Diefenbaker's strenuous day sparks campaign for candidate

Quick tour through constituency

A chill hour-long wait in the Brownsburg Arena last Tuesday evening, became a warm reception from the crowd of 500 or 600 people when John Diefenbaker arrived eventually on the scene. The Opposition leader, concluding a day-long staccato tour of populous spots in Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes, spoke for three quarters of an hour in a campaign speech punctuated by frequent applause.

With exception of a few words in French at the outset of his speech — in which he stated he could not conceive of a Canada without Quebec, nor a Quebec without Canada — he spoke in English. Smiling and in fine fettle, he was a master of oratory, unveiling his sattire at his Liberal adversaries.

Visits Market on Itinerary

It was the end of a long day, which has been graphically reported and photographically recorded in the Montreal press. Setting out from Montreal, he was accompanied by Mrs. Diefenbaker and escorted by his official candidate, Roger Regimbal, well and favorably known in Lachute where he resides.

First stop on the tour was a breakfast-time visit at St. Eustache to Mme Paul Sauvé, widow of the late National Union Quebec premier. Continuing northward, he was pleasantly surprised by an impromptu welcome at Morin Heights, where a score of people, headed by Morin Heights Mayor George Watchorn, greeted him and gave him three cheers.

At a scheduled reception in St. Adolphe, he was also welcomed by a good crowd, then proceeded to Harrington, where he was met at the school by a good turnout of people, led by a Scottish piper. Jollying with the school children and intermingling with the adults, he stayed 20 minutes in the community.

Escorted by Mr. Regimbal he then proceeded to the Bigras restaurant at Cote St. Louis for lunch, and shook hands with a hundred or so enthusiastic people.

Here in Lachute, he presented 25-year service pins to employees at the Dominion Ayers mill and also visited the J. C. Wilson Company paper plant.

From this point he was taken to the exhibition grounds, and was jointly received by representatives of the County Council and the Argenteuil Agricultural Society. At the grounds he appeared to thoroughly enjoy the experience — for this was market day. Hundreds of people swarmed around him. One or two High School students accosted him with some difficult questions. Was it true he had toured the Maritimes with the Union Jack on his car? asked one. Mr. Diefenbaker said he didn't have his car with him. At St. John's, Nfld., where Union Jacks had adorned the car, the decorations had been arranged in advance.

Another asked about Confederation. Mr. Diefenbaker said he could not envisage a Quebec without Canada, nor a Canada without Quebec.

A young lady queried if bilingualism could be effective all across Canada. "That's a pretty big subject for one question," replied Mr. Diefenbaker. Then he asked her if she spoke French. "Don't you think you should start bilingualism here yourself?" he suggested.

But these incidents could not detract from his elation at the crowd, its friendliness, and its promise of support.

Two elderly ladies, who had followed Mr. Diefenbaker's entourage several hundred yards through the market, finally caught up with him. "Hope to see you back again", one of them shouted to Mr. Diefenbaker. "Well," he answered, "it's looking better all the time."

Received at Legion Memorial Hall

At the Legion Hall in Lachute, Mr. Diefenbaker was honored guest at an informal reception, following his visit to the market. Jos. Sewell, the president of Branch 70, was on hand with officers of the branch, members and their wives, to extend a cordial welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Diefenbaker in a brief interlude before the evening's activities.

Throughout the riding, Mr. Diefenbaker drew a warm welcome, particularly from farm people. Reviewing their strenuous day, the visitors and Mr. Regimbal, the candidate, appeared well pleased with the friendliness which greeted them in all quarters.

Climax in rally Tuesday night at Brownsburg

At the rally in Brownsburg Arena last Tuesday evening — fortified against the cool, damp atmosphere with a sweater worn under his coat — Tory leader John Diefenbaker asked what the Liberals had done, in their 22 years at Ottawa, to improve French-English relations.

He had been characterized as an enemy of French-language Canadians; but this he vigorously denied. In the Conservative regimes, all Canadians were equal in the House of Commons. "We established a bilingual government, and today, if a member can express himself in his own tongue and be understood, it is thanks to my government, which introduced the simultaneous translation system. . . And they call me an enemy of French-Canadians! Who gave this country a French-speaking governor-general? — It was my government. Who introduced bilingual cheques? . . Compare this with what little the Liberals have done. We have appointed more French-Canadians to responsible

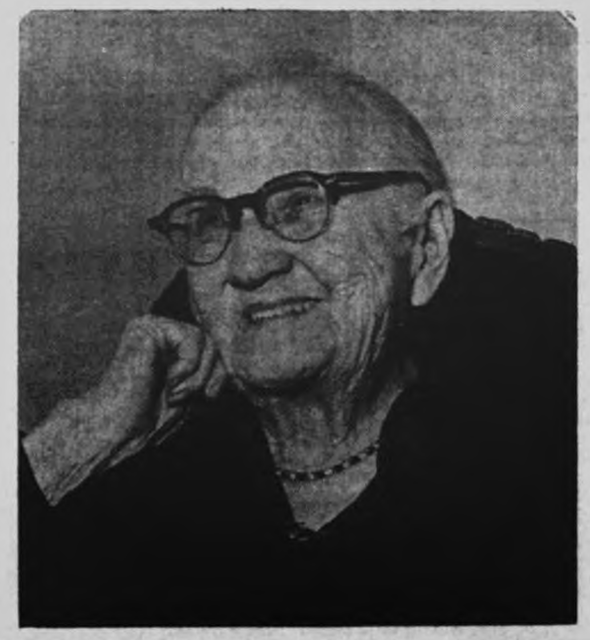
Fines for offences Unempl. Insurance regulations

At sessions of the peace in St. Jerome, Judge Omer Côté imposed a fine of $225 plus costs, or one month in jail, against an employer at Pointe Calumet for an infraction of Unemployment Insurance regulations. Specifically, the accused failed to return the contribution books of employees who had left his employ, to the Unemployment Insurance office at Ste. Therese.

Another employer at Grenville was fined $100 and costs for negligence in the matter of keeping insurance stamp books and relevant information on employee payroll, also for having neglected to return books of former employees to the local office.



Died at 105 years of age

Mme Alfred Deslauriers (Célina Gagnon), a venerable Lachute resident, died last Friday at the age of 105 years and six months. Predeceased by her first husband, Evariste Desrosiers, and by her second husband, Alfred Deslauriers, she is survived by one son and two daughters-in-law, M. and Mme Lionel Desrosiers and Mme Ernest Deslauriers; also by a daughter, Mme Ferdinand Desjardins, with whom she has spent her latter years. She leaves 42 grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Funeral rites were held Monday morning at the St. Julien Parish Church.

Accident claim paid 8½ years after; Union believes a precedent this area

Grenville — Oscar Duval, a member of Local 6213, United Steelworkers of America, employed at the Marelan plant of Canadian Refractories Ltd., recently received cheques totalling $853.41 for an injury he received in 1957 and which, due to some oversight, was not reported to the Quebec Workmen's Compensation Commission at that time.

This case was taken up by the Union's Compensation Committee in 1964, when a request was made to the Commission to recognize this case, even though it was six and a half years past the maximum time during which a claim should be made.

In 1958, as a result of this injury, Mr. Duval had an operation which, along with his lost time, was paid for by the Union Insurance, Occidental Life, to the amount of $370.

When this claim was recognized, then settled, the insurance company was reimbursed for the total amount it had paid out.

After an exchange of 20 letters, and due to the co-operation of the Quebec Workmen's Compensation Commission, this case is now settled.

This is the second case which, due to the Steelworkers' assistance and the co-operation of the Compensation Commission, this Local has had settled long past the maximum claim time.

Teachers told aims of proposed Board of Professional Standards

The Argenteuil Teachers' Association held its first meeting of the year at Morin Heights Intermediate School on Thursday, September 23. Mr. Harry McCosh, president of A.T.A., called the meeting to order at 6 o'clock, and at 6.30 the business session was adjourned for the dinner hour.

Following the dinner, which was served by the women of the Trinity Church Guild in the school cafeteria, the business session reconvened. One highlight was the decision of the A.T.A. to revive the Drama Festival, which has lapsed for some years. All schools, both elementary and high schools, were invited to participate. Parents and friends can look forward with renewed interest to attending a dramatic presentation in the spring.

It was also the decision of A.T.A. that delegates be sponsored to attend the annual conference of the Ontario Council for Childhood Education, Quebec Branch, on October 29-30 at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. "Today's Children for Tomorrow's World" is the theme of this conference. Prof. Leland B. Jacobs, Director of Education at Teachers' College, Columbia University, as well as Dr. J. D. Jefferis, professor of Education and head of the department at Bishop's University, will be addressing the conference, where such topics as "Has the Pre-School Child Been Forgotten?" will be discussed.

Guest speaker for the A.T.A.'s meeting was Mrs. P. Quilliams, a Home Economics specialist in Montreal High School and chairman of the Teacher Education and Certification Committee of the P.A.P.T. As chairman of the committee responsible for the proposal to establish a Board of Professional Standards, Mrs. Quilliams was well qualified to inform the teachers of Argenteuil on this proposal. The aims of the Board of Professional Standards are to display an interest in raising the standards of teaching, and to help establish the occasion when teachers themselves would have a greater voice in teacher certification. The functions and composition of the Board were also discussed by the guest speaker; and Mrs. Quilliams answered queries in a lively discussion which followed her talk. As a result of the information received at this meeting concerning the Board of Professional Standards, the teachers of Argenteuil will be fully informed and therefore will be able to vote competently when a plebiscite is held on this issue at the P.A.P.T. annual convention in November.

Name candidate for Social Credit

The Social Credit supporters held their nomination meeting and named Ernest Champagne (above) to represent them as candidate in the November 8 general election. Mr. Champagne is a member of the Ayersville Council and a resident of that municipality. The provincial secretary of the party and candidate in Terrebonne, Jean-Marc Fontaine, attended the meeting.

Three fires gave poor send-off to Prevention Week

Fire Prevention Week in this area got off to a bad start when, around 4:15 a.m. Monday, a call was received from the store of J. L. Marchand, St. Philippe. A crew of volunteer firemen under direction of Chief Don MacCulloch responded to the call, and extinguished the blaze without too much difficulty.

The fire started outside the cellar door and had burned over the door, and into the cellar, where it followed a pipe into the walls.

Chief MacCulloch reported he had notified the Q.P.P., who made an investigation of the blaze; according to the chief, the fire had been deliberately set.

Shortly after two a.m. Saturday, Mr. Bernard Cadieux returned with his family to find his home filled with smoke. Firemen were notified, and Mr. Cadieux and neighbors managed to pinpoint the cause of the smoke, a smouldering couch situated in the basement playroom of the house, which is at 11 McGibbon Blvd. The fire had by this time gained headway, and a section of the wall and ceiling had been burned.

Considerable damage by smoke resulted to the newly constructed home, which has been occupied by the Cadieux family for only a few months.

Another fire caused considerable damage to the home of Edmond Page, at 615 Bedard Blvd., where a blaze had started in the walls from stove pipes. From the kitchen wall, the flames spread rapidly to the upstairs.

The fire was discovered by Watson Black, while on his postal delivery duties; he managed to get the two women occupants out of the house, then notified the fire department.

Queenston Heights comes to Argent'l

Scenes from War of 1812 staged here in colorful set by National Film Board

By Norman Thorburn

Directors of the National Film Board of Canada were looking for sites in our County recently to stage dramatization of hostilities between the British - Canadian forces and those of the Americans, in the war of 1812-1814. It happened that they chose a rocky, wooded knoll on the Edward Armstrong farm in East Settlement, to re-enact the Battle of Queenston Heights.

Irving Cleland, a well known local horse breeder, was commissioned to obtain horses for the event, and also had to truck horses to a site between New Glasgow and St. Lin, where other sequences of the dramatization were being filmed.

It was strange indeed on this occasion, to see our farming friends, Watson Berry and Jim Todd, driving horses pulling high-wheeled wooden wagons of the 19th century!

Delmer Copeland and Ross Rodger were driving single horses pulling carts of still more ancient vintage.

Dressed like yeomen of the early 19th century, with heavy side-burns on their faces, they acted their parts as drivers of vehicles carrying the army luggage and impedimenta, with the grace and aplomb of born actors.

Certainly, these men showed that they were more skilled in handling horses than the professional actors. We saw one soldier mounting his steed, well equipped with a saddle and stirrups, by climbing up on a rail fence!

The British and American soldiers were splendidly costumed, but their weapons were not authentic. You could not have cut cheese with their swords, and their muskets were camouflaged 12-gauge shotguns. The cannon pulled behind Watson Berry's wagon, was only an imitation. (The original had been stolen, it was said.) It was also rumored the old wagons and carts were destined to go to Expo 67.

The actor taking the part of General Isaac Brock was a splendid specimen of masculinity, tall, fair and broad-shouldered. He wore a naval-type hat, such as Admiral Nelson wore, with a plume. The British soldiers wore shakos, tall military caps, in the form of a cylinder with a visor and plume.

The British in their red coats, and cocked hats, were an impressive sight. Some of the British soldiers conversed voluminously in French!

When they laid the "body" of General Brock, shot through the heart, down on the top of the hill and his mourning officers grouped around him — it was a sight to behold. They carried the "body" down the hill on a stretcher. The corpses of dead soldiers, lying across their horses' backs, followed the stretcher and its bearers. But some of the dead bodies on the horses were not dead enough to suit the directors. "Keep your heads down," the directors commanded.

One dead man slipped off his horse's back, but luckily landed on his two feet in the rocky field; and the "dead" man immediately assumed the burden of the living. The director yelled, "Cut, cut!" and the scene had to be shot several times.

A female director of this colorful production approached a tall British soldier and asked, "Would you like to be a dead body?" The soldier's face blanched, and then remembering his role, he acquiesced. "Go and lie down on the hill and play dead," she said.

The show finished about 4.30 p.m. They had to hang eight prisoners at sundown near St. Lin!

By BOB ATCHISON

The "outdoors" part of this, sure is for the birds, as far as I am concerned! Before I go any further — for all the calls, cards and good wishes for my health, thank you all very much; especially thank you for the current information about wildlife.

So now for some important news: Moose are still being seen in the area; some of these have been very big. One call informed me of a specimen that must have weighed in around 900 lbs., with a very large rack. The observer stated this animal knew he was there but paid no attention to him, except to glance his way every once in a while. From the telephone description, this beast must be well on in years; the bell under its chin appeared to be about 18 inches long. This would make it an old moose, believe me. Let's hope it can manage to get through this killing season and live another year.

I also have another report which is most gratifying. A cougar was spotted not too far from town the other day. When it became aware it was being observed, it put on a burst of speed, and jumped over some hawes and left some of its fur on the bushes. This I hope to see in the next few days. Deer are showing up, too, but not in the numbers that had been hoped for. But there are numerous fawns reported, and with the season allowing these for slaughter, I'm afraid they won't even last through the opening day. Dressed out, they won't be much bigger than a large-size Belgian hare. Of course this happens every year with our present game laws, not only with deer, but moose and everything else that has no restriction on it. We still don't seem to have learned from our former periods of depletion.

I watched a hawk the other evening; I could not tell what type it was. The winds had been extremely high all day, and believe me, this made tough hunting for the hawk. I watched it dive twice and seemingly retrieve something to eat, but for the flying time it spent, the pickings were poor. I had just finished a good supper, and it struck me, just how pampered we humans are. All we have to do is open a can, put it on the stove, and there we are. As I've said this hawk had to make many forays across the field, all the time fighting high winds; and I somehow felt a kindly concern — for this creature free, wild and untamed, feeling the lash of winds and rain, defiance in every move he makes. . . "Many long flights" I murmured.

Some of the information that has been phoned in, deserves further comment. First of all, from all reports, the water fowl shooting has not been too good except in isolated instances. I don't believe this would be unexpected though; with the very poor spring and summer we had in this area, and with much worse conditions farther north, it will be a miracle if some of the broods survive through the fall shoot. I don't know just what is going to happen to our duck population, but something startling must be done if they are to increase at all. Maybe the seasons will have to be closed for a couple of years; this may sound drastic, but drastic measures are in order.

The partridge seem to have increased this year; what is good for one variety of bird, is sometimes not too good for others. There should be some good shooting for a while. However, for the time being, the leaves are still too heavy in the woods. All the advantages will be with the birds for a while. But then, you can't really say that they are at a disadvantage, any time; they rocket up so fast, and with so much noise, that most gunners get jolted for a miss every time. Of course, if you happen to be like a friend of mine: he takes no shot at these birds until they're at least 200 feet away, preferably going away. You can guess how many he hits; they might die of fright, but not from lead poisoning. . . The "missing man" — and a real conservationist.

We all know the partridge is a "cycle" bird; that is, heavy concentrations of them some years, while other years, not a bird can be found. I've often thought that the cycle of rabbits may have some relation to the birds — some parasite of the rabbit becoming attached to the birds, or it could be the other way around. Wildlife biologists have been studying this for a long time.

One of the boys who loves woodcock shooting, sure had it good the other week-end. He found at least 20 of them all gathered in a small mud flat. But as usual, being like me in shooting these things, all he did was to enrich the ammunition companies. Not one bird was hit. I was also told of a flock of plover that stopped over, down near the flats at White's Bridge. They stayed only one night, for they were gone in the early morning. You know these small birds have been known to fly non-stop for over 3,000 miles, an average of 50 miles an hour, and they would take 60 hours to complete this journey. It's hard to conceive that such small birds are capable of such sustained flight. (This time is based on perfect flying conditions, with no winds. This, we know, would never happen, which makes it all the more remarkable.)

Once again, the Department of Northern Affairs and Natural Resources are sending questionnaires to certain duck hunters... The cards ask for information on ducks, woodcock, geese and so forth; where they were taken, how many, etc... This is to aid the Department in getting as clear a picture of our resources as possible. No doubt, many will not receive the forms, but you still can help a lot. You could mail in your information, giving only the birds you have killed personally (no group killings) the type of birds taken, what county; this should be sent in to the Superintendent, Eastern Division, Canadian Wildlife Service, Ottawa. The more information these services glean, the better we are going to be in the future of our wildlife. There comes a time when we are in great danger of driving birds to extinction, and I believe this certainly applies to some of our waterfowl. I know this does not sound too much to do, but when it is taken on a long-range forecast, your letters may prove to be invaluable. How about it?

It's a little late for this, but maybe it will come in handy for next summer if you plan a trip through Quebec: A new folder has been published by the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game, on the ferry services available in this province, especially along the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa Rivers. It sometimes pays to have information like this handy, so why not get yourself one from the Tourist Branch of the Province of Quebec, 12 Ste. Anne, Quebec. It costs nothing.

Students quiz Opposition leader

By Robert Dawson

Mr. John Diefenbaker, leader of the Opposition, told a group of high school students at Simon's Sale on Tuesday, September 28, that it would be folly for Quebec to separate from Canada.

"Quebec needs Canada and Canada needs Quebec," he said. "They are indivisible."

The students were members of the History Club of Lachute High School. They followed Mr. Diefenbaker on his tour of the market, periodically asking him questions.

One student asked if everyone in Canada should and could be bilingual. "Start with yourself," replied Mr. Diefenbaker, "Be bilingual yourself."

The students also questioned him about a news report that his car had been decorated with Union Jacks during his tour of the Maritimes.

"I was not in a car in the Maritimes," was his reply, "But in Newfoundland the cars were decorated in advance."

The leader of the Opposition twice declined to give his opinion about the new Canadian flag, but it was later noticed at the Brownsburg rally that both the Canadian and Quebec flags were prominently displayed.

A Diefenbaker aide was queried by a student about Mr. Diefenbaker's apparent reluctance to discuss politics with the students.

"He's a man of the people," came the reply, "not a man of politics."

The students also noted the reaction of the people to the politician. It was generally enthusiastic.

One small boy ran ahead of the crowd milling around Mr. Diefenbaker, crying, "The Prime Minister is coming!"

One farmer remarked, "He was in before and did nothing", but another said that his vote would go to Diefenbaker because "he comes to us on our level; he makes us feel like somebody important."

As the visitor hurried off to another appointment in his busy schedule, a man in a business suit turned to a student and summed up the feelings of many. His words were: "Imagine the fire in the man, to keep him going like that after all he's been through."

September 14, Granny Tournament. — The lucky "Granny" to win this tournament was Mrs. Loretta Suhl. The trophy is a beautiful Royal Doulton figurine of a seated grandmother with a little granddaughter at her knee. It is set on a handsome gold base, and the small gold plaques attached to the base denoting each year's winner, are in the form of a silhouette of a child's head. Also in conjunction with the Granny Tournament was a putting competition, won by Mrs. Vi Côté, and three sealed holes, won by Mrs. Alice Ayers.

September 22, Closing "Pot of Gold" Tournament. — The winning team of this tournament was Mrs. Ellen Knobovitch, Mrs. Lila Geniele, and Mrs. Doris Gravel.

The closing dinner and presentation of prizes for the Lachute Ladies' Golf Club took place in the beautiful main dining room of the clubhouse, on the evening of September 22. Mrs. Joyce Stephens, the president, warmly welcomed all members, congratulating them, and most particularly all the committee members, for a well organized, happy and successful golf season. Mrs. Stephens, the outgoing president, was presented with a beautiful strand of pearls on behalf of all the grateful lady members, for a difficult job well done — not to mention the striking example she has set as one of the best lady golfers in the Club, having won many prizes and trophies this year, and indeed throughout the time she has played as a member of Lachute Golf Club.

The Entertainment and Decorating Committee, comprising Mrs. Margaret Milnes and Mrs. Diane Ouellet, provided a sumptuous dinner menu, and the dining room was tastefully decorated with small bud vases of baby mums on each table. The head-table was most attractive, with beautiful silver candelabra and three lovely floral centrepieces — one in the centre with two smaller ones at each end — of mixed mums in fall shades. The beautiful silver rose bowl, which is the Club Championship trophy, was a blaze of lovely autumn blooms on the prize table.

The Prize Committee, Mrs. Mary-Ruth Ott, Mrs. Pearl Cairns and Miss Ann David, are to be congratulated on the stunning display of tastefully wrapped gifts and trophies, which were presented to the lucky winners by Mrs. Rita Carrière, the Tuesday Captain of the Match Committee, and by Miss Christine MacKenzie, the Business Ladies' Captain. The Business Ladies played for a trophy of their own for the first time this year — a lovely walnut clock on a handsome base. This was won by the 2nd vice-president, Miss Ann David.

Altogether 92 ladies were present, and although the weather was very hot and humid for the golf tournament, good spirits were restored by the delightful coolness of the dining room and by the gaiety in general within the clubhouse.

River fishing contest planned

Fishing enthusiasts may still have a fling with their fellow anglers, in a contest to be held on Sunday, 10th, at Fernand Ouellette's rivershore at La Baie, St. Andrews. All members of the club and of the fishing fraternity in general, are invited by the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association to participate in this outing. A bean supper on the Ottawa River shore will climax this last contest of the season.

Why some things have to be,
In His wisdom God hath planned
Beyond our power to see.

Upon the path you trod,
We bless the years we had with you, Dad,
And leave the rest with God.
And while you lie in peaceful sleep,
Your memory we shall always keep."

"We do not need a special day
To bring you to our minds,

If all this world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes and more,
To see the faces of Mother and Dad
Come smiling through the door."

HOLT — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Margaret Glenna Holt, who passed away Oct. 11, 1964. — Ever remembered by Stanley and Margaret.

"Today recalls the memory
Of Dear Mom gone to rest;
And those who think of her today
Are those who loved her best.
The flowers we lay upon her grave,
May wither and decay,
But the love for her who lies beneath,
Will never fade away."

Discussed current affairs with a noted correspondent

By Robert Dawson

James M. Minifie, eminent journalist and author, and Washington correspondent for the CBC, told a group of teachers and students that Canada could be a great world peace-maker if she had a strong government.

The students, members of the Lachute High School History Club, spoke with Mr. Minifie at the Diefenbaker rally on Tuesday, September 28, at Brownsburg. Mr. Minifie is currently covering the election campaign in Quebec for the CBC. He has had much previous experience in reporting of elections, and was chosen for Quebec because he speaks French fluently.

Mr. Minifie told the students that he finds most people uncertain as to how they will vote, and that little enthusiasm is being shown for the election in some parts of the province.

When asked if there is a swing towards the New Democratic Party in Quebec, Mr. Minifie replied that the N.D.P.'s Quebec leader, Robert Cliche, is an excellent orator, but so far has been drawing only small crowds.

Touching on another subject, Mr. Minifie said that all nuclear weapons should be abolished. As to the spread of nuclear weapons, he said, "The more nations possessing nuclear weapons, the greater is the danger of a small war escalating into a global disaster."

The students also found that Mr. Minifie is in favor of the admittance of Red China to the United Nations.

"You can't ignore 700 million people," he said. "By ignoring them, they won't go away. The Red Chinese now possess nuclear weaponry, but no international responsibility. If they were in the U.N., we could talk to them."

But he added, it was not true that there is no communication between the United States and Red China. "It is common knowledge in Washington," he said, "that American and Red Chinese ambassadors have been meeting monthly for years in Warsaw."

When asked about his profession of journalism, Mr. Minifie said that journalism is very important in the modern world. "Government and industry are so complex these days, that they must be explained by newsmen."

"Some journalists abuse the freedom of the press by fanning the flames of extremism," he added, "but although there is at times too much sensationalism in the press, this does not call for government control of the press. All freedoms are at times abused, but they are vital, nonetheless."

Mr. Minifie told the students that he found Quebec exciting and fascinating. He believes that "Quebec holds the key to Canada's future."

The noted journalist concluded by saying that he was glad to be in the Lachute - Brownsburg area, and would like to return.

Skydiving, the sport of daredevils, described by expert at Rotary Club

Skydiving, the so-called sport of daredevils, was the subject of an address by expert Robert Hill, to Rotarians at "La Lorraine" last Thursday.

Accompanied by his lovely wife, Niki, also an exponent of the art, the speaker dispersed this erroneous conception of a sport which, though carnival-like to the eyes of the public, demands and gets good health, concentration, precision and clear thinking — developing these attributes in the process.

With President Tom Johnston in the chair, a few moments of bowed silence was observed, out of respect for the sudden and sad loss of the Club's immediate past-president, Phil Grant.

Guest Paul Gauthier was introduced, and plans made to entertain a deputation of members and wives journeying 500 miles to Lachute, from the Dallas (Penn.) Rotary Club. A reception at La Lorraine, tours through local industry, golf at Carling Lake, dinner and dancing at the Lachute Golf Club, were included on the program for the week-end.

Speaker Hill, introduced by Jack MacKimmie, is a representative for a paper and printing establishment in Toronto, where he was born and educated. Though youthful, he has travelled around the world and, since taking up skydiving as a hobby, has completed 860 "jumps".

Quiet spoken, yet firmly self-confident and sure of his subject, the speaker presented questions which he proceeded to answer. "Who is able to jump?", he asked, then pointed to his pretty young wife (of four months) and stated that she had completed over 250 jumps and was rated next to the top woman skydiver in Canada, for accuracy.

"What is skydiving?" Jumping from a plane with two parachutes, falling free through the air — and attaining a speed of 120 miles per hour within 12 seconds — watching your stop watch and altimeter carefully, at the same time watching the target on the ground and other persons who may be in the air around you — manoeuvring your body for various positions and orientations toward the target — then opening your parachute at not lower than 2,200 feet (which gives you time to pull the emergency ripcord of the second "chute" if necessary) — then landing. This, briefly, is the procedure of skydiving.

"How difficult is it?", asked the speaker, then comparing it to many other things we do, like public speaking for example. The first time one is fearful, frightened of the unknown. We have all learned to walk, and we forget the fear we no doubt had at first. "It is like swimming", the speaker said. "You are not attached or fastened to anything solid. It is a new medium."

Once you become confident, as in every other sport, you become competitive. As in figure skating, there are compulsory turns and rolls, performed against time, as well as accuracy on the target; then there are individual performances, which allow for originality.

The speaker developed the ability to achieve his first goal, to be a member of the Canadian team. They came 5th at the international contest in Germany, last year. He mentioned with some pride that they were the only team in the first 10, at least, who did not receive government support — this means the military. It can be seen how important the armed services of most countries value these skills. When it is considered that 40,000 lives were saved by parachute as indicated by the "caterpillar pins" awarded, the need is more apparent. Planned military drops at low altitudes, say 1,000 feet, to clear enemy fire, and there is only time for one parachute. Skill is therefore paramount.

A short film was shown of the speaker manoeuvring during free fall. He pointed out, that in a contest three judges use optical instruments called telemeters to view the participants. To get on the team one must land within six feet of the centre of the target, the centre being a six-inch disc. They are guided by a white arrow 100 feet long, pointing to the target in the direction of the prevailing wind.

Safety is an obvious necessity. You learn the rules, then follow them to the letter. "Yes, you pack your own chute, and it takes one-half to two hours, depending upon experience", the speaker replied to a question. "There are cross-checks during the operation so that you can be certain the nylon is folded correctly, usually a 28-foot diameter unit."

Why do they do it? — For thrills? — A feeling of accomplishment? The speaker felt that, for young people, the areas in which one can attack and overcome fear — and know that you have won — are few. To become self-reliant and self-confident is a feeling of great satisfaction. The speaker's second goal had been to become world champion. He feels that every jump is a new challenge. He now feels that to do his very best every time he jumps is satisfaction enough. . . You can't help but admire a fellow who is trying to do his utmost, every time, regardless of his goal.

It was an informative talk, of a little-known sport, that is growing rapidly in popularity among young people and is supported by the government in many countries.

Mr. Hill was thanked by Rotarian Keith Smith.

Student sidelights on War of 1812

Representatives from the Lachute High School History Club attended part of the filming of an historical documentary on the War of 1812, last week in East Settlement. The students were interested in the historical background of the filming, and found that the costumes and equipment were very authentic-looking. Except for one detail: during scenes involving soldiers shooting while riding horses, special guns were used. The guns produced a realistic-looking puff of smoke, but no sound. "The reason being," said one of the actors, "that gunfire would frighten the horses, leaving Her Majesty's Cavalry in a heap on the ground while the horses stampeded into the sunset."

Bible Society Appeal —

'Greatest battle today – for the minds of men'

"We teach thousands to read, but we leave it to others to provide them with reading material." This was the comment by a Christian 30 years ago.

Since then, a dramatic revolution has taken place in education. Now, every hour of every day 8,000 adults learn to read. In addition, millions of children are in school. This liberation of the minds of millions has brought about drastic changes, and holds great possibilities for good or evil.

Educated minds hunger for knowledge. To satisfy this hunger, men will read whatever is available to them in their own language. . . What will these millions of new literates read? Great volumes of propaganda, much of it anti-Christian and destructive, are being poured into those parts of the world where people are learning to read. Christians cannot stand by and allow the forces of evil and destruction to have it their way. We must try to supply them with at least a portion of the Scripture in their own tongue, for it is from the Scripture that they will come to a knowledge of God, of the saving power of Jesus Christ, and of God's rules for human living.

The Christians of the world have an opportunity unparalleled in history. The demand for the Scriptures continually exceeds the supply. The annual distribution of sixty million copies meets but one-third of the demand. The Bible Society now needs five million dollars to print and distribute the Scriptures for over 100 countries. Of this sum, the Canadian Bible Society has been asked to contribute six hundred thousand dollars — an increase of 50 per cent.

This is an opportunity for every Christian to help provide a portion of the Bible for thousands who have learned and are learning to read. If we do not respond to this unique opportunity, others will provide very different reading material for them. The greatest battle today is the battle for the minds of men. . .

Give to the representative of the Bible Society when he calls on you within the near future. Give generously, that the Word of God may be placed within the reach of all who can read.

Fall rally of U.C.W. Montreal presbyterial

The fall rally of the Montreal Presbyterial United Church Women will be held in Fairmount-St. Giles United Church, Outremont, next Wednesday, October 13. Registration time is 1 p.m.

Highlighting the events of the afternoon will be a panel of speakers acquainted with Montreal Social Welfare needs who will speak on "The City We Live In". Dr. J. W. Frei, M.S.W., L.L.D., chairman of the panel, is conducting a survey sponsored by McGill University and the Council of Social Agencies. The survey is being conducted in the area of the Montreal City Mission.

The evening program has been planned for men and women of the United Church. The session begins at 7.30 with worship conducted by the Rev. John Guy, secretary of the Student Christian Movement at Sir George Williams University and chaplain to United Church students at McGill.

The Rev. Dr. Elfan Rees will present the theme address "The Church in Action". Dr. Rees took a prominent part in organizing the World Council of Churches Refugee conferences for church leaders and refugee specialists in Hamburg, Salzburg and Beirut.

There will be a meeting of the executive of Montreal Presbyterial United Church Women at 10.30 a.m. on rally day.

Reservations for dinner can be made by contacting Mrs. H. Meadows by mail at 5180 St. Joseph Blvd., Lachine, or by telephoning at 637-6858.

The Bible Today

In connection with the centenary of the Salvation Army, which was celebrated this year, it is timely to be reminded of William Booth's comments concerning the Bible. "The Salvation Army claims for the Bible," he wrote, "that it contains a revelation of the feelings of God toward us and of His wishes as to our conduct toward Him and our fellowmen. It gives us everything in the way of written revelation that is necessary to salvation. The very least you can do with the Bible is to read it."

Fire Prevention Week —

Canada holds 'world title' in fire losses

Canada holds the dubious "world title" for the highest per capita fire loss record, the Canadian Underwriters' Association reported in conjunction with the launching of Fire Prevention Week last Sunday.

It is estimated that the annual cost of fire in Canada, both direct and indirect, is not less than $750,000,000 and that each citizen's share of this figure is $39.99.

The association also reported that some 600 Canadians perished in fires in 1964 and that the nation's property fire losses alone amounted to $150,000,000.

The association claims that 90 per cent of all fires are caused by human carelessness. Either someone does something that he shouldn't do, or neglects to do something that he should do.

"Why, in the face of rising levels and standards of education, must Canadian continue to be so stupid when it comes to the elementary principles and practices of preventing fires?" asks the association.

Despite tragic reports frequently published in newspapers, Canadian parents still continue to leave their children unattended. In addition, they also persist in hoarding combustible materials in their homes, or overloading electrical circuits.

TOO LATE!

If the 596 Canadians who last year died terribly by fire were 595 plus YOU, this week's fire prevention reminders wouldn't be very useful.

Rally at B'burg climaxed Diefenbaker tour

posts in federal government than our adversaries ever did.

By way of electoral promises, Mr. Diefenbaker pledged that his party would abolish the 11% tax on building materials; would raise the old age pension to $100 a month; and would allow municipal taxes up to $500 to be deducted from federal income tax.

Quebec's Reception

"Tell me of any province where the welcome has been greater than that given to me and to my wife in the past two days," he said. "I have never felt more deeply the degree of warmth that was shown to me in this constituency, in large measure due to Roger Regimbal. . .

"If this continues, and I think it will, somebody's going to get an awful shock on November 8 and it isn't going to be the Conservative party," said Mr. Diefenbaker.

In conclusion he urged a strong vote for his candidate in Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes, with whom he was most favorably impressed. "Elect him," he added, "and we will reserve an honor for him in the next government."

Mr. Diefenbaker had entered the arena to the serenade of a bagpiper, and accompanied by notables of the Progressive-Conservative party, including Mr. and Mrs. Regimbal. . . The deputy for Nicolet-Yamaska, Clément Vincent, had meanwhile expounded the agricultural policy of the party, pending arrival of the leader and his retinue. . . Duly terminating his remarks, Mr. Vincent gave his place at the microphone to Mr. Regimbal.

Candidate Speaks

The official candidate thanked the visitors for the honor they had accorded to this County, in sparing a complete day in their campaign program. "The 'tottering old man' some people have so maliciously depicted, is here tonight," he said, in introducing the Chief, "and as you can see, he's as fresh as a rose, after a strenuous 18-hour day." Touching upon Mr. Diefenbaker's gestures for French-English unity, he remarked, "He will go down in history as a great Canadian."

Sidelights

Bouquets of roses were handed to Mrs. Diefenbaker and Mrs. Regimbal by the daughter of Mayor and Mrs. René Lafleur of Brownsburg. The former presided over the assembly, and the proceedings were ably conducted by Linton Armstrong as m.c. Ald. Armstrong of Lachute had personally stood as candidate in a previous federal election.

The party, which included several notables from other constituencies, travelled by chartered bus and the tour was amply covered by press representatives. Although scheduled to return that night to Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Diefenbaker stayed over at La Lorraine Motel, departing Wednesday morning.

Death removes a well known lady resident

Late Mrs. Félicien Lavigne

At the Argenteuil Hospital on Tuesday, the death occurred of Mrs. Jeanne Lavigne, widow of the late Notary Félicien Lavigne, who was well known for his professional role and his activities in the politics of this constituency. (Notary Lavigne predeceased his wife in 1940.)

Left to mourn are a daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs Royal Carrière (Marcelle) and two grandchildren. Surviving also are three brothers of the deceased, Messrs. Jean Lavigne, of Ste. Marguerite, Romain Lavigne, of Lac Mercier, and Georges Lavigne, of Montreal; and two sisters, Miss Francoise Lavigne and Mrs. Germain Filion, both of Lachute. Dr. Albert Lavigne, retired dentist, also of Lachute, is a brother-in-law, and Dr. Roger Lavigne is a nephew.

The remains are resting at the Menard Funeral Parlors, and rites will be held Friday at 2 p.m. in Ste. Anastasie Parish Church.

PASS FAIR-DEALING LAW

Whitehorse, Y.T. (CP) — The Yukon territorial council has passed a "fair practices ordinance" which is intended to eliminate discrimination in accommodation, employment and trade union membership by reason of religion, color or beliefs.

