SPRING HOUSE CLEANING

Now that it looks as though Spring was really here, the Annual House Cleaning will be taking place; and in a short time everything will be all spick and span and in A 1 condition. How about a little personal house cleaning also? Spring brings with it a feeling of freshness, newness of life, new growth and altogether a fresh start. Let us apply the example of nature to our own selves and shake off some of the cobwebs that have been hanging round during the winter. Life means just what we make of it and the more we put into it, the more we will take out.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE MRS. JAS. HAMMOND

After an illness lasting almost two years, Mrs. James Hammond passed away on Tuesday evening, April 3rd. at her home in Centreville, where she has resided since her marriage to Mr. Hammond in 1879 who predeceased her some 32 years ago.

Mrs. Hammond was formerly Miss Ellen Jane Knox, and she leaves a family of seven children to mourn the loss of a loving and devoted mother. They are Mrs. F. Gaston of Cushing; Mrs. W. Chambers, of St. Philippe; Mrs. B. Mitchell, of Centreville; Mrs. C. Thompson and Wm. Hammond, of Ceylon, Sask.; James, of Centreville, and Robert, of Montreal; Mr. Wm. Knox, of North River and Jno. Knox, of Hawkesbury, are also brothers.

The funeral took place this (Thursday) afternoon, service being conducted by the Rev. A. G. MacKinnon of the Lachute United Church. A very large attendance and a number of beautiful floral tributes bore testimony to the love and esteem of the departed, whose remains were laid to rest in the Lachute Cemetery.

MARRIAGE.

At Zion United Church, Montreal, on Wednesday, March 28th., the marriage took place of Frances Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donahue, of Thurso, Que., to Oscar Kenrick, son of the late Oscar Dorion and Mrs. Dorion, of St. Andrews East. After a honeymoon spent at Quebec City, and St. Andrews East, the young couple will take up residence at 63 Nelson Ave., Outremont.

ST. ANDREWS EAST.

Mrs. Howell has opened her house here.

Mrs. Bazanson spent a few days in Montreal during the week.

During Easter week services will be held every evening, except Saturday, in the St. Andrews United Church.

We understand that the Rev. Mr. Miller is leaving St. Andrews, having had a call to the Presbyterian church in Fort Colombe, Ont.

Oscar Dorion and Mrs. Dorion, of St. Andrews East, was married in Zion United Church, Montreal, on March 28th., to Miss Frances Donahue, daughter of Mr. J. F. Donahue, of Thurso, Que. The happy couple left immediately for their honeymoon and on their return will reside at 63 Nelson Ave., Outremont. St. Andrews friends wish them much happiness.

The lecture in the Town Hall on Thursday evening by Professor Turner, on Old English Country Homes and Life was well attended. The many views thrown on the screen were full of interest, picturing rustic quaint old mills and market places, houses some of them over 700 years old, inns which were of venerable age when Goldsmith wrote his Deserted Village, pastoral scenes for which England is so justly famous, and the more modern homes of the middle class and the "labouring swain."

COTTINGHAM

INEXPENSIVE VEGETABLES FOR MID WINTER DINNERS

Are you in a rut with the good old winter standby vegetables? If you are try some of these out-of-the-ordinary ways of serving them to pep up the family appetites.

The deliciousness of the Brussels sprouts is increased if they are combined with Italian chestnuts. Boil one quart of sprouts in salted water twenty minutes, place one pound of chestnuts in cold water, bring to the boil and boil five minutes and remove the skins. Into a buttered baking dish put a layer of sprouts, then one of chestnuts, dot with butter, sprinkle lightly with pepper and salt; continue until all are used, then add just enough water to moisten and bake thirty minutes in a moderate oven.

Beets With Orange Sauce.

A novel and splendid dish is baked beets with orange sauce. After scrubbing well four medium-sized beets, rub them with butter, put them on a wire rack in a pan and bake in a moderate oven until tender all the way through; slice or cut into small dice. Make a sauce with one tablespoon of butter, one and one-half tablespoons of flour, two tablespoons of hot water, an eighth of a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of paprika, half a tablespoon of brown sugar, half a cup of orange juice and an eighth of a teaspoon of the grated rind.

Scalloped Parsnips.

Have you tried parsnips scalloped with pineapple? Cut and partly cook six good-sized parsnips. Put into a baking pan, alternate layers of the parsnips and pineapple from a large can, cut into halves and pour over a syrup made from the juice of the pineapple and one cupful of sugar. Bake twenty minutes.

Spinach and Nuts.

Spinach with nut meat makes a good dish to serve when you want to omit meat. Cook until tender half a peck of spinach, season with salt and pepper, drain and chop it. Melt two tablespoons of butter, add the spinach and half a cup each of chopped nut meats and raisins and a tablespoon of lemon juice and serve on toast.

Cauliflower Casserole.

This is a toothsome way of combining cauliflower and tuna fish: Toss lightly two cups of cooked cauliflower and one cup of tuna fish broken apart, add one and one-half cups of white sauce, put into a buttered baking dish sprinkle with a quarter of a cupful of cracker crumbs, cover with grated cheese and bake in a moderate oven until a golden brown.

New Succotash Combinations.

Perhaps you always connect succotash with lima beans and corn. Try this combination. Combine equal quantities of baked beans and canned corn, add half a tablespoon of minced green pepper, heat thoroughly and season to taste. Or, add a cup of cooked wax beans to two cups of canned corn, season with salt and pepper and add a dash of paprika.

Celery Croquettes.

These celery croquettes make a good luncheon dish: Cut into dice sufficient celery to make a platt, simmer in salted water until tender, drain and add a pint of hot rice potatoes, two tablespoons of melted butter, the beaten yolks of three eggs and half a cup of finely chopped boiled chestnuts; season to taste with salt, add a grating of nutmeg and a tiny pinch of ginger. Stir over the fire for five minutes, cool and form into croquettes, egg and crumb and fry until brown in smoking hot fat.

Before you drop the morning poached egg onto the toast, cover the later with a generous layer of creamed celery and you will have a new dish to tempt the flagging appetites.

Canned Tomato Salad.

This salad, made of canned tomatoes which have kept their shape, is novel. Drain well, halve and place on lettuce, add to each half a slice of minced celery and add French dressing to which a few drops of Worcestershire sauce has been added.

Chestnuts With Cabbage.

This is a de luxe cabbage dish: Cut one small red cabbage in fine shreds, place it in a colander, pour boiling water over it and let steam over the pan ten minutes. Shell, blanch and chop enough chestnuts to make a cup. Heat two tablespoons of fat in a kettle, add cabbage, seasoned with salt and pepper, let brown, then cover and simmer ten minutes. Cook the chestnuts in one cup of water, one-fourth of a cup of vinegar, one-fourth of a cup of raisins and one tablespoon of sugar. Sprinkle flour over the cabbage, add to the chestnuts, let cook a few minutes and serve hot.

Onion Dumplings.

Onion dumplings with tomato sauce are delectable. Cook large white onions until tender, drain and scoop out the centers, chop the centers with cooked ham, add a few bread crumbs and enough mushroom (or tomato) catsup to hold together, and fill this stuffing in the onions. Make a pastry as for baked dumplings, cut into squares, put an onion in each, put into a baking pan and cook in a moderate oven until the pastry is a delicate brown. Serve with tomato sauce.

Cauliflower a la Creole.

3 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, 1½ tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups tomatoes, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 head of cauliflower, cooked and separated into flowerets, 5 slices toast. Melt the butter, add the onion and cook until brown. Stir in the mustard, add the flour, salt and a dash of paprika, if desired, and continue stirring until smooth. Add the tomatoes and bring to the boiling point. Then add the cauliflower and let cook five minutes. Add the parsley and serve at once on buttered toast.

Scalloped Cauliflower.

3 cups cooked diced cauliflower, 2 cups white sauce, 1 green pepper put through food chopper, 1 tablespoon grated onion, ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs, 1 tablespoon melted butter. Combine the cauliflower, green pepper, onion and white sauce in a well-buttered baking dish. Spread the crumbs, which have been mixed with the melted butter, over the top and bake until browned in a hot oven—375 degrees F.

Scouts' Founder Is Seventy-One And Active Yet

Son of Parson Established as World Known Figure WIDELY HONORED

Some Outstanding Episodes in Long and Varied Career

The name of a great man rang round the world on Feb. 22. Seventy-one years ago the Rev. Professor Baden-Powell of Oxford and Langston Manor, rejoiced at the birth of his sixth son, later christened Robert. A million and a half Boy Scouts could tell you that Sir Robert Baden-Powell has gone a long way in seventy-one years.

Loyalty, trustworthiness, strength of character and of body and a great sublimation of self in the interests of others, has been the path followed since childhood by the British hero of the Boer War, the world wide hero of Scouting, military strategist, sportsman, artist and author though he may be, it is through his beloved Scout movement that he will receive a niche in the halls of fame.

When "B.P." as he is known, was a boy, his father wanted him to follow him in the church. Robert had ambitions for the stage and the fight was on. It remained on, too, until the boy tried for a commission in the army. There were 700 candidates and the clergyman's son ranked second on the list. This called for a natural compromise between the boy and his father, and Robert Baden-Powell began his military career at the age of 18.

Many Campaigns.

Baden-Powell fought in India and in Afghanistan. The Zululand campaign in 1879 found him ready and won him a mention in despatches. The boy officer of the 13th Hussars, which he joined in 1874, had won his spurs!

Then came the Boer war. It has been called the "war of gulls." The contest was unequal from the start for the two little Boer Republics were putting themselves against the might of Britain and the end was apparent from the beginning.

There was one strong point in favor of the Boers, however. They knew every little hill and valley in the country. They were quick to realize their advantage and won several victories before the weight of numbers and superior generalship proved their undoing. They managed to cut off Ladysmith, Kimberley and Mafeking and the British suffered heavy losses.

The open and fortified town of Mafeking was under the command of Baden-Powell at the time and the true greatness of his military genius came to the fore. The garrison consisted of 1,200 officers and men, while the opposing forces were double in numbers. Supplies were low, money as a circulating medium gave out, but through the weary months of unbroken siege the parson's son held on. He issued a temporary currency for the occasion and by strict rationing of supplies made possible the high morale that enabled the garrison to hold out until relieved on May 19, 1900.

From commander of the Fifth Dragoon Guards, "B.P." rose to the rank of a major-general. The experience he had gleaned of general warfare through his many travels in the army made him a marked man in military circles.

The First Boy Scouts.

It was this wide experience of scout work in the army and training in the handling of men that set Baden-Powell off on a scheme that made him known to the whole world and liked and revered.

In 1907 he started the first Boy Scout Troop. He intended it as an organization to be devoted to outdoor activities. But the enormous potentialities of the plan soon became evident and the following year he formally launched the movement along the lines that still are followed. In boys of all creeds, classes and nationalities he believed the Boy Scout movement would develop character and intelligence, health and physical development, handicraft and skill, unselfish services for others, happiness. He said, in now famous words:

"To those who are not sure of what is meant by the term 'Boy Scout,' I may explain that it practically stands for gentleman—a man who can be trusted as being honorable and unselfish in his motives, one who puts others first, self second.

There is a great meaning in that word 'unselfish,' because selfishness is what the world is largely suffering from to-day—the selfishness of individuals, classes, parties, creeds and of nations."

The movement spread like a prairie fire. To-day there are more than 500,000 Boy Scouts in the British Empire alone, and more than a million in the rest of the world. International Jamborees of Scouts bring boys from all over the globe. Always the hero of their orations is "B.P." He himself has toured the world in the interests of Scouting and his trips have been triumphal processions.

As a result of his services, he was knighted in 1909 and made a baronet in 1921.

To-day, at 71, "B.P." is active and almost boyishly alert—sure evidence of the soundness of his teachings. He once was famous as a hunter of big game and still is a keen sportsman. He has written books on army scouting and military campaigns, as well as several volumes on the Boy Scout movement.

"B.P." is generally known as merely "B.P." and the average public could not tell if he had one medal to his name or what distinctions were due him. The following are a few of the decorations, orders, etc., that are his: G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., K.C.V.O., K.C.B., C.B., C.V.O., L.L.D., F.R.G.S., Chevalier Order of Christ of Portugal, Grand Cross Alphonso XII, Grand Cross Order of Danneborg, Order of Merit Chile, Grand Cross of the Order of the Redeemer of Greece, Order of the Crown of Belgium, Cross of Commander of Legion of Honor.

When one considers that "B.P." is known to like pig sticking (at which he won the Kadir Cup), golf, polo and big game shooting, it is revealed that the principles of the Boy Scout movement are founded on a basis of clean sport, gameness and unity.

When two people like the same thing their married life is bound to be happy," sighed the romantic girl. "Well, you and George ought to be happy," remarked her friend, who wanted George and didn't get him. "I know you love him, and I notice he is very fond of himself."

BRITISH SETTLERS FOR CANADA

A good example of the type of British farm settlers now arriving in Canada can be seen from the above photo taken on the concourse of the Windsor street station, at Montreal. This group, which forms part of the 400 settlers who arrived recently on the S.S. Montclair, are the first contingent this season of British farm laborers brought out under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific Railway Colonization Department.

They possess a thorough farming training, therefore being well equipped for the duties they are to take up in Ontario, where farms have already been arranged for them by the government.

South Africa's Lightning Death Rate Called Highest in World

Johannesburg. — Statistics show that Canada has a death rate of eight persons per 1,000,000 from lightning, but the Union of South Africa, with a lightning death rate of fifty-two per 1,000,000 holds the unenviable record of being the world's worst country for lightning fatalities.

Australia, with a lightning mortality rate of slightly more than eight, is a poor second to the Union, which Canada, with a fractionally lower percentage than Australia, ranks third. As a contrast, the rate for the United Kingdom is one per 1,000,000.

Hills Are Metallic.

The thunder storms of South Africa are terrifying in their intensity and often devastating in their results. Elaborate precautions are taken to protect government and other buildings from the ravages of storms, but on the open veldt, it seems, nothing can be done to remedy conditions and reduce the appallingly heavy mortality. The difficulty is that practically all the kopjes are of metallic formation, and the electric charge from the atmosphere may on almost any summer night be seen playing fitfully along their surfaces. It is a great sight—from a distance!

In other countries tragedies, such as are daily recorded in South Africa during the summer, would be terrifying, but so accustomed have the South Africans become to them that little surprise is shown. This is aptly illustrated by the case of a digger at a place called Moodie's, who, when requested by a newspaper to supply news from the camp, made the following reply: "There is no particular news here. The usual batch of deaths by lightning—Gibbey, his wife and a kaffir."

Bridal Couple Killed.

A bridal couple on their way to be wed were killed by a sudden flash of lightning. At the Wepener border of Basutoland, on October 14, 1930, three troops of Diamond Fields Horse were riding through a blinding hailstorm when the lightning struck the leading troop and made an almost perfect arch over the middle troop, burying itself into the midst of the troop in the rear. Seventeen saddles were emptied by this freak of the storm and two men and four horses were killed outright. Thirteen men, of whom many succumbed later, and many horses were disabled.

Apart from the damage to property and loss of life caused by lightning, more subtle effects are produced by the electricity in the atmosphere. There are men who become nervous weeks a few hours before a storm breaks, and an old woman in Krugersdorp became temporarily blind whenever a thunderstorm was imminent. Many animals seem to sense the approach of a storm. Cattle bunch for shelter, dogs are restless and bees leave their hives.

Writing of his campaigning experiences in Natal in his book, "Stray Recollections," Major General Sir C. E. Callwell describes a storm that "threw everything previously met with completely in the shade. Deafening crashes, synchronizing with blinding flashes of light, filled the air. The clatter was continuous. Rain fell in torrents. The lightning was striking all about the camp. Campbell and I were occupying the same bell-tent and, sitting on our beds gazing at each other, we distinctly felt electric shocks each time the lightning struck—it was quite uncanny."

"The scientific explanation of this somewhat disconcerting phenomenon appears to be as follows: The clouds overhead being crammed full of electricity, the ground below is crammed full of electricity too, and anything projecting above the surface—as we were in our beds—is especially highly charged and, incidentally, is especially likely to be struck by the lightning, because the electricity in the cloud is trying to join up with that in the ground and goes to the point nearest to it."

"At each flash there is a discharge of electricity from the cloud into the ground, the amount of electricity in the cloud is reduced and the amount of electricity which has been attracted to the ground surface is correspondingly being discharged out of us. Had we been lying down on the ground we probably would not have known it, because we should not have been so heavily charged. Be that as it may, I was in an abject funk, and Campbell looked as if he was. I never felt electric shocks of this sort again—and I do not want to."

Try This Yourself

A small burning taper was placed on an ant hill. Immediately ants arrived to examine the fire. Some of the insects climbed the stick to which the burning taper was attached and squirted into the flame the tiny jets of liquid formic acid which ants of this variety can eject from their jaws as a weapon against enemies, says "La Nature," of Paris.

Others attacked the burning end of the taper with their jaws, succeeding in nibbling off bits of it even though the near approach of the flames meant that they were burned and killed. Very soon the flame was extinguished, but at a cost of many of the insects. Repeated experiments resulted similarly. Tests with four other ant hills led to different results, with these insects making no effort to extinguish the fire.

Charm of Canadian Rockies

One of the chief charms of the Canadian Rockies is that their territory is and will be for many years to come still a virgin land. One may travel through the heart of it in luxurious Pullmans or by motor car and find accommodation comparable with the best on the continent, yet half an hour's walk from the railway or the highway Nature is still as wild and solitary and beautiful as she was before the white man came.

According to history, Oklahoma was settled in 1889, but rarely thereafter.

Men and women from the United Kingdom are always pleasantly surprised, when visiting Canada, to find in Red Rose Orange Pekoe a tea which the best teas in the Old Country cannot surpass. They prefer Red Rose Orange Pekoe because it is a blend of the finest teas grown—put up and packed under the supervision of men trained in the London tea markets. 43

A Maiden's Prayer

Last night I saw my idol
Oh, my Lord, I must confess,
She said absolutely nothing
And suggested even less.
But on every side were gallants
Who would make her glad and gay
So I pray you, Lord, remind me
For I too would get that way.

Waft me far into Moronia,
I would be a clinging vine
Just waiting for a trellis
To hold this form of mine;
I crave the make-up girl's
Oh, Lord from whence things come,
The prerequisite is simple;
I simply must be dumb.

—Harcourt Strange.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Reduce the Acid

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour. Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

"How are you coming along with your courting of the banker's daughter? Pretty tough going, eh?"

"Not so bad! I'm getting some encouragement."

"Not yet, but last night she said she had told me no for the last time."

Maple an Important Hardwood

The maple, whose leaf is the national emblem of Canada, is our second most important hardwood, and is represented in Canada by nine or more species scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The sugar maple, or hard maple (Acer saccharum) produces the most valuable lumber, which is used for furniture, vehicle stock, and interior home finishing. The sap of this tree is the source of maple sugar and syrup.

SAME SYMPTOMS IN MANY CASES

An Anaemic Condition Easily Recognized—Calls for a Blood Builder.

In most cases of anaemia the symptoms are almost the same. The sufferer grows pale and is easily tired after the least exertion. The appetite is fickle and the patient loses in weight. Sometimes there are headaches, and often inability to sleep well. As the blood becomes thinner the symptoms become more pronounced and often there are fainting spells. All this shows that the blood is thin and watery, and at the very first symptom of this condition the patient should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the most reliable blood-builder and nerve tonic known. The sole mission of this medicine is to enrich the blood, and when that is done all the distressing symptoms disappear. Among those who have reason to praise this medicine is Mrs. M. E. Patterson, Shanklin, N.B., who says:—"About four years ago I became very much run down, I could not eat, sleep nor rest, and I grew so nervous that the smallest things would annoy me. Eventually I grew so weak that I did not have strength to move about without help. I was just a miserable wreck, and became very much discouraged as I had tried many medicines which failed to help me. In this wretched state a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so and before long found they were helping me. Gladly I continued taking the pills until I fully regained my health and strength and I have since continued in the best of health. Later my daughter became anaemic and six boxes of the pills restored her to health, strength and color. Naturally I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a blessing to weak, run-down people." You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Easy and Ornamental to Grow Own Fruit

"Grow your own fruits" may sound fantastic to the average home owner with only a house and lot but it can be done to some extent on even the smallest place, according to F. F. Rockwell, expert horticulturist writing in the current issue of "Your Home Magazine."

"The home growing of fruits," he declares, "is well worth while in and even on the small place there is usually room for at least some. Peaches, grapes, plums and dwarf fruit trees would be worth planting as ornamentals alone even if they bore no fruit. Serving a dual purpose as they do, they are doubly worth while. Dwarf apple and pear trees and cherry trees occupy little space, are not difficult to grow, and in the spring equal the most beautiful of flowering shrubs. And there is no comparison between being able to have on your table fruits picked from your own trees, and those which have been bought."

According to Mr. Rockwell, "Most fruits with the exception of strawberries, need not have a certain amount of space set aside and devoted exclusively to them. They may," he points out, "be worked into the general planting scheme. Grapes, for instance, may be used over arbors or to cover trellises; blackberries and raspberries may be grown against a fence or a wall; fruit trees may be planted about the boundary line or in a corner where they will fit into the general planting plan, without occupying lawn space. The same is true of currants and gooseberries, which make quite attractive flowering shrubs. For dwarf apple trees you will have to allow about sixteen feet, that is, about eight feet on either side. For plums, cherries, quinces and dwarf pears (which are grown on quince stock), allow ten to fifteen feet. Grapes may be planted six to eight feet apart. Raspberries about three feet apart in a row, with five to six feet between rows, if there is more than one. Blackberries will require a foot or so more each way. Currants and gooseberries may be kept pruned to almost any desired size, so they may be allowed only four to six feet."

The Canadian West

Wide World Magazine (London): Let us be thoroughly understood by all intending immigrants that the Canadian prairie either makes or breaks the man who sets out to subdue it. Prizes there are to be won, without a doubt. Broad areas of fertile wheat land regularly yielding their vast stores of golden grain. Great herds of sleek cattle dotted about the emerald hills in summer, or safely sheltered inside snug buildings in the winter. Big, warm, comfortable houses, furnace-heated, their basements piled with stacks of wood and coal. Lavish tables spread with wholesome food in such profusion as the Londoner never dreams of. Automobiles, radios, telephones, electro-power—everybody can have them. Prosperity and abundance are within reach of all who have enough tenacity to forge and use the magic key—work.

Only the criticized ever amounts to much.

On fishing trips take Minard's.

Mount Everest
(From the London Mercury).
There lives a race of moths on Everest, Strong-winged and somber-colored, dull and patient. When the wind blows, They fold their wings and grapple to the boulders. On, in calm they fly, only in calm. And on those tortured heights the calm comes seldom, But when it comes They rise and swirl about in airy surries. Only in windless hours they mount the air. Then only live: then only meet and marry: And year by year Succeed the same strong patient generations.

Thrice they have seen the giants from the plains Camp in their midst, and on against the mountain, And thrice have seen Downward with heavier steps the giants returning.

FIGHTING FOR BABY'S HEALTH

Is the Constant Care of Every Young Mother.

The young mother has a constant care in looking after the welfare of her little ones. Childhood ailments come on so sudden—sometimes without a minute's warning—the mother may have a very sick baby on her hands before help can be obtained. That is unless she has a remedy in the house which she can safely give the baby for any of the many minor ailments of babyhood and childhood.

Such a remedy is found in Baby's Own Tablets. Thousands of mothers throughout the country always keep a box of the Tablets on hand and they proclaim them to be without an equal for sweetening baby's stomach; regulating the bowels, and thus driving out constipation and indigestion, colds and simple fevers, and making the dreaded teething period easy.

Baby's Own Tablets are an absolutely safe remedy. They are guaranteed to be free from opiates or any other narcotic drug which are so harmful to the future welfare of the baby. Mothers, if you value the life of your little ones give him Baby's Own Tablets when he is ill, or, better still, give him an occasional dose of the Tablets to ward off illness. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or will be sent to any address, post paid, at 25 cents a box by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Farmer

Sir A. Daniel Hall, K.C.B., F.R.S., in the Contemporary Review (London): The greater part of the farming of the world is done by peasants or family farmers, who have only one routine for the farm and no alternative occupation. They may vary the cropping a little in accordance with prices but in the main they must continue on the accustomed paths whatever the prices, because for them the farm is primarily a living rather than a business. They sell only their surplus, and if it sells badly there is but so much the less to spend upon clothes and other necessities they must buy. Bad times affect the production of a peasant community but slowly; eventually the younger generation declines to carry on so unremunerative a calling, and this sort of decline in the agricultural population becomes dangerous, unless it is accompanied by some increase of efficiency on the land that remains in cultivation.

Europe's Condition Compared With 1914

London Financial Journal Sees Continental Production 30 to 50% Above Pre-War

The European Continent is described by The London Stock Exchange Gazette in a review of world finance as "economically in a better position than it was in 1914." The devastated districts have been rebuilt and vast improvements have been effected in ports, railways, canals and other waterways, in the construction of towns, in the planning and outfitting of mines and factories, and, before all, in the provision of electrical power. It is probably safe to estimate that the productive capacity of the continental nations is from 30 per cent. to 50 per cent. greater than it was in 1914, and on the Continent, as in England, high wages and high consumption on the part of the workers are forcing the pace toward better time, toward rapidly expanding trade and commerce.

"The richest continental nations, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and others, have stabilized their currency. The will to work is obvious to everybody who travels over the Continent. The Scandinavian nations have had a good year, and although there has been some inflation in Germany, fundamental conditions are sound and promising, and that country will probably meet its public and private obligations, the pessimists notwithstanding."

(Appeal to a Shy One)

(From The London Observer)
Come now, feathered mouse,
All in jacket blue:
See, a swinging house
Freehold, and for you.

Quite so warm and free

Sweet life's in this nest,
Death's in winter night;
All in primrose vest,
Comes now, winged sprite.

SICK ABED EIGHT MONTHS

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Could Do All Her Work and Gained in Weight

Melfort, Saskatchewan.—"I had inward troubles, headaches and severe pains in my back and sides. I was so sick generally that I could not sit up and I was in bed most of the time for eight months. An aunt came to visit and help me as I was unable to attend to my baby and could not do my work. She told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking two bottles I could get up and dress myself. I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. When I first took the medicine I only weighed seventy-eight pounds. Now I weigh twice as much. If I get out of sorts or weary and can't sleep I always take another bottle of the Vegetable Compound. I find it wonderfully good for female troubles, and have recommended it to my neighbors. I will be only too glad to answer any letters I receive asking about it."—Mrs. WILLIAM RITCHIE, Box 436, Melfort, Saskatchewan.

SIR GEORGE H. PERLEY URGES STRONG SUPPORT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

No one in the House of Commons is better qualified to speak on the Peace Issue than Argenteuil's Federal representative, Sir George H. Perley.

He it was, that represented our Dominion during the trying days of the Great War, as Canadian High Commissioner in London, and none could have rendered more faithful and generous service than our honored member.

Last week, Miss McPhail brought in a resolution calling for the establishment of a government department for the promotion of peace and international understanding, which proved a strong subject of debate, and after a generous discussion Miss McPhail, at the Premier's suggestion with-drew her motion by saying "I am satisfied not to divide the House on the motion, but I am not satisfied with the action of the Government."

In expressing his opinion on the motion Sir George Perley said that every member of the House was in favor of the promotion of peace and good understanding. The question was how should this be brought about. Everybody had had enough of war, and all would agree that money spent on war would be better devoted to developing peace.

Sir George disagreed with the assertion of the Prime Minister in Monday's debate that the appointment of a Canadian minister to Tokio was a step in the direction of peace. He did not believe that if each of the different Dominions had their own representatives at Tokio the solidarity of the British Empire would continue very long. In his opinion one representative, either from England or one of the Dominions, would more effectively represent the Empire as a whole.

The League of Nations had performed commendable work in preventing wars and solving labor health and other social problems, but something should be done in the way of bringing to the direct attention of the people of all countries the object and benefits of the League. In Canada, the League of Nations Society, with headquarters at Ottawa, might be profitably utilized for educational purposes of this nature.

Sir George thought the best way of promoting international understanding would be for all the peoples of those countries who are members of the League of Nations to get behind their Governments in supporting the League.

