U.N. nominates lawyer, 16 Island Lake citizen

Roger Lajeunesse, resident of 16 Island Lake, lawyer and longtime active member of the Cottingham and Union Nationale organizations, was on Monday evening the unanimous choice of a widely representative gathering of party supporters, at a convention held in l'Ecole Clement. Mr. Lajeunesse was nominated by Gaetan Leclair, and seconded by Leonard Bedard and Don MacRae, Jr., all three of whom had been rumored as possible candidates for the vacancy left by W. M. Cottingham, who has represented this County for the past 18 years.

Jean Paul Cardinal, Q.C., a resident of St. Sauveur and member of the Central Committee, acted as master of ceremonies, and in opening the convention, paid tribute to the time and effort "friend Bill" had devoted to the population from the time he was first elected in 1948. Mtre. Cardinal expressed the personal regret of Mr. Johnson, leader of the U.N. party, at Mr. Cottingham's decision to retire, and wished him the best in his more leisurely years.

In replying to these good wishes, Mr. Cottingham expressed his thanks for having been given the opportunity to be of service, and assured the gathering of his support in the coming election on June 5. He then called for nominations, and Gaetan Leclair, in sponsoring the nomination of Mr. Lajeunesse, paid tribute to the past service of Mr. Cottingham, as did the seconders. There being no further nominations, Mr. Lajeunesse was declared the unanimous choice, and was called upon to address the gathering.

Roger Lajeunesse, chosen Union Nationale candidate

In his opening remarks, he also expressed the thanks of the population to Mr. Cottingham — pointing out that, even though he was retiring, he had not dropped the party, as was evident from his presence at this nomination meeting. He also expressed his thanks to three of his main supporters, Messrs. Leclair, Bedard and MacRae, all of whom withdrew their names from the list of candidates in his favor, and all of whom had been devoted workers for the party.

Referring again to his friend Bill, he said he had made a mark that would not be easily erased, as was evident in the roads and schools, among other things, that could be seen throughout the County.

Mr. Lajeunesse admitted that he had not had sufficient time to prepare a complete program, but one of his main objectives would be to remedy the "criminal negligence" in the lack of proper attention to all roads of the County since the Liberals were elected in 1960 — as, since that time, the roads have been "awful". This meant a re-organization of the roads department, which would be complete. He added that the taxation system had to be modified. "It is bad throughout the province, but terrible in Argenteuil County." In closing Mr. Lajeunesse paid tribute to the cooperation between the two cultures in Argenteuil, who are continuing to work together. "It is amazing to see what can be achieved, and I feel this County should be set up as an example not only to the rest of Quebec but to all of Canada."

The newly elected candidate turned the microphone back to Mr. Cottingham, who read a telegram from Roger Regimbal, M.P. for Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes, expressing his regret at being unable to attend the meeting, due to a previous commitment.

In closing, Mr. Cottingham stated, "We were asked for a candidate from the northern part of the County, and we have a good one. All we ask is that the north of the County proves its worth, as I'm positive they will do; and I can assure you all, you can count on the south. We want a winner, and we have one in the person of Roger Lajeunesse."

Mtre. Roger Lajeunesse is from one of the oldest families in Ste. Marguerite du Lac Masson, son of the late J. Charlemagne Lajeunesse, a former general merchant and mayor for over 25 years.

His paternal grandmother, Olive Lafleur, was the sister of Odile

Industrial plan for parish terrain south of Lachute

Kendall Investments, holders of a considerable tract of land in St. Jerusalem, have put a proposition to the parish council to designate this area as an industrial zone, and that the land be subdivided and homologated as such, to be known as "Argenteuil Industrial Park". The area lies between Bethany and Mary Streets, south of Lachute.

James Marshall, engineer of the firm, outlined the plan to the parish council Monday evening, intimating also that an industry would be interested in establishing here shortly.

Further consultations will be held between this firm and the parish council.

Concerts Assocn. Campaign rally Tuesday, May 17

The Community Concerts Association 19th annual campaign rally is slated for Tuesday evening (8 o'clock), May 17, in the Golf Club chalet. Workers will be notified personally as the date approaches. Joint chairmen of the membership campaign are Miss Juliette Rodrigue and Mrs. G. R. Rigby. Mrs. Jacques Bedard is president of the Association and her husband, Mr. Bedard, fills a continuing role as secretary.

At the rally of workers it is expected that Mr. Norman Lower, the Canadian Community Concerts Association representative, will be present to assist in promotion of the week's intensified campaign. However, many former subscribers will be contacted in the previous week, and it is confidently hoped there will be a full response in renewals.

Headquarters during campaign week will again be situated at 498 Main Street, the premises of Deslauriers & Marcil, insurance brokers — by courtesy of the management.

An attraction booked by the directors for their 1966-67 season is Lola Montes and her troupe of Spanish dancers. This will appear during February, 1967, while two other outstanding concerts will be booked when the budget is arrived at, following the membership enrolment.

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

Some farm readers have voiced objections on our omission of Country Notebook in the two last issues, and we are happy to note that Walker Riley's column is so highly rated. By way of explanation — his article failed to arrive for April 20; and in our April 27 issue it was again omitted, due to unusual pressure of local news. Our apologies. Mr. Riley is back again this week, on page 10.

The transformation at our Memorial Park, although continued into the spring, is part of the winter works program approved (and assisted) by the provincial and federal governments — under which Lachute Corporation meets only 10 percent of labor costs. In order to benefit by this agreement, the town engineer engaged a foreman and 6 additional laborers, to accomplish the bulk of the project within the time limit, April 30.

The annual meeting of the Argenteuil Art Association is set for Saturday, May 21, at the home of the president, Mrs. L. T. Porter, St. Andrews East. Members are being notified by mail; it is suggested, however, that the date be kept in mind.

It is noted among 153 new Flying Officers commissioned in the RCAF, J. P. G. Lacoste has latterly been promoted to that rank. F/O Lacoste is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Lacoste, Lachute.

Fd'l grant $12,000 to St. Jerome for urban renewal

Ottawa — St. Jerome, Que., will receive a federal contribution of $12,000 for preparation of an urban renewal scheme costing $24,000, it was announced last week.

The scheme, covering about 40 acres in the community's centre-town area, is to be completed within five months, says an announcement from the office of Labor Minister Nicholson, the cabinet minister who reports to Parliament for Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Relic of an early industry

Still solid and well preserved, this red brick — a cornerstone in the old Banford store building, recently torn down to make way for the new Caisse Populaire structure on Main Street — came into the hands of Chas. Napp, one of the contractors for demolition. John Smith, the brickmaker, came here from Brighton, England, in 1819 and bought a farm in Bethany settlement, on the north side of the road. He then purchased property on the south of the road (now the Lebert Hume farm) for its superior clay content. On the reverse side of the brick is roughly engraved, "William Hume, brickmaker". According to research on this early local enterprise, it was recorded by Norman Thorburn in a recent Watchman article that bricks from this industry once sold at $6 a thousand. — Photo, Syd Drew

Honored by American Ceramic Society for 'outstanding technical achievements'

The April issue of the American Ceramic Society bulletin announces that "the John Jeppson medal will be awarded to G. Reginald Rigby in recognition of his outstanding technical achievements and contributions to ceramic technology."

The American Ceramic Society comprises over 9,000 members from all branches of the ceramic industry, and the award will be presented at the Society's annual meeting to be held in Washington, D.C., on May 9. The award was established in 1957 in memory of John Jeppson, one of the founders of the Norton Company, and takes the form of a gold medal and certificate. Among the previous eight recipients of the award, all of whom have been resident in the U.S.A., are the heads of the Ceramic Departments of Rutgers University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. G. R. Rigby

At the end of May, Dr. Rigby is leaving for Europe, where he will attend the 10th International Ceramic Congress at Stockholm, after which he has been invited to give the annual Mellor Memorial Lecture to the Institute of Ceramics in England, on June 24. This is the first time that this lecture has been presented by anyone not resident in the U.K. The address will be entitled, "The Changing Pattern of Research", and will contrast the attitudes towards scientific research in leading industrial countries, including the U.S.A., Canada, Great Britain, and the U.S.S.R.

Dr. Rigby, a graduate of Imperial College, University of London, England, and author or joint author of over 100 scientific papers, has previously received many honors, including the Beilby Memorial Award of the Royal Institute of Chemistry in 1947. He is currently a Fellow of the American Ceramic Society, the Royal Institute of Chemistry, the Chemical Institute of Canada, the American Mineralogical Society, and the Institute of Ceramics, and is also listed in "Who's Who in the East" and "The World Who's Who in Commerce and Industry". Dr. Digby has been Director of Research for Canadian Refractories Limited since 1957, and has resided in Lachute since 1958.

Scientist team seeks data here on falling meteor

Following the descent of a meteor in this part of the hemisphere last week, observers from the observatory in Albany, N.Y., have traced its trajectory and, on speculation that it disintegrated in this particular area, have had emissaries sleuthing this past week to seek possible evidence of the falling object.

Two scientists have visited Lachute, with the Lakefield area under speculation. Maps of this terrain and information were sought from district residents, including Robt. Haydon and his son, who might afford information from military topography. Norman Thorburn, a resident of the same area, was among those who watched this phenomenon, with other members of his family, at Upper Lachute. Mr. Thorburn (who was the first to notify The Watchman at the time) is convinced that any fragments of the meteor reaching the earth would fall farther south than here, across the Ottawa River, possibly in Ontario or New York State.

Three additions to police force for larger area of jurisdiction

Lachute police force augmented its ranks by three additional constables, effective last Monday. The increase of constabulary became necessary with the Lachute-Ayersville amalgamation, and the necessary by-law providing for extension of police service was adopted by Council some time ago.

The new constables are Marcel Beaudin, Robert Miron and Guy Lavoie. The first two have had some experience in this work — Beaudin having previously served for eight months on the local force, and Miron for one year.

The policemen were hired by Director Réal Chartrand on authority of Mayor Dr. Zoël Saindon and of the police commissioner, Ald. Linton Armstrong. However, the measure must be ratified by Council at its meeting on May 9. . . . It is recalled, this is the date set for the first joint meeting of the Lachute and Ayersville councillors, when a "pro tem" mayor will be chosen, to direct proceedings until the first general election.

Speaking briefly in the Commons last Friday in the debate on electoral redistribution, Roger Regimbal, M.P. for Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes, expressed himself in accord with new boundaries proposed here, but made a plea for retention of "Deux Montagnes" in the name of this constituency, on grounds of local sentiment and tradition. Following is a digest of Mr. Regimbal's remarks, as recorded by Hansard:

"We have heard, from all parts of this house, echoes of disappointment caused by redistribution in a great many ridings, of each province. To raise the commission's spirit, I shall say, at the very beginning of my remarks, that the people of Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes accept, in principle, the recommendations of the commission dealing with the geographical limits of the riding. The main reason for this satisfaction, naturally, is the fact that nothing was taken away from us, that we are left with all the assets which are ours, with all the variety and diversity of interests which is our characteristic and, what is more, because the most attractive flower of Terrebonne, namely St. Sauveur-des-Monts and the municipality of the parish of St. Sauveur, was added to our garden.

"Farming and handicraft centres, quaint touristic and holiday resorts, drawing hundreds of thousands of visitors, St. Sauveur Village and St. Sauveur parish will give Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes new reasons for pride and all the citizens of this constituency welcome them most cordially.

"I wish to extend my condolences to the member for Terrebonne over his loss, which becomes our gain, but we are confident we may provide the added population with the same effective and dignified representation it experienced under Messrs. Cadieux, Nantel, Chapleau and Masson.

"Besides, we are happy to call on the citizens of St. Sauveur to share our pride and our history, take their place at the discussion table and have their say in community matters.

"The constituency of Argenteuil-Deux-Montagnes is particularly proud of its history; its sole objection to the recommendations of the commission bears precisely on one point: the citizens protest unanimously and strongly against the proposed cancellation of the words 'Deux Montagnes' to reduce the name to 'Argenteuil' only. By one stroke of the pen the commission deletes a name which fills very remarkable pages of our history and traditions, local, provincial, and federal as well.

"Our request is very simple. We wish to keep intact the name of the county, that is 'Argenteuil-Deux-Montagnes', and this request being simple and easy to grant, we urge the commission kindly to take it into account."

"Over Ninety" Birthday Club

Old friends and neighbors extend good wishes to Mrs. Thomas Purcell, a former resident of the Glen of Harrington, who celebrated her 90th birthday last Saturday, April 30. Mrs. Purcell is now a patient at the Pleasant Rest nursing home in Hawkesbury, Ont. She has been a reader of The Watchman as long as she can remember.

Blaze destroyed home in Carillon

A family of five was made homeless by a fire which destroyed their dwelling at Carillon on Tuesday morning. The property was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Adrien Lacasse of Chambly, formerly of Carillon, and the occupants were Mr. and Mrs. Jean-Louis Langevin and family.

Mrs. Langevin (who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lacasse) first noticed the outbreak in an upstairs cupboard, around 8 o'clock in the morning. The fire quickly spread to the walls and ceiling, and flames engulfed the entire upper storey. The fire brigade was summoned from St. Andrews, and subsequently a fire crew from Lachute. The blaze was subdued, but not without heavy loss. The second storey was completely gutted.

The house is next to the Carillon post-office. Mrs. Langevin was alone at the time, her husband being at his work in Contrecoeur. The family have found shelter at the home of relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Marcel Décary, in Carillon.

Leading citizens at inaugural by telephone co'y

Since Sunday, May 1, customers in the Lachute and St. Jerome area have been able to use the Direct Distance Dialing, as well as customers in Ste. Scholastique, Brownsburg, St. Andrews East, St. Lin and other localities.

The official inauguration of "D.D.D." took place last Wednesday at the Lachute Golf Club. Mr. Bernard Parent, Bell Canada manager in St. Jerome, welcomed the guests and stated that this ceremony marked the end of many months of work. Started during August 1965, the installation of D.D.D. in the territory has cost over $2,000,000.

"In the Lachute area alone," added Mr. Parent, "Bell Canada has spent over $300,000." Dr. Zoël Saindon, Mayor of Lachute, presided for the occasion, which was attended by civic and business personalities, among whom was Mr. Roger Regimbal, M.P. for this constituency.

Mr. Parent also observed that this was "not the end" of Bell Canada activities in the area. "We are planning to invest over $300,000 in Lachute area next year. This investment will help to improve present equipment and telephone service in the rural areas."

First calls via new direct dialing

Mayor Saindon of Lachute was invited to place the first Direct Distance Dialing call, on inauguration of the service in this district. The mayor dialed a call to New Brunswick, after which Mr. Roger Regimbal, M.P. (centre) called his native town, Sudbury. Ayersville watchdog league seeking wider participation

At a recent meeting of the Ayersville Citizens' League Inc., it was unanimously decided to change the name of this body, to Citizens' League Inc. (Ligue des Citoyens Inc.), in order to permit a wider participation among residents of the area. The president of the organization is Louis Barbeau.

The aims of this league are outlined as follows:

(1) To safeguard the interests of citizens at municipal, educational (school) and recreational (Loisirs) levels.

(2) To facilitate the ownership of property.

(3) To take active concern in matters pertaining to improvement and embellishment of the community.

(4) To scrutinize or to promote measures and by-laws serving the best interests of the public.

(5) To foster a civic spirit.

(6) To assure that citizens' money paid in taxes be devoted to the best interests of the taxpayers.

A membership drive will be staged shortly in the Greater Lachute area, and the organizers anticipate a favorable response from local residents. Elections for the appointment of five directors will be held in June.

Big tax hike in Hawkesbury

Hawkesbury — A budget that will cost the average ratepayer an additional $30 on his tax bill this year was brought down by Hawkesbury town council last week.

School taxes are up roughly 10 mills for both residential and commercial taxpayers. The new mill rates are:

Separate School supporters, residential 86.43, up from 77.91 in 1965; commercial 96.19, up from 87.52 in 1965.

Public school supporters, residential, 81.07, up from 71.31 in 1965; commercial, 90.23, up from 80.41 in 1965.

Biggest item on the budget is education $404,969, up considerably from last year because of an addition being added to the town's high school.

Paving of 18 streets in the town will cost $368,000. Of this $198,000 will be paid by provincial grants.

Of the predicted $300,000 cost of building a new town hall, $100,000 is on the budget

Week's Epigram

The egotist driver is a psychological misfit in the traffic scene — detested by other drivers, pedestrians and traffic officers. He shows disregard for others, is aggressive, demanding, impatient and selfish, "a fugitive from the nursery".

By BOB ATCHISON

This seems to have been the best year for geese passing over; there have been numerous flights stopping over for rest and feed on the North River. Some of the flats along Highway 41 have had large flocks, while there have been a few stragglers around the river for some time, too. Of course, with the number of shooters taking advantage, they won't stay too long. I've often wondered what is happening to these flocks farther down. In the lower river St. Lawrence they stay around much longer, in some cases for a month or so; and with the type of money hunters on their trail, the geese must take a severe beating. Actually they are not much good to eat, but I presume some of these purveyors of meals don't care much how they taste, as long as they can get them cheap. The Dept. of Fish and Game has said it would enforce the laws in this area more emphatically this year — that no one would get away with infractions. You can believe this if you wish; I don't. What's more, this is an election year.

There have been some good stories on the fishing so far. This one I sure liked: Some of the boys had been spinning for some time, with no luck; however there was a good strike, and the battle was on. Bringing the fish in to be netted — a swish, the net was brought under the fish, and it was scooped out — or so the fisherman thought. Guess what happened: the bottom of the net had just dropped out, also the fish. . . Then this one: An angler trying to get his lure up out of a snag in the water, leaned over the bank, and just slid into the water along with the bank! This must have been funny; the way I was told — the gent tried to run up the falling bank, and almost made it. Tough luck too, he lost his lure.

You may have read this some time ago, but it never hurts to reiterate. . . The per capita cost to every man, woman and child in this country for pollution is $50 — according to a speech which G. B. Langford, director of the Great Lakes Institute, presented not too long ago. Industry came in for the major blame; however, this authority specifically mentioned detergents as a big factor in the problem. Another point he made — Montreal does NOT have a sewage treatment plant, and still continues to dump raw sewage into the St. Lawrence River, daily to the tune of millions of gallons.

I know this should not be suggested; after all, there is no prestige in having a clean waterway around a city. But how about some of the money that has been spent on these magnificent dreams being applied to this purpose? You know, if only a small portion of the money expended on trips to this and that, could have been shuttled into the pollution problem, then we would have no such trouble now. Considering the millions that have been spent on pollution so far, and with no results, isn't it about time we taxpayers started to ask what's going on? Numerous commissions have been set up for study, and they are still appointing such groups. We pay for all this — so how about a voice?

It's early to be warning about forest fires, certainly with all the moisture in the bush just now; that is, in some spots. However, there are some places that are real fire hazards, caused by leaves and debris collected over the winter. All this takes is a match, and that's it. The damage caused every year by fire is stupendous, and when bush fires are reckoned in, the loss is just about doubled. So let's try and keep fires out of our County this year.

At a gathering the other evening with a group of sportsmen, the talk covered a wide field; but a prominent topic was the wolves that have been running in the province this past winter. It's surprising that so many people want the bounty put back on these animals. You know how I feel about the wolf, and you may imagine, the conversation here developed into a heated hassle. No matter how you try to point out that the bounty system has never been any good, they all have their opinions, and most of them seem to be against the wolf. I honestly think these persons wanting the wolf wiped out, have never had anything to do with the animal; for that matter, in most cases they have never even seen one. But they have been fed the propaganda of the bounty man, that these creatures are vicious killers. I know I talk in defence of the wolf too frequently; I'm first to admit this. But I have seen and observed these animals, and know they can be as gentle as any pet, if treated right. We always talk of the wolf as a killer, and how wantonly it kills. I'm not going to try and convince you otherwise — but ask yourself these questions — does the wolf set traps; kill by the dozen, just for the sake of killing; damage his own property; neglect his own kin? Think it over, in comparison with the human species.

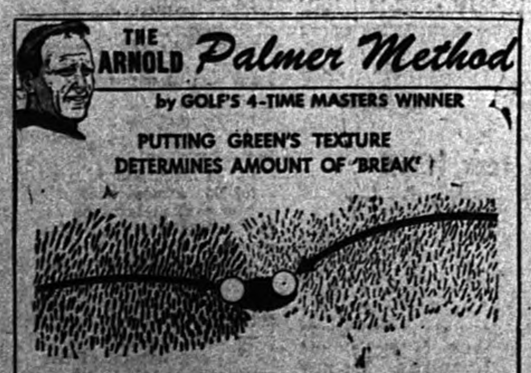
Right now, however, the prime topic should be fishing. . . Ed Cribb, out last week-end, caught a couple of good ones, two reds and two greys, not bad for the first time. (I say not bad, but I guess I'm green with envy.) There have been a few others caught, nothing extra large as yet, but these are to come. One of the local enthusiasts visited Lake Macdonald the other day; the ice was running out, and fish were to be plainly seen. Know what they were after? A small black fly, a Caddis Creeper actually — and our angler had forgotten his fly rod, just had his spinner. (Want to know his name?) There have been a few brookies taken, but nothing of any size. The ones I have seen, not much bigger than small minnows, should have been thrown back. You know, boys, that's one of the reasons we now have so few fish in this County.



Lachute Motor Sport Club

News, Views, Activities — by Don Smith

The last meeting of L.M.S.C. was held on Friday, April 22, at the Masonic Hall on Brownsburg Road. We had a record attendance, and hope this trend will continue for the coming year, so that we can promote motor sport events in the Lachute area in the best possible manner.

Among our guests were Mr. Mert MacDonald, of Campbell & MacDonald Motor Sales Ltd., sponsor of our spring rally, and Mr. Gaston Laroche, representing Molson's Brewery. Mert did a fine job of presenting his trophies and prizes. Mr. Laroche, we hope, will be working with us in the near future as a sponsor of one of our events.

May is a big month for our club. Dave Heggie states that everything is set for our big day on the sixth when we head up north to man one of the last time controls in the 1966 Shell 4000. It should be very interesting to note the condition of the cars as they pass this point for they will have covered almost 4,000 miles. Members don't forget that date— May 6.

Attention, novice rallyists! L.M.S.C. is putting on an evening "rallyette" sometime near the middle of May. It will be approximately 35 miles in length and geared for those of you (the public) who have never been in a rally. The roads are all very good, and the entry fee will be only one dollar per car to cover expenses. Ladies, take note! There will be a special prize, "La Coupe des Dames", for the female crew placing highest in the standings — provided at least three crews of the fairer sex (now, there's a challenge for you) start the rally. Besides, 80% of our members are male. Watch this column next week for more information.

Should you be a car owner without a navigator, or vice versa, get in touch with any club member or write P.O. Box 311, Lachute, and we will try to get a partner for you. P.S. This is not a dating service!

Pit Chatter

Ran into Ron Tilsley while mapping out the rallyette the other evening. . . Jack Hume is getting our stock car, old Number 8, out of mothballs. . . Brian Gagné impressed us with his remarkable showing in the BP Graduation Rally last week. . . Dave Heggie drove his Sunbeam to a fifth in class finish in the April Fool Rally put on by the Northern Electric Automobile Club. . . Wonder how Tom Dwyer and Allan Bates feel after blowing 30 points in the last section of our spring rally? They only lost two points until that section. . . Don't forget that rallyette in May. . . We still think Dave Pollock needs more air in his Michelin tires. . . Our female counterparts have received much praise for the fine spread they put on after the Spring Rally. Congratulations gals — Margaret Brass, Florence MacAdam, Mrs. Castle, Mrs. G. Wallis, Bonnie MacDonald. Hope I remembered everybody. . . Does Bob Rodger remember about the $300 suit? . . Tom Dwyer didn't pay enough attention to Rodger MacAdam's refresher course on map reading before the last rally. . . Thanks for the Shell 4000 bumper sticker, fellas. . . Lindsay Green took a fine picture for the photo section of the rally. . . Say, Ken, why was Marsha late for all the checkpoints? . . George Rogers was "taught" a few things in the last rally. . . My elapsed time is up for this week. Don't forget visitors are welcome at all our meetings.

Next Meeting — Wednesday, May 4. 8 p.m. at the Masonic Hall, Lachute.

Lethbridge, Alta. (CP) — Wild ducks pick up only insignificant amounts of insecticide residues, says researcher W. A. Charnetski of the federal farm research station here. The traces are apparently transferred to ducklings in the egg from the hen.

Stan Davies writes again for Watchman boating enthusiasts

Roughly a million Canadians own a boat of some kind. One family in six owns a boat in Canada, and statistics show, the numbers are increasing every year.

Yes every year, thousands of new boaters descend upon our waterways . . and many of them, though very long on enthusiasm, are very short on know-how.

For them, this newspaper will print a regular column, beginning next issue, called "Boating Clinic", written by Stan Davies, well-known Canadian boating writer.

The column is in the form of questions which boaters have written in to ask Stan, who provides interesting and informative answers. They are probably the same questions you yourself might ask, if you need information on a boating problem.

And if you do need information, please write in; your questions will be answered fully by letter and probably used in the column.

"Boating Clinic" will cover all topics, beginning with early season problems such as preparing a boat for the summer fun. It will cover all aspects of boating rules and regulations, techniques of handling, a big emphasis on safety, and finally, how to put your boat away for the winter.

Stan Davies has a long background in boating. In the early — and hungry — 30's, he toted food and equipment by canoe and kicker to prospectors in the Northern Ontario goldfields.

Water safety know-how came pretty fast in the treacherous rapids and cold nothern lakes — it had to, for mistakes had a nasty way of being fatal.

Since those early days, Stan has had many and varied contacts with boating — under straining canvas on the Great Lakes, cruises through the Trent, the inland waterway to Florida, and across the Gull Stream to Nassau. He's been deep-sea fishing off Acapulco, surfing in Australia, and scuba treasure-hunting in the Bahamas.

He's sailed out of Black's Harbor, N.B., on a sardine boat, out into the Pacific on a Mexican schooner, and through Disneyland on an imitation Mississippi river boat.

He's no hidebound, opinionated, self-proclaimed expert, Stan Davies just likes writing and talking about boats for the ordinary man.

His favorite boat? A light car-top skiff, which he can put on the car himself, but still big enough to take three of his six sons to explore a new fishing spot.

Learn more about boating with "Boating Clinic", starting next week in The Watchman.

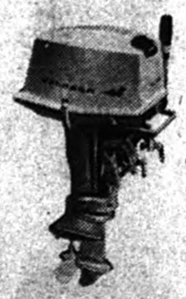
Johnson builds 18 horsepower sizes in 15 models—all use 50-1 gas-oil mixture—all offer 7 year warranty. 100, 80, 60, 48, 33, 20, 9½, 6, 5, 3. Stern Drive models: 90, 120, 150, 200 horsepower



Meet the new Johnson 20 hp. This rig can easily ski one adult or two kids with power to spare. It doubles as a family motor and a fishing motor. As do all Johnsons, the 20 offers you one immense feature —absolute dependability. Ask anyone who owns a Johnson —they'll tell you it never quits when the going gets rough.

The Johnson V-60 is a family powerhouse with a foam-lined engine cover for extra quietness. Electric starting is standard. Also available: the world's most popular outboard—the Johnson 40 in 3 models: manual start, electric start, and exclusive Electramatic drive.

People who prefer smaller boats should consider the Johnson 33 hp. motor—it's excellent for pontoon, raft, houseboat and day cruiser power.

'Til now, one hundreds have been cranky, selfish engines demanding special gas and oil. Johnson's new 100 uses regular low-cost car gas and easy-to-obtain outboard oil mixed 50 to 1. Even more important, the 100 uses 20% less fuel than any motor in its class. More news. This year Johnson introduces an 80 hp. in two models. Both 100 and 80 have Johnson's famous electric clutch.

The Johnson 9½ could easily be called the best fishing motor ever made. It idles so slowly you can almost count the propeller revolutions. Because it's a low-profile engine, you can cast over it sitting down. It's so well balanced that it carries and stores easily. Other compacts include the 6, 5, and 3 hp. sizes. The 3 is a twin cylinder motor—very smooth running.

No ordinary star, this circus clown

Only 10 days to go before the whistle of the calliope, the roar of the lions, and the ambling gait of the pachyderms (elephants to you) provide fun and delight for the young and old, at the Montreal Forum.

This year's Karnak Temple Shrine Circus brings a selected group of the world's best artists, trained and wild animal acts, brought together in a spectacular two hour show for benefit of the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children.

Montreal may well be proud of the fact that it is the location of one of the 20 Shriners' Hospitals where, regardless of race, color or creed, cripnled children are given the benefit of the most up-to-date treatment and therapy, and are assisted on their way to a healthy body and soundness of limb that otherwise may never have been attained. All of this is accomplished without financial public appeals, but made possible through Shriner member-assessments and proceeds of the annual Shrine Circus — this year coming to the Forum on May 14 to 21, inclusive.

Blinko the Clown - (Ernie Burch)

Clowning is without a doubt one of the true "ancient arts" of the circus. As the years pass by we find that there are fewer and fewer clowns each year. As the elder clowns pass on and there are very few younger men following the profession, it leaves a lamentable shortage of "Joeys".

One of America's foremost "white face clowns" is Blinko. Having been featured with the Ringling Brothers & Barnum and Bailey Circus for six consecutive years, he left the circus to head for Hollywood — where he was featured in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Greatest Show On Earth". As a matter of fact, it was Cecil B. DeMille, who was enchanted with Ernie's large, green tin-foil eyelashes, that gave Ernie Burch his clown name of "Blinko", during the filming of "The Greatest Show On Earth".

A young man of his early thirties, Blinko has already scored a backlog of 18 years with the circuses of America. He first left home to join the Bailey Brothers Circus in the spring of 1944.

Add to infamous last words the futile phrase, "I meant to . . ".

"Those three little words probably reflect the reason for more death, destruction and suffering on Canada's streets and highways than any other words", claimed T. H. Whellams, of Ottawa, a member of the Canadian Highway Safety Council. Referring to CHSC's car-check campaign being conducted through April and May, Mr. Whellams cautioned, "If a motorist has to say 'I meant to', it's too late, even when he adds such words as:

"Signal my turn;
"Clean my windshield;
"Check my tires;
"Have my brakes adjusted;
"Replace that leaking muffler and tailpipe;
"Get that headlight fixed."

It is of major importance to have vehicles thoroughly checked after a hard winter of driving under rough, car-shaking conditions.

PLENTY TO BURN

Vancouver CP — Trade and Commerce Minister Ralph Loffmark says northern British Columbia has enough proved oil deposits to run all the cars in North America for the next century.

ROYAL CANADIAN LEGION BRANCH 70 NEWS

"She shall have music wherever she goes." . . . "She", in this case, being our own Argenteuil Hospital: As recently reported in The Watchman, Br. 70, Royal Canadian Legion, has been pleased to arrange for piped-in music throughout the hospital and sincerely hopes that this will be a source of some pleasure to both patients and staff. The inauguration of this service was suitably marked in a brief ceremony attended by Legion and hospital representatives.

The merry month of May having arrived one's thoughts tend towards golf, gardens and fishing, but, in the requiem for the winter sport of curling, it might be noted that the Branch 70 team won for themselves the honor of representing Quebec Command in the Royal Canadian Legion Dominion Curling Championships. It would be pleasant to report that they went on to become Dominion champions — unfortunately this was not the case. However, it was still a very creditable effort to get as far as they did. Better luck next time!

On the local scene Lachute Branch 70 went down to defeat at the hands of Brownsburg Branch 71 in a friendly curling match — however, it was close. Equally close, and again in Brownsburg's favor, was the result of the recent cribbage tournament.—Congratulations Brownsburg!

Fortunately, the shuffleboard told a different story and Branch 70 was able to redeem itself by trouncing Brownsburg.

The Lachute Fair is approaching closer daily, and the enthusiastic response by our citizens to this year's drawing has been most gratifying. A trip to Europe to the value of $1,000 or, alternatively, $1,000 in cash, appears to be a very popular prize. Tickets are available from any Legion member.

Arrangements for the Saturday night grandstand entertainment at the Fair have now been completed. The Black Watch band will be on hand, together with several pipers and highland dancers, as well as a troupe of high-stepping majorettes. Make sure of being there — this is a show worth seeing.

For the livestock enthusiast, Branch 70 will, for the second year, present the Cattle Breeders' Trophy.

Finally, last year's V-E Day anniversary supper dance proved to be such a success that it has been decided to repeat it this year. It is being held at the Legion Hall on Saturday, May 7, and there are still a few tickets available. The number that can be accommodated for the supper is limited by the size of the hall. However, if you are not fortunate enough to obtain supper tickets, do come along afterwards and dance to Gordon Anderson and his orchestra.

Lafleur, himself father of the late Pierre-Auguste Lafleur, conservative member of parliament for several years and grandfather of the late Dr. Jules Lafleur, ex-mayor of Lachute. His father sold his business around 1923 to Jean Lavigne, father of Dr. Roger Lavigne, also of Lachute.

There are quite a few religious personalities in the family, some of whom have been or are presently associated with this County.

Mr. Lajeunesse completed his classical education in Ste. Therese, where he obtained his B.A. with distinction. He graduated from the University of Montreal in 1942 with a license in law, also with distinction.

As a member of the legal firm Lafontaine, Lajeunesse & Duranleau, he practices in Montreal, specializing in civil and commercial matters. He has acted for the City of Ste. Therese on various occasions at the Private Bills Committee of the Quebec Parliament.

In 1950 he acquired Hon. Judge Herman Barrette's property in 16 Island Lake, and later the one of former mayor of 16 Island Lake, René Lapierre, where he resides the year round with his family.

He was appointed municipal judge of the City of Ste. Therese in 1957, and resigned in 1962 in order to take an active part in the successful campaign of the Hon. W. M. Cottingham.

Favorably known in the northern part of the County, Mr. Lajeunesse has the reputation of helping in every possible way whenever his services are required.

He is also president of Argenteuil Development Inc., a company interested in various construction projects in 16 Island, Weir, Gray Valley and Rockway Valley, Huberdeau.

Pleasing Presentation At a Montreal Church

The Very Rev. C. Ritchie Bell was the guest speaker at the First Presbyterian Church in Montreal last Sunday, and also officiated at a baptism, when the daughter of the minister, Dr. R. Sheldon MacKenzie, received the names Clare Isobel. Dr. MacKenzie was one of Dr. Bell's first students at the Presbyterian College. Dr. Bell was made an elder of this church, and now that he is resigning his post to accept the call in Lachute, he will no longer be an elder at First Church. The Kirk Session and the Board of Management therefore took this opportunity to present to Dr. and Mrs. Bell an RCA hi-fi set. The presentation was made by Colin J. Campbell, clerk of the Session, who paid high tribute to Dr. Bell's service and to his work as interim moderator during the late Very Rev. Malcolm Campbell's illness and death.

An informal coffee party was held in the church hall, and later Mr. and Mrs. Ian M. Campbell entertained at their home in the Town of Mount Royal, at a buffet dinner.

Anglicans hear layman's report on recent Synod sessions in Montreal

Following are extracts of public interest from a report on the recent Diocesan Synod in Montreal, presented at the Anglican churches of Lachute and Brownsburg last Sunday by Mr. G. Arundel-Evans, who was lay delegate attending these sessions:

The general synod in Vancouver adopted in principle the idea of union with the United Church. Ecumenical activity is to be encouraged. . . Mention was made of the Christian Pavilion for Expo '67, which has been well and truly launched — participating churches being the Roman Catholic Church, the United Church, the Anglican Church, the Presbyterian Church, the Eastern Association of Baptist Churches, the Greek Orthodox Church, and the Lutheran Church. The common declaration of the representatives of the churches reads as follows: "Joined together through their Baptism. . ." — The theme of the exhibition is "Man and His World", but we see Jesus Christ as Head of the world for both Christians and non - Christians. Man divides his world, but Christ unites it. This is the message which will be proclaimed at the Pavilion. . . Incidentally the businessman's Exhibition in the Science Building will show by means of models and films the relationship between Science and Religion.

A liturgical commission is studying the Prayer Book and suggestions for controlled experiment will be considered.

The Archbishop of Canterbury visits Canada in September. He was last here in 1963 when he launched the Anglican World Mission. The Bishop plans six weeks of visits after the synod to a number of deaneries, and is looking forward to meeting many of his clergy and people.

Other points of interest which came before synod were as follows: The ministry to the sick in hospitals imposes an ever increasing work load and there is an urgent need for two more full-time hospital chaplains. Special training for this work is really a necessity. A man is shortly to go to Boston for a course in this field of activety.

The diocesan committee on Anglican World Mission has a specific project for the building of church halls in British Guiana. Some 20 Anglican schools were forcibly taken over by the government, and there remain no meeting places in the parishes of that country, essential for young people's gatherings and activities.

A further example of co-operation between our churches is to be found in the halfway house project known as the St. Lawrence House. This provides shelter and help to men leaving prison. To stand facing the world without a single friend must be an experience in loneliness which most of us would find very destressing. The help provided by St. Lawrence House, which is a division of Montreal Transition Houses Inc., will provide a new starting point for many of those in desperate need.

B.T.I. team at Grenville

Grenville Baptist Church will play host to the Rev. A. G. McDowell, B.A., B.D., Th.M., and four young people from the Baptist Training Institute, Brantford, Ont. Under Principal McDowell, the B.T.I. has helped many high school graduates discover Christian vocations and given training for lay leadership in the churches.

The team will be at Grenville Church on Monday, May 9, at 8 p.m.

Montreal celebration of Golden Wedding

Montreal — Mr. and Mrs. Richard Welsh, of Lakefield, celebrated their golden wedding on Sunday. Both were born in England, and they were married in the Eastern Townships in 1916.

A reception was held in their honor at the home of their daughter, Mrs. William Darlington, for friends and relations. Guests came from as far as New Jersey, Connecticut and Ontario.

Home and School card party was well attended

The Lachute Home and School Association held a successful "military whist" last Thursday, April 28, in the High School auditorium. Mr. Thos. Toldon very capably directed the card playing routine. This event netted a gratifying sum of money for the scholarship fund. The prize winners were as follows:

1st — Mrs. Harvey Kerr (Captain), Mrs. Donald Parker, Mrs. Ruth Graham, Mrs. Ruby MacKimmie.

3rd — Mrs. D. Rodger (Captain), Mr. R. Rodger, Mr. and Mrs. G. Fraser.

Seventeen door prizes were won by lucky ticket-holders, and the raffle drawing for an Ayers blanket was won by Mrs. D. Schwartz, of Lachute.

Coffee and fruit-breads were served in the cafeteria after the whist.

The Home and School Association wish to thank all the generous people who donated prizes, and all those who worked to make this such a successful event.

APPRECIATION

I wish to thank all friends and neighbors who came to visit me, and who sent flowers and gifts, also thanks to the Grenville Baptist Mission Circle, for having remembered me with their get-well wishes. Special thanks to Dr. Hunter and the nurses of the Smith Clinic, who made my stay in hospital comfortable. Also to the Rev. John Cairns, the Rev. Jos. H. Lynn and Mr. Dodd, who visited me.

— Mrs. Thos. Hoare,
Calumet, R.R. 1.

APPRECIATION

I wish to thank my friends, relatives and neighbors for cards, flowers and gifts sent to me during my recent stay in the Argenteuil Hospital, Lachute.

Mrs. M. Gendron presided over the last general meeting of the Catholic Women's League on Monday evening, at l'Ecole Supérieure.

Details were outlined for the annual convention, to be held May 7 at the Golf Club.

Many items of interest were discussed, including a public speaking course in September, which many of the members agreed to attend.

Refreshments were served under the convenership of Mrs. George Lowe. . . The meetings will resume in the fall.

The Bible Today

Thirty-five years ago no one in the mountain area around Dalat had any knowledge of Christ. Today there are thousands of Christians in that part of Viet Nam.

The language is Kaho, and it is less than ten years since the first portion of Scripture was printed. Now the New Testament is almost finished.

Many of the Christian young people have memorized large parts of the Gospel or the Epistle to the Romans. A choral group of 60 to 70 takes the Bible story in song and recitation around the entire area, bringing the message in this way to those who as yet cannot read.

An elderly Vietnamese regretted that he had not become a Christian earlier in life. He has since won scores of others to Christ, but often thinks how much more he could have done. His story began at four o'clock one afternoon when out on the road somewhere he heard a drum. Investigating, he found a church at worship. He found Christ there as a vigorous sermon and the effect of worship combined to make the message real. He is now a retired school teacher, using his time in Scripture distribution and Christian witness.

The war goes on, but colporteurs of the Bible Society still travel the roads, both in the fighting zone and behind the lines.

Gideons pass a notable milestone, 5-millionth Scripture in Canada

An historic milestone was commemorated recently as the five millionth Scripture was placed in circulation by the Gideons International in Canada. A beautiful gold-covered Bible was presented to the management of the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, at a special function held on April 23.

Travellers, hospital patients, prison inmates and many others are aware of the activities of The Gideons, but few know how this organization started its worldwide operations.

A bedtime conversation between two Christian salesmen, who were sharing a room in a crowded hotel, led to the founding of the movement in 1899. Today there are 22,700 members in 73 countries; 2,150 of these members are Canadians, organized into 169 local branches, called Camps. Members work quietly and unobtrusively in their communities, seeking to give a spiritual and moral uplift to others. Gideons, themselves, voluntarily provide about 30% of the Canadian budget of $400,000. The balance comes from interested Christian friends, and through the operation of a Memorial Bible Plan. Qualifications for membership call for a personal faith in Christ as Saviour and Lord, and a belief in the Bible as the inspired Word of God.

The first Bibles were placed in a Canadian hotel by the Gideons in 1911. Now, internationally, four million Scriptures are distributed yearly.

A major program in Canada involves the annual presentation of more than 200,000 New Testaments with Psalms and Proverbs to Grade 5 public school children. And thousands of Bibles have been placed in the dormitory rooms of college and university students. A Ladies' Auxiliary presents attractive white-bound Testaments to student nurses.

As a consequence of their Scripture placement activity, the Gideons receive a steady flow of letters from persons who have experienced spiritual help. The writers are old folk and youngsters, drunks and drys, saints and sinners, but all with the same basic message — "Thank You". Gideons look upon themselves as an arm of the Christian Church, helping to carry out Christ's great commission to take the Gospel to every creature.

Morin Heights

Readers in the community will be pleased to know that Mr. Edgar Elder, presently in the Hotel Dieu at St. Jerome, is making excellent progress towards recovery.

The sincere sympathy of many friends and acquaintances is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Eric McCullough in the recent death of Mrs. McCullough's mother, Mrs. John Campbell. Mrs. Campbell had reached the age of 91 years, and was residing at the home of her daughter, Mrs. McCullough.

Legion Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Royal Canadian Legion was held Friday evening at the Legion Hall. The meeting was chaired by the president, Ray Leclerc. The full slate of executive officers was in attendance, together with an increased number of members.

Among the many items receiving consideration was a report by Comrade James Quinn of the proceedings of the annual convention of all Legion branches in Canada, held in Montreal during the past week. New flags have been arranged for, to replace those now used in parades and for the branch flagpole. New crests will shortly be available for all members, to replace those now shown on berets.

Who Discovered Lake of the Woods?

