New dam built at Rotary pool assures constant water supply

"Dam it! We must dam it!" — All agreed that a dam must be built on the stream, to make Rotary Park a dependable source of fun for the young people of the area.

And now it is dammed. . . It's quite a story.

There is nothing quite like the "Old Swimming Hole". The Park has been just that for a multitude of youngsters, many of whom learned to swim and dive there. To have a dependable supply of water has been the object of the Rotary Club for some years. The co-operation of Leopold Carrière and his men has helped in the past, but the Brownsburg Lumber Co. mill operates on water power or diesel fuel — which costs money.

After consulting with many local men of experience regarding earthen dams, weirs, concrete dams, crib dams — and contacting the government department for authority, etc. — the co-operation of Manny Wilson and his Canadian International Paper Company crew was obtained.

Rotary Park committee chairman Leonard Wilson (Manny's father) has been very active, assisted by John Chalmers, Stewart Jones, George Paul, Berry Bourne, Don Wilson, Alex Kerr, Keith Smith, Ross Cole and Bill Steeves.

For the last Sunday in June the Park was filled with families enjoying a swim and sunny weekend amid a huge pile of 6"x6", 8"x8" and 6"x12" timbers that had been delivered Friday night from the C.I.P. mill at Grenville.

Sunday night the water was let out of the pond by Brownsburg Lumber Co. so that work could commence at 7 a.m. Monday, June 28; and four days later, Friday at 6 p.m., the "drops" were in the gate and the dam was backing up water to fill the Park pool.

Manny, resident manager for C.I.P. Woods Division, had moved in his crew of specialists, under supervisor Aldae Huot from St. Jovite, and five men, Aurele Tittlet, leader in the absence of supervisor Huot, M. Clement, D. David, L. David and H. Trudel. They cut, positioned and spiked the timbers with a speed and obvious craftsmanship that was a pleasure to watch.

Closely co-ordinated with the timbermen, Tom Hall's bulldozer and trucks, operated by J. Brisson, J. Monette, N. Tomalty and G. McTavish, poured in the fill and moved it into place to seal the upstream side of the dam.

Rotarians convened at the Park immediately following their dinner at La Lorraine, last Thursday, to dig post holes for an additional parking area — and these got dug. Astonished at the very rapid progress on the dam, members buckled in, with picks, shovels and crowbars, with real vigor, while Geo. Desfossés arrived with a grader to even out the road, amid a cloud of dust.

With boulders to be removed, the float to be installed, more grass to be cut, sand to be delivered, buildings repaired (some due to vandalism), there is a constant need for maintenance. However, it will be community work that seems more productive, with a dependable pool around which activities can be planned.

Physical Education teacher Kent Tompkins is park supervisor from 1 to 6 p.m. However, during Saturdays and Sundays, parents should accompany their children and keep watch, or teach their children to use the "buddy system", as in Boy Scouts or Girl Guides, where two children each keep the other within arm's length in case of need.

The support of the public in the past has been appreciated, both with regard to safety at the park and co-operation with the Club's financial campaigns to build and operate such facilities.

"See you at the Park — with a lunch and the children."

Late Guy Legault, QC, member of old established Lachute law firm

Death terminated a long illness on Sunday at the Hôtel Dieu in Montreal, with the passing of Guy Legault, QC, member of a well known local family and law firm.

He was a son of the late L. L. Legault, Lachute, and the husband of Germaine Janin, who survives him, with his son Guy-Alban Legault of Montreal, and a granddaughter.

Of his immediate family, besides his mother he is mourned by two brothers, Dr. Jean-Paul Legault, of Montreal, Justice Fernand Legault, of the Superior Court, Montreal; and one sister, (Gisèle) Mme P.-E. Candardel, in Paris, France.

Funeral rites, from the Menard Funeral Home, are being held Wednesday afternoon at Ste. Anastasie Parish Church, with interment in the local cemetery.

The late Guy Legault was born and educated here, continuing with his secondary education at the University of Montreal and Collège St. Jean de Brébeuf, then taking the Law degree from U. of M., where he was president of the Students' Council. He practiced law with his late father in Lachute for several years, then moving in 1938 to Montreal. He continued to practice until 1962, when obliged by ill health to curtail his activities.

It is recalled that Mr. Legault established a French - language weekly newspaper here, La Sentinelle, published between 1934 and 1938 when he left to reside in the city. During his years here, he was officer in charge of the Lachute Division of the Joliette Regiment (Reserve). He was also an ardent Liberal partisan, and later became a member of the Reform Club in Montreal.

Beer license violations

Raids on two restaurants by local Q.P.P. officers resulted in the seizure of 24 cases of beer over the week-end. The raids took place at La Baie (St. Andrews East) and at Lake Echo. Charges have been laid in St. Jerome court by Cpl. J. P. Dallaire.

Gas "strike" permeates here

The "strike" of gasoline dealers in the Montreal area reached Lachute on Tuesday, when a majority of service station operators closed their pumps. Some of these stopped serving customers at noon, while others joined the shut-out around 3 o'clock.

In this "strike" it appears the local operators are acting either in sympathy with the demands of service station lessees and owners in the metropolis, or under threat of reprisals if they don't!

One local dealer explained that the slim profit made on the sale of gasoline was not worth the risk of exposing one's property and person to violence.

A survey of the local situation Tuesday morning revealed all gas stations open, but influences during the day brought a mutual and general concurrence with the closing. It was encouraging to hear from most operators, however, that they believed the "dry spell" for motorists would be of short duration. Some are completely closed, while others continue to operate their service and repair departments.

One gasoline dealer, viewing things philosophically, packed up and started on a few days' holiday. But gasoline and fuel oil, obviously, are the only commodities he deals in.

Bandits leave a dramatic trail; driver in trunk, hostages held

Two men believed to be hold-up artists seized three hostages at Arundel for their return trip to Montreal on Friday morning of last week and later released them unharmed in the city, with a relative's car used for the journey. The parties concerned were Mrs. Norman Graham and her two sons, Barry, age five, and Jimmy, age six.

According to Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, Provincial Police officer-in-charge for this County, a call was received around 7.45 a.m. advising the local office that a Montreal taxi-driver had been discovered locked in the trunk of his car. He informed his rescuers he had picked up his two male passengers in downtown Montreal and had been forced at gunpoint to journey to Arundel, where he had been locked in the trunk.

One squad car was immediately dispatched to investigate the report, and was followed a few minutes later by three other cars. While the police officers were searching the area for the two men, a call was received indicating that a hold-up had occurred in nearby Morin Heights, and all cars were dispatched to that point. This proved to be a false alarm, however, and while the policemen were away from the community, the two men made their way to a cottage nearby, owned by George Custers, and wnen the proprietor entered a short time later, they struck him on the head and bound him tightly, also relieving him of his wallet. A similar fate met Donald Bethume, a 14-year-old hired helper.

Mrs. Graham heard of the search for the two men, and decided to warn her brother-in-law, Mr. Custers; so, accompanied by her three children (Gloria, 12, Jimmy, six, and Barry, five) she walked a short distance to his cottage. They were met at the door by an armed man wearing a hood, who tied Mrs. Graham and made her comfortable on the floor by placing a pillow under her head. The three children were placed on the bed, the two boys securely tied.

Some time later, it was decided the men would take Mrs. Graham and her children as hostages, and all were untied and placed in Mr. Custers' car. Going through St. Jovite, Ste. Agathe and then over to Rawdon, the culprits returned to Montreal, stopping on several occasions to purchase items for the children, and allowing one of the boys to take a short walk when he felt car-sick.

The men stopped the car in suburban Montreal and paid a dollar for the gas used, warning Mrs. Graham to give them ten minutes before calling the police. She then drove to a nearby service station, called her relatives in Arundel to inform them of her safety, and was taken to the Provincial Police headquarters in Montreal. She was unable to give policemen a description of the two men, due to their disguises.

Officers elected for Regional Ch. of Commerce

Clément Legault, a business man of Ste. Scholastique well known hereabouts, was elected president of the Laurentian Region Chamber of Commerce (Argenteuil, Deux Montagnes and Terrebonne), succeeding J.-L. Bertrand, of Ste. Therese, who has filled the position since 1962.

Other officers are Bernard Parent, of St. Jerome, 1st vice-president; Claude Paquette of Terrebonne, 2nd vice-president; Romain Desjardins, of St. Eustache, 3rd vice-president; and Lucien Van Coppenel, of Bois-des-Filion, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Richard Ayers re-elected president of Visiting Nurses, at annual meeting

The Society of Visiting Nurses (Service des Infirmières Visiteuses — S.I.V.), a member agency of the Laurentian Federation of Charities, recently held its annual meeting at the Hotel Lapointe in St. Jerome. Besides the executive and the members of the Board of Directors of the S.I.V., many guests from other health and welfare agencies and associations of the district were also present to hear reports of the Society's work during the past year.

Mrs. Richard Ayers gave annual report

Mrs. Richard Ayers of Lachute was re-elected president of the Board of Directors. Other members of the executive are Mr. Gilles Parent and Mr. Horace Lamarche, vice - presidents; Mr. André Forget, secretary; and Mrs. Rodrigue Benoit, treasurer. Mr. Richard Lacharité and Dr. Albert Laplante are also members of the Board.

Mrs. Ayers, in her report, was happy to describe the expansion of services undertaken during the year. The Board took the many preliminary steps involved in establishing nursing services in Terrebonne and in St. Eustache-Deux Montagnes, as well as in opening a new office in Mont Rolland. Another significant move on the part of the Board was the embryonic formation of a Medical Commission related to the Society, in order to stimulate closer co-operation between the Society and the medical profession.

Mrs. Ayers praised the efficiency, courage and devotion of the nurses, characteristics which are at the heart of the Society's work. The special function of the visit-

Fire believed started by children

Extensive damage to a building owned by Mrs. Aimé Dupont and occupied by Mrs. Dupont and her son-in-law, Mr. Gerard Schnupp, was caused by a fire which started in a shed adjoining the structure, around 10 p.m. on Wednesday of last week.

The fire was of minor proportions — until it apparently ignited oil which had dripped from the fuel tank and, following the electrical wiring immediately above, got into the house. Here minor fire loss resulted, although there was extensive smoke and water damage.

The outbreak was believed caused by children playing in the shed. Loss was estimated to be around $2,000.

For questioning in April hold-up

Four men will be sentenced in Hull court today in connection with a recent safe-cracking at the Seigniory Club, Montebello — after having pleaded guilty to the charge. Following their sentence, they will be brought to Lachute for questioning in connection with an attempted safe-cracking at the Arundel Bank of Montreal on April 17 of this year.

At that time, would-be thieves were frightened by a burglar alarm in the bank, around 6.10 a.m. Investigation showed that entry to the bank had been made by means of a window, and that the men had apparently been in the bank for some time prior to the alarm sounding, as they tried to gain access to the vault.

Three men were picked up near St. Jerome by local Q.P.P. officers and held for questioning, later being released due to lack of evidence, and all three have since pleaded guilty to the Seigniory affair.

'Direct dialing' on distance calls by May, 1966

In May, 1966, telephone users in Lachute will join the 86-million-strong "direct distance dialing" network. At the same time, the new service will be introduced in Brownsburg, St. Andrews East and Ste. Scholastique.

Work has been completed on construction of an addition to the central office at St. Jerome, which will house the equipment that makes direct dialing possible, and its installation will begin within the next few weeks.

Bernard Parent, Bell manager at St. Jerome, terms DDD a simple, rapid and efficient service. "The only complex feature of DDD," says Mr. Parent, "is the electronic switching equipment that handles the calls."

Local service will not be affected by the change, and calls within the exchange will continue to be made the same as at present.

With DDD, customers will be able to complete their own calls to distant points in about 12 seconds. The figure "1" will connect a subscriber to the direct dialing network. He then dials a three-digit area code to put him in the right geographic region and the telephone number of the person he wishes to contact.

Street widened at narrow curve

Doubtless back in the buggy days drivers had to slow their pace to navigate this constricted curve on Main Street West, next to Geo. Y. Deacon Ltd. and opposite the old fire station. The town corporation finally bought a strip of land from Deacon Enterprises, and this was the scene when widening was in progress. Last week-end, all that remained to complete the job was the removal of the electric light pole.

By-law in preparation to join Lachute and Ayersville

Armand Poupart, a Montreal advocate and authority on municipal law, has been commissioned by Lachute Town to prepare a by-law for the amalgamation of Lachute and Ayersville. It is foreseen that the official name of this corporation will be "City of Lachute", and if plans materialize there will be a general election of the mayor and council this fall.

The number of councillors would be six instead of nine, as at present in Lachute, and all councillors will come up for election every three years. It is also possible there would be a fixed remuneration for service on the council.

This measure would be governed by Bill 13 providing legislation for the voluntary amalgamation of municipalities. It requires only the majority adoption of a by-law by each respective council, authorizing a joint petition to the Lieutenant Governor in Council for letters of incorporation.

The bill provides an escape clause, by which any proprietors of the two municipalities objecting to this measure may register their protest within a month after publication of the by-law. In doing so, they must state the reasons for their objection, and forward same in writing to the Department of Municipal Affairs at Quebec.

Earns doctorate in Science

DR. ROBERT LAMARCHE

Robert Lamarche, formerly of Lachute and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gaëtan Lamarche, has received his Doctor of Science degree, with distinction, from Laval University. Subject of his thesis was the Geology of the Sherbrooke district, Eastern Townships.

Robert Lamarche graduated from l'Ecole Supérieure here in 1957, won his Bachelor of Science certificate at the U. of M. in 1961 and the Master of Science from Laval in 1963.

Presently in the service of the Quebec Dept. of Mines and Natural Resources, Dr. Lamarche will assume the position of resident provincial geologist at Val d'Or this month. He is married to the former Gerri Bennett of Brownsburg, and they have two daughters, Susan and Nancy.

Lachute servicemen overseas

During his recent press tour to Canadian Army bases in France and Germany, the editor of our contemporary, L'Argenteuil, had the opportunity to meet two Lachute men serving with the R.C.A.F. Fernand Berthiaume is seen here June 23 with (left) Cpl. Jean-Claude Cyr and (right) LAC. Jean Paquin, both attached to the Transport Division at Zweibrucken, Germany. These young servicemen, living with their respective families in the married quarters of the Zweibrucken base, are on a four-year tour of duty overseas. Through Mr. Berthiaume, they wished to say "hello" to their relatives and friends around Lachute.

"Argenteuil Outdoors"

By BOB ATCHISON

For some time now reports have been coming in regarding panthers seen in different parts of the County. Most people are under the impression that these animals are a western species only. This is certainly not the case, as there are eastern panthers, and with the natural habitat for them right in our Laurentian countryside, there is no reason to assume they would not be in this area. I am mentioning this once again, following a report that leaves no uncertainty in my mind that this was the animal seen by a lady resident just recently. — In the Weir district last week, Mrs. Breckenridge had arisen early, and looking from her window, spotted this animal on her lawn. She managed to get a very good view of it, noting particularly its smooth head, with the long whiskers, plus the very long tail. With the coloring a greyish brown, there isn't much doubt as to its identity.

• • •

Now don't get all excited about this — for these animals are not man-killers. True it is a nasty beast, but no match for the human being. Along with others of the cat family, it evinces considerable curiosity in man, and this is its downfall. At one time this animal was hunted over most of the land, but with the scarcity of the species today they should be put on a restricted hunting basis, in other words, protected. Actually, these animals have sometimes been tamed as pets, and they seem to make very good ones.

Not too much is really known about them either; they have no specific period for breeding, so that they may have young at any time of the year, and these usually stay with the mother for a year and even longer. They have been known to live to the age of 20.

As can be expected, the fishing is spotty right now, that is, unless you want to work for them. By this I mean, cover every spot, even though it looks worthless. These are the spots that will pay off. There was an instance of fly casting in the West River. The spots that were being fished sure looked unpromising, yet in two cases trout were taken, both "keepers". In one case, a fish was caught in about 6 inches of water, with very little current — certainly not trout water, if we are to believe all the experts. In both cases the fish took the dropper fly, that is, the top fly that dangles in the water, most of the time just skipping along the top. This was attributable to a hatch of flies at the time, yet last Sunday in the same conditions, the fish would not look at the surface fly at all, they invariably took the bottom fly. This was also due to a hatch, but in this instance they were coming up from the bottom of the water. It does pay to take a good look at all waters before you start fishing, be it spinning, trolling or fly casting. You get more fish this way, and a little calculation certainly beats just plunking a bait into the water with nothing but a hope.

This will make some of you laugh — concerning a game officer some distance from here, and a gent out visiting. It seems he had called on some friends for a couple of hours. Returning home he had to pass over a small bridge, but reaching this spot, he was stopped by a bull moose which was not going to move one inch for any car. After a couple of toots on the horn, it is reported the moose took after the car; so, discretion being best in cases like this, the man backed up to his friend's house. A phone call brought the warden, who arrived in a truck to move the moose (he hoped). It is reported here that, when he climbed out to get a better look, the moose promptly chased him right back into the truck. After a couple of hours the animal grew tired of all the fuss, and ambled off!

A few enquiries have been received on the new Remington 350 calibre, and just what it appears to do. Well I can give you some information. It hits like a bomb; that 350 calibre is sure some slug. There is not too much kick, either; I'm not going to say it does not kick — it does; but if the gun is held tight enough, there is no trouble. Anyone holding it too slack, of course, would probably have his teeth extracted free of charge. There is one thing I'm really concerned about: what happens when some of the shooters get hold of this weapon and see some animal half a mile away? They will doubtless take a crack at it, then what? I'm not going to say that this gun won't kill at such distance, it sure will. But at such distances you must know the handling and capabilities of your weapons, and it's not going to be done with open sights, either. Outside of this possibility, which is no fault of the gun, it is a beaut — a really good moose gun.

A few of our Southern visitors called in a few days ago; they had come to go fishing up north with a couple of their Canadian friends. All the time they were camped, five days, it rained hard. Now this is the part that I like: our boys were using a Canadian tent and not a drop of water came in, yet the other tent leaked like a sieve. They couldn't stay in it at all, and all of them had to bunk in one tent. I may say, in fairness to the American manufacturers, this was not made in the States, it came from Europe; so I think they might have learned a lesson this time. I did see a Japanese tent the other day, and I took the time to look it over. To begin with, this was not a bargain affair, but one actually used in Japan — a real eye-opener. Finished beautifully, good canvas, or cotton, well waterproofed, very well sewn, with excellent soft nylon ropes, no zippers at all, and grommets throughout. To get back to it being made in Japan; it seems that a cheap quality merchandise is not too evident on the Japanese market, it's only in North America that we get this junk. Know why? Because the buyers from this continent set a price for something, then expect to make a killing selling with the cheaper outfits. I've often wondered about some of the reels on this market; this is likely the answer.

Once more a warning — against fire in the bush. This applies not only to our area, but wherever you may be travelling. Take it very easy with those cigarette butts; rather than step on them, why not spit in your hand first, then dunk the butt. Yes, it's messy, but far better to have a dirty hand than a very guilty conscience. So far we have been lucky, no real fires have taken hold, due to the quick action of some of the volunteer firemen. But we can't always win — so please be very careful.

Boating Clinic

By STAN DAVIES

Many boaters who have fast outboards are sometimes unaware that they are not getting the maximum performance from their boats and consequently wasting fuel and money. Here are some questions I've been asked this year on this topic.

With four persons in it, my boat does 31 m.p.h., with five it does only 18 m.p.h. Why the big drop? (T.C., Cobourg)

Answer: Undoubtedly, with the extra person, your motor (you seem to indicate it's an outboard) does not have enough power to make the boat plane. Planing is skimming over the surface. You'll have to get a bigger motor. Why not do it the easy way, just take four persons.

• • •

My outboard motor is too high; when it's opened up the water doesn't come above the prop. Should I cut a deeper notch? (J.T., Cobalt)

Answer: Cut the transom notch deeper, or get a long shaft motor. You may be able to get an extension to the "leg" of your present motor. Others should note this, make sure the motor matches the boat when you buy. Cutting the notch deeper of course makes the boat less safe.

• • •

Last summer my boat (fibreglass) ran straight and true, this spring it shows a tendency to keep turning right. Any explanation? (S.N., Dundas)

Answer: How was the boat stored over the winter? This sounds like a problem caused by a change in shape of the bottom due to poor storage. A badly supported boat will lose its designed shape and consequently top performance in one winter's storage.

• • •

What's a "hook"? (N.E.C., Ingersoll)

Answer: Refer to answer above. A "hook" is a colloquial term for a concave deformation of the keel of a boat caused by poor support in storage. It also means anchor, but I know you don't mean it that way.

• • •

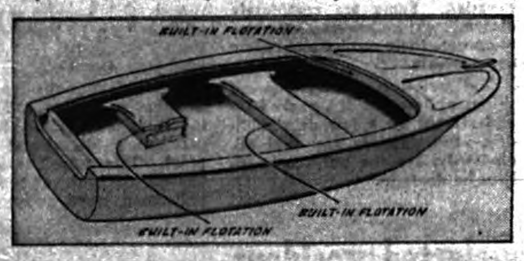
I smashed my prop last year, and the new one doesn't make the boat go as fast. The motor doesn't turn as fast either. Could smashing the prop have harmed the motor?

Answer: Yes it could have. But the evidence here seems to point to the probability that the new prop is the wrong pitch . . . too coarse. It doesn't let your motor turn up to its proper r.p.m. Consult a dealer . . . try a prop with a finer pitch.

• • •

My old (but still very good) plastic-glass boat sinks when full of water. I know it shouldn't. Will plastic foam take up much room? (P.R.T., Toronto)

Answer: Why have you waited 20 years to get around to this? It must be that long since they built boats without flotation. No, it won't take up much room. Two or three cubic feet of styrene, or urethane foam, can be put under seats, deck, motor well, or almost anywhere. (See sketch.)



Hawkesb'y Hawks look to coming football season

The Hawkesbury Hawks of the Quebec Intermediate Football Conference (Q.I.F.C.) announce the 1965 schedule will open with the Hawks against the Montreal North Bears on Sunday, August 15. This will be the Hawks' first of four home games.

The Hawks general manager, Justin Burwash, states that all the members of last year's team will be invited back for the coming season. The 1964 squad will form the nucleus of this year's team. Head coach Don Mahon is expected to have an additional 25 boys battling the regulars for their positions.

The Q.I.F.C. will operate this season with a five-team league, with the Chateauguay Ramblers (1964 champions) the Hawkesbury Hawks, the Montreal North Bears, the St. Lambert Saints, and Marieville.

The Ramblers, the Hawks and the Bears are the three remaining members of last year's Q.I.F.C., while St. Lambert and Marieville were the two strongest clubs of the now disbanded Montreal Football League.

Q.I.F.C. president Al MacPhail announced recently that one of the league's main purposes is to build to the level of the powerful Ontario League from which the Dominion champions from East York emerged.

The 1965 Hawkesbury Hawks executive is as follows:

President, Vincent Patenaude
Vice-president, Robert J. Cusson
Treasurer, Jean-Luc Poulin
Secretary, André Charbonneau
Manager, Justin Burwash
Ass't Manager, Ken Tekeda
Head Coach, Don Mahon
Equipment Manager, Rejean Lamarche
Publicity, Paul Walker.

Arg. Fishing and Hunting Assocn.

Some sixty anglers took part in the Argenteuil Association's fishing contest at Lake Wentworth Sunday, June 27, concluding with a bean supper. This was the last contest before the vacation period.

It is planned to hold a fish derby next September at Lake Louisa. This lake has been stocked in the past few years through the efforts of the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association.

In addition there will be an event in August, planned specially for children of the members.

BIG INDUSTRY

More than 45,000 Canadian men are engaged full- and part-time in commercial fishing on Canada's Atlantic coast. An additional 12,700 work in fish-processing plants.

Winner of Legion drawing

The Legion Branch 70 drawing, held at Lachute Fair, was won by Ian Drysder, a ticket-holder from Dollard des Ormeaux. In place of the fibreglass boat, outboard and trailer, he chose to receive the cash award. Mr. Drysder is here seen accepting a cheque of $800 from the Legion Branch treasurer, Miss Elsie McFaul.

Animal story has happy ending

Recent stories on cruelty to animals have prompted a reader to inform The Watchman of a more humane and pleasurable incident, told in a letter from a relative.

A telephone employee at Shawbridge, Vincent Thorburn, heard his dog barking excitedly one night, and went outside to find the animal (a German Shepherd-Husky crossbreed) had tugged on his chain and overturned the kennel while trying to reach a raccoon in a nearby tree.

The dog was subdued by its master, and next morning the man fashioned a wire noose on a pole, then climbed the tree with the agility of a lineman, and snared the coon. Caught securely by the neck, the animal was slowly enticed down the tree, led to the house and released in the cellar.

Fed and cared for by its new-found host, the coon has now became so tame it will eat out of his hand. It regards the premises as its home, and although doors and windows may be left open, it makes no attempt to leave.

BOAT PAINTING HINT

When painting your boat, use marine paints on all surfaces, whether they actually come in contact with water or not. Marine paints are designed to withstand real punishment from sun, waves, marine growth, rain and abrasion.

Game hunting regulations now available

Quebec — The 1965-1966 "Summary of Game Hunting Regulations in Quebec" is now in circulation. In a form similar to that of the "Summary of Fishing Regulations", it is as simple to consult as a road map. Color shading makes it easy to distinguish the 15 large game hunting zones and the boundaries of the two hare hunting districts.

More than 400,000 copies (325,000 in French and 90,000 in English) have been printed. Unfortunately, an error occurred in the first copies off the press: a white area appears between zones "F", "H" and "I", involving the Lake Baskatong region; it should be shaded in blue and fall within zone "H". Most copies printed, however, do not contain this error.

The "Summary" can now be obtained without charge from the Permits Division, Department of Tourism, Fish and Game, Parliament Buildings, Quebec, or from district chiefs and game wardens. Also, stores which will start issuing hunting licenses about mid-August, will also hand out the "Summary" on request.

The summary of regulations on migratory birds, which are protected under an international agreement, is expected to be published by early August.

Laur. Charities Federation Campaign results reviewed

The annual general meeting of the Laurentian Federation of Charities was held recently. In attendance was His Excellency Bishop E. Frenette, the honorary patron. Bernard Parent, general chairman of the 1965 Campaign, presided. President of Visiting Nurses gave report ing nurse makes it possible for patients to receive medically prescribed treatment at home. In some cases, it shortens a hospital stay by making it possible to carry out the doctor's orders in the patient's home after his early release from hospital. The nurses also accomplish a great deal in the way of helping families to understand and cope with the problems of their sick members.