The Prime Minister interjected that in this year's estimates was placed an item of $2,270 to assist the work of the League of Nations Society of Canada.

Sir George Perley expressed his gratification at this and assured the Premier that he would support that particular item.

We are pleased to know that our citizens are becoming interested and that a Special Drive for membership in this organization is being held here on April 17th.

HAY VALLEY FARM SHIPS AYRSHIRES TO B.C.

Angus L. Hay, Manager of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company Farm, at Marysville, B. C., was in Lachute district this week, buying Ayrshire cattle for the Company.

Four Ayrshires were purchased from his father's farm at Lachute, and the remaining 12 animals making up the car-load, were bought in the Toronto district. The animals purchased at Lachute were Glenagarry Kathy, Provost 90423. This is an A. A. Bull of splendid show type with a good record, having been first in his class, at the Argenteuil Fair of 1926 & 1927, and grand champion of the show. He is a proven sire which is shown by the fact that Mr. Hay has a beautiful string of heifers, gets of this sire, that will certainly be heard from in future.

Females purchased were Snowball Queen 70334, with an R.O.P. Record of 11993 lbs. of milk to 476 lbs. of Fat in the 365 day test as a two year old heifer. This cow was shown in Milk, at the Argenteuil Fair in 1924 and was first in her class, and was grand champion in 1927. She won the cup offered by the Laurentian Ayrshire Club in the R.O.P. class. Two valuable young bulls have already been sold from this cow to head good herds in this Province, and another beautiful bull from this cow is still on the Hay farm.

Hay Valley Snowball 95278, a two year old daughter of the above cow who has just completed a record of almost 9,000 lbs. of milk, testing 4.88, this heifer also goes to B. C.

Beauty 78901. Another young cow of Mr. Hay's own breeding, having a record of almost 11,000 lbs. of milk testing close to 4.0 makes up the four animals from Lachute for B. C. The car left Lachute Monday morning and will be about 7 days on the road.

What is Your Wife's Salary?

Don't think the question absurd. We ask it to emphasize the fact that wives do not get salaries; they just work for their board and clothes. They can't lay aside anything for times of sickness or old age. Their husbands are supposed to do that for them.

It is pretty selfish of a man not to make proper provision for his wife in the event of his sudden death. To be sure the law gives her a definite portion of his estate; but supposing he leaves no estate. Business risks, bad investments, hard times, luxuries—these may leave her penniless.

An Imperial Life policy will provide the one definite, sure and easily obtained provision for your wife; and she deserves something definite and sure—doesn't she?

Ask for descriptive literature and rates to-day, while you are in good health. Tomorrow you may be uninsurable.

The LAND OF FORGOTTEN MEN

by Edison Marshall

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Peter Newhall, Augusta, Ga., flees to Alaska, after being told by Ivan Ishmin, Russian violinist, he had drowned Paul Sarichef, Ishmin's secretary. He joins Big Chris Larson in response to a distress signal at sea, giving Larson his sea jacket. Their launch hits rocks. Larson's body is buried in Newhall's. Peter, rescued, finds injuries have completely changed his appearance.

Dorothy and Ishmin go to Alaska, to return Peter's body. They do not recognize Peter in their head guide. A storm strands them at the grave. Ishmin goes for supplies. Peter falls in a gully on a hunting trip. Dorothy finds her greatest happiness in rescuing him. Ishmin returns and Dorothy accepts his proposal and they are married by a native priest. Peter goes to give them best wishes.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

The girl spoke sharply in the silence. "Peter Newhall, my dead husband," she answered in evident awe.

"That word came from beyond the grave," Pete went on solemnly. He was partly acting on inspiration now—an urge that he did not know—and partly in a deliberate attempt to take advantage of Ivan's Asiatic superstitions.

"Peter Newhall that was your husband is dead, but his ghost has been here all the time—both of you know it." The girl's eyes flamed with tears, and she nodded. "Ivan, the ghost of Peter Newhall is guarding this girl still. It will guard her clear to the end—I'm not a medium, as Joe is, yet I know that as well as I know anything. You can take my word for gospel. Worship her and thank God for her and be kind to her—and your soul will be saved. But at the first wickedness of which you are so easily rapable—the ghost of Peter Newhall will bound you to your destruction!"

Ivan stared like a stricken man. Pete took a long-drawn breath, then turned to Dorothy. "I want you to remember, too," he told her gently, his eyes fixed on her. "The ghost of your husband is watching over you—believe me, because it's true! If you ever need him, he will be there to help you. If you ever need me—your guide that is more than a guide—I will come no matter how many seas I have to cross. All you have to do is to send for me."

To Dorothy it was like an unearthly dream. She knew, with a sure knowledge that this man meant exactly what he said; and she had experienced a new sense of security and peace that could never wholly pass away. Already this fear was turning to go. His trembling hand was at the flap of the tent.

He seemed to be listening. As she watched, fascinated, she saw the rapt look leave his face, and a look of common earthly interest take its place. He bent his head, straining; then turned to Ivan.

"It's the squaw, I guess," he said. "She's already come with the supplies."

They heard dragging steps; then the crackle of dead twigs that were strewn about the camp fire. Some one with a heavy load halted just outside the flap of the tent.

Pete drew aside the flap, and the candle light streamed out into the gloom. It was not an Indian squaw who had brought this back-load of supplies from across the Peninsula. The black-bearded stalwart man who stood without was Paul Sarichef, whom Peter Newhall had supposedly drowned in the Savannah River years before.

CHAPTER XVIII.

SARICHEF APPEARS.

There could not be the least doubt of Sarichef's identity. All three actors in the drama knew him at the first glance, with certain recognition not to be mistaken. His clothes were rough and worn, but physically he was unchanged since Pete had last seen him on the launch on the Savannah. That fatal night! The thought was infinitely ironic. Here, in the flesh stood the man of whose murder he had believed himself guilty and for which he had so dearly paid.

There was one instant of bewildered groping in the dark, and then Peter knew the truth. He had simply been the victim of a cruel, relentless, criminal mind. Ivan Ishmin, loving Dorothy with his Oriental ardor, had schemed to win her away from her husband; and he had known no law but his own. That he should have neither scruples nor mercy was wholly in character; he was a strong, profound, relentless man, and he had never been one to be swayed from his purpose. He had craved Dorothy with an unholy fire, his genius demanded to prey upon her, and when a drunken quarrel aboard the launch on the Savannah River had given him his opportunity, he had been remorseless in taking advantage of it. Sarichef had been told to disappear; Ivan had contrived the wicked lie that had been Pete's downfall. When Peter had wakened from drunken slumber he had been easy to convince that he had actually committed the crime that Ivan swore he had seen. Pete's only amazement was that this remorseless man had stopped where he did; that Sarichef had not actually been slain to add plausibility to his story, or be himself—by cunning, deliberate, carefully covered murder—wiped from his rival's path.

The flood of vengeful rage that might have been expected did not at once sweep over Pete, partly because the drama of the moment carried him above it, partly from sheer amazement at this incredible, unexpected visitation. He felt oddly cool, capable of deliberate thought. The moment was inordinately vivid, rather than dreamy; his realities still endured—the clouds that hid the stars, the camp fire glowing dully, the wide bed of straw at his feet and the caribou flesh drying behind the camp stove. The moan of the sea carried through the moment, unbroken; and the wind still yelled and blustered, flapping the canvas with maniacal frenzy without an instant's cessation. After one great start which seemed to be wholly internal—one single, violent impulse throughout the strong tree of his nervous system that showed not at all in his face or frame—all his powers seemed to rally, vouchsafing him not only perfect self-control, but a certain penetrative, infallible quality of thought. Outwardly this was Dorothy and Ivan's drama solely; neither in look nor word did he give any sign that he recognized Sarichef. Such action might immediately reveal his own identity.

To Dorothy the sight of that startled face that she recognized instantly as that of her husband's supposed victim was like a shattering fist at her breast. Her throat froze and she could not cry out; but instead of dullness and insensibility a white light super-consciousness seemed to pervade the scene; to her also the whole truth became vividly, cruelly manifest, and she was acutely sensitive, as in a death by fire, of all its tragic phases. Her hands clasped, her face was deathly white, ugly and haggard from unbearable pain.

At the same time her thought moved with a cruel clarity. She knew now why Ivan had urged Peter's flight instead of encouraging him to stay and fight the murder charge through the courts. She saw now why Ivan had directed him south, clearing the way and arranging for his concealment in the Brazilian fastnesses; he had known that Sarichef had gone north and he had wanted to guard against a possible meeting of the two men. She understood why he had been so moved and stirred, like a man who has just come safely through an unseen danger, when he had got the word that Peter had died in the North rather than the South, and why he had opposed so bitterly and earnestly his own venture into the North in search of her husband's body; he had feared that she might encounter and identify Sarichef. Over and above the fact of this present meeting, it was justifiable fear. The North has but a comparatively small white population, and they all cross trails sooner or later, particularly in this great barren end of Alaska that was such a refuge for missing men. He likely knew that Sarichef was located somewhere in this immediate vicinity—probably on the other side of the Peninsula—and therefore he had insisted on going himself on the expedition after supplies, rather than send one of the guides who might, not guessing the truth, encounter Sarichef, enlist his aid in his employer's behalf, and bring him back as one of a rescue party to the camp.

Her husband had been wronged and, she believed, indirectly done to death! He had been the victim of a wicked, deliberate plot of which she herself had been an unsuspecting instrument. Her remorse had been poignant before, but now it swept over her like the sea. The cruel futility of it all, the torturing sense of bootless loss seemed more than she could bear.

Ivan's expression hardly changed. His face twitched once; and it might have been that a mirthless, ironic half-smile hovered for an instant at his closely pressed lips. He walked more fully into the firelight, uttered one grim, subdued oath, then leered at his late secretary in contempt. It was not that he failed to recognize what this sudden coming meant to him and his. He knew that, except by Dorothy's loyalty to him, he could never go back to the civilized world again. He had risked everything, and he was done for, if the truth ever came out; he had gone on record in the Georgia courts as saying that he had seen Peter Newhall throw this man into the river and that he had seen him go down for the third time. He would be ruined socially and professionally, and in all probability the law itself would seize him. Fortunately Dorothy was his wife. Surely he would have vital need of her loyalty.

Himself, Dorothy, and Sarichef were now grouped about the fire; and Pete stolidly piled on fresh fuel. The flame mounted higher, crackling; and the head guide retired into the shadows just without the circle of weird, ruddy firelight. Then he stood waiting, forgotten and unseen.

"You fool!" Ivan began contemptuously to Sarichef. "What are you doing here? Blackmail, I suppose."

ARE PALE PEOPLE WELL?

Some pale people are well, but not many. Pallor generally means thin blood. When, in addition, you are short of breath, and your heart palpitates after slight exercise and you perhaps show symptoms of indigestion and nervousness, there is no doubt about it. You are in an anaemic condition.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the logical remedy for anaemia, for they begin at once to build up the thin blood, strengthen the nerves, increase the appetite and aid digestion. But do not wait too long. Thin blood is a stealthy and dangerous foe.

If you will send your name and address to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., they will send you two little booklets, "Building Up the Blood," and "What to Eat and How to Eat," both of which will be found very useful in the home.

Lobsters That Wear Odd Colors

Lobsters alive and in their native element are a dark green, which turns to a brilliant red when they are boiled; but there are exceptions, and sometimes a lobster fresh from the salt water will be some other color than green.

Near Amherst, N.S., a pure white or albino lobster was taken once and sent to a Portland (Me.) wholesale lobster dealer, who for many years exhibited it preserved in alcohol. Near Mohegan Island a lobsterman took from a trap a thirteen-inch lobster which was a rich indigo along the top of the body shell and tail, the indigo shading off on the sides of the carapace into blues of a clear, lighter tint.

At Peaks Island a specimen was captured whose back and tail were a bright indigo blue, while the under parts shaded off into an almost pure white. At Beal's Island a jet-black lobster was caught a few years ago, and near Vinalhaven this Winter a cream-colored one was found.

Bright red lobsters, looking precisely as if they had been boiled, while infrequently, have been hauled up at several points along the Maine coast. A few weeks ago a Nova Scotia lobster in a consignment for Boston attracted attention because its body shell was in alternated stripes of green and yellowish whitish or ivory tint, almost as if it had been painted.

A housewife objected to being awakened at dawn by the crowing of a neighbor's chickens. Some people would have threatened Police Court. The housewife wrote a courteous note to her neighbor: "A few days later the neighbor's maid appeared with a nicely dressed chicken on a platter. A note attached said: 'We think this is the rooster that has been causing all the trouble.' Courtesy wins every time."

Knowledge of Flying Together With Careful Thought and Attention to Details Overcomes the Usual Dangers

STUPENDUOUS DISTANCE

National Geographic Magazine Carries Wonderful Story

While the American press is full of the exploits of Col. Charles Lindbergh it is interesting to read in the current number of the National Geographic Magazine an article from the pen of Sir Alan J. Cobham, England's peerless air pioneer, who at present is circumnavigating the African continent to plan air routes for England. Sir Alan is accompanied by his wife, Lady Cobham, and four assistants, in an all steel sea plane and is blazing new and progressive air paths which will forever establish the establishment of permanent air communications with the vast British possessions in the "Dark" continent. His article tells the story of air development in part as follows:

In the course of my work during the past five or six years I have seen many parts of the world.

My wanderings have taken me over every capital in Europe and over the length and breadth of the great African continent.

More than once I have traveled over the great Syrian Desert to India, Burma and back, and only recently I journeyed all the way to Australia and return via Rangoon, Singapore, and the Dutch East Indies.

Yet with all these wanderings it was not until a few months ago that I made my first steamship voyage, when I crossed from Southampton to New York.

Hitherto my journeys had been made in the air, and my mode of transport was an airplane or seaplane, and when I reflect on my various exploits, somehow I feel that my memories and impressions of the countries I have visited are far more vivid and realistic than are the memories of the individual who has traveled by steamship, train, or motor car.

Studying Archeology By Air.
Early in 1923 I made a circular tour, covering about 12,000 miles, over Europe, Egypt, Palestine, Algeria, Morocco, and Spain. My passenger was an old friend whose greatest hobbies were travel and the study of ancient civilizations.

We had flown many thousands of miles together on previous occasions, but this trip was a little more ambitious. From London we flew to Paris, through France, along the Riviera then over the Mediterranean to Africa coast line, across Italy to Greece, and to Egypt.

Then, for the first time in history, we flew across the whole breadth of Africa, from Egypt to Morocco, after which we crossed the Strait of Gibraltar and by way of Spain and France returned to London.

The final stage of our journey, from Madrid to London, was made in one day. We breakfasted in Madrid, had lunch in Bordeaux, slipped afternoon tea on the airfield of Lymington, thus completing with a wartime machine a tour of more than 12,000 miles with out any preliminary organization or set route.

Planning a Flight to India.
In the autumn of 1924, Air Vice-Marshal Sir Sefton Branker had to make a journey to India in connection with the allotting of a port of call and the building of a mooring mast for the future airship service that may eventually run through to Australia.

As Director of British Civil Aviation, Sir Sefton Branker maintained that he ought to fly to his destination; but the Treasury urged that Government officials should travel by the cheapest route, and as the cost of a special airplane to fly to India and back was far in excess of the cost of a first-class steamship passage and return, the Treasury could not see its way clear to grant the sum of money necessary. However, on learning that the aviation industry was willing to support the flight, the Treasury became more lenient and a good portion of the expense of the journey was allotted.

The Director decided that, as we were going to fly to India, and possibly beyond to Rangoon, in Burma, he would make it a flight of survey and would endeavor to ascertain the best air route.

We had a depressing and tedious journey through Europe in the winter, for we left London in November, and it was not until the Persian Gulf was reached that we met the sunshine. I was greatly impressed by the many weird and wonderful rock formations along the hundreds of miles of forbidding coast line from Iraq down the Persian Gulf, then over the Gulf of Oman to India.

It was winter in India and the weather was perfect. As Sir Sefton Branker wished to visit one or two places where it would be impossible to land an airplane, he went on by train from Karachi, which was our first port of call in India. Here a big mooring mast is being erected for the future airship service, and this port is also the terminus of the air line that is now in operation between Egypt and India.

Our flight from Karachi to Delhi was via the Thar, or Indian, Desert and Jodhpur. On the first day we successfully crossed the desert, a journey of several hundred miles, and, having located a big river, I began to look ahead for the town of Jodhpur.

Monkeys of Datta Developed a Breed of Expert Marksmen.

On our homeward journey through India we were the guests of the Maharaja of Datta, where we stayed a few days. The Prime Minister told us that, when he had arrived in Datta some years before, he had found the place infested with monkeys, which were rapidly destroying the roofs of all the buildings. These cunning creatures were addicted to the delightful pastime of tearing heavy tiles off the roofs of the houses and throwing them down on the passers-by in the streets, sometimes with fatal results. In the course of time they had developed a breed of monkey marksmen who seldom missed.

Now Datta is a Hindu state, and the followers of this religion have a tenet which forbids the taking of life of any sort; so the monkeys were left unmolested. The new Prime Minister decided that something must be done, and so he advised the Maharaja to offer 5 rupees as reward for every monkey captured and brought alive to the cages outside the palace.

The news of this drastic action spread all over the countryside and was strongly condemned by the Maharaja or a neighboring state. The critic even went so far as to say that he was fond of monkeys, and that they were allowed to roam about his domain unmolested.

In the meantime at Datta hundreds of monkeys were being captured daily, and very soon there was not a simian left roaming free. The Prime Minister was now faced with the problem of disposing of them. He hit upon the bright idea of having them packed in baskets and loaded on board a special train which was dispatched to the neighboring state of the Maharaja who professed a liking for monkeys. When the train arrived in the chief town, several hundred miles from Datta, the animals were unloaded and let loose as a special gift to the potentate.

It was a huge practical joke, and was talked of all over India. The poor Maharaja who had condemned Datta's action could say nothing, although inwardly he must have been furious.

A Longitudinal Survey of Africa By Air.

After more than three months away from home I landed on the Croydon airfield in the early spring, completing the first of a series of three big flights of survey of Empire Air Routes.

Our next big flight was from London to Cape Town and back. For this trip I selected the identical De Havilland type 50 plane that had taken us to Rangoon and back, but instead of the old-type engine, we installed a Jaguar. In order to negotiate easily the high-altitude airdromes in the Tropics, where the atmosphere is much rarefied, it was necessary to have the extra horsepower.

We had traveled nearly 3,000 miles up the River Nile from the Mediterranean coast, yet at Mongalla we were only about 1,000 feet above sea level. In the next two or three hundred miles, however, the ground rose suddenly, and at Jinja, on the shores of Lake Victoria, we found ourselves on the high plateau of central Africa, more than 4,000 feet above sea level.

Owing to the heat, the altitude and other local conditions, the density of the atmosphere was very different from that of northern Europe. At times the air in central Africa on some of the landing grounds was equivalent to the atmosphere at 10,000 feet in England, and it was here that we found the need for our extra horsepower in order to take off and climb away on the rarefied air.

Near Jinja we saw the Ripon Falls, the source of the White Nile, and the only outlet to the great Lake Victoria. Flying Through the Mists of Victoria Falls 50 Feet Above the Brink.

Of our journeys through Tanganyika and Northern Rhodesia there is no space to tell in this article. But we cannot pass by the Victoria Falls without describing how the Zambezi, which is a mile and a quarter wide at this point, flows gently on its way and when seen from an airplane seems suddenly to disappear into a crack in the earth.

This great African river falls for 360 to 400 feet into a narrow chasm. In the center of this cleft is the only outlet, a narrow gorge through which all the mighty waters have to escape.

On this flight to Cape Town I had with me a professional cinematographer, Emmott, in addition to my engineer of the England-to-India trip, and while Emmott took the motion pictures, Elliott used to try to take the still pictures. When we had flown beyond the falls the sight was so magnificent that we decided to come down low and take a close-up picture of the brink.

This manoeuvre was interfered with by the continual banks of spray, which kept rising and completely enveloped our machine in heavy clouds of mist as we skimmed along only 50 feet above the brink.

While we were flying at this low altitude over this perilous country, our engine faltered and started to splutter. Elliott and I both realized

THE MAKER OF SOUTH AFRICA

The new statue of Cecil Rhodes upon which John Tweed has worked for months in England. It will be erected in Salisbury, Rhodesia, South Africa.

what had happened: the spray was so heavy that water had entered the carburetor.

It was an unpleasant moment, for beneath us was the deep chasm and the turmoil of waters, while on the one side we had the River Zambezi flowing toward the brink, and on the other a dense forest jungle; and for miles around no earthly chance of finding a cleared space on which to land.

I gave the engine full throttle, and while it banged and spluttered we climbed away and headed for our airfield at Livingstone. Fortunately the carburetor cleared itself of the drops of water, and once more our motor began to purr smoothly.

All the way through Africa we surveyed the possibilities for air routes, and finally reached Cape Town with the first airplane to make the cross-continent flight. Then, after a brief overhaul of the motor, we turned about and flew home, making the return trip in 15 days.

It was barely three months later when we again set out on another long flight of survey. This time it was to be Australia and return, but instead of going with an airplane we decided to do the job with a seaplane. A flight to Australia With the Engine That Flew to the Cape.

This meant very little alteration in our outfit, however, for all we did was to take our identical De Havilland type 50, that had already done the Rangoon and Cape flights, and fit it out with a pair of Shorts' duralumin all-metal floats. Using the same Siddeley Jaguar engine that had done the Cape flight, we took off from the River Medway at Rochester, 33 miles east of London, on our 23,000-mile cruise to Australia and back.

It was difficult to get pictures on the Australian flight, because we had purposely chosen to fly through the dry weather period—that is, the hot weather in Iraq and India, combined with the monsoon in India, Burma, and the Malay Peninsula. We wanted to find out whether it would be possible to fly through the torrential rains of the Burma coast, thus making our survey report all the more sound.

Tragedy Meets the Australian Flight.
The Australian flight was marred by disaster. Arthur Elliott, my capable and ever loyal engineer, lost his life, dying in the hospital at Basra, in Iraq.

For some unknown reason, possibly the result of overwork in preparing for the flight, I had been suffering from depression, both mental and physical, ever since the start at Rochester. Elliott, on the other hand, had been most cheerful.

We took off from Baghdad in the early morning, with the intention of following the course of the Euphrates to Basra—near the head of the Persian Gulf. I had not felt fit to start at the early hour of 5 a.m. Elliott and several of the Air Force boys had been looking over the machine while I endeavored to pull myself together. By 8 o'clock I was able to climb into the ship, but was feeling very weak.

We headed southward from the River Tigris, seeking the Euphrates. It was fair weather when we started, but after we had gone about 150 miles we ran into a dust storm, which became worse and worse as we proceeded. Finally, in order to find my way, I was forced to come down to within a few feet of the river bank.

We flew for many miles in this fashion, skimming low over the river and taking our direction from the bank, which showed up a little more clearly than anything else through the dust-laden air.

Dust Storm Forces a River Landing.
At last, the air got so thick that I decided to land on the river and wait for a little while with the hope that the storm might clear. As soon as we alighted, I turned the machine toward the bank and beached it in the soft mud. I shall always remember Elliott's enthusiasm for the seaplane at that moment, because, as he remarked, it was so practical and safe; we could take refuge at any moment on the water beneath us.

There was a police boat near by and the native sergeant in charge, after putting a guard in our machine, took us inside where, sheltered from the dust, we rested on native beds that were quickly put up for us.

He then sent a horseman off, with the note that I gave him, to the nearest telegraph station, so that the authorities would know of our whereabouts and progress. After this we slept from 9.30 to noon, then enjoyed a refreshing meal of tea and melon. At about 2 o'clock the storm had cleared somewhat, so we decided to make another attempt.

Sky and Water Melt Into One.

We took off safely and continued down the Euphrates, but after about 50 miles we ran into another bad dust storm. As we neared the head of the great Hammar Lake I could see that it was going to be most difficult for me to find my way, especially if I went over the open water. The air above me, owing to the sand storm, was a dirty mud color, and the water beneath was the same. In fact, all around there was sand and one could not see more than 100 yards ahead.

An Explosion in the Cabin.

With this poor visibility, it was most difficult to fly, especially as we were traveling at about 100 miles an hour. I felt that if I went out over the open lake I might run the risk of flying into the water, owing to the similarity of color in every direction and the absence of any visible horizon. Under these conditions it was necessary for me to hug the swampy shore line of the lake, so that I might have a view of some sort of land that would give me my equilibrium.

And so we found ourselves zigzagging in and out along this swampy shore, feeling our way around the southern edge of the lake in an endeavor to get through that dust storm and hoping there would be clear air beyond.

Home Accident Deaths Exceed Motor Car Toll

More people are killed and injured by falls, burns, suffocation and poisons in their homes every year than suffer death or injury in automobile accidents, according to figures compiled by the National Safety Council. This was especially emphasized last January, when a total of 1,760 persons were killed by and in automobiles in the United States and 2,020 met their deaths in home accidents, according to the council's figures.

Both Audience and Stage To Revolve in Theatre

Berlin—The theatre of the future will have not only a revolving stage, but a revolving audience as well, in the opinion of Walter Gropius, noted architect of Dessau. He is at work devising a new type of theatre for Edwin Piscator, of Berlin, director of the only Communist theatre in Germany.

Gropius plans to build a theatre in which the parquet, with its audience, can be turned at an angle of 180 degrees. The spectators will thus suddenly find themselves transported to another part of the round theatre, where they will see a different stage setting from that upon which they gazed at the previous angle.

Inside, and when I climbed on board and inspected the inside wall I pulled out a mail bag and a dispatch case each of which had been drilled by a missile.

It suddenly dawned upon me that we had been shot at and that it was not a burst gas pipe that had wounded Elliott. A bullet had passed through the dispatch case, right through the gas pipe, then had entered Elliott's left arm, shattering the bone, passed on into his left side, pierced both lobes of the left lung and finally buried itself in his back.

We had been shot at by an Arab and the noise of the explosion that we had heard had been the firing of the gun at close range.

I received an order from the Air Force directing me to go out to the airdrome, about 20 miles away, so that on the following morning, at dawn, I could lead a squadron of airplanes to the place where the tragedy had occurred.

About twelve o'clock that night there was a telephone call from the hospital. When I answered it I could not understand, or, at least, could not believe what the operator was telling me, and so handed the receiver over to the commanding officer, who slowly repeated the words: "Elliott passed away at 11.45."

The news was a terrible shock to me, for I had no idea that he would succumb to the wounds.

The Arab Assassin Is Captured.
I waited until 4 a.m., and then, as dawn came, we took off, and by retracing my route of the previous day I came to the spot where I felt sure the gun had been fired.

One of the officers, who was in another machine, on a signal from the commanding officer, landed. He ascertained from a local encampment that tribes had been there the previous day. That started the investigation which resulted in the ultimate capture of the culprit, who later confessed, his only excuse being that he wouldn't have committed the crime if he had had any idea that he was going to be found out.

Some of these tribes have been in the habit of raiding the villages in that part of the world for centuries, but recently they have had their activities curtailed by the Royal Air Force. Thus many have no love for airplanes, and this, I suppose, was the animus back of the action.

After this terrible tragedy, which meant the loss of one of the world's finest aircraft-maintenance engineers, I did not want to continue the flight, but cables received from England, especially those from Sir Samuel Hoare, Sir Charles Wakefield, and from my wife, all expressing sympathy, urged me to proceed. I decided that I would complete the job.

The Air Force sent me a substitute mechanic, Sergeant Ward, of the Royal Air Force, who was serving with his squadron near Basra. And so, a fortnight later, we continued the journey.

Owing to the lack of sunshine beyond Iraq, we found it difficult to get any aerial pictures on the Australian flight, and it was not until we arrived in Java that we met with regular sunshine.

I shall always have a vivid memory of our arrival in Melbourne, where more than 150,000 people had gathered to meet us. It was with difficulty that we could find space enough to get down on the airdrome, for we had changed over from a seaplane to wheels on arrival at Darwin, in northern Australia.

If it had not been for the police and the Australian Air Force I shudder to think of what might have been our fate had the enthusiastic crowd got hold of us.

Torrential Rains Impede Return to London.

