
He charged us each a Dollar on the Spot,
And sold us half a Can of Gasoline.

He was a Salesman, business like and sleek.
His Wife, he said, took Boarders by the Week.
The Farm, it seems, was just a Mile Away —
A lovely Spot beside a rushing Creek.

River-Front Community Loses One of Oldest and Best Known Citizens

THE LATE SIMON WHELEHAN

Cushing W. — One of the oldest and best-known residents of this locality passed away on Saturday morning last, when Simon Whelehan was called to the reward of a long and useful life.

One of four sons of the late Edward Whelehan and his wife Mary Dunn, pioneer residents of this county, Simon Whelehan was born on October 11th, 1859, on the old farm, and within a stone's throw of where he passed away.

His early years were spent in this neighborhood. While still quite young he was employed on work in connection with the rebuilding of the Stonefield and Grece's Point Locks, on the Carillon and Grenville canal. The story of his life at this period would furnish a colorful chapter for one of Jack London's novels.

In 1886 he removed to Lachine, and was employed for a number of years with the Dominion Steel Works, and in 1906 he entered the employ of Molsons Ltd., in Montreal, where he remained until three years ago; he was then retired with an ample pension in recognition of his services.

He was possessed of a sound constitution, and in appearance and activity gave the impression of being much younger than his real age. It was therefore, a surprise to everyone when his health suddenly failed a year ago, and in spite of all that medical skill and loving care could do he passed away and "the places that knew him will know him no more."

Gifted with a remarkable memory, his mind was a veritable store house of happenings and events along the Ottawa River in days gone by, and his keen sense of humour and native Irish wit enabled him to recount them in such a way that his company was sought and enjoyed by old and young.

The funeral took place on Monday morning from his late residence to the parish church at St. Philippe, and in spite of the wet weather and the early hour, was very largely attended. The service was conducted by the parish priest, the Rev. Fr. Bazinet, and interment was made in the adjoining cemetery. Besides many floral offerings from the friends and family, wreaths were sent by Molsons Ltd., the Sun Life, and the C.P.R. offices, Montreal.

The bearers were his three nephews, Joseph M. Hart, of Concord, N.H., Thomas Whelehan, of Montreal, and W. H. Robert, of St. Philippe, and his three sons-in-law, the Messrs. Douglas Hartley, J. O'Brien, and Chas. Kelly, of Montreal.

Messrs. C. L. Terrow, and W. G. Cole, of Montreal, president and vice-president, respectfully, of the Canadian Railroad Historical Association, were present on behalf of the association, to which Mr. Whelehan belonged and of which his keen memory and knowledge of railroad history made him a valued member.

Also present from a distance were — Mr. O. M. Keatley, of Ottawa, Messrs. J. Hart, Robert Hart and R. L. Saltmarsh, and Misses Irene Hart and Margaret Saltmarsh, of Concord, N.H., besides a number from Montreal.

Mr. Whelehan was first married in 1885 to Miss Mamie Byrne, of Grenville; she died in 1904 and he later married Mrs. Emma Innes, of Valleyfield, formerly of Grenville. She also passed away, in 1917, and in June of 1921 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Finnegan of Valleyfield, who survives him. He is also survived by two sons, Mr. J. L. Whelehan of Crockett, Cal., and E. T. Whelehan, of Montreal; and four daughters, Mrs. Douglas Hartley, Mrs. Chas. Kelly, Mrs. J. O'Brien and Miss K. Whelehan, of Montreal; also by his brother, Mr. Edward Whelehan, of Cushing, and three sisters, Mrs. Annie Funcheon, of St. Philippe, Miss Margaret Whelehan, of Cushing, and Mrs. Elizabeth Hart, of Concord, N.H. Another sister, Mrs. Rebecca Saltmarsh, also of Concord, passed away a few months ago.

FIRST CANADIAN FORT IS REBUILT

Nova Scotia went back more than 300 years for the plans which were used in reconstructing the Port Royal Habitation, which housed the first Europeans to settle in America north of the Gulf of Mexico — and which was recently opened to the public by the Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources. That famous fort, where Champlain instituted the Order of the Good Time, stands today as it did when hardy French explorers made it their headquarters in 1606.

The rambling log buildings, as much like the original as human ingenuity could make them, are the product of Nova Scotia craftsmen. Hand-hewn beams and floor boards are pegged into position; wrought-iron hinges hold the doors and solid shutters in place, and other hand-worked iron is used for bars on the windows and decorative work.

If it is possible for one place to be "more historic" than another, this one can be described only in superlatives. DeMonts and Champlain arrived in Annapolis Basin in 1604 and named it Port Royal. The Fort built in the following year was the scene of battle after battle between the French and English and had actually changed hands eight times by 1710 when it was finally captured by a strong expedition of New England troops from Boston. The name was changed to Annapolis Royal in honor of Queen Anne who then occupied the English throne.

The reconstruction of the ancient habitation at Annapolis Royal — to give it its modern name — has attracted wide attention in Canada and the United States. Many individuals and organizations have donated old records, furnishings and other articles to lend to the authenticity of this famous site, 20 miles from Digby by Dominion Atlantic Railway. Digby is the western waterway entrance to Nova Scotia, connection with Saint John, N.B., being maintained by the S.S. Princess Helene. Other famous military structures still standing at Annapolis Royal include the ramparts of Fort Anne. The park, 28 acres in extent, includes a later French fort completed in 1707 and captured in 1710, and the officers' quarters erected by the British a few years later. Layout shows the Port Royal Habitation; the well house, and a view showing the care with which the hand-hewn beams were put in place.

5,000 Food Parcels A Week at the Montreal Red Cross Headquarters

For Australian Prisoners of War in the Far East

Montreal — The packing of 5,000 food parcels per week for Australian prisoners of war in the Far East commenced this week at Montreal under the supervision of the Quebec Provincial Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The work is being done under a national project operated under a committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society of which Norman C. Urquhart, Toronto, is chairman. G. W. Nicholson, of Toronto, is vice-chairman of the committee. The packing is being done at the request of the Australian Red Cross in Melbourne, which is paying the cost of the work.

Actual work of packing the boxes is being done by members of five Women's organizations in Montreal. These are the Nursing Auxiliary and Transport Sections of the Canadian Red Cross Corps, Junior League of Montreal, Nurses' Association and the Ligue de la Jeunesse Feminine.

The parcels, each of which weighs 11 pounds with the carton, contain soap, prunes, cheese, pepper and salt, sugar, jam or marmalade, canned salmon, canned sardines, raisins, tea, corned beef, canned butter, powdered milk, lunch meat, a box of biscuits and an 8 ounce chocolate bar.

