Sow's Work

HAIRLESS LITTERS AND POTASSIUM IODIDE

Certain definite abnormalities in pigs, such as complete or partial hairlessness, undeveloped hoofs, blindness, large flabby and unnaturally developed neck and head all arise from the same cause of causes. Pigs so affected usually die although the sow remains normal.

Pregnant sows which are fed a highly nitrogenous ration, given insufficient exercise, and little or no vegetable or mineral matter are usually the heaviest sufferers.

This indicates a deficiency of some necessary element in the ration. Control of the trouble lies in preventive feeding and improved management of the sow. It is imperative that the sow be encouraged to take daily exercise. In so far as is practical, separate the feed trough, sleeping cabin, and hay rack, or if the sow is housed in a shed or straw stack adjacent to or situated in the barn yard, the feeding trough should be placed some distance away so that she has no alternative but to take exercise. Close confinement of the pregnant sow must be carefully avoided.

Brain should always form part of the ration and to this should be added such meals as shorts, screenings, oats or barley supplemented with 5 per cent. of tankage and 1 per cent. of bone meal. Pulped mangels or boiled turnips and clover hay, preferably alfalfa, are suitable roughages. Minerals in the form of charcoal, earth, soft coal or wood ashes, etc., should always be available for the sows.

If these measures fail, medicinal treatment must be resorted to. Scientific investigation has demonstrated that the addition of iodine in some form to the sow's ration may remedy the trouble. In Eastern Canada where only an occasional litter may be affected, exercise and proper feeds should be successful, but where hairlessness is common iodine should be administered during the gestation period, or at least for the greater part of it. A solution of one part of potassium iodide in a gallon of water may be prepared and when this solution is supplied to the sow in the meal ration at the rate of one tablespoonful per day she gets a daily allowance of about two grains of the drug, which is sufficient.

POULTRY REGISTRATION.

Poultry Registration is now well under way. The first inspection of 1924 is completed and the inspectors in the various provinces report favorably on the work. The breeders have given generous support to the movement and interest seems to have increased materially during the last year. This is no doubt due to the better knowledge gained with respect to registration work throughout Canada. Those in direct charge of the inspection of registered hens have tried to impart such detail to the breeders as will enable them to keep accurate records of the progeny of the registered females. Recording forms have been supplied to each breeder, and leg bands, which later are to be used as wing bands, have been furnished for all chicks, the progeny of registered females. All male birds have been inspected for these markings and in nearly every case the very finest of producing blood lines are to be found behind these males.

An honest effort is being made by every breeder to establish a firm basis for his registered poultry, as he realizes that fraud or carelessness of any kind will later reflect on the strain. The firm confidence displayed by the public generally in registration shows that the work of the Canadian National Poultry Record Association is being appreciated by the poultrymen of Canada.

Reports of fertility and hatchability are very encouraging and give promise of being very much better than the hatching season of 1923. To hear of 75 per cent. hatches is quite common and many breeders are getting even 90 per cent. hatchability from their registered birds.

Generally speaking, the contestants who have been successful in the various laying contests throughout Canada report active business conditions, which indicates that the egg-laying contests are serving as a guide to the buying public in the securing of reliable bred-to-lay stock.

The Pretty Room the Paintbrush Made

BY MARY GRACE RAMEY.

This year daughter reached the age when the usual hit-or-miss furniture found in the growing girl's bedroom wouldn't do at all; in fact, she was quite unhappy about her room and when I surveyed it with a critical eye I couldn't quite say I blamed her. There was a rather battered brass bed, a hand-me-down from former grandeur which had lost some of its rods and was altogether hopeless, though the spring was good and quite comfortable; also a shabby, golden-oak chiffonier, with a scroll top—how did we ever come to buy these things anyway? A small desk in dark mission finish, a table or two from some nondescript period and a funny little old dresser, which had been mine when a girl, completed the inharmonious effect. The curtains were discarded lace affairs not suitable for any spot in the house, so they were used here. No wonder daughter was discouraged and that keeping her room in order had grown to be a matter of duty with no pleasure in it.

But where was the money to come from for the pretty set she so longed for? That was beyond me until I took father into my confidence, and together we decided to try our hands at making new furniture from the old. The attic, like those in many old homes, contained the leavings of past generations. Here we had an old hope bedstead which had been forgotten for years; they are quite the thing now, though used with a spring instead of the ropes, and they are very comfortable as well as pretty. The spring from the brass bed fortunately was the right size, and with four large hooks forged by the blacksmith from heavy strapiron and screwed to the side rails, it could be used very well.

MAKING A START.

A funny little old-fashioned washstand could take the place of the up-couth desk most satisfactorily and the table would easily stand a coat of paint. My old-fashioned bureau when deprived of much of its ornamentation was quite presentable in line, though sadly lacking in finish. The scrollwork was removed from the chiffonier and the high inartistic back entirely taken away and a plain piece of pine board substituted. It was shaped to conform with the simple lines of the other furniture. To be quite up-to-date the mirror was removed from the chiffonier and the molding painted to match the rest of the pieces. Then it was hung by a colored cord above the chiffonier. If the bureau had been treated in the same way, for it is very much the thing just now to hang one's mirrors flat against the wall. Here we had a start, but such a start! Almost every piece was of different wood and this finish sadly marred and scratched; daughter thought her room was to be more of a mess than ever. But with scrubbing of strong soda water and much scraping and sandpapering, all done in the cellar, every piece was finally cleaned and ready for the paint. For economy's sake we used a first coat of inexpensive paint as near the desired color as could be obtained. This was gone over with sandpaper when thoroughly dry and then two coats of enamel given. For our color we selected a soft greenish blue, of egg-shell gloss. This gave a more subdued finish than regular enamel. Of course each coat was thoroughly dry before another was given. Decoration was a matter of discussion; some voted for stenciled flowers, but daughter wished striping of a rather light, creamy yellow. Father, who is clever at work of this kind, purchased a regular striping brush for a few cents, and after a little practice was able to give the furniture quite a professional finish with the narrow stripes.

THE FINISHING TOUCHES.

While father was busy in the cellar with his cleaning and varnishing I had not been idle. All the blue and white cotton rags I could muster, with a few yellow and cream, had been transformed into serviceable crocheted and braided rugs. Any woman who can wield a crochet hook will have no trouble in making these rag rugs which, by the way, are extremely smart and used by the best decorators with the simple painted furniture. Little Swiss curtains with overdraperies of inexpensive cretonne were the chief expense in doing over the room, as new materials had to be purchased for them, but they added so greatly to the freshness and charm that we felt we were well repaid for the additional cost. The overdraperies were tacked to a valance board. Hung in this way the drapery completely conceals the window trim.

Daughter is so proud of her smart little room these days that no amount of work seems too much for her to attempt to increase its loveliness.

Dustless Concrete Floors.

Concrete floors are a mighty desirable feature in many farm buildings; everyone wants them and everyone should have them if at all possible.

But nice as they are, dustless concrete floors are better still. And it's a very easy matter to make them dustproof. Here is how to do it:

When the floor has perfectly dried, paint it with boiled linseed oil, thinned to the proper consistency with gasoline. To obtain a glossy surface, which many will prefer, several coats should be applied.

They Were Seven.

Seven little babies,
Tiny yellow chicks,
Old Cat grabbed one—
Then there were six.
Six little buff balls,
See how they thrive,
Mother Hen stepped on one—
Then there were five.
Five darling chickens,
Scratching near the door,
Mister Rat selected one—
Then there were four.
Four lively youngsters,
Playing by the tree,
One ate a poison bug—
Then there were three.
Three scrawny fledglings
Gobbling oyster stew,
One overate himself—
Then there were two.
Two husky cockerels,
Scrapping in the sun,
Automobile passed along—
Leaving but one.
One lonely rooster,
Pecking at a bun,
Company for dinner—
Now there are none.

I Make $20 a Week More.

I am making nearly $20 a week more than I did last year. And I'm not working much harder than I did either; I've just learned to think.

You see, early last fall, my husband decided to abandon exclusive wheat farming and see if we couldn't make more money with diversified farming. We thought we'd like to raise fine hogs; but getting started took ready cash, and with the low price for our wheat we had mighty little ready money.

I wondered what I could do in my own home to earn more than I was already earning—about $8 a week—with butter and eggs. It occurred to me that the only real accomplishment I had was cooking.

We live near enough to a city to have a ready market for whatever we want to sell.

First came the idea of cottage cheese. Every morning I fed the chickens quantities of sour skim-milk. They didn't really need it, for the wheat was green and fresh, and there was ample corn for them. I can make a good cottage cheese, and I remembered that Mr. Hill, the grocerman, had told me once that he had a regular demand for good cheese. He offered me 10 cents a pound; and I found that I could easily make 47½ pounds a week. I added nearly $5 to my weekly income.

One day when I saw the two hundred fat, plump chickens sputtering around in my back yard it dawned on me that they weren't making money enough for us. I thought of making pressed chicken.

I fished out the kettle, contracted with the grocery to furnish 10 pounds, at first, at 50 cents a pound—a clear profit of 25 cents a pound—and went to work.

I make my chicken by boiling the fowl till the flesh fell from the bones, grinding it with the coarsest knife, covering it with its own liquor, and allowing the mixture to stand and mold overnight.

All fall I've been building up a trade. Frequently my sales run into 50 pounds a week. I figure that I'm adding $12.50 a week from pressed chicken to my income.—Mrs. G. D. B.

POULTRY

If eggs are dirty, don't wash them. Washed eggs deteriorate more rapidly than unwashed, and detection of a few washed eggs may cause buyers to penalize the entire lot.

Unusually large quantities of washed eggs are reported this spring. Although dirty eggs are discounted in price, washing eggs will generally cause producers a greater loss.

Only clean, unwashed, high-quality eggs bring top prices. Production of clean eggs is accomplished by keeping hen house floors and nests clean, gathering the eggs daily and keeping the laying hens during muddy weather in dry quarters until afternoon, when most of the eggs will have been laid. Producers will find it more profitable to use the soiled eggs on the farm, and to market only the best quality product.

It is better to point with pride than to view with alarm.

Water in the Kitchen from an Outside Well.

A dug well, walled with sewer tile, with a pump in the kitchen, is here described by a farmer:

"A good well-digger dug the well at the rate of $1 a foot in depth, and also placed the tiles in position. I used eight sewer tiles, twenty-four inches in diameter. Seven of these were in the ground and, each crock was two feet in height. This made a well fourteen feet deep, for we left one whole crock projecting out of the ground.

"This well was installed during that awfully hot and dry period of the summer of 1916 and we were in need grateful to discover water the next day to a depth of eight feet. Several wells in the neighborhood went dry during this drought.

"The exposed portion of pipe under the house was covered with newspapers and boarded up to prevent freezing when winter comes, especially if we forget to let the water down at night by raising the pump handle all the way up to open the valve inside, as should be done for safety.

"The benefit of having the pump in the sink directly in the kitchen, can hardly be overestimated, especially during zero weather, when you are compelled to waste a couple of kettles of hot water to prime it, if outside.

"The one tile above the ground has several advantages. It is of a convenient height for a person to work at. It gives a good platform to set vessels upon, and is much cleaner. The ground dirt can not get on it, and it is out of reach of small animals which are very apt to fall in. The joint between the first and second crocks from the top was cemented shut. All other joints were left open to permit easy passage for the water. Our water is as clear as crystal and all the 'city folks' who visit us, delight in drinking it."

Tell Them So.

Tell the hired man he has done well when he does a good job. He is human, like the rest of us, and it will inspire him to do well all the time. Talk things over with him. Give him a chance to express his opinion about how work shall be done and what new plans shall be developed.

If you have a tenant on your farm, tell him you are well pleased with his way of doing things, if you are, and it may pay to stretch a point on this score.

Tell your tenant that you will put on some better cows this year, or do some other thing to increase the efficiency of the place. There is no surer way to hold a good man and to insure his doing the best possible for the place than to give him the best possible cows to work with, or extra good tools of any kind.

Some women would be wonderfully glad if they knew their husbands appreciated their efforts to keep the home nice and to have food that just fills the bill. This is not so easy for the good wife to do as you may suppose. She must not only have good food, but she must be prompt and on time. Then men folks are not always as considerate as they might be in this direction. They are very apt to storm round a good deal if things do not come round on tick. When you see the wife sweating and getting red in the face, help her and keep the men busy resting till the call to dinner comes.

Motor Mixtures.

There are now on the market numerous compounds or mixtures for motor-car engines. A number of these are simply gasoline with an addition of benzol, and the addition of benzol is an advantage for most engines. However, on cars using cork floats in their carburetors, one precaution is necessary. Benzol attacks the shellac coating on the surface of the cork float, and with the shellac dissolved there is a tendency for the float to become soaked and heavy so that it loses its buoyancy and cannot function properly. This affects the operation of the engine and an excessive quantity of fuel may be consumed from a frequently little suspected and often hard to trace cause. Therefore, in using a fuel other than gasoline, make sure it contains no benzol, provided your engine has a shellac-coated cork carburetor float.

Home Education

"The Child's First School is the Family"—Froebel.

Shall I Take My Child to Town—By Marion Beal

Whether or not to take the young child to town is a problem that confronts the average mother, at some time or other, and one which requires a wise solution if she is to give the child the best care possible. She has been told that these trips to the city are injurious to the delicate nervous system of the young child, and having given much thought to his best interests she hesitates to take him anywhere.

To the mother who must take her child or children, or else stay at home, this is indeed a grave consideration. I have often seen these mothers, with two or three youngsters trailing petulantly and fretfully in their wake. One look at the little faces proved that it would have been much better for these children to have remained at home. The mothers, too, showed plainly the fatigue marks that support this conclusion.

Here the wisest solution is to ask the father occasionally to give his weekly half holiday to caring for the children, so that the mother may shop, free from the burden of keeping an eye on restless youngsters. Perhaps Dad will demur, but most men, not in a position to provide an assistant for the wife and mother, will be glad to perform this duty, if the reason for it is made clear.

However, it is to the mother who can leave the children in charge of a competent person, that I purpose to address this article. As a matter of course she leaves the children at home when she goes shopping. Yet perhaps she is often perplexed as to how to answer the repeated pleading of the youngsters to be allowed to "go with mother."

A solution of this problem may be found in a plan I have tried with great success. When my eldest boy was a little over a year old, I allowed him a short trip; that was the beginning. I had been attracted by a show window in a big store, a window full of gaily colored balloons, tossed about by a fan, and the next afternoon I took the year-old son to see this window. For half an hour he stood and crowded with delight, just watching the gaily colored balls floating about. And for a week he would clap his little hands and call "Blow!"

Of course on this trip there was no shopping to tire him; he was merely allowed to watch the fun, then taken directly home, and I found the small adventure did him no harm. Naturally, it was not repeated often, but as he grew older he was given opportunities to watch other windows, never, however, to the point of fatigue, nor was the trip topped off by a lot of rich candy and ice cream, although a simple treat, such as a milk chocolate, was sometimes allowed.

These trips, "window education" my friends call them, have proven really instructive, for as a direct result the children have learned many interesting things. They have seen wonderful displays of jewels, musical instruments, and goods from many foreign countries. They know just how silk, cotton and woolen goods are made from seeing replicas of these processes. They know how cigars are made, and how a piano is made. They have seen windows that in their appeal to the childish imagination have been a true delight; Easter windows and Christmas windows have afforded them pictures that lasted for weeks.

More rarely, perhaps once in six or eight weeks, they see a really good motion picture, one that I have previously seen and found suitable. Of course they do not go if an epidemic is prevalent nor unless in perfect health themselves, and I take the further precaution of inquiring at the box office when the house is least crowded. Safeguarding them in these ways, I have found it beneficial to indulge the modern youngster's longing to go to the movies.

One feature that appeals to me very strongly in favor of this mild "going to town" is that the children are thus acquiring a natural poise, and are at ease with any person with whom they are thrown. They are learning to take an intelligent part in conversation, and while not forward, are not self-conscious and shy, as the child is apt to be if kept too much at home.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

THE RIGHT KIND OF OIL.

"It's a fact," complained Harold, "whatever I try,

The goal line I somehow can never get by.

While Richard and Walter have constant good luck,

Promised wheels of success for me always get stuck."

"I can vouch for the reason." 'Twas Grandfather Doyle.

"You never have yet used the right kind of oil.

The reason your two friends the race never lose,

'Perseverance and Pluck' brand of oil 'tis they use.

While the lubricant on your axles bestow,

Is 'Sometime-I'll-do-it'; of course, they won't go!"

"I see—now," said Harold, "how a race one can spoil,—

And hereafter I'll use the improved brand of oil!"

—Adelbert F. Caldwell.

THE TRICK IS TURNED ON BENNIE FOX.

School was out in Woodland and all the little animal boys and girls were hurrying home. At just his usual time, Willie Woodchuck went romping into the door of his little wood-colored house.

"Please, mother, I am so hungry. Can't I have some bread and honey?" he asked.

"Yes, Willie, you may if you will be careful with the crumbs," answered Mrs. Woodchuck.

"I will be very careful, mother. I'll take it out doors to eat," said Willie. And so in a few minutes Willie was out in his swing munching a nice big slice of home-made bread spread all over with honey and he certainly did like honey.

Just then Benny Fox came along on his way home from school. How good that bread and honey looked to Benny. It just made his mouth water, and his dinner pail was empty.

"Willie, let's get your little red wagon and take a ride down the south hill," he suggested.

"That will be fun," said Willie. "Just wait a minute until I get my wagon." So, laying his bread and honey down in the swing, he scampered off after it.

As soon as Willie was out of sight Benny Fox grabbed the bread and honey and ran down the road.

"How fine my scheme worked," chuckled Benny to himself as he climbed upon the stone wall just around the bend in the road so that he might fully enjoy his delicacy.

He was just ready to take his first big bite when he spied something hanging from the branch of the tree above him.

"What can that be," he wondered to himself. He had never seen anything that looked like that before. It was like a big paper sack full of air, but there were some little black holes in it and he could hear a funny buzz.

ing noise on the inside. It really was the oddest looking thing he ever saw. "When I finish my bread and honey," he thought to himself, "I'll climb up there and see what that is." And he turned quickly to take a big bite of his bread and honey without even looking at it.

Then "Ouchie Ow, Ouchie Ow!"

Some bees from what Benny thought was the big paper bag up in the tree had flown down to get some of the honey that was on Benny's bread. They had stuck fast and when Benny had taken the bite without looking, he had gotten one right in his mouth and it stung him!

Off the stone wall he jumped and down went the bread and honey with the rest of the bees into the dirt. Benny went crying home with a very sore tongue and he thought he never would try to play a trick on anyone again.

A Doorway Gutter.

In rainy weather the drip from the roof over a doorway is very unpleasant when going in and out. To eliminate this I made a gutter six feet long on the roof. This extends a foot and a half on each side of the door. The gutter is made of a piece of 1½x2-inch board, nailed onto the roof and pitched to drain two inches in the six feet. The tin for flashing was cut from an old kerosene can. This was pushed up an inch and a half under the shingle above and nailed, then pounded down into the V formed by the roof and a 1½x2-inch piece and over the top edge of the 1½x2-inch piece, where it was nailed again. The laps in the tin were laid following the pitch of the gutter and the whole thing given a good coat of paint. This gutter does not leak.—L. E. D.

Removing Tight Rear Wheels.

Sometimes the rear wheels on a car stick so tightly that their removal from the tapered axle becomes an extremely difficult task even with the stoutest wheel puller. When this happens, to avoid breaking the wheel puller or perhaps stripping the hub threads, try the following: The axle nut is loosened a turn and the car then driven up a steep grade at a good rate of speed. Turning, the driver descends the same grade, applying the brake several times. When he gets back to the shop the wheels usually have so loosened that the services of the wheel puller are hardly necessary.

Shade Helps the Cukes.

A few hills of corn in your cucumber patch will keep the vines from wilting and the cucumbers will stay tender and green longer. I have tried this for three summers and have never failed to have a lot of cucumbers and nice green vines while all other vines that were in the hot sun wilted. The cucumbers not shaded ripened too soon and the vines died.

A paulful of well-rotted manure mixed in each hill before planting will force the cucumbers to grow faster and be more tender, doing away with the bitterness caused by slow growing.

This is a year of prizes, but no one has yet offered one for beating a train to the crossing.

Above scene may seem peaceful, but such is not the case. Indeed it is the scene of much activity for it is a part of the mills of the Puget Sound Lumber Company of Victoria, B.C.

Surnames and Their Origin

GUNNING.

Variation—O'Gunning.
Racial Origin—Irish.
Source—A given name.

Here is a family name which in many instances comes from Anglo-Saxon sources. It is, however, often of Irish development, being merely the Anglicized form of the clan name of O'Conaing.

In point of age, this family or clan name shares honors with that of O'Day, or, to use the Gaelic form, "O'Deadhaidh," tracing directly back to the period when Brian Boru reigned as High King over Ireland and established by edict the system of clan and family names.

The O'Gunning clan was probably founded a few years after that of O'Day, for its founder, unlike that of the O'Days, was not of the same generation as Brian Boru, being, in fact, his grand-nephew.

The given name, in this case, happens to have the same spelling in the nominative as in the genitive case. It is from this latter that the clan name is formed by the prefixing of the "O," which has the same significance as the Anglo-Saxon ending "son" and the Norman-French prefix "fitz."

MARIS

Variation—Marris.
Racial Origin—Norman-French and French.
Source—A locality—Also a given name.

Here is a family name which may be accounted for in several ways. The simplest explanation lies in its development from a given name which was fairly popular among the Norman French, that of "Mariss."

But while this undoubtedly accounts for the name in a great many instances, it does not suffice for all. It is also traceable to the name of a locality in Normandy, known as "le Marais."

In the first instance the early form of the name is found as "Fitzmariss" or "Fitzmaris" (which undoubtedly also has developed in some instances into "Fitzmaris"), the "fitz" being the Norman development of the Latin "filius," meaning "son."

In the latter, the early form is found as "de le Marais."

But it is also a matter of record that, in some instances, the family name was brought into England after it had already become a family name in France, in the form of "Mares."

Kissing Placed Under Ban by Tokio Police.

"Kissing is an unclean habit, the introduction and encouragement of which is not desirable by the Japanese," the Chief of the Metropolitan Police of Tokio said today in explaining why a bamboo screen was erected around a bronze reproduction of Rodin's "The Kiss." The work was one of several French masterpieces banned from public sight by the police censor.

When the art exhibit loaned to Japan by the French Academy of Art opened yesterday those attending were astonished to find Rodin's "The Kiss" covered up.

A representative of the French Embassy called at the Foreign Office to learn the reason for the ban on bronzes and canvases which were the pride of France. He was referred to the police, who gave the above explanation.

A REAL NERVE TONIC

Is a Bountiful Supply of Rich Health-Giving Blood.

Sufferers from what medical men speak of as nervous debility find themselves tired, morose, low-spirited and unable to keep their minds on anything. Any sudden noise hurts like a blow. They are full of groundless fears and cannot sleep at night. Their hands tremble, the legs feel as if they will give away following a walk or any exertion, and the mind is greatly disturbed by the most trivial incidents.

Doctoring the nerves with poisonous sedatives is a terrible mistake. The only real nerve tonic is a good supply of rich, red blood. To secure this new, rich blood use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which have a direct action on the blood and through it stimulate every nerve and organ in the body. Mrs. Alpheus Merritt, Fenwick, Ont., gives her experience with this medicine as follows:—"I had a nervous breakdown and was in the Welland County Hospital for some time. As I was not improving my husband took me out and took me up to my mother's. I doctored there but it did not help me. Then I returned home, and was again under a doctor's care, but with no better results. I would tremble and get numb all over, and the least noise would affect me. I was quite unable to do my housework and was in a terrible condition. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and am thankful that I did so, as after taking about a dozen boxes I was again a healthy woman. I have used the pills since while nursing my baby, with equally good results, and I strongly advise other ailing women to try them."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Facer!
Here is a story of the London tube, told in the Tatler. A certain man who had never considered himself as handsome liked to think nevertheless that the lofty expression of his face more than compensated for any deficiency in beauty. Accordingly, going home in the tube one evening, he was much gratified to see a man on the seat opposite him produce a notebook and start sketching his face.

He leaned across to the sketcher and said gently, "I see you are an artist, sir."

The other smiled. "Oh, in a humble sort of way," he replied. "I design these grotesque door knockers."

His Foolish Things.
"Yes," said Boggs unthinkingly. "I can remember events of long ago as if they happened but yesterday. When I think of my boyhood days—of my escapades at school—of many of my youthful and later actions, and how I got married—I can't help smiling and thinking how many foolish things I've done."

And Boggs wondered why his wife treated him coolly after the visitors had gone.

Useful Invention.
A number of men were engaged in a discussion as to who was the greatest inventor. Some said Edison, some said Marconi, and some said Morse.

Finally, a small Jew got in a word and said: "Well, gentlemen, does any great peoples, but I tell you, do man not invented interest was no fool."

"Happiness is great love and much serving."

Self-Pity.

Self-Pity how came you inside my door?

I've given you the gate oftentimes before!

Who left my door ajar and let you in With cringing men and sycophantic grin?

Honest emotions I admit at times

And count them rather honored guests than crimes:

But you—fool, toadstool in my mushroom bed!

Are even worse than all your foes have said.

While you are here my virtues count for naught;

While you are here useless the good I've wrought;

While you are here my striving is in vain.

To raise the courage that can smile through pain;

While you are here contempt must be my need

Even from friends if they should shrewdly heed

Until your loathsome presence I eschew

I am in sore disgrace—outside with you!

GREEN TEA IMPORTS LARGER.

Statistics from Ottawa show that in 1923, 553,977 pounds more Green Tea were brought into Canada than in 1921, and 906,728 pounds more than in 1922. The reason given is that the fine quality Green Teas of India and Ceylon have displaced the inferior Japan and China Greens which, due to their low price, were imported heavily some years ago. Salada Tea Company is the largest importer of India and Ceylon Green Teas.

Correct.

"Where do most of our traffic difficulties originate, anyhow?"
"Detroit, I think."

The Star Twinkles.

There is a bit of tragedy as well as comedy in the story that in the Tapestry of Life Mr. Raymond Blathway tells of a young man who after years of poverty and misery finally emerged as a poet of the highest order. A certain literary duchess who had been greatly fascinated by the charm and beauty of his verse gave an afternoon tea in his honor.

Poor fellow, he sat in speechless agony, surrounded by his admirers, well realizing that as the star of the occasion he was expected to twinkle at least once during the afternoon. At last an inspiration came to him. He started to speak, and dead silence fell upon the room. This is what he said: "Have you noticed, d-d-duchess, that this year's paw tickets are all pink?"

Even Then a Soldier.

An Italian officer who won distinction in the Great War was in his boyhood the hero of an amusing incident. His chief fault then was that he would interrupt any one if he had anything he wanted to say himself. Our mother, writes Miss Lila Cipriani in A Tuscan Childhood, repeatedly said to him: "Ritchie, you must never interrupt me when I am talking. Wait till I have finished and then say, 'At your convenience, mama, I have something to tell you.' Take time; learn to be polite."

One day toward the end of the season my mother had taken Ritchie and me to the baths at Leghorn. The baths are built in piers and rotundas into the sea, and bridges connect the piers. Before the autumn storms begin the boards are taken away, so that only two long wooden beams and the railings remain.

I had crossed one of the bridges at a considerable distance from where my mother and some friends were sitting in a group and was watching a man who was fishing. Just as I left him and was about to cross the bridge on the beam he called to me that he had hooked a fish. I waited till the fish was safely landed and then started to cross. But so interested was I that I forgot that the boards had been taken away and, walking on as usual, fell into the sea.

Ritchie, who had been standing by me, rapidly crossed the bridge and ran to my mother. Taking off his cap, he stood politely beside her for some time, waiting till she had finished a rather long story that she was just telling. Then he said:

"Mama, at your convenience, I have something to tell you."

"What is it?" inquired my mother approvingly.

"Mama, at your convenience, Lila has fallen into the water."

"What!" cried my mother, jumping up. "Has any one pulled her out?"

"I don't know," Ritchie replied calmly and politely, "but I did not interrupt your story—and she can swim!"

Nasty Nicknames.

"I hope they don't give my little boy any nasty nicknames in school?"

"Yes, mother; they call me Corns."

"How dreadful! And why do they call you that?"

"'Cause I'm always at the foot of the class."

MOTHER OF TWIN BOYS

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Inflammation and Great Weakness

West St. John, N. B.—"I was in a general run-down condition following the birth of my twin boys. I had a great deal of inflammation, with pains and weakness. Finally my doctor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He said that your medicine would be the only thing to build me up. I am sure he is right, for I am feeling much better and am gaining in weight, having gone down to ninety-three pounds. I was in bed for over a month, but am up again now. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to my friends and give you permission to use my letter."—Mrs. ELMER A. RITCHIE, 82 Rodney St., West St. John, N. B.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Ritchie's experience is but one of many.

IN PASSANT.

JAZZ "THE Death of jazz is said to be impending, and indeed some musical writers state, with satisfaction, that it is already dead."
The demise of Mark Twain was once reported, and when he was made acquainted with the fact he wrote saying that the report was "greatly exaggerated." This seems to be the case with jazz, for despite the black-bordered announcement of its having cashed in, we have it on the authority of the gifted musical critic "H. P. B." in last Saturday's Star, that jazz will never die.

If that is so, then the obsequies will have to be called off, and the "sorrowing" relatives who were prepared to write its epitaph in the crude verse usual to such occasions may have to endure the tortures of secret lamentation for its continued existence, and "whistle over the grave."

The place of Jazz in the musical world has been the subject of all kinds of comment. Experts declare that Jazz is a pretentious humbug, occupying by mere bombast a position to which it is not by merit entitled. Some others confess to a preference for Jazz over the sedate sort of music associated with the names of the great masters, but the bulk of the public, musical and otherwise, have the same difficulty I have myself when I say that I don't know what jazz really is. Therefore, for present purposes let us take H.P.B.'s word for it that Jazz is an experimental element in music which will always exist. It appears to be a wild growth thrusting itself into the more sedate and stately forms of musical culture, overgrowing the establishing order of time, and obscuring the tuneful combinations and the refined colour schemes of conservative composers. How's that, umpire?

"JAZZ" is a new word for me. Probably imported: smuggled through without any declaration of origin, yet, as the expression of a virile principle it has caught the popular taste, and no questions asked. It has a kick in it consonant with the spirit of the times.

There is Jazz in everything now: its insidious power is not confined to music: it is to be found in business, in politics, in religion, in jurisprudence, and in manners, and deportment. In all our social relations it is strongly in evidence, "hiding the badness or the absence of the tune." The political "Jazz" which permeates all our "Platform" music at present, and "hypnotises people by strange sounds into listening to rubbish," is getting tiresome. One artist brings in the bass drum and bangs out the "Knell of Protection" at a time when the motif should be "sweet reasonableness" and the concord of sweet sounds: An impresario upsets the harmony of the orchestra in its efforts to interpret "A Federal Budget" in the spirit of the Old Masters, by wedging snatches of "Yankee Doodle," and "The Star-Spangled Banner" into the score: Then a saxophone enthusiast blows in with "A Sweet little Nest, Somewhere in the West," at a point when the rest of the players are figuring on impressive concerted grand finale. Jazz! I should say it is. That is just the word for such symphonic incongruity.

The legal profession has become soaked with Jazz lately. One performer on the legal trombone unexpectedly plays in "The Abolition of the Jury System" while the First Fiddle, the Judge, having five bars rest, is putting resin on his bow: Then up jumps another hornblower, after the performance, and insists upon a reshuffling of the musical parts, because:—(a) notwithstanding objections by counsel the Appellants were tried and convicted jointly with another—who was indicted by the Grand Jury on a bill of indictment separate and distinct..... (b) that illegal evidence was admitted by the learned judge during the hearing of the trial; (c) that there was a misdirection to the jury by the learned judge, (3) that by such joinder of trials on separate indictments the Court of first instance was without jurisdiction and the trial, verdict, conviction, and sentences are nullities in law, and (4) that by the misdirection and admission of illegal evidence a substantial wrong was caused to the Appellants." Jazz, with a big J.

Jazz in business is as common as blackberries will be soon. In the Capital and Labour section of business the man whose job it is to keep the wind in the pipe organ thinks he is putting all the music into the machine, and that the other fellow, the organist, is only letting it out. JAZZZZZZZ.

In trade and commerce jazz abounds. It is incorporated in almost every trade prospectus and commercial report, "hindering and smothering the tune," and giving new names for the noises they make.

Jazz, in fact, is universal. We walk it, we talk it, and I do believe we think it. Bobbed hair, drugs, dope, the money market, postal strikes, police protection, presidential nominations, football, love and marriage, divorce, and the high cost of living, are all different forms of Jazz. There is nothing that can dodge it except the calm philosophy of the farmer, who ploughs today, sows to-morrow, and lives in the abiding hope of reaping hereafter all that the caterpillars, the locusts, the wheat-rings, the tax-gatherers, and all the other forms of jazz-bugs may leave him in peace to reap. Selah.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrup. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. Mr. R. W. W. was a holiday visitor at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. Simpson.

Monday afternoon, Mrs. Neve entertained at a Trousseau Tea in honor of her daughter Miss May.

Mr. D'Arcy Harcourt, Lachine, was the holiday guest of his friend Mr. W. Shaw at the home of Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Shaw.

Mrs. Mount with her son Mr. Hugh and Miss K. Hardy, Montreal, were week-end and holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Robertson.

The Misses Ruth and Dorothy Howell, Mr. Howell, Mr. J. Howell and Mr. Beupre were holiday visitors at their summer home here.

The Rev. W. A. and Mrs. Howard, had for their holiday guests, the Misses Sinclair, McGillivray & Russell also their son, Mr. W. A. M. Howard of Montreal.

Dr. and Mrs. Walsh, son and daughters, of Chicago, with Miss Walsh of Ormstown, spent the day recently with Mr. and the Misses Walsh.

Friday last the body of the late Miss Bethune, so well-known in St. Andrews, was laid to rest in the Cemetery here, the Rev. W. A. Howard officiating.

Mrs. W. MacAdam entertained at a Handkerchief Shower and Bridge on Friday evening, in honor of Miss May Neve. Miss Neve was also presented with a silver Tomato server by the members of the Chancel Guild of Christ Church.

On Tuesday evening last, Mrs. G. F. Shaw and Miss Dewar, entertained at a Miscellaneous Shower, Bridge and 500, in honor of Miss May Neve, whose marriage to Mr. R. Reid of New York, is taking place this week.

With the closing of the City schools, the happy voices and bright faces of children are everywhere to be heard and seen, and once again, summer pleasures are in full swing in our pretty little village.

There was a very good meeting of Christ Church W. A. at Mrs. Robertson's on Thursday last. The next meeting will be July 9th, at Mrs. G. F. Shaw's, when a full attendance is requested, as business of importance for the Annual Sale, Saturday, Aug. 2nd, must be discussed.

Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Robertson and family in the death of his sister Miss Robertson, in Montreal, last Wednesday. The burial was in St. Andrews on Saturday, the Rev. W. A. Howard officiating.

The opening of the Club house is a "Fait Accompli." The dance Monday evening was a grand success. The weather Tuesday was ideal. Tennis was played in the afternoon, mixed doubles, Miss M. Simpson and Mr. Pearce, against Miss Hoad and Mr. B. Hoad, the former winning by 9-7. Singles, Mr. B. Pearce and W. Learmouth, resulting in favor of the former of 8-2. Men's doubles—Messrs. Hoad and York and the Messrs. Pearce 5-7, 7-5. The Tea Dansant was most enjoyable while the evening's entertainment was remarkably good and a musical treat. Much credit is due to the Officers and grounds committee for the success which attended their labors. To Mr. E. A. Learmouth and Mr. Jno. Irwin, Hon. Pres. and Pres., the residents, summer and permanent, of St. Andrews East, are very much indebted. They have financed the building of our Club-house, a building that with its splendid floor, verandahs, cloak-rooms and kitchen, would be a credit to a much larger community. It is now up to every one of us to become, at least, Associate members of the Club, that by that small subscription we may not merely enjoy the building, but meet the obligation resting upon all of us, of shewing our appreciation of what they have done for the whole community.

His Lordship, Bishop Farthing, arrived in Arundel on Monday, 30th June, on his Annual visitation to the Parish, and conducted Divine Service, assisted by the Rector Rev. G. H. Gagnon, M.A., at St. George's Church, Rockway, on Tuesday evening 1st inst.