Miss Gertrude Blanchard, Director of Nurses, presented a detailed report of the S.I.V. services in the four branch offices in Ste. Therese (including Terrebonne, St. Eustache, Deux-Montagnes), Lachute, Mont Rolland and St. Jerome. A total of 3,607 visits were made by the nurses during the past year; cancer patients were the most frequently visited, with 613 visits; patients suffering from glandular and blood ailments received 370 visits; rehabilitation cases required 293 visits; allergy cases, 247 visits and heart patients, 237 visits.

Patients are referred mainly by doctors, but many are self-referred as a result of a gradual public awareness of the Society's work. Other persons are referred by Social Services, by hospitals and by nurses. The population most frequently assisted is the 40 to 60 age group, with almost as many in the 65 and over age group. Nevertheless, more than half the patients are under 40 years of age, and these include many young children.

During discussions which followed the reports, it was pointed out that doctors were not referring as many patients as they could to the Visiting Nurses. It was hoped that this problem would be solved shortly through the development of the Medical Commission.

A special tribute was paid to Miss Solange Blanchard, who originally organized the nursing services in the diocese.

Next census in June 1966

Ottawa (CP) — Date of the next Canadian population census has been set for June 1, 1966, according to an announcement in the Canada Gazette recently.

Vincent Drouin, M.P., speaks on Bank Act amendment

Vincent Drouin, M.P. for Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes, had a word to say in the Commons debate just recently on the amendment to the Bank of Canada Act — recommending the portrayal of outstanding Canadian notables on certain currency notes, as is the practice in special postage stamp issues.

Following is a quotation from the text of Hansard on June 22:

"I will take this opportunity to point out another improvement that could be made on our bank notes.

"Our bank notes are in a way the best means of publicity at our disposal in Canada. I wonder if bank notes could not be used to pay tribute to certain Canadian personalities. I am not against monarchy. I would not want to remove systematically the likeness of Her Gracious Majesty Elizabeth II from our bank notes, but I wonder if, the likeness of one or of several great Canadian personalities could not appear on some bank notes as it was done in the case of postage stamps. As for me, I should like to see, for instance, on the bill I am now holding, the face of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who played such a prominent role in the history of our country and who, after a fashion —"

Mr. Drouin was here interrupted to point out that his remarks had "absolutely no bearing on the topic before the house", in which the Deputy Speaker seemed to concur; and despite his persistence in this detail which he considered relevant to the Act, Mr. Drouin concluded finally by expressing favor with the amendment.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white peau-de-soie and Alençon lace fashioned on Empire lines, having a lace bodice with a square neckline and brief sleeves, an A-line skirt with a back panel of peau-de-soie edged with inserts of Alençon lace and falling into a chapel-length train. Her short veil of tulle illusion was held by an open crown of matching lace, and she carried a small cascade of white orchid with stephanotis.

Mr. James Speirs acted as best man for the groom, and the ushers were Mr. Robert McGuire, Mr. Raymond Roscoe and Mr. Stuart Thompson.

Mrs. Pollock, the bride's mother, wore a shell-pink pure silk costume, with a matching hat of organza and a corsage of pink rosebuds and stephanotis.

Following the reception, which was held at the Lachute Golf and Country Club, Mr. and Mrs. Lobel left for Winnipeg and other western points, the bride travelling in a flamingo pure-silk costume with matching hat, white accessories, and wearing a gardenia corsage.

Retired couple on return home from European visit

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Fogerty, of Galt, Ont., visited Lachute relatives this week on their way home from a four months' trip to Europe and Britain. Of the eleven countries visited, Mr. and Mrs. Fogerty camped in eight, and they report that this mode of travel offers a wide variety of experiences, particularly in the number of people with whom one becomes acquainted.

A happy highlight of their holiday was a month's visit with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. Douglas Fogerty, of Prague, Czechoslovakia, where Mr. Fogerty is a vice-consul in the Canadian Embassy. During this visit, a joyful event was the arrival of a granddaughter, Margaret Anne, who was born on her little brother's second birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fogerty, who retired from teaching a year ago, highly recommend early retirement whenever possible.

Evening wedding solemnized at Lachute United Church

Kirby - Giles

Amid friends and immediate relatives, quiet simplicity marked a ceremony last Friday evening at the United Church, when the Rev. Harold Thompson united in marriage Miss Lorna A. Giles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Giles, Lachute, and Mr. George A. Kirby, son of Mrs. Amy Kirby, of Lachute, and the late Mr. H. Kirby.

In the chancel of the church were candelabra with lighted tapers, baskets of pink and white gladioli, and pink carnations on the altar; the guest pews were marked with white satin bows. The couple were unattended, and the bride's brothers, Messrs. John D. and Robert F. Giles, acted as ushers.

The bride, given away by her father, wore a white brocade suit, a hat of pink petals, and carried a prayer book with baby pink roses.

During the ceremony two solos were sung by the bride's uncle, Mr. J. F. Gorman, tenor; the organist was Mr. L. B. Hopkins.

Following the marriage a reception was held at the Lachute Golf and Country Club. A buffet supper was served, and best wishes were extended to the happy couple from their many friends. They will reside on Bethany Road.

Local Witnesses plan to attend convention

Mr. Henry Purucker, presiding minister of Jehovah's Witnesses, states that the Lachute North congregation has been invited to attend a four-day assembly July 22 to 25 at Memorial Community Centre, Peterborough, Ont. Mr. Purucker will head the local delegation of about 20 persons.

The Assembly is being arranged by the Watchtower Bible Society of Toronto for the congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses located in Eastern Ontario and including some of the English-speaking ones from the Province of Quebec. An attendance in excess of 4,500 is expected.

"The purpose of the assembly program," said Mr. Purucker, "is to provide additional Bible instruction for the Witnesses, to enable them to apply Bible principles more fully to their everyday lives and activities. We believe," said the Watchtower spokesman, "that God's Word, the Bible, is indispensable to the Christian way of life, and to focus attention on this Book of Books, the assembly program will carry the theme, 'Word of Truth'." The four-day program will include talks, discussions and practical demonstrations.

Mr. Purucker further reported that several representatives of the Toronto Watchtower branch office will speak in Peterborough. Highlight of the program is scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday, when a Watchtower official will give a public address on "World Government on the Shoulder of the Prince of Peace".

SNAPSHOTS STOP SPORTS ACTION

There is one thing better than telling friends all about the family's sports action: show these adventures in slides, snaps or home movies.

So compact have cameras become that they can be a constant companion; so automated in setting correct exposure that no technicalities are involved.

Summer in Canada is water sports — swimming, water skiing and boating.

Swimming except at organized swimming meets is a generally casual affair photographed from boat, float or dock. Concentrate on action that is close to you — there is nothing less identifiable than a small portion of head in the middle distance.

High dives can be spoiled photographically in several ways: by blurred image or no diver in view at all. Power poles, and other distracting elements which you didn't notice in the background while concentrating on the subject, may ruin the scene in your finder.

The elimination of distracting backgrounds calls for just a careful look and perhaps a change of position before shooting. What about the blurred diver and the one who isn't there?

He'll be there — with practice. The travelling time from board to pool is very brief and it often happens that, by the time the photographer has located the subject in the finder and tripped the shutter, he's gone.

Then, in anticipating too much, we get pictures of him still on the diving board. A little practice soon hits the happy medium. If you are unable to get a full field of view that takes in the board and the pool, centre the diver in your finder before he dives. As he takes off, move the camera keeping him in the centre of the finder, tripping the shutter at the moment you want to catch.

This system has another advantage. With snapshot cameras and their slower shutter speed, the camera moving with the subject prevents blurring. It may blur the background but your diver remains sharp!

Holding it still, will a snapshot camera take unblurred action pictures? Yes, if you catch the diver at the split second of immobility when he has stopped moving upward after his initial spring from the board and is just starting his downward dive. This again takes practice, but it works!

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

Later than you think

JULY COULD BE compared to a man who is just past forty, and suddenly awakes to the realization that life is slipping away. He is over the hump, on the downward slope, and the question is: "What happened to all the time that used to stretch endlessly before him, and all the interesting and ambitious things he wanted to do?

So it is with July. Suddenly the year is half over, and most of the resolutions made away back in January are still just resolutions. Here it is six months later, time has gone on, but accomplishments seem to have stood still.

July has one advantage over being forty, however. The summer provides a breather in the form of a vacation, which enables people to get their second wind and gird themselves for the remainder of the year. Smart people allow themselves enough leisure during their vacation to indulge in some unhurried thoughts about the months to come.

If their contemplations have been productive they'll be able to go back to work at the end of their vacations filled with all the ambition, enthusiasm and optimism with which most of them greeted the New Year.

People in their forties don't usually have this opportunity. Life at that time is at its busiest, and the chance to step off the merry-go-round and watch the action for a while, is not something most people in their forties can manage.

But there's one consolation. — July and forty may be past the halfway mark, but it's still a long time until December.

You can't 'stop on a dime'

THE FAMILY IMP, riding the rear compartment of a station wagon, began tossing bags of groceries out the back window. They landed on the pavement of Ottawa's 60-m.p.h. Queensway directly in the path of following vehicles. The driver behind, fearing a sudden lane-switch, braked to a stop. Seconds later, five automobiles were involved in the consequence — a chain-reaction rear-end pile-up.

This was not an unusual reaction, whether on a high-speed throughway or on a city street, but it is needless. Tailgating is both dangerous and thoughtless; an automobile travelling 30 m.p.h. requires 78 feet to stop, 33 of them taken by the driver's reaction before braking begins. This is almost five car lengths.

No car can "stop on a dime" in moving traffic. Any driver who moves in close behind the car ahead is asking for trouble, yet so many do this very thing. It is an indication that the driver either is not thinking, or he's an immature driver.

Cold shoulder for Culture

TORONTO'S centennial project of a cultural centre in the downtown area appears to have collapsed.

John C. Lockwood, the industrialist who heads a foundation created to raise money from the public for the proposed St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts, has informed civic authorities that the foundation has decided to call it quits. Among the reasons he gave were political uncertainty, public apathy and lack of support from some parts of the community.

The conclusion seems to be that you can't ram culture down people's throats. They will either accept it or reject it. In this case, the people of Toronto apparently feel that sufficient cultural facilities already exist in the city.

The centennial project, estimated to cost about $10,000,000, would have involved a festival hall, including a theatre and concert hall. Also in the plans were renovation of St. Lawrence Hall, a 19th century building once devoted to concerts, expansion of the Art Gallery of Toronto and renovation of Massey Hall, a concert hall with excellent acoustics but badly in need of modernization.

The foundation headed by Mr. Lockwood formally launched its appeal for public donations on May 12. Its target was $4,800,000. Only five weeks later the foundation advised it has dropped the project.

Sir Ernest MacMillan, a member of the fund-raising body, perhaps summed up the general reaction to the project in his comment on its collapse. "I had some doubts about the advisability of getting more halls as Toronto is already well supplied," he said.

City council has asked the foundation to reconsider its abandonment of the project. But it seems a forlorn hope that it can be revived.

Mayor Philip Givens, an ardent supporter of the undertaking, said the only possible centennial project left for the city was to restore historic St. Lawrence Hall. Its glory has faded and it has been used for many years for business purposes.

Perhaps Torontonians will settle for this. But they have shown little enthusiasm for the more grandiose project which was put before them.

Why experts drown

THIS SUMMER some young, healthy person, an expert swimmer (The Financial Post points out) is going to dive into a pool or river and drown almost immediately. In some cases dipping the head in water triggers an "exaggerated physiologic reflex". This reflex, which Dr. Wolf calls the "diving reflex", is the body's method of saving oxygen for the brain if the body's air supply is cut off. When a person dunks his head into a pail of water his heart rate immediately slows down, sometimes as much as 25 to 30 beats per minute.

Because of the slowing down of the heart, the arteries constrict. This cools the skin by several degrees. Blood pressure in the constricted arteries rises sharply. This is followed by other complicated changes in the body's metabolism based on the reduced supply of blood through the constricted arteries. "If the reaction is severe or accentuated by fear, death may result," Dr. Wolf says. Dr. Wolf thinks this diving reflex may also explain the crib deaths of apparently healthy babies. A child who turns his head into a pillow may trigger these oxygen-saving reactions.

A challenge to initiative

ENTHUSIASM for new challenges and opportunities is the most important single characteristic the Canadian economy will need over the next few years. At least, that's the opinion of Karl Scott, president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited. In a recent Toronto speech Mr. Scott said that, regardless of technological advances, economic success will depend on our ability to excel in doing the human job. A working force that is adaptable, flexible, and willing to be mobile (he said) need not be fearful of its security in Canada's changing economy. People who can and will contribute the best of their energies and skills in this context of change, will ensure their own security and advancement.

Viewpoints and perspectives

SPEEDING BY U.S. citizens through Canada will not be prosecuted by a Welland magistrate, he says. The reasoning behind this decision is that the accused parties cannot be compelled to appear in court. The attorney-general of Ontario does not seem disposed to do anything about this situation. A resident of Ontario (or Quebec) who is accused of speeding can be compelled to come to court.

DUTY NEGLECTED. — It is really our business to tell the police when we know something wrong is going on in our community. Many of us shut our eyes to things which go unreported, especially where young persons are involved, and thus help in bringing about one of the very things which we most heartily disagree with — juvenile delinquency.

Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation device recommended equipment for vacation

The advantages of mouth-to-mouth (or mouth-to-airway) resuscitation in the rescue of drowning victims are set forth in the following points:

(1) This method permits easy detection and rapid correction of air passageway obstruction.

(2) It allows constant observation of chest movements for best control of breathing.

(3) It permits re-oxygenation within seconds.

(4) It is more easily performed than manual methods.

(5) It permits the rescuer to breathe for victim during transportation.

In cases of drowning the most important thing is to get air into the lungs without delay. Water cannot be removed satisfactorily from the lungs, nor is this of primary importance. Valuable seconds should not be wasted. The stomach should be emptied by hand pressure if necessary, but regurgitated material must not be allowed to obstruct the throat.

Artificial respiration must continue until the victim breathes naturally or until a physician pronounces him dead.

Mouth-to-mouth rescue breathing moves a much greater amount of air in and out of the lungs. In actual emergencies it has revived many victims. It is easily learned, and is now an official approved lifesaving method.

The "Resusitube" Airway is designed to make this method easier and even more effective. It is a mouthpiece for the rescuer and a breathing tube for the victim that helps keep his passageway open. It overcomes the greatest objection to mouth-to-mouth resuscitation — the reluctance to come into direct oral contact with the drowning victim.

The Johnson & Johnson "Resusitube" is made in pediatric and adult sizes, and information on its use is made available by Donat Saulnier, B.Ph., whose Beaton Pharmacy has this device in stock. It is highly-recommended equipment for campers, fishermen, hydro workers, and all who may encounter emergencies of asphyxiation and, by this means, may be instrumental in saving a life.

Criticism on poor highway marking and lack of jury recommendations

June 28, 1965

Editor, Lachute Watchman

Dear Mr. Editor:

I was an interested party visiting your very fine town early last week, attending an inquest relative to the fatal accident at the junction of Routes 8 and 8A at Grenville, Quebec, about 5.30 p.m., June 13th.

The writer, first of all, would like to point out in this and the following paragraphs without prejudice that I have travelled in the past years on many of the Quebec and Ontario roads, and to my knowledge I cannot recall a worse accident and death trap than this junction. With this experience I feel I am entitled to say in a minor and humble way I know whereof I speak.

The driver of this westbound vehicle involved in this tragic accident was proceeding from Lachute to Hawkesbury for about the second time, and not being familiar geographically, he was under the impression that he was driving on the main route connecting Lachute and Hawkesbury. With this limited knowledge, and knowing the importance of Lachute and Hawkesbury, possibly you will agree there was some logic in his appraisal of the route.

Approaching the junction with only one sign pointing to Grenville and Hawkesbury, definitely no stop sign, no yield, or any other type of sign to warn a driver that once he began to turn from 8 to 8A and Hawkesbury he must do so at the safety of eastbound traffic, it is our understanding that this driver, and we say so without prejudice, was under the impression that beyond this junction point was a secondary road, and a driver must yield. Of course, let's face it, better judgment would have avoided this tragic accident.

A word re the inquest. The writer was not only amazed, but astonished with the deliberation and findings of the jury.

So far as the interrogations were concerned, we were perfectly satisfied, however, the jury walked backstage and I remarked to a colleague that they were there deliberating less than two minutes. I was told by actual timing they were out 15 seconds.

There were no recommendations. There were no criticisms as to the present state of this junction, especially relative to directions governing drivers in either direction.

Finally, without prejudice, if the writer had been the foreman of this jury, I would have instructed my colleagues that it was my opinion that the heads of the Department of Highways in the Province of Quebec were the ones that should have been charged and not the unfortunate driver who, we will grant, didn't use too much judgment, but by the same token should have never been held completely responsible without a recommendation.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space you have allowed me, I am

Yours very truly,
Interested Party

Letter in approval of news policy

The Watchman has heard favorable comment on a recent item in its pages. This approval was voiced last week in a letter to our French-language counterpart, L'Argenteuil, as follows:

St. Andrews East, Que.

Editor, L'Argenteuil

Dear Sir: I wish to congratulate you on having retouched an accident photo which appeared recently in your paper.

I saw a sensational picture of the same accident in another paper, which I greatly deplored. I know certain newspapers seek to boost their circulation in this manner, but by showing contorted arms under the wreck of an automobile they overlook the feelings of the victim's family. Your gesture, by contrast, shows sympathetic concern for those involved.

I urge you to continue in this policy, which will deserve the respect of district readers.

Travel Plans

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Careful planning beforehand removes many of the difficulties of family travel. It is fun to look forward to holiday good times as well as remember them afterwards with pleasure! Plans should be flexible enough that they can be changed if unexpected events occur.

It is very important to remember not to travel too far any one day or to plan too long a trip. If any member of the group becomes exhausted, extreme fatigue almost always shows itself in irritability or lowered resistance to illness. The too weary traveller is miserable — and John Buchan once wisely remarked — "Misery knows no manners."

On a trip the members of the family see more of each other than they do on ordinary days at home when father goes to work and the children attend school. It takes a little extra effort to continue to be courteous and considerate throughout the whole day on a trip. Mark Twain once observed, "I have found that there ain't no surer way to find out whether you like people or hate them than to travel with them."

To prevent individuals in the family from getting on each other's nerves, it is wise to split up into smaller groups of mother and daughters or father and sons in the latter part of the day. If the family are motoring, and father is doing the driving while mother has major responsibility for keeping the children happy and occupied in the car, perhaps after supper at a tourist camp, dad will offer to take the children on a walk while mother has the chance to relax all by herself. Then during the children's bedtime hour, dad can do as he wishes.

No careful parents would take their children on a trip in a car which had not been carefully checked by a reliable mechanic. Many of the accidents on our highways however can be traced not to defective brakes or a stalled engine but to the driver being crowded or his attention being distracted at a critical moment. Whether mother or dad is driving, there should be a strict rule that the driver must have plenty of room. The driver's complete attention must be on his job. Heavy traffic frequently demands quick and wise decisions.

In recent years a number of families have taken advantage of Air Canada's off season lower plane rates and cheaper tickets for families. If a long trip is being considered, a plane trip can be a never-to-be-forgotten experience for a boy or girl!

Such a large number of families own cars, that many children of the present generation have never known the thrill of living on a train, eating in a diner and going to sleep in a berth. The inexpensive fares of the large bus companies do attract many families who must budget very carefully. If dad is a commercial traveller or must do a good deal of driving in connection with his work, it is worthwhile giving careful thought to the advantage of a family trip by plane, train or bus.

Sunburn, poison ivy and drinking untested water are all carefully avoided by experienced trippers. Clothes for travel should above all be comfortable. In the hot weather the "small fry" can wear sun suits combined with cotton jerseys when necessary. On cooler days seersucker or corduroy overalls for tiny tots are practical.

A big thermos bottle with drinking water and plastic cups, a different color for each member of the family is a good idea. So are damp clean wash rags in a plastic bag and a small bath towel to wipe off sticky fingers and faces. A number of simple games are a MUST. Look up some new ones in a library book before you set out. Whatever are your vacation plans Good Luck to you and "Happy Landing!"

Cocoa shortbreads

Everyone loves chocolate. Everyone loves shortbread. What better way than to combine the two for a merry Christmas in July? Our Cocoa Shortbreads taste much like the old-fashioned favorites but with a new flavor twist. Give them a glamorous glaze for a special coffee party or serve plain with lemonade for a sweet summer snack. Made in a jiffy, these are also ideal for long trips because they keep well — if you can resist them that long.

Cocoa Shortbreads

1 Cup butter or margarine, 1 cup granulated sugar, ½ tsp. salt, ¼ cup cocoa, 1 egg yolk, 2 cups all-purpose flour.

Stir — blend softened butter, sugar, salt, cocoa and egg yolk. Gradually stir in flour to form a stiff dough. Roll half of dough on a lightly floured board until ¼" thick. Prick with a fork. Cut with a 2" cookie cutter. Arrange on an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 325°F for 20 minutes. Cool. Glaze if desired.

Yield: 3 dozen.

Glaze

Beat 1 cup icing sugar, ½ tsp. vanilla and 2 tbsp. warm milk or cream until smooth. Drizzle about half a teaspoon over each cookie. Decorate with a walnut piece.

Fish recipe from House of Wong

Ardent interest in good food took Bill Wong away from a career in engineering two years after he graduated from McGill University. He managed a restaurant before opening his own "House of Wong" in Montreal.

Within the first year Mr. Wong expanded the restaurant because of growing demand for his style of Chinese food. The restaurant now har eight telephone operators receiving take-out orders.

Four years ago Mr. Wong opened his second restaurant. It too was very successful. Last year he opened another Chinese restaurant with seating capacity for 1,000 people on Decarie Blvd., Montreal.

Mr. Wong enjoys cooking. He personally adapted this specialty recipe for cooking in the home, and tested it.

Of preparing Chinese-style seafood meals, he says, "The main distinction between good Chinese dishes and common Canadian cooking, is that we undercook vegetables so that they remain crisp and retain most of the food value. Chinese chefs favor intense application of heat for a short duration."

Pineapple Sweet and Pungent Haddock

(Six servings)

2 Pounds of haddock fillets, 2 eggs, 1 cup flour, 1½ cups sugar, 1 cup vinegar, 1 six-ounce tin tomato paste, 1 clove garlic (crushed), 1 teaspoon salt, 1 ten-ounce tin pineapple chunks, 1 green pepper cut into thin strips, 2 cups water, 4 tablespoons cornstarch.

Cut fish into 1" slices and dip into beaten eggs. Remove and sprinkle well with flour.

Fry in deep clean vegetable oil at 350° for approximately 7 minutes.

Combine in a deep saucepan sugar, vinegar, tomato paste, crushed garlic, salt and water. Stir well and bring to a boil. Add pineapple and green pepper. Reduce temperature to simmer.

Stir in cornstarch to which water has been added to make a smooth paste. Cook and stir well until mixture thickens.

Pour over fish when ready to serve.

Hot bottle will draw splinters

Dorsetshire, England (WMNS): Doctors are willing to learn from non-professionals. There's evidence in a letter to the British Medical Journal from Dr. David C. Langley, who describes a "simple, safe, and sure" method for removing splinters taught him by "an old Dorsetshire hedger"...

"A narrow-necked bottle is filled with hot water, and emptied again when the glass is as hot as possible. The neck of the bottle is then placed over the splinter, and as the bottle cools down, a partial vacuum is created, thus drawing the splinter towards the surface of the skin. This procedure may be repeated several times, as necessary. The hotter the water, the larger the capacity of the bottle, and the narrower the neck — the greater will be the negative pressure created."

FROZEN GELATIN TREATS

Jewel-red strawberries captured in a sparkling gelatin atop a creamy cottage cheese base make up the frozen delights pictured here. The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, suggest serving these frosty salad molds as appetizers or as the main attraction on fruit salad plates. See recipe below.

— Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa

Jellied salads, frozen treats

A sparkling, jellied salad perks up flagging appetites even on the hottest summer day. Its smooth, cool texture adds the perfect touch to a crisp fruit or vegetable salad. To make sure you serve your jellied salad in all its crystal glory, follow these few simple rules recommended by the home economists of the Consumer Section.

Choose the Right Mold

There are many shapes and sizes of molds to choose from. The ring-shaped mold is perhaps the most popular. A point to keep in mind is that molds made of tin, aluminum or copper are easier to unmold salads from than molds made of glass or of oven ware. Your own kitchen cupboard can yield a variety of interesting mold shapes. Utensils such as square or round cake pans; loaf pans; muffin tins; clean tins from canned foods, or paper drinking cups all make good molds.

Prepare the Mold

For easier removal of the jellied salad from a mold, grease the mold lightly with a flavorless salad or cooking oil, or rinse with cold water if preferred.

Soften Gelatin

Soak the gelatin in liquid as specified in the recipe by sprinkling it on the cold liquid.

Dissolve Gelatin

Be sure to dissolve gelatin completely in very hot water or in very hot liquid, whichever the recipe indicates.

Chill Gelatin Thoroughly

For a quick chill, set gelatin mixture in ice and water, stirring frequently until slightly thicker than unbeaten egg whites. The gelatin mixture may also be chilled in freezer compartment for 10 minutes or until sufficiently thickened.

Layered Molds Are Tricky

Prevent separation of layered molds by chilling gelatin until slightly set. Before putting in the mold, it is very important that all layers should be of the same consistency when turning one mixture onto another so that they will be fused when unmolded.

Fill Molds

Molds should be filled as full as possible for easy unmolding. Gelatin requires 2 to 4 hours to set firmly. For large molds, prepare the day before so that they will be thoroughly set before serving.

Unmold Salad Just Before Serving

Do not unmold a gelatin salad until almost ready to serve. To unmold, wet the surface of the serving plate with cold water to make it easy to slide the salad into position after unmolding. Run the tip of a knife around the top of the mold to loosen the edges of the jelly. Lower the mold into a bowl of hot (not boiling) water for one or two seconds. Wipe off the mold, then tilt it slightly to let air get under one side of the jelly; this bubble of air helps to release the jelly. Place the serving plate upside down on the mold and turn them over together.

Cucumber Cheese Mold

1 Envelope gelatin (1 tablespoon), ¼ cup cold water, 1½ cups cottage cheese, 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion, ¾ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vinegar, ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ½ cup salad dressing or mayonnaise, 1½ cups finely diced cucumber (peeled or unpeeled).