Present to see the first parcel come off the assembly line at the Montreal packing plant Monday morning were Norman C. Urquhart, Toronto, chairman of the Prisoners of War Parcels Committee of Canada; G. W. Nicholson, Toronto vice chairman; Lt.-Col. Wh. Leggatt, M.C., president of the Quebec Provincial Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society, Maj. D. J. Corrigall, D.S.O., M.C. commissioner of the Quebec Provincial Division, and representatives from the War Works Committee at Red Cross House, Montreal.

An appeal for large quantities of knitted mitts and gloves for the Canadian armed forces was made this week by officials of the War Works Committee of Red Cross House in Montreal to all volunteer workers of the Quebec Provincial Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

According to a despatch received from overseas by the national office of the Canadian Red Cross Society there is an urgent need to build up the supply of these mitts and gloves for all branches of the Canadian Armed Forces, and all branches of the Quebec Provincial Division are being asked to forward these knitted articles to Red Cross House as rapidly as possible.

They will be needed within a few months time, and the War Works Committee is anxious that the Canadion forces both in England and Canada be supplied with these mitts and gloves as soon as cooler weather makes them necessary.

REV. ROSBOROUGH SPEAKER, SUNDAY EVENING "FIRESIDE"

At Regular Gathering of Brownsburg Employees

Brownsburg —

Speaking on the topic "Happiness", Rev. W. B. Rosborough of Lachute was guest speaker at the July 13 "Fireside". Pointing out that happiness was not easily defined yet much to be desired, Rev. Rosborough went on to state that happiness was not found in externals, nor was it found by seeking for it, but rather by a sane healthy optimism about everything linked with the faithful performance of one's duty and unselfish service toward others, coupled with a personal religious philosophy.

Replacing the usual "Fireside" program the Brownsburg Band presented a well planned band concert in the Recreation Hall on Sunday evening July 20 before a capacity crowd that thoroughly enjoyed the efforts of this vastly improved group of aggressive young musicians capably directed by Bandmaster Reg Titcombe.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday August 3rd.

The Golden Text is from Zephaniah 3: 17. "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" (Psalm 27: 1).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Every trial of our faith in God makes us stronger. The more difficult seems the material condition to be overcome by Spirit, the stronger should be our faith and the purer our love. The Apostle John says: "There is no fear in Love, but perfect Love casteth out fear . . . He that feareth is not made perfect in Love." Here is a definite and inspired proclamation of Christian Science." (Page 410).

SPITFIRE CANVASS NOW IN BROWNSB'G; REPORT HEADWAY

A Final Effort Should Put County Campaign Over the Top

It is hoped to announce, in a very early issue of The Watchman, that the Argenteuil Spitfire Fund has gone "over the top". Justification for this hope is seen in the assurance of a leading Brownsburg citizen that the canvass is now well under way in his community — the last district of the county to stage an organized drive.

Pressure of work in the industrial plants, and a succession of appeals for war service groups, account largely for Brownsburg's tardy participation. But in that patriotic community should any citizens, on approach, feel their good will and charity have been "overworked" — now is their time to realize that the very survival of this county — of its communities, its industries and its people — as free thinking, self-governing units, depends upon one thing, namely the triumph of Britain and her Allies in this conflict.

But it needs no drastic realization of this kind to spur the patriotism of our county. Brownsburg has proved it, before; Argenteuil has proved it. Canadian soldiers, serving the Empire in uniform, deserve the support of civilians at home — in furnishing the tools of war, the comforts and services to preserve their morale.

In this final rally for Argenteuil's own particular effort, the county Spitfire, our people will confirm, with all speed, the reputation they have won in previous efforts.

Carelessness Seen in Addressing Mail for Soldiers Overseas

18,259 Wrongly Addressed Pieces Received Overseas in June Alone

Because mail for our fighting men is still being carelessly addressed, extra duties are being thrown upon members of Canada's forces overseas. Hon. William P. Mulock, K.C., M.P., Postmaster General, stated that during June alone, 18,259 pieces of mail passed through the directory section of the Canadian Postal Corps overseas, which necessitated five soldiers of the Canadian Postal Corps being kept from more important military duties in order to search rolls and military records to supply the information so carelessly omitted. Five men could do much necessary work elsewhere instead of having to try supplying the information missing from these letters through neglect on the part of the senders.

The 18,259 pieces of mail requiring special directory service overseas were not in all cases mailed from Canada, some having been posted in the United Kingdom. While sometimes the soldier himself may be at fault in failing to notify his correspondents of the particulars of his present address, or to notify his post orderly of his change of address when leaving his unit, in a great number of cases the error is the result of the omission of important details by the correspondent.

Through observing a few simple rules for addressing military mail, co-operation can be given which will result in these soldiers being released for more important duties, and will spare hundreds of troops overseas the anxiety and disappointment caused when their mail is delayed.

Mail for troops overseas should be addressed as follows: Regimental number, rank and name, name and details of unit (i.e. company, section, squadron, battery, holding unit, etc.), name of regiment or branch of the service, Canadian Army Overseas.

Mail for delivery in Canada should be addressed with the usual complete particulars, but with the exception that the words "Canadian Army Overseas" must be omitted and instead the name of the place where the soldier's unit is stationed should always be given. All mail should be fully addressed, properly prepaid and a return address given in the upper left hand corner.

Four-in-One Clubs

The experience of the first few days of Canada's campaign to save gasoline and oil has brought out one fact — that the average motor car driver in the cities does not find it easy to carry out the four-men-to-a-car idea. It is surprising how many motorists who have made remarks something like this during the past week, "I'd be willing to join with three other men in my neighborhood in the use of one of our cars instead of four, if I knew three men in my district who went to work and back at the same time as I do."

Quick to realize the situation, the Toronto Daily Star made an appeal in its news columns for the formation of four-in-one clubs and undertook to publish the names and addresses of those willing to co-operate. The newspaper made an arrangement with the Toronto offices of the Ontario Motor League to receive the names of volunteers to assist in the formation of the clubs. Under this arrangement, it was hoped that the whole plan would be expedited.

The idea seems sound and may be feasible in other centres across Canada. At least it is recommended to the careful consideration of other newspapers.

HINTS FOR HOMEBODIES

THEY STILL CAN LAUGH

If we were ever inclined to think the English people a bit pleghmatic we would have to change our minds after listening to Winston Churchill's speech to the London County Council. It was as lively and enthusiastic as an American Service Club luncheon at its liveliest. They really seemed to be enjoying life as their laughter was hearty and gay and frequent. What a wonderful power Churchill has. He does something to us every time we hear him. It is not only what he says but the very timbre of his voice heartens us. He does not minimise difficulties but nevertheless he gives courage. It is a most amazing thing that he has been able to refrain from saying, I told you so. It is hardly human. All these years he has been telling what was going to happen and no one would listen. Now that is has all happened, and he is trying to lead the world out of the mess it is in, he never looks back and reminds the world he was right, as a lesser man would do.