Jacques de Noyon, voyageur. Born in Trois Rivières, P.Q., in 1668, de Noyon was only 20 when he made his great voyage of discovery to the Lake of the Woods, via Rainy Lake and Rainy River, which also claimed him as discoverer. In 1700 de Noyon became discontented with the French government's restrictions on the fur trade and offered his services to the Earl of Bellomont, Governor of New York. Four years later he married Abigail Stebbins in Deerfield, Mass. Less than one month later, a terrible massacre took place there under the leadership of J. B. Hertel de Rouville. De Noyon and his bride returned to Canada, accompanied by her family who came as captives. De Noyon died at his family's home in Boucherville, P.Q., 77 years old and the father of 13 children.

Has Canada's Population Increased Steadily?

No. It has grown more in fits and starts from a broad historical view. Our recorded population history began in 1605 when 79 French settlers, under Champlain, wintered at Ile Ste. Croix. By spring only 44 remained alive. In 1608 a smaller group wintered at Quebec. English settlement began in 1613 with 62 people at St. John's, Nfld. In 1666 the first intendant of New France, Jean Talon, carried out the first census of modern times. His count was 3215 persons. By the end of the 17th century, however, New France had a population of 15,000. The 70,000 French Canadians of 1763 were descended from no more than 10,000 original French settlers and the 5 million French Canadians of today stem mostly from this tiny group of ancestors. Following the American Revolution, British immigration into Canada grew rapidly. The 10-year-census system began in 1851 with a count of 2,436,000. Successive census figures have shown a growth rate varying from 10 to 35 per cent every decade. This is one of the most persistent records of growth to be found in any country.

Lawn-Boy with Grasscatcher picks up grass, leaves, and weeds as you cut!

If you're a Lawn-Boy owner stand up and take a bow. You're one of the smart ones. Then sit down and relax. Isn't that easier than raking or pushing a heavy old-fashioned mower? Lawn-Boy's grasscatcher does the raking for you. It picks up grass while you cut. It picks up leaves in the fall and tidies your lawn in spring. It collects weeds before they spread over your lawn. To empty, you just snap off the bag and unzip.

Lawn-Boy starts easier, too. You use just two fingers and 94% less effort than old-fashioned heave-and-haul type mowers. And Lawn-Boy is warranted for two years—that's longer than some mowers last.

See your dealer for the full line of Lawn-Boys: with grasscatcher, without grasscatcher, push-type, and self-propelled. In all, there are 18 reasons you should own a Lawn-Boy. Your dealer is itching to show you every one.

Carefree bachelor or marital reject?

A study by psychiatrist Genevieve Knupfer and associates of the Mental Research Institute here shows that the single man is more likely to be dissatisfied and out-of-step with the world around him than his married brother. The bachelor is nearly three times as likely to report that he is unhappy as the single girl and four times as likely to dislike his job.

More than half the single men, according to the study, thought their parents' marriage had not been "too happy". Bachelors, more than other adults, were unsure of whether their parents had loved them, and had resented their parents' authority over them.

Single women, on the other hand, enjoyed the happiest childhood — happier than persons who married and than men who remained single.

The researchers conclude that "more single men are maladjusted than single women," largely because of cultural factors. The study notes that since most women are eager to get married, those men who escape are more likely to be rejects. The team notes, "because of the greater freedom of choice men have in the marriage market it seems likely that those who are either unable or unwilling to get married were more psychologically impaired to begin with."

As for the single women, Dr. Knupfer speculates that because many men want to feel superior to their wives, the women with strong independent personalities and other gifted traits may be bypassed.

Centennial Report

Report No. 3

A television series about the drama of life in New York City used to end this way: "There are eight million stories in the Naked City. This has been one of them."

Around Centennial Commission headquarters at Ottawa we are beginning to look at Canada's 1967 celebrations in the same way. There are many thousands of national, provincial and local projects under way across Canada to mark our 100th birthday and they all make stories. The big national projects alone are numbered in dozens—the Confederation Train and Caravans, a 4,000-mile canoe race, the Canada Festival, the Youth Travel program, programs for the performing arts, visual arts, folk arts, athletics, tree planting, new buildings for arts centres, museums and so on.

I am going to tell you in this column of one of the national projects about which I am quite excited. It is the Armed Forces Tattoo, the big big cross-Canada show which will be presented by the Department of National Defence.

At the time of writing I am particularly excited about this event because I have fresh in my mind an advance look at the program. At Centennial Commission headquarters recently Brig. C. Arnold Peck and Captain Ian Fraser of the Department of National Defence centennial planning staff described the two-hour show — of which there will be 147 performances in 40 cities across the country — and provided storyboard illustrations and taped excerpts of the stirring music especially composed for the Centennial.

I can predict that Canadians will be given a thrilling surprise when they see the Armed Forces Tattoo, which will be one of the highlights of the 1967 celebrations. The advance presentation which we saw and heard at Ottawa showed that the Forces' project is being conducted in a highly professional manner.

There will be 80 colorful selections in 12 major scenes of the Tattoo with static bands, marching bands, pipes and drums, scenes from history as far back as 1665, a naval gun-hauling race over obstacles, a drummer boy's idea of what war was like in 1812, 150 sailors dancing a hornpipe, action scenes on the battlefield—even an actual World War II Spitfire in an enactment of a Battle of Britain "scramble".

The Armed Forces Centennial team has done research deep into history, through the years to the period when the early French and British regiments were stationed in Canada, and they have produced not only the music of the regiments but also the servicemen's songs of the canteens and messes which also have been sung by the citizenry of yesterday and today.

Research also has been done for the Tattoo in Europe by Captain Fraser for consideration of the best military tattoo productions and techniques, at Edinburgh and on the continent. Captain Fraser, it has been pointed out, produced the Armed Forces show at the Seattle World's Fair which proved to be one of the highlights of that exhibition.

After seeing the very professional advance work done by the Defence Department's Centennial staff I do not hesitate to recommend that you watch for the date of the performance, whether it be an indoor one or an outdoor one, nearest to your area and be sure to attend.

WEED WRECKS FARMS

High River, Alta. (CP) — The Foothills municipal district has declared war on the yellow toadflax weed, which infests at least 50,000 acres of arable land and an unknown extent of rough pasture. A specialist said chemicals can control toadflax on cultivated land, but costs too much for rough land use.

SUSANNA'S FAMILY FARE tips n' topics

Knitting-Needle Snacks

DEAR SUSANNA: Anyone in the mood for instant cold snack shish-ka-bobs? Serve them on a Saturday night in the recreation room after the hockey game and you'll be queen for a day.

Use sterilized knitting needles as skewers and place on each one a dainty sandwich, a pickle, another sandwich, a slice of cooked wiener, a cube of cheese, and end up with an olive.

Enlarge on it, change it, mix it up — depending on what you have available in the house.

Prepare them before you leave for the evening, and envelope them neatly in clear plastic paper tied at the bottom with a ribbon so that they will be fresh and cold when you return.

Simple, attractive, tasty, filling and no dishes to wash. What else is there?

E.M.

There IS something else. PLEASE deposit the empty knitting needles in the container provided, folks. Otherwise, it could be the living end!

SUSANNA

DEAR SUSANNA: Don't throw away those obsolete geography, history and social studies text books that were used by your eldest child. These outdated volumes can give invaluable assistance to younger children in their project work, because of the pictures.

The students can gain many extra marks if their note books are well illustrated. Although I always get a shivery feeling at the thought of desecrating a text book, if the school has declared them outdated, they are really not much good for anything else.

Sometimes at rummage sales, one can pick up a supply of old copies of the National Geographic Magazine for a few cents, and these, of course, are also a tremendous help in this respect.

MRS. N. BROWN

DEAR SUSANNA: Just met the handsome young man across the hall in my apartment building, and he tells me that I'll be able to make the stainless steel sinks in my kitchen gleam if I scour them in a circular motion instead of back and forth.

Do you suppose he really knows what he is talking about, or do you think he might be just leading up to asking me for a date?

MISSY

Are you asking or wishing? When you find out the answer, will you let US know?

SUSANNA

DEAR SUSANNA: When the young girl at your house has outgrown her pretty summer skirts, don't be sad. They make lovely half aprons for grown ups.

The wraparound ones often only need a pair of ties to complete them, but it's the Dirndl style skirts that turn out to be the truly attractive aprons, as they are usually gayly patterned with large patch pocket or two.

They are also easy to alter. Remove the zipper, open that particular seam all the way down, and hem the two ends to the required depth.

If you wish, remove enough material before hemming to make the pair of ties.

WINNIE

DEAR SUSANNA: Add a touch of glamor to last year's plain Christmas tree balls by pasting on simulated snow flakes.

Mrs. L. Rogers

DEAR SUSANNA: Some recipes call for sour milk, and in case there's none on hand, simply add 2 tablespoons of lemon juice to 1 cup of milk and it sours quickly.

Do enjoy your column so much.

Publication of a French medico-hospital glossary

Montreal — A new glossary of French-language medico-hospital terms was launched recently at the St. Denis Club in the presence of some 50 prominent representatives from university, medical, hospital and pharmaceutical circles. The glossary represented more than two years work by the Study Committee on Medical Terms, a non-profit group dedicated to restoration of French language in Quebec medical and hospital fields.

Dr. Georges Desrosiers, committee chairman, stated that the glossary, the Committee's first publication, will serve to improve the French spoken and written work among all classes of the public. "To those people who are aware of the confusion which marks our technical vocabulary primarily because of Anglo-Saxon training, we offer a means of re-establishing ties with the mother tongue," he added.

Working on compilation of the glossary were some 20 doctors, hospital administrators, nurses, dietitians, archivists, librarians and medical translators, linguists, in conjunction with the consultative commission of l'Office de la Langue Française, Department of Cultural Affairs.

Ayerst Laboratories are defraying the costs of printing and distribution to about 7,000 French-speaking doctors, to universities, hospitals and all associations that may request copies.

E. G. Gregory, president of Ayerst Laboratories, said his firm had given thought for a long time to the question of French medico-pharmaceutical terms, and had offered to publish a glossary which will prove a time-saver and also satisfy the requirements of the doctor-reader. "New discoveries call for new words, and the medical science vocabulary must meet a steadily accelerating rhythm of needs," Mr. Gregory pointed out.

MOHAIR

Contrary to popular belief, mohair is a natural fiber, coming from the turkish angora goat. Wire-like, mohair is practically wrinkle-resistant, while remaining soft and silklike.

If mohair is blended with a worsted-type natural wool, the quality is superior. But if mohair is blended with synthetic fibers having a lower strenght characteristic, the fabric could split more easily either because of too much heat or humidity or faultly sewing.

So, when you buy, do always check the labels and ask to know the contents of the mohair fabric. With a little more carefullness, you will make a better buy.

If you intend to wash mohair sweaters yourself, do not hang them, otherwise they would lose their shape, permanently. Or better still, seek the advice of your cleaner.

QUESTION : "I have a mohair dress and the fabric has split at the sleeves. — Why ?"

ANSWER : "I have mentioned before the wire-like nature of mohair and this could work to your disadvantage. Because, as a wire would break if bent and rebent too many times, so does mohair, specially if it is blended with synthetic fibers having a lower strenght characteristic. — Or it may be because of faultly sewing".

In two weeks, the topic will be "STRETCHIES".

Sunday voting

ANNOUNCEMENT of the next Quebec election on June 5, a Sunday, has aroused protest in many quarters. Christian people brought up in the reverence of the Sabbath may be considered "old fashioned", but they regard this change as demoralizing to public standards — an innovation coming from the Government, the one authority which should be the last to underrate, and the first to uphold, our established Christian principles. It augurs ill for the progress of this province that, approaching Canada's 100th birthday, we should be adopting changes which would have been abhorrent to the founding Fathers of Confederation.

Sunday voting is distasteful to most Protestant adherents. It disregards the ideal of a religious minority to whom, generally speaking, Sunday is the Lord's Day all day. For Protestants generally, this is a day divorced, to the fullest possible extent, from mundane considerations and commercialism. And they would certainly like it to be kept free from the unwholeseome electoral practices which bespoil our idea of democracy today!

This is the first Sunday election, as far as we know, in federal or provincial affairs. Sunday voting was adopted in 1962 in a civic contest in Montreal. It has been decreed for future contests in Lachute. True, there were material considerations — such as the convenience it affords to the working class; also that industries and employers are freed from the obligation to pay workers during their absence at the polls. But beyond these factors there appears no merit or justification for the change. And it must inevitably antagonize the attitude of many eligible voters.

Some of us are ready to admit that the severity of the Sabbath in our parents' day was a trifle puritanical, but despite the increasing irreverence of our times, we are loath to relinquish altogether the tenets which our seniors held sacred.

Let Mr. Lesage, and whosoever is concerned, take heed that many people disapprove of Sunday elections (we are echoing numerous protests) and let them govern their future elections accordingly.

'The time has demonstrably arrived'

A CANADIAN PRESS dispatch from Montreal suggested that more than one per cent of the Quebec labor force was on strike in four disputes recently. Construction workers tied up most of the building in central Montreal. . . Five plants of Dominion Textile Company in Magog, Sherbrooke, Montmorency and Drummondville, have been affected by strikes. The economy of Quebec province over long years has been bolstered in some ways by the textile industry, which is scattered over a wide area and provides work for skilled, unskilled and semi-skilled people. . . Two thousand teachers have been on strike against the Quebec government, and to outside observers it is difficult to decide whether the teachers are reasonable or whether the government is reasonable.

The Calgary Herald recently remarked that "the time demonstrably has arrived when society as a whole needs protection against crippling strikes." It adds: "Society has to decide who is to run the country, organized government or organized labor. It has to decide if the rule of law is to be applied firmly against all groups within the nation, or if favored groups can ignore injunctions with impunity." Finally, the Herald says, "Are our politicians big and strong enough to handle this responsibility?"

On equitable basis?

SPEAKING in Toronto, Japanese banker Masakumi Kozowa says that his country wants to increase its trade with Canada, "but on a more equitable basis." His complaint is that Japan always suffers a deficit in trade with Canada. His purpose, of course, is to support the campaign of Japanese manufacturers for unrestricted shipments to this market. It is an unsound case.

Mr. Kozawa's point about the Canada-Japan trade balance is of no significance. Canada always suffers a colossal deficit in trade with the United States. Of course we would prefer a closer balance in that account, but the important concern is to strike a balance in total trade with all countries.

When Canada granted Japan most-favored-nation tariff status a dozen years ago, the Japanese agreed that they would not permit their low-wage factories to provide undue competition for Canadian-made goods. They have not fully lived up to this undertaking. In the clothing and textile industries, for instance, they have flooded markets for particular items and put Canadian plants out of business. Right at the moment, they are refusing to impose voluntary quotas on man-made textiles; they have taken over nearly a third of this import market, compared to only three per cent a half-dozen years ago. Potentially, there are many thousands of new jobs for Canadians making man-made textiles, but the jobs will not materialize unless the Japanese producers restrict their shipments.

To talk of trading "on a more equitable basis" is meaningless when Japanese producers ignore the spirit of their undertaking of a dozen years ago.

Value of integrity

"NOTHING more completely baffles one who is full of trick and duplicity, than straightforward and simple integrity in another." — Colton.

Recent events in the business and political life of our country should give cause for stopping to consider the meaning and value of integrity. The Oxford Dictionary defines it as "wholeness, uprightness and honesty". A rededication to those things for which it stands is necessary, if we are not to slip back into the chaos of the jungle.

All those in places of authority have a special charge to demonstrate integrity's worth. It is not sufficient for political leaders to gain office on a mound of promises. What matters is their conduct of the country's business as a trust — if necessary, doing the unpopular thing — and always foregoing self-interest. Likewise, business leaders must exercise integrity toward all who trust them with their affairs, whether investors, customers or employees.

The shallow person will surely greet the suggestion with cynicism, but it is not too difficult for the thinking person to see its practical values. Integrity is both efficient and economical and, although not always easy to practice, its reward is serenity of mind.

— This thought is conveyed in a current letter to executives and friends of Canada Trust.

Loans to students

GROWING experience with the Canada student loans plan among the officials who administer it, the students who benefit by it, and the universities whose fees it helps to pay — may lead soon to a shift in policy. Gerald Fitzpatrick, writing in The Financial Post, says the outcome eventually could be more aid from provincial governments in the form of outright grants. The immediate likelihood, however, could be a tightening up of Canadian student loan regulations following current talks in a federal-provincial committee. Provincial sources think one probable move will be abolition of the section on the application form allowing parents to state that their children are financially independent. Some are thought to have done this, so that their children have obtained bigger loans, then claimed a dependent child allowance on their tax returns. It's also likely, The Post adds, the student will no longer be allowed to give his own estimate of his expenditure at university.

It is with pleasure we announce that the excursion from Montreal will take place on the 24th, the Queen's Birth Day. The C.P.R. have promised to supply a train of nine coaches which will make two trips to Lachute. . . The excursion is understood to be for the benefit of the 11th Batt. A.R., for new helmits (sic).

It is expected that the Canadian Pacific's telegraph service will shortly be completed and opened to the public.

At County Council, tenders were opened for land site to build the new Court House, Registry Office, etc. Among six tenders was a free offer from Mr. Thomas Barron of three town lots on Grace Street, any place between Lot 1010 and the street laid down on cadastral plan and known as Barron Avenue. . . Moved by Mayor Brown, seconded by Mayor Dunbar, that Mr. Barron's offer be accepted. Yeas, 3. The Warden gave a casting vote in favor. . . There were two other free offers, from Mr. Hugh Fraser, Sr., and from Mr. C. S. Burroughs.

MOONLIGHTING OUT

Saskatoon city officials planned to take action to prevent moonlighting by city employees, according to a report in The Financial Post. The decision was the result of complaints filed with the city by members of various construction trade unions. Construction unions claim city employees are undercutting contractors on some jobs and forcing some men out of work.

THIS WEEK AND NEXT
by Ray Argyle

The Changing Classroom

The tempo of our schools picked up this week as students began to bone up for exam-time, that often torturing finale to the school year which builds in pressure through May and June.

Teen-agers of every generation have been an enigma to their parents, and the present crop of "young adults" is no exception. There is growing evidence, however, that young Canadians heading into the job markets during the next five years will be the best educated, most alert and most articulate ever turned out by the Canadian school system.

Does this mean that our education system has reached some kind of Utopia, or that everything done in our schools today is done for the best reasons, with the best results?

Of course not. But it does mean that broadly speaking, Canadian communities are at last coming to grips with the problem of preparing young people for the kind of world they are going to have to face.

This must be due partly to a better balanced judgment of their elders as to what kind of world young people are going to face.

On the positive side, there is probably less political naivete today than ever before. There is more questioning of long-accepted standards, less blind acceptance of political and social norms.

The young Canadians who have become part of the "global community" through television and other media, do seem to care about what is happening on the face of this earth. They wonder about Vietnam, the bomb, the Negro revolution, the Quebec question, and the treatment of our Indians.

One outlet for their idealism — hopefully an idealism without illusions — may be in the Company of Young Canadians who will soon be going into depressed areas, Indian reservations, and backwood communities to help other Canadians to a better life.

North America's education system may now be said to have reached the second stage of implementing the principle of universal education.

In the pre-World War II years, educators set out to give every citizen a standard education, hopefully concluding in a university liberal arts course. This was the heyday of "progressive education," when startling new. . .and often disastrous methods. . .were tried in such fields as child permissiveness, the teaching of reading by word recognition (which never worked) and so on.

The sudden arrival of the second industrial revolution in the form of automation brought a second look at education after World War II.

It became increasingly apparent that education had to be modeled for the student, rather than the reverse. Differences of intelligence and background began to be recognized. What is good for one student is harmful for another, and the recognition of this brought an end to the idea that everyone's goals should be the same.

The fact that an alarming percentage of students were unable to cope with the academic courses of our schools led to spin-off courses in technical and commercial fields. This has already brought a reduction in drop-outs and promises to be more successful in training young people for fields in which they will be better able to develop their potential.

But a third stage of education evolution is needed to head off equally severe problems arising from excessive emphasis on school success.

Sociologists have discovered that too many young North Americans are trapped by their parents in a kind of academic ulcer derby.

One, Dr. Arthur Barron of the University of Chicago, reported recently that a study showed many youngsters "are paying a terrible price because of the enormous pressure on them for good grades and success in later life.

"They think happiness is a big house, two cars and a lot of money," Dr. Barron concluded. "One wonders if they have not been moulded too much in our image at this tender age."

Perhaps it will take another generation for North Americans to learn to live with affluence in what is still an unaffluent world.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

It's Been A Tough Week

We've been a pretty lucky crew around our place this year. All winter, friends, neighbors and relatives have been coming down with everything from the ordinary stuff — pregnancy and insanity — to exotic items like oriental hepatitis and whooping mumps. We haven't had so much as a sniffle.

It was too good to last, and we got the whole bundle this week. Nothing serious, physically, but mentally and emotionally, a shattering period.

First it was the dentist. Kim's was her regular six-month check-up. It's a breeze. She waltzes in blithely, has her gums frozen, and the dentist pumps a little concrete into a pin-hole you couldn't see with a telescope.

It's a little different for father. I also go regularly to the dentist. Every three or four years. When I have a broken tooth or two, and have wild, stabbing pains from several of the other old stumps, and have postponed my appointment about six times, I go down for my regular check-up.

Sweating, trembling, and condemning all dentists and their inane questions to the murkiest depths, I sit there trying to tear the arms off the chair. Too gutless about needles to have the freezing, I go through the agonies of Prometheus as the poor man prods about among the snaggles of porcelain, looking for a piece of genuine, human tooth he can drill.

And then there's always that excruciating moment when he steps back, with some kind of chisel cocked in his hand, shakes his head more in pity than in sympathy, and says, "Hmmm."

Visions of the blood, the pain, the ignominy swirl through my head.

Well, that's the way the week began. Worse was to come. I've been suffering from a bad shoulder for years. I know. Everybody has one. Or a bad back or a bad hip. One week, the doctor says it's an inflammation. On the next visit, he says it's an old injury aggravated by tension. Next trip, it's bursitis. Next, after X-rays, it's a calcium deposit. If I had half the calcium in my teeth that I have in my shoulder, I could be one of those grinning-ape models in the toothpaste ads.

Anyway, I finally decided to do something about it. Or my wife did. She didn't mind my groaning in my sleep. It was the cursing, every time I rolled onto that side, that upset her. She was worried about my soul.

I wasn't. But when it got to the point where I couldn't pour a bottle of beer any more, without weeping, I realized that man cannot exist on pain pills alone.

I've mentioned what a yellow streak I have about needles. The doc said, as he took out this elephant-syringe, loaded with cortisone, "You'll feel a slight pinprick as the needle enters." The cold sweat stopped flowing. Nothing to it.

Then he started to lean on the needle. Have you ever had a pinprick with a crow-bar?

The only comparable experience I've had was one time in a veterans' hsopital. I was wheeled into this room for "tests." Flat on my back. Two nurses held a hand each, one on each side of the the bed. Decent of them, I thought. Comforters. As I was smiling at them, in turn the doc rammed this huge hypodermic in my chest and shoved down. Then he started to suck (marrow out of my breastbone, as it turned out). In the next three seconds, those nurses wound up on opposite sides of the bed, without touching the floor. I was told later that I had been a volunteer for a research project.

Well, I won't bore you with a lot more sick detail. Suffice it to say that my wife and daughter went to the eye doctor. Kim, who wants glasses like she wants a hair lip, got them. My wife was sore as hell because she paid 10 dollars for the examination, and didn't get any glasses.

Just to cheer us up, we phoned Hugh on Sunday. We knew he was starting to write his final university exams on the Monday. Wanted to wish him luck. A croaking wreck who sounded more like Edgar Allen Poe's raven than our jolly boy, informed us that he'd been sick as a dog with the 'flu for three weeks.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

The first copies of the 1966 "Recommendations of the Quebec Seed Board" appeared during the past week. So you should be able to pick up your copy from the agronome's office, or you can write to us at the College.

I like the new issue; they have done an attractive job. The outside covers feature corn in full colour plates, and the centre pages are a coloured map of Quebec with the seven agricultural zones. Variety and mixtures are recommended for these zones, for the first time this year.

For instance, in Zone 1, (Southwest Quebec and up the Ottawa River), the oat varieties are listed in this order of preference: Dorval, Glen, Garry, Shefford, Roxton. In Zone 7, the Abitibi area, only Glen and Shefford are recommended. In barley, Champlain (for feed) and Parkland (malting) are listed for all of Quebec except Zone 7, where Nord, a very early barley developed at Kapuskasing especially for that area, replaces Champlain on the list.

In spring wheat, Selkirk is the only variety recommended for any area. It is beardless with short strong straw, early maturing, and resistant to stem rust, bunt, and smut.

Ten forage mixtures are listed this year, each for certain zones and specific uses. Most are very simple mixtures of one grass and one or two legumes. Only one has as many as four components. Seeding rates have been reduced.

Here, for example, are two or three mixtures which caught my eye. Quebec Mixture No. 11, timothy 6 lbs., alfalfa 8 lbs., recommended in all zones for hay or silage; stands two years or longer. This mixture should be the one most commonly used for the deep, fertile, well-drained, slightly acid soils (pH 6.1 to 6.6) where alfalfa grows well. If the stand is intended for only two years, use Alfa or DuPuits alfalfa. If longer, Narragansett and Vernal are hardier. For the northern zones, use Rhizoma. Climax timothy is in plentiful supply.

Personally, I like mixture No. 12, brome 10 lbs., alfalfa 8 lbs. I have seen some really heavy stands of Saratoga brome and DuPuits alfalfa. But not everyone has good luck establishing brome. If you mix the brome seed with the oats in the seeder box, plant just as shallow as you can, so some of the oats stay on top of the ground. Brome should not be seeded deeper than three-quarters of an inch. Brome stands up to drought better than timothy, but I notice that it is not recommended for the northern zones.

One pound of Ladino clover added to either of these two mixtures will improve them for aftermath pasture. These are listed as mixture No. 14 and mixture No. 15. And if you think one pound is not very much, remember that there are 800,000 Ladino seeds in that pound. Eighteen seeds for every square foot!

Timothy and Birdsfoot Trefoil is another mixture that I came to appreciate while I was working in Eastern Ontario. There, the soils are good but are rather heavy, imperfectly drained, and inclined to be acid. Some of the best grass silage I have ever seen was made from this mixture. In Quebec, it is listed as Mixture No. 20, timothy 6 lbs., trefoil 6 lbs.

If you substitute two pounds of Ladino clover for the trefoil, you have Quebec Mixture No. 18. It is recommended as an excellent pasture mixture under good management in all except the northern and eastern zones.

I notice that the old standby, timothy, red clover and Alsike is in the list as mixture No. 16, but it draws faint praise. The trouble is that red clover is really good for only the one year, and Alsike can't compare with the other legumes for yield. And when you have lost your legumes, it is going to cost you $5 to $10 a year for nitrogen fertilizer, which the legumes can supply, to keep the grass going.

Another thing about red clover. Dr. Steppler pointed this out at the Pasture Day at Kingsbury, in recently to harvest 55 acres of If you are planting a long-lived legume like alfalfa or trefoil or ladino, keep red clover out of the mix. Red clover is vigorous; it smothers everything else. Then in the second year, there is nothing.

Explaining the reasons for keeping forage mixtures simple, Dr. Steppler said they had been proven in many trials to constantly outyield complex mixtures. Fescues, blue grass and common white clover, while they filled up the bottom, actually reduced total yield. The trick, he said, was to choose the right mixture for your purpose and your soil, and not be too concerned with crop rotation.

I hear that Stan Staveley took advantage of the warm, dry spell to 15% was surprisingly low. grain corn at Ste. Agnes de Dundee, Chateauguay County. Although 40% was down, he still expected to salvage a ton of grain to the acre. The moisture at 14% the Eastern Townships, recently.

If you had ten expert judges all judging the same class of Holstein cows, would they all pick the same animal for first place? We have often wondered: the other day we had a chance to find out.

In fact, there were not ten, but fifty judges and not a spectator at the ringside to watch the fun. The occasion was the Annual Holstein Judging Conference, held this year at Macdonald College. Herman Lajoie, Secretary-fieldman of the Quebec Holstein-Friesian Association was organizer, and Doug Dunton, the noted Holstein judge, was the man in the hot seat. I didn't envy him his job.

The purpose behind the day is to have a pool of judges for the fairs and the Black-and-White Shows who do see an animal in much the same way, who give the same value to her good points, the same weight to her faults, and who are still ready to admit that the other fellow has a right to his opinion, too.

But did they all pick the same cow for first place? The answer is No, and they gave Head Judge Dunton a pretty rough time of it.

April activities reported by County W.I. branches

Arundel Women's Institute had as their April roll-call a useful household hint. This branch had a "blind auction" to raise funds for their 20th W.I. anniversary, to be held in May.

Brownsburg meeting was under convenership of the Sunshine and Cheer committee. Guest speaker was Dr. Suzanne MacKimmie, who spoke on "Heart Diseases". The branch made arrangements for a supper for next meeting, celebrating 40 years of W.I. work in Brownsburg. Members are working on a play to be staged May 10.

Dalesville-Louisa answered the roll call by responding to the question, "What vocation would you choose were you a present-day teenager". Discussions were held on the following topics: "Christmas Stocking Project", "Short Courses at Macdonald College" and a report from the Senior Citizens' Home.

Frontier members answered the roll-call by naming a famous grandmother. A poem was read about grandmothers, also the program for 1966. Christmas stockings are to be made and filled for the "Save the Children Fund".

Lachute branch meeting was in charge the Publicity convener. A News Quiz was held, and the prize, a ticket to Expo '67 for a day, went to Mrs. G. Davidson.

Pioneer. - This being Health and Welfare month, the branch had as their guest Miss Allan, R.N., of the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, who read a most interesting paper on "Retirement, Good or Bad for your Health?" Articles for Christmas stockings to be brought in. Some members are rehearsing for the Women's Institute drama competition. Mrs. George Rogers was presented with a F.W.I.C. pin for her untiring service to Pioneer Branch. It was agreed each member should buy a Canadian flag before Centennial year.

Upper Lachute - East End branch heard a report on the Board meeting, from Mrs. Stuart Hume. They had as their guest Dr. G. R. Rigby, who showed slides on "Wild Flowers in Canada".

Jerusalem - Bethany had as their roll-call, 'Something I learned in 1965'.

Russia has invaded the Canadian fashion scene. From now on, our notions about the lack of elegance of Russian women must be revised.

All those newsreel pictures of husky dames digging ditches and driving tractors have given us the wrong idea. Of course, we have read about the Soviet attempts to improve consumer goods. Also about their new interest in such frivolities as fashion shows for the masses, but we were totally unprepared for a new Canadian fashion copied from the Russians.

The shock also gave us a new admiration for the universal ingenuity of females because the fashion item in question was not created by any designer but by the Russian women themselves, obviously driven by a desperate desire for something more than functional clothing.

The fashion in question is a new beach pyjama set with the hep name of "jams". The commentator of a showing of summer sportswear being made in Canada, informed us brightly: "This is a style which originated in Russia and is now being copied by our sportswear designers."

Russian women, it seems, regardless of size, are dedicated to the bikini. Our well-travelled friends have confirmed that the display of flesh on Russian beaches is somewhat overwhelming. Canadian bikinis are said modest by comparison and are usually accompanied by attractive toppers or beach cover-up coats.

Well, Russian women have invented their own cover-ups, the jams. These are made from an old pair of sleeping pyjamas. The legs are cropped just below the knees and trimmed with a ruffle of the left-over fabric. The top is bra-style also decorated with a front ruffle, which enhances the bosom.

We must admit that the Canadian version of this style was a vast improvement over any cut-down old pyjamas that we could visualize. The one modelled in the show was made of a colorful printed cotton and looked most attractive and comfortable.

However, the spirit of free enterprise inherent in the original style must give Soviet fashion authorities food for thought. Despite their monumental efforts to improve the clothing produced in the state factories 20 per cent of all factory produced clothing in Russia was returned last year and even the state wholesale clothing combines refused to accept goods from 237 factories during the period.

Soviet authorities have publicly admitted that the reason for this situation is that many state enterprises do not take into consideration the requirements of the customers. Russian women may yet emerge as fashion-conscious females if they can just make their own wishes prevail.

On Mother's Day

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Whatever you do, all of yer, never forget for one second that yer mother was a McGrill!" admonished Mrs. Ruggles, as her final instruction to her children as to how to behave at a party to which they had all been invited.

Readers may chuckle at this little incident — but how many mothers have given their children guidance for their behaviour when out "in company"! In China when a youth gets into trouble, it is the parents, and not the adolescent who is judged — and to a certain extent that is true in our country too. When a young man or woman distinguish themselves in their work or in their service to the community, is it not fair that their parents should also share the approval of the public?

On Mother's Day, men and women in every walk of life, boys and girls in all kinds of homes, pay tribute to their mothers. Famous people have written in glowing words of their mother's influence. Benjamin West, the president of the Royal Academy of Arts in London, England, early in the last century once said "A kiss from my mother made me a painter." Abraham Lincoln, declared "All that I am, or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother."

A tribute to a mother is a very personal thing. It is colored by remembrance of childhood days. Although some people scoff at Mother's Day as a commercial scheme, surely it has its value! In a hurried age everyone seems to be in a rush. Many people are reticent about expressing their deeper emotions. It is well to have a time to pause and think of the debt which is owed to all mothers.

W. D. Howells once wrote "A man never sees all that his mother has been to him till it's too late to let her know that he sees it." What a pity if this is so! If our mother has passed on to the "Great Beyond", let us recall all that she did for us, on her day. We can observe this occasion by making a special effort to do something she would delight to see us do — attend Divine Worship or help some poor mother who is having a hard struggle to bring up her children.

If we are fortunate enough to have our mothers still with us, Mother's Day is an occasion when we can use our imagination to give a gift which will express our love. Flowers, candy, a book, a picture, something for her to wear or for her home — what a wide variety of presents there are from which to select one which will give Mother real pleasure!

When there are small children in the family, Dad must take responsibility for planning with them, presents for Mother's Day and some special treat. One of the things which might give her the biggest thrill of all would be to surprise her with breakfast in bed. Let her know that on this one day she won't have to prepare a meal or wash a dish! The family won't really suffer, and it will do them good to know from experience all the thought and work which goes into planning and cooking the family meals, and washing up afterwards three times a day, seven days in a week, fifty-two weeks in a year.

Make Mother's Day a real holiday for mother. "Deeds not words" — here is a practical tribute to mother's worth, a demonstration of how much she is appreciated, by everyone in the home. What if you burn the toast or scorch the vegetables? Mother is having a little "break" away from her usual tasks!

Clothing under rugged tests

Ottawa (CP) — An obstacle course for clothing has been built by the defence chemical, biogical and radiation laboratories at nearby Shirley Bay, Ont.

Unfortunately for them, soldiers have to be inside the clothing for the tests.

Twelve Canadian army volunteers crawl or wallow on their knees along the 400-yard course to determine how various types of combat clothing stand up.

The defence department calls the tests "accelerated wearing trials." Results are passed on to army authorities for use in designing future combat uniforms.

One concession is granted the clothing testers. They are allowed to wear padding over knees and shins to protect them from injury as they crawl over logs and stones embedded in concrete, gravel and sand beds, creep through cement culverts and climb tree trunks.

Some of the obstacles are topped by barbed wire to make sure the testers keep their heads down and really crawl. Each man carries a pole to simulate a rifle. It takes about 25 minutes to cover the course.

Other tests are less rugged. The volunteers try out socks for comfort and durability, sleeping bags for lightness and effectiveness, and various types of insoles and face masks for protection against freezing.

Some of the tests are conducted in the laboratories' cold room where temperatures and wind chill can be simulated. A medical officer is present during the more severe trials.

As good as ham is, it does sometimes seem as if it's going to last forever. You can use some of it in croquettes or in a casserole and even if you haven't a large ham to dispose of, you can make the dishes with picnic shoulder, cottage roll or luncheon meats.

The croquettes call for two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons chopped onion, ¼ cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, 1 cup milk, ½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese, 1½ cups finely chopped cooked ham, dry bread crumbs, 1 slightly beaten egg, 1 tablespoon water.

Melt butter, cook onion until tender but not brown. Blend in flour, salt, pepper and mustard. Gradually stir in milk and cook over medium heat until smoothly thickened.

Chill Mixture

Remove from heat and add cheese, stirring until it melts. Fold in ham. Chill mixture until it can be formed into six or eight balls. Roll these in bread crumbs.

Combine egg and water. Dip croquettes in mixture then roll them again in bread crumbs. Chill thoroughly.

Preheat deep fat to 375 degrees. Fry two or three croquettes at a time until golden brown — about two or three minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve plain or with mushroom sauce.

Ham Jambolaya

Ingredients: three slices diced side bacon, ½ cup chopped onions, ½ cup diced green pepper, three cups cooked rice, two cups coarsely diced cooked ham, one 10-ounce can stewed tomatoes, two tablespoons brown sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, pepper, one chicken bouillon cube, one cup hot water.

Cook bacon, onions and green pepper over moderate heat until bacon starts to crisp and vegetables are tender.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter a two-quart casserole. Combine in casserole cooked rice, ham, tomatoes, brown sugar, salt and pepper. Add bacon, onions and green pepper. Blend.

Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for about 30 minutes, stirring a couple of times as it bakes. Makes six to eight servings.

Both these dishes can be made early in the day or the day before you want to serve them.

First council meeting after amalgamation

Dr. Z. Saindon provisional mayor; details of joint administration

Members of the municipal councils of Lachute and Ayersville sat together for the first time since the amalgamation, on Monday evening. The session saw Dr. Zoël Saindon elected provisional mayor by his own vote cast to break a tie. Mayor Saindon will hold the position until a general election, at which time the council will be reduced to seven members; the election will be held on Sunday, July 10.

Participating in the inaugural sitting were 16 persons, including the two mayors, nine councillors from Lachute, and five from Ayersville. Ayersville Councillor Hubert Mayotte was absent. Also at the Council table was Mtre. Armand Poupart, of Montreal, judicial counsellor for matters concerning municipal amalgamations, and the secretary-treasurers of the two municipalities concerned, Messrs. Ronald Hébert and Rémi Raymond.

The election of Dr. Saindon as provisional mayor was conducted behind closed doors, following repeated requests for this by Jacques Poitras, former mayor of Ayersville, who was supported by a 12-to-3 vote of the provisional council.

Dr. Saindon was chosen chairman of the meeting when it opened with power to act in that capacity until the election of a provisional mayor had taken place, thus having the authority to cast a deciding vote in the event of a tie, in addition to his regular vote as a member of the provisional council. A resolution by Coun. Ludger Gibeault, seconded by Coun. Bruno Belanger, proposed the name of Dr. Saindon as provisional mayor, while an amendment by Councillor François Charlebois, seconded by Councillor Don Boa, proposed the name of Dr. Roger Dumais. The vote, when taken, found Councillors Linton Armstrong, Ludger Gibeault, Bruno Belanger, Jacques Poitras, Ernest Champagne, Cyril Leroux, Philippe Masson and Dr. Saindon in favor of the main motion, and Councillors Laurier Carrière, Dr. Dumais, Dr. Lyall Middleton, François Charlebois, Raymond Champagne, Edmund McFaul, Don Boa and Laurent Brossard against. The vote being tied, Dr. Saindon as chairman was called upon to cast a deciding vote — which he did, in his own favor.

It is interesting to note that the vote was evenly divided, five Lachute councillors and three Ayersville councillors voting in favor of Dr. Saindon and the same number voting in favor of Dr. Dumais.

Enactments Necessary

According to Mtre. Poupart, this meeting was one which necessitated the adoption of numerous resolutions for the administration of the new City of Lachute, some of which are as follows:

The engagement of Mr. Ronald Hébert as secretary-treasurer of the new municipality;

The making of a new seal, preparation of new electoral lists, and the opening of a bank account in the name of the City of Lachute;

Adoption of the resolutions of the April meetings of Lachute and Ayersville councils as well as the adoption of the accounts of both bodies;

The combining of the two financial systems, and study of the financial statements to date (that is, May 9) by Roland A. Morin, C.A.;

By-laws may now be passed with one reading instead of three, as previously;

Notice of motion was given pertaining to the preparation of a by-law establishing a uniform tariff for water consumption throughout the city;

Notice of motion was given for the adoption of the budget for the new City of Lachute;

Notice of motion to establish a by-law for a uniform business tax;

Authorization was given to the police and fire departments to serve all of the new municipality;

Extension of the municipal offices for the whole municipality;

Extension of town planning for the complete municipality;

Renewed study of the project concerning annexation of a part of the Parish of St. Jerusalem and a part of the Township of Chatham.

It was decided by Council that a caucus would be held on Monday evening next, at which time the budget would be studied.

Election notes, the County scene

Information is given by Richard Valois, N.P., the district returning officer, that there are 18,460 voters on the electoral lists for Argenteuil in the June 5 provincial election. This number is 1,400 more than in the 1962 election. . . At that time there were 17,021 eligible, and 14,518 exercised their franchise to vote.

The urban divisions of Lachute and Brownsburg comprise 4,445 and 2,242 voters, respectively.

The number of polling divisions at this stage is 10; this however is subject to additions when the lists are revised. Incidentally, the lists are now posted and voters would be advised to consult them, to be sure that all is in order within their sphere of

Well known merchant dies in auto mishap

A progressive citizen and businessman of Ste. Scholastique, Clément Legault, 39, met his death in a highway tragedy last Friday on Route 8 near Belle Rivière.

For some reason un-ascertained, the victim lost control of his auto, which swerved into the ditch and turned a complete circle. Mr. Legault extricated himself from the wreck and remained conscious while being removed to the Deux Montagnes Hospital, and even afterwards, but succumbed three hours after the accident, which occurred at 11.15 a.m.

Funeral rites were held Monday afternoon at the parish church in St. Hermas, where a large segment of the population gathered to pay their last respects. Burial took place at Ste. Scholastique.

Constructive Citizen

LATE CLEMENT LEGAULT

Chamber of Commerce, and was travelling to St. Eustache to make preparations for the convention to be held there next Sunday. He was well known as a merchant in his community and had also operated a furniture establishment in Brownsburg. He was active in many organizations.

He is survived by his wife, the former Murielle Lachance, and three children; his mother, Mrs. Joseph Legault, of Lachute; a brother, Denis, of Laval; and two sisters, Mrs. Roland Lauzon (Jacqueline), of Lachute, and Mrs. P.-E. Barbe (Ghislaine), of Ste. Scholastique.

Supplementary grants for district road work

Dr. Zoël Saindon, mayor of Lachute and Liberal candidate in the coming provincial election, gives information that supplementary grants of $115,000 have been extended to Argenteuil County by the Quebec Department of Highways. Amounts are assigned for the following road work:

$70,000 for Rte. 30 between Morin Heights and Lachute.

$25,000 for re-making the former CNR roadbed at Morin Heights, for purposes of a by-pass around that village.

This allotment of $115,000, according to Dr. Saindon, is in addition to grants of $350,000 already voted for this County in 1966. Included in this original amount was approximately $76,800 for Rte. 41, and $75,000 for completion of work on the St. Andrews road, with improvement of the traffic-way under the CNR viaduct at St. Andrews.

Charge laid in stabbing incident

A charge of endangering the life of another person was laid against Alex Proswerniuk, a 52-year-old resident of Morin Heights, following an incident in a hotel in which Jack Legallée was stabbed. The victim was taken to hospital by ambulance, and his condition is believed to be satsfactory.

According to investigating officers of the Q.P.P., an argument started, during which Proswerniuk went to the kitchen, took two knives and stabbed the victim.

