Rotary clubmen tour abroad with picture and narrative

Fantastically beautiful flowerbeds in Holland, breath-taking scenery in the Swiss Alps, unbelievable luxury and grandeur in the palaces of old Vienna, awe-inspiring church architecture in Germany — were all brought to Rotarians for their regular meeting at La Lorraine Motel last Thursday, by past-president Jack MacKimmie, along with his original and entertaining comments as he showed colored slides.

President Tom Johnston welcomed guests Peter McDougall of Edmonton, Alberta, and Deacon Hunt, of Lachute, and mentioned club activities for the near future.

On September 13 several local members will visit the Chateau at Ottawa to hear their International President, C. P. H. Teenstra of Holland, on "Service as an Objective".

On Wednesday, September 22, the Brownsburg - Lachute Club will meet with the Westmount Club for dinner and golf at Dunany, while a visit from the Dallas (Penn.) club is planned for October 1 — to take place at Carling Lake.

Keith Wilson led the sing-song, with Wes Freeland at the piano.

The program was the outcome of a visit last spring of some two dozen Canadian and American club members from this Rotary District to Scotland and various parts of Europe. Rotarians Jack MacKimmie, Edgar Pollock of the local club, Lyle Carkner, of the Hawkesbury Club, and their wives, were local representatives.

Led by some of the Scottish Rotarian curlers who had visited Canada last year, the trip appeared to be one of great enlightenment and one to build better international understanding. If the same could be done in South-East Asia, Russia, China, etc., what a difference it would make!

Few realize that the Rhine is an international waterway flowing through a multitude of countries, often enemies in the past, for hundreds of miles. With 300,000 boats and barges registered along its banks alone, the speaker noted, any boat can travel it freely and without customs barriers or other stoppages.

Jack showed colored pictures of beautiful buildings by day which became a fairyland of color and light at night, in Vienna and other cities. He pointed out that Austria depends for 60% of its income on tourists, and he mentioned their hospitable reception. European churches, palaces and other buildings are so artistically designed and constructed that they make the observer a little ashamed of their own, often box-like, utilitarian structures.

With part of our affluent society worrying about leisure, the Dutch set an excellent example when they combine beauty, work and hobby in the propagating of acres of gorgeous color in their gardens. No person is too poor to cultivate beauty, in flowers or in simple surroundings. Europe shows younger countries how both rich and poor can create beauty, and how wealth has built structures that will last for centuries and should be an inspiration to all who view them directly or indirectly.

The speaker showed pictures of man-made beauty in cut diamonds at Rotterdam, as well as the God-given majesty of the Alps in Switzerland.

Comments by the speaker made the pictures vividly alive. All present became more aware of some aspects of the great world around them, and shared a desire to preserve what is so beautiful and worthwhile.

Arg. Ballet pupil auditioned for M'tl Metropolitan

Miss Lynne Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Morrison, Calumet, and a student of the Argenteuil School of Ballet, has been auditioned by the Montreal Metropolitan Ballet Company. It is confidently expected that Miss Morrison will dance with the Company when it makes its début at Expo '67.

Because of the audition, Lynne was awarded a scholarship at l'Atelier de Ballet Classique Inc., in Montreal. There she will come under the tutelage of Mr. Eric Hyrst, an internationally renowned dancer, choreographer and ballet-master. He is lately of the Sadlers Wells School in the United Kingdom, and has partnered such premières danseuses as Sonya Arova, Moira Shearer and Rosella Hightower.

Lynne has studied at the Argenteuil School for the past three years, and received a scholarship for her dancing instruction during the 1964-65 season. The director and staff of the local school wish her every success in her future ventures.

Cairn commemorates settlement of MacLeod clan in Glengarry County

On Sunday afternoon, August 1, an historical plaque to commemorate the founding of the MacLeod Settlement was unveiled at the farm of R. D. K. MacLeod, on the Dalkeith Road in Lochiel. This plaque is one of a series being erected throughout Ontario by the Department of Tourism and Information, acting on the advice of the Archaeological and Historic Sites Board of Ontario.

The ceremony was arranged by the Clan MacLeod Society of Glengarry, whose president, Gordon MacLeod, acted as program chairman.

History

In 1793, Alexander MacLeod of the family of Myle, Glenelg, Invernesshire, Scotland, chartered a vessel at Greenock. He brought with him some 40 families including members of the MacLeod, McGillivray, McCuaig, McIntosh, McLennan and McPhee clans.

One source reports that "finally after a tedious voyage of 18 weeks, they arrived at St. John's Island (now called Prince Edward Island) on October 18, 1793, with a foot of ice on their decks. Here they remained all winter. Early in April the following year, Alexander MacLeod, engaged two French schooners at St. Mary's Bay and they made their way to Montreal".

By June, 1794, MacLeod and his group had arrived in Glengarry, Upper Canada, and were petitioning the Eastern District Land Board for land. In August of that year the majority were authorized to occupy two hundred acres each in Lancaster Township in the vicinity of Kirk Hill, which was for many years known as Glenelg. This northern part of Lancaster was separated and called Lochiel Township in 1818.

Alexander MacLeod was located on lot No. 18 in the 15th concession of Lancaster Township (now lot 18, 6th concession Lochiel). It was on this property that the plaque was unveiled. Now owned by Roderick D. K. MacLeod, the property has been in the hands of the MacLeod family from the time of the original grant.

Until 1819 the settlers of Glenelg (Kirk Hill) had no other Protestant minister than the Rev. John Bethune and his successor at St. Andrew's Church in Williamstown, which was quite distant. Alexander MacLeod was instrumental in getting the Rev. John MacLaurin to come out from Scotland to minister to the people of Lochiel. Shortly after McLaurin's arrival in 1819 a frame church was erected which later became known as St. Columba. This was one of the earliest Presbyterian parishes in Upper Canada. The frame structure was replaced by the present stone church which was completed by 1866.

During the War of 1812 Alexander MacLeod served as a Captain in the 2nd Regiment of the Glengarry Militia and died March 4, 1850. He is buried in the cemetery adjacent to St. Columba Church, Kirk Hill.

The MacLeods of Lochiel increased and prospered, and by 1852 there were 218 MacLeods living in Lochiel Township and a total of 437 in Glengarry County. They possessed two important advantages. Like most Highlanders, they were accustomed to a harsh environment and, since they had emigrated as a group, they were in a position to lend one another assistance when needed during the pioneering stage of their settlement. Many descendants of these enterprising emigrants of 1793 were present at the recent ceremony.

Flt. Lt. Willis Morrison, of Lachute, is pictured in the CF-104 he will fly at the C.N.E. Airshow

Jet pilot for CNE Airshow

Flight Lieutenant Willis N. Morrison, of Lachute (son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Morrison, Dunany), will fly Canada's fastest aircraft at the C.N.E. Airshow on September 4 and 5.

Morrison will be part of a formation of CF-104's from Cold Lake, Alberta, performing during the show. He joined the RCAF in 1952 to commence a varied career in Canada, Europe and the United States.

He is presently an Instructor, flying the CF-104 aircraft at Cold Lake. This base is the home of No. 6 Strike/RECCE Operational Training Unit, which trains pilots for operational squadrons in Europe. The CF-104 can fly at twice the speed of sound, and is used as a strike/reconnaissance aircraft, capable of delivering an attack with nuclear weapons.

Cold Lake, the only CF-104 base in Canada, is 125 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Week's Epigram

All men are born equal, but what they're equal to later on is what really counts.

A mammoth mushroom

On the Felix Décarie farm at St. Andrews East this edible mushroom weighing 18½ lbs. was picked last week. Mme Décarie, who is an authority on the subject, identifies the specimen as a "lypocerdon", and states it is the largest mushroom ever found in the district. Dr. André L'Allier weighed in the monster, and it was turned over to the kitchens of the Argenteuil Hospital.

10th Annual art exhibition this week at St. Andrews East

In the annual members' show of the Argenteuil Art Association Inc., there are 57 pictures exhibited by 33 artists, on view this week at the municipal hall (above the fire stution) at St. Andrews.

This exhibition is under the creditable arrangement of Vivian Walker, secretary of the Association and a member of the exhibitions committee. It opened last Saturday, and during the week-end attracted many visitors. The display is open to the public daily from 2.30 to 5 until next Monday, September 6, and on Thursday evening of this week from 7 to 9 o'clock.

The founders of this Association in 1956 would find their incentive at a point of fulfillment in this latest exhibition, for it demonstrates a gratifying public participation, as well as interest and appreciation widespread through this County. Officers have changed through the years, but the Association grows steadily — with Mrs. L. T. Porter at the helm as president for the past two years.

The exhibits are of good quality, many obviously of professional calibre. The techniques and media are varied, though conventional oil-colors predominate. The landscapes cover an interesting range of scenes, while other subjects — still-lifes, portraits, abstracts, nature and flower studies — provide an intriguing hour for even the most casual viewer.

To the perennial visitor, this exhibition reveals familiar names from various parts of this County — Lachute, St. Andrews, Cushing, Grenville, Morin Heights. The latter community is well represented, while from Brownsburg there is apparently no response this year. A number of Montrealers associated with these parts have again exhibited, even one from New York.

The landscapes and character studies reflect the travels experienced among these painters — Mexico, Arizona, Canadian and coastal scenes, and of particular interest are one or two little-known Argenteuil spots with pioneer associations.

Following is a list of the exhibitors, according to signatures entered or appearing on their works:

Allen Knights, A. R. Davidson, Vivian Walker, Anne Harcourt, Olive Hartley, Myrtle Henderson Grece, Joyce Putnam, Marie Bray, Dorothy Hart, Isabel Albright, Dorothy Bishop;

A. F. Cockhill, Chas. Duncan, Irene Morrison, Don Titman, Ida Scott, Jeannette Roback, F. Pemberton-Smith, Helmut Gransow, J. W. Green, F. S. Nesbitt, Gertrude Stock, Jennifer May, Olive May, S. St. John Simpson;

A. L. Wales, Rita Wheatley, Cherie Decarie, Patricia Good, Laura Sherman, Mrs. A. C. Straesle, H. V. Taylor, Rolland Mallette.

Co-operation set keynote of U.N. youth seminar

— By Robert Dawson — Lachute High School Delegate

The fourth annual Bilingual Seminar on the United Nations was held from August 23-28 at College Jean-de-Brebeuf in Montreal. I had the honor of representing Lachute High School at the Seminar, by courtesy of the Students' Council.

Throughout the week, all 150 delegates at the Seminar debated the issues now confronting the UN, and this struggle was climaxed by a model General Assembly at the Chalet on Mount Royal on August 28. The political in-fighting, the lobbying, and the power struggles between the Communist and Western blocs caught the attention of many reporters at the Seminar, but the most important part of "Operation Co-operation", as the Seminar was called, was in educating the delegates.

We, the students, learned of all aspects of UN work through a score of lectures delivered by educated people from all over the world. Especially, we learned the need for co-operation among the peoples and nations of the world.

While there is hunger in the world, there cannot be peace, yet one-half of the world's people are constantly hungry, and two-thirds live in poverty. In underdeveloped nations, the average life expectancy is 35.

India's national budget is one-third of Canada's, despite the fact that India has 450,000,000 people to Canada's 20,000,000. The poverty gap between the rich nations and the poor is astounding, but

Two LHS students rank in top-markers of Province

Jennifer Hooker

Peter Rodger

Two students in Lachute High School have topped 900 marks out of a possible 1,000. Jennifer Hooker 907, and Peter Rodger 906, each warrant a position among the top students of the province.

In the Montreal Star of August 21, a list of 27 students with over 900 marks was printed. However, the article stated that "there may be others". For the Lachute High School students, the Subject Promotion marks (one to three subjects written the previous year) were not included in the computer results. When the marks in these subjects were included, Lachute High School gained two in the top bracket. Only one other school off the Island of Montreal registered one student in this category.

Both Jennifer and Peter have received top scholarships to attend McGill University, and they deserve sincere congratulations.

It takes an outsider to be "shocked" at the lack of consideration for English traditions in this province. A former resident, revisiting here, has written to protest the uni-lingual sign which designates our beautiful (but polluted) "Rivière du Nord"... Lady, this is a provincial sign; what can one expect?

"Argenteuil Outdoors"

By BOB ATCHISON

Some of the young sprouts are showing up their elders in the fishing these days. Young Bob McAllister got himself a nice fat doré in the North River last week, 2½ lbs.; along with a few perch, this makes good sport. Good greys have been reported, not too many but enough to make it worth while. One taken (where I don't know, but in the county) was 12 lbs. 3 ozs., caught with a Daredevil lure, from the shore. Lake Macdonald has been producing some excellent bass, real big ones, and with no black-spot on them. Lake Louisa is overflowing with sunfish and rock bass at this time, a real pesky situation. Not a good-sized fish in the whole bunch you can catch. This also applies to the Lake Sir John, only worse; black-spot and tapeworms in everything. If the water gets colder soon, it may stamp out the tapeworms, and with a bit of luck, maybe the black-spot too.

Flights of ducks may be seen almost everywhere you look; it won't be too long before they start to take wing for their journey south. I was told of a small flock of pintails on the Ottawa River last week-end. I would like to see more of these birds around, but it's really not their range. Plenty of mallards are to be seen, along with a few wood ducks and a good number of black ducks. It seems that all ducks had a very good breeding season, with not too much to bother them. It was feared early in the spring, with the lack of rains resulting in very low waters in ponds and swamps, that these water birds would have a real tough time. However, this does not seem to have been the case. I don't know about other parts of the country, but in our own immediate area, things have been good, much better than last year. . . I have often mentioned watching the ducks, but never have I mentioned the coots that are around. For a good, hefty laugh these birds sure can oblige. One thing that never fails to get me, is when they are scared by something, they take off along the top of the water with both legs and wings going a mile a minute. Never really getting free of the water, they just seem to paddle along at high speed with the head bobbing like an apple in a bucket. The legs give me the impression of being jet-propelled; the whole thing becomes very funny when the legs go faster than the wings and the coot ends up with its rump sticking out of the water trying to fly! It always seems to me they come up from the water with a laconic "Too bad I didn't make it this time, but maybe one of these days."

We are fast approaching the extermination season for all game. As most everyone knows, the deer season in this county will start October 16 and end November 21. I've often thought, this past few years, that we must have someone in power in the government who hates all forms of wildlife. What with longer and more open seasons, the killing off of all young, etc., it does not take much foresight to see we are going to be in a bad way come the end of the hunting season.

Don't get me wrong on this, we do have a few very dedicated men in this field in government, but unfortunately their powers are so limited. I know this is old hat, but in the last election the voters were told that things were going to change, such as patronage in government, and so forth. The only thing we voters didn't ask was just how it was going to change, and in what century? "Patronage must go" — I believe this was one of the government's slogans. It sure has gone, right under the table, but is still there, large as life. It must be rough for the "dedicated" fellows, those who love wildlife and really try in their way to help — only to have some Big Shot's friend do what he likes, and if a case is made against them, it's thrown out of court.

Remember the promise that all infractions of the game laws would be published in the newspapers? I thought this was really the start of a new era in the Fish and Game branch. Since that news release about two years ago, I have received one list with two names on it. Now this offence had taken place hundreds of miles from this area, so it was of no information to anyone. After all, I'm not concerned with the breaking of the law by some joker up in the far reaches of the North. What we are interested in, is infractions around this area, and what is being done to stop them. I think the small fines and protection given some of these lawbreakers, only helps the government in collecting more small fines.

Before I forget, this is a story just told to me. A couple of friends had taken their lads out fishing this past week. Perch and even carp were caught, on worms, and these they had plenty of. Anyway, the fish were all packed into the back of the car, and getting home they cleaned them all out, or so they thought. But — one carp was left, along with the worms. Now nothing happened until the trunk of the car was opened two days later. I don't have to tell you what the smell would be like, what with rotten worms and carp. Boy, the way it was described to me, I only wish I could repeat it, but there are limits on the written word. We laugh about these happenings, but I don't think there is any fisherman who has NOT had such an experience at some time or other.

The duck men are starting to get that feeling once more. A couple of changes have been made in the hunting regulations for this sport. One that sure has been needed for a long time — it is now law that duck blinds must be 200 yards away from any other. The ducks do get a real break with this. Of course, the hunters too, but they don't need the protection as much as the ducks. Blinds are being built all over the Ottawa River, some floating, some fixed, others neither. A good blind is a must, if any success is expected in decoy shooting. Far too often a shooter will blame his poor bag on luck, the winds, water conditions, and so on. Yet most of this blame can be attached to the blinds that are being used. How you build them is your own business, but there can never be too much cover on them, to make them look as natural as possible. The use of bull rushes, cedar and wire, is one old standby, and if built right, it works better than anything I know of.. I believe there is only one drawback to this, the rushes must be threaded all the way through the wire, otherwise they will topple over in the first heavy wind. Another good thing is having canvas strip along the reeds, painted a clothy color; this certainly does alter the appearance of a blind, and all for the better. I can't give you all the details on how to build one of these things. If you don't know, however, give me a call and I'll dig up something. One last bit, a white face showing up through a blind can be seen for miles, so get yourself a dirty face and hands. It will pay off.

If you are going to have a floating blind, then make sure that the bottom of this is larger than the top. It's no fun to have the blind topple over just as you are getting ready to use it. Good anchors are a must in this type of camouflage; imagine trying to get a blind back into position after it has drifted a half-mile or so! Real work, and no shooting. Another thing, don't try to make pontoons with oil barrels, I mean the 45-gallon type. These are far too unsteady, and very hard to anchor or to handle. Sitting up so high, every little wave or puff of wind sets it in motion, and most of the time you will be shooting into the water. Better use good cedar logs; it entails more work but is much better in the long run.

To hold Hunter Trials at Ste. Scholastique

The Montreal Hunt is holding its annual hunter trials on Sunday, September 12, at the Hunt Farm, Cote des Anges, Ste. Scholastique. The show starts at 9.30 a.m. and continues all day with a lunch break. Their Excellencies the Gov. General, Georges P. Vanier and Mme Vanier, have extended their distinguished patronage to this event.

Competitors come from all Hunt Clubs in the Quebec - Ontario area and non-members of a hunt may also participate. The hunter trials is a test of horse and rider over obstacles similar to those met out hunting and is a fitting start to the opening of the autumn hunting season.

The course of jumps was designed especially for this jumping competition by Mr. T. Vanderplaats, whose skill in this field is recognized all over Eastern Canada as well as the United States.

Persons wishing to obtain tickets to watch this sporting event should apply in Montreal by calling 932-6231 and in the Lachute area by calling 562-4640. A car sticker admits one auto and all its passengers, and also entitles the purchaser to a chance on a ticket raffle for a trip (for two) to the Pacific, donated by Canadian Pacific Airlines.

Boating Clinic

By STAN DAVIES

Boat handling techniques are something a boater can acquire only by experience, but a vast amount of knowledge about boating generally can be gained without ever being afloat. And do you know, I find the person who knows most about boating generally knows most about SAFE boating specifically.

What's safer in a storm, deep or shallow water? (P.M., Sault Ste. Marie)

Answer: In a short sharp blow, such as might accompany a summer thunderstorm, I would say that deep water is safer, because it takes longer to get stirred up, whereas shallows are whipped up to a dangerous turmoil quite quickly. However under the influence a strong wind for a long period, bodies of deep water, even the Great Lakes, can develop very large, dangerous waves.

What do you do if you're tipped out of a canoe?

Answer: This above all, grab the canoe and hang on. It will float and support you. Then you can kick and paddle with your hands to shore. Ninety per cent of fatalities involving canoes are due to the occupants letting the canoe get away from them.

I argue with my neighbor. I say when swamped, stick with the boat. He's a good swimmer and says he would swim. How about you? (R.K.L.L., Saskatoon)

Answer: I'd stay with the boat even if it's 10 feet from shore, and try to paddle it in until my feet touch bottom. Every year there are several cases of a strong swimmer striking out for shore . . . and never making it. But the poor swimmer who stayed with the swamped boat has been rescued.

I read in a magazine that sailing craft no longer have the right of way. Is this so everywhere?

Answer: An ancient law is being changed by a U.N. organization for ships on the high seas, and in major harbors. An ocean liner no longer is forced to give way to a sailing pleasure craft. But on inland waters, the rule is still the same as ever. A power boat is obliged to keep out of the way of a sailboat.

It seems silly to me that the stern on my boat is so low. Water comes in every time I stop my outboard. (B.N.Q., Ottawa)

Answer: At one time the outboard motor manufacturers got together and agreed on a uniform 15-inch height for transoms, so that they could make their motors standard. However, nowadays, you can get a long shaft motor, 20 inches, and build up your transom to a safer height . . . or you might install a self-bailing motor, well ahead of the transom. This will catch any water that comes aboard.

What's a trim tab? Is it a safety device?

Answer: A trim tab is a gadget installed on the stern, flush with the bottom, on boats that ride bow high. The tab . . . they are usually installed in pairs . . . reacts on the water rushing under the boat to keep the bow down. They certainly do make a boat safer.

How many outboard motors are there in Canada?

Answer: There are no unquestionable statistics, of course, but the best count by the manufacturers' association is 700,000. This means that 15 per cent of all Canadian households own an outboard.

A big boat swished past my small boat and almost swamped me. I complained and the owner said it was my own fault, I should have anticipated his wake. How about that? (P.I., Moncton)

Answer: If the other guy had been a gentleman he would have slowed down. But gentlemen are getting scarcer every day. You do have an obligation of self-preservation, you could have turned to cut his wake with your bow. This is very important if you are overtaking a bigger boat that throws a big wash.

CUT THE WAKE OF AN OVERTAKEN BOAT, PARTICULARLY IF HE IS BIGGER - IT'S SAFER.

Motor Sport Club reports successful summer rally

The Summer Rally was the main topic at the last meeting of the L.M.S.C., held August 19 at the Legion Hall, Lachute. Plans were finalized, while enthusiasm ran high. By 10 a.m. Sunday, August 22, the Arc Supply Ltd. parking lot was buzzing with activity, mixed eagerness, anxiety, and last-minute cautions. . . The finish was just as exciting. The organizers were smiling, and many of the participants were kicking themselves for foolish errors they had made.

Since the protesting period is not up as yet, only unofficial results are available.

1st Overall — Y. M. Fortin (driver), Miss M. Beauvais (navigator), of "Le Club Auto Sport La Licorne", driving an Austin Healey.

1st L.M.S.C. Member — F. Butikofer (driver), Miss H. Erkkila (navigator), driving a Volkswagen Special.

2nd Overall — B. Van Den Abelle (driver), B. Brisson (navigator), of "Le Club Auto Sport Metropolitain", driving a Valiant.

Special thanks are extended to Arc Supply Ltd. for the use of their parking lot as a starting area; to Pollock & Graves Ltd., for the use of a van as a registration centre; and to Gordon Bradley for the use of his farm as a mid-point picnic area.

L.M.S.C. also wishes to convey thanks to the numerous friends and members who worked so hard in helping the organizers with this event, the L.M.S.C. Summer Rally.

Coming Events. — The Labour Day week-end "Fun Rally". To top off a very successful summer season, L.M.S.C. is having a fun rally to be known as the "Little 4000". Commencing at 7 o'clock p.m. Saturday, September 4, the rally is approximately 40 miles in length. At the finish the contestants will come upon a massive bonfire. Corn-on-the-cob and wieners will be served (cost included in the entry fee), and there will be a nominal charge for refreshments. This is the last big "bash" of the summer, and fun is stressed. Limit of entries is open — the only stipulation being that your driver or navigator must be of the opposite sex. Full information will be available at the meeting, to be held Thursday, September 2, at 8 p.m. in the Legion Hall, Lachute.

Water skiing championships at St. Adolphe

St. Adolphe de Howard will be buzzing more than usual this week-end as some of the best water skiers in the province will invade that centre for the Quebec Water Skiing championships.

Competition will continue both Saturday and Sunday, with shows also being put on by professional water skiing entertainers between events.

SHOWBOAT NITE

Take golfers off the course, place them amid the aura of an 1800's Showboat cruise — and the transformation defies all nature.

Suddenly there are images of playboy bunnies, walking dice games, Captain Cooks, Long John Silvers, clowns, southern mammies, Tom Sawyers and even a cowboy.

— Cause of seeming illusory effects: "Showboat Nite" dinner-dance at the Lachute Golf and Country Club, Saturday evening.

— Characterized by: Spontaneous gaity and spirits.

— After-effects: Like golf — all in the head.

Showboaters filled the Cotillion Room for Denny Vaughan's superb dixieland music and the adjoining lounge, where canapés were served before dinner.

Ladies' star golfer, Teddy Champagne, a straw-chewing Tom Sawyerette for the evening, stole the best entrance by rumbling in on a raft pushed by her Huck Finn counterpart, Mr. Ozzie Carrière. But Mr. and Mrs. Royal Carrière stole their part of the show too. Mr. Carrière, his gown of rosebud pink showing off his shapely legs to best advantage, performed an elegantly-timed dance with the little woman (Marcelle) who was wearing (for once at least) the pants in the family.

The Showboat theme aptly permeated the dinner setting with wall-length boat scenes and rippling lighting effects, while Denny Vaughan's orchestra played lively music throughout.

Mr. Merl "Ting" Tingley, editorial cartoonist for the London Free Press, highlighted the after-dinner entertainment with his amusing "chalk talk" and caricatures of prominent political figures.

A "ladies" fashion show, the latest in bathing apparel, and dance contest, extended the gay atmosphere.

Bottles of champagne for the best costumes went to Mr. and Mrs. Royal Carrière, the unusual man-and-wife team; Miss Diane Ouellet, as an effective chorus girl; and to hoboes Teddy Champagne and Mr. O. Carrière.

The evening was sponsored by the Ladies' Branch of the Golf Club. Ladies' president Mrs. R. Stephens termed the Showboat Nite "a happily successful venture".

Maritime editor elected president of weeklies group

J. Louis McKenna, publisher of the Sussex (N.B.) Kings County Record, has been elected president of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

Election took place at the closing session of the CWNA convention at the Macdonald Hotel in Edmonton.

John Sancton of the Westmount (Que.) Examiner was elected first vice-president and Arvid Lundell of the Revelstoke (B.C.) Review was named second vice-president.

Quebec directors of the more than 500-member organization are Roger Alarie, The Guardian, Verdun, and Robert Giles, Jr., The Lachute Watchman.

In his inaugural address, the newly-elected president pointed out that weekly editors must be continually conscious of the increased effect of government controls on Canadian freedom.

"Some politicians would be only too happy to inflict a controlled press on those they claim to represent," said Mr. McKenna. Despite this pressure, he said, weekly newspapers must continue "to serve the best interests of our people by informing our readers of what is going on and, where necessary, by providing leadership through editorial comment."

Mr. McKenna said that weekly publishers can best serve this purpose by putting out good newspapers which attain high readership and respect in their communities.

"We have a great number of free thinkers in Canada", he said, "and free thinking may have some useful purpose. But sensible thinking is far more important to Canada and it is in this field where the weekly newspapers stand out as a light brighter than any other type of medium."

Ancient artillery now on display at National sites

Weapons of war have changed terribly since primitive cannons were used at the Battle of Crécy over 600 years ago.

The history of some of these changes is shown in new exhibits at two of Canada's national historic sites — Fort Wellington at Prescott, Ont., and Fort Lennox at Ile-aux-Noix, Que.

Using actual weapons as well as pictures, both exhibits present the history of artillery up to the latter part of the 19th century.

The oldest gun illustrated is the "pot de fer" used at Crécy in 1346. Others include the cannon used to fortify Champlain's Habitation at Quebec in 1609.

The Canadian Historic Sites Division of the Department of National Resources has designed the two displays as a "primer course" in artillery.

Field guns, garrison guns, siege guns, carronades, mortars, howitzers — all are presented. The exhibits explain how each was fired and the tactical purpose for which it was used.

More than 150 signs, in French and English, are being erected to mark noteworthy features at the sites — Signal Hill, Nfld., Fort Amherst, P.E.I., Fort Anne, N.S., Fort Beauséjour and Fort Gaspareau, N.B., Fort Lennox, Que., Fort Malden, Ont., Lower Fort Garry, Man., Fort Battleford, Sask., Fort Rodd Hill and Fort Langley, B.C.

Trinity not used in Holy Scriptures

"Make Sure of All Things"

The above words may seem quite strange to you. But the fact is that Jesus did not teach the doctrine of the Trinity, and his disciples did not imagine that he was equal with the Father.

— At John 14: 28, and Luke 22: 42, Jesus said, "My father is greater than I and therefore, not my will but thine be done." Hence all, including Jesus, are in complete subjection to the great head, Almighty God. At the time of Jesus' baptism, God said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." — Matt. 3: 17.

John 8:28 — "I do nothing of my own initiative, but just as the Father taught me I speak these things."

Phil. 2:11 — "Every tongue should openly confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

John 5:19 — "The Son cannot do a single thing of his own initiative, but only what he beholds the Father doing."

Isa. 42:8 — "I am Jehovah, that is my name; and my glory will I not give to another."

John 12:49 "The Father himself that sent me has given me a commandment as to what to tell and what to speak."

I Peter 1:3 — "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ."

John 10:29 — "My Father is greater than all others."

John 17: 3, 23, 25 — "I have glorified you . . . having finished the work you have given me to do. . . . You sent me forth."

Luke 22:41, 42 — "(Jesus) began to pray, saying: 'Father, if you wish, turn this cup aside from me. Nevertheless, let, not my will but yours be done.'"

Jer. 10:10 — "But Jehovah is the true God; he is the living God and an everlasting being."

These are only a few of the scriptures that prove that Jesus is the Son of the great creator of the heavens and the earth, whose name alone is Jehovah — no third person.

Geologist-teacher new principal for Ont. high school

Maxville District High School will have eight new teachers in a staff of 18, when the new school year opens. The newcomers will include a new principal, Lester D. Gauley, B.Sc., who will not be a stranger in Maxville. He taught there two years ago, before going to Terrace Bay, Ont.

Now in Maxville completing arrangements for the new term, Mr. Gauley is a native of Kilmar and Grenville, a son of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Gauley, of the latter community.

A graduate in Geology from McGill University, Montreal, in 1952, he worked four years as mining geologist at Canadian Refractories, Kilmar, and as a field geologist for various mining companies until 1960, when he took up the teaching profession. He has since taught at Grenville, Que., Red Rock, Maxville and Terrace Bay, Ont.

In addition to his duties as principal, he will teach Geography.

the gap is ever-widening. In 1960-62 the per-capita income in developed countries raised by $100, but increased by only $5 in poor nations.

Man's primary concern since the dawn of history has been to forage for food. A man requires 2,600 calories a day to live normally. The average Canadian gets 3,000 a day. The average man in India gets 1,800 a day, with some getting as low as 200.

The question is — shall we help them get their food, or will we let them hunt for it? Man has a right to survive. He will survive — by taking his neighbor's garden if his own is barren.

This is one reason why we learned that co-operation in the world is essential.

United Church Women summer school held recently at Macdonald College

The third annual Summer School of United Church Women, Montreal and Ottawa Conference, was recently concluded at Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue. Mrs. E. C. Knowles, vice-president, Montreal and Ottawa Conference United Church Women, was the dean. Mrs. C. L. Duncan, Regional vice-president, Montreal Presbyterial, and Mrs. Merlyn Evans, attended the school from Lachute.

Rev. Allister Kirker, the theme speaker, highlighted the sessions, presenting two addresses based on the theme, "Unchanging Values in a Changing World". Speaking of the changes in the world today Mr. Kirker said that since the beginning of the century the rapidity of change has been greater than at any other time in history. He stressed changes in science, transportation and communication, social and political conditions and Urbanization. As a result of the rapidity of change he said that the religious view of life held yesterday is being changed. He added that even the nominally religious people of today do not hold with the views of yesterday.

Mr. Kirker said that the changes for people mean only confusion and uncertainty. However, he felt confident that people have resources to see themselves through each change joyfully.

Speaking about the "New Morality", he said that far too often the laws are viewed with a rigid interpretation and never with concern for the people involved. This does not mean that laws should be abolished, Mr. Kirker added. There is a need for law with reason.

Rev. Margaret Errey conducted the Bible Study which was based on the Scripture passages relating to the new book, "Jesus Christ and the Christian Life", recently written by Dr. A. B. Moore. In three sessions Mrs. Errey presented an enlightening review of the book. Discussion groups were formed to encourage further thought.

Miss Beatrice Wilson, Associate Secretary, Board of Women, United Church of Canada, conducted study sessions of social problems in which the church is concerned today.

Audio visual presentations by Mrs. Gwenne Currie, Montreal and Ottawa Audio Visual Counsellor, demonstrated the use that may be made of film strips, movies, tapes and records for programs of special study by congregational women.

Miss Fern Scruton, missionary on furlough from Japan, reported on changes that have occurred in the lives of Japanese women.

A panel included Miss Regina Boucher, Principal of the United Church School at Pointe aux Trembles; Mrs. William Spencer, House mother at the United Church Children's Home, Lachine; Rev. J. A. Breckenridge, (Assistant Minister, Mount Royal United Church) Chairman of Chaplaincy in the Montreal Presbytery, and the Rev. Egerton Armstrong, minister at the City Mission and the Church of All Nations (the "Inner City") discussed their responsibilities in the field of Christian Mission. Mrs. L. A. VanDuzer was the panel chairman.

Rev. F. A. C. Doxee conducted a communion service at the close of the school, in Union United Church.

Anastasie Parish Church. The mass will follow the Byzantine rite, and will be in the French language.

A Six-Year-Old Photographer?

How young are photographers? They are as young as children — children that can see something they want a picture of and can locate the subject in the viewfinder and trip the shutter.

Summertime is camera time for young people as well as old. It is the best time to introduce children to photography. They have their full range of activities: their trips to local parks and beaches, games, vacation and perhaps summer camp — all ideal occasions for pictures.

Parents would like pictures of such activities, but few are bold enough to invade a secret conference of the Wolf Cub week-end or a small daughter's slumber party to obtain them. These are the pictures the youngsters must take themselves.

Photography is a small cash investment for the pleasure it can bring. A simple camera for beginners costs less than many toys, lasts longer and pays dividends. To get a little long-hair about it, it is also an ideal medium for releasing creative ability in many children — and it's much less messy than finger painting.

When a child sees his pictures, after processing, study them with him. Show where the horizon should have been level, that much as he detests cousin Miranda it wasn't nice to chop off her head in the viewfinder.

Point out that the camera must be held steady and shutter pressed gently when taking a picture for really sharp results; that simple cameras don't take pictures closer than six feet unless a low cost close-up lens is slipped over the front, and if the child shows real interest, get one as an encouragement.

Simple cameras even have flash guns built in. This extends picture making to indoors, or outdoors at night — ideal for a wiener roast or campfire sing-song!

People who make young people their concern have recognized photography as a valuable and important hobby for some time. The Boy Scouts give a merit badge for it, and many schools have their photo clubs and darkrooms to encourage students.

Beyond this, however, a camera in the hands of a young boy or girl can give immeasurable pleasure, and build a keen and worthwhile interest.

This could be the autumn to start your child in photography!

Labor Day – top road killer

OF CANADA'S seven major holidays, the Labor Day week-end is well in the lead for its toll of death on the highways, according to the Canadian Highway Safety Council. In fact, the working man — in whose honor this holiday is celebrated — is taking a back seat in prominence, ousted by road victims who fill the news.

The average number of road fatalities on Labor Day week-end in Canada is 61. Other holidays have averages below that. They include 25 for New Year's (the least); 35 for Easter, 42 for Victoria Day, 45 for Dominion Day, 50 for Christmas, 52 for Thanksgiving.

Major causes are seen as the urge for superiority, the lust for speed, reluctance to "give in" to the other driver, failure to follow correct driving procedures and use car features designed to help avoid mishaps. Added to these is a dangerous lack of attention to the simple signs that warn of potential peril.

School dropout faces dead-end road

DOORS ARE SLAMMING rapidly for the thousands of young Canadians who leave high school before graduation.

Once the dropout could make it without a diploma, if he had the brains and the determination. Today his chances are infinitesimal. For the diploma is more than just a certificate, it has become "a character reference and, most important, a passport to the interview for that first job."

"That first job" used to be easy to get. No longer. Today most firms insist that even their store clerks and office boys come equipped with high school diplomas.

Much has been written about automation's impact on our society. For the skilled worker automation means a golden opportunity to move upward. For the dropout, it means more dead ends as numerous unskilled jobs disappear from the economy every day.

The situation, however, looks hopeful in New Brunswick, where the department of youth and welfare reports rewarding results from a novel anti-dropout scheme. Whenever a student reveals that he's quitting school, his principal notifies the nearest youth services' representative who invites the boy in for a voluntary interview. A case file is made and a guidance counsellor then conducts aptitude tests, reporting results to the student and his parents. Faced with a clearer idea of his potential, many a youngster will chart a new course of study instead of joining the ranks of unskilled labor. "Many drop-outs don't know where to get necessary information for courses," says John T. Murrant, the department's director of youth. "We supply this, and more often than not they apply at the proper places, are accepted and go on to successful careers."

Host to the world

THE GIANT WORLD EXHIBITION which opens in Montreal on April 28, 1967, and runs for six months will be both the first such ever to be held on the North American continent and the highlight of Canada's Centennial Year celebrations.

Already, Expo '67 — to give it its colloquial name — is shaping up as the greatest and most truly universal exhibition of all time.

Of 129 independent countries in the world today, some 52 (including the United States and the Soviet Union) have so far announced their participation. Most if not all of the remaining 30 nations which currently have the question under active consideration are expected to do likewise. All in all, the Expo authorities have every reason to be happy at such impressive evidence of international support.

But this 1967 World Exhibition is not solely, or even mainly, a governmental affair, a spectacular array of national pavilions and little else. The whole imaginative concept and theme of Expo '67 — "Man and His World" — has been developed in such a way as to allow the fullest participation on the part of Canadian industry and commerce no less than foreign countries.

Canada's own national, regional and provincial pavilions will, of course, convey something of our past achievements and future hopes, but it is not to be expected that they can or will adequately explain our economic and industrial accomplishments and aims. Clearly, the opportunity to demonstrate the attainments and potential of the economic system under which Canadians live is one in which companies of every size and type can share.

In the words of Drummond Giles, Expo's Director of Canadian Exhibits: "There's a place for all, large or small, and participation offers an unexcelled chance for good public relations, advertising and national goodwill, a golden opportunity to make known to the entire world just what this country of ours can produce and what it can deliver."

How charitable are they?

MANY OF CANADA'S submissive and obedient taxpayers will be surprised to learn that the federal government lacks any real supervision over Canadian charities, comments The Financial Post. Most provinces make no systematic checks either. Besides the obvious license for abuse created by the neglect, it endangers the generous spirit and taste for giving that distinguishes civilized from uncivilized human beings. Part of the failure rests with the charitable organizations themselves. They must submit themselves for public accounting secure in the belief that an informed, confident public will also be a charitable one. But government must also assume responsibility for this oversight if it doesn't want to face the accusation that it eroded public confidence in charitable giving. Right now Ottawa doesn't know how many charities there are. It doesn't know which are going concerns and which have ceased to exist. Even less excusable is the lack of control which allows charitable organizations to exist from year to year without even a nod to Ottawa, let alone an accounting of how they collect or spend their monies. There are reports that the government intends to do something to rectify the situation. This will include a system of licensing, complete with requirements for full annual financial and accounting statements. This much anyway is certain. The charitable organizations that do their job properly would welcome such changes as much as the charity-giving public.

In a few weeks charitable organizations across Canada will move into high gear with fund-raising campaigns which will seek scores of millions of dollars. Thousands of agencies affiliated to some 120 United Appeals alone will ask for more than $40 million, according to the Canadian Welfare Council (CWC). Independent agencies (cancer, heart, Salvation Army, etc.) will add greatly to this total.

Viewpoints and perspectives

SPEED CONTROL WISE. — We would suggest the officials in charge of motor vehicles being built in Canada seriously consider the idea of governors on cars. Each day we hear reports of the accident rate climbing and along with the same statistics it is noted that speeding was a major factor of the accident.

— Gananoque (Ont.) Reporter

TOLL STILL HIGH. — The medical attack against lung cancer has been massive, but it has done little to hamper its ravages. The survival rate remains a pitiful six per cent. Medical scientists tell us that cigarettes are to blame for 80 per cent of lung cancer deaths. For the Canadian Cancer Society the immediate line of attack is clear. "SIGH..."

Member condemns action of gov't following Royal Commission report

TO THE EDITOR

67 Wynchwood Park,
Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sir:

In a Boston cemetery an epitaph for an infant reads:

Seeing I am so soon done for,
I wonder what I was begun for.

This has been recurring in my mind because, as things have turned out, the Royal Commission on Publications wasted my time, and the time of the other commissioners. And the taxpayers' money.

The real problem was evident from the beginning, namely, that Time and Reader's Digest had an unfair advantage in Canada over genuine Canadian magazines. After months of work and the issuance of a logical and fair report, the law now gives Time and Reader's Digest an even greater advantage than they had before. Henry Luce must be well content.

Both these publications bring into Canada without paying any customs duty, all or nearly all, of their editorial material. It is expensive and exclusive editorial material against which a Canadian magazine cannot compete.

Senator O'Leary, who was the chairman of the commission, has denounced the measure as passed in Parliament under the Liberal Government in these words: "If this house (the Senate) votes for this legislation it will be voting for the proposition that Washington has a right to interfere in a matter of purely Canadian concern."

I do not blame the Liberal Government any more than I blame the predecessor government headed by Mr. Diefenbaker. The real block toward solving this age-old problem in Canada came, according to Senator O'Leary and others, from Washington.

The Washington government wants these publications to maintain a powerful and influential position in Canada. It is easy to see why. I have no objection to Americanism, but I also like Canadianism and do not think that I should be reduced to reading only products of the United States and MacLean's Magazine, which could happen in the magazine field if no protection is given.

The argument of the government that these two publications had established a "tradition" in Canada for the reason that their Canadian editions were printed here, does not stand up to even a momentary examination. There are hundreds of U.S. manufacturing subsidiaries in Canada but no one has suggested that the U.S. connection should enable these subsidiaries to be nurtured at the expense of home-grown competitors.

The way Parliament has left this problem is that Time and Reader's Digest are stronger than ever in the Canadian market and no other foreign magazine, under the law, can come into Canada to compete.

It is ironical also that this new Canadian law got on the statute books within the week of the Canadian celebration of Confederation, the 98th anniversary, and the United States celebration of its Independence Day.

Perhaps the United States would or could also grant to Canada some independence.

Yours truly,
J. G. Johnston

Visitor distressed on unilingual place signs

TO THE EDITOR

Agincourt, Ont.,
August 29, 1965

Editor, Lachute Watchman

Dear Sir:

I recently had occasion to pay two short visits to Lachute, my old home town, and in many ways this was a real pleasure. However, it was most distressing to note that the signs now up for the North River are not in English, or even in English and French, but in French only. I feel very strongly that this is not fair play. Where is the sense of justice that I have always associated with Lachute? Surely it is time that both English and French cultures realized that for either one to grow in wisdom one must have respect for the other.

I hope that the next time I visit Lachute I will find such signs as the above-mentioned to be displayed fairly, in both languages.

Yours sincerely,
(Mrs.) Hazel G. Baines

SUGAR AND SPICE . . .

Aged Honeymooners

Things are rather at sixes and sevens around here today. It's Second Honeymoon time, and the Old Battleaxe and I are flying around in a tizzy of preparation.

The fact that we'll have an 18-year-old son along for part of the honeymoon trip won't slow us down. He can find a girl of his own. The main thing is to get out of town for a while.

This business of running a summer hotel with the lowest rates on the continent can prove trying. The clientele has been of the highest class, but the whole enterprise has its drawbacks. Not only do the guests expect you to stay up all night with them, but their children, who happen to be your nieces, nephews and other small buddies, expect you to be on deck at 7 a.m. to tell them: where the cereal is; how you turn on the lawn sprinkler; "Are we going swimming soon, Uncle Bill?"; and why Daddy was so grouchy when they tried to wake him.

And there are other things. Next year I'm going to buy barbecue charcoal by the carload. I've cooked so many steaks and hamburgers I can't look a steer in the face. The manager of the local booze emporium told me the other day he'd give me a summer job next year, because I'm in there every day anyway. I've slept on a chesterfield in the living room, a couch in my study, a mattress on the attic floor, and half-reclining lawn chair, but I haven't been in my own bed in a month.

Oh well, it's all part of the game, and we enjoy having them. However, I do think it's a bit much when they start making reservations for next year, and assuring us they'll recommend the place to all their friends, because of the low rates, excellent cuisine, free drinks, and nightly entertainment (no cover charge).

At any rate, with nobody booked for this week, our wedding anniversary coming up, and daughter safely off to camp with enough clothes to go to Europe, and a bag of fruit, candy and cookies she could scarcely lift, we're getting ready for The Trip.

First leg of The Trip will be up the Great Lakes, and I quote from the folder, " . . . long, lazy, brilliant days . . . cool nights with stars swinging low . . . sky-blue waters . . . etc." Actually, we'll have only one and a half of those long, lazy days, but two of those star-swinging nights. It'll rain. I'll give odds. Eight to one.

We're going on a passenger steamer known as Hugh's Boat. It used to belong to a steamer service line, but since son Hugh obtained a job this summer as Entertainment Steward, it has become known far and wide as Hugh's Boat. After all, he has a pretty important position. He's listed on the directory of feature services with the Barber, Handy Shop and Motion Pictures.

I've promised to help him entertain the passengers by rendering my famous version of a drunk singing, "I Belong Tae Glasgie". He was reluctant to impose on my good nature, but I brushed aside his repeated protests.

His mother has promised not to embarrass him by telling him, in front of the passengers, that he needs a shoeshine, that he's not playing that piece in the right key, that he left his room in a mess last time he was home, or that it's high time he was in bed.

Second leg of The Trip will be by car, around the top of the Lakes. We've left nothing to chance. I've borrowed sleeping bags from our music teacher, a tent from our minister, and money from our bank manager. We have a road map. It's an oldish one, 1954, but why worry about that!

Well, bon voyage, and if you'll excuse me now, I'll get out in the backyard and have another practice go at putting up the preacher's tent.

It's a pretty religious tent, I expect.

Every time I get it up, it sinks to its knees in an attitude of prayer.

Safety Before Style

If a national epidemic were to rage across Canada this year, killing nearly 5,000 persons, we would accept almost any measure, and pay almost any cost, to bring it under control. If we had been involved in a 10-year war on some faraway battlefield that had claimed the lives of 35,000 Canadians and injured another one million, no government would have survived the wrath of public opinion.

Yet the automobile death toll in Canada is now running at exactly this rate. Unless the tide is turned, traffic deaths will soon exceed heart disease and cancer as the main killer of Canadians.

From this, it would seem obvious that so-called safety crusades aimed at the driver have been a failure. Public apathy remains as great as ever.

But if the general public is not yet alarmed about this carnage, there are groups in both the United States and Canada which are at last tackling the basic cause of traffic deaths.

The major factor in road deaths, we now know, is in the unsafe design of our automobiles. Bad driving is a related cause, of course, but the fact that North American car manufacturers have always put the emphasis on style instead of safety is a bigger cause than drunkenness or speeding.

