SOROFOL

I do not believe that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has an equal as a remedy for scrofulous humors. It is pleasant to take, gives strength and vigor to the body, and produces a more permanent, lasting, result than any other medicine I have used.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease.

W. F. Fowler, M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

For forty years I have suffered with Erysipelas. I have tried all sorts of remedies for my complaint, but found no relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

After taking ten bottles of this medicine I am completely cured.

Mary C. Amelberg, Rockport, Me.

I have suffered, for years, from Catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. After trying other remedies, and getting no relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and in a few months, was cured.

Susan L. Cook, 308 Albany St., Boston, Mass.

She writes: "Last August the little ones became very sick, and as I could get no other food that would agree with them, I commenced the use of Lactated Food. The First Sign

Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the debilitated system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

"Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family for Scrofula, and know it will thoroughly eradicate the terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alternative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—Dr. P. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

The Eiffel Tower.

The highest structure in the world is now being built at Paris. The Washington Monument is 555 feet high, and as low as present, but the Parisians are priding themselves on the fact that by the 1st of January next they will have standing on the Champ de Mars a tower 1,000 feet high, the entry of iron girders and pillars, the simple construction of four great shafts consisting of four columns each, starting from the four corners of the base, and merging into the intricate great shaft which forms the main part of the tower. The whole tower when completed will weigh 7,500 tons, or 15,000,000 pounds. The cost will be about $1,000,000, of which the French government pays about $300,000.

Naturally enough, Mr. Eiffel, the eminent French engineer who is building the tower, is excited at his last enterprise. He says:

Consider its importance from a meteorological point of view. It is not every day that meteorologists can get up a thousand feet above the soil. This tower will enable them to observe the temperature of the air at different heights, to observe the variations of the winds, find out the quantity of rain that falls at different heights, and the density of the clouds. Indeed, in all that relates to temperature, hygrometry, air pressure, and the like, the tower will afford research many of which have hitherto been impossible. It will be equally useful to astronomers. Here experiments with the spectroscopic can be carried on with great facility, the lines of refraction and the physical laws of the rays of light can be studied in most favorable conditions. Then there is its utility from a military point of view. In the event of another siege of Paris, how how important this tower would be. It would be a great advantage to have a system of optic telegraphy, a great and valuable one, for from the summit you have magnificent panoramas extending from 120 to 130 kilometres. Paris by night, decorated and illuminated as it will be during the evening is a sight which before was only visible with the aid of a telescope. In fact, the tower will be the chief attraction of the exhibition. In our construction of the tower we have calculated on the force of the wind. We have calculated that the tower will usually withstand a wind pressure of 300 pounds to the square metre, a great weight, amounts to a total pressure of 2,250,000 grammes. We have made this calculation on the most favorable hypothesis possible. We have reckoned the trellis work of the tower will resist a great weight of rain fall and made other allowances. As the tower is the strongest temple known in Paris have never been braved a pressure of 80 kilos per square metre, this tower is perfectly secure. Should a wind bearing a force of 300 kilos arise little would be left standing of it except the tower.

The tower will be a great attraction on the inside of the shafts with elevators on the inside and six or more connecting the first two galleries with the ground, and probably two which will go to the top.

Ingersoll Played Out.

The "boss Ingersoll" is played out, even as a politician. For several years he had two courses of fame and fortune. He roamed up and down the land lecturing in public halls about the Bible and those who loved it, never failing to charge as high prices as he could get for tickets of admission. He too hired himself out during political campaigns to make political speeches. One line of operations seemed to help the other. His blasphemous harangues in one place called attention to him and helped to draw hearers to his political address somewhere else. And in turn the stump speech quickly cleared the way for him to appear against the doctrine and principles of Christianity. In course of time people got tired of paying fifty cents or a dollar apiece to hear him make spate of sacred things, and they still were willing to listen to one of his political speeches, paid for by a campaign committee. Now the latter source of income has been shut off for the most part, and the voice of the once noted orator is rarely heard in public places. He was an orator for revenue only and he has ceased to command the attention of his hearers. Down in New York City plans for making a number of campaign speeches have been checked by leading men of the very party whose cause he wanted to champion. Up in Minnesota a report having got abroad that he was to be sent there under pay to stamp the State an emphatic protest against his appearance was entered. That protest was signed by men who had the interests of their party at heart and did not want them jeopardized by the advocacy of a golden speaker. And so the fellow's favorite occupation is gone.