B'burg promises crackdown on speed artists and hitch-hikers

By Harry McCosh

In answer to a local citizen who had appealed to Town Council for a prolonged, all-out campaign against reckless driving within the town, Mayor René Lafleur, at the May 2 meeting of Brownsburg Town Council, stated that the Council was very concerned with the number of negligent drivers and would take steps to curb traffic violations in Brownsburg.

Councillor Doug Clarke stated that the police were doing a commendable job, considering the limited staff. He said that a shortage of personnel and a general lack of consideration on the part of local residents are main causes of the problems with traffic regulation.

Mayor Lafleur acknowledged that the police had done well at handling the heavy flow of traffic to and from the C-I-L at 12 noon, 1 p.m., and 4.30 p.m., but reiterated the need for more pronounced scrutiny of persistently violated areas.

One step was taken in the direction of making the police more efficient when a new Chevrolet cruiser was ordered from Lacasse Motors in Lachute, at an exchange price of $1,381.07 in addition to the 1964 Chevrolet now in use.

Police Chief André Roy, in giving his regular report, stated that a total of 47 tickets for parking and speeding had been issued in April. The police chief agreed to crack down on hitch-hikers, who are becoming increasingly bothersome, particularly in front of the post office.

Provision for Playground

The Council then accepted, in principle, an offer of a plot of land 307 x 765 ft. from the Comité des Loisirs for a nominal fee of one dollar. In accepting the land, the Council agrees to help the Loisirs build a playground on the space. The playground would include a ball diamond, swings, and a pool, and would be completed within the next two to three years. Mayor Lafleur asked the Committee to present a complete agreement outlining both parties' commitments, at the regular Council meeting in June.

The meeting was then concluded, when a contract was given to Bert McCullough for the construction of a stone wall 75 x 6 ft. along Bank Street, opposite the junction of Bank and Hotel de Ville Streets, at a total price of $400.

Accident verdicts given in two highway fatalities

A jury empanelled by Coroner Dr. John C. MacKimmie returned a verdict of accidental death in a fatality which claimed the life of Robert Dorman last September, at the intersection of Beech Ridge and Highway No. 8, east of Lachute.

Mr. Dorman, a Pointe Claire resident formerly of St. Andrews, was driving towards Lachute to join the Autoroute to Montreal, when his collided with a car driven by Fernand Bussières, 41, who was also proceeding to Montreal, via Route 8, from Lac Grothé. The auto driven by Mr. Dorman appeared on the highway in his path, according to Mr. Bussières, who was the only eye witness of the accident — both drivers being unaccompanied at the time of the mishap. The witness, who had difficulty in expressing himself and walked with the aid of a crutch, said he was proceeding at 50-55 miles an hour along Route 8, and scarcely had time to slouch down in his seat before the impact.

Other testimony was given by Cst. Yvon Fauchon, the investigating traffic officer; Mrs. Robert Dorman, widow of the victim, who stated that her husband had left St. Andrews around 5.15 p.m.; and Roger Mercure, brother-in-law of Mr. Bussières, who had spent the day in company with the latter at Lac Grothé.

The death of a Montrealer, Lawrence Peter Hannessey, 45, which resulted from injuries in a car collision within the town limits March 26, was declared accidental, at an inquest held here by Dr. John C. MacKimmie, district coroner.

Mr. Hennessey was returning with a group of curlers late Saturday afternoon from Brownsburg, proceeding towards Lachute and Montreal. He was accompanying Gilles Boucher, driver of the car involved, and two others, Kenneth Bravo and Pierce William McElroy.

According to evidence by Mr. Boucher, an automobile was approaching in the opposite direction passing another car northbound on Brownsburg Road. In order to avoid it Mr. Boucher took the shoulder of the road, which threw his own car out of control. His car then swerved into the path of an auto going north, owned by Colin Martin, of Brownsburg. Mr. Hennessy was in the front seat with Mr. Boucher, and received the full impact.

The victim was removed to hospital here, later transferred to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Montreal, where he died April 15 of internal injuries. The accident occurred opposite the residence of Notary Jacques Beaudoin, Lachute.

Colin Martin, giving evidence, had seen no car passing him in the same direction, when his auto was confronted suddenly by the Montreal-bound car. Mr. Boucher's two passengers, other witnesses, could give no information to explain the collision. The only other testimony was given by the investigating police officer, Cst. Reynald Bell, of the municipal force.

The crown was represented by Roger Lagarde, QC. The inquest was held Friday at the city hall, where Henri St. Onge, chairman of the jury, gave an "accident" verdict after several minutes' deliberation.

Campaign visit here May 16 by Premier Jean Lesage

The Quebec premier, the Hon. Jean Lesage, will visit Lachute and vicinity on an election tour next Monday, May 16, in support of the Liberal party's accredited candidate in the Argenteuil riding, Dr. Zoël Saindon.

According to information available, the visit will be without ceremony or formality, as it is the desire of the premier to briefly call upon and meet personally with the electorate.

A procession of cars will greet the visiting notables at La Lorraine Motel on Route 8, and will accompany them to the Lachute Auditorium. There Mr. Lesage will speak briefly, but his prime purpose is to meet and converse informally with the audience. Arrival of the premier and his party is scheduled for 3 p.m.

Later, the Hon. Jean Lesage will proceed to Brownsburg. His visit there is set for around 4 p.m. and will include specifically a visit to the C-I-L ammunition works. . . A similar industrial visit will follow at the Canadian Refractories plant in Marelan.

Nine-year term in Arundel bank robbery attempt

Gerald Crevier, a Montreal resident, was sentenced on Friday to nine years in penitentiary, in connection with an attempted robbery in the Bank of Montreal at Arundel on April 17 of last year. Sentence was handed down by Judge Nantel in St. Jerome court.

Crevier was sentenced to six years on a charge of possession of firearms and hoods. Another charge of conspiring to conduct a robbery was dropped.

The incident occurred on Saturday, April 17, 1965, when would-be thieves were frightened by an alarm. Subsequent investigation showed that entry to the bank had been gained by breaking a window, and that the culprits had been in the bank premises for some time before they tripped the alarm while attempting to open the vault. Three men were picked up for questioning by Q.P.P.

Impaired driver pays for offence, bribery attempt

Jacques Trempte, a 30-year-old resident of Jacques Cartier, was on Friday sentenced to a fine of $500 plus costs, or six months in jail, when found guilty of having attempted to bribe two local Q.P.P. officers when he was stopped and arrested on a charge of impaired driving. The incident occurred near St. Philippe on April 28.

In addition, Trempte was fined $50 plus costs, and his driver's permit was suspended for three months, on the impaired driving charge.

The Laurentides School Board, whose head office is situated at Ste. Agathe-des-Monts, includes certain school commissions in the counties of Argenteuil, Labelle, Terrebonne, Montcalm and Papineau; it has a civil population of 37,370 and a secondary school-age population of 2,740.

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

A colorful spectacle at Lachute High School — the graduation dance last Friday evening was in the Spansh motif, with a cabaret-style setting and decorations. There was a class of 40 graduates — the girls all charming and the boys debonair — and dance music was provided by the Rockatones orchestra. A pleasing feature for the older spectators was a renewal of acquaintanceships between parents, friends and past graduates, and with the school commissioners and faculty.

Canoe party finds body of North River drowning victim

The badly decomposed body of Yvon Deneault, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Deneault, of 256 Evelina Street, was discovered on the edge of a small island at 3.35 p.m. Sunday by a group of canoeists from Montreal, who had set out from St. Andrews. The youth fell into open water from the ice, at the junction of the West and North Rivers on Sunday afternoon, March 20 last.

The body was actually discovered by Yvon Jobin, 24, of 2217 Lebrun Street, Montreal, one of eight members of a canoe club, and the discovery was immediately reported to the Lachute municipal police. Police Director Réal Chartrand, Sgt. J. M. Beauregard and Constables Ronald Bell and Germain Girard went to the scene and recovered the body from the island, which is situated between the two Ayers dams.

The body was taken to the local morgue, where identification was made by an uncle of the victim, Raymond Decoste.

Mr. Jobin stated that someone in St. Andrews had suggested, when they started their excursion up the river, that they be on the lookout for the body. The group, comprising three teachers and five students, were in four canoes and had paddled and portaged their way up-river to Lachute.

It will be recalled the victim was seen playing on the ice near the C.P.R. bridge and he actually disappeared into the water while a warning call was being made to the municipal police. Dragging operations, the use of dynamite, and efforts of two members of the Hawkesbury Otters Diving Club, failed to find any trace of the victim.

The boy is survived by his parents and six brothers and sisters. He was a pupil in 3rd grade at l'Ecole Secondaire. Funeral rites were held Monday at Ste. Anastasie parish church.

By BOB ATCHISON

Our fishing seems to have started off very well, considering how rough the weather has been. I have seen some very good catches for this early in the season. Not too many anglers have been out yet, and I'm included in this group. Lakes that have given fair-to-good catches include Silver Lake, which is starting off as it did two years ago, and prospects are good that it will continue. Lake Louisa is not too far behind, but once the first blush of fishing gets over, it will probably prove disappointing, as it usually does. Maybe this year some of the rock bass and small black bass will have gone. Lake Macdonald is also fair; I heard of two real good reds being caught last week-end. Bark Lake has not been good, at least for the time spent on it. As for the creeks, they are still pretty fast and high, and it may be some time before they really get going.

One word of warning: There is a rumor around that the minnow ban is lifted; this is NOT TRUE. For this we should all be glad. At least we will be keeping the carp and sucker minnows out of the lakes, that normally are brought in from out-of-town. I don't know just where these stories come from, but as in this case, it could cause trouble for the person who believed it.

This story I have heard a couple of times, concerning the unavailability of fishing licenses for the first week of the season. It appears that some of the fishermen from this County have been picked up because they did not have this permit. How true this is, I do not know. However, this should not be; if the government cannot print a permit they have been doing the same job on for years, and they cannot issue it, then there should be no blame attached to the fishermen. Anyway, I'm still trying to get facts.

Looking over some of the marshes frequented by waterbirds a couple of years ago for nesting, it appears they will be used again this year, judging by the volume of water in them. This will be great, if they don't dry up. Of course, if someone starts to drain them, then it's goodbye to the birds. There is a good marsh up near where I live; and last year it was exceedingly dry, more like a dust bowl. But this spring there is plenty of water in it. And with the ground saturated the way it is, there is every chance it will hold this water all summer.

Watching a couple of kingfishers the other morning, I was convinced that; if there's food around for them, they sure do get it. It's easily understood how some of the small lakes that have been stocked with fingerlings, get cleaned out in a short time. In the brief period I watched, they didn't miss a minnow, and at this time of year they're not easy to find in the river — except by the kingfishers, that is.

Now for you bird watchers in town: If you are lucky you may see an osprey or fish hawk early in the morning. It has been coming up the river, and gets up around our vicinity about 7 to 7.30, depending on the fishing. It should be worth watching out for, if you are around town; it must be passing right over Barron's Bridge a little earlier. So far I have only seen the one, but there must be at least another, as they do not as a rule travel alone at this time of year. Of course, the mate may be otherwise engaged, setting up housekeeping in some high, dead tree or rock. This bird is well worth seeing; especially the power dives when it goes down for food. A real splasher.

With groundhogs getting back into the swing of mischief, a lot of the varmint shooters have started their yearly crusade against them. We know these creatures have to be kept under control, and in some cases fields are really spoiled for crops. A couple of the boys who go in for this shooting have got themselves high-powered rifles with variable scopes. With this firearm, kills should be made up to about 500 yards without trouble — much farther with very light winds. You may remember my mentioning an enthusiast I visited some years ago in Watertown, U.S., and telling you of the special gun he had built for this sport. With this outfit, as I remember it, the scope cost more than the average varmint rifles. After watching him for some time, I came to the conclusion this was not for me. Not that it wasn't sport of the highest degree; it sure was — after all, even a blade of grass would throw the bullet off course. But I think the cost and patience needed were out of proportion.

But you don't need to have such high-priced guns for this kind of shooting. I know that, trying to stalk a groundhog that has already been shot at a couple of times, you have a job cut out for yourself. I think these creatures must have built-in radar, to be able to scramble out of sight when you are still too far away to get a shot. I know I have clambered down gullies, etc., trying to get one shot; sometimes, no matter how long you wait, it's just no use. Anyway, if you do shoot any of these animals, don't leave the carcass out in the field for the farmer to clean up. Besides, they make excellent eating, and as I've said before, don't kill anything unless you can use it. (Anyone wanting a good recipe, get in touch with me.)

With our summer visitors coming up from Montreal, I receive more reports of different birds. Our Chukar partridge have been seen a couple of times; they are not plentiful, but there may be a few more around that we haven't seen. The winter seems to have been good to the Hungarians, too; these are apparently abundant all over, especially in the Ste. Scholastique area and west, going towards the Ottawa River. This bird is a real charmer; very small, compared to our other birds, it soon becomes very tame if fed. One resident in this town has had about 20 of them that stayed around his house all winter. It was only natural for them to come in where he was feeding them. During the winter they make you laugh at their antics. Scooting along the top of the snow, leaving a little puff of snow behind them, makes you think of a puff-ball being blown in the winds. I've wondered just how many times their little legs move, in doing this. They seem to have the same erratic movements of the woodcock.

Most of us agree that boat owners on the lakes are generally pretty good as regards the trolling fraternity; but the odd one does act as though he owns the lake. This is a little plea for the trolling man. Most of the time he has considerable money invested in his outfit, and even the line is a major purchase, especially if it is 200 yards long and lead-weighted. So please don't try and cut too close with your boat to anyone out fishing. Not only is it against the law, but it is both inconsiderate and dangerous too. Remember, everyone has the right to use the lakes, just as you do.

I have written before, about our need for an S.P.C.A. agent, and facilities for the decent disposal of unwanted animals. I have invited donations for the building of a disposal box; some of you have taken heed but we still need a lot more money if this is to be undertaken. The amount needed for this, as a start, is not too much — about $300. So how about making this a Centennial project? Donations may be sent to The Watchman.

There are reports concerning creeks that have been jammed with debris from cutting operations. This I know to be true, but let's not just talk only of creeks; everywhere there is cutting going on, it can be seen. Piles of junk just left to rot or stay, as the case may be. One spot I used to like to visit was on the Dunany road. If any of you have been up there recently, you will have seen the stark desolation that has been left. As for the creek, if you can get in to fish it, or for that matter, get even close to the bank, then you're good. I don't know what the reasoning is, in such cases — maybe there's no one left to take over, so cut everything in sight; we won't need it any more, so why worry! . . . I know we in Quebec are supposed to have unlimited supplies of timber; but take a look at just how far we've advanced in our destruction of the forests, then you may think we are not in such a good position after all. Finally, with all the scrap left just where it dropped, how about the fire hazard — then anything that might have been left in the way of young trees, will be worse off than if they were cut. It takes at least 20 years for anything to start growing after a fire of this nature. That's a long time. Whereas it takes the Creator years and years to grow these trees, it takes — but a few minutes to destroy them.

NO MULLIGANS

Ladies' Section Lachute Golf Club

The temperature hit near freezing but the table talk was on little else but golf.

It was a gay day for the ladies — the opening luncheon of the Lachute Golf Club, Ladies' Section, on Saturday, May 7.

Eighty-five members turned out, augmenting the dining room's spring decor with their brightly colored hats and suits.

Prior to the luncheon, this year's golfing season swung into official being with the first meeting officiated over by this year's new president, Mrs. Roger Regimbal, who greeted the members and outlined coming highlights.

This year's captain, Mrs. Léopold Carrière, outlined the tournament schedule, noting that tournaments would be cancelled in the event of fewer than eight ladies for the weekly tournament and four for the Business Girls'. Mrs. Jim Huggan outlined the same for the Business Ladies.

It was decided by a vote that the closing function would be in the form of an evening dinner, held in September.

A new idea this year — prizes would be purchased now and displayed throughout the golfing season — part of the playing incentive.

Other members of the ladies' section committee include: Honorary president, Mrs. G. E. Ayers; past - president, Mrs. Richard Stephens; 1st vice-president, Ann David; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. J. Jelinek; secretary, Elaine McDonald; treasurer, Mrs. Tom Johnston; vice-captain, Mrs. J. Levesque; vice-captain (business ladies), Eleanor Sortome; Junior chairman, Mrs. W. Cottingham; entertainment, Mrs. R. Favreau; publicity, Ann FitzGerald.

The opening dinner-dance, slated for Saturday, May 21, will feature the orchestra of Henri Groulx in the cocktail lounge, with Denny Vaughan in the dining room.

The opening tournament for ladies — a best ball event — will be held Sunday, May 29.

BOATING CLINIC

BY STAN DAVIES

Spring is the best time to buy a second-hand boat, there's no question about it.

Why? Because a boat looks its worst after a hard Canadian winter out of water. It's the best time to see exactly what you are getting because it is hard for the seller to hide anything.

The seller is at a big disadvantage in the spring. So if you're selling, wait a while. Spruce the boat up a little, give it a little paint or varnish and a bit of polish. You'll find that the higher price you can ask . . . and get . . . will pay you amply for the extra work.

Here are a few of the questions I've been asked on the buying and selling of second-hand boats:

What's a fast, easy check on the condition of a second-hand outboard motor? (M.N., Sarnia)

Answer: Crank the motor over by hand. Even electric start outboards have a place for a starting rope. Use it, and feel for the resistance caused by compression in each cylinder, and a good "bounce" as the piston goes over top centre. Second thing: try to wiggle the propeller shaft and look for oil seepage around it. There should be none of either.

I can get a fibreglass boat cheap. It's got repairs where the stern and sides meet. Is this bad?

Answer: It's not just bad . . . it's terrible. Fibreglass boats that have been seriously over-powered or have seen severe use in a water ski-school, or have had the outboard motor knocked off by running over a log or rock, suffer the damage you describe. You're not buying much, so don't pay much.

The 30-foot cruiser I bought last summer (now out of water) had, and still has, a stale aroma in the bilges. In fact, they stink. What can I do? (P.Q., London)

Answer: As soon as the weather is warm enough, scour the bilges thoroughly with detergent and hot water. Rinse thoroughly then DRY. And I mean dry. Bring in a heater and fan if necessary. When thoroughly dry spray with an anti-fungus preservative obtained from your marine dealer.

Answer: The attached sketch outlines the four broad divisions. A utility boat, can be any length, usually has no deck, windshield, or conveniences. It might be a skiff, punt, rowboat, dinghy, john-boat or pram, with a motor. The runabout has no living or sleeping accommodation, but has a deck, windshield and maybe a canvas top. A small austere cruiser might be called an overnighter, camping cruiser, or express cruiser. A big luxury cruiser is mostly referred to as a motor yacht. The houseboat can be as small or as big and plush as you like.

Lachute Motor Sport Club

News, Views, Activities — by Don Smith

The last meeting of the Lachute Motor Sport Club Inc. was held May 4, at the Masonic Hall. The main topic was the forthcoming duties of our club in the Shell 4,000 Trans-Canada Rally. The vice - president, Thomas Smith, chaired the meeting in the absence of Dave Pollock, who we understand was very ill at the time. (We all hope you are feeling better, Dave.)

On Thursday evening Dave Heggie, Tom Smith, Roger MacAdam, Tom Dwyer, Ken Rodger and myself made the trip to Montpelier, Que., to set up camp for our checkpoint - Control No. 76. Dave Heggie was chief marshal and supervised the activities. Tom Smith was kind enough to lend us his trailer and we were also able to borrow a tent. Even in the trailer it was very cold, so we were all up early in the morning. We were soon joined by two more carloads of members from the club, who were able to help us try to win the $50 prize as best control of the day.

In attempting to win this prize we had intended to give coffee and sandwiches to the participants and officials. We were soon to learn, however, that we were in the middle of an average speed section and the drivers were all either right on time or late. This meant they only had time to punch the clock and then take off again — about 15 seconds. During this time, Ron Tilsley and Bob Rodger managed to clean both the front and rear windshields, and the sandwiches were tossed into the car if the crews wanted them — most did.

The first course-opening car came by about one hour before the first rally car was due, and set our clocks. Another car followed about a half-hour later to check the time, and this was followed shortly by a car containing members of the press. We were still anxiously awaiting the arrival of the first competitors.

A Barracuda was the first car to come sliding through the S-turn to our checkpoint. The others followed at intervals of two minutes. The Ford Cortinas that won the team prize were in amazingly good condition, but some of the others did not look or sound as if they would be able to make it to St. Jovite for the speed section. They all did, though.

We tried to follow the course-closing car through the back country to St. Jovite along the rally route, but its speeds were amazing. After almost losing the bottom of the car in one stretch and flying over the side of a hill in another, we decided to take it easy and get there on our own. We wanted to be sure we got there at all!

Pit Chatter

Thanks to Tom Smith for lending us his trailer — also to Mrs. Tom Smith and Margaret Brass for cooking a terrific breakfast. . . Sorry you had to miss the big day, Dave. . . Don't forget the rallyette coming up soon. You will be required to have flares and a first-aid kit. Also your car will have to undergo the standard safety check — headlights, tail lights, brakes, horn and directional signals. . . Thanks to Mrs. Heggie and her group for making the sandwiches, for the control point at the Shell 4000.

Next Meeting — Friday, May 20, at 8 p.m. — Masonic Hall, Lachute.

The original George Hanneford Family, known throughout the entertainment world as the Royal Family of Equestrians, will delight the spectators with their daring and comical versions of bareback riding.

While these are just a few of the stars to be seen in this year's Shrine Circus, there are many surprises in store for the viewers of this magnificently staged production. Be sure that you and your family enjoy this once-a-year extravaganza of pomp, pageantry and daring. It will be a spectacle long to be remembered.

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method

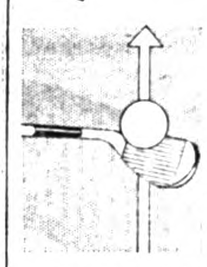
by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

A CURE FOR THE 'SHANKS'



When you hit your iron shots on the hosel of the club (illustration No. 1) and they shoot off to the right, you are a victim of shanked shots. Shanked shots are bad enough in themselves, but even worse when the shanks lead to the "shakes."

There are several reasons why golfers shank shots, but a very common cause occurs on the backswing. If you take your club back too much "inside" the target line, around your body (illustration No. 2) you will be likely to return it along a path that forces the clubhead "outside" the ball (illustration No. 3). The result will be that the club's shaft, instead of its face, strikes the ball.

If you shank shots, I'd suggest you try taking the club back more along the target line—straighter back from the ball (illustration No. 4). This will encourage your returning the clubface squarely into the ball.

Lawn-Boy's Grasscatcher picks up grass as you cut. It's just one of 18 convenient advantages

(1) Lawn-Boy's Grasscatcher picks up the clippings you cut. It picks up leaves in the fall. It tidies your lawn in spring. It gathers weeds. To empty, just snap it off with your fingers and unzip.

(2) Finger-tip Start gets a Lawn-Boy going with 94% less effort than old fashioned heave-and-haul type mowers.

(3) Safety Switch/Primer prevents accidental starts.

(4) 3 Horse-power Engine gives plenty of muscle to breeze through even the thickest grass.

(5) Vibration-reducing Engine Mount.

(6) Two-Speed Control. Regular for normal grass. Fast for long grass.

(8) The Industry's Largest Muffler.

(9) Newly-Enlarged 3-pint Gas Tank.

(10) Smooth-Cutting Spring Steel Blade.

(11) Exclusive Blade Stiffener ensures a smooth, even cut.

(12) Safety Housing around Blade.

(13) Safely-Positioned Discharge Chute.

(14) Finger-tip Wheel Height Adjustment.

(15) Smooth-tread Tires don't track mud and dirt back into your basement or garage.

(16) Staggered Wheels keep your Lawn-Boy level, even though your lawn may not be.

(17) Adjustable, Extra-Long Handle.

(18) Lightweight Magnesium Housing. It's sturdier and lighter than aluminum.

No other mower made has all these convenient advantages. Very few have even half of them. And Lawn-Boy is warranted for two years. That's longer than some mowers last.

Lawn-boy models come with grasscatcher, without grasscatcher, push-type, self-propelled—pick the Lawn-Boy that can make things easiest for you. It's at your dealers now.

Description of phenomenon, recent descent of meteor

— Contributed by Norman Thorburn —

My wife was standing before our kitchen window, which faces the south, on the 25th day of April around 8 p.m.

Suddenly, a bright illumination appeared on the southern horizon, over the bush on the other side of the Vide Sac road.

It looked like the light of a diesel locomotive. My wife called our attention to it. The illuminative object was travelling across the sky from the horizon at a tremendous rate, actually the speed of sound, around 650 miles per hour.

The light emitted by the object had a whitish glare, with traces of yellow in it.

The meteor — for such it was, we learned later — reached a point south of our house about 30 degrees from the horizon, the zenith being an imaginary line stretching upwards in the sky from our house, making a 45-degree angle with the earth. . . Better mathematicians than myself could have figured out where the meteor was at this time.

It was at this point in its trajectory that the object exploded, like a giant sky-rocket. I figured that it had exploded in the northern part of New York State, across the St. Lawrence, after learning that it had been seen to the south of Cornwall and southwest of Montreal.

I was not too far out, for it had disintegrated just north of Huntingdon, Que., according to the American students who visited our farm.

It certainly was awe-inspiring to see this unearthly illumination in the sky. When it exploded, much smaller flaming objects broke off from it and dropped 30 feet or more, before they burnt out a second or two later.

We saw debris coming down from the sky, with small black objects about the size of beans, amid the stream of material coming from the extinct meteor. We also saw a trail of grey and black smoke about 30 feet long, behind the place where the meteor exploded.

Two students from the University of the State of New York, who are working for the observatory connected with the university of Albany, phoned me and asked me many questions, especially if I had heard any noise when the meteor exploded. I answered, No. The students were Messrs. Potasnick and Bowman.

They came up to the place where we had sighted the meteor, and seemed surprised when we told them we had seen debris coming down.

From what I understand — and believe me, even learned professors who are authorities on meteors, often contradict each other — what happened to the meteor was this:

The celestial body was orbiting the earth when it suddenly lost altitude and came into contact with the earth's atmosphere.

When it exploded over Huntingdon it was 15 miles above the ground. Due to friction from contact with the atmosphere, the outer case or shell of the meteor began to get very hot, and finally the gases burst into flame. Finally the case or shell was pierced, and the gases in the interior of the meteor exploded.

Scientists at the observatory in Albany, who were in contact with the students by short-wave radio, must have told the students to look for stones at Lakefield, because they believed the hard, stony core of the meteor had not fallen at Huntingdon but had continued on the course of the trajectory, north to Upper Lachute and Lakefield.

The students scoffed at the idea that there could be "a season" for meteors, which is believed by many. This is the first meteor I have ever seen, except for those tiny objects called "shooting stars". As a young child in 1912, my parents tried to show me Haley's Comet, but I just couldn't see it!

Please excuse my scientific immaturity. I am neither an astronomer, astrophysicist, or a meteorologist, but even their views about meteors are often at variance.

C.W.L. plays host to Diocesan convention

On Saturday, May 7, the Ste. Anastasie Parish Council of Lachute was hostess to the 11th annual convention of the St. Jerome Diocesan Council of the Catholic Women's League of Canada.

Members from Brownsburg, St. Colomban, City of Two Mountains, Rosemere, Ste. Therese and Lachute registered at l'Ecole St. Alexandre.

Mrs. R. Summers of Brownsburg, Diocesan president, presided over the morning business session. A resolution for "Water Conservation against Pollution", was approved by the Diocesan convention and will be forwarded to the Provincial convention in June.

Prior to this meeting, a light breakfast was served, under the convenership of Mrs. George Lowe.

Holy Mass was celebrated at Ste. Anastasie Church, by the Rev. Father Mailloux. Mr. Jacques Bedard was at the organ. The members then proceeded to a luncheon at the Lachute Golf and Country Club, where 85 members were present. . .

The luncheon hostess was Mrs. M. Gendron, Parish Council president. The guests at the head-table were — Mrs. R. Summers, Diocesan president; Rev. Desjardins; Rev. Mailloux; Rev. LaFemina, who represented the Bishop and Diocesan director; Mayor Saindon; and the guest speaker, Rev. E. M. Jenkins, of the Baptist Federation of Canada.

Mr. Jenkins, a commissioner of the Christian Pavilion at Expo '67, kindly substituted for Abbé Jean Martucci, General Commissioner, who was unable to be present. The Rev. Jenkins gave a summary of the steps leading up to the building of the Christian Pavilion, which was made possible by the united efforts of ecumenical groups from Roman Catholic, United Church, Anglican, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Baptist and Greek Orthodox churches. He also showed colored slides to illustrate the site and aims of the Christian Pavilion commissioners.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. L. Bedard, of Lachute, and appreciation was expressed by Mrs. I. Willock, of the City of Two Mountains.

Special thanks were extended to everyone responsible for making the convention a success. Mrs. Clifford Lowe was ticket convener; Mrs. George Rowe was luncheon convener; and Miss Lydia Lowe, Lachute past-president, was the over-all convener for this convention.

Topic heard at Women's Institute

The monthly meeting of the Lachute W.I. was held on Thursday last at the High School. The guest speaker on this occasion was Mrs. R. Bailly, who gave a most interesting talk on Ethiopia, which country she had recently visited, with a friend who was attending the World Conference of Teaching Personnel at Addis-Ababa. Through the eyes of a teacher and mother, she compared the sad lot of Ethiopia's children in the field of education, health and welfare with the high standards provided for children in this country. She also spoke on the way of life there, in agriculture and industry, which has seen so little change or progress through the centuries.

Mrs. Bailly gave a very informative lecture, enjoyed by her listeners as the "next-best thing" to having made the trip oneself to this far-off fascinating country.

Dept. information on processing of June exam papers

In a special bulletin on June examinations from the Quebec Department of Education, it is stated that the work of electronic computers will again be limited this year to the processing of marks. These machines will play no part in the correction of papers.

Around June 15, the 4,000 or more persons responsible for the correction of papers will begin their work in the 13 main correction centres. It is expected that for both French and English-speaking Catholic students, the correction of papers will be completed by June 30. On the other hand, the methods of correction presently used and the relatively small number of teachers called upon to mark examination papers will not make it possible for those responsible for the Protestant sector to complete such correction before July 5.

The examination results will then be entered on perforated cards, which will subsequently be read by computers.

This procedure will begin on June 28 and will be completed around July 6 for Catholic students, and around July 12 for Protestant students.

The Department of Education will see that statements of their marks are forwarded directly to English-speaking students, during the last week of July.

The Lachute Guides and Brownies announce their annual cookie sale for next Saturday. The girls and their leaders bespeak a kindly welcome and a generous response.

Arundel United celebrates 100 yrs. in August 1966

On August 27-28 this year, the United Church at Arundel will be celebrating 100 years of growth. Special features of the occasion will be a tea and dinner on August 27 (Saturday) and a special church service the following day.

Special dinner speaker will be the Hon. John Matheson, M.P., who was born in Arundel and has a direct link with this church, where his father the late Dr. A. D. Matheson served as minister. Guest preacher for the Sunday service has not yet been announced.

An interesting souvenir booklet has been published in connection with this anniversary. The history of the church, penned by Mrs. Sam MacArthur of Arundel, records the ministers since the start of the Arundel church, and traces the progress of their ministry since the earliest founding of the congregation.

Miss Donna Billingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Billingham, of Brownsburg, and Mr. Dennis Everett Ridley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Ridley, of Montreal, whose marriage has been arranged to take place on Saturday, June 11, at the Simeon's Anglican Church, Lachute.

The Bible Today

Mr. T. C. Ross, a 53-year-old life insurance representative in Winnipeg, has been appointed a Secretary of the Canadian Bible Society in Metropolitan Toronto. This is the first time a layman has been appointed to such an office. The 19 District Secretaries on the staff of the Canadian Bible Society at present are all clergymen.

Mr. Ross is an elder of First Presbyterian Church, Winnipeg, and a lay preacher. For some time he has been drawn towards full time Christian work. The Bible Society offers him an opportunity to utilize his previous experience and to exercise his Christian ministry to the full.

At a time when the Canadian Bible Society is challenged to greatly increase Scripture distribution to meet the world's growing demand for the Scriptures, it is hoped that the Society will continue to receive support from business and industry as well as from the churches.

Pupils of two age groups perform in ballet recital

The aim of the ballet school is to teach its pupils the art of ballet—grace and posture—and appreciation of music. How far the school has progressed in this ideal was demonstrated in a recital given here Saturday evening.

The dances were set to the music of well-known masters as well as lesser-known composers. Selections from Gounod, Rossini, Mozart, Mendelssohn, D. Wilson, Balfe and Oesten were expertly played by Mme. L. Cauchon. The costumes, which are an essential highlight, were original and delightful. The dresses of the junior pupils were perfect examples of the seamstress' art. Appreciation goes to the talented people who made them.

It was quite clear from the outset, that much time had been spent in preparation and selection of colors to present an attractive picture. From the time the curtains opened to reveal a pink poodle, a chicken and a dozen little characters from nursery days — through the wonderful steps of the shepherds and their shepherdesses — to the enchantment of the mirror dance, finally to the sophisticated beauty of the dreams, performed by the oldest pupils — grace and posture was self-evident. The students danced with one idea in mind, to entertain their audience, who responded with applause; and many stayed to offer their congratulations.

Saturday's recital was truly a revelation. The younger students of Lachute and Brownsburg performed extremely well, and the older pupils danced with great precision. One could appreciate the hours of patient work required to teach these young people, as well as the practice that it must have taken to put forward such a well-balanced program. Many people expressed their gratitude to Mrs. E. F. Gow and to Mlle L. DuBreuil, who have spared no effort in making the Argenteuil Schools of Ballet a success.

This year a drawing was held to promote a scholarship fund, and during the evening Dr. R. Lavigne graciously drew the winning tickets. The blanket was won by Mlle. M. Delisle of Brownsburg, and the travel rug by Mr. R. Raymond from Ottawa.

QUEBEC CITY:

Strong rumours were linking beer with a local health condition in Quebec City. However, Dow knew its beer in Quebec City was good even before it made the decision to dump it. Quality control laboratory tests and government analyses had already proven it to be in perfect condition... this has now been officially confirmed to the public.

Dow was aware then that other breweries were involved... another fact that has now been publicly confirmed. Dow knew, but chose to remain silent rather than become party to the rumours; preferring to wait until the facts were published.

Dow did not believe that beer—any beer—could be the cause; otherwise the problem would not have been limited to lower town in Quebec City. However, as the largest brewery in the Quebec area, Dow accepted the full responsibility of leadership and thus, voluntarily decided to remove its beer from the market.

Unfortunately, our action was misinterpreted and we were subjected to adverse public reaction.

But as long as there was a single doubt left anywhere and —if it gave peace of mind to the consuming public

—if it enhanced the stature of the brewing industry

—if we lived up to a reputation acquired over 176 years of quality brewing

—if we acted in a manner worthy of your trust regardless of circumstances and cost...

then, did we really do it needlessly? We believe not!

Our beer was good. Our beer is good. If a similar situation was ever to re-occur, we feel we should act in exactly the same manner.

That is our interpretation of public service.

Lachute chapter to receive charter May 14

On May 14, the Lachute Barbershop Group will become a chartered member of the "Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America Inc.", an organization with some 30,000 members from over 700 Chapters in Canada and the U.S.A. The charter will be presented to President George Witham at the Harmony Show commemorating this occasion on the evening of May 14. An official from SPEBSQSA in Kenosha, Wis., will travel to Lachute to make the presentation.

To help make Lachute chapter's "Charter Nite Parade" a success, the organizing committee has been successful in billing the Mountain City Chorus, a group which has been singing for some 16 years, and three well known quartets from the Montreal area. Also featured in the program will be Lachute's own Laurentian Chorus, and the Laurentian Airs Quartet. Tickets are presently on sale at the box office of Cinema Lachute, or from Chorus members. People interested in attending this fine show should reserve early.

M.P.'s informal discussion with History Club Students

By Robert Dawson

Roger Regimbal, Conservative M.P. for this riding, was guest speaker of the Lachute High School History Club recently. An informal question-and-answer discussion was held after Mr. Regimbal told the students "never to be afraid to question or to go directly to the source, to get information." . . "There can be no such thing as an embarrassing question," he told his young audience.

The first question was about the Munsinger case. Mr. Regimbal explained the break-down of Parliamantary order that led up to the revelation of this case. It began with the debate on the Spencer spy affair, in which tempers rose rapidly and parliamentary procedure gradually broke down. Mr. Cardin in a moment of anger, made the first public mention of the Munsinger case, and from there, Parliament degenerated into chaos

It had always been an unwritten rule that the private lives of M.P.'s would not be mentioned in public. Mr. Regimbal said he sympathized with Cardin, since the latter, being only human, had unintentionally broken the rule in a moment of anger. However, Mr. Regimbal told the students that it was generally felt on Parliament Hill that the Munsinger inquiry would result in a "black-eye" for Cardin as well as for Diefenbaker.

Mr. Regimbal added that the chaotic debate on the Munsinger affair had lasted only a very short time and had done little to hold up the normal work of Parliament. Furthermore, there were a few humorous moments amid the anger and accusations. For instance, Prime Minister Pearson strode into the House of Commons to join the Munsinger debate, carrying with him a thick folio of papers to which he apparently intented to refer. At that instant it was announced that Gerda Munsinger was not dead as had previously been believed, but was very much alive in Munich. Mr. Pearson immediately did an about-face and marched out to re-examine all his documents.

Mr. Regimbal advised the students to spend time and effort improving politics, and that the only way to improve any government is to be extremely careful to send to best possible delegates.

"Your political machine is what you make it," he said. "And the calibre of your individual delegate is what decides the representation your area gets. Too many people complain about the calibre of their M.P.'s and yet do nothing to nominate better candidates at election time."

Mr. Regimbal also advised the students to take fifteen minutes each day to read Hansard. In doing so, he said, they would be doing a great service for Canada to ensure the survival of democracy.

The students questioned their M.P. about Parliament's decision to retain capital punishment.

"The M.P.'s were judged as barbarians by the Press and by many who had not even heard the debates. However, in the ten-day debate, the vast majority of the members were engaged in very deep, soul-searching thought. Most M.P.'s were swayed both ways at different times in the discussions."

Mr. Regimbal felt that Parliament retained the death sentence because Canada's legal machinery and society in general are not ready for an immediate abolition of hanging; no substitution was offered for the death penalty. Society, he said, would feel insecure and unprotected if it knew that murderers might not fear imprisonment as much as death. Criminals are generally mentally backward and react like children to changes in the law. A few might therefore feel freer to kill if the threat of ultimate punishment were taken away. Across all of Canada, there might be four or five such mentally-deranged criminals who would feel free to murder if hanging were abolished. Their deeds of murder would result in far more deaths than those of the one or two innocent people who may have been hanged in all of Canada's history.

Commenting on Canada's Prime Minister, Mr. Regimbal said that Mr. Pearson is an honest, dedicated man who is unfortunately not a good leader. "He is a good stateman, but cannot put his foot down," in Mr. Regimbal's opinion.

The students, greatly appreciated Mr. Regimbal's visit and it was later announced that 55 Grade Nine pupils would be his guests in Ottawa on May 10 to tour the Parliament Buildings and learn more about Canada's government.

DECLARATION

To the Electors of the County of Argenteuil:

According to the Election Act, Revised Statutes 1964, Chapter 7 and amendments, nomination day will fall on Sunday, May the 22nd, 1966.

Out of consideration for the majority of the electors of the County of Argenteuil, who do not approve of the choice of the Lord's day for discussing political matters, I will not participate in any such discussions at a meeting usually held following the nomination.

Furthermore, in taking this stand, I believe I have the support of those who wish to protest the action of the present Government in calling an election for a Sunday vote, which also will deprive the population of their usual leisure time and their normal right of four consecutive hours of free voting time, should the election be on a normal working day.

SIGNED, at Lachute, May 10th, 1966.

— R. Lajeunesse

Women's Institute 20th Anniversary

On Tuesday evening last, the Women's Institute branch celebrated their 20th anniversary at "The Pines". Approximately 35 members attended. Honored guests were the original charter members, of whom 12 were present.

The guests were received by the president, Mrs. Alvin Graham, in the lounge, where a social time was enjoyed before the meal. At the head-table were the president, Mrs. Alvin Graham; the County president, Mrs. Hall; the 1st vice-president of Quebec Women's Institutes, Mrs. Geo. McGibbon; Mrs. Gordon Cooke, Mrs. Mary Graham, Mrs. E. Bulley and Mrs. Owen Rathwell. During the dinner Mrs. Graham called on the County president to address a few words to the assembly, after which she presented life memberships to Mrs. Mary Graham, Mrs. Alvin Graham, and Mrs. E. Bulley. Mrs. Gordon gave a brief resumé of the work accomplished in the 20 years of the organization. Mrs. McGibbon also extended congratulations to the branch, and recalled memories of the first meeting at which she was present.

Silver Wedding

At the Legion Hall on Sunday evening a pleasant party took the form of a "surprise" to Mr. and Mrs. Andreis Jansen on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary. Approximately 40 guests were present. Mr. Kenneth Ronalds welcomed the gathering and presented the happy couple with a purse on behalf of the members. Mr. Jansen replied on behalf of his wife and himself. The Rev. Father Potvin, of Huberdeau, also spoke a few words of congratulation on behalf of the French-speaking comrades. The "bride" cut the cake, and refreshments brought a happy event to a close. . . Mr. Geriet Jansen, son of the honored couple, was home for the occasion.

Miss Gloria Graham entertained a few of her friends on Saturday afternoon on the occasion of her birthday. Congratulations are extended.

Mrs. Jansen will be flying to Holland next Saturday for a six-weeks visit with her relatives. Friends wish her "Bon Voyage" and "Happy Landing".

"Be prepared" for the Girl Guide and Brownie cookie sale on Saturday, May 14. This is a worthy cause, deserving the full support of the community.

Red Cross Youth Week

THIS IS Red Cross Youth Week in Canada, and The Watchman takes occasion to salute the young people of the community who are active in this vast international organization.

Our young participants are among more than a million and a half young Canadians who promote the various projects and services of the Junior Red Cross and High School Red Cross. They are Canadian youth in action, with an interest in the less-fortunate youth of this community, this nation and the world.

Every year the money raised in their fund-raising activities accomplishes much for other children. Their energy and their spirit are responsible for glowing achievements for the betterment of young people everywhere.

Contemplate the hidden taxes

INCOME TAXES, although the largest single item in the tax tangle, are but one of many taxes the average Canadian wage-earner has to pay in one way or another.

A recent article in a national magazine reveals that an average Canadian home-owner, married with two children, and earning $6,000 a year, pays nearly 27 per cent of his income in VISIBLE taxes. Something over 7 per cent goes out in straight income tax, about 6 per cent in municipal property taxes. The rest of the bite comprises general sales taxes, retail sales taxes, various excise taxes, amusement taxes, customs duties, the Canada Pension Plan taxes, and Old Age Security taxes. The same article points out that no one can really determine how much the average citizen pays every year in ALL forms of tax. This is because of all the hidden taxes imposed on the manufacturers, wholesalers, jobbers and retailers that are reflected or built into the price of goods we buy.

Every Canadian should seriously contemplate the many taxes he pays, and bring this contemplation to mind when he hears of impending tax increases and when he is on the verge of saying "let the government do it".

Grim comedy of our times

SPEAKING at Joliette just recently, the president of the Province of Quebec Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Jacques Caron, had something to say on the numerous strikes occurring in this province. The Watchman takes liberty to quote from these opinions. . .