A Canadian group headed by Heward Grafftey, a Quebec Liberal MP, recently told Prime Minister Pearson that "many lives now being lost could be saved if safety features already tested and known were incorporated into the design of automobiles."

The Canadian Government has yet to act on this warning, leaving the initiative to the provinces on the gounds that highways and related matters are a provincial responsibility.

In the U.S., however, some 36 bills are now moving through Congress that would effect highway safety. Not all of these will be passed, but a good number will, and as a result, we can anticipate many more safety features on cars in the future.

The auto industry has always fallen back on one main defense for producing killer vehicles. The excuse — and it is not without some justification — is that the public buys on the basis of chrome and style, not safety. But now even the auto industry admits that the solution is to ram safety features down the public's throat by government legislation which would put all car makers on an equal basis in the distasteful business of producing safe cars.

It has already been announced in Canada that additional safety features will be incorporated in all vehicles manufactured in this country in 1966. The main addition is that all cars will carry safety belts in front and rear seats.

But more remains to be done. The two most pressingly needed additions are collapsable steering wheels and cushioned bumpers. All this will make cars cost more, but this is the price we are going to have to pay if we are even to begin grappling realistically with the mounting highway death toll.

Part of the problem remains in the basic public attitude toward car driving. Most people regard operating a car as a right. It is not — it is a privilege — and our courts need to get much tougher with errant drivers.

As a start, we can give our support to compulsory automobile inspection, which is now carried on in only a few parts of Canada. Every unsafe car should be ruled off the road.

We also need to support our courts in lifting the licenses of bad drivers. Most bad driving results from personality and psychological problems of a minority of motorists.

Let the courts order psychological tests for repeated offenders. And don't holler when our taxes go up to pay the cost. We can start by doubling the cost of car licenses and using the money to get killers off the road.

Your Child's Teacher

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

It is a little hard on mother, who has been the most important person in Junior's life, to have to move over and give "teacher" room. Once Junior starts to school, what "teacher" says and does is of first importance. His classroom guide is a new and different adult whom he is getting to know. Teacher speaks with all the authority of the school behind her, whereas he has become quite used to mother's ways and mother's voice!

It is very easy for parents, especially mothers, to be critical of their child's instructor. People make allowances for the idiosyncrasies of their friends and acquaintances. But far too often parents do not know their child's teacher except by name. One of the very useful functions of the Home and School Clubs is to provide a meeting place for parents and teachers. Every mother and father should make a real effort to attend and support the Home and School gatherings.

Once they have had a chat with her, most parents discover that their child's teacher is quite human. She takes on definite shape as a person, with problems and difficulties, just like any other grown-up.

Of course, parents should feel free to go and see their child's teacher. This visit should not interrupt a regular teaching session. It should be at a time which is convenient for both teacher and parent. It is best for a mother to phone and say, "I am Johnny Doe's mother and I would like to have a talk with you. When would this fit in with your schedule?"

The sad part is that so often a parent who seeks an interview with a teacher has a complaint to make. Seldom does mother take time to see teacher to give her a compliment or to ask her about something which is puzzling her. Some issue, some grievance, in the teacher's handling of her child, is usually the occasion which spurs a mother into "seeing teacher".

Once in a while parents write a note or call the teacher to voice their dissatisfaction. This seems a simpler and quicker method of communication to many mothers. But it is a poor substitute for a face to face talk in a friendly atmosphere. The writer of the note does not immediately get the other person's reaction to the problem.

Parents need to try to put themselves into teacher's place. Then they will likely see that she has a demanding job on her hands with a room full of children. She is trying to do her best with twenty or thirty or even more children — each different and needing special thought and attention.

It is quite true that methods of teaching various subjects, especially Arithmetic, have changed in recent years. Parents who attempt to "help" their child with his homework may only confuse him. But this is not the teacher's fault. If a child is getting behind in a subject, the teacher will be only too glad to suggest ways in which he can catch up with his classmates by doing a little extra work "the new way".

A boy or girl will benefit if parents look on a teacher, not with critical eyes, but with understanding and appreciation. The teacher is the child's friend and helper — not his enemy. The home and the school are partners in one of the most vital tasks in the world — that of training the next generation. Your relationship to your child's teacher is important.

Teatime Topics

By Jean Sharp,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sandwiches for picnics, sandwiches for the school days ahead can be a problem if they give you that "same old thing" feeling.

It might seem like less work to you if you freeze them — then you can make them in batches.

You can freeze all varieties of bread and rolls. Most fillings of meat, poultry, fish, cheese or nut meats will freeze well, but freeze sandwiches only when they are freshly made.

Small packages are best for your freezer because they'll freeze quickly and evenly. You probably won't be able to tell one sandwich from another once it's wrapped unless you label it by ingredient and perhaps by date.

Waxed paper or transparent wraps will protect sandwiches in the freezer for a couple of weeks, but if you are going to keep them longer, use moisture and vapor-proof wrapping.

Hot Eggs

You shouldn't freeze egg sandwiches; the eggs will become tough and dry. Lettuce, celery, tomatoes, cucumber and watercress lose crispness and become watery when they are frozen.

Fruit jelly probably will soak into the bread when it's thawing, so should be avoided, as should oil dressings or mayonnaise which separates during freezing.

Thaw frozen sandwiches in their original wrappings and plan thawing time so sandwiches will be ready just in time for serving. Individual sandwiches should thaw in a couple of hours, but whole loaves take four to six hours.

Like any other food, sandwiches which have been thawed should never be re-frozen.

Perishable

If you don't freeze sandwiches, but do make them ahead of time, remember they are perishable and should not be left at room temperature for more than two hours before they are to be eaten.

If you are making several, do as you would for freezing, and wrap them individually for the refrigerator so that cold can penetrate each package.

When they are prepared under normal temperature and humidity conditions they can be stored safely in the refrigerator for 12 to 24 hours, but no longer. The temperature must be under 50 degrees.

You can vary lunches by using several kinds of breads and rolls in one lunch and over the course of a week.

Eye protection for children in the sun

A proclamation for all parents, guardians, governesses and baby sitters: Be it known that children (untamed, unwashed or unhousebroken) are people, too. That means they deserve the same consideration that adults give to themselves when exposed to a day in the sun.

When at a beach, on vacation, or even if you're only out in the country for the day, look around and note the number of young children, even those in toddling or infant stages, who are exposed to the sun without any protection. It's an unfair contest, with the child getting the beating.

Direct exposure to bright light of any kind is bad for the eyes of a young child and direct sunlight is especially harmful in big doses. When light is poor, we strain to see. But too much light can be equally productive of eye fatigue and nervous tension.

The explanation lies in the sensitivity of the retina to light. If the air were perfectly clear, we could see the light of a candle at a distance of a mile. Therefore, when we look directly at a very bright light, it is blinding. Instinctively we try to protect the eyes from glare by closing them or by raising a hand as a shield.

That's why it's important to make sure that children in the sun are given proper eye protection. Unless you do so, you may find that sun, wind, dust, swimming pool chlorine, water or highway glare will turn your outing into a headache instead of pleasant and deserved relaxation.

In order to get the maximum enjoyment and protection from the great outdoors, researchers recommend that you follow these basic rules:

Teach your children never to look directly into the sun and to keep their backs to it as much as possible.

A head covering is a "must" and junior size sunglasses are recommended. A good sun tan lotion and available shade, such as a beach umbrella, should also be provided.

Don't let children take books or funny papers on a trip and try to read them in the sun. Eye specialists warn that reading in the sun, or even in the shade of a beach umbrella, can be very hard on a child's eyes.

A major problem on a trip or vacation can be caused by dust or blowing sand. The best way to remove a speck of dust from the eye is to bring the upper lid down over the lower, and let tear secretion wash it away. An application of eye drops may give a helpful assist and relieve the irritation that usually follows.

Don't let a child rub his or her eye and never attempt to remove a speck that seems to be imbedded in the cornea. If there is any problem like that it's best to consult an eye doctor immediately.

Time of school opening important milestone for young children

September, the month of school opening, may arouse varied sentiments. The small one who is taking his first steps out into the wide world of education, will probably run the gamut of emotions — pride, fear, joy, homesickness, boredom, jealousy and an overdose of fed-upness, possibly followed by going on strike, when the whole subject of education will be anathema! But almost immediately things will calm down and Junior will settle in to absorb knowledge.

Mama will shed a few tears at the thought of her little darling out in the cold world, but she'll soon appreciate her free hours while he is safe in school.

Before he makes his debut into the new fields, he should be given a thorough check-up by his doctor or at the child health unit at the local health department. He needs a complete examination, including his eyes, ears and teeth, so that he may start school with every possible advantage.

Also important is the immunization which can protect him against diphtheria, smallpox, whooping cough, polio and tetanus or if he has already had these protective shots, then the "booster" shots should be given.

His diet is important and if he carries his lunch to school, it should consist of foods that approximate the midday meal he would get at home — containing one third of the day's nutrition.

Make sure that your youngster starts out with a good grounding in the rules of the sidewalk and road; running out into the road after a ball could take his life.

He should know that the policeman is his best friend when he is lost or in any kind of trouble, but strangers should never be talked to and rides in strange cars should not be accepted.

When he comes home from school, don't be too busy to hear his story of his day. It will make him feel important and appreciated by his family if you show interest in his work.

PRICE OF PROGRESS

While the death rate from influenza, bronchitis and pneumonia has been almost halved in Canada in the past 30 years, the number of deaths from motor accidents has almost doubled. That's progress.

Q.W.I. members on American program

Members of Stanstead County Women's Institutes (Quebec) appeared as special guests recently on WCAX-TV Burlington, Vermont, U.S.A., on the program "Across the Fence".

It was an international program with Tony Adams, announcer, featuring the Canadian group on this American station. Mrs. Rixford Knight, County President, explained the aims and purpose of the Women's Institutes, mentioning some of their projects. One project of many years standing is the annual County School Fair and Mrs. D. Johnston, County Convener of Agriculture, spoke on this and answered many questions. She also showed some recent exhibits. Views of the County were also displayed.

The full program was arranged by Miss Viola Moranville of Beebe WI, who has done many broadcasts for the WI's. Stanstead County WI has been giving a monthly program on WIKE Newport, Vt., for many years.

Stanstead and Rock Island, Que., and Derby Line, Vt., are known as the Three Villages and have a common 'Main' street and share telephone, electricity, water, etc. services. It is also the site of the famous Opera House and Library where the books are in Canada and the entrance in the U.S.A., while upstairs the audience sits in the U.S.A. and the stage is in Canada. The Line runs through apartments and factories. A street, Canusa, in Beebe divides Beebe, Vt., and Beebe, Que.

'Nice time of year' with a day for the downtrodden laborer

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

When this reaches the reading public, Labor Day week-end will be upon us. It always seems to sneak up on the unwary vacationer. Like Keat's Bees, we think that "summer will never end." I see in one of the papers, that the heads of Labor think it might be well to omit the usual parades, and speeches on behalf of the down-trodden laborer; even these usually insensitive people are a little fed up with strikes. Some base-ball fan, with a sense of humor, has suggested that Montreal runs a four-strike game. Now that the postal workers have obtained 80% of their objective, we can expect similar demonstrations from other workers. We were particularly intrigued by the slogan carried by one of the strikers, asking in French, "Could YOU live on this?" The answer is YES. What Canada needs at present is not more and better wages, but dedicated and efficient leaders; men who are men first, and politicians second. Speaking of men, I nominate Charlotte Whitton as next leader of the Progressive Conservatives.

Reading the news of the day, until one is ready to chew the paper and spit wood-pulp, is hard on the nerves — but once we have cast the wretched sheet down, and escaped into the great outdoors, we soon calm down. Unknowing, and uncaring of petty politicians, Mother Nature pursues her way. On the apple trees, the fruit is now visible as fast-growing rosy globes; at our feet the low-bush blackberries gleam like jet; the Joe-Pieweed flaunts its mauve heads, well above mine, and the bottle gentian lifts its blue flasks to the sun and rain. A few trees show a little color rather than green, and the second crop of robins is learning to fly. Everything is aware that summer wanes, and prepares accordingly. A nice time of year, although, perhaps, carrying in it a seed of sadness.

It has been a good summer at Sunnyacres, in spite of the early drought, and the latter rainfalls. The garden responded enthusiastically to the moisture, and the soil was nice and soft for digging. The head of the house has, unaided, dug up an area approximately 25'x18', removing in the process fifteen rocks. We look like Stonehenge or Easter Island. The phlox have been moved to their new quarters, and are already settling down happily. Two baskets of bulbs await planting next month, and the shovel now threatens the roses and the lupins. If the plants, and we, all live till next spring, we should have a nice garden.

Life is not all digging, and preserving. We make the odd trip. Some are distinctly odd. Like the one for blueberries, when we got stuck two miles from any human life, and walked out through hot sun, and enthusiastic thunderstorms, to seek help. The nice thing was that said help was abundantly given. One kind lady comforted us with delicious home-made cinnamon buns, and another produced a stalwart man, and even more stalwart tow-truck, so that we got home in time for supper. Up here, we know what the word "neighbor" signifies; in the suburbs, it means the queer people that live next door. Another day, we had to walk a mile briskly for our dinner, as we discovered a flat on one wheel of the car, just minutes before the dinner bell was due to ring. Another neighbor brought us home after the meal. Then there was the day we entertained some people by walking them back to the little private lake, and home by an extremely rugged way. Half way back, the wife confided that her husband had broken his back last winter! I hope the fact that father went home after the week at the hotel, while mother and two boys stayed on, has no connection with our entertainment.

Now, at the end of summer, everybody is trying to do the things they have left undone, like true Anglicans. Regattas, teas, cooked-food sales, and dinner parties are the order of the day. The good people of Holy Trinity are working like mad to harvest enough dollars to make a substantial payment on the debt to Synod for the new hall. It is nice to know that there are people that realize that nobody gets something for nothing. In some rural parishes there is an idea, not always expressed, that the church authorities at Anglican House have lots of money, so why work too hard to repay a debt? This, of course, is ignorance. The money that Synod lends Little Dingle in the Dell, is automatically denied Big Church on the Hill. Conversely, the money paid into Synod goes elsewhere on its mission. Anyway, a debt is a debt.

Very dull, says some one — "church and politics"; so how about animal life? We were able to get within four feet of a hawk on the road, the day of the abortive blueberry expedition; he was holding some unfortunate prey with a talon, and tearing off bits with his beak. Partridge quite often sit in the road, so that we have to stop the car in order not to squash them. A skunk, half grown, meanders about the garden and lawn, I suspect digging up bulbs. Several cats have come to call, and the raccoon at a neighbor's place is getting very saucy. It opens doors, walks in, and takes anything it fancies. An opened refrigerator door is an invitation to climb the shelves and filch dainties. Rabbits appear to be scarce, or else it is only the stupid ones that are seen. I am informed that other people like wild life, to the extent that cages are rigged up for inquisitive animals. Quite often, a raccoon will slip the trigger on a Monday, then sit without exercise, food or water, until the following week-end. The ignorance and insensitivity of humans is disgusting. It is a measure of a person's intelligence, the treatment of animals or persons weaker than one's self. . . Don't look now, but your ignorance may be showing!

Be with you at the end of the month.

THE WELL-BALANCED LUNCH BOX

Packing well-balanced, tasty lunches for youngster, teen-ager or adult requires skill and knowledge. Each of these age groups has different needs and tastes.

By following the basic lunch pattern recommended by nutrition experts the home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, show in this picture how lunch can be adapted to each age group. Extras such as place mats, thermos jars of hot soup or baked beans, and home made cookies make each lunch box a special occasion.

Variation on a lunch theme

If there are several age groups in your family for whom you must prepare carried lunches, you are probably faced with the endless problem of what to prepare. Naturally, you are concerned with providing your family with good nutrition. The following suggestions are from the home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Nutrition experts point out that each age group requires certain amounts of food to provide adequate nutrition for growth and repair of the body. When preparing lunches, it is important to keep this in mind.

Lunch Menu Pattern

The following lunch pattern, which should supply about one third of the day's food requirements, can be adapted to the various age groups in your family:

Protein Food (meat, fish, cheese, eggs)
Bread and butter
Fruit or vegetable (raw, cooked or canned)
Milk.

Desserts and extras may be included as long as they do not interfere with the basic lunch outlined.

Lunch for the Child, Teen-ager and Adult

If you have an 8 or 9-year-old child, you might prepare the following lunch:

½ Cup of tomato soup, served piping hot in a thermos, whole wheat sandwich with cheese and pickle filling, carrot and celery sticks, 2 oatmeal cookies, small raw apple and ½ pint of milk (to be bought at school).

To adapt this for a teen-ager increase the soup to ¾ cup, add an extra sandwich, increase the cookies to three, increase the milk to one pint.

For the man of the family, give him a hot main dish for a change. Substitute the soup and sandwiches for baked beans in tomato sauce and two slices of buttered bread. For texture contrast tuck in a dill pickle and raw carrot sticks. For dessert give him a wedge of Cheddar cheese, a large apple and four oatmeal cookies. Hot coffee may be bought at work.

You can see from these suggestions that you must adapt the type and the amount of food to the age and needs of each member of the family.

Pack safety into the lunch box

The homemaker must consider many points when she prepares food for the lunch box. Is the lunch tasty, does it provide good nutrition, and will it keep safely for several hours without refrigeration?

If refrigeration is not available, most homemakers rely on the safety of the "dry" lunch, that is sandwiches, raw fruit and vegetables, and, perhaps, cake or cookies. If the lunch is provided with an efficient thermos, hot soup, cold juice or milk are often packed too. If a thermos is not available, these items must be bought at school or office.

Although this type of lunch has good keeping qualities there are extra precautions that can be taken to ensure that the foods are safe to eat.

Sanitation experts teach food handlers of commercial establishments and hospitals that bacteria and cleanliness do not exist together. We would do well to take a good look at our own habits and be sure that our equipment, preparation areas and hands are scrupulously clean.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, give us the following safety tips on preparing sandwiches for the lunch box. These ideas may be used when preparing sandwiches for other occasions too.

Prepare fillings in small quantities; avoid leftovers.

Handle bread and fillings as little as possible.

If you have a great many sandwiches to prepare, keep the bulk of the fillings in the refrigerator, and use as required.

Do not make fillings too moist, since food-poisoning bacteria grow rapidly in a moist atmosphere.

In foods such as meats, cheese and eggs, bacteria grow more rapidly.

Foods of high acid content are safer. Pickles, lemon juice or vinegar may be added to most sandwich fillings to protect keeping quality and retard bacterial growth.

Prepare sandwiches as quickly as possible and store them in the refrigerator or freezer immediately following preparation.

Fill the lunch box at the very last minute for maximum safety.

If you have frozen the sandwiches, take them out of the freezer in the morning. They will be thawed by lunch time.

EDUCATION AND PROGRESS

Education is a wonderful thing. Only a few generations ago people thought that the world was square. Now everybody knows that it is crooked. A story is told of a man who ordered a suit made to measure by a Jewish tailor. He selected the material, had his measurement taken and agreed to the price, and was told that the suit would be ready in 30 days.

"Thirty days!" said the customer, "Why such a long time? God made the whole world in six days!"

"Yes, so He did", said the tailor. "And look at the shape it's in now!"

To some people progress means the building of high-rise apartment houses. To me, an apartment house is not a home. It is a filing cabinet. A place to eat, sleep and change your shirt.

Instead of scientists trying to find out if Mars is inhabited, why don't they devote their learning to help the folks on a planet that we know IS inhabited? Are they clever enough to explain why a can of corned beef that cost 12½c in 1939 now costs 57c? It is reasonable to expect anything to cost twice as much today than it did in 1939, but why should anything be four times as much? I have my own definition of progress — "The art of destroying everything worth while and replacing it with man-made structures of steel and concrete."

Be seein' ya!

Bennett - Rainey

Standards of white and pink gladioli formed the setting in Grenville Baptist Church, Saturday, August 14, when Miss Clara Rainey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rainey, of Grenville, exchanged vows with Mr. Murray Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Bennett, of Grenville Bay, in a double-ring ceremony conducted by the Rev. Gerald Hunt.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white lace suit with white and pink accessories. She carried a cascade of pink roses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. John Neill, sister of the groom, wore a pink linen suit trimmed with lace, with white accessories, and carried a colonial bouquet of white mums.

The bride's mother wore a flowered blue silk dress and a gardenia corsage. The mother of the groom wore a powder blue ensemble of linen and lace, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Winston Rainey, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Usher was John Rainey, also brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the home of the groom.

The couple will reside in their new home at Grenville Bay.

DO YOU HAVE YOUR SOCIAL INSURANCE CARD?

YOU NEED A SOCIAL INSURANCE NUMBER

- If you are an employee and work in Quebec
- If you work for yourself and live in Quebec

Why you need a number

Without your social insurance number, no contribution to the Quebec Pension Plan can be credited to your account.

Without your social insurance number, therefore, it will be impossible to determine the amount of the retirement pension and of other benefits to which you might eventually become entitled under the Plan.

How to obtain your number

If you are an employee

Apply to the Quebec Pension Board for a social insurance number through your employer, by filling the application form he will provide. The Board is now sending the necessary documents to all employers. Upon receipt of your application, the Board will issue a social insurance card showing your number.

If you work for yourself

The Board will communicate with you by mail in mid-September.

Do not ask for a social insurance number

- If you already have one. Numbers assigned by the Unemployment Insurance Commission since April 1, 1964 remain valid.
- If you have recently completed an application for a number.
- If you have lost your social insurance number card. In this case, ask to have the card replaced.

One died in crash, another died in hospital

Robert Dorman a 43-year-old resident of Montreal and St. Andrews East, was instantly killed Monday evening when the car which he was driving was involved in a head-on crash at the junction of Route 8 and the Beech Ridge Road, approximately two miles from the Lachute town limits. According to investigating police officers, it appears that the car driven by the victim failed to stop prior to pulling onto the highway, resulting in a head-on crash with a car driven by Fernand Bussières proceeding towards Montreal. Bussières, a resident of Montreal, was taken to the Hotel Dieu Hospital in St. Jerome, where he succumbed to injuries on Tuesday. Mr. Dorman was married to Françoise Roquebrune, of St. Andrews East. No date for the inquests has been set. The mishap was investigated by Traffic Agents Yvon Faucheon and Normand Parent, along with Cpl. J. P. Dallaire.

Town councillors pass agreement to take over land-site of Lions Arena

Town Council has agreed in principle to take over the land belonging to the Lions Club on which the new arena has been constructed. This decision was taken at the regular September meeting. The transaction will cost the town $15,000.

After discussing this measure, Mayor Dr. Saindon finally voiced approval to the enterprise and its promoters, and also suggested that the Richelieu Club be invited to re-formulate their offer of last year in regard to the Richelieu Park.

Cost Up to $110,000

According to Mozart Carrière, arena chairman, who presented the proposition to Council, the Lions Club had foreseen construction costs of $90,000 to $95,000. Since then, however, it had been decided to lay a concrete floor in the arena, at $8,000. A modern and appropriate lighting system is costing another $8,000, whereas first estimates had called for $1,500. And there was an additional expense of $1,500 for new boards around the rink, whereas it had been thought the old ones could be made use of.

Land Area 75,000 Sq. Ft.

"We are offering the site of 75,000 square feet, which we purchased from the Agricultural Society, for $15,000 with a suggestion that you rent it back to us at a nominal $1 a year for 99 years. It is understood that on termination of our $40,000 mortgage the lease will be withdrawn also that the lease be automatically annulled if and when the municipality desires to take over the arena for the sum-total of our debt," stated Mr. Carrière.

"I believe this will be an immeasurable asset to Lachute, when you consider that on November 1, when we open our doors, the Lions Club will have expended $110,000 — without the ice-making equipment which was already in our possession."

Speaking first on this proposition, the mayor understood that the building costs would reach $110,000 and that the Council was faced with a "fait accompli". . . "It is unfortunate that so much money should have been spent without co-ordinate planning, and that the municipality should now have to incur expense. . . Understand, I am not against the arena, to the contrary; but I feel that too much money has been put into it without co-ordination between the various groups and the municipality.

"I regret," he continued, "that previous councils had taken no initiative in recreation, and it now falls upon us to assume the responsibility. Recreation is not a matter for social clubs, even though the Richelieu and the Lions have done a wonderful job in this matter over the past several years.

"Even if the Council is faced with an accomplished fact," the mayor concluded, "we are obliged to do something towards it, and on behalf of our youth — and we should also ask the Richelieu Club to submit a new proposal to Council on its park and swimming pool."

Recreation in General

According to the mayor, the arena and the swimming pool are now foremost projects on our "recreation plan", but the day is not far distant when the municipal corporation must assume its full responsibility in recreation, with aid from the provincial and federal governments. "I hope, until that time, that the Richelieu and the Lions will continue their good work."

Taxpayers Would Approve

In his submission, Mozart Carrière had stated that the Lions would be disposed to turn over the arena to the municipality for the price of its outstanding obligations. It should be recalled that the population has already subscribed $35,000 for this construction (he said), and the taxpayers would look favorably on any assistance the municipality saw fit to extend in the project.

Quebec reactions to brief asking Route 8 overhaul

The president of the Chambers of Commerce Union for Western Quebec, Roland Turpin, of Thurso, states that Quebec Government will undertake a new stretch of road for Route 8 between Masson and Plaisance, a distance of 17 miles, next spring. The cost will be $2,300,000, and it is expected to be completed in a period of three years.

Mr. Turpin discussed with newsmen the government reactions to his union's brief, prepared at a cost of $2,000 and presented to Premier Lesage and various Quebec cabinet ministers concerned.

The Chambers' brief recommended that Route 8 between Lachute and Ste. Scholastique be re-built or, alternately, that an access road be laid from Lachute to the Autoroute.

There was no notion of building an "auto-route" between Hull and Montreal, the ministers averred. With the exception of certain stretches, Route 8 was considered adequate for the traffic demands. Between Masson and Fassett it was rated unsatisfactory and in poor condition. From Plaisance to Lachute it was "in acceptable condition" for a few years yet.

nearly 30 years. She has been president of the Province of Quebec Museums Association, president of the Lachute branch of the Red Cross Society, active in church work as well as in the promotion fund for a Home for Senior Citizens. She is well known in politics as well as in sports, and altogether, she may be considered a highly qualified representative for the Q.W.I. at this world conference of women.

Mrs. McGibbon was feted by many organizations prior to her departure. Presentations were made by the Institutes, also the Dalesville-Louisa branch. Said the County W.I. president, Mrs. Chas. Hall: "You have brought honor to our County. With you go the very best wishes of all W.I. branches."

Intriguing topic at Rotary Club —

Telephone voice transmission over land, sea and firmament

From visions of Alexander Graham Bell's first telephone conversation, illustrated by a replica of his first "set", to the wonders of Telstar with its earth-girdling ability, Rotarians were treated to a glimpse into the communications world of the present and future.

With President Tom Johnston in the chair, at La Lorraine Motel last Thursday, Mr. P. H. Lavallée, an engineer with the Bell Telephone Co., gave a well organized, well illustrated talk and demonstration of the scientific progress in speech transmission.

After business reports, and a singsong led by Les Davies, the guest speaker was introduced by Rotarian Georges Desfosses.

Telephone development from Bell's patent of Februray 14, 1876, to the well known "Patricia Set" of 1959, has been tremendous. In about one generation, communication has been speeded up unbelievably. The next step, already in use in some areas, the "Touch-tone" or pushbutton telephone, speeds the process still further. The user can call a number much faster. Each increase in speed makes for convenience and economy. It was interesting to hear the different tones registered by the various numbers, as they were depressed, each tone being its signature at the receiving end.

A picture of the former masses of open wires, along city streets, indicated one of the values of the cables today.

Costly under-sea cables with repeater, or amplifying stations built into the line every few miles, make voice as clear on the other side of the globe as if it were across the room.

To transmit messages rapidly, clearly and correctly, without interference one with the other or with electrical static in the air, is the problem — and to do it economically.

Copper lines and cables cost money. A transatlantic unit costs $25,000,000 and becomes scrap when a repeater tube, about the size of one in your TV set, fails.

Mr. Lavallée showed samples of these complicated cables, some with triple braided steel outer guard-casings.

Intense research has made it possible to double the number of conversations on a set of telephone circuits, by a system called Time Assignment Speech Interpolation (TASI). The system uses the small blanks on the line when we pause to think or breathe, to allow other speech to be transmitted. It requires some of the most complex equipment ever developed for communication. Such equipment helps to meet the growing need for overseas telephone circuits.

To eliminate the unsightly and storm-susceptible wires, high frequency transmission towers are used. These were demonstrated with the use of a tape recorder and model towers. The fact that such waves travel in a straight line as light, was demonstrated, as well as their ability to pass through wood and be reflected by metal.

Pictures with explanation showed how the huge 60 ft. parabolic mirror-like reflectors are used in the Tropospheric Scatter System, for transmission without wires. Here an upper layer in the earth's atmosphere is used as a reflector but requires 10,000 Watts instead of two for tower transmission.

Since the towers must be in a line and 25 to 30 miles apart, some other technique must be used over the vast stretches of ocean, if their advantages over

District adds to holiday toll — three dead, several injured

Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, officer-in-charge of the local Q.P.P. detachment, reported only six accidents over the long holiday week-end; two of these were fatal, however.

On Monday evening, Robert Dorman met instant death and Fernand Bussières, of Montreal, died in hospital, after a head-on crash on Route 8, two miles east of Lachute (a photograph of which appears above).

At 2.50 a.m. Saturday, Raymond Laughren, 20, of Hawkesbury, apparently lost control of his car while returning home and missed the curve at the junction of Routes 8 and 8-A, crashing into the sign-posts. He was thrown from the car, and died while on the way to a Montreal hospital. He was accompanied by Jacques Vaillancourt, also of Hawkesbury, who was not injured. The mishap was investigated by traffic constable Raymond Hetu.

Skylight entry, safe rifled at Main St. business firm

The first safe-breaking within the Lachute limits in several years, occurred over the week-end when thieves gained entry to Pollock & Graves Limited, Main Street, and using equipment and torches in the garage, broke through the safe and made off with an estimated $500. A considerable sum in cheques was in the debris left by the thieves.

It is believed the incident occurred early Sunday morning. The thieves apparently climbed a tree in order to get onto the roof of the building; from there, they entered a skylight and dropped to the floor. They then covered the windows, carried the acetylene torch upstairs and went to work on the rear of the safe, cutting through the inside of the door and thus opening the safe lock.

The thieves rummaged through the contents of the safe, throwing papers in all directions, and some of the documents were burned in the process of cutting into the safe. The robbery was discovered late Monday afternoon and Lachute Police Chief Réal Chartrand commenced the investigation, awaiting the Q.P.P. officers from Montreal.

The loss was not covered by insurance.

Oddments at the Council table

Council adopted a taxi by-law at its monthly session on September 1. The measure, designed to regulate the taxi business in Lachute and prompted by the operators themselves, was passed in three readings. Ald. Laurier Carrière was the only councillor dissenting.

With a casting vote of the mayor, it was decided to affiliate the future City of Lachute as a member of the Union of Quebec Municipalities. Aldermen Masson, Gibeault, Bélanger and Charlebois were in favor, while Aldermen Carrière, Middleton, McFaul and Armstrong were opposed. Ald. Dr. R. A. Dumais was absent. The mayor explained it would cost $100 to belong to this Union, which includes 75 per cent of towns in the province, and that the Union extends helpful services to member municipalities.

A group of Mountain View taxpayers complained, by letter, concerning sewers and drainage. The engineer explained this was a question of more adequate surface drainage, and the matter is under study.

Council voted to purchase a Gestetner machine for $675 including a $75 trade-in allowance on the present duplicator (1946 model) on which repairs would cost $110.

Claims amounting to $477.40 were received from Paul-Emile Richer and Jos. Malacket & Fils for damage in their basements caused by sewer back-up in a rainstorm on August 9. The city fathers countered with a reply that this was a contingency of nature, an "act of God", and the municipality could not hold itself responsible.

780 Enrolments, new teachers on High School staff

Lachute High School reopened its doors on Tuesday of this week, with approximately 780 students enrolled. There are several additions to the teaching staff this year. Following are the newcomers, with their specialized subjects:

Miss Gwyneth A. Cooper will be teaching Music. Miss Cooper is a graduate in Music from State University in Florida; she taught last year at Rosemere High School.

Miss Carol Lovett will be teaching Home Economics; she is a graduate of Nova Scotia Teachers' College, and her home is North Sydney, N.S.

Mrs. Carol J. Morrison will teach French in the elementary grades. Mrs. Morrison, a graduate of Macdonald College, taught last year in Shawbridge.

Miss Flaurie Mae Storie will be teaching Physical Education; she attended Macdonald College last year.

Mr. Robert G. White, with a B.A. degree from Sir George Williams University, comes to the staff from St. Lambert, where he was teaching last year.

Mrs. Anne S. White, another newcomer, is a graduate of Macdonald College who also was teaching at St. Lambert last year.

Mr. John E. Yale will be the Guidance teacher. He holds a B.A. degree from Sir George Williams University, and attended Macdonald College last year.

Form committee to group-organize Art Centres

Jean Laforest

Jean Laforest, script-writer and author, best known here as the co-director of the Centre d'Art d'Argenteuil, has been elected to a committee to set up a Federation of Cultural Centres in this province. Mr. Laforest was named at a recent meeting of representatives from various centres already in successful operation.

The meeting, held at the University of Sherbrooke, was under the honorary sponsorship of Pierre Degrandpré, director of Arts and Letters in the Quebec Dept. of Cultural Affairs. Two other members appointed to the new committee are Claude Lafleur, of Sherbrooke, and Philippe Sauvageau, of Hull.

Those attending from the Centre d'Art d'Argenteuil were Mr. and Mrs. Laforest and the secretary, Mme Jacques Beaudoin.

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

Due to circumstances beyond control, there has been a postponement in the re-opening of Barbershop Singing practices. The sessions will re-commence at St. Julien School on September 20, instead of September 13 as previously announced.

At a soiree in Hawkesbury, the new Optimist Club will receive its charter on Saturday, September 11.

There's an aroma of the impending civic shuffle. More often at the Council table one hears a remark, "The next Council will decide", "Let's wait till after November 7." Some councillors seem to feel they will not be in the picture after the Lachute-Ayersville amalgamation.

Likely this fall, a three-way traffic light will be installed at Main and Bethany. This will be no expense to the municipality since it is at the intersection of two provincial highways, and will be installed by the Quebec Roads Department.

The Ayers landing strip was as feverish as a movie set last week, when sequences were being filmed for TV publicity for a soft-drink company. Star performers in the stunt were attractive girls in the role of glider pilots.

The Lions Club opened its season of regular meetings at La Lorraine on Tuesday evening, with the new president, Bob Dixon, in charge.

Municipal electors going to the polls on November 7 next will total 1,964 (if all of them vote). The North Ward of the new municipality, the "City of Lachute", will have 742 voters; South-east Ward 659; South-west Ward 563. They will elect a mayor and six aldermen for a three-year mandate, thus eliminating the annual civic election picnic.

Certain operations of the Unemployment Insurance Commission have been transferred from the local office to St. Jerome. Effective from September 2, those eligible for benefits are receiving payments in the mail. Town Council took time out to complain on this removal of business.

Auto thefts and breaking-entering

Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, officer-in-charge of the Provincial Police unit, reports a busy week-end — with three youths detained and a considerable haul of goods recovered following numerous break-ins into summer camps north of Brownsburg; four arrested for car theft; and one man detained for contributing to juvenile delinquency while stealing cars. Charges will be laid this week.

Week's Epigram

A modern man is one who drives a mortgaged car over a bond-financed road on credit-card gasoline.

Catapulted from highway, four injured

Four local residents were treated in the Argenteuil Hospital for undetermined injuries, following a mishap near Lake Sir John on Friday afternoon of last week. According to Traffic Agent Yvon Faucheon, the investigating police officer, the car driven by Jean Wojtowycz, 25, of Tessier Blvd., Lachute, swerved out of control and dropped a considerable distance from the highway, rolling over several times. Occupants of the car were Gerald Copeland, 15, of Beech Ridge, Henry Cruise, 15, of Lachute, and Percy Jackson, 19, also of Lachute. None of the injured youths was considered to be in serious condition.

Police investigations included one automobile theft and 15 bicycles stolen. There were 36 permits issued for bicycles and four dog licenses.

The fire department reported nine calls in August — four in Lachute, four in Ayersville and one at St. Andrews. The outbreaks in Ayersville caused losses of $5,500, while the Lachute fires accounted for only $400 damage.

Remuneration to the volunteer firemen amounted to $460, while revenues from out-of-town services of the brigade came to $600.

Killed by train, identity unknown

Police are seeking the identity of a man who on Tuesday evening was struck and instantly killed by the east-bound passenger train.

The fatality occurred between Marelan and Staynerville.

The victim carried no identification; he is described as held, about 55 years of age, 5'6" in height, and weighing approximately 150 pounds. He was wearing a charcoal grey suit, white shirt, black socks and no shoes, when the body was found.

Anyone having information is requested to contact Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, Q.P.P., Lachute, or telephone 562-5254.

"Argenteuil Outdoors"

By BOB ATCHISON

The latest reports from the Canadian Wildlife Federation should make us realize we are going to be out of luck for duck shooting, unless something happens very soon. You will remember the serious winter we had last year, especially on the Prairies. Heavy snows and freezing rains played havoc with all forms of wildlife. However, there was one gleam of hope, that the snows would maybe build up the water supplies in some of the potholes, swamps and marshes. They were filled up to the wildest expectations, and all the wildlife people were waiting for was the return of the ducks. Not as many returned as were expected, but it was still hoped that a good crop of young might be raised. As we know, the weather once more hit drastically — snows and freezing weather, to shorten the breeding and nesting periods. This slowed the new hatchings to such extent that a survey taken by Ducks Unlimited and the U.S. Wildlife Services showed very few hatchings had taken place even by the middle of June. Late in July a few broods did show up, but nothing to get excited about. So once again, the ducks have taken a beating. . . Hopes are brighter for next year, inasmuch as there will be no shortage of water.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission have really started in high gear. Just west of Toronto a survey was taken, with the result that all the municipalities have been told just how their water supplies are going to be treated and cleared of pollution. Naturally, the people involved are happy about all this, especially with the knowledge that this Commission has power to borrow any monies required for this project; if it is their opinion it would be too costly for the towns to carry, they will foot the bill and collect a service charge from the municipalities. This water board has not been in effect too long, but they sure have stirred up some action. The old Water Purification Board had this job before. . . Now maybe the Quebec Government can do something about our problems if they will find out just how to go about it, without political considerations. Having a non-political body in this province sure would be something constructive — however, I can't see anything like this board ever being set up. To think that a serious problem like this can be put off and shelved for so long, is really beyond belief. We ordinary people are equally to blame; we sit back and let everyone else try and do something about it. "After all, we can't help so why bother." This seems to be the thinking all along the line, yet we, the ordinary people, have unlimited power to force the government's hand. But why bother; after all, our water supplies come from Lake Sir John, and that's clean. FOR HOW LONG? With more properties being built, this means more cesspools, etc., and where does this leave us?

I have not mentioned our birds for a few weeks. Now, with the cold weather of late, some of the summer birds are really taking a beating. The black-and-whites seem to have taken it right on the chin. Going down towards town the other day, I spotted some in a brush, all huddled together for warmth. I was able to walk to within about 5 feet of them before they took off for a safer place 20 feet higher in a tree. They sure looked miserable. Another group is the finches and canaries, they even huddle around the light bulbs on the hydro poles, to get warmth. Then with the very high winds, there has not been much chance for them to fly in search of feed. So how about putting some feed out for them? A suet stick will be very acceptable now. Even the lid of a can, filled with grease with a few seeds in it, will help them along in a difficult time. A pile of your brush cuttings will help to give them shelter nearby.

Blinds for the duck shooting are springing up all over the place. Appearing on our lakes and rivers, some of these are real works of art. Plenty of brush and weeds, with a few bits of canvas scattered over them to give a semblance of rocks. Let's hope they fool the ducks after all this effort! . . . It's not too early to check your gear for this sport. The decoys will have to be touched-up a little perhaps, so get busy with the paint brush. One thing to remember when doing this, don't try and make your decoys too clean and bright. Dull them a little before you use them. Passing a little sandpaper over the paint job will do this pretty well; and of course, you don't use enamel. Even your plastic and rubber ducks need this attention every couple of years, and it's worth while. Your clothing too, must not be too bright. I don't mean you have to rub it with mud, but at least don't wear togs that shine out like a beacon a mile away. It's worth while having a well camouflaged outfit, and this includes your person. All these little considerations help.

Now a few words about your clothing, and boots. First and foremost, bright clothing is out. The fit is an important item to remember. Make sure your clothing is not too tight. Not only is it hard to shoot in, but it is also very cold to wear. Naturally, if it is too large, then the shooting will be awkward, too. Another thing, if anything happens, your boat tips or you fall into the water — with tight or extra-large clothing you will be in real trouble. This also applies to your footwear. Naturally, you will not use laced boots, this is really asking for trouble; but your hip boots should be just big enough to put on a couple of pairs of socks, heavy ones; and if you have insulated boots, so much the better. I know most of the hip boots today have a harness to hold them tight around your knee. When out after duck, don't lace them up. (Ever try picking a knot out of a lace while keeping yourself afloat? Not too good.)

As usual, you are doubtless going to miss plenty, so how about trying a few shots on cans thrown into the air (by your better half). If you like, you can get yourself a hand-trap with targets, and this way you can have a lot of fun... It's not really too expensive, and it does improve your shooting.

There is indication that a good many hunters are interested in new guns this year. As I've often mentioned, some of the older ones being used around here, are not only old but dangerous too. As to the calibre, this is of course up to you, but before you decide, here are a couple of points to remember: Our shooting today is snap-type; no more are we able to lean back against a tree and have the deer come to us at a walk. One gun that is much used (and in the good old days, it was one of the best) is still good, but not what I would pick to warrant a sure kill; this is the old 30-30. Now don't get me wrong; there is nothing wrong with this gun, it's still excellent for what it was intended for, close-range shots. A heavier calibre is needed now, one that will give terrific hitting power plus high speed. This is one of the reasons the 308 has become so popular. Take the 180-grain bullet; 100 yards from the gun this bullet is travelling at the speed of 2,250 feet per second — at the same distance it hits with the energy of 2,020 foot-pounds. In other words, it hits with one ton of force at 100 yards. Now compare this with the 30-30, with a 170-grain bullet; at 100 yards it travels at 1,890 feet per second, and hits at 1,350 pounds. As you can see, this is a big difference; it is even more pronounced at greater distances. At 200 yards the 308 travels 1,940 feet per second, hits with 1,500 pounds of energy. The 30-30 travels at 1,600 feet per second and hits at 910 pounds energy. Before buying any new gun, get a ballistics chart, and study it. It is only in this way you can understand just what you are going to buy. On top of all this, with the government banning a number of calibres, it is smart not to get something too light. In other words, none of this high-speed 50-grain type.

Water Skiing with CLINT WARD

World Water Ski Championships

Water skiing in the world is directed by the World Water Ski Union and both Canada and the United States are members along with 33 other countries. This is a startling figure as most people do not realize that water skiing as a sport is so global in nature. It is sometimes claimed that there are more water skiers in the world than snow skiers. This is likely true when you reflect that there are certainly more warm weather countries than cold weather ones.

Every second year the World Watar Ski Union holds its World Water Ski Championships. This is the Olympics of our sport and each of the member countries is allowed to send a team of its top skiers to compete for World honors.

Teams consist of a maximum of four men and two women skiers. Each team member competes in slalom, trick skiing and jumping. Winners are declared in each event and also a combined or overall winner for the men and for the women.

The last World Championship was held in Vichy, France, during September of 1963. Previous world meets have been held in Toronto, Canada; Cypress Gardens, Florida; Beirut, Lebanon; Milan, Italy and Long Beach, California. It is hoped that Canada will host the 1967 Championships at Sherbrooke, Que.

Although the United States holds a consistent record of top placings at these tournaments, some of the championships have been won by other countries.

In 1961 the Men's overall title was won by an Italian and the Women's championship by a girl from Luxembourg. During the last tournament at Vichy the American men displayed their power and finished 1, 2, 3 and 4 in the overall standings. Men's championship was won by Billy Spencer who was only 14 years old at the time. Billy has since retired from active tournament water skiing at the tender age of 16.

This year is a World Tournament year and the Championships will be held during October at Surfers' Paradise Gardens near Brisbane, Australia.

Canada and the United States will be sending teams as in years past and this has caused a flurry of activity as skiers from all parts of North America have been practicing to qualify.

Early in the summer the American Water Ski Association picked their team at a special elimination tournament following the Masters Championships at Callaway Gardens, Georgia. After the three round meet, Chuck Sterns, California; Larry Penacho, California; Ken White and Rolland Hillier, Florida, emerged victorious for the men's team while the distaff side was won by Liz Allan, Florida; and Barbara Clack, Florida. This is a formidable team indeed with former World Champion Sterns heading the team as captain and both of the women, present co-holders of the World Jumping record of 102 feet.

In Canada, the Canadian Water Ski Association decided to hold their special elimination tournament in late August thereby giving the skiers the maximum opportunity to come up to World standards.

The World Team Trials were held at Whittaker Lake, Ontario, on August 28 and 29. It was a best of three rounds, best of three events elimination and when the final event drew to a close Jean Rodrigue, Quebec; Jean Perrault, Quebec; Brian Muirhead, Manitoba; and Andy Murdison, Ontario, won spots on the men's team, while Jan Griffiths, Ontario, and Linda Bocock, Quebec, placed on the women's team.

This is one of the youngest teams that Canada has sent to a World Championship with Jean Rodrigue taking the honors as the oldest member at 21. The team plans to train at Vancouver Island prior to leaving for Australia on October 21st and members of the Canadian Water Ski Association feel that Canada will enjoy the best showing in a World Meet to date.

Plan pre-season Hunting soiree

At the Clément School in Ayersville, the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association will prelude the coming hunting season with a soiree on Monday next, September 13, with the joint collaboration of Roger Lascelles and Gaston Laroche, Molson's district agent.

The program, commencing at 8 p.m., will be planned for special interest of the hunting fraternity, with select films on deer and moose hunting in Quebec, and an outline of the season's plans for members of the Association. All are cordially invited, whether members or non-members of this organization.

UNLEARNED LESSON

In 1965 folks just take it for granted that they can use supersonic record changers, colored TV and, within a few years, a man will land on the moon. . . Man has accomplished a great deal in the field of technology. The only thing he has to learn is how to get along with his fellow men in other countries and other nations.

Boating Clinic

By STAN DAVIES

Being an expert boater really takes quite a bit of know-how. A lot can be gained by experience, much more by taking a course such as that offered by Canadian Power Squadrons every fall and winter . . . and the rest by asking questions, such as these:

Who rates the power of outboard motors?

Answer: The Outboard Boating Club of America. This is an organization supported by boat and engine manufacturers, really to police their industry and give it a good image. You'll see engines rated like this: "OBC certified 90 h.p. at 4,500 r.p.m." You can believe their figures.

Where can I get a chart of the Rideau Canal? How often do they change charts? (P.S.L., Almonte)

Answer: Write Canadian Hydrographic Service, Dept. of Mines, Ottawa. The Rideau chart, No. 1575 is 50 cents. Charts are changed quite frequently, for instance the one you want was brought up to date on June 5 this year.