WEEK-END IN ROTHESAY

I spent a memorable thirty-six hours in this tranquil little town that used to be the summering place for wealthy families residing in nearby Saint John, New Brunswick. Today their holiday homes have been winterized and are, for the most part, permanent residences. Painted a pristine white or stained in woodsy colors of brown or gray which blend into the background of lofty pines or graceful elms, the architecture of most is a pleasant mixture of early and late Victorian influence.

On the banks of the Kennebecasis River, the railroad services the town. Though a modern CN railliner speeds its way toward the port city from Moncton, in tune with modern times, old timers in the village remember when the station was the gathering place for many holidayers. The red train, pulling numerous cars, used to have a payload of passengers and freight. The latter included milk, eggs, garden and farm produce, domestic needs, crated hens and bellowing cattle. These were despatched at every village along the way. Nearby the station, is a rambling old structure called "Kennedy House". Now boarded up, it was formerly a stopping place for travellers and a happy playground for summer revellers.

Cultivate Culture

If the original conception of Rothesay as merely a summer resort has changed over the years, the appreciation of its citizens for things cultural has not diminished in any respect. It is here that one of Canada's foremost summer theatre groups has been encouraged to perform. Made possible by the generosity of a group of citizens, the little theatre known as Rothesay Playhouse has steadily built a reputation for itself.

The building that houses B&B Productions had a history of decay and abandonment. It was once a movie theatre, then became the scene of many auctions and its lobby was once a hardware store.

Besides theatrical productions, it is here that pictures, painted by New Brunswick artists, are hung for the pleasure of its patrons. Many of them are for sale, which provides the artists with a very appropriate market place.

Against the soft green background of the lobby walls are hung pastels of the stars of the company. These are the creations of Mary Carson, who has a natural talent that is amazing in its reflected likeness of her subjects and exciting in originality. Mrs. Carson is a resident of Rothesay.

Affectionately nicknamed "Binks" by her parents, a name that is not too familiar to her Maritime friends but one which will be remembered by fellow WRENS who served in the last war, she is a woman of stature — both physically and in the expression of her art.

Mrs. Carson has had little professional instruction. Her gift of portrayal is a natural instinct. Most amazing are the fresh tones she obtains and the drama of the eyes of the subjects in her pictures. Her ability to mould features on the surface of a flat piece of paper appears almost three dimensional. She creates the feeling of a living person and one forgets for the moment that it is only a picture that is being viewed.

Opportunity to lend a hand

THE CURRENT appeal for the Salvation Army, directed to the local public by Harold A. Deacon and his small committee, focuses attention on the hundred-year record of an organization which has imparted much good to humanity throughout the world.

At a meeting to inaugurate the centenary of the Salvation Army, held in Albert Hall, London, Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth had this to say: "The service conducted by William Booth in a tent on a disused burial ground in the East End of London in July, 1865, was the start of one of the great world-wide religious organizations, supported and respected everywhere. In all its work for the souls and the bodies of its fellow men and women the Army has shown Christianity in action."

To elaborate a little on this field of "action", the 1965 Year Book mentions some of the numerous enterprises carried on by the Salvation Army in this country. These include welfare, immigration, medical, evangelical, educational and other work too extensive to describe, throughout the 11 provinces of Canada. One item is particularly notable: out of 678 missing persons sought through Canadian Salvation Army efforts alone, 306 cases were concluded successfully. The Army is still searching for a person listed as missing in 1909!

At the moment the Salvation Army has recognized the need for a new and more modern approach to present-day conditions of living.

Though the Army is best known for its active welfare work, its practical ministry and its informality of worship, it still adheres to its avowed purpose of solving human problems of all kinds through genuine conversion to the Christian faith. Every other feature, from brass bands to the manufacture of their own cloth and uniforms, is but a means to that end.

It has left its mark on Canada, and has risen from an object of scorn to an organization with universal approval.

Individuals "spread too thinly"

IF ALL THE organizations in town ever decided to hold consecutive meetings, the combined operations of approving minutes, reading correspondence and considering new or unfinished business, could well take 24 hours a day until Christmas.

At least, that's the conclusion of anybody who takes even a cursory glance at the church groups, service clubs, charitable organizations, social, sports and youth-welfare enterprises in any small community, such as Lachute and Brownsburg.

One ambitious newspaperman recently made an attempt to find out just how many organizations there were in his town; he tallied up 347 groups of one kind or another, before giving up the idea.

His estimate that there are probably ten meetings every night in the "active" season from fall to spring, would fall short of the actual fact in our own community. But whatever the number, it's obvious that a great many people are volunteering their time and efforts in a great number of causes.

Between service clubs, youth organizations, minor sports, school groups, professional societies, adult education classes and church groups, it's hard to find anybody who isn't involved, and some belong to as many as half a dozen organizations.

When you consider how much is accomplished, it's hard to see how it could be done by any fewer organizations than there are now. But there isn't much doubt that many individuals spread themselves too thinly, and could be more effective by working harder in fewer organizations.

Tax Report could be significant

A VERY SIGNIFICANT report on taxation will be available within the next few months. It will be the report of the Royal Commission on Taxation (Carter Commission). What develops as a result of this report can have an important bearing on Canada's progress.

Retiring President A. J. Little of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce has pointed out that beneficial effects that may arise from the pending report could be sacrificed to political expediency.

In a recent Montreal speech, Mr. Little noted that this sort of approach was evident in government implementation of recommendations made by the Royal Commission on Banking and Commerce, when the Federal Government adopted some of the recommendations but ignored some major ones which had been carefully drawn by experts in the field of finance.

Mr. Little said all concerned should be given reasonable time to study the Carter Commission report when it is brought down. When the report has been studied, everyone must decide whether or not the recommendations taken in their entirety, or virtually in their entirety, will produce an overall better scheme of things than we have today. "The great danger," he continued, "is that the individual taxpayers will attack little bits of the report that are unpalatable to them and will overlook the fact that taken in its entirety the report may be good for them. Similarly, and this is an equally serious danger, the government may pick out of the report those things that are politically most expedient or which the government may think will be most attractive to the voters, and will adopt those things and disregard other recommendations."

Canadianism vs local horse trading

GOOD POLITICAL leaders need adequate backing to perform their wonders, J. B. McGeachy writes in The Financial Post, and must offer something in exchange for support. Also any province that wants something done at Ottawa is well advised to have M.P.s in the ruling caucus.

But, this writer says, the politicians should avoid advertising a system of reward and punishment as Maurice Duplessis did in Quebec when those who voted for him got roads and those who didn't might walk to town through fields of hay so far as he was concerned. McGeachy cites an incident of the election campaign of 1925 when Prairie farmers were demanding completion of the Hudson Bay Railway. When Mackenzie King, then prime minister, said at Saskatoon that he could get it built if only the West could send Liberal M.P.s to Ottawa, a heckler called out, "How many miles per member?" This question was much quoted against King in the election campaign, McGeachy says, and cost him votes on the Prairies.

Viewpoints and perspectives

THE ST. CATHARINES superintendent of secondary schools says that the examination for Grade 13 was too severe. In the five city schools the passing rate went down from 80 to 72 per cent, as is general in the province. Protests were being made to the department of education from other cities as well. It is a bad thing for students to be deprived of a year's schooling because of too-strict examinations. The superintendent, Mr. A. R. Petrie, remarks that many students have been prevented from getting into university solely on the basis of their English mark. And it is pointed out that an unfair examination could affect a student's entire life.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

We're Romans, All

I've been reading a fascinating book about the ancient Romans. Meditating on their economy and social customs, I couldn't avoid comparing them with ours today.

Like us, the Romans of the Golden Age were nuts about highways. The Roman Empire had over 60,000 miles of thruways. Italy alone had about 400 major paved roads. These enabled Caesar to travel 900 miles in eight days. A messenger sent to announce the death of Nero made 300 miles in 36 hours. Today, it takes almost that long to get home from the cottage, on a holiday weekend.

Like us, the Romans were interested in things that worked. Unlike the Egyptians and the Greeks, who built massive, or beautiful, but useless structures like the pyramids or the Parthenon, the Romans were great boys for water-works and sewers and stadiums.

Like us, they were in the toils of the bankers, with all their diabolical inventions: savings books, travellers' cheques, money orders, interest and mortgages.

Like us, they had a hybrid government, half-socialist, half-capitalist. It froze the price of wheat and plunged into public works to solve unemployment, but did nothing about slum landlords, exorbitant interest rates and shady used-horse dealers. Sound familiar?

Like us, they practised birth control, and abortion was common. Unless she were hard up, a Roman woman who had had a child got rid of it immediately by turning it over to a wet-nurse, then to a Greek slave governess, then to a Greek slave tutor. We don't have wet-nurses but we have the bottle. And we don't have slaves, dang it, but we have the baby-sitter and the public schools system.

Like us, they divorced each other indiscriminately. Caesar had four wives and was unfaithful to all of them.

Their entertainment was much like ours: horse races, the theatre, variety shows, gladiatorial contests. And just as today, the chariot drivers, actors and gladiators were idolized and paid 3,000 times what they were worth.

Of course, the Romans were cruel. After the city was almost destroyed by fire, emperor Nero blamed the Christians, and had the whole lot, or so he thought, thrown to the lions, all 1,000 of them. We'd never think of doing that today. It's too vicious, too flamboyant. Today we quietly stuff six million Jews into gas chambers, or incinerate 100,000 Japanese with a big blow torch.

The ladies will be glad to know that Roman women were just as silly as they are, about their looks. It was three hours every morning over the hairdo assisted by half a dozen slaves. Underwear was of silk and the brassiere was just coming in. The milk-bath was common and wealthy gals who were travelling brought along their own herd of cows to be sure of a decent bath.

Bathrooms as today, were littered with razors, scissors, soap, perfume, oils, powders, hairbrushes and all that muck. No wet nylons, though to hit you in the face. Hair-styles were fantastic.

And they had some great parties in those days. They began at four in the afternoon and lasted far into the night. Not like our stodgy affairs, which commence with cocktails at five, and last far into the morning.

At their parties, or orgies, the air was perfumed, flowers were everywhere, there were two servants for each guest, and the host would offer precious gifts to his guests. They hit the grape pretty hard, and got ill on stuff like thrushes breasts, but slaves passed regularly distributing emetics so that everyone could throw up and then go right on eating.

I sure would like to get in on a good old orgy. Why does a fellow have to be born 2,000 years too late?

THE CAMPAIGN & THE CANDIDATES

Political Climate: Warmer

As the election campaign gathered pace this week, candidates kept one eye cocked on the weather and the other on the voters as the country headed into its first November national vote in half a century.

But with the lack of colorful and exciting campaign meetings, the election still had not developed into a struggle of issues. Opposition parties continued to grope for subjects to hit out with at the government.

Instead of a battle of issues, each party has carefully confined itself to subjects which their strategists see as areas of strength instead of controversy.

Prime Minister Pearson preferred to convey the impression of a busy statesman getting things done. The federal-provincial health ministers' conference in Ottawa, at which a national medicare program was set up for a mid-1967 launching, added another item to the Liberal list of nearly-finished business. With it, Mr. Pearson announced a $500 million fund for increased medical research and health facilities.

There was no defense from Mr. Pearson for the government's handling of relations with Quebec, or the Dorion probe, or Ottawa's apparent all-out support of the U.S. in Vietnam. It is the Liberal intention simply not to talk about sensitive issues.

Conservative chieftain John Diefenbaker, claiming his "policies for the people" were arousing a response "just like 1957 all over again," also was hitting hard at the subjects he thought he was strongest on.

In Newfoundland, where he was met by Union Jack waving "old Tories," he talked about his party's stand on the flag, and warned that re-election of the Liberals could lead the country to republicanism. In the Maritimes, he tackled economic subjects, promising to declare the entire region a "designated" area for special economic aid. Then, almost as an afterthought, he threw in a promise of six per cent. government loans to consumers.

Tommy Douglas, just as concerned with bread-and-butter topics as the Conservatives, moved in on what he said would be his party's roughest, toughest campaign. But he was shored up by polls showing that 40 per cent. of the voters are still undecided, giving rise to NDP hopes of pulling a historic upset Nov. 8.

To do this, the party would have to crack into Quebec, where it has never elected a member, as well as hold its urban strength in B.C. and Ontario and restore its traditional following in Saskatchewan.

Meanwhile, Douglas was hitting the government over the auto free trade deal with the U.S., which he said was costing Canadian consumers the $50 million a year which the government was giving up in tariffs.

The deal will see Canadian automakers exporting cars to the U.S. where they will be sold at lower prices than in Canada. The saving to the automakers is supposed to be invested to expand the industry, but the clamor for lower car prices was beginning to be felt right across the country.

Socred leader Robert Thompson accused the old-line parties of "even bigger dishonesty" than the corruption charges which have plagued the Liberals. He said they were putting political advantage above principle, trying to buy votes with reckless promises.

The campaign still has a month to go and anything can happen. But at this point, the Opposition parties haven't yet been able to produce the kind of slashing indictment usually needed to turn governments out of office.

Thanksgiving for Blessings

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Do you sometimes write in a notebook — or read aloud — a quotation which interests you?

Here are words written almost three centuries ago by Thomas Traherne, which are found in an excellent small book, God of a Hundred Names, as compiled by Barbara Green and Victor Gollancz:

"Is not sight a jewel? Is not hearing a treasure? Is not speech a glory? O my Lord, pardon my ingratitude, and pity my dullness who am not sensible of these gifts. The freedom of Thy bounty hath deceived me. These things were too near to be considered. Thou presentest me with Thy blessings, and I was not aware. But now I give thanks and adore and praise Thee for Thine inestimable favors."

Sometimes parents complain that thankfulness, like sympathy, is not easy to teach to children. There is some truth in this because youngsters often take their blessings for granted and they find it difficult to put themselves in another's place. But so do many adults.

E. V. Lucas tells of an interesting experiment in an English school aimed at training scholars in these two virtues.

In the course of a term, each child has a blind day, a lame day, a deaf day, and one when he cannot speak.

The night before the blind day his eyes are bandaged. He awakens "blind". He needs help and other children lead him about.

By this method a child imagines vividly what it is like to be really without vision, and his chums receive practice in thinking of the need for guidance of another.

After an experience like this surely a child would not use his gift of sight without a feeling of thankfulness. Thanksgiving Day is a holiday in which parents might discover from their children which of Nature's many outdoor scenes they like best — a sunset, trees, flowers, streams, a lake?

School age children are interested in the origin of holidays and holy days. Thanksgiving is an American festival, dating back to Governor Bradford and the Pilgrim Fathers' expression of gratitude for their harvest of 1621.

A reaction to the excess in the observance of Christmas in England at that time had caused the Puritans to put a ban on the keeping of Christ's birthday. In a sense, Thanksgiving was their substitute for this other celebration.

At the first harvest festival, there was feasting and fellowship with their Indian visitors, target practice and other recreation.

Edward Winslow, writing to a friend in England, described the preparation for this Thanksgiving. He mentioned particularly the men who went out hunting at the order of the governor for fowl, "So that we might after a more special manner rejoice together, after we had gathered the fruit of our labors. For three days we entertained and feasted."

Thus wild fowl was the forerunner of the Thanksgiving turkey of today. Venison, vegetable, fruits and pumpkin pie were also part of this first harvest festival.

Early in the 18th century, one year, Thanksgiving had to be postponed a week because the necessary supply of molasses had not arrived to make the pumpkin pies.

This story of the origin of Thanksgiving is of interest to boys and girls.

Wise are the parents who "make a lot of" these special days in the calendar of the year. They give their children happy memories they will cherish all their lives. Let us help our boys and girls to be thankful to God for all their blessings.

Cheddar cheese — Canada's favorite

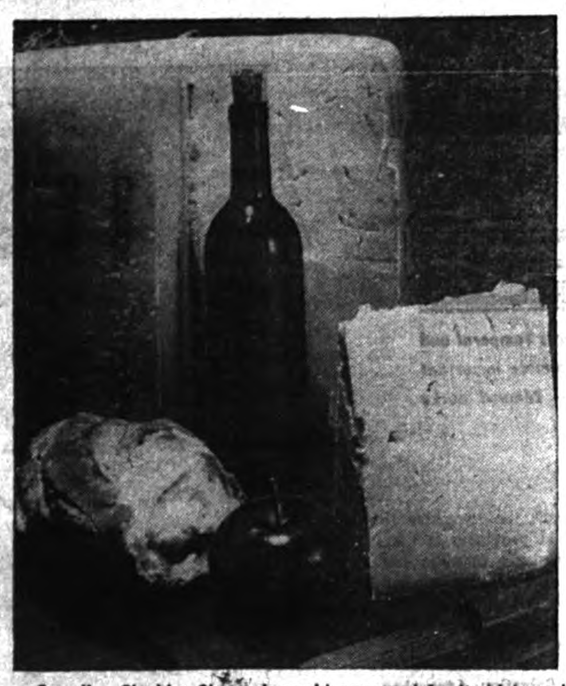
The mellow flavor and fine cooking qualities of Canadian Cheddar cheese make it a perfect choice for fall menus. Cheddar also adds nutritive value to meals by providing high quality protein, vitamin A and calcium. Cheese is recommended in Canada's Food Guide as a substitute for meat or other protein-rich foods; and this can be a boon to budget-conscious homemakers.

More and more cheese is being consumed each year in Canada. Last year Canadians bought an average of 500,000 pounds of cheese a day, a large proportion of which was Cheddar. And is it any wonder? Canada produces a Cheddar that is internationally renowned for its unique flavor and fine quality.

The next time you go shopping, stop by the refrigerated cheese counter and take a look at the different types of Cheddar offered. You will notice it is available either colored with an edible vegetable coloring or in its natural state — a rich cream color. Cheddar is sold according to its age or degree of ripeness as mild, medium or old. The mild cheese is marketed soon after it is made, medium cheese is aged for several months, and old Cheddar is aged for nine months or more to bring out its characteristic nippy flavor.

Whether you prefer it nippy or mild, Cheddar should be stored properly to retain its full flavor. When possible, leave the original wrapper on the cheese, then overwrap with waxed paper, foil or plastic wrap and refrigerate.

Enjoy Cheddar at its flavorful best by serving it at room temperature.



Canadian Cheddar Cheese is world renowned for its high quality and fine flavor. It has earned its place of honor as the king of Canadian cheeses.

PREVENTION OF BLINDNESS (Weekly Tip)

Over-use will not harm your eyes, if they are healthy! In the hope of reducing blindness in Canada, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind offers you these hints:

Always observe the rules of good lighting. When reading or writing, place your source of light on your left side. Having to strain your eyes when reading at night indicates insufficient light. Never read in the brilliant sunshine, unless properly shaded; the continuous glare on the paper is harmful to your eyes. They must last you a lifetime — make sure they do! Be wise, take care of your eyes!

Sandwich variation — twice as good!

Tomato Double Deckers are easier to make than an ordinary sandwich and twice as good. These suggested fillings make a delightful color contrast beneath thick red tomato slices, and the flavors blend elegantly. Here is the answer to light refreshing lunches, perfect for any occasion.

TOMATO DOUBLE DECKERS
(Makes 4 Servings)

Allow 1 large tomato for each serving. Cut each tomato into 3 crosswise slices; sprinkle each with salt and pepper. Spread one of the two given fillings between slices and put tomatoes back together again. Top each with a spoonful of salad dressing and a wedge of cheese, raw vegetable or piece of salad green.

(a) 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped; ¾ cup cottage cheese; ¼ cup finely-chopped green onion; 2 tablespoons mayonnaise; ⅛ teaspoon paprika; salt and pepper to taste.

(b) ¾ teaspoon curry powder; ¾ teaspoon salt; 3 tablespoons French dressing; 1 cup cooked rice; ½ cup cubed Canadian-made Swiss cheese; ¼ cup chopped celery.

Add curry powder and salt to French dressing; mix well. Combine with remaining ingredients.

If you want to enjoy wine you don't need to know that its bouquet is called its nose by experts. You don't need to worry about the size and shape of glass to serve it in. Choose a glass you think looks attractive.

When you try to decide which wine to buy it may help you to keep in mind the five main types.

Appetizer wines are sherry and vermouth. You may serve them before a meal or with party snacks — cheese or fruit cake. Serve the appetizers at room temperature or chilled.

Red table wines are usually served with red meats because they have a fairly strong, positive taste. They include claret (bordeaux), chianti and burgundy, and are usually served at room temperature.

White table wines are more delicate in flavor than the reds and are usually not so dry. White wines such as sauterne and Rhine wines are most often served chilled, with lighter meats such as chicken or fish.

Sweet with Sweet

Dessert wines include port, muscatel, sweet sherry and tokay. Heavier and sweeter than any other types, they are best served with dessert or with refreshments in the evening. Most people serve them at room temperature, but it is a matter of personal choice.

The best-known sparkling wines are champagne and rose. Chill them well and serve them with any type of food.

Some wine experts think the sparkling wines look more attractive in tulip glasses or in hollow-stemmed glasses than in the shallower saucer glass. They keep bubbling longer that way.

Keeping Wine

Wines should be stored in a cool, dry, dark place. The cellar in a house may be best. Any cabinet away from radiator or stove heat will be a good wine cupboard in an apartment.

If your wines have cork stoppers they should be stored on their sides to keep the cork moist. If it begins to dry out it may allow air to get into the bottle and harm the wine.

If they have screw tops or the new plastic stoppers, store them standing up if that is more convenient.

The light, delicate wines should be used up soon after you open the bottle or they may begin to ferment again and turn vinegary. If you do store some for a few days in an opened bottle, keep it in the refrigerator to retard the tendency to ferment.

Dessert and appetizer wines will keep almost indefinitely, and may be stored in a decanter.

If you can stopper them tightly, you may be able to store opened bottles of sparkling wines in the refrigerator for a day or two.

'Know Canada'

Why Is "Alexander MacKenzie" A Famous Name in Canada?

Because no fewer than four famous men bore it. The first was Sir Alexander Mackenzie, fur trader and explorer. He was born in 1764 in Stornoway, Scotland, became a partner in the historic North West Company and in an exploring expedition reached the Arctic Ocean by canoeing along the vast river that still bears his name. Later he became the first man to cross North America, north of Mexico.

Next came Alexander McKenzie, born about 1767, probably in Scotland. He too became a fur trader and a partner of the North West Company. He was one of the North West partners arrested by Lord Selkirk in 1816. Later he was acquited on the charges laid against him.

Then came Alexander MacKenzie, prime minister of Canada. A Scotsman, born in 1822, he came to Upper Canada at 20, worked as a builder, became an editor and then a politician. He was prime minister from 1873 to 1878. He was offered and refused a knighthood three times.

The fourth Alexander MacKenzie was a financier. This lawyer from Kincardine, Ontario, was born in 1860. He went to Brazil to conduct legal business, remained to establish the massive Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Company. He was its president for over 20 years, becoming one of the most influential men in Brazil. He died in Kincardine in 1943.

Are Canadian Handicrafts Important?

Surprisingly important. About 400,000 Canadians produce handmade pottery, weaving and other handicrafts. Most of them turn out handicrafts as a supplementary source of income; many enjoy it only as a hobby. Nevertheless, the annual retail value of Canadian handicrafts is an astonishing one hundred million dollars. Traditional skills are maintained in certain areas. In St. Jean Port Joli, for example, more than half of the 1,200 people engage in wood-carving, often employing chisels still forged by a local blacksmith. Other popular Canadian handicrafts are hooked rugs, quilting, leather and iron work. Indian experts still turn out thousands of birchbark boxes and dishes, while Eskimo handicrafts now find an insatiable world market.

Who Unwittingly Started the Great Timber Industry of The Ottawa River?

Napoleon Bonaparte. His conquests in Europe cut off Great Britain from obtaining Baltic timber for her navy. She turned to the Canadian forests, particularly the vast stands of virgin woodland bordering the swift-flowing Ottawa River. Philemon Wright took the first raft of square timber down-river to Quebec in 1807. For the next 50 years the Ottawa timber trade was the mainstay of the Canadian economy. Subsidiary industries sprang up. A new aristocracy — the "lumber kings" — emerged. Lumbering is still an important industry on the Ottawa River. Today it is also the scene of large-scale hydro-electric power developments, with four major plants, scattered along its rapids-strewn course, developing over 100,000 horsepower. This has now been supplemented by Canada's first atomic-energy plant at Deep River. This ultra-modern colossus of the Ottawa River region stands at Pointe Bapteme where Indians gathered to trade in the early days.

Canadian Horses as Boat Paddlers

In the last century, the horse boat used to be popular as a ferry in this country, in the years just before the steamboat took over. From two to five horses would be harnessed on deck and the power they supplied would turn a paddle wheel. Horse-boats first appeared in Canada in the late 18th century. One record tells of their plying the Niagara River as early as 1793. Torontonians could take a leisurely trip aboard a horse-paddled ferry to Toronto Island up to 1850. A steamer took over in that year and Dobbin returned — no doubt thankfully — to the life of a landlubber.

Chem. Technology is subject of new evening course

The first of a four-year evening course in Chemical Technology is being offered this fall at the Hawkesbury District High School. Jointly sponsored by the Hawkesbury Section, Chemical Institute of Canada, and the Technical and Trades Training Branch of the Ontario Department of Education, the course is patterned after first-year Technological Institute training. It offers an opportunity for laboratory technicians in the counties of Prescott and Argenteuil to improve their skills and qualifications through evening study.

The course program will consist of General Chemistry, Analytical Chemistry, Organic Chemistry and Mathematics and Physics, one topic being covered each year. The General Chemistry portion will be presented this year, beginning on the evening of October 12, at 7.30 New registrants will be accepted at the beginning of each year, and on the successful completion of the four units, graduates will receive certification as chemical technicians. This grading is part of a national certification program by the Chemical Institute of Canada and is recognized from coast to coast.

The organization and administration of the course is the responsibility of the Hawkesbury Section, Chemical Institute of Canada, and includes the selection of qualified instructors. Mr. Melville MacLeod, a recent graduate of the University of Guelph and presently with International Cellulose Research at Hawkesbury, is the instructor in the General Chemistry section this year.

A U.S. study shows that, on an average, 15% of customers are lost to a retailer each year. In 10 years 81 out of every 100 customers will drift away.

Reasons why customers leave: 14% unadjusted complaints; 9% lower prices; 5% influenced by others; 3% move; 1% die: 69% lost thro' neglect, bad treatment, poor service, indifference.

THE MURDER

Have you ever been alone in an empty house and suddenly come upon the evidence of a ghastly tragedy? If I ever change my mind and decide to write a book about show business, this true adventure will be included somewhere about Chapter 23. Here it is:

In August 1944 I was playing a fair date in Amherst, N.S. My wife was visiting a married daughter in Massachusetts. She had left home a few days before I left, and my departure was known to some of the neighbors. In about a week I returned, and let myself in with a latchkey late one night. While groping for the hall light switch I thought I heard a footstep, but it might have been a noise from next door. The hall light came on, and I made my way to the kitchen and turned on the light there. Then I froze. Right ahead was the kitchen cabinet, bread board and bread knife all in a pool of blood! My first thought was to call the police! Then I decided to look around first. . .

The back door and cellar door were intact, as I had left them. The windows were all fastened and no glass broken. And I had been the last to leave the house. I could imagine the police questioning me. What had I done with the body? Was it buried in the cellar or the back yard? And whose was it? Then I realized that blood that has been exposed to the air for any length of time would no longer be bright red. It would oxidize and be a sort of brown. I got brave and opened the door of the upper cupboard — and the mystery was solved. Then I started a sort of hysterical laughing fit.

Prior to going to the States, my wife had put up a batch of jam. She had stored the jars in the upper cupboard. The weather had been very hot. One of the jars was imperfectly sealed. The contents fermented and built up a pressure in the jar, and a fine spray of liquid jam had been squirting onto the inside door of the upper cupboard and trickling down, till it covered the bread board and knife, the top surface of the lower cabinet and part of the floor!

I turned on the hot water, got some rags and did a thorough cleanup — finally deciding not to call the police after all.

Be seein' ya!

Plow winners match furrows for championship

Competitors from coast to coast are making final preparations for the annual Canadian championship plowing contest. This year, the event is being held, October 13-14, in conjunction with the big International plowing match and farm machinery demonstration on the Massey-Ferguson Farm at Milliken, Ont., in the Toronto area, October 13 to 16.

It is expected that 16 contestants from eight provinces will compete for the championship, which is sponsored by the Canadian Plowing Council and held in a different province each year. Each provincial plowmen's organization across Canada may send a team of its two best plowmen.

The winner of this Canadian championship will earn the right to hold, for one year, the Esso Silver Plow trophy. In addition, the two top contestants will win the Esso Travel Award for educational travel abroad.

The winning team selected in last year's competition left last week September 30 for Oslo, Norway, to represent Canada in the 1965 World Plowing Championship. Donald Dunkeld, of Clermont, Ont., and Dr. Carl Willis, of Charlottetown, along with their team manager-coach, Ken Bowden, of St. Thomas, arrived in Oslo on October 3, for the competitions on October 8-9. Twenty-two nations will be represented.

Hospital chaplains are specialists too

Regina (CP) — Hospital chaplains have been caught up in medicine's trend toward specialization.

On the way out are the days when chaplains in major city hospitals were retired clergymen who had given up their parishes.

The chaplains in Regina's two major hospitals are men who, in addition to their theological training, have specialized in such fields as psychology and medical ethics and had trained in hospital routine.

Rev. Norman A. Andries, Roman Catholic resident chaplain at Regina Grey Nuns hospital, spent a year taking the chaplain's training course offered by the U.S. department of health, education and welfare.

Mr. Andries says the trend in U.S. and Canadian hospitals now is to accept as chaplains only men who have had such training. He says this is in keeping with the idea that patients' ills must be treated on all fronts — psychological, social and spiritual as well as physical.

It is important for chaplains to know hospital routine.

"When we are called to the operating room to care for a patient in serious condition we must enter in gown and mask," Mr. Andries says. "Care must be taken not to impede the doctors."

Rev. Charles L. Wooley, resident United Church chaplain at Regina General Hospital, finds the job demanding.

"We try to learn of every new patient of our denomination who comes into the hospital, and to see them within 24 hours. This requires making up a set of cards which must be kept up from day to day."

Mr. Wooley has training as a social worker and took a clinical course for hospital chaplains.

"An average patient brings all kinds of complaints to us. We might hear complaints about the food or listen to marriage difficulties.

"I usually have over 150 out-of-town United Church parishioners to serve. This is a very time-consuming job, especially finding sufficient time to spend with the seriously ill."

Mr. Andries says chaplains, like doctors, are always on call. They are often asked to inform relatives of the death of a patient.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

In all my life, I have never seen grass grow the way it has during the past month. Whether it is the pent-up energy and the nutrients accumulated during the drought, or just the very favorable moisture and heat of the past few weeks, I don't know. But with winter feed so short, it is nothing less than a blessing. The cattle will be pasturing out till the snow flies.

Just what effect this surge of growth will have on next year's crop is hard to say. Perhaps the roots are growing like the tops, storing away energy furiously to survive the winter. On the other hand, perhaps the extra growth will use up all available nutrients in the soil, and energy in the roots, leaving little to start off next spring's crop.

In either case, you can't lose if you fertilize those fields this fall. But it will have to be done soon to give the plants a chance to grab those nutrients and store them in the roots before freeze-up.

For this purpose, it's best to stick to the mineral fertilizers — phosphorous and potash, like 0-20-20 — for fall application. The nitrogen is usually best held back until spring, and then go over the field again just before growth starts.

There are the advantages to fall fertilizing, too, as Dr. MacKenzie of the Soils Department points out. In the first place, there is usually less pressure on time in the fall than at seeding. Then again, bulk-spreading equipment can, in most years, get on the fields in the fall with less risk of damage to the soil structure.

A very real advantage to buying the fertilizer at this time of year is the price discounts. You will save a great deal more than the six percent the borrowed money will cost you. Fertilizer companies like to keep their plants running the year round; discounts in slack seasons are their way of doing it.

Harris Shutelt provided me with these examples. One company offers for fertilizer delivered before December 24 a discount of $3.00 a ton. And the company will accept a note payable next August. But if you pay cash now, you save a further 10%. There is $21 a ton saved. Multiply that by ten tons, and you come up with a better day's pay for a few telephone calls than picking stones out in the field.

Then there is a further company discount — about $4.00 a ton — if you can take delivery in bulk. Many firms will do the spreading for $3.00 a ton. Harris reminded me also that there are substantial government subsidies on fertilizer purchases and on transportation.

Another place fall fertilizing pays off is on next year's corn field. Spread now and ploughed down, it has been proven much more effective than spread and disked in the spring.

We used to be worried about losing the fertilizer over winter. Dr. MacKenzie says any loss is small compared with the advantages of fall fertilizing.

Imagine, if you can, twelve pupils playing twelve pianos all at one time in one small room. And not a sound. Seems rather like a chapter from Alice-in-Wonderland, or like watching television through your neighbor's window, doesn't it? But that is really happening here at the College. The new music room, during a class, is the most silent place on the campus. Electronics have invaded the age-old art of music teaching.

The pupil hears only his own piano through earphones, and the instructor can tune in on any one of the twelve. These electronic pianos, I am told, double the effectiveness of the teacher, cost half as much as ordinary pianos, and never get out of tune. But I expect they blow fuses instead.

Incidentally, the enrolment at the College is the highest since the post-war surge. There's 1,700 registered for the new term. Half are in the Faculty of Education courses, and the others divided between Agriculture and Household Science. The Diploma students in Agriculture will be registering on October 13. They expect a full house, too.

Divide peonies this month

By A. R. Buckley, Plant Research Institute, Ottawa

Each type of plant has its own individual peculiarities, a factor that makes it very difficult to generalize on any garden topic. For example, the worst possible way to divide a peony is to take a spade in spring, dig down alongside an old clump and shave a portion of it off for planting. This may work well with some perennials but not so with peonies. If planted in spring they seldom make satisfactory growth and take a long time to become established, and shaving with a spade invites decay of the fleshy roots.

The peony's year begins not in spring, but in late summer or early autumn, and that is the only time a clump should be dug and divided.

A peony has large fleshy roots that extend down. Each year the stalks die down, but after blooming time in the spring or early summer, new buds ("eyes" in peony terms) begin to form. The eyes develop into the stalks of the following year.

Commercial digging is often done as early as the first week of August but for the home gardener it is best left to the early part of September. At this time the new buds are about a quarter of an inch long and the roots are almost dormant.

It is better to divide an old clump than to reset it in another area. A good division makes a whole new plant, which will last for many years without deteriorating.

To divide a peony, first cut off the foliage six inches above ground. Next cut the roots about six inches out from the circle of stems by digging entirely around the plant.

Cut under the roots as much as possible before prying the clump loose, then dig up the whole plant. Wash off the soil, or shake it free from the roots. Some growers prefer to let the clump stand for several hours so that the roots become less brittle.

When dividing, it is necessary to leave at least two eyes, but preferably three, a piece of the crown and some roots in each division. Trim out all decay from the divisions and cut the roots back to a length of four or five inches.

After dividing each clump it is a good idea to dip the knife in a solution of permanganate of potassium (one teaspoon to a gallon of water) to prevent spread of disease, which may be present in some clumps.

A better and more certain precaution is to soak the divisions, just before setting them in the soil, in a formaldehyde solution made up of a tablespoon of commercial formalin in a gallon of water. This will kill injurious fungi and so prevent disease from spreading to new plants.

When planting the divisions make each hole large enough to accommodate them without crowding. The eyes should be two inches below the normal surface of the soil. Fill in around the roots with soil, working it with your fingers until no air spaces are left. Then firm well with the feet, taking care not to injure the roots.

When the hole is filled and firming has taken place, water well and let the soil settle, then fill with more soil and mound it up a few inches for protection during the winter.

If you are ordering new varieties, try some of the new so-called hybrid peonies. These are new interspecific crosses, which have resulted in a completely new range of colors and shapes.

Best in the Plant Research Institute's trial gardens over the past few years were Chocolate Soldier, dark red, semi-double; Clair de Lune, pale yellow single; Diana Parks, brilliant red double; Bini Belle, dark red semi-double; Lara Magnusen, single salmon rose, a unique color in peonies; Moonrise, creamy yellow, single; and Red Charm, the best double dark-red peony.

The best standard doubles under test have been Kansas, red; Ann Cousins, late white; Le Cygne, white; Mons. Jules Elie, huge pink; Nick Shaylor, late blush-pink; and Myrtle Gentry, pink.

Some of the best singles tested were Krinkled White; Pico, blush white; Sea Shell, pink; and Arcturus, Imperial Red and President Lincoln, red.

Columnist in hospital attacks hospital critics

Bob Atchison ("Argenteuil Outdoors")

We have all heard, at some time or other, criticisms on our Argenteuil Hospital. Having been hospitalized in this institution for the past couple of weeks, maybe I can dispute some of this talk. Most people hearing such remarks, take it from whence it came; however, some people do believe and add to the gossip, even though they know better. I wish to pass on some of my impressions of our hospital, as I see them, and hope that maybe it will counteract the less kindly rumors.

Certainly there are justified complaints; this has to be, in a hospital as new as ours. The most important of these is the length of time it takes to have anyone admitted. This is going to be hard for many to understand, especially when a relative is suffering and is very ill. Every patient in this hospital has to be admitted by a doctor, and the severity of the case will determine the speed of their admittance. Another thing, if a patient is suffering badly and as most people think, must have narcotics to relieve the pain, this cannot be done without permission of the doctor. He has to sign the order, and is the only one in the hospital who can do this. This is the law. No hospital (and I repeat, no hospital) can give medication of this kind without the physician's consent and signature — not even a sleeping pill.

If, unhappily, the doctor is called away while a patient is being admitted, then that patient is out of luck for things like this. True, a group of practitioners have a private arrangement whereby they take over each other's patients at such times, but not on the admitting end of it.

