The Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Lachute Golf Club was held in the Club Rooms, on Tuesday evening last, when a large number were present. The usual business was transacted and the financial statement showed a very satisfactory condition. Mr. E. H. Wilson was elected as President; Mr. Legault, Vice-President; Mr. Valois, Secretary; and Mr. Charron, Treasurer. The shareholders of the Club have authorized renting to a Playing Club if such can be formed.

Those at the head this year are real golfers, and under the supervision of Mr. E. H. Wilson, the Club should certainly make big strides.

The many friends of Mr. Wm. Perry, our youthful veteran, who we often see in town stepping it out so sprightly will congratulate him on attaining his 92nd Birthday on Friday, May 3rd. He with his good lady Mrs. Perry leave this morning for Ottawa, where his son Mr. Raymond Perry, a member of the Ottawa Flying Corps intends taking them up in his plane. Mr. Perry, one of Montreal's Veteran Fire Fighters doesn't often get "Up in the Air" over such a minor thing as a Birthday but he expects to this time.

Mr. Perry, is probably the oldest man to go flying in Ottawa, and it would little surprise us, from his youthful spirit, if he were to buy a plane for his own use.

The Lachute Masonic Lodge has been fortunate in having two visits recently, from Sister Lodges in Montreal.

On Friday, May 19th. the members from Waverly Lodge some 40 in number motored up from the city. Among the number were some old-time residents of Lachute, Jack McRae, Roy Carpenter, and Bill McDiarmid who holds the honored position of Worshipful Master of Waverly Lodge, and meeting with old friends here again was quite a pleasure for all.

On Saturday the 27th. Prince Consort Lodge paid us a visit and after the meetings, refreshments were served, and a most pleasant time spent.

TOWN COUNCIL

The regular meeting of above Council was held last evening at which were present Mayor C. Tremblay and Aldermen G. Lacasse, P. Dobbie, A. Elliott, C. Miller, Joseph Speight, J. B. Raymond, H. Coutu, Dr. Rodrigue and H. Lavigne.

Minutes of last regular and adjourned meetings were read and approved and reports of finance committee received.

Mr. Jas. W. Gall appeared before the Council on behalf of the Agricultural Society in order to secure a grant, and on motion of Alderman Lavigne, seconded by Alderman Rodrigue, the sum of $250. was voted.

Mr. Gall, as secretary representing the Parish Council, again lodged a protest at the disgraceful condition of the town dump and urged action on the part of Council to have same remedied. Mr. Gall stated that the Parish would take proceedings if same is not attended to, but the Council, recognizing the need, promised to effect a remedy.

The secretary reported a very satisfactory condition in the new ruling adopted by Council for the payment of water taxes into the coffers of the town instead of the old method of sending the town officer, whose time is now utilized in more necessary work. The secretary stated he had upwards of $3,600 already collected from this source.

The Mayor has written the Gathneau Electric Company to have representatives appear before the Council on May 14th. in order to talk over the general situation of rate reduction. Instructions were given the secretary to notify Messrs. A. McQuat, F. S. McGibbon, A. Middleton and Baptist Church for the building of sidewalk on north side of Grace Street.

Clean-up days were ordered for May 7th. and 8th. and Mr. Masson was given contract for cleaning away all garbage.

Council then adjourned.

"White Lies"

She Hated Her Brother's Way of Life—But She Had to Shield Him!

By RUTH ALEXANDER

"There's just one thing more I ought to mention, and that is that I've no intention of marrying again."

Prue Moore finished. She stared at her prospective employer, and her little chin went several inches higher. It was a rounded chin, dimpled, but capable of becoming stubborn when occasion arose. Such an occasion seemed this moment when Mr. Julian Strange, the taciturn, rather tired-looking man standing by the fire in his great neglected studio had the temerity to suggest that the girl he was engaging as his little daughter's governess would naturally set her cap at him.

"I'm going to hate him!" thought Prue. "I shall never stay!"—and longed to end the interview with a chilly: "If that's the sort of idea you have of me, hadn't we better decide I'm quite unsuitable for the job?"

Then she thought of Henry, who was always losing his work, and of Nora, who simply must have another year at school, and swallowed her pride with a gulp.

"That needn't worry either of us," she told him distantly, chin still well in the air. "In fact," she added, on a sudden thought, "I'm engaged."

"Then we shall suit each other admirably, and I shall expect you on Monday, Miss Moore."

Julian Strange took her hand, and his rather stern face lighted up with an unexpectedly sweet and twinkling smile.

"I'm going to like him," she thought. "It won't be so bad, after all."

At first Prue felt somewhat forlorn in the big, silent London house, with just the servants and the housekeeper and little Joan, who had been thoroughly spoiled, and was at times a perfect little beast and at others entirely lovable.

There was a garden which was a great delight to Prue; it led out of Mr. Strange's studio, unfortunately, but she soon learned his habits and avoided going through when he was at work.

"Ah," he said absently, "good afternoon!"

"How do you do?" Henry replied with that engaging heartiness that always earned him friends—at first.

"That's a lovely group you're painting, sir! A valuable piece, I should say."

Mr. Strange glanced at him with a spark of interest in his eyes, and removed a brush from his mouth.

"Yes," he answered, "Old Dresden. A collector's piece. It is practically priceless."

Henry's eyes gleamed as he surveyed the exquisite little porcelain group. Prue put her arm through Henry's and tugged at him.

"We're disturbing Mr. Strange, Henry. Let's go into the garden."

And Henry allowed himself to be drawn away.

"How did you manage to get off from the office?" she asked apprehensively.

Henry shrugged his shoulders.

"I've left," he told her light-heartedly. "Couldn't stick the old blighter any longer! We had a tearing row."

"Oh, Henry!" she cried despairingly. "You can't afford to go on throwing up jobs like this!"

"Don't you worry," he reassured her, with a swagger. "I'll soon get another."

That was the first of several visits for Henry, till presently it became a habit for him to call every day, generally in time for lunch or tea.

Fortunately, Mr. Strange was so absorbed in his new picture that he did not appear to notice whether Henry was there or not, though Prue occasionally caught him standing at the studio door and gazing at her and the child in the garden.

The task of finding Henry's new job

seemed a very long one, and there came a day when Prue's little chin took on its stubborn angle.

"I'm sorry, Henry, but you don't seem to be bothering at all, and I really can't afford to lend you any more money! And I don't think we ought to let Mr. Strange supply you with any more lunches and teas!"

"How do you suppose I am going to live, then?" Henry demanded.

"I really don't know," said Prue, at the end of her patience. "I suppose you could get work as a hall-porter, or a dustman, or something."

Henry glared. He seized his hat and lunged out. Prue, instantly remorseful, ran after him.

"Henry, I didn't mean it! Of course I'll give you some more—"

But Henry had gone.

She spent two miserable days, alternately worrying over the idea that she might have driven him to suicide and comforting herself with the belief that he would come back. Then on the third morning she returned from a walk to find him on the doorstep.

"Oh, Henry, I'm so glad you're back! Do come into the nursery and have lunch!" She was almost tearful with thankfulness.

Henry magnanimously allowed himself to be fed before making any explanations. Then he said:

"No, I haven't got a job, but I'm on the track of one. I was offered thirty bob a week yesterday."

"I am so glad! It isn't much, but it's something to be going on with!" cried Prue happily.

"What! Thirty bob! D'you think I'd take a job of that sort?"

"You don't mean to say you turned it down?"

"I certainly did."

Prue was thoroughly roused. Her chin went up.

"So you'd rather live on my money and Mr. Strange's food than work at a small salary?" she flashed at him.

"Go away from this house, and don't you dare to come again!"

"Look here, Prue, I've got something else in view, but I can't go after it without money."

You turn down an offer, and then expect me to supply you with money! If you don't go I'll call Mr. Strange!" she stormed at him.

"I'm going!" said Henry furiously, and went out.

Prue stood stock still. Her anger abated as quickly as it had risen. She held her breath and waited for the sound of the front door. She crept to the top of the stairs and listened. Everything was quiet. Perhaps he had actually gone to Mr. Strange for money! She ran noiselessly down.

The studio door was open, and Henry was in there alone. He was standing as if fascinated before the Dresden china group. Suddenly he pulled a silk handkerchief from his pocket, wrapped the ornament in it, tucked it under his coat, then, with a quick glance right and left, made for the garden door. Before he had reached it Prue was at his side.

"Henry, what are you thinking of?" she cried in a distressed whisper. "Give it to me! You can't steal!"

She snatched at the bundle.

"Let go, you little fool! You'll break it!"

They struggled. The silk handkerchief fell to the door. All at once there was a sharp, ominous crack. Henry let go his hold immediately, leaped through the door into the garden, and left Prue staring down at the fragments of the Dresden group.

Dazedly she heard Henry's footsteps running on the gravel path, heard other footsteps at her side. There was a dead silence, broken by the slight scraping sound of Henry's boots as he scaled the wooden fence. Involuntarily she moved swiftly, so as to interpose herself between the fugitive and Mr. Strange's gaze.

"I'm sorry!" she gasped. "I was just admiring it—and I broke it! I did it!" Beneath her quivering mouth her little chin was resolute. "I'll pay for it—if you give me time! I'm dreadfully sorry!"

The storm she expected did not break. Instead, she heard Mr. Strange's voice gentle almost to tenderness:

"You couldn't pay for it, Prue. It's a tragedy—but you didn't do it."

"I did!" she cried hysterically.

"You blessed little white liar! I came in and saw the whole thing! Don't worry; I shan't blame Henry."

And she found herself folded in a pair of strong, warm arms.

Somehow the amazing happening didn't seem amazing at all to Prue. She forgot Henry and everything else in the wide world till Julian whispered:

"There's just one thing, Prue—your fiancé!"

"That was another fib?" she confessed chokingly into his coat. "You see, you said—you weren't going to marry again!"

Prue caught her breath.

"I wasn't—till I met you!" said Julian Strange, and kissed her.

The Heart of Winter

Midwinter—but the bright noon sun

Spreads summer warmth on all it shines upon.

Howling winds, whirling snow,

Biting cold, seem things of long ago.

Blue is the river, blue the sky;

Soft as springtime clouds the snow-drifts lie;

And frowning winter, surly, wild,

Proves at heart as gentle as a child.

Street and Highway Trees

The Ontario Horticultural Association have done a good service in issuing recommendations for the guidance of municipalities in planting and caring for street and roadside shade trees. The Association, composed of delegates from all parts of the province, has realized the need of some better policy to take care of this matter. Many miles of highway are without trees of any kind and thousands of trees that once were an ornament to the country have been mutilated for the accommodation of companies stringing wire lines through the country. At the convention held in Toronto recently a strong appeal was made to the delegates to do their utmost to save the shade trees and so help to preserve the scenic beauty of their neighborhoods. To the extent that this is done will the country attract tourists and derive revenue accordingly. Recommendations for the guidance of municipalities were brought in by a tree committee appointed a year ago. These dealt with the varieties that should be planted in towns and country places, and the distances apart they should be planted. For the central and southern parts of the province such trees as White Ash, Hard Maple, Pin Oak, Tulip Tree and Oriental Plane may with advantage be planted and not closer than 40 feet. For wider streets and boulevards the distance should be increased to 55 or 60 feet and on roads 75 feet. The varieties for the country planting should include Elms, Red Oak, Sugar Maple, White Ash, and Walnut, where these are indigenous to the locality. The Soft Maple so commonly planted, was regarded as less suitable than many other varieties except for northern areas where they make a rather slow growth and mature into a more desirable shape. Such unsuitable trees as the Manitoba Maple and Poplars, including Cottonwoods, the committee considered, should not be planted on any street or roadway.

Handsome is as Handsome Does

A Parisian Beauty Doctor, or "cosmetic surgeon," as she prefers to call herself, has been trying to persuade the German people that it is a sin to be ugly. She did not suggest that the Germans, as a race, are less fortunate than other races in those physical gifts which are commonly described as "good looks," but simply that, having them, they neglect to improve upon them by art. To be content to show your features as Heaven meant you to show them she regards as a sin—the "sin of ugliness!" Yet people are not ugly unless they look ugly, and it is within the power of us all not to look ugly. Ugliness has nothing to do with features or hair or coloring or anything else that shows upon the surface. We may have features like the Apollo Belvedere himself and yet be repellent, if our tempers are bad. "Handsome is as handsome does," says the old proverb, which means that if you are courteous and chivalrous you will look happy and others will like you for it. A ready smile wins more hearts than millions, but a scowling face will soon make a Croesus bankrupt of his friends.—Montreal Star.

No Quarter

Halifax Herald (Cons.): The lash for drug peddlers may sound like harsh punishment, but it is possible to conceive of a more unspeakable, a more despicable crime? . . . It is useless to waste soft sentiments over criminals who peddle drugs. Theirs is a deliberate act, a cold mercantile decision to capitalize a habit that grips its victims and drags them down to the depths of physical, mental and moral degradation. No quarter for the drug peddler, is a decision that will meet with the complete approval of the citizenship of the Dominion.

A sweet little thing who didn't care any more for a nickel than she did for her right eye was having a lunch with one of those daddies. "Tomorrow is my birthday," she mentioned cooly. Every day was her birthday to Dora. "Well, here's $50," her escort replied, "and I wish you a happy birthday." "What! On $50?"

Onions are said to throw off violet rays. We suspect that the scientist who asserted that had not smelled many violets.

Water Noises

When I am playing by myself And all the boys are lost around, Then I can hear the water go; It makes a little talking sound. Along the rocks below the tree, I see it ripple up and wink; And I can hear it saying on, "And do you think? and do you think? A bug shoots by that snaps and ticks, And a bird flies up beside the tree To get into the sky to sing. I hear it say, "Kildee, kildee!" Or else a yellow corn comes down To splash a while and have a drink. And when she goes I still can hear The water say, "And do you think?" —Elizabeth Madox Roberts, in "Under the Tree."

Revolvers and the Police

Toronto Star (Ind.): A newspaper in North Carolina says the people of the United States have a good lesson to learn from Canadians in the way of respect for law and order. It is, we think, true. But we should, in Canada, see to it that our police do not forfeit a reputation long earned and deserved, and do not get into the habit of using revolvers too readily, as, of late, they have occasionally done.

NICE WORDS WON'T DYE a dress or coat...

Neither pretty pictures nor colorful adjectives will dye a dress or coat. It takes real dyes to do the work; dyes made from true anilines. Next time you have dyeing to do, try Diamond Dyes. See how easy it is to use them. Then compare the results. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree they are better dyes. You get none of that re-dyed look from Diamond Dyes; no streaking or spotting. Just fresh, crisp, bright new color. And watch the way they keep their brilliance through wear and washing. They are better dyes because they contain plenty of real anilines—from three to five times more than other dyes. But you pay no more for them than for ordinary dyes. The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original "all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material. It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye, for silk or wool only. With it you can dye your valuable articles of silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. Remember this when you buy. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package will dye every kind of goods, including silk and wool. Your dealer has both packages.

Canada's Land of The Midnight Sun

Director of Northwest Territories Describes Vast Section Bordering Mackenzie River

Canada, too, has her "Land of the Midnight Sun," and the little that is known of the Great Valley of the Mackenzie River and the northern coast of Canada, inhabited chiefly by Indians and Eskimos, is vividly described in Natural History, journal of the American Museum of Natural History, by O. S. Finnie, Director of the Northwest Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior of Canada. He writes:

"One million three hundred thousand square miles of Canada lying north of 60 are known as the Northwest Territories. They extend easterly from the delta of the Mackenzie River to Baffin Island, a distance of approximately 2,000 miles, and reach more than 1,00 miles from north to south, from Cape Columbia to latitude 50 degrees north, including all the islands in the Canadian sector as far as the Pole.

"Neither the natives, nor the fauna, nor the other resources of so vast a country can be adequately described in a short article. For agricultural lands in the southern areas the country stretches to the world's most northerly headland; the natives include Indians and Eskimos speaking three distinct languages and living under as many sets of conditions. The wild life covers almost every species of land and sea mammal known to Canada, and the other potential resources of the Territories are found under a variety of conditions that differ in climate and accessibility.

DISTRICT OF MACKENZIE.

"The District of Mackenzie, the most important of the three main divisions of the Northwest Territories, can be most readily approached by the route leading north by rail from Edmonton, Alberta, to the southern watershed of the Mackenzie River. Fort Smith, the administrative centre within the district, is situated on the Slave River in latitude 60 degrees north, where a series of rapids forms a barrier to river navigation. At this point we find ourselves in the hands of the Chipewyan Indians.

"Should we listen to the casual conversation of the crowd we would hear English, French, Cree and Chipewyan used impartially for, although the language of the district is Chipewyan, the Crees from the south are well represented, and the traders and missionaries are chiefly of British and French extraction.

"Fort Smith, situated on a high, sandy plateau overlooking the river, is typical of many of the northern posts. Its principal features being government offices, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police Post, a wireless telegraph station, a mission church and house with hospital and school, and establishments of the principal fur traders of the North. To these should be added the log homes of the natives and a host of dogs, which constitute the motive power of the country's winter transport. In winter Fort Smith is dark and bleak and windswept, and in summer it is a noted gathering place for all varieties of insect pests known to the northland, while for weeks daylight never fades entirely from the sky.

"Immediately to the west lies a country of alternate swamps and low sand ridges, difficult of access, but valuable because it has given perfect protection to the only remaining herd of American bison that has never known captivity. In 1901 the Dominion Government prohibited the killing of these animals. An estimate made about twenty years later placed their total at approximately 1,500. To these have been added recently 6,000 young; buffalo from the Wainwright National Park, and it is confidently hoped that the next decade will see an increase in their numbers great enough to make them an important factor in the food supply of the district and possibly to warrant licensed hunting under the supervision of official game wardens.

FUR RESOURCES.

"The fur resources of the Fort Smith area have been intensively drawn upon for more than 100 years, but still the trapper thrives. Each winter yields pelts of bear, wolves, lynx, colored foxes, fisher, otter, marten, mink, skunk and muskrat—fox, mink and rat predominating. It is possible, however, that the time is not far distant when fur farming will bring to many a better living than is to be secured today from the taking of wild animals.

"From Fort Smith to the Arctic Ocean, a distance by water of 1,400 miles, river transportation is uninterrupted. Large and comfortable steamboats serve the public, and already the excellence of their service, the novelty of the life of the lower river settlements and the river scenery have popularized them among those on the outlook for summer tours in little-known lands.

"Two hundred miles of river, winding slowly through the country of the buffalo and the moose, lead from Fort Smith to Great Slave Lake. One legend of the source of the name 'Great Slave' tells how, even before the advent of the trader, a white child was sold as a slave to an Indian tribe which had its home on the shores of the lake. The child grew to be a man above the ordinary stature, with long fair hair and light blue eyes, who lived a long life among his Indian masters. His presence led to the area being known as the 'land of the great white slave,' eventually abbreviated to Great Slave. The story further states that the child slave was the rightful heir to the throne of France—an interesting echo of the rumors spread by the devotees of Napoleon that the son of Marie Louise had not really died at Vienna, but had been spirited away by the wily Metternich.

"Another legend, quoted by the Geographic Board of Canada, is to the effect that Great and Lesser Slave Lakes and Slave River were named after a tribe of Indians that once dwelt in that region. These Indians called themselves Etchareottine, which means 'the people dwelling in the shelter of the (Rocky) mountains.' In contradistinction to other Northern Indians, who were caribou eaters and traveled widely in pursuit of game, the Etchareottines were fish eaters and kept to the lakes. When the more warlike Crees went on the warpath against the tribes on the Peace River, they came from the south in canoes to Lesser Slave Lake and, leaving their canoes there, proceeded overland. Finding that the lake-dwelling Indians did not possess their own warlike attributes and ideas, the Crees showed their contempt by bestowing on the lake dwellers the epithet of 'awonak' or 'slaves.'

"By way of Great Slave Lake the traveller reached the land of the Slave Indians, and to the babel of tongues is added still another dialect. Revolution, the most important settlement on the southern shore, is the meeting place of the Indian traders from east and west, north and south. The Southern Indians, the Crees and Chipewyans, are represented chiefly by the imported servants of the traders, this point marking the northern limit of the influence of both these nations. Three highways lead from Resolution—one to the northwest following the waters of the Mackenzie to Beaufort Sea, one due north to the country of the Yellow Knife Indians, and the third east to the lakes and plains of the Arctic prairies and the home of the caribou and musk ox.

FORT RELIANCE.

"To the east a cruise of 200 miles along the shores of Great Slave Lake—one of the great lakes of the world with an approximate area of 11,500 square miles—brings the traveller to Fort Reliance. From this point the trail leads overland until the headwaters of rivers flowing to Hudson Bay are reached. Here are the great Arctic prairies, a country well flowered by nature except with trees.

"From any point of vantage can be seen an apparently endless expanse of grass, moss and Arctic flowers. Sparkling lakes nestle in the valleys, and winding streams disturb the quiet of the scene as they tumble their way down their many rapids to mingle their waters finally with those of far-distant Hudson Bay.

"The rolling country is the home of the caribou, the wolf, the Arctic fox and the remnants of the few remaining herds of musk ox to be found on the mainland. The streams and lakes are plentifully stocked with fish, and their shores are the nesting grounds of many varieties of waterfowl. The potential wealth of this Arctic plains area lies in its undoubted ability to yield liberal supplies of meat and hides from caribou and other hardy animals, fish from its waters and fur from its hills.

"Humanity is but poorly represented on the Arctic prairies. A small band of Indians, who winter along the northern fringe of timber, each Spring follows the caribou in their northern migration, and lives entirely upon caribou meat and fish. Eskimo from the shores of Coronation Gulf to the northwest and coastal points to the eastward move each Spring toward the Hielon River to meet the same migration on its way to the Arctic coast. The only permanent residents are three bands of Eskimo who base their operations on the shores of Kasba, Sigilgyusk and Baker Lakes, from which points they eke out a living from the eastern sections of these northern plains.

WHERE FRANKLIN CAMPED

"Starting again from Resolution, another road leads to Rae, on a northern arm of Great Slave Lake and the land of the Dog Rib Indians. In 1921 Franklin and his party followed their route to the North. A winter camp was built half way between Great Slave and Great Bear Lakes, which was known as Fort Enterprise. From this point a season was spent in exploration of the Coppermine River and the shores of Coronation Gulf. Part of this route was also followed by Hearne of the Hudson's Bay Company, when from 1769 to 1772 he pioneered the valley of the Coppermine River. One of the great tragedies of the North was enacted during this trip, when the Indians who accompanied Hearne massacred more than twenty defenseless Eskimo men, women and children, camped at a point since known as Bloody Fall, on the lower reach of the Coppermine.

"During the past winter a unique event occurred in the vicinity of Fort Enterprise, about 150 miles north of Great Slave Lake, the spot where Sir John Franklin, with Lieutenant Back, spent such a terrible year of hunger and privation in 1821 and 1822. Two years ago, while an official of the Canadian Government was making a patrol from the bottom of Bathurst Inlet, 500 miles over a bleak and desolate territory, to Rae, he had with him a young Eskimo youth from Coronation Gulf. They had many adventures on the way, but, on reaching Rae, the young Eskimo was delighted at what appeared to him a veritable metropolis, although it cannot boast of more than half a hundred people.

"So enamored with the place was the youth that he wanted to remain, forgetting entirely the pretty wife he had left in a distant igloo. The official, however, had no intention of permitting the youth to remain, for, had he done so, the lad's tribesmen would have assumed that the white man had killed him, and so would probably have taken his own life in retaliation.

A PEACE MEETING

"When they finally returned to Bathurst Inlet the young native must have told his tribesmen how well they had been treated by the Indians and, as a result, the Eskimo in a body appeared shortly after Christmas at Fort Enterprise. Here, though face to face with their traditional enemies, the Indians, a ten-day powwow of feast and dance took the place of bloody war.

"It was the first occasion on record where groups of Eskimos and Indians from these districts have buried the hatchet, and is in marked contrast to the warlike attitude of the time of Hearne.

"The Dog Rib Indians are one of the larger tribes of the North. Long association with the white trader has advanced them to a life of semi-civilization, but they still depend upon the wild life of the country for an existence. As they wander over a wide country of rocky hills, some of which are timbered, though sparsely, their harvest consists of fur, fish, caribou and moose, with rabbits to fill in periods when larger game is not available. Much of this area has been reserved by the government of Canada as a hunting and trapping ground for the exclusive use of the natives.

"To the west and north of Resolution lies the valley of the Mackenzie River. Hay River, a settlement lying near Great Slave Lake in the broad valley of the river from which the community takes its name, is the home of a well-conducted boarding school, two missions and several trading establishments.

"Providence lies on a level plain on the bank of the Mackenzie. The buildings of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, of the mission with its boarding school for native children, and of the several trading companies are practically the only permanent structures in the settlement. At points further south the Indian and half-breed trappers have built for themselves cabins from which they pursue their activities, but the natives of the Providence district are still the itinerant people of a hundred years ago. Many of them are born, live and die in their native teepees and brush camps.

NAVIGATION UNINTERRUPTED

"Between Providence and Simpson on the way north the river narrows and runs swiftly, but navigation is uninterrupted. Simpson is located on a large island just below the confluence of the Liard and the Mackenzie Rivers. It is one of the larger settlements of the Territories, and was at one time the trade headquarters for the whole valley of the Mackenzie. Originally a typical Hudson's Bay Company fort, dating from the early days of the last century, it has grown to be a prosperous settlement with missions, hospitals, schools, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police post, a government wireless station, a number of trading establishments and a government Indian agency which conducts an experimental farm. The surrounding country, consisting of rolling hills lightly covered with timber, has up to date produced little but fur, though it is not without promise for the future. The Rocky Mountains are less than 100 miles to the northwest, and far back in the mountain lies a valley about which little is known beyond the fact that in it hot springs are so numerous that its temperature has been materially affected. While the surrounding country suffers from a somewhat rigorous climate, the 'semi-tropical valley,' as it has come to be known, sees but little snow and is the winter home of a great variety of wild life.

"The Liard River is the highway serving the territory to the west. It boasts of a steamboat service, adequate to the needs of the country, which each year carries a wealth of high-grade furs to the markets of the world. The upper reaches of the Liard, penetrating far into the mountain ranges, connect through British Columbia with established routes of travel leading to the Pacific Coast.

Mackenzie enters a bolder and more rugged country, and for many miles the traveler is regaled with true Western mountain scenery. When the river swings back to the foothills, Wrigley, a fur post active enough in winter but presenting little of interest during the open season, is passed, and the journey is continued to Norman. This settlement stands on the high banks of the Mackenzie at the mouth of Great Bear River. The usual essentials of a northern post are here in evidence. The country, east and west for many miles, is tributary to this post.

"The Great Bear River is the highway to Great Bear Lake and the country beyond as far as Coronation Gulf, while to the west an overland trail follows the valley of the Gravel River to the headwaters of the Stewart River and on to the Yukon. The Great Bear River is shallow and swift, but can be ascended by suitably constructed power boats. Great Bear Lake is the largest lake in the northland, covering an area of something like 12,100 square miles, but its use as a transport route is limited to not more than three months in each season, as it is icebound for the rest of the year.

"Much of interest centres around Norman. Not only is it the trade centre of a large and productive district, but the scenic and mineral resources are also outstanding. A few miles from the settlement lie lignitic coal beds of doubtful commercial importance, but spectacular, having burned continuously at least since the first exploration of the river by Mackenzie in 1789. To the north of the post lies a prominent mountain known as Bear Rock, and along the western horizon lie the bold peaks of the Rocky Mountains. The burning of the coal seams and the three peculiar red stains, probably caused by oxide of iron, which show on the face of Bear Rock have given rise to a typical Indian legend.

"Many years ago, according to the story, both the people and the game of this area were giants of their kind. A giant hunter armed with bow and arrows, while standing on Bear Rock, saw a colony of giant beaver in Bear River. With his arrows he secured three of these, but several of his arrows which had missed their mark remained embedded in the river bottom, but one end still showing above the water. As in all the northern rivers sunken trees are to be seen, the story-teller points out the giant arrows without difficulty. The hunter then skinned three to the beaver and spread the skins on the face of Bear Rock to dry; the blood left the three stains in the shape of the three beaver skins. Taking some of the beaver meat to the point where the coal now burns, the hunter made a fire to cook a meal, but the fire burned so fiercely that the ground became ignited and has been burning ever since.

"Fifty miles below Norman there is every evidence of an oil field of economic importance, but the cost of a pipeline or other means of transportation prohibits, for the present, its development on any major scale. It has given promise enough to suggest the establishment of a small refinery for the production of gasoline and oil fuel to supply the local demands.

"Further north the river flows through a canyon known as the Ramparts, whose white limestone walls rise 150 feet above the water. From the foot of the Ramparts, Good Hope can be seen crowning a high point on the eastern side of the river. This settlement is sixteen miles south of the Arctic Circle and is a large and prosperous fur trading centre. It is also the northern limit of the Hare Indian nation, as at the next settlement (Arctic Red River) their language will be understood only with difficulty, that of the Loucheux tribe having taken its place.

"The settlements of Arctic Red River and McPherson are the trading centres of the country entirely apart from the valley of the Mackenzie to the south. McPherson was established early in the last century, and was at one time the gateway to the Yukon Valley. An eighty-mile portage across a comparatively low-lying country leads to the headwaters of the Porcupine River, which joins the Yukon at Fort Yukon. The delta of the Mackenzie marks the north-eastern limit of a group of Indian tribes which spreads south and west to the valley of the Yukon.

"The most northerly post on the Mackenzie is on an island in the river delta that is known as 'Akavik,' meaning, in the Eskimo language, 'Where the bear abounds.' Here the sun in summer is visible throughout each of the twenty-four hours, and here is another important boundary between native races—the meeting point of Indian and Eskimo. Originally this area was controlled entirely by the Eskimo, but the Indians following the white man have extended their hunting grounds to the north, and the Eskimo are gradually retreating to the Arctic coast line.

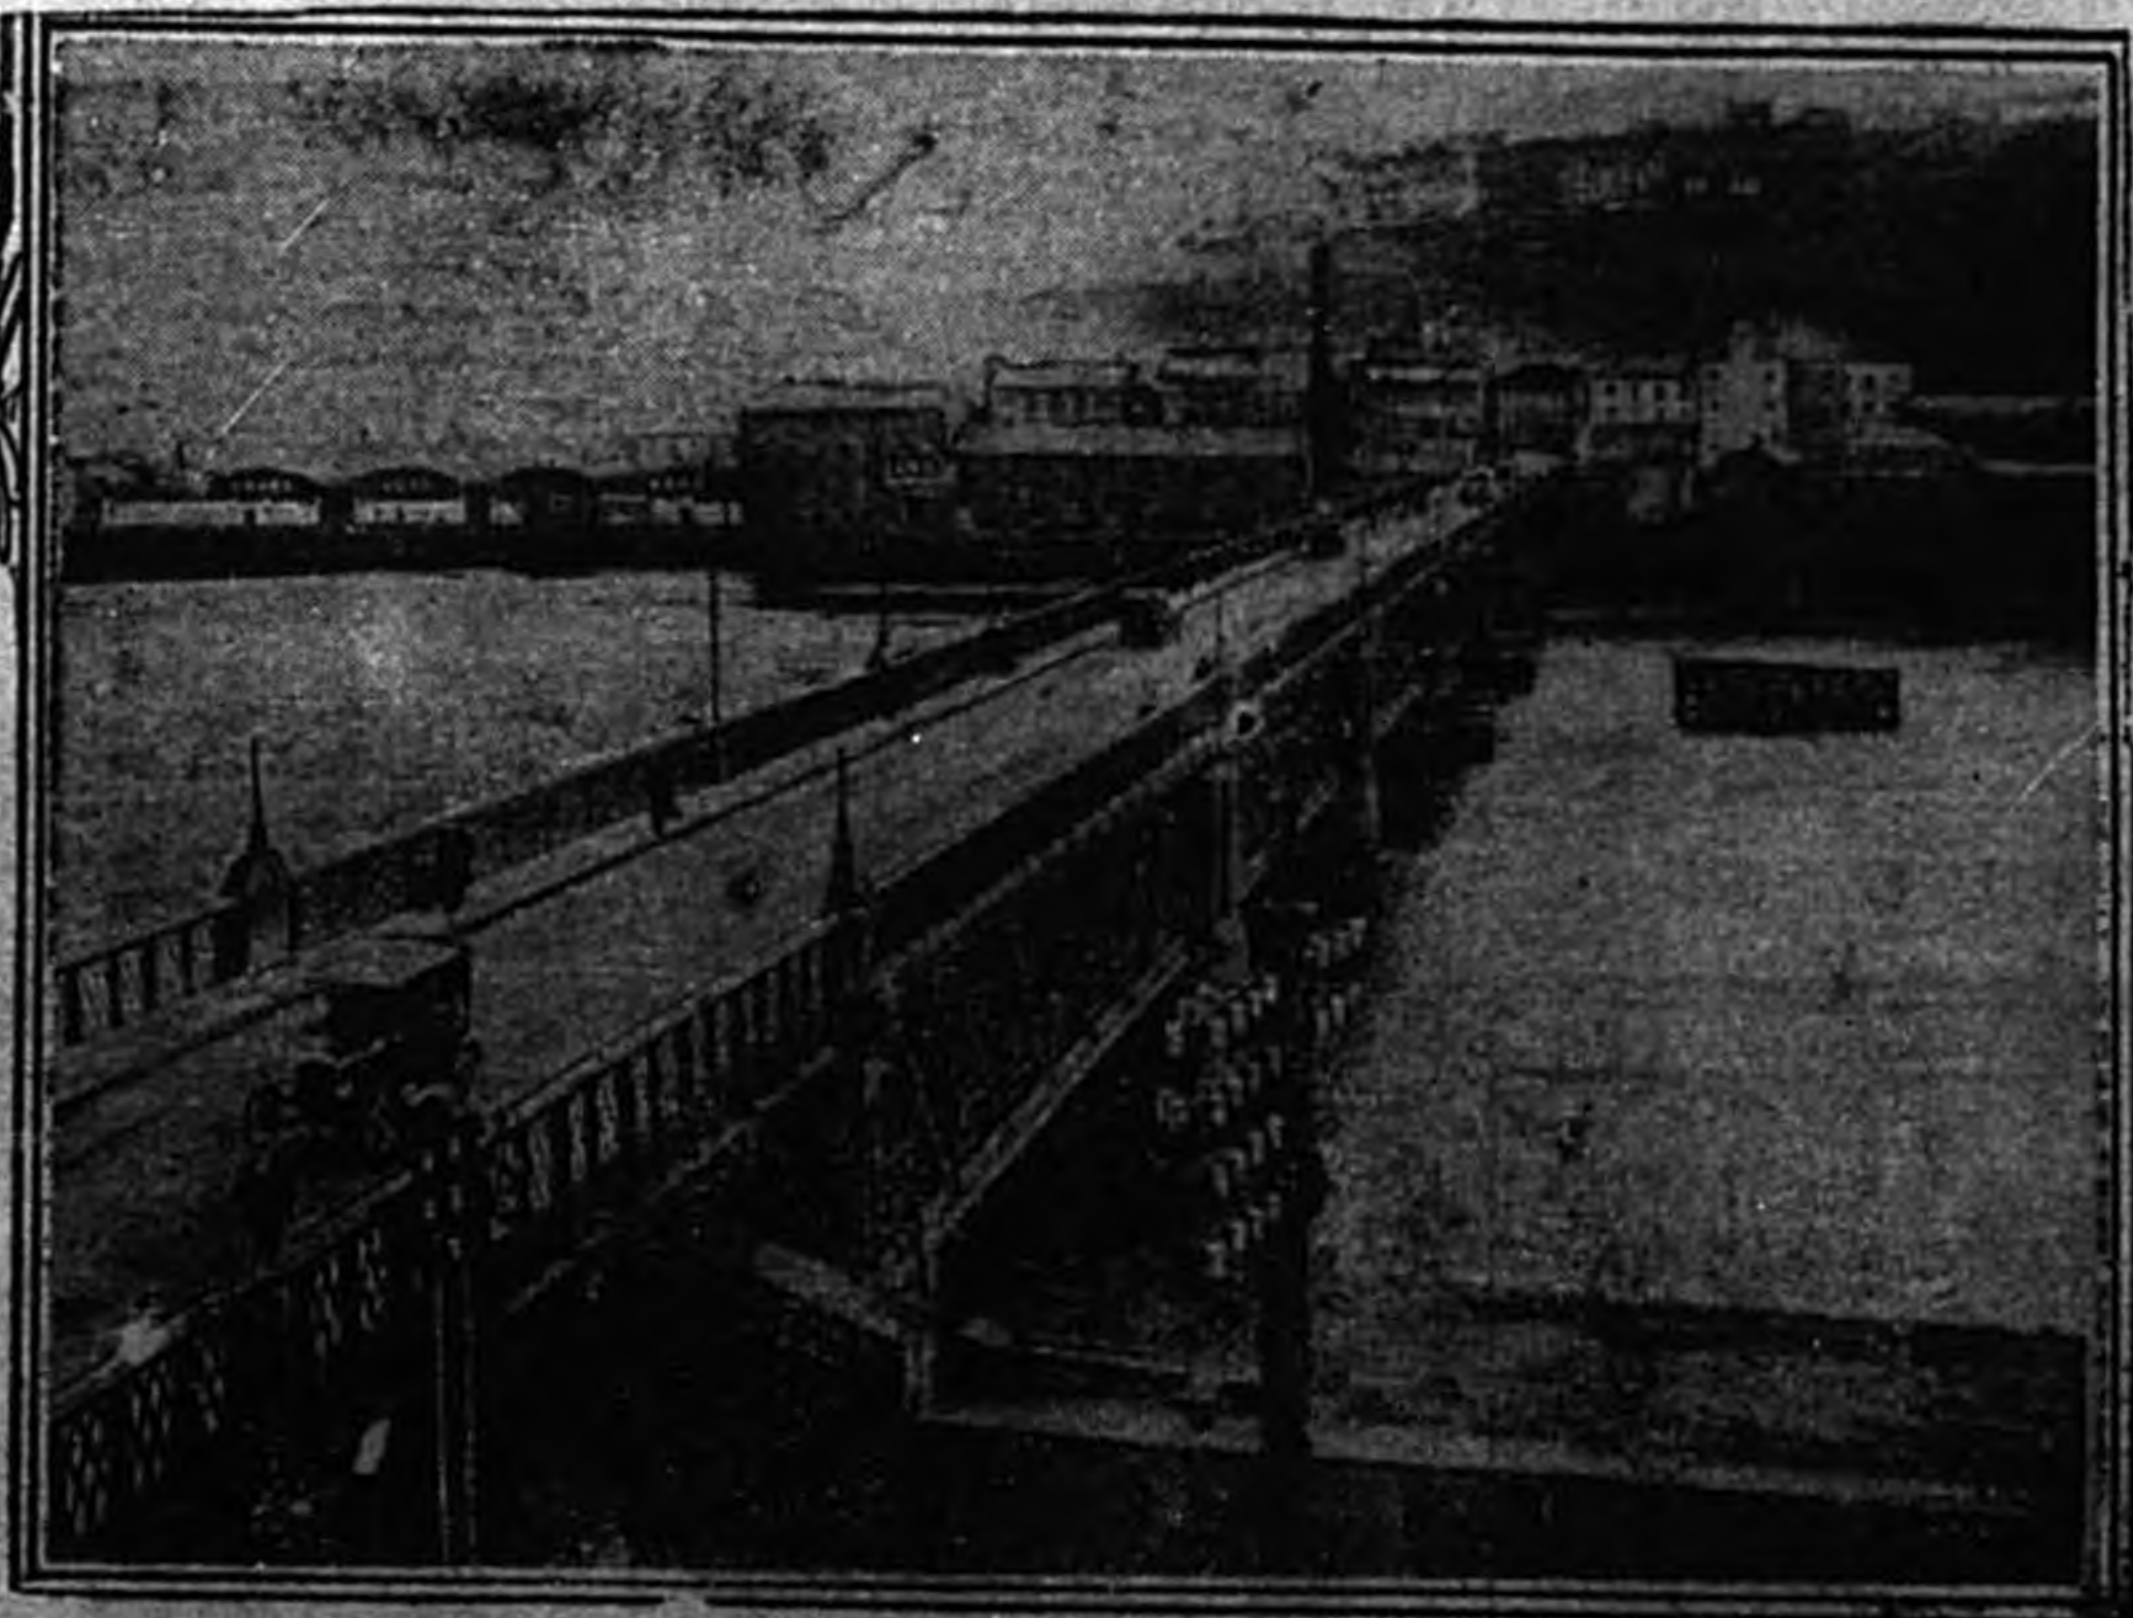

"Akavik is also the junction of two transportation routes, one of which follows the Mackenzie Valley, while the other is the ocean route from Pacific Coast ports which leads through Bering Sea and along the northern coast of Alaska. Both routes have their drawbacks. The cost via the river route is excessive, and on the ocean route there is the ever-present danger of loss of both ship and cargo when rounding the northerly capes of Alaska.

"The shores of Beaufort Sea are still the undisputed heritage of the Eskimo. Between the Alaska boundary and the eastern end of the delta of the Mackenzie lie four settlements—Demarcation, Point Herschel, Shingle Point and Kittigazuit—whose inhabitants, living largely in the resources of the country, draw their harvest from both land and sea. The hills produce caribou, which meat both food and winter clothing; from the lakes and streams the natives secure fish, while the ocean supplies more fish and various kinds of seal and white whale, which solve the problem for materials for boats, tents and footwear and add to the food supply. While tree life is no longer in evidence, the heavy drift from the Mackenzie has stored the beaches with fuel adequate for many years to come, placing the Eskimos of this area in a different position from their brothers to the east, who are largely dependent upon sea-mammal oil for heat and light.

"Both the eastern and western groups received their first impression of civilization from the whalers, while those of the central area are only now drawing their first knowledge of the world from the fur traders from the south. The influences prior to the white invasion are still stamped on all in clothing, accoutrements and home life. These differences are, however, entirely regional; the language throughout the Eskimo world is basically the same; and a study of the folklore proves the common origin of the Eskimo people from Siberia to Greenland.

"The government of Canada is confronted with a complex problem in the administration of the Far North, but in so far as it is possible, the various situations have been met as they have arisen. Communication is maintained by a well-organized mail service and an efficient system of wireless telegraphy operation stations at Edmonton, in Alberta; at Fort Smith, Resolute, Simpson and Akavik in the Northwest Territories, and at Herschel Island, Dawson and Mayo in the Yukon. Schools and hospitals are subsidized, relief is given to the sick and destitute, game sanctuaries are maintained while wild life is molested by no one, and many thousands of square miles of territory are set aside as hunting and trapping grounds for the sole use of the native population.

VENIOTISM A CURSE

After many days of debate in committee Veniotism has been endorsed by the Government as a principle of their administration, and evidently postmasters and civil servants can be dismissed on the mere say-so of Liberal members, and defeated Liberal candidates. During the week of debate the Conservatives were able to bring to bear case after case where postmasters had been dismissed on the flimsiest of evidence, and in many cases without any evidence being brought down to show where any change had been necessary, other than the fact that a Liberal member or candidate had so desired. That such a state of affairs could obtain the approval of the Government brings home to one the far-reaching effect that such a condition will have on all clear-minded, good-thinking Canadians, whether of Liberal, Conservative or Independent leanings.

One of the interesting features of the vote, however, is revealed in the vote of the Farmer and Independent members in the House, who, one could say, would be in a position to vote without political prejudice or favor. What do we find? Out of eighteen votes cast, fifteen voted condemning the actions of the Postmaster-General, and three voted against the motion of censure. So that striking out the straight party vote of Conservatives and Liberals, the Independent members who have in the majority of cases, come to the rescue of their Liberal friends, and have more often than not cast their vote on the Government side, by a vote of fifteen to three, decided that the actions of the Postmaster-General did not at least find approval in their minds, and on the other hand, voted Mr. Veniot guilty of having "acted in a most arbitrary manner, and in utter disregard of the letter and the spirit of the Civil Service Act in connection with the appointment of a postmaster at the town of Simcoe, Ontario."

It will be a sorry day for Canada if Veniotism should be allowed to get the upper hand, and a condition to certain which would imperil the present high standing of postal servants, executives and administrators.

CUSHING

Dr. H. B. Cushing accompanied by Mr. Huntley Davis motored up on Saturday and visited the doctor's property, where a number of men are now engaged completing the improvements on the house and grounds.

Messrs. S. Whelehan and O. E. Keatley spent the week-end here the latter also visiting his mother Mrs. (Rev.) Usher, at Pt. Fortune.

Mr. O. Callaghan, of Montreal, is the guest of Mr. W. H. Robert, at Monalea, for a couple of weeks.

A fire of a somewhat mysterious origin started in the grass on the Sandy ridge last Monday, and consumed a convenient and valuable barn the property of Mr. L. C. Wade.

Miss Whelehan spent a couple of days in Ottawa last week, and visited a number of friends, also calling on Mr. A. M. Derrick, of Stonefield, who is at present undergoing treatment at Lady Grey hospital and whose many friends in this locality will be glad to hear that she is now steadily improving.

Rev. and Mrs. F. L. Jobb and Miss Muriel Jobb were also in Ottawa last week, where the latter in conjunction with Mr. Yvon Barrette and Miss D. Egan gave a pianoforte recital at the Conservatory of Music before a large and appreciative audience.

The following taken from the Ottawa Journal gives an idea of the opinion of the musical critics as regards Miss Jobb's playing. Miss M. Jobb who is completing her musical education under Mr. Puddicombe's instruction is a gifted young pianist. Her versatility was shown last night in four of Chopin's numbers. They were the Bacarolle Ballade op. 3, Nocturne G. Major and Waltz in A. Flat Major. Miss Jobb displayed her knowledge of Chopin by the masterly manner in which she interpreted the various selections.

The people of Cushing and vicinity were much shocked last week, when the news came of the somewhat sudden death of pneumonia at his home in Hoosier, Sask., of Mr. Leonard Cooke. The deceased who was in his 53rd year, was a native of Cushing, being a son of the late Columbus Cooke, and spent the greater part of his life here where he leaves many friends who remember him with affection and esteem.

In 1906 he married Miss Hattie O'Brien, of Cushing, who with four young daughters survives him.

In the spring of 1918, Mr. Cooke removed with his family to Hoosier, Sask., and there through his industry, and energy he was in the way of becoming one of the most prosperous farmers of the district. Besides his devoted wife and children, he leaves two brothers, Emerson, of Hoosier, Sask.; Leroy, of Port Arthur and one sister Mrs. W. H. Canning, of Cushing, all of whom have the sympathy of this community in the loss of a loving husband and brother, and a devoted father.

French-Canadian Chanson Has New Lease of Life

created by the lumbermen and habitants; for music is a living art in French Canada.

Only within recent years have we begun to realize how rich is the treasury of lovely melodies associated with the folk songs of Canada. Thanks to men like Charles Marchand, interpreter of the French-Canadian "chanson", these folk songs have taken on new life, and before long they will be available for the English speaking population of Canada, owing to the efforts of John Murray Gibbon, whose translations will be published in book form early in the year.

With the idea of popularizing the English versions and thereby bringing about a closer understanding between the French and English elements of Canada, Mr. Marchand is at present making transcontinental concert tour under the auspices of the National Council of Education.

Perhaps the only part of the North American continent that possesses an authentic collection of folk-lore songs is the province of Quebec. Four hundred years ago when the first French explorers and settlers came to the shores of the St. Lawrence many of these songs were on their lips and in their hearts and they have never died out. It is to the honor of the French-Canadian race that they have never been allowed to fade from the remembrance of the people, nor has the flood of ephemeral and rubbishy popular songs of the day overwhelmed them. Originally sung at the court of the French monarchs, they were passed on from father to son, and were brought with the early settlers from France to Canada. And as the years have passed the old ballads have been supplemented by new ones

Fish Game as a National Asset

Mr. J. B. Harkin, Commissioner, National Parks, Department of Interior in Canada, in response to a request from the Province of Quebec Association for the Protection of Fish and Game, wrote the following article on "Game as a National Asset." The subject is naturally one of great importance to the Province of Quebec, the wild life of which constitutes such a large part of Canada's game supply. Game was the first great asset of Canada to be developed and it has continued down through the centuries to be one of Canada's important natural resources. Fur was and is a crop without which the hinterlands and even some of the more settled parts of the Dominion would suffer hardship. Like all other live assets the breeding stock must be maintained if the annual interest, each year's catch, is to be collected. Conservation consists in keeping the capital and using only the interest. Fluctuations which are but poorly known and little understood affect this wild live-stock resource. When the capital is reduced by such natural agencies, the take should be smallest and perhaps when the numbers of any fur bearer are at their peak, the take can be augmented without injuring the capital. As in all other complicated businesses the way to reap the most reward is to know most about the business. A wild life business is very difficult to know. That is where the specialist, who has studied the wild creatures most deeply, can be of help. The intricacy of the problem is indicated by the fact that remote causes such as epidemics in field mice, may cause tremendous fluctuation in the annual fur crop, running into millions of dollars.

Another complication arises from the fact that fickle fashion, not the crop condition, indicates what furs are to be popular, and if fashion dictates, war is made upon a species which is reduced to low ebb, and not on one which is abundant, and which can stand the strain.

Fur farming is a small help but for man long years our fur crop of ten to twenty millions a year must depend upon the fidelity with which the natural wild stock is safe-guarded. Sanctuaries to serve as reservoirs for fur bearers are essential if the latter are not to be decimated or exterminated over wide sections of their natural range. Once a species is reduced its enemies get the upper hand and it may go down to complete extinction before their onslaught.

Hotel Longfellow Built

This hotel, the New Pines at Digby, N.S., was built by Longfellow. Not, however, that he saw it, thought about it or even dreamed or imagined it. What he did do towards it was render immortal the Land of Evangeline, the beautiful Annapolis Valley of which Digby is the gateway, and so create a tourist lure.

The New Pines is being built by the Dominion Atlantic Railway to further aid in the development of tourist traffic in the Maritimes and, with the exception of the outdoor swimming pool, the lines for which were borrowed from those at Banff and Lake Louise, it is a handsome building of early English type of architecture. The opening of the Pines will shortly precede a three day festival at Annapolis Royal in commemoration of the three-hundredth anniversary of the arrival there of Sir William Alexander's Scottish colonists under the charter of New Scotland granted by King James I.

All nation-wide view-points of conversation must recognize the great place that fur holds in our national economy, must keep in mind the distribution of millions of dollars per year to the small scale trapper and the boy on the farm. Some conservationists fall into the error that fur-bearers are a nuisance because they occasionally prey upon some other wild life that for the moment is thought to be more desirable. Width of vision in conservation, and thought on Canadian conditions will prevent us from following any lingering belief there may be in this error with harmful action.

Canadian Eskimos and Indians frontiersmen of all kinds, sportsmen and settlers are part owners and users of Canada's resources in big game and birds. Those who must have game and birds.

Interment of the late Mrs. Boyd at Louisa.

The burial of the late Mrs. Robt. Boyd took place at Louisa, on Tuesday, April 30th, 1929, the remains were conveyed from the vault at Lachute to St. Aiden's Church, the service being conducted by the Rev. J. A. Lackey; and the remains were placed in the family lot in the cemetery adjoining the Church.

The floral tributes included a spray from her grandchildren, Mrs. Ruben Noble, Mrs. John Reitan, Mrs. Jas. Combie, Miss Lowell, Messrs. Guy and Gilbert Boyd, also spray from her daughters.

Weep not that her toils are over,
Weep not that her race is run,
God grant we may rest as calmly,
When our work, like hers, is done,
Till then we yield with gladness,
Our Mother to him to keep
And rejoice in the sweet assurance,
"He giveth His loved ones sleep."

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS SOCIAL and HUMANITARIAN QUESTIONS

The twelfth session of the Advisory Committee on the Traffic and Opium and other Dangerous Drugs held in Geneva during the month of February was significant in many ways of a real and determined intention on the part of the committee to limit the use and output of these drugs to minimum capacity.

Every country which is a member of the League of Nations, and many outside it, had been previously asked for reports on the Opium and Drug traffic. Among those countries which failed to comply with the request were several which are much concerned with the production and distribution of drugs, a fact which is in itself significant.

In the reports which received by the committee, it was noticed that those countries which has taken a determined stand by government against the illicit sale of drugs, had succeeded to some extent in their object; noticeably Japan, Corea, India, Switzerland, Serbia and Croatia.
Persia and Turkey were silent on the subject.

The illicit sale of drugs, however,
was found to be still very serious.
Many countries are producing a great deal more than was needed for medical or scientific purposes. Several firms, known to be handling great quantities of illicit drugs have been practically blacklisted by the governments under which they operate, and the committee recommended the withdrawing of licences from suspected firms.

It was noted at the session that a large and increasing quantity of drugs was smuggled by correspondence, and the hope was expressed that postal authorities would subject to customs supervision all letters, samples and general correspondence which appeared suspicious and even give authority to open and examine these, if found necessary.

To limit the output of manufactured drugs, it was suggested that each government budget its possible requirements in drugs for a given time. No action was taken, however, as it was decided to await the outcome of the committee's efforts to tighten up the legislation of the different countries along the indicated lines.

256. The contract for a new fast steamship to ply between Saint John and Digby, Nova Scotia, will shortly be awarded by the Canadian Pacific Railway. It has been announced by E. W. Beatty chairman and president of the company.
The ship will be of the highest standard, 340 feet in length, capable of carrying 500 passengers, and having 44 state rooms for night service. There will also be accommodation for 50 motor cars.
The speed of the vessel will be 22 knots, an unusually high speed for a short trip.

The sap ran freely this spring, but it will have to go some to surpass the record for last year when there was an increase of four million pounds of maple sugar registered by government statisticians.
The output was valued at over two million dollars, and Quebec headed the list of provinces as producer, followed by Ontario.

The daily pay-roll of the Canadian Pacific is $267,000; the daily outlay for material and supplies is $230,000, and the daily tax bill over $20,000.

Canadian Industries Limited Dominion Ammunition Social Club News

One cannot run a car without gasoline, neither can the Social Club be run without funds. Yearly subscribers will shortly receive a bill for 1929 dues. A request is made that fees be paid before May 15th, in order that these amounts may be incorporated in the half-year balance sheet to June 30th., 1929.

The organization of the "Track" Section is progressing favorably, and if the members continue to show the same enthusiasm, the success of this section is assured. Much promising material has been enlisted, to the extreme gratification of the officers of this body.

The Club has decided to have a foot ball team again this year. New foot balls have been purchased, and after a little practice, it is hoped to produce a team capable of successfully challenging other local and Montreal teams. Now, fans, give this section enthusiastic support, and have your own Cup-tie in Brownsburg.

The writer was unfortunately unable to attend the Bowling Match, on Wednesday, April 24th., between Brownsburg "A" Team, winners of the C. I. L. Cup, and a Lachute team picked by Mr. Jos. Bernier. An eye-witness account cannot therefore be given. From information received Mr. Jos. Bernier scoured Lachute to produce a team, that would give the Brownsburg players a stiff match. That he was successful, by the following scores, goes without saying. "A" team came back to form and won by 53 pins, but it was certainly a "close call." Congratulations must be extended to Mr. Bernier for introducing Alleys to Lachute, thereby encouraging this fine sport. If such promising bowlers can be produced in so short a time; what kind of a team will Lachute develop in a year or so?

Brownsburg won by 53 pins.

A return match was bowled on Brownsburg Alleys on May 1st., the scores of which will be published in next week's issue of this paper.

The Executive Committee wishes to extend their deepest sympathy to the relatives of Mr. J. Legault, who passed away so peacefully on April 26th. Mr. Legault, one of the oldest residents in Brownsburg, was well known and greatly respected by everybody who knew him. The Social Club was closed on Saturday evening, April 27th., as a mark of respect.

The Tennis Court, after being thoroughly put into shape, saw its first game this year on May 1st. Those desiring to join will please give their names to Mr. C. T. Wilson. Fees for the season will be—Ladies $2.50. Gents $5.00.

Other Brownsburg News

The writer is greatly astonished at the levity which greeted the small items that appeared in the last issue of the "Watchman." It is desired that the following paragraphs be not treated with hilarity, but be recognized as a faithful recordance of the major Brownsburg news for the week.

An investigation of a small crowd that congregated at the top of "Beaver Board" the other evening, disclosed not a fire—but certain harmonious music emanating from the corner house. The occupant, had not been heard to sing for a considerable time, and judging from the appreciation of the listeners, he certainly has not lost any of his old talent. We must congratulate Miss Evelyn Highfield on obtaining her driver's license. But What's the matter Daddy?

