Late Col. S. Forbes had long, constructive career in Army, University, varied fields

A St. Andrews citizen well known in this County, Col. Stuart Forbes, died Sunday in the Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital, at the age of 75. He had many good friends hereabouts.

Colonel Duncan Stuart Forbes, B.Sc., B.Arch., O.B.E., M.C., E.D., had given virtually a lifetime of service to McGill University. He was athletics manager of the university from 1934 to 1947 and under his enthusiasm and guidance McGill attained such prestige in athletics that it came to be regarded as the leader of the intercollegiate group.

Known affectionately as "The Major," he was born in Toronto in 1889, the son of a prominent portrait painter, J. Colin Forbes, RCA, who painted some of the world's most distinguished personalities, including King Edward VII and Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

In 1911, he graduated from McGill with his B.Sc., and in 1912 he registered for Architecture.

Not only was he an outstanding athlete but he was an above-average student, completing the four-year course in Architecture in three years.

Col. Forbes participated in track and field, boxing, wrestling, soccer, softball and skiing, and he won countless honors in cross-country running.

fellow classmates went overseas, serving with the machine gun section of the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry. He joined as a private, but soon rose to the rank of sergeant. During the First World War he played an important part in the introduction and development of the indirect machine gun fire. He was promoted to lieutenant and then captain, and given command of the 7th Brigade Machine Gun Company in France. He was severely wounded on three occasions and was finally appointed chief machine gun instructor in England. He was promoted to Major and was awarded an M.C. for his services at Ypres.

On his return to Canada in 1919, he took command of the 8th Canadian Machine Gun Brigade with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. While serving in this capacity, he was appointed assistant professor of Architecture at McGill. On his retirement it was noted: "The university was more than an institution to him. He lived, breathed, talked, and thought McGill, and wherever he went the university went with him."

He was an active member of various provincial and national sports bodies and held numerous executive positions.

Col. Forbes was also active in many non-sports organizations. He was a valuable member and former director of the Argenteuil Art Association, and a member of the Argenteuil Historical Society. In Montreal he was active in numerous groups and societies, notably those attached to the interests of McGill.

When the Second World War broke out, he obtained leave of absence from the university and became senior machine gun officer for Canada. He was again raised to the rank of lieutenant-colonel and for his valuable services received an O.B.E. and an E.D.

At the end of the war, of his own volition he reverted to the familiar appellation of "The Major".

He was particularly proud of the fact that the university named the upper playing field "The D. Stuart Forbes Field" and that the Students Athletics Council set up the annual "Major D. Stuart Forbes Trophy".

After he left his active duties at the university, it was declared: "He has lived a full and useful life and will continue to do so until the end of his days. His name will never be forgotten and his invaluable contributions to McGill will live on, benefitting many generations yet to come."

Col. Forbes is survived by his wife, the former Marian McDonald; and two brothers, Kenneth Forbes, R.C.A., of Toronto, and Norman, an architect in Sarnia, Ont.

Impressive funeral services, with military honors, were held Tuesday afternoon in Redpath Hall at his beloved alma mater, McGill, followed by interment at Mount Royal Cemetery. Hundreds, including many of the city's notables, paid tribute to his memory.

Veterans parade Sunday morning

On the previous evening, Saturday, May 8, a banquet will be held in the Legion Hall at 6.30, followed by a dance. For the latter, ladies and guests are cordially invited.

Ayersv'l sparks industrial promotion

Proposal to enlist co-operation of three municipalities involved

Councillors at Ayersville were informed last week about a proposed "Inter-municipal Industrial Commission" between the three municipalities in Greater Lachute — namely, Lachute Town, Ayersville and St. Jerusalem. Councillors H. Mayotte and Ernest Champagne, of the industrial and business committee of Ayersville Council, submitted a brief on this project — a document which claims that we have "lost out" on certain companies which might have been induced to establish here, mainly through lack of information on this area's possibilities and through lack of initiative on the part of the three municipalities.

Prime objective of the commission would be to attract new industries and to promote the health of those already established here. According to the brief, each of the three municipalities has drawbacks of one kind or another on an individual basis, but the three collectively could offer joint resources to effectively comply with the needs of industry and manufacture.

The commission would undertake an overall plan and promotion, ensuring the right facilities and atmosphere to foster industrial progress. It would enlist key citizens from different ranks to acquaint the public with its program of action. Sub-committees would deal respectively with (1) Financing; (2) Research; (3) Industrial Promotion; (4) Publicity; and (5) Co-ordination. Those chosen for these roles would be proven for their ability in one sphere or another and, essentially, independent of politics.

In the proceedings of this commission, each of the three municipalities would be represented by one council member in a liaison role — with a similar representation suggested from all bodies interested in industrial development — such as Chambers of Commerce, etc.

The brief maintains that an Industrial Commissioner is desirable in order to effect its aims, but if the commission cannot engage a full-time commissioner, it is suggested there are citizens of Greater Lachute ready and willing to perform the required job. It is expected to take two or three years before results can be achieved.

The brief further states that, as a preliminary to industrial promotion, it is important to know the community's resources. There must accordingly be an economic inventory of assets, including those specially advantageous to certain types of plants and factories.

For the economic stability of this commission it is required that the public give it financial backing, and that the three municipalities involved shall share in the costs involved. And later, the taxes accruing from industries established in this manner should be shared pro rata among the three municipalities, insofar as the Municipal Code or an inter-municipal agreement permits.

The brief prepared by Councillors Champagne and Mayotte will be relayed to the Lachute and St. Jerusalem councils, and a consultation may be arranged between members of the senior and junior Chambers of Commerce in Lachute, the Taxpayers' League of Lachute, the Citizens' League of Ayersville, and even of representatives from already established industries.

The first fatal accident in Argenteuil County in 1965 occurred at 12.10 a.m. Sunday, May 2, when 19-year-old Lise Bourque, of St. Eustache, died following a head-on crash on Route 41, near the Bourbonniere camps.

According to investigating police officers, the girl was a passenger in a car driven by Michel Delisle, 23, also of St. Eustache. The accident occurred as Delisle, who was following another car, pulled out to pass, and crashed head-on with an auto driven by Jean-Guy Malette, 26, of the Bourbonniere camp settlement. A fourth car was parked on the side of the highway, and it was here that the accident occurred — when Mr. Delisle pulled out to pass the car he was following, just at the time the latter was passing the parked vehicle.

The victim was pronounced dead on arrival at the Argenteuil Hospital, and the drivers of both vehicles were treated in hospital for various injuries.

An inquest will be held into the death, conducted by joint district coroner Dr. Roger Lavigne.

Come on in! Toadstools may be seen frequently thrusting their heads through asphalt paving, but they are rarely known to push their way into a home. This was the scene at a Bethany Street dwelling, where the phenomenal growth occurred within the space of a week.

Hydro workers find bodies of two drowning victims

Hydro-Quebec employees at the Carillon Dam recovered the bodies of two drowning victims from the water of the Ottawa River last week, and while the death of an elderly Hawkesbury resident was declared to be accidental, Inspector Jacques Charron, of the Hull police, is conducting an investigation into that of a 29-year-old mother of seven children.

On Friday morning, the finding of the body of Mrs. Denise Dorion-Cadieux, 29, of 122 Carillon Street, Hull (who has been missing from her apartment since December 7, 1964), was reported to the local detachment of Provincial Police.

The body was brought to the morgue in Lachute and a preliminary investigation was carried out at the request of the Hull police. Early Saturday, the body was transported to the Montreal morgue, where an autopsy was performed.

* * *

On the previous day, Thursday, the body of 78-year-old Hormidas Pominville, of Hawkesbury, was recovered while Hydro-Quebec employees were performing their regular cleaning operations. The elderly victim had been missing from his boarding house since October 31, 1964, and death was declared to be accidental by joint district coroner Dr. J. C. MacKimmie.

Several alarms stress hazard of grass fires

Minor damage resulted from a fire Monday morning at 218 Evelina Street, which was believed to have been started by children playing in the shed of an unoccupied house. The call was received at 11.18 a.m., and the fire was confined to the shed wall and roof.

The house was owned by Armand Lachance, who reported he had been working on the building all winter and planned to move into it in the near future. He had no insurance; fortunately the damage was slight.

Firemen responded to several grass fires, two in particular which threatened to become serious blazes. On Thursday afternoon, wind swept a fire from the vicinity of the Richelieu Park on Paquin Street, to within inches of Fraser Morrison's residence; and the following afternoon, several sheds and a hotel in St. Philippe were seriously threatened.

More than 80 men, many of them employees of the Canadian International Paper Company, battled a bush fire several miles north of Calumet over the week-end, continuing until Tuesday afternoon. The fire, which was mainly on the Brunet and McEvoy properties, did not consume any actual timber but raced over a recently-cut area approximately a mile wide by three to four miles long, consuming the remaining slash and presenting a serious hazard. The blaze was reported to have been very difficult to control, due to high winds which were continually changing direction.

The fire was discovered early Saturday and the C.I.P. Company responded to the appeal for help by sending a number of men from their bush and mill operations. Residents of the area turned out as well, in what proved to be a successful effort to extinguish the blaze. Fire equipment from Calumet was on the scene, as were provincial fire rangers William Charron, of Huberdeau, and Roger Richer, of Barkmere, with men and equipment.

Intense heat and smoke hampered the fire-fighting operations, and Provincial Government planes finally extinguished the worst of the fire Monday when two water-bombers were despatched to combat the flames.

While this particular blaze did not damage a very large amount of standing timber, an official of C.I.P. pointed out the extreme danger of such fires at this time of year, and expressed hope that motorists, fishermen and campers alike would pay special attention to preventing fires while in the bush.

Although the events were attended by a small number of adults, it was considered to be a complete success.

L.F.D. Comments

By Lachute Fire Chief Don MacCulloch

The alerting system the Lachute Fire Department decided upon as best suiting our needs and requirements, and in particular, the needs of Lachute taxpayers, is a system with which all men of the fire department can be called at the same time for a major outbreak or divided into smaller crews to handle small fires, such as autos, chimney fires, grass fires, etc. This would ensure adequate manpower where necessary, and reduce the number of men called unnecessarily from their regular employment.

The Canadian Marconi Company, from whom we have our present radio system on a rental basis, has an alerting system which has been developed as a solution to this problem.

This system is not custom-made for Lachute; most towns and cities with volunteer fire departments are faced with the same problem. The alarm would be transmitted over our present two-way radio frequency, being received by a small portable transistorized receiver which the fireman can take with him — to his work, out for a Sunday drive with his family in his auto, on a picnic, at a party with friends, everywhere he goes within a radius of 10-15 miles of the base station.

I am sure you are wondering — how much does a system like this cost? The cost is very reasonable; in fact, this system would be completely paid for with the present rental charge for our telephone system in less than seven years, without an additional expense to the taxpayers. We, in the Fire Department, believe this would be a good investment in safety and protection for the citizens of Lachute.

Act now on driver permits

A reminder to local residents that all driving permits must be renewed before June 1 of this year, comes from Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, officer-in-charge of the Q.P.P. unit here.

Additional information on the procedure of obtaining drivers' permits will be found in a Provincial Government-sponsored advertisement on page 11, where it is explained that all permits will be sent by mail. Residents cannot obtain driving permits at the local license office.

The permits will again be for a two-year period, but will expire on the owner's birthday in 1967. Cost for the two-year license is again $5.

Agatha Christie play presented by school dramatists

Last Saturday evening, the Lachute High School Drama Club presented with tremendous success Agatha Christie's mystery play, "Ten Little Indians". Never before has L.H.S. been responsible for such an evening of mystery and intrigue. Each role was played flawlessly, with a definitely professional "savoir faire".

Due to the great acclaim which the play received Saturday evening, it was re-presented on Monday afternoon for the entire student body, and received an even greater response from the audience.

Special mention should be given to Mr. Andal, the director, who put so much time and effort into making this play a success, and to the many performers, stage hands, make-up designers, etc., who co-operated so brilliantly in staging the performance.

By BOB ATCHISON

Once more the fishing fraternity is in the groove. Already reported are the ones that "got away", but everyone seems happy to be back dunking worms, getting wet, falling in the water, and so on. Don't get me wrong; I'm one of those bugs too, and very soon now, the tall tales that are told will make Paul Bunyan like a piker. I've been waiting for this moment since last January, and this year the wait seemed longer than last. For a time I figured that January had 60 days to it. . . So I didn't catch any fish, but I did pick up another cold, and that is par for the course. Streams are very high, and impossible to wade, and with absolutely everything floating down, it was impossible to pick out any specific bait. But just hearing the song of the birds, and seeing the insects flying around, was worth it. I saw a number of moths; but they looked like the old Cabbage type, by the way they were flying down into some mud to feed. I also saw a lot of dance flies; these are the ones that look like a plume of smoke in the air on a summer evening. They don't bite; but even if they had done so, it would have been real welcome. A couple of crane flies were also seen; these are the ones you call darning needles, with the bright green-and-blue body, very slender and very graceful on the wing, darting always in quest for food. It really was a worthwhile day for me.

* * *

A few fish have been caught. In one case they were not too bad a size. I believe Ken Graham has been luckiest, at the time of writing; in the two expeditions he reported, both times he was well repaid. Pete Denker has also been drowning the odd worm with fair results. . . From this talk on fishing, don't get the idea that all the lakes are open, they sure are not. There is still an incredible amount of ice on them, and under normal conditions it will take some time to go.

* * *

There are still numerous ducks around the North River, especially the Wood variety. I don't know when I have seen so many. They must have had an exceptionally good winter, besides which, many of them must have decided to try for new summer habitats. There were a few geese near the White's Bridge one morning last week, just about 20 of them, but the noise they made would have done credit to about 100. It's great to see them back.

* * *

Just got a call to the effect that some very good pike are being taken right near Ile aux Chats. My informant told me of catching three, one of them 34 inches, while the others were around 26 inches. Nice pike. With Lac Filion free of ice now, I'm going after some of the monsters that hang around this spot, pretending to be sunken logs. One of these days! . . .

* * *

There's a noticeable trend among fishermen in this area. For many years they have been fishing with lines made to haul boats or logs — 10-lb. test and up; the trend now is toward the very light line. This is a very good thing too; the lighter the lines used, the better the casting, and the better the fishing. Of course, with this type of line care has to be taken with the terminal tackle, that is, your leaders and snaps. Use too large a type, and you will lose all the action on the lure. However, if this is taken into consideration when you are purchasing your line, then nothing but good can come from it. Snaps and leaders of a light build are far better, and add a lot more fun to your fishing. It is not necessary to have extra heavy swivels and leaders, and more and more people are starting to realize this. I know most people have the impression that the fish will cut the leaders so they need extra heavy ones; this is really not true. Unless care is taken in landing a fish — no matter how heavy a leader you use, it will break.

* * *

The fishing club at the High School held a casting contest the other afternoon; this is the kind of tournament you like to be in — a prize for everyone. I understand some of the casters were real hot, getting their lures within 20 or so feet of the target. I do know of a couple of the boys who decided to have a little fishing contest themselves, the results were not too good, though — one broken rod, and wet feet. Great! It was too bad, though, that more people had not turned out.

* * *

Now you may think that, with the warm weather coming in, the birds will need no attention. In most cases this may be so; at least they don't need the feed so much, but they do need water. So make a small bird bath. This can be made out of an old pie plate or something similar. Of course, it will need to be filled at least once a day. For the little care and attention this requires, you will be well repaid in watching the bathers. Of course, some of you will have sprinklers out in the not-too-distant future, and this is wonderful for the feathery visitors — but they still need some water around, just as we do. Any old pan will do; but keep it up off the ground, for cats are sure to be attracted to a place like this.

If you wish to keep all the birds around your home, and this means winter and summer, continue spreading some seed for them. You see, all birds are freeloaders (like most of us humans), and why should they search for food when they can pick it up from some feeder. Naturally, the summer birds will move away in the fall, but — this is very important — the winter birds will remember the free hand-outs, and will bring all their relatives and friends with them come cool weather. Even suet sticks hung up will not go amiss. . . All these little details pay dividends for winter bird-lovers.

Talking with a lady the other day, I was asked why females were never mentioned when the fishing comes around. With very few of their sex addicted to fishing, this is understandable. But true, there are more and more women fishing each year, to me this is a good sign. Some very adept females may be seen in our area right now. I believe the only reason they have never been considered, is that the men fear they may be excelled in this manly sport. But joking aside, this is one sport that everyone can share — yet so many people do not consider this. With the type of fishing being carried on today, the ladies don't even have to use worms — and this was doubtless one of their deterrents. Most women don't like to pick up and bait a hook with a wiggly worm, unless of course, they use gloves (and this I have seen). Another dissuading factor — some of them don't like to handle a fish. But nevertheless, they do fish to some extent, and it's too bad that more of them don't join in this relaxing pastime — a sure cure for those Kitchen Blues.

* * *

Some attention has been paid to a new lure being distributed by Weber. This is a split bait, with flappers, somewhat like an ordinary lure, that has been split down the centre. What the action is, I can only speculate, but it should be very good. Certainly it is not too big, and it sounds like a good spinning bait. Much publicity has been given to this, both from fishermen and the companies, so maybe this year it will inveigle that elusive trout you are still trying to catch . . . Me, I'm going to try it on those pike.

* * *

Some of you may have studied the new budget, but I wonder how many of you paid attention to the "clean water" bit? Industries will be allowed to deduct a certain portion from taxes for the purpose of cleaning up the water supplies. . . Boy, when it gets to this point, the government must really be worried about pollution, don't you think?

Boating Clinic

By STAN DAVIES

Spring is the best time to buy a second-hand boat, there's no question about it.

Why? Because a boat looks its worst after a hard Canadian winter out of water. The seller is at a disadvantage. It's also the best time to see exactly what you're getting.

The 30-foot cruiser I bought last summer (now out of water) had, and still has, a stale aroma in the bilges. In fact they stink. What can I do? (P.Q., London).

Answer: As soon as the weather is warm enough, scour the bilges thoroughly with detergent and hot water. Rinse thoroughly, then DRY. I mean dry. Bring in a heater and fan if necessary. When thoroughly dry, spray with an anti-fungus preservative obtained from your marine dealer.

* * *

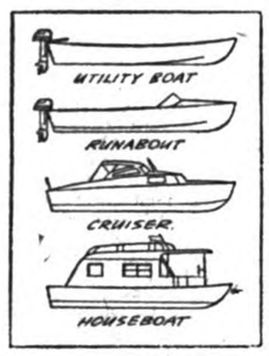
Answer: The attached sketch outlines the four broad divisions. A utility boat, can be any length, usually has no deck, windshield or conveniences. It might be a skiff, punt, rowboat, dinghy, johnboat or pram, with a motor. The runabout has no living or sleeping accommodation, but has a deck, windshield and maybe a canvas top. A small austere cruiser might be called an overnighter, camping cruiser, or express cruiser. A luxury cruiser is mostly referred to as a motor yacht. The houseboat can be as small or as big and plush as you like.



* * *

I can buy a Nova Scotia boat. It's so cheap I think there's a catch somewhere. Am I being too suspicious? (P.N., Port Colborne).

Answer: There may be a catch. Salt water keeps wood pickled and is a good preservative. But when the boat is brought up into the Great Lakes, beware, rot takes over extremely fast unless preservative measures are taken. Get an expert to look it over. His fee will be well worth while.

* * *

What's a fast, easy check of the condition of a second-hand outboard motor? (M.N., Sarnia).

Answer: Crank the motor over by hand. Even electric start outboards have a place for a starting rope. Use it, and feel for the resistance caused by compression in each cylinder; and a good "bounce" as the piston goes over top centre. Second thing: try to wiggle the propeller shaft, and look for oil seepage around it. There should be none of either.

* * *

I can get a fibreglass boat cheap. It's got repairs where the stern and sides meet. Is this bad?

Answer: It's not just bad — it's terrible. Fibreglass boats that have been seriously over-powered, or have seen severe use in a water ski-school, or have had the outboard motor knocked off by running over a log or rock, suffer the damage you describe. You're not buying much, so don't pay much.

Your authority on boats and summer boating

MEET THE WRITER, STAN DAVIES

Boating writer Stan Davies, author of the series starting this week (see column on this page) always marvels that he likes boating, because he learned about it the hard way — it was just a job.

That was back in the hungry thirties, when he toted food and equipment by canoe and outboard through Northern Ontario for gold prospectors. Most of this was done along the great divide which meanders through the Ontario gold fields. On one side water flows north to Hudson Bay, on the other south to the St. Lawrence River.

In those days, boating knowhow developed quickly in treacherous lakes and rapids — it had to. Mistakes had a disturbing tendency to be fatal.

But Stan has had many and varied contacts with boating as a sport (and pleasure), under a straining canvas on the Great Lakes, on outboard cruises on the Trent Waterway, deep sea fishing off Acapulco, and surfboarding on Australia's beaches.

He's sailed out of Black's Harbor on a sardine boat, out into the Pacific on a Mexican schooner, and through Disneyland on an imitation Mississippi River boat.

He likes water skiing and skin diving, and is no good at either. He's never paid to have an outboard motor repaired; he fixes them. He also built one small boat himself (with the help of three of his sons).

Pike fishing on Ottawa River

Quebec — Fishing for pike and all species other than muskellunge is allowed year-round in Lake of Two Mountains, on the Ottawa River, and in Lakes Saint-Louis and Saint-Pierre, on the St. Lawrence River. The daily creel limit is 10 fish, and there is no minimum for size.

These lakes, considered parts of the rivers listed in the Summary of the Fishing Regulations in Quebec 1965, are not mentioned specifically in the regulations. The Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game, the Hon. Gérard Cournoyer, has clarified the regulations in these cases, so that possible misinterpretation may be avoided.

It's the ideal motor for family skiing, fishing and just cruising. The 33 gets more fun out of a gallon of regular gas than anything in its league and has a 50:1 gas-oil ratio that cuts oil costs in half.

There's nothing low priced about the way the 33 is built. It has all the quietness and never-say-die dependability Sea-Horses are famous for. Nothing is about to break, bend, leak or fall off, when the fun starts. If it ever does Johnson's long two year warranty fixes it free.

Available with either manual or electric starting, the 33 is the ideal way to get started in boating.

If the 33's not quite your size, see Johnson's 18 hp. model, the most powerful of the portables. It combines good power with easy portability.

SCHOOL

The Sports Scene

By David McCaffrey

Following a regular meeting of the Home and School Association last Wednesday, Mr. Tompkins held a gymnastics display for the parents. This program, which consisted of floor exercises and balances, vaults over the "box horse", and activities on the parallel bars, lasted approximately one hour, and was designed to give parents an idea of what their children are learning at school.

* * *

The school boys' softball team, under the supervision of Mr. McKosh, had its first practice this week. It is hoped that Brownsburg High will be as well represented in the O.V.S.A.A. tournament this year as it was in 1964, when B.H.S. was the winner. It is not certain yet whether a girls' team will be organized this year or not.

* * *

Training for track and field also began around the school this week. Mr. Tompkins attended a training school last summer and, so, has many new approaches to the teaching of this sport for the 1965 season. Brownsburg is planning to attend four meets in the near future: it certainly looks like the runners and jumpers will get their "fill" of track and field this year.

Paper collection in Brownsburg

Brownsburg — A collection of salvage paper and magazines will be made Saturday afternoon, May 8, by the Boy Scouts of Canada, Brownsburg Group.

Residents are requested kindly to tie paper and magazines securely in bundles, or pack in cardboard cartons, and place at the roadside before 1 p.m.

In the event of rain or snow, the collection will be deferred to the following Saturday, May 15.

Week's Activities

Part of the work of the Canadian Junior Red Cross is to encourage young people and to point out the importance and necessity for such an organization. B.H.S. is fortunate that a Grade IX pupil, Earle Donaldson, has shown keen interest in this work. Earle has, in recent years, helped the Junior Red Cross Council with his drawings and publicity posters. Recently, on the advice of Miss E. Hoare, teacher-supervisor of the committee, Earle entered a Junior Red Cross contest, "Canadian Youth in Action," for the Province of Quebec. His work, "The Helping Hand," was chosen as the winning poster for Grades VII to IX. His winning poster has been sent to the Canadian Red Cross national headquarters to compete in the final selection for a Canadian winner — to be announced on May 8, World Red Cross Day. B.H.S. wishes Earle luck.

Earle received the story of the founding of the Canadian Red Cross Society, "To All Men", by compliments of the Quebec Provincial Division.

On Friday, April 30, the Argenteuil Teachers' Association public speaking took place at B.H.S. In the afternoon B.H.S. was successful in all four events, consisting of contestants from Grades III to VII. Cathy Leggitt, speaking for Grades VIII and IX, and Neil Summers who entered the French public speaking for Grades VI to VIII, were also successful in the evening events.

All participants were well worthy of being chosen as representatives for the Grenville, Lachute and Brownsburg High Schools.

* * *

Six students from B.H.S., who were guests of the Bouchard School, attended the morning show of "Teen-65" on CBMT television, where Mark Racine and Roland Racine were interviewed.

The two, finding themselves facing camera lights for the first time, conducted themselves in a creditable manner.

B.H.S. understands that Lachute High School will be having their Graduation ceremonies on May 7. We wish the graduating class further success and hope that all who attend may have a pleasant evening.

MOTHER'S DAY

Annual supper The annual supper of the Legion 70 Ladies' Auxiliary was held last Saturday at the Memorial Hall. During the proceedings, with Mrs. Chas. Napp (president) in charge, an old member was welcomed back — Mrs. Bruce Bradford, who returned recently to reside in Lachute. Seen above at the head-table are (left to right) Mrs. Ernest Evans, Mrs. Ian MacDougall, Mrs. Harold Thompson, Jos. Sewell (president of the senior group), Mrs. Chas. Napp, Mrs. Jos. Sewell, the Rev. Citizen of Lachute and Brownsburg died suddenly

A citizen favorably known in Lachute and Brownsburg passed suddenly last Sunday, in the person of Mr. Roger Raymond, aged 49 — long associated with Lachute Lumber & Millwork Ltd. and, with Brownsburg Lumber Co.

On Saturday with his wife he had attended the 25th anniversary of graduation of the nurses' class of which Mrs. Raymond had been a member, and had spent the evening at the Chateau Frontenac. He was taken ill next morning at his niece's home in Quebec where they spent the week-end, and he died shortly afterwards.

The late Roger Raymond

He was a former councillor, and Grand Knight of the K. of C. at Brownsburg, and was also a director of the Laurentian Numismatic Society. His wife, the former Margot Perusse, is regent of the Brownsburg - Lachute Daughters of Isabella.

The late Mr. Raymond is mourned also by two children, Robert and Renée, both school students; his mother, Mme Adonias Raymond, Brownsburg; two brothers, Victorin of Thurso and Lucien of Sherbrooke; and two sisters, Mme Claire Bouchard and Mme Gaston Proulx, of Brownsburg.

Funeral rites were held Wednesday at the St. Louis de France Church in Brownsburg.

Paper collection this Saturday

Lachute Boy Scouts will hold their annual spring drive for paper salvage this coming Saturday, May 8. By this effort the group raises an appreciable sum towards its funds; and residents, appreciating the removal of accumulated papers and magazines, are generally glad to assist.

Also acceptable will be flowerpots, which are saleable for reuse.

Householders and business people are asked to have their contributions well packaged and place them at the roadside, or in view of the collectors when they make their rounds. Out-of-town pick-ups may also be arranged for; please phone LO 2-2858.

Lawn care is a two-step job: Cutting and raking. A Lawn-Boy Grasscatcher does it in one step; you cut and rake at the same time. Your lawn ends up looking as neat as a new haircut. The Grasscatcher will also collect leaves in the fall and tidy up the lawn each spring.

The Grasscatcher clips on and off the mower in seconds without tools and is zippered to empty in two shakes. And even wet grass and leaves can't clog it.

FINGER-TIP START makes Lawn-Boy the easiest starting power mower you can buy.

SAFETY—Lawn-Boy exceeds all ASA safety standards. See the 1965 Lawn-Boy soon. It's warranted for two years, twice as long as any other power mower.

A very pleasing representation from the local chapter of the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. (Barbershoppers) attended the 15th Annual Parade (International) held in the Place des Arts, Montreal, on April 24. It is reported that the program — which included the world champion quartet, "The Buffalo Bills" — was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present. . . Among those from this district who attended were Mr. and Mrs. C. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. E. Kettyle, and Mr. and Mrs. George Witham and family.

Sixteen members from the Lachute Chapter of "Barbershop" were guests of the Montreal Chorus on Wednesday evening.

The Bible Today

A new translation of the Gospel of Mark has been published by the American Bible Society in New York, called "The Right Time," it is the first of a series to be issued in simple idiomatic English.

Sentences are short and direct and the vocabulary is simple and precise. Other books of the New Testament are in various stages of preparation by a committee of Biblical scholars.

Originally intended for people overseas who use English as a second language, the very readable translation will be given widespread distribution in this country by the Canadian Bible Society.

"The translation of the Scriptures is a continuing process and no translation is final," stated translation secretary of the American Bible Society, Dr. Eugene A. Nida. "Our goal is to give every man a copy of the Bible in his own tongue and in the form he best understands."

"The Right Time" is a completely new translation; it reaches out to new readers of the Bible. Obscure and misleading terms are avoided. Published in booklet form, this new story of Jesus will sell for twelve cents.

The title, "The Right Time," is derived from the 15th verse of the first chapter of Mark. "The right time has come," he said, "and the Kingdom of God is near!" The King James or Authorized Version reads: "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand."

Delegate reports to congregation on Synod meeting

As a lay delegate to the Anglican Synod meetings in Montreal, Mr. G. Arundel-Evans reported his impressions, last Sunday morning to the congregation of St. Simeon's Church.

Bishop R. Kenneth McGuire gave a stirring charge stressing the needs of the Church for dealing with today's problems (Mr. Arundel-Evans reported). The Bishop said that one of the difficulties we face might lie in the "hardness and coldness of words"; that humility and patience were not qualities held today in esteem. There was no time for the persuasiveness which changes men. It was much simpler to change systems by the method of the coup d'état. "For this situation, the Church believes she has a saving message . . . but in communicating this message we are faced with the problem of speaking in terms which the world will understand."

The rural Deanery of Clarendon is being transferred from the Montreal Diocese to the Diocese of Ottawa, the Bishop noted; also he stressed the need for increasing clergymen to minister to the sick in hospitals of the Montreal area.

One of the first matters discussed (Mr. Arundel-Evans continued in his report) was the retirement plan for clergy. Next, the membership of Parish Vestries was considered, and it was agreed that the age restriction for the right to vote at these meetings should be reduced from 21 years to 18 years.

Approval was given for the first time for women to have full delegate status at synod meetings. There are some dioceses already in Canada where women are admitted as delegates but in Montreal they have only been permitted to attend as spectators heretofor.

Another important change which was approved on an experimental basis was the amalgamation of three boards, namely, the Diocesan Branch of Religious Education, the Diocesan Missionary Committee and the Diocesan Committee on Social Services.

The report by Mrs. Monica Kirby, president of the Women's Auxiliary, drew attention to the winds of change which are blowing through both city and rural branches. A single organization of all women's groups is proposed in order to attract a wider membership. It is fully realized that such a reconstruction would not be suitable for every parish.

A diocesan "Needlecraft Workroom" has been established at Anglican House to give advice and instruction in the making of church furnishings.

Reports were read on Church extension, the Montreal Churchman, the use and abuse of credit buying, rural life, urban life, gambling, including the use of raffles and so on, to raise money. Quite a discussion took place on family planning and in particular, attention was drawn to present laws which link the planning of families with the criminal code.

The report on statistics submitted shows that the number of families on the parish lists have decreased from 25,900 in 1963 to 24,900 in 1964.

APPRECIATION

Ballet pupils demonstrate in public program

On Friday evening the audience that visited l'Ecole Secondaire were charmed with the ballet demonstration given by the Argenteuil School of Ballet, now in its eighth year. The demonstration showed the rudiments of ballet through its classes, and it was extremely interesting to see the work of the Juniors and acknowledge the accomplishments of the Seniors as well.

The Juniors were delightful to watch in their simplicity, and sometimes amusing, as only small children can be. The Intermediate classes showed the steady advancement of their extra years of tuition. The Seniors showed the exercises needed to tone up muscles required to enable a dancer to rise up on her toes.

The final scenes represented a ballet school, and opened with dancers performing at the barre and practising portions of their dances which they felt the need to refresh.

Miss Dubreuil showed excellent command of the children throughout the evening. Admiration for the patience of Mrs. Gow, the director, and Mrs. Couchon, the pianist, was expressed by many. This performance showed that the district can feel nothing but pride for the school and its students.

Mrs. Gow welcomed the audience in French and English, and announced scholarships for Miss V. Dinel and Miss L. Noble. Flowers and tokens of appreciation were presented, to round out a perfect evening.

To wed in September

Miss Edith Paré, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irenée Paré, of St. Andrews East, and Mr. William R. Jones, son of Mrs. Edward M. Jones and the late Mr. Jones, Lachute, whose engagement was recently announced. The marriage will take place in September.

Diary of a Vagabond

TODAY AND YESTERDAY

It was in 1936, when my sons were still studying Canadian history in elementary school, that Fort Henry was first opened to the public after considerable restoration. Originally standing on Point Henry, an elevated portion of ground east of Kingston, Ontario, Fort Henry was designed chiefly as protection for the nearby naval dockyard.

Commenced in 1813, merely as an entrenched battery of six 24 pounder guns, the 1812-15 war made it seem essential to add two stone block-houses within the fortification of revetted logs. With the progress of construction of the Rideau Canal, further fortification was felt necessary to protect against possible invasion.

In 1936, on our visit to Fort Henry, the colorful guides in their replica uniforms of a garrison once stationed within the Fort were not, as they are now, on hand to recount its history. I must admit I had forgotten much about it since then, until I did a bit of reading to bring readers of the column some of the interesting data on the shelves of the Toronto Public Library's research department.

I read in the hush of the library that Captain Viger, who set up camp on Point Henry with fortification in mind, described the site as "a wilderness of stumps, fallen trees, boulders and rocks of all sizes, and shapes, infested with mosquitoes, gnats, sandflies and other abominations in the shape of loathsome reptiles."

Today it is one of our most picturesque attractions and is included when groups of holidayers entrain on the CN in Toronto for a trip to Kingston and then by water taxi to the Thousand Islands in the St. Lawrence River and return. It all adds up to a thrilling adventure and a memorable trip.

More History

When the Rideau Canal was completed in 1832, authority was given to demolish the existing fortification on Point Henry and commence the immediate construction of a new pentagonal structure. In 1836, the main portion of the existing fort was completed and two batteries of the Royal Garrison Artillery and one infantry regiment took possession. There is a brass plate commemorating the fact that the fort can be numbered as one of the few instances when a government project cost less than the estimate for construction.

Strength of Fort Henry, like the Citadel at Halifax, has never been tested by seige. However, it has played an exciting part in our history. There was the time, in 1833, when an American by name of Van Rensellaer, with a band of Upper Canada rebels and Yankee sympathizers, planned to seize the fort. They were promised the assistance of an 'inside' traitor who was to spike the guns and open the gates.

The plan must have leaked out for there was considerable alarm in Kingston. Streets were barricaded, jewels, plate and money taken to the fort for safekeeping and 1,600 militia mustered for defence. The rebels got as far as Hickory Island 'uninhabited, save for one poor widow', but because of the drunken condition of Van Rensellaer, the seige of Fort Henry fell through.

One Was Hanged

Famous prisoners, who were kept captive in the Fort, numbered among them John Montgomery who escaped, breaking his leg in the effort, after having been convicted of treason. The last to plan the capture of the fort was a Polish officer, Nils von Schoultz, who led a force of sympathizers across the St. Lawrence from the American side to Prescott. After his surrender, he was defended by the then very young John A. Macdonald, but later convicted and hanged on a gallows erected within the fort.

During the last war Fort Henry was used as a detention camp for enemy prisoners. After the armistice it was again put in shape to resume its present function as a monument to the past and a museum of data from an historic era.

wonder QUESTIONS

ANSWERED BY THE RESEARCH SERVICE OF THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

How does Frost help the Farmer?

Frost is one of the most valuable aids to the farmer, unless it happens too late or too early. The freezing of the ground and the subsequent thaw amount to a most useful cultivation of the soil. When soil freezes it is not the earth itself that becomes solid, but the water lying between the lumps and particles of the earth. When the frost comes, therefore, we have a condition in which the particles of water lying in and around the pieces of soil, large and small, are changed into explosive bombs. That is because water, when it freezes into ice, increases in size, unlike most materials we know. Imagine all the water in and between the bits of earth becoming larger as it changes into ice. The pieces of earth are thrust apart and when the thaw comes the soil is more finely pulverized than before the frost. A natural cultivation has been at work on behalf of the farmer, helping him in the winter to make ready for the spring. This is important, because seeds will grow only in a good seed bed of well pulverized ground. The wise farmer helps the frost by plowing up his land so that the frost can get at it.

How Did Men Learn to Talk?

Anything that expresses to someone else what is going on in our minds is, in a way, a sort of talking. We can tell by a baby's cry a great deal of what it wants and feels. Different kinds of cries have different meanings. That is a sort of language and men probably learned to talk from just such beginnings, facial expressions, cries and grunts of pain and pleasure.

The simplest words, the first comers, were probably sounds describing or imitating something. Small children call a dog a "bow-wow" — a duck a "quack quack" — a locomotive a "choo choo." We all use some words of this sort — "buzz" — "whirr" — "pop" and many others.

Slowly, from such beginnings, a treasury of words was accumulated — different, of course, in different parts of the world.

Nowadays, if we need a new word we invent it, often going back to Latin and Greek for the roots. "Telephone," "vitamin" and "automobile" are invented words of this sort.

I WONDER . . . Curiosity is a priceless gift. A youngster's daily questions indicate a bright, inquiring mind. They should be answered intelligently. In this column periodically the editors of this newspaper, in cooperation with The Book of Knowledge, will print those questions — and the answers — most frequently asked by children of their parents.

Tractor big asset on Indian Reserve

Chilliwack, B.C. (CP) — The mechanical age has reached the Skwah Indian Reserve.

With federal government aid the 70 members of the band have bought a tractor to clear brush from parts of the reserve and plow up the land so they can grow vegetables to help them with their food supplies.

They will build a wagon so the tractor can haul away garbage and bring in firewood that they have always packed in on their shoulders.

Chief William Coombes, 63, predicted the new tractor would enable his reserve to help itself. The $4,000 tractor, half the price of which was provided by the government, is the band's hope for the future.

"Right now I pick up odd jobs, making just enough money to live on, sometimes not enough," the chief said.

"We don't know how to handle the big harvesting machinery because our people have never had the education to learn to use these things. They have never been taught to do anything."

LEANING FURTHER. High winds have moved the famous leaning tower of Pisa a fraction of an inch further off centre. Engineers now fear the belltower is millimetres away from the point where it will come crashing down. It was built in 1172.

Robidoux - Brown

St. Louis de France Church in Brownsburg was the scene of a pretty morning wedding when Ethel Winnifred Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gawn Brown, of Brownsburg, became the bride of Norman C. Robidoux, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Robidoux, of St. Andrews West, Ont. The curé of the parish, Father Paul-Emile Perron, performed the double-ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her brother, Stanley, the bride chose a floor-length gown of peau d'ange with a semi-length train, attached at the back with a tiny bow. The fitted bodice was covered with finished Chantilly lace and featured three-quarter length sleeves and a scalloped neckline.

Her bouffant veil was held in place with a pillbox crown covered with seed pearls. She carried a white Missel covered with lily of the valley and tiny pink Sweetheart roses.

Miss Denise Carrière, of Cornwall, was her maid of honor. She wore a light green street-length dress of silk organza, and matching overskirt. Her shoes were of matching color. She carried a bouquet of white cushion mums and pink Sweetheart roses.

The mother of the bride was wearing a navy ensemble accented by white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother chose a light blue lace dress with pink accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The couple will reside in Sudbury, Ont.