The homeward journey, when our craft was once more converted back to a seaplane, was beset with difficulties, especially when we were caught in the monsoon storms in the region of Victoria Point. Here the rain fell five inches a day, and at times it was impossible to see more than 20 yards ahead. Whereas the rainfall in England averages about 30 inches over the twelve months, the annual rainfall along the Burma coast, where it all comes within a period of about five months, is anything up to 300 inches!

At last we got back to London, and ended our 23,000-mile flight of survey by landing on the Thames opposite the Houses of Parliament.

I look forward to the day when it will be possible for all mankind to enjoy the delights of flying such as have been my privilege during the past seven years.

It seems hardly fair

Fathers and mothers used to look forward bravely, but not always happily, to the time when the boys and girls would go away to school in a distant city. It so often meant a break in the habits of home life—a sore trial.

Thanks to Long Distance—the boys and girls at school or college can still be kept within the family circle.

But don't expect them to pay for Long Distance calls out of their slender allowances. That seems hardly fair. The demands upon their none too fat purses are too frequent and too insistent.

Fix a day and hour when you will call them, and you'll find them eager to talk with you and welcoming the voice that can best cheer them on their way.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS DAY

In connection with the above a Special meeting is being called by Mayor H. M. Gall, in order that organization may be arranged and planned, on Saturday night, at 8.30 in the Victoria Hall, to which a large attendance is requested.

As a means of securing the widest possible interest and support of the "League of Nations Society in Canada," a Nation-wide appeal from "COAST TO COAST" will be made each year at the same time of the year, the day to be known as

"LEAGUE OF NATIONS DAY"

The first Tuesday after the 15th day of April each year has been selected as being the most suitable. Vimy was fought on April 9th, and the first engagement in the Great War in which Canadian troops took part was on April 23rd.

It seems appropriate that at this time of commemoration of these great days of sacrifice some special effort should be made in the cause of

PEACE AND DISARMAMENT.

The widest possible participation of citizens is to be secured so that the work of the may become known to young and old.

The Drive will assist the League of Nations Society in Canada in carrying on the work of giving information about the League of Nations to the Canadian people and bring home to the people of Canada the vital part that Canada has now to play in international affairs.

INDIAN PRINCES WELCOME MOVE TO CLEAR STATUS

Some Contest British Right to Force Abdication or to Inquire Into Conduct; Frequent Appeals Made

PEOPLE'S NEEDS SET FORTH

Survey Expected to Cover Grievances of the States' Population; Prices Soar

London.—The recent announcement of the Viceroy that the Secretary of State for India has appointed a committee to go into the question of the relation of the Indian princes with the British government is welcome news to the ruling princes of India. Considerable anxiety has prevailed in their minds during recent Vice-royalties owing to the difficulties in the way of securing settlements of certain outstanding matters. Of course their position precludes them from pursuing methods other than those of secret and tactful diplomacy, whereas the politicians of British India have no such limitations and are free to resort to any measures of agitation to secure their desires.

After the close of Lord Curzon's strong-handed regime, Lords Minto, Hardinge and Chelmsford pursued a policy of "peaceful procrastination" with regard to the individual and collective contentions of Indian princes. After them Lord Reading made a point of facing the situation and announced decisions which Lord Curzon himself might have envied. His reply to the Nizam of Hyderabad on the question of the rendition of Berar, and to the Gaekwar of Baroda with regard to his claim of suzerainty over the Jamnagar and other Kathiawar states are judicial documents containing memorable dicta which the princes could scarcely have relished. In the former document Lord Reading observed: "The suzerainty of the British Crown is supreme in India, and no ruler of an Indian state could justifiably claim to negotiate with the British government on an equal footing."

Princes Cling to Old Status.

The remark stands like a truism nowadays, but some of the princes, like those of Hyderabad, Bhopal and Cashmere, treasure the idea that not many decades ago their ancestors held the same relation to the imperial government that King Amanullah of Afghanistan and King Fuzul of Egypt now do, and that since there has been no open conquest of their dominions since then the old relationship must be deemed to continue.

Historically the growth of imperialism in India falls into three periods. In the first period, or up to 1813, the pressure of Parliament and prudence of the merchant company enforced a policy of non-intervention. Next, from 1814 to 1857, schemes of empire engaged the Governors General. The policy adopted was one of isolating the native states and subordinating them to the ascendancy of the paramount power. The expression "mutual alliance" gave place to "subordinate alliance." After the mutiny of 1857 the Viceroy, Lord Canning, said: "The Crown became unquestioned ruler in all India," and from that date prevention, guidance and correction became the aim of the Viceroy.

The third period is now under way, so far as the imperial policy is concerned, but the treaty documents in the possession of some of the major princes do not seem to be specifically assertive of that policy. The present trouble is, therefore, that they are interpreted in one way by the political department and in another way by the ruling princes concerned.

Dissatisfaction Often Voiced.

Consequent on this, many times during recent years the Secretary of State has frequently been appealed to by one dissatisfied ruler or another, as for instance, the Gaekwar of Baroda regarding his suzerainty over the Kathiawar princes, Jamsahab claiming to develop his ports as against Bombay, the Begum of Bhopal regarding the question of succession, and so on.

It is further contended by the princes that when one of them is guilty of malpractice or of maladministration the British government has no right to inquire into his conduct or to require him to abdicate. This contention was put forth during the Indore inquiry, at the time of the Nabha abdication, and more recently in the case of the Maharaja of Bharatpur.

In 1915, when the Montford reforms were on the wane, a princes' conference voiced the complaints loudly on this matter; whereupon Lord Chelmsford's government asked them to point out specific instances in which the powers of the political department had been aggrandized at the expense of the states.

The granting of financial autonomy to the Indian Legislature, in the constitution of which the states have no part, has swept the latter into an elaborate tariff maze, and as a result the cost of living in the Indian states has increased, without the corresponding industrial development which a tariff wall is expected to encourage, because the tariff revenue goes in full to the Indian exchequer. The terms of the reference to the Indian States Committee indicate an inquiry into this question also.

All these various problems make a very thorough investigation necessary and require statesmanlike conclusions. Lord Irvin has taken a most commendable step in securing the appointment of the committee. The objects of the committee in the words of the announcement, are:

"to report upon the relationship between the paramount power and the Indian states, with particular reference to the rights and obligations arising from treaties, engagements, sanads, and usage, suzerainty and other causes, and, secondly, to inquire into the financial and economic relations between British India and the states, and to make any recommendations that they may consider desirable or necessary for their more satisfactory adjustment."

People Voice Grievances.

The relationship to be inquired into is made out here to be a tripartite or triangular one—i.e., the British government, British India and the Indian states. There is no reference to the subjects of the Indian states, who number more than 70,000,000. It is commonly known that in most of the states the condition of the people is unbearable and that official administration hardly gives them any security of person and property. It is only during late years that the people of some of the worst governed states have made bold to assemble in some town in British India and voice their grievances. It would be benevolent if the committee extended the scope of its inquiry so as to comprise also this aspect of the important problem. Lord Irvin's humane sympathies, as well as Sir Harcourt Butler's regard for popular welfare are sure to recognize the need for action in this matter. In that case the Indian States Committee will be of wider benefit and importance than if it is concerned merely with the personal claims and clamors of the princes.

Graduate Studies At the University Of Toronto

The University of Toronto is gaining wide recognition for the opportunities which it offers to college graduates to pursue post-graduate studies and research work. The Provincial University has always encouraged advanced and specialized studies, but in comparatively recent times the enrolment has increased so greatly that a re-organization of the whole field became necessary in 1922, when the School of Graduate Studies was established with Dr. McMurich, Professor of Anatomy, as Dean.

In 1920 there were 155 students enrolled. This year there are slightly over 400. While the large majority of students are graduates of the University of Toronto, there are men and women from over thirty other universities and colleges. Fifteen universities and colleges in Canada are represented, among these the western universities are conspicuous with a total of twenty-nine students of whom eleven come from British Columbia. The provision of scholarships to assist students from the west, primarily, accounts in part for the relatively large number drawn from those provinces. Many other countries and nationalities are represented; for instance, Russia contributes three young men who are studying the Canadian science of Agriculture, and a young woman, native of India, is doing medical research work. The high reputation which this University holds throughout the world may be judged when it is realized that the foreign students select Toronto after investigating what other institutions of higher learning have to offer.

Candidates, who have the requisite entrance requirements, are accepted for the courses leading to the following degrees: Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.), Master of Arts (M.A.), Doctor of Medicine (M.D.), Master of Surgery (Ch.M.), Master of Applied Science (M.A.Sc.), Master of Architecture (M.Arch.), Civil Engineer (C.E.), Mining Engineer (M.E.), Mechanical Engineer (M.E.), Electrical Engineer (E.E.), Chemical Engineer (Chem.E.), Metallurgical Engineer (Met.E.), Doctor of Pedagogy (D.Paed.), Forest Engineer (F.E.), Master of Science in Agriculture (M.S.A.), and Master of Science in Dentistry (M.Sc. Dent.).

Nitrate of Soda For Strawberries.

Tests made for several seasons at the Kentville, Nova Scotia, Experimental Station show that, under the soil conditions of the district, 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre applied broadcast after strawberry plants have started growth in the spring will materially increase the yield of fruit. Heavier applications have not been as profitable. In the four years during which the experiments were conducted, land on which 300 pounds per acre of nitrate of soda was spread produced at the rate of 7,510 quarts of strawberries per acre. When the applications were at the rate of 100 pounds per acre the production averaged 7,000 quarts, while the land receiving no nitrate of soda gave an average of only 4,009 quarts of fruit per acre.—Issued by the Director of Publicity, Dom. Dept. of Agriculture.

Difficulties Experienced Due to Blanket Effect of Tun-

Bridges

Despite the fact that the train was speeding along at more than forty miles an hour on its way from Boston to Montreal, regardless of daylight and the hilly country through which the road lay, passengers in the parlor car of this train were being entertained in a most novel fashion. From the loudspeaker at the end of the car issued forth music from New York and Schenectady with a volume which was easily heard by the holder of the rear-most seat. And if at any time any passenger wished to listen more closely to the concert he had but to put on the earphones which hung beside his seat.

As nightfall gathered and the music became even louder, reception improving with a greater choice of stations as a result, a feeling of admiration and awe became prevalent through the car. To pick up entertainment, such as this, with as good a quality of tone and as small an amount of interference as one has in one's parlor at home, seemed incredible. The most skeptic on the subject of radio on moving trains would have been entirely convinced.

Seventy-Six Cars Equipped

The government-owned railway of Canada operates seventy-six cars similarly equipped on its runs from coast to coast. Practically any of the longer trips to Canada may now be made more pleasant with the entertainment afforded by the radio.

Whether one travels in the east or west of Canada on the Canadian National Road, and a parlor car is attached one can be fairly sure that there is also a radio operator and a radio receiver aboard. A box antenna extending the length of the car and about seven inches above the metal roof, gives the clew from the outside of the entertainment to be had within. The aerial is supported on glass insulators above the roof, which is also the ground for the receiver, thus allowing but a very short distance between aerial and ground. At the place nearest the position of the radio receiver the aerial is tapped and a lead-in brought to the set.

The receiver is housed in an upright cabinet, being a separate unit loosely placed in the cabinet. Above and below the place for the receiver there is room for batteries and accessory apparatus, while on top of the cabinet in the cone loudspeaker. As mentioned before there is a pair of earphones plugged in at each seat, the fittings for these plugs being specially built into the car and the wiring to the receiver is behind the panels. The number of phones used varies as to the number of seats, from twenty-eight to forty being used. These are connected to the number in sets of five, each five phones being hooked up in series, and each set in parallel.

Sets Used

In most of the cars the receiver used is a four-tube reflex, doing the duty of a six-tube set, with a three stage power amplifier for use with the loudspeaker. This receiver is specially made for the railway company and is not found on the market although at one time it was among the sets on sale to the public. The choice of his set and the five-tube neutrodyne of the same make on the newer cars, such as the Boston-Montreal, was only made after exhaustive tests had been conducted with a great variety of receivers. Loop aerials and super-heterodynes were found to be useless on moving trains, especially steel cars, which make up the majority of those on the Canadian lines. There are still sets being tried out for new cars, and all the cars being built as parlor cars are now wired for the purpose while under construction.

To insure the passengers of good reception a radio operator is carried on each radio-equipped car. These are in the main young men, specially trained to use radio receivers on the trains, and they know with a nicety what to expect on a run and where to find those stations quickly without too much interference from telegraph lines and power lines coming in during their hunt. In fact, while looking for another station they will disconnect the phones and loudspeaker and plug in their own headset.

These young men, some of whom are government licensed wireless operators, are uniformed and instructed in the interesting points on their run, so as to be able to inform travellers what this or that interesting landmark is.

Difficulties in Reception

It is interesting to listen to the concerts critically when going through cuttings and tunnels and over steel bridges. Each of these structures has a tendency to blot the music out, sometimes noticeably and at other times barely perceptibly. Power lines also cause some trouble, and at some stations it is necessary to turn the set off, due to the interference caused by the telegraph dispatcher.

Although a few railroads in the United States also carry radio-equipped cars, none of the companies has gone into the system in the same manner as the Canadian National Railways. Trains operating into the United States from Canada are now being equipped, notably those from Montreal to Boston and from Toronto to Chicago. The service, now three years old, is greatly appreciated by travellers, many of whom voice their appreciation to the operator at the termination of their trip.

Carillon Made for New Baptist Temple in New York is the Heaviest Set of Ten Ever
Chimed or Rung

Croydon.—Two thousand bell ringers from all parts of England listened recently while a new bell with a voice deeper and more resonant than Big Ben boomed out from the Croydon bell foundry for the first time. It was the eighteen and a quarter ton bell, the largest ever cast in England, which has been made for the Carillon of the Park Avenue, the Baptist's new Temple in the Riverside Drive, New York (whose pastor is the Rev. Dr. Harry E. Fosdick).

Slowly the gigantic bell began to swing while four men pulled a rope with all their might. With each swing the bell gathered momentum and soon the massive clapper struck the bronze side. The resulting tone seemed to roll up from the depths of the earth, and the vibration was such that it seemed as if all the air was in motion under the roof of the foundry shed.

As the tolling grew more insistent, crowds stopped in the street outside, wondering what the stentorian voice could mean, for even when the giant in Parliament Tower speaks, his tone is not quite so commanding.

The chiming of nine other great bells, all destined for the Riverside Drive tower, rang out also against the walls of the foundry and were heard far across Croydon Fields.

They are the heaviest set of ten bells with consecutive notes ever rung or chimed. Their weight is four and one-half times that of the set of twelve in St. Paul's, in London, hitherto the heaviest in the world. The big bell for the Riverside temple is the fourth largest in existence and the biggest ever tuned for chiming.

Crowds of visiting bell ringers stood in wonderment in front of the massive bell, as if it could not be real. Some of these men had come from sleepy little villages in the country, from churches like the famous one of Stoke Poges, whose curfew bell inspired Gray's Elegy.

One visitor with a wrinkled face and a fringe of white beard under his chin had come from an obscure village in North England, where he has been ringer for almost sixty years. He had begun ringing on an ancient hand-chiseled bell in a wooden steeple, with their feet never dreaming of such a creation as he saw.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and other church dignitaries were present at the foundry as a tribute to the Guilds of Bell Ringers—the "change ringers" as they are called here. Formed entirely of volunteers from congregations who have an ear for music and an enthusiasm for this hobby, these guilds have been a unique feature in English church life for three centuries.

In chiming and harmonizing the bells the most beautiful results came from the magnificent carillon of twenty-three bells made for the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn. This carillon, with a tone as mellow as the ancient Belgian bells, is played on a keyboard much like an organ and requires little more physical strength than a big organ.

It can give two chromatic octaves, with the exception of the two lowest semitones—an achievement not equalled by the medieval carillons which were not tuned accurately for pealing in harmony.

The Rockefeller carillon when complete (the dome of its bells is already in New York) will be still more remarkable, with a range of five octaves.

Other American bells which the bell-ringers of England saw in various stages of completion, included a carillon of forty-eight for Norwood, Mass.; twenty-three for a Cincinnati church and eight additional bells for the Cohasset, Mass., tower.

The Wrigley Swimming Marathon Trophy is a perpetual trophy to be competed for each year. The first Wrigley Marathon was held off Catalina Island, and won by George Young, of Toronto. The second Wrigley Marathon was held at Toronto and was won by Ernst Vierkoetter, of Berlin, Germany. The third Wrigley Marathon will be held in 1928, either in Canada or the United States. The Wrigley Trophy is a reproduction in sterling silver of the famous "Flying Mercury" modeled by Giovanni da Bologna. The position of the figure is changed to show Mercury presenting to Father Neptune a wreath. Neptune with his trident, dolphins and water surrounding are in bronze. The figure Mercury contains over 1,000 ounces of silver. In addition to the big trophy there will be provided annually a replica in sterling silver and bronze, to be presented to the city where the Marathon is held.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhoea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Poincare Sure France Not to Blame

Wishes to Prove France Was Not Instigator of World War

Paris.—Premier Raymond Poincare is determined to delve deep into the French archives and to publish documents relative to the origin of the war. His determination took tangible form yesterday when the committee appointed in January by governmental decree met for the first time and planned the immediate editing of two volumes.

Poincare personally is interested in the production of proof to clear France of charges that she started the war. Poincare's visit to Russia immediately before the war always is cited by the German historians as an indication that he (then President of France) was brewing trouble.

Foreign Minister Aristide Briand has informed the committee that all the archives of the Foreign Office are at its disposition including many hitherto kept in strict secrecy.

The committee has decided that its report will cover the period 1871-1914—from the end of the Franco-Prussian war to the beginning of the Great War. It will begin the editing of two series, the first covering events from 1901 to November, 1911, the second from that date until August, 1914. After that it will include the third series, taking in the 30 years from 1871 to 1901.

A Well-Known Canadian Jurist Reviews Sacco-Vanzetti Case

The full proceedings of the Sacco-Vanzetti case were submitted to the Hon. William Renwick Riddell, Justice of the Court of Appeals, Ontario, and Honorary Member of the American Bar Association, and he gives his view of the case in March Current History Magazine. His conclusions, summarized, are as follows:

"1. That no evidence was wrongly excluded or admitted.

"2. That the evidence which was considered to be so fatal to the accused (to the effect that they were Radicals) was given by themselves against the advice of the trial judge in necessary explanation of their previous 'wholesale lying'."

"3. That neither Judge nor prosecuting counsel was guilty of misconduct before the jury.

"4. That there was a fair trial.

"5. That there was ample evidence upon which a jury might convict.

"6. That there is nothing but subsequent declamation and vituperation to suggest prejudice or failure to perform their duty on the part of the jury.

"7. That the refusal of the motions for a new trial cannot be held erroneous.

"8. That the great delay in executing the sentence was due to the motions made by the condemned men and the extraordinary tenderness of the law of Massachusetts in respect of one convicted of crime applying to her courts for protection from injustice."

Justice Riddell analyzed all the documents with a detached mind and states he had never met the trial judge or any of the participants in the trial.

Too bad Colonel Lindbergh couldn't have hopped over to Europe in 1914 and converted that World War into a fraternal get-together celebration.

Emigration of Britons Discussed

Hesitation Over Absorption in Canada is Deplored—Regard British as Flow-er of World Immigrants

London.—Henry Page Croft in the course of a letter in the "Morning Post," with reference to emigration says:

"It is a strange thing that while the Dominions' need, above everything else, a greater population and a larger number of taxpayers and rate-payers to get increased purchasing power in their home markets, the United States apparently regard the British as the flower of the world immigrants and the new American immigration bill is more than doubling the quota of British."

"It is surely, then, deplorable that while the United States thinks it fit to double the quota of British there is hesitation and difficulty of absorption of our people among our own kith and kin. Perhaps much of this low man-power of the British Empire is due to a lack of appreciation of the benefits derived from the settlement overseas of our own folk. The suggestion was recently made that an Empire Settlement Publicity Board be appointed on the line of the Empire Marketing Board, but helpful only if the operations are extended to the Dominions—perhaps the most desirable thing to do in connection with the new Empire Settlement Bill in the House of Commons is to alter the 50-50 principle so that the Secretary of State shall have power to contribute on a discretionary basis up to 96 per cent."

Pringle Challenged

James Spence, of the Royal Colonial Institute, in a letter to the "Daily Telegraph," challenges the allegation of C. Pringle that Canada presently prefers Central Europeans to Britishers. He says: "Can Pringle reconcile his observations with the utterance of any responsible statesman in Canada?" The assertion of preference for immigrants of British stock is incessant, and the British, especially the Scot, has shown repeatedly he is capable of adapting himself to the difficult conditions of prairie farming, provided he is of the type on which Canadians rightly insist.

AVOID THE PAINS OF RHEUMATISM

This Trouble Comes Through Weak, Watery Blood

Many people suffer rheumatic pains that could be avoided by building up the blood. Rheumatism comes with thin, watery blood, and can only be driven out of the system by enriching and purifying the blood. To make rich, red blood no medicine equals Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new blood, driving out all poisonous secretions and creating a condition of robust health. Thousands of rheumatic sufferers can testify to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Among them is Mr. Jos. A. Tully, Bobcaygeon, Ont., who says:—"As a worker in the woods for years I was exposed to all kinds of rough wintry weather. The result was that I was finally laid up with rheumatism. I could hardly stir, and was confined to bed. Medicine seemed to have little or no effect and the best encouragement the doctor gave me was that with the coming of warm weather I would be better. But instead of getting better, I grew worse. My joints were badly swollen, and my legs so stiff they would hardly support my body. At this stage I read that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended for rheumatism and decided to try them. The results were beyond my expectations. After a few weeks the swelling had disappeared and the stiffness gradually wore away, and much sooner than I expected all traces of rheumatism had disappeared. The next winter when I went into the wood I took a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with me, and they kept me in the best of condition. My experience should give encouragement to other rheumatic sufferers."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Russia's New Educational Program

"The new Soviet school system is being built up with the interests of the contemporary child, the child's concrete environment and experience as a basis," writes Mme. N. K. Krupskaya, Lenin's widow and officer in the Soviet Ministry of Education, in March Current History. "The object of this educational program is to teach the relation between nature, the working activity of man and the social system, set forth on the basis of very simple concrete facts. . . . The instruction aims to keep in touch with the life of the people, with what both the grown-ups and the children hold closest to their hearts. . . . The material taught is linked up with practical work in the school and at home, and the children study such subjects as helping the pre-school pupils, the organization of minors, the teaching of reading and writing to the illiterate population, the distribution of newspapers, sanitation, new methods of cultivation and caring for animals. Training in workshops and factories is also part of the program but has not been worked out as fully due to lack of resources. . . . Harsh treatment of the children in school is strictly forbidden and school discipline is inculcated in the inner consciousness of the pupils rather than maintained by force, thus affording valuable training in self-government."

Evolution Teaching Still Live Issue

"Although it is continually asserted that the Dayton trial and Bryan's death ended the teaching of evolution, this is far from being the case," asserts Maynard Shipley, President of the Science League of America, in March Current History Magazine. "Not only has Mississippi passed a bill on the same lines as Tennessee's, but the Tennessee law has been proclaimed constitutional. Louisiana, Arkansas and Florida have passed anti-evolution acts in the lower house, which only prompt playing of politics prevented from passage in the Senate. Moreover, such a bill in Missouri obtained a very respectable and dangerous minority in its favor and in several proud Northern and Western States there was, in 1927, far more anti-evolution sentiment than those not specially concerned with research into the situation could readily imagine. The mere fact that bills were before fourteen States in one year sounds ominously like the first decided effort toward the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment."

17 Countries Still Permit Slave System

Up to 5,000,000 Slaves Said to Be Employed by Backward Nations

London.—Although those born under the flag of Great Britain are born free, there are to-day 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 slaves, and 17 countries in which the slave system still exists."

Sir Henry Bentinck made this grave assertion at a matinee of the film version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the London Pavilion. In Abyssinia, Sir Henry continued, there were 2,000,000 slaves. These were obtained by the same old methods of slave trading, by bands of armed men entering peaceful villages and carrying off the inhabitants. Agyassinia, as a member of the League of Nations, had agreed to abolish slavery within her borders, but owing to confusion and misrule the slave system in that country has got worse rather than better.

In China there were no less than 2,000,000 slaves who continued in subjection owing to the present confusion in spite of the fact that China was also a member of the League of Nations.

Not long ago, in Geneva, all the nations of the world formed a convention and agreed to abolish slavery. So far the countries had not agreed to declare slave trading on the sea as piracy. There was still much work, therefore, for England and America to do in the way of liberating slaves.

Afghan Ruler Sees Mock Battle

Lulworth, Dorset, England.—Modern methods of western warfare are "unromantic and terrifying" in the opinion of King Amanullah of Afghanistan, the fighting methods of whose native country are still largely of a primitive nature.

The King who went down in a submarine at Portsmouth motored here from Bournemouth with Queen Soraya and watched a mock battle of British tanks on a windswept hillside. The Afghan monarch produced a pocket camera and took several snapshots of the tanks in action, this being the first time that he has carried a camera in public.

CHATHAM WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The members of the Chatham Women's Institute met in the Social Club
Brownsburg, on Thursday afternoon, the 5th. April. A very interesting and instructive address was given by Mrs. Lonsdale, entitled "Emergencies and their requirements," dealing with things we ought to know, especially in Rural districts, where it is not always possible to get immediate medical attention.

I once heard it said, that Women's meetings are divided into two classes. There were the Motor buses which always went ahead and did the work, and there was the go-cart, which had to be pushed into action.

Now I am perfectly sure our members belong to the former class, and are real live active women, willing to spend and be spent, for the benefit of the people in our Community.

The sick among us are visited and this Easter nice plants have been forwarded to sick members, to assure them that they are lovingly remembered. Persons in need were helped to the best of our ability.

Every member being so willing to do their part in making the Institute a force in this community.

When meeting adjourned a very delicious tea was served by Brownsburg ladies, and a sociable half hour was spent and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Next meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon, the 3rd. May at 2.30 o'clock prompt.

97 Men Die Poor!

Out of every 100 men, only 3 achieve a sufficient competence to retire to a comfortable, independent old age.

It should not be so when one considers how small a sum invested annually for a few years in an Imperial Endowment Policy will ensure a competence for a man's declining years. Yet we continually see and hear of old folks slaving for a meagre living or depending upon the charity of friends or children for support.

You don't want to come to that do you?
Then write us today for a copy of our interesting booklet entitled "Penniless Old Men." You will be astonished to learn from it how easily you can now provide for your comfort and independence in your later years.

More POWER than any other Engine of its Size

McLaughlin-Buick engine develops more power than other types because the valve-in-head construction concentrates the full force of the explosion directly on the piston and because it circulates a smaller cooling area. This latter feature also provides more efficient combustion and a valuable saving of fuel.

TESTS prove that the valve-in-head engine as used by McLaughlin-Buick develops more power than any other engine of its size.

The G. M. A. C. Deferred Payment Plan offers many advantages to buyers of McLaughlin-Buick cars.

NEW HIGH MARK FOR AUTO INDUSTRY

The first quarter of 1928 has already ended and the Automobile Industry is forging ahead some manufacturers swinging into near capacity and some into capacity production and it is expected that production and earnings for this period will surpass those of any previous quarter in the history of the industry. This prospect is being reflected in the tremendous trading of Motor Stocks.
The outstanding feature is the record of Chevrolet. Capacity production has been going on for several months with the demand still far in excess of output.
One third of the industry's total since Jan. 1st has been produced by Chevrolet. A total output for the quarter of $21,500 units is now certain, which will establish a new high mark.

The LAND OF FORGOTTEN MEN

by Edison Marshall

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Peter Newhall, Augusta, Ga., flees to Alaska, after being told by Ivan Ishmin, Russian violinist, he had drowned Paul Sarichef, Ishmin's secretary. He joins Big Chris Larson in response to a distress signal at sea, giving Larson his sea jacket. Their launch hits rocks. Larson's body is buried as Newhall's. Peter, rescued, finds injuries have completely changed his appearance.

Dorothy and Ishmin go to Alaska, to return Peter's body. They do not recognize Peter in their head guide. A storm strands them at the grave. Ishmin goes for supplies. Peter falls in a gully on a hunting trip. Dorothy finds her greatest happiness in rescuing him. Ishmin returns and Dorothy accepts his proposal and they are married by a native priest. Peter goes to give them best wishes. Paul Sarichef appears on the scene.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"You knew I was here. Of course the squaw described me, and you guessed who it was?"