Mr. Stilwell was noticed, recently, to be pruning his legacy of currant bushes and rhubarb. Why the latter? It is also noticed that the stock of molasses in Mde. Leblanc's store is fast disappearing.

An auction sale will be held on used cars at the Boarding House shortly. The following will be disposed of:—

1 Massey-Harris 1925, (Blue-ox type) as used by Paul Bunion. Mr. Powell states that he has received too many cutting comments on this model.

1 Red Car—Fire Chief has gone out of business. He has exchanged for a "quieter" and less conspicuous model.

1 Chevrolet "Jumper". Mr. Stanforth states that this is the only car of its kind in Argenteuil County. Will negotiate any rock. Gasoline tank still attached. Radiator cap in fine condition.

Brownsburg is a very clean community! This is positively known by the pleasant noises recorded faithfully by the radio. Good opportunity for enterprising merchants to sell more Electric pumps to Brownsburgites.

The rumor is going around Brownsburg that the Liquor Commission Store will soon be opened at Lachute. When will the great emigration commence?

It is learned that Mr. William Duncan, after five weeks sojourn in Brownsburg, spent the week-end in Montreal. Cross-examination as to his movements there, failed to produce any light. We hope to give a detailed account in the following issue.

We are sorry for the suitor who was rejected the other day. Never mind. Its better to have loved and lost, than to have loved and won.

The Chatham Women's Institute held a very successful concert on Wednesday, April 30th. Admission was free and the room under the United Church was packed. After listening to the programme of the lady performers, one would be inclined to suggest the re-naming of this organization. Probably "Chatting" Women's Institute would be appropriate. Mrs. Campbell, the Chairman, explained the objects of this body; namely to create a better spirit of comradeship between the ladies of Brownsburg. It is a worthy organization and certainly should increase its membership.

Certain male members of the community were permitted to perform, and were tolerated to the end of their act. A sketch put on by the members of the institute, was excellent in every way. It created a good deal of mirth, and certainly impressed the husbands present of what their wives thought of them. The recitations were also very good.

Miss Roberts gave two beautiful vocal selections which were much appreciated by the audience. With her clear voice and sweet disposition, this fair lady is always a star performer.

It is impossible at such short notice to mention everybody, but every one present were impressed with the amount of talent there is in the 'Burg,' especially amongst the ladies. Each performer was excellent in his, or her part and demonstrated the need of the creation of a Dramatic Society here.

A vote of thanks was passed to the ladies of the Institute for the good programme, and also to the ladies, who so kindly assisted in preparing the refreshments.

STONEFIELD

Miss Grace Smith spent the week-end at her home in Lachute.

Mr. W. L. Bradshaw visited her sister, Mrs. Russell Owens here recently.

Miss Grace Densmore visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Densmore Sr. last Sunday.

Miss Tapp, of Gaspe, who has been visiting her for the past month has returned home.

We are pleased to note that Mr. Lionel Allard is improving after his serious accident of a few weeks ago.

Navigation opened for the year on Saturday last, with the passage through the Canal of St. Scotsman and Murphy of the O.T.C. of Ottawa.

The many friends of Mr. L. Gaston very sorry to hear of his sudden illness, and wish him a speedy recovery, also Mr. Orrin Leroy, who has been sick for a couple of weeks.

There was some very interesting reading in the Watchman last week. Rev. Mr. Cousens address on Education was worth Perusal; also interesting was your Brownsburg Scribe.

THE LATE WM. McRAE

The death of the late Wm. McRae occurred in Montreal, on Thursday last. He was born in the Municipality of Jerusalem on May 13, 1859 and moved some 28 years ago to Lachute, later going to Montreal where he spent the last 15 years. He was married to Margaret Anne Canning of East Hawkesbury, about 40 years ago. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Delgado and son Roy, of Montreal, to mourn his loss. Service was held in St. Simeon's Church on Saturday and the remains were afterwards taken to Lachute cemetery for interment.

West Has Priceless Heritage

represent an inherent love for beautiful things and a love of melody.

Folk-song is intimately linked up with handicraft, for it is to the accompaniment of folk-song that the spinning wheel turns and the beautiful homespun fabrics are woven. These fabrics can never be duplicated by the factory-made article, and the efforts of the Canadian Handicrafts' Guild to find and retain a market for the craft-work which can be done during the winter months on the farms of Western Canada is therefore well worthy of support. This Guild is preparing a handicraft exhibit in connection with the Folk-song and Folk-music Festival

'Saskatchewan might be termed the epitome of Canada's Great West. No other Province has a more interesting population, for the fabric out of which that population has been woven contains threads of so many racial cultures. Of the eight hundred and seven thousand souls recorded in the census of 1926, three-fourths are of British descent with English and Scots blood predominating. Over half a million were born in Canada, and of these a small but notable sprinkling are of French-Canadian descent. Ninety-eight thousand were born in the British Isles. Continental Europe has added twenty-two racial strains of which the larger groups may be summarized as Slavonic ($5,000), Scandinavian (20,000), Teutonic (20,000) and Romance (14,000). The aboriginal Indian population numbers about 13,000. Each of these racial groups can contribute something to Canadian art and music, for each has its traditions of handicraft and folk-song, traditions which

which the Canadian Pacific is organizing to be held at Regina, March 20-23rd., as the inauguration of a Saskatchewan Branch.

The main idea of this Great West Festival is to help Canadians to realize the priceless heritage which they possess in the traditional melodies which have been brought to this country by immigrants, and in some cases have been composed in this country by early settlers. The field of folk-music is so immense that only a glimpse of it can be secured in the four days of this particular festival, but some of the greatest artists of the continent will render interpretations and it promises indeed, to be a feast of music and color. Poul Bai, the Danish baritone will feature in Norse music, Charles Marchand in the French-Canadian folk-songs and almost every nation will be represented in handicraft as in song. Above is seen a Slovak weaver who will remove his pipe and sing to his handwork.

Siege of Afghan Palace Depicted by Royal Tutor

Queen's Modern Dress Added to Anger Over Reforms, Frenchwoman Relates

Mullahs Spread Hostility

By SONIA TOMARA

In New York Herald-Tribune

Paris.—The first refugee to arrive in Paris from Kabul, where civil war has been raging for the last two months and where kings have been rising and disappearing, was Mme. J. C. Ott, a Frenchwoman, who since last spring has lived in close touch with King Amanullah, Queen Souriya and their family.

When the Afghan monarchs were in Berlin—during their trip to Europe—Mme. Ott was asked by Queen Souriya to take charge of her nine-year-old daughter, Sultanja, and to teach her French and English and European manners. Mme. Ott became a member of the Queen's household. She traveled with her through Soviet Russia, Turkey, Persia and the wilderness of Afghanistan.

From June to December 31—when she left Kabul as a refugee, on a German Junker plane—she lived in the King's palace, with little Princess Sultanja, meeting the King and Queen many times a day. Amanullah practiced his little knowledge of French talking to Mme. Ott. When the revolt broke out she was surrounded by the rebels in the palace, together with the royal family, and slept in Queen Souriya's room during the eight days of the siege.

King Welcomed by Throne

"When we first arrived at the Afghan frontier, coming from Persia, I was astonished to see how extremely popular King Amanullah was among his subjects. All the way from the frontier to Kabul we were met with enthusiasm by crowds of simple people, shepherds and peasants. We proceeded in a caravan of fifty motor cars, and behind us came an enormous queue of lorries filled with the luggage—all the gifts the King was bringing from the various European countries and all the purchases made by him and the Queen in Europe. A special road had to be made through the Afghan hills for our journey, and the people themselves built it for their sovereign.

Table Implements Introduced

From the day we arrived the Queen became busy transforming the former harem into a regular Western palace, with fine reception rooms. A big table was put in the middle of the dining room and chairs replaced the carpets, for the King would no more eat in the Eastern fashion. All his relatives and guests were told to use forks and knives during the meals whereas before they always ate with their fingers.

"Twice a day, for lunch and for dinner, we all assembled in this dining room. King Amanullah took the head of the table, Queen Souriya sitting on his right. There were as a rule about forty people sharing the King's meal—his children, his numerous half-brothers and half-sisters, the Queen's sisters and relatives, the widows of the King's father, who had remained in the palace after their husbands were murdered.

"At first it seemed very difficult for the elderly women to get accustomed to Western ways, to eat properly, to sit unveiled among men. But little by little they became modernized and seemed to like the new fashion.

Queen Wore Western Dress

"In the afternoon the Queen received guests from the diplomatic corps. At these receptions she wore some of the Western frocks she had brought from Europe. She was very fond of dressing in European clothes and passed all her mornings trying on new outfits and having them changed for her by the Rumanian dressmaker. In the evening Queen Souriya wore delicate gowns, and although none but the family's relatives saw her in these clothes, the rumor about the scantiness of her attire soon spread in Kabul and was amplified by the mullahs who saw their prestige diminished by the King's reforms. Some of Amanullah's enemies received from Europe photographs of the Queen in evening dresses and these pictures were reprinted and sent to chiefs of tribes.

do it, but Amanullah had insisted on it ever since they came back from Europe.

Princess in New School

"However, everything remained quiet until the beginning of September, when we went over to Kabul, for my little pupil, Princess Sultanja, was to enter the French school. It was a new mixed school, where girls were to be educated together with boys. King Amanullah ordered all his ministers to send their children to it so that Sultanja should have distinguished company. But there were also sons and daughters of quite simple families.

"All the trouble began when King Amanullah decided that the time had arrived for his country to be Europeanized. On September 15 he went, with his Queen, to a public gathering and there, in front of thousands of people, he took the veil of the Queen's face and made a long speech. He decreed that, like Souriya, all women were to go about unveiled and wear Western clothes, instead of the long trousers and shirt of the national costume. The felt hat and the Western suit were to become obligatory for men.

"The sight of the unveiled Queen made a profound impression upon the King's audience. But in the palace we did not realize what the consequences would be. We continued to live as before, the King being very busy with his reforms. He went out a lot in the car and received ministers and foreign representatives. We often saw the Soviet minister, Stark, drive up to the palace and stay quite a long time in the King's study.

Queen Helped Poor

"The Queen's time was taken up by receptions, by dressmakers and cashiers. She was extremely kind to anybody who was in need of her help. Frequently poor men or women came to the palace and asked to be received by the Queen. She had them come immediately to her reception room and, whenever it was possible, she helped them.

"However, the King's order to wear Western clothes had caused much discontent in Kabul. Western clothes were expensive and it was often difficult to get them. The Afghans were used to their turbans and baggy trousers. But the King's orders were strict. At first he decreed that men and women clad in the old way would not be allowed to walk in the main street of Kabul or pass through the town park. Guards stood along the main street driving away 'old-fashioned' people. This made the population very angry.

"Soon we noticed that the King was becoming nervous. He spoke of the Shinwari tribe that was revolting against him. But he did not want to take drastic measures against them. 'They are Moslems,' he said, 'and we must spare them.' At the beginning of the rebellion Bachi Sakao, who later crowned himself as King Habibullah, was made prisoner by Amanullah's troops, but Amanullah let him go, as he gave his word never to fight against his King any more.

Palace Under Attack

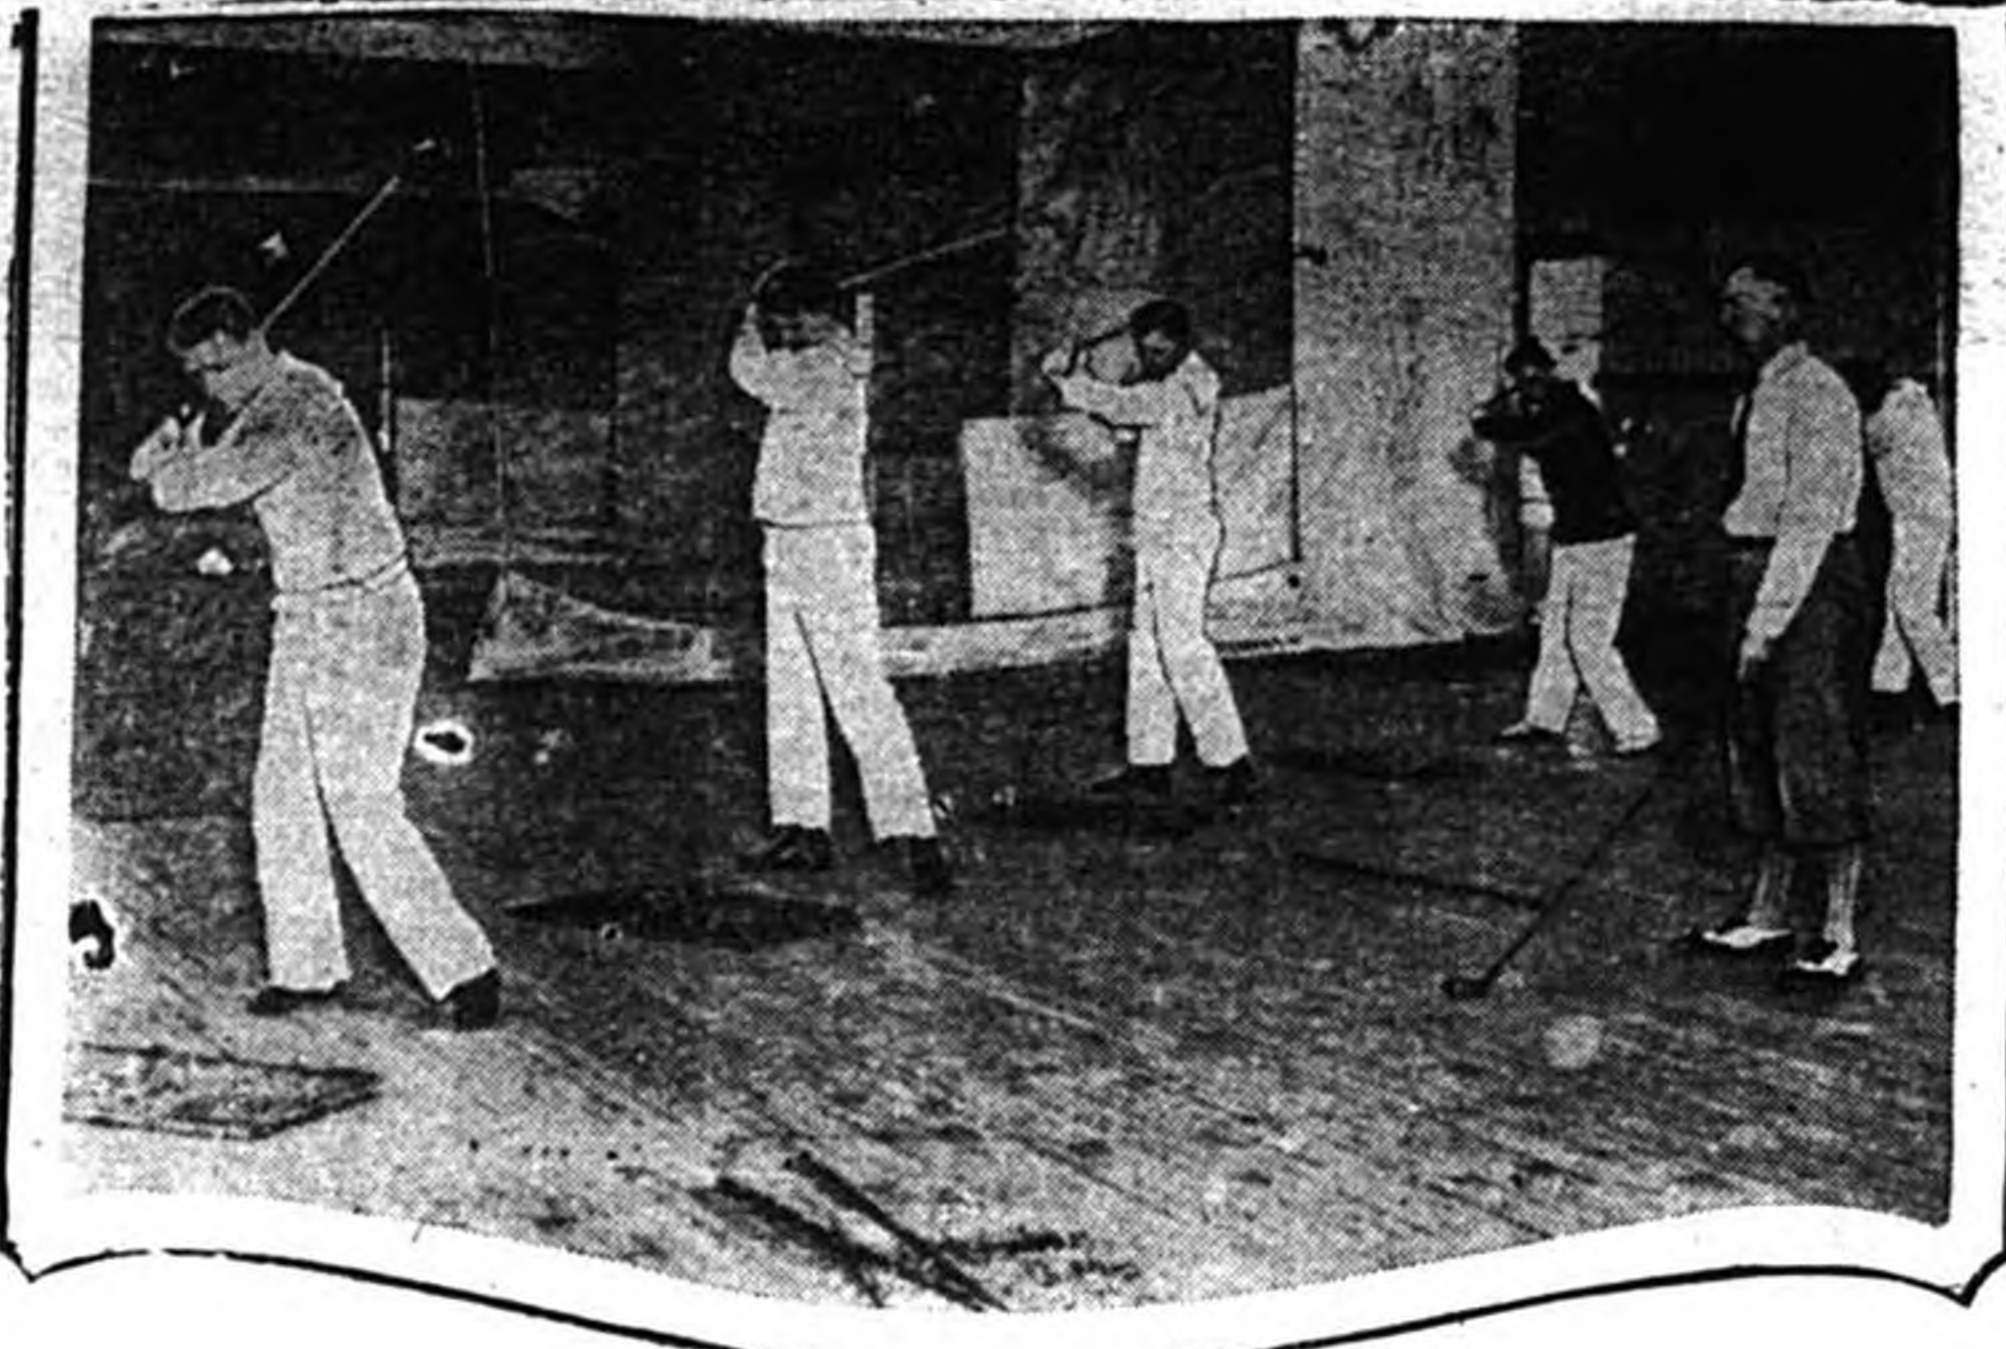

"At the beginning of December we all were in the palace—all except the King, who had gone out for a drive—when the servants began to run around the rooms shouting that we were surrounded by the enemy. The rebels had entered the town and raised against the King the lower population of Kabul. The scene outside was terrifying; ragged armed crowds were vociferating and shouting threatening words against Amanullah and Souriya. The Queen was pale with fear, for her husband was out and she did not know what fate he had encountered.

Soon, however, he returned, having dashed in his motor car through the insurgents. He organized the defense of the palace, even his twelve-year-old nephews receiving weapons. Guns were loaded and the siege began. It lasted for over a week. Bullets fell on the upper floors of the palace, so I had to go down with my pupil to the Queen's room. About ten of us slept there on mattresses on the floor.

Royal Family in Flight

"The rebel's first condition was that the King should repudiate his 'shameful' wife. He refused flatly. After a week's siege the King's Guards ejected the rebels and cleared a part of the town. He decided to put Queen Souriya and his children out of danger. His whole family—about fifteen people, among whom was my little Princess Sultanja, were packed in the huge plane he had received in Germany. I was to go on the same day to the French legation and to be evacuated from there. On the morning I had to

The world is indeed a strange place, to a man who has been removed from all contact with it for three decades. The things he was used to 30 years ago, have disappeared. Their place is taken by things he knows not of. Such is the fate of Albert Gauthier, aged 49, who has just returned to his native Montreal, after 30 years in a United States prison, served as punishment for a crime regarding which he still disagrees with the verdict of society. Like a former famous prisoner, "his hair is gray, but not with years . . . his frame is bent, but not with age," and the iron of his chains has entered into his soul.

Thirty years ago, his father deserted him and his mother. Hot-headed and indignant, he sold his Sunday suit to buy a revolver, made his way to St. Paul, Minnesota, no mean journey 30 years ago, and there found his father. He challenged his father to return home and give to his mother the care and protection a wife and mother advancing in years was entitled to expect of a husband and father. His father not only refused, but added insult to injury by offering the boy a railway ticket back to Montreal.

The boy's rage, smouldering for weeks and fed daily by brooding over the wrong done the mother he worshipped, suddenly burst into flame. His fingers found the weapon for which he had sacrificed his finest wearing apparel. Three shots rang out, and Albert Gauthier was a prisoner, arrested a few minutes later on the charge of murdering his father.

There is no capital punishment in Minnesota. Gauthier went to jail for life, found guilty of patricide. He knew practically no English then, and during the weeks that he waited for trial, and the days that his trial lasted, he thought his life hung in the balance, for he did not know that the death penalty had been abolished in Minnesota.

To-day, after 30 years and two weeks of prison life, he speaks English fluently, but only beginning to learn what life means as the world understands it now. Of his crime, he speaks with the same detachment, as if he were speaking of someone else's act. It was premeditated, he says, and therefore it was easy for the state to convict him. But he does not admit that it was unjustified. He never saw his mother again. The impulsive act by which he sought to redress or, failing that, to avenge the wrong done to her, deprived her of her last means of support, and after struggling for 15 years to maintain herself, she died when only half of his imprisonment was over. Speaking of prison he admits that he was well-treated and, in fact, he loves the routine of prison life, the shelter from all outside worries, the absence of any need to care for himself.

Civil Flying to Serve Canada

Dominion Takes Steps to Convert it into Emergency Divisions of Royal Air Force

Commercial flying is assuming such proportions in Canada that the authorities are taking steps to control the traffic and to utilize and facilitate the new developments with the purpose of converting them into emergency divisions in the National Defense scheme of the air service.

All matters pertaining to aeronautics are to be administered by the Minister of National Defense. The air services from a part of his department and are to be divided into four branches; the Royal Canadian Air Force, the directorate of civil air operations, the control of civilian aviation and the aeronautical engineering division.

The Royal Canadian Air Force is to be responsible for the air defenses of the Dominion to the chief of the general staff. Its work will include the administration and training of the air force and its reserves, the supply of training facilities for all government air enterprises, the collection and distribution of air intelligence and the co-operation with the militia and naval services. It will also provide trained personnel to be attached to other branches.

At present the air force has five units: headquarters at Ottawa for the administration, organization and intelligence bureaus; a land training station at Camp Borden; seaplane training station at Vancouver; the stores depot at Ottawa, and the communications flight department at Ottawa.

The Controller of Civil Aviation is to be responsible to the Deputy Minister of National Defense for the administration of air regulations, the survey, location and equipment of airports, airways and aircraft.

A minimum of fifty hours of solo flight is one of the requirements of the applicant for a commercial pilot's license. All except the private pilot's are required to pass written examinations on the construction, maintenance and operation of aircraft and engines.

Red Hot Sun, Kind Cool Moon, India's Amazing Contrast

Cruel Orb of Day Burns from Horizon to Horizon, Until Luna Brings Hours of Rest

Two great discoveries are to be made by those who go to India for the first time, the Indian sun and the Indian moon, writes James Milne in "The London Daily Telegraph". One might say they are India, because they are orbs which govern her day and night in their own way, for nowhere else are there just the same sun and the same moon.

The Indian sun is very cruel—so cruel at its worst that the human body, white or brown, almost melts under its torture. You see in the morning a brazen-looking ball on the edge of the far sky. It is angry and flushed and you know that this brazen bolt in the blue will assuredly have you.

He climbs the sky slowly, getting more and more brazen in the face more a creature of fiery particles burning in a furnace. At noon he is in possession of the earth, as well as the sky, and his savagery is unbearable and unsatisfied. He goes on with the clock, grasping everything with his molten arms; your head, your eyes, your desk, or the pavement from which your feet retreat in pain. He balances an hour or two, at that sweating agony, playing with you, and then, sour of aspect, he condescends to grow less afflictive. But he is still angry and when he retires for the night, a ball of red coal, you can fancy you hear him hiss, "Ah! I return to-morrow."

Meanwhile the Indian moon has crept faintly into the sky, and it is the loveliest thing imaginable. It has a face of almost childish delicacy and innocence, a real baby face, until it grows clear and manly, and strong with the fullness of night.

The Indian moon is all a hero, a lovely friend, and you give him your full confidence, as he gives you his soft radiance. He has no arrogance, like the sun, only beneficence and a curious mobile warmth of expression. You want to bask in his light and shadow, loving both, because their interplay with each other tells you that he is romantic. It was Byron who said, possibly some foolish night in St. James's Street, that the devil was in the moon. He is not in the Indian moon, maybe because all the Oriental devils with planetary homes are in the Indian sun.

ABOUT YOUR NERVES

Headaches and Other Troubles
Follow When the Nerves
Give Way

Nerves are delicate fibres running from the brain to all parts of the body. Some of them give us the sense of touch and feeling; others convey the will to our muscles and enable us to move. When we have an "attack of nerves" it means that the body is in some way out of order and the nerves have become over-sensitive, so that we get neuralgia, nervous headache, sciatica, or some other nerve trouble. Sometimes the nerves get too weak to do the will of the brain, and we get trembling hands or limbs, or perhaps St. Vitus dance. The whole nervous system is fed and kept healthy by your blood. If it is thin and poor, nervous weakness follows. In that case a tonic is needed to build up the blood, so that it may in turn feed the nerves, spine and brain. The very best medicine for enriching the blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You cannot take them without feeling the uplift they give. Your appetite improves, your brain is clearer, you gain strength in every way, and you feel full of new life. One sufferer, Miss Margaret R. MacDonald, Catalone Road, N.S., tells what this medicine did for her. She says:—"I suffered for a long time from severe headache and nervous exhaustion. I tried several kinds of medicine but got no relief until I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these, before long, gave me complete relief. From my own experience I feel that I can not praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly, and would advise anyone who is suffering from headaches or nervous exhaustion to give them a fair trial, as I feel sure the results cannot be anything but satisfactory."

Take these pills as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A NEW RACE OF BEEF ANIMALS

The yak, a native of the plateau of Tibet, is being used by the Experimental Farms in hybridizing experiment to mingle the blood of the buffalo and ordinary cattle. After many attempts to make direct crosses between cattle and the buffalo, failure was the result owing to reproduction difficulties. The yak has been introduced as an intermediary and hopes are entertained that a hardy beef-producing animal will be evolved for grazing in northern territory. The report of the Dominion Animal Husbandman for 1927, published by the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa, contains an account of the work so far accomplished. This breeding work is being carried on at Wainwright, Alberta, in the foothills of the Rockies. The Dominion Animal Husbandman states in his report that the experiment, in so far as it has gone, has been remarkably successful as shown through the numerous excellent individuals combining the blood of the yak and buffalo, the yak and domestic cattle and their offspring now coming combining the blood of buffalo, yak, and domestic cattle.

Children and World Peace

A Story of What the Junior Red Cross is Doing for Health Service and Good Citizenship
the World Over

11 MILLION MEMBERS

By ANNE ANDERSON PERRY

In a day when the attainment of peace among nations and the encouragement of international understanding occupy the attention of masses of our people, the figures recently issued by the Canadian Red Cross Society, showing the amazing growth of the world league of Junior Red Cross school children, came with added significance.

The Junior Red Cross has extended to forty-one countries of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australasia and the Americas, in which its members now number 11,017,358. Organized under the triple slogans of "Health, Service and Good Citizenship" these eleven million school girls and boys are in truth very promising harbingers of peace among the nations, for they are intensely interested in the Juniors of all lands, with whom they continuously exchange correspondence; they work wherever organized toward the same ends in the same ways; they begin to make international understanding something more than a dream. "The front door of any little school which has membership in the Junior Red Cross," says Philip Gibbs in "The People of Destiny," "opens to the wide world, and the spirit of that school is directly in touch with the children of many countries."

Examination of the detailed figures reveals just what this means. It is shown that in 22 European countries there are 2,869,413 Juniors, of whom no less than a million and a half are in the schools of Italy; that Czechoslovakia and the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes adds another half million; that Austria and Hungary have 140,000 and 116,000 respectively—while even Poland has 115,000 Juniors. Other European lands in which this cult has taken firm footing are Belgium—where it is recognized by government and put on the curricula of the national schools. Norway, Britain, France, Lithuania, Latvia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Estonia, Germany and Spain. A remarkable feature of this development of the Junior Red Cross is the very strong hold the order has taken in those middle European states where before the war health knowledge was at its lowest ebb and internecine strife at the highest peak. Another is the amazing growth in Italy where the dictatorship has given the cult its blessing as a valuable means of building good citizens; and a third the small figures for France (20,000), Germany (10,000) and Britain (8,100), where the conservatism of these great stabilizing nations has made progress slow. But in all three the Junior Red Cross has shown its worth and is now being rapidly extended, through the efforts of educationalists themselves.

In the two Americas the Junior Red Cross has attained very impressive proportions, particularly in North America, where there are 157,155 children enrolled in Canada and a yearly increase of twenty thousand; 5,686,407 in the United States and another million in the Philippines, where the Juniors have been organized, as in Middle Europe, in order to raise the standards of health and right living among a backward people.

In Latin countries in South America, where the Junior Red Cross is of very recent growth, there is a total membership of 62,458. In Brazil, Argentine, Ecuador, Panama and Paraguay, all of whom are kept in close touch with the 15,000 Juniors in Spain and with other European lands. In Asia Japan leads with the amazing total of 1,333,640 boys and girls organized as Juniors, while a good beginning has been made in Siam and the Indian Punjab, with 50,000 more in the government schools. In South Africa the Transvaal has been enterprising enough to introduce the Junior Red Cross and some 10,000 children follow the cult in their classrooms, while in Australia proper there are no less than 94,953 Juniors with an additional 12,500 in New Zealand.

Amongst all these millions of Juniors in so many lands there goes on every year, with always increasing volume, a continuous correspondence. This takes the form of bulky portfolios prepared in classrooms by the children and then forwarded to other classrooms, mayhap across the world. These fascinating compendiums are like nothing so much as glorified scrap books. They contain many delightful letters written by children, say in Czechoslovakia, to those in Canada, or by Japanese Juniors to their brothers and sisters in South America, all of the children concerned being not more than eight to twelve years of age. There is excellent craftsmanship in composition, writing, illustration and explanation. Frequently the fauna and flora, with resources and products of the country of origin are exhibited in attractive manner, while the habits, schools, sports and feelings of the little writers are realistically presented. The arrival or departure of one of these portfolios is an affair of moment in any "Junior" classroom where all the children take the keenest interest in both preparation and reception of these treasures.

During the past year 152 such portfolios from Japan, Britain, Middle Europe, Australia, the Philippines or United States were received in many parts of Canada and 191 carefully prepared volumes were despatched to the ends of the earth for Juniors abroad. So that on personal touch and ever increasing knowledge among the children of many countries there is being laid a foundation for better understanding and international relationships than those of the ignorance, suspicion and prejudice which have too often pertained in the past. It is one of the hopes of the world that there exists such a league of children allied in the cause of health, service, good citizenship and international goodwill. It is indeed hard to over-estimate its importance for as Philip Gibbs says, "the possibilities of better things to come are shown by the work of the Junior Cross and it is in my opinion so inspiring a lesson to the world that it ought to fire the imagination of every civilized people so that there would be a never greater world-wide league of children on this model. Such a league would be a greater promise to use than any League of Nations which may now be formulated."

Many Mothers Always Keep Them in the House.

Thousands of mothers state that they know of no other medicine for little ones to equal Baby's Own Tablets—that they always keep the Tablets in the home as a preventive of childhood ailments, or if sickness does suddenly grip their little ones they feel safe with such a remedy at hand.

Concerning the use of the Tablets Mrs. Donat Ploudre, Tingwick, Que., writes:—"I have nothing but praise for Baby's Own Tablets. They are the only medicine I have ever given my two little ones and I am glad to state that the Tablets have always kept them in perfect health. I feel so safe with the Tablets that I always keep a box in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thoroughly laxative. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth painless. The Tablets are absolutely safe, being guaranteed free from all injurious drugs. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Living Costs

Victoria Times (Lib.): Figures just published by the Canadian Department of Labor show that what one dollar would buy in the way of necessities of life in 1913 now demands from $1.55 to $1.58. Canadians need not be unduly alarmed about this condition. The year 1928, compared with the years since 1922, shows very little difference. In comparison with other countries, our advance of 58 per cent over pre-war living costs compares favorably with the 6 per cent increase in the United States and the 65 per cent in the United Kingdom.

DRINKS WITH EASE

"Is he a hard drinker?"
"No; he drinks with the greatest ease."

Sherbrooke Tribune (Lib.): Though the maple sugar industry is barely developed in certain parts of Canada, it is very important in Quebec's wide territory, as in certain districts of the Provinces of Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The number of those who now manufacture maple sugar in Canada is estimated at more than 50,000.

PARENTS UNDERSTOOD THIS BABY'S LANGUAGE

"We thought we were going to lose our baby, teething," says a Kentucky mother. "He couldn't digest anything and was getting thinner every day. After one of his fretful, crying nights, I thought of Castoria and got some. A few drops made him comfortable, and after a few doses, he seemed like a different baby." Doctors everywhere recommend purely-vegetable, harmless Fletcher's Castoria for colds, constipation, colic and other ills of babies and children, and millions of mothers know its gentle influence is best. Avoid imitations. The Fletcher signature is the mark of genuine Castoria.

Gingham Shoes

Because of the fashionable importance of gingham the coming season, shoe manufacturers are showing gingham patterned footwear in checks and stripes, featuring the colorings must in vogue for this popular cotton fabric. These novel shoes it is expected will be in great demand to complete the smart gingham ensemble. Red and parchment, blue and tan, gray and black are popular combinations in checks, the manufacturers taking pride in the exact duplicating of certain staple gingham patterns.

Solace

I have known heartache and weeping, Terror, and pain, and regret. I have known sorrow, and weeping, Through all the trials I have met. I have learned this, and this only, Though I plod wearily on, Though I be downcast and lonely, After the darkness comes dawn. Oh, it is worth all the sorrow, To know when the night is past, There will be coming tomorrow! There will be light at last! —Marjorie F. W. in the Chicago Tribune.

Beware! Flu May Affect Kidneys!

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, old herbal remedy tones system

How often people say, "I never had kidney trouble 'til after the flu!" Wise Nature, trying to get rid of poisons, sends them to kidneys and liver. But these organs, weakened by illness, can't stand the strain. The poisons are retained in the system. Then come pain, aches, stiffness, loss of appetite, debility, lassitude. What a pity, when a stimulant diuretic, taken in time, might have helped.

For over 50 years thousands have depended on Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, a physician's prescription, made of Nature's herbs. A gentle stimulant for kidneys and liver, it urges perspiratory glands to action, and thus helps shift the excess load from the kidneys.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy contains no harmful drugs. Costs little. Thousands have written, telling how it helped them. Get your bottle today. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Toronto, Ontario.

Rural Line Construction

The extension of electric transmission lines into rural districts presents some features that have caused prospective farm customers to ask questions. The cost per mile of line construction is often discussed. It is clear that, if service equal to that rendered in cities is going to be available to farmers, the line will have to be constructed just as well as are city lines. The fact that there will be fewer and less revenue per mile does not imply correspondingly low cost construction, for the farmer, the same as any other customer, wants light, heat or power at the snap of the switch, day or night. Outages are just as much to be guarded against in the country as in the city, hence only a well constructed line is acceptable and it cannot be cheaply built.

The cost for various parts of the country are determined by local circumstances. Power companies deduct from the line investment any labor or poles that may be contributed. The amount of such deductions equals what the company would have had to pay for such labor and materials. It is, of course, to the customer's interests to keep the capital cost down so that they can get the lowest existing rate in the territory. One way to do this is to organize an old fashioned "Bee" in which all the interested parties club together and get out poles and dig post holes.

To withstand wind storms and the sleet and ice of the northeast the poles have to be of liberal size, both as to diameter and height. They must be set securely in the ground and, where the land is shallow, that means a lot of expense for work in the rock. Rights-of-way across property sometimes causes friction and if unreasonable demands in the way of rentals are made the capital cost goes up and makes more expense for everyone.

The wires that are strung on the poles must be mechanically strong enough to hold up in storms and when loaded with ice, hence the size cannot be cut down to suit a small demand for power. Hard-drawn copper wire must often be used, though copper wire with steel core or aluminum wire is sometimes strung. Cross arms have to be long enough to keep the wires from whipping together. Long spans require wide spacing and high poles; short spans require more cross arms and insulators and more holes in the ground per mile.

If you are one of a group of farmers desiring that most desirable of farm improvements - electric service - get the engineers out from the power company to look the situation over. Some one always has to begin installing such things and very often the apparent difficulties fade away when a definite start is made.

"The announcement by the Atlantic steamship lines of reduced rates on cabin ships coincides with the opening of an Atlantic travel season in which the cabin type of ship reaches a standard of equipment and accommodation never hitherto reached and during which more cabin ships than ever will sail to and from Europe. The advent of reduced rates also harmonizes with the policy of many world governments to abolish passport visa fees. Ocean tourist travel is quickly getting back to pre-war conditions but greatly enhanced by bigger and better ships," says William Baird, Steamship Passenger Traffic Manager, Canadian Pacific Steamships Limited.

The ROYAL MASTER and your new car

THERE are three major features to be considered in choosing tires for your new car — economy, safety and freedom from trouble.

—No other tire in the world will return as many miles per dollar as the Royal Master.

—The Royal Master insures safety from blowouts and punctures.

Not one Royal Master in a thousand will ever puncture.

Not one in five thousand will blow out under two years of service.

—With Royal Masters you will enjoy care-free motoring not only this year but for a long time to come.

Royal Masters cost more than any other tire made and you cannot expect them as standard equipment on your new car.

Any dealer will, however, be glad to equip your new car with Royal Masters as an extra. You will find the additional cost one of the best investments you have ever made.

span. The tourists, who are coming in greater numbers to our town cannot but be impressed by seeing us tidily equipped instead of slovenly and slipshod. Let us do all we can for greater improvement.

A Real Winner

The local manager of the Gagneau Electric Company is justifiably elated over the fact of having attained the distinctive appellation of "Champion," and this because of having sold the largest number of washing machines in the Gagneau Contest just closed. The competition was from April 1st. to the 27th, in which Mr. Gosselin topped the large list of salesman in the circuit by having disposed of 77 machines with a value of $11,126. Mr. Gosselin will in consequence have a free trip to the Convention which will be held in Pittsburg in June 14 and 15th, and he has also been awarded the prize by the Gagneau Company for heading the list of the district salesman.

Lachute is shortly to be favored with a visit from the Police and Fire Chiefs Club of Montreal District.
They have been invited here through our local fire brigade to attend a Concert and Dance which is to be put on in the Auditorium on May 23rd, when the Lachute Dramatic Society have kindly consented to give a repetition of the comedy "Apple Sauce" which was so much appreciated before. The following day being the 24th, arrangements have been made to give the visitors a day's fishing and show them the rounds of our town. More later.

of their school year, especially to those who are writing examinations that will determine their progress at school. This is perhaps a greater opportunity than you dream of now, it may mean advancement for a lifetime, or it may mean the beginning of a series of repeated failures. No examination is easy, but to some it may appear almost impossible. There is nothing impossible, and now is the time for you to make up your mind about that. You may be behind with your year's work, or you may feel you are not capable of passing, and so have made up your mind not to try. If you do that now you will do it all your life, but if you determine that no matter what the difficulty is you will give it your very best effort or positively die in the attempt, then success is almost assured, and you will have acquired a habit of facing every sort of difficulty you may meet with in your life hereafter. A little self denial of seemingly legitimate pleasure and sport, a little extra time in study early and late, a little keener concentration on the work that is most difficult and you will be surprised how much lost ground may be covered, and what progress can be gained.

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. LEMAY

The death of Mrs. Carrie Lemay occurred at the home of her son-in-law Jos. Speight on Monday, May 6th.

Deceased was 86 years of age and was a native of England. She came out to the States with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Taylor, where they resided for twenty-five years, during which time she was married to
Mr. Abraham Lemay, at Depeu, Brown Co., Wisconsin, afterwards moving to Canada where she has resided for the last 53 years. She leaves to mourn her loss seven children, Mrs. Mary Charron, Mrs. Victoria Gagne, Mrs. Sarah Speight, four sons Frank, Joseph, John and Eddie; also two sisters Mrs. C. W.
Anas, of Fondulac, Wis.; Mrs. G.
B. Read, of Spencer, Wis. There are 44 grand-children and 19 great grandchildren. The funeral was held on Wednesday and a large gathering of sympathizing friends attended and paid their tribute of respect to one who by her bright and kindly manner had made herself greatly endeared.
The remains were, interred in the
R. C. cemetery at the West End.

THE LATE A. L. TOMALTY

After a long illness the death took place on Thursday, May 9th., of Arthur Lloyd, third son of Arthur Tomalty, of Mount Maple at the age 35.
He leaves to mourn his loss besides his father and mother, five brothers Alex. and Ernest, of Montreal; Wm., of Brownsburg; Bertram, of Newton-ville, Mass.; Carson at home, and three sisters, Mrs. A. Pollock, Mrs.
Warwick, of Lachute; and Miss Elizabeth Tomalty, of Granby. The funeral will take place on Saturday at 2 p.m., from his late residence, to the Ogdensburg Cemetery.

THE LATE LEONARD COOKE

The funeral of the late Mr. Leonard Cooke whose death occurred at his home in Hoosier, Sask., on April 22nd., took place at 2 p.m., on Thursday, April 25th.; the service which was held in the United Church being conducted by the Rev. Mr. Waugh who took for his text, "The Eternal God is our refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms." The Rev.
gentleman referred to the life and character of the deceased in that he was "a man of few words, kind and candid and as honest as the sun" a statement with which all who knew him will agree. Interment took place in the cemetery at Loverna, Sask., the remains being followed by a large cortege. The floral offerings were numerous and very beautiful.

DEATH

DOUGLASS, At Havana, Alta., on April 20th., Fred Ross Douglass, aged 58 years; son of the late Adam Douglass, and brother of John Douglass, of Chatham.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Mrs. Lemay wish to express deepest thanks for the kindness and sympathy extended

LIMERICK CORNER

The Contest Is Closed

For the time being, the contest is closed. Following is a very interesting letter from Miss Mattie Rabb of Palmerston, Ontario, offering some suggestions for a future contest:

Palmerston, April 9th, 1929.
Gentlemen:—Accept hearty thanks for the Dollar I received yesterday, April 8th, being prize in "Limerick Contest". I see by last week's "Palmerston Spectator" that the Contest is closed, I think it was a splendid feature and would like to have seen it continued for awhile longer. A real good contest is a Picture Title Contest, prizes to be given for the most clever or original title. You could give, say, several prizes each week ranging from $5 to $1 or whatever amount you saw fit to give. 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes, and then say five of one dollar each. Allow each contestant to submit three titles each week if they wish. Nothing to be written on the post card but the titles and name and address. Have no strings or restrictions attached, simply that each person trying the contest must write their titles on a post card and send in up to a certain date each week, this is really an excellent contest, lots of fun and interest is aroused in it, or another good one is to have the four lines of a limerick printed on a certain article and the contestant is to supply the last (fifth) line, and prizes to be given for the best last lines. Another good contest is to have some certain line of goods in an advertisement and a certain phrase in double quotation marks will be in these ads and the contestant is to pick out the phrase in the ads and then make up rhymes or jingles on the product or firm represented and for the best jingles or rhymes prizes to be given each week. Any of these contest are good. I would very much like to see some one of them continued for a time. If there are any instructions or more information I could give you in regards these contests I would be pleased to do so. I remain yours Respectfully.
(Miss) Mattie, Rabb,

We will be glad to hear from those who have taken part in the contest just closed or have enjoyed reading Limerick Corner. Let us know what you think of Miss Rabb's suggestions or send along some of your own.

Glastonbury's Ancient Past Excavations at the Abbey

Ruins in Somerset Are Expected to Tell More of the Churches of Saxon Times in England

By CLAIR PRICE

In New York Times Magazine

Work on the excavations at Glas-tonbury Abbey, which produced such interesting results last year, is to be resumed as soon as the weather permits. There is probably no monastic site in Britain which offers the archaeologist a more promising field than this birthplace of British Christianity.
Through history and legend it traces back to the Romans, and for nearly 1,500 years Christianity has been preached there. No spot in England is more revered.

Joseph of Arimathea, according to the ancient legend, founded there the first church in Britain and with his own hand buried the Holy Grail in the near-by Challice Hill. On Weary-All Hill he planted his pilgrim's staff and it took root and grew into the Holy Thorn which blossomed miraculously every Christmas eve until it was cut down by one of the Puritans.
Its original site is now marked by a cracked gray slab deep in the grass of the hill. The inscription on it,
"L. A. (presumably Joseph of Arima-thea) Ann. D. XXXI," is still legible, and the gardens of the Glastonbury of to-day are filled with the descendants of the original thorn which still blossoms at Christmas time. The most famous of these descendants is now the very old, decrepit and propped-up tree which stands just inside the entrance to the abbey ruins.

Fragmentary though its present remains are, "holy Glastonbury" is the richest store of mediaeval legend in England. Knights in search of the Holy Grail have reined in their chargers there. Queen Guinevere walked among the bluebells. King Arthur died there and many of the old kings were buried there. The holiest spot of all its sacred ground is the area enclosed by the remains of St.
Joseph's Chapel, for this was built "over and around" Joseph's original church of mud and wattles "which is truly to be reckoned," as Henry II declared in a charter of 1134, "the source and origin of all religion in England." To this day the place appears to retain some of its properties of mystery, for in 1903 and again in 1919 the points at which some of its excavators began digging were indicated to them, with apparent accuracy, through the medium of automatic writing.

For twenty years the site has belonged to the Church of England. In the heart of Somerset, about 120 miles west of London, it is administered by the diocese of Wells. The ruins above ground go back only to the twelfth century, by which time the legends of the place had merged into history.
Joseph's original mission was maintained after his death by a little band of anchorites who worked, until the fifth century, when a certain St. Patrick retired from his work to build a monastery there. After the Saxon

To Learn Canadian Farming

An admiral's son and one of the "Young Ambassadors of the Empire", the latter having visited Canada last year with the British "Young Ambassadors" Party were amongst recent arrivals, at Hal-fax, of juvenile Britons coming to Canada for farm work.
The admiral's son was Edward G. B. Kiddle (right), son of Admiral Sir Charles Kiddle, R.N., and the "Young Ambassador" was Frederick T. Mace, (left), who completed a correspondence course in Canadian farming and who has proceeded to Winnipeg for placement.

The boys were among a party of 125 arriving on the Cunarder
"Ascania" and who travelled westward over the lines of the Canadian National Railways. Their placements were handled under the auspices of the British Immigration and Colonization Association.

Invasion in the eighth century King Ina built the first great church on the spot, but it was spoiled during the Danish invasion. St. Dunstan revived it about 946, but it burned soon after his completion of it. Henry II then began the great minster whose ruins still exist. It was one of the largest Benedictine houses in Britain when Henry VIII and the Reformation overtook it. The monks were then dispo-ssed, their abbey was hanged and their deserted buildings were left to become a stone quarry for the district. To-day, when you pay your sixpence at the gate, you pass into a still and beautiful area of lawns and orchards whose weathered ruins are all that is left of the cradle of British Christianity.

The excavations which are now in progress are being carried out at the west end of the ruined nave. Their object has been to reveal the Saxon churches, which are known to lie at some depth below the present grass level, and it is now hoped that the coming season's work will succeed in uncovering the cloister which St. Dunstan added to King Ina's eighth century church. This, if it is found, will be of great archaeological importance as the earliest monastic cloister which has been revealed anywhere in Britain.

Glastonbury is fortunate in possessing in William of Malmesbury's history an eyewitness account of its early buildings as they stood before they were destroyed by the ruthless abbots of the Norman period. This is a distinction which it shares only with St. Augustine's in Canterbury, and the result of it is that excavators at Glastonbury have more evidence on which to direct their work than ex-cavators at any other monastery in the country.

William of Malmesbury lived as a monk at Glastonbury and from 1125 to 1130 devoted himself to a study of the abbey's records and traditions. In his time the ancient wooden church which is believed to have dated from the sixth century was still standing and King Ina's stone church almost joined it on the east. Malmesbury said that St. Dunstan lengthened Ina's church considerably and added a tower and aisles. The first of the Norman abbots began building a new and greater church, but he made so little progress that at his death in 1101 his successor destroyed what he had built and began another and a still greater church. The eastern parts of this church, it is believed, must have been standing when Malmesbury wrote, but he makes no mention of them and no date of the completion of this building has ever been found. It is known, however, that both the new church and the ancient wooden church burned down in 1184 and the present ruins owe their origin to the rebuilding which followed that disaster.

Last year's excavations, carried down to a depth of about five feet below the present grass level, revealed the eastern parts of King Ina's church with additions which are thought to have been those made by Dunstan. A considerable area of the red plaster floor of Ina's church was uncovered and the remains of Dunstan's buildings were found to enclose a crypt or burial chamber which appeared to have been of an earlier date than Dunstan and to have been filled in when his additions were made.
Where there had once been steps leading down into the crypt, a stone coffin, lying east and west, with stone slabs secured on the top of it, was discovered.

When the slabs had been removed,
it was found to be completely filled with the bones of about seventeen persons, carefully arranged and tightly packed, the large bones sloping from the ends toward the middle and the middle space filled with the smaller bones. Eight skulls were found in the west end of the coffin and it is believed that originally there may have been more. The bones were so clean and in such excellent condition that it is thought they could never have been buried in earth but were probably the bones of the early Saxon abbots who were buried in Ina's church and were moved out of the way, perhaps to a place of honor before the altar, when Dunstan erected his additions.

In several places, at a level a little higher in the earth than the Saxon floors, were found the remains of a stone floor which showed signs of burning and which had molten lead in the joints of its stonework. These floors are thought to have belonged to the church begun by the second of the Norman abbots, which, burned down in 1184, probably taking with it what remained of the Saxon buildings.
Several discoveries of minor interest were made last year, among them some carved stones dating from the eighth and tenth centuries and some Immigrants

The word immigrant has lost a great deal of its old significance in this country. Once it described one who was escaping from a life of suffering and hardship to an unknown land of freedom but of uncertain opportunities and possibilities. The modern immigrant it typified in the seven girls photographed above who were recent arrivals on the Canadian Pacific Duchess of Richmond. Their future as domestics in the city of Toronto was assured before they left their homes, and the comfortable quarters they occupied on the regal Atlantic vessel was a long cry from the accommodation they must have endured had they been but one generation earlier.

fragments of painted plaster, one piece being also modelled in relief. All these came from a position beneath the floor of the Norman Church, indicating that in all probability they belonged either to King Ina's or Dunstan's Saxon buildings.

The plan of Dunstan's buildings has still to be revealed, and this is the task which the excavators have set themselves for the coming season's work. They believe he added a cloister to Ina's church and this, if it can be traced this year, will be regarded by archaeologists as the crowning achievement of the Glastonbury excavations. A joint committee of the Society of Antiquaries and the Somerset Archaeological Society is carrying on the excavations, with C. R. Peers, chief inspector of ancient monuments, in command at the site.

Britain May Have Minister of Sport

"Play Up and Play the Game" Assumes Importance in British Eyes

The latest suggestion is that there should be a Minister for Sport. There is no doubt that sport has grown to such an extent that it is a main part of life's week-end. There are many ministers in sport, writes Dixie Dean in the London, Eng., Chronicle.

I met one famous man of the "coat" down in Wales, a real fighting parson if you like, and I always admired him for his vicarage ways. He was a thoroughly interesting man.
But we are not talking so much of ministers of religion as the minister associated with government.

No one can deny that football has come through its royal road through its magnificent management, and that if a Minister is necessary he must of necessity have a big holding in football affairs, for, talk as you like about golf, cricket and what-not, football is the greatest of all games, commands the greatest crowds, is incessant in its whirl of appeal; has no superior even in the racing game with its Derby and Grand National—and still it grows.

Game Still Growing

It is true that there has been talk of an O. C. club here and there giving up through lack of support, but where one drops out four others will rise and ask for the pleasure of being in this chase for points and pounds.

No, football is growing every year all over the globe. Tours in foreign lands have helped to spread the gospel of football, and the miracle, to my mind, is the fact that the game has not gone out of bounds, like some of our mighty golf drives which have length and no special direction.

The Arsenal wound up our season when I had the pleasure of getting three goals and making a record for the English League of 60 goals.

Times have changed, you will al-mit; I will join you in the admittance!
Now the Arsenal seem to have fought like real giants against the famous Aston club. Time was pressing.
There were three minutes to go and there had been two "netting" cases, neither being allowed. One can imagine the joy and the sorrow chasing each other in successive seconds when the referee said "No."

The handshakes had been hearty and the eyes gleamed with delight.
Then a finger pointed even more emphatically than a point duty P.C. And it did not point to the centre; it pointed to a free kick for a case of off-side.
These are moments when a footballer has feelings of fear, fretfulness, joy all running into each other pell-mell.

Strong Measures

Quebec Soleil (Lb.): That the powerful and peace-loving Uncle Sam should have fired seventy shells at a schooner which he merely believed to be carrying contraband is a bit thick.
One man died, falling under the bombardment, but all of them might have been hit by the shells. Are the United States going to renew the exploits of the German submarines and cruisers to see that no illicit trade goes on with their people? The high action of the Dexter has more than a touch of cowardice about it; it is a fine piece of work to open up with your guns on an unarmed schooner which cannot put up any defense, and whose only apparent crime is refusing to surrender on demand.

GROWING CUCUMBERS.

The old method of growing cucumbers in hills is not necessarily the best way of raising this crop. At the Brandon, Manitoba, Experimental Farm, cucumbers were grown both in rows and in hills. The result showed the row method to be much superior.
According to the Report of the Superintendent for 1928, published by the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa, when the hill plan was followed the hills were made six feet apart each way.
When the row system was introduced the rows were put four feet apart and the plants thinned to a reasonable distance. The crops from an area of two hundred square feet amounted to 153 fruits from the rows and 52 from the hills. These results were obtained with the variety called Davis Perfect. The contrast was about equally great with the variety Long Green from which 163 fruits were obtained from the rows and only 62 from the hills. On of the advantages of the row system appears to be that the rows suffer less in the spring from the winds than those in the hills.

Nevada Cave Shows Indian Art 3,000 Years Old

Research by the University of California Dating Back 17 Years Discloses What Is Believed to Be Habitat of People Known as "Tule Eaters"

San Francisco, Calif.—Evidence of a pre-historic tribe of Indians, dating back almost 3,000 years, has been discovered in a cavern in Nevada, according to announcement by archaeolo-gists of the University of California.

The cave and its contents, located on the slopes of Humboldt Mountains in the semi-desert stretches of west-central Nevada have been the subjects of an investigation by the university since 1912, it was revealed. The people who inhabited the cave were known as "tule eaters," according to the university's announcement.