SHIP AHOY

The junior member of the family has acquired a sail-boat, A Snipe to be exact. The conversation abounds with mainsails, jibs, halliards, and rigging in general. The sitting room floor is piled knee-deep with old copies of Yachting, Rudder, and Blue Peter. Women looking for household hints in the women's magazines have nothing on the men looking for sailing hints in their journals. The cellar has been cluttered with wet sails spread out to dry. Then when they dried they were laid out on the sitting room floor to measure sail area. The boom reposed in the dining room for days, supported on the backs of two chairs. It had to be scraped, sanded and varnished. This was done below. It was too wet so it had to be brought up to dry. Then when it was varnished again had to come to the dining room to hasten drying. When the anchor appeared in the sitting room that was the last straw. When I said that the life-belts and the anchor had to be stowed someplace else, believe me, I got a dirty look. Then I was told I bought chintz with sail-boats and anchors and so what was the matter with having the real thing. A sail-boat seems to be a good thing to keep a boy busy because when they are not actually sailing they have to spend the rest of the time working on the boat. I have jumped up a half-dozen times while writing this to see if the boat is in sight because I don't know of anything more beautiful than a sail-boat. Our neighbor adds to the scenery by anchoring his yacht directly below and I can see it riding at anchor as I write.

DO WITHOUT PORK

Are you doing your part in observing the bacon and ham restrictions? Most of us have wished audibly there was something we could do. Well here it is and it is the first thing the Government has asked us to do without. People's reactions are queer. I ventured at a meeting to remind the members of the request for the lessened use of pork products. One woman said the Government should have told us we had to do it, not just asked us. Yet we are fighting to keep clear of dictatorship. Another woman said she knew of at least one carload of bacon that arrived in England unfit for use and if the Canadian farmers and the packers could not make bacon that could stand being exported she saw no reason why she should do without. Another said that the little bit of bacon she used would make no difference and she was going to have it when she wanted it. Yet these women consider themselves patriotic and they each do considerable work for War purposes, doing actual work and contributing liberally to all funds. One of the nicest touches was when the members of the New Glasgow Rotary Club, who had been at the convention at Saint Andrews, came back fired with zeal and enthusiasm and intending to impress this move on their fellow members found the piece de resistance at their luncheon was Baked Ham. That was 'the ham what am' and there will be no more.

SMALL POTATOES

New potatoes are good any way you have them but they are at their superlative best when browned in the frying pan. Pick out the small potatoes, the smaller the better, boil them, then brown in a little hot fat. I like to use bacon fat but we cannot have that these days. If you are having a vegetable dinner, make a cheese sauce for your potatoes, it gives added flavor and acts in lieu of gravy. When you want something a bit decorative, chop some parsley, or better cut it with the scissors as that is the quickest way; roll the potatoes in melted butter then in the chopped parsley.

COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD

2 cups cottage cheese, 2 tablespoons minced onions, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 medium sized cucumber.

Peel the cucumber, remove the seed and dice. Mix cucumber, cheese, onion and salt, lightly with a fork. Serve on lettuce with either French or Boiled Dressing.

SHE'S MAD AT ADOLF SO GETS FARM JOB

Miss Marjorie Hern, Huntsville, Ont., 16 and red-headed, is very peeved with Adolf Hitler. She's just so peeved that she's on her way to Grimsby to pick sour cherries. This high school girl has never worked on a farm, but this is her way of aiding Canada's war effort. By doing the orchard job, she may make it possible for some husky young male cherry-picker to join the army.

"I can't join myself, but if cherry-picking will help, I'm glad to do it," is Miss Hern's report. For months she has been saving her weekly allowance, and when her parents gave the go-ahead sign, she left for Toronto and the office of the Ontario government's farm service force. Quick action in the form of the Grimsby job was the result.

DETROIT MAN WANTS TO BE REMINDED TO MAKE THIRD DONATION TO QUEEN'S FUND

Subscriptions Received From Over 40 States

United States subscriptions to the Queen's Canadian Fund have now been received from over forty States. Hardly a gift arrives without a warmhearted expression of sympathy for the Canadian war effort and for the civilians of Britain.

A gift of $220, her second donation, comes from Mrs. Alice T. Miner, of Heart's Delight Farm, Chazy, N.Y. In the letter of acknowledgment for her first gift, a reference was made to the charming name of Mrs. Miner's home, and she writes in response:

"It is my earnest desire to aid in every way I can the British people who have suffered so much from the hand of our enemy. Please accept the enclosed as my donation to the Queen's Canadian Fund.

"If you like the name of Heart's Delight Farm, which was chosen by Mr. Miner, because he loved his old home, I can say quite as much for the title "The Queen's Canadian Fund," for everybody loves the Queen."

Publisher's Gift

Directors of the Fund have just acknowledged a gift of $110.00 from a Texas newspaper publisher, who chose this way of repaying hospitality he had received in Canada. The publisher, Mr. Bernard Hanks, of Abilene, Texas, had been on a salmon-fishing trip with Mr. P. M. Fox of Montreal. Before he left for home, he told Mr. Fox that he wished to make his contribution to the war effort of the Dominion, and he chose the Queen's Canadian Fund of which he had read in Canadian newspapers.

Equally evident sympathy is shown by a Detroit man who wrote enclosing a second contribution to the Fund, suggesting that he be reminded later on to send a third subscription.

Here is his letter:

"The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims deserves every praise and I am happy to be able to send to the fund another small subscription. I enclose money order for five dollars and hope at some later date to be able to send you some more.

"Five dollars is not very much, I know, and when one thinks of you folks over in Canada doing so much, working so hard and so cheerfully, the five dollars does seem small indeed. However, there are so many ways for one to parcel out his mite that such a deserving fund as yours can be overlooked.

"If you care to, you may refresh my memory at some later date regarding the fund. We all need reminding about these things, at times, more's the pity."

By the same mail, another contribution of $5.00 was received from a woman in Texas, "with my prayers and admiration for a great people."

The Queen's Canadian Fund operates in all parts of the United Kingdom through the Lord Mayor's National Air Raid Distress Fund.

Send Contributions to the Royal Trust Company, 105 St. James Street, Montreal, or any of its branches. Every dollar subscribed goes forward without deduction.

WHY DO WE SPEAK OF CHINA-WARE?

Until the end of the 18th Century, all white crockery came from China, where a particular form of white clay existed, hence the name "chinaware". About 1790 a suitable white clay was discovered in England, and porcelain factories soon set to work to make things similar to those which came from the East. The name "china" remained.

BEAUTY

— By Helen Jameson — (Mme Qui Vive)

EAT WISELY FOR YOUR COMPLEXION'S SAKE

There are girls, and many women too, who run themselves ragged, who expend energy for sixteen or eighteen hours a day and give scarcely a thought to the important business of refueling their digestive motors. When they look spent and pale they resort to the rouge pad. And that does not help much. A tired, undernourished woman might as well throw her cosmetics out of the window; they haven't any material upon which to work.