Thoughts on V-E Day anniversary

NEXT SUNDAY, May 8, is the 20th anniversary of V-E Day. It has a message — but our prime observation is that, to the most vociferous elements of world disturbance, namely, the frenzied youth of our turbulent times, this anniversary means virtually nothing. The extremists and the agitators of today were unborn or in early infancy at the time, and all they know of global war and its implications, is the dry text of history.

To the mature and adult generation, however, victory in World War II is a milestone still most vividly remembered. It marked the termination of horrors and tragedies the world had never known before. It signalled the dawning of new hopes, for solace, peace, prosperity and plenty — lush hopes for the nations in privation, bleeding in the ruins of their cities, depleted of young manhood. . . But for years thereafter, these hopes were fruitless. Hostilities flared, like embers of the great holocaust fanned to flame by avarice and jealousy. Indeed, fighting between nations still mars the equanimity of the world today. Prosperity returned again in the more fortunate lands, but in others, the dream of plenteous food and commodities never did materialize. Poverty abroad is more appalling now than any could have visualized in those rationed days of wartime.

Russia, our ally in the turning tide for victory, became a menace to the free countries. Nothing seemed to satiate her lust for territory and domination. How close this menace approached Canadian shores is not fully realized. In 1947, the late Premier Maurice Duplessis declared he had documentary evidence of a Communist plot to seize the Province of Quebec in 1948, the 100th anniversary of Karl Marx's Manifesto. Backing proposed legislation to outlaw the Communist Party, he told the Quebec Legislature that coded documents revealed a plan to take over Montreal city hall with 100 men, and police headquarters with 120 men. These disclosures came only two years after the end of World War II.

These are thoughts that assail us on the 20th anniversary of V-E Day. The members of our Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 70, are marking the occasion with fitting observances this week-end. There will be a veterans' dinner, and speeches — a dance, and festivities — a church parade, and memories. To many this will be a date fraught with poignant and soul-stirring recollections. . . If these, alas, could be translated to the youthful hot-heads of our modern times, then the anniversary could do much for peaceful co-existence and for human benefit. But paradoxically, the veterans, the bereaved, the maimed survivors or war's horror — these and the bellicose young fanatics of today seem centuries and realms apart.

Wolves and the Ottawa Valley

IN MOST rural areas of the Ottawa Valley there are dedicated deer hunters. At the present time, and for some years past, there has been a continuous running battle between the deer hunters and "the wolf lovers" — one school of thought being "Eliminate the wolves," the other argument being "Leave them alone — predators are Nature's balancing agent."

The Interprovincial Conservation Council has bravely stuck its neck out to arrange a meeting, at which a research scientist will present the collected research on wolves to the warring factions. . . The Interprovincial Conservation Council is an organization of interested Fish & Game Clubs on both sides of the Ottawa River.

This is a conclave of a rare and interesting nature, and The Watchman has been asked to extend an invitation to all interested parties. The meeting will be held on Friday, May 14, at 8 p.m. at the Community Centre, 270 Marier Road, Eastview, Ontario. The guest speaker will be Dr. Douglas Pimlett, the leading authority on wolves in Canada, and possibly in the world. The Ontario Department of Lands and Forests will have officers from the Kemptville, Tweed and Pembroke districts in attendance also.

It promises to be the most outstanding meeting of this type that the Ottawa Valley has had for some time, and everyone will be welcome. Wolves are sometimes numerous in this countryside, and debate on the merits of their survival recurs repeatedly. So this should prove a highly interesting topic for any from this district who care to attend.

For a year-round Mother's Day

THE SECOND SUNDAY in May has, for decades, been known as "Mother's Day" and on that occasion Mother is supposed to be Queen for the Day. She probably receives a few gifts, if she is living, and her children wear a red flower to denote her survival; if she is not living, the sons and daughters are supposed to wear a white flower.

Like birthdays, Mother's Day is a 24-hour dedication, but a real Mother's Day gift would be something of lasting value — perhaps a promise of taking over some particular task that would make her happier and healthier.

Many older mothers still have responsibilities and heavy housework, and don't have time to pamper themselves, or even to check up on what might be symptoms of any serious ailment, dental trouble or faulty eyesight. Seeing that she has a medical check-up, or that the needed glasses are provided, could make Mother's Day into — Mother's Year.

War on poverty

FOR MANY YEARS Canada had the world's second highest standard of living behind the United States. Then Sweden slipped in ahead of us.

Now, on the strength of the big 8.9 per-cent rise in the Gross National Product in 1964, this country appears to have regained its second-place position.

The GNP — value of all goods and services produced in Canada — was $47,003,000,000. This breaks down to $2,443 for each man, woman and child in the country.

The per-capita figure for the United States was about $3,200, while Sweden's was around $2,300.

In terms of real income, Canada's labor force of course earned much more. For example, the average industrial worker now is paid about $4,500 a year.

One thing that is significant about the over-all rise in production last year is that, when the 2½ percent increase in cost of living is taken into acount, it is still 6½ per-cent higher than 1963 in terms of real buying power.

The GNP increase also indicates that economic growth, at least for now, is proceeding faster than necessary to keep pace with the rapid expansion of the labor force. This is essential if we're to avoid the critically high unemployment of several years ago.

By and large, the immediate future looks rosy for Canada. But general prosperity doesn't mean everyone is prosperous. There are pockets of poverty in this country and there are many who are simply unable to provide for themselves under present conditions.

The throne speech, read at the opening of the new session of Parliament, said the government would introduce a Canada Assistance Plan aimed at filling in at least some of the gap in our social welfare programs.

Also announced was a plan to set up a Canadian version of the peace corps. Called the Company of Young Canadians, it will bring the idealism of youth to projects for helping underprivileged groups of Canadians as well as underdeveloped nations abroad.

It will take time to put these programs into operation and it may not be easy to assess their effectiveness, but they at least show that the problem of poverty has been given recognition. You have to know there's a problem before you can tackle it.

(Editorial in the Stanstead Journal)

Government interference in business, and the necessity of making business work for government, seems to be one of the chief preoccupations of politicians in this modern concept of the welfare state.

Business large and small now has to collect the federal and provincial sales taxes; deduct and forward the income taxes, federal and provincial; deduct for and purchase unemployment insurance stamps, and pay for half of them; fill out a lengthy form and pay for the minimum wage commission and the wage parity commission in Quebec, as well as filling out a form several pages long for the Department of Statistics in Ottawa and Quebec once a year.

In a large business there are whole office departments devoted to nothing but government bookkeeping to look after these demands. In the small business the owner can expect to devote almost as much time to government records as he does to those pertaining to his own business. Still, the most degrading aspect of this government interference is compulsion. Either you get the returns in the day and hour they are due or you pay a fine — no excuses accepted.

Now the Canadian Pension Plan looms as another deduction from wages and another item on which the employer will have to kick in his half. Also another job of bookkeeping for the government in which, if he fails to meet the deadline, he will be ruthlessly fined. It is to be assumed that the same arrangement will be made in Quebec for the separate pension plan here when details are announced.

Quebec's record for legislation taking unfair advantage of business is probably topped only behind the iron curtain. Take the Minimum Wage Commission for example. A government commission is established to set minimum wages. How is it financed?

Every employer is assessed one-tenth of one per cent of all wages, including the executives of the company. And this for the privilege of having the government tell him how much he has to pay his employees.

Then, of course, there are the famous wage parity laws of Quebec in which the government becomes to all practical purposes a labor union, and forcing the employer to foot half the bill. The parity committees set the wage scale for an industry, then not only force the employer to collect the union dues from the employees, but to contribute an equal amount.

The federal government thought up a good one recently, too. You can remit the income tax you deducted for it at your local bank, or you can send it to Ottawa by CERTIFIED cheque. Of course, you make the trip to the bank or have the cheque certified at your own expense and on your own time.

Our governments are already employing about a third of the total population, and getting half of the other two-thirds to work for them for nothing and, in many cases, having them pay for the privilege.

There is no limit to the length government will go in interfering in our private lives. The only thing that will stop it will be for more of us to stand up on our hind legs and squawk.

Remember those good old days when if you were earning $25 a week, you got $25 in your pay envelope? Now if you are earning $150, about 45 of it is deducted and you pay about 30 per cent of what is left in indirect taxes.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

Frightening, Isn't It?

Are you frozen with terror, these days? You're not? Then wake up, you vegetable. You're supposed to be.

Haven't you noticed the relentless campaign to scare the living daylights out of us ordinary souls? There seems to be a conspiracy, in the communications media, to put you and me and our wives and kids into a perpetual state of fear.

Advertising is the most prevalent, though not the most powerful, weapon of the scaremongers. It is suggested that if we have greasy hair or a greasy sink, we're sunk; that if we don't use a certain soap, we stink; that if we don't drink a man's beer, we're a bunch of you-know-whats.

Well, all this is enough to set up a certain nervous tension in the ordinary amiable chap. What man wants to admit he's a failure because he can't rush out to his friendly neighborhood dealer and snap up an all-new Super Aurora Borealis Shooting Star Sedan, with safety belts? Or has dandruff?

But this is for the morons. You know, all the people who don't read this column. If they want to wind up with acid stomachs, upset nerves, migraine headaches and irregularity, as constipation is now known, serves them right. Anybody who is frightened by that kind of advertising deserves it.

But it is not on the humble commercial-watcher that the big guns of the horror-brigade are trained. It is on the serious reader-viewer. They have moved, lock, stock and frightfuls, into the newspaper, magazine, book and "serious" TV field.

Every time I pick up, leaf through, or switch on one of these media, somebody is trying to frighten the wits out of me about something. It's a bit hard for a fellow to cope with.

Black headlines or graphic pictures suggest that I'm supposed to be shaken rigid about Communists and cancer; birth control and bingo; high school drop-outs and homosexualism.

Simultaneously, I'm supposed to be stricken by integration and insulation. If I'm not in favor of the former, there'll be a terrible blood-bath. If I'm agin the latter, my heating bill will soar.

Sometime during the day I'm supposed to be whimpering in a corner because of: high-priced funerals; the computer, which is going to put me out of a job; the unfulfilled housewife; and all that leisure time I'm going to have next year, when automation takes over. You'll notice I haven't even mentioned nuclear fission, which is old hat, nor the squirrels in my attic who, at this moment, according to an article, are chewing my wiring to start a fire in which we'll all be cremated, and do we have enough insurance?

If people weren't basically so tough, sensible and mean, they'd all go to bed and pull the covers over their heads. Fortunately, we're as sensitive as an old rubber boot. But, in case the scare-distributors are bothering you, let me give you a formula that is guaranteed to steady the nerves. One thing at a time.

Communists — most of us are twice as scared of our wives as we are of the Red menace.

Cancer — you want to live forever?

Creeping Socialism — better than the galloping type.

The Computer — so who wanted a job in the first place?

Population Explosion — see Birth Control; also Nuclear Fission.

High-Priced Funerals — you don't have to pay.

Verdict On The Budget

As Parliament debated Finance Minister Walter Gordon's budget this week, Canadians got a closer look at the national housekeeping plans for the coming year. The verdict: Just a little more spending money for every member of the family.

It was clear from the start that despite Opposition criticism, the budget would be approved by the House of Commons.

The ten per cent income tax cuts, which will total $265 million in a full year, are not dramatic enough to be obvious election bait. But as the first reductions since 1957 — although less than $1 a week for the average family — they are welcome enough.

The budget might be most remembered for its plan for a $1 billion Canada Development Corp. This blending of private and government investment (with Ottawa buying up to ten per cent of the shares) could be the beginning of a stepped-up public investment program in Canadian industry.

The scheme will succeed or fail on how attractive the Canadian public views the $5 shares which will soon be going on the market.

No amount of patriotism will induce hard-headed Canadians to sink their money in a minimum yield stock.

If the CDC is to succeed in its intent of assisting new industry and buying up industry which might otherwise fall into foreign hands, it will have to pay reasonable dividends to its shareholders.

The new budget reflects the country's generally healthy economy. The national growth rate has averaged eight per cent the past two years. Unemployment has dropped from 7.7 to 3.9 per cent in the past 12 months. Corporation profits are at record highs, which accounts in part for Mr. Gordon's decision not to cut corporation income taxes.

The only real cloud remaining on the horizon is whether Canada will be able to create the 1,500,000 new jobs which we are told we must have by 1970. Half a million new jobs were created in the past two years, but at this rate the 1970 goal will not be reached.

The tax cuts are the third major piece of Liberal legislation modelled on President Johnson's Great Society blueprint.

The throne speech outlined a war on poverty and a Canadian peace corps, both lifted from Washington. The tax cuts follow the U.S. experience that tax reductions increase business activity, resulting in even greater government revenues.

The tenor of the budget debate suggests that Parliament might at last be settling down after two years of rule by Prime Minister Pearson's minority government.

A heavy agenda still faces this session of Parliament, including retirement of senators at 75, revision of the Immigration act, and amendments to the British North America act to Canadianize the constitution.

Parliament could still blow up over the constitution amendments, which are charged with both extreme complexity and high emotion in the feelings arising from Quebec's relations with the rest of Canada.

The signs now point to a fall election, at which the Liberals think they could win a majority. But when the inevitable vote will come rests in the hands of John Diefenbaker, as much as anyone. He is still determined to have one more crack at power, and knows that his prospects will be enhanced by an election being held sooner rather than later.

ALCOHOL AND TRAFFIC IN SWEDEN

Sweden appears to have solved the problem of the drinking driver by imposing a mandatory three-year jail sentence on people caught driving while under the influence of alcohol.

MOTHER'S DAY PLANS

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Little did Miss Anna Jarvis dream when she originated the idea of a Mother's Day in Philadelphia (where it was first observed in 1908) that it would become so widely observed on this continent. During her later years she objected strenuously to the commercializing of her original creation of a day to honor mother.

Scoffers still laugh at special days as a commercial plan to promote the sale of gifts. Others may complain that it is a poor kind of child who needs a Mother's Day as a reminder of his debt to mother. Nevertheless, Mother's Day has grown each year in popularity. The good effects far exceed any undesirable results.

In a home where there are small children, this is one time when father can "go into a huddle" with his youngsters and plan a surprise for Mother. How little boys and girls love a secret! It may be very hard to keep, but what fun it is!

The gifts for Mother's Day are varied and they range from inexpensive ones to costly presents. As soon as a child is old enough to make a purchase for himself, and especially if he has his own allowance, a mother will appreciate very much some little article which he has chosen all by himself.

One little girl went into a store and picked out a large, colorful mixing bowl which took her eye. Her mother did not particularly need another mixing bowl, but on the morning of Mother's Day, when she unwrapped the parcel, her small daughter said with shining eyes, "Mummy, it was the very nicest thing I could find anywhere!" Mothers value the gifts on Mother's Day, not just for their value, or usefulness, but because they are an expression of love.

Plans for Mother's Day may well include one Sunday in the whole year when Mother does not get breakfast. Why not make the whole day a special holiday from housework for Mother?

If this is carried out, both father, and the children in a home, may be surprised to discover from their own experience, just how much time, and thought and energy are required for the routine tasks of making beds, tidying, preparing meals, and doing up the dishes!

This novel experiment might even lead to the family offering to take a little greater share in the regular home jobs. How much easier Mother's Day would be, on ordinary days in the year, if a son at school kept his own room "ship-shape" or a daughter could be counted on to wash the dishes and tidy up after supper!

It is customary on Mother's Day to wear a flower in honor of her to whom the day is dedicated — a colored flower if one's mother is living, a white one if she is no longer alive. Flowers often best express the sentiments of love which we find it difficult to put into words.

Fathers whose mothers are alive will want to take time to give their mothers pleasure on Mother's Day as well as show appreciation for the good job of being a mother which their wife does. Mothers of little children realize now they themselves have small ones to care for, something of the love and devotion which their own mothers once bestowed on them. They will tell their mother "I love you" because they know that their mother wants them to on Her Day.

"There's one thing an Englishwoman seems to keep forever — good legs. Good legs are not the prerogative of the young. The middle-aged woman with good legs looks just as attractive in short skirts as the young girl. In fact, the right length of skirt takes years off her appearance at once."

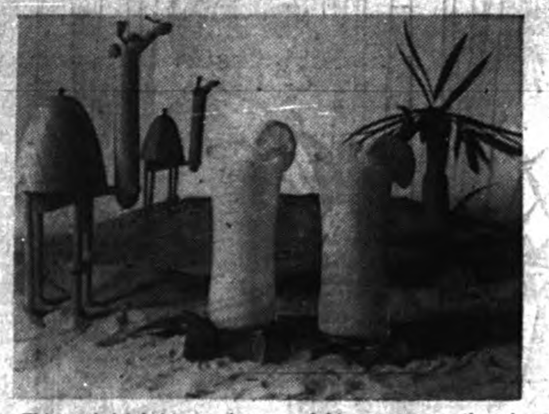
AS REFRESHING AS AN OASIS



This cool drink is as welcome a sight on warm-weather days as an oasis in the middle of the desert. Lemon Frappe is easily made with instant pasteurized powdered skim milk, lemon sherbet, whole milk and crushed ice. The refreshing beverage will be a special favorite with the youngsters in the family. They will like the foamy texture and delicious lemon flavor. And it's an extra nutritious drink, too. The instant skim milk powder fortifies the whole milk with proteins, B vitamins, phosphorous and calcium.

LEMON FRAPPE

(MAKES 6 SERVINGS)

1 cup instant pasteurized powdered skim milk	1-½ cups lemon sherbet
1 quart whole milk	2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons sugar	3 cups crushed ice
	Lemon slices, for garnish

Stir instant skim milk powder into whole milk. Stir in sugar and chill. Combine with sherbet and lemon juice; beat or blend in electric blender until foamy. Mix with ice and pour into chilled glasses. Garnish and serve with straws.

Springtime is rhubarb time

SOME OLD-FASHIONED RHUBARB DESSERTS

(Consumer Section)

Pink, tart 'n tender rhubarb is always a welcome addition to springtime meals whether you serve it in a sauce, pie or pudding. Now that it is on the market's seasonal list, use it in your menus often.

Your rhubarb desserts will be just as good as the rhubarb you select. So, here are a few tips on what to look for — good color is a sign of good flavor so choose well-colored stalks, pink to rosy-red. The stalk should be fresh, firm and crisp, yet tender. The new small or medium stalks are usually more tender than larger ones.

Here are two recipes for your rhubarb file from the Consumer Section kitchens. Both have a hint of the old-fashioned about them — delicious when served with thick fresh cream or ice cream.

Deep Dish Rhubarb Pie

5 Cups rhubarb (cut in 1-inch pieces), 1½ cups sugar, 6 tablespoons flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, pastry for 1-crust pie.

Sprinkle rhubarb with sugar and let stand while preparing pastry. Add combined flour and salt to rhubarb and mix thoroughly. Turn into a deep 6-cup baking dish and cover with pastry. Make 2 or 3 slits in pastry to allow steam to escape. Bake in a hot oven (425°F.) until pastry is browned and rhubarb is tender, 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Rhubarb Pinwheel Pudding

1 Cup sifted all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pastry spice or cinnamon, 2 tablespoons sugar, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 egg, beaten, 2 to 3 tablespoons milk, 3 cups rhubarb (cut in ½-inch pieces), ¾ to 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon butter.

Mix flour, baking powder, salt, spice and the 2 tablespoons sugar. Cut in the 3 tablespoons butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Combine egg and milk. Add to dry ingredients and mix quickly until dough forms a soft ball. Turn on to floured board, knead lightly 4 to 5 times. Roll out to a rectangle about 12 x 6 inches.

Mix the rhubarb and remaining sugar. Arrange half the rhubarb in bottom of a greased 5-cup baking dish. Sprinkle remaining rhubarb over dough and roll up like a jelly roll, sealing edges. Cut roll across into 1-inch slices and place slices cut side down on rhubarb in dish. Dot with remaining butter. Bake in a hot oven (400°F.) until browned, 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Snow Squares for dessert bridge

A spring-like, old-fashioned dessert that bears reviving is Snow Squares. It is a delicate white gelatin confection which is served with a flavorful orange sauce. The Poultry Products Institute says it has been "husband approved" and would make an attractive dessert for the next pot-luck supper or dessert bridge.

Snow Squares

1 Pkg. unflavored gelatin, ¼ tablespoon cold water, 1¼ cups hot water, 2 egg whites, ½ cup sugar, dash of salt, 12 graham crackers finely crushed.

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Add hot water and stir until dissolved. Cool. Add gelatin, sugar and salt to unbeaten egg whites. Beat with rotary or electric beater until mixture holds firm peaks when beater is removed. Pour into 8 x 13 cake pan lined with waxed paper or plastic or foil wrap. Two smaller containers may be used but mixture should be at least 1½ inches deep. Chill until firm. Turn out on waxed paper. Remove lining paper and cut gelatine into squares or fingers of serving size. Roll in graham cracker crumbs and arrange on serving plate. Serve with orange sauce (see recipe below). Yield 12 to 15 servings.

Orange Sauce

1 Cup orange juice, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind, dash of salt, ¼ to ½ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 egg yolks, 1 cup whipped cream.

Place juice and rind in saucepan. Combine sugar, salt, and cornstarch thoroughly and stir slowly into juice. Stirring constantly, heat slowly to boiling point. Reduce heat and continue slowly to cook, stirring until thickened. Remove from heat, add some of mixture to beaten egg yolks and return mixture to sauce-pan and cook and stir one minute longer. Cool. Just before serving, fold into 1 cup of whipped cream and serve with Snow Squares.

This is the year of glamorous legs, and despite outraged howls of protest from unimaginative males, the fashion for fancy hosiery is gathering steam. With skirt lengths rising and shoes showing more cut-outs, legs are definitely in focus.

Canadian editorial writers (mostly males, of course) have been deploring these "terrible figured stockings", but we would like to predict they have not seen anything yet. Newer, wilder patterns and colors are well on the way.

Canadian women are still buying plain sheer nylons but more and more are trying the textures, so the craze is picking up speed. It is still more evident in the larger cities, but we would bet the fad will spread across the land.

British women, for instance, have long been considered fairly conservative in matters of fashion, yet they have gone all-out for fancy stockings. Avant-garde "Mods" led the way but their mums and even grandmothers soon jumped into patterned legwear. The past winter has seen a veritable epidemic of wildly patterned woollen h[illegible] and striped tights in old Britain. Beetles — the insect variety — spiders, trees, and other designs are sported on all kinds of British legs.

The trend is a natural development for Canada. This country has long been a leader in hosiery fashion; prior to World War II domestic mills exported to more than 120 countries, and even now, with monetary and market restrictions, stockings are still prestige export business, even to the vaunted U.S.A. fashion market.

For spring and summer this year Canadian producers offer a wide variety of hosiery which includes sheer textured stockings in white and pastel shades. Blues, pinks, yellows and greens, white and chartreuse are "in" for the pace setters, with more modest diamond and striped designs in subdued shades for the conservative women.

Noteworthy sheer textured patterns in the new light shades are a snowflake design in white, plus a heavy stripe for country wear in pale green. Most glamorous are the lacy patterns for evening wear, but these too are shown in light shades as well as dark.

Sheer stockings themselves offer great fashion variety. There are now stockings with nude heels, sandal feet, non-run toes, with welt interest, special stretch tops, and of course the new Cantrece with its special crimping quality that gives an amazing clinging fit.

The trend to patterned stockings has been explained as inevitable. We had gone about as far as we could go with the sheer nude look hosiery. Obviously fashion could only swing in the other direction and despite the fuss, it has a long way to go yet. One interesting side reason is that women are discovering that many textured stockings wear much longer than normal sheers. The answer is simple. Whether they are diamond patterned, striped, or what have you, these stockings contain more nylon threads and are thus stronger.

For years now, the Consumers Association of Canada and hosiery manufacturers have been trying jointly to convince women that they cannot expect 15 denier sheers to wear as well as the 40 and 30 denier hose from which the first nylons were made, and some of which are still available for those who prefer them.

A trade tribute

It is a shame to waste the least little bit of asparagus, but it's really worse to serve it with the least bit of tough stalk at the end. An easy way to tell just where to make the break is to hold the stalk loosely and snap off the end instead of cutting it off. It will snap easily just where the tender part and the tough portion begins.

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

Young someday-to-be husbands in Canada apparently don't know much about furniture styling, but they know what they like.

A furniture manufacturer has been conducting polls among young people in Canada and the United States, and reports finding young men in both countries interested in helping to shop for furniture for their homes.

The company talked to a panel of 28 young people in Toronto, five boys and 23 girls. One-third were college students or graduates, the rest high school students or graduates who did not plan to go on with their education.

They were chosen to represent a cross-section of income groups, religions and ethnic backgrounds and urban and suburban areas.

A company spokesman said, "The boys were especially articulate. We were amazed at how much they contributed to the evening's conversation." Color and style as well as quality concerned them.

Buy New

The report on the panel says Canadians want to start their first homes with new furniture, not with hand-me-downs, but unlike the two U.S. groups interviewed, the Canadians said they would welcome the advice of parents when they bought.

They said they would not actually take a parent shopping with them, but would talk it over before and after they did their own shopping, and be guided by advice.

The Canadians were reported to know more about furniture construction and value than their U.S. counterparts, but as little about formal style categories.

All of the groups, in spite of their concern about style and quality and their desire to start with new furniture, said they would want to keep their first living room furniture no more than about 10 years.

Want to Know

They indicated they wanted to be careful shoppers.

None of the young people knew much about brand names in furniture, but they told their inquisitors they would respond best to honest, straightforward advertising.

They said they wanted several kinds of help to tell them something about furniture before they bought it. They suggested they would like to see fact tags put on furniture in stores.

They were also aware that they would like to be able to rely on salesmen, and would also like to be treated with respect and honesty in spite of their youth.

The company report says the polls have been conducted to find out something about the coming market for furniture and how the attitudes of young people differ from those of their parents when furniture-buying time comes to them.

ICE CREAM Tops with Mother

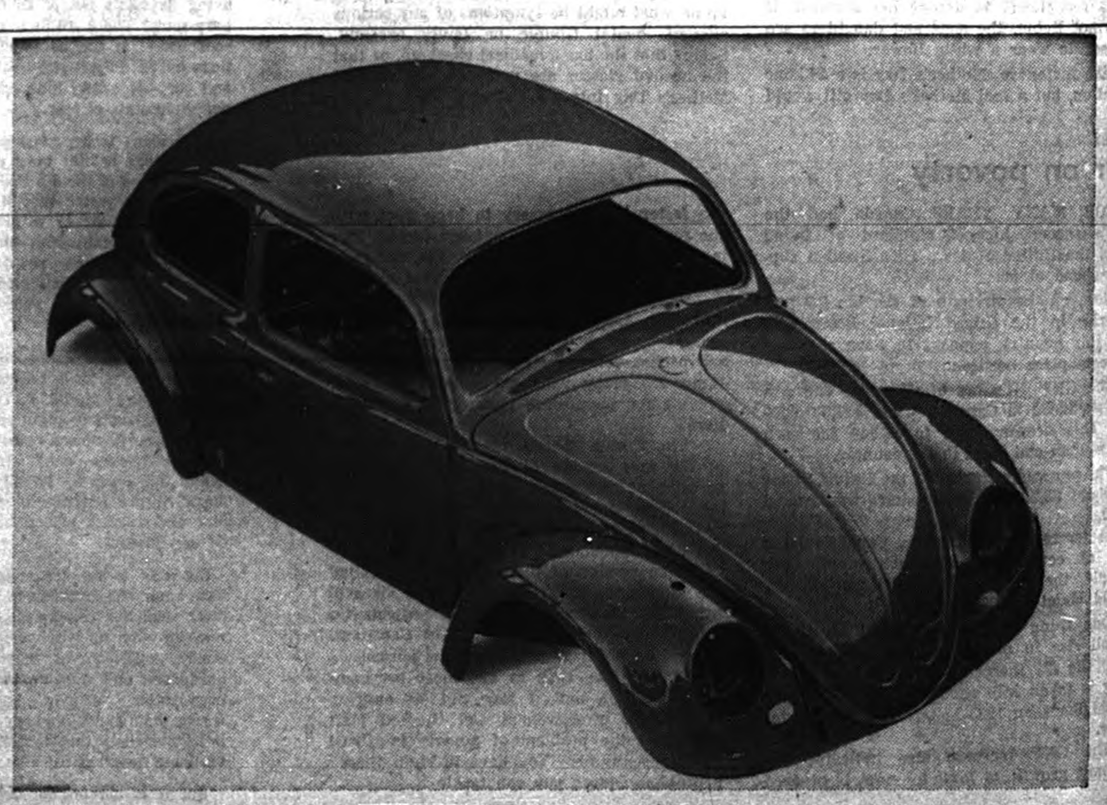
Lowe Bros. Dairy Ltd.
Main St. Lachute



After we paint the car, we paint the paint.

And before we do either to a Volkswagen, we bathe it.

We bathe it in steam, we bathe it in alkali, we bathe it in phosphate. Then we bathe it in a neutralizing solution.

Then we dunk the whole thing into a vat of slate gray primer until every square inch of metal is covered. Inside and out.

After the dunking, we bake it and sand it by hand.

Then we paint it.

This time the VW puts the paint on itself. The car is electrically charged to attract paint. Molecule by molecule.

It just seems to grow on the car. Thick and even.

After another baking, we wet-sand the finish. By hand. And another coat of paint is put on.

Then we bake again. And sand again. And add another coat of paint. The fourth.

Of course, every step we take in making a Volkswagen involves the same attention to detail.

And there are 5,320 inspectors along our production line to keep us from getting rusty.

Horwood - Eve

The marriage of Lauretta Pauline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Eve, of Cartierville, to Mr. W. Bryden Horwood, of The Hague, Netherlands, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. G. Horwood, of Dunany, Que., took place April 17 in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Cartierville, the Rev. James MacLean officiating. The church was decorated with Easter lilies and pink snapdragons.

The bride, given away by her father, wore an Empire gown of white silk shantung, fashioned in an A-line, having a bodice of Guipure lace and a back panel falling into a short train appliquéd with Guipure lace. Her bouffant veil of tulle illusion was held by a single rose of material to match her gown, and she carried a cascade bouquet composed of white gardenias and bell hyacinths.

Miss Mary Fisher, as maid of honor, and little Miss Marion Eve, as junior bridesmaid for her aunt, wore Empire gowns of yellow silk shantung having round necklines and short sleeves. Their headdresses were rosebuds fashioned of the same material as their gowns, and they carried baskets of white field daisies and yellow Sweetheart roses.

Mr. Graham W. Horwood acted as best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. James Conrad, of Toronto, and Mr. Frank Gillett, Jr., of Montreal.

Mrs. Eve, the mother of the bride, was in a two-piece suit of beige raw silk having an overblouse of beige lace. She wore a beige and brown organza hat and a corsage bouquet of brown Cymbidium orchids. . . Mrs. Horwood, the bridegroom's mother, wore a gown of blue American silk matelasse with a matching hat and a corsage bouquet of pink orchids.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Capri Hotel, where centrepieces of white Shasta daisies and pink snapdragons were used as decoration. Later Mr. and Mrs. Horwood left for the Laurentians, the bride travelling in a black and white Glen check and wearing a white hat and a corsage bouquet of yellow Sweetheart roses.

They will reside in The Hague, Netherlands.

Montreal — Retaining the Company's unbroken record of safe driving awards since 1958, 70 Bell Telephone Company of Canada employees were awarded safe-driving certificates at the annual meeting of the Quebec Safety League last week in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel.

Each of the award-winning drivers has completed a total of 100,000 accident-free miles.

In addition to the 100,000-mile awards, three Bell employees received certificates signifying 25 years of accident-free driving.

Bell Telephone operates over 1,900 vehicles in this province, and the Company's safety record in 1964 has gained it an honorable mention in the QSL's Public Utilities division. The 1964 winner in this division was Quebec Telephone.

A discomforting reply to Berton's 'Comfortable Pew'

The St. John's Cathedral Boys' School, and the Company of the Cross which runs it, have undertaken the publication of a book in rebuttal to Pierre Berton's The Comfortable Pew.

The book was written by Ted Byfield, a teacher in the school and a former Winnipeg newspaperman. It is entitled Just Think, Mr. Berton (a little harder).

The book tells the story of a group of Winnipeg laymen who ten years ago set out to bring agnostics and atheists into the Christian faith and succeeded so eminently that five of their converts became clergymen.

In so doing, it sets out an argument against Mr. Berton's recommended changes in the 20th Century Church and sharply questions the grounds upon which Mr. Berton's criticisms were based. Examples:

"If a man's decision to invite some fair maiden into his bed is not subject to moral judgment, then neither is his decision to kick some dark gentleman out of his restaurant. . ."

"To ignore ninety per cent of what Christ said in order to extract a few phrases that happen to fit one's political cause is not what Mr. Berton likes to call 'double-think'. It is zero-think. . ."

"Mr. Berton has underestimated the comforts of a Church pew. It is a comfort beyond the wildest reaches of his imagination. . ."

Explaining the school's decision to undertake publication of the book, Frank Wiens, the headmaster, said:

"The publication of The Comfortable Pew poses for the Church two distinct and pressing tasks. . .

"One of them is an opportunity. It has started people talking about religion again. We must take advantage of that interest. The Church surely has something to say on the subject of religion. Let's say it. A great many people outside and inside the Church have never heard what it is.

"The other task is to meet a challenge. While much of Mr. Berton's criticism is valid, much also is based on blind misinformation. Like several million other people, Mr. Berton thinks that belief in God is obsolete, that nobody can really know what is right, that the essential business of the Church is to improve society, that miracles like the resurrection of Christ are impossible, that prayer is a waste of time. All this must be contradicted clearly and logically. Otherwise, by our silence, we'll imply he's right. And he can only be answered in a book."

"This is a task for Christian education," said Wiens, "and the business of this school is Christian education."

The foreword to the book is written by Dr. Pollard, executive director of the Institute of Nuclear Studies, Oak Ridge, Tenn., one of the scientists who worked on the atomic bomb project. After the war, Dr. Pollard himself became a Christian, trained for holy orders, and now combines the role of priest with his scientific work. The book is illustrated by Peter Kuch, Winnipeg political cartoonist.

Publisher of this book is the Company of the Cross, an Anglican religious education society. The company operates St. John's Cathedral Boys' School.

Country Notebook

Macdonald College

When I go back farming, the first implement I buy will be a field sprayer. I put it at the top of the list because no other tool can save me more time or do more jobs. It can "cultivate", it can "mow", it can "plough" (excellent crops of corn were grown last year seeded in chemically-killed sod), it can brush out fencerows, it can "summer-fallow", it can clean up rough pastures. It can do twenty feet at a go, and at four miles an hour. That's not far off 100 acres a day.

And, boy, can I remember the frustration of bouncing over a ploughed field loaded with twitch grass behind a sleepy team of horses with a five-foot disc harrow. Getting off to push didn't help either. But it kept me awake.

I don't think I will try to build my own sprayer. These do-it-yourself kits were fine when the only chemical was 2,4-D, and ten gallons per acre all the water you needed. But there is a hundred and one new chemicals, and their application can be very exacting.

I want my outfit trailer-mounted. It must carry a tank large enough (200 gallons) that I don't need to run back to the creek to reload more often than once in five acres. And that tank must be corrosion-proof, fibre glass or plastic lined; I don't want rust plugging up nozzles when I am in a hurry.

I want a good pump. If I can afford it, it will be a piston type, 12 gallons/minute; it has the capacity, the pressure and the reliability I need to put on thirty or more gallons per acre at pressures up to 100 p.s.i. The newer centrifugal pumps are good, I am told, but don't deliver high pressures. I might even settle for an eight-roller impeller pump; I am told the new rubber rollers stand up to the wear of wettable powders longer than the nylon ones.

I want a mechanical agitator in the tank. A lot of trouble with Atrazine has been traced to the powder settling out when only by-pass agitation has been used.

The boom will be standard 21 feet. The nozzle will be hardened stainless steel. They cost $2.00 each — four times as much as brass, but are many times more durable than plastic or brass. And that saves time calibrating the sprayer every spring. They will be fan-pattern nozzles, with a spray angle of 80 degrees. That is so I can keep the boom close to the ground and avoid drift.

Incidentally, I found out the other day what the code numbers mean on one make of nozzle. Tee Jet 8004 means the spray pattern covers an 80 degree angle and that it delivers 04 gallons per minute at standard pressure (40 p.s.i.).

Peter Hamilton took in the Spring Show and Sale at Sherbrooke last week. He reports that it had all the glamor and excitement usually associated with a beef cattle show. He says there is something about all those well-fitted animals and the people who show them that makes one feel prosperous just to stand and watch. And especially when the bidding goes to $775 for the top Angus.

But underlying all the glamor and excitement, Peter detected some concern for the future of the beef industry in the province.

At the annual meeting of the Quebec Cattle Association the previous night, the discussion swung away from the usual pattern of pedigrees and bloodlines to the economics of beef-raising.

Peter noted two lines of thought regarding the purpose of this sale. Should it be to supply and encourage new breeders with top stock? Or should it be to supply excellent and reasonably-priced bulls to the commercial breeder?

It was evident, also, that the breeders themselves were not entirely happy with the methods of selection for these sales. There is need, they feel, for performance records as well as show-ring standards, to measure an animal's worth.

A new early morning farm radio broadcast from the College is the big news this week on our back door step. Mark Waldron has had his "Ear to the Ground" every morning at 7.05 on C.K.S.T. Sherbrooke. But that left out the people in the Chateauguay Valley and north of the river.

So starting May 10, C.F.C.F. will carry one like it at 6.10 in the morning, six days a week. Let us know if you pick it up, and how you like it.

HEARD THESE LATELY?

Here are three stories I heard recently. (I also heard them many years ago, but the young generation wouldn't know that.). . .

Two colored ladies met on the street. One said: "Saw Liza Jane last week and she told me the news! So you're gettin' married?"

"Yes, just one week from tomorrow and we'll be off to Niagara Falls for our honeymoon."

"Niagara Falls? Why, Liza told me you were going to Bermuda."

"Bermuda? Does she think I'm crazy? To go all the way to Bermuda wit' a man I hardly know?"

* * *

A lady appeared in Eaton's wool department and said she wanted to buy a few skeins of steel wool. The clerk explained that she would find that in the hardware department.

"But why?" asked the lady. "This is the wool department, isn't it?"

"Why, yes. But steel wool is an entirely different product. What did you intend to use it for?"

"My husband is going on a fishing trip soon, and I wanted to knit him a folding stove."

A man, grossly overweight, was advised by his doctor to go on an exclusive onion diet. So for three weeks he ate nothing but onions. At the end of that period he had lost 25 pounds and 35 friends.

And before I sign off, here's a riddle for you:

King Walter's princely gift

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

67 Wychwood Park
Toronto 4, Ont.
April 30, 1965

The Editor
Lachute Watchman,

Dear Sir:

The Government of Canada proposes to make a princely gift to two United States publishers, the publishers of Time and Reader's Digest.

History has many examples of princely gifts. Prince Rupert was given all of the northwestern part of Canada east of the Rockies, approximately 1,300,000 square miles, by his cousin Charles II. Charles I was similarly generous. He gave as an outright gift all of what are now the states of Maryland and Delaware to Lord Baltimore, whose fame lingers in the name of a city. The whole of what is now the Maritimes was a gift from James I to Sir William Alexander. There were probably dozens of such gifts, big and little across the land, and no one thought the worse of the ruling monarchs for their generosity.

But there haven't been many such gifts in recent history. Perhaps none until now from a democratic government. Now it is proposed by the Pearson Government, as shown by the Walter Gordon budget speech, to make a gift, to grant a monopoly, to two foreign publications.

Both Time and Reader's Digest import into Canada free of duty practically all of their editorial material. It is high-grade material of its kind. No Canadian publication could afford the cost of comparable material. As a result, Time and Reader's Digest have an appeal to Canadian advertisers that no Canadian publication dependent on its own resources can meet.

Time and Reader's Digest, under the Gordon formula, won't have even U.S. competition for their pre-eminent position in the Canadian market. Finance Minister Walter Gordon says that other foreign publications will not be permitted to have so-called Canadian editions.

