His departure was somewhat hurried and consequently the boys were unable to tender him a formal farewell, but his genial and kinly manner has gained for him a host of friends who will be interested in his future welfare.

The young men of the town held a most enjoyable dance in the Victoria Hall on Friday evening last. A number of guests from Ottawa, Hawkesbury and Montreal were present to participate in the festivities. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion and Mr. Frank Brennian officiated as Master of Cermonies. Mrs. Thomas Christie, Mrs. Jno. Hope and Mrs. Jas. Gall were the patronesses.

Several of the members of Laurentian Lodge were in Montreal last week and joined the Encampment of the I.O.O.F. They extended an invitation to the members of Landsdown Lodge and others to visit Lachute on the evening of Saturday, April 26th, to exemplify the First Degree and attend the Church Parade on the following day, Sunday the 27th. So many have signified their intention of visiting Lachute that a special train is to be chartered.

There are many of this community, especially of the younger element, who will miss the cheery word and happy countenance of our old friend Nat Copeland, who has resigned the position of caretaker of Lachute Academy and the Presbyterian Church. Mr Copeland thinks of migrating to California shortly, but we are sure he will bear pleasant memories of his old associations. Mr. Matthew Jones has been appointed to the positions vacated and we are sure he will prove a worthy successor.

FACTS! In purchasing Brookline you are ensuring a property containing an average of 2500 square feet per lot. Now others are selling at lower prices but lots are smaller and no improvements guaranteed. Brookline is a station already in process of erection as also the contractors are busy on the erection of some 15 houses. Artesian wells are also being sunk and as soon as weather permits the streets will be opened up and the main boulevard macadamized. Ask others if they can make such genuine improvements and guarantee them with every contract before the 1st of September, 1913. This is worth considering and you will do well to see the plans which are on view at Mr. Lamontagnes office on Main Street.

Town Council.

The regular meeting of the above Council was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening and was presided over by Mayor Felix Paquette. There were also present Councillors R. Hamilton, V. Lefebvre, C. Labrosse, W. M. Scott, J. P. McKimmie, A. McFaul, John Hope, F. Deslaurier.

Minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Accounts of the Road and Finance Committees were read and amounts ordered paid.

A petition was presented by Mr. G. F. Calder after reading of which it was resolved: That this Council, having heard the petition of the leading citizens and business men of the town, asking for proper connection with the Montfort Branch of the Canadian Northern Quebec Railway at St. Jerome, hereby request that the same be granted, and that the Mayor and Mr. Geo. Calder be appointed to wait upon the General Superintendent.

Councillor McKimmie reported that he had examined the properties of the applicants for licenses and found them in accord with the legal requirements. Before acting on the same, permission was given, upon request of the Rev. J. L. George, that the resident clergy would be allowed to speak, and short, stirring addresses were delivered by the Revs. J. L. George, J. H. McConnell, J. L. Lackey and J. F. Forsythe. Having heard these gentlemen, the Council were of opinion that a counter petition should have been brought in by the temperance people of a majority of the ratepayers in the varied wards, in which case the council would not be empowered to grant the licenses, but under present circumstances they had no other course to pursue, and the licenses were granted upon motion of Councillor V. Lefebre, seconded by Councillor Raymond.

Mr. Fourangeau, of Montreal, appeared before the Council, asking for a bonus grant of $20,000 as an inducement to start their industry for the manufacture of cast iron soil pipe fittings. They promise to erect a building at a cost of between ten and twelve thousand dollars with a yearly payroll of about $13,500. The matter was taken under consideration.

By-law No. 73 relative to the town taking over the roads and sidewalks was declared read for the first time.

PLEASE REMEMBER that your subscription is due.

A new feature in Brownsburg is the picture show now opened by Messrs. Newling & Birch. CHAPTER XVI.

The sudden collapse of the young attorney while attending to his official duties was a surprise to his associates and a matter of deep concern, for he was well liked.

"It is very fortunate that there is nothing on hand but what I can attend to," remarked his assistant. "And that reminds me, I must hurry into court to attend to that case of theft he was so anxious to prosecute."

He made a hurried search for the papers in the case; but, to his annoyance and perplexity, they could not be found, though the most rigid search had been made for them.

"I shall have to do without them, that is certain," said the assistant district attorney, catching up his hat just as the clock struck two, and hurrying into the court-room, for the case of Ann Roundtree was the first to be called.

For four weeks James Van Driscoll lay between life and death, fighting hard for the faint gasps of breath that burned his parched lips like a flame. Brain fever had set in, run its course, and then slowly abated.

Mr. Hamilton, Gertrude, and even Richard, were unremitting in their attentions. If it had not been for this illness, which had been so nearly fatal, she would never have known how dear her lover was to her and how wretched life would have been to her without him. She wondered how she had been so blind as not to have noticed how noble and good he was from the very first.

"I hope James will have fully recovered by the time set for our marriage," said Gertrude, anxiously, to her brother one day. "It is unlucky to postpone a wedding."

From the hour in which Van Driscoll had gained consciousness the doctor had given strict orders that he should see no one, not even his fiancee, the case had taken such a peculiar turn. Even the doctors who were called in consultation acknowledged themselves puzzled. They could not understand the violent emotion which took complete possession of their patient, or why he should cry out that he wished to Heaven he could die without seeing a human face again, when life was so well worth the living. He even shrunk from the mention of Gertrude Hamilton's name. He could not be induced to consent to see her.

"I confess I am completely puzzled over this case," said the old doctor; adding: "But I think it will all come out right; he has youth and strength, and a magnificent constitution; his convalescence ought to be rapid."

There was one person whom Van Driscoll called for unceasingly by night and by day, and that was his assistant in the office, Mr. King.

"If you will promise not to mention one word of the affairs of the office, I will let King see you," said the doctor, sending the message at last, thinking it wiser to humor any whim than to oppose it. It did not occur to him that the patient made no answer.

Soon after the message reached the assistant district attorney, Walter King presented himself at Van Driscoll's home.

"Send them away," whispered the sick man, nodding his head weakly in the direction of the two trained nurses.

"They will not hear," said Walter King. "Don't you see how busy and interested they are discussing some item in the paper?"

After making sure of this, Van Driscoll said, huskily:

"My—my sudden collapse must have been a severe blow to you, we were so busy at the time."

"Yes; but I managed to get along fairly well," returned Walter King. "I think you will be pleased as to the disposition I made of most of the cases, clearing up everything on the docket."

He saw that Van Driscoll was trying hard to speak; but something in his throat for the moment seemed to prevent his utterance. It was some moments ere he could control the mastery of himself; then he asked huskily and in a voice that sounded scarcely human:

"What—what disposition did you make of the case I—I—was about to try when—when—I was stricken down?"

"Oh, the Roundtree woman!" answered his companion, carelessly. "I am sorry to say that she did not get her deserts, owing to my utter inability to find the papers you had prepared so carefully. I did my utmost to send her up for twenty years, on her general reputation, but as I could only make it out a case of petty larceny, I was obliged to see her let off with a two-years' sentence. She made no demur at the court's decision, though she is generally noted for raising a terrible row with whatever judge commits her. All the old hangers-on about the court-room, and even I, were surprised at how quietly she took her sentence, and how meekly she permitted herself to be led back to the pen. No doubt she was glad to be back among her old associates on the island. They call her the queen of criminals there. Well, she's been luxuriating behind prison bars for a month now."

Van Driscoll's face had grown white as death. His friend, who bent over him hurriedly, felt sure he was dying, and the doctor and nurses were summoned in great haste.

"He is the last person whom he shall see until he is fully convalescent and able to bear it," declared the doctor, grimly. "Don't come again very soon, King. When a man refuses to see his sweetheart, there's little good of admitting any one else to the sick-room."

He gave his patient a strong stimulant, blaming himself gravely for this change for the worse in his patient, caused by his want of forethought in granting his wish to see a business associate.

The doctor gave Van Driscoll a powerful opiate, and when he thought he was sinking into drowsiness, by his closed eyes and belabored breathing, he beckoned the nurses into an adjoining apartment, that the sound of their subdued voices might not disturb his patient.

But in thinking that he slept, the doctor made a mistake. It seemed to James Van Driscoll that he should never sleep again, for his heart and brain were on fire.

He lay there quite still, while they believed him sleeping, and went over the whole terrible scene through which he had last passed at the office.

To James Van Driscoll it seemed that life was over. He cried out silently to Heaven, from the depths of his heart, to have mercy on his misery and let him die.

His hopes, his pride, his glorious ambition, his dreams of honor and nobility, were crushed in the dust.

"I can not face it!" he cried, choking back the bitter cries that rose to his white lips.

He had lived such an honorable life; he had been so proud of his unsullied reputation and the rank he held in the hearts of his fellowmen; he had been so unutterably blest, his life enriched with the choicest gifts Heaven seemed to have to bestow, and now suddenly, like a thunder-bolt from a summer sky, his life lay in ruins around him—he, the district attorney, the choice of the people, the betrothed of one of the proudest girls in the metropolis, the son of criminals, born in the very midst of the hotbed of crime, the son of James Roundtree the noted criminal, who was serving a long sentence in prison for one of the most dastardly and cruel of crimes, and—and—of Ann Roundtree, who was also behind the bars. Oh, God! the horror—the pity of it!

He turned his face, all wet with tears, to the wall, asking Heaven what he should do with his barren, desolate, wrecked life. Even the pain of death could never be fraught with more anguish than he suffered during the hour that followed—suffered and lived through it, and his heart, which seemed incapable of bearing any more, did not break.

The shameful story of his life would be known to the whole world sooner of later. While he was attending to the duties of his office the sword which was to slay him might fall any day, any hour, upon his hapless head. What a sensation there would be in the papers, that loved to drag down a shining light! They would clamor for his removal, remarking: "How droll it is that the son of James and Ann Roundtree should be driving criminals to the wall by holding such a position of honor as district attorney." How they would comment upon it, and how horrified his friends would be! There was but one step possible—he must resign. And Gertrude — his beautiful, proud, perless Gertrude—how horrified she would be when she read the story! She would turn from him, fly from him as though his very presence bore contagion, and that would be sure to kill him.

When he arose from his bed of sickness, James Van Driscoll was so terribly altered that his friends looked at him in wonder. Mr. Hamilton wa stroubled over the great change in him, and still more troubled by his persistent refusal to see Gertrude. He was rather mollified by his son's version of the difficulty, however. In talking over the matter, Dick had said:

"You do not see the matter in the right light, father. Jimmie Van Driscoll is too proud to permit Gertrude to see him while he is looking like a veritable scare-crow—a walking advertisement for a grave-yard, as it were, with his deathly white face and hollow cheeks, to say nothing of the hair being almost gone from the top of his head. I do not blame him for wanting to keep away until he recuperates a little. He is fearful that the impression he might make on her now—at this crisis in the stage of his love affair—might not be to his credit. You and Gertrude must learn to wait. You must certainly give him his way in this matter."

How strange it was that in the hour of James Van Driscoll's bitterest agony he thought of Jessy Carr's words:

"If you prosecute my poor father when he is innocent, and send him to prison, Heaven will curse you for it. Joy will turn to sorrow as you grasp it, and your dearest hopes will turn to Dead Sea fruit on your lips."

It had all happened as she had predicted, and he fell to wondering whether or not the girl's father were indeed guilty. During the fortnight which followed, Van Driscoll, after much thought and many bitter heartaches, concluded that there were three things which his honor—and how bitterly he smiled at the word—prompted him to do, and that was, resign his office of district attorney, whose duty it was to prosecute criminals, give Gertrude back her freedom—ay, break the golden chain that bound them, at any cost, rather than link her life to that of the son of criminals, both of whom—oh, the bitter, awful shame of it—were even then behind prison bars.

Proof Positive.

One of the wittiest men of a past generation of Englishmen was Bishop Samuel Wilberforce. Toward the end of a meeting at which he spoke, says Mr. Walter Jerrold in his "Book of Famous Wits," the audience began to disperse.

A gentleman whose name was on the programme of speakers said to the bishop, "I need not speak; I hardly think they expect me."

"To be sure they do," said Wilberforce. "Don't you see they are all going?"

FEW PEOPLE DIE OF OLD AGE

Dr. Bertillon Gives Statistics of Diseases Affecting Occupations.

Few people die of old age, Dr. Jacques Bertillon, head of the Paris Municipal Statistical Department, points out this regrettable fact in an interesting sheet of statistics compiled from the study of a man's diseases in relation to his occupation.

Consumption, as Dr. Bertillon shows, is most frequent in the liquor trade and among those whose occupations expose them to lead poisoning. Next on the list under the same head came the occupations which entail the breathing of a dusty atmosphere. On the other hand, consumption is very rare among shopkeepers and all the liberal professions.

Very few farm laborers die of consumption. Cancer is rarest among farmers, railroad men and miners. Cab and wagon drivers are frequently attacked by cancer. This disease is extraordinarily frequent among chimney sweeps, brewers, and sailors in the merchant marine, but only the average number of fishermen die of it. Diabetes especially abounds among the liberal professions. Lawyers, doctors, druggists and clergymen are the greatest sufferers, and after them come in order butchers, printers, dyers and commercial travelers.

The liquor trade is at the top of the list in the affections of the nervous system. If any moral can be drawn from the above statistics it is that diabetes in Paris is the only disease which has any pretence to respectability, and that the safest profession of all is that of a clergyman, for, according to Dr. Bertillon, clergymen have fewer diseases and live longer than anyone else.

Birds of Paradise.

The famous birds of paradise henceforth are to have in their struggle for existence against the women of the world the protection of the German government. The number of these birds in German New Guinea having been greatly reduced by the plume hunters, the colonial authorities have decided to quadruple the export duty on their skins from that colony. It is hoped this will reduce the demand for the feathers of the bird and make it possible to prevent the species from becoming extinct.

A Safe Investment Yielding Good Returns

In Montreal bricks are sold for cash, and all the brick manufacturers together are unable to supply the demand.

The demand is steadily increasing.

Contractors find the shortage a serious handicap, and would gladly buy 2,000,000 more bricks a week at present prices, which yield $4.00 net profit per thousand to the brickmakers. We already have one contract booked for 21,000,000 yearly for three years at $10 per 1,000. The Domestic Brick Plant supplying 800,000 a week will sell 32,000,000 bricks this year, with provision to increase to 75,000,000, and make $128,000 net profit, which is over eight times the Preference stock dividend. With this the company will pay 7% per annum on the $200,000 Preference Stock and could pay 30% per annum on the Common Stock and carry over $70,000 to reserve, which we guarantee will be done after the third year. You can readily see that it would pay you to invest in the

The Company is capitalized at $500,000, $200,000 Preference and $300,000 Common, of which $152,000 is issued, and owns 198 arpents of land at Laprairie, Province of Quebec. $500 will give you five preference shares and two common shares. The Preference Shares guarantee you 7% on your money, and the dividend on the Common Shares will greatly increase your income.

Is Your Back Full of Aches All Day Long?

That Stab-like Pain in the Back is Sure Indication of Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Anna Rodriguez writes as follows from her home in Valencia: "For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky. I was sallow and thin, felt rheumatic pains, dizziness and chills. I unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys and was nearly dead when I discovered the true cause of my sufferings. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me. Such blessings of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. They speedily put me right, and their steady use keeps me active, energetic, strong and happy. I strongly urge others to regulate and tone their system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut."

PUDDLES OF SILVER.

System Used in Mexico to Separate the Metal.

It was at Pachuca, Mexico, that the patio system of separating silver had its origin. This system is still followed extensively at the silver mines throughout Mexico. The ore is crushed and worked down to a state of puddle. It is then spread out to a depth of two or three feet over the paved floor of the courtyard, or patio. To this mass sulphate of copper is added in powder, about fifteen pounds of sulphate to 3,000 pounds of puddle. This is trodden into the puddle by horses. Several gangs of old, worn-out horses or mules, about twelve in a gang, are seen in various parts of the patio, being driven round in circles to tread in the sulphate.

On the next day 6 per cent. of common salt is added and in two more days 100 per cent. of pure quicksilver, or as much as the assay of the ore shows, is required. This mass is then trodden up by horses for fifteen days. It is then wheeled to a large tank through which passes a rapid stream of water. This washes away the clay, leaving the silver and quicksilver. This residuum is poured into cone-shaped canvas bags through which most of the quicksilver runs out, and what remains with the silver is passed off with the vapor by means of heated retorts. None of the quicksilver is lost, and even the vapor is brought by cold water to its original state and used again and again. The quicksilver soon rots the hoofs of the horses and the mules, but the Mexicans themselves do not seem to be much the worse for it, even though they wade around in the puddle for days at a time.

WHY FASHIONS CHANGE.

How Some Recurrent Modes Were Originated.

If the most noteworthy trait in the fashions of the present day is an eclecticism which permits no one dominant tendency to hold sway, the reason may perhaps be found in the fact that while Paris undoubtedly sets the fashion for the whole feminine world, Paris is the capital of a republic.

Formerly, under the Empire, or when there was a king on the throne of France, the sovereign's wishes had a distinct influence on the tendency of fashion. The court liked to copy the smallest detail or whim of his majesty or of the princesses who surrounded him. For example, trains owe their origin to the fact that the daughters of Louis IX. had abnormally large feet.

The wife of Philippe III. was afflicted with a tremendously long neck, so she invented the high guimpe.

It was because La Belle Ferronniere had a burn exactly in the middle of her forehead that she wore over the cicatrix the charming jewel held by a fine thread that is called a Ferronniere to this day.

In the reign of Henry II. some princesses who suffered from goitre hid the blemish beneath their high-fluted ruffs and disguised the crookedness of their shoulders under the puffed sleeve.

Anne of Austria wore short sleeves because of her beautiful arms; Louis XIV. brought the wig into fashion because he was afflicted with a wen on his head. Mme. de Pompadour created the vogue of high heeled slippers to hide her lack of inches.

The Empress Eugene had very beautiful shoulders, so she set the fashion of decolletage which left the shoulders bare and set them off to the best advantage.

STRENGTH.

Without Overloading the Stomach.

The business man, especially, needs food in the morning that will not overload the stomach, but give mental vigor for the day.

Much depends on the start a man gets each day, as to how he may expect to accomplish the work on hand.

He can't be alert, with a heavy, fried-meat-and-potatoes breakfast requiring a lot of vital energy in digesting it.

A Western business man tried to find some food combination that would not overload the stomach in the morning, but that would produce energy.

He writes:

"For years I was unable to find a breakfast food that had nutrition enough to sustain a business man without overloading his stomach, causing indigestion and kindred ailments.

"Being a very busy and also a very nervous man, I decided to give up breakfast altogether. But luckily I was induced to try Grape-Nuts.

"Since that morning I have been a new man; can work without tiring, my head is clear and my nerves strong and quiet.

"I find four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with one of sugar and a small quantity of cold milk, is delicious as the cereal part of the morning meal, and invigorates me for the day's business." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

ANOTHER PROOF FROM THE WEST

THAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE A NATURAL REMEDY.

For Cases of Exhaustion and Nerve Weakness—How S. Jeremy Found Relief when he Cured his Kidneys.

Sniatyn, Alta., March 10.—(Special).—That the natural remedy for exhaustion and nerve weakness is one that will give good circulation and pure blood carrying nutrition to all parts of the body, is again proved in the case of S. Jeremy, a well-known resident of this place.

"For over two years I suffered from attacks of exhaustion and nerve weakness," Mr. Jeremy states. "I tried many nerve foods and tonics but must admit that Dodd's Kidney Pills have benefitted me more than anything else I ever used.

"I am more than grateful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me."

Nerve weakness and exhaustion are caused by impure blood. Impure blood is caused by diseased kidneys failing to strain the waste matter of the body out of the blood. The natural remedy is to cure the kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills have yet to find a case of kidney disease they cannot cure.

RASH ON ARMS ALMOST UNBEARABLE

Looked Like Raw Meat. Itched and Burned So Badly Could Not Rest Night or Day. Arms Sore from Wrist to Elbow. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Cured.

Lower Blandford, Nova Scotia.—"Three years ago I became troubled with sore arms. It came as a rash. My arms looked like raw meat and itched and burned so badly I could not rest night or day. When I scratched they became awfully sore. As long as the weather was warm it didn't bother me so much, but in winter it was almost unbearable. My arms were sore from the wrist to the elbow.

"I used several cures which were recommended to me but without any avail. I saw how I could get a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I did. I used the samples and found an improvement. Whenever I applied the Cuticura Ointment the itching and burning ceased. I got a full-sized box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap and only used about half when it disappeared and since then I have not been troubled. That was six months ago. Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me." (Signed) Miss Elsie E. Zinck, Mar. 7, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment do so much for pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails with painful finger-ends, that it is almost criminal not to use them. NERVOUS SHOULD WALK.

Prescribed for the Person Bordering on Hysteria.

Many women, because they are tired at night, think that they do not need physical training, that they have already taken too much; but this is a mistaken idea. Housework, says a writer in the Woman's World, tends to make women nervous and irritable unless they obtain diversion in the form of exercise or healthful recreation. When women are nervous or bordering on hysteria and feel like crying or screaming, a little well chosen exercise followed by a cool bath will improve these conditions, and, if persisted in, will eventually cure them.

Any woman who has a moderate degree of health can walk. If she will rise an hour earlier in the morning and walk, with the body erect, chest strongly expanded, swinging the arms at the side of the body as a man does, and take great deep breaths, she will have no occasion to complain of nerves, even if her daily duties are confining. If it is out of the question to take this hour's walk in the morning, take it in the evening after dinner. You may not have as much sleep, but it is refreshing and will more than compensate for the time expended.

THE FIRST TEETOTALER.

The Word Was Coined in the Town of Preston, England.

The quaint sayings of "Dicky" Turner, one of the earliest advocates of temperance in rural England, are still remembered in the little town of Preston, where the reformer began his attacks on the drinking habits of his fellow townsmen. In "The Manchester and Glasgow Road," Mr. Charles G. Harper describes the work of this interesting man:

Outside of Preston, probably not one person in a thousand knows how the word "teetotal" came into popular use. It was, to all intents and purposes, deliberately invented by "Dicky" Turner, who, at a meeting held in the Old Cockpit, declaimed vehemently against the arguments of the moderate drinkers, and insisted upon total abstinence. "I'll have nowt to dee wi' this moderation botheration pledge," he said. "I'll be reet down out-an'-out tee-tee-total for ever and ever."

"Well done!" shouted the meeting, and the word was adopted with enthusiasm.

There was no reference to tea, as is often supposed, nor was the word the result of a stuttering attempt at the word "total"; for Turner was not a stammerer. He was a ready coiner of words upon any emergency, and often perpetrated what in an Irishman would be called "bulls." In one of his impassioned addresses on temperance, he said: "We will go with our axes on our shoulders and plow up the great deep; and then the ship of temperance shall sail gallantly over the land."

A Racking Cough And Sore Throat Cured In Five Hours

At 11 o'clock, after five hours' treatment, I was practically well. I therefore write you at once in order that it may be publicly known that Nerviline will knock out a bad cold over night."

It is a fact that Nerviline will ease up a tight chest, will relieve that sore, wheezy feeling, will knock out a cold in just a few hours. SUN-BEACONS OF THE COAST.

Swedish Engineer's Remarkable Invention.

The remarkable application of the "sun-valve" in acetylene gas-lighting was the first step toward relieving the lonely keepers of the little coast-beacons in remote places. In the last three years many hundreds of the old lights afloat and ashore have been replaced by the new contrivance, which is the invention of Gustaf Dalen, the Swedish engineer who recently received the Nobel prize for physics. Harper's Weekly thus describes it:

The source of light for these lone beacons is dissolved acetylene, which is stored under pressure in steel cylinders. One of these cylinders can be charged with enough gas to last a small beacon three years. Usually, however, in the case of floating buoys, a six months' supply is all that is necessary, as such buoys are overhauled and painted twice a year. That is all the care the light needs. The sun-valve does the rest.

The scientific principle upon which the sun-valve depends is that sunlight upon dark surfaces is converted into heat, and heat produces expansion. This expansion is very considerable in certain metals, of which copper is one.

Through the centre of a carefully sealed glass jar nearly a foot high and about three inches in diameter a thick black rod is run. Three slenderer rods of highly polished copper support it. The black rod is of copper also, and it is coated with lampblack in order that it may absorb the greatest possible amount of light.

As the sun appears and the atmosphere grows warmer, this rod expands and lengthens. It pushes down into the metal chamber in which the glass jar rests and touches the end of a lever. It presses down on the lever, and cuts off the flow of gas to the lamp.

When the sun disappears from view in the evening and the temperature of the air falls, the process is reversed. The rod contracts and releases the pressure on the lever. The gas flows upward to the lamp, and is ignited by a little pilot flame that is never extinguished.

The precision of this contrivance is almost incredible. It can be used even in the cold of the polar regions, for it responds with the utmost accuracy to small variations in temperature. There are nearly a hundred of these sun-valve beacons in Alaska. In summer they are aids to navigation, and in winter they guide the travellers on dog-sledges over the frozen wastes.

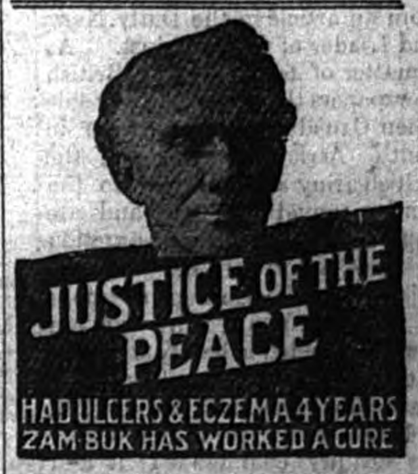
Zam-Buk



Mr. J. E. Arsenault, a Justice of the Peace, and station master at Wellington, on the Prince Edward Island Railway, says:

"Four years ago I slipped in the station and fell on a freight truck, sustaining a bad cut on the front of my leg. I thought this would heal, but instead of doing so it developed into a bad ulcer, and later into a form of eczema which spread very rapidly and also started on the other leg. Both legs became so swollen and sore that I could only go about my work by having them bandaged. My doctor said I must stop work and lay up.

"After six months of this trouble I consulted another doctor, but with no better result. I tried all the salves, liniments and lotions I heard of, but instead of getting better I got worse.

"This was my condition when I got my first box of Zam-Buk. Greatly to my delight that first box gave me relief. I continued to apply it to the sores, and day by day they got better. I could see that at last I had got hold of something which would cure me, and in the end it did.

"It is now over a year since Zam-Buk worked a cure in my case, and there has been no return of the eczema."

Such is the nature of the great cures which Zam-Buk is daily effecting. Purely herbal in composition, this great balm is a sure cure for all skin diseases, cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poisoning, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflated patches, cuts, burns and bruises. Bad Anti-Imperialism.

Under the headline, "Bad Imperialism," the Toronto Daily Star printed the following in its issue of Thursday and attributed it to the London Times: "Mr. Borden would seem to stand alone among the statesmen of the Dominion, and the least concession he can make is to consult the people of Canada before he commits them to a constitutional revolution condemned by all the other dominions Far from doing that, it is stated that he means to force the Naval Bill through by introducing the closure. The first fruit, therefore, is a domestic crisis in Canada of the first magnitude. We have from the first criticized the substance of the Borden scheme on constitutional grounds. We have repeatedly insisted that it was doing an ill service to the Empire to make the navy an issue between the parties in the Dominion. Now that Mr. Borden's scheme has been pushed to the point of an acute political crisis in Canada, it will be agreed by all rational minds that it is doing the worst of services to Imperial unity."

That passage is not from the London Times, as alleged, but from the editorial page of a newspaper nearly as hostile to Imperialism as is the Toronto Star itself. The quotation is from an article in the Daily News and Leader of the 8th inst. As a matter of fact, all the British newspapers that took the Boer side when Canadian soldiers were in South Africa fighting in the British army are opposed to the Borden naval scheme and are approving the Laurier obstruction as they approved Sir Wilfrid's objection to the sending of troops to South Africa. The London Times extended a hearty welcome to the Borden naval policy when that policy was first announced, and the same great newspaper has steadily commended it and referred to it in the spirit of British fraternity in which Mr. Churchill spoke when he said that Mr. Borden's enquiry as to how Canada could help was like the touch of the hand of a friend in time of trouble. The Canadian politicians and newspapers opposed to the Borden policy would, indeed, score heavily against it if they could with truth exhibit as a quotation from the London Times such a statement in condemnation of the policy as this one selected from a strongly anti-Imperial newspaper. Who is to blame for the coupling of the Times' name with this partisan blow? Was the blunder committed in Mr. Fielding's London office or was it committed here?

The benefits following the defeat of reciprocity are being demonstrated every day and the latest is seen in the announcement that an enormous steel plant is to be erected near Sandwich, Ontario. The capitalization of his great company is twenty million dollars and it is estimated that the works will employ in the vicinity of 5,000 men. This means that a new town will grow up. With 5,000 men in the works it is estimated that the establishment of this industry will mean a total population of not less than 20,000 people.

Had reciprocity passed these steel works would have been located in Detroit, in the United States.

The Opposition claims the Borden Government has no mandate from the people to spend thiirty-five million dollars for the purpose of increasing the effective naval forces of the Empire. Perhaps he is under the impression the people gave him a mandate for his "tinpot" navy in 1910, consisting of the Rainbow and the Niobe. The latter vessel has spent most of her time in dry dock, recuperating from the effects of attending political picnics in Yarmouth County, while the poor old Rainbow cannot put out to sea for fear of going to the bottom should a gale blow up.

The establishment at an early date in Canada of a system of parcels post is foreshadowed in a notice which appeared last night of a Government measure that will be introduced in the Commons by the Hon. L. P, Pelletier, Postmaster-General. It is reported that the progressive zone system will be the foundation of the scheme that it is intended to work out, not as a competitor of the express companies, but mainly for those parts of the country where the express companies do not go, and at such rates as will give to the post office department fair remuneration.

OUR LETTER FROM TORONTO

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

Dr. C. C. James Speaks of the High Cost of Living—Dr. Freidman's Cure—Toronto Suffragettes—Exhibition Association

City people, not infrequently, are heard to declare that farmers are getting rich, that the present high cost of living must be resulting in a situation in which the farming community as a whole is simply rolling in wealth. This view was punctured by Dr. C. C. James, former Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Ontario and now Advisory Expert for the Dominion Department of Agriculture, in his address to the Canadian Club.

"I want to tell you," he said emphatically, "that the farmer is not getting too much." In illustration he quoted the fact that a bag of potatoes which costs 90c., $1.00 or $1.25 in Toronto, yields to the farmer who grows them, probably in Carleton County, New Brunswick, not more than 50c., and the milk which sells in Toronto for 10c. a quart yields the farmer probably only 4 1-2c. a quart.

"The farmer who gets 4 1-2c. a quart is not getting too much," he said, "but the city man who pays 10c. a quart is paying too much." Mr. James maintained that the system of distribution was all wrong, though, he said, there was no use calling the middle man hard names, because he was simply working under conditions as they exist and earning an honest living.

Mr. James was discussing the cost of living, and it was an attentive group of 250 city men he was addressing. They were vitally interested, because, as Mr. James pointed out, the present conditions have reached such a pass that for the classes of the community on fixed salaries, and this means the great body of teachers, clergymen, clerks and all other forms of unorganized workers, relief must come soon.

The West Is Not Helping.

Mr. James made a comment that was surprising to many of his audience in connection with the opening up of Western Canada. He demonstrated that as far as the cost of living in this country is concerned, the new population in the West is doing nothing to ameliorate conditions. While they are producers in one sense of the word, the stuff they are producing—wheat, oats, flax—is practically all for export, so that as a matter of fact the increased population is simply adding to the consuming population of the country. On the other hand, the rural population of Eastern Canada during the last ten years had declined by about 47,000 people, while the city or urban population of the country had increased by no less than 1,250,000. In these figures, Mr. James thought, lay one of the chief causes for the great advance in the cost of living in Canada. The consumers had increased, the producers had declined in number. It was inevitable that the law of supply and demand should rule. Mr. James followed this up with the startling declaration that in his opinion it would be better for the Government, instead of spending thirty, forty or fifty million dollars for railways to open up new area in the Northwest, to take a similar amount and spend it on good roads in old Ontario and the other settled portions of Eastern Canada.

In this connection Mr. James pointed out that Canada, generally regarded as an agricultural country, is a large importer of food stuffs. British Columbia, for example, imports $16,000,000 worth of table products annually, and little New Brunswick, another agricultural province, imports $4,000,000 worth.

