31st Annual meeting of Historical Soc'y, successful gathering at Carillon Museum

At the 31st annual meeting of the Argenteuil Historical Society, held last Saturday at the Carillon Museum, Gilbert E. Arnold, Jr., was elected president for the ensuing year. There was an attendance approaching 100 people, and an enthusiasm which augurs well for the increasing progress of this County enterprise.

The proceedings were chaired by Mansel R. Wilson in the absence of the president, George McGibbon. There were many expressions of appreciation for Mr. McGibbon's energetic leadership — Mr. Wilson noting particularly, during his term of office, the appointment of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Heatlie as curators and the extensive renovation of the Museum, besides other improvements.

The secretarial report of Melville Smith was given by Mac E. Walker, and the treasurer's report was given by Leighton W. York.

There were favorable reviews from all committees — indicating a sound financial position and a marked increase in admissions at the Museum. These, according to Mrs. Heatlie, numbered 5,200 this year, an increase of 25 percent, and included numerous busloads and groups visiting from considerable distances. Comments from many sources had been highly favorable.

A brief, interesting, and controversial paper was presented by Gilbert E. Arnold on the early settlement of Argenteuil. Mr. Arnold has made extensive research in documents hitherto untouched in the published histories of Argenteuil, tracing actual settlements in the St. Andrews peninsula to the 1730's. Among these were settlers of the "lesser nobility" whose ancestry was interwoven with French and Royal Stuart origins, also Americans, Negros and others "whose names had hitherto been overlooked" . . Mr. Arnold, on insistence of his listeners, agreed to commit his findings to print, for the information of posterity — which, he claimed, was one of his prime purposes, namely to supplement the valuable historical records already published.

Dwelling fire on Grace Street

Early Sunday morning, a fire in the home of Telesphore Lemay, 563 Grace Street, caused considerable damage to the attic and two rooms in the upper level of the house. The fire was discovered by policemen on patrol, who forced their way into the building; they wakened Mr. Lemay, who is blind, and led him from the burning house.

The fire started in the attic and was aided by paper, sawdust and rags used for insulation. From the attic, it spread to the walls before it was extinguished.

The alarm was sounded at 1.55 a.m. Sunday, and firemen were on the scene for almost two hours. Actual fire damage of any consequence was limited to the attic; however, considerable water and smoke damage resulted. Salvage covers were used in an effort to keep water damage as low as possible.

The loss is believed to be covered by insurance.

Legion poppy sales campaign, Cenotaph observance Sunday

Branch 70 (Lachute) of the Royal Canadian Legion will hold their annual poppy canvass, commencing Thursday evening, November 4, when members will turn out in force for door-to-door sales. The chairman of the poppy campaign, Lloyd Bryson, expressed a hope that the public will receive the canvassers as generously as they have done in past years. The proceeds from poppy and wreath sales are used strictly for welfare of unfortunates in the Lachute area.

Poppy sales will continue on through Sunday, November 7, when the Legion Remembrance Service will be held at the cenotaph, at 2 p.m. This service is attended by many organizations of Lachute, in addition to the Branch members and the Ladies' Auxiliary. Among others will be the local Army and Air Force Cadets and Girl Guides.

A display of wreaths may be seen in the former A & P premises on Main Street, which is a tribute from the many merchants of Lachute and district who have contributed to this worthy cause.

Directives to the members of Legion Branch 70 have been circulated in a mimeographed program. Besides the door-to-door and street sales of poppies, the program goes as follows:

Nov. 6, Saturday, 6 p.m. — Dinner (members only, with veterans only allowed as guests).

9 p.m. — Dance to Emmett Lowe's Orchestra. (Members and friends welcome).

Nov. 7, Sunday, 10 a.m. — Assemble at Hall for the church parade to Ste. Anastasie Church.

1 p.m. — Assemble at Hall for parade to Cenotaph.

Liberal candidate knows his furrows

In the annual plowing match of the Deux Montagnes County Plowmen's Association, held recently at St. Benoit, there were 36 entrants in the general plowing class — among whom was Vincent Drouin, ex-M.P. and Liberal candidate in the current election campaign. Mr. Drouin ranked third in the class; first was Maurice Gauthier and second Marcel Belisle. The event concluded with a banquet in honor of the winning contestants. . . 200-Odd voters cast ballots at advance polls

It is reported by the District Returning Officer, Dr. Jean-P. Dorion, that approximately 201 voters took advantage of the advanced polls last Saturday and Monday — polls advertised and held at strategic spots in the two counties of the constituency, for the convenience of those eligible who will not be able, by location or circumstance, to vote at their own respective polls next Monday.

A list of the polling places, with (unofficial) number of votes cast in each case, is as follows:

Paul Orr, N.D.P., heard at meeting in Legion Hall

Last Sunday, with rainy weather outside — according to report a bigger storm was blowing inside the Canadian Legion Hall, as Paul Orr, N.D.P. candidate for Argenteuil-Two Mountains thundered his program to the audience.

The candidate informed his listeners that the two major parties "thought we were not organized", and he was satisfied that "they will know the result of their complacency on November 8". He attacked the incumbent Liberal, Mr. Drouin, as a "laissez faire" representative for his constituents and said his P.C. opponent, Mr. Regimbal, represented "high finance interests from the Lachute area". He declared that even the Social Credit candidate was more sincere than both major party candidates.

Mr. Orr pledged that his constituents would receive quarterly reports of his activity in the House, and said that he knew the problems of the area better than any man, having lived and worked in both counties. He urged his listeners not to wait for a next time, that the time was now, for social justice and honesty.

Former S.C. candidate supports Conservative

Maurice Gougeon, Social Credit candidate in the 1963 election, on Sunday addressed a rally in Ayersville, pledging his full support to the Progressive Conservative candidate, Roger E. Regimbal. Mr. Gougeon appealed to all Social Credit members to do likewise and to join him in electing Mr. Regimbal to office on Monday next. Left to right are Adelard Laurin, mayor of St. Philippe; Mr. Gougeon at the microphone; Gaetan Leclair, master of ceremonies for the rally; Roger E. Regimbal, P.C. candidate; and Notary J. Octave Latour, former Conservative M.P. for this riding.

Basic full-time fire brigade suggested by commissioners

The reorganizing of Lachute's fire department on a permanent basis, and appointment of a full-time fire chief, is recommended in a Quebec Fire Commissioners report covering fire protection service in this town. The investigation was made by Messrs. Moss and Delage, delegated by the Fire Commissioner's Office, on a request from Mayor Dr. Saindon for a study of the local situation.

Report

In a 15-page report, the investigators state that they interviewed the chief and five firemen, and found a discordant attitude between the chief and some of the members. This misunderstanding was due to several causes, notably the difficulty of the chief and certain firemen to communicate in both languages. Some of them mentioned also "favoritism" in the members summoned to attend fires outside the municipality.

"We believe the present chief is well informed in matters of firefighting but lacks certain qualities required for the role. It appears also that the training periods are not conducted quite in the manner described to us by the chief. Also that certain firemen appear at the station once a month in order to be eligible for the allowance. We can state, however, that the members of this brigade whom we interviewed have all the requirements to qualify them as good firemen.

"It is essential", the report added, "that the chief must have the respect of all his subordinates, and that his orders must be understood by all and executed immediately."

Recommendations

The recommendations of Messrs. Moss and Delage, in a letter to the mayor from the Fire Commissioner's Office signed by F. X. Perreault, submit the following changes:

(a) Organizing of the department on a basis of both permanent and volunteer firemen.

(b) Appointment of a permanent chief and engaging of at least five permanent firemen.

(c) Formation of a fire committee of a given number of municipal councillors, whose considerations should be devoted exclusively to fire protection.

(d) Increasing the force, from 15 to 18 volunteer firemen.

(e) A training program for all members of the force.

(f) A preventive program of fire inspection, backed by adequate municipal legislation.

The report has observations on the department's facilities and equipment. It is noted that the purchase of a new pump truck, or an aerial ladder, would call for a new fire station building. But the commissioners see no immediate need to maintain two fire stations in Lachute.

The investigators conclude: "It appears that the purchase of a truck of 840-gallons-a-minute capacity would be justified but this is not essential for the moment. We are of the same opinion as regards an aerial ladder, we do not consider this proposal necessary."

Basketball girls to give display at Teachers' conf'ce

Girl basketballers of Lachute High School, augmented by players from the Brownsburg High School, will demonstrate their skills at Outremont this Friday afternoon, as a special feature for Physical Education instructors in the program of the annual Teachers' Convention.

The busload of 24 girls, escorted and directed by Asst. Principal Robert Bailly, will perform a number of the advanced training drills practised at L.H.S. during the past years — and which undoubtedly have led to the repeated success of L.H.S. senior girls as champions of inter-school basketball in this province.

In a half-hour display, the Phys. Ed. teachers will watch these girls go through their paces, and will evaluate the particular drills for use either in physical training or in athletic coaching.

Trophy to winner of provincial Wildlife essay contest

Pupils told of career openings in Conservation

During a special ceremony at Lachute High School, before the students and members of the teaching staff, Mr. Paul A. Brown, assistant-deputy minister for the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game, presented the Sterling Pollock Trophy to Bryan Rodger, of Grade VII-C.

Bryan, winner of the Grand Provincial Prize for an essay contest held by Quebec Wildlife Federation in various schools of the province, was awarded this trophy and a prize of $100 for his essay on "Your Favorite Wild Animal". (The cheque had already been presented, before the end of the school year.)

In addressing the pupils and the teachers, Mr. Brown explained the work accomplished by his Department in the field of wildlife management, and the need to obtain more biologists. He also pointed out that more foresters, who specialize in the problems of outdoors recreation, will be needed by the Department.

Mr. Brown explained that in the U.S.A. an increase of 50 percent in requests for more public recreation facilities in the outdoors, is foreseen for the next five years. A similar increase is likely to occur in the Province of Quebec.

By inviting the assistant deputy minister to present the "Sterling Pollock" Trophy, Quebec Wildlife Federation was pleased to collaborate with the educational authorities, by enabling this official representative of the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game, to tell the students about the work accomplished in wildlife management, and career possibilities in this line of endeavor.

Bryan Rodger, Grade VII-C student at Lachute High School, receiving the Sterling Pollock provincial trophy at a recent occasion in the school — when Paul A. Brown, assistant deputy minister in the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game, addressed the pupils on outdoors conservation, and future career opportunities in this phase of specialization. Seen above are the assistant principal, Robt. Bailly; Mr. Brown, presenting the trophy; Bryan Rodger; and Emile Lamoureux, 1st vice-president of the Quebec Wildlife Federation, sponsors of the contest. . . Ayersville rally shows enthusiasm for Regimbal, Prog. Conservative

The reported lack of interest in next Monday's election was nowhere to be seen at Ayersville last Sunday, as some 350 people jammed the Clément School at a rally in favor of Roger E. Regimbal, the Progressive Conservative candidate. Commenting on this apparent enthusiasm, Mr. Regimbal stated that everywhere in Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes, thousands had responded to the Conservative call for unity and action. "Members of all parties have given their outright support to put Argenteuil-Deux Montages back on the map with the attention and importance it deserves, by publicly backing me, the Conservative candidate," Mr. Regimbal said.

Typical of this kind of unity was the presence of Maurice Gougeon, Social Credit candidate in the previous election, who pledged his full energy and efforts in favor of Mr. Regimbal as the only logical choice for efficient representation for this constituency, and called on all Social Credit members to do the same. He made a special appeal to the present candidate, Ernest Champagne, to adopt a similar attitude for the welfare of the riding. Mr. Gougeon stated he had gone through the whole area rallying support for Mr. Regimbal, and during his appeal, guaranteed the election of Mr. Regimbal on Monday next, November 8.

Covering the main points of the P.C. platform — insisting on the recall of the 11% tax on building materials; the Consumer Loan act for city dwellers; the $100 pension for senior citizens; and the establishment of a Department of Youth, as well as exemption from taxable income of amounts paid in school and municipal taxes — Mr. Regimbal devoted most of his attention to integrity, service, unity and full-time representation.

"Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes is now on the move again after five years of paralysis. Let's keep it moving with your P.C. candidate who started it all, and who will keep it moving to greater and greater prominence".

The meeting was presided over by Ayersville Mayor Rodolphe Moreau, with Gaetan Leclair acting as m.c.

P.C. candidate questioned on libel suit

During his campaign tour, the Progressive Conservative candidate, Roger E. Regimbal, was questioned at Ste. Marthe on the subject of the $100,000 libel action instituted against him by Mr. Vincent Drouin.

"It appears that my Liberal opponent is trying in vain to impress the public," he replied.

"Certain questions were put to me in the course of my visits to St. Benoit; and I simply repeated those questions, without the least accusation. If Mr. Drouin had circulated among the electors a little more, they would have asked him those same questions, direct," Mr. Regimbal explained.

"He only has to give his reply, and if he has a reputation for frankness and honesty his word will be accepted and no more will be heard about it," he said.

By BOB ATCHISON

It becomes increasingly evident that an animal pound for this area is a major need; but you will realize, that all must give a hand if we are to have one built. Of course, to donate anything to this project, you need to care something for animals and the treatment they receive. Many people think that a project of this sort should be looked after by the town, but if there is ever going to be an animal shelter in this district, then we the citizens are going to have to promote and to support it. A few donations have come in this past week or so, and it would be very much appreciated if you could help along in this matter. If you decide to shell out a little, all such donations could be sent to The Watchman. From there on it will be taken care of, and no matter how small, such gifts will be greatly appreciated. Let's show some of the other towns that have these shelters, that we too have some concern for God's creatures. (Ed. Note: Donors should kindly enclose their name and address.)

More and more complaints have been registered with me recently about trucks on the back roads, supposedly doing work on utility poles. Yet these men are all loaded for bear or whatever comes along. One of these instances I will pass along. It seems that a couple were driving down near Cushing one evening and spotted a couple of does bunting each other in a field. A truck came along just at this time. The occupants saw the deer, pulled off the road, and out came two men with guns already loaded, set for the kill. However, this was all spoiled by the car owners, who slammed down on the horn when the men were seen climbing out with guns. Happily, the deer took off at a good clip, leaving a couple of very frustrated shooters.. You know I personally have seen this quite often in other places, so maybe it would be worthwhile for the wardens to take a look at some of these trucks.

I have been told of numerous wolves in the vicinity. This, as I mentioned two weeks ago, may be due to their food being shot out, or it could be the hunting pressure is so great that they have come down from their original habitat. If they become too numerous hereabouts, then the pressure will have to be re-applied, to chase them out.

I was called the other evening about a white or albino deer that had been seen. Cases like this are not too rare in deer; for that matter, in most species of wildlife there occurs an occasional throwback like this. Deer, moose, squirrels, raccoons — almost everything. Of course, we don't see all these freaks at given times, so that when we do see one, it is considered something quite exceptional.

Once again, talking about guns and ballistics: Another fallacy is that, in order to get the most from your firearms, you must have the heaviest possible bullet. This is not so; as a matter of fact, in most cases the bullet weighing in at say 160 will be much better than the one at 180 or 200. Trajectory is a definite factor in any bullet. You know that if you throw a small stone as compared with a large one, the smaller one will travel faster and farther; and the same principal applies to ammunition. If you have been using a heavier bullet, try one with a little less weight; you will be surprised at the results.

One of the boys shot himself a fox, and from all evidence this animal must have been rabid. He happened to be in a field waiting for deer to pass through; he spotted the fox just about the same time as it spotted him, but instead of taking off for parts unknown, it ran toward him. Needless to say, he did not take long to shoot it, thus spoiling his deer hunting for the time. I haven't heard of any wildlife infected with rabies for some time, and with this colder weather if there should happen to be any around, it will soon be brought under control. Take one safeguard though — shooting anything at all, take precautions. In cleaning it, or handling, how about wearing rubber gloves? It could save you a little trouble.

Coming into town this a.m., just near the fields at the Black Bridge I saw nine pheasants — two cock birds complete in all their colors, and seven hen birds. They were pecking gravel at the side of the road, and didn't seem to be too bothered by the car. I hope they stay around. Plenty of partridge are appearing also, and this is a good sign for next year. Of course, a lot can happen before then, but at least we will have some left after the present season is over. The Hungerians are in real good supply also, and with a little luck we will also have a few of these around next spring. Not too much has been heard of the Chukars — that is, no one seems to have shot too many; but of course, when out after deer you don't spoil your chances shooting at partridge. . . We haven't been too lucky these past few years with our wing shooting, but maybe the luck will turn. And we as hunters will have to help a little; by this, I mean we can go out and build breaks along the fences, and put out feed boxes. This may seem like a lot of trouble for a few birds, but it sure will be effort repaid later on.

Again, this evening (October 27) we saw five geese that had just taken off from the North River. They were flying very low for some time, but just at this point a helicopter came along, and seeing the birds veer and climb was a nice sight.

Most of us must have seen and read the article about Pollution. This one came from the Canadian Institute of Pollution Control, and believe it or not, this is the first public statement put out by this body in the past 32 years. You may also remember that this is the outfit accredited with the article last February or March about detergents not causing pollution. As could be expected from an organization that takes 32 years to make a statement, they have nothing to offer in the way of definite controls. One of the "Facts" sure intrigues me: "The public must be made fully aware of the hazards of pollution and of the workable means of control.". That's a world-tottering dictim, after 32 years of study.

Hawks are appearing more frequently. With the first snows of the year, it seemed that all the hawks in the area had circled in on the fields across from our house, right from the smallest to the biggest. It also appeared that most of them were feeding well. This will be good too; a great many field mice are around just now, almost as many as we had a couple of years ago. I have also noticed on my brief ramblings the evidence of a good few voles. These are the little animals that make large furrows in the grass — and one creature that has certainly increased a good deal in this particular district within the last few years. Let's hope they don't get to overrun everything.

Watching the birds at the feeders, I have noticed that there are still a few grackles around. I'm surprised at this, I don't know just what to think. Chickadees are flocking in right now too, along with a few rose-breasted grosbeaks. These are really nice to see. Naturally the winter flocks are not with us yet, but I'm waiting for them.

THE BEAVER

This continent owes a debt to the Beaver. Among the best known of rodents, beavers were important and valuable when North America was being settled and were one of the chief causes of exploration. To get beavers, fur traders and trappers went out into the wilds, built trading posts and forts, and opened up the country for settlement. At one time, beaver skins were used as money, but the trappers almost destroyed the beaver. Around 1880, only a few beavers were left and they were in the most inaccessible places. Now, with protection, the beaver is coming back to our wooded streams and ponds.

Beavers are thickset and heavy, weighing up to sixty-five pounds. Their hind feet are webbed, which helps them in swimming. They have short, strong legs, and their tail is flat and naked, being covered only with scales. It is used as a rudder when swimming, and also serves to make loud splashes as warnings of danger to the beaver colony. It also helps to prop him up when he is gnawing down trees.

The fur of a beaver is reddish brown above, and lighter or greyish below. They have small eyes, and two front teeth on either jaw, which wear away more rapidly so as to leave a sharp, enamelled edge. With these, the beaver can cut down large trees, anywhere from two to thirty inches in diameter.

Deep water is necessary for a beaver, as his winter food supply of bark must be kept under water. Also, when the only entrance to a home is deep under water, enemies do not come visiting. In cold climates, the pond must be so deep that it will not freeze solid because the beavers must come out to get food.

Beavers are social animals. Where food is abundant and the locality secluded, the number of families in a community is large. The beaver's favorite food is the bark and twigs of willow, poplar and birch, but they also eat berries and roots, particularly water-lily roots.

The so-called beaver lodge is a unique structure. Made of sticks and mud, they are generally round, ten feet or more across and have thick walls. Inside each lodge is a roomy chamber where the beaver makes a nest of shredded lark. Sometimes when all the trees have been cut down and eaten around the pond, the beaver likes to dig long canals to other stands of trees and float its food down to the pond.

The dams act like giant sieves to hold back the water, and settle the fine particles of soil in the streams, especially after rains. Much of the rich meadow land in our mountains was made this way. The water seeps out into the earth all around the dam, making it rich.

Beavers also construct canals, showing an amazing amount of intelligence. Although the beaver is a powerful swimmer, [illegible] difficulty dragging the lo[illegible] branches over the ground [illegible] building or storing food. [illegible] colonies of beavers often [illegible] canals from the pond to a suitable grove of trees. Such canals are from two to three feet wide and deep, and often hundreds of feet in length. The timber is then readily floated down the canal toward the pond.

Today, the beaver is now increasing in population, and its fur, which is popular for women's coats, is expensive, but in great demand as one of the top fashions for the year 1965. From this description I feel we, the public, should do everything possible to assist the beaver in its survival. We should petition the government for more and better laws for the protection of this animal.

This might be accomplished by setting aside designated areas as a playground and nesting place for beaver colonies, where trappers and hunters would be forbidden. Another idea would be to place beavers and colonies in captivity with natural surroundings, thus guaranteeing future generations. Beaver "farms" might be another way of ensuring the survival of this very valuable animal.

As the beaver was formerly so wide-spread and important in the fur trade, its image became the national emblem of Canada. This fact is further shown in our present currency, when we see a picture of a beaver on the Canadian five-cent piece. The beaver played such an important role in the history of our country that true Canadians should always associate the words "Canada and Beaver". May they live forever!

Curling season opening at Brownsburg

The ladies' branch of Brownsburg Curling Club held their semi-annual meeting on October 26. The meeting was very well attended.

After the various reports, plans for the lunch and dinner were made for the C-I-L Bonspiel on November 20, also for the Mixed Open which starts November 27 and runs through to the finals on Saturday, December 4.

The ice will be ready for play this week. There will be a clinic for all lady members this Thursday and Friday evenings, at 7 o'clock. The ladies' afternoon curling will start at 1.30 p.m. on November 9.

Please take note of the opening dance, on Saturday, November 6. Let's start off with a bang; all members, social members and friends are welcome.

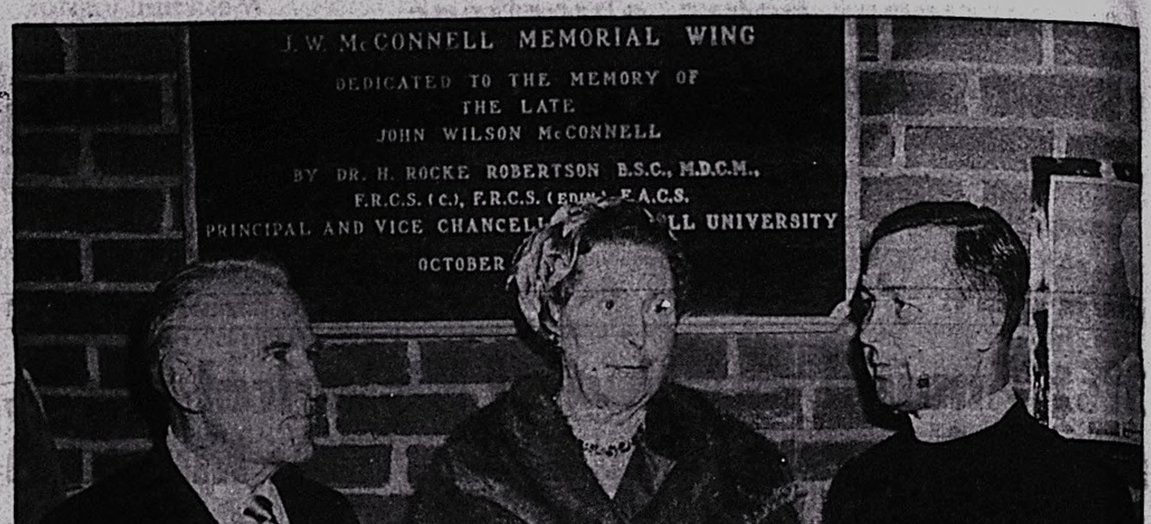
A Brownsburg men's team had the pleasure of representing Centre 2 and helping to entertain the Swiss curlers in Ottawa. They were at the Hull Winter Club on Wednesday, and on Friday, accompanied by their wives, attended the closing banquet at the Rideau Club. Everyone had a grand time and there was talk of a Swiss-Canada Cup.

Club views current increase in wolves

With a reported influx of wolves from the more northerly regions, the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association is giving every encouragement to the shooting of these marauders before their number seriously increases at the expense of game and farm animals. There is no government bounty on wolves, so the Association is offering an award for the biggest specimen of wolf shot in the county. Any hunters or farmers shooting a wolf should bring the head to Roger Lascelles or a director of the Association. (It is required to hold a membership in the Association.)

There are all sorts of trophies available to members for the hunting season, for deer, moose, partridge and all species in season. Any having shot a deer, or expecting a sizeable haul, should procure special cards for the deer contest, which closes November 28, the end of the season.



Opening of McConnell memorial wing

Recently, a 14-storey memorial wing to the late J. W. McConnell was added to the Griffith-McConnell Home, 5790 Parkhaven Ave., Cote St. Luc, increasing the accommodation to 308 persons. The complex was started five years ago, and includes a 35-bed infirmary. In the new wing, an auditorium with seating capacity for 147 was dedicated to the retiring administrator, Mae F. McKay. The other auditorium is located in the section completed two years ago.

The complex provides the most up-to-date accommodation for elderly persons to be found anywhere in Canada. It has plenty of space, large windows, well-appointed rooms and dining halls, lounge facilities, carpeting and a library.

It will be administered by the United Church of Canada, through the Board of Directors of Montreal Homes for Elderly Inc., headed by Wesley B. Younkie.

Seven dead as car plunges into river

Seven Montrealers drowned last Friday night in a tragedy at St. Remi d'Amherst, in nearby Papineau County, when the car in which they were riding struck a tree and plunged into a river.

Six of the victims were members of one family. Dead are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Picard, 41 and 39 years of age respectively, and their four children Norman, 18; Rosaleen, 14; Gilbert, 12; and Anne 10; and Simon Allard, 34 — all of Montreal.

Provincial Police said the mishap, caused by the slippery pavement, occurred so fast that the victims did not have time to escape. The accident occurred about 5 p.m.

Police believe that Mr. Picard, driver of the car, first tried to avoid plunging into the river after losing control of his car, and hit the tree.

The car hit the tree with such force that it sent the vehicle crashing into the river a few feet away. The car plunged into nearly 25 feet of water.

Passing motorists tried to help, but nothing could be done.

Divers were sent to the scene and worked throughout the night bringing the victims' bodies to the surface.

Commissioner hears objections on town amalgamation by-law

At a hearing presided by Justice Shehan of the Quebec Municipal Commission, protests were aired in the Lachute civic auditorium last week against the proposed amalgamation of Lachute and Ayersville. Five persons entered their official protests, headed by Hubert Mayotte, a municipal councillor in Ayersville.

In a written text of 500 words, Mr. Mayotte covered the situation from geographic, economic, social and historic angles. His chief objection was to the "wards" which, according to their designation, will have no real significance except on election day. The financial prospect also caused him misgiving, since (according to this objector) the Town of Lachute will be obligated in the near future to build a sewerage plant. An engineer of his acquaintance had foreseen a cost of at least $3-million, and Ayersville taxpayers would have to pay a share of this expense.

"I consider a marriage as a union in trust and amity — something we have never experienced from the Town of Lachute." Councillor Mayotte also intimated that the proposed division into wards would eliminate the English-speaking representation. Also, the matter of new industries was nothing but a dream and a fantasy, since "the big authority in this question is the Minister of Industry and Commerce."

"Ayersville finds itself not in the role of a cheerful giver, but the pawn of traitors who have sold out the community," he concluded in a dramatic vein.

The Ayersville Citizens' League was heard from, through its president, Louis Barbeau, who registered the League's disapproval to the ward division, even if it did not officially oppose the idea of amalgamation. The League favors six wards instead of three, with one councillor for each instead of two, as proposed in the by-law. The League also feels that by this system the English are discriminated against, and that one alderman per division would make for better representation of the taxpayers.

Judge Shehan ventured an opinion that the English element would be better represented in council with two aldermen in each ward than with one. Mathematically, the chances were 50 percent that an English-speaking citizen could be elected, with two aldermen in each division.

Philippe Joly, a member of the same Citizens' League, here objected that his name had been used in opposing the three-ward division, whereas he had not attended the meeting in question. He found it reasonable to have three wards each with two aldermen, and did not want to be associated with this particular objection.

Camille Cousineau, secretary, upheld the League's stand in this matter. Although Mr. Joly was absent from the meeting, he was nevertheless a member of the executive.

Others heard were Aurèle Pharand, ratepayer, who also objected to the divisions, on the grounds that six would be territorially more manageable and easier of administration; Mayor Dr. Saindon of Lachute, and Mayor Moreau of Ayersville, who gave the views of their respective councils. The former stated that the proposed voluntary amalgamation had been promoted in a co-operative manner by the two bodies. Mayor Moreau stated that, of his Ayersville council, only one member, Mr. Mayotte, was in dissent.

The whole matter was taken under deliberation by Judge Shehan. The Commission will study the evidence, the terms of the amalgamation by-law, and the financial status of both municipalities. "It's up to us to render a judgment in the best interests of all concerned," he added.

The Lachute and Ayersville councils were represented by Armand Poupart, a Montreal expert in municipal law.

Lady resident spent lifetime in Rivière Rouge

Late Mrs. W. Geo. Rodger

Mrs. W. Geo. Rodger (formerly Isabel Helena Burwash) passed away in a nursing home at Brownsburg, Que., after a comparatively short illness, in her 88th year.

The late Mrs. Rodger lived her entire life in the Rivière Rouge community. A member of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, she is survived by one sister, Mrs. W. J. Blair, of St. Andrews East, six children, Allison and Agnes, of Montreal, Helena (Mrs. A. S. McOuat), of Lachute, David, George and Ernest, of St. Andrews East; five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Mrs. Rodger was predeceased by her husband and an infant daughter, Isabel.

The Rev. Jas. Armour, of Montreal, conducted the service, which took place from the J. P. MacKimmie Chapel on Thursday, October 28. Burial was in the Lachute Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were — Lawson Taylor, John Black, Erskine Rodger, James Knox, Paul Doig and Clifford Blair.

Mexican visitor interviewed

The History Club of L.H.S. talked recently with Miss Rosa Rodriguez, a social worker visiting here from Mexico. An interesting report written by a member of the group is held for publication next week, due to shortage of space in this issue.

Montreal artists heard in concert of chamber music

A very large attendance heard and enjoyed the Baroque Trio performance at l'Ecole Secondaire last Thursday evening. This was the opening program of the season's Community Concerts, and the audience were welcomed by the co-chairmen of the membership campaign, Mrs. G. R. Rigby and Miss Juliette Rodrigue, who spoke on behalf of the Association president, Mrs. Jacques Bédard, in her unavoidable absence. (Due appreciation was expressed to Mr. Gaston Laroche, of Molson Lachute Ltd., for a generous donation to the Association funds.)

The trio of Montreal musicians, playing a harpsichord, flute and oboe, gave a skilled and sympathetic rendition of chamber music, mostly from medieval composers, in a manner "refreshingly different" — to quote a commercial slogan. An exception to the period was a modern composition written by the harpsichordist of the group, Kelsey Jones, which stepped from the soothing tones and tempos of the 17th and 18th centuries right into the complex, stormy discords of modern orchestration. This was perhaps the conversation piece in after-comments; the composition was daring, the performance was masterly, and it revealed the adaptability of these three instruments to music other than the classic chamber style.

All three artists of this Canadian group, Mario Duschesne, flutist, Mervin Berman, oboist, and Kelsey Jones, harpsichordist, gave a dexterous and impressive performance. In "The Five Recorders" Mr. Duschene explained and demonstrated the different sizes, shapes and tonal ranges of this woodwind instrument.

The trio were warmly applauded, and obliged their audience with two encore selections.

It is interesting to Community Concert Association subscribers to note that the remaining two programs this season will also feature all-Canadian artists, namely, Morisset and Bouchard, Quebec City duo pianists, on January 24, 1966, and the Canadian Opera Company in "Carmen", on March 8, 1966. Available to local members also in the coming recital by Archer and Gile, soprano and guitarist, in Cornwall next Tuesday, November 9.

31st Annual meeting held by Argenteuil Historical Society

Department of Northern Affairs and Natural Resources, was introduced by the Rev. Dr. W. Harold Reid. Mr. Gérin-Lajoie is immediately concerned with the preservation of historic sites in Eastern Canada, his office being situated at Cornwall, and his regional department has had jurisdiction in this area, its Museum, and its historic attractions.

The visitor spoke on "The Nature of History", touching upon the various sources of historical information, and frustrations encountered by the researcher. Evidences of over-enthusiasm, for example, were found in the dating of buildings, which had been inaccurately marked. To every one, the meaning of History is a little different from that of another. This speaker's definition was: "something which happened yesterday which has influence and bearing on today".

One of the greatest functions of historical societies, he said, was the accumulation of illustrations. These had incomparable value in the restoring of sites, or the construction of replicas, which could not otherwise be authentic. . . Two other prime objectives of a society are the encouragement of written records, such as the documentations cited by Gilbert Arnold on this occasion; and the collection of material items, exemplified in the Carillon Museum. "Despite the problems", he said (referring to acceptance of both the useful and the useless) the end result is highly valuable to historians and anthropologists."

Mr. Gérin-Lajoie told how the finding of a map dating back to 1440, which had "floated around Europe" as of little value, was even now revising our accepted ideas on the discovery of North America. The map showed Greenland as an island, indicating that the early Vikings must have circumnavigated Greenland in order to discern that fact.

The speaker was cordially thanked by Mrs. George McGibbon, who presented him with an autographed volume of Dr. G. R. Rigby's "A History of Lachute". Dr. Rigby was an interested participant in the question period, as was Mr. Norman Thorburn, who has also contributed much to the local records. A formal vote of appreciation to Dr. Rigby for his authorship of the "History" was applauded by the audience.

Tea and a social hour were enjoyed by many old acquaintances, in the spacious rooms of the Museum.

Corres. secretary, Mrs. G. Pat Porter.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY, Macdonald College

Preservation of food by atomic irradiation may be closer than we think. An experimental unit has just been installed at the College, one of three in universities across Canada.

Outwardly, it looks for all the world like an overgrown barrel. But under the shell, it is almost solid lead for shielding. In the hollow middle, there is a chunk of radio-active cobalt constantly emitting powerful invisible penetrating gamma rays. And up on the top of the barrel is a device for mechanically lowering the experimental food down to the cobalt 60 source.

We saw a chicken being treated the other day. Wrapped in its plastic bag, and inserted into a container, it was placed in the chamber of the Gammacell 200. The timer was set, the button pushed, and the chicken disappeared for 36 minutes.

When it reappeared, it looked no different and we were told that it would taste no different, but that its "shelf life" should be at least a week longer. Commercially, it could mean more efficient and streamlined marketing for the poultry industry. It would help to iron out the present pressure peaks resulting from the short time dressed chicken will keep.

The 36-minute exposure in this case gave the chicken a preservation treatment about equal to the pasteurization of milk. It doesn't kill all the organisms, or destroy the enzymes, but, as with milk, the dangerous ones are controlled and the shelf-life improved without spoiling the flavour.

A longer dose would have sterilized the chicken so you could have put it up on the shelf without refrigeration for perhaps several months, but the flavor probably would be impaired.

So far, only chicken is being used in these experiments. Other foods will follow.

"Preservation of food by Irradiation" was one of the displays in the Macdonald College exhibit at the three-day McGill Open House. Close to ten thousand people stopped to see it. The most frequent question asked was, "Isn't it dangerous to health?" Many people seemed to associate this type of irradiation with the radio-active fallout from atomic explosions.

There is, in fact, no risk to the consumer. The gamma rays from the Cobalt 60 source simply pass right through the food product, killing bacteria and other organisms, as they go. But no radio-activity is left behind.

In the case of the atomic explosion it is different. Particles become radio-active which fall onto grass or food products and are eaten. And the radio-active particle then stays within the body to cause damage.

Like fire, atomic energy can be a good servant or a bad enemy.

The first foods commercially irradiated will appear on the market next spring. The multi-million dollar plant at St. Hilaire is treating potatoes and onions to prevent sprouting. I hear that they too are victims of the bad harvest weather. The potatoes are arriving at the plant too high in moisture for good results.

The re-organized Quebec Farmers' Association is off to a strong start. At their annual meeting on October 23rd, they voted to increase their own fees to $10. For the first time in its history, funds should now be sufficient to pay a full-time man and to have a really active program.

Members won't have long to wait for returns on their investment. Secretary-manager Harris Shufelt tells me that plans for Corn Day at Ormstown on Thursday, November 4th, are well in hand. And his worry right now is that there will be more people than can be accommodated. That is a happy worry.

And then, right after that, there is to be a series of half-hour radio broadcasts, starting Wednesday, November 10th, over CKTS Sherbrooke. As far as I know, this is a first for any farm organization in Canada.

I like the radio program Harris and his committee have laid out. They are going to have local farm news, livestock reports from the Quebec auction sales, and a series of panel discussions on local problems like the costs in bringing grain from the west, and how to feed dairy cows for greatest profit.

It should help to fill a great need for Quebec farm information. We wish Harris and his organization every success.

St. Philip's choir sang Evensong in Lachute church

St. Simeon's Anglican Church was filled to capacity last Sunday evening, when the choir from St. Philip's Church, Montreal West, sang the Evensong service. This choir, composed of boy choristers and mixed adults, was under the direction of Mr. Lorne W. West, the choirmaster, who has earned wide repute for his development of boy singers in the Montreal area.

Following the procession of the choir (numbering around 46) and clergy, a Christopher Tye Introit, "Hail! Glorious Spirits" was sung by the choir. The first lesson was read by Mr. J. Sewell, then the choir sang Dr. Healey Willans' beautiful Magnificat. Mr. Gerald Arundel-Evans read the second lesson, and a Willans' Nunc Dimittis followed.

The collects was read by the minister, the Rev. C. R. Lang. The anthem, "Blessed are they who walk in the way of the Lord", by V. C. Stanford, was sung in Latin by the choristers.

The Rev. Mr. Lang expressed the appreciation of the congregation and the public to the minister of St. Philip's Church, and to Mr. West, for their co-operation and planning, in bringing this choir to Lachute. A Gibbons three-fold Amen concluded the Evensong.

Canada Savings Bonds are issued by the Government of Canada. Any Canadian resident may buy them. They come in various sizes—$50, $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000. The limit for the new Series is $10,000 per person.

The 1965 Bonds have a life of 12 years. They pay you good interest every year—4½% for each of the first two years; 5% for each of the next six years and 5½% for each of the remaining four years.

You don't have to keep your Bond for the full 12 years if you don't want to. You can get your money back any time. Just take it to your bank, trust or loan company. They'll give you its full face value plus earned interest. It only takes a few moments.

Canada Savings Bonds are easy to buy for cash or on instalments. Banks sell them. So do investment dealers, stock brokers, trust and loan companies.

You can also buy them on the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. A $100 Bond will cost you less than 29¢ a day. (The Bonds you buy on the Payroll Savings Plan are identical in all respects to the Bonds you buy for cash.)

Canada Savings Bonds are a great way to save. They pay good interest. They are easy to buy. You can cash them any time.

Everyone has something to save for. To get what you want a little faster, buy Canada Savings Bonds.

This ad is for people who've never bought Canada Savings Bonds before.

How to make money make money

Take a sum you can comfortably afford to invest . . . say $500. Put it in Investors Mutual of Canada Ltd., or Investors Growth Fund of Canada Ltd. Add to your account every month and reinvest all dividends. Your modest investment will have wide diversification and professional management — advantages which only a millionaire could once afford. Wondering about results? An investment in Investors Mutual has more than tripled since 1950. Yes, this is the way to make money make money.

IN MEMORIAM

BROWN — In loving memory of my dear wife, Ruby, who passed away, Oct. 20, 1964. — Lovingly remembered by her husband, Andy.

"I often sit and think of you,
When I am all alone,
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own."

CAMPBELL (Jennie) — In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away a year ago, Nov. 10 1964. — Loved, missed and remembered always by Margaret and Ronnie.

"What we would give, if we could say,
'Hello, Mom', in the same old way.
A smile, a tear, a thought sincere,
How often we wish that you were still here."

CAMPBELL (Jennie) — In loving memory of a dear and wonderful grandmother, who passed away a year ago, Nov. 10, 1964. — Sadly missed by your grandchildren, Gregory, Julie, Lon, Jill and Joanne Cavanagh.

"Not a day do we forget you, Nannie,
In our hearts you are always near;
We who loved you, sadly miss you
As it dawns another year."

CAMPBELL (Jennie) — In loving memory of a dear friend, who passed away a year ago, Nov. 10, 1964. — Always remembered by Annie.

"Deep in my heart, your memory is kept,
I smile with the world, but never forget."

"Down the lane of memories
There is many a picture fair,
The happy days you gave to us
Are fresh in memory there,
The fun we had together,
The love that keeps you near,
The thoughtful things you used to do,
All pictured there so clear."

GRAHAM (Herbert W.) — In loving memory of our father, father-in-law, and grandfather, who passed away Nov. 3, 1964. — Always remembered by his family.

"Time takes away the edge of grief,
But memory turns back every leaf."

GRAHAM, H. W. (Bert) — In loving memory of a dearly beloved husband, who passed away suddenly Nov. 3, 1964. — Always remembered by his wife, Jessie.

"Memories are like threads of gold,
They never tarnish or grow old."

Cdn. Cancer Society annual meeting held recently; reports and new officers

The annual meeting of the Canadian Cancer Society was held recently at the Society's headquarters, with the president, Mrs. W. M. Cottingham, in the chair and Mrs. H. Joyce as secretary of the meeting.

The chairmen of the various committees read accounts of their activities. It was reported that the Ladies' Dressing Service had provided approximately 127,000 dressings during the year. These had been issued to the seven counties of Argenteuil, Joliette, Labelle, L'Assomption, Montcalm, Terrebonne and Two Mountains, with an average of 56 patients every two weeks.

The report from Mr. Ian Gordon, co-chairman with Mr. Gaetan Leclair of the campaign for the Canadian Cancer Society, was most satisfactory, and showed a total of $4,638.05, which has been remitted directly to the Cancer Society headquarters in Montreal.

Great credit must be given to the untiring and well-organized efforts of the co-chairmen, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Leclair, and Mr. Wes Freeland from Brownsburg; also to the many captains and their canvassers (too numerous to mention here) who worked very hard to achieve such a splendid result.

The Lachute Cancer Society wishes to thank all those who helped to support the campaign, for their sympathy in this worthy cause, also the many workers who are busy making dressings every week.

Special thanks must be given to Farmers' Supply and Boyd's Express for their very generous donations to the cause, which were sent in last Christmas.

There was a lively discussion on Cancer work led by Mr. Boivin and Miss Dubreuil from the Montreal office, while the ladies on the House committee served tea and cookies.

The slate of officers for the coming year is as follows:

The awards will be made Thursday afternoon at Westmount High School, during the annual Teachers' Convention.

Poole-Penman rites solemnized at Richmond, Ont.

Joanne Penman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Lorne Penman, of Oakville, Ont., was married on Saturday, October 9, at St. John's Anglican Church in Richmond, Ont., to Robert James Poole, son of the Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Poole, of Richmond.

The groom's father conducted the service. Mrs. F. W. Taylor was organist and Mrs. Kenneth Marshall was soloist. The choir was in attendance.

The bride chose a gown of white organza, a long tapering sheath skirt and a high detachable cardinal "K" coat, forming a train at the back. Both the dress and train had appliqués of Swiss lace delicately scattered throughout. A semi-pouf, handmade silk veil, draped softly from a small headpiece. She carried Talisman roses and white split carnations in a cascade bouquet.

Emmeline Sutherland, former classmate from Kingston General Hospital, wore an apple-green shade dress, while Mrs. Gerald Penman was in a rust color, with both dresses in street length of peau-de-sole, with an overbodice and net covering the "A" line skirts. An empire-style band gave added emphasis to the high waistline. Tiny circular veils with matching fabric roses were worn as headpieces. They carried cascade bouquets of yellow and bronze mums, wheat and Pinochio mums.

John Palmer, a student at Queen's, was the best man. The ushers were John Le Grou and Alan Douglas. All were former classmates of the groom's.

At the reception held in the church hall, Mrs. Penman received, wearing an emerald green silk velvet dress, with a hat of the same fabric. The mother of the groom was in an autumn pink jacket dress with a matching hat.

The couple left for a wedding trip, the bride travelling in a powder blue suit with blue fox fur cuffs and black accessories. On their return they will reside in The Highlander Apartments at Port Credit.

The out-of-town guests included Mrs. John Masters, aunt of the bride, from Fort William; Mrs. Annie Bowers, Fort William; and others from Montreal, Toronto, Oakville and other Ontario and Quebec centres.

November 4-5-6 'Poppy Days' by mayoral proclamation

Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon has issued a proclamation declaring November 4-5-6 as poppy days in Lachute, and Lloyd Bryson, chairman of the Lachute Legion Poppy Campaign, states that these dates will be the general poppy tag days.

The Mayor urged all citizens to observe these days by wearing poppies in honor of those who gave their lives in Canada's wars. The declaration reads:

WHEREAS men of this town gave their lives in defence of Canada and the democratic world;

AND WHEREAS the memory of their service and sacrifice is a source of inspiration to all citizens in current times;

AND WHEREAS their memory is kept ever bright by the annual wearing of memorial poppies in their honor, and in honor of all other Canadians who died in war service;

NOW THEREFORE I, the Mayor of the Town of Lachute do hereby proclaim Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 4-5-6, to be poppy days in Lachute, and do urge that all citizens observe these days by wearing the memorial poppy of the Royal Canadian Legion.

When it comes to heaters, we're full of hot air.

Ever heard anyone complain about how long it takes the heater to get going in a Volkswagen?

We have.

That's why we've added a heater booster this year.