Many possessions of the ancient people were found in the cave, preserved by the dry Nevada climate in a state comparable with that of material found in Egypt and Peru.

The age of the oldest deposits has been worked out by M. R. Harrington of the Museum of the American Indian on the basis of the workmanship shown in the basketware and other artifacts, which is comparable with the earlier ages of the well-known tribes of the southwest. In some places deposits in the cave measured 14 feet deep.

Commenting upon the discovery of the university at the Lovelock cave Prof. A. L. Kroeber said:

"The preservation conditions in Lovelock cave are unusually favorable, recalling those of Egypt and Peru and being equalled at only a very few sites discovered in North America. The material was wholly pre-Caucasian. It was obvious on casual inspection that the ancient culture represented had strong relations with the native culture of California in historic times.

"The material secured was therefore of more than local interest. It gave a picture more or less coeval and cognate with that of the shell-mound-dwellers and other ancient people in California, but far fuller and more vivid because of richness in whole series of objects such as baskets and wooden implements of which only the barest traces, if any, remain in most archaeological sites.

"Further, there were evident de-nite similarities with ancient material from Southwest sandals, woven bags, spear-throwers, and the like."

Sandpiners

O little pipers of the sandy shore,
Why do you love the waves that ceaseless beat?

It is, perchance, a sound the waters make;

A lullaby crooned to you o'er and o'er!
You trail your little caravan before!
The stormy tides whose spear-points shake

In rushing wrath! You go your way;
You take Your quiet course although the surges roar!

You know a sunny cove where bluffs are
And sedges blowing in the winds of May;

A haven where you hear the breakers beat!

And there you brood beneath the ocean-star;

You bide unmindful of these mournful ways
The tides are calling for your truant feet!

Canadians in the U.S.

La Presse (Ind.): (The new American immigration law will compel a great number of Canadians to return to Canada.) Our old Province of Quebec is prosperous enough to-day to keep our children at home and to welcome back those who regret that they have left it. To those who do not find in agricultural work the ideal existence which they desire, industrial life offers enticing prospects, good wages and permanent employment. It is noteworthy to-day that working conditions in the Province of Quebec are better than in the manufacturing centres of New England.
Repatriation agents are well aware of this and will not lose this opportunity of bringing this vital point to the notice of those interested.

Corporations and Campaign Funds

Quebec Evenement (Cons.): The Ferguson Government has passed a law prohibiting Ontario companies from subscribing to campaign funds, under pain of heavy penalties for each infringement of the law. . . . The law will probably be difficult to apply. . . . It would have been a better plan to follow the example of the United States, where the law permits all subscriptions to campaign funds, on condition that the names of the subscribers are published and the details of the way in which their money has been spent. The most serious difficulty in the Ontario law is that it will unjustly discredit candidates without individual fortunes. It will be presumed that they are supported by shady people, thus giving an advantage to candidates who are in a position to pay their own expenses in the campaign. Mr. Ferguson has been too quick in acting this time, and his law is not likely to produce any practical results.

Keeping Your Dog Satisfied at Home

To be satisfied at home, a dog must have exercise. If his master does not take him for a hike, he is apt to get out on his own hook.

The dog's kennel must be comfortable. If it is too hot or too cold, or infested with fleas, he will do the very natural thing—get out and look for better quarters. Hunger, too, will make him restless, so I should say that the three fundamentals are: enough exercise to make him tired, a generous feed in the evening, and a clean, comfortable bed.

Dogs are sociable creatures. They crave company, and that is the reason why the owner of two or more canines seldom has any trouble from "muzzling." One roundabout, especially if he barks much, can lure dozens of other dogs out. If you can induce other owners in the vicinity to keep their pets at home, each animal will be less apt to leave his own yard.

Learning the cause for your dog's "excursions" usually simplifies correction. Slyly watch him some night and see where he goes. Often it will be found that some particular henhouse or garbage can is his destination. Egg-sucking is common among dogs. The owner of the chicken will gladly co-operate with you, and an egg can be so "loaded" (with pepper or some other disagreeable substance) as to cure Tousser sharply and permanently.

Do not tie the dog up; it only makes him worse when he is liberated. Besides, it spoils his disposition. Do not whip him; unless you do so at the time he is starting. Any reproach given hours after the offense does no good, for your pet will not know its reason. Such only makes him afraid of you and more desirous of running away. If you can so plan it as to catch him in the act of running off, mild switching then will help. Accompany it with orders (always in the same words) to stay home; and lead him back every time. Do this repeatedly, being particularly good to him at other times, and he will catch on. Never under any circumstances kick or beat your dog. If you lose your temper, let him entirely alone until next day.—Lester Banks, in "Our Dumb Animals."

Mr. Borah Back to Normal

Detroit Free Press: Announcement that Senator Borah intends to fight American adherence to the World Court, on the basis of the new plan proposed by Mr. Root, is no news. The widespread prevalence of the feeling that the conditions of that plan are reasonable and practical, was almost a guarantee that the Senator would go into a state of opposition. It is against the nature of Mr. Borah to agree with anybody except himself if he can avoid doing so; and the relative harmony which has existed between him and Presidents Coolidge and Hoover for the last few months, unquestionably has been a strain upon his temperament. He was bound to seek relief somewhere, somehow, sooner or later. The revival of the World Court proposal provides a natural avenue of outlet.

MOUNT ROYAL HOTEL

In the Foothills Of the Himalayas

The bungalow-built house stood on the slope of one of "the hills." Those Himalayan foothills, toward which the dweller in the dry hot plains lifts up his eyes for refreshment and inspiration. The great mountain ranges were not visible from the hill station, only from distant points higher up the hills. Sometimes, on special occasions, there would be day excursions to these heights; when a procession of "dandies," or carrying chairs, borne on the shoulders of the family "jompies," would set out for a day's climb, right up beyond the hill station. These were days of rare delight and wonder. The agile servants, clad in the gay livery of the family, perhaps a bright red trimmed with golden yellow, would carry the Europeans up the winding roads into the wild hills.

Unforgettable was the luxuriant jungle growth; the magnificent rhododendrons, large as giant oak trees and resplendent with deep crimson blossoms, the ground beneath them carpeted with fallen, blooming, the tangles of rich bushes festooned with flowering creepers; and mighty fern-tasseled trees in whose branches merry little brown monkeys, and gleaming-faced gray baboons, frolicked and leapt from bough to bough, while bright green parakeets fluttered in the branches. As a traveler went higher, rare flowers and ferns appeared, and he might pick the tall "Juli" lilies (Madonna lilies), the rich velvet-petaled glorioles, the tall pink saxifrage, and the delicate black-stemmed maidenhair fern. Then, too, there were those pretty Himalayan primulas which grew in profusion on the ground, their dainty mauve blossoms set demurely on the top of their straight stalks! The little white everlasts were picked in handfuls, to be sent home to England, there to brighten the grayness of a great northern industrial city.

The views grew more wonderful as the path wound upward, until at last the place was reached where the Himalayas themselves were visible. How grateful one is for the loving wisdom of a Mother, who led one along the fern-covered path at the top of their wooded ravine, to gaze on that superb panorama of mighty, distant snow-clad peaks, the "snows," as the Himalayan ranges are familiarly called, and said: "Look well at them. You will want to remember them always!"

These outings far ahead were high lights, among happy days spent at home. In India the garden is known as a "compound" and is generally large. The front of one compound was a wood, where lilies of the valley grew wild, and through which ran the drive up to the house, its shady terraces gay with large tubs of hydrangeas, flowers and vegetable gardens, stables, tennis court and asphalt playground, and another wood where long fern-like moss grew in quantities, were all included in that home domain. Perhaps the best beloved spot was the orchard with its pear and cherry trees, for, since the monkeys always appropriated the fruit, the children were allowed to climb them freely.

Walks were frequent along the side of the lake, reached by passing through the bazaar. One could gaze at the goods displayed on open stalls, at gay toys, brass and copper ware, jewels, Indian sweetmeats! A dear Ayah would sometimes bring home goodies tied up in knots in the ends of her chuddah or sticks of juley sugar-cane. In the hot weather the tar on the roof of the house would melt and drip from the eaves like black icicles, and the children would pick them off, shaping them into dolls and figures in their hands. In the rains the compound would be traversed by streams and rivers ideal for the navigation of toy boats and ships, whilst the rocks on the lake and hillside would blossom all over with little shell-like pink and white begonias. The dearest little frogs would appear in myriads under the trees.

And then, when the happy day was over and night fell swiftly, unheralded by twilight, the stars would come out in the gorgeous eastern sky. The children could feast their eyes on that marvelous spectacle. Those jewels blaze in the heavens of memory still!

The New Imperialism

Ottawa Droit (Ind.): Economic imperialism is a new factor in the world. The old type of imperialism, that of Alexander, of Caesar and of Napoleon, was of a warlike description; the American type of imperialism is practical, without ever ceasing to be strongly armed. In the first case it was political conquests and displacements of all allegiances; in the second it is only economic conquests which usually occur without political reactions, but which may pave the way for new territorial boundaries. We in Canada know something of this. We are more and more penetrated by the American dollar. American investments in our country are calculated at four billion dollars. And the annual growth is exceedingly rapid. In 1910 American capital invested abroad did not exceed 500 million dollars; whilst to-day it is estimated that it amounts to 30,000 millions. China and South America are, with us, the countries most invaded by this spirit of economic conquest. In Germany, Italy, Poland, great industrial firms which have become American properties are already very numerous.

KEEP YOUR BABY HAPPY AND WELL

Every mother wishes her child or children to be well and happy; to be bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked boys and girls. No mother, though, can expect her children to escape all the ills of babyhood and childhood, but she can do much to help them fight the battle for health.

All prudent mothers constantly keep at hand the means of aiding their little ones when sickness comes suddenly—as it generally does in the case of children. In every home where there are infants and young children Baby's Own Tablets should be found. Read what Mrs. Mary Hill, Centre Dummer, Ont., says concerning these Tablets:—"I am the mother of six children and would not be without Baby's Own Tablets. They are a wonderful medicine for little ones."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus break up colds and simple fever, banish constipation and indigestion and allay the irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth. They are absolutely safe and are pleasant to take. The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The National Origins Law

New York Times: The foreign elements are divided on this subject. Those which, like the Germans, Irish and Scandinavians, will have their quotas cut by the new system oppose it strongly. Others, like the Russians, Italians and Poles, whose quotas will be enlarged, favour it. The arguments used against it are much the same as those used in 1924 against the selection of the 1890 census as the basis for computing the immigration quotas. Many of those who now denounce the national origins clause defend the 1890 census, which five years ago they attacked. The foreign elements opposing the national origins system are strong in certain sections of the country and will find sturdy champions in Congress. But against them is a great mass of Americans unaffiliated with any foreign racial groups. Unless Congress acts before June 30, the national origins system will come into force as the law of the land.

The following preciously preserved extract from a love-letter written home to his wife by an ex-soldier on active service will evoke tender memories in thousands of former service men: "Don't send me no more nagging letters, Lottie. They don't do no good. I'm three thousand miles away from home, and I want to enjoy this war in peace."

"Say, why don't you get a car with a self-starter?" said a bystander to an elderly negro who was wearily cranking-starting his car. "Well, you see, Boss, Ah'd be wonderin' all de time if she would be a-startin' when Ah didn't want her to."

When Pain Comes

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention. One spoonful of this harmless, taste-

Starvation Salaries

Le Monde Ouvrier (Ind.): Surprise is sometimes expressed at the gloomy condition of trade; landlords are always complaining that their tenants do not pay their rent, and the grocer at the corner, compelled to give credit, finds himself in his turn charging much more than the market price for his goods, thus making the one pay for the other. This situation ought not to surprise us, when a father of a family earns an average salary of from $600 to $700 a year, that is to say about $12 to $15 a week. How can you expect him to pay his rent, his grocer, his doctor, etc? He cannot pay out more than he receives; he does not live, he can only merely exist. Instead of making the wheels of industry and commerce turn, this is a brake on general prosperity. And yet we talk of bringing back to this country some 200,000 of our fellow-citizens from the United States! Are we going to offer them 20 to 25 cents an hour, after killing the fatted calf to celebrate the return of all our prodigal sons?

The I'm Alone Incident

New York Sun. There is no question of the character of the vessel that was sunk by the Coast Guard. There may be a question whether she was inside the twelve-mile limit when first chased by the patrol boat Wolcott. There may be a question whether the pursuit, first by the Wolcott and then by the Dexter, was hot. But assuming that Secretary Mellon is right in his statement that the patrol officers are correct in both these respects, the fact remains that the British Government never abandoned the principle of the three-mile limit and never acceded to the application of the right of hot pursuit in a case begun outside the twelve-mile line. If the British Government has decided not to press this case, it undoubtedly is because of the notorious character of the I'm Alone and not because Lordon retreats from her old contention. At that, it would be well for the two governments to look calmly into the facts, possibly making it certain that no such incident, with its unpleasant reactions on both sides of the Atlantic, shall occur again.

The most pressing intellectual need is such poise as comes from a genuine coordination of the great subdivisions of thought.—President James R. Angell of Yale.

A REMARKABLE CONVERSION

Owing to his advanced views and the forceful language in which he usually expresses those views, A. J. Cook, the energetic secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, sometimes referred to as the "Emperor," has earned for himself the name of a Communist. But a change has come "o'er the spirit of his dream." That he would ever be heard publicly paying a heartfelt tribute to the royal family, or to any member of it, would have been considered as millennial an event as the consoling of the wolf and the lamb. But as a matter of fact, that is exactly what has happened.

To be precise: A few days ago at a Mansion House luncheon given by the Lord Mayor of London to all the leaders who had assisted in the relief fund for the distressed miners among others present were the Prince of Wales and Mr. Cook. In the course of a speech the miners' secretary, in paying a remarkable tribute to the Prince, said that his action in helping to relieve the sufferers had brought the throne very near the people. Turning directly to the Prince, Mr. Cook used these words:

You, sir, have done a marvelous thing. Never was I so impressed as by your speech on Christmas night. I was with two Communist friends and when your name was announced to speak on behalf of the miners' fund, they undoubtedly scoffed, but they listened to what you had to say, and when you had finished, with tears in their eyes, they put their hands in their pockets and gave what money they had to the fund. It was a wonderful appeal you made that night.

Later, in the course of an interview, Mr. Cook said that his republicanism had been destroyed—or at best he was now only a lukewarm Communist—and that the Prince of Wales was responsible for his change of heart. Strange words, indeed, to come from the lips of one who had hitherto been regarded as among the reddest of the Reds.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY
The chief facts regarding the Canadian Pacific Railway include the following: Its total mileage is 20,409. Lord Northcliffe called it one of the greatest engineering feats in the world, as well as one of the greatest corporations. It employs many thousands and carried in 1927, nearly 14 million passengers and 34 million tons of freight. Its equipment included 2,225 engines and 93,000 freight and passenger cars. The assets exceed a billion and the ordinary stock amounts to 300 millions. It has a fleet of over 50 steamers plying around the world and on the Great Lakes.

ACTIVITIES OF THE W. C. T. U.

Foes of every kind of narcotic habit the W. C. T. U. is a particular enemy to the cigarette habit for girls.
Illustrative of this is the resolution passed at a recent meeting of Fitch Bay Union, "That newspapers be asked to refrain from publishing advertising matter relating to smoking cigarettes by girls."

Ormsville Union celebrated its fortieth anniversary in February in a largely attended public meeting. A charter member was among those present, and she was made a life member of the Provincial Union after forty years of service, an honor deserved. Brief summaries of the work of the years was given, and the membership roll, swelled by the addition of fourteen names. Money was voted to the Temperance contest and to world missions, as well as to the Provincial Extension Budget.

Brooklet Union remembered the sick and sorrowing, sent twenty comfort bags to lumbermen.
Dewittville Union sent a cash contribution to a city mission, gave cash prizes for the Provincial Temperance contest, and remembered Dr. Grenfell's Mission in Newfoundland.

Lennoxville held a public meeting and tea with an interesting program, the returns going to the Prov. Extension Budget and World's Missions.
Sherbrooke had a delightful musical and tea, the proceeds of which went to the W. W. C. A.

CANADIANIZATION AND NATIONAL EVENTS

This article was written by Mrs.
Campbell McOuat, Provincial Convener of Canadianization and National Events.

We hear quite frequently that Canada has awakened to National consciousness; we hear, too of Canadian Citizenship. Could we display our love of "Home and Country" in any better way than to beautify the waste places of our fields, roadways, school grounds and home surroundings with trees, for tree planting time has come again.

When you plant a tree, choose the best; the maple, the elm for beauty and shade. The short lived popular does not endure our climatic conditions or give the desired shade. Gardens would give wonderful results with the shelter of a cedar hedge along the north and west and cedar is very decorative in winter as well as summer.

Do not forget the spruce and pine.
They, too, will brighten the winter landscape. It is true pine grows very slowly, but always, from the very beginning, it is an ornament, a thing of beauty.

Someone planted a row of maples on each side and along the front of their home, but in the corner near the gateway they planted a tiny pine tree. That was years ago; now a great pine throws out its feathery plumes in lovely contrast to the nearby maples, and most beautiful of all is it in winter. Somewhere busy tired hands are at rest, but blessed "Their works have followed them."

The Tree Planter

I saw a woman, bent and grey,
Planting trees by the bleak highway.
And seeds of grasses and seeds of flowers,

She scattered there through the hours
She looked so fragile and old and worn

That, touched with pity, I spoke to her.

"Why toil, kind mother, the live long day,
Planting trees by the bleak highway?
You have earned a home and an easy chair

In place of toiling and sweating there."

She answered, "I love the work, my son

And rest comes sweet when the day is done."

"Why plant the flowers on the highway's hem?
She smiled, "The children will gather them."

"But the trees you're planting, you'll pass away
Ere they cast a shade by the bleak highway."

"It matters little that I should die,
I can but plant them," she made reply.

"I love to dream that the birds will swing
On the topmost branches and gladly sing

And happy children will gather here
To play neath my trees from year to year;

Then perchance, a pilgrim will pass some day
And find a shade by the bleak highway."

Richard Posey Campbell.

"In power, ease of driving, and flexibility, the new McLaughlin-Buick outperforms any car I have ever driven." (name on request)

THE owner quoted above has been driving automobiles for 15 years, and has an intimate knowledge of motor car performance and value. Yet his enthusiastic comment merely typifies that of thousands who have turned to McLaughlin-Buick after making their own exacting tests.

Not only have motorists in all parts of the country accepted McLaughlin-Buick's invitation to get behind the wheel and get the facts about McLaughlin-Buick performance... but they have entered orders for more than twice as many McLaughlin-Buicks as any other car at or above its price.

Be sure to drive a McLaughlin-Buick! Try it in traffic—on the straightaway—up the steepest hills. The more thorough your tests, the more careful your comparisons—the more inevitably will they lead you to McLaughlin-Buick! 244-232

SALE OF FISH AND GAME

The last act of Honourable Perreault, before he relinquished his office as Minister of Colonization, Mines and Fisheries, was most welcome to every citizen who has at heart the conservation of our natural resources in fish and game.

The sale of trout is now forbidden indefinitely, and it is hoped by all that the sale of other game fish will also be prohibited.

It has often been asked why such a legislation had not been passed before, prohibiting entirely the sale of game fish, game birds and four-footed game. Years ago, the sale of partridges, "rued grouse", was prohibited, but, ever since unscrupulous dealers have been buying these birds in spite of the law. Last year we had the pleasure of seeing a law passed prohibiting the sale of deer, moose and caribou, another good step towards the realization of the conservationists' dream. Now comes the law on trout, which is the wisest one passed yet.

The fact that there was a market, and a ready one at that, encouraged the poachers to hunt and fish at all times of the year. The fact that a revenue could be derived from poaching encouraged them to use other means than rod and gun—they resorted to nets, traps, snares, and they were not only using them during the open seasons but during the whole year, especially while fish were moving up the current of small rivers to their spawning beds, when the fish are all together.

The same thing applies to game birds. If there was no market for them, young birds such as ducks, which in August still have pin feathers, and on whose breast very little meat can be found would be left unmolested and allowed to grow to full size and then be worth while for table use.

The crusade of protection, being launched by the rejuvenated Fish and Game Protective Association, deserves much praise and encouragement from all for the good work they have already done, and resulting from their activities the ready market, mentioned above, will soon have disappeared for the poachers. Their secret buying ways are now well known to the Inspector of this Association and almost every day unscrupulous fish and game dealers are brought in front of the Magistrate.

One particular case was brought up last week—a certain dealer who has trucks scurrying the fishing places was caught with a full load of dore-trucks and all were seized. It will not be long before others doing similar business will have to cease offending or go out of business.

Bass, the wonderful fresh water game fish, so rapidly disappearing now from our big rivers, is also a victim of the nets when it travels up streams to spawn—at which time it is caught by thousands—should be given all the protection it is humanly possible. It is a real calamity to see such fine fish caught with nets and the only reason responsible for this is the possible market, otherwise, those fishermen for whom fishing is a profession would liberate if they could not sell them.

Every right thinking citizen should feel in him the urge to preserve our useful wild life. The great movement under way to retain our natural resources will bear fruit. It is only starting and what was only a hope yesterday is a possibility today, and with the help of every one will be a reality to-morrow.

As this Province is so large and its population rather small and scattered, it would require an army of inspectors to protect its natural resources. However, if the travelling citizens would try to educate some of their fellow-citizens in the conservation of fish and game, it would, indeed, greatly help in retaining our natural resources, for, if destroying in such a criminal way is allowed, we will be left without any natural resources at all.

The Memory Lingers On

Sacha Guitry's curiosity was aroused recently, so the story runs, by observing a man who was walking ahead of him stretching out his arm whenever he turned down a street. The actor ventured to stop him and inquire why he did this. The man made no secret of it. "It's all I have left of my motor-car," he replied.

What... No Insulation!

"MADAM... I could not rent a non-insulated home to-day. This house is being completely insulated with TEN/TEST".

Agents who know what the public demands state that insulation is absolutely necessary to secure tenants and to keep them satisfied. TEN/TEST Insulating Building Board provides the full measure of insulation.

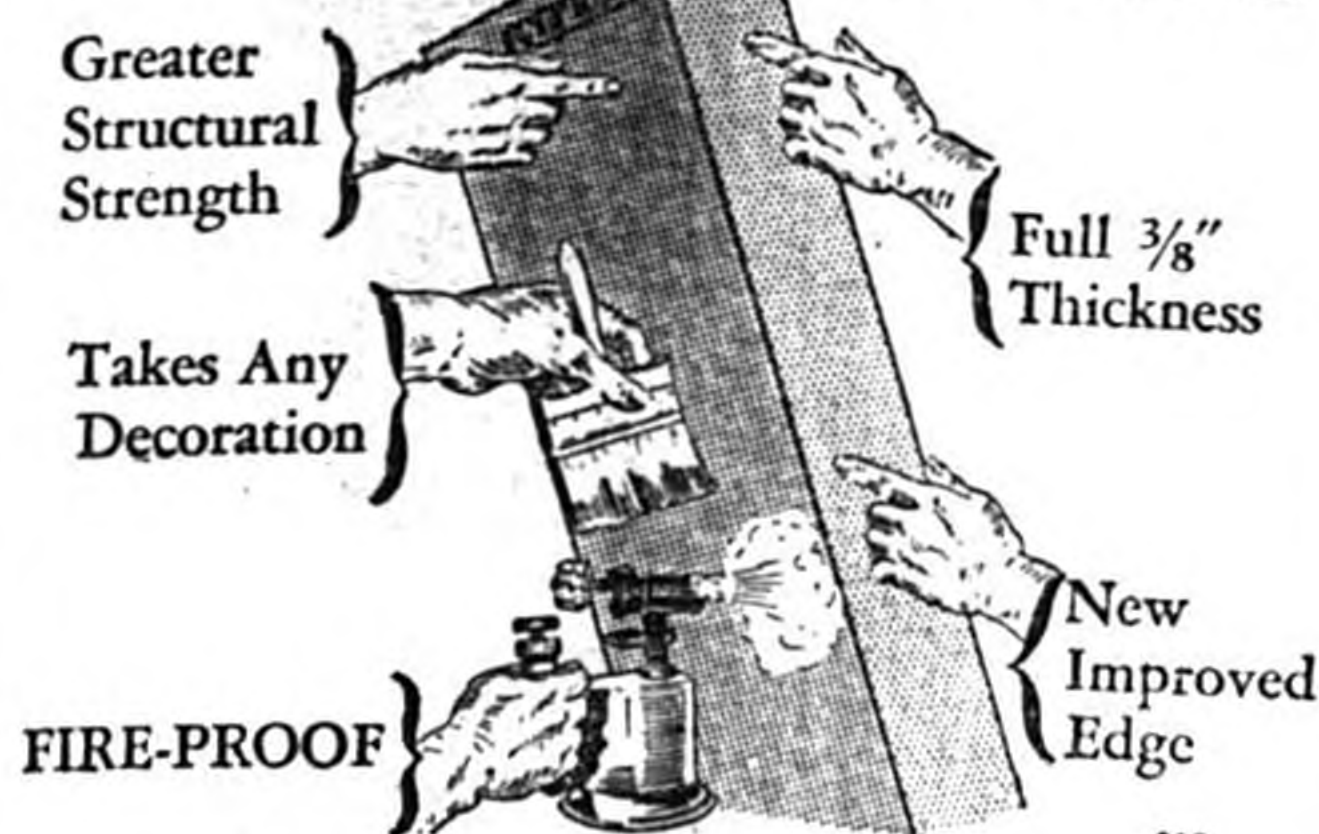

Many homes already built are being remodelled with TEN/TEST at slight extra cost. TEN/TEST makes houses proof against outside heat and cold, prevents draughts and dampness and retains furnace heat to the tune of 35% saving in fuel bills.

You who plan to buy, build or remodel should inform yourself about this vital question. Write for "TEN/TEST and the Most Wonderful Adventure in the World." Mailed free on request.

Canadian Industries Limited Dominion Ammunition Social Club News

As promised last week, I am giving the scores of the players taking part in the return bowling match between Lachute and Brownsburg on the Social Club Alleys, May 1st., 1929

Jim Hazel	179	157	143	479
Joe Martin	157	168	169	494
Jim Reid	147	153	146	446
P. Proulx	179	167	176	522
H. Gardiner	137	161	163	461

It will be noticed that Lachute did not do so well in this match. Possibly, playing on strange alleys, may have contributed towards the lower score. One of the main points that makes a good bowler, is the ability to score consistently, on different alleys. The writer feels sure that it will not take long for the individual Lachute players to develop the right team "atmosphere" to bowl successfully on any alley. Good luck Lachute and keep up the good work.

Another important bowling match was bowled by Brownsburg "C" Team against Explosive men from MacMasterville, P. Q. After a journey of many miles by car, this C.I.L. team did very well, when one considers the cramped condition in which the travellers have to remain for a long time. Our "C" Team was none too strong on this occasion, but it must be remembered that one or two of the players were old "Beleil" men and the meeting of their friends possibly may have affected them, to such an extent, as to retard the development of their style in this match. The scores were as follows:

R. Cale	126	153	121	400
A. Parent	175	134	134	443
A. Hagan	128	161	145	434
J. Delay	134	149	170	453
L. Comptois	131	135	134	400

Brownsburg "C"	694	732	704	2130
J. Galbraith	187	139		326
C. T. Wilson			114	114
J. Duncan	168	147	159	474

Mr. and Mrs. Miles Copeland, accompanied by Mrs. Wm. Evans and Mr. Addley Sherritt, motored to Montreal Sunday last.
Mr. Wm. Caddick spent a few days in Montreal this week.
Mr. Chas. Andrews spent the week-end in Lakefield.
We regret to hear that Mrs. Wm. Evans broke her wrist, while trying to crank her car, and has been undergoing treatment in Montreal.
Once again our roads are open and we are pleased to see all the tourists once more.
Rev. Fiander returned home, after attending Synod in Montreal.
Rev. A. E. and Mrs. Mount will return to their residence here on Saturday.

"I'm sorry I ran over your cat and killed it, madam but cheer up, I will replace the animal."
"Oh, you will, will you? Can you catch mice?"

H. Werrett	184	148	143	475
A. Galbraith	144	152	167	463
J. Anderson	147	134	133	414

A return match will be played at Beleil on 18th. May, in which the Brownsburg boys would like to test the true strength of this family team. We hope that these matches will be the forerunners of many more, not only with Beleil, but with other teams in the C.I.L. family, and also with outside teams. Development of style and technique will thereby be greatly encouraged, enabling Brownsburg to produce players who will continue to keep the Dominion Ammunition Division's teams supreme in the C.I.L. League.

Those tardy members who have not yet paid their dues, are respectfully requested to do so, at once, thereby enabling the Secretary to give a good accounting in his balance at the half year. We had a good picnic last year, gave considerably more prizes than in any previous year but the committee is not yet satisfied. Give us the funds, and we will make this a year to be remembered. Give this committee the backing, and every step will be taken to get more and more privileges and additions for your Club.

Other Brownsburg News

There is not very much to say this week. Brownsburg has been nice and there is not much to complain about. There will be no further talk about the erection of the Brownsburg "Jail" if the good behaviour of the population continues.

Mention should be made about the development of Mr. F. Vowles property on the Lachute Road. At present this portion looks like a golf course, or a part of no man's land during wartime. Say boys, some of you remember how we used to put the flag-end on a pin to get the last puff. Well, the road through this property has been appropriately named "Woodline Ave." Many prominent citizens have purchased lots. Look to it that Lachute people do not beat you out in securing homesteads in this (to be) highly respectable residential district.

If you looked up this column to get some "spicy" news, you've been fooled! But next week we'll see what?

Mr. Thos. Lavasseur, Mr. A. Teller, Mr. Arthur Coffey, Mr. E. Rose and Mr. Jas. Weightman, of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. MacDonell.
Mrs. Ballantyne returned home from Tamworth, Ont., on Saturday where she was called by the death of her mother, Mrs. Brown of that place. We extend to her our heartfelt sympathy.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Larmonth and daughter Miss Lelia Larmonth, Mr. and Mrs. Brown York, Miss Helen Tweedie and Miss Betty Hurdman, of Ottawa, spent a few days this week at Mr. Larmonth's summer home.

The regular monthly meeting of the Presbyterian W. M. S. was held on Wednesday afternoon at Mrs. N. F. MacGregor's. Mrs. M. Gall, of Lachute, brought the greetings from the Presbyterian and gave an address which was very much enjoyed by all. Mrs. A. C. MacDonell gave a paper on Our Field Secretaries. The hostess were Mrs. Henry McQuat, Mrs. Alex. Caution and Mrs. N. F. MacGregor.

"SALADA" TEA

'Fresh from the gardens'

From the beginning Antony had seen this answer coming and had drawn back from it. For if Mark had been killed, it seemed such a cold-blooded killing. Was Cayley equal to it?

Bill would have said "No," because Bill wouldn't have killed anybody in cold blood himself, and because he took it for granted that other people behaved pretty much as he did. But Antony had no such illusions. Murders were done; murder had actually been done here, for there was Robert's dead body. Why not another murder?

Had Mark been in the office at all that afternoon? The only evidence

(other than Cayley's, which obviously did not count) was Elsie's. Elsie was quite certain that she had heard his voice. But then Bill had said that it was a very characteristic voice—an easy voice, therefore, to imitate. If Bill could imitate it so successfully, why not Cayley?

But perhaps it had not been such a cold-blooded killing, after all. Suppose Cayley had had a quarrel with his cousin that afternoon over the girl whom they were both wooing. Suppose Cayley had killed Mark, either purposely, in sudden passion, or accidentally, meaning only to knock him down. Suppose that this had happened in the passage, say about two o'clock. Suppose Cayley there, with the body at his feet, feeling already the rope round his neck; his mind darting this way and that in frantic search for a way of escape; and suppose that suddenly and irrelevantly he remembers that Robert is coming to the house at three o'clock that afternoon—automatically he looks at his watch—in half an hour's time.

Antony pictured to himself Cayley in the passage, standing over the dead body of his cousin, and working it out. How could Robert be made to seem the murderer, if Robert was alive to deny it? But suppose Robert were dead, too?

He looks at his watch again. (Only twenty-five minutes now.) Suppose Robert were dead, too? Robert dead in the office, and Mark dead in the passage—how does that help? Madness! But if the bodies were brought together somehow... And Robert's death looked like suicide? ... Was it possible?

Madness again. Too difficult. (Only twenty minutes now.) Too difficult to arrange in twenty minutes. Can't arrange a suicide. Too difficult. ... Only nineteen minutes. ...

And then the sudden inspiration! Robert dead in the office, Mark's body hidden in the passage—impossible to make Robert seem the murderer, but how easy to make Mark! Robert dead and Mark missing; why, it jumped to the eye at once. Mark had killed Robert accidentally; yet, that would be more likely—and then had run away. Sudden panic. ... (He looks at his watch again. Fifteen minutes, but plenty of time now. The thing arranges itself.)

Was that the solution, Antony wondered. It seemed to fit in with the facts as they knew them; but then, so did the other theory which he had suggested to Bill in the morning.

"Which one?" said Bill. They were sitting in the copse above the pond, from which the Inspector and his fishermen had now withdrawn. Bill had listened with open mouth to Antony's theory, and save for an occasional "By jove!" had listened in silence. "Smart man, Cayley," had been his only comment at the end.

"That Mark had killed Robert accidentally and had gone to Cayley for help, and that Cayley, having hidden him in the passage, locked the office door from the outside and hammered on it."

"Yes, but you were so dashed mysterious about that. I asked you what the point of it was, and you wouldn't say anything." He thought for a little, and then went on, "I suppose you meant that Cayley deliberately killed Mark, and tried to make him look like a murderer?"

"See anything?" said Antony at last.

"I wanted to warn you that we should probably find Mark in the passage, alive or dead."

"And now you don't think so?"

"Now I think that his dead body is there."

"Meaning that Cayley went down and killed him afterward—after you had come, after the police had come?"

"Well, that's what I shrink from, Bill. It's so horribly cold-blooded. Cayley may be capable of it, but I hate to think of it."

"But, dash it all, your other way is cold-blooded enough. According to you, he goes up to the office and deliberately shoots a man with whom he has no quarrel, whom he hasn't seen for fifteen years!"

"Yes, but to save his own neck. That makes a difference. And I think that Mark's dead body is in the passage now, and has been there since, say, half-past two yesterday afternoon. And tonight Cayley is going to hide it in the pond."

Bill pulled at the moss on the ground beside him, threw away a handful or two, and said slowly, "You may be right, but it's all guess-work, you know."

Antony laughed. "Good Lord, of course it is," he said. "And tonight we shall know if it's a good guess or a bad one."

Bill brightened up suddenly. "Tonight," he said. "I say, tonight's going to be rather fun. How do we work it?"

Antony was silent for a little. "Let's put ourselves in Cayley's place," said Antony, puffing slowly at his pipe. "He's got the body, or whatever it is, in the passage. What will he do next?"

"Come out again," said Bill helpfully.

"Yes; but which end?"

Bill sat up with a start.

"By jove, you mean that he will go out at the far end by the bowling-green?"

"Don't you think so? Just imagine him walking across the lawn in full view of the house, at midnight, with a body in his arms. He can get out by the bowling green, and then come to the pond without ever being in sight of the house at all."

"You're right. Now, what's the next thing?"

"The next thing is to mark the exact place in the pond where he drops—whatever he drops."

"So that we can fish it out again."

"If we can see what it is, we shan't want to. The police can have a go at it tomorrow. But if it's something we can't identify from a distance, then we must try and get it out. To see whether it's worth telling the police about."

"Y—yes," said Bill, wrinkling his forehead. "Of course, the trouble with water is that one bit of it looks pretty much like the next bit. I don't know if that had occurred to you."

"It had," smiled Antony. "Let's come and have a look at it."

They walked to the edge of the copse, and lay down there in silence, looking at the pond beneath them.

"See anything?" said Antony at last.

"What?"

"The fence on the other side."

"What about it?"

"Well, it's rather useful, that's all."

"Said Sherlock Holmes enigmatically," added Bill. "A moment later, his friend Watson had hurled him into the pond."

Antony laughed.

"I love being Sherlocky," he said. "It's very unfair of you not to play up to me."

"Why is that fence useful, my dear Holmes?" said Bill obediently.

"Because you can take a bearing on it. You see—"

"Yes, you needn't stop to explain to me what a bearing is."

"I wasn't going to. But you're lying here"—he looked up—"underneath this pine tree. Cayley comes out in the old boat and drops his parcel in. You take a line from here on to the boat, and mark it off on the fence there. Say it's the fifth post from the end. Well, then I take a line from my tree—we'll find one for me directly—and it comes to the twentieth post, say. And where the two lines meet, there shall the eagles be gathered together. Q. E. D. And there, I almost forgot to remark, will the taller eagle, Beverley by name, do his famous diving act. As performed nightly at the Hippodrome."

Bill looked at him uneasily.

"I say, really? It's beastly dirty water, you know."

"I'm afraid so, Bill. So it is written in the book of Jasher."

"Of course I knew that one of us would have to, but I hoped—oh, well, it's a warm night."

"Just the night for a bathe," agreed Antony, getting up. "Well now, let's have a look for my tree."

They walked down to the margin of the pond and then looked back. Bill's tree stood up and took the evening, tall and unmistakable, fifty feet nearer to heaven than its neighbors. But it had its fellow at the other end of the copse, not quite so tall, perhaps, but equally conspicuous.

"That's where I shall be," said Antony, pointing to it. "Now, for my sake, count your posts accurately."

"Thanks very much, but I shall do it for my own sake," said Bill with feeling. "I don't want to spend the whole night diving."

"Fix on the post in a straight line with you and the splash, and then count backward to the beginning of the fence."

"Right, old boy. Leave it to me. I can do this on my head."

"Well, that's how you will have to do the last part of it," said Antony with a smile.

He looked at his watch. It was nearly time to change for dinner. They started to walk back to the house together.

At midnight the pond was waiting for them, more solemn in the moonlight. The trees which crowned the sloping bank on the far side of it were mysteriously silent. It seemed that they had the world very much to themselves.

Almost unconsciously Antony spoke in a whisper.

"There's your tree, there's mine. As long as you don't move, there's no chance of his seeing you. After he's gone, don't come out till I do. He won't be here for a quarter of an hour or so, so don't be impatient."

"Right," whispered Bill.

Antony gave him a nod and a smile, and they walked off to their posts.

NICE WORDS WON'T DYE a dress or coat...

Neither pretty pictures nor colorful adjectives will dye a dress or coat. It takes real dyes to do the work; dyes made from true anilines.

Next time you have dyeing to do, try Diamond Dyes. See how easy it is to use them. Then compare the results. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree they are better dyes.

You get none of that re-dyed look from Diamond Dyes; no streaking or spotting. Just fresh, crisp, bright new color. And watch the way they keep their brilliance through wear and washing. They are better dyes because they contain plenty of real anilines—from three to five times more than other dyes. But you pay no more for them than for ordinary dyes.

The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original "all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material. It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye, for silk or wool only. With it you can dye your valuable articles of silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. Remember this when you buy. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package will dye every kind of goods, including silk and wool. Your dealer has both packages.

How far would you go to be sure of a better Oil-?

Knowing that a better oil means smoother performance, longer life, greater economy and bigger trade-in-value for your car, you'd probably go a long way to be sure of a better oil.

That's what Imperial Oil Limited did—went all the way to tropical South America for the crude out of which to refine Marvelube.

There's lots of crude oil available right at Canada's front door. If Canada's largest and most modern refineries had been able to evolve as good an oil as Marvelube from locally available crude they would have been glad to do so. Peruvian crude made a purer, carbon-free, fuller-bodied oil—an oil that meant better lubrication—so Peruvian crude was decided upon.

The decision set a new standard in motor oils. Aircraft operators, the most particular buyers of oil, are enthusiastic about Marvelube because it has given them a longer period of operation between engine overhauls, and a greater margin of safety.

You can enjoy the same benefits in your car, and there is a grade of Marvelube that is refined to meet the exact requirements of your car. Consult the Marvelube chart at good service stations and dealers everywhere.

Prince Cements Nation's Loyalty

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales Touched Heart of Britain's Unemployed by His Recent Visit to Stricken Areas

VIEWS DEATH AND LIFE

Fears have been expressed in various quarters that the democratic government of old England is in danger from communists and Bolshevik uprisings. It has been said that the Royal family was out of touch and out of favour with the masses, particularly the great unemployed masses in the Red mining areas of the North of England and in Wales.

But the general temper of the masses of workers in the worst areas—where it is not a question of so many dollars a week added to or taken from the pay, but a bitter question of how the family's body and soul can be kept together on dole—may be gauged by incidents of the Prince of Wales' four-day tour, one of the strangest things that ever happened in the Kingdom and one pregnant with the most curious possibilities.

The tour had no political angle. No party was consulted. The tale properly begins back in April, 1928, when public feeling against the miners for stampeding organized labor into a general strike had died down sufficient for a fund to alleviate distress in the worst areas to be inaugurated with the Prince of Wales as patron. The fund rolled up $500,000 and gummed up.

Winter set in with a sharp chill. The Miners' Federation issued an appeal for aid—aid which that fund ought to have supplied. The press backed the appeal generously, and some big papers conducted a special campaign to provide the miners with Christmas hampers. Also the Prime Minister was reminded of that moribund fund and looked around for a died that morning. Curtis Bennett went back despondent to tell the Prince what had happened and to explain that he scarcely knew what to suggest next.

"I'd like to go in," said the Prince quietly. He went in. The miner's daughter was inside, a nice girl, employed as a domestic servant in a good family. The Prince caught her arm and gave it a comforting little shake.

"I understand." That broke the ice. It also emboldened the girl to ask with the simplicity of a child of the people, "Would you come up to see mother, sir?"

The Prince nodded. They went up stairs, and the Prince, standing there, looked down upon that worn, still, dead face, caught the girl's hand and cried like a child.

It chanced that in the early afternoon in another village they came to a row of terrible little houses in a grimy village. They picked out one by chance and knocked. Could he come in, the Prince asked the miner who opened the door. The man recognized him, but stood dubiously in the doorway. Then he said: "Aye, ye can, sir. But my wife's sick—if ye understand."

The Prince didn't understand until he got inside. And then he did. In that dreadful, little, bare room the miner's wife lay in the pangs of childbirth. For a moment the Prince stood looking at that twitching figure under the rough bedding.

"If ye wouldn't mind, sir," said the miner at his elbow, "if ye wouldn't mind holding her hand just for a minute she'd never forget it." The Prince stepped up, put down his hand and the mother's sought it and clutched it.

So in the space of one day, going about at hazard among the humblest of his people, the heir to the throne came up against raw existence as the masses know it. He saw death and he saw the birth of new life.

This sort of thing went on for four days. They went to Little Moscow. Little Moscow is a notorious village, probably the reddest spot in England. Every miner there is a Communist.

man to bring it to life. He found the man in Noel Curtis Bennett.

Curtis Bennett is a brother of one of the most famous criminal lawyers in England. He is head of what corresponds to the Trade Union in Civil Service. He was one of the chief organizers at central headquarters in the government anti-strike organization in 1926.

What Curtis Bennett, a big man with a direct way about him and a rough tongue on occasion, did at Fund Headquarters is another story, but by the time he got through there wasn't much left of the committee.

Then he went across to St. James's Palace and knocked on the dark, polished door under the low arches. Behind the door are the quarters of Sir Godfrey Thomas, professional diplomat and private secretary to the Prince of Wales. Curtis Bennett and Godfrey Thomas had a talk. The result of that talk was that the Prince decided to go North to see conditions for himself. He would go informally with Godfrey Thomas and Curtis Bennett. No receptions. No dinners with county magnates. No mayors' addresses of welcome. No organized plan. No equerry and no police escorts.

This latter provision upset the chief constable of selected districts. They couldn't see how the Prince could get along without police protection, and one or two rather thought there ought to be troops around. Otherwise they would have to wash their hands of all responsibility. As a matter of cold fact, the quickest way to get the Prince killed in the mine fields would have been to send him thither behind a galloping escort of police and soldiers.

Off went the trio. They put up at a commercial hotel in a northern city. Curtis Bennett had the name of an elderly miner in the first village to be visited, and was relying on him to show the Prince around the first day.

But when he arrived at the cottage his plan of campaign collapsed. The miner shook his head. "He had a death in the house. His wife had Little Moscow welcomed the Prince clamorously. Women in clogs and shawls crowded around and pulled at his hand.

"How are you, Prince?" Rough men reached out to pat him on the shoulder. "Good old Prince!" He trudged through the slush. "Blimey!" said Little Moscow, following him but avoiding the mud that he splashed through. "Catch me walking if I had a car!" Here's old Mother Murphy, Prince. "Bill Smith would like to see yer, Prince. He's seventy and he's worked down in the mine since he was a kid, Prince!"

So it went. Nine until 7 and no break for lunch. Not a flask or a sandwich between those three.

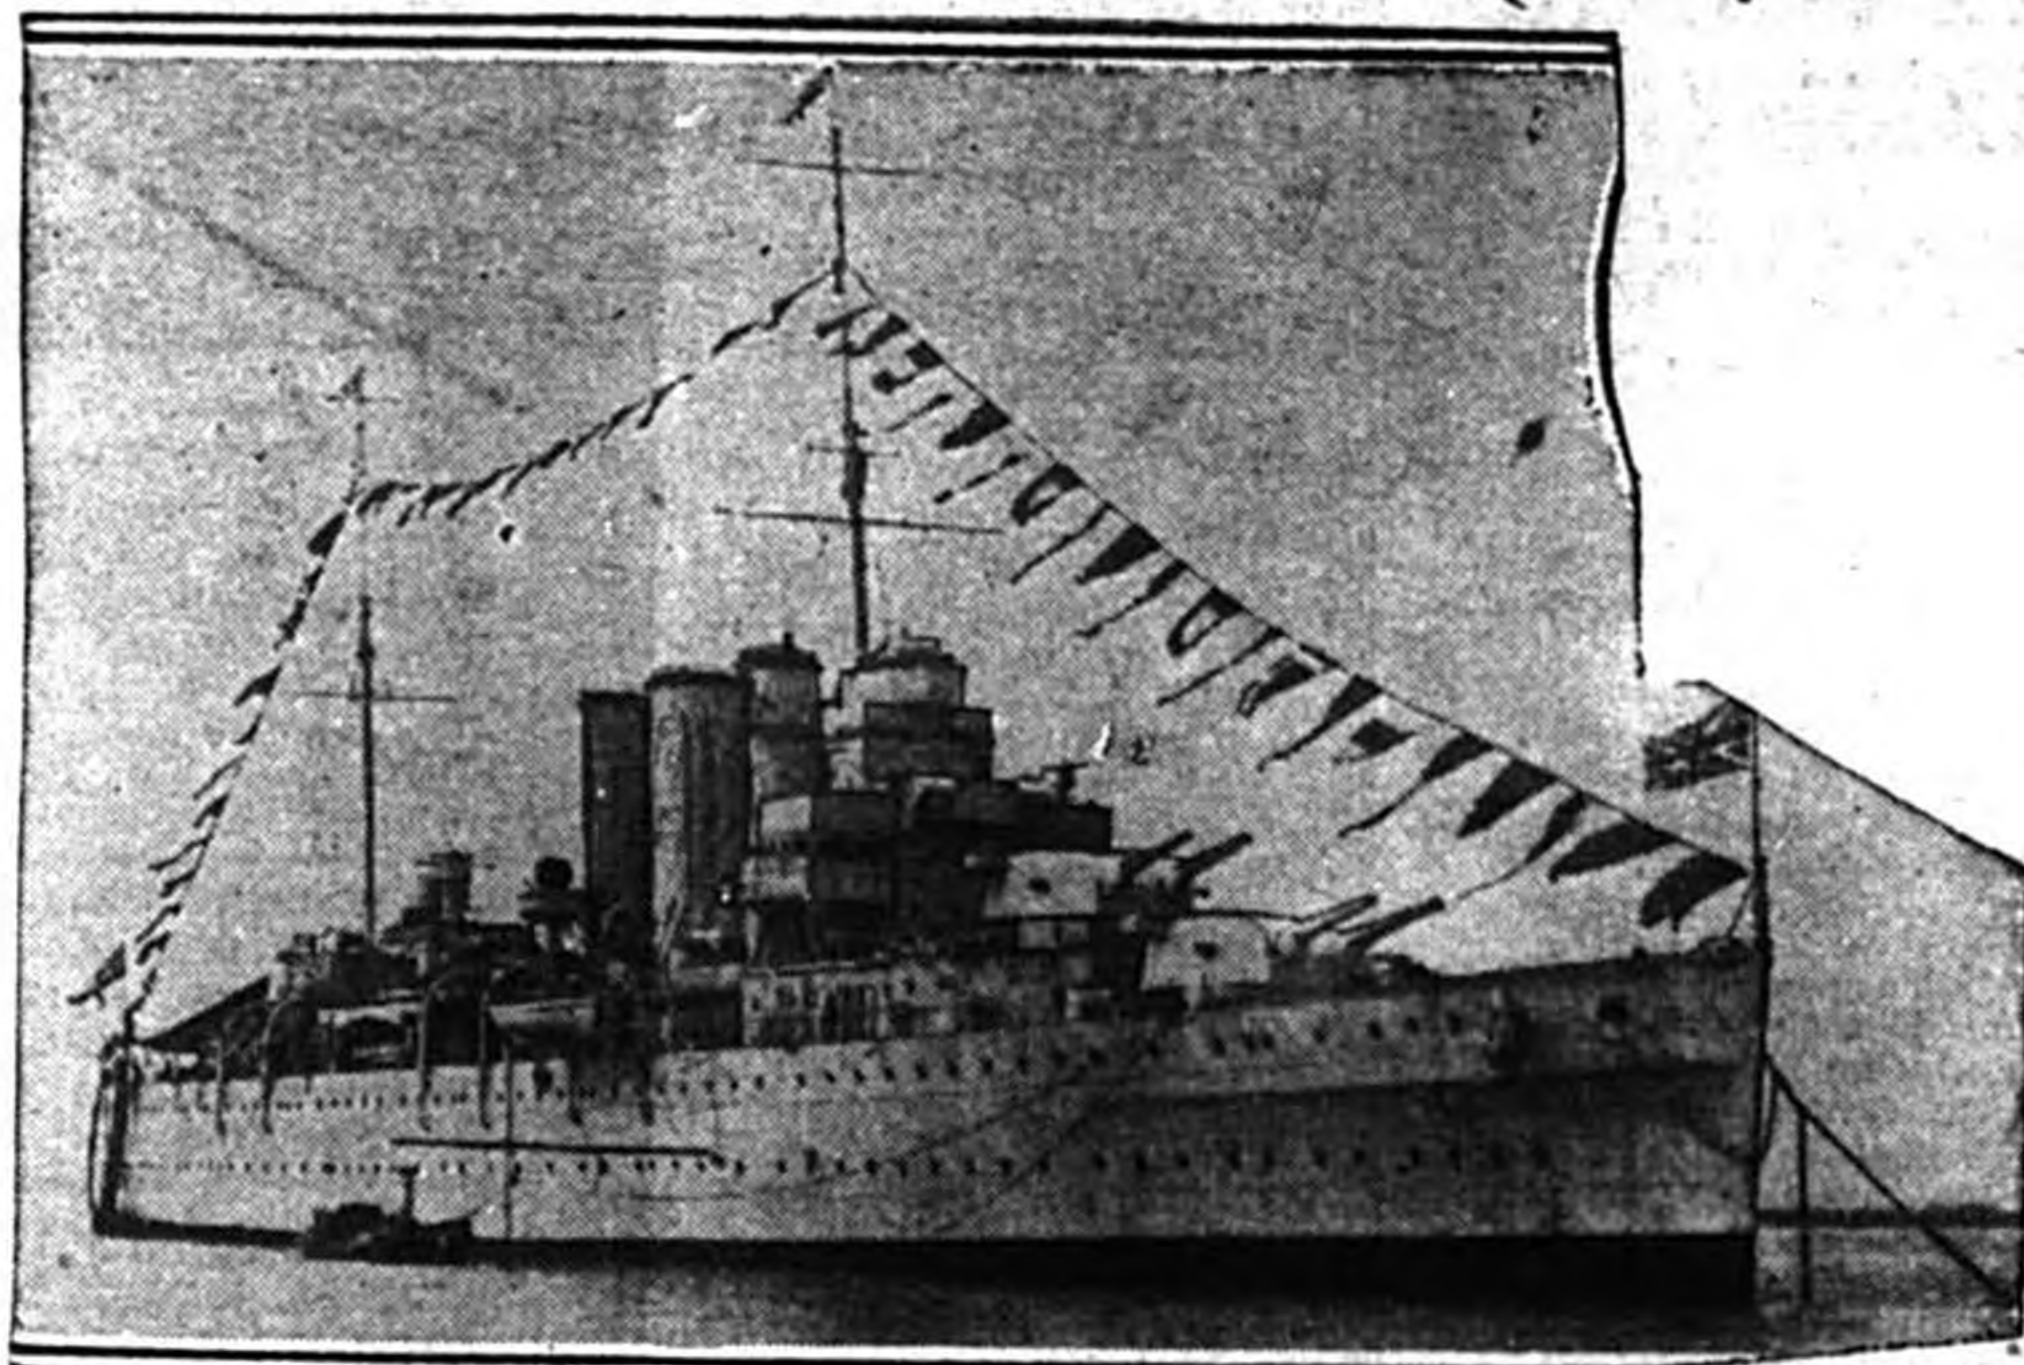

The tour over, the Prince gripped Curtis Bennett by the hand.

"It has been the most wonderful experience of my life."

The gloom of the station swallowed the slim figure in the big overcoat. The tour was over. But it has lighted a torch which will not go out in England for many a year. As for the fund which stood at $500,000 from April to December, it shot up to close on to five million dollars in six weeks and in every town and village the Prince's exhortation, "Sympathy is not enough—there must be continuous national effort," was placarded.

Such men and such methods lance the abcess of social unrest which any way cannot put down deep roots while the institution of monarchy is so astoundingly popular. The statesman who put through the first reform measure nearly a century ago thought the throne could hardly survive the social unrest of the times for more than another generation. Thirty years later Queen Victoria was complaining about dangerous radicals who looked to her suspiciously like anti-royalists. King Edward, on the appearance of the first labor men in Parliament in 1906, said his grandson would never be King. King Edward, for all his shrewd tact and diplomacy, never entered the workshop, never toured the industrial area, never associated himself with the people as his son and grandson have done. Nor did he ever understand the masses as do King George and his heir.

The immense economic problem and that of population remain. The later may largely be solved by the spread of birth control, already practiced extensively among the professional and upper classes. Labor women are unanimously in favor of a bolder policy of disseminating information through the masses. Labor men only hang back through the fear of alienating the Catholic vote which favors them more than it favors either of the other parties.

An astute statesman has privately opined that it will take ten years to get birth control propaganda accepted and then it will be the women who will cut through the deadweight of prejudice and opposition.

As for the economic problem, it is slowly being solved. A transition process goes ahead. New and vigorous industrial life is creeping through the veins of the sleepy old agricultural South. London has thousands of factories to-day and the number is increasing. A complete industrial area is growing up over the countryside around the port of Southampton. It is worth noting that Britain's overseas trade in 1928 resulted in a credit balance of $750,000,000, against $480,000,000 for 1927 and $270,000,000 for 1925; the general strike of 1926 resulted in a debit balance of $35,000,000.

The big question that casts a shadow of interrogation over the island scene isn't whether there will be a great social upheaval in the near future, but whether the anti-Socialist forces can tide over the phase of distress long enough to prevent the unripe Socialist party from swinging in to power with the extremists at the head instead of the tail, and bent upon heaving a monkey wrench into the whole delicate, economic, financial mechanism of Britain in transition.

Traffic on "Soo" Canals

Although the Sault Ste. Marie canals (Canadian and the United States locks) opened almost three weeks later than in 1927 and closed two days earlier, the total traffic in 1928 was 86,993,124 tons, an increase over last year of 3,640,084 tons.

"Your wife does so remind me of my oldest sister. She reminds me of a great deal of her first husband."

Herrick in Devon

The "Hesperides" of Robert Herrick is a garland of Devon flowers that he brought to London from his parsonage on the Dartmoor border. . . . His parsonage at Dean Prior was situated in one of the most lovely districts of the Dartmoor borderland. Westward rise the heights of Ugborough and Three Barrows and Brent Moor; northward is the noble-placed Buckfast Abbey, reminding one by its site of the glorious monastic houses in Yorkshire; and the beautiful Dart winds past Holne Bridge and Buckfast and Staverton to Totnes, Dittisham, Dartmouth. . . .