"No. You knew I wouldn't have come if I'd known that. If I'd known it was you. I don't know why I came—except it was just because I couldn't help it."

Ivan's vivid eyes opened wide, then the lids dropped again. "Out with it, man. You've cooked your goose and have done all the damage you can. Is it blackmail? If not, what are you doing here?"

Sarichef straightened and sighed. "I was living on the other side of the Peninsula. You knew that—and a few nights ago—I heard some one call me—some one told me to come here."

"You've good ears to hear across the Peninsula?"

"I don't expect you to understand," Sarichef returned with some dignity. "I'm trying to tell you—just how it was. A few nights ago I got the idea that some one wanted me—here—that some one was calling me. It came just as clear as an actual voice. I tried to turn away and disregard it, but somehow I couldn't. 'Paul Sarichef, Paul Sarichef,' the voice kept crying—and it told me to come here to this very spot. You know how a man obeys a hunch. That's what it was, I guess—a hunch—but I couldn't disregard it."

The grim smile flickered at Ivan's mouth again. "How many nights ago was this?"

"Four nights ago. I started the next morning, and halfway across I met old Sindy, with her back loaded with grub. She told me there were people here, needing help, and I offered to carry her pack on over and let her go back."

"Four nights ago!" Ivan turned and met the girl's fixed, startled gaze. "Dorothy, do you remember what happened four nights ago?"

"The seance!" the girl answered dully.

"The seance! You haven't forgotten, have you, that you asked to speak to Paul Sarichef—and that Fortune Joe called him? You remember how all of us felt the tension as he broadcast that silent call? Sarichef was not in the spirit world, but he answered just the same. He came, and he doesn't know why. Was it hypnotism or some other occult thing, or was it just blackmail—who can say?"

But the wonder of this mystery could not long obscure the real issues that faced this baffled trio in the fire's glow. They stood silent, as if listening to the sea and the wind, but their thoughts moved in sweeping circles. The two packers, curious but wholly failing to understand, moved and rustled in the darkness like wild beasts; and enveloped in a deep, strange calm that was reflected in his immobile face and quiet eyes, Pete watched the slow unfolding of the drama.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE "DEAD" HAS RISEN.

Ivan turned abruptly from Sarichef, and smiling faintly in appeal, stepped in front of Dorothy. Her wide-open eyes fixed on his thin, stark-white face; but her expression did not change, and she was so baffled and estranged by what had occurred that at first she seemed hardly aware of him. He reached for her hands, but she put them away from him.

"Don't draw away," he urged quickly. He spoke softly now, for her ears alone. "Dearest, you must forgive me."

"I can't forgive you," was her subdued answer. She spoke without inflection, almost in that muttered monotone with which one talks in sleep.

"You must. It's the only possible course. You must realize that I don't expect you to forget right away—even to vindicate me until I've at least won you to my point of view—but you must forgive. Don't you see it was all for you?"

"I am aware that I charged Peter with a crime he didn't do—that I caused him to flee, and that while he was gone he died. But, Dorothy, this world is of the living. When people are dead they cease to be, so far as the living world is concerned. You have found happiness in me; don't lose it again for an evil done long ago. Don't let the dead past shadow the living present."

"Every man does wicked deeds, only most of them don't get caught. Many and many a man wants to do wicked deeds that he doesn't dare to do—to gain his ends. Other men have loved you, and have wished desperately that Peter would die and leave you free—but they haven't loved you enough—they didn't have the courage to make their wish come true. You know your Christian teaching—that there is no distinction drawn between him who wants to do evil and him who really does it. The thing I did many men would have been glad to do, if they had dared to take the risk."

He paused, and the girl started to turn away. Ivan held her gently, his hands at her arms just below her shoulders. "I don't want to talk about it," she told him.

"But you must hear me, Dorothy. I wanted you, and I had to have you. I loved you enough to risk my reputation, to do evil to a respected friend, in order to win you. Don't you realize that this showed a love of which your Anglo-Saxon men would be wholly incapable? Poor Peter was the victim—but he has gone now, and you must seek your happiness in me, your husband!"

"My husband!" the girl echoed, as if the thought were incredible to her.

"Yes. You are my wife. You don't owe any more loyalty to Peter—only to me. When you married me you took me for better for worse—and that means you take my past crimes on your head. You share everything with me, and that means you share my past, too. It will go hard at first, and you will be bitter; but I want you to put it out of your mind. You've got to be my partner now, even in my evil deeds. Dorothy, I want you to respect, rather than scorn that quality of unconquerable purpose in me that won't let me forego the things that I want; and particularly I want you to remember that it was all for you. The thing is cloed and done, part of the dead past; and I want you to put it out of your mind."

The girl straightened and sighed. "I wish you'd go away," she said dully. "I can't forget it, and never can, and I can't forgive it. Everything is over between us. Now let me go—I'm going into my tent."

His hand pressed more tightly at her shoulders, and he looked meaningfully into her eyes. "Into our tent," he corrected easily.

The girl shook her head; but her expression did not change. "No. I renounce our marriage. My door is closed to you forever." At this point her slim body straightened, and her voice—though it did not increase in volume—took on a hushed, unmistakable tone of emphasis. "Understand everything clearly, Ivan, now as well as later. I don't consider myself your wife from now on. I'm going to my tent—you must go to yours. Your hands have no longer any right to hold me. Tomorrow the guides and I will go away in the dory, in search for the settlements. If you want to come you may, but it won't be as my husband, and you must never appear in the United States again. You've asked me to choose between my husband's honor and you, my husband's murderer. I don't see how you can wonder at my answer. When I get home I will tell the whole truth and try to clear Peter's name, and take the smirch off his memory."

At this point she paused, faltering; and for one brief instant she did not know the cause of the sudden wind of terror that blew through her being, closing her throat and choking back her brave words. In that instant Ivan's attitude had changed. Outwardly there was little sign; possibly certain lines deepened on his white face and his vivid eyes looked dull red, like glowing, dying coals, under his fine brows. A wan smile, determined rather than cruel, curled at his lips.

It was not that he had misunderstood her words. He was not such a fool as to think this merely a burst of temporary indignation, soon to pass away. Dorothy had meant exactly what she said. Yet her opposition only made her more desirable to him, heightened the fire of his madness. His strong arms went about her and he pressed his lips to hers.

Pavlov, who watched from the mouth of the dugout, grunted softly, as if in reflection of his master's passion. Pete made one uneasy move in the shadows, but he was not yet sure of his course, and preparations were not yet complete, so he paused, waiting for what might befall. Dorothy struggled in a sudden frenzy of hate and scorn, as if the kiss had ravished her integrity. For a single instant Ivan held her helpless—just long enough to show her he was her master—then he let her go.

"Oh!" she breathed. "You wouldn't dare."

She halted because she was afraid to go on. Ivan was fully awakened now. He was shaking off the last vestiges of his conventionality as a dog shakes off water, and with it went the veneer that western civilization had bestowed upon him. This rock-ribbed waste of barrens beside the sea had always possessed a deep, stirring appeal for him; and tonight he yielded to it as never before. It called to his deeply hidden primitive side, and what was left him, there in the weird firelight, was altogether Asia.

The racial differences she had seen in him had been vague and of not great importance before; but now they estranged her and terrified her. (To be continued.)

British Economist Discusses Reparation

Berlin.—There is no reason to believe that the reparation question is one of the causes of the present economic depression in Europe, nor that it will become a difficult problem in the near future. W. T. Layton, publisher of the Economist and a well-known British economic expert, declared in a lecture before the Commercial High School here.

The sums Germany is paying as reparations were flowing back into the country in the form of foreign credits, he continued, and it would take a long time, in his opinion, until the securing of the necessary sums for payment of the interest became a serious problem.

When the United States becomes tired of lending money, other nations would be in a position to do so.

In this connection, Mr. Layton pointed to France and its increasing savings, which indicated that the world one day would have to reckon with that country as an issuer of foreign loans. Somebody's capital would always come to Germany; therefore there was no immediate cause for anxiety regarding reparations, Mr. Layton concluded.

Barnardi Attempts New Speed Record

Venice.—With the expiration of the three-day period of mourning for Lieut. S. M. Kinkadee, of England, Major Mario de Barnardi, holder of the world's speed record, was ready to attempt to create a new record.

He had to postpone his attempt because of a strong wind and rough sea, but will try to break his own mark of 298 miles an hour. Kinkadee was killed near Calshot, Eng., in an attempt to beat de Barnardi's record.

A HOLY WAR IN ARABIA

Fanatics in the Home of Fanaticism Work Themselves into Frenzy to Throw Out Unbelievers

ISLAM VS BRITAIN

Arabia—that furnace of fanaticism in which, for a thousand years, Islam has forged her thunderbolts—has been fanned once more into a flame of religious war. Abdul Aziz Ibn Abdur-Rahman ab Faisal ab Saud, to give him his full name, King of the Hedjaz, which includes the holy places of Mecca and Medina, and Sultan also of Nejd, his inland patrimony, has flung his wild Wahabi tribes against British influence at Kowett on the Persian Gulf to the east and Transjordan, the threshold of Palestine, to the west. And he has, curiously enough, started his offensive at a time when trouble faces Britain in Egypt.

It is an explosion wholly in the manner of Mohammed himself—first a fight for the true faith against the infidel and the heretic, and secondly an attempt at conquest of territory—Arabia for the Arabians, a Saracenic empire, to extend from the Mediterranean to the frontiers of Persia.

In the seventh and succeeding centuries the Arabs and their converts, the Turks, were able to carry fire and sword into the heart of Spain and to the gates of Vienna. That was because their military and political science was at least equal to any resistance offered to them. In the Middle Ages Ibn Saud might well have been a second Saladin. But today he is confronted by Western weapons, the airplane, the tank, artillery, prestige. He can be checked, and the probabilities are that, whether by arms or by negotiations or both, he will be.

A Romantic Eastern Chieftain.

Yet he is a chieftain whose every gesture evokes romance. A man in his forty-ninth year, he stands well over six feet in height. The perfect sheik, he spent his youth in the saddle, riding madly over the desert and with his rifle, achieving fame as a marksman.

By ancestry he was direct heir to the Sultanate of Nejd. If the capital, Riyadh, was held by the rival family of Rashid, the reason—according to Ibn Saud—was usurpation. Ibn Saud's first exploit was to put that

The Hashimites are Moslems. But they are Moslems in touch with and amenable to the West. Luxury, laxity, display—so it seemed to the Wahabites—were undermining the rectitudes of the true faith. A holy war was proclaimed, therefore, and in the Autumn of 1924 King Hussein vanished from Mecca. For a day or two his heir, Prince Ali, tried to occupy the vacant sovereignty, but he also disappeared. Ibn Saud entered the city in triumph and was accepted as King.

The British Policy.

The British acquiesced in the fait accompli and even continued to subsidize Ibn Saud. But there arose the question, once again, whether the victor would be satisfied even yet with his success, and if dissatisfied, what would be his next objective?

In the world of Islam the Sultans of Turkey have been Caliphs or Spiritual heads of the faith. With the deposition of the Sultans by the Turks themselves the Caliphate fell into abeyance. Shortly before his fall King Hussein, as trustee for Mecca, had declared himself Caliph, but there were other possibilities—the Aga Khan, the Amir of Afghanistan and the Sultan of Morocco among them—to say nothing of King Fuad of Egypt. The candidature of King Hussein, therefore, was unconfirmed when he fell into obscurity. There arose the question, therefore, whether Ibn Saud would follow his example. Would the Caliphate be his next acquisition? Clearly his territories in Arabia, consisting of the Hedjaz and Nejd, gave him a sufficient basis of temporal power on which to found such a claim.

He has decided on a very different initiative. Instead of using his position in order to impress the pilgrims who throng Mecca from points so distant as Java and Southern Africa, Ibn Saud has again seized the sword.

That his hand has been forced can hardly be doubted. The secret of his success has been religious impulse. That impulse was concentrated against any surrender of the pure practice of Islam to the influence of Lawrence Could Help.

A man of the stamp of Colonel Lawrence, who welded the Arab tribes together in the World War and thereby won great renown, would understand Ibn Saud. But there are larger than personal questions involved. Is it conceivable that the Mohammedanism of the Wahabites, however attractive may be the sincerity of it, will be able to avoid contact with a world-wide Islam of a less exacting type? Mecca can hardly expect to be the capital of certain principalities in Arabia. It is the goal of innumerable pilgrims whose health—to mention only one circumstance—must be subject to quarantine. A British Moslem, Lord Headley, told King Hussein plainly that if he had to stand bareheaded in the sun, it would be his death, and this rule, at any rate, had to be relaxed. So with smallpox, now raging in Syria.

In the Wahabites we see then the last defiant stand of those shock troops who, centuries before the Norman Conquest, carried the banner of the Prophet to ruthless victory, changing the history of mankind by a valor and a vengeance Amalekites in its ferocity and Amalekites in its racial origin.

The dignity of Ibn Saud is impressive. He sits impassive, listens intently, answers with deliberation. He does not deny that he has been responsible for massacres of civilians, for the seizure of property and for the demolition of shrines which are revered by millions of Moslems but condemned by Mahabli orthodoxy. But he argues that he has committed no act save what is in accordance with the Koran and that he has been subjected to provocation.

Queen Elizabeth, British Dreadnaught, Is Rammed

Valetta, Malta. — The collier Corinto, leaving the harbor here, collided with the stern of the British battleship Queen Elizabeth. Both ships were damaged. Admiral Keyes, ashore at the time of the accident, immediately went aboard.

The British super-dreadnaught the Queen Elizabeth, which was launched in 1913, played a romantic part in British naval activities during the World War. She was an oil burner and at the time of her launching was one of the most powerful vessels afloat. The Queen Elizabeth headed the Allied fleet which demolished the Turkish forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles in 1915 and took part in extensive bombardment operations at the Gallipoli peninsula. She was hit by Turkish shells during these operations and was damaged somewhat. Her eight 15-inch guns were reported to be the most accurate ever possessed by the British navy. The vessel was used in support of the troops which fought at Gallipoli. The Queen Elizabeth was the vessel aboard which the surrender of the German fleet was arranged at a conference between German and British representatives in November, 1918.

Unemployment in Canada

Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph (Ind.): Of all countries in the world Canada, by reason of her extremes of climate, has perhaps the greatest variation between the peaks of employment and unemployment in her basic industries. Yet no nation-wide organized effort has ever been made to devise means of stabilizing the situation.

New Engine For "Sport" Plane Is Planned by British Firm

London—One of the largest aero-engine manufacturers in England is about to undertake the production of two new types of motors. The first will be a high-efficiency engine suitable for a "sports" type of light plane. It will be similar in lay-out, size and weight to the Cirrus aero-engine, which are used extensively by the light airplane clubs and private owners, but it will develop from 100 to 120 horsepower. With this engine the fast single-seater light plane, fulfilling a similar purpose in the air that is fulfilled by the sports car on the roads, will become possible. It is believed that if a market for this type of plane does not now exist, it will soon be brought into being as the number of private owners and club members increases. The second engine will be of such superior power that it will be adaptable primarily to commercial services and "air taxis."

Cormorant Makes Delicious Fowl

Ottawa—The cormorant, a rare sea fowl which heretofore has been considered quite inedible, when properly prepared may make a delicious, palate-pleasing hors d'oeuvre, researchers carried on at the national museum here indicate.

This revelation came to light when a cormorant specimen was received at the museum from the New Brunswick coast. Members of the museum biological staff had heard that the flesh of the cormorant was very disagreeable to the taste but the cause of scientific research must be served and so the Maritime bird, a nine pound specimen, was cooked. Announcement that the cormorant was not as tough and inedible a fowl as it was believed to have been, was made after three naturalists of the museum staff had industriously munched the wings and drumsticks of the New Brunswick cormorant.

Prince of Afghanistan Is Latest Royal Student in Paris Lycee

Paris—This is a "royal school-house," Parisians are reminded through the discovery of another heir apparent wearing out the hard benches of a lycee. The French welcome these distinguished students, hoping they will spread the fame of France.

Prince Heydayat Ollah, son of Amanullah, King of Afghanistan, was found to be a student here when his royal father and mother recently visited France. He, like other future sovereigns of many countries, will then go to St. Cyr, the West Point of France, and learn all about war.

Vinh Thuy, young King of Annam, is still in school here. He went back to mount the throne after the death of his father two years ago, but has resumed his studies.

The late King Peter of Serbia was one of the most brilliant students of the French army school.

Prince Montvong, who became King of Cambodia last August, was educated in France, studied at St. Cyr and became an officer in the famous Foreign Legion in Africa to get practical military experience.

Scores of other royal personages have had much of their schooling in France.

Costermongers Now 'Traders'

London—Costermongers are no longer costermongers. They have chosen to be known as street traders. And the "Street Traders Bill" was official name of the function at which they entertained the Duke and Duchess of York, which in the past was known as the "Costers Ball."

The Lash for Bandits

Ottawa Journal (Cons.): Bandits of the United States must be made aware with certainty that when they cross into Canada they become subject to legal machinery that is swift and severe. The lash should be administered to such criminals on every occasion. And there need be no maddening sympathy for them. It may be taken for granted that armed blackguards of this type will shoot to kill without any regard for their victims. Gunmen in the United States are altogether too numerous for Canada to view with equanimity the transfer of their activities to this side of the border.

British Immigrants

Toronto Globe (Lib.): It will be well if Canada concentrates on British stock, for while the Continental immigrants profess an intention to go farming, experience has shown that thousands of them drift to the cities and swell the ranks of the unemployed, or menace the Canadian standard of living, once the watchful eye of the authorities is removed. . . . British settlers, plus the people of the French race who were already here, have proved a tower of strength in the development of the Dominion.

CAMEL CONVOY ON THE DESERT OF ARABIA

These are Wahabi tribesmen. There are conflicting and persisting rumors of trouble in that district.

major straight. The city was surprised, and, standing on the roof of the palace, a Mahabli warrior cried: "The kingdom belongs to Allah and to Ibn Saud!"

After this success the struggle between Ibn Saud and Ibn Rashid continued without intermission. One by one villages were visited by emissaries demanding tribute for "His Gracious Mightiness the Emir of Riyadh, Great Chief, to the glory of Allah, Sultan of Nejd." One by one the villages submitted. In Arabia Ibn Saud became the most dreaded of all potentates. To disobey him was to be obliterated. They who resisted were wiped out.

In manner he is gracious, polite, dignified. As a husband and father, he is kindly. But as a ruler, he has been inflexible. He stands for the fundamentals of Islam against all compromise.

Strict Livers.

In Nejd a man's life is forfeit if he neglects daily prayer at the mosque. To smoke tobacco, to drink fermented liquor, to wear soft raiment of silk and to covet gold and jewels—these also are deadly offenses. The rule is puritanical. The great mosque is undecorated. Even pilgrimages are forbidden. Nejd may be described as the Scotland of Arabia—a Scotland not without John Knox. It has meant that for the pent up energies of the Wahabites the only outlet has been war.

With the British Ibn Saud has lived hitherto on excellent terms. The British greatly preferred him to Ibn Rashid, who had favored the Turk. It was Ibn Saud therefore who received the subsidies, which among the cases indicate good feeling.

In the year 1923 there developed the question whether Nejd and the chieftainship over the Wahabites would satisfy the ambitions of Ibn Saud. There were other potentates than he in Arabia, and particularly obnoxious to him were the ubiquitous Hashimites.

For the simpleminded attitude of the Wahabites there is, after all, a logical reason. Their power depends absolutely—and they realize it—on the horse and the camel. Throw open Arabia to mechanical transit, and the peculiar activities of Nejd, which include a frequent toll on passing caravans, come to an end. The Arabia of Doughty—Arabia Infelix for the foreigner—ceases to be. Whether by reason or instinct, the Wahabites appreciate the position.

Also they are displaying what has always been the limitation of Islam. In their stern insistence on simple truths and simple lives, there is certain strength of character. The Wahabite methods are cruel, but in their own way these tribesmen are reformers. The trouble is, however, that, having destroyed abuses, they do not know how to reconstruct. In attack, their initiative is formidable, but except in attack they have no initiative at all. Attack is thus their only idea of policy.

An Arabia, antagonized and hostile, would be therefore a singularly unwelcome addition to Britain's responsibilities in the Middle East. She has Egypt on her hands, refusing to ratify any treaty except on the basis of the absolute independence, military and economic, which Britain is unwilling to concede. Also she has Palestine where Arabs are apt to be restive under the suspicion that Zionism, however carefully safeguarded, may threaten their influence over the country and their property therein.

It will be assumed, then, that Britain will do her utmost to adjust this latest situation with a minimum use of force. For several generations, her governing minds have liked and admired the Arab, and more import-

A large reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Murdoch, in Mabel, Que., on Tuesday evening, April 17th, in honour of the marriage of their son, Theodore (George), to Miss Ruby Nichols.

The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion and a very social evening was spent with dancing and singing.

The bride looked charming in a green beaded gown. The young couple were the recipients of many costly gifts as well as many cheques, including a $300.00 one from the bride's mother, and also a beautiful chesterfield lamp from the staff of the Royal Bank.

After the evening's entertainment a very dainty supper was served.

Previous to the wedding, the bride was the guest at five showers, given in her honour. A Cup and Saucer shower, by Miss R. Murdoch, Montreal; Linen Shower, by the bride's sister Mrs. Jas. McDonald, Montreal; Miscellaneous Shower by Mrs. Wark, Montreal; China Shower, by the bride's girl friends from the Royal Bank and a Kitchen Shower by Mrs. D. A. MacKenzie, of St. Maryville.

The amount of gifts show the esteem in which the young couple were held.

ANGELICAN CHURCH CONCERT.

As a mean of augmenting the funds in connection with the building of a church in Brownsburg, a concert will be given in the Princess Theatre, Brownsburg, on Tuesday, April 24th. This entertainment has been made possible through the kindness of our Lachute friends, who have volunteered their services gratis for the occasion. The show will consist of a presentation of the famous Mrs. Jarley's Waxworks, and we are in a position to state that the performance given recently in Lachute received the commendation of all who were fortunate to be present. The characters are called upon to maintain an immovable countenance for very lengthy periods, and after being duly wound up perform the various evolutions characteristic of mechanical toys and in keeping with the characters portrayed. The performance given by the Lachute players has been worked up to the pitch where it would be difficult to improve upon and we can assure all who intend seeing this part of the concert a real scream.

Then there will be an exceedingly funny comedy in two acts called "Mr. Bob". Those taking part in the play have devoted most of their spare time to the perfecting of this type of entertainment and have met with considerable success in their endeavours to provide the public with a real first class amateur rendition of the latest productions. Mr. Bob is a mirth provoking comedy with the laughter centering around an aunt who is very fond of cats. It would be unfair to single out one or two individuals as outstanding from the rest, all fit in with that precision, which characterizes good acting and good management. The admission will be at the popular prices of adults 35 cents and children 25 cents which includes amusement tax. Owing to the limited accommodation of the Theatre those desiring admission are urged to procure tickets in advance from members of the Anglican Church. The show will be first class, the charge for admission within the reach of all, and the object worthy of your support. Come along and share in the enjoyment of two hours real fun.

"SALADA" GREEN TEA

The LAND OF FORGOTTEN MEN by Edison Marshall

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Peter Newhall, Augusta, Ga., sees to Alaska, after being told by Ivan Ishmin, Russian violinist, he had drowned Paul Sarichef, Ishmin's secretary. He joins Big Chris Larson in response to a distress signal at sea, giving Larson his sea jacket. Their launch hits rocks. Larson's body is buried as Newhall's. Peter, rescued, finds injuries have completely changed his appearance.

Dorothy and Ishmin go to Alaska, to return Peter's body. They do not recognize Peter in their head guide. A storm strands them at the grave. Ishmin goes for supplies. Peter falls in a gully on a hunting trip. Dorothy finds her greatest happiness in rescuing him. Ishmin returns and Dorothy accepts his proposal and they are married by a native priest. Peter goes to give them best wishes. Paul Sarichef appears on the scene. Dorothy renounces the marriage and calls Ishmin her husband's murderer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

The slant of his smoky, shadowed eyes seemed, in her imagination, accentuated; she felt that the dread spirit of sleeping passion that was the soul of this strange, far-western night had passed to him, and was coming to life within him. The cultured gentleman, the distinguished, gracious social favorite that she had known in the South had passed away, in the fierce passion of this desperate hour, and only the Mongol was left, the ravisher out of Asia.

"I dare to anything—that is my right," he told her simply, no longer careful to lower his voice. "Dorothy, you are my wife. You are mine, and those kisses are mine. What I want I will take."

"But I told you I renounced that marriage—"

Ivan smiled, as if in perfect self-confidence. "You can't renounce it! A marriage lasts forever—from our point of view. She knew that he was speaking not alone of his particular tribe and country, but of the whole East. "You are my wife, legally and definitely; and never for a moment believe that this is a Western marriage. Please don't confuse me with a Westerner, or think that we will live by a Western code. I fancy you will find that we of the East look on womanhood a little differently from the men to whom you are accustomed, but you'll get used to it in time. I pleaded with you at first, which is not in the code; but I don't intend to plead with you any more. You are a Mongol's wife, and that means you will give what he asks, think what he says for you to think, and do what he says to do. In time you will learn it is the best way—to let your husband decide all these hard matters. Don't let there be any more talk of renunciation—of what you will do and what you will not do." He paused to steady his vibrant, tremulous voice. "Dorothy, we of the East do not worship the beauty and the rapture we get out of womanhood. Such is woman's place—to give us that. When a woman marries a man of my breed, he owns her—body and soul!"

He spoke in his usual rather quiet voice, yet she knew that the fire that consumed him was at a desperate height. He no longer attempted self-restraint. Asia was in dominance, and he moved toward her like a glorious tiger—the very spirit of Asia toward its prey.

"If you hold me again, I'll cry for help," she told him, half whispering. "Cry for help if you want to. I'll shoot Pete down like the Western cur he is if he dares to interfere. But I judge he's lived at this edge of the East long enough to learn not to interfere in a man's family affairs, those men know I'm in my rights—even your chivalrous Southerners would know that, whether they pretended to or not. Allow me to convince you just what good calling for help would do."

He half turned and called quietly to Pavlov. His tone was unmistakably that of an imperious master to his slave; he might have been an Oriental sultan calling to one of the eunuchs of his harem. Yet Pavlov did not take offense. He hurried, fawning, into the circle of light.

"My bride here is a little unruly," Ivan said easily. "You know how it is, sometimes, Pavlov. She's just a little nervous and rebellious—and I might need a very small amount of help."

Pavlov bowed slightly; but he did not speak. The lines seemed to deepen and strengthen on his dusky face as he waited for his orders; otherwise he gave no sign.

"We're going to change our plans, Pavlov," Ivan went on. "We're not going to the Outside, after all. I want you to be the head guide from now on, and I want you to guide us to one of the Esquimo villages—avoiding carefully all the white settlements. This lady and I are going to lose ourselves among the natives until she learns to think differently along certain lines. She objects somewhat to going, and I'm afraid that for a few days, until she gets the right point of view, we'll have to treat her like a prisoner. I might need you, from time to time, to help guard."

Pavlov nodded, but he showed no disrespect to his master by even the slightest glimmer of a leering smile. There was no help for Dorothy here. He seemed to take this strange situation wholly as a matter of course, just as Ivan had known he would take it; and Dorothy glimpsed again the great universe that separates the races.

"Of course I can depend on you?" Ivan asked.

"Sure. She's your wife. What you say goes."

"That's all for now. She might even attempt to escape from my tent tonight, but I don't think I'll need your help." He paused, waiting till the man moved back to his dugout. "You'll find the other breed's point of view just the same, Dorothy," he explained. "If you hadn't married me he'd be glad to fight for you. Now Put her down," he said slowly.

you're my wife he'll obey me. Of course Sarichef is my faithful servant—in everything. Are you convinced?"

There was no help here. Likely even Pete would admit the Mongol's ownership of her, body and soul. A single dry sob rasped at her throat, and she turned as if about to dart away in flight into the night and the storm. But even this doubtful mercy was not vouchsafed her. Ivan moved toward her, a motion fast as the leap of a tiger, yet giving no image of great exertion, and his arms pinned her to her side. Then, with no show of effort, he lifted her bodily and started into the tent.