It fills the VW with hot air faster. And keeps it filled automatically. A thermostat shuts it off when things warm up. And switches it on again if things cool down.

So no matter what goes on outside, it's always good and warm inside a 1966 Volkswagen. And the windshield is always good and clear because we now have three defroster vents for the heater booster to work with instead of two.

If the idea of owning a Volkswagen has left you a little cold up until now, why not come in and see what we've done for 1966?

We think it will thaw you out.

Suffered Loss by Fire

Sympathy of this community is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dewar and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Paton and family, whose homes were destroyed in an early morning fire last week.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Ellis, Cynthia Jane, was baptized on Sunday in St. Jude's Church, Hawkesbury. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ellis of Grenville acted as godparents. After the baptism, supper was served to the immediate family and relatives, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ellis.

A Hallowe'en masquerade party was held at the Lodge in Kilmar last Saturday evening. Everyone present reported an enjoyable time.

The Kilmar Birthday Club met at the home of Mrs. Omar Thomas, Lake Keatley, on October 20 to celebrate the birthday of Mrs. Yvette St. Onge, who received the gifts of a bread box and a bath mat from the Club. A pleasant afternoon was spent, concluding with refreshments.

For Remembrance Day —

Valley of the Shadow

God, I am travelling out to death's sea,
I, who exulted in sunshine and laughter,
Dreamed not of dying — death is such a waste of me! —
Grant me one prayer: Doom not the hereafter
Of mankind to war.

Let not my sinking
In dark be for naught, my death a vain thing!
God, let me know it the end of man's fever!
Make my last breath a bugle call, carrying Peace o'er the valleys and cold hills for ever!

— John Galsworthy.

Avoca

Miss Janice Young, of Carleton University, Ottawa, spent the week-end with her parents.

Mrs. Wm. Kelly, of Aylmer, Que., visited her mother and aunt on Sunday last.

A number of "little spooks" called at the various homes on Saturday evening and were generously received.

Mr. Jos. E. Provencal is a patient in the Smith Clinic, with an infected arm; friends wish him a speedy recovery.

A few young people from here attended the dance in Louisa Orange Hall last Saturday evening, and reported a pleasant time.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. Hobbs, wife of the student minister in charge at Avoca and Harrington, is on the sick list. A speedy recovery is wished by their many friends.

Mrs. Sandy Bates, who had been visiting relatives in Port Colborne and Niagara Falls, Ont., returned home, accompanied by friends.

The Rev. and Mrs. Anthony Reid entertained at an afternoon tea last Saturday afternoon at Christ Church rectory, Montebello.

CAREER — Head of Labour Relations Dept. of the Professional Association of Industrialists from 1946 to 1950. During this period negotiated an average of fifty labour agreements a year in all types of industries, with a perfect no-strike record.

Served on several arbitration boards, settling grievances and disputes. Has also lectured at University of Montreal. . . Since 1950, has served as Director of Personnel, and is assistant to the president at Dominion Ayers Limited, Lachute.

A CANDIDATE who fully understands the problems of business, labour and family — whose educational background and experience have equipped him for a worthwhile contribution to the affairs of government.

DIRECTOR of Lachute Golf and Country Club; Professional Association of Industrialists; the Lachute Lions Club (Past President); Industrial Relations Committee of the Primary Textile Institute of Canada.

CHAIRMAN of "Operation 55" planning committee (Dollard-des-Ormeaux Regional School Board). Presently a church warden in the Parish of St. Julien; president of the Lachute Boy Scouts Committee (Amis des Scouts); and was one of the co-founders of the Argenteuil Hospital.

COMMUNITY Interests, Recreation — Active in religious and social projects; Red Cross Blood Clinics, Cancer Society - Fund Campaign, etc. Enjoys diversion of Golf, Bridge, Choral Singing, Music.

INCIDENTAL — Has travelled extensively in Europe, Canada, and the United States.

In 1953, was chosen by the Canadian Government as employer representative to the World Textile Conference of the International Labour Organization at Geneva.

In 1960, received Papal decoration "Bene Merenti" for participation in religious and social work.

In 1962, chosen as Group Chairman for the Duke of Edinburgh Commonwealth Study Conference on the Human Consequences of the Changing Industrial Environment in Canada.

A CITIZEN of full status, versed in the needs of family life, education, recreation, health — confidence, stability and self-respect for all Canadians.

ROGER E. REGIMBAL

Read this testimonial:

"If I have spoken of the (Regional School) planning committee and their selfless devotion, it was by no means my intention to overlook the executive of that body, of which Roger E. Régimbal has been the president. . . These men have undertaken an immense job of co-ordination — Mr. Régimbal, particularly, having given body and soul to this task. Every week he has made it a point of honor to preside at the committee meetings, and his sustained interest has on more than one occasion stimulated the members discouraged by their setbacks. Mr. Régimbal was virtually the sparkplug of this big venture, and his organizing ability gave the impetus, more than once, to get the machine back in operation. His role was a thankless one, for it devolved upon him to lead the discussions, to keep the committeemen on the right track, to maintain the enthusiasm and inject the required spark of renewed vision. He placed his personality, and the resources of his experience, at the service of this cause, and we owe him a debt of gratitude."

(Extract from L'Argenteuil, June 2, 1965, on the Dollard-des-Ormeaux Regional School planning committee.)

A personal message . . .

My friends, in seeking your confidence on November 8, I do so, not to serve any special interests or any special group, in Argenteuil or in Two Mountains. I will serve for the greater good of the County, of the Province, and of Canada. I know that my political life will be an arduous one, that it will mean great responsibilities and great hardships along with the sacrifice of my personal and private life and interests; I know I will have to face those prospects in order to serve all the people in Argenteuil - Two Mountains, and to do my full share for Quebec and Canada.

With faith in the judgment and leadership of John Diefenbaker, in his obvious sincerity and integrity, and in the sound, progressive policies of the Progressive-Conservatives, I consider it an honor to present myself as the official candidate for that party.

I welcome the challenge and the opportunity, and I thank you in advance for the confidence you will place in me on November 8.

— Roger E. Regimbal

A party with a positive program!

A Confederation Conference will be convened

Confederation must be strengthened, not weakened. Its future will be determined at an "open" conference, not at closed meetings or by secret deals.

The 11% Sales Tax removed

The 11% sales tax on building materials and production machinery adds to the cost of homes and goods, raises prices and jeopardizes important job-producing sectors of the economy. We will remove it.

New Agricultural Programs

Our party will do for Eastern Agriculture, what it did for Western Agriculture, through a revived ARDA program, crop insurance for pasture crops, an Eastern Feed Grain Agency, a National Dairy Commission with $4 per hundredweight for industrial milk, and for new agricultural schools.

New Development Policies

We will make energy resources available to all parts of Canada through a National Power Grid, institute a National Water Resources program and improve recreational facilities around the urban areas.

Per Capita University Grants Raised from $2 to $5

Our program will encourage thousands more Canadians to obtain a university education; increased grants will allow for university expansion and medical research; a Department of Youth will be established.

Foreign Trade Expanded

We will expand major port facilities, stimulate an aggressive sales program abroad and welcome foreign investment in Canada without discrimination by retroactive legislation.

Homeowners' Municipal Taxes Deductible up to $500

Home owners will be able to deduct up to $500 of their municipal taxes for federal income tax purposes.

Interest on Consumer Loans Reduced

Special legislation will provide city dwellers with the same credit advantages now available to farmers.

NHA Mortages on Older Houses

NHA loans will not be restricted to new houses but will be extended to older houses also.

Old Age Pensions Raised to $100 a Month

The Canada Pension Plan does not adequately meet the needs of our senior citizens; a Progressive Conservative government will increase old age pensions to $100 a month.

Honesty in Government

Action to restore integrity in public life will be proceeded with, vigorously and effectively.

Strong, Courageous Leadership

John Diefenbaker's well recognized qualities of courage, strength and honesty will guarantee a strong government of experienced Parliamentarians supported by new and active Members.

Unity through Equality

Confederation was founded and rests upon unity in equality of the two basic races, with every Canadian, regardless of race or creed, having equality of citizenship.

A Leader with vision

Hon. John D. Diefenbaker

"I see a great Canada, stretching from ocean to ocean, reaching to the Arctic Sea — a Canada where the development of our untapped resources will occupy a first priority in government policy; a Canada where equal citizenship will be enjoyed by all, with constitutional recognition of the constitutional rights."

4-H Calf Club winners at Ottawa Winter Fair

Twelve boys and girls from the Lachute 4-H Calf Club, and their calves, travelled to Ottawa last Thursday to compete in the 4-H Calf Club Championship Show on Friday, October 29, in conjunction with the Ottawa Winter Fair. There were over 600 entries in the show. The boys and girls attended the horse show Thursday evening as guests of the Ottawa Winter Fair. On Friday the winners were as follows:

Junior Holstein Calf Class — Judy McElroy and Richard Hadley placed in group "A" (fifth and eighth prize, respectively).

Louise St. Pierre placed in group "B". Together they placed fourth in the group of three calves.

Senior Holstein Calves — Donald Hadley placed fifth in group "A", while Arthur McElroy and Roland St. Pierre placed in group "B". They also placed fourth in the group of three calves.

Junior Ayrshires — John Raymond placed second, John Heatlie placed tenth, and Bobby Rodger placed eleventh, all in group "A"; and they placed second in the group of three calves and won the reserve champion junior Ayrshire group.

Senior Ayrshire Calves — Lachute Club all placed in group "A", with Heather Heatlie placing third, Debbie Bradley ninth, and Donna Bradley eleventh. They placed first in the group of calves and won the Reserve Grand Champion Ayrshire Group.

The boys and girls were pleased with their winnings, and had an enjoyable time at the Fair. Ross Oswald, the Club Leader, and Jean-Guy Gelinas, the County Agronome, accompanied the group to Ottawa as well as many of the parents, who were present to watch the show.

For Remembrance Day —

"When It Is Fmished"

When it is finished, Father, and we set
The war-stained buckler and the bright blade by,
Bid us remember then what bloody sweat,
What thorns, what agony,
Purchased our wreaths of harvest and ripe ears.
Whose empty hands, whose empty hearts, whose tears,
In this Gethsemane
Ransomed the days to be.

We leave them to Thee, Father, we've no price,
No hard won treasures of the seas or land,
No words, no deeds, to pay their sacrifice,
Only while England stands
Their pearl, their pride, their altar, not their grave,
Bid us remember in what days they gave
All that mankind may give
That we might live.

— Marjorie Pickthall.

Remembrance — we will not fail

REMEMBRANCE DAY once again focuses attention on the Poppy Campaign, an effort promoted by the Royal Canadian Legion every year to raise funds for that great service which is the Legion's major endeavor — namely, the honoring of departed comrades, remembrance of the living, and the welfare of veterans' dependants.

It is 44 years since the custom of wearing a poppy for remembrance was inaugurated in Canada. From the modest beginning in 1921, the custom has become general throughout the country, and this year — with careful preparation and planning by Legion branches everywhere — several million Canadians will be wearing the familiar red symbol.

Remembrance and the Poppy are irrevocably bound up with each other, because the memory of Canada's Fallen can best be honored by ensuring that none of their surviving comrades or their families should be allowed to suffer want and distress. The success of the Poppy Campaign depends on two primary factors — the zeal and efficiency of its organization, and the generosity of the public response. . . The first is well assured in this community; the Legion spares no effort here, to make the appeal both widespread and effective. . . The second now rests with US, the citizens, and our consciousness of past sacrifices made in the name of humanity and freedom. . . We will not fail!

Nothing to be smug about

CANADIANS are apt to feel a little smug when we read about race riots in the United States and watch TV shots of violence and brutality. "Thank goodness, that doesn't happen here", we say to ourselves.

It's a safe bet that only the absence of a large colored population keeps our hands clean. Move about this country with your ears open and it's surprising how much prejudice of one sort and another you will uncover.

A newcomer in the suburb of an eastern city was welcomed with, "We're so glad to have someone like you next door. We were afraid they'd sell to foreigners." So much for tolerance.

While it's true that many Indian students have been integrated into the town schools near reservations, they often get second-class treatment. A lad finishing grade eight with top marks in English and Mathematics, and poor marks in manual training, was nevertheless shunted into a "shops" course in grade nine. The reason: it was more "suitable" for an Indian.

Our Jewish minority has its troubles. Who has not heard the caustic, "There's a Jew for you", after one unsatisfactory encounter with a specific individual.

Such unfair generalizations cut deeply. Two Christians, invited by the rabbi to drop into the synagogue anytime, attended a service in a western city. The speaker, an ardent Zionist, was a visiting lawyer. He was unaware of their presence. It was not his enthusiasm for Israel that surprised them, it was his bitterness. "No matter what we do, how well we are educated, how much community service we undertake, we'll never be really acceptable to the non-Jews here."

An overdrawn, hypersensitive statement? Perhaps: but while there are citizens in Canada who feel allen and unwanted because of race or creed, we'd better not sit in judgment on our neighbors to the south.

It's big issues that count

FOUR YEARS of virtually non-stop electioneering in Canada have left large numbers of voters politically bewildered and deeply fatigued by the clatter of the democratic process, comments The Financial Post in a pre-election editorial. Recent polls show an unusually high percentage of Canadians have yet to decide how they are going to vote on November 8.

One thing certain is the voters' disgust at outpourings of ignorance, slander and misrepresentation. Today's pollsters and professional pulse-takers may tell our leaders that basic issues, such as tax policies, commercial policies and spending on "social" capital, are not those which are likely to sweep candidates into office on a wave of popularity. But, The Post argues, running a government is not like running a popularity contest and the events of recent years cry out for a moratorium on small-minded contention. The party equipped with brains and power, and willing to be constructive and forthright about the serious business of governing, may well find that it will be the one capable of swinging the undecided vote.

Crown corporations — insulated from politics?

JUDGE ANDERSON, reporting on the post office situation, suggests that it become a Crown corporation so that it "would be insulated from politics and the last vestiges of patronage would be taken away from it."...

This, of course, is nonsense — says the Port Erie Letter Review, in assessing the status of Crown corporations. These (it continues) are emanations of the Crown and subject to direction from it. The principal spokesman for the Crown is the prime minister and if he wishes to interfere with a Crown corporation, that is his privilege, wise or unwise, and sometimes it may be his duty.

Canadian National Railways is a Crown corporation. Within the last couple of months the CN hotels had to bow to the will of the politicians in the matter of the $1.25 per hour minimum wage imposed by parliament on Crown corporations and others that come within the jurisdiction of the federal government. Some years ago, another prime minister prevented curtailment of railway passenger service on the Canadian National Railways.

Even private corporations are subject to pressure from politicians, as witness the delay in the streamlining of the CPR service by the elimination of a transcontinental passenger train, that carries few passengers. . . The irony of this situation with regard to shipment of wheat destined for Russia (concludes the writer) is that the wheat movement, of vital concern to the prairies, would be faster if representatives of the people on the prairies had not intervened to prevent the CPR from suspending a transcontinental passenger train to release needed heavy diesel locomotives.

Viewpoints and perspectives

WHY NOT USE MEDIA? — It is not surprising to see that the opposition parties are against any advertising of the pension plan with taxpayers' money. . . Why not advertise it? It has been a subject of discussion for quite a while and much has been said for or against it in the papers of this country. Now, the time has come when the public should know more about it, and advertising is the best way.

PARENTS TOO WEAK. — Every sensible parent has definite ideas about his child's age and maturity when it comes to marriage. Parents will stand firm against a too young, too immature youngster eager to marry. After all, his life's happiness is at stake. But these same parents will often give in to this same too young, too immature youth, eager to drive the family car. Yet here, many lives are at stake.

CROOKS ARE LIKE KIDS

Montreal (CP) — Criminals are much like children, says Mrs. Jeannette Boisseau, director of the women's section of the Montreal jail. Bringing up five children was the best training she could have had for her job, she said. "Criminals, like children, are emotional and shortsighted, and lack discipline and self-control."

IN OTHER WORDS

Most people are familiar with the nursery rhymes such as "Mary Had A Little Lamb" and "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star". But here are different versions of these, as might be expressed by some college professor:

— "Mary was the possessor of a diminutive specimen of ovine ruminant quadruped whose external hirsute adornment greatly resembled the beautiful white mantle of crystallized moisture that characterizes the winter landscape".

— "Scintillate, scintillate, globule vivicic. Fain would I fathom thy nature specific, loftily poised in the ether so spacious, greatly resembling a gem carbonaceous."

Now let's take these Proverbs — "A Rolling Stone Gathers No Moss", "Birds of a Feather Flock Together", and "People who Live in Glass Houses Shouldn't Throw Stones". The professor might put it this:

— "A revolving fragment of the paleozoic age collects no cryptogamus vegetation."

— "Ornithological bipeds of similar plumage are notoriously gregarious."

— "Tenants of premises of a transparent vitreous nature should abstain from projecting paleozoic specimens."

It isn't what you say but how you say it! By the way, it just occurred to me — if you called a PanaMA would you call a TrinIDAD?

That College Education

It's not until you get a son or daughter off to college that you learn what a simple, unsophisticated, reactionary, narrow-minded, old-fashioned peasant you really are.

He, or she, will make it all quite clear to you on that first weekend home from the hallowed halls of learning.

Every fall, the blood pressure of countless fathers skyrockets, the tender hearts of hordes of loving mothers shatter, when the freshman student, beloved and cherished these 18 years, waltzes in with a bag of dirty laundry and a swollen ego.

We've had quite a fall of it, in our neighborhood. With a sigh of relief, we shipped our gawk of a boy off to one university, and amid floods of tears, the people next door sent their darling daughter to another.

Both were home last weekend. And both sets of parents spent the entire visit alternating with fury at the kids and shame at their own ignorance.

There's no question about it. A college education is a wonderful thing. In a matter of three of four weeks, smalltown kids who barely staggered through high school, and barely knew enough to change their socks or blow their noses, are transformed into pipe-smoking playboys or dashing, desirable women of the world. Imagine what a whole year will do.

The boys nonchalantly toss off a remark or two about beer parties, the girls light up a fag right there, while father's frown deepens and mother's jaw falls wider and wider.

The boys, with a solid basis of three weeks' lectures in political science, curtly enlighten their dads on the asinine political ideas the latter have cherished for 20 years.

The girls, secure in their three weeks of psychology, put their mothers into shock with casual comments on the necessity of a full sex life before marriage.

Both explain kindly to the old folks not only that all's wrong in the world, but also that God is no longer in His heaven. In fact, He isn't anywhere. He's just a "anthropomorphic projection of the need for a father image."

Both point out that the capitalistic system is driving us into a neurotic pursuit of the materialistic, that the dollar is essentially an evil thing. And both pocket, without comment, the extra 10 bucks you slip them on departure.

Our kid has discovered a new system, in which you can get along on four hours sleep at night. This is done by sleeping all day, which he did on the weekend. He assured us that he had worked out a rigid work schedule, which begins at 7 a.m. daily. But a few minutes later, he let it slip out that he scarcely ever ate breakfast at the dining-hall, because he slept in.

The girl next door nearly finished off her father. He gave her a blank cheque, the dope, to pay her first term's fees and residence dues, hoping he could scrape up the second term when it arrived. With admirable sang-froid, she filled in the cheque for the whole year's fees. Next day he received a call from his banker. He had to sell his last bonds to meet the overdraft.

Young Hugh is letting his hair grow long, has taken a lead role in the college revue, plays flamenco records at ear-splitting volume and is just busting to get in on a sit-in or a lie-down or some other form of civic disturbance, so he can be arrested.

The girl next door is disgusted that her mother can't read Chaucer in the original and believes the story about Adam and Eve. Her mom was weeping when she left. With rage.

Oh, well, I guess it's all worth it. Our grocery bill has dropped by $12 a week since Hugh left. And we'll have the last laugh next spring, when exams start.

THIS WEEK AND NEXT

Wooing The 'Undecideds'

Canada's voters watched and waited this week, as leaders of the national parties hopped from Montreal to Vancouver in a flurry of campaign-closing rallies in the big cities.

The last week of electioneering, always considered vital in Canadian campaigns, was aimed at the "undecided" voter whose final choice would tip the scales either way next Monday.

According to opinion polls, the Liberals continue to hold a clear edge over the Conservatives on a national basis. If past performance is any indication, the undecided voters will again split about the same way as those who have already made up their minds.

This could give the Liberals up to 45 per cent. of the vote, spelling a shattering defeat for Conservative leader John Diefenbaker.

But if Liberal strength is top-heavy in one province — such as Quebec — the outcome of the election in ridings throughout the rest of the country could present quite a different picture from the national samplings of the opinion polls.

The strongest single issue the Liberals have going for them — majority government — surfaced in the closing days of the campaign, catching even Mr. Diefenbaker in its tide.

After making his third visit of the campaign to Quebec last week, the former Tory prime minister predicted he would be back in office after Nov. 8. But the best he could hope for, he said, was a minority administration — he didn't expect to get a majority.

Prime Minister Pearson, in contrast, built up the majority government theme to give it equal prominence to the need for national unity. Only a federal government with a majority in the House of Commons, he said, could keep the country united while dealing fairly with the provinces.

Despite many signs of voter apathy, such as 200,000 fewer registered voters than 1963, it was still anybody's guess how many would turn up at the polls. Many voters talked of staying home in protest, which could amount to a virtual voter's strike if a large segment of the electorate took this course.

Mr. Diefenbaker has worked the morality in government issue for all it is worth. Some observers feel he has overworked it, and that so many unproven charges have been made that the tactic has back-fired on the Conservatives.

The Tory attack on Mr. Pearson has been so slashing that the Conservative party's own platform — which contains many enticing planks — has been shoved aside. Tory promises of a $100 per month old age pension, and deduction of municipal taxes up to $500 from taxable income have strong appeal to many voters, but they didn't get many headlines.

As the returns begin to come in Monday night, it is unlikely that a trend will emerge until the Quebec ridings start reporting. The seats to watch are ones now held by Real Caouette's Creditistes. If they can hang on, Liberal hopes for a majority will be blunted before many ballots are even counted.

The Toronto returns will give a clue to the success of the NDP among big city voters. In rural Ontario, the Conservatives hope to recapture many Liberal seats and if they do so they will also be able to hold the West. But if the Liberals can keep the Tories in check in Ontario, they'll have won their majority.

On the basis of my checks across the country, there appears to me to be a trend toward a clear majority for the Liberals. Barring any dramatic new developments in the campaign, I look for Mr. Pearson to return to Ottawa with at least 148 of the 265 House of Commons seats. The balance should be split up something like 87 for the Tories, 22 for the NDP and eight for the Socreds and Creditistes. This will give Mr. Pearson the majority he says he needs to govern the country.

Saying "I'm sorry"

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Are you sorry?" Louka, the servant girl, in Shaw's play, Arms and the Man, asks Sergius, the officer, when they look at the bruise on her arm which he had made. Folding his arms he says with slow emphasis, "I am never sorry".

Drama gives an audience the chance to enter in imagination into the lives of other people, to feel with them in various situations. In a play a dramatist often pokes fun at self-important individuals. When Sergius declared he was never sorry, he was ridiculous — just as ridiculous as those in real life who pride themselves on never apologizing to anyone! Can they really believe that they never make any mistakes? Can they imagine that they never cause others embarrassment or annoyance?

They seem to conclude that offering an apology is a demeaning sort of thing to do — "I'm not going to 'crawl' before anyone, asking his pardon!" they boast.

There are other people who are as cynical about the value and the sincerity of many regrets which are expressed in the give and take between people. A so-called "self-made man" often used this quotation, "Here's good advice: never offer an apology. Your friends don't need one and your enemies won't believe it."

"I'm sorry!" Why is it so seldom that this phrase is heard? Why is it so hard to say? Think back over the last year — or the last month. How many times has someone expressed this regret to you? How often have you said these simple words to someone else?

Strangely enough, the very parents who will not say "I'm sorry!" sometimes attempt to train their children to express sorrow when they harm or offend each other. Bill puts out his foot and trips his little brother, Tim. When Tim runs to mother with his eyes streaming and a bump on his forehead, mother chases Bill till she finds him. Then she stands over Bill until he's told Tim he's sorry.

Some mothers claim that there is no point in making a child say "I'm sorry!" if he doesn't feel sorry. They are convinced that to do this is just training a youngster in hypocrisy.

Whatever your opinion on this is, it is important that both you and your child realize that everyone commits blunders which hurt other people. When this happens it is only courteous to say, "I'm sorry!" and mean it! To fail to express regret is to act in a very immature, boorish way.

In our own homes, and among our own acquaintances, let's show our children that when we can see we have blundered, we can have the grace to say, "I'm sorry!"

Those two little words, spoken sincerely, can work magic! A strained relationship can be restored to normal. Understanding and harmony can return. If you doubt the value of apologizing, forget your pride next time you are in the wrong and say, "I'm sorry!"

Even if this is received with coldness or perhaps hostility, you will have done your part. It's worth a trial, don't you think?

Women and public affairs

By Dorothy Barker

Men and women have been populating this old earth in all ages of civilization. They have made up the world's society, yet in no age has the voice of women been more articulate than today. They are demanding equality and justice, they are finding their place beside men in world affairs, in spheres of business activity and in government politics at all levels.

It is not a comparison I wish to make in coupling the names of Charlotte Whitton, former Mayor of Ottawa, and Julia Kiniski, Edmonton alderman. The only thing they really have in common is their one political characteristic, they both fight tooth and nail for the things they believe in. They are the two women in Canadian politics who have delighted reporters because they have provided exciting headlines. If Charlotte Whitton appears to have faded for the time, being from political office, Julia Kiniski is still out in the west, trying to rattle the bones of skeletons she thinks may be hidden in the cupboards of her municipality.

I met Big Julia on a very warm morning during my summer travels as she entered the handsome foyer of Edmonton's City Hall. Though she is a large woman both in stature and outlook, she is an extremely feminine person. She is the epitome of western hospitality, and invites anyone she admires to be a guest in her home. She looked keenly at me, assessing me quite frankly. Evidently I met with her approval for in her rather amusing accent she said, "You can put your feet under my table any day".

How Things Change!

Mother of six, including the $100,000-a-year wrestler, Gene Kiniski, Big Julia has marked her 66th birthday. The family now enjoys prosperity, but there was a time before the last war when her husband was a $5-a-week barber and she a working mother.

Whether Edmontonians endorse, condemn, or condone her political tactics, they have to admire her dedication. I was told her health has suffered from the strain of public life. Whether she carries on with her political career or not, Julia Kiniski will always be remembered for her unorthodox, yet effective, approach to municipal politics.

Next week, election day will dawn with a whole new regiment of voters who have attained their majority since the last federal election casting their vote for the first time. Among them could possibly be a Charlotte Whitton or a Julia Kiniski.

A good old-fashioned stew

For a man coming in out of the cold weather, and hoping for a piping hot meal, no news could be more welcome than to hear that for dinner his wife has prepared a good old-fashioned beef stew!

Not only is it delicious, and a real favorite with most members of the family, but a stew can be an economical dish that's not too difficult to make.

Two tips may prove helpful. You can use almost any kind of cooking utensil to make a good stew but be sure it has a tight fitting cover and is heavy enough to prevent scorching. Also never let your stew cook rapidly because the gentlest of simmering is essential for success.

Ingredients

2 lbs. Stewing beef, 2 tablespoons shortening, 4 cups boiling water, 2 beef cubes or 3 teaspoons beef bouillon, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ½ teaspoon garlic powder, 1 onion (sliced), 2 bay leaves, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon paprika, dash of allspice, 4 carrots (sliced), 1 cup cubed turnips (or celery), and 6 onions, peeled.

Method

Thoroughly brown meat on all sides in hot fat. Remove pan from heat, add water, crumbled beef cubes, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, garlic, onion, and seasonings. Simmer covered 2 hours; stir occasionally. Add vegetables and cubed potatoes, if desired. Continue cooking 20 minutes. The gravy should be partially thickened with a paste of 3 tablespoons flour in ½ cup water and cooked 10 minutes in the liquid which should be drained off the stew. Serves 6 to 8.

VARIATION IN BAKED APPLES

Surprise your family the next time you serve baked apples. Stuff baked apples with dates, or with raisins and nuts, for a treat. Sweeten with brown sugar, add cinnamon, and dot with butter. Bake as usual.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

Although blood was considered a tonic for the ill for thousands of years, it was not until after 1616 when William Harvey discovered the workings of the circulatory system that the idea of a blood transfusion was conceived.

A Canadian Red Cross publication says the first transfusion to a human was done in the 17th century by Jean Denys of France. He used animal blood and the results were so disastrous transfusion fell into disrepute for almost 200 years.

In 1818 James Blundell of England administered the first transfusion of human blood to a patient. It was still a long time before transfusions became safe.

Blood group differences were not discovered until 1901. Clotting remained a problem until an anti-coagulant was discovered in 1915.

War Began Service

Blood preservatives and methods of keeping equipment sterile still needed improvement. When transfusions were done, blood was usually given directly from donor to patient or was stored only a few hours.

Blood banks were not developed until after 1937 and most blood transfusion services began as a result of the need for blood during the Second World War.

During the war the Canadian Red Cross Society collected blood coast to coast for the armed services and civilians in war zones.

Toward the end of the war the society was asked by hospital associations and provincial departments of health to continue the service. The Canadian Red Cross blood transfusion service was founded in 1947, beginning in B.C.

Co-operative Effort

Now the service is a co-operative effort involving federal and provincial governments, hospitals, the Connaught Medical Research Laboratories in Toronto and the Red Cross.

There are 16 blood transfusion depots across the country, each under the direction of a medical director. Their staffs are responsible for collecting, testing, storing and distributing blood to hospitals in their areas.

They also provide a free RH investigation service for pregnant women.

The depots and the national research laboratory carry out research and provide advice on blood group and blood transfusion problems.

All blood and blood products needed by patients in every hospital in Canada now come from volunteer donors. The blood donor clinics are organized locally under the supervision of the Red Cross division in each province.

The Red Cross estimates more than a quarter of a million patients in Canadian hospitals now receive free transfusions of whole blood and fractionation products every year.

WOMEN GAIN RIGHTS

Saskatoon (CP) — Women in 71 countries of the world now have full citizenship rights, says Jean Beauchamp of Regina, president of the Business and Professional Women's Federation in Saskatchewan.

A total of 106 countries, with Kenya and Malaysia recently added to the list, give women equality with men, said Mrs. Beauchamp, passing on a report from the federation's international congress at Washington, D.C.

Only nine nations now deny women the vote, she said. These include Liechtenstein, parts of Switzerland and Nigeria, and several Middle Eastern countries.

Record sales and new peak set by Dominion Stores

Dominion Stores Ltd. is confident that new sales and profit records will be established in the current fiscal year, Thomas G. McCormack, president, states in the semi-annual report. For the 26 weeks ended September 18, 1965, sales reached a new high of $245,907,873, a gain of $6 million over last year. Record net earnings of $5,009,100 or 62 cents a share compare with $4,647,984 or 57 cents a share, a 7.7 per cent increase. Net profit per sales dollar increased to 2.04 cents from 1.94 cents for six months ended September 19, 1964.

The broad base of Dominion's operations across Canada provides excellent opportunities for expansion, Mr. McCormack says. During the first half, 14 supermarkets were opened in 12 different communities in five provinces. Twenty-five small stores were closed and at September 18 there were 369 stores in operation. Seventeen additional supermarkets will be opened in the second half.

Working capital of $23,041,604 at September 18 compares with $24,995,099 a year ago. Dividend payments were $2,901,621, or 36 cents a share in the first half.

Two alternative apple pie recipes

The tantalizing aroma of a freshly-baked apple pie is one of fall's prime delights. With plenty of apples now available, you can bake apple desserts to your heart's content and earn your family's highest praises.

Apple pie is the top favorite with most families but even the most popular apple pie needs a "taste-lift" occasionally. A different spice or sweetener makes a nice change; a cheese crust or a crumb topping will dress up your basic recipe too.

Here are two apple pie recipes recently tested and approved — as a follow-up to the open-faced pie described last week. The basic apple mixture is treated in a slightly different way in each recipe.

Deep-Dish Apple Pie

Pastry to cover a 9-inch pie plate, 5 to 6 cups sliced apples, ¾ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1 tablespoon butter.

Prepare pastry. Mix sugar, cornstarch, salt and cinnamon. Combine sugar mixture with apples. Turn into deep 9-inch pie dish or 10x8x2-inch baking dish and dot with butter. Cover with pastry and flute edges. Bake in a 425°F. oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until apples are tender and crust is brown. Makes 6 generous servings.

Continental Apple Pie

This pie is delicious! The custard-like filling is luscious. Combine this with tart apples and a streusel topping and you have a dessert headline.

Pastry for 9-inch pie shell, ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ½ teaspoon pastry spice (or cinnamon), 5 cups sliced apples, 2 eggs (beaten), ½ cup whipping cream.

Topping — ½ cup sifted all-purpose flour, ½ cup brown sugar, ½ teaspoon pastry spice (or cinnamon), ¼ cup butter.

Prepare pastry, line pie plate and bake in a 400°F. oven for 10 minutes. Mix the ½ cup sugar, cornstarch and ½ teaspoon spice. Sprinkle 2 tablespoons of this mixture over bottom of partially baked pie shell and stir remainder into apples. Arrange apples in pie shell, and pour combined eggs and cream over top. Mix flour, brown sugar and remaining spice. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse bread crumbs. Sprinkle topping over apples and bake at 350°F. until apples are tender, 35 to 40 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

liberals in Ottawa unity in Canada

Confederation has been strengthened more in the past two years under the Liberals than at any time in the past century. We can see it in the closer, friendlier relations between Ottawa and the provinces ... in the sharing of a bright new prosperity all across the country ... in our distinctive new maple leaf flag. But this exciting new Canada doesn't please Mr. Diefenbaker. He wants to turn back the clock ... he wants a Canada where there is not meaningful communication between the two founding races. It almost seems Mr. Diefenbaker wants a Canada without Quebec! But Mr. Pearson speaks the language of reason when he says: "Quebec must be present in all of Canada". Let's be present IN FORCE on November 8th!

After a strenuous campaign, Roger E. Regimbal, the Progressive Conservative candidate, won a resounding victory and on election night received congratulations from friends and supporters. Seen here among the jubilant gathering are Maurice Gougeon, W. M. Cottingham, M.P.P., and other party enthusiasts. — Photo, Syd Drew

Liberals win in nation-wide vote, but still with minority government

In his second contest for federal honors, Roger E. Regimbal's campaign for the Progressive-Conservative representation was crowned with success — the election night returns giving him a very decisive majority of 2,430 votes over his major opponent, Vincent Drouin, the retired Liberal M.P.

The new representative for Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes has been a resident of Lachute for 15 years, occupying a position of responsibility on the executive of Dominion Ayers Limited, and fulfilling many social and community roles during that period. He is well and favorably known to the people of this community.

Mr. Regimbal faced a 2,100 majority polled by his opponent in 1963. The District Returning Officer gave figures Monday night indicating a reversal in Deux Montagnes, which had previously been considered Mr. Drouin's stronghold. From the outset of the vote-counting, Regimbal's majority seemed assured, and at the conclusion, his victory was a notable triumph, despite the defeat of the Conservative cause in Quebec and across the country.

Observers considered that Mr. Regimbal's campaign was energetically upheld from the start, whereas the Liberal organization was lacking. It was noted the party was not even represented at certain polling booths on election day.

The Creditiste and N.D.P. candidates, Ernest Champagne and Paul Orr, commanded support in certain quarters, but their influence on the standings of the two major contenders was minimal, as expected. The votes of the four respective candidates were:

Champagne	Orr	Drouin	Regimbal

(Majority for Regimbal, 2,430).

The Returning Officer, Dr. Jean-Paul Dorion, reported orderly and peaceful procedure in all polling divisions, with no disruptive incidents whatever. For the information of readers in all parts of the constituency, results in the individual polls are listed in this issue.

H. & S. to hear progress report on Regional School

The opening meeting of the season for Home and School will be held Wednesday, November 17, at 8.15 p.m. in the Music room of Lachute High School.

The topic for discussion at this meeting will be "The Progress of Operation 55".

Two representatives from the Regional Board, Mr. Lorne Duncan, of Lachute, and Mr. Frank Knights, of Grenville, will be present to report on the progress made since the Board was formed.

There will also be three principals of High Schools, Mr. F. Royal, Lachute, Mr. M. Turner, Grenville, and Mr. J. Leggitt, Brownsburg, who will speak on the "Composite School, Academic and Vocational", also explain what courses will be offered.

A discussion will follow the program, and questions will be answered.

Brownsburg and Grenville Home and School Associations have been invited to attend this meeting, and an open invitation is extended to all parents to be present.

Council debate on Barron property and notice-of-motion to homologate

The question of purchasing the Barron property, or alternately, of homologating the land "in toto", was again up for discussion at the Council meeting, presided over by Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon.

It was certain voices among the spectaters, notably from the Centre d'Art, which raised the question as to whether this was on the agenda. The mayor seemed aware that the question was to be brought up, and he stated there was a rumor that the Protestant School Commission intended to acquire the property, or part of it, to build a regional school.

"The municipality should not wait for grass to grow under its feet," he said, "and to homologate the land seems to be a logical solution. One part of the property, the so-alled commercial part, has already been homologated, and the town would do well to take over the rest, before it is put to industrial uses.

"If we decide to promote a cultural centre," the mayor continued, "and to turn the rest into a civic park, it will not be necessary for us to clean it up immediately; the work can be done progressively, over a period of years."

This last observation was directed to Ald. Dr. Middleton who was opposed to the project, arguing that the property had practical disadvantages and it would cost almost as much to level it and fill it, as it would to purchase the site. According to Dr. Middleton, H. J. O'Connell had already declined to buy the property because it would "cost a fortune" to make it usable.

As an outcome to this discussion, Ald. Bruno Belanger gave notice of motion that he would present a by-law to homologate the land, also an amendment to the zoning by-law.

The Council decided also to write the Protestant School Commission to learn their intentions concerning this property.

Community tribute of Remembrance

Another year has passed and once again Remembrance Day (the nearest Sunday preceding Armistice Day, November 11) was fittingly observed.

The theme at all churches was that of Remembrance, and as one local clergyman observed, "It will be a sad day when we forget to honor those who in past wars paid the supreme sacrifice that we might live."

Legion members accompanied by the Ladies' Auxiliary paraded with highland pipe music to Ste. Anastasie Church, where they were welcomed by Curé Yvon Mailloux, who was assisted by the Rev. Hubert Beaudry, vicar.

In the afternoon a parade was held from the Legion Hall to the Memorial Park, where over 100 wreaths donated by business firms, relatives and friends of soldiers killed in the two great wars, were placed around the monument bearing the names of those who did not return.

A short ceremony was held, with prayers by the Rev. H. Thompson and Curé Y. Mailloux, followed by a few words, in both languages, by Legion President Jos. Sewell.

Silence was observed while, with flags lowered, "Last Post" and "Reveille" were sounded.

Five wreaths only were personally laid — that of the Legion Branch 70, by President Jos. Sewell; the Ladies' Auxiliary Branch, by President Mrs. C. Napp; Lachute Town, by Mayor Z. Saindon; the Conservative Association by Miss Renée Régimbal; and the Liberal Association by Mr. Richard Valois.

Names of donors of those wreaths already placed were read by Legion Vice-President Lloyd Bryson.

Under command of Sgt.-Major Bob St. Laurent, the parade then marched back along Main Street to the Legion Hall. Pipers and the Cadet Band supplied the music.

The parade of war vets was accompanied by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Cadet Corps Band, Army Cadets, Air Cadets, Firemen, Girl Guides, C.G.I.T., Scouts and Cubs.

(A complete list of those who purchased wreaths is published on page 8.)

Armistice Supper Held

Upwards of 100 veterans attended the annual dinner, held on Saturday evening. The meal was excellently prepared by the Ladies' Auxiliary, who were thanked by Past-President Charles Duncan.

Comrade President Jos. Sewell extended a welcome to all present and spoke briefly on "The Legion."

A dance was held later in the evening, enjoyed by all present.

Near-century-old citizen was native of Shrewsbury

A well-known personality of this community, Mr. Edward Morrison, passed peacefully away at the Argenteuil Hospital on Sunday, November 7, in his 100th year. Mr. Morrison's health had deteriorated during recent weeks, but up to and past his 99th birthday, he had enjoyed fairly good health. He was confined to bed for only the last ten days.

The late Edward Morrison

Mr. Morrison was born in Shrewsbury, a community north of Lachute, on March 4, 1866, while his father was fighting in the Fenian Raids. The son of William Morrison and Elizabeth Parker, he was one of a family of eight children, of whom a sister, Sarah, still survives.

In 1904 he married Catherine Rathwell, of Shrewsbury, who predeceased him 13 years ago. Of their four children, one son, Edward, and a daughter, Kathleen, are still living. A daughter, Grace, also a son, Douglas, predeceased their parents.

Mr. Morrison had a long and healthful life, and during his century of living, enjoyed more than one occupation, being a farmer, a lumberman and a fur-trader. He was a member of the Orange Order for 83 years, held the position of Rector's Warden of St. John's Church, Shrewsbury, for almost 50 years, and served also for a time as councillor in the Township of Gore.

A funeral service was held from St. Simeon's Anglican Church on Tuesday, November 9. The Rev. C. B. Lang conducted the service, assisted by Canon C. W. P. Baugh. Hymns sung were "Forever with the Lord" and "Unto the Hills Around".

Pall-bearers were — Messrs. Melvin Boyd, Leonard Rathwell, William Morrison, Russell Hodgers, Leonard Gain and Keith Morrison. Interment was in the Lachute Cemetery.

Killed by truck on road building at Repentigny

An Ayersville man, 34-year-old Claude Montpetit, the father of four children, was instantly killed at his work last Monday on a road construction job at Repentigny.

Montpetit had been working for Megantic Construction only since noon on the day he was killed. He was serving as a signalman for trucks, and around 4 p.m. was directing a work truck, which backed up and struck him, crushing his skull.

A resident of Champagne Street, the victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Montpetit, who were fatally burned when their home on Hamford Street was destroyed by fire January 11, 1964.

He is mourned by his wife, the former Florette Charbonneau, and children, Alain, Danny, Linda and Johanne; also a brother, in Lachute, and three sisters, in Ayersville.

Funeral rites, from the Menard parlors, will be held at the Immaculate Conception Church on Thursday at 8.30 a.m., with interment at Hawkesbury cemetery.

Week's Epigram

Socialism itself, as every sensible man supposed to be an advocate of it understands, will be a fundamental mistake.

By BOB ATCHISON

To most of us this is not the time to be thinking of fishing; maybe after you read this, though, the tackle will come out of mothballs. A group of fishermen were down on the Ottawa River near Pointe Fortune. They had caught some good perch, but had nothing really worthwhile for the time they had spent. However, just before they got through for the day — a bite that seemed to make everyone realize a good one was about to be taken with a little luck! A fight of 20 minutes, and the fish was brought in; it weighed 6 lbs. 4 ozs. and measured 25 inches. None of the anglers knew just what this fish was, so they got in touch with the game warden in their town (Hawkesbury). The fish turned out to be a Brown Trout. Now, with trout being out of season and so forth, a little trouble was anticipated. However, this did not materialize. The warden knew this was a genuine mistake, took all the information, and let them keep the fish. Some wardens do realize that honest mistakes can and do happen.

This may look as though I'm giving our wardens a rough time, but it's certainly not the case. With the amount of poaching that goes on in this County, it would drive the Ontario wardens up the wall in no time. To give you some idea — here's a little story I heard last Sunday evening. It was told me by two sportsmen from Montreal, and it had happened to them. . . Out deer shooting, they were approached by a couple of supposed guides, who told them that if they did not get deer they knew of a "place" where they could be obtained for a price. A fawn was being offered for the big sum of $25, while a buck was priced at $60. This area is well known hereabouts — St. Michel. I asked why they had not got in touch with the wardens; they stated they had, but that they were not able to contact anyone in authority. Which was too bad; maybe a case like this would have cramped the style of the poachers.

But there are other places too, where this type of thing goes on. Most of us are guilty in one way or another. How about a "sport" getting a license for everyone in the family, even the babes in arms, then going out and shooting everything they can see? This happens a lot in this district. According to these sports, they are not breaking the law very seriously; or at least, so they believe. Stupid thinking.

The kill of deer has not been too startling for this County, and I am naturally pleased about this. It's hard to make people see that this uncontrolled shooting of wildlife will sooner or later have disastrous effects for us. Most people think that Nature will take a hand in the lessening herds of deer and so forth, and then everything will be alright. It should be seen that we have seemingly reached a point of no return, right now. O.K., so Atchison is ranting again. I personally don't care, but at least try and think of our wildlife. They are supposed to be on this earth for everyone's benefit, either for food or visual enjoyment. Take it any way, it has got to the point now where we can't even watch a deer.

A good number of Hungarian partridge are around, more than I have ever seen. Coming up the back road from St. Eustache the other day, we spotted a flock of birds in a field; they were too far away to identify at the time, but we all thought they were partridge; there must have been about 50 birds in this one. Even on some of the back roads they could be seen, pecking gravel. The abundance of this species sure looks good for the upland shooters. They can be shot the same as most birds, but there's one thing to bear in mind — a good bird dog will sure help. Another thing, these Huns take off and keep going for some distance. Also, they are experts at the art of concealment; so look before you move. There's nothing so disconcerting as a covey of birds flushing from right underneath you. I usually end up blasting away at the sky; and I am no exception, I'm sure.