As a result of outbidding and propaganda by the unions, said Mr. Caron, workers are now agitated to a point where they don't want to negotiate; they DEMAND. They don't wait for justice to be granted, but rather take it into their own hands. When just decisions are made in their behalf, they do not accept them. And to make matters worse, in some instances heavy material damage is inflicted with the view of intimidating management or by way of retaliation.

According to this speaker, people are asking for too much, too quickly. On the part of the Government as well as that of the Unions, there is an urge to do everything at once — to correct, to organize, to plan, to launch all projects at the same time. Government employees plunge headlong into strikes before having learned how to use collective bargaining in an adult way. The results are obvious today — we are in a shambles, instead of progressing; we are uprooted, without being able to see in what direction we are going, and how far or fast we should go.

Union groups meddling in politics, seriously complicates labour-management relations, according to this speaker. Finally, "What do the unions and their members offer in return for high increases in salaries and social benefits? The answer is simple — less work, and quite often work of poorer quality. . . When do we see a labour group, after obtaining an increase in wages, stimulate its members to work harder and improve the quality of their output? An increase in salary and improvement in working conditions that cannot be equalized with increase in productivity, result in inflationary pressures. Inflation, according to unions, is caused by management or by Government. The unions will not recognize nor accept any responsibility in this matter. It's a grim comedy, don't you think?"

Inflation is the sure way to a state of want; it is an irrepressible rise in the cost of living, consequently a loss for the community as a whole.

The firewater 'myth'

WHEN IT WAS reported that 15 Indians had been killed lying on railway tracks in front of trains in Northwestern Ontario in the last five years, Ontario's attorney-general offered a quick explanation. . . The Indians had been drinking, Arthur Wishart told the legislature in Toronto.

But then he went on to make a generalization that seemed to deserve a reply. "Indians can't hold their liquor. It's a simple matter of observation. Our forefathers saw it, and wouldn't give Indians firewater." The implication appeared to be that there is something in the physical makeup of the Indian that makes it impossible for him to drink moderately.

But is it fair to lump all Indians together in this way?

Dr. Robert Dailey, who has conducted a five-year study of Indian drinking for the Ontario Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation, thinks not. Indians can hold their liquor as well as anyone, says Dr. Dailey. But he adds that attempts to teach them temperance have failed because white men don't understand Indian culture.

The 44-year-old University of Toronto anthropologist has spent most of his career studying North American Indians and Eskimos. He says he undertook the study "to dispel myths" about Indian drinking.

Dr. Dailey insists that the suggestion Indians are physiologically different from white men and thus get drunk faster, is "absolutely false". Alcohol is part of the Indian's way of life, and his culture attaches no stigma to drunkenness, he says; but while the average Indian spends a third or more of his income on liquor, there is proportionately little alcoholism.

"In the white man's society, stigmas attached to drinking effect an informal control. Heavy drinkers fear the loss of jobs and status in the community, and drunkenness produces guilt. Indian culture contains none of these counter-anxieties.

Dr. Dailey suggests that if the Indian were to become less dependent on the white man, he might institute some reforms of his own. "The Indian must regain a sense of his own dignity." . . He suggests lawmakers should study Indian culture before considering legislation to prevent the Indian from getting alcohol.

Perhaps Dr. Dailey's own study, backed by his considerable knowledge of the subject, will help the legislators avoid making a serious mistake. Whatever they do, however, they certainly should not act on what this authority regards as a pure myth.

Viewpoints and perspectives

RESTAURANT HEADACHES — You and the minimum-wage laws are partly to blame for coffee and tea costing 15c instead of the long-time 10c in many restaurants across Canada, reports The Financial Post. Another reason: increased costs for buildings and equipment. Some see Canada Pension Plan contributions putting pressure on prices later on. One restaurateur lays special blame on the "one-cup-of-coffee-please" customer at the coffee-break time. George Boukydis, president, Toronto & District Branch, Canadian Restaurant Association, says "coffee only" customers "are often the ones to complain about washroom facilities, air conditioning or other conveniences that cost the owner tens of thousands of dollars to enhance his service to the public." He believes customers who spend 25c or less in a restaurant are posing a "serious problem" to a business that is plagued with high capital investments, high rents and property taxes.

80 YEARS AGO

Notwithstanding the number of new houses lately erected in Lachute, there is not one vacant, and there is a great demand for more.

The May issue of "Our Little Ones" is really a splendid one. The engravings are fine and the descriptive pieces well chosen.

Lieut.-Governor Masson has subscribed $50 towards the building of Bishop Williams' wing at Bishop's College, Lennoxville.

Montreal retail grocers are paying 28 cts. per lb. for tub butter. The majority of farmers here receive only 17 cts.

Mille Isles — Another new settler named Ivall has arrived here. . . Robert Day has gone to work on the C.P.R. bridge at Lachine. . . Mille Isles is to send a tug-of-war team to Lachute on the Queen's Birth Day.

St. Andrews — Herbert Simpson was feted here on his departure to reside in British Columbia. . . We hope the St. Andrews Cavalry will be present to a man, at the grand military display and games at Lachute on the Queen's Birth Day. . . Had we had the railway, we could have had the Military Excursion in St. Andrews on the 24th, instead of Lachute. We have a village that is second to none as a summer resort.

May, 1916 —

Messrs. O. B. Lafleur & Sons have shut down for a few days in order to make extensive improvements to their factory.

Mr. Hampton has purchased the property of Mr. Laurin in the East End.

Ordination of the Rev. R. J. Wilson as assistant minister of the Lachute Presbyterian Church took place this week.

Any interested in procuring negatives or prints of pictures taken between 1880 and 1910 by Lambly's Photographic Studio, Lachute, please order same from J. D. Clarke, Photographer, 6001 Pasteur, Bordeaux Ward, Montreal as negatives not wanted are being shipped to the manufacturers and cleaned off for sake of the glass. (Advt.)

Cushing — The tug "Maggie May" in the employ of the Department of Marine has been on the river for the past week placing buoys in readiness for the opening of navigation.

25 YEARS AGO

Papers found in Boston show that Benjamin Franklin dreamed the idea of a "parachute army". . . In 1784 he wrote that 5,000 balloons each carrying two soldiers, 10,000 in all — could do an "infinite amount of mischief before a force could be brought to repel them."

At the United Church on Sunday the Rev. W. B. Rosborough dedicated three memorials — a private communion set in memory of the late Mrs. T. Christie; an art window in memory of the late Mrs. Maria Stalker; and a previously installed chancel window erected through the generosity of Mr. E. H. Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hocquard and son, Harry, of New Carlisle, have taken up residence in town.

The Misses Kearns, of Montreal, spent the week-end at their summer camp on the North River.

Effective July 1, The Watchman yearly subscription rate will be advanced from $1.50 to $2.00.

Fred Soughton, of Hamilton, has joined Herb Rumball as assistant in the employee recreation program at Brownsburg ammunition plant.

The death occurred recently of the Rev. Dr. W. J. P. Baugh, a former rector of Grenville in 1909-1915. Dr. Baugh, who died at Greensville, Ont., was the brother of the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh of Lakefield and the Rev. H. G. L. Baugh of Port Colborne, Ont.

Has This Hour Run Out?

Canada's most popular television program, This Hour Has Seven Days, had its final showing of the season last Sunday and it's still not known whether it will be back in the fall.

There is no need to recount here the events which led up to the firing of co-hosts Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre, and the threatened strike of producers which was averted only by the appointment of newspaper publisher Stuart Keate as an informal mediator in the dispute.

The fate of the Seven Days show was not, on the face of it, an important national issue. But it was a controversy that attracted great attention because the people behind the program had known how to use the intense impact of TV to popularize issues that were important to the nation.

The Seven Days show represented one of the very few occasions when TV had been used to stir the emotions and even the intellect, of the average viewer.

Typical CBC "public affairs" programs have been informative, intelligently produced, and skillfully presented. But most of them also have gone high over the heads of the majority of Canadians, like a pitcher who knew what he was aiming at but couldn't keep the ball over home plate.

This was clearly not the case of Seven Days. It tackled vital issues in a way that involved the average man on the street—be it the treatment of Indians in northern Ontario; the pathetic figure of spy suspect Victor Spencer; or the tragedy of a thalidomide baby.

Why, then, did CBC president Alphonse Ouimet (recently appointed to another seven-year term) move so drastically in his decision to dump Watson and LaPierre?

If there had been a great public outcry about Seven Days, or if there had been widespread public revulsion against either the content or the treatment of the shows, the action would have been understandable.

Yet this was not the case. Here was a show which had attracted a larger audience than any other CBC program (with the exception of hockey which doesn't really qualify as a program), and which had gained great publicity by scoring a number of major scoops.

Producer Douglas Leiterman says the CBC has not given any "comprehensible reason" for the firing of the co-hosts. There has been reference by CBC brass to Seven Days' alleged "lack of good taste" or "irresponsibility". But how do you measure these things? Certainly the general Canadian standards of taste have not been offended by Seven Days. Unless Mr. Ouimet is prepared to enforce a taste standard which is clearly not shared by Canadians in general, then his complaint on this score is hardly acceptable.

In defense of the CBC, it has been argued that "management has the right to manage," and that if the network chiefs want to dump a performer, they have every right to do so.

The rights of management apply even in a publicly-owned corporation such as the CBC. But management must also be responsible to its owners, which in the case of the CBC is each and every one of us.

It may be that Mr. Ouimet, in his wisdom, will be able to install new hosts for Seven Days who will do a better job than Watson and LaPierre, and produce an even more popular show. If he is not able to do this, then he should resign, because if management has the right to manage, the stockholders also have the right to hold management responsible for its actions.

As Hon. Judy LaMarsh has commented, the Seven Days fiasco is only "the tip of the iceberg" in the CBC's troubles. These troubles will be pinpointed in the forthcoming government white paper on broadcasting. There is growing suspicion that the CBC is overloaded with executive fat — the way the firings were handled suggests ample evidence of this — and that Messrs. Watson and LaPierre were dumped not because of indiscretions on Seven Days, but for their oft-repeated criticism of how the CBC is run under Mr. Ouimet.

SUGAR AND SPICE by Bill Smiley

This Family Taxes Us All

All across Canada these days, municipal councils have been wrestling with the arch-villain of all time, a mysterious monster called The Budget.

Although he is made up from a combination of concrete things like sewers and schools and streets, The Budget himself is an abstract thing. He is like The Devil. You can't see him or hear him or even smell him. You can't really understand him, but you know he is there: a blind, malignant creature that cannot be controlled.

You can fight him — and get a bloody nose. You can hammer at him, chisel at him, chop at him — and all you get are a broken hammer, a dull chisel and a blunted axe.

The Budget is like an octopus. He grows bigger every year. His appetite increases, his tentacles become longer and stronger and more strangling as he grows. And when you try to come to grips with him, he exudes a cloud of black (or red) ink which obscures him from view.

Of what ingredients is The Budget composed? Really, he's a two-headed monster, a regular Siamese twin.

On the one hand, it is just a big bundle of sugar and spice: new schools; new industries; a new library or community centre; wider streets; better lighting, sewage disposal and snow plowing. Progress, culture, civilization, comfort. At first glance it appears that The Budget is the most desirable thing man has dreamed up since The Devil.

And on the other hand, he is snags and snails and puppy-dog tails. That's what little towns are made of. And big towns too.

And the reason for all this, of course, is that The Budget, this big, ugly, unmanageable brute who is impervious to human feeling, fell in love, by some chemical accident, while a mere hulking lunk of a boy, with a girl called Milly Rate. Most of us know her as Mill.

She is just as unprepossessing as her husband. She is steely-eyed, relentless, unscrupulous and absolutely without mercy, charm, pity, looks, or any of the qualities we normally associate with that lovely creation known as the female of the species. I have known Mill Rate since she was a girl, and I am here to state, without apology, that she is a pig.

It's difficult to believe that such a union could produce progeny. But it did. His name is Taxes.

Taxes' career has been about what you would expect from such parents. He was an unpleasant child from the beginning. Unwanted, unloved, rejected at every turn, whiney, demanding.

He hasn't changed much, except that he's grown. He is now a big slob, over-fed, underworked, menacing if he doesn't get his allowance right on time, sulky if some of it is held back.

But he has a lot of promise. Around election time. He's going to cut the lawn, and wash the car, and paint the trim and smarten the old place up so you wouldn't know it.

But somewhere along the line, something goes haywire. He cuts the trees, paints the lawn, and washes the lake, and figures, after one year, that his allowance is not big enough.

For some reason — and it certainly isn't his winning personality — Taxes has become the most-talked-about man in town. Mayors develop dyspepsia, councilors coronaries, when they try to deal with this delinquent.

They can't quite handle him. He talks so glibly of government grants on outdoor toilet systems under the winter works program, and potential pot holes in the roads, and (with a heart-rending sob) of the people on welfare, that he bamboozles councilors with eyes like agates, and mayors with hearts of granite.

All I can say is that the municipal councils have my blessing as they strive to cope with Taxes, out of Mill Rate and The Budget.

Centennial Report

CENTENNIAL COMMISSIONER

Before the end of this year a full-length Canadian feature film will be released to Great Britain, the United States and other countries. It is certain to encourage people to visit our country during the 1967 Centennial.

The film, called Helicopter Canada, an hour-long Panavista production for wide screens, will be shown in our own cinemas during 1967.

Helicopter Canada is the first full length moving picture feature to be made entirely from a helicopter in flight anywhere in the world. It is an exciting coast-to-coast color sweep of Canada — its geography, its wildlife, its people and ways of life. It is being produced by the National Film Board of Canada for and with the aid of the Centennial Commission. Peter Jones is the producer and George Salverson is the script writer. The director - cameraman is Eugene "Jeep" Boyko of the National Film Board staff who had some interesting experiences filming this project across Canada from the open door of a helicopter.

Boyko was born in Saskatoon, has been a dishwasher, shipyard worker, private chauffeur in various parts of the country and he was a country-and-western singer in Saskatoon in 1937 when a broadcaster named Jack Wells tagged him with his nickname, Jeep, after a comic-strip creature.

In the 40's Boyko was a taxi driver in Vancouver when a passenger went on vacation leaving her camera in the cab. He used it to shoot a traffic accident and sold the pictures to a local paper for $5. This sent him into photography and he wound up at the National Film Board in 1951. Boyko's home, when he gets there, is in Lorraine, Quebec; he has a wife, one daughter, 10, and one son, 3.

By means of Jeep Boyko's camera, background narration, dialogue and sound effects, the viewer in the cinema audience will be making a trip across the country, discovering Canada as though he were in that helicopter. The 'copter, during shooting, was able to get as close to the face of anything as its blades permitted and hovered from six to 600 feet.

Boyko spent more than a year on the filming — a good deal of the time 500 feet up in the air, crash helmet on head, hanging out the side of a French-built turbine helicopter (the Alouette). In one year he shot 96,000 feet of film and travelled from Newfoundland to Victoria. An anti-vibration mount for the camera was a French-made unit, first used in the making of the French films "The Red Balloon" and "Voyage in a Balloon". It permits a picture while hovering vibration is eliminated in this clever device.

The helicopter camera shot the convoluted tubing and towers of a vast oil refinery complex at Edmonton, paddle wheelers, rising new buildings in western cities, the lush North Saskatchewan River Valley; in Montreal the helicopter made forays around the new skyscrapers; in Saskatchewan it caught a fast-moving freight train travelling through a Prairie town, a truck leaving a high dust plume behind it, down a road to a lone elevator standing stark against the prairie horizon.

In Newfoundland the camera made contact with a lighthouse keeper and a ship's skipper seeking guidance into the harbor, thus symbolizing the entry to Canada through her most eastern gateway.

The film's viewers will have the sensation of being virtually on the surface of the gorge beneath the Honeymoon Bridge at Niagara Falls, and being on a slow trip straight up the face of the bridal veil falls almost at arm's length. They will "ride the back" of a deer in flight, peek into the windows of Montreal skyscrapers and experience the sight and sound of stenographers at their work and stockbrokers in action. They will view skiers and mountain climbers, wheat farmers, miners and prospectors, lumbermen, assembly-line productions, football clubs, outdoor activities of various ethnic groups and of the first Canadians — the Indians.

Don't miss Helicopter Canada when it comes to your area in 1967.

SUSANNA'S FAMILY FARE

Write On Your Wall

DEAR SUSANNA: After painting a room or papering a wall, write the name of the colors used, and, the quantities, underneath the wall switch plate — for future reference. The left over paint will keep well in a tightly sealed glass jar, and it will be easy to see the amount and color.

Snap the neck of party balloons that are difficult to inflate over the cold water tap and fill with water. Then pour out water. This will stretch them sufficiently to take the huff and puff out of blowing them up.

Make a bath mitt from sound pieces of worn out bath towel to hold scraps of toilet soap. Do this by stretching a pocket to the palm of the mitt, to hold the small pieces of soap.

Two or three fasteners or even a short zipper will close the top. Saves soap and is pleasant for anyone in the family to use.

I always enjoy your column, Susanna, and consider you a better neighbor than I have around me. All the best to you and your informative corner in our paper.

J. M. C.

DEAR SUSANNA: If the young ones in your house need encouragement to sit and soak in the tub, introduce them to a submerged plastic bottle noises underneath a floating towel.

Don't give me that look until you've tried it. If bathing a fidgety child is your problem, you'll be glad you listened.

Let a handtowel float on the water between his knees. Use only narrow necked plastic bottles such as might have contained hand lotion or bath oil. Let him hold the empty bottle or bottles upright on the bottom of the tub, directly underneath the towel, and allow them to fill with water. Repeat ad infinitum.

Now do you see what is so fascinating? It's those gurgling noises that sound as though they came from the Hall of the Mountain King that get to him.

Mrs. Bea Radcliff

DEAR SUSANNA: Each week, as I enter the supermarket, I wheel over first thing to the frozen food bags provided by the store, and help myself to one.

This particular bag is not for a frozen food item (that comes later). Instead, it is an extra precaution container for the juicy red liver I always purchase in the self-serve section. You know, that's the package that always seems to get squashed and tipped in the buggy.

Since I've been doing this I haven't had a smeared glove or parcel in a carload.

DEAR SUSANNA: Due to the fact that I am a bit of an insomniac, and often get up in the middle of the night to wander about and check on things, I have devised a unique method for locating my bedroom slippers.

I cut a pair of designs out of a strip of luminous orange safety tape (that glows in the dark) and stick them to the outsides of my slippers, towards the front. Thus, I can locate them without turning on the light.

In fact, my feet are able to strike home almost as soon as they hit the floor, as the slippers are not only apparent, but the position of the tape indicates which one is for the left or right foot.

Link with Sahara

Housewives in England now cook with gas from the Sahara Desert, 2,500 miles away. Piped from the desert to a port in Algeria, the gas — compressed and chilled into liquid — is pumped aboard a ship going to London. Even after elaborate handling, the natural gas from the Sahara still costs less than half as much as some of the coal gas manufactured in Britain, says Reader's Digest.

Canadian-bred plants for climate-proven garden growing

By A. R. Buckley,
The Plant Research Institute,
Ottawa

Many horticultural societies and garden clubs are seriously thinking of starting, as centennial projects, gardens of plants raised in Canada. Why not follow suit by including at least a few plants of Canadian origin to which you can point with pride as your memento of the centennial year? One thing is sure, you won't have to coddle or cover most of these plants because nearly all have been bred for hardiness as well as for beauty.

If you want Canadian-bred ornamental shrub apples you have lots to choose from. Among those that are noteworthy are the centennial selections Almey, with rosy-purple star-studded flowers, and Royalty with deep purple foliage all summer long and rose-pink flowers in May. Both were raised on the prairies and, apart from spraying to protect them from caterpillars and greenfly, they need little care. Other native Canadians are Makamik and Baskatong, each with rose-pink flowers, developed at the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa, and Leslie and Strathmore, which are good flowering and fruiting kinds from the west.

Two good trees for shade are the new Greenspire linden, a beautiful shade tree with uniform growth selected from the little leaf linden (Tilia cordata) and Rowancroft Coral, a mountain ash raised in Meadowvale, Ontario. This rowan tree has salmon-coral berries instead of the usual bright-red ones and deeper green leaves than the common European type.

There are many choice shrubs of Canadian origin. Quite a number of these have been bred in Western Canada and are valued not only for their hardiness but because they are improvements on existing kinds. The Snow White spirea, a hybrid of the Korean spirea and the three-lobed spirea, has larger flowers than the common vanhouttei spirea but is hardy in areas where this shrub winter-kills. Fairy is what one might term a miniature vanhouttei spirea, because it is identical with this shrub in every respect but grows only two feet high. Both these new shrubs were raised in Dropmore, Manitoba.

Honeysuckles are usually such large coarse plants that they are best used for screening. However, two good Canadian ones, Crimsona, light pink, and Carleton, a deeper pink, are more compact and do not grow higher than five to eight feet. Dr. Skinner also raised a large number of mock-oranges, all of which are hardier than the common Virginal and Minnesota Snowflake. Good ones are Galahad, Patricia, and Purity, all medium-sized shrubs with large, fragrant, single white or creamy-white flowers. Silvia is from the Morden, Manitoba, experimental farm of the Canada Department of Agriculture, and has double white flowers on a shapely shrub with arching branches.

Baton Rouge and Eileen are new hydrid cherries that bloom early and produce abundant flowers on good bushy shrubs. Eileen has white flowers with pink tips, and Baton Rouge deep rose-pink flowers in very early spring.

Canada excels in its lilac introductions, many of which were bred at the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa. Among the best of these are Elinor, Isabella, and Fountain, with extremely fragrant, pink flowers, and Desdemona, with light-violet flowers. All of these have thick deeper green foliage than the European lilacs and flower a week later, thus prolonging the lilac season. Good varieties from the west are Mount Baker, a splendid white variety; Tom Taylor, double violet; Sister Justine, single white; and Charles Nordine, with large open upright, pale-blue panicles. From Ontario comes the largest flowered lilac of all, the deep-purple Frank Paterson, with individual flowers that measure an inch and a quarter across.

Two shrub roses that should be in every garden are Agnes, with deep-yellow flowers, and Wyasagaming, with fragrant, fully double, soft clear-rose flowers. Agnes was raised by Dr. William Saunders, the first director of the Central Experimental Farm, and the other rose in Manitoba.

If you wish to grow the more refined hybrid tea rose you will find many for your garden that were raised in this country. Miss Canada, with rose petals and a white reverse, was selected by nurserymen as the centennial rose. It was raised in British Columbia. Others are Jet Fire, dazzling orange red; Canadiana, bright yellow; and Halloween, a yellow-orange color. Patricia Macoun is about the hardiest of rambler roses and needs no more protection than mounding with earth. It has a profusion of double creamy-white flowers at the end of June.

Many plants for your flower border are varieties that have been bred in Canada. Name any one of your favorite flowers and you will find that there is a variety that has been bred in this country. Good irises are Armour Bright, vivid orange; Elizabeth of England, light blue; Blue Ballet, blue; and Candy Capers, one of the new fringed types. Your craving for Siberian irises can easily be satisfied by growing Caeser and Tropic Seas, both of which originated in a garden near Montreal, and some of the Preston hybrids, such as Rideau, Gatineau and Ottawa. Our Canadian breeders have excelled in lily varieties. These range from the fighter squadron and stenographer series developed by Miss Isabella Preston, which contain such beautiful varieties as Brenda Watts, Grace Marshall, and Spitfire, to the modern Aurelian trumpet types raised at Vineland, Ontario, at the University of Saskatchewan, by amateur breeders in Ontario, and many others. Best of these now growing in our Plant Research Institute Test Gardens are Regina, yellow; Galahad, light yellow; and Starlight, white with orange center, from Vineland; Edith Cecilia, pink, Primrose Lady, light cream, and Burnished Rose, deep rose, from University of Saskatchewan; Ruby, ruby red, and Flaming Youth, Toronto; and Meadow Lark, spotted yellow, from Guelph.

New Shasta daisies such as Miss Canada and Elsie Gilbert, a wonderful race of hardy outdoor mums from Brandon and Morden, Manitoba, and from Lethbridge, Alberta, beautiful mound-type perennial asters from Royal Botanic Garden at Hamilton, and the famous Morden lythrums, are all Canadian and grace many gardens throughout the world today.

It would be no problem to extend this list far beyond the confines of a short article, for there are many other beautiful plants of Canadian origin. Look for them in the catalogues and you will never regret trying some of your own home-bred flowers.

Safety handbook for users of pesticides

A "Safety Handbook on Pesticides" has been released to the general public by the Canadian Agricultural Chemicals Association in Toronto.

Two years in preparation as a co-operative project of industry scientists, it is a comprehensive manual of safe practice for anyone using pesticides around the home or farm.

"In view of the controversy that has raged over the use of pest control products and hazard that may arise from incorrect use, this factual pesticide safety handbook fills a crying need", said A. L. Havard, president of the Association.

"We wrote this practical instruction manual not only for farmers and gardeners but also for the agriculturalists, extension workers and schools. Companies will supply it to their dealers," he continued.

It describes pesticide formulation and action, hazards, safety rules and safety equipment, how to prepare a mix and use a sprayer in the orchard, garden, field, greenhouse, poultry house and barn. It covers aircraft spraying and first aid.

Whether spraying seeds, plants or animals, there are five keys to safe pesticide use, says the handbook: These are:

- Read the label;
- Use as instructed;
- Be clean;
- Store safely;
- Dispose of the container.

One should wear washable clothing and wash face and hands after spraying.

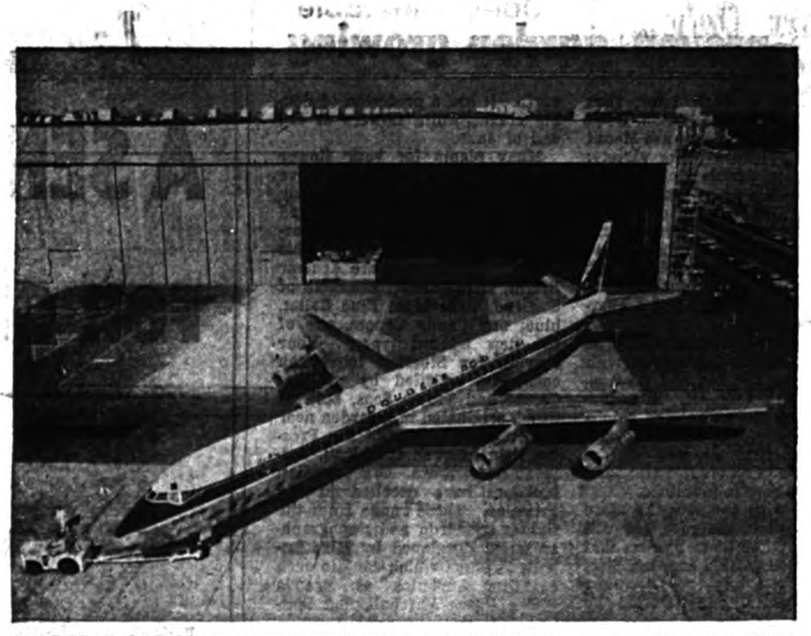
Do not re-use containers. Bury them.



WORLD'S LARGEST JETLINER FOR AIR CANADA — The Douglas DC-8 Super 61, largest Jetliner in the world, capable of carrying 196 passengers, has been ordered by Air Canada to accommodate increasing numbers of passengers on the airline's transcontinental and trans-Atlantic routes. The huge airliner, recently unveiled at the Douglas Aircraft Division plant in Long Beach, Cal., will make its maiden flight this spring. Four of the large jets, with fuselages 37 feet longer than conventional DC-8's, will be delivered to Air Canada in 1967.

The Regional School And Agriculture

The Regional School planned for Cowansville, by all accounts, is setting a remarkable precedent. I was talking to Mr. Lloyd MacKean, Director-General of the Bedford District Protestant School Commission the other day. He told me that three organizations — the Protestant School Commission, the Catholic School Commission and the Municipality are pooling their resources to build one large school complex.

By sharing lab facilities, workshops, and so on, both systems will be able to offer a greater choice of courses to the students. Also, the opportunity will be there to take some courses in the second language.

The Town of Cowansville will build its new swimming pool, hockey rink and art center on the school site. During the day these facilities will be under the authority of the school. After five o'clock, they will be controlled by the municipality.

Agricultural courses are being planned for the new school. During the first two years (first cycle) of High School, an appreciation of agriculture will be worked into the curriculum. Then, in the Second Cycle the subject will be offered at three levels: first, for the academic student who will go on to university; a second for the technically inclined student; and a third at a vocational level for the student who finds the going tough.

Thus the planners are attempting to avoid the pitfalls of the past, when too often High School Agriculture became a student's last resort. Their plan appears to meet the fundamental requirement that every student be given a chance to do his best, while still recognizing that Agriculture, and Farming in particular, has a real place for top students.

On the invitation of the Quebec Farmers' Association, many of those interested in agricultural education from around the province gathered at Macdonald College recently for a "brainstorming" session.

Painless branding of livestock

A painless method of branding livestock with intense cold, rather than with heat, has been developed by a U.S. scientist. Dr. R. K. Farrell of U.S.D.A.'s Agricultural Research Service has successfully tested freeze-branding on a wide variety of animals, fish and birds. Domestic game, experimental, and marine animals have been branded.

In addition to being painless, freeze-branding causes less hide damage than hot branding. Another advantage of freeze-branding is the growth of white hair and skin at the brand site, making the brands easy to spot at long distances. The brands turn white because the extreme cold destroys the pigment-producing cells (melanocytes) in the skin. There would be no advantage in branding white animals with this technique as compared with conventional branding, although the mark is distinguishable at short distances.

NEW FEDERAL PRICE SUPPORT BENEFITS ALL MILK PRODUCERS

AVERAGE RETURN $4.00 PER HUNDRED

The new Federal Government policy of price support and direct payments will give all dairy farmers increased returns for their milk, whether they ship manufacturing milk, fluid milk or cream. The new policy is designed to bring economic stability to the dairy industry and prevent runaway consumer price increases by ensuring adequate supplies of dairy products.

HOW IT WORKS FOR THE FARMER

The Federal Government will pay the farmer 75c for each hundredweight of manufacturing milk with a 3.5% butterfat content. Another 10c will be put in reserve to assist the export of by-products and surpluses.

B.
The Federal Government, through export assistance and direct purchases of such products as butter, will create a demand which will enable processors to pay $3.25 per hundredweight of manufacturing milk with a 3.5% butterfat content. However, the government has no authority to set the prices processors pay producers. It is in your own interest to negotiate the best possible price for your milk through your farm organization.

METHOD OF PAYMENT

MANUFACTURING MILK SHIPPERS: You will receive a direct payment from the Federal Government of 75 cents per hundredweight on all milk. Your payment will be made monthly by cheque from Ottawa.

FLUID MILK PRODUCERS: You will receive 75 cents a hundredweight on all milk over 120 per cent of the amount for which you receive fluid prices. For instance, if your dairy pays you fluid prices on 10,000 pounds in a certain month, you will receive the government payment on all milk over 12,000 pounds. Cheques will be mailed once a month from Ottawa directly to you.

CREAM PRODUCERS: You will receive 21.43 cents per pound of butterfat (the equivalent of 75 cents per hundredweight of milk with a 3.5% butterfat content). Because time is required to complete the registration of producers and to set up a reporting system, your cheques will go out from Ottawa every three months.

NOTE:
Because the fat content of milk varies, the 75 cent direct payment is based on a standard 3.5 per cent butterfat content in milk. This works out to 21.43 cents per pound of butterfat. If your milk tests 4 per cent, then your payment will be four times 21.43 or about 85 cents per hundredweight. On the other hand if your milk tests 3% then your payment will be three times 21.43 or about 64 cents per hundredweight.

REMEMBER TO REGISTER

Milk producers must be registered with the Agricultural Stabilization Board in Ottawa and be assigned a registration number. Manufacturing milk and cream shippers who participated in last year's supplementary payment program already have a registration number and do not need to register again. But fluid milk producers are not registered; they should do so as soon as possible. To register, get the proper form from your dairy, manufacturing plant, cheese factory, or creamery. Fill it out and send it off to Ottawa. If you ship to more than one plant, you do not need to register twice but you must inform all outlets of your registration number so they can relay the information to Ottawa. Remember it will be impossible to participate in the program if you are not registered.

Texstyles

Remember when slacks were just an odd pair of pants? Once upon a time, men wore slacks to give their suit pants a rest. In those days, "leisure" was just a fancy word that not many people could afford.

Today, with shorter working hours, longer week-ends, community sports, country clubs, swimming pools and casual suburban living, leisure is a way of life that requires a special clothing of its own.

Slack styles for men and boys are a booming part of the male fashion industry. There are dress slacks, casual slacks, knickers, western style jeans, bell bottoms, dungarees, continental slacks, ivy leagues and hipsters, in everything from the finest wools to the toughest denims.

The advent of durable press treatment, by which the final smooth, pressed shape of slacks is heat set for the life of the garment, has spurred development of fabrics and styling. Durable press is showing up everywhere, on the job or the golf course.

Durable creases in wool slacks are not as new but the concept of shape retention for the whole garment as now applied to man-made fabric blends is the most exciting technical development of this era, and it got its start in men's slacks.

Canadian textile mills are turning out more blends designed especially for the oven curing process that sets the slacks in their final smooth shape. Manufacturers are putting more emphasis on new styling in casual slacks, while makers of men's tailored wool slacks are competing with new patterns and colors.

More light and medium shades, even whites, are being shown in wools. Checks and plaids are offered to co-ordinate with sports blazers. The new knicker styles for golfers are slimmer than previous sports knickers.

Makers of casual slacks are offering more matched jacket and pants sets of cotton/nylon or of cotton / polyester durable press blends. A golf jacket that can be folded and stored in a golf bag without wrinkling may not improve a man's game, but he'll look a lot better on the course.

Streamlining is the main theme in slacks for boys this year. Gone are the tricky pen pockets, button down loops and heavy frontier seaming, in favor of simplified smoother fit. Colors are dark, but lively, for boys; burgundy, green, dark blue and even black are forecast as favorites. Durable press can make even dress pants more practical for youngsters. Washability is, of course, a prime advantage but the new slimmed down styles promote a neater appearance around the clock.

Young Thief

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

A young Chinese Christian was asked why he did not take advantage of an opportunity to steal a sum of money. His answer was, "I would have to live with a thief the rest of my life."

In old China parents accepted responsibility for bad behaviour of a child and often a father was punished for a boy's theft. When a son or daughter get into trouble about stealing or anything else, father and mother are likely to be upset and ashamed. How did their child give in to temptation? Most parents know that bitter reproaches piled on the young offender are worse than useless. He needs to feel that his parents will see him through, help him replace the stolen goods, and make a fresh start.

Dealing with the young thief is puzzling to parents. Often a trained social worker or juvenile police officer can help both parents and the boy himself discover some of the reasons behind his mistake.

Jimmie White has been caught by a plainclothesman in the act of stealing a pocket-knife off a display counter. There were several boys who planned a thieving expedition and Jimmie was rather flattered that the older boys included him. He had been lonely and now he was one of the gang.

He knew it was wrong to steal, but it was sort of a game. The big boys assured Jimmie that it wasn't risky. The "loot" in penknives they went off with was not very great.

Now he has been caught Jimmie doesn't know why he was such a fool to be led astray. Bitterly he agrees that "Crime doesn't pay!" His parents can direct him in making good for his share of the loss to the store. Likely he will refuse to "squeal" on the other boys but it is important that he should receive help in finding more suitable companions.

Boys in their teens naturally crave activity and fellowship. Lads who are in a Scout Troop, a Y.M.C.A. group, a Junior Farmers' organization or some other constructive youth group have fun under able leadership. They very seldom get into trouble stealing because they are occupied with other interests.

In many cases of persistent stealing, social workers or officers of a Juvenile Court have discovered after careful study that the offender is upset emotionally. His great lack is the knowledge that his parents love him and accept him as he is. The child who feels he is unwanted or a failure, may take to stealing to "get even". Life has given him a raw deal, so why should he care if he brings disgrace to his family?

Boys and girls from homes in the low income bracket sometimes steal because there are things they want to own which they have not the money to buy. A boy may covet a hunting knife "like the other fellows have." Sometimes a girl, not old enough to earn money baby-sitting, steals money to treat her chum to a movie.

Whatever the cause of stealing, the young offender needs to be given a new start, and continued moral support and affection. No effort at understanding and guidance is too great to salvage a youngster from the shadowy path of stealing.

He's made a mistake — a serious one. Parents, teachers and friends should work together not to humiliate him further, but to see he doesn't repeat the offence. Faith and real affection can help him in this time of need without making light of the seriousness of a black mark against his good name which stealing makes; a youth needs to be given guidance in returning and making good anything he has taken. Many a fine adult citizen had one youthful thieving episode.

Foster Parents' Plan (P.O. Box 65, Station "B", Montreal) has announced that 10-year-old Nerida Cruzado, the first Peruvian girl enrolled at its recently opened office at Chimbote, has been financially "adopted" by Hon. Paul Martin, Secretary of State for External Affairs, and Mrs. Martin. Like over 7,200 other Canadians, the Martins pay $16 monthly toward their Foster Child's support, and will correspond regularly with the child, with translations both ways supplied by the Plan. Nerida lives with 8 relatives in a crowded hut of woven reeds with earthen floor. She is one of hundreds in this tragically neglected area for whom the Plan hopes to find Foster Parents.

You can wash an electric blanket either by hand or by machine if you handle it carefully to avoid breaking wires.

Don't have it dry-cleaned because cleaning solvents can injure insulation, the Ontario Hydro home service bureau says.

If there are laundering instructions with your blanket or with your automatic washer, follow them.

Otherwise, if you are working with an automatic washer, pretreat soiled binding or spots with a paste-like solution of detergent. Cover the plug with a face cloth to protect it when it bangs against the tub.

Soak Blanket

If you have a top-loading machine, fill the washer with luke-warm water and let detergent dissolve completely. Soak the blanket for 15 minutes, turning it twice. Agitate for no more than a minute, let the machine drain and spin, then fill it for rinse.

Stop agitation, soak five minutes, drain and repeat for a second rinse, adding a fabric softener if you want to. After a final spin stretch the blanket gently to original size.

With a front-loading washer, add a low suds detergent. Fill with water to below door level. Put blanket in and continue filling the tub. Stop tumbling action immediately. Soak blanket 15 minutes, allow to tumble twice. Rinse as in top loader.

For hand washing, pre-treat the blanket as you would for machine washing. Use a laundry tub or tub of wringer-washer with agitator post removed.

Fill the tub with luke-warm water, dissolve detergent. Soak the blanket 15 minutes. Squeeze suds through it gently for three minutes. Do not twist or wring. Squeeze water out by hand.

Rinse twice, squeezing after each rinse. Stretch to size.

Dry on Lines

Hang the wet blanket lengthwise on clothes-line to dry, preferably across two lines 12 to 18 inches apart. Cover the lines with old sheets or towels to prevent ridges in the blanket. Don't use clothes pins. As blanket dries, keep re-shaping it so the wires will be straight.

You may partially dry an electric blanket in a dryer. Preheat four bath towels in the dryer. Fold the heated towels in and around the blanket. Tumble together at the highest temperature for 15 minutes. Take them out of the dryer and finish the blanket on clothes lines as above.

Premier Lesage addresses gathering at Auditorium

"Those who want to vote for the Liberal team must vote for my candidates — and my candidate in this County is Dr. Zoël Saindon," said the Hon. Jean Lesage, premier of Quebec, at the civic auditorium here Monday afternoon. "A vote against him is a vote against me. And no other candidates who present themselves before you can use my name; I do not recognize them as my candidates," he said, martialling his words.

The premier left St. Eustache earlier in the day, stopped briefly for a rally here, then proceeded to Brownsburg later in the afternoon, and during this visit, was met by executives and personnel at the C-I-L offices. His destination in the evening was Montebello.

Reviewing the Past

Some 300 persons were in the audience, to hear Premier Lesage give a 20-minute oration, and to meet him personally in the hall.

"Since 1960 my team has gained a lot of experience, promoting a 'renewal program' in this province. In 1962 we initiated a measure which was never included in the mandate you gave us in 1960 — the nationalization of electricity. We submit to you now, in 1966, our projects for tomorrow, for the benefit of all citizens, and we are confident of your judgment," continued Mr. Lesage.

Costs and Taxes

"We will have a strong Quebec, if we have an educated Quebec. You say that education is costly. Well, everything is expensive, hospital insurance included. Student grants have risen to $10 a month per pupil in the 16-18 age group. Teachers' salaries have doubled since 1960, the standard of education is considerably higher, and education at the elementary and secondary levels is now free. . . Everything costs money, and I, as minister of finance, am the first to recognize that fact.

"Taxes have gone up," the premier conceded, "but at least the people are getting some value for their money. We have acted democratically. Do you want us to halt the progress of Quebec?

"Taxes are the fruit of our natural resources, of our production; they serve to give benefits to those unable to produce — the sick, the aged, the incapacitated — and to those who have not started to produce — our youth. I lay the situation as it exists, before a serious populace, and the question is this: Can you say in your heart and soul, can you say in all conscience, that your situation has not improved since 1960? Do you not want it to improve still further in the next few years?

"In Argenteuil," continued Mr. Lesage, "you have the opportunity this year to play in active part in the upsurge of Quebec Province. All the candidates of the Liberal party have been chosen in the 108 constituencies; we are the first party in the contest to have done so. To become a part of my team, a man is required to be of integrity, a man of achievement, a worker. Dr. Saindon possesses these qualities and it is he, and he alone, who is my candidate in this County. Vote for Saindon — he is one of your own number, and of mine too . . . I need him."

On arriving at the city hall, the premier was invited to sign the "golden book", and after his address he conversed and shook hands with many in the auditorium. . . The visitor was introduced and thanked by the candidate, Mayor Dr. Z. Saindon.

'Contradictory' political meeting seen unlikely

Following the decision in a majority of other constituencies throughout the province, it appears there will be no contradictory meeting following the Argenteuil nominations next Sunday afternoon.

Last week, Mtre. Roger Lajeunesse, U.N. candidate, stated that due to the meeting being held on a Sunday, he would not take part, and this week, on page 3, there appears a statement from Independent candidate André Lefebvre, advising the population of his reason for not participating.

Argenteuil was one of the last few counties to continue this old practice which, while a highlight for the partisans, was not in recent years a popular feature among many of the candidates.

It appears that unless there are more candidates to enter the race, the proposed meeting Sunday afternoon will be abandoned.

LHS groups enjoy visit to capital

On Tuesday of last week, around 52 Lachute High School students from the two Grade 9 classes visited Ottawa on an instructive tour, kindly arranged for them by Mr. Roger Regimbal, M.P. Accompanied by two members of the staff, Principal R. Bailly and Miss M. McLachlan, the group visited the Royal Canadian Mint, the War Museum, the National Art Gallery, and they made a tour of the Parliament Buildings and spent approximately an hour viewing the Commons and the Senate while in session.

Earlier this year, between 50 and 60 pupils from Grade 10, escorted by Mr. G. Demerson and Mr. J. Vokral of the school staff, followed the same itinerary, in a similar tour arranged by co-operation of Mr. Regimbal.

Rally held for Concerts membership

Organizers and canvassers active this week to increase enrolment

The 19th annual campaign to enrol members in the Community Concerts Association opened with a rally of the organizers and canvassers Tuesday evening in the Golf Club chalet.