Pete the guide stepped into the circle of firelight. His rifle rested in the hollow of his arm. His rugged, weather-beaten face was stark white.

"Put her down," he said slowly.

Ivan turned in infinite scorn, as he set the girl on her feet. He met the man's quiet, unflinching gaze. He saw, dimly, that the hand that held the weapon was steady as a vice of iron.

"You're taking a dangerous risk, Pete," he said evenly. "Put up that gun and close your eyes if you don't like what you see, and most of all don't start anything that you can't carry through. I'll do what I like with this woman. She is my wife."

Pete's quiet gaze did not waver. The ruddy light poured over him. "She is not your wife," he said clearly.

Ivan opened his lips, and his arms were limp at his side. Dorothy uttered one long-drawn gasp that whispered strangely in the silence. For her the veil still hid the truth, but it was being swept away like mist before the blast of the gale. She felt just at the eve of some profound climax.

Minard's Liniment for cuts and bruises

Ivan fought away an inexplicable sense of dismay, a vague, creepy terror that had penetrated to his heart. "Are you a fool?" he asked. "You saw me marry her. The marriage was legal."

Pete shook his head. "It was not legal. It couldn't be legal. She is Peter Newhall's wife!"

"But Peter Newhall is dead!" Ivan's voice was shrill and strange, not his own. A light grew on Dorothy's stricken face until it was a white flame, surpassing belief.

"He was dead to the living world, but he has risen," was the answer.

"I am Peter Newhall."

Hudson Bay Basin Rich in Resources

Timber and Mineral Wealth Described by Dr. R. B. Stewart

GOLD YIELD EXPECTED

Additional Pulp and Paper Mills Probable in Near Future

Picturing the future of the Hudson Bay Basin as a productive section of the Dominion, the Hon. Charles McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, spoke briefly recently before the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, Toronto Branch.

Mr. McCrea introduced Dr. R. B. Stewart, chief medical adviser of the Hudson's Bay Company, who gave an illustrated lecture on "The Natural Resources of the Hudson Bay Basin." Mr. McCrea referred to the railway builders pushing two different lines up to Hudson Bay and James Bay, as modern pioneers, following the example set by Hudson, the explorer, in 1611.

Noting the immense area of the Hudson Bay Basin, more than 3,000,000 square miles, Dr. Stewart referred to the vast range of its climatic conditions extending from sub-Arctic to temperate.

Geological Make-up.

Referring to the geological make-up of the basin, the speaker touched upon the granite to be found along the northern rims of the bay, the lignite on the Salmon River which supplies the stoves of many of the northern stations of the company, the mica being produced in small quantities at Lake Harbor, the nickel deposits at Cape Smith, lead at Mayfair River, gypsum and china clay in the Moose Factory section, and quantities of iron ore to be found in the Belcher Islands district, but noted that so far no gold deposits of any consequence have been located, although prospecting is being carried still further northward, and a fair probability exists of this precious metal being found in paying quantities.

Furs, the product of the district for 250 years, are still being sent out in large quantities, Dr. Stewart stated.

Fish of Two Varieties.

"Hudson Bay is not teeming with fish, as some people imagine," Dr. Stewart said, referring to the scarcity of any variety except rock cod and white fish. In time, the fisheries of the basin may attain large production, but not for some years. Pulp and paper production is already going ahead, with prospect of additional mills in the near future. Black and white spruce, tamarac, balsam, poplar, white birch and balsam pine are among the principal species of timber found in the area. Fall wheat, growing at Moose Factory, had shown as high a yield as that in the Western provinces, and a good future in agriculture was predicted by Dr. Stewart.

"I believe the Hudson Bay area route will prove a boon to Western Canada for general commodities, but it will not be for some years—possibly never—that wheat will be shipped to any great extent. The straits are open longer than people imagine, but the difficulty will be to keep Fort Churchill's port open long enough to be of value to navigation by the new route."

Princes Didn't Get "Promised" Giraffe

Owner, in 1489, Refused to Give Animal to King's Daughter

Chicago.—The pining of a princess for a giraffe 400 years ago is preserved in a history of that elongated animal published by the Field Museum of Natural History. Lorenzo de Medici had a giraffe in his menagerie at Florence, which aroused the interest of Anne de Beaujeu, daughter of Louis XI. of France. She had dreams of owning a giraffe of her own and finally alleged Lorenzo had promised her his.

Finally she wrote him on April 14, 1489. Her plea was of no avail. Lorenzo kept his giraffe.

Giraffes have been popular in regal circles since the time of remote Egyptian kings. Julius Caesar showed Rome its first giraffe in a triumphal procession in 46 B.C.

Although it hardly seems possible, giraffes have gone up. They used to cost between $1500 and $2000, but now run from $5000 to $7500.

Canada to Join Celebrations In Durant Centennial, May 8

Fifty-Eight Nations Will Celebrate Hundredth Birthday of Founder of Red Cross, This Year—Henri Dunant, Winner of Nobel Peace Prize, Also Known as "Good Samaritan of Castiglione," Born May 8, 1828, Died October 31, 1910

On May 4, 1928, fifty-eight national organizations, banded together under the Red Cross flag, will celebrate the hundredth birthday of Henri Dunant, founder of Red Cross and joint winner of the Nobel Peace prize.

In Toronto, the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society will signally honor the occasion by giving a banquet on April 25th to welcome the delegates attending the Annual Meeting of Central Council. A limited number of tickets are being sold outside of the membership, and it is expected that nationally known speakers, including the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, will attend and give the celebration speeches. Similar functions will also be held in every Canadian province.

It is fitting indeed that such a centenary should not go by unnoticed, for Dunant did much to promote the idea that suffering in war, the agony of the battlefield, could be largely mitigated.

It was while this great benefactor of humanity was traveling in Lombardy in 1859 that he saw 40,000 dead, dying, wounded and sick men lying on the battlefield of Solferino, without anyone offering as much as a drink of water in kindly service. The sight of this so wrung his heart that he did not rest until an impromptu hospital was prepared in the nearby town of Castiglione, with a voluntary ambulance and nursing service in attendance. Thus he became known as the "Good Samaritan of Castiglione."

The sight of so much agony never left his mind and he wrote a brochure as the "Good Samaritan of Castiglione."

that was fraught with much significance to the world thereafter.

Dunant for several years travelled about Europe lecturing and giving his opinions regarding the treatment of soldiers in battle, pressing home the need for a reorganization of the medical services, for the rearrangement of plans for repatriating prisoners of war and caring for disabled men who had been borken in fighting for their country's cause. Out of Dunant's first idea grew the Conference at Geneva, which resulted in Red Cross being made law for the world. The first Treaty of Geneva was signed by twelve out of sixteen attending national delegates, the first Red Cross Society being formed in the German principality of Wurtemberg.

From that time the symbol of the Red Cross, which was originally adopted in honor of Switzerland, where the first treaty took place, became the chief organization to serve the soldier in war, and eventually to follow him and his family into civilized life, caring for the sick and promoting health in general.

Great Britain adopted the Treaty of Geneva on February 18, 1865; Prussia joined June 22, 1865; Russia was linked up on July 5, 1865, and the United States on March 16, 1882. The Canadian Red Cross Society at first was an offshoot of the British organization, but is now entirely autonomous within the boundaries of the Dominion of Canada. Turkey also subscribes to the same ideals but uses the symbol of the red crescent in place of the Red Cross, Turkey being purely a Mohammedan nation.

London Seeking Suitable Motto

London, the heart of the British Empire, is one of the few big cities of the world that has no motto. For many years now the London County Council has been diligently striving to find one. A sub-committee of the General Purposes Committee, which had had the matter in hand for nearly fifteen years, has given it up as a bad job.

Thousands of suggestions have been received and examined by the Council and, according to the report recently made public: "They are of all types—hortatory, declaratory, religious and humorous, and it is evident that the Scriptures and the poets have been diligently searched and that the makers of tags in dog Latin have not been idle. Without coming down on the side of the motto-killers or motto-phobes we can safely assure the committee that in our considered judgment no suitable motto, either in English or Latin, has emerged from the multitude of suggestions made."

"This being so, we think it useless to set out to find, much less to frame, a motto. It may be that the motto which will appeal to all Londoners will sooner or later emerge spontaneously out of some striking event in the Council's history."

This event cannot be depended upon to happen within any definite length of time. Other great cities of the world have invariably looked to past rather than to future history for their mottoes.

A certain amount of difficulty has been created by the committee's decision to use no language but English. Excluding this restriction the first suggestion made in July, 1914, was by far the best and considered entirely appropriate. The citizens of the old Roman Londinium are represented by Tacitus as refusing to flee before the advance of Boadicea because, they said, "Loco dulcedo nos attinet" ("The charm of the place holds us"). However, in these days when all who can go out of town for the week-ends and a vast number of those who work in London dwell in the suburbs, this motto would, perhaps, seem a trifle cynical.

A New York bandit was cured of criminality by three operations, two more than were performed by the old-time Vigilantes.

Great a runner as Lloyd Hahn is, he has yet to attain the speed of the English boy told about it in Tit-Bits. Said a friend to the young fellow's mother, "Your boy must be an exceptionally fast runner. I see the morning paper states that he 'fairly burned up the track under his record-breaking speed.' I suppose you saw him do it." "No, I didn't see him do it," replied the mother, "but the report must be correct, for I saw the track this morning and there was nothing but cinders there."

New Emphasis Upon Printed Silks For Spring and Summer

That the budgeting of the spring wardrobe is greatly facilitated by the present style trend of combining printed silks with woollens for the earliest ensemble modes is confirmed wherever there are shop windows to study. The unwritten law of former seasons, that prints more properly belong to June openings, finds itself demoted, and this decree serves to make the accustomed early plain silk elimination prove to be important in the budget sense of the word.

Keeness of competition compels the producer of moderately priced fabrics to supply the best designs for at least one branch of his trade. This statement is submitted as a fact in modern merchandising methods which budgeters may cheerfully adopt. If, however, little time is at one's disposal and a leisurely examination of the shops is, therefore, impossible, a study of the leading spring magazines devoted to women's domestic interests reveals both outstanding fabric reproductions and the newer types of dresses and coats in direct relation thereto.

Three Classifications in Design.

Good things thus proving themselves to be available at modest prices an examination of the leading design trends reveals a styling easily classifiable under the following subheads: (1) Tailored prints; means, of course, small, neat patterns that relate well to the wavy designs of the ensemble woollens. (2) Landscapes, Americans, and tribal Indian lore—floral motifs and geometric forms of marked pattern and color interest, intended for less practical afternoon wear. (3) Designs and colors allotted specifically to evening dress, which consist of large scattered single flowers or sprays, exotic branches and leafage, or multi-color all-over designs.

Any consideration of practical silks begins with the printed tweed patterns on crepe-de-chine, canton or morocain, crepe faille, radium, or shantung, as an accepted styling, here and abroad. Last season's closely covered spacings of small oblongs, squares, dots, spots or circles, reappear in appealing colorings, practical and becoming to both youthful and mature, large and small women. Within these ranges the collegiate demands, business and professional needs, the suburbanite's requirements, train, steamer and motor service, resort and town wear, are met. Such types of design conform in color to the widespread tweed vogue, in soft blendings of the beiges, tans, grays, gray-blues or gray-greens, nut-browns, the faint gray-violets and thistle-purples. Again, they may introduce the mixtures, or mottled, speckled and streaked effects, such as the jerseys offer.

Closely Spaced or Gay Motifs.

It is well to recall that the reproduction of the polka dot in cheap silks and both heavy and sheer cottons will follow, as the season progresses. A good rule with the first moves under current conditions would be to avoid too great an outlay for dotted silks, but to adopt a middle course of enjoying the sprightliness of the design with a modest expenditure, although "dots and spots" can and will be worn throughout the season. If, on the other hand, one can individualize the finished dress or coat, one may use dots with prolonged satisfaction—until September, in fact.

A break in the silk designs occurs where graceful floral patterns begin to appear. They also adopt small, closely spaced arrangements, but with a change of expression which presents them as more decorative and less utilitarian in theme. All the rosette flowers, the climber rose, primrose, daisy, wild rose, pear, peach and plum blossoms, carnation, marigold, geranium and small chrysanthemum, are introduced as motifs upon both dark and light grounds and upon lustrous crepes and silks, as well as the dull sheer materials. One of the most attractive in color handling is that which makes use of beige or gray motifs on white grounds, or the reverse treatment, and these combinations are used in ensemble relation to beige, gray or white woollens, or the heavier silk crepes and shantung, with great charm and simplicity of effect.

On the other hand, clear, bright colors and dramatic motifs have been highly perfected for those who like them, and, in almost endless profusion, subtly contrived designs arrive from both foreign and domestic sources. The boldly composed color schemes frequently choose dark grounds, of black, navy, cinnamon, shadowy-green or purple.

Poetry in Evening Frocks.

For an afternoon dress of the newer draped silhouette, which can be properly worn over into the evening hours, considerable fullness is this season introduced, for which a four-yard length is a good average. Hip swathings, with many loopings of sash lengths, side draperies or full-gathered sections, give to the varied colorings the charm of the blurrings of nature's hues in a garden. In quantity, the material required for the more elaborate type of gown measures from four to five yards.

One of the season's print innovations is the ensemble wrap composed of a large square of matched fabric, designed to replace the Spanish shawl. These self-fabric shawls are finished with hemstitched borders, with plain borders of the predominant tone in the printed design, or with hand-knotted fringes. The transparent velvet squares, thus handled, also accompany the more exotic printed chiffon evening mode, elaborate wardrobes assembling a number of pastel-tone squares.

All in all, the season's vogue of printed fabrics establishes, to an extraordinary degree, possibilities of artistically successful wardrobes at exceedingly moderate cost, when produced by competent workers in the home. And this is due, in large degree, to the adoption of French originals as the inspiration of those American pattern companies which appeal to women of taste.

Although this is a leap year, a writer thinks that women will not make proposals of marriage. They will simply continue to insist on receiving them.

Germany Reduces Prices To Draw Tourist Throngs

Berlin.—With the approach of the "tourist season," which, according to all indications, will bring an unprecedented number of Americans to Europe, the question of the cost of living arises. For a great many of those visitors, probably, such a trip means long saving and many sacrifices, and on the prices which they must pay while here depends the length of their stay. It can be said truthfully that in Germany prices have been cut down to bedrock and it is possible to live and travel very cheaply.

In the greater part of Germany 10 per cent. is added to the bills for tips, and it is not necessary to give more than this. German taxicab chauffeurs, while grateful for any gratuities, no longer expect them, and the passenger will hear a polite "thank you" if he pays only the amount registered on the taximeter.

Prince of Wales Improves As a Speaker in Public

London.—The Prince of Wales is believed to have been under the training of experts in public speaking, as many of his mannerisms have disappeared, and in recent speeches he has shown far greater repose.

He now speaks at dinners with one hand in his pocket and the other in repose on the table.

Formerly he used to pull at his coat in a manner which became so noticeable that picture records of his public appearances where often laughable. Hands, with the Prince, as with all persons who speak or sing in public, were a serious problem. But he has learned how to keep them out of his way.

A Tribute To Thomas Hardy

"There is something singularly harmonious and satisfactory to the mind in Thomas Hardy's career—so few external events of the usual biographical banality, such deep, unthwarted, unfrustrated reticence," writes John Cowper Powys, well-known English novelist, in March Current History. "As with Shakespeare, his life is in his work. . . . His novels form a kind of classic viaduct from the ponderous forms of the Victorian age to the hurly-burly of the modern market place. But the final overtone of Hardy's attitude to life hovers above all these changing fashions. The soil to which he remained faithful all his days, and in which his heart has now been laid, rewarded him for his stubborn fidelity. By a passionate love of the Particular, he attained the Universal. By an intense scrutiny of the hedgehog on his lawn he approached the secrets of the Zodiac."

"NEVER MIND, OLD DEAR"

Berlin Landlord Seeks Rent for Sky Planes' Use

Berlin.—Rent for the air through which the Lufthansa airplanes fly on their regular service route was a new scheme devised by Samuel Schwarz, the owner of a house in Zehliden, near Berlin.

The daily flight of the planes above his house inspired Schwarz to seek novation into profit. He unearthed a moldy paragraph of the German real estate law reading: "The rights of a property owner extend to the space above and the ground beneath his property." On the strength of this Herr Schwarz wrote the Lufthansa demanding settlement of the current and past rentals.

In a courteous letter the Lufthansa called the claimant's attention to paragraph 1 of the air traffic law entitling airplanes and airships to a free passage through the air in so far as they conformed with the existing air traffic regulations, and also to paragraph 905, rebutting the one he had quoted: "A real estate owner is not entitled to prohibit the approach to his property from above or below at a height or depth not conflicting with his interests."

Real Conservation Perches Placed on Lighthouses

To Save Tired Birds From Sea

London.—The Royal Society for Protection of Birds has become a sort of tourist agency for the bird world.

As the time for spring migration approaches, the society has taken steps to aid the little travelers and make their air journeys as comfortable as possible. With this and in view large perches or bird rests have been erected around the tops of various lighthouses which are on the birds' favorite flying route around the British Isles.

The bright beams of the lighthouses were held to be responsible for the death of tens of thousands of birds annually. Often being tired by their long flights to the north and south the birds, flying at night, are attracted like moths to a candle by the brilliant light. Finding no refuge the flocks, in numerous instances, became confused and flew round and round until exhausted and finally fell to their death in the sea.

The same beams now point the way to a haven of rest. The perches are of wood or iron supports, being arranged in rows around the dome and the base of the lamp. Feed boxes are also provided.

The willow-warblers, thrushes, the black-caps, larks, and nightingales, according to reports assembled by the society, suffered the heaviest losses on their yearly adventures travels as these birds fly at low altitudes, the older members of the flock, leading the way and the babies bringing up in the rear.

The prime optimist of the year is the statistician who says one Canadian in each five knows how to drive a car.

Tired Thomas: "I believe this is the dog you lost, ma'am." Old Lady: "The poor little darling! Where did you find him?" Tired Thomas: "I gave $20 to some scoundrel for 'im, ma'am."

"When two people like the same thing their married life is bound to be happy," sighed the romantic girl. "Well, you and George ought to be happy," remarked her friend, who wanted George and didn't get him. "I know you love him, and I notice he is very fond of himself."

WHY "CANADIAN FOREST WEEK" COMES IN APRIL

Spring is Season of Greatest Fire Hazard—Vacationists Are Then Planning Holidays

By Royal Proclamation the week of April 22-28 has been set aside as "Canadian Forest Week". During that period an intensive campaign, urging greater protection and conservation of our forests, will be carried on throughout the Dominion. Every practicable medium of publicity will be used to spread the appeal. Newspaper advertisements, posters, stickers, pamphlets, radio talks, lectures, after-dinner speeches, and playlets will carry the message into the home, the workshop, and the schoolroom so that all Canadians will be reached. All are urged to consider the present state of our forests as set out by the various authorities and to keep in mind the measures set forth for the protection and conservation of our forest resources.

To many to whom the forest protection message comes, the question will naturally present itself, "Why has this season of the year been chosen for the 'Canadian Forest Week' campaign?" There are two main reasons why the spring and especially the month of April is the best suited for a fire prevention appeal.

The first of these is that over the greater part of Canada the last week in April immediately precedes the period of greatest fire hazard in our forests. By that time the snow has almost entirely disappeared from the woods and a succession of warm, sunny days is the rule. The hot rays of the sun beating down on the forest floor through the still leafless trees, turn the dead grass, leaves, twigs, and withered herbage from the last season's growth to tinder, in which the smallest spark may start a conflagration. During the succeeding two weeks the new growth begins to appear and the danger is gradually lessened. There is a second period of fire danger in the late summer or early autumn but this is not usually as acute as that occurring in the spring.

The second reason for choosing the month of April for the forest protection campaign is that at this time of the year most people are making plans for their vacations. Increasing numbers both in Canada and from abroad are making use of our forested areas for recreational purposes and the necessity of impressing them with the need for care with fire in the forests becomes increasingly great with the advent of the summer season. Advice on the proper location of camp-fires and the surest way of extinguishing them; how to dispose of lighted matches, glowing cigarette and cigar stubs, and live ashes from pipes at this time will bear good fruit during the sojourn of campers in Canada's woodland areas.

The fact that in the United States the week of April 22-28 will be similarly observed with a forest protection campaign is a further evidence that all over the continent forest conservationists realize the advantages of making their appeal in the spring of the year. From the Mackenzie to the Rio Grande the Governments of Canada and the United States will lead in urging greater care with fire in the forests and a closer utilization of timber resources to the end that this great and valuable heritage may be conserved for future generations.

Memories of old St. Andrews

The pioneer colony under the Seigneurship of Major Murray, developed so fast, that the transportation problem became a very perplexing one, and the Delormes with their bateaux were quite unable to cope with the situation.

In the meantime, colonists from the British Isles, and from the New England States were ascending the Ottawa, and there appeared on its waters a fleet of freight boats known as Durham boats. They had a carrying capacity of twenty tons, were rigged with masts and sails, and were manned by crews of Ojibmen. They were open boats without decks, were wide, flat bottomed, and of shallow draught, and they afforded no protection to passengers who had to provide their own food and bedding.

The voyage from Lachine took two days, and when darkness overtook the voyagers, the boat was anchored or tethered to the shore, and they had to debark and bivouac under the stars.

The discomforts of these trips can be better imagined than described. Those sluggish boats were for many years the only means of communication with Montreal, till the stage roads were constructed during the second decade of the century.

A graphic description of this river voyage can be found in Philip Musgrave's missionary memoirs of July 1818, published in London, England in 1846 (see Chapter II). His reception at the St. Andrews Village hostelry when the Presbyterian Missionary was expected in his stead, forms a very amusing episode.

On this interesting occasion, our jolly landlord proved to be the gentleman of the group, and his comely landlady lost no time in providing the tired discouraged and hungry missionary, who had been faring on hard sea biscuits, with one of those dinners for which this wayside Inn was noted.

There was no more valued addition to the pioneer colony than the Rev. Richard Bradford, the Anglican Missionary, who arrived as early as 1805, and none to give him so warm a welcome as the young men and maidens who had "plighted their troth" and were awaiting the coming of the first minister.

The Church Register of that period exhibits a remarkable multiplicity of marriages and baptisms. Among the former was that of the grandparents of the present writer, and among the latter the baptism of his father.

We have direct testimony that Richard Bradford was much beloved and admired by the whole community, and that his death 17 years later was deeply lamented.

In his ministrations this broad-minded, Catholic spirited Missionary knew no denominational boundaries. His parish was co-terminous with the whole Ottawa Valley, and his parishioners came from far and near to avail themselves of his services.

His parsonage home was on the north bank of the Ottawa very near the head of the old Carillon Canal, and St. Andrews with fortnightly services, had its full share of his Sabbath ministrations. The toil and hardships of his journeyings can be well believed, when oftentimes scattered settlements could only be reached by horse-back ridings along forest trails.

Bradford came to Argenteuil in the full maturity of his manhood, and displayed the wisdom born of experience, an experience which in his case was rich and varied. He had sailed the Pacific Ocean "before the Mast" in the role of a midshipman with Captain Cook the famous discover, and in all probability was with him during his last voyage, when the renowned navigator met his tragic death.

Later he came to Canada as the Chaplain of the 49th. Regiment. His death occurred during the Autumn of 1816, two years before the advent of his successor Rev. Joseph Abbott (Philip Musgrave), who had not been long in St. Andrews before he wedded Mr. Bradford's daughter Harriet.

Mrs. Bradford left sons and daughters, the heads of families among whose numerous descendants, many by their successful careers have added lustre to so honourable an ancestry, notably Sir John Abbott who rose to the highest position his fellow countrymen could bestow.

Saskatoon.—"I believe I have found a wheat which, when further developed, will be greatly rust-resistant," said Dr. Seager Wheeler, several times winner of the International wheat award. He went on to explain that although he was quite sure that this new type which he developed from the Kiota strain would protect crops in the province from rust damage, he did not think that the wheat would be absolutely free from rust under all conditions. However, he considered from the results of his experiments that even under the worst conditions, such as those of 1927, this wheat would never materially be damaged.

Beauty that attracts beauty

Long, low lines give grace and beauty to McLaughlin-Buick Fisher bodies, but without the slightest sacrifice of interior space or head-room. SAVE OUR FORESTS

The people of Canada can hardly realize how fast fire and axe have eaten into Canada's forest resources during the present generation. Forestry experts state that of what was a primeval forest no farther back than 1810, practically untouched by the axe, little more than one-quarter now remains.

In Eastern Canada comparatively little timber of really prime sawmill quality is left and it is stated that 70% of such timber in Canada now stands in British Columbia. In this province also the work of devastation and waste is going on at a much faster ratio than the annual growth.

A great area of forest land still remains to the north of the populated parts of most of the provinces, but this forest consists largely of spruce and other woods required for the great pulp and paper industry. This forest of recent years has come to feel full force of the United States demand for newsprint paper. It provides a very big factor in our list of profitable exports, but foresters point out we are cutting and burning at a rate that will exhaust our accessible timber supplies in twenty-five years.

These experts say that with proper regulation as to cutting, reforestation and protection from fire, it is possible for Canada to have her forest industries in perpetuity. Fire has always taken greater toll than the axe. Fire prevention, the forestry men say, is the only salvation.

Forest fire fighting methods are being improved. The aeroplane has been called into requisition to locate fires at their first outbreak and thus prevent fire spreading beyond control. But experience has proved to Canada's cost that fire fighting is not nearly as simple as fire prevention. Every single individual whose business or pleasure takes him or her into the woods, must, while there, be impressed with one idea above all others and that is to prevent forest fire.

To that end the Hon. Charles Stewart originated an annual Canadian Forest Week in order to provide educational emphasis at the beginning of the dangerous dry season.

Trader Horn Steps Out of Book Into Bustle of American Scene

Ready to Drop Role of Rogue Elephant, Says Alfred Aloysius Smith

New York.—Trader Horn, odd and refreshingly preposterous creature of fiction that startled a bored literary world a year ago, is appearing here "in person."

One morning last week a man, Alfred Aloysius Smith, a long, gray man in a long gray caped coat, strode down the gangplank of a steamer and lo! he and Trader Horn were one, stepping forth from a fictional picture, rimmed about with bright aluminum pots and pans and toasters, and garlanded in tales of enormous adventuring.

"These many years," he said first, "I've been a rogue elephant." In Africa, whence he came the rogue elephant roams independent of the herd, a carefree, insubordinate rascal, careless of the traditions of elephant life, always confident of finding a better way. "But now," Trader Horn added, perhaps unconsciously supporting the old, inevitable philosophy of the prodigal, man and beast, "I'm glad to be back with the herd."

"Trader Horn" was a name worthy of the fiction. Back a long way Alfred Aloysius Smith had "always wanted to write." Then, one day he sold a kettle or a toaster—perhaps he forgets which—to Mrs. Ethel Reda Lewis, somewhere on the plains around Johannesburg.

And they talked—Alfred Aloysius Smith always talks when he sells pots consignments of pots and kettles to be sold.

A vacation—or at least a change? A visit to the United States he had not seen since 1914. In 1913 he had been into Georgia, "where there are the finest people, and exceedingly human." It wasn't merely an excursion to spend some of the money that rolled in. "I've had money before this," Trader Horn announces. "Scads of it. My money was always equipped with legs. When I needed it I could make it. Money isn't everything."

Cannibals were probably one of Trader Horn's reasons for not considering money everything. It isn't everyone who gets on terms of social ease with cannibals. Trader Horn did. "Fine people. Not what you think." Trader Horn spread his hands benignly and then stroked his silver beard, long, affectionate stroking.

By this time the Literary Guild of America was having a "birthday party" for Trader Horn. There was a great cake, made like a book. They don't have cakes made like books in Africa. The cannibals would laugh.

Other fragmentary communications dripped from a tongue which had evidently done a little practicing in gibberish on the boat coming out from England. "I wrote poems while I was a peddler too. . . . Painted aniand kettles, and when he trades in rubber and diamonds and ivory too, and one thing led to another and presently Mrs. Lewis had started him putting together things remembered and other things noted in a little tattered book. Long hours of scribbling under the smoking golden flame of a kerosene lamp, always against the call of the peddler's road.