Of his life in Devon we know little more than we can gather from his writings, and these writings are in varying moods. They have all the inconsistency of a vagrant fancy. In the poem on "A Country Life," addressed to his brother, he gives a beautiful description of such a state; and in "A Thanksgiving to God for his House," he writes with a spirit of full contentment:

"A little house, whose humble roof
Is weatherproof,
Under the spars of which I lie
Both soft and dry . . .
Low is my porch, as is my fate,
Both void of state;
And yet the threshold of my door
Is worn by the poor . . .
Who thither come and freely get Good words, or meat.
Like as my parlour, so my hall
And kitchen's small;
A little buttery, and therein
A little bin."

He proceeds to speak of the sticks that make his fire; the pulse, wort, purslane, and watercress, that garnish his meal; the eggs, the lambs, the cream. . . .

Who does not know his lovely poem "To Daffodils":

"Fair daffodils, we weep to see You haste away so soon;"

and where are there more rich and plentiful daffodils to be found than here in the West Country? We know that the poet has rambled among these meadows and gathered with his own hand the "primroses filled with morning dew," the wild-roses, the lilies, the lurking violets; he has bidden the daisies not to shut so

Napoleon's Last Words

From Documents Found After 100 Years

"History will reproach me my divorce from Josephine. . . . It was necessary for my dynasty. . . . I could not do otherwise. It grieved me much as it did her."

This is one of the poignant extracts from Napoleon Bonaparte's death-bed message to the world, revealed in important documents just discovered after they had been missing for over 100 years.

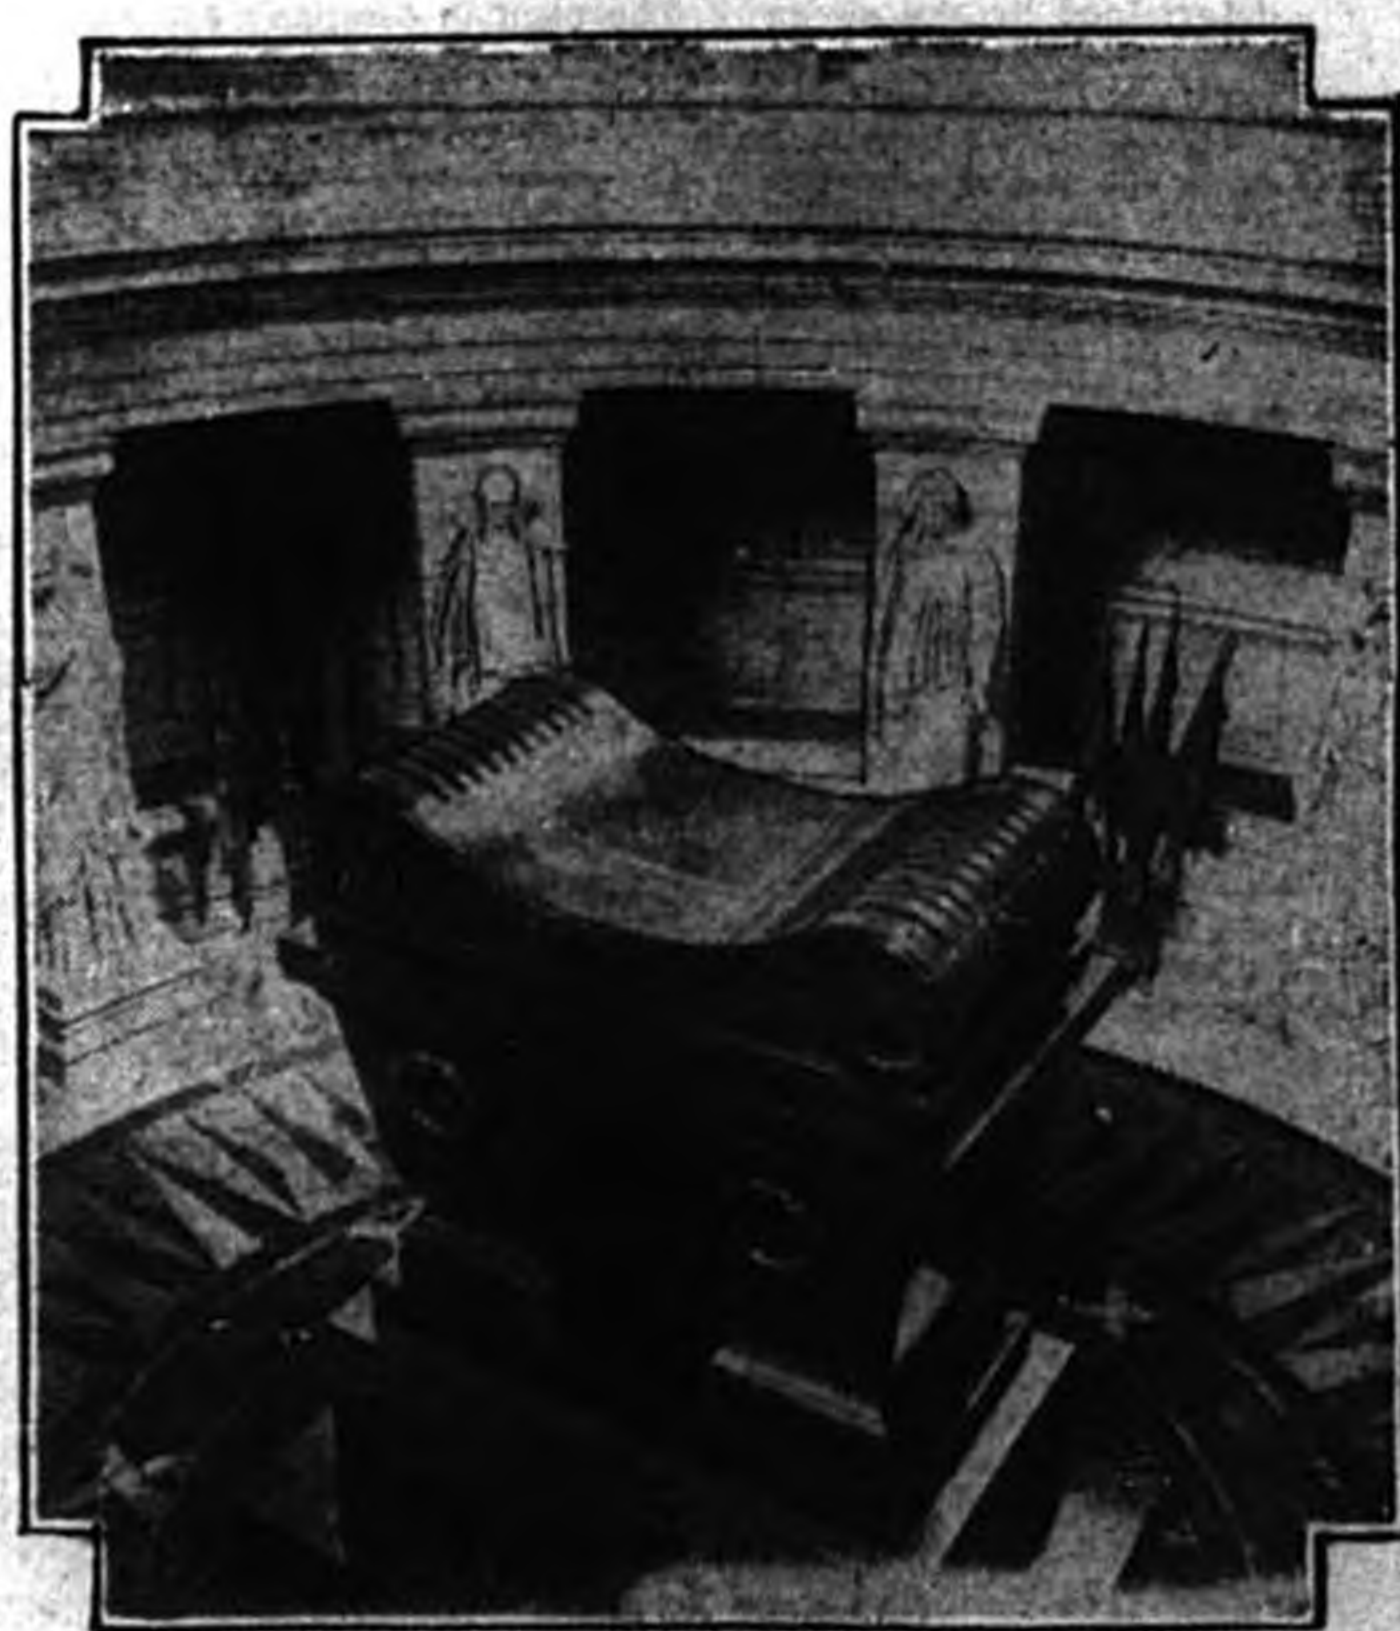

These documents—discovered by M. Ernest d'Hauterive, a distinguished man of letters—contain Bonaparte's last desires, dictated by himself to the faithful Marshal Bertrand, who shared the St. Helena exile with the Emperor.

"Bury Me in France"

Napoleon is shown in these documents in a new light—a man stripped of all illusion. Yet a flash of the old Napoleon—the Emperor with hopes of world power—is seen. He expresses the hope that one day a "Bonaparte will in truth rule over the world!"

"The end is near, Bertrand," he said. "You know I would like to be buried in France, on the shores of the Seine, amid the people that I have loved so much. I do not think that the Bourbons will have any objection to my being buried in France. It would be a magnanimous gesture on their part. Perhaps somebody will erect a little column over my grave. I will be satisfied. But if the Bourbons object that I be buried in Paris, I will be content if my ashes repose at Lyons, or even on Corsica."

The Heart of France

LES INVALIDES MAY SHELTER HERO OF FRANCE

Napoleon's tomb in Les Invalides is surrounded by six chapels, in one of which the body of France's modern hero, Marshal Foch, may be placed.

Fishing Industry was First

Fishing may well be regarded as the first industry to be systematically prosecuted by Europeans in what is today the Canadian domain. It has never since ceased to yield a perennial harvest both to Europe and America.

I feel certain that my remains will not stay on St. Helena.

"I want a place of my own, however humble. I think I am entitled to a place of my own." For a few moments the dying Caesar sat in deep reverie. He stared in front of him, sighing deeply from time to time. Suddenly he said: "What a romance was my life!"

"To India"

The past rose before the dying Napoleon. The short sentences that he uttered showed that he was reviewing the famous battles.

"I should have employed more cavalry at Austerlitz. . . . Egypt interrupted me. . . . If they had given me time I would have thrown the Turkish Empire upside down. . . . I would have marched to India and finished with England once and for all. . . . Perhaps I would have returned by way of Austria. . . . At Vienna I would have swept away the Hapsburg scoundrels. . . . I might have done the world a big favor. . . ."

"Breathing was becoming more difficult," writes Bertrand. "Soon came the end."

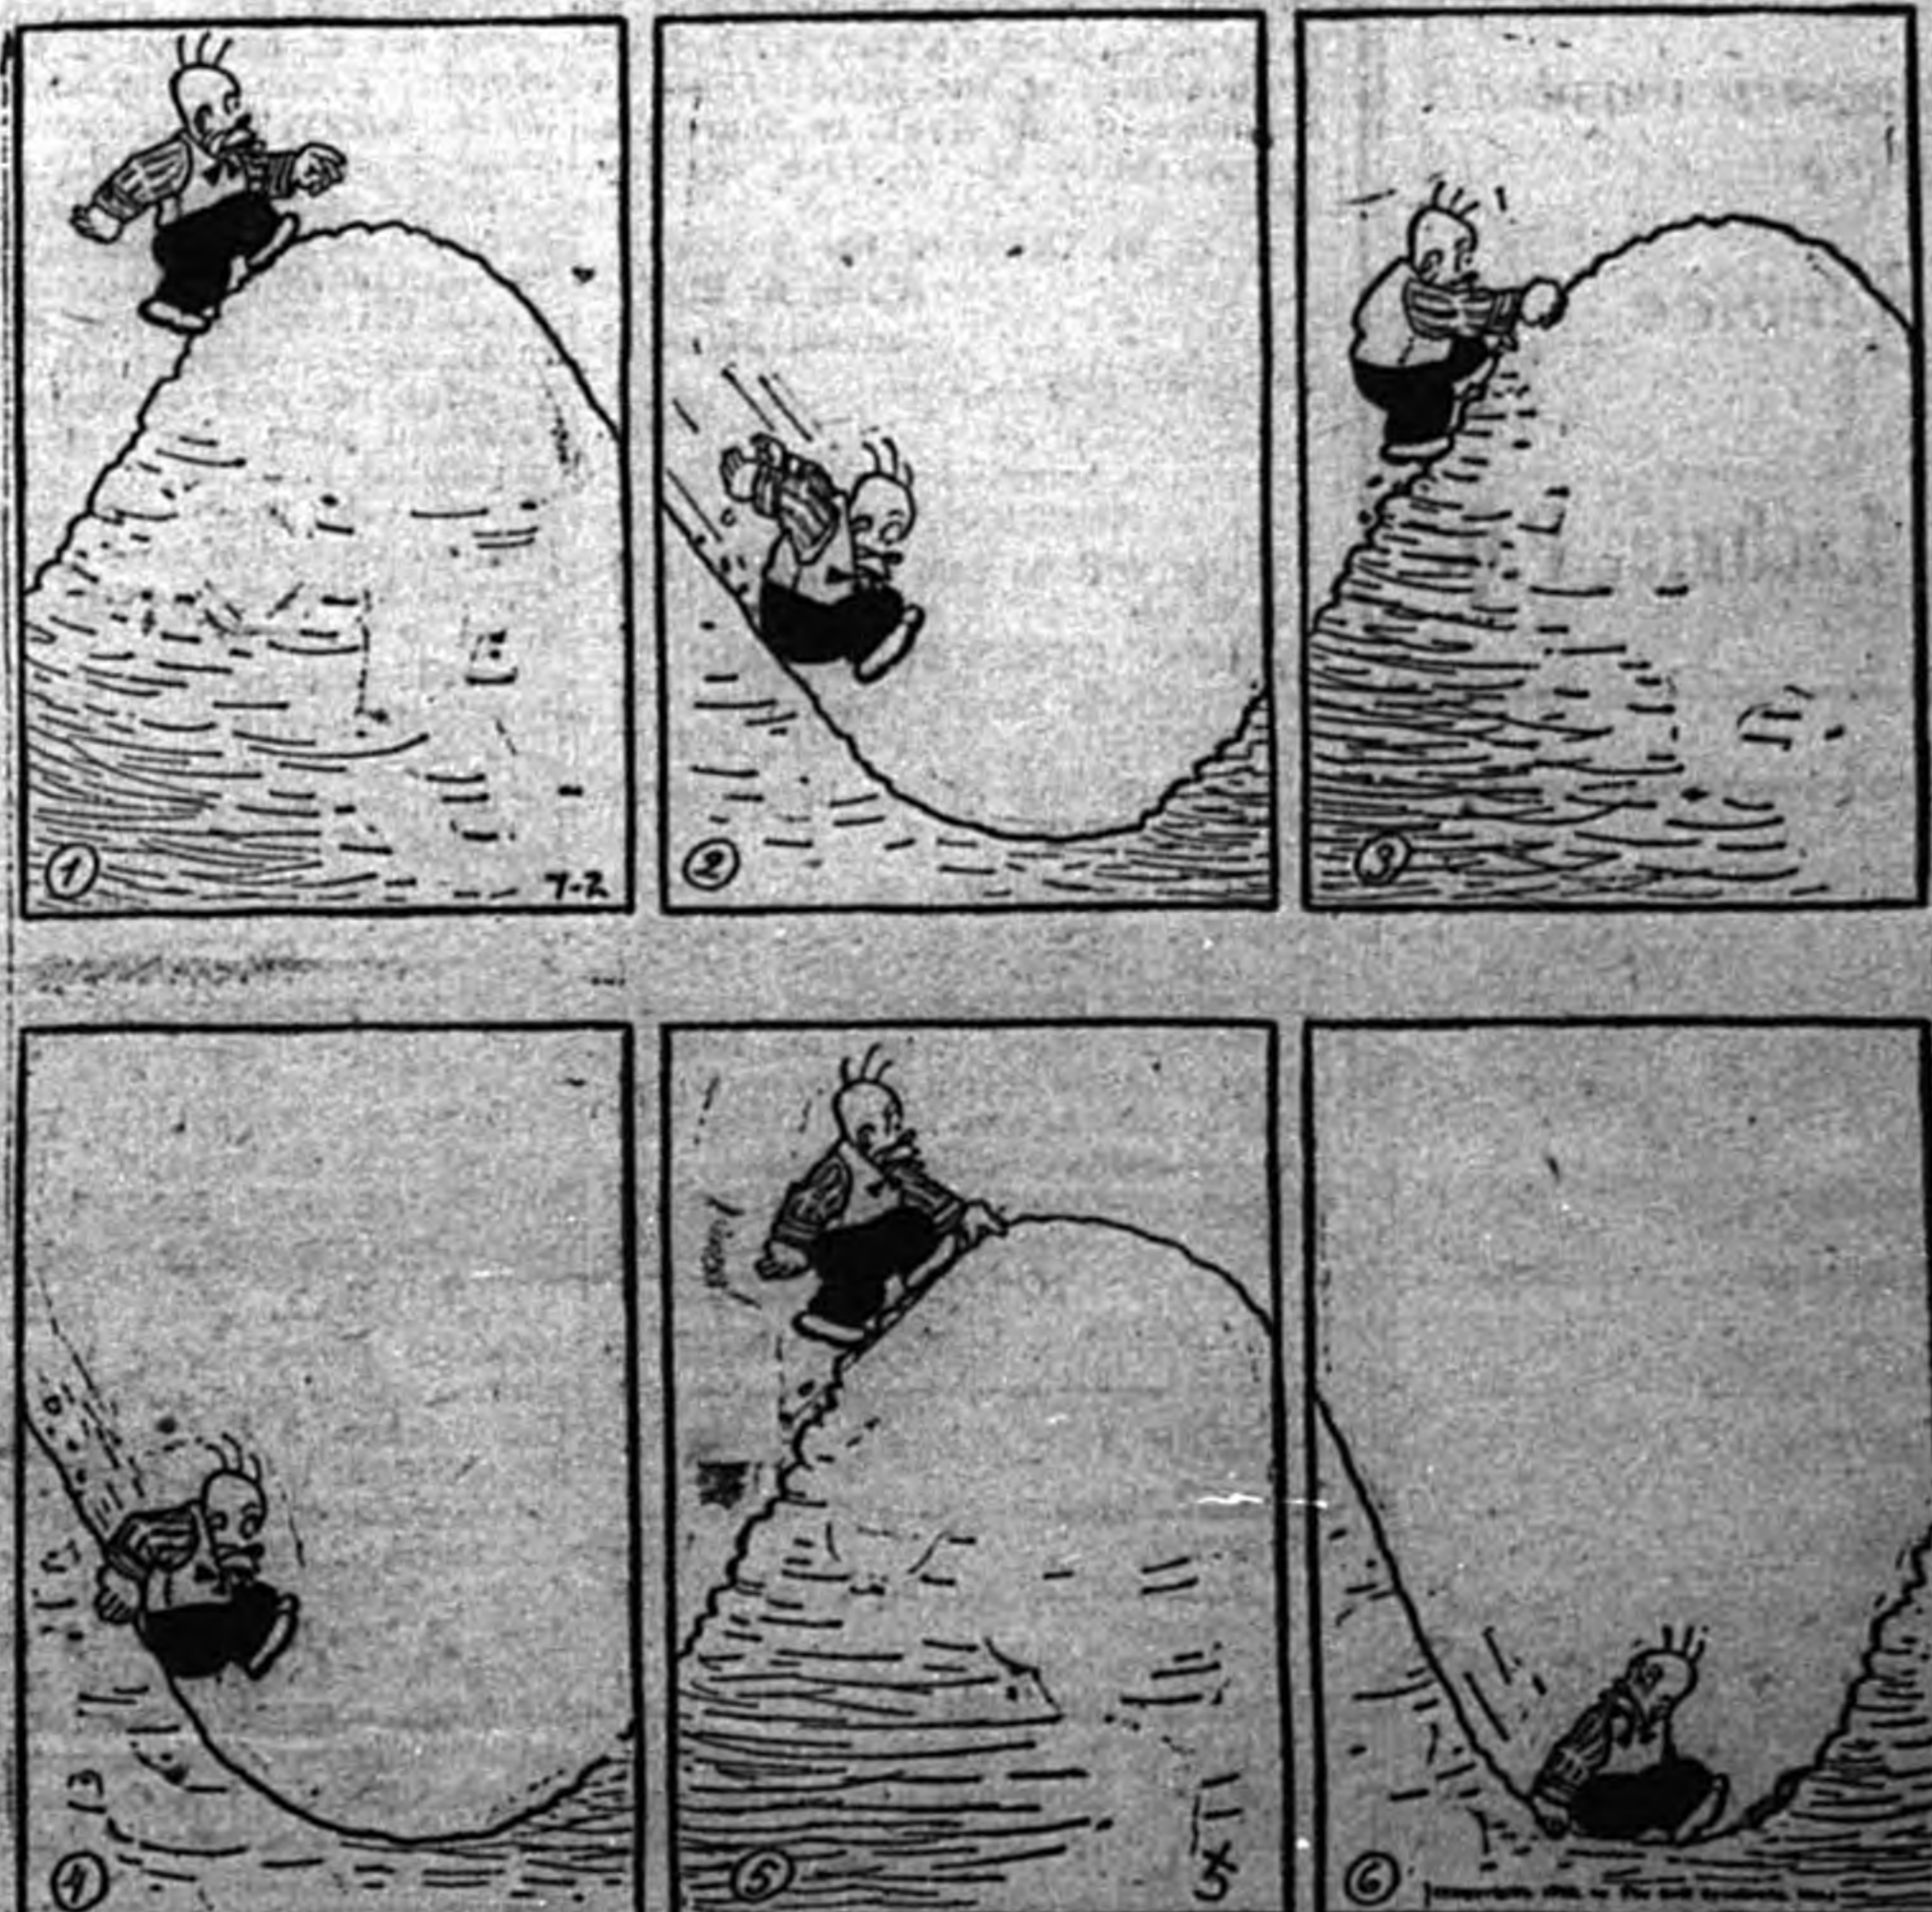

Six Years Lost

"A man and his wife were in the office completing arrangements for the adoption of a baby," writes J. J. Kelso, "and when everything was satisfactorily adjusted the lady whispered: 'It has taken us six years to decide this, and it is six years lost, for we would have been happier if we had taken a child at once.'"

"We have evidence almost daily that adopted children have brought blessing and happiness into many homes that were lonely and cheerless. A great affection has been awakened in the hearts of foster parents to whom the joys of motherhood and fatherhood had been unknown. Thousands of splendid foster parents have freely expended their means in giving a child good education and training and their services to the whole community cannot be spoken of too highly."

ADAMSON'S ADVENTURES—By O. Jacobsson.

WIRING THE FARMSTEAD FOR ELECTRICITY

The responsibility for the adequacy of the farm wiring system rests with the owner. How can he make sure of obtaining a complete wiring system? Experience is proving that many of the wiring jobs, while meeting safety standards, are not proving adequate to carry the service desired. As a guide to the farmer installing a new wiring system or to the one who wishes to change his present layout for the sake of greater convenience and load carrying capacity, a brief outline of what should be considered in securing a good wiring installation is provided.

The wiring system of an electrical installation is the foundation which determines the uses to which electricity can be put and the convenience of its application.

Just as a lack of good roads prevents the automobile from attaining its greatest usefulness in many rural districts, so lack of complete and adequate wiring on the farm will prevent the farmer from using electric service to its fullest advantage in lighting the buildings and grounds and in doing the manifold tasks of household work and farm chores such as grinding feed, milking cows, cooling milk, pumping water and cutting wood.

If the farmer is the owner a complete wiring system makes it possible for him to have light and power where it will give the most efficient service and under convenient and easy control. It will enable him to do the farm chores in less time and with more satisfaction, with the final result of earning a larger income. It will keep him abreast of the progress in other lines of industry where power is used to a maximum, thus greatly increasing the output per man, in other words, resulting in a saving of labor.

If the farmer rents his farm, a complete wiring system will pay him interest, both in the form of increased rental and in securing a better tenant. When the farmer wishes to sell his property, a good wiring system will better the opportunity for a sale and increase the selling price.

It is well to consider that the investment in a good wiring system results in a permanent improvement, continuing to give service year after year without changes or any more expense. If an inadequate wiring system is installed, it will not be long before additional expenditures will be necessary in order that electricity can be used to the fullest advantage.

There is a fairly wide choice among the systems of wiring that are approved by the Board of Electrical Examiners of the Province. The permanence, completeness, and convenience of the system, however, is to be determined by the owner. The electric company can be of great assistance to the owner in preparing the specifications for the wiring system preliminary to asking for bids. A public utility, organized to furnish electric service, has the responsibility and desire to assist its customers in securing the most satisfactory use of electricity. Its knowledge, gained through years of experience, will be valuable to the customers in avoiding costly mistakes and in providing for a wiring system that will be economical and yet complete. Every company has certain requirements which experience has proven necessary that it enforce before it will connect service, one of which is that the wiring be inspected and approved as safe by the Board of Electrical Examiners.

The plans and specifications for the wiring system having been carefully worked out, it is important to secure bids from reliable contractors. There are many ways in which a contractor of doubtful standing may reduce his bid through poor workmanship, an incomplete job, and by using materials below standard. Therefore the best protection, as in any other business contract, is to deal only with contractors who have earned a reputation for dependability and good work. No bids should be considered unless you feel certain you will have good workmanship and that the installation will be made in strict compliance with the Canadian Electrical Code.

LACHUTE MASONS VISIT MONTREAL

On Thursday last a delegation from Laurentian Masonic Lodge, No. 7, some 50 in number paid a return visit to Waverly Masonic Lodge, where they exemplified the First Degree. One of our old town boys, Mr. Wm. McDiarmid is Worshipful Master of Waverly Lodge and many old friendships were renewed. After the meeting refreshments were served and a most profitable and enjoyable evening spent.

Friday was the occasion of a visit from St. Patrick's Chapter, of Toronto, to Montreal and Carnarvon Chapter No. 6, when a number of our town members took the opportunity of going down to see the different degrees put on. The work was very ably exemplified and proved a real inspiration to all present. During the evening a banquet was tendered and some excellent speeches given relative to the good work being done by the craft.

Siege of Afghan Palace Depicted by Royal Tutor

Queen's Modern Dress Added to Anger Over Reforms, Frenchwoman Relates

Mullahs Spread Hostility

By SONIA TOMARA

In New York Herald-Tribune

Paris.—The first refugee to arrive in Paris from Kabul, where civil war has been raging for the last two months and where kings have been rising and disappearing, was Mme. J. C. Ott, a Frenchwoman, who since last spring has lived in close touch with King Amanullah, Queen Souria and their family.

When the Afghan monarchs were in Berlin—during their trip to Europe—Mme. Ott was asked by Queen Souria to take charge of her nine-year-old daughter, Sultanja, and to teach her French and English and European manners. Mme. Ott became a member of the Queen's household. She traveled with her through Soviet Russia, Turkey, Persia and the wilderness of Afghanistan.

From June to December 31—when she left Kabul as a refugee, on a German Junker plane—she lived in the King's palace, with little Princess Sultanja, meeting the King and Queen many times a day. Amanullah practiced his little knowledge of French talking to Mme. Ott. When the revolt broke out she was surrounded by the rebels in the palace, together with the royal family, and slept in Queen Souria's room during the eight days of the siege.

King Welcomed by Throngs

"When we first arrived at the Afghan frontier, coming from Persia, I was astonished to see how extremely popular King Amanullah was among his subjects. All the way from the frontier to Kabul we were met with enthusiasm by crowds of simple people, shepherds and peasants. We proceeded in a caravan of fifty motor cars, and behind us came an enormous queue of lorries filled with the luggage—all the gifts the King was bringing from the various European countries and all the purchases made by him and the Queen in Europe. A special road had to be made through the Afghan hills for our journey, and the people themselves built it for their sovereign.

From the day we arrived the Queen became busy transforming the former harem into a regular Western palace, with fine reception rooms. A big table was put in the middle of the dining room and chairs replaced the carpets, for the King would no more eat in the Eastern fashion. All his relatives and guests were told to use forks and knives during the meals whereas before they always ate with their fingers.

"Twice a day, for lunch and for dinner, we all assembled in this dining room. King Amanullah took the head of the table, Queen Souria sitting on his right. There were as a rule about forty people sharing the King's meal—the children, his numerous half-brothers and half-sisters, the Queen's sisters and relatives, the widows of the King's father, who had remained in the palace after their husband was murdered.

"At first it seemed very difficult for the elderly women to get accustomed to Western ways, to eat properly, to sit unveiled among men. But little by little they became modernized and seemed to like the new fashion.

Queen Wore Western Dress

"In the afternoon the Queen received guests from the diplomatic corps. At these receptions she wore some of the Western frocks she had brought from Europe. She was very fond of dressing in European clothes and passed all her mornings trying on new gowns and having them changed for her by the Rumanian dressmaker. In the evening Queen Souria wore delicate gowns, and although none but the family's relatives saw her in these clothes, the rumor about the scantiness of her attire soon spread in Kabul and was amplified by the mullahs who saw their prestige diminished by the King's reforms. Some of Amanullah's enemies received from Europe photographs of the Queen in evening dresses and these pictures were reprinted and sent to chiefs of tribes.

do it, but Amanullah had insisted on it ever since they came back from Europe.

Princess in New School

"However, everything remained quiet until the beginning of September, when we went over to Kabul, for my little pupil, Princess Sultanja, was to enter the French school. It was a new mixed school, where girls were to be educated together with boys. King Amanullah ordered all his ministers to send their children to it so that Sultanja should have distinguished company. But there were also sons and daughters of quite simple families.

"All the trouble began when King Amanullah decided that the time had arrived for his country to be Europeanized. On September 15 he went, with his Queen, to a public gathering and there, in front of thousands of people, he took the veil of the Queen's face and made a long speech. He decreed that, like Souria, all women were to go about unveiled and wear Western clothes, instead of the long trousers and shirt of the national costume. The felt hat and the Western suit were to become obligatory for men.

"The sight of the unveiled Queen made a profound impression upon the King's audience. But in the palace we did not realize what the consequences would be. We continued to live as before, the King being very busy with his reforms. He went out a lot in the car and received ministers and foreign representatives. We often saw the Soviet minister, Stark, drive up to the palace and stay quite a long time in the King's study.

Queen Helped Poor

"The Queen's time was taken up by receptions, by dressmakers and hairdressing. She was extremely kind to anybody who was in need of her help. Frequently poor men or women came to the palace and asked to be received by the Queen. She had them come immediately to her reception room and, whenever it was possible, she helped them.

"However, the King's order to wear Western clothes had caused much discontent in Kabul. Western clothes were expensive and it was often difficult to get them. The Afghans were used to their turbans and baggy trousers. But the King's orders were strict. At first he decreed that men and women clad in the old way would not be allowed to walk in the main street of Kabul or pass through the town park. Guards stood along the main street driving away 'old-fashioned' people. This made the population very angry.

"Soon we noticed that the King was becoming nervous. He spoke of the Shinwari tribe that was revolting against him. But he did not want to take drastic measures against them. 'They are Moslems,' he said, 'and we must spare them.' At the beginning of the rebellion Bachi Sakao, who later crowned himself as King Habibullah, was made prisoner by Amanullah's troops, but Amanullah let him go, as he gave his word never to fight against his King any more.

Palace Under Attack

"At the beginning of December we all were in the palace—all except the King, who had gone out for a drive—when the servants began to run around the rooms shouting that we were surrounded by the enemy. The rebels had entered the town and raised against the King the lower population of Kabul. The scene outside was terrifying; ragged armed crowds were vociferating and shouting threatening words against Amanullah and Souria. The Queen was pale with fear, for her husband was out and she did not know what fate he had encountered.

Soon, however, he returned, having dashed in his motor car through the insurgents. He organized the defense of the palace, even his twelve-year-old nephews receiving weapons. Guns were loaded and the siege began. It lasted for over a week. Bullets fell on the upper floors of the palace, so I had to go down with my pupil to the Queen's room. About ten of us slept there on mattresses on the floor.

Royal Family in Flight

"The rebel's first condition was that the King should repudiate his 'shameful' wife. He refused flatly. After a week's siege the King's Guards ejected the rebels and cleared a part of the town. He decided to put Queen Souria and his children out of danger. His whole family—about fifteen people, among whom was my little Princess Sultanja, were packed in the huge plane he had received in Germany. I was to go on the same day to the French legation and to be evacuated from there. On the morning I had to part with the Afghan royal family we all wept. We had lived together so many days full of anguish. Poor Queen Souria was dreading to leave her husband in Kabul, where the rebellion was far from being suppressed. "The same evening I left for Peshawar, and there I learned later that King Amanullah had soon joined his family in Kandahar. He did not want to continue civil war with the feeble forces he had in the capital. On the eve of departing I had heard him say: "I do not want to kill uselessly."

Civil Flying to Serve Canada

Dominion Takes Steps to Convert it into Emergency Divisions of Royal Air Force

Commercial flying is assuming such proportions in Canada that the authorities are taking steps to control the traffic and to utilize and facilitate the new developments with the purpose of converting them into emergency divisions in the National Defense scheme of the air service. All matters pertaining to aeronautics are to be administered by the Minister of National Defense. The air services from a part of his department and are to be divided into four branches: the Royal Canadian Air Force, the directorate of civil air operations, the control of civilian aviation and the aeronautical engineering division.

The Royal Canadian Air Force is to be responsible for the air defenses of the Dominion to the chief of the general staff. Its work will include the administration and training of the air force and its reserves, the supplying of training facilities for all government air enterprises, the collection and distribution of air intelligence and the co-operation with the militia and naval services. It will also provide trained personnel to be attached to other branches.

At present the air force has five units: headquarters at Ottawa for the administration, organization and intelligence bureaus; a land training station at Camp Borden; seaplane training station at Vancouver; the stores depot at Ottawa, and the communications flight department at Ottawa.

The Controller of Civil Aviation is to be responsible to the Deputy Minister of National Defense for the administration of air regulations, the survey, location and equipment of airports, airways and aircraft.

A minimum of fifty hours of solo flight is one of the requirements of the applicant for a commercial pilot's license. All except the private pilot's are required to pass written examinations on the construction, maintenance and operation of aircraft and engines.

The world is indeed a strange place, to a man who has been removed from all contact with it for three decades. The things he was used to 30 years ago, have disappeared. Their place is taken by things he knows not of. Such is the fate of Albert Gauthier, aged 49, who has just returned to his native Montreal, after 30 years in a United States prison, served as punishment for a crime regarding which he still disagrees with the verdict of society. Like a former famous prisoner, "his hair is gray, but not with years . . . his frame is bent, but not with age," and the iron of his chains has entered into his soul.

Thirty years ago, his father deserted him and his mother. Hot-headed and indignant, he sold his Sunday suit to buy a revolver, made his way, to St. Paul, Minnesota, no mean journey 30 years ago, and there found his father. He challenged his father to return home and give to his mother the care and protection a wife and mother advancing in years was entitled to expect of a husband and father. His father not only refused, but added insult to injury by offering the boy a railway ticket back to Montreal.

The boy's rage, smoldering for weeks and fed daily by brooding over the wrong done the mother he worshipped, suddenly burst into flame. His fingers found the weapon for which he had sacrificed his finest wearing apparel. Three shots rang out, and Albert Gauthier was a prisoner, arrested a few minutes later on the charge of murdering his father.

There is no capital punishment in Minnesota. Gauthier went to jail for life, found guilty of patricide. He knew practically no English then, and during the weeks that he waited for trial, and the days that his trial lasted, he thought his life hung in the balance, for he did not know that the death penalty had been abolished in Minnesota.

To-day, after 30 years and two weeks of prison life, he speaks English fluently, but only beginning to learn what life means as the world understands it now. Of his crime, he speaks with the same detachment, as if he were speaking of someone else's act. It was premeditated, he says, and therefore it was easy for the state to convict him. But he does not admit that it was unjustified.

He never saw his mother again. The impulsive act by which he sought to redress or, failing that, to avenge the wrong done to her, deprived her of her last means of support, and after struggling for 15 years to maintain herself, she died when only half of his imprisonment was over. Speaking of prison he admits that he was well-treated and, in fact, he loves the routine of prison life, the shelter from all outside worries, the absence of any need to care for himself.

Speaking of how this feeling grows on you, Gauthier said: "There never was a man sentenced to life who thought he would serve more than five years. The lawyers tell you you'll be out in five years, and for that time, that is all you think of. But during that period you get used to prison life. When the five years are over, you hear nothing of a reprieve. You are disappointed, but not very disappointed. And after another year or two, you quit thinking about getting out."

He could tell the habitual criminals in prison, he said, by the way they talked. The men who went to prison for some particular crime caused by special circumstances, would talk only of how they could put in the time until they got out. The habitual criminals talked only of the crimes they had committed, how cleverly they did them, and what they would accomplish when they got out again. Their rapture was always a matter of bad luck.

On about a dozen occasions during his imprisonment, Gauthier had to do time in "the hole," which was the extreme punishment. He had to spend his time under this punishment, in a small cell with neither chair nor cot, with no shoes on, only a mattress to sleep on at night, no covers to keep warm and only a slice of bread each morning to eat. He was thus punished, he says, for insolence to guards. They were not really bad, he admits, but a man got tired of being ordered about by other people all the time.

When released, he was given seven dollars pocket money and a railway ticket to the place where he was convicted, namely, St. Paul. From there he hiked and begged rides to Sandusky, Ohio, whence the Salvation Army paid his fare to Buffalo. From there he walked to Niagara Falls, a clergyman paid his fare to Toronto, and a little help was given him there which enabled him to reach Montreal, his home town.

Before he went to prison, he was a good man at cutting stone window sills. When he left prison he had an idea that he should be able to make a couple of dollars a day at that work.

In the world that he knew, two dollars a day was a comfortable living. He has somewhat changed his ideas since he has been at liberty, but has not yet nearly become acclimated to civilization as he now finds it. Automobiles, airplanes, short skirts, soft white collars, all these things are strange, unknown mysteries to Albert Gauthier, who is faced with the dual problem of earning a living and learning to live, in an utterly strange environment.

Better Times for Copper Industry

The prevailing low price of copper during the past few years has been offset to some extent by improved methods of concentration and metallurgical treatment and the recent strengthening of copper prices should have a very stimulating effect on the Canadian production.

Red Hot Sun, Kind Cool Moon, India's Amazing Contrast

Cruel Orb of Day Burns from Horizon to Horizon, Until Luna Brings Hours of Rest

Two great discoveries are to be made by those who go to India for the first time, the Indian sun and the Indian moon, writes James Milne in "The London Daily Telegraph". One might say they are India, because they are orbs which govern her day and night in their own way, for nowhere else are there just the same sun and the same moon.

The Indian sun is very cruel—so cruel at its worst that the human body, white or brown, almost melts under its torture. You see in the morning a brazen-looking ball on the edge of the far sky. It is angry and flushed and you know that this brazen bolt in the blue will assuredly have you.

He climbs the sky slowly, getting more and more brazen in the face more a creature of fiery particles burning in a furnace. At noon he is in possession of the earth, as well as the sky, and his savagery is unbearable and unsatisfied. He goes on with the clock, grasping everything with his molten arms; your head, your eyes, your desk, or the pavement from which your feet retreat in pain. He balances an hour or two, at that sweating agony, playing with you, and then, sour of aspect, he condescends to grow less afflictive. But he is still angry and when he retires for the night, a ball of red coal, you can fancy you hear him hiss, "Ah! I return to-morrow."

Meanwhile the Indian moon has crept faintly into the sky, and it is the loveliest thing imaginable. It has a face of almost childish delicacy and innocence, a real baby face, until it grows clear and manly, and strong with the fullness of night.

The Indian moon is all a hero, a lovely friend, and you give him your full confidence, as he gives you his soft radiance. He has no arrogance like the sun, only beneficence and a curious mobile warmth of expression. You want to bask in his light and shadow, loving both, because their interplay with each other tells you that he is romantic. It was Byron who said, possibly some foolish night in St. James's Street, that the devil was in the moon. He is not in the Indian moon, maybe because all the Oriental devils with planetary homes are in the Indian sun.

New Cereal Introductions

During the past three years the Cereal Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, has introduced for trial in field, a by farmers two early-maturing varieties of spring wheat, bearing the names Garnet and Reward, a heavy-yielding variety of field peas known as MacKay and a strong-strawed two-rowed variety of barley known as Duckbill Ottawa No. 57.

Headaches and Other Troubles Follow When the Nerves Give Way

Nerves are delicate fibres running from the brain to all parts of the body. Some of them give us the sense of touch and feeling; others convey the will to our muscles and enable us to move. When we have an "attack of nerves" it means that the body is in some way out of order and the nerves have become oversensitive, so that we get neuralgia, nervous headache, sciatica, or some other nerve trouble. Sometimes the nerves get too weak to do the will of the brain, and we get trembling hands or limbs, or perhaps St. Vitus dance. The whole nervous system is fed and kept healthy by your blood. If that is thin and poor, nervous weakness follows. In that case a tonic is needed to build up the blood, so that it may in turn feed the nerves, spine and brain. The very best medicine for enriching the blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You cannot take them without feeling the uplift they give. Your appetite improves, your brain is clearer, you gain strength in every way, and you feel full of new life. One sufferer, Miss Margaret R. MacDonald, Catalone Road, N.S., tells what this medicine did for her. She says:—"I suffered for a long time from severe headache and nervous exhaustion. I tried several kinds of medicine but got no relief until I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these, before long, gave me complete relief. From my own experience I feel that I can not praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly, and would advise anyone who is suffering from headaches or nervous exhaustion to give them a fair trial, as I feel sure the results cannot be anything but satisfactory."

Take these pills as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A NEW RACE OF BEEF ANIMALS

The yak, a native of the plateau of Tibet, is being used by the Experimental Farms in hybridizing experiment to mingle the blood of the buffalo and ordinary cattle. After many attempts to make direct crosses between cattle and the buffalo, failure was the result, owing to reproduction difficulties. The yak has been introduced as an intermediary and hopes are entertained that a hardy beef-producing animal will be evolved for grazing in northern territory. The report of the Dominion Animal Husbandman for 1927, published by the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa, contains an account of the work so far accomplished. This breeding work is being carried on at Wainwright, Alberta, in the foothills of the Rockies. The Dominion Animal Husbandman states in his report that the experiment, in so far as it has gone, has been remarkably successful as shown through the numerous excellent individuals combining the blood of the yak and buffalo, the yak and domestic cattle and their offspring now coming combining the blood of buffalo, yak, and domestic cattle.

Indigestion

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise. The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn—now—why this method is supreme. Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Children and World Peace

A Story of What the Junior Red Cross is Doing for Health Service and Good Citizenship the World Over

11 MILLION MEMBERS

By ANNE ANDERSON PERRY

In a day when the attainment of peace among nations and the encouragement of international understanding occupy the attention of masses of our people, the figures recently issued by the Canadian Red Cross Society, showing the amazing growth of the world league of Junior Red Cross school children, came with added significance.

The Junior Red Cross has extended to forty-one countries of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australasia and the Americas, in which its members now number 11,017,358. Organized under the triple slogans of "Health, Service and Good Citizenship" these eleven million school girls and boys are in truth very promising harbingers of peace among the nations, for they are intensely interested in the Juniors of all lands, with whom they continuously exchange correspondence; they work wherever organized toward the same ends in the same ways; they begin, to make international understanding something more than a dream. "The front door of any little school which has membership in the Junior Red Cross," says Philip Gibbs in "The People of Destiny," "opens to the wide world, and the spirit of that school is directly in touch with the children of many countries."

Examination of the detailed figures reveals just what this means. It is shown that in 22 European countries there are 2,869,413 Juniors, of whom no less than a million and a half are in the schools of Italy; that Czechoslovakia and the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes adds another half million; that Austria and Hungary have 140,000 and 116,000 respectively—while even Poland has 115,000 Juniors. Other European lands in which this cult has taken firm fastening are Belgium—where it is recognized by government and put on the curricula of the national schools, Norway, Britain, France, Lithuania, Latvia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Estonia, Germany and Spain. A remarkable feature of this development of the Junior Red Cross is the very strong hold the order has taken in those middle European states where before the war health knowledge was at its lowest ebb and internecine strife at its highest peak. Another is the amazing growth in Italy where the dictatorship has given the cult its blessing as a valuable means of building good citizens; and a third the small figures for France (20,000), Germany (10,000) and Britain (8,100), where the conservatism of these great stabilizing nations has made progress slow. But in all three the Junior Red Cross has shown its worth and is now being rapidly extended, through the efforts of educationalists themselves.

In the two Americas the Junior Red Cross has attained very impressive proportions, particularly in North America, where there are 157,155 children enrolled in Canada and a yearly increase of twenty thousand; 5,686,407 in the United States and another million in the Philippines, where the Juniors have been organized, as in Middle Europe, in order to raise the standards of health and right living among a backward people.

In Latin countries in South America, where the Junior Red Cross is of very recent growth, there is a total membership of 62,458. In Brazil, Argentina, Ecuador, Panama and Paraguay, all of whom are kept in close touch with the 15,000 Juniors in Spain and with other European lands. In Asia Japan leads with the amazing total of 1,333,640 boys and girls organized as Juniors, while a good beginning has been made in Siam and the Indian Punjab, with 50,000 more in the government schools. In South Africa the Transvaal has been enterprising enough to introduce the Junior Red Cross and some 10,000 children follow the cult in their classrooms, while in Australia proper there are no less than 94,953 Juniors with an additional 12,500 in New Zealand.

Amongst all these millions of Juniors in so many lands there goes on every year, with always increasing volume, a continuous correspondence. This takes the form of bulky portfolios prepared in classrooms by the children and then forwarded to other classrooms, mayhap across the world. These fascinating compendiums are like nothing so much as glorified scrap books. They contain many delightful letters written by children, say in Czechoslovakia, to those in Canada, or by Japanese Juniors to their brothers and sisters in South America, all of the children concerned being not more than eight to twelve years of age. There is excellent craftsmanship in composition, writing, illustration and explanation. Frequently the fauna and flora, with resources and products of the country of origin are exhibited in attractive manner, while the habits, schools, sports and feelings of the little writers are realistically presented. The arrival or departure of one of these portfolios is an affair of moment in any "Junior" classroom where all the children take the keenest interest in both preparation and reception of these treasures.

During the past year 152 such portfolios from Japan, Britain, Middle Europe, Australia, the Philippines or United States were received in many parts of Canada and 191 carefully prepared volumes were despatched to the ends of the earth for Juniors abroad. So that on personal touch and ever increasing knowledge among the children of many countries there is being laid a foundation for better understanding, and international relationships than those of the ignorance, suspicion and prejudice which have too often pertained in the past. It is one of the hopes of the world that there exists such a league of children allied in the cause of health, service, good citizenship and international goodwill. It is indeed hard to over-estimate its importance for as Philip Gibbs says, "the possibilities of better things to come are shown by the work of the Junior Cross and it is in my opinion so inspiring a lesson to the world that it ought to fire the imagination of every civilized people so that there would be a never greater world-wide league of children on this model. Such a league would be a greater promise to use than any League of Nations which may now be formulated."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS WIN GREAT PRAISE

Many Mothers Always Keep Them in the House.

Thousands of mothers state that they know of no other medicine for little ones to equal Baby's Own Tablets—that they always keep the Tablets in the home as a preventive of childhood ailments, or if sickness does suddenly grip their little ones they feel safe with such a remedy at hand.

Concerning the use of the Tablets Mrs. Donat Ploudre, Tingwick, Que., writes:—"I have nothing but praise for Baby's Own Tablets. They are the only medicine I have ever given my two little ones and I am glad to state that the Tablets have always kept them in perfect health. I feel so safe with the Tablets that I always keep a box in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thoroughly laxative. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth painless. The Tablets are absolutely safe, being guaranteed free from all injurious drugs. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Living Costs

Victoria Times (Lib.): figures just published by the Canadian Department of Labor show that what one dollar would buy in the way of necessities of life in 1913 now demands from $1.55 to $1.58. Canadians need not be unduly alarmed about this condition. The year 1928, compared with the years since 1922, shows very little difference. In comparison with other countries, our advance of 58 per cent. over pre-war living costs compares favorably with the 60 per cent. increase in the United States and the 68 per cent. in the United Kingdom.

"Is he a hard drinker?" "No; he drinks with the greatest ease."

Sherbrooke Tribune (Lib.): Though the maple sugar industry is barely developed in certain parts of Canada, it is very important in Quebec's wide territory, as in certain districts of the Provinces of Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The number of those who now manufacture maple sugar in Canada is estimated at more than 50,000.

PARENTS UNDERSTOOD THIS BABY'S LANGUAGE

"We thought we were going to lose our baby, teething," says a Kentucky mother. "He couldn't digest anything and was getting thinner every day. After one of his fretful, crying nights, I thought of Castoria and got some. A few drops made him comfortable, and after a few doses, he seemed like a different baby." Doctors everywhere recommend purely vegetable, harmless Fletcher's Castoria for colds, constipation, colic and other ills of babies and children, and millions of mothers know its gentle influence is best. Avoid imitations. The Fletcher signature is the mark of genuine Castoria.

Beware! Flu May Affect Kidneys!

How often people say, "I never had kidney trouble till after the 'flu'!" Wise Nature, trying to get rid of poisons, sends them to kidneys and liver. But these organs, weakened by illness, can't stand the strain. The poisons are retained in the system. Then come the pains, aches, swellings, loss of appetite, debility, lassitude. What a pity, when a stimulant diuretic, taken in time, might have helped.

For over 50 years thousands have depended on Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, a physician's prescription, made of Nature's herbs. A gentle stimulant for kidneys and liver, it urges perspiratory glands to action, and thus helps shift the excess load from the kidneys.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy contains no harmful drugs. Costs little. Thousands have written, telling how it helped them. Get your bottle today. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Toronto, Ontario.

OPINION SURGING ON TARIFF SITUATION

The seriousness to Canada of the tariff increases proposed by the United States is being recognized by the newspapers of the Dominion, and there already appears a general consensus of opinion that Canada will have to act for her own protection.

Even those papers which have preached tariff increases in this country — and notably the papers purporting to speak for the Progressive element in Western Canada — plainly show that they have awakened at last to the policy which underlies the repeated increases in tariffs against Canadian products namely that under no circumstances is Canada to be allowed to build up an export trade with the United States in any way commensurate with the export trade of the United States to Canada.

We believe that in the years to come this latest move by the United States will be recognized as marking a turning-point in the economic life of the Dominion. Through Mr. Robb the Canadian Government recently announced that Canada wished to trade freely with those nations who wished to trade freely with Canada. As emphatic as a clap of thunder comes the answer of the United States that it does not wish to trade freely with Canada. It only wants the Canadian market for American products, and will not under any circumstances tolerate any kind of freedom for Canadian products in the American market.

As the Mail and Empire says, no other country in the world ever gave Canada's farmers such heavy tariff blows as the United States has done. Germany was very bitter because she was denied the same tariff privileges as were given to Britain in 1897 and she did retaliate, but in no way to hurt our farmers comparable to the series of strokes Canada has received from the tariff-makers at Washington.

Even the Toronto Globe says: "Today the attempt is to cut off some $35,000,000 worth of imports from Canada. Tomorrow the idea may be to enact exclusive tariffs ten times as sweeping."

In future there must be no hesitation in regard to our policy while waiting for what Washington may or may not do. Uncle Sam has plainly shown the principle underlying his business relations with Canada. Knowing now that Uncle Sam does not want, and will not have, our products, except in the case of a few hand-picked commodities that may at any time be excluded, we must legislate to produce in our own country the products we have been buying from the United States, and where this is not possible, to buy them, not from the United States but from nations who show themselves ready to exchange their products for ours.

ST. ANDREWS EAST.

Mr. H. Mayrand was calling on old friends here last week.

Mr. Allen Jones has been visiting his father, Mr. Robert Jones.

On Sunday, May 12th., St. Andrews East lost an old and respected citizen by the death of Mr. Nicholas McKeracher, aged 86.

Mother's Day was observed in the St. Andrews United Church Sunday morning with special music by the young girls of the congregation.

We are sorry to note that Mrs. B. N. Wales is seriously ill with acute bronchitis.

Mrs. G. F. Shaw and her daughter Miss Hilda Shaw, were in St. Andrews last week, arranging for the funeral of Mrs. Shaw's aunt, Mrs. Dean-Pitt, which took place on Tuesday, May 7th., from Christ Church.

The pupils of the St. Andrews Consolidated School had a clean-up day last Friday. It was the grounds that got the rubbing up—not like the little girl who said "Oh, Mabel, ain't I in luck? Our well's gone dry, and I may not have to get my face washed for a week!"

The Canadian Girls in Training, assisted by the St. Andrews Orchestra gave a concert and plays Friday evening in the Town Hall. All played well in their parts, affording a very enjoyable evening. It was worth the price of admission just to see so much youth and beauty gathered on the stage.

CUSHING.

Mr. H. Young spent the week-end with his family in Montreal.

Dr. H. B. Cushing and little daughter visited his residence here on Sunday.

Mr. Owen E. Keatley, of Montreal, was a guest of his grandmother, Mrs. Jas. Watson over the week-end.

Mr. Kenrick Dorion, of Montreal, was a guest of Mr. E. Whelehan on Thursday evening last, when en route from visiting friends at Thurso.

Miss Frances Douglass, of Vaudreuil, and her uncle Mr. D. M. Dewar of Montreal, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Douglass at Chatbore.

News has just been received here of the death in Ottawa Civic Hospital, of Geo. O'Brien, of Lochaber, formerly of Chatbore. The funeral was held on Wednesday at Lachute.

Mrs. S. O. Hartley arrived Saturday and opened her Cushing residence for the summer. She was accompanied by her sons Messrs. Wilfred, Douglas and Laurence Hartley the latter of whom will spend a couple of weeks' vacation here.

POINT FORTUNE

Rev. William Usher was in the city on Tuesday, attending Presbytery.

Mrs. E. V. MacLachlan has gone to visit her daughter in Shawville, Que.

Miss Middleton has returned to her home, after being absent for the winter.

Mrs. McCubbin and Mr. Stuart McCubbin, of Ste. Therese, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Judd.

We are pleased to have Mrs. S. Cole and family again occupying their house here, after spending the winter in Kingston.

Mrs. Usher spent several days in Cornwall last week, attending the W. M. S. Conference Branch Meetings. The yearly reports were very encouraging and several noted speakers were present.

Mother's Day was observed in the United Church here, when a most appropriate address was given to a large congregation.

Week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Scanlon, were Mrs. Scanlon and her daughter Miss Edna Scanlon and the Misses Barclay of Montreal, also Mr. and Mrs. E. Knight, of Ottawa.

OBITUARY

Sudden Death of Thos. Boyd Millar.

The death of the late Thos. Boyd Millar occurred somewhat suddenly in the early hours of Wednesday morning, May 15th., at his home in the West End. Deceased was 33 yrs. of age and was a native of this town having spent the early years of his business life as a clerk in the store of Jas. Cushing, afterwards moving to L'Orignal and thence to Portage la Prairie where, with his brother he built up a good hardware business, under the name of T. & W. Miller. He came East with his family at time of his sister's death, and has since resided in the old homestead. He leaves to mourn his loss a devoted wife and son and daughter, Thomas, of Montreal, and Miss Margaret at home.

ARGENTEUIL PIONEER PASSES

Another of Argenteuil's pioneers has been called by death in the person of Nicholas McKeracher, of St. Andrews East, who died on Sunday, May 12, at the advanced age of 86 years. Deceased was a life long resident of River Rouge. He is survived by his wife, Jean Todd, to whom he was married in 1901, and a cousin, Robert McKeracher, of Green Valley, Ont.

The funeral was held on Tuesday, service being conducted by the Rev. Mr. Ballantyne. A large number of friends were in attendance to pay their tribute of respect to one who had always lived up to the Golden Rule, and by so doing had won the esteem of all who knew him.

Funeral of the late Lloyd Tomalty.