Mr. James outlined what it was proposed to do with the $10,000,000 now being granted by the Dominion Department of Agriculture for the increase of agricultural knowledge and training, the purpose being to teach the farmers how to increase the amount of their produce.

Friedmann's Cure.

Among local medical men and the public generally there is the keenest interest in the reported discovery by Dr. Friedmann, the German physician, of a successful treatment for consumption. Several local doctors have made arrangements to interview Dr. Friedmann, and it is hoped that possibly he may be induced to visit Toronto. Despite the great publicity which has been given the new "cure," the disposition among Toronto medical men is to look with some suspicion on the high claims that have been made. They will be delighted to find that Dr. Friedmann's cure is as dependable as has been stated, but in view of the doubt they think it is unfortunate that so much publicity has been given the matter until all possibility of disappaintment to sufferers had passed. That a distinct advance in the treatment of tuberculosis has been made they consider possible, but that anything like a "cure all" has been discovered seems to them incredible.

Eager Suffragettes.

The Toronto Suffragettes who went to Washington have returned well pleased with their expedition. The Suffragettes, as a rule, are very sensitive of criticism of their actions, but this has not prevented certain persons of both sexes from asking what was to be gained by such a jaunt. The point of view of these critics is that the Canadian participation in the Washington parade was as much out of place as would be the participation in an Ottawa parade of Canadian Suffragettes seeking to influence the Dominion Parliament, by a contingent of United States women. The Toronto contingent could not help but impress the eye. They wore red hats, long white trailing gowns with a big red sash bearing the word "Canada," and carried Union Jacks. The delegation included about a dozen of the most active agitators in Toronto, including Mrs. Flora Macdonald Denison, President of the Canadian Suffrage Association; Dr. Augusta Stowe-Gullen, past president; Dr. Margaret Johnston, Mrs. Campbell MacIvor, who alone of Toronto's suffragettes believes in militant methods; Mrs. Hector Prenter, the very active Secretary of the Association; Mrs. L. A. Hamilton, President of the Equal Franchise League and a very active social worker, and Mrs. E. L. Campbell, President of the Beaches' Progress Club. All of these are ladies of ripe experience in women's movements, and none belongs to the type one would expect to be carried away by any visionary project. The enthusiastic Mrs. Hamilton proposes to organize a parade in Toronto next.

Cabinet Ministers Lend a Hand.

The Toronto Exhibition Association has only one meeting a year, but it manages to throw around that gathering some of the glamor of national importance which it secures for the Big Show itself. For example, at the annual meeting this year no less than three Cabinet Ministers were in attendance. There was the Honorable James Duff, who from his position as Minister of Agriculture takes a keen interest in all exhibitions, and who is an enthusiastic member of the Toronto Exhibition Association; then there was the Honorable W. H. Hearst, whose special interest is New Ontario, which always has a prominent exhibit at the fair, and the third Minister was the Honorable Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, whose interest is elicited on account of the educational features which the Fair seeks to introduce. Each was called upon to make a speech, and responded with a few brief sentences of a congratulatory nature, delivered in characteristic style, Mr. Duff inclined to be flowery, Mr. Hearst forcible and downright, and Dr. Pyne the dignified and suave gentleman.

The Exhibition Association is made up of delegates from various bodies of a more or less representative character throughout the Province. Membership in the Association carries with it as privileges the right to attend the annual meeting, to take part in the discussion there and to vote in the election for Board of Directors, and to a pass or two for the Exhibition. The Board of Directors, consisting of 16 members, is the inner circle. While the membership of the Association includes a number from outside the city, the Directorships are pretty well confined to men with Toronto interests. Formerly there was in addition to the Directorate a system of committees through which it was sought to interest the various members of the Association, but this plan has been largely abandoned.

The Inmost Circle.

As a matter of fact, there is an inner circle within the inner circle, the inmost circle being the Executive Committee of about five members. This is the real governing body of the Exhibition.

The annual meeting this year was one of the largest in the history of the Association, filling one of the large rooms at the City Hall. President Kent, a man of few words, presided, and General Manager Orr was at his left hand to see that the wheels revolved smoothly. The election of Directors is always accompanied by a great deal of buttonholing, and, it is said, wire-pulling, and there is generally a surprise in store for someone. This year it was for Mr. H. R. Frankland, a former director who had some disagreement with the other members of the Board during the year just closed, and who this year went down to defeat. After the voting adjournment was made to a restaurant, where an elaborate luncheon was served.

SHILOH CURES COUGHS & COLDS

Royalty Pays Visit to Duke of Portland's Famous Estate.

Welbeck, the country estate of the Duke of Portland, which has just been honored with a royal visit, is remarkable among the country seats of the British aristocracy for three things—a long tunnel which opens right into Welbeck Park, a riding school which is unsurpassed in Europe, and a famous picture gallery. This is the most notable of the many subterranean rooms at the Abbey. Excavated from a quarter of an acre of solid clay and lighted entirely from the roof, it is 160 feet long, 64 feet wide and 22 feet high. By night eighteen lustre chandeliers illumine the Van Dycks, Rubens, Rembrandts, Reynolds, Teniers, and other masterpieces that cover the walls. Not without justice has this gallery been styled "the largest and in every way the most magnificent private room in England."

The riding school has a glass arcade with a straight run of a quarter of a mile. Then the glass houses, with which a former Duke of Portland experimented with the effect of various colored glass on plants and flowers, are measured by the mile. The apricot house has a run of nearly a quarter of a mile, and its neighbors, devoted to the culture of various other fruits, are little shorter. Each of the numerous flower houses is a vista of loveliness, and 100 yards of glass are devoted to Malmaison carnations alone—a favored flower at Welbeck. The Abbey itself is not architecturally impressive, but it stands on the shore of a broad lake and overlooks a fine deep park studded with rare gardens until its limits reach the old oaks of Sherwood Forest.

World's Biggest Organ.

The new organ which is to be placed in the great cathedral now in course of erection in Liverpool will probably be classed among the wonders of the world, as it will be the largest organ in existence. The organ in the Sydney (Australia) town hall now has the distinction of standing first in point of size. The Liverpool organ will take four years to construct. It will contain 215 draw-stops, speaking and mechanical, and the total number of pipes will reach the remarkable number of 10,567. It will occupy two special chambers, one on each side of the chancel. It is the gift of Mrs. James Barrow of Waterloo, near Liverpool.

"YOUR NAME, PLEASE!"

Here Are Some Little-Known Wonders of Nomenclature.

"No," said hubby; "I bar these foreign names. Let's have something the child won't be ashamed of. What's the matter with William? Bit of British stuff, that!"

Alas!—but such is life!—William is a purely German name, and means "defending many." You've heard of Wilhelm? Well, that's it!

Very few of our Christian names are English. Sad, but true. Here is a list: Thomas is Hebrew, and means "a twin." John is also a Jewish name—"the grace of the Lord."

The following "English names," common and popular, are German: Robert (famous in counsel); Walter (a conqueror); Henry (rich lord); Herbert (bright lord); Frederic (rich peace); Charles (noble-spirited); Francis (free); Archibald (bold observer). Ferdinand is German, too, and means "pure peace."

French names are fewer. Guy, Lewis, Percival, Norman are examples.

Bible names are, of course, nearly all Jewish.

To get nearer home, the following are Saxon names: Alfred (all peace); Albert (all bright); Edward (happy keeper); Edwin (happy conqueror); Richard (powerful); Ralph (help). Less popular ones are Adolphus, Cuthbert, Dunstan, Edgar, Edmund, Harold, Gilbert, Gerard, etc.

So far, you see, no English names, and there are still to come the lists of Latin and Greek names. These are Latin: Clement (mild-tempered); Cecil (dim-sighted); Augustus (venerable, grand); Anthony (flourishing); Vincent, Paul Oliver, Maurice, Mark, Lionel, etc.

Hugh is Dutch.

If you are really bent on having a good old British name for your son and heir, you must take one of the following: Arthur (strong man); Cadwallader (!), which means valliant; Evan (same as John); Griffith (great faith); Llewellin (like a lion); Owen (well-descended); Morgan (a mariner); or Meredith. A small list!

If you are smitten with Horatio or Orlando—well, these are Italian.

Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitic disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bain of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh. (Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

DECORATED COFFINS.

Cremation in Gay Coffins Latest Amusement of Bavarians.

To be cremated in highly-decorated coffins, we are told, is the latest amusement of South Germans. The brilliant colors of Egyptian tombs are thrown into the shade by the pictures painted upon the coffins of dead Bavarian citizens. The cause of this is the new law legalizing cremation. The crematoriums have a regulation that no metal may be used in coffin construction. Pegs must be employed instead of nails; and the elaborate brass or nickel work formerly in fashion in Germany is against the rules. The national craze for overdecoration has, therefore, found refuge in decorative painting. The coffins are painted pale blue or green, and on this background appear vivid oil-paintings of Swiss landscapes, pastoral scenes, and even portraits of the corpse and of his family.

7% SAFE INVESTMENT

The National Securities Corporation, Limited, now offer to the public their 7% Profit Sharing Bonds, which mature in five years, with interest payable half-yearly on the 1st of June and the 1st of December.

The National Securities Corporation, Limited, acts as a holding company for several large and profitable manufacturing plants that have been built up by members of the Corporation in the past quarter of a century. The proceeds of these bonds are to be used in still further developing these plants—in acquiring another long established manufacturing plant which has shown large profits for years—and in purchasing well located timber lands. The Corporation now has a large limit under option containing 1,000,000,000 feet of virgin timber. This latter should largely increase in value in the next few years.

All profits beyond bond interest and stock dividends are to be divided equally between the Bondholders and the Shareholders, and whatever profits are thus divided will be in excess of the 7% annual interest on the Bond.

These Bonds are amply secured by investments of the Corporation in these manufacturing plants and in the value of lands, timber and mills which it controls, and will be further secured by the acquisition of other plants and timber limits.

The Bonds are offered to the public in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000, and may be purchased either outright or by means of the periodic payment plan. In the latter case, an initial payment of 10% of the face value of the Bond will be required. PRINCE KROPOTKIN.

The fame of Prince Kropotkin has spread throughout the civilized world, and when he celebrated his seventieth birthday recently he was the recipient of congratulations from all quarters.

Prince Kropotkin's career reads like a romance by Dumas. A member of one of the most ancient and noble houses in Russia, when a boy he belonged to the Tsar's corps of pages, but as he grew up his soul revolted against serfdom, and the autocratic tyranny which the Russian people groaned. He joined the movement aimed at establishing freedom and good government and the police became aware that a mysterious "Borodin" was exercising a remarkable influence on the revolutionary party. Who this "Borodin" was they were unable to ascertain, and peasants and artisans who were imprisoned or sent to the scaffold refused to divulge the secret.

In 1874 the savants of Russia assembled at the Geographical Society in St. Petersburg to hear the famous Prince Kropotkin recount the results of his explorations in Finland. As the lecturer was driving from the meeting in a cab, he passed another conveyance from which an artisan called out "Mr. Borodin." The Prince stopped his cab, and thus fell into the trap. The police had got him at last.

For two years he was confined in the terrible fortress of Peter and Paul, where he underwent frightful hardships. Then came his dramatic escape, followed by a flight across Finland to Sweden, and then England. Since that time he has never returned to Russia, but the vengeance of Russian autocrats has pursued him. When he went to France after the Lyons' riots in 1882 he was sentenced to five years' imprisonment at the instigation of the Russian Government. But so strong was the resentment in France at this move that Prince Kropotkin was released at the end of three years.

Other attempts have been made to lay hands on him, but he resides safely in England. This famous scientist, who surrendered great estates in Russia as the result of his devotion to liberty, lives in a simple manner, supporting himself by his writings. His best-known work is "Fields, Factories, and Workshops," but he has made many notable contributions to social science.

Frederic Harrison's Golden Rules of Health.

Five golden rules of health were given recently by Mr. Frederic Harrison, author, critic, bibliophile, ex-professor, barrister, historian, traveller, and amateur gardener, on his eighty-first birthday the other day, celebrated at his home at Hawkhurst, Kent, England.

(1) Abstain from tobacco, spirits, made dishes, and all such dreadful things. I am satisfied with a little bit of mutton and rice pudding.

(2) Rise from a meal with an appetite. I believe people eat too much.

(3) Walk every day for two hours. This I am going to do as soon as I get through a pile of letters and telegrams from Florence and Rome. I am too old to play at tennis, and golf is too slow.

(4) Sleep eight hours. People cannot sleep who smoke themselves black in the face, eat too much, and have not walked enough.

(5) More important than all—be content with what you have got. Take things quietly.

CZAREVITCH'S TROUBLES.

The Russian Crown Prince Has Strange Life.

The Czarevitch can not look back upon the joys of early life in the way that most children born to a throne are in a position to do. Nor will any of his European colleagues envy the Crown Prince of Russia.

From the day of his birth the little Prince was put under the care of a Cossack guard, who is held answerable with his life for the safety of his charge. The soldier never leaves the child; he sleeps in the ante-room of his bedchamber. The room is locked, but a series of bells would at a touch communicate with the outside world. Two sentries parade in front of the bedroom door, and a few paces further on is another double guard.

Little Alexis was four years old before his eyes fell on any sight beyond his own small garden bounded by the wall of a courtyard. He did not even play as other children do, for while he was digging in the sand or running about with his only companion, the son of a lady-in-waiting, other children were acting as his ghosts and running about in another part of the garden to distract attention and make security doubly sure. His own Cossack guarded the Imperial child of Russia, while a second Cossack guard simulated duty over the other little ones.

An English tutor entered upon the service of the Czarevitch when he was seven years old, but all lessons are done in the presence of the Cossack and of a lady-in-waiting. Friedburg was the first place the little boy saw outside his own secluded playground. Later, he beheld the grounds of the Imperial residence, and from the decks of the Standart his eyes greeted the Baltic.

On one occasion only was the son of the Czar at a military reception, and precautionary measures adopted were of the strictest kind. The Czar and Czarina have tried to prevent any possible risk of their child being poisoned, attacked or kidnapped. He eats nothing until it has been examined by his own special "taster," who makes trial of every dish before it appears on the table.

NEW CHEMICAL GUN TESTED.

Ernest Welsh's Invention Throws Projectiles Five Miles.

Ernest Welsh, of Hull, England, has invented a new chemical gun for which remarkable claims are made and which has undergone a Government test. The gun weighs three hundredweight, and is said to throw its projectiles, which ignite upon impact, to a distance of five miles.

The mechanism, as briefly explained by Mr. Welsh, consists in part of three generators which manufacture three distinct gases. In the stopper there is a small sponge saturated with a certain fluid which also gives off a supply of oxygen and hydrogen inside the cylinder.

The cylinder rests on a plate, and by the setting into motion of a small electric motor situate on the right hand side of the gun, the gases are exploded and the projectile is propelled through the muzzle.

Mr. Welsh says that there is no recoil and there is no pressure on the outside of the cylinder. All pressure is felt forward. The nature of the gases is a secret, but Mr. Welsh says that the gun has been tested with satisfactory results to all who witnessed the demonstration.

HOW A DOCTOR KEPT HIS WORD

This is the plain, unvarnished story of a doctor who so highly valued his word that he almost gave his life in a successful effort to make good, says the Wide World Magazine.

Far to the north, in the Dominion of Canada, right on the very edge, honeycombing the new land with a network of steel, will be found the large construction gangs lying in their camps in the summer, spreading goodness knows where in the winter. Each of these camps has a doctor, who lives the life of the men and watches over them just as though they were his children. He does not have to deal with sick headaches nor pains in the stomach, but he has to patch up men who have been badly smashed, to doctor limbs which have been blown off in premature dynamite explosions, feet crushed into pulp by falling rocks, and many and various frightful accidents, from which the victims emerge alive, saved by their rugged constitutions and by the skill of a doctor who can think like lightning and act as quickly as he thinks, without the aid of the exquisite surgical apparatus to be found in hospitals and specialists' operating rooms. There is no medical assistance to be had on the edge save that which is on the spot; no hospitals to go to; no consultations and no nurses. It is all part of the difficult game of empire building, and can be played only by strong men immune to suffering, always ready and willing to face the seemingly impossible.

Away on the northernmost boundaries of Manitoba, formerly called the Keewatin district, is a town known as Le Pas. Here the snaking rails of the steel stop short, as though chopped off with an ax, right in the heart of nowhere. Twenty-six miles to the north of Le Pas is Cumberland House, a Hudson Bay trading post. Yet it took Dr. J. Davis, M.D., M.R.C.S. —a Le Pas doctor who went with the construction camps in the summer and practised in the town in the winter—six days to travel this distance, and the journey entailed sufferings and hardships which sent him to the hospital, his strong constitution undermined, his feet frost bitten and his lungs racked with bronchitis. Even so, his one ambition was to get out of the hospital and hurry back to the northland to watch over the hardy race of men who are helping to build a track of steel to the great bay.

Dr. Davis was not on an expedition of exploration; his was a mission of mercy. He had promised to attend some patients at Cumberland House, and, although it was the very worst time of a particularly severe winter in the snow-covered wastes, where the wind sweeps down from the north in a biting, frozen gale, and where the snow piles high in sparkling, treacherous drifts, hiding the land and obliterating all marks of direction, the intrepid doctor faced the journey. He was ready to endure any suffering rather than disappoint the patients to whom he had given his word.

He does not even now seem to realize how close has been his call or how near he came to leaving his frozen body in the white, cold, silent north he loves so well.

Dr. Davis is an Englishman, born in Durham, and a graduate of the Royal College of Surgeons, and for several years he walked a well-known London hospital. He is a big man, standing a full six feet in his moccasins. He has a most unassuming but withal a strong personality, and is about 47 years of age. A pair of twinkling, humorous eyes are set far apart in a massive head.

The doctor left Le Pas on December 26, 1911, and arrived at Cumberland House six days later, tied down in a sleigh which had been converted into a temporary carryall. His feet were cruelly frozen and he was a physical wreck, but his spirit was undaunted, and his willing fingers were eager to feel the pulses of his patients. He doctored his own frost-bitten feet, but their tardy healing and signs of blood-poisoning made him hurry to Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he arrived on Sunday, February 18th, nearly two months after his terrible experience in the plains.

The day following Christmas of that year Dr. Davis started for Cumberland House. He had promised some patients there that he would be with them for Yuletide, and it was his intention to keep his word. The heavy fall of snow two days previously had obliterated the trail and made the journey very dangerous. No dogs could be secured for the sleigh, and he feared that he would not be able to make the journey. On the morning of December 26th, however, Dr. Davis heard that George Asmus, a German guide and teamster in the employ of Messrs. Revillon Brothers, was about to take the mails and a sleigh load of stores from Le Pas to Cumberland House, and he induced the guide to let him go along.

Asmus drove a team of two horses harnessed to an ordinary sleigh, and they pulled out of Le Pas at noon against the advice of all who saw them start. So bad was the trail that by midnight they had covered only three miles.

Here, thoroughly exhausted, they made camp. The extraordinary part of it all is that when the men realized how great were the difficulties they did not go back. But the men of the plains are not built along those lines, and what they started to do they intended to finish. It was for weaklings and cowards to back out—not men.

The morning of the 27th dawned cold and windy, and they broke camp and started off again. From morning until night they plodded on. Walking ahead of their horses, they marked out he trail, feeling the way, wary of some deep snowdrift, soft and dangerous, which might at any moment engulf their horses and their sleigh. Again that night they made camp, and the condition of their horses impelled them to spend the 28th in camp, for the animals were very weak, and it was dangerous to attempt the forward march until they had rested. Throughout the long night they camped, and all the next day, without a fire. There was no brushwood in sight, and they were afraid to go in search of it for fear they should be caught in a snowstorm and not be able to get back.

On the morning of the 29th, Dr. Davis and Asmus made their third start, but, in spite of the long rest, the heavy load and the bad trail had done their work, and soon the horses began to flag. It was decided that the best plan would be to cache half the load on the sleigh, and the two men got to work. Everything as it was removed was piled high on the snow-covered ground, so that, no matter how heavy the snowfall, the mound of goods would stand out above the surface and be visible to those who returned to get it. This work took the pair three hours, and their sufferings were intense, for the thermometer that day registered 42 degrees below zero, and the wind was blowing none too gently from the north. It is not the still cold that is so deadly, but the cold that is intensified by the boring wind, which goes right through the heaviest kind of furs until the clothes feel like icicles next to the skin.

When the load was lightened they started off again, and under the easier conditions reached Barrier Lake, the half-way point between Le Pas and Cumberland House. The Barrier was frozen over, apparently solidly. They had already crossed several creeks and the Saskatchewan River, so they had no fear in essaying this. The horses and the sleigh shot down the bank on to the snow-covered ice, and the two men again took their places at the animals' heads. Just as they reached the middle of the lake a sudden crash ripped out on the silence and the ice split asunder. Dr. Davis was hurled into the deadly cold water, where he stood up to his waist, with his feet ankle deep in the oozy mud of the bottom. The loud crack had frightened the horses, and their frantic struggles broke the weakened ice for several feet around where they stood, and they, too, dropped into the frightful cold water, which covered them completely save for their heads. It was only their kicking and plunging that prevented the water from solidifying over them as they stood, for at 42 degrees below zero it does not take very long to freeze any liquid. Even as the terror-stricken animals plunged and screamed the unfrozen space grew narrower and narrower as the water at the outer edge of the open circle glazed over.

Dr. Davis, though numbed almost to insensibility by his sudden plunge into the water, made a clutch at the rack of the sleigh, and was fortunate in pulling himself clear. He lay panting, weak and frozen on the ice. Asmus had been fortunate in escaping a dip and struggled at the horses' heads in a vain endeavor to get the animals up on the ice. Dr. Davis's first thought was for the horses. They must be cleared at all costs, and the two set to work. For four hours these splendid fellows toiled, even after nightfall, while they endeavored to get the animals clear. While trying to force one of them up and on to the ice the doctor was again jerked into the lake. Again he struggled out. His clothes froze solid to his body, and it was only his tremendous efforts on behalf of the horses which kept him from succumbing to the cold there and then. In the sleigh was a small ax, and with this the doctor tried to cut away the ice to the shore and let the horses swim clear. He chopped and hacked desperately, only to find that when he had cut a narrow channel a few feet long the water behind him froze up and closed the pathway. Close in to the bank the ice was sixteen inches thick, and while negotiating this the axhandle broke and the head disappeared in the depths of the lake.

The loss of the ax, the most useful tool carried by the plainsman, was a severe blow to their splendid courage, for without it they could not cut fuel for a fire, even where they to come on any. But they never gave up.

Gradually the utter impossibility of releasing the horses was driven home to the two men, and they tried to find some solution to their piteous situation. Dr. Davis felt his strength going fast, for it was only his exertions to save the horses which had kept his blood warm and circulating through his body. No signs of brushwood were visible to his eye as he scanned the smooth white prairie. Any that existed lay hidden by the snow, and their hopes of a fire dwindled away. Death on the plain stared them in the face—death from cold and exposure, with the slow agony of the numbing limbs, drowsiness and the final slipping into semi-consciousness and oblivion.

Huddled together so that they could gain warmth from each other's bodies, the two men sat on the south bank of the Barrier Lake and silently tried to scheme out some way of escape. Towards nine o'clock that night the wonderful aurora borealis lighted up the heavens to the northeast and turned night into day. Suddenly the doctor caught sight of a thin column of dark smoke rising like a poplar tree against the horizon. The wind was dead, and the smoke hung still in the silent frozen void. There could be but one cause for this—a camp fire. Probably some Indian hunters were encamped there. Dr. Davis shook off his lethargy and drove back the creeping drowsiness with a mighty effort, and shaking up Asmus, who was gradually succumbing to the cold and the strain, he pointed it out to him. Where that smoke was, help was. Years on the plains, summer and winter, had given the doctor a keen and correct judgment of distance.

"Bring help, and bring it quickly," were his instructions to Asmus, as he sent him off to the camp. Even at the eleventh hour the doctor would not desert the horses. Foolhardy it may have been, but splendid humanity it certainly was. Even as he told his guide to hurry Davis feared that he might never give another order, but the thought was only momentary, and, waving his hand to the guide, who shuffled out over the snow, he commenced a dogtrot up and down by the bank of the lake, beating himself to keep warm. Through the long, weary, frozen night, he ran and jumped and sang, always keeping an eye on the poor horses, who grew weaker and weaker. As the ice froze in on them they became quiet. The doctor fed them with pain-killer, a store of which he found in the sleigh, and he mixed up oatmeal into a paste and forced it down their throats, thus keeping the fast-receding life in them. He maintained this treatment throughout the night, but, in spite of all his efforts towards morning one of the poor brutes died, and the doctor again risked a fall into the water to unhook the traces so that the dead animal would not pull its companion under when it sank.

Six and a half hours after his departure Asmus arrived with a band of seventeen Indians, and found the doctor almost cashed in. He was unable to move, but he was still alive and able to grasp the hand of the faithful German who had not spared himself in his valiant effort to bring succor. The Indians soon had the remaining horse out of the hole in the ice. They spread around the country, and, with that unerring instinct with which they are possessed, located enough brushwood to build two roaring fires, between which they placed, or rather, propped, the horse, for it could hardly stand. More oatmeal, warmed, and painkiller was administered, and as the cold grey dawn lit up the sky in the far northeast the poor animal at last showed signs of recovery.

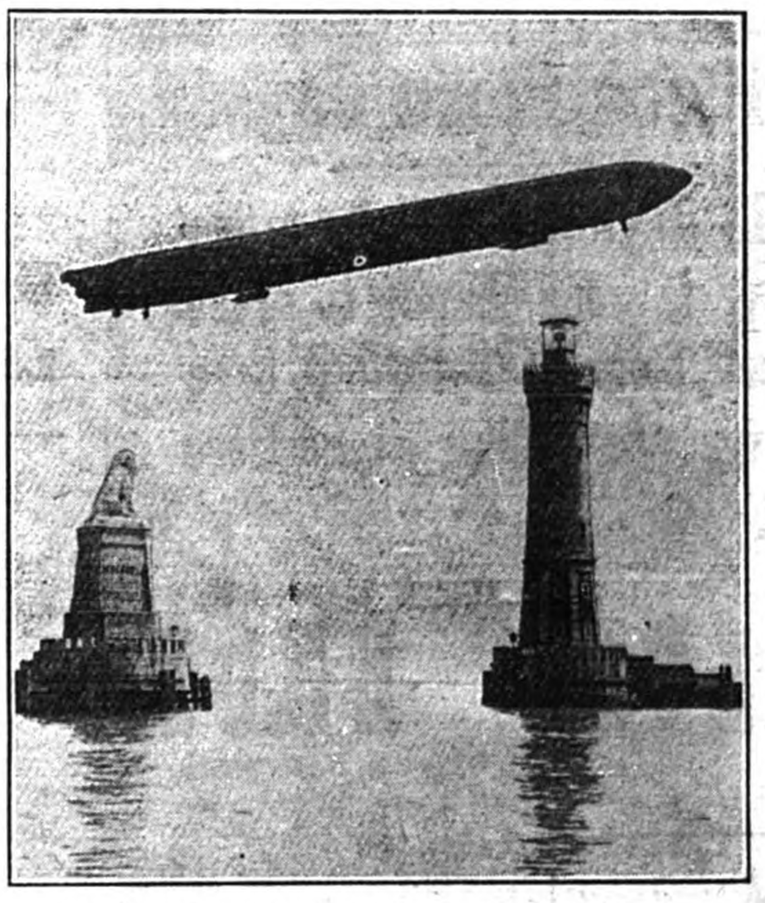
Dr. Davis lay still and helpless, gritting his teeth as the warmth sent his blood leaping through his veins with a vigor that caused an untold agony, which, however, gradually passed away. He was taken to the Indian camp, where he lay for three days with his feet frozen and a heavy chill upon his lungs.

It was plain to the Indians that he would require better attention than they could give him. The ways of the red men are different from the ways of their white brothers, and, whatever may have been their methods among themselves, they did not seem to prove efficacious with the doctor; so they decided to take him to Cumberland House. They fully realized that speed was important, and so, converting an open sleigh into a temporary carryall, upon which the stricken man was securely strapped, they started off with a team of dogs to cover the thirteen miles which lay between them and the Hudson Bay post.

With whip and voice the Indians urged on the dogs, who, responding cheerfully, shot over the hardening snow, while the Indians glided alongside with equal speed, the travelling made easy for them on their snowshoes. Time and again the sleigh was overturned in deep drifts and the unfortunate doctor jerked through the snow with the carry-all on top of him. Quickly it would be righted and off again, only to be overturned farther on. Dr. Davis was tied down on his back, but he had faith in the Indians and knew that they would get him to his destination, and with this knowledge he was willing to put up with the difficulties until he reached his goal.

Wounded, sick, and almost dying, he was handed over at last to the care of the staff at Cumberland House. He made good his word and he visited his patients. Weak, ill and crippled as he was, he doctored them and brought them the latest news from the busy parts of the country. Best of all, however, he conveyed them himself.

As the days wore on blood-poisoning set in, and it was brought forcibly home to him that he would have to have better medical attention than he could give himself. So back again he went to Le Pas. This time he was escorted and dog-sleighed all the way, and rough but kindly hands tended him on the journey back to the town from which he had started. In Le Pas he met R. P. Roblin, premier of Manitoba. Premier Roblin gave him a berth in his own private car and brought him to Winnipeg on February 18th. Here he went to the Saint Boniface Hospital, where the gentle sisters helped to bring him back to some semblance of his former self. His left foot is mutilated, but he is perfectly happy. He is back at the edge now, where appearances don't count and where a missing toe is a mere detail.



A NEW RECRUIT FOR GERMANY'S AIR NAVY.

The picture shows the latest Zeppelin airship flying over Lindau Harbor, on Lake Constance. Germany has now twenty-five dirigibles in commission. Their powerful engines propelling them at a rate of fifty miles an hour, while scattered over the country are twenty-seven aerial harbors to which the aircraft can run for shelter if caught in a gale. Germany is now constructing a concealed airship shed in Heligoland. This novel house is to be placed in a deep hollow, and can be raised or lowered at will.

Carpet Wisdom.

"In the spring the housewife's fancy
Lightly (!) turns to thoughts of—carpets!"

Quite right, too, for the amount of dust and dirt which even well-swept carpets will retain is marvellous. As a matter of health alone, they must come up for beating and cleaning. Dust is but dried mud, and what it might contain is best not thought about. This article is to help those who have not a vacuum cleaner, and have to seek the privacy, or publicity, of the back premises for carpet-beating.

The first necessity is a flat cane beater. Never use a stick. The second, a stiff birch-broom. Flat beating on grass is best. Beat the carpet on the under side first, then pull it away and brush the dirt from the grass or you will re-collect some of it.

Now reverse the carpet and sweep it well, following the "grain," and in pile carpets the way of the pile. Brush from the middle outwards toward each side, and bring the brush off the carpet with an upward swirl.

Do a foot at a time like this, going round and round until finished. Now, taking hold of the broom-handle rather low, walk backwards, and brush vigorously from left to right. The different angle of attack moves a lot of dust, and you've a stronger purchase on the broom. Turn the carpet over again, sweep the under side, and again beat. Reverse, brush, and beat the upper side. Do this systematically, so that the whole surface receives attention. Brush once more, and then test for dust. A little may rise, for hand-beating never quite removes it all.

Now temporarily relay the carpet so that all spots and marks may be removed. Go carefully over the whole carpet with a hot iron and brown paper. This will remove grease spots, visible and invisible. If any remain not absorbed by the brown paper, spread on them a paste of fullers' earth and water, leaving it there until dry, and then brushing off. The marks will soon disapear.

Any other spots, of unknown origin, can be successively rubbed with petrol, turps, methylated spirits, or soap and water.

There should now not be a spot on the carpet, and all that remains is to clean it and freshen the colors. For that make a mixture of half a pint of oxgall in half a gallon of hot water, and brush this into the carpet with a soft brush. Wash the lather off with cotton cloths wrung out in ammonia and water—tablespoonful to a gallon—renewing as it gets dirty.

Here you could stop if you like, but a final rub over with a flannel cloth dipped in soapsuds and turps will make perfection perfect. The carpet will be as new. Dry very thoroughly out of doors. A worn spot can be doctored by carefully dolly-dyeing it to the ground color of the carpet.

Asparagus Salad.—Arrange the canned asparagus tips on lettuce leaves or cress and serve with French dressing with two tablespoons of tomato catsup.

Popovers.—One cup flour, one teaspoon salt, one cup milk, one egg. Mix the salt with the flour, add half the milk slowly, and when a smooth paste is formed, add the remainder and the egg beaten thoroughly. Beat well before filling pans. Cook in hot, greased gem pans, or earthen cups, in a quick oven half an hour, or until the puffs are brown and well popped over.