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes and then dissolve over hot water. Mash cottage cheese, add onion, salt, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce and salad dressing and mix well. Add gelatin and combine thoroughly. Fold in cucumber. Turn into a 4-cup mold and chill until firm, about 3 hours. 6 to 8 servings.

Strawberry Icebergs

1 Package (10-ounce) frozen strawberries, 1 package strawberry jelly powder, 1¼ cups liquid (water plus strawberry juice), 1 cup sour cream, ½ cup cottage cheese, ¼ cup mayonnaise, ¼ cup icing sugar, ½ cup finely chopped walnuts.

Drain thawed strawberries thoroughly and save juice. Prepare jelly powder using strawberry juice as part of the liquid. Chill until beginning to set. Mash strawberries and fold into thickened jelly. Half-fill 6 to 8 individual molds with strawberry mixture. Combine remaining ingredients and spread over strawberry layer. Freeze until firm. Unmold and serve on crisp lettuce. 6 to 8 servings.

Note: This salad may be frozen in a refrigerator tray, if desired.

Partner Jellied Salad with Cottage Cheese

For main dish fare add cottage cheese to a jellied salad. Its creamy smooth texture and high nutritive value make it a valuable ingredient in a salad mold. Here are two salad mold recipes featuring cottage cheese as the main ingredient. The "Cucumber Cheese Mold" is delightfully cool yet satisfying. If you leave the peel on the cucumber it adds a crisp contrast. The second salad "Strawberry Icebergs" is a frozen treat to serve on fruit plates.

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ties, bows and straps will be featured in the fall on closed toe pumps with vamp and side openings and open backs.

Toes should really be rounder than they have been in some time, and heel shapes and heights will be shown in a diversity of styles. High dress heels will have straight backs. Setbacks and stacked types will still be stylish and more little heels, including a curved Louis type, will be emerging.

Materials will be soft and light, in small grains, suedes and smooth finishes.

Black and brown will again be the favored colors. The brown family will be shown in a wide range of shades and tones, including spicy and gold shades. Reds, blues and yellowed greens and some greys are expected to add some color to the season.

Men's Styles

The bureau says men's shoe fashions now rival women's in their variety and style. They say the long summer week-end, which has brought major changes in all male wearing apparel, has made male feet a focus of attention as never before in recent years.

Light, flexible, casual shoes are being designed to go with color co-ordinated slacks, shirts, jackets and shorts. Colorful fabric sports shoes and sandals complement leisure clothes.

Pigskins, glove leathers, waxy cattle hides are being used for slip-ons, loafers and leisure ties. Smooth or grained suedes or brushed leathers are favorites for dressy casuals. Styling either way features slip-ons or two and three-eyelet ties.

Brown and sand and grey shades are reported to be getting more attention for the coming season.

Wearing Hints

The bureau says you can't draw an absolute blueprint for every man's taste in shoes, but there are a few rules which apply regardless of personal taste or climate.

Dressy styles should always have light to medium soles and very little trim.

Shoes should be chosen to complement the color and style of a suit or outerwear.

Wear black or the darkest brown with blues, greys and some olive blends. Wear browns with most olives and some shades of grey. Never wear brown shoes with a black or nearly black suit.

Bathe for beauty

New York (WMNS) — This beauty formula comes not in a bottle, but in a bath. According to recent reports, a great turn-of-the-century French beauty, Caroline Otero, who died recently at the age of 97, preserved her charms by following her nightly warm bath with, on successive nights, baths in the whites of egg, in champagne, in olive oil, in milk, and in petroleum jelly.

"There is nothing, nothing like a dame!"

Lab keeps eye on pesticides and food products

Vancouver (CP) — A new laboratory loaded with exotic-looking equipment for chemical analysis is the latest move in an effort to curb the dangers of pesticides in food.

Built by the British Columbia government following a pesticide scare, the Vancouver laboratory's main job is to analyze samples submitted by government departments.

But individuals and companies can also have products analyzed at fees ranging from $17 to $25 per sample.

The lab's main function is to prevent the dangerous accumulation of pesticide residue in crops and forage fodder.

Last February the federal food and drug directorate closed a cattle feeding station and two dairy farms in the Grand Forks area of the B.C. interior.

Scientists had found an "abnormally high" amount of pesticide residue in the meat and dairy products of the cattle and said it constituted a health hazard.

One of the first jobs of the new laboratory is to analyze the milk of the Grand Forks cows, which the province bought from the farmers. The milk will be sampled over a period of several months to determine the rate at which the pesticide residue level of each cow drops.

The government has said the farmers will be able to buy back their cows when the pesticide has returned to what scientists consider a level safe for human consumption.

Women outlive, outnumber men

New York (WMNS) — A bachelor's field day, that's what the U.S. is. There are 4,000,000 more women than men aged 18 and over in this country, according to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, or about 1,067 women to 1,000 men. The fair sex does have one advantage: Women live longer than men — about three years longer, all told.

Actually, more boy babies than girl babies are born each year, but the female of the species survives better, for reasons not completely understood.

Perhaps in part because of the shortage of males, American girls marry early. One of three 18 to 19-year-old girls is married, and the proportion rises rapidly so that two of every three girls are married by the time they're 24.

Rare sea life helps admirals

Vancouver (CP) — Sea cucumbers and clams have come to the aid of their country.

A University of Victoria oceanographer, Dr. D. V. Ellis, in announcing discovery of several rare forms of sea life off the west coast of Vancouver Island, said his find could have military advantages.

Dr. Ellis said the clams and sea cucumbers, as well as other forms of marine life, are usually found only in very cold sub-arctic waters.

He said that by gauging the effect of polluted waters and warmer currents on the less-hardy species, his four-man exploratory team will be able to map more accurately where water comes from and where it goes.

By providing the Royal Canadian Navy with a more accurate map of oceanic currents — courtesy of the cucumbers and clams — strategists will be able to map out submarine movements with increased efficiency.

The cold water sea life was found at remote Kanish Bay under 120 feet of water.

Dr. Ellis said he also expects the discovery will aid in pollution monitoring and fishery prediction. This year's expedition was the first in a series aimed at charting oceanic currents of the entire B.C. coast over a 10-year period.

Top-rankers for entertainment at Ottawa Ex

The greatest array of talent ever brought to Ottawa has been announced by the president of the Central Canada Exhibition, Gordon Band. . .

Bob Hope will headline the grandstand show Friday night, August 20, Saturday, afternoon and night, August 21. Tennessee Ernie Ford, who broke all attendance records in 1961, will be the star of the grandstand show August 23 to 28. And Victor Borge will be at the Exhibition for a unique one-day engagement on Saturday, August 28, appearing at the Coliseum in the afternoon and evening.

The signing of Mr. Hope was the result of months of negotiations and will mark his first public appearance in Ottawa.

Ford made such a hit in 1961 that he has been signed again, and the show will be a completely new one.

Mr. Borge's appearance is a complete change of policy for the Exhibition in that two top entertainers will be performing at the same time. Mr. Band said, however, the Association believes this does not present any conflict, because of the different type of act presented by Tennessee Ernie Ford and Victor Borge. To enable both shows to be presented, the Coliseum will be transformed from a Horse Arena to a Concert Hall Friday night for Mr. Borge's two performances Saturday afternoon and Saturday evening. The Coliseum floor will be completely sodded overnight. A stage will be built in the centre of the Coliseum turning it into an amphitheatre and allowing an excellent view for all those attending.

Utility device for sewer cleaning

A sewer-cleaning vehicle that can double as an emergency fire-fighting unit is now available. The sewer cleaner is controlled from street level, with a set-up time of less than 5 minutes, and it cleans 1,000 ft. per hour. Only two men are needed to operate the unit, both staying at ground level. A high-pressure hose with reverse nozzle is used. Water pressure of 1,000 p.s.i. drives the hose up the sewer against the flow. As the hose is withdrawn, the water jets flush the sewer clean. Light materials are flushed on down the line and heavy materials deposited in the manhole for easy removal. The unit can fight fires up to 500 ft. away and guns can be added to increase fire-fighting capacity. It also can be equipped with hand guns for washing vehicles, equipment and buildings.

THOSE SCOTCH JOKES

Much has been written about the frugality of the Scots. Most of it is entirely fictitious. I have always received exceptional hospitality from those of Scotch descent. But this story is one of the fictitious ones about Sandy's avoidance of unnecessary spending.

Sandy was waiting in the railroad station in a small town in Scotland to meet his wife, who had been visiting a sister in Aberdeen. He had been waiting for some time. Suddenly a newsboy came in shouting: "Extra, Extra! All about the big train wreck. Aberdeen express wrecked. Twenty dead — eighty-five injured!"

"Good heavens," said Sandy. "That's the train my wife is on. Gie us a paper laddie!" Putting his hand in his pocket he hastily withdrew it. "No, never mind, laddie. I'll wait for the late edition and get the racing news as well."

• • •

A Scotsman pulled out his handkerchief and a set of false teeth fell out. "I didn't know you had false teeth," said his friend. "They're not mine," said Mac. "They're the wife's. She had a bad habit of eating between meals."

• • •

The editor of a newspaper received the following letter from a Scotsman: "Dear Sir, If you don't stop making jokes about the Scotch I'm going to stop borrowing your paper."

Barberry Lane Countess Helen, a six-year-old Ayrshire cow owned by Ellen Bompas, Richmond, Ont., won the Inter-Breed Best Udder Class at Lachute Spring Fair. This was the first show of the season with the new Hays Classification. In her own class, Countess Helen placed second to the Grand Champion.

Four groundhogs in 24 hours isn't a bad score for a ten-year-old collie. That was Danny's project for the first day back at the old farm for the summer. And if he had understood commands, such as "Number Eight hole, Danny" as well as "Groundhog", his score could have been double. But really I don't think we should count the one that fell out of the elm tree into his open mouth.

My back field is in one unholy mess of twitch grass. It was ploughed last fall and disced. This spring, it was to have been sprayed with Dalapon and in August seeded to timothy for seed. But I couldn't find anyone with the right sprayer.

So on St. Jean Baptiste Day I went at it with the discs. I should have known better. All I accomplished was to pulverize the top of that field into a light powdery dust and to hide the twitch grass under it until the next rain washes it off.

Now what do I do? I know only two things for sure, the discs are not going back onto that field — it's a light sandy loam — and the timothy won't be seeded until that field is clean. I am in the market for a sprayer of my own.

The drought situation in Quebec and Eastern Ontario is alarming. To me, the overall feed supply looks considerably worse than last year. Some parts of the province haven't fared too badly — there's a near-normal crop around St. Hyacinthe, the Eastern Townships and the Lachute area. But parts of the Chateauguay Valley, the Lake St. John area, and Pontiac County are in a bad way.

Hay is selling in the field for as high as $1.00 a bale. This is what Keith Greig told me on the day of the Ormstown Farmers' Picnic. He, himself, was offered $20 an acre for a field that was not too heavy. Truckers from across the border are combing the back concessions already. I was surprised that day to see truck loads of cannery pea vines going south on Route No. 4 to cross the border. This material costs the New York farmer $4.00 a ton delivered, a real bargain it seems to me.

There are reports that some men are pasturing all their hay fields with the full intention of selling out at the end of the season. That's a grim situation.

One emergency measure is to cut the oat crop for forage, or use it for pasture. It will be cheaper to replace the grain this winter than the hay; the grain crop is reported good out west.

Another is to plan at once to stretch the pasture season as far as possible into the fall. Top-dress the good hayfields with a high-nitrogen fertilizer. Plough up the poor ones. On the home farm, I had splendid results one year with a crop of rape; the young cattle pastured on it long after the snow fell. And against all the rules in the book, it didn't taint the milk; I limited the milk cows to a half hour on it right after milking.

A mixture of fall rye and oats is another good possibility and it's still not too late for corn. It will never mature now, of course, so variety is not important.

* * *

The use of water by plants is one place Nature seems to have got things backwards. The drier the weather, the more moisture it takes to make one pound plant material. In the dry west, it takes something like 700 tons of water to make one ton alfalfa hay. In the east, where moisture is usually more plentiful, it takes little more than 400 tons. It doesn't make sense, but that's the way it is.

Some crops, though, are more efficient in their water use than others. The millets, sorghums and corn are at the top of the list. Small grains require almost twice as much water, while legumes use almost three times as much.

For example, in one careful trial it took 361 tons of water to grow one ton (dry weight) of corn, while oats took 604 tons and red clover used 759 tons.

Weeds are real water-thieves. The same water that was required to grow a ton of lambs-quarter would have grown almost two tons corn.

Fertility, too, has a real influence on water utilization. Crops that have been fertilized use less water in relation to yield. In one trial half a manured field used 323 tons water for a ton of corn (dry matter) while the other half without manure needed 463 tons.

Have you noticed how the dandelions stand out exasperatingly healthy against the background of burned pastures? They reach down into the moist soil well below the shallow-rooted grasses. Alfalfa and trefoil get their roots down there too.

THREE MORE BANDITS IN POLICE DRAGNET

Two Montrealers, both of whom have made statements in connection with the recent kidnapping of Mrs. Norman Graham and her two sons, Barry and Jimmy, of Arundel, were apprehended by local Q.P.P. officers late last week following a concentrated manhunt in the bush around the Dalesville-Brownsburg area. Cpl. Jean-Paul Dallaire headed the search by the entire 14-man local detachment, assisted by two Montreal-stationed Q.P.P. constables and a police dog, Rebel.

The incident started on Thursday of last week when Cpl. Dallaire received a phone call from Arundel, informing him of a Montreal taxi which was touring the village in the vicinity of the Bank of Montreal. A description of the car and its three occupants was obtained, and Agent Pierre Lanoue was dispatched to locate the taxi and follow it. In the meantime, road-blocks were set up by other Q.P.P. agents on the various roads leading from Arundel. Agent Lanoue met the car on his way to Arundel and followed it, according to his instructions. The occupants of the vehicle spotted the police car, however, and attempted a get-away in the direction of Lachute.

In the vicinity of Dalesville, the taxi swerved out of control and struck a post, and by the time the policeman had reached the car, two of the occupants had taken to the bush. Police found the taxi driver, Alphonse Poulin, 47, of Montreal, seated on the rear seat in a state of nervous shock.

Cst. Lanoue immediately summoned assistance, which arrived within several moments, as Cpl. Dallaire and other officers had set up a road-block only a short distance from the spot; the accident occurred around two o'clock Thursday afternoon. The men spread out and commenced a search, and some 15 minutes later, Cpl. Dallaire heard a sound behind him. He immediately turned and spotted Pierre Delaney, a 20-year-old Montrealer, ready to make a run for the highway and attempt an escape in one of the police cars. He was arrested and taken to police cells in Lachute for questioning. The search continued until dark, the local Q.P.P. agents being assisted by two more men from Montreal and a police dog. However, no further trace of the other missing man was found.

Friday morning, a stranger meeting the description was seen by a Dalesville resident at 7.15; and reports were telephoned to police on numerous occasions during the morning. The man spotted the police cars responding to the call, and took to the bush. Around noon, however, a report of a man sighted running from tree to tree was given to police by Mrs. Theo Zimmer, a resident of Maple Avenue North, Brownsburg. Policemen were called in from the road-blocks which had been maintained all morning, and the armed posse entered the bush after several shots had been fired. The culprit, Jean Guy Desormeaux, 28, of Montreal, was spotted by Agent Guy Lesard, who made the arrest.

Continued search revealed a loaded revolver, and the prisoner was taken to Lachute where he was detained. Taxi driver Alphonse Poulin told police a story of having been hired in Montreal and held at gunpoint. However, when he identified the two men, he too was implicated by the two prisoners as an accomplice in the robbery attempt.

It appears that the three men met in a tavern in Montreal Thursday morning and, according to statements to the police, the taxi driver stated he was low in funds and behind in his car payment. The subject of the Bank of Montreal at Arundel came up, and the two men agreed to pay the gas required for the trip and each to give Poulin $200 from the "take" for his services. He was to be left outside the village while the hold-up was being committed, and picked up later. Five cars in front of the bank frightened the would-be bandits however, and after cruising the area for a short time, they decided to drive to Lachute and return to Arundel later in the day. It was then that they were met by the police car and later apprehended.

Following the investigation into the incident, which continued throughout the week-end, taxi driver Alphonse Poulin was charged with conspiracy in connection with a planned hold-up and for giving false information to the police. Pierre Delaney, who was apprehended by Cpl. Dallaire, was charged with three different car thefts, two charges of conspiracy to commit an armed hold-up, kidnapping and theft. Jean Guy Desormeaux, who evaded the police search for a day, has been charged with three car thefts, illegal possession of a firearm, two charges of conspiracy to commit an armed hold-up, theft, kidnapping and wearing a hood with the intent to commit a hold-up.

The charges were laid in connection with the planned hold-ups last week and the previous week, when Mrs. Graham and her two sons were kidnapped and held as hostages, enabling the two accused to return to Montreal. The hostages were released in the Montreal area, unharmed, following the trip.

Chartrand named chief of police

Captain J. Réal Chartrand, with three years' service on the town police force, was appointed police chief this past week, by decision of the town council at its regular meeting. The new chief succeeds the late Jean-Louis Hebert, and assumes the title for a job which in fact he has performed for some time past.

Born at Montpellier, Chartrand came to Lachute with his parents, when quite young. He served in the Canadian Army for 12 years, being in the Provost Corps stationed in Germany with his wife and child — his daughter having been born in that country.

The Lachute police department comprises the chief, one lieutenant, one sergeant, six constables and three desk clerks.

City Fathers approve grants and donations

Agreement on water reserve

At the regular council meeting last week, the grants and donations committee (Ald. Laurier Carrière, chairman) recommended that $750 be given to the Centre d'Art d'Argenteuil — an increase of $250 over last year's civic grant; and that an additional $250 be granted to the Carrefour du Livre, making a total of $1,750 to this institution; and also a grant of $300 to the Loisirs St. Julien — an organization which has received no municipal subsidy for the past several years.

The Centre d'Art was also given the use of the Auditorium for a folk-dancing course to be given on seven consecutive Tuesdays.

Council was in accord that the fountain should be rebuilt in the town park, and Hubert Pilon, engineer, was asked to report on the cost involved, at next meeting of the council.

It was agreed that Rolland Belair, mechanic at the municipal garage, should accompany the fire truck on all calls, acting under orders of the fire chief.

It was also decided to sign an agreement with the proprietor of Solar Lake, that the town may draw off 1½ feet of water from that lake should the need arise. This represents a reserve of 20 to 25 million gallons. The corporation will pay the attendant at the dam to keep the water at the desired level — a matter of $360 per annum.

3 Await sentence in hold-up at Grenville bank

Gustave Lamothe, 30, of Montreal, Denis Nadeau, 25, of St. Jerome and Montreal, and Florian Jacques, 35, of Rivière des Prairies, all appeared in St. Jerome court last week and pleaded guilty to charges of armed robbery at the Bank of Nova Scotia, Grenville, on June 25. They were held for sentence, which will be handed down on Friday, August 13.

Lamonthe and Nadeau were arrested by Cpl. Jean-Paul Dallaire the evening after the hold-up, and $12,363 was recovered at that time. Florian Jacques was picked up near his home in the Montreal area.

Main Street barber almost 40 years, killed in crash

The late Edouard Mayrand

A barber for almost 40 years, and one of the best known business men on Main Street, Edouard Mayrand, aged 62, met his death in a highway crash Monday morning near Rawdon. Gaëtan Gascon, his son-in-law and driver of the car, was killed instantly, while Mr. Mayrand's daughter Jeannine (Mme Gascon) is in critical condition at the Notre Dame Hospital, Montreal. Ed Mayrand died at the Maisonneuve Hospital two hours after the crash.

According to information available at this time, Mr. Mayrand and the Gascons, from Ste. Agathe des Monts, were driving to Deschambault to visit the former's sister, a nun. Their car collided with another auto at St. Esprit de Montcalm, and Gascon was killed instantly.

Mr. Mayrand is mourned by his wife, Fleurette Rochon, a son, Claude, of Lachute, and four daughters, (Marcelle) Mme Gaston Parisien, Lachute, (Jeannine) Mme Gaëtan Gascon, of Ste. Agathe, (Madeleine) Mme Maurice Champagne, of Montreal, and (Aline) Mme Louis Charbonneau, of L'Orignal.

In the bereaved Gascon family are the mother, now in hospital following the tragedy, and three children, aged nine to 13 years. Funeral rites for the father will be held at St. Jerome.

The funeral of the late Ed Mayrand will be held from Ste. Anastasie on Thursday at 2.30 p.m. The remains are resting at the Menard parlors.

480 Schools in Wildlife essay contest; two top English winners from L.H.S.

A picture of two Lachute High School students, with Principal Fred Royal, was published in The Watchman recently.

A complete list of winners throughout the province now identifies the successful two as really top-rankers — one in the entire entry of thousands from all over the province, and the other, first in his age group (boys).

Bryan C. Rodger, of Riviere Rouge (age 13) won the 1st prize, the Sterling Pollock Trophy and $100. — A student in Grade VII, his teacher was Mrs. Hazel Swail.

Douglas Jenkins, of Lachute (age 16) was first in the boys 15-years-and-over category, winning a $25 award. — Douglas is a Grade X student, and his teacher was Miss E. Stanton.

The total of entries from three Protestant schools in this County, screened and ranked by local judges before sending them to the Federation Committee, was approximately 100 in the 14-and-under class and 66 in the 15-and-over class. There were also numerous competitors from Catholic schools.

Entries From 480 Schools

Montreal — The awards for the Conservation Essay Contest sponsored by Quebec Wildlife Federation in the schools of Quebec were announced by Mr. J. B. S. Huard, chairman for the Education Committee.

For the category of 15 years of age and over, the students had the choice of two themes: "Survival in the Forest" or "The Game Laws", while for the category of 14 years of age and under, they could choose between: "Recreation in the Forest" or "Your Favorite Wild Animal".

The top winner, Bryan Rodger of Lachute High School, was awarded the Sterling Pollock trophy and a prize of $100 for his essay on the Beaver (Your Favorite Wild Animal). In the French section, the Gaetan Benoit Trophy with a prize of $100 went to Pierre Dupuis of the Bourget College, Rigaud, Que.

A total of $690 is awarded to 36 pupils, boys and girls of the two categories.

This year, two special prizes of $25.00 each were offered by the Quebec Forest Industries Association for the category of 14 years of age and under. Mary Kaye Kenney of St. Patrick's High School, Thetford Mines, Que., won this special $25 prize, while in the French section, the equivalent prize went to Pauline Plourde, of Rivière-du-Loup, Que.

Over 480 schools took part in the contest.

The purpose of the Education Committee of Quebec Wildlife Federation is to make the Quebec public aware of its duties in respect to the conservation of natural resources and to support the enforcement of the fish and game legislation. The Committee takes the opportunity to congratulate the winners and thanks the teachers for their collaboration.

Report received on province-wide participation

To regulate taxi business by new by-law

Taxi operators in this municipality will be governed shortly by a town by-law. Council has been studying the situation, and has come to the conclusion a regulation should be passed in the interests of this local business. Notice of motion was given at last council meeting by Ald. Philippe Masson, and the by-law will be adopted at the next or subsequent sitting.

It is understood the statute will contain a clause authorizing taximen to use meters on their vehicles, and that the basic fare will be 40 cents. The petitioners for this by-law suggest that the number of operators be limited to 35. It appears there are now 38 in business, but the first three permits to be relinquished will not be renewed.

The new by-law will be modeled on statutes presently effective in St. Jerome, St. Eustache, Ste. Rose and other municipalities.

Among recent visitors at the Carillon Museum were Dr. and Mrs. B. Zaborski, of Ottawa, who commented very favorably, stating that this was the finest and most interesting museum they had visited. Dr. Zaborski is of the University of Ottawa, and is on the editorial staff of the Canadian Geographical Magazine. They are now planning to arrange for a group of 60 adults to visit the local museum. . . Adding to the interest this season is the addition of bilingual tags to many of the exhibits in the museum.

Blaze occurs at woodwork plant

A fire early Tuesday morning caused minor damage in the Lachute Lumber & Millwork Ltd. plant on Chatham Street, and firemen were on the scene for less than an hour. The alarm was sounded at 2.10 a.m., and the fire crew responded, to extinguish a blaze which had started near a pile of lumber in the second storey of the building.

A small section of the floor was cut out, and a minimum amount of water was used, to avoid unnecessary damage.

Long-established Wal-Ken Riding School high spot in lives of young enthusiasts

By Ann FitzGerald

If you've happened along the Main Street of Lachute about 5 o'clock on a summer afternoon (or any other season too), chances are you've noticed that little white truck trundling along to deposit its load at the top of the street.

Out tumble a dozen or so young sun-burned people clad in jeans and jodhpurs, and wearing the happy grins from a day in the outdoors.

Follow that little truck home — a two-mile jaunt out the R.R. 2, St. Andrews highway, a couple of sideroad turns, 'til it's greeted by the sign that explains the day's mission — "Wal-Ken Riding School".

Mr. A. J. Billingham (call him "Pop" — everyone does!) has just completed a usual riding school day with some 20 or so youngsters who come to ride his horses, to take his lessons, and to be his friend. And part of his day is this final drive to Lachute, taking them to the pick-up spot for drives home to Lachute, Brownsburg, Dunany and even Montreal.

Thirty-five years ago Pop bought his farm and a few horses. Prompted by neighbors whose children came by for lessons, he opened a riding school, now well over a quarter-century ago. Originally called "Billingham Brothers Riding School", the name was later changed to "Wal-Ken" for Pop's sons, Walter and Kenneth.

Pop's love for horses is a family sort of thing. His father was a brake coach driver in Staffordshire, England, and Pop tells some interesting tales of his boyhood experiences with his Dad's horses there. When Pop was 12, his family moved from England to Montreal; there Pop kept and rode his own horse about the mountain — that was before it all became commercialized, he explains.

The riding school which began here as a hobby is now a full-time interest for Pop Billingham. He began with six horses — he now has 36, all raised and trained by himself, as well as five ponies. The horses are a cross between a high-stepping Hackney and a Thoroughbred, which, according to Pop, gives the best type of riding horse.

The riding school itself appeals mostly to the female set. Pop says 17 of his 20 regular riders are girls, probably because boys are more interested in technical things nowadays, though he recalls the early times when almost all his riders were boys. "Now we're getting their children!" says Mrs. Billingham.

Youngsters can begin riding here at the age of eight, and start with ten lessons given by Pop on everything from learning the parts of the saddle to mounting, riding and brushing the horse afterwards. Tests are given, and certificates are awarded. Then the young person can ride as desired, or can learn more pointers on riding or jumping from Pop.

Pop explains that horseback riding requires the use of almost every muscle. "You have to be 16 Army Cadets leave Lachute for summer camp at Farnham, Que.