The funeral of the late Lloyd A. Tomalty took place on Saturday last from his late residence to Lachute Cemetery. The service was conducted by Mr. Emard, pastor of the Baptist Mission at Brownsburg, assisted by Rev. Penman, of Dalesville, after which a Masonic service was held.

The floral tributes were beautiful, consisting of a wreath from the family; Argenteuil Masonic Lodge wreath; Mrs. Allan, Granby, Que., a spray; Mr. and Mrs. Spracklin, spray; Mr. and Mrs. A. Morrow, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Tomalty, a pillow.

Lachute Town Council Mayor and Aldermen busily planning for future needs

The adjourned meeting of Council was held on Tuesday evening presided over by Mayor C. Tremblay with all councillors present.

The first business occupying attention of the Council was an exhaustive report of sanitary conditions of the town from Dr. Palardi in which he, in company with Dr. Rodrigue made a survey of the town and strongly suggested necessary reforms so essential to health. The matter was freely discussed and a motion was made by Alderman J. G. Lacasse, seconded by Alderman H. Coutu. That the need to install a general sewerage system throughout the Town is recognized by this Council and that a proper By-law covering same be submitted, at the earliest possible time, to the municipal electors who are property owners, for a vote; that Mr. Séraphin Guimet, Civil Engineer of Montreal, be appointed to prepare and submit the necessary plans and estimates for approval of the Departments of Health and Municipal Affairs in Quebec; that in the event of the Town Council being permitted to install the Sewerage System in question, a fee of 5% will be paid to Mr. Guimet on actual cost for supervision of the work to completion plus travelling and boarding expenses for Mr. Guimet and assistants; that no charge will be made by Mr. Guimet for preliminary plans and discussions with Council except boarding and travelling expenses.

The Mayor reported that Mr. Lavigne, Quebec Fire Commissioner was to be in town on Thursday morning for the purpose of discussing proposals of Fire equipment, Mains, etc., and Provincial Grant for same.

Moved by H. Lavigne, seconded by

P. Dobbie that a Special Committee of Citizens of Lachute be appointed, with power to add to their number if they deem necessary, for the purpose of studying the proposed extensions to Water Works and General Sewerage System and make suggestions to the Council as to their findings with a view to help in the most efficient execution of the works.

Suggested names E. H. Wilson, W. H. Ayers, E. F. Ayers, W. C. George, Geo. G. Mitchell, A. D. McGibbon, Wm. Scott, E. H. McCoy, Notary Raymond, L. L. Legault, J. S. Giles, John McGibbon, George Creswell, A. Larocque, Telesphore Dallaire, E. Lavigne, Notary Valois, Mr. Gosselin, Geo. Y. Deacon, R. McArthur, Arthur McQuat, P. Chabot.

The question of Electric Light Tariffs was brought forward and at request of Mayor C. Tremblay, Mr. Foster, Manager of Central District of Gatineau Electric, presented a report of the savings that would accrue to consumers of light on the new rates that would come into effect if the Company were granted a franchise. This gave rise to considerable discussion and in a digest made by Mr. Foster and the local manager, Mr. Gosselin, it was shown that they had gone partially over their list and only about 20 p.c. would be called upon to pay a trifle in excess of present charges, while 80 p.c. of the consumers would save upwards of $2.24.22. Mr. Foster promised to complete the record and present same at the next meeting of Council.

The rates applicable are the same as advanced some time ago and we again publish same in order that our readers may know what the charges would mean.

Schedule of Proposed Rates by the Gatineau Electric Light Company

Through the courtesy of your Town Council, the Gatineau Electric Power Company were permitted to address the members to extend the standard rates of the Company which have been rapidly accepted by the majority of Municipalities supplied by the Company.

We therefore desire to take this opportunity of explaining to the public what these rates are in order to show the advantages to be gained by adopting them.

we offer for LIGHTING:

$1.00 per month plus 5c. per kilowatt hour for energy consumed.

The gross bill subject to a discount of 10% on payment of account within 10 days of rendering.

Minimum monthly bill $1.00.

COOKING:

50c. per element per month plus 1 1/2c. per kilowatt hour for energy consumed.

The gross bill subject to a discount of 10% on payment of account within 10 days of rendering.

Minimum monthly bill 50c. per element.

STREET LIGHTING:

$12.50 per lamp per year per 60 candle power lamp.

The rates at present in force in your Municipality are as follows:

LIGHTING:

First 50 k.w.h.—10c. per k.w.h. net.

Second 50 k.w.h.—8c. per k.w.h. net.

Third 50 k.w.h.—6c. per k.w.h. net.

Balance k.w.h.—5c. per k.w.h. net.

Minimum Bill $1.00

COOKING:

50c. per element per month plus 2 1/2c. per k.w.h. net for energy consumed.

Minimum bill 50c. per element.

STREET LIGHTING:

$12.50 per lamp per year per 60 candle power lamp.

In order to emphasize the saving to be made by the majority of the users of electric service, we tabulate the following comparisons:

Should the above schedule of rates meet with the approval of the electors, we ask that they grant to the Company, the right to exclusively use the streets and public places of your Municipality for the placing of the necessary poles and equipment for the distribution of light, heat and power to the inhabitants for a period of ten years.

When the electors consider that fact that the Gatineau Electric Power Co. is now owned and operated by a Company which has vast power resources at its disposal for sale to industries in the Municipalities connected to its lines, and is primarily interested in the building up of these territories for the sale of electrical energy, then it needs no further explanation of why your municipality should grant a franchise to the Company to protect its present and future investments which are so closely united with your own interests.

Grace à la courtoisie du Conseil de la Ville, et de la Chambre de Commerce, la Cie. Gatineau Electric Power a pu leur donner toutes les explications a sujet de la nouvelle liste des taux fixes, qui ont été acceptés en définitive par la majorité des municipalités, desservies par la Compagnie.

Nous saisissons donc la présente occasion pour expliquer au public ce que sont ces taux, afin de démontrer les avantages qui résulteront de leur adoption.

The Model "Four-Twenty" ROGERS [Batteryless] RADIO

OF course, you want an electric radio (one that operates direct from a light socket, without any extra attachments or batteries)—practically all the sets sold to-day, where current is available, are of this type. And, of course, you want the best set you can buy for the money you have to spend—that's only natural. Then, consider the Rogers "Four-Twenty"—a new 1929 Model that is out-selling every other electric radio two to one. To be able to get a complete electric radio at $165 is a sensation in itself, but when this is also the best known, the original "Batteryless" set; the one that has five years of performance behind it, the only one with Tubes that are guaranteed ... it is almost a miracle in value.

Features include: a single illuminated tuning dial, Rogers A/C Tubes throughout (including A/C Power Tube), Automatic Voltage Control, Rogers Output Filter and Phonograph "Plug-in" Jack, genuine Walnut Cabinet with matched butt veneer instrument panel. And the price complete (except Loud Speaker) is only $165.00!

If you want a modern batteryless receiver the Rogers "Four-Twenty" is your "money's most" in the whole field of electric radio.

Ask for a Demonstration and about our Easy Terms

Come in and see this set and compare it critically with any other electric radio sold at prices from $50 to $100 higher. Then you will really appreciate why this is the most sought-after radio on the market to-day, with the factory almost 1,000 sets behind orders actually on hand.

"McLaughlin-Buick get-away, power, speed and easy riding surpass any car I have ever driven. I do not think there ever was a more beautiful car made." (Name upon request)

MEN and women in every community have discovered that this dynamic car provides an advanced standard of motoring—that it out-runs, out-climbs, out-performs any automobile they have ever driven—that it is exactly what McLaughlin-Buick owners say it is; the finest performing automobile ever built!

More than twice as many people have purchased McLaughlin-Buicks as any other automobile at or above its price. And additional thousands are getting behind the wheel, getting the facts and entering orders for McLaughlin-Buicks with each passing week.

Matchless style, matchless comfort and, above all, matchless performance, are the reasons. Come, prove these things to your own satisfaction. Take the wheel of this car—test it against any other—and you, too, will join in the countrywide endorsement of McLaughlin-Buick!

She Hated Her Brother's Way of Life—But She Had to Shield Him!

By RUTH ALEXANDER

"There's just one thing more I ought to mention, and that is that I've no intention of marrying again."

Prue Moore finished. She stared at her prospective employer, and her little chin went several inches higher. It was a rounded chin, dimpled, but capable of becoming stubborn when occasion arose. Such an occasion seemed this moment when Mr. Julian Strange, the taciturn, rather tired-looking man standing by the fire in his great neglected studio had the temerity to suggest that the girl he was engaging as his little daughter's governess would naturally set her cap at him.

"I'm going to hate him!" thought Prue. "I shall never stay!"—and longed to end the interview with a chilly: "If that's the sort of idea you have of me, hadn't we better decide I'm quite unsuitable for the job?"

Then she thought of Henry, who was always losing his work, and of Nora, who simply must have another year at school, and swallowed her pride with a gulp.

"That needn't worry either of us," she told him distantly, chin still well in the air. "In fact," she added, on a sudden thought, "I'm engaged."

"Then we shall suit each other admirably, and I shall expect you on Monday, Miss Moore."

Julian Strange took her hand, and his rather stern face lighted up with an unexpectedly sweet and twinkling smile.

"I'm going to like him," she thought. "It won't be so bad, after all."

At first Prue felt somewhat forlorn in the big, silent London house, with just the servants and the housekeeper and little Joan, who had been thoroughly spoiled and was at times a perfect little beast and at others entirely lovable.

There was a garden which was a great delight to Prue; it led out of Mr. Strange's studio, unfortunately, but she soon learned his habits and avoided going through when he was at work. Her one endeavor, indeed, after that remark of his, was to avoid Mr. Strange. He was an artist, and painted still life pictures of flowers and fruit and pottery.

"Someone rang you up to-day, Miss Moore," he told her one afternoon, when she encountered him unexpectedly. "'Henry,' he said his name was; I didn't catch the surname. Your fiancé, I suppose?"

"Yes," she acquiesced, her heart sinking a little.

She was vexed with her brother; she had told him especially not to telephone her. Mr. Strange might not like it, and, with the family dependent on her, she mustn't run any risks of losing her job. She hadn't meant to tell that fib, all the same. Henry had practically forced it on her.

"I asked him to come and see you here whenever he likes," he went on kindly. "Don't be afraid you'll disturb me. The house is big enough."

"Thank you!"

Prue felt a rush of gratitude. But she was worried about Henry. Henry wasn't the sort to refuse any invitation; he was a charming and attractive youth, but he didn't in the least mind sponging. Besides, his affectionate messages always meant that he was hard up. Probably he had lost his job again and wanted money.

When Henry called next afternoon Prue was playing games with little Joan in the garden. She tiptoed through the studio fearing to disturb the artist, and, meeting her brother in the hall, enjoined him to silence as she led the way back again. But Mr. Strange looked up as they passed, and Prue stopped and made the introductions.

"This is Henry!" she murmured, slightly tremulous, for fear he should demand Henry's surname and explanations. But Mr. Strange was much too engrossed in his work.

"Ah," he said absently, "good afternoon!"

"How do you do?" Henry replied with that engaging heartiness that always earned him friends—at first.

"That's a lovely group you're painting, sir! A valuable piece, I should say."

Mr. Strange glanced at him with a spark of interest in his eyes, and removed a brush from his mouth.

"Yes," he answered, "Old Dresden. A collector's piece. It is practically priceless."

Henry's eyes gleamed as he surveyed the exquisite little porcelain group. Prue put her arm through Henry's and tugged at him.

"We're disturbing Mr. Strange. Henry. Let's go into the garden."

And Henry allowed himself to be drawn away.

"How did you manage to get off from the office?" she asked apprehensively.

Henry shrugged his shoulders.

"I've left," he told her light-heartedly. "Couldn't stick the old blighter any longer! We had a tearing row."

"Oh, Henry!" she cried despairingly. "You can't afford to go on throwing up jobs like that!"

"Don't you worry," he reassured her, with a swagger. "I'll soon get another."

That was the first of several visits for Henry. Till presently it became a habit for him to call every day, generally in time for lunch or tea.

Fortunately, Mr. Strange was so absorbed in his new picture that he did not appear to notice whether Henry was there or not, though Prue occasionally caught him standing at the studio door and gazing at her and the child in the garden.

The task of finding Henry's new job

seemed a very long one, and there came a day when Prue's little chin took on its stubborn angle.

"I'm sorry, Henry, but you don't seem to be bothering at all, and I really can't afford to lend you any more money! And I don't think I ought to let Mr. Strange supply you with any more lunches and teas!"

"How do you suppose I am going to live, then?" Henry demanded.

"I really don't know," said Prue, at the end of her patience. "I suppose you could get work as a hall-porter, or a dustman, or something."

Henry glared. He seized his hat and flung out. Prue instantly remorseful, ran after him.

"Henry, I didn't mean it! Of course I'll give you some more—"

But Henry had gone.

She spent two miserable days, alternately worrying over the idea that she might have driven him to suicide and comforting herself with the belief that he would come back. Then on the third morning she returned from a walk to find him on the doorstep.

"Oh, Henry, I'm so glad you're back! Do come into the nursery and have lunch!" She was almost tearful with thankfulness.

Henry magnanimously allowed himself to be fed before making any explanations. Then he said:

"No, I haven't got a job, but I'm on the track of one. I was offered thirty bob a week yesterday."

"I am so glad! It isn't much, but it's something to be going on with!" cried Prue happily.

"What! Thirty bob! D'you think I'd take a job of that sort?"

"You don't mean to say you turned it down?"

"I certainly did."

Prue was thoroughly roused. Her chin went up.

"So you'd rather live on my money and Mr. Strange's food than work at a small salary?" she flashed at him.

"Go away from this house, and don't you dare to come again!"

"Look here, Prue, I've got something else in view, but I can't go after it without money."

You turn down an offer, and then expect me to supply you with money! If you don't go I'll call Mr. Strange!" she stormed at him.

"I'm going!" said Henry furiously, and went out.

Prue stood stock still. Her anger abated as quickly as it had risen. She held her breath and waited for the sound of the front door. She crept to the top of the stairs and listened. Everything was quiet. Perhaps he had actually gone to Mr. Strange for money! She ran noiselessly down.

The studio door was open, and Henry was in there alone. He was standing as if fascinated before the Dresden china group. Suddenly he pulled a silk handkerchief from his pocket, wrapped the ornament in it, tucked it under his coat, then, with a quick glance right and left, made for the garden door. Before he had reached it Prue was at his side.

"Henry, what are you thinking of?" she cried in a distressed whisper. "Give it to me! You can't steal!"

She snatched at the bundle.

"Let go, you little fool! You'll break it!"

They struggled. The silk handkerchief fell to the floor. All at once there was a sharp, ominous crack. Henry let go his hold immediately, leaped through the door into the garden, and left Prue staring down at the fragments of the Dresden group.

Dazedly she heard Henry's footsteps running on the gravel path, heard other footsteps at her side. There was a dead silence, broken by the slight scraping sound of Henry's boots as he scaled the wooden fence. Involuntarily she moved swiftly, so as to interpose herself between the fugitive and Mr. Strange's gaze.

"I'm sorry!" she gasped. "I was just admiring it—and I broke it! I did it!" Beneath her quivering mouth her little chin was resolute. "I'll pay for it—if you give me time! I'm dreadfully sorry!"

The storm she expected did not break. Instead, she heard Mr. Strange's voice gentle almost to tenderness:

"You couldn't pay for it, Prue. It's a tragedy—but you didn't do it."

"I didn't," she cried hysterically.

"You blessed little white liar! I came in and saw the whole thing! Don't worry; I shan't blame Henry. And she found herself folded in a pair of strong, warm arms.

Somehow the amazing happening didn't seem amazing at all to Prue. She forgot Henry and everything else in the wide world till Julian whispered:

"There's just one thing, Prue—your fiancé!"

"That was another fib?" she confessed chokingly into his coat. "You see, you said—you weren't going to marry again!"

Prue caught her breath.

"I wasn't—till I met you!" said Julian Strange, and kissed her.

The Heart of Winter
Midwinter—but the bright noon sun
Spreads summer warmth on all it shines upon.
Howling winds, whirling snow,
Biting cold, seem things of long ago.
Blue is the river, blue the sky;
Soft as springtime clouds the snow-drifts lie.
And frowning winter, surly, wild,
Proves at heart as gentle as a child.

Street and Highway Trees

The Ontario Horticultural Association have done a good service in issuing recommendations for the guidance of municipalities in planting and caring for street and roadside shade trees. The Association, composed of delegates from all parts of the province, has realized the need of some better policy to take care of this matter. Many miles of highway are without trees of any kind and thousands of trees that once were an ornament to the country have been mutilated for the accommodation of companies stringing wire lines through the country. At the convention held in Toronto recently a strong appeal was made to the delegates to do their utmost to save the shade trees and so help to preserve the scenic beauty of their neighborhoods. To the extent that this is done will the country attract tourists and derive revenue accordingly. Recommendations for the guidance of municipalities were brought in by a tree committee appointed a year ago. These dealt with the varieties that should be planted in towns and country places, and the distances apart they should be planted. For the central and southern parts of the province such trees as White Ash, Hard Maple, Pin Oak, Tulip Tree and Oriental Plane may with advantage be planted and not closer than 40 feet. For wider streets and boulevards this distance should be increased to 55 or 60 feet and on roads 70 feet. The varieties for the country planting should include Elms, Red Oak, Sugar Maple, White Ash, and Walnut, where these are indigenous to the locality. The Soft Maple so commonly planted, was regarded as less suitable than many other varieties except for northern areas where they make a rather slow growth and mature into a more desirable shape. Such unsuitable trees as the Manitoba Maple and Poplars, including Cottonwoods, the committee considered, should not be planted on any street or roadway.

Handsome is as Handsome Does

A Parisian Beauty Doctor, or "cosmetic surgeon," as she prefers to call herself, has been trying to persuade the German people that it is a sin to be ugly. She did not suggest that the Germans, as a race, are less fortunate than other races in those physical gifts which are commonly described as "good looks," but simply that, having them, they neglect to improve upon them by art. To be content to show your features as Heaven meant you to show them she regards as a sin—the "sin of ugliness!" Yet people are not ugly unless they look ugly, and it is within the power of us all not to look ugly. Ugliness has nothing to do with features or hair or coloring or anything else that shows upon the surface. We may have features like the Apollo Belvedere himself and yet be repellent, if our tempers are bad. "Handsome is as handsome does," says the old proverb, which means that if you are courteous and chivalrous you will look happy and others will like you for it. A ready smile wins more hearts than millions, but a scowling face will soon make a Croesus bankrupt of his friends.—Montreal Star.

No Quarter

Halifax Herald (Cons.): The lash for drug peddlers may sound like harsh punishment, but it is possible to conceive of a more unspeakable, a more despicable crime? . . . It is useless to waste soft sentiments over criminals who peddle drugs. There is a deliberate act, a cold mercantile decision to capitalize a habit that grips its victims and drags them down to the depths of physical, mental and moral degradation. No quarter for the drug peddler, is a decision that will meet with the complete approval of the citizenship of the Dominion.

Water Noises

When I am playing by myself
And all the boys are lost around,
Then I can hear the water go;
It makes a little talking sound.
Along the rocks below the tree,
I see it ripple up and wink;
And I can hear it saying on,
"And do you think? and do you think?"
A bug shoots by that snaps and ticks,
And a bird flies up beside the tree
To get into the sky to sing.
I hear it say, "Killdee, killdee!"
Or else a yellow corn comes odwn
To splash a while and have a drink.
And when she goes I still can hear
The water say, "And do you think?"

Revolvers and the Police

Toronto Star (Ind.): A newspaper in North Carolina says the people of the United States have a good lesson to learn from Canadians in the way of respect for law and order. It is, we think, true. But we should, in Canada, see to it that our police do not forfeit a reputation long earned and deserved, and do not get into the habit of using revolvers too readily, as, of late, they have occasionally done.

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If the name Bayer appears, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches are dispelled by Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Aspirin—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Canada's Land of The Midnight Sun

Canada, too, has her "Land of the Midnight Sun," and the little that is known of the Great Valley of the Mackenzie River and the northern coast of Canada, inhabited chiefly by Indians and Eskimos, is vividly described in Natural History, journal of the American Museum of Natural History, by O. S. Finnie, Director of the Northwest Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior of Canada. He writes:

"One million three hundred thousand square miles of Canada lying north of 60 are known as the Northwest Territories. They extend easterly from the delta of the Mackenzie River to Baffin Island, a distance of approximately 2,000 miles, and reach more than 1,000 miles from north to south, from Cape Columbia to latitude 50 degrees north, including all the islands in the Canadian sector as far as the Pole.

"Neither the natives, nor the fauna, nor the other resources of so vast a country can be adequately described in a short article. From agricultural lands in the southern areas the country stretches to the world's most northerly headland; the natives include Indians and Eskimos speaking three distinct languages and living under as many sets of conditions. The wild life covers almost every species of land and sea mammal known to Canada, and the other potential resources of the Territories are found under a variety of conditions 't' at differ in climate and accessibility.

DISTRICT OF MACKENZIE.

"The District of Mackenzie, the most important of the three main divisions of the Northwest Territories, can be most readily approached by the route leading north by rail from Edmonton, Alberta, to the southern watershed of the Mackenzie River. Fort Smith, the administrative centre within the district, is situated on the Slave River in latitude 60 degrees north, where a series of rapids forms a barrier to river navigation. At this point we find ourselves in the hands of the Chipewyan Indians.

"Should we listen to the casual conversation of the crowd we would hear English, French, Cree and Chipewyan used impartially for, although the language of the district is Chipewyan, the Crees from the south are well represented, and the traders and missionaries are chiefly of British and French extraction.

"Fort Smith, situated on a high, sandy plateau overlooking the river, is typical of many of the northern posts, its principal features being government offices, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police Post, a wireless telegraph station, a mission church and house with hospital and school, and establishments of the principal fur traders of the North. To these should be added the log homes of the natives and a host of dogs, which constitute the motive power of the country's winter transport. In winter Fort Smith is dark and bleak and windswept, and in summer it is a noted gathering place for all varieties of insect pests known to the northland, while for weeks daylight never fades entirely from the sky.

"Immediately to the west lies a country of alternate swamps and low sand ridges, difficult of access, but valuable because it has given perfect protection to the only remaining herd of American bison that has never known captivity. In 1901 the Dominion Government prohibited the killing of these animals. An estimate made about twenty years later placed their total at approximately 1,500. To these have been added recently 6,000 young buffalo from the Wainwright National Park, and it is confidently hoped that the next decade will see an increase in their numbers great enough to make them an important factor in the food supply of the district and possibly to warrant licensed hunting under the supervision of official game wardens.

FUR RESOURCES.

"The fur resources of the Fort Smith area have been intensively drawn upon for more than 100 years, but still the trapper thrives. Each winter yields pelts of bear, wolves, lynx, colored foxes, fisher, otter, marten, mink, skunk and muskrat—fox, mink and rat predominating. It is possible, however, that the time is not far distant when fur farming will bring to many a better living than is to be secured today from the taking of wild animals.

"From Fort Smith to the Arctic Ocean, a distance by water of 1,400 miles, river transportation is uninterrupted. Large and comfortable steamboats serve the public, and already the excellence of their service, the novelty of the life of the lower river settlements and the river scenery have popularized them among those on the outlook for summer tours in little-known lands.

"Two hundred miles of river, winding slowly through the country of the buffalo and the moose, lead from Fort Smith to Great Slave Lake. One legend of the source of the name 'Great Slave' tells how, even before the advent of the trader, a white child was sold as a slave to an Indian tribe which had its home on the shores of the lake. The child grew to be a man above the ordinary stature, with long fair hair and light blue eyes, who lived a long life among his Indian masters. His presence led to the area being known as the 'land of the great white slave,' eventually abbreviated to Great Slave. The story further states that the child slave was the rightful heir to the throne of France—an interesting echo of the rumors spread by the devotees of Napoleon that the son of Marie Louise had not really died at Vienna, but had been spirited away by the wily Metternich.

"Another legend, quoted by the Geographic Board of Canada, is to the effect that Great and Lesser Slave Lakes and Slave River were named after a tribe of Indians that once dwelt in that region. These Indians called themselves Etchareottine, which means 'the people dwelling in the shelter of the (Rocky) mountains.' In contradistinction to other Northern Indians, who were caribou eaters and traveled widely in pursuit of game, the Etchareottines were fish eaters and kept to the lakes. When the more warlike Crees went on the warpath against the tribes on the Peace River, they came from the south in canoes to Lesser Slave Lake and, leaving their canoes there, proceeded overland. Finding that the lake-dwelling Indians did not possess their own warlike attributes and ideas, the Crees showed their contempt by bestowing on the lake dwellers the epithet of 'awonak' or 'slaves.'

"By way of Great Slave Lake the traveller reached the land of the Slave Indians, and to the babel of tongues is added still another dialect. Revolution, the most important settlement on the southern shore, is the meeting place of the Indian trappers from east and west, north and south. The Southern Indians, the Crees and Chipewyans, are represented chiefly by the imported servants of the traders, this point marking the northern limit of the influence of both these nations. Three highways lead from Resolution—one to the northwest following the waters of the Mackenzie to Beaufort Sea, one due north to the country of the Yellow Knife Indians, and the third east to the lakes and plains of the Arctic prairies and the home of the caribou and musk ox.

FORT RELIANCE.

"To the east a cruise of 200 miles along the shores of Great Slave Lake—one of the great lakes of the world with an approximate area of 11,500 square miles—brings the traveller to Fort Reliance. From this point the trail leads overland until the headwaters of rivers flowing to Hudson Bay are reached. Here are the great Arctic prairies, a country well flowered by nature except with trees.

"From any point of vantage can be seen an apparently endless expanse of grass, moss and Arctic flowers. Sparkling lakes nestle in the valleys, and winding streams disturb the quiet of the scene as they tumble their way down their many rapids to mingle their waters finally with those of far-distant Hudson Bay.

"The rolling country is the home of the caribou, the wolf, the Arctic fox and the remnants of the few remaining herds of musk ox to be found on the mainland. The streams and lakes are plentifully stocked with fish, and their shores are the nesting grounds of many varieties of waterfowl. The potential wealth of this Arctic plains area lies in its undoubted ability to yield liberal supplies of meat and hides from caribou and other hardy animals, fish from its waters and fur from its hills.

"Humanity is but poorly represented on the Arctic prairies. A small band of Indians, who winter along the northern fringe of timber, each Spring follows the caribou in their northern migration, and lives entirely upon caribou meat and fish. Eskimo from the shores of Coronation Gulf to the northwest and coastal points to the eastward move each Spring toward the Huelon River to meet the same migration on its way to the Arctic coast. The only permanent residents are three bands of Eskimo who base their operations on the shores of Kasba, Sigolgyusk and Baker Lakes, from which points they eke out a living from the eastern sections of these northern plains.

WHERE FRANKLIN CAMPED

"Starting again from Resolution, another road leads to Rae, on a northern arm of Great Slave Lake and the land of the Dog Rib Indians. In 1921 Franklin and his party followed their route to the north. A winter camp was built half way between Great Slave and Great Bear Lakes, which was known as Fort Enterprise. From this point a season was spent in exploration of the Coppermine River, and the shores of Coronation Gulf. Part of this route was also followed by Hearne of the Hudson's Bay Company, when from 1769 to 1772 he pioneered the valley of the Coppermine River. One of the great tragedies of the North was enacted during this trip, when the Indians who accompanied Hearne massacred more than twenty defenseless Eskimo men, women and children, camped at a point since known as Bloody Fall, on the lower reach of the Coppermine.

"During the past winter a unique event occurred in the vicinity of Fort Enterprise, about 150 miles north of Great Slave Lake, the spot where Sir John Franklin, with Lieutenant Back, spent such a terrible year of hunger and privation in 1821 and 1822. Two years ago, while an official of the Canadian Government was making a patrol from the bottom of Bathurst Inlet, 500 miles over a bleak and desolate territory to Rae, he had

with him a young Eskimo youth from Coronation Gulf. They had many adventures on the way, but, on reaching Rae, the young Eskimo was delighted at what appeared to him a veritable metropolis, although it cannot boast of more than half a hundred people.

"So enamored with the place was the youth that he wanted to remain, forgetting entirely the pretty wife he had left in a distant igloo. The official, however, had no intention of permitting the youth to remain, for, had he done so, the lad's tribesmen would have assumed that the white man had killed him, and so would probably have taken his own life in retaliation.

A PEACE MEETING

"When they finally returned to Bathurst Inlet the young native must have told his tribesmen how well they had been treated by the Indians and, as a result, the Eskimo in a body appeared shortly after Christmas at Fort Enterprise. Here, though face to face with their traditional enemies, the Indians, a ten-day powwow of feast and dance took the place of bloody war.

"It was the first occasion on record where groups of Eskimos and Indians from these districts have buried the hatchet, and is in marked contrast to the warlike attitude of the time of Hearne.

"The Dog Rib Indians are one of the larger tribes of the North. Long association with the white trader has advanced them to a life of semi-civilization, but they still depend upon the wild life of the country for an existence. As they wander over a wide country of rocky hills, some of which are timbered, though sparsely, their harvest consists of fur, fish, caribou and moose, with rabbits to fill in periods when larger game is not available. Much of this area has been reserved by the government of Canada as a hunting and trapping ground for the exclusive use of the natives.

"To the west and north of Resolution lies the valley of the Mackenzie River. Hay River, a settlement lying near Great Slave Lake in the broad valley of the river from which the community takes its name, is the home of a well-conducted boarding school, two missions and several trading establishments.

"Providence lies on a level plain on the bank of the Mackenzie. The buildings of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, of the mission with its boarding school for native children, and of the several trading companies are practically the only permanent structures in the settlement. At points further south the Indian and half-breed trappers have built for themselves cabins from which they pursue their activities, but the natives of the Providence district are still the itinerant people of a hundred years ago. Many of them are born, live and die in their native teepees and brush camps.

"Between Providence and Simpson on the way north the river narrows and runs swiftly, but navigation is uninterrupted. Simpson is located on a large island just below the confluence of the Liard and the Mackenzie Rivers. It is one of the larger settlements of the Territories, and was at one time the trade headquarters for the whole valley of the Mackenzie. Originally a typical Hudson's Bay Company fort, dating from the early days of the last century, it has grown to be a prosperous settlement with missions, hospitals, schools, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police post, a government wireless station, a number of trading establishments and a government Indian agency which conducts an experimental farm. The surrounding country, consisting of rolling hills lightly covered with timber, has up to date produced little but fur, though it is not without promise for the future. The Rocky Mountains are less than 100 miles to the northwest, and far back in the mountain lies a valley about which little is known beyond the fact that in its hot springs are so numerous that its temperature has been materially affected. While the surrounding country suffers from a somewhat rigorous climate, the 'semi-tropical valley,' as it has come to be known, sees but little snow and is the winter home of a great variety of wild life.

"The Liard River is the highway serving the territory to the west. It boasts of a steamboat service, adequate to the needs of the country, which each year carries a wealth of high-grade furs to the markets of the world. The upper reaches of the Liard, penetrating far into the mountain ranges, connect through British Columbia with established routes of travel leading to the Pacific Coast.

Mackenzie enters a bolder and more rugged country, and for many miles the traveler is regaled with true Western mountain scenery. When the river swings back to the foothills, Wrigley, a fur post active enough in winter but presenting little of interest during the open season, is passed, and the journey is continued to Norman. This settlement stands on the high banks of the Mackenzie at the mouth of Great Bear River. The usual essentials of a northern post are here in evidence. The country, east and west for many miles, is tributary to this post.

"The Great Bear River is the highway to Great Bear Lake and the country beyond as far as Coronation Gulf, while to the west an overland trail follows the valley of the Gravel River to the headwaters of the Stewart River and on to the Yukon. The Great Bear River is shallow and swift, but can be ascended by suitably constructed power boats. Great Bear Lake is the largest lake in the northland, covering an area of something like 12,100 square miles, but its use as a transport route is limited to not more than three months in each season, as it is icebound for the rest of the year.

"Much of interest centres around Norman. Not only is it the trade centre of a large and productive district, but the scenic and mineral resources are also outstanding. A few miles from the settlement lie lignitic coal beds of doubtful commercial importance, but spectacular, having burned continuously at least since the first exploration of the river by Mackenzie in 1789. To the north of the post lies a prominent mountain known as Bear Rock, and along the western horizon lie the bold peaks of the Rocky Mountains. The burning of the coal seams and the three peculiar red stains, probably caused by oxide of iron, which show on the face of Bear Rock have given rise to a typical Indian legend.

"Many years ago, according to the story, both the people and the game of this area were giants of their kind. A giant hunter armed with bow and arrows, while standing on Bear Rock, saw a colony of giant beaver in Bear River. With his arrows he secured three of these, but several of his arrows which had missed their mark remained embedded in the river bottom, but one end still showing above the water. As in all the northern rivers sunken

trees are to be seen, the story-teller points out the giant arrows without difficulty. The hunter then skinned three to the beaver and spread the skins on the face of Bear Rock to dry; the blood left the three stains in the shape of the three beaver skins. Taking some of the beaver meat to the point where the coal now burns, the hunter made a fire to cook a meal, but the fire burned so fiercely that the ground became ignited and has been burning ever since.

"Fifty miles below Norman there is every evidence of an oil field of economic importance, but the cost of a pipeline or other means of transportation prohibits, for the present, its development on any major scale. It has given promise enough to suggest the establishment of a small refinery for the production of gasoline and oil fuel to supply the local demands.

"Further north the river flows through a canyon known as the Ramaparts, whose white limestone walls rise 150 feet above the water. From the foot of the Ramaparts, Good Hope can be seen crowning a high point on the eastern side of the river. This settlement is sixteen miles south of the Arctic Circle and is a large and prosperous fur trading centre. It is also the northern limit of the Hare Indian nation, as at the next settlement (Arctic Red River) their language will be understood only with difficulty, that of the Loucheux tribe having taken its place.

"The settlements of Arctic Red River and McPherson are the trading centres of the country entirely apart from the valley of the Mackenzie to the south. McPherson was established early in the last century, and was at one time the gateway to the Yukon Valley. An eighty-mile portage across a comparatively low-lying country leads to the headwaters of the Porcupine River, which joins the Yukon at Fort Yukon. The delta of the Mackenzie marks the northeastern limits of a group of Indian tribes which spreads south and west to the valley of the Yukon.

"The most northerly post on the Mackenzie is on an island in the river delta that is known as 'Akavik,' meaning, in the Eskimo language 'Where the bear abounds.' Here the sun in summer is visible throughout each of the twenty-four hours, and here is another important boundary between native races—the meeting point of Indian and Eskimo. Originally this area was controlled entirely by the Eskimo, but the Indians following the white man have extended their hunting grounds to the north, and the Eskimo are gradually retiring to the Arctic coast line.

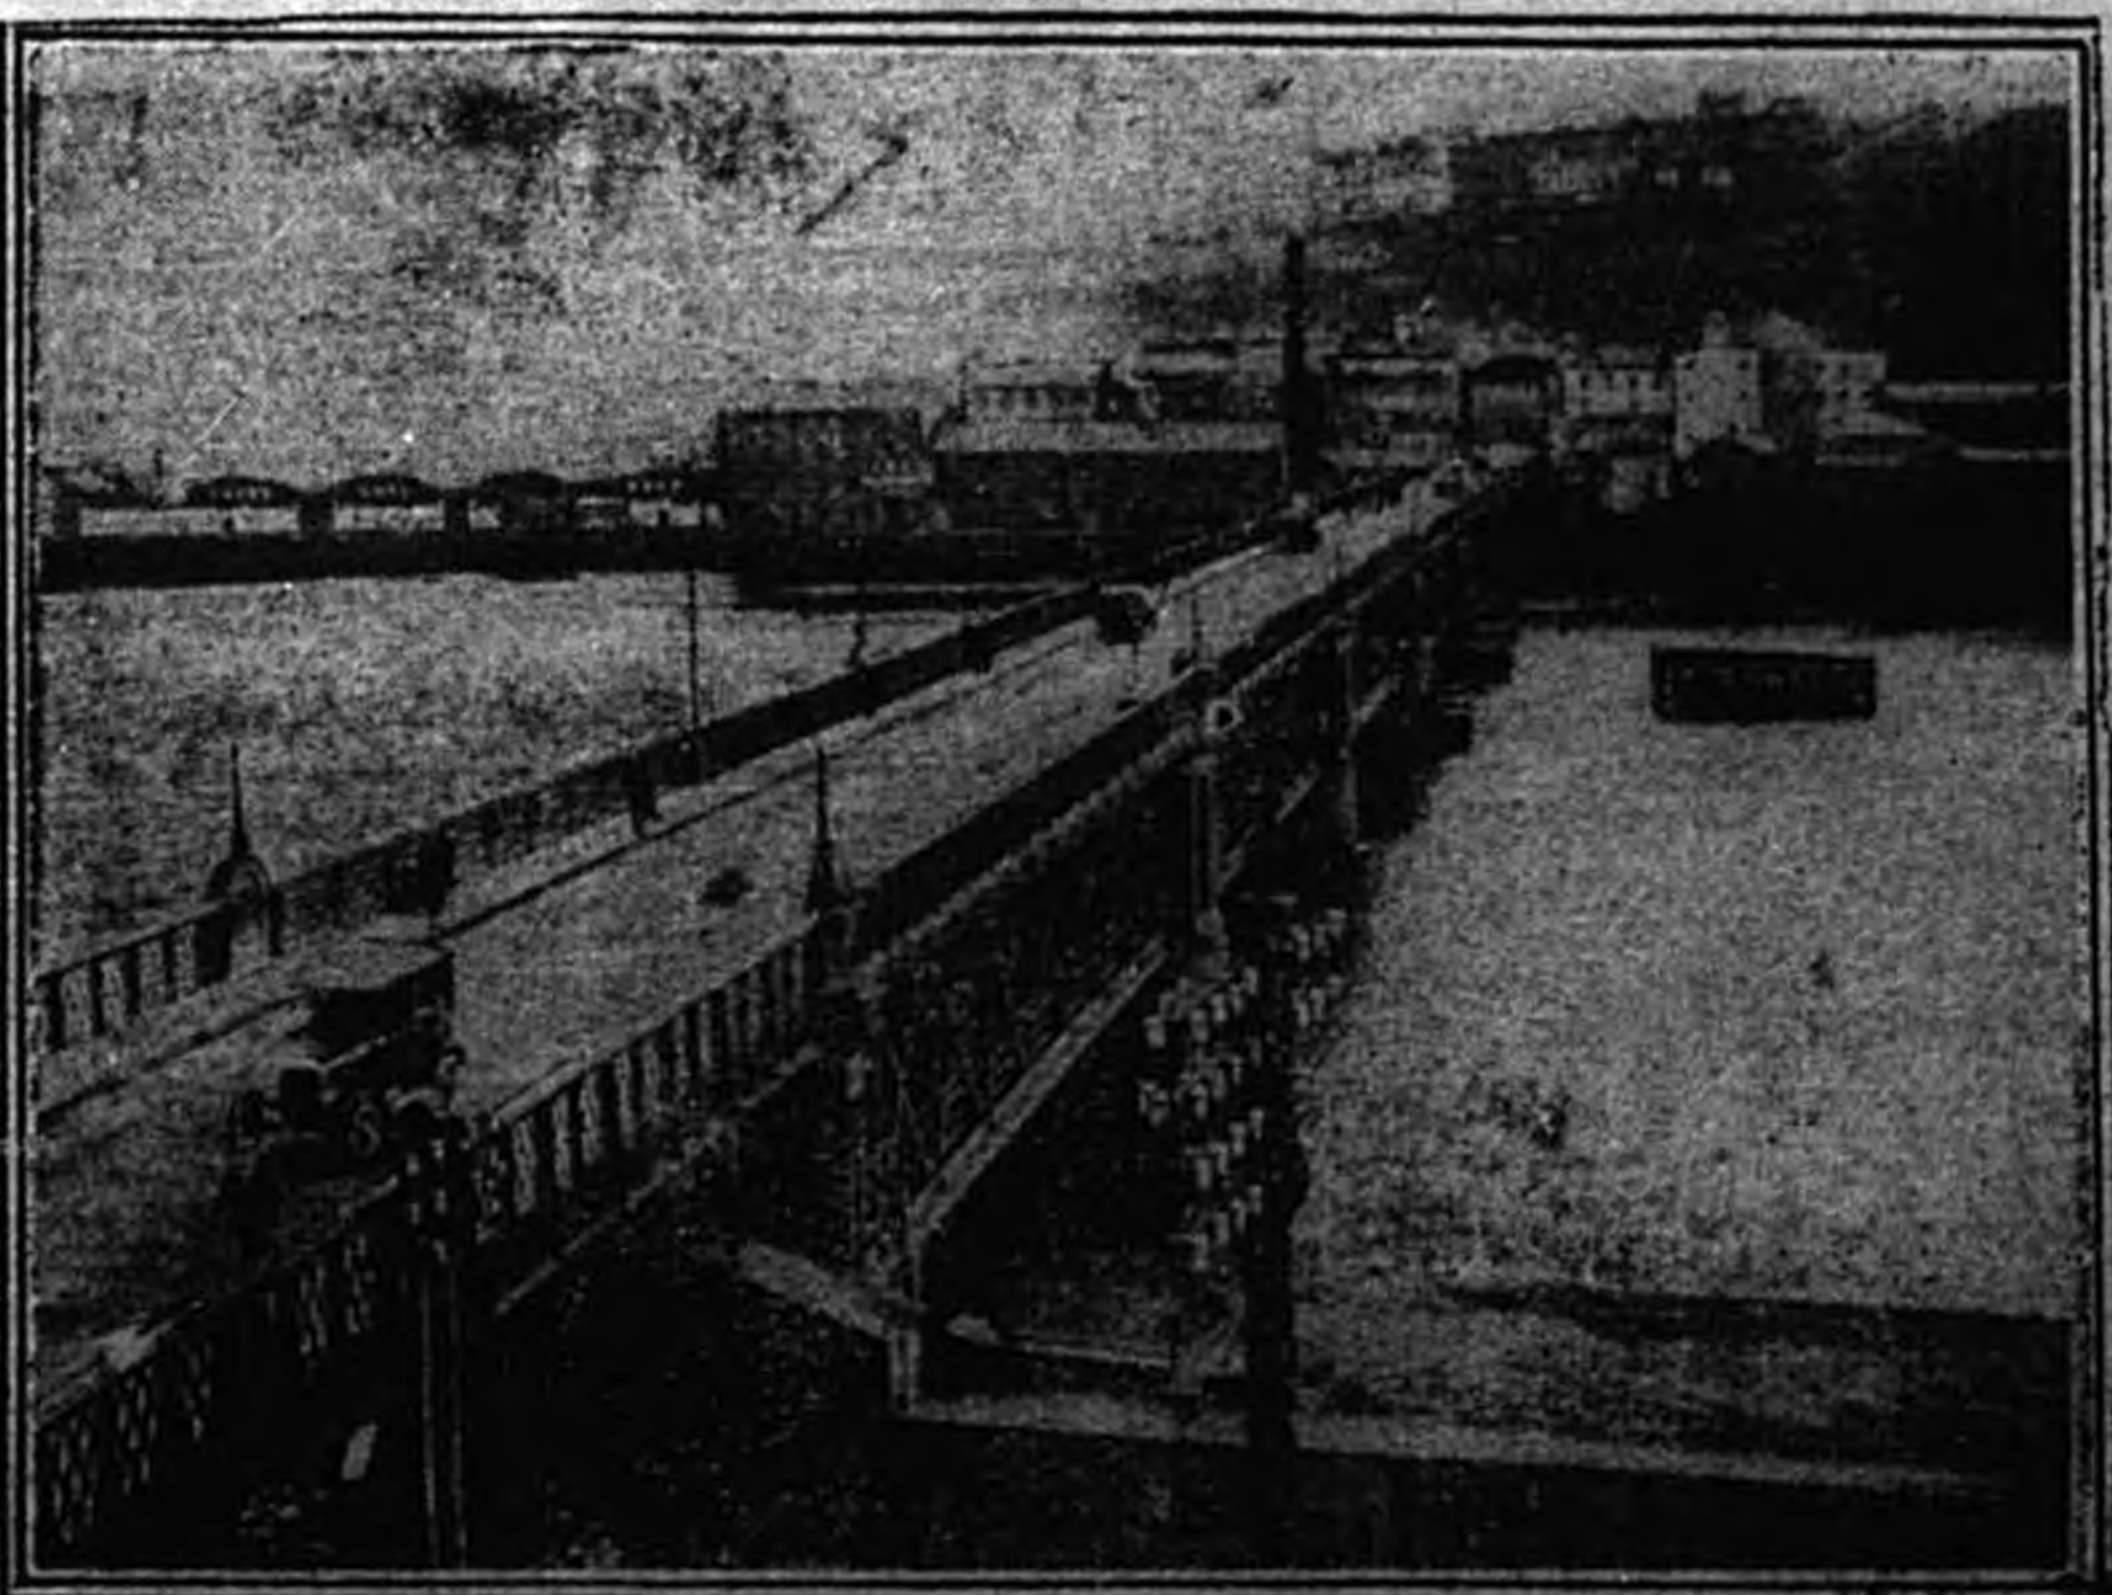

"Akavik is also the junction of two transportation routes, one of which follows the Mackenzie Valley, while the other is the ocean route from Pacific Coast ports which leads through Bering Sea and along the northern coast of Alaska. Both routes have their drawbacks. The cost via the river route is excessive, and on the ocean route there is the ever-present danger of loss of both ship and cargo when rounding the northerly capes of Alaska.

"The shores of Beaufort Sea are still the undisputed heritage of the Eskimo. Between the Alaska boundary and the eastern end of the delta of the Mackenzie lie four settlements—Demarcation, Point Herschel, Shingle Point and Kittigazuit—whose inhabitants, living largely on the resources of the country, draw their harvest from both land and sea. The hills produce caribou, which mean both food and winter clothing; from the lakes and streams the natives secure fish, while the ocean supplies more fish and various kinds of seal and white whale, which solve the problem for materials for boats, tents and footwear and add to the food supply. While tree life is no longer in evidence, the heavy drift from the Mackenzie has stored the beaches with fuel adequate for many years to come, placing the Eskimos of this area in a different position from their brothers to the east, who are largely dependent upon sea-mammal oil for heat and light.

"Both the eastern and western groups received their first impression of civilization from the whalers, while those of the central area are only now drawing their first knowledge of the world from the fur traders from the south. The influences prior to the white invasion are still stamped on all in clothing, accoutrements and home life. These differences are, however, entirely regional; the language throughout the Eskimo world is basically the same; and a study of the folklore proves the common origin of the Eskimo people from Siberia to Greenland.

"The government of Canada is confronted with a complex problem in the administration of the Far North, but, in so far as it is possible, the various situations have been met as they have arisen. Communication is maintained by a well-organized mail service and an efficient system of wireless telegraphy operation stations at Edmonton, In Alberta; at Fort Smith, Resolution, Simpson and Akavik in the Northwest Territories, and at Herschel Island, Dawson and Mayo in the Yukon. Schools and hospitals are subsidized, relief is given to the sick and destitute, game sanctuaries are maintained while wild life is molested by no one, and many thousands of square miles of territory are set aside as hunting and trapping grounds for the sole use of the native population.

Light Frame Steel Will Be Replaced By Concrete.

FAMOUS LONDONDERRY BRIDGE TO BE REPLACED
Modern conditions demand a wider bridge giving access to upper portion of the harbor.

REASONABLE EQUIPMENT with Electricity on the Farm

"What is the reasonable equipment that I should figure in for the first year after getting electric power, and how much electricity would be used per month? There are four in my family, and I have 12 head of stock and about 60 fowls."

This question cannot be answered with precision since reasonable equipment will depend upon the family tastes and upon the budget, while the energy used will depend both upon quantity of equipment and hours of use. By outlining a very useful and not overloaded first year farm equipment, it will be possible to arrive at a probable monthly use of energy.

First comes the matter of lights. There should be about 18 fixed lights installed in the house and about eight utility outlets for portable lamps and various plug-in-devices. The out-buildings and yard should have eight fixed lights and four outlets for portable devices.

The home should certainly have an electric iron, a vacuum cleaner, a washing machine and two portable lamps.

An electric pump and pressure tank should be provided for supplying water to the house and barn.

For the barns and stables the equipment will depend somewhat on what the 12 head of stock include. For eight cows, a two-cow portable milking machine and a motor-driven cream separator would be recommended, unless the milk is sold. A 5-horse power portable motor should be provided for grinding feed, for hoisting and elevating, wood sawing, silo filling, and odd jobs in general.

The house, yard and barn lights should average 30 kilowatt-hours per month, winter and summer. The electric iron and vacuum cleaner will account for 6 kilowatt-hours, the washing machine 3 kilowatt-hours, and the pump will take 5 units for the house and 10 for the barn. The portable motor should be used to the extent of 50 kilowatt-hours per month in order to save labor and time. The milking machine and separator would take about 28 kilowatt-hours per month. This makes a total of 132 kilowatt-hours per month.

The selection just outlined is intended to maintain a balance between the service that is very desirable but, which does not increase revenue or cut down expenses on the one hand and on the other hand the service that reduces expenses or enables the owner to earn more. The milking machine, the separator and the portable motor are revenue units that should carry the entire monthly bill, leaving the lights, electric iron, vacuum cleaner, washing machine and water pumps as clear gain.

Estimates on the cost of wiring the farmstead and for purchasing the equipment outlined will be cheerfully furnished by us on application.

LOCAL NEWS

Mrs. Price Sr., of Montreal, visited at Mrs. G. Y. Deacon's over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Deacon and daughter Louise spent the weekend at Lake Louise.

Mr. Wm. Grand'Maison, of Montreal, spent Sunday, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dion.

Miss Reta Boyd spent the weekend the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Prophet, of Calumet.

Miss Nellie Mason, of Montreal, was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. McArthur.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Beers, Mrs.
A. Beers, and Mrs. Kidd motored to Montreal on Sunday last.

Miss Doris Orme, of Westmount, spent the week-end the guest of Mr.
and Mrs. W. J. L. Pollock.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Wynn, of St.
Lambert, spent Saturday in town, guests of Mrs. W. J. Rogers.

Mr. Ernest Deslauriers, who has been spending the past months in Denver and Englewood, Colo., returned home on Tuesday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Price and son Bert, also Miss Willow Lavery, of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. McArthur.

Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd and Mr.
Ernest Boyd, accompanied by Mr.
and Mrs. John Cruise, spent Sunday visiting friends in Morin Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Elliott, of Flint, Mich., motored over and are spending two weeks, the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Morrison.

Miss Mary Cruise, nurse in training of the Montreal General Hospital, is spending this week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs.
John Cruise.

The many friends of Mr. George Muir who was removed to Montreal last week, with an acute attack of appendicitis, has successfully undergone the operation and we are glad to report is steadily gaining.

Mrs. W. G. Tucker, and son Clifton, of Montreal, are spending a few weeks in town, the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rogers.
Mr. W. G. Tucker was also their guest for a few days this week.

Mrs. Jas. Wiswall and daughter, also Miss Clement, of East Angus, returned home on Sunday last, after spending the past three weeks, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Muir.
Mr. Jas. Wiswall was also their guest for the week-end.

The "Found" notice, appearing in the Watchman last week was the means of returning a very pretty necklace to Mrs. John McQuat, of Brownsburg. It had been found by Mrs. Wason and again demonstrates the efficacy of advertising.

The Members of the Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 2231, Lachute, held a successful dance in McArthur's Hall, on Friday evening last. Good music was provided for the occasion. Too much credit cannot be given to the member's wives who looked after the wants of the inner man.

The Ladies of the Baptist Church invite you to their Thank-Offering Meeting, on Tuesday afternoon, at 3 p.m., in the Church Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Victor J. Griffin, who leave early in June for Africa, will address the meeting. A very helpful and profitable time is expected. Afternoon tea will be served. Everybody welcome.

Everything is shaping up wonderfully at the Exhibition Grounds for the Lachute Fair on June 19-20-21-22.
Great improvements have been made,
both in grounds, buildings and sheds, so that the public will be agreeably surprised when making their annual visit. You need not be afraid to invite your friends to be with us exhibition week, for you will be able to treat them to a show that will equal, if not surpass those of the larger cities. Let each one be a booster and help put the Fair across with a bang.

STOP! STOP! STOP!

That is the injunction issued by the Provincial Road Department, governing Motor traffic, and those who disregard this summons need only blame themselves if they wilfully refuse to comply with the new regulation which our traffic constable, Mr.
Jolicoeur has strict orders to enforce.

When coming to a railway crossing, the conductor of a motor vehicle must come to a dead stop before crossing and then, start in low gear.
This applies to a railway crossing subject to the federal or provincial authorities, but not to a tramway crossing, or a level crossing when in charge of an operator, or when equipped with stop gates, or automobile signals indicating the coming of a train.

There will be warning for the first offense and then a report will be sent to Quebec after warning.

DEMONSTRATION OF FIRE PUMP

In order that our citizens may get cheaper insurance, the Council are considering the advisability of purchasing a 600 gallon pump as suggested by the Fire Commissioner at Quebec.

On Saturday a demonstration was given by Mr. Tremblay of Montreal, representing the Bickle Fire Engine Co. of Woodstock, Ont. The pump was tried out at different parts of the town and had as many as four streams going at one time. The demonstration was such as to prove its efficiency in handling almost any situation that could arise, but the Mayor is in communication with the Underwriters and all questions will come under general discussion and the Mayor is quite hopeful that the Government will make certain allowances that will enable the town to secure the added fire protection with consequent lessening of rates. Doubtless other demonstrations will be given of different engines before any decision is made.

Funeral of the late Thos B. Millar.

The funeral of the late Thos. Boyd Millar, which took place on Saturday afternoon last, was conducted by the Rev. Dr. MacLeod, who gave many words of comfort to the bereaved ones. A beautiful wreath as a token of respect was sent from the Masonic Order of Portage La Prairie (Assiniboine Lodge No. 7), of which the deceased was an honoured member.

Among those attending from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. T. Millar and daughter (son and daughter-in-law); Mrs. Margaret Slagle (cousin)
Mr. and Mrs. John Morrow, friends of sixty years standing, all of Montreal, also his brother, Mr. Walter Millar, of Portage La Prairie.

CUSHING

Mr. Lawrence Hartley spent several days in Montreal and Cornwall this week.

Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Usher and Miss Lois Keatley spent Tuesday here.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Hartley and Mr. Ernest Hartley, of Montreal, spent the week-end with their mother.

Mr. and Mrs. John Heatlie, of Ogdensburg, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Nicholls on Sunday.

Mrs. S. Wheelahan also the Misses Grace and Katie and Mr. E. Wheel-ahan and Mr. Owen E. Keatley spent Sunday here.

Miss Muriel Jobb, accompanied by Mrs. J. F. Innes and Miss Annie Weir motored to Ottawa on Wednesday of last week.

We are all looking forward with pleasure to the evening of May 24th, when the Little Rideau players will present the "Fair Co-ed" in the Stone Hall, as we have already heard glowing accounts of their previous performances.

The funeral of the late Mr. Wm.
Kerr, whose death took place at his home here on May 15th, was held on Friday afternoon last, and was largely attended; service being conducted at St. Mungo's Church, by Rev. F. L. Jobb, the remains being interred in the adjoining cemetery.
Mr. Kerr who had reached his eightieth year shortly before his death and spent the early part of his life in Dunany, but was a resident of Cushing for the past forty years, where he was highly respected.
His wife, formerly Miss Charlotte Lindley, of this place predeceased him two years ago. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. George Lindley, of Hagarville, Ont.; and Mrs. Robert Morrison, of Lachute Road, his only surviving son Mr. Lindley Kerr, occupies the old homestead. The deceased's aged sister, Mrs. Morrison of Arundel, was present at his funeral, also Mrs. Swail a niece.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mr. and Mrs. Pierce and a friend were up for the week-end at their cottage.

We are glad to have Miss Carrie,
and Miss Minnie Hooker back in St.
Andrews after the winter in Montreal.

Dr. B. N. Wales was in Oka on a Coroner's case on Saturday.

Miss Viara, B.N., is nursing Mrs.
B. N. Wales.

Among the week-end visitors were Miss Beatrice Robertson, Miss Joan and Mr. Harold Willett.

Miss Hazel Ireland and Mrs. Coleman have moved up from Montreal and expect to spend some months here. They will shortly be joined by Mrs. E. J. Ireland.