The nursing and administrative staff want to help in every way possible, but in this respect they are powerless.

The cure for this, of course, is to have resident doctors — four of them, to be specific. But trying to get young internes to start in a hospital like ours is hopeless; we cannot offer enough to interest them. In time all this will improve, but for the present we'll just have to be thankful that we have the kind of doctors we have in Lachute, who don't really mind getting out of bed at 3 a.m. to administer a sleeping pill.

Most people forget this hospital is only two years in existence, and cannot be ranked with the Hotel Dieu or Montreal General. It cannot be judged on their standards; yet sometimes it is held up to ridicule against these institutions. These same hospitals had to start just like ours, and no doubt encountered the same sort of complaints. Mistakes will be made in the administration of any project as complex as a hospital; others make them, and the Argenteuil Hospital is no exception.

In the feeding of patients, there are complications requiring special diets. However, a patient on normal diet has no cause to kick on hospital meals. Don't get the idea they serve prime ribs of beef and special salads as average fare. They don't, but you do get good and nourishing meals, well and attractively served. And you make your selection every day, so there's no question of monotony.

One thing I am sure of, there are no better nurses in any hospital in Canada. As far as I am concerned, there is no more dedicated group of persons, and they deserve that recognition. There is always some cynic who says, "Well, they get paid for it". But they're very wrong about this; as far as I am concerned, there is not enough money in the world to pay these people. Considering all the time, training and discipline they have undergone, then when they get through this training, the abuse they receive — you wonder just why they do it. I know of two nurses who took on shifts of 17 hours, just so the hospital wouldn't be understaffed. Certainly this doesn't make for key efficiency, but what can you do at times like this? You need to have a real love of humanity to do something like this. It's hard to understand; we immediately think there must be some angle or gimmick to it. But actually, there are some people around who like to help others.

There is an acute shortage of help in all hospitals, and Argenteuil is no exception. This situation is not likely to improve for a long time, unless the public take a long, hard look at what we are offering these nurses and orderlies. The abuse heaped upon hospital personnel is almost unbelievable; it makes you wonder just why people should want to become doctors and nurses. Praise is a rare commodity in this profession.

One legitimate complaint at this hospital is the lack of English-speaking nurses. This could be due to everything being done in French at the hospital; and all orders are this way — so you can see, anyone not too proficient in the language, handling these orders, especially if narcotics are involved, would hesitate to take a job. Logically, nurses in this class will go elsewhere, to Montreal or Ottawa. It's too bad that humanitarianism has to be thought of as a bilingual product.

These impressions cover only a few aspects of our hospital, but they are observations at first-hand. I'll admit I was also one of the sceptics, but no more. I've seen enough to make me proud of this organization, and I hope I can convey to the people the great debt they owe to this hospital. Instead of running it down, how about giving a little praise — and a little help too.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

THE PLAY'S THE THING

From the time I was a little girl and lisped "Mary Had a Little Lamb" with a toothless grin, I have been fascinated by what is often termed "histrionics." This takes many forms and at times develops impossible conceits. Fortunately, more often, it is evident in the growing popularity of summer theatre, which has proved over the years, a healthy training ground for dramatic ability.

I became aware of the cast of Rothesay Playhouse quite early one sunny morning. Bells of the lovely little Roman Catholic Church, just around the corner from where I was staying, awakened me as they summoned members of the congregation to early Mass. Soon the far away skirl of pipes warming up for Rothesay's annual Highland Gathering coaxed robins into a symphony of song. Mingling with their throaty chirp was a tenor voice lustily belting out a love song from Bells Are Ringing. The congregation of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, co-operating with many others in the town, loan their hall for rehearsals without charge to the players.

The formation of B & B Productions hinged on the chance meeting of Storch Boone and Patrick Baldauff. Storch, with youthful enthusiasm, was inspired to form a summer theatrical group and invited Pat to join him. Both of them New Yorkers, with considerable theatrical experience in their background, they accepted the invitation of a prominent businessman to come to Rothesay and establish a summer theatre. Storch and Pat have limitless praise for Rothesay's citizens and express continual gratitude for the support the group has received from them.

The entire success story, and success it must be termed though the company is subsidized by patrons and still dreams of the day when their bank balance will be written in black rather than red, can be attributed to co-operation. From the day the dilapidated old movie house was reclaimed by these industrious thespians, the story of B & B Productions has been a combination of hard work, inspired acting and enthusiastic willingness on the part of every member of the company to work harmoniously together.

Popularity Grows

Forty plays, musicals or comedies have been produced since the first day Storch and Pat took one look at their surroundings and evaluated what could be done with the crumbling walls and abused seats in the auditorium to make it respectable enough for the first performance of "Harvey".

Storch told me of the difficult time the company had to find places to live that first year. "Residents opened their homes to us and since then have been contributing props, costume materials and their enthusiastic applause to encourage us," he said.

There are two Canadians in this year's group of players. The youthful producers, who by the way study with Lee Strasberg during the winter, earn extra money doing TV commercials or by taking part in off-Broadway productions. The 30 young people, including actors, apprentices, technicians, scene and costume designers and a business manager, love Canada and hate to leave when the season ends.

Evidently their enthusiasm has spread, for 400 applications were received to join the company this summer.

Of Many Things

By Ambrose Hills

DON'T FORGET HOW IT WAS DONE!

A famous golfer used to tell amateurs their fault lay in remembering their bad shots, instead of concentrating on the good ones and how they were achieved. A famous writer advised amateurs on how to invoke the mood of success which led to each salable piece of writing. Now the chairman of the board of a great oil company has come up with a similar bit of advice for our Canadian society as a whole.

Mr. C. D. Shepard, of BA Oil, told a luncheon meeting in Brandon that "we are all in our respective busy lives apt to forget why and how this country grew great and why we have a great future. We are apt to concentrate on the imperfections we see around us and to forget that other forms of government which are not favorably disposed toward private enterprise have even more imperfections."

He pointed out that Canada is the second richest nation in the world: we rank second in the ratio of cars and television sets to population, to name only two items. We are out-ranked only by the USA — a country that also favors private enterprise.

Some will object that these are material blessings. So they are. But we are blessed in spiritual things as well — we have freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and economic freedom. Many believe that this spiritual freedom lies at the bottom of our material success, because wherever freedom is limited, material success does not last.

So perhaps the golfer's advice should apply to Canadians. Don't forget our successes, and how we achieved them. After all, we didn't get where we are through sheer luck. Our democratic system deserves a lot of the credit. We would be wise to retain it.

EXPO '65 OPENS FRIDAY IN LIONS' ARENA

Lachute's "Expo 65" will open with fitting ceremony on Friday, with the Hon. Gaston Binet, minister in the Lesage cabinet and M.P.P. for Deux Montagnes, officiating and a number of notables in attendance. Emcees for the inaugural proceedings will be Notary Richard Valois and Romeo Legault.

Special speakers for this big occasion will be the Chamber of Commerce president, Jos. Santini — followed by Robt. Dixon, president of the Lions Club; Mozart Carrière, chairman of the new Lions' Arena construction; and the Hon. Gaston Binet, who will perform the traditional ceremony of cutting the ribbon.

Reception and Parade

Invited guests will assemble at city hall at 10.30 a.m. sharp, and will join the parade to the Lions' Arena. This will be led by the bugle band and the majorettes.

After the opening ceremonies at the Arena, the guests will return to city hall, where a reception will be tendered by the mayor and council.

The organizing body, Lachute Chamber of Commerce, appreciates this gesture by the city fathers, in extending civic recognition and support. . . Friday at Expo will accordingly be regarded as "municipal day".

Program

Saturday morning, the exhibition will be hosted by the Chamber of Commerce, organizers of this promotional venture, who will be in charge.

Saturday afternoon will be under the aegis of clubs and organizations, notably the Lions, and civic-spirited townsmen who have helped in the materialization of Expo 65.

Saturday evening will be the occasion for a tour by Regional Chamber of Commerce representatives. Under arrangement of the regional president, Clément Legault, members and their wives will be welcomed from most of the groups affiliated in the regional organization.

Sunday afternoon, three key figures in this trade and industrial show, will be at the helm and accorded the prominence they deserve. They are — Messrs. Jacques Maheu, president of the Expo 65 committee; Jos. Santini, president of the Chamber of Commerce; and Georges Beaulieu, secretary-treasurer of Expo. Without the energy and devotion of these three stalwarts, the exhibition would never have materialized.

Finally, on Sunday evening, the show will be underlined by Ayersville Municipality jointly with the Richelieu Groceries, who are staging a promotion and providing refreshments for all the exhibitors.

Lachute's own Expo 65 is the co-operative product of many enthusiasts; if names of participants have been overlooked in the foregoing list, the reporters will be excused. The aim of this preview is to impress upon readers that Expo 65 required an overall plan, and allowed a limited time to achieve it. It is not solely a Chamber of Commerce project, but a real community effort. And only with enthusiastic public attendance will it achieve its aim — which is to

Congratulations and greetings from mayor of Lachute

Lachute, Quebec,

To my co-citizens . . .

1965 . . . the year of Lachute's "awakening". . .

Which brought the hiring of Mr. Hubert Pilon, overseer of our department of municipal works, one could even call him a Planning Director of the city, which will soon extend to the Village of Ayersville as well as to St. Jerusalem. We also witnessed the syndication of our municipal employees; the commencement of balancing our water supply with our needs; the fusion with Ayersville which should be a "fait accompli" shortly; other annexations which are on the road to realization; the beautification of the municipal park and at least two other projects of major proportion which will shortly be announced and finally, for the first time in the community: An industrial and commercial exposition.

The Expo in Lachute is due to the initiative taken by the Chamber of Commerce and the realization of this dream will indicate the actual development of the community, in the industrial and commercial aspects of our town.

Lachute's Expo '65 is the first step in a long march to place Lachute firmly on it's feet from an industrial and commercial point of view; the first opportunity many of the citizens have had to really see our assets in this field and I am certain the march will not cease until a well-organized and prosperous industrial city has been founded.

With this, my sincere congratulations to Messrs. Jos. Santini, president of the Chamber of Commerce and to Jacques Maheu, chairman of the Expo '65 committee and his hard-working assistants. Thanks also to all others who in any way have contributed to what is certain to be a successful effort. My best wishes along with those of the entire population who congratulate this accomplishment.

Thanks to all the exhibitors . . .

Zoël Saindon, M.D.

Drouin re-nominated at Liberal convention

All sections of constituency represented at party assembly

The nomination of Vincent Drouin, St. Eustache lawyer and incumbent of the Ottawa representation for this County, was enthusiastically applauded at a Liberal party rally in Lachute Auditorium last Wednesday evening. The hall was filled to capacity as partisans attended from all over the constituency, and many notables from the provincial and federal ranks of Liberalism were on the platform.

The nomination was sponsored by Roland Laliberté, of Ste. Marthe (Deux Montagnes) and seconded by Mrs. Annie Goldup, of Lachute. The chairman of the meeting was Roger Lagarde, Q.C.

For Mr. Drouin this will be his third successive contest for the federal representation, having defeated Notary J. O. Latour in 1962 and Roger Régimbal in 1963 — both Progressive-Conservative candidates. In the coming general election his opponent is again Mr. Régimbal, who is named the Progressive - Conservative standard - bearer in Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes.

Invited to speak on this occasion, Mr. Drouin voiced his gratification in the number of party notables who had come to support him, and in the solid backing evident from the whole constituency. (On the platform, besides the visiting supporters, were mayors from numerous municipalities in the two counties, Argenteuil and Deux Montagnes.)

"The coming election is an opportune time to vanquish the Conservatives, and to dispose of their chief. Until Mr. Diefenbaker has been crushed throughout the country, he will continue to hang on."

Why An Election?

"We are criticized for having brought on an election. But we have held a minority government for two years past, and the Opposition has raised a systematic obstruction to every measure placed before the Commons. How can you expect a government to legislate under such difficulties?" he asked.

"It was Mr. Diefenbaker who should have seen to the electoral redistribution after the 1961 census, when he was in power. He did not do it, and today he puts the blame on us, the Liberal party. The main reason he did not push redistribution is that he would have lost three seats in Saskatchewan."

Touching upon the various political ranks, Mr. Drouin remarked that the three best men in the New Democratic Party had turned Liberals. "When the N.D.P. decided to be serious about things, they voted Liberal. They have no hope of ever forming a government, and when they want to get anything done, they join the government ranks."

Of the Progressive - Conservatives, he claimed that Mr. Regimbal, his adversary, could never be more effective than his party, nor stronger than his leader, Mr. Diefenbaker.

As regards the Social Credit party, he compared them to "ladies of faint virtue" who offer themselves to all and sundry — especially referring to the defectors. Moïse Darabaner, he said, has been treasurer for Social Credit in Quebec City for two years past. Girouard, former S.C. member, had gone over to the Conservatives, rejected in his own riding and accepted by the Conservatives in Labelle.

Returning to the Progressive-Conservatives, he re-quoted Mr. Léon Balcer's claim, that "there's no place in the Conservatives for a French-Canadian." If that is true, then "there is no place for Quebec in that party," he argued. "Quebec has its extremists, but so has the Conservative party; and these are as dangerous as the others. Pearson did not give Quebec a flag; he gave a flag to Canada. Pearson shows no partiality to Quebec; he is fair minded and a great Canadian."

Achievements

Reviewing some of the achievements of the Liberal government, Mr. Drouin enumerated items of legislation to aid agriculture and the dairy industry; and the virtual appointment of an Agriculture deputy for the East, Maurice Sauvé, who has put the ARDA program in motion. Other legislation included:

Raising the age of students eligible for educational grants, enough to permit certain students to continue their studies.

Adoption of a labor code.

Raising the old age pension from $60 to $75 and lowering the required age. "The Liberals could promise to boost this to $100, as the Conservatives are promising, but our party aims for a balanced budget and we do not make promises without being sure we

Rash of break-ins reported to municipal police

Lachute Municipal police officers were kept on the move early Tuesday morning and on two occasions, would-be thieves narrowly missed being captured. Police Chief Real Chartrand reported break-ins in the C.P.R. station; L. St. Jacques Ltée; the St. Julien parish presbytery and the Red and White Store (formerly La Ruche), located on Hamford Street.

Police were called to both the presbytery and St. Jacques establishment when occupants of the building heard noises, but the arrival of the police officers found nothing but evidence of forced entry. Both calls were reported shortly after 4.30 a.m.

Tuesday morning brought two more reports of breaking and entry, the first from the Red and White Store, where manager Roland Raymond reported $150 cash missing, and the other from the C.P.R. station where everything was reported to be in order.

Evidence of another attempted robbery at the Cinema Lachute was reported to police, however nothing was stolen and no evidence of any forced entry to the building was found.

Fire and Police report for month of September

Activities for the Lachute police department for the month of September were presented to Council by Ald. Linton W. Armstrong, chairman of the Police and Fire Committee.

Prior to this report, Ald. Armstrong recommended that Police Cst. Claude Beaulieu (who before his employment with the local force, had specialized in investigations) be promoted to the rank of detective, and that he be given a raise of $5 per week to compensate for the use of civilian clothes. The motion was seconded by Ald. François Charlebois, and unanimously approved. Ald. Armstrong reported that the newly-appointed detective had been acting in this capacity for several months and the arrangement had proven to be highly satisfactory to date.

The police report included 12 automobile accidents, only one of which incurred personal injury, and a total of 12 arrests for infractions ranging from impaired or reckless driving to thefts, shop-lifting and driving without a permit.

A total of 3,025 miles was recorded on patrol, and protection was given 13 persons. Seventeen permits were issued, 43 court cases heard, and 29 tickets issued. Actual revenue from the police department for the month was $764.20.

Fire Department

The report of the month's activities for the Lachute volunteer fire brigade, prepared by Fire Chief Don MacCulloch, was also presented to Council by Ald. Armstrong.

A total of seven fires were reported, four being in Lachute and one each in Chatham, St. Jerusalem and The Gore. Fire damage in Lachute was estimated at $1,300, and that in Chatham $9,500; and the fires were caused by chimney or defective stove pipes, wiring or cooking mishaps. Payroll expenses for the month were $388, while the revenue from out-of-town calls amounted to $350.

Jim McGibbon, former mayor and M.P. succumbed to sudden illness Sunday

The passing of James Wright McGibbon on Sunday, October 10, at the Ross Memorial Hospital, Montreal, removed from this community one of the most respected and best known citizens.

Born in 1901, James McGibbon (Jim as he was better known) was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archie D. McGibbon. He received his education at Lachute Academy and McGill University, later joining the firm of A. D. McGibbon & Sons, lumber manufacturers.

As a young man he took a great interest in public affairs, serving as a councillor and later twice as mayor of Lachute Town, in 1951-53 and 1959-61. An ardent Liberal, he also represented the county as Federal Member of Parliament from 1940-45.

The late James W. McGibbon

Among other offices held, he was Master of Argenteuil Masonic Lodge No. 67 in 1939; a past-president of the Lachute Curling Club and a former member of the Lachute Lions Club. One of his favorite sports was hockey and for numerous years he was an active member of the Lachute team.

For the past twenty years he gave freely of himself in the promotion of education in the capacity of chairman of the Lachute Protestant School Board.

He is survived by his wife, Muriel Walker, a daughter Ann (Mrs. Ronald Peirson), of Kingston, a son Gordon, of Montreal, and three grandchildren. There also remain three sisters, the Misses May and Catherine McGibbon, of Lachute, and Jean (Mrs. J. K. Patterson, of Calgary), with three brothers, Robert, Douglas and George, all of this community.

A Masonic service was held on Tuesday evening at the MacKinnie Funeral Home.

The funeral service was held on Wednesday afternoon in the Lachute United Church, conducted by the Rev. W. Harold Thompson, with interment in the Lachute Protestant Cemetery.

Honorary pall-bearers were Messrs. H. Graves, E. Pullock, R. Muir, N. MacGeorge, D. Simon, A. Mitchell, H. Labonté and D. Labonté.

Mayor stalls on municipal aid for Arena site

A statement was made at Council by a substantial property owner, Michel Malacket, that — in the event Council did not reduce his taxes sufficiently to compensate for what was termed "unnecessary damage due to insufficient fully-trained firemen and defective hose and other equipment", legal action would be taken to recover his loss. . . Mr. Malacket is proprietor of a Main Street apartment block which on Friday, October 25, 1963, was considerably damaged by fire. The complainant made particular mention of the numerous lengths of hose which burst, which in his opinion, allowed the fire to get out of control, as the firemen were spending more time replacing broken hose than they were fighting the fire.

The statement was made after considerable discussion between Mr. Malacket, Mayor Dr. Zoël Saindon, and various members of the Council, during the regular session of Council held on Wednesday evening of last week.

Several months ago, Mr. Malacket appeared before Council and requested a reduction in taxes for the time his stores and apartments had been closed for repairs. Council took his request into consideration and granted a reduction of $500, which was approximately 50 percent of the tax paid per year. At last week's session, Mr. Malacket stated this reduction was not sufficient, and voiced his threat to take legal action. Mayor Saindon stated that there was nothing else the Council could do, and that if Mr. Malacket felt the town was responsible in any way, he would have to follow the proper legal procedures.

Other Business

Minor business and correspondence took up the remainder of the two-hour session which was opened by Ald. Linton W. Armstrong, pro-mayor, while Mayor Dr. Saindon took part in the opening of the Liberal convention; this was also held in the Auditorium, at the same time as the Council session. . . All members of Council were in attendance.

In reply to a request by Secretary-Treasurer Ronald Hebert, the proper forms and other necessary information for the 1965-66 Winter Works Program will be forthcoming from the Department of Municipal Affairs as soon as they are available. Another letter from this department expressed regret that the department would not be able to co-operate with the municipality in providing any form of a grant for 24 fire hydrants.

A letter from the Provincial Fire Commissioners' office stated that representatives of the department would be in Lachute shortly, to follow up the Council's request for a grant and investigation into the requirements of the local Fire Department, mainly insofar as a proposed ladder-truck was concerned. (On Friday of last week, Messrs. Mosse and Delage, the two awaited inspectors, were in Lachute and carried out their investigation. A report is expected within several weeks.)

Would Purchase Disused Garbage Site

A request to purchase the former dump situated behind the Argenteuil Hospital, was received by Council from Allan Hay, who offered the sum of $1,000 for the site; this is approximately two acres in area. Various members of the Council felt that, if the property was to be sold, tenders should be called for; it was also felt that, even before this, the municipal engineer, Hubert Pilon, should establish the exact size and location of the property, and what the past cost to the town had been. A motion to accept the price of $1,000 from Mr. Hay, which had previously

Protest on amalgamation jolts Council election

The "voluntary amalgamation" of Lachute and Ayersville municipalities, which was to have become official November 7 with the election of a mayor and a six-man council, will now be delayed for several weeks. . .

This situation was discussed with our newspaper representative last week by Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon, who disclosed that a petition from 149 Ayersville citizens had been received by the Department of Municipal Affairs — and a telegram sent direct to the Lieutenant-Governor from the Citizens' League of that municipality — protesting against the amalgamation. In consequence of this, the Department must hold an inquiry, and the amalgamation is accordingly postponed.

The provincial act on voluntary amalgamation provides that a protest from 10 percent of proprietors shall be sufficient to demand a public inquiry by the Department. Since Ayersville has 561 listed property holders, the number in opposition is therefore more than sufficient.

Municipal Elections

Among complications arising from this protest is the coming municipal election in Lachute. Four aldermen are concluding their term, namely, Dr. L. Middleton, Dr. R. A. Dumais, Messrs. L. Carrière and F. Charlebois, and must stand for re-election at the prescribed date in November — which happens to be All Saints' Day (the first Monday). On this account, the law calls for an election the following Monday, November 8, the same day as the federal election.

Adding to this complex situation, aldermen elected to the November vacancies would be franchised only till the time of the amalgamation, which would be only a few weeks — if the said amalgamation materializes. It appears ridiculous, in such circumstances, that retiring councillors should undergo the process of public election — and, according to the mayor's views, the taxpayers would be well advised to re-elect these representatives by acclamation.

Mayor Saindon also discussed the town fire department and dissatisfactions, now under official study, at his request. As regards the proposed civic amalgamation, he also gave assurance that he would be a candidate for the three-year mayoralty mandate. He outlined his program — which will be reported in a subsequent issue of The Watchman.

Therefore, the refrigeration pipes will be laid for ice-making, and cement will be poured after the winter season.

By BOB ATCHISON

A booklet in English issued by the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game, entitled the "Moose Hunter's Guide" and written by P. des Meules, F.E., should throw a good many sportsmen into a real daze. I naturally cannot quote the whole text, so you should try and pick one up. It will be worthwhile. Along with almost every other hunter, I had always considered the moose to be polygamous, and I certainly believe with good cause. However this booklet now states the moose to be monogamous, and for this reason the ratio should be about 50-50. This, of course, would be the natural thinking, but everything I have ever read on the moose, and by experts, states the species to be polygamous. I wonder just where the new information came from. It also states that 25-50% of first-year young will die from natural causes, hence the reasoning — an open season on everything; better to have them killed by hunters than that.

With the unreserved killing of calf, cow and bull in this province there sure seems to be little future for our game, especially the moose. Des Meules states that all other countries and territories have this type of hunting, so why not Quebec, with its herds of moose just waiting to be taken? To me this shows very little foresight. In the first place these other areas which have this type of hunting, made good and sure what they were doing long before they ever allowed this. By this, I mean tight and orderly controls were placed on these animals, for a good number of years prior to dropping the restrictions. We have never had anything like this in this province; for that matter, I don't suppose it was even thought of. Certainly we know there were some half-hearted attempts and restrictive laws enacted, but what can be expected — when a friend knows a friend who can always get you out of trouble.

Now let us consider the 25-50% that will die of natural causes the first year. This could be true in certain years, but let's not take it as a fact — which is what they expect us to do. So this leaves the hunters themselves. What is the actual kill by hunters? I'm sure this could be more easily figured out than the natural mortality. Another thing to think about: Just how many of these yearlings are ever registered? Not too many. I know of parties going out after moose for a period of 10 days, who openly admit they had moose steaks the whole time they were there, and from the young only. I suppose these were registered? Who's kidding who!

This little booklet is far too pat to be anything else but a good cover-up for something or other. We'll have to wait and find out, and this may be a lot sooner than we think. I believe, as sportsmen footing the bill for this Department, we should get a detailed account of all our big game, and especially the moose, before we accept the reasoning of this authority.

Now for more beefs. Remember the book written by Rachael Carson a few years back, entitled "The Silent Spring"? At the time of publishing, this book really had the public in a tizzy, and rightly so. Now just what has happened to that upsurge of protest? It's almost forgotten, by most people. We know that rigid controls have been placed on a great number of these pesticides by the United States, and they are continuing to clamp more regulations on the manufacturers every day. Yet we, as Canadians, just what have we done? Not very much, I would say. In case most of you have forgotten, these chemicals — DDT, Chlordane, Dieldrin, Endrin and so on — can and do concentrate in living organisms. So you get a heavy enough concentration over a few years, and that's it.

I have no idea of the total sales in Canada, but in the U.S. the sale of these chemicals runs into a billion dollars a year. Whatever the extent, this is poison being sprayed on our food, that in most cases does not wash off with water. Take an apple; the spray is applied under pressure, driven right into the skin of the fruit, then it penetrates into the pulp itself, lying domant until further sprays are added. All the time they are toxic to humans, and for that matter, every form of life; sooner or later there is a heavy enough contamination to be seriously harmful. So you say, this couldn't happen? Taking the U.S. once more as an example — if they are deadly serious about the control of these things, then we should be too.

To give one example of the killing properties in some of these sprays, as most of you know all shell fish are very susceptible to polluted waters, so give this some thought: A point-6 (.6) part per BILLION in the sea waters will kill shrimp within 24 hours... And I could cite many more cases from these hazardous pesticides, especially affecting dairy farmers. When you start having to throw milk out due to the high content of chemicals, later to lose your animals; this hurts everyone. So I'm painting a frightening picture. What are we going to do about it? We have an election coming up, and it might be worthwhile to find out how much our "men of the people" know about these things. Ignorance is bliss, they say; and I'll bet we have some very blissful politicians as regards this particular problem.

Now we come back to the detergents. I sure do love writing about these, and maybe you get tired of reading. This is good, for one of these days you are going to sit down and write your Member of Parliament, to ask him what he is doing about it personally. With the winter once more approaching, consider the millions of gallons of chemicals and waste that will be dumped into our waters. Then come spring, we find the fish mortality has once again been very high. I'm not saying anything about the drinking water we'll be using; with a little luck we MIGHT be able to purify it once more. We certainly are a stupid race for allowing things like this to go on.

I haven't had much news on the Chukar partridge so far. I did hear of one being shot, near the Dunany gate to Sir John's Lake, but I heard no particulars. The more we can find out about these birds, the better it will be for the future. Possibly the government would take an interest in stocking them, if things worked out, especially with the partridge being so short in other parts of the province. In this regard we in Argenteuil have been lucky, for there are more at this time than for a number of years.

A number of calls have been received about the Canada Geese. They have been passing over, heading south, for the past couple of weeks. One day, some of the school children managed to get a good look at a flock that had settled in the field down near Lac Filion. And this morning I saw about 50 of them that had pulled in to the field across from our home. These stayed for about two hours before taking off. I would imagine there will be a number more within the next few days. Reports have them landing all along the North River, either for rest or for food. At least, during the week they won't be too bothered by shooters; but last week-end on the North River was pretty rough on everything that could fly. Evidently there were a bunch of youngsters down that way, trying out their guns. The score, from what I was told — 1 pigeon, 1 gull, 1 grackle, 1 heron, but no ducks. This figures.

Rotarians given insight into alcoholism problem

Alcoholism and its problems was the subject of Rotary's guest speaker, last Thursday at the La Lorraine Motel.

"If you want to drink alcohol, that's your business," said the speaker. "But if an alcoholic wants to stop drinking, that's my business."

The objective of Gerard Courtois, local businessman, is to help those who are sick (for it is a sickness) from alcohol — not to campaign against alcoholic drinks. Having been "through the mill", he spoke with impressive authority.

A Pleasurable Visit

The regular dinner meeting of the Rotary Club was under the chairmanship of President Tom Johnston. Guests from the Hawkesbury club, Ray Harden, Bill Dunn and Lyle Carkner, were introduced.

The president then displayed a two-foot "Rotary wheel" emblem, in beautifully hand-carved wood, donated to the local club by fellow Rotarians and wives, two dozen of whom had visited from the Dallas, (Pennsylvania) club last week-end. As planned, they were given a warm reception Friday evening by most of the Brownsburg-Lachute members and wives, at the Motel.

The men, along with Rotarians from Westmount and Valleyfield, golfed at Carling Lake, where they were joined for lunch by wives of the hosts and guests, after a tour of J. C. Wilson Paper Company, Dominion Ayers Limited, including the popular store, and a drive through the colorful Laurentians.

An Authority by Experience

The guest speaker at this meeting — the proprietor of "Courtois Signs" — was introduced by Alex Kerr. Raised and educated in Lachute, married and with five children, four to 16 years of age, Mr. Courtois is past-president La Salle d'Accueil (Lachute Rehabilitation Centre for Alcoholics) and Diocese director of Lacordaire (and association of abstinents).

When introduced, the speaker — not wishing to be mistaken for an "idle busybody" — told of his own life. At 14, he started taking "home-made" beer, surreptitiously, from the home of a friend. At 20 he had a problem to control his drinking. Although he served in both the Navy and the Army, a total of nine years, and received much valuable training in the military intelligence section, he ruined his chances of a career through drink. The same thing happened in civilian life. He lost a good job with an insurance company, and ended on welfare relief.

Completely unable to control his drinking, he threw in the sponge and tried suicide with a razor on his wrists. Rescued by local police, he was taken to a mental hospital, where he spent four months — then being released with a certificate stating that he was sane.

After having gone through two "cures" the speaker assured his audience that total abstinence is the only way that one can be reasonably certain the habit will not return to plague the individual.

He told of a man who had stopped for eight years but felt that he had to take wine at his daughter's wedding, and he immediately took up where he had left off years before. Wine or beer can be as deadly, for some, as the strongest spirit. The speaker compared his position to that of a diabetic who knows that he must refrain from eating sugar, but doesn't want or expect other people to stop eating the sweet.

Mr. Courois felt that the problem is partly mental, because you lie to anyone — your wife, friends, your "bosses" — to justify yourself. He recalled phoning the doctor when he was in a bad way, stating that he had the grippe. The doctor knew the kind of grippe he was suffering from!

One must want to get control — but no person can do it alone; he needs help. It requires a change of habits and a change of personality. To admit that help is needed, is the first step; but to accept the help, and get to realize that, to live a normal, happy life, you do not need to drink — is a difficult but very desirable objective. One can no more be "a little alcoholic" than one can be "a little pregnant". To admit one is pregnant, even if an unwished-for condition, is one thing; but to accept it, and love the offspring, is something else.

Asked if the cures relied on a "tapering-off", the reply was "No.". Present drugs act on the brain fairly quickly, but only total abstinence through the help of people around you, can lead to control, once you have undergone the cure; but nothing is permanent.

Mr. Courtois mentioned the difficulties. It used to be that you had to make an excuse to have a drink; today it is the opposite. Research indicates that 60 people on the average are affected by every alcoholic, including his family, friends, etc., with no mention of tax money. Robberies are often committed to get money to carry on.

Speaking of research, Dr. Boudreau of Quebec City was mentioned as an international authority on alcoholism and rehabilitation, and has lectured at the Domremy Clinic at St. Jerome, where the speakers and others trained to be of assistance to alcoholics.

Mr. Courtois expressed a wish that every organization, such as the service club to which he was speaking, would have at least one member of their welfare committee specially trained to help alcoholics. The need for an English-speaking organization similar to La Salle d'Accueil, was also mentioned. Though they accept English patients, effective communication is difficult. The importance given to this problem by some large companies was pointed out by Mr. Courtois. Alcoholics are often very competent, hard workers. Industry has found that the problem does not make itself known until a man is 30 or 40 years of age, by which time he has considerable skill and knowledge of the business with ten or more years of service. They have found it profitable to set up a company clinic to rehabilitate, and to salvage valuable experience.

To some interesting questions and discussion, the speaker suggested that a person should never lay hands on an inebriate — it just antagonizes him — unless, of course, he is threatening bodily harm to someone. Tying him up could cause permanent brain damage. Sometimes a ridiculous yet simple solution has been used. For example, the man who was frantic with hallucinations that he was going to drown in imaginary water that was filling the room, and now up to his neck. A friend said, "I'll drill some holes in the floor." He left, returned with an imaginary drill, made some of the same kind of holes in the floor, and the patient was calmed.

A simple thing like having soft drinks availbale for the man who is trying to abstain, at a party where others are drinking, can be very helpful. "You never can tell," said the speaker, "by your consideration you may help an alcoholic."

The speaker was thanked by Wes Freeland with the thought that we are fortunate to have such a man, and La Salle d'Accueil, in our community.

Industry topic at Lions Club

An insight into one of Canada's major industries, the manufacture of aluminum, was given to clubmen at the Lions' meeting at La Lorraine Motel last week, when Mr. G. M. Robert, of Alcan public relations department, gave a brief but revealing talk.

Mr. Robert, a graduate of the Montreal Institute of Technology, recalled the first discovery and introduction of aluminum in 1807 and its costly production until 1886, when cheaper methods were developed after years of research. First seat of the industry in Canada was Shawinigan, where cheap electric power was the attraction. After 25 years the centre of manufacture moved to Arvida, and later, when power expansion appeared impractical in the Saguenay area, the immense power development and Alcan plant were built at Kitimat, B.C.

The raw material, bauxite, essential to aluminum production, comes largely from tropical and semi-tropical countries, and shipping facilities, both for import and export, are therefore an important factor. The output today is more than seven times the domestic need, and Alcan (the Aluminum Company of Canada) has sales outlets in no fewer than 100 countries.

The extensive use of aluminum in modern construction may be seen in one familiar instance — the Place Ville Marie complex in Montreal, in which there are 2,000 tons of aluminum, which is about one day's output of the Alcan plants. But besides structural beams, the metal is produced in ingots and many marketable shapes. For its torque strength and its light weight, it is invaluable in components for automobiles, while, at the finest extreme, it is rolled into foil three-10,000ths of an inch thick.

Junior football East-West final, 'Little Grey Cup'

The East-West junior football championship final will be played at McGill Stadium on Saturday, November 20.

The game will be under the sponsorship of the Karnak Shrine. This will be the first time the Little Grey Cup game is played in Montreal... Chairman of the event is Dave Campbell of Lachute, past-president of the Sportsmen's Association of Montreal, and long associated with sport in Montreal.

This is the 5th annual Shrine-sponsored "Little Grey Cup" Game. Previous games were played in Hamilton and Calgary and all were won by teams from the West: Saskatoon Hilltops over Rousemount Bombers in 1960, and Edmonton Huskies over N.D.G. Maple Leafs in 1962, 1963 and 1964.

Over 10,000 fans saw last year's game in Calgary, and an even larger crowd is expected to be on hand for this year's classic at McGill Stadium. All proceeds go to the Shriners Hospital For Crippled Children, Montreal.

NEED NAIL SET

When you want to drive finishing nails below the surface of wood, a nail set is necessary. Use it for no other purpose. It is not meant for punching holes, which will damage its cup shaped tip.

To use a nail set properly, rest the little finger of the hand holding the nail set against the head of the nail. This helps prevent the nail set from slipping off the head of the nail and damaging the wood.

As you hammer, keep your eyes on what you're doing, using a gentle tapping motion. Stop when the nail is about one-sixteenth of an inch below the surface. Fill the hole with matching wood putty, plastic wood, or similar material.

And wish she was not called away."

The heartaches in this world are many,
But the loss of our mother was
The greatest of any."

At the end of one long year."

"Love's greatest gift, Remembrance;
Please God forgive a silent tear,
A constant wish that she were here;
Others were taken, yes, we know,
But she was our mother and
We loved her so.
She bade no one a last farewell,
Nor ever said Good-bye,
She was gone before we knew it,
And only God knows why.
If all the world was ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of Mother,
Come smiling through the door."

Learning first hand

A group of Lachute High School students were in attendance at the meeting and made good use of the opportunity to interview the Liberal nominee on numerous questions. A similar interview was held with the Hon. John Diefenbaker during his recent tour. — Photo, Syd Drew can keep them," explained Mr. Drouin.

Establishment of transferable pensions.

Creation of half a million new jobs, and consequent stabilization of the country's economy.

Adoption of a new flag, for the whole of Canada.

"Thanks to Mr. Pearson", said the candidate, "Canada is going forward not only as a nation but on an international front, where our prestige had suffered under Mr. Diefenbaker and his Conservatives."

Platform of Policy

Outlined for future plans of Liberal policy were these items:

Medicare, nation-wide sickness-insurance program.

Organization of a General Development Society, similar to the SIDBEC organism for industrial development in Quebec.

Aid to the establishment of specialized trade workers in the vicinity of General Motors at Ste. Thérèse, Quebec.

Adoption of "O Canada" as a national anthem.

On the contentious issue of the 11 percent tax upon building materials, Mr. Drouin claimed that this was reimbursed to the smaller home-builder through the $500 rebate on winter construction.

"We owe all these accomplishments and all our future anticipations to the Liberal team, but foremost, to our chief, Mr. Pearson, who has surrounded himself with able men. You cannot do otherwise than vote for the Liberal party if you only compare what the Conservatives had done during their five years in office," the candidate concluded.