Mr. Geo. B. Gagnon, spent the holiday with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Gagnon, and left Wednesday morning for Kingston, Ont., to attend the summer course at Queen's University.

Arundel Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 1475, will hold a "Basket Picnic" in Mr. Wm. Thomson's grove, adjoining former school house No. 1, on 12th July. Ice Cream, amuses, and all kinds of soft drinks will be available, and a programme of Races and games will be carried out, with good prizes for each event.

It is expected that a paper from the City will be present to make things lively, and with favorable weather, a jolly good time is promised to all who attend. Be sure and bring a good lunch in your basket.

WEDDING BELLS.

The marriage of Miss Sarah Sinclair, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sinclair of Rockway, to Mr. Herbert Croxton Macrone, of Verdun, Que., took place on Monday 30th June, Rev. G. H. Gagnon, officiating. There was a large gathering of friends and relatives and the presents were numerous and beautiful.

Miss Emma Sinclair, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid and Mr. Thomas Sinclair her brother, was best man.

The happy couple were driven to the afternoon train, on which they left for the city, taking with them heartfelt wishes for their future happiness and prosperity. Mr. and Mrs. Macrone will reside in Verdun, and we wish them long life, happiness and all good things.

PAYING PARTIES.

People in the country frequently are taxed for the building of not only the church of their own particular choice but for those of other denominations which neighbors and friends are interested in. The problem is at times a difficult one to solve. Many of us have willing hearts but lean purses, so we must sharpen up our wits in order to find means to do our part.

Entertainments of various sorts offer a solution, for they bring the people together in a social way. The old-fashioned pound party, apron and necktie party, strawberry festival and oyster supper stood the test for many years and helped to build many churches, but there are newer ideas taking their place. One is a poverty party, where each guest is taxed a modest sum for every bit of luxurious apparel or jewelry that they happen to be wearing. This creates a lot of fun and the judges report on the cases and collect just dues before a modern pancake and coffee feast is served at a small sum per plate.

The initial party is perhaps newer still and may not have been tried in your particular neighborhood. Each guest has to pay an admission fee upon arrival, gauged by the number of letters in his name; five cents for capitals and a penny apiece for the small letters. No middle names are allowed to be overlooked. There is usually a punch bowl of lemonade or fruit punch, a table of homemade candy at modest prices, and if dancing is indulged in ten cents a dance is asked. This yields quite a tidy little sum and does not make an evening that is unduly expensive.

In one small town there were three churches going to be built and in order to be fair the heads got together and arranged their entertainments so that they did not clash, and each pledged to attend them all impartially, and it made the greatest harmony among the workers.

There is another point in church work that these same people cleared up and their findings are worth passing along. At each entertainment the women were asked to furnish food, cakes, pies, cold meats, and so on. Usually all such things that are not sold or eaten are wasted, so the women decided that the donors should take home anything of hers that was left.

Another idea was to have a food sale by each of the different groups on three Saturdays of the month, leaving the fourth Saturday free for all. At the sales home-made bread, biscuits, cakes, pies, mayonnaise, jellies, fancy desserts, baked beans, pickles, candies and other good things were offered at fair prices, and here again the donors took back the things of theirs not sold. The sales were wonderfully popular and profitable.

An indoor picnic is a jolly affair and has one money-making feature. Each worker, matron or maid, arranges a picnic luncheon basket for two, making it as dainty and attractive as possible; then at the appointed time they are sold at auction to the highest bidders, who invite their special girls to enjoy the contents.

EVERYDAY TABLECLOTHS.

It is a fact that pure linen seems too expensive to use for common table wear, but it is also a fact that the much-advised table oilcloth does not always prove to be a satisfactory substitute for linen.

A farm woman, whose dining table always looks inviting, says that unbleached cotton solves her problem. She buys the sixty-three-inch width, and uses it square, as her family is small. It can be used in greater width, and longer too. For trimming, a two-inch band of fast-color checked gingham is used in place of hems.

Such cloths are durable, easily made and laundered, and much more attractive than oilcloth.

LINOLEUM FOR THE STAIRS.

There was no stair carpet and the stairs were painted white. The tenant wondered how she could keep those stairs looking presentable, for she could not afford to buy a carpet to fit them, which would, perhaps, prove totally unfitting to the next farmhouse into which she might move.

For a dollar she found a remnant of linoleum in a neat tile pattern which she cut into pieces the width of the stair steps and about half their length. One of these pieces was fastened in the centre of each step, and the effect is very neat and pleasing. The linoleum softens the sound, is easy to clean and looks much better than a cheap carpet.

A PRACTICAL GARMENT FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.

4568. Here is a style that will appeal to the busy mother of little children, especially those of the "creeper" age. This design provides a convenient closing at the inner seam, which is very practical for children below 2 years of age. The garment may also be made with this seam closed, for the back is in drop style.

The Pattern is cut in 3 Sizes: 6 months, 1 and 2 years. A 6 months size requires 1 1/2 yards of 36-inch material.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 15c in silver, by the Wilson Publishing Co., 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto. Allow two weeks for receipt of pattern.

Send 15c in silver for our up-to-date Spring and Summer 1924 Book of Fashions.

USES FOR STICKERS.

Keep a box of stickers in your china closet. You will be surprised at how many times they will come in handy. For instance, when you want to put away jelly or preserves you can write the variety on the sticker and be sure it won't come off. Another use for them is to paste over the holes in salt and pepper shakers, usually closed with a cork.

TO CATCH THE DUST.

We want to leave the pantry window open when the hot days come, but the dust comes in through the screen. About the best thing to do, then, is to fasten a piece of white cheesecloth neatly over the screen on the inside. This allows a free circulation of air, and the frequent need of laundering proves how much dust the cloth keeps out.

Take from man Hope and Sleep, and you make him the most wretched being on earth.

Minard's Liniment for Aches and Pains

"When Hearts Command"

By ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

"When hearts command,
From minds the sagest counsellings depart."

CHAPTER XXI.

Jean was lucky, for shortly before she was quite ready to start for the farm Carlo drew up at the gate in the two-wheeled cart on his way back from early market. He had a few things to leave on behalf of his master, and Jean readily availed herself of the opportunity for a lift.

There was a so-called road to the farm, but it was a long way round, much too far for her to attempt by foot, and she had been dreading the steep mule-path. Alice would have undertaken the mission of delivering Hugo's mysterious-looking letter, or it could have been sent up by a peasant or farmer's boy going that way, but Jean was too curious about it to delegate the errand to anyone else.

Besides, she was longing for a brief escape from the wilderness of stitching, through which she had been plodding, and this was a good excuse for taking it.

The cart started off at a smart pace. Carlo's idea of travel being to make the little horse gallop madly. The cart rocked from side to side, moving in a fine cloud of white dust, and Jean held on for dear life, her head bent against the wind to keep her hat from blowing off. She had no breath to spare to scold Carlo. But on the up-grade the little horse settled into a more sedate pace, Carlo leaned back with an idle whip and slack reins, and presently they merely crawled. And now they were enveloped in a black cloud, a cloud of gnats and horse-flies, infinitely troublesome. Jean fought them; Carlo and the little horse were indifferent. It was very hot, the hottest time of day, with the southern spring much to the fore.

Jean wished that she were going to Lucerne on a honeymoon, and that she had finished her interminable sewing, and that she had a little more money. In intervals of fighting the gnats and horse-flies she did sums in mental arithmetic—her greatest accomplishment—and came to the conclusion that it would be necessary to wire Christopher Smarke for a small sum. After all, it could be paid back out of Alice's little savings-bank hoard. Weddings are not everyday affairs. Close-fisted Christopher ought to realize that. Of course he did not know yet that there was to be a wedding. Perhaps he would be annoyed that they hadn't troubled to write to him, even though he couldn't come. Some people are so easily annoyed.

By the time the exhausted little horse crawled them up the last steep lap to the fair smiling plateau at the top, Jean was in a pink perspiration between the arithmetic and the gnats, and inclined to regard the world as a hot and excessively troublesome sphere.

The little farm lay grilling tranquilly under the shimmering sun waves, not a soul, not a sound.

Jean, being left at the kitchen door, entered and surprised a contented group of hens making a meal off the untidy remains of breakfast. Men's muddy boots stood about with an air of some time expecting to be cleaned. Other articles of more intimate attire had been hung to dry before a fire which had ceased to exist. Why had they not been spread in the sun? And where was Maria?

Jean called, and presently the old woman came hobbling in with a basket of newly-dug potatoes and a dead rabbit. She did not seem any too pleased to see company. Obviously this was a man's house, and feminine society had to be prepared for and was not encouraged to pay impromptu visits.

Maria said that she thought the signori were in the fir grove taking a siesta.

Jean went out to the fir grove, that delightful little plantation with its odd bits of rock and floor of dry pine needles, which seemed from this lofty eminence to survey the whole world, and found Hector Gaunt and Hugo regularly enjoying themselves. With their coats rolled up for pillows they lay side by side on a slanting rock, eyes shielded from the glare by old panamas, with a pair of pipes and a half-empty flask of Chianti and water to bear them company. "Just like disgusting tramp!" thought Jean as she approached their pleasant sanctuary.

Aloud she said: "So this is how you work!"

Instantly the lazy flow of their conversation ceased, they raised themselves on their elbows, and blinked smilingly at her.

"Hal-lo!" Gaunt cried. "Here's Jean. Well, this is a surprise."

Hugo looked to be in radiant health and spirits. Already he was considerably tanned and appeared to have lost every vestige of his bad cold.

He jabbed at his eye-glasses and his gaze was misty and far away as he added his greeting to Gaunt's.

"We were talking about the Seven Seas," he said, "and once when we were lost and couldn't get our bearings for three weeks. That was long before you came to Bordighera with Madame Douste. Why, Hector was quite a youngster then. . . . But at down, my dear. Would you like my coat? It's not very clean, I'm afraid. We get so muddy on the terraces in the early morning."

Jean declined the coat and settled herself on a convenient boulder under an inky splash of shade.

"Here's a letter for you, Hugo. It came this morning and I thought it might be important."

Hugo reached out eagerly and attacked his eye-glasses again, giving them a very severe punch this time.

"Well, now—yes, of course! I thought so. I could have told you even before I saw it. . . . H'mm, yes, yes!" The murmuring went on as he tore open the envelope and read its contents, while Hector Gaunt and Jean waited to share in his news.

At last Jean's patience wore thin. "Hugo, who is it from? Do stop that silly mumbling."

Hugo looked up mightily pleased. "You can read it if you like. Only a communication from Mrs. Egan's solicitor. You see, I was right. She did owe me that money, and she did communicate with her solicitor as she promised she would. I was right, wasn't I? I knew she'd pay it when I mentioned the matter. It probably slipped her mind. Ladies are so forgetful. But of course she's honest. I never doubted it for a moment. So you see I was right, wasn't I?"

He babbled on while Jean bent her astonished gaze upon the typewritten sheet. When she had finished, she handed it to Gaunt without comment, it being taken for granted that Hugo had no objection to his private affairs being bandied about.

Mrs. Egan's solicitor had written to say that acting upon her instructions he had realized securities in cash to the sum of £5,000, and placed this amount together with bonds to the value of £15,000 to the credit of Mr. Hugo Smarke, otherwise known as Mr. John Bailis, in the Fleet-street branch of Mercer's Bank, whose receipt he held, and who doubtless would communicate with Mr. Smarke. If Mr. Smarke required funds for immediate use, a wire to Mr. Herbert Dowling, manager of this particular branch of Mercer's, would result in a transfer of the sum mentioned to the Bordighera branch of the Italian State Bank.

It was almost as though Hugo held £5,000 in his hand.

Jean gazed in silent awe upon the capitalist.

How had he managed it? Why had he been so sure of getting such a huge sum from Tony Egan's widow? And here it was—here but for the asking, the matter of a telegram or two.

"You see!" said Hugo, immensely puffed.

Yes, they saw, and they wondered. Gaunt began to question.

"I suppose this is a genuine letter?" Hugo laughed and lunged recklessly at his tiresome eye-glasses.

"Bowers"—read the name, Hector. Most important firm of solicitors in London. "Pon my soul, Hector, one would think that you'd lost touch with the world."

She was afraid to believe too readily. She was afraid to believe too readily for fear of future disappointment.

"And now for that telegram." Hugo got up and brushed himself free of pine needles. He was business-like and important. However fluttering his mind might be on other matters, the thought of this money seemed to give it a wonderful sense of balance.

"Just in the very nick of time," he went on. "Because my poor wife is frightfully hard up, Hector. You may not have known it, but I did, and it's worried me. But, of course, after I saw Mrs. Egan I knew it was only a matter of a few days when I'd get this news. Dear me, I was afraid poor Alice might have no dowry. It's humiliating for a girl to start married life with no money of her own, and I disliked the idea of my daughter being in such a position."

A flame of anger swept Hector Gaunt's face, found a burning centre in his eyes, where it rested for a moment, they faded away.

"Actually I am jealous of this absurd little man!" Gaunt said to himself. "What does it matter if he thinks of Alice as his?"

Yet in a way it did seem to matter tremendously, although Hugo's cool assumption of parenthood simplified matters. Hugo, like the man of the world which he most decidedly was not, had swept away all awkward barriers by the easy process of ignoring them. Wasn't it wise? Didn't it dispose for all time of that old and painfully sweet relationship which had once existed between him—Hector Augustus Gaunt—and this perturbed little woman now known as Mrs. Carnay? Hugo had done the thing decently and thoroughly from the beginning. It was too late to challenge him, now; too late for anything that might make life worth while.

With a shrug Hector led his guests to the omelet, the rabbit, and the cheese.

After lunch, while the little horse was being harnessed again, Hugo cleaned himself up, changed his clothes, and packed his bag.

Gaunt and Jean waited for him on the shady verandah and discussed in low tones the possible reason for Carrie Egan's remarkable action.

Insidiously there had crept into Jean's mind an unpleasant word. Did blackmail lay behind the acquisition of that huge windfall?

Happiness.

'Tis not a joy that's born of wealth;
The poor man may possess it.

'Tis not alone the prize of health;
No sickness can repress it.

'Tis not the end of mortal strife,
The sunset of the day of life,

Or but the old should find it:
It is the bond twixt God and man,

The touch divine in all we plan,
And has the soul behind it.

And so this toast to happiness
The seed of which we all possess.

Highest and Lowest.

The greatest height above sea level is not so great as the greatest depth that has been probed below it. The summit of Mount Everest is 29,002 ft. high, and the ocean bed between Guam and Midway, in the Pacific, is 31,614 ft. down. Thus, from the very top to the very bottom is 60,616 ft.

Trees' Limits.

The reason pine trees are so often associated with mountain scenery is because they are among the few trees that can grow at a very high altitude. Pine trees can grow at 6,200 feet, fir at 6,700 feet; but you will rarely find an ash above 4,800 feet, or an oak above 3,350 feet.

EXHIBITION OF SILVER FOXES

Was given in Dalhousie Mills Park on Dominion Day by J. P. Tanton, pioneer Fox Rancher of Summerside, P. E. I.

The Silver Fox Ranching Industry of Prince Edward Island has made wealthy men out of grocery clerks; capitalists out of farmers, and has put on "Easy Street" hundreds of men who were formerly living on a meagre living wage. The story of the Fox Ranching Industry is a wonderful one and reads like a page of romance torn from the history of successful fortune hunters.

Residents of Dalhousie Mills on Dominion Day witnessed a very big display of the wonderful riches of Fox Ranching when Mr. J. P. Tanton, Summerside, Prince Edward Island, put on a special exhibition in the Dalhousie Mills Driving Park, of a Female Silver Fox with her 1924 litter of young ones.

Mr. J. P. Tanton has been intimately connected with the Fox Ranching Industry for the last twenty years, being associated with the original pioneers when the world famous industry was in the complete control of two or three men. He has a remarkable ability in selecting prize winning foxes, many of the champions and prize winners of the different shows being his choice; one of them was the winner of the Female Sweep-Stakes Championship at the Muskegon, Michigan Fox Show in 1921.

Everyone interested in this wonderful industry should see at first hand some of the famous Island Silver Foxes and secure advice and information from one who has been intimately connected with the famous industry from its infancy.

Here and There

In response to the appeal of the University of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Que., for $500,000, to meet present needs, the Canadian Pacific Railway has supported the plea by subscribing $15,000 to the fund.

Canada will soon be the mecca of many moving picture directors, according to Herbert Brenon, producer for Thomas Meighan, who recently arrived at Banff to film the big outdoor scenes for James Oliver Curwood's "The Alaskan."

The fish catch of the world approximates $1,000,000,000 a year in its cost to the consumer, of which $750,000,000 goes to those who harvest it, statistics furnished by the United States Fish Commission declare.

The value of the tourist traffic to Canada is proved by figures supplied by the Parks Department of the Dominion Government, which show that the enormous sum of $136,000,000 was spent by tourists in this country in 1923. This represents the Dominion's fourth largest source of foreign cash income.

On her arrival at Quebec, June 14, the Canadian Pacific steamship "Empress of France" broke the record for the fastest time made between that port and Southampton, England, from which she sailed, having maintained an average speed of over 19 knots. This vessel also holds the record for the run between Quebec and Liverpool.

Arrangements for the Pageant of Empire, to be held at the British Empire Exhibition July 21-August 30, are now rapidly completing. Episodes showing the history of Canada and the other Dominions as well as of the Mother Country from the earliest times to the present day are being organized with the assistance of prominent residents of the Dominion now in London.

Hon. J. E. Perrault, Minister of Colonization, Mines and Fisheries for the Province of Quebec, on his return from a recent extensive trip to the Temiscaming district of that province, stated that there were over 2,000 prospectors exploring the gold-fields of Quebec and at least a million dollars would be expended in development work in the region during the course of the season.

According to figures prepared by the freight department of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the export grain movement via Vancouver reached a total of 48,971,930 bushels on May 31, 1924, compared with a total of 17,387,715 bushels as on May 31, 1923. In each instance the figures cover the crop year commencing September 1st. The increase is therefore 31,584,215 bushels or 181.5 per cent.

Enthusiastic celebrations took place at Vancouver and Victoria, B.C., when the special service squadron of the Royal Navy, headed by H.M.S. Hood, the largest warship in the world and flagship of the squadron, visited those places recently. The squadron is expected on the Atlantic seaboard in August, when efforts will be made by Canadians on that coast to outdo the welcome they extend. The anticipations are that thousands of visitors will gather at Quebec and elsewhere to demonstrate their affection for the officers and men of the fleet.

"You may say that Canada is becoming more and more interesting to Englishmen and before long additional English capital will be used here in the development of industries. I am very optimistic and I believe that we are now progressing towards an era of unprecedented prosperity. What we need more than all now is the immigration of good men who will become an asset to this country," declared Sir John Aird, President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, on his return from Europe recently aboard the Canadian Pacific steamship "Empress of France."

Boarding House Geometry.

Definitions and Axioms.

All Boarding houses are as the same boarding house.
Boarders in the same boarding house and on the same flat are equal to one another.

A single room is that which has no parts and no magnitude.

The landlady of a boarding house is a parallelogram—i.e. an oblong angular figure, which cannot be described, but which is equal to anything.

A wrangle is the disinclination of two boarders that meet together but are not in the same line.

All the other rooms being taken, a single room is said to be a double room.

Postulates and Propositions.

A pie may be produced any number of times.

The landlady can be reduced to her lowest terms by a series of propositions.

A bee line may be made from any boarding house to any other boarding house.

The clothes of a boarding house bed though produced ever so far both ways will never meet. Any two meals at a boarding house, are together less than one square meal.

If from the opposite ends of a boarding house a line be drawn passing through all the rooms in turn then the stovepipe which warms the boarders will lie within that line.

On the same bill and on the same side of it there should not be two charges for the same thing.

If there be two boarders on the same flat and the amount of side of the one is equal to the amount of side of the other each to each and the wrangle between the boarder and the landlady be equal to the wrangle between the landlady and the other boarder then shall the weekly bills of the two boarders be equal also each to each.

For if not let one bill be greater, then the other bill is less than it might have been—which is absurd.

MONTREAL FINANCE CORPORATION LIMITED

Dividend No. 9

A dividend of four per centum (4%) being at the rate of eight per centum (8%) per annum is hereby declared for half-year ending, June 30th, 1924, on the paid up Preferred shares of the Corporation, payable the shareholders of record the 1st day of May, 1924. Cheques to be mailed on July 2nd, 1924.

By order of the Board,
DOUGLAS W. OGILVIE,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Mortgages have always been regarded with great favor as a safe and profitable investment among those who have been successful in saving sufficient to take advantage of this excellent plan of investment. Likewise mortgage companies in all countries and especially in Canada have always been very successful both from the point of view of profits and of security for the money employed. These companies have very few losses in comparison with industrial companies and their profits increase constantly on account of the operation of the principle of compound interest. They are more able than the individual to take advantage of this great principle of money making because of the larger capital employed.

In line with the general records of such companies, Montreal Finance Corporation, Limited, established in Montreal, two and one half years ago, has given a good account of itself since it began operations. This is one of the best of the new companies established in the metropolis and has one of the strongest Boards of Directors.

The Corporation has recently declared its ninth dividend, being a dividend of 4% on the paid up Preferred shares for the six months ending June 30th, 1924. The preceding dividends have been paid quarterly at the rate of 8% annually. The paid in capital, which to date has been insufficient to meet the demands for loans, is constantly increasing on account of the rapid progress being made in getting the capital-stock subscribed.

St. Simeon's Church Social a Record Success.

The Strawberry and Ice Cream Social, held on Mrs. Robt. Miller's lawn, Lachute, on Friday evening
July 6th, under the auspices of St.
Simeon's Church, was generally conceded to have been one of the best ever held in this district. The weather was all that could be desired; there was a large attendance; the servings of delicious strawberry, ice cream and cake were generous, and the programme was exceptionally good. Vocal solos, rendered in fine voice by Mrs. Parris of Lachute and Mrs. Richards of Montreal, with Miss McIntyre as accompanist were much appreciated by the large gathering. Miss Jean Calder, with splendid effect recited from Drummond's habitant poems, while Mr. R. L. Calder, K. C., amused the audience with many laugh-provoking stories.

The major part of the programme was taken by the West family of Montreal, a family of fine young girls, the youngest only four years old. Their playing on bag pipes and drum, then singing and recitations, their acting and fancy dances, sword dance, butterfly dance, Russian, Irish, Scotch and other national dances, etc., were carried through with wonderful skill and with costumes appropriate to the several acts.

The promoters of the social were certainly to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking.

Drawing for a Star Car at St. Julien's Social.

The Parishioners of St. Julien's Church, in the West Ward, wish to thank all those who so kindly assisted in the successful effort made recently to raise funds for the Church.
The Social, held last Tuesday night, in conjunction with the drawing for a Star Car, generously donated by Mr. E. F. Ayers, was a great success—both socially and financially.
An interesting programme was rendered and refreshments were served. The large gathering in attendance unanimously enjoyed a well-spent and pleasant evening. Much excitement prevailed as the tickets were brought forth for the Raffle.
The happy winner of a new Star
Car proved to be Mr. Abraham Gagnier, of Lachute Mills.

The proceeds from the Social amounted to $80.00, and receipts from the sale of raffle tickets reached the figure of $1200.00, totalling a sum of $1280.00 to be devoted to the work of the Church.

was prettily but simply attired in white, was given away by her father.
She wore the groom's gift a gold necklet with Cameo and pearl pen-dant. After the ceremony which was performed by the Rector the Rev. W. A. Howard M. A., the bridal party returned to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Neve. After luncheon,
Mr. and Mrs. Read, left for Round Lake, N. Y., where they will spend the summer, many good wishes and showers of confetti speeding them on their journey.

OPEN LETTERS TO A FARMER

By Rev. M. V. Kelly, C.S.B.

Content When Successful.

I am not going to tell you how to keep your boys on the farm. If there is any piece of advice for which you have supreme contempt, it is surely that. City editors, women's magazines, agricultural college lecturers, farmers who have had no sons of their own, and a host of others who know nothing about it, have undertaken to instruct you on this subject. I have heard few real, experienced farmers say how the problem is solved, and I don't pretend to know. As is generally the case, those who have had the greatest success with this supposed difficulty have least to say in the way of advice. There are farmers, however, all of whose five or six sons continue in their father's calling, and there are others with five or six boys willing to stay on the farm, if their father or mother or both did not actually urge them to something else. If there is anyone really anxious to know how to keep boys on the farm, I should suggest his trying to find out in a number of particular cases—say a hundred or two hundred—just what causes prevailed to make them leave. I dare to write you on the subject at all, because I have done this and feel a little the wiser for it. There are rural districts in Ontario with whose residents I have been acquainted for thirty years, in other districts much longer. In all these districts I know the history of families for several generations. I know the whereabouts of many young men whose grandfathers I remember in their days of ambition and vigor. As far as I can see, in at least nineteen cases out of twenty, a boy will stay on the farm if his father is making a success of it. If the prospects are good, if the farmer understands his business, if his interests are right there, if he has respect for his calling, his sons are satisfied with their lot, their interests also are centered there, they have confidence in the future. It is sometimes supposed by city people, of course, that hard work is driving the boy away. Look around among your neighbors, and you will remark that on any farm where things are going right, everyone is working steadily and faithfully, and it is precisely there that none of the boys are thinking of giving it up. You know men who started with nothing and are called wealthy farmers to-day; you know the long hours everyone, old and young, puts in, and you know that every son is still farming, because there was a farm to give him and he knew how to handle it.

Just while we are on the subject, it is pertinent to remark that not only the boys, but many farmers themselves are off the farms—they once owned and cultivated. Go through a list of these, and you will find the very same causes prevailing; they left, either because they were incapable of managing it, because they were giving too much attention to something else and neglected the farm in consequence, because they became too fond of spending long hours and late hours in town, distracting their minds from their real interests.

or perhaps they had had the misfortune to marry a woman determined to not live on a farm, and dreaming of life in a town, where she and her children could dress with greater delicacy and fashion. Under none of those circumstances could farming be a success; no calling can be made a success without giving earnest attention to it. Farming, like every other business or profession, is full of interest for those who understand it and look after it. If a man's work is not his chief interest and chief enjoyment, he is not likely to be contented with any other.

When Parents Drive Them Away.

I maintained that when the farmer is prosperous, his sons are not disposed to leave the farm. There is, however, one widespread exception to this. Many farmers, when they acquire a neat competence, feel constrained to encourage one or more of their sons to aspire to something else—to enter one of the learned professions—or perhaps go into business. They will let themselves run away with the notion that this is advancing—getting into something higher. Instead of impressing upon their family, in season and out of season, that no other secular calling is higher or nobler or does greater service or is more honorable than theirs, they actually seem ready to belittle their own position and pay homage to occupations less dignified and meritorious. As far as worldly position is concerned, the farmer who can tell of all his sons—five or six or seven—continuing successfully filling the positions for which he himself trained them, has every reason to be proud. Unfortunately, he is often more willing (or if he is not, his wife is) to refer, with satisfaction, to a son practicing law or medicine, than to several who are proving successful farmers; this, even when he is aware, and all the neighbors are aware, that it was the boy of real capacity he kept at home, having encouraged the other to continue at school, because it was evident he would never be able to make a living on a farm. How is it that the boy who leads his class in a high school, and is first in an examination, demands the admiration of all, is reported through the press of the country, while there are no means of drawing public attention to the record of a boy of much greater capacity, just because his achievements are manifested in connection with farm activities or farm management? While the country is stocked with class leaders who are failures in life, I have no hesitation in saying there is no case of a young man capable of handling a farm who would not prove a success in any one of a dozen other spheres.

Between ourselves, you know, there is often another reason for keeping the boy at school; it takes less money to set a boy up in a profession than to set him up on a farm. I suppose we should not be too hard on the father who takes the easier course in providing for his family. Perhaps it is the best he can do. But we certainly do resent his taking credit for doing the greater thing and posing for the admiration of the crowd, as a father who "had done particularly well for his family," "had tried to make something out of them." While he is sparing them, that they may take advantage of opportunities at school, he is also calling upon the Government to disburse thousands of dollars for their benefit. The father who fits his boys for the farm and gives them a start on it, must stand alone; the time has not yet come for governments to consider his efforts and co-operate with them.

In this connection, I would also have you note that the average doctor or lawyer does not belittle his own profession. If it was good enough for him, it is good enough for his boys. He is quite satisfied to have them take up where he left off. Because he has made a success of his profession, he does not feel obliged to train them in the notion that it is a second-rate calling at best, and devote his energies to training them for something else. Why should you?

Rules for Care With Fire in the Woods

If Every Person Strictly Observed These Simple Rules, the Great Annual Loss by Forest Fires Would be Reduced to a Minimum.

1. Be sure your match is out before you throw it away.
2. Knock out your pipe ashes or throw your cigar or cigarette stump where there is nothing to catch fire.
3. Don't build a camp fire any larger than is absolutely necessary. Never leave it, even for a short time, without putting it out with water or earth.
4. Don't build a camp fire against a tree or a log. Build a small one where you can scrape away the needles, leaves or grass from all sides of it.
5. Don't build bonfires. The wind may rise at any time and start a fire which you cannot control.
6. If you discover a fire, put it out if possible; if you can't, inform the nearest Forest Ranger or Fire Warden as quickly as you possibly can.

IN RABBITBORO

The AUTOMOBILE

SPRING TONIC FOR AUTO ADDS TO LIFE OF CAR.

In the good old days it was the custom of many human beings to take a tonic at the first indication of spring weather. The idea was to tone up the system after a strenuous winter and get it in shape for the warmer climate. Nowadays it is the human being's automobile that comes in for the spring tonic. After a period of hibernation in the family or public garage or after months of use in cold weather, bad weather and over frozen roads, every car needs a tonic to put it in shape for warm weather use.

The motorist who desires the maximum of satisfaction in the use of his machine during the pleasanter months of the year and the driver who wishes to get through the season with a minimum of maintenance expense will do well to give his car a thorough going over at this time of the year.

The automobile that has been in storage with its various parts properly protected may need only a mild tonic, such as attention to lubrication, battery, tires and a good cleaning. It all depends on what was the condition of the car when it was put away. To say the least, a good overhauling will insure a more satisfactory use of it than if it is taken for granted that everything is O.K.

INSPECTION IS NEEDED.

The car that has been in use, more or less, during the winter months, will need a much more thorough inspection. The running gear, for instance, should be carefully looked after, especially if the machine has been driven over rutted roads. Such roads increase side thrust on the wheels and consequently upset the steering apparatus, wearing the knuckles excessively, also the wheel bearings.

The wheels, if of wood, may need tightening at the hubs. If the wheels have wire spokes, some of these spokes may need taking up. Spring clips should be tightened and motor support bolts should be given attention.

The owner can do this work himself if he is mechanically inclined and enjoys tinkering with his car. Or he can take his machine to a reliable service station and let an expert automotive mechanic thoroughly and scientifically check up on various parts of the car and administer the tonic in such doses as will accomplish the best results. Or the owner can do some of the simpler things that do not require expert knowledge and then let the service station expert finish the job. This last mentioned method is probably the most practical.

Among these items which can well be given attention from the standpoint of the engine, the vital organ of an automobile, are the following: Scrape carbon from cylinders if necessary. Valves ground and adjusted. Spark plugs cleaned and adjusted. Vacuum tank tested. Oil reservoir drained, cleaned and refilled. Engine tightened in frame. Ignition instruments cleaned, oiled, points dressed and adjusted. Starter brushes and commutator smoothed up. Starter brush springs examined for tension. Carburetor float, float valve stem and float valve weights examined for wear. Carburetor float valve and carburetor needle valve inspected for proper seating. Carburetor body and strainer chamber cleaned. Spray nozzle blown out.

LOOK AFTER AXLES.

The front axle should come in for consideration. Replace felt washers where necessary, examine the bearings, bearings should be repacked with grease and adjusted, yoke pins and bushings and steering connections cleaned, inspected and lubricated, wheel hub bolts tightened and spring clips tightened. The steering gear housing should be cleaned and repacked with lubricant and the gear adjusted if necessary.

The rear axle should not be neglected. Adjust and repack the bearings, refill the differential case and clean it, the wheel hub bolts should be tightened and the spring clips tightened.

The clutch should be looked after. Lubricate the clutch collar, and adjust the clutch collar. The transmission is an important factor. Drain, clean and refill it. Tighten the transmission support nuts.

The brakes represent a major consideration. They should be relined if necessary. At any rate adjust the service and emergency brakes. It is well to give the battery a careful once-over. Have it examined by a local service station expert.

The wiring—what condition is it in? Test for grounds and intermittent shorts, the worn or broken parts should be replaced and the wiring should be tested for loose connection.

The body, besides needing a bath, may require other attention to make it look like a car one would be proud to own. Revitalize it to renew finish and protect undercoats if it is needed, tighten the body bolts.

Having properly prepared your car for the coming season by this thorough-going tonic method, your mind will be greatly relieved—for you will expect to get good service out of your machine and you probably will.

Lady A Must Have Gassed.

Stories of absent-mindedness are common, but one that Lord Ernest Hamilton tells in Forty Years On is so extraordinary that it deserves to be repeated here.

Lord Strathairn, says Lord Hamilton, was so absent-minded that he sometimes forgot whether he was dining in his own house or in another's. On one occasion when he was dining with Lady A and was in a particularly absent mood he suddenly turned to his hostess and said:

"My dear Lady A, I really must apologize to you for this extremely nasty dinner. I cannot imagine what has come over my cook. I have never known her to disgrace herself so before."

Obedient Orders.

An Irishman suffered from a stomach ailment. The doctor was called in and on his second visit questioned his patient.

"Have you been drinking hot water an hour before each meal as I directed?"

"Doc," said Pat, "I tried hard to do it, but I had to quit. I drank for thirty-five minutes and it made me feel like a balloon."

Above are shown Mrs. Long, Mrs. Kingswell and Miss B. W. Redding, England's three new lady magistrates, who were recently sworn in at the Portsmouth court.

For the Boys and Girls

OBSERVE THE BIRDS.

Now is the time to: Study migration. This is the month when birds come in great numbers. It is also notable that the various species arrive almost on the day that records show them to be due. Of course, a severe storm may delay the migration a day or two. Do not fail to keep a migration record.

Note that the early arrivals are insect-eating birds. This shows the great plan of Nature. As soon as the leaves appear, the birds are there to protect them from insect pests.

Watch the tree-tops. Warblers of many species are now to be found and identified. It is not easy by any means. Put up bird-houses, if they are not already in position. It is generally best to put them up in the fall or very early in the spring, but it is still not too late. See that they are in places where cats cannot get to the birds. In some places it is necessary to put a tin guard around the tree; or if you can't use that, put sticky fly-paper around it and it will answer the same purpose. It takes a brave cat to climb over this fly-paper.

Study the songs of the birds and watch how they court. This is the great love-making month and affection is usually shown by wonderful bursts of song.

Watch the nest building. Many species begin to nest in May, but the great nesting season reaches its height in June. It is well to keep a census of the nests on your place.

Take bird walks. Do not forget your field-glasses, note-book, and camera.

Provide nesting material for the birds. This can consist of cotton, pieces of string, lint, moss and various light objects that will help them in their work. For swallows, have ready a mud puddle where the birds can secure their mud.

Make a bird sanctuary out of your farm.

MAKING MONEY AT HOME BY DEVELOPING FILMS.

Developing the films and making prints from them is an entirely feasible way for a boy or a girl to earn money in vacation time, for there are many amateur photographers who either do not know how to do the work for themselves or are not willing to bother with it.

Take a spare room in the attic, a corner of the cellar, or a part of the barn loft, and you will have all the room you need to do all the finishing you can get. The principal thing is to have water at hand.

Having chosen the site for the dark room, fit the room up. There must be at least one window. Build a bench along this one side of the room or set an old table against the wall, to serve as a bench. If you can, put a sink in one corner near the end of the bench.

MANY THRONES HAVE CRASHED IN DECADE

DEMOCRACIES INCREASE FROM 3 TO 16.

Fall of Kings and Rise of Republics Interesting Political Developments in Europe.

The extraordinary changes which have been wrought in the political fabric of Europe in the last ten years probably never have been so strikingly demonstrated as when an enterprising newspaper man recently commenced to collect statistics on the fall of kings and the rise of governments, says a Paris despatch. His results show that in 1914 there were twenty-three heads of European states, of which twenty were sovereigns and three presidents of republics.

Now, in the year 1924, there exist twenty-nine distinct sovereignties over the same amount of territory. Of this number there remain but thirteen monarchies, benevolent or despotic, and the number of republics, more or less democratic, has increased to sixteen. Such have been the results of the World War.