This favor to these two publications will be worth many millions of dollars annually to each of them in gross revenue. The two together now garner more than 50 per cent of magazine advertising available to home-owned Canadian publications.

Why this special consideration to such rich organizations as Time and Reader's Digest? The answer seems to be that the United States government will not let the Canadian government deal with the problem as the domestic problem it is. On each occasion when anything to help the Canadian magazine publishing business to help itself is proposed, Washington steps in.

Ten years ago there was an effort by the previous Liberal Government. It took the form of a tax on advertising in these magazines. This was merely a domestic problem and the Canadian people had the right and were required to deal with it as such.

When the original proposal of the O'Leary Commission was made public, there were other protests from Washington, which frightened off the Canadian government from doing anything at that time.

Mr. Pearson, who upheld the previous tax on advertising in Time and Reader's Digest, is now the prime minister. What is proposed now, through Mr. Gordon, is a complete surrender to these foreign magazines.

Yours truly,
J. G. Johnston

Paper collection this Saturday

Lachute Boy Scouts will hold their annual spring drive for paper salvage this coming Saturday, May 8. By this effort the group raises an appreciable sum towards its funds; and residents, appreciating the removal of accumulated papers and magazines, are generally glad to assist.

Also acceptable will be flowerpots, which are saleable for reuse.

Householders and business people are asked to have their contributions well packaged and place them at the roadside, or in view of the collectors when they make their rounds. Out-of-town pick-ups may also be arranged for; please phone LO 2-2858.

Of Many Things

By Ambrose Hills

I'LL TAKE GINGER SNAPS

Advertising men have fallen into a trap set by themselves.

For years they stressed newness. Everything from toilet paper to dill pickles had "new" on the label. One advertising man read the other and did the same thing, thinking a craze had begun.

No craze was there. Most of us still want good, old-fashioned ginger snaps. The National Biscuit Company tried to market a product hailed as "Snickerdoodles Cookies — they're NEW!" The campaign fell flat. A sensible executive changed the name to plain "Cinnamon Sugar Cookies", backed it with a big advertising campaign. Result: sales rose by $4,000,000 within a year.

Cleverness often flops in advertising. For example, so many gasolines with fancy, esoteric additives dreamed up by advertising types. The public has ceased to believe them. BA Oil received a tremendous response when they simply said they had clean gasoline and clean washrooms and proved it. It made sense and drew customers.

Advertising agencies are going to have to bring their writers down from the clouds and away from kooky cleverness which has been characteristic of their copy lately.

If I ran a corporation, I'd insist that a lot of my advertising dollars went into weekly papers and local radio. This would force the agency writers to talk to the grass roots for a while. It would get them away in part, at least, from the pseudo-sophisticated and glossy copy they've been perpetrating on TV audiences because they think it's a glamor media.

Industry has done a fine job of improving products. The food industry in particular deserves success, because a family today can feed itself on a much smaller percentage of family income than ever before, even though prices seem high. Advertising — an important link in getting goods to the people — isn't holding its end up. It talks a bogus language.

War veterans observe V-E Day anniversary

Parade, service and laying of wreaths

Celebration of V-E Day, which occurred 20 years ago, was fittingly marked on Sunday when veterans of both wars, accompanied by members of the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary and the Army Cadets, marched from the Legion Memorial Hall to attend divine service at the United Church. The Rev. Harold Thompson gave an inspiring address, stressing the ravages of war and its tragic consequences and indicating what must be done by all to prevent a recurrence of such cataclysms.

The scripture reading was given by the Legion president, Comrade J. Sewell.

From the church, the parade marshalled by Comrade R. St. Laurent, proceeded to the Memorial Park, where wreaths were laid at both cenotaphs in reverent memory of those who paid the supreme sacrifice. Silence was observed during the sounding of the Last Post and Reveillé.

The president of the Legion, J. Sewell, the president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Mrs. C. Napp, and Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon officiated. The Cadet band and pipes supplied the music for the marching, which terminated at the Legion Hall.

On the previous evening, Saturday, a banquet was held to mark the event, a tasty meal being served by the Auxiliary members at the Legion Hall. On this occasion Comrade Art Philips, taken completely by surprise, was presented with an honorary secretary's badge in token of efficient past work for the Branch.

President Sewell gave a short talk, bringing to mind facts and figures of the 2nd World War, the great and needless destruction of life and property, all of which should impel us to work unceasingly for a permanent and lasting peace. . . A social evening followed.

Trace stolen radar from police car

A lengthy investigation by Lieut. Réal Arcouette and Cst. Claude Beaulieu, of the town police force, led to the recovery of a portion of the police department's radar equipment, valued at $1,596, which was reported stolen some time ago from a local garage where the police car had been left following an accident.

The accident with the vehicle occurred on November 20 of last year, and it was early afternoon four days later that the electronic equipment was discovered missing. Investigation brought out the possibility the equipment might be at the home of a local juvenile, and a search warrant resulted in the recovery of the base of the radar, which included the make and serial number.

The 16-year-old youth, who has no previous police record, was released in the custody of his father and will appear in Welfare Court.

Report to Council on cost of new B'burg town hall

Varied matters at regular meeting

By Harry McCosh

Brownsburg — The regular monthly meeting of the Brownsburg Town Council, held on May 3, featured discussion on a variety of important subjects. After monthly vouchers amounting to $11,135.95 were approved, Police Chief André Roy gave his report — in which he said he was called upon to investigate a break into a private car; an entry into a private home, during which clothes were stolen; and a hit-and-run driver involved in a slight traffic accident. His search, however, has failed to uncover the culprit(s) in each case.

In response to a request from Police Chief Roy, Council approved the purchase of a first-aid kit for the police car at a cost of $27.50. The Council received word from their legal advisor that the Cap-chur pellet gun which is used to immobilize stray dogs, or other animals, is legal under Quebec law. Council postponed a decision on the purchase of a pellet gun, however, until the next meeting.

The councillors also postponed a decision on the purchase of molyslip plating for motors of the town's vehicles. The Council was approached in this regard by Mr. Stanley Harris of Brownsburg, who pointed out that this plating, when added to the motor oil, would save on fuel, while preserving the life of the motor itself.

In response to a request from a local resident, two members of the Council — Mr. Alcide Leduc, and Mr. Germain Doth — decided to arrange a meeting between the C-I-L Social Club, the Brownsburg Loisirs, and the Town Council, for the purpose of organizing a minor baseball league for the summer months, June to September.

On an amendment to a previous motion, Council granted authority to Gatineau Power for the installation of 11 mercury-vapor lights; the addition of 12 new 100-watt lamps; the removal of four 100-watt lamps; and the relocation of seven 100-watt lamps and one mercury-vapor lamp of 150 watts.

The Council decided that on Tuesday, May 18, the town trucks would be available to haul rubbish to the dump. Any residents who have rubbish to dispose of should place the material in containers on the edge of the street. This rubbish, however, is to be of a kind resulting from spring clean-up, and should not contain materials which will not burn.

A motion by Councillor Leduc, that one public notice board be established at the town hall, was approved. Council then named three evaluators — Mr. Stanley Thompson, Mr. Dorius Lepine, and Mr. James Donaldson — for 1965-'66. These evaluators are to begin work on June 1.

Council then received word from Dr. L. Turcotte, advising them that the Child Health Clinic will be held at the town hall on Wednesday, May 26, and on the fourth Wednesday of each succeeding month.

Secretary-treasurer Vincent Charbonneau then told the council that the total cost of the new town hall was as follows:

Original contract	$49,758.38
(Minus) credit for guardian	300.00
Total contract	$49,458.38
(Plus) additional (for panel, cell windows, front railing, and cement)	942.97
Furniture	7,123.47
Architect	1,750.00
Total cost of building	$59,574.82

Of this, $58,000 has been paid, leaving a balance of $1,574.82.

The Council then heard from Mr. Charbonneau that five people had applied for the part-time police job which was advertised a week before in this newspaper.

The meeting was then adjourned until May 10.

Piper calls the tune on parking meters, Berry Street proposal is pigeon-holed

Start reading of water meters in stores, industries

At the regular Council meeting for May, with Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon presiding and all councillors in attendance, a complainant at the previous meeting, Irenée Cayer, came forward to thank the authorities for measures to curb night disturbance by dogs. It appears that the situation is now normal and serene, in his section of Main Street.

Notice of motion was given to introduce amendments on garbage removal.

Since a proposed plan to install parking meters on a strip along Berry Street which the town wished to rent from CPR, the latter company has changed its offer. Instead of renting for $26 a month, the CPR proposes that, since the town wants to install meters, it shall pay the railway 25 percent of the revenues until the meters are paid for, and 50 percent of revenues thereafter. In addition, the town would attend to snow removal and maintenance. . . On these terms the councillors seemed no longer interested, and the offer was pigeon-holed.

Acknowledgment was received from the Carrefour du Livre, thanking the authorities for the hospitality of city hall during Library Week. Also a letter was received from the Chamber of Commerce, commending the proposals on town planning and zoning.

The Chamber of Commerce asked that this week, May 9 to 15, be declared Clean-up Week, and the United Textile Workers of America similarly requested a proclamation of "Labor Union Week" (Semaine du Syndicalisme) on May 10 to 16, suggesting that a civic reception be tendered to the Union movement representatives.

Following a lengthy discussion on water meters, it was decided to start reading meters from now on, in the case of local stores and industries.

On a proposal from Ald. L. W. Armstrong and Dr. L. Middleton, the trustees of the Barron property will be asked to clean up the land, and renovate or demolish the residence, which is presently an eyesore on Main Street.

Ald. Edmund McFaul was appointed pro-mayor for the ensuing three months' period.

Grants, donations and other Council outlays

In the department of grants and donations, Town Council agreed to have one representative attend a $100 dinner organized for funds of the Prêt d'Honneur (students' loans) of the St. Jean Baptiste Society. Council also voted its customary donation to the Cancer Campaign.

* * *

A sum of $300 was voted to the Chamber of Commerce, for expenses with the tourist kiosk this season. The amount requested was $750, representing salaries paid to the students in charge, but Mayor Z. Saindon claimed the tourists last year found the information unsatisfactory and that this job should not be assigned to juveniles. . . The $300 was proposed by Ald. L. Carrière and Dr. R. A. Dumais, and passed unanimously.

* * *

The Argenteuil Agricultural Society will receive a grant of $495. Present at the meeting were Secretary-Manager Ken Riley and the past-president, Bud MacGeorge, who pointed out that the town used some of the Society's land for snow-dumping in the winter.

* * *

On a request of the Roval Canadian Legion, Branch 70, the town provided a wreath for the V-E Day observance in the Memorial Park (last Sunday).

* * *

To give logical realism to the by-law which forbids littering of the streets, Council voted to order 12 movable rubbish receptacles, which citizens are asked to make use of. . . It was also agreed to buy a 12-ft. aluminum boat for use of the police in emergencies; the need had been demonstrated on various occasions during the year.

* * *

The civic auditorium having undergone interior face-lifting, it was considered reasonable to replace the rickety tables with new ones; a dozen of these were authorized.

* * *

It was finally agreed to settle the balance due on the purchase of water meters. This had been delayed several months awaiting an explanation from the company, which had now been duly received.

* * *

Three fire extinguishers will be purchased for the filtration plant. It seems the building and staff lack fire protection, and this addition was justified.

In conclusion, bills for $36,548.23 in the past month were approved for payment.

Lachute asked to join Civil Protection plan

A representative from the province-wide Civilian Protection organization, Mr. Marcel Dame, appeared at Council meeting last week to explain the system, now three years in existence, and to request Lachute's participation with the hundreds of municipalities now enlisted.

The organization is for "protection" purposes, as its name denotes, and aims to entrain auxiliary police and firemen, rescue crews, and to provide certain equipment for the emergencies of a conflagration, flood, tornado or other disaster.

There are presently 13 municipalities in this area participating, and the emergency material is housed at Oka, where the organization has rented a building from the corporation. The spokesman stated there would be no objection to opening a centre in Lachute if the town could make quarters available.

According to Mr. Dame, the federal government defrays 75 percent of the cost, the provincial government 15 percent, and the municipality provides the remaining 10 percent. For Lachute with an overall population of 8,000, the total would amount to $2,000, and the cost to the municipality $200 — or 25 cents per capita.

Council will render its decision by the end of this month.

New proposals to remedy Main St. traffic tie-ups

A new appraisal of Main Street traffic comes from the city engineer, Hubert Pilon, and Police Capt. Réal Chartrand, and there is possibility of a change as the result of their joint study.

According to these officials, Main Street must be considered firstly as a traffic-way, and only secondarily as an area for business parking. Their recommendations would therefore curtail the parking space (and doubtless raise protests from the storekeepers, as in the case of a previous experiment).

It is claimed, in brief, that traffic should use the centre of the thoroughfare and cars should be parked at the curb, leaving room for motorists to back out without holding up the flow of traffic. This would reduce parking slots by about 15 percent, but it would accelerate traffic movement in both directions.

The preliminary report of the town's consulting engineers has also indicated that the Main and Bethany intersection should be improved.

Implementation of these proposals would be gradual, and would require the co-operation of all citizens — especially motorists, who must view the larger interests of the town and aid the municipal authorities accordingly.

Bogus $20 bills in circulation

Residents are warned to be on guard for the passing of bogus $20 bills in this area. A local bank manager reported this week there had been a 'half dozen' turned in and detected by his tellers. There may be counterfeit bills of other denominations in circulation here, but these were the only ones reported.

It is recommended that storekeepers or others scrutinize carefully any $20 bills passed by strangers. Bills on paper of inferior quality should arouse suspicion. If in doubt, businessmen should phone and consult their bank staff.

In cases of bogus bills, the payee obviously stands the loss. The bank must immediately take them out of circulation, but can allow the depositor nothing in return.

RCMP officers from St. Jerome have investigated the complaints and reported having 10 such counterfeit bills in their possession, all recovered from the immediate Lachute area. The serial numbers of the bills are as follows: HE-6556699, AE-2729861; LE-9097369.

Two men from Lachute have been questioned in connection with the passing of this bogus money, but according to police, no arrests had been made up to Tuesday afternoon.

Community Concert campaign workers held rally for membership canvass

There were around 30 workers in attendance, including representatives from Lachute, Brownsburg, St. Andrews, Cushing, Hawkesbury and St. Eustache.

Present at the Golf Club tartan room to inspire the canvassers and to discuss plans, were the new president, Mme Jacques Bedard, and the membership joint-chairmen, Mrs. G. R. Rigby and Mlle Juliette Rodrigue. A welcome visitor and old friend was Mr. Leo Bernache, of Ottawa, manager of Community Concerts Association for Canada, while Jacques Bedard, long-time secretary of the local group, had the necessary information and material to equip the workers for this campaign.

Mrs. Fernand Legault, the retiring president, thanked all those who had given loyal assistance during her three years in office.

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

There's a lane or thoroughfare running down to the river between Dumais' oil station and the next building, occupied by Miron, dry-cleaners. It is 36 ft. wide and over 100 ft. in length, but few people know about it, for it finds no place on the map, and its last official mention was in 1883. In that year it was designated as the property of one John Fish, but its present owner is unknown. (One of Lachute's early mayors was James Fish, 1887-89, a noted mill owner and industrialist.)

Hint on the new town garbage receptacles. . . Average (walking) distance for consumption of a Dairy Queen sundae is a quarter-mile down the Brownsburg Road. It is here that cones and containers are discarded at the roadside — an appropriate spot for a waste receptacle.

Fire in dwelling, Brownsburg Road

A Tuesday afternoon fire caused considerable damage to a large bathroom on the main floor of a three-storey dwelling, at 89 Brownsburg Road. Damage to the remainder of the building was limited to smoke and water.

The alarm was sounded at 2.40 p.m. and firemen encountered considerable smoke and heat pouring forth from both entrances of the main floor of the building, occupied by the Emile Prud'homme family, where all the damage occurred.

The fire was controlled within a short period, however, and the majority of the furniture in the Prud'homme dwelling was taken out by firemen and passers-by.

The building is owned by Aurice Chenier, who occupies a basement apartment, and the family of Roma Pilon occupies the upstairs dwelling, where some smoke damage occurred.

By BOB ATCHISON

With nearly all the lakes open now, it shouldn't take too long before we hear stories of good fish being taken. A comment heard often this year, is that the opening day was rotten. But this is understandable; after all, with most lakes frozen right to the shore line, unless a hole was drilled or chopped in the ice, there could be no fishing. I think the general complaint was rather a feeling of frustration among the anglers. In some cases, chopping through the ice was worth while, for it appears the noise had a lot to do with attracting the fish. On top of this, any glimmer of light in the water would attract life beneath the surface. However, I think the noise had most to do with it.

* * *

Some good perch are being caught in the river right now. It also appears they have been anxious to be caught, because almost every time out, fair to good catches are reported. Big pike may be seen basking in the waters of Lac Filion; don't get excited though, they just won't touch any kind of lure thrown at them. You know the type, and the cold-shoulder treatment. With the perch, however, it's a different matter. They are being taken, and some very good ones too. This little spot is very hard to get into. Even with a boat from the river, it entails a lot of puffing and pulling. But I know it's worth it. Walking along the shore, care should be taken, and no youngsters should be allowed to go there alone. The sides are very mushy, and it could lead to a lot of trouble if you happen to sink into the mush.

* * *

Lake Louisa has started producing. This lake never seems to quit. A number of fair red trout have been taken, and these will increase as the weather improves. I have not heard of any greys yet, but maybe this is just a little too early.

* * *

Geese by the hundreds can be seen around this area. Even the group that have been frequenting the North River for a long time, are still with us. I imagine their leaders have all the information on conditions up north, and have decided to stay a few more days. However, I heard what seemed to be a very large flock flying over during the night of May 5. The time it took these birds to pass overhead was roughly 15 minutes, so it can be figured it was a very large flock. Of course, I'm hoping that some of these geese will stay with us all summer, and raise their young. I know this is wishing too much, but it sure would be great.

* * *

Now for more ominous matters. . . As we all know, the spring has been very, very dry — and this poses the serious problem of fire. There are a couple burning right now, and one of them is not too far from this area. Anyone travelling in the bush these days knows just how very critical this lack of water is, and unless we have some very good rains, the situation will not improve. Right now the bush is as dry as it would ordinarily be in June, so all it needs is some careless person to start a conflagration. It would not be a surprise to have the province bushlands closed to all travel in the very near future. I know most of us think that it is unnecessary for these forests to be closed, assuming no doubt we are always careful. We may be, but fires still start — and anyone seeing the death and destruction left after a bush fire would never want to see this havoc again. It's worse than any damage caused by war, believe me. Not only is there a great monetary loss, but think of the loss to wildlife. This is really the important thing to me, and I fondly believe, to most of us.

* * *

In Montreal the other day, talking to some of the tackle dealers, I was informed by one salesman that this had been the best year he's ever had on light lines (2 lbs. and up), while another one stated that his best effort has been with lines of 20 lbs. and over. Strange how we fishermen can take particular fancy to something. Myself, I've had the same experience with the very light lines so far — buyers going from one extreme to the other.

* * *

I believe most of us heard, the other evening, what the Provincial Government is going to do for campsites in the province, and in the immediate area of Montreal. This is all for the tourists who will be coming for Expo '67. My thought on this is that, if they leave the actual work of this until the usual tardy date, then we'll be out of luck. All this branch of the Fish and Game Department seems to do is talk, with little in the way of results. And incidentally, the only way in which these campsites will ever get going, is for the government to contract it out. . . Patronage, thy name is Quebec.

* * *

As most of you know there will be a couple of fishing derbies very shortly — one in the Ottawa River, and the other in a lake spot. I hope the latter will be for coarse fish only, or at least what are called coarse fish; to me there is no such animal, they are all deserving of a sporting chance. True, some of them do destroy other, better kinds of fish, but this has been going on since time began, and how can we change it? I do not believe that game fish (so-called) should ever be taken in any contest. Far too many are killed needlessly, and in a lot of cases not even used for eating. We do not have enough fish around to waste them in this way.

* * *

I've mentioned some of the new trailer camping outfits before. While in Montreal, I saw some of them on display. As usual the manufacturers have gone whole hog for all the comforts of home and clubs; you need to be in the very upper brackets to purchase one of these things now. Naturally, there will be plenty sold, but not to the average outdoorsman. It's really too bad that these things are no longer for the family who wish to get away from things and see Nature for themselves. One group of trailers had just about everything in them — even to a portable generator set whereby you could use your portable TV. Just how far can this thing go? It sure is becoming a sales racket in the guise of outdoor living.

* * *

Tents themselves have not undergone much of a change. Better floors in most of them, this is a must now; keeping the insects from a tent is a real problem, and with a good floor, this sure does help. Some of the newer-type umbrella tents are very good; with no poles in the centre. This is an added improvement. One even has a built-in holder for your light, with asbestos around the immediate area as added precaution. It also appears that the waterproofing has improved too, one display had a can large enough to spray an 8x9 ft. tent in one operation; not too expensive either. Having this done commercially is a drain on the pocketbook, but anyone will be able to do it with this gadget. Even the ropes have been looked after; almost all of them were of nylon. So no more rotting ropes, just ready to snap when the wind is at its worst. There was one thing I was very pleased with — bigger and much better zippers have been placed on a lot of these tents. I know a great deal of frustration was caused by some of those dinky little zippers that have been used at times — not even strong enough for a ladies' handbag, yet installed on tents in the hope they would drive the camper out of his mind; and some of them nearly did!

Water Skiing with CLINT WARD

A New Way to Learn to Water Ski

Water skiing is an easy sport to learn — except for that split second transition from "in the water" to "on the water". This transition period proves difficult for many learning skiers. Some overcome this hurdle after three, four or five tries. Some, and this is rare, never make it.

The problems during the start are many. There is no doubt that it requires some strength, coordination, and stamina. As the skier is dragged through the water there is plenty of pull on the arms and strength is required to push the skis back against the water and to hold them together. The whole problem is magnified if the tow-boat is not too powerful. The drag through the water will be longer and prove too much for some beginners.

I usually find that young children and older adults are the ones who have the most difficulty and it is usually in keeping the skis together.

A quick answer to this problem is a Skee-Trainer. This is an aluminum yoke and bar arrangement that is temporarily attached to the tow-line using the existing handle. Two cross bars at the bottom of the yoke slip over the tips of the skis, one on top and one on the bottom. As long as some downward pressure is applied on the yoke these bars will lock the skis firmly in the correct position for the start. After the start has been accomplished the yoke and bar assembly slip off the skis and then function as the tow-handle.

It is all very ingenious and simple but it certainly answers the problems of those skiers who have had a time of it, trying to learn the water start.

After several runs using the skee-trainer most skiers will be able to manage a normal water start. Those legs that didn't seem strong enough to cope a few rides ago will become stronger with each run.

The skee-trainer is available in most marine and sporting goods stores and is priced under $10. If you are unable to find one, write to me in care of this newspaper and I will forward more information to you.

One thing to remember when learning to water ski is not to be discouraged. The average falls for learning the water start would be 3 or 4. Almost everyone falls backward once, which is caused by bending the arms instead of locking them straight. The key to the start is to stand up with the legs and not to pull up with the arms, which causes them to bend and usually causes a fall backward.

I have worked with beginners who took many more than the average number of falls but they persevered and today they enjoy the sport to the fullest.

Even in the competitive division of trick skiing, falls are frequent when learning the tricks. As a matter of fact many skiers spend more time in the water than on top of it. I have known champion skiers to fall up to 1,500 times learning one advanced trick — but that's real dedication.

CANOE AND SWIM MEET

Canada's first National Boy Scout Canoe Regatta and Swim Meet is being planned for Camp Anderson, 40 miles west of Montreal, from August 14 to 19. Provincial Scout councils are being invited to send two canoe teams of two Scouts each, and one swim team of four Scouts, a total of eight, to compete.

Assn. fish derby this week-end at Silver Lake

The first lake-fish derby this season by the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association takes place this Sunday, 16th, at Silver Lake, near Lost River. Members may enter, from 6 a.m., at the lakeshore headquarters, where catches should also be registered, up to 5 p.m. Entry is $1 per person. Non-members may participate by subscribing also for a membership ($2).

There will be a bean supper on the lakeshore, with distribution of prizes, concluding the day's event.

Tickets are now in circulation for the drawing of a boat and 3 h.p. outboard, in support of the Association's fund. Tickets may be procured from André Barselou (LO 2-8084) or any of the directors.

The monster fish derby of the season is billed for May 22-23, with prizes and trophies amounting to $1,000 value to be awarded Sunday evening in the new Lions Club Arena. The competition will be open to the general public, and the $1 entry cards will be available this week-end.

Pleasure boats on canals now require licenses

Ottawa CP — All boats — from canoes to yachts — using the Trent, Rideau and Quebec canals from now on will be required to be licensed under the Canada Shipping Act.

The Transport Department, which operates the three canals, said the regulation was made necessary by a sharp increase in traffic.

The licenses are free and are available at any customs office. Enforcement will be limited to warnings at the outset of the coming boating season.

The department said there is a growing need to keep a more accurate record of the numbers and whereabouts of thousands of rowboats, sailboats and other small craft using the canals.

Month's report by police and fire departments

There were 319 calls on the municipal police service during May, and 23 arrests. There were also 23 traffic accidents investigated, two of them causing bodily injury. During the month 22 tickets were handed out for traffic infractions, and 257 permits and licenses were issued; total revenues were around $707. . . These figures were given in the police report to Town Council last week.

The fire department had a busier-than-usual record for the month of May, with 22 calls — Lachute 9, Ayersville 3, Chatham 3, St. Jerusalem 7. The majority of these were brush and grass fires, but total property damage amounted to $1,050. Salary costs for the volunteer firemen were $422, and the amount due for service to outside municipalities, $1,500.

Council made an adjustment in the status of an employee, André Bergeron, raising his salary but rescinding a resolution of last November by which Bergeron should be the first fireman summoned on an alarm; it appeared that this measure caused friction among the fire personnel.

They call it the compact's compact. The 9½ is nothing to carry because the balance is perfect like a good gun. And easy to store because both sides are free of the usual levers and protrusions that get in the way. Instead all the controls are up front to make less work of driving.

What's more the 9½ is a stingy outboard. It trolls all day on a tank of regular gas. And with 50:1 gas-oil mix, oil costs are cut in half. Another thing the 9½ gives you less of is noise and trouble. Like all Johnson's you can take its quietness and dependability for granted. Johnson even puts it in writing with an extra long two year warranty.

As you can see, the 9½ offers less of just about everything. Especially the things you don't need. The only thing it offers more of than anyone else is value.

A bush fire of considerable extent burned for several days in close proximity to the C-I-L ammunition dump near Brownsburg, towards the end of last week. Brownsburg High News

The Sports Scene

By David McCaffrey

The intra-mural or "house" leagues at Brownsburg High finished their volleyball season last week. In the senior boys' league the teams finished in the following order: Sharks, Jays, Beavers. In the junior boys' division it ended: Sharks, Beavers, Jays. Now the students have moved outside to begin playing softball.

* * *

The senior girls' softball team began practice last week, under the supervision of Mr. Grant, in preparation for the annual O.V.S.A.A. tournament in Ste. Agathe two weeks hence. The team does not yet look as strong as it did last year; however, what the club is lacking in player material, is made up in spirit. By the time of the championship, B.H.S. should be able to send a strong team to represent it.

* * *

Tryouts were held this week in order to choose members for a school track team. The first meet of the year is to be held in Chomedey on Wednesday. The partficipating students are planning to go there by car in the late afternoon; the meet does not begin until 5.30 p.m. The meet promises to be exciting for all attending it, since this is Brownsburg High's first entry into an organized track meet; that is to say, one in which all rules of registration, classification, and disqualifications are strictly observed.

Week's Activities

By Sandra Hall

Since May 2, B.H.S. has been flattered with the presence of student teachers from Macdonald College. These young ladies, who someday, we are sure, will have classrooms of their own, will remain at B.H.S. until May 16. There are student teachers for the grades four and seven, one for each of the grade fives, and also a student gymnastic instructor. B.H.S. hopes our guests have a pleasant stay.

* * *

The Spring Prom at B.H.S. will be held on May 28. The theme of the evening this year will be "Tulip Time in Holland". A supervised group under Michael Malenfant, director of the Dance Committee for the Students' Council, will be in charge of decorations.

Previously the Spring Prom and the graduation exercises had been combined. This year the two will be held separately; the graduation exercises and dance will be on September 18.

* * *

The Red Cross and the Students' Council of B.H.S. have been busy with the plans for their newest project, a car wash, to be held on May 15. A selected committee, made up of members from the Students' Council and Red Cross, will be on duty from 10 o'clock to 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Headquarters of the ambitious students will be the school grounds. The cost is one dollar per car — so keep the dust on your car until May 15!

* * *

On Wednesday, April 12, the two grade tens of B.H.S. will be given their final Oral French exam for the year. Mrs. R. Jones, French specialist, will be the examiner. The eleventh grade received their final French exam on April 8. B.H.S. hopes that all deserving students do well.

Supt. for 30 years at Carillon Canal, dies in Chambly

Georges Corbeil, former canal superintendent at Carillon for 30-odd years, died Tuesday at the Hôtel Dieu in Montreal, where he had been a patient for some time. Up to the time of his death, he had filled the position of canal superintendent at Chambly for the past five years. He was 60 years of age.

In Carillon the late Mr. Corbeil served as mayor, as a trustee of the parish, and held a gold medal of the Order of Merit from the Catholic diocese.

Funeral rites will be held at Chambly and burial in Ottawa, where he was born.

Candidate for Mayor at Brownsburg

J. René Lafleur

advises the taxpayers and residents of Brownsburg that he will enter his candidature for the mayoralty of that municipality. He has served as councillor for four terms, and was mayor from 1959 to 1962. Mr. Lafleur assures the population of his sincere devotion to the community interests.

To Brownsburg Taxpayers:

Many taxpayers of our Village have complained over the past years that the water pressure is inadequate for present needs. The question has been discussed on several occasions, but nothing has ever been done to give all residents satisfactory and equitable service.

There are complaints also about snow clearing each winter season, particularly from those who have to travel to their jobs every morning. This is one matter that should be remedied without further postponement.

The dam on the West River needs to be completely rebuilt, in order to avoid water shortage in the coming summer.

These things are essential to the welfare of our populace, and we hope all taxpayers will keep them in mind. Your vote in our support will be a vote to put this program in effect with the least possible delay.

Work reviewed at Red Cross session; branch meetings resume in September

The monthly meeting of the Lachute Branch of Red Cross was held on Wednesday, May 5, in the United Church hall.

Mrs. Fernand Legault, president, took the chair and reminded members that regular meetings begin again in September. This is the last of the current season.

For the Sewing Committee, Mrs. Bert McGibbon, chairman, gave an excellent report. By April 15, she said, the following shipments had been dispatched to headquarters in Montreal:

Seven large quilts, 5 shipping cases, 5 girls' dresses (12 yrs.), 7 dresses (14 yrs.), 10 dresses (8 yrs.), 10 pr. boys' shorts (6 yrs.), 20 girls' undergarments (6 yrs.), 10 T-shirts (10 yrs.), 8 sweaters (6 yrs.), 5 sweaters (8 yrs.), 1 sweater (14 yrs.) and 1 pr. socks.

Mrs. Legault congratulated Mrs. McGibbon and all workers on accomplishing so much during the year. Such fine results, she added, repay all concerned for their hard work, and for the many hours of time so willingly given by each helper.

A ceremony is to be held by the Junior Red Cross on Friday next, May 14, at Lachute High School. On this occasion the Junior members are to present the Branch with a wheelchair subscribed for entirely by themselves. Throughout this year their working project has been to raise sufficient funds to buy a new wheelchair for Red Cross use in this district.

There will be many sick folk who will have cause to be grateful to these young people during the coming years and appreciate their effort. . . Senior members offer them their warm thanks and congratulations.

APPRECIATION

I wish to thank my many friends and relatives for lovely get-well cards and flowers, and for the many nice Easter cards and gifts; also for cards and gifts on my 89th birthday, April 30, and for remembrances on Mother's Day — which have all helped to make my stay here more enjoyable. I am glad to report my health is improved, and am looking forward to seeing all my friends again soon.

Toronto wedding of interest to B'burg residents

Petley - Oliver

Walmer Road Baptist Church, Toronto, was the scene of a very pretty evening wedding on Saturday, April 24, when Marion Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Oliver, of Brantford, Ont., and Stuart Wayne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Petley, of Brownsburg, Que., were united in marriage.

The Rev. R. S. Dunn performed the double-ring ceremony. The church was tastefully decorated with baskets of white snapdragon and large white chrysanthemums.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length A-line gown of white crystalette, which was accented with lace appliqués. A train extended from the back of the Empire waist line. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion was held in place with a crown of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white roses.

Miss Jeanette Oliver, maid of honor for her sister, wore a street-length lilac brocade frock, with matching tulle headdress. The bridal attendants, Miss Karen Walker, of Hamilton, Ont., and Mrs. A. Bridge, the groom's sister, of Montreal, were respectively attired in spring green and pale yellow brocade. They carried bouquets of Shasta daisies.

Bruce Johnstone, of Hamilton, acted as best man. Edmund Oliver, brother of the bride, and Alex Bridge were ushers.

Mrs. Oliver, the bride's mother, wore a three-piece pink knitted suit with matching accessories. The groom's mother was attired in navy and white, with matching accessories. Both wore corsages of pink roses.

A reception followed in the church hall.

Pays tribute to Arg. Bridge Club

The Top Match Point should be awarded to Lachute's Argenteuil Duplicate Bridge Club. Only in their fourth year as an organized bridge club, they play for fun and charity. They have given over $2,000 to the Retarded Children's Association of their district, as well as other donations to several local charities.

According to a report from Mrs. L. Walsh, all members pay an annual fee of $5.00, which is passed on to the Retarded Children's Association. Players pay 50 cents per session to participate in their twice weekly games, Mondays and Saturdays.

The club has the use of the Legion Hall and Orange Hall, and Lachute merchants supply coffee and refreshments to make bridge playing a community affair. The average attendance runs to about 11 tables per session.

* * *

It is recalled here that the local club hosted the C-I-L Bridge Club from Montreal for an all-day 35-table tournament on March 27.

A team-of-four event will be held at the final session of the winter season, on June 5. This will again be an all-day session; no master restrictions. All bridge players are invited. Watch these columns for further news of this event.

APPRECIATION

I wish to thank all those who sent cards, flowers and gifts while I was at the Montreal General Hospital, and since my return home; also special thanks to the Rev. H. Thompson.

REMEMBER OLD LONDON

London, Ont. (CP) — Two London youths, Michael Dawdy and George Jenney, both 22, borrowed $500 each from their parents and went to Old London to pay their respects as ordinary Canadians at Sir Winston Churchill's funeral. They brought back as a souvenir that prized trophy — a London bobby's helmet. After patiently asking a number of policemen, they found a friendly sergeant who let them buy a spare one.

'La Belle Province'

TOURIST ADVERTISEMENTS of the Province of Quebec have been shown a mark of appreciation which deserves some mention, according to the Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game, the Hon. Gérard Cournoyer. The compliment came from the annual convention of the Pacific Air Travel Association, held recently in Seoul, capital of South Korea. The minister also recalls that, several months ago, Quebec's advertising received special mention at the annual meeting of the International Union of Official Travel Organizations, held in Dublin, Ireland.

"This news can only cause us to rejoice," concludes the release to Quebec newspapers, administering a self-propelled pat on the back.

It might be pointed out to Mr. Cournoyer, however, that what could cause us to rejoice, and what this province needs more imperatively, is the suppression of unruliness and terrorism, which are doing more to damage Quebec's reputation abroad than any amount of glamorous publicity can counteract. The bombing last week of the American consulate in Montreal will create more harm in the U.S., that lucrative source of Quebec tourist dollars, than can readily be estimated.

As we see it — so long as these outrages continue, undenounced with any vehemence by the powers-that-be, then Mr. Cournoyer and the propagandists are battling in a losing cause.

The goods you buy

THE "GRIN AND BEAR IT" attitude prevalent among consumers in this country does nobody any good — says the Consumers' Association of Canada (Quebec). The consumer who passively accepts poor quality merchandise or service does himself, his neighbor and his country a disservice, it is stated. . .

However, there is a right and a wrong way to complain. First, be sure your complaint is valid. Next, reach the right person. Don't bawl out the bus driver when service is poor or non-existent; but gather reports from the people in the queue, then phone or write the bus company with concrete and accurate details. Don't blame the store clerk for the poor potatoes; but ask for the store manager, complain to him, and give him a chance to explain. If you have trouble with an appliance, do more than inform the dealer; write a letter to the manufacturer and send a copy to the Consumers' Association, who will then take additional action if warranted.

Collective expressions of consumer opinion bear considerable weight. One instance of this is cited: During the past year many complaints have been received regarding poor quality and workmanship in clothing, especially in children's wear, where material and manufacture should be at their best. The volume of these complaints has been brought to the attention of the Canadian Textile Institute and the National Garment Manufacturers Association. These organizations, both of which have a direct interest in maintaining high standards for Canadian goods, are thus able to alert their members to the fact that their potential customers are not content with inferior merchandise.

By joining the Consumers' Association of Canada and taking an active part in this volunteer organization, individuals can help to improve the quality of consumer products through constructive criticism.

The hazards of history

A CHAPTER of the present dialogue on biculturalism has been concerned with the wisdom or unwisdom of a uniform history for use in Canadian schools (says The Printed Word). Some have wondered whether the writing of it might stir up animosity, and whether, in a country as large and diverse as Canada, even the greatest scholars, with the greatest goodwill, could produce an acceptable account of their country's past.

Even in eye-witness accounts there are inevitably differing points of view. Who would rule on interpretation and on inclusion or elimination of facts? And who would rule on what were facts? At best such a history might be oversimplified and a compromise.

Some say the historians could get around the difficulties by presenting the facts and also the historical differences in attitude to the facts. One editorial writer has gone so far as to say that if Canadian provinces had had uniform textbooks there would now be no need for a royal commission.

In a free country it is only a remote danger perhaps, but a history by decree, at its worst, could be as false as that now being written in Russia. There, it is said, Mr. Khrushchev has become an "unperson," and presumably will vanish from the Russian course of study.

The small and the big

ONE OF THE great difficulties of business — in some respects, one of its tragedies — is that, as it grows, personal contact is lost. It disperses in all directions, not only as between employer and employee, but between all employees in their different grades, trades and departments. Impersonal entities spring up where human contacts existed previously.

In the little firm, everybody knows everybody else — the truck driver, the salesman, the ledgerkeeper, the typist, the buyer and the owner. But, as the firm grows, the personal names give place to a host of impersonal labels — management, production, clerical staff, typist pool, transport department and all the rest.

If Joe, the driver, hurts himself badly by falling off his truck, his co-workers know scarcely more than that the transport department has lost its safety record. The heartlessness is not intentional but, when people give place to things and personalities to ciphers, it is almost impossible to avoid. It is very hard for a man to summon up personal sympathy for a department.

It is well to remember that the word company, when it is applied to business, means exactly the same thing as it does when we say, "I'm sorry I cannot see you Saturday because we are having company."

Company is just another word for people — people who, for pleasure or profit, pool their various resources. Shareholders, directors, management, clerical staff and labor force are just words which betoken real, live, breathing people. They may not be known as individuals as they are in a small company, but they are working together in just the same way and are just as essential to each other.

If this fact can once be accepted, it becomes apparent that the laborer's real economic adversary is the laborer in the rival company across the road, not the management of his own. President and the laborer are both employees of the company which hires them. They are both men employed by other men to do their respective jobs of work.

The president is hired by the board of directors on behalf of the shareholders to be captain of the team. His job is to call the signals. If his signals are good, the team will win its matches. He and everybody else in the company will enter the playoffs and share in the bonus money.

In these days of intensive competition, it is well to know whose side we are on and, even more important, who is on our side.

Day Of All Days

There are certain ancient and honorable rituals in our society which help to give our lives a certain continuity. Many of them are geared to the seasons: spring cleaning; summer 'flu; the burning of the leaves, getting stoned out of your skull on New Year's Eve.