This seems to have been the week that was. There are questions on almost everything. To begin with, there was a call the other night asking if a 22 could kill a deer. Sure it can; as a matter of fact, with a good marksman anything can be used, but (this is the big point) this calibre is not meant to be a deer rifle. It is a varmint gun, and meant to be used as such. Another question on calibres — this one, the old 38-40. Since my last remarks on this gun, it seems to have been in the arguments a lot. The 38-40 was, as I stated, a good gun in its day, 30 years ago, but this has long since passed, along with the easy shooting of that era. The 38-40 has a hitting power of only 455 pounds at 100 yeards, not much more than our present-day 22s and in some cases less. One more question had to do with a shotgun that had the end of the barrel badly bent. The query was, would it be safe to saw off the end and use it as a sawn-off shotgun? I don't know just how the barrel got bent, but at any rate I wouldn't use it. From a safety point of view, this should be proof-tested, and even then, there is no guarantee that it will work perfectly all the time. Of course, if this happened to be a good gun, then it would be in the owner's interest to send it back to the factory and have it fitted for a new barrel, and maybe a new action. In this particular case though, the gun was not expensive as shotguns go, so it wouldn't be worthwhile to do this. Better just keep it as a souvenir. Safer and cheaper — funerals cost money these days. . . And the last argument was on fish — the largest Rainbow Trout ever taken on rod and reel? The largest was stated, in this argument, as being in the 20-lb. class. Well, I don't know for sure just what is the world's record, but I do know that fish of 30 to 40 lbs. have been taken in New Zealand this way.

I have seen only two ducks, blacks, on the North River near home, in the past couple of weeks. In the last two years these water birds have been slowly dying out. Of course, this is not all due to the hunters, but rather to the lack of breeding grounds. With the lack of waters, freezing weather, and so on, the whole of the duck population took a very bad beating. Ducks Unlimited are very worried about their decline, as they should be. I would guess that next will be the one that tells the tale — extinction and nothing else. I know this is hard to comprehend, but take a look at the whole of the North American continent — poor weather, pollution, low water supplies, disease; and there you have it. Even Nature seems to have given up on these birds. Just what we can do, I have no idea, but we'd better try something and fast.

I'm sure glad to see all the feeders for our birds being filled these days. We have still got a couple of robins with us. It's poor pickings for these birds, worms are hard to come by now. They aren't too much interested in feed, but they will take a little suet on the ground. However, the jays sure play havoc with it; we had 17 birds at our feeder the other morning — jays, that is. Sparrows by the dozens too. One partridge is roosting in the cedars, so we have hopes of a lot of birds this winter.

LACHUTE CURLING CLUB 1884

Rare, savory and appetizing was the roast beef dinner enjoyed by 75 members, which launched the new season of the Lachute Curling Club. The occasion — the semi-annual members' meeting, which was held on Wednesday evening of last week.

Following the meal, for which the ladies were thanked, President Colin McOuat opened the business of the evening.

Special thanks for an excellently completed task, was proposed and extended by all members, to the hard-working House and Ice Committee. Congratulations for good ice and the installation of the Roll-of-Members board are well deserved and fully earned by this committee.

The golf tournament held on September 15 at Lachute Golf and Country Club was, in spite of the inclement weather, a success. The club trophy was won by the all-weather valley swinger, Lionel Rendell. Well done, Lionel! An interclub shield was donated this year by Colin McOuat. This is a team competition, and was won by our old friend "Buster" Higginson. "Buster" captured the Smiths Falls entry to a wet victory. Sixty-four attended the outing, and all were prize winners. Tom (Big Motor) Johnston, Dave (Half Stroke) Campbell, Jim (Chipper) MacKimmie and Dick Richardson were responsible for the smooth running of this event.

The Match Committee outlined the curling program for the coming season. This will be similar to past years. The Match Committee bonspiel is underway; this will be followed by the Club Championship bonspiel, and interspaced will be both the Turkey and Holiday bonspiels.

Saturday curling has received a transfusion. The new ideas will, it is hoped, revive the eager enthusiasm which a few years ago was displayed and enjoyed by the members participating in the mixed games. Members are in receipt of the recent letter circulated to inform them of the new arranagements regarding mixed curling on Saturday. This is a worthy program, a program deserving of the fullest support of all members. Show your appreciation of this venture for your entertainment, by matching your effort to that of Norma Rogers and Stewart Jones.

Three new members have joined the Club. Maurice Huot, a new resident in Lachute, welcome to our Club. Maurice resided in Chicoutimi prior to Lachute, and there was smitten by the game. Duncan and Del Junior MacTavish, welcome also to our Club. Duncan and Del are the sons of Del MacTavish whom most members know; he chews cigars and roars like a lion. Del Senior has not been active in the Club for the last few years, but this season he is looking for action; nice to have him back with us.

Mr. F. Malenfant was the guest of Jimmy Campbell at the dinner and he may be a potential member; nice to have you.

Visitor interviewed, gives glimpse of education, social conditions in Mexico

By Robert Dawson

Miss Rosa Rodriguez, a social worker from Mexico, told the Lachute High School History Club last week that there are no schools in some of the poverty-stricken rural areas of her Latin American nation. In contrast, Miss Rodriguez also spoke of the huge National University of Mexico, founded in 1553, over three centuries before Canada's Confederation. Whereas in some parts of Mexico a great effort is required to educate some of the brightest students as far as grade six, the National University has faculties of law, medicine, chemistry, pharmacy, dentistry, engineering, natural sciences, liberal arts, fine arts, music, theatrical art, and teaching.

Miss Rodriguez is visiting Canada on scholarship, to investigate our standard and way of living, especially in rural areas. She spoke to the general meeting of the History Club in Spanish, with Miss L. Caya, a teacher at the school, acting as interpreter.

Miss Rodriguez is supervisor of 60 social workers in Mexico. She assigns each worker a program to work on for one year in a specifically designated area. The workers go out and live among the people. They teach the women about proper nutrition, how to prepare food, and how to make clothing and shoes. The men are shown how to improve the condition of the mud huts that serve as homes. If possible, the men are taught trades, or instructed in modern methods of agriculture. Miss Rodriguez' social workers organize projects and social events for the young people to help them put their leisure time to good use.

Each area has its own problems and is treated individually. One problem, however, which is common to almost all rural areas in Mexico, is a lack of adequate educational facilities and teachers. In some areas there are not enough schools, in some areas there are sufficient schools but not enough text-books, and in no rural areas are there enough teachers.

"The teachers in Mexico are not attracted to the rural areas," said Miss Rodriguez. "They go to the cities, where they find higher salaries and better facilities. The people from the rural areas who do get education, go to the cities to get it, and then they refuse to go back to the country and work."

When asked by a student about the educational system in Mexico, Miss Rodriguez explained that there are six years of primary schooling, three years of secondary education, an added two years of preparatory instruction for those who are able to go on to higher education, and a final four or five years of university. Six years of age is the minimum age for entering school in Mexico, and most schools operate on a system of double shifts, with students having classes in the morning only, or the afternoon only. The courses offered are about the same as those in Quebec, except that there is less emphasis on science.

Miss Rodriguez added that physical education, home economics and practical courses in nutrition and clothes-making, are considered highly important in Mexican schools. Public schools are co-educational, while the boys and girls are separated in the numerous private schools.

The scholarship program which brought Miss Rodriguez to Canada is administered by the Canadian Embassy in Mexico and offers to Canadians who speak some Spanish and who are under 30 years of age, the chance to spend five all-expense-paid weeks in Mexico, doing social work. These people must pay their own way to and from Mexico, but will be given valuable training in social working and a chance to live among the people of Mexico. Some Canadians have already combined a holiday in Latin America with five weeks of working with Miss Rodriguez' social workers.

"There is nothing political about this plan," concluded Miss Rodriguez, "it is entirely to promote peace in the world."

(Comments on the Local Scene)

Arrangements for the adult Art classes, which usually commence at the Centre d'Art in mid-October, have been delayed this year, due to the need for more prospective students to meet the expense of a qualified instructor from the Beaux Arts, Montreal. It is hoped there will be sufficient enrolments to permit the announcement of these classes within the next few weeks. . . Phone 562-8218 or 537-3367 for information.

Oddments of business at the Council table

Town Council granted a temporary change in parking regulations at the request of Gaetan Cousineau, to permit 15-minute parking in front of the Cousineau wholesale establishment on Bethany Street.

The councillors were informed that a public hearing will be held at the Auditorium on November 30 to hear protests against the cancellation of trains between Ottawa and Montreal passing through Lachute. The inquiry will be conducted by the Transport Commission.

The Fire Commissioner's report on investigation of the municipal fire department, was formally received. Experts will be called in for consultation when it comes to re-organizing the department.

A bill for $5,136 in connection with children placed in foster homes under the Public Charities Act, came before the Council.

The Quebec Roads Department offer to place traffic lights at the Main and Bethany intersection was approved, and the lights will be duly installed.

The municipality will send two delegates to the Association of Industrial Commissioners, convening November 17-19 in Quebec City — $150 being allotted for each representative. The Council also took note of a letter from the Chamber of Commerce, concerning the promotion of industry in this community.

Maurice Dumais was given a permit to conduct a 'discotheque' at premises on Chatham Street between Lachute Inn and the I.G.A. Store. The establishment will be known as "La Barak".

Correspondence to Council included a letter of appreciation from People's Church for use of the Auditorium; a complaint from Mme Claire Leduc on the fire alarm system; and a claim of $157.80 from Mme Arthur Salvas for a fall on the sidewalk October 10 — which will be handed over to the insurance company.

Ald. Linton Armstrong was appointed pro-mayor for the next three months.

Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon chaired the meeting, and Ald L. Gibeault was the only councillor absent.

Jr. "B" hockey starting Sunday

The Laurentide Hockey League will open activities locally at the Brownsburg Arena on November 14, at 2.30 p.m., when the Lachute Junior Hockey Club will play hosts to Duvernay.

This is a seven-team league and includes players up to 20 years of age. Supervision, rules and refereeing come under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

This promises to be a good brand of Junior "B" hockey and citizens are invited to encourage these young players.

Following is the schedule for Lachute team this month:

Brownsburg Arena

Sun., Nov. 14, 2.30 p.m. — Duvernay vs Lachute

Sun., Nov. 21, 2.30 p.m. — Laval vs Lachute

Tues., Nov. 23, 8 p.m. — St. Eustache vs Lachute

BATES — In memory of a dearly beloved husband, dad, grandfather and great-grandfather, Sandy Bates, who passed away Nov. 10, 1963. — Lovingly remembered by his wife, Mary, and family.

BRYERTON — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs. Eva Bryerton, who passed away Nov. 11, 1958. — Ever remembered by her husband, Earl, and daughter, Freda.

"The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well;
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep."

CAMPBELL — In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Gilbert Campbell (Jennie), who was called away Nov. 10, 1964. — Inserted by her husband.

"Deep in the heart lies a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest,
In memory's frame I shall keep it,
Because she was one of the best."

CAMPBELL (Jennie) — In memory of a dear mother, who passed away Nov. 10, 1964. — Lovingly remembered by Audrey, John and family.

"A silent thought, a secret tear,
Keeps her memory ever dear,
Time takes away the edge of grief,
But memory turns back every leaf."

CAMPBELL — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Jennie, who passed away Nov. 10, 1964. — Lovingly remembered, Jacqueline, Charlie, Genn, Farrell and Colleen Jane.

"What would I give to clasp her hand,
Her dear sweet face to see,
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
That meant so much to me."

CAMPBELL (Mrs. Gilbert) — In loving memory of a dear mother, who passed away Nov. 10, 1964. — Always remembered by Harvey and Janet.

"We mourn for her in silence,
No eyes can see us weep,
But many a silent tear is shed
While others are asleep."

CAMPBELL (Mrs. Gilbert) — In loving memory of a dear mother, who passed away Nov. 10, 1964. — Always remembered by Leslie, Freda and children.

"The depths of sorrow we cannot tell
Of the loss of one we loved so well
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep."

CAMPBELL (Jennie) — In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away a year ago, Nov. 10, 1964. — Loved, missed and remembered always by Faye and Bobby.

"God gave us a wonderful Mother,
Her memory will never grow old,
He fashioned her smile out of sunshine,
And moulded her heart of pure gold."

CAMPBELL (Jennie) — In loving memory of a dear grandmother, who passed away Nov. 10, 1964. — Sadly missed by your grandchildren, Dana and David.

DOWNING — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, George Downing, who passed away Nov. 17, 1956. — Ever remembered by his wife and family.

"The reflected warmth and gladness of his personality
Served to brighten the days of all who knew him,
And we will never forget him."

B'burg Council to protest at hearing on C.P.R. service

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — A variety of matters, ranging from violations of the traffic laws to the coming public hearings in Lachute by the Board of Transport Commissioners, were discussed at the November 1 meeting of Brownsburg Town Council.

The Council expressed united dissatisfaction over the number of complaints received on illegal parking in Brownsburg. Police Chief André Roy was instructed to crack down on people who fail to use properly designated parking areas. Dissatisfaction was also expressed by some councillors over the number of dogs still running loose within the town.

Mayor René Lafleur reported that a hearing of the Board of Transport Commissioners would be held in Lachute on November 30, at 10 a.m., concerning the proposed discontinuance of C.P.R. passenger trains 137, 138, 132 and 133 connecting Montreal and Ottawa, via Lachute. The mayor agreed to present a brief to the hearing, opposing this proposed move.

The Council then authorized Secretary-treasurer Vincent Charbonneau to forward to Papineauville a copy of the contract awarded for the paving of several streets, so that the provincial government will submit $5,000 towards the total cost.

Mr. Charbonneau then advised the Council that the names of all persons with outstanding taxes, whether water or municipal, will be made public at the regular December meeting.

IN MEMORIAM

GORDON — In loving memory of my dear wife, Bella, who passed away Nov. 16, 1959. — Always remembered by her husband, Archie.

"No longer here, my life to share,
But in my heart she's always there."

GORDON — In fond and loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away Nov. 16, 1959. — Remembered always by Tootie & Keith, and Jean & Eddie.

"Rest in peace, dear loving Mother,
Six long years have passed away,
You are gone, but still are living
In the hearts of those who stay."

GORDON — In loving memory of our dear sister, Bella (Cunningham) Gordon, who passed away Nov. 16, 1959. — Always remembered by Beatrice, Hugh, Barbara and Gertie.

"Just a cluster of beautiful memories
Sprayed by a million tears,
Wishing God could have spared you
Just a few more years."

KILPATRICK — In loving memory of a dear brother, Garnet, who passed away Nov. 15, 1958. — Always remembered by Aldyth and family.

"Every day in some small way,
Memories of you come our way."

MacRAE (Malcolm R.) — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, who passed away Nov. 11, 1948. — Ever remembered by his wife, Catherine, daughters, Ethel and Dorothy, son, Russell, and grandson, Reid.

"Memories are like threads of gold,
They never tarnish or grow old."

SEARY — In loving memory of my beloved husband, John T. (Jack) Seary, who passed away on Nov. 10, 1958, and my dear son, John J. (Jackie) Seary, who passed away on Nov. 25, 1961. — Lovingly remembered by wife and mother, Gertrude Seary.

"While they rest in peaceful sleep,
Their memory I shall always keep."

WELDEN — Mrs. James Welden (Ann McHardy), Nov. 14, 1961, my beloved mother. — Daughter, Hester.

"Loving thoughts and silent tears
Have marked the passing of four years.
Tears may dry and fade away,
But in our hearts you will always stay.
Beautiful memories of a mother so dear,
Loved and treasured each day of the year."

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

THOMPSON — Mrs. William Thompson, son John and daughter Christina, wish to express their sincere thanks to relatives and friends for the kind expressions of sympathy extended during their recent sad bereavement, including phone calls, flowers, cards, and attendance at the funeral, also at the funeral home. (Those who omitted to register please also accept this appreciation.)

Furniture store robbery similar to Main St. break-in

Theft of nine TV sets and eight radios from the Hamford Street store of Jean-Guy Tessier, bore a similarity to the recent robbery at J. Roger Lamarche furniture store, according to investigating police. The robbery at Tessier's occurred from Friday night to Saturday morning of last week, and the loss was estimated in the vicinity of $2,000. Entry to the store was by means of a forced door, and the loss was not covered by insurance.

A break-in at the Bethany Road firm of Fairway Sales and Service was also discovered on Monday morning. However, Q.P.P. officers report nothing was missing in this instance.

Cpl. Jean-Paul Dallaire is heading the investigation into both incidents.

Month's reports on police and fire departments

The police department reported 320 service calls during the month of October. During the same period there were 28 street accidents causing material damage, and 26 arrests for various offences against law and order. There were cases of vandalism, robbery, bicycle thefts, an automobile theft, breaking and entering, and seven instances of persons reported missing.

Police department revenues, according to the report by Chief J. R. Chartrand, amounted to $910.25, and 58 tickets were issued for traffic violations.

Chief Don MacCulloch's report of fire department activities listed nine fire calls in the month — six in Lachute, one in Chatham and two in St. Jerusalem. Estimated loss in Lachute was $2,600 and in Chatham $700. Collectible on out-of-town services was the sum of $475, and fire department payroll expenses were $320.

Reports for the two departments were submitted to Council by the commissioner, Ald. Linton W. Armstrong.

Need support of all organizations in Winter Employment Committee

The chairman of the local Winter Employment Committee, Dr. Zoël Saindon, has made an appeal for more groups to be represented at the November 16 meeting at the National Employment Office. . . "We can do more, if we have greater representation from all organizations in our community," he believes.

A mass meeting is planned for 8 p.m. on November 16 at the local National Employment Office on Main Street. All organizations are requested to be represented by members prepared to commit their organization to assist in the forthcoming Winter Employment Campaign.

"Invitations have been mailed", the chairman stated, "and we want to have complete representation of our entire community at this meeting. This is not a closed meeting or a small committee, it is open to any person or group who may have constructive ideas on increasing employment during the winter months."

The secretary of the local Employment Advisory Committee will record the minutes of this meeting and National Employment Office staff will provide clerical assistance.

"The problem of winter unemployment is a serious matter," the chairman said, "and it will take careful planning and hard work by many people and organizations to prevent winter unemployment taking its toll in our community this year."

The manager of the local National Employment Service reported that 1,100 persons were seeking employment during January last winter. This represents the high peak of winter unemployment in the district. At the present time, 288 men and 111 women are seeking work.

Remembrance is sermon theme at Presbyt'n Church

"On this Sunday, close to November 11, we are reminded of the great memorials erected to those who gave their lives during the first World War, 1914-18, as well as during subsequent conflicts," the Very Rev. C. Ritchie Bell, of the Presbyterian College, said in a sermon, "Lest We Forget", at the Margaret Rodger Memorial Church last Sunday.

"Every country has sought to honor its dead with the highest tribute it can bestow. In Canada, in the middle of the Parliament Buildings, rises the Peace Tower, with its chapel in which the book of Remembrance is always open. In England, one passes the Cenotaph in Whitehall, but the most moving memorial, to me, is the grave of the Unknown Soldier in Westminster Abbey. Here he lies, among the illustrious dead of the Commonwealth.

"You who are in the pews this morning feel, as I do, that it is right that a nation should honor heroic sacrifices. These stones speak to us of the past. People have said to me that they would sooner forget those memories, but I cannot agree with them. It will be a sorry day for any country when it ceases to remember those who gave everything that they had, even life itself, so that their country and their loved ones might live in peace and freedom. There is always the danger of taking this freedom for granted.

"These stones do speak to us of our heritage in this day of testing. Our honored dead sacrificed for what they believed to be right and what we believe to be everlastingly true — that justice and mercy and truth shall not perish from the earth. If they do, we might as well wish we had perished too."

Home for Elderly project; Wes Younkie W. I. speaker

The monthly meeting of the Women's Institute, Lachute Branch, chaired by the president, Mrs. George Leggett, was held on Tuesday last at the High School. A report on the semi-annual convention of the County W.I. was given by Mrs. Gordon Dobbie, and Mrs. Hall, County president, gave a short talk containing timely tips for all branches.

The speaker on this occasion, Mr. W. B. Younkie, was introduced by Mrs. M. Gendron, convener of Citizenship.

Mr. Younkie first gave a brief report on the operation of the Griffith-McConnell Homes in Montreal, now under management of a new corporation named United Church Montreal Homes for Elderly People, of which Mr. Younkie is the president. He then stated that the Board of Trustees of Lachute United Church would meet again soon to formulate specific plans in regard to a home for elderly people in Lachute, for which purpose a substantial sum of money had been bequeathed by Miss Stalker over a year ago.

The speaker then outlined the procedure required to accomplish the project and he pointed out that considerable time would be involved in the initial stages of planning and obtaining approval from the Department of Family and Social Welfare at Quebec. No such Homes may be developed without the prior approval of the Department.

The first step would be to establish if there is a need for such a Home in the Lachute area and this would be taken in consultation with local Social Welfare officials; the Department at Quebec would then conduct its own investigation on this phase of the subject. Should approval be granted by the Department, the next step would be to select a site and in this, consideration would have to be given to several factors, but particularly to the one of close proximity to stores, churches and other town facilities, and the sponsors would have to submit preliminary designs of the building to be constructed. Mr. Younkie said that, financially, the project seemed possible because, although the Government at Quebec did not now provide direct construction grants, it did assist in operating costs for those residents who had nothing but the Old Age Pension. The Government had, however, made arrangements with the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for very favorable loans up to 50 years in term, at very low interest; furthermore, such loans would be on the basis of 90% of construction costs, thus, sponsors of such Homes would be required to start with 10% of the building cost plus the cost of furnishings. The sponsors would be required to incorporate with Quebec as a non-profit corporation. The third step, that of carrying out the project, would be undertaken after final approval by the Department at Quebec and the C.M.H.C. Government regulations indicate that the cost of such Homes should not exceed $5,000 per bed.

Mr. Younkie expressed the personal opinion that the corporation to be set up to handle the Lachute project, if it developed, should include not only representatives of Lachute United Church, but also of the Women's Institutes, other churches, service clubs and any other such interested organizations, all of whom would contribute to the corporation funds on hand and funds which may, in future, be raised, as well as manpower. In other words, this would become a community effort to aid all elderly people in this area.

Mrs. E. L. Jackson thanked Mr. Younkie for this most informative talk on a subject that concerns so many.

Interested visitors attended the meeting.

Feted by Neighbors

Neighbors and members of the Jerusalem-Bethany Farm Forum gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Hammond, Bethany Road, to honor Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. McOuat, who recently took up residence in Lachute. On behalf of this gathering Mr. Gordon Smith presented the special guests with a handsome floor lamp and a piece of cookery ware, as a token of esteem and expression of good wishes. Mr. and Mrs. McOuat graciously expressed their gratitude to the group. Following a social evening, refreshments were served.

Mrs. John MacKimmie left Sunday to visit her sister-in-law, Mrs. Art St. Onge and Mr. St. Onge, in Sherbrooke — then proceeding in company with Mrs. St. Onge to Syracuse, to spend a few days.

Miss Lillian Harrison, R.N., of Montreal, spent the week-end visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fraser C. Morrison.

Regular Baptists to celebrate 50th anniversary

The Regular Baptist Church of Brownsburg is to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the opening of its building, with a series of evangelistic meetings from November 13 to 21. A team of students from Toronto Baptist Seminary, who come from several different countries, will be in charge of the meetings November 13 and 14. They will provide several musical numbers, will give their personal testimonies, and will preach.

The following week, from November 15 to 21, Dr. H. C. Slade will be the guest speaker. Dr. Slade is pastor of the historic Jarvis Street Baptist Church, and is president of Toronto Baptist Seminary. He is also Canadian vice-president of the International Council of Christian Churches and vice-chairman of the Association of Regular Baptist Churches of Canada. In these capacities he has travelled from coast to coast in Canada and in many other countries of the world. As well as his present charge, he has also held pastorates in Westport, Timmins, and London, Ont. It is considered a real privilege to have such an able and forceful speaker for this occasion.

Mrs. Mary Bauman, an accomplished violinist of London, Ont., will be present the last week-end, and will play several selections. Details of the meetings are given in the church column of this paper.

Welcome and Farewell —

New minister in St. Andrews Presbyt'n charge

St Andrews East — The Rev. Dr. John Hardwick, newly appointed to the Presbyterian charge at St. Andrews, conducted the service last Sunday morning. He was appointed to replace the Rev. Dr. W. Harold Reid, who asked some time ago to be relieved of the pastorate in order to give more time for his academic duties.

The Rev. Dr. Reid left Lachute 10 years ago, and was appointed lecturer in Hebrew at the Presbyterian College in Montreal. He and Mrs. Reid went to live in St. Andrews East and later, when the Presbyterian congregation there was in need of a minister, he was asked to assume the pastoral responsibility.

The Rev. Dr. John Hardwick has been appointed as supply, and began his ministry Sunday. He is a graduate of the Presbyterian College, Montreal, and Mrs. Hardwick is a graduate in Arts from Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. They have just recently returned from an extended visit to New Zealand. Formerly Dr. Hardwick was a minister of the Presbyterian Church in Monkton, Ont.

After the Sunday morning service, conducted by Dr. Hardwick, everyone was invited to a bountiful meal provided by the ladies of the congregation in the church hall. This social event served both as a reception for Dr. and Mrs. Hardwick and a "farewell" in a sense for the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Reid on giving up their duties with the congregation. The couple will continue to live in St. Andrews East.

The luncheon was also attended by the Rev. Dr. C. Ritchie Bell and Mrs. Bell. Flowers were presented to Mrs. Hardwick and Mrs. Reid by two little girls of the congregation, Lynne Bradley and Linda Blair. Afterwards the three ministers were called upon in turn to speak. Mr. Howard McOuat acted as master of ceremonies and made a presentation on behalf of the congregation to Dr. and Mrs. Reid in appreciation of their work at St. Andrews.

Dr. and Mrs. Hardwick are residing at the manse in St. Andrews East.

Dr. H. C. Slade

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. N. Wyse and two daughters, from Quebec City, were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Syd Drew.

Assumes New Appointment As Church Choir Director

A well-known Lachute musician, Mr. Wayne Riddell, B. Mus., has been appointed organist and music director of Erskine-American United Church, Sherbrooke Street, Montreal. He succeeds Mr. George Little, B. Mus., who held the position for many years, prior to his appointment as Music Director for the Quebec Department of Education.

Congratulations are extended from his many friends, with best wishes for continued success in his musical career. Mr. Riddell started in his new position on Sunday last.

Mourn resident of farming community

The late Kenneth Sly

This community was saddened by the sudden death of a well-known farmer, Kenneth Ross Sly, who passed away November 3, at the Argenteuil Hospital.

Mr. Sly was in his 70th year. Born in Bristol Mines, Que., on December 12, 1895, he was the son of the late William Sly and his wife Josephine Craig.

He took up farming in this community about 45 years ago, and was a member of the Lachute United Church.

Left to mourn his passing are his wife, the former Alma Gordon; a son, Gordon, of Pointe-aux-Trembles; three daughters, Mildred (Mrs. Melvin Graham), of Lachute, Evelyn (Mrs. Fred Stewart), of Pointe Claire, and Lorna, of Montreal; and 12 grandchildren. Also left to mourn is one sister, Nettie (Mrs. Herman Ballantyne), of Bristol, Que. Another sister, Gertrude (Mrs. Lorne Davis), of Edmonton, and two brothers, Percy and Harvey, of Schreiber, Ont., predeceased him.

The funeral service was held Friday in the chapel of the J. P. MacKimmie Funeral Home, Lachute, conducted by the Rev. H. Thompson.

The pall-bearers were — Messrs. James Leishman, Dougall Leishman, James Bates, Allan Hammond, Simon Wilson and George Morrin. Interment was at the Lachute Cemetery.

RCAF crewman related here — to honor VC comrade

On the night of June 12, 1944, at an RCAF base in northern England, seven young men took off in a Lancaster bomber to strike at German supply lines behind the Normandy beachhead. It was their 13th mission together, and their last.

This week, on Remembrance Day, six of them will gather in Winnipeg to honor the memory of the seventh, Andrew Mynarski, who won the Victoria Cross but lost his life on that fateful mission.

Their plane was attacked by a German night-fighter and so badly damaged that the pilot ordered his crew to bail out. Mynarski, a 27-year-old gunner, was about to jump from the rear hatch when he saw that his best friend, P/O Patrick Brophy was trapped in the tail-turret. Ignoring his own safety, he crawled through the blazing fuselage and vainly tried to free him. When he finally gave up and bailed out, Mynarski's clothing was on fire. He was found by French farmers, but died of his burns.

Ironically, Brophy had a miraculous escape when the bomber crashed, and lived to tell a tale which won Mynarski the VC. He tells it again in the December issue of The Reader's Digest. As he says there, "I'll always believe that a divine providence intervened to save me because of what I had seen — so the world might know of a gallant man who laid down his life for a friend."

The son of Polish immigrants, Mynarski was born and raised in Winnipeg, where his name is memorialized by the Andrew Mynarski Jr. High School. To mark the school's 10th anniversary, the local Polish branch of the Canadian Legion arranged to bring his six crewmates together for the first time since World War II. They are:

Flt. Lt. G. P. Brophy, of Port Arthur, Ont., Arthur de Breyne, of St. Lambert, Que.; Robert Brodie, of Vancouver; Jack Friday, of Port Arthur; W. J. Kelly, of Winnipeg; and Roy Vigars, of Guildford, England.

Art de Breyne is the younger brother of Louis de Breyne, well known pro at Lachute Golf Club. Following his discharge from the Air Force he took an engineering course. Residing in St. Lambert, he is now in a successful business partnership in Montreal.

Witnesses meet this week-end

A delegation of Lachute Jehovah's Witnesses are making plans to attend a three-day Watchtower assembly, November 12 to 14, at Rosemount High School.

Mr. R. D. Hoffmann, presiding minister of the local group, said the Lachute members are looking forward to joining the other 13 English congregations, including one from Ontario, at the "Increase Our Praise to Jehovah" assembly.

Referring to the theme of the assembly Mr. Hoffmann said, "It should not be necessary to point out, especially to religious leaders, that worshipful praise is fitting only for God. As Job 32;21 expresses it: "Let me not give . . . flattering titles unto men." Mr. Hoffmann added, "Despite this, increased praise and importance is being given imperfect men."

This assembly comes as an anti-climax to a series of 41 assemblies in Europe, North America and Islands of Hawaii and Bermuda. The three-day program will include talks based on Bible research, dramatizations and demonstrations of Bible-based activities.

One of the highlights will be the public talk to be delivered by the Quebec supervisor, Mr. Laurier Saumur, Sunday, November 14, at 3 p.m., entitled "What does the Resurrection of the Dead mean for You and Yours?"

It's a Volkswagen.

A 1966 fastback Volkswagen.
A twin-carburetor Volkswagen.
A family Volkswagen.
A bucket-seated Volkswagen.
An engine-in-the-rear Volkswagen.
A fun-to-drive Volkswagen.
We call it the 1600 fastback sedan.

1600 because that's how big the engine is. Fastback because that's the way the back is. And sedan because it's not a sports car. Although it has a lot of sports-car features.

Like a fully-synchronized four-on-the-floor. And four-wheel independent suspension to take the bend out of corners. And front wheel disc brakes that stop you effortlessly. And the comfortable bucket seats we've already mentioned.

Then what's sedan about our fastback sedan?

Let's start with room. It seats five. Or two adults and as many kids as you want to stuff into the back seat.

There's 17 cu. ft. of luggage space. A fully instrumented padded dash with electric clock. Carpeted floors. And seat backs that adjust to seven different angles.

These are just a few reasons why our new fastback is a sedan. And a sporty car.

After you've driven one hard for a few years, you'll know why it's a Volkswagen.

The late William Thompson

Weir, Que. — There passed away at Weir, on November 4, William Thompson, a lifelong resident of these parts.

Born June 19, 1895, he was the son of William John Thompson and his wife Susan Woodman Calder. He spent the greater part of his life in this district, and worked mostly as a carpenter in his later years.

Mr. Thompson was first married in 1919 to Ruth Morrow Thompson of Belfast, Ireland, who predeceased him in 1938. William was married again in 1958 to the former Birdie Welden Boyd, of Arundel. He was predeceased by three sisters, (Mary) Mrs. R. B. Owen, (Elizabeth) Mrs. John Nixon, (Laura) Mrs. Vincent Farrell, and a brother, John. His sister (Annie) Mrs. Geo. Roberts, still resides in Winnipeg and is the only remaining member of the family from his father's first marriage. Also left to mourn his loss are his wife, Birdie, his son, John, daughter, (Christina) Mrs. Chas. Murdoch, stepson, Jackie Boyd, and nine grandchildren — Jan, Charles, Ian and Christina Murdoch, William and John Thompson, and Leslie, James and Beverley Anne Boyd; also his half-brother, Roy Thompson and two sisters by adoption, Mrs. (Margaret) Tomalty and Mrs. (Evelyn) Renaud.

The body rested at the MacKimmie Funeral Home, Lachute, until Saturday, November 6; service was held in the Anglican Church at Weir, conducted by the Rev. D. Hughes. The music was played by Mrs. Gertrude Jones, of Arundel. Hymns sung were, "Let the Lower Lights be Burning" and "Sometime We'll Understand". Many beautiful flowers bore silent tribute from his many friends.

Those who attended from a distance were from Toronto, Ottawa, Burlington, Cookstown and Lakeport, Ont.; Montreal, St. Hilaire, St. Pie, Lachute, Buckingham, Caldwell and Lennoxville, Que.; and New York.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

"I was down here last August and made a tour of this country of yours and was absolutely amazed at the potential you have here. There is no reason why you people can't average a 100 bushels of corn to the acre. I would say for this particular area (southwest Quebec) I would be very optimistic about the future of corn here."

That's the straightforward reply Lyle Giffin gave at the Corn Day to a question from the audience. Mr. Giffin, who grows 700 acres of corn in southwest Ontario, was the featured speaker at Quebec's first Corn Field Day at Ormstown on November 4.

Lyle didn't pull his punches. He laid it right on the line the steps a potential corn grower had to take to be successful. Nor did he try to hide the pitfalls and difficulties on the way to success. The crowd questioned him for an hour after the end of his talk.

"If you are going to grow corn, you must have a pilot plan. Then you have got it made, he continued. First of all, you are going to tile the land, then you are going to use fertilizers, and third, you are going to have a variety of corn you can work on.

"The thing people have to do is this. Don't start back in the horse-and-buggy days. Learn from the mistakes others have made. Get out and make a trip around the corn country. Good growers don't mind taking time to talk to you.

"One thing a corn grower can't do, and that is, like tradition. If you grow oats because your father grew oats, and you grow oats because your grandfather grew oats, then don't grow corn. Why? Because oats or wheat have traditionally remained the same as far as technology of planting the crop and harvesting it are concerned. If wheat yielded 35 bushels 15 years ago, it still yields 35 bushels.

"But if you are getting 100 bushels corn to the acre today, 10 years from now you are going to get 150. The reasons for this are the fast changing technological advances that people in research are making available for you. If you don't go out and look for them, then you are going to be sitting back and looking over the fence, and you are going to be driving a Model T, and he is going to have a Cadillac."

Lyle's talk was packed with practical detail, learned the hard way — varieties, fertilizer, planting, weed control, harvesting, storing. But here is a bit of his philosophy that caught my ear. "My brother and father and I take in every agricultural meeting going. They might be as boring as the dickens, but you never know what you might pick up. There might be just one little idea, and that's what we went after.

"The same with this literature, we can't get enough of it. Everything I read, I don't believe. But no matter how crazy it sounds, it just might be true."

We will try to have Mr. Giffin's talk written up. Perhaps we can publish it in one of the next copies of the Macdonald Farm Journal.

Decry under-age drinking in licensed bars

(LETTER TO THE EDITOR)

There are many obstructions to the realization of higher goals. Let's wipe out at least one of them, that is, under-aged drinking in licensed bars.

Some of our local hotels are exploiting our teen-agers. Three hotels in our district were raided a month ago and many patrons were teen-agers. Why? Firstly, these hotel bars attract teen-agers by playing what we recognize as "teen music". Secondly, young people should be refused admittance, but some hotel owners have sacrificed respect for the law, business ethics and public morality for the mighty dollar. I am not for a moment suggesting that the blame be shifted entirely from parents to hotel proprietors, but let's face it, many parents who started frequenting bars in their teens are too blind to see a better lot for their children. If these parents have not enough foresight to see that their children keep the law for their own good, hotel managements should fulfill their civic duty and refuse these young people admittance and service. In small communities, hotel proprietors in many cases cannot plead ignorance of their patrons' ages.

Some young people get into immediate difficulty following a visit to a beverage room — public disturbance, trouble with the law, unwanted pregnancy, to name a few. There are some that appear to escape damage, but does this early responsibility help or hinder them in building a better future? Does it help, or rather hinder, them to make the most of their opportunities and become responsible citizens of tomorrow, a credit to their family and community? Or will they look back with regret wishing they had made more of their lives, as some adults do today?

Youth is the time for high ideals, for education and preparation, the time to build lives for better or for worse. Let us all help the young people of today to reach for higher goals, to respect the law and to become good citizens. Enforcement of the under-age drinking law is one way to help to accomplish this.

— Penelope S. Wereley,
Jane M. Bennett

P.S. Should anyone think we are two over-protected spinsters, let us say we are mothers, under 25, who are thankful we were not given the opportunity of "pub-hopping" in our teens.

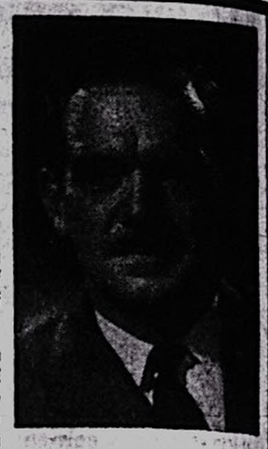
To the Voters of Argenteuil-Two Mountains



This has not been a victory of a party, nor even of a candidate. It is a victory of the PEOPLE!..

PEOPLE who have been ignored and neglected. PEOPLE who have found, in the Progressive-Conservative candidate, a hope of recognition and respect. PEOPLE who entrust to him their ideals for progress, for dignity, initiative and courage.

This responsibility we accept, in full knowledge of its scope and weight, and pledge our best efforts to giving you the kind of representation which your support and confidence have deserved.

For opening up your towns and villages, your homes and your hearts to us, my wife and family join me in expressing our heartfelt thanks and grateful appreciation.

To our opponents, our modest sympathy, and congratulations on a worthy battle.

To our hundreds of workers, to our thousands of supporters, to all the PEOPLE OF ARGENTEUIL - TWO MOUNTAINS — our warmest wishes!

— Roger E. Regimbal
Prog. Cons. Candidate-Elect

Young Canada Book Week

ONE WEEK in the year is dedicated to the special world of books for Young Canada. The books in a youngster's early life may have a marked influence on his later years, particularly those that are read to him. As soon as some friend or older member of the family can be cajoled into reading to a pre-schooler, the first steps into the world of literature have been taken. Soon the small ones won't be content to have a story stopped just as the hero is about to walk into the robbers' cave, or the fairytale princess about to be bewitched. There'll be the desire to continue on his own — a read-it-yourself plan to decipher the magic words himself.

The best source of reading matter for the youngster is the public or school library, and his librarian and his parents share his guidance to the world of history, romance and adventure. As soon as a child's inclination to explore for himself becomes apparent, he should have all the encouragement possible, an access to the world's literature. The child who loves reading will never be a lonely child.

Trend to apartment dwelling

The building of apartment dwellings is not only a major influence on the living habits of the Canadian population; in recent years it has also begun to play a dominant role in the pattern of total residential building — according to the Monthly Review of the Bank of Nova Scotia

In the mid-fifties Montreal and Toronto accounted for the bulk of new multiple dwellings across Canada. Then, single-unit rather than multiple housing was still the dominant feature of home construction in the majority of Canadian cities. Since that time, however, there has been a marked shift towards multiple dwellings and this has also become noticeable in the smaller metropolitan areas.

The Review cites several factors which have contributed to this trend. First, the cost of land has continued to rise as readily available building space has diminished. Second, the general prosperity of the country and the rising numbers of young people which have begun to show up in the past few years, have contributed to the increase in non-family households. Third, because of the variety of new apartments, this type of living has become more acceptable to a wider range of home-seekers than it used to be.

In the years immediately ahead, factors which will sustain the strong market for apartments are the potential growth in non-family households and also the demand for apartments amongst people starting out on married life, as a result of the bulge in the numbers of young people now distorting the population pyramid. One uncertain element, the Review says, is the extent to which young couples shift back to the single dwellings as they go on to have families. On the supply side of this situation, while there is greater scope for single unit developments in smaller centres, the sheer lack of space in the larger metropolitan areas suggests that the trend towards apartments will continue, particularly if the recent preference for living closer to the centre of the city continues to grow.

Car insurance rates go up and up . . .

CAR INSURANCE rates at this moment — right now — appear to be at about the proper level, according to insurance men, those who pay the indemnities. That is, the motorist who is paying 75 dollars for his car insurance for 1965 — or 100 dollars or 200 dollars, depending on what part of Canada he drives in — is paying just about the right amount.

At this very moment, however, some of the brightest actuaries in Canada are trying to figure out how much they should charge that fellow for next year's insurance. Accident frequencies have increased steadily since 1961. Repair costs have all increased. It is indicated that both frequency and cost of accidents will continue to increase in 1966.

— The foregoing views were expressed by J. B. Humphrey, past-president of All-Canada Insurance Federation, in a talk last week to the Rotary Club at Halifax. Mr. Humphrey was speaking for the insurance industry, but he added a personal prediction that is of special concern to all motorists. . .

"I think that insurance rates, generally, will go up again not only next year, but the year after that and the year after that. There are only two things that can bring a halt to this steady rise. One is a depression — or at least a good-sized recession — and the other is a war or something similar, which will seriously curtail the amount of driving we do. Needless to say, I am not advocating either, but in simple terms this illustrates that our accident problem and insurance costs are inescapably linked to prosperity, abundancy of cars and increased road travel."

It is inevitable, therefore, the insurance industry is going to increase rates enough to keep up with the increase in accidents and the increase in costs.

In several areas, the accident situation has stabilized enough that we will be able to hold the line. However, in most areas, there will be increases averaging about six percent across the country. Some areas, and one provinces in particular, will have increases that exceed this average considerably. These increases are based on a prediction that the accident explosion is going to be even worse in 1966.

Why are the rates going to keep going up? There are many reasons:

First, most of us are working shorter work weeks and getting longer vacations. We have more time to spend in our automobiles — more chance of getting into accidents.

We have more money in our pockets. We drive a couple of hundred miles without a second thought. Still greater chances of getting into an accident.

More people have cars. Our wives have cars, our children have cars — and now they have imported motor bikes. In a nutshell, that means that the driver must drive in heavier traffic; his odds of being involved in an accident have increased greatly.

Our highways are getting better, so we drive faster. An accident is apt to be more serious than a few years ago. People are making more money. If you ran down a pedestrian in 1945, chances were he made an average of 45 dollars a week. Now we have to pay him an average of 100 dollars a week until he's back to work. Next year, it will probably be 110 dollars.

Cars are getting fancier. The 1966 models look more expensive to fix than the 1965s.

Medical costs are higher and hospital costs are steadily increasing. . . All these cost increases are not nebulous. They're real.

This speaker had a word also for the manufacturer; but of course, they'll never listen! . . .

Reasonably simple changes in automobile design could probably reduce total insurance costs by perhaps 10 percent. Efficient bumpers, bolt-on fenders, and easier-to-repair body panels would be a major help. Supplying replacement parts is a lucrative business for the automobile manufacturers, and it is not expected they will change their ways for the benefit of the insurance companies, or the consumer. Today's cars are extremely expensive to repair. "If you, as a consumer, feel that you are paying too much for your automobile insurance, you might pass the word along to the manufacturers," says this authority.

"If you are in the mood to write letters, you might also put your provincial and local government representatives on your mailing list. These are the people who are ultimately responsible for the quantity and quality of law enforcement. If you can convince these people that the public is genuinely in favor of law enforcement, stiffer fines, and longer license suspensions, I'm sure they will be happy to supply them. It has been proven conclusively that stringent law enforcement can cut the accident rate. Quebec has proved it in the last year or so, and the effect is already beginning to show in car insurance rates."

November, 1880 —

The new siding to the Lachute Paper Mills was commenced yesterday. Now is the time for St. Andrews people to bestir themselves about having the track continued to their village.

Lachute Fall Fair is to be held Tuesday on the grounds opposite the store of Mr. G. L. Meikle.

Mr. Harvey Matthews, of Centerville, has grown on his farm a Swedish turnip weighing 10 lbs.

Brownsburg — Mr. Daniel Smith, our energetic neighbor, has at last got his Powder Mills in working order, and has commenced the manufacture of powder.

It is estimated that two million logs will be cut in the Upper Ottawa this winter, and there will be a 75 percent increase in square-cut timber.

New desks manufactured by McOuat & McRae have been installed in the Brownsburg School House.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

How It All Began

Addressing a group of high school teachers the other night, I was recalling how I entered the . . . uh . . teaching game, business, vocation, profession or racket — what you call it depends on who you are — purely by accident.

I had brought my family to this town one Sunday to have a look at the sights, as we hadn't been here before.

On the way out of town, we drove around the side streets to admire the fine homes. "That's odd," I said to my wife. "There's a big, new factory smack in the middle of the residential section. They don't usually allow that."

Then I saw the roadblock, out in front of the sprawling, one-storey factory. There was a grim gent beside it, well-dressed but with a sort of wild glint in his eye. He flagged me down.

I stopped. He came over to the car. "Can you see out of at least one eye?", he queried. I assured him that I had 40-40 vision, or something of the sort. I thought it was some kind of kooky, plain-clothes-police check, the kind you run into when you've left your driving license in your other pants.

"Ever been to a university?", he shot at me. I said I'd been to Oxford. I remember spending a whole weekend there during the war, waiting for a Land Army girl who never did show up.

He brightened considerably. "Have you any contagious diseases?", was the next question. "Like leprosy?" I told him I was as sound as any man in my condition could be.