Putting one's mind on food, getting the proper kind, eating at regular hours, is one way of putting glints in the eyes, roses in the cheeks, lightness in the footies and lots of silky hair on the head. Every cell of the body must have nourishment, every little pink finger nail, every tiny nerve. Many beauty ills are the direct result of a diet deficiency. Some specialists believe that baldness among men may be due to wrong eating habits. Dentists urge patients whose teeth are impaired to include more calcium in the diet. Victims of acne are urged to eat more fruits and vegetables for the mineral salts and vitamins they contain.

A healthly appetite is a blessing. There are pale, jittery women whose teeth go on edge at the sight of a lamb chop, poor dears.

How the boss of the domestic work goes about ordering groceries and how she prepares food have much to do with the progress of the good looks program.

She is familiar with the balanced diet, knows what it is all about. She never combines two or three starchy vegetables at one meal. She is strong for leafy vegetables and green salads that are good for human insides and are aids to the functioning of the internal organs. She sees that the children have plenty of rich milk, which contains almost all the food elements that are needed for well being. Instead of rich pastries for dessert she offers delicious, appealing puddings and custards. She realizes that benefits come through the free use of tomato and orange juice, both of which act favorably upon the complexion.

A special problem is the school girl who is fussy about food, refusing the good things of the table because she nibbles sweets between meals. She is a steady customer at the soda fountain counter. She is susceptible to acne, does not develop normally during growth, is inclined to the temperamental or moody. She got started on the wrong diet foot. A wise, understanding mother can help a child to form correct eating habits. To do that she must, first of all, be an expert cook. Many a youngster refuses to eat because food is not appetizing.

To the older ones: remember, it is no longer fashionable to be thin. The normal figure, slender, neatly curved is the aim of all women.

Vitamins Found In Common Foods

— By Betty Barclay —

The vitamin craze is on. For several thousand years man knew nothing about these little things and yet some of our grandparents lived to be a lot older than most of us expect to be.

But those grandparents did not live as we live. They ate plenty of rough foods. They plucked fruit from the trees, berries from the field, nuts from the bushes and drank large quantities of milk. Perhaps they obtained all the vitamins they needed without thinking or knowing about such a thing as a vitamin. Apparently most of them did. Anyway, they had no vitamin pills to buy.

Have you been told that you need more vitamin A, B, C or G? If so, here are a few common foods that will be glad to aid you without worry and at very little cost. If you have a vitamin deficiency, keep this list before you.

Vitamin A: Butter, broccoli (excellent), carrots, cheese, whole milk, cream, eggs, liver, spinach, squash, water cress and sweet potatoes.

Vitamin B: Bread, string beans, cabbage, celery, corn, cream dates, ice cream, lettuce, milk, lemon juice, oranges, peanut butter, green peas, pork, potatoes, rice, walnuts, oat meal and mutton.

Vitamin C: Green cabbage, cantaloupe, cress, grape fruit, lemon juice, oranges, parsley, green peas, raspberries, tomatoes, water cress, water melon and rutabagas.

Vitamin G: Broccoli, buttermilk, cream, eggs, heart, kidney, liver, milk and beet leaves.

Jellies that "Jell"

By Frances Lee Barton

It's jelly time again. Millions of housewives are making jams and jellies of different flavors as berries and fruits are in season — stocking those tasties that make winter meals so appetizing.

Follow the throng but be sure that your jellies "jell". A recipe like the following assures success to the new jelly maker, or the older one who has tried before and been disappointed:

Red Currant Mint Jelly

5 cups (2½ lbs.) juice; ¾ cup (3 oz.) spearmint leaves and stems, packed; 7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar; ½ bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare juice, crush about 4 pounds fully ripe red currants. Wash spearmint and chop. Add mint and 1 cup water to crushed currants; bring to a boil and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Lorgnette — French name for a dirty look you can hold in your hand.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste

ARE YOU PROUD OF YOUR GUEST ROOM?

Has your guest room a "come-hither" personality? If you are a hostess who is given to hospitality, you will be proud when you show your visitors into the guest room. First it will be charming to look at, and then it will be comfortable to stay in.

It's a traditional and excellent piece of advice that the hostess who really has the comfort of her guests at heart makes a point of spending a night in her own guest room. That'll show her just how pleasant and comfortable a room it is, and how adequately it is equipped to meet a guest's requirements.

Don't jump to the conclusion that I'm going to set forth a list of luxuries for your guest room — these concern only you and your individual budgets. I would, however, like to talk with you about certain details that you may have forgotten to provide.

The first necessity is a comfortable bed, freshly-made of course, with one medium hard and one soft pillow, with sufficient blankets and with one extra blanket or comfortable on the closet shelf.

The bureau drawers should be empty, and each drawer should be lined with fresh white paper. (Luxury note: sometimes padded satin or silk linings are placed in the lower drawers). In one of the small drawers the thoughtful hostess puts a tray with plain and safety pins of various sizes, and perhaps a compact box of sewing equipment. On the top of the bureau may be one or two decorative items (a pair of lamps, for instance), but mainly the top should be left uncluttered, to provide space for the guest's own toilet articles.

Ideally, there is a chaise longue or small sofa, with a throw and soft cushions, comfortable for the afternoon nap. If possible, too, a dressing-table (easily and inexpensively home-made), with a really good light. The long mirror, for space-saving, may be on the closet door. A comfortable arm-chair is a must, and beside it either a small table and lamp or a floor lamp. Then there must be at least one more chair, a straight chair, or a pert little slipper chair. It's nice to have a desk too, but a table is a good substitute, equipped with some writing material.

On the bedside table should be placed a shaded light, at good reading-height, a book or two, one or two current magazines, a carafe on a tray, with a small glass, and — if your guest smokes — a cigarette box (with fresh cigarettes), matches, an ash-tray.

No family oddities stored in the closet, please! With a minimum of budget you can equip your closet so that it will be an artistic delight. Use colorful shelf-edging, and supply a generous allotment of various types of hangers, shoe-trees, skirt and trouser-hangers, hat-stands. You might like to follow the custom of some hostesses and leave in the closet an inexpensive terry cloth (washable) bath-robe and a pair of terry cloth slippers, for the forgetful or unexpected guest.

If the guest room hasn't its individual bath-room, the hostess sets aside, in the family bathroom, a special rack for the guest's towels (bath towels, hand towels, face cloths) and a shelf for the guest's soap dish, drinking glass, and toilet articles. On the tub ledge should be a small scrub-brush or cleaning-cloth for the tub. In the bath-room should be a box of cleaning tissues, a box of powder puffs, a box of absorbent cotton.