The First United Players, of Rosemount, will give in the Town Hall Saturday, June 1st, at 8 p.m. Standard Time, their screaming farce, (3 act play), "Tommy's Wives"; note the plural! Sounds polygamous, but Tommy will explain everything in the Town Hall. We hope Lachute and all near-by towns will come and hear what he has to say. Married men might profit by his pointers:
single ones cannot afford to miss them.

The Car That Attracts The Eye

"Gosh! how nicely she runs, isn't she a beauty, I wish I owned one like that." So often we hear such comments and praises, given the New Ford, as she comes sailing swiftly along, it is not idle praise, for they say "Seeing is believing," and the attractiveness sure appeals to the eye.

Siege of Afghan Palace Depicted by Royal Tutor

Queen's Modern Dress Added to Anger Over Reforms, Frenchwoman Relates

Mullahs Spread Hostility

By SONIA TOMARA

In New York Herald-Tribune

Paris.—The first refugee to arrive in Paris from Kabul, where civil war has been raging for the last two months and where kings have been rising and disappearing, was Mme. J. C. Ott, a Frenchwoman, who since last spring has lived in close touch with King Amanullah, Queen Souriya and their family.

When the Afghan monarchs were in Berlin—during their trip to Europe—Mme. Ott was asked by Queen Souriya to take charge of her nine-year-old daughter, Sultanja, and to teach her French and English and European manners. Mme. Ott became a member of the Queen's household. She traveled with her through Soviet Russia, Turkey, Persia and the wilderness of Afghanistan.

From June to December 31—when she left Kabul as a refugee, on a German Junker plane—she lived in the King's palace, with little Princess Sultanja, meeting the King and Queen many times a day. Amanullah practiced his little knowledge of French talking to Mme. Ott. When the revolt broke out she was surrounded by the rebels in the palace, together with the royal family, and slept in Queen Souriya's room during the eight days of the siege.

King Welcomed by Throne
"When we first arrived at the Afghan frontier, coming from Persia, I was astonished to see how extremely popular King Amanullah was among his subjects. All the way from the frontier to Kabul we were met with enthusiasm by crowds of simple people, shepherds and peasants. We proceeded in a caravan of fifty motor cars, and behind us came an enormous queue of lorries filled with the luggage—all the gifts the King was bringing from the various European countries and all the purchases made by him and the Queen in Europe. A special road had to be made through the Afghan hills for our journey, and the people themselves built it for their sovereign."

From the day we arrived the Queen became busy transforming the former harem into a regular Western palace, with fine reception rooms. A big table was put in the middle of the dining room and chairs replaced the carpets, for the King would no more eat in the Eastern fashion. All his relatives and guests were told to use forks and knives during the meals whereas before they always ate with their fingers.

"Twice a day, for lunch and for dinner, we all assembled in this dining room. King Amanullah took the head of the table, Queen Souriya sitting on his right. There were as a rule about forty people sharing the King's meal—his children, his numerous half-brothers and half-sisters, the Queen's sisters and relatives, the widows of the King's father, who had remained in the palace after their husband was murdered."

"At first it seemed very difficult for the elderly women to get accustomed to Western ways, to eat properly, to sit unveiled among men. But little by little they became modernized and seemed to like the new fashion."

Queen Wore Western Dress
"In the afternoon the Queen received guests from the diplomatic corps. At these receptions she wore some of the Western frocks she had brought from Europe. She was very fond of dressing in European clothes and passed all her mornings trying on new outfits and having them changed for her by the Rumanian dressmaker. In the evening Queen Souriya wore delicate gowns, and although none but the family's relatives saw her in these clothes, the rumor about the scantiness of her attire soon spread in Kabul and was amplified by the mullahs who saw their prestige diminished by the King's reforms. Some of Amanullah's enemies received from Europe photographs of the Queen in evening dresses and these pictures were reprinted and sent to chiefs of tribes."

"In July he Queen shingled her beautiful hair. She did not want to do it, but Amanullah had insisted on it ever since they came back from Europe."

Princess in New School
"However, everything remained quiet until the beginning of September, when we went over to Kabul, for my little pupil, Princess Sultanja, was to enter the French school. It was a new mixed school, where girls were to be educated together with boys. King Amanullah ordered all his ministers to send their children to it so that Sultanja should have distinguished company. But there were also sons and daughters of quite simple families."

"All the trouble began when King Amanullah decided that the time had arrived for his country to be Europeanized. On September 15 he went, with his Queen, to a public gathering and there, in front of thousands of people, he took the veil of the Queen's face and made a long speech. He decreed that, like Souriya, all women were to go about unveiled and wear Western clothes. Instead of the long trousers and shirt of the national costume. The felt hat and the Western suit were to become obligatory for men."

"The sight of the unveiled Queen made a profound impression upon the King's audience. But in the palace we did not realize what the consequences would be. We continued to live as before, the King being very busy with his reforms. He went out a lot in the car and received ministers and foreign representatives. We often saw the Soviet minister, Stark, drive up to the palace and stay quite a long time in the King's study."

Queen Helped Poor
"The Queen's time was taken up by receptions, by dressmakers and carity. She was extremely kind to anybody who was in need of her help. Frequently poor men or women came to the palace and asked to be received by the Queen. She had them come immediately to her reception room and, whenever it was possible, she helped them."

"However, the King's order to wear Western clothes had caused much discontent in Kabul. Western clothes were expensive and it was often difficult to get them. The Afghans were used to their turbans and baggy trousers. But the King's orders were strict. At first he decreed that men and women clad in the old way would not be allowed to walk in the main street of Kabul or pass through the town park. Guards stood along the main street driving away 'old-fashioned' people. This made the population very angry."

"Soon we noticed that the King was becoming nervous. He spoke of the Shinwari tribe that was revolting against him. But he did not want to take drastic measures against them. 'They are Moslems,' he said, 'and we must spare them.' At the beginning of the rebellion Bachi Sakao, who later crowned himself as King Habibullah, was made prisoner by Amanullah's troops, but Amanullah let him go, as he gave his word never to fight against his King any more."

Palace Under Attack
"At the beginning of December we all were in the palace—all except the King, who had gone out for a drive—when the servants began to run around the rooms shouting that we were surrounded by the enemy. The rebels had entered the town and raised against the King the lower population of Kabul. The scene outside was terrifying; ragged armed crowds were vociferating and shouting threatening words against Amanullah and Souriya. The Queen was pale with fear, for her husband was out and she did not know what fate he had encountered."

Soon, however, he returned, having dashed in his motor car through the insurgents. He organized the defense of the palace, even his twelve-year-old nephews receiving weapons. Guns were loaded and the siege began. It lasted for over a week. Bullets fell on the upper floors of the palace, so I had to go down with my pupil to the Queen's room. About ten of us slept there on mattresses on the floor."

Royal Family in Flight
"The rebel's first condition was that the King should repudiate his 'shameful' wife. He refused flatly. After a week's siege the King's Guards ejected the rebels and cleared a part of the town. He decided to put Queen Souriya and his children out of danger. His whole family—about fifteen people, among whom was my little Princess Sultanja, were packed in the huge plane he had received in Germany. I was to go on the same day to the French legation and to be evacuated from there. On the morning I had to do it, but Amanullah had insisted on it ever since they came back from Europe."

The world is indeed a strange place, to a man who has been removed from all contact with it for three decades. The things he was used to 30 years ago, have disappeared. Their place is taken by things he knows not of. Such is the fate of Albert Gauthier, aged 49, who has just returned to his native Montreal, after 30 years in a United States prison, served as punishment for a crime regarding which he still disagrees with the verdict of society. Like a former famous prisoner, "his hair is gray, but not with years... his frame is bent, but not with age," and the iron of his chains has entered into his soul.

Thirty years ago, his father deserted him and his mother. Hot-headed and indignant, he sold his Sunday suit to buy a revolver, made his way to St. Paul, Minnesota, no mean journey 30 years ago, and there found his father. He challenged his father to return home and give to his mother the care and protection a wife and mother advancing in years was entitled to expect of a husband and father. His father not only refused, but added insult to injury by offering the boy a railway ticket back to Montreal.

The boy's rage, smoldering for weeks and fed daily by brooding over the wrong done the mother he worshipped, suddenly burst into flame. His fingers found the weapon for which he had sacrificed his finest wearing apparel. Three shots rang out, and Albert Gauthier was a prisoner, arrested a few minutes later on the charge of murdering his father.

There is no capital punishment in Minnesota. Gauthier went to jail for life, found guilty of patricide. He knew practically no English then, and during the weeks that he waited for trial, and the days that his trial lasted, he thought his life hung in the balance, for he did not know that the death penalty had been abolished in Minnesota.

To-day, after 30 years and two weeks of prison life, he speaks English fluently, but only beginning to learn what life means as the world understands it now. Of his crime, he speaks with the same detachment, as if he were speaking of someone else's act. It was premeditated, he says, and therefore it was easy for the state to convict him. But he does not admit that it was unjustified. He never saw his mother again.

The impulsive act by which he sought to redress or, failing that, to avenge the wrong done to her, deprived her of her last means of support, and after struggling for 15 years to maintain herself, she died when only half of his imprisonment was over. Speaking of prison he admits that he was well-treated and, in fact, he loves the routine of prison life, the shelter from all outside worries, the absence of any need to care for himself.

Speaking of how this feeling grows on you, Gauthier said: "There never was a man sentenced to life who thought he would serve more than five years. The lawyers tell you you'll be out in five years, and for that time, that is all you think of. But during that period you get used to prison life. When the five years are over, you hear nothing of a reprieve. You are disappointed, but not very disappointed. And after another year or two you quit thinking about getting out."

He could tell the habitual criminals in prison, he said, by the way they talked. The men who went to prison for some one particular crime caused by special circumstances, would talk only of how they could put in the time until they got out. The habitual criminals talked only of the crimes they had committed, how cleverly they did them, and what they would accomplish when they got out again. Their rapture was always a matter of bad luck.

On about a dozen occasions during his imprisonment, Gauthier had to do time in "the hole," which was the extreme punishment. He had to spend his time under this punishment, in a small cell with neither chair nor cot, with no shoes on, only a mattress to sleep on at night, no covers to keep warm and only a slice of bread each morning to eat. He was thus punished, he says, for insolence to guards. They were not really bad, he admits, but a man got tired of being ordered about by other people all the time.

When released, he was given seven dollars pocket money and a railway ticket to the place where he was convicted, namely, St. Paul. From there he hiked and begged rides to Sandusky, Oh., whence the Salvation Army paid his fare to Buffalo. From there he walked to Niagara Falls, a clergyman paid his fare to Toronto, and a little help was given him there which enabled him to reach Montreal, his home town.

Before he went to prison, he was a good man at cutting stone window sills. When he left prison he had an idea that he should be able to make a couple of dollars a day at that work.

In the world that he knew, two dollars a day was a comfortable living. He has somewhat changed his ideas since he has been at liberty, but has not yet nearly become acclimated to civilization as he now finds it. Automobiles, airplanes, short skirts, soft white collars, all these things are strange, unknown mysteries to Albert Gauthier, who is faced with the dual problem of earning a living and learning to live, in an utterly strange environment.

Better Times for Copper Industry

The prevailing low price of copper during the past few years has been offset to some extent by improved methods of concentration and metallurgical treatment and the recent strengthening of copper prices should have a very stimulating effect on the Canadian production.

Red Hot Sun, Kind Cool Moon, India's Amazing Contrast

Cruel Orb of Day Burns from Horizon to Horizon, Until Luna Brings Hours of Rest

Two great discoveries are to be made by those who go to India for the first time, the Indian sun and the Indian moon, writes James Milne in "The London Daily Telegraph". One might say they are India, because they are orbs which govern her day and night in their own way, for nowhere else are there just the same sun and the same moon.

The Indian sun is very cruel—scorching at its worst that the human body, white or brown, almost melts under its torture. You see in the morning a brazen-looking ball on the edge of the far sky. It is angry and flushed and you know that this brazen bolt in the blue will assuredly have you.

He climbs the sky slowly, getting more and more brazen in the face more a creature of fiery particles burning in a furnace. At noon he is in possession of the earth, as well as the sky, and his savagery is unbearable and unsatisfied. He goes on with the clock, grasping everything with his molten arms; your head, your eyes, your desk, or the pavement from which your feet retreat in pain. He balances an hour or two, at that sweet agony, playing with you, and then, sour of aspect, he condescends to grow less afflictive. But he is still angry and when he retires for the night, a ball of red coal, you can fancy you hear him hiss, "Ah! I return to-morrow."

Meanwhile the Indian moon has crept faintly into the sky, and it is the loveliest thing imaginable. It has a face of almost childish delicacy and innocence, a real baby face, until it grows clear and manly, and strong with the fullness of night.

The Indian moon is all a hero, a lovely friend, and you give him your full confidence, as he gives you his soft radiance. He has no arrogance like the sun, only beneficence and a curious mobile warmth of expression. You want to bask in his light and shadow, loving both, because their interplay with each other tells you that he is romantic. It was Byron who said, possibly some foolish night in St. James's Street, that the devil was in the moon. He is not in the Indian moon, maybe because all the Oriental devils with planetary homes are in the Indian sun.

New Cereal Introductions

During the past three years the Cereal Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has introduced for trial in field areas by farmers two early-maturing varieties of spring wheat, bearing the names Garnet and Reward, a heavy-yielding variety of field peas known as Mar-kay and a strong-strawed two-rowed variety of barley known as Duckbill Ottawa No. 57.

ABOUT YOUR NERVES

Nerves are delicate fibres running from the brain to all parts of the body. Some of them give us the sense of touch and feeling; others convey the will to our muscles and enable us to move. When we have an "attack of nerves" it means that the body is in some way out of order and the nerves have become over-sensitive, so that we get neuralgia, nervous headache, sciatica, or some other nerve trouble. Sometimes the nerves get too weak to do the will of the brain, and we get trembling hands or limbs, or perhaps St. Vitus dance. The whole nervous system is fed and kept healthy by your blood. If that is thin and poor, nervous weakness follows. In that case a tonic is needed to build up the blood, so that it may in turn feed the nerves, spine and brain. The very best medicine for enriching the blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You cannot take them without feeling the uplift they give. Your appetite improves, your brain is clearer, you gain strength in every way, and you feel full of new life. One sufferer, Miss Margaret R. MacDonald, Catalone Road, N.S., tells what this medicine did for her. She says:—"I suffered for a long time from severe headache and nervous exhaustion. I tried several kinds of medicine but got no relief until I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these, before long, gave me complete relief. From my own experience I feel that I can not praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly, and would advise anyone who is suffering from headaches or nervous exhaustion to give them a fair trial, as I feel sure the results cannot be anything but satisfactory."

Take these pills as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A NEW RACE OF BEEF ANIMALS

The yak, a native of the plateau of Tibet, is being used by the Experimental Farms in hybridizing experiment to mingle the blood of the buffalo and ordinary cattle. After many attempts to make direct crosses between cattle and the buffalo, failure was the result owing to reproduction difficulties. The yak has been introduced as an intermediary and hopes are entertained that a hardy beef-producing animal will be evolved for grazing in northern territory. The report of the Dominion Animal Husbandman for 1927, published by the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa, contains an account of the work so far accomplished. This breeding work is being carried on at Wainwright, Alberta, in the foothills of the Rockies. The Dominion Animal Husbandman states in his report that the experiment, in so far as it has gone, has been remarkably successful as shown through the numerous excellent individuals combining the blood of the yak and buffalo, the yak and domestic cattle, and their offspring now coming combining the blood of buffalo, yak, and domestic cattle.

11 MILLION MEMBERS

By ANNE ANDERSON PERRY

In a day when the attainment of peace among nations and the encouragement of international understanding occupy the attention of masses of our people, the figures recently issued by the Canadian Red Cross Society, showing the amazing growth of the world league of Junior Red Cross school children, came with added significance.

The Junior Red Cross has extended to forty-one countries of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australasia and the Americas, in which its members number 11,017,358. Organized under the triple slogans of "Health, Service and Good Citizenship" these eleven million school girls and boys are in truth very promising harbingers of peace among the nations, for they are intensely interested in the Juniors of all lands, with whom they continuously exchange correspondence; they work wherever organized toward the same ends in the same ways; they begin to make international understanding something more than a dream. "The front door of any little school which has membership in the Junior Red Cross," says Philip Gibbs in "The People of Destiny," "opens to the wide world, and the spirit of that school is directly in touch with the children of many countries."

Examination of the detailed figures reveals just what this means. It is shown that in 22 European countries there are 2,869,413 Juniors, of whom no less than a million and a half are in the schools of Italy; that Czechoslovakia and the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes adds another half million; that Austria and Hungary have 140,000 and 116,000 respectively—while even Poland has 115,000 Juniors. Other European lands in which this cult has taken firm footing are Belgium—where it is recognized by government and put on the curricula of the national schools. Norway, Britain, France, Lithuania, Latvia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Estonia, Germany and Spain. A remarkable feature of this development of the Junior Red Cross is the very strong hold the order has taken in those middle European states where before the war health knowledge was at its lowest ebb and internecine strife at the highest peak. Another is the amazing growth in Italy where the dictatorship has given the cult its blessing as a valuable means of building good citizens; and a third the small figures for France (20,000), Germany (10,000) and Britain (8,100), where the conservatism of these great stabilizing nations has made progress slow. But in all three the Junior Red Cross has shown its worth and is now being rapidly extended, through the efforts of educationalists themselves.

In the two Americas the Junior Red Cross has attained very impressive proportions, particularly in North America, where there are 157,155 children enrolled in Canada and a yearly increase of twenty thousand; 5,686,407 in the United States and another million in the Philippines, where the Juniors have been organized, as in Middle Europe, in order to raise the standards of health and right living among a backward people.

In Latin countries in South America, where the Junior Red Cross is of very recent growth, there is a total membership of 62,488. In Brazil, Argentina, Ecuador, Panama and Paraguay, all of whom are kept in close touch with the 15,000 Juniors in Spain and with other European lands. In Asia Japan leads with the amazing total of 1,333,640 boys and girls organized as Juniors, while a good beginning has been made in Siam and the Indian Punjab, with 50,000 more in the government schools. In South Africa the Transvaal has been enterprising enough to introduce the Junior Red Cross and some 10,000 children follow the cult in their classrooms, while in Australia proper there are no less than 94,953 Juniors with an additional 12,500 in New Zealand.

Amongst all these millions of Juniors in so many lands there goes on every year, with always increasing volume, a continuous correspondence. This takes the form of bulky portfolios prepared in classrooms by the children and then forwarded to other classrooms, mayhap across the world. These fascinating compendiums are like nothing so much as glorified scrap books. They contain many delightful letters written by children, say in Czechoslovakia, to those in Canada, or by Japanese Juniors to their brothers and sisters in South America, all of the children concerned being not more than eight to twelve years of age. There is excellent craftsmanship in composition, writing, illustration and explanation. Frequently the fauna and flora, with resources and products of the country of origin are exhibited in attractive manner, while the habits, schools, sports and feelings of the little writers are realistically presented. The arrival or departure of one of these portfolios is an affair of moment in any "Junior" classroom where all the children take the keenest interest in both preparation and reception of these treasures.

During the past year 152 such portfolios from Japan, Britain, Middle Europe, Australia, the Philippines or United States were received in many parts of Canada and 191 carefully prepared volumes were despatched to the ends of the earth for Juniors abroad. So that on personal touch and ever increasing knowledge among the children of many countries there is being laid a foundation for better understanding and international relationships—than those of the ignorance, suspicion and prejudice which have too often pertained in the past. It is one of the hopes of the world that there exists such a league of children allied in the cause of health, service, good citizenship and international goodwill. It is indeed hard to over-estimate its importance for as Philip Gibbs says, "the possibilities of better things to come are shown by the work of the Junior Cross and it is in my opinion so inspiring a lesson to the world that it ought to fire the imagination of every civilized people so that there would be a never greater world-wide league of children on this model. Such a league would be a greater promise to use than any League of Nations which may now be formulated."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS WIN GREAT PRAISE

Many Mothers Always Keep Them in the House.

Thousands of mothers state that they know of no other medicine for little ones to equal Baby's Own Tablets—that they always keep the Tablets in the home as a preventive of childhood ailments, or if sickness does suddenly grip their little ones they feel safe with such a remedy at hand.

Concerning the use of the Tablets Mrs. Donat Plouffe, Tinglewick, Que., writes—"I have nothing but praise for Baby's Own Tablets. They are the only medicine I have ever given my two little ones and I am glad to state that the Tablets have always kept them in perfect health. I feel so safe with the Tablets that I always keep a box in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thoroughly laxative. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth painless. The Tablets are absolutely safe, being guaranteed free from all injurious drugs. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Living Costs

Victoria Times (Lib.): Figures just published by the Canadian Department of Labor show that what one dollar would buy in the way of necessities of life in 1913 now commands from $1.55 to $1.58. Canadians need not be unduly alarmed about this condition. The year 1928, compared with the years since 1922, shows very little difference. In comparison with other countries, our advance of 58 per cent over pre-war living costs compares favorably with the 9 per cent increase in the United States and the 65 per cent in the United Kingdom.

DRINKS WITH EASE

"Is he a hard drinker?"
"No; he drinks with the greatest ease."

Sherbrooke Tribune (Lib.): Though the maple sugar industry is barely developed in certain parts of Canada, it is very important in Quebec's wide territory, as in certain districts of the Provinces of Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The number of those who now manufacture maple sugar in Canada is estimated at more than 50,000.

PARENTS UNDERSTOOD THIS BABY'S LANGUAGE

"We thought we were going to lose our baby, teething," says a Kentucky mother. "He couldn't digest anything and was getting thinner every day. After one of his fretful, crying nights, I thought of Castoria and got some. A few drops made him comfortable, and after a few doses, he seemed like a different baby." Doctors everywhere recommend purely vegetable, harmless Fletcher's Castoria for colds, constipation, colic and other ills of babies and children, and millions of mothers know its gentle influence is best. Avoid imitations. The Fletcher signature is the mark of genuine Castoria.

Beware! Flu May Affect Kidneys!

How often people say, "I never had kidney trouble 'til after the 'flu'!" Wise Nature, trying to get rid of poisons, sends them to kidneys and liver. But these organs, weakened by illness, can't stand the strain. The poisons are retained in the system. Then come the aches, soreness, loss of appetite, debility, lassitude. What a pity, when a stimulant diuretic, taken in time, might have helped.

For over 50 years thousands have depended on Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, a physician's prescription, made of Nature's herbs. A gentle stimulant for kidneys and liver, it urges perspiratory glands to action, and thus helps shift the excess load from the kidneys.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy contains no harmful drugs. Costs little. Thousands have written, telling how it helped them. Get your bottle today. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Toronto, Ontario.

THE FOLLY OF PROPHECY!

Fifty Years Ago, "Truth" Scoffed at Flotation of Mad C. P. R. Scheme

In these times of rapid development in all the spheres of human activity, men are becoming notably cautious in their forecasts of future conditions. Affairs are moving too fast. But it can be readily understood how, in the last century when the years brought comparatively less in the way of phenomenal advancement, the various authorities of the times were prepared to estimate the probabilities with less reserve. Perhaps they were justified, in part, by the steady trend of the age and in the light of past progress.

But the folly of prophecy, however well-founded it may appear, is all too evident in the following article which is reproduced from an 1881 edition of "Truth", one of England's leading financial reviews. In our knowledge of Canada's subsequent strides, and of the present prosperity in the far-reaching departments of our pioneer railroad, this article makes interesting and gratifying reading to contemporary Canadians. It also throws some light on the antipathy which hampered the earliest activities of the Canadian Pacific, illustrating too, how the prejudice of a conservative public may impede many a venture that is both sound and worthy of support.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad Company has begun, I see, to launch its bonds. A group of Montreal and New York bankers have undertaken to float ten million dollars' worth of the company's land grant bonds, and the Bank of Montreal, with its usual courage, has taken one-fourth of the entire loan. This announcement looks as if the Canadians are going to raise the necessary capital on the other side of the water, but I have a shrewd suspicion that they have no real intention of doing anything of the kind. The New Yorkers are keen enough gamblers and reckless enough at times, I admit, and yet it is impossible to believe that they are such fools as to put their money into this mad project. I would as soon credit them with a willingness to subscribe hard cash in support of a scheme for the utilization of icebergs.

The Canadian Pacific Railway will run, if it is ever finished, through a country frost bound for seven or eight months in the year, and will connect with the western part of the Dominion, a province which embraces about as forbidding a country as any on the face of the earth. British Columbia, they say, have forced on them the execution of this part of the contract under which they became incorporated with the Dominion and believe that prosperity will come to them when the line is made. This is a delusion on their part. British Columbia is a barren, cold, mountain country that is not worth keeping. It would never have been inhabited at all, unless by trappers of the Hudson's Bay Company, had the "gold fever" not taken a party of mining adventures there, and ever since that fever died down the place has been going from bad to worse. Fifty railroads would not galvanize it into prosperity.

Nevertheless, the Canadian Government has fairly launched into this project and I have no doubt the English public will soon be asked to further it with their cash. The parade of selling bonds in New York and Montreal is the new way of doing business that "syndicates," bankers and loan contractors have adopted in order that it may seem that they have faith in the schemes they father. I doubt if ten millions of dollars of ready cash can be found in all of Canada for this or any other work of utility at a pinch, but the Canadians are not such idiots as to part with one dollar of their own if they can borrow their neighbors'. The Canadians spend money and we provide it. That has been the arrangement hitherto, and it has worked out splendidly—for the Canadians—too well for them to try any other scheme with the Canadian Pacific, which they must know is never likely to pay a single red cent of interest on the money that may be sunk in it. A friend of mine told me—and he knew what he was talking about—that he did not believe the much touted Manitoba settlement would hold out many years. The people who have gone there cannot stand the coldness of the winters.

Men and cattle are frozen to death in numbers that would rather startle the intending settler if he knew; and those who are not killed outright are often maimed for life by frost-bites. Its street nuisances kill people with malarial, or drive them mad with plagues of insects; and to keep themselves alive during the long winter they have to imitate the habits of the Esquimaux. Those who want to know what it is like should read the not-yet-forgotten books of Colonel Butler His "Great Lone Land" is the land of which the Canadian Pacific Railway has yet five and twenty million acres to sell, and it is through a death-dealing region of this kind that the new railway is to run.

As the bonds "secured" on this land or others guaranteed by the Dominion government are sure to be offered in this market by "Bankers" and others forming the company, I think a word or two on Canadian finances in general would be in season. Canada is one of the most over-rated colonies we have, but is heartily "loyal" and makes the loyalty pay. Its astute inhabitants know well how to work on John Bull's susceptibilities, and I have seen nothing finer in the way of advertising than poor Lord Lorne's "Tour" now in progress. He has gone to the north but just at the right time and the gushing accounts we are receiving from the "specials" who are accompanying him are admirably adapted to create a belief that the true land of promise is to be found there at last. With such soil to till, and among such queen worshippers, the distressed British farmer would be in bliss. Of course they who choose can believe all that. For my part I know of only one province in the whole Dominion—that of Ontario. "It is the only province," as a shrewd land jobber said to me once, "where you can lend money on land with any hope of ever seeing your own again." As for the country as a whole it is poor and it is crushed with debt. The supreme government owes about thirty-five million pounds altogether, and every province has its separate debt, as also has almost every collection of shanties calling itself a city. The province and city of Quebec are both notoriously bankrupt, and the latter was obliged to go to Paris with its last loan, probably because nobody would lend it here.

Last year the country had the benefit of a good crop and a good market here so that it did a little better, but generally it has had hard work to make both ends meet, and often couldn't. Nearly every year it comes for a new loan or two and once it is fairly committed to making this new railway I see nothing before it but bankruptcy. While the money is being spent all will go well enough, perhaps, but in the end the Dominion will have to go into liquidation. It amazes me that its stocks stand where they do as things are, but if people took the trouble to look beneath the surface, prices would be very different. One of these days when the load gets too heavy, Ontario is pretty certain to go over to the States into which it dovetails and where its best trade outlet is. When the day comes the "Dominion" will disappear. With the contingency ahead and with the prospect of another fifty million pounds or so to be added to the debt, can it be said that Canadian unguaranteed, four per cent are worth their present price? This "Dominion" is, in short a "fraud" all through and is destined to burst up like any other fraud. Then, and not I suppose till then, the British taxpayer will ask why we "guaranteed" so much of this sham government debt.

CANADA'S FIRST SUMMER NATIONAL HOLIDAY.

With the approach of the anniversary of Victoria Day, the eyes of Canadians will be lifted from narrow work-a-day horizons to wider visions of the great country of which they are citizens. Deep within the national heart is seated the love, pride and patriotism which will take the opportunity afforded by the twenty-fourth of May to express itself.

The occasion would fall of the purpose for which it is set apart as a national holiday, did it only stir the people into a froth of pleasure, seeking and holiday making. To deepen reverence for the flag, under whose protection Canada enjoys untold immunity from trouble to encourage patronage of Canadian products, to promote the growth of Canadian progress, to encourage the production of Canadian literature and art, and to live up to the traditions and ideals of the Canada of the past should be the objective of every celebration of Canada's national holidays.

THE SPORTSMEN OF THIS PROVINCE ARE ORGANIZING FOR THE PROTECTION OF FISH & GAME

It is apparent that the great movement, started last Fall when the Province of Quebec Association for the Protection of Fish and Game tendered a spectacular banquet to the Honorable J. E. Perrault, then Minister of Colonization, Mines and Fisheries, is meeting with success.

Since then many branches of that Association have been formed and the latest County to fall in line is Pontiac.

At a meeting held at Shawville, Que., last Wednesday, the 15th inst., a local branch was organized. Mr. W. R. McDonald, M.P. for Pontiac was chairman, of the meeting and Mr. Lew B. Smith, an active sportsman of Quyon, Que., secretary.

The Montreal delegation from the parent body comprised Mr. C. de B. Bouthillier, Vice-President, Mr. D. E. Saunders, Chairman of the Enforcement Committee and Mr. E. A. Cartier, General-Secretary.

The new Branch will confine their activities to the County of Pontiac only and Deputy-Wardens, residing in different parts of the County will be sworn in and act under the direction of the Officers.

An Executive Committee will be elected to help in the administration, Mr. A. Lambert Pimlott, of Quyon, Que., Vice-President and Mr. Lew B. Smith, also of Quyon, Que., Secretary.

After the election of these officers a membership list was opened and the entire meeting almost joined to a man.

THREEFOLD EDUCATION

Dr. Rexford once said: "Education in the truest interpretation of the word is three fold: Physical, Mental and Spiritual. Only by developing all three can the child be truly educated."

Are we giving the child practical lessons that will be of vital value to him on the care of his body? Are we making the most of the first ten "impressionable" years, in teaching him of the deadly effect of that monstrous deceiver, alcohol, on the human body?

In endeavouring to develop the mentality of a child, we should strive to awaken in him a desire to learn more about the world in which he lives - its history, its people, its governments, its business, etc.

A real desire for knowledge is not satisfied in a few school days, but is life long.

It were better never to have lived, than to live without having learned the principles of truth, justice, orderliness and respect for the rights and feelings of others.

The ideal teacher weaves into the loom of each school day, observance and respect for the great Spiritual truths.

Truly, education is Physical, Mental and Spiritual, and the greatest of these is the last.

The above article was written by Mrs. Willard Rexford, Provincial Convener of Education and Better Schools, Quebec Women's Institutes, Ayer's Cliff, Que.

BROWNSBURG

The McGibbon Drive has reached Brownsburg, and is well worth seeing.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Furlong passed through here on Saturday en route to their summer cottage at Lake Louise.

Quite a few from here spent the week-end at Lake Louise, where fishing is good.

Messrs. W. Hewitt and F. Hosgood were in Montreal on Friday, visiting the latter's father, who is still a patient in the Royal Victoria Hospital.

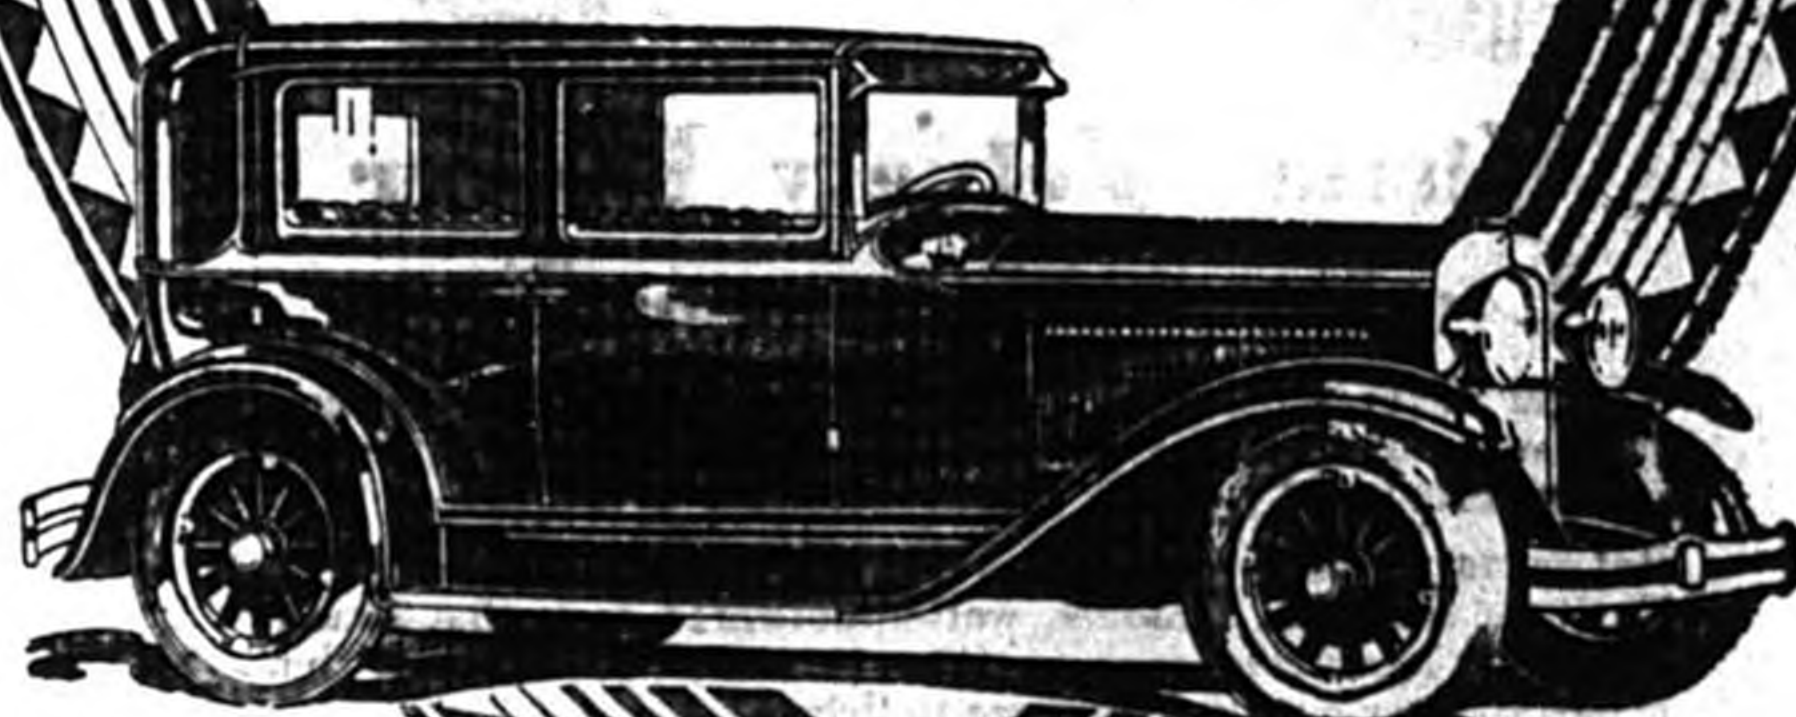

The "Pink Tea" which was held on Friday, 17th., at Mason's Ice Cream Parlor, by the Ladies' Aid of the Maple Ave Baptist Church, Brownsburg, was a decided success, both socially and financially. Thanks to our many friends. Our student, Mr. Earle Riggs just arrived one evening too late for the tea. Never mind more good times coming.

winter is barely over, and no doubt the non-support is merely due to the fear of chills.

The match commenced at 6.30, and the writer could not see any real combination play throughout the game. Mansiel Wilson, centre forward for the Rovers, showed exceptional speed and seemed to be everywhere at once. About the middle of the first half he made a fine run for goal, but an accidental foul prevented his scoring. A free kick was awarded, however, and he scored. Bill Cooley received a kick in the leg and had to retire for a short period. The goalies of each side, Messrs. John Duncan and Russell Graham proved their worth by making many good "saves". The full backs were staunch defenders and it was pretty hard to get by them. Old timer, Dave McCulloch, showed that he was still a power to be reckoned with.

Fred Witham, Alex. McGibbon and others on the Rover team will undoubtedly make good players with a little more experience. Scout leader Frank Vowles was tireless in his play. It appeared as if the Vets were in for a licking. Towards the end of the first half they commenced to puff and seemed a little weak at the knees.

With the wind behind them at the second period they commenced to make their attack. Play was carried into the vicinity of the Rover's goal and Jas. Seary scored with a beautiful kick. This was followed by another goal by Bill Cooley. The Scouts pulled themselves together & drove the play to the Vet's end. It was of no use, they could not score on account of the strong defence. The linesmen were kept busy running up and down, the play becoming spasmodical.

The finish saw the Vet's leading 2 to 1. Mr. Butler was the referee and his decisions were fair. By picking out the outstanding players on each side, Brownsburg should be able to produce a formidable team. What the forwards must concentrate on, however, is combination play. A spectacular run is fine, but good team work will produce better results.

Both teams cheered one another at the conclusion of a clean match, and the Rovers entertained with their famous "War-cry."

Quebec Safety Council

A few members of the C. I. L. Group journeyed by car on Monday, May 20th., to attend the first Industrial Safety Conference of the Province of Quebec Safety League, at the Montreal Technical School. The writer understands that the speakers among whom were Mayor Houde and Mr. R. B. Morley, gave interesting lectures on the subject of "Safety." Log Drive.

Much interest is being taken in the drive at present in progress on the West River. If we could only get such a crowd at our Dances or matches, we'd be well away.

WAY DOWN EAST

The popularity of that old-time favorite drama has dimmed somewhat with the years, but that of the seaside resorts of the Maritime Provinces shines brighter than ever.

This is especially true of Picton with its tempting menu of salt and fresh water pleasures. Picton Lodge with its completely serviced rustic dog cabins, overlooks Northumberland Strait, and a beautiful blue freshwater lagoon, which in turn is cut off from the sea by a narrow bar of sand. No more delightful resort could be imagined than this forest-backed seaside haven.

BROWNSBURG NEWS

A most successful concert was held on May 16th. in Gayette's Hall, by the Girl Guides and Brownies of Brownsburg. When one considers that the latter organization has only been in existence some three months, the remarkable showing by these little girls must reflect great credit on their trainers.

Every item on the programme was carried through with vim and enthusiasm by the Guides and Brownies and the large audience was kept interested and amused right through to the very end. The programme opened with "God Save the King" and flag raising.

The Chair lady's remarks on both organizations enlightened the audience as to what was being done for the girls and in view of the subsequent acts, it was easy to see that the girls had received very thorough training. Mrs. Campbell, as usual, made a capable chair lady.

With very limited space, one can only mention the outstanding items. "Madam G. W. Whilken's Beauty Parlor" a two act comedy kept everyone laughing, particularly when Winnie White dropped a basin of water by accident. Mabel Monk was really brilliant as the Irish lady who needed Beauty treatment. Evelyn Highfield and the "Nigger" were also very good. In fact they were all so good that no individual mention should really be made. Eileen McGibbon made a very charming "Madam" and conducted herself well against the frate ladies who wanted their money back, when they failed to please their husbands. The make-up was so good that the writer could not recognize the other actresses.

The entertainment by the Merry Makers, (Red Rose Patrol) was very interesting and well thought out. Of the songs and jokes, etc., one would favor the recitation of "That Old Gang Of Mine" as outstanding.

An excellent piano solo by Miss McQuinn and later a duet with Miss Galbraith was well received.

A very pretty dance by the Forget-Me-Not Patrol and Brownies was enjoyed. The dresses were beautiful and the dance carried out so spontaneously as to captivate the audience.

Mabel Monk sang a very nice Irish song, and the Blackbird Patrol gave a fine presentation in "By a Romyany Camp Fire."

The writer could keep on talking about the exceptional programme but is afraid of being censured by the editor. Everyone in the audience enjoyed themselves to the last and left with the satisfied feeling of "money well spent."

Dance

Do the people of Brownsburg need rejuvenating by "Monkey Glands" from the absence of members of this community at the Social Club Dance on May 17th., the writer would judge that an epidemic had spread through the village. When we give you what you want, you don't want it. The dance was successful — oh yes we cleared expenses alright — thanks to the little of visitors from Lachute.

They know where to come to enjoy themselves. The Social Club will have to give you more value for money at the next dance, to be held in the middle of June; the hall will be decorated and streamers may be thrown. Come on girls, jolly up your reluctant swains; you have a month to get around them. If you are conspicuous by your absence, at the next dance we'll hold a Court of Enquiry.

Track Section

This body was fortunate in having with them last Saturday, a well known trainer and two outstanding athletes from the North Branch Y.M.C.A. of Montreal.

An interesting lecture was given the boys by Mr. E. Cook, covering Track Racing, Sprinting, Javelin Throwing, Jumping and etc. He also demonstrated the correct method of rubbing down after training. Many valuable pointers were learned, and the boys are extremely grateful for the assistance that has been given by the afore-mentioned Club.

Mr. Cook, Mr. George Barry (well known runner) and Mr. Hayes, the next day went on a fishing trip, but the writer does not know how big the catch was. They returned to Montreal promising to make another trip later in the season, and may possibly bring others with them. It is hoped the boys will be so advanced by this time, as to make a good showing. With the enthusiastic officials that they have, the writer is sure of the result.

Beloell Trip by "C" Team.

Brownsburg "C" Team played a return match at Beloell on May 17th. The members of this team, left early by car, full of confidence, and were in time to witness a football match between C X L Team and Nomads, of Montreal, who lost 4 to 1. Alas, we don't know what happened to our team, but they went down to defeat. The scores were as follows:—

Brownsburg "C"
J. Galbraith	145	159	150 454
J. Duncan	152	185	150 487
J. Hazel		153	153 306

We don't know what the Brownsburg boys did up there but they came back well pleased with the hospitality they had received. They also brought back a challenge from the 2nd. Beloell football team. Now you Brownsburg footballers - accept or get off the earth.

Foot Ball Match - Old Vets versus Rover Scouts.

A football match was played on the Picnic Grounds on Tuesday, May 21st. There was no charge, but the spectators were few. Of course the

Schedule of Proposed Rates by the Gatineau Electric Light Company

Through the courtesy of your Town Council, the Gatineau Electric Power Company were permitted to address the members to extend the standard rates of the Company which have been rapidly accepted by the majority of Municipalities supplied by the Company.

We therefore desire to take this opportunity of explaining to the public what these rates are in order to show the advantages to be gained by adopting them.

we offer for LIGHTING:

$1.00 per month plus 5c. per kilowatt hour for energy consumed.

The gross bill subject to a discount of 10% on payment of account within 10 days of rendering.

Minimum monthly bill $1.00.

COOKING:

50c. per element per month plus 1 1/4c. per kilowatt hour for energy consumed.

The gross bill subject to a discount of 10% on payment of account within 10 days of rendering.

Minimum monthly bill 50c. per element.

STREET LIGHTING:

$12.50 per lamp per year per 60

The rates at present in force in your municipality are as follows:

LIGHTING:

First 50 k.w.h.—10c. per k.w.h. net.

Second 50 k.w.h.—8c. per k.w.h. net.

Should the above schedule of rates meet with the approval of the electors, we ask that they grant to the Company, the right to exclusively use the streets and public places of your Municipality for the placing of the necessary poles and equipment for the distribution of light, heat and power to the inhabitants for a period of ten years.

When the electors consider the fact that the Gatineau Electric Power Co. is now owned and operated by a Company which has vast power resources at its disposal for sale to industries in the Municipalities connected to its lines, and is primarily interested in the building up of these territories for the sale of electrical energy, then it needs no further explanation of why your municipality should grant a franchise to the Company to protect its present and future investments which are so closely united with your own interests.

"SALADA" TEA

'Fresh from the gardens'

"White Lies"

She Hated Her Brother's Way of Life—But She Had to Shield Him!

By RUTH ALEXANDER

"There's just one thing more I ought to mention, and that is that I've no intention of marrying again."

Prue Moore finished. She stared at her prospective employer, and her little chin went several inches higher.
It was a rounded chin, dimpled, but capable of becoming stubborn when occasion arose. Such an occasion seemed this moment when Mr. Julian Strange, the taciturn, rather tired-looking man standing by the fire in his great neglected studio had the temer-ity to suggest that the girl he was engaging as his little daughter's governess would naturally set her cap at him.

"I'm going to hate him!" thought Prue. "I shall never stay!"—and longed to end the interview with a chilly: "If that's the sort of idea you have of me, hadn't we better decide I'm quite unsuitable for the job?"

Then she thought of Henry, who was always losing his work, and of Nora, who simply must have another year at school, and swallowed her pride with a gulp.

"That needn't worry either of us," she told him distantly, chin still well in the air. "In fact," she added, on a sudden thought, "I'm engaged."

"Then we shall suit each other admirably, and I shall expect you on Monday, Miss Moore."

Julian Strange took her hand, and his rather stern face lighted up with an unexpectedly sweet and twinkling smile.

"I'm going to like him," she thought.
"It won't be so bad, after all."

At first Prue felt somewhat forlorn in the big, silent London house, with just the servants and the housekeeper and little Joan, who had been thoroughly spoiled, and was at times a perfect little beast and at others entirely lovable.

There was a garden which was a great delight to Prue; it led out of Mr. Strange's studio, unfortunately, but she soon learned his habits and avoided going through when he was at work. Her one endeavor, indeed, after that remark of his, was to avoid Mr. Strange. He was an artist, and painted still life pictures of flowers and fruit and pottery.

"Someone rang you up to-day, Miss Moore," he told her one afternoon, when she encountered him unexpectedly. "Henry," he said his name was; I didn't catch the surname.
Your fiancé, I suppose?"

"Yes," she acquiesced, her heart sinking a little.

She was vexed with her brother;
she had told him especially not to telephone her. Mr. Strange might not like it, and, with the family dependent on her, she mustn't run any risks of losing her job. She hadn't meant to tell that fib, all the same. Henry had practically forced it on her.

"I asked him to come and see you here whenever he likes," he went on kindly. "Don't be afraid you'll disturb me. The house is big enough."

"Thank you!"

Prue felt a rush of gratitude. But she was worried about Henry. Henry wasn't the sort to refuse any invitation; he was a charming and attractive youth, but he didn't in the least mind sponging. Besides, his affectionate messages always meant that he was hard up. Probably he had lost his job again and wanted money.

When Henry called next afternoon
Prue was playing games with little Joan in the garden. She tiptoed through the studio fearing to disturb the artist, and, meeting her brother in the hall, enjoined him to silence as she led the way back again. But Mr.
Strange looked up as they passed, and Prue stopped and made the introductions.

"This is Henry!" she murmured, slightly tremulous, for fear he should demand Henry's surname and explanations. But Mr. Strange was much too engrossed in his work.

"Ah," he said absently, "good afternoon!"

"How do you do?" Henry replied with that engaging heartiness that always earned him friends—at first.
"That's a lovely group you're painting, sir! A valuable piece, I should say."

Mr. Strange glanced at him with a spark of interest in his eyes, and removed a brush from his mouth.

"Yes," he answered, "Old Dresden.
A collector's piece. It is practically priceless."

Henry's eyes gleamed as he surveyed the exquisite little porcelain group. Prue put her arm through Henry's and tugged at him.

"We're disturbing Mr. Strange, Henry. Let's go into the garden."

And Henry allowed himself to be drawn away.

"How did you manage to get off from the office?" she asked apprehensively.

Henry shrugged his shoulders.

"I've left," he told her light-heartedly. "Couldn't stick the old blighter any longer! We had a tearing row."

"Oh, Henry!" she cried despairing-ly. "You can't afford to go on throwing up jobs like that!"

"Don't you worry," he reassured her, with a swagger. "I'll soon get another."

That was the first of several visits for Henry, till presently it became a habit for him to call every day, generally in time for lunch or tea.

Fortunately, Mr. Strange was so absorbed in his new picture that he did not appear to notice whether Henry was there or not, though Prue occasional caught him standing at the studio door and gazing at her and the child in the garden.

The task of finding Henry's new job

seemed a very long one, and there came a day when Prue's little chin took on its stubborn angle.

"I'm sorry, Henry, but you don't seem to be bothering at all, and I really can't afford to lend you any more money! And I don't think we ought to let Mr. Strange supply you with any more lunches and teas!"

"How do you suppose I am going to live, then?" Henry demanded.

"I really don't know," said Prue, at the end of her patience. "I suppose you could get work as a hall-porter, or a dustman, or something."

Henry glared. He seized his hat and lunged out. Prue instantly remorseful, ran after him.

"Henry, I didn't mean it! Of course I'll give you some more—"

But Henry had gone.

She spent two miserable days, alternately worrying over the idea that she might have driven him to suicide and comforting herself with the belief that he would come back. Then on the third morning she returned from a walk to find him on the doorstep.

"Oh, Henry, I'm so glad you're back! Do come into the nursery and have lunch!" She was almost tearful with thankfulness.

Henry magnanimously allowed himself to be fed before making any explanations. Then he said:

"No, I haven't got a job, but I'm on the track of one. I was offered thirty bob a week yesterday."

"I am so glad! It isn't much, but it's something to be going on with!"
cried Prue happily.

"What! Thirty bob! D'you think I'd take a job of that sort?"

"You don't mean to say you turned it down?"

"I certainly did."

Prue was thoroughly roused. Her chin went up.

"So you'd rather live on my money and Mr. Strange's food than work at a small salary!" she flashed at him.
"Go away from this house, and don't you dare to come again!"

"Look here, Prue, I've got something else in view, but I can't go after it without money."

You turn down an offer, and then expect me to supply you with money! If you don't go I'll call Mr. Strange!"
she stormed at him.

"I'm going!" said Henry furiously, and went out.

Prue stood stock still. Her anger abated as quickly as it had risen. She held her breath and waited for the sound of the front door. She crept to the top of the stairs and listened.
Everything was quiet. Perhaps he had actually gone to Mr. Strange for money! She ran noiselessly down.

The studio door was open, and Henry was in there alone. He was standing as if fascinated before the Dresden china group. Suddenly he pulled a silk handkerchief from his pocket, wrapped the ornament in it tucked it under his coat, then, with a quick glance right and left, made for the garden door. Before he had reached it Prue was at his side.

"Henry, what are you thinking of?"
she cried in a distressed whisper.

"Give it to me! You can't—steal!"

She snatched at the bundle.

"Let go, you little fool! You'll break it!"

They struggled. The silk handkerchief fell to the floor. All at once there was a sharp, ominous crack.
Henry let go his hold immediately, leaped through the door into the garden, and left Prue staring down at the fragments of the Dresden group.

Dazedly she heard Henry's footsteps running on the gravel path, heard other footsteps at her side. There was a dead silence, broken by the slight scraping sound of Henry's boots as he scaled the wooden fence. Involuntarily she moved swiftly, so as to interpose herself between the fugitive and Mr. Strange's gaze.

"I'm sorry!" she gasped. "I was—just admiring it—and I broke it! I did it!" Beneath her quivering mouth her little chin was resolute.

"I'll pay for it—it you give me time!
I'm dreadfully sorry!"

The storm she expected did not break. Instead, she heard Mr.
Strange's voice gentle almost to tenderness:

"You couldn't pay for it, Prue. It's a tragedy—but you didn't do it."

"I did!" she cried hysterically.

"You blessed little white liar! I came in and saw the whole thing!
Don't worry; I shan't blame Henry."

And she found herself folded in a pair of strong, warm arms.

Somehow the amazing happening didn't seem amazing at all to Prue.
She forgot Henry and everything else in the wide world till Julian whispered:

"There's just one thing, Prue—your fiance!"

"That was another fib?" she confessed chokingly into his coat. "You see, you said—you weren't going to marry again!"

Prue caught her breath.

"I wasn't—till I met you!" said
Julian Strange, and kissed her.

The Heart of Winter

Midwinter—but the bright noon sun
Spreads summer warmth on all it shines upon.

Howling winds, whirling snow,
Biting cold, seem things of long ago.
Blue is the river, blue the sky;
Soft as springtime clouds the snow-
drifts lie.

And crowning winter, surly, wild,
Proves at heart as gentle as a child.

Street and Highway Trees

The Ontario Horticultural Association have done a good service in issuing recommendations for the guidance of municipalities in planting and caring for street and roadside shade trees. The Association, composed of delegates from all parts of the province, has realized the need of some better policy to take care of this matter. Many miles of highway are without trees of any kind and thousands of trees that once were an ornament to the country have been mutilated for the accommodation of companies stringing wire lines through the country. At the convention held in Toronto recently a strong appeal was made to the delegates to do their utmost to save the shade trees and so help to preserve the scenic beauty of their neighborhoods. To the extent that this is done will the country attract tourists and derive revenue accordingly. Recommendations for the guidance of municipalities were brought in by a tree committee appointed a year ago. These dealt with the varieties that should be planted in towns and country places, and the distances apart they should be planted. For the central and southern parts of the province such trees as White Ash, Hard Maple, Pin Oak, Tulip Tree and Oriental Plane may with advantage be planted and not closer than 40 feet. For wider streets and boulevards the distance should be increased to 55 or 60 feet and on roads 70 feet. The varieties for the country planting should include Elms, Red Oak, Sugar Maple, White Ash, and Walnut, where these are indigenous to the locality. The Soft Maple so commonly planted, was regarded as less suitable than many other varieties except for northern areas where they make a rather slow growth and mature into a more desirable shape. Such unsuitable trees as the Manitoba Maple and Poplars, including Cottonwoods, the committee considered, should not be planted on any street or roadway.

Handsome is as Handsome Does

A Parisian Beauty Doctor, or "cosmetic surgeon," as she prefers to call herself, has been trying to persuade the German people that it is a sin to be ugly. She did not suggest that the Germans, as a race, are less fortunate than other races in those physical gifts which are commonly described as "good looks," but simply that, having them, they neglect to improve upon them by art. To be content to show your features as Heaven meant you to show them she regards as a sin—the "sin of ugliness." Yet people are not ugly unless they look ugly, and it is within the power of us all not to look ugly. Ugliness has nothing to do with features or hair or coloring or anything else that shows upon the surface. We may have features like the Apollo Belvedere himself and yet be repellent, if our tempers are bad. "Handsome is as handsome does," says the old proverb, which means that if you are courteous and chivalrous you will look happy and others will like you for it. A ready smile wins more hearts than millions, but a scowling face will soon make a Croesus bankrupt of his friends.—Montreal Star.

No Quarter

Halifax Herald (Cons.): The lash for drug peddlers may sound like harsh punishment, but it is possible to conceive of a more unspeakable, a more despicable crime? . . . It is useless to waste soft sentiments over criminals who peddle drugs. There is a deliberate act, a cold mercantile decision to capitalize a habit that grips its victims and drags them down to the depths of physical, mental and moral degradation. No quarter for the drug peddler, is a decision that will meet with the complete approval of the citizenship of the Dominion.

A sweet little thing who didn't care any more for a nickel than she did for her right eye was having a lunch with one of those daddies. "Tomorrow is my birthday," she mentioned cooly. Every day was her birthday to Dora. "Well, here's $50," her escort replied, "and I wish you a happy birthday." "What! On $50?"

Onions are said to throw off violet rays. We suspect that the scientist who asserted that had not smelled many violets.

Water Noises

When I am playing by myself
And all the boys are lost around,
Then I can hear the water go;
It makes a little talking sound.
Along the rocks below the tree,
I see it ripple up and wink;
And I can hear it saying on,
"And do you think? and do you think?"
A bug shoots by that snaps and ticks,
And a bird flies up beside the tree
To get into the sky to sing.
I hear it say, "Kildee, kildee!"
Or else a yellow corn comes down
To splash a while and have a drink.
And when she goes I still can hear
The water say, "And do you think?"