Around forty workers were in attendance, including representatives from Lachute, Brownsburg, St. Andrews, Cushing, Hawkesbury and the vicinity. The president, Mme Jacques Bedard, chaired the campaign meeting, and the membership joint-chairmen, Mlle Juliette Rodrigue and Mrs. G. R. Rigby, with Jacques Bedard, secretary, discussed details of the campaign. Present from headquarters to lend enthusiasm, ideas and constructive aid, was Mr. Norman Lower, representing Columbia Artists Corporation.

Mr. Gaston Laroche, of Lachute, was added to the directorate; and Mr. Mac Walker (succeeded this year by Mr. Gabriel Valois) was thanked for his good services as concert chairman.

One of the keystones of the season's plans, is the pre-engagement each year of one outstanding program. The remaining two are left for later selection when the campaign is completed and the budget for artists is definitely established. . . A major attraction already booked by the directors for their 1966-67 season is Lola Montes and her troupe of Spanish dancers. This troupe will appear during February, 1967.

Headquarters of the Association during campaign week are situated at the premises of Deslauriers & Marcil, 498 Main Street — by courtesy of the management. Campaign workers may be contacted there, in person or by telephone, during business hours all this week.

How It Started — How It Works

The Community Concert Plan was instituted at a time when great concerts were given up as a hopeless cause. The reason: the system for selling tickets at a box-office. The public demanded the most famous stars on the concert stage or they failed to show up at the box-office. The fees of these stars made necessary a large auditorium and a large population to draw from. Only in major cities could such a situation be met and concerts for smaller communities became impossible.

The Community Concert Association conducts a one-week membership campaign during which those interested in music of all kinds may join for the mutual benefit of all. This creates a closed association and a fund in the bank with which to buy artists. There is no profit and no loss. The local committee selects the artists for the season and democratically represents the membership. Thus both the desired "stars" and the desired music are obtained. Whether the program is a bargain or costly, the cost to each member is the same. Concerts have become an established institution under this plan in over a thousand communities of all sizes on this continent.

Nomination papers in the provincial election must be accompanied by the candidate's picture and birth certificate. Moreover, candidates of the recognized parties must furnish the Returning Officer with a document signed by the party chief, attesting to the fact that he is the official candidate of that party. . . A few new regulations among the many adopted in this election.

The national census, taken every five years by the federal Bureau of Statistics, will take place between June 1 and June 10. The last census was taken in 1961. Richard Valois, N.P. (besides being District Returning Officer for the election) is census officer for Argenteuil, which is divided into five districts for the purpose, each under an appointed commissioner.

Last year, 27 persons drowned in Canada over the Victoria Day week-end. This year, that number can be drastically reduced, even eliminated, if the thousands of people spending the Victoria Day week-end on, in or around the water, will obey the simple rules of safety.

The Union Nationale organization has two committee rooms operating in the constituency, for election campaigning purposes. One is situated at the former Cottingham Farm, Hill Head (now Thomas Creswell's), and the other is at the property of Col. Gaston Leblanc, 16 Island Lake (telephone 226-5060).

Over 1,150 children from local schools have been, or will be, guests of the Lachute District Shrine Club at the Shrine Circus, currently playing at the Montreal Forum, until Saturday of this week. With the exception of transportation for retarded and handicapped children, all other school children were transported to the circus by buses supplied by the various school boards; they came from the majority of schools in the County.

Boat capsized in rapids, two drowned at Carillon

Laurent Lanthier, 31, and Jean-Marie Laurin, 33, both of St. Antoine des Laurentides, were drowned in the Ottawa River near Carillon around 4 p.m. on Sunday. A search for their bodies was being conducted by members of the Q.P.P. and other volunteers.

According to Sgt. J. P. Dallaire, officer-in-charge of the Argenteuil detachment, the two men were fishing on the river below the dam and had dropped anchor, when the swift current apparently caught the anchor and started to pull the bow of the boat under the water. A bystander shouted to the men to cut the anchor rope, but rather than do this, one of the men started the motor, and the craft immediately overturned. Both men started to swim towards a nearby boat occupied by Fernand Labelle, of Montreal, who threw a life preserver to them, but they were unable to reach either the preserver or the boat, and sank beneath the surface. Mr. Labelle stated to police that he was unable to do a great deal more, as he had his young family in the boat and was concerned for their safety.

The craft was recovered about 500 feet downstream from the Museum, and between the boat and car, the owner was traced and the identity of the two men established. Life jackets were found in the boat after it was recovered.

An inquest into the fatality will be held following recovery of the bodies.

Family to observe bicentenary

Descendants of the Steeves family, which came to the Maritimes from Germany about 200 years ago, are planning a preliminary reunion this year, and a grand celebration in July, 1967. These descendants estimate their number at over 100,000.

Mr. Willard M. Steeves of Lachute has received notice accordingly, from one of the members of this family in New Brunswick. The communication is preluded in this manner:

"To all members of the Steeves Family, descendants of Heinrich Stief: By unanimous decision of Steeves meetings held recently at various locations within Albert County, the 200th anniversary of the coming of Heinrich Stief, his wife Rachel, with their seven sons, to the Petitcodiac Valley in 1766, must be fittingly observed. . . "

The two-day preliminary reunion in July this year will take place at Hillsborough, N.B.

Regimbal 'at heart of party strategy'

Ottawa — Roger E. Regimbal, M.P. for Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes, has been named assistant deputy whip of the Conservative Opposition. From his new seat in the House of Commons, he will be at the very heart of party strategy and activity.

This is a new indication of confidence in the freshman member who, a few weeks ago, was elected chairman of the Caucus Committee on Labour — says a news release from the Progressive Conservative Party.

At Brownsburg

In the municipal elections at Brownsburg on Monday, Robert Tomalty was elected with 310 votes against his opponent, Gaston Lacasse, 233, for Seat 4. He succeeds retiring councillor Gerald Vowles.

On the previous Wednesday, nomination day, Viateur Lafleur was elected by acclamation to replace Councillor Germain Doth, in Seat No. 6.

Township of Chatham

Contests for three vacancies were held at St. Philippe, Township of Chatham.

Réal Demers defeated Claude Ouellette, 259 to 225, for Seat 4. Wesley Morrow won over Adam Meyer, 248 to 212, for Seat 5. Gaétan Léveillé was the victor over Basil Clark, 282 to 221, for Seat 6.

Lachute has been placed on the dubious "honor list" — having had the third highest number of accidents in 1965 for a community in its classification (from 5,000 to 10,000 population) for all Canada. The figures were received by Lachute's Police Director Réal Chartrand, who stated that, while he had no wish to make Lachute's police department notorious throughout the province, this was yet another reason to continue the clamp-down on speeding and traffic violations.

According to the figures released by the Canadian Highway Safety Council, a total of 372 accidents were investigated; 204 of these were accidents in which damage exceeded $100; in 22 of these, injuries were sustained, and the balance is a portion of the accidents in which damage was under $100. Director Chartrand pointed out that the only accidents reported to Quebec in which damage was under 100, were mishaps in which a charge was laid against a driver, or where claims were made on insurance companies. The only bright spot in the report concerning Lachute, was that there were no fatal accidents or traffic deaths.

The leaders for the dubious award of having the worst traffic accident record in the country, are Chateauguay Centre and Laprairie — making all three "leaders" and a number of close followers from Quebec, a major contributing factor in our high automobile insurance rates.

While talking with Director Chartrand at mid-morning on Monday, we were interrupted by no fewer than three persons and one telephone call, all from people laying complaints about the speeding "tickets" they had received over the week-end, and making various threats of what would happen in the event the ticket was not "fixed".

In checking with a desk clerk, it was found that from Friday until early Monday morning, 21 traffic tickets had been issued, 15 of these for speeding (anything from 41 to 53 m.p.h. in a 30-mile zone), the majority being in excess of 45 m.p.h. From these and the following figures, it is hardly justifiable for citizens, or those from other communities, to complain of the number of traffic tickets given out.

Following are the figures for revenue from tickets on speeding, stop-sign and parking violations issued by the Lachute police department in a one-year period:

June	1,336.
July	1,126.
August	747.
September	483.45
October	674.35
November	675.
December	350.
January, 1966	447.50
February	710.20
March	939.80
April	1,859.40

Police Director Chartrand pointed out that the odd amounts are the result of charges for registered mail, etc. With a traffic record such as that held by Lachute, the reports are nothing to brag about concerning fines and their effectiveness with possible exception of the month of April. It is to be hoped that this increase of vigilance continues, and that citizens of the community will cooperate with the police in making Lachute "a safer place in which to live". Director Chartrand added that the record so far in 1966 is not much better and that to date, we have two traffic fatalities.

"If our citizens and transient motorists insist on continuing to break the law, we on the police force have no alternative but to enforce it. We are not out to persecute anyone, and we are not out to give Lachute a bad name —but we feel it is our duty to make this a safe place for our citizens to live and for our children to play in. We hope our residents will be the first ones to realize this, and co-operate in making our efforts easier for all — the policemen and the would-be traffic offenders."

Country-wide '65 records shed unfavorable light

Delegates attend H & S Federation

The Quebec Federation of Protestant Home and School Associations held its annual meeting May 14, in the Normandy Room of the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal. Delegates from Lachute Home and School who attended were — Mrs. S. Doig, secretary, Mrs. A. M. Vessie, and Mr. W. H. Smith, program chairman.

At this meeting Mrs. Vessie was named Area Director for Laurentides West, in 1966-67.

Theme of the meeting was "Quebec's Changing Educational Scene."

Plans shaping for Lachute Fair June 15-16-17-18

Preparations for Lachute Spring Fair '66 are shaping up in scheduled order, according to Manager Ken Riley, who is pleased with the outlook and especially optimistic over new names in the entry list.

Among the livestock will be cattle entries from two notable specialists, Windfields Farms at Willowdale, Ont., and Massey Ferguson Farms at Milliken, Ont. These are only two of the names mentioned, but they are significant of the ever-spreading interest in Lachute's annual show. Altogether, around closing date, Mr. Riley reports a heavy entry list.

A special feature of entertainment for opening night, Wednesday, June 15, will be Paul Riddell's Helldrivers, featuring thrill-stunts on the cinder track. The following nights will highlight attractions engaged by the service clubs for grandstand entertainment — the Rotary Club on Thursday with their tug-of-war endurance test and, in lighter vein, the CFRA Happy Wanderers. Friday evening is Lions' Night, with entertainment to be later announced. And on Saturday, the Richelieu harness racing events in the afternoon, and the Legion performance in the evening, including the famed Black Watch bands and majorette routines.

Further details will be forthcoming, but at this stage, the Lachute Spring Fair '66 looks like a top number for county fair-goers and visitors alike.

Week's Epigram

There are two kinds of discontent in this world: the discontent that works, and the discontent that wrings its hands. The first gets what it wants, and the second loses what it has.

Laurentian Chorus gets charter

A very successful "Parade" entertainment at the Cinema Lachute was given Saturday evening by the new Laurentian Chorus of Barbershoppers. At this event John Houseman, Area Counsellor, Montreal, presented an official charter to the group as the Lachute, Que., Chapter of SPEBQSA (Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America). Mr. Houseman (left) hands the charter to George Witham, president. The first public appearance of this group drew a full-house attendance, and the "afterglow" reception and gathering held afterwards at the Masonic Hall was attended by approximately 300 enthusiasts, visiting songsters and well-wishers.

By BOB ATCHISON

Fishing is excellent, that is, if you can forget the weather and you aren't "chicken". The May 7 week-end, Dave Fletcher and Don McDonald spent the night up at Sixth Range — a cold week-end it was, but some fish were caught. One in particular made it worth while. Friday night nothing had been taken, so they bedded down in their summer cottage. This may sound like solid comfort, but when a cottage has been closed up all winter, it gets a mite frosty. Getting up at 4 a.m. Saturday, they found their boat filled with ice from the water that had seeped in. They fished for a couple of hours with spinning gear, but caught only two very small greys. Finally Dave tried the fly outfit, and a very small Black Gnat Caddis did the trick — a 3-lb. red. Only the one, but this sure was worth it, don't you think?

Now for the spots to fish: First of all, Silver Lake is best right now; wonderful reds and greys are being taken on spinning gear. The water is very cold, so the fish are up right near the top. Then Louisa is perking right along; nothing large as yet, but it won't be too long before some good ones come out of this spot. Macdonald is very good, both for trout and good bass. It's early for the latter, but don't look a gift-fish in the mouth; and with the water very cool, these fish will have no "spot" on them at this time, so they will make good eating. Sir John has given up a couple of very good greys to date (May 11). At last this lake is being fished the way it should be, really covered (not just throwing a line over and hoping). This you cannot do, with this particular lake; go look for them. I also heard of a couple of very good grey trout caught at Lac de Cerf, 12 lbs. and over — real monsters, but I don't think you have to go that far to get some reasonably good ones.

Now for the creeks. These have all been very good. I heard of a 2-lb. brown trout taken from one of the streams, A nice fish. Dunany is good, even though most people don't wander around to fish this water. They seem to stay in a couple of spots, and consequently miss the really good fishing. Another thing I have mentioned before, you can't fish such spots at this time of the year with a big sinker — the fish aren't moving too much, so why not drift down to where they are? Another thing, why use hooks so large? The smaller hooks will hold just as well, and in most cases much better. The North River is not really into the swing of things yet, but it won't be too long. A couple of good trout have been taken here too, one just below the Wilson dam, 1½ lbs.

The Ottawa River is also starting to pay off, but with the swift, high water, catches are limited.. The doré season should create a lot of activity down around Carillon very soon. This doesn't seem logical; we assume that trout cannot live in polluted waters, and this is true in most cases, but there have been brown trout taken out of the Ottawa within the last few weeks. One of these was over 5 lbs, and you can imagine the fight that came along with it. I sure would have liked to get this one on light tackle!

A lot of the boys are out varmint shooting, and to say they are having productive results, is putting it mildly. There are a lot of groundhogs around, far too many to be comfortable for a farmer with livestock. We have had a few feeds of these animals, and I believe I have converted a couple of other people to this edible treat. It seems a crime to destroy good meat and just leave it to rot. Most people seem to think that all wild meat is unclean and unfit; this is not so, far from it. Most wild creatures are much cleaner than our own domesticated animals. Certainly there is no comparison between a partridge and a chicken; and this applies to most of the animals. As for eating groundhog, if you tried it, you would be pleasantly surprised. However, all "fat" must be cleaned off; as you know, wild animals do not carry actual fat, but rather a tallow, and this is not for eating.

We are still feeding the birds, and among the sparrows coming in for food, we have the White Throated, Chipping, White Crowned, and a few of the Vespers. Along with these there are the juncoes, and of course, the blackbirds, redwings, grackles, etc. It is well worth putting out a little feed for them at this time; even a suet stick will not go amiss. I know, with ours, it doesn't take long for it to disappear. With the lingering cold weather, these summer birds need help, and this is about the only thing we can do for them.

Saw a little dog which had been bought supposedly as a good watchdog. The former owner had stated it would obey any command. This I can believe — the pup was plain scared, timid and nervous; you wonder how people can be so inhuman to animals. One only had to speak to this pup, and that was it — it took a fit of shivering, such as you've never seen. However, it is now in very good hands, and I know the dog will no longer lack affection. They love us, these canines, so the only thing we can give them back is a little care and kindliness.

In this County we have at least two young calf moose around; one of them was seen last week. I'm not telling just where, and I think you understand the reason. It was not too far from town, however; and we may also have a couple more in the vicinity. There are newborn arrivals of other wildlife species all around; but once more, don't go picking them up! Your help is not needed; the mother, of whatever species, is not liable to abandon her young.

How many of you boat owners have checked your lifesaving gear? Before putting your boats into service, this is a must. Make sure you get a government-approved jacket too, don't try and save a couple of dollars by buying something inferior. I've noticed a number of jackets on the market, very cheap, but these are NOT approved, so don't take a chance. . . Then again, maybe your life isn't worth more than a few dollars anyway.

Then check your ropes, especially the anchor rope; this may save you some trouble. See that all fittings, bollards, etc., are firm in the boat; and above all, if you are going to run at night, check the lighting system. It's easy to replace burned-out bulbs right now, but it's rough trying to do this when you are afloat at night. And this I've mentioned many times — don't act as if you own the lake, others want to use it too. How about you fathers giving your lads a lesson in boating safety? The lack of safety-consciousness evident in some drivers, both young and old, sure is hair-rising at times. I don't know why it is, but most people think, because another boat is running slowly, they must show off, cutting in towards the slower-moving craft; this could bring you a fine, you know. There are laws governing the waters, just as there are on the highways.

Another case against the use of detergents has come up, again in the U.S. Actually I shouldn't have said detergents, alone, because this also concerns insecticides. The more one reads of these things, the more we're convinced that we don't have to worry about the H-Bomb. Just let us continue with uncontrolled spraying, and we'll kill ourselves; we sure seem to be well on the way.

Ducks on the North River — Mallards, Pintails, and Wood ducks — are all looking for nesting places, so it won't be long before the young ones are swimming around. A wonderful sight!

Lachute Motor Sport Club

News, Views, Activities — by Don Smith

The date for our rallyette is Tuesday, May 24. Registration and scrutineering will take place at 6 p.m., with a driver and navigator meeting at 6.35 p.m. and the first car away at 6.45 p.m. sharp. Time is of the essence for an evening rally such as this, so we urge everyone to try to be early — especially if they expect to get lost along the route.

The start will be the parking lot of the Brownsburg Curling Club, and the route will cover approximately 30 miles. About 45% of the route will be paved, and the rest will be good gravel roads. Prizes will be dash-plaques for first over-all and also for the first all-female crew. The entry fee is $1.50 per car.

The only required equipment for this rally is a first-aid kit and three flares, which you should have in your car anyway. The cars must also pass a safety check which includes lights (head, tail and directional), horn, and hand-brake.

Since this is a novice rally the navigator will need only a pencil, paper and a watch. Common sense and an advanced degree in mathematics may be a help, but we can't guarantee anything. The finish will be in the Lachute area and light refreshments will be served following the rally.

You will probably never get a better chance to try your hand at this form of motor sport, so remember to make that a date — Tuesday, May 24.

Also you should make it a point to attend our meeting at the Masonic Hall this Friday at 8 p.m. Visitors are always welcome, and as an added attraction this week we have some films to keep you entertained. The first film is the 1965 Shell 4000 Car Rally, and the second feature will be a film on Control No. 76 of the 1966 Shell 4000. The latter was produced and directed by the Secretary, and stars the members of the Lachute Motor Sport Club Inc. in various stages of pandemonium.

Pit Chatter

Tom Dwyer, formerly of Nashville, Tenn., was in charge of costumes for that film. . . Our rally instructions are going to be bilingual this time, to encourage everyone in Lachute to try the sport. . . Two women were driving along the highway in Volkswagens when one of the cars conked out. The driver got out of the car and looked in the front. "It's no wonder it won't run," she exclaimed, "I've lost my engine." Her partner, looking for the solution, walked to the back of her own car, opened it and said, "Don't worry, my dear, I've got a spare engine here."

Next Meeting: Friday, May 20, at the Masonic Hall, Lachute, at 8 p.m. Don't forget to come and see those films!

Provincial school champion hockey team feted

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method
by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

A TRICK SHOT TO IMPROVE YOUR GAME

Here is a trick shot that any golfer can master with practice. It will not only give him a way to delight his fellow-players, but it will also vastly improve his ability on pitch shots.

Take your wedge or 9-iron and line up three balls in a row (see illustration). Practice trying to make all three balls fly on the same shot.

You will find that to make this trick shot work, you must strike the first ball while your clubhead is descending—just before it reaches the bottom of its arc.

This is the same technique all good golfers employ on short iron shots. They always "hit down" on the ball, contacting the ball first and then the turf.

If you practice this trick shot until you have it mastered, I'm sure your short-iron game will improve immensely.

Season's contest for anglers, by Argenteuil club

Directors of the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association are urging a wide participation in their season's fishing contest, which has been "en marche" since the middle of April.

Membership cards are available from the directorate, and a boost in the enrolment this year will help materially in the aims and activities of the Association.

For purpose of checking fish catches for the contest, a number of merchants and storekeepers have volunteered this service. In addition to those in various parts of the County, the name of Sylvio Deslauriers, St. Michel de Wentworth, has been added to the list already published.

Members are also eligible for the Molson Fishing Derby, an annual contest arousing interest on a province-wide scale. District registrations may be made at the same places designated by the Argenteuil Club. Worthwhile prizes are donated for winners in both these contests.

Statement on Election Campaign

In line with the announcement of the Union Nationale candidate, who is taking no part in a contradictory meeting following nominations on May 22 (a Sunday) — I would like to inform the public that I too have no intention of taking part, as such meeting will not be a question of politics but of personalities, which will add nothing to the dignity of the political campaign.

I would like to say that I am overwhelmed with the support I have received since I announced my intention to contest the election, and would like to assure the electors that my name will stand — also that my election campaign will be fair and "above board".

"For the Birds"

An interesting new arrival recently in Morin. For want of a better name it appears to be an albino robin. In size and characteristics similar to the red-breast variety, but distinctly white with the exception of a few black feathers in wings and tail. It appears to be either ostracized by its "cousins" and other birds or feels they are all beneath its consideration, as it goes about entirely on its own.

Clean-up Time

Rakes, shovels and barrows are the order of the day — and evening — as many residents are well occupied in "cleaning-up". There remain untouched areas awaiting attention. These could be holding up the possibility that Morin Heights could be referred to as an attractive community.

Outlook for Busy Year

The year 1966 could be a booster for Morin. The Department of Roads are planning new and improved highways in the area; municipal interest is being centred on improving its roads and water supply; while a local organization is discussing details for a sports centre. New construction is in good demand — one contractor stating that already he is fully booked for the summer. The tourist season will soon be with us; longer days; another election coming up; fishing for those of us who like it; and higher taxes (?) for all whose taxes are already high enough. So, 1966—and Morin—could be just what you would like to make it.

The choir sang two numbers directed by one of their teachers, Mr Willis Young. The guest speaker, Mr. J. L. MacKeen, from the Eastern Townships, gave the address to the graduates, who were 36 in number.

Mr. Frank Young, of Kilmar, salesman at Roger Tousignant Furniture and Appliance, Hawkesbury, has returned from a sales training course in Toronto where, as a guest of the Sklar Furniture Company, he familiarized himself with style trends and methods in the manufacture of fine furniture.

Most self-made men won't admit it but many of them, if they had it to do over again, would get some help.

I wish to thank the electors of the County of Argenteuil for their support and confidence over the last 18 years, in electing me to the Quebec Legislature, and I urge them to give the same support and confidence to Mtre. Roger Lajeunesse, who is willing to carry on the mandate.

I have known him personally, as well as his family, for many years, and he has actively supported me in the northern part of the County for over 15 years.

Mr. Lajeunesse, who has contributed for over 15 years to the development of our County in various municipalities of the north, is also fully conscious of the problems of the south.

His competence and willingness to serve his fellow men, in my opinion makes him the best candidate available to represent the interests of the population of the County of Argenteuil in Quebec. His program will prove it.

Witnesses plan mammoth meet in Montreal

Volunteers from the Lachute Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses may be asked to help in the biggest search for rooms ever made in the Montreal area. Every home, motel and apartment house in Greater Montreal is presently being visited in a search for accommodations for the 15,000 delegates expected to attend the "God's Sons of Liberty District Assembly" of Jehovah's Witnesses, at the Forum on July 13-17. A simultaneous French assembly will be held at Atwater Market.

Convention manager John Groh of the world headquarters for Jehovah's Witnesses in Brooklyn, N.Y., outlined the huge task of preparing for such a large convention, at an inaugural meeting held at the Rosemount High School last Saturday. More than 400 volunteer workers attended the French meeting Saturday afternoon, and 835 attended the English meeting in the evening.

"The most pressing need at this time," said Groh, "is accommodations for thousands of delegates who are coming to Montreal, many for the first time, and who are keenly anticipating the spiritual communion they will have with you." . . He added, "If need be, we will widen our search for rooms to towns within thirty miles of Montreal."

Mr. Groh has been organizing conventions for Jehovah's Witnesses for 20 years and was in charge of the biggest convention ever held in New York City, when a quarter of a million Jehovah's Witnesses filled both Yankee Stadium and the Polo Grounds for an eight-day assembly in 1958.

U.C.W. regional 'workshop' held, day of fellowship at Brownsburg

United Church Women from 14 churches in the Ottawa Valley region participated in a successful Workshop Day at Brownsburg United Church on May 9, arranged by Mrs. Roy Williams, regional vice-president, and conducted by a group of officers of the Montreal Presbyterial United Church Women, under the leadership of Mrs. R. Lawton, chairman of the Leadership Development Committee.

The afternoon session opened with a worship service led by Mrs. Kilpatrick of Morin Heights, who set a reverent and thoughtful mood for the meeting.

A warm welcome was extended to the executive, members and delegates by Mrs. John Leggitt, president of Brownsburg United Church U.C.W.

Mrs. Paul Smith, 1st vice-president of Montreal Presbyterial U.C.W., then acted as chairman of the meeting, introducing the members of the executive from Montreal, each of whom discussed the work of her particular concern and offered suggestions and made recommendations.

Mrs. D. Scoates, president, brought greetings to the ladies from the Montreal Presbyterial U.C.W., and went on to describe the duties of a president.

Mrs. Paul Smith introduced the new Handbook, reviewed a simplified form of Parliamentary Procedure and briefly outlined the agenda for a regular meeting. This was followed by the other executives speaking on the following subjects: Citizenship and Social Action, Community Friendship and Visiting, Christian and Missionary Education, Finance and Treasurers, Leadership Development, Literature and Communications, Press and Publicity, Program, Stewardship and Recruiting, and Supply and Welfare.

The ladies then formed into small groups to discuss and to find answers to various questions on the role of women in the church and community today.

Among other announcements a reference was made to the Summer School to be held by the Montreal and Ottawa Conference United Church Women at Macdonald College, August 16 to 19.

A delicious dinner was served by the ladies of Brownsburg United Church. At this time Mrs. D. Scoates spoke on "Our Great Inheritance", recalling the history of the Christian faith as it spread through the countries of the Middle East and Europe, touching on the Dark Ages, the Renaissance and the Reformation; then, finally, on the great Missionary Movements, leading to a new challenge to the Christian faith in the present age of reformation and revival.

The evening session began with the singing of a hymn.

Questions arising from the afternoon group study were then discussed under the leadership of Mrs. R. F. Lawton.

A playette was then presented by women of the local churches and some of the executive from Montreal.

Mrs. J. A. Boorman, a member of the Program Committee from Montreal, summed up the findings of the groups, one of her conclusions being that we must recognize that the efforts made in individual congregations play a very important part in the witness and work of the church as a whole.

The offering was received and dedicated by Mrs. Phil Bate of Kilmar.

Mrs. D. A. Rodgers of St. Andrews East expressed the appreciation of the assembly for the fine hospitality of the hostess church, and for the music provided by the organist, Mrs. C. Wheeler.

Late John Hadley was former mayor of St. Jerusalem

A citizen well and favorably known in this community, Mr. John Griffith Hadley, passed away suddenly on Wednesday, May 11, in Lachute, in his 82nd year.

He was born in Montreal on April 17, 1885, and was married to the former Eva Margaret Gordon in 1908. His wife predeceased him in 1956.

The late Mr. Hadley spent his early years in Montreal. He came to this area as a young man, and took up farming in the Parish of St. Jerusalem. He was mayor of the Parish of St. Jerusalem for several terms. He had been retired for over 20 years and resided in the Town of Lachute. He was a member of the Lachute United Church. An active member in the Masonic Lodge for many years — the Rt. Wor. Bro. Hadley, he was a Past-Master of Argenteuil Lodge 67 (1931). He was also a member of the Laurentian Chapter 24, and a member of the Lachute Curling Club.

Left to mourn his passing are three sons, Robert, of Pointe Claire; Cresswell and John; and seven daughters, Edna (Mrs. John Robertson), Gladys (Mrs. George Muir), Grace (Mrs. Wm. White), Rodeen (Mrs. Lloyd Hume), Mabel (Mrs. Elvine Prophet), Jean (Mrs. Fred Stein) and Doris (Mrs. Sydney Drew), all of Lachute; also 27 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Harold Thompson in the Lachute United Church on Saturday. Pall-bearers were Messrs. James MacKimmie, Douglas Simon, George Rodger, Herbert Gordon, Arnold Boyd and Herbert Graves. Interment was in the family plot at Lachute Cemetery.

Argenteuil Ministerial Association played host to their neighboring colleagues, the Eastern Ontario Ministerial Association, at their annual get-together in the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church here last week, with the Rev. Harold Thompson, president of the local group, occupying the chair. He extended a warm welcome to the visitors, and then called on the Rev. C. Ritchie Bell, minister of the church, who conducted the devotions. Rev. Joseph H. Lynn, president of EOMA, after having thanked the hosts for their kind invitation, introduced the guest speaker, the Rev. J. Ralph Watson, B.Comm., B.A., B.D., secretary of the Presbytery of Montreal and the Montreal and Ottawa Conference of the United Church of Canada, and their representative on the Christian Pavilion of Expo '67.

Mr. Watson spoke on "The Christian Pavilion of Expo '67". The idea of the major Christian churches collaborating in the Christian Pavilion Expo '67 grew out of the Faith and Order Conference of the World Council of Churches held in Montreal in the summer of 1963, he said.

How It Developed

How? — By a presentation of dramatic artistic value which is now being prepared by experts who are fully concerned with the nature of the message. Welcoming gardens, active participation of the visitor, photographs, films, sound, music, light, painting and sculpture will all contribute to induce the visitor to a profound consideration about the meaning of his life and the universe in which we live.

Are All in Agreement?

The major Christian churches in Canada have undertaken this venture together. Since they have always agreed on the fundamental principles of Christianity (while differing in some of their interpretations), they were determined to present the basic Christian message with one voice. . . To remind Man of his responsibilities to himself, to his fellow men and to his Maker.

Accordingly, the Christian Pavilion will be an integrated unit. Its dynamically evangelistic message will summarize the appeal of the Roman Catholic, United, Anglican, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Baptist and Greek - Orthodox churches.

The Pavilion will be located on one of the busiest crossroads of Expo, on Notre Dame Island, close to the Canadian Pavilion, near the pavilions of France and Great Britain.

The Rev. Gerald Hunt thanked the speaker on behalf of the groups, for giving this valuable information about the Christian Pavilion and its progress.

The members of the associations sat down to a dinner prepared by the ladies of the congregation in the Presbyterian hall. Rev. Russell Ferguson thanked the ladies. After discussion on the parish ministry, with each priest and minister participating, the Rev. Gerald Labrosse pronounced the benediction.

Bishop Maguire to visit Deanery

Bishop Kenneth Maguire, of Montreal, will meet with the clergy of Saint Andrews Deanery on Tuesday, May 24, at St. Simeon's Church. The day will begin with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a.m. The Rev. Cyrus R. Lang, Rural Dean of St. Andrews, will be the host at luncheon.

On May 25, the Bishop will travel to Morin Heights, where a dinner in his honor will be held in Trinity Church Hall at 5 p.m., followed by Confirmation at Trinity Church at 7.30 p.m. Twenty-one young people and adults will be presented by the rector, the Rev. Horace G. Baugh.

APPRECIATION

I wish to thank all friends, family and neighbors, for their flowers, cards, gifts and visits to me while I was a patient in the Argenteuil Hospital. A special thank-you to the Rev. H. Thompson and Sister Louise for their kindness to me.

— Mrs. William D. Hume, Lachute

by JIM MENZIES

THAT SOUND AGAIN

Lachute district residents who play the trumpet or trombone know that the way the mouthpiece is held to the lips can make a world of difference in the sound produced. Did you know that there's another very familiar instrument whose sound depends on the way you hold it? e.g. your telephone! When the telephone mouthpiece is held in the proper position — about three-quarters of an inch from the centre of your lips — your voice can travel thousands of miles and come out with the same quality as a face to face conversation in the same room. This is made possible by transmission engineers whose job it is to ensure and perfect a clear sound for your conversations. This is a part of our continuing program to make transmission even better — and telephone service more valuable.

NIGHT PEOPLE

How late do you like to stay awake at night? Do you call it quits reasonably early to get a good night's sleep? Or do you last through the late, late show? Well, it's the job of certain telephone people to stay awake all night so that your telephone is ready to serve you at any hour. Among the night people at Bell Canada are operators, of course, for person-to-person calls, for Information, and for emergency services. There are men in test centres to receive "trouble" reports at night and test the circuits affected. There are cable crews who must be available for emergency repair jobs that can't wait for morning . . . such as the circuits that handle telephone calls for police, hospital and fire services. Yes, tonight and every night, your telephone is awake, alert, and at your service.

A SAD REMINDER

Not too long ago, I was looking at a magazine feature showing picture after picture of happy-looking people. There were children, engaged couples, smiling grandmothers, young men, parents — people you see every day. But they had one horrible thing in common — they had all been killed in traffic accidents over the Easter holiday. With our weather hopefully improving, and our summertime long week-ends coming up, I sincerely hope that drivers will drive so that they and their passengers never ever appear in such a sad reminder.

For the green-thumb fraternity

ONE OF THE beguiling pleasures of springtime for many millions of people is gardening. But the gardener must tend himself, as well as his garden, if the pleasure is not to turn to pain. Here are some safety tips from the American Medical Association for our green-thumbed citizenry:

— Remember, one swallow never made a summer, and one 10-hour session on the first sunny day never made a beautiful garden; but it might make a bed-bound gardener. Take it easy at the beginning, take frequent rests, and work at a sensible pace.

— Cuts, scratches and bruises are inevitable for the devoted gardener, but keep them minor by washing them at once with warm water and soap and covering with a clean bandage. Tetanus lurks in the soil, so make certain your immunization (and your family's) is up-to-date.

— Power tools, like the auto, can be a boon; but they can also be a menace if handled carelessly. Learn how to use them properly, follow instructions, and keep your mind on the job. Turn off the power mower if you have to leave it unattended for even a moment. The toes you save may be your child's!

— Pesticides can make a silent spring, ruining your soil and silencing the song birds; or they can help make a gay and colorful spring, depending on your use. Read the instructions carefully. Pesticides can cause fatal accidents. So store them out of the reach of small children. Make pesticides a boon, not a bane.

Industry accepts a challenge

WHAT DOES it mean for a foreign subsidiary to be a good Canadian corporate citizen? The answer obviously lies in the contribution it makes to Canada's economic growth, development and employment, while making a reasonable profit for its shareholders, the same as any Canadian-owned company must do.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce cites one Canadian subsidiary, Canadian General Electric, as an outstanding example of a good corporate citizen. The report of its president to the annual meeting, held recently, recalled that one of the major challenges to business and industry in the years immediately ahead is to provide jobs for some 250,000 Canadians each year until 1970 — consequently the company embarked in 1965 upon an ingenious program designed to meet their share of that challenge.

C.G.E.'s expansion took two approaches — first, by buying two declining businesses and stimulating them to greater levels of production and employment; second, by obtaining vacant industrial plants and reactivating them to create brand-new job opportunities. It should be added that neither of these methods required heavy investments in plant and facilities which may add to inflationary pressures in the economy. This action resulted in the addition of 2,200 names to C.G.E.'s payroll in 1965, and the newly acquired facilities are not yet at full capacity.

This is an impressive accomplishment, particularly when we recall that pressures from the parent country to limit expansion were strong in 1965. This kind of accomplishment, this kind of action, is what it means to be a good corporate citizen — a responsible community-oriented citizen.

No alternative to peace

DURING THE recent celebrations that are held in all Communist countries during May, the Soviet Union once again boasted of its great nuclear strength. The United States frequently does the same thing.

The U.S. Defence Secretary, Robert McNamara, has assured Americans that the missile forces planned by the Pentagon would be more than enough to wreak an unacceptable degree of destruction on both the Soviet Union and China. The Pentagon has also claimed that U.S. forces in Vietnam are using about 1,000,000,000 rounds of small-arms ammunition in Vietnam a year.

What is left unsaid too frequently, by representatives of both super powers, are the inherent dangers of warfare in the nuclear age. The total being spent on defence around the world has passed the figure of $150 billion a year, and is approaching the $200 billion mark. If the cost of the U.S. and Soviet space programs — the fantastic sums going into the race to the moon — are included, the annual total is well over $200 billion. Washington is spending $20 billion alone on the moon project. And although this is sometimes denied both in Moscow and Washington, most space projects also have military applications.

Despite the wars in Korea, Algeria, the Congo and Vietnam, the world as a whole has been at peace for just over two decades. For almost that length of time, however, the nuclear sword has hovered over North America, over Europe and more recently over Asia. One major error by nuclear bomber crews or by missile personnel, one act of escalation in Vietnam that snaps the patience of the other side, and the whole world would be involved in a holocaust that would threaten the very existence of mankind.

The fact that only relatively minor accidents involving the nuclear bomb have occurred, is no ground for complacency. The only method of ensuring that there will be no nuclear disaster in the decades and centuries ahead is for the nations of the world to work toward nuclear (and, in time) general disarmament.

In times of war and tension, disarmament discussions lag. Already, the war in Vietnam has begun to poison the atmosphere at the vital disarmament talks in Geneva. Yet a continued arms race can lead only to one goal — a nuclear cataclysm.

Disarmament discussions must go on, if the human race is to survive. But they need a climate of peace. If men are to thrive, and develop further the green and fertile planet they inhabit, all nations must seek a lasting peace in this century of the thermo-nuclear intercontinental missile.

A RUG MERCHANT'S display advertisement in a Toronto newspaper features an eye-catching photo of an attractive baby and an unusual heading: "Who Will Be the First Baby in your Block to Play on Wall-to-wall Broadloom! My Mommy Bought me Three Rooms of Wall-to-wall Broadloom with my Baby Bonus Cheques."

It seems an unusual way to sell broadloom — notes a commentator for the weeklies, C. J. Harris — but it may be assumed that the merchant knows where to look for a lot of customers. However, it prompts the thought that, as is the case with all universal welfare programs, a lot of the taxpayers' money ends up being spent on luxuries rather than necessities.

It was argued when the baby bonus was introduced 20 years ago that this method of redistributing wealth through taxation would provide equality of opportunity. For a good many people it seems to be working out as "wall-to-wall equality".

Viewpoints and perspectives

WE FORGET LASTING HURT. — Many, it seems, take traffic accidents too lightly, on the facile assumption that any injury short of death is fully curable and nothing to worry about. Not always, unfortunately. There are many instances where a traffic victim must pay for his injury, in some measure at least, for the rest of his life.

— Chilliwack (B.C.) Progress

"EVERY NOW AND THEN go away, have a little relaxation, for when you come back to your work, your judgment will be sure, since to remain constantly at work will cause you to lose your power of judgment. . . . Go some distance away because then the work appears smaller, and more of it can be taken in at a glance, and a lack of harmony or proportion is more readily seen . . . "

OVER THE YEARS with The Lachute Watchman

May, 1886 —

Several small boat houses were carried away by the flooded North River — including Mr. Wilson's at the paper mill, in which there were two fine boats. These were smashed to pulp on passing over the rocks below. . . All residences and shops on the river bank in the West Ward have their cellars filled with water.

Another old and respected resident, Mrs. S. Hills, is gone to her last home. She lived almost 60 years in Lachute.

Carillon — There is now great activity in the lumber fleets. Messrs. Blanchard & Williamson have added the "Dolphin" and the "Rigaud" to their fleet, and Malcolm MacNaughton, Esq., has bought two powerful tugs for service on the Ottawa River. The market steamer "Dagmar" has been almost entirely rebuilt in Montreal.

Washington — A bill that provides that no alien who has not declared his intention to become a U.S. citizen shall be granted a license as pilot, engineer, mate or captain on any steam vessel — is aimed to prevent Canadian vesselmen from entering the service of American steamboat owners.

St. Simeon's annual vestry meeting passed a resolution to ask consent of the Bishop to purchase a site for a new parsonage near Mrs. Clunie's stone house, and to proceed with the building as early as possible.

Edina — Cheese factories have started business again, but many farmers having calves to raise and butter to make, are not yet taking advantage of the splendid prices that cheese-making is bound to offer. These are the days that the farmer is coming into his own.

Cushing — We are pleased to welcome Mrs. Cleland and daughter to occupy their Cushing residence for the smmer.

A lifelong resident of Carillon, Mr. Joseph Bryerton, passed away at the age of 72.

The Town Corporation will give a reward for information on any person or persons dumping debris on the river bank at the end of Clyde Street.

Mr. Ross Todd, of Kazabazua, spent the week-end in town. . . Miss Ruth Rodgers has completed her term of teaching in Cambria. . . Miss Dora Trineer spent the holiday with Miss Mamie Graham at North River.

Another unusual accident occurred on Brownsburg Road when a horse attached to a milk wagon belonging to Mr. Robert, of Lachute, ran into a Motor-Car in which were seated Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Boa and Major Tomalson, of Montreal. Mrs. Boa was the principal sufferer — the horse's two feet landing on her and severely bruising her.

Mrs. David Cleland has received a parcel containing souvenirs from her son, Andrew, who is now overseas with the Royal Canadian Regiment. The parcel contained an incendiary bomb, shrapnel, a French soldier's cap and French money.

Municipal Council at Arundel: Mayor C. J. Staniforth (now in office for 25 years, re-elected by acclamation), Councillors Jos. S. Boyd, M. C. Cooke, H. G. Cooke, T. H. Graham, Angus Graham, A. B. Morrison. Secretary, P. Cantin.

"Wooden Acres", a picturesque private estate at St. Adolphe, extending over 100 acres, has been purchased by a Montreal group for conversion into a year-round resort.

Two Ways Of Life

It seems to me that, despite the inroads made by easy communications and transportation, the ancient mistrust between rural dweller and city dweller is still very much alive. Each feels that the other is out to skin him at the first opportunity. Each expresses it in scorn for the other's way of life.

"I wooden live in the siddy if ya gimme the whole lousy mess on a silver platter," snorts your smalltown neighbor.

This statement, echoed from coast to coast, is usually followed by a bitter diatribe against "city living." High rents, crippling taxes, heavy traffic, smog and unfriendliness come under the gun. Cost of living draws comments like, "Costs ya a buck every time ya blow yer nose."

And what does the smug suburbanite think of the country? "Ya, I KNOW it's nice in the summer up north there, but wuddaya do all WINTER in that dump?" There's no use in pointing out that you do exactly what he does: work, play, bring up your family, try to pay your bills, and get so soon old, so late, smart.

On most matters, I take a stand. But in the denunciation of the other fellow's mode of life, I take two stands.

The first is gentle agreement with my smalltown friends. I go along with the belligerent argument that the city is no place to live; that I'd hate to battle that traffic everyday; that living is cheaper in a smaller centre; that our air is a lot cleaner; that it's wonderful to live within five minutes of fishing, curling, golf and friends.

And when I'm listening to some old buddy who lives in the city and loves it, I nod sagely when he declares the city is an exciting place to live; that it's wonderful to take in all the shows and concerts; that it's grand to go out for an exotic meal in a fascinating place, with go-go girls and stuff; that the small town doesn't provide the same cultural opportunities for your kids.

Privately, I chuckle at both points of view. Both are full of contradictions.

The city fellow claims there's no privacy in a small town. Every old biddy in town knows your business. The smalltown chap explodes, "Privacy! How can you have privacy in the city when you're stuffed into a crowded apartment building, or living on a two-by-four lot beside people you don't like who have horrible kids?"