What's the difference between a knot, a hitch and a bend? (I.J.M., Regina)

Answer: This can lead to arguments, so I'll quote "A Dictionary of Sailing" by F. H. Burgess, a Penguin book . . . "knot" is a kind of overall term to cover any kind of rope fastening; a "hitch" is a kind of knot which tends to jam tighter under stress but is easy to undo when tension is off; a "bend" is any knot used to fasten two ropes together, or to secure a rope to an eye or spar.

So you can see they have all come to mean almost the same thing. Five of the most useful knots are shown in sketch.

It's shocking the way prices of motors and boats have gone up. Why? (T.G.L., Etobicoke)

Answer: Whoa! Not so fast. My dad paid $145 for a 2½ h.p. back in 1930 (I can remember). A year or so ago I bought a 3 h.p. motor and I paid $159. On boats, I'll concede they may be 30 to 50 per cent higher than in depression years, but then I'm glad they don't build the same kind of clunkers nowadays.

I read that the pistons in my outboard motor are tin plated. Is that so? (L.K., Sudbury)

Answer: This is not some corner-cutting economy. The tin acts as a solid lubricant during the break-in period. Gold would be better, but you'd kick at the price.

What's a lapstreak boat?

Answer: The word is lap-STRAKE, please. It's the kind of hull in which the planks or "strakes" are laid with an edge lapping over the one below. Another term is clinkerbuilt. It makes for a very tough rigid boat, because each strake is clinched to the next at close intervals along the edges. Clinch was the origin of clinker.

Does the propeller turn at the same speed as the engine in a boat? (T.C., Ogdensburg)

Answer: Almost invariably the prop is geared down, often to two thirds or three fifths engine r.p.m. This is to give good starting "torque". Otherwise, it would be comparable to starting a car off in high gear.

I'm putting in monel water tanks in my cruiser . . . any advice about capacity?

Answer: There are two factors . . . the maximum number of persons you will ever take on your boat . . . and the number of days between stops where potable water is available on any potential cruise. From experience I've found half a gallon per person per day for drinking and cooking is absolute minimum.

IN MEMORIAM

BROWN — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Richard Brown, who passed away Sept. 10, 1961. — Sadly missed by his mother and brother, Russell.

"Your memory is our keepsake
With which we will never part,
God has you in his keeping
And we have you in our heart."

CHAMPAGNE — In loving memory of a dear husband, Felix, who passed away Sept. 11, 1949. — Always loved and remembered by his wife, Dolly.

"When evening shadows are falling
And I am sitting all alone,
To my heart there comes a longing, dear
— If only you could come home."

CHAMPAGNE — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Felix Champagne, who passed home on Sept. 11, 1949. — Always loved and cherished by all the family.

"God knew that Dad was suffering,
That the hills were hard to climb,
So He closed Dad's weary eyelids
And whispered, 'Peace be thine'.
Away in the beautiful hills of God,
By the valley of rest so fair,
Some time, some day, we know not when,
We will meet dear Dad up there."

KENNEDY (Charles) — In loving memory of my dear husband, who passed away Sept. 9, 1962. — Dearly loved by his wife and family.

"He left me quietly, his thoughts unknown,
But he left me a memory I am proud to own.
So treasure him, Lord, in your garden of rest,
For on earth he was one of the very best."

PURCELL — In loving memory of my dear wife, Eva, who passed away Sept. 10, 1964. — Always remembered by her husband, Oliver.

Sunset

"The silken thread is broken with the sun,
The last kind word is spoken, life is done.
As cool gray shadows hover on the hill,
The weary trial is over, all is still.
The rich fair colors gleam across the west,
Like a vivid, broken dream now come to rest.
The soft mild darkness hides all pain and sorrow,
True faith and hope abides a fair tomorrow.
Night's soothing, restful peace heals aching scars,
Love's song will never cease
beneath the stars —
A frail worn body buried in the sod,
A pure white soul is carried home to God."

Plaque unveiled by Cushing lady

Recently at Pointe Fortune, Que., a significant event took place in the presence of a large gathering, when a bronze plaque was unveiled by Mrs. William Usher, of Cushing, and dedicated by the minister of the Hawkesbury United Church, the Rev. Joseph Lynn.

Following is the inscription on the plaque: "Dedicated in affectionate tribute to the congregations of two pioneer churches who worshipped side by side on this hallowed ground for many years until becoming one under the United Church of Canada in 1925. The last service was held in September 1960. Dedicated by the Rev. Joseph Lynn and the Rev. Adam Thompson."

The plaque is anchored to two monuments, each of which has encased within it the date stone which reads: St. Columba Presbyterian, 1874, Pointe Fortune Wesleyan Methodist, 1869.

Mrs. William Usher, wife of the Rev. William Usher, who served St. Columba congregation from 1923 to 1925 and later returned to serve Pointe Fortune United Church in 1928 and 1929, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Usher said that she felt honored at being asked to unveil the plaque. It would be a silent sentinel; yet it stands as a symbol of inspiration to all who look upon it and read its message and think of the Christian Church.

The memorial is presented as a gift from Ontario Hydro.

Their golden wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Michel Malacket, a well-known retired business couple in Lachute, celebrated their 50th anniversary with a special mass at Ste. Anastasie Church last Sunday — the rites being celebrated by Mrs. Malacket's brother, Canon Antoine Hebby, who has been here from Beirut visiting his relatives. A banquet and family gathering were held in honor of the couple, who were married in the year 1915 in the same parish of Ste. Anastasie.

Argent'l School of Ballet enters its ninth year

This month the Argenteuil School of Ballet enters its ninth year of aiding pupils from Lachute and area to learn the fine art of ballet dancing. The season will start on September 10, at the Knights of Columbus Hall, and once again instruction will be offered in mime, ballet and technique, to children of all ages.

As in the past, Miss Lucille du Breuil, the school's internationally trained teacher, will continue tutoring students in the methods of the Royal Academy of Dancing. Readers will note that last week's Watchman presented evidence of the success of this syllabus, and the way it is taught in Lachute.

Mrs. E. F. Gow, the school's director, hopes that more parents will take advantage of the modest fees, and avail their children of this important art. Those interested may contact Mrs. Gow at R.R. 3, Lachute (phone LO 2-6102) or Mrs. L. Cauchon (LO 2-2981).

FIRST SCHOOL DAYS

Children going back to school, or better still, going to school for the first time, accept this inevitable event in many different ways.

Whether your child's reaction is outright enthusiasm or cautious reserve — he'll put real magic in your family snapshots.

Back to school is the official end of the children's summer and belongs in the family album. Keep a close eye on things and you'll find incidents worth a click of the shutter — pre-school conventions on the back step between your children and their friends as they contemplate the problems ahead. Buying a wardrobe and giving in to an overdue haircut provide lots of picture possibilities.

Considering that most of our children go through the summer with as little "spit and polish" as possible, the neatly dressed children on the first days of school are a revelation that demand a picture.

Don't obviously pose such pictures — let them appear casual. If more than one child is involved, have them standing and sitting in apparent conversation. If the weather is unfit for outdoor picture-taking, then use flash in the rec room.

Of course, if it is more than back to school — if it is off to school for the first time, then this is an occasion that must end up on film. It is worth a small series of pictures or color slides, or a short movie in itself.

Be sure to shoot the preparation, then out the door and down the path hand in hand with big brother or sister, a neighbor child or mother, and don't end it there! Be ready when the child comes home, there should be expressions to spare for the camera.

There are no technicalities, just the simple rules. Watch the background in the viewfinder, there may be something unwanted, something that clashes — a slight change of angle and it will be gone. Keep an eye on heads and feet, they have a habit of slipping out of the picture.

Have camera, film — and flashbulbs always on hand so that picture-taking is no more of a problem than reaching for the can opener. And Dad, how about a shot of Mother alone in an empty kitchen with the unbelieving "Who declared peace?" expression on her face when all have gone back to school?

Initiative gets things done

MR. MAYOR, in discussing a measure to purchase the Lions' Arena site last week — which in other words is a gesture of town assistance in the completion of this project — expressed regret that there had been no co-ordinated planning among service clubs and the municipality to promote a venture of such proportions, and to share the cost.

Mayor Saindon did incidentally commend the Lions on their efforts; but he might have stressed more generous praise for the club's initiative, in promoting its rink several years ago and in enlarging its undertaking this year with the construction of a covered arena.

The negotiations and headaches in these decisions, and in their materialization, should not be underrated. They have fallen upon a few — a mere handful of civic-minded men — backed by the club members' personal endorsements, personal canvassing, and public donations. All avenues of inter-club, and club-council, co-operation were fully explored, and if the Lions were still awaiting an agreement on collaboration of other bodies, the old East Ward rink would still be in the weeds, and the present arena would still be an idle dream. . . (In the same stage, there is an old people's home still in the mental blueprints; it has been awaiting the impetus of group co-operation for years, and is still waiting!)

Therefore, let there be no stinted recognition to the initiative that got these projects off the ground. Similarly to the Richelieu Club, which took a chance, and incurred a mammoth obligation, to build its swimming pool. Other municipalities have Recreation committees and departments, with citizens perpetually on their backs for playgrounds, staffs, equipment and bigger budgets. So far, our clubs have largely spared this municipality and its treasury in the matter of recreation.

To school on bicycles

THE BICYCLE will be the means of transport for many children returning to school this week. Increasing congestion on streets and highways increases the hazards for the careless or unskilled. The deaths and non-fatal injuries each year, due to collisions involving bicycles, can and must be eliminated.

It is the parents' responsibility to instruct children in the safe operation of bikes and observance of the traffic regulations.

The National Safety League of Canada recommends these basic rules in the interest of bicycle safety:

1. Always ride close to the right-hand side of the road except when making a left-hand turn. Never stunt or zig-zag.

2. Only when signaling with the left hand can hands be removed from handle-bars. When a signal has been made and observed, immediately place the hand back on the handle-bar.

3. Riding two, three or more abreast is a dangerous practice. Ride single file.

4. It is both courteous and prudent to signal a turn. This gives the motorist a clear indication of the rider's intention and reduces the danger of an accident.

5. Be on the safe side: dismount at busy intersections and when it is safe, walk the bike across.

6. Equip the bicycle with a bell or horn. Be sure to have headlight and taillight on the bike for night riding. Also, after dark wear light-colored clothing or use a white handkerchief as an arm band.

7. Riding bicycles on the sidewalk — illegal in most communities and frowned on in others — causes many accidents. A bicycle is a vehicle and the roadway is the place to ride it. Give the right to pedestrians.

8. Learn and obey all traffic regulations. They are designed for safety.

9. If involved in an accident where someone is injured or property is damaged, remain at the scene and give all possible assistance.

10. Maintain the bicycle in good mechanical condition.

A booklet, "Safety Is In Your Hands", is available through provincial safety councils or from the Canadian Highway Safety Council, 30 The Driveway, Ottawa.

A camouflaged title

BRITAIN HAS recently appointed a woman as a justice of its High Court, and the appointment has stirred up a controversy over the correct form of address for her.

A spokesman for the Lord Chancellor, the head of the British judiciary, said that Mrs. Elizabeth Kathleen Lane, the first woman in that country to attain such eminence, should be known as "Mr. Justice Lane" and addressed in court as "My Lord". British lawyers have upheld this decision.

But the Solicitors' Journal wondered why and The Times in an editorial derided the lawyers for their attitude. The newspaper asked why Mrs. Lane should not be addressed as "Mrs. Justice Lane" and "Your Ladyship". One of the traditional title made it look as if the legal profession was "shrinking from the full implications of what has happened," The Times said.

The point is well taken. . . Britain has often been described as pre-eminently a male domain. Any move to give women a larger role in public life is welcome. It was good sense to name a woman to the bench of the High Court. But now the lawyers appear to be trying to conceal the significance of this move, or pretend it hasn't happened, by seeking to address the new justice as if she were a man. This looks like a case of making an absurdity out of legal tradition.

Mrs. Lane, who will be assigned to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty division of the court, will wear a wig and a robe on the bench, like other judges. But that doesn't mean she becomes a man in her new role.

Normally a new appointee to the High Court, which ranks right behind the Court of Appeal and the House of Lords in judicial standing, is granted a knighthood. It is believed that the Queen will grant Mrs. Lane the equivalent title of "dame". This title is exclusively for women. Surely, if the Queen sees fit to grant the new justice a feminine title, it would be appropriate for her to be addressed in court as a woman. Otherwise, there will be a new weight for the comment in Dickens' "Oliver Twist" by Mr. Bumble: "The law is a ass"'

Can't be experts

WHEN A telecommunications expert like CBS' Walter Cronkite admits he can't understand the talk that comes over a taxi radio, it's time for lesser mortals to come out of hiding and admit that they, too, are ignorant about some of the more fundamental facts of life.

If people have difficulty understanding insurance policies or premium notices, for instance, they shouldn't be downhearted. Some things are even less intelligible than taxi radios.

Others have trouble coping with income tax returns, and unless you're a chartered accountant or a Philadelphia lawyer, you may be one of them.

The so-called simple things of life, whether they be in triplicate or merely instructions on how to put a piece of knock-down furniture together, are getting more and more complicated. And space age achievements are even more likely to leave the average man a misfit in his own civilization.

Most of us are as ignorant about some particular phase of modern life as Cronkite appears to be about two-way radio. And we only get into deeper trouble if we try to make like an expert when we're really completely confused.

The average man has no call to be ashamed of the fact that he can't follow simple directions and open a cereal box without lousing up the whole operation! Ignorance is relative, after all. And who has time, in this day of technological advances, to be an expert in everything?

25 YEARS AGO

September, 1940 —

At long last, the revetment wall around the river, Main Street West, is to be topped with the necessary railing and light standards.

The death of Dr. Maude Abbott, B.A., M.D., LL.D., distinguished through her research in medicine, occurred in Montreal Neurological Institute, in her 72nd year. Dr. Abbott was a pioneer woman student of McGill University. In her beloved Argenteuil County she was co-founder, with the late Dr. B. N. Wales, of the Historical Society and its Museum at Carillon.

A group of Canadian Railroad Historical Association members was aboard the last CNR train which steamed into Lachute and proceeded on its last run from Hawkesbury to St. Jerome. The section now closed, between St. Canut and Cushing, is a part of the original Gt. Northern - Quebec Railway, a subsidiary to the Mackenzie & Mann interests. The line was built in 1900-01. . . It was the most direct connection between the Capital and Valcartier, and during the Great War, troop trains and heavy freights rumbled through Lachute at all hours.

Pressure On The P-M

The pressures on Prime Minister Pearson for a fall election came not from an outraged public or an indignant Opposition aroused over any major issue in current Canadian politics. They came, instead, from a handful of party strategists who have believed that the Liberals could win a majority in Parliament by going to the country before the end of 1965.

No one except the Prime Minister's key advisors have wanted an early election. Certainly not the Opposition parties, despite Mr. Diefenbaker's threat to open the fall session of the House of Commons with a non-confidence vote over the Rivard affair. He could have done that last June, when the issue was hot, but chose not to.

The Parliament elected in 1963 was elected to govern up to five years, as long as the Prime Minister could maintain the support of the House. So far, Mr. Pearson has been able to do this.

While doing so, his minority government, despite several embarrassing scrapes, has established a fairly respectable record. The Quebec problem has been tackled head-on even if success has not been complete; a national pension program has been set up; we have a new flag and the blueprint has been drawn for a Canada-wide medicare scheme.

The country is prosperous, and the government has taken concrete steps to assist areas not sharing fully in our economic growth. The Pearson government has wisely kept Canada from becoming entangled in South Vietnam and other areas of crisis.

Capping the economic boom has come another fantastic sale of wheat to the Soviet Union, which will pour $450 million into the hands of western farmers.

But perhaps the chief argument against a 1965 election has been the fact that redistribution of House of Commons seats will take another year to complete. An election this fall — the fifth in eight years — means that the parliament chosen to govern up to 1970 will be representing ridings which were mapped out on the basis of the 1951 census. There has been a tremendous shift in population since then.

Despite all the arguments, Canadians should realize by now that general elections are never called at a time that is in the best interest of the country. They are called whenever it is in the best interest of the government, and under our system, it is the Prime Minister's right to choose whatever time he thinks best for his party.

Many Liberals, obviously, have felt they should test their popularity this year, when times are good, and while Mr. Diefenbaker is still at the helm of the Conservatives. Their unquestioned strength in Quebec, combined with apparently greater support in the West and Ontario, should give the Liberals a solid working majority, in the opinion of these strategists.

The last Gallup poll calculated Liberal support at 45 per cent, compared to 29 per cent. for the Conservatives. It is not safe to project these figures into the future, however.

Mr. Diefenbaker gave a remarkable example of his campaign prowess recently in Quebec, just as Mr. Pearson was honing his political razor in the West. While the Tory chief was visiting primarily English-speaking districts in Quebec, he nevertheless got an enthusiastic welcome. He also revealed, by speaking in French at length and with considerable fluency, that he's been doing his homework and has not by any means written off Quebec to the Liberal machine.

On The Canoe Trail

DATELINE: somewhere in the vast hinterland.

I am sitting at a picnic table, looking over a beautiful, small, blue lake, ringed with golden sand and white birches. Twenty feet from shore, a devoted couple swims quietly among the lilypads. They are wild ducks. Farther out, a loon raises its arrogant head on its snake neck, then dives.

When I look up, slim, swaying spruce lean together to circle blue distance that makes the head swim. In their branches, four and 20 blackbirds talk over last night's party. On the left, our Indiana neighbors whistle for their setter, who is trying to catch a duck. On the right, our Illinois neighbors shriek exultation over a string of 8-inch perch.

Behind me sits the tent, rather resembling a very sick camel. And inside the tent, wild-eyed, wan, and woe-begone after two straight, sleepless nights under canvas, broods my wife.

It's been a grand holiday trip so far, but something tells me we went at it backwards. After two days and nights cruising the inland seas, being wined and dined and waited on hand and foot, we were unceremoniously bundled ashore at the lakehead.

We couldn't face it like that, cold, so we holed up in a hotel for a night. Next day, we were up at the crack of noon, and off on our camping trip. That is, after lunch, and putting up our hair, and taking it down, and shopping for grub. We finally hit the road about 4:30 and belted off on our adventure. The scenery was superb: huge humps of rock, swathed in green; dark serpents of rivers, gliding far below; dizzying glimpses of Lake Superior, blue and splendid and almost frightening in its immensity. Say, this camping was great, so far.

Then came the dawn, at our first campsite. Or, to be literal, the dark. And us in the midst of it, trying to put up the tent. Inside out, as it turned out.

The charcoal wouldn't burn. We couldn't find anything — the salt, the coffee, the breadknife the hot mustard. Nothing. We were sitting forlornly, side by side, on a cot, swatting mosquitoes, eating burned sausages and blueberry muffins, and burning with envy of our neighbors, every one of them in a luxurious trailer.

A plaque had informed us that we were camping right on an historic canoe route, used by early explorers and fur traders. It's still a popular route.

This occurred to me about 4 a.m, as I lay there staring starkly at the roof of the tent, my wife whimpering in the next cot. About every four minutes, a transport truck thundered past on the highway, sixty yards behind the tent. At one-hour intervals, a train hurtled clattering by, about 200 yards away. And every so often, a jet liner screamed past right overhead.

And I lay there, sick with envy of those hard-bitten fur traders, on their canoe route.

Not for them the stumbling over tent pegs. Not for them the charcoal that refuses to light. Not for them the never-ending, muddling search for the egg flipper or the toilet paper.

And above all, not for them the endless recriminations. I can't quite imagine the following conversation taking place on the canoe route, on an August evening, say in 1742.

"Hey, Pierre, w'ere de hell did you put de kleenex?"

"Dat's all right for you, Jacques, but oo was de one oo said we didn't need no French dressing, and'ere I 'ave de salade ready, and no dressing?"

"By gar, Jacques, for two beaver 'ides I never go wit' you again on a petite camping trip. All de time you boeuf, boeuf, boeuf!"

No, it couldn't happen. Oh, well, that's progress. Guess I'll go in and give the old lady another tranquillizer, strike camp (it takes only three hours to "strike camp"), and get rolling for the next episode of unadulterated horror.

For variety — making the best of fall vegetables

(Consumer Section)

At this season, beets, broccoli and squash are on the plentiful list and are available on most markets. This is the best time of the year to buy these vegetables to add variety to your menus. Here are some useful tips on buying, preparing and serving. . .

Beets

When buying beets choose vegetables that are clean, firm, smooth and free from cracks or other blemishes. Look at the leaves, they should be fresh and crisp.

To prepare, wash the beets, taking care not to bruise the skin; do not peel, for best color retention. Place the beets in a large saucepan. Add boiling water to cover. Cover saucepan and bring water back to the boil. Reduce heat and cook gently until beets are tender. Plunge beets into cold water and remove skins quickly. Reheat before serving.

You don't have to throw away the beet greens; just cook them as you would spinach; they are delicious!

To serve, leave small cooked beets whole, cut medium beets in halves or quarters, slice or dice large ones.

Enhance the flavor of cooked beets with melted butter, salt and pepper. For a flavor accent add one of the following seasonings: chopped fresh mint (1 tablespoon for 6 servings); crushed green onion (2 tablespoons); lemon juice (1 tablespoon); French dressing (3 tablespoons).

Broccoli

When you buy broccoli choose stalks that are clean, tender and firm. Heads or clusters should be compact with no yellow on the buds.

To prepare, cut off the woody part of stalks and remove the coarse leaves. Wash thoroughly. If any stems are more than one inch across, make two lengthwise cuts at right angles to each other, through stem from base to about halfway up.

To cook, stand stalks upright in about one inch boiling water in a deep saucepan. Sprinkle evenly with salt (¾ teaspoon for 6 servings). Cover tightly and bring back to boil. Reduce heat and cook gently until stalks are just tender.

When almost ready to serve, melt ¼ to ½ cup butter and for extra flavor, add one of the following seasonings: Heat and serve over the drained cooked broccoli, ¼ to ½ cup finely chopped pimento; ½ to ¾ teaspoon savory, 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Squash

Top quality summer squash are now plentiful on local markets. Consumers have a variety of squash to choose from. The most common ones are the vegetable marrow and the zucchini. The vegetable marrow is straight, almost cylindrical in shape and has smooth, green to yellowish skin which is ribbed. The zucchini resembles a cucumber. It has pale yellow, tender skin with narrow dark green stripes.

When buying squash, be sure to choose young, tender squash, heavy for its size and free from blemishes and bruises. The skin should be very thin. Mature summer squash, is seedy and tough skinned, and therefore not as desirable.

To prepare, wash and brush squash to remove any sand. Remove stem end and cut the vegetable in ½-inch slices, then boil in a small amount of salted water (about ½ cup of water with 1 teaspoon of salt).

Leave small squash whole, cut in half lengthwise, or cut in ½-inch slices. Larger ones may be cut in half lengthwise or in ½-inch slices.

To serve add 3 to 4 tablespoons butter to drained cooked squash and heat until butter melts. Sprinkle with pepper if desired, or, combine 2 tablespoons water, 3 to 4 tablespoons butter and one of the following seasonings: ½ to ¾ teaspoon marjoram, paprika, thyme, or rosemary. Simmer uncovered for five minutes, then serve over drained cooked squash.

Here are three tested recipes from the files of the Consumer Section at Ottawa:

Beef and Apple Salad

1 Cup finely shredded cabbage, 1 cup diagonally sliced celery, 1½ cups finely shredded raw beets (or 1½ cups coarsely shredded cooked beets), 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion, 1½ cups diced unpeeled apple, ½ teaspoon salt, French dressing, mayonnaise or other dressing.

Prepare vegetables. Just before serving, prepare apples, then combine with vegetables. Sprinkle with salt and toss well. Add dressing and toss lightly to coat pieces. 6 servings.

Variation: In place of adding 1 cup each of cabbage and celery, add 2 cups of either vegetable and omit the other.

Broccoli with Cheese Sauce

2 Pounds broccoli, ½ cup water, ¾ teaspoon salt.

Cheese Sauce. — 2 Tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, dash of cayenne, 1½ cups milk, ¾ to 1 cup grated cheese.

Cut off woody part of broccoli stalks; remove coarse leaves and wash thoroughly. Cut larger stalks lengthwise in suitable serving size. Stand broccoli upright in about one inch boiling water. Sprinkle evenly with salt. Cover tightly and bring back to boil. Reduce heat and cook gently until stalks are just tender, 10 to 15 minutes; drain broccoli.

Cheese Sauce — Melt butter over direct heat in top of double boiler and blend in flour and seasonings. Gradually add milk and cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Place over hot water; add cheese and stir until melted. Pour over drained broccoli. Makes about 1½ cups sauce.

Herbed Summer Squash

¼ Cup butter, ½ cup sliced green onions, ½ cup diced celery, ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons parsley, ½ teaspoon oregano, 1½ pounds small summer squash (cut in ½-inch slices).

Melt butter in a frying pan, add onions and celery and sauté 3 to 4 minutes. Combine salt, pepper, parsley and oregano and stir into mixture in pan. Add sliced squash and mix well. Cover tightly and cook gently until squash is just tender, 8 to 10 minutes, stirring gently 2 or 3 times during cooking. — Six servings.

Bicycle Safety Rules

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

How do most accidents occur? In a few cases the poor condition of the road is a contributing factor. There may be so much sand that the brakes if suddenly applied, will cause the wheels to skid. The surface may have had a large unexpected hole, rut or bump, or the shoulder of the road may have been weakened or partly eroded away by heavy rains. Occasionally a freezing rain had made cycling on good pavement very hazardous or a heavy mist had made the visibility very low.

Sometimes the motorist or truck driver who crashed into the bicycle was almost completely responsible for an accident. But often the driver was unaware of a boy or girl on a bicycle because he did not see the white on the mud guard of the back wheel or the tail light.

Perhaps it was dusk and the cyclist was in dark clothes with no light garment which could be seen easily. Maybe it was completely dark and no headlight or flashlight was attached to the frame of the bicycle. Another condition might have been that the horn or warning bell of the bicycle was out of order. When the motorist should have heard a warning sound from the cyclist, there was no signal given!

If a boy or girl wants to own a bicycle, in most families it is a good plan for youngsters not only to help pay for such a major investment, but also be responsible for its care. He must know and obey sensible safety rules. If a child is too young to ride carefully — he is too young to ride!

The law holds parents answerable for the actions of their children. So it behooves mothers and fathers to know the traffic rules and make sure their youngsters are familiar with them.

Bicycles should keep to the extreme right of the road, out of the way of other vehicles. When meeting traffic it is passed on the right, when overtaking traffic it is passed on the left. In a town or city the careful bicycle rider stops near the curb.

At an intersection, traffic coming from the right has the right-of-way. When a cyclist wants to turn left, he approaches the intersection as near to the centre of the highway as he can, and then makes the left turn as close to the intersection centre line as possible.

Stop signals must be obeyed and also a traffic officer's directions. The cyclist must raise one arm when stopping or slowing down to turn, to show in which direction he is going. He should use his horn or bell as a warning signal only when necessary. It is not a nuisance device.

Each cyclist must get along "on his own steam". Hanging on to a moving truck or car is against the law and very dangerous. To "cut in" in front of a moving car is also asking for trouble, and is never permissable.

Quite a few accidents occur when cyclists ride together. They get talking, and they forget to keep their eyes and ears open for cars or trucks or pedestrians. Sometimes they ride three or four or five abreast. Single file is the rule for bicycles in heavy or medium traffic. A motorist often has difficulty in passing more than two bicycles riding alongside each other.

Adolescents sometimes start "clowning" or showing how smart they can be riding without their hands on the handle bars or their feet on the pedals. The highway is no place for stunt riding. Wobbling all over the road is a silly and dangerous practice. Keep in a straight line!

Bicycles are built for one rider and it is against the law in many areas to carry a passenger. Both youngsters might be badly hurt in a spill. Better be safe than sorry!

Teatime Topics

By Jean Sharp,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Specially Written for
The Lachute Watchman

A cooking editor suffers, as any good cook does, from self-conscious hostesses.

"People say, 'I never know what to have when you're coming to dinner'," says Mary Meredith. "Really, I don't care what they have, what I want is their friendship."

Miss Meredith is cookery editor for Woman and Home, an English magazine published in London. She says her test kitchen overlooks St. Paul's Cathedral.

She is in Canada for the first time as part of a trade mission brought here by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The other members of the mission (all male) are buyers investigating Ontario honey, canned fruit and vegetables such as asparagus and tomatoes, white beans, fruit pie fillings.

Miss Meredith hopes to offer recipes to her readers which include such products as corn and tomatoes.

Shows Advantages

She says both are readily available in England, but aren't used as often or in the same way as they are here.

"We don't use a tremendous lot of corn, and I don't think the British housewife has quite got the idea of using canned tomatoes to take advantage of their flavor. They still add water to a stew or a casserole."

Each month Miss Meredith produces three pages of recipes with full-page colored photographs of whatever she is presenting. She says she and her staff develop some recipes and they test everything thoroughly.

"The family hates me sometimes. We have the same thing over and over until I get it right. But that's only the family. If we have company I don't experiment, I have something positive.

She says her personal favorites change frequently, but a current one which is useful for entertaining because it's quick and easy, is baked pork chops.

Sugar and Mustard

"For two pork chops, use two teaspoons dry mustard, four dessert spoons of brown sugar, salt and pepper and lemon juice.

"Mix the sugar and mustard and dust it over the chops. Put them in a baking tin and sprinkle the lemon over them. Bake them 30 to 40 minutes at 375."

Miss Meredith is a graduate of London's Cordon Bleu cooking school, and a former teacher.

She says she believes her presentations are more practical than some of the food pages in North American magazines.

"The cookery is more down to earth. There is nothing any normal housewife couldn't make, and each time, in each recipe, there is nothing taken for granted, we give them all the information possible."

She says she doesn't work too hard to change standard recipes. "People don't want the off-beat all the time. I think people want reminders. It's a help to them if they can look at the magazine and say, 'That's right, we haven't had steak and kidney pie in weeks'."

Texstyles

Madeleine Levason

A lot of smart little Canadian girls will go back to school this week in fashions inspired by Courreges, the young designer who set Paris on its ear with his simple, square-cut styles and short skirts. If you, too, have been wondering who on earth could wear his revolutionary styles, you'll find the answer in coats, suits, dresses and sportswear for the really young Canadians.

Such Courreges trademarks as welt-seaming to accent the strict architectural shapes, yoke details, suspenders, low-slung belts and military collars seem imminently suitable for children.

The latest fabric developments will also be found in the youngest fashions. Discreet checks, tattersal plaids, heather effects, herringbone and diagonal weaves of wool and easy care blends are crisply tailored in the newest lines. These classic men's type fabrics in subdued neutral shades are outstanding in school girls' clothes when accented with demure white collars and cuffs.

The new permanent-press fabrics will be found in many boys' slacks, and in coats for both boys and girls. The latest improvements in wash and wear blends are seized on by children's designers for all types of clothing because easy care has become essential in this field.

Although Courreges is the most influential designer on the young fashion scene, modern children have the choice of all adult style trends. For instance, the St. Laurent smock shape with its fullness from a high yoke has left its mark on girls' dresses and coats. Fashions in the Mod tempo are the miniature prints, ruffles, and bows. The "yeh-yeh" influence is evident in rib knit "poor boy" sweaters, big industrial zippers and other avant-garde touches.

Pop art too is in the picture with giddy combinations of dots and stripes designed to exercise the eye of the beholder. Knit and stretch fabrics are widely used for the school set and turn up frequently in sweaters or jackets which are often co-ordinated with matching socks for the total look featured in adult styles. Newest knit innovations include combinations of stretch yarns which stabilize them from shrinking and stretching.

New boys' clothes give a big play to the heather-toned tweeds. The Norfolk-type, belted jacket combined with corduroy knickers is top fashion in the English tweedy country theme. Also setting a high fashion pace is the matching suit, combined with short pants, collarless cardigan jackets, Eton caps and fringed scarf which is draped around the neck.

All-weather coats for Canadian children are interesting from both the fashion and fabric point of view; corduroy, suede-type fabrics, checks, plaids, and pile linings predominate. The styling swings from the severely tailored line to classic chesterfields and in many cases the pile linings spill out to form collars and hoods.

Battle of Britain anniversary —

Quarter-century tribute to World War's 'valiant few'

A quarter century ago Britain survived her darkest hours by hurling back the German Luftwaffe in the Battle of Britain, fighting in the skies of England from June through October, 1940, and causing Winston Churchill to utter his immortal words:

"Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

Numbered among the "few" were Canadians who served as aircraft and grounderew in the Fighter, Bomber and Coastal Commands. Most of the Canadians had crossed the Atlantic in pre-war days to enroll in the RAF. There were, however, two fighter squadrons identified as Canadian. One was No. 242 (Canadian) Squadron, composed of Canadian fighter pilots of the RAF; the other was No. 1 (Fighter) Squadron of the RCAF (later changed to No. 401) which had arrived in Britain on the eve of battle.

Among them, Canadians scored some 120 victories in aerial combat, with about 100 more enemy aircraft counted as probably destroyed or damaged. These victories were not without cost: 47 Canadian airmen gave their lives in the Battle of Britain.

The Battle was not fought solely in the air: the groundcrews were engaged in it as well as the pilots. After each sortie the aircraft had to be immediately rearmed, refuelled, the equipment checked and tested, and the machines generally made ready to take off on the next "scramble". Damage to engine, airframe and equipment had to be repaired in desperate haste to keep the maximum number of aircraft (mostly Spitfires and Hurricanes) in the air to meet the German onslaught.

The mechanics kept them flying only by round-the-clock maintenance, snatching sleep in flight shacks and bunkers beside the aircraft. The finest tribute to the efficiency of these "erks", performing under extremely trying conditions, was found in the daily reports of aircraft serviceability.

For the RCAF, the Battle of Britain had special significance. It was the force's baptism of fire. It was then that Canadian airmen flew into action as a force for the first time against an enemy, won their first victories, and suffered their first casualties.

Of the several hundred Canadians who fought in the Battle of Britain in the air and on the gound, only five are known to be still serving in the RCAF, such has been the passage of time. Two served then in RCAF formations, the others with the RAF.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

The fates seem to be against our Birdsfoot Trefoil project on the home farm. In our imagination, the seed crop this fall was going to pay for last year's taxes, this year's taxes, the fertilizer bill, and the harvesting, and maybe, just maybe, with the present price of trefoil sky-high, a bit besides to buy paint.

But the chap who was going to spray it last spring to suppress the grass didn't get around to it until it was too late. So we told a neighbor he could pasture it until the tenth of June, but be sure to take the cows off then. He didn't get his own fences fixed; the cows came off on the tenth of July.

The trefoil is there certainly. In the ten years since it was planted, it has spread to every corner of the field. In mid-August the field was a solid mass of yellow bloom. But it is short, too short to cut with a swather because it had been over-grazed in June and there isn't much chance now the seed pods will be ripe before a killing frost comes. So now it's a next-year crop.

At least we have our own weed sprayer now. It arrived minus the boom, lost in transit, the gauge glass broken, and one hose missing. We spent four days of our holiday looking at it, then loaded it with Dalapon and went at our field of first-prize twitch grass. Spraying with three nozzles out of thirteen was like shovelling sand with a toothpick, but we got the job done. Dutifully, in three days, the twitch grass turned purple, then brown. This week, the Junior member of the Firm is ploughing it under. Imagination pictures this field next spring beautifully bare of twitch grass for the first time in memory. We'll see.

But I can tell you we closed our eyes while we poured that dollar-a-pound white powder into the tank of water, ten pounds to every acre.

The hand-gun that came with the sprayer — for an extra $25 — is giving us great satisfaction. It was sheer pleasure to cruise around the farm with the tractor-mounted sprayer dosing the willows, the hawthorns and the tagalders that have been sneaking in. In one afternoon with 40 gallons of fuel oil and a gallon of Brushkill, we destroyed — or hope we have destroyed — more brush than three men could in a week with axes. And no hornets' nests.

I have just made a discovery. The calendars don't show the moon phases any more. At least, the four in our house don't. So, I am afraid I can't tell you when it's going to freeze again.

As far as the corn crop goes, the frost at the end of August didn't do too much harm. A few low-lying fields caught it in the Eastern Townships. Harris Shufelt, the new Quebec Farmers' Association secretary, just back from two days in Pontiac County, reports that area escaped it.

A chap who is growing corn for the first time phoned up to ask when he should cut it. I resisted the temptation to give him the smart answer, "one day before it freezes." He has to depend on his neighbor to cut it, so he is booking the machine for the second week in September. He might miss a few good growing days, but it's not worth the risks in the alternative choice. If he waits until it freezes, everyone is going to want the machine at once. And it might be two or three weeks before he gets his turn. In the meantime, his field of leafless frozen stalks becomes a poor substitute for silage.

The notion that corn should have a frost before being cut comes from early attempts to reduce the moisture going into a silo. In the days before early maturing hybrids, it may have been the only way to get away from seepage and sour silage. But there will be little seepage from unfrosted corn if the kernels have reached the firm dough stage before harvest. And that's the kind that makes milk and cuts feed bills.

If you have more corn than will go into the silo, rejoice. I haven't seen a heap or a stack of silage spoil yet any more than eight or ten inches on the outside. And with a bit of care, even that loss can be avoided.

I know one man in Glengarry County who puts all his corn into a stack every year. And he makes beautiful silage; in fact it won second place at the Seed Fair year before last.

He hires a light bulldozer for the day and builds the stack like a saucer upside down. Each wagon load of chopped corn is run up on top, then pulled off with a chain attached to the false front in the wagon. Then he covers the whole heap with 4-mil plastic sheeting, and weights it down with wet chopped straw. His spoilage is zero. The trick, he says, is to keep the plastic tight to the silage; don't let the wind get under it.

With less care, I have seen corn silage keep quite well in snow-fence silos and even in heaps blown into the corner between the silo and the barn. Some say be sure to tramp it; others say it shouldn't have a footprint in it.

To hold prov'l plowing match at Nicolet, Que.

With the aim of spreading the interest in good plowing to all the good farming areas of the province, the Quebec Provincial Plowmen's Association is this year holding its annual provincial plowing championships in Nicolet County.

The farm of Antoine Richard and Sons, between St. Leonard d'Aston and No. 9 Highway, will be the site of the 11th annual championships, and they will be held on September 29-30. While dairying is the principal occupation of this area, many farmers specialize in potato growing, and Mr. Richard has 225 of his 1,300 acres in this crop.

The County Agricultural Society will be the official hosts of the match, and as usual the first day will see the district and local matches staged, with special emphasis on young plowmen. The Provincial match will again be open to contestants from all parts of the province, and a special Junior Contest, using World Plowing rules, will also be held.

At the conclusion of the second day's events, a banquet will be held in the Parish Hall at St. Leonard d'Aston, when the Esso championship trophy will be awarded. In charge of affairs will be Napoleon Mercier, county agronome at Nicolet, J. A. Lafortune, 201 Cremazie Blvd., Montreal, and O. R. Evans, 7782 Querbes Ave., Montreal.

Couple, 12 children ousted by fire at St. Andrews

A family of 12 children was made homeless by a blaze Monday afternoon at St. Andrews. Fire completely destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gérard Larente and their children. Mr. Larente is a provincial highways employee, and for several years had been occupant of the property, which is owned by a Mr. McGolrick, of Toronto.

The outbreak started in the second storey of the frame building, which is situated near the Catholic Cemetery. Despite the efforts of the volunteer fire brigade, directed by René Charron, the dwelling was razed to the ground.

The children were given shelter by relatives and friends, and it is understood that Mr. E. C. Calder, who owns a vacant building in the village, placed this at the disposal of the unfortunate family.

Train victim identified as Hawkesb'y man

The man instantly killed by Train 134 on Tuesday evening of last week has been identified as Olivier Lalande, 59, of Hawkesbury. The victim has been a resident of the Ontario community for only six months; he was well-known as a taxi driver, also going under the name of Latreille.

According to information from the investigating police officers, the victim apparently went for a ride with friends and did not return. The incident occurred between Staynerville and Marelan. Engineer on the C.P.R. Budd car which struck the man on the track was René Labelle, while the conductor was Jean-Paul Legaré, both of Montreal.

No inquest will be held.

Misinformation on traffic fatality

Fernand Bussières, a resident of Montreal who last week was reported to have died from injuries in a Labor Day accident at the junction of Route 8 and the Beech Ridge Road, is alive and on the road to recovery, according to Cpl. Jean Paul Dallaire, officer-in-charge of the Provincial Police unit.

Mis-information on the death of Mr. Bussières was received from an official at the Hotel Dieu Hospital, St. Jerome, where he was taken following the accident.

The inquest into the death of Robert Dorman, 43-year-old resident of Montreal and St. Andrews East, who was instantly killed in the same accident, is scheduled for Thursday of next week, September 23, on the provision that Mr. Bussières has sufficiently recovered from his injuries to testify.

Week's Epigram

It's not easy to escape work. People who refuse to build a fence because they might have to paint it, often end up trimming a hedge.

For highway overpass across C.P.R.

A notoriously hazardous spot is at last undergoing improvement — progress is being made for the construction of an overpass at Simon's Crossing on Highway 8 west of Lachute, where numerous accidents have occurred over the past years. This photo shows the scene looking westward. The former road may be seen at the right, and the routing of the by-pass road necessitated re-placement of the signal lights at the rail crossing. — Photo, Bertrand Studio

L.H.S. commencement exercises; principal's report to the public

The school commencement and prize giving for Lachute High School senior grades, was held Friday evening with a good representation of parents and friends attending.

The program was chaired by Mr. Jas. W. McGibbon, president, and on the platform were other members of the board, the Hon. W. M. Cottingham and representatives of the prize donors. The Rev. L. Hisey gave the invocation and Commissioner R. O. (Dick) MacLean spoke briefly on behalf of the board, welcoming the students and teachers and specially commending two students who had ranked among the highest in the province.

It transpired that these same two students, Jennifer Hooker and Peter Rodger, had a part in the program; they recounted the plans and immediate destinies of those who had graduated — some to continue their studies and others embarking on a career. Principal Royal then presented the diplomas; there were 53 in all, but a number of the recipients were absent from this function. James Noble pronounced the valedictory, to conclude this phase of the exercises.

Principal's Report

A highlight of these annual ceremonies is the principal's report. This was the 19th successive graduating class addressed by Principal Fred Royal in his long service at the school, and he tendered his sincere good wishes.

Out of 61 students who wrote the full departmental examinations, 53 had qualified to receive certificates. Also (Mr. Royal noted) this was the first time in the history of the school that two students had ranked in the 90's, among Quebec's top scholars. No other school off the Island of Montreal could boast two students concurrently in this category.

The school population was now more or less static, said the principal. Enrolments last year were 783. At the present date this year they were 772.

Reviewing the school's experience with Subject Promotion, three definite advantages had become apparent: (1) Students have a wider and freer choice of subjects. (2) More students are continuing in High School; there are fewer drop-outs. (3) The number attaining their High School Leaving certificates has considerably increased.

The Cuisenaire method of teaching Arithmetic has been so remarkable in the first grades, that it is being extended to Grade III.

Last year one class of Grade VII studied their geography entirely in French. The results were so beneficial that this is being applied also in Grade VIII.

From the innovation of Kindergarten classes it was hoped there would be notable advantages in the coming years.

Principal Royal mentioned a new departmental ruling to the effect that promotions in Grades I to VI will be automatic, starting in 1966.

There are seven newcomers on the staff of 37. Mr. Royal enumerated these, and their qualifications, and extended a welcome. With their co-operation he anticipated another successful year.

Climax to this program was the presentation of prizes to the outstanding students of Grades VI to XII. Before proceeding with this, the principal sincerely thanked the donors of awards and scholarships; these included the Canadian Legion and Auxiliary, Orange Lodge, Home and School Association, Women's Institutes, also various business firms, individuals, past and present benefactors of memorials and endowments.

The final presentation was a non-academic award, in the form of two certificates with commendation, to Peter Rodger and Jack Stratton, for essays in a contest sponsored by the British Commonwealth Society.

Psychiatry clinic for Arg. Hospital

A new addition to the Argenteuil Hospital is a pyschiatric clinic, for outdoor patients. This will be held on Wednesdays, and the service is made possible by collaboration of the Laurentides Hospital at l'Annonciation, without expense to the local institution. A qualified psychiatrist will be in charge, and assisting him will be a social service worker and a nurse-receptionist.

Only patients recommended by their physician will be treated at this clinic, which is designed to serve a territory from Papineauville to St. Eustache, including this county.

The hospital administration received the recommendation of this new service at their last meeting, from Dr. Roger Lavigne, medical director, and Horace Lamarche, director general, and full endorsement was given.

Lions' committeeman replies to Mayor —

New arena building in final stages

A good attendance at the Lions Club reopener last week, indicated various segments of the group had been active despite the suspension of formal meetings during the summer.

Under chairmanship of the new president, Bob Dixon, the members heard a report from Mozart Carrière, the Arena committeeman, who had headed a delegation and procured an agreement from Town Council for purchase of the 75,000 sq. ft. land area for $15,000 (as reported in last issue of The Watchman). . .

Lion Carrière took issue with Mayor Dr. Saindon's views expressed on that occasion. The mayor had criticized the Lions' lack of foresight in incurring a $110,000 expense for this Arena without enlisting the collaboration of Council and other community groups. — Which, according to Mr. Carrière, sounded somewhat misleading in view of the Lions' fruitless approaches and negotiations seeking co-operation in this big venture. The club's prime purpose was to get the youngsters skating; this they had done, successfully, in a supervised and organized way, and the Arena was an imperative and logical outcome of the earlier outdoor rink. "If this club had waited for municipal sponsorship, our youngsters would be 21 before they learned to skate. . . The Arena will be completed and our kids will be skating again — while our City Fathers continue their long-term planning." While registering his strong protest to the mayor's attitude, Lion Carrière was appreciative of the Council's willingness now to purchase the land, as a gesture of financial assistance.

On the structural details of the Arena, Lion Mozart reported the final stages were in hand, for laying of the cement floor, installation of the rink boards and modern mercury-vapor lighting.

Dr. Eric Mongeon has undertaken a challenging job as chairman for Arena administration, to see that it operates on a sound business basis. His committee will comprise Lions M. Carrière, Don Neill, Buzz MacRae and Jacques Bourgoing.

Jos. Santini, Chamber of Commerce president, reported on the coming trade fair in October, tentatively known as Expo '65, which will be the first public function in the new Arena. The plans he described, indicate a highly promising and interesting show.

Other summer activities and fund-raising ventures were also reported. . . Gaston Laroche and Claude Landry gave a compte-rendu of the fastball exhibition featuring the Molson four-man team, and Lion Landry produced a $200 cheque for the Arena fund as net proceeds of this effort. Credit was given to the fine assistance of Jacques Paul, who lends a valuable hand in many such sports promotions.

Keith Clarke reported (on behalf of Clayton Robinson) the outcome of the annual $10 ticket drawing, which realized a net of $6,500. Special credit was given to Ozzie Carrière (and to Lion Robinson) for their energy in sales promotion.

In the same vein, Lion Bill Jones reviewed the Miss Canada feature, sponsored by the Lions Club at Lachute Spring Fair, which had produced another worthwhile sum to augment the community fund.