Revolvers and the Police

Toronto Star (Ind.): A newspaper in North Carolina says the people of the United States have a good lesson to learn from Canadians in the way of respect for law and order. It is, we think, true. But we should, in Canada, see to it that our police do not forfeit a reputation long earned and deserved, and do not get into the habit of using revolvers too readily, as, of late, they have occasionally done.

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If the name Bayer appears, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches are dispelled by Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Aspirin—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Aspirin;
it does NOT affect the heart

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) indicating Bayer Manufacture. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assure the public against imitations, the Tablets will be stamped with their "Bayer Cross" trademark.

NICE WORDS WON'T DYE a dress or coat...

Neither pretty pictures nor colorful adjectives will dye a dress or coat. It takes real dyes to do the work; dyes made from true anilines.

Next time you have dyeing to do, try Diamond Dyes.
See how easy it is to use them. Then compare the results. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree they are better dyes.

You get none of that re-dyed look from Diamond Dyes;
no streaking or spotting. Just fresh, crisp, bright new color. And watch the way they keep their brilliance through wear and washing. They are better dyes because they contain plenty of real anilines—from three to five times more than other dyes. But you pay no more for them than for ordinary dyes.

The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original
"all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material.
It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye for silk or wool only. With it you can dye your valuable articles of silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. Remember this when you buy. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package will dye every kind of goods, including silk and wool. Your dealer has both packages.

Canada's Land of The Midnight Sun

Director of Northwest Territories Describes Vast Section Bordering Mackenzie River

Canada, too, has her "Land of the Midnight Sun," and the little that is known of the Great Valley of the Mackenzie River and the northern coast of Canada, inhabited chiefly by Indians and Eskimos, is vividly described in Natural History, journal of the American Museum of Natural History, by O. S. Finnie, Director of the Northwest Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior of Canada. He writes:

"One million three hundred thousand square miles of Canada lying north of 60 are known as the Northwest Territories. They extend easterly from the delta of the Mackenzie River to Baffin Island, a distance of approximately 2,000 miles, and reach more than 1,000 miles from north to south, from Cape Columbia to latitude 50 degrees north, including all the islands in the Canadian sector as far as the Pole.

"Neither the natives, nor the fauna, nor the other resources of so vast a country can be adequately described in a short article. From agricultural lands in the southern areas the country stretches to the world's most northerly headland; the natives include Indians and Eskimos speaking three distinct languages and living under as many sets of conditions. The wild life covers almost every species of land and sea mammal known to Canada, and the other potential resources of the Territories are found under a variety of conditions that differ in climate and accessibility.

DISTRICT OF MACKENZIE.

"The District of Mackenzie, the most important of the three main divisions of the Northwest Territories, can be most readily approached by the route leading north by rail from Edmonton, Alberta, to the southern watershed of the Mackenzie River. Fort Smith, the administrative centre within the district, is situated on the Slave River in latitude 60 degrees north, where a series of rapids forms a barrier to river navigation. At this point we find ourselves in the hands of the Chipewyan Indians.

"Should we listen to the casual conversation of the crowd we would hear English, French, Cree and Chipewyan used impartially for, although the language of the district is Chipewyan, the Cree from the south are well represented, and the traders and missionaries are chiefly of British and French extraction.

"Fort Smith, situated on a high, sandy plateau overlooking the river, is typical of many of the northern posts. Its principal features being government offices, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police Post, a wireless telegraph station, a mission church and house with hospital and school, and establishments of the principal fur traders of the North. To these should be added the log homes of the natives and a host of dogs, which constitute the motive power of the country's winter transport. In winter Fort Smith is dark and bleak and windswept, and in summer it is a noted gathering place for all varieties of insect pests known to the northland, while for weeks daylight never fades entirely from the sky.

"Immediately to the west lies a country of alternate swamps and low sand ridges, difficult of access, but valuable because it has given perfect protection to the only remaining herd of American bison that has never known captivity. In 1901 the Dominion Government prohibited the killing of these animals. An estimate made about twenty years later placed their total at approximately 1,500. To these have been added recently 6,000 young buffalo from the Wainwright National Park, and it is confidently hoped that the next decade will see an increase in their numbers great enough to make them an important factor in the food supply of the district and possibly to warrant licensed hunting under the supervision of official game wardens.

FUR RESOURCES.

"The fur resources of the Fort Smith area have been intensively drawn upon for more than 100 years, but still the trapper thrives. Each winter yields pelts of bear, wolves, lynx, colored foxes, fisher, otter, marten, mink, skunk and muskrat—fox, mink and rat predominating. It is possible, however, that the time is not far distant when fur farming will bring to many a better living than is to be secured today from the taking of wild animals.

"From Fort Smith to the Arctic Ocean, a distance by water of 1,400 miles, river transportation is uninterrupted. Large and comfortable steamboats serve the public, and already the excellence of their service, the novelty of the life of the lower river settlements and the river scenery have popularized them among those on the outlook for summer tours in little-known lands.

"Two hundred miles of river, winding slowly through the country of the buffalo and the moose, lead from Fort Smith to Great Slave Lake. One legend of the source of the name 'Great Slave' tells how, even before the advent of the trader, a white child was sold as a slave to an Indian tribe which had its home on the shores of the lake. The child grew to be a man above the ordinary stature, with long fair hair and light blue eyes, who lived a long life among his Indian masters. His presence led to the area being known as the 'land of the great white slave,' eventually abbreviated to Great Slave. The story further states that the child slave was the rightful heir to the throne of France—an interesting echo of the rumors spread by the devotees of Napoleon that the son of Marie Louise had not really died at Vienna, but had been spirited away by the wily Metternich.

"Another legend, quoted by the Geographic Board of Canada, is to the effect that Great and Lesser Slave Lakes and Slave River were named after a tribe of Indians that once dwelt in that region. These Indians called themselves Etchareottine, which means 'the people dwelling in the shelter of the (Rocky) mountains.' In contradistinction to other Northern Indians, who were caribou eaters and traveled widely in pursuit of game, the Etchareottines were fish eaters and kept to the lakes. When the more warlike Cree went on the warpath against the tribes on the Peace River, they came from the south in canoes to Lesser Slave Lake and, leaving their canoes there, proceeded overland. Finding that the lake-dwelling Indians did not possess their own warlike attributes and ideas, the Cree showed their contempt by bestowing on the lake dwellers the epithet of 'awonak' or 'slaves.'

"By way of Great Slave Lake the traveller reached the land of the Slave Indians, and to the babel of tongues is added still another dialect. Revolution, the most important settlement on the southern shore, is the meeting place of the Indian trappers from east and west, north and south. The Southern Indians, the Cree and Chipewyans, are represented chiefly by the imported servants of the traders, this point marking the northern limit of the influence of both these nations. Three highways lead from Resolution—one to the northwest following the waters of the Mackenzie to Beaufort Sea, one due north to the country of the Yellow Knife Indians, and the third east to the lakes and plains of the Arctic prairies and the home of the caribou and musk ox.

FORT RELIANCE.

"To the east a cruise of 200 miles along the shores of Great Slave Lake—one of the great lakes of the world with an approximate area of 11,500 square miles—brings the traveller to Fort Reliance. From this point the trail leads overland until the headwaters of rivers flowing to Hudson Bay are reached. Here are the great Arctic prairies, a country well flowered by nature except with trees.

"From any point of vantage can be seen an apparently endless expanse of grass, moss and Arctic flowers. Sparkling lakes nestle in the valleys, and winding streams disturb the quiet of the scene as they tumble their way down their many rapids to mingle their waters finally with those of far-distant Hudson Bay.

"The rolling country is the home of the caribou, the wolf, the Arctic fox and the remnants of the few remaining herds of musk ox to be found on the mainland. The streams and lakes are plentifully stocked with fish, and their shores are the nesting grounds of many varieties of waterfowl. The potential wealth of this Arctic plains area lies in its undoubted ability to yield liberal supplies of meat and hides from caribou and other hardy animals, fish from its waters and fur from its hills.

"Humanity is but poorly represented on the Arctic prairies. A small band of Indians, who winter along the northern fringe of timber, each Spring follows the caribou in their northern migration, and lives entirely upon caribou meat and fish. Eskimo from the shores of Coronation Gulf to the northwest and coastal points to the eastward move each Spring toward the Hielon River to meet the same migration on its way to the Arctic coast. The only permanent residents are three bands of Eskimo who base their operations on the shores of Kasba, Sigoligjusk and Baker Lakes, from which points they eke out a living from the eastern sections of these northern plains.

WHERE FRANKLIN CAMPED

"Starting again from Resolution, another road leads to Rae, on a northern arm of Great Slave Lake and the land of the Dog Rib Indians. In 1921 Franklin and his party followed their route to the North. A winter camp was built half way between Great Slave and Great Bear Lakes, which was known as Fort Enterprise. From this point a season was spent in exploration of the Coppermine River and the shores of Coronation Gulf. Part of this route was also followed by Hearne, of the Hudson's Bay Company, when from 1769 to 1772 he pioneered the valley of the Coppermine River. One of the great tragedies of the North was enacted during this trip, when the Indians who accompanied Hearne massacred more than twenty defenseless Eskimo men, women and children, camped at a point since known as Bloody Fall, on the lower reach of the Coppermine.

"During the past winter a unique event occurred in the vicinity of Fort Enterprise, about 150 miles north of Great Slave Lake, the spot where Sir John Franklin, with Lieutenant Back, spent such a terrible year of hunger and privation in 1821 and 1822. Two years ago, while an official of the Canadian Government was making a patrol from the bottom of Bathurst Inlet, 500 miles over a bleak and desolate territory, to Rae, he had

with him a young Eskimo youth from Coronation Gulf. They had many adventures on the way, but, on reaching Rae, the young Eskimo was delighted at what appeared to him a veritable metropolis, although it cannot boast of more than half a hundred people.

"So enamored with the place was the youth that he wanted to remain, forgetting entirely the pretty wife he had left in a distant igloo. The official, however, had no intention of permitting the youth to remain, for, had he done so, the lad's tribesmen would have assumed that the white man had killed him, and so would probably have taken his own life in retaliation.

A PEACE MEETING

"When they finally returned to Bathurst Inlet the young native must have told his tribesmen how well they had been treated by the Indians and, as a result, the Eskimo in a body appeared shortly after Christmas at Fort Enterprise. Here, though face to face with their traditional enemies, the Indians, a ten-day powwow of feast and dance took the place of bloody war.

"It was the first occasion on record where groups of Eskimos and Indians from these districts have buried the hatchet, and is in marked contrast to the warlike attitude of the time of Hearne.

"The Dog Rib Indians are one of the larger tribes of the North. Long association with the white trader has advanced them to a life of semi-civilization, but they still depend upon the wild life of the country for an existence. As they wander over a wide country of rocky hills, some of which are timbered, though sparsely, their harvest consists of fur, fish, caribou and moose, with rabbits to fill in periods when larger game is not available. Much of this area has been reserved by the government of Canada as a hunting and trapping ground for the exclusive use of the natives.

"To the west and north of Resolution lies the valley of the Mackenzie River. May River, a settlement lying near Great Slave Lake in the broad valley of the river from which the community takes its name, is the home of a well-conducted boarding school, two missions and several trading establishments.

"Providence lies on a level plain on the bank of the Mackenzie. The buildings of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, of the mission with its boarding school for native children, and of the several trading companies are practically the only permanent structures in the settlement. At points further south the Indian and half-breed trappers have built for themselves cabins from which they pursue their activities, but the natives of the Providence district are still the itinerant people of a hundred years ago. Many of them are born, live and die in their native tepees and brush camps.

"Between Providence and Simpson on the way north the river narrows and runs swiftly, but navigation is uninterrupted. Simpson is located on a large island just below the confluence of the Liard and the Mackenzie Rivers. It is one of the larger settlements of the Territories, and was at one time the trade headquarters for the whole valley of the Mackenzie. Originally a typical Hudson's Bay Company fort, dating from the early days of the last century, it has grown to be a prosperous settlement with missions, hospitals, schools, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police post, a government wireless station, a number of trading establishments and a government Indian agency which conducts an experimental farm. The surrounding country, consisting of rolling hills lightly covered with timber, has up to date produced little but fur, though it is not without promise for the future. The Rocky Mountains are less than 100 miles to the northwest, and far back in the mountain lies a valley about which little is known beyond the fact that in its hot springs are so numerous that its temperature has been materially affected. While the surrounding country suffers from a somewhat rigorous climate, the 'semi-tropical valley,' as it has come to be known, sees but little snow and is the winter home of a great variety of wild life.

"The Liard River is the highway serving the territory to the west. It boasts of a steamboat service, adequate to the needs of the country, which each year carries a wealth of high-grade furs to the markets of the world. The upper reaches of the Liard, penetrating far into the mountain ranges, connect through British Columbia with established routes of travel leading to the Pacific Coast.

Mackenzie enters a bolder and more rugged country, and for many miles the traveler is regaled with true Western mountain scenery. When the river swings back to the foothills, Wrangle, a fur post active enough in winter but presenting little of interest during the open season, is passed, and the journey is continued to Norman. This settlement stands on the high banks of the Mackenzie at the mouth of Great Bear River. The usual essentials of a northern post are here in evidence. The country, east and west for many miles, is tributary to this post.

"The Great Bear River is the highway to Great Bear Lake and the country beyond as far as Coronation Gulf, while to the west an overland trail follows the valley of the Stewart River to the headwaters of the Stewart River and on to the Yukon. The Great Bear River is shallow and swift, but can be ascended by suitably constructed power boats. Great Bear Lake is the largest lake in the northland, covering an area of something like 12,100 square miles, but its use as a transport route is limited to not more than three months in each season, as it is icebound for the rest of the year.

"Much of interest centres around Norman. Not only is it the trade centre of a large and productive district, but the scenic and mineral resources are also outstanding. A few miles from the settlement lie lignite coal beds of doubtful commercial importance, but spectacular, having burned continuously at least since the first exploration of the river by Mackenzie in 1789. To the north of the post lies a prominent mountain known as Bear Rock, and along the western horizon lie the bold peaks of the Rocky Mountains. The burning of the coal seams and the three peculiar red stains, probably caused by oxide of iron, which show on the face of Bear Rock have given rise to a typical Indian legend.

"Many years ago, according to the story, both the people and the game of this area were giants of their kind. A giant hunter armed with bow and arrows, while standing on Bear Rock, saw a colony of giant beaver in Bear River. With his arrows he secured three of these, but several of his arrows which had missed their mark remained embedded in the river bottom, but one end still showing above the water. As in all the northern rivers sunken

trees are to be seen, the story-teller points out the giant arrows without difficulty. The hunter then skinned three to the beaver and spread the skins on the face of Bear Rock to dry; the blood left the three stains in the shape of the three beaver skins. Taking some of the beaver meat to the point where the coal now burns, the hunter made a fire to cook a meal, but the fire burned so fiercely that the ground became ignited and has been burning ever since.

"Fifty miles below Norman there is every evidence of an oil field of economic importance, but the cost of a pipeline or other means of transportation prohibits, for the present, its development on any major scale. It has given promise enough to suggest the establishment of a small refinery for the production of gasoline and oil fuel to supply the local demands.

"Further north the river flows through a canyon known as the Ramaparts, whose white limestone walls rise 150 feet above the water. From the foot of the Ramaparts, Good Hope can be seen crowning a high point on the eastern side of the river. This settlement is sixteen miles south of the Arctic Circle and is a large and prosperous fur trading centre. It is also the northern limit of the Hare Indian nation, as at the next settlement (Arctic Red River) their language will be understood only with difficulty, that of the Loucheux tribe having taken its place.

"The settlements of Arctic Red River and McPherson are the trading centres of the country entirely apart from the valley of the Mackenzie to the south. McPherson was established early in the last century, and was at one time the gateway to the Yukon Valley. An eighty-mile portage across a comparatively low-lying country leads to the headwaters of the Porcupine River, which joins the Yukon at Fort Yukon. The delta of the Mackenzie marks the north-eastern limits of a group of Indian tribes which spreads south and west to the valley of the Yukon.

"The most northerly post on the Mackenzie is on an island in the river delta that is known as 'Aklayik,' meaning, in the Eskimo language 'Where the bear abounds.' Here the sun in summer is visible throughout each of the twenty-four hours, and here is another important boundary between native races—the meeting point of Indian and Eskimo. Originally this area was controlled entirely by the Eskimo, but the Indians following the white man have extended their hunting grounds to the north, and the Eskimo are gradually retreating to the Arctic coast line.

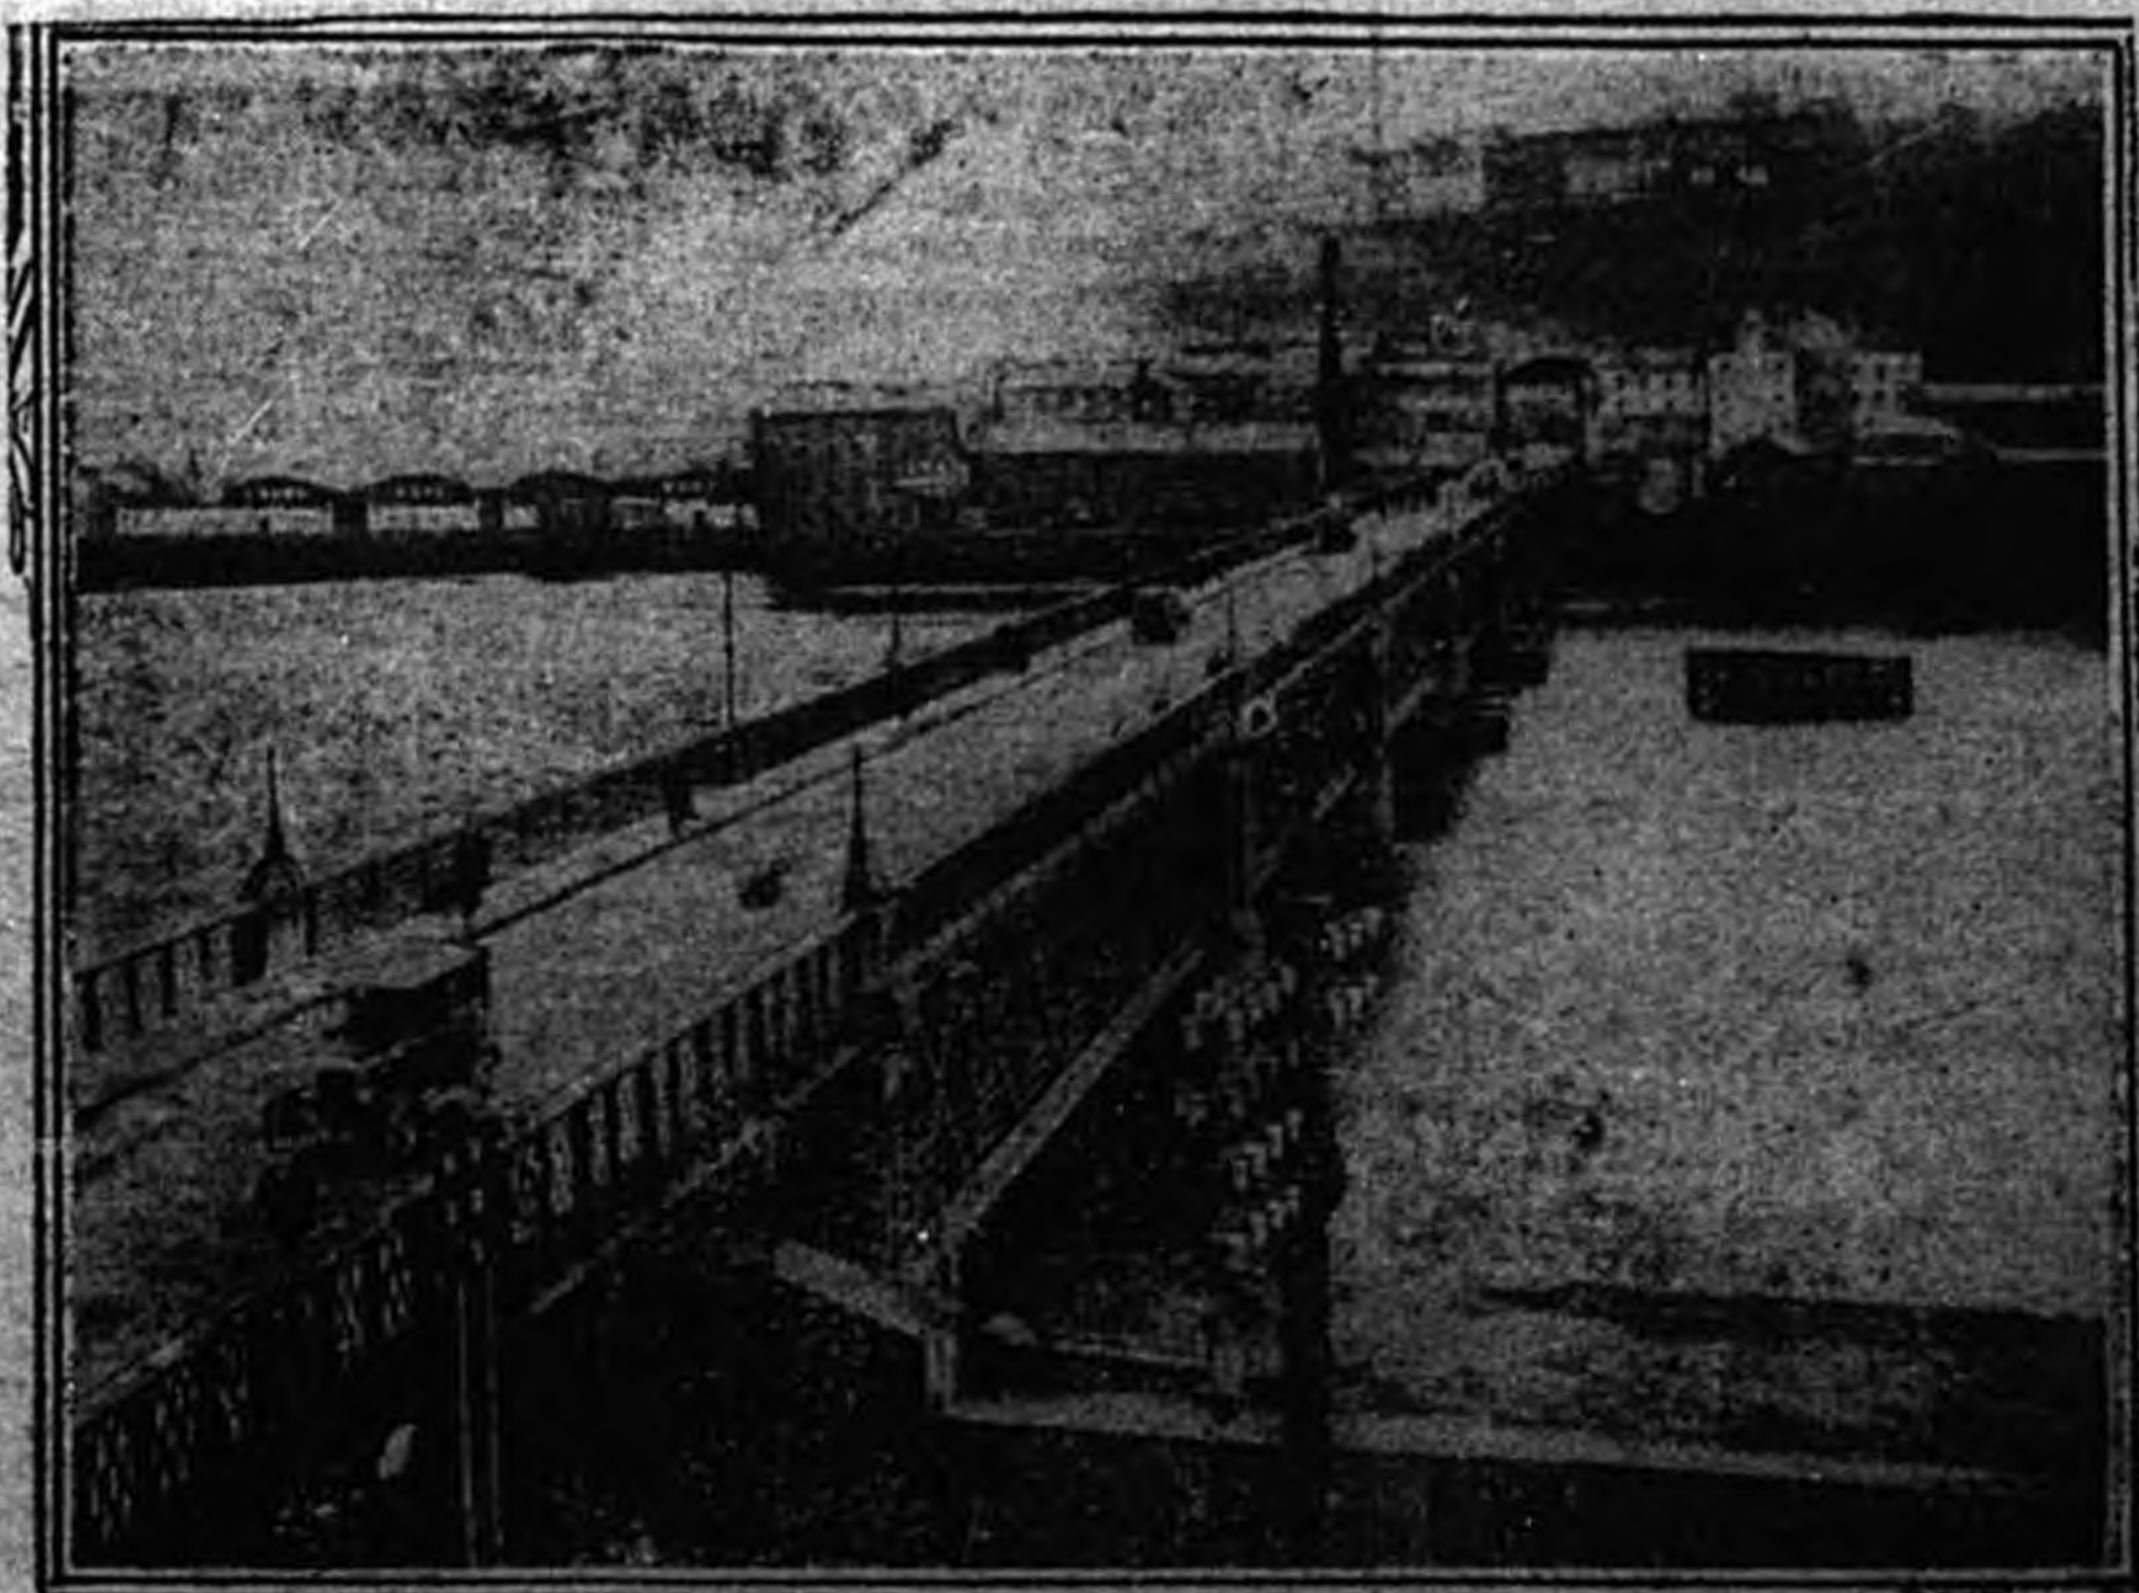

"Aklayik is also the junction of two transportation routes, one of which follows the Mackenzie Valley, while the other is the ocean route from Pacific Coast ports which leads through Bering Sea and along the northern coast of Alaska. Both routes have their drawbacks. The coast via the river route is excessive, and on the ocean route there is the ever-present danger of loss of both ship and cargo when rounding the northerly capes of Alaska.

"The shores of Beaufort Sea are still the undisputed heritage of the Eskimo. Between the Alaska boundary and the eastern end of the delta of the Mackenzie lie four settlements—Demarcation, Point Herschel, Shingle Point and Kittiagait—whose inhabitants, living largely on the resources of the country, draw their harvest from both land and sea. The hills produce caribou, which mean both food and winter clothing; from the lakes and streams the natives secure fish, while the ocean supplies more fish and various kinds of seal and white whale, which solve the problem for materials for boats, tents and footwear and add to the food supply. While tree life is no longer in evidence, the heavy drift from the Mackenzie has stored the beaches with fuel adequate for many years to come, placing the Eskimos of this area in a different position from their brothers to the east, who are largely dependent upon sea-mammal oil for heat and light.

"Both the eastern and western groups received their first impression of civilization from the whalers, while those of the central area are only now drawing their first knowledge of the world from the fur traders from the south. The influences prior to the white invasion are still stamped on all, in clothing, accoutrements and home life. These differences are, however, entirely regional; the language throughout the Eskimo world is basically the same; and a study of the folklore proves the common origin of the Eskimo people from Siberia to Greenland.

"The government of Canada is confronted with a complex problem in the administration of the Far North. In so far as it is possible, the various situations have been met as they have arisen. Communication is maintained by a well-organized mail service and an efficient system of wireless telegraphy operation stations at Edmonton, in Alberta; at Fort Smith, Resolute, Simpson and Aklayik in the Northwest Territories, and at Herschel Island, Dawson and Mayo in the Yukon. Schools and hospitals are subsidized, relief is given to the sick and destitute, game sanctuaries are maintained while wild life is molested by no one, and many thousands of square miles of territory are set aside as hunting and trapping grounds for the sole use of the native population.

One year has passed, Since that sad day When one we loved, Was called away.

It was a bitter grief, And a shock severe To part with one We loved so dear.

But it was God's wish, And he willed it so And when God commands We all must go.

Insest by Mrs. W. Carruthers.

Phoo, Phoo, isn't it hot? We can always find something to grumble about and this heat during the last few days, has been the cause of many a grouch. First it is too cold, then too hot, if it rains, or is dull, we always find our complaints. What would happen if we could choose our own weather? Some would want a little sunshine, some a little moisture, and this world of ours would be in an awful mixup. Let us bear what is given us, with patience, and without words of discontent.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hodge spent the week-end in Thos. Gore.

Mr. Thos. Stewart, of St. Anne de

It pays to Advertise

So says Roy Morrison who last week advertised a number of young pigs for sale. The morning after issue of the paper he could have sold as many more from the applications he received.

Ground was broken for our new station and Mr. Wickenham, of Three Rivers, has been awarded the contract. It will prove a splendid addition to our growing and prosperous town.

Notwithstanding the heat a goodly number met in the Baptist Church, on Tuesday afternoon last to listen to Mr. and Mrs. Victor Griffin and bid them farewell as they leave on Friday by Steamship Duchess of York en route for Africa. Several duets were sung by Mr. and Mrs. Griffin, who also gave an interesting account of their lives and how they were led to enter the Mission Field. A very happy time was spent in social intercourse at the close.

MONTREAL FIRE CHIEFS VISIT TOWN

Lachute was honored by a visit of some 30 members of the Police and Fire Chief's Club, of Montreal, and District, on Thursday last, as guests of our local Volunteer Brigade. To many, it was the occasion of their first visit with us, and kindly references were made by them in speaking of the Town and their treatment while here.

Following a drive around town the party made for the Auditorium where they were formally welcomed and addressed by Mayor C. Tremblay, to which Chief Gauthier, President of the Club, ably replied expressing his appreciation of the kindly reception that had been given them and urging that all citizens give their united support to the Local Fire Brigade.

Musical selections and solos were rendered by the visitors which were highly appreciated. A short address on Life Saving was also given by Mr. L. Temple, of the Montreal Light Heat and Power Co., asking each individual to spend just a few minutes daily in the practise of restoration of life from drowning and electrocution, and so be in a position to immediately render First Aid.

The play "Apple Sauce," so cleverly executed by members of the La-chute Literary and Dramatic Society was really an eye-opener to our visitors and the artists were highly complimented upon their marked ability in so vividly presenting the different characters.

Following the concert the chairs were cleared and with enlivened music furnished by the "Moore" Orchestra, of Montreal, a real dance was thoroughly enjoyed by all those who took advantage of the opportunity of tripping the light fantastic. Dancing over, the firemen, bent on making a real holiday of their outing, motored out to Lake Louisa where Liberty Hall had been equipped for further entertainment. A good substantial spread was heartily indulged in and those who were indifferent as to time, joyfully sang away and kept things going, for what was sleep on an occasion like this. Unfortunately, the weather turned wet and stormy, so that the beauties of the Lake could not be appreciated as they would otherwise have been; however, the boys all returned to the city throughout the day and voiced sentiments of sincere appreciation for their splendid outing.

The Car That Attracts The Eye

"Gosh! how nicely she runs, isn't she a beauty, I wish I owned one like that." So often we hear such comments and praise, given the New Ford, as she comes sailing swiftly along, it is not idle praise, for they say "Seeing is believing," and the attractiveness sure appeals to the eye.

Hospitable Friendly Havens Ready for New Canadians

In the Past Year Over 36,000 Women and Children from Immigrant Ships Were Welcomed and Assisted in Red Cross Seaport Nurseries

By ANNE ANDERSON PERRY

In a few weeks immigration tides into Canada will be again at the full. Already thousands of new Canadians are pouring through Atlantic seaports and with the reopening of navigation on the St. Lawrence, the stream will take on the proportions of an advancing army. The immigration department and newspapers, through frequent bulletins, record, with gratification, the increasing number of British families coming out under the various new colonization schemes and readers rub their hands at the thought of the vast wealth which these newcomers will produce in time, on our frontiers. The wilds of New Ontario will yield to the harrow and the plough; the vast Peace River country will become settled; pioneers will harvest still more golden grain in the Prairie Provinces, and more and more fruitlands will yield their luscious returns.

But how often do we stop to consider what the migration of families from one part of the world to the other means in terms of human toll, endurance, courage and actual suffering? These people, from Europe, come from all that they have known straight into the unknown. If you picture what it would mean for yourself some realization may come as to what such an uprooting must mean to the migrant and to his wife and family.

This is what the Canadian Red Cross did when it had the happy, humanitarian thought of instituting its Seaport Nurseries in Quebec, Saint John and Halifax over seven years ago. It planned these havens specially for the reception, care and assistance of mothers with children, but also with an eye to the men, who on arrival on our shores, could leave their loved ones in the nurseries in absolute security while they go about the pressing business of collecting luggage, and attending to all the tasks of preparation for the long train travel to the West.

The nurseries are right at the docks and near the railway terminals. They are in charge of trained nurses, but also command the services of many volunteer women of the port cities who gladly assist in this interesting work of welcome for our new Canadians.

The welcome is not official at the Seaport Nursery. It concerns not masses but individuals. It is the open, friendly door, the hearty greeting, the breaking of bread, the offering of help and the interested speeding on the way of one woman by another. It is the proof that "somebody cares." Last year from 466 immigrant ships there were received in the Nurseries nearly 37,000 women and children, and since they came into operation some 133,431 people have passed happily within their wide open, hospitable and homelike doors, where every kind of neighborly help is given the guests.

For the Nurseries are equipped with all kinds of appliances and conveniences to carry on their work. Feeding bottles, bathtubs, baby cots, lounges, lavatories, laundries, chairs, tables, clothing supplies, and the steaming tea urn all contribute to their general usefulness.

"I saw a big sign, 'Red Cross Nurseries,'" says C. B. Robertson in describing scenes witnessed last summer at Quebec after the docking of a big liner, "and I wandered in. Two nurses were there in a big, sunny room with many brightly colored Mother Goose pictures on the walls. There were some couches on which tired mothers were resting their weary bones and a score of white enameled cots with immaculate sheets and blankets for the babies. Little pioneering Canadians dozed or cooed in the cots. Older children sat at kindergarten tables and mangled buns and solemnly drank milk. Mothers sat in comfortable chairs and sipped tea or coffee from the big steaming urns while the nurses, who seemed to have a score of hands apiece, ministered to the whole crowd and chatted in foreign tongues at will.

"How many languages do you speak?" I asked a young nurse. "Only French, German and Yiddish," she replied rather shamefacedly, "but I am studying Russian too." Here she dashed across the room to give a small boy a colorful scrapbook and to place in the eager arms of a tiny girl, a doll, then back again to the coffee urn.

"Where do these things come from?" asked I, indicating the gifts. "The Junior Red Cross youngsters and their mothers supply most of them," she replied, "and the L.O.E. help a lot. They are not all new, but they mean much to the mothers and the blessed kids."

Here she hurried to the door, took a baby from the arms of a tired-looking mother hushing its cries, eased the parent, a hefty-looking lady, into the biggest chair, gave her a cup of tea, and for a moment stood, her face beaming with goodwill and the baby still in her arms, beneath the banner stretched across the room: "The Canadian Red Cross Welcomes You." Perhaps those folks couldn't all read the words on the bunting, but the spirit of that message was so plain in the figure of that indefatigable young nurse that it did not matter. These seaport nurseries are a blessing to the immigrant mother and her children, as well as a great boon to the Canadian immigration authorities in their work.

This account gives the reader some idea of the Red Cross Nursery at its busiest. But it by no means exhausts its activities. In all cases where the routine examination of immigration by port doctors has disclosed the need of medical care for small ailments, wounds or difficulties, these are supplied by the nurses; cards—follow-up—are given specific cases or to the parents to the health authorities, public health nurses, or hospitals in the districts where they are going and mothers are carefully advised regarding how to maintain the health of themselves and families.

Many mothers avail themselves of the "homey" services offered by the modern laundries in the nurseries to accomplish a general cleaning up after the long sea voyage; food is supplied and packed for the train journey if it is found that the migrants have come ill-supplied with food or cash; and in many instances warm clothing is given entire families if they have come ill-clad to our cold Canadian springs.

Such are the Seaport Nurseries, which so efficiently function under the expert management of Miss V. Tremaine, M.V.O., the chief of staff who recently received from an Englishwoman who landed in Canada last year a grateful note, saying, "A year ago to day we landed in Canada, to come to this far West, and I wonder how many times a day I think of your busy, comforting corner, and your kindness to me and my two boys. Such good work it is, for all of the strangers who come to this country."

Nor are the Government officials less appreciative, for the Supervisor of the Women's Division of the Immigration Department recently stated that she "did not know how the women and children would be able to withstand some of the hardships they have to go through when they emigrate if there were not the encouragement and help given them at the ports by the Red Cross Nurseries."

How to Know Your Car

You'll find that the engine is under the hood.

And there it is properly fixed; the water and oil, it is well understood.

Should not be allowed to get mixed. The tires should always have plenty of air.

As any beginner can see;

And while you're about it put some in the spare.

It's all you will get that is free.

The work to be done when you drive a machine.

Depends on your feet very much; You step on the brake—if you know what I mean.

And do the same thing to the clutch.

You step on the starter to get it to go.

Then step on the gas for the speed; A fellow can drive with one hand, as you know.

But feet are a primary need.

The tank is a box like a flattened out cube.

The gas you put in it is wet; Don't think that because every shoe has a tube.

It must be a radio set.

Of course, there are many more things to be learned.

But these fundamentals, as such, Are very important and not to be spurned;

Some drivers don't know half as much.

—George S. Osborne.

Learning to Earn

"No boy should pass his sixteenth birthday without a definite decision as to his vocation in life," said J. J. Kelso in an interview recently. In every community there are strong, sturdy boys who do not take kindly to the usual school curriculum. They want greater activity and exercise for their muscles, instead of their brains. Unless this is provided they will drift away and simply work at odd jobs without any definite knowledge of a trade. Such boys would be happy and satisfied if they were assisted in fitting themselves for employment in some well-established industry. Our experience is that neglect to train these boys for industry leads to many fine lads drifting into the criminal class.

South Africa's Swelled Head

London Truth: The recent policy of Great Britain towards the Dominions has been taken in South Africa as a confession of weakness. That country was no financial loser by the Great War, thanks mainly to its position as the largest gold-producing country in the world, and since the Armistice, it has profited considerably by the large influx of well-to-do British settlers, who have in many cases bought and improved land which was previously undeveloped. The result is that the country, as represented by its present leaders, is suffering from swollen head and its politicians are behaving like spoilt children.

SOME CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION LEADERS

Fully cognizant of the part they must play to maintain the record of progress of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 23rd to September 7th, the gentlemen pictured herewith have gone into their various tasks with characteristic enthusiasm. Agriculture and its allied industries will be strongly emphasized, as usual, and "Empire Year" unquestionably will surpass all its predecessors. The two weeks' program, quite aside from its agricultural phases, will be one of deep and diversified interest.

Motorists' Vision the "Ideal" Car!

Random But Typical Are Comments and Hopes
From Drivers

BORN OF EXPERIENCE

Build in Fancy Automobile Which Owners Would Drive Some Day

What about the ideal car? Is there any motorist who has not visioned himself at the wheel of the automobile of the future?

What would it look like, if the average motorist, so-called, were to write the specifications?

The engineer and the designer have given the motoring public their answers to the question insofar as the present is concerned, and the result is the fine, sturdy automobile of to-day. There is no doubt that they too are looking far into the future, but they necessarily must proceed with caution before giving voice to their thoughts.

Driver Learns Much

The man who drives an automobile, on the other hand, has learned much from his motoring experiences. Given a free hand, what would he say if the Aladdin lamp were placed in his hands?

His comment, naturally, would be predicted on a comparison with the automobile as he knows it and with conditions which he senses will exist some years hence.

The motorist's opinions, gathered at random, however, go beyond mere refinement of the car of to-day. One finds him going into the field of invention and unusual design for his ideas and evolving in some instances a somewhat novel vehicle. And yet, it is not so very novel, if one has kept abreast of the trend toward introducing the bullet-type, emphatically streamlined car that is to-day bidding for popular favor.

Speculations

There is interest to the speculations of the average motorist, without any attempt to endow him with the precision and attention to practicability.

Let us then summon a few typical thinking motorists and put the question to them.

It is not surprising that the first specification advanced is that the ideal car should be a multicylinder one. It is not surprising, because the engineer already has visioned the automobile of the future as one having eight, twelve or even sixteen cylinders. This first motorist wanted power and flexibility even beyond the consummate degree to which these characteristics have been developed. He asked for speed so that his ideal car would be capable of making 70 or 80 miles an hour without difficulty.

The Speed Limits

A trusting soul? Perhaps, but with express highways and double-decked streets in the offing, who would say that he is hoping to exceed speed limits when in all probability speed limits may be removed under proper conditions some years hence?

His next stipulation was a transmission equipped with a greater number of forward speeds than is the conventional practice to-day.

Then he turned to headlighting. Of this even the engineer has had much to say and this motorist is not alone when he looks into the future and there sees more satisfactory illuminating equipment. Headlamps, he declared, could well be made movable so as to direct their rays where most needed in varying circumstances. He would further have the headlights connected with the steering gear so that they would follow the front wheels without having the whole car turn in the direction the light is needed most.

Streamlined

The color scheme he was willing to leave to personal taste. He did, however, have something to say about lines. His conception was that they should be definitely streamlined so as to offer as little wind resistance as possible.

And at this point the comments of Motorist No. 1 lead right into those of the second motorist consulted.

His ideal embodied a sharp departure from accepted practice, although in the light of a trend that already is setting in it cannot be characterized as being wholly bizarre. Let us see what its specifications comprise.

It would be, he said, a car having two wheels in front and one in the rear. This, of course, tallies with the design of the cycle car built abroad. Next, it would utilize its power as a front-wheel drive automobile. Here he is merely in the forefront of the automotive procession as it now appears to be moving along.

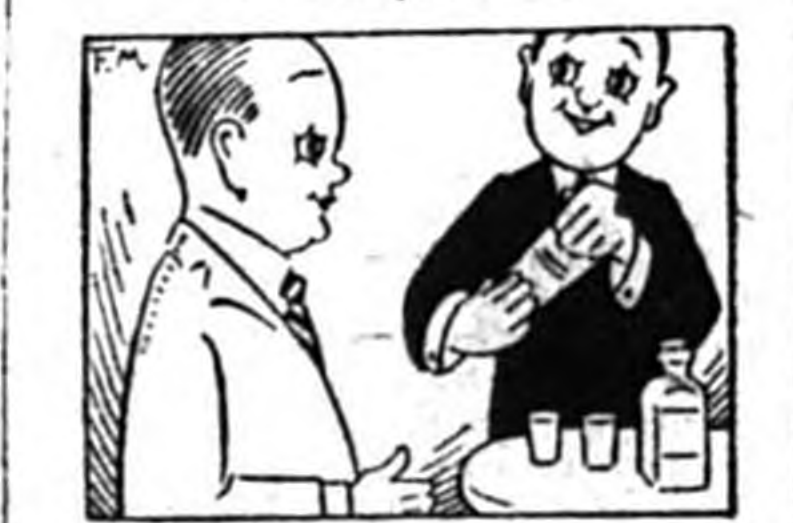

Then his comment became more speculative. Brakes, he said, would be mechanical and operating on the fly wheel of the motor so as to insure stopping without wheel skids. The specifications for this ideal car call for no starting motor, no gears and no clutch. Speed would be determined solely by the throttle setting. Lighting consists of only a single lamp mounted above the driver's head and throwing its beam at an angle to the roadway. This motorist admitted that his car would be a peculiar looking vehicle, but his assertion was that it would be easy to handle, economical and efficient.

And Economy

Calling upon a third motorist chosen at random from motordom's ranks, the ideal car was summed up as one that would be pre-eminently practical. Its three principal characteristics were advanced as beauty, performance and economy.

This motorist would preclude constant change of contour, so as to achieve a stabilized beauty.

The third ideal car would be a closed model of the four-door sedan type and it would be colored. Since there is a variety of color schemes available to suit a varying individual taste, this motorist would have his car dressed in different hues. His particular choice was a rich tone of dark green, blue or sand. He viewed a rear trunk as a necessity.

"Did the bootlegger succeed in getting a cellar to work it?"

"He was only partly successful—he got a cell to work in."

Garden Service

Every Gardener is Now Busy as a Nesting Robin—More Hints on Timely Subjects

Growing Lettuce

With lettuce forming the base of most salads, and this course now considered essential at all times, this common vegetable receives more prominence. In the old days, a short row at one side of the garden was put in early in the spring, and, when that was gone, or turned bitter, there was nothing more. In the modern garden there is little excuse for running out of this store of vitamins. The earliest lettuce is the leaf type. Grand Rapids is the popular variety maturing quickly, attaining large size, and being crisp and tender. Next will come the first crop of head lettuce, grown from plants that have been started indoors and later transferred outside. When transplanting these, many commercial gardeners have found that growth is hastened and the shock of moving lessened by putting in a pinch of nitrate of soda with each plant. Two of the best of the head type are the Big Boston and Iceberg. Two or three crops of head lettuce can be taken off, if plantings are spread over several weeks in the spring, and the crop is thinned well and hastened along with nitrate. By the 1st of July, when the weather usually turns warm, the first of the lettuce crops will begin to turn bitter or go to seed. This is where the Cos or Celery lettuce comes in. Cos is a different type from the head and leaf sorts, producing long, rather narrow, erect leaves that tend to fold over each other and enclose and branch the heart. This tendency is readily increased by loosely tying up the heads with raffia or string. Many epicures believe the Cos lettuce to be the finest flavored and highest quality of all the types. They stand heat better than other lettuces and are always crisp and delicate when freshly gathered. The inner leaves bleach white and the outer leaves are a light green and are tender and not strong as the outer leaves of some head lettuces are. Give the Cos lettuce a rich soil and plenty of moisture if it happens to be a dry season and it will make its long slender heads with great regularity.

Care of the Lawn

Early spring is the best time to attend to the weeding of the lawn when dandelions and plantains, the worst pests, first get their start, and the ground is soft. If they are removed at this time, much trouble will be saved later on when weeding is a hotter and harder task. Weeding devices are now sold which yank up uprooted plants very handily and readily without digging the lawn up sufficiently to disfigure it. A few minutes each day getting rid of troublesome weeds will go a long way towards getting the lawn into shape. Grass will run out a great many of the weeds but plantain and dandelion patches hold their own against the best of sod. After weeding, go over it with grass seed and sprinkle it liberally where the weed colonies have been dug out, rolling the patches smooth or tramping them down firmly, if no roller is available. The new grass will soon fill up the spaces. While the ground is still soft in the spring, the lawn should get a thorough rolling, which will ensure a velvety, level surface later on. At this time too, the grass needs a stimulant, and an application of nitrate of soda, which is one of the most quickly available fertilizers, will start those plants which have been injured by the recent cold weather along the highroad to health. Clippings of grass should be allowed to stay on the lawn, and these provide a mulch, and will not prove a disfigurement if the lawn is cut every four or five days, as it should be.

Annual Larkspurs

The Annual Larkspur, now very much improved, will provide a wealth of cutting material and is valuable in the regular flower beds as well. These plants are not particular as to soil, and thrive in poor quarters and even in the shade, but at their best in full sun and rich loam. It is necessary to give this flower an application of lime once in a while during the growing season. Give annual larkspurs at least six inches each way in the bed. If you cut the terminal spike as soon as expanded, and do not allow seed to form, the blooming season will be greatly lengthened. It should be sown where it is to bloom as it does not take readily to transplanting.

"I had no colour"

MRS. FRED. PENNY, R.R. No. 4, Norwich, Ont., suffered from anaemia for over three years. Though taking medicine all that time, nothing helped her till she began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"I had no appetite," she writes. "I could not sleep. My blood almost turned to water. I was weak and my heart would palpitate violently. I am thankful to say that in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I found the relief I sought. My color returned, my appetite improved, my weight increased fifteen pounds, and it was not long till I could perform my work with ease."

If you are weak and easily tired, subject to headaches, are pale, without appetite, and your work seems a burden, do not delay. Start treatment at once by buying a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your medicine dealer's or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Reduce the Acid

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

Left-Handedness

It appears quite clearly from statistics published by Herbert D. Chamberlain, of Ohio State University, in "The Journal of Heredity" (Washington) that left-handedness is inherited.

"From families in which one or both of the parents are left-handed we get a percentage of 17.34 per cent. of the children left-handed, while in families in which neither of the parents are left-handed only 2.1 per cent. of the children are left-handed. If left-handedness is not inherited we would not find over 5 per cent. of the children left-handed in any of these families, regardless of the handedness of their parents. It is very evident that there is some sex influence manifested in the inheritance of left-handedness as shown by the larger number of left-handed boys in this population. It is also apparently transmitted differently where the father is left-handed, as note the small number of left-handed girls in these families. There can be no doubt that the trait is inherited. Siemens presents twenty-one cases of apparent identical twins in which one was left-handed and the other right-handed, and cites this as evidence that left-handedness is not an hereditary factor. The probable explanation of this is mirror imaging, so often found in identical twins, or it may possibly be the parental position of the right-handed twin, which would prevent it from developing into a left-handed one."

Publicity

G.G. In the Nation and Athenaeum (London). The trade of a publicity agent is apparently a lucrative one. The trained eye can detect in the columns of newspapers and magazines much that is apparently news but is really advertisement. The late C. E. Montague recorded that during the War many things that would have been regarded as "unsporting" at the beginning became the regular practice later on. A similar deterioration seems to have taken place in this matter of self-advertisement. Much that would have been regarded as gross and ungentlemanly by fathers seems to have become the common usage of to-day.

GOOD IN EVERY WAY

Baby's Own Tablets Banish Babyhood and Childhood Ailments.

A medicine that all mothers praise—one good in every way—one that will quickly banish the minor ills of babyhood and childhood is the medicine to keep in the medicine chest; to always have on hand in case of emergency. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets—they are helpful at all times. They are a mild but thorough laxative which by regulating the bowels and stomach banish colds and simple fevers; correct constipation and indigestion; relieve colic and diarrhoea and make the cutting of teeth easy.

Thousands of mothers use no other medicine for their little ones. Among them is Mrs. J. H. Bromley, Westmeath, Ont., who writes:—"I have four children and whenever any of them are ill I always use Baby's Own Tablets and have found them good in every way. I would not be without the Tablets and would also like your little booklet 'Care of the Baby in Health and Sickness.'"

As England Sees Passing of Foch

It Was Given to Him to Save the Allied Cause and He Saved It

GREATEST SOLDIER

"In his own medium he was a genius of the first order. Englishmen of the war generation will never forget the debt they owe to his genius. And in military history his place as the war-winner among war-winners is definitely assured."—Daily News.

"Marshal Foch is the second figure of the World War. The first is, and always will be, the 'Unknown Soldier.' And perhaps it is the fairest commentary on Foch, as soldier, that he will always remain second to this myriad unknown."—Birmingham Post.

"There can be little doubt that Marshal Foch was the greatest soldier of the war. The theories which he held and preached in time of peace were justified in practice, and all that, as Professor of the Ecole de Guerre, he had urged on the young soldier proved to be the essential doctrine in modern warfare," says the Yorkshire Post, and all the tributes to his memory bear testimony that of the great military figures he stands out pre-eminent.

This admission does not lessen the British regard and appreciation of the late Lord Haig, but when the "unified command" was agreed to, the fact that Foch was made the head of the combined forces gave him first place in his lifetime, and it is not likely to be taken from him by historians now that he is dead. As the Times says:

The Inevitable Commander

"It was Foch, the Frenchman, who was the ordained, the inevitable commander. The German breakthrough was the German undoing. It mobilized the trench-imprisoned armies it had gone near to shattering, and it freed trench-ridden minds. Above all, it liberated the aggressive genius of Foch. He was the man for his opportunity. It was given to him to save the Allied cause, and he saved it."

"What soldier could ask a more magnificent epitaph? No soldier of his day had a higher intellectual conception of the conduct of war. His practice, like his teaching, was a model—from the classic mould of the Latin mind—of logic and of fervour. He not only believed in the 'imponderables' at the arbiters of war. He embodied them—the will, the self-confidence, the passionate concentration upon mastery of the enemy commander's mind. They were felt throughout his own command. They were felt, as German memoirs have testified, among the enemy."

"The doctrine of the attack at all cost had some crude practitioners and some disastrous illustrations. It was susceptible of modification by mud, barbed wire, concrete, and machine-guns. But there has been in military history no clearer, no more consistent, and, in the end, no more triumphant exponent of the weight of moral factors in battle than the soldier of genius, the simple, chivalrous gentleman whose memory France and England proudly and sadly salute and honor to-day."

"Foch is no more," says the Morning Post. "The greatest Frenchman of this age has passed away—greatest in an age of great men; an age that knew great discoverers, inventors, authors, artists; an age essentially great in itself that saw France rise again from the bitterness of utter defeat. Foch was greatest because most needed in France's dark hour, greatest because he turned darkness into abounding light."

"A soldier all through, he was also a student," comments the Daily Chronicle, "deeply read, continually testing theories, though keenly alive to what no theory can give. One of his greatest qualities was his power to learn from his mistakes."

Error of Offensive at all Costs
"At the outset of the War he was up to the neck in the disastrous error of the French High Command—the offensive at all costs and in any situation—which entailed over half France's casualties and nearly lost her the War. Gradually, through the War years, he unlearned it; and so slowly climbed to that wonderful equipoise between patience and audacity, which so signally triumphed in 1918."

"Many of the world's great soldiers," points out the Daily Telegraph, "have been blemished by an ambition to play the role of the conqueror. Not so the General who, before his last summer campaign, publicly asked for the prayers of the children of France, and when the victory was won took his triumphs modestly and almost meekly. Ave atque vale. The perfect knight of a noble cause is dead, and the whole world springs to a last salute."

"Crowned with honor, fame, and the respect of the whole world, Ferdinand Foch has passed to his rest," says the Glasgow Herald. "For him, the latest and not the least in greatness of France's departed Marshals, how shall the oration funebre be most worthily framed?"

"His merits and achievements as a General of France and as Commander-in-Chief and leader of the congregated armies of the Allies to victory would seem to call for the breadth and the weight of Miltonic vowels. Or shall a few words of simple eulogy suffice, such as any child in Picardy and Artois can understand? With such the great Commander would himself be most pleased, for he, the 'foremost Captain of his time,' was also 'as the greatest only are, in his simplicity sublime.'"

"A brief recital of his deeds might

A QUICK WAY TO END BABY'S UPSET SPELLS

"Like other young mothers, I worried every time Baby cried," says a Syracuse, N.Y., woman. "Several times when she was upset or constipated, I tried castor oil but she couldn't retain it. Our doctor told me to try Fletcher's Castoria because it is harmless and babies like it. That ended my worries and I've used it since for all my children." Castoria never fails to delight mothers by the quick way it ends those upsets of babies and children, such as colic, constipation, colds, etc. That's the reason for its tremendous sale and popularity. Like all good things, it's limited, but genuine Castoria—the purely-vegetable product—always bears the Fletcher signature.

The invisible difference

Many motor oils look alike, but there is a vast difference in the way they perform. Unfortunately this difference is difficult to detect.

The invisible difference which makes one motor oil better than another must be inherent in the crude from which it is made.