Sometimes the call was too strong and insistent and the manuscript would lag. But it was finished, John Galsworthy helped to pick out the name "Trader Horn," and Alfred Aloysius Smith, who has seen many funny things in his lifetime, sat back to behold the spectacle of himself reciting money—royalties—someones cash—the money—that just rolled in whether or no.

Even in Africa people know that sooner or later a lecture tour can, if a writer will but listen, be as inevitable as chapter headings. After all, why not? The diamond fields would always be there, and the rubber plantations and tusked elephants and new members of the Literary Guild stood about and murmured words that sounded like "significant," "figure of a new literary day," "vital" and "such a dear." Trader Horn and Alfred Aloysius Smith didn't hear. They were cutting a cake made like a book. The cannibals would have laughed.

WHITEWASH VALUABLE IN FIRE PREVENTION

If Made by Special Formula Has Real Value For Fire Proofing

While whitewash holds an important position on many farms during spring clean-up of stables and outbuildings it is generally applied for sanitary reasons and to improve appearances. But if a little special attention even more important purpose in making wooden structures at least partially fireproof. Its use will prevent splinters and rough surfaces from igniting quickly and the best results will be obtained if the mixture is applied with a pressure spray pump so that all cracks are thoroughly filled.

The following formula is recommended by the Ontario Fire Marshal: Mix five pounds of casein in about four gallons of water (preferably hot) until thoroughly softened (about two hours). Dissolve three pounds of Borax in about two gallons of water and add this to the casein, allowing this mixture to thoroughly dissolve. Prepare a thick cream by thoroughly mixing or by carefully straining 25 pounds of quick lime and straining the paste through a fine screen. When both lime and casein mixtures are cold slowly add the Borax-casein solution to the lime, stirring constantly and vigorously. Thin to desired consistency. Casein or glue solution must be cold when mixed with the lime paste which must also be cold. Do not prepare more than can be used the same day although it may be mixed dry and stored.

Piccadilly May Exclude Famous Statue of Eros

London.—The exigencies of London's traffic may result in the perpetual banishment from Piccadilly Circus of the famous statue of Eros which used to occupy a site in the centre of the open space there. When some months ago the construction of a new subway station under Piccadilly Circus was decided upon Eros was removed from his pedestal and given a temporary location in the Embankment Gardens.

Since then the traffic congestion in Piccadilly Circus has increased to such an extent that the authorities are now considering whether the graceful statue with its fountain pedestal (about which a number of women flower sellers were always to be found) does not occupy too much space to be returned to such a busy neighborhood.

Filling stations and roadside stands make even the byways buyways.

Record Sheep Heads Caught

Two fine examples of the elusive mountain sheep were recently captured by Jim Brewster, of Brewster Transportation Co., in the Banff Territory. The heads captured are records for the size, the one on the right being 19 inches with the other 18½, this measurement applies from the highest point on the horn to that on the opposite side.

These sheep are often seen from the windows of Canadian Pacific trains which travel through that district and are often a great inducement by their sheer beauty, for tourists to return and hunt these animals. They naturally take artistic poses, often seen posed on the highest crag of mountains, to be alarmed by a slight rustle and away they go, fast as the wind, jumping here and there from one point to another until they reach a plateau of security.

They are game worth hunting and the hunter who secures one is usually immensely proud of his prowess with his rifle.

It's How One Thinks So One Really Is

Bruce Barton States a Basic Truth in Short Article in New Herald-Tribune

THE MIND CONTROLS

Not long ago the newspapers reported a curious case in Kansas City. A defaulting banker, who had ruined his own life and the estates of many others, was locked up in jail. Whereupon he proceeded, in the words of the report, to "think himself to death."

He had no organic disease, but, deliberately casting aside all desire to live and fixing his thoughts upon death, he compelled his own mind to destroy him.

The late Thomas R. Marshall in his autobiography hints of some similar tragedies in the career of Senator Ollie James. He says: "The death of James, in the full flush of his manhood and in the splendor of his intellectual attainments, was especially distressing, if I am correctly informed, because he suffered from no actual disease. He really died, as I was told, from mental suggestion."

Of all the realms of knowledge, that which the mind has explored the least is the mind itself. What does courage do to our health? How far can love lift us out of our limitations? What effect have anger and envy on our arteries? How much of the difference between a one-horse-power man and a hundred-horsepower man is faith?

Having no scientific training, I can ask these questions without being able to answer them. But I look at folks as I go along, and recently I saw an interesting contrast.

There were two brothers, one rich and the other a poor physician attached to a social settlement. The rich brother carried more kinds of insurance than any man I have known. If care and continuous self-protection can extend our years, he should have lived to be ninety at least. But he died at fifty-three.

The poor brother had little enough chance to think of himself. Night and day he was at the beck and call of every sort of affliction. He got his feet soaking in the winter rains. His sleep was broken by calls in the night. His meals were snatched on the run.

At the age of sixty he grew very tired and went to a sanitarium for a three-weeks' rest. They said to him: "You have the arteries of a man of ninety. You are likely to drop dead at any minute."

Whether he ever gave the verdict any thought I do not know. He was a very religious man, and his idea was that he was doing the work of another and would be called away from it whenever the work was done.

He died at the age of seventy-five. I attended his funeral, and this is the thought that was in my mind: Suppose, when the specialists warned him, he had stopped his work and begun to take care of himself, to "think about himself," wouldn't he probably have died as his brother died before him?

Not being a scientist, I cannot tell. But when the laws of the mind are finally discovered and charted I suspect that one of them will be this: If you do most of your thinking about other people the chances are that you will have ten more good years of life.

A Resolve

Not for a myriad little things will I Droop gradually, and at the proper time Clog down my eyes, and breathe with pain, and die; But some day there will be a hill to climb Too steep for climbing; some day while I yet Am strong and young, I shall attempt a deed Beyond my strength, and in my failure get Oblivion; therefore I pay no heed To all the cautious whispering about me. But I will follow you up to the day That marks the place where you go on with me, There I will stand, and cast my staff away.

—Helene Mullins.

The American Temptation

LondonDaily Express (Ind. Com.): (The new American Immigration Bill is being framed to give still greater preference to British subjects.) This is a direct challenge to the whole movement for promoting emigration within the Empire. Every family that leaves Britain for a non-British country is a definite loss to the Empire. The Empire question is beyond everything else a population question. But what is being done to solve it? The Dominions and the Home Government have been equally to blame for not having thought out and solved this central problem long ago. While it remains unsolved our Imperial heritage is simply being muddled away.

While Prohibition is reigning, rum is pouring.

ONTARIO AND THE CORN BORER

Canadian Experience Proves the Worth of Effective Clean-up Regulations As Seen By "Michigan Farmer"

MAKING PROGRESS

Within a stone's throw of the great productive agricultural counties of Michigan, lies a laboratory—in Southwestern Ontario—wherein the European corn borer has demonstrated in a most convincing manner that it is capable of inflicting serious commercial damage to the corn crop, and, in a great many cases, of utterly ruining fields of this basic agricultural commodity.

But while King Corn has tottered in his shoes, and his vassals in untold numbers have forsaken him for other crops, the Ontario Government has been fully aware of the danger carried by this European pest. From the first, the Government has tolled incessantly to acquaint Canadian farmers with the seriousness of the problem, with measures to combat the pest, and with the aftermath of what would follow if he corn borer were allowed to become established in this great agricultural empire.

In fact, Ontario agricultural leaders did everything in their power to get their farmers to avoid the same experiences which state and federal agencies are now trying to help farmers in the United States to escape. On the other hand, Ontario farmers assumed a passive attitude, until severe losses were suffered in the great corn-growing areas of Essex and Kent counties.

The situation finally culminated in the passage of the Ontario Corn Borer Act in 1926. In an effort to avoid the Canadian experience, a similar law has been passed in Michigan and other states. The operation of the law in Ontario should prove of interest to Michigan farmers.

The act was put into effect in eight counties in the Province of Ontario. The law is very similar to the one passed by Michigan, Ohio, and other states. The clean-up regulations are virtually the same in that all corn debris must be disposed of prior to the time when the corn borer moths are expected to emerge.

Compulsory clean-up may be done and assessed as taxes against the property when this operation is necessary. In addition, however, persons who fail to comply with the regulations may be fined a minimum amount of ten dollars and not more than fifty dollars for each offense. Offenders may be brought into court repeatedly and fined until they do comply with the regulations.

The administration of the corn borer act is performed by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, which corresponds to our State Department of Agriculture. The work is in the charge of Professor Lawson Caesar, provincial entomologist, with headquarters at Guelph. The provincial entomologist is empowered to appoint one or more supervisors in each county to carry out the provisions of the act.

Clean-up work in cities, however, is done by the cities themselves, as cities, or "separated towns," do not come under the county council, or governing body. Upon notice from the provincial entomologist such localities are required to appoint an inspector, and, as a result, the enforcement of control measures is usually done by the police.

The county corn borer supervisor commences work about September 1 and continues until fall plowing ceases. This period is spent in obtaining an estimate of the corn acreage to be cleaned up and explaining the regulations to farmers and advising them how to meet the regulations. The inspector resumes his work in the spring as soon as field operations commence and works through until about June 10. It is his duty to see that the act is complied with by everybody and that the clean-up is accomplished in accordance with the law.

Clean-Up Law Effective
The corn borer population was reduced in five of the eight counties in the 1927 compulsory clean-up area of Ontario, according to a survey made by Prof. Lawson Caesar, provincial entomologist.

These eight counties, with the exception of Prince Edward and parts of Norfolk and Oxford, were so heavily infested in 1926, the report states, "that had the borer multiplied as rapidly as it did in Welland and several other counties not under the Act, almost all of the cornfields would have been ruined."

Due to the clean-up last spring, in Kent and Essex Counties, the number of borers was reduced fully fifty per cent. in spite of a fifty per cent. reduction in the corn acreage. In Elgin County, there was a reduction in the average infestation from forty-seven and seven-tenths per cent. in 1926 to approximately thirty-eight per cent. in 1927. Similar decreases in borer population were noted in Norfolk and Oxford Counties.

Lambton, Middlesex, and Prince Edward Counties had a slight increase in the number of borers last year. For various reasons, it was very difficult to get a satisfactory clean-up in these counties. In Prince Edward County, one of the difficulties was the common practice of using narrow instead of wide plows.

"A narrow plow will not cover stubble and debris satisfactorily and this gives an opportunity for many borers to survive," states Professor Caesar.

Clean-Up Area Enlarged

Outside of the eight counties which were placed under the corn borer act last year, the pest has multiplied rapidly, thus emphasizing the need of clean-up measures wherever the pest is known to be present. In most districts there were apparently twice as many borers as last year and four times as many in some localities.

Due to the large increase in borer population in those counties where the Corn Borer Act was not in force, eighteen additional counties have been added to the clean-up area for 1927. This action places all of Southwestern Ontario south of a line from Goderich to a point about eight miles north of Toronto under the Act, and also an area about six miles wide along Lake Ontario from Toronto to the east boundary of Hastings County.

As indicated by the report of the provincial entomologist to the Minister of Agriculture, the large increase in borer population in Ontario during 1927 took place in those sections of the province where the Ontario Corn Borer Act was not in effect and where compulsory clean-up regulations were not prescribed.

To repeat, as Professor Caesar has stated, had the borer multiplied as rapidly as it did in Welland and several other counties not under the Act, almost all of the cornfields would have been ruined, if clean-up measures had not been resorted to in the Canadian Corn Belt last summer.

The experience of Canadian farmers with the corn borer has been costly. It has taken serious commercial damage and ruined cornfields to awaken the Canadian farmers to the economic danger of the corn borer. But now control measures and clean-up regulations have become established farm practices in Ontario, and farmers are solidly behind this program.

Michigan farmers might well profit from the experience of their Canadian neighbors and avoid the embryo stage by co-operating one hundred per cent. with the state and federal governments in their program to control this alarming crop pest—the European corn borer. An excellent start was made last spring.

About Butter

Butter served in restaurants or hotels often is kept in ice water to prevent its melting, and it always acquires a white appearance. This pale color is caused by the fact that the coloring matter dissolves in plain water. A dairy inspector for the California Department of Agriculture has discovered that the addition of a small amount of salt to the water will not only preserve the color but also add to the flavor, as the salt used in seasoning the butter also has a tendency to dissolve when clear water is used. Salted water will also keep the butter in firmer condition.

Balfour Cancels All Engagements

Daily Express Says British Statesman Suffers From Heart Trouble

NOTABLE CAREER

Earl is Also Known for Publications on Philosophy Theology

London.—The Daily Express says that Lord Balfour, Lord President of the Council, former Prime Minister and one of the outstanding British statesmen of the present generation, is suffering from heart trouble and has cancelled all his engagements. He has been ill for some time. In January he suffered a severe attack of laryngitis.

Arthur James Balfour, first Earl of that title, and Viscount Thrapston of Whittingham, has been prominent in British governmental affairs for more than 40 years.

Starting as private secretary to the Marquis of Salisbury when that peer was Foreign Minister in 1878, Balfour went ahead steadily and became Unionist Leader of the House of Commons and First Lord of the Treasury in 1891. He was Prime Minister 1902-1905. During the World War he was First Lord of the Admiralty up to 1916 and Foreign Secretary until 1919. He headed the British mission to America in 1917 and also the British mission to the Washington conference in 1921.

His publications have touched not only the political and economic questions with which he has dealt as a government official, but also have gone into the realm of philosophy and theology.

One of his outstanding work was "The foundations of Belief, being Notes Introductory to the Study of Theology." This was issued in 1895 and was put in popular form in 1901. He holds honorary degrees from all the principal universities of Great Britain and Ireland, and also an LL.D. granted by Columbia University in 1917.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Napoleonic Soldier's Kin Seek Office as Deputies

The days when Napoleon was the object of hero worship are recalled by the candidacy for seats in the next Chamber of Deputies of two men of the name of Chauvin. Both are said to be descendants of the soldier of the "Grande Armee" Nicholas Chauvin, whose ardent affection for the Emperor made his name a symbol for all that is patriotic to an excessive degree.

NO BETTER MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Is What Thousands of Mothers Say of Baby's Own Tablets

With the passing of winter many people feel weak, depressed and easily tired. The body lacks the vital force and energy pure blood alone can give. In a word, while not exactly sick, the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon them. A blood-building, nerve-restoring tonic is needed to give renewed health and energy. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an all-year-round blood builder and nerve tonic, but are especially useful in the spring. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood and with this new blood returning strength, cheerfulness and good health quickly follow.

If you are pale, easily tired, or breathless at the least exertion, if your complexion is poor or you are troubled with pimples or eruptions, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just what you need to put you right. If you have twinges of rheumatism, are subject to headaches and backaches, if you are irritable and nervous, if your sleep does not refresh you, or your appetite is poor, you need the treatment Dr. Williams' Pink Pills alone can give—you need the new blood, new strength and new energy this medicine always brings. Mr. A. Marcotte, North Ham, Que., writes:—"I have found great benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I began using them I was in a badly run-down condition, and at times felt scarcely able to work. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have changed all this and since taking them I am enjoying the best of health. Every man who feels rundown and easily tired should give this great medicine a fair trial."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion or nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at $0c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

For a Coconut Caramel Pie

Meringue.

In a frying pan, caramelize 1/4 cupful of sugar, being careful not to burn it. The sugar will form a ball, when stirred, and do other odd things that mystify the amateur, but it is all right; keep on stirring until there is a liquid almost ready to burp, then pour in, very slowly, 3 cupfuls scalded milk. With the addition of the liquid the mixture will suddenly rise in steam, so be ready for it. When the milk is hot, turn off the fire. Shift together 1 1/2 cupfuls of sugar, 3 tablespoonfuls of flour and 1/8 teaspoonful of salt. Mix it to a smooth paste with some of the hot milk, then turn it back into the rest of the milk and cook it over hot water, stirring constantly until the mixture is thick and smooth. Pour it over the well-beaten yolks of 4 eggs, cook a minute, then add 1 teaspoonful of vanilla and 1 cupful of grated coconut. Pour it into a baked pie shell, add meringue and brown as usual.

For a thick meringue for one pie, beat until stiff the whites of 2 eggs and add 4 teaspoonfuls of sugar, beating constantly; never stir meringue. Pile it lightly on top of the pie when that surface has cooled slightly, and bake 15 minutes in a moderate oven (325 degrees F.), when it will be

Concerning the Nature of Rewards

Pauline Herr Thomas

"Will someone please tell me why it is that the things that are least healthful or beneficial for our children are generally the things they want the most?" demanded Mrs. Johnson of the other mothers over the tea-table.

"Well," said Mrs. Moore, "perhaps it's just human nature to want what we can't have."

"Oh, it's just perverseness, that's all," said Mrs. Hunt, rather heatedly. "They know they can't have it. Billy is always tormenting me for something he couldn't have."

"You know," said Mrs. Sheldon, thoughtfully, "I believe that this very thing which is so commonly characteristic of our children—to say nothing of ourselves—is our own fault to a great extent."

"I can't see that," said Mrs. Hunt. "Aren't we always trying to instill knowledge of what is best and what is not? Unless you mean it is our constant talking about the forbidden thing that keeps them reminded of it."

"Yes, that is obvious," said Mrs. Sheldon, "but I think there is another reason which escapes most of us. We say to Mary, 'Now if you eat that soup, you may have this cake,' or to Billy, 'If you don't go to bed this minute, you may not stay up late Saturday evening.' By such tactics we give to the less healthful cake or the less beneficial late hours the role of reward. It becomes at once the coveted thing."

"Oh, yes," answered Mrs. Hunt, "but what good will it do to say to Mary, 'If you eat your soup, you may cooked through and golden-brown on top.

Perfect meringue can never be baked in a hot oven, because that does not give the egg-white time to rise gradually to its possible height; a meringue baked too fast is thin and leathery. If the oven is not hot enough or the pie is removed before the meringue is cooked, the egg-whites become watery again and the meringue falls.

Some experts add flavoring to their meringues. Others mix with the sugar 1/4 of a teaspoonful of baking powder, and still others add 1/4 of a teaspoonful of cornstarch instead; the baking powder insures a rising of the mixture, and the cornstarch, its staying up.

A TIRED FEELING IN SPRINGTIME

Not Sick, But Not Up to the Mark—You Need the Help of That Sterling Tonic, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—They Give New Vitality.

A medicine for the baby or growing child—one that the mother can feel assured is absolutely safe as well as efficient—is found in Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are praised by thousands of mothers throughout the country. These mothers have found by actual experience that there is no other medicine for little ones to equal them. Once a mother has used them for her children she will use nothing else. Concerning them Mrs. Charles Hutt, Tancook Island, N.S., writes:—"I have ten children, the baby being just six months old. I have used Baby's Own Tablets for them for the past 10 years and can truthfully say that I know of no better medicine for little ones. I always keep a box of the Tablets in the house and would advise all other mothers to do so."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or will be mailed upon receipt of price, 25 cents per box, by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Where the Shoe Pinched.

The Strong Man from Norway was booked on the Orpheum Circuit. His specialty was breaking paving stones with a sledge-hammer on his wife's head. It was a wow, as we used to say in the old country. Suddenly his bookings were switched. They put him on the small time, where he had to do four and five shows a day.

He did it for several weeks, then canceled his contract. "What's the matter?" they asked him. "Is your wife getting headaches?" "Oh, no, it isn't that," apologized the Strong Man, "but I'm afraid she's getting fallen arches."

Man Who Smoked in Car With His Wife Is Fined

London.—A chivalrous stranger drew the attention of the man who was puffing a pipe in a non-smoking car on a suburban railroad to the fact in the opposite corner was a woman with a baby.

The woman with the baby said nothing. Nor did the man with the pipe. He went on smoking. So at the next station the chivalrous stranger complained to railroad officials.

"I then found that the silent woman I was championing was his wife," he testified in court when the stubborn smoker was fined $5.

Paris Traffic Injuries 340 Policemen in Year

Paris.—A Paris traffic policeman is no risk for the accident insurance companies at all. According to a recent statement of M. Sarraute, Minister of the Interior, the maelstrom of darting taxis, automobiles and cyclists in the French capital places 340 of M. Crippes' traffic regulators on the injured list during the last year. And vehicles are increasing monthly.

Another indication that Paris policemen are no more to be envied than those of New York is given with the report that 537 policemen were wounded trying to maintain peace and order and four were killed.

The Peacemaker

Brisbane Courier: It would be the greatest tragedy of all history if the British Navy were weakened at the instance of those dreamers who imagine that the League could save us in the day of international upheaval. So long as the world is at peace the League may do very effective work as a philosophy; when some bellicose nation decides upon resorting to war as a final arbiter the League is useless, and depends wholly for its success upon the half dozen great Powers of the world that can use enough influence to preserve peace. That is the role that Britain has played for years.

Letter Tells of Wonderful Relief After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Coniston, Ontario.—"After a severe operation and a three weeks' stay in a hospital I returned home so weak that I was unable to move a chair. For four months I was almost frantic with pain and suffering until I thought sure there could not be any help for me. I had very severe pains in my left side and suffered agony every month. One day when I was not able to get up my mother begged me to try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of Vegetable Compound at once and I took it. I started a second bottle, and to my surprise and joy the pains in my side left me completely and I am able to do all my work without help. I am a farmer's wife, so you see I can't be idle long. In all I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, five boxes of the Compound Tablets, two bottles of Lydia E. "Air costs nothing—lack of it means miles off the life of your tires."

MORE than half your tire troubles are caused by under-inflation. There's a correct pressure for every size tire according to its load. Two or three pounds under this will take miles off its running life.

Near enough won't do. Use a reliable gauge and be sure.

Or, call at this depot once a week and let us look over your tires. We'll watch for bruises, rim cuts and embedded flints. At least twice a season let us remove each tire and look for inside fabric breaks. It will mean extra mileage—and dollars off your tire bills.

A Dominion Tire will give marvelous mileage if you treat it right.

McFAUL BROS., Lachute Mills.

Following the idea of Empire Week our energetic townsman Mr. Jas. W. Cottingham has localized the event by circularizing the people of Argenteuil and surrounding country to attend the Home Exhibition and sale of Special Furniture at their commodious factory on Foundry Street.

The sale has proven a great success and is being continued on until the 30th. April, so don't miss the opportunity of seeing this splendid display.

The well-known store of Robert McFaul is shortly to be taken over by the Miller Bros. Both Alfred and Jack are deservedly popular and are brimful of energy. BEING TAUGHT A LESSON

Hotel-keepers in Lachute and throughout the County are learning that they must not set at defiance the liquor laws of this Province. So many complaints have been reported against them that the renewal of their licenses have been temporarily withheld, and in consequence they have been putting in an anxious time, and are now on their good behaviour.

The hotel-keepers themselves know the punishment meted out to them is justifiable and this action should be sufficient to warn them that they must recognize Sunday selling is not admissible and will not be tolerated. The attitude of the powers that be is most commendable.

QUITE A BLAZE

On Monday afternoon the Fire Brigade were called to a fire in Mr. Carriere's double house on Grace Street, one side being occupied by Mr. LeFebvre. The firemen responded quickly and when they arrived the fire was going strong. On the south side of the track there is but a four inch man and when the hose was put on there was only 18 lb. pressure but the boys connected the pump which immediately boosted the pressure to 60 lbs. Had it not been for the pump nothing could have saved the building and it proved its effectiveness.

It is sometimes questioned as to what is being done with the money from the firemen's dances and the pump is one of the many things secured to benefit our fire equipment, which render more secure the property of our people.

INTERFERING WITH NATURE

BY JACK MINER

In glancing over the many articles written on the crow in our Canadian papers, I notice several writers fall back to this old worn-out argument, "interfering with the balance of Nature." Now, dear readers, I would like a full explanation of the meaning. Does it really mean that no person should attempt to assist Nature? If that is what you are trying to tell me, let me kindly say you are wrong, for I have tested it out and know if man will take God at His promise and work in harmony with Him that man can even change the migrating route of the fowls of the air.

Now remember, I only have an A. B. C. Sunday school education, but there are few of His lovable promises I have been privileged to test out and I know they are true. For illustration, I ask you to read Genesis 1:21-26 and 28 when He said let man have dominion over all. Could anything be written plainer. Last summer our Nettie raised sixty bred-to-lay Plymouth Rocks. We killed and ate twenty-two of the twenty-five roosters. The pullets started laying in October. Now, if we had left the twenty-five cockerels with the thirty-five pullets, would we have had eggs all winter? Don't forget the fowls of the air are all ours and they will come to us for our assistance and protection.

Forty-eight years ago this spring our family moved here on the farm that was then all woods, but on our arrival we were terrified by the rattlesnake stories we heard, and really I was expecting to see snakes as large as clothes props that would strike you at a distance of ten or fifteen feet away and then all was over except a brief report in the weekly town paper—"Those who knew him best, loved him most," and so forth. Well, in a few months I got well acquainted with these rattlers, but, believe me, they were only a little larger than our largest garter snakes and could only strike about a foot or eighteen inches. I have killed as high as six on one Sunday. In fact, I would hunt for hours to find a rattler just to tease him and get him striking a stick. But in a few short years the danger was all over, for, where the snakes were, grew the fields of waving wheat and corn, but mind you, in order to do this we had to "interfere with Nature." Which was for the best for humanity—a rattlesnake jungle or a productive grain field?

My esteemed friend, Mr. Thos. Baty, of London, Ontario, kindly says: "If Jack ever had a pet crow, he never would kill it." Really this makes me laugh. Say, I wonder if there is a man in America who has gathered up more pets from the woods than I have. Crows, crows, why bless your life. I have had them by the dozens and I will admit they are just as cute as they are black. I once had one that would say "Look out" so plain and sharp that he would cause you to inch, but I never kept but one to be over a year old. Then he, like the rest, died guilty of murder in the first degree.

In 1898 I enclosed four acres with a wire fence seven feet high. There I raised English and ringneck pheasants for profit. This pheasantry was right alongside of my brick and drain tile manufacturing plant. I could watch my machinery and overlook the pheasantry all from the same spot. In this way I made my hobby more than self-sustaining and gathered stores of knowledge about the enemies of our birds, and let me say to any young man, breeding game birds for profit is a lovable occupation and there is good money in it. The seven-foot fence is not necessary. All that is required is a dog-proof fence, but remember, unless you educate yourself how to destroy their many enemies, you had better give up the job about two weeks before you start, for this little innocent-looking weasel that is no larger than a Northern Ontario chipmunk will kill from twenty to thirty of your baby pheasants in one night and crawl through one-inch-mesh wire netting to do it, but remember, you are "interfering with the balance of Nature" if you kill him.

I believe the indoor naturalist calls him the Mouse Weasel because the majority of his food is mice. Crows must be checked or they will steal every egg laid unless your brood pens are under netting. But, after the young pheasants are hatched, I found the hawks and weasels their worst enemy. Fifty rods due north of this engine room door is an elm tree and morning after morning have I seen a crow perched in the top watching my neighbor's turkey hen come through the line fence just ninety rods east of the tree. Mr. Crow would sit and watch, and the very minute the turkey came out of the fence row and started back toward home, he would fly straight over and get the egg she had laid. This could all be seen with my field glasses. Smart? I should say so. They are the shrewdest thieves of the bird family, but you say to kill one you are "interfering with the balance of Nature" for God put them here. Yes, I say, God also put the bedbug here, but He gave man dominion over them and the present generation wouldn't hardly know one if they saw it. Crows! God did not put them here to control our poultry, nor our song, insectivorous and game birds. He did not even allow them the privilege of controlling themselves. He left all of this for man to do. Please think that over and look up what he says regarding this point. And, as for the grasshoppers the crows eat, this turkey hen's family would condense all them into a Thanksgiving dinner or into twenty-five or fifty cents a pound, just as you choose.

Now I am not contradicting a word which has been said about the crows eating a few wire worms and grubs and so forth, but here is what I know about it. If he can find them, he will rob at least one hundred of our more desirable birds' nests in order to raise his family or four or five, while, if any one of those murdered song and insectivorous birds were left to mature, they would do twice as much good than a crow ever did.