Beaming now, he went on with the questionnaire. "And you don't drink, smoke, play the horses or chase women. Right?"

I started to point out that I did all of these whenever possible, but not all the time, and not all at once. But he wasn't listening. He had the car door open and me by the arm, and was hustling me toward that big, brick factory that looked more like a prison every second. I thought I was under arrest.

When we got inside, he shoved me into a chair, and I waited, fearfully, for the bright light in the face, and the rubber hose. But he fooled me. He stuck a confession under my nose and snarled, "Sign there." I signed, wondering what had become of Magna Carta, Habeas Corpus and my family, out in the car.

It was not until he offered to show me the gymnasium and the cafeteria that I realized the factory was a high school, and that I had just experienced the hard sell on teachers.

However, it wasn't much of a switch for me. I know that the jump into teaching, from big industrialist, shoe salesman or short-order cook has been a traumatic experience for some people. You can see them any day, tottering white-faced toward the staff room, after a double period with 10Z, the terror of the school.

But I had little difficulty in making the adjustment. After all, I had been a weekly newspaper editor. In that job, you spend most of your time telling people things they don't listen to, and urging them to do things they don't want to do. I found these invaluable training for my teaching career.

And I must admit that things have gone well. In three years, I fought my way up to a department-headship. Oh, it took a lot of midnight-oil-burning, coffee-buying for the principal, and the fact that they couldn't get anybody else for the job. But I made it.

And now I have my own little empire: a dozen or so English teachers who are so in awe of me that they never borrow more than $10; an assistant department head who hangs on my every word, and then contradicts it; and the thrill of attending department heads' meetings, of being on the inside, where the big decisions are made.

Like what are we gonna do with kids who carve "Herb Loves Elsie" on the desks.

Appreciation for donation of books

The following letter has been forwarded to the executive of the Social Club at Brownsburg:

President and Directors,
Brownsburg Social Club
Gentlemen:

On behalf of the directorate of Le Carrefour du Livre of Lachute, I take this opportunity to thank you, most sincerely, for your contribution of literature from your library.

With our increasing circulation at the Carrefour, we believe you have taken a judicious step to ensure a wider enjoyment of these books. We of the directorate are also very happy over this addition to our English volumes.

Please be assured that your gift is most welcome, and accept herewith our thanks.

Sincerely
Le Carrefour du Livre

THE CAMPAIGN & THE CANDIDATES

Words, But No Answers

Six weeks of campaigning was settled in a few hours of voting Monday and now a post-election euphoria has settled over the country.

But if the election was supposed to have been a Great Debate on the vital issues facing Canada, then the campaign which ended Nov. 8 must go down as the debate which never happened.

For all the frenzied speech-making, how close did the parties come to telling the Canadian people how they would deal with the two main problems of this country — national unity and national survival?

All the candidates, from the party leaders to the least known outback nominees, paid the usual lip service to these questions.

But no one, in the words of Adlai Stevenson, "talked facts to the people."

Perhaps this was what the people sensed in the apathy of the campaign. Where was the party leader ready to take the unpopular stand in the interest of principle? Where was the candidate who was willing to admit that his party had anything but a perfect formula for the problems that face the country?

Let's dissect those two key issues — national unity and national survival — and see how we fared in this recent campaign.

On the question of national unity, it must now be evident that whether English Canada likes it or not, Quebec is going to re-shape Confederation as we have known it since 1867.

The Liberal party, which says it is dedicated to "co-operative federalism," never at any time during the campaign explained just what this means.

Does it mean one set of deals for Quebec and another for the rest of Canada?

As repugnant as this may seem on the surface, this may indeed be the only way to preserve Confederation. Quebec perhaps is going to have to be given a special status, and be allowed to go its own way on many matters. It is already doing this by opting out of certain federal - provincial programs, and setting up its own machinery in such areas as the contributory pension program.

On the other hand, do the Liberals stand for a weaker central government generally by giving all provinces the same latitude as Quebec, so they won't be accused of appeasing French Canada?

A special status for Quebec — which Mr. Diefenbaker has thundered against — may at least be preferable to weakening federal authority over the other nine provinces. But it is politically expedient to keep the voter's mind off such subject.

The Liberal government, during the past two and one-half years, seems to have set Canada on the road to some kind of common market with the United States. The auto trade pact, which was set up in such a way that U.S. companies would permit their Canadian subsidiaries to sell in the U.S., was the prime example of this trend.

But at the same time, finance minister Gordon was following a policy of economic nationalism aimed at securing greater Canadian ownership of our industry.

Are the two aims compatible? Canadian industry needs foreign markets, and the greatest market in the world is just over our border. Can we get into this market without sacrificing our national identity? No one has told us how.

The election just ended may mark a turning point in the personalities of Canadian politics, and perhaps the policies of the parties.

There is every likelihood that within the next three years the Liberal, Conservative and NDP parties will all have new leaders. The events of the next few days may give some indication as to how soon these changes can be expected.

For Parents Only...

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training.

(Copyright)

"Sing a song!"

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Sing a song, Mummy!" the little child begs eagerly. Long before he can talk, he has shown his delight in music by his facial expression. Singing is the natural expression of a happy heart, and many a woman who would never consider herself a soloist creates a musical atmosphere for her little child as she sings at her household tasks.

Some mothers claim they are "no singers". It is silly to be self conscious about the effort of one's singing on a mere baby. A little child is certainly not critical of a mother's singing. Do you remember the songs which your mother sang to you when you were little? Perhaps they were familiar nursery rhymes or snatches of hymns. If you are uncertain about the words or tunes, why not buy a book of songs for little children? Look in any collection of songs in your home for folk songs with which you are familiar.

You will find simple hymns for little children in the hymn book of your church.

There are a number of books which deserve their popularity such as Songs for Little Children (Ryerson Press). Holles Dann's "First Year Music" and "The High Road of Song for Nursery Schools and Kindergartens" collected and arranged by Margaret I Fletcher and M. C. Denison, are happy choices.

If there is a piano in the house, it is a help to pick out tunes and learn phrase by phrase. Match the single notes with your voice, and with practice your confidence in your ability will grow.

A gramophone is also useful in learning a song. Play the record, listen carefully, then hum with the singer before you attempt to sing along with the record.

Many mothers are helping their son or daughter to become bilingual. Ask at the record loaning service desk at a public library or at a music store to hear a small child's record of French songs. An excellent one is Merrily We Sing and Learn French.

The CBC program "Kindergarten of the Air" has many attractive children's songs. Listen to the teacher and you will notice she is singing clearly and naturally, using a light "head tone". A mother knows that in time her child will want to sing. Children are born imitators and that is why it is so important that mother avoids a "chest voice" or any suggestion of shouting a song.

A child's true singing voice is light and delicate, and higher in pitch than his speaking voice.

The baby loves "Pat-a-cake, pat-a-cake, baker's man" and very quickly he will try to clap his little hands together while mother sings. There are many other action songs, such as "This is the way we wash our clothes, so early Monday morning."

Children delight in repetition. You'll never regret singing — an activity that pays dividends to you and your child in happiness you create with your very own effort. There never was a more eager listener or a more appreciative audience than one's small son or daughter when it comes to singing. If you are too busy to sing, better revise your time schedule.

Bake ahead for Christmas

Perhaps it seems a little early to talk about Christmas, but for those of you who have a freezer, baking ahead of time can be great help for the busy days ahead.

Fruit cakes, puddings and many types of cookies can be frozen successfully. The home economists of the Consumer Section once again are issuing a little leaflet on Christmas Baking. This useful leaflet contains tested and approved recipes on desserts and baked foods for your Christmas entertaining. For your free copy, write to Information Division, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. It is suggested that you write early to avoid the Christmas rush.

New regulations on fresh fruit and vegetables

(Consumer Section)

New federal regulations governing the marketing of fresh fruit and vegetables have recently gone into effect in Canada. Although they are similar to those under which the industry has operated for many years, a number of changes have been made so that they can better meet today's needs.

The new regulations provide grade standards for 30 commercially grown fruits and vegetables. They also set marking, packaging and inspection requirements for the produce for interprovincial export and import trade. The new regulations were prepared by the Fruit and Vegetable Division of the Canada Department of Agriculture, in close cooperation with various trade associations of the industry.

In general, there will be just two grades for vegetables, Canada No. 1 and Canada No. 2.

In the case of potatoes, a new requirement for Canada No. 1 grade stipulates that at the time of packing, at least 65% of the potatoes must be free of all defects which would not be removed by peeling. This is a more rigid regulation than previously and should result in a better product reaching the consumer. The present size will not be changed, which is a minimum diameter of 2¼ up to 3¼ inches in round varieties.

Canada No. 1 beets, carrots, onions and parsnips have the size range specified in the new regulations so the size will not be marked unless the vegetables are outside that specified for the grade.

Fruit and vegetables that are marked with the Canada grade name must also be packed in standard packages or containers. Besides the grade name, other information must be included such as net weight for vegetables, variety and box count in the case of apples, pears and peaches, and the name and address of the packer.

In retail stores you may not see the grade marked over a display of fruit or vegetables sold in bulk. The marking of these bulk displays is governed by provincial regulations. Generally, no product below the minimum grade may be offered for sale.

Protect against rheumatic fever

New York, N.Y. (WMNS) — Rheumatic fever can often be prevented, says the American Heart Association, if parents are on the alert for the earliest symptoms which can lead to the serious disease. If your child complains of a sudden sore throat that hurts mostly when he swallows; runs a fever over 101 degrees; has a headache; is nauseated — call your doctor at once. The youngster may have a strep throat, and strep infections can lead to rheumatic fever.

Unlike other childhood diseases, rheumatic fever can strike more than once, and can do serious injury to the heart. Doctors can knock out strep infections fairly easily with penicillin or sulfa drugs, but early treatment is essential. If a child is exposed to scarlet fever, his doctor should be alerted at once. Preventive treatment can ward off complications such as rheumatic fever.

German-style pork chops, cabbage

8 Pork chops, one inch thick; ½ cup chopped onion; 2 tablespoons shortening; 8 cups coarsely shredded green or red cabbage (1 medium head); 4 whole cloves; 1 tablespoon flour or quick-cooking tapioca; ½ small bay leaf; ½ cup sugar; 2 teaspoons salt; ½ cup cider or wine vinegar; ½ cup water; 3 cups diced, tart cooking apples (2 large).

Heat tablespoon of shortening in large fry pan. Brown chops, both sides, over moderate heat. Turn chops once; add cloves, bay leaf, one teaspoon salt and ¼ cup water. Cover tightly, and cook over moderate heat for 30 minutes. Heat remaining tablespoon of shortening in a Dutch oven. Add apples, onion and cabbage; mix. Stir in vinegar and remaining water. Pour over cabbage; mix. Cover and cook until cabbage is limp, stirring occasionally. Arrange pork chops on cabbage; pour pan drippings over cabbage. Cover and cook slowly until both chops and cabbage are fork tender, about 45 minutes. Yield — about 8 servings.

Next triennial ACWW conference in United States

The next triennial conference of the Associated Country Women of the World will be held in the United States, 1968 — it was announced following the recent conference in Dublin.

Discussion was held on the conference agreement to support Unesco Gift Coupon Scheme No. 390. Two specific proposals were considered under this plan: a nutrition and child welfare training centre in Colombia, South America, submitted by the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada; and a literacy campaign in emerging countries, proposed by the National Federation of Women's Institutes, England.

The capital fund of the Lady Aberdeen Scholarship Memorial Fund was closed at £25,000, the interest to be used to provide scholarships for selected women from developing countries to carry on their studies in nutrition and child welfare. The expendable portion of the fund will be used for village training projects. Two are successfully operating at the present time in India and Rhodesia.

Mrs. Aroti Dutt, India, was unanimously elected ACWW president. Mrs. Dutt has served as the area vice-president for Asia during the past term and has had long experience in the work in her own country and abroad. In her message for the new Triennium, Mrs. Dutt states: "Let us work not to be just a minor detail in the beautiful tapestry of social welfare in many lands, but to be a vital part for the progress of women both at national and international levels".

Bulletin warns against fire

The current bulletin of C.I.P. Woods Notes, from Grenville, echoes another warning against fire hazards:

The radio and newspapers communicate to us daily the all too numerous and disastrous fires which occur in the homes of friends, neighbors and others. Who will be next? . . . Let us be ever on the alert against fires and carry out the following preventive measures as a step in the direction of safety:

1. Ascertain that your chimney, pipes, and flue passages are clear.

2. Always shield a fireplace with a screen to stop flying embers. Try not to use resinous wood for fuel; they are liable to form potentially dangerous soot deposits in the chimney.

3. Covered metal containers are a must when emptying ash trays and fuel ashes. This applies also to all oily, greasy or paint-smeared rags, since they can burst into flames all by themselves.

4. Check your premises for fire hazards every day, and particularly after a party.

5. Accumulations of old newspapers, magazines and broken furniture are food for a hungry fire which could break out.

Sugar is more than a sweetener

Every woman can cook. Many women are artists in the kitchen. Good cooking is an art, but it can be done even better with an understanding of the "reasons why food acts as it does", and fewer failures are the happy result.

For instance, if one knows the laws which govern the creaminess of fudge, the stability of mayonnaise, the volume of whipped cream, the smoothness of gravies, the consistency of jam, the texture of bread, one can apply these laws to an understanding of many phases of the art of cooking in her kitchen.

Take sugar for example. You use it every day. What role does it play in the art (or science) of baking and cooking? That luscious butter cake you made — it was light and high, with a tender even crumb and it had a slightly crisp, golden-brown surface. How did it get these qualities? With sugar.

Sugar tenderizes the rough gluten fibres in flour, it caramelizes at oven temperatures. And when creamed with butter, air is incorporated for height of cake and lightness.

Sugar is also essential in bread making. It is much more than a sweetener. It provides a fast-working nourishment for the growth of yeast so that the dough rises. It tenderizes the gluten strands to produce a tender, even crumb — and it caramelizes to give that golden, crisp crust that makes "bread baked with the art of baking" so appetizing.

Sugar also performs chemical and physical functions in cooking, as well as baking. It prevents weeping in custards and similar cooked egg dishes, for instance, because of its action on egg protein.

Sugar prevents lumping in puddings, sauces and pie fillings by dispersing the starch granules, and it prevents shrinkage in meringues because it stabilizes the egg white foam.

Truly, cooking and baking are arts; and sugar is more than just a sweetener.

The Lachute Watchman

Before you join a volunteer organization, you should decide what your motives are. You should want to do the work, not just join because it is the thing.

You should know whether the group you are considering is a give organization — a club interested primarily in helping people — or a take organization, which may help the community but also offers prestige and intellectual gain to a member.

This is a sample of the advice which opens Three Cheers for Volunteers, a handbook for volunteers and their organizations written by Mrs. Egmont Frankel.

Based on Experience

Mrs. Frankel has based her book on her 35 years' experience as a club woman. She has worked for the Red Cross, Victory loan campaigns, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and Art Gallery. She is, perhaps, best known for her work with the Canadian Cancer Society, to which she now devotes all her time.

She formed the women's service committee of the Toronto branch in 1949. Last year her work with cancer volunteers made her the first Canadian to be honored with membership in the National Institute of Social Sciences in the United States.

Once you have assessed your own motives, Mrs. Frankel says you should assess the organization. Her own yardstick has measured groups in three ways. Does the organization contribute to the well-being of the community? Does it develop itself and its members as well as improve a situation? Will it continue and expand its record of service?

She says a volunteer needs the support of her family and needs to concentrate on one or a few activities and not spread herself too thin through several organizations.

Find Good People

The book discusses the mechanics of clubs — how to organize, how to run a meeting, an annual convention, publicity campaigns.

In her chapter on the makings of a strong organization, Mrs. Frankel returns to the importance of the individual and her motives.

She suggests volunteers be given a complete indoctrination into the aims and purposes of the club. Depending on the kind of work she is doing, she may find a job description or individual job training useful. The more she knows, the more valuable and stable a member she will be.

She says she considers meetings and occasions useful to give members an opportunity to know one another and to make membership fun. They should also enjoy themselves and be encouraged to keep their enthusiasm.

Vociferous youth takes a hand —

Division in Council over Barron property Mayor casts deciding vote for take-over

There have been packed audiences at Lachute's council meetings on rare occasions in the past, when big issues were under discussion, or matters affecting a certain segment of the population. But never has there been a spectatorship of the nature seen last Wednesday, at an adjourned meeting of the council — for these were mostly young people, who had taken a sudden interest in civic affairs. As compared to the 150 school students and youthful citizens in attendance, there were only about 20 adults.

This turn of events had all the earmarks of pre-arrangement at an earlier conclave of the participants, and the reason was self-evident — in the business on the agenda. This was the proposal fathered by Mayor Saindon, to purchase or to homologate the vacant Barron property opposite the city hall.

It was really the "mayor's night" . . . for he was loudly applauded by the junior citizens at several points in the proceedings. Their enthusiasm for the town's acquisition of the Barron property was traceable to the mayor's scheme to develop a complex with a public park and civic centre; the latter, he has visualized as headquarters for the Centre d'Art and the Carrefour du Livre.

There were numerous youth groups represented in the audience — the Catholic schools, young workers' organizations, male and female, not to mention the adult representation, from the two cultural enterprises mentioned, also the Taxpayers' League and the Textile Union.

Debate and Divided Vote

According to Mayor Dr. Saindon, the municipality has nothing to lose by homologating this land; and he relieved the misgivings of his fellow councillors by telling them he had sought legal advice by telephone, and was assured that the proprietors had no recourse if the municipality sees fit to proceed with homologation.

This assurance, however, did not quell the opposition, and when the proposal was voted upon, Aldermen L. Armstrong, Dr. R. A. Dumais, Dr. L. Middleton and Edmund McFaul were against the measure. There was a four-man vote in favor—Aldermen F. Charlebois, Masson, Belanger and Gibeault — and Mayor Saindon cast a deciding vote to break the impasse. (Ald. Laurier Carrière was absent from the meeting.

The resolution proposes that the municipality take necessary steps for the homologation, and passing of a by-law to this effect.

The decision was noisily applauded. The audience, in fact, had been by no means conspicuous for its forbearance. There had been murmuring and heckling which at times had drowned-out the councillors' opinions, and many of the remarks had been unfitting to the decorum of a council chamber.

To implement this measure, the procedures now to be taken are—(1) preparation of the by-law; (2) marking of the land by a qualified surveyor; and (3) passing of the by-law in municipal council.

Contract given for paving of Hamford Street

The contract for the paving of Hamford Street was awarded by the Council to Benoit Morrissette. The price, $15,910 for a four-inch depth of crushed stone, was the lower of two bids submitted. The paving will be full-width to the sidewalks, for a length of 2,700 feet. The tender includes the felling of about 10 trees and the construction of 10 manholes.

This business at the council table was not all plain sailing. There was considerable debate, as certain aldermen felt that Lachute should do the job and collect from Ayersville later, while others thought that Ayersville should pay the contractor in part, direct. This latter plan was finally adopted, on a divided vote.

The proposal that Lachute should be responsible for the bill, was supported by Aldermen Charlebois, Masson and Belanger, while opposed to this were a majority comprising Aldermen Middleton, Armstrong, Carrière, Dumais and McFaul.

The secretary was instructed to write the Quebec Roads Department and thank them in connection with the paving of certain streets in the south-east section of the town, known as the Cruise development.

Car in which Jean-Paul Roy, of Carillon, was killed last Saturday on the Lachute-St. Andrews Road. The driver, Raoul Castonguay, of Montreal, was critically injured and is in hospital at St. Jerome. — Photo, Syd Drew

Killed instantly in car crash

A Carillon man, Jean-Paul Roy, met sudden death in a highway tragedy last Saturday afternoon on the Lachute-St. Andrews road.

Roy, the 37-year-old father of three daughters, was riding with his brother-in-law, Raoul Castonguay, of Montreal, returning from a hunting trip — when the driver lost control of his auto on the wet pavement and the car catapulted off the road, rolling over. The mishap occurred around 1 p.m., in a rainstorm. Jean-Paul Roy was killed instantly. Castonguay was taken to the Argenteuil Hospital with a fractured pelvis and other injuries; he was later removed to the Hotel Dieu at St. Jerome.

The dead man is mourned by his wife, the former Marielle Laverrière, and three daughters, Jasmine, Manon and Sylvie; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jules Roy; a brother and three sisters, residing in Carillon and Montreal.

Funeral rites were held at St. Joseph parish church in Carillon on Tuesday morning.

Official recount gives Regimbal 2,459 majority

The official majority of Roger E. Regimbal, successful Progressive-Conservative candidate in this constituency, was 2,459 votes over his nearest opponent, Vincent Drouin, Liberal (and retiring M.P.)

The official count of ballots for the two-county riding, Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes, was made Tuesday at the office of the District Returning Officer, Dr. Jean-Paul Dorion. The following figures were released for the four contending candidates (in alphabetical order):

Champagne	1,805
Drouin	11,576
Orr	2,174
Regimbal	14,035
Rejected	404
Majority (Regimbal)	2,459

At the official recount, Mr. Regimbal was represented by Bernard Corbo, Yvon Saint-Denis and Fernand Dion; while Mr. Drouin was represented by Notary Richard Valois. The remaining candidates were not represented. The D.R.O. was assisted by the election secretary, Guy Lafortune.

County W. Inst. branches report topics and programs in November

Arundel. — The roll-call of Arundel W.I. was answered by each member giving her chosen vocation should she be graduating today. Mrs. T. C. Stuart, a member, showed slides on her recent trip to Yucatan, including views of the ruins of Mayan and other spots of interest. The members discussed a donation of a new projector to the High School.

Brownsburg meeting was under leadership of the Citizenship convener, who conducted an interesting quiz on the Women's Institute, its origin and worthwhile projects. Members answered the roll-call by buying a poppy for Remembrance Day. Each member brought in a box of cookies to be sent to the Veterans' Hospital.

Dalesville-Louisa members were entertained by ladies of the Jerusalem-Bethany Branch.

Frontier — had as their roll-call an unusual incident related by each member. The program included a demonstration on cake decorating.

Lachute members heard a very interesting talk on the United Church Montreal Home for Elderly People, by Mr. W. B. Younkie, president of that institution.

Lakefield branch held a lengthy discussion on the Women's Institute's interest in helping build a Senior Citizens' Home. The list of Lachute Fair handicrafts was read.

Morin Heights branch viewed slides shown by Miss Heather Campbell, R.N., on her trip to the Nurses' Conference held in Germany. Bean-bags were made for the High School, also gifts for the Moore Home.

Pioneer meeting, arranged by the Citizenship convener, had the Rev. W. C. LeCras of Lachute read an address entitled, "The Apple", given by the late Canon A. Shatford to the Quebec Pomological Society. Although this address was given many years ago, it was as timely as if it was composed yesterday. Naming "an important woman" was their roll-call. The branch heard a report on the semi-annual convention and a meeting on the Senior Citizens' Home.

Pioneer members ordered UNICEF cards. Patterns and nylons were collected.

Jerusalem-Bethany branch had slides on the wild flowers of Argenteuil, shown by Dr. G. R. Rigby. The roll-call was answered by tips on floor care. The County president spoke briefly, and each member bought a poppy.

Upper Lachute-East End answered their roll-call by buying a poppy. They also entertained the Frontier Branch, and had as their guests Mrs. Chas. Hall and Miss Rosa Rodriguez, of Mexico. Reports were given on the semi-annual convention, also Mr. W. B. Younkie's talk to Lachute W.I. on rules and legal aspects concerning a Senior Citizens' Home. Films were shown by a representative of Clark's Foods Ltd., on "Time to Spill the Beans". Each member received a gift of assorted samples of the Company's products. Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Cunningham led a lively singsong, and Miss R. Rodriguez sang a couple of Mexican numbers.

Chinese laundry closing business

Charlie Fung, laundryman, wishes to announce to his many customers that his business will be closed for further laundering on Friday, November 26. All laundry must be picked up before December 4, as he is leaving with his son on a trip to Hong Kong, China.

As Mr. Fung will no longer be in the laundry business, the house and property at 474 Lafleur Street will be for sale, together with equipment if desired. (Any interested may apply at the premises.)

Buckingham to join protest

The town council of Buckingham decided to delegate their mayor, Ulyses Tremblay, and two aldermen to the Transport Board hearing in Lachute, November 30, to protest the proposed discontinuance of the Ottawa North shore train service.

The municipalities of Lachute, Ayersville, Brownsburg, Ste. Scholastique, also the regional and several local Chambers of Commerce, will be represented at this sitting, which was arranged by the ex-M.P., Vincent Drouin.

This is the second time in the past two years that the C.P.R. has asked authority to discontinue the local passenger service.

Moreau mayor for interim, amalgamation to election

It has been formally agreed and voted upon — in conformity with the Act for Voluntary Amalgamation — Rodolphe Moreau, mayor of Ayersville, will be protem mayor of the City of Lachute, from the date of the amalgamation decree until the election of a new council.

The decision was taken by the two municipal councils behind closed doors, holding a secret ballot. Mr. Moreau will be acting mayor, and Dr. Zoel Saindon promayor, for the interim period between the decree and the formal election.

Immediately on amalgamation the two councils will be dissolved, and the taxpayers of the two areas, now to be "joined as one", will vote to elect a mayor and six aldermen, all for a four-year mandate.

For balloting on the pro-tem mayor and pro-mayor, last week, Ronald Hébert (town secretary of Lachute) was the election officer and Rémi Raymond (secretary of Ayersville) was the election secretary. The full membership of both councils, 17 all told, were present for this necessary procedure.

'Father' Brosseau, Catholic prelate and well-loved cleric, died at Montebello

At his residence in Montebello last Wednesday, Monsignor H. D. J. Brosseau, dean of the Catholic clergy in the diocese of Hull, Que., passed to his reward at the ripe age of 81. He was a former parish priest at Grenville, and in this capacity won wide respect and acquaintance in this County.

"Father Brosseau", as he was affectionately known, was born 1884 at Turton, in the United States, received his classical education in Chicago, and studied Theology in Montreal. He was ordained in 1909 and became priest at Vinton in 1910. He served successively in the diocese of Haileybury (now Timmins), from 1912 to 1919; at the University of Ottawa, where he was a professor from 1919 to 1923; in Grenville (then in the Ottawa diocese) from 1929 to 1943; and as parish priest at Montebello, from 1943 to 1957. He retired from the priesthood and continued residing in that town.

He was appointed an honorary canon of the Ottawa diocese in 1942, and a domestic prelate in 1946.

From the years of his priesthood at Grenville he was in demand at club meetings and social functions as guest speaker, and he radiated a charm and philosophy which left a long impression on his audiences.

Funeral rites were held Monday morning in the Notre-Dame-du-Bon-Secours Church in the parish of Montebello. Many old friends from this district paid their last tribute to this lovable and memorable figure.

Msgr. Hector David Brosseau

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

A correction in the election results reported last week reverses the majority in one particular poll, No. 22, at Joseph Caron's, Brownsburg Road. The vote here was — Champagne 5; Drouin 85; Orr 21; Regimbal 138 (not 38, as reported). The Watchman apologizes particularly to the voters of this poll. The error was made in taking down the returns at the D.R.O.'s office.

UNICEF Hallowe'en handouts received by the Protestant school children of Lachute, were reported by Mrs. C. Butterfield to have totalled $322.65. . . Meanwhile, the children from the three Catholic schools in Lachute collected $339.20. Altogether this represents a sizeable effort for the underprivileged youngsters of other lands.

Remembrance fittingly observed at Morin Heights

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — Remembrance Day was fittingly observed in Morin Heights on Thursday last, November 11. A parade composed of members of the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 171, with color party and wreath bearers, commanded by Legionnaire E. W. Kneeland; a 36-member unit of the R.C.A.F. Station, Lac St. Denis, under the command of F/L Woodcock; and the band from the Boys' Farm, Shawbridge, commanded by Capt. Whiteway — formed up at 10.15 a.m. in the village, with Legionnaire Mark Sims as marshal. The parade proceeded to the Elementary School for the Remembrance Day service, which was jointly conducted by the Rev. Horace Baugh (Anglican), the Rev. Ronald McCullough (United), and Father Geraldeau (Roman Catholic), each of whom addressed the audience — the assembly consisting of local citizens, visitors, and members of the senior grades of the school. A two-minute silence was observed, while "Last Post" and "Reveille" were sounded.

Following the service the parade proceeded to Hillcrest Cemetery for the laying of the wreaths and dedication of the newly-erected Legion Memorial. Continuing, the parade, en route to the Legion Hall, passed the saluting base, where the salute was taken by Squadron Leader H. J. McGill, Officer Commanding R.C.A.F. Station, Lac St. Denis. With him on the platform were the Mayor of Morin Heights, Mr. George Watchorn, and Legion President Paul Poirier.

The parade was dismissed at the Legion Hall, where all assembled were guests of the Branch for lunch (cafeteria style) prepared by the ladies of the Branch.

Servicemen voted in favor of Drouin (Lib.)

The military services' vote for Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes gave a plurality to Vincent Drouin, the Liberal candidate, but the result had no effect on Roger Regimbal's victory for the Progressive-Conservative colors, nor upon his majority election to parliament.

The servicemen's vote, according to Dr. J.-P. Dorion, District Returning Officer, was as follows:

Champagne	5
Drouin	104
Orr	10
Regimbal	28
Rejected	1

In all, 148 servicemen, their wives and dependents of voting age, exercised the franchise for this constituency.

The standing of the parties in the House of Commons is now given as follows:

Liberals	131
Prog. Cons.	97
N.D.P.	21
Créditistes	9
Social Credit	5
Independent	2

'Centennial Rose' project described, Rotary-sponsored aid for Retarded

A new and beautiful flower, the "Canadian Centennial Rose", proved an interesting and picturesque subject for the special Rotary Ladies' Night meeting at La Lorraine Motel, last Thursday.

Speaker Jack McIntyre, vice-president of the Rotary Club of Montreal-Lakeshore, originator of the idea of a Canadian Centennial Rose, showed beautifully colored slides of various roses and rose gardens. He told the story of the development, from an idea to a concrete project, which will not only beautify Canada and the Expo site, but will benefit the handicapped youth of Canada as well. A rose lover all his life, much more so than the average enthusiast, Mr. McIntyre as vice-president and governor of the Montreal Park Cemetery has developed a rose garden with 4,000 plants.

"A rose is a rose," etc. — but in Jack's experience they have very special powers. A married man with three children, he told of winning his wife by sending her a single rose, every Saturday for weeks and weeks, in spite of her engagement to another at the start.

To select a truly beautiful flower that would be hardy for all areas in Canada, several were chosen from test-plots of hybrids, and finally, all were eliminated except three outstanding varieties. These were sent to 27 test gardens from coast to coast in Canada, including the Montreal Botanical Garden. Visitors to these showplaces dropped thousands of ballots in favor of their choice.

The Canadian Centennial Rose, the winner, is a real beauty, with all the prospects of being one of the best floribunda roses ever created. It has rich, warm, orange-coral 2" to 3" blooms in great profusion throughout the year.

Having registered the name "Centennial Rose", the Rotary Club of Montreal-Lakeshore has set up a Foundation whereby the profits will be used in research work for mentally retarded and disturbed children. Thus, people wishing to help this worthy project and to have a beautiful memorial in their own garden, reminding them of their good deed, may contact any Rotarian. Plants with complete instructions are to be shipped for 1966 early blooming.

This rose and its motif for the Centennial Year, is being rapidly accepted by manufacturers of such items as clothing, table linen, china, etc., to further help the good work of the Foundation.

Not content with the Centennial Rose project, the Montreal-Lakeshore Rotary Club is sponsoring an International Rose Garden at Expo 67. On a four-acre plot set aside for the purpose, they are to plant 100 varieties of roses, one from each country. They are doing this with the co-operation of Rotary Clubs in these countries.

The enthusiasm of the speaker was catching, especially in view of the worthiness of the project. There are so many negative, destructive things happening in the world today, that people are glad to support constructive effort, especially when it adds beauty, and helps handicapped youth.

The immediate thought among the audience was of the persons to whom they could send a rose for Christmas (a certificate — with the rose bush to come in early 1966).

The speaker was introduced by Berry Bourne and thanked by Linton Armstrong.

Appreciation of the ladies for having been invited on this occasion, was expressed to President Tom Johnston by Mrs. John Hamilton.

The Rotary program of the previous week consisted of interesting colored movies with comments by a local businessman, Colin McOuat. He and Garth Boyd formed part of a hunting and fishing group that flew from Montreal to Fort Chimo and took side trips by boat and plane in the George River — Ungava Bay area of Northern Quebec. With Eskimo guides they were very successful in obtaining various species of Arctic char, a splendid game fish, and choice caribou.

Rotary Vice-President Reed Reynolds presided the meeting being held as usual at the Motel.

Quebec reactions to Fed'l election outcome

"Quebec This Week" — by the Canadian Press

The indecisive federal election has proved a fertile ground for comment in Quebec this week, although Province of Quebec leaders have not all seen eye to eye on the question.

One of the most striking differences is the expressed opinions of Premier Jean Lesage and that of Finance Minister Kierans.

Mr. Lesage showed his sorrow after the election last week by saying that he was unhappy with the fact that the Liberals had only a minority government. His cabinet minister, Mr. Kierans, stated clearly that he preferred a minority government. The basis for Mr. Kierans' contention is his expressed belief that a majority government in Ottawa would have been more dictatorial in its policy, especially in the field of tax sharing.

Mr. Lesage, however, was worried about the result because of the regional nature of the government it has produced. "It worries me that the present government now has the majority of its seats in Quebec and Ontario," the Quebec leader said.

The election turned over 55 Quebec Province seats to the Liberals, and Ontario contributed the bulk of the remaining seats as it chipped in with 50 Liberal victors.

Commenting further on the regional character of the Liberal vote, Mr. Lesage said following the election that his Western Canada trip had brought forward certain facts. "At the end of my trip I emphasized that the area which seemed to have least understanding of the message I took to Western Canada was located between Brandon, Manitoba, and the Rockies." . . The Conservatives scored heavily in this region during last week's election.

"I don't know the relation between the result of the vote and what I noted in the prairies. I cannot for the moment come up with a diagnosis," he said.

However, other government leaders were willing to come up with a diagnosis, and maintained the trouble came straight from the top. The Conservatives' top Quebec organizer, Rodrigue Bourdages, said both Mr. Diefenbaker and Prime Minister Pearson had reached the end of the line. "What's needed is not another election, but a convention to choose a new leader" for both parties, Mr. Bourdages said in an interview. He said the election showed the people had rejected the leaders of both major national parties.

By BOB ATCHISON

For some time now I have been watching for signs of the Chukar partridge, released in this area some time ago. I had not seen any of these birds, and heard only reports, at second hand. This week has been different though. Going down to town the other day, I spotted a few of them on the side of the road picking up gravel; I had passed them before I realized what they were. They did not even shy away when I backed up; however, I couldn't get as close as I would have liked. There appeared to be five of them in the covey, but maybe there were more in the area. They looked to be in very good condition, fat and sassy. . . Then on Wednesday I received a letter from a Montrealer who had been shooting up near Lakefield; he had shot a bird he wasn't too sure about, and decided to send me some feathers to try and identify it. Fortunately the feathers were all from the head and upper part of the breast, making it easy to pinpoint this bird as a Chukar. All the sightings have been in open country, so it looks as though they have travelled some distance, this past little while. . . Another call was from a lady whose family had been out Sunday walking around the St. Philippe area, and saw dozens of birds that she thought were partridge, but much smaller than our natives. In all probability these were Hungarians, and there must be an awful lot of them, as I gathered some of the flocks had 50 birds in them. It's been a long time since anything like this was reported in the district.

Post-mortems are already in the conversation, about the lack of deer in this County; this of course always happens after the season has closed — but never before. From all the talk, I believe that most of the deer hunters have just awakened to the fact that we don't have any! This has been long in coming, but it has finally hit home. Now, maybe something can be done about the game situation. All kinds of proposals are being put forward, some of them really drastic — and this is what will have to happen, drastic remedies. We have gone much too far for half-way or half-hearted attempts to bring back the game. In my humble opinion now, we will have to close down all forms of hunting for at least three years, and then have it opened only on a restricted season; also a buck law of some sort. Hearing tales of parties being out for four or five days, travelling miles, only to come back without even seeing a deer, is a tough way to learn that we "game hogs" have at last got our come-uppance. Now let's hope that this won't all be forgotten until next season; let's start doing something now, while the time is ripe. There is no use in having petitions sent in to the government just before the season opens. DO IT NOW.

Another thing I would like to mention: We know there is a certain satisfaction to anyone killing a bear, and there seem to have been a number killed in the district this past fall. I wonder if anyone ever stops to think what they are going to do with it once they have killed it? In most cases it is left right where it was shot (after all the pictures have been taken). If they do skin it out for a bear rug, they sure get a wallop when they find out how much it costs to have it cured; believe me, it's not cheap. Another thing, some people say they like to eat bear meat; they can have all this variety of meat I have been offered, at any time. It is far cheaper to go and buy some rancid hamburger, get a good supply of rancid lard, cook the whole mess in an open boiler in your house, then eat it. (That is, if you can get in your house with the smell.) A good grade of sawdust will do the same, with a lot less trouble; it "eats" about the same too.

So many people think that these animals will attack on sight. This is far from true; in almost every case a bear is only too glad to get away from humans. Of course, if the animal has cubs and you happen to get in the way of them, then take off with all the speed you can. The mother bear will be right behind you to help you on your way. But just consider this; don't all mothers try to protect their young? Even we humans do this, it's instinctive.

As most bird lovers know, we are getting great numbers of newcomers just now. But even some of the more hardy summer birds are still with us, robins, grackles and so on. Right now there seem to be plenty of sparrows too. As you know, for the last few years we have been fortunate in having different birds stop over; these are not normally stoppers, but for some reason they have stayed over. Theories have been advanced as to why they are here, but we ordinary humans will never know. The lack of ducks is still very noticeable, and for this year we have "had it". Maybe next year too, unless the ducks get a break one way or another. Even the goose shooting was not good down in the Gulf, so it may be that stricter controls will have to be placed on these birds.

A newcomer to Lachute was kind enough to write me about birds she had coming to her feeders. From the letter, this lady seems to take a great interest in everything in this natural state. I believe most of our citizens do too. The more people who realize that our wildlife is a great attraction, the better we will be in the way of visitors. Believe it or not, things like this do bring in tourists. Our greatest resources are in the wild state, yet seemingly, we destroy them in every way we can.

I have often written about the dangers of being in the bush without a compass, especially if you happen to be alone. I met a man the other day who had spent 17 hours in the bush, lost and alone. He came in for a good compass, and for this I don't blame him. From the story, it was a fairly rough experience — nothing to eat, no dry clothing, not even waterproof boots; but I think the crowning point was that he had no idea how rough the country was before he set out. The only thing he knew about the territory was from what he had been told; and this, to me, is sure asking for trouble. However, he was none the worse, except for ruffled feelings — and I'll bet, some anxiety; so he was exceedingly lucky. It's a hard way to learn a lesson.

I have heard all kinds of talk on wolves, but so far nothing really definite on killings. The situation does seem to be much worse than in former years, so you shooters going after deer, forget them and take a crack at the wolf. If you do happen to get one, then you can consider yourself a good hunter. It's not often these animals are shot, unless luck plays a part.

LACHUTE 1884 CURLING CLUB

The Match Committee bonspiel, as always, opened the season's play in the Lachute Curling Club. The playdowns for this bonspiel were run off last week. There were games which provided interest-holding attention, but we are sorry to say, there were a number of games taken by default. This is not a healthy condition with which to commence a winter's curling. A serious appeal is made to all members, to do their utmost to show up for all games they are drawn in. The rinks which win by a default still suffer the disappointment of being denied the pleasure of the game, so "Thirds", please make sure there is a rink turned out to give your opponents their game.

The successful rink in the Match Committee bonspiel was skipped by Syd Drew, with Alex Vessie third, Carl Rodger second, and Harvey Kerr lead. Congratulations. . . J. Romeo Charron, Art Lobel, Lester Cheslock and Bud MacGeorge were the unsuccessful contenders.

Saturday curling, under the able direction of Stewart Jones and Norma Rogers, is making the anticipated level. Norma and Stewart are doing a grand job, and I am sure their effort is appreciated by all members.

This week the Turkey bonspiel playdowns are on the rinks. This is one of the most popular bonspiels in the club, and one that can provide a tasty dinner! The first round draw of the Club championship bonspiel also got underway this week, the games being intermingled with the Turkey bonspiel. Both of these events stimulate keen rivalry, which in turn can produce down-to-the-last-rock curling which is a pleasure to watch. Come and support your fellow members on your non-curling nights.

Spend a social afternoon on Sundays with your full family and friends. Enjoy friendly curling; the younger ones can watch television. The entire facilities of the club are there for your convenience, so take advantage! Dave Campbell, chairman, with Mary Preece, Norma Rogers and Bill Haldimand in support, intend later in the season to have games scheduled for Sunday afternoons with visiting rinks from clubs in the district. Also, if enough interest is displayed by members, a mixed bonspiel will be drawn up. Why let Sundays be a drag; come enjoy a pleasant chat, a game of bridge or thirty-one, or a four-end game.

Five new members are to be welcomed to the club — Bill Steeves, lawyer and native of Lachute; Dan Carriere, also a native and the son of our 1960-61 president, Leopold Carriere; Ferd Malenfant, a guest last week, now a member (he liked what he saw) — Ferd is employed at J. C. Wilson; Bev Watson, a fair golfer and longtime resident in this district — Bev is employed in C-I-L Brownsburg; Gaston Laroche, a newcomer to Lachute — Gaston is the manager of the new distribution service of Molson's. . . Good curling and pleasant participation in the Lachute Curling Club!

MUTUAL

One of the few things men and women have in common is an interest in the opposite sex.

Ladies' curling

Please keep in mind the Ladies' "Invitation" bonspiel, which takes place on November 22 to 25. All members are invited to view the these, and as there are always some very exciting ends to "plate-glass" skip, it is sure to be most enjoyable. On the final day, tea will be served, and again this year, the men's club are hosting a sherry party for us. We all remember what a success this was last year, and it is a day to look forward to . . . Thanks, in advance, Gentlemen!

On November 30 — Friendly bonspiel; and this day also will include the December tea.

With a good entry of rinks participating in the "Doubles" bonspiel, we extend our congratulations to Mrs. Pearl Cairns and Enid Bradley as the winners. The runners-up deserve congratulations also — Mrs. Lydia Scott and Mrs. Bobby McFaul.

The "Singles" are now in progress, and all eyes are on Leona MacKimmie. Can she win it again for this year? She created a record by winning last year for the sixth time.

Closing event in Fish, Hunt Assocn.

A soiree to close the season's activities of the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association will be held December 4 in Lachute Auditorium, with dancing, a drawing for door prizes, and distribution of trophies.

Tickets ($1) are reserved for members until November 27, after which they will go on sale to the general public.

The deer hunting season concludes November 21 in this area, and November 28 in certain other districts. Members may register ducks, partridge, rabbits for the trophy competition, also deer taken in permitted areas, up to November 28.

Machine measures bumps in highway

Regina (CP) — The Saskatchewan department of highways has spent $15,000 on a "profilometer" to measure the bumping of roads.

The many-wheeled machine records the smoothness of the paving and draws a profile picture of the top surface.

"With this information, engineers hope to determine what factors influence riding quality and provide paved surfaces which will remain smoother for longer periods of time," said Gordon Grant, minister of highways.

Motor Sport Club News

The final meeting of the Lachute Motor Sport Club was held on Friday, November 12. On the same evening, the second meeting of "Lachute Motor Sport Club Incorporated" was called to order. . . During September of this year a charter was granted by the provincial government, and the first meeting of the newly-formed corporation was held October 23, to accept by-laws and pass other business relative to the organization. The club known as the Lachute Motor Sport Club was dissolved officially on November 12, and interested members will continue activities under the organization, The Lachute Motor Sport Club, Inc.

A review of actiivties and events since its inaugural meeting on January 25 of this year, indicates that the organization has been extremely active. The first club event was held February 13 in the form of a Winter Rally; 28 entries participated in this event. Four other rallies have been organized since — a Spring Rally in April, a 140-mile Summer Rally in August, a hilarious Fun Rally on Labour Day week-end, and a Fall Rally on November 5. LMSC has established a reputation among rallyists from the Montreal area for accuracy, well selected routes and originality in the set-up. Other events relating to motor sport have included a Gymkhana (driving skill test) held May 22 and an Economy Run on October 16. In April, LMSC sponsored an Easter teen-age dance, thus performing a public service in providing supervised recreation for young citizens. On June 5 members and friends travelled to Mosport, Ont., to witness the "Players 200". During the summer months various members contributed funds, material and time in order to build a stock car. Although not ready to race until the middle of the season, the car, with President Dave Pollock, at the wheel, earned first-place prize money in July at the Lapensée track near Vankleek Hill. Any LMSC member in good standing is permitted to race the stock car after having passed a driving test. LMSC meetings during the past year have been interesting and varied. Numerous films have been shown regarding racing and rallying. Members were entertained at a meeting October 29 by a special guest speaker, Dr. James Luce, from Hawkesbury. Dr. Luce is a 1963 Shell 4000 Rally veteran.

Future LMSC Inc. plans include another rally to be staged in December, ice racing with the stock car, and a Winter Rally to be held early in the new year. The club has been accepted to act as check-point officials regarding the 1966 Shell 4000 Rally during April, 1966. The next club meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Friday, November 26, at the Legion Hall, Lachute. Any individual interested in motor sport, who would like to find out more about the organization, is invited to attend.