Mr. Bryce Mackasey, M.P., and the Hon. Gaston Binette also spoke briefly in the cause of the party and its re-election to office.

been made by Ald. Edmund McFaul and seconded by Ald. Dr. Lyall Middleton, was withdrawn until the report had been prepared by the engineer. . . Mr. Pilon was also asked to look into the servitudes on the Pollock and Lister properties, near White's Bridge.

Border-line Confusion

A motion to accept the sum of $50 from Gaetan Leclair to clear a much-confused water account for the apartment building complex which he purchased from W. M. Cottingham last year, was made by Ald. Linton W. Armstrong and seconded by Ald. Laurier Carriere, following considerable discussion. Ald. Dr. Middleton voted against the motion, stating he did not feel the account should be closed for that sum. The buildings in question are on the boundary line between Lachute and the Parish of St. Jerusalem, and of recent years, both proprietors have been paying water tax to the Parish of St. Jerusalem and not to Lachute, although a number of the apartments are within the Lachute limits. . . A suggestion for an amicable solution for the future was not voted on, however, as the Council felt it would take more study, and that circumstances might change which would alter the situation.

Furore on Assistance To Lions' Arena

A heated discussion between Mayor Dr. Saindon and Aldermen François Charlebois and Laurier Carrière, resulted from a question asked by Bob Dixon, president of the Lachute Lions Club. The question pertained to the signing of the deed for the recently constructed arena, and the mayor pointed out that the agreement had been accepted in principle only, and that the deed and other information would have to be studied by a lawyer; his report would then be turned over to the Council for their decision. The mayor was insistent on demanding a complete expense sheet and financial statement of the construction phase of the building. Due to these protests from the mayor, a motion by Ald. Charlebois, that the town proceed immediately with the purchase of the property and that the mayor and secretary-treasurer be authorized to sign all necessary documents, did not find a seconder; and the matter was held over for a special meeting to be held shortly. Mr. Dixon was informed of the documents Mayor Saindon required, and he assured Council they would have them without delay.

Additional council discussions and correspondence will appear next issue.

Mrs. Wm. Graham welcomed Mr. Stollmeyer on behalf of Unit 2 of the United Church Women, and he then gave a most interesting lecture on these two West Indian islands, illustrating his talk with beautiful colored slides. There were several school children in attendance, mainly those who are studying the West Indies in their classes this year. The large audience was given a complete picture of life in Trinidad, and the speaker dealt most interestingly with the people, products, vegetation, animals, fish, birds, exotic flowers, and plantations, which make these islands so attractive to tourists. The government of these countries is very stable, and although there are small revolts from time to time in neighboring Venezuela, the people of Trinidad have no uprisings. In fact, rebel leaders from the mainland sometimes take refuge there until the time is propitious for a return to Venezuela.

Mr. Stollmeyer described and showed a picture of the huge asphalt lake — a world phenomenon. Fifteen million tons of asphalt have been removed from this lake and the supply seems to be inexhaustible. Scientists have tried, but never found the bottom. There are pools of water on top of this lake, in which there are fish quite different from any other kind in the world.

The pictures of the large plantations, orange groves, piles of cocoa pods and cocoanuts, the netting of fish along the wide and beautiful beaches, the rivers, blue skies, lush tropical fruits and flowers — made the audience realize the importance of these Commonwealth countries.

Togabo is Robinson Crusoe's island, and is a tourist's paradise. The hotels are situated overlooking the sandy beaches which extend for miles along the coast. One very beautiful beach on the south coast is where Robinson Cruose and his man, Friday, used to roam. The most spectacular Mardi Gras celebrations in the world are held near Scarborough, the capital of Tobago, and last for two days before Ash Wednesday each year. A few people among the audience had visited Tobago, and enjoyed seeing slides of familiar places, while the rest wished they might have an opportunity to spend some time in such a fascinating environment.

At the close of the lecture, Mrs. Gordon Davidson thanked Mr. Stollmeyer most cordially on behalf of the United Church Women. Refreshments were served, and booklets about Trinidad and Tobago were given to the school children.

Ont. W.I. group hosted here by County Institute

Members of the Argenteuil County Women's Institute on Friday last were hosts to 82 W.I. members from the Ontario counties of Essex, Kent and Lampdon. The visitors were on a week-long tour of Quebec province and had previously been entertained by W.I. branches in the Eastern Townships, Quebec City, Montreal and Macdonald College areas and left Lachute for Ottawa, where they spent the week-end.

Following the arrival of the guests, a luncheon was held in the Lachute United Church hall, after which Mrs. Charles Hall, County president, extended a greeting to the local County W.I. executive and provincial W.I. conveners present, with gifts from her group and introduced several of the visiting members, including Mrs. Kerr, who was 87 years of age.

Many of the ladies expressed delight at the warm welcome they had received while touring Quebec and promised to be "Eighty-two goodwill ambassadors".

UNICEF brings youngsters closer

UNICEF is essentially a crusade by children for children, and youth groups play a large part in the UNICEF Hallowe'en program. The older children not only have their hand-out collections, but, in the best traditions of responsibility, they accompany the junior collectors on their fun-filled Hallowe'en expeditions. The protective attitude of the teen-agers towards the younger group is an engaging highlight of Hallowe'en.

Thanksgiving at Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Ch.

"While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest shall not cease. This has been God's promise to man down through the centuries," said the Rev. C. Ritchie Bell, of the Presbyterian College, in a sermon at the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church on Sunday last. "And He has never failed, for where the harvest has been lacking in one part of the world, it has been abundant in another."

"We stalk about the earth as if we were the lords of creation but, like every other living thing, we are dependent upon the Creator, the great Giver of all, for this miracle of the harvest. So many modern people forget the Lord their God, and think that man is all-sufficient. We need to be reminded that we are all dependent upon God and upon our fellowman."

The harvest reminds us not only of our dependence, but upon God's faithfulness. We take so much for granted in this country; we need to be reminded how blessed we are, compared with many of the nations of the world which have been classed as the "have not's".

"We must show God that there is a response in our hearts to His faithfulness, for He has given us much. . . In the harvest field we learn that there is design. Sowing is not done haphazardly. There is design and purpose. God's design and plan will work out. It depends upon the man who sows the seed, and the preparation of the soil. God will do his part."

"Go forth," the minister concluded, "Sow your seeds of friendship and understanding, love and peace, and watch the harvest in this country."

The church was tastefully decorated with fruits, vegetables and autumn leaves.

Former resident met early death in Br. Columbia

A 22-year-old shovel operator lost his life in a logging accident on Tuesday of last week, October 5, in the Franklin River Division logging operation, located some 200 miles south of the city of Port Alberni, B.C., on Vancouver Island.

R.C.M.P. investigating officers

said that Denis Paul Provencal, of Port Alberni, was killed when he fell from his machine onto the rigging and then was struck from behind by a large stump, while working in the logging operations.

Mr. Provencal was born in Calumet, where he was widely known and favorably remembered. He had lived in Port Alberni for the past nine years.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife Connie and an infant daughter, Phyllis, living at 120 Fourth Avenue South, Port Alberni; his father, Joseph and his brothers Roderick and Francis, in the Alberni; Victor, of Nanaimo, B.C., and Randall, of Vancouver; along with three sisters, Laura (Mrs. D. MacRae, of Montreal); Janet (Mrs. D. MacRae), of Calumet, R.R. 1) and Florence (Mrs. N. Parker), of North Vancouver.

Introducing the tuned car. 1966 Buick.

What makes a car a car is styling, performance, braking and ride and handling. Only when they're all tuned together is the car a Buick.

Buick Riviera

Buick Skylark Sport Coupe

Buick Wildcat 4-Door Hardtop

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

We tuned the 1966 Buick. Not just the engine, but the whole car. We tuned all the elements. Like you would the instruments in an orchestra. And just as the tuned orchestra gives the effect of one-ness, the tuned car says blended perfection from bumper to bumper and road-line to roof-line.

Tuned Performance. We tuned Buick performance. Not just by increasing the efficiency of the six Buick engines, but by tuning everything that translates this power into activity. The transmission, the full coil suspension, the balanced drive-shaft, the brakes. All working together. All tuned.

Tuned Ride. We tuned the traditional Buick ride. And came up with something truly unique. Boulevard comfort with enough road-feel to let you know you're in charge. Then we added extra jolt-cushioning rubber to places that get a lot of pounding. The result is a very special kind of ride. A tuned ride.

Tuned Styling. We even tuned the way Buick looks. Possible? Look at any one of the Buicks. Every sweeping line and gentle curve suggests motion. Inside and out, the car has been designed to move. And to say so. Quietly. But emphatically. That's tuned styling.

Drive the 1966 Buick. Riviera, Electra 225, Wildcat, LeSabre, Skylark or Special Deluxe. They're all Buicks. All tuned cars. All tuned to you. Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?

Be sure to watch "Telescope", "The Fugitive" and "The Red Skelton Hour" now showing on television. Check local listings for time and channel.

Leisure now a 'hazardous occupation'

INCREASED leisure time has created a parallel increase in off-the-job hazards, and Canada's safety workers must pay more attention to recreational safety — according to C. E. Carson of Toronto, recently-elected president of the National Safety League.

"Safety in business and industry is well looked after, and fortunes have been spent to render the environment of the employee a safer one. The Safety League is concerned with the possibility of a shift taking place where leisure may well become a more hazardous 'occupation'."

At this same conference, held in Ottawa, the retiring president, W. E. Austin, of Oshawa, reviewed his decade of participation in accident prevention work, reaching the conclusion that "the one great mystery of life today is: how have we managed to survive?" He felt modern methods of "manslaughter and maiming have become more sophisticated, but are just as deadly."

P. G. McLaren, the League's general manager, told the meeting, "Accidents are rapidly overtaking disease as a cause of disability, death and costly injuries." Of Canada's 145,850 deaths in 1964, accidents caused 10,564 of them, he said. Next to the motor vehicle the home accounted for most of the fatal accidents and the greatest number of injuries.

Uneasiness on pesticides

BENEFITS derived from the use of chemical pesticides on Canadian gardens, crops and forests, far outweigh the dangers attached to them — according to scientific opinion. A Reader's Digest article has attempted to evaluate this controversy, which has repeatedly been brought to the attention of our "Argenteuil Outdoors" readers.

Last year the spraying of more than 50 million pounds of poison saved Canadian crops from hordes of insect pests that would otherwise have despoiled our food and spread disease. Because of pesticides (it is argued) Canadians have never eaten better, their health has never been more robust. Most agricultural experts agree that if our present pest-killing methods were discontinued, food would eventually have to be rationed. Housewives would line up to buy inferior food, blemished tomatoes, scrawny potatoes and seed corn pocked with wormholes. And the price of most food items would double.

Despite the undisputed benefits, however, uneasiness about the safety of chemical pesticides has stirred widespread apprehension. People in New Brunswick have blamed bud-worm-control chemicals for the deaths of millions of salmon. Bird lovers have fought attempts to save elm trees because the spray may kill robins. One landowner wants mosquitoes sprayed; his neighbor fears that DDT will kill fish.

The biggest scare is over pesticide poisons in food. You may swallow minute quantities when you use vegetables from your garden, drink milk, or eat fish. But according to Dr. C. A. Morell, recently retired director of the Canadian Food and Drug Directorate, "there is no convincing evidence of any case of chronic toxicity resulting from pesticide residues in food in this country." The biggest danger is careless human use of chemicals that can be deadly. They've killed a number of people.

Researchers are constantly seeking more effective and safer pesticides. At Belleville, Ont., the Federal Department of Agriculture maintains the world's largest pest-control research centre.

Scientists agree that we need more thorough inspection of food, stricter controls over the use of chemicals. "But restriction must not tie the hands of research chemists who are urgently needed to help meet the greatest challenge of the 20th century — producing enough food for a world in which half of the people are hungry," — it is contended in this article.

Slow steps in comprehension

CANADIANS have chuckled for a long time over stories about American tourists crossing the border in mid-summer with skis strapped on their cars. Many of us have taken for granted that our neighbors to the south don't know much about this country.

Now a committee of 11 Republican Congressmen has reported that Americans display an "appalling ignorance about Canada" and said something should be done to overcome it. The group makes 26 specific recommendations to end this ignorance. One of them deals with a particularly touchy point — that which prevents Canadian subsidiaries of American companies from trading with certain countries.

An example of this was the refusal of some subsidiary milling companies in Canada to export flour to Cuba because the U.S. Trading with the Enemy Act bans it. A few years ago there was a similar furore over export of automobile parts to China.

The report says the U.S. government should put guidelines for American companies operating in Canada which would allow subsidiaries to trade with such Communist countries as Cuba and China. It proposes that subsidiaries should be urged to sell shares to Canadians, retain Canadian directors, use Canadian management talent, and buy from Canadian sources.

The report does not represent official Republican policy. But the committee represents more moderate elements in the party, and obviously will carry considerable weight.

In another significant aspect, the report recommends an American appreciation of the value of an independent Canadian foreign policy.

"Surely the history of the post-war years has demonstrated that a Canadian foreign policy independent on many issues from U.S. leadership has proved an invaluable source of strength to the very causes to which U.S. foreign policy is dedicated," it says.

Part of the trouble in Canadian-American relations may be that we Canadians are reluctant to speak out on issues which vitally concern us. But it is also due in part to the assumption of many Americans that we think as they do on all major political problems.

If the Republican report means that the United States is becoming aware that Canada has its own identity, its own interests and its own policies to pursue — then it is a step in the right direction.

Pass the shovel

SHORTER election campaigns would be advantageous to all concerned and might even contribute to the longevity of the leading contenders — says the Fort Erie Letter-Review. It would be an economy for the parties and the candidates. It might even save a good deal of the taxpayers' money if the campaigns were so short that the principal parties would not have time to think up new ways of shovelling out the cash, in the treasury or to be created.

Prime Minister Pearson is shovelling it out at a great rate and Dr. Diefenbaker is promising to do as much or more when, as he hopes, he gets hold of the shovel. It may be that the most conspicuous vote-getting expenditure, real and promised, has to do with education, which basically is none of the business of the federal parties. Education used to be the sole prerogative of the provinces and it was a prerogative jealously guarded — concludes this commentatary.

Editorial in Lake of Two Mountains Gazette (Sept. 30, 1965)

We have been watching with interest the many and varied stories originating from Canada's west coast on Premier Lesage and his bilingualism selling efforts.

At some points he has had no trouble in getting his message across, but at others he has had problems, such as the one at Victoria where an elderly lady following the meeting was heard to mutter following his desk thumping bilingualism plea, "I'd just like to get his ear for a moment" — and she didn't mean to talk into it either.

We would like to assure the woman in Victoria it wouldn't do her any good even if she did "get his ear for a moment" as we have found from past experience that while bilingualism is what our Quebec premier and m.p.p.'s say they want, they are not masters in their own house.

Signs on the new Trans-Canada Highway are unilingual, much to the distress of tourists who don't know the difference between Mademoiselle and a Madame. This will be rectified stated the Hon. Mrs. Claire Kirkland Casgrain some months ago but only last week more signs — in French only — were erected.

The problem of receiving good news releases that we can't use is a problem that the Hon. Paul Gerin-Lajoie said he would look into some months ago. We still get them entirely in French and not only are the people deprived of what value they impart but the cost of preparing them, postage charges, etc., all comes out of YOUR pocket and MINE and right into the wastepaper basket.

IF Premier Lesage wants bilingualism we suggest he set the example at home, in his own province first, and with his ministers prove they are masters in their own house.

HOLES ARE ACT OF GOD

Espanola, Ontario (CP) — The town council of this Northern Ontario town has ruled that potholes in the streets are wrought by the will of God, and so has refused to pay tow-truck costs for two angry motorists whose cars got stuck. "If we pay," said Mayor Fern Giroux, "we may well have another 100 motorists to satisfy."

SUGAR AND SPICE

Tips For Happy Hunting

It's no use. I just can't hold out any longer. It's that time of year again. And what would you do if, from all across the land, thousands of letters were pouring in from anxious wives, imploring you to reprint your Hunting Safety Tips?

Hundreds of women today owe a happy widowhood and a subsequent happy remarriage to Smiley's Hunting Safety Tips.

But it's not just the women who want the tips reprinted. Many a veteran hunter has written to tell me that he owes his life to a careful perusal of them. Here's one such testimonial.

"Dear Smiley: I owe my life to a careful perusal of your Hunting Tips. Last fall, I was lost in the bush. For the first two days and nights, I didn't worry, because I'd done everything in the standard manual. I didn't panic. I changed into dry socks, as they suggest. I looked at my compass and my watch regularly, which told me I was lost and what time it was.

"But as night drew down for the third time, I became discouraged. I thought of my wife and kiddies. Yes, that's how discouraged I was. Suddenly I remembered your suggestions for lost hunters. You had told us, if lost, to panic like hell, run wildly through the woods in circles, shout at the top of the lungs, pray like an archbishop, fire the rifle madly, and if all else failed, set fire to the bush. I tried it and it worked. I was rescued within 15 minutes. I finish my term for arson this month, and am looking forward to meeting you in the woods. Yours, Veteran Hunter."

That gives you an idea of how impractical the ordinary hunting rules are, and how down-to-earth are mine. That chap might be in there yet, changing his socks and gawking at his compass.

Well, let's get on with the Tips, revised and brought up to date. On one thing, I am in full agreement with the old-fashioned safety rules. It's the one which says, "Never mix gunpowder with alcohol." Ever taste it? Ugh! The reason for that rule is that some hunters will drink anything.

Never shoot at a partridge that resembles your hunting companion, even if it's sitting in a tree. He may have a perfectly good reason for perching on that limb.

It is considered unsporting to shoot tractors while the farmer is riding on them. And, of course, it is considered dangerous to shoot at farmers. They have a nasty habit of shooting back, and are crack shots.

It is bad form to retrieve your own ducks, especially when shooting from a boat. Let the dog go after the duck. If you have no dog, forget about the duck. It is extremely unnerving to other sportsmen to see you frogging it through the reeds, fully clad, with a duck in your teeth.

Always carry a few hand-grenades slung from your belt. They come in handy when you arrive at a barbed-wire fence you can't get over, under, or through.

Never take a chance when you approach fallen game that you have winged. That rabbit may be playing possum. You can avoid a nasty kick right on the hunting boot if you pump about five more shots into him.

If you hear something that sounds like the snarling cough of a lion, don't shoot. It's probably your hunting partner, enjoying his first cigaret of the day.

Never hand a gun across a fence or into a boat with the muzzle pointing toward yourself. Always make sure it's pointing at the other fellow.

Do learn to operate your safety catch. It's humiliating, in the field, to have a deer walk over and lick your face while you're struggling with it. And it's embarrassing, at the inquest, when you have to admit you don't know when it's on, and when it's off.

Things 'n Stuff

By Walter Henry Jackson

A FEW LAUGHS, MAYBE!

"John" said the wife of a good-for-nothing husband, "I'm ashamed of the way we have to live. Mother pays our rent. Aunt Mary buys our clothes, and Sister sends us money for food. I'm sorry we have to live like that."

"You should be," John replied. "You've got two uncles that don't send us a dime!"

Said a farmer's wife: "I've never heard anyone talk as fast and as much as our new hired man — he's never still. Talk, talk, talk, day and night."

"I know," said the farmer. "But it's not his fault. His father was an auctioneer and his mother was a woman."

A woman with more money than education had just returned from a vacation in Europe. "Paris," she said, "is marvellous. Such style, such culture! Everyone is so educated. Even the street cleaners speak French!"

* * *

Two colored boys were discussing what they would like to be when they were grown up. "Ah'd like to be a philanthropist," said the first boy.

"What's a philanthropist?" asked the other.

"Darned if I know," said the first, "but they always seem to have a lot of money!"

THE CAMPAIGN & THE CANDIDATES

Probing The Platforms

A slightly clearer picture of the political party platforms — what each party says it will do if elected Nov. 8 — began to emerge from this week's campaigning.

As the campaign rounded the bend and into its final half, Prime Minister Pearson hit the hustings in earnest for the first time. It was Liberal party strategy to avoid "peaking" before election day, and the campaign was geared to put the Liberals in best light just before the voting.

It was the PM's intention to stress the party's record — as governments always do — with special emphasis on prosperity (record employment, a national gross product increase of nine per cent., income tax reductions of 10 per cent.) and on social welfare (a federal labor code with a $1.25 minimum wage, easier farm credit, extension of family allowances to 18 for students, interest-free loans to university students, old age pensions raised to $75, establishment of the Canada Pension plan, launching of a war on poverty and a firm committment to launch a national medicare plan).

In addition, Liberal candidates mentioned the Maple leaf flag, the new federal department of industry, the bi-and-bi commission and the auto trade pact with the U.S., which is supposed to create 30,000 new jobs in the next few years even if car prices remain the same.

The Prime Minister called again for a majority government, having stressed earlier that he would not head another minority administration.

The opposition parties have not attacked the Liberals head-on on any of the above issues, although Conservative leader Diefenbaker took a swipe at the government's medicare plans. He said the Conservative party believes in the principle of medicare but he has refused to commit himself on whether he would initiate a private or a government-sponsored scheme.

While attacking the government on the corruption issue, Mr. Diefenbaker has also stressed national unity as the country's greatest need. Using the new unity of the Conservative party as an example, he has hit out at what he calls "Pearson Liberalism" and has asked Liberal voters to join him "so this land of ours, with God's help, may be worthy of the land in which in days long past some gave so much."

Mr. Diefenbaker also blamed government inaction for the Quebec bankruptcy scandal in which 12 people may have been murdered.

In contrast with past campaigns when the Diefenbaker image took precedence over the Tory party label, the current campaign is clearly aimed at putting the Conservatives back into contention as an alternative to the Liberals, whether or not Dief stays on after Nov. 8.

The PC platform has stressed additional economic aid to slow-growth regions, along with the promise of $100 per month old age pensions and such gimmicks as six per cent. consumer loans.

An offer of free college education to all able to absorb it has topped the New Democratic party's platform, with Tommy Douglas also calling for immediate medicare and government action to cope with the problems of automation.

He attacked the Liberals' student loan plan as a disgraceful substitute for free education, but the Liberals answered with a $40 million scholarship fund for the next four years.

Despite the increased campaigning, there still appeared to be a lot of apathy among voters. In many contests, local issues took precedence over party loyalty and at this stage, the campaign almost took on the appearance of 265 individual elections. The strength of individual candidates might yet be the deciding factor.

U.N. Charter of Human Rights

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

James Russell Lowell in "The Present Crisis" wrote: "They have rights who dare maintain them," and ten years ago the delegates to the United Nations dared to adopt the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, December 10, 1948. This was marked by fitting observances all across Canada.

Discussion of a Bill of Rights for Canadians has focused attention on the Charter of Human Rights approved by the United Nations. This is not a legal document. It expresses the world's collective conscience on the relationships which should exist between individuals and groups. Here is a measuring rod by which actions may be judged.

Discrimination of any person because of his race, color, sex, language, religion, political opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, is condemned. So is slavery, torture, arbitrary arrest and exile. Many of the articles deal with the rights of everyone — the right to life, liberty, and security of person, the right to recognition everywhere as a person before the law, the right to travel, to marry and found a family, the right to own property, to free choice of work, to education.

Only one article (29) deals not with rights but with duties. It states "Everyone has duties to the community to which alone the free and full development of his personality is possible." The many rights try to define and make clear how a free man or woman should be able to live. The Charter interprets the four great freedoms — freedom from fear, from want, freedom to worship, and freedom of speech and of the press.

When fathers and mothers attended school they learned about the Magna Carta. Today's boys and girls should also be familiar with this most recent of international documents on freedom, the Declaration of Human Rights. In our homes, school children must be encouraged to take an interest in the world in which they live. Every Canadian should know just what this Charter contains. Parents should not leave it to school teachers to comment on the importance of this document adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1948. Copies may be obtained from the United Nations Association in Canada.

During the last decade, clubs and groups in youth Model United Nations gatherings have studied this document. From time to time reference to it has been made in the press and on the radio. One women's group assigned the thirty articles of the Charter to different members to read aloud and comment on briefly. The discussion which followed was a lively one. This blue print could be used by any club featuring a Public Affairs night and librarians at our public libraries would be glad to assist in the search for interesting material.

There is value in thinking in terms of all human beings who are — (or should be) — as article one points out, motivated by "reason and conscience to act in a brotherly way." Unfortunately sometimes the zealous promoters of human rights forget the last phrase "in a brotherly way." Confucius said in 500 B.C., "S z hai dj nui qua hson — di, ye" — (Within the four seas all men are brothers.) In Matthew's gospel Jesus gave the fundamental reason for brotherhood: "One is your Father. . . and all ye are brethren."

The ideals behind each article are essentially Christian, although men and women of other faiths contributed to this writing. One commentator has dared to call this Charter the greatest event in human history since the birth of Christ. Another has named it, after the Beatitudes, as the finest statement of "the good life".

AT THE PSYCHIATRIST'S

A patient entered a psychiatrist's office to enquire about the cost of treatment. He complained that before going to sleep every night he was troubled by small animals running back and forth under his bed. The doctor explained that he could solve the man's problem in three treatments at $50 per treatment. The patient said he would think it over, and departed. He never came back. One day some weeks later he met the doctor on the street. "Now, how about your problem?" asked the doctor. "Oh, I have no problem now. My brother solved it for me." "Is your brother a psychiatrist?" "No." said the patient. "He's a carpenter. He sawed the legs off my bed!"

A lady came in one day and wished to make an appointment for her husband. "He keeps putting it off," she said. "He suffers from a strange delusion. He thinks he's a refrigerator."

"That doesn't sound like a very serious delusion," said the psychiatrist.

"Maybe not to you," retorted the lady. "But it is quite serious to me. Every time he sleeps with his mouth open, that little light keeps me awake!"

Eyesight and the Snellen chart

In 1863, Snellen invented a very useful test for determining whether eyesight was satisfactory or not at a distance. A series of different size letters placed at 20 feet from the subject can indicate if he sees well with each eye or both eyes.

For many years, vision experts and others have used the terms 20/15, 20/10, 20/40, 20/200 or others. What is the meaning of these symbols?

20/20 means, we see what a person with normal eyesight sees at 20 feet. This norm is based on distant visual demands determined in 1863. These distant vision demands have not changed significantly with the exception of the field of aeronautics.

20/15 means that we see a row of symbols at 20 feet whereas the person with normal vision sees them at 15 feet. Theoretically, but not always practically, this is much better than 20/20 vision.

20/40 means that we see at 20 feet what a normal observer sees at 40 feet. This is inferior to 20/20 vision.

In our modern age, distance vision is not the only visual skill needed. The old Snellen chart must gradually lose its importance to more modern means of evaluating vision.

To say it is impossible for humans to reach the moon will never prevent them from trying. Modern optometry has the means to screen out visual problems in a far superior way than the century-old Snellen test chart.

All optometrists can give you information on modern methods of vision screening, based on the visual demands of school, driving, factory, etc. They can determine your visual needs and advise appropriate care for optimum visual efficiency.

FRUIT ROLL-UPS

Tender, yeast-raised dough deliciously laced with nuts, raisins and pineapple, Fruit Roll-Ups are a special treat for your coffee klatch or tea party.

Roll-up for teatime special

Ability to produce cakes has been considered the final test of a cook's art throughout the ages. The early Egyptians made cakes from white flour and leavened dough sweetened with honey and flavored with spices. The Romans served what was probably the first wedding cake, a leavened production from which the bride and groom shared one slice. The Romans also prepared cakes to offer to Ceres, the goddess of the harvest; and for centuries, Egypt, India, Greece and China made frequent cake offerings to their gods.

In mediaeval England, a huge white Twelfth-Night cake was a "must" for any family that could afford it. The "cake" to quote a chronicler of the times, "was one of incredibly fancy design, decorated with all the imaginable images of all things animate and inanimate — stars, castles, kings, cottages, dragons, serpents, and innumerable other forms in snow-white confectionery, painted with variegated colors".

History records that at least one Twelfth-Night cake was filled with live birds and another with croaking frogs.

You can more easily set their mouths watering with this recipe for Fruit-Roll-Ups. Pineapple, raisins, chopped nuts and cinnamon make the delicious filling for this special teatime treat.

Fruit Roll-Ups

(Yield — 6 to 8 servings)

1 Cup light corn syrup, ½ cup brown sugar, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, ½ cup chopped nuts, ½ cup raisins, ½ cup cubed pineapple, 2 cups once-sifted all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 6 tablespoons shortening, ½ cup milk, ½ cup butter or margarine.

Preheat oven to 450 deg. F. (hot).

Grease a 9-inch round pan and pour in corn syrup.

Blend together brown sugar, cinnamon, chopped nuts, raisins and cubed pineapple. Set aside.

Sift together into a bowl, the flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until it resembles corn meal. Make a well in the centre. Add milk and stir with a fork until flour is blended. Turn out onto a lightly floured board; knead gently 6 or 7 times. Roll dough to a 9x18-inch rectangle. Spread with soft butter or margarine; sprinkle with brown sugar mixture. Roll up from long side jelly roll fashion.

Cut into 10 slices and place in prepared pan.

Bake 15 to 18 minutes or until done. Let cool for 5 minutes in pan on wire rack then turn out onto a serving plate.

Early detection of hearing defects

London, Eng. (WMNS) — Hearing tests can and should be made on infants soon after birth, and should be repeated frequently if there is any reason to suspect impaired hearing. This is the conclusion of a British hearing specialist, who warns that the sooner a hearing disability is detected the better the chance that it can be corrected.

Parents should report any of the following signs to a physician so that he can take appropriate steps if he thinks it necessary:

— Failure of an infant to respond to a loud, unaccustomed sound;

— Failure of an older baby to react to its mother's voice;

— Failure of a child to make sounds or to start forming words.

A one-year-old can be fitted with a hearing aid, and a two-year-old with severely impaired hearing can begin to learn to read lips.

And parents, too, can be taught how to work with and speak to their handicapped children so as to reduce the effect of their impairment.

A complete meal which can be prepared in your oven with little or no attention from you can be a boon on a busy day. Manufacturers of automatic gas ovens have organized combinations of dishes, some company, some family, which cook in an oven at the same temperature from the same length of time to make complete menus.

You can serve a dinner of veal scaloppine, oven rice and pecan pie, all cooked in a preheated 350-degree oven for one hour and 15 minutes.

The veal calls for: 2 lbs. boned veal shoulder, ½ cup flour, ¼ cup cooking oil, ½ cup minced onion, one 8-ounce can whole mushrooms drained, one 2-cup can tomatoes, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Cut veal into 1½ inch cubes. Roll lightly in flour combined with ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Sauté onions until tender but not brown in hot cooking oil in skillet. Remove onions to greased two-quart casserole. Sauté veal in oil until brown on all sides. Place in casserole with mushrooms and tomatoes. Sprinkle sugar, salt and pepper over the top. Bake covered in preheated 350-degree oven for one hour and 15 minutes.

Serve with Rice

Use 1½ cups converted, long grain rice for oven rice, with 1 teaspoon salt, 2½ cups boiling water, 2½ tablespoons butter.

Grease a two-quart casserole. Add rice, salt, boiling water and butter. Cover tightly with foil. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven one hour and 15 minutes.

For pecan pie dessert, take ½ cup sugar, ½ cup butter, 1 cup light corn syrup, ¼ teaspoon salt, 3 eggs, 1 cup pecan meats, 1 recipe plain pastry.

Cream sugar and butter together until fluffy and light. Add syrup and salt. Beat well. Add eggs, one at a time, and beat one minute after each addition. Stir in pecans. Pour into unbaked pie shell and bake in preheated 350-degree oven one hour and 15 minutes.

Hamburger Pie

One-dish main dish, hamburger pie, and baked apple dessert can be cooked together in 400-degree oven for 45 minutes.

Hamburger pie calls for 5 medium potatoes cooked, milk, 1 beaten egg, 1 pound ground beef, 1 medium onion, chopped, ¾ teaspoon salt, dash pepper, one 1-lb. can cut green beans drained or ½ lb. green beans cooked and drained, one 10½ ounce can condensed tomato soup, undiluted, one 8-ounce can of tomato sauce.

Mash hot potatoes with milk, blend in egg and set aside. Lightly brown meat, onion and seasonings. Add drained beans, soup and tomato sauce. Pour into a greased two-quart casserole. Drop mashed potato topping in mounds over meat mixture. Bake uncovered in preheated 400-degree oven for 45 minutes.

Bake apples uncovered in baking dish as accompanying dessert.

Nutrition

Nutritionists recommend that meals include potatoes with servings of two other vegetables, preferably one yellow and one green. Salads are a good way to provide these essential vegetables. A salad may consist of as many kinds of vegetables as you like and offers a simple yet effective way of meeting your family's requirements for vegetables. The local or provincial health department will supply free information on the foods you require for health, on request.

'Not enough good graduates around'

For new university graduates seeking jobs, "it's never been such a seller's market," says the October issue of the Imperial Oil Review. "There just aren't enough good graduates around, and in some special lines there is a critical shortage."

Every year about this time, swarms of recruiters from business descend on universities seeking fresh talent to help run the nation's industry. Last year 3,220 jobs were offered to 2,427 science and engineering students at the University of Toronto. This disparity has helped raise the level of starting salaries offered by an average of three per cent each year.

"If you really want a man, you give $5 extra for summer experience, maybe $5 for good standing, maybe even $5 for just graduating," one recruiter is quoted in the Review. "Then, to make sure you've got him, you add another $5 for his curly hair."

The number of firms standing in line to pay these higher prices is also on the increase. Industry visits to Canadian campuses have gone up 15 per cent annually over the last few years.

In the fierce competition among these firms for young brains, recruiters use every wile short of girlish tears. Some arrange lunch with the president to impress the bright young prospect, "but that'll be the only time the grad will probably ever see the president." One firm provides a 75-cent lunch in the cafeteria to "show what the company is really like."

Public utilities and the civil service capitalize on youthful idealism by offering an opportunity of public service. Others try to take advantage of the popularity of their particular products.

Preserving flowers and fruits

By A. R. Buckley, Plant Research Institute, Ottawa

You can enjoy the beauty of summer flowers and autumn fruits all winter long if you follow a few simple directions for drying and preserving. Not only are the strawflowers and other conventional everlastings easy to dry, but common garden flowers like delphiniums and roses can be preserved for use in winter bouquets. Here are a few of the best methods.

Hanging in Bunches

The easiest way to dry the everlasting types of flowers and also fruits and pods is by hanging them in bunches. Cut the flowers in their prime and not when they are fading. Then remove all leaves, tie the flowers in small bunches, and hang them in a darkened place. The air circulation should be good. Put them in a garage rather than a basement. If hung in the sun or light place, some everlastings will fade.

Some of the flowers to use are celosia, goldenrod, statice, strawflower, globe amaranth, sea lavender and mullein. Bittersweet, mountain-ash, dock, sumac, milkweed, honesty, poppy (cut when green) and false indigo are some plants having capsules, pods or other types of fruits that may be treated in the same way.

Using Sand

The sand method of drying flowers is the most popular one and an excellent way of keeping the whole flower in its natural form. It is also one of the oldest methods.

Once again, choose flowers with care and pick them in their prime. Leaves do not dry effectively by any of the flower preservative methods and they should be removed before the flowers are treated. In dried arrangements it is best to use leaves that have been preserved by other methods.

Get some good fine white sand or the type of sharp sand used for cement work. This should be dried thoroughly in shallow trays placed in a hot oven for about an hour. A few cardboard boxes such as shoe boxes will also be needed.

Make quarter-inch holes, 3 inches apart, in the bottom of the box and cover these with paper. Next pour about an inch of sand in the box and place the flowers flat on the sand, but not touching each other; then pour more sand over them until they are well covered. Make sure the sand is very dry or else it will not fill all the small crevices around the petals, especially if the flower is a rose.

Place not more than two layers of flowers in one box and store them in a very dry place for 10 days to three weeks. After this time pierce the holes in the bottom of the box and allow the sand to run out. The flowers are now ready for you to display and perhaps are best left in the boxes until you are making up an arrangement. Some of the sand that remains on the flowers may have to be brushed off with a small paint brush as you take them out.

In recent years silica gel has been used successfully instead of sand. It is more consistent in texture and consequently does a better job, but is very much more expensive, running as high as $7.50 a pound.

Flowers that may be treated in this way are hydrangea, rose, zinnia, marigold, delphinium, salvia, daisy, pansy, carnation and anemone. They look almost fresh after drying but will be quite fragile and you must treat them like rare china.

Using Borax

Borax may be used instead of sand. The type of box and procedure are the same. The main difference is in the timing. With sand an extra period of time will not harm the flowers, but with borax too much exposure will result in their deterioration.

Borax has one advantage over sand, which is the rapidity of the operation. Whereas the sand procedure requires several days to two weeks, the flowers in the borax will be ready in 24 to 36 hours. Cleaning the flowers, however, is more difficult, because they must be gone over with a damp soft brush to remove the white powder.

Some flower arrangers use a mixture of one part of borax and six parts of white corn meal and have found the mixture better than borax alone.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY, Macdonald College

On the first day of this month I attended the Feeder Cattle Sale at Coaticook. I felt that history was repeating itself; nothing had changed in the intervening year. Again, I was late, the weather cold and wet, the same trucks in the yard, the same buyers sitting in the same seats, and to my eye the same animals going through the ring one at a time.

Unhappily, the prices were the same, also, to the disappointment of the sellers. And the same reasons were speculated for prices well below the average of the major feeder sales. Mostly, the feeder buyers got the blame — for not being there.

To this observer, the reason was simple and clear. There were just not enough cattle to make up the larger, uniform lots that the feed-lot operator must have if he is going to keep his own bills paid.

Feed-lot finishing has become a highly-specialized, highly capitalized business working on very narrow profit margins. The operator simply cannot afford to fool around with single animals and small lots. He must have cattle in groups that can be handled as one animal, or he is in trouble.