Changes in Italy and Spain.

Here is the status quo in which Europe found itself a decade back. Kings or their equivalent headed the governments of Great Britain, Italy, Spain, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Rumania, Bulgaria, Serbia, Monaco, Luxembourg, Greece, Montenegro, Albania. There were emperors in Germany, Austria, Russia, and a Sultan in Turkey. Only France, Switzerland and Portugal could boast of presidents and republics.

Here is the situation to-day, not taking into account the various changes which have come over the political regime in Italy and Spain. There still remain kings in those countries and in Great Britain, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Rumania, Bulgaria, a queen in Holland and a grand duchess in Luxembourg. There is a new king, Alex-

If you cannot have a sink, get a large shallow box and line it with white cloth; it will do just as well. Then get an extra table for the opposite side of the room and a chair or two.

Fit the window with a light frame built of laths or thin wood and covered with tar paper. Hinge one side of the frame to the window frame so that you can swing it open or close it at will. Lap the paper over the edges of the frame, to shut out all light, and block up every crack or hole in the room so that when the doors and window shutter are closed everything inside is as black as tar.

If there is no running water in the room, keep two or three buckets of clear water under the bench. The sink need not be piped outside. A drain-pipe that will carry the waste water into a tub underneath will serve the purpose.

The apparatus that you will need is: Two trays, about five inches by seven inches, a printing frame, a ruby light, a large washing dish (enameled dish pan), a few sheets of clean blotting paper, cheesecloth, a print trimmer, clean bottles and scales.

Good trays can be made by painting clean cardboard covers with several coats of paraffin, inside and out.

If you have not a ruby light, make one by cutting a hole about three inches square in the side of a starch box and fitting a piece of red glass over the opening or pasting a piece of red paper over it. The glass and the paper can be bought at any photographic supply house. Use a candle or a small kerosene lamp for a light, but make a hole in the top of the box to carry off the heat. Shield the hole from the front so that the light will not strike the tray that contains your film. If your house has electric lights the best way is to use a four-candle-power lamp in the box.

For drying the prints, stretch the cheesecloth over light wooden frames. After you have washed the prints lay them face down on the cloth and place the frame over a gentle heat.

The professional finisher makes a large profit because he buys his supplies at wholesale and makes his own developing, toning and fixing baths; but the amateur finisher cannot do that.

The usual charge for developing is from ten to twenty-five cents a roll of film, according to the size, and from three to five cents apiece for the prints. That will average about thirty-five cents for developing, and making six prints from each film you handle, and of that amount at least twenty cents should be profit. Five films a day means a profit of six dollars a week.

But do not expect business to come to you unsought and by accident. Let people know what you can do by displaying a sign large enough to be read easily, and by every other kind of advertising that you can afford.

ander I., ruler of the Serbs-Croats-Slovenes. There the list ends.

On the other hand, there is a most impressive list of republics or states which call themselves republics in one form or another. There is still France, Switzerland and little Portugal. And there is now Germany, with Ebert as President; Soviet Russia, with Kalinine as chief; Austria, with Hainisch; Hungary, under Admiral Horthy; Poland, with M. Stanislas Wojciechowski; Czechoslovakia, with Masaryk; Finland, with M. J. K. Staalberg; Estonia, with Constantine Paets; Letonia, with M. J. Tachakate; Lithuania, with M. A. Stulginskis; Turkey, with Mustapha Kemal; Greece, at present with a regent, Admiral Condouriotis, and the Irish Free State, under Cosgrave.

How Much Salt in the Sea?

At first it strikes one as strange that, although the sea must originally have been formed of distilled water—that is, congealed watery vapor—and though all the rivers that flow into it, estimated to amount in the aggregate to 8,500 cubic miles of water every year, are fed exclusively by rainfall, which is also distilled water. It should nevertheless be extremely brackish, very salt indeed in the Tropics, and less salt at the Poles.

Yet it is chiefly the rivers that account for the saltiness of the sea. It is estimated that they carry something like 100,000,000 tons of saline matter into the ocean every year, and, further, that the ocean holds in suspension no less than 140 billion tons of salt, a quantity sufficient, if extracted, to cover the dry surface of the earth to a depth of 400 feet.

It is believed that 90,000,000 years have been required for the sea to attain its present saltiness.

And Ragtime it Ought to Be. "Do you intend to hear the 'Tramp's Opera' when it's produced?" "No, it'll be nothing but ragtime, I'm sure."

A Garden Chapel

She seeks her garden in the hush of day,
In those still hours when western hill crests burn,
When wings have sought the nest, and far away
T mountain haunts the restless winds return.

Serene she walks each hushed and fragrant aisle
As if it were a quiet path of prayer,
And pauses now and then with tender smile
To mountain haunts the restless winds return.

In that grave pacing slow I know she leaves
Her world that has so much of care and pain
Until through gates that close on all that grieves
She comes to peace in some untrodden fane.

Returning to the ways she knows so well,
She seems like one who in a secret place
Has heard a voice of love ineffable
Speak words of healing and eternal grace!

The Foolishness of Fear.

Not long ago, writes Miss Winifred Rhoades, I read a doctor's statement about a woman who had become so afraid of eating that she was prolonging a miserable and sick existence on nothing except a few sips of sweetened water a day. Others live so much in fear of germs that they will not lay their hands upon a doorknob, and, if they are obliged to pass a coin to a car conductor, they handle it with paper. One woman of whom I have lately heard makes her life a torture to herself and cuts it off from the normal, helpful intercourse with others because she is possessed with the fear of accidental contact with certain forms of disease or of lurking danger in glass particles and such things.

The habit of seeing things out of their true proportion is everlastingly causing misery. We let ourselves brood on the hardships of our lot and underrate the joys that life also offers, or we fix our attention on the dangers all round us and disregard the glory of living a life of usefulness and brave adventure in the midst of risk. It is of course true that at times disease is sent broadcast into a community by some one's ignorance or carelessness, and the act teaches us the necessity of being honorably careful. But we know also that for the most part the dangerous germs that get into the body are destroyed by minute friendly organisms that are working for health. Most people who touch doorknobs do not die from the contact. And in any case are not the helpful tasks of daily life worth performing even in the face of some risk?

The act is that life is a hazardous business. That is the kind of discipline to which God has subjected us. But God calls us to live our lives, not in fear and dread, but in trust and confidence and hopeful expectation. Why be always expecting the worst? We walk in the midst of risks and dangers but happy are they who go forward day by day in strong confidence in the goodness of the universe, who hold that faithful living of the life of love leads to a happy issue, and who expect to find that happy issue somewhere in God's good time.

The Memorial.

I am glad that little grows to less, And then to no sure thing. How sad were that memorial, in duress Of no diminishing. To stand forever faithful to the tale Of what we strove for, found not, in this vale!

—Richard Kirk.

Why He Wept.

The teacher had been telling the class about the way in which Alexander the Great had conquered the world, going on from one country to another, until at last there was nothing more for him to look forward to. She related how, after he had conquered India, instead of giving a great feast to celebrate his victories, he sat down and wept bitterly.

"Now, children," she asked, "why do you think Alexander wept?" Bobby was in the back row and up went his hand.

"Yes, Bobby?" said the teacher, beaming.

"Please, miss," came the eager, if incorrect reply, "because he didn't know the way back."

Envy.

Jane, the elder of twins, had been ill with the fever, and was now in a convalescent home.

Marie, the other twin, heard with envy of the luscious foods and fruits her recuperating sister was enjoying.

Next day an aunt paid a visit to inquire after the patient. "Well, Marie," she asked, "what will you do when you're grown up?"

"Convalescent!" was the decisive reply.

The French Government recently gave Pierre Lafargue, a peasant farmer, a medal because his family had continuously farmed the same piece of land for 1,151 years.

Jack Miner, Premier Bird Protector

From Hudson Bay to the sunny south there is probably no place so attractive to the migrating birds as the home of Jack Miner, of Kingsville, Ontario. Jack Miner is Canada's foremost and famous bird-man. His land holdings, which are about three miles from the shore of Lake Erie, have been set apart as a Crown Lands Bird Sanctuary. He is the bird's premier protector, naturalist, lecturer, and author of a recent book entitled "Jack Miner and the Birds."

The Miner Bird Sanctuary has become not only a near-paradise for the birds and waterfowl but also a mecca for human visitors who journey thither to get visible proof of the veritable

"Remember that it is the human race that is wild, not the birds. Birds are wild because they have to be, and we are wild because we prefer to be."

Always throw feed and kindness at the birds, and watch results.

We have it from Jack Miner's own lips that he has fed as much as twenty-five hundred bushels of grain to the birds within three months, which, coupled with other kindly measures of his, has clearly demonstrated to his neighbors and to sportsmen far and wide that bird protection pays annual dividends of at least 200 per cent.

Jack Miner has created such favorable conditions that wild Canada geese wonders wrought by a remarkable man in less than a score of years. Here is a tract of some two hundred acres transformed into a beautiful reservation by the planting of thousands of evergreen trees, native shrubs, lilacs and roses. Bird-houses, ornate and artistic, lure many kinds of the most desirable tenants, and the artificial ponds attract so many wild (elsewhere) ducks, swans and geese that the Miner homestead has been called the "hub of the bird universe."

What is the secret of Jack Miner's success? It will be readily grasped by every reader of his book. For a clue let us have a few of the author's own words, surely striking as well as significant:—

come to his ponds by the thousands. He has studied them close up, and through his practice of tagging and tracing them has acquired a wealth of interesting data in relation to their summer and winter abodes and the routes traversed to and fro. Upon his tags he has stamped a short verse of Scripture, so that the bearers thereof become spiritual messengers to those into whose hands they fall.

Besides those great birds that picturesquely wing their danger-fraught way in living wedges, there are many others that Jack Miner protects and befriends. Quail, robins, martins, game-bird and waterfowl, all find welcome and safe harbor in the Miner Sanctuary.

Things You Want to Know About Home Decoration

By DOROTHY ETHEL WALSH,
National Authority on Home Furnishings.

Jacobean Furniture.

When one examines the furniture of early periods from the point of view of determining wherein necessity guided the designs, one reveals a path of absorbing interest. The high chair backer fashioned as a protection against drafts, the wood of the seats designed for the same reason, the foot rails introduced to allow the chair's occupant to raise his feet from cold floors, give us a new perspective toward the furnishings which preceded those we now enjoy.

The illustration to-day shows a Jacobean chair. A development of the Elizabethan, which preceded it, has many similar features. The foot rail, a comfort found in the Elizabethan, is prominent in the Jacobean period. English workmen copied foreign patterns, so that many types can be traced in these articles known as English products. Many articles from Flanders were brought into England during Elizabeth's reign and their influence is carried through into the Jacobean. Fandants and ovals were set in relief on moldings, and scroll work in the shape of the letter S was frequently used. Low relief carving and the circular and semi-circular interlaced patterns are characteristic of the art of the times.

Of great dignity, a shade more comfortable than Elizabethan, Jacobean furniture is capable of filling a place in certain modern interiors. It lends itself well to hallways or any parts of the home to which comfort in its modern meaning is not necessary.

WOMAN DWELLS ON BLEAK ISLE ALONE

TO STUDY HABITS OF MIGRATORY BIRDS.

Claims She Gave Secret of Camouflage to World Through Chance.

An extremely interesting though lonely six months is ahead of an English woman naturalist, Miss E. L. Turner, who has just left London to take up her residence on Scott Head Island, two miles out from the wild and desolate coast of Norfolk.

Miss Turner is marooning herself on this almost unknown and never visited island in order to learn more about bird habits. She has spent years studying birds, but confesses she has gained little real knowledge about them. She is particularly anxious to find out something more about migratory birds, and on this island in the North Sea she will be able to keep watch of their arrival.

Her Invisible Tent.

There are no houses on Scott Head Island, and Miss Turner has taken her own tent, a weirdly painted affair which housed some curiosity among the scientists who accompanied her a far as the coast.

"The tent," explained Miss Turner, "is the one from which I believe the British army took the idea of camouflage. I used it in the Farne Islands as a hiding place while watching birds there in the winter of 1914. It became a dirty yellow and could be seen all over the island, so one day I got some green paint for it. The day was windy. I clutched at the flapping canvas and dabbed paint on it as best I could. Then I walked away from it, and, to my astonishment, it became invisible."

Not Drawn to Political Hats
"Well, the ladies have the vote now—I suppose your wife is noticing the hats in the ring?"
"Not as much as she's noticing the hats in the show windows, I'm sorry to say."

What Is Strategy?

At an examination for non-commissioned officers the following question was asked of a sergeant: "What is strategy? Give me an instance of it."

After cogitating for a moment or so, the sergeant gave the reply: "When in battle, and you are out of ammunition, and you don't want the enemy to know it, it is good strategy to keep on firing."

I will not meddle with what I cannot mend.

LAWNS AND LAWN MAKING

By J. E. Carter, President, Ontario Horticultural Association.

Damaged lawns should be repaired early in the spring, so that the grass will get a good start before the weather becomes warm. Early spring is also a good time to make new lawns, although it is sometimes better to grow some cultivated crop like potatoes and do the actual seeding in September. This will depend upon the character of the soil.

Not infrequently building operations result in a large amount of stiff sub-soil being spread over the surface of the ground. The best plan to follow under such circumstances is to plough or spade in a heavy application of stable manure that is well rotted. If the manure cannot be obtained, about the same result will follow if cow peas or crimson clover be grown the first season and ploughed under with a liberal application of bone meal added before seeding.

Bare patches in established lawns may be restored by scarifying the soil with an iron rake and spreading grass seed thickly. Depressions in the lawn can be removed by cutting out the turf and adding good loam, replacing the turf again level with the rest of the surface. A good dressing of bone meal and wood ashes will help to keep the grass in condition throughout the summer. Nitrate of soda acts more quickly and is especially valuable in giving a deeper color to the grass. Sulphate of ammonia acts in about the same way and is to be preferred where the lawn is weedy, as its application has a detrimental effect on weedy growth. Either of these fertilizers is best applied just before or just after rain. If applied when the grass is dry they are apt to draw moisture from the grass tissues. The rate of application is about fifty pounds for a quarter of an acre. This figure out to about one-half pound for one hundred square feet. If bone meal and wood ashes are used, the two should total the same amount.

Rolling is of great benefit to an established lawn, especially in early spring when the ground is soft. The use of a heavy roller will serve to iron out many minor inequalities in the surface and press small stones into the ground out of the way. If a new lawn is to be made, the surface must first be made perfectly level. It is understood, of course, that deep working of the soil and the addition of fertilizers must have been preliminary. Lawns are expected to endure for many years, but they will soon run out if the grass roots have only a few inches of good soil in which to feed.

Plenty of seed should be used in starting a new lawn. Care should be taken to apply the seed evenly. The best time for seeding is generally either in the morning or near evening on a day when there is little or comparatively no wind. The lawn should be tamped or rolled after seeding to bring the seeds into close contact with the soil and to prevent undue evaporation of moisture.

For quick results sod may be used, and steep banks and terraces should always be sowed rather than seeded, as should also the edges of roads and walks along a newly made lawn. It is important that the sod be cut thin and kept clean and free from weeds, and that the ground be properly prepared before it is laid. Sod properly cut and laid grows very easily, provided it be set firmly on the surface of the ground by the use of a roller or tamper, and well watered until established.

Grass should be cut as soon as it is a few inches high, care being taken to see that the mower is very sharp, so as not to pull out any of the grasses. This cutting should be continued throughout the season.

A good lawn will usually carry through the season without artificial watering, but if water is applied the soil should be saturated to a good depth and then not watered again until dry. The general custom of a daily superficial sprinkling is most injur-

EN PASSANT.

"Saying 'Peace, Peace,' where there is no Peace."

IS there any use in searching after peace?

I have come to the deliberate decision that there is not a particle of sense in trying to find the elusive lady, much less to secure her when found. You cannot locate what does not exist. As Old George says, "Peace has no permanent address: When you think you have paged her, and step up for an interview, you find that it is not Peace at all, but only an aged spinster, name of Hope, that the bell-boy has palmed off upon you."

That Old Pandora Box business was a bad one for humanity, and the big trouble is that it began at the beginning. According to the the first mortal female.....the origin of all human woes. It would have been all right if she had stayed single, but she had other views: like the girl in the "Yeoman of the Guard"—"She must marry, she must marry, though the altar be her tomb." Prometheus was her first beau, but he turned her down, so she took the next offer, probably because.

It seems that Pandora was made out of clay, by Vulcan. Now, Vulcan was a blacksmith, and this first job of his in clay-modelling must have taxed his ingenuity as well as his patience. Anyway he did his best and then got the gods to finish the work.

The statue was endowed with life and each of the gods and goddesses bestowed upon her some special charm as a finishing touch. But Jupiter, who always had a lot of dark designs in his head, gave the girl a box which could only be opened by the mortal she might marry. Prometheus, against whom Jupiter had a secret spite, was introduced to Pandora by Mercury, who was in the plot, and things began to look promising. Prometheus, however, being a wary bird, broke off negotiations at the point where Pandora was fixing up her trousseau. Epimetheus, brother of Prometheus, tried to comfort the jilted girl, and probably being carried further than he intended going, by the interesting nature of his ministrations, found himself in the important role of bridegroom. Then the band played.

Although this story is as old as the hills it sounds quite familiar, in parts. We have heard something like it before, only the girl's name was trimmed down to Dora, and the boys were Jack and Tom, or maybe Harry and Jim.

Well then, after the wedding, Pandora produced her box of tricks and presented it to her lucky husband, in obedience to her command of Jupiter. The unsuspecting hero would have tucked it away somewhere, and all would have been well with the world today, but the impatient bride, eager to see what the secret box contained, stamped her little foot and bade him hurry up and open it.

Now, if Epimetheus had been like some husbands he would have told his Dora that he was boss, and that he would open the box when he was good and ready—but instead of that, the boob missed his best opportunity of setting things straight at the start, and without saying a word just grabbed a screwdriver and burst the lid of the box open. That did it. The instant the lid was off, out flew all the ills and mischiefs that afflict mankind, and spread themselves all over the world. Hate, envy, war, malice, murder and death, were just a few of them: Every known evil was in that box, and they have never been caught since. There is not a known thing the box contained, tacked to the bottom like a list of contents. Everything else was scattered abroad: Thus it is when we look for Hate, to kill it with Love, we cannot find it because it is skulking around doing its evil work; when we search for Envy to swamp it with Content, it still flies wild; when we seek to limit the effects of Malice, by the works of Goodwill, it eludes us; when we try to overmatch Murder and Death with the power of life, we fail; and when we endeavour to drown out the gaunt spectre of War, by pouring over it the spirit and essence of Peace, we fail lamentably, ignobly, and utterly for there can be no Peace until War is packed back into the fatal box and sunk fathoms deep into a sea of oblivion.....Hope only is left to us.....gloating us on to seek the unattainable, and urging our puny binions to impossible flights.

LLOYD—GEORGE, (not Old George this time) in his letter to the Star last Saturday, says that Europe at long last has a chance to secure peace.....

After reading that, I turned up the Official Summary of the Peace Treaty, as delivered to the Germans at 3.17 p.m. on the 7th day of May 1919, over five years ago, and on reading that again carefully.....despondently.....I have to recognise that the chances of establishing peace were more hopeful then than they are now. The wounds of war were fresh then: Now, only the scars remain: The ghastly, grisly, spectre of war still rides in unexpected places—

"And there went out another horse that was red, and power "was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from "the earth, and that they should kill one another: and "there was given unto him a great sword."

HOPE only remains.....Hope, the tag at the bottom of the box; A flickering will-o'-wisp; the ignis fatuus, the Jack-o'-Lantern.....inspiring impossible fancies in men's minds;.....leading them a dance, and dazzling them with fantastic delusions of capturing and bottling up Peace as a permanent anti-spasmodic remedy for WAR.

War is like a malignant cancer which must be cut out of the human system, and its roots destroyed: Then, and only then, can Peace supervene, as an after effect, a beautiful recuperative condition, following the removal of War, and its causes.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE ALDERIC LAVIGNE.

The death occurred early on Saturday last of Alderic Lavigne, at the age of 44 years, after almost a year of failing health, death resulting from cancer of the throat.

Born in Lachute on the 19th June 1880, Mr. Lavigne has lived in this vicinity all his life, and was well known and respected in this town, where friends and acquaintances knew him generally as "Joe." Some 15 years ago he was married to Miss Rachael Blais, of St. Philippe, who remains to mourn his loss. Deceased also leaves his father, Mr. Jos. Lavigne, and two sisters, Mrs. O. Paquette and Miss J. Lavigne, and two brothers, Mr. Felicien and Dr. A. Lavigne, all resident in Lachute.

The funeral took place on Monday from the Roman Catholic Church, and was largely attended. The service was conducted by the uncle of the deceased, Rev. C. Lalonde, of St. John's, P. Que., assisted by Rev. Leo. Lavigne, and Rev. X. Charlebois, of Montreal. Floral tributes received by the family from friends and acquaintances in town were both beautiful and numerous.

THE LATE MISS S. RATHWELL.

The death occurred on Saturday the 5th inst., at her home in Montreal, of Miss Sarah Rathwell, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rathwell of Shrewsbury, Que., after an illness of six months.

The funeral service which was held in Montreal on Monday, July 7th, was conducted by the Rev. W. S. Major of St. George's Church, of which Church the deceased was for many years a faithful member. She was also a member of the W. A., and took an active interest in all charitable work of the church.

The casket was brought to Lachute on the morning train, Tuesday 8th inst., and a short service was held at the residence of Mr. E. Morrison. The Rev. J. A. Lackey, rector of Lachute parish, conducted the service. Although Mr. Lackey had short notice, he preached a beautiful and comforting sermon, full of faith and hope. The old familiar hymns, "The strife is O'er, the battle done," "Peace Perfect Peace," and "Abide with Me" were sung.

The pall-bearers were the three nephews of the deceased Alfred, William and Edward Morrison, also Stuart Boyd and Edward and James Morrison.

Interment was in the Lachute Protestant Cemetery. The many floral offerings, sent by friends and relatives were very beautiful.

There remain to mourn her loss three sisters, Mrs. Mm. Morrison, of Arundel, Mrs. Ed. Morrison, of Lachute, and Mrs. Tappan Egan of Milton, Mass., and one brother S. J. Rathwell, of Archydale, Sask.

Those who attended the funeral from a distance were, Mrs. Rathwell, Mrs. Wm. Morrison, Mr. A. B. and Mr. W. L. Morrison, of Arundel, Mrs. Rufus McCullough of Morin Heights, Mr. and Mrs. James Morrison, Sr. Stuart Boyd and son Nat. of Dunany, also the Rev. A. E. Mount of Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD.

The Lawn Social held on Dominion Day on the Parsonage grounds was a decided success, both socially and financially, over ten dollars being cleared, outside of all expenses. Ice Cream, cake and soft drinks were sold on the verandah, after which all repaired to the field where various sports were enjoyed by both contestants and spectators.

The Nail-driving contest for ladies created much amusement, twenty-four ladies entering. The prizes were won by Miss M. Sherritt, Miss H. Evans and Mrs. H. McDonald. The Three-legged races for both boys and girls caused quite a little excitement, the Misses M. and D. Richards coming first in the girl's race. Other races were:—Potato race, boat race, egg and spoon race, straight race for girls under twelve, young ladies race, races for boys under and over eighteen. Among the men's contests, putting the shot was most popular, Henry McDonald winning with a throw of 28 ft. 3 in. Melvin McDonald being a close second with a distance of twenty-eight ft. The most successful contenders in all games were, Miss M. Sherritt, Miss H. Evans, Miss R. McDonald, and Messrs. Henry and Melvin McDonald and Percy Rogers.

Everybody enjoyed the social and we all hope to have many more pleasant little gatherings of a like nature.

HOLSTEIN CALF CLUB NOW ORGANIZING.

The Boys' Calf Club which was planned at the organization of the local Holstein Breeders' Club last January, as a part of their 1924 work is now definitely under way. The Holstein fieldman, H. M. Hartley, arrived at Lachute Tuesday evening of this week after a motor trip direct from the Association headquarters at Brantford, Ont., and will assist Mr. Bothwell, Agricultural Demonstrator, in selecting calves of a very superior type and ensuring that the boys who take part make a good start in Holsteins.

The club now under way will include boys between the ages of 8 and 14 years, and will be supplied with calves 3 to 4 months of age. Substantial prizes will be offered in a special class at Lachute Fair in September to induce the boys to show their stock in the best possible fit. Immediately afterward, it is planned, the Dominion Livestock Branch will proceed with the organization of a large Boys' Cattle Breeding Club on the lines which have proven so successful in other sections. It will include boys of an older age class, 12 to 20 years, and will be supplied with two year old pure bred heifers. No better method has ever been used to develop young farmers' knowledge and interest in good livestock and better feeding.

BROWNSBURG.

Mr. and Mrs. Flynn, of Montreal, are guests at Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fletcher's.

Miss Alice Bain is spending a few days in Morin Heights, the guest of Miss Olive Seale.

Rev. and Mrs. Jos. Robbins, of Toronto, are guests of her mother, Mrs. A. M. Campbell, Brownsburg.

Mr. Russell Thompson, of Detroit, and Mr. Scarf, of Ottawa, are visiting many friends in and around Brownsburg.

Proceeds from the Methodist Lawn Social held last Tuesday night at Brownsburg amounted to $208.00. Thanks to all who assisted in making this event a success.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton, of Springfield, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Douglass Hamilton, of Grand Rapids, Mich., accompanied by their children, are visiting in Brownsburg and will spend a week at Lake Louise before returning home.

Mrs. Andrew Campbell, with her two little sons Claude and Keith left Brownsburg on Wednesday to join her husband in Carleton Place, Ont. The good wishes of their many friends, follow them to their new home.

Mrs. Robt. Cruise returned from Carleton Place to take part in a Dramatic Sketch given in the Presbyterian Church Hall, Brownsburg, on Thursday last.

After the programme Mrs. Cruise was the proud recipient of a beautiful travelling bag with her initials in gold, from the members of the Choir. The presentation was made by the Rev. Geo. MacKinnon who tendered the very affectionate wishes of all, and sincere regret at parting with her. Mrs. Cruise left for her new home on Wednesday morning.

The Late Wm. Polson.

The death occurred last Wednesday of William Polson, at the age of 78 years. Born on his father's farm, at Brownsburg, Mr. Polson, had spent his whole life in that vicinity, and was well known and liked, and greatly respected throughout the whole community. Besides a wide circle of friends, he leaves behind to mourn his loss one sister and four brothers.

The funeral will take place on Friday at 2 o'clock (Standard Time), the service being held at Brownsburg Presbyterian Church, and interment thence to Lachute Cemetery.

The Late Jas. Tomalty.

Another old resident of Brownsburg was called by Death, when Mr. James Tomalty passed away at 7 o'clock on Thursday morning, the 10th inst. Eighty years of age, Mr. Tomalty had been ailing for the past year. He was the fifth son of A. Tomalty, and in the year 1873 was married to Miss Grace Jane Green, of Harrington, who survives to mourn the loss of a loving husband. There also remain four sons, William and David in Brownsburg, James on Montreal, and John at Dewar Lake, Sask., and one daughter—Mrs. D. McKiddie of Brownsburg.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Saturday from Brownsburg to Dalesville Baptist Church, and thence to Dalesville Cemetery. Rev. P. A. MacEwen will conduct the service.

Public Worship will be held in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday, July 13th, at 11 a.m., and 7.30 p.m. (Standard Time.) Rev. J. Burgess will preach at both services.

A meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held on Thursday afternoon, July 3rd, at the home of Mrs. Jas. McQuat. A pleasant afternoon was spent, and arrangements for the sale of work, Supper and Concert on July 10th, were concluded.

The whole community was grieved when the news was passed that Miss Katherine Elizabeth MacMartin had succumbed. She had been ailing, more or less, for the past three years. She was a universal favorite and many were the expressions of sorrow at her loss. There was a large attendance at the funeral service held in the Church, which was prettily decorated with the favorite flowers which she loved to cultivate. Rev. J. Burgess was accompanied by Rev. Mr. MacFaul, of Ottawa, a cousin of the deceased, officiating.

TO OUR MANY READERS.

Nearing Southampton

June 19th, 1924.

This is Thursday morning and it has just occurred to me that I promised our readers of the Watchman that I would send a weekly letter, giving in brief particulars of our trip.

Wednesday morning, June 11th, found our party all on board the C.P.S.S. "Melita" and sharply at the appointed hour of sailing, 11 o'clock, she pulled in her cables and started out on her journey across the great Atlantic.

To those who have never undertaken an ocean trip there is much of wonderment and interest, and every day unfolds something new.

The trip down the beautiful St. Lawrence enables one to get well acquainted with the lay-out and the general surroundings and accustom themselves to ship life before getting out on to the billows of the ocean.

The "Melita" is not by any means the largest of the C. P. R. fleet, but is 14000 tons in weight, measures 546 feet in length and 67 feet in breadth, with capacity of accommodating some 2,000 passengers and 400 of a crew. Captain A. H. Clews is in command with a splendid staff of officers, all of whom have done their utmost to care for the passengers.

On the second day out the Press party were called together in the dining saloon and given badges of the maple leaf, suitably inscribed, as the sign by which we would be known during our sojourn in Europe. A hand-book of information was also furnished us by Mr. Rupert Davis of Renfrew, chairman of the overseas arrangements, outlining the trip day by day, and containing brief write-ups of every member of the party. In this way we were not long in getting thoroughly acquainted and then the days passed all too quickly. Those whom the motion of the ship did not disturb were enabled to indulge in the games of shuffle-board, tennis, cards, chess or checkers, according to their fancy, but many were deprived of this privilege, although the Lachute representatives were fortunate in being able to be on hand and take in every thing that was going, especially when the bugler announced the call to the dining saloon.

That the ship's staff are ready for emergencies was shown by one of the crew being attacked with appendicitis. It was a serious case but the operation was successfully performed by the ship's doctor, and the nurses in attendance were pleased to report the patient doing well and out of danger.

On Sunday, services were held both morning and evening, conducted by the Rev. A. H. Moore, and the day passed in an honored way. There has been little of import beyond the fact that the members have availed themselves of the opportunity of exchanging views and ideas of their shop life, more so than can be accomplished during the convention periods.

Quite a number of dances have been held during the voyage which afforded real enjoyment, the music being furnished by the ship's orchestra. A concert in aid of the Sailors' Widows and Orphan Fund was also held on Tuesday evening and the sum of $115 was raised for that very worthy cause.

Fair weather has followed us all the way, but everyone is now fully keen in anticipation of being able to plant their feet on terra firma, and there was much excitement as land was sighted and we shortly pulled into Cherbourg. A goodly number of our cabin passengers and a few from the 3rd class were landed on the tender which came out to meet us, and after about an hour's delay we pulled up anchor and were soon turned round and on our way to Southampton. Fortunate indeed were we to encounter such fine weather and we were able to see the Channel Islands, passing along until the Needles loomed into view and then the real beauties of the Isle of Wight were laid open to us, until we turned to enter the Southampton waters. Here, after a delightful run in of about 20 miles, with a most wonderful sunset, we passed Netley Hospital (and our thoughts turned immediately Lachutewards, for it was here that some of our dear boys bled and died.) But in passing, my thoughts were carried back to the time when my dear old Dad was a coast-guard officer at this station.

Everyone was on the tiptoe of excitement as we slid by many of the Royal Mail Steamers and India Troop Ships, Tankers, and vessels of the Union Castle Line, which were lying at anchor in the harbor, and we docked at 10 o'clock with the sun only just passed out of view. The "Melita" had not yet tied up to the wharf when the Ontario Bowling Team, who had just been defeated by Southampton, made themselves known by yelling lustily from the Dock for "Bill Fry," (a popular member of our party) and as soon as the gangway was made fast, a number of Press Representatives, Railway and Steamship Officials, together with the Bowling aggregation boarded the vessel and greeted our party.

The hour being late, passengers were not allowed to land until the morning. A good night's rest and everybody was up bright and early, breakfast being served at 8 o'clock, after which we were treated to a fine drive around the city and outlying districts, where the visitors saw the first of the beauties of the Old Land's fertility, and the daintily trimmed hedges and rose covered homes. Exclamations of real delight were frequent as the cars sped by the beautifully kept gardens with rhododendrons in greatest profusion.

Returning to the boat at 11 o'clock we were soon on our way again making for Antwerp, our final destination, which we hope to reach on Saturday forenoon. Much of interest was everywhere apparent. There were three old Monitors lying off Ryde, which were closely visible in passing. Many airplanes were scouring around, and Hestiar Hospital was also visible. Blockhouse Fort, which is a submarine depot, and Round Fort, which is the entrance to Portsmouth Harbor, were pointed out, and about 6.30 we passed the cliffs of Dover.

A cablegram received by one of our party Miss Stevens, announcing the sudden death of her crippled brother, who is a member of our association, came as a great shock to the party, for he was at the Convention in Toronto and took quite prominent part in the discussions. Arrangements were at once made at Southampton and Miss Stevens is returning immediately on the Empress of Scotland.

Yours very truly,
J. S. GILES,

Visit of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Farthing.

The Right Rev. Bishop Farthing of Montreal, visited the Anglican Churches in the district centering at Lachute on Sunday and Monday of this week. There was an overflow congregation at St. Simeon's Church, Lachute, on Sunday morning, when five candidates received the apostle rite of Confirmation or the laying on of hands. One other, who had been prepared was too ill to attend and was later confirmed in her own home. There was also a celebration here of Holy Communion with a very large number of communicants.

A special service for the Orange-men of the district, with the Bishop as preacher, was held in St. Aiden's Church, Lachute, on Sunday afternoon. Not all of those who attended were able to gain entrance to the Church, the numbers were so great, one car load having come all the way from Avoca.

The next service was held in Lakefield on Sunday evening, when the Church was well filled and seven candidates were confirmed. On Monday morning in the Shrewsbury Church there were two persons confirmed and Holy Communion was celebrated. Service was held in Dunany Church on Monday afternoon and at Brownsburg in the evening.

Very hearty services were held in the Churches at all these stations and very eloquent, inspiring and helpful addresses were given by the Bishop.

His Lordship left for Ottawa on Tuesday morning.

Invited for the week-end

—by Long Distance

It was Thursday afternoon in the country. Hospitable Mrs. Martin seemed disappointed. The week had slipped away before she knew it. No one had been invited up for the week-end and there wasn't time in which to write.

And then she thought of the telephone — Long Distance! What an inspiration! In twenty minutes she knew the Smarts would come — delighted to — and what train they would be on. Splendid! — and she had ordered some extra supplies from her grocer in town to be shipped by express that night!

What a pleasant week-end she will have — thanks to Long Distance!

About the House

LOOKING AHEAD FOR THE CHILDREN.

One acre of our farm has been set aside for the children. Our boy is four and our girl is two. We planted twenty fruit trees on a recent holiday for them, about five of each variety. This acre had not been used, and it is well located for a small orchard. The peach trees will be bearing in three years, at which time the boy will be seven and the girl five. The cherries, pears, and other varieties will of course come along later. We plan to prune, spray, and care for the trees ourselves until they are older, and allow the children to market the fruit to their own profit. We are within twenty minutes of a good market, and of course there will be some market at our gate, which is on the public highway.

We are also setting out berry plants for them on the border of our place. These will be bearing soon, and can be picked by the children when they are older.

Then the boy has eight hens, which he helped to hatch in the spring. He keeps these hens in a separate coop and feeds and waters them regularly.

We believe that when the children are older all this will be healthful work for them in the summer vacations, right at home, and they will have a measure of responsibility. The boy is already proud of his part ownership in the trees, and in time they both will swell their savings-account for college from the sale of the fruit. They will be managing, under direction, a small business of their own. They will be kept busy. So far I've found that when my children are kept busy and interested, automatically they are good.—C. J.

CURTAINS ARE IMPORTANT.

It takes only a tiny touch of bright colors to set a room off, and the first thing we know, instead of a dreary, stupid, rather tiresome feeling place, we have a bright, cheerful, attractive room. The curtains and draperies afford a chance to indulge in livelier color than we can use in the wall paper, rug, or upholstery.

They need not be expensive. There are innumerable materials with which we may get the prettiest of effects without paying an enormous sum of money.

First of all, have you looked over the gingham and chambrays in your local dry-goods store? Have you considered the possibilities of the voiles, or cheesecloth, or dress muslins, and unbleached cotton cloth? Every one of these materials offers an almost unlimited opportunity for pretty and inexpensive curtains, with the addition of a little ingenuity and a little taste.