There you have the reason why Marvelube gives better engine lubrication than oils refined from ordinary crudes. Imperial Oil searched the world over for a better crude—and in South America they found it. From it they make Marvelube—a pure, carbon-free, full-bodied oil that resists the extreme heats and pressures of modern engine operation.

Aircraft operators prefer Marvelube because better lubrication means greater safety and longer intervals between overhauls. Motorists prefer Marvelube because it is the ideal oil for modern motors. It ensures greater power, greater flexibility and greater economy.

There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car. Consult the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil service stations and dealers.

GIVE US YOUR NEWS

The main aim of the weekly newspaper is to give the news of its own district. It has of course other aims such as giving the merchants the opportunity of placing their goods in the limelight of publicity, but first it must give the news. Information is not always easily obtained and no editor is able to cover the ground without the assistance of correspondents throughout the community. Therefore we are asking our readers' help, and will be glad if they acquaint the office of any friends who may be visiting them. Many appreciate the personal column and your visitors are usually pleased that they have been recognized, so send them in to us. Sometimes people come in and give the impression they are asking a favor when wanting the names of their friends inserted. No subscriber need feel that way who has any item of real news as we are always glad to get it.

Just here we would also suggest to our correspondents, that any notices of church or social events are not considered as news when the purpose of same is for financial benefit. Such notices may be accepted and sent in, but the regular charge will be made as if published in the coming events column.

Today we witness again the miracle of springtime. From the long sleep of winter the earth awakes, and warmed by the genial rays of the sun and refreshed by the gentle rain of heaven clothes herself anew in the garments of beauty. Strange and wonderful is the marvellous transforming power of nature. Trees that waved their bare arms in the icy blasts a few short weeks ago, meadows that lay brown and sere and bound in the iron grip of winter are today bursting forth in living green filled with the effulgence of a new life. There is a verse in the first chapter of the Epistle to the Romans that speaks of the "invisible things of God" being "revealed by the things that are made even His eternal power and Godhead," and none can surely be so dull as to be incapable of apprehending something of the Divine glory of the Creator from the miracle enacted before our eyes to day. It is an old message that springtime brings, but none the less true or none the less needful on that account. It is the message of hope, of faith's indication, Divine restoration, and of life from the dead. The message of God to the human heart today is, "Behold, I make all things new."

PRACTICE SAYING "GOOD MORNING"

Apparently there is need of practicing such a simple act as saying good morning. Some people mumble it so you are not sure whether they are greeting you or repeating the multiplication table. Others growl it out so that for a moment you have an uneasy feeling that you are being accused of something. Some people say good morning in a way that expresses their certainty that life is a failure. Others seem to imply by their greeting resentment of the fact that you are on earth. Your "good morning" should express cheer, kindness and goodwill. If it fails to do that, it might be better left unsaid. Some of you may need to start practicing saying Good Morning properly.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Geo. O'Brien and family, of Thurso, wish to express their thanks for kindness and sympathy extended to them in their recent sad bereavement, in the loss of husband and father.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A SUGGESTION.

Sunday, June the sixteenth has been laid aside for all nations of the Earth to offer Praise and Thanks-giving for the wonderful recovery of our most Gracious King. The British Empire has good reason to give thanks and we can feel proud of having the combined praise of sister nations, with us.

Every city, every town and village all individuals have a share in the great service, and Lachute, has hers.

Perhaps only once in a century do we have such unity of thankfulness, perhaps this is the first time through out the history of the Empire, that all contingents partake together in Praise, for the wonderful miracle performed, in the restoration to health of our Sovereign.

Have we reason to feel proud, for such an honour bestowed upon our Empire? I should say Yes.

As I said before, Lachute has her share in the general thanksgiving—now might I suggest that we offer Praise together, all denominations combined, wouldn't this give the real spirit of thankfulness? Wouldn't it be what our forefathers would wish us to do? For long must we remember how they loved their King, country and church, even dying for their great love.

Would it be possible if all ministers, deacons, and those concerned with the Church, to have a general meeting, and consider the possibility either for an outside service or perhaps in the Auditorium.

The Editor I am sure will be pleased to allow more of the valuable space in his paper, to be given to suggestions on this subject. Let us see what we can do, together.

A Citizen.

The town of Lachute can boast proudly of the wonderful scenery she has in her surroundings, the North River with its many winding beautiful bends, and the Laurentian mountains gazing down upon the valley of splendor.

It is the sportsman's paradise, the weary city worker's dream of rest. Lachute may also be congratulated on the cleanliness and attractiveness, the many necessities she has for social standing, such as Dramatic Societies, Lodges, Tennis Clubs, etc.

Perhaps she is as complete a town as any, of the same size, but one thing is missing, and that is what our closest neighbouring town of Brownsburg can boast of having over us.

It is an athletic club we need, our young men need the proper physical training, somewhere for them to pass the time. It would be a great asset to our town; we wouldn't find so many groups of young fellows "holding the wall up" which looks very bad from the visitor's standpoint.

Sportsmen, think it over, it is possible, let us next year possess an Athletic Club to be proud of.

"Custom-Built" Designers Created the New Willys-Knight

Men of long experience in the "custom-built" field designed the new-style Willys-Knight Six. Their artistry is quite apparent in this triumph of modern beauty.

Grace of line, richness of color, perfect symmetry and proportion distinguish the new-style Willys-Knight Six as the outstanding creation of these style specialists, and make available—at a remarkable low price—the style and richness previously associated only with costly, custom-built cars.

A great automobile—a great engine—no valves to grind, no costly carbon removing. Practically fool-proof and wear-proof. No Willys-Knight motor, so far as we know, has ever worn out. Arrange for a demonstration at your earliest convenience.

"FINGER-TIP CONTROL"

EMPIRE DAY
Today is Empire Day, and o'er the world
On every continent our flag's unfurled.
Not with a boast, but humbly this we say,
Greece' Carthage and Rome's empire passed away.
O Flag! Still may your red and white and blue
For honor, purity and truth stand true.
God grant where'er it floateth on the breeze
To keep us one, though scattered o'er the seas.
Canadian nation great, and yet to be
A greater home for children of the free;
Majestic mountains, with the snow-capped dome,
Where free from hurt the great wild creatures roam.
Far-reaching plains or wide expanse of lake
Are not what doth a nation mighty make,
But it doth soar to lofty summits when
It gives to earth the finest type of men.
So give us men who spurn not honest toil,
Who firmly stand for right 'mid all turmoil.
O make our homes abodes of peace and cheer
Of joy and love for those we hold most dear.
Help us the idol, Pleasure, to de-throne
That in our hearts Jehovah reign alone.
Thus, only thus, dear Canada our home
Through us shall honor to our Empire come.

Indicating the special delights of Ontario to the sportsmen tourists, the June issue of the national outdoor magazine, Rod and Gun and Canadian Silver Fox News, as in former years, again takes the form of a special Ontario Tourist number.

The contents of this issue include several splendid Ontario features and articles by such well known outdoor writers as Oskar Ripley, Merrill Denison, Robert James and a message of welcome from the Premier of Ontario. These are all additional to the regular features of national interest to all outdoor lovers on angling, wood craft, guns and ammunition, dogs and the silver fox industry, written by well known authorities.

Rod and Gun and Canadian Silver Fox News is published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

BROWNSBURG

Social Club

Those negligent members who have to date failed to pay their dues are requested to make an endeavour to settle by the end of the month.

The D. C. Co. Social Club purposes to form a Ladies' Athletic Section, and all ladies interested will please attend a meeting to be held at 8.00 p.m., Friday, May 31st. Officers will be elected and programme of training arranged. Come on girls - let's put this over with a bang!

Church Parade - Girl Guides and Brownies
A Church parade was held on Sunday, May 28th, the service being conducted in St. George's Anglican Church, Brownsburg. The guides looked very smart in their uniforms, and the brownies presented quite a pleasure picture, in their brown costumes. Mr. Lackey delivered a suitable address. He explained the origin of the Union Jack and also the meaning of Empire Day.

Farewell Party
A Farewell party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Steere on May 24th, to Mr. and Mrs. Beecroft, who are sailing for the old country on the Duchess of Atholl, June 7th, where they may possibly settle down in business.

Fishing
Over the holidays there were many parties from Brownsburg distributed over the country on fishing trips. Great were the yarns of the various fishermen on their return. Evidently every party was overwhelmingly successful, owing to their reticence in describing the exact locality of the catch. One party told me Messrs. Jim Reid, J. P. Martin, D. Staniforth that they caught 225 trout between them "somewhere near" Arundel. Another party, Mr. Eddie Barker and Mr. Harold Butler, etc., I believe had a wonderful match, but no amount of questioning brought forth the exact number. However, I am expected to believe stories of the fisherman's paradise; the exact position of which is guarded very closely.

Arbor Day

A pretty ceremony was performed on May 27th, outside of the Consolidated School, when various classes planted trees. Mr. D. Staniforth was much surprised, when, at the opening of his speech, somebody turned the car-lights on him. He stressed the need of greater co-operation between the parents and teachers in the management and education of the children. Songs were sung by the classes, and "O Canada" was especially well rendered.

The ceremony was preceded by a basketball match, between the senior girls.

Football - Rangers versus Rovers

Last week the "Old Vets" were challenged by a new team, the Rangers but through some misunderstanding arrangements were later made to play the Rover Scouts on Tuesday, May 28th. The match between the Old Vets and Rangers will be played next week.

A large number of people, about twenty adults and innumerable children, turned out to witness the match. The sun was very warm at the start and the water pail was continually empty.

The toss was won by West Mason, captain of the Rangers, and Alex. McCulloch scored a goal in the first few minutes of play. The Rover goal-keeper, Russell Graham made a bad clearance, thereby allowing an easy goal. The play then became fast and furious without either side being able to gain any decided advantage. Some clever acrobatic displays were given by the Scouts, who showed remarkable agility in heading the ball; however the writer would recommend that they do not draw up the knees when jumping for the ball. This practice may later seriously injure another player. The game for a time degenerated into indiscriminate kicking without any definite purpose in view. The players kept bunched together. Towards the end of the first half there was a nice bit of combination play by the Rangers, and a good centre in front of goal should have brought the scores even. The opportunity was lost, however, and half-time saw the score 1-0 against the Rovers.

The second half saw the Rovers pressing hard on the Rangers goal, and several times they came within an ace of scoring. The attack then returned to the Rangers and Bill Mason had a good chance to get the ball through, but failed. For a time the game played up and down the field, and both sides had narrow escapes. The players continually bunched and did not steady themselves for a straight kick at opportune moment. Johnny Campbell at last managed to score for the Rovers making matters even. Pat Seary, although offside scored a goal for the Rangers, which was disallowed as the referee blew the whistle a fraction of a second before. Bill Mason also had a fine chance to score, but failed. Near the end of the game, Lorne Martin had the unfortunate experience of putting a goal through his own goal, putting the Rovers in the lead 2-1. This remained unchanged to the end of the game.

Reviewing the match, one would say, that the spectators were given full share excitement but the fact remains that there is still too little combination work by the forwards. The backs and half backs were very good, and the referee's (Mr. H. W. Butler), decisions were impartial.

Island of Orleans—Island of Bacchus

The ship may be as old as the wayside shrine, and only one tramp where Cartier found the Indian and the vines. The house by the road is more than 250 years old.

"WE likewise found quantities of vines such as we had seen nowhere else in the world and which led us to call this the 'Island of Bacchus'." Thus the Saint Malo captain, Cartier, who discovered the Isle of Orleans in 1535 first named it.

Four hundred years. Ships of the adventurer, the explorer, the pioneer, the builder of empire and later, great ships of commerce followed those of Cartier, but the Isle of Bacchus has not known them all and has slept before the portal of the new world for many generations. Not that it has been forgotten, but that the bigger ships have gone by. Industry has not destroyed its charm and today it remains, if not the pristine Isle of Cartier, a piece of old France as translated by those who shortly followed him.

The illustrations above typify the island. "Progress" has been slow. Its people have learned the secret of content. Their tongue, their modes, their homes are of a century ago. They weave their catalogue; live in homespun. They are blessed with old people. Yet, a short ferry distance away, Quebec with its ramparts, its Chateau Frontenac and its ocean shipping, keeps pace with the advance of the times.

At Ste. Petronille, one of the quaint little villages where wealthy Quebec has its summer homes, an inn has this year been opened, so that it is now possible for the visitor to rest for a while and absorb at leisure the charm and beauty of the forgotten island. But he must be prepared to eat of the good vands of the Habitant and to live a little closer to the homespun. The people of the island will welcome him with good-nature but they have little liking for the modern. They have the secret of content and good-living, on the Island of Bacchus.

The name of the new Inn is La Catalogne and it once was a seigniorial mansion.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Editor, "Lachute Watchman,"
Dear Sir:

I am writing in the hope that I may be able to correct a misleading statement which appeared in the "Brownburg News" of the "Watchman" on May 15th. This item was to the effect that the "Fundamentalists" were progressing with the building of their new church. Now, sir, with your permission, I desire to inform your readers that the only Christian body of people in the Town of Brownburg who have any claim to be called Fundamentalists, have at the present time, no thought of building a new church. I understand that the instigation of being erected at the instigation of a number of people, amongst whom are a few who went out of the Baptist Church of Dalesville, because of that Church's loyalty to the historic Baptist Doctrine. The only claim, however, this new building has to being called Baptist Church, arises from the fact that the necessary funds are being provided by the Home Mission Board of the Baptist Convention, with the exception of a few hundred dollars. Of course, a body of people have a perfect right to erect a place of worship, if they so desire, and can secure the necessary funds from the Baptist Home Mission Board, or any other Board, but I do insist that they have absolutely no right to sail under false colours. Fundamentalists, as is well known, stand for the inerrancy and infallibility of God's Word. Now, as the Baptist Convention in 1927 voted for the retention of a Professor in its educational institution, McMaster University, who emphatically declared a few minutes before the vote was taken that "he would not subscribe to the infallibility of the Bible," and as this building which is to be their place of worship, will, to all intents and purposes be practically owned by the Baptist Convention, I fail to see how they can be called Fundamentalists. Again, it is generally conceded that an Anglican Church is operated for and by those who profess and practise the doctrines accepted by that Church. So with the Presbyterian or any other Denomination. Here, however, we have an Assembly of people, (it is not a Church), called by the name of Baptist, while as a matter of fact there is not a single Baptist upon whose shoulders rests one ounce of responsibility, financially, at least. In conclusion, sir, let me say that the Fundamentalist Baptists of Dalesville and Brownburg, as well as Lachute, still worship in the consecrated buildings which they have inherited from their fathers, and still love and proclaim and contend for the Faith once delivered to the Saints.

I remain,
Yours faithfully,
Sgd. (Rev.) A. Penman.

Flying Fingers and Flying Heels

Heien McGregor, of Winnipeg, "The Flying Pianist" whose "flying fingers" earned her unofficial title, and Myrtle Cook, whose flying heels won her the official title of Amateur Lady Champion of the World at the Olympic Meet last year, take a lesson in navigation from Captain Dott of the Canadian Pacific liner "Montrose."

Miss Cook, who now covers women's sports for the Montreal Star is not unfamiliar with the air, having flown the English Channel on several occasions when on the other side at athletic events. Miss McGregor is one of the few women familiar with the controls of trimotored planes. She travelled west as a passenger in the Junkers plane which was landed at Montreal from the Canadian Pacific freighter "Beaverbrae" for the Western Canada Airways, Limited, by whom it will be used in air mail and express services.

"Was it the collar you were looking for in the cupboard?" said Bill eagerly.

"Of course. Why no collar?" I said. For some reason Cayley considered it necessary to hide all Mark's clothes; not just the suit, but everything which he was wearing, or supposed to be wearing, at the time of the murder. But he hadn't hidden the collar. Why? Had he left it out by mistake? So I looked in the cupboard. It wasn't there. Had he left it out on purpose? If so, why?—and where was it? Naturally I began to say to myself, 'Where have I seen a collar lately? A collar all by itself?' And I remembered—what, Bill?"

Bill frowned heavily to himself, and shook his head.

"Don't ask me, Tony. I can't—By jove!" He threw up his head. "In the basket in the office bedroom!"

"Exactly."

"But is that the one?"

"The one that goes with the rest of the clothes? I don't know. Where else can it be? But if so, why send the collar quite casually to the wash in the ordinary way, and take immense trouble to hide everything else? Why, why, why?"

Bill bit hard at his pipe, but could think of nothing to say.

"Anyhow," said Antony, getting up restlessly, "I'm certain of one thing. Mark knew on the Monday that Robert was coming here."

CHAPTER XVIII.

The coroner, having made a few commonplace remarks as to the terrible nature of the tragedy which they had come to investigate that afternoon, proceeded to outline the case to the jury.

Antony did not expect to learn much from the evidence—he knew the facts of the case so well by now—but he wondered if Inspector Birch had developed any new theories. If so, they would appear in the coroner's examination, for the coroner would certainly have been coached by the police as to the important facts to be extracted from each witness. Bill was the first to be put through it.

"Now, about this letter, Mr. Beverley?" he was asked when his chief evidence was over. "Did you see it at all?"

"I didn't see the actual writing. I saw the back of it. Mark was holding it up when he told us about his brother."

"You don't know what was in it, then?"

Bill had a sudden shock. He had read the letter only that morning. He knew quite well what was in it. But it wouldn't do to admit this. And then just as he was about to perjure himself, he remembered: Antony had heard Cayley telling the Inspector.

"I knew afterwards," I was told. But Mark didn't read it out at breakfast."

"You gathered, however, that it was an unwelcome letter?"

"Oh, yes!"

"Would you say that Mark was frightened by it?"

"Not frightened. Sort of bitter—and resigned. Sort of 'Oh, Lord, here we are again!'"

There was a titter here and there. The coroner smiled and tried to pretend that he hadn't.

"Thank you, Mr. Beverley."

The next witness was summoned by the name of Andrew Amos, and Antony looked up with interest, wondering who he was.

"He lives at the inner lodge," whispered Bill to him.

All that Amos had to say was that a stranger had passed by his lodge at a little before three that afternoon, and had spoken to him. He had seen the body and recognized it as the man.

"What did he say?"

"Is this right for the Red House?" or something like that, sir."

"What did you say?"

"I said, 'This is the Red House. Who do you want to see?' He was a bit rough-looking, you know, sir, and I didn't know what he was doing there."

"Well?"

"Well, sir, he said, 'Is Mister Mark Ablett at home?' It doesn't sound much put like that, sir, but I didn't care about the way he said it. So I got in front of him like, and said, 'What do you want, eh?' and he gave a sort of chuckle and said, 'I want to see my dear brother Mark.'"

"Well, then I took a closer look at him, and I see that p'raps he might be his brother, so I said, 'If you'll follow the drive, sir, you'll come to the house. Of course I can't say if Mr. Ablett's at home.' And he gave a sort of nasty laugh again, and said, 'Fine place Mister Mark Ablett's got here. Plenty of money to spend, eh?' Well, then I had another look at him, but before I could make up my mind, he laughed and went on. That's all I can tell you, sir."

Andrew Amos stepped down and moved away to the back of the room, nor did Antony take his eyes off him until he was assured that Amos intended to remain there until the inquest was over.

"Who's Amos talking to now?" he whispered to Bill.

"Parsons. One of the gardeners. He's at the outside lodge on the Stanton road. They're all here today. Sort of holiday for 'em."

"I wonder if he's giving evidence, too," thought Antony.

He was. He followed Amos. He had been at work on the lawn in front of the house and had seen Robert Ablett arrive. He didn't hear the shot—not to notice. He was a little hard of hearing. He had seen a gentleman arrive about five minutes after Mr. Robert.

"Can you see him in court now?" asked the coroner.

Parsons looked round slowly. Antony caught his eye and smiled.

"That's him," said Parsons, pointing.

Everybody looked at Antony.

"That was about five minutes after-ward?"

"About that, sir."

"Did anybody come out of the house before this gentleman's arrival?"

"No, sir. That is to say, I didn't see 'em."

Stevens followed. She gave her evidence much as she had given it to the Inspector. Nothing new was brought out by her examination. Then came Elsie. As the reporters scribbled down what she had overheard, they added in brackets "Sensation" for the first time that afternoon.

"How soon after you had heard this did the shot come?" asked the coroner.

"Almost at once, sir."

"Were you still in the hall?"

"Oh, no, sir. I was just outside Mrs. Stevens' room. The housekeeper, sir."

"You didn't think of going back to the hall to see what had happened?"

"Oh, no, sir. I just went in to Mrs. Stevens, and she said, 'Oh, what was that?' frightened-like. And I said, 'That was in the house, Mrs. Stevens, that was.' Just like something going off, it was."

"Thank you," said the coroner.

There was another emotional disturbance in the room as Cayley went into the witness-box; not "Sensation" this time, but an eager and, as it seemed to Antony, sympathetic interest. Now they were getting to grips with the drama.

He gave his evidence carefully, unemotionally—the lies with the same slow deliberation as the truth. Antony watched him intently, wondering what it was about him which had this odd sort of attractiveness. For Antony, who knew that he was lying, and lying (as he believed) not for Mark's sake but his own, yet could not help sharing some of that general sympathy with him.

"Was Mark ever in possession of a revolver?" asked the coroner.

"Not to my knowledge. I think I should have known if he had been."

"You were alone with him all that morning. Did he talk about this visit of Robert's at all?"

"I didn't see very much of him in the morning. I was at work in my room, and outside, and so on. We lunched together and he talked of it then a little."

"In what terms?"

"Well—" he hesitated, and then went on, "I can't think of a better word than 'peevishly.'"

"You didn't hear any conversation between the brothers when they were in the office together?"

"No. I happened to go into the library just after Mark had gone in, and I was there all the time."

"Was the library door open?"

"Oh, yes."

"Did you see or hear the last witness at all?"

"No."

"Would you call Mark a hasty-tempered man?"

Cayley considered this carefully before answering.

"Hasty-tempered, yes," he said. "But not violent-tempered."

"Was he fairly athletic? Active and quick?"

"Active and quick, yes. Not particularly strong."

"Yes. . . . One question more. Was Mark in the habit of carrying any considerable sum of money about with him?"

"Yes. He always had one £100 note on him, and perhaps ten or twenty pounds as well."

"Thank you, Mr. Cayley."

Cayley went back heavily to his seat. "Damn it," said Antony to himself, "why do I like the fellow?"

"Antony Gillingham!"

Again the eager interest of the room could be felt. Who was this stranger who had got mixed up in the business so mysteriously?

Antony smiled at Bill and stepped up to give his evidence.

He explained how he came to be staying at the "George" at Woodham, how he had heard that the Red House was in the neighborhood, how he had walked over to see his friend Beverley, and had arrived just after the tragedy. Thinking it over afterward he was fairly certain that he had heard the shot, but it had not made any impression on him at the time.

the French windows together and found them shut?"

"Yes."

"You pushed them in and came to the body. Of course you had no idea whose body it was?"

"No."

"Did Mr. Cayley say anything?"

"He turned the body over, just so as to see the face, and when he saw it, he said, 'Thank God!'"

Again the reporters wrote "Sensation."

"Did you understand what he meant by that?"

"I asked him who it was, and he said that it was Robert Ablett. Then he explained that he was afraid at first it was the cousin with whom he lived—Mark."

"Yes. Did he seem upset?"

"Very much so at first. Less when he found that it wasn't Mark."

RED SEA ROUTE.

A short experience convinced him that, by the use of steamers, the Red Sea route could be made the fastest practical route for mails between England and India.

Five to six months had been the average time of transit previously.

In order to prove his theory that the Suez route was the quickest, Waghorn was appointed in October, 1829, by Lord Ellenborough as official messenger to convey dispatches from the court of directors of the East India Company to Sir John Malcolm, Governor of Bombay.

He left the Eagle Tavern in Gracechurch-street on October 28. He took carriage from Dunkirk across the Continent through five kingdoms to Trieste, which he reached in six and a half days.

Thence he took boat to Alexandria, and from there he reached Rosetta on donkeyback.

Waghorn travelled to Cairo by boat, and from there on camels to Suez, where he engaged an Arab dhow which took him to Kosseer, and across the Red Sea to Jeddah, a journey of 649 miles without compasses on an uncharted sea, and with a mutinous Arab crew. He reached Jeddah after only six and a half days' sailing.

VICTIM OF FEVER.

Fever laid him low, and for six weeks he was in bed, when the ship Thetis, of the East India Company, entered the roads and took him on board, and on March 21, 1830, after four months and 21 days of travelling, he landed in Bombay.

The return journey was accomplished in less than a third of the time of his outward trip.

Count Ferdinand de Lesseps acknowledged that it was after a conversation with Waghorn that he was convinced of the necessity of the construction of the Suez Canal. He erected a bust to Waghorn at the entrance of the canal, and himself wrote the inscription.

First India Mail Service Started

Naval Officer's Four Months' Dash 100 Years Ago Recalled

London.—The starting of the Air Mail service to India recalls that, exactly a hundred years ago, the first overland trip was undertaken by Lieut. Thomas Waghorn, R.N., which resulted in the establishment of the overland route to India as used today.

Although Lieut. Waghorn carried through successfully the first journey from London to Bombay and back, he received no aid or recognition from the Government or the East India Company, for he ran the service for 15 years as a private enterprise.

Waghorn, after leaving the Navy, enrolled himself in the service of the East India Company as a "Hooghly" pilot. He took part in the first Burmese war. During these campaigns he had his first experience of steamships, and when peace was signed he turned his attention to the question of steam navigation.

Glorious Tale Of Merchant Navy in War

Notable Tribute To Heroism And Endurance of "Our Magnificent Seamen"

By THE PRINCE OF WALES
The Prince of Wales as Master of the Merchant Navy and Fishing Fleets, contributes a foreword to Sir Archibald Hurd's latest volume on "The British Merchant Navy."

As Master of the Merchant Navy and Fishing Fleets, I welcome the opportunity offered me by Sir Archibald Hurd of contributing a few introductory remarks to the volume which completes the history—based on official documents—of the magnificent part played by British Merchantmen in the Great War.

It has been my fortunate lot to be a world-wide traveller, and I have encountered the British liner and tramp not only on every sea but in many a port in both hemispheres. The sight of the Red Ensign has, in these later days, given me a thrill of a very special kind, for that familiar piece of hunting can never fail to recall the wonderful record of our merchant seamen throughout the struggle of four and a-half years.

The present volume raises the curtain on what I take to have been the climax of that vast drama—the enemy's plunge into unrestricted submarine warfare on our merchant shipping. Thus was provided the final test of a heroism and endurance unparalleled in history, and how magnificently our seamen responded to the test is to be found chronicled in these pages. To view that record in its proper perspective it is well to recall those days at the very outbreak of war which already seem to some of us to be almost lost in the mists of time.

The participation of our seamen in the struggle began with the operations of the German raiders. There was nothing surprising or unprecedented in the destruction achieved by the Emden and other German cruisers and armed merchantmen in Eastern waters and elsewhere.

Hostilities were conducted in harmony with the principles laid down by international law, and though many valuable ships were sunk, the toll was no greater than might have been expected, and not a single life of the captured crews was sacrificed. The British seaman recognized that nothing more was being asked of him than to accept the usual hazards of a naval conflict. It was a phase of the war, in short, in which the dictates of humanity were strictly regarded, and every reasonable consideration was shown to the passengers and crews of the vessels unlucky enough to be taken.

This phase, however, was short-lived. With the arrival on the scene of the submarine and the indiscriminate use of the mine, the whole position for the merchant seaman was changed. He found himself faced by hazards and perils such as he had never before experienced, or indeed had ever conceived as possible.

With the intensification of the enemy's campaign, the British sailor, a non-combatant following an ordinarily peaceful avocation, saw himself directly involved in the whole frightful mechanism of war, whose grim operation, as I have said, reached its climax in the phase of unrestricted submarine attack recorded in detail in this third volume of the history.

Let us who are land-dwellers not mince words over this thing. It is the glory of our Merchant Navy, and will be so acclaimed by generations to come, that they faced without hesitation the tremendous odds and the frequent hazard of death, undaunted in spirit to the bitter end. Let us not forget, also, that had it been otherwise this country of ours must have perished.

One highly characteristic phase of the work of our Merchant Navy, described in this volume, is that covering the activities of the Auxiliary Patrol. I imagine the Auxiliary Patrol was one of the most striking, as it certainly was one of the most successful, of the many pieces of war-time improvisation which history will place to the credit of the British nation. It was born, as need hardly be recalled, out of those new conditions of submarine attack and indiscriminate mine raids to which I have referred, and it gradually evolved into a vast supplementary fleet.

Here was indeed a medley of small vessels—trawlers fresh from our fishing grounds, drifters, whalers, paddle-steamers so familiar to Channel excursionists, steam yachts so well known in the Solent, motor-launches and motor-boats.

Their hazardous duties were as varied as their types. In their long hours of patrol they watched for and hunted German submarines; they searched for and dragged mines; they fought hostile aircraft; they controlled and examined millions of tons of shipping navigating the Narrow Seas; and in many other ways splendidly seconded the efforts of the Grand Fleet.

Varied indeed these craft were in type, but their crews were animated by one heart and one spirit. As time went on, this collection of ships was welded into a great disciplined service of 4,000 vessels with hits operations extending as far north as the White Sea, to the Mediterranean and Aegean in the south, and westward to the West Indies. The Auxiliary Patrol was in its days of complete development manned by nearly 50,000 officers and men. The figures representative of the full war effort of the merchant service as a whole would make staggering totals. Therein it was carrying on and even bettering the tradition of centuries.

On Tower Hill a fitting and impressive memorial, bearing the names of the officers and men of the Merchant Navy and Fishing Fleets who have no grave but the sea, and who died that this country might live, was unveiled by Her Majesty the Queen on December 12. It has been erected by the Governments of all the peoples of the whole Empire as a tribute, to last for all time, to these men's heroic services.

It has been said that two-thirds of the Elizabethan fleet which met so triumphantly the shock of the Spanish Armada were merchant vessels, and that the proportions of force with which Drake "sing'd the King of Spain's beard" was much the same.

The relations of the two great Services have altered since those days, but the Great War has served to prove once more that the Merchant Navy is as essential to-day as ever it was to the operations of the Royal Navy and the safeguarding of the life of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

—Edward P. Master of the Merchant Navy and Fishing Fleets.

Settling Britons

There is much to be commended in the plans of the Overseas League for the settlement of one thousand young Britons throughout the Canadian West this year. They are not to be dumped into this country and left to seek their own devices, but from first to last will be kept in close and sympathetic touch with League officials, through the medium of migration stations which the travelling secretary of the League has come to Canada to establish during the next six months. The cost of their transportation and settlement will be defrayed out of a fund subscribed by the merchants of London for the purpose.

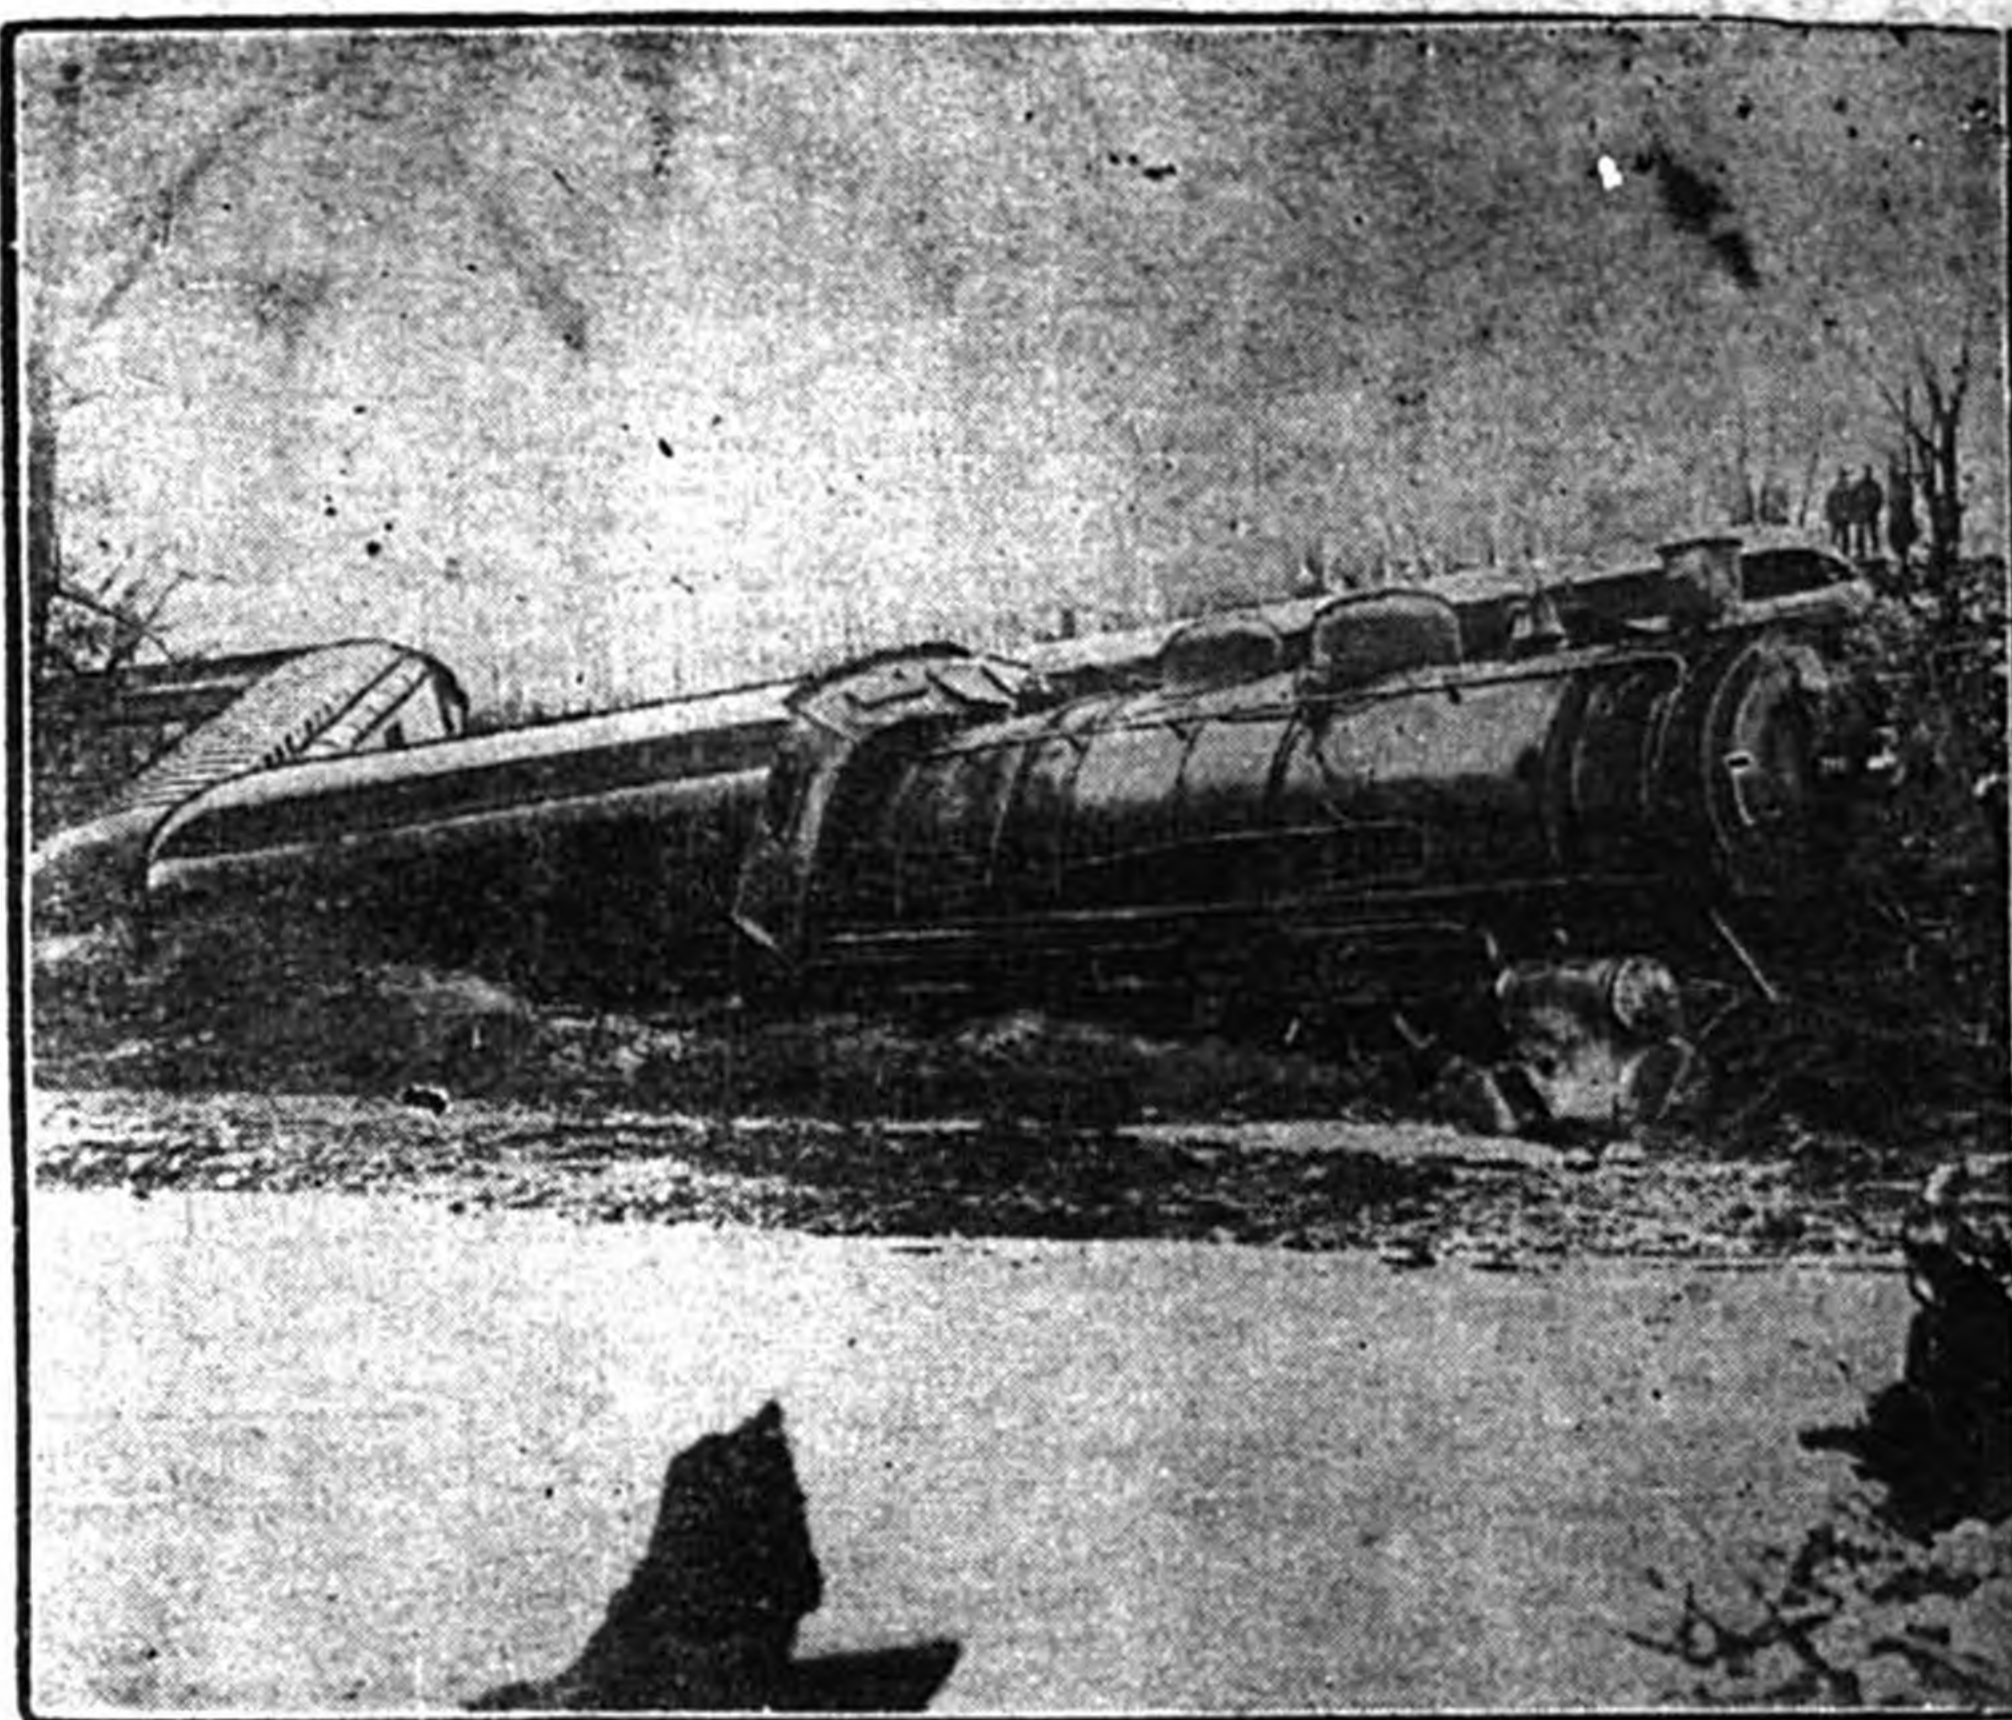

The principal shortcoming in the past in Canada's treatment of immigrants is that they have been left largely to their own devices after their arrival here, and have been severely handicapped in consequence in their efforts to establish themselves in their new homes. While there has been considerable improvement in this connection of recent years, much still remains to be done, and the action of the Overseas League will be a real help, for it is action in the right direction and along the necessary lines.

These young Britons will in due course form part of the backbone of our West. They will be among the future citizens and administrators of the West and they will play their part in shaping its destinies and those of the Dominion as a whole. It is in the highest degree necessary that they should be given an encouraging start as possible, that they should be made to feel they are welcome from the moment of their landing among us, and that their path, which must of necessity be more or less rough at first, should be smoothed as far as is possible consistent with Canadian ideals. The Overseas League holds this idea before it, and plans to pursue it steadily.—Montreal Star.

Bombs in India

London Daily Chronicle (Lib.): They (the Indian Nationalists) cannot at one and the same time put themselves on the side of disorder and work effectively for constitutional liberty. The outrage at Delhi should at least serve to show them the direction in which their intransigence is leading them. Constitutional capacity can only be proved by those who will fall in with the spirit of constitutionalism. The British Parliament would be wrong to shake off its responsibility for India till those who aspire to represent her show they can safely shoulder the burden.

A Strange Wreck With No Ill Results

World Flight Billed for Fall

Washington Post Prints Details of Proposed Five-Motored Plane to Hop Off from New York in September, According to Plans

Washington — Six internationally known aviators are preparing to begin a nonstop flight around the world from New York on the first clear day in September, according to the Washington Post.

The names of only three of the aviators are given—Lieut. Albert D. Hulse, former army and air mail pilot; Capt. Harry W. Lyon Jr., navigator on the transatlantic flight of the Southern Cross, and Lieut. L. T. O'Connell, radio officer at Lakehurst. The commander, the newspaper said, will be a World War aviator with more than 5,000 flying hours to his credit.

The make of the plane in which they intend to attempt the most ambitious flight ever undertaken was not learned, but it was described as being constructed partly of metal and partly of linen fabric, powered with five 420-horsepower Pratt and Whitney engines, equipped to take on fuel in flight, and capable of a maximum speed of 150 miles an hour and a cruising speed of 120 miles.

Twenty-two stations are to be established along the 13,500-mile route, of which 10 will be used only in case of emergency, the Post says, and two of the five engines are to be held in reserve. They will be sufficient to bring the ship through, the aviators believe, if all three of the other engines break up under the five or six-day strain.

The fuel tanks will have a maximum capacity of 1,900 gallons, but only about half that amount, the newspaper says, will be taken aboard at New York to prevent overtaxing of the engines at the start. More fuel will be taken on while passing over Boston, and the supply will again be replenished over Nova Scotia, under the plan, while a third refueling plane is to meet the nonstop fliers near Glasgow after completion of the transatlantic leg of the flight. From Glasgow, the route outlined lies over Siberia, thence to Nome, Alaska, south of the United States and along a northern route back to New York. Engine trouble is not expected until Nome is reached, if it is to be encountered at all.

The cost of the flight is placed at approximately $335,000, and the backers of the plan are said to have underwritten it to the extent of $500,000.

Radio Police Call Gives Chicago Burglar Tip-Off

Chicago.—Radio is a great invention, the burglar said.

A woman, recently observing a burglar leisurely looting the third-floor apartment at 5737 Prairie Ave., telephoned police. Police notified radio station WGN, so that word might be flashed to touring squad cars equipped with receiving sets.

A moment later listeners on the WGN programs heard this: "Detective squads, attention. There's a burglar on the third floor at 5737 Prairie Ave."

The squad of Lieutenant Walter Storms heard the call and sped toward the address given. They entered the apartment and found the robber gone. In a corner a radio was going full blast. Tucked under the lid was this note:

"Dear Radio Man: Thanks for the tip-off. You're a swell announcer. I'm now signing off."

Canadian Combines Act Found to be Valid

Ottawa.—The Combines Investigation Act of 1923 dealing with conspiracies in the restraint of trade, and challenged in 1927 by the Proprietary Articles Trade Association as ultra vires, has been declared valid by the Supreme Court of Canada.

When this association of druggists was found to be a combine in restraint of trade, following an injury by the Federal Government they filed a complaint and the matter was referred to the Supreme Court. The effect of the judgment is to uphold the act and any procedure of inquiry or subsequent prosecution which it sets up, in combination between the Dominion and provincial authorities.

Shackles of Past Are Thrown Away

Revolutionary Movements in Recent Years Find Sex Clamoring for Its Rights

Although the days are past when Chinese parents threw their girl babies into the river, says "The Pathfinder," they are still very anxious that their babies should be boys and not girls.

One of the best things about the new regime in China, which mean largely the shaking off of the shackles of the past, is the improvement in the condition of the women. They are coming into their own. They were active in the revolutionary movements and there is a widespread and growing demand for women's rights.

Not only has the drowning of girl babies stopped, but the old barbarous habit of binding the feet of women to keep them small is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. It is forbidden by the new republican government.

One of the real powers in the present Nanking government is the wife of the president, Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek who has been accused of aiming at a throne. Another woman, Mrs. Soong Cheng, represents the Nanking government in France. Several of the women now prominent in political life are graduates of American and European schools.

The new government in its ignorance has tried to tell the women how to wear their hair and how to make their dresses, but it has already learned that such efforts are useless.

One evil practice, still apparent, is the selling of women into slavery during the times of distress. The Rev. F. J. Griffith of the Church of England recently stated at Peking that 17,000 women and girls of the new province of Suiyan had been sold into slavery because of the famine and that they brought $100,000 in gold. They were taken into Inner Shansi. The women are bought by wealthy people who use them for servants. That practice forms one more problem for the new government.

It is well to know that right is always moving toward victory.

Describes Causes Of Unemployment

Sir William Clark Gives Survey of Situation in Britain

QUESTION OF TIME

High Commissioner Asks Welcoming Hand for New Immigrants

Vancouver.—Causes underlying unemployment in the old country were described by Sir William Clark, high commissioner for Great Britain to Canada, in a statement that gave a comprehensive survey of the situation from pre-war days to the present.

The obvious momentary relief, emigration, was referred to by Sir William when he bespoke a welcoming hand to those men and women of British race who came to Canada to make a fresh start. "While we look forward confidently to the eventual restoration of our trade, we must recognize that the necessary readjustments, the fuller reorganization of our older industries must all take time," said the speaker.

"Our financial position is strong enough to enable us to carry on during this intermediate period but that does not help those who want employment, and I am sure that all of you in Canada will desire to give a helping hand to those who come here."

INSURANCE QUESTION

Sir William suggested that unemployment insurance was organized in recognition of the well known economic fact that there must always be some measure of unemployment in great industrial countries, especially in trades affected by the seasons of the year.

"There is a new spirit of co-operation, a new desire of employers to get together and study jointly the difficulties besetting our trade," Sir William said.

Various plans of the Government for reducing unemployment were suggested by the high commissioner, including that of emigration to the overseas Dominions.

"There is no question," he said, "of trying to place men in Canada who have not first been approved before the Canadian authorities as thoroughly suitable and of a type likely to make good. The training which the men undergo, is an additional and very important safeguard. It not only gives a man some knowledge of his job and some acquaintance with Canadian methods and Canadian farm implements, but it also serves to try him out thoroughly and to test whether he is likely to make a success on the land."

Ancient Ur Proves Flood

Leader of British Museum Expedition Declares Discoveries There Confirm Story of the Deluge, and Alter Whole Aspect of Archaeology

Brunswick, Me.—"The excavations at the city of Ur during the past seven years by the joint expedition of the University of Pennsylvania Museum, of which I am the leader, have changed the outlook and given an entirely new aspect to history and archaeology," declared C. Leonard Woolley, British archaeologist, speaking at the second session of the Bowdler Society on April 30.

"It is not only a picture surprising in itself but it is an addition to the science of history which completely revolutionizes our ideas and obliges us to look for the roots of our civilization to-day in a field hitherto unsuspected."

"The rise of this civilization was interrupted at a period we cannot yet date by a great disaster, which has left its record in the story of the flood. Of this disaster we found last winter material proof enabling us not only to confirm ancient Sumerian records, but to state that the Biblical story of the deluge is based ultimately upon historical fact."

"The excavations which have been going on for seven years have dealt almost exclusively with the central part of the city, which was the religious quarters dedicated to the Moon God, Nannar. The period of the city's greatest political importance was about 2300 B.C. when it was the capital of the empire."

"The tombs of private people and of kings of that date have yielded most astounding relics in gold, silver, copper, stone and mosaic work bearing witness to culture older than the First Dynasty of Egypt, and equal to almost anything that the ancient world produced. Its art was of a remarkably high quality; its architects were familiar with all the basic principles of construction known to-day. Writing had already been invented; society was well organized and international trade extended over half the continent."

Old Fashioned Youth: "Eunice, worthy as I am, I have resolved to sue for your hand." Business Man's Daughter: "All right, go ahead and sue!"

Schedule of Proposed Rates by the Gatineau Electric Light Company

Through the courtesy of your Town Council, the Gatineau Electric Power Company were permitted to address the members to extend the standard rates of the Company which have been rapidly accepted by the majority of Municipalities supplied by the Company.

We therefore desire to take this opportunity of explaining to the public what these rates are in order to show the advantages to be gained by adopting them.

WE OFFER FOR LIGHTING:

$1.00 per month plus 5c. per kilowatt hour for energy consumed.

The gross bill subject to a discount of 10% on payment of account within 10 days of rendering.

Minimum monthly bill $1.00.

COOKING:

50c. per element per month plus 1 1/2c. per kilowatt hour for energy consumed.

The gross bill subject to a discount of 10% on payment of account within 10 days of rendering.

Minimum monthly bill 50c. per element.

STREET LIGHTING:

$12.50 per lamp per year per 60 candle power lamp.

The rates at present in force in your municipality are as follows:

LIGHTING:

First 50 k.w.h.—10c. per k.w.h. net.
Second 50 k.w.h.—8c. per k.w.h. net.
Third 50 k.w.h.—6c. per k.w.h. net.
Balance 5c. per k.w.h. net.

Minimum Bill $1.00

COOKING:

50c. per element per month plus 2 1/2c. per k.w.h. net for energy consumed.

Minimum bill 50c. per element.

STREET LIGHTING:

$12.50 per lamp per year per 60 candle power lamp.

In order to emphasize the saving to be made by the majority of the users of electric service, we tabulate the following comparisons:

Lighting	k.w.h.	Taux à Lachute	Under proposed rate
Eclairage		Under Lachute rate	Nouveaux Taux
10	$1.00		$1.35
20	2.00		1.80
30	3.00		2.25 (7 1/2c. k.w.h.)
40	4.00		2.70
50	5.00		3.15
60	5.80		3.60
100	9.00		5.40
200	14.50		9.90 (5c. k.w.h.)
Cooking
(4 element range)
100	4.50		8.38
150	5.75		4.16
200	7.00		4.95
(6 element range)
100	5.50		4.28
150	6.75		5.06
200	8.00		5.85

STREET LIGHTING:

Instead of 60 candle power lamps, you will have practically twice the candle power for a lower cost.

Should the above schedule of rates meet with the approval of the electors, we ask that they grant to the Company, the right to exclusively use the streets and public places of your Municipality for the placing of the necessary poles and equipment for the distribution of light, heat and power to the inhabitants for a period of ten years.

When the electors consider the fact that the Gatineau Electric Power Co. is now owned and operated by a Company which has vast power resources at its disposal for sale to industries in the Municipalities connected to its lines, and is primarily interested in the building up of these territories for the sale of electrical energy, then it needs no further explanation of why your municipality should grant a franchise to the Company to protect its present and future investments which are so closely united with your own interests.

Grace à la courtoisie du Conseil de la Ville, et de la Chambre de la Ville, la Cie Gatineau Electric Power a pu leur donner toutes les explications a sujet de la nouvelle liste des taux fixes, qui ont été acceptés incontinent par la majorité des municipalités, desservies par la Compagnie.

Nous saisissons donc la présente occasion pour expliquer au public ce que sont ces taux, afin de démontrer les avantages qui résulteront de leur adoption.

ECLAIRAGE:

$1.00 par mois plus 5c. par kilowatt heure de consommation.

Un escompte de 10% sera accordé sur paiement.

Minimum de la facture mensuelle: $1.00.

CUISON:

50c. pour chaque élément par mois, plus 1 1/2c. par kilowatt-heure de consommation.

Un escompte de 10% sera accepté sur paiement dans les 10 jours de l'envoi de la facture.

Minimum de la facture mensuelle: 50c. pour chaque élément.

ECLAIRAGE DES RUES:

$1.00 par mois chaque lampe de 100 watt. Les taux actuellement en force dans votre municipalité sont les suivants:

Les 1ers 50 k.w.h.—10c. par k.w.h. net.
Seconds 50 k.w.h.—8c. par k.w.h. net.
Troisièmes 50 k.w.h.—6c. par k.w.h. net.

Funerals and weddings can hold no terrors for Captain Frank Middleton, of the Canadian Pacific ship "Alberta," who has been presented with no less than three top hats. As captain in charge of the vessel entering the ports of Sault Ste. Marie, Port McNicoll and Fort William for the first time this season, opening navigation at each point, he was given the traditional welcoming address and presented with a silk hat on each occasion. His three shining toppers repose in a neat row in his cabin and it is estimated that it will take three hundred years to wear them all out.

Here and There

(297)
Arthur W. Cullen, Chicago wheat king, is erecting a hotel in his native city of Quebec, Ontario, which will be operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway. A golf course and pleasure park will be also established, the whole undertaking involving an expenditure of about $2,000,000.

The sumptuous new Solarium lounge car put into service by the C. P. R. as rear end equipment aboard the Trans-Canada Limited is being nicknamed the "mustard plaster car". It was facetiously suggested by railway officials that the company should provide passengers with mustard plasters as it was recently claimed in England that these were more effective than ultra-violet rays. This contention was disproved, however, and the trouble taken by the railway in glazing the end sun room of the car with special vitreous glass, which admits the ultra-violet and most beneficial rays of the sun, was justified.

Officials of the C. P. R. in the east can now speak to their confreres in the west—as in connection with the recent improvement and extension of the railways telegraph carrier system telephone facilities were also thrown open.

The community of globe trotters who made a circuit of the globe during the winter aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Australia contributed a series of remarkable items to the social notes of the New York newspapers when their vessel terminated her voyage there. An engagement, a marriage, and the birth of five children to a Japanese passenger were announced, constituting in the opinion of Captain Latta, commander of the cruise ship, something hitherto unrecorded in seafaring annals. The five Japanese babies were appropriately named the "Empress of Australia," "Empress of Scotland," "Empress of France," "Empress of Canada," and "Empress of Russia," after the giants of the Canadian Pacific fleet. The babies were canaries.

D. C. Coleman, vice-president of western lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been elected a director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York. The only other Canadian director is Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Premier of the Province of Quebec.

A tunnel built at a cost of $250,000 makes it now possible for trains from North Vancouver to connect with the Canadian Pacific Transcontinental system. The first train making use of this new connecting link that also makes use of the second narrows bridge and the harbour rail system, carried the Governor-General and many distinguished westerners.