One of the most sacred of these, for some of us, is Opening Day of the trout season.

Slap of a beaver tail; chuckle of running water; splatter of wild duck taking off from swamp; feel of the sun on face; mist of green spreading through bare bones of branches; honest stench of worm-guts on hands; flavor at noon of big, bologna sandwich with hot mustard; these are the things which quicken the senses, cleanse the body of its winter stupor, remind one that God is still in His heaven.

And these are some of the reasons I have never missed the rite, whether the mortgage is due, or my wife is having a baby, or I have a date with Sophia Loren.

And I hope to do so until the day when they have to carry me to a quiet spot on the stream and leave me there in my wheelchair, to watch the black water swirl around the white rock, the yellow sun pick up the golden gravel of the stream-bottom.

Each year the ritual is the same. And each year it is different. There is the year when you fall off a log in the first three minutes, and squish and squelch yourself through the rest of the day, a sodden mess, wet fags, wet matches, soaked sandwiches.

And there is the year when you hit the stream at the crack of dawn, fish with all your skill until sunset, and come home with two speckled trout eight inches long. And there is the year when you go out at 7.30 a.m., just to toss a line for old times sake, and have caught your limit before work-time at 9 a.m.

And there's the year when your bait-can falls from your belt into a torrent, and you snap the tip off your rod, and put a hole in your new waders, and get back to the car to find a flat tire, and get home to find your wife calling the police, because it's four hours after sundown.

But this year topped them all. It was complicated. Our high school music director, with incredible lack of foresight, had scheduled an exchange concert, with a city school, for that very day. Fine. But it turned out we had to have some of the visiting youngsters for dinner. As my wife is away every Saturday, for music lessons with the kids, this meant I was cook.

Normally, I'd have welcomed a chance to display my culinary skill. In fact, I had the menu planned. Beef stew simmered in beer, followed by a sour cream souffle, roast chestnuts and peppermint lifesavers as dessert. Then I realized it was Opening Day.

I was aghast. Wanted to be a good host but danged if I was going to miss the rites of spring. Then it struck me. Why not give these city kids, pampered for years on steaks and chicken, a real north-country dinner — speckled trout, lovingly fried in butter? They'd never forget it.

With a light heart, I hit for the trout stream on Opening Day. Everything was perfect. It was a fine day, and I knew there were at least 47 big speckles in there, just waiting to hit that butter.

Got home at 4.30 p.m. with two six-inch chub and a 14-inch sucker. Went to the fish market. They had nothing but some fairly large whitefish, which somehow didn't look like speckled trout. Called all my friends. They had either been skunked, like me, or stated flatly, "The hell with you, Smiley; we're putting on a big speckled trout dinner for those visiting musicians; feeding four of them." Bought two pounds of hamburg.

You know, there are times when my love for my wife is overwhelming. When I arrived at the house at 5.30, she was grilling steaks in the oven.

The American Plight

One of the tragedies of current American foreign policy is that to contain Communism, the United States continually finds itself supporting military dictatorships.

Last week's consolidation of U.S. armed control of the Dominican Republic is but the latest of a long series of such instances.

In nations all around the globe where people know nothing but the grinding poverty of their meagre existence, the world's greatest democracy is maintaining regimes ranging from the benevolent dictatorship of Formosa to the harsh militarism of Spain's Franco and Portugal's Salazar.

United States foreign policy has two main aims. One is the containment of Communism and the other is the protection of U.S. national interest and American business investment.

Neither of these goals are improper ones.

President Kennedy sought to make these goals more meaningful by embracing such bold programs as the Alliance for Progress. It was designed to give Latin America a hope for the future other than the false hope of Communism.

Unfortunately, the Alliance has fallen far short of its goals because of the indifference and outright opposition of the ruling classes of South America.

On the other side of the world, the incredibly escalating U.S. involvement in Vietnam has failed to produce any evidence that the people of South Vietnam are in support of the Saigon government which Washington is committed to uphold.

Perhaps it is too much to expect that the U.S. should be able to do more than just oppose Communism — that it should also offer backward nations a realistic alternative to their problems.

The U. S. action in the Dominican Republic took place without any Canadian involvement because this country is still not a member of the Organization of American States.

President Johnson justified the intervention with the declaration that while the U.S. had "no desire to interfere in the affairs of a sister republic," it also would not "permit the establishment of another Communist dictatorship in this hemisphere."

The OAS has not yet produced any evidence that the revolt against the Dominican civil-military junta had been taken over by Communists. But it's not an unreasonable supposition.

Countries like the Dominican Republic are always ripe for Communist subversion. Latin America will probably soon supersede Southeast Asia as the great battleground between Communism and democracy.

But having moved into the Dominican Republic, the U.S. now faces the responsibility of making democracy there work.

It hasn't worked there yet.

Ruled for more than 30 years by dictator Rafael Trujillo, who himself came to power out of the vacuum left by eight years of U.S. military occupation, there are no experienced democratic politicians in the country.

The nation's freely-elected president, Juan Bosch, was deposed by the current junta and is now in exile in Puerto Rico.

The revolt which brought U.S. intervention was begun by his supporters. Senor Bosch maintains that the rebellion was winning when the U.S. Marines landed, and denies that Communists had taken control.

The definitive word on that might be Fidel Castro's recent comment about his Caribbean contemporary: "We know Juan Bosch is not a Communist but who knows if after all has been done to him some day he might decide to become a Communist?"

This might be a clue to where U.S. foreign policy is most vulnerable. Socialist reform has proven the best antidote to Communism in many parts of the globe and this may apply even more forcefully in Latin America.

VACATION PLANNING? REMEMBER YOUR CAMERA

Whether your trip will be a jaunt 15 miles away, or a trek to the Rockies, Laurentians, or the colorful Maritime coastline, you'll find endless picture-taking opportunities. Photography will add enjoyment to the trip itself.

Just as important, it will help rekindle memories and fun when you show your vacation pictures to friends and relatives.

Many of your vacation photos, naturally enough, will centre around your family and friends. But you'll also want to try your hand at landscape views.

Remember that good photographs, whether of landscapes or people, don't "just happen". They are planned with a bit of care. Select the best available viewpoint. At a lakefront, for example, you don't have to shoot a pier head-on. Instead, to give a feeling of depth, try framing the pier with buildings.

Your family and friends can be included in many scenic shots. But instead of having them stare self-consciously at the "birdie", capture them looking at a point on the horizon. That way, they can lead the viewer into the scene.

While travelling, remember to store our camera in a cool place; in a car, avoid the glove compartment or rear window ledge. And avoid taking snaps through a dirty window. If you snap from a moving car, roll down the window and hold the camera firmly, with your elbows pressed against your sides. Resting your arms on the car is a sure way of jarring the camera.

Before the trip begins, take a few precautions. Stock up on film. If you've just bought a camera, practise taking pictures well in advance of the trip so you'll have a thorough knowledge of its operation. If your camera has been tucked in a closet for some weeks, use a soft cloth or lens tissue to clear away the dust, especially from the lens.

Then, when you leave on your trip, make your camera a constant companion. Remember that good picture possibilities are everywhere.

Today, communication is so fast that messages can be sent to almost any part of the world in a matter of seconds and minutes. It is now possible for vehicles moving along our roads to send and receive messages as they go on their way. This is not new in itself for it has been possible for some time. But the method has been greatly improved upon, and it is now possible to dial any number near, or at a distance, and have a conversation between the parties as a car is travelling along.

As these advances have been made, the modern criminal has also improved his technique and made use of many modern means to carry out crimes of varying nature. When police calls went out via radio, the criminal would listen for these and find out just how the police would be operating. This of course aided in their escape from the law. While it took considerable time for the police to set up road blocks, the criminal was able to make a clean get-away. It was frustrating to the police and invigorating for the criminal. In fact they became more brazen as time went on.

Our police were bothered by these methods, but they had nothing else. A general alarm could be put out to police cars and posts which were equipped, but it was not always possible to obtain a reply, or to keep in touch with progress being made. In some cases a policeman would receive instructions and go out on the job, but if he needed more guidance or had to send in a request, he was obliged to get to a phone somewhere. Great loss of time resulted.

Systematically, the Quebec Provincial Police has been installing an entirely new system of communications.

Lachute was one of the first areas to undergo this innovation, and officers of the local unit have found it highly satisfactory in the two months since it was installed.

The system was set up by the Bell Telephone Company, and it has worked out really well, by giving the police force the kind of fast communication system it needs.

It is not a massive piece of equipment and not too complicated, but with it, two-way conversations can be carried on and it is possible for several persons to be hooked together and hear and talk as at a conference table. These conversations can be heard loud and clear and are done while the car is in transit or at a standstill.

At all times the members of the force can be in constant touch with one another, or with their post, or other headquarters, or both. In this way it is much easier to conduct a manhunt and to create road blocks quickly. It is also possible to call out members of the force who may be off duty, by directly dialing their homes and alerting them that their services are needed.

Messages may be received over a considerable distance, coming in clear and distinct. Only seconds are lost in making contact, it is almost instantaneous.

This type of communications system should greatly improve the methods of combatting crime in this area. A call to the Q.P.P. office will be received night or day. When there is need to notify all officers of their combined services being necessary, a general alert goes out and this causes a red light to go on in all the cars and they know it is something important. They immediately tune for the message and wait for it. In the case of hold-ups, or escaping persons, or of fires, accidents and such, cars can be speeded on their way to the scene or according to other instructions.

They system gives added protection against crime and for the general public. Immediate contact can be made with all officers and all posts in the area, night or day.

NAMED FOR ROYALTY

This is the last of my stories about famous Canadian forts. Not because I have covered them all, for there are many more across Canada with just as interesting tales to be told about their past. But it is because I believe that one should write only about things with which one is familiar.

Dusk was descending rapidly over Hudson Bay on the August evening I fastened a life jacket securely about my person and took a seat in a huge open boat with 24 other members of the CN's annual tour to Churchill, in northern Manitoba. This boat, that looked to me like a demasted sail boat with an inboard motor, was in charge of a huge burly chap who stood precariously in the stern guiding our journey with a long wooden tiller.

Fresh water from the Churchill River was tumbling in a rage into Hudson Bay as the old salt aimed Eskimo Point where Prince of Wales Fort has been crumbling away for almost two centuries. The waves were high and our lives were in the hands of this hilarious individual. His mood was catching and when we realized he has been shuttling tourists back and forth between Churchill and the Fort for many years we forgot what we had anticipated Davey Jones Locker might look like if we were to tip over.

The history of the Fort is of course knit with that of the Hudson's Bay Company. On the shores of Hudson Bay, this historic monument rivals in history the better known fortresses of Quebec and Louisburg. Like these two strongholds, Prince of Wales Fort is part of the story of the struggle between England and France for the mastery of the northern part of this continent.

The harbour was originally discovered by a Danish sea captain named Jens Munck in 1619, but it wasn't until 1670, when King Charles the First of England gave the Hudson's Bay Company its charter, that posts were established at the mouths of great rivers flowing into Hudson Bay. At first Churchill, which received its name from the newly appointed governor of the company, John Churchill, was just a white whale fishery. Later Captain James Knight was commissioned to build a wooden fort on the site presently occupied by the Hudson's Bay store in Churchill.

Minerals and Disaster

The disasters of conflicts during the years 1694 to '97 led directors of the company to sanction the building of a huge fort on the Bay. This was planned to be a refuge for the company's servants and ships from all trading posts along the coast. Work on Fort Prince of Wales was begun in 1733 and completed in 1771 under great difficulties. The parapet contains forty embrasures for guns still lying on the walls. Barren of trees and now covered by gravel mothering a sporadic growth of spindly weeds and tall sea grass, it is a morbid sight, yet thrilling, when one remembers its history.

Probably the most noteworthy exploration of the Company was in the year 1769 when Samuel Hearne was sent by the governor to investigate copper deposits in the northwest region of Churchill. After three journeys he reached the Coppermine River and as a reward he was appointed Governor of Prince of Wales Fort. His record as a governor was not a creditable one for he surrendered to the French Admiral Le Perouse, who attacked the Fort in 1787 with a fleet of three ships. Le Perouse tried to destroy the fort and when he found it practically indestructible sailed away to capture York Factory and take Hearne to France as a prisoner.

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"There can be no greater contribution to the joy of boyhood and the strengthening of a boy's vision, curiosity and patience than just free fishing," wrote Herbert Hoover in his delightful book, Fishing for Fun — and to Wash Your Soul.

Mr. Hoover points out that he grew up close to Mother Earth and all her works, in a civilization not paved with cement and made of bricks. In Canada with the steady movement of population from the country and villages to the large centres of population many boys and girls live in a city environment far from fishing spots. Unless their parents believe fishing is important, these children are likely to miss out on outdoor skills such as fishing.

Among our happiest childhood memories are fishing trips. When we were small mother packed up a lunch for my brother, sisters and me and our father, while our old bamboo rods, lines, and hooks were sorted out and earthworms dug in the garden and put in several bait tins. Each child received a generous application of suntan oil and also mosquito repellant, which was fairly effective and very odorous. Our destination was a small river, the Speed, not far from the little Scotch town of Fergus.

On grassy banks under the big elm trees we fished. If our catch was big enough, we kept the bass, catfish, perch and the suckers and sunfish too, which we were smart enough to land.

If there was a doubt about keeping a fish, father was the judge. He reassured us, "Throw the little fellows back. Let them grow to a larger size and maybe you'll catch them on another trip."

Fishing was never work to father, nor a competitive activity to see who would catch the most of the biggest fish. If a child wanted to stop fishing and watch a kingfisher dive after his dinner, or a Monarch butterfly alight on a milkweed bloom and explore for nectar, or search for a bunch of watercress, as a surprise for Mother, he could do so.

In the late afternoon when we went home, under father's direction we had a fish cleaning session in the back kitchen. Then for late supper mother fried our fish. How good they tasted! By this time everyone was ravenous, and no one fussed about the bones in his share of the fish feed.

One reason these fishing trips were such fun was that they were leisurely and each fisherman was "on his own." once he had received a demonstration from father how to bait a hook and cast a line into a likely spot. No one was ever lost, because we observed the rule that we must stay on one side of the river and report back to the noon meal base when father's whistle blew three blasts.

Father believed girls as well as boys should have the fun of fishing and that children should learn the angling art at an early age — as soon as they could swim, if they fell in the water. Our equipment was simple and inexpensive. When we were older and went fishing with the neighborhood gang, my brother bought himself a higher-priced spin-casting outfit. It was a proud day for him when he was invited with father on a trout fishing trip with some of father's friends.

My husband is an ardent fisherman and he has been the fishing enthusiast in our family. Our children have learned how to fish from a boat as well as in a stream or river. Safety rules such as not leaving hooks lying around (where they may be stepped on) — the way to remove a hook by pushing down and turning so it comes out the way it went in; and being careful where to cast, have soon been acquired. With practice they mastered the knack of scooping a fish from behind with a small net, instead of trying to land it on the line in the boat.

There is always some debate as to the best places to fish in our lake. But there has never been any question about the value of the deep feeling of contment and pleasure a fishermen has as he trolls in his boat — even if the bites are scarce.

BESET BY FEARS

Don't allow a child to grow up beset by fears. Let him fear crossing a street without proper caution, but don't let him be afraid of darkness or normal things that cannot hurt him. If a child is helped in analyzing anything that frightens him, it will make it easier for him to conquer fear of harmless things.

Did you ever wonder why male fashions get so little attention from press, radio and TV? Women busily boning up on feminine trends may be forgiven for assuming there is never any news in men's wear. The truth is simply that female reporters have more interest in clothes than their male confreres.

A fashion show of male attire is usually reported with sneers, jeers and giggles by newsmen whose own appreciation of sartorial elegance would make a respectable tailor faint dead away. Humorist Russel Lynes, described this approach as one form of clothes snobbery by males. Other snobs he defined as the "sharp dresser" and the "conservative snob".

Women reporters are rarely the fashion types he called "screamingly up-to-date". They may be "undressed", "Band Box", or plain "dowdy", but nothing dims their enthusiasm for fashion news. A sable wrap or a couturier gown will be reported with appropriate awe by female reporters in well-worn duds, and even by those with runs in their stockings.

We were reminded of this difference in the approach to fashion by Men's Wear of Canada, a trade magazine which commented in dismay at press reaction to several important Canadian men's wear fashion shows. The editor, W. E. W. Granger, wrote: "Newspapers fell into the trap that anything to do with men's fashions must be the occasion for sniggers. They ignored good fashion items, of which there were many. And they completely missed the point that matador suits, leather-type coats and avant-garde styles were merely ideas from which new style trends may develop."

Summing up the new trends in Canadian male styles, the magazine's reporter said the theme was "fashion without fuss", a far cry from the comments made by the newspapermen who denounced many garments as outlandish.

The new fashion idea being translated into suits, topcoats, tailored sportswear and formal clothes for Canadian men is the shaped silhouette. Suits are to have a suppressed waistline, the degree of suppression ranging from very slight in conservative styles to more pronounced in avant-garde models.

Shoulders are to be neatly tailored and there is more cut-away at the front of the jackets; trousers remain trim and unpleated. Suiting fabrics tend more to fine worsteds than to woollens and are very muted in color and pattern. The lustrous look of such fabrics has given way to quiet stripes, and there is a stronger trend to blues.

Sports jackets will show the shaped look to a more pronounced degree, and bolder checks and plaids are favored for casual wear. These style trends will emerge more strongly next fall and winter.

None of this sounds very alarming to us women. However, to be fair we must report that the items which upset our male confreres were those we usually refer to as "fun fashions" which generate new ideas and at least brighten up most shows.

Authentic clothing worn in 1750 and loaned by a museum for the occasion included a gilt brocade dinner jacket. More contemporary conversational styles were sportshirts with the LBJ western look, a tuxedo fashioned like a matador's costume, a Victorian swimsuit complete with suspenders, plus a shapeless hairy creation defined as a nightshirt from Iceland.

Teatime Topics

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

It should be easy enough for most Canadians to enjoy a well balanced diet, but many are careless about it. Some people avoid some necessary foods because they think they are fattening.

Dietitians say it isn't the foods, but the amount of them you eat which makes them fattening.

The department of national health and welfare has a guide to foods you should eat every day, which begins with 1½ cups of milk for adults. Children up to about 11 should have 2½ cups, and adolescents should have four.

Everyone should have two servings of fruit or juice, including a source of vitamin C such as oranges, tomatoes or vitaminized apple juice.

Eat Potatoes

You should have one serving of potatoes and two of other vegetables, preferably yellow or green and often raw.

You should have bread every day, with butter or fortified margarine, and one serving of whole grain cereal.

For protein you need one serving of meat, fish or poultry or you may substitute eggs, cheese, dried beans or peas. You should eat liver occasionally and have, in addition, eggs and cheese at least three times a week.

The importance of having every type of food each day is compared to the links in a chain, in a booklet put out by the Associated Milk Foundations of Canada, approved by the Canadian Council on Nutrition. If any food link is weak, the chain is weak.

Milk a Link

Four cups of milk provides as much calcium for your bones and teeth as 34 oranges, 46 eggs or six ounces of cheese. It is a source of protein for the growth and repair of soft body tissues, of phosphorus for bones and teeth and riboflavin which is an essential part of enzyme systems which help your body cells use oxygen.

Fruits supply vitamin C, plus other minerals and vitamins, and supply roughage, a natural aid to normal elimination.

Green and yellow vegetables are an outstanding source of vitamin A which you need for good vision and a healthy skin. Yellow colors in vegetables and fruit are one indication of the presence of this vitamin.

Potatoes supply iron, thiamine and vitamin C. Vitamin C is also in vegetables such as cabbage and tomatoes. It is water-soluble, as are many minerals and vitamins, which is why you should eat raw vegetables or cook them as quickly as possible in little water.

You need breads and cereals for thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and iron, but be sure the ones you choose have not had these nutrients processed out of them, or that they are enriched.

The protein foods are essential for the growth and repair of your muscles, skin and other soft body tissues. They give you iron and B vitamins. This is true of all cuts of meat, economical as well as expensive.

Macdonald College

On Wednesday last, I pulled together sufficient reasons to justify a trip around the Chateauguay Valley. I planned for twelve calls, and actually made six, which were still twice as many as I honestly expected to do. But it turned out there was a lot happening in the Valley that day.

In the first place, it was the day Armand Pinsonneault dispersed his Holstein herd by auction. Mr. Pinsonneault has been very active in purebred Holstein circles, both in the provincial and the national organizations, and I understand that it is poor health and lack of help that has forced him to retire.

I don't like dispersal sales. There is something awfully final about them. To sell out is like plunging into an ice-cold lake in slow motion. Once you have stepped off, there is no turning back. You feel the water slowly, terribly slowly, closing over you. You are not sure if it is minutes, hours or a lifetime but you emerge dazed into a world familiar but awfully strange.

We went through two of them. Once, when I came home from overseas and decided with naive courage that my father's herd of Dual-Purpose Shorthorns should be replaced with Holsteins, and again twelve years later when I sold that herd to go back to school.

Armand's sale didn't go as well as many expected. The top price, $605, was paid by Jean St. Pierre of Grenville for a typey five-year-old cow. The sale average was $324 which was not too bad when you consider the number of young stock included. Three U.S. buyers were on hand, but they took home only two heifers. The sale was on R.O.P., fully accredited and vaccinated.

Another call was at the farm of Turkeys Deluxe, Dewittville, to take pictures of young poults for the Macdonald Farm Journal. I found the owners, Mrs. Dorothy Catto and Miss Winnie Rowles, calmly waiting for a truck to arrive to take their entire flock of breeding turkeys to market right at the peak of their production.

It must have been a painful decision. But the brooder houses were full of poults, more than sufficient for their own use, the incubators loaded with eggs, and the prospects of further sales of poults this spring very poor for their special kind of bird. So perhaps there was really no choice. It's a sign of our changing turkey business.

Mrs. Catto and Miss Rowles specialize in small, well-finished turkeys which they take right through to full maturity at 24 weeks. For these, they have developed an exclusive retail trade in Montreal which uses all the grown birds they can handle. But most of the remarkable growth of the industry in Quebec has been in turkey broilers — essentially large birds which are killed at a few weeks of age. As Miss Rowles explains it, these producers want poults which eat very little, grow very large very quickly". In addition, they want them in large batches, three thousand and more at a time.

Turkey production in Quebec has really boomed since the last war. From a standing start, it reached nearly two million birds in 1961. And still that supplies less than half of the province's consumption. Most of this expansion appears to have been in the form of turkey broilers. In Western Canada, the thirds are raised to maturity, I suppose, because of the ready availability of grain.

However, the prairies may not have a real advantage as far as feed is concerned. Dr. Nikolaiczuk, chairman of the Poultry Department at the College, says that eastern-grown corn is proving to be a cheaper source of feed energy than freight-subsidized western wheat. It seems to me that a poultry farm (or a pig farm) tied closely to grain corn or barley production would make an unbeatable enterprise.

I found the Sproules — father Douglas and son Harley — hard at it planting canning peas. May 5 is the earliest date they can remember seeding this crop. It will be early in July, then, when the crop goes to the cannery. This field has been underseeded with Brome and alfalfa. I would have expected the new seedlings to smother, but Harley says the practice has been quite successful.

* * *

"Wink" Keeler reports that seeding was finished at the Provincial Seed Farm on May 7. That includes some of the seed corn. The cereal trial plots around the country, including the new location in Pontiac County, are finished also.

According to a spokesman for the circus committee of the Shrine in Montreal, some people have the impression that the Shrine Circus coming to the Forum on May 22-29 is "second rate".

"This is so far from fact as to warrant a special statement on the matter. We have been reading a great deal recently in U.S. magazines about circuses and circus people, and within the past twelve months a great deal has been written and visualized on television about the now famous Russian single-ring circus."

"This 1965 Shrine Circus put together by Frank Wirth could be rated equal to or better than Ringling Bros. & Barnum, Bailey and, with its three rings, will display daring, skill and fun at a level in many respects higher than the Russian single-ring show."

"About fifty percent of the well-known acts are European and the remainder have all made names for themselves elsewhere throughout the world. For example, there will be the Wallendas and their high wire act; Robert Baudy's Siberian tigers; Charlotte Walch's un-caged leopards; the original George Hannaford family and their famous riding act; Albert Rix and his mixed bear act including white polars, grizzlies and Himalayans . . . to name but a few of the 23 terrific acts. Famous clowns from Europe and the United States will provide the fun and frolic."

The Shrine circus committee spokesman was most emphatic in stating that "the 1965 version of the Shrine Circus at The Forum on May 22 does not take second place to any circus in the world."

WOODLAND IN THE SPRING

Wih the bees among the flowers and the fleas among the bowers, there's nothing like a woodland in the spring. When there's people of all classes looking through high-powered glasses to observe the different birds upon the wing. Every morn when day is breaking and all Nature is awaking — that's the time to start observing Nature's ways, when the forest paths inviting lead one on to scenes exciting, in the realm of warblers, flickers, wrens and jays.

Just see those birds a-nesting — ever working, never resting! To observe them is a never-ending joy. It's a pastime most entrancing to be cautiously advancing — if you're middle-aged you'll feel just like a boy. I'd rather be Tom Sawyer than a banker or a lawyer, when the brook trout start a-bitin' in the creek. With old clothes and bamboo pole near some silent fishin' hole — or, better still to camp there for a week! Take those bloated millionaires who are loaded down with cares. They simply wouldn't know what real life means. I'd rather be just me, with a fishin' pole and free, with a sandwich and a can of pork and beans. Squirrels, chipmunks, birds and flowers — I could live with them for hours. Of life I wouldn't ask another thing, than just to be akin to young Huckleberry Finn, for there's nothing like a woodland in the spring.

Liner chartered by newspaper

Montreal — The 81,237-ton Cunard liner Queen Mary, second largest liner in the world, is being chartered by "The News of the World" for a six-day Christmas cruise from Southhampton to Las Palmas. "The News of the World" is a British Sunday newspaper with a circulation of more than 6,000,000.

Passengers on the cruise will include prizewinners — and their families — in a special News of the World competition. Details of the competition were announced in the newspaper's May 9 issue.

This is the first time that a Cunard Queen has been chartered.

SMUGGLING IS SERIOUS

Because the price of cigarettes in Manitoba is higher than anywhere else in the world, it is said that a great deal of smuggling takes place. A man can easily make wages just by taking a couple of trips or so a month with his car trunk loaded with smokes. Apparently authorities pay little attention.

Yet smuggling is serious. A man might begin in a small way to transport a few cases of cigarettes from one low-tax province to a high-tax area. Once started in such a business, however, there is a temptation to enlarge it and to add variety to the type of trade. Liquor, which is also target for the tax-hungry, is often smuggled across provincial borders and many folks wink at it.

Smuggling activities, however, lead to organized crime. The little fellow might satisfy himself to make ordinary wages; but if there is that kind of money in it for the little fellow, it is not too long before the crime crowd moves in and starts to operate in a big way. To smuggling they add other forms of illicit activity and soon more must be spent on crime prevention than the governments gained by immoderate taxes in the first place.

Law makers should use more care. Whenever there is a bad tax or a bad law, all law loses some respect, and then crime increases. Because governments have long fattened themselves on liquor and tobacco, they have created a cynical disrespect among people for any law affecting such products. And when, through excessive taxation, they make these products likely targets for the smugglers and bootleggers, they do a real disservice to society.

'Country style' furniture suggests age and usage

The truly fashion-conscious woman does not need a new wardrobe this season. She can "get by" with last year's things since changes are barely noticeable. But if she wants to keep up with the latest furniture trends, she will have to throw out all her Italian and French provincial designs and "Go Country."

The "Country Look" in furniture was first introduced at the American Furniture Show in Chicago and since that time, it has been sweeping the "country".

The "Country Look" is an interesting melting pot mixture of all the historic designs that have influenced North America. It is both sophisticated and rustic; charmingly informal in the colonial spirit and massively sophisticated in the manner of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Century.

The "Country Look" doesn't refer to the country of the farm or cottage. It is the country of the English manor, the French chateau, and the country squire. But this doesn't imply heavily-carved, ornate-looking pieces.

"The present warmed by the past," is the way one furniture designer described the look. Its hallmarks are deep carving, that looks hand done, ornate panelling and moldings, highlighted finishes, spindles and turnings, imposing hardware, massive breakfronts and armoires, squat chinky "one of a kind" chests, elegant writing desks, and close-to-the-grain finishes that look hand-rubbed.

Mellow pecan and persimmon are the woods most commonly used by those manufacturing country designs, since it wears the look of age and use.

Professional decorators have termed the new trend the most exciting thing to happen in the furniture industry in recent years. They think that its emergence is directly related to the interest in antiques which has become so widespread that genuine antiques are getting scarcer and more expensive by the minute.

This new furniture has the hand-made, hand-carved and hand-rubbed look of antiques and it mixes extremely well with genuine antiques, if you happen to have one or two.

Modern approach This welcoming archway, of wrought iron, invites you to a spacious showroom at J.-Roger Lamarche Ltée, which features a wide selection of electric refrigerators, ranges, washers, dryers, and all domestic utensils; also displayed are floor coverings, kitchen sets and patio furniture. Accentuate art objects with skillful lighting

You can wash your walls with light, thanks to a variety of special lighting fixtures now available. Soft and soothing light will make draperies, wall coverings and nearby furnishings spring to life, as well as add beauty to paintings, murals, planter boxes, etc.

There are two ways to wash a wall with light. One provides a smooth distribution of reflected and diffused light. The other gives a much greater intensity of light with decorative shadow shapes.

The diffused lighting effect is achieved through use of a row of aptly-named wall-wash fixtures. These recessed units use a series of dish-shaped reflectors to spread the light from a regular 150-watt electric lamp against the wall. The widespread beam smoothly overlaps the beams from adjoining fixtures in the installation. The number and placement of the fixtures — plus the reflective quality of the wall surface — determines how much light this system provides.

The second method provides greater illumination, and accent lights for pictures, statuary and other points of decorative beauty. A row of fixtures, such as the adjustable-type recessed units, are required. These use a 150-watt R40 spotlight with a built-in aluminized reflector. Mounted on adjustable brackets, the reflector lamps can be aimed at any desired wall area. The bright, overlapping beams create a scallop shadow effect.

Although the adjustable type fixture gives about three times as much light as the wall-wash style, an increase in general room illumination may not be required, or the otherwise pleasing scallop pattern may interfere with the overall wall light pattern desired. In these cases, the wall-wash unit is preferable. On the other hand, the adjustable type spotlight fixture permits a change of lighting pattern at any time, as when a housewife is bitten by the urge to shuffle the furniture and furnishings around for that "new look".

Luckily for the average householder, the rules for washing walls with lights are simple. For one thing, the closer the ceiling fixtures are to the wall — and the closer together — the more light is reflected from the wall surface. For another, the distance between fixtures should be equal to their distance from the lighted wall. For example, fixtures two feet out from the wall should be two feet apart in the ceiling (and also two feet from the walls at either end.)

Footings are fundamental; install with proper care

Footings are the spread portion at the bottom of the basement wall or at the base of supporting columns designed to support all of the superimposed load without settlement. The size of the footings is determined by the weight of the house with its live and dead loads and the bearing capacity of the subsoil.

A danger lies in footings that are incorrectly installed, for example, sections of footings on shale with sections on soft ground, weak concrete, sloping footings. Footings should not slope, they should be stepped in accordance with the method outlined in Residential Standards.

Depending on the type of subsoil it may be possible to install the footing without the using of sideforms. This method saves time and money. The excavation is taken out to the bottom of the basement floor depth and then the footings are neatly excavated by hand to the correct dimensions shown on the plans. Keys or steel dowels are inserted along the centre line of the footings to bond them to the foundation wall or columns.

No concrete footings should be placed on frozen ground. Should there be a danger of night frost protect the concrete with straw or sacking. The placing of concrete in the footing trench should be continuous in order to eliminate construction joints.

As soon as sufficient strength has developed in the concrete of the footings to support the loads, work should commence on the foundation walls and columns. The foundation walls can be made of concrete block or poured concrete placed in forms.

With poured concrete walls, the concrete should be placed without interruption in uniformly aligned double forms, braced against deflection. Basement window frames or rough bucks should be installed in the forms prior to placing the concrete.

With concrete block foundation walls the masonry units must be of a load bearing type and the top course should be filled with mortar. Below grade the unit masonry wall should be parged with ½" cement mortar. Both types of wall should be water proofed below grade with asphalt emulsion. The dimensions shown in the plans must be strictly adhered to. Pilasters must be provided to support ends of beams that frame into 6-inch foundation walls.

The builder should purchase foundation load bearing blocks from a reliable supplier who regularly submits samples of the blocks for strength tests. The blocks should be cured for a minimum of twenty-eight days before being built into a wall.

After locating the corners, the mason first lays the blocks for the first course on the footing without mortar to check the layout. The blocks are then lifted off the footings, but kept in the order of the layout. A full mortar bed is then spread and furrowed with a trowel along the bottom edges of the face shells of the block.

Good mortar is necessary to ensure good workmanship and good wall performance. The corner block should be laid first and carefully positioned. All blocks should be laid with the thicker end of the face shell up, as this provides a larger mortar-bedding area. After three or four blocks are laid the mason's level is used as a straight edge to assure correct alignment. The first course should be laid with care, making sure it is properly aligned, levelled and plumbed, as this will assist in laying succeeding courses and in building a straight true wall.

The wall should be parged to grade level with ½" cement mortar, and then waterproofed with asphalt emulsion.

Large portion of thefts in homes

Home burglaries represent a large portion of the $1,500,000 theft losses in Canada each year, according to officials of the All Canada Insurance Federation. Thefts increase sharply during the vacation months when owners are away.

The Federation, which represents most Canadian fire, casualty and automobile insurance companies, offers these recommendations to guard against home burglary while on vacation.

1) Have milk and newspaper deliveries cancelled. Old newspapers are a sure indication that the resident is away.
2) Arrange to have snow shovelled if necessary.
3) Inform the local police that you will be away. They will check your home periodically.
4) Have a friend or neighbor visit the house occasionally to see that all is in order.
5) Remove valuable silver or jewelry for storage in a bank safety deposit box.
6) Do not leave lights burning in the house.
7) If a theft or break-in is discovered, inform police immediately. Even if nothing of value has been taken, the information will be of value to police.

Home humidifiers in several types, forms

In most areas of the country, dry indoor air is a major household problem. As a result, many families turn to humidifiers to provide the added moisture needed for personal comfort and the protection of household furnishings and the house structure itself.

But what kind of humidifier — evaporative, vaporizing, or atomizing? The type you think is best may depend on specific conditions existing in your home. As a guide to intelligent buying, here are descriptions of the basic types available:

Humidifiers fall into two broad categories. There are furnace units which work as part of a hot air heating system, and portable units which are the only ones practical for homes heated with steam or hot water.

Part of Air System

Furnace humidifiers are generally the best solution to winter humidity control. Because they are part of the air circulating system, they achieve a uniform humidity throughout the home. They are installed permanently. Most are designed to operate automatically with the furnace blower.

Both furnace and portable humidifiers operate on one of three basic principles: Vaporization, atomization and evaporation.

Vaporizing or hot water humidifiers are essentially refinements of the old fashioned teakettle that grandmother used to help keep the house comfortable. Usually installed above the heat exchanger in a furnace, they consist of an electrical heating element immersed in a pan of water. Effective to a degree, vaporizers have a high electric current consumption and require maintenance to prevent corrosion and lime buildup in the pan and on the heating element.

Atomizer humidifiers may use either a fine nozzle or a centrifugal mechanism to force a fine spray of water into an air chamber of the furnace. The unit is usually mounted on the cold air side of the furnace, where the air passes through a filter.

The filter must be cleaned periodically to prevent a buildup of water hardness, minerals and reduction of the air blow. If the water is very hard, there also may be trouble with corrosion and deposits of material around air registers, as well as clogging of the atomizing mechanism itself. A water softener doesn't help because it merely exchanges insoluble calcium for soluble sodium, leaving actual mineral content the same.

Evaporator humidifiers utilize the natural ability of heated air to absorb moisture. An evaporator humidifier usually is installed right on the furnace hot air duct or plenum, so that warm air picks up moisture on its way into the home. Minerals are left behind.

Least Efficient

Least expensive and probably least efficient of the evaporators is the open pan with water dripping into it. A little more elaborate — and most common — is the pan or trough with a series of vertical plates or filters that soak up water.

A variation on the plate type humidifier is the kind with a pad or sponge, which may have a fan to force air through the wet surface. Some of these require a drain connection because water flows into them constantly.

Water hardness is also trouble-some in most evaporator humidifiers, since the mineral deposits soon clog plates, filters, and even sponges, reducing their ability to absorb water. Frequent cleaning or replacement of parts is needed to keep such units working at full capacity.

Disks Rotate Slowly

To overcome the clogging and the maintenance problem, several manufacturers have developed systems with rotating wheels, drums or belts instead of stationary plates or filters. One type has a series of bronze mesh disks that rotate slowly on a motor driven shaft.

The disks are half submerged in a stainless steel water reservoir, which is attached to the underside of any hot air duct on the furnace. As the disks rotate, they expose thousands of tiny window panes of water to the hot air stream for evaporation.

Hot air rushing between the disks sets up a natural flexing action to loosen any mineral deposits left on the mesh. These deposits wash off in the reservoir and remain in suspension until flushed out by an occasional draining. Such a unit can evaporate up to 68.5 gallons of water per day.

Frequent causes for paint failure

2 — Painting in cold weather. The temperature should be at least 50 degrees.
4 — Using poor quality paint.
4 — Failing to mix the paint as directed on the container.
5 — Applying the paint too thick to too thin.
7 — Failure to prepare the surfaces properly.
8 — Failing to seal knots or pitchy surfaces.
10 — Painting too often.

This airy "family room" has the combined comfort and atmosphere to ensure full realization of its purpose — family relaxation. The practical furniture is strategically placed for come-as-you-please or the restful mood. . . Art, crafts, literature? There's scope for enjoyment here in added decor and accoutrements.

Springtime planning in home and outdoors

Come springtime, and we're fired with fresh enthusiasm to spruce up the house and garden. Before that enthusiasm wanes, it's time for the housewife to dive into the projects planned, and ready the house for the active days ahead — the backyard barbecues and visits from vacationing relatives, etc.

While the man of the house is wielding a paint brush and roller, gather up all the washable curtains, draperies, slip-covers, and bedspreads that have become dull and dingy during the winter months. They'll look even drabber against freshly painted walls unless you restore them to their original sparkling colors.

When handling stains, caution is still the watchword. Different spots take different treatment. Removal of candy, for example, is simple: it can be removed by sponging with clear, cool water. With lipstick or rouge, work petroleum jelly or lard into the stain and then launder with a detergent. Should your spring redecorating plans include refinishing wood floors or furniture, try this easy way to bleach darkened wood: after removing the old finish, apply a solution of one cup Clorox per gallon of warm water. Keep the wood damp with this solution for 15 minutes. Rinse, allow the wood to dry, and wax it.

An intriguing tip for some gardeners is a way to utilize the empty plastic bottles in which liquid bleaches are packaged. By cutting the top off one of the bottles, you will have an excellent planter in which to start spring seedlings. The top with its built-in handle, need not go to waste, either. When the sides are sliced away, with a razor or sharp knife, it makes a dandy funnel for pouring gasoline into mowers, or pouring insecticides into spray gun tanks.

On buying rugs

There are three ways of using carpeting today. Wall-to-wall installations cover the entire floor and are tacked down; room-fit carpeting covers the entire floor as well but is not tacked down, while room-size rugs are woven in standard sizes. Each method has certain advantages which you should consider when making your decision.

Wall-to-wall is very popular today and when used in small contemporary homes where rooms and hallways flow into each other, carpet in the same color and design throughout gives a feeling of spaciousness and elegance. In any home, wall-to-wall carpet tends to make the walls of a small room recede, making the room appear larger.

Room-size rugs are woven in standard sizes such as 9 by 12 feet, 12 by 15 feet, etc. These rugs should come within 12 inches of the wall in a large room and eight inches in a small room.