Then there are the pretty and inexpensive cretonnes and chintzes. The darker ones for dining and living-rooms, the lighter ones for the bedrooms. In the more expensive materials, there are the thin silks and the sunfasts, the velours and velvets.

But the secret of making the room bright and attractive lies in getting the right color and the right texture. The color must match the wall paper, be a little stronger, so as to separate the window from the wall a little, and also be something like the rug and upholstery in tone. For example, tan walls may have tan, ecru, brown, or, for contrast, blue, or blue and tan, or blue, tan, and brown. They may even show a little orange or red. But be sure that some of the colors in the curtains are in walls, rug, and chair coverings.

For the bedroom we often choose a plain color that is exactly the same shade as the color of the flowers in the paper. If the paper is white with green leaves and blue flowers, the curtains would naturally be blue, the same as the flowers. A little blue gingham would be perfect. And if inside curtains of thinner material are used, these could be a simple, plain, clear white voile or scrim, possibly with a narrow tating edge. Usually these glass curtains follow the tone of the background color of the paper. If that is warm and creamy, then keep the curtains similar—quite creamy. If yellowish, then use a more yellowish tone. If the background is white, a white curtain is used.

Many of these simpler glass curtain materials may be used to brighten the room by the addition of a tiny band or edging of color to match the paper. With the heavier cloth like the unbleached cotton, crossway bands in cretonne, sateen, or colored cotton are often very pretty and effective. Especially is this true in the bedrooms where bed covers may be made to match. Cheesecloth is likewise a sensitive and fascinating material to use—and a dipping in the dye-pot will make it any color you wish. The light filters through it very nicely, and it is very pretty for almost any room in the house.

Texture needs a word. Some materials are rough, some are smooth. If your wall paper is very smooth, it is best to avoid using a coarse texture or rough-feeling material at the window. If the paper or wall is rather rough, then avoid the smooth-finished material. These are small points, but they often make a great difference in the way a room feels to you. The mixture of textures is like having two people contradicting you at the same moment—very disturbing.

THAT SMELL OF COOKING.

The pleasant smell of dried coffee grounds sprinkled on a hot shovel will counteract the unpleasant odors of cooking in a house. A few of the grounds scattered on the top of the kitchen range will keep the smell of food from spreading to other rooms. Try this plan when fish is being fried.

Rooms in which people have been smoking usually have a stale smell when opened in the morning. This can be largely prevented if, before going to bed at night, a big bowl or a pail of water is put in the room. When there is illness and windows in rooms must to a large extent be kept closed, the air may be delightfully freshened if some dried lavender is put in a bowl and this is then covered with very hot water. The addition of a little dried orange peel makes the fragrance more agreeable.

A PRACTICAL PLAY SUIT FOR BOY OR GIRL.

4242. Here is a new and pleasing version of the Romper style, with outstanding pocket sections, and comfortable sleeve. Chambray, gingham, khaki, linen and cretonne are good for this design.

The Pattern is cut in 5 Sizes: 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. A 4-year size requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material. To trim as illustrated will require ¾ yard of 36-inch contrasting material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 15c in silver, by the Wilson Publishing Co., 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto. Allow two weeks for receipt of pattern.

Send 15c in silver for our up-to-date Spring & Summer 1924 Book of Fashions.

CHRIST'S BAPTISM RECALLED ANNUALLY

BY SPLENDID FETE IN BUCHAREST.

Greek Orthodox Church Celebrates "Water's Holy Day" With Great Ceremonial.

Toward the end of January the Greek Catholic or orthodox church in Bucharest celebrates "water's holy day." This is one of the greatest festival days of the church. It is devoted to the remembrance of the day when Christ went down to the River Jordan to be baptized by John the Baptist, writes Hanne Serno.

In all orthodox countries, as in Russia, Greece, Serbia, Bulgaria, Armenia and Rumania, the day is celebrated with great splendor. The running water, wells, rivulets, streams and lakes, is hallowed on water's day and possesses at that time a miraculous power.

Men go out that morning to have ice cold water from the pump in the yard run over their head and bodies so that they may be protected against all sickness during the year. Everywhere processions are held by the clergy, followed by the town authorities, soldiers and the people. The procession goes to the nearest river. There a golden cross is thrown into the water by the highest clergyman.

Two men of the people jump into the ice cold water to get the cross out again. Since the winters are extremely cold in Russia and Rumania, a hole must be made in the ice for this ceremony. In Russia a soldier used to be ordered to dive for the cross. In Rumania, however, it is usually a peasant who offers himself for this service in the hope of a big reward.

Picturesque Procession.

The bigger the town is the more splendid is this procession. In Bucharest, where are situated the king's residence and the homes of the highest Rumanian clergy, the procession is particularly brilliant. The train goes from the king's palace, through the main street, the Calea Victoriei, down to Slatar church and thence to the Dambovitza river.

The good health of the King is partially explained by the above photograph, showing His Majesty out for his regular morning ride in Windsor Park. The first generation travels at a sedate pace, but at the same time manages to stay on.

STORIES OF WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE

Too Much for Balfour.

Mr. (now Lord) Balfour was one day strolling near his Scottish home at Whittinghame when he was accosted by an old man hailing from a neighboring village. On being presented with a shilling, the man whispered to Mr. Balfour: "Mon, dae ye ken what I'm gaun to tell ye?" "No," replied the statesman. "Well," was the rejoinder, "it's gaun to rain seventy-two days." Mr. Balfour, thinking to have a little fun with him, remarked: "That cannot be, for the world was entirely flooded in forty days." "But," returned the old fellow, "the world wisna sae weel drained then it is noo."

Field-Marshal's "Crimes."

Field-Marshal Sir William Robertson, in conversation recently regarding his early days in the Army—he joined up as a private when seventeen years old—he confessed that his first "crime" was letting a prisoner go, his second letting a horse go, and then at Brighton, at a Volunteer review, a man who was under his charge refreshed himself too freely and his horse ran away with him.

The Colonel then said to young Robertson: "I am getting sick of you; first you let a man go, then you let a horse go, now you let a man and horse go."

A Threat That Had Effect.

General Sir Archibald Macdonnell has found himself on occasion in as ticklish situations as that recently precipitated by his irrepressible cadets, and has emerged by dint of no less masterly generalship.

As commissioner of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police it was once his duty to try an Indian for murder. The prisoner had been haled out of the far north together with a woman, the only witness of the crime. But to the dismay of the prosecution the squaw, who

At the head of the procession walk two priests with the golden cross. The metropolitan-primas follow with the king, other members of the royal house, and foreign princes. Next comes the entire retinue of the king, the ministers and foreign ambassadors, the city authorities and high army officers.

After the church ceremony is over, the king views a parade of his soldiers. In former times, before King Carol became sovereign of Roumania, the princes, called voyvods or boyars, and their wives appeared at the procession in their exquisitely beautiful national costumes on special two-wheeled carriages pulled by two, four or six horses, according to the rank of the owner. That was a colorful sight.

Though the modern water's day procession lacks this particular trait the procession is still very picturesque.

Blown Sails.

The clouds before the northern scud Across the wintry sky. Like sails in ribbons blown away From all the ships gone by— The ships that labored in the wind And wallowed in the foam, And sometimes never saw again The harbor lights of home.

Brown sails of barks from tropic parts Below the stormy capes, With cargoes of mahogany And parakeets and apes— Gray sails of schooners odorous Of fish and briny sea, White sails of clippers sweet with scents Of cinnamon and tea.

The snowy cloths that towered aloft On frigates proud and tall, Patched canvas lost from dingy sloops In hurricane or squall. Topgallants, royals, flying jibs Bellooning in the blast, Ripped from the stays and swept away To black abysses vast.

Borne on the tempest's thrashing wings Between the sky and spume, They rode the elemental strife And vanished in the gloom— The clouds before the northern fly, Unquiet ghosts of sails Blown long ago from hapless ships That foundered in the gales.

Collecting Wild Flower Names.

A holiday-maker on a walking tour in England asked the country people the common names of the wild plants of the vicinity. He found that both the children and the adults were well acquainted with the wild flowers, but that the names they gave him were often different from any that he could find in books. Many of them were poetic or quaintly descriptive, and some had historical associations.

After returning home the man continued to take walking tours and to follow the practice of collecting the every day names of plants and flowers. Our Canadian wild flowers, like those of England, are connected with our national life, as is seen in the names that the common people give to the plants of our roadsides, fields and woods. The number and the significance of the names have been only partly studied, and there are probably more of them than have never been recorded than are set down in books.

In collecting the names it is not safe to accept every answer to an inquiry as being useful to your purpose, because some of the names may be only the expression of personal fancies. "I don't know just what the right name is," but I call it so-and-so." If others conversant with plants in the same neighborhood recognize the name when they hear it you can know that you have a true folk name.

In the record enter the scientific name, the popular name, the neighborhood where it bears it—if you can discover the reason.

Have a botanist identify your specimens if you do not know them. Communicate your discoveries from time to time to your local natural history club or to a plant journal, as a contribution to the knowledge of our national folklore.

Listens to Fiction Now.

Old Friend—"Do you read fiction at night like you used to do?"

Wife—"No, not at all, I have my husband to listen to now every evening, you know."

The Innkeeper of the Rhine.

Across the Rhine, a company of French engineers were building a pontoon bridge to join their restored province of Alsace with the German land on the other side, which France holds as a defensive bridgehead. One of the pontoons gave a lurch, and in a moment two French engineers were in the stream. Away the swift current swept them as if to certain death.

Just below them on the bank stood Max Fladt, the innkeeper of Kehlon-the-Rhine, opposite Strasbourg. The two men were enemies of his country, and he knew that seven Germans had recently been condemned to death for damaging French property and were even then in prison at Mayence. Nevertheless, flinging off his coat, he plunged into the river. A strong man and an expert swimmer, he caught the two Frenchmen as they were passing him and brought them safe to the shore.

A day or so later Max received a visit from the French general in command, General Nichel. "Whatever you may wish for will be regarded as deserved and recommended to grateful France, who has received two sons back from the jaws of death," said the general.

Max promptly asked that as his only reward the lives of his fellow countrymen lying in prison at Mayence under sentence of death might be spared.

The general replied that he would make the wish known in the proper quarter, and that he himself would give it his earnest support. In the attitude of these two men, the French general and the German innkeeper, lies the germ of peace and understanding.

MOPS.

It is not always necessary to use a mop for the thing which man intended it to be used when he manufactured it. The most satisfactory mop I ever used to wipe up linoleum floors was a commercial dust mop. If it had been oiled, so much the better; oil helps to put a polish on the linoleum and hardens the surface, protecting the design and keeping it clean longer.

For dusting and polishing my stove I have a cotton dish mop from the five-and-ten-cent store. The soft cotton reaches all the crevices, wipes away the dust without leaving any scratches, and soon contains enough polish to brighten up a really dirty stove. Best of all, its handle is far enough from the scene of operations that it may be kept bright and clean, not blacking the hands as the stove cloth is prone to do. When not in use the mop is stuck, top down, in a round baking-powder can. For applying the blacking to the stove I have a cheap, flat paintbrush; the vigorously used mop does the rest.

HEALTH EDUCATION

BY DR. J. J. MIDDLETON

Provincial Board of Health, Ontario

Dr. Middleton will be glad to answer questions on Public Health matters through this column. Address him at Spadina House, Spadina Crescent, Toronto.

Eye fatigue is an important subject for discussion. A large percentage of the people of this province are unaware of the dangers to their eyesight that result from fatigue. We have only one pair of eyes—that is, those of us who are blessed with normal vision, and the eyes we have are the only ones we ever will have. It is most important therefore that we try to preserve our sight as much as possible and not subject it to any unnecessary strain. For a long time it was thought that strain on the eyes only applied to students. Scarcely anybody suffered from eye headaches except the bookworms. Now we find that many other classes of people are affected with eye strain. Take the farmer plowing his furrow, who looks steadily at the ground hour after hour trying to keep in a straight line and trying not to "bite off" too much or too little earth at each roll of the sod. To do this he keeps his eye muscles in the same state of contraction all day long. When evening comes he often has some little bit of ground to finish and keeps on in the fading light, thereby increasing the strain to which he has been subjected all day. His muscles get tired, his nerves get tired, his brain gets tired and then when he goes home he often subjects his eyes to further strain by doing chores about the house or barn or reading the paper in imperfect light.

There is nothing that sooner reflects on the general health of the individual than eye strain, for it has a very strong influence on the general nervous mechanism of the body and continuous eye strain may lead in time to general nervous breakdown.

The eye is a most intricate piece of apparatus and very delicate in its construction. No machine made by man is so perfect in construction or so elaborate in design. To serve the eye, no less than twelve muscles are provided. Of the twelve important nerves that come off directly from the brain, one-third, or four, are for the service of the eye.

Shortly after the start of life we are endowed with good eyes and if care is taken we preserve them. But there are many pitfalls by the way, and from one cause or another the eyesight becomes not so good as it should be. There is the question of strabismus or squint to be thought of. This often develops in early life due to weakness of certain of the eye muscles which from one cause or another fail to develop as they should and thus the more powerful and more developed muscles rotate the eye out of its proper place and the condition commonly known as squint results. There is a remarkable lack of knowledge about the seriousness of squint. Many people have the opinion that squint in children will right itself if left alone. There are thousands of one-eyed people in this province today just because their parents thought they would allow the squint to right itself. Intelligent and proper medical treatment of the eyes in squint is the only way by which one can hope for good results. Never leave a case of squint to right itself. Go to an oculist at once, and especially in the case of young children this condition of squint should be rectified if possible before the child is five years old. If allowed to go longer, the sight of the "turned" eye will most likely be damaged for life. An ounce of prevention in this case is worth a pound of cure.

PAINFUL SCIATICA AND NEURALGIA

Caused by Starved Nerves Due to Weak, Watery Blood.

People think of neuralgia as a pain in the head or face, but neuralgia may affect any nerve of the body. Different names are given to it when it affects certain nerves. Thus neuralgia of the sciatic nerve is called sciatica, but the character of the pain and the nature of the disease is the same, and the remedy to be effective, must be the same. The pain, whether it takes the form of sciatica or whether it affects the face and head, is caused by starved nerves. The blood, which normally carries nourishment to the nerves, for some reason no longer does so and the excruciating pain you feel is the cry of the starved nerves for food. The reason why the blood fails to properly nourish the nerves is usually because the blood itself is weak and thin.

When you build up the impoverished blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, you are attacking sciatica, neuralgia and kindred diseases at the root. As proof of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind we give the statement of Mrs. Marion Bell, Port Eglis, Ont., who says: "Some years ago I was attacked with sciatica in my leg and hip. The pain was excruciating and finally I was forced to go to bed. Apparently the doctor could do was to give me drugs to dull the pain, as otherwise I found no relief. I had been in bed with the trouble for eight weeks when a lady who came to see me said that she had had a similar attack, and had only found relief through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided at once to try this medicine, and before I had taken more than three boxes I found relief. I continued the use of the pills and under the treatment the pain left me. I was able to walk again, and have not since had the least return of the trouble. I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been of such great benefit to me that I strongly urge similar sufferers to give them a fair trial."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

No Ambition.
The election just fought has been prolific in good stories.

One told by Mr. Walter Runciman is particularly neat.

A certain candidate was trying his level best to win the hearts of his audience.

"I am English born and bred," he announced. "My father and grandfather were English, my wife is English, my works are in England, and my workpeople are all English."

At that point a pitying voice came from the back of the hall:

"Oh, mon," it said, "has ye nae ambition?"

What makes one admire a mother's love and marvel at it is a photograph of ourselves taken at the age of ten or twelve.

Courtship by Cards.

The visiting card is of Chinese origin. The Chinese have always observed the strictest ceremony with regard to the paying of visits. It is reported that more than a thousand years ago the visiting card was used in China. Nowadays the cards used are very large, and usually of a bright red color. The Chinese employ visiting cards to assist their courtship. When a man is ready to marry, his parents inform a professional "matchmaker," who looks through a list of her clients and, after due consideration, selects the one she considers would make a suitable bride.

She takes his card, upon which are inscribed his ancestral name and the date of his birth, and calls upon the girl. If the latter is willing to listen to his suit, she sends her own card in return. After that the oracles are consulted, and should they prophesy good concerning the marriage, the details of the engagement are written on two large cards, which are then tied together with red cord.

How the English Make Toffee.

Mix four cups of brown sugar and half a cup of corn syrup with half a cup of water, and put on the fire, stirring carefully until all the sugar is dissolved. Let this come to a boil and then take off the fire and add four tablespoons of butter. Put the mixture back on the stove once more and boil until the butter has penetrated throughout the candy. Pour onto a greased enameled ware tray of any kind and, as the candy cools, mark it into squares. When it has hardened break these apart and wrap each piece separately in wax paper. Incidentally, you will find that the labor of "cleaning up" is a great deal less if you have used an enameled ware saucepan for the cooking, since even the stickiest mixtures do not adhere long to its porcelain-like surface.

SAVED BABY'S LIFE

Mrs. Alfred Tranchemontagne, St. Michel des Saints, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent medicine. They saved my baby's life and I can highly recommend them to all mothers." Mrs. Tranchemontagne's experience is that of thousands of other mothers who have tested the worth of Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a sure and safe medicine for little ones and never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach, thus relieving all the minor ills from which children suffer. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Lilac.

There is a dryad in the lilac tree,
A bright and lovely thing of joy and grace,
Beckoning ever with arch-coquetry,
Lo! I have seen her face,
No woodland sprite is she, brown limbed and shy
(Pain's light o' love), but gay and sweet and quaint Like some fair lady of a day gone by,
Half siren and half saint.

Of rich brocaded lilac silk her gown,
Emeralds and amethysts adorn her throat,
Diamonds and pearls of rain her beauty crown,
Perfumes around her float,
Green are her petticoats and lavender
The plumes that all about her nod and sway,
Milton and Shakespeare loved to sing of her—
And Herrick—she is May.

Not So Near the Heart.

A young mother, catching her husband in mute contemplation before the cradle of her first-born, was thinking what a beautiful sight it was when he suddenly turned round and exclaimed in a gruff voice:

"My dear, the more I look at it the more I am at a loss to understand how the furniture dealer could have the impudence to charge you twenty-five dollars for this horrible cradle!"

EASY TRICKS With Three Dice

Many of the best tricks are performed by utilizing facts about which few people are informed. An effective little trick with dice owes its mystery to the fact that very few persons, even those who are familiar with dice, really know how the spots are arranged.

Ask a person to throw three dice while you stand with your back to the table. Ask him to add the number of spots thrown—the total of the spots on the upper faces of the three dice. Then ask him to turn each die upside down and add to the total of the spots on the top of the dice, the total of the spots which are underneath.

Ask him to concentrate on the number. After an appearance of concentration yourself, tell him that the total is 21. You will be right.

(Olip this out and paste it, with other of the series, in a scrapbook.)

He receives more favors who knows how to return them.

Going, Going, Gone.

An ancient car chugged painfully up to the gate of the county fair races. The gatekeeper, demanding the usual fee for automobiles, called:

"A dollar for the car!"

"Sold!"

Civilization is the result of taking pains. Individual advancement depends upon the same fact.

Here and There

It is announced that vigorous efforts will be made by the Government of Manitoba to effect the actual settlement of 224,000 acres of vacant provincial land now under the administration of the Crown.

For the week ended June 21st traffic earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway amounted to $3,301,000, as compared with $3,159,000 for the corresponding period of 1923. This is an increase of $142,000 or 4.4 per cent.

Reports from the Rouyn gold fields of Quebec continue to indicate a great future for that territory. Development is proceeding apace and the English capital now flowing into Canada in search of good investments is interesting itself in this area.

Three carloads of seed grain are being shipped weekly from the provincial seed cleaning and marketing plant at Edmonton, Alta. About 50,000 bushels of seed grain have been handled by the plant since last fall and 20,000 bushels more will be handled before the year's seedling is completed.

The International Paper Company intends to add two new machines to their plant in Three Rivers, Que., so as to increase their production from 300 to 450 tons daily. Another project is also under consideration, viz., to build a plant in Batiscan instead of enlarging the Three Rivers one.

Out of every dollar the Company earns, the sum of 81 cents is spent by the Canadian Pacific Railway in the home markets of Canada for wages, materials, supplies, taxes and insurance, figures recently issued show. In 1923 the total earnings of this great corporation were $195,887,089, and every community in Canada directly benefitted by the expenditure of 81 per cent. of this huge amount in the home market.

The 1924 cut of the East Kootenay (B.C.) forestry district gives promise of running to a grand total of 150,000,000 feet. There is a particularly brisk business in poles of longer lengths and in railway ties, and a cut of some 1,000,000 sawn ties and the usual quantity of the hewn variety is looked for. Sixteen sawmills are now in operation and indications are that there will probably be thirty going before the season closes.

Canada now takes third place, and second place among British possessions, of the gold-producing areas of the world. The total gold production of the world for 1922—the latest year for which returns are available—was 15,440,000 fine ounces, of which the Transvaal produced 7,020,110, or 45.5 per cent. The United States came second, with 2,863,075 ounces, or 18.5 per cent., and Canada followed, with 1,263,864 ounces, or 8.2 per cent.

June 18th was the anniversary of the running of the first Imperial Limited, the Canadian Pacific Railway's famous transcontinental. This was not the Company's first transcontinental, as trains began regular service between Montreal and Vancouver as far back as 1886, but for several years it was the crack Canadian Pacific express. To-day the premier place is held by the Trans-Canada Limited, the fastest long-distance express in the world, which makes the run in 90 hours, or 10 hours less than the run of the original Imperial Limited.

The Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, which will be held July 17-18 at Yoho, will take place in a big sun-dance lodge decorated by Stoney Indians. The order aims to encourage travel through the Canadian Rockies, outdoor life, nature study, and forest conservation, and to honor early explorers. Many noted authors and artists have joined and E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has donated $1,000 towards expenses.

The Canadian Pacific S.S. "Empress of Canada" arrived at Vancouver, B.C., on May 24th, following a world cruise of five months and nearly 30,000 miles. The passengers witnessed a remarkable eruption at Hilo, in the Hawaiian Islands, on May 17th. After a public welcome at Vancouver, they left for the East, stopping en route at Banff Springs Hotel for a dinner-dance. E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific, who met the ship, said that she had done important missionary work in carrying the Canadian Ensign over the Seven

NOTICE.

Re: Vacant Succession of Michel Blondin.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that Joseph E. Parent, notary of St. Jerome, has been appointed curator to the Vacant Succession of Michel Blondin, in his lifetime blacksmith of the Town of St. Jerome, by virtue of a judgment of the Superior Court for the district of Terrebonne dated the twelfth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty four.

And all interested parties, creditors and others are requested to file their claim under oath in the hand of the undersigned within thirty days from the first insertion of the present notice.

Signed at St. Jerome, this 9th day of July 1924.

J. E. PARENT, N.P.

7-25-2. Curator.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the undermentioned LANDS and TENEMENTS have been seized, and will be sold at the respective times and places mentioned below.

WILLIAM WILSON plaintiff; against MARGUERITE LIMITEE, defendant.

As belonging to the said defendant, the following immovables, namely:

1. A lot of land situate in the parish of Sainte Marguerite du Lac Masson, in the county of Terrebonne, known and designated under the number one of the subdivision of original lot number twenty three (lot 23-1), on the official plan and book of reference of the parish of Sainte Marguerite, in the sixth range of the township of Wexford, containing in superficies one million ninety two thousand six hundred square feet (1,922,600 s. f.), more or less, English measure;

2. Another lot of land situate at the same place, known and designated under number one of the subdivision of original lot number twenty four (lot 24-1), on the same official plan and book of reference of the parish of Sainte Marguerite, in the sixth range of the township of Wexford, containing in superficies four hundred and sixty seven thousand three hundred and sixty-two square feet (467,300 s. f.), more or less, English measure—with the buildings thereon erected, as the whole now subsists, with the active and passive servitudes, apparent and unapparent, attached to the said immovables. Subject also, however, the said lot number one of the subdivision of the said original lot number twenty three (lot 23-1), to the reservation of all merchantable timber thereon, and of the cut of such timber in favour of Raymond Pepin and Antoine Pepin, saw-mill owners of the said place of Sainte Marguerite, according to the terms of the deed of sale of the said immovables given by them to Leopold Pepin and to Clarence Louis Fortier, executed before J. P. Cardinal, notary, the eighth of October, one thousand nine hundred and seventeen (1917), and registered at the Registry Office of the county of Terrebonne, under No. 70, 160.

To be sold at the door of the Catholic Church of the parish of Sainte Marguerite du Lac Masson, said district, the TWENTY NINTH day of JULY, one thousand nine hundred and twenty four at ONE o'clock in the afternoon. (Standard time.)

Here and There

Shipments of grain from the Grande Prairie and Peace River districts over the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway during the past season have totalled 2,471,000 bushels of wheat and 1,700,500 bushels of other grains.

The longest solid train of red cedar edge grain shingles ever hauled across the continent left Vancouver, B.C., recently for Chicago and the Eastern States. Several other long trains of this product will be shipped in the near future by the Hunting Merritt Lumber Company, by whom the consignment was forwarded.

A despatch recently sent from London states that Professor Carlyle, of the E. P. ranch, is sailing for Canada shortly taking back with him a number of brood mares and other stock for the ranch. The Prince of Wales continues to evince the deepest interest in all the doings of the ranch and keeps in almost touch with things there.

Dr. W. H. McBride, graduate of McGill University, has taken up residence in Arundel, occupying the house formerly the home of Mr. Tessier.

The July meeting of the Annual Branch of the Women's Auxiliary, will be held on Thursday afternoon, 17th inst., at the residence of Mrs. John Bishop.

Messrs. George and John Brymn, sons of Dr. Brymn, are conducting a Garage on the Huberdeau Road, in the building adjoining the residence of Mr. J. H. Scott.

Don't forget the "Basket Pic-nic," under the auspices of Arundel L.O.L. 1475, on Saturday 12th inst., in Mr. Mr. Thomson's Grove. Good Programme of Races and Games, etc.

The Church Services on Sunday next 13th inst., will be as follows:—
ANGELICAN.—Laurel 10.30 a.m., The Glen 2.30 p.m., Grace Church, Arundel 7.30 p.m. Rev. Geo. H. Gagnon, M. A., Rector.

ARUNDEL UNION CHURCH.—Rockway 10.30 a.m., Crystal Falls 3 p.m., Arundel 7.30 p.m., S. S. Arundel 10.30 a.m. Rev. C. H. Hetherington, M.A., B.D., Pastor.

On his Annual visitation to Arundel Parish, on the 1st 2nd and 3rd inst., His Lordship Bishop Farthing, held Divine Service at Laurel, The Glen, Weir, Rockway and Arundel, good congregations being present at all services.

On Tuesday 1st inst., the service was at Rockway, in St. George's Church, in the evening at 7.30, on Wednesday 2nd inst., service was at Laurel at 10.30 a.m., at The Glen at 2.30 p.m. and in the Church of the Redeemer, Weir at 7.30 p.m. At the latter service the beautiful brass Tablet to the memory of Messrs. Morgan, Burns, and Renaud, members of the Congregation, who fell in the Great War, was unveiled and dedicated by the Bishop, after an appropriate address by the Rector, Rev. G. H. Gagnon.

On Thursday morning at 10.30 service was in Grace Church, Arundel, this service consisting of the Confirmation of a class of candidates presented by the Rector, and composed of one Adult, six young girls, and three boys, and the celebration of Holy Communion, with address by His Lordship. There was a good congregation, and the service thought was impressive and beautiful.

Stallions for Service.

PERSHING.—The massive big black that weighed 2060 last spring before he was 5 years old, he was very successful in the stud last year, his stock is strong and healthy and the right kind for good draught horses.

In light horses we have added to our list a beautiful French Coach, a dark dapple bay, stands about 15-3, and has style and action and shows speed, he should certainly sire good saddle and harness horses. We have several other horses for service not mentioned, especially 1 big black Belgian, weighing close to a ton. All interested in good draught horses should look over these before breeding elsewhere.

TERMS.

Fees are from $10.00 to $15.00 to insure, accommodation for mares from a distance can be provided if required at reasonable prices.

WHICH ONE FORGAVE?

"Oh yes, I'll forgive you, I s'pose," murmurs Prue.

"You say you are sorry and never will do."

Such a mean thing again. I'll forgive you, of course.

But still, Nelly Baker," Prue says this with force—

"You were horrid and cross—and I'll never forget."

Some things that you said—I can just hear them yet!"

"Of course I'll forgive you—don't worry a speck!"

Says Maud, all dimples, her arm 'round the neck

Of little friend Betty, "and don't you feel bad."

I'm going to forget all about it. I'm glad

That we're such good friends again—now s'pose we run

HOW YOGINA WAS SAVED.

It was a hot day in Benares. Fourteen girls sat around a table in a large room, studying their lessons. They were members of a girls' school, which, Lakshmbai, a Christian Indian woman, had started. Through the open windows they could hear the priests in a temple near the river, chanting to the gods to send rain, for there was a famine. All the girls were quiet and sad for almost all of them had relatives in the north, who were starving.

Suddenly they heard a commotion outside, and the sound of men's voices, raised in anger. Then Lakshmbai came in carrying a small child in her arms. She laid her on a bed, and sent two of the girls for some broth. The others crowded around asking questions. Lakshmbai silenced them, and as she fed the broth slowly to the child, she told her story.

"This little girl," she said, "is named Yogina. She, her father, mother and brother came to this city to get food, for they were starving. Her mother and brother died on the journey, and her father, Runnabai, brought her here. But the priests tried to prevent him, and that was the noise that you heard."

Yogina was now able to speak, and she said a few words in a dialect which the girls could not understand. Then Lakshmbai told the girls to go out and leave her to sleep. So Yogina was laid on the most comfortable bed that she had ever seen, while the girls went out under the trees.

Yogina slept for a long time and was awakened by the sound of singing. She was much refreshed by her rest, and walked slowly out to the grove where the girls were standing around Lakshmbai. She was teaching them the Indian translation for "Jesus loves me," and Yogina thought the air very pretty though she did not understand the words. Just then Lakshmbai saw her, and beckoned to her. She came timidly up to the girls, who met her with smiles of welcome. They discovered that Timmaya, one of the girls, could speak the same dialect as Yogina. So they asked questions until Lakshmbai came and called them into supper.

After that came evening worship, and Yogina was overjoyed to see her father, who came in for the service. Runnabai had at one time been a Christian, but when illness and misfortune came to his family, the priests persuaded him to change. He now consented to be baptized.

Yogina was a very clever child, and soon learned to speak the strange dialect which had puzzled her at first. She became fat and healthy and was the pet of the whole school. And then, one Sunday, she and her father were baptized in the little mission church, and were made members of Christ's flock.

But Runnabai had to bear a great many trials. His caste disowned him and the priests would allow no one to give him work. When he was almost giving up in despair, Lakshmbai's husband found employment for him on a relief expedition which some merchants were sending to the famine stricken districts.

So Yogina was able to stay on at the school, where she learned many useful lessons and in time became a good woman."

Shattered Arras Dwellings Restored to 1914 Condition

A noble bit of reconstruction that has just been completed in the devastated regions is that of the old houses on the "Petite Place" at Arras which were almost demolished by the Germans. The work of restoring the "Grand Place" is under way and will be finished soon.

Although the destruction in 1914 of the Town Hall of Arras with its beautiful Gothic facade, was an event which shocked the civilized world, the bombardment of the wonderful old sixteenth century houses facing it was almost as great a loss to French architecture.

The street joining the "Grand Place" and the "Petite Place" presented a facade of Flemish architecture dating from the end of the sixteenth century. One of the old houses of carved half-timbered construction was built in the thirteenth century, the two squares having been laid out about the year 1200. However most of the dwellings were of stone, that material having been designated by a law of May 17, 1533.

At the time of the Armistice seventy of the houses were considered destroyed and all the rest were damaged. Pierre Paquet, architect-in-chief of the historical monuments of France, insisted that they be rebuilt. Enlisting the support of Paul Leon, then director of Beaux Arts, the work was begun under State jurisdiction.

Picture Post Cards Help.

The difficulties seemed insurmountable. However, the consent of the 150 property owners was obtained and the work of reconstructing the facades began, leaving the interior arrangements to the owners.

Picture post cards played a large part in the success of the work. They were consulted at all stages of the construction work when archives failed to disclose the exact detail wanted. All fragments of moldings and sculptures were collected, placed together and numbered and then incorporated in the new work.

The new stone employed was treated before being set in place in order to give it the same patina as the old fragments. The finished result to-day is a success from every standpoint and the old street with its arched lower floors seems to have turned back the hand of time.

The work of rebuilding began in 1920. By the end of that year twenty houses had been restored. A year later the number stood at sixty-five. On the "Grand Place" there remain only a dozen houses to be completed.

Pre-War Prices.

The automobile is one of the very few commodities that can be purchased to-day for less than in 1913, before the war.

Somebody said "Go west, young man, go west," but this pretty scene, taken at Vermilion River, Lake Edward, Quebec, says "How about the east?"

A Tree That is a Well.

During the Great War, the British had occasion to crush a native rebellion in Darfur, a part of the Egyptian Sudan. They had first, however, to cross an exceedingly arid country, Kordofan, in which water exists on the surface only during the rainy season and must therefore be dragged up from slow-filling wells or stored in peculiar cisterns.

South of this region the baobab tree is frequent—"the great burly baobab, each of whose enormous arms would form the trunk of a large tree," as Livingstone put it. The tree is a relative of our gay hollyhock and is sometimes called monkey-bread tree, since it bears an edible fruit that monkeys and occasionally the Arabic tribes eat. Although not usually exceedingly tall, baobabs are among the bulkiest of trees, often being more than twenty feet across their somewhat bottle-shaped trunks. Quantities of the huge trees live somehow even in the Kordofan desert, although there are few if any young ones sprouting there; it is supposed that the ancient specimens are survivors of a period when there was a greater rainfall.

Like all aged trees, the baobabs are apt to decay at the heart; thus hollows are formed in which rain water, sliding down the huge branches, collects when it does rain. The Arab cuts off the larger branches to prevent them from splitting the weakened trunk, excavates a hollow in the hole high up above a branch upon which he can stand as a platform and then proceeds to dig out the interior of the baobab until he makes a cistern-like cavity walled with living wood perhaps twenty feet high and half as wide. Shallow pits are then dug in the sand near the base of the tree, which now receives a personal name, so to speak, by which it is always known; and when the south winds of the rainy season bring short but very wet showers the whole population turns out with curious skin buckets. These buckets are so supported by cords that they will flatten out on the bottom of the pits and scoop up the water that drains into the pools before it has a chance to soak in. The buckets are hoisted up by men perched in the baobab, and the cistern is slowly filled. In such a cistern the water will remain fresh during the dry season.

The water is agid along the trade routes, but when the British columns came along with their thirsty camels the supply naturally gave out, and so the tree cisterns were promptly commandeered and continually replenished during the British campaign by endless processions of camels bearing water tanks filled at some distance source of supply. Those reservoirs with the various wells made the success of the British expedition possible, although the troops had to follow a roundabout trail from well to well and from "Mahmud's Tree" to other baobab cisterns.

Cautious John.

A Chinaman was much alarmed by a vicious-looking dog that always barked at him loudly.

"Don't be afraid of him," said the owner of the dog. "You know the old proverb, 'A barking dog never bites.'"

"Yes," said the Chinaman, "you know proverb; I know proverb; but does the dog know proverb?"

To produce 1 lb. of honey a bee must take the nectar from 62,000 clover blossoms.

Stories About Well-Known People

Women Scientist's Triumph.

What the scientific experts in Canada and the United States have failed to do has been accomplished by an English woman, Miss Mackenzie, an experimenter employed by the Ministry of Agriculture.

Her discovery concerns the method of preserving fruit in liquid in such a manner that it retains its natural colors. The measure of her success may be judged at Wembley where specimens are on view in the British Government Pavilion. Although some of the fruit, including apples, plums, and gooseberries, was picked last autumn, the colors are still quite fresh.

The Tale of a Clock.

A new story of Lord Darling is being told by Lord Birkenhead.

The occasion was when Lord Darling, then a junior counsel, was addressing a jury at the Quarter Sessions. He had been speaking for some time when the Chairman remarked: "Mr. Darling, have you noticed the position of the hands of the clock?" Swift came the reply: "Yes, sir; but with respect, I see nothing to cause anxiety. They seem to me to be where they actually are at this time of day."

A Youthful Preacher.