Steamed Rice.—Half cup rice, one cup of boiling water, saltspoon salt. Pick over and wash the rice in three or four waters. Put it with the boiling water and salt into the top of a double boiler. Steam for twenty minutes or until tender. Serve with milk or as a pudding with boiled custard or with poached eggs.

Salmon Croquettes.—Take equal quantities of cold or hot boiled rice and canned salmon, add a little melted butter and salt and pepper to taste. Mold into small sausage-shaped forms and roll them first in finely powdered crackers, then into beaten egg yolk and again in cracker crumbs. Fry in hot fat like doughnuts. A palatable, nutritious food, easily prepared, and as the egg prevents the entrance of much fat they are readily digestible. This dish can also be baked as a scallop.

Oatmeal Mush with Baked Apples—One-half cup coarse oatmeal, one-half teaspoon salt, two cups boiling water. Pick over the oatmeal, put it with the salt and boiling water into the upper boiler. Place upper boiler on the stove and boil rapidly ten minutes. Stir occasionally with a fork, then place it over boiling water and cook from forty minutes to one hour. Serve with baked or steamed apples. Excellent for constipation. Fine hominy and granulated wheat are cooked in the same way, but require only three times as much water as meal. Whole or cracked wheat requires five times as much water as meal, and should cook four or five hours.

Scotch Broth.—Half cup pearl barley, 2 pounds of neck of mutton, 2 quarts of cold wtaer, one-half cup each of carrot, turnip, onion and celery, two tablespoons of butter or drippings, one tablespoon flour, two teaspoons salt, one saltspoon white pepper, one tablespoon chopped parsley. Pick over and soak the barley over night or several hours in cold water. Wipe the meat with a clean wet cloth. Remove the fat and skin. Scrape the meat from the bones and cut it into half-inch dice. Put the bones on to boil in 1 pint of cold water and the meat in 3 pints of cold water. Let the latter boil quickly and then add the barley. Cut the vegetables into quarter-inch dice, fry them five minutes in one tablespoon of butter and add them to the meat. Simmer three or four hours or until the meat and barley are tender. Strain the water in which the bones have simmered. Cook one tablespoon of butter in a sauce pan with one tablespoon of flour. When smooth, add the strained water gradually and stir into the broth. Add the salt, pepper and parsley. Simmer ten minutes and serve without straining. Strained for an invalid, it forms a nourishing and delicate meal.

Hints for the Home.

Stamps which have become stuck together may be separated by passing a hot iron across their faces.

After wringing clothes get a piece of old blanket and mangle it two or three times. This will dry the rollers and save them.

If fine linen is stained with tea, even after a long time, the stains can be removed by applying glycerine. A little of the best glycerine should be rubbed on the stained parts before washing.

Cabbage is made more nutritious and digestible if boiled in two waters. It contains a certain oil, which is apt to have a bad effect on people with weak digestion. Boiling in two successive waters corrects this.

An iron soon becomes cold when placed on a cold ironstand. To prevent this place an ordinary brick in the oven some hours before ironing. Use this hot brick as an ironstand, and the iron will keep hot a much longer time.

Before applying a new coating of paint to the wall of a room it is advisable thoroughly to clean the old surface. Do this by dissolving 1 ounce of soda in a pint of warm water and use while warm with a piece of flannel. Finally wash over with clean, hot water.

When boiling new milk, to prevent a skin from forming on the top as it cools, add two tablespoonfuls of cold milk to every pint when at boiling point, and stir for a minute. The so called skin will then be re-absorbed, and the milk will not be so impoverished.

When washing new curtains you will generally find that they are full of lime. A great deal of trouble may be saved by soaking the curtains over night in water in which a little salt has been dissolved. The salt draws out the lime, and makes the curtains quite easy to wash without too much rubbing and soap.

Strangely enough it is rarely deemed necessary to clean a broom. Yet all household brooms and brushes need to be cleaned as much as anything else, and if occasionally washed they will last far longer. About once a week prepare a good lather of soap and hot water, and into this dip the broom or brush up and down. Shake till nearly dry, and hang up with the bristles downwards.

STUDENTS PLACED IN CELLS.

Are Under Martial Law at Examination Times.

Students actually are worked to death in Wuchang, China, where every third year the queerest college examination in the world is held. From 12,000 to 15,000 students are locked in cells for three days while they struggle for a degree. So great is the strain that frequently several of the students die before the end of the 72-hour bout, and several times hopeful candidates have been crushed to death at the gate when trying to get in. Every row of cells has two servants who cook and attend to the wants of the candidates. Martial law prevails during the examination, in which about only one per cent. of those who take it are successful. An army of 30,000 tradesmen, doctors, cooks, tailors and printers gather in the university town when the big examination is pulled off. A salute of guns is fired in honor of the lucky Chinese who skin through.

MR. BARCLAY'S DISMISSAL

I.

The dreary monotony of outbuildings and timber stacks which comprised the gigantic cabinet-making business of Samuel Lester was to the casual eye prosaic in the extreme. Those who knew the history of the firm, however, could perceive in it a certain aspect of romance. For the foundation of the concern had, a generation ago, been laid upon a modest handbarrow, loaded with decrepit furniture, and propelled by one Samuel Lester, lately deceased.

Now, according to demand, there emerged from that prosaic interior anything from a cheap coal-scuttle to a Sheraton suite for Park Lane. And old Joe Barclay, who had worked at the bench with his late master, endeavored to preserve the dignity that became the general manager of one of the biggest businesses of its particular kind in the world.

Lately, however, Mr. Barclay had been given to the frequent repetition of a certain phrase. "Times have changed," he said to everybody. "Times have changed! Now the young governor's got the reins, they're beginning to hustle. This Yankee vamoosing ain't in my line. It ain't British. Something'll happen shortly!"

The latter phrase presented Mr. Barclay in the guise of a prophet—and as matters proved, a painfully accurate one.

In spite of its phenomenal success the firm of Samuel Lester had been conducted on the British basis of slow and sure. Grey heads were treated with a certain amount of respect, and the business went on prospering, and the employees, for the most part, went on being happy. This continued while Samuel Lester's son and heir, Gerald, was passing an enterprising adolescence in the States, studying the methods of American cabinet-makers, and imbibing the ruthless principles of Yankee hustle.

But when he returned primed with an ambition to triplicate his father's million, "times changed"—as Mr. Barclay said.

Noting with pride and satisfaction the zeal and business instincts of his son, the patriarch Samuel retired to the quiet of a rural mansion; which, after forty years of toil, proved such a shock to his system that he very soon retired altogether from the boredom of doing nothing.

Toil—hard toil—had been his earliest inheritance. Though he did not know it, work was as essential to his welfare as oil to an engine. Like many another, the extent of his bank balance induced old Mr. Lester to forsake the life-long lubricant and, in consequence, he grew rusty, and pined away.

"I thought as much," he said. "Old Sam couldn't stand doing nothing no more than I could. You don't catch me retiring yet!"

But Gerald Lester, having acquired the name of "The Knife," had other views.

He called Joe Barclay in one day, and, in his brusque way, came straight to the point.

"Mr. Barclay," he said, "we are thinking of getting another manager."

The remark caught the old man below the belt, as it were, and deprived him of speech for some moments.

"You are an old and much-esteemed servant," Lester continued quickly. "With my father you practically built up the business. We could never over-estimate the value you have been. But times have changed"—those words seemed to haunt poor Joe Barclay. "If our success is to continue we must adapt our methods to modern standards——"

"But I like my work. I have no desire to retire. You have given me no inkling——" Mr. Barclay's words came in staccato gasps.

The young governor got up and placed his hand upon the old man's shoulder.

"You've worked long enough, old friend," he said. "It's time you rested upon your oars. You shall have a pension of £400 a year."

To the sensitive heart of Mr. Barclay it amounted to a curt dismissal. He saw in a requested resignation the gentlemanly equivalent to "the sack." He pictured himself failing under the shock of retirement. He remembered Samuel Lester's untimely demise—and there was a mixture of fear and indignation in his manner when he said:

"Thank you, Mr. Lester. I understand that you think me no longer fitted for my post——" Here his formality of speech failed him. "I ain't going to stop if I ain't wanted. You can keep your four 'undred. I have saved enough, thank heaven, to keep me and my daughter going. I don't want your charity. I'll go at once!"

There was a look of pain on the young governor's face. He hastened after the retreating manager.

"Mr. Barclay!" he called. "I think you misunderstand. Mr. Barclay—— Oh, hang!"

The old man had gathered up all his dignity and walked out of the firm—whose growth he had watched from the embryonic barrow.

II.

It was not the intention of Gerald Lester to be hard. His heart was really a very soft one. But one of the most rigid commercial axioms he had learned in the States was that "firm's interests" must never be subordinated to "personal considerations." Yet the going of Joe Barclay worried him a good deal. He felt something of a sneak.

"I wish the old chap hadn't taken it like that," he murmured constantly. "It makes you feel so horribly inhuman and ungrateful."

On the following Monday morning his appetite for business was on a par with his appetite for breakfast. He pushed away a plate of toast, and sorted through his morning post.

He chose one letter to read first. It looked relievingly private. He went a few shades paler as he perused it:

"Mr. Gerald Lester.

"Sir," it ran,—"I write you, not because I find any pleasure in so doing, but because I consider it a duty I owe to your unfortunate employees to acquaint you with a few of your shortcomings.

"Having been to America and imbibed most of the commercial dishonesties and inhumanities of that benighted country, you have considered it your duty to dismiss the oldest and hitherto most-esteemed servant of your firm.

"How such an action reflects upon your personal character I will leave discreetly unsaid; but I should like to say that in championing such hateful principles and methods you reveal yourself commercially as a cad.

"I do not wish to be insulting. I desire only to place on record the sincere convictions of

"Helen M. Barclay."

Gerald Lester put down the letter, and, in an attempt to smile and whistle at the same time, grimaced horribly.

He might have been furious. But he wasn't. His sense of humor preserved him.

"Gad! What a stinger!" he murmured. "What a house-flannel!"

He read the letter again.

"All her own," he cogitated. "Old Joe couldn't have written it to save his life. By Jove! She hits out!" He was conscious of a great desire to see the spirited young perpetrator of the fiery missive.

It is strangely true of human nature—more especially the male variety—that, whilst a verbal insult will provoke immediate resentment, a written one will often occasion amusement and disdain. The wording of the note appealed to Gerald Laster. It was something out of the ordianry.

He rang for pens and paper, and there and then proceeded to compose a reply. He wrote three and tore them up. He wrote a fourth; and felt more or less satisfied.

It ran:

"Dear Miss Barclay,—I am in receipt of your letter, and thank you for casting my horoscope. If your reading be correct my constellation is certainly not a lucky one.

"I am unhappy about the attitude your father has adopted towards my suggestion—which was not altogether unreasonable. Could you possibly come up and see me Then, perhaps, we could talk things round to a somewhat satisfactory conclusion.

"I regret that you should have come to such an unfortunate decision regarding my personal character. I promise that our interview, if you grant it, shall be confined entirely to business matters.—I remain, Yours faithfully,

"Gerald Lester."

Having written the letter, Lester felt decidedly better. A weight seemed to have been lifted from his conscience. It had been an uphill job telling old Barclay the truth. His daughter was a bit of a termagant. But he could probably manage her better.

"It's an imbecile thing to argue with a woman," he reflected; "but this girl has brains, and probably a semblance of logic. Perhaps she'll see the light."

He had decided that she was quite a terrible young person, of a type he had never met, and could only dimly imagine. It would require a considerable amount of bravery to face her.

In consequence, Gerald Lester sniffed the spirit of adventure when a visitor was announced the following afternoon. Her identity was revealed through the medium of a somewhat severe-looking visiting-card. Just the kind of a card the person he had imagined would present, if she had the good manners to present any at all.

"Show the lady up," he said, lighting a cigarette and assuming an air of tremendous composure, which he did not feel.

Lester was preoccupied with a business letter when the visitor entered. She advanced and took up her stand with no little defiance. Presently "the governor" looked up at "the terrible person"—straight into a pair of tender eyes as blue as sapphires. They held him spellbound; but he was aware of long golden curls clustering over a beautiful face that was growing suddenly rosy. Lester dropped his cigarette and staggered up like a man in a dream.

"Lena!" he murmured.

"You!" she said.

Then it was the same Lena Barclay whose bewitching face had haunted him ever since he left Paris. The little girl friend of his chum's sister, who, when he grew too tender, told him that a flapper could never do anything more serious than flap.

"Perhaps we shall meet again when I have finished 'finishing,'" she had said—and there had been a sweet insinuation in the words.

And now.

"You wish to see me in regard to your letter?" he said, remembering that the interview was "entirely business."

She nodded.

"Did you know who I was?" he asked, forgetting himself.

"Never dreamt," she said.

"Would you have written that letter had you known?"

"Certainly," she repeated, challengingly. "I am disappointed in you, Mr. Lester, more disappointed than I can say."

"Lena," he said, "you were always a sensible girl. Let's talk business for half an hour. I will explain fully."

He did so. She listened in silence.

"But it was unkind," she said, when he had finished.

"Not so unkind as your letter," he retorted. "But, look here, if the old chap has taken it so much to heart, we'll have him back. Then when he wishes he can retire on his own. We must have a new man in to bring things quite up to date, but the nominal post of manager shall be your father's till he cares to resign it."

She rose and held out her hand.

"Thanks, Mr. Lester," she said. "I must apologize for my letter. Perhaps it was a trifle hasty."

Lester took her hand and held it.

"Lena," he said.

"You forget that this interview was to be pure business," she interrupted, attempting to release herself.

He tightened his grasp.

"I know," he said. "But you will permit me one question?"

She looked into his face, and her eyes were alive with little twinkles.

"Just one," she said.

He came a little closer.

"Have you finished 'finishing'?" he murmured.

For a moment she paused. Then she whispered "Yes." And he drew her into his arms.—London Answers.

"The Last Supper" in Tattoo.

One of the most remarkable examples of tattooing of religious subjects is that provided by the case of an engineer storekeeper on one of the White Star liners. He has, perhaps, the most wonderful tattooed body in the world. From his neck to his waistline he is covered with pictures and inscriptions. Displayed on his body is a wonderful piece of the tatoo artist's work. It is nothing less than a faithful reproduction of Leonarda da Vinci's picture "The Last Supper."

Don't let us old fellows go discouraging one another.—Dr. Johnson.

TIBETAN PEASANTS IN GROTESQUE DANCE.

"I saw one day," writes Mr. Hugh Fisher, "a rather elaborate dance by Tibetan peasants on an open space of grass, an old traditional performance called the 'Amban dance,' which is supposed to represent the homage of a group of villages to the 'Amban,' an emissary of the Chinese Government (the figure with a peacock feather in his hat), and which included a number of grotesque mythological creatures such as a peacock, a turtle, and two fearsome looking dragons. The dance was executed with great gusto, and an obvious sense of humor, which more than compensates in the Thibetan for a reputed carelessness in the matter of personal ablutions. . . . The turtle in the foreground is devoured by the two scarlet-jawed dragons, the child-performer slipping out of the bamboo framework for the latter to be gobbled up."—London Illustrated News.

RICHER THAN THEIR KAISER.

Emperor William Only Has $35,000,000 and $5,500,000 Yearly.

Emperor William is not by any means the richest man in the German empire. Here as well as in other countries the personal wealth of his Majesty has been more or less a matter of mystery, with a noticeable inclination on the part of his friends to exaggerate the true figures of his fortune and the number of his castles.

It is true, on the other hand, that the Kaiser possesses the largest income of any man or woman in Germany, but there are three persons in Prussia alone who have greater wealth than their sovereign. One is Frau Bertha Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, heiress of the Krupp millions, and the others are Prince Henckel von Donnersmarck and Prince Christian Kraft zu Hohenlohe-Oehringen.

According to the latest expert figures concerning the wealth of the Emperor his income is $5,500,000 a year. His private fortune is estimated conservatively at $35,000,000. The principal possession of the Kaiser consists of 144,840 acres of forest land which yields an annual income of $425,000, and 94,812 acres of agricultural lands that bring a yearly net profit of $450,000.

Very often one reads in the newspapers that the Emperor of Germany owns 53 castles and 83 princely estates.

As a matter of fact the Kaiser owns three castles in Berlin, 13 in Potsdam and vicinity, and some 40 castles or castle-like estates throughout the empire. The civil list of William II. is exactly $4,429,824. That is what the state pays him for being on the job.

HORDE OF HEDGEHOGS.

Both They and Rats Seem to Flourish in Wet Years.

Among the curiosities of natural history that last year produced in England is to be noted the extraordinary multiplication of the hedgehog. On some of the heavy lands of the Midlands they have been found hibernating in such numbers as no native has imagined possible.

This is the more curious as other mammals, especially rabbits, are singularly scarce. The rabbits were drowned in hundreds. Their bodies were seen floating down the brooks, and a certain number of leverets were also killed by the wet. What should make these rather obscure animals flourish is mysterious; but both they and the rat seem to multiply in wet years.

In the places where these hedgehogs are so numerous there is a great dearth of partridges, and the two facts are by some connected. It is not unlikely that the number of these animals has forced them into a rather less vegetarian diet than is usual, and some nests were rifled. But it is only when the numbers are excessive that any English animal is out of place in the economy of the country. There is room even for the wild cat, which has recently been rediscovered in the north, where it was held to be extinct.

Selected Recipes.

Banana Salad.—Arrange nests of lettuce leaves on salad dishes. Slice a banana and lay in each nest. Cover with a mayonnaise dressing.

Baked Apple Sauce.—Fill a deep pudding dish with apples, quartered, pared and cored. For 1 quart of apples allow one-half cup of sugar and one-half cup of water. Bake, closely covered, in a very moderate oven several hours or until dark red.

Baked Bean Soup.—Take cold baked beans, add twice the quantity of cold water, let simmer until soft. When nearly done, add one-half as much tomato. Rub through a colander. Add water until the right consistency, season to taste with salt, pepper and mustard. Heat again and serve with toasted crackers or croutons.

Baked Veal in Crumbs.—Dip a fresh veal cutlet in beaten egg, then in fine cracker-crumbs, and lay it in a baking-pan. Cut thin slices of bacon or salt (pickled) pork, and lay them over the cutlet, so that it is fairly well covered. Bake in a hot oven for about half an hour. A thick slice of cutlet gives the most satisfactory results. Serve with mashed potatoes.

Croquettes of Beans.—Cook one-half cupful of white beans until well done. Mash them thoroughly, and add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Brown in a little butter one small onion very finely hashed, and one tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Add these to the beans with enough bread-crumbs to make a paste easily formed into small balls. Fry in deep fat.

Oyster Macaroni.—Boil macaroni in a cloth to keep it straight. Put a layer in a dish seasoned with butter, salt and pepper, and then a layer of oysters; alternate until the dish is full. Mix some grated bread with a beaten egg. Spread over the top and bake. This is a popular French dish. A pint of oysters and a pint of macaroni serves six people.

Baked Beef Roll.—Three pounds of raw beef (round), chopped fine; three cups of sweet milk, one egg, one cup of bread crumbs, one tablespoon of salt, one teaspoon of pepper, sage to taste. Mix all well with a tablespoon of melted butter. Mold into a loaf, put a little water and butter in the pan, baste occasionally and bake one and a quarter hours. Can be eaten hot or cold.

Roast Chicken.—Cleanse thoroughly, adding a little soda to the last water. Prepare a stuffing of breadcrumbs, a little chopped onion, butter, pepper and salt, or use thyme in place of onion. Roast an hour or more and baste two or three times; or inclose in a covered tin and bake till done. Stew the giblets and necks for the gravy.

Pink Delight.—Into the whites of two eggs, beaten stiff, beat two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and one cup of strawberry jam. Set on the ice until chilled. Serve in glasses. This is a simple dessert, but it delights the eye as well as the palate. You may use red raspberry jam, pineapples or orange marmalade in place of the strawberry with excellent results.

Upside-Down Pie—Peel and quarter six large apples, and cook them in a pudding-dish on top of the stove. Make a batter of one-quarter of a cupful of butter, three-quarters of a cupful of milk, one cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking-powder, one tablespoonful of sugar, and the yolks of two eggs. Save the whites for the frosting. Pour the batter over the apples, and bake; then turn the pie out on a plate, cover with frosting on the apple side, and brown in the oven. Serve with cream.

Jumbles—Use twelve tablespoonfuls of butter; three-quarters of a cupful of sugar; two cupfuls of flour; the yolks of three eggs beaten with one teaspoonful of water. Beat the butter to a cream, and then add the sugar and eggs. Sift in the flour, and add a few drops of almond extract. Roll the paste between the hands into little balls the size of a hickory-nut, and drop them on a buttered tin. Press on each a slice of citron or of candied orange-peel. Bake in a moderate oven ten or fifteen minutes.

Halibut Salad—As the basis for it, take from one-half pound to a pound and a half of halibut, depending upon the number of persons to be served. The dressing as given below will be sufficient for the larger quantity. Boil the amount of halibut desired, and when it is cool, flake it, and mix with it the juice of half a lemon, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and a pinch of cayenne pepper. Cover it and let it stand one hour. Make a dressing of one teaspoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of melted butter, a pinch of cayenne, the yolk of one egg, and one-third of a cupful of vinegar. Cook slowly until it thickens to the consistency of cream. Remove it from the fire and add one-third of a tablespoonful of gelatin dissolved in one and one-half tablespoonfuls of water. When it is cold add one-half cupful of cream, whipped, and fold in the fish. Put it into a mold, and chill. You can cut the molded dish into slices, and serve it with either mayonnaise or French dressing.

Useful Hints.

Never leave a mat that is frayed at the edges about the house. It is so easy to trip over the torn part.

Breadcrumbs added to scrambled eggs are a great economy. With this addition two eggs go as far as four without it.

If a calendar seems too pretty to destroy paste a piece of sandpaper over the calendar pad and use it as a match scratcher.

Finger nails that are manicured every week will retain their delicacy and lustre much longer than those that are neglected.

The time to eat a turkey (says an authority), given crisp, cold weather, is ten days or a fortnight from the date of killing.

If grease is spilled upon the kitchen stove throw a handful of salt upon it, and it will prevent any disagreeable odor from arising.

A little vinegar kept boiling on the stove while onions or cabbage are cooking will prevent the disagreeable odor going through the house.

Never wear one pair of shoes all the time unless obliged to do so. Two pairs of boots worn a day at a time alternately gives more service, and are much more healthy.

When making a ground rice pudding a great improvement to it is to add two teaspoonfuls of cornflour to the mixture. This makes it very creamy, and adds greatly to the flavor.

To remove scorch marks from linen take an onion, cut it in half, and rub the scorched places with it. Then wash in cold water, leave to soak for an hour or two, and the mark will disapear.

Before baking potatoes let them stand in hot water for fifteen minutes. They will require only half the time for baking, are more mealy and palatable.

It often happens that new kid gloves split the first time they are tried on. To prevent this place them between the folds of a damp towel for about an hour before they are to be worn. The damp will stretch the kid, so that the gloves give to the required shape without splitting.

When a chimney is on fire the first thing to do is to shut off the supply of air by closing all the windows and doors. A large supply of sulphur, or, failing that, common salt, should be placed on the fire, so as to produce a vapor, which will destroy the flames. A wet blanket or rug should be held over the fireplace opening so as to cut off the supply of air as completely as possible.

REVENGE ON HEIRS.

Will Hidden in Dry Volume Written by Testator.

A bizarre case which has its dramatic and amusing side is the topic of the moment in Paris, France. It has to do with the succession to an estate which has been in the possession of the natural heirs for ten years, but which was partly left to other parties. The feature which is curious and unusual is that the legal legatees were given an opportunity of knowing of the fortune left them while the donor was still alive, but through what they will now be inclined to think culpable neglect they let the chance go.

It seems that in 1902 there died a M. Lefevre de Revel, a retired State functionary, at the advanced age of 96 years. He had spent his leisure for years before his death in writing out in minute detail all the events of his life down to the most trivial.

M. Lefevre was very proud of his labors and considered that the records he accumulated had a great literary and statistical value. But gradually he began to suspect that his work was rather laughed at than read, and by adroit questioning he came to the conclusion that the recipients only turned a few pages perfunctorily and returned the precious book unread.

In his eleventh volume he prepared a subtle revenge. Counting on the fact that if any of the pages were read it was only those at the beginning, he inserted a copy of his will at page 540, in which he left his estate to be divided among those to whom the book was ordinarily sent.

When M. Lefevre died in 1902 there was a search for his will, but no such document could be found and the natural heirs took possession. Ten years afterward some one idly browsing in volume XI. came across the unsuspected will. The present case is being brought by the friends mentioned in the will who were left out in the original division of the property, which amounts to $80,000.

Elihu Root was cross-examining a young woman in court one day. "How old are you?" he asked. The young woman hesitated. "Don't hesitate," said Mr. Root. "The longer you hesitate the older you are."

BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY;

OR, THE END OF AMBITION, HOPE AND YEARS.

James Van Driscoll believed fully that the sins and taints of parents were transmitted to the children of their race for generations. If he married Gertrude, and God gave them children, and they should go wrong, like all his ancestors had done, he would live to see her broken-hearted, and hear her cry out in agony night and day:

"Ah, Heaven! why did you marry me, knowing this? You might have foreseen it. My marriage with you has cursed my life, broken my heart, and dragged an unsullied name into the mire of dishonor."

He shuddered at the thought. No, no; it could not be; he must break off his marriage with Gertrude, whom he loved better than his life.

And at last, but by no means least, he must return the vast fortune of the Van Driscolls; for now that he knew he was not their grandson, it was not right to keep it. They had requested him to give all that he could spare to the Methodist church when he was done with it. How strange that he was parted so wide now from the Methodist faith; for he had been baptized a Catholic by the mother who bore him.

As the latter thought drifted across his troubled mind, another thought came to him like an inspiration. That would be the very means to use to bring about a rupture between Gertrude and himself. He realized that, dearly as she loved him, she would give him up rather than wed one of different faith.

He knew what would happen then. Ah, Heaven help him! he knew full well. As soon as the mails could return it, he would receive back his betrothal-ring from Gertrude, and she would write him that in that case all was over between them for evermore. She would not question his right to follow any faith that he truly believed in, but would add that she deemed it wisest and best to go separate ways, and that from that time on they would be as widely parted as though one of them lay in the grave.

Yes, that was the only good reason he could offer to Gertrude for breaking off their betrothal, and in this way she would be made to break it off, not he.

The words looked so hard and unnatural upon paper after he had written them that he determined he would see Gertrude and tell her himself.

Suiting the action to the thought, he went to the Hamilton mansion that evening. Dick just opened the door as he stretched forth his hand to touch the bell.

"Why, is it you, Van, my boy?" cried Gertrude's brother. "Walk right in, and ring for some one to tell my sister you are here. She is not expecting you, but she will be heartily glad you are here, of course. You will pardon me for not going back with you, but the fact is, I have an important engagement for this evening, and am almost late now."

CHAPTER XVII.

Thus it happened that Van Driscoll entered the dimly lighted drawing-room unannounced.

"I will rest a moment to gain my composure and nerve myself for the coming ordeal before I ring for a servant to let her know I am here," he said to himself.

At that moment the sound of voices in an adjoining room fell upon his ear, and he heard his own name mentioned by a deep voice, which he recognized as Stuart Aldrich's, a young man who lived across the street. He was talking with Gertrude. It never occurred to James Van Driscoll to do such a despicable thing as to listen; but the words that he heard held him spell-bound—fairly incapable of action.

"Listen, Gertrude," young Aldrich was saying. "By the great love I bear you, you owe it to me to listen, even though you are soon to marry Van Driscoll."

"The old love between us is past," answered Gertrude. "Why drag forth the memory of it, now that it is too late?"

"I must know the truth, why you turned so suddenly against me and would not see me, even returning my letter unopened, avoiding me on every occasion, and giving me no opportunity to speak to you!" he cried, hoarsely.

"Do you mean to say you did not understand why I broke off with you?" exclaimed Gertrude, in amazement.

"I tell you solemnly, truthfully, that I have not the faintest idea," he returned; adding: "It would lift a great load from my heart to know. It was not like you to turn against one without just cause; surely it was not, Gertrude."

"I sent you a note by my friend, Pauline Oakes, and the language of it was plain enough," Gertrude answered.

"Sent me a note by Miss Oakes?" exclaimed Aldrich, in a tone of great surprise. "This is news to me, Gertrude. I have never received such a note, I assure you. What were the contents of it?"

"Did not receive it?" echoed Gertrude. "Do you mean to tell me that my friend Pauline failed to deliver the note I intrusted to her for you? Surely you can not mean it!"

"I repeat that Miss Oakes never delivered a note or letter to me from you," he answered, gravely.

"Then—then we have both been terribly duped," cried Gertrude, in a sobbing voice. "I—I will tell you all now; it would not benefit me to keep anything back."

After a moment's pause, she began:

"It came about in this way. One morning Pauline ran in to pay me an early call. You know we were such warm friends we came and went to each other's homes when we liked. In the course of the conversation Pauline mentioned having met, at a matinee the day before, a young girl who was stopping at your house, and who was a great friend of your mother's.

"I confess I was considerably jealous of that girl, because your mother was always hinting to you that she would be delighted to have her for a daughter-in-law, so you often laughingly told me; and, to make the matter the more annoying to me, I heard on all sides how much in love she was with you.

"She told Pauline while at the matinee that your mother intended to make you take her driving the following afternoon at two o'clock despite the fact that there was some one in the neighborhood whom you were said to fancy.

"'You are not wise to permit him to do it, Gertrude,' cried Pauline, with a toss of her head. 'If he were my lover, he should not go driving with that bewitching little coquette, who openly boasts that it is her delight to take a lover from his sweetheart. You could stop it, Gertrude,' she declared. 'Simply write him if he takes her out driving this afternoon you will break with him forever. Take my word for it, he will not go driving with her; and, oh, how chagrined she will be!'

"'I will do it,' I cried, excitedly; 'but,' I added, hesitating, in the next breath, 'it is so late now, suppose he should not receive it in time? I do not believe there is another mail delivery between now and two o'clock.'

"'I will take it to him myself,' answered Pauline. 'I can certainly do that much for a friend. I know him and the whole family so very well that it will be an easy matter for me to accomplish.'

"I—I wrote you the letter, Stuart, saying in it, 'If you took your mother's visitor out driving at two o'clock that afternoon all would be over between you and me forever.' I—I watched, in a fever of excitement, until it was near the propitious hour, and—and—then I took up my station behind the lace draperies of the drawing-room window, which commanded a view of the residence across the way.

"I saw your team drive up. Your door swung open. Accompanied by my rival, you ran lightly down the steps. I saw you hand her in carefully, take the ribbons from the coachman, and—and the next moment you were bowling rapidly down the boulevard with your companion.

"Hush! listen. Do not interrupe me, for I have more to say. At that very moment Mr. Van Driscoll, who had just proposed marriage to me, stood here awaiting my answer.

"My pride was hurt by your action; my heart was wounded. In a moment of pique I turned from the window and held out my hand to Mr. Van Driscoll. 'I—I accept your offer,' I said, proudly; and I was startled at the sound of my voice, it sounded so cold and so harsh. 'I—I will marry you, Mr. Van Driscoll.'"

A groan broke from Stuart Aldrich's lips.

"Oh, Gertrude," he cried, "now that you know the truth, that I never received your note—that your friend was false to her trust—will you let this marriage with a man, to whom you only betrothed yourself through pique, go on? Think before it is too late; do not wreck both of our lives! I love you. You loved me once. Ah, Gertrude! do not turn from me like that and wave me back from you. You love me still!"

Van Driscoll could hear no more; it seemed to him that his cup of misery was filled to overflowing.

Gertrude, whom he loved with all the strength of his nature, did not care for him—had only consented to marry him in a moment of pique. Ah, this was the cruelest blow of all!

He never afterward quite remembered how he made his way out of the house and back to his own home.

The next day a relapse followed, and another fortnight passed ere James Van Driscoll was able to sit up and write the letter to Gertrude which would be the means of giving her back the freedom which she must so long for now.

It was not a long letter that he wrote, and one could see by the way the lines wavered that the hand that held the pen was not steady. In it he simply told Gertrude that he had experienced a change of faith—he had turned from one faith to another and he left it with her, whether, knowing it, she would still marry him or part from him forever, because of it. His life, his future, he left in her hands.

He did not receive an answer from Gertrude all the next day, but in the evening her father came.