HINT

Always replace the lid on a can of paint as soon as you have finished working with it. This keps the remainder of the paint fresh for the next time it is used.

Adapt room use to your needs

By Pauline Graves

A room may go through all sorts of transformations, and probably can continue to do so. Built as a bedroom with a wardrobe closet, one room was treated as a den, with knotty pine wainscotting and braided rug carpeting. As a den, the closet was wasted, so the owners divided the space into compartments, one for the television set, small cupboards for miscellaneous storage and two shallow drawers. The upper half was left free of shelves, for storage of large boxes and large items. By using the closet in this way, no space was wasted.

When the baby arrived, the room became a bedroom again, but the closet was left untouched and proved to be extremely useful. With a clothes pole, the upper section is just right for hanging baby and toddler dresses, and there is space underneath for diapers, baby soaps, oils and powders. Although the television means nothing to the child, it will eventually, and meanwhile mother enjoys it while working or feeding the baby. Other articles of clothing are stacked in the small cupboards, and there's storage, too, for toys. This arrangement can be used for a long time, and when there is a need for hanging full length clothes, the entire unit can be removed.

If your closets have empty spaces above and below the hanging clothes, put the space to work. Relocate the rods, hang short items together, and fill the empty areas with shelves and drawers.

Wood panel ideal for wall covering

The ideal wall covering for any room where people live and work should have a fine appearance, harmonizing with the furniture and furnishings and creating a restful atmosphere. It should possess good insulating properties and durability. In addition to these physical properties it must be relatively economical to purchase, easy to install and maintain.

Of all wall covering materials, says the Canadian Wood Development Council, wood best meets all these requirements.

The unique beauty of wood is the chief reason for its popularity. It can be used with a natural finish, clearly showing the grain, or it can be painted, stained or wash-coated to obtain an entirely different effect.

Most home-owners prefer a considerable expanse of natural wood grain, particularly for living rooms, dining rooms, bedrooms and dens. From the many suitable species, almost any color can be chosen: woods that are nearly white, other woods that are dark, woods that are deep red, light yellow, pink-toned, light tan. If an elusive tint is required for a special architectural design, artificial coloring can provide the desired effect. This need not be of the kind that will hide or detract from the grain pattern. By these means, a dark wood may be made light in color and light woods darkened. Painted panelling also has its place in modern architecture, either for covering the entire wall or in combination with figured paper on plaster walls.

Color is only one facet of wood's warm, elegant appearance. Others are its grain and pattern. A very important feature that makes wood panelling preferred is the natural pattern or "figure" of the grain. Most woods have figures, depending on the way in which the wood is cut from the log, and there are thousands of variations from subtlest to boldest; in fact, no two pieces are ever exactly alike. The non-repetitious figure, feel and texture of wood panelling cannot be duplicated or copied artificially. The grain whorls around burls, knots, and other markings are especially beautiful. Some woods obtain character from deep fissures, caused by insects or fungi before the tree is cut. The popular knotty-textures and many other character-marked woods are favored because of their grain configuration.

The pattern of machined wood is another important factor that helps make wood panelling popular. In addition to the beads, curves, and other shapes that individual manufacturers apply, the method of application to the wall can affect the appearance. The panel boards or decorative plywood panelling may be applied vertically or horizontally or in combinations. Panels can also be built up in squares or other geometrical figures.

Trim for doors, windows, corners, and baseboards is closely related to panelling. Trim pieces generally are available to match any panelling selected. Further, the same kind of wood can be used to construct bookcases, room dividers, cabinets, and other built-ins.

Wood is an insulator that protects the user from extremes of heat, cold, and sound. A section of wood, seen through a microscope, reveals not only the many thousands of cells that make up its myriad of tiny air spaces which make it an efficient insulator. Equally remarkable, and valuable, are the fine acoustical properties wood's structure provides.

The insulation properties of a wall covering are always important, no matter what other means have been taken to insulate the wall. Whether or not the walls are already insulated, the extra amount obtained by using wood panelling is an added bonus. Wherever external noises are a problem, the relatively thick layer of wood in the panelling and the added air space behind it will be much appreciated. It will also help to absorb and isolate internal noises.

An outstanding property of wood wall panelling is its durability. Almost indestructible in ordinary use, it will last as long as any part of the permanent structure. If the surface becomes damaged, the wood can be repaired and refinished as often as desirable; and if soiled, it can be cleaned with ease.

In terms of strength, any species of wood is suitable for panelling. The principal strength requirement is that it can be fastened in place and will remain there. A good wall covering must be strong enough to hold fastenings for hanging pictures, shelving, and decorations. For these purposes it must not be brittle, subject to cracking, or too thin.

Wood wall panelling is not an expensive item (says the Council); it is probably less expensive to use than any other material. For new construction, in most places, wood panelling makes plastering unnecessary. Even finishing of the wood can be by-passed by installing factory-finished panelling.

Few products used in a building are as easy to install as wood panelling. A large room can be panelled in a single day by one or two skilled carpenters. For the home mechanic or do-it-yourselfer, there are easily understood, detailed instructions for installation, even to the application of matching trim around window and door openings.

PAINT PEELING?

If the inside paint on your window sash and trim is beginning to peel off, chances are that the problem is caused by moisture in the joints of the window frames. To prevent future troubles, remove paint by sandpapering down to the original wood, caulk, then repaint.

Furniture follows women's fashions

Women's fashions unveiled in Paris could turn up in your living room a couple of years later — on the furniture, as well as the people.

Furniture fashions reflect women's fashions — usually with a time lag of a year or two — points out a leading maker of furniture.

The woman shopper probably doesn't realize it, but unconsciously, when she shops for furniture, she looks for the kind of style to which she is accustomed. And it's clothing fashion that gets her to thinking a certain way about style and taste he says.

Furniture makers should expect her to look for furniture with a kinship to what she's wearing, and they can anticipate the fashion trends by following the news from Paris as avidly as, say, dress designers.

Right now, for instance, the big trend is to prints — the same prints and often the same fabric so popular in women's dresses for the last year or so. That's an easy one to spot. So are color trends: Yellow and green by fancier names are "in" in both kinds of fashion.

Not so obvious is the relationship between skirt lengths and the off-the-floor look in furniture.

Right after World War II, when the "new look" lowered skirt lengths, furniture came down to the floor too. Now skirts are short, and in furniture emphasis is on leg interest.

Garden tips — planting annuals

Ottawa (CP) — A. R. Buckley of the Plant Research Institute has a number of tips for planting annuals.

In regions where frost occurs until May, he recommends starting them indoors — provided that one is willing to give up every sunny window-ledge to utility rather than beauty for a few weeks, that is.

The annuals that cannot be grown successfully outside from seeds are petunias, snapdragons, annual phlox, lobelia, verbena, salvia, and ageratum. All are slow-growing and need to be started early in the season.

Starting mixture for seeds is made of equal parts of good garden soil, peat moss, and sand, topped with half an inch of milled sphagnum moss (which can be bought ready-prepared). Broken pottery, gravel, or stones should line the bottom of the containers, and the moss should reach to an inch from the top.

Seeds should be scattered from the corner of the packet, tamped down so they are embedded in the sphagnum moss, and covered with a light sprinkling of moss. They should then be watered with a fine mist spray and covered with glass.

Paint masonry

Unpainted masonry absorbs water rather readily, so dampen the surface before you apply a latex paint, recommends the Paint Industry Council. If you're repainting over a previous coat, this isn't necessary.

Entry with a good impression

Since an entrance hall or foyer is where guests form their first and last impressions of your home and hospitality, it should be as inviting as possible. But homeowners thinking of redecorating or remodelling that area will want also to plan for long wear and ease of maintenance, as the hallway is always a heavy traffic route.

Panelling is Warm

Among the many possible choices of materials for this purpose, panelling ranks high on the list, adding an extra note of warmth. It also affords an opportunity for an expression of individual personality. Not only are there many species of wood from which to choose, but there are almost endless color combinations, achieved through stains as well as clear finishes.

Panelling also comes in many different patterns and grades. Simpler patterns offer the more delicate linear emphasis, while fancier patterns will be stronger in establishing lines of direction. Clear grades of lumber usually achieve a lively contemporary effect while knotty grades promote the traditional feeling.

Panelling may be installed in countless ways. You might want to set it vertically in a short hall with a low ceiling. In a tiny entranceway, panelling to chair rail or plate rail height might be the perfect foil for a small patterned paper on the upper walls and ceiling.

If you plan to re-do a hall that leads into a modern living room or one with an outdoor atmosphere, you will find that horizontal panelling leads the eye along the wall into the room beyond.

Individual interests can be brought into play in further decoration, depending on whether you wish a formal or informal atmosphere. Panelling makes a fine backdrop for books or a display of art objects. It also sets off prints of animals or outdoor scenes, yet it will lend softness to the sharp lines of a modern figure or painting.

A hanging shelf in matching wood, or recessed shelving, adds to visual interest. Wooden pegs or hooks to hold hats and children's coats are attractive and most useful.

Hall windows can be enhanced by a wooden valance that matches the panelling. If one side of the hall opens into a room a few feet from the front door, you can create the feeling of a longer wall by building a divider. This can be composed of cupboards, two-way bookshelving, or perhaps a lattice-work of geometric design.

Wrong construction of throat and wind shelf.

Opening too high for the width.

If the latter reason is responsible, set a sheet of metal across the top of the opening. The proper width can be found by experimenting with boards or even heavy paper.

The condition of a fireplace flue often can be examined from the fireplace by using a mirror with or without a flashlight.

A fireplace with square sides can be made more effective by lining brick or masonry on the sides and back to give them a slope toward the front.

To prevent danger from flying embers, a spark box can be set on the top of the flue. A spark box is made of heavy wire netting with meshes an inch or so square.

The netting should not be laid flat on the flue top, for the meshes would be clogged with ash and the draft would then be choked.

Form the netting into a five sided box, long enough for the open end to go downward into the flue far enough to provide support. The rest of the box should extend at least 12 inches above the flue top.

With daylight streaking through . . .

Sunlight penetrates into this entire room — an originally-conceived living room with cut stone fireplace dominating the scene. Growing plants give a refreshing note to this very modern interior.

It's grass cutting time again; care with power lawnmowers

Power lawn mowers are becoming a one-to-a-family device and they eliminate much hard work if your postage size lawn has suddenly developed the characteristics of a half acre of hay.

A power lawn mower must be treated with respect if it is to remain your friend. Carelessness on your part, and a neglect of safety rules, and the mower will suddenly be your enemy. But accidents need not happen.

At the start of the grass cutting season have your mower checked over and put into good mechanical condition. It won't work well if it needs overhauling. Then take a long hard look at your lawn. Does it need cleaning up? Remove sticks and stones, wire and debris and any other items that clutter up the lawn. If the ground is humpy, roll the bumps down. The mower works better on a flat surface. Cut the grass only in daylight, when the grass is dry — never when wet.

Now, to start the mower. See that all guards are in place. If the gas tank is low put in more when the engine and exhaust are cool, never while hot or while the engine is running. Gasoline and hot surfaces are an explosive combination. If you spill any gasoline, wipe up the spillage and move the mower at least ten feet away before starting. A spark from the engine can ignite the fumes and cause serious burns.

Keep clear of the grass discharge chute when starting the engine, and make sure your foot has not slipped under the blade housing. If the mower is the type that has a clutch, disengage it before starting or stopping the engine. Maimed feet are the commonest injuries. Never, ever, work in bare feet. Sandals or canvas shoes are not for cutting lawns, but inviting lost toes. A safety shoe, a sturdy footwear with some body to offer protection are best suited for your own safety. If the mower's direction suddenly changes, or you slip or trip, a toe or two may be the cost.

Don't leave the mower unattended while running, and children should not be allowed to play with it. Keep people away from the mowing area. If the machine picks up debris or sharp objects, the revolving blade will toss it in the air with such force that serious injury could result.

Shut off the engine before moving a distance not mowing. Cut hills or terraces sideways. Turn off the engine and disconnect spark plug before clearing a jam, making adjustments or motor repairs. Never lift or tip a running rotary mower.

Finished cutting the grass?

How much should you spend for your house?

"Anybody who doesn't shop for a mortgage loan today is out of his mind," a housing expert recently said. His words emphasized that the consumer is in the driver's seat now. Lenders are not only searching for mortgage customers, but many also offer inducements for your mortgage business. Shop around, and know in advance exactly what you need.

If you build a house, ordinarily you will need a construction loan (interim financing). You arrange beforehand with the lender, who advances money in stages to pay your builder. When the house is completed, the total money advanced is converted to a mortgage loan.

But determining what type of mortgage you should choose doesn't mean going out for as much as you can get for the least interest. This choice demands a decision on how much it is wise for you to expend in the first place. It would be foolish to spend too much.

The most popular rule of thumb on which financing authorities agree is that the average income family should spend between two and two and one-half times its total, gross annual income for a house. If your family income is $10,000 you can wisely invest between $20,000 and $25,000.

If you own your lot free and clear you can spend somewhat more than you would if you were buying a lot and preparing to build. If you plan to invest a considerable sum of savings in your mortgage, the term of the loan will be significantly reduced. Because of your previous prudence, you may now be privileged to spend somewhat more than you would wisely spend, if you are initiating the investment, and spread it over a longer term.

You will be well advised to consider the monthly costs of running your house before you determine a price. Figure out the monthly payments on your mortgage principal and interest, insurance and taxes, repairs and maintenance, heat and utilities, garbage collection, and even commuting costs. These should be kept to within about one percent of what you pay for the house. If you are building a $20,000 house your income should make it possible for you to budget about $200 a month to maintain the house.

Kamloops, B.C. — The northern house mosquito is on the increase in many areas of Canada, says L. C. Curtis, of the CDA Research Station here.

The pest, which can dampen considerably the pleasure of gardening and other summer outdoor activities, breeds in stagnant water.

Every householder can help his community's control program by making sure his premises are not breeding grounds for mosquitoes, Mr. Curtis points out.

Bird baths and ornamental pools may be attractive features of home landscaping but, without proper care, they also can be excellent breeding grounds for mosquitoes.

A frequent check should be made of bird baths and the water changed if wrigglers appear in it, the researcher advises. A few goldfish or guppies in a garden pool will provide control by eating the larvae of the pest. As an alternative to stocking the pool with fish, the water should be sprayed lightly with an oil solution of 0.01 per cent pyrethrum.

Cans, pails, barrels and other containers should not be left where they can collect water and provide additional breeding grounds for the pest.

HOW MUCH LUMBER?

Lumber prices are often quoted by the board foot. To figure the number of board feet in a piece of lumber, first determine its square feet. This is the width in feet times the length in feet. Then multiply the square feet by the thickness in inches. However, if a board is less than one inch thick, multiply by one.

A home office with relaxed atmosphere

The modern executive no longer burns midnight oil in a lonely room on the sixteenth floor of an office building. Instead, at the end of the regular business day, he fills his briefcase, rushes home, has dinner and settles down to catching up on his work. Whereas he once was satisfied with some space on the dining room table, he now wants a desk and storage space.

The modern housewife pays the home bills and is busy with her women's groups and many other peripheral activities of family life. She, too, needs a place to do her paperwork.

What place in a home is suitable for an office? A separate room, large or small, is ideal but not always possible. Other popular spots, sometimes marked by dividers, are in the den, family room, kitchen, guest room, basement, attic, even the sewing room.

One incorrigible record-keeper confiscated part of his wife's laundry room and happily tends occasional busines there. It's serenely quiet (when the machine isn't running) and is far from television and telephone sounds. Another part-time home worker has set up a divider and uses a corner of the living room as a rather elegant office.

Home offices are becoming increasingly functional. Modular furniture, intended originally for maximum efficiency in the world of commerce, is also adaptable to small, sometimes irregular areas in domestic situations.

You can get a modest desk, for instance, plus another slightly lower unit for correct typewriter height, and make an "L" arrangement as focal point of a home office. Beneath it you can put two or more pedestals with file drawers and other storage space.

Add an office-type secretarial posture chair that has a contoured back support, can swivel, adjusts up or down — and you're in business at home.

Wall units are a boon to space-hungry planners. You can get bookcases, magazine racks, open shelving, even bars, suspended from the wall, at elbow-length. A credenza is a welcome addition if the pocketbook permits.

Most home offices, like the midtown variety, have been mainly modern in styling so far. There is some good, light-scaled contemporary furniture that blends well with residential decor. Sometimes wood and metal are combined. But the traditionalists are beginning to have their day. Among the larger-dimensioned pieces suitable to go into a gentleman's home office is a handsome Chippendale desk with tooled leather top and antique brass pulls.

New walls

An easy way to modernize is with a new wall placed right over the old. This dramatic change is made possible with the latest idea in wall decor — bookmatched "planks" — available nationwide this spring.

This remodelling job is done with elm plywood. A new series of inlaid hardwood panels combining complementary wood species, and a new walnut plywood grooved every four inches for the appearance of real walnut lumber, are making their debut this spring, too.

PAINTING BRICKWORK

To create a fresh appearance for a brick home which has been previously painted, use a standard oil-base house paint. This will stick to the chalky surface formed by the older paint.

Takes a sleuth to buy a home!

Each year thousands of Canadians go house-hunting. Some of them come up with "finds," while others are stuck with "lemons".

So much time, thought and money go into buying a house that you naturally hope it will be for keeps. But whether you'll be happy in it, or sorry you ever saw the place, will depend on how much know-how you apply to the deal.

The neighborhood's important. — Is there adequate privacy? Are transportation and schools readily accessible? Are the streets lit adequately? Are you away from sources of smoke, odors or excess noise? These are some of the questions you should ask yourself about your prospective neighborhood before giving the O.K.

Check the grounds. — Unless you're a fiend for yard care, a great big lot can be a burden and unnecessary expense. Flagstone walks and steps add beauty and distinction to the grounds and are therefore highly desirable.

Inspect the exterior walls. — As the front wall is usually the most prominent part of the house, you'll frequently find it made of the best material. Stone front houses, for instance, often have side walls of brick, masonry or wood. Check for peeling paint and cracks.

Interior tips. — Check for moisture damage. Stains on plaster, rot in sills or raised grain on woodwork can tip you off to a serious condensation problem or weather leaks.

Are the ceilings flat and in good condition? Inspect the walls — are all joints and seams intact? Ideally, you'll want interior walls to provide interesting contrasts of texture.

According to the Building Stone Institute, new economical cutting techniques and the wide variety of colorful stone available — such as sandstone, quartzite, granite, marble, limestone and slate — has made it possible for architects to use more of this classic material with its wide range of textures.

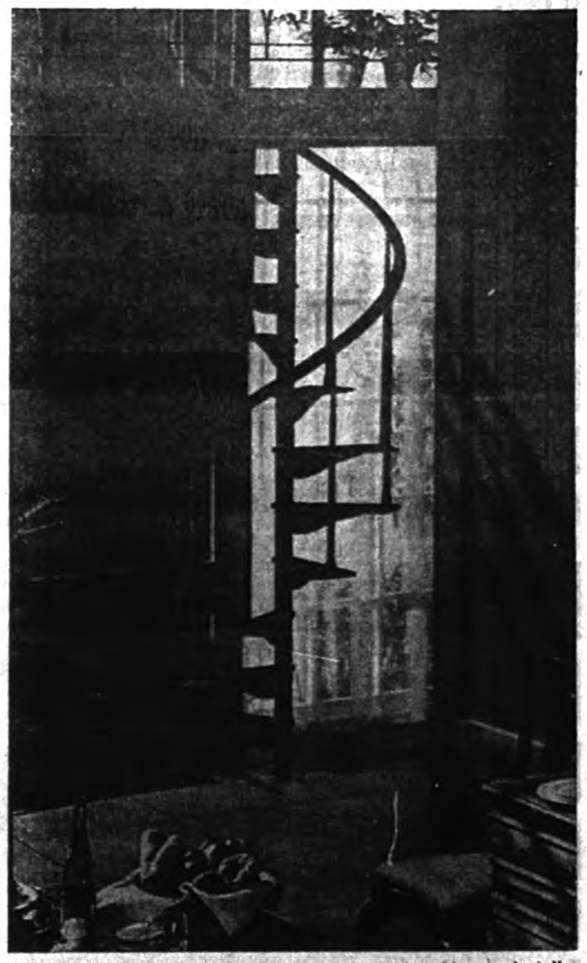
Look for important extras. — You may regret your failure to buy a house that has certain extras — such as an additional bathroom, a fireplace, or a terrace suitable for conversion into an extra room.

Trust your eyes and judgment. — The people who lived in the house previously may not be the ones for you to ask pointed questions. And very often the real estate agent doesn't know your needs. Your own eyes are more dependable than anyone else's tongue.

It is up to you to inspect the plumbing, wiring, drainage, heating, ventilation, closets and cupboards. If possible, get an expert to check for damage to elements of the house.

Many a buyer is embarrassed about peering into the crevices of a house. But if you think you look silly prodding a cracked ceiling, consider how much sillier you'll feel if it drops on your mortgaged shoulders.

Happy hunting!



SPACE SAVER — A space-saving and pleasing idea to install a stairway. Happy thought for the cottage owner who wants to utilize an upper floor. This one is all-metal, but the steps could be wood, painted or stained to conform with the surroundings.

Revised Building Code a widely used publication

A new edition of Canada's National Building Code is now available to the public. This advisory document published at cost by the National Research Council is now in wide use across Canada both by provincial governments and by municipalities. When legally adopted for local use by municipal councils it becomes the local building regulation. As such it is now being used in the service of a very large part of the urban population of this country.

The Code is truly a national document since it is prepared and issued by the associate committee on the National Building Code of NRC which consists of leaders in the building industry from all parts of Canada. The actual technical contents of the Code are prepared by similar expert committees with Canada-wide membership. Architects, engineers, contractors, house builders, material manufacturers, trade unionists and many others have combined their talents to make the new edition of the Code the best possible document for Canadian use. The new edition is the fourth. The Code was first published in 1941 but appeared in a completely new form in 1953. It was revised again in 1960. The new 1965 edition is the first of what will be regular five-yearly revisions of the Code in order to keep it up to date and in close touch with developments in building technology.

The Code itself is written in the form of a by-law so that it can be readily adopted by municipal councils. It is a lengthy document, since it covers all types of construction — steel, concrete, wood, masonry and other materials as well as the functional requirements of different types of buildings. It naturally includes sections dealing with plumbing and other building services as well as a special part on construction safety measures.

The Code is supplemented by seven technical supplements. These provide useful technical information for the designer on such things as wind loads, fire resistance of materials, and climatic information for the whole of Canada. Supplement No. 5 is the well-known "Residential Standards" which is a complete guide to the regulation of residences, now used by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation under the terms of the National Housing Act.

Two new supplements appear with the new Code. One deals with farm buildings other than houses. The other — Supplement No. 7 — is a pioneer document for Canada in that it sets out "Building Standards for the Handicapped." One in every seven Canadians has a permanent physical disability or an infirmity associated with aging. The new supplement to the National Building Code is a guide to those slight changes in building design which help to make buildings convenient for handicapped citizens. It is hoped that it will be widely used.

Copies of the Code and supplements and information about the Code may be obtained by writing to the Secretary, Associate Committee on the National Building Code, care of the National Research Council, Ottawa.

Rain, mud, snow and slush can cause permanent damage to the floor in the entryway of your home. But a minor do-it-yourself project can eliminate this possibility and, at the same time, add an attractive touch to the area.

No matter what type flooring you have, a rugged material like ceramic tile is ideal for the entryway. Even an area as small as 10 square feet just inside the door is sufficient for removal of your guests' foul-weather gear, such as rain coats, galoshes and dripping umbrellas.

If your present floor is smooth and sturdy, you will be able to glue the tile directly to it. Get tile with rounded edges to form the outer border. In case your floor is carpeted, you may wish to cut out a portion just inside the door and replace it with tile.

If necessary, you may use an underlayerment of plywood to level or thicken the subflooring. On most jobs using one-inch-square ceramic mosaic tiles, there will be no cutting or fitting needed, so it is relatively simple to glue the tiles to the sub-flooring with a mastic and then fill the joints between the tiles with grout.

Use Epoxy Material

For the ultimate in construction, use the newer epoxy materials both for the adhesive and the grout. Special epoxy materials that can be cleaned from tiles and other surfaces with warm water have been developed for use with ceramic tiles. The epoxies are nearly as strong and durable as the tile itself, and will add to the good looks and long life of your new entryway.

Love makes a home but paint makes it livable

What makes a house a home? Love may be the No. 1 ingredient, but a good paint job is a big help, too. And in the spring, all over Canada the householder's fancy turns lightly to thoughts of rejuvenating the old manse via the paint brush.

It's probably the biggest do-it-yourself activity there is. Still, you can always use a few tips to guide your brush or roller toward that "stroke of genius".

1. When picking colors, think of the effect you're striving for. Red is exciting, but also overwhelming in large doses — and tends to make an area look smaller. Yellow is cheerful, like sunlight, and its lighter tints provide a sense of spaciousness. Green is tranquil — like a smooth lawn; blue is soothing.

2. Make hue work for you. To shorten a long room, use a warm color such as yellow or yellow-orange — or a deep shade of a cool color like green — on the end walls. To widen a room, use light tints on the side walls. Paint out architectural defects — old-fashioned molding, for example — by making them the same color as the surrounding area. To accent a desirable feature, such as a fireplace, paint it to contrast with the walls.

Rubberized or latex paints, most popular of the interior finishes for walls and ceilings, have several advantages. They dry in 20 minutes; except on new work, a primer coat isn't necessary. After a 30-day curing period, they may be washed and even scrubbed — great for homes filled with tiny, grimy hands.

Alkyd paints and enamels are ideal for areas like kitchens and bathrooms, where moisture is a problem. They are exceptionally tough and have outstanding wearing qualities. For exteriors, some of the house paints now available have such virtues as fume-resistance, mildew-resistance, and the ability to clean themselves with every rain.

4. Proper surface preparation is essential. It's one of the things that can make the difference between a paint job that will last five years or more, and one that will have to be repeated after a season or two. The surface should be clean and dry; never attempt to paint over a damp or dirty surface. All nail holes and cracks should be filled and all rough spots sanded smooth.

5. Don't fall down on the job. Plant your ladder on a solid, non-skid footing so that distance from ladder bottom to wall is one-fourth the ladder's height. Go up or down facing the ladder, and don't go any higher than the third rung from the top. Don't lean from the ladder. You can reach out, but keep your feet firmly planted on the ladder rung. Just keep in mind the gravity of the situation and you'll be all right.

6. When painting exteriors, follow this order: Start to paint at the top of the house and apply paint in three-foot strips from side to side. Drop down and paint a second strip. Paint the house trim before painting the house walls.

7. Indoors, use this system: Paint the ceiling first, in one or two-foot strips from side to side. Work from dry to wet surface. For painting walls, start in a corner and paint in strips from the top to within six inches of the baseboard. Do cut-in work as you go along. After wall and ceiling surfaces are done, paint the trim. Many amateur painters are tempted to start painting one room before they finish another: for even temper and even results, avoid this temptation. Do one room at a time.

8. Put drop cloths or newspapers along the wall to catch drops and splatters. When paint spots drip on floors, you can just wipe them up with a damp cloth if you are using rubberized paint. If you are using an alkyd or other type finish, a solvent is required to remove spots.

9. Clean brushes and rollers immediately after painting. For rubberized paint, warm soapy water will do. For other paints, use a thinner recommended for the particular paint.

10. And a few miscellaneous suggestions: If you use rollers, be sure they're large enough. Small ones make the job needlessly difficult.

To avoid fatigue, alternate hands.

Ways to clean a softwood floor

A varnished softwood floor in good condition should be cleaned dry. When it is soiled, dirt can be taken up with a cloth dipped in soapy water and wrung out, followed by rinsing and wiping dry. A painted or oiled floor can be washed, although water should not be allowed to stand on it, and the floor should be dried quickly.

Oil spilled on a softwood floor will soak in, making a stain. Freshly spilled oil should be wiped up and the stain covered with dry Portland cement, plaster of Paris, fuller's earth or something similar that will draw the oil out of the wood pores and absorb it.

When this treatment will not work, as with oil stains, a solvent can be used, such as gasoline or benzine. In using these materials, the room must be well ventilated and precautions taken against fire. The solvent should be mixed with the powder to form a soft paste. Spread the paste about one-half inch thick on the stain. A sheet metal, glass or similar material should be used as a cover to slow evaporation.

As it works down into the wood, the solvent will dissolve the soil and draw it up into the powder.

Leave the poultice in place for several hours or until it has dried. Repeat the treatment if necessary.

Home acoustics and 'sound barriers'

For some buildings acoustics should be considered even before the site is chosen. For example, it would be a mistake to locate a theatre or high school under the flight path of a busy airport.

In the initial lay-out of almost any building it is desirable to segregate noisy areas and quiet zones. In a manufacturing plant, for example, the office would ideally be as far as possible from sources of intense noise. If noise cannot be isolated by distance then structural design must isolate noisy rooms or areas from those where silence is necessary or desirable.

Acoustics should be taken into account when determining the size and shape of any room in which noise is likely to be a problem, or in any which conversation and direction of sound is important. Finally, in the choice of structural materials, weight should be given to acoustical requirements.

Almost all building materials have acoustical properties that can be used to control sound, but no single material will do all the acoustical work needed in a building or even in a single room.

Because of its acoustical properties wood can be used successfully in design of sound-resistant room enclosures and in acoustically satisfying room interiors. Though wood is primarily a reflective material, wood surfaces can be adapted to absorb sound energy, especially of a low frequency.

Sound absorption should not be mistaken for sound insulation. Sound absorbent materials are usually light in weight and do not significantly affect the transmission of sound through a wall, floor or ceiling. Airborne sound is carried by waves that strike the inner surface of the wall, are transmitted into vibration, and emerge from the outer surface as less intense sound waves.

Insulation against air-borne sound depends largely upon the mass, or unit weight of the materials used. To obtain high efficiency without excessive weight a high degree of structural insulation between component members is necessary. Dividing a wall of a given weight into low independent barriers will accomplish this. One highly effective wall construction uses two sets of studs, staggered or slightly offset from each other. Also efficient is the use of resistent clips to fasten facing materials to stud framing.

Formerly the only method was a hit or miss mixing of colors, painting a swath on the wall and then waiting for it to dry — at best it was a time consuming process.

For the sake of uniformity in color, keep track of the portions of paint used in the sample when a large surface is to be covered.

VOLUME 88, NUMBER 20 | LACHUTE, QUE., WEDNESDAY, MAY 19, 1965 | 10 CENTS A COPY AT NEWS-STANDS | SECTION 1; PAGES 1 - 8

Traffic transition Traffic patterns change frequently in Montreal, but infrequently in Lachute, and this latest scene on Main Street will surprise out-of-towners who have not so far viewed the change. Looking west from the Bethany Street intersection, the customary centre parking is removed to the curbsides, and the centre is cleared for traffic movement. A change is seen also in the continuance eastward towards St. Jerome, where traffic has the right of way. There are drawbacks to be ironed out, but advantages on the other hand have been self-evident. This picture was taken from the roof of Muir Bros.' service station. — Photo, Syd Drew

Traffic and parking revamped on Main St.

Week-end traffic moved with unprecedented ease over Lachute's Main Street following the changes effected last week — according to both civic officials and also residents who had previously voiced some reservations to the change. There were several comments heard from businessmen to the effect their sales were down considerably, while others reported the best Friday evening ever, in the shopping area.

The majority of complaints received by the Police Department to date have all been studied, and possible solutions found. The experiment was done at a minimum of cost on the initial trial basis, and had it proved unsatisfactory from a traffic point of view, would no doubt have reverted back to the former way immediately. It proved so successful, however, that additional signs and proper cross-walks will no doubt have been installed by the time The Watchman goes to press.

Municipal Police reports indicate only one accident over the week-end, and this occurred at 3.40 a.m. Sunday across from the Post Office; damage to both vehicles was estimated to be $95. There was one crumpled fender reported Friday afternoon, and another Monday morning, which is less than the average number of accident calls over the several previous week-ends. And apparently there were at least a couple of other minor scrapes which were not reported to police.

Police Captain Réal Chartrand, who sponsored the plan (which in fact he had prepared last year) and Civic Engineer Hubert Pilon, both emphasized the fact that painted lines and signs were inadequate at the initial stages, as this was an experiment. In an effort to keep costs to a minimum, a water paint was used; no new signs were painted, and the island cones were loaned by the Bell Telephone Company.

Probable future improvements include a traffic light at the Bethany and Main Street corner; push-button pedestrian controlled traffic lights in at least one or two locations on Main Street; traffic signs suspended over the street; some means of preventing cars from taking up so much room over the sidewalks; and the possibility of a central dividing wall carrying lighting-standards.

President, manager optimistic on '65 Spring Fair prospects

As Lachute Fair dates (June 16-17-18-19) loom closer, Secretary Ken Riley notes there are many new exhibitors anticipated, or already entered, especially in the clattle classes. Mr. Riley observes that breeders appear enthusiastic about the new cattle classifications in effect this year.

There is a good prospect also that the entries in light horses will exceed all previous numbers.

Work is proceeding on renovation of the grounds, with the installation of new steel fences and removal of some of the older buildings.

Entertainment

Some years ago the Service Clubs of Lachute were enlisted to co-operate with clean and lively entertainment at Lachute Fair, and the success of this original experiment has continued year after year. The clubs are now lining up their attractions. . .

On Thursday night the Rotary Club will repeat its usual program of contests — calf scramble, tug-of-war, etc. — which draw unfailing interest, due to their largely local participation.

An Friday, which is traditionally Lions Club Night, a feature attraction will be Miss Canada 1965, and local artists.

The Richelieu Club harness racing events take place as usual on Saturday afternoon, attracting keen interest at one of the attendance peaks of the Fair.

Altogether, President John Heatlie and his Agricultural Society committees are pleased with the way things are shaping up, and Secretary Riley looks for new records in many aspects of this annual show.

Hair-raising adventure in Rouge River rapids

Two young men, believed to be from the Toronto area, were rescued from the middle of the Rouge River just below the Harrington bridge late Sunday afternoon, ending a hair-raising experience which lasted several hours. The men were rescued by Eddy Miller, of Barkmere, who volunteered to take a boat out into the current, only a few feet above the rapids, to pick up the men.

The two were enjoying themselves on the river when they were swept into rough water and their canoe filled from the spray and waves. They managed to reach a large rock, just at the head of the rapids, and were marooned here for a considerable length of time.

Q.P.P. officers were called to the scene some time after the incident occurred, and Cpl. J. P. Dallaire had stated his intention of calling for a helicopter to rescue the men, when Mr. Miller, a native of the area, volunteered his services.

A sturdy rope 300 feet in length was attached to the boat, and Mr. Miller then rowed the craft to the centre of the river as far upstream from the rapids as possible. The swift current swept the boat to the rock; one of the unidentified men climbed in, and the boat then dropped into the rapids. The craft tossed down the river a distance of some 20 feet before the combined efforts of Mr. Miller's rowing and pulling on the long rope managed to bring the boat and marooned sportsman back to dry land. The performance was then repeated; the two men retrieved their undamaged canoe and, thanking their rescuer, depa[illegible].

The Quebec Official Gazette of May 8 gave notice of the granting of a charter to "Emmett Security Patrol Inc.," with head office at Lachute and a capitalization of $5,000, duly permitting this company "to carry on business as a security agency".

Col. Ernest Emmett's interest in the Imperial Corps of Frontiersmen is well known here; he was commanding officer of this body in Quebec Province for 23 years. But the details of his change in operation are not so familiar to the public. . .

By virtue of Quebec's "Detective and Security Agencies Act" of March 1963, it became necessary, among other things, for Col. Emmett's patrolmen to adopt a new uniform, since their blue outfits, chrome trappings and badges, and Stetson hats, conflicted with municipal police and branches of the provincial police. The cross-Canada Imperial Frontiersmen, obviously, would not re-equip their men to meet this requirement in Quebec, and in order to carry on his organization, employing 80 men and 20 women in the province, it became advisable for Col. Emmett to form his own squad. In accordance with the Act, each member was investigated and scrutinized by the Attorney General's Department, the agency was duly bonded, insured, and a multitude of formalities complied with.

There appears to be more than an employer-employee relationship between Col. Emmett and his men — several of whom have been on his patrol for many years. Some of these are part-time officers, others are on full-time assignments; all are under regular police instruction and drill. Certain industries have contracted with Col. Emmett's group for security and traffic guard continuously for 21 years.

It is virtually a non-profit venture, the only appreciable benefit being to its members in the form of employment.

Emmett's Security Patrol men will be on duty at Ormstown and Lachute Fairs as usual — in their own khaki uniforms for the second year in succession, but for the first time under their new official identity.

Electoral changes affect Argent'l

A wholesale revision of Quebec's federal constituencies which will reduce the province's representations in Ottawa by one, and which will leave only one riding unchanged, was recommended on Saturday by the Electoral Boundaries Commission for Quebec, an independent body appointed by the Federal Government.

If the recommendations are approved, Quebec's number of federal ridings would drop to 74 from 75, and only the riding of Verdun would remain untouched.

Slight extension to boundaries of constituency

The riding of Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes remains basically unchanged except that, in conformity with the commission adopting single names throughout the province, the proposed riding will be called Argenteuil. The constituency includes:

(a) The City of Two Mountains;

(b) The Towns of Barkmere, Lachute, Oka-sur-le-Lac and St. Eustache;

(c) The Counties of Argenteuil and Deux Montagnes;

(d) In the County of Terrebonne: the village municipality of St. Sauveur-des-Monts and the parish municipality of St. Sauveur.

The total population is 66,734 persons, based on the 1961 census and the suggestions are aimed at bringing constituencies into line with a uniform standard of population. Under the recommendations, 12 constituencies would disappear under their present names as a result of mergers and 11 new ones would be created.

Under the 1964 law, the provincial quotient is obtained by dividing the number of seats allocated to a province into the provincial population. Quebec's quotient is 71,070 and the law sets the range at 25 per cent either way from this quotient. In this province, ridings must contain between 53,303 and 88,838 persons.

To bring the proposed riding of Argenteuil up to this quotient, the small section of St. Sauveur, as mentioned in section "d", was added to the previous boundaries.

René Lafleur elected mayor in Brownsburg

René Lafleur, local business man, was elected to the mayoral office with 480 votes, defeating Georges Therrien 443, and Wm. Ouellette 161. . . Mr. Lafleur succeeds retiring Mayor James Donaldson. He has served previously in the mayoralty, also three terms on the council.

For Seat No. 1, Rosaire Belisle is a newcomer to the council ranks, elected with 560 votes against two opponents, Yvan Caron, 249, and Alcide Leduc, 202.

Rodolphe Moreau new mayor at Ayersville

On Friday, May 14, the students of Grades VIII-XI at Lachute High School attended an assembly for the presentation of a wheelchair to the Lachute branch of the Senior Red Cross, from the Junior Red Cross group.

This presentation was made possible by the Wheeler Dealer Campaign, which the Junior Red Cross of this area took a part in. The aim of this campaign was to raise funds to donate wheelchairs to local Senior Red Cross branches for use in their Sickroom Supply services.

Mr. Robt. Bailly, vice-principal, presided over the assembly. Members of the executive from Brownsburg High, as well as members of the executive from Lachute High, were on the stage with Miss Stanton, teacher and sponsor of the Junior Red Cross at this school.

Ian Jackson, president of the Junior Red Cross, made the presentation to Mrs. David Schwartz, chairman of the Sickroom Supply Committee of Lachute. . . Mrs. Schwartz thanked the Red Cross and pupils of Lachute, Brownsburg and Grenville High Schools, who made possible this presentation of a gift which will be of great use in this community.

Police captain's palliative for trouble-prone juveniles

Capt. Réal Chartrand, of the Lachute municipal police, is appealing for used bicycles or parts, which in turn can be rebuilt so as to give some pleasure to young residents of our community who in the past have been in various kinds of trouble with the police.

The Captain reports that a few unclaimed bicycles, which have been in the possession of the municipal police for at least two years, have been repaired by André Bergeron, a municipal employee, and to date several have been turned over to youths under surveillance of the Social Welfare Court.