Fall Rally

At 7.45 p.m., Friday, November 5, the first car took off from Mel Wilson's BP Service Station on a 70-mile, 2½ hour rally. The route wound its way through Dunany, Shrewsbury, Mille Isles, Rivière Gagnon, St. Jerome, ending in the St. Colomban area. In the 14 entries were crews from the Jaguar Owners Association of Westmount, and the Club Auto-Sport Metropolitain from Montreal. All vehicles were required to pass a safety check. First Aid kits and safety flares were compulsory equipment. The rally was classified as a novice-intermediate type, incorporating average speeds and a straight line map. The crew of Don Jackson and Harvey Hoare captured first place, with only nine points lost. In keeping with LMSC standards of accuracy the rally chairman, Dave Heggie, and his committee comprising Don Smith and Bill Vincent, are to be commended on this well-organized and error-free rally.

Is scuba diving your sport?

Chicago, Ill. (WMNS) — Scuba diving, one of the fastest growing sports in the country, is also one of the most strenuous. A recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association recommends the following caution for those interested in taking up the sport:

— People with heart or arterial disease should avoid the sport, as should those with high blood pressure or chronic respiratory diseases such as bronchitis and asthma.

— Anyone over 40 should have a complete general checkup before going scuba diving.

— Those with middle ear infections or with perforated ear drums should bypass scuba diving, as should anyone with a history of epilepsy or of attacks of unconsciousness.

Scuba diving, it would appear, is for those in near-perfect health.

Wildlife Fed'n annual conference in Quebec Dec. 3-5

Montreal — The Quebec Wildlife Federation will hold its 20th annual convention in Quebec City on December 3-5. Theme of the 1965 convention will be, "Controlled Hunting and How it May Affect the Sport in Quebec".

The Hon. Dr. Alphonse Couturier, Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game, will address the delegates at the closing luncheon on Sunday, December 5.

This 20th convention will highlight the projects conducted by fish and game associations and clubs in the field of conservation and restoration. Mr. Stanislas Jean, president of the Federation, is sending a special invitation to all the ardent conservationists to attend and to voice their suggestions.

The aims of the Federation are as follows:

(a) To encourage, unite, and affiliate, the Fish and Game associations and clubs of the province.

(b) To collaborate with the public authorities to establish a wildlife conservation and management program, so as to maintain the proper balance of game species and the greatest return for the public welfare; to promote scientific and educational effort towards such a program.

(c) To promote legislation for the protection and conservation of our wildlife resources; the enforcement and improvement of fish and game regulations.

(d) To educate the public in the economic and social value of films, literature, and by other means.

(e) To issue an official bilingual publication to further the above objectives.

Volvo is now available with automatic transmission.

(And it still gets over 30 miles to the gallon.)

If shifting gears has held you back from driving the compact that runs away from other popular-priced compacts and gets over 30 miles to the gallon like the little economy cars and lasts an average of eleven years in Sweden where driving conditions are tougher than ours, you no longer have a reason to hold back. We have perfected an automatic transmission that is as good as the car. Come in and go for a very revealing test drive.

DEATH

FALCONER (James) — Passed away peacefully after a lengthy illness, at his residence, Sheraton Drive, Montreal West, on Nov. 14, 1965. James Falconer (formerly of the R.C.N.V.R.), in his 83rd year. Beloved husband of Ann Crenier, dear father of Robert, brother of Agnes (Mrs. William Johnson), and uncle of Eleanor (Peggy, Mrs. Douglas Percy), and Gladys (Mrs. H. Pollock). Funeral held Tuesday in Montreal; interment in Lachute Cemetery.

IRELAND (Harry)—Died Tuesday evening, Nov. 16, at the Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital, aged 67; beloved husband of Marie Louise Doiron, and father of Dorothy and Irene, of Toronto. Mourned also by a sister and adopted sister in Toronto. Remains resting at Menard Funeral Home, Grace Street; funeral at Ste. Anastasie Parish Church, Saturday at 9.30 a.m.

IN MEMORIAM

BURNS (Arthur) — In loving memory of a dear grandfather, who passed away Nov. 24, 1964. — Ever remembered by Joan, Gordon and family.

CROOKS (Willis C.) — In loving memory of a dear father, who passed away on Nov. 19, 1949. — Ever remembered by his family.

DOWNING — In loving memory of my twin brother, George, who was accidentally killed Nov. 18, 1956. — Loved and remembered every day, Charlie, Grace and family.

"It only takes a little faith
To write how much we miss you,
But it will take the rest of our lives
To forget the day we lost you."

GUNN — In loving memory of William "Bill" Gunn, who passed away Nov. 20, 1961. — Always remembered by Tiny and Clarence.

GUNN (William) — In fond memory of Bill, who passed away Nov. 20, 1961. — Ever remembered by Allan, Doreen and children.

"This month comes with deep regret,
It brings back a day we shall never forget;
You left us suddenly without Good-bye,
But the memory of you will never die."

GUNN (William) — In loving memory of our dear son and brother, who departed this life Nov. 20, 1961. — Always remembered by Mother, Father, brothers and sisters.

"God hath not promised skies always blue,
Flower-strewn pathways all our lives through;
God hath not promised sun without rain,
Joy without sorrow, peace without pain;
God hath not promised we shall not know
Toil and temptation, trouble and woe;
He hath not told us we shall not bear
Many a burden, many a care,
But God hath promised strength for the day,
Rest for the laborer, light for the way,
Grace for the trials, help from above,
Unfailing sympathy, undying love."

HOLLOMBY — In loving memory of Jean Morrison Hollomby, who passed away Nov. 21, 1954. — Always remembered by her family.

"Memories are like threads of gold,
They never tarnish or grow old."

NIXON — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Rhoda, who passed away Nov. 18, 1949. — Ever remembered by her husband, Eddie; son, Alton and family; and daughter, Rita and family.

"A page in the book of memory
Is gently turned today.
Like falling leaves the years drift by,
But precious memories never die."

ROBERTSON — In loving memory of Edwin H. Robertson, who passed away Nov. 19, 1957. — Ever remembered by his family.

Quebec reactions to fed'l election

Bona Arsenault, provincial secretary, provided an echo to Mr. Bourdages shortly before Premier Lesage made his statement. Mr. Arsenault said the election results showed that neither Mr. Pearson or Mr. Diefenbaker was in command of his party. He added that, lacking a Liberal majority, he would be happier should the Liberals collaborate with the New Democratic Party than if it should join "in other directions."

Mr. Lesage disagreed with part of these leadership opinions in his statement. He said Mr. Pearson "is the only man in the present circumstances who, by his diplomacy, can rectify a situation which I have called worrying." This situation involved unity between French and English Canada.

Of Many Things

By Ambrose Hills

THE TECHNIQUE OF GETTING THINGS DONE

If you are a potential lazybones, as I am, you will be interested in this new book which devotes itself to solving the problem.

Donald A. Laird, a noted psychologist, thinks we all have a streak of laziness. He has spent a great part of his life studying techniques we can use to overcome it. I've been testing some of them. They help.

He starts from the premise that it isn't how much you know but what you get done that the world rewards and remembers. You decide what rewards you would like, and why you would wish to be remembered; then start to get things done which will lead to that end. Your biggest stumbling block will be weakness in getting things done. There are methods of beating that weakness.

You have a head start if your childhood wasn't too easy; if you had routine chores to do and took them for granted. Getting things done is partly a matter of habit. You have learned to produce at least as much as you consume. In modern society you may be able to get by without doing your share, but you still cannot win the really big rewards.

If you want big rewards, you start today to get things done. Make a list of what you ought to get done tomorrow — and get part of it done this very day. Tackle the toughest one first. Get rid of that job that has been nagging you, by tackling it and getting it done.

Are you disappointed? Did you expect some secret knack for beating your laziness? I read the book eagerly, hoping for some such secret. There wasn't any. You simply start doing essential things; you know that they have to be done sometime, so you start now. If you want to win those rewards, you go from the first one to the next one without a long breather in between.

Laird recommends that you read some biographies of the greats. You will then see why they became great. It wasn't luck. It often wasn't brains. Certainly it wasn't health, because many of the greats were feeble and wracked with pain most of their lives. They discovered that the only technique for getting things done was to do them.

Simple, isn't it?

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

LAROCQUE — Mrs. Napoleon Larocque and family, of St. Andrews East, wish to express sincere thanks for the kind expressions of sympathy extended during their recent sad bereavement — including cards, flowers, telegrams, visits to the funeral parlor, and attendance at the funeral.

MORRISON — The family of the late Edward Morrison wish to thank relatives and friends for their many kind expressions of sympathy during their recent bereavement. Special thanks are extended to the members of the Orange Order who participated in the very impressive Orange service held on Monday evening at the MacKimmie Funeral Home.

THE OLD WAY. A scene such as the above has become as rare in Canada as the sight of a railway steam engine. But in Gloucester, Eng., farmers still use horses on their binders when harvesting oats. Undamaged straw is required for making straw rope used to pack pipes.

Fire departments campaigning for Dystrophy funds

It is estimated that one in every four of Canada's voluntary and professional fire departments are campaigning for funds this month in the annual March For Muscular Dystrophy.

Fire fighters have been associated with the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada ever since its inception in 1954. Their voluntary fund-raising efforts are responsible for about 50 per cent of the money MDAC raises each year for medical research.

The bill for this research is now over the $3,000,000 mark. This means that the fire fighters have contributed a million and a half dollars to a research program that is second only to those of the Heart and Cancer Associations.

Muscular dystrophy is a disease that atrophies the cells of the voluntary muscles. It presented an almost insuperable problem to science until the recent breakthrough in our knowledge of the mechanism of human genetics. Understanding of the cause of MD is now believed by many biochemists to be in sight.

Bible Society annual meeting; facts of interest

Did you know that —

The Canadian Bible Society is one of 27 Bible Societies throughout the world, in 120 countries.

Last year, 410,000 copies of Scripture were distributed in Canada, in 78 languages.

601 Copies of the Scripture in Braille were distributed in Canada last year.

In 1904 the Scriptures had been translated into 575 languages. Now they have been translated into 1,216 languages.

In 1904 the annual distribution in the world was 10 million copies. Now it is over 54 million copies.

A French Bible Society store was opened last spring in the heart of Montreal's French-speaking commercial district.

There are 4,000 translators at work on the Bible throughout the world, working in 600 languages.

Every hour of every day, 4,250 copies of the Scriptures are distributed. But every hour of every day 8,000 persons learn to read. Will they be given an opportunity to read the Bible? . . . Your donation will help to give the answer "Yes".

The Bible Society annual meeting will be held at St. Simeon's Church, Lachute, on Sunday, November 21, at 7.30 p.m. A sound-film in color, "Freedom in Their Souls" will be shown. Please support the Bible Society by your presence at this meeting.

Appreciation to UNICEF helpers

Lachute, Nov. 15, 1965

Editor, Lachute Watchman
Dear Sir:

The sum of $322.65 was raised in the recent UNICEF collection. Mrs. Gordon McOuat and myself wish to extend our sincere thanks to all those who helped to make this effort a success. In particular to Mr. F. H. Royal, Lachute High School, The Lachute Watchman, the Bank of Nova Scotia, and all the boys and girls who gave their time and effort so generously, and made this year's collection the highest in the nine years in which this worthy drive has taken place in this area. — Well done!

Yours sincerely,

Geraldine M. Butterfield

Jehovah group attended seminar at Rosemount

Twenty members of the Jehovah's Witnesses from Lachute were among the 1,225 who applauded the Bible discourse, "What Does the Resurrection of the Dead Mean for You and Yours?" at Rosemount High School last Sunday.

The principal speaker, Mr. Laurier Saumur, Quebec supervisor for Jehovah's Witnesses, said that the Bible is unique in its teaching of a resurrection, that man does not possess a soul but is a soul; that resurrection and not the immortality of the soul, is the hope of mankind.

Said the speaker, "If imperfect, dying man can record voices and pictures on magnetic tape, why is it so difficult to believe that God can keep an accurate record in His own memory concerning persons for whom he reserves a resurrection from the dead by means of Jesus Christ?"

The three-day seminar sponsored by the Watchtower Society included a demonstration of advancement made by students enrolled in the public-speaking courses, conducted weekly in all congregations of the Jehovah's Witnesses throughout the world. Enthusiastically applauded was Mr. Edward Tager, a deaf-mute, who presented his theme, "Woes That Come to Those Violating Jehovah's Principles" by means of an interpreter. A special meeting is held for deaf-mutes each Sunday at 1.15 p.m., at 6940 Stuart Street.

The program included a baptism ceremony at which 13 new ministers dedicated their lives to God by complete immersion in water. Jehovah's Witnesses believe that going under the water symbolizes death to one's former course of life, and emergence means the Christian is henceforth alive to the doing of God's will.

ELECTORATE UNANIMOUS

Ojibway, Ont. (CP) — This tiny Windsor suburb went wet by unanimous vote in a special election in which all the qualified electors turned out. Mr. and Mrs. John Reid — who with their four children are the sole residents of Ojibway, a community owned by a salt company — cast one ballot each.

Distance is factor —

Prot. Committee sees school problems, sparsely populated North Shore region

Quebec — After having met previously in Montreal, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Sherbrooke and Quebec City, the Protestant Committee of the Superior Council of Education decided to hold their first meeting of the school year in Baie-Comeau.

The North Shore, which is the name given to the territory extending along the St. Lawrence between Tadoussac and Blanc-Sablon, is extremely large. The distances which separate the principal towns from one another are tremendous for a person accustomed to the relative close proximity of towns in the centre of the province.

These distances in towns constitute one of the principal problems which the Protestant population has to face.

The Protestant School population is divided into many religious denominations. At the Elementary and Secondary level, 909 students attend six schools in as many towns — Forestville 8, Baie Comeau 185, Gagnon 78, Seven Islands 384, Schefferville 161, and Port Cartier 83.

The members of the Committee learned, for example, that no road exists between Gagnon and Port Cartier 224 miles to the south; that Schefferville is 357 miles from Seven Islands and the only means of communication between these two centres is by plane and by train (similarly for Gagnon and Port Cartier); that Seven Islands is 150 miles from Baie Comeau, a city situated 100 miles to the southwest of Port Cartier, whereas Baie Comeau is 275 miles from Quebec.

With the exception of Forestville, where the students receive their education in a private school belonging to the Anglo Canadian Pulp & Paper Ltd., the remainder of these schools are public institutions.

Nevertheless, the Committee learned that, in spite of these distances, the general level of religious instruction was satisfactory.

The members of the Committee consulted with representatives of the Protestant School Boards and discussed pertinent questions. One of these was the possibility of establishing, at the Grade 10-11 level, a course in religious instruction which would be optional in much the same way as is Geometry and Chemistry. Another topic was the possibility of establishing closer liaison with English Roman Catholic students, with a view to establishing some type of co-operative institution which would respect the religious affiliation of both groups, but which at the same time would enable a wider variety of options than is presently available.

Courage for the 'small minority'

"There are people who feel that the Psalms are out of date — that they deal with men and women who lived long ago, and whose customs and manners were entirely different from ours," the Very Rev. C. Ritchie Bell, of the Presbyterian College, said in a sermon Sunday morning at the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church.

"That is true; but when you look beneath the surface, you will find men and women who have the same dreams and hopes, the same loves and hates, the same joys and sorrows, the same fears, that we have today.

"There are many people," the minister continued, "who, while they are not antagonistic towards religion, towards what we feel are the important values in the life of the individual, are totally indifferent to the cause of Christ.

"Sometimes we feel that darkness and evil are in the majority, and that those who serve the Lord are a small minority. But take heart and courage, be not of a doubting heart.

"We can lift up our voices and take up, not the song of the doubting heart, but the song of a singing heart. There are doubts, but sometime let us pray, that our eyes may be opened and we can see nothing but God."

The Bible Today

A Christian Literature Crusade Team from Java recently visited the neighboring island of Madura. Though the island is strongly Moslem, in four days they sold — not gave away — 100 Bibles, 30 New Testaments and 400 copies of the Gospel of John recently published in the Madurese language, besides 1,086 other Christian books.

The churches on the island are all attended by the Chinese and Indonesian population, not by the Madurese people. So the team went to the market places and the villages, where it was the Moslems who purchased the literature. They found, indeed, hungry hearts on every hand, wanting to know the Truth. But it costs something really to accept the message of Christ.

One of the members of the team was a converted Madurese. At one place they threatened to cut his throat because he had become a Christian. He continued to testify to his Saviour and to sell literature.

A copy of a gospel carelessly thrown away by one person was picked up by another. This one copy led, after several years, to the baptism of the first 25 Javanese Christians. It is hoped that this will happen in Madura, too.

Of Many Things

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

The interest of the man who produces is opposite to that of the man who consumes. One wishes to sell high, the other to buy low. Thus their interests are poles apart and cannot be reconciled.

Society gains from this difference. Producers vie with each other to meet the requirements of the consumer — and we are all consumers a large part of the time.

It seems to me that some members of the co-operative movement go wrong when they are blind to this fact of life. They promote the idea of a Ministry of Co-operatives to advance the cause of both consumer co-ops and producer co-ops, as if they were not in conflict.

Another anomaly is the claim by some producer co-operatives that they provide "service at cost." At whose cost? I believe farmers, in particular, must wonder at this service-at-cost claim. Certainly it is hard to visualize a society in which everyone sells to the farmer at cost while he, as a producer, hopes to continue to sell at a profit. Inasmuch as consumers vastly exceed farmers in number, it is clear that they soon would be demanding "produce at cost", and farmers would go down the drain with all others who practice service for profit.

It is often highly unpopular to say anything that could be construed as criticism of the co-operative movement. The co-operative principle has great merit. Yet when those who espouse the present set-up of producer and consumer co-ops go overboard, someone needs to throw some light on where their arguments could lead us.

The co-operative business is big business today and growing by leaps and bounds. All co-operatives, producer and consumer alike, are allowed special tax privileges. And through a system of crediting dividends to members but retaining them for further development, the co-ops as an average pay six percent corporation tax against fifty-two percent paid by the firm they compete against. It is easy to see where profit-motivated business will get off at in the next forty or fifty years. Where will the taxes come from then? I believe there are many people in the co-operative movement itself who feel that they should be carrying a fairer share of the cost of running the country.

IT'S TIME TO SELECT THAT DIAMOND RING!
Come in now and compare our prices, which defy all competition.

So you won't face retirement alone

Your contributions to the Quebec Pension Plan will protect you with a pension when you retire.

AFTER JANUARY 1, 1976

If you reach the age of 65 after January 1, 1976, and if you have contributed to the Plan, you will be entitled to a Retirement Pension in proportion to the average earnings (not exceeding $5,000 a year) obtained through your work.

Here are a few examples of pensions to be paid according to your earnings, when you retire after making contributions for 10 years.

Average earnings per month	$100	$200	$300	$400
Retirement Pension per month	$ 25	$ 50	$ 75	$100

BETWEEN 1967 AND 1976

If you reach the retirement age stipulated by the Plan between 1967 and 1976, you are entitled to a percentage of the pensions shown above based on your average earnings — according to the number of years you have contributed.

OLD AGE PENSION

You will receive your Old Age Pension of $75 a month in addition to your Retirement Pension.

OTHER BENEFITS

The Retirement Pension is only one of the seven benefits provided by the Quebec Pension Plan.

District NEWS

Arundel

Mr. and Mrs. S. Bates, of St. Laurent, were week-end guests of Mrs. Alvin Graham.

Mr. Norman Graham is in Toronto, attending the "Royal Winter Fair".

Mrs. LeMaistre is visiting at the manse with her daughter, Mrs. D. Gray, and will remain for the winter.

The Local Association of Girl Guides and Brownies are sponsoring a card party on Tuesday evening, November 23, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Owen, Weir. Proceeds will be used in this very worthy work in our community.

Mrs. Frank Davis is away for the week visiting with her daughter in Ste. Rose.

Miss Joy Oswald was the week-end guest of Miss Muriel Graham.

We were glad to welcome back for a brief stay Mr. Herman Graham, of Seven Islands, who stayed with his brother, Mr. Wenville Graham, over the week-end.

Remembrance Day Ceremonies

A well attended Remembrance Day service was held on Sunday afternoon last, on the grounds of the Legion Branch 192. The parade of veterans took their position and the ceremony was opened by the singing of "O Canada", followed by a selection by the United Church choir. President A. Jensen read the names of those who had paid the supreme sacrifice, after which the "Last Post" was sounded, followed by a two-minute silence. Mrs. J. May was then escorted by two Legion members to the cenotaph, where she laid a wreath in the name of the mothers who had lost sons during the war. The Rev. Father Potvin, of Huberdeau, gave an impressive prayer, first in English then in the French version, after which Reveille was sounded, thus bringing to a close the first Legion Remembrance service held in Arundel.

The guests adjourned to the Legion Hall, where tea was served, prior to leaving for the Remembrance service held in the school.

The children of the Arundel United Church Sunday School are holding a Christmas tea on Saturday afternoon, November 27. It is hoped there will be a large attendance to encourage the children in their important work.

School Ceremonies

Remembrance Day services were held in the school auditorium on Thursday, November 11, as usual. This was attended by a large gathering, and included this year the members of the local Legion Branch.

The ceremony opened with the "Call to Worship" by Mr. Robert Crone, followed by "O Canada". A responsive reading was led by Peter Graham, and the traditional hymn, "O God Our Help in Ages Past", was sung by the assembly. After the Bible reading by Russell Gordon, Principal Graham, President A. Jensen (representing the veterans) and Robert Crone advanced to the front, and the Honor Roll names were read by the principal. This was followed by a prayer by Robert Crone. A beautiful rendition of Father James setting of "The Lord Is My Shepherd" was given by the school choir, under the leadership of Mrs. Melvin Graham. An address was given by Miss Patricia Graham, and the hymn, "Land of Our Birth" brought another Remembrance Day service to a close. . . Mrs. Leslie Cooke played the musical accompaniments.

APPRECIATION

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the doctor, nurses, and to my relatives and friends, for cards, letters and visits while I was a patient in the Argenteuil Hospital.

BELL LINES

by JIM MENZIES

MOVIES AVAILABLE FOR LACHUTE DISTRICT CLUBS

I'd like to remind local church and social groups and other clubs and organizations that over 60 entertaining and educational films are available from the Bell, free of charge, for showings to your members. All are of course professionally done — many in color — and there are bound to be several which will have particular interest for your group. One favorite is this year's main addition to the Company's film-lending library — a fascinating 20-minute film called "Communication". It shows how human beings have communicated with each other down through the ages — from the caves of pre-history through Egypt, Greece and Rome, right up to modern day Canada. The color is beautiful, the technique avant garde, and the result is actually emotional. Incidentally, the film was produced in Canada, especially for the Bell, and certainly shows the tremendous talent this country has for the movie-making art.

A free film catalogue which describes the many films available from the Company can be had upon request. If your entertainment committee does not already have one, they need only call our Business Office at Zenith 60000 and we'll have one forwarded immediately.

FOR OVERSEAS CALLS AT CHRISTMAS

Reservations to make overseas calls during the extremely busy periods of December 24th to 26th, and December 31st to January 2nd, will be taken starting Monday, November 29th, at 9 a.m. Reservations can be made by asking the Long Distance Operator to connect you with the Overseas Operator for the desired country. The Overseas Operator will arrange the details with you.

Because of the heavy volume of calls during the two peak periods mentioned, I would recommend that if at all possible your overseas calls be placed on other days (no reservations are required). Many Canadian families have soldier or airman sons in Europe and Asia, and a call at Christmas time is especially important for these boys.

APPRECIATION

A word of praise is due the fine staff at the Argenteuil Hospital for care given their patients. Having recently been a patient in this hospital, I can only express my very warm thanks to doctors, nurses and, in fact, everyone there, for helping to make my stay as pleasant as possible. Such considerations as the telephone thoughtfully provided for each room, keeps the patient from feeling completely cut off from the outside world. This was just one of the special services offered to patients. In my case, another was the cheery greeting I got each morning from the three switchboard operators, all former Bell employees in the Lachute exchange.

Morin Heights

Two Fire Calls

The fire brigade was called out on two occasions during the week-end. The first was on Friday midnight, to a fire at the Maison d'Accueil at Laurel. After three hours the fire was brought under control, but not before heavy damage resulted to the building. The second call was at 8 a.m. Saturday morning, to the residence occupied by Mr. Hebert, near the Alpino Hotel. The fire had gained considerable headway and the building was considered a total loss.

Worthwhile Effort

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell wish to extend their sincere thanks to those who attended the recent showing of the film, "Almost Angel" From the admission fees and other contributions, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell made a handsome donation to the building fund of the United Church.

Church Supper

On Saturday evening last, a community supper was held in the Trinity Hall, by the ladies of the Anglican Church. All available seats at the tables were occupied, and from comments overheard, the impression was confirmed that the ladies served a delicious and appetizing meal as usual.

Veteran Passes

The death occurred recently of one of Mille Isles' older residents, in the person of Mr. P. E. Perry. The funeral service, held Sunday, November 7, at Mille Isles, was conducted by the Rev. Horace Baugh. A detachment of Legionnaires from Morin Heights Branch, of which Mr. Perry was a member, paid final honors to the deceased.

Former Teacher Mourned

It is with deepest regret that we report the sudden death of Mrs. William Bell (the former Enid McCullough) at the Montreal General Hospital on Thursday last. The funeral service was held from the Trinity Anglican Church on Sunday, November 14. Mrs. Bell is survived by her husband and two children, Skippy and Beverley (Mrs. S. E. Burrows), and six grandchildren.

Mrs. Bell was associated with the Morin Heights Intermediate School as a teacher for many years, and will be kindly remembered by the hundreds of children who passed through her capable hands in that institution.

The heartfelt sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved family.

Miss Joan Green, of Montreal, spent the week-end visiting her mother, Mrs. Frances Green.

The Rev. Douglas R. Pilkey, field secretary for Missionary and Maintenance, United Church of Canada, will conduct an important meeting at the United Church on Friday, November 19, at 8.30 p.m. All members are expected to attend.

IN APPRECIATION

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dewar, of Kilmar, would like to thank their friends and relatives for all the kindness shown, and the help given them, after fire destroyed their home.

Winter protection of rose bushes

By A. R. Buckley
Plant Research Institute, Ottawa

It was inevitable that once the Central Experimental Farm started to grow hybrid tea and floribunda roses over 60 years ago a great deal of study would be given to the cause of winter injury and means of protection. Today the Plant Research Institute is still investigating the problem, for no completely successful method of wintering these roses has yet been devised.

Since one of the most important factors that determine hardiness of all plants is the early maturing of the wood, efforts should be directed toward achieving this condition. To get a continuing crop of roses it is necessary to encourage unchecked growth during the summer and when this happens the hardening process does not take place. Early maturity does not occur naturally in hybrid tea or hybrid floribunda roses so the gardener must regulate his cultural practices in order to check growth. There are several things you can do:

1. Stop fertilizing after the first of August.

2. Reduce the water supply to the minimum after the first of September. In some parts of the country this may not be possible because of abundant rain at this time of year.

3. Reduce the available nitrogen in the soil by adding a mulch of sawdust, peat moss, corncobs or straw in July. The denitrifying bacteria use a great amount of nitrogen in the soil during the decomposition of this material.

4. During September cut dead flowers with as short a stem as possible so that new growth will be discouraged.

5. Spray to keep foliage free from insects and diseases. This prevents defoliating during summer and the consequent production of second growth.

It is, of course, still necessary to adopt some means of winter protection. Before the ground has frozen hard spray the roses with a fungicide and mound soil around the hybrid teas and floribundas to a height of 8 to 10 inches. Bring the soil from another part of the garden for this operation. Drawing soil up to the roses by means of a hoe or spade will often expose the roots and thus cause greater damage than if the plants were left intact.

After this operation leave the roses until the ground has frozen hard and then cover them with evergreen boughs such as spruce to hold the snow and provide shade. This helps to keep the ground frozen all winter.

Climbing roses should be taken from their supports right now, if not done already, and pinned down close to the surface of the soil. Then the entire plant may be covered with soil or the base of the plant mounded and the rest wrapped in burlap. When the ground has frozen, cover with straw or boughs or, as is done at the Plant Research Institute, use inverted 'V' boards.

Make sure that all the foliage from the roses has fallen or has been removed before covering or else the leaves might provide a place for disease to start in winter.

Climbing roses, like Blaze, produce their flowers on old wood and that which was made the year previously, so you must save as much wood as possible. That is why it is safer to take the whole bush down from its support every year.

Rambling roses such as Dorothy Perkins, Minnehaha and Hiawatha flower only on the wood formed the previous year, so all the shoots that produced flowers this year should be cut out.

If you grow garden roses in areas colder than Ottawa it is best to dig them up and bury them in a trench. A method recently adopted with success in Minnesota is to first tie the rose canes on each bush in a bundle; then partly dig up the bush from the ground, so that the whole plant can be bent over and covered with light sandy soil. When the soil has frozen hard a layer of strawy material or light leaves is placed over the mound to prevent thawing. This method has worked very well at Ottawa, but care must be taken not to uncover the bushes too early; and, as with the other methods, the roses should be defoliated and sprayed with a fungicide before being covered.

Archeology in Southern Alberta

Calgary CP — Relics of an Indian community older than bows and arrows have been found in southern Alberta.

Archeologists digging at Spring Point buffalo jump, about 60 miles west of Lethbridge, found stone knives and buffalo bones about 2,500 years old.

This makes the Spring Point jump the oldest in Canada.

Expedition leader Barney Reeves say, deeper diggings may turn up relics 1,000 years older still.

A buffalo jump is a path to a cliff edge, walled by stones, along which Indians stampeded buffalo. If the animals did not die in the fall, they could still be slaughtered more easily.

The buffalo jumps went out of use when horses could be caught and bridled. Mr. Reeves thinks the Spring Point site was not used after about 1750.

The findings include hundreds of spear and arrow points, bone smashers, hide scrapers, drills, awls and pottery. There are bake ovens and food storage pits at the old camp site.

Speculation arose that the Indians may have played a sort of dice game when two small stone discs, grooved on one side, were found.

The work is going faster than it ought to, says Mr. Reeves, because of the fear of souvenir hunters. He says other sites have been virtually destroyed by reckless amateurs.

So far the owner of the land has allowed only his friends and the archeologists to visit the site.

About 17 layers of soil, each representing a different turn in the climate or a different era of human use, so far have been stripped from the 20-foot-deep excavation.

Firemen staunch friends to young dystrophy sufferers

Eleven-year-old Kirk Clouthier is one of many Canadians crippled by muscular dystrophy. During the month of November the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada is campaigning for funds to finance research into MD. Cooperating in the nation-wide drive are hundreds of voluntary and professional fire departments.

Like most boys, eleven-year old Kirk Cloutier loves to roam, and he's not too conscientious about getting back in time for supper. But when Kirk is late for supper his mother generally knows where he is. He is out visiting one of the nearby fire halls.

Unlike most boys, Kirk cannot walk. He is confined to a wheelchair as a result of muscular dystrophy. But he has a friend Tom, however, who takes him around in the wheelchair, and it's not too hard to talk Tom into going to the fire hall.

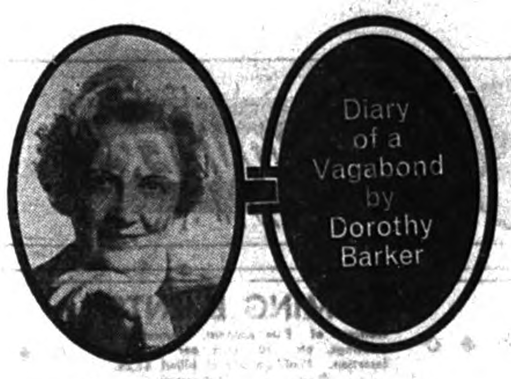
Kirk goes to the fire hall because that's where he can find a lot more friends. For a number of years now Canada's fire fighters have played a major role in the battle against muscular dystrophy, a disease that wastes away the cells of the voluntary muscles. To date the fire fighters have raised a million and a half dollars to fight M.D.

At the fire hall, Kirk, and sometimes his brothers Wayne and Richard, also MD victims, have the run of the place. The fire fighters make every effort to see that there is always something interesting for the boys to do or see.

Other boys are envious of the VIP treatment the Clouthier brothers get at the fire hall, but once they find out the reason they understand.

RAISE CASH FROM GUNS

Regina (CP) — Saskatchewan's wildlife branch received more than $3,000 from the sale of 101 confiscated firearms. The number of confiscations has doubled in the last 10 years.



The Spirit of the West

Those of us who live in thickly settled areas of this country may wonder what it is that draws others into the vast reaches of virgin forest, muskeg and land covered with brush. It is hard to even imagine the possibility those acres hold a promise of bountiful crops. I was so curious about this attraction I sought an interview with the first citizens of a brand new town.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Jordan are the parents of a son and daughter. When they should have been thinking of retiring and enjoying their seven grandchildren, they decided to make a dream come true. That dream now stands on firm, dry land that was once known as "the worst muskeg in the province". It isn't a castle they built in their imagination during the years they ran a motel in Valleyview, or when they cleared and first farmed their homestead in the northern Peace River country. It is a modern hotel, bank and bus station complex that is a handsome addition to the rapidly extending business section of High Level, Alberta.

Owen Jordan is a big man with a kind, wrinkle-free countenance familiar to hundreds who have passed his way since the building of the Great Slave Lake Railway by the CN made prosperity possible for proprietor, merchant and settler alike. Until construction started, this northern area of Alberta had millions of acres peopled only by birds and beasts, Indians on scattered reserves and here and there hardy homesteaders.

Perhaps it took a lot of faith in the future, Owen Jordan admitted to me, to spend the best years of their lives several hundred miles north of the nearest city, Edmonton. He spoofed the image most of us have of his part of the northland. "People who live in the southern section of Canada think dog sled is our only means of transportation, that this part of Canada is peopled by Indians on snow shoes and Eskimoes in parkas. They have a picture of eternal winter here, when as a matter of fact it was 103 degrees above zero in High Level this summer." Jordan said, however, that once the winter sets in the thermometer seldom rises above 50 to 60 degrees below zero. "When she reaches 20 above we think spring has arrived", he laughingly remarked.

Most years, because the High Level area is practically free of frost and storms during the growing season, wheat crops average 40-60 bushels per acre. The Jordans are proud of their homestead ten miles distant, but let's learn more about that dream of theirs. . .

If the walls of their 34 room hotel could talk they would undoubtedly gossip about deals that have known millions of dollars to change hands. Lumber contracts, oil leases, crops that will tax the three elevators near the new CN station, rape for the manufacture of margarine, and other vegetable oil substances and flax for many manufacturing purposes, all add up to this new prosperity for the Peace River Country.

Scrap of Paper

Jordan and his wife were the first land title holders in High Level. They operated a service station and ran the only store for miles around. When building of the railway was confirmed they sold these two properties and drew a pencil sketch on a bit of paper of the hotel they wanted to build. This was submitted to the Alberta Department of Municipal Development for approval. When they obtained permission to build, they also realized the $370,000 cost would need at least two other partners if the hotel was to develop as they dreamed it should. Two men were found to invest in the undertaking. They are silent partners, "the best in the world", according to the Jordans.

Since a year ago last February, every drop of water used in the hotel has had to be hauled from Footner Lake seven miles away. Residents pay $1.25 for 45 gallons delivered to their homes. This will end when contracts for a new water and disposal plant are awarded. Ask the Jordans why they undertook such a hazardous investment under these conditions and they will look at you rather pityingly, as though you haven't a clue about what dreams are made of, and answer, "We love it here, we couldn't live in any other place." They admit however that the coming of the railway has had a lot to do with their affection for High Level.

Dress design

It is nothing new for fabric designers to find inspiration in the fine arts. Cubism, a relatively recent but recently ignored art form, is the latest to come out of the galleries and into the dress shops and fashion departments, disguised as the "Mondrian dress."

In search of inspiration some Canadian in the design field should take a jet flight across Canada's western plains on a clear day, preferably just before the harvest. The greens and golds and the geometric forms of the rich prairie land below are a delight that could probably be translated for the loom just as effectively as has been a cubist's canvas.

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

A post-election responsibility

THE 1965 ELECTION is over — but the political process does not end with the marking of a ballot. On the contrary, the physical act of voting is really only the beginning. We have chosen men to guide our country's destiny for the next five years, and it is now our responsibility as citizens to make sure that these people know what we want them to do. This responsibility can be fulfilled in several ways. First, by individual action, which requires each citizen to follow the performance of his M.P. in Parliament, letting him know, by letter or personal contact, whether we support his actions or not. The second, and perhaps more effective, way is through action. Many associations, such as Chambers of Commerce, farmers' and women's groups, study government actions and proposals, and inform their elected representatives of their collective opinion on them.

This vital part of the political process can be as simple or as elaborate as one wishes. The degree of involvement is irrelevant — what really counts is that more people do become personally involved.

The lights that failed

THE BLACKOUT which crippled a vast section of eastern North America just recently, brought home to millions of people the dependence of modern-day man on machinery.

Cities were submerged in darkness, transportation was snarled because traffic lights were not working, electrically-powered transit systems were stalled, heat was cut off.

Radios (except those operating on transistors) and television sets were silent. Telephone circuits were jammed with people seeking information.

Perhaps the worst experiences were suffered by those caught in elevators in tall buildings or in subway trains that could not move. For commuters the homeward journey turned into an exercise of frustration.

While technicians struggled to harness alternate power sources, all the individual could do was to light a candle or turn on a flashlight and wait for power to be restored.

What a contrast with the days of the pioneers. Then a man provided his own necessities by the sweat of his brow. He cut his own firewood, cooked on a wood stove, made his own candles. He was not dependent on complicated equipment over which he had no control.

The blackout drove home the point that without electric power our civilization cannot operate. This is the extent of our dependence on machinery. Once it collapses we are almost helpless.

But not everyone waited tamely for the trouble to be remedied. Some exercised their ingenuity to surmount the problems created. The householder with a barbecue, who depended normally on electricity for cooking, could improvise a hot meal. Those fortunate enough to have fireplaces were able to enjoy some warmth.

Experts went to work quickly to try to determine what caused the blackout. Steps will certainly be taken to try to avoid a recurrence.

Meanwhile perhaps there is one minor lesson to be learned from the situation. When radio and television are cut off, we have to fall back on our own resources for amusement. Reading aloud, playing games or just talking are ways of coping with this situation.

If we can remember how to do things like that — things that used to be a commonplace part of home life — the blackout may have done some good.

Two-pants suits — from Hungary

DUE TO the failure of its much-vaunted communistic system, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has introduced capitalistic procedures to bolster the economy.

In addition Russia has been forced to relinquish much of its supervisory powers over the satellite countries, owing to economic winds of change.

And the satellite countries are learning fast from their Russian masters who, in the past, did not hesitate to export necessities needed at home.

The latest play in the international trade competition is the shipping of fully-finished men's suits, with two pairs of pants, to Canada from Hungary, of all places!

Hungarian styles are not exactly outstanding in the men's fashion world, but the low prices at which these goods are laid down in Canada apparently makes up for a lot of things.

Thus, a country behind the Iron Curtain is attempting to force its way into the Canadian market in much the same manner as Japan and other Asiatic countries have already done.

This automation of agriculture

ONE FARM WORKER in Canada today is able to produce enough food for the annual requirements of 32 persons, compared to only 10 persons in the 1930's, according to an Ottawa release. The same source states that Canadians spend only 25 per cent of their disposable income on food, as against 30 per cent in Britain, 45 per cent in Italy and 60 per cent in the Soviet Union.

Citing these figures, a commentator for the weeklies, C. J. Harris, quotes from a speech made a year ago by Ellison L. Hazard, an American businessman. "A nation's standard of living," Mr. Hazard said, "can be thought of as being inversely proportional to the percentage of its labor force required to produce food. Compare the United States' seven per cent on the farm with Canada's 10 per cent, West Germany's 13 per cent, Japan's 33 per cent, Russia's 39 per cent, India's 70 per cent, and Communist China's 87 per cent."

Since then the proportion of the Canadian labor force employed in agriculture has dropped to about nine per cent. Back in the mid-thirties, when per worker productivity on the farm was less than one-third the present level, 30 per cent of the Canadian labor force was employed in agriculture.

The main factor in the increased productivity of Canadian farms, of course, has been increased mechanization. If machines had not taken over so much of the work formerly done by horse power and manual labor, food production would still require a very large part of the labor force, the cost of producing food would be very much higher, as would be prices to consumers. These are facts to be weighed in the "automation argument." In a sense, the agricultural industry has been automated here in Canada — and a good thing too (concludes this observer).

IT'S NOT what you do, it's the way that you do it.

That was the theme of a song away back in the days before the public relations boys took over. But it might have been written today, as the credo of a whole bevy of bright young men who work behind the scenes at gilding the lily.

Nowadays, of course, they have a new name for it. They call it "projecting an image". The idea is to look good, even if you aren't, particularly. Among politicians, young executives on the move and movie actors, the business of projecting a good image has become a fine art.

Sometimes it seems as if what you do could hardly matter less, today. Like the song says, it's the way that you do it that counts.

Wanted: New Leaders

Now that it is clear that Prime Minister Pearson will carry on as leader of a minority government, it is also clear that Canadian voters have again rejected both Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker as leaders in whom the country can have confidence.

The defeat of Nov. 8 for the Liberal party — and a defeat it was, despite their being returned as the largest party — is the third in a row for the two old-line parties.

In 1962, Mr. Diefenbaker was knocked down from the largest majority in Canadian history, to leader of a minority government. In 1963, Mr. Pearson took over at the head of another minority government. And now, in 1965, the voters have sharply rejected his plea for a majority.

The election ended in almost a stand-off between the Liberals and Conservatives because the small parties were able to hold (and in some cases, increase) their support.

Real Caouette's Creditistes came through in remarkably good shape in Quebec, clinging to nine seats. Social Credit, which seated two in Alberta and three in B.C., plus two independents in Quebec who were former Socreds, also managed to survive the Pearson majority plea.

And the New Democratic party, which now holds a balance of power position in Parliament, increased its popular vote right across the country while raising its number of seats from 18 to 21.

The fact that these parties could survive can only be taken as an indication that neither of the major party leaders have the confidence of the country.

As the voters were not prepared to trust either party with a parliamentary majority, both the Liberals and the Conservatives are going to have to re-examine their leadership.

The results could be beneficial in that Mr. Pearson may now be ready to exert the kind of decisive and forceful leadership the country demands. He has no doubt done great soul searching in the past week. He may by now have concluded that not only were his advisers ill-advised, but that he will have to be much more ruthless in dealing with wrong-doing at any level of his party or government, in any part of the country.

What can Mr. Diefenbaker claim from the election? He did, indeed, prevent a Liberal majority. But he didn't achieve his dream of returning to Ottawa in time to lead the country through the 1967 Centennial. How much longer can he carry on?

The Liberals lost their majority bid because they permitted the Maritimes to fall away, and because they failed to wipe out the Creditistes in Quebec. The Conservatives went down to defeat because they failed to make sufficient gains in Ontario.

Who now stands in the wings as leaders who could capture the confidence of Canadians?

For the Liberals, only Robert Winters, who returned to Parliament via Toronto's York West seat, stands out as a future leader, with the possible exception of Quebec premier Jean Lesage.

For the Conservatives, there are several likely prospects including George Hees who won Ontario's Northumberland riding, Davie Fulton of Kamloops, B.C., and premiers Stanfield of Nova Scotia, Roblin of Manitoba and Robarts of Ontario.

Despite optimistic talk that this new Parliament might last three or four years, don't bet on it. Now is no time for predictions — especially when so many of us who predicted a Liberal majority have had to eat crow — but it is hard to see how this new minority government will be able to endure much longer than previous minority regimes.

The greatest threat still lies in the field of federal-provincial relations. As long as Ottawa is run by a minority government, all 10 provinces will continue to have a field day in pressuring concessions out of the federal authority. Confederation is still on trial.

Of Sewage And Me

I was telling you in last week's column how I was shanghaied into the teaching profession, and how teaching has been good to me.

But I don't want anyone to go away with the mistaken idea that it has been roses all the way. When I was in the newspaper business, I used to get home, have a couple of drinks before dinner, just to unwind a bit. Strictly medicinal.

When I came into teaching, I got home from work at 4 o'clock and was so unwound by dinner time I was practically paralyzed.

This year, our school is working a double shift. Our shift begins at a quarter to eight in the a.m. I get home from work at 1.15 in the afternoon. I have little doubt that my liver is the texture of marble and the color of a baboon's behind. I have great doubt that I'll last until Christmas. People on the early shift should get hardship pay.

Another misconception I'd hate to leave with anyone is that I came into teaching as a refugee, because I couldn't make it in the newspaper business. Not so.

Not only was I making sporadic payments on the mortgage, but I was dragging home anywhere up to $35 a week, clear. And, if I do say it myself, I was a pretty important figure in the community.

For example, I look back with unconcealed and justifiable pride to my four years as President of the Bruce County Publishers' Association. That's a mighty important post, with about 10 weeklies in the county.

Well, sir, before my term of office, the annual meetings were regular donnybrooks. The publishers, last of a fierce and independent breed, quarreled fiercely about printing prices, stealing linotype operators from each other, and encroaching on each other's sacred hunting grounds.

But during my entire sojourn in the President's office, peace prevailed. There wasn't a bicker or a squabble. The secret? In four years, the President didn't call a single meeting. The Association has never run so smoothly, before or since.

So, if you're having internal warfare in one of the organizations you belong to, there's your solution. Stop holding meetings.

Another position in which I made my mark was the Resort Association. I was President of it, too, and also for four years. When I took over, the outfit was struggling. Revenue was only about $2,000 a year. Most of this was spent on printing folders. In our plant.

Well, I got keen, and started drumming up more money and urging a bigger and flossier folder. In the end, my twin activities bore fruit. Right in the end. We raised so much money, and the folder designed was so fancy, that we could no longer print it in our plant, so they took it to an out-of-town printer. This is known as How Not To Get Along In Business By Really Trying.