Most hostesses keep on hand now a make-up box (any attractive box will serve) with trial sizes of various beauty aids, hand lotion, shaving cream, and so forth; a comb and inexpensive tooth-brush in a cellophane wrapper; an inexpensive razor.

Other equipment-suggestions: a clock, preferably an alarm clock; a clothes-brush; an electric pad or hot water bottle; a luggage rack; a waste basket; cigarettes, ash-trays, matches. In many guest rooms these days, and especially in those where the beds must be placed so that the light glares in the guest's eyes, we find that the hostess has thoughtfully provided eye-shades!

As the final welcoming touch, put flowers in the room. One or two flowers in a bud vase will show the right spirit.

WHY ARE BRIDESMAIDS DRESSED ALIKE?

This custom had its origin in a desire to bewilder the powers of darkness that were supposed to hover around people. Once upon a time both bride and groom were surrounded by friends dressed exactly like them, so that the evil spirits would not know upon whom to lay their curse!

"Have you any cream for restoring the complexion?" asked the faded spinster.

"Restoring, miss? You mean preserving!" said the assistant heartily. He sold her five dollars' worth!

THEY STILL CAN LAUGH

If we were ever inclined to think the English people a bit pleghmatic we would have to change our minds after listening to Winston Churchill's speech to the London County Council. It was as lively and enthusiastic as an American Service Club luncheon at its liveliest. They really seemed to be enjoying life as their laughter was hearty and gay and frequent. What a wonderful power Churchill has. He does something to us every time we hear him. It is not only what he says but the very timbre of his voice heartens us. He does not minimise difficulties but nevertheless he gives courage. It is a most amazing thing that he has been able to refrain from saying, I told you so. It is hardly human. All these years he has been telling what was going to happen and no one would listen. Now that is has all happened, and he is trying to lead the world out of the mess it is in, he never looks back and reminds the world he was right, as a lesser man would do.

SHIP AHOY

The junior member of the family has acquired a sail-boat, A Snipe to be exact. The conversation abounds with mainsails, jibs, halliards, and rigging in general. The sitting room floor is piled knee-deep with old copies of Yachting, Rudder, and Blue Peter. Women looking for household hints in the women's magazines have nothing on the men looking for sailing hints in their journals. The cellar has been cluttered with wet sails spread out to dry. Then when they dried they were laid out on the sitting room floor to measure sail area. The boom reposed in the dining room for days, supported on the backs of two chairs. It had to be scraped, sanded and varnished. This was done below. It was too wet so it had to be brought up to dry. Then when it was varnished again had to come to the dining room to hasten drying. When the anchor appeared in the sitting room that was the last straw. When I said that the life-belts and the anchor had to be stowed someplace else, believe me, I got a dirty look. Then I was told I bought chintz with sail-boats and anchors and so what was the matter with having the real thing. A sail-boat seems to be a good thing to keep a boy busy because when they are not actually sailing they have to spend the rest of the time working on the boat. I have jumped up a half-dozen times while writing this to see if the boat is in sight because I don't know of anything more beautiful than a sail-boat. Our neighbor adds to the scenery by anchoring his yacht directly below and I can see it riding at anchor as I write.

DO WITHOUT PORK

Are you doing your part in observing the bacon and ham restrictions? Most of us have wished audibly there was something we could do. Well here it is and it is the first thing the Government has asked us to do without. People's reactions are queer. I ventured at a meeting to remind the members of the request for the lessened use of pork products. One woman said the Government should have told us we had to do it, not just asked us. Yet we are fighting to keep clear of dictatorship. Another woman said she knew of at least one carload of bacon that arrived in England unfit for use and if the Canadian farmers and the packers could not make bacon that could stand being exported she saw no reason why she should do without. Another said that the little bit of bacon she used would make no difference and she was going to have it when she wanted it. Yet these women consider themselves patriotic and they each do considerable work for War purposes, doing actual work and contributing liberally to all funds. One of the nicest touches was when the members of the New Glasgow Rotary Club, who had been at the convention at Saint Andrews, came back fired with zeal and enthusiasm and intending to impress this move on their fellow members found the piece de resistance at their luncheon was Baked Ham. That was 'the ham what am' and there will be no more.

SMALL POTATOES

New potatoes are good any way you have them but they are at their superlative best when browned in the frying pan. Pick out the small potatoes, the smaller the better, boil them, then brown in a little hot fat. I like to use bacon fat but we cannot have that these days. If you are having a vegetable dinner, make a cheese sauce for your potatoes, it gives added flavor and acts in lieu of gravy. When you want something a bit decorative, chop some parsley, or better cut it with the scissors as that is the quickest way; roll the potatoes in melted butter then in the chopped parsley.

COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD

2 cups cottage cheese, 2 tablespoons minced onions, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 medium sized cucumber.

Peel the cucumber, remove the seed and dice. Mix cucumber, cheese, onion and salt, lightly with a fork. Serve on lettuce with either French or Boiled Dressing.

SHE'S MAD AT ADOLF SO GETS FARM JOB

Miss Marjorie Hern, Huntsville, Ont., 16 and red-headed, is very peeved with Adolf Hitler. She's just so peeved that she's on her way to Grimsby to pick sour cherries. This high school girl has never worked on a farm, but this is her way of aiding Canada's war effort. By doing the orchard job, she may make it possible for some husky young male cherry-picker to join the army.

"I can't join myself, but if cherry-picking will help, I'm glad to do it," is Miss Hern's report. For months she has been saving her weekly allowance, and when her parents gave the go-ahead sign, she left for Toronto and the office of the Ontario government's farm service force. Quick action in the form of the Grimsby job was the result.

DETROIT MAN WANTS TO BE REMINDED TO MAKE THIRD DONATION TO QUEEN'S FUND

Subscriptions Received From Over 40 States

United States subscriptions to the Queen's Canadian Fund have now been received from over forty States. Hardly a gift arrives without a warmhearted expression of sympathy for the Canadian war effort and for the civilians of Britain.

A gift of $220, her second donation, comes from Mrs. Alice T. Miner, of Heart's Delight Farm, Chazy, N.Y. In the letter of acknowledgment for her first gift, a reference was made to the charming name of Mrs. Miner's home, and she writes in response:

"It is my earnest desire to aid in every way I can the British people who have suffered so much from the hand of our enemy. Please accept the enclosed as my donation to the Queen's Canadian Fund.

"If you like the name of Heart's Delight Farm, which was chosen by Mr. Miner, because he loved his old home, I can say quite as much for the title "The Queen's Canadian Fund," for everybody loves the Queen."

Publisher's Gift

Directors of the Fund have just acknowledged a gift of $110.00 from a Texas newspaper publisher, who chose this way of repaying hospitality he had received in Canada. The publisher, Mr. Bernard Hanks, of Abilene, Texas, had been on a salmon-fishing trip with Mr. P. M. Fox of Montreal. Before he left for home, he told Mr. Fox that he wished to make his contribution to the war effort of the Dominion, and he chose the Queen's Canadian Fund of which he had read in Canadian newspapers.