A preacher of only twenty years of age is unusual enough, but when the preacher is a girl the fact is remarkable. Miss Emily Bishop, daughter of a Chatham, England, joiner, achieved this distinction recently when she was ordained a lay preacher in the local Primitive Methodist Church.

The Village Green.

On the cheerful village green,
Skirted round with houses small,
All the boys and girls are seen
Playing there with hoop and ball.

Now they frolic hand in hand,
Making many a merry chain;
Then they form a warlike band,
Marching o'er the level plain.

Now ascends the worsted ball,
High it rises in the air,
Or against the cottage wall,
Up and down it bounces there.

Then the hoop, with even pace,
Runs before the merry things;
Joy is seen in every face,
Joy is heard in cheerful songs.

Rich array, and mansions proud,
Gilded toys and costly fare,
Would not make the little crowd
Half so happy as they are.

Then contented with my state,
Where true pleasure may be seen,
Let me envy not the great
On a cheerful village green.

—Jane Taylor.

A Chinese carpenter can look at a place that has to be repaired, and go back to his bench and cut the boards so that they will fit exactly. He has trained his sense of sight to give him exact knowledge.

"I was brought up from childhood to the service of the church," Miss Bishop told me. "I have learned to love it as I love my own home. While I was taking a class in the Sunday-school one day our minister asked me to prepare myself for the examination. I gradually arrived at the conviction that I was called to preach the Gospel to others."

Miss Bishop is engaged to be married to the Rev. Eric Butler, of Hereford.

Proud of Kipling as a Farmer

The friendship which Kipling extends to his neighbors around Bateman's, his sixteenth century house below Burwash, is quietly reciprocated. The countrymen are jealous of their great companion, and though they may venture to disagree with him in his choice of professions, permit no outside interference or challenge to his eminence. He is jealous of his environment and jealous for it. The rustics sense this and live up to it. They know his intimate concern for their affairs, and though they may try to forget that he writes they eagerly remember that he is a farmer.

"What kind of a man is Mr. Kipling?" a tourist asked of a worker on his estate, hoping for a hint as to his personality or an illuminating revelation concerning his books.

"Mas' Kipling," replied the laborer, "is the kind of man who if he sights a thistle or a dock on his land will walk two mile an' better for his spud to dig it out." Than which there is no higher compliment in Sussex.

Look At the Whole Of It.

As John Brayton recited the details of the old grievance his voice rose in indignation. The minister had heard the story a score of times. Peter Brayton had rehearsed it only the week before. The minister's heart was saddened because of the quarrel which had occurred between the two brothers, who were influential men in his parish. He had tried ineffectually to smooth out the difference between them, but it seemed a hopeless undertaking. Brayton paused.

"I've just been thinking, John, of the winter little Oelia died," the minister said, speaking slowly. "For a while it seemed as if everything had stopped, but after the first I tried to look at the whole of it. That's a habit I picked up in my boyhood. I was 'hard to learn,' and when a lesson was dull or difficult I looked away from it and thought of the bigger things, and that gave me courage to keep pegging away. The bigger things were examinations, promotion, honors, the work I was fitting myself for."

"To begin with, I tried to think of little Oelia herself. She hadn't had to take any of the grave risks of life. She had left an empty house behind her, but we didn't have to worry about her. God would give her the best He had. Then I tried to look at the whole of my own life—at the good I might do, at the people I might comfort all the better because I had learned by sad experience what sorrow is. I can't tell you how much it helped."

There was something like the haze of soft summer skies in the minister's eyes as he gazed unseeing across the stretch of snow-covered garden. "I've been wondering, John," he said, "whether you and Peter have ever looked at the whole of it? I don't mean the whole of the quarrel; I mean the whole of life. Have you ever tried to think of the quarrel as what it really is—an inconsequential item in the total reckonings of a lifetime? You're brothers, and for twenty years more or less you were everything to each other. Have you ever stopped to think how much that meant in good will, affection, convenience and happiness for both of you? For two years and more your life has been poorer, and his life has been poorer. Have you gained anything to be compared with what you've lost?"

"No." The tone was decisive. "I miss Pete; there's no use denying it. I find myself saying, 'I'll ask Pete about that,' or 'Pete'll help me out on this'—forgetting for the minute, don't you know? A man looks at the whole of it as you say, why—why, just that one falling out looks small. I'd never thought of it in that way before, and perhaps Pete never has. I'll find out to-day."

Blinding to the Eyes.

"You scarcely notice him when he's with his wife."

"She's dazzlingly brilliant, that's true."

Among the Papuans there is a belief that a man guilty of murder is doomed to live in a swamp in the next world.

How Slow Motion Pictures Aid Science

If you want to know whether "your heart keeps right," take it to the motion picture photographer and have him snap it "in low gear." Slow-motion pictures will show whether your heart is missing any of its beats.

Medicine, art, science and sport are finding out all manner of secrets about life, and how to make the world a better place, by submitting the universe to the cinematographer and then analyzing the picture when it is unrolled at low speed.

Diseases which have baffled the physician are now made to show their symptoms slowly enough for the eye to see.

Sculptors and painters are now enabled, by the camera's eye, to obtain permanent records of reactions of the human body which had been a matter of pure conjecture.

Science now furnishes big business and the field of industry documentary evidence in the way of "stills" from motion picture films showing chemical reactions which in the end lead to a revolutionizing of the processes of manufacture.

The acquiring of "form," so essential in many sports, like tennis, golf, baseball, football etc. is made easier and more efficient by means of the slow pictures showing every movement.

Motion pictures of projectiles in flight from giant guns are now taken with a camera developed at the Bureau of Standards in Washington.

It has been used for studying the effect of the blast on the flight of projectiles and has been found very useful for the purpose, the bureau states. This blast is formed by the gases in the gun, which are ejected with great velocity as soon as the projectile leaves the muzzle. It completely surrounds the projectile during the first few feet of its flight, and with large guns its force is enormous. Photography has been found to be the only available method of finding out anything about it.

The camera used is capable of making 150 pictures a second, but it is believed that several thousand pictures a second could be taken by increasing the number of lenses used.

Superior British Camera.

English ordnance officers claim to have gone Uncle Sam one better. They are using a camera, weighing two tons, which is said to take pictures at the rate of 300,000 a minute. When this film is thrown on the screen by the ordinary projecting machine the pictures seem to move ever so slowly. It is hard to associate the flight of a projectile from a mighty gun with such lethargic movement.

Again, these ultra-rapid pictures have brought revelations in medical science, as a result of which great progress is being made in understanding human life. As an example, the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York performed an experiment on a properly anesthetized dog. Its beating heart was exposed to the camera's eye, and the valves of the heart were plugged in five different ways, to stimulate conditions found in various types of cardiac trouble in humans. The behavior of the heart-muscle, the alterations of its beats, and its efforts to accommodate itself to the variant conditions, proved a stirring revelation. They also provided a very important means of checking up on facts gathered by years of observation, conjecture, and more or less blind medical practice, in treating heart trouble.

Used in Medical Practice.

But the high-speed camera has long since passed from the study of the physiology of animals and their organic secrets to the wonders of man, the greatest of them all. One of the most remarkable of the camera studies made of the human body revealed an important new fact in the study of hysterical conditions so common among women. A young girl in New York, normal in her early youth, was badly frightened during a thunderstorm, and sustained a species of shell-shock. As a result, she lost control of most of her motor muscles. Her walking, as she grew older, became pitifully like the efforts to get about made by a victim of locomotor ataxia. Her arms and legs were continually thrashing about.

At a New York hospital for treating nervous diseases she had been under observation and expert care for a long time. Finally she was led out before the high-speed camera, scantily clad, and walked back and forth before it. The developed pictures showed the doctors a peculiar and hitherto unsuspected and unheard-of muscle wave, which proceeded from the hip to below the knee.

In the Realm of Sports.

In the realm of sports some highly interesting pictures have been made, and are being made right along. Albert Cutler, billiard expert, has posed for pictures illustrating how the human hand directs the cue in making difficult shots.

A well-known baseball pitcher learned through analysis of motion pictures that the quick snap of the wrist which he had been accustomed to put on his out-curve ball was actually not aiding his delivery at all. In fact, the high-speed camera proved that the ball was really two inches from his hand, in its flight to the batter, before he gave the snap to his wrist.

Golf has been robbed of its mystery by pictures taken so rapidly that when they are projected at the normal rate of speed you can see the grass slowly springing back as the ball is slowly driven out of the rough. There is shown by the pictures a graphic study of a falling golf ball, dropped vertically, against scaled background. These pictures were taken to show the behavior of a number of standard golf balls while in motion, with the special idea of revealing whether or not they were properly balanced. The photographs in this case were taken at the rate of 300 a second.

Ordinary motion pictures are taken at a rate slightly exceeding sixteen to the second, as the eye can distinguish separate pictures at that rate of speed. After that, the images become "moving pictures," for the eye muscles are unable to detect the movements individually, but only in general, as figures change their positions on the silver sheet. Now, in the super-speed pictures, we see a wonderful transformation. Sixteen goes into 600 about thirty-seven times. That means, if we are allowed to view pictures taken by the most rapid camera in the world, shown at the usual speed of the "movies," we see ordinary phenomena taking place at just one-thirty-seventh the rate of speed in which they usually occur.

The Automobile

TO A JAY WALKER.

You ought to live in Timbuctoo,
Where cars are far between and few,
So when you wandered—as you do—
Across the busy street,
You wouldn't make men stop and swear,
You wouldn't drive them to despair,
The way you act! It isn't fair
To people that you meet!

Suppose that I should drive that way,
And run up on the curb to-day,
And cut across the corners, say,
As if I didn't care;
The trouble is, my friend, that you
Want all the street and sidewalk, too;
Why don't you go to Timbuctoo?
The street's the sidewalk there.
—Harold S. Osborne.

LOOK OUT FOR RUSTY RIMS.

On light cars with clincher rims many punctures are caused by rusty rims. Rust forms in the centre of the rim where the tube touches it and the particles of rusty metal flake off and cut the tube.

Thorough scraping, filing and cleaning of the rims and then painting them with rim cement is recommended as a cure for this trouble. But many owners do not want to go to the trouble to care for the rim in this way. And in any event the extra rims cannot be used during the time the paint is drying.

A strip of adhesive tape, such as is used in bandaging, when put round the rim accomplishes the same result as the paint. The rim should, of course, be cleaned thoroughly. Then the strip of adhesive is put in place all the way round the rim. It is better not to have the point in the strip come at the valve hole. This hole can be cut out of the strip after it is in place.

The tape seems quite sticky enough for all purposes, but it will stick on even better if it is warmed by holding it over a stove just before it is put in place.

Straight side tires have a flap which is put in place to protect the tube. The tape serves the same purpose on the clincher rims.

SIDEHILL DRIVEWAYS.

Homes located on slopes often compel the construction of the automobile drive under favorable circumstances. Where the soil is of a shifting nature gradual settlement of the ground to a lower point makes construction doubly difficult. Joints open and, once open, are hard to close. For that reason some special type of construction is essential.

The two walls are built first. The upper wall should extend at least a few inches above the lower edge of the turf and ordinarily three feet below ground. The wall can be shortened, however, by installing the deadmen at short intervals.

The lower wall receives more pressure, and if the ground slopes rather abruptly the footing should widen at the base. It should also contain reinforcing to well below the ground.

The two wall forms are erected first and the woven wire laid across the intervening space with the ends terminating in the empty forms. Later the drive itself is laid of concrete and the woven wire binds the three units together, yet with a slightly flexible joint. These joints should be about half an inch wide, and are later filled with asphalt. Then there will be flexibility and, if the asphalt is placed hot and a perfect bond between the two concrete surfaces secured, tightness. This prevents material from working between and the action of frost does not harm.

Smell the Bottle First.

In the medical school the old professor was lecturing his class on the importance of accuracy. "But it isn't always well to try to prescribe too literally your own habits or rules of order for others," he said. "Such an attempt once almost made me a murderer."

"I was in a frontier farming community and ran a small drug store along with my medical work. As associate kept a stock of dry goods on the side of my room opposite my drug. One day I had been out for a long, cold drive and came in well used up. A woman was waiting for me to fill a prescription.

"I always kept my bottles in regular order and well labeled; as a third precaution I learned the smell of all the common drugs and aimed to smell the stuff before filling a prescription. This time I was cold and dazed, and I had filled and delivered the order without taking the usual precautions: It was not until I was about to place the supply bottle on the shelf that I put it to my nose. I was overcome with fright. The bottle had no odor—it contained the corrosive sublimate! I had given her enough to kill a score of men!

"Here, give me that package!" I managed to shout. "The wrapping isn't good enough!"

"I almost fainted with relief as she brought it back from the door. I hunted until I found the proper ingredient; then I weighed out her prescription correctly and sent her away.

"I found that while I was gone our busy new clerk had arranged my stock in orderly fashion. He thought that, if two bottles were about the same size, they should be placed together, and he had interchanged two that looked alike, though one contained a poison, and the other something harmless.

"A man should know what he is doing when he hands out any kind of remedy, whether for the body or for the soul. If he is treating the body, he must know what is good for it. If he is treating the soul, he must know the other man's habit of mind and what he will do with the remedies he sets before him. The blundering meddler may kill either body or soul—or both!"

Words for Gardening.

Dig up this earth and make it smooth for seed.

Hands ghostly now have turned it year on year;

We'll break a rotted beam or fence-base here

Or a brown chain as useless as a weed.

The earth outwore the hands, it will outwear

The wood they hewed, the iron links they made;

Sow it with seed and corn will be its shade;

Leave it undug, unsown—still it will bear.

This bursting up of grass and sumach shoots

Speak of a fire in earth we never guessed.

A restlessness forever feeding roots,

Turning persistence to sublimity.

Dust unto dust—Jehovah's ancient jest

Of life that Adam touched and could not see.

—Frank Ernest Hill.

Photos Across Atlantic.

Transmission of photographs from Paris to New York by wireless will be a normal achievement within a few months. It will be no more difficult than the sending of ordinary messages.

Edouard Belin, the French inventor, believes his process, demonstrated successfully recently, proves this conclusively. He made his tests in the presence of an assembly of scientists and engineers in Paris recently.

The pictures are excellent in every respect—sharp, with all details and delicate shading and half tones. General Ferrie, director of the wireless station at the Eiffel Tower, whose photograph was among the three transmitted and developed in front of him, was enthusiastic. President Bigourdan, of the French Academy of Sciences, who was also present, warmly congratulated M. Belin and his nephew, Henri Penal, on their achievement.

The demonstration was made in the Maitin offices. The weather was stormy with a good deal of atmospheric interference and the proximity of high power electric engines added to the disadvantages under which the test was conducted. These conditions caused a few lines on the reproductions, which other wise are hardly distinguishable from the originals.

Transmission of each photograph took five minutes.

M. Belin has almost completed a powerful wireless station at Malmahon. With this he is sure he can send photographs by radio to America. He intends to go to New York in September to establish receiving posts for his final experiments.

Embarrassing!

A well-known writer visited a jail to take notes for an article on prison life. On returning home he described what he had seen, and his description made a deep impression on the mind of his little daughter.

A week later the writer and his little girl were in a train which stopped at a station near a gloomy building.

"What place is that?" asked a passenger.

"The county jail," another answered promptly.

Whereupon Mary embarrassed her father and aroused the suspicion of the other passengers by asking in a loud, shrill voice, "Is that the jail you were in, father?"

He: "Yes—I'm the idol of my family."

She: "So I hear. In fact, I was told you've never been anything but idle."

OPEN LETTERS TO A FARMER

By Rev. M. V. Kelly, C.E.R.

Why the Country Boy Always Leads.

I very much fear, my farmer friend, that you do not always advert to the one great reason why the most important positions in every sphere are held by men who began life on the farm. It is because the best education possible is given one on the farm. The varied occupations pursued there develop the whole man—body, mind and heart.

It was a great scholar of the nineteenth century who said: "No training can be called education which does not furnish both mental and physical occupation. God has given us both a body and a soul, and the only perfectly formed man is he who has given due attention to each; the development of one, with the neglect of the other, produces a type woefully defective and incompetent."

Another great educator has said: "Educate a man's body alone, and you have a scopic; educate a man's heart alone, and you have a bigot. Educate a man's body, mind and heart, and you have the noblest work of God—a man."

No other calling brings all the faculties into play so admirably as that of the farmer. The greatest modern sculptor has made it known that when he would have a model of perfect physical development, his search is made among men employed in farm labor. The exercise supplied in the normal occupations of life, he claims, has no equal among the best results of carefully directed gymnastic training or the most thoroughly organized system of athletics. The skilled labor, varied in a thousand ways, to be performed on a farm, along with the necessary

Yet a very large majority of those hundreds of thousands employed in factories are subjected to a like routine. The capitalist, the manufacturer has found out that division of labor gives the greatest production at the least cost. Therefore, each workman or work woman is given just one thing to do. They continue doing that one thing for a lifetime. To increase their employers' millions, armies of human souls are going through life deprived of their God-given portion to live and act the lives of intelligent creatures. They are allowed to do that one little service to which, until the present, the machine or the beast has proved unequal. Such is their career.

In cities, also, the life of what is known as the laboring man, as distinguished from the mechanic, goes on much the same way. The delivery wagon, the occupation of teamster, call for a similar form of activity the year round. The street car driver's duties offer as little variety for head or hand. The young woman in a departmental store, behind a counter five feet in length, handing out one line of goods at a fixed price week by week and month by month, is engaged in a task which requires the very minimum of intelligence. And so all along the line; the great mass of city employees are valuable because they are willing to be on hand and attend to one little thing. They have but one thing to think of, and sooner or later they have no inclination to think of two. Should any of them drop out, there are thousands of others capable of being fitted for the position in a few hours. Anyone can do it. They go on day by day learning nothing, nor learning to do anything. There is no scientific study, business transactions and general management, gives exercise to an intelligence of a very high order. The intimate acquaintance of so many neighbors, the necessary dependence of one upon the other in the affairs of life, the community of interest, the sympathy and assistance mutually extended on occasions of sickness or sorrow or distress, not less than their constantly finding pastime in one another's company, bring out the truest and tenderest affections of the heart.

It is painful to turn from a picture so beautiful, so hopeful, so exhilarating, to contemplate the narrowed, grovelling sphere in which so many city residents are obliged to pass their days. At their work, they are looked upon as something a little better than machines. Dr. Brownson used to say that employers looked upon their work-people as necessary appendages to the spinning-jenny. I have in mind a woman, seventy or more, who for nearly forty years in a large city institution has stood daily before the same tap to wash all the dishes used at three meals by some two hundred inmates. What exercise of intelligence has her occupation afforded? Could any experience be more stultifying?

education, no formation, no development, no mental, nor moral growth. Their interests are narrowed within the very smallest range; their outlook on life is confined to the immediate surroundings. Even when there is humanity in the treatment they receive, the likelihood of their improving themselves is on a par with that of the slave. Thus, their lives pass by—the lives of the great majority of city residents. Let us not be too hard on them. People spending their lives amid such conditions, children of people spending their lives among such conditions, can give no great promise for the future, if they never rise to any distinction, if they are never competent to fill responsible positions, if they are never heard from, if they disappear and are no more, why should we be surprised?

Your boys and girls, dear farmer friend, are being educated every day, their capacity to see and do things is being constantly developed, they will be capable men and women by the time they have reached the years of majority. After so many years of valuable formation, would you have them play the part of something a little better than a machine?

Chemical Engineering in Canada.

The development of many of the natural resources of Canada is entirely dependent upon the ability of the engineering profession. This is particularly the case with our mineral resources. Such problems as the extraction of a few ounces of gold from a ton of quartz, the sub-division of the metallic contents of the cobalt-silver ores, the separation of the sulphide ores of Northern Manitoba or the utilization of the many metallic and non-metallic minerals of Saskatchewan and Alberta are in the hands of chemical and metallurgical engineers for solution.

The same condition applies to the development of agriculture, says the Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa. Chemical engineering has solved many of the problems of the dairy and other farm industries, finding new uses for products, providing artificial fertilizers, overcoming detrimental chemical actions in produce, and in providing means for the more satisfactory marketing of much of the output of Canadian farms.

The development of forest industries, particularly that of pulp and paper, is largely the result of chemical engineering. From the same tree a number of different varieties of paper can be produced by chemical treatment of the wood, while such products of wood as methyl hydrate or wood alcohol, acetone, artificial silk, etc., are almost entirely chemical processes.

To that greatest of all natural resources—the human unit—all other natural resources are subsidiary, and as the human unit is developed so will the solution of many of the unsolved problems of our natural resources be overcome.

EN PASSANT.

WITH great satisfaction I notice, from the newspapers, that the Peony is coming into its own. The Rotary Club has taken it up, at the instance of Mr. W. O. Roy, who is manager of the Mount Royal Cemetery, a Rotarian, and one of Canada's leading horticulturists. The Peony as we know it, is the same as the Paeonia of Pliny, the elder, but careful hybridising and cultivating, chiefly by French gardeners and continued by enthusiastic growers in France, Britain, and America, have brought the hardy perennial to that pitch of perfection which delights the heart of Mr. Roy and causes him to say with a glow of pride, that he possesses the finest collection of the really classic plants in existence.

Nor is that an empty boast: When he can stage a show like the one in the Windsor Hotel last week and mass 6000 blooms of the flower in a striking and beautiful scene, he knows where they grow. He also knows the life history of the plant! That is the most delightful thing in the art of flower growing. An intimate friendship with the plant and a proud acquaintance with its family records promote a paternal interest, a fostering care, and a tender solicitude for its development. This, continued for a number of years, turns a gardener into a philosopher, a lover of nature, and a friend of his fellowman. You never yet knew a gardener who was not broadminded, honest, and liberal. He (or she) will cut the finest bloom in his garden for a friend: It may have cost him much time and care, as well as their intrinsic equivalent, but he will cut it and hand it to you with a fine nobility of action and a wealth of silent sentiment which makes it more blessed to give than to receive. But, mark you, it must always be a personal service: woe betide the vandal who lays his ruthless hand upon a single bloom without permission: It would be better for him that he had never been born! Then, all the protective instincts of the gardener are aroused, his neanderthal soul is stirred, the flint-edge of his wrath strikes fire, and the erst-while placid and peace loving horticulturist staggers up for his own. There is no socialistic community of goods with the gardener: What is his belongs exclusively to him: save and until he turns in his tracks and with lavish hand bestows a bountiful cornucopia of his own especial products.

NOW, this great peony specialist, after the manner of his kind, has laid his plans wide open. He proposes to beautify and adorn Montreal past all knowledge. He says: "I have in the island of Montreal sufficient peonies of classic types to make the residential part of this city, in two years, as famous as Portland, Oregon, has been made (by its roses) in two life-times. This is an ideal place for them. There is no other place like it, not even China itself, (where the peony was first grown.) I am not out to make anything for myself above what they cost me: I will turn the scheme over to a committee of the Rotary Club, and each district can have them practically at cost. The embargo that the U. S. had on them has been lifted, so that I could ship them to the States and get ten times the price, but I want to turn them over to the people of Montreal.

This magnanimous offer of Mr. Roy ought to be accepted with the keenest appreciation. I, for one, would gladly see Montreal covered with the June glory of the peony, from the early lilac-rose of the "Jules-Elie," to the late red of the "Felix Crousse," and the white flecked crimson of the "Festiva Maxima," included in the hundred and one selected varieties owned by Mr. Roy. But why stop at Montreal? The peony, with its sturdy beauty, and its generous and speedy power of transforming the bleak scenery of winter into the profuse arboreal grandeur of early summertime, might most fittingly be made the provincial emblem. The province of Quebec is itself one grand peony: As soon as the last bank of snow has disappeared it seems to burst into active life, as if a magic wand were waved over it. The profusion of its verdure and the variety of its colour is the same in the peony-like summer as it is in the tinted autumnal season—incomparable, and peculiar to the province.

Now, if the peony bloom were spread over the province in June as generously as the maple tints are in October, the combination would be complete, and typical of the coming and going of the glory bestowed by nature upon the favoured province of Quebec.

Mr. Roy traced the history of the peony from its origin in China, where it was regarded as a sacred flower, and he laid emphasis upon its hardy nature. In London, he says, they exhibit blooms from a plant that has been growing for over a hundred years in one garden.

Montreal is in luck. The Rotary Club will see to the coming true of this dream of beauty, and I hope, hope sincerely, that it will spread into the towns and villages of the province. I have already picked out five places for peonies in my garden, and although I may not be able to secure at first hand any of the Roy-Special plants, not being a Rotarian, I shall see to it that the five varieties mentioned in the last catalogue sent to me, will grace these five spots in my garden next June, even if I have to corner the market before the rush begins and the prices reach the sky.

If everybody in Our Place who has a garden feels as I do about it Montreal will have to look to its laurels. "Our Place," "Peonyville," and "Paradise," are going to be interchangeable terms.

THE LINKMAN.

ST. ANDREWS EAST.

Mr. C. A. Cook was the guest of the Rev. and Mrs. J. Burgess.

The Misses Hopper were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charman.

The Literary Club will meet at the home of Mrs. W. J. Pitcairn on Monday, July 21st at 8 p.m.

Miss Grace McQuat, Miss Marjorie and Miss Gwen MacKinnon, of Lachute visited the Manse last Saturday evening.

Choir Practice will be held in the Presbyterian Church on Wednesday evening, after the Prayer meeting at 9 o'clock.

Among the visitors to Montreal this week were Mr. Charman, Mr. G. W. Rodger, Mr. W. J. Rodger, and Rev. J. Burgess.

Miss Dorothy Vauthier, Miss Marie Vauthier, Miss Mary Alain and Miss Violet Logan were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Agnes Dorion.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Campbell and Miss Edna Campbell, Master Malcolm Campbell and Miss Mary McArthur, of Britonville, visited Rev. and Mrs. J. Burgess at the manse on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Weightman, Miss Beaulieu and Master Douglas Weightman, and Mr. Andy Teifer of Montreal, were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. MacDonell.

Mrs. Kilgour, accompanied by her son and daughter, motored here from Beauharnois last Saturday and spent the evening with Dr. and Mrs. B. N. Wales and family, leaving on Sunday afternoon.

Public Worship will be held in the Presbyterian Church, on Sunday July 20th at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m. standard time. The pastor Rev. J. Burgess will preach at both services. A special collection for Sunday school literature will be received in separate envelopes.

A most successful Sale of work, Supper and Concert under the auspices of the Ladies Aid, Presbyterian Church, took place on July 10th, in the Town Hall, St. Andrews East, in the presence of a capacity audience. Mr. C. A. Cook, Canada's Indian Concert Bass, and entertainer, was the "star" of the evening and certainly lived up to his reputation as an all round entertainer. He was enthusiastically received and enjoyed. Mr. Alan Murray delighted the audience with his pleasing voice, as usual. Miss Yvonne Ladouceur played a piano solo, which was greatly appreciated; and a piano duet by Miss L. Harrington and Miss Tita Wales, was executed with marked ability and good taste. The proceeds amounted to $317.00. Miss Harrington was a delightful accompanist.

HON. C. A. STEWART REQUESTED TO RESIGN.

Following is a copy of Petitions, forwarded this week from the County to Hon. C. A. Stewart requesting his resignation.

"To HON. CHAS. A. STEWART, M. P.,

Minister of Immigration, House of Commons, Ottawa.

WHEREAS at a bye-election in 1922, following the lamented death of our member, Mr. McGibbon, the County of Argenteuil unanimously accepted you (Hon. Charles Stewart) as its representative, thus affording a seat in Parliament to a man who was really a resident of the Province of Alberta.

AND WHEREAS in your speech in Parliament on April 14th, 1924, in connection with present budget you stated, "I trust it will be the death-knell of Protection," your declaration is not in harmony with the declared policy of such prominent leaders as Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the majority of the voters in the County of Argenteuil.

THEREFORE, we, the undersigned, declare that you (Hon. Charles Stewart) have been untrue to the best interests of this County of Argenteuil and of the Dominion as a whole, and we call upon you to resign, and thus enable us to select a man who can faithfully represent us in Parliament.

As such Petitions bear the signatures of upwards of one thousand (1,000) Electors of the County, there can be no room for doubt as to the feeling of the People here in connection with present attitude of the Hon. Minister. Possibly his activities may be more appreciated elsewhere.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Purgative, Drops and Soothing Syrup. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. FORD, ONTARIO—To the owners of cars made by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, there will be shortly added the purchaser of Motor No. 500,000. More than a year was taken to produce the first 20,000 cars containing the famous T model motor, while now the Company's facilities are so increased that this number can be manufactured in two months.

This well known Canadian Institution in its own sphere has paralleled the huge Detroit plant which recently announced the completion of the 10,000,000 T motor car which is to start upon a transcontinental trip, visiting its family relations all along the line.

The Late Miss D. Smith.

Word has been received of the death of Miss Dorothea Smith, 22 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Smith, of Cincinnati, and formerly of Lachute, Mrs. Smith being Miss May Davidson, of St. Philippe before her marriage.

Deceased had been failing in health for several years and unable to stand a second operation, passed away on Thursday July 10th, the funeral taking place on Saturday.

The many friends here extend deepest sympathy to those who are left to mourn her loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur MacGregor, of New Cork, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. F. MacGregor. Mr. H. MacGregor, Boston, was also a guest at the same home.

Mrs. Henry Neill and Miss Neill, of Waterloo, who were guests of the Rev. W. A. and Mrs. Howard, left Wednesday evening, the former for her home in Waterloo, the latter on a trip to Los Angeles, to visit friends for several weeks.

The sale of work, Supper and Entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian Church, which was held in the Town Hall, last Thursday was a grand success in every way.

The Tennis match Saturday between Lachute and St. Andrews, resulted in 8-9 in favor of the visiting Club. Tea was served by the Members of the Home Club and a pleasant little dance enjoyed in the evening at the Club house.

Christ Church W. A. met at the home of Mrs. G. F. Shaw on Tuesday last, when all arrangements were made for the Annual Summer Sale, Saturday, August 2nd, which will be held as usual in the Town Hall. Sale begins at 3 p.m., and Ice-Cream and cake will be sold during the afternoon. There will be the Work table and Donation table, also a Home-made cookie and candy table, while the Little old woman with a hundred pockets, will be in evidence everywhere. At 8.15 p.m. Standard time, a splendid programme, under the management of Mr. Alan Murray assisted by Mr. Leonard Young, both of the Dumbells, will be given. Tickets 50 cts., children under 12, 25 cts. Don't forget the date, time and place.

Perhaps some of your readers do not know that a cottage in the Property of Major Shorey, has been given by him to a Social Service Committee, for the purpose of a Convalescent home during the summer, for children from the several hospitals in Montreal, irrespective of Creed or Race. A certain number of children are brought out for three weeks at a time, or longer if necessary. They are under the care of a trained nurse and trained attendant. The cottage will accommodate at least four or six more patients, and the overhead expenses would be practically the same as they are now, but more beds and bedding are sadly needed. Will some good friends help this splendid work in some substantial way? Could every one see the little white faces of the children when they come out, and the same little faces after they have been in the country for a few days, they would feel sure, remember the, "In as much."

The following was the program, with the name of the winner in each event:

Boys, 3 legged Race.—S. Cooke, and Melvin Graham, Carl Gagnon and Edgar Boyd.

Running High Jump.—Oliver Parcell, Ed. Craig.

Girl's Race, 12 to 16.—Alitha Marshall, Clara Biggerow.

STILL GOING STRONG.

London, July 1st, 1924.

Since writing last week, things have been coming so thick and fast that time has been at a premium and we have found it quite a task to avail ourselves of all that has been mapped out for us.

Arriving at Antwerp in the early morning of the 21st., we were privileged to see the winding river Scheldt a deep and wide river, navigable at all seasons of the year, on which vessels of the greatest tonnage are able to reach the quays. About 8.30 a number of officials came on board and breakfasted with us, after which we were taken for a trip investigating the harbour, that proved a real revelation, for Antwerp boasts of being the third largest shipping port in the world and it is no idle boast for vessels of every description were there by the many hundreds. The city of Antwerp covers 6,430 acres and has a population of 305,000 inhabitants with a fairly large suburb settlement. The Belgians do not believe in doing unnecessary lifting for all their heavy vehicles are all under-slung, and the horses were the cause of great admiration. We then paid a visit to the celebrated Cathedral, whose spire is one of the loftiest, being 404 ft. In all the wars and sieges from which Antwerp has suffered so severely the Cathedral has fortunately been spared and stands proud and lovely despite the crowd of little shops and mean dwellings which cluster around it. Our guide was most interesting and informed us that the Cathedral dates back from 1352. Here is found the world-famous picture of Rubens "Descent from the Cross," one of the noblest paintings in existence. The picture is protected by folding doors, painted on both sides, representing, when open, the Salutation of the Virgin and the Presentation in the Temple. We spent as much time as possible lingering around and viewing the marvellous carvings of the curious wooden pulpit, representing a mass of foliage supported by lifelike figures, symbolical of Europe, Asia, Africa and America.

Antwerp altogether is a most interesting place. With its busy river, famous arsenal, ancient streets thronged by people in quaint costumes, the gaily-attired soldiers, priests, milk-dealers, etc., attract one by their novelty. The people are thoroughly Roman Catholic, the churches are many and overflow with shrines and altars. Everywhere, one meets with traces of the vicissitudes the City has undergone in years past. Sieges, revolutions, battles, insurrections, and attacks seem to have formed part of the normal life of the citizens, but they became used to it apparently and went on with their business, and today Antwerp is thriving and industrious. Our visit was cut somewhat short by the departure of our train which left at 4 o'clock for Malines, arriving about an hour after and going direct to the Palace of Cardinal Mercier, where we were most graciously received and introduced, the Cardinal afterwards coming into the beautiful grounds and chatting quite freely with his visitors, whom he welcomed, because as he said Belgium could never forget the noble part Canada had played and the help she had rendered in the hour of her need.

Malines is a most picturesque and quaint city and is rapidly recovering from the bombardments of 1914 in which many houses were burnt by the invaders. Many of our party would have been glad to linger around the noble Church and cathedral in which are the noted carillon chimed of 45 bells, which, as the Cardinal expressed, while they were playing, were pure and sweet like drops of crystal. At six o'clock we were hurried along to take train for Brussels, which we reached a little before 7 o'clock. We were soon located in comfortable quarters at the Grand Hotel, and after a good wash and brush up we started out to view the city, which was occupied by the Germans from 21st August 1914 until November 1918. On the 18th of that month it was cleared of them, and the King of the Belgians returned to his Capital a few days later on the 25th. In this city the French language predominates, Flemish being almost entirely confined to the working classes. It is certainly one of the most beautiful cities in Europe, shops being quite numerous and attractive, but our programme was so full that no time was allowed our ladies for bargaining, though few stole away and purchased some of the lace for which the city is noted. One does not need to be in a hurry in Brussels, especially at meals, for two hours is the allotted time for serving, and our party had quite a time in getting the hotels to speed up. It seemed so strange to see the dogs hitched up under the carts drawn by men and women alike, the women especially taking their part in every class of labor.

Sunday morning dawned with beautiful weather and sharp at 8.30 the Canadian Party gathered at the Porte de Schaerbeek and marched in a body to the Cenotaph, where Mr. Rupert Davies and President Eady deposited a huge wreath upon the resting place of an Unknown Soldier. Military representatives were present and suitable references were made. It was an impressive ceremony, and recalled the dark days of 1914-18, when the men of the British Isles, the Dominions, the Colonies, the Indian Empire, and all the dependencies of the Crown, fought and died shoulder to shoulder with those whom they were now honoring. In death they were not divided, and in every hamlet, town and borough, from end to end of this country, those that remained have set up stones of remembrance, with the names of men and women who went out from the Mother Country across the seas, never to come home again. At 9.15 we passed on to the Comité Central Industriel de Belgique, where we were given a reception and talk on the Industrial Situation, which left no doubt in the minds of the hearers, that Belgium has made wonderful strides towards complete recovery. At 10 o'clock we proceeded to the reception of His Excellency Mr. Hyman, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and afterwards were taken to the Houses of Parliament and the Senate Rooms, where Edith Cavell was condemned to death. The seat in which she sat during the trial has been kept vacant and always will be.

The Grand Place is one of the finest squares in which the Hotel de Ville stands, and is the centre of historical interest. It is the old quarter of the town and picturesque in the extreme, associated with all that is romantic, the strife of factions and scenes of actual warfare.