Altogether, the meeting gave a gratifying impetus to the coming season's program. A song session was led by Lion Hal Joyce, and the members enjoyed this renewal of fellowship.

Driver in fatal auto collision to stand trial

Fernand Richer, from St. Albert, Ont., was sent to trial on a charge of involuntary homicide at the next session of criminal assizes for the District of Terrebonne.

A coroner's jury held Richer criminally responsible for the death of Mme Jean-Guy Séguin, 34, of Vimont, Que., in a collision June 13 last at the junction of Route 8 and 8-A. Three children of the dead woman were injured in the same mishap.

Judge Camille L. de Martigny, in magistrate's court at St. Jerome, allowed the accused his freedom pending trial. In view of the distance of his domicile, the tribunal set a personal bail of $500 plus two bonds of $950 each, which is customary in such cases.

Pedestrian, 75, killed on highway

Felix Dorion, a 75-year-old resident of East Settlement, was instantly killed in front of his home on Route 8, approximately four miles east of town, early Friday evening. The accident occurred around 8 p.m. moments after the victim had left the house of Roger Campeau, a farmer living across the highway from the Dorion home. It appears that Mr. Dorion stopped at the side of the highway to await a car, and as soon as this car had passed, he stepped out onto the road into the path of a St. Eustache-bound automobile, driven by Conrad Lecuyer, 31, of Ottawa.

The mishap was investigated by Q.P.P. Constable André Piché, of the local detachment, and the body was brought to Lachute. District coroner Dr. John C. MacKimmie opened an inquest, which was postponed until Thursday, September 23.

B'burg cracks down on foot-loose dogs

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — At the September 7 meeting of the Brownsburg Town Council, which was spent almost entirely in the discussion of matters significant only to individual citizens, one item of public interest resulted — the town police have been ordered to crack down on the number of dogs running loose within the municipality.

In response to questions from several councillors, Police Chief André Roy stated that the pellet gun purchased last spring had been used several times to immobilize vagrant dogs. The Council then requested Police Chief Roy to impound all loose dogs and to levy fines up to $20, plus costs, for each animal captured.

Councillors Rosaire Belisle and Doug Clarke claimed that too many complaints were being received from irate residents concerning dogs, despite the recent passing of legislation forbidding all owners to allow their dogs to roam within the town.

Police Chief Roy declared that immediate and severe action would be taken to assure that all offending owners would be charged through the courts, rather than through the municipal police.

Three vehicles in crash, one dead, seven injured

Ste. Scholastique — A violent impact between two cars and a truck cost the life of 70-year-old Mme Emile Latendresse and caused injuries to seven other victims, at 1.30 Thursday afternoon on Route 8 near the St. Augustin and Ste. Scholastique line.

It is reported the truck was overtaking a car on the highway when it met an automobile approaching in the other traffic lane. The truck was a vehicle of the Bibeau Transport, Montebello.

Mme Latendresse, of Rosemount, was killed while her husband and six others were taken to the Deux-Montagnes Hospital at St. Eustache. The car driven by Latendresse caught fire.

Dr. J. L. Paradis, coroner of the district, was notified of the fatality.

Civil Protection life saving course

Plans for a Civil Protection Life Saving course, sponsored by the Civil Defence Department, have been announced for the Lachute area, and approximately 20 persons have been approached to take part.

The course will involve two evening sessions a week, each lasting three hours. Commencing in mid-October it will continue until late November.

Fire summons

Members of the Lachute Volunteer Fire Department were summoned at 7.50 a.m. Saturday when a fire was reported to be burning in the Buffet au Gai Temps restaurant, next to the post-office on Main Street.

The fire started in grease, and was confined to that part of the kitchen; the only damage to the establishment was from smoke.

Carillon workers discussed procedure for strike action

While Hydro-Quebec authorities and the employees' union are negotiating in Montreal to avert a strike, some 50 workers at the Carillon power plant held their own meeting last Sunday in St. Andrews to study their position in the event of a work stoppage — which had been half anticipated on Monday, the day following this meeting.

The meeting decided, in the event of a strike, that the local employees would stay away from their work and establish picket lines at the power-plant gates. Some of the maintenance workers affected are permanent employees, and others are on a temporary basis.

Main bone of contention among Hydro-Quebec employees, it seems, is the question of seniority. The traditional examination system, according to union spokesmen, is a scandal which has led to the exercise of favoritism and unfair irregularities.

André Carufel, of St. Andrews, union organizer, insisted at the meeting that strike procedures must be legal, orderly and without violence. There will be no question of force or intimidation.

According to the local manager of Gatineau Electricity Co'y, Raymond Carignan, a strike would have serious consequences on service to this district. Power is drawn from both Carillon and Cedars developments (Hydro-Quebec) and from the Company's development on the Gatineau River. In the event of a Hydro-Quebec strike, this latter unit alone would be insufficient to feed the Gatineau Company system.

The Carillon employees are members of the Syndicat de la Fonction Publique, affiliated with the Fédération des Travailleurs du Québec (FTQ).

It has been a long time since such attention was paid to wildlife and its preservation, as has been noted these past few months. With special areas being posted as sanctuaries, it looks as though we are starting to wake up a little. Of course, the work being done in Canada is diminutive at present, but maybe one of these years we Canadians will go ahead and do something. As far as I know, nothing is being done by any of the provinces, except in the usual way. Far behind in this field, as usual, is Quebec; and this will naturally be blamed on everyone else but the governing bodies. Our sad state is no fault of anyone but our government, this we know. It does make you wonder just how we have let ourselves get into this poor state. They say that most voters are indifferent to anything that doesn't concern them personally. This I sure believe — we have let ourselves be pushed and pulled around, with no thought of doing anything about it. Maybe I'm a revolutionary or something, but don't you think if we want good government it's up to us? We seem to have been allowing officials who don't know the first thing about it, to run our wildlife departments. I suppose these are the political plums for good partisan service. But our natural resources are far too important to be handled this way.

The trout fishing has been good this past week or so. It looks as though nature held back on good fishing until the last couple of weeks. Excellent catches of greys have been taken, some of them running into the 10-lb. class. The best catches I've heard of have been from Bark Lake — 10 lbs. right down to 2 lbs., and a fair number of these have been reported. Silver Lake has also been paying off. Jacques Gagné's wife really took him to the cleaners last week-end, catching three wonderful fish, all greys, the largest weighing 7 lbs. Jacques caught the small ones, the type you use for cat food, but it takes an expert to hook and land the big ones! Sixth Range is still not producing; this may be due to the stocking in the early spring — with so many small fish swimming around, it is not necessary for the big ones to do anything but open their mouths. I did hear of an angler from Montreal who landed a 13-lb. grey in the County, but I do not know exactly where. Some fair doré have been caught at the Carillon Dam also, with a few small pike thrown in for good measure.

Most fishermen in this area will put their tackle into mothballs until next year — and this is strange, because fishing for other types will be exceptionally good for some time yet. Large pike are just waiting to be taken, and anyone who has drifted down a river early in the morning, with the mist rising in swirls, and the odd splash of some water bird or fish that can't be seen — then the slashing swirl of displaced water as some killer snaps at your lure! — Boy, this is tops in my book! Even though you don't hook or land it, you know it's there, and your old ticker beats a rapid fire on your ribs; man, there's nothing like it! Right about now almost anything can be taken, and most of the time they are good-sized fish, just cruising around for some morsel to help them last over the long winter.

As usual at this time of year, some of the shooters cannot wait for the duck season to open. Already a great deal of shooting is taking place on the North River, and as a result, very few ducks may be seen flying right now. This also applies to the partridge; and even the doves have been getting shot at. There are actually a good number of partridge around, too; most of them seem to be late births, very small and not too fast on the wing. Similarly with the ring-neck pheasants. This could be due to the very slow spring and the wet summer. It is also just possible these birds being seen right now are second nestings; and if this is the case, not much can be done to protect them. Not grown sufficiently to really forage for themselves, they will be an easy prey for hunters.

It looks as though this same problem confronts the deer and their young. I've seen a couple of these that were obviously very late births, maybe a few weeks old and that's all. With the leaves already falling in the bush, there will not be much protection for them. It is possible there will be very very few deer in this county after the first week-end of killing. With the hundreds of hunters in the bush, with all kinds of artillery, they won't have much chance.

Some of the summer birds have gone, and it's time to start putting out a little feed for the ones still with us. Jays are once more back yelling for a handout, and it's going to be interesting, for us, watching the squirrels competing with them for food. The squirrels getting their free grub-stake for the winter and packing it in every nook and cranny, are going to have to guard it all the time. Jays can rob these storehouses so fast the squirrels don't even know what came, and went.

If any of you are ambitious you can build some more feeders; you might even build a nesting box too — not that they will nest just now, but they can get inside out of the cold and wet during the bad days ahead. In the bush these days many chickadees can be seen and heard. I know I write a lot about these, but they sure are a really lovable little bird — curious, clean, and real comedians too. The way they will come down to you trying to attract attention, is funny indeed. You can almost imagine they are controlled by a spring, the way they pop up and down the tree trunks. Even their little bz-bz as they call, is wonderful to hear, especially on a cold day when nothing seems to be stirring.

As most of you hunters know, when out after ducks you need good hip boots; anything else on your feet is just about useless. One drawback with hip boots, they all seem to have the harness at the knee to be laced. This is wonderful for wading where it is not too deep, but not very good for boat and blind shooting. Forget all about the harness, and keep the boots loose on your legs. If any trouble should overtake you, then at least you have a good chance of getting the boots off. It's no fun trying to swim in cold water with heavy clothing on, even without boots. Give it a little thought.

I mentioned a couple of weeks ago that the 30 M-1 carbine was banned for deer hunting. A number of persons have phoned me about this, and I am sure this is the case. I can only reprint what the game laws state, and I don't think they are wrong. However, for your knowledge and satisfaction here is the whole list of banned guns:

Item 3 of the regulations states: "Bows with less than 40 lbs. pressure and arrows other than those of at least ¼" steel broad heads, all pistols and revolvers, all guns other than those of calibre 10, 12 and 16, gun cartridges other than those firing S.S.G. or single bullets, rim fire cartridges, rifles firing central-fire cartridges of the following calibres — 218-219-22-222-256C, F. Magnum, 30-ML carbine, 25/20-25/35-32/20-32/40 and the 38/40, non-expanding hard-point bullets of military type or other.". .

Broken down, it means that no bow of under 40-lb. pressure may be used at all. Rim-fire cartridges, that is those cartridges that have to be hit on the rim to ignite the powder, and those centre-fire cartridges of the above mentioned calibres. . . Hope this clears it up.

Alf Shand retains assistant pros' provincial title

Last Friday Alf Shand, popular assistant to Louis de Breyne at the Lachute Golf Club, won the Ernie Findlay Memorial Trophy. This award is symbolic of the Quebec Assistant Golf Professional championship, which is played annually at the Beaconsfield Golf Club. As defending champion, Shand successfully retained the title he won last year.

It is noteworthy that this championship was also won four years in succession during the 1950's by Allan Johnston, who was well known on the American professional golf tour.

Over 36 holes, Shand shot rounds of 72 and 74 to build up an impressive lead of 4 strokes over his nearest rival, André Tremblay of the host club. Tied at 151 for third position were John Porter of Elm Ridge and André Harvey of Beloeil.

Parker Moir, another colorful member of Louis de Breyne's staff, also provided good representation for the local club in this tournament. Rounds of 80 and 81 placed him in respectable position in the extensive field of Quebec assistant professionals.

Boating Clinic

By STAN DAVIES

There are very few government regulations covering boating in Canada — far fewer than the avalanche of rules which regulate driving a car on the highway. But there is still some confusion, as exemplified by some of the questions I've been asked:

A man backed out of a slip and hit my boat. Could I have sued him? (V.B.J., Ft. Francis)

Answer: If your boat was moving under way, as we say, he was definitely in the wrong. A boat pulling out of a slip has no rights. It must give right of way to any other boat that's moving if there is danger of collision. It must not move until the coast is clear. I think you could have sued, and won.

I want to take my girl water skiing. Can I get away without the second person in the boat? (I.K., Etobicoke)

Answer: You know the law requires a second person in the boat as an observer, in case the water skier falls. However, I suppose you can get away without one. Nobody is likely to squeal on you, and there aren't many police on the lakes. But obviously you don't think much of your girl friend to risk her life that way!

What does one toot on the horn mean? (J.Z., Ft. William)

Answer: Under Great Lakes rules one toot on a horn or whistle means "altering course to starboard," that's turning right; two toots: "altering course to port (left);" three toots: "engines going astern;" five blasts is the emergency or danger signal.

Is there a law about carrying gasoline in plastic containers? (F.G., Weyburn)

Answer: In most provinces, yes! — Metal cans are required. And please don't carry gasoline in the plastic bottles used to sell detergent, bleach, softener, or other water solutions. The gasoline may soften them and leak into your boat . . . and that's like taking along a bomb.

How close can you come to a boat you are overtaking in a river? (P.G.H., Hawkesbury)

Answer: There's nothing in the law to say. But remember there's more to passing a boat than not hitting it. Because after you've passed, there's your wake to consider. And if it should cause the overtaken boat any harm or damage, you're a dead duck.

Why do some boaters, when they are approaching you, always wait to the last second before signifying what they are going to do? (R.F.T., Hamilton)

Answer: It saddens me to see the same aggressive disregard of the other fellow, so common on the highway, being transferred to the waterway. Boating used to be a gentleman's game, I don't think there is an answer to this question.

Does a seaplane have the right of way over boats?

Answer: When a seaplane is taxiing on water it is classed as a boat and must conform to Small Vessel Regulations. The regulations were revised this year to include seaplanes and amphibious airplanes.

Is it safe to water ski in the dark?

Answer: It's very dangerous. And to try and discourage people from doing it, it's been made unlawful.

Must a man who rents out a boat supply lifejackets along with it?

Answer: No. The law doesn't care who supplies them, but there MUST be one aboard for each person.

Racing News

National Title. — Although the racing season is not yet finished it would appear that the Canadian Racing Drivers' championship is already decided. This year the championship was run in two classes. In the over-two-litres Ludwig Heimrath has 28 points to lead this section and Bob McLean from Vancouver has 42. So the overall standing shows — Bob McLean with his small Lotus 23-B in the lead with 42 points and Ludwig Heimrath with his McLaren Elva second with 28 points.

Player's Quebec. — Pre-race activities are already underway for the Players' Quebec. An exhibition of cars and special movies on the "200" were shown at the Fairview Shopping Centre. On September 15 there is a sports car cavalcade from Montreal to Trois Rivières. On September 16 there will be a golf tournament between the racing drivers and the press, at Ste. Dorothée. On the 17th there is a big dance at Mount Royal Chalet. All these events are designed to bring attention to the big race to be held at Le Circuit Mont Tremblant, St. Jovite, at 12 noon September 19.

The race track extension is now complete. The extension follows the line of the Devil River in the direction of St. Jovite. This gives a longish straight-away from the old entrance on the south side almost to the Labat Bridge. It is estimated that at least eight cars are capable of doing 180 miles per hour on this section.

These eight cars are four Lola T70's, the type which won the Player's 200 in the spring. These cars are driven by John Surtees, 1964 world's champion; Hugh Dibley, of London, Eng., who did so well at Mosport; Shern Decker, of New York City; and David Hobbs, of London, Eng. The other four cars are McLaren Elvas, and the drivers will be Bruce McLaren, the designer and man who drove such an exciting race at Le Circuit in the summer; two drivers from the U.S., Charlie Hayes and Michael Goth; and of course, Ludwig Haimrath from Toronto. All these add up to a good day's racing.

Mosport. — Big racing in Quebec is overshadowing the Canadian Grand Prix at Mosport. We have not too much information on this event, except that it will not be a formula-type race as was advertised in the spring. This event will be a racing sports car event on the lines of the Player's Quebec.

The Racing Calender reads like this:

Sept. 19, Player's Quebec;

Sept. 25. Canadian Grand Prix at Mosport;

Oct. 3, U.S.A. Grand Prix at Watkins Glen. This race is included in the world's title.

First hole-in-one on floodlit course

Probably a "first" in Canada — and certainly a record on the local golf course — was a hole-in-one scored by a member golfer under the floodlights, after dark on Labor Day.

Larry Maloley, of Montreal, scored the ace with a driver on the 17th hole, which is a distance of over 200 yards, rated as par 3. Playing with Mr. Maloley were three fellow club members, Messrs. Denis Colivas, Tom Kalpakis and Paul Nakis, all Montrealers.

'Work Night' as Rotarians prepared park for winter

It was work night for the Rotary Club, last Thursday, with Vice-President René Dagenais in the chair.

Rotarian visitor Omer Brault, of the Hawkesbury club, was welcomed and a brief business period was held during the regular dinner meeting at "La Lorraine".

Past-Secretary Bill Morrow, who soon moves his family and work to sunny California (to the town of Livermore, a few miles from San Francisco), was given the good wishes of fellow members. He presented the local club with a banner he received recently, upon a visit to the Livermore club.

As soon as the dinner was concluded, all hands adjourned to the Park for the annual clean-up, in readiness for winter. (What a thought!)

Down came the swings; up went the anchors; out came the final "drops" from the dam; and in went the floats to protected storage, as the gang cleared the decks for colder weather.

Tables were stacked, paper-container barrels nested, some metal signs removed, and a general bustle of good-housekeeping, gave Rotarians an opportunity to do muscular service for the youth of the community.

Don Barbour was "elected" to swim in the icy water, in order to dislodge the anchors and propel the raft to shore. Once there, less-hardy members added land-lubber efforts to their former verbal encouragement.

With the aid of Tom Hall's four-wheel-drive truck, the heavy raft was hauled to high ground, there to await the exuberance of youth and warm June weather to re-install it into the pool. The fact that much of the work had to be performed with the use of car headlights, and a spot of rain that threatened the effort, didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the group, or their feeling of accomplishment.

PREVENTION OF BLINDNESS (Weekly Tip)

Failing eyesight can be the first sign of serious eye disease. Because this occurs more frequently after 40, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind recommends a careful eye check-up every two years. Glaucoma, one of the most treacherous eye conditions in adults, means certain blindness, unless treated early.

For one reason or another, we have not been able to take in so many of the fairs this year. But we did make it to Sherbrooke for Wednesday's soggy afternoon.

I can't help it, but I like the new dairy judging classification. From a spectator's point of view it makes the show very much tidier. The simplified classes mean that even a non-farm person can follow the placings. And we can't overlook public relations value of our fairs; it is one of the reasons that fairs exist.

The inter-breed best udder class may be causing controversy among breed showmen, but it is a real crowd-pleaser. At Sherbrooke, it brought the greatest number of spectators into the stands of any class. And when Judge Fitzsimmons ordered the top four cows to be milked out before final placing, there was quite a stir of approval from the crowd. We wouldn't be at all surprised to see this competition become the featured highlight of next year's show. And we'll guess that the lone Jersey has company in the ring for the ceremony of milking.

Noticeably absent from the show under the new rules were the tail-enders which in past years have been brought in to fill up classes.

Most striking is the improvement that has resulted from the best herdsman's competition. It is a pleasure now to visit the barns, and in fact there has been a noticeable increase in the number of people going out to the stables. We can guess that next year this herd display competition will be really something to see. It just got off to a good start this year.

Now that we have done a good job of revising the livestock classes, let's bring the other sections of our fairs up to date also. For instance, in the field crops section is there any good reason for keeping the class of "fodder carrots"? Is there one farm in Quebec still growing carrots to feed to the dairy herd? And is there any practical reason to still divide the ensilage corn class into "dent" and "flint" as it is in the Shawville prize list?

Let us instead replace them with some new classes that will focus attention on tomorrow's money-making crops and practices. What about including classes for ear corn, dry shelled corn and high-moisture shelled corn, as well as ensilage corn? And classes for grass silage and hay-lage in plastic bags? And classes for canning crops in the form the buyer and the processer likes to see them? And cash crops like white beans, soybeans, tobacco and sugar beets?

What about featuring a hay show of four-inch flakes baled hay in clear plastic covers? With classes for legume hay, mixed hay, grass hay from first and second cuts? And why not show the grain classes in plastic bags instead of "eight quart pails" and sap buckets?

The possibilities for revision and improvement in our prize-lists are endless. Tradition plays an important part in our lives, but let it not bind us to out-dated classes at the fall fairs.

To many people, our fall fairs are simply grand annual reunions, but the underlying reason for their existence must still be their educational and public relations value.

Congratulations to those local young people who did so well at the Provincial Judging Competition for Young Farmers' Clubs at Quebec City. The St. Hyacinthe team, led by Robert Beaudry, placed first, followed closely by the Howick team (Sandra and Ken MacFarlane) and by the Lachute team (Robert Rodger and André St. Pierre). In the individual scoring, Robert Beaudry, Sandra MacFarlane and Robert Rodger placed first, second and third out of twenty competitors. Congratulations to the leaders, too, who quietly and voluntarily give so much of their own time to their clubs.

At Quebec Fair, we had the pleasure of attending the banquet to honor this year's winners of the Agricultural Award of Merit. And believe me, it was a really impressive ceremony and well done.

This year's gold medal winner of the "professional" class, Fernand Perras, from Laprairie, was the youngest since the award was first made seventy years ago. Robert Ness, Howick, was fourth and Allan Hammond, Lachute, seventh in this large class. Congratulations.

A highlight of the evening was the presentation to the Premier of 85-year-old Arthur Belanger from St. Eustache, who won the gold medal back in 1915. Mr. Bélanger had just returned from a trip to the C.N.E. in Toronto, and Niagara Falls.

Williamson mare won two national championships

Arwistawa, owned by Percy Williamson of Kelowna competing for the Double U Ranch, was judged the national winner at the top U.S. show in Springfield, Ill., just recently. This is the only Arabian mare in North America to win a double national championship; in July, Arwistawa, was judged national champion at the Calgary nationals.

Allan Rogers, trainer for the Double U Ranch, accepted the championship at Springfield. He left Kelowna August 21 for this highly rated show, by-passing the P.N.E. in Vancouver.

Arwistawa, recognized as one of the greatest mares in her class in the world, was imported to Kelowna from Poland last year.

Her owner, Percy Williamson, was formerly a resident of Lachute, where he owned and operated Hillfoot Farm.

Young Lachute couple pledge vows at United Church

MacKay - Scott

The marriage of Barbara Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arnold Scott, of Lachute, to Mr. John Gordon MacKay, also of Lachute, took place at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, September 11, in Lachute United Church.

The Rev. W. Harold Thompson officiated. Mr. Wayne Riddell played the wedding music, and Mrs. Don Barbour sang "Panis Angelicus" and "The Wedding Prayer". Standards of white and peach gladioli, arranged with candelabra, were used to decorate the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of Ligoda silk and Chantilly lace fashioned on empire lines, having a scoop neckline and elbow-length sleeves, appliquéd with lace and pearl beading, the A-line skirt with a deep band of scalloped lace at the hemline, and a floating back panel falling into a train. Her short veil of tulle illusion was held by a matching lace crown trimmed with pearl beading, and she carried a semi-cascade bouquet of white gardenias and stephanotis with fern.

Mrs. Ronald Warwick, cousin of the bride, acted as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Ann Cunningham, cousin of the bride, Miss Eunice Boyd and Mrs. Robert McGuire. They wore identical gowns of peppermint faille having fitted bodices, scoop necklines, elbow-length sleeves and sheath skirts with overpanels. They wore matching shoes and pillbox headpieces with circular veils, and carried peach-colored gladioli with fern.

Mr. Earl Jones acted as best man, and Mr. Robert MacKay, brother of the groom, Mr. Glenn Swail and Mr. Ronald Warwick, were ushers.

The mother of the bride wore a gown of beige Alençon lace and peau-de-soie with matching petal hat in shades of beige into deeper tones. She wore a corsage of peach tea roses. The mother of the groom wore a shell pink brocade costume with velvet petal hat in shades of pink, black accessories and a corsage of white Sweetheart roses.

Following the reception, held at Lachute Golf and Country Club, Mr. and Mrs. MacKay left on their wedding trip, the bride travelling in a garnet wool suit, a black velvet draped hat, and black accessories. Her corsage was white nuggets and fern. On their return they will take up residence in Lachute.

Out-of-town guests were in attendance from Detroit, Toronto, Gaspé, Pointe Claire, Chomedey, Asbestos and Montreal.

The Bible Today

The Christian witness at Expo '67 includes the distribution of Scriptures. Plans are already underway for the World's Fair, due to be held in Montreal during Canada's Centennial year, to challenge visitors to consider the relevance of the Gospel in today's fast-changing world.

The theme of Expo '67 is "Man in His World". The Canadian Bible Society may be represented along with the churches. It is expected that approximately 30 million will be the total attendance during the six months of its operation.

At the present time two projects of Christian witness are planned, "The Christian Pavilion" on Ile Verte and the "Sermons from Science Pavilion" on Ile Notre Dame. Mutual co-operation is planned so that both in their own way will present the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Bible Society may have an exhibit in the Christian Pavilion on translation work as well as the history of the English Bible. In the Sermons from Science Pavilion 100,000 especially imprinted copies of the Gospel of St. John in English and French may be distributed.

C.P. station agent takes retirement

Mr. P. E. Labelle, well known for his long service at the C.P.R. Station, retired on Thursday last after 41 years with the railway company.

Born at Labelle, Que., in 1900, he attended telegraphic school and was later employed by the C.P.R., serving in various capacities as operator, assistant agent and replacement man until 1943, when he settled in Lachute. During this time he worked under several local agents, Messrs. Gignac, Beriault, Portelance and Mayer, until appointed as station agent here in 1961.

Honoring him on his retirement were a number of the local staff and numerous friends, who gathered to extend congratulations and to present him with a purse of money. Mrs. Labelle was the recipient of a bouquet of flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Labelle have a family of four boys and two girls — the eldest, Claude, following in his father's footsteps and working as telegraph operator at the C.P. station here.

Margaret Cook W.I. speaker at Manitou Lodge

The ladies of the Lachute Women's Institute were hosts recently to the Upper Lachute branch, and through the kindness of Mrs. Ralph McOuat had the pleasure of entertaining their guests at Manitou Lodge, in The Glen.

The speaker on this occasion, introduced by her longtime friend, Mrs. G. Y. Deacon, was Mrs. Margaret Cook, whose interesting articles on "Sunnyacres" appear frequently in The Watchman, and whose summer home is in Lakefield.

Mrs. Cook chose to speak on the life of the early settlers (mostly of Irish descent) of Lakefield and the surrounding communities, giving glimpses of the contents of the book which she intends to publish shortly. — Imagine these hardy Irishmen boarding a sailing vessel in Belfast, spending six to ten weeks in crossing the Atlantic to Montreal, and ascending the Ottawa River to St. Andrews, whence with axe and provisions they would make their way through the woods to Lakefield, there to stake their claim. In closing her address, the speaker read humorous excerpts from a pamphlet on the early life of the Kerr family, written by Mr. Leslie Kerr of Lakefield. Mrs. Cook suggested that much of the history of Argenteuil would be preserved, if more of us would take the trouble to record it before it has passed from memory.

Miss Hannah Smith, Mrs. Alex Clarke and Mrs. J. Hadley, on behalf of their respective branches, thanked all those who had made possible a most enjoyable afternoon in this lovely countryside.

APPRECIATION

We wish to express our sincere thanks to relatives, friends, neighbors, our sons and daughter, for the lovely social evening, gifts and cards on the occasion of our 25th wedding anniversary.

Church must seek to give convictions 'hands and feet'

"Some compelling convictions come to me again at the beginning of another year's work," said the Very Rev. C. Ritchie Bell, D.D., guest preacher at the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, in the course of his sermon at this church last Sunday. "The adequacy of Jesus Christ, the greatness of the Christian Church, and the deep, unmet needs of the world — I covet the unfailing loyalty and urgent effort of every member of this church as we seek to give these convictions hands and feet. The Christian Church must everywhere quickly adapt its methods to changed conditions, and urgently apply Christian principles to man's daily life.

"The task of the Church faced by the modern peril is abundantly clear. It is to proclaim the full evangel in all its sweep, power and splendor. Thousands of people disillusioned by the empty alternative to Christ are now ready for the more excellent way. It is as true today as when the words were first spoken long ago — 'And I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me'."

MEASLES AND THE TELEPHONE

Everybody knows that measles bring spots, but how many people know that measles brought the first telephone numbers into use?

Way back in 1897, when a measles epidemic hit the town of Lowell, Massachusetts, a local physician named Dr. Moses Greely Parker realized that if the town's four operators came down with the measles, telephone service would come to a halt.

Dr. Parker suggested that numbers be used instead of the names of the 1,200 Lowell subscribers, so that substitute operators, if they were needed, could learn to operate the exchange as quickly and easily as possible.

We're not told whether or not the regular operators ever did come down with the measles, but we do know that numbers have been a very important part of telephone service ever since!

THE DIRECTORY AND THE TELEPHONE

Early day telephone directories were usually just lists of people in town who had telephone service, with an explanation of how to crank the phone to get the operator's attention. But not anymore! The first few pages in today's phone books are filled with lots of useful information: numbers to call in emergencies, for telephone repair service, for assistance on calls, and to order new services or changes. They give instructions for speeding your Long Distance calls, and a list of Area Codes. These "how-to" pages are there to help you get top value from your telephone service. And that's a pretty good reason for using them!

TYCOON-TO-BE

Here's a little story that should warm the heart of any Lachute businessman:

A small-town boy went into the neighborhood drugstore to use the pay phone. The druggist could not help overhearing the lad's side of the conversation, and it was a model of smooth salesmanship.

"Dr. Jones? Doctor, do you need a hardworking boy to take care of your lawn? Oh, you already have a boy. Is he good . . . I mean does he really know his job? Are you satisfied with his work? You are? OK then . . . thanks anyway."

The druggist couldn't help expressing his regret. "Too bad, Jim. Sorry you didn't get the job."

"Oh, I already have the job," was the cool answer. "I was just checking up on myself!"

Marathon held —

302 miles in Lac St. Denis swimming pool

Lac St. Denis airmen swam 26,601 laps of the swimming pool, a total of 302 miles, recently during competition in the annual "RCAF Marathon Swim". Swimming began at midnight on Tuesday, August 10, and continued for six days. The competition was open to all RCAF stations, and winners are chosen on the basis of the number of personnel on each station compared with the miles swum. This station will place high among the winners. Final results will be announced by Canadian Forces Headquarters.

A total of 47 swimmers took part over the six days. Leading the station were LAC Maurice Fortier of Ville Jacques Cartier and LAC Brian Potter of St. Catharines, Ont. LAC Fortier swam the greatest total distance, 66 miles, and also the longest continuous swim of 18 miles. LAC Potter was close behind, swimming a total of 59 miles, and his longest continuous swim was 10 miles. These two young swimmers were far ahead of all other participants and will place among the leaders from across Canada.

LAC Fortier recently competed against top world competition when he placed fifth in the La Tuque swim marathon, held earlier last month.

Born October 27, 1910, at Weir, Que., she was the daughter of Richard Welden and Alice Jane Beaven.

She is mourned by three daughters — (Lily) Mrs. Rubin Fraisberg, of Montreal, (Edna) Mrs. Norman Bass, of Ottawa, and (Nora) Mrs. Guy Chartier, of Toronto, and two sons, Richard and Telesphore, both of Toronto. Also left to mourn her loss are five sisters and two brothers.

Service was conducted by Mr. Hoffman at the Menard Funeral Home, Lachute, and burial was in Arundel Cemetery.

Arundel

Our sincere wishes for a speedy recovery go out to Mrs. Theodore Evans, Mrs. Raymond Hillrich and Mr. Stuart Cooke; all are presently in hospital.

Welcome to Minister

The congregation of the Arundel United Church, and the Brookdale charge, gathered at the manse on Friday evening to welcome the new student minister, Mr. Dale Gray, Mrs. Gray and family. The welcome took the form of a pantry shower. Refreshments were served and everyone reported an enjoyable evening.

Guests of Mrs. Alvin Graham over the week-end included Mr. and Mrs. George Davis, of Montreal, Miss Dorcas McLeod, of Lachine, Mrs. Howard Wilson and Miss Isabel Clark, of Beaconsfield.

Women's Institute Speaker

The Arundel Women's Institute met in the school on Tuesday evening, September 7. The meeting was well attended by members and guests, and Mr. Jean Major, of the Expo '67 Corporation, was guest speaker, giving informative comments on the progress of Expo, also showing beautiful slides to spice his comments. He was accompanied by Mr. Trudel, also of Expo '67. It was the wish of the meeting to ask Mr. Major to make a return trip to the W.I. in the spring, to give the latest developments on Expo. Refreshments closed the meeting.

Army Cadets to resume regular training

The Lachute Army Cadets are holding their first parade of the new training year tonight (Wednesday) at the Lachute City Hall — all active members of the corps parading in uniform, and it is hoped all members of the band will be on hand with their instruments.

A special invitation is extended to boys between the ages of 14 and 17 to join. The Cadet Corps offers a variety of subjects of great interest to youths including drill, first aid, range work, band, morse code, map using and other courses.

Many boys will be selected to attend summer camp next year; and this year no less than 16 cadets attended Camp Farnham and two boys journeyed to Banff, B.C., and Jamaica, for training.

The aim of the Cadet Corps is to "make better citizens" through elementary military training and esprit de corps.

Parade time is 7 p.m. sharp, and Capt. Haydon, the Chief Instructor, is anxious to see all present members and recruits reporting, to get the 1965-66 training season off to a good start.

Of Many Things

TAXES RUN UPHILL

Unlike water, taxes run uphill. When one province imposes a new tax, the others quickly make that an excuse to impose the same or a higher tax on their people. When any province raises a tax, the others quickly raise theirs to match. What lesson is to be learned?

Surely it is that we ought to fight tax increases wherever they occur, because each increase leads to another. Tax gatherers are rapacious.

In my own opinion Canadians ought to try to get some simple, single tax formula which could not be changed. Today there is such a complexity and diversity of taxes it is hard to nail down the worst offenders. And it means that all of us must play a constant guessing game with the politicians.

A single tax formula would either go up or down and no question about it. All taxes come from the people, and all the people are entitled to a clear picture of what the taxation situation is from government to government. Today it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to figure it out.

I have a friend who is on a fixed income. To him, these constantly increasing taxes work a terrible hardship. They may not be too worrisome to those of us who have jobs or businesses and are benefitting from the economic boom; but to him they mean the difference between decent living and genuine hardship. Yet he does not know who to blame, which government taxes most, or what the record is.

Worst of all, taxes today are often hidden. The merchant is obliged to collect the tax on behalf of the government, but the consumer does not realize how much of the price is tax. Gasoline, for example, is cheap; but the tax imposed makes the price high. The same applies to cigarettes and liquor. In Manitoba, fuel is taxed, and no doubt other provinces will impose a similar tax if Manitoba gets away with it.

Often taxes are imposed on moral grounds. Liquor, for example, is taxed because governments think people will approve. I suppose that when enough people favor birth control, governments will begin to tax babies.

It is high time the taxpayer started a quiet rebellion against our ridiculous taxing process.

WATCHMAN WANT ADS BRING RESULTS.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

OVER THE HUMP

The days of "keeping Canada for Canadians" went bang when the last shot was fired ending the World War II conflict between nations. We were to be invaded, not by hostile forces, but by immigrants from many lands. To support their wage-earning efforts and our own as well, caretakers of our prosperity realized we must have industrial assessment and goods totalling millions for export, to keep our economic heads above the ever increasing waters of international competition.

This human influx couldn't be expected to consume all of its own production. Goods would have to be moved and, despite the increasing growth of trucking, the railways were still the prime movers of materials and products.

Demands for more and more freight trains grew. Handling this increase in shipments became not only a challenge, but sometimes a nightmare to executives responsible for the operation of our trans-Canada railroads.

Yards Conceived

I am sure the brains that designed working plans for the CN's Toronto Yard, reputedly the largest in the world, must have lost a lot of sleep during its construction. They met with multiple and exasperating difficulties, such as unexpected water levels, the tremendous task of moving tons and tons of earth, and that of bridging streams. These might seem routine for such a colossal undertaking, but, nevertheless, they constantly challenged the engineering know-how of those in charge.

The formal opening of Toronto Yard took place this year on a May afternoon with CN officials, Federal and Provincial dignitaries and representatives from industry on the official platform, a bevy of press, radio and TV personnel registered for posterity this accomplishment which has taken place in Vaughan Township. Several hundred invited guests travelled by special train from Union Station to the Yards' site to witness the ceremony.

To me, the end result is a fantastic operation made believable by such statistics as these: it covers 1,000 acres and sorts an estimated 5,000 cars daily. Besides the yard which lies on the northern perimeter of Toronto and contains 158 miles of track, an access line had to be built. This comes in from the west at Burlington and from the east at Pickering. Over 75 miles of new main line and 53 bridges had to be constructed.

At the heart of the yard are humps, man-made hills over which cars are pushed. Rolling downhill by gravity flow, the cars are sorted out to given tracks by a combination of automatic switching, exterior retarding and the master-minding of an analog computer which can put a car on the right track to "kiss and couple".

New Development Made Possible

Completion of the Toronto Yard created an interlocking set of reactions spreading throughout the Metropolitan Toronto area. Downtown yard sites — a heritage from CN's predecessor lines — have been freed for redevelopment. Close to the Yard, industrial developments are going up.

Clearly this expansion of the industrial heartland of Canada is reflected in this well planned yard, built to meet the demands not only of today, but of this country's future growth.

Let's combat cruelty to animals

NOT INFREQUENTLY, cases of neglect and cruelty to animals have impressed the need of concerted action in this area. Animal lovers have been incensed with the careless attitude of many people in the case of pets injured by passing automobiles, dogs and cats abandoned by summer residents, and in certain instances, by the apparent callousness of municipal and provincial authorities.

There are certain matters in which these authorities have no jurisdiction, but there is a spark of humanitarian instinct everywhere, which could be invoked in emergency with the proper approach. — Preferably, organized approach.

Communities have organized for the formation of local branches of the S.P.C.A. (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals). Among centres we know of, are — Arvida, St. Francis (Sherbrooke), Rimouski, St. Jean d'Iberville, St. Joseph d'Alma and Three Rivers.

The S.P.C.A. can provide facilities to receive stray and unwanted animals, pick up strays, return lost pets to owners, provide healthy pets for adoption, ambulance service, euthanasia, isolation and observation of sick animals.

We feel the time is opportune, if not overdue, for the organizing of an S.P.C.A. affiliate in this district. There is help available for such ventures. The advice of the general manager of the S.P.C.A. in Montreal, and perhaps his personal visit, could be solicited. The address is: S.P.C.A., 5215 Jean Talon West, Montreal 9 (tel. 931-1144).

One of the primary recommendations of this group is the construction of an animal lethal chamber, at a cost which should not exceed $300. The S.P.C.A. will gladly cooperate in a venture of this kind.

Our Outdoors columnist, Bob Atchison (LO 2-6374) has agreed to serve as intermediary for any individuals or organizations interested in this promotion, which is an initiative close to his heart as an animal-lover and conservationist.

Publishing school reports

THERE IS a perennial debate on the policy of publishing school reports in the local paper. This is heard in the smaller communities; for all we know, the practice may even be a target for criticism in the larger cities. In the squeeze, of course, are the pupils who fail, or those who pass only provisionally, pending supplemental examinations.

Perhaps this situation applies equally to all competitions — athletic contests, livestock shows, etc. Somebody has to lose; somebody has to win; and both have apparently sound arguments why their name should, or should not, appear in the paper.

The editor of any small-town newspaper will tell you that one of the best-read items in his paper is the school report. It may not even be the report of a top class or a senior grade. It may be down among the youngest recruits. The Watchman receives commending remarks from an aunt in Southern Ontario, or grandparents in the West, who scan the school reports for the progress of younger relatives back home. And when, through departmental bungling at Quebec, the local High School results for Grades X and XI were omitted this year, there came enquiries from a number of our readers.

The merits and objections will continue to be heard; and we doubt not, the annual school reports will continue to be published. (In Watchman files, we find them most illuminating — to note the scholastic standing of our contemporaries 50 and 25 years ago!)

Another angle to this question is drawn to our attention by a fellow editor, who reports that the Ontario Secondary Schools Headmasters Association has been protesting against the publication of Grade 13 results. The editor comments: "It is a sad time for the Grade 13 candidates who fail, but the public is entitled to know whether the school taxes have been in some degree effective in getting Grade 13 pupils through school."

National Immunization Week

CANADA'S 23rd National Immunization Week will be observed from September 19 to 25. This event, organized by the Health League of Canada, occupies a special niche in the program of national health education.

Maladies in which immunization is applicable include diphtheria, poliomyelitis, tetanus, whooping cough, smallpox and to some degree, tuberculosis. Recently a vaccine has been discovered to prevent measles, and since measles is more prevalent than any of the other diseases named, it is hoped it will soon become available for general use. Measles is a disease which is much more serious than people generally realize. In Canada although 80,000 cases are reported every year the actual number of cases is much greater. During an eleven-year period the average annual number of deaths from this disease varied between 53 and 177. During this same period there were no deaths from smallpox and last year only 25 cases of diphtheria in Canada. Both of these diseases were formerly veritable plagues. If an effective measles vaccine were used generally, the same spectacular result might be expected.

National Immunization Week is a nationwide attempt at mass education, using all media of education to make certain that everyone in the country can be reached. It is a concerted effort to make sure that everyone has at least the chance to learn how the most serious communicable diseases may be avoided altogether. The Health League of Canada again urges parents, and indeed all citizens, to participate in National Immunization Week by heeding and acting upon these messages by radio, television and the press. The more widely such an event is observed, the more likely we are to see a drop in the death rates from these diseases in Canada next year. . . You, good reader, can make certain that none of these diseases develops in your family during the coming year.

Significance of wheat sale

THE RECENT multi-million dollar sale of wheat to the Soviet Union may prove to be more valuable to the Western world than the actual dollars involved, which are certainly beneficial to Canada's balance of payments. Implicit in the purchase is a confession of failure of the Communist system of collective farming, which destroyed whatever sense of independence farmers may have had. It seems obvious that if the Soviet Union is to take full advantage of its vast agricultural assets, some way will have to be found to put the farms back on a free enterprise system to provide the private initiative impossible to obtain under a rigid bureaucratic system. There are signs that this is occurring in Russia now, not only in agricultural production, but in industrial areas, too.

This recognition by Russia of the value of individual initiative and the profit motive, on which most of the Western economies are based, could well contribute to closer East-West economic understanding and a freer flow of trade between countries.

Viewpoints and perspectives

IT IS A PARADOX that politicians can sincerely warn the people about the dangers of monopoly, of the need for laws to ensure equal competition in trade, of the dangers of "big business," yet go ahead and build the biggest business, the biggest monopoly of all.

AGENTS BY ORDER. — Come January 1, pension deductions will have to be made from payrolls. We are beginning to wonder just how many more of these collection duties the government is going to saddle on manufacturers and businessmen before they rise up in open rebellion.

Attention, please, provincial police

(TO THE EDITOR)

September 9th, 1965

Editor, Lachute Watchman

Dear Sir:

May I ask why it is not more widely publicized that when a school bus is at a standstill with its lights flashing, motorists travelling in both directions are to come to a full stop. I travel into Lachute along Highway 8 every day and hardly a day passes that I do not see a motorist pull out and pass a stationary school bus picking up children. The most important time being between 3.30 p.m. and 4.30 p.m., when some of these children pass in front of their bus to cross the road to their homes.

And where are our Police forces? I see seven different school buses every morning but have yet to see a police car. I cannot definitely state that there is no patrolling when the buses return in the afternoon, but I am assured by several different people that there is none. When I travel back along the same route at 5 p.m., however, you can usually see a police car or two picking up or stopping people for very minor infractions or absolutely ridiculous things, like stopping me to tell me I have my headlights on. Apparently they consider this more important than the lives of our children.

There have been accidents before involving the children who ride the buses, and there will be more unless something is done about it.

Yours truly,
Mrs. W. Sleeth

Has comment on giant mushroom

469 Argyle Ave., Westmount

Dear Editor:

Re the giant mushroom shown in The Watchman of September 1st, may I beg to differ? Not that I consider myself an expert, but I have studied fungi for many years, and according to my book this specimen is a Calvatia Gigantea or Giant Puffball. One mentioned in this book was found near Ottawa and weighed 18½ lbs., so Mrs. Decarie's specimen came very near this record. Some years ago I found two growing close together that must have been near this weight when in their prime, but these were too far gone to be useful. These were at Senneville.

The Lycoperdon is also a puffball, of which there are several varieties, but the individuals are quite small and usually grow in clusters. I have among my color slides a photo of one which I took at Phillipsburg, slightly larger than a (Rugby) football. I could not take it away as it was on private property. This was undoubtedly a Calvatia and not a Lycoperdon. But as for the one in The Watchman, if I'm wrong please accept my apologies.

SUGAR AND SPICE

Farewell To A Friend

After a couple of thousand miles of traveling, there's nothing so delightful as to sit in one's own backyard and contemplate the folly of the world. And that's what I'm doing right now.

Two kittens are tight-rope-walking the back fence, as grave and cautious as Blondin crossing Niagara Falls. They have survived the attentions of Wilson, our two-year-old neighbor, who has a utilitarian approach to picking up cats: ears, tail, stomach-fur, or whatever's nearest.

The garage sits there, brooding. When summer began, it was a faded blue. Kim began painting it as a school project. It is now two-tone, half faded blue, half dazzling green.

Peering through the picket fence on the left are the Little Horrors. There are five of them. I'll swear they're all the same age, about two and a half. They lurk like Indians watching a wagon train. The minute we leave the place even to go shopping, they bat down the loose board in the fence and sack the place. They use our lawn chairs as trampolines and the picnic table for mountain climbing, dismantle my power mower and employ our hose to squelch civil demonstrators among each other.

Across the street, where there are two teen-agers, swirls the daily ballet, a kaleidoscope of sound and color. Kids arriving and departing; swim suits and shorts and pyjamas; motorbikes and sports cars, tennis rackets and golf clubs and footballs.

From the great oaks spreading over the house drop the acorns, thumping the ground with a gentle irregular rhythm. Two lazy pigeons have found an old starlings' nest under our eaves and are squashed in there, purling their throaty growl.

The lawn sprinkler is turned off, but there's a dribble from it, and a young robin is revelling in a shower, doing everything but soaping his armpits.

Up a maple tree, twice around the trunk, along the hydro wire, jump to the cedar, leap to the vine, scrabble up the side of the house and straight into my attic, lickety-split, hurtle two black squirrels. Object, either love or war.

Backyard smells: new-cut grass on the lawn; fresh-washed sheets on the line; cedar and spruce from the trees; and, gently stealing through the back door, the excruciating waft of coffee.

Color everywhere. Six shades of green in spruce and cedar, elm and oak, maple and walnut. Vivid splash of tiger lilies. Yellow sun dappling trees and patching grass. One delicate pink rose and pale mauve of phlox. Gay striped lawn chairs.

And what more pleasant place to look back over the pattern of summer. Early-morning golf with dew-thick carpet underfoot and air like champagne. Beach afternoons: warm, silky sand and hot sun, the world a million miles away; water like cool silver. Home for cold beer, barbecued steak, new, little potatoes and juice-spurting corn.