Now if a man wants to make money that man must study money. The prospector is more apt to find earthly gold than the astronomer. In other words, if a man concentrates on one line he is more apt to catch something on that one hook.

My friend, Mr. Baty, says if I had had a pet crow to study their habits I would know more about them. Let me reply to my friend and kindly say, when he has studied them enough to catch them by the thousands he will know more about them. Personally I have studied birds more than I have my financial obligations, and I am glad of it. They have brought me closer to God and man. If my life's study hasn't taught me something about the habits of the crow, how did I catch five hundred and ten of those organized murderers at one catch? Will you please think that over. I do wish there was nothing but good in the ways of all birds for I don't want to kill any of them, but how can I be humane and protect a baby murderer?

In the spring of 1914 I drove to Point Pelee, a distance of about fifteen miles, where my intimate friend, Mr. Foote H. Conover, and I pulled three hundred and sixty little red cedar seedlings out of the sand. There were none of them over a foot in height. I brought them home and planted them in the clay on May 15, 1914. I cultivated them for five years and today fully ninety-five per cent. of the more over twelve foot high and have been bearing fruit for the last three or four years. Now, isn't that "interfering with Nature"? This is where the five robbers that wintered here got their food and, oh say, this winter we have had a Cardinal added to the songsters and there hasn't been a day but what he has sung for me, and he has fairly set me Cardinal crazy or wise and is going to be the cause of more of my "interfering with Nature," for I am going to import some of these winter and summer singers. I am going to put a pair in each cage. Then, in March, I will let the male bird out, but will feed him on the outside of the cage. Here he will stay, just flitting and singing among the trees, but will not go far from his mate who is still in captivity. Then, after he has got well acquainted with the whole outside proposition, I will let her out and in this way I expect to have the whole place Cardinal with song.

Dear readers, don't let me try it first. Jump in ahead of me. It can be done. Yes, if you are privileged to live in the country, you can make your home into a little earthly heaven by "interfering with the balance of Nature," as you call it, but as I term it, "assisting Nature," for you can get seedling trees from our government forestry departments, free of charge. "If you will plant five hundred of them in the proper place and formation around your home, by cultivating them the same as you would hills of corn for the first five summers, which will not take you over one day a year, in ten years' time these trees will be from twelve to fifteen feet high and will break the wind off your home and, on a cold wintry day, will reduce your fuel bill and, if you can be big enough to ignore the criticism of men and take God's promise as your guide, your assistance will double and treble the quantity and quality of the birds at your home every year."

Scotch pines I planted on a sticky clay field in the spring of 1914 have now grown into a lovely little forest, but the lower limbs are bent by the weight of from three to five thousand mourning doves that have roosted there during August, September and October of the last few summers.

This beautiful frosty morning that father used to call "the 17th of Ireland," I awoke before the stars had closed their eyes and how could I sleep again and miss such a musical feast, for that Cardinal I had mentioned apparently had his voice focused right on my open window, saying in distinct tones: "Good cheer! Good cheer! Good cheer!" This is mingled with the low notes of the song sparrows and even the robins are trying to join in the chorus. The lovable mourning doves, one of God's chief mourners, in low voices, are saying: "Khoo-coo-coo!"

In spite of all this I will admit I was about to doze back into dream-land again when, all at once, the honking of at least a thousand wild geese seemed to echo from every spot on the premises saying: "Home again!" Really, my thoughts drifted nearly one-half century back to the morning we left Ohio when a dear old Yankee by the name of Calvin Pease said to me: "Good-bye, Jackie." Then, as he gripped father's hand, which I believe was for the last time, he said: "John, do you think you can make a living over in Canada for your big family?" Father apparently gripped his hand tighter and he looked him square in the face and replied: "Calvin, we are going to make more than a living—we are going to make a life," but never did the interpretation of this statement ring louder in my living room than it did this morning, March 17th.

JACK MINER.

Editor's Note.—Jack Miner has nothing whatever to commercialize on his bird sanctuary and he has had so many requests for plans of his crow trap that he gave full plans and specifications of same to the United States Government, they in turn placed same in the hands of the Biological Survey who has made blue prints and printed full information and details about same. Parties wanting full plans and blue prints of crow trap can have same by writing and making application for same to The Biological Survey, Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

England Makes Americas Bells

A MELODIOUS GIANT

It was cast at Croydon recently for Riverside Church, New York, weighs 19 tons and is the largest bell in the world.

The Crocuses That Wore Nightcaps

You can't blame the crocuses for coming up too soon. It was really Beryl's fault. One day Beryl ran a little errand for Jerry the Gardener, and the next time Jerry passed by, he popped in and left six crocus bulbs for Beryl, and told her exactly what kind of a place to plant them in, and how deep to put them, and what kind of soil they liked, and everything else he could think of.

When Jerry had gone, Beryl walked round the garden three times, and each time she stopped right underneath her bedroom window and said: "This is the best place to plant them, where I can pop my head out every morning and see if they are coming up. This is where I will plant them."

A Snug Corner.

Now it happened that the stone chimney from the open fireplace in the dining-room was right beside the crocus bulbs, so, although it was a very cold winter, the little crocuses were just as snug as could be, with the warm chimney so close to them.

And then, very early in the spring, long before anybody expected it, the weather suddenly became very mild for a few days, and the snow all melted away, and the ice on the pond turned soft and slushy, and the sun shone all day long. And the little drops of melted snow that trickled down past the crocus bulbs seemed to say: "Spring has come! Spring has come! Wake up! Spring has come!"

And the crocus bulbs woke up, and started pushing their little leaves up through the ground to see if it were really true, and a morning or two later a little sparrow in the apple tree nearly fell off his perch with surprise, and had to blink his eyes three times before he could really believe that six little crocuses were peeping up at him.

"Tweet! Tweet! Tweet!" he said. "Tweet-tweet-tweet-tweet!" and he tweeted so loudly in his surprise that he woke Beryl, and when Beryl peeped out of the window and saw the six little green specks down below she could hardly wait to get her clothes on to go out and see if they really were the crocuses. Then off she skipped to tell Jerry the Gardener.

Jerry's Advice.

But Jerry shook his head. "They came up too soon!" he said. "The frost will nip them!"

"But I don't want the frost to nip them!" said Beryl.

"Well, then," replied Jerry, after rubbing his chin and thinking seriously for a moment, "Well, then, you must make some nightcaps for them!"

"Nightcaps!" laughed Beryl. "Nightcaps—for crocuses!"

"Certainly," replied Jerry, "to keep them warm at night. See, I'll show you. You get a piece of paper, and twirl it into a cone—"

"Why, that's a dunce's cap!" interrupted Beryl.

"That's a nightcap," said Jerry. "You twirl it into a cone, and you twist the tip tightly so that it won't come undone, and every night you must pop one over each crocus to keep it cosy and warm and keep the frost away, and every morning you must take the nightcaps off, so that the crocuses may get the sun."

And that is just what Beryl did. And soon the tiny flower buds began to come, and they got bigger, and bigger, and bigger, until one morning when Beryl took their nightcaps off, there were six beautiful crocus blooms looking right up at her.

Every night Beryl popped their nightcaps on, and every morning she took the nightcaps off again, and though the weather turned frosty again, the crocus blooms lasted such a long time, for the frost couldn't nip them at all.—Christian Science Monitor.

Dr. Paul R. Heyl, who discovered that the world weighed 6,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons, is said to be attempting a recalculation this year. The skeptical ones are at liberty to weigh it themselves.

Business depression cycles will go when the wheels of industry turn steadily.

Jack Miner And the Swans

Kingsville Naturalist Offers Help to Wandering Birds

J. R. Williams, Secretary of the Game Protective Association of Niagara Falls, Ont., notified Jack Miner that 400 swans went over Niagara Falls recently, one half being killed outright and the balance being wounded at the foot of the falls between the rapids and the whirlpool.

Jack Miner immediately wired Ottawa officials requesting them to wire authorities at Niagara Falls to catch all wounded and live birds which are in this death-trap, and express same to him and he would doctor their broken wings and legs and place them on his sanctuary at Kingsville.

Came to Kingsville

For the last five years the swans, numbering many thousands, have come to the lake shore at Kingsville instead of to Niagara Falls. But as the ice was slow in leaving the shore at Kingsville and the weather in North Carolina was so warm, they were compelled to leave their winter home early, and the only open water they could find along the Great Lakes was above the falls at Niagara. There they alighted, only to drift down the river with the current, and during the night and heavy fog drifted over the falls, taking several hundred feet of a drop, which killed or crippled them. Jack has wired the authorities at Niagara suggesting they discharge firearms in the air above the falls and keep the birds from alighting on the river, only to meet their deaths. There is open water at Kingsville now, and between 500 and 1,000 have arrived there. It is hoped by discharging firearms in the air above the falls that other flocks will head toward Kingsville, where a Mounted Police officer is on duty night and day keeping birds from being molested. This protection is provided for in the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.

No Deaths For Years.

Fifteen years ago this species of swan was nearly exterminated, but by being given absolute protection, and by Jack Miner attracting them to Kingsville away from this Niagara death-trap, there has been until now for the last five years practically none go over the falls. Last spring it was estimated there were between 4,000 and 5,000 in the vicinity of Kingsville, which were cared for by a Dominion officer and Jack Miner.

German Donkey Notices Engineer Where to Stop

Berlin.—Railway officials employed at the little station of Cochem in the Rhineland, or, on jerk-water trains stopping there, have given up an unequal battle with a donkey.

This donkey is owned by the local milk dealers' association and has the important mission of pulling the cart with the milk intended for shipment to the station. He has taken it into his head, however, to stop at a certain point alongside the track and to insist that the baggage car must come to a halt there. Attempts to get him to move toward the baggage car in case it was carried a bit beyond him proved futile. He was beaten, tickled, the hose was turned on him—in vain. He would not budge.

The engineers have been instructed to humor the beast and bring the milk car exactly where the donkey decrees that it shall stop.

Wall Street's Hold on the Empire

London Referee (Cons.): The rapid financial penetration of Canada (by the United States) has been made possible by reason of the uniformity of United States and Canadian traditions, national necessities, geographical position, and language. Those factors have always existed. The germ of Empire disruption has always resided therein. . . . And now, when the danger to Empire unity is realized, our Statesmen are failing into the error of believing that these permanent and natural liabilities can be counterbalanced by sentimental rhetoric and preferential markets. . . . They have replied to Wall Street's powerful attacks upon the body and soul of the Empire with such unutterably silly slogans as "Eat Canadian apples." . . . An apple a day will not keep Wall Street away, nor will it keep the Dominion of Canada within the Empire. . . .

Judgment Refuses Copyright To Advertising Agents' Copy

Mr. Justice Astbury, After Four-Day Hearing, Definitely Decided in Favor of Advertiser Against Agency Which Claimed Ownership

London.—A case of great importance to advertisers, advertising agents, and publishers has just been heard in the chancery division of the High Court of Justice. It concerned the point, which apparently had not been raised before in British law, whether copyright in an advertisement prepared by an advertising agency remained the property of the agency or was the property of its client, the advertiser.

The case in question was complicated and somewhat obscure, but the final decision of Mr. Justice Astbury, after a four-days' hearing, was definitely in favor of the client and against the agent, who had brought the action in the endeavor to obtain an injunction restraining both the advertiser and one of the London newspapers from using an advertisement the agent claimed to have prepared.

The agent had prepared an advertisement which his client had inserted in one of the London dailies and on which the agent received his usual commission. Subsequently, the client caused the advertisement to be inserted in another paper, acting directly and without the services of the agent. At this point the agent applied for an injunction prohibiting the further use of the advertisement, on the ground that it was a literary work and as such came within the Copyright Act, under which title would remain in the author, who appeared as plaintiff.

The decision held that no copyright existed so far as the agent was concerned, and that in employing the agent to prepare the advertisement, the advertiser and the agent had, in

Great "Hopper" Plague Over New South Wales

London.—An "Evening News" dispatch from Sydney says the approach of a great plague of grasshoppers is reported from southern New South Wales. The advance guard of the insects was described as twenty miles wide, behind which are swarms extending ten miles, rapidly consuming what was an abundant grass crop. Fences in the area are draped with thousands of insects, while motorists passing through it reported that their radiators were clogged and their windshields covered.

effect, contracted themselves out of the copyright Act. It further held that the agent's interest in the advertisement in question only existed so long as the advertiser continued to use the agent's services. As no contract existed by which the advertiser was bound to continue to use these services, and no copyright as applying to original literary work existed, the agent's application for an injunction against both his former client and the newspaper must fail.

It is assumed that the points of contention in the case can in future be clearly covered in the written agreement between agencies and clients, but in view of the delicate personal relations existing between such parties and of the fact that many firms frequently change their agents, the prospect is not a very pleasant one for the agencies.

Abd el Krim Passes Long Days As Exile Cultivating Garden

Ex-Sultan of Riff, Who Led Tribesmen in Revolt, Enjoys Placid Existence

Abd el Krim, onetime master of the Riff and the man whose hardy mountaineer tribesmen reached the very gates of Fez before they were hurled back by the French in one of the fiercest series of engagements since the World War, says "The London Daily Mail," is supporting his banishment at Saint Denis, in the island of Reunion, in the Indian Ocean, with true Oriental patience.

"The Sultan of the Riff" took with him only two wives out of his numerous harem. They were his favorites, Fatima and Aicha. His other companions in exile are his brother, Si Mohammed, and his uncle Abdeslem, his mother and his sisters and the families of his brother and his uncle. During the long voyage from Casablanca, the chief port of Morocco, to Reunion, a son was born to him, so that he now has three sons.

Abel el Krim's brother discarded his Moorish attire as soon as the ship reached Marseilles, but Abd el Krim himself did not adopt European clothing until he reached Reunion. He is living in a country house rented especially to lodge him, and which has been somewhat hastily dubbed "the Chateau de Mairange." In reality the house has nothing of a castle about it, but consists of only a ground floor and a first floor, with a vegetable garden, an orchard and a meadow adjoining.

His first care was to furnish his new home as comfortably as possible and set his wives and his family at their ease. When he left Morocco he knew only the rudiments of the French language, but he has set himself to study it deeply, and to-day he speaks it as fluently as his brother, who is renowned as a good French scholar.

Abd el Krim's two elder children at tend the local college every day. They speak the Chleuh dialect at home, but the rest of the time they converse fluently in French with their French playmates.

But though Abd el Krim now dresses in European clothes, he continues to observe the customs of his country, and the fullest freedom is allowed him in this respect. He has made the acquaintance of a large number of people on the island and he often passes long hours with his friends, the most intimate of whom is the Lieutenant of gendarmerie.

The former Riff chieftain spends a great deal of his time cultivating his garden, which he is doing with no little success. His two wives, his mother and his two sisters take frequent walks in the country, but always dressed in their native costumes.

Empire Shopping Week in Canada Canada Produced is Empire Produced

New Empire Booster is No New Method to Interest British in the Empire's Products During Week of April 21st to 28th Inclusive

ALL TO TAKE PART

The Executive Committee of Empire Shopping Week in Canada holds strongly to the view that the type of civilization and its promise of development as shown in countries of British Empire, is one that Canadians all desire to encourage for the sake of the present and the future generations. All this, it is conceived, is intimately bound up with the economic and business side of affairs that play so great a part in the daily lives of so many Canadian citizens.

Empire Shopping Weeks are not a novelty. They have been tried with great success in other parts of the Empire, notably in Australia, British West Indies and in Great Britain. These weeks enjoy the cordial approval and co-operation of the Empire Marketing Board, now doing such valuable work in Great Britain and other parts of the Empire. The underlying principle on which the EMPIRE SHOPPING WEEK IN CANADA will operate is the same as that in force in Empire Marketing Board activities. One main thought steadily kept in mind is that a natural first preference be given to goods that are the products of the country in which the week is held, other Empire products receiving the next preference. Produced in Canada is produced in the Empire.

Provincial and local committees are being formed throughout Canada including local representatives of the nine national organizations already interested through the Advisory Council and many other public spirited bodies. The Mayor of each town in Canada has been invited by Hon. James Macleod, Honorary President of the Council, to take a leading part in the local movement. The formation of local committees is thus a part of the approved general plan. The method adopted and approved by the Executive Committee to start Canadian Chamber of Commerce, whose President is on the Advisory Council, along with eight other Presidents of national organizations, and which is represented on the Executive Committee and the Finance Committee of Empire Shopping Week in Canada, outline the Shopping Week movement and organization to all Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce in Canada, and mention a few things that have been carried out by local committees in Empire Shopping Weeks elsewhere.

The last meeting of the Executive Committee authorized the Honorary Secretary to get in direct touch with the local Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce with respect to the weight given to activity of local committees and local papers in considering the extent of space to be used in newspapers and other publications for general advertising.

It may, perhaps, be interesting to consider what is being done elsewhere in Canada. Within two weeks of the first notice being sent, the following towns and cities have actually formed local committees, or have definitely taken steps to do so.—Winnipeg, Moose Jaw, Medicine Hat, Amherst, Vancouver, Halifax, Brockville, Hamilton, Trail, B.C., St. Catharines, Prince Rupert, Brampton, North Bay, Grenfell, Sask., Edmonton, Victoria, Belleville, Prince Albert, Fort William, Quebec, Toronto, Calgary and Montreal.

There is much more in this than the effort to sell goods at retail. Many people think there is scarcely time to do all that should be done locally even with the beginning made immediately. The local publicity gained by the organization of a representative local committee would be the most effective means of reminding manufacturers of their obligation to subscribe, which forms an added reason for acting promptly.

Your Mayor or Reeve has an invitation from the Honorary President to take part in your local movement. Half a dozen or more local branches of National organizations and a number of other local organizations, are ready and waiting the call from your organization to whom was entrusted the leadership in the community effort.

The General Executive Committee is composed of men acting in a representative capacity representing their national organization on the Executive Committee specially selected from the whole group of national organizations whose Presidents form the Advisory Council of the organization.

They have approved of the wording and design of electros for newspaper use, of a broadside to the retailer, telling him the full story, and of show cards and window streamers in liberal quantities for distribution by local committees where they desire to do so.

They will have to consider in the near future the question of the copy that will appear in the newspapers which is an important question demanding the very best thought and most serious consideration. Full consideration with respect to local newspaper space will be given in proportion to the activity and interest displayed locally by the committee and newspapers.

These are simply a few out of the host of national things that the Executive Committee must deal with.

Obviously the General Executive Committee, through the necessity of retaining constantly in their minds the national point of view and national questions, with the best will in the world towards individual localities, cannot undertake definite personal activities on local committees and this outline clearly shows that every dollar from general subscribers will be required for general purposes which are all to help you.

Devolution of duties had to be worked out. For instance, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association undertook the distribution of the booklets to Canadian manufacturers, the Department of Overseas Trade undertook their distribution to other parts of the Empire, the Retail Merchants Association interested their provincial divisions and local organizations, as did also the Canadian Manufacturers' Association for local purposes. The other national organizations are all doing their part in keeping their members informed and serving the general interest in many other ways.

The development of local committees can fill the very important purpose, in which your locality should be taking a lead to make Empire Shopping Week the most stirring event that has happened since the war.

Local Committee activities take the form of making sure that departmental stores and retail stores are definitely co-operating to put on a show during Empire Shopping Week, 21st to 28th of April, arranging for possible municipal co-operation, welcoming the Mayor who has been invited to participate by the Honorary President, or welcoming any representative delegated by him. There are many other ideas such as brief addresses over the radio, cooperation with motion picture houses and all sorts of other features that will help to interest the general public in the movement and provide the small funds necessary for carrying on local work.

This method gives full scope for the use and development of individual initiative in each place which is of the utmost value in devising plans that suit the particular locality and

Ring Your Bell

"I don't need to advertise: I have been in business in this town for 30 years. Every man, woman and child here knows where I am and what I sell." The advertising salesman looked across the street and saw a church. He asked how long it had been built. The storekeeper replied that it had been there for half a century. "And yet they ring the church bell every Sunday morning," the advertising man remarked.

enable local committees to achieve splendid advance press publicity.

The General Executive Committee is arranging for the supply of show cards and window streamers, stickers for use on stationery, electros for newspaper publishers use, a considerable supply of posters and the general display advertising along inspirational and economic lines. The Executive Committee will gladly welcome news of your activities, ideas and suggestions that may be distributed for use in other places.

Under these exceptional auspices Empire Shopping Week in Canada is certain to be a tremendous success. It will do a great work in cementing the bonds of Empire anew and will give Canadians a closer and more interesting "close-up" of The Empire as it is—vast, far-reaching and firmly knit within itself, a great power for good in the world to-day.

Canada to Open Ships-to-Cities Air Mail Line

Planes Will Meet Liners on Arrival, Then Speed to Montreal and Toronto

May Link Winnipeg in 1929 Flyers Effective in Opening Northwest Territory

Montreal.—Plans have been completed by the Canadian Post Office Department for an extension of the air mail service connecting large cities, such as Montreal and Toronto, with the first land stop of trans-Atlantic liners. The winter tests have been proceeding for air mail service from St. John's and Halifax to Montreal. Last fall service was successfully maintained from St. John and Halifax to Montreal and between Rimouski and Montreal. The latter service is to be resumed and extended down the north shore of the St. Lawrence to Murray Bay and Anticosti Island.

A more important extension is to be inaugurated with the carriage of mail to and from ocean liners between Rimouski and Montreal and Toronto. The contract for the service to Toronto is to be awarded in the near future. It will give Toronto quick delivery of letter mail to and from Europe. If the Toronto service proves successful, in another year an extension of it as far west as Winnipeg will be made.

This last step, if it can be achieved, will go far toward establishing a regular transcontinental airway, across Canada. The actual need for such an airway at the present time is doubted by some business men who have given their unqualified support to the development of air lines covering territory north and south of the transcontinental railway system.

The airplane has proved an effective instrument in opening up territory in the northwest of Canada. The air operations through this district, which presented many handicaps to the pilot, and where forced landings were extremely dangerous, have been fairly successful.

The Western Canada Airways operates a regular service from Winnipeg into the mining districts to the north. A fleet of Fokker Universal planes, delivered to the Winnipeg base this winter by Hernt Balchen, now maintains a regular service into this district.

Ever thought of endowing your home?

It's very easy to do it.

Suppose—having purchased a house and effected a mortgage on it—you should die suddenly!

Wouldn't your wife and family have a hard time meeting the interest on the mortgage and discharging the principal sum when due? Not so, however, if you were insured under an Imperial Endowment policy for the amount of the mortgage. A small amount invested each year in such a policy will enable your heirs to pay the mortgage immediately after your death, even if it should occur next week. On the other hand, if you should live until the policy matures you can pay off the indebtedness yourself out of the amount of the Endowment.

Have you a mortgage on your home? Then let us show you how you can make sure of its repayment whether you live or die.

EMPIRE SHOPPING WEEK.

Some day, the nations of the British Commonwealth may have devised a simple method of making it possible to sell goods produced within the Commonwealth at prices much below the cost of good from outside sources. It would be a real stimulus to trade, but it would have to be done in some more effective way than by tariff manipulation.

In the meanwhile, the publicity campaign of the British Empire Marketing Board is doing good work in keeping Empire goods before the British public. During this week in Canada an effort is being made to stimulate the interest of Canadian consumers in Empire goods.

Other things being equal, the public are urged to buy goods which have been produced under the British flag, including, of course, goods made in Canada. Such an appeal may seem to be ephemeral, but it is at least a friendly gesture from Canada in response to the fine lead given by the Empire Marketing Board in Great Britain.

On a former occasion, The Citizen has discussed the possibility of annually observing the 24th. of May by serving an Empire menu on Empire Day. It is possible to serve a complete meal to satisfy the most epicurean taste without going outside of the British Commonwealth for one item or ingredient.

By enlisting the school children in the geography lessons, mothers might become interested in the Empire menu plan. Last year the Department of Agriculture showed in Toronto, that an excellent dinner could be served entirely of Canadian produce with every province represented on the menu.

With other lands to draw upon in addition, the problem of observing Empire Day with an Empire meal should be comparatively simple. There is this to be said for Empire Shopping Week, wherever the standard of British thoroughness is maintained, shoppers can buy with the assurance that the quality is right as well as the price.

THE LATE MRS. JOS. J. YOUNG.

Deep sorrow was cast over the community, when the angel of death removed from our midst one of our most esteemed residents, in the person of Mrs. Joseph James Young. Her death was not wholly unexpected as she has been a patient sufferer for some time. The news came as a shock that medical skill could be of no aid to her, and she gradually became weaker until on Thursday evening, April the 12th, she passed to her Eternal Reward. She was forty nine years old.

She was deeply interested in the work of the Church, being an active worker in the Ladies' Aid. Her life was one of self-sacrifice to those around her and of devotion to her Master.

The funeral service, conducted by Rev. Lloyd Somerville was held in the United Church, Avoca, on Saturday and in spite of the very inclement weather, the church was filled with her friends and neighbors.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband and eight children, six sons and two daughters, her mother who came East to attend to her in her sickness, and four brothers. The sympathy of the whole community is extended to them in their sorrow.

DEATH OF

MISS L. M. HARRINGTON.

The parish of St. Andrews has suffered a great loss in the death, on April 17th, of Miss Laura M. Harrington. In every part of the community are hearts that mourn her passing. Her influence was felt in all the best phases of the village life. Her gentle personality won the respect and affection of her fellowtownsfolk, and her quietly expressed opinions had behind them the weight of a remarkably consistent character. She will long be remembered for her willingness to help in every good work, her keen interest in missionary enterprise, her invaluable contributions to the musical life of the place, and her universal friendliness and charity. Her home was a veritable House by the Side of the Road, and many were the weary travellers who found rest and refreshment under her hospitable roof.

At her funeral service, the Presbyterian church was filled with friends from village and countryside, who, with her nephew and nieces from Montreal, gathered to pay her their last tribute. She leaves no relatives in this town, but, as the officiating minister said, her many friends here will mourn her just as deeply as if they were her next of kin. Her memory will always remain green in their hearts.

AIR PLANES ARE TRICKY AND ACT AS IF "POSSESSED"

Odd Mishaps to Pilots in Which the Elements of Comedy and Tragedy Mingled

Two recent airplane accidents, one here and one in South Africa, bring to mind a number of queer mishaps that have occurred in the short history of aviation, especially during the war period. Many of these have never been explained; some were tragic and others provided a comic relief from the monotony of training embryo aviators or from the nervous tension of flying in wartime.

When Lieutenant R. H. Hicks's plane took off on its own accord from Mitchell Field airport recently it was not the first time that such an event has taken place. Several years ago a pilot landed on a flying field in England to visit a friend. Taxing up to the hangars, he jumped out and left his engine running, intending to return almost immediately. This was a double infraction of the regulations. In the first place, he should not have left his engine running and, in the second instance, he should not have left the control lever unhitched, which he did.

What happened, apparently, was that a sudden puff of wind got under the starboard ailerons, forcing the control stick over to one side, thus sharply striking the throttle lever, which was fixed to the side of the fuselage. The next instant the plane, engine full on, was careering madly down the field. Being stable, it rose of its own accord and was soon lost to view. Eventually it was found, more than a mile away, a complete crash.

The cause of a similar accident is much more mysterious. A line of seven or eight heavy bombers of the pusher type were being loaded on an aerodrome in France, preparatory to a raid. At one side of the line another machine was being wheeled out of the hangar. For some reason or other it was left facing the end of the line of planes, about 100 yards further along the field. A mechanic, so he said afterward, thought the switch was on and promptly threw it out. It appeared that the switch on this particular machine was upside down, and the mechanic, instead of throwing it out, threw it in, but the moment he did so the engine started up in some mysterious way, carrying the plane straight for the line of bombers. With almost meticulous precision the bottom port plane caught each of the rudders of the waiting machines, causing them to fall heavily backward upon their tail booms.

PAINTS IN AIR.
Lady Heath's recent experience in fainting in the air from an attack of sunstroke and yet landing safely but unconscious on the African veldt was one that had several parallels in wartime aviation. In the early part of the war some British pilots saw a British plane coming away from the lines in a long, steady glide. It passed low directly over an aerodrome, and yet the pilot made no attempt to circle and land. Suspicious that a German had got hold of a British machine and was attempting a landing on their side of the lines, the officers in question seized a tender that happened to be at hand and drove off at high speed in the direction in which the plane had disappeared.