The smalltown fellow raves about the mythical "rat-race" in the city. And goes out and roars around in service clubs and fraternal organizations and athletic clubs and church groups at a rate no city rat could stand for a month.

The myths multiply. The city stands for culture. And in a city of a million, theatres are half empty, concerts play to small crowds, good restaurants go broke, a few hundred attend art exhibitions.

The small town stands for recreation and good living. And in a small town, one-tenth of two per cent. of the population is revelling in that fishing, hunting and so on that's at the front door. The rest are doing what the city folk do: drink, chase women or men, or sit around watching the slop on the moron machine.

When we drive to the city, as we do almost every Saturday for the daughter's music lesson, the whole business is brought into perspective for me, on the unlikely site of a four-lane highway.

Down to the city, on one stream, pour the thousands of smalltown folk going in for a day to shop, take in a show, suck up some fast culture.

Up from the city, in the other stream, pour the thousands of people going north for the skiing or the fishing or the swimming or the scenery.

They don't even wave to each other. If it's so great at home, why don't they stay there?

And do you know what they say when they get home after the weekend? "Boy, it's nice to be home. It was a great weekend, but I sure wooden wanna live in the (city-country)." Please underline the right word.

The Canadian Outlook

After enduring nearly a century, the Canadian Confederation is being tested from within by the political nationalism of our French-speaking co-founders and from without by the economic dominance of our American neighbors.

It would be typically Canadian and not wholly inaccurate to say it has been ever thus and therefore to accept whatever the tide of events may bring. But the fierce dialogue of the past few years between English and French Canada, and the mounting counter-attack against U.S. control of the Canadian economy suggests how deadly serious the struggle has become for the future of Canada.

The greater burden for Canada will probably come from without. Solutions and compromises can always be found for internal political differences. The politics of economics are more cruel because they are shaped by forces even the most knowledgeable economists do not always understand.

The question which will dominate the Canadian outlook for the rest of the century will be whether the country can retain its political and cultural independence while its economy is controlled from the United States.

Fear of American domination was a chief reason for the British colonies uniting in 1867. They had purposefully rejected the American experiment. The British colonists saw in Confederation a way of keeping their ties with their homeland. The French of Quebec saw it as their only hope for autonomy, knowing they would face a hopeless future as a separate ethnic group under the flag of the United States.

With the withering of the British ties in English Canada, only the French co-founders of Confederation seem today to have the emotional commitment essential to fostering nationalism.

Canadians should recognize that the nationalism still being preached in many lands is rapidly being overshadowed by continentalism. By combining modern technology and vast land masses rich in human and natural resources, there have emerged three great super-powers, the United States, the Soviet Union, and China. And each has been able to spread its influence over its immediate neighbors.

The continentalism of the United States has already absorbed the Canadian academic and cultural communities into its orbit. The drain of our intellectual and creative talent to the U.S., and the overpowering presence of the American mass media in this country is a recognized fact.

It should be no surprise, then, that our economy has been likewise taken over, with something like two-thirds of Canadian industry under American ownership.

Whether this is good for Canada is the question. There are many who believe it is not. Former finance minister Walter Gordon, who would use restrictive government measures against foreign companies, has become the chief advocate of economic nationalism. His new book, a Choice for Canada, makes his stand clear.

Mr. Gordon's own Liberal party has always been the most pragmatic of the Canadian parties in its acceptance of American industrial partnership. The Conservative party, out of deep attachment to Britain, has traditionally resisted U.S. influence. The parties of the left, most recently the New Democrats, have found themselves ideologically closer to the Tories than the Liberals.

Canada's high prosperity of postwar years has coincided with a period of record U.S. investment in Canada. Because this has brought such high living standards, it is unlikely Canadians would be willing to pay the price of lowering those standards to achieve economic independence. Our task must be to strengthen our own segments of our economy, using free trade agreements to secure easier entry into U.S. markets, while supporting those aspects of our culture which make Canada unique.

District NEWS

Avoca

Mrs. Albert Arthurs and Mrs. Bill Page, of Port Colborne, Ont., attended the wedding of their niece, Miss Jean Kelly, in Hawkesbury last Saturday evening, and spent Sunday with Mrs. Sandy Bates, also calling on Mrs. Evan Bates.

Best wishes for a speedy recovery are extended to Mrs. Howard Smith, a patient in the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal; to Mrs. Eddy Young, of Pointe-au-Chene, in the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury; and to Miss Ann MacTavish, Ottawa, who underwent eye surgery last week in the Civic Hospital.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eddy Andrews during the week and on Sunday were — Mr. and Mrs. Bill Provencal, Mr. and Mrs. Noel Cormier and family, and Mr. Claude Andrews, of Montreal; Miss Lois Provencal, Mrs. Fred McKale, of Kilmar; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Eastwood, Miss Gloria Andrews and a friend, from Ottawa; Mrs. Elmer Andrews and son, Colin, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Young and family.

Congratulations from this community are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Crawford (the former Brenda Bates) who were married Saturday in Lachute.

Mr. and Mrs. Bud Landriault and family spent the week-end at their cottage here.

Mr. John Prophet returned to work with Atlas Construction in Charlemagne, Que., last Monday morning.

Late Mrs. Roy Elliott

At the Montreal Convalescent Home on May 16, the death occurred of Mrs. Mima Elliott, beloved wife of the late Roy Elliott of Lachute, in her 72nd year.

The daughter of the late William Morrison, she was a lifetime resident of these parts except for a short stay in Michigan, where she and Mr. Elliott were married in 1929. She worked for a number of years in C-I-L, and was interestedly devoted to the care and welfare of retarded children. She is survived by one brother, George Morrison, a nephew, Howard Morrison, of Lachute, and a niece, Mrs. Helen Nairn, of Montreal.

Service is being held at Lachute United Church at 3 p.m. on Wednesday, followed by interment at Lachute Cemetery. The pall-bearers are — Messrs. Ross Muir, Gordon Smith, Charles Stephens, Kenneth Clark, Burrill Todd and Harry Todd.

Morin Heights

Boy Scouts

If anyone is wondering about camping conditions in early May, just ask any of the Morin Heights or Shawbridge Scouts. The first spring camp was held Friday and Saturday nights, May 6-7, and the Morin Heights Troop were guests of the Shawbridge Troop. For some of the boys it was their first experience of outdoor living; suffice to say, they enjoyed the experience.

During the past three weeks three Scouts received their Proficiency Badges, namely, David Kirwin in Auto Mechanics, Lawrence Baldwin, the Mason badge, and Jerry Lambon, the Swimmer's Silver Stage. Two other boys will be receiving Life and Religion awards from Bishop McGuire of Montreal during the month. A trip to Montreal is planned, and the Scouts will visit the Dow Planetarium, the Ville Marie Wax Museum and the Shriners' Circus.

Girl Guides

Perseverance and hard work has enabled seven Guides to pass the Home Nursing tests as laid down by the St. John's Ambulance Association. Instruction was given by Mrs. P. Whalley and tests were conducted by Mrs. G. Watchorn. Receiving awards were Arlene Barrett, Donna Graham, Janet Leclerc, Lena Proswernuk, Pattie Davison, Elizabeth Whalley and Allana Kirkpatrick.

Late Resident mourned

Mrs. John Campbell, one of the oldest residents of the community, passed away recently at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Eric McCullough, at the age of 91. Formerly Miss Eva May Ellis, she was born in Quebec City and came to this district in 1898 as a school teacher. Left to mourn her are two brothers, James Ellis, of Saskatchewan, and Walter, of Florida; four children, Mrs. Eric McCullough, of Morin, Mrs. B. Harper, of Ottawa, Walter and Archie Campbell, both of Montreal. Two other sons who gave their lives during the last war were John Gordon Campbell and Norman McCallum Campbell. In addition there are 10 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Snow Recorded

Statistics on precipitation in our locality as provided by the courtesy of Mrs. J. W. Green show a snow fall during the past winter of 103 inches. As a result of lingering low temperatures much of this snow can be still seen (May 10) on the northern slopes of the hills.

Former resident of this community dies in Montreal

The late Kenneth Bryerton

The death of Mr. Kenneth Bryerton occurred suddenly May 5 at the Montreal General Hospital. He was in his 58th year, the only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Theo Bryerton, of Centerville.

Mr. Bryerton was well known in this community. After graduating from the Bourget College, Rigaud, he worked for several years at the Bank of Nova Scotia in St. Andrews East and Lachute, before going to Montreal.

Left to mourn his passing are his wife, the former Lillian Barron, a daughter, Sharon, and son, Brian.

The funeral service was held on Monday at the Saint Thomas More church in Verdun. Interment took place in the Saint Andrews East Cemetery.

By Campaign Chairman Wes Freeland

It's a complicated world, continually becoming more complex. We long for the "good old days" and look for easy solutions to our problems.

"Why doesn't the government do something about this or that?" we all moan, periodically. "Why not eliminate all these annoying door-to-door collections, for the needs of the Boy Scouts Association, the Red Cross, the Blind, Crippled Children, Polio and Cancer Research?" many are asking.

We all claim to want freedom, an ability to exercise our rights as citizens. We look upon dictators, secret police, a controlled press, etc., as cancers that erode and destroy freedom and democracy. Apathy, laziness and easy living are the fertilizers and soil that propagate such cancers.

Dictators are not lazy or apathetic. They work very hard and long hours, at their job of maintaining control. They watch closely, every detail which may take away even a small part of their power — or rights, as they see it. They don't just dream or talk. They act!

How do you make free people in a wonderfully prosperous country aware that they are losing control, losing a piece of democracy, every time they ask a central authority to do that which we can and should do better at the community level? Think! think! think! every time you begin to say, "Why doesn't the government . . . ?"

What are you doing about the problem where you live and work? What can you do? . . Then do it! . . Don't just complain about increased taxes which are required to do the things you and I demand, that we could do better for ourselves in our own community. We still live in a democracy, because there are many people who care, and act.

This was well demonstrated in the recent Cancer Campaign, completed in the Brownsburg area. Chairman Wes Freeland wishes to thank the public for support, and particularly the captains and canvassers, some of whom travelled long distances, spent many hours, and achieved excellent results.

The $795 collected, almost the same as last year, was the work of the above. Special thanks go to captains' convener, Mrs. Theo. E. Zimmer, and the captains, Mr. Alan Gauley, Mrs. Geo. MacDonald, Mrs. Chas. Prosser, Mrs. Marge Grant, Mrs. Ken Ball, Mrs. Berry Bourne, Mrs. Doug Campbell, Mrs. Ken Murdoch, Mr. Rubin Golden, Mr. and Mrs. Omer Davis, Mrs. Verne Martin, Mr. Gerald Tomalty and Mrs. D. Boyd. Thanks go also to bank manager Mr. Paul Mayer, and staff members Monique Diotte and Pierrette Laframboise, for their overtime efforts. Appreciation is expressed to the businessmen who displayed cards, and to the people of Mabel, Dalesville and Louisa who are included in the Brownsburg Section. Oh yes, and to Mrs. Marge Grant, for secretarial work — many thanks.

A reduction in suffering and an increase in co-operation makes for a better community; this is Democracy in Action — and, yes — don't forget to vote!

Fitting message, on 'Family Day'

"The Christian home is the heart of civilization, the reservoir out of which streams flow into every area of life. The home, the smallest unit of society, is the key to total order of our culture and life. The home is the natural place for children to make the acquaintance of God as the object of their worship and the source of their highest values," the Very Rev. C. Ritchie Bell, D.D., said in a sermon at Margaret Rodger Memorial Church recently, on Family Day.

A special order of service was followed in connection with Family Day, and the pupils of the Church School and their teachers sat in a body in the church.

"The home affects the church, the school, the nation. It is the training ground for all the larger relationships of life. You cannot discuss the spiritual destiny of the church without dealing with the home. One domestic grace can be translated into a thousand public virtues. What happens to the homes in Canada is of vital importance now. They are the taproot or seedplot of democracy and Christianity. The kingdoms of this world will never become the 'Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ', until the way of God becomes a reality in the home.

"It is not easy to create a distinctively Christian home. Insight, persistent discipline, resolute faith, and creative effort are required."

Next Sunday the Rev. Dr. Bell will preach on "The Fear of Being Alone".

Country Notebook

Macdonald College

With hay-mows empty, we hoped fervently for an early spring and didn't get it. We had a beautiful burst of warm weather in early April, and we all know the rest of the story. I have never before seen grass grow backward.

Wink Keeler has kept track of the soil temperatures at the Provincial Seed Farm for the past several years. He says the May temperatures this year at the level where seeds germinate and roots grow are the lowest he has recorded. On May 12, it was only 39°F at the three-inch level. By comparison, last year it was 52 degrees and the year before, 51 degrees.

For germination, cereals require something like 42 degrees temperature, corn about 52 degrees, and sorghums about 65 degrees.

Wink's plot of barley that was planted on the last day of March, and came up in April's warm spell still looks healthy. Certainly, it has not grown in the past month, but it is ready to take off as soon as it warms up.

The biggest hazard to early-seeded crops during these cold spells appears to be seed rots and seedling blights. A good mercurial seed dressing, like Panogen, almost eliminates this worry. The benefits of early seeding, even in a year like this, outweigh the risks.

At the moment, winter killing appears severe on our experimental plots. Perhaps a good warm rain will yet change the picture. Most varieties of Timothy, Red Clover, and Bromegrass have come through, but White Clover, Orchard Grass, and even Trefoil have taken quite a beating, especially in pure stands.

The most marked difference between varieties was in Alfalfa. All the recommended varieties have survived where they were cut only twice last season. But under pasture treatment, the less hardy Flemish type (Alfa and Du-Puits) have suffered much more than Vernal. Leo Trefoil has once again demonstrated its superior hardiness.

I had an invitation a few days ago which I reluctantly let go by. It was from Gerry Lalonde, (Lemieux, Ontario), secretary of the Charolais Association, to watch the 109 long-awaited imported Charolais arrive by boat at Quebec City. These had been bought last summer as calves in France. They spent last winter in quarantine on Grosse Isle, 40 miles downstream from Quebec City.

Gerry tells me that these are the first cattle to come to Canada from France in this century. Four of them will go to British Columbia, 48 to Alberta, 27 to Saskatchewan, six to Manitoba, 13 to Ontario, and 11 to Quebec.

This importation has received a great deal of publicity, and some opposition. From my point of view, if this breed has a contribution to make to our beef industry in improved rates of gain and feed efficiency, then we must make room for them. And I have seen some very impressive cross-bred Charolais calves around the country.

Prices were strong at the Spring Stocker Sale at South River in Northern Ontario on May 5. A total of 427 head sold for $65,784.

Surprisingly it was a pen of three heifers, Herefords, that topped the sale at 30c lb. They weighed 570 lbs. each. Two Charolais heifers, just a little lighter, were close behind at 28c.

Top pen of steers at $29.50/cwt. six 540-lb. Angus. A pen of eight white-faced steers brought $28.50. Average price for most good lots ran between $25 and $27/cwt. Very few calves were offered, most weights ran between 450 and 700 lbs — last year's Spring calves.

Speaking of soil temperatures again, it seems that stony fields have their good points after all. A report from New Brunswick says that the soil in stony fields has been found to be three degrees higher in Spring than stone-free soil. Potato yields, probably as a result of the warmer soil, were 33 hundred weight more in the stony fields. Now I'm not suggesting that any one start carting the stones their grandparents removed back to the fields.

By Vals Horsfall

In an effort to encourage young actors in the schools of the County, the Argenteuil Teachers' Association sponsored a Drama Festival which was held recently in Lachute High School. Four schools were represented, each presenting a one-act comedy.

Brownsburg High School gave a delightful vignette from teen-age life, "Sugar and Spice", directed by Mr. Keith Armstrong. Bonnie Graham played the teen-age heroine, Jane, who is desperately trying to live up to the sophisticated ways of her friend Susan, played by France Richard, who has just returned from six months in a Parisian boarding school. Willa Seale was Jane's harassed mother, and Bill Zimmer was the bashful boy-next-door, dragged in at the last moment to escort the glamorous Susan to the country club dance. The Brownsburg players are to be congratulated for their efforts, since an accident to a member of their cast necessitated some last - minute changes, which came off very satisfactorily.

"The Trysting Place", by Booth Tarkington, involves a series of frustrated lovers attempting to meet in a quiet corner of a resort hotel. This play was performed by members of Lachute High School, directed by Mr. Frank Andai. John Villeneuve played young Lancelot Briggs, and Vicki Villeneuve took the part of Mrs. Curtis, the mature and attractive widow he hopes to marry. Linda Whiteway was his domineering mother and Dick Hooker played her old beau, Mr. Ingoldsby. Jessie, Lancelot's prying sister, was brightly played by Jane Malenfant, and her suitor, Rupert Smith, by Wayne McArthur. Mr. D. Stewart was a "mysterious offstage voice".

The trials and tribulations of an unsuccessful burglar was the subject of "Nobody Sleeps", presented by Morin Heights Protestant School, and directed by Mr. Bruce Wilde and Margaret Hamilton. Gary Koroluk made a very convincing, if unskilled burglar, and Martha Whalley, Pamela Dibben and Helen Dobie were the three charming young daughters of the household. Their mother, Mrs. Busby, played by Judy Bill, very effectively took the young burglar in hand, in a play that finished with an amusing surprise ending.

The final production of the evening, "The Man in the Bowler Hat", was billed as a thrilling melodrama. Presented by Grenville High School and directed by Miss Vals Horsfall, the play contained all the stock characters of the thriller, a brave hero and a beautiful heroine, played by Dwight Kennedy and Jeanne Carriere, a cruel Villain and his Bad Man assistant, fiercesomely portrayed by Marcus Cameron and Layden Brown, and Mary and John, the poor innocent bystanders, enacted by Rhonda Turpin and Wendell Preston. The entire cast were supervised by the Man in the Bowler Hat, John Bray.

Following the four plays, the adjudicator, Mr. Harry Long, principal of Ste. Agathe High School, had home helpful comments for all the young actors, and a special word of praise for the Lachute High stage-hands, who had created a set versatile enough to fulfill the requirements of all four productions. The Festival would appear to have been a success both from the audience's and the actors' point of view, and it is to be hoped that the A.T.A. will repeat this project again next year.

Factors involved in house hunting

When you start to search for a first home, it's a good idea to jot down some notes on the houses you see, to compare values and help you decide which one best meets the needs of you and your family.

A home — new or old — almost certainly represents the single greatest expenditure you'll ever make. Your monthly mortgage payments will stretch over a longer period than any other loan. So it's only good sense to approach the home purchase with a logical plan and avoid being carried away by impulse, the Society of Real Estate Appraisers says.

First, ask yourself if you plan to stay in the community or neighborhood for at least the next few years. If you expect a company transfer or job change relocation in the near future, buying a house and then having to resell it quickly may be a costly mistake.

If you can answer yes to the first question, then you should ask yourself these questions before making a final decision:

Can you afford the price of the home without straining your finances too greatly? A conservative, but sound rule of thumb is that your mortgage payment, including insurance, taxes and interest, should not exceed one-fourth of your monthly income after taxes.

If you want to buy an older home, are you prepared to maintain it and make repairs promptly? If you aren't the handyman type, can you afford to hire professional help as needed?

Is the home structurally sound and watertight? If an older house, are the heating unit, roof, wiring and plumbing fixtures in good repair?

Do the zoning regulations protect the property from future commercial or industrial use of the land adjacent or nearby?

Is the neighborhood one which you like and where your children will be happy?

If a new home area, is it likely that there will be a real estate tax increase soon to pay for more schools or other services for a rapidly growing residential population?

Is the home one which will resell readily if you should be transferred unexpectedly or decide to move for other reasons?

Have you been completely honest with your real estate agent about your financial limitations and down-payment money?

If this is your first home purchase, or if you are not familiar with the area, you may want to have an independent appraiser estimate the value of the home. His impartial, informed judgment and knowledge can be reassuring and can even save you money, the society says.

Attention to detail aids painting job

The quality of materials used is of great importance in achieving a satisfactory paint job, points out the Paint Industry Council. The cost of paint used to decorate the average room is only a very small fraction of the total cost of furniture and accessories. It is good economy to buy a quality product to ensure durability and color fastness.

Be sure to use a clean, dry mop or cloth to dust walls before painting. An oil mop or treated cloth may leave a thin film on the wall which will prevent the new paint from adhering properly.

To make room painting easy, remember these three simple steps: First, paint the ceiling. Second, paint the walls. Third, paint woodwork, doors and trim — after walls have dried thoroughly.

To conceal unattractive features such as radiators and exposed pipes, the Paint Industry Council suggests that you paint them the same color as the walls.

For added safety, paint the risers on basement stairs in a light color, to define stepping areas. Or paint the first two or three inches of the tread white, using a darker shade for the risers to accent the stepping areas.

Two coats of primer sealer and one coat of gloss enamel should be used to cover an unpainted shower wall for best results. However, if the wall has been painted, a single coat of gloss enamel will be satisfactory.

Because modern latex paints are quick-drying it is necessary to clean brushes and tools immediately after use. If you splatter some of the paint, wipe it off immediately with a damp cloth.

Procedure for attractive finish on plywood

How do you obtain an attractive finish on plywood — one that does not show the grain? By applying a coat of penetrating resin sealer to equalize absorption, experts say.

First, sand the surface smooth. Be sure it is free of any traces of oil, grease or laminating glue. Fill and sand all nail holes.

If you are planning to end up with a colored, opaque finish which hides the surface completely, brush on a coat of pigmented penetrating sealer. After it has dried, sand lightly to restore a smooth surface, and remove all sandings with your vacuum cleaner or a cloth dipped in mineral spirits.

Now for the second coat. If the top coat is to be a gloss enamel, the second coat should consist of equal parts of enamel undercoat and the top coat. If the top coat is to be a latex, apply a second coat of the resin sealer. Sand lightly before applying the final coat.

When you purchase your sealer and top coat, be sure you are getting a quality product, because only quality paints and sealers will give you the service you want and expect.

Many people prefer a so-called natural finish on good quality plywood, one that shows the grain of the wood. First of all, you must select plywood which has an attractive pattern and is free of blemishes and plugs. Next, sand the wood as much as possible.

Now brush on a coat of clear penetrating resin sealer. After this has dried, sand lightly with fine or extra fine paper. More than likely you will want to color the wood to some degree.

After the color coat has dried thoroughly, sand lightly as before, and then brush on one or two coats of varnish of the desired sheen.

Time factor in painting stairs

The best time to paint a stairway in your house is just before you go to bed, so that it will be dry when the family gets up in the morning.

But this isn't always practical. For one thing, you have to start at the bottom of the stairs and paint while you are moving backwards going upstairs — otherwise you'll leave yourself at the bottom while the paint is still wet. For another, it is sometimes more practical to do the painting in the daytime or, at least, several hours before retiring.

The solution is to paint every other step so that you can use the stairway while the paint is drying. When it's dry, paint the remaining steps.

Strange: hotel and motel mattresses last longer

Your mattress would last longer if you invited your friends and neighbors to take turns sleeping on it!

That's the surprising report from the makers of Duo-Bed, the double-duty sleep equipment you find in countless motel and hotel rooms.

The Duo-Bed people discovered that mattresses last longer in motel and hotel rooms than in private homes — when you'd think it would be the other way around — and they decided to find out why.

"The secret is that a mattress lasts longer if a different person sleeps on it every night, which is what happens in hotels and motels" explains Manfred Steinfeld, chief executive officer of Duo-Bed and its parent company, Shelby Williams Industries.

"Each person curls up — or sprawls out — in a different position, on a different part of the mattress, and the whole thing wears out evenly."

Practically everybody has a favorite sleeping position — and if the same person sleeps on the same mattress every night, the wear and tear is always in the same spot the study found.

The sleeping position itself can range all the way from a tight ball in the centre of the bed to a crosswise sprawl on a king-size mattress. Sooner or later this can wear a trench in the mattress.

In real life, Steinfeld doesn't expect neighborhoods — or even large families — to start rotating beds just to prolong the life span of their mattresses. The psychological wear and tear if every day were moving day would be even worse than the wear and tear on the mattress, he notes.

"But if a day comes when you can't climb out of bed after the alarm has gone off, don't blame old age until you've checked the mattress. You may find yourself lying in a trench," he advises.

Remove the spark plug and make sure it is gapped properly and free from excess carbon.

For most people lawn-mowing is strictly a chore; get the know-how

One of the delights of spring is the deepening green of lawns after the long winter hiatus. Unfortunately, this lush growth means heavy cutting, and that means a homeowner must have his mower in good condition.

The home maintenance man who put his power mower away in the fall, cleaned and ready to go, will have no trouble. But even if he didn't, there is still time to get it ready. Here are some points you should check, according to the Lawn-Boy News Bureau.

- Remove the air filter cover of the machine and clean thoroughly.
- Check the tension on all housing bolts, and make sure they are tight.
- Remove the spark plug and make sure it is gapped properly and free from excess carbon.
- With the spark plug removed, make sure the underside of the housing is clean, the blade free of chips and gouges and properly sharpened.
- Fill the tank with clean gasoline, properly mixed, and start the machine. Minor carburetion adjustments can then be made.

If you don't feel like tackling this yourself, take the mower to a qualified service shop. But, Do It Now. Give the serviceman time to work on the mower and have it ready for the cutting season.

The old saying "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" was never more true than in power mowers. The modern mower is well built to withstand hours of operation, but it is still wise to check it from time to time to be sure it is still functioning properly.

One last word. Whenever working on a mower, with the exception of adjusting the carburetor, always disconnect the spark plug. And, of course, always stop the engine if the operator leaves the mower even for a few moments. Almost all injuries caused by power mowers are the result of improper handling.

If you feel that the old mower has had it, that it is just too much trouble and cost to have it repaired, then here are some things to think about when you decide on a new mower.

The first consideration is to buy your new mower from a reputable dealer, and a dealer who either has repair facilities of his own or has a working agreement with a repair shop. The best mower will require at least seasonal maintenance so that a service outlet is a must.

A good dealer, too, will be able to suggest the proper size mower for your lawn. There is no point in buying a big riding mower for a city-size lot.

Then, too, if you have special kinds of grass, tell the dealer this. It could require a special type of mower. Creeping bent grass, for example, requires a particular mower.

A yard with trees, shrubs and flower beds requires an easily maneuverable mower. A lightweight mower in this situation becomes a must. "Horsing" a heavy power mower around tree wells and ornamental fencing can quickly go from a pleasant chore to plain, hard work.

A good mower should last for many years of service. This means a rigid deck for strength yet light in weight. The engine, too, should be husky but with all unnecessary weight stripped away. It must be able to operate on terraced or hilly lawns and still be properly and continuously lubricated. Finally, the mower should be easy to clean by simply washing the dirt off with your hose. Check the material used in the mower to be sure nothing will rust.

Much has been written about the lack of safety in power mowers. In the vast majority of cases the accidents are caused by foolish operation. It would seem obvious that a person should not put his hands under the deck of a rotary power mower while it is in operation, any more than he would put his hand into an electric fan. If you follow the instructions of the dealer, and read and follow the advice in the owner's manual included with each mower, you will have no trouble.

If you cannot actually try the mower on a lawn before you buy, at least push it around and start it, so that you feel comfortable with it. Be sure you know how the mower operates, and any special features about the machine. As airplane pilots say, get "checked out" with the mower.

For most people, except those who love to garden, mowing a lawn is strictly a chore, but a modern power mower makes the task an easy one. If you follow the suggestions listed here you will get the mower you need. You still may not like having to use it, but you shouldn't have any trouble.

Happy mowing! —

Avoid damaging chrome fixtures

Whenever you are fixing shiny-plated fixtures which require the use of a wrench, your first step should be a trip to the medicine cabinet.

A wrench, no matter which type, is likely to cause scratches or other mars on the nut or other part of the fixture that is being gripped.

To avoid such marks, first wrap the metal in adhesive, winding it around twice. This will not prevent the wrench from getting a secure grip, but it will do its expected protective job.

To repair threshold

The entrance to a room can have a shoddy appearance if the door threshold is worn or damaged.

Since it is difficult to remove most thresholds in one piece, saw it in two, then pry out the two parts. Go to a lumber yard or building supply dealer and get a matching threshold of the same size.

Using the old threshold as a pattern, make the proper cuts in the new one. Insert it into position and drill holes that will take long finishing nails (2½ inches or longer). Drive the nails into place, using nailsets to get them below the surface of the wood. Cover the holes with wood putty or plastic wood. When the filler has dried, finished the threshold as desired.

Filling cracks in plaster walls

There are at least two ways of repairing hairline cracks in the plaster of walls.

One way is to wet the cracks, then rub some mixed spackling putty into the cracks.

Another is to rub the dry spackling material into the cracks without mixing it with water.

The rubbing of the dry powder into the cracks is easier, but does not always work. It could be tried first. If it doesn't work, then use the normal method of wetting the cracks and filling them with putty, made by mixing the powder with water.

This mixture, which should be somewhat watery, is brushed into the cracks.

WOOD RELICS

No one knows who manufactured the first wood products in North America. Wood objects in an excellent state of preservation have been found among the ancient relics of the prehistoric mound builders and cliff dwellers of the American southwest.

Will the Lawn-Boy owner please stand up

Lawn-Boy with Grasscatcher picks up grass, leaves, and weeds as you cut!

If you're a Lawn-Boy owner stand up and take a bow. You're one of the smart ones. Then sit down and relax. Isn't that easier than raking or pushing a heavy old-fashioned mower? Lawn-Boy's grasscatcher does the raking for you. It picks up grass while you cut. It picks up leaves in the fall and tidies your lawn in spring. It collects weeds before they spread over your lawn. To empty, you just snap off the bag and unzip.

Lawn-Boy starts easier, too. You use just two fingers and 94% less effort than old-fashioned heave-and-haul type mowers. And Lawn-Boy is warranted for two years—that's longer than some mowers last.

See your dealer for the full line of Lawn-Boys: with grasscatcher, without grasscatcher, push-type, and self-propelled. In all, there are 18 reasons you should own a Lawn-Boy. Your dealer is itching to show you every one.

Co-ordinate without monotony; an individuality for each room

If variety is the spice of life, what better place to start than at home. Mrs. Jacqueline Fortin, member of the Interior Decorating Society of Quebec, is a firm believer in bringing out the individuality of each room.

"A decorator must get to know clients well before creating their home — finding out what type of people they are, what kind of life they lead, their budget and expectations for the house."

To begin with, a family may decorate only one or two rooms, and follow later with others. "Budgeting a whole group of rooms is one approach. But some prefer to go all out on one room at a time. Either way, there must be coordination."

Coordination, however, does not mean monotony Mrs. Fortin is quick to state. "Each room has its own character — the decorator has to bring it out.

If the home is being designed for the owner, Mrs. Fortin arranges a meeting with owner and architect, "to make sure we aren't working at opposite ends."

Her favorite type of home, however, is traditional. "I think there is a great deal of character in an old home, even if it has to be slightly remodelled."

"Discovering the natural character of a house is part of a decorator's job, and after the initial plans are made up, rooms are grouped together around a central theme.

"There has to be a certain amount of similarity of decor, but the real individuality is in accessories." Artwork, bookshelves, bibelots, even ashtrays detract from the barrenness of the room, and each family has its preferences and style.

"My job is to guide people to bring out the best in their ideas, and avoid confusion. I shop and plan with my clients, but I make the final decisions."

She finds there is a return to modified traditional style in furnishings. "Few people want heavy traditional like Louis XVI — but if they do, it's harder to change the theme between rooms."

Roughly finished furniture such as Spanish, Colonial or Breton can be used interchangeably, but the smooth woods of the more ornate styles are in another group.

"There should be one predominant style to work from: it also adds to character of a house."

She decides how much variation from room to room is possible. "If the theme is traditional, for instance, you can't put stark modern in the next room, but you can work gradually to less formal themes."

The color of carpet or floor covering can be changed, and the secondary colors brought out. Covering walls with paper instead of paint changes the mood without disrupting the theme.

A room may even be built around the accessories. Mrs. Fortin designed one such room, taking her ideas from a collection of china statuettes. "I put them on the walls on little shelves at different heights, to give a period effect."

The foyer between rooms is most important as the coordinating centre. "It has to contain elements of each room but not look badly put together." Here, personal touches are valuable.

"If the family has things of sentimental value that fit in with the decor, I never urge them to get rid of them. It is very important to live in a personal atmosphere."

RELEASING AIR FROM RADIATOR

Release captive air in a hot water radiator by opening the valve with a screwdriver or a small key, depending on the style of the radiator. During this operation, hold a cup or small pan under the valve to catch any flow of water when the excess air has left the radiator. The second the water begins to flow, shut off the valve.

JUST WASH

Women worry more about cleaning furniture than any other housekeeping detail, according to home furnishings specialists at the University of Illinois.

These experts advise homemakers to stop worrying and start washing — because almost all important furniture finish producers recommend soap or detergent suds for keeping wood pieces clean.

CLEAN DUCT WITH HOSE OF VACUUM

If the wall is discolored within the vicinity of a warm air register, something needs a cleaning. It's either the duct just inside the grille or the filter in the furnace.

The duct can be taken care of with a vacuum cleaner hose after removal of the grille. The filter can be cleaned or replaced in a few minutes.

Use proper tools for gardening too

An all-purpose item for digging is the long handled shovel. It can be used to turn over soil, dig holes and for moving soil and other materials. The long handle elimates much of the bending, permits deep digging and the long leverage helps make throwing easier.

The short, D handled shovel gets into smaller spaces and permits a heavier grip on the shovel — important for heavier digging and moving heavier loads.

For Turning Soil

Best for turning over soil is the standard, straight bladed spade. Because its blade is longer than a shovel's it prepares the soil deeper and is better for digging trees and shrubs.

Where soil is rocky or hard, the spading fork penetrates best of all and is the lightest to handle.

For smoothing soil and preparing seedbeds, there is the standard steel garden rake. A broom rake is best for leaves or grass clippings because it will not dig or tear out the grass.

The usual tool for slicing off weeds beneath the surface or loosening soil around plants is the standard hoe. A triangular hoe is best for working into small spaces.

Pronged Tools

A useful "compromise tool" is a two pronged weeding hoe, which has the advantages of both hoe and cultivator.

Edgers and scrapers, too, find many uses and often are used interchangeably for cutting sharp edges on flower beds, cutting sod and chopping ice in winter.

For close work, such as weeding, there is a variety of short handled cultivators, and weeders, as well as standard, narrow and bulb trowels.

Many advantages in modern-way heating

"I have always been interested in hygiene," says Dr. Adelard Hurteau, who lives in Glenwood Park, the All-Electric development just outside Hull. "For many years I gave courses on that subject to young student nurses, and it is recognized that one of the biggest disease carriers is dust. What I appreciate most about my new home is that there is no hot air blowing into the rooms and circulating dust and soot. With electric heating, the atmosphere is healthier and our drapes, carpets and furniture stay clean."

Another satisfied electric heat user in the Hull area is Roger Blais, an engineer with Northern Electric. For Mr. Blais, electric heating is the system of the future. "I had read a couple of articles on the subject in the trade press," he says, "so when I was having my own home built I insisted on electric heating. Since I will probably be in this house for quite some years I wanted the most modern heating system available."

Mr. Arthur Monette of St Jerome had originally intended to have a furnace in his home. As a matter of fact, the basement concrete had already been poured when he changed his mind and decided on electric heating. So now, where the furnace was to have been, he has a large recreation room for the children. "We find electric heat very convenient" he says, "especially in controlling the temperature in each room."

These are just some of the testimonials Hydro-Quebec has collected on electric heating and the most enthusiastic boosters are those people who presently enjoy electric heating, provided — and this is the big proviso — provided that their installation comform to Quebec Electrical League standards for electric heating.

Electric heating is healthy. The natural humidity produced by such everyday activities as cooking, bathing and washing is retained in the house to provide a comfortable relative humidity. No annoying dust is circulated through the house — furniture and draperies stay clean and last longer. Such a dust-free atmosphere is important from point of view of health. It cuts down considerably on winter colds and sore throats.

And with electric heating, you have just the right amount of heat where you need it, thanks to an individual thermostat in each room.

It is obvious that one thermostat installed in a central position in the house cannot take into account all the variables of temperature stemming from wind direction, heat losses, different living habits and so on. In the usual heating system, every time the temperature drops around the central thermostat, the furnace starts up and blows hot air into all the rooms regardless of their internal temperature.

But, electric heating is flexible. You decide the temperature you want in each room and set the thermostat accordingly.

Another advantage in heating with electricity is its quietness — electric heating is as silent as a light bulb. There is no noisy furnace to come on at night, or heating ducts to thump as hot air starts to expand the metal.

All these advantages — cleanliness, humidity, individual room control and quietness — make for comfort in a heating system. But that's not all.

Electric heat is eminently safe because there is no combustion, no flame. This means that you can do away with inflammable fuels on the premises and the consequent danger of explosion. And, naturally, you have use of the entire basement as there is no furnace or fuel tank to take up space.

Anyone intending to buy a new home would be well advised to enquire about electric heating. Remember, to ensure real comfort and satisfaction, great care must be taken in insulating a home. The easiest way to do this, obviously, is when the house is being built. Today, as a result of Hydro-Quebec's campaign to educate its sales allies in electric heating standards, competent specialists are available anywhere in the Province. They will be able to advise the homeowner on the amount of insulation to use and the capacity of electric heating units to install.

So, if you want the good life in your new home, choose clean, dust-free, safe, electric heating. For further information concerning this modern heating system, contact your nearest Hydro-Quebec office.

A real space-saver —

Electric heating is a real space-saver, as there are no furnace, fuel tank or heating ducts to clutter up the basement. In the photo, Dr. Adelard Hurteau, of Lucerne, relaxes in the cosy study he has made for himself downstairs.

Noted uptrend in electrical heating

By Leo MacGillivray

Since 1961 there has been a spectacular increase in electrically-heated homes and other buildings in the Province of Quebec.

Speaking at the opening of the new Havre des Iles apartment development in the city of Laval some time ago, Resources Minister Rene Levesque remarked that in 1955 the percentage of electrically-heated dwellings in the province was .05 while it had risen to 7 per cent in 1965.

"This is the trend for the future," he said.

The main increase has taken place in the last five years, according to André Bolduc, Hydro-Quebec's research economist concerned with electrical heating.

According to Mr. Bolduc's figures, the number of electrically-heated dwelling units, including private homes and apartment units, was 3,400 in 1961, more than double the 1960 figure.

By 1962 the figure had risen to 1,700 and since then the figures are: 8,600 in 1963, 11,200 in 1964 and 14,000 in 1965.

Of the 14,000 dwelling units completed or under construction in 1965, about 10,000 were private homes and the rest in apartment developments.

Hydro-Quebec officials estimate that about 10 per cent of new housing in the next few years will be electrically heated — an increase of some 4,000 a year with a projected construction of 40,000 new units each year.

By 1967 the number of electrically-heated homes in Quebec is expected to be 22,000.

In Montreal alone the main electrically-heated apartment developments are the Havre des Iles, with 400 units at the start and another 350 to be constructed; the Saguenay, 200; Benny Crescent, 130, and Manoir LaFontaine, 90.

Other types of buildings are also following the trend and, according to Mr. Bolduc, there are some 100 electrically - heated hotels and motels, 20 schools, some 90 commercial buildings of various sorts — restaurants, office buildings, financial institutions, etc. — as well as 150 industrial buildings.

Select your own interior climate

Homes some day will have windows to admit light — and nothing else.

"The technology of climate control has advanced to a stage where windows in a home will be obsolete except for lighting purposes," Curt E. Hoerig, vice-president of an air conditioning company, points out. He says the art of climate control already is so advanced that a person can select the climate he wants in his home and maintain it perfectly year round, regardless of the temperature or relative humidity outside.

Make best use of modern lighting bulbs and fixtures

Who says the "good old days" were all that good? When it came to lighting your home, they definitely weren't!

Remember the bare bulbs in the centre of the ceiling, the extension cords running down the walls?

With vastly improved light bulbs, better fixtures and a constant supply of electricity, those days have vanished in all but a few Canadian homes.

You're paying for the bulbs, the fixtures, the electricity, but do you know how to make the best use of them?

It costs the average householder little or nothing to make the best use of the light he has.

Proper lighting design — for example, the way a ceiling fixture controls and distributes the light — determines its value. If exposed bulbs glare in your eyes you are not getting the best value from your lighting dollar.

Special bulbs, such as Shadow Ban, have been designed to eliminate this nuisance.

Bulbs should never show above, below or through a shield. Use a diffuser and several Shadow Ban bulbs in multiple sockets to spread soft, even light through the room.

Well-designed table lamps can be decorative as well as functional. Be sure to protect your eyes from too little light, or from glaring bulbs, by selecting the proper light bulb in the proper lamp. The average man's eyes, when he is reading, are about 42 inches from the floor; the average woman's 40 inches. The bottom of the shade should be just above eye level, allowing plenty of light to fall on the page you're reading but permitting no glare in the eyes.

A modern lamp spreads light over 40 or 50 square feet. In a living room, about five lamps are needed to give both a decorative value and proper lighting. Select them to match your decorative scheme — then place them where they will do the most good. There are many Coloramic or Decorative lamps in various wattages to fill any need.

When working at a desk, proper lighting can encourage concentration and good posture. Very dark or very bright surrounding colors can be distracting, so desk tops and adjacent walls should be light while lamp shades should be fairly dense.

The bottom of a desk lamp shade should be 15 inches from the desk top while the lamp itself should be 15 inches from the material you're reading.

Wall lighting can provide the most glamorous form of general room lighting or it can combine duty with beauty as a local lighting unit.

Whether in cornice, valance or wall-bracket form, wall lights provide diffused, even light that is ideal for entertaining, just relaxing, or for television viewing.

A television screen, unlike a movie screen, is not intended for viewing in a darkened room. The strong contrast between the bright screen and dark surroundings is extremely tiring to the eyes. A moderate light level, with four or five tri-lite table and floor lamps, provides the proper medium of light.

But, if at all possible, position the lamps so that they are not reflected by the TV screen. If this is impossible, opaque or dense translucent bowls will help.

Kitchens should be light and bright. When you blend lighting ingredients with the design of the work areas, you will have a cheerful kitchen that saves time and energy and is easy on the disposition. Kitchen light bulbs should be used for this purpose.

A ceiling fixture with a Warm White Deluxe fluorescent lamp provides good lighting, while separate fixtures over work areas allow you to see into drawers and read labels on shelves easily.

There is no reason why a laundry area should be dark just because it is seldom used. You need an overhead fluorescent fixture, especially if you're using a wringer. You're much safer when you can see what you are doing. CGE lighting experts recommend a fluorescent Cool White Deluxe lamp for this purpose as it provides a bright, brisk work atmosphere.

Use proper fuse

The most usual fuse on an ordinary household electrical circuit is rated at 15 amperes. It is put there to prevent the wires from overheating as the result of an overload on the circuit. Without the fuse, the wires would overheat and start a fire. Instead, the fuse melts and cuts off the electricity.

If you replace a 15 ampere fuse with one which has a higher rating, such as 30 amperes, you lose the protection which the original fuse provided. The important rule in the replacement of a fuse, therefore, is to use a fuse of the same size.

Lighting brings room to life —

It would be difficult to provide better lighting for any living room. The wide windows give a maximum of light. The brick fireplace is the same color as the exterior, with a high base. Period furniture styling completes the decor.

Art work has place in room decor

A room without a focal point is dull. "Art gives perspective, personality, and a sense of dimension," says Claude Hinton.