Luxury of boat cruise abruptly changed to roughing it in a tent. Tense long-distance phone calls from remote outposts to learn whether son had passed his year. Huge relief to learn that he had done well. Sunday jaunts to visit daughter at camp, going with great gobs of goodies, sitting around for two hours trying to think of something to talk about, returning with load of scummy camp clothes to wash.

Son claiming an 18-year-old can get along on four hours sleep, and trying to prove it. Daughter busting out all over, as fourteens are wont to do. Wife like cat with cream because I haven't been away from her side for more than four hours all summer. Father promising to write a book, and barely able to find time to write a column.

Goodbye, Summer, you seductress. There'll never be another like you.

WESTERN FARMERS ATTACKED

Chatham, Ont. (CP) — "Farmers in eastern Canada are actually subsidizing western grain," George Morris of Merlin told a farm meeting here, as it resolved to study freight and storage subsidies of western feed grains coming into Ontario and Quebec. "We are a lonesome crowd in southwestern Ontario," Mr. Morris said, "and furthermore, I firmly believe the government is playing politics with this whole affair."

Two Elections To Watch

Election prospects in Canada obscured two other important political contests this week. Both are being waged beyond our borders, but both will be decisive in their own right.

In West Germany, nearly 40 million prosperous, comfortable voters will go to the polls Sunday, Sept. 19, to decide whether to turn out the only government the German Federal Republic has ever known.

In New York City, a potential future American president — a Republican — has now become a five to four favorite to defeat a Democrat in an overwhelmingly Democratic community in the city's November mayoralty election.

The German election is rated a toss-up between the ruling Christian Democratic party of chancellor Ludwig Erhard, and the opposition Social Democrats under West Berlin's aging but glamorous mayor, Willy Brandt.

The Christian Democrats have ruled the country since its establishment under Western patronage in 1949. Chancellor Erhard is campaigning chiefly on the prosperity theme. He was economics affairs minister under the founding Chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, and still basks in the glow of his achievement of building war-devastated Germany into the most prosperous country on the European continent.

But Erhard has been handicapped by a growing split in the Christian Democrats between his own pro-American wing, and a pro-French bloc which still gets its inspiration from Adenauer.

Social Democratic leader Brandt has his handicaps too. His personal popularity is not high among West Germans. Many Germans cannot forget his illegitimate birth, or the fact that he fled Germany during the war and returned after 1945 in a Norwegian army uniform, with a Norwegian wife.

But his party has been gaining strength in recent provincial elections, despite the fact it has turned its back on its original socialistic policies. Except for details, the Social Democratic and Christian Democratic platforms differ little.

But just as in Canada, there is little likelihood either party will win a clear majority in the Bundestag. The Christian Democrats have been able to rule only with the support of Germany's third party, the Free Democrats. And now a fourth party, made up largely of neo-Nazi sympathizers — the National Democrats — has entered the scene.

In New York City, meanwhile, the handsome, intelligent, and Kennedyish candidate for the Republican party in the forthcoming mayoralty election is John V. Lindsay. He is an anti-Goldwaterite who survived the 1964 Johnson landslide to win a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

It has been many years since New York was governed by anything but a Democratic mayor. The retirement of the present mayor, Robert Wagner, has thrown the race for city hall wide open and Lindsay has suddenly become the front-runner.

New York City has so many serious problems, especially in crime, education, slums and transportation, that it is doubtful whether even the aggressive and capable Lindsay will be able to do much more than dent the surface of the city's complexities.

But the possibility of Lindsay's election has tremendous significance for the Republican party. It would make him one of the leading voices in the party, where he could do much to reverse the disastrous right-wing drift which occurred under Sen. Goldwater.

Lindsay is himself a possible future presidential candidate. But even if he never gets the party's nomination for the White House, he is bound to have much influence in the selection of progressive candidates. And this is what the Republican party must have if the U.S. is not going to drift further into a one-party state.

Destructive Small Child

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

What boy has not had some experience in playing the vandal. In David Walker's "Sandy was a Soldier's Boy" in the very first chapter, the author tells of a young lad, exploring in the woods, who comes upon a grey squirrel perched on the corner of a greenhouse roof, eating a baby bird. The father and mother birds were squawking and diving at the marauder, but the grey squirrel ignored their protests. Sandy decided to teach the murderer a lesson.

Taking out a sling from his sporran pocket, he fitted it with a little stone. Although he took careful aim, twice he missed the squirrel. The third time Sandy was sure he would hit him! But unfortunately the stone from his sling again failed to hit the target. Instead it smashed the top centre pane of the window of the greenhouse.

Without stopping to reflect, Sandy quickly aimed and broke every single pane, twenty-seven in all. A sort of madness possessed him.

He didn't get off without being caught and this is one of the most enjoyable stories for members of your family of any age. Buy it for your home book shelf. As a reader gets to know Sandy better, assurance is given that one act of destructiveness does not transform a boy into a juvenile delinquent.

Very small children often unintentionally break things. They are full of energy, curious and sometimes awkward. Mothers save themselves a lot of grief if they put away valuables, easily broken vases and ornaments when their children are still in this stage. At the same time, a child should learn from experience that as far as possible he must repair or try to replace what he has damaged.

Care of property, his own and other people's, is learned gradually. It is not a virtue a child inherits! In most urban communities, houses are near each other, and home owners take pride in the appearance of their lawns and flowers. Parents should help Junior realize that they wish to be on good terms with their neighbors. Thus the rule: "Do not trespass on a neighbor's property!" Wait until you are invited — and be careful of other people's belongings."

A child is not as deliberate or as careful as most adults. His actions are often impulsive and hasty, and destructiveness is frequently innocent and unintentional. Sometimes, his curiosity urges him to take apart an article such as an alarm clock to see how it works. He cannot put it together again — and possibly a repair man cannot either!

Answer his questions about how things are made. Perhaps there is an old useless watch or clock which he could be allowed to examine. Sometimes a library book can be found explaining how mechanical things operate.

The clumsy child is constantly in hot water over things he breaks. His co-ordination may be poor because he is growing so quickly. Perhaps if he is constantly knocking things over, bumping into articles and breaking them, a doctor should check on his physical condition.

The very strong child bursting with life finds it hard to learn to handle things with care. He needs a place to play outdoors with equipment such as a swing or a tumbling mat where he can work off his surplus energy.

If parents are understanding, patient and firm in training their child, he will not be called "destructive" by others watching his actions!

Carry ailments

Madison, Wisc. (WMNS) — Man's feathered friends can sometimes turn into enemies. This is what Dr. Charles E. Reed of the University of Wisconsin and several of his colleagues reported recently. It seems that a 27-year-old mail carrier, a 32-year-old mechanic, a 41-year-old postal clerk, as well as several others, in general good health, were all hospitalized because of recurrent episodes of fevers, chills, coughs and weight loss. Extensive tests unmasked the culprit: pigeons.

The patients were all hobbyists who raced pigeons. Apparently pigeon fanciers can develop serious allergic responses to their pets.

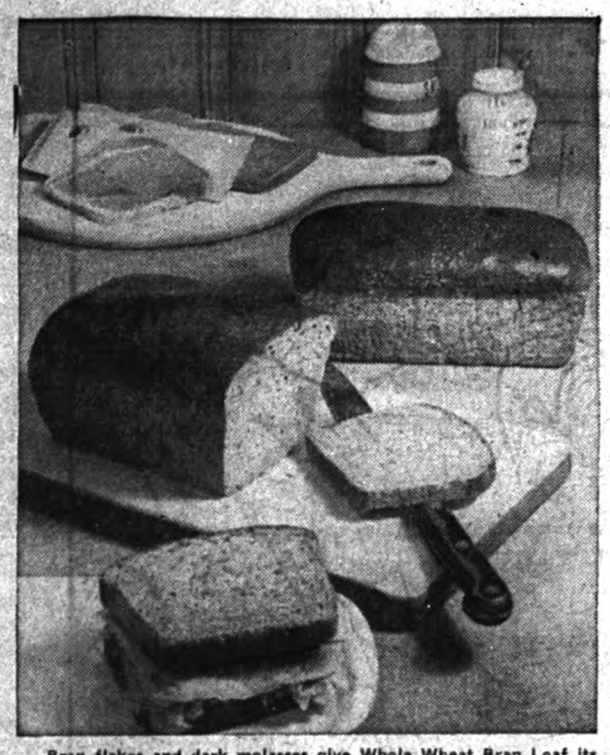
There is a silver lining, though: Some pigeon fans overcome their sensitivity after a time lapse during which they discontinue handling their pets.

Barbiturate habit

New York (WMNS): It is becoming more and more socially acceptable to escape from tensions and anxieties through the use of barbiturates and so-called "minor tranquilizers". But, the American Medical Association warns, prolonged use of these sedatives can lead to drug-dependency.

Patients often mislead doctors about their need for or past experience with drugs, the AMA notes. They also endanger themselves by prolonged unsupervised use of barbiturates or by overuse of non-prescription remedies without thought to their cumulative effect.

The drug habit, once established, is not easy to break and, says the A.M.A., the barbiturate-dependent person can be compared to an opiate-dependent.



Bran flakes and dark molasses give Whole Wheat Bran Loaf its unusual and delicious flavor.

Caveman cooking — the magic of yeast

Nobody really knows how or when primitive man first discovered that the addition of a little yeast turned his grain and water into a delicious loaf of bread, but it is probable that he attributed the whole process to magic!

For a long time he must have unhappily consumed quantities of flat, hard, unleavened dough. Then, one day, perhaps some dough was left over and not baked. Wild yeast cells from the air settled on it and started multiplying, causing fermentation and tiny bubbles of carbon dioxide gas which made the dough rise. When baked, the bubbly dough turned into a loaf of bread, better than anything our ancestors had ever tasted.

From then on they probably let the dough stand and hoped for the magic to happen again. Eventually, by holding over small portions of successful dough to mix with later batches, they could make well risen loaves every time.

Fortunately, the modern housewife does not have to perform magic rites over her dough, nor does she have to save litle pieces for later use. A small packet of yeast purchased at the local store will give her successful results and enable her to make better bread than her forebears ever dreamed of. And what, of all the culinary arts, is more satisfying than making a delicious batch of golden crusted loaves?

Today's recipe is for a tasty Whole Wheat Bran Loaf. Bran flakes and dark molasses give this loaf its unusual flavor and whole wheat flour make it especially nutritious.

Whole Wheat Bran Bread

(Yield — 2 loaves)

1 Cup water, ½ cup milk, 1 cup bran flakes, 3 tablespoons granulated sugar, 3 teaspoons salt, 6 tablespoons butter or margarine, ¼ cup dark molasses, ½ cup lukewarm water, 2 teaspoons granulated sugar, 2 envelopes fast-rising active dry yeast, 3 cups unsifted whole wheat flour, 2½ cups (about) pre-sifted all-purpose flour.

Combine water and milk; bring to boiling point. Stir in bran flakes, sugar, salt, butter and molasses. Cool to lukewarm.

Meanwhile measure ½ cup lukewarm water into a large mixing bowl; stir in 2 teaspoons sugar. Sprinkle yeast on top. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well.

Stir in lukewarm milk mixture and whole wheat flour. Beat until smooth.

Stir in enough all-purpose flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic. Place in a greased bowl. Turn to grease top. Cover and let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake in a preheated hot oven (400 deg. F.) for 40 to 45 minutes or until done.

Things 'n Stuff

By Walter Henry Jackson

I LEARNED A LESSON

About twenty-five years ago I was playing a week's engagement in a vaudeville theatre in a distant city. The theatre manager also ran a theatrical rooming house, and that's where I stayed. Besides his wife he had a little daughter, eleven years old. She had been blind since the age of three, but shortly before I met her a successful operation had restored her sight. Naturally, she could not remember what things looked like before her blindness, but now, being able to see for the first time, everything was a great adventure. I can see her now — examining a simple article like the lid of a cardboard box — turning it over in her wee hands and examining the corners, feeling the texture of the shiny top and comparing it with the dull finish of the underside. She took me by the hand one day and showed me all over the house. To her, the most commonplace articles were "beautiful". "Isn't that a beautiful teacup?" "Isn't my chair beautiful?" It was the first week of December, and to me everything outside in the street was sordid and depressing. Patches of dirty snow lay in the gutters. "Isn't the snow beautiful?" she said.

She showed me everything in her room, including a row of juvenile books. "Those are all my books," she confided. "And you can pick out any one you like to read while you are here." I did pick one and I read it. It was called, "The Great Train Robbery".

So many people go through life seeing without observing. They take everything for granted. What would most of us do without that marvelous privilege of SIGHT?

Be seein' ya!

DEFECTIVE INFANTS

Statistics indicate that mothers under 18 and over 40 have more children with defects than those between 18 and 40.

Texstyles

Madeleine Levason

Current fabric developments are reminding people of that funny Alex Guinness movie "The Man In The White Suit". If you saw it you'll remember that the suit was made from a wondrous material that would never wear out, and required no pressing, washing or cleaning.

Permanent press slacks for men began reminding people of this fairy tale because the development heralded the era of the shape-set garment that will keep its press as long as it lasts. The curing process by which tailored slacks are heat-set, or baked into their final pressed shape, had many people asking, "What next?".

Although the problems of adapting the pressed or deferred cure process to the tremendous variety of other clothing and textile products are still formidable, progress has been made. Permanent press shirts for men are now on the market, and advances in other types of clothing are inevitable because the whole development is a logical extension of the wash and wear movement. Permanent press garments offer the consumer improved wash and wear, and that is precisely what all textile people are seeking. Durable press is a big stride in the direction of clothing that can be drip-dried or spin-dried and return to its original pressed shape. To date the permanent press process only works on certain combinations of natural and man-made fibres. The degrees of heat required for the curing process can damage some cloths.

However, successful permanent press shirts are now a fact. Meanwhile, other experimental types are hanging in manufacturers' showrooms. Washing machines and dryers are running endlessly as laboratory tests continue on variations of blends and constructions designed to stand up to the required standards.

Out of the welter of information created by the testing of finishes, presses and ovens comes one inescapable conclusion: permanent press works in shirts, and this is a remarkable step forward in the direction of ultimate wash and wear. The shirt that requires no ironing and retains its pressed shape has never before been achieved to the same degree.

Permanent press excitement is only one aspect of the Canadian textile industry's search for improved performance in easy care fabrics for every use. The various treatments for mothproofing wool, permanent pleats, shower and stain resistance, are all one with the effort to give every fabric as many qualities as possible for the benefit of the consumer.

For instance, the applications of shrink resistance treatments to knits has increased side by side with the development of various yarns processed for washability. Every effort is made to reduce the particular advantage that one fibre enjoys over another — to make every fabric perform to the ultimate degree.

Today Canadian mills are making more blends with natural and man-made fibres to broaden the range of fabrics and their characteristics. Every day brings new developments.

Signal given for Quebec-wide beautification

Quebec — The Quebec Government has given the signal for a large-scale beautification campaign which will take in all Quebec.

At a press conference held in the Parliament Buildings, the Honorable Alcide Courcy, minister of Agriculture and Colonization, speaking on behalf of the Honorable Bona Arsenault, Provincial Secretary, invited every Quebec municipality to form a beautification committee and to organize a contest to promote healthy competition.

Mr. Courcy called on every intermediary body and private citizen to pitch in and help make Quebec a beauty spot in time for the 1967 World Exhibition.

He pointed out that while countless thousands of visitors will flock to Montreal for Expo '67, a great many of them will extend their trip to take in other areas of Quebec.

Mr. Arsenault's spokesman also announced that the Trans-Canada Highway between Quebec and Montreal will be practically transformed into a park; a thirty-mile section of scenic improvements will be put in this year by the Department of Roads, in Bagot and Drummond Counties. Thousands of trees and hedges will be planted and grass will be sown in centre-strips and along each side of the highway.

The Micmac Indians of Eastern Canada may have been the first to eat wild cranberries. They are said to have given the name shenacadia, meeting place of cranberries, to areas where the fruit flourished.

An early reference to cranberries said trappers and Indians sometimes depended on them for food when game and fish were scarce.

The fruit still grows wild in the Maritimes, as it does in British Columbia, and now it is cultivated in both areas, and in Quebec and Ontario.

A cranberry bog is built on low-lying marshland which is first drained, cleared, levelled and spread with a layer of sand before vine cuttings are planted, about six inches apart. It takes from three to five years for the vines to spread and carpet the area to produce their first full crop.

On Lulu Island in B.C. some bogs are on mined peat beds.

Often Dry

The cranberry harvest starts late in September and continues through October.

After the fall harvest, before winter starts, cranberry farms are flooded to protect the perennial vines from icy winds. They may also be flooded during spring or early summer when there is any danger of frost. During most of the summer the "bogs" are as dry as your front lawn.

Cranberries are usually dry picked by machine, but small bogs may still be cleared with old wooden hand scoops. Harvesters kneel on the bog and push the scoops ahead of them so the curved wooden teeth comb the vines and lift off the berries.

In areas where there is a good water supply a few farmers are trying the wet-pick method. The bog is flooded to float the vines. Berries are dislodged by stirring up the water and the floating berries are pushed to shore by wooden booms manipulated by one or two men.

Freeze Cranberries

You can freeze cranberries, say experts from Ocean Spray, a producers' co-operative. Put the commercial package right in the freezer. When you want them, rinse quickly in cold water, then grind or chop them or cook them as you would any fresh cranberries.

Frozen they may be kept for a year. Refrigerated in the package, cranberries will last from six to eight weeks.

You can use frozen cranberries instead of fresh cranberries in a recipe, but do not substitute canned berries for fresh.

You can make a syrup glaze with equal parts of cranberry juice and sugar. Boil it until it is slightly thickened and baste over meats or fruits. Other versions are made by mixing one half cup of brown sugar with whole berry sauce or by beating jellied sauce until it is smooth. Spoon either on a ham half an hour before it is done.

Reduce risk of heart disease

New York, N.Y. (WMNS) — The Nutrition Committee of the American Heart Association recommends the following program "as a possible means of lowering the risk of heart attack":

Eat less animal (saturated) fat.

Substitute vegetable oils (such as corn, peanut, cottonseed, soybean) and other polyunsaturated fats for animal fats.

If overweight, reduce caloric intake. Maintain desirable weight when that is achieved. In other words, stick to the diet prescribed by your physician.

Make sound food habits a family affair so that all members of the family will benefit.

The Association points out that overweight aggravates two conditions — high blood pressure and diabetes — which raise the risk of coronary heart disease.

Plague of forest tent caterpillar

Ste. Foy — The forest tent caterpillar causes important damage in the southern regions of the Province of Quebec. The occurrence of this infestation has been revealed by René Martineau, entomologist in charge of forest insect surveys at the Forest Research laboratory of the Federal Department of Forestry.

The regions located south of Three Rivers and Quebec City are most affected. In these areas hardwood tree species such as aspen, birch and maple have been severely defoliated. Mr. Martineau claims this is the most severe infestation of this insect since 1953.

It is most probable that natural factors of control alone will suffice to stop the invasion. These include parasites, diseases and predators. Also, it is believed that poor weather conditions over these regions may contribute to reduce the insect population before the next growing season.

Here today, how about tomorrow?

A U.S. study shows that, on an average, 15% of customers are lost to a retailer each year. In 10 years 81 out of every 100 customers will drift away.

Reasons why customers leave: 14% unadjusted complaints; 9% lower prices; 5% influenced by others; 3% move; 1% die; 69% lost thro' neglect, bad treatment, poor service, indifference.

Good prospect G.E. to establish in St. Andrews

What appear to be well-founded rumors, based on representations made by officers of the St. Andrews East Chamber of Commerce, the mayor and council, indicate that negotiations are underway for the purchase of the Long Sault Woodcraft plant by Canadian General Electric.

Messrs. Paul Labreche and Stanley Rodger were both questioned on the matter Tuesday morning, and while both citizens sounded optimistic, they were quick to point out that to date nothing had been signed with the present owners of the building. It is believed, however, that some work has been done in the building, adding to speculation that a new tenant may soon occupy the plant which has been closed for some months.

A telephone interview with a company official in Toronto added little more to the story, other than the fact that there was no denial the plant and St. Andrews community were under serious consideration. There was no confirmation of any positive action, however.

It is expected that further information will be forthcoming within a few weeks.

Again pleads case for radio station in this County

Ottawa — Donald H. Attfield of Ottawa went before the Board of Broadcast Governors last Thursday with his third proposal for a radio station to serve the Lower Ottawa River valley.

His proposal was for a day-time-only AM (amplitude modulation) station broadcasting in French from a studio at Chatboro, near the Ottawa River in Argenteuil County.

Opposition to the Attfield proposal at the public hearing was by CFML in Cornwall, Ont., a French-language station.

The board will make a recommendation later.

Police chase ends in costly mishap

Total damage estimated at $3,300 resulted on Friday evening when the Lachute municipal police car was struck from behind while turning into a private driveway on Route 41, several miles east of Lachute. Swerving out of control following the impact, the car rammed the house of Roy Evans. Damage to the house was estimated to be $800, while the car of Frank Rowe, driven by his son Melvin, 21, was damaged to the extent of $500. The police car was all but demolished, and damage in this case was reported to be over $2,000.

The mishap occurred at 11.35 p.m. Friday and was investigated by Q.P.P. Agent Guy Lessard. The occupants of both vehicles escaped injury.

Police Chief Réal Chartrand, substantiating his comments with signed statements from passengers in the cars concerned, as well as from citizens from the community who witnessed part of the affair, gave the following details leading to the accident. . .

The police officers were investigating a report of a stolen car at 101 Brownsburg Road, the second one to have been reported that evening. At approximately 11.25, having obtained all the necessary details, they were just pulling out onto the road when they were passed at high speed by a yellow hardtop-model automobile. The car swerved and lurched at the bridge, but the driver managed to keep control of the vehicle, and realizing the police car was following him, continued at a considerable speed (reported over 50 or 60 miles an hour) up Main Street. He slowed down slightly for the intersection at the post-office, but failed to stop, according to witnesses at the corner.

It was here that the police car, driven by Cst. Robert Miron and accompanied by Cst. Claude Descoeurs, lost some distance in the chase, and only managed to get close enough to the fugitive in the vicinity of White's Bridge; at this point they managed to obtain the license number. A short distance farther, just before the construction on the highway, the police officers decided to give up the chase, and with its dome light flashing and turning-signals indicating their intention to cross the road, the police vehicle was struck from behind just as it was pulling into the Evans driveway. The car swerved out of control and rammed into the house, while the car driven by Melvin Rowe continued down the highway 101 feet from the point of impact, and halted six feet off the road.

In the meantime, the driver of the car being chased had taken a gravel road off Route 41 and returned to Lachute. His car was spotted by patrolling police officers near a local hotel. At 1.20 a.m., Jean-Guy Germain, 22, of 66 St. Jean Street, Ste. Therese, was arrested and charged with dangerous driving. He will appear in Lachute municipal court September 29.

Taxi-man in hold-up attempt to stand trial

The taxi-man involved in the attempted bank robbery in Arundel and the round-up of culprits by Lachute officers of the provincial police, has been committed to trial on a charge of complicity, and will appear before Court of the Queen's Bench at the fall assizes in St. Jerome.

It is recalled that the accused Jacques Paulin was caught with Jean-Guy Desormeaux and Pierre Delaney last summer when his taxi left the road at Dalesville in a police chase.

According to Roger Lagarde, crown prosecutor, Paulin, who gave a plausible alibi to the police, is now charged with conspiracy in an armed robbery. He also has a police record (the prosecutor stated), dating back to 1954.

The accused is free on a provisional property bail of $3,000.

Diefenbaker here Sept. 28, brief one-day visit to County

Itinerary includes Market, two industries and public receptions

First salvos in the election campaign will be heard here next Tuesday, when the leader of the opposition, Mr. John Diefenbaker, will make a quick tour in this County. He will be accompanied by his wife, with whom many local ladies became acquainted on their previous visit to this community.

A "one-day stand" is no appropriate term for this occasion — for Mr. Diefenbaker will be on the move for a full program, interspersed only for meal stops and a two-hour interval in the evening. His movements are timed with staccato precision, in the program outlined herewith.

The Progressive-Conservative leader will be escorted by his loyal supporter, Roger Regimbal, who is seeking the official nomination at the Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes party conclave next Sunday, 26th, to be held in the parish hall at St. Hermas.

Mr. Regimbal will join his leader in Montreal, whence they will proceed by the Laurentian Autoroute to St. Adolphe d'Howard. Their itinerary will follow this sequence:

10.00 a.m. — Arrival at St. Adolphe; civic reception at the town hall. Departure at 11.00 a.m.

Noon — Arrival at Harrington, to be met by school pupils and parents. Departure at 12.30.

1.30 p.m. — Arrival at Salle Bigras, Cote St. Louis, for luncheon and greeting by electors of Deux Montagnes.

3.00 p.m. — At Lachute, visit to Ayers Limited for presentation of employees' 25-year service certificates.

3.30 p.m. — Visit to J. C. Wilson paper mill.

4.00 p.m. — Visit to Simon's Market at exhibition grounds. Reception by Argenteuil Agricultural Society and the County Council.

6.15 p.m. — Reception at the Legion Memorial Hall, Lachute.

8.30 p.m. — Public meeting at the Brownsburg Arena.

Mr. Diefenbaker will give a public address and propound his views at the Brownsburg meeting, which will signal the opening of the party's election campaign in this constituency. The meeting, according to the above schedule, will commence at 8.30 p.m., and the public are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. John Diefenbaker

Plans for Blood Clinic Sept. 27-28; presentation made at Red Cross

The regular monthly meetings of the Lachute Branch of Canadian Red Cross resumed on Wednesday last, September 15.

Mrs. Fernand Legault, president, took the chair and dealt firstly with arrangements for the forthcoming Blood Donor Clinic, to be held in the Lachute Auditorium on September 27-28, from 2 to 5.30 p.m., and from 7 to 9.30 p.m.

Chairman of the clinic this year is Mr. Gaetan Leclair, assisted by Mr. Leonard Bedard. He has enlisted his helpers, and is making the final plans to ensure a smooth-running clinic. Last year's total of 707 pints of blood was a magnificent record, and an appeal is made to all volunteer donors to respond again this year and better the quota of 700 bottles for which the community is asked.

Donors are reminded to bring the cards sent them by headquarters in Montreal, with them to the clinic. This makes registration quicker, and saves much time.

Also of invaluable assistance is the free transportation provided by all local taxi-men and car dealers, to and from the clinic. Volunteers, donors, and helpers, please take note of this service.

Presentation of Service Pin

The second item of importance at Wednesday's meeting was the presentation of a beautiful brooch to Mrs. Bert McGibbon. This is a badge for long and outstanding service. Mrs. McGibbon has been a member of the Sewing Committee for 22 years and has earned heartfelt thanks from people all over the world, who have been helped by the hundreds of garments she herself has made at the working parties as well as the thousands sent out by members of her committee over the years.

Fellow members in the Red Cross would like to congratulate her on this wonderful record and hope she will continue as chairman of the Sewing Committee in Lachute for many years. Her leadership is very sincerely appreciated, and the branch is fortunate to have Mrs. McGibbon to lead the working parties and shoulder their problems.

Before closing the meeting Mrs. Legault reported that the Disaster Committee had done invaluable work in providing food and clothing for a family whose home near Carillon was burned out this summer. Without this help the family concerned would have encountered much hardship.

Ayersv'l citizens disagree on proposed ward division

The Ayersville Citizens' League has taken exception to the ward division outlined in the petition for Lachute-Ayersville amalgamation submitted to the provincial authorities.

It is recalled that the petition provided for three electoral wards in the new City of Lachute — North, Southeast, and Southwest (or Wards 1, 2 and 3) — and that each ward should be represented by two councillors, making a total of six.

The Citizens' League will now send a request from Ayersville that this plan be revised, to allow for six wards each with a single representative on the council.

This decision was taken at the last meeting of the League's executive, which comprises — Louis Barbeau, president; Aurèle Pharand, vice-president; Camille Cousineau, secretary; Germain Poulin, treasurer; Philippe Mallette, Georges Lemay, Philippe Joly, C. G. Laverdière, directors.

It was decided to hold future meetings of the League on the third Wednesday of each month. It is planned also to sponsor a course on household budgeting.

Blood Donor Clinic set for Oct. 4 at Brownsburg

Brownsburg Branch of Canadian Red Cross Society are holding their annual blood clinic on Monday, October 4, in the C-I-L Plant, from 2 to 5 p.m., and in the Brownsburg Legion Hall from 7.30 to 9 p.m. The objective is 200 pints of blood.

Enumerators on their rounds tabulating voters

Enumerators for the coming election (November 8) started their rounds on Monday morning, in all constituencies across the country.

In Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes there are altogether 241 workers assigned to this preliminary census.

Dr. Jean-Paul Dorion, the returning officer, states there are 187 polling stations in the constituency, and the voters will number around 35,600, as compared to 34,900 in the last general election.

The date for candidates' nomination is Monday, October 25, two weeks before voting day. This will be held at the civic auditorium in Lachute; and not until then will the number and identity of the contenders be officially known.

In the last election, 1963, Vincent Drouin, official standard bearer for the Liberal party, was elected. Maurice Gougeon was candidate for Social Credit; J. Hebert ran for the NDP party; and Roger Regimbal was candidate for the Progressive-Conservatives.

Graduation exercises at B'burg High School

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — "Be objective, logical and unemotionally unbiased," Frank Trecartin told the members of the graduating class of Brownsburg High School, at the commencement ceremonies held on September 17. Mr. Trecartin, Superintendent of Schools for the Lake of Two Mountains school system, urged the graduates to work with thoughtful determination in a world beset with a growing loss of individualism, brought on by the increase in machines so evident in recent years.

The occasion marked the first time that the graduation exercises have been held in September; in recent years they have been held in late May or early June. The evening began with a banquet in the school cafeteria, sponsored by the School Commissioners and served by the Women's Institute of Brownsburg.

The graduation ceremonies began at 8 p.m. in the auditorium, with a welcome by Karl Clausen, chairman of the School Commissioners. John Leggitt, the principal of the High School, then expressed satisfaction with the results of the previous school year and outlined the various activities planned for the present year.

In the ceremonies that followed, Mr. Clausen presented diplomas to the following graduates: Betty Anderson, Bonnie Anderson, June Couture, Betty Dalrymple, Madeleine Ferland, Theresa Ogle, Wanda White, Willis Kennedy, and Richard Wilson.

The class prophecy was read by Betty Anderson, and the Valedictory was given by Betty Dalrymple. Willis Kennedy thanked the guest speaker for his interesting address.

Included in the ceremonies were the presentations of the following prizes and awards:

The Legion Scholarship, presented to Willis Kennedy by the local branch of the Canadian Legion. This scholarship is given to the Grade 11 boy with the highest marks.

The Union Scholarship, presented to Betty Dalrymple by the local Union, for obtaining highest marks in Grade 11.

Birks Medals were presented to Bonnie Anderson and Betty Dalrymple. Miss Anderson also received a school letter for extra-curricular activities, and Miss Dalrymple received the Reader's Digest Award to the Valedictorian.

The Frontier Women's Institute Prize, to a deserving Grade 8 student, went to Cecil Humphries. George Dixon received a similar award from the L.O.L. for Grade 10. Cathy Bourne received the School Commissioners' Scholarship for highest standing in Grade 10. Achievement and leadership prizes were also presented to students in Grades 8 to 10.

Following the exercises, the gymnasium floor was cleared for the traditional prom, bringing to a close a successful evening.

Fire outbreak in business premises

A fire believed due to electrical wiring caused minor damage in the workshop of the R. McArthur & Son Ltd. establishment on Main Street. The alarm was sounded at 3.50 p.m. Saturday, and as a precautionary measure, a line of hose was laid from a nearby hydrant.

While a considerable amount of smoke was in evidence, damage was kept to a minimum.

Blood clinic information

The telephone number to call at Lachute Red Cross blood donor clinic on September 27-28 is — 562-8272. Free transportation can be arranged through this number, and full information is available, each day from 2 to 5.30 p.m., and in the evenings from 7 to 9.30.

Big Time philanthropy for crippled children —

Large Lachute delegation visited Shriners' Hospital in Montreal

A delegation of 47 citizens from the Greater Lachute area were guests last Sunday of the Lachute District Shrine Club on a conducted tour of the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, situated on the edge of Mount Royal just off Cedar Avenue, Montreal.

The visit was of particular interest to the local group, as one patient encountered was Denise Gauthier, a 15-year-old Ayersville girl, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jean-Paul Gauthier, who was undergoing treatment on one of her annual visits to the hospital. The girl was a victim of polio at the age of three, and one leg was left crippled. She was sponsored by members of the Lachute District Shrine Club some years ago, and has undergone periodic surgery and treatment to correct the handicap. The girl expressed pleasure at seeing so many visitors from her home town area and was high in her praise for the work accomplished at the hospital — where she was quick to point out, a great number of the patients were, like herself, French-speaking Roman Catholics. Miss Gauthier expressed the hope that she would be home within several weeks, as she had been in the hospital since early July on this, her latest treatment.

In excellent spirits, she said, "How could I feel any other way now that I am almost normal again, and when there are so many others who are much worse off than I am in this very ward."

The outing was organized by Dave Campbell, past-Potentate of Karnak Temple, and Colin McOuat, president of the Lachute District Shrine Club, and the tour was conducted by Miss Flora M. Lamont, R.N., administrator of the hospital, and Donald L. Witter, chairman of the board of governors.

One of 17 Hospitals

"The Shrine" throughout its 17 orthopedic hospitals in Canada, United States, Mexico and Hawaii, is engaged in one of the world's greatest philanthropies — the treatment of little crippled and financially handicapped children. At these hospitals any child under 15 years of age with a congenital deformity (club feet, hip dislocation, spinal curvature, absence of limb, multiple digits, etc.) or any other deformity or disease requiring orthopedic surgery, is treated without charge, regardless of race, color or creed, providing the child is normal mentally and the parents or guardians are unable to bear the financial burden normally associated with such treatment.

Operating for so many years in the field of orthopedically handicapped children has also pointed up the crippling deformities and disfigurements suffered by thousands of children each year as a result of severe burns, and the Shrine's humanitarian work is now being expanded by the setting up of highly specialized hospitals (termed 'institutes') for the treatment, teaching and research of burns, a field which, to now, has not received too much specialized study. The first three of such institutes are located at Galveston, Cincinnati and Boston.

Ideally Situated in Montreal

The hospital in Montreal was built in 1925, with an extension and modernization of facilities in 1962. Ideally situated on the southern slope of Mount Royal, the property is flanked by a 500-acre mountaintop wooded park from which daily visits are made to the grounds of the Hospital by pheasants, squirrels and myriads of song birds.

The Montreal Unit serves the Province of Quebec, the Province of Ontario from the lakehead eastward, the Maritime Provinces and the northern sections of Vermont and New York States. Children, of course, can be admitted from anywhere.

Because of the highly skilled care which must be provided, and this on a 24-hour basis, operational costs of this 60-bed hospital are high — over $450,000 per annum, which, while a rather staggering amount, is insignificant in comparison with the achievement. Sixty beds, with an average hospitalization period of 70 days, represent a total of 300 in-patients annually; in addition there are over 1,200

"Argenteuil Outdoors"

Outdoorsman Bob Atchison is spending a few days in hospital, reluctantly submitting to a bed rest ordered by his physician. Friends wish him well, and look for his complete recovery and early return.

It's evident that there are going to be a good number of hunters from this area going after moose. Some of the boys have been getting ready for at least two months, and right now, everything is at fever pitch — guns being checked, tents and other equipment getting the going-over. I'm glad to see most of these hunters are over-gunned, rather than under-gunned. I haven't met one with a small-calibre rifle, and this is good. For the sake of the game, it deserves to be despatched with the fastest possible means, and this does not mean pumping a half-dozen light shot into it. One thing that should be thought of — when you have got your moose it should be cleaned and blooded as soon as possible, and it's worth while to take along some cheesecloth to wrap the quarters in. It keeps the flies off; with fresh meat of this kind, you can get a lot of blowflies around, and the way these things can lay eggs is terrible. Another good point to remember — wipe out all the dried blood on the carcass. As a matter of fact, this is a must; anything to keep the meat in as good a condition as possible is imperative. Last year many hundreds of pounds of good meat from these animals was spoiled in transit, so try not to let it happen again. There's no great triumph in carrying a moose around in your trunk or car, just to show what a mighty hunter you are.

We have plenty of gunners along the North River who must think the duck season is open right now. (Of course, by the time you read this it will be.) But for the past couple of weeks there have been boats going up and down carrying hunters. Not too much care is paid to concealing the guns either; this appears to be the least of their worries. We certainly can notice this, for we live right on the river, and can see everything that flies, swims or floats in this section of the stream. The lack of ducks right now indicates what a beating they have been taking.

In order to foster interest in the conservation of wildlife, two sponsoring groups have joined forces in an experiment — the release of a new species of game birds, some of them in this particular area. The birds, Chukar Partridge, were actually released last year, and the sponsors are now seeking co-operation in reporting the sighting of these birds.

Now this project was not generally known about; however, the reasons for this are obvious. Some time ago the Kiwanis Club of St. George, Montreal, in conjunction with Macdonald College, decided to plant the game birds in certain areas. We were lucky to have had some of them released here, not too far from town. These Chukar Partridge are native to the Asian continent and the Himalayan Mountains especially. Stocking of these birds has taken place in certain states of the U.S., and in some of them they have done very well. Montana seems to have been the best of all these areas; with a climate that is dry and harsh, the birds seem to have thrived on it. I hope there will be more information on these birds for The Watchman later.

However in the meantime, if you see any birds at all that you are not too sure of, this may help you: They are about 15 inches in length, about 1 to 1½ lbs. in weight, plump with compact legs, almost the same coloring as the greyish-buff partridge, with the exception of a black arc over the face, eyes and throat. A barred effect across the sides and upper legs is a characteristic, making it easier to pick out from our native birds. Don't go looking for them in swamp areas though, they don't like this type of cover; mostly they will be found in open areas that seem barren, or perhaps in the odd treed area. These birds will stay in coveys, and when frightened will take off in a rapid rise, then a glide. If you should see or shoot any of these birds, there are some forms that you might be good enough to fill out. Please get in touch with me.

This idea of re-stocking areas with game birds is one that could, and should, be done by other organizations, too. But likely they would not think of this except as a waste of money. The Kiwanis Club of St. George deserve a vote of thanks for trying this. At least they realize we cannot depend on Nature alone, that we have to help a little in some way.

Boating Clinic

By STAN DAVIES

Summer is over for most of us, and boat storage problems and fall and winter projects are the current topics amongst boaters. Here are some questions I've been asked:

Can I varnish a boat now and have it ready for spring?

Answer: You can varnish on any warm, dry day. Temperature should be above 60. Varnish that's put on under humid conditions goes cloudy, cracks and generally isn't much protection.

I saw a picture of a girl water-skiing with a diver's suit on. Is this practical?

Answer: It certainly is. Rent a "wet" suit from a scuba diving shop some time and try it. You can ski until freeze-up with a scuba suit.

Can I store my boat on its trailer?

Answer: A very good place. Just make sure the keel is well supported so that it will not lose its shape. Put a block under the motor to take the weight off the transom. Cover the whole thing with a tarpaulin or canvas cover. See sketch.

Can you still shoot ducks from a motorboat? (G.T., St. Thomas)

Answer: You never could. I can't give you all the facts here about duck hunting with a power boat. It's too big a topic. Please write to the Queen's Printer, Ottawa, for a copy of the Migratory Bird Regulations. It costs 50c. These regulations vary from province to province, and every duck hunter should have a copy.

Can I build a houseboat during the winter? How much would I have to spend? (G.L., St. Boniface)

Answer: It can be done in one winter. Cost would be about $2,000 to $3,000 depending on the quality of equipment purchased. I've taken the liberty of giving your name to a newspaper service agency which supplies do-it-yourself plans. They have an excellent plan for a houseboat that is just right for the average handyman, and will send you the information. Anyone else interested? Send me a post card care of this newspaper.

Is now or spring best time to buy a used boat?

Answer: It's a toss up. The thing in your favor now is an owner's reluctance to spend money and go to the trouble of storing his boat properly. In the spring, you have the owner's reluctance to spend money and to go to the trouble of fixing up his boat. There's one thing, boats look worse in the spring after a hard Canadian winter, which might lower their price.

Can I store my fibreglass boat outside all winter, upside down?

Answer: Yes. Just make sure it's well supported so that it won't lose its shape. If it's colored, try to keep the sun off it. Sunshine will cause the color to fade — usually unevenly.

Does an outboard motor need special treatment for winter?

Answer: Squirt a few drops of oil into each cylinder and crank it over. Rub whole engine with clean oily rag. Drain all gasoline. Store in dry shelter.

How can I keep up boating interest during the winter? (J.T., Lachute)

Answer: Take a Canadian Power Squadron's course. By next spring, you'll be an expert boater as well. Write to L. A. Hamel, 201 Bethany St., Lachute, P.Q. for information on your closest squadron. Anyone else, anywhere in Canada, write to Canadian Power Squadrons, 26 Golden Gate Court, Scarborough, Ontario. There are 100 squadrons from Halifax to Nootka. The winter course is terrific.

How should I protect my plastic windshield during the winter?

Answer: Abrasive dirt is the only thing that can hurt it. It scratches very easily. Just cover it with an old sheet.

If is worthwhile taking a trailer boat south for a winter vacation? (I.J., Stratford)

Answer: You'll be glad you did. There are launching ramps everywhere in the South, and Florida has almost as much water per square mile as Canada. See you there.

Delegation visited Shriners' Hospital

children taken care of in the out-patient clinic each year. It is recognized as a teaching hospital by McGill University.

Unlike the majority of hospitals, patients are not 'hospitalized' in the usual sense because they are not ill. It is true that the majority do undergo major surgical procedure and have post-operative days of discomfort but, with the resiliency of children, they soon 'bounce back' and spend their spare time enjoying newly found friends and the many group activities provided.

Here, the variety of religious faiths presents no problem, anymore than does the color of the skin of these little ones; being situated in the Province of Quebec, it is natural that approximately three-quarters are of the Roman Catholic faith. Religious leaders of the various persuasions visit the wards regularly and are made most welcome.

Selected movies, television productions, professional entertainments, skits and plays produced by — and often written by — the children are commonplace and each holiday and birthday is a special occasion for all.

Monday through Friday, as at home, the school-age children, with books, under arm, in wheel chair or bed, attend school in one or other of the modern class rooms where studies, in English or French, are maintained during their hospitalization, which in many cases may be of several months duration. In this Hospital the goal is that of 'one big happy family'.

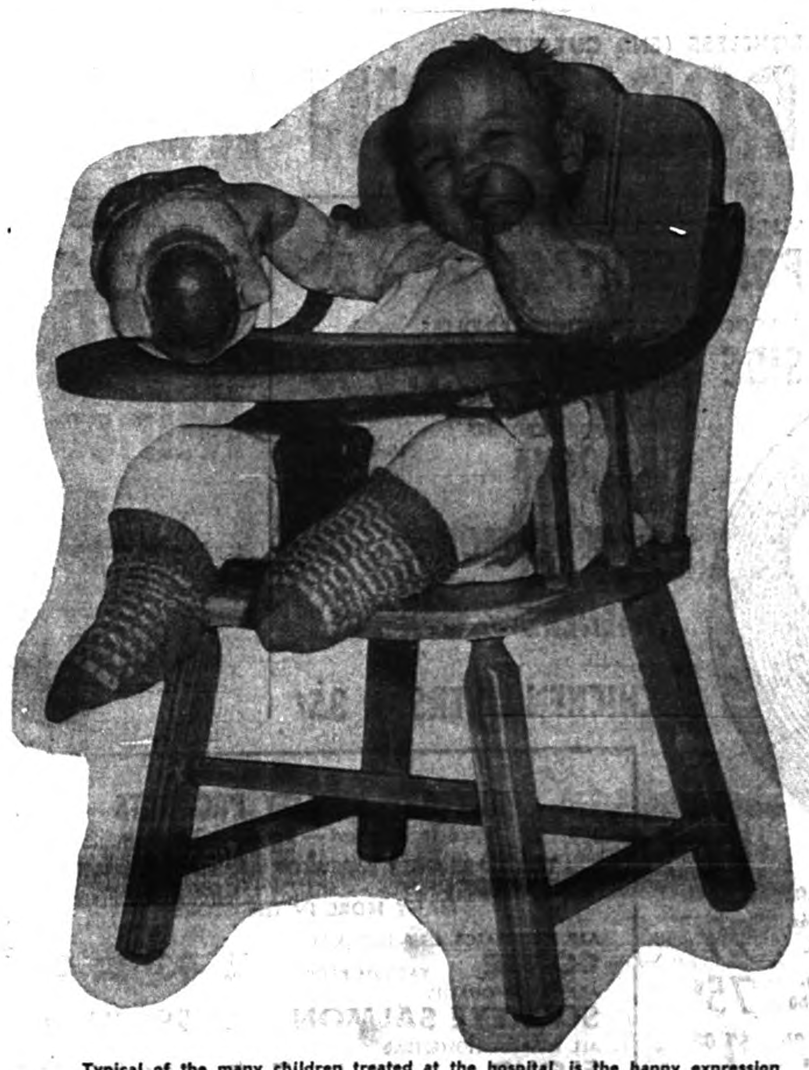
Party Briefed on Role of Institution

Prior to leaving Lachute, the visitors gathered in the Shrine Club at the Masonic Temple, Brownsburg Road, and were welcomed by Messrs. Campbell and McOuat. It was pointed out that the tour was not an appeal for funds, but simply to make members of various organizations familiar with the work of the Shriners, all of whom are Free Masons. Mr. Campbell asked that anyone knowing of any crippled child under the age of 15 years, should inform one of the local Shriners. The only requisite for admittance of a child is that the parents are unable to pay for the necessary medical expenses.

Following the tour, the group reconvened at the Shrine Club, where light refreshments were served. Roger Regimbal, on behalf of the visitors, expressed sincere appreciation for the opportunity of having seen the facilities made available by the Shriners for needy children of all faiths, and added that no better example of the work being done could be found than that of the local child of the Roman Catholic faith, being sponsored to the hospital by the local Shriners. "It certainly makes us realize just how unfounded are some of the stories which have been circulating about this organization for many years." Mr. Regimbal added that the true spirit of the hospital was also exemplified in his own family, as he was met at the hospital by none other than Father John Regimbal, his brother, who is presently Roman Catholic chaplain at the Hospital. Wesley B. Younkie added his thanks, and the gathering was brought to a close with a prayer for the continued good work of the Shriners, offered by the Rev. Cyrus Lang, rector of St. Simeon's Anglican Church, Lachute.



Typical of the many children treated at the hospital, is the happy expression and temperament of the above child, despite the handicap of leg casts.

Diary of a Vagabond

A GOVERNMENT'S GIFT TO THE PEOPLE

I cannot think of a more pleasant outing than to visit Upper Canada Village, "Ontario's Living Heritage", near Morrisburg. Especially if the day is sunny, the breeze off the St. Lawrence River balmy and the time a mellow season.