We were shown through the Hotel de Ville by the Burgomaster himself, who took great pride in explaining the historical pictures, tapestries, painted floors and ceilings, portraits, etc., and then proceeded to the room where the famous ball was given by the Duchess of Richmond on the eve of Waterloo. The Burgomaster invited us to go on the gallery where we were enabled to look upon the wondrous gathering of those taking part in the Corpus Christi. It was a most gorgeous spectacle to behold and one that will live with us forever. We next left by car for Tirouesen, crossing the "Bois de la Cambre" and the "Forêt de Soignes," until we reached the Colonial Museum, where in the beautiful gardens we were given tea, after which we proceeded to the "Tir National" the spot where Miss Cavell was executed. As we passed around the grave, flowers were "deposited" by every member and many silent prayers were uttered for loved ones remaining of the 37 who had given their lives in the cause of liberty.

a body to the Cenotaph, where Mr. Rupert Davies and President Eady deposited a huge wreath upon the resting place of an Unknown Soldier. Military representatives were present and suitable references were made. It was an impressive ceremony, and recalled the dark days of 1914-18, when the men of the British Isles, the Dominions, the Colonies, the Indian Empire, and all the dependencies of the Crown, fought and died shoulder to shoulder with those whom they were now honoring. In death they were not divided, and in every hamlet, town and borough, from end to end of this country, those that remained have set up stones of remembrance, with the names of men and women who went out from the Mother Country across the seas, never to come home again. At 9.15 we passed on to the Comité Central Industriel de Belgique, where we were given a reception and talk on the Industrial Situation, which left no doubt in the minds of the hearers, that Belgium has made wonderful strides towards complete recovery. At 10 o'clock we proceeded to the reception of His Excellency Mr. Hyman, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and afterwards were taken to the Houses of Parliament and the Senate Rooms, where Edith Cavell was condemned to death. The seat in which she sat during the trial has been kept vacant and always will be.

The Grand Place is one of the finest squares in which the Hotel de Ville stands, and is the centre of historical interest. It is the old quarter of the town and picturesque in the extreme, associated with all that is romantic, the strife of factions and scenes of actual warfare.

We were shown through the Hotel de Ville by the Burgomaster himself, who took great pride in explaining the historical pictures, tapestries, painted floors and ceilings, portraits, etc., and then proceeded to the room where the famous ball was given by the Duchess of Richmond on the eve of Waterloo. The Burgomaster invited us to go on the gallery where we were enabled to look upon the wondrous gathering of those taking part in the Corpus Christi. It was a most gorgeous spectacle to behold and one that will live with us forever. We next left by car for Tirouesen, crossing the "Bois de la Cambre" and the "Forêt de Soignes," until we reached the Colonial Museum, where in the beautiful gardens we were given tea, after which we proceeded to the "Tir National" the spot where Miss Cavell was executed. About the House

PIGEONS FOR THE BOYS.

About two years ago I was surprised to overhear my oldest son, aged twelve, tell his younger brother that as soon as he was old enough he was going to the city. This set me thinking. I talked to him and tried to get his view on farm life. He soon made me realize that he was a very ambitious child and that he did not consider the farm a good place to make money. I do not wonder at his attitude for no pains had been taken to encourage him in individual effort. We are the owners of a hundred-acre farm, yet neither of the children owned a plot of land or an animal. They had their regular work, allowance and hours for recreation but they had no hope of profit from any enterprise, exclusively their own. "Why," I said to myself, "should our boys be excluded from share in enterprises which, when they are grown, will probably be their greatest impulse to success?"

I therefore made up my mind that we would afford our sons some constructive opportunity that would soon convince them that they could make money at home. I talked the subject over with my husband and we decided on pigeons. We had none on the farm and we reasoned that something new would be more interesting to the boys and we were right. When we presented them with six pairs of pigeons and an acre of land as their very own, their joy was too great for words.

They went to work the next morning making a pigeon house in an unused shed and we were surprised to see how heartily they carried the work through. The simple fact was that their sympathies were enlisted in a cause exclusively their own and they kept at work as diligently as if they expected to get rich by it.

The boys' acre was sown to grain for the pigeons' rations and the boys required little assistance in harvesting it. At the age of six months, the pigeons began to pair and the flock kept increasing.

Much more important than the money they make is the fact that they are so well satisfied and so interested with something to do on their own home farm. They loved their home but were anxious to do something for themselves. It was not money they were craving but mental interest.—Mrs. M. E. C.

RELIABLE RECIPES.

Cheese-Cake is seasonable. To make, add one egg to one cupful of fresh cottage-cheese, beat until smooth, then add one-half cupful of sugar and a piece of butter the size of a walnut, or one-half cupful of rich cream. Flavor with vanilla, or nutmeg. Line a pie plate with nice pie-crust, fill with the cheese mixture and bake without a top crust.

Strawberry Delight is well named. Crush ripe strawberries through a sieve, add marshmallows into quarters and soak in the strawberry juice for one hour. When ready to serve mix lightly with very cold whipped cream, place in individual glasses, and garnish with a whole strawberry. Serve with sponge cake.

Strawberry Rice requires one-half cupful of rice, one and one-quarter cupfuls of butter, two cupfuls of milk, one box strawberries, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Wash rice and cook in the milk until soft, adding one-quarter cupful of sugar and the salt. Remove the cover and allow the mixture to thicken. Pick over, wash and mash the strawberries. Add one-third cupful of sugar, and set in warm place for a couple of hours in order to extract the juice. Make a hard sauce of the butter and remaining sugar and, when ready to serve, stir the strawberries into it. Have the rice steaming hot and serve with it a generous helping of the sauce.

Rhubarb Conserves are delicious. It requires three pounds of rhubarb cut into pieces, three oranges, three pounds of sugar, three-quarters of a cupful of water, one pound of raisins, one-half pound of shelled nuts (if desired). Wash and slice the oranges, including the rind, wash the raisins and seed, then chop the nuts. Mix the ingredients and boil slowly for about three-quarters of an hour. Pour hot into jars and seal at once.

BASHFUL JACK'S SLING.

Jack was unfortunate enough to break his arm, and being at the bashful age, refused to stir out of the house with his unsightly white bandages that showed his injury loudly at every one he met. Finally, Jack's mother thought of a remedy for his trouble. She made a dark-colored sling out of an old silk skirt.

The edges of the yard-square sling were neatly hemmed on the sewing machine. The sling was then folded into a triangle and was ready for use. The forearm was placed in the centre of the sling and the outer end of the sling was carried over the arm and at the back of the neck. The inner side of the triangle was carried up between the arm and the chest and to the back of the neck, where it met the other end and was tied behind Jack's collar, first being adjusted as to length for it to be entirely comfortable.

The third point of the sling was then folded around the elbow in such a way that it gave support and kept the elbow from sagging and was pinned in place with safety pins. The pins were black to be as unobtrusive as possible.

With his dark sling partly concealed by his coat, Jack went forth into the world again without fear of being noticeable and strange, a thing a boy never wishes to be.

ROACHES HAVE GYPSY NATURE.

That roaches have a gypsy nature is declared by R. L. Webster, entomologist.

"In towns roaches may move from house to house," said Mr. Webster. "They have even been known to leave one house in large numbers and migrate to another. But whether they enter in bands or singly they are a pest that is especially repulsive."

They are probably the most annoying of common insects, according to Mr. Webster, and some time in the history of nearly every home they make their appearance and cause the housewife no end of trouble.

Damp localities, such as the neighborhood of the kitchen sink, is their favorite habitat. They are night prowlers and usually remain hidden during the daytime. Roaches may be recognized by their brown or black color and their size, which is usually a half inch or more in length. Their flat bodies are well fitted for hiding away in cracks under baseboards.

Roaches reproduce by means of eggs and the young roach is similar in appearance to the mature forms, excepting in size and in the absence of wings that indicate the full grown insect.

"Probably the most effective method of controlling roaches is by the use of sodium fluoride," Mr. Webster explained. "This is a white powder that may be purchased at almost any drug store. The powder should be dusted in liberal quantities into all locations in the house frequented by the insects, especially in pantries and under sinks. Sodium fluoride should never come in contact with any foodstuffs, however, since it is poisonous."

"On the market there are a number of preparations for the control of cockroaches. Many of these contain borax or boric acid, which may be purchased as such from the druggist and applied in the same manner as the sodium fluoride previously mentioned."

Any treatment for cockroaches must be continued for several weeks, if success is to be attained. Persistence is necessary, regardless of whatever measure is used against these troublesome insects. Special care should be taken never to allow bread crumbs or other food of any description to remain exposed about the house, since this encourages the insect.

The St. Lawrence is Rich in History

By S. L. Cullen

Although it is a generally accepted opinion that John and Sebastian Cabot were the pioneers of the St. Lawrence, it is very probable that this great inland waterway was known to wandering European fishermen centuries before their time. It is known that the early Norse Vikings touched on the coast of Labrador and discovered America approximately one thousand years before Columbus was born, but no tangible records have been recovered to prove the surmise that they also discovered the St. Lawrence. The Cabots, father and son, received financial backing from both Portugal and England, but it was the French who followed up the discovery systematically and established the French colony of Canada.

Following the example of the Danish and Anglo-Saxon settlers in Britain, the new emigrants settled along the banks of the river, and for many years the French "Courtiers des Bois" carried on a brisk trade in furs with the Indians of Canada and the Middle West States during the eighteenth century. The St. Lawrence river was well surveyed by topographical experts of several countries, chief among whom being Captain Cook, whose surveys of the St. Lawrence valley are considered authentic and very accurate even to-day. Captain Cook achieved fame as the man who first planted the British flag on Australian soil.

The Battle of the Plains.

The following information was taken from an old chart made after the famous battle between the English under Wolfe and the French under Montcalm, on the Heights of Abraham, when Canada was annexed to the British Empire. On the receipt of the news of the defeat and death of the French hero, Montcalm, at Quebec, the French king made light of it, exclaiming that Canada was only a few acres of rocks and snow at best, and its only native inhabitants were red Indians and polar bears. The king's press agent was not a good prophet. To-day the St. Lawrence river during the summer months is the scene of ever-increasing shipping activity. Every year ships of larger tonnage sail to the inland ports of Quebec and Montreal, and an extensive and very popular trans-Atlantic service has sprung into existence from these ports. Passenger traffic in general between the New World and the Old has increased considerably since the war, and there is every indication that it will continue to expand. The Atlantic is not the irrevocable Rubicon it was a few years ago, when a passenger usually crossed once to make a home for himself abroad. Settlers formed the bulk of the ocean travellers. At the present time it is a matter of conjecture as to whether the tourists and sight-seers compose the larger group of ocean travellers.

The New World is figuratively much nearer to the Old than it was a few years ago; the passage across is quicker and much more comfortable, and what was an ordeal then is a pastime to-day. Thousands of Canadian and American ex-soldiers and ex-nurses saw Britain and the Continent under the stress of war, and left countless friends and warm associations behind when they returned home, but the way back is always open and the welcome is always sure.

In Mexico, Perhaps.

An Actual Maple Leaf Inspired Noted Song.

How "The Maple Leaf Forever" came to be written by Alexander Muir is related in the following interesting narrative by Lieut.-Col. A. E. Belcher, first vice-president of the Ontario Historical Society.

I had the pleasure of knowing the author some years before he wrote these immortal verses. He was a school teacher, and in those days the remuneration was very small. I speak of him fifty years ago. He then lived in the east part of Toronto, almost immediately opposite his small house, was what was then called Leslie's Gardens, where they raised fruit and other trees for sale; it was quite a park as well as other kinds of trees grew there.

We young men coming from outside places boarded at three or four dollars per week at the then farmers' tavern situated in the vicinity of Market Square. Instead of going to church on Sunday we would take a nice long walk down to these gardens, which were like the countryside. Our friend, Alexander Muir, lived in a small house almost opposite the gates of the gardens. At times he asked me into the house, and we enjoyed a chat, so I had the good fortune of knowing Alexander Muir in other days.

On being elected the first mayor of the town of Southampton, in the year 1861, I wrote asking him if he would come up later in the summer and deliver a sort of patriotic or inaugural address, which he kindly consented to do. I entertained him during his stay. I had prepared a speaker's platform in our town hall park, and at its entrance I had at least 200 school children, each with a small flag, and a large one to lead to escort him; he was tender-hearted and I noticed he was quite affected.

Of course there were very many citizens present to hear his address, which was strong, impressive and patriotic. After he had finished I took him to my home and of course I had a very profitable time. Among other things I asked him how he came to write the Maple Leaf.

He stated that one day in Leslie's Gardens he was passing along a path when a Maple Leaf fell upon his coat sleeve. They have little sprigs or spines on them, and it stuck fast—he brushed it off, or thought he had. Looking down it was there still, and he gave it another brush and it came off. He went home and related to his wife how the leaf had stuck to his coat and said, "I think I will write about the maple leaf." The day was lovely and bright; it was the autumn when the maple leaf was beautiful in color. After writing the poem he read it to his wife, who said, why not put it to music, so they can sing it? He went to a music store, but he could not find any music that would suit—so he sat down and composed the tune to suit the words. It was sung, and he found it quite popular; from that time it obtained favor.

When Alexander Muir died I had become quite attached to him, and came to his funeral. Sitting on the bench with Judge Coatsworth we heard that there was need of funds, and his honor gave quite liberally, and I added a little, after which the Orange Brotherhood subscribed a sum for the erection of a tombstone, which bears a portrait medallion of Muir, the work of A. J. Clark, sculptor.

I was also at the unveiling, which was conducted by Lieut.-Col., now Judge T. H. Scott, of Leeds.

Great Men Live Longer Than Mediocre People.

Great men live much longer than mediocre ones, according to Mr. A. Wyatt Tilby, the well-known authority on vital statistics.

He tells us that the ordinary man who reaches maturity attains to an average age of sixty-two, but the average age of five hundred more successful men works out at about sixty-seven and a half years; while in the case of two hundred and sixty-four lives of very distinguished men the figure was sixty-nine.

Statesmen, Popes, and Archbishops have an average age of seventy-nine, which compares favorably with the

ISSUE No. 28-24

"life-line" of artists, musicians, and authors, who on the average reach only sixty-four. The average length of life of Speakers of the House of Commons is eighty years, and Lord Chancellors seventy-nine.

Poets, on an average, have shorter lives than prose writers, their length of life being fifty-four years, while scientists can boast of an average age of seventy years. Test-tubes and mathematics would thus seem to be more favorable to longevity than the "fine frenzy" of the writer of verse.

The Currant Hedge.

I think earth does not know a lovelier thing Than a hedge of currant blossoms in the spring. Who would have guessed that curjilish sod could hold So much of flame and fragrance, green and gold; Who would have dreamed capricious winds of May Could conjure forth this exquisite array Of vagrant stars, blown earthward from the night, To capture weary souls with new delight?

I never catch their wind-blown strange perfume, Drifting from fragrant banks of foam and gold bloom. But that an ancient memory bears me far To an old house beneath an evening star, To an old yard where young leaves would trace High on the sunset sky their fragile lace, And from the hedge that marked the garden rim Night after night the evening wind would bring With perfume lovelier far than ever blew From Eden's garden when the world was new. And beauty and dusk and dreams came drifting low Over an old house, long and long ago. And so I think there is no lovelier thing Than a hedge of currant blossoms in the spring.

—Ted Olson.

Wireless Electricity.

Effective transmission of electrical power without wires is said to be almost within reach. No small part of the promise of the new invention is its possible use in war to explode an enemy's magazines, blow up his warships and turn his ammunition dumps into death and destruction for those who are near them. Science may thus make it more dangerous for a country to have the usual means of carrying on war than to lack them.

Mr. Adomas Jacas, a Lithuanian, is probably the oldest man in the world. He is in his one hundred and forty-sixth year. HEALTH EDUCATION

BY DR. J. J. MIDDLETON
Provincial Board of Health, Ontario

Dr. Middleton will be glad to answer questions on Public Health matters through this column. Address him at Spadina House, Spadina Crescent, Toronto.

If a burglar plans to attack your house, a barrier or a number of barriers are needed to keep him out. If an infuriated bull charges across the field looking for a means of getting on the highway, some barrier is necessary, or trouble will result. It is the same thing when disease is lurking about, waiting for a chance to attack our bodies and lay us on beds of sickness. Barriers are necessary. The point is that some of us do not erect the barrier in time, perhaps we do not erect it at all. Let us think of some common diseases and see if there are any barriers we could put up against them.

Take smallpox and chickenpox as examples. The first barrier in preventing the spread of these two diseases deals with the sick person and carriers. Diagnosis, treatment and isolation of the patient are some of the bars we put up to check the progress of the disease. In addition, there is the disinfection of fomites and articles used by the patient. There is notification of the disease to the health authorities and there is control of contacts. The second barrier is education, good ventilation, satisfactory hygiene, such as cleanliness of person and dwelling, proper housing conditions, etc. In the case of smallpox the third barrier is vaccination.

The barriers erected may be slightly different to suit the particular disease, but they are all along similar lines. There is a powerful army of invaders ready at any moment when conditions are favorable to attack infants and young children. These invaders include cerebro-spinal fever, diphtheria, measles, whooping-cough, mumps, scarlet fever, influenza, pulmonary tuberculosis, pneumonia. These diseases will spread, causing suffering and death, unless barriers are erected to block their progress and prevent them gaining ground. School inspection is an important barrier here, because it affords facilities for early diagnosis of conditions that may easily be put right if taken in time, but which, if allowed to develop and become chronic, may cause lasting illness and retard normal development. Another barrier against the invasion of these disease germs is the control of contacts and excluding them from school till the danger period has passed. Other barriers almost too numerous to mention can be put up to block disease. These include proper ventilation of home and school, good food, avoidance of overcrowding, open-air schools and exercise, avoiding the risk of infection by keeping away from social gatherings during an epidemic, prohibition of public drinking vessels, control of slates, pencils, etc., in schools, attention to diseased tonsils and adenoids, control of the milk and water supplies.

Disease is ever making warfare against the human race and we must fight the enemy. It is the duty of every good citizen to enter the fight and help his neighbor as well as himself when health and even life itself are at stake.

Girl Cellist Coaxes Nightingales to Sing for Radio.

"Was it a vision or a waking dream?" Keats asked concerning the melody of the nightingale, and in the birdless streets of London where no nightingale has been for centuries, the radio public echoed the poet's question.

In a quiet garden in Oxford, Miss Beatrice Harrison's violoncello coaxed not one, but many nightingales into song for the ears of all England. An hour before midnight the "tawny-throated" chorus sent its music against the sensitive microphone placed in a garden and the cellist ceased her decoy music to let traffic-dinned London hear the song that has been responsible for some of the most beautiful of English poetry, so charmed and baffled have the poets been.

The British Broadcasting Company—BBC, as the radio enthusiasts know it—arranged the experiment. The amplifier in the garden sent the song to London over a telephone line, and from the capital it was relayed to all parts of the island.

The tones were clear and natural as they reached the thousands of sets that were in readiness to test the experiment. The nightingales in distant Oxford had brightened for a few minutes the urbanite's life—and, incidentally, the radio program.

Lead Supply.

Authorities say that the world's future supply of lead lies in those complex lead-sulphur-copper-zinc ores the treatment of which has always been a metallurgical problem. These ores are abundant in the Rocky Mountains; but more available supplies of lead are being depleted, and there are no new bodies of lead ore in sight.

No More the Lilacs Wave.
No more the lilacs wave—a purple glory—
Their petals blow about us as we pass;
Again spring's loveliest things have told their story.
Gay tulip cups lie broken in the grass;
Soon peony time will come and go, and after,
Red roses hurt us with their perfectness,
And from old apple orchards flickers' laughter
Break through the garden's silence less and less.

Quaint silhouette against a white plaster—
With beaks stretched wide above a clay bowl's rim—
Four hungry seedlings twitter: "Faster, faster."
To red-breasts hovering on a nearby limb,
While in my heart a voice cries, no whit lower:
"O Time, go slower, slower, slower, slower . . ."

VICTIMS OF ANAEMIA

Need New, Rich Blood to Restore Health and Strength.

It is an unfortunate fact that nine women out of every ten are victims of bloodlessness in one form or another. The girl in her teens, the wife and mother, the matron of middle age—all know its miseries. To be anemic means that you are breathless after slight exertion. You feel worn out and depressed. You turn against food and often cannot digest what you do eat. Sleep does not refresh you, and when you get up you feel exhausted and unfit for the day's duties. If neglected anaemia may lead to consumption.

You should act promptly. Make good the fault in your blood by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the most reliable blood enricher ever discovered. These pills purify bad blood, strengthen weak blood, and they make good blood, and as the condition of your blood improves you will regain proper strength, and enjoy life fully as every girl and woman should do. The case of Mrs. Mary Trainor, Perth, Ont., shows the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. She says: "I had not been feeling well for some time and had been gradually growing weaker. I found it very hard to do my housework, had severe headaches and was very pale. I took doctor's medicine for some time, but they did me no good. I was growing weaker and used to faint and take dizzy spells. In this condition I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after a time found they were helping me. I continued their use until I found the troubles that afflicted me had gone and I am once more enjoying good health and strength."

Fishing Waters of Canada.

It is not generally appreciated, even by Canadians, that two of the four great sea fishing areas of the world border on Canada. In addition, the lakes and rivers of the Dominion constitute approximately one-half of the fresh water of the globe, while the great inland sea of Hudson Bay, still practically untouched, may be regarded as a reserve. Their extent alone suffices to render these various fishing areas remarkable, says the Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa.

The Atlantic coast line, from Labrador to the boundary between the United States and Canada, measures over 5,000 miles—not including the lesser bays and indentations. Off the coast are the noted fisheries of the "Grand Banks." Moreover, 15,000 square miles of inshore waters are entirely controlled by the Dominion, while Hudson Bay has a shoreline of 5,000 miles.

Crossing the continent, the Pacific shoreline is over 7,000 miles long and has the unique advantage, thanks to its multitude of islands, of being exceptionally well sheltered for fishermen. Finally, the fresh water lakes of the interior constitute an area of 230,000 square miles. Canada's share of the Great Lakes along the United States boundary alone covers 34,000 square miles. These varied waters yield at least fifty edible species.

That Canadian fishing waters are exceptional in fertility, as well as in area, is denoted by the fact that the entire catch of salmon, lobsters, herring, mackerel and eardines, nearly all of the haddock and many of the cod, hake and pollock are taken within 10 to 12 miles from shore. Further, the value of the Dominion's fisheries resources is enhanced by the circumstance that the colder waters of the northern latitudes produce fish of the finest quality.

His Number.

When we're little and spend our days at home a shift of furniture is a real event. So small Polly was keenly alert when mother brought to the dining room from the attic an armchair which she placed at one end of the table.

"Oh, mom," queried Polly, "what's the big chair for?"
"It's for the head of the family."
"But," the little girl exclaimed, "you put it in the place where daddy sits."

On the outskirts of London, and within half an hour's journey from the city, is one of the most beautiful bits of woodland in England. Few Canadians, or Londoners either, have ever visited this place, or even know of its existence.

It is a bird sanctuary, a veritable land of song, which is carefully fenced and guarded by keepers night and day and where every kind of British bird lives and nests unharmed.

The wood lies in the Brent Valley and was purchased for London two years ago and established as a permanent memorial to Gilbert White, the author of the "History of Selborne," by the Selborne Society, in London. The sanctuary, however, has been in existence just twenty-one years this year and in its nineteen acres, in the boughs of its many oak trees and the copices of hazel, ows, willow warblers, blue-tits, goldfinches, nightingales, blackcaps and many other birds may be seen.

Were it not for this sanctuary, many of the shy types of birds, the nightingales particularly, would have deserted the ever-growing city of London.

CHILDHOOD CONSTIPATION

Constipated children can find prompt relief through the use of Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach, thus driving out constipation and indigestion; colds and simple fevers. Concerning them Mrs. Gaspard Daigle, Demain, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets have been of great benefit to my little boy, who was suffering from constipation and indigestion. They quickly relieved him and now he is in the best of health." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BETTER GREEN TEA IMPORTED.

Many think that those who drink Green Tea are more critical judges of quality than those who drink black. Such would seem to be the case, because some years ago great quantities of poor quality Japan and China Green Teas were brought into Canada. The demand for this type of tea soon fell off. Now, however, the much finer quality of India and Ceylon Greens, imported mostly by the Salada Tea Company, has sharply revived the demand by those who enjoy the distinctive flavor of Green Tea.

Wealth From Whales.

Ambergris, derived from the intestines of the whale, is found in lumps up to 800 lb. in weight, either floating in the Tropic seas or cast up on the shores of Madagascar, China and Japan.

The whole of the constituents of ambergris, being of a highly complicated character, have not yet been identified and isolated.

Ambergris was known in very early times, and was reputed to possess highly curative properties for certain diseases.

Its present high cost—twenty-three dollars an ounce—is due entirely to the uncertainty of the supplies, to its use in perfumery as a fixative, and to its highly pleasant and delicate musk-like odor.

EASY TRICKS Four Kings

The four kings are taken from a pack of cards and displayed. One king is placed in the pack, which is held face down, near the bottom. Another is placed near the centre. A third is placed near the top and the last is placed on the top. The cards are now cut, the lower portion being placed on the top. The trickster holds the cards behind his back for a moment. When he brings the cards in view again, the trick is done. He asks a spectator to examine the cards. The four kings are found together near the middle of the pack. A familiar stunt of the magician is used to accomplish the trick. The four kings are held in the form of a fan when they are displayed. Behind them, three queens are hidden. The fan is closed. The top card, apparently a king but really a queen, is placed in the lower portion of the pack. The last card (really the four kings) is placed on the top of the pack and the cards are cut. Putting the cards behind the back is a little misdirection as the trick would be a trifle too wonderful to be believed if the spectators were given nothing to lead them to believe that there was some manipulation of the cards to bring about the result.

(Clip this out and paste it, with other of the series, in a scrapbook.)

A Quarter's Worth of Courtesy.

Whatever the cause, real spontaneous courtesy is not so often seen in street cars as it used to be; indeed, there is now much actual discourtesy. It is cheering therefore to read about a young fellow who knows how to be courteous, and who is willing to teach others to be so. The Baltimore Sun tells the story:

It happened on a southbound Guilford Avenue car about noon. Every seat was taken when the car stopped at Preston Street. Strap-hangers moved to the front. Thirteen men, who were seated, gazed abstractedly through the windows.

An old woman heavily draped in a mourning veil entered by the front door. None of the men moved. Several glanced at the woman as she balanced herself.

A youth who was standing—he was probably seventeen years old and was carrying school books—leaned over an athletic-looking man. "Do you want to sell your seat for a quarter?" the boy asked the man.

"Where is the money?" the man rejoined.

The boy produced a much-worn quarter from his pocket and gave it to the man.

"I've bought this seat," the boy said, turning to the woman. "You may now sit down."

The woman thanked him as she moved to the seat.

At Pleasant Street the man alighted, looking rather ashamed. The other men paid more attention than ever to the buildings that the car was passing.

Regular brushing of the gums as well as the teeth is essential for a healthy mouth.

Sky-Writing in Flame-Colored Smoke.

A new form of sky-writing—using flame-colored as well as white smoke—has been initiated here, says a London despatch. It was seen by visitors to the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley and by people within a radius of 10 miles.

About 6 p.m. a machine, chartered from Major J. Savage and piloted by Lieut. Talbot, at an altitude of between 10,000 and 12,000 feet, began to trace words on the sky. When only half-way through the first word the machine emitted a stream of red smoke, and watchers first thought the aeroplane had caught fire. Then it was seen that the machine was completing a word in flame-colored smoke, and this color was also used for the second word. The aeroplane was traveling at over 100 miles an hour.

This was the first time that any sky-writing had been done in colored smoke.

YOUNG DAUGHTER MADE WELL

Mother Tells How Her Daughter Suffered and Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vancouver, B.C.—"My daughter is a young girl who has been having severe pains and weak and dizzy feelings for some time and had lost her appetite. Through an older daughter who had heard of a woman who was taking it for the same trouble, we were told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My daughter has been taking it for several months and is quite all right now. It has done all it was represented to do and we have told a number of friends about it. I am never without a bottle of it in the house, for I myself take it for that weak, tired, worn-out feeling which sometimes comes to us all. I find it is building me up and I strongly recommend it to women who are suffering as I and my daughter have."—Mrs. J. McDONALD, 2947 26th Ave. East, Vancouver, B.C.

From the age of twelve a girl needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give. Many a woman has suffered years of pain and misery—the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time. If she complains of headaches, pains in the back and lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter, make life easier for her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for such conditions.

DONALD KIRKE GIVES TANLAC FULL CREDIT

Popular Actor Says Medicine Completely Overcame Stomach Trouble and Nervousness.

That Montreal play-goers are literally packing their Orpheum Theatre at every performance is at once a tribute to the high standard of the entertainment offered and to the finished artistry of the famous Duffy stock players, not the least popular of whom is Donald Kirke.

Mr. Kirke is not only a favorite on the legitimate stage but is a screen player of note, and it is a further tribute to his consummate acting that even while tortured with stomach trouble, nervousness and other ills, he kept "on with the play" day in and day out until he found relief by taking TANLAC. As he says:

"My stomach had almost failed me and I wonder now how I ever kept up, I ate so little. Nights I would toss and turn for hours in nervousness; piercing sick headaches made me suffer agony, and at times on the stage I was so nervous, weak and trembly that I could hardly remember my lines."

"I would have given a thousand dollars to get the relief Tanlac has given me for less than five dollars. My appetite was never better, I eat everything and have gained 13 pounds. I'm never a bit weak or nervous, never have a headache, and I feel fine and dandy. I will gladly confirm these facts by phone or letter."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

GRAND OTTAWA VALLEY!

No wonder that this river should for a long time be designated as "The Grand River." A notable feature of our county is in the mighty waterfall from west to east. It is true that Canada cannot claim entire possession of the St. Lawrence and its sources, but she does claim the whole of the Ottawa basin. Along the Ottawa there are many beautiful spots, and many stretches of immense grandeur; perhaps none to excel the stretch between Carillon and Hawkesbury. Mountain range and detached elevations, forests and cultivated areas; deep-flowing water, and wild tumult of rapids,—all contrive to make a most interesting and immense panorama. We may well feel a measure of pride in being the permanent occupants of this earthly paradise. An Almighty Providence prepared this home for us, and placed us here to occupy the wealth and glory of such an inheritance. In this section of the Ottawa valley a most interesting, historical event is commemorated at Carillon, in a bronze monument to the young heroes who gave up their lives for the salvation of the colony of that early date. This is a fitting and much deserved monument. Of all Indian confederacies there was none so potent, none so well organized, and certainly none more savage than the Iroquois Confederacy. For various reasons of their own the Iroquois had determined to blot out the white occupants of Quebec and Montreal, and intervening settlements. When it became known that this purpose was in process of execution one Adam Daulac (Dollard) whose choice led him out into New France, scarce more than having entered into his twenties, became possessed with the crusader spirit of being the defender and deliverer of his fellow-colonists in the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Valleys. He secured to his own convictions others who pledged themselves for life and for death to meet and to fight the swarms of the oncoming stealthy Iroquois. The monument shows the location of the backwoods stockade at the foot of the great rapids. Here seventeen young Frenchmen, four Algonquins, and one Huron chief held in check for ten days or more the combined forces of the most savage Indian confederacy on this continent. Reeling and staggering with hunger and thirst and exhaustion, fighting like tigers and praying like devotees, these young men after killing many score of their demoniac assailants, were overpowered and lay in a mangled heap within the ruins of their stockade. The agonized expression of devotion to an elevated purpose of self-sacrifice in behalf of others is, I think, well executed in the design of this simple monument.

ST. PATRICK.

OBITUARY.

The Late Mr. Jas. Tomalty.

Attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, the funeral took place on Saturday afternoon last, of Mr. James Tomalty, who passed peacefully away on Thursday, after a year's illness. Deceased was born in Edina, Que., Feb. 14th, 1847. On May 22nd, 1873, he married Miss Grace Jane Greene in Alpena, Michigan, (formerly of Harrington.) Of this marriage nine children were born. He is survived by his widow, four sons and one daughter, John living in Hoosier, Sask. James, in Montreal, Mrs. D. MacKiddie, William and David, in Brownsburg, also sixteen grandchildren, and one brother, Mr. Joseph Tomalty in Montreal. His six nephews acted as pall bearers, Messrs. Arthur, Albert, Thomas, Geo. Arthur and W. J. Tomalty.

Funeral service was conducted by Rev. P. A. MacEwan, and the remains were laid to rest in Edina Cemetery.

Orange Celebration at Louisa.

Orangemen in the County of Argenteuil fittingly observed the "Glorious Twelfth," on Saturday last, in old time style when the several Lodges comprising Morin Heights, Shrewsbury, Lachute and Louisa, held a short parade from Louisa hall to Hiram Watchorn's grove. Fine weather was the order of the day and nothing occurred of a rude nature to mar the happiness of the proud wearers of the Orange colors. During the afternoon the Rev. J. A. Lackey, of Lachute, Rev. W. J. H. Lummis, of Morin Heights, and Rt. Wor. Bro. Wm. Galbraith of Montreal, gave addresses on Orangism. After the singing of God Save the King, an attractive programme of sports was carried out. During the evening the brethren of Louisa held a Dance at Louisa hall.

Oddfellows' Installation.

The semi-annual Installation of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, was held on Tuesday evening last, when P.D.D.G.M. Bro. S. S. Campbell and Suite installed the following officers for the ensuing term.—J.P.G. L. Morris; D. Beers, N.G.; J. Connelly, V. G.; Jas. A. MacKimmie, Rec.-Sec.; W. K. MacArthur, Fin.-Sec.; S. S. Campbell, Treas.; F. Hoosgood, Warden; G. Demerise, Conductor; R. Graham, Chaplain; T. MacNaughton, R. S.S.; W. Thompson, L.S.S.; R. MacArthur, R.S.N.G.; F. J. E. Jordan, L.S.N.G.; S. Thompson, R.S.V.G.; G. McCormick, L.S.V.G.; Jas. Thompson, I.G.; E. Barker, O.G.

After the Officers were installed Bros. McArthur and Slater were called upon and in a few well chosen remarks, presented Bro. G. H. Stanforth with a Veteran Jewel, as a token of 25 years membership in the order. The Brethren then retired to the Banquet Hall where refreshments were served in abundance, following which a pleasant social hour was spent.

Mrs. Robt. MacLeod, and little son, of North Bay, Ont., are visiting his parents in Brownsburg, Mr. and Mrs.
MacLeod.

Mrs. Wm. Clutchie was taken on Thursday last to the Ross Memorial Hospital, suffering from appendicitis.
The underwent an operation on Friday morning, and is now progressing excellently.

Early Morning Fire.

A fire broke out early on Tuesday morning behind the residence of Father Bouchard, of Brownsburg. At approximately 3 o'clock a.m., flames were noticed and neighbors soon gathered at the scene. The garage, and Father Bouchard's car inside, were completely burned, and also the woodshed, hen house, and outbuildings were all consumed by the flames, which spread with great rapidity. It was thought for some time that the house itself would also burn. However the Dominion Cartridge Co. fire hose and water power were brought into play, and the house, although slightly damaged, was saved from destruction.

Father Bouchard at the time was away on a visit to Quebec. It is understood that neither the buildings nor the car are insured. It is thought that the fire was caused through spontaneous combustion in a collec-
garage.

"When Hearts Command"

By ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

"When hearts command,

CHAPTER XXIII.—(Cont'd.)

Hugo and Alice tried to comfort her without avail, until Alice found an ear and whispered that she wouldn't leave her precious mother, that she wouldn't get married, they'd send a telegram to Philip telling him it was all off. Then Jean came to her senses and started explaining.

All that was the matter with her, she said, was Uncle John's bluffing the Italian bank into believing that he had a fortune and their allowing him to draw ten thousand lire on the strength of it. And he didn't know yet whether it was true or not.

Hugo began to laugh.

"But you've been worried about it yourself," she said sharply.

"Not about that I haven't," he said. "You've been worrying about something. What else could it have been?"

"If you don't know I'm not going to tell you." He stopped laughing and looked very cross. "Here—gaze on that."

He took a crumpled paper out of his pocket and handed it to her.

It was a brief note from the local bank to say that they'd had their telegram from Mercer's; it was quite all right. The balance of the $5,000 cash was safe right here in Bordighera.

As is usual, relief turned to indignation.

"When did this come?" Jean demanded.

"Last evening. A boy brought it up," Hugo replied.

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"I don't know. I didn't think."

"But I've been nearly mad with anxiety!"

Hugo shrugged his shoulders.

"I don't see why," he grumbled.

"I've told you all along that it was safe enough. I don't see why you couldn't believe me."

As usual, she had tried to cross a bridge that didn't exist.