This is the largest contingent of Cadets ever to have left Lachute for summer camp, and it is a credit to the local Cadet officers who have made this possible. The selection of boys for summer camp is based on efficiency and the marks obtained by the Cadet Corps as a whole for their year's training.

Four of the boys who left Saturday are from the band, and will be members of the Farnham Camp Band for the summer; there they will receive the best of musical training. Only one other Cadet corps in the province has as many boys selected for the Farnham Band. It is the hope of Capt. Haydon and his assistants that in the next year or two the Lachute Army Cadet Corps band will be used en bloc for the summer at Farnham.

Following are the boys, and the courses to be taken:

Cadet Leader Instructor: Sgt. Douglas Black.

Driver of Mechanical Transport: Sgt. Philip Richards.

Wireless Telegraphy: WO-II Gordon Logan.

Range Coach Course: Cadet/Lieut. Stephen Brown.

Bandsmen's Course: Cadets Christopher Brown, Jimmy Berniquer, Jacques Poulin and Roy Venes.

Cadet/Lieut. Stephen Brown, who is attending the Range Coach Course, is repeating the same course this year; he was specifically requested to do so by the officer in charge because Lieut. Brown missed by only two marks last year from qualifying for the Canadian Cadet Bisley Team. Everyone in the Lachute Cadet Corps is pulling for Stephen to make the team, as it means next year he would travel to Germany, France, and compete at Bisley, England.

The Cadets will be at Farnham for seven weeks, at the conclusion of which the inspection takes place. Parents and friends are invited and urged to attend this event.

99-Year-old with Orangemen at annual picnic

The celebration and picnic of the local Orange lodges was held again last Saturday at Hammond's Grove, to the music of the bagpipes. Guest speakers were Raymond Reside, of Ottawa, Immediate Past Grand Master, also the Rev. L. Hisey of Lachute and Dalesville, and the Rev. McEwen, of Sherbrooke.

Among friends and supporters who attended was Mr. Edward Morrison, Sr., who is in his 100th year, and who claims to have been an Orangeman for 83 years. Fellow members extend congratulations to "Brother Morrison".

Youth drowned in Rouge River

Clement Villeneuve, an 18-year-old resident of St. Nazaire, near Lac St. Jean, was drowned while swimming with two companions in the Rouge River near Huberdeau last Sunday morning.

The youth disappeared from sight and his body was later recovered. The incident was investigated by Q.P.P. Agent Gilles Villeneuve, no relation of the victim.

"Argenteuil Outdoors"

By BOB ATCHISON

Grey trout are reminding us, once again, that you cannot take them for granted. In a few cases they have been caught the usual way, that is, by deep trolling, but in other instances heard of, they have been taken right up near the surface of the water. The catches have been possibly better than last year. Only one sad note — a few taken were full of tapeworms, especially from Lake Sir John. Two specimens which I heard of from this body of water — one a nice fat 4 lbs. plus, and the other 23 inches long, yet this one weighed only a little over 1½ lbs. It looked to be all head, and nothing else. One cannot attribute this to lack of feed in this lake either; there are plenty of minnows, frogs, small perch and bass. Examining the contents of the stomach was a real revelation into diseases of fish, this one had about 20 tapeworms of various sizes, a real mess; and no wonder it was skinny, everything it ate was feeding these parasites. Of course, as I mentioned before, this is not common in all our lakes as yet, but it could be, without our being aware of it. So any trout you catch, would you please let me know about this — time, place, etc. Thanks.

* * *

There has always been the odd fish infested with these worms, but they didn't seem to bother the general run of trout. Just what is causing this outbreak will be pretty hard to find. And then again, it may only be in certain lakes for the time being; but with the loons and lake fowl flying around, it would not take long to have all the lakes infested.

* * *

Here's another queer thing: Ever since Sixth Range was stocked, the fishing has been poor. This lake did produce some very good fish at times; not every day you went out, but at least you did get the odd one. Now all the good fish seem to have vanished — why, I wouldn't know. Talking to a couple of anglers who used to fish this lake often, the subject was brought up, and both of them confirmed that in the past couple of years the fishing has been very poor. True, the odd good big one has been taken, but not as frequently. One of these habitués told me that in the last year he has not taken a fish over a pound — not worth keeping, as he stated. My thoughts on this are that the bigger fish are finding good feeding without having to search for it too much, so that they will be staying down deep; and no matter what you troll past them, it will be a waste of time.

* * *

As far as the fly fisherman is concerned, the rewards are excellent. Most of the fish being caught right now are from small brooks or creeks, with not too much water in them. The fish are lurking in the deeper holes. Naturally, you don't take them during the day, but early in the morning or late in the evening when the water has cooled down, you can have a lot of fun. So far this past summer, we have only been beaten once; every other time we have had good returns, with some good, fair-sized trout. Last week-end was the poorest so far, and then I found out why — a lot of blasting had been going on in this particular spot, so that queered the fishing.

* * *

The West River up near Pine Hill has been very good for fly fishing; working down toward the concrete bridge near Datesville, is very good. It's strange this area looks good to almost everyone, yet I don't believe I have encountered more than a couple of fishermen in all my travels in that section. Some excellent trout can be caught in this small river; sure, you have to work for them, and get soaking wet — but isn't that fishing, anyway? I wouldn't be happy unless I fell in at least once each trip, and I think most of us are like this. It's a little rough when your smokes float down the stream, but you manage to survive somehow.

* * *

I don't know just how many of these butterflies there are around, but when I describe them, maybe you have seen them too. I was walking in the bush the other morning (to a stream) along an old cut-out road, when I spotted them. The wings were almost purplish black with heavy white bands; there must have been a dozen or so. I'm not too sure of their identity, but I think they might be the Banded Purple butterfly. I stopped to watch them flying around a small, damp spot in the road. They acted just like elevators at times, up and down; and when I did finally move on, they must have followed me for about 30 feet, always flying in an even line. They looked to be about 2½ inches in length.

* * *

Have you noticed the large groups of Dragon flies in evidence, too? There seem to be more this year than in past seasons. Mere words never could describe the beauty of these. They may be so voracious that they eat their own tails, or anything else that happens in the way, but seeing them hovering in the air is a delightful sight. I wonder just how fast their wings whirr. The way they dart around picking up mosquitoes on the wing, gives the impression of a fantastic jet plane. Even when they land, they have wings always outstretched as if for instant raids or flight. Sometimes you mistake them for the Damsel flies; but if you watch them land and rest, the Damsels will fold their wings back over their bodies; and I don't believe the Damsel is so much of a glutton.

Once more a complaint (it comes up periodically) — about youngsters with air rifles. There must be a bunch of them around; after all, they're on school vacation, so now's the time to use that gun without anyone's permission. You parents had better check on some of the lads; windows cost money to fix, and even though some of the lads can run a mile in nothing-flat, they can't get away with it forever. So take a good look before the kids go out.

* * *

We have been putting out feed and water for the birds, and I have been pleasantly surprised at the number that have been frequenting the spot. This sure beats walking around to study them, especially if you can observe them right from a window. We even have some small goldfinch with us. Life to these birds seems to be one huge song, they are forever singing and calling one another. We also have a few, very few, song sparrows too. The more you watch birds, the more you discover how much you don't know!

* * *

I had a reader call in the other day, after hearing the story of panthers in the district. He stated that near his cottage he has found numerous tracks of some animal. He thought they might have been lynx, until one evening he was called by his wife to come see "the big cat" that was around. He admitted, he almost threw a fit when he saw it. After perusing his animal book though, he could only find one species that even resembled it, and that was the panther. He seemed to have read up a lot on the habits of this animal too, so now he isn't so worried about it attacking anyone. He could not find any record of one attacking a human, unless the animal had been molested before. So read this and note; leave it alone!

* * *

As usual, some of the hunters are getting itchy fingers, starting to clean up their guns and so forth. This is good, at least they are not waiting till the last minute. And it could be they will save themselves a bad scare or even worse, by checking guns now. One of the boys told me of this instance: he had his gun parked in a cupboard, and someone (young son suspected) had jammed a nail right down into the barrel. Somehow it has become lodged in the action; he can't get it open to find out, either. I'm glad it's his worry, and not mine. He'll have to take the whole gun apart to remedy this — and this is the time the phone rings, or the mother-in-law comes calling; result — lost springs, bolts, and what have you.

There are also enquiries about blueing, right now. Guns stored in damp, humid places do get covered with rust, and in some of the older guns this is a real job to remove. You may even have to use a very fine steel wool, or a fine abrasive cloth; in either case don't spare the oil while doing it.

Fabulous 4-man softball team to play in Lachute

Arrangements have now been completed to present the sensational four-man softball team, courtesy of Mr. Gaston Laroche, local distributor for Molson's Brewery.

This unique team will play against a Lachute All-Star team, August 11, at 7 p.m., at the Ayers Recreation Centre.

Proceeds from the game will be donated to the Lions' Arena building fund. Tickets will be on sale this Friday, and will be available from Lions Club members, as well as from members of the Lachute All Stars.

A record crowd is expected to witness this exhibition. It is remembered that the same team played in Lachute two years ago, and more than 1,000 people were on hand to see the game.

It is anticipated that one of the players on the Molson team will be Doug Harvey, the all-time great defenceman of Montreal Canadiens.

Rotary Park proving popular spot; club activities and fund raising

The dam is full — the coffers empty — and then some.

Rotary Park is a very popular spot these days for young and old. With at least six feet of sparkling Laurentian water in a picturesque setting with picnic tables, a slide, swings, teeter-totter, raft, canteen and other facilities, the youngsters are in their glory.

Thursday's regular Rotary meeting, held at La Lorraine with President Tom Johnston in the chair, confined itself to business, special mention of the park, and Club plans for the coming year.

The regular singsong took place, with Wes Freeland at the piano, and Les Davies leading an enthusiastic enough group to warrant praise from the "Scot in the Chair" who likes to sing and hear hearty song.

The annual financial report, audited by Rotarian Bert Moore, C.A., was presented by Treasurer Raymond Underhill, with some discussion concerning details and the need for future fund raising.

The response to Dr. Rigby's fine book, "A History of Lachute", income from which he donated to the Rotary Club, has been disappointing. Every child, yes every person a native of the area, should know as much as possible about the history of his native soil — his or her community. The younger people should learn to be proud of it, and both young and old should be interested in making it a better place in which to live. Older residents can help by adding to the knowledge of the past that Dr. Rigby has recorded — not forgetting that the present will soon be history.

Speaking of the Park and history, the fact was mentioned that Supervisor Kent Tompkins had to rescue a young lad who swam too long in deep water. The safety record has been good, but it requires the continued support of parents, in accompanying and watching small children and insisting on the "buddy system" for the older ones.

The president mentioned the highlight programs for the next three months, and these, along with the fact that executive and committee meetings have taken place with good attendance, indicates an active and useful year ahead.

As one of more than 12,043 clubs in most countries of the free world, it is planned that Brownsburg-Lachute will do its part in this area to uphold the high standards for service set by Rotary International.

pple," he says. Though part f the lessons include the proper rt of falling off the horse, he sists that everyone wear a hard-opped hunt cap, in case of mis-ap.

The school supplies the rest of he equipment — all English sad-les. Pop, who stresses the Eng-ish style of pleasure riding, says hat western style is good fun, oo, but more dangerous in some ays.

Sooner or later everyone has he opportunity to participate in horse show, not only here in achute — where the Wal-Ken iders are noted for carting away he ribbons — but also at the Montreal, Ormstown and Ottawa hows.

Youngsters may come to the al-Ken Farm and pay only for day's riding, or may come on yearly basis. From the number ho cluster about the barn and ound the picnic table for lunch, here is no doubt most choose he latter way. The horses are idden all year round, and are ore frisky in the wintertime. ut, it's pretty cold on the der's feet", comments Lois Bil-ngham, Pop's 15-year-old, blonde-aired granddaughter, a rider since the age of five with a good number of ribbons to her credit.

Pop says the kids become so attached to the horses and ponies that he hates to sell any, if just to avoid the ensuing uproar.

On a typical day at the Billingham farm one could meet a number of young riders — 15-year-old Jane Campbell from Montreal might be seen brushing her horse, "Black Prince", while others sit around watching, laughing, talking and reading Pop's books on showmanship. Sharon Lowe, 16, whose own horse "Tea Biscuit" stays at the farm, states enthusiastically that she'll keep riding for the rest of her life.

The sentiment is echoed by the others — 14-year-old Dawn McCaskill, who recently acquired three second-place and one third-place ribbons at the Lachute Fair; Julie Paul, 12, who has been riding two years; Little Sherrie Finlayson, a one-year veteran, with long golden pigtails; and her dark-eyed friend, Barbara McMahon. Beverley Davies, with three years' riding experience, expresses the same enthusiasm. Beginner Candie Philipps brings a laugh when she tells of her quick descents from the horse's back. (She falls but keeps on going back for more.)

Some of the usual gang aren't there today — Brenda and Barbara McOuat, Carol and Gail Hannaford, Lydia Cassidy, Vicki and Cathi Milnes, Ann Gorman, Gail Johnson, Anne Evans and Gwenie Oswald — but they're as keen as the rest, says Pop.

Pop fairly beams as he points out his well-groomed horses, his sharply painted trucks, and as he speaks with his young riders. It's a lucky youngster who can spend the summer at the Wal-Ken Farm.

B.C. jet disaster victim – member of L. Louisa family

Dr. Wallace B. Emo, one of the two Montrealers in the doomed Canadian Pacific Airlines jet which claimed 52 lives in a crash in British Columbia last week, was well known in the Lake Louisa summer community, where his family have been seasonal residents for many years; and among skiers of the district, as he had for many years been active in the Canadian Ski Patrol System, and at the time of his death, was chairman of the Board of Directors of the National System.

Dr. Emo was in charge of exploration for Nicolet Asbestos Mine Ltd. His wife and three children have been spending the summer at Lake Louisa, and he left here for the Yukon Wednesday afternoon, the day before the tragic mid-air explosion.

The other Montrealer in the toll of dead was Ernest W. Soural, 32, a C.P.A. engineer based in Vancouver.

"Wally" Emo, as he was known to many acquaintances, had sold his home in Town of Mount Royal and was planning to move his family later this year to New Jersey. Born and educated in Montreal, he obtained his doctorate in Geology from McGill University. He travelled extensively in the course of his duties.

Miss Ethel Chapman, who went to Vancouver from Montreal in 1962, was a Salvation Army bookkeeper on a holiday trip aboard the fated C.P.A. jet plane that crashed in British Columbia. It was a co-incidence that her brother was occupying a summer cottage at Lake Louisa next door to the Emo residence, where the bereaved Mrs. Wallace Emo is residing for the season. They had no previous knowledge that they had relatives on the fated plane.

Beverly Sanford, Julian De Salis wed in Mont'l ceremony

The marriage of Beverly Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Sanford, of Lachute, to Mr. Julian De Salis, of Montreal, son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Sydney De Salis, of Somerset, England, took place recently in Knox Crescent and Kensington Presbyterian Church, Montreal, the Rev. Clifton J. MacKay, B.A., D.D., officiating. Mr. John G. Ringwood, M. Mus., played the wedding music and Mr. Douglas Best sang during the service. Standards of snapdragons, gladioli and daisy chrysanthemums and candles in candelabra were used to decorate the church.

The bride, given away by her father, was in a gown of ivory poult-de-soie, with a bodice appliquéd with re-embroidered Alençon lace and seed pearls, having a scoop neckline and elbow-length sleeves, and a skirt fashioned with a hemline edged in lace, falling into a chapel-length train. Her veil of tulle illusion was held by a matching headdress and she carried a semi-cascade of white roses, stephanotis and heather fern.

Mrs. John L. O'Brien, as matron of honor, Mrs. James G. Kirkland and Miss Eryka Seibert as bridesmaids, and Miss Robin Everall as junior bridesmaid, were in frocks of aurora gold silk, fashioned on empire lines. They wore petal rose headdresses of the same material and carried bouquets of large white daisies and small blue cornflowers.

Mr. Peter Everall acted as best man for the bridegroom, and the ushers were Maj. John Laing, Mr. John L. O'Brien and Mr. Jeremy Croggon.

Mrs. Sanford, the bride's mother, was in a gown of ballet blue Calais lace. She wore a matching organza hat, and a corsage bouquet of yellow Sweetheart roses. Mrs. De Salis, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of white and blue floral silk, with a matching organza hat, and a corsage bouquet of white orchids.

Following the ceremony, the reception was held at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, where bronze and yellow chrysanthemums were used as decorations.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. De Salis left by plane on their wedding trip to the Barbados, B.W.I., the bride travelling in an ensemble of cognac and beige silk, with bone accessories, and a corsage bouquet of cymbidium orchids. On their return, they will reside in Montreal.

Among the out-of-town guests were — Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Sydney De Salis, of Somerset, England; Mrs. Brinsley J. Brooks and Mr. Thomas Hartman, of London, England; Maj. John Laing, of Vancouver, B.C.; Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Seltmann, of Pottstown, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas J. Kaiser, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John R. Schaeffer, of Chicago, Ill.; also guests from Lachute, Knowlton, Lancaster and Ottawa.

First concert held this season at music centre

The first public concert of the CAMMAC Music Centre, at Lake Macdonald, was held last Friday evening, and although the program starred the Montreal baritone Jan Simons as a vocal feature, the recital was one of complete musical appeal.

Miss Miriam Samuelson, recorder specialist at the Camp, opened the concert with a Sonata in G Major by Loeillet, accompanied by Mr. George Little at the harpsicord, and Mario Duschenes with the flute. This sonata was in four movements, and the quality of performance was excellent.

Miss Samuelson was then accompanied by the cellist of the Reger Quartet from Germany, Mr. Thomas Kanitz, and Mr. Little, with four Elizabethan airs for the soprano and tenor recorders. These four compositions illustrated the wide scope of interpretation achieved by the recorder artist.

A Tellemann Cantata was the work featured by Mr. Jan Simons, who gave an English and French translation of the four movements, before singing them in German. Again, the soloist was accompanied by Mr. George Little and Mr. Duschenes.

The Reger String Quartet of Berlin, Germany, is a foursome of young artists of tremendous musical talent, who are specializing in the string-instrument teaching at the camp. They are Raimund Fleischer, 1st violin, Volker Sprang, 2nd violin, Eberhardt Klemmstein, viola, and Thomas Kanitz, cello. They rendered the Quartet in C Minor by Max Reger, a composition needing the dexterity of four well-trained artists, and the audience gave them a tremendous acclaim for their rendition.

The concert next Friday will feature Mario Duschenes, flautist, with Miss Miriam Samuelson, recorder, Miss Ragacé, harpsicord, and the Reger Quartet performing Haydn, Bach, Mozart and Telemann. These concerts attract many lakeside residents to the scene, and music lovers in the Lachute vicinity would also appreciate these Montreal professionals in their fine performances.

WHITE CANE IS NEW

Religious aspects of Centennial viewed at conf'ce

Ottawa — A conference, unprecedented in Canada's history, was held in Ottawa July 6, when more than 70 representatives of 24 religious denominations and groups met to discuss and survey the possibilities of joint planning for the religious aspect of Canada's Centennial Year.

The one-day conference was opened with an address by John Fisher, Centennial Commissioner: "We are people of many races, colors and creeds who give life to the Canadian personality, and certainly there is no sounder approach to the 20 millions living in this vast land than through their places of worship" he said.

The Honorable Maurice Lamontagne, Secretary of State and minister responsible for Centennial affairs, was guest speaker at a luncheon held for the delegates. "I dare to believe that today you will be able to devise methods and techniques which will ensure that in our Centennial year some project or undertaking will reflect in a dignified, worshipful and inspiring manner the contribution religious experience and practice make to our country".

EDITORIAL PAGE

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

As others see us

FROM THE VIEWPOINT of driver safety, let's face it, there are some definitely questionable traffic-ways in this area. We, who know and frequent them, are most probably ignorant of the hazards they present. Familiarity breeds — not contempt, perhaps — but unawareness, and in the name of human consideration, it behooves us to place ourselves in the stranger's seat and see our roads as others see them.

For every scene of recurring accidents, apart from human malfunction, inebriation, or slow reaction, there must be a geographical reason. It should be the duty of traffic authorities to investigate, and highway engineers to remove, these physical hazards without delay. To the utmost of our ability let's make our highways, signs and markings foolproof. For only with this realistic approach, by eliminating the structural causes, can we dogmatically blame all accidents on human or mechanical faults.

A letter to the editor last week drew attention to this possibility, of which local drivers are quite unaware — that our highway markings may be inadequate. In our blindness to the situation, and lack of protest, we may indeed have contributed to the deaths which we so gravely deplore. Simon's Crossing has been one such spot for a generation of drivers, but only now is it receiving the attention it requires.

The fatal scene which prompted the query of this recent letter, was the junction of Routes 8 and 8-A at Grenville. Apart from any human misjudgment, are the markings sufficiently clear? Let our traffic police investigate now, and decide. We can think of other places, too. . .

Not far from this junction, near Vachon's Corner on Route 8, a dividing line indicates that passing is permitted, on the assumption that an eastbound driver can see over the hump. However, we discovered just lately that a motorist short in stature can not see ahead, and in passing runs the risk of meeting opposing traffic. Therefore, it seems reasonable there should be a solid double line, to prohibit passing. This, by the way, has been the vicinity of many mishaps over the years. . . In another case, strangers approaching Lachute from Bethany Street not infrequently hesitate, or stop, in the busy flow of traffic, doubtless wondering "Where next?". . . What's wrong here? Signs inadequate? Insufficient warning?

It is up to us to scrutinize our road facilities from the stranger's viewpoint. And where something is lacking, let's make it known emphatically to the authorities.

Consumers pay more, farmers get less

CANADIAN FARMERS, who have long complained about the spread between farm prices and those the consumer pays for food, have even more to complain about these days.

Although consumers are paying more for food, the producers' share of the food dollar is getting less. And the farmer finds himself squeezed between rising production costs and almost stationary returns.

It's not the food you pay for so much as the processing.

As an extreme example, take the case of potato chips, at 49 cents a nine-ounce bag. Retail price of potatoes in this form works out to about $1,700 a ton, although the farmer is lucky if he gets $100 a ton for his spuds.

There may not be as much of a spread in the price of other foods. But farmers get angry when they see their products selling in the store at even two or three times what the producer was paid for them.

The housewife can be blamed for much of the price spread. She demands washed vegetables, graded fruit, fancy containers, fast-frozen poly-wrapped creations which bear little resemblance to the original products of the field. And it all costs money that goes into the pocket of the processor, not the farmer.

Faced with a decreasing share of the consumer's food dollar, and rising production costs, farmers have only one way out — improve their production methods and decrease their costs.

Charles grows up

THREE YEARS AGO, when it was announced that Prince Charles would attend Gordonstoun, the Scottish boys' school where his father was educated, the Duke of Bedford's 17-year-old son said: "My heart bleeds for Charles."

His point was that it was a tough school with an emphasis on self-discipline and leadership in an atmosphere of cold showers, bare wooden tables, bare feet hitting the floor at 7:05 each morning, and lots of outdoor activity.

Lord Russell, the philosopher, was quoted as saying: "It will make the poor devil a man, if he can stick it out."

The heir to the throne is 16 years old now, and it's apparent he has the backbone to stick it out, even though, as he admitted at his first royal garden party the other day, he failed two of seven exams.

He has had some interesting experiences at Gordonstoun. For example, when he was a word leaked out that he had been seen drinking brandy in a shore hotel while on a week-long cruise in the school yacht Pinta.

Charles was presumably punished for this but it was never disclosed whether he was given the traditional caning. All the headmaster would say was: "I have now dealt with the matter, and as far as I and the school are concerned the incident is closed."

Last fall there was another fuss when some school essays turned up in a West German newspaper. It was reported that Charles had sold his notebook to a school chum because he wanted some extra money, but this was later denied by Buckingham Palace. In any case, the essays showed Charles to have an independent turn of mind. Among other things, he defended newspapers' right to publish critical and even embarrassing comments on public figures — an issue which has had bearings on his Royal parent, Prince Philip, just this past week.

Around the same time, several newspapers suggested he had adopted a Beatle haircut, to which he replied: "Beatle haircut, nothing. I was wearing my hair the way I do before the Beatles were heard of." Which is true.

Prince Charles will be in the public eye for many years to come, but it's already evident that he's not likely to be a dull, uninteresting person, either as prince or king.

Some may feel that he's not always as dignified as his station would demand, but there are others who find a certain appeal in his image as a real boy. Dignity may come later. But for the present he seems to be acting as any 16-year-old might be expected to act. And that suggests he is probably developing into a lively, personable young man — a sort of thinking man's prince.

The herd instinct

MOB ACTION and demonstrations in favor of or against something, are becoming increasingly frequent these days, even in Canada, where the national boiling point is fairly high. Couple these with the usual hoodlum element which kicks over the traces Saturday nights or on national holidays at beach resorts, and we have more than the usual headaches for policemen of the nation.

It's surprising how little courage it takes to resist a policeman when the odds are five or ten to one. In fact, most cases of mob violence are attributable to the fact that normal cowards become suddenly brave when fortified by strong drink and carried along by a rampaging mob.

Much of today's juvenile delinquency is caused by aggregations, rather than individuals. While lone-wolf criminals are apt to be psychotic, those who run amuck in the company of others can be quite ordinary people. It's probably the herd instinct.

Short of calling in the army, the authorities are hard put to cope with mob violence.

Even smaller incidents may be difficult to deal with because of the chronic shortage of police officers, and cases of policemen being roughed up are becoming more frequent.

Before it becomes any more difficult for the forces of the law to deal with the situation, the public and the courts must act to curb hoodlum attacks on police officers. The only effective method is to increase the size of police forces and hand out stiffer penalties to those convicted of taking part in mob action.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

We're Cool Toward Heat

Year after year, we moan about the bitter winter, or dreary fall, or the backward spring . . . until July and August, when we take the rare-felt heat as a personal affront, and whine increasingly.

Along about the first part of July, we usually get a little whiff of that hot weather we've been looking forward to since Christmas. Nothing torrid. Just a little breath of warmth that a native of the tropics would sneer at. So what do we do? Do we cast off our long-handled underwear and burn it in the streets? Do we have a big welcome party for genial old Sol?

Not we. We totter around complaining even more bitterly than we did all winter. We adopt a harassed air. If we live in the city, we dash from one tomb-like air-conditioned building to another, inevitably catching a wicked summer cold in the process. We greet each other with anguished groans and that old folk-saying, "Hot nuff fer yuh?"