One particular case of note is the youngster who last winter caused considerable concern to local residents with his repeated entries into Lachute churches. Capt. Chartrand reports that following the youth's release by the court, he was informed that, following two weeks of good behaviour, he would be given a bicycle, which would be his as long as he kept out of trouble. This particular youth has had a clean bill of conduct as far as police problems are concerned, for more than a month now — whereas, prior to his acquiring the bike, police had at least several complaints every week, in addition to the church entries.

Police Captain Chartrand realizes that this possible remedy will not work in every case, as many of the children who get into trouble with the law have other outlets of recreation. However, a large number of these juveniles seldom, if ever, have the opportunity to ride a bike, let alone have one they can call their own.

Only several months ago, this youth ran away every time he saw a cop; today he is a frequent visitor at the Police Station and always has a smile and wave for a patrolling policeman. There is a good possibility this bike will change his future, and there are many more youths just like him who would automatically stay out of trouble if given the opportunity.

A call to the police department will attend to any bicycles or parts which you might care to donate to a worthy cause, in the rehabilitation of youths who have been in trouble with the police.

Official charged with fraud of over $10,000

Jean-Claude Boivin, Social Service officer in Lachute under the Department of Family Welfare, was suspended last week and charged with fraud in connection with public funds. He was released on bail of $5,000 pending preliminary hearing.

Inspector Jean Pagé, chief of the arson and fraud department of provincial law enforcement, stated the case of various fictitious requests for family assistance, and the falsifying and endorsing of 73 cheques issued on this basis. The amount misappropriated is stated to be in the neighborhood of $10,379.

RCAF Radar Squadron, Lac St. Denis, assists in highway safety campaign

RCAF Station Lac St. Denis — — At 12 noon this Friday, the Victoria Day Highway Safety Campaign sponsored by the Prudentia Committee of the Quebec Department of Highways begins. Highway Safety Posts throughout the province will be manned during the long week-end in an attempt to reduce traffic accidents.

The Radar Squadron at Lac St. Denis will participate in this campaign, by establishing a Highway Safety Post one mile south of Ste. Adèle on Highway 11. This post will be open from noon on Friday, May 21, to 8 a.m. on Tuesday, May 25.

Warrant Officer L. M. A. Rivard, co-ordinator for the station, states that there will be ambulance service and qualified first-aid personnel on duty at all times during the holiday week-end.

The Highway Safety Post will be equipped with a cot, stretchers, two-way radios and will be able to provide a hot drink to any accident victim. The men who volunteer to provide this service will work under the direction of the Quebec Provincial Police in providing assistance whenever it is needed. The telephone number to call is 514-229-9847.

Quick action, but coin collection spent before arrest

Cst. Claude Beaulieu, a member of the Lachute municipal police force who is now occupied on full-time investigation work, added another feather to his cap late Sunday afternoon, when an 11-year-old youth was detained for questioning approximately two hours after a coin collection was reported missing. The incident occurred on Evelina Street, and the actual value of the money spent was reported to be around $12; the value to a coin collector, however, was much higher.

According to police, the youth apparently walked into the house of a neighbor, picked up the collection of old coins, and left the house. But he had apparently spent all the money before he was apprehended.

Cst. Beaulieu managed to obtain a description of the youth from restaurants in the area, and within two hours of the incident being reported, the culprit was being questioned. He will appear in Juvenile Court.

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

On the west side of the L. J. Dumais fuel oils office, Main Street West, Jos. Dumais is presently excavating to build a car wash establishment, which he expects to open in the latter part of June. This will be a do-it-yourself affair, the first of its kind in this area.

Prudentia's annual Highway Safety Campaign opens this week-end; the first public holiday of the season. The rapidly increasing traffic on our highways in springtime impresses the vital message, that caution and courtesy pay — in dividends of survival.

By BOB ATCHISON

The number of Canada Geese passing over, and in some cases resting in this area, looks very good for their survival. However, a good many of them will never reach their nesting grounds, for plenty of them are being killed, by shooting, trapping, and so on. . .

The other evening I was present at a discussion of sportsmen, and in most cases they believed that the way to stop these practices is through education. To me this is a laugh; trying to educate anyone is a waste of time, unless those persons WANT to be educated. How is it possible to teach any youngster to observe the laws, when the elders laugh about breaking them! As far as I am concerned the only way to stop this poaching is to make laws and penalties so strict that no one will be stupid enough to take a chance. I've often mentioned this before — the inadequate fines in this province for offences against the fish and game laws. The reason they have never been made more strict is far beyond me, and most others too; that's the way it is in this province. "If you get caught, that's too bad; we'll try not to make it too painful for you".

Some time ago there was a news release that commercial fishing would be stopped in some of the lakes much farther north. True, some of these lakes were closed, and permits cancelled — but what is the use of taking away permits then giving them out to others more favorable to the government?

• • •

Excellent fishing for this time of the year is now being enjoyed on all lakes of the area. Silver, Clear, Louisa and Macdonald Lakes have all produced some good fish. As can be expected, they have all been taken up near the surface of the water. In a couple of cases trolling with flies right up on top, has been paying off. Even much farther north, all the fish being caught are up on the surface. Naturally, with the water still very cold, you don't have to go down deep to get fish. One thing is apparent too — the fish are giving better action, not as sluggish as they were at the opening of the season.

Some good perch are coming out of the North River, and this should keep up all summer. The Ottawa has produced some good pike, but this week-end should see the doré high on the score-board. Down looking at the runs the other evening, there were plenty of them in sight. . . Some of the fishermen in this spot were getting peeved; some joker had strung a wire fence down in the water, and those casting lures got plenty of them caught in the mesh, and lost. If there had been a boat around at the time, someone would have got himself a real haul of baits and lures.

• • •

One of the best lures to come along in some time has, by reports, been the new Sting Ray. I mentioned the new split-bait some time ago, and wondered just how it would work. Nothing startling has been reported to me on this one; but the one I didn't even figure, has hit the jackpot. So far it has proved very consistent, and if this keeps up all summer, it will be a top producer.

• • •

More boats are appearing on the lakes, so once more, you boaters please have a little consideration for fishermen who may be trolling. Give them a wide berth, and especially do not try and cut across the stern of the troller. Have a little courtesy in boating, even if there is none shown on the roads. To you mothers and dads — letting the youngster try out the boats for the first time, be sure he knows how to handle the outfit, and knows the Safety Afloat rules too. Every year there are complaints about young hotrodders trying to beat someone's brains out with a motor boat. These boats are as deadly as any gun or car, so please use a little common sense in allowing your youngsters to operate them.

• • •

Once more, I must stress the danger of fires in the bush. This really shouldn't have to be re-iterated, but humans being what they are, the message needs pounding in. Going along Highway 41 the other afternoon, I pulled up alongside a couple more cars that had stopped, to put out a small fire that had been started right alongside the road. Evidently a cigarette had been tossed from a car some time before, and away it went. With everything so tinder-dry, it is easily seen that fires can spring up anywhere. I know I'm just as guilty as the next person of throwing smokes from a car, yet we do this never thinking of the damage that can happen through this foolish act. So far we in Argenteuil County have been very lucky, but the odds are against us at this season. So please take care against fire.

• • •

Not too many rabbits can be seen. Evidently the tick has managed to thin them out drastically. Nor do the skunks seem to be as thick as they were last year. This may be good, in showing the prevalence of rabies — which applies to the fox, which are not too plentiful either. Now let's hope the mice and vermin do not get going in a big way. It's ironical how a shortage of one thing will always bring on an increase in something else.

I have noticed the number of bird houses around town these days; the birds have never had it so good, and I hope this trend increases. You know some of these houses look good enough for humans. I spotted a wonderful marten house the other day too. It is really great to see this interest in the birds. We take them so much for granted; but considering all the pleasure which we derive from them, it's about time we tried to repay them a little. A little feed scattered around just now, will also give them a lift.

This morning (May 13) I have just heard from one of the local fishermen, who managed to catch himself a grey trout 8 lbs. 7 ozs. from one of the lakes. Where it was caught was not divulged. Only the one fish was taken, but this should have been enough. I also heard of a big catch of perch taken yesterday, 74 of them — all to be used — and some of them over a pound in weight.

A fishing derby, described as a contest of "monster" proportions, is planned by the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association this week-end, Saturday and Sunday, on the Ottawa River within the limits of Argenteuil County. (See also page 12.)

Headquarters for this contest will be at Carillon, with Association officials on hand from 7 a.m. Saturday until 9 p.m., also from 4 a.m. Sunday until 6 p.m. The contest closes at 4 p.m., thus allowing two hours for the registering of catches.

Regulations require that participants be 18 years or over. Since there will be only a limited number of boats available, it is recommended that fishermen bring their own. The contest will take place regardless of weather conditions. Entry fee is $1 per person, and all are welcome, including Association members and the general public. Entrants should first register at the bureau, at Carillon.

There will be a total of $1,000 in trophies and prizes awarded, including entry prizes. These will be given out Sunday evening in the new Lions' Arena at Lachute — marking the first public use of this new building (adjoining the Exhibition Grounds). The prizes and trophies are on view this week in the ground-floor show window of the Laurentian Hotel, Main Street. . . In addition, a $325 boat will be won by some lucky participant.

Information on this event is available from LO 2-5356, LO 2-6593, LO 2-5063 or LE 3-6556.

Inter-church cup held by Presb'tn carpet bowlers

On Monday, May 10, the inter-church bowling playoffs were held in the Presbyterian Church hall. The Presbyterian teams — consisting of Eileen Maldens, Ruthanna Barlow, Angus Hay and Herbert Underhill (skip); Mrs. Georges Helmer, Jean Rogers, Eric Cheslock and Judy Underhill (skip) — won their four games, thus retaining the cup.

The Anglican teams were skipped by Mrs. C. R. Lang and Mr. Jos. Sewell, and the United Church by Mrs. Edward Armstrong and Mr. William Wilson.

Refreshments were served by the Presbyterian ladies, and were enjoyed by all present.

Ladies' Section Lachute Golf Club

On Saturday, May 8, the opening meeting and luncheon of the Lachute Ladies' Golf Club was well attended, about 118 ladies being present, and the event was obviously enjoyed by all. Many enthusiastic golfers turned out for the meeting, at which was discussion on three interesting new tournaments proposed by the Match Committee, as well as several new rulings pertaining to regulations of play and dress.

The delicious luncheon was well planned by the Entertainment and Decorating Committee, headed by Miss Evelyne Ayers, who was also responsible for the charmingly original, golf-course motif centrepieces.

Golf fashions from the pro shop were expertly modelled by a group of lady members; and, judging from the enthusiastic approval of all the ladies present, there should be quite a run on the pro shop! The commentator was Mrs. Lorraine Regimbal, who was also the convener; the co-convener was Mrs. Jean Feldman, who was also one of the models.

A reminder to all golfers — the regular weekly tournaments get under way May 30.

By STAN DAVIES

The spring fixing-up on a boat — "fitting out" as they would say in yachting circles — is a time of uncertainty for newcomers to the sport of boating, as some of these inquiries indicate:

The paint on my boat is all chalky after the winter. What causes it?

Answer: It must have been a lousy paint job to begin with. "Chalking" is a quality often built into light-colored exterior house paints (so they'll always look bright without washing) but not into a boat paint. Sand it all off and start afresh. Anyway, chalky paint is easy to sand off.

I varnished parts of my cabin top inside a boat house a week ago. When I got the boat out, the varnish was full of bubbles, and had gone misty. What should I do? (N.K., Scarboro).

Answer: What did you do? Shake the can. Next time, get your glasses fixed, or varnish in a better light — and under drier conditions. I'd suggest waiting until we get a nice warm day of 65 or 70 degrees, then sand the job down and do it again. Varnish must be flowed on in one continuous, homogenous film; on a perfectly dry surface, with no bubbles. Anything less is a waste of time. It appears you rushed the season on the first try.

• • •

Gasoline leaked on the foam blocks on my boat. They've gone mushy. Why?

Answer: Some of the styrene foam used to provide flotation in older boats — mostly fibre glass or aluminum — was affected by petroleum products such as gasoline or oil — and cleaning fluids. You'll have to replace it. The new flotation foams are impervious.

My inboard cruiser is hard to manoeuvre at low speed. It's nothing like the 75 h.p. I used to have. While it's out of the water, can I do anything? (M.N.U., Cornwall).

Answer: Get a naval architect or a boat designer, or an expert of some kind to look at it. He might recommend enlarging the rudder... Look at the accompanying diagram and you'll see why an outboard boat, in which the entire motor pivots can direct the full power to swing the stern (Fig. 2), whereas in an inboard cruiser you can never get more than half the force of the propeller current to react on the rudder, (Fig. 2).

A total of 309 little children were admitted to this 60-bed hospital last year, made up of 299 Roman Catholics, 9 Protestants and 12 other faiths. In addition, 1,401 children were treated in the out-patient clinic. All of these children were helped to take their rightful place in society because of your interest in the Shrine Circus at the Forum.

'In the swim' for championships

Kenda Napp, who is making a name for herself as an outstanding young swimmer, competed in the age-10-and-under classes for provincial championships recently at the St. Laurent College pool — winning one first, one second and two thirds in a really sensational performance against some of the best young swimmers of the province. Kenda, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Napp, of Roxboro, is known for her swimming prowess at Lake Louisa, where the family have a summer cottage. She is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Napp, Lachute.

Lake fishing contest held

Other winners were M. McClelland and Armand Lauzon, the latter taking also the Molson Fishing Club award for the biggest catch of "scrub" fish. Among the undesirable types reported in these catches, carp were notably numerous.

A detailed sketch of the present parking and traffic circulation areas on Lachute's Main Street, prepared by Hubert Pilon, Civic Engineer. As is clearly indicated, the maximum speed limit on Main Street is 30 m.p.h.

Starting from the left of the sketch, or the East End, it can be seen that all traffic coming from Bethany Street onto Main Street, going either east or west, must stop where indicated — in front of Muir Bros. corner. Traffic going to and coming from St. Jerome, providing it is straight through-traffic on Main Street, has the right of way.

An island erected in the vicinity of the light standard and traffic post, divides the flow of traffic. Those wishing to make a U-turn at the end of Main Street must keep to the south or post-office side, and after partially completing the turn, stop to give the right of way to the St. Jerome-directed vehicles. Signs which are to be erected on the traffic island are clearly indicated at the bottom of the sketch. Where there was once a full stop at the old post-office corner, this has been replaced with a Yield sign.

Parking, for the most part, is anglewise, diagonal to the sidewalks, and while only one crosswalk for pedestrians is indicated on the sketch, a number will be used, several of these possibly having pedestrian lights.

Brownsburg High News

School Sports

By David McCaffrey

Brownsburg High School sent track and field entrants to two meets during the past week. Wednesday afternoon, they took part in one at Chomedey. As there were only two schools entered in the contests, each school won several events. The competition was fairly even, and it helped the B.H.S. participants to see how much more training they would have to add to their regular programs in order to improve themselves.

* * *

On Saturday, two teams (one boys' and one girls') were sent to the Provincial Relay Competition in Rosemere. Lindsay Place High School was the outstanding participant in the races. Our girls' team managed to come first in the 440 event. This team included Susan Sugden, Carolyn Summers, Patsy Low, Audrey Jackson and Rosemary Steere. The boys' team, consisting of George Atwell, Gerald Vowles, Vernon Thompson, Mark Racine and Don Lambert, did not win any "firsts", but took second in the 880 relay. Although this list of wins is not too impressive, it was very good experience for the runners.

The school softball team played Brownsburg's senior team on Thursday evening. Stevie Millar, who pitched for the school team, held the senior club to a minimum during the early stages of the game, but they organized a successful rally in the third inning, to take the scoring lead. The school team was not hitting very well, and was unable to overcome the margin set by their opponents. The game ended 5-2.

Week's Activities

By Sandra Hall

One phase of education that is not always emphasized is the art of performing before an audience. On May 8, the two grade fives of B.H.S., along with a few students from grades six and seven, attended the Victoria Hall performance of "Pinocchio". At this Montreal Children's Theatre, the representatives of B.H.S. watched enthusiastically the performance of students who had taken part in drama studies.

Mr. K. Armstrong, who had promoted the trip, is one of the directors of the Drama Club at B.H.S. He hoped this trip would give the B.H.S. cast of "Pinocchio" a deeper and fuller appreciation of the art of acting. It is intended that the play will be performed in Brownsburg in the early months after school begins again in the fall. Rehearsals are now being planned, in order to have the play well underway by October.

Grade five at B.H.S. is busy at another art — the art of making masks. Eight papier-maché masks were selected by the class members themselves, to be sent to the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, where we hope they will be accepted for display this coming fall.

* * *

On Friday, May 14, three members of the B.H.S. Junior Red Cross took part in an assembly at Lachute High, when the president of the Lachute High School Junior Red Cross, Ian Jackson, presented a wheelchair to a representative of the Lachute Senior Red Cross Branch, on behalf of the Grenville, Lachute and Brownsburg High Schools. The three schools were able to contribute money for this wheelchair through the "Wheeler-Dealer Campaign" carried out in each of the schools.

* * *

On May 14, through the efforts of Mr. D. Boal, eight girls interested in secretarial and office work visited the C-I-L plant. Mr. J. Broadfoot kindly acted as guide. The tour was an informative and interesting one; each girl returned to B.H.S. with a better and richer impression of the work of the various departments of C-I-L.

* * *

On May 15, the Junior Red Cross and the Students' Council of B.H.S. jointly sponsored a car wash. The proceeds will be divided between the two councils, and put towards their latest projects. B.H.S. would like to thank all those who took part in the car wash, for their support.

* * *

The Spring Prom at B.H.S. will be held on May 21. The orchestra will be the Sabronets. B.H.S. hopes that all who attend will have a pleasant evening.

APPRECIATION

I wish to thank my many friends and relatives for lovely gifts and cards, flowers, and for their visits while I was at the Smith Clinic, and since my return home. Also special thanks to Dr. Hunter and the nursing staff on 3rd floor.

Lady resident laid to rest

The late Mrs. Donald MacDonald

Mrs. Donald MacDonald, the former Jean E. Black, wife of Donald E. MacDonald, Brownsburg, died suddenly at the Montreal General Hospital on Sunday, May 9. She was 54 years of age, the daughter of the late David Black and his wife Eva Burwash.

Funeral service was held at the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, with interment at Lachute Protestant Cemetery.

Mrs. MacDonald was an active member of several organizations in the community. She was a past-Mistress of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association No. 943. Other organizations were Frontier Women's Institute and several groups of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church in which she had been active.

Pall-bearers were two nephews, George Clark and David Black, two cousins, Clarence Brown and David Morrison, and two friends, Ernest Gordon and Ernest Jackson.

Mayor re-elected in Arundel

In elections for Arundel Municipality last Monday, the mayoralty and one council seat were up for contest — Dr. W. L. Morrison being returned to the office of mayor with a majority vote against W. D. Graham, and Walter McMahon being newly elected councillor against his opponent, Stuart S. Cooke.

This is Dr. Morrison's fourth complete term as mayor; in each previous instance he was given an acclamation. He first filled the office for an unexpired term.

LOBSTER LICENSES

Halifax (CP) — The department of fisheries issued almost 24,000 lobster fishing licenses in the Maritimes in 1964. Of these 8,000 were issued to persons not listed as commercial fishermen.

Intruder escapes when neighbor investigates

An appeal to all citizens to call police when they are suspicious of any irregularity, is emphasized by Lachute's Police Captain Réal Chartrand, following an incident which occurred early Sunday morning in a local establishment.

Mrs. Lucien St. Jacques, who lives above the establishment of L. St. Jacques Ltée, Chatham Street, was awakened by a noise in the store about 12.30 a.m. Sunday, and called a neighbor to investigate. When confronted by the neighbor, the would-be thief jumped through a window and is believed to have severely cut his hands in the process, and it was only following his escape that the police were notified.

Entry to the building was made by breaking a pane of glass.

May activities in Argenteuil W.I. branches

Dalesville - Louisa Women's Institute answered their roll-call by reciting a verse from a poem learned in school. Colored slides of local scenes were shown, and an antique display, arranged by the Education convener.

Lakefield members exchanged favorite recipes in answer to their roll-call. Fair work was discussed, and plans made to hold a military whist on June 23.

Pioneer meeting was conducted by Mrs. J. A. Bradley. "Clean Up! Paint Up!" was the theme of the roll-call. Mrs. Jas. Warwick, of Lachute, spoke and answered questions on growing flowers, soil, potting and care of many plants, including roses, begonias, etc. Plants and cuttings were sold. Arrangements were made to cater for the County convention on May 15 at Lachute High School.

Upper Lachute - East End had as their guest speaker Mrs. V. Shultz, Household Science teacher at Lachute High School, who spoke on "Canada's Food Guide", telling the nutritional value received from foods we eat and how to prepare tastier and attractive meals.

A number of branches, namely, Dalesville - Louisa, Brownsburg, Upper Lachute - East End, Frontier and Pioneer, took part in County dramatic plays recently put on in Brownsburg and Lachute. All plays were so well acted that the judge, Mrs. D. McCabe, found it difficult to make a decision. However, Pioneer was the branch chosen to go to Macdonald College in June, to the Women's Institute convention, to compete with three other County W.I. branches.

Jack Murray had what he thought was the world's biggest pile of unpaid medical bills. Mr. Murray needed financial help in a hurry.

He talked his money problems over with one of the helpful Scotiabank people. After a few simple questions about his job, income, and how much money he needed Jack Murray started to see his medical bill problem melting away.

35 minutes later Jack Murray had all the money he so desperately needed. Of course, this actual customer was not named Jack Murray—and not all Scotia Plan Loans take 35 minutes—the time varies with the circumstances. But there are more and more people with all kinds of names and jobs coming to The Bank of Nova Scotia to have their money problems solved—quickly. Why don't you?

How much money do you need? We strongly suggest that a Scotia Plan Loan is one of the best—most practical ways for you to consolidate your debts. With a Scotia Plan Loan the cost is low. Your loan is life-insured at no extra cost. You get the other advantage of dealing with the interested Scotiabank people. So talk over your money problem—whatever it is—debt consolidation—a new car—with the people at your nearest Scotiabranch. They're ready and waiting to help you.

Lawn care is a two-step job: Cutting and raking. A Lawn-Boy Grasscatcher does it in one step; you cut and rake at the same time. Your lawn ends up looking as neat as a new haircut. The Grasscatcher will also collect leaves in the fall and tidy up the lawn each spring.

The Grasscatcher clips on and off the mower in seconds without tools and is zippered to empty in two shakes. And even wet grass and leaves can't clog it.

FINGER-TIP START makes Lawn-Boy the easiest starting power mower you can buy.

SAFETY—Lawn-Boy exceeds all ASA safety standards. See the 1965 Lawn-Boy soon. It's warranted for two years, twice as long as any other power mower.

PRUDENTIA

This week-end — the first long week-end of the summer — a province-wide Road Safety Operation is being launched by PRUDENTIA, the Provincial Highway Safety Committee, under the theme:

"ROAD SAFETY — EVERYONE'S RESPONSIBILITY"

The success of the campaign will depend on each and every one of us — driver, passenger, pedestrian and cyclist alike. And surely the tragic results of last year will spur us on to greater awareness and caution: according to the Canadian Highway Safety Council, Quebec highway accidents took 1,581 lives in 1964, an increase of 20% over 1963 and the worst record of any of the provinces. Another 37,000 people were injured on our roads last year, and there were over 94,000 accidents causing damage of over $100 each.

Collectively, we can reduce this terrible toll, and make our highways safe. But we must take the Prudentia campaign to heart and accept the fact that road safety is everyone's responsibility — and ALL the time.

OUTDOORS AT HOME

I wonder if Canadians would be so appreciative of the spring and summer if Canada had a warm climate all year round? Well, no matter, the fact is that we don't have a warm climate all year round, and so we take as much advantage of it as possible while it's here. This doesn't only mean trips and excursions and picnics and the like, but "outside living" on the porch, patio, or under the family trees. And this can sometimes present a problem because "inside living" still has to go on as well. For example, the telephone is probably considered a part of "inside living" by most people — perhaps because it's more or less "tied down" by a wire. Yet there are two solutions which let people enjoy as much "outside living" as possible while still keeping in easy touch with friends. One is the Bell Chime, which can be set to ring loud enough to be heard outdoors (it also has a regular ring, plus a soft musical tone that's perfect when a family member is resting). The other is a portable extension with a weatherproof jack. What would you do with an outdoor extension during the winter months? Well, you take it back in with you and use it as a regular extension! If you're interested, we'd be glad to tell you more about it — just give us a call at our business office.

Religious leader joins service of Cdn. Bible Society

The Rev. E. G. B. Foote, OBE, CD, BA, DD, DCL, Chaplain General (P) of the Canadian Armed Forces, upon his retirement from the chaplaincy in May, joins the staff of the Canadian Bible Society to assume special responsibilities with the national leaders and with the churches in the Nation's capital.

Dr. Foote was born in Pictou County, N.S., on August 6, 1910. A graduate in Arts of Acadia University in 1933 and in Theology from Presbyterian College, Montreal, in 1936, he held a pastorate at Oxford, N.S., until enlisting in the Royal Canadian Navy Chaplain Service in World War II.

In 1945 he was appointed Chaplain-of-the-Fleet (P) and 1962 Chaplain General (P) of the Armed Forces. In addition to his service in the European theatre of war he also served with the Canadian destroyers in the Far East during the Korean conflict. From his headquarters in Ottawa, Dr. Foote has made frequent tours, afloat and ashore, over half the world.

Dr. Foote has been the recipient of many honors. For services overseas he was made an Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire. Presbyterian College, Montreal, conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity, and Acadia University the degree of Doctor of Civil Law.

As a recognized leader in the religious life of Canada and as a past-president of the Ottawa District of the Canadian Bible Society, Dr. Foote brings to the Bible Society many gifts which will strengthen its work at a time when it is facing both the greatest challenge and the greatest opportunity in its long history.

Members of the Lachute 4-H Calf Club honored Mr. Irenée Paré, on his retirement as Agronome, at their meeting held Monday evening of last week at the farm of Douglas Rodger. André St. Pierre, president of the club, and Bobby Rodger, representing the vice-president, presented Mr. and Mrs. Paré with an Ayers blanket. Refreshments were served by the 4-H Club girls. Everyone had a most enjoyable evening, and appreciation is due to Mrs. Douglas Rodger for extending the use of her home for the evening.

At the next meeting, to be held early in June, there will be a demonstration on clipping and showing calves.

Reports show an active interest in all departments

The 45th annual convention of the Argenteuil Women's Institutes was held in Lachute High School on Saturday, May 15. Mrs. Chas. Stephens, the County president, chaired the meetings.

The secretary, Mrs. R. Warwick, gave her report for the County. There are 10 branches, a loss of one over the last year, and the total membership is over 300. Total receipts were $2,964.76, and the total balance $1,254.47 in branch funds.

The County treasurer, Mrs. H. Morrison, reported a balance of $495.51 in the general funds and $296.73 in the Educational Loan fund. There are several students using this privilege at the present time.

Reports from the standing committees showed plenty of activity and interest in the various departments of the work — Agriculture, Citizenship, Education, Home Economics, Welfare and Health, and Publicity.

Mrs. Nelson Morrison, Fair Work convener, reported that space has been made available at Lachute Fair for the usual handicraft exhibition. The list of exhibits was drawn up several months ago, and it is hoped there will be a good number of articles on display.

Mrs. Geo. McGibbon reported on the project of the Senior Citizens' Home, and urged the women to keep on augmenting the funds. "In Memoriam" gifts are gratefully accepted, and to date many of these have been received.

Die-hard objections to traffic try-out

AN ATTITUDE present among a large segment of our population is their consistent opposition to anything which might bring civic improvement. This was much in evidence on Wednesday and Thursday of last week, when an experiment was underway to improve the traffic and parking tie-up on Lachute's Main Street.

The paint had not dried on the first two-dozen parking slots Wednesday afternoon, when the complaints and objections started — a number of these from persons who do not even own cars or drive on the main thoroughfare.

As has been pointed out in the past, Main Street is first and foremost a traffic-way, not a parking lot. The fact that we have such a wide Main Street is a great advantage to our merchants. However, if Main Street was no different from the vast majority of communities, we would not be so blessed, and storekeepers would have to supply parking facilities not only for their employees but for their customers too.

To criticize the Police and Council, and condemn the new plan before it has been given a fair trial, is immature and childish. The system has not definitely been approved; the lines are marked only with a temporary paint. But it may be noted, the system has worked exceptionally well in many respects.

Granted, there are advantages and disadvantages to both systems, but with co-operation of the general public, the new plan can benefit not only those who have no interest in stopping in Lachute, but also the merchants who do business on Main Street.

The plan must first be given a fair trial, however, and should be condemned only if found unsatisfactory, not just through prejudice to a change from old habits and customs.

The how and why of Community Concerts

CANVASSERS in this year's campaign for the Community Concerts Association — and there are one or more in every rural community, besides the many workers in Lachute and Brownsburg — are encountering an oft-repeated condescension, that the person approached will "buy a ticket at the door", or attend concerts if conditions permit when the occasion rolls around. . . But this just "isn't done"; and in support of the campaign and its workers it is timely, right here, to discuss the modus operandi and to explain why this haphazard and casual participation is not the way things operate in Community Concerts.

More than ever before, good music has become a factor in well-balanced community living. Concerts by famous artists add to the zest of social life of this fair town. . .

However, such concerts cannot become a practical institution in Lachute when promoted on the theatrical basis of random ticket-buying. Their success depends upon the support of people who join a movement for establishing a permanent concert series. The plan of the Community Concerts Association provides just such a movement. Its purpose is to present our community with musical programs of high calibre made possible without financial risk on the part of any person, group or organization. It is a practical, co-operative and economical plan.

The Community Concerts Association is organized on a membership basis. Each member pays the modest yearly dues, and membership entitles one to attend all concerts during each season. This membership is obtainable during the yearly campaign, in which every citizen is invited to join. At the end of the campaign the membership is closed, and no one may join for another year.

Every membership dollar submitted in dues is used for artists, special attractions and local expenses coincident to the presentation of the series.

Only members may attend the concerts; single admissions are not available under this plan. A concert presented on the basis of single admission ticket sales, always has and always will mean financial risk.

The aggregate dues collected during a campaign make possible a minimum of three major concerts per season.

The fact that the more members secured means the more concerts made possible, makes it a co-operative organization; each member is therefore anxious to increase the membership.

Artists are selected immediately after the campaign; the selection is made by officers whose choice is guided by the membership they represent and the budget available. It is interesting to note that a performance of Bizet's "Carmen" has been booked for 1965-66 series in Lachute. This is the Opera Comique (French) version, to be interpreted by the Canadian Opera Company with full decor and costumes, sometime next March.

The Community Concerts Association is a non-profit, self-dependent institution, operating on an economically sound basis. It is well worth supporting — now, before the campaign closes.

A note to Town Council

BROWNSBURG Council hit upon a valuable service to householders, in sending town trucks around one day this week to haul rubbish to the dump. The Council report by our Watchman correspondent stated: "Any residents who have rubbish to dispose of should place the material in containers on the edge of the street. This rubbish, however, is to be of a kind resulting from spring clean-up, and should not contain materials which will not burn.". . . We can safely surmise that the property-holders of Brownsburg appreciated and took advantage of this facility.

We recommend this extra bit of service to our administrators here in Lachute — if too late for this year (most residents have already spring-cleaned their surroundings), then at least to be remembered next spring. Here in town, one resident had brush from his garden which he could not safely burn. Some town employees passed his house (four of them) to remove a few road sweepings in a large truck; he asked if they could take his brushpile, but was informed this could not be done. Being polite, and well versed in red tape and technicalities, our friend did not insist.

Nevertheless, with the hazard of grass fires prevalent every spring, we recommend a pick-up of this kind at least once a year, in early May — as a good use of town men and trucks, and a great convenience to property owners with the spring urge.

Viewpoints and perspectives

"THE FIRST TASK of the people of Quebec is really to turn up their sleeves and start working to improve their conditions. I think they've done this and the improvements in the last five years have been enormous. By doing this, we are participating more fully in the life of Canada and are becoming an asset to the rest of the country."
— Que. Forestry Minister Maurice Sauvé

INDEPENDENCE BETTER. — For those who place commercialism above everything else, complete unity, socially and economically with our southern neighbors, certainly has its appeal. But old-fashioned or not, we like to maintain our nationalism, believing that, as Canadians, we can still wield an influence in this muddled world.

May He Get Seasick!

— Among adults, though few would admit it, there is a great deal of jealousy of today's teenagers.

This is revealed by the adults' oft-expressed wish that kids in their teens could act like them; by their reaction to any hint of change in the rules for their children, and especially by their endless prating about how soft a time the youngsters have now, and how hard it was in their day.

To hear most adults talk, you'd think they'd never had any fun at all, when they were kids, or ever done anything foolish. There's a steady stream of poppycock about how far they walked to school through the snow; how scanty were their wardrobes; how early they had to be in at night; how hard their parents worked them; how good their marks were in school.

There's a modicum of truth in all of this, of course, because life was a lot more simple and frugal a quarter-century ago. But with the passing of time the morsel of truth becomes a bit of malarkey. Personally, I think we had a lot less to cope with, socially and psychologically, if not physically, than today's teenagers.

But this attitude received a jolt this week, when my son announced that he had nailed down a summer job. It was difficult to keep my upper lip both stiff and buttoned, when I compared his first real job with mine.

There are parallels. Both of us got the job at age 17, and both jobs were on the upper Great Lakes boats. There the parallel ends.

For instance. I hitch-hiked 480 miles, with $2.50 cash, to meet my boat. He will be driven three miles, by his father, to catch his.

And the hours aren't quite the same. I worked the graveyard shift, midnight to noon, seven days a week. He'll work a couple of hours morning and afternoon, about three hours in the evening, and have a day and a half off each week.

That's all right. I don't bear a grudge. Nobody should have to work like a dog. But there's a slight difference in the pay. I pulled down $30 a month, even on the 31-day months. A dollar a day and keep. My son will be knocking off just over nine times as much.

However, that's OK. Wages have gone up a lot. Why should he work for peanuts? I must admit, though, that I was a little disturbed by the difference in our duties.

I scrubbed floors, cleaned out lavatories, polished brass and sorted dirty linen. In spare moments I helped sling out the gangplank, or made the officers' beds. My kid will organize shuffleboard games, play the piano for singsongs and run a movie projector. In spare moments, he will chat to nice old ladies.

That's fine. No hard feelings. We can't all be aristocrats in our first job. But what about this? I wore a scruffy old smock, covered with brass polish. He'll wear a snappy blue uniform, covered with brass buttons.

And what about this? My official title was Night Porter. His is Entertainment Steward. I ate with the deckhands and firemen. He'll eat in the diningroom. I slept with seven other scullions is a stall large enough for one Shetland pony. He'll share a cabin with one other softy of the Sixties.

I was forbidden, on pain of keelhauling and 16 years in the hulks, to have anything to do with the passengers, except mop up after them. The kid, in the captain's own words, "Will have the girls following you all over the boat."

Oh, well. No use being bitter. The good old days of the Depression, when you knew you were a slave, but were happy to be a working slave, are gone forever.

However, I can't help hoping the kid will get good and seasick all over that uniform, the first time he hits a roll in Lake Superior. At least, we'd have that much in common in our first summer jobs.

Safe As The Bank

Any hope the country had for major changes in the Canadian banking system was dashed this week after Finance Minister Walter Gordon presented Parliament with his amendments to the Bank Act.

The finance minister's proposals, disappointing to bankers and borrowers alike, had all the ear-marks of political safety rather than economic daring.

To many observers, the mild changes add up to further oiling of the political machinery in preparation for a federal election before the end of this year.

The proposals from the finance department are just important enough to get the government out from any charges of complete inaction in modernizing Canada's banking system.

They're also tame enough to forestall the kind of bitter opposition which would have inevitably arisen in any sweeping overhaul of banking in Canada.

Coming in the wake of the 1965 budget, the Bank Act changes point up anew the finance minister's increasing wariness toward radical economic proposals.

To be sure, there is still a strong dose of economic nationalism in Mr. Gordon's outlook. But it's a pale shadow of the radical thinking expressed during his first year in power — and which got him in so much hot water with the international investors who control large chunks of Canada's economy.

The mildness of the Bank Act changes was surprising also because they ignored most of the recommendations of the Porter Royal Commission on Banking and Finance. The Bank Act is to be rewritten every 10 years, and the current review had been put off for a year in order to give the finance department time to digest the Porter Commission's findings.

The changes will contribute slightly — but only slightly — toward a further easing of the money supply in Canada.

Banks are to be allowed into the conventional mortgage loan field at going interest rates of around seven to seven and one-half per cent. — but other bank loans will be restricted to six per cent. interest rates.

The banking community reacted strongly to the continued limitation of six per cent. interest on small loans.

Continued enforcement of the six per cent. rate, according to such spokesmen as Neil J. McKinnon of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, "Will deprive many Canadians of risk loans at much cheaper rates than they now have to pay to finance companies."

Not everyone will agree with Mr. McKinnon, however. Many small bank loans actually run to 10 and 11 per cent. interest because banks calculate interest on the full principal, although the borrower has the full amount only until he has made his first payment.

Rather than classifying everything but gilt-edged security loans as "high risk" loans, it might be more accurate to term most loans made by Canadian banks today as "no-risk" loans.

There is a wide body of opinion in Canada today which holds that 10-11 per cent. interest is a quite sufficient return to enable the country's banks to meet the borrowing needs of consumers, small businessmen and farmers.

The desire of several organizations to establish new national banks might be further evidence of this fact.

Mr. Gordon's proposal to limit foreign ownership in any one bank to 25 per cent., and individual ownership to 10 per cent, make sense. So does his move to make the federal government fully responsibe for the policies of the Bank of Canada, thus ensuring there'll be no repetition of the James Coyne affair which rocked Canada under the Diefenbaker government.

But the restriction against government ownership of bank shares — thus effectively forestalling Premier Bennett's plans for a Bank of British Columbia — will not be universally applauded.

By WALKER RILEY, Macdonald College

This past week I had another memorable experience. I crossed the Ottawa River by the Oka ferry for the first time. Actually it was a very enjoyable way to travel; the day was warm and the water pleasantly choppy. The little launch towed the raft with our car balanced in the middle along at a surprising clip. But I couldn't help wondering where we might end up if that two hundred feet of string-sized tow rope ever parted.

Which has nothing to do with agriculture, except that it completed a good day visiting farms in the Lachute area. I found seeding being pushed right along, but there were still no cows out to pasture, although last week's thunder storms had helped to bring the grass along.

Rogers Bradford at Cushing has had another satisfactory season with his sheep. All the lambs, except four, were sold early in the year on a keen market. But at these light weights he probably cannot claim the new provincial subsidy of $3.00 for choice market lambs. And this must be something of a record — one of his Suffolk ewes produced three sets of twins in fourteen months. Any challengers?

Stuart Armstrong, just west of Lachute, is planting nineteen acres of table turnips this spring. He must be satisfied with his last year's trial. It seems that most of the waxed turnips in the stores come in from Ontario. But if I read the statistics right, there should be surplus of table turnips in Quebec. They show 45 million pounds grown on 2,000 acres. And 6 million people eating, the national average of 5.3 pounds accounts for only two-thirds of that. Presumably, there are cows that eat well, too.

Another call was to see the $600 cow Jean St. Pierre brought home from last week's Holstein dispersal. Jean is on the Larose farm at Grenville which I am told won the agricultural merit award a few years back. He bought the place only two years ago, but he is coming ahead fast. And he doesn't mind breaking with tradition either; his grain corn was planted in the first week of May before he touched the oats. He says he saw corn frozen to the ground last year, and it recovered. His son, André, is the first president of the Federation of Young Farmers' Clubs in the Lachute zone.

The placement of fertilizer is as important as the kind and amount you use. And a key fact is that roots grow outward and downward to find it. So, for corn, a band two inches to the side and two inches below the seed has proven most efficient.