"Could we take a little walk, mummy darling. Not too far, of course, and you might put on my tennis shoes."

Mrs. Carnay's rather tired face broke into bright agreement.

"I'd love a walk," she said. "But first I must find out what Uncle John means to do."

"Without hurting his feelings, could we leave him behind?" Alice asked quickly.

Her mother nodded. There was no need for explanations. This was her very last evening with Alice before life changed entirely, and the fact that her daughter wanted to be alone with her for a little while was natural enough. They had been so rushed getting ready for the wedding, and while there was still another day before the two ceremonies took place, tomorrow would be another rush with Philip Ardeyne at the end of it anxious to claim Alice and make up for what he had lost of her society.

Mrs. Carnay trotted into the house and found Hugo at the writing bureau in the salon submerged in a sea of calculating. He was a picture of virtuous, clerical energy, his shoulders humped over the task, his near-sighted gaze bent upon long columns of figures, his lips severely pursed.

"Well, my dear, what is it?" he inquired when Jean had stood by the desk a moment a little loath to interrupt him.

"I only just wanted to know if you'd mind if Alice and I went for a stroll," she replied.

Hugo did mind, since the request so pointedly left him out, and he hated to be left out of anything, but he gave her a grudging permission.

"I dare say I can manage without you for an hour or so. But don't be too long. I want to tell you what I'm planning to do."

"It's the last chance I'll have to be alone with Alice," Jean faltered.

"Oh, I'm not a bit hurt," Hugo assured her.

Jean was silent as they climbed up through the old town, and then farther up to the groves above Sasso.

They sat down to rest beside the path looking towards Monte Nero, the hillside falling away sharply at their feet into a dark gorge, from which came the tinkle and murmur of water rushing over stones. "Black Mountain," indeed, with its hooded crest of sable firs. How lonely it must be up there at night—yet how beautiful.

Jean thought that she would not be really lonely if someone she loved were there too. But Hector Gaunt had no body for company, unless one counted old Maria. Hours and hours and hours he spent alone on that mountain-top.

A great log came sailing majestically across the valley from the western slope to the sawmills at Sasso. The steel cable which carried it was almost invisible, and it looked like some new form of aircraft.

"Look!" Alice cried. "There's a man on it! I wish we could get on one and pay Mr. Gaunt a surprise visit."

She reached out and squeezed her mother's hand. "Mr. Gaunt's the nicest man I've ever met—except Philip, of course. I'm glad you're going to stay here for a little while, mummy darling. I'll feel happier, somehow, knowing that Mr. Gaunt's keeping an eye on you."

"Will you dear?" Jean asked wistfully.

"You're such a little mother. You need looking after. I'm being so selfish in leaving you!"

"No, you're not," Jean said, her voice bright and quick. Alice mustn't guess for a moment how desperate she was feeling about this parting. "I can't tell you how thankful I am you've found such a good man. And I want you to be just the happiest girl in the world. As soon as you are nicely settled in your new home I'm coming to pay you a long visit. Dr. Ardeyne asked me, and he also asked Uncle John."

"Poor Uncle John!" said Alice thoughtfully.

Twice Alice had said "Poor Uncle John!" Would it be too risky to ask her why she thought of him as an object of pity? Since that night when she had asked her terrible questions, Alice had avoided personal reference to Uncle John. So had her mother.

Just the one word "madhouse," or the suspicion of it as figuring in Hugo's past, might have altered the whole situation. Alice was so terribly conscientious. She would have insisted upon Ardeyne's knowing, would have insisted upon being told how it might affect herself, since madness runs in families. Oh, there had been so many near shaves, and even now when everything—including Alice's suspicions—seemed lulled into security, an upset might occur at the last moment, at the very altar itself. Jean knew her daughter. Alice had a will of iron, and even love itself would not shake her convictions as to right and wrong.

Why—Mrs. Carnay reflected with acute dismay—if Alice knew the real secret of her birth she was quite capable of breaking her engagement without a single word of explanation to anybody.

It was like a beautiful castle built of cards—a breath could destroy it.

"Sometimes I feel I have no right to be so happy," Alice said. "What have I ever done to deserve it?"

"You've been the best daughter in the world," protested Jean, half choked between emotion and her heavy sense of guilt. "It's I—I, who don't deserve anything!"

"But you're not getting anything, mummy dear. And you are the one who deserves everything the world could give anybody. Don't think because I'm getting married and it looks as though we'd be separated, that we really will be separated. Letters are wonderful things—and there'll be visits. Perhaps you'll come to live in England. I'll have Philip, but I can't do without my mother. You see how selfish I am. If I thought I'd have to do without you—"

"Oh, you won't! Yes—yes, I'll come to England. I must be near you, particularly—in case—" Old-fashioned Jean blushed, faltered, and broke off self-consciously.

But Alice was of a generation which looks nature in the face and sees no reason to make secrets of its laws.

"Yes, if I have a child—children—I'd want you, mummy."

Jean squeezed her hand.

"I can't realize it—that it may be possible. Why, you're only a baby yourself! You aren't even married yet. It doesn't seem quite—"

"Oh, darling, how funny you are!" Alice laughed heartily now. "Why, Philip discusses children."

"Not with you!" Mrs. Carnay was horrified.

"Yes, with me, mummy, darling."

"But—"

"He talked so beautifully, it simply made me want to weep."

"How do you mean? What could he have said? Really, Alice—"

"All about the great responsibility of parenthood. How nobody, no intelligent man or woman, had any right to bring children into the world unless they could guarantee them a clean bill of health—mental and physical."

Jean shivered. "I cannot understand any man talking like that to the girl he's going to marry," she said.

But Alice was unperturbed by this criticism.

"Philip's a doctor," she reminded her mother. "He sees a great deal of the misery that—that parents do inflict upon their children merely by bringing them into the world."

"My dear, those things are better left to a Higher Being."

"I don't believe," Alice said slowly, "that leaving things to chance is the same thing as leaving them to God."

The sun had gone down, and suddenly it was quite chilly. Monte Nero was like a giant shadow, and the little white farm gleamed ghostly in the twilight. A light shone from one of the windows. That would be Hector's dear, untidy sitting-room, the room in which Jean could not help remembering he kept her photograph to bear him company. While Alice and she had been wandering about from pension to pension Hector had always been there on his mountain-top.

"We must hurry," she said, "or it will be dark before we get home. I hope Uncle John hasn't got into any mischief."

"Why should he?" Alice asked sharply.

But Jean did not reply.

REMOVING SUMMER STAINS.

Now is the time one must watch most carefully for fruit stains on the table linen and light dresses. If before sending articles through the laundry all fruit stains are well dampened with alcohol or camphor all traces of discoloration will have vanished after they are washed.

If the children get grease from the car or tractor on their clothes, spread butter or lard evenly over the spots and let it remain until the grease is soft, then wash with soft, soapy water.

To remove blood stains, soak the spots in salt water, wash and rinse in the usual way.

Grass stains may be removed by saturating the spot with kerosene before washing the garment in the usual way.

For tea or coffee stains, soak the stains in cold water, wring, spread out and pour a few drops of glycerine on each spot. Let it stand several hours, then wash with cold water and soap.

In removing iron rust, soak the stain with lemon juice, sprinkle with salt and bleach for several hours in the sun.

Mildew stains should be soaked in a weak solution of chloride of lime for several hours and then rinsed in cold water.

There are some fruit stains that will disappear if the fabric is stretched tightly over the top of a bowl or pan and boiling water is poured slowly on the stained places.

CHOCHECHERRY SANDWICHES.

When our four families gathered for a picnic by a little stream of water under the trees, our chokecherry sandwiches were extremely popular.

It all happened on a rainy day when nothing else could happen. We were making chokecherry jelly, the best jelly in our cellar, when we put our heads together and decided to make chokecherry jam out of the remains.

We squeezed some of the pulp through the sieve and some through the potato ricer and then mixed it with some apple pulp. We added sugar and put the mixture on the stove. The longer it cooked the better it tasted. We stood around the kitchen, spoons in hand, for a good part of the day. Then we cooked it some more, let it stay on the back of the stove all night, and the next morning we tasted it all around again, and made sandwiches of it for the picnic.

Since then we have done some experimenting to find what proportions are best and these are our conclusions: About one-eighth as much chokecherry as apple is best of all. The bitter taste which the cherries on the bushes have turns into a delicate, aromatic one when used as flavoring, and the coloring is rich.

DON'T SHUT OUT THE DAY-LIGHT.

Mary Drake was not an old woman—only just the other side of forty. It was annoying to find that her work was slowing up because she no longer could see as of old. She said as much to the doctor who stood in her kitchen for a moment after dropping in to see Grandpa Drake.

The doctor's reply was to reach his long arm up to the top of the dark green window shade and lift it from its fastenings; then he crossed to the north window and did the same thing there. To Mary's great surprise her kitchen things stood out as if suddenly illuminated. She had not realized that the two shades would make such a difference.

"I'm getting to be quite a crank about these dark green shades," said the doctor. "In half the kitchens and living rooms of this country women are pottering around in a half-light because they deliberately shut out from twenty-five to fifty per cent. of the daylight with the darkest shades they can buy on the market. If you have to have shades, why not buy them of white, thin, translucent material, such as will admit and diffuse all the light possible when the sun is shining directly upon them, and roll them up out of the way when there is no sun."

"We might as well, doctor," admitted Mary. "I suppose most of us use dark shades partly because we have become used to them and partly because they don't show the dirt. But we could use light ones. We have to have shades, you know. They serve for other things than to keep the sun from looking in."

"Then why not hang them at the lower part of the window. It's quite possible. Don't you realize that the place from which you want light to shine on your work is from above. You may blot out the entire lower half of your window without noticing the loss if you will just have a few inches of clear light from the upper part. In doing any work your eyes naturally look down rather than up. Ever notice that? Try reading a news-

For Sore Feet—Minard's Liniment

Japan is a Land of Topsy-Turvydom

Japan is a land of temples and babies, both abounding everywhere in well-nigh incredible numbers.

In Kyoto, which is Japan's ancient capital, famous temples lie so thick that "seeing the sights" resolves itself into a continuous procession from one sacred edifice to another. It is on record that one tourist with plenty of stamina once did the whole five thousand odd in three days—a world's record. But he came from Chicago, and used a Rolls-Royce.

Of all these thousands of shrines, the quaintest and prettiest is that dedicated to Jizo, who is the god of babies. His altar, writes Mr. Gilbert Cahill in "Far Eastern Jaunts," is laden with hundreds of baby images, banked up into a sort of tiny grandstand.

Sometimes the little mothers of Kyoto lose their babies, and the fact that in Japan there are enough babies to supply ten ordinary countries does not make this bereavement any the less sad. When it happens, the little mother comes to Jizo's shrine and peers at the baby images until she finds one that most resembles the little face that has gone from her for ever.

To this idol she makes offerings of bits and aprons, and prays compassionate Jizo to be kind to the little soul that is now on its way to heaven and send down another to take its place, because it is not good for a Japanese mother to be without children for long.

Taking third place after the babies and the temples, in point of numbers, are the geisha, dancing and singing girls, who are turned out by tens of thousands every year from the great geisha training colleges all over the kingdom.

A geisha starts her training at the age of five, and studies for two years before she begins to perform at the age of seven. She is then classed as a maiko, or apprentice, and she continues a maiko for seven more years. Not until she is fourteen does she become a full-blown geisha, and only then if she has passed all her examinations and tests successfully.

The fees at the training colleges are fairly stiff. Each girl also pays a tax of ten yen ($5.00) a month and twenty yen ($10.00) after she has become a geisha. This latter charge is, however, passed on—in theory at all events—to her employers. It corresponds, in fact, to our amusement tax.

A properly trained geisha earns good money. In Nagasaki the author hired two little maiko to dance for him for half an hour. The charge was eleven yen, which is $5.50. Had they been out of their apprenticeship, the charge would have been probably double or treble as much. A geisha, if at all popular, will earn easily a thousand yen a month, that is five hundred dollars. Some few earn very much more. At Kyoto Mr. Collins saw one perform wearing a beautiful sash that cost two thousand yen.

We in this country call the ruler of Japan the Mikado, but to any but an educated Japanese neither "Japan" nor "Mikado" would convey any meaning whatsoever. The Japanese call their country Nihon, or Nippon, and their ruler Tenno, which means "Son of Heaven," or less frequently Tenno, for which "Emperor" is the recognized English equivalent.

Broadly speaking, Japan is a country of topsy-turvydom, regarded from a Western point of view. Japanese screws are made to work the reverse way from ours, Japanese carpenters saw with their feet instead of their hands, and saw backwards at that. Their country is full of cherry and plum trees, but they eat the blossom and throw away the fruit.

Japanese women buy their dresses by the pound and their bread by the yard. The men drink their beer hot and their grog cold. Japanese snakes have no poison; Japanese music has no harmony. Japanese pickles are precisely the reverse of sour, their jams are salted, and they boil their potatoes and syrup.

The most affectionate race on earth, the Japs do not know how to kiss, and, flirting, as we understand it, is unknown amongst them. The Japanese language possesses no swear words, and Japanese children have no tempers and are never naughty.

Being religious is a sign of frighten in a Japanese woman, and the average Japanese man is in mortal dread of immortality. His whole religious life is directed towards avoiding it, and when he dies he is cremated, so as to make annihilation as complete as possible.

What's a Grandfather Without a Wooden Leg?

What should a man do to be a perfect grandfather? That's a hard question of course, and it seems to grow harder the more we think of grandchildren and of their tastes. Should we be willing, for example, to meet the requirements of Johnny as set forth in the following amusing story?

Johnny's grandfather from the Far West was visiting the boy's home. When from the journey, he retired early the night of his arrival. Johnny slipped up to his mother's side and whispered, "May I see grandpa go to bed?"

"Why do you want to see him go to bed, dearie?" his mother replied.

"I want to see him take off his wooden leg."

The mother was astonished. "But this grandfather has no wooden leg; it is your other grandfather."

"Then this one is not my real grandpa, or he would have a wooden leg," protested the small boy.

No amount of persuasion could convince him that a grandfather could be real without at least one artificial member. If this old man from the West were a real grandpa, then why didn't he have a wooden leg? Johnny had no use for him.

The next day when the discarded grandfather was all alone with his young grandson, he removed his upper teeth, which were false.

Johnny gave a cry of astonishment and admiration. "How do you do it?" he demanded and pulled upon his own teeth.

Grandfather smiled and then wonder of wonders, removed the lower row also.

Johnny's admiration now knew no bounds; he jumped and clapped his hands in glee. "You are my real grandfather, aren't you, grandpa? If your leg can't come off, all your teeth can come out, can't they?"

From that moment grandfather's embarrassment began; for Johnny insisted that all the other members of the family be convinced of grandfather's genuineness.

Pickles and Milk Safe Combination, Expert Declares

Are you afraid to eat lobster and ice cream at the same meal, or pickles and milk?

Ideas such as these that certain foods eaten with other foods form "bad combinations" are absurd, says Professor Walter H. Eddy, well known authority on food and diet, of Columbia University, who recently attracted wide attention by isolating "vitamin D," one of the mysterious and elusive food constituents so essential to the support of life. If any one ever really became ill after eating ice cream and lobster or pickles and milk, he asserts, it was because he ate too much or was poisoned by impurities—either one of which might have happened to him after eating any of the foods alone.

Foods are not antagonistic to one another, writes Professor Eddy. There are really no bad food combinations; at least, if there are bad combinations, they are made so more because of what they lack than because of what they contain, and these become good combinations as soon as the missing elements are supplied.

In other words, there is nothing wrong with the foods you are accustomed to eat, except that you probably do not eat these foods in the proportion and amount required by the chemistry of your body.

To take a specific example: A dinner consisting of broiled steak, fried potatoes, bread and butter, pumpkin pie and coffee probably would impress you as being a good meal. And yet it is not, Professor Eddy says, for it lacks at least one element essential to the welfare of the body. Add a green vegetable—spinach, string beans, or something of that sort—or a salad, and you have supplied the element that is lacking, and have made a satisfactory meal.

One reason for this is that your body requires a small amount of mineral salts each day—particularly salts containing calcium and phosphorus. These are present in green vegetables and milk in proper proportions; in the meal just detailed, calcium was lacking until supplied by a green vegetable.

Professor Eddy also declared that the number of "calories," or heat units, that certain foods contain does not offer a guide in selecting a diet. Any food chemist, he writes, could compile a "diet" consisting of alfalfa, chicken corn and linseed oil that would contain all the calories the human body requires, but you couldn't use such a diet. The human body is not designed to digest and utilize hay and linseed oil.

It is designed, though, to utilize foods of the kind that you are accustomed to eat, says Professor Eddy, and if you will eat the equivalent of a half pound of beefsteak a day, use green vegetables to make up the bulk of your food, take milk freely and substitute cooked fruit, simple puddings and ice cream for pies, pastry and other heavy desserts, your diet problem will virtually be solved.

All Said the Same Thing.

"I can't keep visitors from coming up," said the office-boy dejectedly. "When I say you're out they won't believe me. They all say they must see you." "Well, put them off somehow," said the boss, with a worried look. "Whatever they say, just tell them. That's what they all say." Be firm. See? "Yes, sir." That afternoon a lady called. She had hard features and an acid expression, and she demanded to see the boss at once. "Impossible," said William. "But I'm his wife," persisted the lady. "That's what they all say," said the boy. "What they all say," said the boy.

Sunshine in England.

When the sun shines in England it stones
For low-hung leaden skies, and rain and dim
Moist fogs that paint the verdure on her stones,
And fill her gentle rivers to the brim.

When the sun shines on England shafts of light
Fall on far towers and hills and dark old trees,
And hedge-bound meadows of a green as bright—
As bright as is the blue of tropic seas.

When the sun shines it is as if the face
Of some proud man relaxed its haughty stare,
And smiled upon us with a sudden grace,
Flattering because its coming is so rare.

Cash, Not Sympathy Wanted.

Some kinds of philanthropy are not always appreciated. A little while ago, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record, a charitable man was accosted by a fearful beggar, who asked him for a dime to keep his starving wife and children from gnawing hunger. The philanthropist, being a generous soul, at once produced the dime and then paused to talk over the unfortunate man's hard luck.

He asked the man about the poor wife and the miserable children and asked how he came to be out of work and many other questions. At first the beggar answered in a fearful tone, as became his estate, but as the conversation stretched out he began to show signs of impatience. Still the philanthropist talked on.

"Look here, mister," finally exclaimed the beggar with unseemly abruptness, "we must quit this; I've got to be moving on."

"Why, what's your hurry? You haven't anything to do, have you?"

"I should say I have!" was the reply. "While we've been standing here five easy marks have got past me! I can't afford to wait."

Origin of Mourning Black.

The custom of wearing black as a sign of mourning originated with Anne, the wife of Charles VIII. of France, who, at the death of her husband, surrounded her coat-of-arms with black and wore black in token of her widowhood.

There are fewer germs on paper money investigations show, than people have been led to suppose. Even old and dirty money was found to be astonishingly free of them. The investigators attribute the condition to "something in the composition of the paper," but very likely the germs have the same difficulty that human beings have in getting money to stick to them.

Stories About Well-Known People

No Words Wasted.

President Coolidge is already famous for his laconic habit of speech. His biographer, Mr. E. E. Whiting, says that it is impossible to exaggerate the thrift with which he economizes in words. Once, according to Mr. Whiting, when Mrs. Coolidge had gone out for the afternoon and something suddenly demanded her return Mr. Coolidge, who was then Governor of Massachusetts, called her on the telephone.

"Is this Grace?" he asked.

"Yes."

"This is Cal. Hop home."

It did the work.

Not Gabriel, But Heaven, Plain Anglican Curate.

The Rev. E. Gabriel is curate of All Saints Cathedral, Halifax, and the Rev. Charles F. Heaven is curate of St. Luke's Church, St. John, N.B. Mr. Gabriel left Holy Trinity Church, St. John, about the same time as Mr. Heaven left Nova Scotia to take up a curacy in St. John. Mr. Heaven had just left the archbishop's office and was proceeding from the synod building, when he was met by a distinguished Halifax clergyman, who pertinently asked, "Are you Gabriel, the new cathedral curate?" and added, "Will you preach for me on Sunday?" The young curate modestly replied: "No, I am not Gabriel—but—Heaven. I am going to preach in St. John."

James Brown, His Majesty's Deputy. The British people have been much impressed by the poise with which James Brown, M.P., who was for many years a working miner, carried himself while occupying Holyrood Palace at Edinburgh as the King's deputy and Lord High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. During Mr. Brown's occupancy of the post he was in all respects the personal representative of the King. Honors that are distinctly royal were paid to him and to Mrs. Brown, and he took social precedence over all the nobility of Scotland. The Lord High Commissioner bore himself with modesty and dignity during his stay in Holyrood, the famous palace of the Stuarts; and the incident has given great satisfaction to the nation as a proof of the essential democracy of the British system and of the willingness of the Labor leaders to carry on the historic traditions of the kingdom.

We Owe Our Piano Keys to Mr. Elephant.

Every boy who has been to a circus or visited the zoo, knows that one of the wisest animals he saw there was the great, massive elephant. When he got a little older and was able to read the newspaper he was intensely interested in seeing one day Mr. Elephant had been given a bath. He read that the scrubbing required several lengths of fire hose, barrels and barrels of water, a dozen bars of soap, and then to finish off with, instead of talcum powder and expensive perfumes, he had a few gallons of oil rubbed into his hide.

But when that same little boy shut himself in the parlor for his hour's piano practice, he perhaps did not know that the ivory keys on which he was running the scale, were made from an elephant's tusk. These tusks, which, in years have become buried in the earth, are found in the ground in India, Africa, Egypt and Ceylon, dug up and shipped to the ivory markets at London and Antwerp. There at the quarterly auctions, the tusks weighing anywhere from 20 to 125 pounds are sold to the ivory cutting firms. Occasionally there comes to the English market a tusk 3 feet in length, weighing 155 pounds.

The ivory cutters have special saws and equipment for sawing up the tusks, bleaching the pieces, matching them and grading them according to the quality demanded for various requirements.

From there the sets of ivory come to the Canadian makers of piano keys, who have men qualified by long experience in the art of key-making to carefully inspect the pieces and make the keys for our pianos. It is a tribute to Canadian-made pianos that before the war, on ninety-eight per cent. of our instruments were keys equipped with genuine elephant ivory. Celluloid is only used as a substitute for the genuine ivory in the cheapest grade of pianos. The reasons why ivory is the standard material is that it is the most durable, much nicer to the touch, and that its color becomes richer with age. Then, of course, celluloid is always inflammable wherever you find it, whether in sister's comb, some little novelty, or on piano keys. If a visitor, as once happened in a home, thoughtlessly lays a live cigar on the piano keys while he goes to answer the telephone, if the keys are of celluloid there would be the same chance for some fireworks that there is when a person who has forgotten that sign "safety first," throws a match into a can of gasoline.

In many respects there is more real romance surrounding ivory than perhaps any other of the materials going into the make-up of the piano in your home.

Some men would rather lose a friend than a jest.

Christened.

Old Granfar wanted "Algernon"—the name of Uncle Brown. Perhaps he'd "stand as godfather—the richest man in town." But Gran declared "twas fateful and fixed on "Peter James," Or maybe "Eli Barnabas"—she's fond of Bible names.

Then Aunt Matilda wrote and asked if "Mervyn" wouldn't do; (She loved a "Mervyn" long ago)—but Uncle Jack said "Pooah!" There never had been Mervyns in the family before, And why begin outlandish names? 'Twas folly, he was sure.

The next-door neighbors wanted "Claude"; the Joneses "Edward Paul." The Smiths suggested "Montague!" One couldn't please them all. Cried mother, "Leave the name to me!" And father said, "We will." So Baby's christened "Lancelot Ralph"—but, there—we call him "Bibi!" —Jan Drag.

She Wished.

Little Annie was the possessor of rather a large appetite which her mother frequently felt her bounden duty to curb. At dinner one day she had already had two helpings of chicken, and then she demanded a third.

"No, dear," said her mother firmly, "you can't have any more. You had quite as much as is good for a little girl. But here is the wishbone. You shall pull it with me, then whoever gets the larger piece will have her wish come true."

The ceremony was gone through, and at the conclusion Anne triumphantly held up the greater portion of the bone.

"How lucky!" exclaimed mother. "You will have your wish now. Tell me what it was."

"I wished for more chicken!" answered Anne, passing her plate.

THE SENIOR EDITOR IN THE OLD HOME LAND.

Just now, "the Pitiless Atlantic" lies between the Senior Editor of this Paper, with his good Lady, and their Canadian Home. Not that the Atlantic is pitiless to everybody. Not so, only to the minority is the embrace of the old ocean unwelcome, or perhaps loathsome. In a compact little missive, the Editor says, "Just a line to let you know we are enjoying every minute of our sojourn in the dear old Home Land." This is just as it should be. It is undoubtedly true that there is not another people the wide world over who give so friendly a grip of the hand and so royal a welcome of heart as our people of the Old Home Land. The poet Montgomery says of France,—"France I hurry from thy shore,—Thou art new-born France no more."

Of Germany he says,—
"Germany, beware the day,
When they schoolmen bear the sway."

But of Britain he says,—
"Now to thee, to thee I fly,
Fairest Isle beneath the sky,
To my heart as in mine eye."

"I have seen them one by one,
Every shore beneath the sun,
And my voyage now is done."

"While I bid them all be blest,
Britain, Thou'rt my home, my rest,
My own land I love the best."

Taking all considerations into account, there is surely no other so important and pleasant an isle beneath the sky. Britain has many charming resorts on her sea-coasts; and the island among "her tall ancestral trees," as well as over all her "glorious land" she is unsurpassed for fertile beauty and romantic landscape. From North to South, from Coast to Coast, and all over, one may travel with restful feeling, because with all faults short of perfection in her people, these are our own kith and kin.

But "Canadian Woods and Lakes" have importance and charm all their own. To the visiting Englishman the "vastness" of the Canadian Dominion is a striking thing. Slowly he comes to understand that it may not be convenient for a citizen of Lachute to call on some English cousin of his west of Winnipeg, and say for him, "How goes it old friend?" and "Your friends at home wish you the best of everything." Canada has immense stretches of arable and mining land.

All these are ours, and are being combed and dressed for beauty as well as grandeur. It may be true that there is no other country in the world so thoroughly well governed as Great Britain is, but in one particular matter Canada is some paces ahead. In her civil and religious liberty combined she is unshackled and free. No state Church exists to chill and curb the natural and unbounded freedom of New Testament Christianity. All things considered, I dare say that when homewards their footsteps they have turned, the Senior Editor and his good wife may say, and say from their hearts,— "Hurrah for Canada! the most hopeful, the most bright and the most free land on the face of the earth! In any event it is safe to promise that a hearty welcome awaits them on their return."

EN PASSANT.

THE ROYAL and Ancient Game of Golf has been having some hard things said about it: The fiat has gone forth that it is a menace to business, a hindrance to commercial success, and snare for the feet of young men, and others too numerous to mention. A great financier has stood up in his place and has denounced the game, "cursed it with candle, book and bell," like the jack-daw of Reims.

He has declared it to be opposed to the main object of human life, and as an insidious enemy to success. The indictment is sweeping, the counsel for the prosecution is bitter, and the innocence of the game is not only gravely questioned, but vigorously denied. A long string of accusations are made, and circumstantial evidence adduced in support of the direct charges, which will keep tongues wagging for a long time to come.

This vitriolic arraignment of golf will come as a surprise to most of its followers and votaries. Even the people who do not play the game will regard the censure with wonderment, for, although many ill-natured things have been said about sport in general, little or nothing beyond gentle satire has been directed against the game of golf. Most folks have always thought golf to be a combination of physical exercise and stimulating mental amusement, while the ever increasing number of golfers deem the "Royal and Ancient" game to be a boon and a blessing to men, handed down like a precious heirloom, from an idyllic and pastoral past when the gods were good.

IT seems to be a common failing that people whose lives run in certain grooves, and whose tastes debar them from the enjoyment of things which delight others, must butt in and seek to pile up hurdles in the way. The famous financier who opposes golf sees no good in it, nothing but seductive evil, drawing men from the paths of business rectitude, demoralising their business habits, unfitting them for the work of business, and furnishing them with specious excuses for idleness and scientific loafing. Sir Joseph Flavelle is too severe. Golf is one of the things in life which are not expected to pay a dividend or go to the reduction of the national debt: It is not a system for extracting gold from time as it flies, it is only a method of extracting physical health, fitness, and mental ozone from the air; a pleasing, tantalizing exercise, vastly more conducive to a sane appreciation of life than the counting of interest or the fluctuations of the money market, and it is a certain antidote to that insidious, poisonous, greed of gold which men get into their systems, when their minds are exclusively devoted to money making until their idea of heaven takes the form of dark, dark, and clammy Safe Deposit.

If too much golf is bad, then too much business is equally as bad; but two blacks never make a white. Business is business, and golf is a different thing altogether. From what Sir Joseph tries to make it out, I hereby affirm that no expert golfer can possibly be a loafer, and by the same token, no loafer ever yet became a good golfer.

The best golfers are always keen, well balanced, men who have made good at other things:—famous Generals, statesmen, literary big-wigs, business magnates, and successful men in all lines, who have consistently brought their bodies forward with their minds, such men form the cream of the golfing cult.

No matter what a man's business may be, or how engrossed he may be in it, if he has no time for golf or music, or art, or hunting, or any other mind widening form of relaxation, he will finish up a failure, an anachronism, a discord in the tune of life.

SOME have said that golf is a game for the leisured classes and middle aged men, but they are in error, for there are neither social barriers nor age limits in it. It is played with increasing zest by all persons, irrespective of age, sex, or rank.

The pleasure of a three mile walk over well kept breezily situated "links," and the fascination of driving, putting, and all else belonging to the golf game, possess a peculiar charm especially for persons ordinarily engaged in exacting professional pursuits.

As in business, one must be able to judge distances, gauge wind force and direction, and rely upon one's own play to get the best results, thus bringing into operation the very powers of discrimination which go to the making of a good business man. For this reason alone, and despite anything Sir Joseph Flavelle may say to the contrary, Golf ought to be made a definite part of business training. Personally, I would include a few other manly sports, but I might be accused of harbouring reactionary ideas and wanting to get back to a ten or twelve hour working day.

PROGRESSIVE BY-LAW.

FOR LACHUTE TOWN.

BY-LAW NO. 104.

Read this—you are vitally interested!

Votes will be cast on Monday, July 28th., at the Town Secretary's Office, between the hours of 8 and 5 o'clock, with reference to By-Law No. 104. This By-Law has been the subject of deep consideration and discussion among the councillors and aldermen of the town and all interested in the matter, and is advanced to authorize an issue of Bonds to the value of $60,000, bearing interest of 5 1/2 p.c. The proceeds of this proposed bond issue are to be for the following purposes:—

WATERWORKS.—For improvements to Dam $1,340.00

ROADS.—Completion of Bituminous Road on Main Street 3,500.00

DRAINS.—New Tile Drains at Street Crossings, also new Drain System on Main Street starting from Bank Nova Scotia and ending at North River near Memorial Park 4,800.00

BRIDGE.—New Steel Bridge with concrete floor to replace Fish's wooden bridge —$21,000, less grant from Provincial Government 50% or $10,500 10,500.00

NEW TOWN HALL.—New Town Hall with fire proof floor, including architect's fees 36,100.00

OLD TOWN HALL.—Repairing and converting the old town hall into Municipal Offices, Fire Station and Garage for Road machinery 3,760.00

Total $60,000.00

It is unnecessary to draw the attention of our citizens to the urgent need for the foregoing improvements indeed such need is only too obvious in some cases. The construction of a new bridge in the West Ward, to replace the old Fish's bridge is a matter demanding most urgent attention. Fortunately, a grant has been offered by the Provincial Government, for 50% of cost of this bridge and it is very important to benefit by this grant right now while it is available. A TOWN HALL of suitable dimensions, to be built on lot adjacent to Memorial Park, is conceded by a large majority of the citizens to be indispensable in Lachute for public meetings, banquets, concerts and miscellaneous purposes which constantly arise in the chief town of the County of Argenteuil. A special committee of citizens has been working in collaboration with the Mayor and Aldermen in connection with plans for a type of building most suitable, from every point of view, and it is only after considerable discussion and careful consideration of all details that a final decision was reached to the entire satisfaction of the Council and Citizens' representatives. The amount for this town Hall $36,100.00 includes a fair margin for unforeseen contingencies and we feel confident of being able to build at a somewhat lower cost. This amount also includes incidental expenses regarding issue of bonds, legal fees etc. The lot of land for this Hall has been generously offered by Mr. J. T. Ayers to the Council and we shall therefore have to stand only cost of building. The work on the old Town Hall was also decided by the Council and Citizens' Committee after careful study of the Towns' requirements.

The financial situation of this Corporation was explained to the same Citizens' Committee and found to be quite sound and satisfactory under our circumstances. In going over figures in Audit Report for year ending December 31st, 1923, prepared by Messrs. P. S. Ross and Sons, Chartered Accountants of Montreal, it is amply evident that the present rate of taxation of $1.25 per $100.00 will not need to be increased more than 10 to 15 cents per $100.00 to take care of additional interest and sinking fund for the new issue of Bonds of $60,000. This is due to increased municipal revenue from waterworks and business taxes, etc. It is evident that the By-Law submitted for our approval is in the best interests of the rate-payers and for the welfare of all the citizens of Lachute. It is hoped that all concerned will vote favorably in the matter of this By-Law, and so safeguard their own interests and the progress of Lachute. Voting commences at 8 o'clock Monday morning next at Mr. Rice's Office, and will continue over Tuesday the 29th is necessary. It is expected that the Bonds authorized by present By-Law No. 104 will be taken up by Lachute people, without trouble at par, as in the past. They are certainly a safe and thoroughly sound investment.

ALL ROADS LEAD TO

BROWNSBURG.

August 16th, 1924, is the date set for the Dominion Cartridge Co's Employees Twenty-first Picnic. It is hardly necessary to say that the country for miles around Brownsburg will look forward to this affair with keen interest.

The committee in charge of arrangements, under the able chairmanship of Mr. Alex. Dey, are putting forth every effort to make the picnic of 1924 a huge success. The programme provides for the usual races for children, while the track and field events have been so arranged to accommodate all classes of athletes, the sprinter, the miler, the shot putter and the jumper. Many of the events are open to all comers and a very liberal list of valuable prizes has been added.

Those of our friends who indulge in dancing will be amply provided for; endeavours are also being made to secure a band to play selections during the afternoon. In fact every minute will be brimful of excitement and interest.

IN MEMORIAM.

CRESWELL.—In loving memory of our darling Willard, who passed away, July 24th, 1923.

Dear little flower short was thy stay,
But Jesus knew best when he called you away,
Not gone from Daddy's memory, not gone from Mother's Love,
But gone to be with Jesus, in that beautiful Home above.

and Mrs. Geo. W. Creswell.

BROWNSBURG.

Dramatic Entertainment.

An entertainment of an unusually pleasing nature was recently given in the hall of the Presbyterian Church at Brownsburg, the object of which was to provide caps and gowns for the choir. The dramatic piece presented was entitled "The Young Country School ma'am," and it was so successfully enacted that there is some talk of its being repeated elsewhere. It portrayed the daily life and interests of a small country place of perhaps fifty years ago. It is surprising how slightly things have changed since that time: The same elements and motives enter into the lives and actions of the people today, and had it not been for the fashions in dress and one or two quaint idioms of speech, one might have imagined that the play was designed to reflect the daily life of any village or small town we know today. Perhaps it was: Anyway it gave a pleasing representation of an easygoing but hard-working farmer, his executive but severely critical wife, their aspiring but dutiful daughter, and the ups and downs in the course of true love which, we know, never did run smooth.

The fourteen characters in the play were ably sustained by a band of young people selected with a singular perception of their qualifications and natural aptitude for the parts allotted to them. For an hour and a half, a severe test for amateurs, they carried themselves as if to the manner born, a fact which should fill Mr. D. D. McGibbon with justifiable pride, for he gave much time and thought to the production and staging of the play.

The Caste.

The Young School ma'am, Mrs. W. King; Minister, Mr. Wadsworth; Pa Sneckleby, Mr. Wilbert Hardie; Ma Sneckleby, Mrs. Robt. Cruise; Maria Jane Sneckleby, Miss Robina Martin; Ike Sneckleby, Mr. F. Kettyle; James Hughson, Mr. Stan Highfield; Bersheba Buck, Miss M. Gardner; Birdie Walker, Miss B. Duncan; Maydell Primrose, Mrs. F. Kettyle; Mrs. Crisp, Mrs. F. Hazel; Tommy, Master F. McGibbon; Gideon Longface, Mr. Frank Hazel, Mary, Miss A. Zimmers.