But perhaps my finest hour was my career in municipal politics. The Bay bordering the hotel's town was polluted, and unfit for swimming. As editor of the paper, I had harassed the town council for years, trying to get action.

Finally, I ran for council, carefully choosing a year in which it was obvious that election would be by acclamation, not votes. I won. Within two years, I had spark-plugged the council into installing a new sewage disposal system that would end the pollution. It put the tax rate up about six mills for 60 years. But it was worth it.

There was only one thing wrong. The darn thing didn't work. Some silly little engineering detail about water not running uphill, or something. The Bay was once again polluted. I left town shortly after. And the words sewage and Smiley are still associated in the minds of the grateful ratepayers. Not many men have a living monument like that, during their own lifetime.

'Place a book in the hands of your child'

Five-year-old Colleen Smith is a lucky child. She has a book and she loves it. . . So?

Too many children live in homes where books are not considered important; some with no books at all. The result can be utterly tragic in terms of unfulfilled minds, school dropouts, human failures.

Canada's vast Home and School movement has launched a $50,000 public information campaign to combat this problem. The objective: to reach every parent over the next two years with urgent messages about the profound importance of books in the growth of their children.

It's just one part of a Centennial project made possible with donations pledged by the greater number of Canada's 3,800 local Home and School Associations; donations from outside groups and individuals have been received and are most welcome.

The appealing photograph of Colleen Smith is one visual symbol of the campaign. You'll see it often, together with the slogan: "Place a Book in the Hands of Your Child". If you watch TV, that is. Or read the papers, or look at billboards . . . or listen to the radio. All media, including bus cards and store window posters, will be employed to give new life to an old truth: children need books in order to grow.

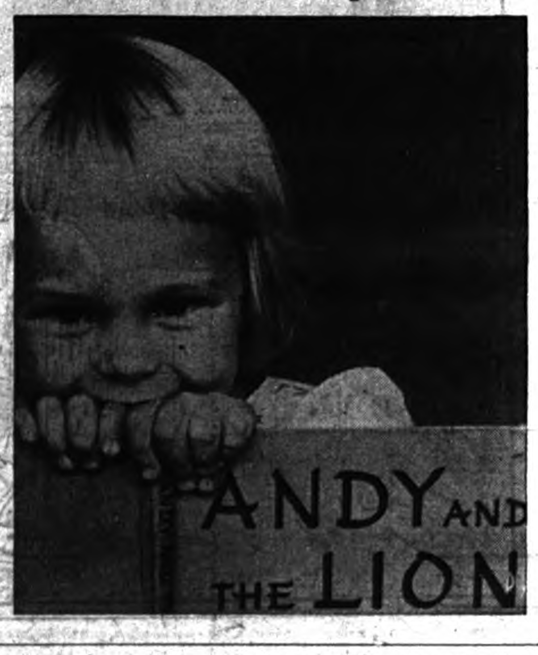
To top it all, a parent's guide to children's reading has been printed in the form of a bright, illustrated pamphlet which gives expert and practical advice on such subjects as: Helpful Hints for a Home Bookshelf; The Importance of Reading Aloud; The Fun of Poetry; Your Child and the Library; Let's Look It Up. Experienced librarians collaborated on one section: 50 Books No Child Should Miss.

Some parents are bound to ask: will this promotion recommend the actual teaching of reading at home?

"Not at all," says A. J. Sands, national president of the Home and School Federation. "Leave that to the school. But you can't sit back and expect your child to arrive at a love for reading if school books are the only books he knows. By the time the school gets around to showing him the great classics, chances are it is too late; his imagination has died."

"You are the key," concludes Mr. Sands. "Right from playpen days you can encourage your child's natural interest in books and guide and share and stimulate his growth in reading. It's one of the very best ways you can help him grow and develop into a mature, thinking person."

"And teachers can always tell when a child comes to school enjoying books. He expects to get continued pleasure from the printed page and is eager to hear new stories, new words and to get on with the business of learning to read for himself."



WATCH HERRING RISE

Halifax (CP) — The herring catch in Nova Scotia will be equal to the catch of all other fish, now about 500,000,000 pounds annually, predicted Fisheries Minister E. D. Haliburton. He said there are almost unlimited stocks and new Icelandic fishing methods are being tried. The present catch is about 100,000,000 pounds a year.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

The election, thank goodness, is over. We lost our Minister of Agriculture, Harry Hayes, in the shuffle. At the time of writing, Maurice Sauvé, Minister of Forestry, is acting in that post.

Last October 20, Mr. Sauvé delivered a powerful, thoughtful address before the Annual Convention of the Union Catholique des Cultivateurs. His subject — The Future of Farming in Eastern Canada. Whether or not Mr. Sauvé will be made Agricultural Minister, his penetrating ideas are sure to have a major influence in shaping the destiny of our industry. Here, in summary, are some of the highlights from his address:

The present massive investments in support programs are not achieving the desired goal of parity between rural and urban dweller, he noted. An attempt to reach parity should be carried out at three distinct levels: parity of income for full-time farmers; equality of opportunity for marginal farmers to improve their lot; equal opportunity for personal development and well-being for all rural dwellers.

The parity price program in the U.S., Mr. Sauvé said, had not brought true parity. Prices high enough to give the small man parity brought a frightening flood of surpluses. "It has been revealed that there is more disparity between farmers than there is between genuine professional farming and other sectors of the economy," he stated. Therefore these two groups must be considered separately in planning programs, with price parity geared to the needs of the genuine full-time farmer, and satisfying efficiency of production, fair-distribution and stability of income."

"Farm prices cannot rise just to compensate for hidden inefficiencies of production and marketing. In the long run, the only protection a regional product has from outside competitors is the rise in the cost of transportation of the finished product or the fact that the product is perishable. At a minimum, the inefficiencies of our farmers must equal that of competitors vying for the same outlets," he said.

But Mr. Sauvé agreed that inefficiency unfortunately did not guarantee a fair income. "This paralysing characteristic of farming is due mainly to the fact that it is an industry which produces in the "open air", for a non-expanding market, and whose production decisions can never be synchronized or integrated once, in Canada, they are made by 350,000 commercial farm operators whose production, even when planned, is unpredictable." Therefore, he added, "It is extremely likely that official prices, transfer payments . . . and production controls will continue to be required indefinitely to protect farming."

To stabilize income, Mr. Sauvé had two recommendations. With capital replacing labor, technical and economic information for decision making was more necessary than ever, and prices should be guaranteed for longer periods.

Regarding production control, Mr. Sauvé said, "Action on the part of the Government should at no time hamper the collective efforts of producers to control the number of producers by issuing professional certificates, and to regulate supply in the light of market conditions."

To enable the small, marginal, non-professional farmer to free himself from the grip of poverty, Mr. Sauvé recommended the following measures be taken:

1) To enable the most competent, if they so desire, to enlarge their farms;

2) to assist them in co-operating, so that they will benefit from farming and marketing on a larger scale;

3) to enable the older ones, if they so wish, to retire early and the younger ones, if they wish it, to complete their technical and higher education. The others, if they want it, might be given a relocation allowance, a bonus for the release of resources, a guaranteed minimum income for a certain period and a retraining scholarship. These allowances would depend on the sale of their farms. All these marginal farms would be purchased by Land Banks which would redevelop them according to their resources and could then resell them, consolidate them or rent them.

Mr. Sauvé then developed three more major proposals based on these concepts of parity — the need to complete inventories of physical and human resources, an optimistic forecast of the future, and regionalization of farming resources.

Dependable shrubs for rugged conditions

By A. R. Buckley,
Plant Research Institute
of Ottawa

A number of attractive garden shrubs — the Blue Bird hibiscus, fall-flowering buddleias, Somerset daphne, most deutzias, some weigelas and the much advertised blue spirea (Caryopterus) — all might prove hardy in southern Ontario, but they are not rugged plants for most of the provinces.

Looking through the list of hardy shrubs it is quite evident that many, besides being very beautiful, are also much more virile than others and will withstand very rigorous climates. These plants will also grow well in any soil with little attention. These are the shrubs we should use as the nucleus of our plantings, for they may be left alone and unattended and yet will give each year a remarkable display of blooms, fruit or leaf color.

Considering first the tall-growing shrubs whose growth exceeds eight feet, I should like to point out the beautiful winged euonymus (Euonymus alata). This fine shrub is probably more outstanding in October than at any other time for in fall its bright-pink or rosy-red leaf color is unrivaled among woody plants. Mass groupings of this large shrub will produce breath-taking color displays, but even a single specimen will brighten a very large area. Those with limited space would be advised to get the compact form, which is more densely branched and has a deeper red leaf color. You will find it under the name Euonymus alata 'Compacta'.

The Preston lilacs always excite admiration after the other hybrids have finished flowering. The most outstanding of all is the variety Elinor, which has bright-pink tresses of very pleasingly fragrant blooms. Although not available as yet, it will be sold by several Canadian nurserymen in the near future. In the meantime if you are willing to accept a substitute, try Coral or Royalty, both of which have the same tints but not the same drifting fragrance.

In the large shrub category too, is placed the bottlebrush buckeye (Aesculus parviflora). This is surely worthy of mention. From its rounded, luxuriant foliage mass arise, in July, long upright bloom spikes, towering to eighteen inches and tapering like tall white candles with a reddish glow. These large flowers continue to bloom for several days as each floret opens from the base to the tip of the spike.

Medium-sized easy-to-grow shrubs from four to five feet are perhaps better known than the taller ones, because of the demand for this size in recent years. Best known of these is the beautiful but much overplanted bridal wreath spirea (Spiraea vanhouttei). Even more rugged is the Korean spirea (Spiraea trichocarpa), with very long avalanches of pure-white blooms.

All of the bush honeysuckles are easily grown and quite reliably hardy. From the many named forms I would select Arnold Red and Zabel's honeysuckle as the best in this size group. Both have outstanding reddish-pink to carmine flowers produced in profusion.

A good berried shrub with excellent leaf texture is Diel's cotoneaster, which can be seen in late fall in all its glory of colored foliage and bright-red berries. Its tough, normally silver-grey leaves are borne on gracefully pendulous branches and give a texture to the shrub border or foundation planting that is quite distinctive.

The best mock orange in this four-to-five-foot group is without doubt the Dame Blanche. I select this above many others because of its exquisite, compact, yet arching, branches, and its terrific show of bloom. Every branch is heavily laden and the entire plant covered during flowering season in early June.

Among the rugged smaller types of shrubs is a cotoneaster of which I am very fond. This is called simply "early cotoneaster" (Cotoneaster adpressa 'Praecox') and is one of the most dependable of all cotoneasters with its two-foot mounds of glossy leaves dotted in fall with red berries.

Cytisus beani or Bean's broom, grows to one foot high and spreads eventually to form a wide golden carpet of bloom four or five feet wide in June.

The red Japanese barberry and its dwarf forms are splendid plants for nearwalks and under windows, for they grow into lovely symmetrical bronze shrubs from two to three feet high and wide.

Finally, as a dwarf compact shrub one must not overlook the luminous golden blooms of the Gold Drop potentilla. Although this plant was laden with flowers in late May and sparsely through the summer, it once more burst into abundant bloom and was the showiest shrub this fall at the time of writing. This shrub may be clipped to any shape desired and will still produce flowers in profusion.

The Preston lilacs are all hardy shrubs.

Farmers advised on soil samples: handle with care

Charlottetown, P.E.I. — Laboratory testing of his soil offers a farmer a precise, efficient alternative to guesswork in determining fertilizer requirements.

But accuracy of the lab tests can be impaired if his soil samples are not prepared and handled with care, says D. C. Munro, a soil fertility specialist at the federal experimental farm here.

Loss of moisture from a sample between the time it is collected and tested, for example, can result in a recommendation for nitrogen that is below the amount actually needed, explains the researcher.

He offers some pointers for farmers when submitting samples for testing:

— Place each soil sample in a polyethylene bag as soon as it is collected. Tie the bag securely and place it in the regular mailing container.

BM announces centenary awards, farm leadership

Montreal, — A competitive $100,000 awards program, to develop 50 leaders in Canada's farming communities in all parts of the country, is announced by G. Arnold Hart, chairman and president of the Bank of Montreal.

The program — the Bank of Montreal Canada Centennial Farm Leadership Awards — is open to all men and women engaged full-time in farming.

It offers 50 awards of $2,000 each — half in Eastern Canada and half in Western Canada — "to encourage and expand leadership qualities in people in rural areas to enable them to meet the problems arising from growing technological and scientific advances in agriculture."

The new scheme is designed as "a salute to the Canadian farmer for the great contribution he has made to the development of the nation." It is the bank's 150th anniversary in 1967.

Farmers' Initiative

Awards will be made on the value and feasibility of projects of candidates' own initiative to imrove their personal contribution to their communities, plus their own record in community activities.

"On completion of their projects, the 50 winners will be expected to undertake definite programs in their communities, to share their new knowledge and experiences for the benefit of community development," Mr. Hart said.

The Bank of Montreal will have no part in the selection of winners. Independent selection committees have been formed for that purpose.

Travel and Study

The B of M awards provide an opportunity for farm people to undertake worthwhile travel and study projects based on their own ideas, to increase their knowledge of modern rural-development techniques.

In addition to receiving the $2,000 awards, winners will attend expense-paid, two-day seminars at centres in eastern and western Canada in the spring of 1966 and again in the spring of 1967.

HOUSE WILD ASSES

Edmonton (CP) — The first onager or Persian wild ass to be born in Canada is at the Alberta Game Farm, near the provincial capital. Fewer than 100 onagers are known to exist today and the farm bought a pair from Moscow in 1963.

Farmers swindled — taken to the painters

Quebec (CP) — The Quebec Department of Agriculture issued a warning recently against swindlers who offer to paint farm buildings at bargain prices.

Such con-men are taking advantage of publicity for the province-wide farm beautification contest designed to enhance rural Quebec's appearance for Expo 67, it said in a press statement.

The swindlers have approached farmers, falsely claiming to be agriculture department personnel. They offer to paint the farm buildings for low prices and promise subsidies from the government. Then they get the farmers' signatures on a contract for the work.

Later, accomplices come to do the work. However, in the meantime estimates have been revised and the jobs require 15 to 20 rather than five or six gallons of paint. The cost of the work, which wasn't to exceed $50, now reaches $100 or $125.

"The department has never awarded grants to farmers to have painting done," the department said. "Those who promise such grants are merely swindlers."

THE BELLE-MEAD CHOCOLATES

"Way back in 1912 I took a week off to visit my sister in Boston. The manager of the store where I worked asked me to bring him a box of Belle-Mead Chocolates, which were evidently a very special brand and unobtainable in Canada. During the week I had plenty of opportunities to buy them, but postponed doing so, as there were signs all over town saying, "on sale at all elevated and railway stations."

On the day of my departure I tried to get them at the elevated railway station. They had never heard of them. Before train time at the North Station I tried again. They had had them but were sold out. I got off at Lowell where the train stopped for several minutes, and tried again. They had never heard of them. I got off again at Concord, N.H., and made a beeline for the newsstand. They had several brands, but no Belle-Mead Chocolates.

But I wasn't licked yet. On the way down from Montreal to Boston the train had stopped for a few minutes at Woodsville, N.H. From the window I saw a store across the road from the station with a bunch of bananas in the store window. I ducked across to get some bananas. Yes, the store had Belle-Mead Chocolates. All kinds of them. One, two, and five-pound boxes. So I knew I could get them there — but on the way back to Montreal. So when my train reached Woodsville I rushed across the road from the station. The store was burned to the ground! In the meantime another train, southbound, had pulled up between me and my train. I had to run around the end of it. This was in the month of March, so I had to slosh through a wide puddle of melted snow and water to catch my train, which was already moving off.

I swung aboard just in time, soaked to the knees. But I had pretty well dried out before reaching Montreal. And I never got the Belle-Mead Chocolates. — But I tried, didn't I!

STORING APPLES

Small quantities of apples may be stored in perforated plastic bags in the refrigerator. Large quantities store well in a ventilated cold-storage room. Be sure to wrap each apple with tissue or special storage wrap and cover the basket or hamper with perforated plastic.

A Crying Baby

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

The persistent, very sharp cry of pain, when nothing will comfort or distract a baby, should be reported by phone to the doctor. If the crying continues to be a major problem, the doctor is the person to consult, not relatives or friends or neighbors. Doctors are specialists in the ways of babies and they know best what parents should do about a particular baby's crying problem which is too much for them to handle.

Young fathers and young mothers too, often are alarmed, annoyed and mystified when, shortly after the baby comes home from the hospital, he has crying spells.

"He can cry so hard that I'm scared there's something dreadful the matter with him," a mother said. "Then in a few minutes after he has stopped he is as peaceful and happy as a baby could be."

Babies are extremists. If they start to cry they usually seem to concentrate on really crying. In pioneer days there was usually an older woman in the big house where the young couple lived, a maiden aunt, or grandmother, who re-assured the parents that every baby cries hard part of the time and that usually all a baby needs is loving attention. Before long a baby grows out of this frequent crying stage.

Many of today's young couples live in small homes by themselves, with no one to turn to about baby's crying spells. If they are in an apartment they are terrified that the nearest neighbors will complain to the landlord about the baby disturbing their sleep. The mother dreads the expense of moving and rushes to pick up the baby at his first yell.

All healthy small babies do some crying. It is their way of expressing their needs, discomforts and emotions. Before long a mother recognizes the hungry cry of a baby protesting the cramplike feelings of his empty tummy compared with the sharp cry of a baby in pain. The fretful wail of a tired out infant who for some reason is having difficulty going to sleep is very different from the yell of a baby frightened by a loud noise or falling.

A little crying doesn't harm a baby but it is unnatural for the baby and also upsetting for their mother to let him cry on and on for a long period. No longer do most mothers follow a rigid schedule and never feed babies a little ahead of time if they are crying for their next meal.

A hungry baby can work himself up into a highly emotional state. As his cries continue he gasps spasmodically and swallows air. Then he is in no condition to settle down quietly and enjoy, much less digest, his meal when he does get it.

The most common reason for a baby's crying is an empty stomach and if it is near his next meal time, a mother should pick him up and feed him. If he is half way in time between two meals, a little boiled water may satisfy him.

A change of diapers may be his other urgent need. Fresh diapers will certainly make him more comfortable. Perhaps a pin is sticking into him or he may have too many covers, and be too hot, or even too cold because he has kicked off his covering. His bed should be smooth and comfortable.

Perhaps an air bubble is hurting him and he needs to be picked up, held against mother's shoulder and gently patted on the back and "burped". Just to be held reassures the crying baby. Once he stops yelling, he may relax and fall asleep in a few minutes.

Roast of pork welcome choice at any season

A well-cooked roast of pork is a welcome choice at any season, but it is especially popular now that cooler weather is with us. A stuffed loin roast has a festive air that lends itself to many occasions from Sunday dinner to a special party Dad will appreciate it because carving is a pleasure.

Pork Loin Roast with Apple Stuffing

Select matching pork loins and have them boned, or buy a five-pound loin roast and have it boned and cut in two.

Prepare Apple Stuffing (recipe below). Preheat oven to 325°.

Spread stuffing between the two boned loins (fat sides out), and then tie together securely. Rub surfaces with seasoned flour made by blending together two tablespoons flour, half teaspoon of salt, a quarter teaspoon each of pepper, dry mustard and paprika, and a few grains of thyme or sage.

Place roast on rack in an open pan. Bake in preheated 325° oven for about 45 minutes per pound or until thermometer inserted in thickest part of the meat reaches 185°, (in about three and a half hours). Do not add water and do not baste.

Let roast stand about 10 minutes, then carefully remove string. Serve hot, with gravy. Spiced red crabapples or cranberry sauce will add a special touch. Makes six to eight servings.

Apple Stuffing

Two tablespoons, butter or margarine; 3 tablespoons of chopped onion; 2 cups soft bread crumbs; one large apple coarsely shredded; 1 tablespoon chopped parsley; half a teaspoon thyme or sage; one teaspoon of salt; few grains of pepper.

Melt butter or margarine in a pan. Add chopped onion and cook until just tender but not brown. Add soft bread crumbs, shredded apple, chopped parsley, thyme or sage, salt and pepper. Combine lightly but thoroughly.

Fond memories of beef stew!

Not so very long ago, in grandmother's day, the cast-iron pot on the back of the stove was almost a permanent fixture in the kitchen. Into it grandmother would put stewing meats, fresh garden vegetables and a savory blend of herbs and seasonings. She would lovingly tend to the long cooking needed to turn out a delectable stew . . . her kitchen would fill with the spicy odors of the meat and vegetables cooking in the rich gravy, beckoning to children and grownups alike. If it were a chilly autumn day the family would gravitate toward the warmth of the stove in eager anticipation of the feast to come.

Although the trend today is to serve quick, simply prepared meals, a savory stew is still a favorite with most families. Whether it is done on the top of the stove or in the oven, stew utilizes the less tender cuts of beef and is a marvelous "budget stretcher".

Crusty Oven Stew

"The tender biscuit-topping hides a succulent blend of brown beef, garden vegetables and herbs," says the description of this delectable recipe from the Consumer Section at Ottawa. . .

2 Pounds stewing beef (cut in 1-inch cubes), ¼ cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, 4 to 6 tablespoons cooking oil or fat, 6 small onions, 1 cup sliced carrots, 1 cup diced celery, 1 cup diced turnips, ½ pound sliced mushrooms (optional), 1 clove garlic (crushed), 2 cups diced potatoes, 3 cups tomato juice, ½ teaspoon oregano, salt and pepper to taste, 2 teaspoons sugar, 2 tablespoons flour.

Topping — favorite biscuit recipe, 2 tablespoons of chopped parsley, ½ cup shredded carrots.

Roll meat in flour, salt and pepper mixture. Brown meat in cooking oil or fat. Remove from pan. Sauté the onions, carrots, celery, turnips, mushrooms and garlic in same pan for 5 to 6 minutes. Mix with the browned meat. Add potatoes and turn into a 3-quart casserole.

Combine tomato juice, seasonings, sugar and flour. Bring to boil, stirring constantly. Pour thickened tomato juice over meat and vegetables. Cover and bake at 325°F. until meat is tender, 2 to 2½ hours.

Prepare your favorite biscuit dough and roll into a rectangle ½-inch thick. Sprinkle with parsley and carrots and roll up like a jelly roll. Cut into slices about ½-inch thick and place on top of stew. Bake in a 425°F. oven until lightly browned about 25 minutes. 6 to 8 servings.

Pastel uniforms in hospitals

Gainesville, Fla. (WMNS) — When children in a hospital are treated by nurses dressed in ordinary street clothes rather than their usual white uniforms and caps, the youngsters are apt to be less frightened and anxious. This is the finding of a study made by the Gainesville (Fla.) Hospital and Clinic and reported in Hospitals, Journal of the American Hospital Association.

Children from six months to five years, the study shows, "cried less, ate better, could be held for physical examination, and seemed more eager to be held" by nurses wearing colored dresses rather than white uniforms. School-age children, too, seemed more at ease.

Parents were also enthusiastic about the changeover. They felt that nurses were "more approachable" and their children "more manageable" in the changed atmosphere. One mother explained that her child had such a fear of white that the youngster was even afraid to go to the supermarket where the clerks wear white jackets. This is not uncommon reaction, since children associate men and women in white with shots and medicine.

Fall is a favorite re-decorating time in Canadian homes, and nothing can transform a room as easily or as quickly as new curtains and draperies.

History books tell us that curtains were originally used to hang on cold walls and across open doorways to keep heat in a room. For many centuries window framing was considered a needless luxury. The masses used heavy wooden or iron shutters to keep out glare and wind.

Today curtains and draperies have moved from walls and doorways to windows in every home and though their purpose is still light and air control, their decorative appeal gets first consideration. As a basic ingredient of any decorating scheme it could not be otherwise.

Quick change decorating ideas are as varied as the multitude of fabric styles and types being made in Canadian mills today. The biggest single change in this array has been the fairly recent disappearance of the curtain marquisettes that required patient stretching and hours of ironing. Man-made easy care fibres have eliminated the curtain chores and they fully live up to their drip-dry reputation when it comes to marquisettes.

Regardless of your personal decorating tastes there are a few basic dictums that apply to curtains and draperies. Always be lavish with fullness — nothing is worse than the stingy, stringy look. An abundance of inexpensive fabric will look much better than a skimpy expensive one. Drapery fabrics should be in a firm weave and sunfast colors and these are now available in every type of fibre and pattern.

The important thing about a window isn't necessarily the view. Decorating can make it the focal point of a room with fabrics that dramatize or change the dimension, soften light and sound and also conceal architectural problems.

Measure carefully before you shop. Correct length for curtains and draperies can be one of three: the sill, the bottom of the window apron or the floor. In the matter of width remember to allow extra for seaming and overlap. Single tier café curtains, so popular today, look best when rod and heading line up with one of the horizontal framings of the window panes.

Window walls of handsome draperies can make small rooms look large, can unify groups of windows, disguise small ones and add depth and elegance to any room. Colors should be geared to furniture, carpet or wall coverings and the variety of choice includes luxurious antique satins, elegant damasks, subtly textured or rough-slubbed weaves and a whole world of colorful prints and easy-care sheers.

You can change the whole atmosphere of your kitchen or breakfast nook with gay café curtains. A cheery garden setting can be achieved with flower prints that will bloom all winter long. You can brighten your family playroom with vivid striped or popular provincial patterns; you can transform a bedroom with voluminous sheers.

Decorating is fun and fashionable. Even your window shade can become part of the decor picture. Laminating the fabric of your choice to window shades can create stunning decorative effects.

In 1891 the top 10 jobs for working women were servant, dressmaker, teacher, farmer, seamstress, tailor, saleswoman, housekeeper, laundress and milliner.

In 1961 they were stenographer and typist, clerical occupations, sales clerk, maid and related service work, teacher, bookkeeper and cashier, nurse, farm laborer, waitress, seamstress and sewing machine operator.

During the last 60 years, women have been moving out of the fields of personal service and manufacturing, and more and more of them have been working in clerical jobs. In 1901 they made up about 22 per cent of all clerical workers. In 1961, about 61 per cent of the people in the clerical field were women.

Farm work was the only one of the top 10 job categories in which women did not outnumber men.

Paid Less

A federal department of labor booklet, Women at Work in Canada, says, on the basis of Dominion Bureau of Statistics and census figures of income, the average incomes of individual men are about twice the average of women.

A DBS table shows the average income for men who worked 50 to 52 weeks in the year ending March-April 1962 was $5,014. Women in the same category averaged $2,634.

Slightly more than one per cent of the women who work in Canada earn more than $6,000.

The booklet suggests that most women who work do so for money, and this is probably largely true even though some women will use money as an excuse to get social approval when they may work for some other reason.

Keep the Peace

Among the reasons advanced for paying women less, the booklet's author says people believe things go better in the family and in business organizations when women earn less than men.

Other factors which keep the average wage down are cited as: women work in lower-paying light industry rather than heavy; women work in lower-paying clerical jobs; women may work as many years or as st... ily; they will not invest years their training; they prefer sh... er, more regular hours than m... married women will accept rates of pay and bring do... standards for all women.

Two Quebec artists of completely different style and technique are featured in the current exhibition at the Centre d'Art, 360 Main Street. Sister Marie-Anastasie is an abstract painter and Leo Ayotte a conventional landscape and portrait artist. This joint exhibition continues until December 5, open from 2 to 5 daily, also 7 to 9 on Wednesday evenings.

All groups or organizations intending to voice their opposition at the November 30 hearing of the Transport Commission on closing of the CPR service, are invited by the new deputy, Roger Regimbal, to meet at his office, 339 Princess Street, at 8.30 p.m. this Thursday. The idea is to co-ordinate all arguments and petitions so as to present a united protest against the abolition of this essential service.

If rumors are substantiated, it seems there will be numerous aspirants for the Liberal candidature in the next provincial election, which should take place in the summer of '66.

It is similarly indicated that there will be many seeking nomination to the new city council, after the amalgamation of Lachute and Ayersville; likely there will be contests for every seat — six aldermen and a mayor.

As this is written, lights are being strung for the annual festive illuminations, in the shopping sections of town. The spirit of Christmas is evident in our stores, and even the snowy landscape is appropriate — if it stays that way.

Expo '65 proceeds go to Lions' Arena

In return for collaboration of the Lions Club in providing accommodation for Expo 65 in the new Arena, the Chamber of Commerce presented a $1,000 cheque last week to the club. The sum, from proceeds of the Expo venture, will be applied to the Arena building fund. Seen here (right to left) are President Bob Dixon of the Lions Club; Mozart Carriere, committeeman for the rink construction; Jacques Maheu, chairman of the Expo 65; and Jos. Santini, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Prisoner at police headquarters found dead from bullet wound

Robert Bates, a 62-year-old resident of Dalesville, was found dead early Monday morning in front of his cell in the Q.P.P. headquarters on Princess Street.

It is reported the victim was allowed out of his cell by Q.P.P. agent Yvon Senecal, following his request to use the bathroom facilities. The young constable, who has been stationed in Lachute less than two weeks immediately on completion of his training, allowed the prisoner out of the cells and kept the door of the adjacent washroom open. Hearing no activity, he attempted to force his way into the small room, and was stabbed through the hand.

A lengthy battle ensued, as was evidenced by the overturned furniture and blood-splattered walls throughout the office. Agent Senecal, feeling faint due to loss of blood, then managed to get out of the office and upstairs to the apartment of Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, officer-in-charge. He awakened Cpl. Dallaire by pounding on his apartment door, and by the time the two police officers returned to the downstairs office, the prisoner was lying dead on the floor, the apparent victim of his own hand. Cpl. Dallaire reported the first thing he noticed was his office door broken in, and his revolver which had been taken from his desk, in the hand of the victim. He stated he immediately notified Q.P.P. headquarters in Montreal, and was authorized to carry out the investigation.

Cpl. Dallaire reported that Mr. Bates was picked up for questioning late Sunday morning; he was searched and locked up shortly after noon. Prior to this, he was walking around the office however, and made use of the washroom at least twice. Cpl. Dallaire believed it was on one of these occasions that the victim hid the knife in the washroom. The officer continued work on the case until after eight o'clock, when he retired to his upstairs apartment.

It was around 1.15 a.m. Monday that the victim asked to be allowed to use the washroom facilities, and only moments after this, the stabbing and subsequent battle occurred.

An inquiry under the direction of District Coroner Dr. John C. MacKimmie was opened Monday afternoon and adjourned; the inquest will be re-opened behind closed doors.

A former resident of Weir, Mr. Bates is survived by his wife and 13 children.

Panel speakers at District Home-School discuss regional aspects of 'Operation 55'

There was a record attendance at the Lachute Home and School Association meeting on Wednesday evening, November 17, proving that changes in education are of utmost public importance, and of concern to parents and teachers.

The topic for discussion at this meeting was "The Progress of Operation 55." Two representatives from the Regional Board, Mr. Lorne Duncan of Lachute, and Mr. Frank Knights, of Grenville, were present to report on the progress made since the Board was formed.

There were also three principals of High Schools — Mr. F. Royal, Lachute, who spoke on "Needs and Values of a Composite High School"; Mr. J. Leggitt, Brownsburg, whose topic was, "Course Outline For Students"; and Mr. J. M. Turner, Grenville, who discussed, "Co-ordinating the Elementary School Program".

Mr. A. J. Whiteway, president of Home and School, opened the meeting. He dispensed with the business report until January, due to the importance of this discussion and the many guests present. A motion was put forward to the members of Home and School, sent by the Board of Directors, Quebec Federation of Protestant Home and School — that this body be empowered to move immediately to establish a joint Provincial Council with the English Catholic, French Catholic, and French Protestant Parent-Teacher groups, for the purpose of establishing a unified voice for Home and School in areas of common interest. As there were no dissensions, the motion was passed unanimously.

Mr. Whiteway welcomed the guest speakers and the audience, then turned the meeting over to Principal Royal. Mr. Royal introduced the first speaker, Mr. Knights, who explained how the Regional Board was set up and what districts will attend the Composite High School. These are Arundel, Grenville, Harrington, Morin Heights, Shawbridge, St. Jerome, Brownsburg and Lachute. One of the problems facing the Board is transportation and distance to be travelled; it is hoped this will be eased in future by better roads.

Mr. Duncan told of plans for the Composite School. It is probable that the present High School will be renovated and used. If a new school is to be built, it was felt they would need 25 acres of land, although he said they could "get by with less". It is understood English Catholic students will also attend this Composite School.

Due to wide interest in the progress of the Composite School the remarks of the three principals will be published in their intirety. This will be presented in three parts, starting this week with Mr. Royal's address. Space does not permit publishing these topics verbatim all in one edition.

Question Period

A question-and-answer period followed the speakers' addresses. Questions from the audience included the following:

What date is set for this school to be in operation? — Mr. Duncan said 1967-68, but the date had been extended to 1970 if this extra time was needed.

If the Regional Board purchased the Barron property, what would it be used for? — Principal Royal said the Board was only interested in a part of this property, to be used as a sports area.

Where would the Board procure Vocational teachers? — Mr. Royal answered, they could come from industry; then teachers would be hired and trained to meet this need.

A question was asked concerning costs for the new school. — Mr. Duncan said the government grant would take care of the cost of setting up the training shops.

It was asked if the Board would assume responsibility for education of retarded children. — Mr. Royal replied that the Catholic Commission was doing this, and if anyone knew of children educable and trainable who could go to school, and were not doing so at present, to contact the Rev. Sister Damien Bernard . . . Many more questions were asked and all were answered very capably by the Board members.

Mr. Wes Younkie thanked the speakers on behalf of the Association. The next meeting for Home and School will be held in January.

The needs and values of a Composite High School

Compiled from notes of Principal Fred Royal, panellist at Lachute District Home and School discussion

A Changing Society

The so-called horse and buggy days have given way to automation. The ditch diggers of yesterday are no longer required. As a last resort for the uneducated, there is little left in the way of a livelihood.

There is a marked increase in the number of service trades, due to the gadgets and devices of our modern age.

Shorter work hours afford more leisure. The automobile is an essential instrument for recreation in today's economy.

The average man has proportionally far more money to spend than a decade or a generation ago.

Machine operators and repairmen are needed. A student who does not continue academically must be prepared for an occupation, but there are infinitely more occupations available.

The Dropout Problem

Every year there are well over 100 dropouts in Grades 8-10 in this Regional Board area. What do they do? We are faced here with the problem of juvenile delinquency.

At the present time there is lack of suitable training for these potential dropouts. In a polyvalent school there is opportunity for both academic and vocational training — or a mixture of the two. A student may carry a low stream in English, a top stream in Mathematics, and learn a vocation at the same time.

Advantages of Larger School

A larger school can offer a much wider academic curriculum, as well as vocational courses. It is economically possible to teach more subjects because, in a larger school, there will be a sufficient number of students to fill a class.

The larger school system will also provide a better opportunity to study and use newer methods of teaching. These may include subject promotion, activist methods, team teaching, programmed learning, streaming by subjects, and other group methods.

The larger school unit allows for much more flexibility in Subject Promotion.

It gives scope to better "auxiliary services", such as guidance, school clubs, recreation, health.

The enrolment affords sufficient students to effectively and economically operate remedial

Ladies' Night a bright spot in activities of Lions Club

A successful and pleasant evening was reported at the Lions Club ladies' night, held last week at La Lorraine Motel. The members and their wives were cordially welcomed by President Bob Dixon, and special speaker for the occasion was Mme Solange Chaput-Rolland, the author of "My Dear Enemies".

A pleasing feature in the program was the presentation of a Lions' testimonial plaque to Clayton Robinson, in recognition of his energetic service to the club over the past years. Mr. Robinson latterly left Lachute for Montreal, due to business requirements. The presentation was made by Don Hay, who paid tribute to the various roles and assignments Lion "Robbie" had filled, and his devotion to these club duties — not only in Lachute but previously, in other branches of the club.

A cheque of $1,000 was presented by Lion Jos. Santini, president of the Chamber of Commerce, as proceeds of the Expo 65, which, he stated, had been successful beyond expectations. The club had given the use of the new Lions' Arena for this ambitious undertaking.

Dr. Eric Mongeon reported the official opening of the Arena was set for November 28. However, it would be in actual use for skating and junior hockey before that date.

In aid of the fund for this project Lion Louis de Breyne is "fathering" a bingo event at the Auditorium, December 2, which is further advertised in this issue.

Following the dinner proceedings and discourse, the members, guests and ladies enjoyed dancing to the music of the La Lorraine trio.

Speaker's Topic

The guest speaker was introduced by Mozart Carrière and was thanked by Jean-Claude Paquin, who presented a token of appreciation from the club.

Title of Mme Chaput-Rolland's address was, "The Difficult Majority" dealing with bicultiuralism and harmonious co-existence. The following thoughts were conveyed to an audience mixed in ethnic extractions but wholeheartedly attentive throughout.

Quebec should speak with rather than at the people of Canada, said the visitor, speaking alternately in French and in English.

Canada is a big country, and although we believe in it intently, few are familiar with the whole of this great land.

English-speaking Canadians who live in Quebec, must start to live with Quebec, to know and understand their neighbors, and we have a momentous message to tell outside our province.

Democracy implies respect for others. In Quebec, and in Canada, we must teach the lesson of co-existence, to live together and to respect each other's ideals.

Mme Chaput-Rolland spoke ardently for the purity of language which should be maintained insofar as possible by the ethnic groups, while learning and using the alternate tongue.

She strongly advocated, also, the privilege of children to be educated in schools of their own language — speaking of the lack of such opportunity in the minority French population outside this province.

Life sentence for slaying, St. Placide incident in 1964

Accused of non-capital murder, Valérien Filiatreault, 46, of St. Placide, was found guilty at the Terrebonne district assizes at St. Jerome, and was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Fernand Legault.

Filiatreault was charged with the shooting of Gerard Gauthier, 44, in August 1964, during an argument in his St. Placide summer camp.

Evidence at the trial revealed that Gauthier had entered Filiatreault's cottage to ask permission to cross his property to take a swim. An argument followed, in which Gauthier was shot.

Neighbors who rushed to the scene found Gauthier lying in a pool of blood outside the camp.

Filiatreault asked the neighbors to call police, while he returned to his cottage. Here, police said, he attempted to take his own life with a rifle.

Doctors succeeded in saving his life after several operations, and plastic surgery was performed on his face.

Girl injured by transport truck

Francine Dinel, nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurent Dinel, of Sandy Hill, was seriously injured shortly after noon on Tuesday of last week, when she was struck by an Overnight Express transport near Bradford Street, Ayersville. The child, who was accompanied by 11-year-old Diane Dumas, ran in front of the oncoming vehicle.

Provincial Police were notified of the accident at 12.30, and one officer reported he tried in vain to reach four doctors and both local ambulances. As a result, the child lay on the highway for over 30 minutes without medical attention, until the arrival of Dr. Marc Papineau, who had the girl taken to the Argenteuil Hospital. At latest report, she is said to be recovering from a badly injured leg and severe shock.

The accident was investigated by Q.P.P. Constable Raymond Hetu.

Costly collision at street corner, school youth hurt

An accident at the junction of Main, Mary and Robert Streets early Monday morning resulted in a school student being detained in hospital for observation, and over $3,500 material damage to the automobiles involved.

The accident occurred at 8.25 a.m. when cars driven by André Lefebvre and Liguori Chevrier collided at the intersection. According to investigating police, the car driven by Mr. Lefebvre was on Main Street and headed for Mary Street, while Mr. Chevrier's car was on Main Street proceeding towards Robert Street. Both drivers stated that when they saw the other car, it was too late to avoid a collision.

Mr. Lefebvre's car was struck broadside and pushed into a pole at the corner; it was a total loss. The car driven by Mr. Chevrier, the property of Graves Auto Leasing, suffered damages exceeding $500. Several of the occupants of Mr. Lefebvre's car were taken to the Argenteuil Hospital for attention, his 14-year-old son, Charles, being detained.

The mishap was investigated by Cst. Michel Durand, of the Municipal Police.

Five other accidents of a minor nature were investigated by the town police.

Week's Epigram

A miser is tough to live with, but he makes an awfully good ancestor.

Funeral for victim of bridge-tunnel building mishap

Funeral service for the late James Tomalty, of Belleville, was held here Monday afternoon, at the MacKimmie Funeral Home, followed by interment at Weir cemetery. The Rev. Geo. Hicks, of Brownsburg, conducted the service.

The late Jim Tomalty, 39, was one of three victims in a collapse of machinery at the St. Lawrence bridge-tunnel project east of Montreal. A native of Weir, he had lived in Staynerville before going to Belleville six or seven years ago. He had been employed on construction jobs for many years.

He is mourned by his wife, the former Mona Farrara of Calumet, and three daughters. His brother, Charles, resides at Staynerville, and many relatives are in this district. He leaves also a sister, Mrs. Chas. Davis, in Weir, and another brother, Leonard, in Montreal.

Accident on Construction

Two men were killed and a third presumed dead following the collapse of three huge sand-filled hoppers on a barge anchored a mile offshore at the eastern end of Montreal Island last Friday morning.

The other worker killed was Lionel Bellware, 37, of Verdun, and the missing man was identified as 33-year-old Paul-Emile Belanger of Jacques Cartier, who was believed thrown into the icy waters of the St. Lawrence.

The sand-hoppers, loaded with 300 tons, collapsed on a shack on the barge where six workers were eating lunch around 2 a.m.

Rescue workers managed to save the lives of three of the men buried in the sand. They were taken to hospital for treatment.

All were employed by the Atlas

Explore winter job potential

Among those prominent at a meeting for Winter Employment planning in this area were the above group of civic leaders: (left to right) Mayor J.-René Lafleur of Brownsburg; Roger-E. Régimbal, M.P., who made his first official appearance at this function, since his recent election; Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon of Lachute; Jos. Santini, manager of the National Employment Service for this district. At the rear (same order) are Mayor David Morrison of Harrington; Mayor Henri Labreche of St. Andrews; and Mayor Rodolphe Moreau of Ayersville. The meeting was held at the National Employment Office.

Committee meets for winter job promotion

Members of the committee for promotion of wintertime employment were informed last week on the objectives of this annual campaign. At a meeting in the National Employment Service offices, the assistant district manager, Laurent Savage, outlined the aims as follows:

(a) Encourage business, industry and individuals to so arrange their activities that the maximum winter employment is maintained;

(b) Encourage municipal authorities to take full advantage of programs designed to promote winter employment and to schedule civic programs to that end;

(c) Assist the N.E.S. in the distribution of Winter Employment publicity, and enlist the support of organizations in publicity for the campaign;

(d) Report known hirings, staff retention, and other results which would indicate the success of the campaign.

According to Mr. Savage (substituting for the N.E.S. manager, Jos. Santini, who was absent for the first part of the meeting) there were 15 municipalities in the district supporting the campaign last winter, and these undertook projects amounting to $577,000. From year to year the situation is improving. On November 16 there were only 439 persons applying for jobs (125 women, 314 men). In 1963-64 the N.E.S. had placed 227 job applicants, and the following year, 315. The marked drop in employment occurs, of course, in the winter season, and it is to counteract this ebb that the governments initiated the Winter Works Program, by which they defray 90 percent of actual labor costs.

Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon, who chaired the meeting, believed that too few municipalities were aware of the advantages of this plan, or of the benefits to be derived from promoting winter projects. He encouraged the municipal representatives from this area to explore the possibilities, thus keeping men at work and stimulating the winter economy.

Roger Régimbal, M.P.-elect, also asked the municipalities, contractors, and even individual businessmen and property holders, to lend a hand for winter employment. There are economic and humanitarian incentives, and the entire populace should be aware of the problem and willing to assist.

To construct a Senior Citizens' Home for Lachute

Plans are being made to build a home for "senior citizens" of Lachute and district. The first information to be known in preparation for the Home is the number of elderly people who are interested in securing this type of accommodation. The directors envisage a Home where meals are provided, but not hospital care. The size of the building will depend on the number of people who show their interest in the Home.

In order to assess the need of a Home, a survey is to be held next week in the office of the Lachute United Church, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. If you have been waiting for information on this project, now is the time to register your interest at the church office; or if you cannot call yourself, telephone the office number, 562-2112.

Office Hours: 9:30 noon — Monday, Nov. 29; Wednesday, Dec. 1; Friday, Dec. 3.

(French-speaking residents are advised to visit the office instead of using the telephone.)

By BOB ATCHISON

At long last, sporting groups are starting to take a look at the policies of our governments. Believe me, I have waited a long time for this. Complaints are heard from the S.P.C.A. and other groups in the Eastern Townships, the open season for all categories of deer this year; this has been the final straw. It has taken a long time for other groups to get in on this waste of wildlife; by now they will realize that the government is not seriously concerned about the natural resources of this province, just so long as they are producing financially. Most organizations have cared little about what was going on, except in their own little area. This is evident in their lack of regard for other regions. We in this county have been beefing about the situation for a long time, especially the killing of does and fawns; but to no avail. Complaining has done no good; indeed, in most cases there is not even a reply to correspondence sent to the authorities.

All in the Townships are up in arms because of the killing of 30-lb. fawns, etc. I wonder what they would have done if this situation had existed some years before. By now they would have no deer to be killed, and in most places not even a sign of one. Sure, there have been token gestures by the government, such as stocking fish in certain lakes; by doing this they can inform the public they are active in conservation. We are supposed to have the Wildlife Federation to protect and to recommend such things as will help the situation, but so far they have only been in business a score or more years, so you can't expect anything yet. Admittedly, their occasional briefs could have helped in some small way, but it appears to me they do not push things to a conclusion. For some reason these briefs have invariably been "watered down".