It was the perfect combination of weather, atmosphere and time which I enjoyed when I first sighted the verdant grounds and tall trees of Crysler Farm Battlefield Park. I have written about pioneer villages in the past, always enjoyed my visits to them (for I am a museum buff), but until this last experience I have never felt the surge of memories I did as I entered the village proper.

The authenticity of the buildings that were moved from eight villages doomed to be flooded by the St. Lawrence Seaway and power projects, plays tricks on one's imagination. It is not hard to picture the wife of the Rev. Sharts tending her peonies and lemon lillies in her garden while her husband studied from the ancient Lutheran Bible, now resting on an old pastor's desk in their home.

I climbed to the choir loft in Christ Church and looked down on the primitive altar and enclosed pews where, I suspect, the congregation solemnly nodded to one another from their seats on the four sides facing inwards. It interested me to read that Upper Canada's first Governor, John Graves Simcoe, and some of his successors, tried to make the Church of England an established state church. At one time the clergy of this denomination were the only ones allowed to perform the marriage ceremony. In 1837 this privilege was still in evidence and was one of the causes for the Mackenzie Rebellion in Upper Canada.

Crysler Hall is perhaps the most imposing building. It gives meaning to the Village because of the historical battle of Crysler Farm. Built by Col. John Pliny Crysler, son of John Crysler on whose farm the decisive battle was fought in 1813, it has been reconstructed after its removal from River Road, Williamsburg Township, and is now the museum for costumes and historical data pertaining to the area.

John Crysler joined Loyalist Butler's Rangers at the age of 1[illegible]. The family were really "Krislers" and came originally to Williamsburg township from the Palatinate in Germany. Driven from there because of their Lutheran convictions, they showed their allegiance to the German speaking king, George the Third, when they emigrated to the north shore of the St. Lawrence.

Never to be Forgotten

This type of living history is a challenge, not only to adult but to the more fertile minds of children. No child will ever forget how those early settlers survived wars, hardships, crop failures and the ravages of illness, after they have visited the doctor's house, the mill or Glengarry Log School.

Since the park was opened to the public, thousands of visitors have ridden in the ox cart or the coach and four. They have travelled the canal in bateaux guided by sailors in costumes authentically early 19th century. They have boarded the miniature train reminiscent of an old wood burner of long, long ago. This small train is in complete contrast to the mammoth diesel-drawn C[illegible] coaches that today transport so many holidayers.

If I may make a personal observation, I think we owe the Ontario - St. Lawrence Development Commission (now known as St. Lawrence Parks Commission) and the Ontario Government a debt of gratitude for the restoration and preservation of historical Upper Canada Village.

Shriners, nurses and patients alike enjoy the antics of clowns from the Shriners' Circus, an annual function from which proceeds go entirely to the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children. Circus personnel make a regular visit to the patients every year, in what invariably proves a successful effort to bring happiness to the patients unable to attend the actual circus performance.

Clubmen visit Down Under in narrative and picture

"About their most precious commodity is water", stated Rotarian speaker John Chalmers to the local club at their regular meeting last week. . . He was speaking of Australia, which he recently had occasion to visit as manager of Canadian Safety Fuse Co.

President Tom Johnston was in charge; and after the welcome of guest Rotarian Don Young, of the St. Laurent - Mt. Royal Club, he commented on the large representation of the local group to the Chateau Laurier recently, to hear Rotary International President C. P. H. Teenstra deliver an inspiring address for International Service. He also mentioned the Rotary District Conference at the Hotel Cornwallis, Cornwall, Ont., September 24-25, when our own Linton Armstrong will address a large group of Rotarians from Ontario, Quebec and New York State — including a large delegation expected from the Brownsburg - Lachute Club.

At the Lachute meeting there was to have been a speaker on "The Pension Plan". As he was unable to attend however, Linton Armstrong introduced John Chalmers, who proceeded to enlighten his fellow Rotarians by showing colored slides with comments from first-hand experience.

"You go by air, and of course you stop off at Hawaii," said the speaker, "Pearl of the Pacific — warm sunny beaches, grand hotels, luscious vegetation and beautiful — well, it is a lovely place. Why anyone leaves, we couldn't imagine. A picture of the Hawaiian and American flags in front of a large building, surprised many. The former has red, white and blue horizontal stripes, with a Union Jack in the upper corner.

Landing in Australia during their fall (our spring), the grasslands were tinder dry. Fires are a constant hazard and several pictures showed the ravages upon the not-too-plentiful trees, some of which were spared because of their distance from each other, while the grass burned.

Just an island, and far away, we tend to underestimate its size, 2,500 miles from end to end. Much of the travel is therefore by air, especially since much of the interior is practically desert.

Showing one picture of a long straight highway and a large pipe line paralleling it, the speaker pointed out that the pipe contained not oil or gas, as we might expect — but water.

Imagine leaving Montreal by highway, for Ste. Agathe, and seeing a large sign by the road instructing you — if you propose to travel to Ste. Agathe — to take, first, 4 gallons of water, second, 4 gallons of gasoline, as well as some other items you wouldn't expect to find on a desert. John showed such a picture in Australia, only it suggested "petrol".

Although the speaker showed pictures of Melbourne, and Sidney in the southeastern corner, cities of about two million people, as well as of the capital, Canberra, midway between the two geographically — he travelled the length of the island.

The city areas, a little like southern British Columbia, are sheltered by mountains. They receive sufficient rain for lush vegetation, and the colored flower gardens were gorgeous in their beauty — well recorded by the narrator.

Although there are miles of fine, warm, sandy beaches, the undertow requires good supervision in many areas. Pictures of excellent Olympic-sized swimming pools, brought the remark that all cities seemed to have these welcome facilities, no doubt much appreciated in the 103-degree weather, as experienced by the speaker. Many grass-courts for tennis, one picture showing group instruction being given, indicated a reason for their outstanding players.

Another difference to be noted was the bird and animal life, the former being startlingly beautiful in their colors. . .

The talk recorded all these things that seem to have little to do with a business trip, but the speaker showed many scenes of the mines he visited and the farm and ranch country through which he passed.

The land is poor in water, though it has some lakes and rivers; it is rich in iron, coal, lead, zinc, gold and other minerals — at least in some areas. Some of their open-pit mines are tremendous in size, with much mechanization. Much of their coal is converted to electricity via thermal plants.

While we live in a country rich in minerals, and water, the thought nagged the writer during his talk, that we shouldn't be wasting the latter by pollution.

What a beautiful park there could be, and should be, from Lachute to St. Jerome, if the water were mountain-stream clear as it could be, with jumping salmon and colorful canoes — drifting, drifting. Instead, we admire the beauty that has been enhanced in other areas, while we waste and destroy our own.

Many communities, less bountifully endowed than ours, produce more income from tourism than many industries.

We should all stop and think — then start and act! . . . Start on your own property.

The speaker was thanked by Dave Schwartz for a colorful and informative talk on a distant land with many similarities and some striking differences from our own.

Accident victim laid to rest

The late Felix Dorion

Felix Dorion, a well known local resident, met a tragic death, as he crossed the highway in front of his home on Friday evening, September 10.

Born in East Settlement on January 19, 1891, he spent his entire life in this community, except for time served in the Army overseas during World War I.

A son of the late George Dorion and his wife Eliza Touchette, he was the last member of a family of six.

He was married to Violet Cleland, who predeceased him in January, 1960.

Left to mourn his passing are a son, James, and daughter-in-law, Greta, of Brownsburg, Que., and a daughter, Elizabeth, and son-in-law, Yves Tessier, of Montreal, as well as four grandchildren.

Funeral service was held from Lachute United Church on Monday, September 13. Service was conducted by the Rev. Harold Thompson. Hymns sung were "God is Our Refuge and Our Strength", and "Nearer My God, to Thee". Interment was made in Lachute Protestant Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were all nephews of the deceased — Messrs. Edward, Robert, Norman, George, Carl and Lloyd McRae.

The many beautiful floral tributes from sorrowing relatives and friends, bore silent testimony to the esteem in which he was held.

Future ballerinas?

A charming group of pre-ballet youngsters (three to six years) photographed on stage at the spring demonstration given here by the Argenteuil School of Ballet. Classes have now resumed in Lachute and Brownsburg for the 1965-66 instruction season.

'Dial-A-Message' service resumed

The pastor and congregation of the Brownsburg Pentecostal Church are happy to announce that the unique ministry of "Dial-A-Message", a two-minute inspirational telephone message, (533-4834) is once more available to the public.

People living in 15 different communities may dial this number directly, for spiritual encouragement and cheer, on a 24-hour basis. The pastor encourages you to tell your friends about this service — and to be sure to dial each day yourself.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The Rev. and Mrs. Wilmer B. Rosborough extend their sincere and heartfelt thanks to all who graciously remembered their 50th wedding anniversary with cards, flowers, gifts, letters and telephone calls, and to all who called at their home to offer personal congratulations and good wishes.

BUILD ROUND SCHOOL

Meadow Lake, Sask. CP — The second circular school building in Canada now is under construction here. The first, also a junior high school, is at Edmonton.

Bridge Club will resume sessions for fall-winter

On Monday, September 13, the first general meeting of the Argenteuil Duplicate Bridge Club was held in the Orange Hall, with Mr. G. Guilbert, vice-president, in the chair. It was decided that Saturday games will start on October 2 at 1.30 p.m., at the Orange Hall.

After the business meeting Mr. Guilbert introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Wes Younkie, president of the Retarded Children's Association, who had made a special effort to attend. He informed the club that the government has taken over the responsibility for providing premises and staff of the school, which will now be in the basement of the Immaculate Conception Church. Other requirements dealing with home care, special medical care, and a sheltered work shop for older children, will depend upon voluntary contributions such as that given by the Argenteuil Duplicate Bridge Club.

Sister Damien, principal of the school, then extended a warm welcome to all club members to visit the school.

Women's Inst. branch doings in September

Arundel Women's Institute members had as their guest speaker, Mr. Jean Major, from Expo '67 Corporation, who showed slides to illustrate the progress of this project. The roll-call was, "Why I would like to attend Expo '67". This branch is on the Expo '67 mailing list, receiving monthly pamphlets on its progress.

Brownsburg meeting was conducted by the Education convener. The roll-call was answered by telling an amusing event from one's school days. Morin Heights branch joined this meeting for the entertainment section, at which a film was shown, entitled "The Test". Arrangements were made for the usual Handicraft Tea on September 15, with a cake-decorating demonstration and hat bar.

Frontier ladies entertained another branch by putting on a play, entitled "It's Your Move".

Jerusalem - Bethany members made arrangements for a card party in September, also for catering to a wedding on October 16. The branch donated $5 to Lachute High School towards prize money. Two life membership pins and certificates were given, the recipients being Mrs. L. Boa and Mrs. S. Wilson. An interesting report on the Macdonald College convention was given by Mrs. Kettyle.

Lakefield roll-call was answered by naming a favorite subject when in school.

Pioneer program was on the theme of Education. The branch entertained Jerusalem - Bethany members, and Mrs. Chas. Hall spoke briefly. Highlight of this meeting was colored slides shown by Miss Mildred Douglas of Cushing, on Karachi, Pakistan.

Upper Lachute - East End meeting was held at Manitou Lodge, as guests of the Lachute branch. Mrs. Margaret Cook, well-known columnist of Lachute Watchman, spoke enlighteningly on the history of the district surrounding this spot. The branch catered to a wedding in August. A donation was given to a Lachute High School for Progress prize. Two members, Mrs. Keith and Mrs. Glenn Warwick, visited Le Cercle des Fermières at St. Hermas when this organization celebrated its 50th anniversary. They saw beautiful displays of handicraft and floral arrangements, also baking, canning of jams, jellies and vegetables.

Morin Heights ladies viewed an interesting film on Cancer. This branch sponsored a blood donor clinic in August.

Pledged marriage vows in St. Andrews parish church

Jones - Paré

The church of St. Andrew the Apostle, at St. Andrews East, was decorated with gladioli and white Shasta daisies for the marriage last Saturday of Edith Paré, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irenée Paré, of St. Andrews, to Mr. William R. Jones, son of Mrs. Edward M. Jones and the late Mr. Jones, of Lachute. The Rev. J. A. Poulin, C.S.V., uncle of the bride, performed the marriage ceremony.

Miss Juliette Rodrigue played the organ and Mr. Denis Paré, brother of the bride, sang during the ceremony.

The bride, given away by her father, wore a long robe of poult-de-soie in old-ivory tone, with a bodice of Guipure lace of the same hue, her three-tiered veil being held by a circlet crown. She carried a cascade bouquet of orchids with ivy foliage.

The maid of honor, Miss Denise Bertrand, wore a mint-green silk crepe gown on Empire lines, carrying a bouquet of Talisman roses similar in style to that of the bride. The little flower girl Marie Andrée L'Allier, niece of the bride, wore a poult-de-soie dress of old ivory, and carried a muff of the same material set with Talisman roses.

The groom's attendant was Mr. Ernie Ayers and the ushers were Mr. Jean-Pierre Paré, brother of the bride, and Mr. Robert Jones, brother of the groom. Little Karl Church was the ring-bearer.

The mother of the bride was dressed in loden-green brocade of French creation, with black accessories and Canadian mink stole, with yellow carnations pinned to her purse. The bridegroom's mother was dressed in a copper-tone broché dress, Jean Desses model, with matching accessories, and pink carnations on her purse. She wore a mink stole.

Following a reception at the chalet of the Lachute Golf and Country Club, the happy couple left for a trip to Miami. For travelling, the bride wore a two-piece suit of camel-hair with a draped hat and cocoa suede accessories. . . Mr. and Mrs. Jones will make their residence in Lachute.

Pastor cares for visiting sailors

Toronto CP — His church is a 47-by-10-foot trailer and his parish is the Toronto waterfront.

Rev. J. C. Clausen-Mohr, 63-year-old Lutheran minister, is the only full-time chaplain for sailors on the Toronto waterfront.

He defines his job "as a combination of everything, from selling stamps to arranging soccer games."

Mr. Clausen-Mohr has been on the job for 15 months and each day leaves his small trailer near Pier 24 and works his way through the ships tied up in the harbor.

Each ship contains sailors from different countries with different problems.

"Most of the problems I encounter are family ones," he said, "and I try to show the men that God is not treating them different from anyone else."

The minister asks sailors to church and provides transportation if they accept.

"Sometimes they accept," he said, "and other times they laugh in your face, but I have faith."

Mr. Clausen-Mohr is a newcomer to the waterfront compared with a Jesuit priest and an Anglican canon who have been on the waterfront for a total of 13 years.

All three chaplains operate from trailers located on different piers. The other two are Rev. J. R. Brown, a Jesuit, and Canon Guy Marshall, an Anglican priest.

All of the chaplains operate with a fundamental rule in mind — serving the men rather than saving them.

The Lutheran minister is the only full time chaplain. Father Brown has two other jobs, and Canon Marshall has a regular church in Toronto.

The three men meet once a month, and are hoping to set up a seamen's club in the new harbor commission building, to be completed by 1967.

Of Many Things

By Ambrose Hills

MANY HANDS

Canadians have been taught to expect costly benefits from the federal government. Family allowances, old age pensions and the like are taken for granted, and there are demands that they be increased. A national health plan is under consideration and the platforms of most political parties include many social benefits too sweet to be resisted.

Can we afford all these good things?

Not unless all sectors of the economy carry a share of the load.

Crown corporations, for example, are going to have to be put on a paying basis quickly and turn over a fair portion of their earnings to meet the cost of social services. This is not to pick on crown corporations. I believe some of them have served a useful purpose. But it becomes necessary, as governments spend more, to insist that all segments of society contribute their utmost. Some crown corporations by their very nature are not expected to make money; but they could at least practice more thrift in their operations and release the money saved for other uses.

Co-operatives, too, are going to have to pay more toward these social benefits. After all, members of the co-operative movement get old age pensions, family allowances and so forth just like the rest of us. The co-op movement was begun by high minded, idealistic men and women. Surely their successors can see the need to contribute more fairly than they now do to the cost of pensions, health care and all the rest. Yet it is amazing how indignant some of them get when it is proposed that they dig in and help shoulder this load.

The Bible Today

The Canadian Bible Society has set forth several projects in Africa and Asia, which are in need of support.

Only one Bible van is now in East Africa. The work has been so fruitful that it is planned to operate one in each of the three larger countries of that part of Africa.

In North India the Bible van is the only way to reach the scattered villages and remote communities. Last year 35,000 scriptures were distributed with the present van. This van is in need of extensive repairs or better, a replacement.

Reprinting copies of Bibles and New Testaments is an urgent need in Vietnam, Korea, Burma and several language areas of Africa. In Vietnam 10,000 paperback Vietnamese New Testaments are being called for, as well as 3,000 Bibles. Paper is required in Korea, to the extent of 4,000 reams, for printing Scriptures. Reprints of Gospels and New Testaments are needed in Burma. Free grants of Scriptures are urgently requested. Have we in Canada the same sense of concern to read them?

When planting an evergreen, give the roots lots of room

Now's the time to plant evergreens

By A. R. Buckley, Plant Research Institute, Ottawa

Not many years ago, nearly all foundation evergreens marketed in Canada were imported and sold directly from the crates in spring. This led to the belief that the correct and only time to plant evergreens was in the spring.

Nowadays most evergreens sold in this country are propagated and grown in Canada. At the Plant Research Institute we have found that from the end of August to the end of September is the very best time to plant evergreens.

Evergreens give off a certain amount of water from their leaves throughout the entire winter. When winds are high they give off more than the normal amount. If the ground is frozen the roots are unable to absorb moisture from the soil, so if strong winds continue the needles will become so dry that they turn brown and die.

You should go to your local nursery now and choose a tree or shrub of the size and shape you want. At this time of year you will be pretty sure of getting lots of attention from the salesmen. They aren't rushed off their feet as they are in springtime. In the early fall, too, you can get good, freshly dug plants that can be moved with less shock than those set out in spring during warm dry weather.

Holes for planting evergreens should be large enough to accommodate the ball of soil that comes with them and have at least a foot of space around this ball for packing and treading in the soil. Fork up the bottom of the hole and add plenty of well-rotted leaves or moistened peat moss. Set the plant in the hole so that it is not more than an inch deeper than it was where it previously grew.

If your plant is balled and burlapped, untie the sacking and roll it back an inch or so. Do not remove it entirely. This material will soon decay in the soil and the roots will grow through it.

Plants transplanted from a nearby nursery need not be burlapped, but as much soil as possible should remain on the roots. Put plenty of paper in your car trunk and take all the soil you can. Doubtless you can use it anyway.

Once the plants have been set in the hole, fill in around the roots with two parts of good top soil mixed with one of peat moss or good humus, then pack the soil down well. When it is a third filled, pour water into the hole and let it soak down. Then finish off the filling-in in such a manner that there is a slight depression around the stem of the evergreen. Tread the soil in very firmly as you fill in the hole; then water once more.

Make sure the plants never suffer from lack of water, for this is even more important in fall than in spring. Soak them well during dry spells and sprinkle them occasionally during sunny weather.

After the soil is frozen, mulch around the base of the plants with leaves or peat moss to prevent heaving during the winter and to keep the soil frozen during mild spells that might occur in January or February.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY, Macdonald College

The corn explosion has hit Quebec. In the St. Hyacinthe area, there are 100 new growers — almost double last year's count. We saw several on a fast tour last week.

The operation of Jean-Marie and Philip Piche at St. Pie is an example of the way things are moving. Just a year ago, these cousins did a swing around the country to see corn handling operations. They came back home and built two 14x40 concrete silos. They stored their entire crop as high moisture kernel corn. It was a heavy gamble, but it worked. This year they have increased their acreage to fifty for each silo. They will again harvest with a picker-sheller and blow the wet grain into the silo. The grain will again be fed to pigs.

They figured they carried eight hogs per acre, and each acre, in terms of last year's 28c pork, returned them $160. Sixty percent were A grade. Their ration was 1,600 lbs. moist corn per ton. The protein concentrate was added in the grinder as the corn came out of the silo.

When you see crops of corn like there are in the St. Hyacinthe area this year, with fields stretching full-length of those long, narrow farms, it's not hard to let one's imagination run ahead ten years to picture whole concessions of farmsteads lost in one continuous corn field. That's how it is in Iowa.

We had a phone call this morning from a chap who has had a bad scare. On Tuesday morning, he sent his hired man into the silo to level Saturday's last loads. When the lad didn't come down again in a few minutes, he checked to find him collapsed, and before he could get him into the air, he too, was choking. I am happy to report both have recovered with no apparent after-effects.

Both were victims of silo gas. Over the week-end, the silage had settled beneath two doors. A pocket of gas had accumulated in the bottom, up as high as the first open door.

Silo gasses need not be a cause of concern if you take a few simple precautions while filling the silo.

Since the offending gas, nitrogen dioxide, is heavier than air, keep the doors open as near the level of silage as possible and don't neglect to open them again if the silage has settled overnight. And ventilate the silo by running the blower for a few moments before going back in next morning.

Get out of the silo in a hurry if you see yellow, brown or orange gas or feel a burning, choking sensation in the throat. If you are affected, it is well to report to the doctor.

"Feedlot Finishing of Cattle and Lambs" is the title of a new bulletin from the Canada Department of Agriculture. It is written for Western Canada, but most of the very practical information is basic and applies just as well here.

For instance, in the section on Feed Additives, it has this to say: "Additives are not nutrients but they may improve gains and feed efficiency. Only a few of the many additives available are worthwhile. Whether you benefit from a particular additive depends upon the conditions under which it is used.

Hormones

"Female sex hormones, such as diethylstilbestrol, have been used widely on cattle. Rates of gain have been increased by about a third of a pound a day per head with steers. Cattle to be implanted with hormones should be on full feed and within about three months of reaching market weight to obtain the full benefit.

Tranquilizers

"Results from tranquilizers have not been consistent. They appear to be of benefit mainly at the start of the feeding period, while animals are becoming accustomed to new surroundings.

Antibiotics

"Several antibiotics are fed to promote the rate of gain and feed efficiency, but the results are not consistent. Antibiotics are often fed as a precaution against subclinical diseases, especially during times of stress, such as the first month that cattle are in the feedlot."

If you want a copy, we have ordered a good supply. Dairymen, especially those finishing a few cross-bred steers, will find the information useful too.

Informal maybe, but Council gets the job done!

Stavely, Alta. (CP) — When the council of the municipal district of Willow Creek meets, Councillor Ellis Oviatt has been known to make remarks from the floor.

Literally.

And Councillor Andy Patton, while he hasn't gone as far as relaxing on the chamber floor, has been known to rest his head on the table and snore.

These are examples typical of the informality of the council for this farming area 65 miles south of Calgary. Yet while a councillor may appear far away from proceedings, none have been caught out when the question involves business from his region.

Even when wood-whittling Councillor Fred Burton turns the electric clock forward to speed things up, sessions have lasted 10 to 12 hours.

So the council now includes a supper break at the monthly meetings. That's when Max Gibson, secretary-treasurer, has been seen digging into canned salmon and perhaps wiping his spoon on someone else's coat.

Between snoozes and snacks, Reeve George Whitehead and his council conduct municipal business in a hail of woodshavings as Councillor Burton whittles a fence post with a jack knife.

Councillor Burton's votes often are recorded with a wave of whatever remains of the post. Sometimes it's a spoon, sometimes a window brace, sometimes little more than a toothpick.

He too has been known to fold his arms on the table and rest his head on them during a marathon session.

Once councillors turned towards Councillor Oviatt's chair to listen to his remarks. He wasn't there. He'd decided to stretch out on the floor and continue the debate from below table level.

Councillor Oviatt is the one who usually proposes the break for supper. This month's menu included canned salmon, smoked oysters, sardines, peanuts and pop.

Some of Councillor Burton's shavings come in handy for eating utensils too. . . But they have their drawbacks. During one meeting, Councillor Burton vanished from his seat. He was noticed in one corner of the room, his pants halfway down.

"Mr. Burton, what are you doing?"

"Getting rid of some of those prickly shavings, what's it look like?"

Welcome, Mr. Diefenbaker

ELSEWHERE in this issue is published the itinerary and program for a brief one-day visit of Mr. John Diefenbaker to this area, next Tuesday.

Many old partisans will hail this visit as a highlight, and will take advantage to meet, or meet again, with their leader. Apart from followers of the Progressive Conservative party, others of opposing convictions, and the younger citizenry in the formation of their political views, should welcome this opportunity to greet the Leader of the Opposition, who is a symbol of the democratic system which distinguishes our Canadian form of government from the totalitarian regimes.

Not always has The Watchman been independent in its politics. Indeed, this newspaper grew from a vitriolic adolescence to one-sided maturity. But for the past 40-odd years, in the present generation of its management, The Watchman has been strictly independent, and we have extended the glad hand of free expression to all parties. We have subscribed to Beaton's (Toronto Telegram) cartoons, which lambaste both Liberal and Conservative leaders without restraint and not always in complimentary caricatures.

With this impartiality we warmly welcome John Diefenbaker to the community. While exercising our privilege to agree or to disagree on matters of moment, we unstintingly recognize his zeal and his sincerity. We count it an honor to welcome his visit to our constituency, and we urge all thinking residents to meet him personally and hear his views.

Hay fever link with history

HAY FEVER sufferers will find little consolation at this season, to learn that there is a use for ragweed pollen — the main cause of their affliction.

Most of the pollen that is blown about the landscape in search of its female counterpart, falls to earth and becomes part of the record of plant life through the centuries. Historically, this is very important — even if it is of little comfort to the wheezers and sneezers of this season.

Hay fever sufferers are the victims of the need for wind-pollinated plants to put out millions more pollen grains than are needed for actual reproduction of the plant. Because little of the pollen is carried to its intended destination by water and insects, the main task falls on the wind. And the chances of wind carrying one tiny pollen to the tiny female receptacle are very slim. So the plant provides against these odds by putting out a vast supply, most of which is wasted. It is this wasted pollen from a variety of plants, but chiefly ragweed, which causes hay fever.

Little was known about the types and distribution of air-borne pollen in Canada until 1950, when the need arose to find out what pollen types caused hay fever and where this pollen was most abundant. Ragweed plants, chief bane of hay fever sufferers, have light pollen grains which are known to travel 400 miles, and probably extend even farther. The heaviest concentration of ragweed pollen is in the southern parts of Ontario and Quebec.

Mr. I. J. Bassett of the Plant Research Institute at Ottawa affirms that ragweeds existed farther northward in Ontario than they do at the present time. Open unvegetated land in late glacial time apparently provided suitable habitats for its migration and spread to the north. Later, when forests developed and dominated the country, ragweeds became less common. It is only within the last 200 years or so that ragweeds have again become abundant. This increase coincides with recent settlement by white man and the removal of trees in favor of large agricultural development.

Our popularity rating

IN A RECENT public opinion poll, Americans were asked to list their preferences among immigrants from the various countries.

Canadians topped the popularity poll, preferred by 30 per cent of those questioned. The Anglo-Scot group was next with 20 per cent, followed by Scandinavians, Germans, Irish, French, Italians, Poles and Mexicans.

This isn't really surprising, of course. Despite differences in outlook on many subjects, it's still a fact that we're very much like our American cousins in a great number of ways.

We watch the same television programs, see the same movies, enjoy the same sports, drive the same cars, speak the same language (Brooklynese and southern drawl notwithstanding).

And with more than 300,000 Canadians having emigrated to the United States in the last 10 years, it's difficult to find a Canadian family without some sort of relative on the other side of the border.

The feeling of kinship between the two countries has been strengthened over the years by the fact that movement of people across the border, whether as settlers or visitors, has always been easy.

For example, 38,074 Canadians settled in the U.S. last year while more than 11,000 Americans moved to Canada.

For these and other reasons, it was quite a shock when a U.S. Senate subcommittee considering a new immigration bill accepted an amendment that would limit to 120,000 the number of immigrants from Western Hemisphere nations each year.

The Canadian government immediately made representations against the amendment and there appeared to be some hope that it would be dropped.

For although it probably wouldn't have any practical effect on immigration for Canada, at least in the immediate future, it embodies a principle that Canadians find objectionable.

It's possible to argue that Canada should not expect to be treated differently from other countries. But the fact is that there is a long tradition behind the freedom with which the people of our countries travel back and forth.

Let's face it, our relationship is different. It would be difficult to find any two countries anywhere who identify more closely than do Canada and the U.S. If a quota must be imposed, it's reasonable to think that other countries could understand why an exception could be made in this particular case.

Safety standards for motor vehicles

WORK HAS BEEN initiated on the preparation of a code of standards for safety features in motor vehicles.

It is planned that the safety code initiated by the federal Department of Industry, will specify acceptable safety standards to be used by the Federal Government in its purchases of motor vehicles. The code will be available to provincial and municipal governments, other institutional purchasers of motor vehicles, and the general public.

Dr. Harold Elliot, a Montreal neurosurgeon, has been retained as an advisor on the medical aspects of vehicle safety. Dr. Elliot has been actively involved in motor vehicle safety and served as chairman of the executive committee of the first Montreal Conference on the Medical Aspects of Traffic Accidents.

In this preparation of a motor vehicle safety code, motor vehicle manufacturers, universities and other institutions which have conducted research on motor vehicle safety, provincial and municipal governments and insurance companies will be consulted.

SUGAR AND SPICE . . .

— By BILL SMILEY

Day Of Kisses And Roses

I have the deepest admiration for those men who make a big fuss over their annual wedding anniversary. My wife and I had another anniversary this week, and, as usual, neither of us remembered it until three days after it was past, too late to celebrate.

The reason I admire the anniversary addicts is the sheer boldness of their tactics. Usually, they are about the rottenest husbands in town, on a day-to-day basis. But with one florid, extravagant gesture, they wipe out all their sins of the last 12 months and lay the groundwork for another year of getting away with murder.

Few of these birds are the gentle, meek, timid, humble, hen-pecked husbands this era has spawned, like you and me. Not they. Among their ranks can find the deer hunters, the fishermen, the hard drinkers, the poker players, the philanderers.

And yet, with a combination of utter effrontery and incredible craftiness, they carry it off every year. A big bash of candy, a flourish of flowers, dinner and a night on the town: and the old lady falls for it every time.

This is the part I can't understand. Women, especially women who have been married for a few years, are not notoriously soft-headed. And yet these women, who know perfectly well that the old man is a two-timing heel, an incipient lush, or a big-mouthed bum, go all weak at the knees when Joe waltzes in on their anniversary with a potted plant.

I'm not making this up. Let's take my pal Charlie as an example. He's real. I'll change nothing but the names. Charlie wouldn't be caught dead taking his wife to church or the movies, during the year. He takes his holidays in the fall, when the boys are going deer-hunting. Mabel stays home. It gives her a good chance to rake the leaves and get the storm windows on.

When Charlie finishes a day's work, he has a couple or six quick ones with the boys, grunts at Mabel a few times during dinner, grabs his curling broom or golf clubs, and heads out the door.

Charlie's idea of a pleasant social evening for Mabel is to send her over to visit her sister while he has the poker gang in. After, of course, she has made a huge lunch for the boys.

Charlie has a lot of trouble with Mabel's extravagance. Heck, he gives her thirty dollars a week to run the house and feed and clothe the kids and herself, and she just runs right through it, as though the stuff grew on trees. Sometimes she hasn't even enough left on Saturday to buy his weekend case of beer.

He had me close to tears as he told me about the folly of letting women handle the money. With golf and curling fees up this year, and a new rifle to buy for the hunting trip, he figured he might just hafta cut down on the house allowance, if they were going to make ends meet.

Now Charlie, while a pleasant enough fellow to the world, and a real swinger with the boys, as a husband and father is not only a rat but also a fink. And Mabel, who is no dope, knows it.

But you should have seen her the other night, when she dropped in to pay my wife back the five bucks she's borrowed recently. Her eyes were shining and her poor, harassed face was all lit up, as she told us about the wonderful thrill of their anniversary celebration.

Charlie had come straight home after work, without drinks and with roses, hustled her into her glad rags and taken her out to the golf club for dinner. She'd had to come home with some friends, because Charlie had wandered into the locker room and got involved in a poker game. But she just couldn't express her appreciation of his thoughtfulness and kindness in remembering their anniversary.

My wife's comment, later: "I'd cut his throat."

Correction on local place-name, Centerville

(TO THE EDITOR)

9603 86th St., Edmonton
Sept. 10, 1965

The Lachute Watchman
Dear Sirs:

Just a line re the spelling of my old birth place, Centerville. Mr. Center was still living when I was a boy. I do not know when he came to the district. I do remember he was a good farmer and kept his place tidy, and a highly respected citizen — so much so that Centerville was named in his honor.

I think his name was Steven. I know he had a son Steven who came back from California and bought one of the Veitch farms in the early nineteen-hundreds.

The Center name meant so much in the early days. One hates to see a fine citizen forgotten and the name changed.

Still enjoy reading the paper; 57 years since I left, has made a few changes.

Yours sincerely,
— D. P. Christie

Campaign And Candidates

(First of a series of reports on the federal election campaign.)

In a time-honored Canadian political tradition, an army of enumerators spread out across the country this week to put more than 10 million citizens on the voting lists for the coming general election.

The Nov. 8 date at the polls has already been called the election nobody wants. But when the call finally came, it was evident that Prime Minister Pearson felt the time would never be more opportune to make a final bid for a parliamentary majority which would end the day-to-day uncertainty of trying to govern the country with a minority administration.

The election will cost Canadian taxpayers $13 million in out-of-pocket expenses. Another $10 million will be spent by the parties on the campaign. The Liberals will be the most affluent and the Progressive Conservatives, despite more than two years out of office, will also come equipped with a hefty treasury. Even the New Democrats, traditional shoe-string campaigners, plan on splurging $1 million wooing the country's voters.

With seven weeks of hard campaigning facing the nearly 1,000 candidates seeking the 265 House of Commons seats, all parties stood at the starting line long on hopes but short on confidence.

Despite a hefty edge which the Liberals enjoy in the current public opinion polls, early surveys turned up an unusually large number of undecided voters.

With the party leaders kicking off their campaigns this week, they at least had full awareness of their weak spots, and where they must go to try to pick up the support needed to win them seats on election day.

The Liberals are taking a calculated risk that they'll be able to nudge up their total enough to give them a majority.

The crucial testing point for the Liberals will be in the Prairies, which has stood as unbeatable Tory country — 41 of 48 seats in 1963 — ever since John Diefenbaker took on the Conservative leadership.

The second key area for the Liberals is Ontario, where they now hold 51 of the province's 85 seats. Here they face the dual problem of holding off a threatened New Democratic upsurge in Toronto, while keeping their newly-won grip on traditional Conservative seats in the country.

Mr. Diefenbaker will be on the offensive in this campaign, and he will hit hardest in the areas where he was weakest the last time around — Quebec and the big cities. Don't look for the Conservatives to run an anti-Quebec campaign. They held only eight of Quebec's 75 seats in 1963, and it will be Tory strategy to convince Quebec that the party isn't anti-French between now and Nov. 8.

The New Democrats will concentrate their efforts in B.C. and Toronto, where they won most of their 18 seats two years ago. But they also hope to benefit from a split vote in Saskatchewan, where they could blunt Liberal hopes by stealing several seats if the Tory vote drops very much. And the NDP has a colorful new leader in Quebec, Robert Cliche, who is going after the disgruntled farm vote in that province.

The outlook is bleakest for Robert Thompson's Social Crediters and Real Caouette's Creditistes. Together they held 22 seats in the last House, but experts are already betting they'll win fewer than a half a dozen in November.

The election issues will develop as the campaign progresses. But there'll be one over-riding issue — the Liberal bid for a majority government. If the Liberals make it, it will mean a quick end to the Diefenbaker career. If they don't, then the Pearson career will also be finished. Either way, it will be a knock-out battle between these two great adversaries of Canadian politics.

Glimpses of Eskimo Life

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

How much do you know about our Eskimo Canadians, living in the Northwest Territories, Northern Quebec and Labrador? Their life is very different from that of citizens living in other parts of Canada, but, thanks to air travel, northern communities are no longer isolated during most of the year. Air transportation has changed the whole face of the North.

The Eskimos are skilled mapmakers of their neighborhood. With drifting ice floes and blizzards, and living far north of the tree line with no tall trees to show them their way, they must remember the outline of the coast and the nearby islands. Early explorers, traders, missionaries, found Eskimo maps as reliable as Eskimo guides. Today the aerial maps made by Government surveys are very similar to the maps made by the Eskimos.

Last June we travelled by Trans Air, Canada's third largest airline, to Churchill, Winisk, Ottawa, Montreal and later flew from Winnipeg to Churchill in September. One hundred and fifty Eskimo boys and girls were being flown in to the new residential school in some of the buildings vacated by the Canadian army at Fort Churchill.

Only 8 percent of Eskimo children were attending school in 1951, but by now this number has risen to well over 66 percent. The Canadian government is aiming at every Canadian child having the chance to attend school by the end of this decade. The young Eskimos who have been educated have gained a fine reputation as good scholars, easy to teach, dependable workers, with special mechanical talents.

In recent years Eskimos have become trained in other work besides hunting, trapping and fishing. For countless decades members of a small Eskimo community shared the food which was available in good and hard times. It has been easy for them to grasp the principles underlying co-operatives.

One in every five families in the north is connected with a co-operative. The five hundred Eskimo members of nineteen co-operatives do almost a million dollars of business a year. Of this one quarter is derived from the sale of sculpture, handicrafts and prints and the rest comes from salmon and char (an Arctic trout) fisheries, and operation of tourist camps, retail stores, boat-building, logging and the marketing of furs.

When the great Arctic explorer Vilkjalmur Steffansson explained to medical men that it was possible to be healthy and active on a completely protein diet as he had seen it in Eskimo homes, they doubted him. He went on this diet and proved to them that Eskimos know how to be healthy during a strenuous life, eating the animals, birds and fish they can find without bread or milk or other foods.

Many people picture all Eskimos as living in igloos or a hide shelter. Quite a few Eskimos today are living in wooden houses, such as those at Akudlik. If Eskimo men have employment at an army base or in a construction or mining industry in a northern centre, they must have an all-year round house. These homes have often been built under the direction of the Federal Government officials.

In the months leading up to our centenary year, we Canadians should become better acquainted. Why not make it a family project to learn more about the INUITS, the name the Eskimos give themselves, which means "the People"? If you can, talk with someone who has been in Canada's Far North. Visit the public library and ask to see the books on Eskimos and life near the Arctic Circle.

Perhaps the greatest gift a person or a group of persons make to a nation is in their quality of life. People who have long worked with Eskimos have been amazed at their cheerfulness and happy outlook in a land where it has been hard to gain enough food to stay alive; where in the continued severe cold of the winter, the danger of being killed by wild animals is always a possibility. Eskimos are known for their courage, patience and also for their hospitality — virtues which we all need to cultivate!

Dashing Desserts with dairy touch

With their fresh lemon flavor, Scintillating Lemon Squares are guaranteed to become a family favorite. The first cut reveals a rich shortbread base covered with very thin slices of fresh lemon baked to golden goodness. This is definitely one dessert that is good hot or cold, all year 'round. The reason it's so good — because it's made with butter. As you know this all important dairy food finds its way into all successful baking, promising improved flavor and texture each and every time.

SCINTILLATING LEMON SQUARES
(Makes 8 to 9 Servings)

¾ cup soft butter; ⅓ cup lightly-packed brown sugar; 1⅓ cups sifted all-purpose flour; 1½ cups granulated sugar; 3 tablespoons flour; ¼ teaspoon salt; ⅓ cup soft butter; 3 eggs, well beaten; 2 tablespoons grated lemon rind; 2 lemons, peeled and sliced very fine; ¼ cup cold water.

Butter a 9-inch square cake pan. Preheat oven to 375°F. Cream the ¾ cup butter; blend in brown sugar. Add the 1⅓ cups flour and combine well. Press dough evenly in prepared pan. Meanwhile combine the 1½ cups granulated sugar, the 3 tablespoons flour, salt, lemon rind, sliced lemons and cold water. Carefully pour over shortbread layer. Bake in preheated oven 40 to 45 minutes. Serve hot or cold.

Serve lamb more often

Canada Department of Agriculture marketing experts say that last year lamb consumption dropped to a low of 69,000,000 pounds, which means that each Canadian ate less than four pounds of lamb. Now that fresh lamb is available homemakers would find it a benefit to themselves and their family to get to know the various cuts of lamb. Most consumers are familiar with the leg cut or lamb chop. However, there are many other cuts of lamb which make delicious meals. With the aid of a good recipe book you should be able to create many fascinating dishes to delight your family.

Here are some of the most common cuts and suggested methods of preparing them, from the Consumer Section at Ottawa.

The leg — this may be left whole or divided into shank and butt. The leg is a tender meaty cut and makes an excellent roast.

Loin, leg end — this is the meaty end of the loin; it contains a T-shape bone and tenderloin. It may be roasted. This cut is usually divided into chops which may be panfried, broiled or baked.

Other excellent roasts and chops are cut from the rib end of the loin and the shoulder.

Less tender cuts such as the flank, neck, breast and shank make delicious meals when cooked by moist heat. These cuts may also be ground and used in dishes similar to ground beef.

Here is a good example of using a cheaper cut of lamb in a delicious and exotic dish.

Curried Lamb

2 Pounds boneless stewing lamb, 1 cup finely chopped onion, 2 to 3 tablespoons fat, 1 tablespoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup hot water, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, ¼ teaspoon thyme, 1 clove garlic (optional), 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 tablespoon curry powder, ¼ cup cold water, ¼ cup raisins, 3 tablespoons chutney (optional), 1½ cups chopped, tart apple.

Trim fat from meat. Cut meat in 1-inch cubes and brown well. Brown onions in fat. Drain off excess fat. Sprinkle meat with salt and pepper. Add hot water, parsley, thyme and garlic, finely minced. Cover and simmer one hour until tender. Combine cornstarch and curry powder with cold water to make a smooth paste. Blend with some of the hot cooking liquid and add gradually to meat mixture. Stir well. Add raisins, chutney and apples. Cook 15 minutes longer. Serve with cooked rice or noodles. 6 servings.

Texstyles

Madeleine Levasseur

An industry which offers every graduate of a qualified school the choice of five jobs holds exciting possibilities for progress to our ambitious young Canadians. Today the Canadian textile industry is steadily increasing its employment, and wondering where it can obtain the leaders needed for the future.

Canadian textiles, an industry older than Confederation, is booming. Economists declare that textiles is a pattern-maker among key industries. They feel that the big expansion now under way ($100 million in new capital this year alone) is a solid expression of confidence in Canada's future prosperity.

The need for more textile technologists has been the subject of many speeches around the country in recent months. In Ontario, Dr. John J. Moran, of University of Toronto, said universities are producing 30 per cent fewer textile technologists than are needed. "The great surge forward to find stronger, better and new synthetic fabrics is occupying many research experts," he said, and pointed out that department stores are now starting their own laboratories.

In Quebec province, the shortage of technicians and executives was the subject of graduation ceremony speeches at the Textiles Institute of the Province of Quebec, in St. Hyacinthe. A. M. Guérin, Director of Clothing and Textile Branch, Federal Department of Industry, and himself a graduate of the school, told graduates their future was extremely favorable.

"You are joining a dynamic industry, taking more and more advantage of technical developments and competing favorably with any other," he said.

William H. Young, chairman of the Canadian Textiles Institute, told delegates to "Canadian Textiles '65" that the industry had increased total employment by 13 per cent to 85,000 in the past four years and could expand to 115,000 workers by 1975. He pointed out that graduates from the two textile schools in Canada were offered five jobs each.

The college-level schools — the other is at Hamilton, Ont. — offer three and four-year courses in technology which equip young people for positions of responsibility in the industry. Starting salaries for assistant technologists are in the region of $5,000 per year. School fees are modest and in addition many scholarships, prizes and other forms of financial assistance are sponsored by companies and technical associations. Some of these extend to living expenses and pocket money as well as fees and books.

Graduates are trained for jobs in quality control, fibre and fabric processing, textile chemistry, dyeing and finishing; fabric styling and designing; sales, service, research and development. Most students are offered summer employment which gives them practical experience and allows sponsoring companies to assess their talents.

The science of making textiles is on the move. So much has been accomplished in recent years the future prospects seem unlimited.

Recipe for almond glaze squares

For most people, September is the busiest month of the year. While the younger members of the family reluctantly wend their way to the daily classroom, mother is caught up once again in fall cleaning, canning and club meetings. And everyone knows that activity takes energy and energy demands good food.

At this time of year, menu suggestions, especially if they are unusual, are enthusiastically welcomed by homemakers everywhere. Our recipe for Almond Glazed Squares caters for those who want something unusual, something delicious and a dessert or tea table treat that is easily prepared.

Before you start to make Almond Glazed Squares, preheat your oven to 350 deg. F. and grease a 10x5-inch baking pan. Then, cream together ½ cup butter with ½ cup brown sugar. Sift 1½ cups once-sifted all purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt and blend in with the butter and sugar. Press the mixture into the pan and bake for 5 minutes.

While you are allowing the mixture to cool, combine 1 tin (15 ounces) sweet condensed milk, 1 cup dry bread crumbs, ⅔ cup coconut, ½ cup chopped brazil nuts and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Blend well and spoon over the baked crust. Spread the topping carefully with a buttered spatula and bake for 12-15 minutes.

While cake is still warm, frost it with an icing made of 1 cup icing sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter and 1 teaspoon almond extract. Blend the icing well and spread it evenly on top before cutting the cake into squares.

New director for Red Cross water safety

Mr. A. R. Hasley, chairman of the Water Safety Committee of the Quebec Provincial Division, Canadian Red Cross Society, announces the appointment of Raymond Grenon as director of the Water Safety Department for this province.

Mr. Grenon succeeds Pierre Greffard, who has held the position for the past two years, and has been engaged in the Red Cross water safety program for eight years. Mr. Greffard will now devote all his time to the study of Law at the University of Montreal, where he will enter his third year this fall.

Raymond Grenon studied under Charles Burroughs, became physical education at the University of Montreal, qualified as a Red Cross instructor in 1957 an examiner for the Service, and was an instructor at the Water Safety Instructors' Course at Lac Trois Saumons in 1963 and again at Lac Quenouille in 1964. For ten years he taught physical education for various school boards, including the Montreal Catholic School Commission. In 1964 he was Supervisor of the Red Cross Water Safety programs in Greater Montreal under the direction of Pierre Greffard.

His last teaching assignment took him to Tunisia, North Africa, as a special envoy of the Canadian Government External Aid Office.

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

At the moment Newfoundland is the only Canadian province without a woman in the federal Senate or Commons or in the provincial legislature.

It has women aldermen and councillors and Louise Saunders of St. John's who is a Queen's Counsel.

The Business and Professional Women's Clubs, every year, publish a list of women who have achieved prominence, not necessarily in that year.

The current one, of course, lists the six senators, Olive L. Irvine of Winnipeg, Muriel McQueen Fergusson of Fredericton, Elsie Inman of Montague, P.E.I., Nancy Hodges of Victoria, and Marianna B. Jodoin and Josie D. Quart, both of Montreal.

The Commons has Margaret Konantz of Winnipeg, Margaret Rideout of Moncton, Eloise Jones of Saskatoon and three Ontario members, Pauline Jewett, Jean Casselman-Wadds and Judy LaMarsh.