Some idiots try to fight fire with firewater. With remarkable ease they convince themselves that a long cool one is the only way to beat the heat. Which is about as effective as trying to put out a small blaze by pouring gasoline on it.

Others have an even more silly solution. Their idea of getting away from the heat is to hit the highway, drive for four hours in extreme discomfort to a beach where they lie baking with similar sweaty citizenry, before retiring to sleep in a cabin like a steam bath.

Most of the preceding remarks have to do with the male population, poor devils. I must admit that women and children stand up to the heat better. Big reason, of course, is their attire, or lack of it.

Small fry have less clothing on them in this weather than there is in the handkerchief their old man totes around in his hip pocket. Women, whose name is vanity, are interested in acquiring a tan, so expose every possible inch and ounce to the dazed gaze of the men. Women's summer garments are a delight to the eye, and the ultimate in common sense. Maybe that's why ladies don't sweat, but just perspire.

Not so the men. Unless they're on their holidays, they face the heat with a surly lack of compromise that would be admirable, were it not stupid. Most of them wear the same clothes in summer as in winter, except for an overcoat. The odd one will take off his jacket. A few sneakily remove their ties. And the wild individual will roll up his shirt-sleeves when it hits a hundred.

But that's about as far as they'll go. The vast majority of men wear wool socks, heavy leather shoes, long trousers of wool or flannel, and the same shirts they wear in January.

One more thing that makes a man miserable in the heat is the amount of junk he has to carry in his pantspockets. In cool weather he can spread it around in jacket and overcoat pockets. But when he has only trousers pockets in which to carry cigarettes, lighter, handkerchief, coins, car keys, pen, notebook, pipe and tobacco, golf tees, sinkers and about 50 other essentials, he looks about the shape of an old tree, covered with fungus.

Hot weather is not for men. They should all be given about six weeks off in the summer, while the scantily clad women and kids keep things going. The men won't be happy until they sniff the first nip of fall in the air, and can start grumbling about the cold, and what it costs to heat the place.

We'll Still Have To Work

A few weeks ago in this column, I suggested we may be nearing the day when it will be profitable for society to guarantee the incomes of workers displaced by automation.

A Canadian scientist has written to challenge some of my comments. Because I found his remarks enlightening, I have obtained his permission to quote from his letter, although he wishes to remain anonymous. He writes:

"Automation is not a new method of industrial production. It is a new vogue word used by commentators to make their writings appear up-to-date.

"Man's first machines increased his rate of doing work. Two centuries ago the boy who opened and closed the valves at the right moment to cause steam power to pump water from English coal mines was fired when it was shown that a contrivance of wheels and rods could do the job better.

"Ever since then we have strived to make machines automatic, and automatic lathes were in use in the 1930s. But the verb 'to automate' came much later. All this seems to prove is that those who talk about industrial production are a long way behind those who are in it.

"Improved technology increases productivity per man hour, and it also makes possible new products. The result is to improve both the quality and quantity of the goods and services available to us. Technology is the prime factor in the economy.

"New technologies give man an economic choice. He may cut working hours while maintaining old standards, or he may work the old hours and enjoy the full increase in quantity and quality inherent in the use of new methods. So far he has always chosen to compromise. Working hours per week have always declined. The standard of living has always risen.

"Man has always used his machines to raise his standard of living even while he is reducing his working hours. To say that man competes with the machine is to misunderstand that it is the man with the fast machine who competes with the man with the slower machine.

"To say that the machine competes with man for jobs is to ignore the fact that, during the period of most intense automation — the last eight years — jobs for men have increased and our percentage unemployment is low and falling.

"All classes of men in our society have always derived increasing benefits from the use of new machines, and there is no evidence to suggest that they won't continue to do so. The rich get richer and the poor get richer.

"At present we give the economic failures (those on welfare) a standard of living about half that of productive people. To argue that those who produce would be better off if they shared more equally with those who do not is a position I do not deign to attack.

"If a machine society is one in which machines do most of the work while masses of men play or idle, then there is no evidence at all that such a society is near, or even that we are approaching it.

"So am I arguing that everything is rosy and all men get their just reward? Not quite.

"We have not yet succeeded in separating the fate of the child from the incompetence of the parent. But, slowly, we are reshaping our society so that every infant has an opportunity for development that is not limited by the poverty of the parent. When this democratic goal is reached the chief fault in the private enterprise system will have been remedied.

The above letter certainly touches on the crux of the problem facing our society today, and that is of ensuring that our children are equipped to compete in a highly technical world.

4-H Calf Club judging team wins competition

The Lachute 4-H Calf Club judging team came out on top over some 15 other clubs in Western Quebec, from Argenteuil to Pontiac Counties. The team members were Bobby Rodger, André St. Pierre, Truman Clark and Arthur McElroy. The top two, who will go to the Quebec Exhibition in Quebec City in September, are Bobby Rodger and André St. Pierre.

The competition was held at the Redemptorist Fathers' Farm in Aylmer, Que., last Thursday, where they judged three classes — one each of Ayrshire, Holstein and Hereford cows. Bobby Rodger won a total of 333 points out of a possible 400, while André St. Pierre scored 332. Truman Clark made 331 points and Arthur McElroy's score was 325.

The top two Lachute boys made a team total of 665 points. The Rupert Club placed second, winning 650 points, while St. André d'Avellin, with 633 points, placed third.

Special prizes were also given to the winners. Bobby Rodger received a cheque for $12 for getting the highest individual score and for being on the highest winning team. André St. Pierre also received $4 for being on the top team. For scoring the highest number of points in the written exam on general agriculture, André also received 50 lbs. of Master Calf Feed, as well as another 50 lbs. of Shur-Gain Calf Feed for the highest number of points in the Ayrshire Class. Truman Clark won $12 worth of fly and pest control powder, donated by the Howard Chemical Co., for winning the highest number of points in the Holstein Class.

The team of Bobby Rodger and André St. Pierre will now be training for the provincial competition in Quebec City, and the winners there will go to the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto. The team wish to express appreciation for the training they received from Ross Oswald, the Club Leader; Jean St. Pierre, assistant leader; and Gerard Tremblay, the local Agronome.

Canada — Real Camera Country

Each summer a large proportion of Canada's population piles into automobiles, buses, trains and planes and moves over to another section of the country for a change of scenery.

So big is this country we could do this every year for the next twenty-five and see something new each summer. Quite a project to catch on film!

Few of us are interested in building our own national archives in terms of pictures, but we would all like such travel shots to be a little better, a little special. Something more than the usual snapshot of the family lined up in front of the car with a cloud flecked sky above. This may be a spot overlooking the lovely Bow Valley in the Rockies, but for all the viewer can see, it was taken back home!

We like pictures of the family in fresh settings, but let the scene dominate the picture. Study the viewfinder, arrange the scenery in that little glass rectangle to your desire, then casually group the family some ten to fifteen feet away to one side, or toward a corner of the frame.

We have the scene, the familiar figures, each complementing the other, a shot that has beauty, yet says "We were there!"

Equipment for vacation picture-taking need not be complex. Photography shouldn't dominate a vacation trip, merely record it. The snapshot camera, or automatic color slide or movie camera, will catch every shot you want without fuss or trouble. Lots of film, a keen eye for good pictures — these are the things that count!

Plan ahead, obtain from provincial tourist bureaus all the brochures they can offer on the places you will visit. You will not only have firm ideas about what you want to see, but what you should photograph. And this pre-planning switches the whole vacation into a smooth overdrive both photographically and from a travel point of view.

In movies and slide sets, make a point of shooting identifying signs at special locales. These can be used as titles in your finished presentations.

Travelling by car? Keep your camera handy for things of interest that may suddenly appear, and remember, if something is worth photographing, it is worth stopping for!

Keep cameras and film in a cool place in the car. The glove compartment and the rear window shelf don't qualify! Inside a case on the floor is a good spot or on the seat in the shade.

Canada has everything to offer. Scenery, festivals, sports events and colorful pageantry. Don't let your camera pass it up this summer!

Camp Adventure

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Camp is a real adventure and "the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts". What finer expression of the idealism which stirs within campers at a good camp on "High Occasions" can be found than in this "Code for Campers?"

"We Aim . . .
To live out the things we believe,
To have a sincere care for all people,
To be disciplined in all we do,
To see the job that needs to be done, and carry it through,
To be constructive in our thinking and speaking,
To learn to work in a group,
To be willing to recognize and to correct our faults,
To study and work for sound homes, united communities and a peaceful world."

(Written by the "Crees" or Senior girls at Camp Tanamiboon, Algonquin Park.)

"To camp — or not to camp — that is the question in countless homes where boys and girls are eager to go to camp. "It's such fun!" they chorus.

A summer camp adventure for a boy or girl has become an accepted holiday pattern in thousands of Canadian families. But with rising camp fees, accompanied by the higher cost of living, many parents are wavering about camp this summer.

The younger generation show no signs of doubting the value of camp! They just know they will learn to swim and dive a lot better. "Jim can handle a canoe just like an Indian since he went to camp — and did he ever pick up some smart fishing tips!" Helen, who is an only child, says a bit wistfully, "Betty just raves about camp being such a friendly place. The girls had a marvellous time in their cabin group."

A good camp benefits the whole child — body, mind and spirit. It is not just a place for recreation, or the growth of a boy's or girl's total character and physique.

A child's or youth's enthusiasm for a particular camp where he has summered is likely to be as ardent as his loyalty for his own school. There is a great satisfaction in meeting old friends again and returning to familiar haunts. It is quite possible that the camp your child loves, even if it costs quite a bit, is worth every cent at the present stage in his development.

But if increased camp fees make this particular camp really beyond the amount of money the family can devote to it, why not consider another camp where the rates are not quite so high? This would seem a better solution than cutting out camp completely. There are good camps in the different price ranges in most areas.

What is your idea of a "good camp"? Every parent will have a different answer — but they all want to be very sure their child will be well cared for and happy. My husband and I want to be very sure that the camp our boy or girl goes to is a safe place, that adequate provision is made for nourishing food and sufficient rest, that the camp director and staff have some of the same ideals for the campers that we have for our children.

We would like to feel confident that our child will be happy at camp, swimming and diving and boating, and trying out fresh hobbies and making new friends. Discreet inquiries made to parents of last year's campers satisfy or disillusion a father or mother about the true quality of a camp!

Camp has all kinds of values for different campers, meeting their own special need and helping them grow. As a counsellor four years and as a director for six, we saw very clearly that although the contribution camp life made to some youngsters was much more vital than to others, with very, very few exceptions they all seemed to receive benefit from it. A camper can echo Ulysses' sentiment in Tennyson's poem.

"All experience is an arch where through
Gleams the untravelled world whose margin fades
Forever and forever as I move."

Legal status of married women in Quebec

Quebec — To meet a heavy public demand for the Government's booklet on the "Legal Capacity of Married Women in Quebec", the Quebec Information and Publicity Bureau has just reprinted the French edition, and published its first English edition in 10,000 copies.

Some subjects dealt with in the publication are: authority over the family, freedom to make a will, right to engage in a separate profession, right to dispose of property, action for separation from bed and board, removal of wife's "minority" status, and paternal authority.

Over sixty percent of married women in Quebec live under the regime of separation as to property. From now on, a Quebec wife will enjoy full legal capacity, subject only to such restrictions as may arise from the community of property regime under which her capacity is limited by her husband's powers as administrator of the community property.

Requests for the publication from individuals, associations and groups should be made to: Documentation Division, Quebec Information and Publicity Bureau, 90, Côte de la Montagne, Quebec.

Join us for a patio picnic

How enjoyable to parcel up lunch or supper and move out to the garden or patio! Appetites grow bigger and the food always tastes better somehow. To make it easier on everyone concerned, here's a tip — pack lunches into individual wicker baskets, main course and dessert, and accompany with tall glasses of cold milk. You're assured of hearty approval, especially if each basket boasts one or two Corned Beef Buns. In its own inimitable fashion Canadian cheddar cheese spices up this crunchy filling, stuffed into hot dog rolls. Serves as a reminder too, for that same cheese can do wonders to some of your other summer sandwich fillings. For dessert, ice cream is a natural, served up individually and accompanied with fruit and cookies for nibbling.

Fruit shortcake seasonal treat for dessert

The small fruit such as strawberries, blueberries and raspberries make dessert time a treat, especially when there's a shortcake on the menu.

There are many interesting variations in making shortcakes. The following delicious recipes are suggested by the home economists of the Consumer Section at Ottawa.

Strawberry Shortcake

"This is the old-fashioned biscuit-type shortcake — economical and easy to make."

2 Cups sifted all-purpose flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, ¼ cup butter, ¾ cup milk less 1 tabespoon.

1 Quart box strawberries, ¼ cup sugar, ½ pint whipping cream, 2 tablespoons sugar.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in butter with a pastry blender until mixture resembles fine breadcrumbs. Make a well, pour in all the milk at one time and mix quickly to make a soft but not sticky dough. Turn onto a lightly floured board, quickly form into a ball, then knead for 30 seconds by pressing and folding dough several times. Shape dough in one of the three following ways:

1. Roll dough lightly to an 8-inch round and place in a lightly greased 8-inch layer cake pan.

2. Divide dough in half, then roll each half to an 8-inch round. Place one half in a lightly greased 8-inch layer cake pan, brush top lightly with melted butter, then place second round on top.

3. Roll dough lightly to about ¾-inch thickness. Cut in 2½-inch rounds with biscuit cutter. Place on baking sheet.

Bake in a hot oven (425°F.) until lightly browned, allowing 15 to 20 minutes for cakes, 12 to 15 minutes for biscuits.

Meanwhile wash and hull strawberries. Reserve 8 choice berries for garnish. Slice remainder, add the ¼ cup sugar and stir to mix.

Split cake or biscuits crosswise while warm, butter surface and immediately spread berries between layers and on top. Cover with whipped cream sweetened with remaining sugar and garnish with whole berries. 8 Servings.

Glamour Shortcake

Make your favorite biscuit or sponge cake shortcake base in a single pan. Split, spread with crushed fruit, put together and ice with a fluffy meringue. Bake in a moderately slow oven, 325°F., until the meringue is delicately browned. Serve with additional fruit.

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

It is believed that wheat began its life as a wild grass in south-eastern Asia or north-eastern Africa. It probably has been cultivated about 7,000 years. There are pictures of wheat traced on the tombs of ancient Egypt.

It was brought to this continent by the Spaniards, who introduced it in Mexico in about 1530. It was first grown in Canada in about 1605, in a little settlement in Nova Scotia which now is Annapolis Royal.

Wheat came to Western Canada as seed carried by the Selkirk settlers who left Scotland and began farming at the junction of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers, in 1813.

Began Shipping

Before the end of the century, Canadian wheat was finding a market in Britain. The first shipment was sent in 1879, by way of the Red River to St. Paul and Minneapolis and then by rail to the Atlantic.

In 1884 the first shipment went by an all-Canadian route, by rail to Port Arthur, lake freighter and rail to the seaboard and finally by ocean freighter to Glasgow.

Canada now harvests about 27,000,000 acres of wheat with a yield averaging about 600,000,000 bushels and valued at about $1,000,000,000.

An information pamphlet put out by a Canadian bakery chain notes that wheat is grown in all parts of the world, and, as a result, wheat is being harvested in some area in every month of the year.

The Canadian harvest is one of several in August. In January, Australia, New Zealand and Chile harvest their wheat. Northern countries such as Scotland, Sweden, Norway and north Russia harvest in September and October.

Once Stone-Ground

The earliest flour mill was a stone, used to pound wheat into a form of flour. The next stage was a hand mill which crushed wheat between two stones. Later, larger models were driven by horses or mules.

The Romans developed a water mill, the Dutch a windmill for greater power to do the grinding. When steam engines were doing the work, the capacity of mills was increased hugely.

In 1873 flour was first produced in a mill using steel rollers instead of grinding stones. In modern mills all of the grinding is done by steel rollers.

The Egyptians are also credited with inventing the oven, because they were the first people to eat leavened bread which could not be baked over an open fire.

Brantford, Ont. (CP) — The half-century-old custom of collecting a $10 poll tax from Brantford bachelors who do not pay city taxes has been abolished as a nuisance, discriminatory and productive of the least revenue for the collecting work involved. Cook-out contest ends at State Fair

A "first" for pork, a new and novel program of cookery competition is scheduled in Illinois this summer. All-male outdoor cooking competitions will be held in counties throughout the state, with winners going to the Illinois State Fair for final competition.

The county contests will be sponsored by the more than 30 county pork producers associations. All males over 12 are eligible to try their hand at preparing their favorite pork recipes. It is hoped the contests will not only serve as a showplace for the "chefing" ability of the men in the family, but also will benefit pork producers by helping make pork more popular.

Points for judging will be — taste; tenderness; appetizing appearance; originality of meat cut used including selection, preparation and difficulty of preparation; technique of contestant and his showmanship.

Make the most of strawberries

Strawberry Puffs

½ Cup butter, ½ cup all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 cups milk, 4 eggs, ½ cup sugar, 4 cups sliced, sweetened strawberries (1 quart box), ½ cup whipping cream (whipped).

Melt butter in a saucepan. Remove from heat and blend in flour and salt. Gradually add milk, stirring until smooth. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture has boiled 1 minute and is very thick. Let cool 15 minutes. Beat in eggs one at a time until well blended. Pour batter into 2 layer cake pans (9-inch) which have been greased and lined on sides and bottom with greased wax paper. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) 35 to 40 minutes until puffed and golden.

Turn layers out on serving dish and remove wax paper with a sharp, pointed knife. Sprinkle each layer with 2 tablespoons of sugar. Arrange 1 cup strawberries on half of each layer, fold other half over berries omelet fashion. Top each "puff" with remaining berries. Serve warm with whipped cream. 6 Servings.

Strawberry Surprise Cake

1 Pint box strawberries, 2 to 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 angel food cake (8-inch diameter), ½ pint whipping cream (whipped), few drops red food coloring (optional).

Wash and hull strawberries. Keep 6 to 8 whole berries for garnish. Slice remainder and sprinkle with sugar.

Cut a ½ inch slice off top of cake and set aside. With a sharp pointed knife hollow out central portion of cake to form a "shell", leaving ¾-inch cake around all edges. Break portion of cake removed from centre in bite sized pieces.

Fold sweetened strawberries and cake pieces into ½ cup of the whipped cream. Fill hollow in cake with strawberry mixture and replace top slice.

Tint remaining whipped cream a delicate pink if desired and spread over cake. Garnish with whole strawberries and chill until ready to serve. 6 Servings.

Oldsters reminisce, give glimpses of life in Argenteuil long years ago

Specially Contributed by Norman Thorburn

I have always found that the appetite of The Watchman readers for new or little-known stories about Argenteuil's past, is insatiable. A couple of readers of our local newspaper approached me recently, and asked me if I would write a biographical sketch of the lives of Eddie and Sarah Morrison.

I am no longer young, I have passed by 60th birthday. But Eddie Morrison was a soldier, a lumberjack, farmer, trapper and hunter, almost 20 years old, before my mother was born.

Eddie and Sarah Morrison are presently dwelling at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Thompson. We were kindly permitted to seek an interview with these aged folks, by Lester and his wife, Jessie.

We found the old couple in very pleasant surroundings in an upper room. It was with a feeling of veneration that I grasped the palm of this ancient forester, and his sister Sarah.

Sarah Morrison, aged 97, and her brother, Edward Morrison, aged 99.

Eddie Morrison was born in Shrewsbury, Argenteuil, Lower Canada — yes Lower Canada, for Confederation had not yet taken place, on March 4, 1866. He will be 100 years old next March 4. Sarah will be 98 next May. In April, 1967, the year of the centenary of Confederation, the combined ages of this brother and sister will be 200 years.

As a young man, Eddie worked two summers on the Soulanges Canal, and two winters in the Michigan woods. He was only 16 years of age when he joined the 11th Battalion or Argenteuil Rangers. He owned a sawmill at The Glen, near Shrewsbury, 75 years ago. He had 16 teams of horses and a logging camp, until 50 years ago.

He would sell his horses to George and John Hay. John Hay used to take boatloads of horses to England, and carloads to Western Canada, and sell them for his brother George, the chief horse-dealer.

Eddie Morrison remembers Phineas Lane, who also bought horses. Phineas used to own the Banford store, near the Protestant Cemetery. He had his home at the present Mackie place and had a large horse stable there.

In Eddie's boyhood the business section of Lachute was situated around the Protestant Cemetery. His salary as a soldier was 50 cents a day while in training. The training was done at Carillon.

His father had to go often on horseback through the bush. His grandfather, Henry Morrison, brought his wife and children out from Ireland, and was one of the first settlers in Shrewsbury.

People used to travel on horseback over the hills and through the bush from Shrewsbury to Morin Heights. Beautiful Lake Anne was no barrier. When the horseman came to Lake Anne, he would urge his steed into the water. The horse would swim, with its rider on its back, over the broad expanse of this beautiful Laurentian lake, to the trail that led to Morin Heights.

James Woods was a man of herculean strength over a hundred years ago. He would walk from Morin Heights to Lachute, throw a hundred pounds of flour on his back, and tramp back to Morin Heights!

Sandy Arnott had a flour mill in Lakefield, near the present store there.

The people of Argenteuil consumed lots of buckwheat pancakes in those early days. I have been told also that they ate lots of "Johnny cake" made from the long cobs of Indian corn. The French-Canadians favored this variety of food; they had learned how to make it from the Indians, who baked corn meal on hot flat stones.

Before Ed Morrison's day there were no cross-cut saws, and all work in the bush was done with an axe and broad-axe for squaring timber. There were no circular saws either, and all logs were sawn with an up-and-down saw, which worked like a drag saw.

Eddie Morrison used to square pine logs with a broad-axe. These squared logs were taken to Carillon; they were made into rafts and went down the Ottawa River to Montreal, then by boat to England.

He took logs to Newton's mill, and later to John Peat's, a later proprietor of the same mill at Lakefield. He took the lumber to Lafleur's mill at Lachute and sold it for $8 a thousand feet.

Eddie first went to school 93 years ago. His father told him that, when he went to school at Shrewsbury, the children often had to crawl on their hands and knees through the deep snow, to get to their place of learning.

Eddie shot 12 partridges one morning, and sold them at the Gatehouse store in Montreal for $3 each. His mother used to make 30 tubs of butter, and his father would take these to Montreal with a team. His mother's assistant was a huge Newfoundland dog, which would climb up on a tread-mill that ran a dog churn, and in this manner churned the cream into butter. When the dog saw that the milking was done, he would run to the churn, climb up on the treadmill and make the machine go, even before the cream was poured into the churn!

The treadmill of an old dog churn remains as a reminder of the past on this very farm. It belonged to Samuel Hills, who owned the farm before 1883. But in the case of Hills, the tanner's dog would run away when milking time came, and it took some time to find him, to do his stint of work on the treadmill.

When feed was scarce many of the pioneers' cows would die in the northern parts of this county. This occurred mostly towards the end of winter, in the month of March when food was scarcest. The farmers would carry loads of balsam boughs to feed the cows in the spring, to keep them alive. And the dead animals would be skinned for their hides.

Jim Gall, the uncle of the late Mossman Gall, was a clerk in Meikle's store.

A minister named Mr. Griffin was instrumental in having the first church built in Lakefield. He was the first minister in Gore Township.

L. O. Armstrong was the Anglican minister in Lakefield, when Eddie and Sarah Morison were young. He was very clever, and was a government land agent as well, selling land out west to anybody that wanted it. Their father voted for the Hon. J. C. Abbott.

Indians used to come and hunt and fish on the lakes.

Eddie's mother told him that grey trout, weighing 40 pounds, and 4 feet long, had sometimes been caught in the lakes around Shrewsbury when she was a young girl. These huge trout would even pull a man into the lake at times, when they were hooked.

Eddie and Sarah's uncle, Jimmie, would often catch 20 mink in the fall and six otters; he would receive $10-$12 for the mink skins, and $30 for the otter.

Jim Morrison was the Daniel Boone of the country north of Lachute. People still tell of his feats. I myself have heard of them long ago. He is part of the folklore of the northern part of Argenteuil County.

He was known by the sobriquet of "Bear" Morrison; no fewer than 56 ursine marauders were destroyed by this man. When people's sheep were killed by bears, when their oats were being eaten by bears, they would call on "Bear" Morrison's help. If he couldn't shoot the bear, he would trap it. He would set a gun with a tight string attached to the trigger where he knew the bear would pass, and as often as not, the maurader would brush against the string and kill itself.

To make potash, people used to cut maple and ash trees, place the trees in windrows, burn them, collect the ashes, place the ashes in a square box, and dissolve out the alkali or potash by leaching the ashes (pouring water on them). They would then boil the water.

The bricks in Mr. Wm. Cottingham's home on Bethany Street came from Hughie Mitchell's brickyard on Lebert Hume's farm. Lester Thompson tells me that when Hughie Mitchell was making brick 80 or 85 years ago, he got a gasoline engine to help him in his operations. Hughie ordered two 45-gallon drums of gasoline from Montreal. The men at the station were so frightened of the gasoline, that it was only after much persuasion that they assisted Mr. Mitchell in loading his gas. They thought it might explode at any minute.

Small eagles were seen occasionally in the northern parts of this county, their wings spreading up to 9 feet, in olden times.

Miss Sarah Morrison went to the Lachute Fair, in a spring cart, for the first time over 90 years ago. They called it the Lachute Cattle Show then. The Canadian cart was also a commonly used vehicle.

Their sister, Isabella Morrison, was the mother of Nat Boyd, founder and president of that rapidly-expanding trucking enterprise called Boyd's Express.

Lester sold three coonskins to Mr. Morrison many years ago, for $45. Lester and his brother-in-law, Oswald Thompson, also sold him many fox skins.

In olden days, the people working in the maple syrup business used wooden spouts. These were made from the wood of the sumach tree or shrub. Syrup was made in a big iron pot, hung up by chains in a shanty in the bush.

We four — the Morrisons, Lester and I — then engaged in reminiscences about old-time corn-husking and quilting bees. After the corn-husking was done the evening was spent in dancing and merriment.

* * *

When I think of Eddie Morrison's life, spent close to the bosom of Mother Nature, I pity those people who pass their days hundreds of feet above the roaring traffic of Montreal, in offices piled one on top of the other like rabbit hutches — those whose hardest manual exercise is to push a pen. Such was not Nature's plan for man. Nature has rewarded Eddie and Sarah Morrison, by extending their lives to the limits of longevity. They breathed the cool mountain air, redolent with the odor of pine and balsam, spruce, cedar and hemlock. For at least most of their lives, they were spared the smoke and soot, fumes of diesel and gas engines, the enervating and exciting lives of city dwellers.