"My daughter has placed your letter in my hands," he said, "and I am come to persuade you not to do this rash thing, which will part you from Gertrude forever. Why, Van Driscoll," he added, earnestly, "you must be mad to contemplate such a thing."

He thought him still more mad when he learned of his intention to resign the office of district attorney, give his vast fortune to the Methodist church, in accordance to the oft-hinted wish of the gentleman whose name he bore, and go out into the world a poor man.

"I have a fairly good knowledge of law," he said, in answer to Mr. Hamilton's expostulation. "I am not afraid but that I shall get along. I shall be poor, but I shall be honest."

No wonder old Mr. Hamilton waxed angry as he listened. A very heated discussion ensued between them.

"I voice my daughter's sentiments by saying, if you persist in following out the plan you have laid out for yourself, your marriage with Gertrude shall never take place."

"Nothing can change my decision," said Van Driscoll, firmly.

SEED REJECTED.

Eighty Per Cent. of Red Clover Thrown Back on Farmers.

Fully 80 per cent. of the red clover seed offered to local seed merchants this winter has been unfit to use. Where one sample is accepted eight are rejected. The amount on the hands of farmers is heavy, and a good deal of it is useless. Few farmers will plant what they have; it would be folly. While the seed was discolored by the damp weather last fall, it has not been rejected for this, but because it is filled with foreign matter, with weed seeds of all descriptions and sizes.

One local buyer has about one hundred samples of bad seeds that propagate along with grass seeds in the average Ontario field. He know the situation a good deal better than most interested parties, and he states that this is due to poor farming through carelessness or lack of skill. Farmers in many cases do not even know that their offerings are poor when they bring them to the wholesale men. They are often hurt when it is rejected, and it is only when they witness the results of sifting and cleaning that they recognize that it is not worth buying.

The producer should know this while it is yet unthrashed or uncut; not after he has gone to a lot of expense. Government regulation just here has been strongly urged. As an immediate remedy, an inspector could be appointed to visit fields and determine what ones are fit for thrashing and what not. As a permanent remedy, the farmer and the farmer's son could be educated. A merchant remarked the other day that the farmer's son has been trained for the city, not for the farm, in the rural school, and emphasized the value of what is now being done to introduce scientific farming into the curriculum of the country school.

There is no market for poor seeds; there is a strong market for good seeds. A heavy trade is now passing in most varieties, as Provincial retail merchants are preparing for spring needs. But practically all the red clover, as well as much other seed, has been imported from England and the United States. The Ontario farmer would have this market instead of the outsider if his product was up to the mark.—Globe.

Concrete is the best building material

ABROAD statement—Yet literally true. The aim of man from the beginning has been to make his building materials as nearly like natural stone as possible. The great labor required to quarry stone led him to seek various manufactured substitutes. The only reason he ever used wood was that it was easiest to get and most convenient to use.

Wood is no longer easy to get. Like most building material, its cost is increasing at an alarming rate.

The cost of concrete is decreasing. So, from the standpoint of either service or economy, Concrete is the best building material.

Canada's farmers are using more concrete, in proportion to their number, than the farmers of any other country. Why?

Because they are being supplied with a cement of the highest possible quality, which insures the success of their concrete work.

The secret of concrete's popularity in Canada lies in the fact that while we have been advertising the use of concrete, we have also been producing, by scientific methods, a cement so uniformly high in quality that the concrete made with it gives the complete satisfaction our advertisements promised.

Concrete would not have been in such universal use today, had an inferior grade of cement been supplied. Insist upon getting Canada Cement. It is your best assurance of thoroughly satisfactory results from your concrete work. There is a Canada Cement dealer in your neighborhood.

Without this label it is not "Canada" Cement.

Write for our Free 160-page book "What The Farmer Can Do With Concrete"—No farmer can afford to be without a copy.

—To:—

There are many evidences to show that the present effort of the Liberal Opposition to force the Government to she country over the naval question was premeditated. Signs of careful preparation for an election campaign, such as the establishment of a press bureau on an exceptionally large scale many months ago at Ottawo, the expenditure of huge sums of money in "boosting," and the employment of an army of the party's camp followers dating away back, are coming to light every day. It is plain that when the present parliament met, this plot was already set.

When the government was driven from office after being fifteen years in power, a number of contractors and manufacturers were left out in the cold. So long had the system been in vogue by which these men had obtained their livelihood out of the public funds that extreme pressure was brought to bear on the leaders of the party to get in on the good thing again. From all parts of Canada and from the United States also, there flashed wireless signals of distress. The cry for help was given out and the coming naval battle offered a possible opportunity for forcing the Government to the country. Should it fail, there were other matters to come up, such as the revision of the Bank Act, the tariff changes, anything at all so long as there was afforded a chance to contruct until the Government should be forced to the country.

In his determination to put through his Naval Aid Bill at any cost, Mr. Borden is influenced by a sincere desire to help the British Admiralty in their work of guarding the heart of the Empire from a possible death dealing blow. Well may he be settled firmer in his determination by the thought of the plot that has been formed to defeat the expressed wishes of the Canadian people, whatever the government might conceive them to be on any question in order to save a great rabble of camp followers from doing honorable work for their living.

The Opposition, in obstructing the naval bill, are also holding back the work of the committees in the house, in which the real facts of their mismanagement and manipulation of the country's money were coming to light before the obstruction began. Here then, is the real "emergency" in so far as they are concerned—the danger that the country will come to realize the vast depth of their degradation. Let R. C. Miller, the parliamentary prisoner, who is being held until he tells the country just what he did with the money given to him to bribe the Liberal party friends in order to obtain fat contracts, be released. At all odds, save "the boys." Then, and only then, will there be time to consider the dangers of the British Empire.

But right will prevail. Premier Borden will not be hoodwinked. Too much has come out already. The plot is exposed and in the lurid light of exposure stand such professional politicians as Hon. MacKenzie King, who has rushed to get himself nominated so sure is he that an election will be forced, Hon. Sydney Fisher, who has disappeared from the consideration of the public for Canada has no need of his services, and many others better known to those who are on the firing line in the cause of good government than to the general public who do not see and hear everything.

It is in the interests of the British Empire that Mr. Borden's naval bill go through parliament as soon as possible. It is in the interests of good government in Canada that the searchlight of the parliamentary committees be kept playing on the dark places in the path trod by the late government during the past fifteen years.

Spring is on all right. You must get at your sewing. We have the materials in all kinds. W. BANFORD & SON.

Fraise for Minister of Militia.

—o—

Colonel the Hon. Sam Hughes came in for considerable praise on Sunday evening in Ottawa, when, preaching from his pulpit in Eastern Methodist Church, Rev. Dr. Mavety referred to Col Hughes' action in abolishing the "wet" canteen.

The minister, preaching from the text, "What went ye out to see: a reed shaken by the wind?" likened the Minister of Militia unto John the Baptist, and declared that it took an exceptionally strong man to take the stand which he did and refuse to be shaken by the wind of criticism. While perhaps others before him had realized the necessity for such an action, no one had the sufficient strength of manhood to put it into force. Any man who would make a statement, "So long as I am Minister of Militia no liquor will be served in camp," was as courageous as the man who won the coveted Victoria Cross.

Calgary's Story of Great Progress

According to the Calgary Standard over 4,000 new consumers were taken on by the Calgary electric light plant during 1912. In the twelve months the consumption of current increased from $264,731.91 to $470,657.23, notwithstanding reductions in price. Bank clearings increased from $218,681,921 to $275,492,303; inland revenue from $479,697 to $662,635, and city assessment from $111,000,000 to something over $130,000,000. During the year the city laid 53 miles of streets as against 33 miles in 1911; 48 miles of water mains as against 40 miles in 1911; and 20 miles of pavement as against 12 miles in 1911. Twenty-eight miles of curb and gutter and 40 miles of cement sidewalk were laid in 1912, and 2,877 houses were connected with the city wateryorks system. The outlook for 1913 is even more encouraging. A number of industries which have been included in the building figures are not yet employers of labor to any great extent, but will be before the year is over. General Superintendent Price, of the C.P.R., stated on the last day of the old year, that 1,500 men would be employed in the company's shops within a few months. The Riverside Lumber Co. are building a large woodworking factory which will increase their pay-roll in and tributary to Calgary, to over 1,000 men. The Tregillus Clay Product Co., is another large industrial plant which is just getting nicely under way. The Pioneer Tractor Co. expects to be employing 500 men before mid-summer. The C.N.R. and G.T.P. will both become extensive employers of labor in Calgary this year. In addition to these outstanding concerns, practically every firm in the city, large or small, is adding to its staff. Calgary's story of progress is that of scores of western towns in greater or lesser degree.

BROWNSBURG TAFFY PARTY.

—: o: —

Oh! what fun and frolic sure,
And the concert made a cure,
And helped us all to endure
The Brownsburg taffy party.

What smiling, laughing and such din
And everybody tried to win,
With taffy daubed on lip and chin,
At the Brownsburg Taffy party.

Happy smiles and laugh so hearty,
The taffy was a little clarty,
As if it was a little warty,
At the Brownsburg taffy party.

It will take time to wash the dress,
For it was daubed in such a mess,
It was all fun, I must confess,
The Brownsburg taffy party.

The patient boys did not despair,
Got taffy daubed within their hair,
By nimble hands of girls so fair
At the Brownsburg taffy party.

There was not one could be at rest,
For all did try to do their best,
To daub the blouses and shirt-waists,
At the Brownsburg taffy party.

The coats and vests the boys then wore,
Were ruined sure, for evermore
But laughed until their throats were sore,
At the Brownsburg taffy party,

The concert, it was then sublime,
And singing was kept up to time,
And smothered laughter was the chime,
At the Brownsburg taffy party.

But as the fun and frolic's past,
And it was like a whirlwind blast,
But hope it will not be the last,
For another taffy party.

A JAPANESE YOUNGEST SON.

Yoshio Markino Tells of the Days of His Childhood.

That the family virtues can flourish in other than Christian countries, and that the English language can be used with quaint effectiveness by an intelligent Oriental, has been shown by Yoshio Markino in his book, "When I was a Child." He is a Japanese artist now living in London, and has risen to success only after a long struggle against loneliness and starvation.

When I was a child I was never spanked. Both my mother and father believed Confucius so faithfully. Confucius said, "You can teach and lead any human being who has a soul. Only those wild beasts you may beat." They begged my nurse not to spank me. They always said to them, "Our child has a brain to understand the reason; so if he is naughty, pray explain reason until he becomes good, but never spank him." They always brought a looking-glass in front of my crying face. I hated to see my own face so ugly with the tear-marks, and I immediately began to laugh. Very often, when I wanted to cry a little longer, I used to scream, "Oh don't show me the glass for a few moments!" I was never scolded severely. They always told me, "You are a very nice boy, but just at this moment some evil is trying to dwell in you. How pity the evil is making you a bad boy and giving some trouble to your dear parents!" And I began to feel so sorry for them, and I used to cling to their necks and say, "The evil is gone long time ago. I am your favorite boy."

It is a general rule in Japan that youngest child is spoilt by the parents, and I was not an exception from this. Of course my sister and brother loved me so much, too. But as soon as I was grown up enough I realized my position. I began to respect my sister and brother, and try to be as nice as possible to them. Surely that gave some sweet euphony in my family, and we were the specimen for the children in our village.

SHILOH CURES COUGHS & COLDS

"You ought to be glad that you will be electrocuted instead of hanged," said a prison visitor to a convicted murderer. "Why?" asked the felon in surprise. "You suffer greatly from rheumatism, don't you?" "Yes," "Well, electricity is the best known remedy for that."

NEW IDEAS ON CONSUMPTION

TUBERCULOSIS, AS WE KNOW IT, AND ITS CAUSE.

And What Has Been Learned In Past Few Years by European Medical Science.

According to an anonymous authority in the Philadelphia Ledger the ideas of medical science on the subject of tuberculosis have been revolutionized in the past few years as a result of discoveries made by European investigators. These ideas, however, have not been accepted by the majority of medical men, who are said not to have heard of them even, and apparently they are not being acted upon by the physicians in charge of sanitaria, since they would appear to be somewhat at variance with some important articles in the creed of those who are most spectacularly fighting the disease. For instance, the notion that consumption is an infectious disease, and that the utmost care must be taken to prevent the spreading of the germs, appears to be somewhat of a delusion. It is true that consumption is contagious, but since all of us are already infected no extraordinary precautions need to be taken to prevent what has already happened. This, at any rate, is what the Philadelphia authority says has been learned in the past few years by European medical science.

A Life-Long Battle.

These experts say that a newborn baby is free from any germs of consumption, and remains free until it begins to crawl around the floor and put things in its mouth. The bacilli being almost everywhere are thus introduced to the system, and by the time the child is six years old at the latest it has tubercle bacilli in its system. Except in rare cases, however, these germs are introduced in relatively small numbers. As soon as they appear Nature on the inside begins a war upon them, and this war never ceases while life lasts. The germs are always there, but the defenders are there too, and unless their powers of resistance are lessened they are able to keep the invader in subjection. Gradually the body creates its own antitoxin, and if the general health is kept up we become immune from tuberculosis. Sometimes, of course, there is a sudden invasion of particularly malignant germs that beats down opposition and then tuberculosis and perhaps death results. But the writer asserts that such cases are so rare as to be negligible.

Caused By Typhoid.

What then causes what we know as tuberculosis? What explains the fact that one out of six or one out of eight of us dies from tuberculosis? The answer is typhoid fever. Another answer is pneumonia, or scarlet fever, or measles, or in fact any other disease that strikes us down and weakens the resisting power of the body. The advanced physician, therefore, when called upon to treat a disease which he diagnoses as tuberculosis does not begin to look for the source of infection as he did formerly. He looks to find what broke down the resisting power of the body. We have long known that infectious diseases are frequently followed by tuberculosis, and the theory was that they increased one's receptivity. Now it is asserted that they merely attack the soldiers of the blood that have been on duty against the ever present enemy, the tubercle bacilli, and give the old enemy a chance to multiply, and at length to make a successful attack upon the citadel of life itself.

Old Mysteries Explained.

If the new theory is accepted it explains some things about disease that have not been easily understood. For instance, according to Hazen's Law, a community that has suffered from typhoid fever, caused by a contaminated water supply, the typhoid fever epidemic is swiftly followed by an epidemic of tuberculosis, and various other diseases. Moreover, Dr. Spooner, of Boston, recently showed that the very minute amounts of typhoid poison used in the modern methods of prophylaxis will make active any chronic or latent disease, and he warns particularly against performing the operation on those who show signs of an active tuberculosis. Here is another fact that threatened at one time to destroy faith in the modern anti-tuberculosis crusade. Statistics show that the death-rate from tuberculosis began to decline long before we knew of the existence of a tubercle bacilli, or knew that the disease was either curable or preventible.

Sanitation Prevents Tuberculosis.

The fact is that before we knew anything about consumption, except that it was a wasting disease, we did know something about sanitation, and as we improved our sanitation, and thus slowly reduced the mortality from typhoid, we also reduced the mortality from tuberculosis. The deduction from the new theory is that the sure way to fight tuberculosis is to keep up the resisting power of the body, to be as much in the open air as possible, and to eat plenty of nourishing food. Because they are obliged to take care of themselves, nurses who are constantly handling the most malignant bacilli rarely, if ever, fall victims to the disease. If tuberculosis infection were the deadly thing we have been taught we should expect the nurses and doctors to perish in much greater numbers. The fact is that we were all infected as babies, and that as long as we can avoid other diseases that sap our strength and live normal, wholesome lives we need no longer dread the White Plague.

FORTUNES ARE WAITING.

Artificial Substitutes Are Wanted For Many Things.

It was announced a few weeks ago, says London Tit-Bits, that a distinguished chemist of the Imperial Technical School of Moscow had solved the problem of making artificial rubber and that he could sell the new product at about 1s. 4d. per pound.

Yet, in spite of this widely disseminated piece of news, the price of rubber remains pretty much the same. The reason may be found by examining the patent office records. During the past ten or twelve years nearly 300 patents for artificial rubber have been taken out.

Substitutes have been made from petroleum, from coal tar, turpentine, peat, from nitrated linseed oil, and by treating cereals with phyalin.

The latter invention made a considerable sensation so long ago as 1906; yet, judging by the constantly-increasing demand for the natural product, it has little effect upon the real rubber market.

The chemist, working in his laboratory, can take any substance and analyse it—that is, break it up into its original constituents and tell you what they are, and how much of each element the substance in question is composed of.

But when it comes to building up the original substance out of its prime constituents, there he is at sea. By dint of long and patient experiments, or perhaps by pure chance, he may succeed in reproducing some few natural products, but that is as far as he can go.

Indigo dye took many years to synthesize. A German chemist accomplished it at last, but the curious discovery was made that, if blended with the natural product made from the indigo plant, the color produced was both more durable and brighter than that made by either dye alone. So artificial indigo has not yet ruined the indigo planter.

Artificial camphor has also been produced. It is now made from pine-tree turpentine. But the chemist has not yet succeeded in synthesyzing gutta percha. This commodity grows yearly more rare. Enormous quantities are required for making golf-balls and for the covering of submarine cables. A fortune awaits the clever man who can marke artificial gutta-percha at a price which will allow it to compete with the natural product.

Cork is another substance of everyday use which seems to defy the inventor. The only substitute for cork is paper treated with paraffin wax. But such a cork could not be used for a bottle of wine. So far nothing has been artificially made to compete with the bark of the cork oak.

At Delhi, the new capital of India, stands an ancient iron monument which, though exposed to all weather, never rusts or decays. Yet it has no protective covering. Here is a secret which would be simply invaluable to the world, which has been discovered by some Indian artificer of old time and most unfortunately been lost.

At a recent meeting of the iron and steel institute, Mr. Cushman said that we could face the future with complacency if we could rediscover the secret. To shipowners alone it would mean a yearly saving of millions. Rust is the great enemy of the steel ship, and she has constantly to go into drydock to have her hull coated with anti-corrosive solution.

Best-Paid Servant of Czar.

There are sauces served at the Russian royal table which it is believed cost at the rate of $5 a portion. The Czar himself is extremely partial to lamb cutlets, and these he has cooked in the simplest manner possible. His Imperial Majesty is also fond of cold roast of some sort and plenty of fruit, washed down with Hock and Seltzer water. The Czar's chief chef is the most highly paid in any royal establishment—he has a salary of $17,500 a year.

OUR LETTER FROM TORONTO

WHAT IS INTERESTING THE PEOPLE OF THE CITY AT THE PRESENT TIME.

The New Candidate for North York—Dr. Ross to Investigate Freidmann Cure—Women's Police Court.

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, at present a resident of this city, and who has just been nominated as the Liberal candidate in North York, has seen more of the limelight of public life than perhaps any other man of his years in Canada and unless all signs fail he will continue to attract attention for a good many years to come. Mr. King is a grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie, his mother, who is the wife of Mr. John King, K. C., one of the lecturers at Osgoode Hall, and a particular authority on the law of libel, being the daughter of the "patriot" of 1837. There is no doubt that Mr. King inherits some of the qualities of his famous grandfather. He has, for example, undoubted ambition for public service. He has spent all his life in public positions.

First he was in academic work, where he made a special study of industrial conditions. This seemed to give him qualifications for the Department of Labor, which was at that time being established at Ottawa by Sir William Mulock. To this field he was therefore transferred, later resigning the position of Deputy Minister of Labor to enter the hurly burly of active politics and to become a member, as it turned out, of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet. The defeat of the Government in 1911 and his own personal defeat left Mr. King without employment.

Will Stay in Politics.

For the present he has decided to stay in the political life. He has a reputation as a public speaker and as a writer and as he has no family it is comparatively easy for him to follow his inclinations.

In the graces of public speaking Mackenzie King has few equals in the country. He has a splendid voice and excellent delivery, which cannot help but be impressive. He is perhaps lacking in the lighter elements of humor on which many political leaders have based great successes. While he has great ability, there are those who maintain that he has the faults that often go with ability of this type. They tell a story of his campaign in 1911 in North Waterloo, which is probably not true, but which indicates the nature of the criticism that is made of him. He was speaking at one of his own meetings before a friendly audience and was denouncing in round terms some act of one of his political opponents. His audience was being carried away with him and one enthusiast burst out, "Who done that?" It is related that Mr. King paused to say, "I presume my friend meant to say who did that." As intimated, the story is probably untrue.

In North York.

The other day the Canadian Club had Mr. King address it on the Navy question. As evidence of the interest in the subject and in the speaker, one of the largest crowds in the history of the Club turned out to the meeting. The speech was frankly partisan and was enjoyed or criticized according to the convictions of the individual listener. The speech illustrated Mr. King's strength and his weakness. In other words, he was in spots effective and in other spots unconvincing.

North York in which Mr. King has now raised his standard has been a historic fighting ground between political parties for generations. It has been often represented by a man prominent in the councils of his party. This and the fact that Mr. King's grandfather used to represent the constituency almost a century ago may help his candidature, though it must be pointed out that generally North York is one of those constituencies that shows a partiality for a member who supports the party in power.

To Investigate Friedmann's Cure.

With characteristic enterprise the Toronto General Hospital has delegated Dr. G. W. Ross to spend several weeks in New York investigating the Friedmann cure for tuberculosis and making observations on the progress of the tests now being carried on there. Immediately on his return Dr. Ross will make a report for the local institution. The hospital authorities and the Province generally are to be congratulated on being able to secure the services of Dr. Ross, who has made a specialty of the new treatment for diseases in which line Dr. Friedmann's cure seems to follow. Dr. Ross' report may therefore be expected to be authoritative and give the Province the very last word on the subject. From the latest information obtainable there is a disposition to believe that there is a good deal in Dr. Friedmann's cure, and that while it may not accomplish all that has been claimed for it, it may mark a great step forward in conquering the "white plague." Final conclusions must, however, be delayed until there has been an opportunity to observe the treatment and make a report on it.

Ontario Club in New Home.

The Ontario Club has gone into its magnificent new quarters at the corner of Jordan and Wellington streets. The Ontario Club is the Liberal Club, organized two or three years ago with a twofold purpose: First, as a rendezvous similar to other clubs, and, second, as a home for Liberalism in a city in which Liberalism is in need of care and attention, and such as the Albany Club has furnished Conservatives

The Ontario Club started out by taking over the premises formerly occupied by the National Club, but when this property was needed for other purposes the institution had to move into a flat of an office building while new quarters were prepared. These are now ready, and furnish a club home which compares very favorably with anything in the city. The old Standard Bank building has been entirely renovated and as far as the interior is concerned, practically rebuilt, and no expense has been spared in the furnishing. Carpets and curtains have been made abroad specially for the Club, and this, with the other fittings, give an air of considerable luxuriousness. Attendants in knee breeches are on guard in the hall and an occasional critic might be found who would say that the atmosphere was not entirely democratic. However, those in charge have believed that whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing right, and they have spared no pains. There are some twenty bedrooms available for out-of-town members.

Women in Police Court.

As a result of the activity of the Local Council of Women and other Women's organizations, women's police court cases are now heard separately and in private. The males who have to attend police court are grumbling because the women's cases are disposed of first, and that keeps the men waiting. It is also claimed by critics of the innovation that the lack of publicity which was aimed at for the women is not being accomplished, because, while the cases are heard in private, there is more publicity than ever while going to and from the court. The women's organizations who secured the experiment seem to be well pleased. Most of the female offenders in the police court are not deserving of much consideration, but occasionally a case comes to light which they claim amply justifies any trouble the separate court causes.

A DRUM CORPS OF ANTS.

Termites' Signal on the Approach of Danger.

Many observers have noticed the soldier-like qualities of an army of termites, or white ants, when in close array it overwhelms the object of its attack, or travels along in orderly, military file. An account in La Nature, based on the observations of Professor Bugnion of Lausanne, tells of a curious drum corps of these fierce little warriors.

One day Professor Bugnion visited a little island on the Lake Amobalangoda in Ceylon. While idling about, he suddenly became aware of a faint drumming noise. Turning in the direction from which the sound came, he perceived a colony of termites beneath some dry leaves that had fallen from a bread-tree. The noise, which lasted for a few seconds, sounded like the very distant roll of a drum. On closer investigation, Professor Bugnion discovered that it was caused by a little band of termites beating a lively tattoo with their mandibles against the bottom of the leaves. They had evidently been disturbed by his approach, and were warning the working battalion of the army.

Another instance of the effectiveness of the drum corps was observed in the interior of a bungalow. Noticing that termites had invaded the wall of one of the rooms, the owner had placed in one corner an iron pot filled with bits of wood; he hoped to attract them into the pot, and then burn them. Professor Bugnion went into the room and closed a closet door somewhat sharply. Immediately he noticed a drumming noise coming from the kettle. As soon as the sound died away, he repeated the experiment, with the same result. Each time that a sharp or unusual noise was made, or that some one talked loudly, the termites' signal of alarm was drummed in the kettle.

LORD LYTTON.

The Earl of Lytton is one of the young men of the day who count. His grandfather was the famous Bulwer Lytton, whose literary reputation has somewhat faded, but whose abilities as a statesman and orator are still remembered. The present Lord Lytton was born in India in 1876, whilst his father, the distinguished diplomat and poet, was Viceroy. He succeeded to the title in 1891. By marriage he is related to such diverse politicians as Mr. Arthur Balfour and Mr. Wilfrid Scawen Blunt, whilst his sister, Lady Constance Lytton, is a rabid suffragette, and has gone to prison for the cause. Lord Lytton is a Conservative who is prepared to vote for the "emancipation" of women.

In 1902 Lord Lytton married the "beautiful Pamela Plowden," and they have two sons and two daughters. Lord and Lady Lytton move in the literary and artistic section of society, and have an imposing residence at Knebworth.

Part of the beautiful estate has been sold in building lots, to suit the convenience of purchasers, and also with the object of founding a rural community. The house itself was carefully restored by the first Lord Lytton, and is full of antique furniture and valuable tapestry.

Though Lord Lytton adopts a very independent attitude in political matters, his abilities are bound to secure recognition. He has had some official training as assistant private secretary to Mr. George Wyndham, and has plenty of influence behind him.

LAWYERS MADE MISTAKES.

Peculiarities In the Wills of Some Famous Advocates.

Remarkable as it may seem, some of the biggest legal mistakes in drafting wills have been made by lawyers. Judge Bacon, of England, whose property was valued at £118,408, wrote his legacies on a sheet of court paper, but, though he was an expert in law, he forgot to sign his own alterations to his will. An affidavit from a solicitor and an official of the Bloomsbury Court was necessary before matters were set right. Lord St. Helier and Lord Grimthorpe both failed to make proper wills. The latter's will was a document of over eleven thousand words, but in the matter of lengthy wills this was beaten by Edward Bush, a Gloucester engineer, who required twenty-six thousand words before he was satisfied with his provisions. He had an estate of £114,813. At the other end of th escale is the twelve-line will of Lord Russell of Killowen, who in that space set his seal on £150,000. Lord Brampton took four hundred words to dispose of £142,000, while Lord Mansfield used only half a sheet of note paper, and a good second was Alphonse Henry Strauss, who bequeathed £296,221 in forty-three words.

BIBLE READERS' MISTAKES.

Boaz Did Not Draw Off Shoe, But Glove.

A book compiled by Nathan Haskell Dole recounts some of the mistakes we make in supposed historical facts, in quotations, in pronunciation and the like. It has many bits of out-of-the-way information, including the following:

In the English rendering of Ruth, iv., 7, 8, it reads: "A man plucked off his shoe and gave it to his neighbor; and this was a testimony in Israel. Therefore the kinsman said unto Boaz buy it for thee. So he drew off his shoe." The Hebrew word nagal is said to mean sandal only when it is followed by regil, the foot. When it stands by itself it means glove. The German word glove illustrates this, for handschuh means "hand shoe." Therefore the token given in the passage cited was really a glove.

The passage from the New Testament, "Be ye, therefore, wise as serpents and harmless as doves," should read "simple as doves" as the Greek word really means unmixed, therefore guileless.

"Evil communications corrupt good manners" probably was cited by Paul as an already familiar proverb, for it was written by Meander, the Grecian comic poet.

Hamilton, Ont., Mar. 17 (Special) "I know there are a lot of people who suffer and do not know what will cure them. Dodd's Kidney Pills will."

These are the words of Mrs. E. J. Talbot who resides at 293 Wellington street north, this city. And Mrs. Talbot speaks out of her own experience.

"Last July I was very sick," Mrs. Talbot continues. "My heart bothered me, my limbs were heavy, and I had a dragging sensation across the loins. Rheumatism, lumbago and neuralgia added to my sufferings, and the doctor I called in did not help me much.

"I finally decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have used seven boxes and I am so much stronger and better that I feel I must recommend them to others."

Mrs. Talbot's complication of troubles all came from sick kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured them. For Dodd's Kidney Pills are no cureall. They simply cure kidney disease of any kind. They never fail to do that.

ONTARIO'S INDUSTRIES.

Their Use of Wood Studied by Dominion Forest Service.

What woods do the brush-makers of Ontario use? How much of each kind? What is the value of the wood? Where does it come from?

These and other questions with respect to the industry mentioned, and also thirty-five other industries which use wood in their product are answered in a pamphlet soon to be issued by the Forestry Branch of the Dominion Department of the Interior. The pamphlet is known as that Branch's Bulletin No. 36, and is entitled "Wood-Using Industries of Ontario."

For some years the Forestry Branch has issued statistics as to the quantity and value of wood used in the saw-mills, pulp-mills and other wood manufacturing industries. The scope of this booklet, however, is different. The term "wood-using industry," as here used, is intended to refer particularly to those industries which use for their raw material wood which has already been put through one or more processes of manufacture. For instance, the saw-mills, which use for their raw material the logs as they come from the forest, and which saw these into lumber, are not included. The planing mill, on the other hand, takes for its raw material the boards, plank and other material which the saw-mill turns out as its finished product, making these into sash, doors, etc. So the planing-mill falls into the class of "wood-using industries" as understood in this bulletin, while the saw-mill plainly does not. Such a distinction cannot, of course, always be carried out strictly.

The wood-using industries of the other provinces will be studied as soon as possible. The study of these industries in the Maritime Provinces is almost completed.

Those interested in the present pamphlet may obtain copies gratis, when issued, by applying to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look For Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place — It Spreads Rapidly—Often Ruins Health Completely.

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it passes rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure Catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmond J. Christine, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size, guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

In prayer it is better to have a heart without words than words without a heart.—Bunyan.

Every man who inherits wealth has a long start of those who begin life with only their muscles and brains.—Prof. Smart.

Accept life and you must accept regret. The man who insists on seeing with perfect clearness before he decides never decides.—Amiol.

The slum is not merely constituted of broken-down houses, but also of broken-down people, and as a matter of fact the second problem is more difficult to deal with than the former.—Prof. Glaister.

A Borrowed One.

First Party—"Don't you ever carry an umbrella?"

Second Party—"No, I hate to have everybody lookin' at me with suspicion."

"You see, had the lamb been obedient and stayed in the fold it would not have been eaten by the wolf, would it?" Boy—"No, ma'am; it would have been eaten by us."

Dizzy Headaches Cured in One Night

Quick Relief and Certain Cure Came From Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"I had terrible pains in my head. My appetite faded away, and when I did eat anything it disagreed and made me very sick for hours after each meal. The pains in my stomach and the dizzy headaches I had to endure almost set one wild. Sometimes attacks came on so severely that I had to go to bed. I would feel so worn, depressed and utterly miserable that for hours I wouldn't speak to my family. My system was poisoned with wastes and nothing helped me till I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Without this grand system-cleaning remedy I would still be sick, but each day brought me better health and spirits. I was cured and made strong, ruddy and healthy, and will always use and recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

"MRS. B. C. CURRAN, Westport P. O."

Thousands who are in an ailing, low state of health need nothing else but Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or the Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Lady Duff Gordon, better known in the fashionable world as "Madame Lucille," is in no wise ashamed of her chosen calling; indeed she is proud of it, for she considers correct dressmaking, with unlimited resources, to be a great art.

Lady Duff Gordon has denied the spiteful assertion that she is barred from Court because of her connection with "trade."

"It is true," said her ladyship, "that I don't go to Court; but this is simply and solely because I haven't the time to spare. I'm too busy."

PRICES STAGGER WOMEN.

Paris Society Folk Now Propose Simplicity Campaign.

Luxury in woman's dress has reached such a pitch in Paris that society women there are proposing to organize a simplicity campaign.