Mr. Hinton, whose studio is a miniature gallery of artwork ancient and modern, believes there is no limit to the use of art in the home. "When a couple chooses a first painting or piece of sculpture, they are bringing their personality into the home."

For a start, Mr. Hinton advises buying one "good" piece, "something that has quality, though it is not necessarily expensive." Choosing artwork, he says, is a personal matter. "Don't be influenced by the market or other people's taste. As a decorator I never impose my ideas on the clients — they have to live with it."

If the homeowner has no idea of what to buy, the decorator must find out where his tastes lie. "There's such a variety of styles and types it's impossible not to find something suitable."

The type of house must be taken into account — but it is not a primary consideration. "One can always mix periods and styles subtly — it gives individuality. As long as the total picture is attractive details blend."

How much artwork is enough? "That is entirely up to the owner. If he has an interest in his collection it expresses his personality. There's no point in buying to match the room, it's like living in a store window."

Even a small room comes to life when a painting is added, said Mr. Hinton, dismissing the idea that a lot of space is needed. "Like a window, a piece of art is a new perspective."

The decor of a room may be built around a piece of artwork, "for something very large or special." But there should never be a static effect.

"If you look at the same painting night and day for years on end, you're bound to lose perspective. The only way to appreciate art is rotate it — look at it from all angles."

Artwork, says Mr. Hinton, can never be outgrown. "Its value increases the longer you live with it."

The best way to decide on a piece of art is to "try it out." I've known people who insisted they didn't like a certain painting. I took it to their home, left it for a week or two — and they wouldn't give it back."

PORCH OPTIONAL

When your pocketbook forces you to make some cuts in the house you're having built, consider dropping the porch from the plans. A porch is one of the easiest things to add at a later time.

Murals in wallpaper

A vista, framed by majestic classical ruins, provides the elegant background in this living room setting. The focal point here is created by new full-wall murals in wallpaper — a four-panel design, 8 feet wide. The mural is ready pasted and fully trimmed for easy application, vinyl bonded, washable for easy maintenance and fade-proof for lasting beauty.

Two bathrooms no longer a luxury

Houses with only one bathroom may be on the way out, says the Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association. Many homes, not necessarily in the luxury class, have two, or even three bathrooms.

One reason is the current trend in Canada towards larger families. Any home with more than two bedrooms needs an extra bathroom, says the association, for the comfort and convenience of the family.

Far from being a frill, a second bathroom may actually save money. The builder uses it as an extra selling feature, and it adds a corresponding resale value to the house. It is less expensive to buy a two-bathroom home in the first place than to add an extra bathroom later to meet the demands of a growing family. It saves time and steps.

Owners of older homes can also save money by installing a second bathroom. Resale value of the house is increased, and considerably improved new bathroom and heating units can often cut operating costs with their greater efficiency. A space saving can often be effected, and the styling changes that have taken place will result in a more attractive home.

Often a wash basin and vanity can be tucked into waste space in an older home that does not have room for a full second bathroom.

Luxury homes often feature a complete second bathroom off the master bedroom, complete with high-style fixtures, often introducing color, sometimes with sunken tubs or corner units, and make-up counters.

A basement bathroom is convenient for families with growing children. They can enter by the basement, take off their outdoor clothing and muddy boots or shoes, and wash up before entering the main living area. Cleaning costs and housework are reduced.

Any home more than 25 years old could benefit from a thorough check of the plumbing and heating system, says the association, and if the house is more than 50 years old, money could certainly be saved by a complete renovation.

Criticism for inadequate plumbing

Too many homes ill-equipped

[illegible] poverty could [illegible] in the basement and the [illegible], says E. J. Learning, president of the Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association.

"[illegible] than a third of Canadian [illegible] flush toilets. Half [illegible] a furnace, and almost half have no bath or shower. . .

If we are going to declare war on poverty, the best place to start would seem to be through the provision of at least the basic hygiene needs and minimum comfort standards in the homes of our people," said Mr. Learning.

How do people manage without baths, showers, toilets and furnaces? Some share facilities with other families — 117,000 of the estimated 4,404,000 households in [illegible]. Another 82,000 households [illegible] chemical toilets.

Heating is provided by a cookstove or range for 393,000 families, and 1,066,000 use heating stoves.

There are 484,000 families with [illegible] water piped to the house, and another 468,000 with cold water only. The only way 317,000 families get hot water is by heating it with a coal or wood stove.

"We realize that almost all of these families want the same facilities that most of us take for granted," said Mr. Learning. "But many still cannot afford them without financial assistance."

The association is, in the light of the DBS findings, reassessing its own role in marketing plumbing, heating and cooling facilities. Few contractors have showrooms where plumbing fixtures and heating units can be seen in attractive settings by potential customers.

A recent survey of association members, however, revealed that a large majority are in favor of a co-operative plumbing, heating and cooling showroom in their locality.

"There have been tremendous advances in such areas as styling, color, efficiency and compactness of plumbing, heating and air conditioning units recently of which the public at large is still almost unaware," said Mr. Learning. "We need showrooms especially to interest the home owner in modernization of his facilities, and in addition of extra units to save his family time, steps and money."

Tub mounting

A critical and widespread problem with bathtubs is the unsightly crack that gradually develops at the joint between the bottom of the tub and the floor.

It can be avoided if the tub is securely mounted and this in turn normally requires special L bracket supports under the tub (which are then bolted to a wall). They hold a tub firmly in place.

They are not usually provided, so you must ask for them, or for comparable support.

Easy to clean

Wood built-ins and cabinets, from the hands of skilled professionals, factory craftsmen, or devoted do-it-yourselfers, are simple to install and easy to clean and care for. The family enjoys the convenience they offer and they are easy to alter as family requirements change.

Make kitchen bright and cheerful

The average Canadian housewife spends four to five hours a day in the kitchen. She uses that busy room for the preparation of meals, dish washing, the mid-morning coffee break with the neighbors, and, often, a late evening snack.

To bolster her morale, the kitchen should be bright and cheerful. A pleasant change can be easily achieved with some quality enamel and a minimum of work.

A quality enamel is essential. According to the Paint Industry Council, the reasons range from protection, to durability, to color and to cost. Enamel is a protective coating which will prevent the moisture from cooking and cleaning from seeping through the walls and causing extensive, and later, expensive damage.

It is a finish which can be frequently cleaned without dulling the original bright color. Enamel offers a virtually unlimited selection of colors and it can be easily applied. Finally, a quality enamel assures complete hiding power, non-fading color and a long lasting finish.

To obtain best results when applying enamel follow these rules:

First clean all surfaces to be painted with soap and water or detergent. This will remove any dirt and grease which may have collected on the walls.

Fill any little cracks or holes with a patching compound and sand them smooth after the compound has dried. To assure proper adhesion of the enamel, roughen very glossy areas with sandpaper.

Flow the enamel onto the surface with a generously loaded brush using long, smooth strokes. Before refilling the brush, cross-stroke and then, with a practically dry brush, go over the area again with long strokes. This will assure a smooth finish.

Color, if properly used, can work magic in changing the appearance of your kitchen. If it is long and narrow, the Paint Industry Council suggests enamelling the long side walls with a light color, and the narrow walls with a deeper or brighter hue to make it seem wider.

If the kitchen is too boxy, make one wall the focal point with a contrasting color and decorate with kitchen utensils such as spice racks, copper pots and molds and gay potholders.

This will add interest to its shape and put much-used items at your finger tips.

If the ceiling is too high, use a deeper color than the walls. If too low, a light tint is suggested. Your kitchen will look and feel cooler if your wall-colors are blues, blue-greens or blue grays. Bright yellow, corals and pinks will add lively accent touches.

Counter tops

Use marble or stainless steel where hot pans are put down (range centre); wood for your chopping and food preparation (mix centre); plastic laminate or vinyl for good looks and easy cleaning elsewhere and particularly around the sink.

The proper surface in the right place will not only mean low upkeep but is also an advantage if you put the house up for sale after a few years.

Plan before you start —

More to painting than applying the brush

So you're going to paint the outside of your home this spring or summer: There are a number of things you should do to assure yourself of a successful, satisfying, long-lasting paint job.

First of all, realize the wisdom of using only quality paint. Quality paint costs less in the long run because it covers better, lasts longer and stays brighter. Steer clear of gimmicky offerings and so-called bargains.

Next on the list, is your choice of color. First question to ask yourself is how a proposed color choice will go with the colors used by your neighbors. Some colors complement each other, while others clash almost audibly. Avoid 'fad' colors because a quality paint job will last a number of years, and you may tire quickly of mauve or orange, let us say, long before repainting is needed.

Let's start at the bottom and work up. Check to see whether the siding or other wood of which your house is made comes into contact with the ground. It shouldn't, because the wood can draw up ground moisture like a wick, and once this moisture gets into the wood it can ruin the best paint job in the world as it forces itself out again.

Moisture also works its way into wood where there is a gap in the siding such as occurs between two pieces of board or where the siding meets a window or door frame. These openings should be caulked, of course. Also, caulk around openings for utilities, vents and other breaks in the surface. While you're checking this, also check to see whether there are any cracked or broken boards that should be replaced or loose boards that should be renailed.

Unless you are using rust-proof nails, all nailheads should be primed with an anti-corrosive primer. If they are the type of nail that should be counter-sunk, do so, but prime before you putty the holes. Any metal objects attached to siding should be primed to prevent rusting, which will stain the new paint.

Take a look at the windows and examine the conditions of the putty. If it is dried out and loose and crumbly, scrape it away. Prime the sash with housepaint primer before reputtying; this prevents the oils in the putty from being absorbed into the wood, a process that makes the putty too brittle to last.

Examine the gutters to see that they have not been bent out of shape by the winter's heavy snows and ice. At the same time look for rust that should be brushed way before repainting the gutters. It's a good idea to screen over the gutters and drain pipes to prevent leaves and twigs from blocking them up.

Then for the roof. Check to see whether any shingles have become loosened after the winter. Look at the flashing around chimneys, pipes, and in the valleys of slanting roof sections. Perhaps the caulking around them needs to be renewed. If shingles are broken or missing, or if the flashing is not intact, it's better to call in a roofing contractor to make the repairs.

As you cover the house, look closely for areas of loose, flaky, peeling or blistered paint. Loose paint should be brushed away before you repaint, and any bare wood primed with the primer recommended by the manufacturer of the house paint you intend to use.

Blistering paint usually indicates that moisture has gotten into the siding and has blistered the paint as it forced its way outside. This moisture may have come from outside because of leaks in the roof or other causes. But most moisture is generated within the house and has forced its way through the interior walls. Unless some other escape route is provided for this moisture, the odds are that even if you repaint with the best paint, you'll have blisters again the following year.

There are several ways of eliminating this moisture problem. One is by providing vents in the siding through which the moisture can escape. Various venting systems are available, so discuss this problem with your reputable paint or hardware dealer. A second method of handling the problem is by using on the interior surfaces of outside room walls a paint which will act as a moisture barrier. Generally recommended are enamels and oil primer sealers.

Let the moisture escape by opening windows after showers and bathing, and by providing vents or exhausts for washers, dryers and in the kitchen.

Refrigerators

Suspect an air leak into your refrigerator through a tiny opening around the door? Place a piece of paper half inside the refrigerator and then close the door on it. If you can pull out the paper, the door isn't closing tightly enough. The gasket at that point probably is worn.

You can make a temporary repair by fastening strips of plastic electrical tape over the worn part of the gasket.

Know what's what

In buying a house, don't put up any money until you come to an understanding, in writing, about exactly what is included in the sale. This should take in such things as carpeting, garden tools, TV aerial, laundry equipment, etc.

Multi-purpose dining room gives value in living

Is there anyone today who denies the value of a formal dining room — or anyone who does not want one?

Many families, however, reject a dining room on the basis that it's used only once or twice a day and so feel that the space is too costly for its use.

The answer for some may be to make the dining room multi-purpose. Combining it with a family room usually is not successful, however, for the dining area then downgrades to a casual, anything-goes atmosphere.

The better idea is to build a dining room slightly larger than would be needed for just table and chairs, and then, at one end, design a small conversation and reading corner. Such a nook often becomes a favorite and much-used spot in the house.

Another idea would be to add a fireplace at one end of the dining room and flank it with two arm chairs that could be used as the table, as well.

Other possibilities are to build the home office into the dining room, or to design it to function also as a game room, choosing a dining table and chairs that will work comfortably as a game set. Additional storage space for party supplies can be built into the china cabinet wall.

Beyond the practicality of making a formal dining room multi-purpose is the surprisingly delightful atmosphere it gains when a banquette, library shelving and a desk are added. Even more special is a fireplace, which always has a particularly welcoming quality.

Along with these ingredients usually comes a warmer touch in decorating. Wood paneling, coppery-toned Douglas fir for example, sets a background that is both rich and inviting. Its gold and red-gold colors can be picked up easily in upholstery and carpeting to complement the cooler feeling of sparkling silver, crisp white linen and shimmering crystal; or in a sun-flooded climate, a color scheme of olive and midnight blue with copper-gold accents, is delightful against fir.

This is a wood that also is noted for its easy workability, so is perfect for any built-ins that may be included in the room, from a cabinet-work to desk or banquette.

Five Candidates in Argent'l riding

Five candidates are now in the electoral race for Argenteuil, shaping towards a vigorous contest for the provincial representation, on Sunday, June 5.

After official nominations last Sunday, the Returning Officer, Notary Richard Valois, announced the candidates as follows (listed alphabetically):

Jean-Pierre Bouchard, 22, corrector of examinations, University of Ottawa, 18 rue St-André, Beauharnois — candidate for the Ralliement pour l'Indépendance Nationale (R.I.N. - Separatist).

In the overall nominations which took place in 103 ridings the press enumerated a total of 419 candidates. There are eight political parties, of which four are officially recognized. (For recognition it is required that a party present at least 10 candidates.) The other parties, besides those above represented in Argenteuil, are Socialist (Quebec), Conservative, Communist, and "Parti pour la Démocratisation Economique" (Economic Democratic).

CBMT coverage of Prov'l election

CBMT's coverage of the Quebec provincial election will begin when the polls close at 8 p.m. on Sunday, June 5.

Observers in all 108 ridings will telephone results on direct lines to a Montreal studio. A battery of telephone operators will tabulate the results as they arrive and pass them on to two announcers, Sheridan Nelson and Fred Walker, for presentation on-air.

"This is the first time we'll be using the direct-line system for a provincial election," said Ray Chaisson, executive producer of the election coverage. "It should give us by far the fastest coverage we've ever had."

Two CBC newsmen, Allan Yates of Montreal and Gerald McDuff of Quebec City, will be in the Montreal studio to provide additional commentary. The CBC's Ottawa correspondent, Norman Depoe, will also contribute special reports but with the emphasis on federal-provincial relationships.

Inquiry on Powers Hospital

Quebec — The Hon. Eric Kierans, Quebec Minister of Health, states that irregularities in the operation of the Powers Hospital at St. Philippe were drawn to his attention during December of last year. As the result of reports filed with him, the minister decided to cancel the permit of that institution immediately and to hand over the records to the Minister of Justice, requesting a formal inquiry. With this inquiry in progress, the Minister of Health stated it was not opportune to give out further information at this point.

Don Heggie heads Textile Colorists Quebec section

A member of the Dominion Ayers Limited staff, Donald Heggie, was elected president of the Canadian Association of Textile Colorists and Chemists, Quebec Section, at the 30th annual meeting which was held recently in the Sheraton - Mt. Royal Hotel, Montreal. He succeeds C. R. Teichgraber, of Domil Ltd., Montreal.

Donald Heggie, new president

Guest speaker at the convention was Dr. R. C. Rae, principal and vice-chancellor of Sir George Williams University, who spoke on "Education in Quebec — the Dual Purpose Revolution". . . In our "learning society" with a need for continuous education and training through each life time, industry, commerce and professional associations must play a part in total education strategy with the institutions of formal education, he said, in the course of his remarks.

Sentiments and Sidelights

An "attraction" at Lachute Spring Fair — not so glamorous as the girlie shows but of infinitely greater benefit — will be the free chest X-ray clinics conducted on all four days by the Anti-Tuberculosis Society. In this connection, it is noted by the Health Unit authorities that X-ray examinations are compulsory to all handlers of food in stores, restaurants, hotels, etc.

A Lions' Night feature at the Fair (not listed in our report last week) will be the performance of two brass bands of Junior "A" calibre, and a male and female gymnast troupe from Immaculate Conception, Montreal, who have ranked as champions in their class. . . Emmett's Security Patrol Inc. will be in charge of policing at the grounds again this year.

Both Lachute and Q.P.P. officers reported a quiet week-end, in spite of the heavy holiday traffic. There were no accidents in Lachute, and throughout the County, five Q.P.P. cars patrolled, with all men on duty. Only several minor mishaps, with no injuries, were reported, and two local drivers were arrested and charged with impaired driving.

The Catholic School Commission has two collective labor agreements under study, one for teachers (a renewal of contract), and the other for caretakers and maintenance staff.

Lachute High School students — 52 in number, from the two Grade VI classes — enjoyed an outing to Upper Canada Village, Morrisburg, last Saturday. Fine holiday weather accompanied the young tourists, who travelled in two school buses and were escorted by their teachers, Mrs. Douglas Clark and Miss Lorna Crawford.

J.-J. Cyr, new president

Jeune Commerce elects officers for year 1966-67

Elected to the presidency of Lachute's Junior Chamber of Commerce is Jean-Jacques Cyr, an associate in the insurance business of Lagarde & Cyr. He replaces Georges Raymond in the presidency.

Vice-presidents are Yves Blais, André Cayer and Hubert Pilon, while Michel Néron succeeds André Landreville as secretary.

It is recalled that the Jeune Commerce, with Georges Raymond as president, evidenced a revival in 1965 and promoted a winter carnival, which proved a successful venture to the tune of $10,000 proceeds. At the meeting and election of officers, donations were voted to several deserving organizations, notably $100 each to the choir of l'Ecole Secondaire, the Catholic Boy Scouts, the St. Jullen Loisirs and the Carrefour du Livre.

Land option for a new industry

Prospects look good for a new industry to be established here soon. Developments in this direction were disclosed to city council by Mayor Dr. Zoël Saindon. (The council was summoned to adopt certain measures incidental to the Lachute-Ayersville amalgamation. In lack of a quorum the meeting was adjourned; at the gathering of councillors, however, Mayor Saindon gave these details.)

The plant will be allied to the automobile industry, manufacturing contributory parts. It would commence with about 125 employees, with likelihood of doubling that number, when operations get going. The management plans to start production in 1967.

In this connection, according to Mayor Saindon, option has been taken on some 44 acres of land by Gerald Walker, acting for the municipality. The land, belonging to J. Alex Pollock, is described as being in the Vide Sac settlement, on both sides of the railway track. The option (of six months duration) was negotiated between Messrs. Pollock and Walker; it was explained by the mayor that Mr. Walker took out the option since the land lies in St. Jerusalem, and therefore Lachute corporation could not act as direct purchaser. However, Lachute can acquire the land under this arrangement for $30,000, the vendor's price, and can transfer it to the company for this figure plus the cost of sewer, water and municipal service installations.

A representative of the company was here last week together with Mr. James Dunlop, of the CPR, and after inspecting the possible locations around the perimeter of the town, selected the site on Mr. Pollock's land.

The company in question has plants already established in British Columbia and in Toronto. The proximity of the railroad is designed to facilitate transport, both over a distance and to nearer distribution centres.

Two vacancies in Protestant Board

On Monday, June 6, nominations will be held for the election of two Protestant school commissioners here. Those whose terms have expired are — Lorne R. Duncan, first elected in 1957, who has served three consecutive terms since that time; and Thos. C. Smith, who was elected to the board in 1963 and has completed his term.

In the event of a contest, voting will take place on the following Monday, June 13. Times for nomination, and information on polls for voting purposes, are advertised by the school secretary on page 6 of this issue.

It was learned last week that Dominion Ayers Limited, Wood Products Division, had offered to negociate with the C.S.N. representatives under reserve of a 'Petition in Revision of Judgment' regarding Union recognition, presently pending before the Labor Board. As a result, the parties met on two occasions and some useful progress had been made. However, by letter dated May 12, and without prior notice to the Company, the Union appealed to the Minister of Labor for the appointment of a conciliator, stating as follows:

"Practically all the clauses suggested by the petitioners (C.S.N.) are being discussed in length, resulting in extremely slow negotiations, and as a consequence the contract cannot be concluded within a reasonable length of time without the assistance of a conciliator."

As a result of the foregoing, the Company has decided that, since it is the Union's wish to proceed before a conciliator, the negotiations (under reserve) should be discontinued until then.

Annual convention held —

County W.I. meeting decries Sunday vote

The Argenteuil County Women's Institutes held their annual convention Saturday, May 14, in Trinity Church Hall, Morin Heights, with Mrs. Chas. Hall, County president, in the chair. Lovely weather prevailed, and all 10 branches were well represented.

The meeting was called to order at 10 a.m. by singing of the Ode and repeating the Mary Stewart Collect. The secretary's report showed 10 branches active, with 299 members. The treasurer's report showed General and Educational funds in good standing. Conveners' reports all testified that the past year had been a very successful one.

The Senior Citizens' Home report was also heard; this fund is gradually growing and it is hoped that before too long something constructive may be arrived at.

A report on the Drama Festival was given by Mrs. Chas. Stephens. Four branches had put on plays, which were very well received, Brownsburg winning the trophy donated by Mrs. Geo. McGibbon. A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Stephens and Mrs. McGibbon for their interest in this project.

At this time a life membership from the County was presented to Mrs. C. Stephens — Mrs. H. Ellard, past-provincial president, making the presentation. A short singsong followed, with Mrs. E. Bulley at the piano.

The president then gave her remarks on the year's activities, and the gathering adjourned to United Church hall, where a delicious luncheon was served, with Morin Heights branch as hostesses. Honored guests at the head-head-table were the Rev. R. McCullough, the Rev. H. G. Baugh, Mr. Wm. Cottingham, M.P.P., Dr. L. Turcotte, Mayor Geo. Watchorn, Mr. LeClerc, president of the Legion, Mrs. H. Ellard, past-provincial president, and others. A lovely cake made by Mrs. Melvin Dewar, of Frontier Branch, was placed on the head-table.

The afternoon session opened by singing "O Canada". Mrs. C. W. P. Baugh held a short memorial service and a moment's silence was observed for Mrs. J. Berube, of Brownsburg Branch. Miss Hannah Smith then introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. H. Ellard, past-provincial president.

Mrs. Ellard spoke with grave concern of the decrease in W.I. members, not so serious in Quebec as in other provinces. She questioned why this should be, and asked what should be done about it. There will have to be some changes in the W.I. if it is to survive. Leaders are badly needed, and "our volunteer service is one way of paying for our place on earth. We must be enthusiastic, as we have greater strength than we realize. We need personality and patience. In W.I. we learn the social and educational contacts." — Mrs. Ellard spoke of the Leadership Course to be held in May.

Mrs. Gordon Cooke thanked the speaker for her challenging and inspiring talk. Hymns of all nations were sung at this time.

Resolutions

Besides various motions voicing appreciation and acknowledgment, the following resolutions of wider application were formally adopted:

Whereas: The Women's Institutes are working to promote tourism and better understanding in our "Belle Province",

Be it resolved that we set an example to other provinces by having all road signs on highways, by-ways, cities, towns, and villages bi-lingual.

Whereas: We deplore the fact that many of our public buses are not kept clean and have no ash-trays or garbage receptacles,

Be it resolved that in keeping with the program of 'making Canada lovelier', and to help make Canada a healthier country in which to live, we urge that this matter be brought to attention of

Argentl. Art Association reviews past year, plans season's events

The 11th annual meeting of the Argenteuil Art Association Inc., held last Saturday at the home of the president, Mrs. L. T. Porter, St. Andrews East, proved the organization at a high peak of interest and support. The Association registered a membership of around 160 in 1965 — an increase of 50 in a two-year period. This fine position was revealed in the annual report of the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Vivian Walker, who also gave a satisfactory review of finances.

The president, Mrs. Porter, in her report summarized last year's activities, notably the three exhibitions held, at which 659 visitors had registered and participation had shown a remarkable uptrend, especially through the featuring of handicrafts and a photographic display.

Miss A. L. Wales as chairman of the nominating committee presented the slate of officers, which was duly approved and elected. Thereupon the president, thanking the members for re-electing her, paid tribute to the assistance of her executive, specially mentioning Miss Wales and the secretary for their onerous duties well accomplished.

The meeting adjourned for a social hour, and tea was served by the president as the large gathering enjoyed the hospitality of her home.

At an executive meeting which followed, dates were agreed upon for the three exhibitions this season, to be held as usual in the St. Andrews municipal hall, by courtesy of the mayor and council. Exhibitions are planned as follows:

Graphics and Sculpture — June 25 to July 3 (Miss Freda Pemberton-Smith, committee chairman).

Historic Paintings — August 27 to September 5 (Vivian Walker).

Details of these events will be advertised both through the press and by notice to the members.

It was agreed that a reservation be included in the rules that all exhibits shall be subject to approval of the committee, in order to ensure propriety and conformity with requirements. Conveners accepted the duties of arranging for "sitters" during the afternoon and evening hours of these exhibitions.

In conclusion a warm vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Porter for her enthusiastic leadership and for agreeing to accept the presidency for another term.

Ecstasy for tots and teens

A few of the more than 1,100 local children who were guests of the Lachute District Shrine Club to attend last week's Shrine Circus, had a close-up view of several of the acts. Above, Gail Billingham, Beverley McOuat, Brenda McOuat, Nancy Dixon, Linda Drew, Linda Dixon, Mavis Binda and Lynn MacTavish are seen with "Burger's Performing Chimpanzees" and the owners of the act, the Burgers. To the right, two of the local girls are in a close-up with the Shrine Circus elephants.

This year, as in past seasons, school children from the district are guests of the local Shriners. Proceeds from the circus go towards maintaining the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, one of numerous such hospitals on the North American continent.

Lachute ladies near bomb blast in Parliament

A party of around 30 Lachute ladies had a disquieting reception on their visit to Parliament last Wednesday, which was punctuated by the bomb-blast while they were in the visitors' gallery of the legislative chamber. It was by co-incidence that their visit to the capital occurred on the same day, and that they were in such proximity to what might have been an appalling tragedy, when a malcontent visitor exploded a bomb in a nearby washroom — killing only himself but wreaking damage to the surroundings.

Some of the Lachute ladies reported having seen the man leave the visitors' gallery just prior to the explosion. The ladies were unhurt, but some of them were visibly unnerved by the incident. The remainder of their visit, as guests of Mr. Roger Regimbal, M.P., was both pleasant and agreeable.

By BOB ATCHISON

For those who saw the black bear on top of the small car this past week, and have wondered where it came from — it was shot about 50 miles from Sherbrooke in the Eastern Townships, by André Roy of Brownsburg. The specimen weighed 427 pounds, and was in good condition; as a matter of fact, seeing this beast you would have thought it had been roaming around all winter, instead of sleeping. It was shot with an Enfield army rifle, 303 calibre, with a soft-nose bullet; just the one shot, under the right ear, did the trick. This animal was not shot just for the sake of killing; I was told the hide is going to be used as a floor rug. This will cost a pretty penny, and I'll bet there will be no more bears shot by André for this purpose. A four-wheel-drive truck was used to get it out of the bush, so figure out this cost, too.

I have not mentioned our panthers for some time — for one reason, most people don't believe these animals have ever been around this area, let alone been seen. But they have, and always will be; and what's more, one of them was spotted last week-end right near Dalesville. A young one, but nevertheless it was seen, and those reporting this instance are not the type to be mistaken. I know the general thought is that, even if they exist, why are they seen only in rare cases? Just how well do YOU use your eyes in the bush anyway? Remember when all the lynx were being seen, and the reaction was, "What have these people been drinking? There are no lynx around this area." But as you know now, there are many of them around, and what's more, they are on the increase. There have been enough of them shot, and enough seen, to satisfy the most sceptical. . . To come back to the panthers, I believe they are with us, right in this County. Back in the 1900's, the Laurentian range was known to have these animals; they went all the way down to Maine in the U.S. They haven't all died out, or been exterminated, I'm sure. Let's hope they continue to thrive.

The places in which trout are being caught just now, makes you wonder what is happening. The latest unusual catch, was at Carillon last week-end — a red of 1½ pounds, taken by Emile Simard just below the dam. What with browns being taken in the Ottawa River too, it suggests things are happening in their habitat which we know little about. Even during the winter a couple of brown trout were taken from these waters. Of course, there is always the odd one that comes down from the lakes and ends up in the rivers. I can remember long years ago, when fishing around the Lachine Rapids, we used to take the odd brown trout; and indeed, they are still being caught, even today. So I guess we don't really know just where fish will live. True, the brown trout can live in waters where other trout varieties would not survive. Even in the North River occasionally — and that's not too clean!

All the lakes are good for fishing. It's impossible to name one that is better than another just now. Those anglers who are plying their hobby have been well repaid. Louisa, Silver, Macdonald, Barkmere, etc., all have been very good. However, the creeks are not very rewarding, due to the cold waters. A couple of us waded the creeks last Sunday, in warm weather; the water was just 38 degrees; and even with good waders, and well shod with heavy socks, the feet were cold (and I mean cold) in about 10 minutes. That was about all I could take, though the other fisherman, Denis Proulx, stayed for another five minutes, no longer. Oh yes, we didn't get any fish. But the time was not lost after all — seeing some of the trees in bud, new pussy willows all set to battle another season, and our friends the chiggers and black flies out in full force, in some spots.

A lot of American goldfinches are around; I have been told of flocks of these coming in to the feeders, so we have decided to keep the feed out all summer. I know with the new birds in, we will have plenty to watch. I heard of one Hungarian partridge getting free food from one of our citizens who is also keeping his feeders in operation. White-crowned sparrows are a dime a dozen right now; they can be seen all over, even in the town. Here's another funny thing; we have had a purple crackle visiting the feeder that had one of its legs off, and the other day in town, this same crackle was feeding right outside the grain mill at Farmers' Supply Co. So it goes over there and fills its belly, then ambles to our place to collect the scraps. If it is the same bird (and this appears to be the case) it certainly doesn't seem to be suffering through its handicap.

On the North River there are numerous varieties of ducks just now — Mallards, Blacks, Teal (both the Green and Blue) and the king of them all, the Wood Duck. With all their spring plumage on, those are handsome birds. I think they win hands down, for beauty of color. All we want now is a few broods of them swimming around the river. . . I have also been told of some Canada geese that seem to have settled in the district for the season. They will most likely nest in one of the small lakes. All the swamps, potholes, etc., are in excellent condition this year, and if these spots do not dry up, the geese should tarry here all summer. It's about time the water birds got a break. For a number of years the countryside has dried up and killed many young; this year should be different.

I was looking at one of these Anshutz 22 Magnum rifles the other day; as you know, they are made for Savage Arms in Germany. The workmanship is excellent, finished to the Nth degree. Of course, this type of gun is not for the average shooter who likes to bang off a couple of hundred rounds on a week-end. The cost of the Magnum shells is a trifle high for this kind of sport, unless you are loaded (and not with shells). The ballistics of the Magnum is quite impressive; I don't think too many groundhogs will walk away after being hit with one of these. With this critter, however, you never can tell; they are very hard to kill outright, and if you don't make a clean kill, you lose the animal. Some of the boys have been hitting them with the hard-point 303s, and this does the trick sometimes. But I repeat, take care with a shell like this; it travels a long way, and unless you know just where you are shooting, don't try them.

Another precautionary word on boating: Take it easy for the first couple of times out in the spring. Although you may have known all the deadhead logs and hidden hazards last year, these do change, and it's no fun hitting something like this with your throttle wide open. It's not good for the nerves, not to mention the boat. Another point, on first running your motor, you should use a little more oil than usual, every season a motor has to be virtually broken-in again, so take it easy.

You heard the stories on wolves destroying our deer this past winter. Now, this from a man who should know all about it: The supposed kill was in most cases done by poachers. Deer were shot, the hind quarters removed, and the rest just left to rot or feed anything that came along. I was told how many of these illegally shot deer had been found, but I hesitate to give you the figure, it's so high. Even if only half of these were butchered by poachers, then all I can say is, we might as well forget about our deer herds. Trying to put a stop to this is a real job, and from all indications there's not much help given the Wardens by the courts, to stamp this out. The levy of fines in this province is facetious; they only invite poachers to get back into business. One of these days though it will change — so the Government tells us (especially during election campaigns).

BOTTLES SAVE BONES

Thessalon, Ont. (CP) — The local midget hockey team financed this past season's play from the proceeds of a bottle collection. Except for sweaters donated by the Canadian Legion, and a few helmets, all equipment and transportation expenses came from the bottle fund.

Tug-of-war crowd-pleasing favorite on Lachute Fair Rotary Nite program

Why do people yell with excitement when eight husky men try to pull their opponents a distance of 12 feet? The Rotarians cannot answer that question, but each year the tug-of-war competition is a highlight of "Rotary night" at the Lachute Fair.

Perhaps it is because the tug-of-war is one of the few "home brew" or non-professional sports left to entertain us. We know the competitors — they represent local industries like C-I-L, Ayers Limited, C.I.P., Bell, and Boyd's; or they represent local communities like St. Philippe, Vankleek Hill or Thurso.

It took Thurso nine seconds to pull eight husky truck drivers (Boyd's) the 12 feet last year. C-I-L almost outdid them by pulling St. Philippe (seconds) that distance in 11 seconds. But when you have a "pull" that takes almost two minutes, the suspense is terrific. Such was the "pull" last year between Thurso and St. Philippe. For a time it appeared as though each team was "leaning" on the 120-foot rope, until you peered closer, and saw that some were pulling so hard they were almost parallel to the ground. Then the managers on each side exhorted their teams to a supreme effort, one team weakened, and with a final surge of power, Thurso became the winner.

Strength and exertion highlight a good "pull". Two years ago the anchor man and one other from a team became unconscious on their feet, they had strained so hard. This was not noticed until, with a final surge just before the whistle blew to end the "pull", their opponents pulled them a few feet.

Not always does the heaviest team win. Two years ago St. Philippe became the winners when they out-pulled a team from Thurso who outweighed them by at least 20 lbs. per man. Why did they win? Perhaps it was because of the yelling of their manager, perhaps it was organization, but, whatever it is that makes a winner, each year the crowd cheer their favorites lustily, then all cheer the winner.

Last year Thurso won the Rotary trophy. Without doubt all the other entries will be out practising during the next few weeks. Whether they practise pulling against a loaded truck, or take a strain on a huge tree, they will be ready to challenge Thurso for the Rotary trophy.

Water Skiing WITH CLINT WARD

Water skiing is a fun sport and young or old, there is a place for you in this fast growing summer activity.

Water Skiing Is A Family Sport. Mom and Dad can drive the boat while the children ski, or the older children can drive the boat while Mom and Dad enjoy themselves.

For Just Plain Fun ski behind the boat on two skis, crossing back and forth over the wake. You might learn to ski on one and open the door to the exhilarating pastime of slalom skiing.

A Real Challenge awaits you if you decide to try any of the three competitive events, slalom skiing, jumping or trick skiing. You could enter a water ski tournament. There is an event class for Dad in the senior mens division.

Lachute Motor Sport Club

News, Views, Activities — by Don Smith

A couple of week-ends ago there were a number of rally cars in the vicinity of St. Andrews, St. Philippe, Lachute, Brownsburg and Dalesville. Apparently not too many of these competitors were very good rallyists, for they were driving much too quickly, and very dangerously. The point I am trying to make is that this was not a rally put on by the Lachute Motor Sport Club Inc. It originated in Montreal, and part of the route happened to be in this area. This is a common occurrence, as the roads in this district are ideal for rallying.

However, there was no excuse for the excess speed and dangerous driving displayed by these enthusiasts from Montreal. The Canadian Automobile Sport Clubs (C.A.S.C.), which is the governing body of motor sport clubs, has a rule which strictly states that the speeds set out in a rally must be at least 10% less than the posted speed limit. Our club always abides by this rule, and we certainly hope that our members do not irk the public with displays of dangerous driving skills like those mentioned above.

The racing season will be off to a good start in the next couple of weeks. This week-end will see the first big race of the season at St. Jovite, and next week-end will be the club's annual tour to Mosport. Dave Bradley is in charge of the tour this year, and has put a lot of work into organizing it. If this is any indication, it should be another success. All those who went last year as a group enjoyed themselves immensely.

Motorists set a new record this last holiday week-end, but it is not one we can be very proud of. There were more deaths on the highway than ever before, and as usual, at last count, Quebec was leading the way.

AFTER WEEKS OF INVESTIGATION BY GOVERNMENT AND PRIVATE AGENCIES FINDINGS SHOW THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NOTHING UNSAFE ABOUT ANY BRAND OF BEER TESTED AND SOLD IN CANADA

Quebec City, April 21st: The Official Inquiry Committee states: "All of the various analyses* revealed nothing to justify a cause-and-effect relationship between the consumption of beer and the deaths. The different analyses made on samples of beer have not revealed the presence of abnormal components."

1. All beers analyzed were found to be pure

Quebec City, April 28th: The Committee states: "The toxicological investigations have permitted eliminating all toxic substances in the beer. Physiological experimentation also confirmed those investigations."*

2. The problem occurred only in a limited area of Quebec City and nowhere else in the Province; yet, products of all breweries sold in Quebec City were also sold in other parts of the Province.

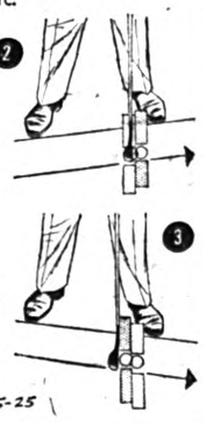
ADJUST BALL POSITION ON HILLY PUTTS

It is very important that the clubface strike the ball squarely on putts. Therefore, I feel that a golfer should adjust his stance slightly on uphill and downhill putts, just as he would do to achieve square contact on uphill or downhill fairway shots.

Whenever you must address a shot with one foot higher than the other, the arc of your swing will change. You will not strike the ball squarely unless you position it in a manner to compensate for the change in arc.



I normally address my putts with my nose aligned over the ball (illustration No. 1). However, I find I achieve a more solid putt if, on uphill putts, I play the ball a shade farther forward (illustration No. 2). Downhill putts I play slightly back in my stance (illustration No. 3).

I think you will feel more comfortable on hilly putts if you follow this procedure. And you should enjoy better club-ball contact as a result.

Celebration for 80th birthday of Lakefield citizen

(Contributed)

About 40 friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. Austin Kyle, Lake Barron, on the evening of Wednesday, May 18, to honor that fine gentleman on the occasion of his 80th birthday.

Mr. Lorne Campbell acted as master of ceremonies, and in his inimitable manner, on behalf of the gathering made a suitable presentation to Mr. Kyle. Although visibly touched, Mr. Kyle expressed his appreciation and his delight in having so many of his friends around him on this happy occasion.

The evening was made even more enjoyable to Mr. Kyle by the presence of his six grandsons. These were Roger, John and Stephen, sons of Murray and Amy Lyster, of Lachute, and James, Peter and David, sons of Herbert and Mary Kyle, of Lakefield.

Mr. Kyle has been a prominent citizen of Lakefield and of Gore Township all his life, having served a total of 25 years on the Council, eight years of which he was Mayor of Lakefield.

Born and brought up in Lakefield, he has always been, and is today, a much respected and well-loved gentleman. All his friends, and they are many indeed, will join in wishing him continued good health and much happiness, for years to come.

Delightful refreshments were served, and shortly after, a very pleasant and happy evening came to an end.

The Bible Today

A special ceremony marking the publishing of the 10,000,000th copy of the English Ruby Bible was held in Toronto recently. During the annual General Board meetings of the Canadian Bible Society, the president, Dr. Henry D. Hicks, was presented with this specially bound book by the Rev. John T. Watson, the general secretary of The British and Foreign Bible Society in London.

No other edition of the English Bible has been circulated in such large quantity as this King James version of the small hand-sized Bible, which at one time was known as the 'Shilling Bible'. Still one of the lowest priced Bibles to be found anywhere, this edition was reset in its present format in 1931 by funds made available from the Canadian Bible Society. Publishing the 10 million copies has required 60 tons of printing ink alone.

Originally produced for the Canadian market, this Bible known in the trade as No. 5,000 has been printed in England, with 17 of every 20 copies being shipped overseas to hundreds of countries.

Commemorating a benefactor

This handsome plaque in the entrance hall of the Carillon Museum commemorates a substantial legacy left to the Argenteuil Historical Society by the late Miss Priscilla McMartin in memory of her parents, Peter E. and Susan McMartin, pioneers of St. Andrews East. The plaque is of anodized brass mounted on a memorial board. Seen above are two directors of the Society, Miss A. L. Wales, (a daughter of one of the founders, Dr. B. N. Wales) and Mr. Fraser Watson, who were appointed as a committee to arrange for installation of the plaque. . . The late Miss Priscilla McMartin resided in Montreal and followed the profession of practical nursing. She was a cousin of Dr. E. J. Christie, of Lachute.

Dorion — Woodland

The marriage of Dianne Judith Woodland, only daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. Lloyd V. Woodland, of Oromocto, N.B., to Mr. Frederick Dorion, son of Mr. and Mrs. O.K. Dorion, of Lachute, took place Saturday, May 21, in the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. C. Ritchie Bell officiating. Mrs. Wm. M. Cottingham was the organist. Arrangements of gladioli and mums decorated the church.

The bride, given away by her father, was in a long gown of white peau-de-soie, with lace bodice and elbow-length sleeves, flaring from the elbow. The chapel train was attached from the waist. Her waist-length veil of tulle illusion was held by a pearl coronet. She carried a long hand-shower of pink roses and miniature carnations.

Miss Sandra Dorion, sister of the groom, as maid of honor, and Miss Irene Pollock, cousin of the bride, as junior bridesmaid, wore knee - length pink peau-de-soie dresses, and carried colonial bouquets of Shasta daisies.

Mr. Edward Dorion acted as best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. Ronald Boyd and Mr. Stuart Woodland, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Woodland, mother of the bride, wore a turquoise brocade satin dress, with white accessories and a corsage of Sweetheart roses. Mrs. Dorion, mother of the groom, wore a navy two-piece crepe dress, with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

SISSIFIED. Montreal's Irving Layton, Canada's most controversial poet, charged following a lecture to the Ontario Education Association in Toronto that literature as taught in Canadian schools engenders life-long hatred of it. He said authors taught are outdated, and students associate it with the "la-de-da, the sissified."

Diary of a Vagabond

INDUSTRIAL EMPIRE BUILT ON BRICKS

The story of L. E. Shaw Limited reads like a romance. Having celebrated its century mark manufacturing clay products in the maritime provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick during good times and bad, it is now rated foremost in its industrial field.

There is a mistaken belief that the twentieth century marks the spectacular progress of youth in big business. It was in 1861 that Robert Shaw started manufacturing bricks when he was just 21 years old. Four generations of the Shaw family have expanded the business in a hundred and four years to a nine plant organization with a multi-million dollar annual sales record.

It wasn't always as flourishing as it is now. The century of the company's development was also a century of chaos and disaster. Two world wars and a depression contributed to its struggle for survival while disaster contributed to its success. Need for construction material after the Saint John fire and the Halifax explosion, plus the construction of the Angus L. MacDonald bridge connecting Halifax with the burgeoning city of Dartmouth were responsible for the company's periods of progress.