Of course, life in the country can be exciting enough, too. One day Eddie Morrison was working in the bush, alone, when a wolf let out an unearthly howl right in front of him. Dusk was coming on, the afternoon was far spent, and Eddie couldn't see the wolf. Nor did he stop to look; he ran to his boat, crossed the lake and headed for home.

Annual picnic for sightless residents

The annual picnic for the sightless people of Argenteuil was held Wednesday, July 7, at the Brownsburg Rotary Park. The refreshments for this annual event were provided by the Women's Auxiliary to the CNIB, and the recreation program was also looked after by the Auxiliary. Cash prizes were distributed to every blind person present at the picnic.

The drawing sponsored by the CNIB Auxiliary was held, and winner of the 1st prize, a $50 bond, was Master Martin Billingham, Lachute; the consolation prize of $10 was won by Mrs. A. J. McMillan, of Ottawa. The ladies wish to thank all who contributed to this drawing, the proceeds of which are used to assist the Institute, also to help the sightless of this district.

The Institute is grateful to the following who donated to the picnic: J. R. Desjardins, Jas. P. MacKimmie & Sons Ltd., Lowe Bros. Dairy and Maitland Bros. Thanks are also due to the volunteer drivers, Mrs. R. Elkington, Mrs. K. Clarke, Mrs. George Lowe, Mrs. C. Lowe, Mr. L. Morrin, Mr. Richard Paulsen and Mme L. Demers.

There's musical gold in those hills!

CAMMAC Music Centre offers a richness beyond the expectations of its members

(By a staff observer)

Sitting neatly in the vale of Lake MacDonald in the County of Argenteuil, the CAMMAC Music Centre (Canadian Amateur Musicians) is enjoying its 13th season. Back in 1953, George and Carl Little, of Montreal, conceived the idea of starting a summer musical camp, and from modest beginnings it has developed into a bi-cultural and almost tri-lingual training centre, as practically all courses are conducted in English and French, while choral groups have Bach cantatas in German.

The richness of this centre may be found in the happy leadership of the directorate, and the response of the students, both young and old. As one approaches the picturesque setting of the Centre at White Forest Lodge, the sound of music reaches the ears from many directions . . . violins are being tuned and played by one tenting family, and right next door, another group is offering a little competition with their recorders. Down near the beach you hear a distant baritone rehearsing his Bach, or some enthusiastic piano student practising in one of the seven or eight piano chalets.

The Camp is directed by Mr. George Little, of Montreal (organist and choir director of Erskine-American Church, and founder-director of the Montreal Bach Choir), and Mr. Mario Duschenes, the well-known flautist of Montreal (who, by the way, is bringing his Baroque Trio to Lachute Community Concerts in October).

Voice production and training is directed by Mr. Jan Simons, teacher and baritone soloist of Montreal, and choral works are also taught by Mr. Pierre Perron. A popular course in recorder playing is given by Mario Duschenes and Miss Miriam Samuelson; both artists have produced long-playing records with this instrument.

Another popular course is given by Louis Spritzer featuring the guitar, while Ruth Leblanc teaches piano accompaniment. While much of the business administration falls upon the shoulders of Mrs. George Little, she still finds time to direct a French Conversation class each day, while Bernard and Mireille Lagacé assist in music reading.

There is a change of pace with the teaching of folk dancing and physical culture, expertly directed by Mr. Christian Paye, and the young children are not neglected, as they enjoy arts and crafts, nature hikes, etc., under the capable leadership of Mrs. Jan "Scottie" Simons.

Cars may be seen in the parking lot bearing licenses from New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario, New York or Michigan, while some distant Quebecers are joined in the study by a few European members. A Roman Catholic priest from the Drummondville area voiced his appreciation of the camp, and enthusiastically attributed its pleasant atmosphere to the sincere and happy leadership of all the directors. Having spent 15 years at the Trapp Family Music Camp in Vermont, U.S.A., this experienced music-maker was quite qualified to express an opinion.

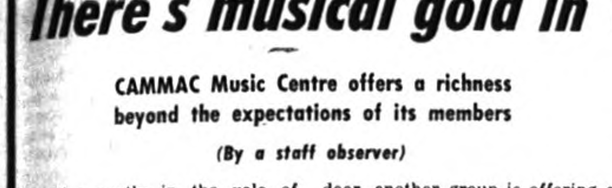
The outsider might wonder just what goes on in a setting of this kind. First of all, one should have an appreciation of music, not necessarily with a perfectionist or semi-professional attitude, for CAMMAC is really designed to foster amateur music-making.

A typical daily program starts right on time, at 8.30 a.m., when Mr. Jan Simons will lead the choral group in breathing exercises and voice development. Then the director of choral works, Mr. Geo. Little, will limber up the group with a few French songs, before rehearsing the more serious composition of the Bach cantata. Following this, the members disperse for courses in chamber music, ensemble playing, voice production, guitar playing, oratorios and opera works, recorder classes for beginners and advanced pupils, the Orff Method for teachers, madrigal singing, piano accompaniment and French Conversation classes; these courses change about every hour, until 1 p.m. The afternoon is for swimming, hikes, physical education, relaxing, or more practising.

The Reger String Quartet of Berlin, Germany, with Raimund Fleischer, 1st violin, Volker Sprang, 2nd violin, Eberhardt Klemmstein, viola, and Thomas Kanitz, cellist, are the featured string ensemble this year. This talented foursome has already made a recording in Montreal, and has added rare musical talent in the teaching of stringed instruments at the camp.

Each evening at CAMMAC, the entire groups enjoys choral works, directed by Mr. Little or other members of the staff, followed by a program by the professionals at the camp. Folk dancing and other interesting demonstrations are also presented. Each Friday evening during July, a public performance is given at White Forest Lodge, by the staff professionals and by the Reger Quartet, while on Saturday nights, the CAMMAC amateurs offer a diversified program.

CAMMAC in action is an experience that one must see to appreciate, and this bi-cultural music camp is an inspiration, both to those who attend or to the casual visitor.



The Reger String Quartet from Berlin, Germany, teaching stringed instruments and adding notably to the appeal of the CAMMAC program this season.

Fire ladder demonstrated

Members of the Lachute Volunteer Fire Department, several councillors, a representative of the Brownsburg Fire Brigade and a number of interested citizens witnessed a demonstration of a 100-foot aerial ladder on Friday afternoon of last week. The demonstration was held in the parking lot at the rear of the Ste. Anastasie parish church, and the height of the ladder is evident in the adjacent picture. The unit is used strictly for demonstration purposes by its manufacturer, Pierre Thibault, of Pierreville, Que.

Various features of the unit were demonstrated, including proof of its strength, by raising an 18,000-pound car a couple of feet off the ground.

It is understood that members of the Police and Fire Committee are presently considering the purchase of an aerial ladder similar to the one demonstrated.

Addicted to arson, detained by police

A 59-year-old resident of this district was detained by Lachute municipal police on Saturday night and charged with having deliberately set a fire in boxes and rubbish piled behind the Buffet au Gai Temps restaurant, Main Street. The incident occurred at 11.20 p.m. Saturday, when police were notified that the person concerned was causing a disturbance in the kitchen of the restaurant.

By the time the patrol arrived moments later, the man had set fire to the boxes and was enjoying the blaze. Investigation showed he had attempted to start a fire in a local hotel, where he had been staying since his arrival in Lachute the previous day.

The man was taken to police cells and detained, while the investigation continues.

Child injured, struck by bicycle on sidewalk

A six-year-old visitor from Corner Brook, Newfoundland, was treated in the Argenteuil Hospital and immediately transferred to hospital in Cartierville, late last week. The child had been struck by a bicycle while playing on the sidewalk. The incident occurred on Hamford Street, outside the home of the child's grandmother, Mrs. John MacDonald. He received eight stitches to an injury below one eye, and also suffered a fractured right leg.

Alain Demers, 14-year-old son of Mrs. Jean Demers, was riding his bicycle on the sidewalk when the victim apparently ran onto the walk from a driveway, directly into the path of the bicycle.

Commenting on this incident, Police Chief Réal Chartrand said that in recent months numerous complaints have been received concerning youths riding bicycles on the sidewalks; in every case the incident had been investigated and, where possible, the parents were warned. In a number of cases the Chief recalled, the parents had criticized the police for bothering the children — some parents seeming to feel it is safer for the children to ride their bikes on the sidewalks.

Following this case, however, Chief Chartrand stated that the by-law prohibiting bicycles on the sidewalks would be enforced, and that offenders would have to pay the fines, as stipulated. The Chief added that there had been no previous complaints concerning the youth in question, and requested the co-operation of both parents and children in this matter.

Impaired driving incurs serious additional charge

A 27-year-old Montrealer, picked up early Sunday morning for driving while his ability was impaired, came within a few moments of being released on bail on Monday — but the following day found himself in St. Jerome on a charge of impaired driving while his permit was under suspension for a similar charge.

Lachute Police Chief Réal Chartrand stated he was about to arrange the bail procedure when, going through the man's possessions, he found a clipping from a Montreal newspaper giving details of the previous license suspension. When confronted with the evidence, the man admitted his permit was still under suspension, and that he would be unable to produce it.

The case will be heard in St. Jerome court within several days.

Resuscitation methods shown to clubmen at Rotary meet

Last Thursday at the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club's weekly meeting, Art Whiteway, Chief Security Officer for Dominion Ayers Limited at Lachute, and local superintendent of the St. John Ambulance Association, delivered an informative talk on Mouth to Mouth Resuscitation and Heart Massage.

Mr. Whiteway explained that of 105 known methods of reviving people the St. John Ambulance Association, after thorough testing, accepts these two methods as the best for reviving people. He listed three other main methods accepted by the Association: (1) the revised Sylvester method, (2) the Holgar-Neilsen method, (3) the Schaeffer method.

Art Whiteway explained that speed was essential in all methods, as the brain cells begin to die after four minutes have elapsed. President Tom Johnston was a willing patient for the demonstrations — in which Mr. Whiteway outlined how to administer the mouth to mouth oral method in conjunction with the heart massage if one was alone with the patient, and described the differences needed for treating adults and children. Numerous questions were asked by the interested Rotarians. . . Art was introduced by Kent Tompkins and thanked by Don Wilson.

Other notes of interest coming from the meeting were:

(1) Several of the members planned to attend the service clubs' golf day at Dunany this coming Wednesday.

(2) Next week's program is to be a "family" day at the Park. Rotarian Kent Tompkins, lifeguard at the pool, outlined a program of swimming races, foot races and games for the children, as well as races for the Rotarians and their wives.

Potato wagon up in smoke

A fire reported at 9.48 Monday evening caused approximately $1,000 damage to a chip wagon and its contents, situated at 67 Chatham Street, Ayersville, adjacent to Don Boa's Motor Sales. Members of the Lachute fire department responded to the call, headed by Chief Don MacCulloch.

The business was owned by Jacques Coté, who reported the establishment had been open until 8.30 in the care of a young employee. The owner arrived on the scene after the fire had been extinguished. The loss was not covered by insurance.

Maj.-Gen. F. R. Phelan, community figure, has notable record of military service

Specially contributed by Mrs. Annette Fournier Paré

In a recent issue, The Watchman published a photo showing Major-General F. R. Phelan inspecting the local Cadet Corps.

How many of these young men, and also the older spectators, have had any opportunity of hearing something of the career of this soldier? Some mention of his military service therefore may be of interest to our readers.

Maj.-Gen. F. R. Phelan

He commenced his training as a private in the Canadian Officers Training Corps of McGill University, and before embarking for overseas in November, 1915, this young soldier had been promoted sergeant in 1914 and commissioned a lieutenant in February, 1915, in the 60th Battalion.

The McGill Corps contained many young men who have since become leading citizens of Canada. There are far too many names to mention here, but the most famous of course is His Excellency Hon. General Georges Vanier, D.S.O., M.C., C.D., our beloved Governor-General, who learned the rudiments of military drill on the campus of McGill University before he joined the Royal 22nd Regiment.

In January, 1916, Lieut. Phelan was appointed Staff Captain of the 11th Canadian Infantry Brigade and was awarded the Military Cross on October 21 during the Battle of the Somme.

He participated in the famous Battle of Vimy Ridge on April 9, 1917, whilst he was acting Brigade Major, and later that year, during the Passchendale operations, whilst holding the same appointment.

During the last year of World War I he served in various appointments on the headquarters staff of the famous 1st Canadian Division, known to all as "the Old Red Patch". For his services, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Order, and the French Croix de Guerre.

Following the end of the war he joined the Canadian Grenadier Guards in 1920, and in 1931 was promoted Lieutenant Colonel and given command of the regiment.

In 1937 the Brigade of Canadian Guards was authorized, and he was appointed the first Commander and given the rank of Colonel; in the same year, he received the King George VI Coronation Medal.

His early posts in the first part of World War II included such important ones as Deputy Adjutant General at Ottawa in 1940, and later that year he was sent to occupy a similar but more important appointment at the Canadian Military Headquarters in England.

In 1941 he was posted to Aldershot, England, and given command of all the Reinforcement Units Overseas. This force, to which were added many different units, such as General Hospitals, Medical and Dental Centres, Ordnance Depots, etc., for administration, grew until CRU (as it was called) had a strength of around 63,000 — an army in itself, and a most complex force to supervise.

In June, 1943, he was promoted Major General and on July 6 was given command of the combined Newfoundland and Canadian military forces in Newfoundland.

November of 1943 saw him back in Canada to take over the important appointment of Director General of the Reserve Army of Canada, with headquarters in Ottawa. He held this post until he retired from active service in the summer of 1945, after 31 years in Canada's military forces.

In the King's Honors List of January 1, 1945, he received the very high honor of being made a Companion of the Order of the Bath, one of the most famous of the British orders.

General Phelan was always greatly interested in the first-aid training of the St. John Ambulance Brigade and, after his retirement, headed one of the big fund-raising campaigns for "St. John" in Montreal, where he had performed a similar task for the Canadian Red Cross.

As a reward of his works for the Order, he was appointed a Commander Brother of the famous Order of St. John of Jerusalem, in 1951.

In the beautiful living room of his home in St. Andrews East hangs a portrait of the General, executed by Kenneth Forbes, the famous portrait painter, which depicts him as Commander of the Brigade of Canadian Guards. The long row of medals on his left breast, headed by the Distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross, and culminating with the French Croix de Guerre, the official position for a decoration awarded by a Foreign Government, illustrate vividly his sup

Police, fire reports given at town council

The police report for the month of June showed 272 service calls and investigation of 31 accidents. There were 21 arrests for various offences, all the way from drunken driving to vagrancy.

There were four cases of entry and theft, 25 traffic tickets, and 176 bicycle and nine dog licenses issued. Revenue from traffic fines was $1,336, and from permits, $248.

Cst. Robert Morin had been recommended for promotion to 2nd Class, and Cst. Germain Girard to 1st Class rank.

Fire Department

Through the police and fire commissioner, Ald. Linton Armstrong, a report of fire department activities was also submitted, by Chief Don MacCulloch.

There had been five fire calls in the month, four in Lachute and one in St. Jerusalem.

Chief MacCulloch asked the council to rule that no material or equipment belonging to the department could be either loaned or rented, whether to an individual or to some other municipality. He asked also that a copy of all council resolutions affecting the fire department be handed to him.

The chief further requested that a sum of $200 be placed at his disposal for the purchase of required items, and also for Fire Prevention Week contests among the younger citizenry.

By BOB ATCHISON

As could be expected, the sport has slowed up a little for the spin fisherman. However, the trolling demons have come into their own, and some good catches have been taken this way. I heard of nine greys being taken from Louisa this past week, nothing extra large, but all seemingly nice fish. I also heard of a nice Red, over 2 lbs., a real good fish. There was no sign of tapeworm, either.

• • •

Fly-fishing has been paying off too; personally, I have found the best lures are the Cranes and the Despair. The West River has been very rewarding. The creek at Dunany is very slow now, with very little current. If you want to have some fun though, especially if you are a light-tackle devotee, then go and get yourself a mess of perch. These can be taken almost everywhere you want to try it. It's fun to hook the good ones on extra light outfits. You know the type I mean, thread line, right of a spool, very tiny hooks, and a little garden hackle. You'd be surprised at how many you can catch with an outfit like this.

Some of you readers must have read the letters to the editor in The Montreal Star the other evening. This correspondent was complaining about birds, in general, being dirty customers. He seemed to have a pet peeve against redwing blackbirds. Too bad this writer couldn't see things in a different light. Sure, they may be dirty at times, but I believe that all birds more than make up for this, just by being around to let us hear them sing, to see their bright colors, and so forth. Then, of course, there are people who will complain about anything, just as a matter of course.

I have received all kinds of reports this past week on wild animals, especially panthers; it seems that these have been seen at least half a dozen times, in different areas and at different times. I don't know why this should merit so much attention right now; doubtless these people didn't say anything about it, lest they be considered queer or eccentric. Believe me, I know they are around, and they will be as long as this country is as unspoiled as it is in certain spots. Don't get the idea they are not in the district just because you haven't seen them. How many times do you see even a rabbit when you are out? Not too often; so imagine some animal that didn't want to be seen, and the trouble it will go to to hide from humankind.

A word of warning to you animal owners. There are a great number of porcupines this season, so take care of your pets. And should they be unfortunate enough to run into one of them — if you can't have the quills taken out by a vet, then fry soaking them in vinegar and borax (or baking soda); let this stay on for about 15 minutes, then remove the quills. This mixture makes the quills soft, so that they can be removed easily without too much pain in the process. Also it's possible that a youngster could try and catch one of them, without knowing the danger; so this mixture will work even on them.

• • •

As we all know, the water shortage is serious, and the bush is tinder-dry. This may be repetitious, but please take good care when you are around our forests. This applies very much to lakeside residents at this time. Most of them have wood stoves, and sparks are dangerous at any time, but especially now. Do not discard any bottles along the highways, these are deadly with the sun beating on them. Piles of dried brush and grass can also be dangerous; so-o — take it easy.

At long last the government is going to try and do something on pesticides. As we know, pesticides are wonderful for the person having to use them, but the trouble has been, far too many people use them without knowing the potentialities. Naturally, the companies selling these killers print only the essentials on the bag or bottle. I have always thought that people should also learn how to use these sprays, etc., and there would in all probability be a lot less sickness. Let's hope this precautionary interest at government levels will have some effect.

Fishing this afternoon (Wednesday) near Pine Hill, we were treated to the sight of a Sharp-Shinned Hawk. This was resting on a telephone cable when first spotted, and stayed that way for some five minutes, then it decided to give us land-based spectators a treat. Boy, these things are graceful in the air; it performed this way for another five minutes, and then took off, evidently seeing no mice or other edible prey.

There are a number of Blue Herons around the North River. I think they have come in for the good feeding. With the warm weather there are all kinds of polywogs and small frogs, which suit them perfectly. The birds don't have to wade too far in the water before they get a meal. I'm hoping they don't nab the big one outside our window. As you know, we are right down on the water, and this big frog gives us a bass symphony every night of warm weather. Sure, I'm going to kill the monster dead, every morning (just like the canary we had) — but I guess it's safe for a while yet.

• • •

One of our local residents was anxious to keep the partridge around that had shown up near his place, so early this spring he built some nesting boxes for them. He was telling me the other day that four of these had been used by the birds for hatching boxes. As we can see, this entailed a lot of work, but our friend seems to think it will be worth the time and trouble, just being able to see them once in a while. Incidentally, there is no shooting of any kind on this property, so maybe the partridge will grow up fat and sassy. Nice thought.

I believe I have mentioned the otter to be seen around the North River for some time; this is still with us and he has a mate now, so it's possible they have young ones. I'm afraid they won't be with us long, for there are too many boats on the river, and once the youngsters are able to fend for themselves, they will be off and away.

Some of our rifle enthusiasts have decided to get themselves a small-calibre high-powered weapon, which they intend to try on deer. Some of the guns mentioned are the .22 Hornet, 222, and the 243. These are wonderful guns for the purpose they are intended for, and that is varmint shooting. With the exception of the 243 I don't believe the others should ever be used on big game. However, you can't tell some people. Suffering will be inflicted on deer if these guns are used. I know there are many expert shots who could use this type and get away with it; however, the whole thing is much too light for a good clean kill. After all, the Hornet and the 222 are just souped-up .22s, and that's all; they don't have the shocking power to be used for this type of shooting.

The correct "okay" signal

WITH CLINT WARD

The Most Important Signal In Water Skiing

Water skiing is not a dangerous sport if proper precautions are taken and if good "old-fashioned" common sense is used, but occasionally injuries do occur.

In a fall, the body can hit the water with enough force to "wind" the skier, or flying skis that have been forced off the feet can cause injury. These types of injury are usually confined to the advanced high speed type of skiing but everyone — especially the boat driver — should be constantly on the alert.

For this reason it is imperative that the "okay" signal be given after all falls no matter how simple they may seem. All skiers should get into this habit and boat drivers should insist upon it, on penalty of refusing to drive for skiers who refuse to give proper importance to the "okay" signal.

There is only one good "okay" signal and that is to clasp the hands over the head in the familiar boxer's victory signal. Some skiers believe that a hand held up is sufficient to indicate that all is fine but experienced skiers know that an injured athlete will sometimes come up with a hand in the air more as a reflex action than anything else.

Boat drivers, not seeing the "okay" signal should proceed back to the skier with all the haste that can be managed, for a skier in trouble will be thankful of immediate help.

The skier may just be "winded" but the closeness of helpful hands will reduce the tendency toward panic which is so often prevalent in water accidents.

Although it is rare for a skier to be seriously injured, proceed with caution before deciding to lift him into the boat. The feeling that the skier should be brought into the boat as soon as possible should be avoided — serious damage can be done by moving anyone with an injured back for example. The observer can get into the water to give assistance if needed.

I have been "knocked out" twice during high speed slalom falls and even though I was wearing a life jacket, I was extremely thankful to have the tow-boat at my side post haste.

So remember. Always use the clasped hands, over the head "okay" signal after every fall; and boat drivers — if the signal is not given, assume that the skier is injured and get back to him with all of the speed that you can muster.

If you have any questions on the sport of water skiing, please write in to the sports editor of this newspaper. I will either answer your question in this column or write directly to you.

Boating Clinic

By STAN DAVIES

A lot of Canadian boaters resist going out in boats at night. Yet on many of our lake areas, it's the best time. Things are so calm and quiet.

I think perhaps it's because night boating requires just a bit of extra know-how, as some of these questions suggest:

A man ran into my dock at night, and he's threatening to sue me unless I fix his boat. Can he? (J.P.K., Port Arthur)

Answer: Don't touch his boat, this could be an admission of liability. The question is: Was your dock obstructing a navigable waterway, and what permission did you have to build it . . . oh, heck, you had better get a lawyer fast.

Answer: If you did not show a white light in time for the operator of the oncoming boat to avoid you, you are at fault. If you did show the light, then he was at fault, and might have been charged with reckless operation of a boat.

What lights must small boats carry at night? (T.P., Orillia)

Answer: The accompanying sketch gives the two basic requirements. Study it for a moment and you will see the systems are quite simple. But so that you can get all the details, I'm sending you a copy of Safety Afloat, the government booklet which gives all the rules. Anyone else who would like one, send me a postcard in care of this newspaper and I'll send you one.

Answer: A much better thing is fluorescent paint, of any color. A much cheaper idea is to get luminous tape from a hardware store. Put stripes of it on dock corners and edges, or on stakes out in the water. They glow in the beam of a flashlight, and put everything in place.

Answer: Flashing lights blink on at intervals; occulting lights blink off at intervals. If a light is off more than it's on, it's flashing; if it's on more than it's off, it's occulting. It's a lot harder to explain the difference than to recognize it. Such lights are used mostly on ocean approaches or the Great Lakes.

Why can't you water ski at night? (J.N., Toronto)

Answer: Well, apart from it being stupidly dangerous, it's against the law. I suppose one is a consequence of the other. It's banned from one hour after sunset to sunrise.

Are directional signals required on a boat trailer? (D.F., Kimberley)

Fish biologists on Ottawa R. survey

Bob Atchison, our Outdoors columnist, advises that a biology crew from Quebec Department of Fish and Game has been stringing nets across the Ottawa River, at quarter-mile intervals from below the Carillon Dam down into Lake of Two Mountains. Purpose of this procedure is the tagging of fish, to secure valuable data on fish population and their movements.

Officials of the department have requested that the nets be left untouched, and avoided insofar as possible by anglers while trolling.

Named Softball Team for Fund Raising —

Last phase of rink construction now under way

Work has begun anew on the Lions Club Arena project. Contract for the completion of the front part of the structure was awarded a few weeks ago, and workmen are busy now finishing the forms for the administration section of the building. This cement-block building will house the furnace room, four dressing rooms complete with showers, restaurant and manager's office, plus the ticket counter.

To help raise funds for this project, the Lions Club are sponsoring a softball game between a Lachute All-Star team, and the outstanding Molson "Four-Man Team", on Wednesday, August 11, at 7 p.m. at the Ayers Recreation Centre. This team is appearing through the courtesy of Gaston Laroche, local distributor for Molson's, and is unique in that they use only a catcher, a pitcher, a first baseman and a third baseman, while their opposition use the full complement of nine players. They also feature trick plays, acrobatics, pitching blindfolded, pitching from second base, etc. . .

Tickets are now on sale for this event. They cost only 75 cents, and give admission to the park plus a chance on a drawing for $25, whether you are present at the game or not.

Late W. A. Cooper was veteran of two world wars

Walter Alexander Cooper passed away at the Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital, Montreal, on Friday, July 16, after a lingering illness, in his 73rd year. He was born in Kensington, London, England, and came to Canada in 1912.

At the outbreak of World War I, Mr. Cooper joined the Canadian Army and served as regimental sergeant-major with the 13th Battalion. During his overseas service he was cited for bravery, and was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal. He was a veteran of the battle of Ypres, where poison gas was used for the first time.

On his return to Canada he joined the Canadian Pacific Railway, where he remained for 45 years, with the exception of the years of World War II when he again saw service with the Canadian forces.

Mr. Cooper was married to Miss Emily Agnes Gibson, of England, and during their lifetime they had resided in Montreal, Brownsburg and Lachute.

Besides his wife, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. M. Cooper (aged 94 years), two sisters, Enid (Mrs. A. M. Brown), Gladys (Mrs. W. Furrows), a brother, Richard, and nephew, Michael, all of England, and a niece, Miss Margaret Gibson, of Montreal.

Service was held Monday afternoon in the MacKimmie Funeral Chapel, conducted jointly by the Rev. C. R. Lang and the Rev. W. B. Rosborough.