It is not so much the prices paid for the dresses themselves as the money asked, and paid, for accessories, which are exceeding the powers of all but the deepest purses. The extravagance in stockings has grown in inverse ratio to thickness of the material.

A shop near the Opera sells stockings at $2 a pair at the cheapest. An enquiry for the most expensive produced some at $200 and $240, made of Chantilly lace, Mechlin lace or tissue of gold.

In the Rue de la Paix, a fashionable purveyor of white underwear stated that he had no trousseau under $100, and that $10 and $20 were the prices for "cheap" night dresses. Another shop of the same kind making a specialty of corsets has quite cheap ones at $20 each, and a little better quality at $40; "but, of course," said the shopkeeper, "when a lady wants a really fashionable corset she has to pay for it."

ZAM-BUK DOES CURE PILES.

Mrs. C. Hanson, wife of the proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, Poplar, B.C., suffered from piles for years. Went to doctor after doctor in vain. Finally went to Spokane and had an operation. Twelve months afterwards she was as bad again. She says, "One day I read about Zam-Buk and thought I would try it. The first one or two boxes gave me more ease than anything else I had tried, so I went on with the treatment. In a short time I began to feel altogether different and better, and I saw that Zam-Buk was going to cure me. Well, I went on using it, and by the time I had used six boxes I was delighted to find myself entirely cured." 50c. all druggists and stores.

Must Have a Lot of It.

"I didn't think so, but he must be."

"Why?"

"I heard him say the other night that he lets his wife have all the money she wants."

Outvoted.

"I always reason things out with my boys. When I don't want them to do a thing I sit down and explain to them why."

"And do you get away with it?"

"Of course."

"You're lucky. I've tried that several times, but each time they have called in their mother and together decided that I was dead wrong."

A BRAVE WOMAN.

Took Sick Husband's Place in Signal-box and Saved Train.

An extraordinary occurrence took place at a junction signal-box on an English railway. A signalman who had been off duty through illness a considerable time started to work before he had fully recovered. His wife, on taking his tea to the box, found her husband lying helpless on the floor and too exhausted to attend to his work. Making him as comfortable as possible, she rushed to the train register, where all signals sent and received are inserted by the signalman on duty, and seeing that her husband had received the "line clear" signal for the south express, and, turning to the levers, she was horrified to see that the signals and points were put for the freight line.

It was very foggy at the time, and while on her way to the box she had noticed a mineral train standing on the freight line directly in the way of the oncoming express. She had on previous occasions spent a good deal of time in the box with her husband, who had explained all the details of its complicated workings. It now served her in good stead.

She reversed the levers of the freight road, and put the points for the express passenger line, then pulled off the signals, just as the train was sighted. In a few seconds the train rushed past, not any of her precious passengers ever thinking how that journey would have terminated had it not been for that cool and brave woman. After the passing of the express help was fetched from the next station, and a relief man sent.

Cure Your Sore Throat Nerviline Will Do It

Blessed Relief Comes Quick, You Get Comfort, Every Pain Disappears.

"Experience has taught me that the quickest way to cure a sore throat is with Nerviline," writes Mrs. Enoch P. Maclean. "My children always seem to get wet feet and stay out in the cold, and in consequence I have to keep a good household remedy handy. I rub in Nerviline almost every hour, give the children say twenty drops in hot sweetened water, and make them gargle with it. I have yet to see the cold this won't break up quickly."

From the La Have Islands, N .S., Mrs. John Walfield writes:—"We have been using Nerviline for about nine years, and find it excellent. When we find any of us getting a cold we take Nerviline in hot water. It is a sure relief for it, and is also an instant relief for internal pains of any kind."

The remarkable pain-subduing power of Nerviline and its ability to check colds, influenza and sore throat is unequalled. Every home should have Nerviline handy on the shelf for sudden illness at night, like cramps or internal pains. Large family size, 50c.; trial size 25c., at all storekeepers or druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

ROYAL SMOKERS.

How the Rulers of the World Best Enjoy Tobacco.

His Majesty King George, like his father before him, is particularly partial to a "good smoke"; but our present Sovereign's fondness for the weed most frequently finds expression through the medium of a dainty cigarette.

Provided the cigarettes are not too full flavored, King George is not fastidious as to the brand; neither is his Majesty exacting as to the style of their make-up. The Czar, on the other hand, will not smoke any but one special sort of Turkish cigarette, and that with a cardboard mouthpiece. His Imperial Majesty of Russia does not care for amber or other mouthpieces.

Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany smokes a good many very big cigarettes daily, made to his own order. King Alfonso of Spain is an immoderate consumer of mild cigarettes, which he likes to roll with his own Royal fingers; while the Khedive is given greatly to the enjoyment of cigarettes machine-shaped, of Egyptian origination.

The Czarina likes, in private, to indulge in a fragrant cigarette occasionally; and other Royal ladies who find solace in a cigarette now and again are the cultured Queen of Roumania and her exiled Majesty Queen Amelie of Portugal, who has long been a devotee of the "divine" herb.

Miss Violet Kennedy, of Montreal, spent the week-end visiting friends in town.

Mrs. D. A. McIntyre, of New York, Mr. Jas McConnell, of Vancouver, are guests of the Misses McConnell.

Mrs. Holland, of Westmount, is spending a few days in town, the guest of her mother Mrs. J. Carpenter.

Dr. R. S. Stackhouse has sold his property in Centre Ward, lately tenanted by Mr. P. Chabot, to Mr. Richer, of the Argenteuil Hotel.

Last Friday evening, the Y's held a successful taffy party in the lecture room of the Presbyterian Church. As the taffy was a little late in appearing, several numbers of the program were given before the real event of the evening. The Misses Carr, Draper, McIntyre, and Plaisted and Messrs Graham, MacKenzie and Miller contributed numbers.

When the taffy did arrive, enthusiasm waxed great The waitresses were kept in a constant hustle trying to make the supply come up somewhere near to the demand. And they proved equal to the occasion, for there is a limit even to taffy eating powers and the Y's saw to it that all were sure they had reached it. The evening closed with the National Anthem.

One of the oldest residents of Wentworth, Mrs. Neill, Maria Cruise, by he maiden name, passed away early Sunday morning, April 13th, 1913, at the ripe age of ninety-one years and six months.

She was born in Cloufert, County Galivay, Ireland, October 14th, 1821. She married John Neill of the Parish of Mystown, Kings County, on January 10th, 1839, in the Church of Ireland, at Cloufert. They, with two children came to America in May 1845, having been eight weeks on the sea. They had buried two children in Ireland before leaving They spent a year with relatives in the Seigniory, and then took up one hundred acres of land in Wentworth Township, where eight children were born to them. Mr. Neill died in June 1879

Six of their children, three sons and three daughters are still living; also forty-one grand children and fifty-nine great grand children making in all one hundred and six direct decendants.

Mrs. Neill's remains were interred in the Dunany Cemetery, after the funeral had been conducted in St. Aiden's Church, Wentworth. The church was filled almost to the limit of its seating capacity, which considering the almost impassible condition of the roads, witness to the very high esteem and love in which the deceased was regarded.

The Rev. J. A. Lackey of Lachute, gave an appropriate address based on the 4th and 5th verses of the 23rd Psalm. As we think of Mrs. Neill's long and consistent Christian life and her simple but faith in her Saviour, we are reminded of the words of Scripture. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, . . . for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." Rev. xiv. 13.

Selected Recipes.

Sauce for Pudding.—Mix in a basin one level tablespoonful of cornstarch with one cupful of milk, then pour it into the chafing dish and boil, stirring all the time. Cook for 10 minutes, then add half a teaspoonful of vanilla extract and two yolks of eggs. Sweeten to taste and reheat the sauce without boiling, or it will curdle. Strain and serve hot or cold with any sweet pudding.

Rocks.—Three eggs, one and a half cupfuls flour, one cupful butter or part butter and part dripping, one pound raisins, one teaspoonful soda dissolved in one tablespoonful hot water, nutmeg or cinnamon to taste, a pinch of salt, flour enough to make a batter that will drop from a spoon. They must run a little in the pans and must be baked in greased tins.

Green Tomato Mincemeat.—Half peck green tomatoes, sliced. Two tablespoonfuls salt. Let these stand together two hours, and drain. Cover with cold water and boil for two hours. Prepare half a pound of chopped suet, two pounds raisins, chopped fine, two pounds brown sugar, one pint cider vinegar, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, cloves, mace, and nutmeg. This will keep in jars all winter and is equal to mincemeat made with meat.

Salad Dressing.—One-third of a pint of good vinegar, two-thirds of a pint of water. Bring these to the boil, having ready the following mixture: Two teaspoonfuls of mustard, one teaspoonful of salt, four tablespoonfuls of flour, five tablespoonfuls of sugar. Mix these ingredients well, add a little water and the beaten whites of two eggs. Stir well and pour in gradually the hot vinegar and water. Boil until thick, stirring all the time. Put into glass jars, and when it is cold cover with a close lid.

Apple, Cherry and Raisin Salad—Two cups diced tart apple, one cup diced celery, one-half cup raisins, dash salt, one-fourth cup olive oil, two tablespoons lemon juice, one teaspoon powdered sugar, celery tips, or lettuce leaves. Stew the raisins in a little water. Mix together the oil, salt, lemon juice, sugar and a tablespoonful of the raisin juice, beating well. Marinate the apple, celery and raisins separately in it for thirty binutes; then toss together and serve garnished with the green.

Molding Pie Pastry.—Sift three cupfuls of flour into a basin, add a pinch of salt. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter with half a cupful of milk, then pour them into the middle of the flour, add one yolk of egg and mix to a smooth paste. Cut off a small piece for the lid and mold the large piece with the hands into a round pie shape. Chop some ham and veal fine, mix and season with salt, pepper and a little grated nutmeg, then fill up the pie case with them. Pour in a little rich stock, wet the edges and cover with the smaller pieces of pastry. Brush over the top with beaten egg, lay on a buttered tin and bake in a moderate oven for 1 1-2 hours.

Scripture Cake.—One cup butter (Judges 5. 25), three and one-half cups flour (I. Kings 4. 22), three cups sugar (Jeremiah 6. 20), two cups raisins (I. Samuel 30. 12), two cups figs (I. Samuel 30. 12), one cup water (Genesis 24. 17), one cup almonds (Genesis 43. 11), six eggs (Isaiah 10. 14), one tablespoon honey (Exodus 16. 21), a pinch of salt (Leviticus 16. 13), spices to taste (I. Kings 10. 10), two tablespoons baking powder (I. Corinthians (5. 6). Nuts should be put in last, the rasins should be seeded, the figs chopped, and the almonds blanched and sliced, and all these well floured to prevent their sticking to the bottom.

Aids When Cleaning.

If there are spots on the wallpaper try rubbing them with dry bread. Often most persistent marks may be removed in this way.

Marks caused by scratching matches on painted surfaces should be rubbed vigorously with a little lemon.

A wooden skewer will be found most helpful for taking dust and dirt out of crevices around the window panes. Go over the place a second time with a skewer wrapped. The dirt from the corners will not be carried on to the glass when the window-washing is done.

In washing windows, remember that alcohol will do the work quickly, and has a decided advantage over water in that it may be successfully used in cold weather without danger of freezing on the glass.

Combs and brushes are best cleaned by dipping them up and down vigorously in warm water, to which borax and ammonia have been added. Wipe frequently on a piece of soft cloth, for this removes much of the dirt. In immersing the brush, be careful not to wet the back, for this may loosen the bristles.

Crushed egg shell and warm, strong soapsuds will remove stain from the inside of decanters and bottles. Shake vigorously, changing the water from time to time.

Clean all tooth brushes at least once a week by soaking for a little while in diluted peroxide or other antiseptic. Of course, each brush should be treated independently.

A cloth dampened with kerosene is excellent for cleaning porcelain and enamel tubs, basins, sinks and such surfaces.

Linoleum should be washed without soap if one would keep it in the best of condition. After washing, wipe it off with a cloth dipped in milk, and then wipe dry. If linoleum is varnished or given a coat of shellac, it will wear better.

Dry whiting, or borax, on a cloth moistened with alcohol brightens nickel-plated surfaces.

Kerosene is an excellent medium for cleaning zinc.

Ammonia or salt will remove egg stains from silver spoons.

If the cellar is damp, keep a box of unslaked lime there to absorb the moisture in the air. It will perceptibly sweeten the atmosphere. Of course, the lime must be renewed from time to time.

Pour a few spoonfuls of kerosene down the drain pipes after flushing thoroughly with boiling water and washing soda.

After washing the mirror there is nothing better for polishing the surface than an old handkerchief.

HE LEADS A QUEER PEOPLE

PETER VEREGIN IS HEAD OF THE DOUKHOBORS.

Their Mistaken Pilgrimage in 1899 Succeeded by Prosperity.

Out of a five-volume official report emerges the figure of an empire-builder in a small way—Peter Veregin, leader of the Russian Doukhobors in British Columbia. The report has just been presented to the British Columbian Government by William Blakemore, appointed last August to enquire into the desirability of the Doukhobors as colonists. It has many interesting things to say of them, but its striking feature is the picture it sketches of their leader.

Back in Russia in the time of their persecution they were led by a woman, Lukerya Vasylyvna Kalmykova. On her death Veregin succeeded to the office. The sect split, Veregin's enemies had him exiled to Siberia, and sleighs travelled 2,000 miles over the snow to maintain communication between him and his people. After the Doukhobors were enabled to migrate to Canada, largely through the efforts of Count Leo Tolstoy, the Society of Friends of England, and the Quakers in Philadelphia, things went badly. Therefore the Russian Government was induced to liberate Veregin, and he has since been the actual ruler of the Doukhobors.

A Benevolent Despot.

He is described as a benevolent despot absolutely devoted to the interests of the Doukhobors, at all times plotting, planning and scheming to advance their cause, not enriching himself; ruling with a rod of iron; exacting implicit obedience and exercising rigid discipline.

He is a big man in every sense of the word; the history and traditions of his people, his own suffering, his contact with great men have been his education. He inherits the characteristics of his race, among which are strong reasoning capacity, diplomatic skill and subtlety. The greatest evidence of his ability is the manner in which he has for thirteen years been able with comparative success to hold together his people in an environment entirely alien to their ideas, their cherished beliefs and their ambitions. In the freest country in the world, where individual feeling is the keynote, says Mr. Blakemore, he still holds six-sevenths of the original settlement in the thrall of community life, with individuality extinguished except for his own personal control. He is in fact a theocratic czar; he possesses not only the genius but the capacity for governing.

His personality is both attractive and impressive. He is tall, broad, muscular, massive, with a fine head, great natural dignity of carriage, and the atmosphere of strength. Yet, like many such men, he has a remarkably gentle manner. He speaks in a low voice. His every mood is marked by a natural courtesy and simple dignity which would single him out for notice anywhere.

His features are regular and his skin has an olive pallor. His hair and beard were jet black, but are now streaked with iron gray. His eyes are dark and thoughtful, and in moments of excitement shine with hidden fire; his whole expression is that of a man who has suffered much and has triumphed over everything through the force of courage and confidence. His people yield him the utmost deference and obedience, due, perhaps, not altogether to his great personal endowments and magnetism, but partly to their religious belief, which invests him with almost supernatural attributes.

The Real Problem.

As for the Doukhobors themselves, the report speaks favorably of what they have accomplished. The chief ground of complaint against them is that they refuse to comply with certain laws, the school laws among others, and that they will not be naturalized. There were also questions raised as to their community system, in the working out of which supplies are purchased at wholesale, and very little trade is enjoyed by local retail merchants.

The report finds that the Doukhobors are desirable settlers from the standpoint of their personal character, farming skill and general industry. Their refusal to comply with certain laws is based on their religious beliefs. The report recommends that the Government follow a policy of patience toward them and put pressure on the leaders to secure compliance with the laws, resorting in case of prosecutions to the imposition of fines rather than imprisonment, which the Doukhobors regard as persecution. It suggests appointing a Doukhobor agent on somewhat similar lines to the Indian agents and cancelling the order-in-Council granting exemption from military service. It opposes the admittance of Doukhobors into Canada in future save on the clear understanding that no exceptions of any kind will be allowed in the matter of observance of laws.

The Doukhobors were brought to Canada thirteen years ago in consequence of the persecution to which they had been subjected in Russia for three centuries. They settled in Saskatchewan amid very unfavorable surroundings. They had no money, they arrived at a bad time of the year, for the Winter lay just in front of them; they were unprepared for the rigorous weather of the prairies, and they were without their leader. But they never lost heart. Lacking horses and teams, the women turned to and hauled the plough and scattered the seed, while their husbands and sons went to work on railway construction to earn a few needed dollars.

A circumstance which has done much to bring the Doukhobors into disrepute and to create a wrong impression concerning them was the unfortunate "pilgrimage" near Yorkton in 1899. On this occasion several hundred Doukhobors were induced by a fanatic to abandon their homes and march out unclothed across the snowy prairies on a religious pilgrimage in quest of Christ. It was a purely fanatical proceeding indulged in by a very small number and condemned by the vast majority of the community, but it was taken as a representative act, which it was not, and has never since been repeated.

An Able Ruler.

By this time the Canadian Government had begun to be afraid that there might be serious trouble with the Doukhobors. The vagaries in which the few indulged were taken to indicate the possibility that the whole 7,000 might resort to similar practices. Consequently Veregin was brought from Siberia to Canada, and the subsequent conduct of the colonists is proof of his ability as a ruler. The Doukhobors settled seriously to the business of farming. They built houses, made their own furniture, poured all their wealth as fast as it accumulated, whether produced on the land or whether on the outside, into the community treasury, and became prosperous and contented.

Then trouble arose over their refusal to become naturalized British citizens. The law deprived such as refused of their homesteads, but allowed them to settle on 15 acres of land for each member of a family. A serious split in the community resulted. Upward of 1,000 accepted the offer of the Government, took their homesteads of 160 acres, left the Doukhobor community and became naturalized British subjects.

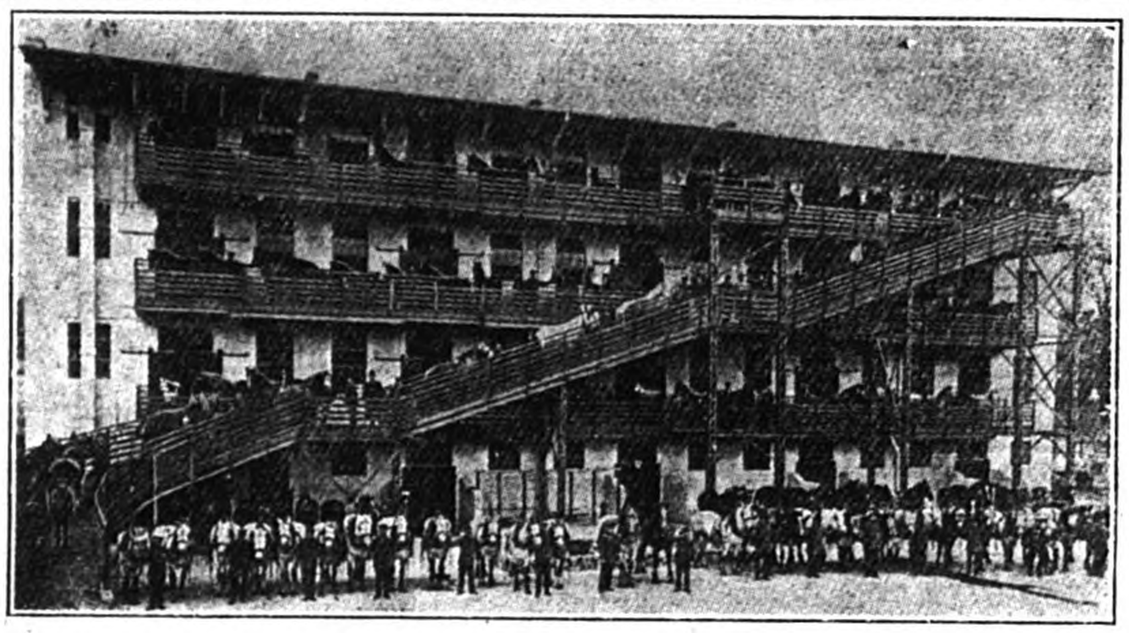
This was a serious blow to the community and its leader. It meant not only the breaking away from communal life, but the establishment of the idea of individual holdings, a thing unknown in Russia and inconceivable to Doukhobor minds until it was demonstrated in Canada. From this moment may be said to date the determination of Peter Veregin to move the community to some other province where conditions would be more favorable for continuing the community life and less subject to the disintegrating influences which had now begun to operate in Saskatchewan.

This happened about five years ago, and in a year and a half later Veregin had secured, by private purchase, his first land holdings in British Columbia, and had moved the first instalments, two thousand of his people. Thus at the end of little more than one decade these people once more had to face another trek into the unknown with the same accompanying conditions that signalized their departure from the land of their birth and persecution.

The Doukhobors have now acquired 1,403 acres in British Columbia at a cost of $648,017, and have established four large settlements at Brilliant Glade, Pass Creek and Grand Forks. They have waterworks, electric light systems, sawmills, brick yards and a jam factory. The evidence goes to show that in all their business relations the Doukhobors have been found satisfactory. The total number in the Grand Forks district is upward of 7,000 and there are about 2,500 left in Saskatchewan.

During the year ended August 31, 1912, the total income of the central community fund was $342,099 and the total expenditure for the year $375,999.

"What you need, madame, is oxygen. Come every afternoon for your inhalations. They will cost you two dollars each." "I knew that other doctor didn't understand my case," declared the fashionable patient. "He told me all I needed was plain fresh air."



A THREE-STOREY HOUSE FOR HORSES—REMARKABLE GERMAN STABLES.

AIRMEN GET THEIR WINGS

BRITISHERS ARE FLOCKING TO THE FLYING GAME.

Pupils From All Over the World Are at the Aero Academy, Hendon.

No business in the history of England, says a London correspondent, ever made such tremendous headway in so short a time as that of aviation. For the purpose of teaching man the art of birds there are aerodromes scattered up and down the country, the most important of which is at Hendon, about six miles from the heart of London. Here an extraordinary number of pupils are attracted. Within any period from four days to six months they become full-fledged aviators, and, after examination, receive the Royal Aero Club's brevet.

The fee for the course of instruction is $375, except in the case of an officer of the British army, and he is taught the secrets of the air for $300. This is practical patriotism, for, when he has passed the Royal Aero Club's examination, he gets the whole of this $300 returned to him by a grateful British war office.

Military men from India and other parts of the British Empire are taking up their home leave in ever increasing numbers in making themselves proficient aviators at Hendon. Here I found them the other day cheek by jowl with Germans, Austrians, Belgians and Americans, to say nothing of all types and classes of young Englishmen, who have discovered that there is money in flying, as well as fame.

Pupils From All Classes.

Aristocratic birth and university education do not seem to stand for much as qualifications for becoming a first-rate aviator. Quite as clever and as intrepid flying men spring from the humblest classes as from the finest family of soldiers that ever donned a uniform. And women pick up the art quite as quickly as men. Mrs. Stocke, the most famous of women aviators, on this side, was trained at Hendon, and so was the Baroness Schenk, a Belgian, and both these women picked up the technicalities with the rapidity and sureness of the best masculine pupils that ever climbed into a biplane.

Many of the pupils are boys under twenty—healthy, wholesome-looking British lads who hate the idea of a trade or a profession and long to work in the open air. They are not in the business for amusement. They reckon on winning races and buying machines and giving exhibition flights or on travelling to distant countries and opening ot distant countries and opening flying schools of their own. Soon, so they believe, no city of any size will be complete without its aerodrome and its flying instructor corps. Later, perhaps, everybody will own a flying machine, but present prospects are quite rosy enough to go on with.

The art of teaching flying has now been reduced to a system at Hendon, and a very interesting system it is when explained on the spot by an expert who understands all its technicalities and yet has not forgotten its fascination and romance.

"The first thing, for instance, we do with a pupil," said Marcus D. Stanton, "is to take him to one of our biplanes, and to teach him the controls. Until he has learned how the machine is guided and steered and brought into position during a flight, he is not allowed to go up. As a rule, this is taught him on windy days, when even a trip with a pilot is impossible; but, once he has mastered these technicalities he is allowed to take a passenger's flight and to go up two or three trial trips on a biplane, so as to get used to being in the air and to become accustomed to what I might call, for lack of a better term, the feel of the machine.

Learning to Be Birdmen.

"Afterward he takes up a position behind the instructor, so that he can keep his hand on the control lever as it is worked by the instructor and can feel the different movements that achieve different effects. For a week or two all his trips are taken in that fashion—in fact, until he shows that he has grasped in practice the theories of control that were impressed upon him at the start. Then he is permitted to take the aviator's seat, in front, and allowed to have charge of the machine, with the instructor behind, with his hand on the control lever, to follow his movements and to correct any mistakes he may make in the novelty or excitement of his flight.

"This portion of the training goes on until the pupil has secured the feel of the machine from the point of view of the pilot and can run up and down the grass of the aerodrome; and, that accomplished, he is allowed to go out alone. Even then he makes no attempt at an ascent. He has to continue these runs on the ground, which are known as rolling, until he can guide the machine in a perfectly straight line over a certain distance—perhaps some 400 or 500 yards. If he can roll properly on the ground he can control the machine in the air and can manage the rudder, and hence he is, on the next series of flights, permitted to do what he usually ardently desires—to leave the earth; but even then he is only allowed at first to skim the ground in a series of hops.

"After a certain amount of practice in skimming and hopping he is allowed to fly at a height of two feet or so, and very gradually to increase the distance from the earth until he reaches an altitude of 600 feet and can descend in two semi-circles. In the next stage he has to practice first the left-hand control and then the right, so that he knows how to make sharp turns to the left or the right and can describe the usual air test of figures of eight. Following that, he masters the true volplane—a descent with the engines out off—but at such an angle that the equivalent speed is supplied by the momentum of the fall. Once he reaches that point he is usually eligible for examination by the Royal Aero Club and for obtaining his brevet.

How It Feels.

"In flying there is practically no sensation. All the stories about it making men deaf and seasick are mere moonshine. In all my experience of the flying on this ground I have only known one man sick after a flight, and he did not put it down to the machine, but turned up the next day and went on with the lessons without any other mishap. As a matter of fact, the pilot of a flying machine feels very little sense of movement at all. He usually gets the impression that the machine is absolutely still and that it is the earth that is leaving him, not he the earth, exactly as it is the experience of a balloonist.

"In the case of a flying monoplane, a pupil, of course, has not got the advantage of the presence of the instructor on the machine, as his machine only carries a single seat. The system of instruction in flying a monoplane does not differ, however, very much from that we use in the case of teaching the management of the biplane. He still has to learn how to roll, to skim and gradually to increase the height of his ascent from two feet upward. Not many pupils come now for the monoplane, for, you know, the machine is not now in favor with the British war office, on account of recent accidents; but, no doubt, that ban will be soon removed, for monoplanes are faster than biplanes and are, therefore, in a way, essential to warfare.

"Accidents seldom occur to men when they are actually learning to fly. They will shear a sheep or two sometimes, but the majority of mishaps occur through hard landings.

"The main thing all pupils dread is the notorious right-hand turn. Experts say its difficulty is due to the gyroscopic action of the engine, and certainly it does present a certain amount of Trouble to the Beginner.

We teach the pupil to remember that the nose of an aeroplane has a tendency to lift on a right-hand turn, and that this must be checked by pushing the elevator slightly forward. Gradually he finds out for himself that, just as he masters the left-hand turn, so can he triumph over the dreaded right-hand.

"The chief enemy is the wind. No particular scientific instruction is given in this, but a pupil learns quickly to study the wind gauge, the direction of the smoke of houses, the movement of flags.

"The average number of hours taken by a pupil to learn actual flying is 50. I picked it up in 4½ hours, and, given favorable weather, I have known a pupil to learn the whole business of aviation well enough to obtain his brevet by four days' work. We fix the course for six months to cover all eventualities, but, as a rule, three months will suffice even for the most clumsy and indifferent."

The Secretary of the Royal Aero Club of the United Kingdom calculates that, in all, 3,000 or 4,000 persons are now in regular employment in England in connection with aviation. These figures include mechanics, manufacturers, pilots, instructors and pupils and the men attached to the flying departments founded by the British army and navy. The actual number of British aviators to-day is 600.

COPY ENGLISH MANNERS.

Cult in Berlin Suffers Tortures to Be "Gents."

English words and clothes is the latest cult of Berlin, Germany, who describes himself as a "gent," which he thinks is an English word. He must above all things, says the Koelnische Zeitung, be dressed "tip-top" (a favorite Anglo-German word) from head to foot.

He tortures himself into a passion for "whiskey soda" though he would really much prefer a glass of Bavarian beer. He sits for hours every evening in a "bar" enjoying strange and wonderful drinks. Of course he uses as many English words as possible. Nothing German can express what he means by "dress."

"Cutaway" is the only coat he can carry, and after the weary pleasure of the winter season, he assures you, "Oh ich bin ganz broken down." In the evening he is satisfied only with "pumps," and any one who dares to retain the old-fashioned nightshirt instead of the "pyjama" is too hopelessly old-fashioned for his acquaintance. In the West End tube if your toe is trodden on you no longer get a formal German apology, but the words "I am sorry."

EXPLORERS' LAST RECORDS

Touching Incidents of the Last Days of Some Arctic Explorers.

A peculiar and pathetic interest attaches to the last records of lost explorers, dying alone and unaided amid icy wildernesses or in the steaming depths of tropical jungles.

The diary kept by the gallant Captain Scott teems with tragic touches, but it also has its beautiful and its heroic side. No more splendid instance of magnificent self-sacrifice has been recorded than the action of the disabled Captain Oates in seeking voluntary death in the blizzard, so as not to be a burden on his surviving companions, says London Answers.

The world is the richer in the possession of facts such as these, which is why the last diaries of men dying in similar circumstances have always been ardently sought and carefully treasured.

It was, for example, in order to try and recover the papers belonging to the lost Arctic explorer, Mylius Erichsen, that Captain Mikkelsen recently spent two awful years amongst the icy solitudes of North-East Greenland. He failed in his quest, and he and his solitary companion came near to losing their own lives.

In Far Siberia.

These journals of poor Erichsen, if they are ever found, will doubtless tell a similarly stirring story to that left behind by Scott. Until then there is only one record that closely parallels it, and that is the diary left by the American De Long, who, with other survivors from the Arctic exploring ship Jeanette, perished amid the frozen wastes of North-Eastern Siberia during the winter of 1881.

De Long's diary, which was recovered, and has been published, might almost be a duplicate, in parts, of that kept by poor Scott.

Only in De Long's case the tragedy was even more appalling than in Scott's, for his party consisted of no fewer than thirteen men, and these all died from starvation and exposure. The last entry reads as follows: "140th day.—Boyd and Gertz died during the night; Mr. Collins dying."

The gallant De Long was then left with but one companion, Dr. Ambler, the medical officer to the expedition, for the deaths of the other men had been previously recorded, and doubtless the two last of the survivors died that day or the next. At all events, the journal ended abruptly at this point.

Abandoned.

By far the most dreadful tragedy of Arctic exploration was the loss of the Franklin expedition, when the whole of the officers and men of the two exploring ships, Erebus and Terror, 139 in all, perished. Curiously enough, though many relics of the ill-fated commander, Sir John Franklin, were recovered by search parties, and are now preserved in the museum attached to the Greenwich Hospital, none of his diaries or personal papers were ever found.

One single written record of the lost expedition remains to us. It is in the form of a sheet torn from a small pocket diary, and these are the words it contains: "April 25th, 1848.—Terror and Erebus were abandoned. Sir John Franklin died on June 11th, 1847, and the total loss by deaths up to this date, 9 officers and 15 men."

This precious scrap of paper was discovered in a cairn on King William's Island in the year 1858. There was no signature, but the handwriting was afterwards identified as that of Captain Fitzjames, one of Sir John's officers.

For His Country.

In the tragic history of exploration no briefer record than this exists of a disaster so appalling in its magnitude; although Burke and Wills, who first crossed Australia, left behind them only a few tattered leaves from an old pocket-book to tell the story of how they and their companions had lain down in the desert to die.

Of all the many valuable and interesting documents left behind by lost explorers, however, none can vie in importance with the last journals of David Livingstone, who died, worn out by hunger and privation, at Ilala, in Central Africa, on May 1st, 1873. These were brought down to the coast, together with his body, by his faithful black "boys," and were published in December, 1874.

They told of vast and far-reaching discoveries and explorations, undertaken under almost inconceivable conditions of hardship and privation. In fact, Livingstone literally laid down his life for his country, since to his pioneer enterprise is largely due the fact that so great a part of Africa is to-day colored red upon the map.