The only way to ensure protection for our wildlife is to keep plaguing the government. After all, we elect these men to office, so don't you think it's about time we had something to say about the depletion of our resources? Shareholders have a lot to say in the running of a commercial enterprise, so why shouldn't we? Maybe we are too apathetic. Or we think our little voice is not strong enough. This I concede, but one voice can join with others, then we have something that makes itself heard.

A few more ducks have been in evidence, and I was pleased to see at least a few. For a long time now there has not been a duck in our vicinity, and it looks bad for their future. On Wednesday, 17th, I spotted two blacks, but even these failed to stir my optimism. It seems I'm always painting a grim picture on wildlife. I am, too, because if we don't do something about it soon, we will have no wildlife to worry about. Some of the boys who go out shooting on the Ottawa after ducks tell me that this, in their opinion, has been the worst season yet. I know a couple of ardent shooters who never missed a week-end, but they have only been out twice this year, and one of them has now sold his shotgun. And these were conscientious duck hunters.

Anyone who sets out to see how many they can kill, is sure going to be in for a big surprise. I know, when I went out on duck expeditions, it was rather for the sport of seeing them in action. Carrying a gun is, in a lot of cases, just an excuse to go and sit in a cold, wet blind early in the morning (when no sane person would be up). Besides, nearly all the hunters I know just help the birds on their way. Ducks are lazy at times, but with a little shot thrown in the air about 10 feet behind them, they usually get moving.

There are plenty of birds around our feeders these days. I had a call from another enthusiast, and from the description, their visitors were cowbirds. A flock of these came into our feeders today and chased everything else away. I don't believe these critters will stay around any one feeder too long, so there is no worry about them driving all the other birds away. We have also had a few juncoes in the past couple of days, so that things are getting back to normal for the winter birds. I was also told of another bird that had been seen; the lady thought it was a woodpecker, but as it came down the tree headfirst this was a white-breasted nuthatch. The variety is common later on, when it gets a little colder in this district. It has not always been around during the winter, but I think within the past few years it has started to stay in this vicinity; maybe it gets sufficient feed; and it could be a new breed of bird, I don't know. We still have one robin with us, though I'm afraid this will soon take off. Maybe it didn't intend to fly south; or it could be hurt and not able to fly that distance. A few horned larks are starting to show up also; we are lucky.

I have been told that a group of sportsmen have decided to start going into the bush this winter and spread feed for the birds, in particular partridge and the few pheasants we have around. They do not know just where to spread this feed, but that does not really seem to concern them, sooner or later the birds will find it, if it has been placed right. This is an excellent idea and one that will certainly be worthwhile. On top of this, there is the possibility of saving a lot of birds from starvation if the winter happens to be extra rough.

A few words on the rabbit situation: It is hard to figure out what is happening with these animals. In certain spots they are abundant, while in other areas there is not even a track to be found. Of course, this all has to do with the feeding, which can account for spotty population. After all, animals like a change once in a while. If they have been in one area too long, it will be eaten out, hence the change of habitat. This often happens with other animals, deer, moose and so on. Then another factor may be disease — and this, I believe, is the most probable.

A word of advice: With all the snow available, most of you owners of snow vehicles will be out riding around the bush. As you know, it is against the law to operate these machines near a game yard; bear this in mind, especially for your first trip. Give the animals a break. It's at this time they are looking over a homing spot for the winter, checking food supplies, etc.; so if you start bugging them now, they will not find a decent place for the winter. Think of the animals; it will pay dividends.

Ski School Director — Ayers Ski Center

In the first column of the season I would like to briefly outline some of the articles you will be reading as well as some of the coming events you shouldn't miss.

The weekly columns will cover four phases of skiing; preseason conditioning, buying equipment, skiing tips, and storage of equipment.

The reason why most top Olympic skiers and in particular our own Nancy Greene of British Columbia can make such a good showing at the world's top events, is the rigorous summer training program they take on. Granted we are not Olympic Skiers, but we should have some form of Preseason Conditioning program set out for ourselves.

Next week I will outline a few very basic exercises I feel every skier should do before they put their skis on for the first time this year.

Local Coming Events

December 11, 7.30 p.m. —Warren Miller movie "The Sound of Skiing" and Fashion Show, at the Lachute Auditorium. Proceeds to go to Ram Ski Club, Junior Racing Program.

January 8, 1966 — Start of Junior Program at 10 a.m., to run for 11 consecutive Saturdays for children between the ages of 6 to 12 inclusive.

January 18, 1966 — Beginning of the Housewives' Special at 10 a.m., to run for 9 consecutive Tuesdays.

Both of these programs are taught by highly qualified ski instructors of the Ross Cole Ski School and offer tuition for all skiers be they beginner or expert. Due to the large number of applicants for these courses, we would advise early registration. Registration forms can be obtained by writing to Box 101, Lachute, or telephoning the ski shop at 562-2383.

The Ram Ski Club is now opened for membership for the coming season and application forms can be obtained by writing to Box 39, Brownsburg.

With the Ram Ski Club now being an affiliated member of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association, the Junior Racers of this club will now be able to take part in races of the Laurentian Zone and therefore offer a higher degree of competition for these children as well as an incentive to the adults to boost their club.

Motor Sport Club News

By James Bullock

Now that the winter has set in, L.M.S.C. members are looking forward to more varied types of competition. I expect that we will be limited to one or maybe two rallies, since these events are planned far in advance and the road conditions cannot be forecast. This will give us the opportunity to try the other forms of motor sport that have been neglected up to now.

When the lakes freeze over, it is hoped that the club will stage some ice races. Not only are these events a challenge to drivers, but they are one of the few events that could be called a spectator sport (if you don't mind the cold). An interested driver can find competition almost every week-end after the middle of January. These events are popular with the novice drivers because they are exciting, they demand a high degree of skill, and if they should make a mistake, it only involves an excursion in a snowbank.

As in other races there would have to be classes for the different sizes of cars. Usually the size of the engine determines the class the car competes in, but on ice there are other considerations. Cars that have the engine over the drive wheels have an advantage that would have to be considered (Volks and Austin 850). Then there is the question of tires. Should snow tires have to compete against standard tires or chains? If the classes are not correctly set up, you will have the situation where the fellow with the most money to spend will have the advantage. Correct classes or restrictions on preparation would eliminate this.

I am not saying that the rally is ruled out in the winter. In many clubs the winter rally is the biggest event of the year. I think that the winter rally is the biggest challenge to a driver-navigator team because it puts so much emphasis on teamwork. Many club members would much rather navigate a rally than drive (myself included), because the driving can tend to get boring. In a winter rally the driver has his hands full trying to keep the car on the road. The key to winning a rally is maintaining the correct average speeds, and if you go off the road or don't make a hill on the first attempt, your chances of getting back on your schedule are slim.

This is where the European cars with their superior handling and suspensions have an advantage over most of the American-style cars, whose large engines coupled with a poor weight distribution and an automatic transmission, make them prone to wheel-spin whenever the going gets slippery. Excellent winter rally cars are the Austin X 1100, 1800, 850, the Cooper, the Volkswagen, the Porche, the Saab, the Citroen, and the Corvair. All have their engine over the drive-wheels. The Volvo has made quite a name for itself because of its excellent handling and reliability.

But please don't think that because you own a '59 Clapmobile you are out of the running. It is always the ability of the driver-navigator team that counts. The car can just make it a little easier for you. Besides, win or lose, we rally for the fun of it. (That's what I keep telling myself, anyway.)

Winters can be hard on sports cars, and on sports car drivers, too.

Playoffs of the successful Saturday Mixed Curling bonspiel will be held this Saturday, November 27. The program is an attractive one. . . The events of the evening will start with a meal. And what a meal! There will be pig knuckles, baked ham, home-made pies and sauerkraut. A feast to tax the capacities of all trencher-men, and one which will amply supply all the energy to sustain you through an evening of dancing to Emmett Lowe's Orchestra.

During the evening the final of the bonspiel will be played, the winners receiving prizes. So members all, come and support and enjoy a gala evening. The Board, and Norma and Stewart, have put in some hard work on your behalf, so come along and show your appreciation.

Skip Art Lobel, D. Graham, Carl Rodger and Lloyd Kettyle were runners-up in the St. Jerome Laurentian bonspiel main event. The bonspiel was won by a rink of airmen from the St. Denis Radar Station, and was played on Saturday, November 20.

Arena season tickets go on sale

Story of Architecture in word and picture, at the LHS History Club

By Robert Dawson

Dr. G. R. Rigby, Doctor of Philosophy and Doctor of Science, addressed the Lachute High School History Club on "Architecture Through the Ages" last week — also showing many of the slides he has taken during his tours of Europe and America. He explained that architectural styles are often identified by the characteristic forms of the supports of buildings, and by the decorative embellishments on them.

Architecture, the art of building wisely, is the complete index of every civilization. No architectural style is the result of chance, but is always a concrete representation of the intellectual, social, religious, military, and political conditions of the time and place. Dr. Rigby, a noted archaeologist, traced architecture from its earliest time in Europe to the sheer steel and glass buildings in North America today. He showed how the construction of each new building presented an opportunity to overcome any defects that had become apparent in the designs of previous buildings.

Dr. Rigby explained how the Greeks constantly attempted to make their buildings more pleasing to the eye. The ideal of beauty was closely associated with the religion of the Greeks, and Greek architects continuously tried to achieve perfection of form and proportion.

The Romans adopted many of the architectural ideas of the Greeks. The Romans also began to use arches and domes, which permitted them to build large, spacious buildings. The Romans decorated their buildings by painting and gilding the ceilings and covering the walls with marble veneering.

Dr. Rigby went on to explain the development of Gothic architecture in Europe. The use of flying buttresses made the walls of buildings sufficiently strong that large stained glass windows could be used. The tracery to support this glass only added to the beauty of the building. The elaborate use of windows in Gothic architecture allowed a great deal of light to enter, so the interiors were decorated more lavishly than ever before.

During the Renaissance, Gothic architecture was abandoned and was regarded as being barbarian, explained Dr. Rigby. The flying buttresses of Gothic architecture were considered unsightly by Renaissance architects. They went back to the classic design, feeling that the decorative designs of a building should conceal rather than emphasize the constructive framework.

Finally, Dr. Rigby showed slides of modern skyscrapers built of glass — in which there is no remnant of the pillars, arches, domes, buttresses, and decorations developed through the ages. Modern architecture has reverted to the block-style design, using the straight horizontal and vertical lines of the first buildings in prehistoric times.

The students thanked Dr. Rigby for a most interesting and enlightening lecture.

Mayor Saindon replies to critics, states his case for 'a better town'

Mayor Dr. Zoël Saindon has requested the publication of this open letter, which is a statement of policy and, in effect, a program of development for this town. Taking into account the French idiom, the editor has translated as closely as possible the version which appeared last week in L'Argenteuil.

Since November 10, the evening of a joint caucus of the Lachute and Ayersville councils, certain rumors have been heard concerning my status on Town Council . . . There is no mistake possible on this matter, except in the minds of those misinformed through ignorance, and those maliciously inclined.

I was mayor of Lachute before this caucus — I am still mayor — and I intend to remain so, just so long as the taxpayers, unswayed by this little clique and their tactics, are satisfied with my services and wish me to continue. I am the mayor of Lachute, and Mr. Moreau is the mayor of Ayersville . . . this mandate can only be changed at the coming elections. Mr. Moreau, as agreed, will preside for at least one joint meeting of the two councils in the period preceding the general municipal election, following the government decree for amalgamation of the two municipalities.

Certain antagonists think they pulled a fast joke on me, but as far as I am concerned, it was pointless. The taxpayers of Lachute and even of Ayersville, take a dim view of pettiness among their municipal councillors; and generally speaking, the taxpayers also have a good memory.

Rumors Denied

Certain councillors, dubious of their fate in the coming elections, have lately been dropping rumors — in fact, they have been plentiful this fall . . . It would appear that, alone and single-handed, I purchased the Payload Backdigger which was added to the town equipment two months ago. Let me assure you, I had nothing to do either with the selection or the purchase of this unit; it was acquired by the Council, voted-on unanimously by the nine aldermen on October 6 last.

A second rumor concerns the embellishment of the park. The critics are saying this job has cost between $20,000 and $30,000 (they are so well informed that they can only approximate to a margin of $10,000). The fact is, the Council unanimously voted $2,000 for material and equipment. As for labor, I can assure you this will not exceed $3,000 — including the services of three qualified tradesmen (a foreman carpenter, an electrician and a plumber), the latter two being engaged about one day each. The rest of the work was done by our regular employees, whom we would have had to pay, regardless. If we hadn't put them to work on the park they would have been sweeping streets that did not need sweeping, or stretching out other little jobs — or we could simply have let them go, to report at the Unemployment Insurance Office.

Barron Property

Then there is the Barron property . . . I am devoted to my town; I visualize Lachute as a fine, prosperous community; and I will do all in my power to make that dream come true. The attractions and the prosperity of a municipality are both tied in with its economy, and accordingly, industrial expansion is essential. Nevertheless, geographical, commercial and economic growth — that is, the physical and material factors — should not supersede our intellectual and moral stature. . . . The Barron property, as I see it, is part of the integral heart of Lachute. It is, geographically, an ideal site to be transformed, at a comparatively small expense to the corporation, into a haven of relaxation and of physical and intellectual diversion.

We have approved a plan to homologate this property. When the time comes to take possession, I intend to put the decision to the taxpayers. "Homologation" means, in effect, the "freezing" of the property to prevent its transfer to any other buyer for a period of five years. Its actual purchase by Lachute will depend on the taxpayers' consent, and on its acquisition at a reasonable price. We will have the property valued by professional evaluators. Then, if we could not come to an agreement with the proprietors, expropriation proceedings would be taken.

Some of our citizens argue that expropriation of this property would leave the Town open to a damage suit from the owners. This is not the case. When a homologation project is sanctioned by the constituted authorities, the proprietors have no legal recourse to a claim; and if there is disagreement on price between the two parties, the figure is set by the Court.

This land could be set in order and made usable with relatively little cost to the municipality. Right now we are removing 4,000 yards of earth from Hamford Street. If we already owned the Barron site, we could commence filling and levelling immediately. A year from now we shall be starting improvements on our water and sewer mains, sidewalks and street-paving, where the need exists. Surplus earth and soil from these jobs can be used as "fill" for the property. Surface-clearing of the site can be executed under the Winter Works Assistance plan (90 percent of labor costs paid by the federal government). Also a retaining wall along the North River bordering the property, if found necessary, will be the responsibility of, and undertaken by, the federal authority.

But this is only the start of an extensive overhaul of the two banks of the North River within our town limits — which I vizualize for the future at no great expense to the town. Possibilities for growth and improvement in Lachute are, as you see, almost unlimited. We need the vision and the determination. Give us a hand, and with a little good will and co-operation we will make this town the finest little community in "La Belle Province".

In conclusion, I ask you all for your confidence. I also ask your co-operation. What I have done for the town in one year, I have done with zeal and conscientiously, trying my best to regain the ground lost in our town's healthy progress.

I would like to impress upon my opponents that when I came to city hall I entered by the front door, and when I'm through, I intend to leave the same way.

Of Many Things

By Ambrose Hills

"WE SHALL BANISH WANT"

It was an inspiring statement. It said, "We shall banish want; we shall banish fear. The essence of National Socialism is human welfare . . . National Socialism is the revolution of common man. Rooted in a fuller life for every German from childhood to old age, National Socialism means a new day of abundance at home and a better world order abroad."

Some of you will have guessed who said it. It was Adolph Hitler!

I remembered it as I read a letter-to-the-editor in the NDP paper, The Commonwealth. The writer was deploring the fact that, "We have not socialism in our NDP anymore. We did have many years ago when it started." The writer recalled the days when Mr. Coldwell sneered at reformers as merely putting salve on sores. But now Mr. Coldwell is a reformer himself, along with the present leader of the party, and they have abandoned socialism.

The letter writer goes on to say, bitterly, of leaders, that "They are only human and have weaknesses, they become comfortable and like applause and esteem (from, often, quite ignorant people) and gradually forget all their high ideals and go in for reform, and do not like to disturb the placid waters of the status quo."

The lady who wrote this letter wants socialism, and grieves that Coldwell and Douglas and the NDP have departed from it.

On the other hand, I rejoice that they have apparently departed from it. I wish they would turn completely towards freedom and renounce compulsion as a way of life.

Fear and want cannot be banished except by responsible individual human beings meeting and solving the problems of their environment, and then acting with charity toward those unable to do so. Set men free, and in a voluntary society charity would have a chance to blossom. And there would be abundance at hand to make charity effective.

To give our employees a Saturday break, and to give more efficient delivery – we offer no assurance that orders in future, received after 12 noon on Saturday, will be delivered the same day.

For orders placed after 4 o'clock weekdays, we now guarantee delivery the next day.

We therefore ask fuel-oil customers to co-operate, by placing orders as early as possible in the morning, during every weekday.

We count on this good will, and thank our clients for their collaboration.

The Late Harold Ireland

Funeral rites for the late Harold Ireland, who died November 16 in the Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital, were held last Saturday from the Menard Funeral Home to Ste. Anastasie parish church, with interment at the local Catholic cemetery.

The late Mr. Ireland, 67 years of age, operated a restaurant at Main Street, just east of Bethany, for several years. He came to Canada from Leeds, England; he had seen service in the forces during World War I, and was a member of the Royal Canadian Legion (Branch 70) and of the St. Patrick's Society.

He is mourned by his wife, the former Marie Louise Doiron; two daughters, Dorothy and Irene, in Toronto; a sister, Lily Gray, also a sister by adoption, Elizabeth Standing, both of Toronto.

Lachute man died suddenly at Manicouagan

Late Conrad Seguin

Conrad Seguin, 61, who had been in the employ of Hydro Quebec for the past two years, died suddenly at Manicougan on November 10. He was a former resident of Lachute and employee of Dominion Ayers Limited. The funeral rites were held Monday of last week from the Menard Parlors to Ste. Anastasie Parish Church.

Mr. Seguin is mourned by his wife, the former Marie-Louise Lascelle; three daughters, Sister Marie-Louise (Noella) at Gananoque, Mme Omer Ladouceur (Dolores) of Lachute, Mme Geo. Schelmafke (Jeannette) of North Bay; and six sons, Marcel and Edgar, of Lachute, Maurice and Raymond, of Port Alberni, B.C., Réal, of North Bay, and Léo, of Bienfait, Sask.

Of his immediate family there remain also a brother, Henri Seguin, of Vankleek Hill, and a sister, Mme Willie Lepine, of Lachute.

KILL RATS AT BORDER

Provost, Alta. (CP) — Alberta remains a rat-free province, says J. B. Gurba, provincial pest-control supervisor. Each year there is a rat invasion from Saskatchewan, he says, but the intruders are exterminated as they arrive. Last year's rats were three times as numerous as 1963's but none survived.

Old citizen was 39 yrs. employee of Ayers Limited

The late Norman Hodge

A lifelong and well known resident of Lachute, Mr. Norman E. Hodge, passed away in Montreal on Wednesday night, November 17, in his 61st year.

Mr. Hodge was employed by Dominion Ayers Limited for a period of 39 years, and was known to be a very conscientious and dedicated worker.

He is survived by his wife, Alma Brown, a daughter, Isabel, and a son, Russell, and two grandsons, Danny and Rocky. There also remain two sisters, Florence (Mrs. Henry Lister), Vernes (Mrs. Albert Gauley), and two brothers, Alex and Lawrence, all residing in Lachute.

The funeral service was held Saturday afternoon in St. Simeon's Anglican Church, conducted by the Rev. C. R. Lang, with interment in the Lachute Protestant Cemetery.

Honorary pall-bearers from Dominion Ayers Ltd. were Messrs. Arthur J. Whiteway, Delphis Brisebois, Claude Desrosiers, Dieudonné Boucher, René Desormeaux, Albany Lepine and Cyril Durocher.

The six other pall-bearers were Messrs. Raynald Desjardins, Arthur Leseize, Fred Stansfield, Willis Hodge, Jack Hodge and Bert Jones.

The floral tributes, both numerous and beautiful, showed the high esteem of relatives and friends.

Late Emery Boyer, centenarian of Rockway Valley, was beloved of many

A century of active life drew to its conclusion on Thursday, November 11, with the death of Emery Boyer, a longtime resident of Rockway Valley, who in February of this year had celebrated his 100th birthday.

Born February 22, 1865, in Prescott, Ont., he married the late Hélène Godin in 1891, and moved to the Rouge Valley, where he spent most of his life on a farm. He was predeceased by his wife in 1944. He took up residence with his daughter in Rockway Valley, where he died following a brief illness.

The father of nine children, he is survived by five sons, Ephraim, Paul, Ulysse, Joseph and Emile, and three daughters, Mrs. Lawrence McArthur, of Lachute; Mrs. Delaf Wilson, of Rome, N.Y., and Mrs. Joseph Croft, of Rockway Valley, with whom he made his home — in addition to over 220 descendents down to the fifth generation.

The late Emery Boyer

The funeral service was held in Rockway Valley and was attended by countless mourning relatives and friends; cars at the cemetery were parked solidly half a mile along the roadside. In spite of his advancing age, many were shocked at the news of his passing, for he had enjoyed such good health over the years.

At his 100th birthday celebration, the late Mr. Boyer observed that many things happen in a century, and he had witnessed more "history-in-the-making" than most people. Mr. Boyer lived through the wars that have shaped our present world, as well as the years of peace which have separated these troubled periods. At that time he recalled incidents in the earlier growth of Canada, and looked forward to seeing her Centennial year in 1967.

A religious man, he derived much strength and satisfaction from the Bible, and when asked to account for his longevity, he spontaneously replied with quotations from this, his favorite reading source.

(See special tribute on page 10, this issue.)

Late Cecil Strong spent lifetime in Lakefield

The death of Mr. Cecil Strong occurred on Wednesday, Nov. 17, at the Montreal Neurological Institute, after a short illness. In his 69th year, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Strong of Lakefield, where he had spent most of his lifetime.

Funeral service was held on Saturday from the J. P. MacKimmie Funeral Home, Lachute, to Holy Trinity Church, Lakefield. The service was conducted by the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh, assisted by the Rev. Horace Baugh.

The late Mr. Strong leaves to mourn his passing two sisters, Mrs. Harry Scott, of Lachute, and Mrs. Wesley Hamilton, of St. Laurent, also two brothers, Ira, of Shawbridge, and Leslie, of Lakefield.

The pall-bearers were his three nephews, Wyman and Angus Strong and Brent Laurin, Leonard Boyd, Lawrence Hodge and William Gain. The remains were laid to rest in the Lakefield Cemetery.

Wayne Riddell's Tudor Singers scored success

In a review of the Tudor Singers' concert at the Redpath Hall last week, Eric McLean, music critic for The Montreal Star, paid tribute to Wayne Riddell and his choral group. The following paragraphs are introductory to his more detailed comment on this recital:

"The Tudor Singers of Montreal have gone from strength to strength in the few short seasons they have existed. Wayne Riddell has groomed the 22 voices into a polished, well-disciplined ensemble, and the applause at Redpath Hall last night was certainly deserved.

"This wide variety of music, ranging from Jannequin chansons of the late renaissance, through the classical idiom of Mozart, to the modern part songs of Britten, was prepared so well and delivered with such confidence that it was made to sound easy as pie. But those who know anything about it will realize how much hard work and careful thought is needed to give this impression of effortless enjoyment. . ."

To wed in December

Mr. and Mrs. E. Millar, of Ottawa, wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Lois Ann, to Mr. Joseph E. Brunet, son of Mrs. Alfred McGill of Lachute and the late J. Elzear Brunet. The marriage has been arranged to take place at the end of December.

Cdn. Hghway Safety Council holds 10th annual Safe-Driving Week plea

"Like any other country, Canada has its share of irresponsible drivers," said W. Arch Bryce, executive director of the Canadian Highway Safety Council. "The best protection a driver can take against these menaces is to anticipate their antics and avoid them before they create a crash." Mr. Bryce cautioned motorists to be constantly on the alert for the motorist who switches lanes or makes turns without signalling, tail-gates, drives far beyond a safe speed or, conversely, dawdles at speeds too slow. "Too many thoughtless ones," he said, "start to change lanes without making certain the way is clear. Others dart out from curb parking spaces blindly, or jam on their car's brakes without warning. Watch for them, and get out of their way."

Mr. Bryce said, "If you feel strongly about such drivers and seriously want to do something about them, don't try to educate them while you drive. Rather become active in a road safety project such as the promotion of driver education, periodic vehicle examination or stronger laws to control the drinking driver."

He mentioned Safe-Driving Week, the Council's tenth annual road safety alertness campaign, as a good time to begin such action. The campaign will be observed across Canada from December 1 to 7 this year.

Provincial and community safety organizations, as well as government and industry, will participate. This Canada-only campaign is annually scheduled for the same dates to facilitate promotion and participation.

Safe-Driving Week 1965 will emphasize the responsibility of the individual driver and pedestrian in avoiding all potential accident-producing situations. The tragedy of the victim who survives a road crash but is severely injured or crippled will also be stressed.

As in past years, Safe-Driving Week 1965 will serve as an introduction to the December-long police campaign against the hazards of the holiday season.

Red Cross to build permanent blood depot

The Red Cross will build a permanent blood depot, to supply 123 metropolitan and western provincial hospitals, on a site adjacent to the Pasteur Hospital, Montreal — Gerald Bronfman, president of the Quebec Provincial Division of Canadian Red Cross Society, announced recently.

The precast concrete building at Sherbrooke and Prefontaine Streets will replace the present temporary accommodation in wooden army huts dating from wartime. The two-storey structure will house laboratories, technical equipment, blood donor records, procurement staff, research department and a permanent clinic. A parking lot for donors and volunteers will accommodate 50 automobiles.

Building costs totalling $850,000 will be defrayed by a Provincial Health Ministry grant and private bequests to the Red Cross. The land is a gift of the Provincial Government through the good offices of the City of Montreal. No campaign funds will be used, Mr. Bronfman emphasized.

Considerations in choosing the new site included the ease and speed of transporting blood and fractionation products to hospitals, accessibility to mobile clinics, and the convenience of thousands of blood donors living in the eastern part of Montreal.

Construction will start immediately, and target date for completion of the building is the late summer of 1966.

Outlines the needs and values of a regional composite high school classes and summer school courses.

It enables the administration to attract and retain better teachers; to have sufficient teachers to carry out an effective in-service training program.

Sociological values are also to be considered. The students will make contacts with other students who have a wide variety of backgrounds, and thus become more cosmopolitan in a country where the population is growing rapidly.

Continued Education

The government already is well advanced with plans for "Instituutes" (Grades XII and XIII) which will be an intermediate step between high school and university, training schools for nursing, teaching, etc.

The polyvalent composite high school will be able to offer the diversified education which a student will need to enter many of the courses at the "Institute" level.

Transfer of Students

Students from the smaller schools will have serious difficulty transferring to another school, because they will not have had suitable courses, under Subject Promotion and other methods adopted in Regional or Composite schools.

Flexibility

A polyvalent high school which is "in step", "in tune", with the remainder of the province, and Ontario, British Columbia and many other provinces, as well as most States in the United States — can be far more aware of changes in education and in society. Thus, they can make adjustments to these changes, whereas in a small, isolated, traditional high school, even though they may be aware of the changes, they will be physically unable to make the adjustments.

Adult Education Courses

Numbers of adults and staff will be available, to implement adult courses in connection with the composite school.

Major Disadvantage

Admittedly, there is one important drawback — the problem of transportation. But we must and can meet this problem and overcome it.

Conclusion

The Regional and Composite school system will require a period of transition, during which time there will be some difficulties and hardships — but if our educational system is to survive and grow — we must be prepared and meet these difficulties. I repeat — the horse and buggy days are gone — the computer is here — our society is changing rapidly.

If education is the development and preparation of our youth to take their place as useful, intelligent citizens in our rapidly changing society (and I don't think anyone can deny that this is the purpose), then we must adjust our education to accomplish this, and the best solution that we can see at the present time, is the polyvalent composite high school.

Brownsburg Regular Baptist Church celebrates half century of progress

It was a large and enthusiastic gathering which assembled at the Brownsburg High School on Saturday evening to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the building of the Regular Baptist Church in Brownsburg.

A turkey dinner was served by Mrs. Plummer, the ladies of the congregation supplying the pies, and a most cordial welcome was extended by the pastor, the Rev. George Hicks. A special birthday cake baked by Mrs. D. Tomalty adorned the head table.

In an interesting review of the history of the church, Mr. Hicks quoted from the files of The Watchman of November 19, 1915, as follows:

"Years ago the Edina Church resounded with the hearty singing of many a pioneer who has since joined the celestial choirs above or moved away to seek more fertile soil than Grenville and Chatham afford. For some years past the doors remained locked and the sills were quickly dropping into decay. This deterioration has been arrested and the same walls now solidly set upon a concrete foundation will once more resound to the singing of hymns and the preaching of the way of life eternal."

And so it came to pass that on Sunday, November 14, the new chapel was filled to capacity for several meetings during the day, and the Christian work has continued to prosper.

Credit was given to many who had assisted in the undertaking, some of whom were present on this occasion.

A list of the various ministers who through the past 50 years had served in this field, was read, recalling happy memories to most of those present.

Several violin selections were beautifully rendered by Mrs. Mary Bauman, of London, Ont. She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Ingrid Carlson, of Kenora, Ont., now studying medicine and music at Western University, London.

Greetings and congratulations were expressed by Mr. Yvon Hurtubise, of Drummondville, Mr. Geo. Olley, of Calvary Baptist Church, Ottawa, and the Rev. L. Hisey, of Dalesville.

Mrs. H. Hardie, now of Thurso, wife of the late Mr. Hardie, a former minister of the church, was also present.

Dr. H. C. Slade, pastor of the Jarvis Street Baptist Church, Toronto, gave a short but inspiring address, full of praise and admiration for the splendid work accomplished, with sincere hopes and expectations of still better things in the future. He was accompanied by Mrs. Slade and Mrs. Porcheron.

The meeting closed with the singing of "Abide With Me".

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Halifax — This old Atlantic port might have been called Dunk, N.S., had it been given Lord Halifax's family name instead of his ancestral title, said Mayor Harry Ludlam of Halifax, England, on a visit here. The original name is thought to mean "Holy Flax Field."

DEATHS

DAWSON — At Lachute on Nov. 10, 1965, Mary Edith Lillian, in her 80th year. Beloved wife of Arthur A. Dawson and dear mother of Muriel (Mrs. R. J. Hickman), of Rawdon, Que. Funeral held from St. Simeon's Church at 2 p.m. Friday, Nov. 12; interment in Lachute Cemetery.

HODGE (Norman Edmund) — At Montreal on Wednesday, Nov. 17, 1965, Norman E. Hodge, in his 61st year, beloved husband of Alma Brown and father of Isabel and Russell. Funeral held in St. Simeon's Anglican Church; interment at Lachute.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDREWS (née Charlotte Moore) — In loving memory of Mother, who passed away Nov. 24, 1959. — Always remembered by Stanley and Queen.

ANDREWS (George) — In loving memory of a dear husband, father, grandfather and great-grandfather, who passed away Nov. 27, 1962. — Lovingly remembered by his wife and family.

"O happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill."

BIGELOW — In loving memory of a dear father, Malcolm Bigelow, who passed away Nov. 22, 1939. — Ever remembered by his family.

"We watched you suffer,
we heard you sigh,
And all we could do was just stand by;
When the time came, we suffered too,
For you never deserved what you went through.
We lived in hope and prayed in vain,
For God to make you well again;
But He decided that we should part —
He eased your pain but broke our hearts."

BURNS (Arthur) — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, whom God called home Nov. 24, 1964. — Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by Muriel, Aldege and family.

"God gave us a wonderful father,
His memory will never grow old;
He fashioned his smile out of sunshine,
He moulded his heart of pure gold;
He needed a new star in heaven,
A beautiful light to shine,
So out of this old world of sorrow
He chose that dear Dad of mine."

CUMBERS (Ann Budd) — In loving memory of Mother, who died Nov. 25, 1950. — Always remembered by her son, Joe, and daughter-in-law, Elizabeth.

"Memories are like threads of gold,
They never tarnish or grow old."

CARRIERE (Mrs. Joseph) — In loving memory of my dear wife, Violet, who passed away Nov. 26, 1964. — Sadly missed, Joseph.

CARRIERE — In loving memory of my dear mother, who passed away Nov. 26, 1964. Always remembered. — Her daughter, Audrey.

CARRIERE — In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, who passed away Nov. 26, 1964. Ever remembered. — Leola, Nelson and Bruce.

IN MEMORIAM

CARRIERE — In fond and loving memory of our dear grandmother, who passed away Nov. 26, 1964. Always remembered. — Louise and Gregory.

CARRIERE — Treasured memories of our dear mother, who passed away Nov. 26, 1964. Always in our thoughts. — Lois and Emmett.

MARTIN (Charlotte Seary) — In loving memory of our sister, who passed away on Nov. 18, 1950. — Always remembered by her sisters.

"Your memory to us is a keepsake
With which we will never part,
Though God has you in his keeping,
We still have you in our hearts."

MARTIN (Charlotte Seary) — In memory of a beloved mother, who passed away Nov. 18, 1950. — Always missed and remembered by her family, Bev, Don, Jim.

"In memory a daily thought,
In heart a silent sorrow."

YOUNG — In memory of a dear husband, father and father-in-law, Isaac Young, who died Nov. 24, 1962. — Inserted by his wife, Isabel Young, Winona and Stanley K. Dewar.

"He is gone across the river
To the shore of evergreen,
And we long to see his dear face
But the river flows between.
Some day, sometime, we shall see
The face we loved so well,
Some day we'll clasp his loving hand
And never say farewell."

Wintering of turf grass

Ottawa — At this time of the year home owners may wonder if they have done everything to protect their lawns for winter. many stop watering, cutting, and fertilizing their lawns quite early in the fall.

Dr. J. B. Lebeau, head of the Plant Pathology Section at the Lethbridge Research Station, found that, if turf grass goes into the winter dry and unclipped, it looks very poor in the spring and takes several weeks to bring it back to condition.

Most damage to turf grass from disease and other causes occurs during the winter. Winterkilling seldom is caused by subzero temperatures alone, but it may also result from desiccation or attack by fungus organisms that thrive at low temperatures. The disease most commonly caused by these low-temperature fungi is called snow mold. In the spring it is recognized by irregular patches of dead turf and frequently a mass of white mold is seen on the grass just after the snow melts.

Snow mold may be controlled with an inorganic mercury fungicide, such as a mixture of mercurous chloride and mercuric chloride, used as directed on the label. It should be applied in late October, preferably before the first heavy snowfall.

If certain areas of the lawn are repeatedly damaged by cold injury or desiccation, the damage may be avoided with a snow trap. Snow may be trapped with small snow fences or by covering the grass with brush.

General recommendations for preparing the turf for winter are:

(1) Continue cutting, watering and fertilizing the lawn until the end of October.

(2) If required, treat for snow mold, cold injury, or desiccation by methods described.

TOMBSTONES

Many years ago I had a book of epitaphs supposedly taken from gravestones in cemeteries in America and England. Some of these were undoubtedly genuine, but others probably fictional. I can remember only a few at the moment, but here they are:

"Here beneath this pile of stones
Lies the body of Silas Jones.
His name was Smith,
and never Jones,
But Jones was put to rhyme with stones."

Jonathan Round
Who was lost at sea and never was found."

"Here lie I
Hit by a sky-
Rocket in the eye."

"Here lie I and my three daughters
Dead from drinking
Cheltenham waters.
If we had stuck to Epsom salts
We wouldn't be lying in these here vaults."

"Tarry, Stranger, passing by.
Where you are, there once was I.
Where I am, soon you will be.
Don't believe me?
Wait and see!

Be seein' ya!

FROM GENERAL MOTORS

In just two short years Viva has rocketed to outstanding sales success on the small car best-seller list. Everything points to Viva making even greater strides on the 1966 popularity graph. Here's why:

The Vauxhall Viva is built by General Motors to give the small economy car buyer all the features he's looking for, without compromise. Viva offers snappy performance, a smooth ride, firm handling, roominess, comfort, big trunk space and a low buying price, all in a most attractive package. Hard to believe? Consider the facts. PEPPY PERFORMANCE. Viva has a 50 horsepower engine coupled to a fully-synchronized four-speed transmission with a floor-mounted shift. OUTSTANDING ECONOMY. Viva delivers up to 45 miles per gallon. SMOOTH RIDING, AGILE HANDLING. With Roll Control suspension and rack and pinion steering, Viva combines a smooth ride with quick, agile handling. FOUR ADULT ROOMINESS. Viva offers ample headroom, elbowroom and legroom for four adults to ride in comfort. RELAXING COMFORT. Bucket seats offer exceptional driving comfort and firm support during cornering. When tilted forward to provide access to the rear seats they stay tilted . . . a most important convenience feature for the family man. BIG TRUNK SPACE. Viva's trunk holds 10.76 cubic feet of hard luggage with extra room for rugs, parcels and other soft items of luggage. LOW, LOW PRICE. Viva is easy for anybody to own. Just take a look at the price. Then go and visit your Vauxhall-Pontiac dealer.

The constant worrier

AN ECONOMIST is a man who worries (a) when times are bad and (b) when times are good.

During a period of recession he frets about how to get the economy rolling again. And when the country is humming with prosperity — as it is right now — he's concerned about whether it will last.

Some economists are especially anxious because the Canadian economy is expanding dynamically for the fifth year in a row. They doubt the fast clip can be sustained.

Interest rates are high and are likely to go higher. Unemployment is down to less than three per cent and many employers are having trouble getting help. Canadians are on a buying spree and many are going into debt in the process.

Exports are rising, but imports are going up faster to meet the growing demand for consumer goods. Production costs are climbing, especially in the construction business.

The Gross National Product — value of all goods and services — is likely to hit $51,000,000,000 this year, an impressive eight per cent increase over 1964.

The danger of serious inflation is one reason for fears about the future. A sharp climb in prices could wipe out most of the gains in productivity of the last few years.

The government made a token gesture toward curbing inflationary tendencies in one area — construction — by trimming its own building plans. And the Bank of Canada appears to be tightening the money supply, which is already 12 per cent higher than last year.

But moves to keep the economy under control are usually made without much publicity. After all, there is also a danger that people will begin to lose confidence and that can deflate the boom as quickly as anything.

What can the average Canadian do? Aside from being sensible about his own budget and not going hog-wild in buying on credit, there isn't much.

And sometimes the government itself is able to do very little. That's because international economic conditions are often the over-riding factor and as a relatively small country we have no control over them.

Perhaps the best advice for an individual is to ensure that his own affairs are in order and then make up his mind not to worry. The economists will do that for him. That's their job — good times and bad.

Urgent need for more medical schools

IN 20 YEARS TIME, there will be a shortage of 2,500 doctors to meet the needs of the population of Quebec. The College of Physicians believes it is urgent that the Provincial Government take necessary steps to establish a fifth school of medicine which could accept 100 first-year students, starting in 1971.

A survey shows that in 1964 there were 143 physicians for every 100,000 of population in the United States, and 140 in the Province of Ontario — compared to only 121 in Quebec (excluding foreign interns and residents).

The College of Physicians believes that we should, in this province, achieve a ratio of 140 physicians per 100,000 of population. However, if our universities cannot train more students than they are presently doing, our medical population by 1986 will only reach 10,500 physicians, when our need will be for 13,000.

Our existing faculties should be provided with the necessary personnel, together with the required funds, to graduate an additional 800 physicians in the next 20-year period. For its part, the new University of Sherbrooke school of medicine could graduate 700 doctors in the same 20-year period. The necessity remains to establish a fifth school of medicine to turn out an additional 900 physicians.

These five schools could then produce 2,400 more physicians than the numbers foreseen with the existing facilities. Taking into consideration losses through death and movement out of the province, we would have about 2,300 of the required 2,500 doctors.

It is considered that the establishment of a fifth school of medicine, more likely located in the Montreal region, would not be over-insurance in the medical field. On the contrary, any delay or cut-back of the suggested program can only aggravate the problem.

Furthermore, the shortage of medical teachers requires a parallel program for preparation of men to instruct the various disciplines of medicine.

Stepping stones

THREE-YEAR-OLD Stephen wanted to get from A to B. His five-year-old sister Jennifer was in the way. Did he walk around her?

No. Stephen stepped on her back to get where he wanted to go. He hurt her, although not seriously.

Just an incident in the lives of two preschoolers. Yet an incident, too, in the lives of many adults in business. Stephen's thoughtlessness was not unlike that of many so-called grownups.

How many adults have little or no regard for "the other guy", in their eagerness to get ahead? How many adults put as little thinking into their decisions as Stephen did? How many others have been hurt?

It doesn't matter where you work. You always have a chance to advance — unless you are a gold-bricker, one who doesn't even try to give his employer an honest day's work for the money her earns. Perhaps each worker should pay more attention to living one day at a time and doing his best, as though he might not see tomorrow. Perhaps then men would quit using each other as stepping-stones to get ahead.

But for each man who gets ahead by stepping on others, perhaps the sequel to Stephen's behaviour is worthy of note: Jennifer belted him soundly on the jaw!

Viewpoints and perspectives

WASTED SKILLS. — Canadian business and industry is losing millions of dollars annually because the knowledge and training of thousands of workers is being thrown away on their 65th birthdays. In June of 1964, Canada had 1,470,400 residents in the 65-and-over age group. Hundreds of thousands of these older Canadians are capable of making great contributions to the economic health of our nation. But the majority of them have been forced into lives of unproductive uselessness because of retirements.

— Pembina (Man.) Triangle Progress

SEES GREAT POTENTIAL. — Canada has the potential of the greatest destiny of any country in the world, if only we look upon ourselves as Canadians and not as English-Canadians, French-Canadians, Chinese-Canadians and the rest.

— Quesnel (B.C.) Cariboo Observer

LOVE AND KISSES. — Here, from the Financial Post, exactly as received by the Ontario Safety League, is a letter to command wide attention. "Here is something should be done to Prevent Accidents — there should be a gard between driver and girl friend so there wouldn't be anything to interfear with His driving. I see lots of Huging and Kissing going at fast speed. So see if you can do anything about it."

DECRY COLLEGE LOANS. — The means test (for federal loans to college students) is a backward step. And as the loan scheme by itself was only a poor substitute for the Liberal promise of a massive scholarship program, Canada's university students — and their parents — have every reason to be bitterly disappointed in the government's performance.

OVER THE YEARS With Lachute Watchman

85 YEARS AGO

November, 1880 —

The gold medal for butter at the Dominion Exhibition, Ottawa, fell to Argenteuil County, and Mr. John Martin of St. Andrews received personally from Princess Louise the distinguished coin.

Butternutts are so plentiful that one man gathered six bag fulls recently.

Lachute at Midnight. — There are a few lights to be seen, especially in the bar rooms; a shop door open here and there; some cows in the gardens; and a stray pedestrian on the streets. That's all.

Piscatorial. — Mr. E. Martin captured a fine muskalonge while trolling in the North River. The fish weighed 10½ lbs.

Colonel J. Simpson will please accept The Watchman's thanks for the present of a bag of fine carrots and two punkins.

The work on the Long John Rapids, near St. Andrews, has been completed by the government this past summer, making a channel five feet deep and fifty feet wide at low water. Steamboats will be able to ascend the North River to discharge and take on freight and passengers at the village wharf.

50 YEARS AGO

November, 1915 —

Thos. Drysdale, of North Settlement, has sold his farm to Richard Brown, of Shrewsbury.

A Bran Pie Social in aid of the Red Cross will be held in East Settlement Church. Admission 15 cents.

Mr. Chas. McFaul has severed his connection with the Greenshields Co'y and joined the Heavy Artillery, who expect to leave for Woolwich Arsenal in about a month.

Mr. Jos. Lavigne conducted a bailiff's sale of effects of Mr. G——— baker for Mr. Ampleman, who made a somewhat hurried departure from town owing to the appearance of Mrs. G—— No. 1, who found out that her husband was located in Lachute.

Grenville — Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McNaughton and daughter Eleanor spent the week-end in Grenville and attended the Orangemen's Parade.

Town Council — Councillor Gall gave motion that, at the next meeting, he will introduce a by-law to regulate the construction of buildings in the town.

It is with regret that we annouce the death of Mrs. Thos. Christie, Sr.

25 YEARS AGO

November, 1940 —

Cushing West — This locality was canvassed last week by a deputation with a petition to be sent to the Provincial Government requesting Sunday closing of saloons in the province. The people signed the petition almost unanimously.

When Grade I at Lachute High School was taxed to capacity with over 50 pupils, it was decided on recommendation of Inspector-General E. S. Giles to divide the grade into two classes and engage a new teacher. Cottingham Supply Co., local contractors, were called in to install the partitioning overnight, which they did.

J. Felicien Lavigne, a notary for many years in this town, died suddenly of a heart attack. He was a staunch campaigner for the Conservatives, and himself a candidate for provincial honors, also a supporter of many public movements. He served overseas with the forces in World War I.

Brownsburg — Winston Smillie is home from hospital following an operation for appendicitis.

Joe Berniquer, in the Wireless Department of the Navy, left for Halifax after spending the week-end at his home.

Cleaning Up The House

With Prime Minister Pearson moving to shake up his cabinet, and John Diefenbaker showing a willingness to talk about a possible successor, the Canadian political picture took on a new shading this week.

It still was not yet clear, however, whether the post-election maneuverings would bring a drastic change to Liberal and Conservative line-ups.

When the resignation of Walter Gordon as finance minister hit the country last week, there were many predictions that a wholesale make-over of the federal cabinet was underway.

The Prime Minister said he would not have any further changes to announce until after the election writs are formally returned early in December.

But the fact is that Mr. Pearson, because his caucus is so heavily weighted from Ontario and Quebec, doesn't have many alternatives in choosing cabinet personnel.