A short service was held at the graveside by Legion Branch 70, and Legionnaires acting as pallbearers were — Comrades T. Pasco, F. Vowles, C. L. Duncan, G. Leggett, O. Stephens and R. A. Giles.

cess as a military commander and administrator. These, together with the higher decoration of the Bath and St. John which hang below his collar, round up the evidence of what he had accomplished for his country.

A sincere admirer and friend of the French Canadian, he takes every opportunity to speak very highly of the inhabitants of the Province of Quebec, so aptly called "La Belle Province". The following is an extract from a speech which he gave recently: "French Canadians are too often the unsung heros that accomplished extraordinary deeds of valor during the two great wars. Their courage and determination gave their comrades in other regiments an opportunity to witness their great qualities as fighting men during battle — a quality which they inherited from their forebears, who fought the savage Iroquois in the early days of Canada, where the history of this country was being made. Who does not know the tale of the heroic fight made by Dollard des Ormeaux and his sixteen comrades, on the banks of the Ottawa, a few miles from Lachute, near where the huge Hydro-Quebec dam has been built this past few years. A fight to the death against hundreds of Iroquois, the fiercest of the Indian tribes. The nearest example with similar results (for Dollard and his companions by their sacrifice saved Montreal from massacre) was that of the 300 Spartans who fought against the Persian hordes of Xersces at the pass of Thermopylae in the year 480, and thus saved Greece from invasion.

"As to the desire and willingness of the French Canadians to fight for his country, one has only to inquire, to find out that the first regiment in the whole of Canada to be recruited up to strength in the last war was le Régiment de Maisonneuve. During the same war most of the English-speaking regiments or units, throughout the Province of Quebec, together with many in Ontario and the other provinces of Canada, had percentages of French-Canadians serving in their ranks."

Since coming to the County of Argenteuil to live fifteen years ago, General Phelan has taken a great interest in local activities, and was twice elected Mayor of St. Andrews East by acclamation.

Things 'n Stuff

TRAVEL IS EDUCATIONAL

A colored man from Georgia, whose name was Rastus Munroe, took a trip to New York City to visit a cousin. It was his first visit to any big city. Three days later he was back in Georgia. Relating his experience to a group of friends he said:

"Ah'll never go back to New York no more. Everybody up there is a mindreader. They can tell just what you're thinkin'. Ah was ridin' on a street-car to try to get to where my cousin was at. The conductor stuck his head in the door and shouted, 'Jefferson'. The man beside me must have been Mr. Jefferson, because he got up and got off. Then the conductor opened the door again and hollered, 'Madison'. The man across the aisle from me got up and got off. A minute later the conductor came in and hollered, 'Munroe!' I jumps up and says, 'Munroe, dat's me.' He stops the car and I got off. Now how did he know my name was Munroe? . .

"As soon as I reach the sidewalk I seed a purse lying in the gutter. I picked up the purse and there was some money in it. I counted the money — jest two dollars and sixty-five cents in it. Just then a taxi draws up beside me and the driver hollers, 'Is this Munroe?'. . .

'Yassuh', I sez. 'This is Munroe all right.'. . .

"Then he says, 'I'm looking for two-sixty-five.' I handed him that purse and I took the first train home!"

GRANDPARENTS AIN'T WHAT THEY USED TO BE...

It's not that grandparenthood occurs sooner today than it once did . . . (It still takes about 50 years to get a third generation started) . . . it's just that today's grandparents are able to work better, play harder . . . and live longer than their grandparents before them.

Providing the better medicines and treatment techniques that increase longevity today—and will stretch it even further tomorrow—is the job of the health team: physicians, pharmacists, pharmaceutical manufacturers, and other health professionals.

Exhibition at Centre d'Art

In connection with the "Boite à Chansons", featuring another attractive program at the Centre d'Art this Saturday, July 24, there is an interesting exhibition of art works now at the Centre, 360 Main St., made available through the Galerie Libre in Montreal. Included are 20-odd works of the French-Canadian artists, Arsenault, Belzile, Girard, Vanier, Mongeau, Tremblay and others, as well as portraits, gouaches and oils which are now among the permanent collection at the Centre gallery.

APPRECIATION

The undersigned is sincerely grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Sharman Doig, of R.R. 3, who — in reply to a Lost Notice in this paper — promptly returned a sum of $70 (week's salary for a family of five children) which had been found and picked up by Mr. Doig in Lachute. — Mme Jean Lafleur, St. Philippe

New pocket encyclopedia

Recommended as a handy reference for settling arguments, or simply as interesting reading for those who want to know more about Canada, the Canadian pocket encyclopedia, Quick Canadian Facts, is now published, in its 21st annual edition. It is a publication in which any reader is certain to find some unusual and interesting information.

For instance, we hear a great deal about the number of Canadians who have emigrated to the United States, but few probably realize that, in population by birthplace, the largest group in this country after those who were born here or in Britain are the American-born. . . Or, in the business field, most people probably think that manufacturing profits run to 20 or 30 per cent, while the industry actually averages only 5.4 cents per dollar of sales. Or, among the cities many would no doubt guess that Montreal or Toronto is the fastest-growing, but that honor is held by Calgary, with an increase of more than 100 per cent since 1951.

The new edition of this 152-page, 60-cent paperback is distributed through bookstores and leading newsstands, and is published by Quick Canadian Facts Limited, 217 Bay Street, Toronto.

ARDUOUS TASK

Summer School at People's Church opens July 26

The Summer Bible School, so successfully conducted each year at People's Church, will be held from July 26 to August 6.

The theme of the school this year is, "Proclaiming Christ our Peace". In these trying, troublesome days in which we live, surely there is no theme that could be more appropriate.

Boys and girls from three years and upward, will be accepted. There will be thrilling Bible stories, music, recreation and handcraft, two weeks of happy, exciting fun and fellowship, commencing daily at 9 a.m.

Each department will be staffed by consecrated Christians, concerned only with the spiritual well-being of each child, in a pleasant environment.

Pastor Rev. C. W. Sorley will as usual direct the school.

"The most effective program to combat juvenile delinquency and moral breakdown must begin in the home," declared Mr. Henry Purucker, presiding minister of the Lachute congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses, during a recent meeting with the local congregation.

The local Witnesses are making preliminary plans to attend the sixth provincial convention of Jehovah's Witnesses, to be held in Quebec City, August 12-15. At this convention some of the subjects to be discussed will be juvenile delinquency and Christian morals.

Elaborating on the subject of delinquency Mr. Purucker stated, "The source of these present troubles is found at the family level. Parents of the world are failing in their duties of morally educating their children. They are not giving them proper guidance, even permitting them to leave their parental home too hastily to venture without experience to face life's problems. Children consider their homes today as a mere service 'station'. Bad association of other children is undermining any good influence that parents are exercising over their children." According to Mr. Purucker — "Delinquency has skyrocketed five times as fast as the increase of the population. Venereal disease in Canada alone has increased 1,000 percent."

One of the purposes of the four-day convention was to safeguard the ranks of Jehovah's Witnesses from juvenile delinquency and moral breakdown by stressing the Bible's proper place in the home. "The most successful method of stemming the rising tide of delinquency", he continued, "is to prevent it by teaching children to practice Bible principles. This is just as important as feeding them."

Pretty wedding at St. Mungo Church

Moore - McMichael

Grenville — Miss Laura May McMichael became the bride of Mr. Richard Arthur Moore at a ceremony July 3 in St. Mungo's United Church at Cushing, Que. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMichael, of Grenville Bay, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Moore, of South Stukely, Que.

Baskets of yellow and white mixed flowers provided a background for the afternoon ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. K. Thomson. The organ was played by Mrs. Elliott, of Cushing. "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wedding Prayer" were beautifully sung by Mrs. Fred Moore, of Grenville.

The bride, given away by her father, was in a floor-length gown of peau-de-soie fashioned with a fitted bodice, a scoop neckline and elbow-length sleeves. The sheath skirt was appliqued with Chantilly lace, and had an overskirt with back fullness falling into a slight train. Her short veil of tulle illusion was held by an open-crowned pillbox of peau-de-soie and matching lace. She carried a bouquet of one Duchess rose and three other roses in yellow.

Miss Marlene Moore, the bridegroom's sister, was maid of honor, wearing a floor-length gown of turquoise linen fashioned with a fitted bodice, having a scoop neckline, elbow-length sleeves and a sheath skirt. She wore a matching open-crowned pillbox with a circular veil, and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Little Miss Elaine Ann Flood, the bride's niece, as flower girl, was in a floor-length gown of turquoise linen. She wore a matching bow band and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

The bride travelled in a turquoise silk and worsted wool suit. She wore a turquoise organza hat, black patent accessories, and a corsage bouquet of white carnations.

Chileans eye Hereford cattle

Chile is considering the purchase of some 800 to 1,000 head of Canadian Hereford cattle. A three-member Chilean agricultural delegation returned recently from an inspection trip visiting Hereford establishments across Canada.

The Chileans were especially interested in Herefords from British Columbia because of the area's similarity to Chile both in climate and terrain. Actual purchases would be made on a return trip sometime this spring.

Chile recently bought about 1,000 head of cattle from Australia at a reported cost of $80-$120 a head. In the past, most of Chile's livestock imports have come from Argentina.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

WE CAN BE PROUD

The Kinship of Two Countries has, appropriately, a gold dust cover. It is the history of the Canadian Club of New York, written by Hugh A. Anderson. It covers the period 1903 to 1963 and proved fascinating reading after my interview with Warren Publicover, the club's president.

Authentically the oldest Canadian Club in existence, the New York club was born then reborn. An unusual and prominent Canadian, Eurastus Wiman, a native of Churchill, Ontario, then living in the burgeoning city, was an enthusiastic advocate for promoting friendly relations between Canada and the United States. He is credited with having persuaded the State of New York to issue a charter for a Canadian Club in 1895.

After some rather spectacular social events the club suspended operations. Six years were to elapse before another Canadian was fired with the same ambition to establish such a club in this metropolis. William T. Robson of Lindsay, Ontario, gathered together at the 23rd Street branch of the YMCA, a group of young Canadians. The date was May 23, 1903. Later with a successful report by the committee appointed at that meeting to investigate the possibility of support for such a club, it was decided to go ahead with the organization. It was given the name "The Canadian Club of New York" and though it was to know ups and downs over the years, it still flourishes under that title.

One hundred and fifty three Canadians were listed as the original membership, which has since grown to some 1650, including members who reside in 18 different countries of the world. Though there are 400 among them residing in Canada, the New York Club is not affiliated with any of the Canadian clubs in this country.

Distinctly a social club, the Canadian Club of New York played a magnificent part in war relief, contributing over $100,000 during the first world war. It also sent seven ambulances to France. During the second world conflict the club co-operated with other Canadian and British organizations in New York in founding the Maple Leaf Fund for administering relief funds. It also entertained Canadian service men at luncheon every Saturday during the war until 1945. Funds for this were contributed by members and S. Freeman Raymond, originator of the idea.

Many famous personages have addressed its membership and been guests of the club. Two categories cover active members and associate members. All have the same club privileges.

Rooms For Transients

The club maintains a number of rooms in the Waldorf Astoria including some suites which may be occupied by members, their families and friends, or persons who have obtained this privilege through a member. The cost per night is the same as is charged by the hotel, less a stated discount.

Originally the membership intended to establish the club as a residential one, but gradually this old style 'English' club succumbed to modern influences. Families moved farther from the city's centre and the club's facilities have settled into crowded luncheon hours and special affairs.

The Canadian Club of New York is the oldest tenant in the Waldorf Astoria. Its present lease does not expire until 1976. If you want to see the Beaver Room named after the late Lord Beaverbrook, or view the lifesized portrait of Queen Elizabeth II, dominating the main lounge, which was unveiled by the Queen Mother, you will have to count among your friends a member, or a friend of a member to introduce you. They enjoy having guests but, naturally, outsiders must abide by the rules of the club.

Seated in the artistically decorated ladies' dining room enjoying a typically Canadian broiled steak I liked to remember that for all its evidence of affluence and social activity this club has one distinct purpose. That is to promote amicable relations between the United States and Canada.

BELL LINES

by JIM MENZIES

TELEPHONE BY CANDLELIGHT

Talking with a young friend of mine not too long ago, I was asked how it is that during a power failure the telephone continues to work. The lad was excited and pleased one day when all the lights went out in his neighborhood, and wanted to share his glee with another lad across town. But he was frustrated because he thought the telephone wouldn't work either.

However, on picking up the phone, he was amazed to find that it DID work. This led him to assume that the telephone company has a separate power supply.

Well, we do, and we don't! Like everyone else, we depend on commercial power, and commercial power keeps your telephone working day in, day out, just as it does your lights. But telephone service is vital, and so all our exchanges — including Lachute, of course — have standby power sources in case of emergency. The instant our equipment detects a power failure, it switches onto reserve battery power that can keep the exchange operating for many hours. And diesel-driven emergency generators are kept in readiness at strategic points throughout our territory to be brought in immediately to keep any exchange operating indefinitely.

Power failures are very infrequent these days, but severe storms, construction accidents, etc., can and do cause disruptions every once in a while. Though these are usually short-lived — thanks to the diligence and public spirit of the power commission employees — it is still reassuring (and sometimes even romantic) to be able to "telephone by candlelight."

THOSE CRANKY GOOD OLD DAYS

Some people like to reminisce about the "good old days" and how much better things were then. I wonder if they remember how much cranking it took to get those good old days started! You cranked the car, the clothes wringer, the gramophone . . . and the telephone. And they tell me that after you placed a Long Distance call, you had to wait an average of nearly eight minutes before you got your party.

Today, of course, it's flick a switch here, press a button there — a sort of "instant action" way of doing things. And as far as Long Distance goes, you can telephone all the way to the Atlantic or Pacific coasts, have a nice little chat, and then be off the phone in less time than it would have taken you to get started way back when. And for five or six times less the cost in those days!

Could it be that the "good old days" required so much cranking and waiting on the line, etc., that people just didn't have the time they take today to think of how "bad" things are ????

Dangers of boy doing a man's job

FARMING HAS many hazards and accidents are a common threat. This is Farm Hazard Week, July 21 to 31, dedicated to the farmer and to those who spend their vacation on farms. The campaign is to remind children and adults that the mechanical equipment and the farm animals are all part of the farm hazard, and are the cause of many deaths and many serious injuries.

"Occasionally," notes the Department of Health and Welfare, "a picture appears in the press showing some precocious child driving a tractor or other large piece of farm equipment — a youngster not nearly old enough to have a license to drive a car. . . Human carelessness, neglect of safety precautions and regulations can contribute to death or injury on the farm."

Tractors are involved in more farm accidents than other farm equipment, according to the National Safety League. Tractors upset on level ground much more frequently than many farmers imagine, and can do just as much damage as upsets on slopes. Speed too fast for conditions is the chief factor in most cases. In fact, tractors have been known to tip on level ground at only eight miles per hour, half the top speed of most tractors in use today. High hitching and hidden obstacles also rank high on the list of causes. Always hitch the load to the drawbar, never to the axle or seat brackets. Slow down when operating in tall weeds or grass. A hidden rock or stump can throw both the operator and the tractor right out of commission. Keep these dangers in mind when tempted to send a boy out to do a man's job.

As a bonus to this good advice, the Safety League also offers three tips for safe harvest hauling. First, before pulling onto a public road, check traffic from both directions and make sure it is safe to do so. Second, avoid holding up a line of traffic by pulling off to the side. Third, use the new slow-moving vehicle emblem on the rear of all equipment travelling less than 25 miles per hour. This orange, triangular warning device identifies slow-moving vehicles, thereby giving extra protection against a rear-end collision. Information on this emblem may be obtained from provincial safety councils, 4-H clubs, or National Safety League of Canada (30, The Driveway, Ottawa.)

WHETHER TO take the family vacation in the mountains or at the seaside has long been a standard joke for the cartoonists. And the reason for its popularity could well be the seriousness of the basic problem involved.

The whole trouble is that, although it's customary for families to go on their vacations together, there is seldom agreement on where to go. And when you come down to it, why should there be?

If mother had her choice she would go to a place where the dishes are done, the meals cooked, and the beds made. A shopping trip to the big city — without the children — would probably suit her down to the ground.

But what happens? The family usually winds up at the beach or at the World's Fair, because that's where the kids would like to go. And because most vacations must be taken during the two months when the children are out of school, some of the best vacation months are automatically eliminated. So there goes mother's spring shopping trip, or father's hunting in the fall.

Obviously if family loyalties were not involved, the sensible thing would be for members of the family to go their separate ways. And some folks feel — it might be a good idea, at that.

After all, there are fifty weeks for "togetherness". Two weeks might well be set aside for "apartness".

A matter of rhythm

THE BEATLES — bless their MBE's — should get a medal for keeping drivers alive. Because it's their type of music that keeps you alert when you drive — and the music you listen to on your car radio can be a matter of life or death.

The wrong type of music can throw you into a trance. Just like your windshield wiper at work, or the glowing tail-light in front of you. And driver trance is on equal danger basis with worry caused by a quarrel with your wife or bank manager, or what you are going to tell the boss. All cause detachment and lack of concentration, in many cases are fatal, according to the latest study by the British Motor Corporation of Canada.

Highway hypnosis, or turnpike trance, or just plain pre-occupation — can send your car rocketing off a perfectly good straight stretch of road in good driving conditions into a roadside tree for no apparent reason.

International traffic experts claim music sets the mood we drive by and they strongly favor the screeches and noise of the off-beat Beatles and their ilk, to keep us alive. To the adult driver the jungle rhythm of the Mersey beat borders on aggravation, and is noisy enough to keep you awake behind the wheel without disturbing concentration of the road. Whereas, candlelight-and-wine type of music intoxicatingly lulls you into a trance — and a crash. The stirring martial air and the toe-tapping stuff produces a heavy foot on the accelerator; and the same result.

The steady swish-swish-swish of windshield wipers at work on a rainy night is just like a pendulum in front of your eyes, with a hypnotic effect. Any steady rhythm does the trick — a metronome ticking or a pendulum swinging.

Austrian Franz Mesmer in 1734 was the first European to apply this idea using his hands in mesmeric passes. The metronome and the pendulum idea came later, through such pioneers as Sigmund Freud, and hypnotism really came into its own in World War I in treatment of mental disorders, particularly shell shock.

The only plausible explanation, in many cases where drivers leave the road in perfect driving conditions and plough into trees, is that they have been lulled by an insidious, monotonous rhythm into a hypnotic state which has deprived them of full control of themselves and their cars. The nice — but wrong — type of music can do this. So can the wipers and the tail-lights ahead.

Inspector Charles Pearsall, who heads Metro Toronto Police Traffic Safety Bureau, says figures for this type of driving accident are high.

SOMETIME in the next few weeks a group of government officials, scientists and businessmen will begin a detailed study into the pros and cons of Canada adopting the metric system, The Financial Post reports. It is a complex question, and an emotional one too. In the weeks since Industry Minister Drury announced the study was to be held, he has received more letters on the subject than on any other, and they reveal two very strong opinions. Those in favor seem to see it as symbolic of a major step forward into a new era of advanced technology, a deliberate abandoning of old and inefficient ways of doing things. Those opposed warn of astronomical costs involved. A General Motors executive, Roy Trowbridge, director of engineering standards, provides a good example with his published cost estimate to the U.S. of "between $50 billion and $100 billion."

OVER THE YEARS With Lachute Watchman

85 YEARS AGO

July, 1880 —

The witnesses of the Argenteuil Controverted Election proceedings, excluded from the court during hearing of the evidence one day of the trial, passed their time playing croquet and quoits on the Court House square.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church held a social at the residence of Mr. Ireland, West End.

Mr. Bannerman has given a large order to the W. J. Simpson & Co. sawmill for lumber to build a new Cordage Factory.

The new store of Messrs. Fish & Ireland, now in construction, will be used as a post office, telegraph office, and flour and grocery store.

Butter is bringing 16 cents and 17 cents a pound. Two years ago it was worth 10 cents.

50 YEARS AGO

August, 1915 —

On Tuesday evening at the Brownsburg prayer meeting, Miss M. Murdoch turned the first sod for the building of the Mission Chapel.

Alberta has followed Saskatchewan in enforcement of a liquor act prohibiting the sale of liquor throughout the province.

Brownsburg — New cars are threatening to put the horse livery out of business. This week Charles Bedard sold a nice 5-passenger Maxwell to Mrs. Geo. Graves, and on Wednesday Mr. Jas. McDonald landed home with a fine 7-passenger Russel car.

Mr. Z. N. Raymond, Notary, has purchased Dr. McConnel's residence on Main Street.

Cushing — Miss Irene Caron, formerly of Lachute and now of Regina, is the guest of Miss Grace Fraser at the manse.

25 YEARS AGO

July, 1940 —

An Inspector, specially assigned by the Department, will be at Lachute Town Hall July 11-13 to register all merchants and give information concerning the new Provincial Sales Tax.

Last tribute was paid to Dr. J. H. Mason, a former mayor, coroner and school board chairman. He received his early education at Dalesville schoolhouse and the Lachute Academy, graduating in Medicine from McGill in 1905.

Vital war production at C-I-L, Brownsburg, was interrupted by a power break, caused when the string of a kite fell across high-tension power lines at Lachute Mills, and boys tugging on the line, brought three cables together and short-circuited the 26,000-volt wires.

Paul LaHaye, ex-amateur Dominion boxer, and trainer of Jack Dempsey, who had been National Breweries distributor here for several years, died at the age of 42.

Three hundred or more "honorably discharged" war horses, escorted by cowboys mounted and in trucks, made their way from Oka to Arnoldwold Farms, Grenville, on Thursday — and 260 more on Saturday. The animals had been selected for shipment to the French Government, but the contract was cancelled, the horses are discharged and have been purchased by Arnold Farms. Weekly auction sales of horses are being advertised by the proprietors during August and September.

IT STUCK

The popular phrase applied to the R.C.M.P., "They always get their man," was apparently coined by a visiting American newspaperman shortly after the Mounted Police force came into existence.

The 'Old Gang' Hangs On

Prime Minister Pearson's own "long, hot summer" has produced some of the most agonizing moments of his two year administration. He has been roundly attacked for indecision and half-measures in dealing with corruption charges in the Quebec wing of the federal Liberal party.

As the London Times commented recently, it may well be that the Prime Minister lacks the ruthlessness needed to head a national government.

The roots of Mr. Pearson's present political embarrassments are in the Quebec wing of the federal Liberal party. This clique, representing old-line forces often tainted with graft, is still a dominant body in Canadian politics.

Mr. Pearson knows this, and he knows also that their support was the price he paid for reaching the Prime Minister's chair. Without their backing, he would have been unable to pick up enough Quebec seats to form even the minority government which came into being out of the wreckage of the 1963 election.

Mr. Pearson, as a seasoned politician, knows that compromise is still the only way to power in Canada. And each compromise is a calculated risk that public sensibilities will not be sufficiently outraged as to cause him defeat at some future election.

When Mr. Diefenbaker was Prime Minister, he did not have such an element to contend with because the federal Conservative party had no entrenched structure in Quebec. His own great failing was his inability to recognize the need for intelligent Quebec leaders who could have kept the Conservative party abreast of the French Canadian revolution.

The irony of Mr. Pearson's position is that by all natural inclination, he belongs with the new guard of Quebec Liberals, as symbolized by Premier Lesage, Eric Kierans and even Rene Levesque.

The provincial Liberal party in Quebec, in sharp contrast with the federal wing, has been able to sweep aside the old, graft-ridden elements. It is a sad fact of political life in Canada today that the best elements of French Canadian Liberalism are in the provincial Liberal party, instead of the federal Liberal party.

Canadians should not read into the Dorion Inquiry a wholesale condemnation of French Canadian politicians. In fact, the Inquiry may be historic in that it may finally bring about a housecleaning of the "old gang" which was so brilliantly described in just a few quaint words on page 68 of the Dorion report.

A Prime Minister in a stronger position than Mr. Pearson would have dumped Guy Favreau from the Justice department far sooner than he did. He also would have drummed his parliamentary secretary, Guy Rouleau, out of the party far sooner than he did. And he would have taken similar immediate action against Yvon Dupuis at the time he dropped him from the cabinet, rather than waiting many weeks.

The shake-up in the cabinet in mid-July still falls far short of what is needed. Mr. Favreau remains on as chief of the Quebec wing of the federal Liberals. While Mr. Favreau may have the right political connections to preserve Liberal interests in Quebec, he will remain as a liability to Mr. Pearson and the rest of Canada.

There is talk around Ottawa that there is only one really outstanding, progressive French Canadian in the Pearson cabinet. He is Maurice Sauve, who has been shunted into the minor post of forestry minister, and was over-looked in the post-Dorion cabinet shuffle.

When Parliament resumes in September, Mr. Pearson will have to satisfy the Opposition — and the Canadian people — that the "old gang" from Montreal has been cut down to size.

SUGAR AND SPICE . . .
— By BILL SMILEY

The Holiday Horrors

Next person who chuckles at me, "Huh. Nothing to do now until school opens in September, eh?" is going to get a punch right on the nose, even if it's a dear, little, old lady who says it.

That's how I feel about things after three weeks of "holidays" from teaching school. If the rest of the summer is anything like this they'll be putting fresh sod over me about the middle of August.

It all began innocently enough, when two kids stole a taxi while the driver was having a beer, rammed it into the side of my car, across from the tavern and vanished.

Next day, I had to dash a round trip to the city of 200 miles with my daughter, for her final teeth-straightening appointment. The whole deal cost me $700. Know her reaction? She's going to miss her braces. "Gee, dad, they're a status symbol. Everybody knows that."

Next day I cut grass all day because visitors were coming. They were old friends. And we were all a lot older next day, after hitting the sack at 6 a.m. Up at noon and out for golf. Ever seen two old cart-horses trying to pull something up-hill which they couldn't even pull down-hill? That's what Pete and I looked like as we drag-tailed our way up to the 18th green.

Had to get the first-born out to his summer job on the boat by 8 a.m. next morning. But had no trouble waking up. The ruddy birds started yacking at 4 a.m. two paper-boys had a violent altercation about conflicting routes under our window at 6, and the construction gang tearing up the road in front of our place got their mechanical monsters snarling by 7 o'clock.

Wrote column, planted grass, weeded flowerbeds, soothed wife, distraught because her son was leaving. She tried to make a big symbolic deal out of it. "Don't you realize this is the very last day in his entire life that he'll be at home, one of us?" (He'll be home two days a week all summer, but apparently that doesn't count.)