An Ambassador

Nova Scotia can claim Canada's only woman ambassador, Margaret Meagher of Halifax, ambassador to Austria.

The list shows nine members of legislative assemblies in seven provinces, a total of 17 mayors, one deputy mayor and an Indian chief, Mrs. Percy Pruden of Lac La Biche, Alberta.

In its honors and achievements categories, the list shows a number of accomplishments.

It included Marguerite Marzantowitcs of Edmonton, concert master of the symphony orchestra.

The British Columbia file had Corporal Phyllis Mortimore who was awarded the long service medal of the Vancouver police force and Hilda Hellaby of the Yukon Territory who has received a licentiate in theology and an honorary doctor of divinity degree at Anglican Theological College, Vancouver.

In Winnipeg, Flora MacDonald was appointed chief clerk of the police force and Agnes MacDonald was principal of Winnipeg High School.

Heads Accountants

Marjorie Laws of Moncton was chairman of her city's chapter of the Society of Industrial and Cost Accountants, and Mrs. Malcolm Tait of Fredericton became the country's first official reporter in a provincial legislature.

Eva Lyman in Halifax, a landscape architect, was working as a community planner with the provincial government.

In Ontario Mrs. Peter L. Robinson of Toronto was superintendent-in-chief of the St. John Ambulance, Jeanne Penick of Hamilton was president of the United Florists of Canada, a business association.

Ruth Osborne of Charlottetown had been Islander of the Year, Dr. Bibiana Cujec of Quebec was professor on the faculty of pure science at Laval University, Dr. Stephanie Potoski of Yorkton, Sask., had been awarded the Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice Medal.

District NEWS

FROM OUR COUNTY CORRESPONDENTS

Morin Heights

Mrs. James Inglis, of Dorval, Que., visited Mr. and Mrs. George Watchorn during the week-end.

Mr. Archie Hamilton, who has been confined to hospital as a result of a fall causing fractures in both legs, has returned home and is making satisfactory recovery.

On Saturday afternoon, September 25, a tea and home-baking sale will be held in the United Church hall. This event is sponsored by the Christian Education Committee of the church. Proceeds will go towards the cost of installation of folding doors, to divide the hall into classrooms for use of the Sunday School. It is hoped that readers and their friends will support this worthy project.

As previously mentioned in these columns, the fund raising campaign of the Red Cross is now in progress. May we say, "Be generous" when the canvasser calls.

Temporary Inconvenience

Someone has remarked that "Morin Heights is full of holes". True, but there is no cause for alarm. To a veteran of trench warfare days, it would appear that a noble few have made last-ditch stands against an advancing foe! There has been, however, an absence of the rattle of machine-gun and the dull blast of the exploding hand-grenade. . . Actually, it's all in the line of improvement of water supply to residents, for many of whom the original galvanized lead-ins from the water main are being replaced by copper piping. This will make for better water pressure and obviate the long wait for the bath to fill — and the hosing of the lawn can now be done in a quarter of the time, to the general satisfaction of all concerned.

Plan to Erect Cenotaph

Preparations are already underway for the erection of a cenotaph to the memory of former residents killed in action, and to deceased members of the Morin Heights Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion. The place of honor will be the centre of Hillcrest Cemetery. The structure will rise to a height of 15 feet, resting on a graduated base approximately 24 feet square.

The work is under the direction of the Board of Trustees of the Legion. While a good portion of the cost will be borne by the Legion, residents will have the opportunity of contributing financially to this permanent memorial during the fund-raising campaign which will go into effect early in October.

Blood Clinic dates at B'burg

Brownsburg Branch of Canadian Red Cross Society are holding their annual blood clinic on Monday, October 4, in the C-I-L Plant, from 2 to 5 p.m., and in the Brownsburg Legion Hall from 7.30 to 9 p.m. The objective is 200 pints of blood.

Things 'n Stuff

IT'S A SMALL WORLD

Some weeks ago I remarked that there were no thrills in show business and that I had endured ulcer-forming adventures in the field of commercial photography. But this does not mean that showbusiness did not present some unusual surprises. For instance:

In 1946 I left Montreal to join the Fair unit of Garden Brothers' Circus in Winnipeg for a seven-week contract on the Western Fairs. The grandstand show was a complete unit on a trailer truck opening up into a 15x30 stage complete with scenery, lights and piano. The pianist was a very fine Winnipeg boy, who had never before played for vaudeville but who turned out to be completely competent. I was the only performer from Montreal, the others being from Toronto or U.S.A.

Our second-to-last stand was in a small town called Gilbert Plains. We arrived on a Sunday and did not have to rush to get set up. Someone arrived on the lot selling slices of watermelon, and I took a snapshot of Mac, the pianist, and Mervyn Curley, the electrician, sitting on a circus trunk eating watermelon.

In November of that year I was invited to a party in Montreal. I had several snaps taken while on the show, and was showing them around to a lot of people I had never met before. Suddenly one of them exclaimed, "Why, there's MAC! . . .

"Where did you ever meet him?" I asked.

"He was with our outfit in Italy."

Just imagine — a Montrealer meeting up with a complete stranger in Winnipeg, photographing him in Northern Manitoba and then meeting another stranger who knew him only in wartime Italy!

Be seein' ya!

Unconscious woman rescued from smoke-filled hotel room

Firemen were summoned to the Windsor Hotel at 2.20 a.m. on Thursday of last week, following a reported fire in one of the rooms. Upon arrival at the hotel, both police and firemen were informed the room was vacant. However, investigation by firemen some moments later, led to the discovery of a woman lying on the floor of the smoke-filled room.

Attempts to reach the woman were to no avail until two members of the fire department, George Taylor and Garry Payne, entered the room with breathing apparatus, Scot Air Pacs, and managed to get the asphyxiated woman out of the room. The victim was Marie St-Jean, a 37-year-old roomer at the hotel, who by this time was unconscious. A doctor and ambulance had been summoned prior to this and Lieut. Réal Arcouette, of the Lachute Police Department, applied artificial respiration for a considerable time before the victim showed certain signs of reviving.

She was transported to the Argenteuil Hospital by ambulance, and at last report was well on her way to recovery, despite severe smoke asphyxiation and minor burns.

An investigation into the details of the fire is underway.

Summer home destroyed by fire

The summer residence of Arthur Bryerton, in the Cushing area, was destroyed by fire late Sunday evening, the loss being only partially covered by insurance. Mr. Bryerton is a resident of Rosemere, and had left the summer home, which he had been renovating over the past three years, around 4.30 in the afternoon.

The fire was discovered by a passing motorist and reported to a neighbor of the Bryertons, Donald Fuller, who attempted to extinguish the fire while his wife summoned the fire department in Lachute. But the smoke, flames and intense heat prevented Mr. Fuller, a nephew of the owner,

Enthusiastic welcome for Diefenbaker visit here

At Dominion Ayers Ltd. employee presentation

The Tory leader, John G. Diefenbaker, accompanied by his candidate, Roger E. Regimbal, made a one-day tour on Tuesday and received a cordial welcome at various points in this County. Arriving at St. Adolphe in the late morning, he concluded the busy day with a rally at the Brownsburg Arena, where he was greeted by a crowd of between 500 and 600 persons. During his trip he visited the market at the exhibition grounds, the Dominion Ayers and J. C. Wilson Co. mills, and was guest of honor at two receptions. At the Ayers plant he presented 25-year souvenir watches to a number of long-service employees. Mrs. Diefenbaker, accompanying her husband on the tour, visited the Red Cross blood donor clinic at Lachute Auditorium in the afternoon.

Highlights of the tour and speeches will be reported in further detail next week.

Party rally gave Roger Regimbal official Prog.-Cons. nomination

There was old-time ardor in the first of this election's political rallies — a Progressive-Conservative nomination meeting at St. Hermas last Sunday, at which Roger Regimbal was named official candidate of the party in Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes.

Speaking of the general election November 8, Mr. Regimbal declared: "This time we're going to win, for tonight we have set ourselves on the right track — to success and to victory. On our side we have truth, honesty and integrity. I offer you the best of my capability and my energy. Together we will win this election." Mr. Regimbal's nomination was sponsored by J.-Maurice Dorion, of St. Eustache, seconded by Kenneth P. Riley, of Lakefield.

"Our experience of the past year and a half indicates it is time for a change," continued the candidate. "We have to restore an image of Canada which we will no longer be ashamed of beyond our borders. Our party chief, despite the faults and criticisms imputed, is honest, energetic and sincere. . .

In his remarks Roger Regimbal observed, later, that there were 13,000 pages in the Hansard record of debates. "The deputy for our County had only two and a half pages. Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes has more to say than that. Our constituency deserves a lot more."

Chairman of the proceedings was Rodrigue Bourdages, former deputy for Laval, and the nominations were presided over by Armand Crevier, chief organizer of the party, who explained the procedure. Among the platform party were Notary J. O. Latour ex-M.P., William M. Cottingham, M.P.P., mayors and representatives from various surrounding municipalities.

Wilfrid Dufresne, from Montreal party headquarters, and an ex-deputy, also spoke forcefully on behalf of Mr. Diefenbaker, and from the 200-odd persons present, solicited active support for the election of his candidate, Mr. Regimbal.

Prog.-Conservative candidate

Roger E. Regimbal, assistant to the president, Dominion Ayers Limited, was chosen as standard-bearer for the Progressive Conservatives in the coming election, at a rally of partisans Sunday evening in St. Hermas. Seen above, left to right, are J. Maurice Dorion of St. Eustache, who sponsored the candidacy motion, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Regimbal, and Ken Riley, of Lakefield, who seconded the nomination.

Late B'burg H.S. teacher was active in education and community service

Late "Phil" Grant as president of the Rotary Club, 1964-65

Brownsburg — The death of G. Philip Grant, 309 Elmwood St., Brownsburg, occurred suddenly on Friday, September 24, in his 50th year. A resident for the past 15 years, Mr. Grant was commencing his 16th year as a teacher of Senior High School mathematics and science at the Brownsburg High School. He was an active member of the Argenteuil Teachers' Association, the local affiliate of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers of Quebec, serving on the executive as vice-president, and as the president in 1955-1956. Besides his regular teaching duties, he was at one time active as instructor of the school band, advisor to the Students' Council, and coach of school teams in softball, volleyball and basketball.

When Mr. Grant arrived in Brownsburg in 1950, he became one of the initial organizers, and held several offices in the Ottawa Valley School Athletic Association, recognized as one of the best school leagues in the province.

Active in Rotary, Mr. Grant had a perfect attendance at weekly meetings for the past 13 years. He served as director, vice-president, and had just finished serving as president, as well as being chairman of various committees — program chairman in 1961-1962, and Student Loan committee in 1962-1963.

Born in Fredericton, N.B., he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George A. Grant and received his education there, graduating from the University of New Brunswick in 1940. Prior to coming to Brownsburg, Mr. Grant taught for two years in Lachute, and before that in New Brunswick.

Mr. Grant is survived by his wife, the former Marjorie Lingley of Fredericton, N.B., and two brothers, Albert, of Medford, Mass., and Gilbert, of Rexdale, Ont.; two aunts, Mrs. Frank Whitehouse and Mrs. Alexander Rosborough, both of Fredericton, and two uncles, Mr. Gooderich Jarvis, of Saint John, and Mr. Clarence Jarvis, of Fredericton, N.B.

Family prayers were conducted by the Rev. C. R. Lang at MacKimmie's Funeral Home, Lachute, at 1.30 p.m. on September 27, followed by service in the St. George's Anglican Church, Brownsburg. Interment was at Lachute Cemetery. Students of Brownsburg High School formed a guard of honor. The pall-bearers were — Messrs. John Leggitt, Kent Tompkins, Keith Smith, Keith Wilson, Clifford Armstrong and Wes Freeland.

Those who attended from out of town were — Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grant, of Rexdale, Ont.; Mr. Holden Lingley and Mr. and Mrs. William Lingley, of Fredericton; and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Lingley, of Brantford, Ont.

Three deaths ruled accidental, on highway and railroad track

Jurymen deliberating on three recent fatalities pronounced them accidental in three separate verdicts. The inquests were held on these cases last Thursday evening under District Coroner Dr. J. C. MacKimmie of Lachute, at the civic auditorium.

At Rte. 8-A Intersection

Raymond Laughren, 20, of Hawkesbury, met his death accidentally when his car catapulted from the highway at the Route 8 and 8-A intersection near Grenville — according to the jury's findings.

Principal witness in this incident of September 4 was another Hawkesbury youth, Jacques Vaillancourt, 17, who was riding with the victim. According to his testimony, they had eaten at Marelan and were returning home. As he approached the junction the driver braked the car, but at a speed around 70 miles an hour the car went hurtling out of control and plunged into the ditch.

Cst. Raymond Hetu gave evidence as provincial patrolman investigating the accident. Roger Légaré, QC, represented the crown.

Killed on Railway Track

Olivier Lalande, 59-year-old bachelor who lived in a rooming house at Hawkesbury, met his death by accident, according to the jury verdict. The man was struck by the eastbound train between Staynerville and Marelan stations on the evening of September 7, and the provincial police had some difficulty in establishing his identity.

The engineer of the CPR dayliner, Roger Légaré, was chief witness. The train had left Calumet, and the engineer saw the man on the track only seconds before he was struck. The track is straight for a long stretch at this point, and it was commencing to get dark. The victim appeared suddenly; he seemed to climb out of the ditch, according to the engineer. The train was travelling around 75 miles an hour and its lights were on. The engineer immediately applied the brakes and, together with the conductor, took procedures prescribed by the railway company in the case of an accident.

Other witnesses were René Lebel, conductor on the dayliner, Maxime Lalande, brother of the victim, Cst. Gilles Lavigne and Cpl. J.-P. Dallaire, Omer Giroux, also Raymond Campeau and Jean-Claude Laurin, two farmers of the vicinity who had seen the victim walking on the track.

The jury gave their verdict without retiring. Roger Lagarde was crown attorney and Jean-Guy Joannette acted as counsel for the CPR.

Death on Highway

An accident verdict was given also in the case of a local resident, Felix Dorion, of East Settlement, who was fatally struck by an automobile on the highway near his home. After hearing several witnesses the jury rendered their verdict without withdrawing for deliberation.

Dr. Conrad Lécuyer, 31, a veterinarian from Hull, Que., recalled that on September 10 four miles east of Lachute his car had unavoidably struck Mr. Dorion, whom he saw suddenly near the middle of the road after he had met another car. He applied his brakes immediately on seeing the man, and stopped in about 150 feet. The victim did not hesitate; it appeared that he did not see or hear the car at all, Dr. Lécuyer stated.

Roger Campeau, a neighbor of Mr. Dorion's, stated the latter had left his house a few minutes before the accident and was on his way home.

Cst. André Piché, QPP, gave findings of his investigation, which accorded with other testimonies. Tracks showed the car had stopped within 146 feet, which was normal at a speed of 55-60 miles an hour.

Appointed agent at CPR station

Henri Larche

In the service of the CPR for 30 years and a familiar figure with the travelling public, Henri Larche has been promoted from chief telegraphist to station agent at Lachute — succeeding P.-E. Labelle on his recent retirement.

Mr. Larche started the study of telegraphy at the age of 15, at Fassett, and entered the employ of the CPR at 17. In the last war he served five years in the Cdn. Signals Corps, and then returned to the Company on his discharge. He has been on the staff at Lachute depot since 1947.

Married to Gisèle Boucher of Montreal, the couple have three children — two attending l'Ecole Secondaire, and another at Laval Institute of Technology.

Query on space and facilities for new factory

The Quebec Department of Industry and Commerce directed a request to Lachute Town Council for information on accommodation for a new industry to employ about 200 workers — a similar enquiry, of course, having been sent to other municipalities. This is in line with a government policy to encourage the decentralization of industry.

The enterprise involves a process of assembling small metal components. The working force would be 80 per cent female and 20 per cent male. Required for the plant is an area of 10 to 20 acres, 100,000 square feet of floor-space, and proximity to both railway and highway.

Council considered the possibilities — and the perplexities. On one hand, they do not want to pass up any opportunity of this kind; but on the other, available buildings of the specified area are rare, and there are no sites readily apparent to meet the need in ground space. Sites were discussed in Ayersville and in St. Jerusalem; and Ald. Dr. R. A. Dumais dropped a mysterious hint, that he could perhaps satisfy the requirements of the company in question.

At least, Council was determined to do something, in the hope they might take advantage of this opportunity.

October 4 Blood Clinic plans discussed at B'burg Red Cross

The regular meeting of the Brownsburg Branch of the Canadian Red Cross was held on Monday, September 20.

Mrs. Barker, Women's Work convener, welcomes any lady residents who wish to do sewing. Several articles were completed during the summer, including four quilt tops. The work room in the Social Club is open every Friday from 2 to 3.30 p.m.

Mrs. Lafleur, of the Sick Committee, had a busy summer attending to loans of wheel chair, bed, crutches and canes. The Disaster Committee also provided clothes and food for a family near St. Andrews, who lost their home by fire during the summer.

Mrs. Paul Fontaine, Regional Director, was the guest speaker. Plans were made for the forthcoming Blood Donor Clinic, to be held on Monday, October 4, in the C.I.L Plant from 2 to 5.30 in the afternoon, and at the Legion Hall from 7.30 to 9.30 p.m.

Chairman of the clinic is Mr. Rafael Sharman; vice-chairmen, Mr. N. E. Smillie and Mrs. Omer Legault. This year's objective is 200 pints of blood.

Sidelights in civic affairs

Council will shortly be taking renewed steps towards annexation of part of St. Jerusalem, and also a move to annex Whisselltown, which is part of Chatham Township.

These two cases differ from the negotiation with Ayersville, which is not a matter of annexation but of voluntary amalgamation. St. Jerusalem and Whisselltown will involve a consultation of public opinion among those concerned.

The town corporation has acquired a Payloader (tractor and shovel) costing $25,000, which has been put to work on the park and other works projects. With widening of the municipal limits, still more heavy machinery will be required for general service and maintenance. . . This is the price of progress!

Council agreed to meet the costs of a course in fire protection which André Bergeron has been taking for the past year at l'Ecole Polytechnique, $213. Bergeron, a fireman and town employee, successfully passed the first-year examinations, and is continuing the second year of the course.

Boy dies after electric shock

An inquest into the death of Germain Gareau, a 12-year-old inmate at Les Ateliers Ecole St. Andrews East (school for retarded children), will be held shortly, according to Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, officer in charge of the local Q.P.P.

According to Cpl. Dallaire, the boy was washing the floor when he apparently grabbed an electric extension cord and received a severe electrical shock. He was rushed by private car to the Argenteuil Hospital, where artificial respiration was applied for some time. The incident occurred around 4.30 p.m. on Thursday of last week and the boy died in hospital several hours later. The boy was a native of Montreal.

Sentiments and Sidelights

A good question for Fire Prevention Week: What happened this year to the chimney cleaning service, usually organized for all town properties? Did Town Council overlook this precaution?

Stage set for three-day show, Expo 65

In the near future — as soon as the cement floor of the new Lions' Arena is completed — exhibitors will be setting up their booths and displays for Expo 65, which takes place on October 15-16-17. The Watchman is informed that all display areas are sold out, and the organizing committees anticipate a great success of this venture, the first of its kind to be staged in Lachute.

The Expo will open Friday, October 15, at 11 a.m., and will continue until Sunday at midnight. During Sunday morning hours of mass and church services, the exhibition will be closed.

Saturday morning is specially emphasized for young people of the district, to whom a special invitation is extended at that time.

Frequent meetings have been held in the final preparations of this exhibition, and it is hoped the populace will turn out in great numbers, to see the show and to ensure its success.

"Argenteuil Outdoors" (Indoors, Too!)

By BOB ATCHISON

To try and write a column from a bed is not my idea of fun, but at least I can try. . .

The opening of the duck season was as usual — lots of hunters around, but very few ducks. At least there were no limit bags anyway. Some of the boys have been keeping me posted on the happenings in and around; not one human casualty from gunshot was reported, to my knowledge. At least I didn't hear of any, and you might say I was right on the scene for this (in hospital !). Bob Tessier told me of shooting a couple of buffleheads, and seeing others. These birds, as you know, frequent large bodies of water; they don't seem to like rivers or small lakes too much. There are some huge flocks of this variety around Lake Ontario, which seems to be their chief hangout during the summer months, too. A diver duck, they are exceedingly hard to get close to, and trying to decoy them in is just out of the question. They are easily spotted by the coloring, black and white, that's all; about the size of a blue-winged teal, the same type of eating also.

One of the boys also shot himself a couple of greges. Not too much is written about this bird, and I've often wondered why. One fact about it should make it unusual, it swallows its own feathers and makes a ball inside itself. There is really no explanation for this, but it is thought that — this bird being a diver and a fish eater — the feathers are nature's way of protecting the gullet from small bones cutting into it. Even the newborn birds start almost as soon as they can move their heads. Another point, this bird can travel underwater as fast and as far as a loon; it seems to go much deeper, too. They have been taken out of fishermen's nets at 150 feet down.

There are a very few blacks and mallards in the district; they won't be with us very long though. Naturally, these waterbirds take top priority for table fare. The canvas-back rates as the epicurean delight. We do not get these varieties around here; as a matter of fact there are very few in this section of the country. Back in the dirty thirties the St. Lawrence near the old Nun's Island used to be famous for them, but with the coming of pollution they beat it. There used to be enormous quantities of wild celery in this water, just what this bird particularly relishes — this is the chief reason it is looked upon with such great favor.

Before the seasons got tightened up, and game wardens were few and far between, this waterbird was sold by the thousands in and around Montreal. I believe it was also shipped over into the States too. The next on the eater's list seem to be the mallards, certainly they are the most sought-after in the selective shooting group. This bird feeds on wild rice, and anyone having eaten this, knows just what the flavor is — great. . . Boy, am I a bear for punishment, writing like this, with my hunger glands working overtime, and not a chance in the world of getting such delicacies as this for a long time. I hate myself !

Watching from the window this morning, 5 a.m. (I mean it, too), I could see two sets of eyes in the grass just outside. What they were I could not say; by the size they might have been groundhogs roaming around. Long before the sun came up though, they had taken cover. My window faces to the south, so you see, I have the whole of the district in view right down to the St. Philippe Road. Of course, there are plenty of crows — and the numbers you see when you haven't got a gun; but to tell the truth, I wouldn't even shoot them right now.

As you know, the moose will be taking a beating about now. The same game laws prevail this year as last — shoot anything, it's O.K., calf, cow or bull, it makes no difference. I know I have talked to a great many sportsmen, and they all condemn this free killing. One of the most stupid laws that has ever been allowed by the government, it's beyond most people's comprehension. There's an old saying that you can milk a cow just so long before it goes dry, and this is what seems to be happening to our game.

I wonder how many of you know that a moose cannot browse close grass. Or for that matter, drink water, unless it bends its knees and squats down. This is the reason that moose are seen on the shallow lakeshores and in the marshes. In some cases a moose will immerse itself almost completely when feeding. Of course, with a rack of up to 100 pounds, it's easily seen why the species has such long legs. Can you imagine yourself trying to carry a packsack the same weight, about 70 inches wide and maybe 40 inches deep?

Of course, the cariboo season is also open up north. This is the only species of its kind where we find the male and female have antlers alike. Even the fawns have small spikes after a couple of months. At one time this great animal covered the whole of the northern part of Canada, numbering up to 25 million. Unless it has been hurt, or is sex-maddened as happens with some of the older bulls, they have never attacked a human. It's not man that this animal has to fear though; responsible for huge losses in their number are the flies — botfly, warble and cariboo. These pests lay their eggs in the hide of the cariboo; and in the case of the cariboo fly, this marauder lays its eggs in the ears of the animal. You may remember, when we were up in Labrador I mentioned seeing cariboo lying in marsh with their heads almost immersed in the mud, trying to keep the flies out; and when they were disturbed the flies rose from the ears like twin trails of smoke. Unbelievable, unless you have seen it.

Now for some of the local news. As you all know, our moose have been having it very well this past summer.. With a few young around earlier in the year, indications are that things are on the upswing for these wonderful animals. Wednesday morning, one that has been frequenting the area near our home, decided to amble a little, ending up across the river near Lac Filion. This bull roamed right up to the road, Highway 41, looked things over and then gave the once-over to a garage being built for Dr. MacKimmie — probably looking for a little free medical advice, maybe on what to do if he gets shot at. Let's hope this does not happen, although I have my misgivings. Far too many of our citizens see no beauty in anything unless it's dead; a queer, twisted conception, to be sure.

Every once in a while, you hear of an incident that makes everything worthwhile. On Tuesday a pigeon landed on the roadway of Barron's Bridge — hurt, no doubt shot by some little monster with a B.B. A gent coming across in his car saw the plight of this bird, stopped his automobile, got out and carried this pigeon to a safe place away from the bridge. Then he ambled back to his car, with jokers behind blowing their horns impatiently — then drove off. Believe me, this Good Smaritan has the appreciation of a good many animal lovers for this little act. Smooth sailing to him !

Clubmen, spirited citizens praised as nucleus and impetus of hospita

The fact that Lachute Lions Club has been inseparably linked with the founding and development of Argenteuil Hospital — as with many other enterprises in this community — was impressed by the hospital administrator, Horace Lamarche, in a review of progress as speaker at the club meeting last week.

It is no secret to many, he recalled, that the conception of a hospital was outlined at a Lions Club meeting in 1948 by Gilbert Ayers, who wanted the club to sponsor it as a major project. However, the hospital was too big an undertaking for a service club, but many Lions members, aware of the urgent need, stood firmly behind Lion Gilbert Ayers. Two other members who attended the first meeting of the corporation in 1952 were W. M. Cottingham and Roger Regimbal. Later, in 1957, the board of directors approved the nomination of Léopold Carrière, Armand Desrosiers (now chairman of the board), Don Hay and Herb Graves — all active Lions — and these had performed the "missionary work" in establishing the hospital. They negotiated with the government authorities, the architect, the medical consultant, the general contractor. They had the foresight to turn over the hospital to the Department of Health, under provisions of the Hospital Act, Bill 44, of 1962 . . . "Knowing what is happening today with corporations and institutions trying to make operational ends meet, I can assure you these men rendered our population an immense service," said Lion Horace Lamarche.

Even though the hospital became the property of the government, the operation itself was left to the board of governors. On this board, are Lions rendering valuable service today, namely — Don Hay (treasurer), Bertrand L'Heureux, Ian Gordon, Herb Graves and Paul Deslauriers (directors). Lions members are also on the medical board of the hospital; these include Dr. Zoël Saindon and Dr. Paul Prévost.

Proceeding with his discourse, the speaker touched upon the functions of the directorate and the medical board. He stressed a valuable role played by the ladies' auxiliary, and gave interesting facts and figures on the personnel, the administration and the activities of this now smoothly-operating enterprise. He mentioned that the staff totals 147, and the annual payroll and purchases $800,000 — of which amount, no less than $640,00[illegible] spent and placed immediately[illegible] circulation within this Count[illegible]

The speaker was introduced [illegible] L. Jos. Dumais, who had b[illegible] associated with Horace Lama[illegible] for many years in business[illegible] Llonism and other enterpri[illegible] and spoke of him as an in[illegible] ation in his devotion to all tasks he had undertaken. GLASS REFRACTS

A goldfish bowl and a pop bottle discarded in a country picnic ground have a not unlikely fire relationship. Both refract sunlight into a beam of intense heat. A house fire was actually started by sunlight refracting through a goldfish bowl.

Grenville lady lived many years in Eastern T'wps

The late Mrs. H. V. Weston

Mrs. H. V. Weston of Grenville, formerly of Bulwer, Que., passed away at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Carl T. Paige, on September 13.

The former Orpha Spear, she was born at Smith's Mills (now Tomifobia, Que.) July 7, 1887, the daughter of the late Elmer Spear and his wife Jennie Brainard. Later, moving to Ayer's Cliff with her family, she met and married the late Herbert V. Weston, on February 16, 1921. Of this union one daughter, Ruth, was born.

In the fall of 1928 she and her family moved to Bulwer and on March 29, 1949, Mr. Weston predeceased her, also her brother, Wright Spear, on April 28, 1963.

The funeral was held from the parlors of M. T. C. French, Sawyerville, Que., on September 15, the Rev. J. A. Filshie, of Cookshire, Que., officiating. A favorite hymn, "The Old Rugged Cross", was sung by Mr. Stuart Merrill, assisted by Mrs. Filshie at the organ.

The bearers, all friends of the deceased, were Messrs. K. Hodge, A. Bennett, of Eaton, C. Ross, R. Drake, E. Parker, K. Johnston, of Bulwer. Interment was in the cemetery at Eaton, Que. The floral tributes were beautiful.

Left to mourn her loss, besides her daughter and son-in-law, are two grandchildren, and one brother, Edson Spear, of Hamilton, Ont., who attended the funeral.

Friends and more distant relatives attended from Island Pond, Vt., North Hatley, Coaticook, Cookshire, Bury, Franklin Centre, Bulwer, Lennoxville, Eaton, Sawyerville and Hemmingford, Que.

Police on fruitless chase — catch only fugitive minors

Two robberies believed to have taken place on Thursday evening of last week were reported to police. Entry to the Knights of Columbus Hall, Lafleur Street, was reported on Friday evening. Here, the building was entered by means of a window, and approximately $70 was reported missing. In another case around the same time, $20 and some cigarettes were reported stolen by a local merchant. Only minor damage was caused by the intruders.

Following investigation of the robberies, Police Chief Réal Chartrand noticed several suspicious-looking men entering a local hotel, and instructed his officers to investigate. By the time the other officers had arrived, however, the men in question had disappeared. It happened that when the policemen entered the hotel, two young men yelled that a raid was taking place, and ran for the nearest exit. Not knowing what to expect, the police officers gave chase and shouted for the men to stop, and when they failed to do this, shots were fired into the air. The two still did not stop, so additional policemen were summoned and finally one of the suspects was picked up.

Investigation and questioning showed the youth was under age, and was afraid he would be arrested for drinking in the hotel. His associate was also questioned; he gave the same story, and the pair were subsequently released.

APPRECIATION

I would sincerely like to thank my kind relatives and friends for visits, cards, flowers and gifts, when I was a patient in the Argenteuil Hospital and also at my home. — Mrs. Leonard Boa

Bereaved

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. Gabriel Valois, Lachute, in the death of her father, Delphis Michaud, which occurred last week at Plessisville. The late Mr. Michaud, 78, was a prominent business and community man. He is mourned also by his widow and a son, Gérard, in Plessisville.

Under Dept. of Municipal Affairs

Taking into account the human and material fire losses, says the Hon. Pierre Laporte, Minister of Municipal Affairs, it is essential that the public and all those who assume responsibilities at the community level strongly support the measures taken by the Provincial Government in order to minimize losses as much as possible. The Quebec Fire Commissioners Office is under the authority of the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Religion's purpose, Christians' duty, to nourish the spiritual side of man

"Religion has always been concerned with nourishing the spiritual side of man," Dr. C. Ritchie Bell, of the Presbyterian College, said in a sermon Sunday morning at the Margaret Rodger Memorial Church. "We know that the soul seeks after God, but in some strange way, we find ourselves in a continual conflict. Within the heart of every man there is this ceaseless struggle between the two natures — the higher and the lower, the good and the evil. It is all too tragically true that the lower side of our nature is affected by the pull downward of much that is prevalent in our modern environment."

"The mass media of information available to people in general are not as good as they should be in a civilized country, and in a civilized community like this. We would readily agree, I am sure, that some of our television and movie programs, some of our newspapers, magazines, and paper backs, apparently delight in glorifying brutal murder, sexual license, and marital disloyalty. It is up to those of us who are members of the Christian Church to use every means in our power to strengthen the character and uphold the arms of our young people, that they may seek to know their true selves, so that this lower side of their nature may not be pandered to — the salacious, the licentious and the immoral. — It is up to us, if we are to preserve our way of life and see our youth develop, not as lustful educated animals, but as young people who realize their true heritage as children of God, created to serve Him in this world and to help bring about His Kingdom of justice, truth, decency and honor."

Golden wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Boyd were photographed here cutting the cake at a reception held in their honor at St. Aidan's Church hall in Louisa, last Saturday, September 25. Many friends and relatives attended the happy occasion.

Report given on Friendly Home, at Baptist Mission Circle gathering

The Women's Mission Circle of the Lachute Baptist Church held their annual thank-offering service on Tuesday evening, September 21.

The president, Miss Leola Caya, presided and Mrs. David Brown was organist. The Scripture (John 8: 1-19) was read by Mrs. Angus Cleary and a lovely duet entitled "Dear to the Heart of the Shepherd" was rendered by the Misses Connie and Doris Austin.

As guests for the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Roulson, of Montreal, were introduced by Mrs. Stanley Stock.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Roulson are the superintendents of the Friendly Home and are known in the Home as "Daddy and Mother Roulson". Mrs. Roulson gave the audience the following report:

This home was started over 40 years ago by Miss Hannah M. Smith, and was named the Friendly Home for young women and children. Originally it was a home for unwed mothers, but branched out into a home for young women and needy orphaned children and those from broken households. It was the ambition of Miss Smith that this should be a home, and not an institution, and it has been continued with this atmosphere ever since.

The Home was started in a house on Dorchester Street near Atwater, and in 1960 they moved to the present building, the corner of Draper and Cote St. Antoine Road, Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Roulson and family, the superintendents, came from England 15 years ago, and the Home has enlarged and prospered under their devoted Christian service, to the limit of the building's capacity.

Needy persons are always received with kindness and Christian grace. Many young women have come with broken spirit and have gone away restored to live worthy lives in their various communities.

Chief aim of the Home is that of a Christian missionary undertaking — to point those who come, to a God who loves them and would encourage them to start afresh. It is supported by the free-will gifts of the people, having no endowment or guaranteed income. No religious distinctions are made but all who come are introduced to true Christian living in the friendly atmosphere of a Christian home.

A number of girls brought up in the Home, have trained for nurses, one of whom is now serving professionally in Tennessee. A young Chinese boy was abandoned and brought to the Home some 20 years ago; he is now a business administrator in a hospital in India. It is the practice of the Home to encourage these unfortunate young people to continue their education as far as they are mentally capable.

For a number of years the children were taken in the summer to a camp at a Y.M.C.A. Lodge in Christieville. This year a camp at Lac Beau, consisting of 127 acres, was donated to the Home by a Christian doctor. While there is much work to do before this is equipped for the needs of the children, it is a beautiful location and could be developed into a very helpful recreation for these under-privileged children.

The ladies who gathered for the thank-offering service of the Women's Mission Circle of the Baptist Church, Lachute, were greatly impressed with this worthy missionary undertaking existing very near our own doors. They would urge all who read this report, to give the undertaking their hearty support.

A film also was shown of the camp, and activities of the boys and girls.

Mrs. L. Hisey, on behalf of all present, thanked Mr. and Mrs. Roulson.

Visitors from Grenville, Maple Ave., Brownsburg and Dalesville Baptist churches, were present.

Refreshments were served at the close of the service, in the church hall.

Old thresherman still adept at 87

Congratulations are extended to Wm. T. MacGillivray on the occasion of his 87th birthday, September 25. Mr. MacGillivray celebrated his birthday by helping his neighbor, Holland Kennedy, to thresh oats, and during the four hours he was feeding the mill, put through approximately 120 bushels of grain. Later he enjoyed supper with his granddaughter, Mrs. Eric Bates, and her husband and two children, Lorne and Darlene.

Mr. MacGillivray was one of the pioneer threshermen of Argenteuil County, and owned what was, at that time, one of the latest models of Moody threshing mills, which was powered by a gasoline engine. Before that he had a horse-power, with power furnished by a big team of Clydes.

Mr. MacGillivray has a keen memory and can tell many amusing stories about life in the "good old days". Friends and neighbors join in wishing him many more birthdays, and continued good health to enjoy them.

Fire Prevention a personal matter!

ACROSS Canada in this coming week, colorful posters are asking WHY? As Fire Prevention Week approaches, it is a good time for this journal to ask its readers, and for all of us to ask ourselves the same question, WHY?

— Why did almost 600 Canadians die in fires in 1964?

— Why did last year's fires in Canada destroy property worth almost 150 million dollars?

— Why have almost 2,500 Canadian children died in fires in the last 10 years?

— Why did Canadians have well over 80,000 fires last year?

— Why did most of these fires occur in homes?

Why indeed! Such a simple question deserves a simple answer and, just as the question is posed by a single three-letter word, the answer to the problem of fire in Canada can be found in another common three-letter word — YOU!

Yes, it is a simple fact that over 90% of all fires are caused by human carelessness! Either someone does something that he or she shouldn't do, or neglects to do something that he or she should do and, quicker than you can say "Fire Prevention", we have a new set of statistics.

— Why, in the face of rising levels and standards of education, must Canadians continue to be so stpuid when it comes to the elementary principles and practices that are all that good Fire Prevention requires?

— Why do Canadians persist in leaving children unattended?

— Why do Canadians insist on hoarding combustible junk in quantities that stagger the imagination?

— Why do Canadians persist in overloading and overfusing electrical circuits?

— Why do Canadians resist buying fire alarm systems and extinguishers?

Canada holds the world record for the highest per capita fire loss, and has held it for many years now. But isn't it about time that Canadians do something about this national disgrace?

Fire Prevention is everybody's business, and the sooner we all realize and accept this fact, the better off we will all be. Learn all you can about Fire Prevention, and put what you learn into practice, every day!

Changing the weather

WHEN Hurricane Betsy roared through the New Orleans area, killing many people and causing millions of dollars worth of damage, it got the U.S. government thinking once again about an old problem — what to do about the weather.

The Johnson administration issued a new call for a "vigorous national program" of research to explore ways of taming such storms so that they will lose their fury before hitting populated areas.

Twenty years ago this sort of suggestion would probably have been greeted with snickers. But with science well on the way to sending men to the moon, people are beginning to accept the view that very little is impossible these days.

President Johnson's secretary of commerce, John T. Connor, said scientists now believe it's worth spending large amounts on such research and that the ultimate benefits can be "almost unimaginable."

One theory, which has been tested in parts of Canada and the United States without producing concrete conclusions, is that rain can be produced by cloud-seeding.

The idea is that you seed clouds with silver iodide to encourage condensation of the water vapor, causing it to fall as rain. If the temperature and other conditions are right, it seems to work.

The scientists would no doubt like to have enough to carry out a really comprehensive research program on this. And, given the resources, they may well be able to reach the stage where they can modify the weather.

But we hope they know what they're getting into.

To illustrate what we man, take the case of the Laurentian Forest Protective Association which carried on a cloud-seeding program in the Lake St. John district north of Quebec City.

This spring it rained a lot in the area. The association modestly declined to take any of the credit (or blame) but housewives, angry because their kids couldn't play outdoors, flooded the government with complaints. The experiments were discontinued.

It's a good bet that wherever the scientists set up their equipment they're going to run into protests, and even when they're not responsible for a change in the weather, they can expect to get blamed.

Medicare — for $600-million

CANADIANS can expect to have their taxes increased if the Federal medicare scheme outlined in July by the Prime Minister is accepted by the provinces. It is estimated that under the proposed scheme the total costs to provincial and federal governments will be of the order of $600 million, half of which will be paid by the federal government — and this does not include the costs of administration which, the scheme dictates, must be by a state agency. To meet these heavy costs, the various governments will almost necessarily be forced to raise tax rates and every taxpayer will feel it. In addition, there will be no opting-out — every Canadian, regardless of need, must join the plan. Doctors could eventually become salaried civil servants, and one wonders what will happen to those young people now contemplating medicine as a profession — will they be content to accept this arrangement, or will they move away to places that are less restrictive?

In a country like Canada, no citizen should lack the fundamental requirements, of which good health is but one. There are those in Canada who are definitely not able to provide good health for themselves and their families, and it is surely toward these groups that the governments should direct their assistance — not to those who can, without difficulty, take care of themselves and who are doing so under existing, private medical care programs.

Pushbutton suicide

THE IDEA that people can look with equanimity on the possibility the human race will be annihilated within the next few years, is one of the odd things about life in the nuclear age.

But the fact remains that nobody appears to worry too much about what will happen if the cold war turns hot, or somebody presses a button by mistake.

Back in 1958 the U.S. Secretary of Defence predicted a nuclear war between Russia and the United States would result in 160 million dead Americans, 200 million dead Russians, and death of the entire population of Western Europe.

Did this make the nations resolve to live peaceably together and avoid nuclear war? Not so you'd notice.

Man's peculiar indifference to his own fate, and the death wish which seems to have spread over the world in the wake of the nuclear threat, can be explained in only one way.

To the individual, his own death is the only thing that matters. When he accepts the inevitability of that, he has accepted the possibility of everything. Beyond his own death the question of nuclear megadeaths is purely academic.

Of course, nobody thinks the world will ever come to nuclear war. The possibility is one most people don't care to contemplate for long. And if they did, the answer would be in the form of a question: What can anyone do about it?

Men have long marvelled at the suicidal tendencies of the lemmings, who march into the sea and swim stolidly to their death. . . Are human beings any more rational?

'Today's children in tomorrow's world' theme of Education conf'ce in Montreal

For the first time, Quebec branch members of the "Ontario Council for Childhood Education" are organizing the annual conference of this organization — to be held in Montreal, October 29 and 30, at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. The full program offers outstanding speakers, fresh ideas, and wider horizons.

Quebec's Minister of Education, the Hon. Paul Gérin-Lajoie, has consented to attend if possible.

Set for October 29 is a day of observation in Montreal schools and a get-together for delegates from parent co-operative schools. In the evening there will be a get-acquainted coffee party, where convention displays and exhibit booths will be open and entertainment provided by children from Maple Hill School junior choir.

On Saturday there will be the general session 9 to 11 a.m., at which Dr. Leland Jacobs will speak and the McGill Martlets choral group will sing. There will be separate panel sessions on Creative Arts and Learning Problems. Creative Arts panelists will be: Music, Miss Joan Haines, music specialist and Associate Professor of Education at Macdonald College; Art, Miss Irene Senecal of Beaux Arts, Montreal; Rhythms, Miss Ruth Duncan, creative rhythms specialist at Macdonald College; and Drama, Mrs. Eva Russell, creative dramatics specialist, Macdonald College Summer School.

Discuss Learning Problems

Those who elect to attend "Learning Problems" will hear from Dr. Hyman Caplan of Montreal Children's Hospital, Mrs. Kay Crowe, executive director of the Montreal Family Life Education Council, Dr. Guy Monette and Mr. Albert Morf of the Université de Montréal and Mr. Howard Stutt, guidance department of the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal.

The luncheon will be addressed by Dr. J. D. Jefferis. The afternoon buzz sessions offer a choice of "Language" or "Maths and Science". The language panelists will include Dr. Jane Catterson of Quebec Department of Education (formerly of Lachute High School).

Rain repellent aids road safety

A repellent that sheds rainwater from windshields of automobiles and aircraft, providing nearly perfect vision, for the driver has been perfected by a Canadian scientist after 24 years of research. It will improve a motorist's ability to see during heavy rainstorms and help prevent obscuring and distorting a pilot's vision.

An early version of the repellent, a complicated silicon compound, was first produced some 20 years ago by Dr. D. F. Stedman of the National Research Council's division of applied chemistry. This version and later ones worked, but had small though serious difficulties, said Dr. Stedman. Now it is no longer a "version". It is easy to use and does all the things a rain repellent should, he said.

Not only does it improve a car driver's vision in heavy rain, it also reduces headlight glare at night. It looks much like black shoe paste and is applied by rubbing briskly on glass. When polished, it works up a slippery coating that sheds water and retains this quality for weeks, even months. Dr. Stedman assured motorists it is not intended to replace wipers which retain their effectiveness and also help remove dirt.

SUGAR AND SPICE

And Suddenly It's Fall

No matter how busy the summer has been, each year the wildly accelerating pace of life in autumn comes as a jolt. One is not eased, but hurled, back into the rat-race.

First shock, akin to diving off an ice-floe in the vicinity of Greenland, is the re-opening of school. It's exciting for the kids, exhausting for parents, and pure chaos for the teacher.

One day it's Labor Day. Calm, competent, relaxed, the teacher potters about the long, silent, fresh-waxed halls of the school, picking up his mail and planning an afternoon round of golf.

The next day, he is just another ant in an anthill. He is buffeted in the halls by a maelstrom of students. He frantically makes class lists, sells padlocks, fills out forms. He directs weeping grade-niners who are lost, or can't remember the combination of their lockers. He comforts near-weeping new teachers who don't know what to do, nor why, nor where, nor when.

Just to add to the general jollity this fall at our school, we went on a double shift. Our team commences classes at 8 a.m. This means hitting the deck at 6.30 or earlier. Pull a teenager out of bed at 6.30 and you have a surly teenager. Pull a teacher out of bed ditto and you have a ditto teacher. It's bad enough these fine autumn mornings, but there'll be murder done by mid-winter.

But school is only part of autumn's rude awakening. There is the despair that strikes when you read a list of the "new" television shows and discover that not a single tree or shrub has been planted in the wasteland of last year's TV.

Bills sprout like thistles in autumn. There's the remains of last winter's fuel bill, with "PLEASE" typed in red. There's the notice of the mortgage payment. There's the one, entitled "Last warning," from the guy who sodded the bald spot on your lawn last June. There's the first instalment of music lessons. There's the note from your friendly bank manager.

And this fall the thistles are longer and sharper than ever around our place, with a kid heading for university. We figured out that he will need approximately as much money this year as my old man used to raise a family of five on. Hugh's idea of helping out with finances was to take off in mid-September with my best jacket, all my sox without holes, and every shirt of mine without frayed cuffs — both of them.

Meetings galore. There's the notice of the curling club meeting, at which "We will discuss the advisability of raising the fees." They were raised. There's the notice from the Library Board for the first fall meeting, at which the Property Committee (guess who's chairman) will present its report. There's a reminder that the speech I offered to make, last June, will be presented in 10 days. There's the memo about the staff meeting at 7 a.m. There's the advice that my resignation as teacher of the Bible Class has been ignored, and classes commence on Sunday.

In between, the lawn has grown four inches, the hedge looks like a beatnik and the leaves are falling. The squirrels are back in the attic, the garage is still half-painted, and my daughter, in a month at camp, has busted out of all her clothes.

Oh well, "Life is the life," as Kim once remarked sagely, age six. There have been a couple of bright spots. I have a new English teacher on my crew who would have given Cleopatra a run for Mark Antony.

And there was the Old Fighter Pilots' reunion in mid-September. They tried to ruin it this year by having wives along. But most of the boys ignored this and turned up stag. And those who didn't were wishing they had!

Fire vocabulary

Here's an answer to the recent critic who questioned our editorial use of the word "flammable".

Flammable — will burn.
Inflammable — same thing.

And yet 80% of Canadian householders canvassed in a telephone survey had the idea that the prefix in "inflammable" gave it the meaning of "won't burn". True, for some, danger was signified when either word appeared on an aerosol can or container.

Another troublesome English word — fire-proof. Use instead the phrase "fire-retardant".

Names Are The Issues

After threatening to die on its feet for lack of popular issues, the federal election campaign suddenly caught fire this week. It was a case of personalities injecting color into an otherwise dull campaign.

The personality who grabbed most of the headlines was, inevitably, John Diefenbaker, triumphantly announcing he had restored unity to his splintered Progressive Conservative party.