BIRD COURTS OF JUSTICE

Several writers have given descriptions of proceedings of assemblies of birds of various species which they regarded as formal "trials in court." While this view of the nature of the transactions cannot be accepted as a scientific one, it is certainly an interesting character, and reveals a peculiar phase of bird-life. Dr. Edmondson describes regular assemblies of crows of the hooded species—crow-courts? they are called in the United States, and are held in the Shetland Isles. A particular hill or field suitable for the business is selected, but nothing is done till all are ready, and consequently the earliest comers have sometimes to wait for a day or two till the others arrive. When all have come, the court opens in a formal manner, and the presumed criminals are arraigned at the bar. A general exclaiming and clamor are raised by the assembly, and judgment is delivered, apparently by the whole court. As soon as the sentence is pronounced, the birds are dispersed, and the court is closed. The birds are not, however, as a rule, brought before the court on a charge of murder, but on a charge of adultery, or on a charge of being a nuisance. The court is held in a formal manner, and the presumed criminals are arraigned at the bar. A general exclaiming and clamor are raised by the assembly, and judgment is delivered, apparently by the whole court. As soon as the sentence is pronounced, the birds are dispersed, and the court is closed.

The Rev. Dr. J. Edmund Cox has given the particulars of a trial by crows which he witnessed between fifty and sixty years ago. He was riding along a quiet road in the village of Northwich, England, when he was startled by a sound of extraordinary character, which he at first attributed to the motion among the inhabitants of an adjacent rookery. Scarcely his horse to a gate, he cautiously crawled for a hundred feet or so, to a gap in the hedge of a grass-field, to investigate proceedings. A trial by jury was in progress, and the jury consisted of twelve birds, all of which were perched on a fence, and after a short pause, they jointly fell upon the unfortunate chickens and pecked them to pieces, as if on account of the disgrace which might be supposed to attach to a dishonored nest.

A single crow, almost as if by magic, moved. The female, not aware of the change, sat patiently the appointed number of days, till the shells were broken and the young chickens made their appearance. No sooner were they seen by the old birds, than they testified their surprise by harsh notes and fierce looks; and after a short pause, they jointly fell upon the unfortunate chickens and pecked them to pieces, as if on account of the disgrace which might be supposed to attach to a dishonored nest.

The Rev. F. O. Morris, in his anecdotes of "Animal Sagacity," cites the following instance of a case which ended less tragically than some of the others. "I was," he says, "one day in a field near a rookery, when I saw a single crow, almost as if by magic, moved. The female, not aware of the change, sat patiently the appointed number of days, till the shells were broken and the young chickens made their appearance. No sooner were they seen by the old birds, than they testified their surprise by harsh notes and fierce looks; and after a short pause, they jointly fell upon the unfortunate chickens and pecked them to pieces, as if on account of the disgrace which might be supposed to attach to a dishonored nest."

The Rev. F. O. Morris, in his anecdotes of "Animal Sagacity," cites the following instance of a case which ended less tragically than some of the others. "I was," he says, "one day in a field near a rookery, when I saw a single crow, almost as if by magic, moved. The female, not aware of the change, sat patiently the appointed number of days, till the shells were broken and the young chickens made their appearance. No sooner were they seen by the old birds, than they testified their surprise by harsh notes and fierce looks; and after a short pause, they jointly fell upon the unfortunate chickens and pecked them to pieces, as if on account of the disgrace which might be supposed to attach to a dishonored nest."