Ten minutes later they came across the machine in the middle of a large field, its propeller stopped, and the pilot and observer still sitting in their respective cockpits. The officers, stopping the tender, shouted to them, but there was no response. Still thoroughly suspicious, they approached the silent machine—both pilot and observer were stone dead. Closer investigation showed that the observer had been shot and instantly killed, while the pilot, mortally wounded, had had presence of mind before he lost consciousness to head his plane home and switch off the engine. He probably had died on the way down.

Perhaps one of the queerest accidents that ever happened occurred when a certain young pilot took off at night on a heavy bomber for a raid across the lines. The machine, instead of rising from the ground toward the end of the flare path, ran straight through it, off the flying field proper on to a soft field at the end, where it gradually slowed down and finally turned on its nose in an easy, gentle motion, at least so it appeared in the uncertain light of dusk. When the machine was reached a minute or so later it was found that the observer had been thrown head first into a mudhole, and was in the comical process of scraping the mud from his face when the rescuers arrived. The pilot, however, was dead with a broken neck, and yet the plane was not in the least damaged and was flown that very night across the lines.

FLEW IN KILTS.
More humorous was the case of a pilot who was known as the "Mad Highlander," partly because he always flew in kilts and partly because he was intrepid to the point of idiocy. One day, having flown for about ten hours all told, he took up an Avro to about 5,000 feet, where he put it in a spin and spun down from that height straight into the ground. The engine was buried nearly three feet deep, while the fuselage and wings were reduced almost to splinters—but from the midst of the wreckage the "Mad Highlander" emerged, complaining loudly that he had cut his knee!

Still funnier was the case of a certain squadron commander who never flew except twice a year to qualify for his flying pay. No one, so far as is known, ever encouraged him to go up, for when he did he invariably crashed. On one occasion he discovered that he must y immediately or forfeit a not inconsiderable part of his income. A machine was wheeled out for him, the nominal owner looking ruefully on. The wind was blowing across some greenhouses to one side of the field, and there was not a man present who did not feel exactly what form the inevitable disaster would take—so much so, indeed, that the flight commander sent some mechanics to the edge of the field nearest the glass houses.

The gallant major walked breathlessly out of his office, clad like an Eskimo, though it was a warm summer day. "Nominal Owner" shook his head sadly, threw a parting kiss to his cherished plane and walked hastily away in the direction of the officers' mess. Before taking off the major instructed a mechanic to note his time in the air with a stop watch—it was only necessary for him to fly twice a year; the regulations were delightfully vague concerning the length of each flight.

Finally the chocks were taken away from the wheels and the major rushed away in a dust to the centre of the field, the plane swaying to port and starboard like an angry cat's tail. Up he went—straight into the greenhouses. The plane, as usual, was almost a complete write-off, but the major, cheerful as ever, was, also as usual, unhurt. Tearing back to the mechanic with the stop watch he yelled, "Did you get the time?" "Yes, sir," responded the mechanic, dryly, "forty-five seconds." "Good!" said the major. (N.Y. Times.)

FARM AND GARDEN FERTILIZERS.

Fertilizers are not the doubtful products they were a generation or longer ago, nor are they limited to a few brands and descriptions. Plant food materials and mixtures occupy a considerable place in commerce and industry, and their production involves heavy investment of capital and occupation. In all Canada more than sixty firms are turning out fertilizers of simple or complex form involving almost three hundred brands. These, with the exception of certain standard materials including sulphate of ammonia and superphosphate, have all to be registered with the Dominion Seed Commissioner whose branch of the Dept. of Agriculture administers The Fertilizers Act. In this administration the many brands of commercial fertilizers are inspected and analyzed to see that the buying public are not imposed upon or defrauded when the fertilizer is purchased subject to analysis with manufacturers and importers are required to guarantee in percentage of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, the three essential plant foods. The results of these analyses are each year published for the information of those who are interested.

The analyses carried out during the fiscal year 1926-27 are reported in Pamphlet No. 86, distributed by the Publications Branch of the Dept. at Ottawa. These analyses cover 183 complete mixed fertilizers, 92 fertilizers containing only two plant foods, and 18 containing only one of the three recognized essential plant foods. In the entire year's work but twenty-one brands were found by analysis to fall below the guaranteed analysis of the trade. It was found necessary to conduct five prosecutions and to issue warnings for several minor offences. Incorrect labelling was the principal offence other than failure to meet the guaranteed analysis. The report which contains the results of analyses of samples of fertilizers taken by inspectors during the registration year, reports the increasing use of fertilizers in Canada as indicated by an estimated excess of 20,000 tons over the previous year, bringing the amount up to about 180,000 tons used for commercial purposes.

NEOLOGISMS.

A couple of new words have recently swam into our ken. Professor Jastrow in a recent article advised mentally tired folk to "Take a relaxative." Entirely new that, we believe. The other word is of the portmanteau variety. It is from the Kalends: "No longer will estimated costs be 'guesstimated.'" Expressive words! Instead of speaking of a "rough estimate" we shall presently be calling it a "guesstimate," thus saving two letters and a syllable.

Free Time For Children

Viola Woodville

No mother ever loved a child better than Mrs. Winter loved Margery nor tried harder to give her every advantage. That was the whole trouble. She tried too hard. "She stood up so straight that she leaned over backwards," as my dear father used to say. Well, Mrs. Winter nearly killed Margery, and I'll tell you about it, just as she told me after Margery had become a rosy-cheeked high school freshman.

"Margery grew so thin and listless," said Mrs. Winter, "though she was faithful to all her work, that I saw the scientific care that I gave her, I could not understand it. One morning she wouldn't get up to do her practising and there was nothing for it but to call the doctor."

"Dr. Stevens was as much like an old-time family physician as exists now-a-days, and I had known him all my life. He scarcely knew Margery, though, because she had always been so well. When he came he merely had a little visit with the child and then talked with me out in the hall."

"Is your daughter usually an active child?" he asked.

"She used to be a little dreamer," I answered, "until I trained her out of it. I wanted her to get the full use of all her time, and now she accomplishes a great deal."

"I meant, what exercise does she get?"

"Her play time is supervised at school, and I see to it that she has a walk very often. I go with her myself, and we study birds and plants. With her extra lessons I want her to have plenty of outdoors."

"Then I told him how much talent Margery had for drawing and music and how I saw to it that she had opportunities that very few children enjoyed. 'She has accepted a very high standard,' I added, 'as the goal she is working towards, and I feel that she will be creative in one or both of these lines.'

"When he questioned about her diet I could tell even to the number of calories she had in her well balanced meals. 'Can you wonder, Doctor,' I asked, 'that I am surprised that with all my care she is now in bed with nothing much the matter?'

"'Nothing but nervous prostration!' he burst out, 'a ridiculous condition in a child with a mother as intelligent as I thought you were, Caroline. Poor little thing! Even her walk a study period. No time to herself. A little slave to her mother's ambition.'

"'Careful, Doctor!' I had to throw in. 'Now, Caroline, you are going to let your old friend tell you that no good intentions are going to alter the fact that you have put this child to a program that few grown people could stand. Her whole nature has rebelled. No matter how exactly you weigh her food it isn't going to nourish her body if her spirit is in a cage.'

"'Children need time to dream, time to plan their own games, time to do nothing at all. They may have little duties—should have them—but not the large responsibilities that you have put on your child. Think it over, and you'll know I am right. Give Margery wholesome food, but let her choose for herself what she likes, and how much, for a time. Stop so many extra lessons while school is in session, and above all let the child alone. Because her mother loves her, she'll be all right soon. Let me see her again before long.'

"The good old doctor took himself off, and I brought out a book of fairy stories that I had hidden and gave it to Margery," concluded Mrs. Winter.

And I will say for her that she used the same intelligence in relaxing her vigilance that she had used in holding Margery to her system.

A cub reported, frequently reprimanded for prolixity and warned to be brief, turned in the following: "A shocking affair occurred last night. Sir Edward Hopeless, a guest at Lady Panmore's ball, complained of feeling ill, took a highball, his hat, his coat, his departure, no notice of his friends, a taxi, a pistol from his pocket, and finally his life. Nice chap. Regrets and all that."

Husband (on phone)—"So, honey, I'll be awful busy at the office and won't be home till late." Wife—"Can I depend on that?"

Like Fish in Pond, Cat on Land, Is Neither

Eldorado, Kan.—A real curiosity is being displayed here in the business district. A queer creature about one foot long, which was found in a pond near here, appears to be half fish and half animal. The creature's body is that of a fish, having gills, head and tail like a channel cat. Large bunches of tendrils are back of each gill. It has four strong legs with feet similar to a frog's. It moves freely, like a lizard, when on the ground. When in the water occasionally it swims to the top, catching flies and snapping like a dog.

Blackmail Victims Aided

For some time it has been noticed that prosecutors in British blackmailing trials had remained incognito. The reason was divulged to have originated in a plan of the London Judges, made known on March 1 in a case tried at the Old Bailey, when a servant named John Wright was sentenced to three years' penal servitude for attempting to blackmail his master, "Mr. B." and his fiancée, "Miss A."

Wright, it was declared by the prosecuting counsel, Francis Peregrine, had demanded "enough hush money to take him out of the country." "Miss A" was taken into the secret and advised "Mr. B" not to pay, that she herself would handle the blackmailer. She made an appointment with him which he failed to keep. Then he came to her house. She left him for a moment and telephoned the police. When, on her return, Wright demanded £100 for some letters and a hotel bill, the police entered and arrested him.

When the counsel for the defendant demanded that the plaintiff should be put on the stand and identified, the Recorder, Sir Ernest Wild, K.C., said that this could not be done, and he explained the agreement entered into by the London courts not to expose the prosecutors in blackmailing cases. He added:

"Blackmail is the only class of crime where there is a consensus of judicial opinion that the names of persons blackmailed should not be published. Otherwise such persons might be afraid to bring an offender to justice. The result has been that a number of persons have lodged complaints who otherwise would never have dared to do so. The procedure, it is believed, will in time measurably reduce the practice of the crime."

Mother — (disappointedly) — "You find the Baron socially impossible?"
Daughter—"Yes, he's so lacking in manors, mother."

Of course we will know more about the virtues of this new marriage idea when we see how many golden weddings are celebrated on the companionate basis.

Farm Notes

SPRING CARE IN MARKETING EGGS.

Why is it that farmers who give the utmost care to their milk, to cool it and keep it clean, who carefully sort the potatoes they send to market, persist in selling dirty eggs? The question is one which puzzles those interested in the egg trade—men who know the depressing effect these dirty eggs have on the market. Farmers will sort their potatoes because they know that consumers do not want a small, scabby, ill-appearing product. They will keep their milk clean because they know that nothing will turn consumers against milk more than dirt. The same consumer preference is exerted in eggs, as is instanced by the success of standardized egg grading, but all farmers do not seem to have realized the necessity of producing and marketing clean eggs.

A very interesting commentary on this matter was provided recently by Mr. E. J. Smith, manager of the Whyte Packing Co. of Brockville, Ontario, when he stated that dirty eggs and their related evil, washed eggs, represented one of the greatest problems and biggest sources of loss in the egg trade, a loss which eventually the producer has to bear.

"Dirty eggs," said Mr. Smith, "are repulsive to the consumer and lessen the demand for all eggs. Washed eggs deteriorate quickly and, if stored, usually come out of storage spoiled and unfit for use. It would be a decided advantage to producers if they would give a little care to keeping nests, poultry houses and yards clean and we are confident that a little attention to sanitary conditions would result in much better prices. It would also add much to the attractiveness and pleasure of doing business."

Mr. H. R. Gray, managing director of Gunn, Langlois & Co. Ltd., Montreal, and president of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association, in a recent interview goes a little further and explains why natures' covering on the egg should not be removed.

"Dirty eggs," said Mr. Gray, "should never be washed if they are going to be sold and marketed through the regular channels. Every farmer knows that the egg is wet when laid. This moisture, or mucous, dries on the shell and serves the purpose of filling the pores of the shell without sealing them, thus filtering any air that may pass through. The shell itself with its two inner membranes forms the protective wall of the egg, and by washing the egg one will remove the gelatinous coating on the shell which serves as a protection for the contents. When this coating is removed the egg have a tendency to deteriorate faster, especially if they are placed in storage."

"Cleanliness of shell affects the quality of the egg directly, that is, if the egg is clean it will hold up better in storage than a dirty or stained egg. Cleanliness affects the price also. The Canadian Egg Standards require that Fresh Extras be clean and Fresh Firsts reasonably clean, so that if producers market dirty eggs they must be sold either as Seconds or in the class of Cracked and Dirty Eggs."

"If eggs are going to reach the market in good condition the first step must be taken by the farmer in proper care of handling. A poor quality egg will always remain an inferior product. The fundamental thought in handling eggs should be to preserve

Australia's Great Bird Man Bert Hinkler Sets High Mark

In a $3,500 Plane and a Trip Cost of $250 He Blazes a New Path in Air Performances in Flight From London to Australia

OPENS NEW VISTAS

Twelve thousand miles flown in fifteen and a half days in a tiny British flivver plane, at a cost of two cents a mile, through a variety of treacherous climatic conditions—that is the accomplishment by which Hinkler, the Anzac ace, has won the applause of the British Empire and the praise of the world. Making a new speed record from London to Australia, he "flew a machine costing but $3,500," notes the Washington Star in a congratulatory editorial, "with a motor developing less than thirty horse-power. Including food, fuel, and accommodations, his expenses from Croydon airdrome, outside of London, to his home-town field in Australia, were two hundred and fifty remark that this trip," coupled with dollars." And The Star goes on to the nine-hundred-mile flight of the Ford flivver plane on fifty-two gallons of gasoline, demonstrates that airplane cost and maintenance is rapidly being developed to conform to the average pocketbook." Such a trend we are told will automatically open up an entirely new field for aviation, for: Potential flyers all over the world will prick up their ears when it is brought home to them that flying is being made as cheap as motoring. It has long been the dream of manufacturers to produce a small, safe, economical machine, and such exhibitions as have been given by Hinkler in Australia and Brooks in America lead to the conclusion that the time is not in the too distant future when the dream will become an actuality.

FIVE NEW RECORDS.

Hinkler's flight is said to have established five new air records, "which surely," for praise of his achievement as one of the most remarkable feats of skill and endurance in the history of flying. Specifically: The five claims in his behalf are that this is the first non-stop flight between London and Rome, the fastest journey between England and India, the fastest flight between England and Australia, the longest light-plane flight ever made, and the longest solo flight in any kind of plane. The last-named item particularly impresses the imagination. New airplane speed records between England and India and between England and Australia are achievements to be proud of, but this latest triumph, like Lindbergh, is a "lone eagle," and that fact intensifies the respect that is felt for him, just as it has heightened admiration for the American. It takes super-courage as well as a super-confidence in one's vehicle to set forth on one of these tremendous adventures single-handed. Another feature reminiscent of the American flyer, as the statement that on the trip to Port Darwin he reached all of his fifteen stopping points "on time." Another perfectly functioning pilot in a well-nigh perfect machine!

A WONDERFUL PLANE.

And the plane itself is far from the least remarkable part of the Hinkler flight. It is said that the primary object of his trip was to test a new undercarriage of his own invention. His plane is fitted with a swinging undercarriage and folding wings, enabling the machine to be housed in a garage and making it easily handled by one man. That a diminutive plane of this description should prove capable of flying across Europe, Asia, and the Indian Ocean without mishap, and in record time, may be accounted another of the aerial miracles of the twentieth century.

ADVENTURES ENOUGH.

After leaving Europe's fogs (which he had feared), he says: After that for a long time I seem to remember nothing but endless stretches of desert. Once I sighted a group of Arab tents with tethered camels. A whole day I was lost in Libya, and as I was trying to clear a space in the desert for a take-off, a party of Arabs cantered up. It was an anxious moment. There were friendly overtures on my part, and then they helped me with the clearing. A few minutes later I was again pushing on over the desert, and then at last came the stony wastes of Palestine.

In India I remember three things—blistering heat, air-currents that threw us about like a shuttlecock, and endless crowds of kind-hearted people pressing hospitality upon us. Whenever the East Indies are mentioned I shall think of rain-storms and my gallant little machine plowing on through rains so heavy one couldn't see the ground.

And then last night came the coast of Australia, a clearing in the jungle, a native hut, and mosquitoes, drowns and droves of them. There was a hasty filling up from a dump of gasoline tins, and only 1,000 miles remained between me and home.

The last stage from Blina to Port Darwin, I will never forget. I flew for hour after hour over an unbroken expanse of sea with not a ship in sight, guided only by my compass and estimating the drift by guesswork. Almost to the minute I calculated, the loom of land appeared on the starboard. It became sharper, the nearer it grew, until I saw Bathurst Island, the first glimpse of my native soil for eight years.

AS THE PRESS SAW IT.

A lyrical note creeps into the British papers over Hinkler's achievement. James Douglas, editor of the London Sunday Express, writes:

He is like one of those mighty Australians who used to lean lazily against the Nelson Column plinth in Trafalgar Square while they were on leave from Armageddon.

These Antipodean giants help us to look even a Lindbergh in the eye when we happen to forget our own Titans with humdrum names like Smith and Brown, Segrave and Campbell. They enable us to see our prodigies as others see them. Hinkler is a true antidote to our poison of self-humiliation.

He provides history a hundred years hence with an excuse for saying that there were giants in those days. He robs us of any pretext for fearing that our young men are inferior to the best that ever have been. A race which breeds a Hinkler is not exactly degenerate.

The air seems to develop a new sense in the birdman. It is like the unknown sense which enables migrant birds to steer their course across seas and continents. I used to sit on the Virgin's Rock at Biarritz and watch the birds flying from France to Spain, on their way to Africa. They knew their route.

A strange thing happened one evening during a voyage from Alexandria to Naples. The Mauretania was half-way across the Mediterranean, with no ad in sight. Suddenly the swift ship overtook a cloud of birds. They were flying from Africa to Europe.

They were wise enough to take a lift. They settled on the funnels and the masts. Some of them were so wing-weary that they tumbled on the deck. Next morning they had all gone. They had taken their rest and then resumed their journey. They knew where they were going.

A hero like Hinkler is half a bird and half a man. He has the bird sense of direction, in addition to his scientific instruments and his maps. Flying seems to refine and aerate the brain. It brings into play latent and dormant powers of the intellect. If Hinkler had been a chauffeur he would never have been a winged victory.

The air is making men masters of their own mental and physical machinery. It is teaching them the highest qualities of self-control. It is giving them a new moral poise and rhythm. The airman can not be an eagle without being a man.

There is hardly a point of piloting in which Hinkler will not rank with the best of any country, but his outstanding qualities are endurance and persistence. Among British civilian pilots there are, perhaps, some half-dozen who are absolutely first-class in the matter of "hands" on the joystick. Probably the three names which occur first to the mind are Courtney, Broad and Hinkler.

As for high speed work, the last time that Great Britain entered civilian pilots for the Schneider Cup (in 1925, at Baltimore) our team consisted of Broad, Bland and Hinkler. Last year, when there was difficulty in finding a test pilot to take that very novel Schneider seaplane, the Crusader, off the water for the first time, Colonel Bristow sent for Hinkler, who, knowing that he risked his life, carried out the tests.

If one turns to cross-continent flying, every man in the street will know the two names Cobham and Hinkler. But, for long-distance work in small single-seaters Hinkler's name stands alone. That means that as a navigator he is almost as good as he is as a pilot.

All last summer Hinkler was hankering after his native Australia. It is undoubtedly par excellence the flying country of the future. It may be doubted whether Australia yet has need for such a super-pilot as Hinkler, while Great Britain certainly does need him.

Class War

H. A. Fisher, in the Contemporary Review (London): (Trotzky says that the struggle between the two classes is rapidly driving Britain to revolution). Trotzky takes hopes for realism. There are no two classes struggling to the death in Britain. We are far too intelligent and humorous a people to indulge in such forms of fanatical suicide. Moreover, the country is too prosperous. We pay our debts, we maintain our exchange. If some old industries show signs of decline, others are springing up to take their place. The Savings Bank returns do not indicate a society suffering from a mortal economic disease. Since the beginning of this century we have become a nation of investors, of men and women who stand to lose by listening to counsels of force. And so, should violence be resorted to, victory would not go to the secretaries of Communism.

It would seem from the reports that the proper spelling is "companionate marriage."

And These Were The People To Suggest "Down Arms"

CEREMONIAL OF WORLD'S LARGEST ARMY

Just a bit of the big parade of Russia's defenders. The soldiers of the Soviet's Red army were drawn up in Red square, in the shadow of the Kremlin, for final inspection by their chiefs.

Prince of Wales is Given Delicate Hint Suggesting Marriage

London.—The Evening Star diplomatically suggests marriage to the Prince of Wales in the following editorial:

"You will not get far without the help of the women," said the Prince of Wales. "With it you can do almost anything."

"We hope we will not be considered indelicate to point out that without that help the Prince himself has got as far as his 35th year nor, it will be conceded, has he fared so badly, so far. But, if in his state of bachelor loneliness, he has achieved so much, what might he have done had he that added advantage to which he pays such tribute. We have poetical authority for the rather contrary belief that, even to the steps of the Throne—He travels the fastest who ravel alone—but the Prince was on the steps of the Throne to start with, so the inferred handicap hardly applies. "You will not get far without the help of the women." Out of his own mouth—out of his own tribute—it is a high compliment, but there is a higher one still which a bachelor prince could pay."

The Prince's tribute to the women was delivered in an address to a social organization.

A Good Reason.

Mr. Lamp—"Why don't you marry me, Miss Clock?"
Miss Clock—"I could never marry any one who goes out at night as much as you do!"

New Stamp Initiates Tale On Kings Head

Standerton, S. Afr.—A certain South African woman was most indignant when she discovered that the new Union stamps no longer bear the head of King George. At first she refused to buy the new issue. She told the post officials that she did not want penny stamps bearing an old-fashioned ship in Table Bay—she wanted only those with the King's head on them.

The officials shrugged their shoulders, and finally she was forced to take the stamps, despite the old-fashioned ship. By way of protest, however, she had a die specially manufactured for herself and with this she presses the King's head on each envelope just next to the stamp before posting a letter.

Man Victoria Kissed In '63 Dies in Ulster

Ballymoney, Ireland.—Daniel McCoy, whose proudest boast was that he was kissed by Queen Victoria, is dead.

The Queen was inspecting the Sherwood Foresters Regiment in 1863, when she saw young McCoy, a trumpeter and not yet sixteen years old. Stopping, she gave the lad a motherly kiss, then said: "I think you are too young to be a soldier yet. It is at home with your mother you should be."

Chicagoism

Forum (New York): The lawlessness of Chicago and of the United States is partially explained by a lack, not of leaders, but of all desire to follow intelligent and noble leadership. All our standards, save the money standard, are thus being ruined. "Followership" is almost unknown in the land. As a well-known writer has pointed out, there is a sort of Gresham's law of mental currency, by which good, well-considered opinion is being constantly driven out by that which is hasty, impulsive and bad. Our problem is to counteract this tendency. Our problem is to establish the habit of following leaders who have decent and informed standards. Whether this can be done by grafting an aristocracy upon our democratic social structure I do not attempt to say. The point is that if America is to avoid sinking into the mire of mediocrity, lawlessness, and crime which we may call "Chicagoism," "followership" must be established soon. Otherwise all nobility and all standards will go.

A Toy

As children that with lingering looks, When the time ends for play Put up their pretty picture-books And tidy toys away.

So now, with your deep faith for guide, We see the rubric run? And reverently must lay aside Your love and mine, dear one.

Yet ev'n as wistful girls and boys At reading, writing, sums, Plan ever and anon new joys Ere the next playtime comes.

May we not warm our hearts with dream And vision—maybe vain!—Through darkness catch the roseate gleam Of dawn that breaks again?

—Dermot Freyer in the Cambridge Review.

Found Gems Too Late

Ten-Year Limit Bars Frenchwoman From Recovering Necklace

Newspapers of Nice relate the story of a diamond necklace which having been buried in Russia in November, 1917, by a Mme. Giraud, was identified by her in a Nice jeweler's shop the other day.

She told the local police that she had purchased the necklace at Nice for 40,000 francs in 1905, and had taken it to Russia where her husband had business. When the Bolshevik revolution broke out she buried it, with other valuables, on her property, and left the country.

She accompanied the police to the jeweler's, where the price marked on the necklace was 500,000 francs. She is said to have identified it beyond question with the evidence submitted by the jeweler from whom she had purchased it in 1905. The other jeweler, on his side, proved his good faith with a record of the hands through which the necklace had passed since 1918.

So far as has been discovered under the French law, Mme. Giraud cannot recover her property. Abandoned property cannot be claimed after ten years' abandonment; stolen property cannot be recovered if the present possessor received it in good faith from a person who had no connection with the theft.

The Occupation of Egypt

New Statesman (London): It is futile to lose our tempers with the Nationalists, and to gird at them, as some of our newspapers are doing, for their "Oriental ingratitude." Of course, we have during the past half-century conferred great benefits on Egypt, and there are few Egyptians who do not appreciate our services. But the benefits were after all forced upon them, and for our own sake as well as theirs, as they know very well. And, as we know very well, peoples who are asking for freedom are not easily persuaded to accept prosperity in lieu of it.

Bootlegger Dupes Customs Officer

Changed Seats With Vancouver Pastor, Who Sat on the Whisky

Vancouver—One sunny morning, not long ago, Lieut.-Col. G. O. Fallis, pastor of the Canadian Memorial Church in Vancouver, and instigator of International Good-will Day, boarded the Seattle train on his way to Bellingham.

Shortly before reaching the Customs at Blaine, a rather drowsy down-at-the-heel looking fellow, who occupied the seat across the aisle, enquired of the clergyman if he would be kind enough to exchange seats. "I have not been feeling well of late," said he, "and would like to take a sleep in the sun."

"By all means," replied Col. Fallis, who is intensely human and always ready to "serve." "Just roll up here and make yourself comfortable and if there is anything I can do for you, let me know," and without any intervention the exchange was executed, the clergyman occupying his time with a copy of the London Illustrated News, while his newly formed acquaintance developed his drowsiness into a well ordered snore.

A mile or two more of glittering steel and the Customs officer was seen ambulating down the aisle. "Good morning Col. Fallis. Going down to Bellingham?"

The man across the aisle pulled himself together, evidently wishing the crisis was over, as he glanced at the ever-observant eye of the examiner.

"No, sir," replied the man. "Stand up," said the officer, then proceeded to search the seat.

Falling in his efforts, he passed on, assuring himself that all was well.

Half an hour later the train pulled into a country station. "Excuse me," said the man across the aisle, as he bent forward and pulled from under the seat where Col. Fallis was sitting two bottles of Scotch.

Hello New York, Paris Speaking

Telephone Service Inaugurated by Engineers Who Spoke Across Ocean in 1915

New York.—The first words heard across the Atlantic Ocean have just been repeated here with the inauguration of commercial telephone service between the United States and Paris. "Good night, Shreve," said R. R. Webb as he sat before a telephone in the director's room of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. here. And almost instantly, Col. M. E. Shreve, who, at the Eiffel Tower in 1915, had heard the first voices to span the Atlantic, replied from the Parisian end of the line.

The two engineers who participated in the first successful trans-Atlantic telephone experiments, with 16 others who took part in the pioneer work, were present at the inaugural of service between the United States and France.

W. B. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and Maj.-Gen. J. J. Carty, vice-president, conversed with M. Maurice Bokanowski, French Minister of Commerce and Industry, and M. H. Milon, director of telephones of the French Ministry of Posts and Telegraphs.

Speaking to Mr. Gifford from Paris, Gen. John J. Pershing termed the new service as "instrumentality of peace." He referred to the new link between nations of the world as "a means of improving social relationship and developing a common economic and social viewpoint."

The Occupation of the Rhineland

G. E. R. Gedy in Foreign Affairs (New York): It is all very pleasant in these days on the Rhine—no alarms or excursions on either side. But even if none ever recur, it will presumably dawn on somebody someday to enquire, vul bono? It would also be interesting to consider what chance there is, now that dismemberment schemes have themselves been dismembered, of the French insisting on remaining on the Rhine were the British authorities to indicate that they had spent quite sufficient on this amusement and proposed, accompanied or not, to move this very year.