A feed-lot operator will pay a good price and drive a long way if the kind of cattle he wants are at the other end.

This isn't intended as a criticism of the organizers of the Coaticook sale. We know that it may be very difficult to pull in the 1,200 to 1,500 minimum head necessary to put a feeder sale over the top. It's the old question of which comes first, the chicken or the egg.

Surely in this case it must be the egg, and it will take a lot of co-operative effort to build it. Perhaps one answer would be to take the cattle to the buyers for a year or two. Pooled transportation to Toronto to one of the regular feeder sales may be a thought. The two-cent per pound freight may be more than paid by better prices.

In the long run, I have little doubt that feed lots will appear in the corn-growing areas around Ste. Hyacinthe and in the Chateauguay Valley. Then there will be a competitive market for the home-grown feeder cattle.

Tony Johnson, a student here at the College, spends his summers working with Rhodesia's livestock commission. We found his ideas on cattle marketing so interesting that we recorded an interview between Tony and Peter Hamilton for the early morning broadcast. You can hear it over CKST, Sherbrooke, at 7.05 a.m., and CFCF, Montreal, at 5.45 a.m. on Thursday, October 14, and Friday, October 15.

Tony says, "This commission has three abattoirs throughout the country where all beef in the country is slaughtered, bar that which is slaughtered by butchers in their backyards for their own specific purposes. This means that we have complete control over the industry. Farmers who want to sell their cattle for slaughter must book them in to our slaughter works three or four months ahead of time, applying for a specific week, and we will then notify them of the day on which they must load their cattle and bring them to the works. Prices are set by the Ministry of Agriculture on consultation with farmers and various other people who sit on the price controlling meetings. Prices are set at the beginning of the year, a price schedule is issued, and the farmer knows exactly the price he can get on what day of the year.

"The commission also runs a cattle finance scheme whereby farmers can get cattle on loan to them without having much financial backing for a start. We buy these cattle and place them with the farmers, charge them an interest rate on them, and any profits that are realized after a number of years are given to the farmer."

Wet weather or no wet weather, there's to be a Corn Day in the Chateauguay Valley. The date is October 25, with final plans still to be made. We'll keep you posted on this Quebec Farmers' Association event.

Former resident married in Oakville

Stote - Baker

Westover Stewart Stote and Judith Ann Baker, presently of Montreal, were married recently in St. Andrew's Church, Oakville, Ont.

The groom is the second son of the Rev. P. Raymond and Mrs. Stote, of Huntingdon, Que., and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Mimee of Grenville, Que. (Westover worked for some time in the bank in Grenville and Hawkesbury.) The bride is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Frank Baker, of Oakville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white silk faille in princess lines with lace bolero with bracelet-length sleeves. Her headdress was lace "wedding ring" and veil of French elbow-length tulle.

She carried a spray of white carnations and pompom mums. She wore a pearl necklace worn by her mother on her own wedding day. She was attended by her sister, Miss Patricia Baker, R.N., as a maid of honor; the bridesmaids, Misses Claudia, Gloria and Wendy Baker, sisters of the bride, and Miss Florence May Stote, sister of the groom. The junior bridesmaids were Miss Adrian Baker and Miss Frances Stote, Christopher Baker, younger brother of the bride, was ring-bearer.

The maid of honor, gowned in Empire pale blue lace, carried a spray of Shasta daisies and pompoms. The four bridesmaids wore A-line style blue lace and carried colonial nosegays of white Shasta daisies and pompoms. The two junior bridesmaids, dressed in Empire-style white lace, with blue velvet sashes and matching bows in their hair, carried white baskets of cornflowers and pompoms.

The groom was attended by his brother, Daniel F. Stote, as best man. The ushers were Mr. Frank Baker, brother of the bride, Mr. John Farrar, of Hamilton, Ont., Mr. Philip Stote, and Mr. Yvon Gagnon, of Huntingdon, Que.

The wedding reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Farrar, uncle and aunt of the bride, at 25-2nd Street, Oakville, which faces Lake Ontario.

The bride's mother wore navy blue silk surah, with navy blue accessories and a corsage of white glads. The groom's mother was in blue lace, with matching blue hat and corsage of pink glads.

For their honeymoon to Cleveland, Ohio, Niagara Falls and other points, the bride wore an apricot wool dressmaker suit, with black leather accessories. The newlyweds will reside at 2930 Louis Paré Street in Lachine, Que., where Mr. Stote is a bank accountant.

District NEWS

Morin Heights

"What goes on?" — "Old Home Week"? He was speaking from the open window of his car, a wave of his hand indicated the unusual number of motor vehicles at the cross road — at the many pedestrians on the sidewalk. Indeed it could have been Old Home Week.

Morin Heights may not have everything in the way of attractions and this week in particular it was a case of — it has been raining — it is raining — or it looks like rain. Regardless, the town was overflowing — with people.

Many came for the wedding of the week when on Saturday, Johanne, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ghislain de Bassecourt, of Morin Heights, was united in marriage to Graham Richard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Smith, of Montreal at Trinity Anglican Church, the Rev. Horace G. Baugh officiated and Mr. Carl Elder played the wedding music. After the ceremony the many guests assembled at the Bellevue Hotel for the reception, later the bride and groom left for Virginia Beach, Washington. Upon their return they will take up residence in St. Laurent.

Later we dropped in at the United Church hall for the Thanksgiving Supper — went early to avoid waiting — even so the tables were nearly all filled — a real old-time supper it was, with turkey and all the trimmings, cranberry sauce, vegetables, pumpkin and apple pie. "Can't beat this country cooking" one supperite was heard to remark. Gastronomically, we agreed.

Among the out-of-towners seen at the supper were Mrs. John Davis and daughter, Margaret (Mrs. Ken Messerschmidt), of Victoria, B.C., Mr. and Mrs. Hulley and son with Mrs. Hulley's mother, Mrs. Goldthorpe, from Montreal. Unfortunately space does not permit identification of all out-of-towners, but suffice it to say the event was distinctly undenominational; all creeds and religions being represented (the spirit of Morin Heights again). After the supper a few of us caught up with the Minister, Rev. Ronald McCullough who was giving a musical interlude on the Church organ. (Hidden talent here — surprised us all).

"In and outers" during the week were Mrs. Thos. Seale and Mrs. Chester Morrow, to North Bay, Ont.; Mrs. Ainslie Ivall and Mrs. Burt Edwards, to New York; Mr. and Mrs. Willis Seale, to Vankleek Hill visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Cunning; Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Davis, of Montreal, visiting Mrs. R. McCullough; Mrs. Mary Lunt, of Montreal, spending the week with her sister, Mrs. George Hamilton; Mrs. Ethel Johnson, of Hudson, spending the week-end in Morin. Mr. William Bennett with Mr. and Mrs. Chester Pollock spent the week-end at their cottage. Mr. Thomas Weir is back home after some time in St. Jerome Hospital. Nice to see you around again Tommy. Mrs. A. Goodman and son Bill, of Buffalo, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lacken.

Even the younger generation contributed to the week-end activities in that three boys, ranging in ages 5 to 8 years and all sons of local residents embarked on a do-it-yourself travel adventure. Their absence was reported to Chief Morin at 6.15 p.m. A search party was organized and the boys were located at 10 p.m. about two miles from home. They reported themselves as "not lost" but became tired and fell asleep on the veranda of an unoccupied cottage.

Please note that the United Church Congregational Meeting has been postponed to Wednesday, Oct. 20.

Success rewards Ch. of Commerce in Expo 65 - first trade exhibition

Expo 65 at the new Lions Club arena started out under good auspices, when public-spirited citizens were present Friday morning to witness the formal opening, which was performed by the Hon. Gaston Binette, M.P.P. for Deux Montagnes (representing the minister of Industry and Commerce, the Hon. Gérard Lévesque). At the traditional ribbon-cutting ceremony, the Hon. Mr. Binette, the new joint minister of Quebec Natural Resources, commended the organizers on their achievement, and added a word of commendation on the move to amalgamate Lachute and Ayersville, which, he said, was concurrent with the policy of the Quebec Department of Municipal Affairs in encouraging larger centres to foster the municipal economy.

The opening ceremonies were directed jointly by Notary Richard Valois and Romeo Legault, and speeches were given by Jos. Santini, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Robt. Dixon, president of the Lions Club; and Horace Lamarche, a member of the area construction committee.

Mayor Saindon, who was official host at a civic reception which followed this event at the city hall, welcomed the presence of federal and provincial deputies and many other notables. He referred to a "new-found civic consciousness" and warmly congratulated the Chamber of Commerce, who "are sowing seeds today in the anticipation of a richer harvest tomorrow."

There was a desultory attendance during the remainder of Friday. On Saturday morning it was "open house" for the school children, and hundreds of youngsters were admitted free. In the evening the Regional Chamber of Commerce was well represented as guests came from a distance, about 100 in all — from the affiliated Chambers in Argenteuil, Deux-Montagnes and Terrebonne, headed by Clément Legault of Ste. Scholastique, the regional president. There was a full and enthusiastic attendance in the later hours of Saturday.

The first two days proved gratifying to the exhibitors, who had put much effort in their displays, and to the organizers, who had planned and labored intently — but these days were but a warm-up (it appeared) for the peak turn-out on Sunday, when hundreds of people flocked in and car-parking was a problem outside. Inside, the aisles and display areas were crowded. . .

Official record of admissions shows 6,100 paid at the wicket, but with numerous guests, and the free period for children, it is conservatively estimated that at least 8,000 persons visited the show. The exhibitors had many free gifts for the visitors, young and old alike. A final gesture was the snack and refreshments provided Sunday night at a Cheese Festival arranged by Richelieu Food Stores of this district, jointly with Ayersville Council, for the Expo workers, their assisting staffs, and other guests.

To the exhibitors much credit is due for the public appeal of their displays. Every line of local manufacture — most of the dealerships in household accessories, building materials, snow vehicles and other devices — besides a complete presentation of the 1966 automobile models — these were arranged with suitable signs and decorative backgrounds, in a manner to do justice to the products themselves and credit to the exhibitors.

There were door prizes awarded periodically. Background music provided entertainment, and a fashion parade at appropriate hours in the program was of special appeal to the ladies in the crowd.

The general verdict acclaimed this a very worthwhile and successful venture.

Official opening of Expo trade fair

Gaston Binette, M.P.P. for Deux Montagnes and joint minister of Natural Resources for the Province of Quebec, represented the minister of Trade and Commerce to cut the ribbon and officially open Lachute's Expo 65. Gaston Binette; Jacques Maheu, president of the Expo Committee. At the rear may be noted the mayors of the two municipalities, Lachute and Ayersville.

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

Once again 100,000 children in the Province of Quebec will participate in "Hallowe'en for UNICEF". This year October 31 falls on a Sunday, so the children will be out on Saturday, October 30. Mrs. Wm. E. Butterfield is organizer for the English-speaking children in this community, and the "Hallowe'en Shell-Out" containers will be much in evidence around town.

For many good citizens who viewed the industrial exhibition, Expo 65, it was their first acquaintance with the new arena in which they have assisted the Lions Club with their donations. And the impression was highly favorable. When the rafters echo shortly with the slap of hockey sticks, and youthful cheering — those who contributed will count their investment even more rewarding.

"Passport" is the word chosen by Expo 67 World Exhibition for its admission ticket. The passport (one admission) goes on sale next January at $1.80. After August 1, 1966, the price is $2; but after February 28, 1967, the gate admission will be $2.50. A sort of sliding scale. Season tickets will "slide" in the same manner, from $20 to $35.

Notice is given in this issue of a public inquiry by the Quebec Municipal Commission, to hear protests against the proposed Lachute-Ayersville amalgamation. The meeting will be held at 10 a.m. next Tuesday, October 26, in the council chamber at Lachute Town Hall.

The election campaign will get into high pitch with the official nomination of candidates, which will take place at 2 p.m. next Monday in Lachute Auditorium, under jurisdiction of the District Returning Officer, Dr. J. Montrealer in shooting fatality

Marcel Roy, a 30-year-old Montreal resident, was dead on arrival at hospital in Montreal, following a shooting mishap Saturday evening in Pte. au Chene.

According to Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, officer-in-charge at the local Q.P.P. office, the incident occurred around 8.45 p.m. Saturday, when Fernand Dorest, 35, also of Montreal, was unloading a .22 calibre revolver. The weapon discharged and the bullet struck Roy in the chest.

The victim was rushed to the Smith Clinic at Hawkesbury, where he was given medical attention and then, due to the nature of the injury, rushed to hospital in Montreal. He died in the ambulance en route.

An autopsy has been ordered, and an inquest will be held.

Jean Jacques Gagnon, a Montreal accountant, on Wednesday last entered a plea of guilty to five charges of arson and another five charges of conspiracy to commit arson. He is among seven persons arrested recently after an investigation ordered by Quebec Justice Minister Claude Wagner into fires believed to have been of a criminal nature. Among the charges laid is one that alleges that between September 1961 and March 1962, he conspired with Louis Sicotte, Fernand Quirion and other persons to set fire to a hotel located near Pte. au Chene, which belonged to Sicotte, Quirion and Paul Letourneau.

The alleged arson occurred in February, 1962. Sessions Judge Achille Pettigrew who presided at the Quebec City hearing on Wednesday of last week, fixed Friday, November 26, as the date for sentencing of Gagnon. Other charges against Gagnon allege he attempted to or did in fact, set fire to houses, hotels and warehouses located in various parts of the province.

The report of the fire at the Montana Inn, Pointe au Chene, which occurred early Saturday morning, February 2, 1962, stated as follows:

"The Montana Inn, a sprawling structure between Highway 8 and the Ottawa River at Pte. au Chene, was razed to its cement foundation by an early-morning fire last Saturday.

The fire was discovered before 6 a.m., and some 20 minutes later the Calumet fire brigade received a call for assistance. Chief T. H. Foreman and a fire crew proceeded to the spot, a few miles west, in their truck. Water was inaccessible under two feet of ice, and the water supply in the fire truck was inadequate against a blaze which by that time engulfed the major part of the building. The firemen returned to Calumet to re-fill their 1,000-gallon booster tank.

Loss to the proprietors, Messrs. M. Letourneau and F. Quirion, who reside in the Quebec district, was estimated in the vicinity of $200,000, according to report. The building was largely of frame construction, with 30 rooms, a grill, dining room and lounge. An outdoor swimming pool was undamaged. The buildings had a stucco exterior.

Only occupants at the time of the outbreak were the bartender and his wife, who fled into sub-zero temperatures as the Inn became a blazing inferno. One of the occupants, when first aware of the blaze, opened the basement door to find the furnace room a mass of flame."

Looking into the future and the early amalgamation of Lachute and Ayersville, Mayor Dr. Zoël Saindon states he will definitely be an aspirant for the three-year mayoral mandate. With this in view, he discussed the future of the "City of Lachute" with a representative of this newspaper, and envisioned his program of necessary projects to ensure the best overall interests of the municipality. Mayor Saindon enumerated the following steps:

(1) The formation of, and adherence to, a master plan covering the entire municipality.

(2) A complete study of water and sewer systems, in order to replace or improve same, according to priority needs.

(3) Preparing an "urban renewal plan" with aid of the federal and provincial governments; plan to be accomplished by 1970.

(4) Creation of an industrial area, by acquiring private land in Ayersville after amalgamation.

(5) Recreation planning, with collaboration of the School Commission and the two governments.

(6) Purchase of the Barron property to accommodate, jointly, the Centre d'Art and the Carrefour du Livre; remainder of the land to be transformed into a park.

(7) Clean-up and embellishment of the North River bank within the town limits, to be undertaken under the Winter Work Program.

(8) Building of a dam at Lake Barron to increase water reserve, and possibility of using other lakes to ensure, once and for all, a sufficient supply of drinking water.

Mayor Saindon also reviewed his record since assuming office, enumerating benefits and improvements under his sponsorship. He stressed the need for speedier action in Council measures, and deplored the length of time elapsing in their adoption which impedes the progress of the municipality.

To the members of parliament concerned (representing Argenteuil and Prescott Counties), Donald H. Attfield has recently sent copies of his protest to the Hon. J. W. Pickersgill, Minister of Transport, relating to the refusal of his application for a broadcast license to establish a radio station in this area. Following is an abridged version of his letter, with the explanation, "Naturally, I am concerned because I and my associates in this application (80 percent of them residents of Argenteuil and Prescott Counties) have put a lot of time, effort and money into this project. However, what must concern the people of the Lower Ottawa Valley is the situation explained in the second-to-last paragraph of my letter, which indicates that they might be denied indefinitely local AM radio service."

Letter to Hon. J. W. Pickersgill

"The Board of Broadcast Governors has recommended that the Government deny my proposed company a broadcast license. I appeal to you to grant this license because the Board's reason for recommending denial is based on erroneous information.

"The Board's announcement, dated September 29, 1965, says that the Lower Ottawa Valley — the area we propose to serve — should not be permanently denied a local French-language radio station, but that the Board is of the opinion that the controlling interests of such a station should have a French-Canadian background.

"The controlling interests of my proposed company do have French - Canadian background. There would be 22 voting shareholders: — Eleven are of purely French extraction, their holdings representing 50.2 percent of the issued voting shares. — Two, including myself, are of half-English and half-French extraction, our share of the voting stock being 43.1 percent. — Five are of English extraction, and have 5.4 percent of the voting shares. — Stockholders of other extractions, numbering four, have 1.3 percent.

"Of the eleven stockholders not of strictly French extraction, eight speak French and the remaining three have good knowledge of the language.

The series will commence next Thursday, October 28, with a recital by the Montreal Baroque Trio. The concert will start at the customary time, 8.30 p.m., in the auditorium of l'Ecole Secondaire, Lachute.

The complete series will include the following concerts:

Oct. 28, 1965 — Baroque Trio.
Jan. 24, 1966 — Morrisset and Bouchard, duo pianists.
Mch. 8, 1966 — Canadian Opera Company, "Carmen".

Featured in the Baroque Trio are Mario Duchenes, flutist; Melvin Berman, oboist; and Kelsey Jones, harpsichordist. Some of the press comments on their recitals have been highly complimentary. The following are examples:

The Gazette (Montreal): "This is how chamber music of the Baroque period ought to be played". "The artistic merits of Mario Duchenes, Melvin Berman, and Kelsey Jones drew enthusiastic applause from the capacity audience". ". . . chamber musicians

By BOB ATCHISON

As usual at this time of the year, there are plenty of complaints about the shooting fraternity. Even though the deer season is still pending (at the time of writing this), I personally have heard numerous beefs about stupid acts that have been committed. From some of this irresponsible shooting, it sure doesn't look too good, for even the humans. To give you some idea of the type of gun-handlers we have in the district — a gent who owns a cottage in the area had it all locked up for the winter, but as most cottagers do, he came up to take a look at it later. The shed at the back of the house had been blown almost apart from 12-gauge shotgun blasts. Not content with this, the vandals had shot up a 5-gallon gas can, along with a 5-gallon glass jar for fuel oil.

I doubt very much that these acts were the acts of youngsters. In the first place youngsters would save their shells for better targets. Another thing, I believe our youngsters have more savvy. . . Yes, acts like this are committed by our supposedly sane shooters. I don't call them hunters, but shooters — all jerks of this type. Of course, I believe this is largely our own fault; we have been content to have acts like this committed every year, and we do nothing about it. We have the power to change this any time we want, but we don't take the time or trouble to do anything abou it.

If I blame the government for all this, I believe it is with just cause. The department is content to sell all the licenses it can, while demanding no proof of responsibility or qualifications. They do not want to sacrifice this lucrative haul, and they won't, unless we make ourselves emphatic. Anyone can buy a gun, anywhere at all — at supermarkets, drugstores, any other place that seeks to make a fast dollar. Then, there's the facility for everyone and anyone to buy a hunting license, without tests of any kind. There are supposed to be limits on the numbers of licenses a person can purchase, but what is to stop a person from buying a half-dozen under assumed names? Very easily done; and it's done right in this town.

What can we do about all this? I have a few personal opinions on this, that may or may not work: (1) A person wishing to purchase a gun must have a written proof that he has passed a test in the handling of firearms. (2) All persons wishing to purchase a hunting license shall have this proof, also. (3) Have a permanent license number, to be carried on from year to year. (4) This number to be plainly worn, so that anyone can see it, any time. (5) This license could be lifted for any infraction of the game or trespass laws. (6) Have all persons take a written test on the game laws, every couple of years, to ensure they know these laws. . . Now I certainly don't expect anyone to agree on these restrictions for the hunting fraternity, but this sort of regulation of the sport must come sooner or later.

Tighter clauses are needed in all game laws, yet nothing is ever done. The laws against trespassing are outdated, certainly not practical for our modern age. And fines levied on lawbreakers are so minimal that it actually pays a man to break the law if he is in a commercial operation. In all game law violations the fines should be promptly doubled; and if this does not stop lawbreakers, then triple them, and add a jail term. In the case of trespassing, it should not be up to the property owners to prosecute, but to the law officials themselves. Proprietors must have the protection of the law without having to run to the courts and furnish a deposit to ensure the case coming up.

All this has to be done, without the government butting in; in other words, no political appointments. This ideal will be difficult to achieve in Quebec Province — but it can be done.

I don't know just how true this is, but a rumor reached me that a bull moose had been shot recently around the Dunany area. I hope, if anyone has any information on this, they will pass it on. It could be possible, seeing we have so many of them around.

Geese have been coming over in large flocks this past week. I had the opportunity of watching 20 land on the North River not too far from home. They stayed around for some time, before taking off. Then again, a flight of them landed down in the flats near the bridge. These were not bothered, so they managed to get a good rest before they too left. It was similarly reported that about 100 of them landed up near the filtration plant, for food and rest. They left five behind; one of them seemed to have trouble flying, and it may have been wounded.

Not too many ducks can be seen around the North River. These seem to have all taken off, with the onslaught of gunners. Of course the weather hasn't been any too good for the real duck man, and that helps too, in the matter of their survival.

For all our bird lovers — now is the time to start putting out a little feed for the visitors. One of the reasons for starting early, is that you get the birds coming around, and once they know they can get free eats, you will have them all winter.. It is not too early to start putting out suet or grease sticks either. This is a between-season right now, and no doubt all animals are finding it hard to adjust, just as we humans do. A little extra in the way of suet or grease will help them do this. You might also want to put a little seed in these sticks, or for that matter, anything that will make a treat for the birds. We still have a good number of grackles with us, rather late, but I imagine they'll be on their way very soon. Jays are much in evidence, along with the sparrows and a few chickadees. We also have a partridge under our cedars. Maybe it thinks it's safe there — and it is, as far as I am concerned.

A couple of our conservationists reported having seen a number of the Chukar partridge last week. They were not shot at either. The boys who saw them, stated there must have been at least 20; also, from the description, some of them were young birds. This is excellent. All we can hope is that they do not get shot out; and if they are that lucky, I don't believe the winter will do them much harm.

These little tips, although repetitious, may do some of the deer shooters some good. . . Make sure at what you are shooting at! You know, a deer never did wear a red or yellow coat. — Don't shoot across water; your bullet could ricochet if it dropped, and could cause a lot of damage. — Do not shoot at flat stones either; you never know just where that bullet will end up. — Take a long hard look before you fire, then take another look. It's worth it. — Don't try to use ammunition that is not made for your gun. Strange as it seems, some people do. — Don't use your gun as a walking cane; you could blow your fool head off. — The same applies to crawling under fences; don't pull the gun after you, place it over the fence ahead of you, and unload it before you do this. . . Finally, remember all guns are dangerous. It usually happens that the person getting shot is not the one who is stupid in handling firearms. It's o.k. if you want to kill yourself, but give the other guy a break!

Before you go out hunting, think of what you're going to take with you, and make very sure it's not the anti-freeze that comes in 20-ounce bottles. Booze and firearms don't mix.

Vincent Drouin, Liberal candidate, interviewed by History students

By Robert Dawson

The Liberal candidate for Argenteuil - Deux-Montagnes, Mr. Vincent Drouin, told a group of the High School History Club students that the tax reductions proposed by the Hon. John Diefenbaker are impractical and unworkable. . . Mr. Drouin was "interviewed" by the students at his recent nomination rally in Lachute.

"The Conservative leader has promised to eliminate the 11 per cent tax on construction materials and to grant a $500 income tax reduction to home owners," Mr. Drouin said, adding that "these taxes were necessary to balance the budget and to provide the numerous government services required by a modern nation."

Mr. Drouin met with the students shortly after he had been elected Liberal candidate for this riding. One student asked why the auto pact between Canada and the United States had failed to reduce the price of automobiles in Canada. Mr. Drouin replied, "There will always be a certain amount of difference between costs in the two countries because Canada's dollar was devalued 8% below the American dollar — a devaluation enacted by Mr. Diefenbaker. However, the first purpose of the deal is to increase auto production and thus reduce unemployment in Canada. As you know, there is already a new factory at Ste. Therese. The plan was designed to protect our economy by giving us a bigger share of car production. Money must go first of all to build new factories, but once that is done, the prices should be the same in the two countries, except, of course, for differences in taxes and the 8% devaluation of our dollar. Our prices should be the same as in the United States within three years.

"It may be further noted that, later in the week, two of Canada's three largest auto makers announced small price reductions."

On the subject of nationalization of industry, Mr. Drouin said he favored Quebec's nationalizing of hydro-power. He added, "There may be good reasons for us to nationalize the Bell Telephone Company, and perhaps the steel industry. But we must require a great deal of capital. Serious studies should be made before any industry can be nationalized," he pointed out.

One student asked why so many Quebec seats had gone to the Creditistes in 1963. Mr. Drouin stated that in his opinion, "this was largely a vote of discontentment against all parties. At that time, the people felt they had been stuffed full by politicians."

Mr. Drouin told the students that the Liberal Party was neither rightist or leftist, but faced pressure from both groups and thus succeeds in reaching a consensus to satisfy all Canadian groups.

"Sort of a Canadian Great Society," commented a student.

Mr. Drouin went on to say that Agriculture Minister Harry Hays cannot possibly work out all the problems of both eastern and western farmers. Thus it is that Maurice Sauvé has become the eastern agriculture minister in fact, though not in title.

"We don't want to split the agriculture portfolio by having two official ministers for the job," said Mr. Drouin, "but in reality, Mr. Sauvé does the work for the east."

Mr. Drouin ended his talk with the students by saying that "we Liberals have made errors because we are human, but we are the only party that can save Confederation."

History Club on the move at High School

Lachute High School has recently organized a History Club for students of Grades VIII to XII, under the supervision of Mr. F. Andai, one of the school's history teachers. The meetings are held every week after school, when the major part is devoted to group discussion of topics ranging from the prehistoric ages to current events.

The most popular subject of the 35 members, at the present time, is politics. A delegation of students was sent to meet and speak with Mr. Diefenbaker when he visited Lachute recently. The club was also represented that evening at the political rally in Brownsburg, and these students were fortunate enough to interview Mr. James M. Minifie, Washington correspondent for the CBC. They were much impressed by this man and his work.

Again, on October 6, several L.H.S. students attended the Liberal convention at the town hall, accompanied by their history teacher, Mr. L. Beals, and had the opportunity to interview the Liberal candidate, Mr. Drouin.

On September 30, four members went to East Settlement, to witness the re-enactment of the War of 1812 being filmed by the NFB of Canada. The afternoon proved very interesting.

There are some definite plans for the future of the History Club, among which are the meeting of local personalities, such as Dr. Rigby and others. Plans for the establishment of a miniature museum in the school, and the production of a historical play are under way.

(Our District Correspondent)

Arundel — Last Friday evening in the school auditorium, sponsored by the Arundel School Conservation Project, the sixth annual supper was held, with about 200 guests attending. The tables were decorated with potted plants and lighted candles in white candleholders, while the walls were lined with the different projects illustrated by the pupils relating to water conservation, forest fire prevention, bee raising, etc.

An ample repast was provided by the staff and pupils, at the conclusion of which, Principal Melvin Graham welcomed all present, and introduced the Rev. Father Deslauriers, president of the Rouge Valley Association. Father Deslauriers outlined the work the Association was trying to accomplish and warmly commended the Arundel School for their continued interest and hard efforts. Mr. M. Wilson, 2nd vice-president, then gave a description of the work proceeding at the Harrington Tree Farm. Father Deslauriers presented three Certified Tree Farm certificates, to Mrs. W. H. Budden, Mr. John Elo and Mr. M. Brown.

The president of the Students' Council read the annual report, after which he presented an oil painting, donated by the Rouge Valley Association, to Mr. Reynauld, representing the Minister of Lands and Forests, the Hon. Mr. Cliché, who was unable to attend. Mr. Renaud announced there would be a grant of $4,000 annually, the first payment to be made in November of this year; also, that any boy 16 years of age and over would be eligible to work on the projects on Saturdays, and would be paid at the rate of $1.20 an hour, this money to be as an aid to further his education.

Mr. Wilson introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Provencher, public relations officer of Quebec North Shore Paper Co., who gave an interesting talk on hunting, and enjoying it, without the wanton slaughter of wildlife. He then showed colored motion pictures of himself and his son hunting with bow and arrow; the film was interspersed with witty remarks, and the audience were delightfully entertained.

Walk in this week and buy some. Cash or terms, Canada Savings Bonds are a great way to save.

Correspondence and other details presented before the October meeting of Town Council, included the following matters:

A letter was read from the Lachute Protestant School Board suggesting several possible changes in the traffic crossing patrol system. Ald. Armstrong, chairman of the Police and Fire Committee, reported minor changes had been made in accordance with the request. . . The request for an additional guard to be stationed at Barron's Bridge, did not meet with much success, however, and it was suggested that the school commissioners recommend that the children cross Main Street at Barron and Harriett Streets, where a patrol is in operation, and continue from here on the south side of the Main Street.

Another request from the Transport commission relative to a warning signal at the Fraser Street railway crossing, was replied to, stating the proposed Urban Renewal plans for Lachute had not yet been completed, and that no decision could be taken until this was done.

A letter from Jos. Malaket & Fils asking why tenders for the police and firemen's uniforms had not been called for, was answered by Ald. Armstrong, who stated that some years ago all the local merchants had been approached and at that time they did not appear to be able to compete with the uniform manufacturers. He stated that, since several local firms had shown their interest in supplying uniforms, in future tenders would most certainly be called.

A letter from Martin Niederkorn complaining of run-off water flooding his basement and shop every spring, was turned over to the engineer, Hubert Pilon, who stated he had already started an investigation into the matter and as he felt it was jointly a municipal and CPR problem, he had communicated with the engineering department of the railway, and a representative of the CPR would be in Lachute in several days to study the difficulty on College Street and attempt to find a remedy.

A request for a building permit for an apartment building in Mountain View, at the corner of Cottingham Blvd. and Brownsburg Road, was refused as the municipality's zoning by-laws do not permit such construction — and from all reports, the residents of the area were almost 100 percent opposed to such construction. Mayor Dr. Saindon stated that there was no alternative but to refuse the request, although the proposed construction would be an asset to the municipality.

A letter from Jean Legault, a local baker, complaining about the change in business tax, was held for study and a possible modification of the tax rate structure. Business tax of this nature is charged on the basis of four percent of the rental value of the property, or in the case of an outside baker, at a rate of $30 per truck or vehicle. Mr. Legault's tax increased considerably this year, and he feels it is unfair for him to pay more tax than a man operating from a truck. No change in the 1965 tax was made.

A request for a refund of $30 for business tax paid by a man contemplating the construction of bill-boards on the outskirts of Lachute, was accepted due to circumstances. The man in question had apparently become ill shortly after he paid the tax, and was unable to work. Ald. Laurier Carrière stated that "if he was gentleman enough to come in and pay his tax before he started his proposed work, we should be gentlemen enough to refund his money — as we usually have to chase all over the countryside to collect taxes of this nature".

A letter from the Chartered Accountants Institute asking that the municipality not call for tenders, was read and acknowledged, as was a leter from the newly formed Taxi-owners' Association, thanking the Council for co-operation extended them in passing of the taxi by-law in Lachute. A letter from the Richelieu Club thanking Council for repairs to the road leading to the Richelieu Park, was also received and read.

A taxi permit was granted to Pierre Mallette, who recently purchased a taxi-stand in Ayersville, and a request for an advertisement in an edition of L'Avant Coureur, pertaining to Expo '65, was refused on a 5-4 vote — Aldermen Carrière, Dumais, Armstrong, McFaul and Middleton voting against, while Aldermen Masson, Bélanger, Charlebois and Gibeault voted in favor. The request was for an advertisement costing $132, but discussion which followed led to a motion for a $25 space.

Accounts totalling $52,709.64 were approved for payment, and it was decided to start an investigation into the possible location of an Industrial Park. A resolution accepting the municipal electoral list, as prepared by Secretary-Treasurer Ronald Hebert, was passed, and a report heard from Engineer Hubert Pilon on matters concerning the construction in the park, and the parking of school buses in the vicinity of the three Roman Catholic schools; this latter question he had been asked to look into again, with a possible solution suggested by council.

"I am the largest single shareholder, with 43 percent. My father was English and my mother was French. I attended French-language elementary schools. . .

"This is a bilingual community we wish to serve. The mother tongue of 25 percent of the population is English. Part of the responsibility of the party operating this community's radio station will be to understand and work with this minority.

"The BBG says that this area should not be permanently denied local radio. As far as my engineer can ascertain there is but one suitable frequency remaining (1,170 kilocycles) to serve this community. A change in the pattern of frequency utilization, either here or in the United States, could deprive the Lower Ottawa Valley of this potential service. The BBG earlier this year recommended denial of two applications for use of the 1,170 frequency in Metropolitan Montreal, saying that such frequencies should be reserved for use as first local AM service in smaller communities.

"As a business undertaking, I think our proposition is sound. Lachute (Que.) and Hawkesbury (Ont.) are the largest of the cluster of communities we refer to as the Lower Ottawa Valley market. It is a trading area of 80 thousand people. This compares favorably with other Canadian markets now served by local radio. Our financing is strong, with the Industrial Development Bank providing the required credit. This application has the written support of the municipal councils and of the principal industries and organizations of the area.

Ottawa, Ont.

New directory calls for change in 'phone habits

The 1965 telephone directory has been delivered to most homes throughout the Laurentians, and with it, a distinct change in telephone habits is indicated. . .

Bell-Canada manager for St. Jerome, B. A. Parent, recently announced that new codes for service calls went into operation in this territory on October 17. All-number Callings are also in effect.

This change, Mr. Parent said, is in preparation for Direct Distance Dialing, coming here in the spring of 1966.

The new codes for service calls for St. Jerome and neighboring communities of Ste. Adèle, Ste. Marguerite, St. Sauveur, Shawbridge, Brownsburg, Lachute, St. Andrews East and Ste. Scholastique will be:

Operator	0 (zero)
Long Distance	0 (zero)
Information	411
Repair	4104

New service codes for Morin Heights are as follows:

Operator	0 (zero)
Long Distance	0 (zero)
Information	411
Repair	611

Mr. Parent added that a list of the new service codes can be found in the new directory on page one in French and page nine in English.

There is no change in dialing with All Number Calling. Instead of the first two letters, the corresponding numbers will be used. For example, GEneral will become "43". The full number, GE 8-1234 will become 438-1234.

Speaking of the directory, Mr. Parent said that Canada's historic past is featured with a cover illustration of the Dollard des Ormeaux monument at nearby Carillon.

The increase of telephone subscribers in this territory during the past year was also noted.

Mr. Parent pointed out that 46,430 directories will be delivered to telephone customers throughout the Laurentians this year — some 3,850 directories more than delivered last year.

St. Jerome alone will need 12,800 directories — almost 1,000 more than last year.

The manager asked that all telephone users check their personal list of telephone numbers with the new directory for any changes. He suggested that customers should jot down their most-used numbers in the accompanying "Blue Book of Telephone Numbers" for easy reference.

Charge of arson, held responsible in slaying

were recently found in the Quebec City area, Fernand Quirion, 53, a bankrupt wood merchant, and Jean Jacques Gagnon, a Montreal accountant, were among four persons found criminally responsible in the hammer-slaying and shooting of the underworld victims who "knew too much".

Quirion, who, as mentioned above, was a co-owner of the Montana Inn, was held criminally responsible in the death of Alberic Bilodeau, 52, who was shot on a secondary bush road 35 miles south of Quebec City on September 18, eight days after he testified before a fire commissioner's court probing arson cases.

Gagnon had been described in previous hearings as a former associate of Moise Darabaner, a 48-year-old money-lender and real estate operator, facing four counts or arson and conspiracy.

Gagnon said that while Quirion had set up the meeting, the latter left for Quebec City before the murder site was picked out and Bilodeau disposed of. Gagnon said that Boulet, after helping him bury Bilodeau, removed the license plates from the latter's car.

Louis Sicotte, testifying with the protection of the court, contradicted testimony he gave to the fire commissioners' court to the effect he had discussed "the disappearance" of Bilodeau with Gagnon.

He said "Gagnon was paid $500 for Bilodeau's fire."

Sgt. Emile Picard of Quebec Provincial Police said Gagnon led him and other officers to Bilodeau's body.

Recent Raymond-Ayers wedding at St. Julien Church

The marriage of Evelyne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Ayers, of Lachute, to Mr. Eugene Raymond, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Raymond, of Ville St. Laurent, Que., took place recently in St. Julien Parish Church, Lachute, the Rev. Father Charles Gougeon officiating. Mr. Georges Lindsay played the wedding music, and Mr. Gaston Germain sang during the ceremony. Standards of gold and yellow chrysanthemums, pompoms, and daisies were used to decorate the chuch.

The bride, given away by her father, was in a gown of white tralde Staron silk, a creation by Robert Twigg, fashioned on princess lines, with the skirt falling into a long chapel train. Her floor-length veil of tulle illusion was held by cap of matching silk, and she carried a prayer book covered with white Phalaenopsis orchids.