Between the acts, songs by Mrs. Parris and the Rev. Mr. McKenzie, and recitations by Mrs. Clarence Hardie, were greatly appreciated.

After the performance the artistes and a few friends were entertained to supper by Mrs. Wyman McGibbon, and then the Rev. Mr. McKinnon presented, on behalf of the choir, a handsome travelling bag to Mrs. R. Cruise on the occasion of her leaving Brownsburg, for Carleton Place.

Altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent, and the announcement of the next performance will be gladly welcomed.

ARUNDEL.

The Church Services on Sunday, next, 27th inst., will be as follows:—
ANGELICAN.—Laurel 10.30 a.m., The Glen 2.30 p.m., Grace Church, Arundel 7.30 p.m. Rev. Geo. H. Gagnon, M.A., Rector.

ARUNDEL UNION CHURCH.—Rockway 10.30 a.m., Crystal Falls 3 p.m., Arundel 7.30 p.m., S. School, Arundel 10.30 a.m. Rev. C. H. Hethington, M.A., B.D., Pastor.

We regret to report the death, from Pneumonia, in the 72nd year of her age, of Mrs. Naphalie Dubeau, of Rouge Valley.

Mr. Wm. Bennett of Crystal Falls, met with a very serious and painful accident, last week, by falling on the upturned handle of a hayfork. Dr. Bryner, who was called in reports Mr. Bennett as doing splendidly.

Don't forget the Lawn Social and Concert, on Saturday evening, 26th inst., on the Manse grounds. The event is under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of the Union Church, and there is no doubt, that all attending will enjoy themselves. Fancy and Useful articles and all kinds of good things including ice-cream, will be on sale, and a good programme of music, choruses, Songs, etc., will be carried out.

A social and Concert, under the auspices of the Ladies of Grace Church Congregation (Anglican) will be held on the Rectory Grounds on Saturday evening, Aug. 2nd, and will as usual be a very enjoyable event.

An excellent programme is under preparation, all kinds of refreshments, hot and cold, will be on sale, as well as home-made candy, and there will be a drawing for a fine Quilt. A thorough good time is guaranteed to all who attend. More particulars next week.

The Annual Regatta, under the auspices of The Bark Lake Protective Association, will be held at Bark Lake, on Saturday, Aug. 9th. It is only necessary to mention the above as all those who attended previous Regattas there, will be on hand and will bring their friends with them, and there is no doubt that there will be a large gathering to witness the various exciting and hotly contested races.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Elliott, of Westmount, who are spending the summer months, at their cottage at Bark Lake, left for a short visit to the city on Monday afternoon.

The July meeting of the Arundel Branch of the W. A. was held on Thursday afternoon, 17th inst., at the residence of Mrs. Jolen Bishop, and although heavy rain was falling the following were present:—Mrs. Gagnon, President; Mrs. Jolen Bishop, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Stone, Mrs. Chas. Moore, Mrs. Thos. Bishop, and Mr. J. M. Nelson, Hon. Sec.

The meeting was as usual opened with prayer by the President, after which the Hon. Sec., read the minutes of the previous meeting and presented the financial statement, and both were on motion, accepted as read.

A discussion took place concerning the holding of a Lawn Social and Concert, and it was decided that one be held in the near future.

At the conclusion of the business of the meeting Mrs. Bishop served refreshments, and shortly after, the meeting adjourned, to meet in August at the residence of Mrs. Stone.

Serious Fire.

The sympathy of all is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Simon and family in the destruction of their home, by a fire which started at about 9.30 p.m. on Friday, 18th inst.

The fire, from an unknown cause, started in an outbuilding and fanned by a strong night wind, spread to the Blacksmith Shop and to the house. Only a small amount of effects were saved from the lower floor of the residence, everything else being entirely consumed. Nothing but the foundations are left, and the almost complete loss of everything is quite a serious matter.

The building across the road, formerly a cheese factory, conducted by Mr. W. D. Graham, but now the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dubeau, and family, was several times afire from the great heat, but owing to the efforts of the large number of helpers this building was saved.

With praiseworthy pluck, Mr. Simon began the erection of a temporary Blacksmith Shop, where he will be able to attend to the wants of his numerous customers. The people of Arundel and vicinity, well known for their generosity, will no doubt find a way of keeping, Mr. and Mrs. Simon in their troubles.

Mrs. Wm. McNeely, of Sask., aunt of Mr. J. H. Scott is on a visit to Arundel, after an absence of 20 years.

Mrs. Joseph Young, of Calumet, her daughter spent the week-end, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Scott.

Rev. Mr. Sincennes, formerly in charge of the Presbyterian Congregation, is on a visit here.

The Arundel School Commissioners have had the exterior of the Model School newly painted, adding greatly to the appearance of the fine building.

ST. ANDREWS EAST.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowdon and baby, of Montreal, are staying for a short

The Sunday School will be held in the Church between 10 and 11 o'clock, Sunday mornings.

Rev. J. Burgess conducted an open air service at the Girl Guides' Camp on Sunday afternoon last.

Mr. Melville Ballantyne of Montreal, was the week-end guest of Mr. and the Misses Walsh.

Mr. Jack Muir, Mr. Fred Webster and Mr. Billy Woods were among those who spent the week-end with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hyde and family, motored to St. Eustache, on Sunday last, where they spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Bateman and family.

Public Worship will be held in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday, July 27th, at 11 a.m., and 7.30 p.m., standard time. The pastor Rev. J. Burgess will preach at both services.

Mr. and Mrs. Charman left last week on a short visit to their summer home at Lake Court, New Hampshire.

holiday with Mrs. Kingsbury. The Choir practice will be held in the Church on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Ernie Calder, of Toronto, and Miss Tina Taylor are spending a few days at Sixteen Island Lake as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Calder, of Lachute.

Mrs. Robertson, Miss Robertson, Miss Howell, and Miss Lemeon, of Toronto, spent a few days last week with their cousin Miss C. A. McKerracher and left for Quebec on Monday morning by automobile.

Rev. Mr. Hayworth and Mrs. Hayworth and family, of Chicago, have taken up their residence at their summer cottage in St. Andrews East.

Rev. J. Burgess officiated at Baptismal services this week at the homes of Mrs. A. Gates, Mrs. G. Hamilton, and Mrs. Percy Funcheson.

Sudden Death of Mr. D. Hammond.

St. Lamberts, Que., loses one of its most respected citizens in the death of Mr. David H. Hammond, which took place at his residence on Saturday July 12th. Mr. Hammond was feeling unwell only for a few hours, and his sudden passing came as a great shock to his many friends and relatives.

Born in Tara, Ont., in the year 1868 where he received his early education, deceased came later to Lachute, where he spent several years in the service of Banford's Store. He secured a position later with T. McQuat and Son, with which firm he was employed for 20 years. While in Lachute, he was a member of the Methodist Church, and Superintendent of the Sunday School for a period of nine years. He married Miss Amelia Elizabeth Catton, of Lachute, who predeceased him during his residence in this town. His second wife, Miss E. May Burden, of Montreal, to whom he was married in 1915, remains to mourn his loss.

Mr. Hammond resided in St. Lamberts for three years, during which time he made many good friends. He was a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters; members of this order in St. Lamberts attended to the funeral arrangements. Service was held conducted by Rev. Mr. Coates, following which the remains were brought to Lachute for interment. Burial Service at Lachute Cemetery was conducted by Rev. J. A. MacKenzie.

Of a kind and happy disposition in life, deceased gentleman leaves to mourn his loss, besides a loving wife and a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, one son and a daughter, and also a little grandson. Three brothers also remain, Dr. Matthew Hammond, of South Dakota, Edward in San Diego, Calif., and Howard, of Toronto, and a sister, Mrs. J. Tanian, also in Toronto.

Mr. Helmer Stub, of Denmark, who left his home there 6 months ago, relative to a wager set for him by the Swedish and Danish Chiefs of the Boy Scouts the former claiming that he could make the trip around the world without money, and the latter claiming that he could not, and is now in Lachute and Brownsburg. Mr. Stub was certain that he could make the journey and forthwith started out on the following morning, without a cent in his pocket. Mr. Stub has to earn his passage and will be round to see if you have anything for him to do, so help him along if you can. He is an electrician by trade, or will be glad to do anything else such as monogram work on motor cars or lettering of any description.

LEGHORNS AS MEAT.

The other day a customer asked me for a stewing chicken, and when I offered her a Leghorn hen she refused in no uncertain terms.

"I don't want a Leghorn!" she exclaimed in a tone that would have been appropriate had I offered her a turkey buzzard. I explained that I had nice plump Leghorn hens, weighing three and a half pounds dressed, that had been specially fattened for two weeks, and that if she wanted a Red she would have to take it right out of the flock without being fattened. That seemed to suit, so I culled out a small Red that night, dressed it and delivered it the next day. This fowl was not in as good condition for the table as the Leghorns which had been confined, but it was perfectly satisfactory to the customer. Evidently the name counted for more than a plump breast and juicy meat.

Some days later another customer, who conducts a high-class tea room, called me up and ordered twenty-five pounds of dressed Leghorn hens for the end of the week. When I delivered them I told her about the unfattened Red to the finished Leghorn.

"I used to have the same prejudice," the proprietor told me, "until on several occasions I had to take Leghorns or do without. I soon found that a well-fattened Leghorn was preferable to a fowl of the larger breeds for my purposes. The flavor is just as good, and I can serve a leg and a piece of breast to a guest economically, which I could not do with a larger fowl."

These two incidents set me to thinking about the unreasonable prejudice against Leghorn meat that is fostered by indiscriminating housewives and cunning poultry dealers, at a cost to the poultryman of many thousands of dollars annually. Many housewives purchase by the eye or by the name; they will sometimes turn down Grimes Golden apples to buy Ben Davis because they are red, and refuse a Leghorn simply because they have heard someone say that it is not good. Dealers in buying from poultry keepers invariably offer less a pound for Leghorns than for Rocks or Reds, and sometimes refuse to handle them at all except at a considerable cut. This cut is not always reflected in the big price to the consumer, especially in markets where the customer knows nothing of the different breeds of poultry, but it goes into the pocket of the dealer at the expense of the poultry keeper.

Yet Leghorn cockerels make better broilers than either Rocks or Reds. Maturing faster, they are well meated and possess delicate flavor, where the youngsters of the heavier breeds at the same age are gawky, scrawny and tasteless. I grow both Leghorns and Reds, and when it comes to a broiler for Sunday dinner it is a Leghorn that gets the ax.

On the other hand, the heavier breeds furnish better roasting chickens, as the mature cockerel is larger and perhaps juicier than the Leghorn. When it comes to stewing chickens, the size of the family should well determine the choice. A small family requires a three to four pound fowl, which is about the Leghorn weight. A Red or Rock of this weight is undersized and probably carries less meat in proportion to frame than does the small-boned Leghorn. The Leghorn then is the better buy. On the other hand, a large family requires a six-pound fowl or larger, and would find the larger breeds preferable, as there would be only one fowl to clean, whereas it would take two of the Leghorns to make the weight. Of course, if the Leghorns cost less a pound, the difference would again be in their favor, as there would be more drumsticks and second joints to go around. All things considered, I fail to see any need for a difference in price between Leghorns and Rocks and Reds of equal quality, except perhaps in the case of large roasters, which can be furnished by the heavier breeds alone.

We Leghorn men could increase our incomes many dollars annually by culling out all small-size individuals from our flocks and never marketing a bird that had not been fattened.

Fattening is easily done. I confine my birds to be sold in colony houses for about ten days previous to selling, and feed them, out of a trough, all they will eat of a mixture of three parts of yellow corn meal and one part of laying mash, mixed to a batter with buttermilk or even water. They get fat and take on a nice yellow color from the corn meal, and it pays of four eggs with a half-pound of sugar, then add a half-cupful of pastry flour and the stiffly beaten whites of the four eggs. Add a teaspoonful of vanilla and turn into a shallow buttered pan. When baked and cool cut into thin slices, or fingers, and dry in a cool oven.

Danish Pudding—Put a cupful of tapioca to soak overnight. In the morning boil until clear in a quart of fresh water, add to it a half-teaspoonful of salt and a cut lemon. When done remove the lemon. Beat in a tumbler of currant jelly, then sweeten and put into a mold. Serve with whipped cream.

A Dessert from South America—Put into a double boiler four cupfuls of sugar and six cupfuls of rich milk (goat's milk if procurable) and cook several hours until as thick as a regular jam, then add two teaspoonfuls of rose flavoring. Have ready two layers of good cake and spread the mixture between.

Italian Onion Tarts—Slice two Spanish onions thinly and saute them until tender in a quarter cupful of butter. Meantime make a batter of two well-beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of flour, a saltspoonful each of salt, pepper, and nutmeg, a teaspoonful of sugar, and a cupful of light cream. Mix, add the onions, and after stirring all together pour into a shallow buttered cake tin lined with good pie-crust. Dust the top with Parmesan cheese and bake in a brisk oven.

Ukrainian Beet Soup—Grate two large boiled beets into a quart of well-seasoned veal broth, adding the juice of a lemon, a teaspoonful of sugar, pepper and salt. Cook gently for five minutes, then add the juice of a grated raw beet squeezed through a piece of cheesecloth. Scald and stir in a cupful of sweet whipped cream, or thick sour cream, add a half-cupful of diced boiled beets, the same of stewed celery drained, and three leaves of boiled cabbage cut into small pieces. Serve hot, or ice cold.

Normandy Egg Dish—Butter a fire-proof cooking dish and break six eggs into it without breaking the yolks. Mix a heaping tablespoonful each of butter and flour to a paste and stir in a small saucepan over a moderate heat. When melted add a half-cupful of oyster liquor and the same of sweet cream. When all is smooth add a cupful of oysters and let all cook, stirring constantly, for three minutes. Add a dessertspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, then turn over the eggs. Dust with a tablespoonful of fine crumbs and bake in oven until eggs are set.

Spanish Olla Podrida—Put into a soup kettle a jointed chicken, a slice of ham, a small can of tomatoes, a sliced onion, a few stalks of celery, a bud of garlic, and a bunch of soup greens. Have ready a cupful of Spanish peas (chick peas) that have been soaked overnight, a diced sweet pepper, four leaves of cabbage, and a cupful of button onions. Put all into a cheesecloth bag; tie, then drop into the soup, adding two quarts of water. Add pepper and salt and a tablespoonful of sugar. Cook until the peas are done, lift the bag out and strain the soup. Then put into the soup the things in the bag; reheat, skim and if too thin, thicken slightly and serve hot.

Getting Up in the Morning—By Florence J. Ovens.

"G'by, Ma," called Norton in a stage whisper at the door of his mother's sleeping room. "Nat is outside waiting for me."

"Is Nat going to have breakfast with Philip, too?" she asked.

"Yes, and Mother," his sunny face overcast, "I couldn't find the extra fish-hooks."

"There is some change on the bureau," she said, "you had better take it; you may have a chance to get some."

After he had gone she lay pondering. It was only half-past five. Usually it was difficult to get Norton up at seven. "Nothing like the prospect of a fishing trip to stimulate the small boy's activity in the early morning," she mused.

How delightfully easy it had been! She had helped him to set the alarm clock the night before, and he had evidently obeyed its first summons. He had bathed and dressed himself without a word to anyone, and when he had come to her room his face had been just glowing with the joy of anticipation.

"I wish he could feel that way about his school," she said to herself. But on further consideration she had to acknowledge that he was fond of his school. It was simply that he had always depended on her, knowing that she would get him up in season. Not at all would he have liked being late. She wondered how it would do to give him the alarm clock and tell him that in the future he must depend upon himself in this matter. But she was afraid he would not get up in time for breakfast and she was not willing that he should go to school without it even as an experiment. Not being able to think a way out of this difficulty, she put the question aside.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

RAINY DAYS.

To smile is an easy matter
When the sun shines bright,
And if everything around us
Is turning out just right.

But when the day is dreary,
When the dark clouds throng
And when trouble hovers near us
And things are going wrong.

It needs a hero's courage
To play a good game,
To take the bitter with the sweet
And still appear the same.

That's when good cheer is needed,
So let's change our ways,
And cultivate a smile or two
To have on rainy days.

—I. M. Thomas.

BRUIN AND ROLLY PLAY DOCTOR.

"Ho, ho, hum—um," yawned Bruin one bright sunny morning. "The sun is up and I must be getting up, too."

As he was dressing he heard a flutter at the window and "Cheer-up, Cheer—chee—ee," over and over again. Peeping between the curtains, he saw a little bird on the window sill singing just as hard as any little bird ever could. And how glad that little bird's song made Bruin feel.

"A lucky day it will be for me, when a little bird sings at my window like that," thought Bruin to himself.

Carefully he put down the curtain and hurried into the pantry for some crumbs for that little bird's breakfast. But when he got back with them the bird was gone.

Of course he had to tell his friend Rolly Rabbit all about it. But Rolly only laughed at him when he told him that this little bird would bring him good luck.

Now the real part of our story begins when Bruin was coming back from the Woodland grocery store that morning. He was nearing the bend in the road when a flutter in the bushes nearby made him stop.

"What was that?" asked Bruin to himself. "Guess I'll have to go over and see."

Carefully he tiptoed in among the bushes that he might not frighten it away with his clumsy feet. He looked and of a sudden he saw a flutter right by his big foot. He had almost stepped on a little bird. It lay so very still that Bruin picked it up. One little wing fell limp at its side.

"You poor little thing," said Bruin "your wing is broken. How did you ever do it?"

But the bird could only answer him by a faint little "chee—chee," with a note that told how dreadfully it did hurt him.

"I'll take you right home with me and see what we can do for this," said Bruin.

Although the bird did not know the animal language, he seemed to understand what Bruin meant and nestled friendly in his arm.

"What have you there?" asked Rolly as Bruin came in.

"I found this little bird down the road, Rolly. It has a broken wing. And, do you know, Rolly, I think it is the same little bird that was singing on my window sill this morning," answered Bruin.

"No matter what bird it is, we must

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

Folks who want the very best use
RED ROSE ORANGE PEKOE

do something for it, quickly," said Rolly Rabbit.

So together they doctored the bird and mended the broken wing with tiny splinters and fed him everything that little birds should eat. In a few days he was so much better that he could sing to Bruin and Rolly for being so kind to him. It was not long before he could fly about the house. He would light upon first one shoulder and then the other and chirp and sing to them, but always in the strange bird-language that neither Rolly nor Bruin knew, but seemed in a way to understand.

Then one bright morning Bruin opened the door and the little bird flew out, but as he went he seemed to say to his two strange friends, "Thank you so much for what you have done. I'll come back to see you again."

The Production of Good Combs.

A good stock of drawn combs is the most valuable asset that a beekeeper can have, especially if one is a producer of extracted honey. They are of particular value in a season when the honey crop is light, because they enable the bees to store what little nectar is available instead of using it for the building of new comb. Every beekeeper should endeavor to have a number of new combs drawn during a good season to replace any that may become damaged or broken.

A good comb is one that is straight and containing as few drone cells as possible. It must also be firmly attached to the frame on all four sides and strongly supported in the frame by means of wire. To produce such combs, the frames must first be tightly wired; No. 28 tinned wire is most commonly used. Full depth Langstroth frames should have at least four horizontal wires, larger frames will need more. It is important that a full sheet of foundation be used for every frame; this must be fastened to the top bars and the wires firmly embedded into the wax by means of an electric or spur wire embedder. The foundation may require trimming, as it must not touch the end or bottom bars of the frame by at least one-eighth of an inch or it will buckle after giving it to the bees. Foundation well fastened in the frame will not melt down or sag and the finished comb will not have distorted cells and will not break in the extractor if carefully handled. Bees will not work on foundation unless there is a plentiful supply of nectar coming in, therefore, it should only be given during a good flow. To get the combs well attached to the frames, the foundation should be drawn out in extracting supers, as bees seldom attach the combs to the bottom bars in a brood chamber.

When extracting the honey from new combs, first take only part of the honey from one side, reverse the comb and empty the other side; again turn the comb and finish the extracting; this will prevent breakage. If all the honey is extracted from one side without removing any from the other, the weight of honey on the inner surface of the comb will crack or even break out the whole centre. —C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist.

EUGENE LEPAGE GIVES TANLAC FULL CREDIT

Stomach Trouble Vanishes and Montreal Man Gains
14 Lbs. On Four Bottles.

"Since I began taking this wonderful Tanlac I seem to be getting younger every day. I have gained 14 pounds on four bottles, and everybody speaks about how well I look."

The above statement was made, recently, by Eugene Lepage, proprietor Prince of Wales Hotel barber shop, Montreal, Canada, one of the most exclusive tonyorial parlors in this city. Mr. Lepage further said:

"Stomach trouble had almost completely wrecked my health. I was a mere shadow of my former self and so run-down and nervous I thought I would have to give up my work."

"Tanlac soon had me eating everything, sleeping like a log at night and feeling as fine as one could ask to feel. My only regret is that I did not learn about Tanlac long before I did."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Surnames and Their Origin

KENNEDY

Variations—Kinnity, Kinnity, O'Kennedy.
Racial Origin—Irish.
Source—A nickname.

For the most part, the Irish clan names, which were virtually family names, and have become so absolutely in modern usage, were formed strictly from given names, from the names of those chieftains who first gathered about them a sufficient number of followers to be designated as a clan. But sometimes these chieftains received nicknames, descriptive of some trait or honor achieved, and it was the nickname which became the clan name. This is the case of the Kennedy clan.

The Gaelic designation of this clan is "O'Ceannatta," and with the exception of the last syllable, which has naturally become slurred a bit in the Anglicized form of the name, its pronunciation was precisely that of O'Kennedy.

The founder of the clan was a chieftain named "Fergus" and surnamed "Ceannatta," or "longhead" (in the sense of being far-sighted), who flourished about the time of St. Patrick. Thus this clan or family name is about as old as Christianity in Ireland, and antedates the Christianization of Anglo-Saxon England, which was several centuries to the Norman invasion of that country, with the subsequent formation of English family names.

KEATS

Variations—Keet, Ketts.
Racial Origin—English.
Source—Personal characteristic.

By no means have all family names developed from occupations, places of residence or given names of parents. Probably as large a class as any, in English nomenclature at least, developed from nicknames descriptive, or allegedly descriptive, of personal peculiarities.

Such names were given to men in medieval times in exactly the same manner that a small boy is given a nickname to-day by his companions. The difference lies only in the fact that the need for the nickname or descriptive surname was greater in those days than to-day. In this manner such names as Brown and Black have developed, just as boys to-day acquire such names as Reddy or Skinny. The modern boy lives them down eventually, for he has a family name which better serves the purpose of a surname when he grows up. But in medieval times the nicknames were turned into family names, for populations were growing so fast that a given name was not enough to distinguish a man from all of his fellows.

Names in this group were taken from the word "kete," which since has become obsolete. It meant "ferocious" or "bold."

ARCTIC GUARD TO SAVE MUSK OX

GOVERNMENT SENDS AN EXPEDITION.

To Establish Police Offices Within 800 Miles of the North Pole.

In carrying out the task of establishing the sovereignty of the British crown in the Arctic islands which form the northernmost part of the Dominion of Canada, and which in size are equal to the combined territory of Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Northwest Territories Branch of the Canadian Department of the Interior sent the government steamer, the Arctic, last autumn, to within 800 miles of the North Pole to establish permanent police posts and police offices.

These expeditions, which culminated during 1923 in the establishment of a police post at Cape Sabine, on the eastern coast of Ellesmere Island, have been used also for the purpose of conducting examinations of the country by competent scientists and engineers.

At the present time Major Burwash is carrying out an examination into the natural resources of Baffin Land and the islands immediately to the west. He will continue this investigation until next autumn, when the Arctic will pick him up at Cumberland Sound on the east coast of Baffin Land and bring him back to civilization.

In order to expedite the opening up of this country a second vessel, the Franklin, will be taken over by the department, and will make its first voyage this summer.

Three Posts Established.

The three posts which have been established are at Cumberland Sound and Ponds Inlet, on Baffin Island, and at Cape Sabine, far to the north on Ellesmere Island.

The necessity for the establishment of the post on Ellesmere Island was made manifest by the rapid depletion of the musk ox herds which have their habitat there. It became known that the government regulations under which a musk ox cannot be killed except in the face of starvation were being flouted grossly by Eskimos from Greenland and other foreigners who could cross the narrow channel—Smith Sound and Kennedy Channel—in the winter months, kill the musk oxen and return with the pelts to their native country. Incidentally, Greenland has far outstripped the northern Canadian islands in the exportation of furs.

Police to Enforce Rules.

The government decided that it was time to acquaint the Greenlanders with the fact that Canada is a country with a rigid customs barrier, and if they desire to take Canadian furs back with them they must meet the requirements of the law. Hence the establishment of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police post at Cape Sabine. Inspector Wilcox and six other ranks are stationed there.

This summer the department hopes to establish more posts on some of the islands further to the west. Bathurst Island has been marked but as one of the islands best suited for the purpose because of its central position.

Have You Heard?

That horse's tongue is considered a great delicacy among the peasants of Scotland?

That a form of wireless telegraphy was used in China at the time of Confucius?

That walrus hide, applied lightly to the scalp night and morning, is a sure cure for baldness?

That in certain tropical islands in the Pacific beetroot grow to the height of fifteen feet?

That at the North Pole the temperature frequently is higher than it is in London?

That there exists a tribe of savages in Central Africa having eight fingers on each hand?

That mice suffer greatly from indigestion?

If you have, then someone has been pulling your leg.—London Opinion.

GREEN TEA IMPORTS LARGER.

Statistics from Ottawa show that in 1923, 553,977 pounds more Green Tea were brought into Canada than in 1921, and 906,723 pounds more than in 1922. The reason given is that the fine quality Green Teas of India and Ceylon have displaced the inferior Japan and China Greens which, due to their low price, were imported heavily some years ago. Salada Tea Company is the largest importer of India and Ceylon Green Teas.

Pride.

Why do I rise at the dawn's early light,
To clean the car after a rain?

When I'm perfectly sure it will be, before night,
Quite dirty and dusty again.

Why do I hasten to give it a bath,
To polish it after a ride?

I'd much rather follow the easier path,
But I can't—it's a matter of pride.

Why do I hunt for a rattle or squeak,
In a most inaccessible spot?

Why am I willing to work for a week,
When the weather is terribly hot?

It's not that I love all the grease and the grime;
That's something I cannot abide;

Moreover, the job takes a lot of my time.
It's merely a matter of pride.

A man may be known by the car he will keep—
The way that he keeps it, I mean;

Perhaps it is one so remarkably cheap,
Or else an expensive machine.

It isn't the money expended that counts,
It isn't the price that's the guide;

It's really the care that he gives—that amounts
To the strength of his personal pride.

—Harold S. Osborne.

Life's Meanings Complicate and Wide.

Life's meanings complicate and wide
Into a narrow compass come
As we approach the sea whose solemn tide
Must bear us home.

A bleak-blown stretch before our eyes,
Some sterile rods of bleak-blown shore,
And we must leave familiar lands and skies Forevermore.

Earth, with your countless gentle ways,
Sky, with your limitless desire,
Take of us tenderest love, sincerest praise,
Ere we retire.

Life, with your meanings complicate,
Your sorrow and your blitheness both,
How are we fain to prove our untried fate,
How far we loath!

Friends.

Friends are pearls o' precious price,
That God gives us here on earth;
Bits o' gold from Paradise—
Heaven's jewels o' priceless worth.

Sent to bless us for a while,
With their lovin' ways, an' true
With the sunshine o' their smile—
That God made for me an' you.

We should cherish them above
All things else on this o' sphere,
For they're bringing us their love,
Just to cheer us while we're here.

All the silver an' the gold
In this world o' wealth on end,
Couldn't buy for us, or hold
One true, honest, lovin' friend.

They are given you an' me—
Gifts o' love from Heaven's heart—
To be with us, an' to be
Of our lives a lovin' part.

We should thank the Lord each day,
For the blessings that He sends,
An' the love that lights our way—
In the hearts o' lovin' friends.

—James Edward Hungerford.

A SPLENDID LAXATIVE FOR THE BABY

Mothers should constantly be on guard to keep baby's bowels working freely and his stomach sweet, for nine-tenths of the ailments from which little ones suffer are caused by derangements of the stomach and bowels. Baby's Own Tablets are a splendid laxative for the baby. They are mild but thorough; contain neither opiates nor narcotics, and are absolutely guaranteed to be safe and efficient for either the newborn babe or the growing child. By their action on the bowels and stomach they drive out constipation and indigestion; break up colics and simple fevers and make the dreaded teething period easy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Prince of Medals.

In the Woolworth Building, New York, which is to-day the world's tallest skyscraper, approximately a million pounds of copper was used for roofings, lifts, pipes, and interior decorations.

Probably few people realize the numerous uses to which copper can be put. But one thing is certain. If the supply failed we should soon be without electric lights and bells, telephones, electric trains and trams—to say nothing of copper coinage!

At first glance the amount of copper used in the building trade, in comparison with the quantities of iron and steel, would seem to be negligible; but when one takes into consideration the fact that every motor-car has anything from 10lb. to 200lb. of the metal in its composition, and that there are about 3,000lb. in every railway engine, one can appreciate the extent to which the demand for it is increasing.

Escape.

Let me not be caught in the corn,
Or the waves, or the trees;
Not even a bird will I be
When I die.
Once is enough to be born
Into the kinship of these Strange, strong things of the sea
And field and sky.

When I slip the net that swings
Hot from the sun,
And break this tangle of grass,
I will go
As nothing that stirs or sings,
Unborn, undone,
Into the dark, and pass
To things I know.

—Florence G. Jenney.

A REAL NERVE TONIC

Is a Bountiful Supply of Rich Health-Giving Blood.

Sufferers from what medical men speak of as nervous debility find themselves tired, morose, low-spirited and unable to keep their minds on anything. Any sudden noise hurts like a blow. They are full of groundless fears and cannot sleep at night. Their hands tremble, the legs feel as if they will give away following a walk or any exertion, and the mind is greatly disturbed by the most trivial incidents.

Doctors of the nerves with poisonous sedatives is a terrible mistake. The only real nerve tonic is a good supply of rich, red blood. To secure this new, rich blood use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which have a direct action on the blood and through it stimulate every nerve and organ in the body. Mrs. Alpheus Merritt, Fenwick, Ont., gives her experience with this medicine as follows:—"I had a nervous breakdown and was in the Welland County Hospital for some time. As I was not improving my husband took me out and took me up to my mother's. I doctored there but it did not help me. Then I returned home, and was again under a doctor's care, but with no better results. I would tremble and get numb all over, and the least noise would affect me. I was quite unable to do my housework, and was in a terrible condition. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and am thankful that I did so, as after taking about a dozen boxes I was again a healthy woman. I have used the pills since while nursing my baby, with equally good results, and I strongly advise other ailing women to try them."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Love Song.

It must have been the wind that stirred my hair;
But all my will
Called it your fingers, not the wind,
I would not look, nor ever shall I know.
Whether the touch that put a score of years
To deepest sleep, and rest beyond all sleep,
Was your shy hand, or just some lost, light wind.
Nothing in all of love was sweet like this—
To let love sleep;
To ride alone the curling, star-lit deep
And know
That love can go;
That there is rest between the day
And night.
That time may flow
Like water singing to its stones below,
And laughing to the light.

—Florence G. Jenney.

About the Busy Bee.

The busy bee may not be so busy as she is supposed to be. Entomologists who have been checking the flights of a number of marked bees have found that each insect makes on an average only five or six trips a day for honey, and that each trip lasts only about fifteen minutes. Between trips a bee spends half an hour or more in the hive and gives at least half a day to uninterrupted rest. Moreover, it appears that the hardest workers live about three weeks, whereas some of the lazier ones survive for five months. The discovery will be a great comfort to members of the Sons of Rest everywhere.

Hidden treasure has always acted as a lure to the adventurers of the world, but, though treasure hunts are many, treasure findings are few.

Trinidad is believed to be a "mine of treasures." Much of the wealth of the richest of the South American cities was conveyed to that island by the sea rovers who plundered the mainland.

In a great cavern in the cliffs on the Auckland Islands lies the General Grant, which was wrecked in 1866, with 50,000 ounces of gold on board. It is known that the bulk is still within the cave, but expeditions from Australia and New Zealand have been baffled by the undertow and the great combers.

Somewhere in the East River, U.S.A., is $2,500,000 in gold. It has lain there since 1780, when the British frigate Huzar, carrying money for the Royal forces engaged in the American War, struck a rock opposite the upper end of Randall Island and sank only a hundred yards from shore.

Lovers of romance, too, will find food for dreams in the thought that on the mainland of Panama is a great store of gold hidden by Sir Francis Drake after he had sacked the city of the same name. The treasure was never retrieved, and no one knows where to look for it.

He Forgot.

Mike and Pat were "gentlemen of the road." It was not often they were lucky enough to secure such satisfactory quarters as they had on this particular night, but a kind-hearted gentleman had given them a very cozy bedroom over the stables.

When the pair were comfortably lying in bed with the light out Pat suddenly got up and struck a match. He had a good look around, then blew out the match and lay down again.

"Why did you do that?" asked Mike. "Oh," replied Pat, "you see, I forgot whether I blew the candle out or not, so I just looked to see."

High Living.

Early mountaineers, says the leader of the third attempt to climb Mount Everest, feared lest they should collapse at an altitude much less than that which warranted any such fear. He believes that almost anyone can remain for long periods at heights of twenty-one thousand feet or more if he is not afraid. When European men were supportable at the top of Mont Blanc—science was debating whether life Blanc—at an altitude of less than sixteen thousand feet—there was a road over a pass in India nineteen thousand feet high that had been in constant use for centuries.

The evil wound is cured, but not the evil name.

I Was Greatly Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sydenham, Ont.—"I took your medicine before my baby was born, and it was a great help to me as I was very poorly until I had started to take it. I just felt as though I was tired out all the time and would have weak, faint spells. My nerves would bother me until I could get little rest, night or day. I was told by a friend to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I only took a few bottles and it helped me wonderfully. I would recommend it to any woman. I am doing what I can to recommend this good medicine. I will lend that little book you sent me to any one I can help. You can with the greatest of pleasure use my name in regard to the Vegetable Compound if it will help others take it."—Mrs. HARVEY MILLIGAN, Sydenham, Ont.

It is remarkable how many cases have been reported similar to this one. Many women are poorly at such times and get into a weakened, run-down condition, when it is essential to the mother, as well as the child, that her strength be kept up.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for the mother at this time. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and does not contain any harmful drugs. It may be taken in safety by the nursing mother.

WEDDING BELLS.

BLACK—JOLY.

A very quiet yet pretty wedding was solemnized on July 22nd, in St. George's Church, Montreal, by the Rev. Mr. Knowles of West Shefford, when Isabel Jessie, eldest daughter of Mrs. Robert Black, of Mabel, Que., was united in marriage to Raymond Philip Joly, of Waterloo, Que.

The bride looked very charming in a navy blue silk canton crepe dress with trimmings of silver, and hat to match, was attended by her sister Miss Sarah Black, who wore a gown of navy blue silk crepe de chene, and carried sweet peas, rose buds and ferns.

The bride was given away by her uncle Mr. Archie Graham of Cushing, and carried a bouquet of Pink Ophelia roses, also sweet heart roses, bridal roses, and fern.

The groom was attended by his nephew Mr. James Jolly of Waterloo. Only immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present and immediately after the service the happy couple left for their new home in Waterloo, accompanied by the good wishes of their many friends. Miss Sarah Black going to Waterloo with them for a short visit with her sister.

Mrs. A. Graham of Cushing, entertained at a miscellaneous shower on Saturday, afternoon, July 19th, for her niece, Miss Isabel Black. A very enjoyable time was spent and the bride received a great number of useful and valuable gifts.

The Late Hugh McCrea.

The death occurred on Friday last of Mr. Hugh McCrea an old and respected citizen of Lachute for some 40 years. Mr. McCrea was born in East Settlement in 1850 and spent the early part of his life in New Brunswick where he was married to Miss Elizabeth Cleland, who predeceased him some 29 years ago. Mr. McCrea was a painter by trade, and for the past 6 years had been living with Mr. Wm. Boyd. The funeral took place on Sunday last to the Lachute Cemetery, followed by many sympathizing friends.