Robert Shaw's first plant was at Hantsport, Nova Scotia. He built three plants in this area but when the clay became depleted he moved his operation to Avonport. It was there that his son, Lloyd E. Shaw, first helped his father and, incidentally, laid the corner stone of his own career in an industry which became his life's work.

Young Lloyd soon established his own business manufacturing bricks in the town of Middleton. Between this venture and the incorporation of L. E. Shaw Limited in 1921, he acted as manager of the Middleton and Avonport plants of the Nova Scotia Clay Works, a business he later took over during the depression.

One might wonder why I became so interested in clay products. For several years during my travels I have visited an attractive pottery shop in a small community called Lantz. Here Alma and Ernst Lorenzen work and sell their distinctive creations. I want to write about them too but first I thought I should use this space to tell about their benefactor, the same Lloyd E. Shaw, whose plant is adjacent to their store.

Construction Boom

Camp Gagetown and the nearby new town of Oromocto and the exploding construction now taking place in the Maritimes has necessitated expansion of plant facilities. An old plant was converted to manufacture concrete products. A plant at Sydney produces precast concrete units and pipe. At Halifax there is a masonry centre and a major advance in the manufacture of concrete pipe with a rubber gasket is the responsibility of the Lantz plant.

L. E. Shaw passed away in 1960 at the age of 82, leaving behind him a legend of industrial success and public service. The community of Lantz, where well-planned houses for workmen were erected near the plant, plus a school, church and community centre, testify to his consideration for employees.

These are only part of the memorial to L. E. Shaw. A perpetual one is the contribution his company has made to modern construction.

With increased manufacturing, better processes, skills and equipment, the company's sales position is rapidly expanding. L. E. Shaw Limited products are being shipped by CN to dealers and construction sites far afield from the Maritimes where much of the basic ingredients of its many products are mined.

Wildlife coinage

Canadians whose experience of wildlife may be confined to the contemplation of yaks in zoos will soon get a daily look at several of our indigenous creatures, notes The Financial Post. The Canada goose, the wolf, wildcat, rabbit, dove and the mackerel will adorn Canada's coinage next year — and longer if the public likes them. The Canada goose dollar may attract unnecessary comment and the dove cent may annoy those who believe in the maple leaf forever. Indeed, it may even be argued that wild animals are not a fitting symbolic representation of the modern industrial Canada. But at least one can applaud the decision to go ahead with the new designs without letting Parliament have any say about them. This no doubt saved us the coinage equivalent of the Great Flag or the Munsinger "debates".

When we discovered that former Volkswagen owners buy more Volvos than anybody except former Volvo owners, our first reaction was "That's nice."

Our second reaction was "That's very nice."

Volkswagen has a reputation for reliability that most car makers would give their eye-teeth for.

And when a VW owner has to step out of his little economy car into a bigger car, it's significant that he so often steps into a Volvo Canadian.

Volvo, as we say, is the compact that lasts an average of eleven years in Sweden where there are no speed limits on the highways, where there are over 70,000 miles of unpaved roads, where driving is virtually a national pastime.

Besides reliability, Volvo has a couple of other virtues that appeal to former Volkswagen owners. Volvos deliver over 30 miles to the gallon, even with automatic transmission.

Of course, Volvo and Volkswagen owners aren't the only people who appreciate a car that goes fast, costs little to operate, and lasts longer than the payment book.

8 Cadillacs were also traded in on Volvos last year. You figure that one out.

- ✓ created an economic planning council;
- ✓ established an Industrial Development Board.

In the past six years 3 thousand 562 new industries were established in Quebec creating 289 thousand new jobs.

Many other things have been achieved. And much remains to be done. The Quebec Liberal Party, under the leadership of Jean Lesage, has a realistic program for the next five years which will be outlined in subsequent advertisements.

JUST DUCKY. Many a little girl has a plastic duck to play with in the bath, but Kerry Wagner isn't satisfied with anything but the real thing. However, any other little girl who takes live ducks into her tub without permission just might find herself in hot water.

'Know Canada'

In Which Sport did Last-Century Canadians Excel?

Rowing. In 1855, Canadian ability in this sport of stamina and rhythm first became noticed. An eight-oared crew from Saint John, N.B., defeated the United States champions at Boston over a 12-mile course. Saint John won an even greater triumph in 1867, when a four-oared crew of fishermen went to Paris and won the world championship.

In 1868, the Encyclopedia Canadiana records, this crew went to the U.S.A. and won a six-mile race for the championship of that country. Meanwhile, Toronto's Shakespeare Club had sent a four-oared crew to Detroit in 1859 to beat a Chicago crew for the Great Lakes Championship. The greatest Canadian oarsman was the Torontonian, Hanlan. In 1876 he won the great Philadelphia-Centennial three-mile singles professional race. After a career of many victories he defeated the Australian world champion on the Thames in England in 1880. Hanlan's superiority was such that he stopped several times in the race to thank cheering spectators. Once, he even lay down in his racing shell and allowed the perspiring champion, Trickett, to catch up. Hanlan successfully defended his world's championship six times before losing it. Another Canadian, Jake Gaudaur of Atherley, Ontario, won the world's championship in 1896.

DEAR DORIS

She's Too Available

DEAR DORIS — I met a guy at a farm wedding dance. I have been going with him nearly every Saturday. It seems that I go to my girl friend's place, then she and her boy friend and I go uptown for a drive, and usually find my boy friend. As soon as we find him, I usually go out with him.

How can I get him to pick me up at home? He always takes me home like a man does, and always seems happy with me.

I know he doesn't go out with anyone else and I also don't go with anyone else. I sit and wait for Saturday to see him.

Worried Gal

DEAR WORRIED — All he may need is a word from you. If he's not a dater, he hasn't practised making dates.

Tell him you like his company but are puzzled as to why he never arranges ahead to take you out. He'll appreciate you more if he has to make a little effort to see you.

DEAR DORIS — I am 13. I live in a very broken, disorganized home. Mom met Dad through a newspaper. You know, men and women send in their names and ages and so on and find someone to marry in this way.

Mom babies my seven-year-old sister. She shows love for some of us and hates the rest. She hates Dad. It's funny she hasn't driven him to insanity or something. She is the laziest, untidiest person I know. Doris, you just can't imagine what it's like to live here. Our house is a mess. We come home from school and the floors are unswept. She never scrubs, waxes or anything.

I think she, and everything she does, will drive me crazy. My older brothers and sister complain also. My little sister isn't yet affected by her.

Desperate

DEAR DESPERATE — Sounds like a home which, if not actually broken, is at least badly bent! I'd say your mother has needed help for a long time, and of several kinds. Is she, by chance, under par physically?

She babies and cuddles little sister because she needs someone who loves her no matter what. The rest of you no longer respect her.

A conspiracy with your Dad and the other teens just could result in a clean-up which would give all of you — including Mom — a great big lift. This might be followed by some kindness from you to Mom, when she least expects it. Like making her a cup of tea.

DEAR DORIS — My mother divorced my father when I was in high school. Later she remarried and was divorced again. There were no children by this marriage, but she kept this man's name. My father died 20 years ago and now my mother says that she should be buried beside my father at her death. She doer not bear his name. What is proper?

She has a lot with her marker all on it, in the town where she was born and also where her mother and father are buried. A sister put it up, unknown to her, but she says she doesn't want to be there. Both of these places are 3600 miles away. She does not want to be buried here either, so what do I do? She is 77 years of age.

Casting Lots

DEAR CASTING — We usually go by the expressed wishes of the person who owns the body! After all these years she looks back on your father with some sentimental regard. A bit unusual — but not unheard of.

Shipping a body would involve the cost of express and of a person to travel with it. If finances can be arranged, consider it.

If not, she might look with favor on the purchase of a family plot to accommodate you and yours, in which she would have a place.

A personal chat with your minister would help you sort things out better than a letter from me.

Confidential to Pen-Happy — By nature we are sociable. Not many enjoy being alone and on their own as much as you are. My leaflet "How To Get More Mail" provides some addresses for finding kindred spirits to write to. Send in ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll put it in the mail to you.

Community Concerts need membership support

COMMUNITY CONCERT Association canvassers have been promoting the annual campaign for members. This drive is a most worthy one. Its purpose is to assure a series of concerts here by world-famous artists during the coming season.

Each community is made a better place in which to live by its schools, churches, libraries, and service organizations. All of these agencies work to make living in a community such as ours, a more valuable, a more rewarding experience. Such an organization is the Lachute Community Concert Association. The availability of fine music presented by authoritative, professional artists is an advantage of inestimable value and pleasure to the residents of this area.

Such advantages are made possible through the directors and workers of the Community Concert Association. It is through their work, and the continued support of our citizens, that we are able to hear and enjoy the riches of music presented by the finest artists.

Employing the handicapped

THIS YEAR again, the National Employment Service is promoting an "Employ the Handicapped" campaign, to place before the general public, and employers in particular, the advantages to be gained by the rehabilitation in employment of handicapped persons.

With medical or surgical treatment, vocational guidance and training, many workers physically handicapped through accident or illness can be restored to the point where they are no longer occupationally handicapped. They could become self-supporting and contributing members of the community.

Businessmen can readily see the practical aspect of this policy. If any of our business confreres are solicited to consider hiring a handicapped person for a specific job, they may be assured in advance, they will never be asked to lower their hiring standards. This rehabilitation program can be successful only if candidates are willing and able to do the job according to standards.

Good old Hansard and "the bomb"

WHILE THE PRESS and television of the nation were dripping with the drama of The Bomb which exploded in the Parliament Buildings last week, and with the life story of a crank who perpetrated this act and went to oblivion — staid old Hansard missed another golden opportunity. . .

And who is to say that a little sensationalism would not brighten this venerable tome, which grinds out day by day, verbose and verbatim, the proceedings of the House of Commons. Think what Hansard might have done with the Gerda Munsinger affair, and parliamentary exchanges on other recent scandals, which might at least have justified one wee headline in red ink!

The Watchman itself is not given to boxcar letters and bold-face type. We're all for dignity and restraint, leaving the grim and gory scandals to our best-seller competitors on the top row of the news racks. But for the record — and since some of our own residents were witnesses and possible victims of the incident — we cite herewith the cold, clear record from the nation's on-the-spot reporter, HANSARD, to wit:

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might rise on a question of privilege to indicate that a page boy has just come in with a request that all doctors in the house now go outside, as their services are needed immediately.

Mr. Bell (Saint John - Albert): They have gone.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): The reason for the conversation in the chamber is the current report that someone has just passed away within the precincts of the House of Commons. I suggest to the Prime Minister, and I do so in the desire the house should not be carrying on under these circumstances, that it might be worth considering that this house should adjourn.

Rt. Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): It appears that there was a bomb explosion in the washroom at this end of the third floor and that a man was killed, under circumstances which are not quite clear. There has been a good deal of damage done . . . and a certain amount of confusion is natural. Perhaps my right hon. friend's suggestion should be adopted and the house could adjourn until four o'clock. . .

At 3.05 p.m. the sitting was suspended.

Mr. Howard (4 p.m.) . . I wonder if the Solicitor General could report upon the events which happened just prior to adjournment?

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): I have no statement to make at this time. . .

Examination time approaches

WITH EXAMINATION time imminent, an article entitled 'No Future Without a Diploma' in the April, 1966, issue of Entre-Nous published by Canadian Johns-Manville Co. Ltd., has significance for high school students.

The country's prosperity, it is stated, is not an indication that the newcomers to the labor market will have the assurance of full employment if they have not completed their high school education.

The article says in part: "A lot of students seem to think that their teachers over-emphasize the importance of a good education and underestimate the students. . . Although some people have had successful careers without diplomas, the fact still remains that a high school diploma is required to get on the labor market today."

Any student who really wants to further his education these days, has many more facilities to do it than there were a few years ago. Education is the key to success and the one that opens the door to opportunities to fill key positions in today's complex world. — This sentiment is handed on, and endorsed, by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Viewpoints and perspectives

DIVORCE LAWS WRONG. — Canadian divorce laws are as unrealistic as a 35-mile-per hour highway speed limit. If they are trying to legislate morality, they attempt the impossible. If they are trying to promote family stability and child welfare, they fail in the possible. We would get a better law in six months if each MP had a close friend involved in the mire of Canadian divorce.

— Estevan (Sask.) Mercury

THE PREACHER was making a point that people are not as grateful as they should be for mercies granted. His text was based on the story of the ten men who were cured of loathsome disease, but only one of whom took the trouble to show his gratitude.

This brings to mind that there are twenty million people in Canada, and it is fairly certain that not one person in ten takes the trouble to realize that life on this continent is better than life is elsewhere.

—The Printed Word

MUST CURB UNIONS. — When is government, either in Ottawa or Quebec, going to find the courage to clip the wings of irresponsible labor groups? You speak to an elected government representative about labor legislation that would curb strikes and force unions to obey the law, and he will tell you that such an action is political suicide. . . Are there more union members who would condemn a politician for outlawing strikes in public utilities than there are voters who use electricity, the post offices or the railroads? Or is it just that politicians think all union members are stupid?

The Perfect High School

Virtually everybody these days is upset about our educational system. The public schools are not teaching the urchins to read, write and figger. The high schools are massive, seething factories turning out illiterates. The colleges are septic tanks of sex, marijuana and LSD.

Most of this is pure poppycock, of course, but a critical society is a healthy one, according to Hugh Dunnit, that great Welsh bard and beatnik of the eleventeenth century. This makes Canadians about the healthiest critters in the hemisphere.

Columnists aver that high schools are run like military camps, producing lock-step conformists who haven't learned to think. This is patent baloney. They think one helluva lot more than did these same columnists, when they came out of Hayfork Centre with not much more than a burning desire to get away from said centre, a lousy basic education, and a shiny blue serge suit.

Lots of parents, and some teachers, are of the opposite opinion: that there is far too much freedom of speech, dress and action, too many frills, not enough good hard work and good hard punishment. These comments come from parents who worked one-quarter as hard in school as their kids do, and teachers who atrophied some years ago.

The kids themselves, depending on home background, their own personalities, and their talent, or lack of it, look on school as a jail or a ball. Some think of it rather like having a ball in a jail.

School boards beef about the cost of everything, and the administration beefs about the shortage of everything and the teachers beef about the paper jungle and the custodians beef about the salaries and the hours and the teachers and the administration and the school board.

You might think, from all this nagging, that there are some slight imperfections in our high schools. And you might be right. But it's not as bad as it sounds.

What I can't understand is that I haven't been approached for a definition of the perfect high school. It's probably just an oversight, and because I'm not a pushy type. But who is better qualified? I've been to high school myself, I work in the blasted factory every day, and I have a daughter who comes home every day and moans, "Do I ever hate school!"

Well, here goes. Don't panic, now. The changes would be slight and inexpensive. I think we'd all enjoy life more, students, parents and teachers.

First of all, let's cut out the muttered, mumbled morning prayer. I believe in prayer and practise it quite often (usually when I'm in a jam). But it's almost sacrilege in the way it's delivered. The R.C.'s whizz through it and leave out the last part. The Jews and atheists are silent. The teacher winds up leading three or four dogged Protestants who aren't always sure of the words.

Next, out goes The Queen. While I am a royalist, and have the utmost respect for Queen Elizabeth, I see no reason 30-odd teen-agers should be submitted, every morning, to a pompous and bad piece of music, the words of which have no more relation to their world than does the horse and buggy.

How would you like to go to the factory, or the office, and stand at attention while a tape-recorded band blares out one of these awful tunes, before you got down to serious business, like waiting for the coffee break?

In place of these, I would suggest a warm-up period. We're all pretty dang doggy first thing in the morning. The class cut-up would be master of ceremonies. Witty sayings, announcements, brief weather report. Some Beatles and Bob Dylan and the Rolling Stones. An original poem or song from the students. If a girl has Go-Go boots, let her demonstrate a new dance. Probably on the teacher's desk.

By this time everybody is friendly, warmed-up. The real learning atmosphere has been created. But unfortunately, I have run out of space. Read next week's column for a further thrilling instalment on The Perfect High School.

The Union Of Canadians

To achieve this, Canada needs inspired leadership able to generate among Canadians a sense of national purpose which will outweigh — but not obliterate — ethnic and regional loyalties.

The realization of this goal would ensure Canada's status as a unique and wonderful country with an identity and culture separate from the United States despite the inroads of American economic influence.

But the glittering prospect of a country rich in diversity but secure in national purpose will remain but a tarnished hope unless Canadians find a way of coping with the expansive provincialism of the past decade.

Because Canada has lived in crisis most of this century, it is only in recent years that the underlying sores of disunity have erupted into common view. The 1914-18 "war to end wars," the brief honeymoon of the now distant 20s, the great depression and the second world war with its aftermath of cold war all combined to supress divisions in our unity.

Suddenly, in the mid-50s, the Canadian political and social status quo began to crumble. In a revolution which has affected every phase of Canadian life from political parties to schools, churches and trade unions, hardly a voice has been heard calling for the strengthening of Canada as a national entity.

French Canadian discontent which led to the Royal Commission on bilingualism and biculturalism was matched by claims of other ethnic blocs that they were the significant second language groups in their own regions.

The fact that English and French were the co-founders of the "union of Canadians" has never meant that every citizen should be bilingual. It does mean, however, that every Canadian should have the opportunity of a full life in either of the two cultures.

While other ethnic groups do not have the legalistic language rights of English and French, they have rejected the American melting pot policy of complete assimilation. The Canada which has emerged 100 years after Confederation is a pseudo-nation inhabited by a multiplicity of national groups.

The pseudo-nations which now make up Canada are founded in language, religious and religional differences. The French Catholic of Quebec sees the world through eyes different from the British Protestant of the prairies or B.C. His outlook is as different from these groups as is the outlook of the affluent, urbanized Toronto businessman from that of the tough, fatalistic Cape Breton coal miner.

The process by which the provincial governments have reclaimed authority vested so long in Ottawa is a reflection not only of these conditions but also of the lack of strong leadership at the federal level.

It has been complicated by the present government's policy to extend to all provinces privileges which have been granted Quebec so as to blunt charges of favoritism toward French Canada.

But the English "separatist" backlash sweeps on. The Pearson government's decision to limit top civil service jobs to those who are bilingual may be correct in principle but the result will be a civil service of French Canadians because one cannot master French while living in an English environment.

Federalism — even "co-operative federalism" — is essential to Canada. The ambitious programs of the welfare state era and the need to reduce economic inequality between the provinces demands more, not less, national unity.

The place to start may be in abolition of the British North America Act. It commits the provinces to responsibilities such as education and welfare which they are today incapable of financing. As an act of a British parliament over which Canada has no jurisdiction, it will wear on the national fabric until it is replaced by a constitution of purely Canadian origin. Ethnic and regional individualism can still make Canada a unique union if we also share a national purpose of well-defined social goals.

Country Notebook

Macdonald College

As a weed control chemical for corn, Atrazine has won many friends. But others are less than enthusiastic.

Why it works perfectly in one field, and fails across the fence no one seems quite sure. Certainly, the dry weather right after seeding last year and the year before has been a factor; atrazine must have moisture to work. Personally, I think atrazine is too valuable a "tool" to leave on the shelf, but we must learn how to handle its limitations.

Atrazine can be sprayed on the corn field from the day of seeding to the time the seedling weeds are 1½ inches high. I like to see it go on when the corn rows are first showing. It makes it easy to follow the rows and the weed seedlings are very susceptible at that stage.

Recommended rate at this stage is 1½ to 2 lbs. active chemical in 20 to 30 gals. water per acre. If you are using 65W., that is 2½ to 3 lbs. of the powder. (The 65 means the material is 65 per cent active, and W means it is wettable powder). This rate should catch most germinating weeds including annual grasses. And, if weather is "normal" during the year, you should be able to plant cereals and seed down next spring without risk from Atrazine residues. This treatment costs about $6 an acre.

But if you want Atrazine to control quackgrass, you will have to double those rates. And the risk of residue next year is high; you will have no choice but to plant corn again in the same field. Split applications seem to be working best against quackgrass — two pounds active material sprayed on the vegetation in the fall (or early spring) and ploughed down, and then followed by another two pounds sprayed after planting.

Good results in controlling germinating weeds have been reported by mixing one lb. active Linuron (Lorox is a trade name) and one pound active atrazine. Risk of residual effect in next year's crop is almost negligible this way, but the Linuron can cause damage to the corn under some conditions.

Linuron can be used by itself very effectively, one to two pounds of the active material in 15 - 30 gallons water, at a cost of $6 to $12 an acre. If the corn is up, you will have to direct the spray with drop nozzles so that it doesn't go on the corn. Linuron seems to be one of the few chemicals that can touch nutsedge. I hope you are not cursed with that miserable weed. You can identify this grass-like plant by the pea-sized light coloured nuts on the roots.

If your field is fairly clean, perhaps just a few lamb's-quarters and pigweeds, you may not need anything more than a touch 2, 4-D — six ounces acid in the ester form or 8 oz. amine. The cost is less than $1.00 per acre. I am told you shouldn't use 2, 4-D on sweet corn. If it gets into the whorls, it upsets maturity.

Val Voyer, with the Champlain Seed Company, at Ste. Rosalie, likes using oil with atrazine. He says they sold enough of this special light mineral oil to spray 4,000 acres last year in the St. Hyacinthe area. Most results were good, he reports.

The secret of success with oil, he says, is to spray only when the young weeds are growing actively and with the temperature over 65°, and moisture in the surface soil.

Val warns against using 2, 4-D in this mixture.

There are other chemicals, too which can be used on corn. One of the newer is Dicamba (Bandel D). By itself, or in commercial mixtures with other chemicals, it is reported to be effective against some of the toughies like field bindweed and Canada thistle.

To cultivate or not to cultivate after spraying corn with atrazine, is a question good for perennial discussion. Some people toss a coin.

Centennial Report

1867 1967 by JOHN W. FISHER
CENTENNIAL COMMISSIONER

Report No. 7

I have been ticked off by some friends for "allowing the subject of crass commercialism" to creep into a few of my public addresses on the Centennial of 1967. I refer to the subject of businesses making more money as a result of the expected boost in tourism and commerce in general.

It is, of course, quite right that the spirit of our birthday celebrations should maintain a tone in keeping with Canada's national and historical significance as our Parliament expressed it in an Act. Nevertheless I continue to declare, in spite of the concern of a few of my friends, that it is no sin for the keepers of hotels, motels, restaurants, shops, roadside lunch stands and the hundreds of thousands of other Canadian businessmen, large and small, who will be selling increased amounts of paint, flags, musical instruments, gasoline and transportation, to look forward to an increase in revenues in the year 1967.

It is to be hoped, of course, that all will realize the importance of fair business conduct. Let it not be said by any tourist in our country that he was unfairly exploited during his visit.

Just to show that there need be no fear of character damage to a Canadian who tries to do better, financially, during the Centennial I point to no less a dignified body than the Canadian Travel Bureau.

The Government Travel Bureau hopes to attract a gross income from tourists from other countries of one billion dollars in 1967. The Bureau also has greatly increased its budget for advertising outside Canada to help produce that hoped-for income.

Knowing that there is a solid national effort to produce greater tourism many will be encouraged to accelerate their business activity in the community, particularly with respect to promotion, in a way that produces local business revenue, and at the same time boosts the Centennial, as a national celebration, along with the national economy.

Local merchants can do things with their shop windows, counters and advertising which will increase sales and at the same time add to the festive atmosphere for the Centennial. Local industries can build their corporate prestige by going along with our national beautification program: making their properties more attractive, landscaping, cleaning up and painting up and perhaps putting up a new flag pole for the celebrations.

Local printers and publishers can get on the bandwagon too. Mr. Bill Forbes, editor and manager of Canadian Printer and Publisher magazine, brimful of ideas for small town newspapers and printers, told us recently he is running Centennial suggestions in his own column. He has tips for Centennial promotion issues of newspapers and of commercial printing project plans. (One novel idea of his for community printers and publishers is to produce wrapping paper covered with montages of old front page news stories published in the 19th century issues.)

Style magazine, newspaper for the retail garment trade, is running a column every issue to pass along "how-to" information on Centennial sales promotion. Other business editors are publishing similar material.

Man can be the most constructive or destructive of all animals when he is motivated by the lure of profits. Let's take the view that we can increase revenue in 1967 in a constructive way that will benefit tthe Centennial and all of us.

Humility has been described as looking ashamed while you're telling people how wonderful you are.

Mtre ROGER LAJEUNESSE
Official Union Nationale candidate

I — First Objective:

Have the rural part of the county classified as underdeveloped area (depressed) and entitled to the benefit of Federal aid provided by the A.R.D.A. law (Rural Development Act).

II — Roads and Industry:

1. Stimulate the establishment of new industries in the south and center part of the county, by way of TWO modern access roads to the Laurentian Autoroute:

(a) the first one to connect with Exit 14, the area of St. Andrews and Grenville,

(b) the second one to connect with Exit 17, Lachute, Brownsburg and the adjoining municipalities.

2. The construction of a modern access road to the Laurentian Autoroute at Exit 26 in St. Sauveur, using, whenever convenient, the road bed of the C.N.R., for the benefit of Huberdeau, Arundel, Weir, Sixteen Island Lake, Laurel, Montfort, Morin Heights, including access for St. Adolphe, in accordance with the recommendations of the A.R.D.A. project and with the support of our Federal Member, Mr. Roger E. Regimbal.

3. Complete reorganization of our rural roads with progressive elimination of gravel roads, to carry on the work done before 1960 by the U.N. and the Hon. W. M. Cottingham.

III — Education:

Decentralization of the regional schools, in order to prevent long distance transportation of our students, which is obviously detrimental to them and constitutes an undue burden to their parents; immediate reduction of the school taxes, which are, in most areas, exceedingly high for the average property owner and the farmer, and also bring the desertion of our county and keep away many eventual resident tourists.

IV — Agriculture:

Without limiting the general program of the U.N. party, I will urge the setting of a reasonable higher price to be paid to the producer for his dairy products, and also a reduction of his property taxes, such reduction to be compensated accordingly to the municipal and school corporations concerned.

V — Tourism — Sports & Leisure

In accordance with the conclusions of the A.R.D.A. project for the Red River Valley, I will urge the creation of camping sites, the availability of proper territories to promote hunting and fishing for the public, the granting of statutory aid for our sport and leisure organizations, which, since 1960, depend only on personal charity and on the generosity of our social clubs.

I will also urge the government to give effect to the recommendations of the Tourist Council of the Province of Quebec concerning the hotel trade, which is severely ill all over "La Belle Province" and in danger of death in our county. I make mine the conclusions of Mr. Gérard Delage, President of the Tourist Council and of the Hotel Association, who said, and I quote: "If these remedies are refused or delayed, the governments concerned will be the first ones to regret it". (Extract from a lecture delivered to the members of the Quebec Road Builders Association in May, 1966).

'Home is where the heart is'; back to belov'd Laurentians

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

Back on our native heath! — Not literally true, of course, for we first saw light in the Townships, but if "Home is where the heart is", then we're home.

For this time of year (mid-May) it looks queer, with no leaves on the trees, and bits of snow here and there in northern exposures. The daffodils are scarcely up, but the grape hyacinths are everywhere in the front lawn. One primula is out, a yellow one, and all the perennials in the new bed are up, except the phlox. For the first time, the old place will know tulips. We planted a few last fall as an experiment, and they have not only survived, they have produced fat, green buds, which we believe we shall see open in the next week. The goat willow which we have nursed for eight years is now recognizably a tree, and has a good cluster of "pussies". As we write, the two toughest things in the garden are clearly recognizable from the house, the rhubarb, and the lupins. If you have never dug up a lupin, you should. It is an experience. The roots are long, and reach down and down, till one wonders just who will give up first, the lupin or the digger. No wonder they flourish. The delicate top is deceptive. Our other project today was trying to dig manure in around the peach-apple tree. The head of the house cut down a tree which, while lovely in shape, was productive of horrid, hard, green apples.

Birds are everywhere. Evidently a pair of partridge is nesting near the first well. Walk down that path, and the cock struts along ahead of one, spreading his tail. He seems confident that we mean him no harm. Animals do not need words; they sense things.

Having mentioned animals, this might be a suitable place to tell you the ghost story I have for you. It is some time since we heard a really good one, and never before have I known of an animal ghost. This one was a dog. — The story was told to me by a friend, now a priest in the Anglican church, but in the 1940's, a captain in the British Army. He was detailed, with a sergeant, to take three German prisoners down the west coast of England, and exchange them for three English war prisoners. Dusk caught them in a remote part of Wales, far from accommodation. But there was a squadron encamped in an old castle, and, being offered accommodation for the night, our friend accepted. Over bacon and beans in the courtyard, he said casually that so old a castle should have a ghost. "Oh, we have a ghost," assured the sergeant-in-command. The German sergeant sneered, "You English, always so sentimental. Germans do not believe in such nonsense". To which the English soldier replied, "All right, Fritzie, you'll see."

Everybody turned in early, the captain and sergeant in one room, the two German privates in the next one, the German sergeant in the third alongside. Our friend was awakened by his sergeant. "Hey, Captain, wake up. The lights went out, and I hear some one." Sure enough, It was pitch black, and feet were making the rounds of the room overhead. The sound started down the stairs. "Captain, I'm scared. Are you scared?" The captain had just time to say, "I don't know," when the feet arrived in their room, circled it, and went into the next room. Great commotion from the disbelieving Germans. Their sergeant snarled at them to shut up. After going around the middle room, the steps visited the room with the German sergeant, and then went out and could be heard going down the stairs. Finally, everyone went to sleep.

In the morning, over yet more beans and bacon, the Captain remarked on the disturbed night. "That," said his host, "was our ghost.". "I should like to see it", said our captain. "You will, in five minutes. He comes at stated times, and one of the times is eight a.m." In five minutes, a huge mastiff came lolloping over the hill, and made straight for them. The dog appeared incredibly large, old, and decrepit. Our friend was distressed for it, and held out a bit of bacon. The dog passed within an inch of the hand-out, without a glance, went around the end of the castle and was seen disappearing over the same hill. "He'll be back at 11 a.m.," opined the squadron leader. "That's our ghost." . . And that, dear reader, is our story. Too long to tell of the incident behind all this, which took place two hundred years before. Now you tell one. I have no reason at all to disbelieve our friend. The lights? Oh, that was nothing. The dynamo shut down always at midnight.

All that space used up, and shall I speak of the MacLennan Library, or of Sorel church? The first, I think. . . We were intrigued to find that the Lachute people and we have a mutual friend in one of the ladies that drive the MacLennan Bookmobile. We were interested to find out that these bookmobiles and their bases are the result of a trust fund set up by a Mr. MacLennan (who else?) and were supposed to function in each province. Although the Fund did not shrink, expenses soared, so that in most provinces, this library is now supported by the government. Even so, this is an example of a sensible legacy. Mr. MacLennan's gift has brought pleasure and enlightenment to thousands, and we are glad that the Lachute people have this service. Next time you see the driver, you can say, "So you know that screw-ball who writes in 'The Watchman'."

Perhaps we can squeeze in a bit about Christ Church, Sorel, where we recently spent a day in the line of duty. This is the first Anglican parish in Quebec, founded in 1784, only 14 years after you-know-what, which we are not allowed to mention in these times. The present church dates from 1790. Some of the original furnishings are still there, notably the communion table. The bell has been in use since 1786. Both church and rectory are now classified as historical sites, well worth a visit if you are in the district. The present rector takes a great interest in his charge, and has prepared a history of the parish.

Space all gone; be with you in a month.

IS LABOUR LEADERSHIP SLIPPING?

In my writings recently I have praised Canadian labour for having used more common sense and restraint than American labour, and I felt this was helping Canada to enjoy prosperity. I am very much afraid this situation is changing and that labour has started to slip. Unruly and unreasonable groups within the unions are getting control and all sorts of unreasonable demands are being made.

For example, when the union negotiating committee of the Ontario Teamsters reached an agreement with management, it was turned down by a vote of less than half the membership and as a result the strike continued with its drastic effect on the economy of that province.

It may be wondered if the vote would have gone the way it did if it had been a truly secret, democratic ballot, without any intimidation or coercion of members by the rebel group within the union.

If labour leadership is losing control and the wage structure of Canada is going to be determined by the radical groups within the unions, then Canadians have real cause to be frightened. Prices are jumping fast enough as it is. If labour goes hog-wild, we will get a dose of inflation that will bring hardship to thousands upon thousands of citizens.

What can be done about it?

My view is that each of us ought to write to, telephone, or personally buttonhole our Member of Parliament or MLA and make it quite clear that we want governments to keep a sharper eye on labour practices. That we want the politicians to stop being so rabbit-scared of the unions. I would vote for any politician of any party who would have the fortitude to tell the unions bluntly that they have to behave sensibly or the labour laws will be toughened up. Governments get tough with business, so why not get tough with labour?

Because the Canadian economy is at its peak it is extremely sensitive and it wouldn't take much to bring everything crashing down around our heads. The best labour leaders realize this; it is the radical, irresponsible elements within the unions that need to be disciplined. If the leaders can't do it, the law will have to!

Lachute Watchman
Sir:

The Geological Survey of Canada is appealing to rural residents in the area between St. Placide, Cote Lalande, St. Hermas and Upper Lachute to be on the look-out for meteorite fragments which may have fallen on Monday evening, April 25.

Just after sunset on April 25, a bright and spectacular meteor or fireball was seen by a great many people over the eastern United States and Canada. An investigation by scientists of the National Research Council, Dominion Observatory and Geological Survey has shown that the direction of the path of this meteor was nearly south to north and that it descended at a low angle, somewhat less than 10° from horizontal. Slowed down by friction with the atmosphere the meteor ceased to glow just west of Huntingdon, Que., at a height of about eight miles. Fragments from the meteor, known as meteorites, may have continued northward and fallen in the area noted above.

Meteorites, which come from interplanetary space, are pieces of either iron, or, more likely, stone. Both types are extremely important to understanding the origin of our planetary system. Freshly fallen meteorites are recognized by a very thin dull black fusion crust which should cover most of the surface. Where this has been chipped off the stony type, the interior is usually grey in color. Among other characteristics are shallow depressions on the surface similar to thumb marks made in clay. Fragments may vary in size to several inches across, and weigh a few ounces or a hundred pounds or more. Specimens should not be damaged on recovery, and the place of finding should be clearly marked.

The Geological Survey will pay $100 or more for the first fragment of any Canadian meteorite that is acquired for the National Collection. An illustrated booklet, "How to Identify Meteorites" (in French and English), is available on request. Anyone finding what he believes is a meteorite should write immediately to: Meteorite Identification, Geological Survey of Canada, Ottawa.

ROMANCE OF TIME AND MOTION

There is an echo of construction on Ile Notre Dame these days as the complex of cells representing Canadian National's pavilion for Expo 67 progresses. Chosen as the railway's part in Expo 67, emphasis is on entertaining the thousands of exhibition visitors it is anticiated will march beneath its jewel-like domes. "But", said C. A. Harris, director of CN public relations, "its objective is also to provoke thought and excite the imagination."

The pavilion's unusual design is completely in tune with our rapidly advancing industrial image and it will feature the twin theme of Time and Motion. The Time exhibit will be made up of a series of animated story-telling devices, which along with sound effects and mood lighting, will be controlled by an automatic programmer. Just about everything inside the exhibit cells will move and the visitor will be almost imperceptibly escorted through the cells by the sequence of action and the changing accents of the lighting and sound effects.

There are nine individual cells forming the complex of the pavilion. They resemble large cut gems 24 feet across at their widest part of varying heights, the highest of which is 50 feet. These provide the walk-through exhibit space and are raised from the ground to provide a shelter for those visitors waiting to enter the theatre, which will be the largest section of the pavilion.

I am particularly impressed by the fact wheel chair visitors will be able to enjoy this imaginative display. They will be able to enter this area, follow the crowds in the Time sequence and enjoy Motion, a projection of film in the 200 seat theatre, then exit easily onto a thoroughfare. This is something few designers of exhibition pavilions think about. Many pavilions in past exhibitions, on such a large scale as Expo 67, are beyond the pleasure of persons who are unable to cope with entrances and exits designed for visual excitement rather than practical mobility.

"Man and His World," the theme of Expo 67, inspired CN to choose the twin theme. It reflects our constant awareness of time and motion which are of such universal interest these days. These are also the elements controlling CN's day in, day out role of moving men, material and messages.

Storyline consultant for this project was Ross McLean who will be remembered for his imaginative TV productions, while the architectural consultants and the architects are well known Canadien firms as are the consultants for the motion picture.

For Parents Only ...

(Copyright)

How about sharing?

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

What about sharing? Is it reasonable to expect a very young child willingly to give up a prized possession for a time to a playmate? What happens if he is forced to take turns?

The child two years or younger is a real individualist. He doesn't care very much about another child's feelings. If he is not watched, in a moment of anger in his play, if the other youngster should snatch a toy from him, he will likely hit the other child or chase him in an effort to recover his possession.

Parents are setting too high a standard if they expect their two year old to gladly share his toys. He is quite happy playing by himself, or engaging in "parallel" play in which an individual plays actively alongside the other child but not needing any give and take. Only as he gets to be three or four does he enjoy playing with other children so much that he can see the point of co-operating by taking turns. Sharing is learned very slowly. It is harder for some children than others — and even some adults have never mastered this lesson.

Many mothers are inclined to give too much supervision to children's play. Unless a child is being hurt or in real need of adult assistance, better leave the small ones alone to work their own way of getting along together.

If mother insists too often that Junior share his toy and at too early an age, what happens? Junior is confused and resentful. He may become the sort of child who doesn't know how to stand up for his own rights. Or he may turn into a "Cry Baby" or "Mother's Boy".

Learning To Share

On the other hand, if mother is always rushing out of the kitchen into the yard to take her little darling's part — Junior fast becomes very unpopular. The children depart to another yard so as to avoid the unpleasant mother who is frequently interfering on behalf of her son.

The "only child" has a much harder time learning to share than the boy or girl with brothers and sisters. In a family, children quickly see that better times are enjoyed by everyone if there is fair play and every one has his or her part.

A child of three or four should have the opportunity to play with other children his own age. It is not so hard for him to begin to learn to take turns at this stage in a small, intimate neighbourhood group or at Nursery School. But the Kindergarten or First Grade child who has led a very solitary life in the company of adults, finds it extremely difficult to substitute "ours" for "my" or take turns gracefully with play equipment.

As the child's world gets larger, he knows more people, and he learns of folk in far away places. His sympathetic response to need is quick. It is good for children to assist in service projects by contributing to the "Save the Children" Fund or helping with the Junior Red Cross, or a church project.

Not long ago a group of older public school girls purchased a dozen dolls. They made pretty, inexpensive clothing for them. Through the Red Cross the little convalescing patients received these dolls. How happy they were to have a doll to play with during their long hours in bed! But the Canadian girls were glad too — they had learned from their own experiences one of the secrets of happy living. As one girl said "It's fun to share!"

The adolescent in today's world learns that in the international work for peace, sharing has a vital part. Millions of people are not going to be content to continue to live in stages of disease, hunger and destitution. The HAVE nations through UN agencies and other channels, give out of their abundance to the HAVE NOT countries. . . Communism flourishes in its campaign for converts wherever misery abounds.

AUTOMATIC CHECKOUTS FOR SUPERMARKETS

Automatic checkout systems were on display at the recent annual convention of the Supermarket Institute in Chicago. Two main systems showed for the first time shopping carts which unload themselves at checkout counters. One system has the grocery items flow out of the shopping cart by means of an extended conveyor hook-up. The other system lifts the whole cart up and tilts it so that the contents slide on to the counter in such a way that there is no risk of damage.

Housewife now policewoman

Halifax (CP) — Anna Sidey, a blonde housewife and mother of one son, was being interviewed for a clerical job at the local police station when she was asked to consider joining the active force.

"I didn't jump at the chance then," she says. The word "police-woman" conjured up images of burly females toting billy clubs and handcuffs.

But she talked it over with her husband — "he thought it was a good idea" — and decided to accept the offer of a new career.

After the first week of working with policewoman Ruth Donald, the city's first woman in a police uniform, Mrs. Sidey found the job required more firmness and understanding than muscle.

She now is in a recruit training course and will be assigned to the detective division after graduation.

During training, she learns accident investigation, court procedure, drill marching — and how to handle a revolver.

Mrs. Sidey was born in the Netherlands but came to Canada at an early age. She has worn uniform before, when she joined the Navy in 1944 and did stenographic work for the next two years.

The Sidey family came to Halifax earlier this year. Fourteen-year-old Donald, with the same name as his father, is the keenest supporter of Mrs. Sidey's new career.

"I think he expects I'm going to learn judo and go out on raids every day," his mother laughs. "But it's a little different from that."

Immigration facilities in Japan

Canada will establish full immigration facilities in Japan for the first time. Located in Tokyo, Canada's newest immigration office in Asia will counsel prospective immigrants and issue visas. Officers of the new department will work closely with the Japan Emigration Service.

At present immigration is handled through Canadian diplomatic facilities and visas issued in Tokyo have been forwarded to Canada for final approval. Often this procedure has taken several months.

In a recent statement Canadian Immigration Minister Jean Marchand said that an increasing number of skilled and professional people from Japan have shown interest in emigrating to Canada.

Last year 219 Japanese immigrants came to Canada. In 1964 the number was 163.

According to official sources, more than 1,500 inquiries were made to the Canadian Embassy in Tokyo, and of these some 700 applications are reported being processed in Ottawa.

LIST OLD METHODS

Orillia, Ont. (CP) — Dragon's blood, skunk cabbage and squaw root are guaranteed to cure aches and pains, says an old medical book owned by pharmacist John Wright. Printed in 1912, the book suggests for a hair restorer a recipe of bay rum, glycerine and dry sulphur.

Teatime Topics

By Jean Sharp

Diane Miller, 20, Rhonda Silver, 17, and Stephanie Taylor, 23, were among the girls auditioned for Music Hall, and were chosen to become a trio.

They are still together, still on the show, doing an increasing number of personal appearances and now call themselves The Willows because that's the name they use on their newly-released record.

May Happen

The girls talk with excitement tempered with matter-of-fact professional assessment about the accelerating tempo of their lives and the glimmering hope that The Willows might be about to happen.

There have been indications that if their record goes, they will be making more and will get some chance of appearing on U.S. network television.

In the meantime they are busy.

"This has been our first big year of travelling," said blonde Diane, who was more dancer than singer when the group started. She said they are learning to attract and hold older audiences as well as teen-agers.

"The older people are the more reserved in their reactions," Stephanie said. "The kids stand right in front of the bandstand and stare and squeal." Blonde Stephanie is called Little Mother by the other two because of her advanced age.

Learned Together

The Willows are basically a rhythm and blues group who dance with their songs and are taking dancing from the show's choreographer. Diane said getting dances co-ordinated was a problem at first.

"And at first Stephanie was the only one who could read music. We would go out of tune in the early shows and just stop when we made a mistake. Three people can't ad lib and look like they're together."

Rhonda, who is dark haired and occasionally sports a Beatle hat, has been singing since she was six and she and Diane have both learned to read music. They must sometimes learn seven or eight songs for Music Hall.

They have little free time, and even it is used usefully. Diane makes many of her clothes. Stephanie is writing a thesis for a master's degree in psychology.

Only Rhonda is sure she wants to stay in show business permanently, and Diane summed up their attitude toward the trio. "We might break it up if we're a flop, if nothing happens. But we're doing well."