Next day, took Hugh to his boat again at 8, put car in body shop to have door fixed, wrangled with insurance company, helped two high school valedictorians with their speeches, told wife to stop fretting about her son, told daughter to stop fighting with her mum.

Whole family was going to boat to see Hugh off on maiden trip, to his unutterable disgust. Car wasn't ready. Panic. Tears. Recriminations. Borrowed a car; beetled to dock. Boat almost out of sight when we arrived. My fault, though wife was half an hour out on embarkation time.

Early a.m., drove wife to town 30 miles away for eye examination. Couldn't find doctor; he'd moved. My fault. Late. Dashed for home after exam which confirmed opinion wife is eagle-eyed.

Had to change and drive 30 miles to still another town for big ceremonial dinner. But wife had to dally and watch a wedding before we left. Got there when most of the booze was gone.

Insulted by lady who thought my wife was my daughter. Entertained by lady who fell flat on her face on the lawn after bar re-opened. She got up gamely, chortling, "He never laid a glove on me."

However, today has been peaceful. People and their kids invited for outdoor dinner. It rained. Hugh arrived from boat with two accomplices, headed for a beach party. Kim is on her way to a pyjama party for some kid leaving town.

Really quite placid. Mom downstairs doing eight acres of dishes. Dad sitting writing his column. And the blasted construction gang working overtime out front. Holidays?. You can't beat them. But if you can, please beat them to death with a big stick. Roll on September!

Apparently the gourmet king was particularly fond of teals (birds which were cooked like wild ducks) with fried turnips, sheeps' trotters with cream, pippins in claret, cherry soup with Rhine wine, and goose giblets in blood. It is little wonder that his wife, Queen Caroline, complained, "Stuffing, stuffing, you are always stuffing."

Cooks and chefs are hard to come by in the 1960's and most women have to prepare, cook and serve their own meals. Dishes that are quick and easy to make — while losing nothing in tastiness and appetite-appeal — are, therefore, at the top of Mrs. 1965's list. And we have just the recipe to fulfill all her most demanding requirements, a melt-in-the-mouth dessert, Spiced Chocolate Crêpes.

Spiced Chocolate Crêpes

2 Ounces (2 squares) semi-sweet chocolate, 1 cup once-sifted all-purpose flour, 2 tablespoons granulated sugar, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon mace, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, separated, 1 cup milk.

Melt chocolate over hot water. Sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda, mace and salt.

(Consumer Section)

There is lots of bright red rhubarb available for the discerning shopper these days. Those of you who love to bake can concoct all sorts of dessert treats for your family with rhubarb. Why not look ahead and preserve the spring flavor of rhubarb for winter meals. Here are two recipes, one sweet and one sour, from the Consumer Section kitchens.

The "sweet" pineapple rhubarb jam is perfect on toast, muffins, and tea biscuits; it makes a delicious filling for cakes and a marvelous topping for waffles, pancakes or ice cream. The "sour" rhubarb chutney is the natural companion to a succulent roast of beef or an exotic curry.

Rhubarb and Pineapple Jam

3 Cups rhubarb (cut in ½-inch pieces), 2 cups chopped pineapple (cut in ½-inch cubes), 4 cups sugar.

Combine rhubarb and pineapple. Place over low heat and cook until juice begins to form. Then bring to boil and boil, uncovered, for 15 minutes, stirring to prevent sticking. Add sugar, bring back to boil, and boil, uncovered, to jam stage, about 25 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour into hot sterilized jars. Cool slightly and seal. Makes about 5½ cups.

Note: If rhubarb is not very juicy, it may be necessary to add ½ cup water during the first cook. If rhubarb is lacking in color, a few drops of red food coloring may be added.

Rhubarb Chutney

2 Pounds rhubarb (7 cups cut), 1 large onion, 1 cup vinegar, 1½ cups sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon ground ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, few grains cayenne pepper, 1 teaspoon whole pickling spices (tied in cheesecloth bag).

Wash and cut rhubarb into ½-inch pieces. Peel and slice onion. Combine rhubarb, onion and vinegar and cook, uncovered, for 20 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and cook uncovered, until the chutney is of the consistency of jam, about 40 minutes, stirring to prevent sticking. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal. Makes 3½ cups.

Vacation Hazard — Poison Ivy

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Poison ivy infection is no joke! Some children are extremely sick with it. The rash covers their body and they have to be kept in bed. Others suffer from itching and irritation on the part of the skin which has been affected. The oil on poison ivy is on all parts of the plant all year round. Poisoning can result from touching shoes, rugs or even a dog which has been in contact with poison ivy.

The first sign of infection is a reddening of the skin and an itchy feeling. In a day or two small water blisters swell and break. The liquid from these sores may transmit the poisoning to another person unless great care is taken with this last stage of the infection. The general health is upset to a greater or less degree for a time by ivy poisoning.

Every child should be taught to recognize and avoid poison ivy, and also the less common poison sumac (or poison oak with the bright scarlet leaves in the Autumn). Stinging nettle, although troublesome, is not as serious in its effect as poison ivy. Poison ivy may climb as a vine on trees or fences or stand erect in the fields or woods. The leaves are sometimes large, sometimes small, but they are always in groups of three smooth leaves, mostly ovate, pointed entirely or with a few irregular coarse teeth. The green is bright above, with a waxy appearance and pale and hairy underneath. In the Autumn it changes to a rich red color.

The small, inconspicuous flowers appear from April to June, are white or green and are hidden beneath the leaves. The hard, greenish white or cream berries stay on the plant all winter.

If exposed to poison ivy, treatment should begin at once. Wash the affected parts in running water with a thick lather of strong laundry soap. If rubbing alcohol is available, wash thoroughly with that after the soap treatment. A five per cent solution of ferric chloride dissolved in water and glycerine in equal proportions is also recommended for immediate treatment. A weak solution (three per cent) of potassium permanganate daubed on the exposed parts is also a good idea. The stain from this on the skin will disappear in a few days and is much to be preferred to ivy infection.

Parents should teach their children to avoid unnecessary hazards in camping, and also what remedies should be resorted to for accidents. A simple First Aid Kit should be carried when holidaying. A cupboard with medicines, which is kept locked or out of reach of tiny children, is a necessity at a summer cottage as well as in a permanent home.

To continue Winter Incentive Programs for municipal works and home building

The Hon. Allan J. MacEachen announces that the Municipal Winter Works Incentive Program and the Winter House Building Incentive Program will both be continued during the coming winter.

The minister stated that he had immediately sent telegrams to the Provincial Premiers informing them of the Government's decision, so that municipalities may plan projects for next winter well in advance.

Under this program the federal government contributes 50 per cent of the direct payroll costs of municipal public works projects carried out during the winter. In certain designated areas the federal government's contribution is 60 per cent of direct payroll costs.

The Municipal Winter Works incentive Program of last winter provided more winter employment than the programs of any previous year. An estimated 8 million man-days of work were provided — an increase of 15 per cent over the previous winter. The estimated direct payroll cost of projects approved under last winter's program was $114 million, of which the estimated federal contribution is $61 million. More than 2,500 municipalities carried out projects under the program last winter.

Under the Winter House Building Incentive Program, 33,500 units qualified for the federal incentive of $500, which is paid to the first purchaser of winter-built houses. This is an increase of 5,500 dwelling units from the previous winter. Next winter's program will be in effect from November 15, 1965, to April 15, 1966.

Both of these programs, Mr. MacEachen said, had been very effective in stabilizing employment in the construction industry over the year, by shifting much construction from the summer to the winter months. It is all the more important that projects be shifted to the winter wherever this can be done, in view of the strong demand for construction workers in many areas across Canada this summer.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ties, bows and straps will be featured in the fall on closed toe pumps with vamp and side openings and open backs.

Toes should really be rounder than they have been in some time, and heel shapes and heights will be shown in a diversity of styles. High dress heels will have straight backs. Setbacks and stacked types will still be stylish and more little heels, including a curved Louis type, will be emerging.

Materials will be soft and light, in small grains, suedes and smooth finishes.

Black and brown will again be the favored colors. The brown family will be shown in a wide range of shades and tones, including spicy and gold shades. Reds, blues and yellowed greens and some greys are expected to add some color to the season.

Men's Styles

The bureau says men's shoe fashions now rival women's in their variety and style. They say the long summer week-end, which has brought major changes in all male wearing apparel, has made male feet a focus of attention as never before in recent years.

Light, flexible casual shoes are being designed to go with color co-ordinated slacks, shirts, jackets and shorts. Colorful fabric sports shoes and sandals complement leisure clothes.

Pigskins, glove leathers, waxy cattle hides are being used for slip-ons, loafers and leisure ties. Smooth or grained suedes or brushed leathers are favorites for dressy casuals. Styling either way features slip-ons or two and three-eyelet ties.

Brown and sand and grey shades are reported to be getting more attention for the coming season.

Wearing Hints

The bureau says you can't draw an absolute blueprint for every man's taste in shoes, but there are a few rules which apply regardless of personal taste or climate.

Dressy styles should always have light to medium soles and very little trim.

Shoes should be chosen to complement the color and style of a suit or outerwear.

Wear black or the darkest brown with blues, greys and some olive blends. Wear browns with most olives and some shades of grey. Never wear brown shoes with a black or nearly black suit.

Swim or think

British Housing Minister Richard Crossman, visiting two Canadian-built timber-frame demonstration houses at London, England, was impressed with everything but the bathrooms.

There were showers, but no tubs.

"That won't do for the English," he said. "We must have a bath."

"You English like washing in your own dirty water," replied David Crinion, chief architect of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Ottawa.

But Crossman was not to be outdone.

"The trouble with Canadians is that they are not a reading public," he said. "We use our baths to think in."

Salmon-filled sandwiches tempt lazy appetites

Summer, sandwiches and easy living go hand in hand to make July and August the two months when mothers and family alike can relax and enjoy the warm sun and clear blue skies.

Convenient canned B.C. Pink salmon comes to the fore at sandwich time, offering a multitude of ideas to tempt lazy appetites.

The simplest thing ever for a picnic or beach party is the meal-in-a-bun, that eliminates plates, forks and knives. Take along a bowl (well-covered and in a picnic cooler) of salmon salad and serve it in split, buttered hot dog rolls. The family will love it!

Salmon Stacks

One 7½ oz. can B.C. pink salmon (drained and flaked), ½ cup diced celery, 2 teaspoons chopped pimento, 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ cup dairy sour cream, 12 slices sandwich bread, ¼ cup melted butter, 4 large tomato slices, 2 tablespoons grated onion, 1 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese.

Combine salmon, celery, pimento, salt, pepper and sour cream; mix lightly. Trim crusts from sliced bread and brush with butter. Spread 4 slices with salmon filling; top with 4 more slices of bread and cover each slice with large tomato slice. Top each sandwich with the third bread slice and sprinkle with grated cheese.

Place on cookie sheet and bake in hot oven, 400 deg. F., for 10 to 12 minutes or until cheese melts. Makes 4 sandwiches.

Meal-in-a-Bun

One 8 oz. package macaroni, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 cup celery (chopped), 1 cucumber (diced), 1 15½ oz. can B.C. salmon (flaked), 2 small tomatoes (cut in wedges), salt and pepper, 1 cup salad dressing, 8 hot dog rolls or crusty, French rolls.

Cook macaroni, uncovered, in rapidly boiling salted water until tender, and drain. Combine all ingredients except rolls and mix lightly.

A 'casserole with imagination' puts housewife in talent set

Is there anything worse than being surrounded by a host of talented people, when you, yourself, couldn't pen a poem or paint a portrait if your life depended on it?

Jane is a wizard with the sewing machine; Mary embroiders like a dream; Anne is so clever with flowers and Susan has just had her latest novel published — but what can you do? Don't lapse into despair if the answer is "nothing". Develop a talent that will enchant your family and make you the envy of friends and neighbors — become a really good cook. And not just a good cook either. Be original, creative, imaginative. Cook with flair. Try new recipes. Experiment with old ideas. Some of the world's most renowned dishes were discovered quite by accident by cooks who didn't always stick to the rules.

To help you establish your reputation as a cordon bleu, here is a delicious recipe for a really tasty casserole. Usually the bitterest of enemies, we have reconciled claw snapping crabs with little shrimps to form Chive Biscuit Casserole. We have combined them with tangy green peppers, onions, celery and Worcestershire sauce and topped this delectable seafood mixture with tender biscuits. The secret of the biscuits lies in the addition of a tablespoon of chives.

Chive Biscuit Casserole

(Yield — serves 6)

¼ Green pepper (minced), 1 small onion (minced), 1 cup diced celery, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tin (6-ounce) crab meat (flaked), 1 tin (about 4 ounces) canned shrimps cleaned, ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 cup of mayonnaise, 1¾ cups once-sifted all-purpose flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 5 tablespoons shortening, ¾ cup of milk.

Preheat oven to 400 deg. F. (hot).

Combine green pepper, onion and celery; cook slightly in the butter. Combine vegetables, crab meat, shrimps, salt, pepper, Worcestershire sauce and mayonnaise in a 6-cup casserole.

Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening finely. Make a well in dry ingredients and add milk; mix lightly with a fork. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead 10 seconds. Roll to 1-inch thickness and cut into biscuit rounds with a 2-inch cutter.

If you could wrap yourself in nothing more than a layer of absolutely still air, it would be ideal for temperate comfort, believe it or not. This is the basic principle of thermal insulation which is providing Canadian consumers with more "warmth without weight" fabrics.

Washable cotton thermal blankets are a successful example. Light-weight with airy, open-weave construction, they can be warm enough for cold Canadian winters and yet cool in summer. This sounds like a contradiction, but more and more consumers are finding it to be true.

Used alone, the open weave blankets, which look hand-crocheted, are a cool summer bed-covering, because they are light in weight and the open weave allows air to circulate freely. Used with an over-covering, even a single sheet to trap the air in the pockets of the weave, the blankets become as warm as toast.

Special thermal underwear developed for Sir Edmund Hilary's conquest of Mount Everest led to further experiments with thermal fabrics which resulted in the type of blankets now being produced by several Canadian companies. Sir Edmund was often quoted as saying that the special thermal underwear developed for his climbers was an important factor in their success.

The way to keep warm when the air around you is cold, is to preserve body heat, a lesson we could have learned from the Canadian Eskimo, whose loose-fitting ski wear and other types of cold clothing surrounds their bodies with a layer of still air which acts as an insulator. This principle of a wind-breaking outer shell with a lining that traps air is, of course, now widely used in ski wear and other types of cold weather clothing.

Adapted to bed-coverings its effectiveness is created by the weave or construction rather than the fibre itself. Thus blankets made entirely of cotton can be as warm as blankets made of other fibres.

Easy washability and light weight are the most obvious advantages for consumers, but they are also of tremendous importance in hospitals and hotels where bed coverings require constant laundering and sterile conditions. Other virtues are that the blankets are economical and completely non-allergenic.

The first thermal blankets made of cotton were designed for institutional use. Then they were offered to the consumer and proved an immediate success. As always, once their functional values were established, fashion entered the picture. This year consumers will find the thermal blankets in a wide range of colors which can be co-ordinated with the popular fashion sheets and pillowslips.

The fashion approach also includes decorative trimmings of matching nylon bindings which make the blankets attractive enough for use as casual bedspreads.

No doubt the blankets will appear in other types of washable fibres as they seem to fill a real and existing consumer need. When you think of it, you wonder why such blankets were not developed before.

Avoid Unnatural Poses in Pictures

Do you find that a lot of your pictures and movies look the same — still pictures with the subjects posed in a straight line, staring at the camera; movies with the subjects in the same pose, waving frantically?

There are two ways to avoid these stereotyped poses and thereby improve your pictures and movies. One way is to take candid shots, with the subjects unaware that they are being photographed. The subjects just go on with what they are doing and you unobtrusively record their activity as it happens.

Quite often, however, people soon know there's a camera on the scene and they tend to "freeze." So, instead of just saying "Hey folks I want to take your picture" and letting them shuffle into a line, be a "director" of action. Invent poses which let your subjects fit naturally into the "theme of things".

For example, suppose you are on a week-end outing with your family. You stop for a beach picnic and you want to record the event. Don't line the family up as if to face a firing squad. They don't eat that way! Tell them to sit down around the picnic lunch in natural, relaxed positions. The resulting pictures will be worthwhile.

Later, you stop to photograph an historic monument. And because you want to personalize the pictures, you'll include members of the family. But watch out! Rather than lining them up dead-centre in front of the monument, suggest they move over to the left or right of the scene and look up at the figure on the pedestal.

Here's another example: a youngster in the family is having a birthday party. You've seen a lot of birthday party movies that only show the kids, again in a line, waving and making faces at the camera. But you want more than that, you want to capture all the enjoyment. Here's how: shoot some footage of the children arriving for the party and the action as they enjoy the party games. Then sit the children down at the table and record their expressions as they see the gaily-lit birthday cake brought in. Stand by and shoot the action as the cake is cut and pieces are handed to each guest.

The next scene will probably be of the youngster opening his presents. Here again, invent some action — instead of shots of him standing with the toys in his hand, tell him to play with the toys and have the other children join in too. These will be much better scenes than the "police line-up" kind.

Remember, for more interesting pictures and movies, photograph your family DOING things naturally. If you are unable to get candid shots, then direct your subjects to go on about the business of enjoying themselves. This is the stuff you want to preserve on film.

Jackson - MacCullough

Harrington — Standards of pink and white peonies adorned the Harrington United Church on Saturday, June 26, for the marriage of Linda May MacCullough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan MacCullough, to the Rev. Glenn Clifford Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Jackson, of Toronto.

The Rev. Kenneth Thomson, of Cushing, officiated at the ceremony, and Mrs. Thelma Fox played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length gown of white faille and Alençon lace. It was fashioned with an empire bodice appliquéd with lace and pearl beading, and having a scoop neckline, elbow-length sleeves with an A-line skirt, and a wateau train. Her short veil of tulle illusion was held by an open-crowned pillbox, appliquéd with lace and pearl beading, and she carried a bouquet of pink and white roses. Her only jewelry was a string of pearls, a gift from the groom.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Sadie MacCullough, as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Bonnie MacDonald, Miss Elaine Wilson, Miss Janet Buccannan, and little Julie MacCullough, niece of the bride, as flower girl. Their gowns were floor length, of water-green faille. They were fashioned on empire lines, having bateau necklines, elbow-length sleeves and A-line skirts with back fullness falling from bows. They wore matching floral headpieces with veiling, and carried bouquets of white and green stephanotis. The flower girl was in a floor-length gown of water green faille and wore a matching toque headpiece, and carrying a basket of white and green stephanotis.

Mr. Bruce Jackson, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Messrs. Fraser Williams, Bryan Graham and Gerald MacCullough.

Mrs. MacCullough, the bride's mother, wore a navy blue frock of Chantilly lace and chiffon. She wore a white petal hat, navy accessories and a corsage of pink Delight roses. Mrs. Jackson, the groom's mother, was wearing a coffee brown frock of crepe, a white pillbox hat, white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

The reception was held in Harrington Intermediate School, where pink and white peonies were used in decorating. For travelling the bride chose a knit suit of turquoise blue. She wore a white sailor hat, white accessories, and a corsage of white hybrid orchids.

The happy couple left on a honeymoon trip through the United States and Western Canada. On returning they will take up residence in Chibougamau, Que.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Edward MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. James Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. Lothar Boëtcher, Miss Dorothy Smith, Mr. John Hobbs, and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ratchky.

Clifford Oswald vice-chairman for farm loan appeals

Ottawa — Agriculture Minister Harry Hays announced that the Farm Credit Corporation has established loan appeal boards across Canada to enlist the advice of farmers in administering federal farm credit programs.

A board has been established in each province except Newfoundland, where provision has been made to handle appeals on an ad hoc basis.

Three-member boards will hear appeals from any person or group dissatisfied with the F.C.C. decision on any application for a loan under the Farm Credit Act or the Farm Machinery Syndicates Act.

A total of 78 persons have been appointed to membership of the nine provincial boards, including one chairman for each. Each appeal will be heard by the chairman and two members selected from the area in which the farm is located.

The Appeal Board for Quebec Province is made up of 15 members. The chairman, for a three-year term, is Josaphat Carrier, of Warwick, Arthabaska County. The vice-chairman, for a two-year term, is Clifford Oswald, of Ste. Scholastique, Deux Montagnes.

"The appeal boards are made up of farmers who have proven their interest in the welfare of agriculture", Mr. Hays said. "They are people who have proven themselves in their communities and thown their ability to exercise unbaised judgment on matters of public concern."

Track laying across wilderness

Peace River, Alta. (CP) — Tracklaying on the 430-mile Great Slave Lake Railroad was completed in October 1964, but ballasting crews may be at work until at least the end of 1966.

"We've got a heavy ballasting program ahead," says operations manager W. H. McIlroy. "There's a lot of track in the north still lying on the grade."

More than 1,000,000 tons of gravel ballast has been crushed and stockpiled at the Meander River, at Mile 227 of the track, and present contracts call for another 350,000 tons.

Built primarily to haul lead-zinc products from Pine Point, 55 miles west of Hay River on the southern shore of Great Slave Lake, the track starts at Roma, Alta., eight miles west of here. Crews now are laying ballast between Roma and Mile 85.

Eastern Breeders request aid for Ont. drought area

A committee named by the board of Eastern Breeders Incorporated were interviewed by the Hon. William A. Stewart, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, on July 5, concerning drought stricken farmers in Eastern Ontario.

In a brief presented to the minister, the committee asked for aid in locating hay that could be purchased, with a subsidy being placed on it, extensive enough to keep its cost to not more than $20 a ton.

It appears very doubtful that sufficient hay is available to meet the shortage, and grain and other concentrate feeds will have to be brought in as feed for the coming winter. A request was made that a subsidy be placed on this feed, making its cost comparable to hay valued at $20 a ton.

Many of the farmers faced with purchasing feed for the winter ahead have already borrowed heavily to cover feed purchases necessary for their livestock last winter. A deferment of principal payments on farm mortgages and bank loans secured for feed, along with a moratorium on interest charges, was requested.

Breath of life

Every year, the lives of many Canadian adults and children are saved because someone performs mouth-to-mouth rescue breathing on them. Yet, many more lives could be saved if more people knew this artificial respiration technique.

It's taught by Red Cross Water Safety instructors and groups which are interested in first aid. It's easy to learn and takes no special skill.

We think everyone should learn this life-saving technique, and we think it's particularly important for every mother to know how to use it. Too many of our children die from drowning or suffocation every year. Many of them could be saved if they had the breath of life breathed into them.

PASSCHENDAELE

(Passchendaele Day, July 31)

The soldiers' grim determination,
That overcame their mired stagnation,
At Muddy Passchendaele.

The angry guns on their targets score,
With shrapnel's high explosive roar,
At Blasted Passchendaele.

I smelled the earth tortured by shell,
The dead men rotting where they fell,
The gas that added hell to hell,
At Stinking Passchendaele.

I tasted water rank and stale,
The bread rotted with damp and scale,
The hunger we could not curtail,
At Bitter Passchendaele.

I felt the cold, persistent rain,
The lack of sleep's fatiguing pain,
The mud that drove us near insane,
At Bloody Passchendaele.

And so we saw, and heard, and smelt,
And tasted bitterness, and felt
The trials of war our senses spelt,
That Glory Passchendaele.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

Corn insects seem to be taking more than their usual toll this year. And one of my small balloons has been shot down in flames.

Until a month ago, I thought I had the answer to most of the spotty stands of corn. Treating the seed just before planting with Lindane for wireworms and with Diazinon for seed maggots does give excellent control of these two pests.

But this year along come two others I haven't met before. In Pontiac County, it's the Glassy Cutworm and south of the river it seems to be the Potato Stem Borer that's causing much of the trouble. Neither of these are controlled by seed treatment.

If you want to know which is the culprit in your corn field, carefully dig up one of the damaged plants. If it's the Glassy Cutworm, you will see where he has eaten chunks out of the stem just below ground level. Most other species of cutworms feed above ground level. If you are lucky (or unlucky) you may find a specimen still working. He looks like any other cutworm, except he is shiny, and hence the name.

These lads are most common in fields ploughed out of sod. They are not so often found in second-year crops. It is too late for treatment this season — all the damage is done that is likely to be done. But next year, apply Aldrin, or Heptachlor if you can get it, in a four-inch band half an inch above the seed and in front of the press wheel of the planter. This is the recommendation of Dr. Vernon Vickery of the Department of Entomology at the College. He likes to avoid broadcast applications of these powerful insecticides if at all possible; they destroy not only the pests but also the pests' natural enemies, he says.

The Potato Stem Borer is a different matter. This chappie, it seems, is not a regular pest; epidemics are unpredictable, and it attacks many kinds of plants besides corn. Like the Glassy Cutworm, he feeds just below ground level. But you will find a small round hole where he has punctured the stem and climbed inside to eat the heart out of the growing plant. If you can find him, he is 1¼ inches when fully grown, naked, with brown head and pink back. When he has finished feeding, he forms a pupa in the ground. The adult emerges as a moth.

I haven't heard that the corn root-worm is yet giving trouble in Quebec as it is in some of the older corn-growing areas.

Some spotty stands are due simply to the drought. It has been too dry to germinate. Fall ploughing has shown to be best in this regard. And I am surprised to find the best germination has been on the lighter soils this year. There's an excellent stand northeast of Shawville planted over four inches deep in very sandy soil about the middle of May.

By the way, most commercial corn seed comes treated with a fungicide. This gives protection against seed-decay organisms, but none against insects. Insecticides must be added at the farm shortly before planting.

Galen Driver has sent out Recommendations for Disease and Insect Control in Corn to his 800 Quebec Farmers' Association members. If you would like a copy, I know he would be pleased to send you one. It's worth having ready for next year.

As I write, it is raining. A beautiful rain. The end, we hope, of the drought of 1965.

Over the July 4th week-end, I made a round-trip of the Ottawa Valley to see if crop conditions were as bad as reported. They were.

Dalton Hodgins, for instance, with 35 head of cattle to feed, had used up not only his nine acres of permanent pasture but also two thirds of his hayfields. The green oats, already shooting and only six inches high, will go next. Winter feed will have to come from twenty-two acres of corn. Like many others in Pontiac County, he has doubled his acreage of that crop in an attempt to beat the hazards of drought.

* * *

If you have a field of Trefoil, save it for seed; it is going to be very scarce and very expensive next year. This is the advice of Dr. John Bubar. The seed crop in the Northeastern States, where most of the trefoil seed is produced, is a washout this year.

Dr. Bubar points out that the threshed trefoil still makes excellent feed. But the harvesting is tricky. Get in touch with him for suggestions.