Mrs. Rodrigue Landriault, sister of the bridegroom, as matron of honor, Miss Helen Lamarche and Miss Suzanne Ayers, cousins of the bride, as bridesmaids, were in frocks of deep green aleouchine by Staron, with high bodices having bows at the waist, and the skirts, open at the front, formed a coat effect. They wore matching headdresses, and carried bouquets of Cymbidium orchids.

Little Miss Joanne Delisle, as flowergirl, was in a frock of white cotton ottoman by Ducharne, having a green sash at the waist. She wore a circlet of flowers in her hair, and carried a sphere of pompoms.

Master François Charette was the page boy, in black velvet trousers, white shirt with frill, and green sash.

Mr. Rodrigue Landriault acted as best man for Mr. Raymond, and the ushers were Mr. Marcel Raymond, Mr. Yves Charette, Mr. André Delisle and Mr. Ernest Ayers.

Mrs. Ayers, the bride's mother, was in a Robert Twigg creation, the gown of grey moire pure silk by Staron fashioned with a slight decollete, forming two floor-length panels at back. She wore a matching tambourine hat of intertwined bias, and spray of yellow roses pinned to her handbag. Mrs. Raymond, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in a libellue, wool and rhodia crystal under a matching jacket, with a turban of matching fabric, and she had a cluster of stephanotis pinned to her handbag.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Lachute Golf and Country Club, where arrangements of yellow and gold chrysanthemums and pompoms, marguerites and ferns were used as decorations. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond left for Antigua and Barbados, the bride travelling in a frock of emerald green especially woven for her by Ayers Limited, Lachute, under a matching woollen coat, wearing a hat of eggshell felt, and light crocodile accessories.

The Lachute W.I. met recently at Lake Louisa, the hostess being Mrs. Alex Clarke. The business meeting was chaired by the president, Mrs. George Leggett, following which, as convener of Agriculture, Mrs. Clarke gave an interesting talk entitled "Trees", in which she pointed out that not only in their beauty, but in so many ways through the ages, trees had been a boon to mankind. "And yet", she asked, "how many of us can tell a spruce from a balsam, or even from a hemlock ?"

A delightful tea was served and Mrs. E. Jackson thanked Mrs. Clarke for a most enjoyable afternoon spent by this beautiful lake in all its autumn splendor.

Story of Brewing Industry narrated at Rotary meeting

To know your fellow member and neighbor, and the work or service that he performs in the community, is one of the objects of Rotary. It was therefore fitting that the local group was informed about the history and importance of the brewing industry, from a Rotarian, Paul A. Côté, past-president of the Montreal Club and one of the leaders in the Canadian section of this business.

Stressing its motto of moderation, the speaker traced its history from at least 5000 B.C. to the present time. Still a natural yeast fermentation process, as in the production of bread (in spite of talk of chemical miracles) — the speaker stressed the importance of the industry to the community — through employment, taxes, support of athletics, education, the arts, and other community welfare projects such as hospitals.

It was the regular dinner meeting of the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club last Thursday, to which Linton Armstrong introduced the speaker.

But before this introduction, President Tom Johnston placed before the members copies of a very well thought-out series of recommendations for better racial relations in the country.

The "brief" had been prepared by Mr. Côté and the combined committees and effort of the Rotary Club and the Richelieu Club of Montreal, over a period of many months of weekly meetings, for presentation to the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism. The president stated that, although the speaker's talk had nothing to do with this brief, it was indicative of the type of community work he and his club were doing, and that it would be used as a program for discussion at a future meeting of the local club.

The speaker, now vice-president and assistant general manager of Molson's Brewery (Quebec) Ltd., is active not only in Rotary but in the Montreal Chamber of Commerce and as a director of the Corporation d'Habitation Jeanne-Mance.

"Beer is a very ancient beverage", stated the speaker. "In fact, some anthropologists are not certain which was discovered first, bread or beer, according to official reports in the American Journal."

The beverage is recorded at least 5,000 years ago in Egypt and China, and beer mugs more than half that age have recently been discovered in Israel. A most unusual reference was mentioned — an Assyrian tablet 2,000 years B.C. which lists beer among the foods that Noah used to provision the Ark.

In the same vein was mention by the Pilgrim Fathers of the scarcity of foods, especially beer, as a reason for putting ashore where they did. . . Who knows?

The fact that beer was considered to have medicinal properties and was listed as an ingredient of many of the prescriptions recorded on the "Ebers Papyrus" in 1600 B.C., may have had much to do with its ready acceptance.

Of course, impure and even dangerous drinking water, with the faulty sanitation systems in some parts of the world, provides a factor as well.

Relating to food, the speaker mentioned that in some parts of Europe it is called liquid bread and used accordingly, in much larger quantities than in Canada.

In mediaeval times the brewery, a normal part of every monastery, was located inside the bake house. The speaker suggested that the monks acted as hotelkeepers in their day. They provided food, drink and shelter to travellers, often lost in stormy weather.

He mentioned several leaders of the past who looked upon the brewing industry with much favor. Emperor Charlemagne, who lived during the 8th and 9th centuries, considered beer as essential to moderate living and personally trained all the brewmasters in his realm. Frederick the Great of Russia was apprenticed, as a boy, to a brewer, so that he might better serve his people when be became king.

Queen Elizabeth the First was quite a connoisseur of ale and had couriers ahead when she travelled, to taste the local brew and provide a suitable quality if the home product was not up to her standard.

Mr. Côté pointed out the trouble that early Canadian leaders went to, to make the moderate beer available to settlers, in place of strong drinks. For example, the great Intendant Jean Talon established the first commercial brewery in Canada.

He went on to indicate the importance of the industry to the community today, in terms of employment, direct and indirect, and stupendous taxes — enough to the federal government alone, since the last war, to build the St. Lawrence Seaway and the Trans-Canada Highway.

Overtaxed? The industry paid 100 million dollars more in taxes last year than other business rated the same weight in the economy by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, according to the speaker.

As a responsible businessman in a responsible industry, he felt that it was well aware of its obligation to the community in its far flung areas of activity.

Obviously proud of the company he represented, Mr. Côté mentioned in closing some of the "other than brewing" accomplishments of the famous Molson family: Canada's first steamboat, "The Accommodation", launched on the St. Lawrence just two years after Fulton's "Clermont" on the Hudson, followed by a series of such boats; Canada's first railroad, Laprairie to St. Jean; one of the original incorporators of the Grand Trunk Railway; a founder of Molson's Bank (merged with Bank of Montreal), etc.

The speaker was thanked by Ross Cole.

MEDICINE-CHEST TIP

If the label on your prescription medicine is on the outside of the bottle or vial, coat it with clear nail polish or transparent tape. The coating will keep the description and dosage from smudging. And remember, you should periodically clean out the medicine chest and dispose of old prescription drugs. They could be dangerous.

Many hunters are seen on our roads these days, some on foot, some sitting along the road, and others driving in cars. It is to be hoped they all know the difference between a deer and a horse, cow or pig. — Sad to say, this has not always been the case in this area.

District News delayed last week through holiday mailing — see page 10.

Dividend boost

Georges A. Boisvert, C.L.U., manager of Great-West Life Assurance Company in Montreal, has announced an increase in the company's dividend scale for participating policyholders, effective October 1, 1965, which will boost total disbursements to policyholders 10 per cent. The rate of interest on dividend accumulations has been advanced from 5.00 to 5.25 per cent.

BELL LINES

by JIM MENZIES

With the hunting season all around us once again, I'd like to pass on to Lachute district hunters and hunters-to-be the following common sense points that appeared a while back in a telephone company safety journal.

(1) Never carry a loaded gun in an automobile, wagon, or other vehicle. Keep it in its case until you start hunting.

(2) Before shooting, look into the breech and make sure that the barrel or barrels are clear.

(3) Keep the safety lock on until just ready to shoot.

(4) Never pull a gun through a fence nor carry it over with you. Keep the muzzle pointed away from yourself and others.

(5) Never lay a loaded gun down in a boat. Never lift a gun from a boat by the barrel.

(6) Don't set a loaded gun against a tree or a fence or leave it lying on the ground. Even a playful dog might cause it to be discharged.

(7) After a fall, or a climb, or after walking over ploughed ground, examine your gun to make sure the barrels are clear.

(8) Never shoot at objects indistinctly seen among trees or bushes; they might be human beings.

(9) Before shooting at game, make sure that no house, barn or other building is in the line of fire.

(10) Don't leave your gun or shells near a stove, a fireplace or other fire.

One other point not covered but important is that it is never open season on telephone poles, conductors or cable. Taking pot shots at vital telephone installations not only shows a very great lack of maturity but endangers the life and property of people who depend on the telephone to bring them assistance in emergencies.

When the 1965 telephone directory became effective last Sunday, October 17, new Information, Long Distance, and Repair codes went into operation. At the same time, telephone numbers were converted from letters and numbers to numbers only, known as All Number Calling.

Subscribers in Lachute, Brownsburg, St. Andrews East, Ste. Scholastique, St. Jerome, Ste. Adele, Ste. Marguerite, St. Sauveur, and Shawbridge have the following service codes:

Operator	0 (zero)
Long Distance	0 (zero)
Information	411
Repair	4104

	Morin Heights	St. Lin
Operator	0 (zero)	0 (zero)
Long Distance	0 (zero)	0 (zero)
Information	411	0 (zero)
Repair	611	0 (zero)

Dialing will not change with All Number Calling. Instead of the first two letters, the corresponding numbers will be used. For example, GEneral will become "43". The full number, GE-1234 will become 438-1234.

These changes in telephone service are in preparation for Direct Distance Dialing, coming here in the spring of 1966. You will be hearing much more about DDD in the future.

Please don't hesitate calling our business office if you have any questions regarding these new services.

Things like having the lawnmower fixed, and the screens mended; having the car tuned up and outboard motor checked; having the drapes cleaned and the rugs shampooed; having the furniture re-upholstered and the electrical appliances repaired; having all those repair and renovation jobs done which can call for a long wait come Spring, but which can be handled quickly, efficiently and easily during the winter season. Ask your bank about a low-interest NHA Home Improvement Loan. Plan ahead. Be a Winterplanner now.

The price tag

"FOR LACK of advertising revenue the Telegram-Observer has suspended publication." This was the explanation given when it was announced recently that another Eastern Townships weekly was yielding to the pressure of the dollar. This reflects a real and growing problem facing not only weekly, but nearly all newspapers" — says an editorial commentary by Lloyd Bliss in the Stanstead Journal, with whom most fellow publishers will readily agree.

The shift in advertising trends and the rapidly growing costs of production will, in the next few years, bring some drastic changes to small newspapers.

Every page of a newspaper has a definite price tag which must be met before a profit can be arrived at. Unless this profit can be realized, even though it is meagre, few are going to stay in or be attracted to the community newspaper field.

The price tag on every page consists of the paper and ink, the equipment required to produce it, the man-hours, the light, heat and rent, and, of course, the taxes at municipal, provincial and federal levels. Also, very important in figuring this price tag, is unemployment insurance, workman's compensation, parity committee assessments, hospital insurance and, very shortly, a government pension plan.

All this must be supported from the subscription you pay for your newspaper and by what the advertiser pays to bring his message to the buying public. The 5, 7 or 10 cents you pay for your paper does not begin to cover the cost of paper or postage, to say nothing of the administrative cost of seeing that you get it regularly.

This means that the advertiser pays the brunt of the cost and he is having the same cost-of-operations problems as the publisher. As advertising rates go up, he is forced to use smaller ads, while the publisher is packing more ads to the page to meet the rising price tag.

We are firmly convinced that there is a place in every community for the community newspaper. It fills a need in bringing the local news and opinions that can never be equalled by the big city daily. It also offers the local merchant an opportunity of reaching his buying public without paying for coverage over a vast area from which he will receive no business.

The Coaticook Observer was the second oldest paper in Quebec, with continuous publication since 1869, only 24 years after The Stanstead Journal first appeared. It held a respected place in the community, and it is with regret that we see it pass — concludes our fellow editor, Lloyd Bliss.

UNICEF and Hallowe'en

HALLOWE'EN is that magic, mystical night of the year when even grey-beards become young in heart. Knocking at the door are ghostly or fantastic figures, costumed, wearing mother's high-heeled shoes, false faces, funny noses, and carrying the UNICEF Hallowe'en collection box.

The traditional treats given the youngsters are taken with gay abandon. But to the fun has been added the joy of sharing Canadian good fortune.

UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund) monies collected at Hallowe'en go to the International UNICEF budget. Funds are used to provide food, finance welfare clinics, equip hospitals and schools, fight the enemies of helpless children — hunger, disease and ignorance.

Hallowe'en in Canada is not only a night for fun and frolic but also an occasion for sharing Canadian good fortune with those who have so little. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) is the bearer of good tidings, the dispenser of friendship, the helping hand offered and gratefully received. . . We hope our residents will bear these things in mind when Hallowe'en comes once again.

Clouds over Rhodesia

THE BREAKDOWN of talks over the future of Rhodesia faces the British Commonwealth with another crisis.

Following closely on the clash between India and Pakistan, it shows the strains imposed on a grouping of states which differ widely in political beliefs and economic strength.

The big question now is whether Premier Ian Smith will go ahead with his threatened unilateral declaration of independence for Rhodesia and if so, how soon?

Premier Smith believes his country must remain under white rule until the native Africans are "civilized" enough to govern. Britain has said firmly that the native population must be given a bigger share in government before independence can be granted.

Premier Smith fears that if African nationalists took over the administration of the country now, there would be disorders like those which developed in the Congo and other African countries when they became independent.

Britain contends that the time has come for the Africans to have more say in running the country.

Another danger is that neighboring African states under native control might stir up trouble in Rhodesia if white rule continues indefinitely. The white population is outnumbered 18 to 1 in Rhodesia.

Premier Smith, who is 46, is convinced that it will be a long time before the native Africans are fit to take over a governing role. "We have seen what has happened to countries to the north of us, where power has passed prematurely into the hands of people who are not fit to use it. . . I cannot see in the short span of my life these people reaching the state of civilization that we have reached."

What it boils down to is whether the transfer of power to African hands should be achieved slowly or swiftly. In a situation where so many uncertainties exist, only time will tell which approach is the wisest.

Viewpoints and perspectives

POOR SPORTS. — Inexperienced woodsmen are creating a problem in the wounding and mutilation of wildlife. A beautiful fawn has been found near Kingston (N.S.) blinded in one eye and with other wounds. It is being treated by the local game warden. Vandalism is bad enough but when some helpless animal must suffer for such acts, it's almost beyond human understanding.

— Middleton (N.S.) Outlook

INEFFICIENCY IN WORK and featherbedding are elements that prevent Britain from going ahead faster. Labor grievances, real and fancied, are rampant and costly. A strike that lasted nine days, involving more than 3,500 miners, cost $14 million. The cause of the strike was that a foreman had sworn at a young miner. Swearing is to be deplored, but profanity has prevailed among workers all over the world. A $14 million strike over the subject is a record of some sort.

AMERICAN SPOKEN HERE. — In language Canada is a thoroughly North American nation, J. B. McGeachy writes in The Financial Post in a comment on the second edition, just published, of Fowler's famous Dictionary of Modern Usage. In the original book in 1926 Fowler included no article on Americanisms; but Sir Ernest Gowers, editor of the new edition, devotes five columns to the subject. He gives a list of U.S. words and usages now current in Britain; and a second list of those which British writers and speakers still reject. Every item in both lists, McGeachy notes, has been thoroughly at home in Canada since time immemorial or, in the case of new coinages like baby-sitter, teenager and gimmick — ever since these words were coined.

Nostalgia for elections of good old days

(To the Editor)

When a writer some time ago mentioned that the period between dissolution and election of parliaments should be shortened, all he had in mind were the poor candidates, who had to work for such a long period and were running out of material to placate the general public. Now I, for one, would say, let's lengthen the interval, as this is the only time our future members are really interested in the common man, and with the increased number of voters in the constituencies, will give them time to learn their wishes and be able to earn that astronomical stipend with the tax-free expense allowance.

The ways of running an election have changed so much within the last few years, that I think with nostalgia of the good old days, when the individual voter got his money's worth. Years ago we had a chance to listen simultaneously to the harangue of the candidates at their contradictory meetings, after which you were invited to partake of a lovely social gathering at the hotel! Now today the candidate removes himself from the platform, he goes on the air to disseminate his hot air with election promises, for a free life from the cradle to the grave. Our old-timers did not bring out all kinds of two, five, or ten-year plans; they promised something more concrete — a new post-office, an interprovincial bridge, or in our County, some complete renovation of the Carillon-Grenville Canal System — and a long, long time ago, maybe another railroad franchise. Having an argumentative character, I find it very frustrating to listen to an election broadcast, as it is only my good wife that has to listen to my rebuttals, while the speech-maker carries on with his grandiose words without my interruption.

So now I think of the days way back, when here in the County we had (what I call) the battle of the giants. Those were the times when what one would term "the establishment" supported a candidate, with all its might and benevolent paternalism, against a representative of an upstart idea, that has now eventually taken over. These men were real giants at the election game, and chose their representatives for their wiliness and the power they exercised over their neighbors to deliver the vote. Let's admit that money was flowing freely, but it got to the people; somebody was able to sell that surplus calf, or a nice puppy dog, even the odd church roof was covered over and over again! Money reached the voter directly, we had something for our trouble to go out and vote for, after our own consciences, even when we appeared to have sold our votes! Do you remember the jealous gossip about such and such an election representative who deposited a large sum of money or bought a new car after an election? That's all past history; nowadays it is expenses for printing, radio and television appearances, the former for the waste-paper basket and the latter to be turned off.

While talking about elections let's mention that dirty word, patronage. The government in power dispensed, and the man representing the government in power had something to recompense his faithful supporters, right at home. Today they claim that they hire according to ability — so the word goes. No more patronage. But what would you call that so-called influence peddling in Ottawa for certain interests, that spend huge sums to sway our good lawmakers and policy-makers? It takes money to run an election and to pay off election debts, and so, instead of we poor voters getting a little cash, it goes to satisfy the interests of some particular section of our society. In short, I pain for the good old days — election meetings, election brawls and the days after, a lovely hang-over.

SUGAR AND SPICE

In Dutch With Daughter

My daughter is furious with me. Again. She's at that age, 14, when daughters have very little difficulty in becoming enraged with their fathers. This occurs, of course, only on days when they're not sore as a boil at their mothers.

She has good reasons, of course. She claims I'm crabby in the morning and grouchy at night. This is because I'm always hollering up the stairs to tell her to get a move on, in the morning, and hollering up the stairs telling her to get her light off, at night.

She calls me an old crock when I refuse to play badminton with her, because of my bursitis. And when I do play, and beat the can off her, she is like all women. She accuses me of cheating, or playing like a big bully.

She goes livid with rage when I try to help her through some situation I know will be tough. "What do you think I am, Dad, a child?" But she grows purple with passion when I remind her that she's not an infant and can just keep on looking for her lost gym suit and I don't care if her P.T. teacher does kill her an she can play basketball in her underwear, for all I care.

She boils with bellicosity when she wants help with her homework and I remind her that she thinks I'm stupid and she'd better do it herself.

When I play the heavy father, moralistic and conventional, she calls me, in disgust, and "old poke." When I get gay and kick up my heels and become the life of the party, she is miffed and makes cracks about my lack of dignity.

In fact, about the only time we seem to be on our old basis of true buddies is when she's trying to wheedle some money. Then her true sweetness and my innate generosity shine through and we get along beautifully. Until I remind her that she's to be in at 11 p.m., even if it is Friday night.

Oh, well, that's about standard, these days, for a healthy father-daughter relationship. But this week she went off like a skyrocket.

I decided to use a portrait of Kim in my English teaching. It was painted, and extremely well done, by Jean Hay, whose daughter Princess and Kim were bosom pals then, about age nine.

I took the painting to school, held it up for three minutes for the class, then told the students to describe the impression it made on them. Results were interesting.

Quote: "He wasn't very old, perhaps about ten, but the eyes were those of an old, tired man. An overworked man."

Quote: "I think that this child is a bedraggled orphan, wishing for parents to love and care for him."

Quote: "It is a picture that leaves the viewer with a feeling of deep concern."

Quote: "His large, sad eyes, which dominated his thin, dirty little face, told his story better than a thousand words."

Quote: "His ears drooped like a dog's, when it knows it has done something wrong and will be punished."

Quote: "I got the impression that he was very sad and lonely, perhaps an orphan who had gone without food for some time."

Just a sample. Titles were such as: The Boy; The Lost Orphan. One imaginative lad called it The Last Jew and suggested the child was waiting to go off to the gas ovens.

What young lady of 11, who is dabbling with lipstick, wears a brassiere, and has been out on a date, wants her name bandied about the school as: an old, tired man; an orphan; a sad dog; a dirty-face; a rusty-cheeks. And worst of all, a boy. Ninety per cent. of them thought she was a boy.

Maybe she had some excuse, after all, for coming home from school, those brown eyes like boiling chocolate, with, "DAD! I could murder you!"

Crime And Politics

When final nominations for the Nov. 8 election close next Monday, about 1,000 candidates will zero in on what may be the only popular issue of the campaign — honesty in government.

Whistle-stopping through the prairies last week, Mr. Diefenbaker gave voters a "solemn pledge" that if elected, he will stamp out the webs of the Mafia, and the corruption of officials in Canadian public life.

The issue was made even more sensitive by the fact that during the past year, all the revelations and charge of corruption have had their base in Quebec and have involved French-Canadian names.

This has been acutely embarrassing to Prime Minister Pearson because the Liberals have already been under fire for "giving in" to Quebec on such matters as the flag, bilingualism and special treatment for the province in federal-provincial relations.

The grisly disclosure that up to 12 people may have been murdered in Quebec came in the wake of a long list of embarrassments for the Liberal Government.

The issue of honesty in government broke a year ago when Tory Erik Nielsen of the Yukon arose in the House of Commons to charge that Liberal Party figures were involved in attempts to gain freedom for international narcotics suspect Lucien Rivard.

At first heatedly denied, Nielsen's charges were borne out by an inquiry conducted by Quebec justice Noel Dorion. The Dorion probe found that Raymond Denis executive assistant to former immigration minister Rene Tremblay, had offered a $20,000 bribe to a prosecution lawyer in a bid to get bail for Rivard.

Mr. Justice Dorion also found Guy Rouleau, the Liberal MP for Montreal Dollard and former parliamentary assistant to Mr. Pearson, had committed a "reprehensible act" in trying to use his influence on Rivard's behalf.

The upshot was the transfer of Justice Minister Favreau to the post of president of the privy council, and his replacement by Mr. Tremblay.

But there were other embarrassments for the government. Yvon Dupuis, minister without portfolio, was kicked out of the cabinet when he was charged with accepting a bribe to promote a race track franchise near St. John's, Que.

Finally, both State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne and Mr. Tremblay admitted taking delivery of furniture from a company that later went into bankruptcy. And they had not paid for the furniture until asked to do so by the Bank of Montreal after the bankruptcy.

A key figure in one of the bankruptcy scandals — in which firms would buy goods on credit, sell them and then go bankrupt without paying their bills — is Moise Darabaner, charged with fraud, arson and conspiracy.

It was Darabaner who acted as notary to the signed statements of six Quebec Social Crediters that they would support Mr. Pearson following the 1963 election. As a result, the Liberals were called on to form a government.

Mr. Diefenbaker demanded that federal authorities open up all files on the bankruptcies, with freedom to talk about them on the hustings.

As embarrassing as the scandal is to the government, Quebec observers know the bankruptcy racket has been going on for years and, in fact, the first of the killings unearthed recently occurred in 1959. And some of the aliens involved in other crimes, whom Mr. Diefenbaker accused the government of laying out "the welcome mat" for, were admitted to Canada during the Diefenbaker years.

Neutral observers see the current attack on crime as the consequence of a determined effort by the Quebec provincial government to wipe out a crime syndicate which fastened its tentacles on the province during the years of the corrupt Duplessis government. How the voters across Canada will judge the matter remains to be seen.

Garageman's son nabs mystery man reaps profit

"Well, Dad, I caught another Gates Mystery Man — what do you think of that?" was the happy comment of 13-year-old Gary Anderson when he won his second $5 award recently. Gary's father, who operates the Anderson Garage on Main Street, Grenville, is understandably proud of the boy's repeat achievement. "We have the Mystery Car News posted on our counter to keep us all alert to the Gates award program," says Mr. Anderson. "But Gary certainly seems to take extra interest in the possibilities, judging by his performance."

Gary's easy $10 in winning prove again that all there is to catching Mystery Men — and to selling more fan belts — is simply to turn over and check belts on every car.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I wish to thank all my friends, relatives and neighbors for their phone calls, cards and messages of good wishes, during my stay at the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury. Special appreciation to all the nurses and doctors who looked after me. My sincere thanks.

SOCIETY NEWS

Some time ago I read the following: "Marriage is a wonderful institution for women. Men should have nothing to do with it."

Wouldn't it be funny if things were changed around a bit and a bridegroom should suddenly become an important character at a wedding instead of a sort of necessary evil? If and when this ever happens, the report of a wedding would appear something like this in the Society Column:

Flooberry - Blooberry

The marriage of Philander Quinsy Flooberry, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace M. Flooberry, to Miss Adenoid Blooberry, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brutus K. Blooberry, was celebrated last Saturday at the home of the groom's parents. The Rev. Nohope Atoll performed the ceremony.

During the signing of the register, Mr. Green Blooberry, brother of the bride, soloist, sang: "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonite!"

The groom was given away by his father who wore a dark green frock coat (originally black) belonging to his grandfather Cyrus Flooberry, who distinguished himself in the Civil War, and grey striped trousers tastily patched in the rear with similar material, and tan shoes.

The groom wore a freshly-cleaned shiny blue serge suit with frayed cuffs, a black leather bow tie, a new pair of green and yellow socks, hand knitted (a gift of the bride) and a pair of new black shoes with rubber heels and matching laces.

After the reception, which was well attended, during which the bride poured tea and the groom scraped the toast, the happy couple left on a camping trip, the groom wearing a red mackinaw shirt under a drab raincoat.

On their return they will reside at the home of the groom's parents until they can find other accommodation.

Be seein' ya!

JOLSON NOTES

By Irvin R. Warwick

AL JOLSON
May 26, 1883 — Oct. 23, 1950

October 23, 1965, is the 15th anniversary of the passing of Al Jolson "The World's Greatest Entertainer". It is fitting at such a time to pause a moment in remembrance; and it is interesting to look back to one of Al's stage shows and see how it was received. The following is an excerpt from a New York Times review of "Bombo" by the noted critic Alexander Woollcott (who was not one to give praise lightly):

"After an absence of two seasons, Al Jolson came back to town last evening — came back to a big new theatre named after him and a big, friendly audience that was exhuberant and enjoyable as ever. Mr. Jolson is an entertainment. He is one of those comedians who can hang out their sign and say to the passerby: "I am in here. I am going to tell all the jokes I can remember and sing all the songs I have breath for and that's all you need to know."

"Of Bombo it need only be reported, then, that there is a great deal of Jolson, with a tremendous amount of costly scenery and costumes to be trundled laboriously on and off the stage in the brief intervals when he is resting in the wings. There are some of us plagued by the notion that if about half of the fortune spent on these ornate accessories had been spent on a comedian or two and a few good singers, the new musical show would have been more entertaining, but that is a matter of taste, and certainly Jolson himself is enough to go round.

"He sings five songs in his fashion — sings them from a little platform — that thrusts him out over the conductor's desk and takes the place of the old runway where he used to prowl. The last of them is another Mammy song. He sang it last night with all the earnestness of a newcomer getting his first hearing on amateur night, sang it with his old-time knee-slapping breast-beating, eye-rolling ardor, sang it with all the faith that moves mountains and audiences. You should have heard them cheer."

— FROM OUR COUNTY CORRESPONDENTS —

Arundel

Once again the harvest festival has come and gone, and our little community was again livened with dear ones at home and quite a few of our summer visitors and old friends returning to meet with us. The churches were well filled with adherents and friends to join in thanks for a plentiful harvest and a still peaceful time. Now the feast is over, our relatives and friends have all departed — to return, we hope, for the next holiday season, and we are once more the quiet little community till we all meet again.

The United Church Women held their monthly meeting last Tuesday, with the president, Mrs. Frank Davis presiding. The devotional portion was taken by Mrs. Melvin Graham and after the business of the meeting was concluded the social portion of the afternoon took place. The group was honored by having the Morin Heights United Church Women as guests. Tea was served, bringing to a close a delightful afternoon.

The Arundel Brownie and Girl Guide Division meeting was held in Arundel school on Wednesday, October 6, in the evening. The Divisional Commissioner, Mrs. Bourget, chaired the meeting, which was conducted with the local association serving tea, and a pleasant visit was enjoyed. Representatives attended from Lachute, Brownsburg, Grenville, and Arundel.

Recent visitors at the home of Mr. Percy Staniforth were Mr. and Mrs. R. MacLennan, of Armsdale, N.S., and Mr. and Mrs. Fraser, of Springhill, N.S.

Mrs. Howard Cooke and sons, Kenneth and Barry, were the holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Cooke.

The Arundel Golf Club held its closing supper and dance on Saturday, October 9, on which occasion trophies and prizes were presented for the year's play, by the management, Mrs. Earl Hodge, and Mr. Robert Allan. The club and course will be kept open as long as weather permits.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Allan have returned home after a short vacation with friends in Burlington, Vermont.

A successful rummage sale was held in the United Church hall on September 30, under the auspices of the U.C.W., the proceeds of which will be used in the work of the church. The committee in charge wish to take this opportunity of thanking everybody for their generous donations and also the many people who patronized the sale.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Swail have left this week for a trip west. While there they will visit relatives and friends in Moose Jaw, and the Rev. and Mrs. Alec Lawson, in Maryfield, Sask. Friends wish them a pleasant journey.

A widely attended Thanksgiving supper under the auspices of the Arundel Church Women was held in the Arundel School on the evening of Saturday, October 9. Approximately two hundred guests sat down to an old-fashioned home cooked dinner and did full justice to the abundant fare provided. Mrs. Sidney Swail extends her warm thanks to her workers, and to the visitors and friends who made this event such a success.

A Thanksgiving family gathering was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Davis, when fourteen sat down to dinner. Those included were Mr. and Mrs. Kitts and family, of Ste. Rose; Mr. and Mrs. Carslaw and family, of Ste. Rose; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Davis, of Maniwaki; and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Davis and family, of Rosemere.

Ontario farmer is plow champion

An Ontario beef farmer, 38-year-old Charles Bonney of Princeton, is the new plowing champion of Canada. He carried off the Esso Silver Plow trophy at the conclusion of a two-day plowing competition held at Milliken, close to Toronto, plowing against provincial champions from all across Canada.

The results of the competition were announced by E. P. Hudek, of the Manitoba Department of Agriculture, Winnipeg, and Vice-President of the Canadian Plowing Council which sponsors the championship event. The contest was held in conjunction with the big annual Ontario plowing match.

Quebec's entry, Yvon Bellisle of St. Eustache, ranked a creditable fourth in the judging.

Sixteen of the best plowmen in Canada, representing eight provinces, competed under good weather conditions. In spite of wet weather for several days before the competition, the weather man relented and plowing conditions in the fields were good.

Both Charles Bonney and Tom Hickman, Chilliwack, B.C., who was runner-up, share in the Esso Travel Award which will take them next year on a tour of agricultural points of interest abroad. Hickman is a Fraser Valley dairy farmer.

Chefs and home cooks in all five of our Atlantic-girt provinces are noted for their skill in preparing seafoods. The few regional recipes which follow are some of the best. All have been tested in the kitchens of Canada's Department of Fisheries.

Malpeque Oyster Rolls

From Prince Edward Island come some of the finest oysters in the world. Enjoy them icy cold on the half shell and also cooked. Next time you are looking for something different and delicious to serve to guests as an evening refreshment, or a snack after the game, try the following recipe:

2 Dozen shell oysters (or ½ pint oysters), 8 crusty rolls, 3 tablespoons butter (melted), ½ cup (¼ pound) butter, 1 tablespoon chopped celery, ½ teaspoon pepper, 2 drops Tabasco sauce (optional), ½ cup cream, 1 cup liquid (oyster liquid plus milk to make volume).

Shuck oysters, taking care to save liquid. Slice tops from rolls and pull out most of the soft bread to make cases. Brush inside of cases and the lids with 3 tablespoons melted butter. Crumb bread. Toast roll cases, lids, and crumbs lightly in the oven; set aside. In frying pan melt ½ cup butter. Add oysters, celery and seasonings. Bring to simmering temperature. Simmer for about 3 minutes, or until oysters plump up and their thin edges ruffle. Stir in cream, 1 cup of toasted crumbs, and 1 cup combined oyster liquid and milk. Heat to simmering temperature, stirring frequently. Fill roll cases with oyster mixture; top with the lids. Wrap rolls individually in aluminum foil. Heat in a moderate oven, 350°F., for about 20 minutes, or until piping hot. Serve in foil. Makes 8 servings.

Quebec Scallop Chowder

Different and delightful are scallops in a tangy chowder. This recipe was obtained from a well-known French Canadian food specialist. It makes a wonderfully colorful, hearty dish for an autumn supper.

1 Pound scallops, ½ cup finely diced fat salt pork or bacon, 1 cup diced potatoes, 1 cup chopped onion, ½ teaspoon thyme, 1 can (28 ounces) tomatoes, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ pint light cream (scalded).

Thaw frozen scallops. Rinse in cold water to remove any grit. Slice in halves. Fry salt pork in soup kettle until crisp and brown. Reduce heat and add potatoes, onion, and thyme. Cover and cook over low heat until potatoes are tender, stirring occasionally. Break up canned tomatoes with a fork. Add tomatoes and sugar to blend flavors. Add sliced scallops. Bring to simmering temperature and simmer for 5 minutes. Stir in salt. Serve hot. Pass hot cream at the table and let each person add the desired amount. Makes 6 servings.

Lobster Shediac

Lobster itself is festive but when prepared as Lobster Thermidor it is even more a party dish. As with other classic dishes, there are many versions of Lobster Thermidor. This one has been called Lobster Shediac after the lobster festival town in New Brunswick.

2 Boiled lobsters (1¼ pounds each), ½ cup sliced mushrooms, ¼ cup finely diced green pepper, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, ¼ cup sherry, ½ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons minced pimento, ½ cup fine soft bread crumbs, 2 teaspoons melted butter, ¼ cup grated Cheddar cheese.

Twist claws from lobster. Crack claws and remove meat. Split lobsters in half lengthwise and remove meat. Remove dark intestinal vein, then cut meat into bite-size chunks. Clean shells, rise well, and dry.

Cook mushrooms and green pepper in 3 tablespoons of butter until tender. Blend in flour. Add milk gradually. Cook and stir until smooth and thickened. Add sherry and paprika. Continue to cook several minutes longer. Add lobster and pimento. Spoon into shells. Top with combined bread crumbs and melted butter. Then sprinkle with grated cheese. Place in a shallow pan. Brown in a hot oven, 450°F, for about 10 minutes or brown under the broiler, watching carefully. Makes 2 or 4 servings.

Hallowe'en Preparations

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"October is one of the nicest months of the whole year, with the colored leaves and Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en too," Junior told his mother. She remembered when she was a child what good times she had in the Autumn, and she was glad to provide the play material for her son to enjoy himself.

Some parents consider that the school makes quite a fuss over Hallowe'en and they are too busy to "bother". How much they, and their youngsters, miss. Teachers do use these red letter days to encourage children in hand craft skills, but it is such fun to carve a pumpkin, to make a mask or assemble a costume at home.

Carving a pumpkin face gives adults the chance to teach a few safety rules about using sharp tools. A knife should be kept in its own special place. It must be held firmly and carefully. The cutting stroke should be away from and not toward the holder of the knife. When the face is completed, the knife must be washed and returned to its place. It is inviting trouble to leave it lying around where a small child may pick it up and try his hand at cutting. Lest there should be an accident, the First Aid cabinet should be kept stocked with antiseptic solution, bandages and other necessary supplies.

One of the easiest masks for a little child to make is one drawn on a large paper bag, such as groceries are packed in, and crayoned with bright colors. If factory cotton or an old piece of sheeting is used, pressing the mask with a warm iron on the wrong side will make the crayon pattern last much longer.

Cardboard is another possible medium and older youngsters may try their luck with a papier-maché mask. This is constructed from strips of newspaper soaked overnight, squeezed out to get rid of surplus moisture and then mixed with a flour-water paste. Smear vaseline on the side of a large jar and model the papier-maché on it, leaving good sized holes for mouth and eyes. The coloring with paints or crayons can be done after the mask has had a couple of days to dry in a warm spot.

An old trunk or box in the attic is an excellent "Treasure Hold" for all sorts of odds and ends which may be used in making a costume. This is helpful not just for a UNICEF Hallowe'en party but for amateur dramatics, a parade, a circus and any occasion when a child wants to dress up. Little folk love the world of "Make-Believe" and the chance to pretend that they are someone else. Let them choose whether they want to be a Tramp, a Story Book Character such as Little Red Riding Hood, or a member of some special group such as Pirates or Red Indians. If there is a New Canadian family in your district, why not ask the children to be your guests for supper and wear their national costumes.

It costs so little to encourage a boy or girl to use their imagination and make a mask and dress up for the last day of October . . . and it means so much to them. The years pass so quickly. . . Will your son or daughter say when grown up, "Mother helped to have such a good time at Hallowe'en?"

Teatime Topics

The Lachute Watchman

If you would like to try a photo Christmas card this year, your children are probably your most versatile props.