"SACRED LAKE OF LIFE."

Its Knowledge Jealously Guarded From Europeans.

The lives of 100,000 persons, according to popular belief, depend upon the "Sacred Lake of Life," in southern Nigeria. The first white men to look upon it are J. Amaury Talbot, a District Commissioner, and Mr. Eakins, news of whose discovery has just been received.

It was through an earlier visit to the "Lake of the Dead" that the existence of the "Lake of Life" was revealed, and one afternoon Mr. Talbot and Mr. Eakin, accompanied by Mrs. Talbot and her sister, set out to endeavor to locate it. Hitherto the knowledge of the lake had been kept a jealously guarded secret from all Europeans, and not even the natives, with the exception of the high priests, had been allowed to approach the sacred water—the dwelling place of the greatest deity of the Ibibios, whose chief town is Ikot Obo.

Access to the lake was through a sacred grove so cunningly contrived that a stranger might pass within a few yards, yet never find the holy pool. Mr. Talbot and his party found that the water was full of great fish, on the welfare of which, according to legend, depends the life of the Ibibio race. The fish were so tame that they fed from the hand of the reigning high priest, the only native human allowed to look upon the water.

It is specially sacred as the dwelling place of the most powerful deity—the Great Mother—Isu-Ma (the Face of Love), whose symbol is a holy rock facing the entrance. Near by the travellers found a second pool, in the centre of which is a palm tree, near which in the water are stationed a man, a girl and a boy, who bear the name of the goddess, as they were granted to the parents in direct answer to prayer.

It is pleasanter to admit that you have been sold than bought.

BISHOP INGRAM'S STORY.

Bishop Ingram of London was a great worker, in his ante-prelatical days, amongst the poor of Bethnal Green, and made himself very much liked and trusted by the toilers of that East End locality.

His Lordship recalls that one day, after he had been delivering an address at a hall amidst the slums, a tearful woman came to him and besought him to try to do something to reform her husband, who had lately taken to drink.

"I saw the man," says the bishop, "and induced him to join our men's club in connection with Oxford House. One of the branches of the club's work was an ambulance class, and I was pleased to learn that the man developed a great interest in this, and became one of the most regular attendants. But this was not all.

Bishop Ingram.

"One day his wife met me again in the street, and said:

"'You don't know, sir, what an alteration there is in my Jim. He never goes near a pub now, but spends all his nights at home bandaging our old cat!'"

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrhozone, Which are Breathed to the Furthest Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs, attacks the trouble at the source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailment thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure, medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and, in fact, have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief but will always cure permanently. Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolute, permanent cure, use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Signor Caruso's Fees

Signor Caruso's fees for his forthcoming appearances at Covent Garden, London, are the highest that have ever been paid to any singer in England. Caruso is now the wealthiest artist on the operatic stage. His receipts at the Metropolitan House, New York, have averaged $200,000 annually for five years. During that lucrative engagement he actually had to decline an offer of $100,000 for twenty concerts in Australia. At present his biggest contract is in respect of the National Opera House at Buenos Ayres, where he has stipulated to give twelve performances at the exceptional figure of $7,000 each.

How Diesel Oil Engine Works.

In the first experiments with the Diesel Oil Engine for railways and locomotives, of about 1,000 horsepower and weighing eighty-five tons is of the two-stroke, four-cylinder type, the cylinders being arranged in pairs at an angle of ninety degrees. The power is applied to the driving-wheels by direct gearing. Air pumps driven by an auxiliary engine provide extra power for starting and for ascending grades.

OUR LETTER FROM TORONTO

WHAT IS UPPERMOST IN THE MINDS OF THE CITIZENS.

Away From Home at Easter—A Diplomat of the First Degree—Mystery to be Cleared Up—An Active Career.

Easter, the greatest Church date in the entire year, seems to be losing in the city something of the spirit of olden times. This is merely to say that with the increase of wealth and population, worldliness is on the increase. Literally thousands of citizens make it a point of being away from home at Easter. The number of those who spend the entire winter in southern climes is on the increase. The Mediterranean or the West Indies are favorite trips, while this season for the first time Panama has been coming in for its share of business. The winter tourists do not return until Spring is well advanced and the Easter season sees an exodus to the near south, which is mounting to very large proportions. Atlantic City is a favorite resort and Easter Sunday saw hundreds of Torontonians on the promenade there, far away from church or other home duties.

Sir William's Diplomacy.

Sir William Meredith, who for the past two years has been investigating the Workmen's Compensation with a view to recommending legislation, has proved himself a diplomat of the first degree by the report which he has just presented to the Legislature. One of the chief causes of contention in connection with the Act will be as to what classes of citizens should be exempt. Sir William received much evidence on this point. For example, there is no doubt that there will be great opposition in farming communities to any enactment which will make employers liable for injuries sustained by their help. In the same way store-keepers employing perhaps only one clerk, in many cases where the chances of injury are of the slightest degree, will object vigorously at any taxation which might be imposed for the purpose of Workmen's Compensation.

Sir William has neatly side-stepped this entire controversy. He has done so by leaving the whole question of what classes are to be exempt to the discretion of the Legislature. His Act as framed applies universally, and if it went into force as it is, would apply to every employer of labor in the Province. As it is generally recognized that there must be some exemption, the whole question of what these exemptions shall be must be thrashed out by the members in the House. No doubt a great number of exemptions will be asked for and the Act will be lucky if it escapes emasculation.

As far as the controversy between the Labor Unions and the Manufacturers is concerned, Sir William seems to have been able to bring about a certain amount of agreement. On the face of it it looks as though his findings lean toward the side of the working men.

Gardening Days.

Sir William will now have more freedom than for some time to devote to his flowers and his gardening, which is the chief hobby of his life. There is probably no man in the Province who has a greater love for flowers, and his home, which stands above the Rosedale ravine, is every summer a real living home of flower life. He has made gardening a health-giving relaxation from a strenuous life. The arrangement of his grounds and flower beds is particularly pleasing. Nor is Sir William one of those gardeners who likes to let other people do the work. Like Gladstone, who sought mental relief by cutting down trees on his farm at Hawarden, Sir William always delights in the actual labor of his own hands.

The Mystery Block.

Toronto's "mystery block" still remains a mystery. Rumors have recently been revived that the Canadian Northern Railway is the owner, but these have been denied. Of the names mentioned in connection with the property only from the T. Eaton Company has there been no denial, and the impression still stands that this firm proposes, sooner or later, to move from its present location to the site bounded by Carlton, Yonge, Church and Alexander. As this would mean a tremendous dislocation of business on Yonge St., there is the keenest interest in what will happen.

The statement has been made by a man supposed to know that the mystery will be cleared up before the end of the month of May. If this is the case there will be fresh activity in Toronto real estate.

Nothing more spectacular than the mystery block has been heard of in real estate records in this country. The entire block, consisting of hundreds of small parcels of property, was bought up by agents of a real estate firm within a few weeks. That was two years ago, and who the real estate firm acted for is as much a mystery as it was then. The deal, of course, involved millions. Meanwhile, Eaton's continue to make improvements in their present premises.

Friedmann Was Pleased.

Toronto physicians are gratified that Dr. Friedmann should have given so much attention to Toronto patients, and that he was so complimentary in his remarks concerning his operations here. He said that his local clinic was the most satisfactory that he had had, this being due largely to the system of registration which prevails, and which reveals the history of each case. The patients treated are, of course, being watched with the greatest anxiety, particularly by sufferers from the disease. Local physicians continue to be unenthusiastic, but hopeful. Dr. Friedmann was greatly impressed with the cordiality shown in Toronto and other Canadian cities, particularly when contrasted with the disposition of aloofness which greeted him in New York. One story is to the effect that the reason of his cool reception in New York was the opposition of the drug trust, which, of course, finds one of its chief sources of profit in the medicines which it sells to tubercular patients. But such a story seems too diabolical for belief.

Civic Troubles.

Toronto has been having its troubles in civic financing. In round figures it takes about $10,000,000 a year to run the city, and as a great proportion of this amount is required for capital expenditures, it means that much cash has to be raised by selling bonds and debentures. The market for the last year not having been good, there is on hand an accumulation of unsold bonds, with the result that the city has been perilously close to the point of not having ready cash with which to pay current expenditures. In recent weeks small bond issues have been disposed of on more or less satisfactory terms and the situation has been temporarily relieved.

As result of this situation the Treasury Department has come in for a great deal of criticism. Unfortunately, Mr. Richard T. Coady, who has been City Treasurer for twenty-five years, and to whom the city looked to sell its bonds and keep the strong box well supplied with ready cash, has been seriously ill. It is doubtful if he will ever resume his duties, at least as actively as formerly.

Mr. Coady's Career.

Mr. Coady has felt Toronto move if any man has. He has been in the city service for 36 years, Chief Accountant in 1877, City Treasurer in 1893 and ever since. Previous to that he was a lumber merchant. He has seen eighteen mayors come and go. He has seen the city's population almost quadruple. He became Treasurer just when the fabulous boom struck Toronto, when in the late '80's, without reason, thousands packed their trunks and moved to the city from the country districts. This boom burst, and the next ten years was the least encouraging in the history of the city. But in the last decade figures have been going ahead in jumps, expenditures have more than doubled, assessments and all other figures bounding ahead in similar proportions. Mr. Coady is still the paymaster. But there are critics who think that a successor must soon be appointed. Before his illness it was charged that his department had not kept pace with the times, and was really in a chaotic condition.

Who will succeed Mr. Coady is an open question. Controller McCarthy has been showing a special interest in the Treasury Department, and it has been rumored that he will follow the example set by Mayor Geary last year and step from the Board of Control into a soft life job at a salary of some $10,000 a year. But Controller McCarthy denies absolutely that he is a candidate or that he would accept the position if offered to him.

Dr. Robert Bell and Cancer.

Dr. Robert Bell, in a paper in the London Medical Times on the therapeutics of cancer, contends that if cancer is, in the early stage, treated by the method he advocates, it is as curable a disease as any other, and that even in more advanced cases it is more amenable to therapeutics than to surgical measures. Of course, one meets with disappointments at times, but these will occur with decreasing frequency as our knowledge increases. What is wanted, he says, is an open mind and a more accurate conception of the conditions of life which, being so openly out of harmony with physiological and dietetic laws, not only open the portals to disease, but actually invites its entrance.

Lord Declines Kingdom.

Britain's new First Sea Lord has had the unusual experience of refusing the offer of a kingdom. It was just after his brother, Prince Alexander, had been driven from the throne of Bulgaria. A deputation from the revolutionists came off to Prince Louis' ship and offered him the vacant throne. The answer was curt: "Do you see the bit of bunting up there? Well, I value it more than all your petty Balkan kingdoms put together. Good morning!"

Canadian Mails all by Canadian Route

—o—

Signal success has attended the efforts of the Canadian Government to bring together by a better mail service the Mother Country and the Dominion and the announcement made in the House of Commons that Canadian steamers will handle all mail from Canada between this country and Great Britain will be welcomed by all.

There has been inaugurated by the Post Office Department working in conjunction with the Hon. George H. Perley, the acting Minister of Trade and Commerce, a tri-weekly service in summer and a bi-weekly service in winter.

The new contract is with four steamship companies, C. P. R., C. N. R., Allan Line and White Star Dominion line. These companies combined will have twelve steamers at the service of the Government in summer and eight in winter. This is all the more important as it will be remembered that there have been but four steamers in the mail service in the past and for that reason it was necessary to send a large part of the mail by New York. But now after the first of May of the present year all mail will leave by Canadian ports. Montreal and Quebec in the summer, St. John and Halifax in the winter. In order that there will be no delays in the winter season an extra boat belonging to the White Star Line will maintain the schedules.

In comparison with what has hitherto existed the new scheme in importance and cheapness, is very advantageous. To provide this new service of twelve boats the subsidies required will be $1,000,000. The cost of the service in the past was $650,000 not to mennton a sum of about $180,000 paid to the United States for mail handled in New York. Thus the actual increase of Government subsidies in relation to the extent of service to be given is comparatively small.

A glance at the type of boats which will carry the mails, shows that they are the best and fastest which are on the route between Canada and the Mother Country. But of great importance is the fact that Canada will handle her own mail and Canadian and British steamships will share in the subsidies.

The summer sailings will be on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from whatever port the steamship companies please, as long as it is a Canadian port. This will be Montreal or Quebec in summer, and the two maritime ports in the winter. The mail for England will be delivered to these ports. Mail from England will be landed in the summer at Quebec, though that portion of it destined to the Maritime Provinces will, as in the past, be landed at Rimouski. There is a clause in the contract by which the four companies undertake jointly and severally to get another ship for any which may be disabled at any time, so that there is the utmost assurance of a continuous service. A striking feature about the payment of the subsidies for the new service is the cheapness particularly of the winter service. As is well known boats run a greater risk and cost more also to run in the winter time than in summer. It would be expected that the subsidy would be increased for the winter service on that account. In fact the companies held out for an increase but the Government managed to secure the winter service at the same rate as the summer.

The million dollars which is to be provided for the sausidies will be divided into fifty-two portions for the fifty-two weeks. This weekly portion will be divided three boats in the summer, but among two in the winter, so that there will be a larger remuneration, which is necessary for the winter service. It might be necessary to increase it somewhat for another winter. The addition of the "Alsatian" and "Calgarian" to the service will add two very fast coats, so that even now with the speed which the ships could give, it is calculated that Canadsan mails could be landed in Liverpool quite as soon as if they went by the fast boats from New York. The landing ports in Great Britain will be at the option of the Companies.

American charges, which have such a burden in the past will be to a great extent in the future cut down.

For the last six years Canada has been paying to the United States a little over $180,000 a year for the mail handled at the Port of New York. This was in accordance with the regulation of the Postal Union. It is not expected to save the whole of the $180,000 this year, but there would be a large part of it saved.

The census of mail matter which is taken every six years by the Postal Union comes this May, and this will afford an opportunity for regulating the New York end. It will also afford an opportunity for regulating the apportionment of the cost of British mail for Canada. In the past the British Government has only paid $23,000 a year, and it is now intimated that there will be a change likely, as the Canadian Government think the amount paid should be $46,000. The difference of opinion arises over the question as to whether the C.P.R. boats were British couriers or Canadian couriers.

The arrangement altogether is very satisfactory for the Canadian people. It assures not only better business relations with the Mother Country but also better social relations. Letters can now pass more freely and quickly and with the large number of emigrants from England the usefulness of such a scheme cannot be gainsaid. The business relations can also be increased. When it will be remembered that during last winter a better cable arrangement was also entered into by the Government between England and Canada, it is apparent that a business government is holding the reins of power in Ottawa. Canada is developing rapidly and to keep pace with that, is the problem which the present Government is solving effectively.

BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY;

CHAPTER XVII.—(Cont'd)

On the following day his betrothal-ring was returned to him by Gertrude without one accompanying word. For some time he gazed fixedly at that little loop of gold, with its single gem shining like a star, which he had been so happy in placing upon the slender, beautiful white finger, which he believed would ere long belong to him, to love and to cherish while life lasted.

Alas! how easily life goes wrong. With slow steps he crossed over to his cabinet and locked it out of sight.

"My life has been all a mistake from beginning to end," he said to himself. "Happiness is all a fleeting delusion."

He hated the great world; he was weary of its honors, weary of life, of everything.

Ah, if Gertrude could have but stooped from her pride to have written him one word—just one word, how it would have cheered and comforted him in the dreary years he must face!

The first great battle of his life had been fought. He had parted from Gertrude, who was dearer than his own heart's blood to him. No sorrow would hurt him after that. Knowing who and what he was, he could never again prosecute another criminal or hurl at them his burning, scathing words of righteous scorn. In what was he better than they? Many of them might have had honest parents, God-fearing people, while he, who was representing and upholding the morality of the public, was the last of a long race of criminals the most daring and desperate in the country's history.

When his mind reverted to Ann Roundtree, a terrible chill would seize him, and he thought of her words:

"No matter what I am, you should stand by me, though all the world were against me."

"Before resigning my office," he thought, "I have two duties to perform—reopening the case of—of—her who shielded my name, and submitted to imprisonment rather than tell the world the truth concerning the portrait."

Try as he would, he could not bring himself to call her by the sacred name of mother.

James Van Driscoll was so greatly changed that his associates in the office were greatly troubled over him. Every one marveled as to why his marriage with beautiful haughty Gertrude Hamilton was broken off so suddenly; only his most intimate friends knew why. Gertrude was so coldly haughty, so unapproachable, that her acquaintances dared not presume to question her regarding the matter.

"We discovered, before it was too late, that we had widely different religious views," she once remarked, "and therefore agreed to break off the engagement."

This was all she could be induced to say on the subject. No one had the temerity to pursue the question further. Mr. Hamilton expressed his views concerning Van Driscoll's actions in bitter, scathing words which he certainly hoped would reach the district attorney's ears.

CHAPTER XVIII.

James Van Driscoll heard all the reports as to old Mr. Hamilton's views and opinions concerning himself and his actions without a word of comment. He realized how the Hamilton pride must be hurt; but rather that than see it dragged down into the dust in the years to come by any act of his.

Van Driscoll made up his mind that as soon as he could arrange his affairs he would go far away, take his mother with him, make a home for her, and care for her until she passed away. He would sacrifice himself upon the altar of filial duty, and endure his life from day to day the best he could.

As soon as he could control his thoughts to do so, he wrote a brief letter to Ann Roundtree, explaining briefly, but so carefully worded that he knew she would not fail to understand, that the reason he had not appeared at the trial was his sudden illness, from which he had not as yet fully recovered, and that he believed it was due her, from extenuating circumstances which had recently become known to him, to reopen her case and secure her dismissal. The answer he received perplexed him.

"You are very good to waste one thought upon me," she wrote. "I do not want to seem ungrateful for your kindness, but matters are best left as they are. I am not unhappy here; a great peace has come over me. I have time to think here and repent of all the sorrow I have been the cause of in this world. My wish to remain here will be apparent to you later on," she added, closing with the earnest assurance of her gratitude for one even sympathetic thought from him; that she hoped God would bless him, and show him peace and mercy, and that if he ever gave her one thought in the years to come he would try to think of her kindly and at her best.

The letter was blotted as though bitter tears had fallen upon it as she penned it. Van Driscoll laid it away with the ring and a dainty lace handkerchief, a great sigh falling from his lips.

"Have you seen the paper today, Mr. Van Driscoll?" he asked, in a thoughtful voice.

"No," was the reply. "Anything special in it?"

"That insurance company down on Broadway was robbed again last night, and in much the same manner as before. You were away from the office so long this morning I thought perhaps you had taken a notion to pass that way and form some sort of a theory. You know the president and cashier of the concern personally, do you not?"

"I met them at the trial of Andrew Carr, that is all. But why do you ask?"

"They are particular friends of Richard Hamilton, I understand, and have been for some time. I presumed you had met them with him. I met young Hamilton, by the way, this morning, and he was quite as nervous over his friend's second catastrophe as they could possibly be themselves."

"You say the robbery is said to have been committed in much the same manner as the former one?" asked Van Driscoll, thoughtfully.

"Yes," returned King; adding: "I think I know what is in your mind now. You are saying to yourself just what I thought when I read those words. If this is a fact, there are grave doubts in my mind concerning the guilt of poor old Andrew Carr, who they say is failing rapidly."

Van Driscoll picked up the paper and read the article carefully through from beginning to end.

"The loss is very great this time," pursued King. "They recovered the money last time, dollar for dollar, in the old photographer's gallery across the way; this time the thief has succeeded in getting away with something like ten thousand dollars in cash, leaving not a trace behind him."

The district attorney felt greatly distressed over the matter all that day, and read with much interest the evening papers containing additional facts concerning it.

There was another who with a set face and colorless lips read the whole account of the great robbery, and that was Jessy Carr.

"I knew my poor old father was innocent!" she cried out in agony, tears falling like rain down her white cheeks; and all unconsciously she echoed the words of the district attorney's assistant. "Whoever committed this robbery is responsible for the other one for which my poor father is being martyred."

Her excitement was so great that even Tekla could not soothe her.

"Don't let your mind dwell upon it, Miss Jessy," she urged. "Do something—some work, to take up your attention, and make you forget it. Where are those pictures your poor papa was taking by moonlight on that fatal night? Why don't you get them out and develop them. Surely that would take up your attention, remembering it was your father's last work."

"I think I will act upon your suggestion, Tekla," said Jessy, with a sob. "That would certainly take up my attention. If I allow my mind to dwell upon this affair, I am afraid I will be down sick; and then, looking from the window and seeing the large crowds gathering from time to time across the way, would unnerve me."

"If you had looked out about an hour ago you would have seen Mr. Frederick Lancaster, the Western drummer, passing. He came face to face with me before he saw me. I was looking at a little child across the way who had lost a penny. He was so startled I thought he would fall in a faint at my feet. I was astonished to see him turn so dreadfully pale. 'What is the matter with you?' I cried. 'Have you stolen anything, you're so frightened?' He sprung forward and grasped my arm so tight I screamed out with the pain. 'What do you mean by making such an assertion?' he fairly hissed through his tightly shut teeth. 'Don't dare say it again, or, by the heavens above us, I will not be answerable for the consequences!'

"I was terribly scared," continued Tekla; "but at that moment something happened which made me forget it. A fine gentleman, driving a handsome pair of bays, seeing Lancaster as he turned away from me on his heel, stopped short and called out to him to jump in and take a ride with him. The name he called him by was not Lancaster. It has escaped my mind for the moment, but I am sure I would know it if I heard it again.

"There, there! forgive me for mentioning that rascal's name again, Jessy dear, for I see how it is by the tears that are rushing to your eyes. You love him yet. Well, I suppose you can't help it. Love goes where it is sent, they say;" and the girl danced off merrily.

"Tekla is right," thought Jessy Carr. "I need something to take up my thoughts—something to make me forget the dull pain at my heart—the loneliness and emptiness of my life. I will find the negatives poor father was working upon on that fatal night, and print the picture."

"I am searching for those negatives, dear," called Tekla, from an inner room. "I think I have found them. Will you come and see?"

With slow steps Jessy Carr entered the apartment in which Tekla was busily at work on her knees searching through the contents of a large box.

"Ah, there they are!" exclaimed Jessy. "In my excitement at the time I knew I put them away carefully. They were misplaced since, and my search has proved fruitless."

"I was luckier than you," observed Tekla. "You know the old saying, 'That it's better to be born lucky than rich,' eh? Do you need any help?"

"No," said Jessy. "You can do what you like for an hour or so; I shall not need you."

"I think I'll take a ramble around the block. I saw that Mallon girl pass down across the way, casting sheep's eyes up this way to see if she could see anything of my Tim. She thinks she'll just about meet him around the corner returning from luncheon at this hour. If I catch him stopping to talk to that bold, pert flirt, I'll—I'll sail into them like a whirlwind—a blizzard—a cyclone—a thunder-bolt—a streak of lightning. So look out, Tim may be brought home in pieces, like the soldier who was carried off the battle-field. You've heard that story, haven't you?"

"Not that I remember," said Jessy, thoughtfully.

She Knew It.

One day a teacher was having a first grade class in physiology. She asked them if they knew that there was a burning fire in the body all of the time. One little girl spoke up and said:

"Yes'em, when it is a cold day I can see the smoke."

FRENCH FORCES TO RIVAL THE GERMAN ARMY.

Proposed Return to Three Years Military Service Only Opportunity.

The reasons for the proposed return in France to the three years military service, which was abandoned in 1905, is best seen in an article in France Militaire which shows conclusively how and only how France can hope to equal the growth of the German army.

The German army now numbers 720,000 men, says this publication, and in 1913 it will be increased to about 800,000 men. But to study the two forces it is better to take a fixed date, such as December 31, 1912, and see just how both armies stood on that date. The German army then amounted to the same number as it does now, or 720,000 men, divided as follows: 544,000 common soldiers, 14,000 volunteers for one year, 95,000 under officers, 30,000 officers and 40,000 officers and other men belonging to the administrative body.

The French Army,

on December 31, 1912, including 70,000 men in Algeria and Tunis, numbered 595,000 men. It was composed as follows: 485,000 common soldiers, 29,000 officers, 42,000 under officers and 39,000 men in the auxiliary service.

One year hence, or on December 31, 1913, the German army, says France Militaire, will number about 800,000 men, while the French army, without changing the existing recruiting law, would number 601,000 men. But if the service of three years, as proposed, is re-established France will have at the end of the present year 780,000 men under arms, or within 20,000 of the German figure. These figures show conclusively, argues the journal, that the re-establishment of the three years military service is an absolute necessity if France wishes to keep pace with the other nations of Europe, particularly with her mortal enemy, Germany.

In this connection it is interesting to note the interview with Marshal Von der Goltz, the German instructor of the Turkish army, which a correspondent of the Journal at Berlin secured:

"I admit," said the Marshal, "that I do not understand the agitation in France. From a military point of view your country occupies an exceptional position. One forgets too easily that in Germany we have to face two frontiers, the French on the west and your Slav friends on the east."

The Marshal was asked what he thought of the three years military service and he replied:

Poor Soldiers Not Wanted.

"I consider it a necessity for the cavalry, artillery and engineering corps. In the last named branch of the army much careful instruction is necessary. The principle today is not an enormous quantity of soldiers, but well trained men. The more poor soldiers you have the more useless mouths you will have to feed and the slower will your army move.

"I see no reason for the ill feeling that France holds toward Germany. France won some battles from us and we took our revenge. There is no reason why ill-feeling should exist through the centuries. We have no designs on France, but instead are desirous of an increasing friendship. I see no new war and I hope that our children will see none. There are some who shrug their shoulders when the increase of armaments is discussed as a guarantee of the peace of Europe, but the nations are only acting naturally.

"There must be some very strong motives to cause two strong nations to begin hostilities against each other, and I see no such motives. A war in Europe would be a war in which every nation of Europe would be involved, and I repeat we will not see that."

A TRAGEDY OF THE CLIFFS.

Two Young Lads Had a Terrible Experience.

In moments of reflection we can usually recollect some milestone that marked a turning-point in our life. This crisis in the life of a person is rarely so tragic, however, as that described by Mr. James O. Fagan in his autobiography, which lately appeared in the Atlantic Monthly.

My particular companion was a little lad about my own age, the son of the village miller, whose mill was a short distance from the village, on the edge of a noted rabbit-warren called "The Dens." Alec was an even more inveterate poacher than I, and nearly as good a crag-climber. The alliance between us was both offensive and defensive in every particular. We were inseparable. Whenever I went astray, and was wanted for anything, I was always to be found in the vicinity of the mill.

In front of the building and, if I am not mistaken, rising sheer from the roadway in front of it, the crags spread out to right and left. The bald surface of these perpendicular sheets of clay was divided at intervals by crevices and ravines running vertically from top to bottom. Here and there on the face of these parapets there were a number of ledges, running horizontally across the surface. In nearly all of these ledges there were deep holes, burrowed by the rabbits. They were the breeding-places of the rabbits and of numerous jackdaws, the natural prey of the village boys. One ledge, or shelf, was the despair of every boy in the village. It was simply inaccessible. It seemed as if every rabbit we chased out of The Dens invariably ran across the face of the cliff and took refuge on that shelf.

One day Alec and I determined to scale that crag or break our necks in th eattempt. We must have deliberately planned the expedition in advance. We started from the mill one morning just before dawn. We provided ourselves with knives and a stout rope. Without much difficulty we scrambled up one of the ravines that divided the cliff into sections. When the run rose, we were probably about two hundred feet from the base of the cliff, and on a leved with the coveted ledge. To reach it, however, it was necessary to cut a firm pathway, inch by inch, with our knives, for a distance of fifty feet across an almost perpendicular parapet. As a guide to our work there was already a faint track made by the rabbits. Along this line, footstep after footstep, we dug our perilous way, until we had made about half the distance in safety. I was three or four yards ahead of my companion. Then, suddenly, like a flash, Alec's foothold gave way and down he went. In falling, he shouted my name.

I do not need to draw on my imagination to picture my predicament or to describe my state of mind. I am there again this minute. For a second or two I was rigid with terror. To turn back was impossible, and I could not look down. I simply drove my knife up to the hilt in the crag and held on. Then, after an unnoticed interval, the sound of shouts from below came up to me. They seemed to wake me out of my trance.

Meanwhile in some unaccountable way, determination had taken the place of fear. I have always looked back upon these moments as the time when my personality first emerged into real consciousness. I whispered to myself one word—"Courage!" Then I went on with my work, cutting out the path to the ledge. It was a mechanical process. I did not seem to know what I was doing. I reached the goal, and returned by the way I had come.

At the foot of the hill a crowd was awaiting me. I did not ask any questions. I knew from the silence that Alec was dead. Half the village accompanied me to my home. My father was away. I was locked in the cellar for safe-keeping. Toward evening, to my surprise, I was liberated, and given a good meal, but for several days I was in disgrace, or thought I was.

CAN LAUGH AT LIFE'S MINOR ILLS

SINCE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER KIDNEY DISEASE.

New Brunswick Woman Tells How She Was Rescued from Ill Health by the Twin Remedies, Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Neguac, Allain P. O., N. B., Mar. 24 (Special).—Mrs. Joseph G. Savoy, a well-known resident of this place, whose ill-health has been a matter of much concern to her friends, is telling of the cure she found for all her troubles in Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

"My health is fine now," Mrs. Savoy says, in an interview. "The pains are gone from my side and back, and when I go to bed I can sleep. Before I started using Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets I could not eat anything heavy, such as meat, but now I can eat practically what I please with no ill effects."

Mrs. Savoy was in a generally run-down condition, and her cure came about by using the natural remedies. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured and invigorated her kidneys, thus purifying her blood and improving the circulation.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets insured proper digestion of her food, thus furnishing the body with the nutrition it required. Women with healthy kidneys and sound digestion can afford to laugh at the minor ills of life.

MR. BIRRELL'S WIT.

Many are the stories told of Rt. Hon. Mr. Birrell. His wit is irrepressible. When things were going badly with his Education bill, he met a bishop, who said to him, "I am afraid your bill is dead." "Yes, it may be, my lord," was Mr. Birrell's answer, "but I believe in the resurrection of the dead." At the time when the Crown jewels had been stolen from Dublin Castle, the visit of King Edward to Ireland was nearly due, and it was part of Rt. Hon. Augustine Birrell.

Mr. Birrell's duty, as Irish Secretary, to walk backwards as the King advanced, and to carry the big sword of state. Walking backwards is not one of Mr. Birrell's accomplishments, and he looked forward to the occasion with peculiar emotion. When, therefore, the horror-stricken officials announced the disappearance of the regalia, Mr. Birrell replied, "Good heavens; I hope they remembered the sword."

THE KNOW HOW

To Feed Children and Get Good Results.

There are more nervous persons made so by undigested food lying in the stomach than the average individual would suppose.

If food remains undigested in the stomach, it begins to ferment, set up gas and a large portion is thus converted into poison.

That's why imperfectly digested food may, and often does, cause irritation of the nerves and stupor of the mind—brain and nerves are really poisoned.

"My daughter had complained for some time of a distressed feeling in the stomach, after eating, which set me thinking that her diet was not right," writes an anxious and intelligent mother.

"She had been fond of cereals, but had never tried Grape-Nuts. From reading the account of this predigested food, it seemed reasonable to try Grape-Nuts for her case.

"The results were really wonderful. The little brain that seemed at times unable to do its work, took on new life and vigor. Every morning, now, before going to school, she eats the crisp little morsels and is now completely and entirely well, she seems to have a new lease on life—no more distress in the stomach, nor headache, but sound and well everyway." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

"There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Lawless River Population.

The river population of Canton, China, and vicinity is computed at 500,000. Rapid breeding and constant recruiting from the pirates of the West River further up keep pace with the high death rate. They have no schooling, no religion, no morals, no hope. Until three years ago not even Christian missionaries noticed them and their efforts today lacking adequate support from the homeland, are like throwing bird-shot against Gibraltar. These river rats are of necessity piratical and lawless. A body floating unnoticed and uncared for down the stream some bright morning tells the tale of a fight or treachery the night before or perhaps days ago.

Anaemic Mothers Here Is Relief!

Sufferer of Twenty Years States Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a Real Cure.