But there can be two drawbacks with banding. First, the large amounts of fertilizer even that close to the seed may hurt germination. And second, fertilizer hoppers on corn planters do not hold very much. So a growing practice is to broadcast most of the fertilizer and plough down, ahead of time, saving 100 lbs. or 200 lbs. per acre of mixed fertilizer to go on when planting.

For cereals, it is a different matter. Most response comes from placing the fertilizer right with the grain. These seeds are not so sensitive to burn from the smaller amounts generally used.

Corn is a very heavy user of nitrogen. A 20-ton silage crop will have used 150 lbs. of the element. That's the amount found in 1,500 lbs. of 10-10-10 fertilizer. Unlike clover, corn can't take it out of the air, so it must get it from decaying plant material or from fertilizer. A good clover or alfalfa sod turned down should supply 100 lbs. Or 10 tons manure per acre will provide 50 lbs. to that crop. Almost all the rest must come out of the bag.

Atrazine is still at the top of the list of chemicals for weed control in corn. Standard rates are 1½ to 2 lbs. active ingredient in 20 to 30 gallons of water per acre. Atrazine comes in several strengths — 50W, 65W, 80W. The figure 65W, for example, means that there is 65 lbs. active ingredient in 100 lbs. of wettable material. Otherwise, there is no reason to choose between them.

If Atrazine is put on carefully not exceeding these rates, there is little need to worry about residue damage to next year's crops. I have seen several cases of damage to oats and new seedings, but all could be traced to carelessness, overlapping runs, not shutting off while turning, or poor agitation in the tank, or worn nozzles.

* * *

Depending on custom work has its disadvantages. I thought everything was set to have my Birdsfoot Trefoil sprayed with Dalapon to suppress the grass. But there was a letter in last night's mail: my neighbor is too busy with his own seeding and getting the manure out. Besides, he is on jury duty.

Harrington

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Seale, of Morin Heights, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. Bennett.

Week-end visitors with Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Bennett were Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm MacLeod, of Saskatoon, Sask., and Mrs. John McMahon, of Lachute.

Recent visitors at Mrs. Victor McVicar's were LAC A. D. McVicar and son, Larry, of Trenton, Ont., Mr. Dougal Trineer and Mrs. Dora MacLeod, of Calumet, and Mr. Gordon McVicar, of Grenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Meyer and family, of Lachute, visited relatives here on Sunday.

Cornwall youth related here killed in crash,

A number of relatives here attended the funeral of young Milton Graham, last Wednesday at Cornwall, Ontario. Milton, 17 years of age, was the son of a former Lachute couple, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Graham (the former Olive Elkington).

Milton Graham, and two other youths, 16 and 19, were killed instantly Sunday, May 9, at 5 p.m. when their car collided head-on with a huge milk trailer truck on Highway 2 at the western limits of Cornwall. Both vehicles were entirely demolished.

A MOVIE MAKES A UNIQUE GIFT

A professional photographer will probably be on hand for formal portraits. But not even a professional can be in two places at once — he just can't capture every happy, informal moment... That's where you, and your movie camera, enter the scene.

Whether the wedding is in traditional June — or in July or January — the crucial point for the amateur photographer is planning. To film a complete wedding story, it's a good idea to prepare a "shooting script" in advance so you won't overlook any highlights.

Of course, you can't anticipate all the best picture opportunities beforehand. Coverage must be tailored to the type of wedding. However, you'll probably want to start with the wedding preparations and follow through with the bride and groom departing from the reception amid showers of confetti and rice.

For example, your opening shots could be at the bride's home, picturing the bride adjusting her veil, and chatting with her family. Then, at the church, you'll follow through with shots of the exterior of the building, the groom and best man in the vestry, and the arrival of the bride and her father. After the ceremony itself, there's the departure on the church steps, the reception, the departure on the honeymoon. To the alert photographer, each highlight offers opportunities for several shots.

You'll want a light bar for interior shots. As for the actual wedding ceremony, it's generally best to take close-ups at rehearsal the night before, and then edit these shots into the correct sequence.

Natural light inside the church is usually dim, and artificial light for photos is generally discouraged during an actual ceremony. However, once the couple start down the aisle to leave the church it's alright to use a light bar or flash.

To add interest, some of your movie shots should be in close-up, others in medium shot and long shot. To establish the movie location, long shots usually require 10 or 12 seconds. Medium shots of five or six seconds are used to focus attention on the subjects of your movie, in this case, the bride and groom. And don't forget to inject plenty of close-ups (three or four seconds long); they seem to make your movie really "live".

Some final tips: Check your camera and equipment before the big event. Keep plenty of film available. Arrive in good time so you can choose the best spots for pictures. Then aim, hold your camera steady, and shoot away.

Gardening and Your Child

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

The colorful seed catalogues remind every member in the family that plans should now be under way for the garden. Was there ever a more hopeful book than this gay annual publication of the seed house? Surely gardening is an occupation for optimists, for those who are enthusiasts for what Francis Bacon called, "The purest of human pleasures!"

There is no more important discovery that a young gardener can make under the guidance of his parents than the necessity of careful planning.

It is essential that a child should know the exact size of his garden plot. This will be related to the total garden area, but it is well to start the young gardener on not too large a piece of ground. Better a small garden well kept, than a big one which is neglected.

Discuss with your child the necessary steps needed to prepare the soil. Adults will have to take the major responsibility for digging, but a child can help clean off small stones, weeds or any rubbish and assist in raking and in breaking up lumps. Commercial fertilizer may be needed and should be added according to directions on the package.

One impetus to gardening in the spring is the blooming of bushes such as flowering almond, lilacs and forsythias. If he planted Dutch spring bulbs the previous autumn, he will be proud and happy to see his tulips, scilla and grape hyacinths nodding in the sunshine. The better the bulbs, the finer the display. In more protected locations daffodils and hyacinths with proper care will survive the winter.

Limit your child's selection of vegetables to three or four. Lettuce seed comes up quickly. Parsley is a poor choice because it takes so long to germinate. If a child is especially fond of carrots, or green peas or wax beans, why not have him plant some of these? Tomato plants, especially miniature varieties, can increase his interest in salads.

Each spring there is a wonderful display of boxes of pansy plants on the market and at various stores. A school age youngster can transplant these sturdy favorites into his own garden without too much supervision and soon he will see the buds opening.

Annual flower seeds are inexpensive, but here again, suggest your child choose not more than two or three varieties. Nasturtium seeds can be planted by a pre-schooler, after being soaked in water. These have a double harvest of gay blooms and also leaves which can be used in a salad. Zinnias and marigolds are easily grown and the Chinese Forget-Me-Nots make a pretty blue contrast. Shirley poppies are beautiful. The seed is so small it should be mixed with sand if a child is planting it. Sow the seed sparingly because it cannot be transplanted.

Planning a garden well is a good beginning — but it takes a lot of work before vegetables may be eaten or flowers may be picked. Parents can be happy in the knowledge that the small son or daughter is growing in body and character, as the plants grow in the sunshine and fresh air. Children are lithe and full of energy. They do not fit into this comment of Charles Dudley Warner, "What a man needs in gardening is a cast-iron back with a hinge in it."

To flatten bulges in linoleum

Linoleum occasionally loosens from the floor and develops bulges. The cause may be too thin a coat of cement or dampness passing through the floor from beneath.

If the loosening is caused by dampness in the floor, the cause of the dampness must be eliminated first. Otherwise the linoleum will continue to loosen and bulge.

To flatten a bulge, glue or cement must be worked beneath the linoleum and the bulge pressed down into close contact. Weights placed on top will hold the surface tightly together until the cement can harden.

If the bulge is along a seam, cement can be worked beneath by lifting the edge and pushing in the paste with a flat, thin spatula or similar blade. If the bulge is in the centre of a sheet, a slit must be made through which the cement can be introduced.

The cut is made straight across the bulge with a linoleum knife, a razor blade or other sharp knife. If possible, follow the outline of a pattern so that the cut will not show too much.

It is very important to wipe up immediately any cement that oozes up between the seams or cracks.

If allowed to set and harden, the cement will be virtually impossible to remove, especially from light colors, without marring the surface. As the weights are pressing down, inspect frequently for signs of any fresh material escaping from beneath the linoleum.

Food for a swingin' party

To make a party go with a swing, you need only three ingredients: lively people, good things to eat and sufficient to drink. Send out your invitations early, otherwise you will be disappointed to find that some of your favorite people are already booked up for the big night. Also, you may discover too late that twenty women have accepted — and ten men! When this happens, and it really does happen to the best hostesses, emergency measures are needed and if you have left it until the very last minute you really are in trouble.

Let's presume that you have balanced your numbers and all your most interesting friends have come to the party. As a good hostess you will be constantly moving among the guests, introducing strangers, and seeing that no one is left out of the fun. For this reason, it is best to have all foods prepared well before hand. A hostess who spends her whole evening in the kitchen is not worthy of the name — no matter how delicious her canapés and petits fours!

Afterwards, your guests will want something to counteract this savory snack, so why not make a Tahitian Coffee Cake. As delicious as it sounds, Tahitian Coffee Cake is a light, tender sponge, generously topped with a mixture of tempting tropical fruits — crushed pineapple, coconut, bananas and cinnamon. Be sure to make several because Tahitian Coffee Cake is destined to be a big hit at any party.

Tahitian Coffee Cake

(Yield — 8 to 10 servings)

1 Cup crushed pineapple (drained), ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar, ¼ cup butter or margarine, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon light corn syrup, ½ cup shredded coconut, 2½ cups banana slices, 1¼ cups once-sifted all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup margarine or butter, ½ cup granulated sugar, 2 eggs, ½ cup pineapple juice, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Preheat oven to 350 deg. F. (moderate). Combine crushed pineapple, brown sugar, ¼ cup butter or margarine, cinnamon and light corn syrup. Cook over medium heat until mixture starts to boil. Spread in a 9-inch square ungreased pan. Sprinkle with shredded coconut and top with banana slices. Set aside.

Bake for 40-45 minutes. Let cool for 5 minutes on wire rack then invert on plate.

Hanging baskets

Easy-to-make, fashionable hanging baskets for your plants can create new eye-level beauty in both indoor and outdoor living. Anyone who enjoys living plants in the house or on the porch or patio will be particularly pleased with the interesting trailing kinds, so perfectly suited for display in hanging baskets. There are many varieties of attractive trailing ivy, philodendrons and vines to select, as well as flowering plants like fuchsia and lantana.

All these plants are readily available in their clay pots and a saucer, and will fit nicely into a homemade basket or rolled clover-cut aluminum.

Sees one-half Expo 67 'take' spent on food

Expo '67 will offer everything from multi-course gourmet meals to Belgian waffles to its 30,000,000 visitors in 1967.

"We want to provide the opportunity for adventures in eating," Nathan Steinberg, administrator of concession and licensing for Expo 67, said recently.

"While many people will want exactly the type of food they get at home, many more will want something different," he added.

So, Expo will offer food to satisfy the most curious and the most conservative diner.

There'll be a variety of coffees too, such as Viennese, Turkish, Colombian, Boston, Cappuccino Romano and Java mocha coffee. If you've never had a Java mocha cup of coffee, this will be a fine opportunity to try this brew of marshmallow, rum and cocoa.

There'll be informal snack bars, outdoor terrace restaurants, coffee shops, self-service cafeterias and buffets, formal and informal dining rooms, family style restaurants, lounges and bars.

Mr. Steinberg says that one half of the money spent on the Expo site will be for food.

Canadian dishes will be well featured and visitors to Canada will be introduced to La Tourtiere du Lac St. Jean, Le Ragout de Pattes de Cochon, Soupe aux Pois and Tarte au Sucre.

Mr. Steinberg's department has set high standards. A health code has been developed and it will be strictly enforced.

Expo has also set regulations concerning portion sizes, price maximums, quality of food and purchasing standards.

"Our ideas must be practical and workable in terms of operating costs, selling prices, fair profit to operators and adequate return to Expo to protect the Canadian taxpayer," Mr. Steinberg said.

Most visitors will be on a definite budget. For this reason, the largest percentage of concessions will serve meals costing less than one dollar.

Seafood recipe from Mont'l chef

Pierre Demers began his career in Montreal and was later associated with the Ritz Carlton in New York and the 21 Club. He is now executive chef of the Ritz Carlton in Montreal. In 1954 he was awarded the gold medal of the Canadian team at the World Culinary Exhibition at Berne. He was appointed Chef of the Year in 1961.

Mr. Demers says that most Canadians seem to lack the traditional love of eating fish that the Europeans have. "Canadian housewives fail to realize the possibilities of cooking with fish. They think of it only as an economical dish".

Fillets of Sole in White Wine Sauce

Put the ½ cup of wine into a hot frying pan, adding a little chopped carrot, tomato and parsley for color. Drop fish into frying pan, cover and leave to cook for a few minutes. Remove fish, and add the ½ cup of cream and a little butter to the wine sauce, and boil for a few minutes.

To serve, pour the sauce over the fish and serve with boiled potatoes.

Teatime Topics

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Many of them taste marvellous cooked and served simply, but they can also be the highlights of a meal seasoned and sauced and cooked together in savory messes.

Vegetables à la grecque

You may use this recipe for onions, leaks, mushrooms, cauliflower and many other vegetables.

Wash and peel the vegetable and cut into slices or small sections. Boil in salted water for 15 minutes, then drain. Combine the vegetable with 6 tablespoons of dry white wine, ¾ cup of bouillon, 1 teaspoon of peppercorns, 2 bay leaves, 4 tablespoons of olive oil and a pinch of salt. Simmer over low heat for 45 minutes, cool and serve cold with a sprinkling of paprika.

For asparagus polonaise, wash and trim 3 pounds of fresh asparagus and place upright in a saucepan of boiling, salted water. Try using a coffee percolator as your asparagus cooker. After 10 minutes, drain the water and arrange the asparagus on a heated platter. Divide the yolks and whites of two hard-boiled eggs and chop the yolks. Mix the chopped yolks with 2 teaspoons of chopped parsley. Heat ½ pound of unsalted butter and stir in ¼ cup of dry breadcrumbs. . . Now cover the asparagus tips with the egg-yolk-parsley mixture, the buttered breadcrumbs, and serve immediately.

You can make an unusual dish with cucumbers and mustard. Peel four cucumbers and cut into small balls or sections, avoiding the seeded portion. Put the sections into boiling salted water and cook for 5 minutes. Drain and put them in a saucepan with 6 tablespoons of oil, 4 teaspoons of spiced French mustard, the juice of one lemon, salt and pepper. Simmer gently for about 15 minutes. Serve chilled, sprinkled with chopped, mixed herbs.

Peas Printanière

To add a new taste to peas, cream 10 tablespoons of unsalted butter. Finely chop two fresh mint leaves and work them into the butter. Form the mixture into balls and allow to harden in refrigerator.

Shell 4 pounds of peas and cook in boiling salted water for 20 minutes. Add 1 teaspoon of baking powder and 8 fresh mint leaves. Serve the drained peas with the minted butter balls.

If your family are onion eaters, try this one on them. Remove the top quarter of each of 8 peeled onions and bring the remainder to a boil in salted water and cook for 10 minutes. Drain well.

Chop the raw onion caps until they are almost minced. Trim and wash ½ pound of mushrooms and chop into small pieces. Sauté the chopped onions and mushrooms in 3 tablespoons of butter until the onions are tender. Season with salt and pepper and add two tablespoons of chopped parsley.

Hollow the boiled onions, leaving a ¼-inch shell. Fill with the mushroom-onion stuffing and cook in a buttered baking dish in ¾ cup of chicken bouillon for 25 minutes at 425 degrees.

Lachute students had projects in Science Expo

— By Ann FitzGerald —

A mile or two west of Lachute, not far from where the Hull-Lachute Route 8 contorts sharply across its companion travel route — the CPR tracks — stands an age-refined brick farmhouse, flanked on its west side by several grey barns boasting a most unbarnlike frontispiece of hot dog and soft drink signs.

This red brick house has watched the passage of a century or so of time, along with the passage of many thousands of men, women and children, horses and livestock, kitten and puppies, not far from her windows. Way back in 1882 this house watched with solemnity as a CPR train first chugged past, and also watched the laying of the adjoining road to twist on its way beneath her gaze. The little house has watched fun and folly at this twisting in the road.

In 1922 Douglas G. Simon purchased the house from Jason Stewart, and thereafter this jog in the road came to be known as Simon's Crossing.

More time passed. Then one day, 15 years ago, happenings at this junction took another trun, when Mr. Simon held the first of his now famous weekly community auctions.

According to Doug Simon, who manages the clerking operations, this auction, modelled on similar ones in Lancaster and Alexandria, Ontario, was the first of its kind in Quebec, but now has counterparts in Ste. Hyacinthe, Drummondville and St. Lin.

Not just for the community, this auction . . . for now consigners come from as far west as Calgary — east from Halifax and even, at times, from Texas and Indiana in the United States, said Mr. Simon.

Originally auction day was Saturday. Then in 1955, to avoid a confliction with the Lachute Spring Fair, auction day was shifted to Tuesday — and met with such overwhelming success — "Business doubled immediately", said Mr. Simon — that Tuesday became the regular day. The reason for the popularity of this week day, said the proprietor, is that purchasers could pick up their livestock the following day rather than waiting over Sunday.

About four summers ago Mr. Simon added another innovation to auction day — an open sales market of goods ranging from fruits and vegetables to young kittens and puppies, to furniture and other miscellaneous articles. After the standard two-dollar concession payment, each seller simply lines up his truck of wares alongside 60 or so others, and sells from the rear. His profits, usually good, are his own. Mr. Simon said that one Montreal man makes his sole revenue from the 60-80 dollars he makes weekly at Simon's Market Day — or Lachute Commission Sales, as it is more prosaically termed.

But again, time has taken a turn — for better or for worse — and these bustling Tuesday market scenes, with the sounds of horses snorting, the auctioneer's voice praising and appraising the cattle, the squeals of delighted children with a new pet, the general shuffle and the interchanged comments of interested vendors and buyers — will soon end. . .

Now, there will be only three more of these sales for Mr. Simon's clerking abilities. Then the area will assume a new look.

After June 19, the only marketing done will be of a different sort. The Quebec Department of Roads, expropriating a vital five acres along the highway, will be in the market only for demolition and construction crews.

The reason? Progress. . . The Simon's Crossing — scene of too many motorists' mishaps over the Nominations for Prot. school board

Nominations will be held on Monday, June 7, for two vacancies occurring on the Lachute Protestant School Commission. In the case of a contest, the election will be held the following Monday, June 14. (Places of voting, in this event, are advertised by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Mabel Prophet, on page 8.)

Expiring terms are those of Commissioner R. O. (Dick) MacLean, Lachute, who has served for two consecutive three-year terms, and Albert McDonald, Lakefield, who is completing his first term on the board.

Holiday mishaps

The local detachment of Provincial Police reported a total of 15 accidents over the long week-end, in which 18 persons required hospital treatment; there were no fatalities. The most serious mishap occurred on Route 8, west of St. Philippe, on Saturday evening around 11 o'clock. In this accident five persons were taken to hospital by ambulance, one Montrealer being reported in serious condition.

Survey shows Main shopping section hit

A total of 35 merchants on Lachute's Main Street were questioned on the most controversial subject in Lachute at the present time, that of traffic circulation and parking on Main Street. Of those questioned, only two store managers were in favor of the new system — and in these two cases, namely, the Dominion Store and R. Farmer Store, parking facilities had been increased.

Comments from other merchants ranged from a few reserved opinions to outright opposition to the new system in a great majority of cases.

Merchants were unanimous in the fact that business has decreased during the past two week-ends, something specially unusual for a long holiday week-end. The vast majority agreed that the system was well worth the trial; as many pointed out, the old parking system was most certainly far from ideal.

Several merchants — notably Messrs. Donat Saulnier, Edgar Laurin, "Pep" Pariseau, Walter Gordon, Don McFaul and Gerald Walker — mentioned the possibility of the municipality providing additional public parking, off but close to the Main Street or the "Main Shopping Centre" so as to compensate for decreased parking space on the street.

A suggestion from storekeeper Dave Schwartz, was that the old system be improved upon, with a greater angle to the centre parking slots, which would facilitate parking and still leave more room for the traffic lanes.

Merchants were 100 per cent in accord, that the only time traffic was tied up to any extent was on Friday evening, and then only for a little more than an hour. They were similarly in agreement that business was down, and that customers did not like the new system; and they felt the new plan was too complicated for the results attained. The majority also felt that, while traffic was speeded up considerably, this was not the most important objective, since a large number of summer residents now fail to shop on the Main Street due to the lack of parking facilities.

Several civic officials are reported to have stated that traffic was the prime concern, and that they were not interested in feelings of the merchants. If this is true, these and many other townsmen are liable to be working elsewhere in the future, for the life-blood of the community is Main Street. The new system has been given a fair trial and has, we feel, many points in its favor. However, it is evident that the vast majority of local residents are not in favor of this change — just as it is obvious that business has dropped as a result.

It has been a controversial experiment, and costly in terms of business. But had it worked out to everyone's benefit, it would have proved a distinct asset to the community. This does not appear to have been the case, however.

Two old landmarks are presently under demolition — the Barron home, a once stately residence opposite the Auditorium, and the house adjacent to Muir's Service Station, a tall wood structure that was originally the Meikle home. The tearing down of this latter building has uncovered wide boards hand-sawn before the use of the circular saw, 3x3 studdings, and other evidences of early construction, for this was believed to be the first frame house built in Lachute.

Notable occasion at club meeting —

S. C. Judge and charter Lions paid tribute by fellow clubmen

It was old-timers' night at the Lions Club last week, when a good turnout of members assembled to honor their charter and veteran Lions. Although only two of the four surviving original members were able to attend, these two — Major G. G. Mitchell and Phil Roy — were seated at the head-table and received fitting tribute. The two other charter members, unavoidably absent, were the Hon. W. M. Cottingham and Clément Tremblay, O.B.E., who both sent their regrets and good wishes. The head-table guests and officers were introduced by Leopold Carrière, a past-president of the club.

On this occasion, another veteran Lion to be honored was Justice Fernand Legault, of the Superior Court, whose duties elsewhere now prevent his regular attendance at the meetings. A life membership and an embossed plaque for meritorious service were presented on behalf of the club by Phil Roy, who had sponsored Lion Legault's membership in this club back in 1939. Lion Roy made deserving mention of Judge Legault's record as a clubman, past-president, mayor of this town, and long-time chairman of the Catholic School Commission.

Justice Legault, in his reply to this tribute, recalled earlier days and difficulties — when the Lions Club moved from pillar to post for a suitable meeting place, and how the members, at one period, had to appoint a supper committee to do their own catering.

President Mozart Carrière chaired this enthusiastic meeting, at La Lorraine Motel, and presented other awards — 30-year "Old Monarch" certificates for the longest continued membership to Lions G. G. Mitchell and Phil Roy, (and to Lions W. M. Cottingham and Clément Tremblay in absentia), and to several other loyal, long-standing members; also 100% attendance badges for the past year.

McGill degrees in Science and Dentistry

Two graduates in the Science faculty of McGill University are listed from this community, namely, Miss K. Brenda MacGibbon, of Brownsburg, and Rodger D. Titman, of Lachute.

Miss MacGibbon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken W. MacGibbon, distinguished herself as a University Scholar and took first class honors in Mathematics. She is a Brownsburg High School graduate.

Rodger Titman graduated from the Lachute High School before entering McGill, where he majored in Zoology.

An earlier L.H.S. graduate, Jack Steeves, has qualified for the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. The elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard M. Steeves, he secured his Bachelor of Science degree, was in the employ of Canadian Arsenals at Valleyfield for some years, then entered for the Dentistry course at McGill. He and his wife have resided in Montreal of recent years.

M. Sandra Silverson, of Brownsburg, who receives her degree in Agriculture on Friday at McGill Convocation. Miss Silverson graduates with second class honors, winning the Robert Reynauld Second Prize (Agronomy) and the Cutler Shield.

Wayne Charles Gagné, also of Brownsburg, graduates with the B.Sc. (Ag.) from Macdonald, majoring in Entomology, with second class honors and the Lochhead Memorial Prize. . . Friends extend congratulations to these successful students.

Earns degree in Journalism

Miss Ann M. FitzGerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. FitzGerald, of Lachute, who received her Bachelor of Journalism degree (with distinction) at Carleton University, Ottawa, convocation last Friday.

Miss FitzGerald obtained a B.Sc. from Bishop's University in 1964, and is a graduate of Lachute High School.

Pleaded guilty to fraudulent diversion of funds

Jean-Claude Boivin, former Family Welfare officer here in the employ of the Quebec Government, pleaded guilty to a charge of fraud in the amount of $10,300.

Appearing before Justice Omer Côté last week at St. Jerome, the accused entered a plea of guilty and will receive sentence on June 11. Meanwhile he is held in jail, without bail.

Additions to staff of Prov'l Police

Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, officer in charge of the Provincial Police unit here, reported on Tuesday the appointment of Cpl. André Cartier, as assistant officer of the detachment.

A seven-year veteran of the RCMP, Cpl. Cartier has spent the majority of his police career in New Brunswick, and comes to Lachute with a varied experience.

Another addition to the force is Cst. Pierre Lanoue, of St. Michel des Saints, who as a traffic patrolman brings the staff to 14 officers.

Circus-bound

Pupils from the local School for Retarded Children were guests of the District Shrine Club on Tuesday afternoon, when a trip to the Shriners' Circus in Montreal was organized.

This year's circus is the 26th such annual event sponsored by Karnak Temple at the Montreal Forum, in aid of the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, and continues until Saturday of this week, featuring the following circus acts: Robert Baudy and his Tigers; Princess Tajana and Aerial Ballet; The Great Wallendas; Las Verdu Machachas; The Five Sorelettis; Charlotte Walch's Leopards; The Five Jays; Shrine Circus Elephants; Hanneford Family Equestrians; The Flying Zacchinis; The Flying Armors; The Five Medinis; Rix's Russian Bears; Hugo Zacchini; and the Shrine Circus Clowns. . .

By BOB ATCHISON

With the coming of the rains I would imagine a lot of weary firefighters breathed a sign of relief. The number of small bush fires that were burning was considerable, and some fears were held that unless the rain showed up things would get very much worse. The Canadian International Paper Company have once more opened their bush lands to fishermen, and no doubt many people will avail themselves of this opportunity. From all the reports of last year many good catches were taken, and I've often wondered how this would affect these waters. Fishing with rod and line will not do much to deplete our lakes unless they are seriously over-fished.

• • •

The Fishing Association had their first derby and some very good catches were reported — including suckers; this is really good — the more of these caught the better it will be for the trout. Suckers in particular, being bottom feeders, play havoc with a good meal of trout spawn . . . so it can be said this fishing contest was a great success. Certainly, some good trout were also caught, not too many though, and even this is good. It's funny, but prior to this invasion fish were being taken at the lake (Silver); but somehow the fish got word a bunch of hungry fishermen were coming so they'd better lie low. It sure seems this way too. You know, with all the fine equipment on hand to tell just when the fish will or will not bite, they still haven't got it down pat — and no one ever will, until they start acting and thinking like a fish; this I would like to see, too!

• • •

As we all know, moose have been seen intermittently in the area. Well, this past week at least eight of them have been spotted. These have all been different animals as the reports have come from all over the County. One report I got a real kick out of, was from an old gentleman who had never seen these wonderful animals close up, and now had the thrill of watching two of them right in his yard. In another case, two of them were right alongside a road, not too far from town, and they even stayed right there when the car was stopped, so the occupants could get a closer look. I will not mention just where all these moose were seen, some trigger-happy joker would take advantage. . . We in this area have been very fortunate in moose for the past few years. They have slowly increased, and it may not be too far in the future, before we can see them all over the place. And to me, it's much better to see them in their natural habitat than hung on a wall.

• • •

A number of fly fishermen have been inquiring about the Torpedo Head fly line. So much has been written about this and its wonderful casting ability, plus all the other hokum, it seemingly is an all-purpose line. To begin with the Torpedo Head is just what the name implies, a loaded head with the following part not loaded so that it will run out of your rod fast. These lines have a purpose, but certainly not for the average fisherman, they are very hard to cast unless you happen to have a heavy rod, able to handle this heavy head. Another point — and one that's very important — it is almost impossible to land this line with any degree of gentleness. In water that is riled up, they are good, for long casts; then, of course, there is the question of pick-up. I find them exceedingly hard to pick up any length of line, in just a rippled water, and in a very windy type, they are just about useless.

• • •

If any of you want a line like this that will cast out to places which you can't ordinarily get at, then I suggest you use a B-Level line; cut off about 30 feet of this, then splice in some heavy monofilament, about 20-lb. test. This type of rig will give you the ability to cast long distances and the added advantage of picking up your line in any type of water without too much drag. As we all know, there is very little drag on water from mono line, and certainly the 30 feet of fly line will not give you too much trouble. To cast this, you will find that the fly line itself will be enough; let the mono follow by itself. You cannot cast the light line after you have the heavy out. However, it does not take too much practice to handle this, and it's certainly a lot cheaper, and to me much more reliable.

• • •

Of course, most fly men try and get out too much line; this is a big mistake. A reasonably short line will allow you to cover all the water, with much better results to be expected. With any length of line out, it is very hard to hook a fish. As you spin men know, with the drag of your lines, plus the drag of the lure, long before you ever feel a strike the fish has gone. On top of this, long casts are always a hit-or-miss affair. You cannot control your lines that well, even if there is no wind. To be able to pinpoint your spots is what pays off. That sunken log, boulder or eddy is where they hang out; after all, fish do have to rest once in a while, and certainly they are not going to lie unprotected in any way, if they can help it.

• • •

One of the local enthusiasts came in to see me, with a fishing kit he had purchased through a mail order house. I am sure we have all seen this ad in the magazines and so forth; it gives you some 400 pieces of fishing equipment for a very small sum. This outfit even has a supposed trolling reel in it (that's the claim.) However, this could never by any stretch of imagination be classed as a trolling reel; it's one of those things you buy for a youngster going fishing for the first time. The rest of the equipment is just about the same. . . But you know, it is our fault alone, if we are taken in by all these glamorous claims; and it's too bad that people here to spend their money this way. I have always been under the impression that there was some sort of control over this type of advertising; but apparently not — it is evident even in our government-controlled radio and TV outlets. It sure is rough to save a buck these days; they have you coming and going.

• • •

Another flock of Snow Geese have been seen; these were flying very low over the St. Canut area. It is very strange how these birds would leave an accepted flyway and take a route not used by them before. It's true a few lone birds do this sometimes, but the flocks seen this spring leave no doubt they are big ones. Maybe conditions were not for the best on their old route, hence the change.

Lachute Motor Sport Club news

At the meeting held Thursday, May 21, in the Legion Hall, two excellent movies were shown. Thirty-one people were in attendance to view the 1963 Shell 4000 and the "Coupe des Alps".

Gymkhana

The Arc Supply Co. yard was the site of a gymkhana held on Saturday, May 22. For those who are not familiar with this word, in connection with the motoring sport, it means "a track meet on wheels". The object of a gymkhana is to test the performance of your car, the skill of the driver, and the endurance and nerves of the navigator.

Sixteen cars participated, and fun was had by all. It was encouraging to see so many spectators from the Lachute area.

In the foreign car class, Robert MacAdam, driver, and Rodger MacAdam, navigator, walked away with first prize driving a Volkswagen. Ronald Clark and Paddy Madon claimed first prize in the American car class driving a Ford. A "LeMans' Start" was staged to determine the overall winner of the two classes, and Robert MacAdam with Roger MacAdam were triumphant here.

Special mention and congratulations go to Cst. Robert Miron and Cst. Germain Girard, of the Lachute Police Department, who finished within the top ten.

Mosport Tour

The Lachute Motor Sport Club will tour to Mosport for the Players 200 on Saturday, June 5. This is an extremely interesting race which will be run off in two heats of 100 miles, and will attract some of the finest Grand Prix drivers in the world. John Surtees, the present world's champion, has entered a Lola 70 powered by a powerful Corvette engine; also Jim Hall in his Capperal, the car which won the Seabring 12-hour endurance race this year. It is certain that whoever attends will be treated to a racing spectacle.

This Club proposes to meet in front of the I.G.A. Store on Chatham Street, in the early hours of Saturday morning. We will leave at 2 o'clock prompt, and proceed by Highway 8 to Hawkesbury, then by 17 to Ottawa, and will follow Highway 7 from there on. We propose a 10-minute break at the Perth crossroads, and then a breakfast stop prior to the track, south of the Peterborough by-pass. We invite all members and their friends to be there.

For further information, interested persons are cordially invited to attend the next meeting, to be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, June 3, at the Go-Cart Track, on the St. Andrews Road.

Water Skiing with CLINT WARD

A New Dimension for Fun

For extra fun and challenge in water skiing why not buy a pair of trick skis?

Trick skis are wider and shorter than normal skis. They don't have a sharp bend at the tip but have a shallow bend running the entire length of the ski. The bottom of the ski is smooth and there is no fin. Two shapes of trick skis are popular today, the banana shape and the square end shape. Of the two the square end may be preferable because it allows for a slower trick speed or the use of a shorter ski than would be the case if using the banana style.

By the rules of water skiing the minimum length of a trick ski for all classes except juniors is 48 inches. The minimum length for juniors is 36 inches. The maximum width is set at 8 inches.

A standard tow-line can be used but many trick skiers like to shorten the line by as much as forty feet. This puts the skier 35 feet from the boat at a point where the wake is sharp, high and narrow — all three points having a bearing on advanced trick skiing. After learning the elementary tricks a special tow-handle will be required. This handle will have a bridle made from canvas or similar material that holds the foot for the high value toe-hold tricks.

Many tricks can be performed on trick skis, the advanced ones being gymnastic in nature.

The tricks are grouped as (1) water turns — 180 degree and 360 degree turns without leaving the surface of the water. (2) Wake turns — turns using the wake as a lifting force. These turns are accomplished in the air. (3) Toe-hold turns — turns done with one foot in the bridle. These turns can be made as water turns and as wake turns. (4) Line turns. This group of tricks, sometimes called stepover turns, are done by stepping over the tow-line (actually the stepping is done over the arm holding the tow-line) so that the handle ends up between the legs. These tricks can also be done as surface or wake turns. (5) Miscellaneous tricks — the most common of which are the sideslides where the skis are turned through 90 degrees and slide sideways at right angles to the wake.

All of these tricks are given point values which relate to the difficulty of the trick. In a tournament, the trick skier is given two 20 second passes in which to amass as many points as possible. The record for trick runs now exceeds 4,000 points and it is not uncommon to see trick skiers doing in excess of 15 tricks per run.

That kind of performance requires a high degree of balance and skill, hence my alusion to gymnastics. Many years of preparation and practice go into the high point trick runs and that is why trick skiing holds such a tremendous challenge — even for the week-end skier. It is virtually impossible to completely master.

Of the three events, trick skiing provides the best exercise as the emphasis is on strength and motion rather than just "bull strength" as in slalom and jumping. However, we're getting into the fine points when we start discussing the exercise merits of the three events.

Trick skiing does have one unique advantage over the other two events. It requires less of a tow-boat. For slalom and jumping very powerful tow-rigs are required. This usually means a high powered inboard or a twin engine outboard set-up. Tricks, however can be performed behind any ski boat. Then, there is no requirement for additional equipment such as the slalom course and the jumping ramp.

So, for a new dimension in your water skiing, buy a pair of trick skis but be prepared for the challenge.

At the annual Canadian Ski Patrol banquet held in Montreal at the Ramada Inn, Don Barbour, patrol leader at Ayers Ski Center, was presented with the coveted Dow Brewery trophy for the outstanding patrol leader in the Laurentians. This award is given annually to the patrol leader who shows marked ability in handling people, organizing and running all activities of the patrol under his jurisdiction.

Speaking of Don, Mark Labow, president of Laurentian Zone, said, "He instructed his own patrol in their strict first-aid course, running his patrol smoothly all year. He co-operates with management, transports victims to hospital himself, and has shown marked ability, initiative and incentive beyond the call of normal duties."

Last year under Don's leadership, the Ayers Patrol captured the Ken Case trophy for the best ski patrol in the southern zone.

The Canadian Ski Patrol System is the largest volunteer organization in the world, without any paid personnel. It is a well known fact that the Ski Patrol promotes safe skiing and care of the injured throughout the winter months. . . The ski patrollers of Ayers Center are proud of their leader.

membership angle was the welcoming of two new Lion cubs, Gaston Laroche, new Molson's distributor here, and Gilles Leduc, local manager for Industrial Acceptance Corporation. These two newcomers, introduced by their sponsor, Jos. Santini, were impressively inducted by Horace Lamarche, past-District Deputy Governor.

In its business details the club discussed progress on the new Arena, and its financing; also the biggest fund-raising project of the year, the $1,000 drawing. Another matter of interest was the planning of Lions Night program at Lachute Spring Fair, at which Miss Canada 1965 will be a star attraction, with items of professional talent by artists "home based" in the Lachute community.

years — will be transformed into a modern railway overpass (viaduct) to eliminate the precarious crossing of the two transportation routes. To do this, the government has given notice of expropriation of five acres of Mr. Simon's 135-acre property in a strip along the tracks.

The red brick house and the barns will go. And with them, the market.

What price — Progress? In financial terms, the price set by the Quebec government and offered to Mr. Simon is 8 cents per square foot of land expropriated, or approximately $17,500. This amount, says Mr. Simon, is sufficient only to buy an equivalent area of land, not to build a similar house and barn as he owns at present.

With this loss of a selling spot, the marketers have a price to pay as well. Last October, following Mr. Simon's receiving a tentative notice of the expropriation, a petition of 100 names from surrounding farmers and sellers protested the elimination of the market site. Mr. Simon received the final notice last week, and as yet is indefinite on any future location for the market, as for his homestead.

Mrs. Simon, in the midst of spring housecleaning when the notice came, simply decided not to bother further with this chore. Both Mr. and Mrs. Simon expressed an understandable sadness at the prospect of leaving the house that has been 43 years their home.

But the proprietor recognized the need for some change in the hazardous Simon's Crossing. "It is this arbitrary expropriation agreement that dissatisfies me," he said.

Local entertainer 'bends a note' in Fla. nightspot

Pat Brown, night club columnist in the Fort Lauderdale News, has a highstepping salvo for Ronnie Prophet, songster and guitarist, who originated in these parts. Ronnie was last heard here in a Spring Fair entertainment number. He is now apparently performing in one of Florida's popular nightspots. Following is the commentary, in its own technical lingo:

From the standpoint of sheer talent guitarist Ronnie Prophet probably rings up the highest score, an amazing feat in itself since he's following the Punchinellos at the Joly Roger, and following that punchin' duo is flirting with sudden death.

He Bends a Note

Ronnie not only emphasizes the bass but plays the bass and melody simultaneously. He also bends a note and there's what I'd call an "overhand drive" fingering for tremolo.

The program is a versatile one — classic, country, pops and swing; some good vocalizing, and a book of impressions from Satchmo to Donald Duck. (Latter, by the way, is driving the flamingos up in the lobby right out of their feathered minds.)

Brownsburg High News

By Jim Noble

Recently, the Rotary Club of Ottawa sponsored the annual project, "An Adventure in Citizenship". The purpose of this project is to promote a better understanding of the meaning and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship.

Rotary Clubs across Canada participated in selecting 249 senior High School students, who met in Ottawa from May 10 to 14, to partake in the four-day "Adventure". I was very fortunate in being selected to represent the Brownsburg - Lachute Branch.

The agenda was a very varied and interesting one, ranging from a visit to Parliament, to dancing in the ball room of the Chateau Laurier. Tuesday and Wednesday mornings found us at Carleton University, where we were divided into groups and participated in group discussions on topics of current interest. It was extremely interesting to note the differences in educational systems, and the different opinions on controversial subjects such as separatism. The remainder of the period consisted of visits to places of historical and cultural interest, concerts, lectures, and films.