The guessing as to a future finance minister runs between Trade and Commerce Minister Mitchell Sharp and the newly-elected Robert Winters, who was finance minister in the St. Laurent government.

It's fairly apparent that Mr. Winters has prime ministerial ambitions. The post of finance minister has long been a political graveyard and he may not be anxious to take on this assignment. He might prefer to see Mr. Sharp, who has taken up the finance post temporarily, move over to that department permanently so as to leave the trade and commerce department open for him.

Mr. Pearson will have more difficulty filling the other two cabinet posts left open by election defeats — that of Agriculture Minister Harry Hays of Calgary and Watson MacNaught of Prince Edward Island.

The Prime Minister, however, could probably win strong public support if he dumped Guy Favreau, the accident-prone ex-justice minister, from his position as president of the privy council. He would also find a sympathetic hearing from the public by replacing State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne, who was involved in the "furniture on credit" episode last year.

The question is, where does Mr. Pearson go for new talent even if he did decide to dispense with these political liabilities?

In announcing the Parliament would be called into session Jan. 27, Mr. Pearson was left himself time to plan strategy and line up additional following which might give him a clear majority by then.

The soldier vote resulted in the election of two more Liberals, raising government strength to 131 seats — two short of majority. But the Liberals are assured of the support of one Quebec independent, and at time of writing this column, pressure was being put on Social Crediter Bob Olson of Medicine Hat to bolt to the Liberal camp to take over the agriculture ministry.

Meanwhile, John Diefenbaker, who talked the day after the election as if he would bring down the government the moment parliament opens, indicated an unusual willingness to discuss a possible successor as P-C leader.

He said in an interview that he thought whoever would replace him should have long parliamentary experience. This apparently rules out, at least in Mr. Diefenbaker's opinion, the suitability of a provincial premier for the job.

George Hees and Davie Fulton, most often mentioned as future Tory leaders, still have the stigma of having deserted the Chief at his most desperate hour.

On the other hand, two of Mr. Diefenbaker's favorites in the House have been Michael Starr of Oshawa, his ex-labor minister and currently Tory House leader, and the hard-hitting Yukon member, Erik Nielsen.

As the country settled down for a respite from politics, the indications were that Canadians are going to continue to be confronted with fast-breaking political developments for some time.

SUGAR AND SPICE

The Deadliest Of Wars

There's a war in progress right now that will produce more casualties than the two great world wars. It makes the current cold war look like a Sunday School picnic. It is being fought in the home, in the schools, and in the streets, in every country in the world.

The war I'm talking about is the war between youth and age. There has been no declaration of war, no single incident which has provoked hostilities. But the fighting has begun, and its going to be a long, cruel destructive one before it ends, a war like no other the human race has seen.

The tragic thing is that it is not based on hate, but on something closer to love, a complete lack of understanding with a wistful desire for it, on both sides. It is not international or inter-racial war, but civil war, which makes it doubly frightening.

In the front lines are not the children and the elderly. Thank goodness for that. No. The opposing forces are the young adults, from about 15 to 25, on one side, and the no-longer-youthful adults, from 35 to 55 on the other.

What, you may ask, about those between, from 25 to 35? They don't even know the war is on. Busy producing and raising kids, they are blissfully unaware that they are producing reinforcements for the enemy they must face soon.

The war was inevitable. For 5,000 years, the majors managed to keep the minors under their thumbs. Through a combination of guile, economic pressure and sheer numbers (infant mortality was high), the elders kept the young in check.

They convinced them that age and wisdom were synonymous. They assured them that older men made better politicians, preachers, and generals. They kept the young from multiplying by feeding them cheerfully into the furnaces of whatever war was in progress at the time. While the old boys stayed home and looked after the store.

They refused to retire and let the young move up. They urged security rather than seeking. They preeched compromise rather than courage. They tried to smother every flame of idealism with the cold water of what they called "reality."

Oh, the odd one broke through the blanket. Alexander the Great and William Pitt the younger, and Napoleon. But most of them died young.

And now, sad to relate, Dad, you and I are reaping the bitter rice. Young people think exactly what I thought when I was a young person: that every living soul over 40 is inevitably opposed to anything that is fun, frightening or fattening.

Five thousand years of growing resentment is bursting forth in all directions. Thanks to medical advances, they now outnumber us. Thanks to economic prosperity, they live better than we ever did. Thanks to the cowardly and conformist world we created for them, they despise us. The hour is come, for them.

And you can't blame them much. We are against sex and liquor for minors, but think they're dandy for majors. We're against smoking, and puff our way straight into the oxygen tent. We tell them to be honest, and cheat on our income tax. We tell them to practise Christian charity, and rip our neighbors up the back.

We urge them to be mature, and we bicker and squabble in front of them, over trifles. We tell them they have no initiative, and refuse to let them do anything that is not safe, sensible and sanitary.

We throw up our hands in horror at their likes in dress and in music, at their popular heroes, at their natural desires. When they are polite, we grow pompous. When they are insolent, we grow furious.

Yep, the war is on. Don't worry. I'm not a traitor. I'll stick with the majors. I've always been a sucker for lost causes. And I have never yet left a sinking ship.

Echo of Expo 65, from beneficiary

The following letter of appreciation was received recently by Gabriel Valois, secretary of the Lachute Chamber of Commerce:

Lachute, R.R. 3

Dear Sirs,

I extend my thanks to the Chamber of Commerce for making possible Expo 65 and thus giving me the opportunity to win the Philco Stereo door prize. We are enjoying it very much.

Please pass along my thanks to J. R. Lamarche Ltd. and the Philco Corporation of Canada.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) Stephen Lyster.

District NEWS

Avoca

Mrs. Walter de Gruchy and children spent Saturday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kelly.

Sudden Bereavement

This community was shocked by the news of a fatal accident in Boucherville, Que., at the site of the Hippolyte Lafontaine tunnel bridge, when three of the men on this construction project were killed, one of them well known and beloved by all acquaintances — Jimmy Tomalty, of Belleville, Ont. We extend heartfelt sympathy to his wife (Mona Farrara), and three little daughters.

Get-well wishes are extended to Mrs. George Andrews, who underwent major surgery in the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, on Friday morning; and to Mrs. Eddy Young, Avoca, who has been confined to bed at her home for the past week.

Wedding congratulations and best wishes are sent to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson, the former Miss Elva McCutcheon, who were married Saturday afternoon in Hawkesbury, Ont., by the Rev. J. Lynn.

Mr. Alex Bates, of Niagara Falls, Ont., who spent the past two weeks with his mother, Mrs. Sandy Bates, returned to his home Monday morning with Mr. and Mrs. Ron Mace.

Mr. Allan MacLeod, of Kamloops, B.C., and Mr. Eric Gretton, visited Mr. and Mrs. John Dobbie and Mrs. Sandy Bates on Wednesday.

Sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Angus in the death of their mother, Mrs. Norris Angus, of Shawville, who passed away Monday morning, following an accident she suffered in her home last week.

Mr. Alvin Campbell returned home Tuesday night from Gainsville, N.Y., where he was employed with the Downing Diamond Drilling Co.

Miss Catherine Nixon left Monday morning for Brownsburg, where she is now employed with C-I-L.

Many pupils and parents from this district attended the graduation and school closing 1964-65 ceremonies on Saturday evening, when pupils from all grades were presented with prizes and certificates.

Brownsburg

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Houghton, of La Range, Sask., and daughter Lynn, from Camp Borden, Ont., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Robinson.

Mrs. A. T. Percy, of Orangeville, Ont., and Mrs. C. L. Arnold, of Rockland, Ont., spent Monday last with their sister, Mrs. L. Berubé.

Mrs. E. MacNutt, of Peterborough, Ont., is spending this week with her mother, Mrs. W. H. Tomalty.

Mr. Brian Richardson, student at Carleton College, Ottawa, spent the week-end at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. K. Mosher and family, of Cantic, Que., were week-end guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Campbell.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Petley, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Mason, and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Prosser, spent part of this week in Burlington, Vt.

86th Milestone

Congratulations to Miss C. MacPherson, who celebrates her 86th birthday on Thursday, November 25. Miss MacPherson enjoys good health and is quite active.

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. J. A. Campbell, whose brother, Mr. A. Morrow, passed away at his home in Russell, Ont., last week.

Morin Heights

Mr. Stanley Murdoch, accompanied by Mr. J. Batters and Mr. Basil Woods, all of Neepewa, Man., visited Mr. and Mrs. Willis Seale last week.

Mrs. Leonard McCambly and daughter, Darlene, visited Mr. and Mrs. M. Meredith in Montreal recently.

Southbound

Among those who have recently left for warmer climes (and incidentally, gainful occupation) in the Bahamas are Harry Lister, Leonard McCambly and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bergin. They will be engaged in general construction work. Evidently what this community needs is a good 8-hour-per-day industry (new) — now, before our population is reduced to a few old reliables!

Mrs. Charles D. Campbell returned home from a few days spent in Montreal, where Mr. Campbell is a patient in St. Mary's Hospital and who, earlier in the week, underwent an operation. Mr. Campbell is making good progress and it is expected he will return home during this week.

Correction

The apologies of your correspondent are humbly extended to Mr. William Bell and family, and Miss Vera McCullough for the inadvertent omission of Miss McCullough's name from those mentioned in a previous issue as survivors of the late Mrs. William Bell, for whom the funeral service was held on Sunday of last week.

Marriage

Miss Juanita Eddge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Eddge, and Mr. Leland Legault, son of Mrs. Louise Legault and the late Mr. John Legault, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., were united in marriage on November 12, the Rev. Horace G. Baugh officiating. The happy couple left for a brief honeymoon in Montreal. Congratulations and best wishes of their many friends and acquaintances are extended to the bride and groom.

Home from the North

Mr. Basil Green is presently staying with his mother, Mrs. Frances Green. Basil has just "come down" from "up north" and will be staying with us for a fortnight at least. Basil, in response to questioning, says that we have much more snow locally than has yet fallen in the north. Temperatures hover between zero and 10-below. Weather conditions in general are very good, and the summer particularly was excellent. Living conditions are best described as "home from home". Basil is now beginning his ninth year of northern residency. Presently he is located on the eastern side of the MacKenzie River Delta, at a small locality by the name of Picktoyartuk...

There you have it, dear reader — some go north and some go south — whichever direction they go, it's our loss.

Dedication of cenotaph at Morin Heights

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — On Monday of last week, as part of the Remembrance Day celebration, the Canadian Legion parade was routed via Hillcrest Cemetery for the dedication of the new Legion Memorial. In addition to the personnel forming the parade, many citizens and visitors were present.

The service of dedication was jointly conducted by the Rev. Horace Baugh (Anglican), the Rev. Ronald McCullough (United) and Father Geraldeau (Roman Catholic).

The unveiling was performed by Legionnaire Henry Gillingham, who, in well chosen words, and on behalf of the Royal Canadian Legion of Morin Heights, bequeathed the spirit of the structure in trust to the community in perpetuity, and in sacred recognition and remembrance of deceased veterans of the past and future.

Included among the wreaths donated and laid at the Cenotaph were — by Mrs. P. S. Phillips, for Morin Heights Council; Mrs. James Baldwin in memory of her son, Joe Baldwin; Mr. Chappel in memory of Ronald Boyd; Legionnaire Syd Muncey, for the Canadian Legion. Wreaths of the R.C.A.F. and Municipality of Morin Heights were laid by the R.C.A.F. personnel...

"And so the monument stands today, and for all time, in hallowed ground in memory of those who, unlike us who remain, do not grow old, and who, from sun to sun will be remembered... We will remember them."

Lady resident, widely related, was in 80th year

The late Mrs. Arthur A. Dawson

At her residence on Cottingham Blvd., Lachute, on November 10, Mrs. Arthur A. Dawson, formerly Mary Edith Lillian Rayson, eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rayson, of Grenville, Que., passed to her reward, in her 80th year.

The late Mrs. Dawson was born at Grenville, and after her marriage moved to several pioneer towns in Northern Ontario, including Sault Ste. Marie, and then settled in Montreal, where she lived for many years prior to their settlement to Rawdon — and finally to Lachute, where they have resided for the past four years.

Funeral service for the deceased was held from the MacKimmie Funeral Home to St. Simeon's Anglican Church on November 12. Service was conducted by the Rev. C. R. Lang.

Left to mourn her passing are her bereaved husband and daughter, Muriel (Hickman) and son-in-law, Reginald Hickman, of Rawdon. She was predeceased by one daughter, Evelyn, who died in 1913 at Sault Ste. Marie. Left to mourn also are three sisters — Annie (Mrs. Barron), of Montreal, Ethel (Mrs. Richards), of Sault Ste. Marie, Abegail (Mrs. A. Sugars), of Cornwall, and one brother, Wm. Rayson, of Abbotsford.

Pall-bearers were Messrs. Russel Richards, Paul Doig, Rogers Bradford, Dawson Haig, Edgar Dawson and Summers Dawson. Interment was at the Lachute Protestant Cemetery.

Those attending from a distance included — Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Russel Richards, of Sault Ste. Marie; Mrs. Carson Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. F. Barron, Mr. and Mrs. D. Haig, Mr. and Mrs. G. Morris and Mr. Percy Lear, of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Summers Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dawson, and Mrs. Marguerite Dempsey, of Carrying Place, Ont.; Mrs. Donald Stewart, Mrs. Alex Sugars and Mrs. Alex Villeneuve, of Cornwall, Ont.

BY-LAW CONDEMNS TREES

Windsor, Ont. (CP) — City council here is drafting a by-law authorizing the removal of diseased trees from private property. The owners' permission will be asked first, but they will have to pay the cost of removal, and refusal to comply can bring the unhappy householder a fine of $300.

Testimonial to late centenarian of Rockway Valley

Tribute from A Grandchild of the Late Emery Boyer

On Sunday, November 14, we stood by the open grave of my beloved grandfather to bid him a last farewell. Sadness was only a small part of what I felt, for as I stood there I knew that he had left behind memories most precious; he did not leave us empty, but rather with the feeling that this was not the end but only the beginning. He left behind a feeling of love for fellowmen, with patience, tolerance, and kindness for those less fortunate than we. He left a bond so strong that it will always touch and embrace everyone he came in contact with: that bond is the bond of love for Jesus Christ that he left in the hearts of all his children. He was an example to all, of the greatness of a man who lives for Christ.

His greatness is that he made himself ready, and in so doing he imparted to each of his children the same readiness, even to their children's children. As I stood by his grave and looked around, I saw Grandfather in all the dear faces of those he loved. The tears I shed were not for him, but rather tears of gratitude to the one who cared so much about the people around him. Because of him and his way of life that he had taught us, we are better able to understand the sufferings of others. He made us conscious of how great it is to love with a full heart, to forgive with a humble spirit, to understand and be tolerant, to be helpful to others, to share of ourselves with those we love and to walk with God. I had never heard of or seen him in anger. He loved to laugh and to tell stories, and this endeared him to the young. Although he lived to be 100 he always had a gay and young spirit.

No man can be greater than this who leaves such a heritage.

— Granddaughter, Freda Reilly

Sympathy Extended

This community was shocked and saddened Friday morning to hear of the sudden passing of James Tomalty, a former resident of Staynerville. Our sympathy is extended to his wife and three daughters.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

The Royal Winter Fair never seems to lose its attraction for both spectators and exhibitors. At least sixty students from the College made the trip. Peter Hamilton's entire Animal Science class chartered a railway car and spent two nights travelling for one day at the big show. We are willing to bet more than a few missed the first class next morning.

Peter tells us that while not all breeds of livestock were represented, the Quebec breeders which were there made a commendable showing at this highly competitive exhibition. Here is his report:

"One of the outstanding wins for Quebec at the Royal Winter Fair was the selection by Jersey judge, Senator W. G. Perchard of Jersey Island, of a 3-year-old cow owned by Miss Ellen B. Speyer of Massawippi as the Grand Champion Jersey female of the show. Besides bringing the honor of a Royal Grand Champion to Springmount Farm, Springmount Sovereign Splash won the Embleton Trophy for the best uddered cow in the Jersey classes, and the Ashton Trophy for the best Canadian bred three-year-old. The Ashton trophy was donated by the late Elmo Ashton, the well-known and successful Jersey breeder whose influence is responsible for much of the interest and enthusiasm for Jerseys in the Eastern Townships.

"Ken McOuat, farm manager for the Angus farm owned by Desourdy Construction at West Shefford, and a former resident of Argenteuil, has every reason to be celebrating these days, too. In a strong class of 18 cows with calves at foot, Elbamere of Birch Bell 2, a cow owned by Desourdy Farm, stood at the top when the Royal Winter Fair judge, T. Alex Edwards of Arva, Ontario, lined it up. Perhaps just as good a win for Desourdy Construction and Ken McOuat, was the 4th and 7th placings taken by their two Angus steers. And if a fourth place and a seventh place in a class of 47 steers at the Royal Winter Fair doesn't sound high to you, ask one of the many who have worked hard for such placings and never achieved them.

"Ben Lavin can be proud, too, of his senior calf Blackcap of Brome Angus 15 that took first place in a class of 20 at the Royal Winter Fair. And Bob Leberge of Danville can share his pleasure because he picked her at the Angus sale held at Macdonald College in September and bid her up to $1,500. Ben Lavin reserved the right to show her at the Royal but she is now a member of Leberge's 250 cow Ferme Manasan herd at Danville.

"Incidentally in the same big class of 20 Angus calves, Summer-Fair Ranch at Montebello placed second. Other good Quebec wins included a first for Desourdy Farm of West Shefford; their cow with calf at foot topped a strong class of 18 cows. It was followed in second place in the big class by a cow owned by Pierrefonds Farm of Knowlton.

"Quebec made its usual strong contribution to the Ayrshire classes, too. R. R. Ness of Howick was named Premier Breeder and Exhibitor, the most coveted awards in any breed. Though they had no top placings, they consistently placed high in the face of strong competition. One or two good animals can make the headlines but it takes a strong herd throughout to take the Premier Breeder and Exhibitor awards.

"The herd of Roger Beaudry of Granby also proved its worth at the Royal by placing well up in several classes. The big win for the Beaudry herd, though, was the Reserve Grand Champion ribbon for his bull calf Glengarry R. Shirley's Model.

"There were many other Quebec Ayrshire herds represented at the Royal, most of which did very well."

Thanks, Peter.

Young farmers on exchange visits, Ontario - Quebec

Robert (Bobby) Rodger left Monday of this week with three other boys from different regions of Quebec, for a two-week trip through the agricultural areas of Ontario, from Ottawa around the lakes to Niagara Falls. They are taking part in an exchange program with four members of the Ontario Junior Farmers, who will visit different parts of Quebec during the same period. The Ontario group expect to be in the Lachute area on December 1 - 3, and plans are being made for them to visit local industries, farms and other points of interest before they return home on December 4.

This exchange visit is made possible by a grant received from the Centennial Commission to cover travel expenses. The boys will be billeted in farm homes during their stay here.

Local 4-H boys on 46-member trip to 'Royal'

Forty-six 4-H Club members and officials left Ottawa on Tuesday of last week by chartered bus for Toronto and the Royal Winter Fair. They spent the night at the Ford Hotel in Toronto, visited the Royal on Wednesday, and were able to watch the horse show in the afternoon. They returned home on the same bus, leaving Toronto at 6 p.m. after a most enjoyable day.

The bus load of 4-H'ers was made up of four members from each club in Western Quebec. The four members from the Lachute 4-H Club were Arthur McElroy, Truman Clark, John Raymond and André St. Pierre. Gérard Tremblay, Agronome, and Ross Oswald, Club Leader, were among the officials.

The bus trip was organized by Florent Morency and Gilbert Moreau of the Quebec Department of Agriculture, and the participants are grateful to these gentlemen for a most enjoyable and well organized trip.

New annuals tested at Experimental Farms

By A. R. Buckley,
Plant Research Institute,
Ottawa

Each year thousands of annuals and tender bedding plants are grown in the test gardens and ornamental grounds of the Plant Research Institute. Included in the test garden plantings are many new varieties and many kinds that are still in the testing stage and will not be available to the public until two years from now.

These plants are evaluated annually on the basis of over-all effectiveness in the garden. Disease resistence, continuity of flowering, abundance of bloom, substance, durability of the whole plant, uniformity of size and habit of growth are the important points considered.

Here are some of the varieties that were outstanding this year and which will be listed in seed catalogues in the near future:

The Knee Hi varieties of sweet peas were, in my opinion, the most outstanding of all annuals tested because they represented an advance in breeding of this type of flower that might well revitalize sweet pea growing in areas where they have been considered a poor crop. Last year we were full of praise for the new Royal series, which withstood our hot summers better than any other sweet pea, and gave long-stemmed flowers with four to five large wavy florets to a stem. The Knee Hi series has all these fine points and, what is most important, may be grown without staking. All seven varieties of this series produced an abundance of bloom, more than any kind previously tested, on long 8 to 15-inch stems.

In the aspect of color, the flamboyant deep-crimson Early Splendor amaranthus excelled all other annuals in the test garden. This variety presented no trace of disease, a factor evident in previously tested kinds. The brilliant crimson apex and dark blood-red basal leaves will ensure this variety a place in bedding schemes wherever boldness is desired.

As always in our test garden, there were many new petunias on trial. The new multiflora doubles bore a greater profusion of bloom and stood up well in the wind and rain. Of these, Double Rose Marie and Coral Delight were outstanding. New bedding varieties with more compact, larger, and often more frilly flowers were very much in evidence this year. Rating very high are Red Ensign, deep scarlet red; Dreamland, large-flowered bicolor purple and white; Cleopatra improved, red; Blue Lagoon and Violet Satin, two very good bedding blues; Pinwheel red and white; and the almost yellow Sunburst. The dwarf mound type, Rosabelle, recovered from heavy rains more rapidly than any other.

Teddy Bear, is a new dwarf sunflower that everybody is going to like. It grows only a foot high and has large yellow flowers, which are quite effective in both beds anad borders. Its floral effect, however, finishes by the end of August.

Royal Ensign, a bush morning glory with bicolored rich deep-blue and white flowers, has always been a striking plant in the tests. This year a new introduction from England, Cambridge Blue, with bicolored light-blue and white flowers, was added. This variety has the same characteristics that make Royal Ensign so much admired: floriferousness, abundance of blue and white saucer-shaped blooms on wide-spreading plants, and the ability best if the seed is sown directly where they are to bloom should add to their value for the home gardener.

"Dwarf Knee Hi" sweet peas produce long-stemmed, many-flowered blooms.

Lavender Gown nolana is a great improvement on the old nolana species with deep lavender flowers. This is another good carpeting plant and it will grow well in dry sandy soil.

Linum grandiflorum and L. grandiflorum 'Rubrum' are well-known red-flowered annuals but they are not often grown in Canadian gardens. They are easy to grow and can be relied upon to give an abundance of bloom. In the test garden this year was a new variety, quite different and perhaps more pleasing. This is Bright Eyes, which has white flowers with a distinct red centre.

The trials of cockscombs brought much comment from visitors. Most outstanding were the new Empress types with very large cockscombs on small ten-inch plants. Varieties in this group were Rose Empress, soft glowing rose; Kardinal, brilliant scarlet; and Gladiator, deep gold.

From the 153 varieties of annual asters and the 40 varieties of salvias tested, it is hard to select the best. Since 1958, the last time asters were tested here, there have been many improvements both in resistance to aster yellows and in varieties. There are now many brighter colors, different petal forms such as in the needle-pointed Unicum group and varieties with stiffer and stronger stems, such as Geisha, Princess, Ambria and King strains. The Best of All strain produced the best bedding types in colors of azure blue, white, pink, purple and scarlet. There were dwarf compact plants which stood up well to wind and rain and did not develop disease. A regular spraying program to combat aphids and leaf hoppers, and thus help stop the aster yellows disease from developing, was carried out all summeer.

The salvia collection revealed many newer colors. Not only were there the usual striking vivid reds but also light salmon, deep burgundy (the name of one variety), pink, and white-tipped pinks. The dwarf pygmy varieties were so small that they could well be used as edging plants.

Winners at the Toronto Royal

Bobby, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Heatlie, won the Junior Showmanship, Clydesdale class, at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto. He placed 1st in a class of eight — which is a class for boys and girls 10 to 18 years of age. His foal, North River Betty, placed 6th in a foal class of 12. . . John, 14 years old, placed 4th in the Junior Percheron Showmanship class.

December Log Book

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Why not begin a Christmas Family Chronicle the first of December? Discuss it in your home and let every member have a part in planning it. The most interesting information for any family is the story of their own life. It is a pity so few households keep a Diary or a Log Book! No two would ever be alike. Here is an inexpensive project any family could enjoy immensely.

For your Log Book, use a loose leaf book, with plain heavy refill paper, and re-inforce the holes for the rings. If there is a budding artist in the family, let him draw some sketches on the margins.

Perhaps Mother could make a brief chronicle of how and where she and Dad have spent their Christmases. Write a brief account of any funny little happenings in the home or special Christmas expedition which you remember.

If you can, get extra prints of snapshots of your children taken in former Decembers. It will be fun to compare them with action shots of them singing carols, or on Christmas Eve with their stockings, or the next morning with their gifts in front of the tree, or one of the youngsters in a pageant or playing the part of "the littlest angel" in white with golden cellophane wings and halo.

If someone gets a new camera for Christmas, let him take a picture of the fairyland outside your house after the next heavy fall of snow.

Perhaps a school age child would like to write the record of the events in your home this December 25th. During the holidays, before New Year's, another youngster might like to use the new crayons or paints he received as a gift to make a colored picture of the Wise Men or the Shepherds.

A very useful page would be a "Family Tree." As you write your Christmas letters and purchase your gifts, make a note in brackets after each individual name, of your progress — as Grandma (a plaid knitting bag) Aunt Helen (a color film for her camera).

Another page for future reference could be the Christmas Card list. Enlist some help from the older school age youngsters in addressing envelopes. Encourage them to write a little message to the elderly friends of the family who are fond of them. It means so much to older people to be remembered by the younger generation.

There might be a page for favorite Christmas cake recipes of Grandma's which she would like to write out in her own handwriting. Perhaps you have a relative who is famous for her shortbread and sends you a box each year. Write and tell her about your book, enclosing a page for her to write out her recipe too.

A copy of your menu for Christmas dinner could be made in block printing by your boy or girl who has just learned to write. Ask all the clan who gather around to eat Mother's cooking to autograph this page.

Have one section for the titles of your family's favorite carols — and do add some new ones which you have learned this year. If you are fond of reading, perhaps you could ask each member of your home to choose one short quotation of prose or poetry for a Favorite Quote Page, like Tiny Tim's words at the end of Dickens' Christmas Carol, "God Bless us Every One!" May the events in your family Christmas Log Book be happy ones!

Cocoa Quickies and marble cake wonderful fare for Yuletide

"Cocoa quickies" make wonderful Yuletide treats. Packed in festive boxes, these make a welcome Christmas gift. Perhaps you would prefer to delight your own family with happy holiday eating!

Chocolate Nougat — a recipe for the children to make, requires no hard beating and no cooking!

Mix together in a large bowl 1 cup peanut butter, ¾ cup corn syrup and ½ tsp. vanilla. Add 1 cup sifted icing sugar and ½ cup sifted Cocoa; blend into peanut butter mixture. Add 1 cup skim milk powder; knead with hands to mix well. Place on board and knead until smooth. Pat out to ½ inch thickness; allow to set 10 minutes. Cut into squares with sharp knife.
Yield: 2 pounds.

Choco Macaroons — a quick way to make a deliciously different macaroon; no baking required.

Combine in a large 2-quart saucepan 2 cups brown sugar, ½ cup Cocoa, ½ cup shortening, ½ cup milk and ½ tsp. salt. Bring to a boil over medium heat; boil 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cool slightly and add 1 tsp. vanilla. Add 2 cups rolled oats and 1 cup chopped coconut. Stir until well mixed. Drop by teaspoonfuls on waxed paper. Allow to stand until firm about 35 minutes.
Yield: 2½ dozen.

Marble Chiffon Cake — is handsome frosted cake, sensational as a table or buffet centrepiece. Cut with a serrated knife and serve on your best glass plates — it's sheer sweet-eating magic!

Ingredients — 2 tbsp. sugar, 2 tbsp. cocoa, ¼ tsp. baking soda, 2 tbsp. hot water, ¾ cup sugar, 1¼ cups sifted cake flour, ¼ tsp. salt, 2 tsp. baking powder, ½ cup water, ¼ cup vegetable oil, 3 egg yolks, 1 tsp. lemon flavoring, 3 egg whites, ¼ tsp. cream of tartar.

Pre-heat oven to 325°F. Mix together sugar, cocoa, baking soda and hot water. Allow to cool. Sift together into mixing bowl ¾ cup sugar, cake flour, salt and baking powder. Make a well in centre and add water, oil, egg yolks and lemon flavoring. Beat until smooth. Place egg whites in separate bowl; add cream of tartar; beat until egg whites form very stiff peaks. Fold egg whites into flour mixture until well blended. Do not stir but fold by bringing rubber scraper down, under, across and up through mixture.

Chocolate Shortbread—an ever popular, Scotch-type of shortbread which stores well in a tightly covered container.

Measure and sift together 1⅓ cups sifted all-purpose flour, ¾ cup icing sugar and ¼ cup Cocoa. Blend 1 cup butter or margarine into dry ingredients with a spoon to form a soft dough. Shape into 1 inch balls; place on ungreased cookie sheet 2 inches apart. Flatten dough with a floured fork. Bake in slow (300°F.) oven 20-25 minutes.
Yield: 3½ dozen.

Heavenly Chocolate Dreams — a traditional two-layer square.

Cream ½ cup shortening; add 2 tbsp. icing sugar mixing well. Add 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour and few grains salt. Mix to blend well. Pat into well-greased 8-inch square pan. Beat together 2 eggs, ⅛ tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. almond flavoring until light and lemon colored. Add 1 cup brown sugar, 1 tsp. baking powder, 3 tbsp. sifted all-purpose flour, 3 tbsp. Cocoa, ¼ cup chopped nuts. Mix to blend well. Pour batter over above mixture in pan. Bake in 350°F. oven 35-40 minutes or until dry in centre. Cool and frost with Butter Icing, if desired.
Yield: 16 squares.

Divide batter in half. To one half add Cocoa mixture; fold in gently. Pour plain and chocolate batter alternately into ungreased 9-inch tube pan. Mix batter gently once or twice. Bake in 325°F. oven about 1 hour or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger. Turn pan upside down immediately; suspend so surface does not touch anything until cold. Loosen sides of cake with spatula to remove from pan. Frost with plain Butter or Chocolate Icing. Yield: 8-10 servings.

Butter Icing — ⅓ cup butter or margarine, 2 cups icing sugar, ¼ tsp. vanilla, 1½ tbsp. milk.

Cream butter until soft; add ½ cup icing sugar blending well. Stir in remainder of icing sugar and vanilla; Add milk; mix until soft and smooth.

Chocolate Icing. — To the above mixture add 2 tbsp. sieved cocoa. Increase milk, if necessary, to give a soft spreading consistency.

Tired eyes

Eyes are constructed to be able to see at great distances and under normal illumination. Modern living conditions have forced man to adapt to new demands in society. Does this adaptation become a permanent part of our life?

If this were the case, nothing would be done to stop pollution of air and water, for example. It is remarkable, and unfortunate, to consider the fact that man can create a major problem for society and yet he overlooks the importance of this problem.

We know the importance of good lighting in work, for it is essential to efficiency. Yet, prevention of visual problems and working inefficiently is "taken with a grain of salt".

Scientific experiments have provided us with norms in lighting for the home, office, plant or school. Yet we still take the easiest way rather than the best way, to provide illumination, because we may be lazy or apathetic. The price of such negligence is often eye fatigue, and perhaps a permanent handicap.

Certain tasks may require 100 foot-candles; contrasts should not be too great, or reflecting surfaces too dazling, etc. Don't ever neglect the only pair of eyes you have!

Venereal upsurge causes new alarm

Venereal disease is again on the increase. In the United States the American Medical Association plans a nation-wide health education campaign to combat the rising menace.

Major objectives will be to acquaint the public with the nature of venereal disease, how to recognize it, and how it is spread. People will be urged to see their doctors whenever they have any reason to think they may have contracted any form of the disease.

In Canada, public education in regard to venereal disease was the first successful project of the Health League of Canada and, along with advances in treatment, such diseases were for several years regarded as under general control. Dr. Gordon Bates, general director of the Health League, states, however, that people are under a great delusion if they think they have acquired safety.

In Canada in 1964 venereal cases reported totalled 23,043, compared with 16,978 in 1959, and a five-year median of 18,480 — according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

In the United States, Dr. F. J. L. Blasingame, the AMA's executive vice-president, states that the number of infectious syphilis has almost tripled in the last five years and that cases in persons under 20 years of age have increased 200 per cent.

Honey for flavor, has high potential

(Consumer Section)

The bees have been busy again this year and you will find plenty of fine Canadian honey in the stores. The subtle aromatic flavor of this natural sweetener combines well with many foods — fruit cakes take added glamor and baked goods are honey-rich in flavor. Tests show that honey gives baked goods much better keeping qualities than do other sweeteners.

Most of the honey you see in stores is No. 1 grade. Honey is graded for flavor, moisture content, keeping qualities and for foreign material such as pollen or wax. Honey comes in four shades, White, Golden, Amber and Dark.

The color and flavor depend on the kind of flowers from which the bees gather the nectar. Honey is not generally marked with the floral source since the bees may visit many different flowering plants. Usually the mildest honey comes in the lightest color. A good proportion of the honey produced in Canada is derived mainly from the clover plant and is classified as "white" honey. Honey classified as "dark" is derived primarily from buckwheat and is, of course, stronger flavored.

You can buy liquid, creamed or comb honey. "Creamed" honey seems to be becoming more and more popular. This is granulated honey which has been crystallized under controlled conditions and has a very smooth, creamy texture which makes it spread easily.

Pasteurized Honey. — Most honey sold in the store has been pasteurized. The honey is heated to a certain temperature in order to kill the yeasts that cause honey to ferment. This process does not affect the flavor or other qualities. Pasteurized honey should keep indefinitely if stored away.

Storing Honey — Honey should always be stored in a warm, dry place and should be kept covered. A kitchen cupboard is a good place to keep it. Do not keep honey in the cellar since it absorbs moisture readily and the honey may become thin and may ferment. Dampness will spoil the appearance of comb honey. It will turn dark and moisture will gather on the surface.

Honey should not be kept in the refrigerator. Freezing honey does not change its color or its flavor, but it may cause granulation.

Serve Honey Often. — Perk up your meals by serving honey: As a sweet treat for breakfast on cereals, toast or muffins. As a glamor topping for ice cream or puddings. As a flavor accent in coffee or cocoa. As a surprise substitute for sugar in baked goodies.

Honey makes the difference in the following recipe, tested and approved by the Consumer Section. This loaf has excellent keeping qualities.

Honey Date Loaf

2 Tablespoons butter, ¼ cup of liquid honey, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ cup sour milk, 1 cup chopped dates, ¼ cup of chopped walnuts.

Cream butter and gradually beat in honey. Add egg, lemon rind and lemon juice. Beat thoroughly. Sift dry ingredients and stir in alternately with the sour milk. Add dates and nuts. Pour into a greased loaf pan, 9 x 4 inches and bake in a 350°F oven until a skewer inserted in centre comes out clean, 50 to 60 minutes.

A number of parents' organizations have been formed at one time or another to find or create help for children with special problems. Much of the help now being given retarded children with special problems rose out of the organized efforts of parents of these children.

A comparatively unknown group is now working to improve the lot of children suffering from disabilities that are sometimes difficult to understand and often undiagnosed.

The Ontario Association for Children with Learning Disabilities is a group of parents and professionals whose first aim is to see diagnostic and treatment facilities set up for these children.

A child with perceptual difficulties may look normal, may have good eyesight and hearing. But he has suffered some damage to the tissue of his central nervous system, and the results will show in any one of several ways.

Some Confusion

Basically, he will have difficulty making sense out of some things which present no problem to normal children. He may do some things well but other things poorly. He may know what he wants to say and have trouble putting it into words. He may grasp parts of a whole but fail to make the connections which give him a logical conclusion.

An Association pamphlet compares his chronic confusion with the frustrated feeling a driver may have when he sees a billboard so briefly he cannot be sure what the picture was about. Or the uncertainty everyone has experienced in the dark or a fog when things seem to change shape and become unidentifiable.

Partly because of this constant frustration and partly because of the damage itself, these children may be over-excitable, unable to concentrate, may take hold of a subject and run away with it. Especially if they develop any emotional problems, they may seem to be wilful and badly disciplined.

Want Training

They usually find a normal classroom, with all its distractions and busy children, almost impossible to cope with. The Association wants to encourage more training facilities for them in the public school system. These children can be helped in a quieter atmosphere, given individual attention.

They may have normal intelligence or better, and teaching can at least narrow the gap for them between their faulty perceptions and normal ones. They may eventually re-enter a regular classroom.

The Association also wants to encourage research and legislation as part of the solution, and improve communication among existing services in North America.

Their pamphlet says: "The child with a perceptual handicap carries the condition with him for years, perhaps indefinitely, like a short leg. He can use it but not as skilfully as if it were normal. His ability to use it grows as he grows, but only if he is stimulated and encouraged to make the most of it."

A pension plan that benefits the woman

The Quebec Pension Plan is considered by most men to be particularly beneficial to the woman. And they are right.

When a man retires, dies, or becomes disabled, his wife and children are in particular need of protection.

6 BENEFITS OUT OF 7
Of the seven benefits available under the Pension Plan, six protect the woman directly or indirectly.

DIRECTLY
The wife can benefit directly from:
- widow's pension
- orphan's pension
- death benefit

INDIRECTLY
The wife can benefit indirectly from the following benefits payable to her husband:
- retirement pension
- disability pension
- pension for the child of a disabled contributor

IF YOU WORK
The woman who works and pays contributions to the Plan has the right, of course, to the same advantages as the man.

OTHER INFORMATION
Pay close attention to the explanations of the Plan directed to your attention through the newspapers, radio and television.
If you desire further information, write to the Quebec Pension Board.

Neighborliness and a passing generation; fruit cake and the imminence of Christmas

"Exile from Sunnyacres"

By Margaret Cook

Here we are settled in for the winter in Suburbia. It feels pretty grim, after the weeks at Sunnyacres. True, the clouds wept nearly every day, but the rest was sunshine. Never a dull moment; and the kind neighbors! We do not mean that the neighbors here are unkind, just that the cult of neighborliness does not exist. The people next door were away in Florida for two weeks last spring, and we were in Virginia, and neither missed the other! We compared notes later and agreed that, at least, we were not nosey.

Our last week-end at Sunnyacres was almost entirely spent in keeping the home fires burning. When we walked into the living-room, the temperature was 34. It took us 24 hours to get an even 70 all over the house. Getting up in the small hours to put more logs on the hearth fire was rather a chore, but there was also something endearing in the quiet of those hours, the fire glowing redly on the walls, and a lovely smell of burning apple and cedar wood. Peter, the cat, enjoyed every minute of his nights, curled up on the couch, basking in the warmth. Here he spends his nights in the cellar, where he is dry, and can be warm if he climbs the ladder to his basket on the furnace, but he obviously loathes this routine. Anyway, we agreed the week-end was just too strenuous, and not to be repeated until spring.

Going downstairs just then to fortify ourselves with a cup of tea, we idly turned on the TV, something we seldom do in the daytime. We caught the end of a program devoted to the premise that children are also human. This is something I have doubted ever since I, myself, emerged thankfully from that stage. I must say the MC was doing everything he could to disprove this theory. Some chubby male, possibly four years old, confided that he wished to be a jet pilot, and the MC subtly implied that the aim of all grown-ups is to have lots of money. This is entertainment? I heartily endorse the wail that has gone up from thousands — that is, that this is the worst season yet on TV. The documentaries remain excellent, the news commentators use empeccable English, and speak rather than shout; but for the rest, what have we? Soupy serials, boring variety shows, adequate sports coverage of interest only to one segment of the population, and the odd play — some very odd. Even poor old Lassie was shelved last Sunday, for something infinitely worse.

The election provided good entertainment. We trust you noticed that Margaret Cook correctly predicted the result, which is more than the various polls did. It was an unnecessary election and the initiators got what they deserved — nothing. We recently heard Charlotte Whitton say that what we need is a man with convictions, and the courage to back them up. She cited Darcy McGee as an example. Of course, he got shot for his pains; and others may have noted this fact and this may have acted as a deterrent. After all, a man may reason that it is better to be a live coward, than a dead hero. But, as one of the Remembrance Day programs commented, it is not the number of days that count, but with what we occupy them.

Speaking of the number of days, we noted with regret and disappointment the recent death of Edward Morrison, who would have been 100 years old early in March. We had the date in mind, and were looking forward to writing up the happy occasion. This has been denied us, but we should like to say how much we enjoyed the various talks we had with him. Much of the detail of the novel on pioneer life in Argenteuil, we owe to him and his sister. This summer, we spent a happy afternoon at the Morrison home in Shrewsbury. There, Mr. Morrison had built up both a pleasant home and a kind of business empire. I wish I might have seen it all in its hey-day. There are now only a few of that generation left. It was, I gather, a happy generation. They lived strenuously, but profitably, both for themselves and for their community. It may be trite, but we cannot omit to say that we shall not soon see their like again.

The mid-month snow caught us all unaware, but perhaps helped to awake people to the imminence of Christmas. We rushed about and made our Christmas cake, all seven pounds of it. The Australian cards are on their way, and the English ones are being readied. We have telephoned the niece and the sister-in-law to inquire what their respective families would relish as gifts. This may be unromantic, but it saves disappointment on The Day. The head of the house arrived home with three new shirts, informing us that one of them was my Christmas present to him. I paid up. The daughter is to finance the other, and the third, well it may be a present for someone else. This is shopping made easy. But there still remain plenty of others to tire the brain and the feet, and to deplete the pocket-book. I sound un-enthusiastic. Actually, I delight in Christmas. It seems to me a very good thing to say once a year to one's friends, "I love you", via a present.

* * *

I see that I have not said a word about the hunting season, now nearly over. Around Sunnyacres, it seemed to be a quiet one. The week-end we spent at Sunnyacres, we heard only two shots, and no stories of misdemeanors. The mayhem we endured four years back had one good effect. There is now little game at which to shoot. This is a pity, but more peaceful.

* * *

Finally, the joke of the month: Little boy to teacher, on the occasion of a visit by the head of the house to a school, "Miss, is that Mr. Pearson?"

Various projects in northern lab

Inuvik (CP) — For a number of scientists studying the North, including those dusting ice floes with carbon black and training falcons to catch seagulls, the Inuvik research laboratory never closes.

Some 69 projects were carried out through the laboratory during its first year of operation. More than 120 Canadian and foreign scientists used its facilities.

The laboratory was established by the federal government in March 1964 to stimulate Arctic research, provide study facilities and act as a base for northern field studies.

Among first-year projects was a National Research Council of Canada experiment of dusting ice with carbon black to absorb the heat of the sun and help melt ice in harbors.

The Provincial Museum of Victoria worked on a joint program with the federal transport department to train falcons to catch seagulls which endanger aircraft at coastal airfields.

My Hand in Thine

When baby eyes in Mother's eyes
Their heaven found,
When baby feet first followed her
In joyful sound,
When baby lips from hers did learn
Thy Name Divine —
How tenderly my mother placed
My hand in Thine.

DAILY TOLL IS HIGH

Montreal (CP) — Pickpockets from abroad take about $6,000 a day from Montrealers, Judge Emile Trottier estimated in general sessions court. He held a Colombian transient without bail for preliminary hearing on a charge of lifting a wallet containing $15 from a man on a bus.

Retirement of Saguenay cruise ships is deplored by Minister of Tourism

Quebec — Expressing deep regret over the announcement that Canada Steamship Lines will discontinue its cruises between Montreal and the Saguenay River, Hon. Alphonse Couturier, Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game, stated recently that the disappearance of these picturesque vessels will certainly provoke strong disapproval from all communities along the shores of the St. Lawrence. The characteristic shape and elegance of these ships, the Minister pointed out, has long contributed to the distinctive local color of the Province and reminded visitors of the steam boats that used to ply the waters of the Mississippi.

"The photos of these ships reproduced on tourist literature was a wonderful advertisement for La Belle Province. They were a powerful incentive, suggesting to tourists the pleasures of a trip on the waters of two rivers unique in North America and the enjoyment of scenery beyond compare.

"I question the wisdom of retiring these vessels at the very moment when we expect a notable increase in visitors during 1966 and 1967. I know that Canada Steamship Lines reached its decision because these cruises have been operating at a loss, but I also wonder what will happen to the Manoir Richelieu and what plans the company has for the future of this hotel.

"Could not the Manoir Richelieu become a winter sports centre? It could thus remain open for four or five months in addition to its present summer season.

"Everyone agrees", the Minister continued, "that winter is a season well suited to tourism in our Province. This being the case, it would be logical to envision a winter vacation area with the Manoir Richelieu as its focus. Here would be a first-class permanent attraction for the Charlevoix region.

"These thoughts have been inspired by my sadness at seeing disappear the last traces of the era when the passage of the Canada Steamship Lines boats was a major daily event. Of all the provinces, Quebec should make every possible effort to preserve mementoes of the past."

The Minister then raised the question of the future of these ships, if Canada Steamship Lines' decision proves final. Were the Expo '67 authorities to anchor them in the Port of Montreal, for example, they could provide lodging for 1,400 visitors throughout the summer of 1967.

"It is, of course, difficult for the Government to interfere with the policy of a private company", he concluded. "Yet, the Minister of Tourism cannot remain indifferent to anything which concerns the welfare of visitors to La Belle Province."