Equally evident sympathy is shown by a Detroit man who wrote enclosing a second contribution to the Fund, suggesting that he be reminded later on to send a third subscription.

Here is his letter:

"The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims deserves every praise and I am happy to be able to send to the fund another small subscription. I enclose money order for five dollars and hope at some later date to be able to send you some more.

"Five dollars is not very much, I know, and when one thinks of you folks over in Canada doing so much, working so hard and so cheerfully, the five dollars does seem small indeed. However, there are so many ways for one to parcel out his mite that such a deserving fund as yours can be overlooked.

"If you care to, you may refresh my memory at some later date regarding the fund. We all need reminding about these things, at times, more's the pity."

By the same mail, another contribution of $5.00 was received from a woman in Texas, "with my prayers and admiration for a great people."

The Queen's Canadian Fund operates in all parts of the United Kingdom through the Lord Mayor's National Air Raid Distress Fund.

Send Contributions to the Royal Trust Company, 105 St. James Street, Montreal, or any of its branches. Every dollar subscribed goes forward without deduction.

WHY DO WE SPEAK OF CHINA-WARE?

Until the end of the 18th Century, all white crockery came from China, where a particular form of white clay existed, hence the name "chinaware". About 1790 a suitable white clay was discovered in England, and porcelain factories soon set to work to make things similar to those which came from the East. The name "china" remained.

BEAUTY

— By Helen Jameson —
(Mme Qui Vive)

EAT WISELY FOR YOUR COMPLEXION'S SAKE

There are girls, and many women too, who run themselves ragged, who expend energy for sixteen or eighteen hours a day and give scarcely a thought to the important business of refueling their digestive motors. When they look spent and pale they resort to the rouge pad. And that does not help much. A tired, undernourished woman might as well throw her cosmetics out of the window; they haven't any material upon which to work.

Putting one's mind on food, getting the proper kind, eating at regular hours, is one way of putting glints in the eyes, roses in the cheeks, lightness in the footies and lots of silky hair on the head. Every cell of the body must have nourishment, every little pink finger nail, every tiny nerve. Many beauty ills are the direct result of a diet deficiency. Some specialists believe that baldness among men may be due to wrong eating habits. Dentists urge patients whose teeth are impaired to include more calcium in the diet. Victims of acne are urged to eat more fruits and vegetables for the mineral salts and vitamins they contain.

A healthly appetite is a blessing. There are pale, jittery women whose teeth go on edge at the sight of a lamb chop, poor dears.

How the boss of the domestic work goes about ordering groceries and how she prepares food have much to do with the progress of the good looks program.

She is familiar with the balanced diet, knows what it is all about. She never combines two or three starchy vegetables at one meal. She is strong for leafy vegetables and green salads that are good for human insides and are aids to the functioning of the internal organs. She sees that the children have plenty of rich milk, which contains almost all the food elements that are needed for well being. Instead of rich pastries for dessert she offers delicious, appealing puddings and custards. She realizes that benefits come through the free use of tomato and orange juice, both of which act favorably upon the complexion.

A special problem is the school girl who is fussy about food, refusing the good things of the table because she nibbles sweets between meals. She is a steady customer at the soda fountain counter. She is susceptible to acne, does not develop normally during growth, is inclined to the temperamental or moody. She got started on the wrong diet foot. A wise, understanding mother can help a child to form correct eating habits. To do that she must, first of all, be an expert cook. Many a youngster refuses to eat because food is not appetizing.

To the older ones: remember, it is no longer fashionable to be thin. The normal figure, slender, neatly curved is the aim of all women.

Vitamins Found In Common Foods

— By Betty Barclay —

The vitamin craze is on. For several thousand years man knew nothing about these little things and yet some of our grandparents lived to be a lot older than most of us expect to be.

But those grandparents did not live as we live. They ate plenty of rough foods. They plucked fruit from the trees, berries from the field, nuts from the bushes and drank large quantities of milk. Perhaps they obtained all the vitamins they needed without thinking or knowing about such a thing as a vitamin. Apparently most of them did. Anyway, they had no vitamin pills to buy.

Have you been told that you need more vitamin A, B, C or G? If so, here are a few common foods that will be glad to aid you without worry and at very little cost. If you have a vitamin deficiency, keep this list before you.

Vitamin A: Butter, broccoli (excellent), carrots, cheese, whole milk, cream, eggs, liver, spinach, squash, water cress and sweet potatoes.

Vitamin B: Bread, string beans, cabbage, celery, corn, cream dates, ice cream, lettuce, milk, lemon juice, oranges, peanut butter, green peas, pork, potatoes, rice, walnuts, oat meal and mutton.

Vitamin C: Green cabbage, cantaloupe, cress, grape fruit, lemon juice, oranges, parsley, green peas, raspberries, tomatoes, water cress, water melon and rutabagas.

Vitamin G: Broccoli, buttermilk, cream, eggs, heart, kidney, liver, milk and beet leaves.

Jellies that "Jell"

By Frances Lee Barton

It's jelly time again. Millions of housewives are making jams and jellies of different flavors as berries and fruits are in season — stocking those tasties that make winter meals so appetizing.

Follow the throng but be sure that your jellies "jell". A recipe like the following assures success to the new jelly maker, or the older one who has tried before and been disappointed:

Red Currant Mint Jelly

5 cups (2½ lbs.) juice; ¾ cup (3 oz.) spearmint leaves and stems, packed; 7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar; ½ bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare juice, crush about 4 pounds fully ripe red currants. Wash spearmint and chop. Add mint and 1 cup water to crushed currants; bring to a boil and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Lorgnette — French name for a dirty look you can hold in your hand.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste

ARE YOU PROUD OF YOUR GUEST ROOM?

Has your guest room a "come-hither" personality? If you are a hostess who is given to hospitality, you will be proud when you show your visitors into the guest room. First it will be charming to look at, and then it will be comfortable to stay in.

It's a traditional and excellent piece of advice that the hostess who really has the comfort of her guests at heart makes a point of spending a night in her own guest room. That'll show her just how pleasant and comfortable a room it is, and how adequately it is equipped to meet a guest's requirements.

Don't jump to the conclusion that I'm going to set forth a list of luxuries for your guest room — these concern only you and your individual budgets. I would, however, like to talk with you about certain details that you may have forgotten to provide.

The first necessity is a comfortable bed, freshly-made of course, with one medium hard and one soft pillow, with sufficient blankets and with one extra blanket or comfortable on the closet shelf.

The bureau drawers should be empty, and each drawer should be lined with fresh white paper. (Luxury note: sometimes padded satin or silk linings are placed in the lower drawers). In one of the small drawers the thoughtful hostess puts a tray with plain and safety pins of various sizes, and perhaps a compact box of sewing equipment. On the top of the bureau may be one or two decorative items (a pair of lamps, for instance), but mainly the top should be left uncluttered, to provide space for the guest's own toilet articles.