Even a baby can be seated behind a set of alphabet blocks spelling out a word of greetings. Get an older child to write a greeting on a blackboard and pose him beside it. The whole family can pose with improvised sheets of music which have greetings written on the back.

You don't need a written message at all. With a few props you can set up a Christmas scene. But you should remember to keep your picture simple and to make your main subject predominant. Don't back away from your picture, fill your viewfinder with it by moving in close. Your main subject will be larger and therefore more interesting.

Keep Them Busy

If you do use people, children or not, in a Christmas card picture, don't let them just sit and stare at the camera. You can pose an adult taking up a wreath. Pose children peering eagerly through the bannister or up the chimney.

A silhouette shot might make a card that's a bit different. Hang an unwrinkled sheet in a doorway with a floodlamp a few feet behind it. Turn off all the lights on the camera side and pose your family behind the sheet. An f/11 exposure for about half a second should give you a successful silhouette shot.

If you don't want to use people or the family pet as the subjects on your card, Christmas decorations, wrapping paper, your fireplace, front door, evergreens, a hobby such as candle making, a holiday custom such as flaming plum pudding can all provide you with subjects.

You may have a potential card lurking among the pictures you have already taken this year.

Shoot Outdoors

If you do your own darkroom work, you may want to wait until your community or neighborhood has put up outdoor decorations and photograph them — if not for this year, then for next.

If you want to use people or animals as your subjects, but don't want to pose them, you still have time to catch a candid shot even if you may have to set up a general situation.

Whether animate or inanimate, posed or candid, the best picture will have a definite focal point and can be as uncluttered as possible. If you are working with the family, you might consider grouping them near a piano, a staircase, a doorway. This should help to focus and co-ordinate a group shot.

When the time comes to make your card, most photo dealers can provide you with two versions. One is a photographic reproduction which may incorporate a greeting.

Another is a folder which would take any one of several pictures if you want to vary them.

NEED CLOTHES FOR YOUNG

Winnipeg (CP) — Forty-six per cent of women shoppers looking for something to wear are between 16 and 26 years old, clothing manufaeturer David Herstein of Vancouver said in an interview here. He said he expects the percentage to reach 65 at least by 1970.

G.M. plant at Ste. Thérèse officially opened; employment to reach 2,500 at peak production

Ste. Therese West. — "Quebec has assumed partnership in Canada's automobile industry at a challenging time in history," E. K. Walker, president of General Motors of Canada, told an audience of more than 1,000 business and government leaders at last Tuesday's official opening of GM's new passenger car assembly plant.

In a reference to the Canada-United States automotive trade agreement, signed after GM's announced decision to build a plant in Quebec, Mr. Walker said: "Full implementation of the agreement will take some time and I am sure that this plant will share in the growth of the North American market that can accrue to the industry as we are able to take steps that realize the potential of this growth."

Premier Jean Lesage, speaking at the same ceremony, said that GM's decision to build vehicles in Quebec had caused industrial development in the province to spurt ahead. As a result, Mr. Lesage said, "several thousand new jobs are being created and millions of dollars will circulate through Quebec."

Hon. Gérard Lévesque, Quebec's minister of industry, paid tribute to General Motors as "the pace setter" on the road to Quebec's industrialization.

Commenting on Quebec's economic outlook, Mr. Walker pointed out: "When we announced that we would build a plant here I said I believed that this province, which is one of our principal markets, will continue its spectacular growth. I believe this even more firmly today. In Quebec the number of households with cars increased by 35 per cent during the past four years, against a national average of only 20 per cent. General Motors' sales of cars and trucks in Quebec climbed steadily — from 70,000 in 1963 to 74,000 in 1964 for an increase of five-and-a-half per cent."

The new Quebec plant of General Motors of Canada, at Ste. Therese West, which was officially opened Tuesday of last week by Premier Jean Lesage. The first passenger car plant in Quebec, it began production in September of Chevrolet and Pontiac models. When capacity production is reached, employment at the plant will be 2,500. The Ste. Therese plant, together with a new truck chassis plant at Oshawa and a new plant at Windsor for the manufacture of passenger car interior trim, makes up the bulk of the $120 million GM expansion program in Canada, announced last year.

The new General Motors assembly plant is located on a 300-acre property facing the Laurentian Autoroute at the Ste. Therese West intersection, 22 miles north of downtown Montreal.

The first passenger car plant in Quebec, it began production in September 1965, of four-door sedan models of Chevrolet Bel Air and Biscayne and Pontiac Laurentian and Strato-Chief series.

At mid-October plant employment was about 800. By mid-November it will be approximately 1,100. When two-shift capacity production is reached employment will be 2,500.

The Ste. Therese plant, together with a new truck chassis plant at Oshawa and a new plant at Windsor, Ontario, for the manufacture of passenger car interior trim, makes up the bulk of the $120 million GM expansion program in Canada announced last year.

The main plant and office building have approximately one million square feet of floor space.

There are two miles of roadway on the property and parking space for approximately 850 cars of employees and visitors. A quarter-mile spur line runs into the plant from an adjoining Canadian Pacific Railway line.

Actual construction of the plant began in the late summer of 1964 and the first car was produced little more than one year later, on September 13 this year.

Country Notebook

Macdonald College

With all the wet weather, it has been touch and go whether the Quebec Farmers' Association could hold their Corn Day at all this year. But the word now is go, rain or no rain.

If it is a decent day, most of the day will be outside at the corn plots. What is the best rate of seeding? How early can you plant? What is the best variety? The corn will be harvested by then (we hope) and the actual corn in heaps in front of each row.

Edwin Brown will have his combine working in the same field. Displays will be laid out in Hooker's Sales Barn. If it is wet, they will move inside for a discussion program. They are inviting a chap from Ontario who grows 700 acres corn to take part. They tell me he doesn't pull his punches.

The new date is Thursday, November 4; the place, the old Ayerst farm, halfway between Ormstown and Huntingdon.

It isn't any comfort, but we in the east are not alone in our troubles with the weather. A report from the west says, "The weather has been just awful — for the sixth week in succession — and very little progress with harvesting has been possible. The most optimistic reports estimate about one third of the threshing complete, with the remainder almost entirely in the swath. . ."

To us in the east, it means we can't look westward for any bargain in feed grain to fill our winter feed gap. But without enough hay in the province to go around, it is obvious more grain than usual will have to be fed.

"Feeding Livestock on Low Roughage" is the title of a pamphlet put out jointly by the Departments of Agriculture to meet this emergency situation. We have a good supply on hand here. Let us know if you would like one. Here's what they say about minimum feed requirements:

"Cattle and sheep require a certain minimum amount of roughage in their ration. This amount is much less than many farmers are accustomed to feeding. At least the following amounts of roughage should be provided daily: mature dry cows (beef or dairy) — 4 pounds; yearlings and calves — 3 pounds; milking cows — 8 pounds; sheep — ½ pound. Three pounds of silage are considered to be equivalent to one pound of hay in stating the above minimum requirements.

"If these minimum amounts of roughages are fed, grain must be fed in the following amounts to provide a satisfactory ration: Mature dry cows 6 to 10 pounds; yearlings 4 to 6 pounds; calves 3 to 5 pounds; milking cows 5 to 8 pounds for maintenance plus 1 pound for each 3 pounds of 4% milk; ewes 1 to 2 pounds depending on condition.

"The change to high grain rations must be made gradually and the amounts fed in any one day weighed carefully until the stock have become adjusted to the new rations.

"Experienced livestock men might go below these minimum levels of roughage without trouble, but the stock should be watched carefully for digestive disorders. High-producing cows should be fed a grain ration diluted with bulky feeds such as beet pulp, wheat bran, brewers grain or light oats if these feeds are available at reasonable prices in relation to grain.

"The grain should be fed whole to sheep and rolled or coarsely ground for cattle. In no case should finely ground grain be fed.

"Oat and wheat straw, corn cobs, corn stover, oat hulls and similar feeds can be used as substitutes for hay or silage in providing minimum roughage requirements. Feed approximately one additional pound of grain for each 3 pounds of these roughages substituted for good-quality hay.

"Although a mixture of grain is preferable, wheat or corn can make up the whole of the grain allowance if the specified minimum amounts of roughage are fed.

"If you are feeding minimum quantities of roughage, especially if straw or other low-quality roughages are being fed, special attention should be given to providing vitamins A and D, and the minerals, calcium and phosphorus.

Under these conditions, the recommended amounts for example for a dairy cow in heavy production is 50,000 units of Vitamin A and 5,000 units of Vitamin D. Other stock requires less.

ONLY VISITING. Twenty-three-year old model Peki D'Oslo, of Paris, paid a visit to that city's Crazy Horse Saloon Club. So delighted was she with the club's entertainment that she decided to stay on . . . as a striptease! She's now one of the leading stripping stars on the European cabaret circuit.

4 CANDIDATES, 4 PARTIES IN ELECTION RACE

Auditorium echoes verbal exchanges; in traditional 'contradictory' meeting

A "full house" audience at Lachute Auditorium heard four candidates expound the program of their respective parties, at a so-called contradictory meeting Monday afternoon following the election nomination proceedings. Besides an exposition of party platforms, this traditional battle of the candidates was also an exchange of charges and vilifications, paving the way for the last lap of the pre-election campaign in this constituency.

Four candidates in the running for election in Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes are — Vincent Drouin, Liberal; Ernest Champagne, Creditiste; Paul Orr, New Democratic Party; and Roger Régimbal, Progressive Conservative. In this order they addressed the meeting, which was chaired by Dr. Zoël Saindon, the mayor of Lachute.

Vincent Drouin, Liberal —

In suave but barbed oratory, the incumbent M.P. asked how the electors could vote N.D.P., however amiable the candidate for that party might appear. The speaker considered the idea untenable. What "branch" of Social Credit did the candidate adhere to — the old Social Crediters who had gone Conservative, or the "six others" who would give their support to no matter whom ?

Mr. Drouin concentrated a heavier barrage, however, on Roger Régimbal, his principal opponent. He referred to the words of Léon Balcer concerning the Conservative party and French-Canadians. "There exist," he said, "two types of separatists, those in Quebec, and those who seek to unite Canada without Quebec — the Conservatives. The second are more dangerous than the first.

"The Conservatives have enacted a farce, a comedy; and Mr. Régimbal is doing likewise. They did nothing, absolutely nothing, when they were in power; and in the last few years they have systematically impeded the work of Parliament, right from their obstruction of the new flag which the Liberal government finally gave the country."

Mr. Drouin viewed the achievements of his party, while ridiculing Mr. Diefenbaker's promises to the farmers. He recalled injustices to the agricultural class, the six consecutive deficits of the Diefenbaker regime, and its "bankruptcy budgets".

Ernest Champagne, Creditiste —

The second speaker, candidate for the Creditiste group, admitted without hesitation that he had no election fund at his disposal, and was depending on the assistance of his friends.

His program? To demand from the government what the Canadian people claim, and what the citizens of Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes expect of their representative. He reproached the retiring deputy for his apathy to the constituency, his indifference to the populace in the period between elections.

The Bank of Canada, said Mr. Champagne, had extended loans of $200-million and $68-million without interest to "the English on the other side" (de l'autre bord), but the same bank could not help Canadians out of their own mess. "The loans to municipalities we have asked for — we in Ayersville — Pearson paid no heed to these requests."

The speaker then affirmed his faith in, and allegiance to, the Creditiste principle, and declared if he was elected he would work for the people of this County and go to Ottawa for the needs of the constituency.

Questioned on foreign policy, he stated he would be strongly opposed to sending Canadian troops to Vietnam.

Paul Orr, N.D.P. —

According to the next speaker, Paul Orr, a "program" and a "platform" are two different things. The first is a party's line of thought, and the second is nothing but election promises.

"We of the New Democratic Party have a program", he declared, brandishing a booklet on the N.D.P. policy. He mentioned Pelletier, Trudeau and Marchand, former supporters of the party and now in the Liberal ranks. He charged that Diefenbaker, with sound majorities in 1958 and 1962, had done nothing for the Canadian people. Also, National Defence is too costly a burden (he claimed) and cited the scrapping of aircraft only recently purchased.

"The Canadian economy is no longer in the hands of the Canadian people; it is owned by Americans, to the extent of 62 percent. . . The New Democratic Party will establish a company with Canadian funds, and all Canadians will be able to invest their capital in this enterprise."

Finally Mr. Orr pledged that, if he is elected, the constituents will be informed through the papers at least every three months, concerning the activities of their deputy.

Roger Regimbal, Conservative —

"In the 1963 campaign, I was sparing in my criticism of the Liberal candidate, since I felt that his party was in the Opposition and he had little opportunity to speak in the House," said Mr. Regimbal. "But since that time, things have changed, and Mr. Drouin has proved that he was an incapable representative. He has been seen neither in parliament nor in the County; and I believe on November 8 the electorate will give him all the latitude required for him to stay at home !"

ROGER E. REGIMBAL, Progressive - Conservative

"I recognize his qualifications as a 'plowman'; I know nothing of his ability as a lawyer; but one thing I know by example, is his incompetence as a deputy. Diefenbaker spent more time in the northern part of this constituency, during his brief visit, than the Liberal representative has spent in the past two years. That's the sort of representation our County has had at Ottawa."

Mr. Regimbal criticized the removal of the Unemployment Insurance office from Lachute to St. Jerome. He reproached Mr. Drouin for not defending the rights of his constituents — for speaking only on the portrait to appear on the dollar bill, and about the Caravelle. He did not dwell upon the libel action taken against him by his opponent, except to say that the people who were present at the meeting "know what he said" (savent de ce dont il a parlé).

Mr. Regimbal outlined the aims of the Conservative party, and urged the people to throw out the present government. "In 1963, I promised dignity and integrity. I now give you the same promise, and assure you, I am proud to be a candidate for the Conservatives, a party for clean and progressive government for all Canadians," he concluded.

Other Speakers

Mr. Bryce MacCasey also spoke on behalf of Mr. Drouin, and Mr. John Brombay was heard in support of Roger Regimbal. Mr. Frank Gagné was another visiting speaker, in support of Paul Orr.

Space juggling at hospital for new clinic, other needs

Psychiatric clinics are now held every Wednesday at the Argenteuil Hospital. Accommodation for this has been provided on the second floor, where three rooms have been allotted as offices for the specialist, the nurse, and the social worker. The staff sunroom, adjacent, will serve as a waiting room for the patients. . . According to the Laurentian Hospital authorities, who promoted these regional clinics, Lachute has provided the best premises of the three hospitals in which the clinics are conducted.

Other functional changes at the hospital are evident in the radiology department, where better facilities have been provided for filing and for the chief technician's use, while enlarged quarters have also been provided for the medical records. It is further proposed to remove the pharmacy to the private cafeteria, in order to give additional laboratory space. This proposal will be submitted for approval of Dr. Plante, of the hospital accreditation service.

At the meeting of the administrative board, all members agreed on the need for enlargement of this hospital, and that such plans must be seriously considered before long.

René Dufor, a 34-year-old Jacques Cartier resident, was found asphyxiated late last week on the Sixth Range road, near St. Adolphe de Howard.

Provincial police discovered the body shortly after 2 a.m. Saturday, when they investigated a car and small trailer parked at the side of the road.

The victim had gone on a hunting trip for the week-end with two other companions, who had earlier left their friend and gone to a hotel in the area.

The body was taken to the morgue in Ste. Agathe, where the death was declared accidental, caused by fumes from a heater in the trailer.

Pass payment of legal fees

At a special sitting of Council last Thursday it was agreed to foot the bill for legal fees incurred by the mayor in consultations on the Norman Romer case, the annexation and the amalgamation procedures. The bill of $450 was from Jean-Pierre Goyer, a Montreal attorney whom Mayor Dr. Saindon had consulted on various occasions, by telephone or otherwise.

Ald. Edmund McFaul moved approval of the expense, seconded by Ald. Masson. Councillor Laurier Carrière remarked that, whenever possible, advice should be sought from legal practitioners here in Lachute.

Dr. J. MacKimmie fills vacancy on Prot. School Board

Named to the presidency, which had been occupied for many years by Mr. McGibbon, was Commissioner Lorne Duncan, and Commissioner R. O. (Dick) MacLean was appointed vice-chairman.

Plant operation by Canadian General Electric

Canadian General Electric has given official announcement of its plans for the manufacture of reinforced plastics at St. Andrews East.

The plant, formerly owned and operated by Long Sault Woodcraft Limited, is on an 18-acre site. It is expected that employment at this plant will rise to 50 people in the near future, with further growth indicated. The operation will form part of the company's Chemical and Metallurgical Department.

At the Lions Club meeting last Tuesday a young celebrity in livestock showmanship, Judy McElroy and her father, Mr. Bob McElroy, of Lachute Road, were special guests. The occasion was the presentation of the annual Lions Club trophy for the first-prize winner in junior calf breeding and showmanship in 4-H activities under the Argenteuil Agricultural Society. The perpetual trophy, and an individual miniature cup, were presented by the Boys and Girls committeeman, Col. Ernest Emmett, who explained that Miss McElroy, a Lachute High School student, had taken first awards at the Lachute Fair and the 4-H Achievement Day. Her calf had never been beaten in competition, and its next destination was the Ottawa Winter Fair, at which Col. Emmett wished its owner further success.

Another highlight of this meeting was the induction of two new members into the club — Messrs. Damase Audet and E. H. Breuer, both local businessmen. Introduced respectively by Lions Gabriel Valois and Herb Graves, the newcomers were fittingly welcomed into Lionism by a past zone chairman and club president, Dr. Eric Mongeon. Two other "cubs" were due for acceptance, but business commitments had taken them out of town that evening.

A "third party booster" idea — which sounds like an insurance clause, and was indeed introduced by an insurance executive, Paul Deslauriers — will be followed in future meetings. Through the drawing of names, one member will be elected to boost another, in terms humorous or serious as he sees fit, with a brief discourse at each meeting.

Other matters of club and community concern were aired at this successful meeting, which was chaired by President Bob Dixon.

Transition explained, to Quebec Farmers' Assn. —

Three speakers at Farm Forums' annual meeting

The annual supper meeting of the Argenteuil County Farm Forums was held October 20 in the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian hall.

Guest speakers were Mr. Cyril Dahms, president of the Quebec Farmers' Association, Mr. Harris Shufelt, secretary-treasurer of the Association, and Mr. Tremblay, local agronome of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Dahms explained the transition of the Farm Forums to the Quebec Farmers' Association — which change would be made officially at the meeting at Macdonald College on Saturday, October 23. He spoke on the policies and hopes of the Association.

Mr. Shufelt urged all to listen to the hour-long program on CBM, Monday nights from 9 to 10 o'clock, commencing November 1.

Mr. Tremblay reported on the Department of Agriculture's offer of assistance for crop losses. Application forms may be obtained at his office before October 31.

There will be a meeting soon of the local groups to organize in this area. Directors appointed from this zone are Howard McOuat (Lachute area), Edgar Boyd (Arundel) and Donald Stuart (Rawdon).

All farmers are urged to show an interest and to learn about the constitution and aims of the Quebec Farmers' Association.

Aldermen re-elected by acclamation

The four councilmen whose terms have expired — Aldermen François Charlebois, Laurier Carrière, Dr. L. A. Middleton and Dr. R. A. Dumais — were re-elected to town council by acclamation last Monday.

The secretary-treasurer, Ronald Hébert, proclaimed their election after closing of the nomination period — expressing satisfaction that the taxpayers had seen fit to re-appoint these men, thus avoiding the calling of a municipal election and incidental expense.

The amalgamation of Lachute and Ayersville is in the offing, and the council members stand re-elected only for the interim period. They agreed to do so until such time as the fusion and creation of the "City of Lachute" materialize.

At that time, the 17 councillors of Lachute and Ayersville will be automatically disfranchised and general elections will be called. The taxpayers will then elect six aldermen and a mayor, for a three-year mandate.

Furniture store night robbery, near $5,000 loss

A robbery loss initially estimated in the vicinity of $5,000 was reported to Lachute municipal police by J. Roger Lamarche, proprietor of a Main Street furniture store, following the discovery of a theft at 8.35 a.m. Tuesday. Missing are 10 stereo sets and four TV sets, but a complete inventory is being taken to establish if any other items were stolen.

Entry to the building was gained by forcing a basement door at the rear. From here, the thieves made entry into the store proper, then opened a door to a shed at the rear of the building, from which they loaded the merchandise taken from the store.

Inquiry held on amalgamation

Before Judge Sheban of the Quebec Municipal Commission, an inquiry was held Tuesday at city hall, to hear protests against the Lachute - Ayersville amalgamation. A report on this session will be given in next issue of The Watchman.

Arrests solve numerous local entries, thefts

A rash of break-ins in which damage was estimated in the vicinity of $450, and in which $188 cash was stolen along with other sundry items, was solved several days after incidents which occurred October 12. Last week two local miscreants, a 19-year-old Lachute youth, and a 30-year-old adult, appeared before Judge Lagarniere, in St. Jerome court. The youth was sentenced to one year in prison, while the older offender was sent to a psychiatric institution for treatment.

Both men made statements before local Justices of the Peace, the evidence of which was accepted by the court. The robberies solved in the investigation by Det. Claude Beaulieu and Chief Réal Chartrand, were at the Red and White Store (La Roche), on Hamford Street, where $150 in three canvas pouches was taken, and L. St. Jacques Ltée, where $36 was reported stolen. Other places which were entered by force were the C.P.R. station, Cinema Lachute, the St. Julien presbytery, Quilles d'Argenteuil, Mayor Zoël Saindon's office in the Professional Centre, and the office of A. D. MacMillan & Sons, the latter incident was reported to the Provincial Police.

Fall project, repaving of Hamford Street

As a result of pleas and requests from west end residents, Lachute Town Council will repave Hamford Street this fall.

Engineer Hubert Pilon informed Council it would be necessary to remove a depth of six inches and re-fill with gravel before laying 1½-inch of asphalt. This will stand for the winter, and after the frost-heaving and settling, the final paving would be done later.

First, however, it will be required to rectify sewer connections and manholes, and to remove a few trees, on the east side of the street.

The engineer estimated the complete job would reach between $15,000 and $16,000. Tenders would be requested from the various contractors.

By BOB ATCHISON

As usual, the Department of Fish and Game gets "shoved around" whenever there are new appointments. This latest case is typical — the former Minister of Health and Welfare being made the Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game. It has always seemed to me that anyone working for a business firm (and government is business) is appointed on his special qualifications. I sure don't get this at all; maybe someone can explain it to me.

By their actions the government has shown that Natural Resources are just something they "have to do something about, when they get around to it". It may seem strange to some people, but to me this Department is one of the most important there is. It seems very strange that nothing is done, or even thought of, to bring this post into line with others. I know I always seem to paint a gloomy picture for our Fish and Game supervision, but after this latest instance there is no doubt in my mind, I have not underestimated the outlook.

This is a cute little sidelight. Edgar Pollock was around Morin Heights the other day, driving. Pulling around a corner he had to stop for a little dog and a tame duck. The dog had stationed itself on the road so that the duck could make its way across without danger. Knowing Edgar as I do, there would be no question in his mind as to why he should stop. After the duck got across the road, the dog joined it and they both ambled off, with the duck quacking a happy tune. . . It is strange the companions animals will pick up every once in a while. I have seen dogs and goats, sheep and horses, but never a duck. . . Can you imagine the waddle on this amphibian, trying to keep up with the dog? This would be funny.

I heard of a wolverine being shot at Thomas' Gore last Sunday. It is unusual for an animal of this type to be down so far south, but it does happen once in a while. As you know, I don't advocate too much the killing of animals, but this is one brute I am pleased to hear has been despatched. Much farther north it is known as the carcajou, kinkajou and so on. It's a mean, vicious, wanton killer — it kills just for the sake of killing, much worse than wolves. It also has a disgusting trait — whatever it cannot eat or use, it will foul upon. Hearing of this animal being killed, I remembered a cache that had been erected by some trappers near New Liskeard, Northern Ontario, some years ago. A wolverine had got at it, and seeing the damage as I had the opportunity of doing, was unbelievable. A bear has nothing on the destruction this animal will do. Not too large, a big one will be about 40 to 50 pounds, maybe 3 feet long, with a tail of about 1 foot. Very powerful, short legs, that can rip anything apart with no trouble, it will not even back up from a bear. It also loves to kill young deer. Get a couple of these in the district, and within a short time we would have nothing left in the way of wild animals. On top of this, it could be imagined what damage it would do to summer homes.

We also seem to have a good number of wolves with us. One of these was shot at near the filtration plant recently, also another near-hit was reported at Dunany. So we do seem to have a few of them around. I have an idea why they are drifting into this area. With all the heavy hunting going on farther north, the wolves are being driven out, either through lack of food, or through heavy hunting pressure. A wolf is smart this way; put too much strain on it through the hunting, and it will clear out very fast. With continued pressure on them, they will either withdraw from the entire area or will become so wily and scared that the average person will never get a shot at one. There are a few wild dogs around too; if these should tie up with the wolves (and this is very possible), then I think we will be in serious trouble.

Ducks are scarce; even our North River is short of them. Of course, we have not had good shooting weather as yet, but even at that, there were a few more ducks around last year than there are right now. I have not even seen the numbers of geese that were evident last year. It looks as though Ducks Unlimited were well informed when they stated, some months ago, that the species would be in short supply. The reasons I have given before — a cold spring, poor water earlier in the year, and so on.

I mentioned the winter birds a short time ago. Now, with a milder turn in the weather, you might think that they do not need help; but this is not so. Any seeds that have been scattered by winds have not much feeding value to the birds... So it's quite in order to perform your good deed for the day, and put out some feed for them. Get suet sticks and put them out, too; be a sport, the birds will more than repay you.

A couple of the boys up visiting me the other night, had heard a rumor that the 30-30 would be the next gun on the list to be banned. I do not believe this. I have often said this gun was not much good today for our style of hunting, but it still is a good gun, within its limits. This is the big point, knowing your gun and just what it will do. This applies to all firearms; even if you have the new Remington 350 you still won't get your game if you are shooting at 1,000 yards with open sights. Talking to an enthusiast the other day, he was of the opinion that the 38-40 was as good a gun as any. Still, trying to give reasons as to why this gun is no use in our shooting today, you don't get very far. I admit these guns were good years ago, but remember also, that any game shot say 30 years ago, it was just a question of sitting on a road and waiting for it to come to you. Not so today; if we get a shot at anything, it is usually in high gear, with the after-burners just getting into action, and you have about as much chance of stopping this animal with a low-powered gun as you have of finding a million dollars in front of your house. Now, I'm not condemning the 30-30 carte blanche. In some provinces where they have greater herds of deer and so on, not hunted for months on end, this will be a good gun. Certain areas even designate a shotgun as the weapon for deer hunters; this is more than adequate for such areas, for the reason outlined, but it sure is no good in this province — unless you expect to find deer that have never been shot at or hunted! Some hopes.

Chukar partridge have been spotted in numerous areas this past week; some of them have been seen on the back road from Dunany to Lakefield. The spotters were not after partridge, so nothing happened to them. From all the information I have been getting, we must have quite a few of them around. This also applies to the Hungarian partridge. I have been informed of flocks of about 30 seen in the St. Andrews district, also in Ste. Scholastique, they have been sighted not infrequently. These birds, as you know, do not like the closed-in bush type of ground; they prefer the more open fields, especially ones that have been cultivated; along the hedgerows is a good spot to flush them from.

Teenagers to form Ranger company, Lachute, B'burg

By Sandra Hall

— Calling all interested girls between the ages of 14 and 17! A Ranger Company is being formed through the combined efforts of interested Lachute and Brownsburg teen-agers. The Company will meet twice a month. The first meeting is to be held at the Brownsburg Social Club on Thursday, November 4, at 7 p.m. Any girl interested in the opportunities of being part of this Company, is cordially invited to attend the meeting. It is not necessary for future Rangers to be, or to have been, members of a Guide or Brownie movement, but the Ranger group may be your last chance to become a member of a great organization.

Association active in hunting season

The directors of the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association urge local hunters to procure their $1 eligibility cards and enter their deer for prizes — a cash award for each week of the hunting season and a rifle to be drawn for at the closing evening, open to all who have registered their deer. There are also prizes to be had for partridge, rabbit or duck.

Léo Marrot took top award in the recent fishing derby which concluded the river and lake season activities of the club. The contest was held at Fernand Ouellette's shoreline on the Ottawa River at La Baie, and Mr. Marrot's prize catch was a Northern pike weighing 18 lbs. 7 ozs.

St. Maurice Valley C.I.P. concession now game reserve

On the recommendation of the Québec Tourism, Fish and Game Department, the Canadian International Paper company's forestry concession in part of Roberval, Laviolette, St. Maurice and Abitibi-East counties, in the Upper St. Maurice Valley, has been constituted a game reserve by order in council. The new reserve will be officially known as the Réserve de chasse de la Haute-Maurice (Upper St. Maurice Valley Game Reserve).

The Minister pointed out that the reserve was set up primarily for the protection of forest workers, but that it would at the same time help to cut down the unfortunately large number of hunting accidents due to hunters' confusion about the regulations. It will also lead to improved biological control of moose hunting.

Under special regulations which will apply to the reserve, a controlled moose hunt similar to that already held in two Quebec parks and one reserve has been permitted. It was held under the joint control of the Tourism, Fish and Game Department and the Company; C.I.P. knows every nook and cranny of its concession and is in the best position to indicate exactly where foresters are working and where sportsmen may go out for moose without endangering lives. Carrying of firearms is prohibited throughout the game reserve, except by persons registered for controlled hunting and by lessees on the reserve; however, lessees are not permitted to hunt outside the territories under lease.

No charge will be made for the Company's services and there is nothing to pay; hunters are merely required to carry the moose hunting permit in use throughout Quebec.

UNICEF NOTE

The United Nations Children's Fund has spent a total of more than $60 million on equipment, transport and training of staff for local health centres in developing countries to which Canada contributes.

Motor Sport Club News

Lately this club has been quite active in the various phases of motor sport. On Saturday, October 16, an "Economy Run" was held. The start was at Mel Wilson & Sons B.P. gas station on the Brownsburg Road. The course, 100 miles of paved roads, went north of Lachute in a large circle. First-place honors went to Dave Bradley and Bonnie MacDonald in an Austin Healy Sprite. Bob Rodger and Donald Stephenson took second place in a Valiant.

On Friday evening, November 5, a Fall Rally will be held. This rally will be 65 miles long and take approximately 2½ hours. Complete information will be available at the next L.M.S.C. meeting, this coming Friday night.

Of special interest to members and friends, will be L.M.S.C.'s next meeting. Dr. Jim Luce of Shell Canada Ltd., will be in attendance to speak to the club on motor sport. Also there will be a showing of the 1963 "Shell 4,000" movie, in which Dr. Luce was an entrant. Light refreshments will be served. This is an open meeting, and all are welcome. Come and bring your wife or girl friend. The meeting commences at 8 p.m. at the Legion Hall, Lachute, on Friday, October 29.

Ladies' curling — opening events

The regular meeting and opening luncheon of the Lachute Ladies' Curling Club takes place on November 1 at 12 o'clock. This is a pot-luck luncheon — always a good way to start things off — and the meeting will take place at 2 o'clock.

Let us make this a good reunion. Even if the double-windows are not all on, the leaves not raked, the summer clothes not put away, that room still unpainted, or the garden not put to bed — join the clan and bring those guilty feelings to the Club, where we can all commiserate over the usual delicious luncheon!

Snowmobiles now organized

Formation of the International Snowmobile Industry Association was announced following a meeting of major snowmobile manufacturers in North America.

Speaking of the aims and objectives of the Association, Mr. E. E. Murphy, elected president, said: "The tremendous growth in popularity of the winter sport of snowmobiling has demanded that a governing body be formed to coordinate the activities of clubs and organizations. It is our purpose to promote snowmobiling in general, and to try to bring uniformity to rallies and meets in North America."

The new Association will act as the sanctioning body for snowmobile rallies and competitions held both in Canada and the United States.

Observer reports seeing comet

Editor, The Watchman

Sir: I am certain I saw the comet, at 10 minutes past 6 a.m., Thursday, October 21. It was like a ball of fluffy wool, and a greyish color (not yellow like the moon) was kind of dazzling around it just as though the morning sun was shining on it. I could see it from the bedroom window facing east, and it was travelling from south to east, towards the rising sun. But the sky was black, a few clouds passing over, but when I first saw it the stars were shining behind it. The moon came from behind a cloud, but a little to the south, so I am sure it was not the moon I saw first.

Then towards daylight, the streak of pinkish tail following right behind the comet, and it was about 8 to 10 inches wide. It could have appeared wider if it was a little closer; it was very very long, going in the same direction, south to east. There was no other red in the sky. I have often seen red patches indicating bad weather on the way, but this pinkish-red streak was very different, so I am certain it was the comet I saw.

(Signed) — Mrs. N. Sioui,
Lachute.

"Politics is the only profession for which no preparation is thought necessary." So wrote Robert Louis Stevenson, the famed 19th century author. Of Many Things

By Ambrose Hills

HERE COMES WINTER!

As I write this, the sky is grey, and there's a tinge of frost on the grass. You can smell Winter coming, and you'd better learn to like it.

Canadians, like the Scotch, have been toughened and made more durable by their environment. It has been claimed that there was once an outdoor case of rape near North Battleford one night when the thermometer registered 50 below. A deplorable incident, but indicative of a hardy race.

We need to be tough and prudent to compete with countries where the weather is easy all year round. Each of us has to be willing to work hard and well — especially when we are demanding so many expensive services. All these things must be paid for, by all the people. Many are not paid directly, but in the cost of the goods we buy in the stores. Cigarettes and whiskey are only examples, but everything is affected, from gasoline to your wife's prettiest hat. I wonder how we think we can afford so many extras, in a thinly-populated country with a climate like ours?

But here comes the snow! If there's wood for the fireplace and a well-stocked larder we'll get by. Snow may make our lives tougher, but it is beautiful, isn't it?

Finishing red-brand beef steers at nineteen months of age on an all-forage ration is a thought to excite the imagination of any livestock man. But it was done at the Lennoxville Experimental Station this year, and Gaspard Lalande, in charge of the project, can hardly contain his enthusiasm. If these results can be repeated regularly over the next two or three years, these trials will be nothing short of a breakthrough for us in Quebec and the Maritimes, where weather favors grass and where grain is comparatively expensive to grow.

I saw these animals on pasture last week at Lennoxville. They certainly looked good. A few had gone to market — all red and blue brands — and the rest were to go within the next few days.

These were 1964 calves, 500 lbs. when weaned in the fall, carried through the winter at a moderate rate of gain, and then turned on to top quality, heavily fertilized, rotational pasture this past spring. They are going right off this pasture to market without any grain finishing whatever.

The key to the success of the trial appears to be these exceptional pastures. They were fertilized with 385 lbs. 10-10-10 last spring and something like 150 lbs. ammonium nitrate after the first round of grazing. That's a whopping $25 worth, enough to make most beef men shake their heads.

But if I have my figures right, 200 lbs. dressed beef worth 44c a lb. will go off each acre, plus a bonus cut of grass silage on two of the paddocks. That's a pretty fair profit above cash costs for an acre of grass.

It is well worth an afternoon to go to the Lennoxville Station to see these grass-fed steers before they go for slaughter. I am sure Mr. Lalande will be happy to show you his exact records.

For next year's trial, some of the calves were bought at Coaticook and the rest at the LaSarre Feeder Cattle Sale in Northern Quebec on October 13. I hear that they couldn't accommodate all the animals offered, and that competition for the good lots was keen. Two buyers were from Quebec, and the rest from Ontario. Average price is reported as $23 per hundred.

Allan Dowbiggin, of Magog, figures he got his money back from tile drainage in one year. Early this year he spent $90 to drain a spring hole he had been working around for years in one of his fields.

The extra acre gave him another eighteen tons of corn silage which he values at $7 a ton. And that's enough to pay his cash costs and the tile work besides.

That one acre isn't all the answer of course, but Allan tells me he will have 1,500 bales of hay more than he needs. Not bad for a year like this.

The last issue of Grassland News, a publication of one of the machinery companies, has an article about Post-mature Corn Silage. It has encouragement for those who were caught by the rains. Sometimes a disaster can be a blessing in disguise.

The thought behind the article is that over-mature corn, harvested late in the year, can still make good silage. While there will be losses, the energy per ton may actually be higher.

The author says, "There's little question that corn increases in nutritive value as it matures. Research at several colleges bears this out.

"In checks at Ohio State University, beef cattle fed mature corn silage ate more dry matter and gained slightly faster than those fed less mature silage.

"While there may be some decrease in digestibility of stalks and leaves as maturity advances, Ohio State laboratory studies indicated this reduction is not great once the ears have set and begun to fill."

HAVE YOU APPLIED FOR YOUR SOCIAL INSURANCE NUMBER?

IF YES — You have complied with the law.

IF NO — You must comply with the law without delay. Otherwise you will be exposed to serious disadvantages.

Why do you need a number?

Without a social insurance number, the contributions to the Quebec Pension Plan that you will start making on January 1, 1966, cannot be credited to you. This will make it impossible, when the time comes, to calculate the retirement pension and other benefits to which your contributions might entitle you.

Without a social insurance number, you will nevertheless have to pay contributions to the Quebec Pension Plan, but you will not be entitled to any of its benefits.

Who must have a number?

The social insurance number is compulsory for all persons aged 18 to 70 who work.
— either as salaried, commissioned or part-time employees,
— or for themselves.

Where can you get an application form?

If you have not already applied for or obtained your number, you can get a Social Insurance Number application form from the Quebec Pension Board, from your employer, at your nearest Caisse Populaire, or at any office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Do not delay

Delegates report on Home-School Fed'n meeting

The Lachute and District Home and School Association was represented by five delegates and observers at the 21st annual meeting and conference of the Quebec Federation of Protestant Home and School Associations, in Montreal, on October 22-23. The delegates were Mrs. W. H. Thompson, Mrs. R. Bourget, Mr. G. McOuat, Mr. and Mrs. R. Bailley.