"I can't remember any time during the past twenty years when my heart wasn't aching. If I bent over, dark specks would come before my eyes, and it seemed as if all the blood in my body wanted to rush to my head." Thus opens the letter of Mrs. Enoch S. Spry, of Putnam P.O., and continuing her interesting statement she says: "Work or exertion made my heart beat terrible, and going upstairs caused such shortness of breath that it fairly frightened me. I tell you how I feel to-day and you can understand what a great cure Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made. I feel strong enough now to work like a man, as for going up stairs on the run, it doesn't bother me at all. I eat and sleep as any well person ought, and as for dizziness which used to frighten me so much, it has entirely disappeared. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a wonderful medicine. They helped me, and I know every woman that uses them will have comfort and good health. Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c. per box at druggists and storekeepers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. HOTELS PROTECT GUESTS.

Their Operation Entails Strict Attention to Details.

In a modern hotel properly operated there are scores of specialists employed for the sole purpose of protecting the health, property and lives of the guests. The personal safety of the guest in the room is carefully considered. Each floor is operated as if it were a separate hotel. The floor is in charge of a woman clerk, and it is so organized that all the details of the guest's personal requirements have immediate and satisfactory attention.

No one can step on to the floor by way of either the elevator or the stairs without being seen by the clerk. Any one desiring to call upon a guest must first obtain from the floor clerk the information whether or not the guest is in and wishes to see him. A record is kept of every access to guests' rooms. The employees whose duties require them to enter the rooms are before employment thoroughly and carefully investigated. Each one is well recommended and furnishes a bond.

The precautions taken to protect gainst fire are most thorough. The men who run the elevators and the engineers who operate the power plant are selected with special regard to their sobriety, reliability, honesty and stability.

The chief engineer of a great modern hotel ranks very high in his profession. The power plant and elevator system are so carefully supervised as to make it almost impossible for an accident to occur. Each elevator is inspected every night by competent experts, and no elevator which is not in absolutely perfect condition to operate is allowed to remain in service.

PIMPLES ITCHED AND BURNED

On Arms and Legs. Caused Running Sores. Would Tear Himself Till They Bled. Like Open Wounds. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

03 Stewart St., Toronto, Ontario.—"When my baby was nine months old he had a lot of pimples come on his arms and legs which used to come to a head, then break and cause running sores. They were bright red spots, which itched and burned so badly that he would tear himself till he made them bleed and they were all like open wounds. They were on his face and arms so bad that I did not like to take him out. He could not sleep or rest anywhere. I tried several things at home and lots of different things people used to advise me, but he did not get a bit better.

"I bathed each place in warm water and Cuticura Soap and then I put some of the Cuticura Ointment on and bound them up in soft rags and he slept better that night than he had for three weeks, and he did not scratch himself once that night. I did that for three days, night and morning, when we noticed the sores were getting drier and healing, so I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment, and after a week and a few days there was not a blemish on him." (Signed) Mrs. F West, Feb. 20, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 39D, Boston, U. S. A.

PRODUCES CANCER IN RATS.

Prof. Fibiger Develops Parasite From Cockroach Eggs.

Prof. Johannes Fibiger, director of the Pathological Institute of Copenhagen, has communicated some results of cancer research to the Klinische Wochenschrift.

Prof. Fibiger found that tumorous affections in the stomach and oesophagus of rats were associated with a particular species of worm, which develops from the egg to the larva stage in the bodies of cockroaches. He fed healthy cockroaches with the eggs of these worms, and then healthy rats with the infected cockroaches, with the result that the rodents developed tumors of an unmistakably cancerous type. Thus he asserts he has demonstrated for the first time that cancer can be produced at any rate in rats and mice by the operation of these parasites.

The German medical world is very reserved in its opinions as to the importance of this discovery, past experience with the claims of cancer investigators having rendered it very sceptical.

YOUR BABY'S SKIN

Is the most delicate fabric in the world. You may cause it permanent harm by using poisonous mineral ointments for the little rashes and eruptions that every baby suffers from occasionally. Don't take any chances. Use Zam-Buk, the baby's best balm.

Zam-Buk is made from fine herbal extracts, and is free from any harmful poisonous coloring matter. Like the grasses and the flowers, nature has colored it green. It is nature's own healer!

Not As Other Men.

It is a great misfortune to anyone to conceive and cherish the idea that he is not as other men are—that he is of finer clay and of superior order of nature, and requires certain dispensations of life and a particular ordering of events in relation to himself to enable him to endure this mortal pilgrimage at all. It is a misfortune, first, because it is difficult to provide a sufficient number of persons of this conviction to ensure the desired comfort of his life; and, secondly, because, if a large proportion, or even all with whom he comes in contact, were so persuaded, it would so isolate him in an atmosphere of selfishness that his better nature would be absolutely stifled and dwarfed, and in time killed—if that immortal part of us which is our better nature can die.

Could Afford It.

"My dear, my salary has been raised."

"Good. Now I can start in being extravagant."

WOMEN LIVE LONGER.

Do Not Expend Their Vital Strength Unnecessarily.

Statistics prove that women live longer than men. From this point arises an extremely interesting physiological question—how is it to be accounted for that the sex which always has been considered physically frailer than men should in the majority of instances outlive men?

If we are to believe the latest authorities on the subject, we find that women are much more tenacious of life and resist disease much more readily than the average man. She is in many respects the superior of the two.

As a rule, she does not expend her vital strength unnecessarily, while the majority of men either in work, in play, or in pleasure, are literally prodigal of their store.

A writer has turned out some instructive comparative figures with regard to the liability of men and women to disease and death. He says from 3 to 35 years of age the death rate between the sexes remains about even, but afterwards the scale turns in favor of women. At 40 a woman has seventy-eight chances to one against dying, while man has only forty-nine chances to one. At 60 the odds are nearly twice as large in favor of woman, and at 80 they are five times as great.

To Ease Tight Chest And Cure a Cold Rub On Nerviline

No Remedy Half So Efficient.

"I didn't have to suffer long with a sore, wheezy chest. I had a mighty bad cold—it held me like a vise, but I knew what to do..... I took half a teaspoonful of Nerviline in hot water and rubbed my neck and chest every half hour during the evening. You would hardly credit the way Nerviline loosed up that tight chest, enabled me to breathe like a free man, gave me comfort in a few hours."

This is the experience of J. P. Durand, a well known resident of Burton's Corners. In thousands of homes Nerviline is used every day. If a little child has a sick stomach, just a few drops will suffice. If there is any bowel disorder or diarrhoea, only a small dose is required. Inwardly or outwardly, wherever there is pain or inflammation, Nerviline will always relieve quickest and cure surest of any remedy known. ICEBERG LIKE A RAPIER.

Usually the whole submerged part of an iceberg remains constantly surrounded with cold water and thus melts uniformly and slowly.

This, however, is the case only with the lower surface and the parts of the side walls that are quite deeply sunk. The parts just below the surface undergo usually a more intense fusion than the rest. This results from a more rapid renewal of the chilled water, produced by the agitation due to waves and to surface currents.

At this stage the berg seems to reach out under the sea and rip open the hull of a ship as with a rapier.

Simple friction against the submerged part of such an iceberg may, almost without shock, produce long tears in the relatively thin hulls of large vessels. The loss of the Titanic is perhaps due to an accident of this kind.

Old Coins Broken.

They had an ingenious plan for meeting a shortage of small change in the old days before copper coins existed. Until the reign of Edward I. the silver penny was the smallest coin minted in England, to the great inconvenience of the small purchaser of the period. But the difficulty was to some extent got over by the issue of pennies indented with a deep cross. The coin could then be broken into halfpennies and farthings. Our first real copper coinage only dates from 1672, and until the time of Edward VI., farthings of silver were coined, growing smaller and smaller as the value of silver increased.—London Chronicle.

Chinese officials have been instructed to attend such services. It is requested that all the Churches of all denominations in Canada, unite with their fellow-Christians and the Missionaries in China, in observing Sunday, April 27th, the day named by the Chinese Government in its appeal as a day of special intercession. This is a union of the Spirit. May the Master Himself teach the Church to pray in this supreme moment.

OUR LETTER FROM TORONTO

The Rector of St. Paul's Church—A Canadian Northern Town—Ontario Boy Makes Good—Tight Money.

When a man can achieve a salary of $8,000 a year merely for preaching, it goes without saying that he has gifts that are out of the ordinary. Such a man is Archdeacon H. J. Cody, Rector of St. Paul's Church, Bloor St., Toronto. The $8,000 salary is, in his case, a reality. Previous to the annual business meeting of the church the other day it was $6,000, but recognising the great value of his work and the church being one of the wealthiest in Toronto, an increase of $2,000 a year was made with great unanimity and enthusiasm. As indicating the wealth of the congregation it may be pointed out that their income for the year amounted to over $73,000 of which more than $20,000 was devoted to Mission work.

When Archdeacon Cody began his connection with St. Paul's Church as evening preacher, several years ago, St. Paul's was a comparatively small institution, with a small church edifice and of very modest pretensions in every way. At that time Mr. Cody had just graduated, and was lecturing at Wycliffe College on Church history. It was not until fourteen years ago, in 1899, that Mr. Cody became rector of the Church. Since that date St. Paul's has grown to be one of the most active and biggest church organisations in the whole country. A magnificent new church has been erected at a cost of $290,000 for building alone, and an organ is being installed which will be the finest in Canada. The organ is being furnished by Mrs. Blackstock as a memorial to her husband, the late G. T. Blackstock. The new St. Paul's is not yet occupied, but, after many delays, is now promised for October 1st next. When finished it will be a monument to Archdeacon Cody's many abilities.

Belongs to Low Churchmen.

Perhaps the most prominent supporter Mr. Cody has at St. Paul's is Honorable S. H. Blake. He has been generous in his money contributions, but Mr. Blake's chief support lies in moral qualities. His combative abilities are well known, and he has done a great deal to make St. Paul's the militant force that it is. At Synod meetings Mr. Blake's appearance is always the signal for an increased interest, and, it may be, for dread on the part of those who may possibly fall foul of him.

Being a Wycliffe man, and having his right-hand supporter such a pronounced churchman as Mr. Blake, it can be surmised that Archdeacon Cody is far removed from the Ritualist section of the Anglican Church. So pronounced are his views and so strong is the cleavage on this point that, despite his outstanding abilities, it was impossible for him to be elected to the position of Bishop of Toronto when the seat fell vacant about five years ago, and the present Bishop elected on that occasion owes his position to a compromise between the contending forces. However, Archdeacon Cody needs no Bishopric to add to his laurels. He is, perhaps, more highly regarded than he would be in the more exalted position.

His Wide Activities.

The Archdeacon is still a young man, scarcely more than turned forty, and can look forward in the ordinary course of events to many years of useful activity and many honors. He is a distinctly Ontario product. The village of Embro in North Oxford may claim him as his own. At the University of Toronto he had a brilliant record, and for a time after graduation served as Classical Master at Ridley College, St. Catharines. It was while at his work there that he gradually came to the conclusion that the field of work in which he could do the greatest good was that of the Church. His decision has been amply justified. Though a Churchman, his activities are unusually widespread. He has taken the keenest interest in the Canadian Club movement and is in constant demand as a speaker. The trend of his mind is indicated by the subject chosen for his address before the Toronto Canadian Club the other day, namely, "The Test of a True Democracy."

Mr. Cody's congregation is itself extraordinary in representing diverse interests. It contains men of prominence in every walk of life and furnishes a representative cross-section of the community. He is revered by all who come under the influence of his preaching. The secret of his attraction probably lies in his sincerity and mental vigor. Cynics and unbelievers cannot listen to him very long. He makes them ashamed or converts them.

Taking In Leaside.

The latest controversy in civic affairs has been over the question of whether the "paper" town of Leaside is to be annexed to the city or not, the question being as to whether Leaside would be taken in or whether Toronto would be "took in."

Leaside is a Canadian Northern town site touching the borders of the corporation of Toronto on its extreme north-eastern limit. It consists at the moment of farm lands in their pure and undisturbed state. The site is a vast one, containing some 1,200 acres, and the Canadian Northern declare they propose to establish their shops there, employing perhaps thousands of men, and this, with their families and the supporting population that will be required, will, it is expected, establish a centre of population of perhaps 25,000 or 30,000 people. But this is all for the future. Meanwhile the first step taken by the Canadian Northern Railway was to ask the city to annex this vacant tract of land.

What the interests allied with the Canadian Northern Railway probably had in mind was to place the city under the obligation of furnishing civic services such as sewers, sidewalks, streets, water, etc., to the district. This would, of course, relieve the present owners of the town site of a tremendous responsibility. It is stated that annexation, carrying with it as it does the obligation to supply services immediately, adds several dollars a foot value to vacant property, and on this basis the annexation of Leaside would mean several million dollars immediate value to the property of the present owners, who are headed by Sir Donald Mann of the Canadian Northern Railway and Colonel Davidson, who has been intimately associated with the Canadian Northern interests for a number of years.

On the other hand, there are, of course, undoubted advantages to the city in having Leaside annexed at once. In this way only can the city obtain control over franchises and other matters which would be quickly complicated if left to an independent corporation.

An Ontario Boy Out West.

Mr. Arthur Meighen, M.P., an Ontario boy who has made good in the West, has been returning to his haunts of olden days in the role of a legislator and moulder of public opinion. Twenty years ago Arthur Meighen was a school boy in St. Mary's, Perth county. He is now recognized as one of the permanent men of Western Canada, Portage La Prairie being the town where as a barrister and citizen he made his reputation. While Mr. Meighen has been discussing the Navy with considerable effectiveness and brilliancy, it is doubtful if he is as happy now that his party is in power as he was when in opposition. Mr. Meighen has been described as more of a destructive than a constructive debater. Besides, as a representative of the West he has pretty radical views on some subjects, but as a ministerialist he has to recognize his responsibilities. He may not, as he did in the olden days, "rock the boat." He used to advocate duty free agricultural implements and other advanced views, and he will no doubt be heard from again. He has been described as the Parliamentary double of Honorable G. E. Foster, with the same ready tongue, the same caustic style, the same keen relish of combat.

Tight Money Continues.

There is some revival of [illegible] talk of impending reaction in [illegible] business world, but it is probable [illegible] this very talk, continuing for several months, that is keeping [illegible] reversion to duller times. Everybody exercising some caution has no doubt had a decided tendency to keep the situation in hand. If nobody had been on guard there might have been a disaster before this. Financial men do not hesitate to say that there must be a readjustment of real estate values. This dictum, however, the real estate men generally do not accept and can put up a strong argument on behalf of the contention.

The cloud on the horizon continues to be tight money. Tight money in the Autumn is no unusual thing, but it generally eases up early in the new year. So far there has been little easing up this year. If it does not ease up soon there can not help but be some retrenchment or, perhaps, more accurately, a lessening of the pace.

It has frequently been remarked that in 1907 no city on the continent felt the pinch as little as Toronto, largely on account of the new riches flowing into the city from Cobalt mining camp. It is significant that now a new mining camp is just on the eve of its producing stage. One mine in Porcupine is now producing gold at the rate of $70,000 a week, which figures out to a total of over $3,500,000 a year. There are, of course, not many mines like this.

AT GRIPS WITH A LION.

A Hunter's Exciting Experience With the King of Beasts.

If you come suddenly face to face with a lion at ten paces, or pass in the tall grass within a few yards of a hidden lioness and her cubs, the chances are that you must either kill or be killed, declares Mr. E. B. Bronson, the author of "In Closed Territory." Not many hunters are killed outright by lions in these days of high-power rifles, but if a lion mauls you with his carrion-tearing teeth or claws, nothing except immediate and thorough disinfection of the wounds can prevent blood-poisoning.

One morning Geoffrey Charles Buxton left camp at dawn with his Somali shikari. When not more than half an hour out from camp, he saw a big black mane about a hundred yards away, leisurely retiring before him. Buxton raced in pursuit until he came within fifty yards of the lion, and then, somewhat winded, halted for a shot. At the same moment the lion stopped and turned. His tail began to lash angrily from side to side, his head was raised, and his eyes blazed angrily.

With a steady aim, Buxton sent a heavy ball crashing into his quarry, and dropped him quivering in the grass. If Buxton had left him, the lion would have been dead in fifteen minutes, but, although he knew he had given a mortal wound, Buxton fired again. He could see little of the recumbent body, and missed. The shot, however, roused the dying lion to action; he rose and charged. In another instant the huntsman and his quarry were at death-grips.

Buxton was sure that the lion was carrying his death-wound, and that he needed only to save himself for a few moments. Above all, he must keep his feet and hold the lion off. So, as the lion came on, Buxton rammed his empty rifle-barrel into the open jaws until three-fourths its length had passed down the animal's throat.

There followed a struggle unparalleled, I believe, in the history of lion-hunting. They swayed and struggled, while the beast's claws tore the flesh of the man's arms and legs to ribbons. Just as Buxton was near going down in sheer exhaustion, help came from the Somali shikari.

The shikari had been trying all this time to shoot the lion with the spare Mauser, but could not discharge it. The gun had been set at "safe," and in his excitement the Somali failed to discover what the trouble was.

At length, in the very nick of time, the Somali dropped the gun and literally sprang upon the lion's back. Then he began to pound the beast so vigorously with his fists that it whirled about to reach him, and man and beast went to earth together, the Somali beneath the lion, and the Mauser rifle beneath the Somali.

Thus released, Buxton painfully rose, gingerly pulled the Mauser free, and with it blew the lion's brains out.

Doctor Hall, the resident physician of Juja Farm, got to Buxton just in time to save his life. With iron nerve, Buxton had cauterized his thirteen deep wounds with pure crystals of permanganate of potash, and so prevented septicemia from adding to the peril that he suffered from his loss of blood.

A BURIED FOREST.

Vast Area of Immense Size Near Auckland, New Zealand.

Recovery and use of buried timber is no new thing under the sun. For hundreds of years the wood of buried and submerged trees has been recovered and worked among the Swiss Alps and many an English farmer of the western counties can point with pride to an old cabinet or carved four-poster of black bog-oak. But it may be doubted, declares Mr. D. W. O. Fagan in Chambers's Journal, if anywhere else in the world there is so vast an area of buried timber of immense size as in the Papakura valley, near Auckland, New Zealand.

Beneath the surface of peat, where the soil has shrunk in drying or has been blown away, the trunks of innumerable kauri trees lie exposed to view. For centuries they have been covered by the semi-liquid peat until their branches and crowns have decayed and disappeared. Nothing but the solid heart-wood of the mighty trunks remain, and these lie in orderly swaths almost as regular as wheat stalks on a newly-reaped field. The thousand heads point all in one direction, as if the forest had fallen under the sickle of some giant reaper.

Like the branches and crowns, the soft sap-wood that once surrounded the solid heart-wood of the living trees has long since disappeared; so in estimating the original size we must make a considerable addition to the present measurements. Many of the logs to-day show a girth of over sixty feet, and a length of eighty or ninety feet of straight timber free from knot or branch.

Everywhere about the swamp there are excavations where workmen are uncovering the timber. They scoop pits in the peat on each side of the trunk for the sawers to work in. The men wield huge cross-cut saws, and cut the tree into shorter lengths for the mill. Then the grips of a "forest devil" are attached to one end of the sections. There is a rattle and clank of machinery, a groan and strain of pulleys, a coughing roar of steam, and the great log is torn from its bed of centuries, swung up on a trolley, and hauled away on its last journey to the saw-benches.

The cut timber is perfectly sound and of excellent quality. It differs from the kauri timber that is cut from the living tree only in its color, which is a dark reddish-brown, like mahogany.

The peat is full of fossil gum shed through countless centuries by the trees that are now being cut. The value of resin makes another industry profitable—the recovery of the fossil gum. In some parts of the swamp area as many as five successive layers of gum have been found.

New Alphabet for China.

Suggestions for a new alphabet have been called for by the Chinese republic with the intention of adopting the one which is best. What is wanted are "signs which are simple in form, as few as possible, and adequate to express all the various sounds commonly used in the principal Chinese dialects." A conference of learned mandarins was recently called by the minister of education to work out the alphabet, but the scholars finally agreed that they could not solve the problem alone, and made the recommendation for a public competition.

WHEN MOVING TIME COMES

TOWNS AND CITIES THAT HAVE CHANGED SITES.

Reasons for Flitting Were Varied, But the Change Was For the Best.

Once a site has been chosen and a town built, it is a large order to remove it, and the expense is naturally enormous. Still, there are times when such a step is absolutely necessary, and the question of expense cannot be considered.

Take Delhi, for instance. Delhi is the ancient capital of India, and after the great Coronation Durbar it was announced that the seat of British Government would be removed thither from Calcutta.

Calcutta is not a particularly healthy place, but Delhi is a deal worse. It stands on the banks of the Jumna River, and the ground is little better than a swamp. For years past the place has never been free from plague and cholera.

A Capital Change.

Engineers, doctors, and architects all agree that it is at present no fit place for the Viceregal Court, and it has been practically decided to build a new Delhi three miles away, on higher, drier ground. A railway will connect the old site and the new, and in the long run it is certain that the new Delhi will drain the old of most of its quarter of a million inhabitants.

Here in the old country we are happily spared the necessity of shifting our cities in this hurried fashion, says London Answers. Now and then the sea invades an east-coast town—Dunwich is one notable instance. Old Dunwich, with its fifty-two churches, its bishop's palace, its massive walls and gates of solid brass, is no more, and the present village of Dunwich lies inland on the landward side of the cliffs, where they dip towards the Fens.

The only important English town which has been shifted within historic times is Salisbury. Old Salisbury, better known as Old Sarum, stood a mile or more away to the north, and had its own cathedral, as fine almost as the present one. It was chiefly lack of water that drove the inhabitants away and caused them to build the present cathedral and city.

It was, on the other hand, too much water that forced the people of Danneberg, in Hanover, to abandon the old site and build a new town. The River Jetze flooded every winter, and the inhabitants at last got tired of living under water.

From Shoshong to Palapye.

The very name of Shoshong is almost forgotten. Yet only twenty years ago it was the bigest town in British Bechuanaland. Water ran out, and the three thousand inhabitants moved as one man to Palapye, seventy-five miles away, and there built a new abiding place.

Twelve years ago the oil fields on the Black Sea were devastated by a fearful earthquake. Schemacha was in the very worst of it. This big and important town was almost destroyed, for fire broke out, and two hundred men working day and night could not extinguish the flames.

Huge fissures appeared in the ground which cast out hot mud and steam. Thousands of dead were burnt in the ruins, and when the earth tremors ceased it was decided that the town could not be rebuilt on the same spot. A new site two miles away was chosen, and the new Schemacha has since become a yet finer city than the old.

GROOMLESS WEDDINGS.

Bride in Holland; Groom in South Africa; Glove as Proxy.

If your sweetheart were a thousand miles away and you didn't see any possibility of his coming to you for some time and yet you did want to marry him right away—well, if you were in Holland you could be married anyway, in spite of the distance, for the Dutch law marries people when they are separated the same as when they are "side by each" in the church.

The "glove" ceremony is used, and while the contracting parties may not be quite as overjoyed at the affair as if their proximity were closer, they are just as truly married.

Not long ago a man in South Africa was forced to remain there for some time on business, was married in this way to a woman in Holland. She wanted to go to South Africa to join him, but her parents would not consent unless she were first married. So the "glove" ceremony was performed.

The bridegroom sent his glove to his best friend in Holland, and at the crucial moment it was held both by the bride and the proxy. And the wedding was duly registered both in Holland and in South Africa.

It seems that this long-distance marriage is purely a Dutch institution, having originated in the old days of the Dutch-Bavarian rule.

Offensive Breath Caused Usually By Catarrh

A Simple Remedy Discovered That Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat Catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs, so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. It's rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

I endorse Catarrhozone because I knew of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a reliable remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedy because it goes sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headache, bad breath, and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." (Signed) E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months, price $1.00; small size, 50c.; trial size, 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

"HIS DOG"

The dog had followed Owen Ridley up to the bedroom, and when he turned from the dressing-table he saw that the big Newfoundland was spread out luxuriously on the earthrug.

"You've no business here, you know, Ruff," he remonstrated, in a tired voice.

Glancing at the clock he noticed that it was earlier than he had thought. He pulled up an armchair.

"You can tell I'm in trouble, can't you?"

He stroked the dog's ear, staring into the fire.

He was glad, in a way, that he had sent his wife to some relations for a fortnight. He knew that lately he had been depressed and irritable, foreseeing the catastrophe ahead. She was returning that night, however, and he would have to break the news.

How Vera would take it he could not guess exactly. He hoped that she would spare him reproaches, for it was through no fault of his own that he was to lose his situation with Danehurst's. He would have to thank Kenneth Frome for that.

Frome had always disliked and rivalled him. When Ridley first made Vera Thornhill's acquaintance, Frome had displayed jealousy. He was penniless then, and unable to support a wife. Ridley remembered his outburst on hearing of their engagement.

"You've persuaded her with your money! She'd have waited for me otherwise. She's only marrying you because her people are poor. She doesn't love you, Ridley, and she never will! But I'll pay you out one day!"

Frome's insinuation was well founded; he realized that now. Although he had been happy enough with Vera during the few months of their life together, he admitted to himself that he had never understood her. One thing was obvious—their marriage had not turned out quite the success he had hoped for. Doubtless she still thought of her other suitor.

She had known genteel poverty all her life, and had been afraid to face more of it with Kenneth Frome. Now she regretted this.

The irony of Fate, too, had made Frome prosper. With an unexpected legacy, he had joined a rival firm, which was now amalgamating with Danehurst & Co. The staff would consequently be reduced. Ridley knew that he would have to go.

On the previous day he had encountered Frome at the office.

"So our positions are reversed!" A triumphant smile had accompanied the words. "I suppose you imagined your job here was permanent—eh?"

His meaning was apparent. He would use his influence to have Ridley included in the list of those to be discharged.

Soon his search for work must begin. He knew how hard it was to find fresh occupation of any sort, especially at the salary he had been obtaining. It might take months, and he had saved very little.

Ridley smoothed his pet's rough coat. Somehow, it comforted him to speak to the dog.

Always fond of animals, he was attached to the Newfoundland for a special reason. It had saved his life that Easter, when he had incautiously bathed alone in a rough sea. Seized with cramp, and carried away by the current, he had shouted despairingly.

Once again he recollected his joyful relief on seeing the dog approach. Clinging to its collar, he had reached shallow water again.

Now his voice shook a little as he patted its head.

"You love me, old boy, if nobody else does."

Presently he got up. There was time for an hour's billiards at his club before Vera returned. Perhaps the game would occupy his mind.

"I'll leave you here, Ruff." The dog was asleep. "Better shut you in, though, else you'll prowl all over the house."

. . . . . .

A gesticulating group covered the pavement near his gate, he noticed when he turned the street corner on his return. He wondered idly what could be their reason for staring up towards the roofs.

As he drew nearer a presentiment made him quicken his pace. Reaching the spot, he partly guessed the truth.

Before he could ascend the steps the front door opened, and their servant rushed out. The girl was white and trembling.

"Fire!" she screamed. "Fire!"

Ridley stopped her, and caught her arm.

"What's the matter? What's wrong? Pull yourself together!"

"The house—it's on fire, sir!" she repeated hysterically.

A shout from the watching crowd announced that flames had appeared. Someone was already speeding to the nearest alarm. Ridley turned towards the hall.

"Ought to have gone up to tell him, but I—I couldn't, sir."

"What's that?" he queried sharply, with a stare.

"Gentleman came to see you," the maid faltered. "He's in the sitting-room. Didn't answer when I tried to make him hear just now."

The lower staircase he scaled at a run. Dense smoke met him on the landing. Bending low, he stumbled on.

Instantly there flashed into his mind the fact that Ruff was a prisoner at the top of the house. Apprehension caught him by the throat.

He was fighting for breath by the time he reached the sitting-room door. Crawling in, he dimly discerned a prostrate figure. Next moment he had lifted the man's head.

He gave a choking cry of amazement. It was Kenneth Frome.

Temptation came to him. He drew back in an agony of indecision. Perhaps there was time to scale the upper flight, and unlatch the bed-room door. This was his enemy. He owed Frome nothing, and the dog so much.

Certainly, if he had carried Frome to the street, it would be impossible to return, whereas now he might release the Newfoundland if he acted at once. A few seconds' delay, and the chance might be gone.

"Ruff!" he murmured hoarsely. "Ruff, old boy!"

Others were coming up the stairs. He could hear them calling wildly. He seized Frome almost roughly.

It must be done. His decision was made. He must first save the human life. But he stifled a sob as he struggled down to safety with his burden; and when he would have swung round again, many hands restrained him by force. He fought with them frantically.

"Can't be done," a fireman insisted, after a vain attempt to ascend. He signalled to a comrade. "All safe; only a dog."

Ridley tried to speak, but could not manage to utter the retort which came to his lips.

"Let me go," he said, with an effort, to the men who gripped his arms. "You needn't hold me now."

He brushed a hand across his eyes. They pointed to the others who were carrying Frome. He followed blindly.

An approaching cab stopped a short distance away.

"Let the lady pass. She lives there. Tell her it's all right!"

They led her in Kenneth Frome's direction, telling the story of his rescue. At that moment Ridley recognized who it was. Then they came face to face.

"Don't be afraid, Vera. He'll soon revive."

He laughed harshly.

"You went—went in for him?"

"That's true. Foolish thing to do, wasn't it? And I had to leave Ruff behind. Yet, the dog—the dog was upstairs——"

She laid a hand gently on his shoulder, and he walked mechanically towards a neighbor's house.

He would not meet her gaze.

"The bright side!"

"Ah, you must try to forget poor Ruff! It's difficult, I know; but—"

"And I ought to rejoice over Frome; is that what you mean? Oh, I'll leave that to you!"

"I don't understand, dear. Mr. Frome has never been anything to me. I'm glad he escaped, of course, but I'd have felt practically the same for any stranger."

She dropped his fingers, and turned away.

"It was you I was anxious about. It's always been you I've loved. Not so much, perhaps, when we were first married; but since then—oh, I've longed for you to see it—to know it! But you never would!"

He looked up; then suddenly put his arm around her and pulled her close.

"How foolish I've been!"

For a while they sat in silence, rejoicing in their newly-found happiness. Presently Ridley began to speak of his impending trouble.

"Yes, he's going to have me turned out of the office. And that's the man I had to rescue!"

He did not mention the dog again, but she guessed what was in his mind, and kissed him sympathetically.

"As for Mr. Frome, he can't really injure us. We'll be poor, perhaps, but we're everything to each other, Owen. Nothing matters but that!"

Someone rapped on the door, and Frome himself entered, moving shakily.

"The doctor expected me to lie down for an hour more; but I was worrying. I couldn't rest till I'd seen you both. The people of the house said you were here."

He leaned against the table, and continued in a hesitating fashion:

"First, I'll confess why I'd called on you, Ridley. It was to tell you that Danehurst's—Thorpe & Danehurst now—wouldn't require your services any longer. I wanted to watch your face when you heard the news. I wanted to laugh at your dismay—gloat over it——"

They stood up and faced him.

"Wait, please!" He made a gesture. "Now, of course, I—I've given up all such ideas. While I was waiting for you to return, Ridley, I was taken ill. When I realized the house was on fire I tried to leave, but I—I couldn't. I slipped down, and gradually the smoke stifled me!"

He paused for a second or two.

"I have to thank you for saving my life, Ridley. I'm hoping you'll forget the past, too, because I want to be friends."

He eyed them appealingly.

"Please stay with the firm at your own salary. There may be a better opening soon, and then I'll recommend you for promotion. This isn't only gratitude. I owe it to myself."

Ridley hung back, but his wife gently pushed him forward. The two men were shaking hands when a ring sounded at the front door, and excited voices were raised in the passage.

The owner of the house bustled in.

"Great news!" he exclaimed. "You'll be so very pleased to hear it! Your maid's just come to tell you——"

The servant-girl pushed past him in her eagerness. She was panting for breath.

"Ran all the way, I did, directly I heard. Old Ruff—the dog, sir—"

"It was—it was!"

"And he must have jumped out, frightened, on to the top of the scullery, then over to the roof of the one next door, sir, and along over more houses the same way, trying to find a place to get down. Do you think he started it all, sir—knocked over the towel-horse into the fire I'd lighted for the missis?"

Ridley gasped.

"The question is——"

"Oh, he's all right, sir, if you mean that! I've seen him myself. Just a ladder it wants to reach him, up against the corner house, sir—"

"By Jove, I'm very glad!" said Kenneth Frome, whole-heartedly.

But Ridley and his wife did not hear. They were already in the hall.—London Answers.

Good light is necessary for the person pressing men's clothes. Also the irons should be very hot, and a piece of cotton cloth should be handy.

To save time in cleaning windows, let a kettle of water boil in a room till the windows are covered with steam. Then wipe with a dry cloth.