Ideally, there is a chaise longue or small sofa, with a throw and soft cushions, comfortable for the afternoon nap. If possible, too, a dressing-table (easily and inexpensively home-made), with a really good light. The long mirror, for space-saving, may be on the closet door. A comfortable arm-chair is a must, and beside it either a small table and lamp or a floor lamp. Then there must be at least one more chair, a straight chair, or a pert little slipper chair. It's nice to have a desk too, but a table is a good substitute, equipped with some writing material.

On the bedside table should be placed a shaded light, at good reading-height, a book or two, one or two current magazines, a carafe on a tray, with a small glass, and — if your guest smokes — a cigarette box (with fresh cigarettes), matches, an ash-tray.

No family oddities stored in the closet, please ! With a minimum of budget you can equip your closet so that it will be an artistic delight. Use colorful shelf-edging, and supply a generous allotment of various types of hangers, shoe-trees, skirt and trouser-hangers, hat-stands. You might like to follow the custom of some hostesses and leave in the closet an inexpensive terry cloth (washable) bath-robe and a pair of terry cloth slippers, for the forgetful or unexpected guest.

If the guest room hasn't its individual bath-room, the hostess sets aside, in the family bathroom, a special rack for the guest's towels (bath towels, hand towels, face cloths) and a shelf for the guest's soap dish, drinking glass, and toilet articles. On the tub ledge should be a small scrub-brush or cleaning-cloth for the tub. In the bath-room should be a box of cleaning tissues, a box of powder puffs, a box of absorbent cotton.

Most hostesses keep on hand now a make-up box (any attractive box will serve) with trial sizes of various beauty aids, hand lotion, shaving cream, and so forth; a comb and inexpensive tooth-brush in a cellophane wrapper; an inexpensive razor.

Other equipment-suggestions: a clock, preferably an alarm clock; a clothes-brush; an electric pad or hot water bottle; a luggage rack; a waste basket; cigarettes, ash-trays, matches. In many guest rooms these days, and especially in those where the beds must be placed so that the light glares in the guest's eyes, we find that the hostess has thoughtfully provided eye-shades !

As the final welcoming touch, put flowers in the room. One or two flowers in a bud vase will show the right spirit.

WHY ARE BRIDESMAIDS DRESSED ALIKE?

This custom had its origin in a desire to bewilder the powers of darkness that were supposed to hover around people. Once upon a time both bride and groom were surrounded by friends dressed exactly like them, so that the evil spirits would not know upon whom to lay their curse !

"Have you any cream for restoring the complexion?" asked the faded spinster.

"Restoring, miss? You mean preserving !?" said the assistant heartily. He sold her five dollars' worth !

OTTAWA FAIR TO RESEMBLE TENTED CITY

Exhibition Buildings In Use for Military Purposes

When Ottawa Exhibition opens for a six day run on August 18 it promises to be one of the most unusual big time exhibitions ever held in Canada. Never before has a Class A fair attempted to stage its entire show under canvas. Very rightly it is being called the "tented city fair".

Over 75 huge tents, many of them regular circus big tops, will be required for the livestock, agricultural and various other exhibits. All Eastern Canada had to be combed over to get enough canvas. In addition, concessions, midway and commercial exhibits will require at least another 75 tents — enough in all to provide accommodation for a small army.

This will be the unique feature of Ottawa Exhibition this year — something in itself well worth going to Ottawa to see. The directors were forced to resort to tents as regular buildings at Lansdowne Park are being used for military purposes this year.

While first an agricultural and livestock show, the 1941 Ottawa Exhibition will not lack in entertainment features. One of the finest grandstand shows ever brought to Eastern Canada has been secured and there will be a huge midway. A great number of special events has been arranged for including daily concerts by outstanding boys' bands from Ottawa dictrict towns. There will be both afternoon and evening grandstand performances.

Quiz Programs Prove Popular at Brownsb'g

Brownsburg —

It may have been due to the unavoidable absence of their Captain, John Duncan, but regardless of the reason we hope that Stores will again make another appearance on one of our quiz programs to exonerate their defeat at the hands of the Office on the night of July 10. The victors — Theo Agnew, Dot Rankin, Lloyd Bruce and the warbling troubadour Les Wheable, whose vocal efforts contributed to his 100% rating; good work, Les. The vanquished, — F. Kelly, L. Bates, Jean Todd, and Merle Kelly. The judges, — A. J. Quinn, John Connelly and J. M. McKechneay.

At Quiz No. 12 on July 17 Tracers and Metallics provided the keenest competition of any Thursday night brain tussle to date. Throughout the entire six rounds the battle was very close, so close in fact that when scores were compared at the close of the contest by Judges Alex Holden, Smith Johnson and Ron MacKenzie, the Tracer team of Amy Kyle, Allan Gwyn and Howard French were but two points or a fraction of one question behind Metallics despite the 100% standing of Tracer's other colleague, Frances Leeney. The winning team of Wes Freeland, George Coombes, Jack Golphin and Pat Riley, have their knowledge of music to thank for the slight edge in points.

Western Films Are Still Popular

The rip-roaring tales of the old west never seem to lose their appeal for the movie goers of Canada.

Heroes may come and go in the romantic and comedy fields, but the western stars seem to keep on forever. They ride the same horses and kill the same Indians in movie after movie, and the fans lap it up.

Probably the best known of all western stars is Bill Elliott, who plays the part of Wild Bill Hickok in a series of stories built around that western hero. As he started shooting last week on his newest picture, "Roaring Frontiers", Bill Elliott was teamed once more with his pal and companion, Tex Ritter, who will sing three new songs being written especially for the picture.

Ruth Ford will be in the prize in Wild Bill Hickok's newest adventure, and western fans will once more be given a chance to stand up and whistle and cheer as the hero outwits his opponents.

That's what I like about westerns; you never have to worry about who is going to win out in the end !

Lachute C.G.I.T. Girl Describes Typical Day In Summer Camp

Correspondence to The Watchman

I wish that some of the Lachute C.G.I.T. girls had been at camp this summer; how they would have enjoyed it ! The meals were excellent and there was not a dull moment and no time to be lonesome or homesick during the whole camp period. I'll just tell you about an ordinary day . . . In the morning around 8 o'clock our head instructor, Miss Martin, would come up "tent row" ringing a large silver bell, saying "Come on up, girls, lovely morning, get into your bathing suits and go down for a swim." Our swimming instructor blew a whistle when she was ready to go down, then we all raced to see who would get into the water first. The morning dip only lasted for 10 minutes. When we were dressed we had Morning Watch, which we did in our tents. In about half an hour the bell rang for flag raising, when we sang "O Canada" and "In Christ There Is No East or West." We had no sooner finished the last song, than we made a terrific dash for the tables to get a place and to save one for a friend or two — for, some way or other, we were always hungry at meal time.