The local representatives joined some 400 other delegates from throughout the province in celebrating the 21st anniversary of Federation.

Theme of the conference was "The Forward Look" and the program focused on several subjects which are now coming into the educational spotlight.

Sex education, vocational and technical training, exceptional children, teaching machines and television teaching were discussed in seminars or panel discussions.

The role of Home and School in the future was discussed in a panel entitled "Exploration in Time and Space". A question and answer period followed.

Major speaker at the two-day conference was Peter Millar, new chairman of the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal, who addressed the closing banquet.

Conference delegates were asked to vote their support on several resolutions dealing with sex education, driver education, a ban on the sale of war toys, and exceptional children.

The resolutions on sex education and driver education seek the inclusion of these important subjects in the school curriculum. The resolution on exceptional children seeks the training of teachers to recognize and deal with the needs of exceptional children, and for the establishment of facilities to meet the needs for educating these children.

A. J. Sands, president of the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation explained the national body's centennial project. He also installed the new officers.

Several awards were presented at the banquet, including the 1965 Buzzell Award to Mrs. Ruth Scott of Magog, for her outstanding contributions to education and for furthering the cause of Home and School.

The annual fall rally of Montreal Presbyterial United Church Women was held just recently at Fairmount-St. Giles United Church, Outremont.

Highlighting the program during the afternoon was a panel presentation "The City We Live In". The panel speakers included Dr. F. W. Frei, director of the McGill University Urban Development Project; Mrs. Emily Clyke, executive director of the Montreal Girls' Association; Mrs. Victoria Shipton, assistant director of the Montreal Volunteer Bureau; and the Rev. Wm. Lake, chairman of the Religion and Labour Council of Montreal.

Mr. Lake spoke of three attitudes of people living in the legalized community called the City. He said that all three must be recognized and met at their level of behaviour.

Mrs. Clyke spoke of the confusion arising in the lives of people in the city. She said that it is difficult for people to keep up to the rapid developments in the world today.

Mrs. Shipton stressed the role of the volunteer social worker in the city. She said that the volunteer is able to preserve the dignity of the individual within the brotherhood of man living under the laws of God.

In summary, Dr. Frei said that we cannot catch up to progress, but that moral values do not change. There can be no recipe to meet problems, but he felt that awareness of these problems is very important.

Dr. Elfan Rees, permanent representative in Europe of the Commission of Churches on International Affairs and an advisor to the World Council of Churches, discussed "The Church in Action" during the evening session.

Dr. Rees said that, because of his work with the United Nations, he sees the church in action. He spoke of the awareness of the church in the freedoms of religion and speech, and freedoms from want and fear. He spoke specifically of the refugee today, mentioning the outstanding role the church has played in refugee affairs during the past 20 years.

A service of worship was conducted in music and song by the Rev. John Guy, chaplain to United Church students at McGill University. The soloist was Miss Mona Thompson.

40th Wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Miles Copeland, of Lachute, shown cutting the cake at a reception in honor of their 40th wedding anniversary, held Saturday, October 23, at the Lachute Legion Hall. Over 100 people attended the reception. Many telegrams were received from friends in far-away places who were unable to attend.

Trick, treat or tragedy?

The National Safety League of Canada has two suggestions to take the tragedy out of this Hallowe'en's annual trick or treat.

— First, use flame-proof costumes.

— Second, avoid masks; use make-up.

Some costumes are treated with flame-retardant. The label will identify them. Costumes can be flame-proofed at home with a solution of nine ounces of borax, four ounces of boric acid and a gallon of warm water. Immerse the costume, wring by hand and hang to dry. Incidentally, NSL urges the use of light colors, preferably white, or fluorescent material to protect the night-roaming spirits of Hallowe'en.

One of the great dangers of Hallowe'en is the face mask, warns the League. It obscures vision and is uncomfortable to the point of distraction. Explore the dressing table, NSL advises, for lipstick, rouge, pancake make-up, eye shadow and eyebrow pencil and let imagination run wild. Clean up with cold cream afterwards. Every parent should be proud of the artistic although frightening appearance of his offspring on this of all nights.

With a "Hollywood make-up job" the child can see. With light-colored clothing the child can be seen. By flame-proofing, the constant danger of clothing fire is elliminated.

Art organized for adolescent classes at Centre

With children's art classes in full swing, the instruction course for teen-agers is just commencing, at the Centre d'Art. Young students from 13 years of age are eligible, and classes for this group will be on Saturday afternoons at 1.30, with Guy Racine, a graduate of l'Ecole des Beaux Arts, as instructor.

The success of this art training may be judged by the fact that two members of last year's youth group passed for entrance into l'Ecole des Beaux Arts for this fall. It is hoped that others will follow and enter some phase of fine art as a career.

The course at Centre d'Art embraces all media of expression, and is designed to maintain interest throughout. Expense is modest, and materials are provided.

There are vacancies still in the 10-12-year classes, Saturday at 11 a.m. For the older youth group, applicants may attend at 1.30 p.m.; or they may enrol any day between 2 and 5 p.m. at the Centre d'Art, 360 Main Street.

Jean Laforest, director of courses, expects to make announcement shortly on the resumption of adult tuition. Former and prospective pupils will be notified by circular letter.

The new Volkswagen has a bigger engine.

It's about 20% more powerful than this year's model. So it accelerates much faster. And it doesn't get short-winded on long hills any more.

Surprisingly enough, our 1966 engine doesn't drink any more gas than the old one did. Volkswagen owners will still get around 38 miles to the gallon. The only difference is that they'll get them faster from now on.

In case you think we've just gone power mad, we'd like to make it clear that the engine isn't the only thing that's new about the 1966 Volkswagen.

For instance, we've also put in a new, thermostatically-controlled heater booster to keep VW owners warmer in winter. We've fitted safety locks to the front seat backs so they won't tip forward when the car brakes quickly. And we've added a four-way emergency flasher to make night stops less hazardous.

There are some other new features, too, but we're saving those to show you when you come in.

One last thing. Some people thought we'd changed the shape of our car this year. They needn't have worried. It's still pretty difficult to tell a 1966 Volkswagen from a 1965 or even a 1955.

Boyd's Express Ltd. opened new and spacious warehouse for Sherbrooke, Que., subsidiary

The new terminal of Sherbrooke Express Inc. was officially opened on Tuesday evening of last week, marking 33 years of operation in the Eastern Townships. During that time, the company has earned a high reputation among all business and industrial concerns in the Townships.

Sherbrooke Express Inc. is a subsidiary of Boyd's Express Limited, the local trucking firm having assumed control of the Eastern Townships operation in June, 1964. In the spring of this year, an addition to the Montreal terminal and warehouse, located at 700 Montée de Liesse Road, St. Laurent, was completed, to provide the necessary facilities for the expanded operations of Boyd's and their recently acquired Eastern Townships run. In May of this year, Boyd's also acquired the firm of Lafontaine Express, to increase their territory to include Beloeil, McMasterville, St. Hilaire and district.

The Sherbrooke Express terminal and warehouse is located in Rock Forest, near the Sherbrooke limits, and is a 14-door modern building with a 55 by 70-foot dock for loading and unloading, equipped with an overhead monorail for heavy pieces of equipment. The design of the dock is geared to the handling of large volume of merchandise of all sizes in an efficient and safe manner. Spacious offices and a two-bay garage with electric doors complete the new terminal.

Sherbrooke Express Inc. operates between Sherbrooke and Montreal, Windsor Mills and East Angus and return, plus all intermediate points.

Beginning 33 years ago as the Sherbrooke Warehousing Inc., the enterprise has grown rapidly, to operate 90 pieces of equipment on the road, and has 85 people employed by the company.

Edgar Chartier, founder of the firm, is president of the company and has 35 years experience in the trucking business, to make him one of the pioneers in the province. Joseph Kass, who is a Chartered Accountant, is the vice-president and controller, and has been in the transportation business eight years.

N. W. Boyd, president of Boyd's Express Limited, recently announced the following appointments:

Garth S. Boyd, executive vice-president; C. C. Robinson, vice-president, operations; J. Douglas Boyd, vice-president, sales and traffic; Joseph G. Kass, C.A., vice-president, finance and accounting. Mr. Kass is also the vice-president and controller of the subsidiary company, Sherbrooke Express Inc.

Boyd's Express Limited was established in 1930 and has since expanded its operations to 230 pieces of equipment serving Montreal, Lachute, Hawkesbury, Ottawa, Ste. Therese, St. Jerome, Ste. Agathe, St. Bruno, Beloeil, and all intermediate points. They service all points in Canada and U.S.A. with reliable connecting carriers.

The ribbon-cutting ceremonies took place on Tuesday of last week when the official opening was held. Seen left to right are Messrs. Garth S. Boyd, executive vice-president of Boyd's Express Ltd., the parent company; J. Doug Boyd, vice-president, sales and traffic, of Boyd's Express Ltd.; Joseph G. Kass, C.A., vice-president and controller of Sherbrooke Express Inc., and vice-president, finance and accounting, of Boyd's Express Ltd.; Mayor A. Dusseault, of Rock Forest; Edgar Chartier, founder and president of Sherbrooke Express Inc.; Nat W. Boyd, president of Boyd's Express Ltd.; and Woody Trudel, sales manager, Boyd's Express Ltd.

"Exile from Sunnyacres"

By Margaret Cook

Suddenly, the big maple tree in the front yard that had been a bright yellow for two weeks, lost its leaves. They came showering down, fragile, golden boats on the waves of air. Very poetic! But there is nothing remotely resembling poetry in the grim fact that all these leaves must be raked up, put into cartons, to be taken away by the street cleaners. We are a well-run town here, and every Friday, the men are out with trucks, brooms, and shovels.

Just the same, we are grateful for this recurring pageant of a Canadian Autumn. With other women of the diocese, I was at Lakefield on September 30, and we were all delighted with the prospect. Just at Lake Dawson, the trees were mostly still green, but all around on the heights were these glorious colors. In fact, everything seemed to put its best foot forward. The church and the hall were beautifully decorated, the Rural Dean conducted the service with reverence and efficiency, two attributes that are not always found together. The ladies, as usual, gave us a bountiful and delicious lunch, and the routine proceedings of a meeting were no duller than usual. A really satisfactory day.

We came home via Carillon, and the ferry. My two companions had never before seen this stretch of the Ottawa, or the new dam. They also enjoyed the pastoral beauty of the country between Lachute and St. Andrews. I wonder if we, who are the more accustomed to the district, quite realize the bounty of beauty we have in Argenteuil. Hills and valleys, lakes nestling between, rocks like granite castles, fir trees pointing their steeples to heaven, clear brooks babbling over stones, and between alders. Truly, a natural paradise.

All paradises must have their snakes; we do not have too many in Argenteuil, but we do have our natural clowns. Our last weeks at Sunnyacres were enlivened by the antics of skunks and porcupines. One evening, just at dusk, I noted that Peter, sitting on his accustomed window-sill, was leaning forward, peering at something in the orchard. So, I peered, too. After a while, my eyes picked up a porcupine. He was busily eating apples. He sat up and ate them as does a squirrel, from his front paws, greedily and quickly. No sooner was one down than he began another. We watched until it got too dark to see. Previous to that, a young porcupine had been ambling around the front yard, when it was disturbed by the head of the house. Master porcupine promptly climbed a tree. There he stayed until the man removed himself, then the porcupine came down slowly and cautiously, backwards like a cat. Little comedies like this, both inform and refresh one.

And that brings me to the very kind remarks of a total stranger at the above-mentioned meeting. She said some complimentary things about this column, and then added that she especially approved my frequent comments about animals, and cruelty to them. I am happy to know that I am not alone in this; sometimes I feel that I am. Well, no, I forget my fellow columnist in Argenteuil Outdoors. If we are superior to animals, then our conduct should be superior to theirs, and this is not always so. Before going on to something else, I may say that I have had rather more than my share lately of fan mail and remarks. I thank you all. It is heartening to hear that what I sometimes feel is dreadful drivel, is interesting reading to you.

So, here we all are, looking regretfully back at summer, and perhaps fearfully to winter. Indians, I am told, predict a long, hard one. Well, we don't have to live it all at once, but only day by day. "Lord, for to-morrow and its needs, I do not pray; Keep me, my God, from stain of sin, Just for to-day". That's number 670 in the Anglican hymn book, and I recommend it both as a bit of philosophy, and a prayer. Just keep that in mind, when you go to cast your vote. Never, so far as I know, has there been a more unnecessary election; it is merely a political gambit used by some smart politicians. Just the same, we are not excused from using our ballot. Do go to vote. As to how one votes, that is the puzzle. Both major parties seem to have gone crackers, and the minor ones have little chance of getting a majority. Right now, Margaret Cook is one of those undecided voters that are so recurrent in the news these days; I am happy to say that we make the politicians very nervous. Columnists love to predict. I predict that no party will have a significant majority, which leaves us just where we were before, except poorer.

As we write, the hunting season must be in full swing. We note that the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game has just had its fourth minister appointed in as many years. This one is Dr. Alphonse Couture, in case anybody needs to contact him. He is, I believe, a medical doctor, so what he knows about tourists, fishes and game, I cannot think. The truth is this Department seems to be the step-child in the Cabinet. One thing I have heard, which I hope is true, that there is a warning on the hunting license, that no hunter is to shoot on private property without permission. Recently, searching about Lachute for metal NO HUNTING signs, I was advised by a youthful customer that the best thing of its kind, is the owner at the gate with a gun. This seems a bit drastic, but probably effective. Of course, in our case, it is not practical. Anyway, good luck, neighbors and friends in Argenteuil; I hope we all come through the season safely.

DISTRICT NEWS

Morin Heights

Mr. Robert Gardiner of Burlingame, California, visited Mrs. H. Paquette for a few days.

Miss Florence Elford and Miss Rita Cameron, nurses on the staff of Montreal General Hospital, visited their former classmate, Mrs. George Watchorn.

Mrs. Carl Seale entertained a few friends at her home on Saturday evening last in honor of Mrs. J. D. Davis and her daughter, Mrs. Ken Messerschmidt, of Victoria, B.C.

CONGREGATIONAL MEETING AT UNITED CHURCH

The postponed congregational meeting of the United Church was held in the church hall during the evening of October 10. The purpose of the meeting was to deal with matters of the church requiring the support and co-operation of all members. A record number of people attended; some came in a state of apprehension, some in an enquiring state of mind; others in a spirit of Christian concern — but all with faith and hope in their hearts.

The refreshments of coffee and dessert, as an initial feature of the evening, played a part in opening the way to the heart. An interesting film was then shown, depicting some important phases of church stewardship.

The business of the meeting was ably presented by Mr. A. S. Johnston, as chairman of the Board of Stewards. With visual charts he dealt intimately with financial aspects of the various operations of the church, showing statistics and graphs in a manner easily and readily grasped by the viewers.

It was emphasized by Mr. Johnston that the successful conduct of any institution — and those of a religious nature were no exception — required adequate financing, in order that controlled expenditures were not in excess of revenue. His appeal to members for greater sacrifice in their giving was met wholeheartedly and enthusiastically — being expressed not only vocally but in writing, on cheques.

The Board of Stewards are most grateful for the generous response to this appeal, and feel that a similar basis of giving by those members who were not present will make possible the liquidation of current obligations and those of 1966.

Members who were prevented from attending the meeting are reminded that they will be visited by members of the Board of Stewards in the near future, when they too will have the opportunity of generously contributing to the financial requirements of their church.

For nameless, nondescript children

HOW FAR-REACHING is the conscience of Canadians concerning the world's youth? Does it extend to help given the concourse of the world's children?

That is the function of UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund), whose success in Canada depends upon the response of thinking citizens.

The first UNICEF effort provided milk for war-famished infants. But what purpose to save a life, if the young body is ill-nourished, the mind un-productive, the ability to earn a living non-existent?

International UNICEF now devotes both planning and budgets to these ends — mother and child clinics, basic foods, school equipment, hospital supplies, tools, fertilizer and seeds for local gardens previously impoverished.

On Hallowe'en, Canadians through UNICEF have an opportunity to quicken the conscience of our world towards the nameless, faceless children living in many lands.

Keep things moving!

NEARLY EVERYTHING sold in a modern retail store loses value when it is not sold within a short period. A dress which is not fashionable, cars of outmoded design, and home appliances which do not have the latest improvements, are as much subject to "spoilage" as the fresh produce in a grocery store.

The consumer often thinks that he gains bargains from the possibility of spoilage. It is the general belief of bargain seekers that the retailer absorbs the loss when goods are not sold during periods of greatest demand. However, the concept is false. No retailer can stay in business by selling "spoiled" goods at a loss. The cost of spoilage, and the accompanying increased storage costs are passed on to the consumer. The cost has to be added to the price of other goods which the consumer demands. Spoilage loss is ultimately passed on to the consumer even when old goods are completely discarded.

One of the major economic benefits of advertising, to consumer and retailer alike, is the reduction of spoilage loss. Ideally, advertising eliminates loss altogether. This is often accomplished by retailers who have learned what to expect of advertising. A grocer simplified the explanation this way: "It is cheaper to advertise and sell beans at 22 cents a pound than to sell at 35 cents and allow for spoilage and increased storage costs, which is necessary without timely advertising."

A changing reaction to strikes

AN AMERICAN newspaper makes the comment that — whereas organized labor formerly regarded the strike as the ultimate weapon, an instrument to be employed only in disputes of impressive dimensions — many union leaders now seem to see the strike as a primary weapon, a tactic to be used for even the most trivial reasons. It is a comment that has an equal application for Canada, and its validity can be measured in terms of the change in the public's reaction to strikes — in the opinion of C. J. Harris, an astute observer of the national scene.

In the 1930's, when unions were fighting for the principle of union recognition, there was intense public interest in any labor dispute. Even the illegal property seizures of the sit-down strikes were more condoned than condemned. Nowadays, however, except where intimidation is a factor, the public pretty well ignores a picket line. An example is the 16-month-old printers' strike against the Toronto daily newspapers. The papers have not missed an issue, and public support is lacking because it is well known that the union locals had agreed to the terms of a new contract, only to have the union's American headquarters veto the agreement.

Unlike the 1930's, a picket line now elicits more annoyance than sympathy. Public opinion permitted the growth of union power. The same force could demand that it be curbed — says this observer.

Foreign aid — more than altruism

IT IS INCREASINGLY clear that Canada will shortly begin boosting its foreign aid expenditures, and by a substantial amount — reports The Financial Post. External Affairs Minister Paul Martin predicts our outlays will more than double between now and 1970. This is very good news, and for sound reasons: It will not only help others, it will also help us...

Last fiscal year, Canada lent, committed and gave away $226 million in aid. This represented a big increase from the $108 million in fiscal year 1963-64. But our "generosity" of last year includes $76 million in export credits or $34 million more than in 1963-64 and, for the first time, $50 million in "soft" loans. These are repayable over 50 years and carry an interest charge of less than 1%. Both the credits and the soft loans can be used only for the purchase of Canadian goods and services. The $400 million to $500 million to be loaned by 1970 shouldn't scare anyone. It promises to move Canadian goods and services into many parts of the world that couldn't afford them otherwise. In time, it is to be hoped that Canada will have established a position in marketplaces of value. The proposed boost still has to materialize. Any promise made during an election campaign is properly suspect. But all Canadians who care about the world they live in, will hope the aid increases are promptly forthcoming. The $8,700 million given last year by the Western world to development causes, represented 1% of aggregate gross national product. Canada gave only about one half of 1% of its GNP.

Viewpoints and perspectives

A MEDICAL DOCTOR who is a Liberal candidate in Edmonton West has been urging that Canada should take a close look at some of the unhappy aspects of Britain's national health plan before introducing its own. The candidate points out that 15 years after the British plan was brought in, the cost had grown five times. He says that there are fewer doctors in Canada now than there were in 1948.

UGLY SIGHTS TO LAST. — The Quebec legislature passed a bill to improve the esthetic character of the province's highways. There is no hurry, however. Automobile graveyard owners have 10 years to remove their dumps from sight. This way, their vision may haunt us to our death, even if we live to be 99.

— Rouyn-Noranda (Que.) Press

SAFETY NEVER TRIED. — How do we know really stiff traffic laws sternly enforced could not reduce accidents? It has never really been tried... Some people would injure or kill themselves and others if they drove wrapped in cotton wool in steel-plated tanks. The safe car is desirable, but it can be as dangerous as an express train at a crossing unless the owner is made to handle it carefully.

— Campbellton (N.B.) Tribune

THE RECENT Government decision to prepare a hotel and restaurant classification in the province of Quebec is certainly good news for all tourists who intend to travel to this country and Quebec in particular. . . We know of about 26 hotels and motels in Rouyn-Noranda, but can only recommend five or six.

"I'LL HUFF AND I'LL PUFF AND I'LL..."

OVER THE YEARS With Lachute Watchman

85 YEARS AGO

October, 1880 —

Three iron mines around St. Jerome have been sold recently to an American buyer — for $1,500, $750 and $750, respectively.

A bear was seen on the road between Lachute and Brownsburg.

One of the most diabolical murders on record in this province occurred in 1875 at Arundel, and has just come to light. Three prisoners were arrested in Ste. Agathe and were tried by Col. Simpson.

A site has been chosen on Lake Nominingue for the erection of a college, church and convent by the Jesuit Fathers.

We will feel obliged to those indebted to The Watchman, and who intend to pay us in wood, if they will bring it along as speedily as possible. Printers cannot work without a fire for warmth.

50 YEARS AGO

October, 1915 —

J. E. Arnold has been appointed to buy war horses for the French Government, and will appoint a day for Lachute in the near future.

The new Baptist Church at Brownsburg is near completion, and the opening will take place on November 14.

The effective use of our hydrants was shown when smoke was seen pouring from Potter's Butcher Shop around midnight last Wednesday. The town hose was immediately put into action; though it did good work, it was impossible to save the building.

Pity For The City Man

This is a time of year when my heart goes out to city-dwellers. It's a time when rural or smalltown living is immensely superior to that in the concrete canyons, the abominable apartments, the sad suburbs of metropolis.

In the city, day ends drearily in the fall. There's the long, wearying battle home through traffic, or the draughty, crushed, degrading scramble on public transportation.

The city man arrives home fit for nothing but slumping for the evening before the television set. And what greets him? The old lady, wound up like a steel spring because she hasn't seen a soul she knows all day, there's nothing to look at but that stupid house next door, exactly like their own, and the kids have been giving her hell.

He's stuck with it. For the whole evening. That's why so many city chaps have workshops in the basement. It's much simpler to go down cellar and whack off a couple of fingers in the power saw than listen to Mabel.

Life is quite different for the smalltown male. He is home from work in minutes. He surveys the ranch, says, "Must get those storm windows on one of these days," and goes in, to the good fall smells of cold drinks and hot food.

His wife saw him at breakfast, again at lunch, has had a good natter with the dame next door, and has been out for two hours, raking leaves with the kids. She doesn't need him.

Instead of drifting off to the basement, the small-town male announces that this is his bowling night, or he has to go to a meeting of the Conservation and Slaughter Club, and where's a clean shirt. And that's all there is to it.

While her city counterpart squats in front of TV, gnawing her nails and wondering why she didn't marry good old George, who has a big dairy farm now, the small-town gal collects the kids and goes out to burn leaves.

There is nothing more romantic than the back streets of a small-town in the dark of a fall evening. Piles of leaves spurt orange flame. White smoke eddies. Neighbors call out, lean on rakes. Women, kerchiefed like gypsies, heap the dry leaves high on the fire. Kids avoid the subject of bedtime, dart about the fire like nimble gnomes.

Or perhaps the whole family goes to a fowl supper. What, in city living, can compare to this finest of rural functions? A crisp fall evening, a drive to the church hall through a Hallowe'en landscape, an appetite like an alligator, and that first wild whiff of turkey and dressing that makes your knees buckle and the juices flow free in your cheeks.

But it's on weekends that my pity for the city-dweller runneth over. Not for him the shooting-match on a clear fall Saturday, with its good-humored competition, its easy friendliness. Not for him the quiet stroll down a rising like clouds of mosquitoes, sunny wood road, shotgun over arm, partridge and woodcock.

It's not that he doesn't live right, or doesn't deserve these pleasures. It's just that it's physically impossible to get to them easily. If he wants to crouch in a duck-blind, at dawn, he has to drive half the night to get there.

Maybe on a Sunday or holiday, in the fall, the city family decides to head out and see some of that beautiful autumn foliage. They see it, after driving two hours. And with 50,000 other cars, they crawl home in late afternoon, bumper to bumper, the old man cursing, the kids getting hungrier, the mother growing owlier.

Smalltown people can drive for 15 minutes and hit scenery, at least around here, that leaves them breathless. Or they'll wheel out a few miles to see their relatives on the farm, eat a magnificent dinner, and sit around watching TV in a state of delicious torpor.

Yup. It's tough to live in the city, in the fall.

Ontario Key To Outcome

With an unprecedented number of voters still undecided how they'll cast their ballots Nov. 8, the federal campaign turned into the homestretch this week with Ontario apparently the key to the outcome.

The best of political assessments rate Ontario's 85 seats — the largest provincial block in the House of Commons — as the most likely for a possible major swing for or against the government.

This is based on the assumption that Mr. Diefenbaker's entrenched prairie support will come through for him and that Quebec will go at least as heavily for the Liberals as it did in 1963.

A spate of incredible charges dominated last week's campaigning, with the "affair of the six" Social Crediters grabbing major attention.

Charges by the Conservatives that the affair was just another example of Liberal dishonesty followed allegations by former Socred MP Dr. Guy Marcoux that Jack Pickersgill and Joey Smallwood, with an assistant from financier John D[illegible]e, engineered the deal which enabled Prime Minister Pearson to form his minority administration.

According to Dr. Marcoux, who is running in this election as an independent, the Liberals prevailed on the six Socreds to sign a statement of support which convinced the Governor-General that Mr. Pearson would be able to govern if Mr. Diefenbaker stepped down.

There was clearly nothing wrong with one party getting support from another pa[illegible]. But Dr. Marcoux injected a sinister element — for which there is so far no proof — with his claim that $25,000 was available in bribe money.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland send a total of 33 members to the 265-seat House of Commons. In 1963, the Liberals picked off 20 seats with 13 going to the Conservatives.

No change is expected in the 7-0 Liberal sweep of Newfoundland. Prince Edward Island will likely again break 2-2 for each party and there's not much likelihood of any major change in New Brunswick, which now stands 6-4 for the Liberals.

In Nova Scotia, however, Liberals hope to pick up at least two seats. Liberals and Tories split 6-6 here in 1962.

Quebec with 75 seats split wildly in 1963, with Liberals picking up seats held by both Tories and Real Caouette's Socred followers. Liberals took 46 seats and the Tories eight, and after the Socred breakup, Caouette ended up with 13 seats and the Thompson Socreds with five.

But it's Ontario, which has been traditionally Conservative since Confederation, where the returns are most in doubt. The province swung heavily Liberal in 1963, with 52 of the 85 seats going to the Pearson forces. There were 27 PCs and half a dozen NDP candidates also elected.

It is here that the Conservatives hope to pick up enough seats to regain power.

The West, according to most observers, will continue to be bare ground for the Liberals. Tories hold 10 of Manitoba's 12 seats, all 17 of Saskatchewan's seats, and 14 of the 17 in Alberta. In B.C., the NDP came out on top in 1963 with nine seats, while seven went Liberal, four PC and two Socred. The Yukon and Northwest Territories are both considered safe Tory seats.

If the Liberals are to get a majority, it will have to be in Ontario. Quebec alone could do the trick, but the result would be a government with more than half its seats from French Canada, and it's doubtful if such government could long survive in view of the present unease felt by much of English Canada over Quebec.

Play-material for your child

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Once a mother has become aware of how much unused play material is in the house, she will make some discoveries of her own. Keep this list and add your own original ideas to it. Then you are prepared to give your youngster a choice of possible activities next time he is tired of his familiar toys.

Making choice of a carpet

Montreal — Carpets and rugs made in Canada have never been prettier, values have never been greater; but where does the consumer start when it comes to making a choice?

A new carpet or rug is never an "everyday" purchase either for the novice or the seasoned homemaker, but a major investment in beauty and comfort which should last for many years, according to the Canadian Carpet Institute.

The variety of styles and qualities widens each year as modern developments broaden the range of fibres, colors and patterns for every decorating trend or taste, and for new uses as well as old. The C.C.I., an association of Canadian carpet manufacturers which this fall is again staging a "Carpet Time" national promotion, offers some basic guidelines for consumers.

(1) Color is the first thing to consider, because it can set the keynote of a decorating plan. It can contrast or blend with other furnishings, depending on your personal taste.

(2) Size depends on more than room dimensions. Wall-to-wall carpet can magically add to the size of a room but a rug may be more practical in an apartment occupied for only a few years.

(3) Styling includes patterns and textures and while there is no doubt that tweedy patterns of multi-colors will show soil less than deep-pile plain shades, home decoration based on the "won't show the dirt" aspect can be very dull.

(4) The best place to buy carpets and rugs is from reliable department, furniture or carpet stores in your area. Many stores offer home service today, but consumers should never confuse this with door-to-door salesmen who offer unusual "bargains".

(5) The best guide to how much you pay is "the best you can afford". Cheap carpeting is most expensive in terms of value of wear per year. You should pay most for heavy traffic areas, less for little-used rooms.

(6) There is no answer to the question of which fibre is best. A top grade wool is excellent but acrylic or nylon might be easier to keep clean in certain circumstances.

(7) There is one guide to quality, regardless of the type of fibre: The deeper the denser the pile the better the quality. Closely packed yarns mean better wear.

(8) Underlay can be either felted or rubber padding, and can add to the life of the carpet, but heavy padding will never compensate for poor quality pile.

(9) Wear life of carpets and rugs depends on quality, traffic and the care you give it. Regular vacuuming removes the gritty dirt that will grind down fibres. Periodic shampooing preserves the beauty of the carpet.

Once a mother has become aware of how much unused play material is in the house, she will make some discoveries of her own. Keep this list and add your own original ideas to it. Then you are prepared to give your youngster a choice of possible activities next time he is tired of his familiar toys.

The so-called "bad" child up to mischief is often just a bored child bubbling over with physical energy and with no help in channelling it into interesting activity. The child who is convalescing or shut indoors with a cold is also greatly in need of fresh suggestions for ways to fill the long hours.

Many parents do not realize that toys do not have to be bought at a toy counter. In every home there is material which is often thrown out, which a child can use for satisfying, creative activity. Here are some of the things which are found in the average house and suggestions for ways they can be put to use to keep small minds and fingers busy.

Buttons are great fun for little folk providing they are old enough not to put them in their mouths and swallow them. A small child will enjoy picking out buttons, one by one, from a shallow dish and dropping them into a jar. If the child knows different colors he can use a muffin tin and sort the various shades, red, yellow, black, blue, etc., into separate sections. A four-year-old can thread himself a necklace of buttons and a slightly older child can sew buttons on a square of cardboard.

Mother can draw a Button Man or a Button Woman on a large sheet of paper with a big button face and small buttons down the front and button hands and feet. Then a child, who is old enough to sew, will have a good time "dressing" the Button People, with crayon colored clothes.

Empty spools should always be saved. They can be painted with water colors or ordinary paint. They make an excellent rolling toy and mother can mark with chalk on the kitchen linoleum a circle "home base" for a child to aim his spool at. Spools can also be threaded and can be made into dolls. A dolly bed made from a box or fruit basket can have spool legs.

Plain clean clothes pegs can provide many absorbing building play periods. Fences, houses and barns can all be constructed with skill. A small child will enjoy fitting clothes pegs all around the edge of a large honey pail.

Tins with food in them come in various sizes. An efficient can opener leaves no rough edges and two children can play "store" with these cans. If the labels have been torn off, they can search an old magazine for pictures of fruit or vegetables and paste a new label on each can. If the child loves flowers he could use an old seed catalogue for a set of flower cans. A nest of cans of assorted sizes fascinates a little tot. He can practice fitting them together or try building a can tower.

Odds and ends of colored wool are attractive to children. They can sort the colors, use them for threading in and out the holes mother has punched on a cardboard to make a wool picture. A school age child can make wool dolls with just a little help from mother.

Clean milk tops can become play coins and used for shopping at the "store". If a slit two inches wide is made in the cover of an empty baking powder can, a little child will enjoy dropping in the tops through the slit of his cash register.

Branches meet for semi-annual W.I. convention

Argenteuil County Women's Institutes assembled in Lachute High School last Saturday, and reports on the work were given by conveners — including the list of classes for 1966 Fair handicrafts, a report from the "Home for Senior Citizens" committee, and a resumé by Mrs. C. Stephens of preparation needed for the Drama Festival.

The County president, Mrs. C. Hall, presented Miss H. Smith with a gift from the executive, in appreciation of her work as convener of the committee in charge of the recent luncheon for W.I. visitors from Ontario. Mrs. Hall also presented a W.I. pin to Miss Rosa Rodriguez, a guest from Mexico, who was introduced by her hostess, Mrs. P. Clark. Miss Caya, of Lachute High School, showed films of Mexico, adding much to the enjoyment of her audience by an interesting commentary.

With the large apple crop this year, Canadians can enjoy apples for dessert in many ways. Here's a deliciously different type of apple pie with cheese topping for you to try. It comes from the kitchens of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

End meal with an apple

Open Face Apple Pie

Pastry for 9-inch pie shell, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 5 cups sliced apples, ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ½ teaspooon cinnamon, 1 cup grated, medium Cheddar cheese.

Prepare pastry and line pie plate. Pour melted butter over apples and stir to coat slices. Mix sugar, cornstarch and cinnamon. Sprinkle 2 tablespoons of this mixture over bottom of pie shell and stir remainder into apples. Turn into pie shell. Bake in a 450°F. oven until apples are tender, about 25 minutes. Remove pie from oven and sprinkle with grated cheese. Return to oven for 2 or 3 minutes until cheese melts. Makes 6 servings.

Know your apple varieties

(Consumer Section)

The colorful array of apples now displayed on most grocery shelves includes a number of varieties such as McIntosh, Delicious and Cortland to name but a few. Depending on what part of Canada you live in, you will be more familiar with certain varieties than others. Westerners produce and enjoy such varieties as the Red and Golden Delicious, Winesap and Rome Beauty. Easterners proudly claim such favorites as the McIntosh, Cortland, Spy, Fameuse or Snow, and Gravenstein. As you know each variety has special qualities which make them favorable for eating or cooking or both.

The smart shopper makes it a point to become familiar with the varieties and their uses. Here are a few suggestions from the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for getting the most out of your apple purchase:

Look for Grade Mark

Look for the grade mark, a sure sign of quality control. The federal government grade most commonly found on the market is Canada Fancy. You may also see Canada Commercial or "C".

The grade mark will guide you in your purchase. Apples are graded according to the amount of color, maturity, size and shape and freedom from disease and injury. To qualify for the Canada Fancy grade, the apples must have a certain percentage of red color characteristic of the variety. They must also be at least 2½ inches in diameter.

Buy by Variety

When you buy apples, you probably look for an all-purpose apple, suitable for eating raw or for cooking. McIntosh, Cortland, Lobo, Delicious and Northern Spy should suit your needs.

Some varieties are better for cooking because they are most tart and firm in texture and hold their shape when cooked. Northern Spy, Gravenstein, Cortland, Winesap and Rome Beauty are excellent cooking varieties.

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

An unpublished early version of The Three Bears and an unpublished alphabet book illustrated by a drawing teacher who worked in Sarnia, Ont., in the 1880's may be published soon by the Toronto Public Libraries.

Both books are part of the Osborne collection of children's books donated to Boys and Girls House by librarian Edgar Osborne of Derbyshire, England. Mr. Osborne presented his books to the Toronto library in 1946 because of his admiration for the work done for children there, especially by the since-retired librarian, Miss Lillian Smith.

In Toronto recently for a meeting of children's book collectors and librarians, Mr. Osborne said he found the early manuscript of The Three Bears by chance when he bought an auction lot of books. It sat for months in his garage before he got around to investigating what he had bought.

Caused Furore

The manuscript pre-dates the more familiar version of the story which was published by poet Robert Southey in 1837 and is considered by many critics to be one of Southey's best works.

The Osborne manuscript was written in 1831 as a birthday present for four-year-old Horace Broke by his aunt, Eleanor Mure.

In her version the bears are all male and the heroine is an old woman. In it the bears try to burn and drown the old woman and finally toss her on the steeple of St. Paul's. The manuscript is illustrated in what is almost comic-book style.

So is the Illustrated Comic Alphabet designed by the drawing teacher, Amelia Frances Howard-Gibbon. A note in the drawing book says it was given by Miss Howard-Gibbon to Martha Poupeter Pousette in 1859. In 1930 it passed from an Aunt Pat as a Christmas gift and was given to the Osborne collection by Gerald Wilkes.

Judith St. John, head of the collection, says there is no record that the manuscript, which is based on the old A for Archer book, has ever been published.

Duke's Granddaughter

After the announcement of the possible publication of the book, Miss Howard-Gibbon's great-great nephew provided some information on her background.

He says she was born about 1825 in England at Greystoke Castle and spent her childhood at Arundel Castle. She was the granddaughter of the 11th Duke of Norfolk.

She is believed to have come to Canada in 1856 after an unpleasant court case involving the family. The rest of the family followed when her father, Edward Howard-Gibbon, died. Her mother lived in Erindale, Ont.

It is believed the drawing mistress, who taught girls' classes in Sarnia for a time, returned to England to claim an inheritance.