After making a hairbow work a small thread eye on the inside of each loop. Slip a hairpin through each eye and fasten to the braid of hair with its help.

A good pearl button sewed to the back of a boy's collar band will do the same work as the regular collar button, and he will always know where to find it.

Test potatoes by cutting in two and rubbing the cut surfaces together. Then press the two parts together. If they stick, the potatoes are good.

A table made on a gocart frame is a handy thing for an invalid. Attach it to the bed with a ribbon, and the invalid can push it away when through with it.

A clothes basket with two parts is convenient for keeping white and colored clothes separately. Or the division may be made small and used for clothes pins.

Christians in India.

The London Times places the number of Christians in India at nearly 4,000,000, of whom 3,547,000 are natives. The total is about one in every 80 of the 315,000,000 living in the great dependency. The Roman Catholic church has the first place, with 1,394,000, an increase of 272,000 in the last decade. The Baptists have grown from 217,000 to 331,000; the Anglicans 304,000 to 332,000; Congregationalists from 37,000 to 134,000; the Presbyterians have increased 120,000, and the Methodists 97,000.

THE ECHO TEST.

Safety Device for Preventing Collision at Sea.

Sir Hiram Maxim, inventor of those terrible agents of destruction, cordite, smokeless powder and the Maxim gun, has just invented a safety device for preventing collisions at sea. The tragic fate of the Titanic moved him to try, and he had reflected only four hours on the problem when it occurred to him that ships could be provided with what might be called a sixth sense, by which they could detect large objects near at hand without the aid of a search-light. This sixth sense, which may be called an "echo" sense, he knew to be possessed by bats.

Bats, nocturnal though they are, have not especially powerful eyes for seeing in the dark. Moreover, in total darkness no creature can see, but a bat in the thick blackness of a cave at midnight can fly about with perfect security; so can a bat that is blind. The sensitive nerves of the face and wings are so arranged as to produce the echo sense, which warns them always of any solid mass near by.

"In many cases, the organ that gives the bat the sixth sense is spread all over its face. In the vampire bat, the organ is on the tip of its nose; it stands up in the air and is called the 'shield'; but in most of the small bats which catch insects on the wing, we fined two little leaves, not unlike the wings of the insect that it pursues, standing up just in front of the ears."

These sensitive spots, together with the fine nervous network of the entire head and wings, are all closely connected with each other and with the brain. As the bat flies about, the beat of its wings sends out a succession of air-waves or pulsations. These are not rapid enough to constitute sound, but striking against surrounding objects, they are reflected back just as sound or light would be; and these reflected vibrations, received by the sensitive organs so exquisitely arranged, enable the bat to judge the distance of any object by the lapse of time between the departure and return of the air-waves.

The ingenious apparatus which Sir Hiram Maxim, acting on this hint, has invented to warn ships at sea of approaching icebergs, vessels, rocks or fog-veiled shores could be described fully only at considerable length; the unscientific reader will probably understand it quite as well if he is simply told that it is an echo test.

We have all heard of the fabled mouse that saved the lion. In plain truth, his little winged cousin, the flittermouse, may do far more. Some day—who knows?—a greater Titan of the sea than the lost Titanic may owe her safety to a bat.

SCULPTOR AND EMPEROR.

How Napoleon III. Got Even With Sculptor Carpeaux.

Although he was a man of great earnestness and seriousness of purpose, Carpeaux, one of the most famous French sculptors of the last century, had a droll tongue and a capricious humor that he vented on lackey and emperor alike. Lecture Pour Tous relates some amusing anecdotes of him.

At a reception at the Tuileries, Napoleon III. engaged in a few minutes' private conversation with Carpeaux. At its conclusion, the young sculptor was besieged by a crowd of courtiers and envious rivals, who wanted to know what the emperor had talked about.

"Promise to tell no one!" whispered Carpeaux, as he drew the eager listeners to one side of the ballroom. "Well, then, the emperor was trying to borrow five francs from me."

Some years later, when Carpeaux had received the commission to do the decorations for the Pavillon de Flore of the Tuileries, Napoleon often came to watch him at work on the scaffold that had been built against the face of the building. Occasionally, the emperor mounted aloft to this improvised studio, hung between earth and sky.

One day Carpeaux, in a particularly merry mood, told him that when he wished to rest from his labors, he would make tiny pellets of clay, and drop them on the heads of passers-by.

"It's very amusing," he explained. "People stop and look about them. They can't imagine where the missiles come from.

"Here," he continued, holding out some of the little clay bullets, "try it yourself."

"I wouldn't dare," laughingly said Napoleon, amused at the idea of the Emperor of the French, mounted on a scaffold, throwing pellets of clay at his subjects.

"Bah!" muttered Carpeaux. "What's the use of being an emperor!"

Napoleon did not forget this remark. A few months later, when the sculptor sought a title, the emperor, unable or unwilling to grant the request, exclaimed:

"Bah! What's the use of being Carpeaux! Isn't that better than baron?"

The history of the famous Rule "17."

The Liberal press is curiously silent with regard to the history of Rule 17, the rule invoked by the Conservatives to block the avalanche of amendments, which the Liberals had planned to move in the closure debate. The Liberal party, of course, will not be able to take much comfort out of the fact that it was Laurier himself who had that rule passed, intending to make such use of it as did Mr. Borden had the occasion arose. But the incident was merely one more evidence of the irony of fate which seems to be pursuing the Opposition so relentlessly of late.

Sir Wilfred Laurier had this rule passed during the session of 1906. Upon reference to Hansard for that year the following illuminating facts are gained:

On July 9, of that year Sir Wilfrid moved: "that the House go into committee to consider the report of the special committee appointed to revise the rules of the House."

Mr. Sproule (now speaker of the House) took some objection to taking the question up at that time and suggested postponement until the following session to permit of more mature consideration of the amendments proposed.

Replying to Mr. Sproule, Sir Wilfrid said: "The changes are not material . . . and I think it would be well to have the rules ready for next session."

Hon. Mr. Foster took the same view as Mr. Sproule, and in reply to Mr. Foster he stated: "We intend next session rushing into business at once, and unless we dispose of these now I am afraid we will not have the benefit of them when we meet again in November."

Sir Willfrid had his way and the amendments to the rules were passed. Rule 17 was one of the most important and read as follows:

"17. When two or more members rise to speak, Mr. Speaker calls upon the member who first rose in his place, but a motion may be made that any member who has risen "be now heard," or "do now speak," which motion shall forthwith be put without debate."

Where, then, is the occasion to howl so loudly when Laurier is thwarted by one of his own rules.

Another Boon for the Western Farmer.

The government is giving careful consideration to the question of the establishment of a system of internal terminal elevators in Western Canada. It is likely that an official announcement will be made before the close of the session. At present there is but one terminal elevator point in the west, Fort William and Port Arthur In the Western States there are terminal centres scattered all through the west from which the grain can be shipped all through the year. It is believed that the establishment of such a system in the west will tend to prevent the present blockades and would greatly faciliate the marketing of the western grain. They would be located at places where there are alternate shipping routes.

The plan has been heartily endorsed by western grain associations. Last fall the grain commission made a thorough investigation into the subject and strongly recommended the establishment of such a system. More recently the commission has been holding an inquiry as to the best points at which to have such elevators located.

The interest of the goverment in this subject is another evidence of its interest in the farmers of Western Canada and of its attempts to solve in a practical manner the problems of the west

The Government need have no fear regarding the backing of the country in its efforts to break down minority rule. There is no sentiment of sympathy anywhere in Canada for the misguided men who in their frantic desire to do nothing for England, brought down on their necks the guillotine of closure. The only criticism of the government's action may be that it was not applied sooner.

Out of the strife and tumult, one fact stands pre-eminent. The Liberal leaders are opposed to rendering effective and immediate aid to the naval defences of the Empire. They may endeavor to befool the issue, but on their record in this regard they have already been judged and condemned by the great jury of the Canadian people.

"All that we desire—and I speak in the most absolute sincerity—is to bring about such conditions as will permit to each and every member of the Opposition all reasonable freedom of debate, and at the same time permit the government and the majority in this House to go on in a reasonable way, with the public business of the country."
—Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden.

Closure is now law in Canada.

Closure is now a law in the Canadian Parliament. The amendments to the rules which have been under discussion for the last ten days were passed at half-past twelve this morning by a vote of 108 to 73, a Government majority of 35. All the Quebec members present voted with the Government.

Contrary to expectations of a week ago, and to the talk of the Liberal press, the closing proceedings and the vote were without special incident. The division, indeed, was a particularly quiet one and outside of cheers for the party leaders as they voted and prolonged applause from Government benches when the vote was announced there were few demonstrations.

There were two divisions, the first was upon the motion of Hon. J. D. Hazen that the previous question be now put. This was carried by the Government majority of 35. The speaker then put the resolution amending the rules, and it was carried by the same majority.

During the progress of the 2nd. vote, Hon. Jacques Bureau, as he rose to record his vote, took off his hat and shouted, "This is a vote against the suppression of—" The remainder of the sentence was drowned by cries from the Gov. benches of "sit down."

During the rest of the vote here was not an incident and the usual Liberal taunts against the French members voting with the Government, were not indulged in. It was a party division and there were no defections on either side.

After the announcement of the Government majority Speaker Sproule in clear tones said: "I declare the motion carried." Loud Government cheers greeted the announcement that closure has at last come into the procedure of Canada's Parliament. As the government members were cheering Dr. Neely, of Humboldt, could be seen in his place shaking his fists and shouting across the floor "Cowards, cowards." Then in a moment the liberals burst into cheers for their leader, which were instantly met by counter cheers from the Government benches for Premier Borden. The Liberal leader stood in his place with none of the air of a martyr, but simply smiled as his followers defiantly cheered back at the Government members. Dr. Neely, very red in the face, still shouted back "coward, cowards," only to be met by a retort from Dr. Schaffner, "go home and get a good sleep."

Cheers came again for Mr. Borden, who by this time had left the chamber and joined Mrs Borden who was awaiting him. Members slowly filed out of the House with the Liberals singing "John Brown's Body lies a Mouldering in the Grave."

Big Attractions For Ottawa Fair.

The Special Attractions Committee of the Central Exhibition have completed arrangements for most of the entertainment features of the next Ottawa Fair. The programme provides for six full days and nights, meaning that the opening Monday afternoon will be complete in every particular as well as the concluding Saturday night. The most elaborate military military and pyrotechnic spectacle, yet attempted, "The Seige of Delhi" has been arranged for with the Hand Co., of Hamilton, at a cost of $3,500. Six Vaudeville Troupes, two from Chicago and four from New York, have been engaged with a special view of presenting novelty, acts to Central Canada patrons.

The biggest sensation of all is the aeroplane. Capt. Baldwin is to appear twice daily in flights, starting before the grand stand, and giving a performance, with every feature visible to the Fair visitors. This will be a decided improvement on the aviation feats at the 1911 Exhibition, when the artist was obliged to start a mile away from the grounds.

A demonstration of life-saving is to be made before the grand stand by the Ottawa Fire Brigade. That will be a striking novelty.

It is the intention to bring several outside bands to the Exhibition. Probably only two local bands will be engaged. The change will result in a greater variety of music being offered.

GOLD MEDAL FOR BEST CHEESE.

Mr. W. F. Garland, M. P., Carleton county, has contributed to the Central Canada Exhibition, a gold medal to be awarded as a special prize for the best factory cheese shown at the next Ottawa Fair. A special cheese or entry is not required in this competition. The exhibits competing in the other classes will be judged for Mr. Garland's prize. There will be keen competition for the trophy and the Exhibition directors are very grateful to the donor.

YOUR SUMMER VACATION.

A most interesting and well printed publication has just been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System, dealing with the attractions of the well known Algonquin National Park of Ontario, and copies may be had from any of their city Ticket Offices.

The Territory dealt with, is a thoroughly universal vacation one, combining high altitude, (200 ft.) pure air, unspoilled forest, beautiful lakes, splendid fishing, much wild game, hotel or camp life, in close touch with civilization, or entirely apart from it, and satisfying alike to novice and veteran.

Included in this publication is a description of the Nominigan Camp, situated on Smoke Lake, the centre of the finest fishing grounds in Canada, and which will be open for the first time this year with accommodation for 60 people. This idea of a log cabin camp, is an innovation in Canada, but one that has become most popular and attractive to a large number of playground seekers in the Rangeley Lakes, Maine. Good hotel accomodation is offered at the Highland Inn and the rates are most reasonable.

The publication is well written, and the map that accompanies the same, gives one a good idea of the 2,500,000 acres that are found within the Park Boundaries.

BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY;

OR, THE END OF AMBITION, HOPE AND YEARS.

"Well, I'll stop a minute and tell it. I warn you beforehand it's a chestnut; but still, if you haven't heard it, of course it will be new to you. It runs in this wise, as nearly as I can remember it:

"A wounded soldier lying on a battle-field in the thick of a fight saw an Irishman hurrying along, and begged him, for the love of Heaven, to help him across the line, that he might not die on the battle-field of the enemy, moaning: 'Both my legs have been shot off, and I can not get there by myself.'

"Pat was kind of heart.

"'Seeing you have lost both your legs, I'll give you the loan of mine,' he declared in his Irish brogue, lifting the man upon his back, which was the only possible way he had of carrying him.

"'Heaven bless you for your kindness to me!' moaned the man as Pat trudged along, answering that he was only doing as he would like to be done by in such a sorry plight, all unmindful of the shot and shell that were flying thick as hail about him.

"Suddenly he was stopped short by a picket pointing a rifle at him, crying 'Halt! what are you doing?'

"'Only carrying a wounded man across the line, sir,' declared Pat.

"'Wounded?' echoed the picket. 'Why, the man you are carrying is dead; his head has been shot off.'

"'Well, well, I'll be hanged!' exclaimed Pat, in the greatest bewilderment. 'The rascal declared to me it was his legs that were shot off when he asked me to carry him.'

"I'm going now. If I should happen to miss Tim, don't tell him the mission I'm out on, please. You can't trust a man out of your sight, you know. I'm getting so I just detest him. Yes, I hate him. He's getting to be the meanest, most despicable, most abominable fellow that ever—"

The words ended in a scream of surprise not unmixed with embarrassment, for there, standing serene and nonchalant on the threshold, with a great bunch of red roses in his hand—Tekla's favorite flowers—was Tim himself.

He nodded. The next instant Tekla flew out into the corridor, dragging Tim with her. There was the sound of kisses, and Tekla's voice murmuring her Tim was the dearest, nicest fellow in the whole wide world.

CHAPTER XIX.

There was only one thing which Jessy Carr dreaded as she worked upon the negatives, and that was the visits of the army of reporters, who would persist in calling upon her that morning to hear and print any remarks she might make touching upon the great robbery across the way.

One persistent interviewer entered the gallery just as Tekla and her companion were leaving it, and insisted upon seeing Jessy, much to her annoyance. She explained to him that she was engaged in printing the pictures her father had taken on that never-to-be-forgotten night, and had no time to talk to him then.

"I should be delighted to remain in so pleasant a nook as this until your hurry is over," he declared, "and if you wouldn't mind, I should like to see you develop those negatives. I could write up a most interesting little story of it for tomorrow's paper. Don't say no; please don't."

He would not take a refusal, so Jessy was obliged to submit to his unwelcome presence.

She went on with her work silently, paying no attention to her self-invited guest, who followed her into the developing-room to watch her progress, so great was his interest becoming.

"If you will step out into the gallery, I will hold it up to the light so you can catch a glimpse of it," she said. "You only retard my progress in here. You can not see anything in the developing-room."

He had not long to wait. Jessy soon appeared, holding the plate in her hand.

"It will come out fairly good," she observed, holding it up carelessly toward the light of the window, the reporter standing by her side looking curiously at it. One glance, and a cry that sounded like nothing human broke from Jessy Carr's lips.

"Look!" she cried, wild with excitement. "It is a photograph of the building across the way — by moonlight. Look at that lower window. There is the figure of a man leaping through it! Do you see his face? The features are becoming clearer each moment. Ah, God in heaven be praised! my father is innocent! Go—oh—go on the wings of lightning and blazon it to the world! Shout it from the housetops! Cry it out on the street! Do not wait to print it in the papers. Let the whole city—those who believed him guilty, know without losing a single moment of time, that he is innocent—innocent—innocent! I, his daughter, always declared it. Go, oh, go!"

A crowd of wondering spectators were gathering around the gallery door, attracted there by the girl's shrill, excited cries, and long before the reporter had reached the office of his paper, the startling intelligence ran from lip to lip on the street below, that Jessy Carr, the old photographer's pretty daughter, had made a wonderful discovery. In reproducing the picture her father had been engaged upon at the time of his arrest—of the building across the way—fate had caused the portrait of the real robber to be taken red-handed, just as he was in the act of leaping from the window with a bundle of banknotes in his hand. And a great shout of joy rose to the lips of every one who heard it. Every one, did I say? Ah, there was one who listened to the amazing report with chattering teeth, bated breath, and ashen lips.

"I—I can not believe it," he muttered, leaning heavily against a lamp-post, and passing his hand in a dazed way over his forehead. "My God! if I thought the report was true, I— Ah, I must know it if is so—I must!" And without an instant's delay he wheeled suddenly about, and was hurrying down the street, when he ran into the arms of Walter King.

"Well, I declare, if it isn't Mr. Richard Hamilton," laughed King. "You were hurrying by me so swiftly, and looked so white, I had to take a second look before I was quite sure that it was really you. I'm going to step into this store to get a cigar. Will you have one?"

"No," said Richard Hamilton, hoarsely. "Not this time. Goodbye. Pardon my abruptness; I'm hurrying off to catch a train;" and he fairly dashed around the corner without waiting to exchange another syllable.

Up the steep stairs—four flights of them—he bounded, until he found himself in front of the open door of the gallery. Jessy Carr was there alone, pacing up and down the room in intense excitement, and sobbing hysterically.

He entered the room quickly, closed the door after him, and turned the key in the lock.

"Jessy!" he whispered, hoarsely, approaching a step.

"Frederick Lancaster!" she cried, recoiling from him as though he had been a serpent. "You—you here, of all men in the world! Don't come near me; don't advance a single step; don't attempt to touch me!"

"Jessy!" he cried again; but she interrupted him, panting

"Thief! robber! scoundrel! I know you for what you are now!"

In an instant he was beside her, clutching at her white throat with his strong hands, while a volley of fierce imprecations broke from his lips.

"Hush, you fool!" he cried. "Hush! Not another word, or I'll send you where you can never open your blabbing mouth again, curse you!"

The girl, with a desperate wrench, freed herself from his grasp.

"I know you for what you are!" she repeated, vehemently, her eyes flashing fire, her figure drawn up to its full height, her bosom heaving and her voice ringing with passionate scorn. "You are the thief who robbed the insurance company, who committed the horrible crime for which my poor innocent old father is slowly dying behind prison bars. Yes, it is you!" she screamed, her voice rising higher and shriller with every syllable. "I have the proof of it, proof positive to give the world—your picture taken by my poor father as you leaped from the window. Your picture—yours!"

He sprung forward and caught her hands in a vise-like grip. He was wise enough to see that he must change his tactics on the instant. He must make use of neither imprecations nor threats at such a time, but must resort to other means.

"Listen, Jessy," he cried. "You are making some horrible mistake. Show me the negative, and I swear I can prove to you that you are making a cruel mistake. Surely, Jessy, you, whom I love better than anything on this earth, or in the sky above it, will give him who adores you a chance to vindicate himself in your eyes."

The girl was trembling violently now, almost fainting from nervous excitement.

"Yes, I will show you the negative," she cried, "and when you see how clearly the features are shown up, you can not deny that it is you."

He watched her every move with cunning, restless eyes. She crossed the room with a reeling step, groped about among a number of negatives a moment like one dazed, then took up one and turned with it toward the window.

In an instant he was by her side. She had not heard him cross the floor, his tread had been so light, so cat-like.

"Is that the negative?" he whispered, hoarsely.

The eyes that looked into hers was fairly livid as he waited breathlessly for the one word she must speak.

She nodded, still holding it up. An exclamation was about to fall from her lips concerning the negative, when it was cut short by an act of his.

Reaching forward with a sullen, quick movement, he struck it from her hand. It fell to the floor with a crash, and was broken into a thousand pieces. But not being content with this, he set his heel upon it, crying out, in a hoarse, triumphant laugh:

"Now let us see the proof you have to show the world that it was I who committed that robbery! You are not quite the smart girl you take yourself to be!" and a loud, sneering laugh fell from his lips. "Take care about accusing any one, my fair Jessy Carr. Remember it would be dangerous to connect my name with that affair, as you would be landed alongside of your illustrious father—behind prison bars. Now what have you to say, eh?"

"You interrupted me in what I was about to say otherwise you would have heard then what I am about to say now. You destroyed the wrong plate! Now that I remember the circumstances, the reporter who was here at the time I developed it took it out of my hand, lest in my excitement I should let it fall and break it, and carefully placed it away where he would know where to find it when he came back for it. I do not know where he put it."

Her companion fairly gasped for breath as he caught the meaning of her words. He realized that his fate lay in Jessy Carr's hands—his liberty, which was as dear to him as his life. He must temporize with her at any cost. There was but one way of escape, and that was to throw himself on her mercy.

"Jessy," he cried, "listen to me. Do not turn from me. I will confess to you what even the fear of the gallows could not wring from me. I—I am the man, that most unhappy of men—a thief, if you care to use the word against me. Do not turn from me, Jessy. Listen to me; hear me. I put my life in your hands to do with me as you will. Hush! hear me through. Save me, and I will marry you, Jessy. My whole life will be devoted to you; your slightest wish shall be my law. You shall be my wife within the hour. Your father is dying, Jessy; he will not live the week out, and I am young and strong. It would not benefit him so much to take him from his prison-cell to enjoy one short week of life, and thrust me into it to live long years in an agony of conscience more bitter to endure than death. See, I am kneeling at your feet, Jessy, praying to you as I kiss the hem of your garment not to betray me; by the love that you have so often told me beats in your heart for me, do not betray me. Forgive the past, and give me my future, Jessy, with you as my idolized bride. Oh, Jessy, think of it! If you want my life, it shall be yours; here and now I will bear my breast and you can take that knife from the table yonder and drive it to the hilt in the heart that beats only for you!"

He saw that she was wavering, as only a tempest-tossed soul can waver that is struggling between right and wrong, while the man she loves kneels at her feet and pleads with her with all the eloquence his gifted tongue is master of.

There was a step on the stair, the sound of approaching feet.

"You will not betray me, or let them find that negative, Jessy?" he panted, wildly. "For God's sake, make two promises quickly in one—that you will not betray me, and that you will be my wife!"

A Cheerful Woman.

A cheerful woman is like a ray of sunshine wherever she goes. She not only does good to others by example, but she helps discontented and gloomy people to throw off some of their native melancholy and to emulate a little of her own cheeriness. The cheerfulness that persists in seeing the bright side of everything, and discovers the "silver lining" where others perceive no break in the grey cloud, must not be confounded with selfishness and carelessness. They are totally different attributes, quite antagonistic to one another. A purely selfish and careless woman would be thinking so continually about herself that she would have no reserve force left in which to practice the one hundred and one little thoughtful actions which come within the ken of the woman who has "cheerfulness" as her watchword, and who endeavors to make her sisters more happy by imparting some of it to them.

LEAVES LIKE CHAMPAGNE.

Natives Who Chew Them Become Intoxicated.

An interesting plant called "khat" has recently been obtained by the government plant bureau from Aden, in Arabia. When its leaves are chewed they are said to affect one like a bottle of champagne, being most agreeably stimulating. Presumably it would grow very well in our southwestern country, but seeds of it will not be distributed until something more definite has been ascertained about the nature and action of the alkaloid which it contains.

Khat is a shrub known commercially in only two localities in the world—on the west coast of Arabia, and near Harrar, in Abyssinia. It will thrive only in the mountains 3,500 to 5,000 feet above the sea level; it will not live anywhere near salt water, and in cultivation it has to be fertilized with sheep or goat manure.

The plant has thick, dark green foliage, and is propagated from cuttings, yielding its first commercial crop of leaves the second year. When the Arab cultivator sees birds eating the leaves he knows that they are ripe and of good flavor for market. The leaves are used everywhere throughout Arabia. To the natives of that region life and hard work would be unendurable without khat, and there is no coolie too poor to buy his daily portion of the plant. It is the great fact next to their religion, in the every day life of the people.

It is the fashion in England to attach to houses names that in many instances are absurd or misleading—as "Aplecot," where the only trees are firs; but, as this London Chronicle story shows, fitness and

AND DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER SON.

Springhaven, Yarmouth Co., N. S., March 31 (Special).—Simple and straight to the point is the statement of Mrs. Erven C. Trefry, of this place, but it tells of another grand cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My fifteen-year-old son, Angus," Mrs. Trefry states, "suffered from pain in his back, headache, and a pain over his eyes.

"He was so bad he could not walk across the floor. My friends advised me to give him Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"They cured him."

The reason they cure rheumatism, backache, gravel, dropsy, Bright's disease, diabetes, and kindred diseases, is that these all spring from disordered kidneys.

If you have any of these diseases you haven't tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbors. They'll tell you Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure them.

HOW FAR MAN HEARS.

Science Now Busy Determining Human Range of Sound.

In the sense of hearing, numerous problems have interested phychologists, writes Professor A. T. Boffenger in the Strand Magazine. Among these may be mentioned the range of sounds that can be heard by an individual—that is the limit above and below which no sound can be heard.

The solution of these two problems, the determination of the upper and lower limits of sound, has occasioned a great deal of careful work and the construction of many forms of apparatus. For determining the upper limit of sound for any individual—and individuals differ considerably—the Galton whistle is generally used. It consists of a tiny pipe, which is lengthened or shortened by a piston adjusted by a micrometer screw. This little instrument can be regulated to make a tone which is too high for any human ear to hear, and which will finally produce only a painful sensation.

The Galton whistle was devised by Francis Galton for his study of individual differences. He had one of the whistles built into the end of his cane, and as he walked through the Zoological Gardens he would blow it near the ears of the various animals. He adjusted the whistle too high for his own ear to hear, and if the various animals responded to the sound he knew that their upper limit was greater than that of the human ear.

The ordinary human ear can detect a tone whose vibration is at least twenty-five thousand vibrations per second, while the whistle will produce fifty thousand per second. This upper limit varies with the age of the individual to such an extent that, if the upper limit at sixteen years of age were fifty thousand vibrations, at sixty years of age it would be about twenty-five thousand per second.

FLY TO PIECES.

The Effect of Tea and Coffee on Highly Organized People.

"I have been a coffee user for years, and about two years ago got into a very serious condition of dyspepsia and indigestion. It seemed to me I would fly to pieces. I was so nervous that at the least noise I was distressed, and many times could not straighten myself up because of the pain."

Tea is just as injurious, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.

"My physician told me I must not eat any heavy or strong food and ordered a diet, giving me some medicine. I followed directions carefully, but kept on using coffee and did not get any better.

"Last winter my husband, who was away on business, had Postum served him in the family where he boarded. He liked it so well that when he came home he brought some with him. We began using it and I found it most excellent.

"While I drank it my stomach never bothered me in the least, and I got over my nervous troubles. When the Postum was gone we returned to coffee, then my stomach began to hurt me as before and the nervous conditions came on again.

"That showed me exactly what was the cause of the whole trouble, so I quit drinking coffee altogether and kept on using Postum. The old troubles left again and have never returned."

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Nothing so Sure to "Set Up" a Man, Make Him Feel Brisk and Vigorous as Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, Jr., one of the best known citizens in Woodstock.

In his convincing letter, Mr. Stephens says:

"A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out. I was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headaches, dizziness, that I despaired of ever getting well.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and, best of all, I began to enjoy my meals. The dizziness, langour and feeling of depression passed away, and I fast regained my old-time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well—thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Paper money is said to have had its origin in China in the year 806, when the government issued it to relieve a financial stringency, receiving coin in return, which enabled it to pay off outstanding obligations. In the museum of St. John's College in Shanghai is a paper bill worth 1,000 cash, the equivalent of 50 cents American money, which was issued by the first Ming emperor (Hung-wu, A.D. 1368-1399). FRENCHMEN FEAR AIRSHIPS.

Think They Are Being Outclassed By the Germans.

French opinion is waking up to the fact that Germany, in the sphere of military aeronautics, is leaving France badly in the rear.

General Lacroix and a number of other eminent strategists unite in declaring that France has nothing to show against Germany's aerial cruisers but a fleet of "penny steamers," and they strongly deprecate the attitude taken generally in France towards dirigibles. They think the sudden development of aeroplanes caused an entirely unwarranted enthusiasm for those machines, and a corresponding disparagement of dirigibles. General Lacroix holds that the opposition to rigid dirigibles in France is quite wrong; the supple type of airship favored by the French military authorities is, from the military point of view, exceedingly risky, a pin prick sufficing to destroy them. Air ships of the German rigid type, with their several compartments, are capable of withstanding considerable damage before being put absolutely out of action.

"Have you noticed any change in your husband with the passing of years?" "Yes; he used to tell me of his throbbing heart. Now he talks exclusively about his liver."

CLIMATE OF NOVA SCOTIA.

Many Advantages of Living in Province by the Sea.

A gentleman who has spent some years in Nova Scotia writes as follows:—"We have 328 days in the year out of 365 in which the thermometer goes above 32 degrees. This is 28 days greater than for any other part of Canada. We have 276 days in the year in which the thermometer rises above 40 degrees of temperature. This is better by 26 days than any other part of Canada save the Pacific Slope. We have 200 days in which the thermometer goes above 50 degrees of temperature during the year. This record is the same as enjoyed by the southern section of Ontario and by the southern strip of the Western Provinces. When we get into the higher degrees of temperature we find we do not have the same excess of heat as in Ontario or other portions of Canada. 141 days above 60 degrees as compared with 150 and 160 in Ontario! 50 to 72 days above 70 degrees during the year, while parts of the west of Canada, as well as Ontario, have as many as 75, 100 and 112 days in which the thermometer reaches a higher degree of temperature than 70 degrees Fahrenheit. This is evidence for our statements that we share neither the excessive heat nor the extreme cold of the Western part of Canada or the Northern United States. A splendid environment of fresh air, clear water, green fields, and leafy woods, added to other advantages, gives us in abundance what is necessary for ideal home life."

The World's Best Liniment Needed In Every Family From Infancy To Old Age

If Your Home is Without "Nerviline" Read the Following Closely.

The high cost of living to-day demands economy on every side. Sickness is expensive. Far better to treat little ills before they grow serious. For this reason every home should have handy on the shelf a good remedy like Nerviline, which cures the minor ailments that occur in every family.

For example, when the boy comes in with wet feet and a slight cough, Nerviline will cure him. If a cold has settled on his chest, rub on Nerviline and the cold will go.

If something has been eaten that causes cramps, nausea, or diarrhoea, just twenty drops of Nerviline—that's all and cure is effected.

As a liniment for outward application in case of Neuralgia, Lame Back, Sciatica, Lumbago or Rheumatism, it's really hard to imagine how Nerviline relieves, and how soon it cures.

Nerviline is something new. No, it's one of the oldest and best known remedies. Used in thousands of homes by the people of many nations, simply because it stops pain, cures sickness, and rids the family of ills before they become troublesome. Get the family size bottle, price 50c.; trial size 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

BRIQUETTES OF SAWDUST.

New Industry Being Operated With Success in Germany.

A new industry may be successfully combined with the planing mills, that of making of the sawdust briquettes to be used for firing under the boilers, thus considerably decreasing the cost of the fuel to the mill owner. This is being very advantageously done in Germay. The sawdust is automatically gathered and conveyed to a place near the presses. From here it is carried over a heated belt conveyor to a drying-room. This has a cylindrical revolving drum about two feet in diameter and 30 feet long. In this drum the sawdust is partially dried, the pitch contained in the wood is softened, acting hereafter as a binder. From here the sawdust is conveyed over an incline to the after-dryer of the same shape as the first dryer which forms a part of the press.

Logic.

"What are you doing, dear?" asked the little girl's mother, as she paused to look at some very strange marks the child had been making on a piece of paper.

"I'm writing a letter to Lillie Smith," was the answer.

"But my dear," laughed the mother, "you don't know how to write."

"Oh, that doesn't matter, mother! Lillie doesn't know how to read."

Mr. Oliver Sims, of Purvis (Man.), writes:—"I had an old irritating sore on my forehead that had troubled me for four years. Zam-Buk was recommended to me and in a marvellously short time it healed the obstinate sore perfectly. You may depend upon it that after this proof of its power we will never be without a box of it."