After breakfast we went up to tidy our tents and to make our beds; the tent that was the cleanest inside and out got "Humpty", a doll made of cloth and stuffed; he looked exactly like Humpty Dumpty himself . . . Next we took Bible study, which we had with our own leader and little groups. Then we had what were known as Interest Groups. There were several kinds of these groups, with one or two leaders to each — Beginners', Swimming, Diving, Games and Folk Dances, Singing, Dramatics, Handicraft, and World Friendship; you were given a choice of whichever one you wanted to be in.

We had an hour for Interest Groups, following which we had dinner. Another mad rush ! Afterwards there was Camp Council — then "Tuck," a period during which the candy store was opened.

Next came Rest Hour; you could read, write or do whatever you wanted, as long as you stayed in your own tent and kept quiet. When Rest Hour was over the bell rang for the swimming. Then we dressed and went down to the Lodge for supper.

After supper there was always some kind of excitement going on — masquerades, camp fire, singsongs, vespers, etc.

At 10 p.m. we went to bed and at 10.30 the "Lights Out" bell rang. Just before the lights were put out, the tent "Mother" and nurse came around with the cooky tin and bade us good night.

This daily program was varied, however; some days we went hiking, other days treasure hunting, etc.

One day during the camp period Mr. Smith, the owner of a large passenger boat, the "Anthemans", would allow the camp to go for a boat trip from Georgeville to Newport in the States (31 miles). The girls paid 50c, while the other passengers paid $1.50.

We were not allowed to get off the boat at Newport. But the Officers could not resist when there were 57 good-looking girls pleading to get off, so we were allowed five minutes on U.S.A. soil.

The last full day of camp we had topsy-turvy day, in which we "bossed" the leaders and put on our clothes back to front.

Next year I would like to see most of the C.G.I.T. girls down at camp. I'm sure you'll all agree with me if you've been there once, that it is the most beautiful place.

—Else Jacobsen.

Brownsburg —

Many and varied were the comments heard on the grassy slopes and sand dunes of St. Andrews' Golf Course Saturday, July 19. The memorable occasion was the golf stag organized to promote good feeling and fellowship among the members of the various departments. Some of the chaps (a very few) were experts, and some (the majority, in fact) were dubs, but everyone was out for a good time. A silver trophy, kindly donated by Mr. E. L. Johnson for the low net, was won by N. Pesant.

Highlights: Mac Walker driving on the 5th . . . Alex Ramsey putting on the 19th. . . Pat Riley in the "Sahara". . . Jack Langford's disappearing act . . . "Pete" Dawson as M. C. . . . John Duncan's delicate touch . . . general low scores on the 10th.

The many and assorted prizes were presented by Mr. E. L. Johnson at the evening banquet.

SOFTBALL

Office Trounce Machine Shop Reds

In a scheduled game of the second half of the schedule, the "Pen Pushers" defeated Machine Shop 22-6. The office scored ten runs in the first inning off Alarie and were never pressed. Machine Shop put Dupuis in the box but this change made little difference. Roy Bedard pitched for the office and except for the first period when four runs came in, pitched a tight game, being well backed up by a stone-wall infield.

Everybody went on a hitting spree for the office while Ben Guilbert did the slugging for the Reds.

Metallics Continue Winning Ways

Playing good ball the Flashes downed Machine Shop 15-11 in a scheduled game on the lower diamond on July 18. Alphonse Leroux with 3 for 4 was top hitter for the Flashes while Reynolds and Meilleur both with 4 for 4 were the sluggers for the Machine Shop.

Chemical Lab Defeats Tool Shop Reds

In one of the tightest contested games this year, Chemical Lab eked out a victory over the Tool Shop by a score of 8-5. Spectacular plays were the order of the night and too numerous to specify. Langille with 3 for 4 was the hitter for the Lab while Paquette did the same for the Tool Shop. The rest of the hits were well scattered.

BASEBALL

On Sunday, July 13, Brownsburg were hosts to the Buckingham team. The visitors threw a rather bad scare into the hearts of local fans when they were leading at the eight and a half inning mark by a score of 10-9. Brownsburg, though, came through with five runs in their half of the eighth to lead 14-10 and that was the final score. Gaetan Drouin started off for the home team and Maurice Danis finished the game. Bain Currie again donned the pads and stayed in the game until the seventh. The hitting was well distributed and all played a good game.

On Sunday, July 20, the Brownsburg team travelled to Montebello to play the last scheduled league game with that team. It was a hard fought, see-saw game, with Brownsburg getting the jump with six runs in the second inning but the home team retaliated with 4 runs in their half of the inning. After this scoring splurge the teams settled down and runs were at a premium in the remaining innings and the 'burgians managed an 11-9 win. Drouin pitched a nice game and received good support particularly in the pinches. His battery made, Tom Gray, catching his first game of the year, was steady behind the plate and with the wagon tongue. Every one of the Currites fielded well and the hits were well divided with hitting in the pinches being the best offensive offered by the Currie men.

Swimming Carnival At Seigniory Club

Seigniory Club, Que. — Venetian Night Carnival at Seigniory Club, one of the most colorful of entertainments held during the summer, will take place on Saturday evening, August 2. The log enclosed swimming pool will be the scene of the event staged for the benefit of the members and their guests at the Log Chateau. Members of the resident cabin colony will also attend the carnival.

The aquatic fantasy "Swimcapades" so successfully staged by the Columbus Swimming Club in Montreal a few months ago, will be repeated in the Seigniory pool for the occasion. A decorative scheme and special lighting is being evolved which will transform the huge glass-roofed pool into gala array. At each of the glass entrance doors which line either side of the pool, booths will be set up and operated by junior members of the club who will tell fortunes, manage cocoanut shies, sell candy and soft drinks and turn the proceeds over to local charities. The Seigniory Club orchestra will be in attendance.

Two half-hour periods will be presented by the Swim-capades, in which Frank Mines' two turns, the evolution and the revolution of swimming, were highlights of the show when it was presented in Montreal. The commentator will be Norman Sherriffs, president of Columbus Club, and the fantasy will be in charge of Larry Leroux, former Provincial diving champion.

A little minute is long enough for a big rest when you drink an ice-cold bottle of "Coca-Cola". So when you pause throughout the day, make it the pause that refreshes with ice-cold "Coca-Cola".

Lions International to Convene in Toronto, 1942

New Orleans, July 25 — The Lions International selected Toronto for its 1942 annual convention. The convention here, which closed today, had a record registration of 9,500 not counting 2,000 members of musical and marching organizations.

"Leaders like Hitler are born, not made," says a Nazi broadcaster.

Seems a pretty good argument for birth control.