The "Adventure" was highlighted on Monday and Tuesday when we were addressed at lunch by P.M. Lester B. Pearson and the Leader of the Opposition, John Diefenbaker, and on Thursday morning when the Hon. Mr. John R. Nicholson, the Minister of Citizenship and Immigration, presented each of us with our Canadian citizenship papers, an honor not usually bestowed on natural-born Canadians.

It is unfortunate that every Canadian cannot participate in an "adventure" such as this one. The opportunity to mingle with one's fellow countrymen, and to enjoy fellowship with a Canadian who lives two thousand miles away, is an experience which makes one realize how really wonderful it is to be a Canadian.

I would like to express a word of thanks to the Rotary Club, who made my trip possible. The four days which I spent in the Capital were very enjoyable ones for me, and an experience which I shall never forget.

Week's Activities

By Sandra Hall

The staff of the B.H.S. newspaper has originated a new idea for this year's final edition of the Triumph. Two representatives from each of the grades eight to ten are in charge of creating a brief but impressionable picture of every high school student. Each class has chosen a distinct subject to work on, varying from favorite expressions, theme songs, pastimes, humorous anecdotes, to glances into the future. The grade eleven class of B.H.S. plans to combine all these ideas, in order to come up with a thorough impression of each student.

On Wednesday, May 26, the Girl Guide Company of Brownsburg will hold a "fudge sale" at B.H.S. The Guides are taking part in the "Division Good Turn" project, in which all money made by both the Guide and Brownie movements of this district during the month of May will be donated to "Care". B.H.S. hopes that students will realize the importance of such a campaign and feel an automatic urge for fudge on Wednesday.

Students at B.H.S. are no longer obliged to wear the regulation school uniforms. After the "Victoria Day" holiday, students may wear appropriate clothing of their choice — that means more ironing, Mothers.

The Spring Prom at B.H.S. was held on May 21. The band, The Sabronets, helped to make the evening an enjoyable one. The Students' Council found this an opportune time to present Andrew Izzard with a little remembrance of B.H.S. Andrew, a grade eleven student, had previously been president of the Students' Council. He has recently joined the R.C.A.F., and B.H.S. wishes him the best in his future career.

School Sports

By David McCaffrey

Last Tuesday afternoon, the Brownsburg senior boys' softball team travelled to Lachute for an exhibition game. Brownsburg got off to a fast start in the first inning, and stayed in front until the end. The game was actually no more than a practice for the two clubs, in preparation for the O.V.S.A.A. softball tournament, which was held in Ste. Agathe on Saturday and in which they both took part. At the tournament (a double-elimination series) Brownsburg High, coached by Mr. McCosh, first played Grenville. In the three innings which constituted a game in the tourney, Brownsburg managed to gain a 3-1 victory.

They met St. Eustache in the second round of the competition. Here, they encountered difficulty. St. Eustache managed to squeeze one run across the plate on a "bases-loaded" situation. The game ended 1-0 in our opponents' favor.

Next, B.H.S. met Lachute. They trailed by one run, a "homer" by Robin Hazel, until the last half of the third inning. With George Atwell on third base and Gary Taylor on second, Winston Dixon hit a ball into deep right field. Before the ball was retrieved, all three players had tallied, to win the contest for Brownsburg 3-1.

From here, Brownsburg High advanced to the finals against St. Eustache, the same team which had beaten them in the morning. This time, however, the tide was turned. The Lake of Two Mountains club could not seem to get organized. Steve Miller, the Brownsburg pitcher, struck out seven batters. Nearly all the other hits were stopped by the infield of Gary Taylor, Peter Ferland, Winston Dixon and Michel Lambert. When the catcher, Wayne Seary, threw to third base catching a runner off-guard in the last inning, the game ended 7-0 in Brownsburg's favor; therefore, they will retain possession of the cup again this year.

Our senior girls' team, which also took part in the tournament, trounced Grenville by a score of 11-3 in their first game. As in the boys' series, Lake of Two Mountains High took the second game, 5-3. Then Brownsburg managed to vanquish first Ste. Agathe (2-1), and then Lachute (5-0). These victories put them into the finals against Lake of Two Mountains.

Here, L.T.M.H.S. succeeded in starting a first inning rally of 4 runs. Brownsburg's infield, consisting of Sandra Gaves, Donna Kennedy, Susan Sugden and Allison Rose, and pitcher Rosemary Steere, held the St. Eustache team to only one run during the remaining innings. In the third inning, the Brownsburg club was sparked by Sandra Gave's home-run. It looked as though they were going to catch up, but the third out was made before the score was evened. The Lake of Two Mountains team held their 5-3 lead until the end of the game, to become the 1965 softball champions.

Recovered body of three-year-old lost through ice

The body of a three-year-old Hawkesbury boy, Richard Cyr, who drowned in the Ottawa River March 9 when he crashed through thin ice, was found May 14 near Chute à Blondeau. The discovery was made by a 75-year-old resident, Edmond Lalonde, who was going down to his boat on the river shore. He immediately notified the police, and relatives identified the body.

Another victim of the same tragedy, Michel Sylvain, aged 2, was recovered from the icy waters an hour or two after the mishap. The youngsters had ventured onto the ice riding their tricycles.

To wed in June

Miss Beverly Joan Sanford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Sanford, of Lachute, and Mr. Julian Fane De Salis, son of Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Sydney Fane De Salis, of Somerset, England, whose engagement is announced. The marriage has been arranged to take place on Saturday, June 26, in Knox Crescent and Kensington Presbyterian Church, Montreal.

Honor conferred on 52-yr. member of the L.O.B.A.

Mrs. Laura McVicar, of North Star Lodge 503, Harrington, was the honored guest at a meeting held Tuesday, May 18, in "No Surrender" Lodge 210, Grenville — the latter having been organized in 1915 under the leadership of Mrs. McVicar and Mrs. Abigail (Stewart) Anderson, former members of Alexandria L.O.B.A. 119, Avoca.

Being the only active charter member of Lodge 210, Mrs. Geo. Ball of Brownsburg, past-Grand Mistress of the Province of Quebec, presented Mrs. McVicar with a 50-year pin, congratulating her on her faithful services to the L.O.B.A. and also to the Juvenile Lodge, of which she was Provincial Grand Director for several years.

Mrs. McVicar is a daughter of the late Henry Trineer, Sr., who had received his L.O.L. 75-year jewel in 1953 (a year prior to his passing), and his wife the late Alena (MacTavish) Trineer, who was also a charter member of Lodge 210, and both honorary members.

A number of North Star members attended, including Mrs. Ivy Cruise, recently elected Grand Director of Juveniles of the Province of Quebec, also Mrs. Ethel Page, of Cassburn L.O.B.A. 563, and Mrs. Mildred Ball, of Laurentian L.O.B.A. 943, Lachute.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served and congratulations expressed by all present to the honored guest.

United Church Women from ten congratulations in the Ottawa Valley Region gathered on May 19 at the Morin Heights United Church, to participate in a successful Workshop led by members of the Montreal Presbyterial executive. Mrs. C. L. Duncan, Regional vice-president, welcomed the gathering and opened the morning session with a Call to Worship.

A reverent and thought-provoking devotional, which set the tone for the day's work, was conducted by Mrs. Ed MacDonald, of Arundel.

Mrs. Roy Williams, as president of Morin Heights U.C.W., extended a welcome on their behalf, expressing the hope that the day would be a blessing to all.

Greetings from Montreal Presbyterial executive were brought by Mrs. B. K. Wasson, president, who was accompanied by 14 members of her executive. Each one, in her five-minute presentation of "What we are doing in U.C.W." in the various departments, brought inspiration and guidance to all.

Interest in the literature display was sparked in a most refreshing way by a panel of executive members, led by Mrs. Paul Smith, vice-president in charge of Leadership Development. Very brief, but fascinating, reviews of the following books were given: (reviewer's name in brackets) "The Comfortable Pew" (Mrs. J. D. McOuat), "Listen to the World" (Mrs. R. F. Lawton), "God's Frozen People" (Mrs. R. D. Smith), "The Sea is Boiling Hot" (Mrs. E. C. Knowles), "The Coffee House" (Mrs. Geo. Johnston), "The Changing Church in Canada" (Mrs. A. H. McDougall).

Following luncheon, at which the Rev. Ronald McCullough extended greetings on behalf of his congregation at Morin Heights, an opportunity was given to browse around the literature table.

The afternoon session was opened by a worship service, ably conducted by the Brownsburg U.C.W. president, Mrs. R. D. Clarke, assisted by Mrs. J. Tomalty and Mrs. J. Leggitt, using the theme "Which Path is Yours?" Dedication of the offering was made by Mrs. W. Usher, of Cushing.

A questionnaire on the U.C.W. Purpose was distributed, and a short period allotted to work it out, after which the meeting broke up into smaller discussion groups under department leadership. In a short open session, Mrs. Wasson led discussion on several points brought out in these groups.

Mrs. Phil Bate, of Kilmar, brought in the Courtesy report, thanking all who had shared in making the day worthwhile. Mrs. Clarke, on behalf of Brownsburg U.C.W., issued an invitation to meet there in 1966, when it is planned to hold sessions in the afternoon and evening to accommodate many women not free during the day, who would be able to attend at least the evening session.

Mrs. Geo. Watchorn presided at the organ and Mrs. E. W. Kneeland acted as Hospitality convener.

Art pupils' annual exhibit at Centre d'Art

The annual exhibition of art pupils' work will open Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Centre d'Art, Main Street, and will be on display daily from 2 to 5 p.m. (also Wednesdays from 7 to 9) until June 13.

Presiding at the opening session will be Mlle Irène Senécal, from l'Ecole des Beaux Arts, who is director of courses affiliated with that institution. The occasion will be honored also with the presence of Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon, of Lachute, and the mayors of Ayersville, Brownsburg and St. Andrews — Messrs. Rodolphe Moreau, J. René Lafleur and H. Labreche, respectively — which is appropriate, since the Centre's art enthusiasts come from all these four communities.

The exhibition includes selected examples of work by three age groups, children, youths and adults, in various media of expression. The show will amply demonstrate the breadth of interest, and progress achieved, under competent instructors this past season at the Centre.

All are welcome. It is to be noted also that on Sunday the St. Andrews "Loisirs" will provide special transportation for children's groups wishing to attend in a body from that community.

APPRECIATION . . .

I sincerely thank the taxpayers of Ayersville Municipality who manifested their confidence by returning me to the Council seat.

As in the past years, I will continue to work in the best interests of our community, giving of my best, with honesty and conscientious devotion.

Young - Gunn

Joyce Elsie Gunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orval Gunn, became the bride of Donald Gordon Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Young, of St. John's, Newfoundland, at a double-ring ceremony on Saturday, April 17, in Ossington Avenue Baptist Church, Toronto.

The Rev. W. W. Jumper officiated. Wedding music was played by Mr. K. R. Cunningham, and the Rev. C. H. Walker played a violin solo, accompanied by Mr. Cunningham at the organ — "Shepherds on the Hill", from The Messiah — during the signing of the register. Baskets of white mums mixed with yellow pom poms and vases of Easter lilies were used to decorate the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a cocktail-length, pink organza over lace, with long sleeves ending in points over the hands, a bell-shaped skirt, trimmed with tiny roses, one of which held a chiffon train in place. A pink rose of peau-de-sole held her shoulder-length veil, and she carried a white bouquet of stephanotis, Sweetheart roses and one large gardenia.

Attending the bride were Mrs. Mark Wilson, as matron of honor, Miss Sandra McAndrew, as bridesmaid, Miss Ethel McLellan, flower girl, and Master Derek Gunn as ring-bearer. The attendants wore cocktail-length lace, sleeveless coats over crepe sheath dresses, one in blue and one in champagne, with matching accessories. Open roses were worn in their hair, and they carried pink bouquets of carnations, lily of the valley and Sweetheart roses. The flower girl wore street-length blue lace over shantung, with a spray of roses in her hair, and she carried a gathering basket of spring flowers.

The best man was Merlin McAndrew, and the usher was Albert Turney.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at "The Wedgewood", Toronto. Later the happy couple left for points in Quebec, the bride travelling in a yellow wool stroller suit with fox collar, matching hat and black accessories, and a wristlet of pansies, daisies and forget-me-nots. Mr. and Mrs. Young have since taken up residence in Toronto.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Green, of Hamilton, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Turney, of Dundas, Ont.; Mrs. John S. McRae, Mr. Winston McAndrew, Miss Sandra McAndrew, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin McAndrew, all of Brownsburg, Que.; Mrs. Walter V. Gunn, of St. Philippe, Que.; Miss Elaine McDonald, of Lakefield, Que.; Mr. and Mrs. Elden Gunn, of Chomedey, Que.; and Mr. and Mrs. Merlin McAndrew, of Brampton, Ont.

"THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR NATURAL TENDERNESS ...and That's What You Get at DOMINION

The meat that you buy at DOMINION is tender for two very good reasons. First, because Dominion's own skilled meat buyers tour the packinghouses every day, carefully selecting the prime young sides that Nature has blessed with an extra measure of quality.

But even the very best quality meat is not tender until it is properly hung. So Dominion waits patiently until time and Nature bring out the full rich, satisfying flavour and goodness.

The result is natural tenderness . . . tenderness that owes everything to Nature . . . and to Nature alone!

No wonder true meat-lovers say: "There is no substitute for the natural tenderness you get at DOMINION!"

Dominion's Guarantee of 100% SATISFACTION is Unconditional

All merchandise sold at Dominion is unconditionally guaranteed to give you 100% satisfaction. No product is excluded. There are no "ifs, ands or buts." You are the sole judge of whether or not you are satisfied. Your word is accepted. On meats, for example, Dominion guarantees not only tenderness . . . but also flavour . . . juiciness . . . downright eating enjoyment . . . everything that adds up to 100% satisfaction!

IT'S MAINLY BECAUSE OF THE MEAT!

Boundary dispute

WHILE THERE will be boundary disputes in the recommended redistribution of electoral areas — in Quebec there looms an argument of another nature but equally interesting. . .

Churchill Falls, everyone agrees, are in Newfoundland (though some still call them by their previous name, Hamilton Falls). And if the falls are harnessed and their power shipped overland, the lines will have to traverse Quebec. That too is a matter of general agreement.

But at what point, on its way from the falls to the customers to the south, would the power cross from Newfoundland's mainland territory of New Labrador into the Province of Quebec?

On this question Premiers Jean Lesage of Quebec and Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland disagree, and last week their disagreement seemed destined to mean a lot in the question of whether Churchill Falls will in fact be harnessed by the private firm (British Newfoundland Corporation — "Brinco") which wants to do the job.

Premier Smallwood regards the Quebec-Labrador frontier drawn in 1927 by the British Privy Council, then Canada's final court of appeal, as the only boundary between the two provinces. He repeated his position clearly in the recent reopening of the controversy.

Premier Lesage's government, like that of his predecessor, Maurice Duplessis, shows no frontier at all on the maps it publishes of the province. The boundary the Premier wants, would take in the points of origin of a number of rivers which, according to the 1927 line, begin in Newfoundland and flow most of their length through Quebec to the St. Lawrence.

The two corporations could go on talking money, the Premier said, but any agreement they reached would have to be approved by his government before any electrical power would move. And his government would have the border question on its mind as it set about signing the agreement.

However, observers get the impression Premier Lesage regards the whole area as one for bargaining, and that at a bargaining table, you don't show all your cards.

One farm every night

FIRE DESTROYS a farm practically every night. About 5,000 such fires, causing total damage of more than $10 million, are reported each year in Canada.

Valuable family treasures and indispensable farm equipment are lost. The family is lucky if there are no personal injuries.

Most of these fires could be prevented by taking certain precautions. Fire losses can be reduced by knowing how to act in case of fire, and the following procedures are recommended by the Department of Public Works (Fire Prevention Branch) at Ottawa:

(1) Shout "Fire !" to arouse persons nearby, (2) Save lives by getting every person, and all livestock, out of the buildings. (3) Summon the fire department if one is available only after all are out. When using the telephone, make sure you will not be trapped by fire. (4) Fight the fire from outside the building if it's at all dangerous inside. Move machinery and livestock from other buildings that are threatened.

Despite precautions, nearly every farm has a fire at one time or another. Even a grass fire can be disastrous when buildings lie in its path. Your chances of escaping a serious loss will be greatly improved if you have already made preparations for fighting a fire. Here are some tips:

Buy only an approved type of fire-fighting equipment, which is easy to operate and maintain, and is dependable in all weather. Keep it handy for use; make sure everyone knows how to use it; and keep it in good condition for ready use.

Thin edge of Democracy in Russia

THE TWIST is a symbol of the life and times of the Western World. Until recently this dance was looked upon in the Soviet Union as a typical feature of a decadent society.

Another was the lively sort of advertising that graces the pages of our magazines and newspapers.

John Best, Canadian Press correspondent in Moscow, reports that the twist has not only become popular among young people, it has won a degree of acceptance in official circles.

"We are not against the twist, especially if it is nicely danced," writes a correspondent in the newspaper Evening Moscow. "Young people want improvision and novelty. That is why the twist is knocking at the doors of dance halls."

The writer, a woman, goes on to say it would be great if Russia could promote its own modern steps, but she regrets that it hasn't learned how to do it — through the movies, for example.

Equally surprising is evidence of a recent switch on the merits of advertising. At one time the idea was simply that "a good thing advertises itself." This is giving way to the belief that shoppers should have a right to know what goods are available, and should have some help in distinguishing between good and bad quality.

Actually, there's little real advertising in the Soviet Union, except for slogans that publicize the Communist Party. Typical is a sign saying: "Drink Milk — Useful for Children and Adults." This is described as "expensive idle talk" by Evening Moscow, which adds that such nondescript ads should be replaced by "really interesting and colorful ads" employing humor and imagination.

Another recent report said that comfortable Western-style beauty parlors have begun to replace the "torture chambers" at which Moscow women have been going to have their hair done.

Lumped together, these developments would appear to have some significance. In the eyes of official Russia, perhaps our ways aren't so objectionable after all.

And the recent arguments at the United Nations notwithstanding, it could be that acceptance of the twist and other Western practices is a real indicator of moderation in the Cold War.

Viewpoints and perspectives

PREMIER LESAGE was realistic when he said recently that "it is difficult to think of making the Quebec farmer talk English or to make the western farmer talk French." One careful parent of two daughters reports that after they had spent two years in Switzerland for the purpose of perfecting their French, they remained bilingual for only a little time because, in living outside of Quebec, they had little or no opportunity to use this part of their expensive European education.

LET'S MAKE IT OFFICIAL. — There seems to be a great deal of confusion across the nation over the pronunciation of the word Centenary, The Financial Post points out in an editorial. Some speakers on radio, TV and public platform variously say "cen-ten-ary" or "cen-teen-ary, instead of the correct "centinary" (Webster and Oxford are the authorities). The word comes from the Latin "centenarius" (centi — a hundred each). There is no confusion in French. It is centenaire; phonetically, "saunt-in-air".

IT'S MARKET DAY EACH TUESDAY !

Between Ayersville and Whisselltown on the Montreal - Hull highway, each Tuesday there appears around the auction barns a heterogeneous assemblage of humanity, livestock, farm produce and assorted chattels . . For Tuesday is market day at the Lachute Commission Sales (near Simon's Crossing), and vendors and buyers flock to the scene by common accord, with wares varying all the way from nick-nacks to furniture, from diminutive pets to farm horses, from wearables to edibles, and what-have-you.

The scene is described in the accompanying pictures — scenes which have caught the psychology of the crowd — the discrimination of the household shopper, the wonderment of little children, the curiosity of youth, and the quiet serenity of age.

In the public market there's a story of all the human qualities and idiosyncrasies, as these pictures aptly suggest. If you want a bargain in a dubious antique, or just an idle hour's diversion in the spring sunshine, just visit this busy spot on market day — now before the scene changes.

They meander from stall to stall, looking, listening. They come by foot, by car, by truck, from all over the countryside.

There's not only horses, but livestock in smaller sizes — like pigeons and bunnies to intrigue the small-fry and captivate a youngster's admiration. ("Not so fast — pas si vite, mon père !")

Horses, horses — they're bought and sold; bays and greys, all shades and sizes. Dobbin changes owners and goes to a new pasture — taking the market day excitement in his stride. Most of the horses seen above are from the West, brought here for sale by Doug Simon himself.

Gardening and Your Child

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Perfect trust between a mother and child is a rare thing, but it is beautiful when it does come to light. Not every parent can achieve this goal, but if all parents would understand that even small children respond to love and trust and responsibility, perhaps we would see more evidence of it, and there would be less juvenile delinquency.

Where there is more than one child in a family, this mutual trust is generally apparent. The older girl cares for one of the younger children hour after hour without complaint, particularly if the older child happens to be a girl. Camp directors and playground supervisors often comment on how reliable boys and girls are whose parents have delegated to them partial responsibility for other children in the family.

Children should not be loaded with such responsibility so all their play hours are filled with looking after baby brother. All growing children should have freedom of movement to indulge their love of games in which the younger ones may not participate, and the wise parent will place a time limit for Susie to look after baby brother, and then he should be taken home and Susie freed to play with her chums. Constant responsibility for smaller children can and does breed resentment against the parents, and dislike for the younger fry.

School children benefit greatly from home support. A child's attitude toward his studies is colored by his parents' appreciation of education and their confidence that he will try to do his best. In a recent biography of John Christie Holland, an outstanding Canadian negro, and Hamilton's man of the year, Jessie L. Beattie said that his sister, Henrietta, said of their mother: "She made us feel that going to school was the most important job anyone could do."

Parents should guard their suspicions carefully. To openly suspect a child, and then to find your suspicions unfounded, makes a serious breach in that delicate balance of understanding between parent and child. Probe suspicions carefully and feel your way cautiously if you wish to nurture complete frankness in your child's relations with you. The boy who is suspected of sneaking behind the barn to smoke, may indeed succumb to temptation, because he feels he may as well smoke, because his mother thinks he does, anyway.

Henry L. Stinson, in his book, The Bomb And Opportunity, wrote "The only way to make a man trustworthy is to trust him; and the surest way to make him untrustworthy is to distrust him and to show your distrust." This was good sense, and the same principle applies to a parent's attitude toward his child. Don't expect the impossible of him, but let your child know that you expect him to be faithful to the terms agreed upon. Your complete trust is one of the best gifts you can bestow on any one you love, especially your child.

Turn about is fair play, is an old saying. If you expect consistent honorable behavior in your child, you, as a parent, must be dependable. If a promise is made to a youngster, keep it, for nothing contributes so much to a let-down feeling in a child as to be denied something on which he has built hopes perhaps for days. Perhaps you made the promise to get rid of the child at the moment. But you had better honor it now, without restraint, if you want to retain the respect of your son.

There is a lot to be said for George MacDonald's comment in "The Marquis of Nossie": "To be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved." Is there trust in your family?

Do-it-yourself spray cans of stain repellent finish for clothing and furniture will bring joy to the hearts of those good housewives who recently voted stains the most damning evidence of sloppy housekeeping.

Forty-two per cent of the Canadian women queried in a recent consumer survey rated oil and grease stains not only the hardest to remove but the worst looking blemishes in a well-kept home. Other common causes of stains were listed as ink, fruit and beverages.

Modern textile finishes have brought us a long way from the days when the backs and arms of upholstered furniture were protected with washable crocheted doilies. Even slip covers are used now more for decorative effect than to protect expensive furniture. There has been great progress made by Canadian mills in the finishes that shed oil to preserve the life and beauty of furniture fabrics. But occasional accidents still occur and the ultimate aim is to render them harmless.

The stain repellent finish now being offered direct to consumers in spray cans was the first of all fabric finishes to successfully repel oil and grease stains as well as water and soil. When introduced in Canada five years ago it was an immediate success for rainwear; in upholstered furniture it was offered as an optional extra.

The finish quickly won confidence and now furniture is usually finished before it reaches the stores because consumers want the extra protection, even at slight additional cost. Although the chesterfield you bought recently has probably been pretreated, the do-it-yourself spray can will give protection to the occasional chair or slip cover you wish to preserve.

The best stain repellants are technically a flurochemical treatment which coats the individual fibres in a fabric giving them a shield against stains. When spillages do occur they can be more easily wiped up without leaving tell-tale marks.

Chemical manufacturers say the most effective application of the finishes is that performed at the fabric mill where the cloths can be saturated, dried and cured to specific standards of performance. The finish does not change the appearance or feel of the fabric, will not wash out, or be affected by dry cleaning.

Other means of applying the finish had to be found however, because many fabrics — particularly those imported from other countries — are not treated with repellant finishes. Custom spraying machines were developed which could apply the finish directly to upholstered pieces of furniture.

The spray cans are another step in this development. Though no claims are made as to the perfection of hand spraying it will still give substantial protection.

Most Canadian mills making furniture fabrics today are applying the finish before the goods go to the furniture manufacturers. About ninety per cent of the upholstered pieces sold in Canada are offered in protective finishes. The Canadian consumer has spurred this development because she knows a good thing when she sees one. Furniture is a major purchase, and the more costly it is, the more anxious the consumer is for that extra protection to preserve its beauty.

The recipe for this inviting salad once won first prize in a recipe contest. It is now published in the new recipe booklet, "Let's Serve Canadian Sardines", available free upon request from: Consumer Branch, Department of Fisheries of Canada, Ottawa.

From new Sardine recipe booklet

One of the most versatile seafoods, yet one of the most "unsung", is the Canadian sardine. This inexpensive food product can be used to make a wide variety of hot and cold main dishes and in-between snacks. To tell you how, a brand new 20-page recipe booklet entitled Let's Serve Canadian Sardines has just been issued by the Department of Fisheries of Canada.

Beginning with party appetizers, this generously illustrated little book takes you through salads, sandwiches, hot snacks, top of the range dishes, and casseroles. In all, it contains more than two dozen choice recipes which have been selected and kitchen-tested by the home economists of the Department.

There's a recipe for an easy casserole dish which can be adjusted to serve any number of guests from one to one hundred. For teen-agers there is a recipe for a submarine sandwich which will quickly appease ravenous appetites. Delightfully attractive for a cool summer lunch are the recipes for Prize Sardine Salad and Danish Style Open Sandwich.

As the booklet points out, Canadian sardines are a bargain in food value. One 3½-ounce can will provide more than one-third of an adult's daily protein requirement at minimum cost. In addition, sardines supply certain needed minerals and vitamins. Folk on a diet low in saturated (hard) fats will be interested to learn that the fat contained in these little fish and the oils in which they come packed are poly-unsaturated.

Sugar culprit in heart disease

There is strong and rapidly accumulating evidence that points to sugar as a major diet-factor in coronary heart disease, according to Dr. Yudkin, chairman of the Nutrition Department, University of London.

Dr. Yudkin has noted that fat consumption in the U.S. has increased by only 12% during the past 70 years, with a significant increase in the ratio of poly-unsaturated to saturated fats. The general view suggests that this should have resulted in a fall in coronary heart disease instead of the considerable rise that has actually occurred. Sugar consumption, on the other hand, has more than doubled in the same period.

Recent evidence now indicates that men with coronary problems have been eating twice as much sugar as those with no symptoms of heart disease. The same sort of high sugar intake was found in another group suffering from atherosclerosis, with the degree of severity proportional to the level of sugar intake.

Dr. O. Paul, a Chicago cardiologist, made studies of 2,000 men. His survey showed that the 88 men who developed heart disease in the first six years of the study had diets which did not differ in fat content (either in quality or quantity) from the men without heart disorders.

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

There are two problems which crop up regularly when outdoor eating time comes — starting the fire and dreaming up portable menus that have variety.

If most of your outdoor eating is cooked on the back-yard barbecue, a length of stove pipe may solve your fire-starting difficulties.

Buy an 18-inch length of eight-inch pipe. At one end, cut three V-shaped openings at equal distances from one another around the pipe. The notches should be about one-inch wide at the top of the V, and about three inches deep. They serve as drafts at the base of the pipe.

You can make handles at the top by cutting two verticle slits about 1½ inches deep opposite each other in the top of the pipe. Cut two more about ¾ of an inch from the first. Curl the strips of metal out and down to form ears so you can lift the pipe when it's hot with clip clothes pins or tongs.

Begin with Paper

To use the stove pipe starter, stand it upright in the bowl of the barbecue with the grill removed. Loosely crumple three single pages of newspaper and stuff them into the bottom of the pipe. Pile five or six inches of charcoal on top.

Light the paper through the inverted V-shaped openings at the bottom. When coals have dropped down in the pipe, you may add more charcoal on top to build the fire to the size you need for cooking.

When the coals are coated with white ash, remove the pipe, spread the coals in an even layer in the barbecue, and replace the grill.

If most of your outdoor eating is done away from home, and you'd like to take along something different, how about pickled eggs? If you want, you can tint them with beet juice or yellow or green food coloring, to dress up a salad, but don't let the coloring get too dark.

Pickled Eggs

To pickle a dozen eggs, you need: 3 cups white vinegar, 1½ cups water, 1½ teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon whole cloves, 1 teaspoon pepper berries or ground black pepper, 2 tablespoons of sliced ginger root or ½ teaspoon celery seed.

Put the spices into a small cotton bag which you may make from several thicknesses of cheese cloth. Put the bag into the vinegar with salt and water and boil 10 minutes.

Remove spice bag and let solution cool. Hard-cook a dozen eggs, and shell them. When they are cool, pack eggs into half-gallon, quart or pint sealers. Pour cold vinegar solution over eggs to cover, then seal jars. Store in a cool place. They should stand in pickling solution at least two days before you use them.

If you prefer, you may omit spices or add sugar or add sliced onion or a clove of garlic.

You can use pickled eggs as a garnish or relish or eat them out of your hand.

One nursery was reported to have lost 60,000 perennials and a federal experimental farm official said it was the worst winter for plants in his memory.

The Canadian tulip festival, a main tourist attraction for the capital opened recently with little on display. Officials expected few blooms until May 20.

The unusual weather began last fall with a dry period, followed by an early December cold snap, rain at Christmas, then a severe cold period which froze roots that had been surrounded in water from the thaw.

Asian Flu, well named and vitriolic; miracles, and resurrection of Spring

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

Well, we made it, although, for a while it was doubtful. This type of influenza is known, we believe, as Asian Flu. Maybe this explains why the people of Southeast Asia are so trouble-making. We can think of nothing more likely to turn the milk of human kindness into pure, green vitriol, than Asian Flu. The only flaw in this reasoning is the wonder as to where they find the pep for guerilla warfare! Personally, I think the whole world is suffering from an acute attack of independitis. Every little pipsqueak with a tongue and few brains wants to put his volubly expressed idea into action. In many cases, this is like turning world affairs over to children. We are all in for a bad time until the children grow up. . . Now that we have diagnosed the world's ills, we'll pass on to lesser things — like Sunnyacres.

Never, in the thirty years we have been coming back to the Farm in the Spring, have we seen it so dry. When we walk across the lawn, it crackles underfoot. One careless cigarette could put us all up in flames. This lack of moisture is reflected in the plants. In the place of dozens of daffodils, I would be hard put to find a dozen. All along the watery depression at the foot of the front lawn, where ordinarily there is a row of the lovely things, there is nothing, and nothing along the north side of the house. Perhaps they are still asleep, perhaps winter-killed. No yellow faces peep from the hillside in the orchard, and one crabapple tree has succumbed. It must be a very old organism, and I wonder about it. What constitutes age in a tree? Does the sap simply refuse to rise, or does it have a disease? I suspect that the flickers did it, with their little, sharp bills. Killing the insects, they also kill the tree. We shall miss that pure, white radiance in the midst of the orchard. But its sister tree is all right; already there is a faint mist of pink about it. The tree nearest the house had definite little pink buttons. Given more rain, they may achieve full-blown status this week-end.

Another encouraging item is the willow tree, brought as a tiny twig from Toronto about eight years ago. It is a goat willow, and has no business thriving so far north, but it is now definitely a tree, all of four feet high. I like all willows, even if they do make aspirin from the bark. Weeping willows, I especially like — beautiful, graceful things. I am currently reading a book on medicines made from plants, and have once more come across the theory that every ill has its cure in the plant world, and that the shape of the leaves, etc., is a clue as to its use. For instance, a liver-shaped leaf means the root is good for the liver; the bladder campion one presumes, would deal with one's ailing bladder. As to the aforementioned willow, its graceful, supple lines hint that it is efficacious in healing rheumatism! Ah, to have a willowy form!. . . Don't scoff, dear reader; stranger things have happened.

Two generations ago, no one would have believed that a disembodied voice would come from a box in one's home. That is why one tends to be impatient with these wiseacres who do not believe this, and that, simply because it lies outside the experience of their puny, human minds.

A case in point is the declaration by the Moderator of the United Church, on T.V., that he did not believe in the physical resurrection of the Christ. Sure, it was a loaded question, and the man was in a spot, but it was a spot of his own choosing. What he meant by his unqualified NO heard by many thousands, was that this was beyond his experience. The corollary — conceited, I thought — was that, therefore, it could just not be. Well, the God I know having created flesh and blood, could engineer a resurrection with One Finger, so to speak. The Resurrection is the keystone of Christianity; without it, it is just another religious theory.

We abandon theology to record that there is, blessedly, rain on the roof. Lovely sound, rain on the roof. Queer that no matter how hard it pours in suburbia, one does not hear the rain on the roof. Anyway, welcome Rain! It falls, as Portia so sensibly observed, "on the just and on the unjust". The tulips in the garden in the suburbs will welcome it, as do the more utilitarian currant bushes up here. Everybody welcomes it except the head of the house, who is struggling to get peas and beans planted. If all the beans come up, we'll be swamped. Our neighbors will eat beans, we'll eat beans, and the rabbits will eat beans. Probably nobody else plants beans for benefit of the rabbits. The rhubarb looks very gay, as do the raspberries; and the strawberries have, at least, survived a bad winter. Now, for a few short months, we'll all rejoice. No, I do not think I would care to live in perpetual summer; the resurrection of Spring is too satisfying.

* * *

We have just had a passage of arms (or rather, claws) with Peter, the cat, who injured a shoulder muscle in a fight three weeks ago. He still limps, although the veterinary assures us it will gradually get better — what the hockey players term a charley-horse. Anyway he is not to jump; so, of course, the first thing he wanted to do was to climb to the top of a cupboard in the porch, whence he is accustomed to jump down. We have removed everything that might aid in his ascent, but this morning, hearing a scrabbling in the porch, I went out to find Master Peter half-way up the cupboard, stretched out like a feline fly on the bare wall. What this did to his muscles, I hate to think. He may be nearly fifteen, but he still has a mind of his own!

* * *

This column limps like Peter. Curses on the man who coughed germs all over me in the train two weeks ago. I could feel moisture on the back of my neck, and had in mind to turn around, and inquire politely and audibly if he would mind coughing on some one else for a change. Then I reflected, that this would undoubtedly startle him into a full-face cough; so I did not. But I owe him my cold. Queer, we can learn how to get to the moon, but simple rules of hygiene and courtesy elude us. . . I told you it made vitriol!

Country Notebook

More summer feed with Sorghum-Sudangrass hybrids. The new miracle crop. A five-way forage for your farm. These are the headlines which have stirred so much interest in this new annual forage in the last year or two. Five or six companies have developed their own trademarked varieties.

In the warmer parts of Quebec, Sorghum-Sudangrass may well be worth a cautious trial. But don't look for the spectacular results reported from south of the border. It's basically a southern crop and needs long periods of hot weather.

Sorghum-Sudan hybrids are used mostly as an alternative crop to Sudan grass or corn for a green-chop forage or mid-summer pasture. They do give some regrowth after cutting or grazing which corn does not. They are reported satisfactory also as silage, but hard to harvest as haylage or hay.

There have not been sufficient local trials to judge this new crop fairly. It was grown last year at Macdonald College with moderate success. And it will be in the plots again this year. Of its two parents, Sudan grass does well here in hot summers, but can fail completely in cool seasons. Sorghum is adapted to the hot, drier areas of the United States.

In Ontario where it has been tried for three years, it consistently outyielded Sudan grass and approached corn in dry-matter yield when allowed to grow to maturity. But it was lower in feeding value than corn. And when it was cut or grazed more than once, total yields were considerably reduced. Regrowth has not been spectacular.

Here is a summary of production practices gathered from several sources. Generally the crop is handled like corn. Seed ten days or two weeks later than corn, preferably on fall ploughing, 10 to 25 lbs. per acre in 7, 14 or 20 inch rows. Like corn, high fertility is needed, but don't drill in more than 150 lbs. fertilizer with the seed. Control weeds with Atrazine, one lb. active per acre before the crop is up, or with 6-oz. 2-4-D Amine per acre when the plants are 6 to 8 inches tall.

Start grazing in strips when plants are 18 inches high. Don't pasture shorter than 6 inches, to encourage regrowth. Or green-chop when in the 24 to 48 inch range. Because of some slight risk of prussic acid poisoning, don't feed the crop after frost until it is well dried out. My own feeling is that there might be a place for this crop in south-west Quebec as August pasture on farms where corn is not grown. But where corn is grown, it will be more efficient to plant an extra few acres for green-chopping when pasture runs short. If you are outside the corn belt, then Sorghum-Sudan hybrids are not likely to do well, either.

Flax looks like a safe bet as a cash crop. It hasn't as high value per acre as corn or sugar beets, or even barley, but it can be handled with the usual farm machinery. It will do well outside the corn area, there is a guaranteed market, and it transports easily. The area seeded to flax in Quebec has jumped from 5,000 to 35,000 acres in the last ten years.

Usual yields are in the 15 to 25 bushel range; the highest I have heard of is 38 bushels per acre. Last fall, the price was $3.08 bushel. The year before it was close to $4.00.

Recently, I went with the students on a tour of the Canada Linseed Company plant in Montreal — the principal buyers of Quebec-grown flax. Mr. Schiller, the company's agronomist, told me they could use five times as much local material. They prefer it because it saves the cost of freight from the west.

The company therefore has an active program to encourage flax growing. They will supply seed on loan, guarantee a market in the fall, and provide free storage until January. The grower may name the day of sale and take that day's market price. Mr. Schiller says he will give on-the-farm advice to new growers, and will meet with groups interested in pooling their resources. I understand that there is provincial transportation assistance for growers outside of a reasonable distance from Montreal.

Flax grows well on any clean soil that is suitable for cereals but does best on the heavier loams that retain moisture well. Because of its rather limited root systems, it may not thrive on sandy soils, is rather drought susceptible, and competes poorly with weeds.

Flax is one of the few grains that tolerate both herbicides that kill grassy weeds and those that kill broad-leaved ones. It responds less to fertilizer than most grains. In Quebec, the variety Marine has been commonly used, but Norland gave very good results last year.

There are several sources of information. Canada Department of Agriculture has a bulletin, No. 545 — "Growing Flax"; we have a supply of these at the college. There was an article on flax growing in Quebec in the November 1964 Macdonald Farm Journal. The Quebec Department of Agriculture is preparing a new bulletin, and the Canada Linseed Company can give personal service.

Try new device for detecting forest fires

Ottawa — An airborne device that may greatly improve forest fire detection in Canada will be tested operationally this summer in the Ottawa area. An infra-red scanner, designed and built by Computing Devices of Canada Liimted, will be carried on regular fire patrol flights by aircraft of the Quebec and Ontario Departments of Lands and Forests.

During the first two months of the trial period, which will commence in mid-June, the scanner will be flown by an aircraft of Quebec's Forest Protection Service based near Ottawa. For the second two months of the fire season, the device will be carried on an aircraft of the Ontario Forest Protection Branch, based at Pembroke. The project is being co-ordinated by the federal Department of Forestry.

A prototype of the infra-red scanner was tested last summer at the Forestry Department's Petawawa Forest Experiment Station near Chalk River. It is designed to record very slight differences in ground temperature on the terrain being scanned, with these variations activating a light signal or sound signal, or both, within the aircraft. In addition, the scanner is designed to produce a continuous thermal photograph or map of the terrain, permanently recording the precise location of "hot spots".

Federal and provincial fire protection agencies are keenly interested in the infra-red scanner, for aerial fire patrol, locating and pinpointing very small fires before they can be seen.