But despite slashing Opposition attacks on problems of national unity and scandal in government, there was yet to emerge a red-hot "gut" issue which could sway the one-third of the voters who are rated as still undecided on how to vote.

The Tory rebels who returned to the PC bandwagon after Mr. Diefenbaker's appeal for unity were led by George Hees, ex-Trade Minister who gave up his job as head of the Montreal Stock Exchange to seek election in Ontario's Northumberland riding.

But the biggest catch of all — Manitoba's Premier Duff Roblin — eluded the Tory net. After days of suspense, Roblin announced that although he would campaign for the party federally, he would not be a candidate.

Behind the return of the Conservative defectors, there was speculation that a power play was underway among would-be successors to Mr. Diefenbaker.

The other chief Tory warrior to return to the federal scene was Davie Fulton, ex-Justice minister, rated a shoo-in for his old Kamloops, B.C. seat.

A number of top Tory organization experts also put themselves to the test of the voters. Journalist B. T. Richardson, Diefenbaker's personal assistant, is going after the Toronto Snadina seat now held by the Liberals. PC association president Dalton Camp is tackling Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp in Toronto Eglinton and vice-president Dick Thrasher is taking on the Liberals in Wnidsor, Ont., riding of Essex South. Diefenbaker critic George Hogan is trying for the Toronto York West seat vacated by hockey star Red Kelly, but he will have stiff opposition in a prominent Liberal who has returned to the fray, Robert Winters. Mr. Winters was a cabinet minister in the St. Laurent government.

Pierre Sevigny returned to the Tory fold in Quebec while in Calgary, ex-Defense minister Douglas Harkness, who broke with Diefenbaker in 1963, described the closing of Conservative ranks as a case of "they've come back, but I've never left."

A number of prominent MPs of all parties have announced they'll not seek re-election. The Speaker of the House, Alan Macnaughton of Montreal, announced his retirement, along with NDP deputy leader Doug Fisher of Port Arthur and Tory Mrs. Eleise Jones of Saskatoon.

The Conservative party was also assured of more assistance from provincial premiers than Mr. Pearson will receive.

In addition to Duff Roblin, Ontario's John Robarts will go all out for the PCs, both of them sharing the platform with Mr. Diefenbaker at an Ontario kick-off in Toronto, Oct. 1. That rally, in solid Liberal-NDP country, comes a week after the official launching of the Conservative campaign in Halifax, which was followed by a Diefenbaker whistle-stop tour of Quebec.

Prime Minister Pearson will get little assistance from provincial premiers, with the exception of Joey Smallwood in Newfoundland and Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick. Premier Lesage of Quebec is off on a goodwill tour of the West and refuses to even talk about the election.

The Liberals got down to work with a one-day candidates' rally in Ottawa, but the PM was planning on a slow start for his campaign, promising to take the high road above "smears, scandal and scuttlebutt."

New Democrats and Social Crediters seemed to be lost in the shuffle.

If fire breaks out!

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

During the winter months over and over again fire destroys a house and lives are lost.

Each year in Canada, the number of deaths from fires is around the five hundred mark. In a recent decade over one thousand five hundred children died as a result of fire, many of them little tots left all alone in a home "just for a few minutes" while mother went shopping, called on a neighbor or departed with father to spend an evening of recreation.

There are three important things to do, in the following order, if a fire breaks out in your home. Get Everyone out of the Building; Call the Fire Department (if necessary from the nearest neighbor's house); Fight the Flames until help arrives. A baby sitter should be old enough to be responsible in an emergency and know the above procedure.

The majority of fires break out at night. Every family of school age children should hold a council and plan the quickest, safest way for each person to get out of the house. The following safety procedures, if wakened by fire, should be known to the school youngsters as well as adults.

Before opening a door, feel if it is warm. If it is warm, do not open it. Many people are killed, not by burns but by breathing overheated gases. If the door is cool, brace your foot behind it and open cautiously. If hot air rushes in, slam it shut. If smoke, but not hot air or flames are in a hall, throw a wet towel, if possible, over your head and crawl on hands and knees along the floor. Close every door after you.

Do not jump from a window except as a last resort. If you must get out this way, tear and knot some sheets to make a rope ladder. Drop bedding out the window to break a possible fall.

Memorize the number of the fire department. Post it up beside your phone. In an extreme emergency, tell Central your address and that you need the fire truck. Discover how long in your area it will take help to reach you from your professional fire fighters. If you consider this unsatisfactory, perhaps something can be done about it.

Fire fighting is a job for experts but the first five minutes are more valuable in extinguishing most fires than the next five hours. There are three types of fires and a good fire extinguisher does an efficient job on all three. Remember (a) that water will put out wood, paper, clothes fires; (b) grease and flammable liquids on which water should NOT be thrown but baking soda will smother; (c) in electric equipment, again, baking soda is a good weapon.

If clothing catches on fire, do not run. Wrap up in a rug or quilt and lie down and roll on the floor, beating out the flames with your hands.

Last but not least, do not be tempted to run back into a blazing house to rescue possessions, once every member of the family is safely outside. Your child needs two parents. A great many people have lost their lives dashing in for money or valuables. Don't take a foolish risk. It's bad enough for a family to have their home damaged or lost by fire — don't add the extra heartbreak of a funeral.

Efficient reading thro' good vision, education factor

Reading is the principal source of knowledge today. For those people who cannot read, there is no means of learning from written material.

To read well, one should not overtly nor covertly move the lips or pronounce the words in an oral or silent manner. Anyone can "read" words in German, Italian or Spanish with no understanding.

Reading really consists of the interpretation of symbols, letters, numbers, words and other signs.

As we have seen, reading requires the use of intelligence. Understanding symbols is inherent in reading. Comprehension cannot take place without a previous knowledge of the symbols used. This is first acquired at the pre-school level by acquiring a useful vocabulary, then by learning symbols of the language in school.

Healthy eyes without a structural defect do not provide us with good vision any more than well formed hands make a pianist. To see clearly in order to read is more important than seeing for a mile.

Eye mobility is also essential in order for the eyes to move quickly and smoothly from word to word, group of words to group of words, or line to line. Skipping words or lines causing rereading will make reading slow and tiresome.

Efficient reading means that reading is carried out quickly with full comprehension. This is essential today when we must sort out pertinent from impertinent printed matter.

It is difficult to alter the intelligence factor in reading. However, the modern optometrist checks and studies ways to improve the essential visual skills for efficient reading necessary to meet the demands of society.

Hearty appetites in autumn

Let dairy foods help create mouthwatering meals. In the crisp autumn days appetites soon build up. You need foods that are satisfying but easy to prepare. Dinner In A Dish is a protein-packed casserole easily made with skim milk powder and Canadian cheddar cheese that will help give your family the energy they require. The wonderful feature of this dish is that it can be made in advance and stored in the refrigerator until meal time.

DINNER IN A DISH
(Makes 5 or 6 Servings)

2½ cups uncooked noodles; 2 tablespoons butter; 1 cup finely-chopped onion; 1 pound minced lean beef; 1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce; ½ cup skim milk powder; 1 (14-ounce) can whole kernel corn, drained; 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; ½ teaspoon oregano; 1 tablespoon parsley flakes; ¾ cup shredded Canadian cheddar cheese; 1 egg, well beaten.

Butter a 2-quart casserole. Preheat oven to 350°F. Cook noodles in boiling salted water until tender; drain thoroughly. Melt butter in frying pan. Add onion; fry until just tender. Add minced lean beef and fry until lightly browned. Add tomato sauce, milk powder, corn and seasonings; mix until well blended. Alternate layers of noodles and meat mixture in casserole ending with noodles. Sprinkle with cheese and pour beaten egg over top. Bake uncovered in preheated oven 45 to 50 minutes.

Grape spreads have versatile uses

When the vines are shorn of their purple grapes, every homemaker knows it's her last chance to make jams and jellies. These spreads have so many uses, we would hardly know how to get along without them.

Grape and plum jelly make delicious meat accompaniments, crabapple jelly makes a wonderful filling for cakes and jelly rolls or a tasty glaze on smoked meats. Or try dropping a spoonful of jelly on muffins or biscuits just before baking.

Fortunately, jelly and jam making is not the chore it used to be; the commercial pectins have made short work of it. Gone are the guessing about whether the fruit has enough pectin for a good jell, and the long boiling time "till jellying stage is reached". When the recipes are faithfully followed, the commercial pectins assure perfect set and fresh-flavored preserves every time.

Following are short-boil recipes for making grape preserves.

Grape Jelly and Grape Butter

(Using Concord Grapes)

Yield — about 10 medium (8-oz.) glasses jelly and 12 medium (8-oz.) glasses butter.

Required — about 5½ lbs. or 5 quarts ripe grapes, 6½ lbs. sugar, 1 bottle liquid fruit pectin.

First, prepare the fruit. — Stem about 5½ pounds fully ripe Concord grapes and crush thoroughly. Add ½ cup water; bring to a boil and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Place in a large sieve lined with double thickness of cheesecloth. Drain and measure 4 cups juice into a large saucepan. Use juice for making jelly; use fruit remaining in sieve for making butter.

Grape Jelly

4 Cups juice, 7 cups sugar, ½ bottle liquid fruit pectin.

Second, make the jelly. — Combine juice and sugar in saucepan and mix well. Place over high heat and bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, skim off foam with metal spoon, and pour quickly into glasses. Cover jelly at once with ¼ inch hot paraffin.

Grape Butter

5 Cups fruit pulp, 7½ cups sugar, ½ bottle liquid fruit pectin.

Then make the butter. — Remove cheesecloth from seive and put remaining fruit through sieve. Measure 5 cups pulp into a very large saucepan. Add sugar and mix well. Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and at once stir in pectin. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Ladle quickly into glasses. Cover butter at once with ¼ inch hot paraffin.

Montreal (C) — The position of the working woman in Belgium is much the same as it is in Canada, said Agnes Clarysse, here in connection with Belgium's pavillion at Expo 67. "Since the war, more and more women are going out to work, but not many take top executive posts," she said.

Texstyles

Madeleine Levason

Here is news for all consumers worrying about textile labelling. So many developments are taking place at such a rapid clip, your worries may soon be as obsolete as some labelling laws now in existence.

The whole trend in textile development is to give every fabric, every virtue, every easy care quality a consumer could desire. Each section of the industry is working to reduce technical advantages that one fibre has over another. There are new yarns, new processes, new blends, new finishes and now permanent press for finished garments, a development that heralds the era of the shape-set clothes that will keep their pressed look as long as they last.

Recently I sat through the annual discussion on textile labelling at the Consumers' Association of Canada meetings and once more heard a resolution passed, asking the government to "do something". Consumers still speak of wanting to know the fibre content of fabrics, while daily new fabrics appear with four and sometimes five different fibres blended together to achieve that all-round easy care that will meet every consumer demand.

Labelling laws that ban mention of fibre content of less than five per cent on the grounds that it is not enough to contribute performance to a fabric, have been made obsolete by spandex yarns.

Two per cent of spandex used as the core of yarns of any other fibre can give fabrics excellent stretchability, contributing substantially to its ultimate performance.

The textile industry in Canada is highly competitive, as it is everywhere in the world, but peaceful co-existence of natural and man-made fibres was inevitable. Fibre battle talk has dissolved into widespread acceptance of blending in all sections of the industry.

Cotton producers are making new blends, so are woollen and worsted mills. Producers of man-made fibres are mixing and blending each other's yarns all to broaden the range of fabrics and to give each as many desirable qualities as can be achieved. Man-made yarns are being modified to vary their feel, appearance and properties. New self-crimping nylon that gives women's hosiery non-sag, clinging fit is just one of a whole new family of nylon yarns. Other modifications give nylon and polyesters a warm feel, superior color and other performance improvements.

Texturizing of yarns which originated in the 1930's with the attempt to make wool-like knitting yarns from regular man-made viscose is now used to achieve endless variations in appearance, bulk, coloring and pattern effects.

Wider use of fabric finishes is part of the trend to give the consumer better performance in all fabrics. Improved finishes for all-wool and all-cotton fabrics compete with man-made wash and wear blends. However, even where washability is not a factor, finishes that shed soil, water and stains are firmly established for furniture as well as clothing.

Machine washable wool sweaters are now a fact. The shrinkage problem in machine washable cotton knits has now been licked with another new process.

Carpets, draperies and blankets share the development picture with fabrics for clothing of all kinds. When we realize how many major developments have been made in just the last few years, the future textiles become a fascinating prospect. They may not need care labelling.

The Quo Vadis school of nursing has begun its second year of operations in Toronto.

One of the things which makes the school unusual is the age and status of many of its students. Most of them are well over 30. About 80 per cent of them are married and have an average of two children each.

Quo Vadis was established in 1964 to train mature women who want to be nurses. When its establishment was announced 616 women inquired about attending. There were 32 chosen for its first class.

The school is independent, financed by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, and its students practice in five Toronto hospitals. Its headquarters are in several renovated houses on Sunnyside Avenue in the west end of the city.

Choose Carefully

Because of the compact two-year course and because many candidates have been away from school for years, they are carefully screened. They will have a heavy work load and rusty study habits.

"But our students have the advantages of maturity and counselling services.

"They have done their growing up. Most of them have raised or are raising families. They don't need to be instructed in the care of the baby or how to talk to patients."

They must meet the educational requirements of the College of Nurses of Ontario and school requirements. They must have a secondary school graduation diploma with four options, one of them science.

Work for Standards

"While many candidates are well-educated women, some with university work, maybe three options were all that were required in their school days for a diploma." Another problem is the European Canadian who has the necessary requirements, but cannot produce school records to prove it.

"The willingness with which potential candidates undertake to go back to high school, either full-time or night classes, to meet provincial requirements amazes us," says Miss McLean.

She says the school is also attracting a high quality of staff members, that it includes four with master's degrees and several with bachelor of science degrees in nursing who have completed some master's courses.

The students have a four-week vacation in their two-year course. They pay a nominal tuition fee and provide their own pink-and-white striped uniforms. Some of them move to Toronto for the duration. Others commute on week-ends to their home communities.

Old army ration still good!

An emergency army ration packed in 1918 for use by soldiers in World War I, was opened recently and taste-tested with all components found to be in an edible condition. The ration was packed by Armour and Co., and contained ½ lb. of bread and meat product, ¾ oz. salt, 1 gram of pepper, and three 1-oz. chocolate bars.

For the veterans who have forgotten (or would like to), here are the different ways suggested for preparing the bread and meat component: (1) Eat dry, (2) Stir into cold water, (3) Boil as a soup, (4) Make into thick porridge, hot or cold. Delicious!

Country Notebook

Macdonald College

This week, I must start off patching last week's Notebook. Sandra MacFarlane, a member of the Howick 4-H Club, appears to have made the highest individual score in the Provincial Judging Competition at Quebec City. Certainly, she brought home a bronze trophy. Sorry, Sandra. We are still trying to get a full report of that event. Incidentally, Sandra is a second-year student at Macdonald College in the B.Ed. course.

Kenny Roy did a noble job of judging at the Howick Club's Achievement Day. In the Pee-Wee class, the four-to-twelve-year-olds show their older brother's or sister's calf. After long and careful consideration, Kenny lined them up in order of merit. It was just coincidence of course that the line came out in order of size also, with the smallest in first place.

Here is another piece of patching. Last week, I extolled once again the virtues of corn, predicting in a few years endless fields of corn. Next day I drove to Ormstown to find corn harvesting machinery bogged down in a sea of mud and corn a fighting word. The canning company, I hear, had to leave several hundred acres of contract sweet corn in the field — at the growers' loss. And that, in the short view, doesn't increase the popularity of corn.

But some fields were being cut without trouble. Some of these had naturally good drainage; others had been tiled.

I was talking to one of the Howick men about the effect of tile drains. He noted that the tiled fields had stood up to the June drought better than the others. He thought that the earlier planting and lower water table in the spring had given the roots a chance to go down deeper.

He commented, too, that those who had planted the early varieties weren't so worried. If the worse came to the worst, and they couldn't get the corn off as silage, they had an alternative — it could be harvested as grain corn after the ground was frozen.

Fast-buck salesmen peddling tax auditing services are still at it, so I hear. Periodically these fly-by-nighters descend on an area offering "income tax services" for $75 or $85.

We just about got caught once ourselves. These two characters who drove up our lane, well-dressed and driving a good car, gave the impression that they were working with the government's Income Tax Division. Their job was to get the farmer's books in shape ready for the inspector who would be following in a day or two.

Of course, there would be a charge — but it would be small compared with the tax I would pay if the inspector lost patience with my shoe-box accounting.

They looked and sounded genuine, and I agreed to let them start on my books next morning. But a doubt kept tapping me on the shoulder, and I dropped the hint that I would be phoning a friend that evening who worked in the Income Tax office. We never saw these "auditors" again.

A neighbor did fall for it. He paid $75 for a three-year accounting service contract. A set of ruled account books was all he ever got out of it.

Word has just come in at the time of writing of the prices established at the first Northern Feeder Sale of the season at Wiarton, Ontario. A pen of 500 lb. calves brought top price at $28.00 cwt. Good heavier steers were in demand. One pen which averaging 650 pounds brought $24.80 cwt. Others scaled down from that.

Seven feeder sales in Quebec and Ontario are scheduled before the middle of October. The one at Coaticook, south of Sherbrooke, is on October 1st. The sale at La Sarre, in Abitibi West, is on October 13th. It's their first, so we will be wishing them luck.

Federal programs to combat brucellosis

Ottawa — Preliminary testing of Canada's 12 million cattle for brucellosis will be completed early next year and the project centres attention on two screening programs aimed at providing an effective and continuing check on the disease.

The Brucellosis Ring Testing (for dairy cattle) and Market Cattle Testing programs were introduced by CDA's Health of Animals Branch to provide speedy detection of new outbreaks of brucellosis in areas which had been certified after the initial testing and removal of infected animals.

In addition to their role in detecting infection, the programs are designed to provide data and information needed to recertify the areas, eliminating the necessity of visiting large numbers of farm premises to collect blood samples.

Under the BRT program, samples of milk and cream from each producer are collected at all dairies, creameries and cheese factories in an area and tested for signs of brucellosis. This is done at least three times a year.

If a test indicates suspicion of infection, the producer's herd is blood tested and, if brucellosis is diagnosed, eradication measures are undertaken. Negative ring tests are credited to the herd and area of origin.

In the MCT program, cows four years of age or older and being shipped for slaughter are identified by a numbered back tag. At the packing plant, a blood sample is taken from each of the tagged animals and tested. If a suspicious sample is uncovered, the herd from which the animal came is tested.

Negative test results, as in the BRT program, are credited to the herd and area of origin.

For the dairy farmer and beef cattleman alike, the programs spell continued assurance that, should infection somehow be introduced into his herd, it can be detected speedily and eliminated before it has a chance to spread.

The Brucellosis Ring Test program provides speedy detection of new outbreaks of brucellosis in dairy cattle. Here Dr. R. R. Miller, a Canada Department of Agriculture veterinarian, takes a sample of milk for testing.

TROUBLE IN ENGLAND

The socialists have now been in power for over nine months in England, and the old story has started again — austerity and crisis followed by crisis.

Mr. Wilson followed a bumbling Conservative government rocked by a morality scandal. Had he had the good sense to merely govern, with honesty, he might have kept his party in power for many years.

Instead, he was hell-bent on socializing the country, and wherever socialism is attempted, it fails to produce.

Even the Mineworkers' Union has grown critical. Election promises regarding the level of coal production have not been kept.

The NUR has also censured the government, and one of the charges hurled in their debate was that the socialists had "led us up the garden path to gain our votes." Those who listened to the socialist election promises will remember that the garden path was wide indeed and strewn with promises, including the suggestion that young home owners should vote Labor in anticipation of 3 per cent mortgages!

Savings in England are dropping. The rapid rise in prices has made the people wonder whether there is wisdom in saving. Some prefer to buy quickly before still further taxes are put on. These taxes, leading to price increases, destroy confidence. It was lack of confidence which swept the socialists out of power before, and will do so again. Lack of confidence comes from shortages and constantly rising prices.

It's reported that consumption of beef and veal fell by 13 per cent in the first quarter of this year and lamb by 7 per cent, while total meat consumption was down by 5 per cent. Scarcely the Utopia the socialists had pictured!

It is ironic that here in Canada we are so often tempted to adopt socialist schemes which could lead us into the very same difficulties.

Sheep assistance program extended

Ottawa — Federal assistance in the cost of transporting sheep for breeding purposes is being continued for another three years, Agriculture Minister Harry Hays announced recently.

A five-year federal-provincial program was introduced in 1960 to provide assistance in the movement of commercial ewes and ewe lambs to sheep-deficient areas for breeding purposes. The program applied to the transport of sheep within western Canada, from western to eastern Canada, and from Quebec to the Atlantic provinces and Ontario.

The program is being continued unchanged, Mr. Hays said. The federal government continues to contribute up to 50 per cent of the transportation costs, with its share matching that of a participating province.

Shipments qualifying for assistance must meet four requirements: the sheep must be purchased by actual producers for breeding purposes; selection of animals must be approved by the provincial Department of Agriculture; there must be at least 100 ewes or ewe lambs in any one shipment, and the shipping distance must not be less than 200 miles by the shortest route.

By March 31 of this year, 26,787 ewes and ewe lambs had been moved under the program designed to stimulate the Canadian sheep industry. The extended program will run to March 31, 1968.

Fire burns community's pay cheques

"Fire swept a portion of the main street section of one of our towns. Not only were the 42 employees made jobless, but the loss of the buildings and contents had a serious effect on the income of the town."

This terse remark in the annual report of the Fire Commissioner of a Canadian province is illustrative: "Good job, bad fire . . . people out of work."

A Plant Folds

If the factory is the only one in town, every citizen, directly or indirectly, suffers if it permanently folds.

Look at the history of a factory fire in a Canadian community of 15,000. Workers thrown out numbered 350. A few (mostly women) were absorbed elsewhere, as the management pondered re-building and decided to go ahead though it would take at least a year. In that time some were re-located, even if it meant daily travel of 80 miles. For the rest, it was a painful experience, living on the avails of unemployment insurance, digging into savings, trying to learn new job skills and, always, the worry of home responsibility and a whole way of life uprooted. For a handful well into the prime the only way out was to accept management's offer of early retirement pension and call it quits.

Not the Least of Disasters

The morale factor of jobs suddenly lost by fire, says a leading labor authority, is not the least of fire's disasters, perhaps because the situation seems so meaningless.

The plant we are talking about is now back in business. But with new machinery, automated production, the plant employs 200, not 350.

Fire is a job robber.

Examples of fire in restaurants and industries

Grease fires in the ducts over restaurant stoves frequently command headlines. In one fire, the panic-stricken cook emptied a four-gallon jug of milk on the flame. "Nothing happened," she sobbed.

Lady, save your milk. Milk, like water, won't put out a grease fire, rather will only spread it.

Automatic sprinklers are excellent fire protection but in a $200,000 chopping mill blaze an explosion disconnected the sprinkler system on the top floor, cascading the lower floors with water, leaving fire free to start its work at the top. The sprinkler system should not be fault found here.

Peanuts, 70,000 pounds of them, were roasted in a west coast warehouse fire, the blinding acrid smoke sending nearby residents to hospital with asthma attacks. Even fire-fighters with respirators needed oxygen treatment to carry on their four-hour battle, with jack hammers smashing holes in the thick cement roof to let the fumes escape.

Fumes cause panic and death in high-rise homes, business buildings

It's smoke and deadly gases, if not actual flame, that usually threaten personal safety in fire in a "high rise" building, office or apartment, ultra modern or "modernized".

The population of such a building can equal that of a town, even a small city, with upper floors far beyond reach of the highest fire department rescue ladders.

Evacuation: 30 Minutes

Consider recent episodes:

— Three died in a Canadian hotel fire. Twenty-two perished in a southern hostelry.

— It took half an hour to evacuate 3,000 people from a 36-storey building smoke-engulfed from a duct fire that itself did not reach above the fourth floor.

— The more solid the outside wall enclosure, the more a building becomes a veritable vertical chimney. Smoke test in a Paris 20-storey tower-type apartment showed dense fumes from a small fire were intolerable on the 12th floor within ten minutes.

Something to Know

If you work or live in such a building, know the fire alarm signal and drill. Know the exit plan.

If there's a small blaze on your floor, telephone the fire department directly.

In one recent office building fire, it was 20 minutes before anybody called the fire fighters.

In clothng fires, be a rug-roller

Clothing fires are a terrifying personal experience.

Roll the victim in a rug or anything that will help smother the flames.

If you are the victim, try to remember not to rush to the door. The outside air will fan the flames.

A cook stove flare-up is a case in point. Smother the pan. The writer, once frying over-wet potatoes, was lucky to get the pan into the warming oven, slamming the door to contain the sizzling outburst.

When the moment of panic was over, it brought a good cry and a thankful one. Her story could have had quite different ending.

Your nose gives clue to danger

If you cook with electricity, the blowing of the fuse is your safety signal.

With gas, your nose gives warning of a leak. Whether natural or manufactured gas, a distinctive odor is deliberately introduced for your protection. The natural gas odor is sweet and sickly, even suggestive of a skunk. Manufactured gas may smell to high heaven, like rotten cabbage. You may never enjoy such rare fragrance! But, if you do, open the windows, get out, and call aid. Don't strike a match or switch a light.

FIRE'S TRAGIC HOURS

Most home fires taking three or more lives occur between 9 p.m. and 9 a.m., fire records show.

83 Pounds of dynamite

Ever think of a simple pouring funnel as a deadly fire agent? Used to help refuel a hot tractor or power lawnmower, it can be just that. Picture the operator putting the funnel into the gas tank and starting to pour the fuel. Perhaps it's been a hot day, anyway it's pleasant to rest up after man-handling the machine. How blue the sky, how graceful the birds! Suddenly the gas reaches the tank top and spills over onto the hot motor. It vaporizes, sparks. Each gallon of gas explodes like 83 pounds of dynamite — says an explosives expert.

Act fast, call Fire Department

If fire occurs in your plant, factory or business establishment, sound an immediate alarm. Call the Fire Department. Don't take it for granted that somebody has acted.

How you react in emergency can mean your job. If the place is destroyed, nobody will be working there tomorrow. Maybe never.

In a recent Canadian business office fire, it was 20 minutes before help was called.

Safe Evacuation

It takes only a few minutes for a minor fire to become a big one. Analysis of 1964 large-loss fires in North America shows that discovery was prompt in only a third of the outbreaks.

Safe evacuation of people depends, too, on early warning. It took 30 minutes to get out 3,000 workers in a Canadian sky-scraper fire.

Right Extinguishers

Water is still the best way to put out most fires, and automatic sprinkler protection is a great asset to a building. But remember that water is useless in, say, an oil fire. Water only spreads the burning oil. There is a correct portable extinguisher to use on various kinds of fires; consult your fire chief.

'We left them alone only a few minutes'

For a compassionate community there is no sadder news than the death by fire of children in the home.

And the shadow deepens when the headlines read: "We left them alone only a few minutes. ."

For the stricken family, the shadow of its wanton neglect will last a lifetime.

Fire is no accident. Fires are caused by stupid, unthinking carelessness.

Criminal Code of Canada

To parents and guardians of the young, let it be known that, besides various provincial laws, the Criminal Code of Canada (section 189) reads:

"Everybody who unlawfully abandons or exposes a child who is under the age of 10 years, so that its life is or is likely to be endangered or its health is or is likely to be permanently injured, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for two years."

People have a duty to their children, to the community and to themselves to see that youngsters are properly looked after.

Beware butts or cigarettes in upholstery

An upholstered chair may well illustrate the potentialities of fire and carbon monoxide, a killer gas. Let the smouldering smoke get behind the cushion, go upstairs to turn into bed, and there is a good chance that within two or three hours you and others in the place may pass permanently to Kingdom Come, not even to be touched by flames. The combustion in the chair strips the air of its properties of life, turns it into lethal fumes, which heat and rise.

Good idea after the party's over and the guests have left: Run your hand behind the cushions, or throw them onto the floor. It's just another good time to think about the possibility of fire.

Fires in clothing; experts study fabric flammability

Ladies, do you know that if you are dressed in a cotton slip and a nylon dress, you will have less chance of a severe burn by fire than if you are dressed in a nylon slip and cotton dress?

Or that a flared skirt will spread fire quicker than a suit of the same material?

The slip-dress explanation, by Canadian fire scientists, is that cotton is more flammable than nylon (or other man-made fibres), therefore will ignite faster. The man-made fibres, on the other hand, will cause deeper and more severe burns once a melting point is reached.

The flared skirt hazard has been proved in experiments. An easily comprehended illustration is that of a square dancer swirling near a hot stove, wearing not a sheath but a crinoline!

However, ladies, here's an interesting point: more men than women died in the ten-year period 1954-63 due to accidental ignition of clothing. But women and children grouped together, do exceed the masculine record, as shown by causes:

1,000 HOMES A WEEK

Every week across Canada fire strikes at more than 1,000 homes, turning a family sanctuary into a shapeless ruin. Last year such fires cost hundreds of lives throughout the nation.

Check YOUR home regularly for fire hazards, or ask the Fire Department to look things over for you. Fire prevention is simple . . . and it's part of good citizenship.

For less than a dime — why gamble with fire?

An over-fused electric circuit invites fire in the home. And a national survey shows that hundreds of thousands of Canadian dwellings may have the wrong fuse (costing less than a dime) in a socket.

In a typical municipality of 25,000, fire investigators found that only 15% of the homes visited were properly fused.

Fire Hazard

What is over-fusing? It's when you use a 20, 25 or 30 ampere socket fuse in an ordinary branch household circuit.

Why can such fuses provide a fire hazard? Because they engender a sense of false security. They do not "blow" when the "load" is dangerously increased. The wiring heats. Heat plus fuel and oxygen means fire. If the wiring is concealed, fire may start in the wall.

Flash Fires

"It happened in a flash, like a bolt from the blue." Nothing can be more terrifying than a "flash fire" in the home, especially since it usually strikes in the most innocent way.

In a few minutes, it may be out of controll, perhaps tragically.

Even Pennies!

Says the Fire Chief of a prairie community with 25,000 homes: "In most of the older homes where we found over-loaded circuits, practically all were using 30 amp. fuses, and even pennies and tinfoil behind the fuses!"

Check with your fire chief, the utility, an electrician or even a knowledgeable neighbor to make sure you have the proper fuses in your sockets. For under a dime, why gamble with fire?

Canadian fire loss proving more costly

596 Death toll, $147,500,000 wasted in one year's grim record of fire

Fires that devastate their home are proving more costly to Canadians than ever before. That glaring fact is revealed in the 1964 assessment of fire damage in Canada. Today the average cost of a household fire is $800. Ten years ago it was $400. Industry, too, is finding fires more expensive.

Last year an estimated $147,500,000 all in property went up in smoke in 77,000 reported fires — or about $1,918 a fire. In 1963, the cost of 83,207 fires was $154,051,629 — or $1,850 a fire.

More Children Die

Despite Canada's population growth, the fire death rate remains fairly constant, although last year there was an increase of 43 deaths. The record shows 596 fatalities in 1964, compared with 553 in 1963. Once again, children lead with 250 victims, followed by 243 men and 103 women. Worst year was 1957, with 638 deaths.

Excluding forest and federal government fires, fire waste per capita population is reckoned at $7.67 in 1964 and $8.15 in 1963.

Nobody Escapes

Only direct costs enter into the fire waste assessment of $147 millions. Taking into account the indirect economic factors — including industrial production and job disruption — the total burden of a year of fire would be $750,000,000, fire authorities say. This works out to a $38.99 cost for every man, woman and child in a country of 19,235,900 population.

Nobody, the taxpayer least of all, escapes the responsibility of fire — on the job and in the home.

"ALL I DID WAS SNEAK A SMOKE!"

A potential tragedy

This child inquisitively reaches for a box of matches left on the table close to her playpen — a situation fraught with grim possibilities. No caution should be overlooked, to remove potential hazards of this nature from home and loved ones.

Fire facts for readers

Firecrackers and picnic bonfires are wonderful attractions for the young of heart. But both entail dangers that stand thinking about.

Firecrackers are no longer something for small children to play with. Displays should be strictly supervised and in any case subject to local ordinance.

As for bonfires on the family outing, let there be adult ideas about the manner of start and stop. The bonfire out of hand can become a tragedy.

Home, safe home. . . Be it ever so humble there's no place like home, a fire-safe home . . . a home which uses proper size electrical fuses, which has plenty of large ash trays around for smokers, which keeps its heating equipment in good order and which is free of disorderly trash and rubbish. It's a good home for Canadians.

"It happened in a flash, like a bolt from the blue." Nothing can be more terrifying than a "flash fire" in the home, especially since it usually strikes in the most innocent way.

Hold an unlit match level with, and an inch away from a candle flame. The match doesn't light. But hold the same match four inches directly above the candle flame and the match ignites. Heat rises. And so do the deadly combustion gases. Now you know why one of the fire fighter's first jobs at a burning building is to chop a hole in the roof. It's to let the superheated gases out.

Good reasons for fire prevention campaign

A reduction in the spiralling losses of property and human life by fire is the goal of a public education campaign against fire carelessness in Canada, a country with one of the world's worst loss rates. It is conducted by the Joint Committee of the Association of Canadian Fire Marshals and Fire Commissioners and the Canadian Association of Fire Chiefs. Primary objective: the promotion of Fire Prevention Week (in reality, every week) in support of safety drives and inspection programs. Directors and officers serve without compensation. The campaign is financed by grants and subsidies from public and private sources. The effort is endorsed by all levels of government, and generously assisted by editors, broadcasters and poster media.

The Association of Canadian Fire Marshals and Fire Commissioners comprises the Fire Marshals and Fire Commissioners of the 10 provinces and the Northwest Territories as well as the Dominion Fire Commissioner, and the Fire Marshals of the Canadian Forces. The strength of the Canadian Association of Fire Chiefs is drawn from municipal and industrial Fire Chiefs from coast to coast.

National code recommended for municipalities

Every municipality wishing to improve its public fire protection can profit by examination of a hard-cover, 182-page book titled National Fire Code of Canada 1963.

Published by the Associate Committee on National Fire codes, National Research Council of Canada, it provides the basis of a model fire prevention by-law — a blueprint for greater community safety. For a copy, apply to Publications Section, National Research Council of Canada, Ottawa 7. The price is $1.50.

Already the book's circulation is worldwide. A second edition is in prospect. For its preparation, the committee welcomes comments from past subscribers.

Firebugs are pocket pickers

Firebugs — a troublesome and expensive breed, whether they be souls who smoke thoughtlessly or carelessly handle welding torches — on the job or in the home.

Firebugs are pocket pickers, your pocket and your neighbor's too. At the annual rate of $38.99 (including indirect losses) for every living person in Canada.

Share your knowledge of fire prevention with your neighbor.

Electric static can be hazard

Even static (inert) electricity is a dreaded fire cause, especially in hospitals or wherever there's flammable gas. While someone has figured that it would take 1,763,550,625 strokes of a cat's back to light a 50-watt light bulb for an hour, a single electrostatic spark, produced by rubbing a comb through the hair, is sufficient to blow up the place. For this reason even celebrated surgeons are discouraged from wearing woollen trousers in hospital operating rooms.

Grass fire loss "ain't hay"

Farm communities are discovering that grass fire losses "ain't hay".

In one rural district last year it cost $30,000 to fight grass fires.

For a rural community — citizen and volunteer fire-fighter alike — a grass fire can flare up into a mutual nightmare, devastating crops, buildings and precious parklands. People have been known also to collapse from heart strain in their efforts to tame a wildcat grass fire with brooms, shovels and wet sacks.

Picnickers and motorists carelessly tossing away matches to light their cigarettes or camp fires are urged to beware. Remember, grass fire losses "ain't hay" either in dollars or in public distress.

Poured fuel oil to hasten wood fire, home destroyed and family perished

A two-storey wood-frame dwelling in Quebec Province two years ago was occupied by 12 children and their parents. At about 4.30 a.m., one of the older boys got up to light a fire in the wood-burning stove in the kitchen, as was his custom. He stoked the stove with wood, poured fuel oil over it to hasten ignition, and lit the fire. He then went back to bed. At about 5 a.m. the boy smelled a strong odor of smoke and awoke his father, who went downstairs and found the kitchen wall behind the stove ablaze. The father pumped a pail of water and threw it on the flames, without noticeable effect. The mother and two sons came downstairs to help fight the fire, but the intense heat and smoke soon drove the parents and two boys out of the house.

There was no fire department in the village. The nearest was some 10 miles away. The boys went to get help, while the father got a ladder to attempt to rescue his other children from upstairs windows. Meanwhile, the mother, in her panic, ran back into the house to try to save her children. Her body was found just a few feet inside the door. The ten children who perished apparently died in their sleep. Their ages were from two months to 14 years.

Babysitter rule — write it down

Fire Protection ground rules for parent and babysitter:

— Sitter has sense of responsibility, likes children, preferably lives in neighborhood.

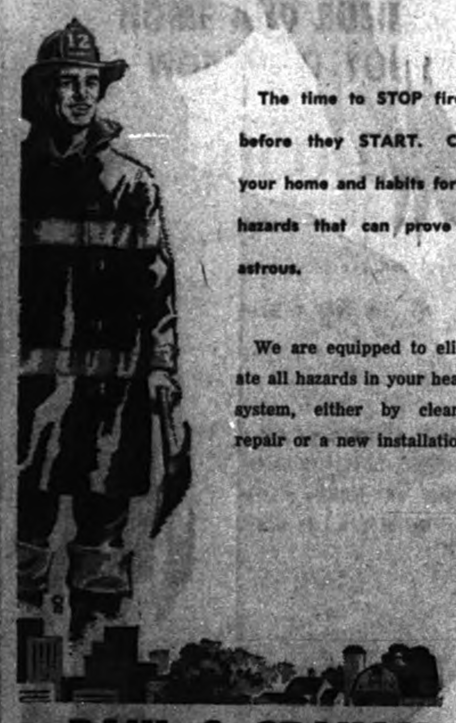
— Instructions in writing: How to reach you. Fire department number. Exit locations. Furnace or stove operation. Flashlight handy in power failure.

— If there's a fire, get the kids out. Don't wait to dress them. Call for help. Say exactly where you are. If you can, turn on the front lights to attract attention. Don't re-enter the place.

Fire losses go up — up

Fires are becoming more expensive. Ten years ago the average loss of a household fire was $400. Now it is $800. And a fire which a quarter-century ago burned up a family corner grocery store at a loss of thousands, today has its counterpart in a million-dollar supermart conflagration, perhaps wiping out an entire shopping plaza.

WHAT'S YOUR FAMILY, HOME AND BUSINESS WORTH TO YOU?



The time to STOP fires is before they START. Check your home and habits for fire hazards that can prove disastrous.

We are equipped to eliminate all hazards in your heating system, either by cleaning, repair or a new installation.

The countryside's September glory; gardens, homes, interesting people

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

Here we are at the end of September, having survived a heat wave. Were we ever grateful to be back at Sunnyacres, to lie in bed without the roar of traffic, to type in the porch in a kind of golden glow caused by the sun shining through the yellow leaves. The special tree behind the grey garage is flaunting its colors, green, beige, scarlet. Never did human artist do so well. By the way, the coloring and fall of the leaves has nothing to do with frost, or even with dryness. It is simply that the new buds forming for spring, push forward with their hard tissues, and literally starve the leaves of their green chlorophyl.

Besides being the time to admire Nature's coloring, September is the season to plant one's bulbs, to gather mushrooms, and to put the gardens to bed for the long winter sleep. It is somehow very satisfying to dig a long trench and pop in the bulbs, then cover them, and stomp down the earth. Just for good measure yesterday, we put a dribble of wood ashes into the trench and a thin layer of manure on the top, once it was closed in. Some books say no manure, some say definitely manure. So I compromise and put just a touch on top. It is twelve years since the bulbs were moved, so it is high time it were done. I estimate there must be at least a thousand bulbs.

As to mushrooms, this is a great year for them. Even I, who am browned off with talk of mushrooms, am moved to wonder by the variety of the fungi, and their range of colors. The daughter brought home an Amanita Muscaria (yellow-toadstool to you) whose cap had a twelve-inch diameter. A veritable giant in the Amanita family. Which reminds me of a tale told me by a friend living in Mille Isles, in one of those old houses of which I am always talking. As a child, she was accustomed to see her mother gather amanitas, cover them with salt, add water, and leave all night. In the morning, the brine was discarded, the mushrooms rinsed, boiled up, and then they all had a feast. Her mother earnestly said that the soaking routine was to "take out the poison". Since these mushrooms are listed as poisonous in most books, methinks her admonition was wise. Years later our friend, along with three companions, gathered a mess of amanitas, salted them and left them overnight. It the morning, she rinsed them off, and boiled them up. You will note she had left out one step in the preparation. At meal time, one girl was immediately sick out the back door. One had no reaction at all, and the other two had the classic hallucinations one can find described in any good book on the care and eating of mushrooms. Of the other two, one saw a forest of ferns on the kitchen floor, and kept begging her friends not to walk on them. To the fourth girl, everything seemed to advance and recede. These symptoms went on for two days. To end the mushroom lecture — all puff-balls, provided they are firm and white inside, are edible. Edible? They are downright delicious!

Before we leave our fascinating friend with her experiments, let me tell you that she and another schoolgirl once walked eighteen miles home in mid-winter, from Lachute. By the route they followed, she estimates this at eighteen miles. It took them eight hours. They arrived home long after dark, worn out, one toe frozen, but triumphant. I often think of these two when the yellow school buses roll past our door bearing children to the wilds of the suburbs. . . . As someone exclaimed to me recently, "You do know such interesting people."

The mushroom friend had a tea-party at the end of August at her delightful home which she has restored to its original Victorian and late Edwardian comfort. The only anachronisms are the bathroom and the electricity. To be at this lovely home is a pleasant experience. Upstairs are wonderful quilts on four-poster beds; there is the appropriate chamber crockery; solid old bureaus and washstands sit heavily in their places, the hall window is a dormer, and a photograph of the former owner graces a little table beneath it. Downstairs, the stove is the same one that warmed our friend after her classic walk; there are comfortable chairs and sofas. Everything bespeaks comfort and relaxation.

We saw another old house in August. This one now lies in the confines of the Manitou Club. About thirty years ago this house had a major renovation, so that one now finds hardwood floors and a large stone fireplace gracing the living room. Except for these, the owner assures me it is much as she remembers it as a girl. Books and some fine charcoal drawings on the walls attest to the tastes of the owners. This house is just over the hundred years in age.

As you can read, the writer had an enjoyable August, but early September is something again. It is always a shock to go back to work, that is, to getting meals and doing laundry. No, we do not starve, nor yet go dirty, during the summer. The first need is supplied by the local hotel, and the second by the complacent Chinese. After a while, we begin to realize that a woman's place is in the kitchen, and become resigned. Not really the kitchen; in our case, the basement claims a good share of our time. During the recent heat, we were glad to take refuge there.

Now, as well as taking up the domestic threads, we must gird our loins (what a horrible mixture of metaphors!) for the hunting season. Post your lands, lads and lassies. It does not necessarily keep off hunters, but it does give one a case if a poacher is caught. One good thing has come of the unbridled shooting we endured for two years after the last provincial election — there is little game left hereabouts. One presumes this yen to shoot anything that moves is a hangover of the pioneer time. Then trees and animals were enemies, the one to be cut down, the other shot. It will be a generation before the current educational revolution in the French schools makes the general public aware of the words, Conservation, and Reverence for Life. We have come a long way from the time when wild animals lurked in every bush, ready to do violence. Now it is man who lurks and wreaks havoc. So, friends, stand to your boundaries once more. . .

Saw a funny bit the other day, a parody by an unlettered man on Shakespeare's "Once more unto the breach, dear friends." His rendition: "Put on your britches again."

(Reprinted by request)

The leaves are softly falling
Upon the forest floor.
Only a few are down as yet,
But each day more and more.
The leaves that fell in bygone days
Now feed the living trees,
And they in turn will shed their leaves
With every autumn breeze.

— And so it is with human lives:
When people in their prime
Look after those of tender years
Until they reach a time,
When they in turn become mature
With young ones of their own —
The old die off as years slip by —
Those old friends we have known.
The plants that flourished in the fields
Now sere and withered lie.

Their seeds are cast, and in the Spring
New plants will multiply.
There's wisdom in all
Nature's ways,
Perpetuating lives —
We in our home, birds in their nests
And bees within their hives.

'Twas always thus in Nature's Book.
The old, before they're gone
Will pass the torch to younger hands
So they can carry on.
No matter where you look you'll see
Old age give way to youth.
And that's the way it ought to be,
It's tough, but it's the truth!

C.I.P. deeded land at St. Jovite for modern regional school complex

As a tribute to the youth of Canada, Canadian International Paper Company has donated a 230,000-square-foot lot of land in St. Jovite, Que., for the construction of a modern educational complex.

The formal presentation is retold in the current issue of C.I.P. News. . .

The property is the site of the projected "Cité des Etudiants Monseigneur Mercure" and forms part of a regional campus that will eventually cover more than 620,000 square feet. Present plans call for the construction of a school and several other buildings for secondary schooling purposes to serve an extensive area in the Laurentians.

"La Cité des Etudiants" is named for Msgr. Rodolphe Mercure to honor his work on behalf of youth and education during his many years as parish priest of St. Jovite.

L. G. Bastin, C.I.P.'s manager of woodlands operations, officially presented the deeds to Dr. R. N. Dupré, chairman of the St. Jovite School Board. The campus will later be turned over to the newly-formed Laurentian Regional School Board.

Msgr. André Ouellette, Bishop of Mont Laurier, officiated at ceremonies marking the handing over of the property by C.I.P. Over 1,000 guests attended the day-long function, which was organized by Grenville Woods Division. After blessing the area, Msgr. Ouellette planted a stake to show the limits of the lot. Denis Hardy, M.P.P. for Terrebonne County, was official government representative. Both Msgr. Ouellette and Mr. Hardy expressed their appreciation for the C.I.P. land grant and stressed the importance of industry participation in education.

Mr. Bastin outlined the economic impact of the forest as a great natural resource. "But we at C.I.P. do not consider the forest as the leading resource the nation has to offer — that honor belongs to the youth of our country," he stated. He pointed out that the company has been active for several years in youth matters in the Laurentian area, notably through the setting up of facilities at the Harrington Forest Farm for 4-H Club, Scout and Guide leadership training, and also through the sponsoring of the Arundel School Tree Farm, for which the company also granted the land.

After the official ceremonies, more than 1,000 school children and their parents were guests of Grenville Woods Division manager Manny Wilson at a wieners-and-beans lunch in the St. Jovite municipal park. Pupils at the St. Jovite schools put on an exhibition of arts and crafts for the public.

Land Donated for Liberty

C.I.P.'s Maniwaki Woods Division has participated in a major way towards the success of Maniwaki's 1967 project — the construction of a Centennial Library. The division has deeded a land area of 150 by 120 feet to the municipality on condition that the library is built on the site.

Major Donald Britt said that the building, which is also expected to house meeting rooms, will be financed by a Provincial Government donation in connection with Centennial celebrations.

Division resident manager R. H. Montgomery handed over the deeds to the mayor in a recent ceremony.
