The Dalesville and Lachute Baptist Churches have engaged the services of Mr. Thos. McClure, a second-year student of The Toronto Baptist Seminary, to assist the Pastor, Rev. A.
Penman, during the summer months.
Additional Sunday services, comprising a second service each at Dalesville and Lachute, and a Bible School session and regular service at Mabel, will be added, as announced in our Church Notices column. The number of week-night meetings will be augmented also. Mr. McClure arrived this week to assume his duties.

The regular meeting of above Council was held in the Town Hall, on Wednesday last, when Mayor C.
Tremblay presided over the Council, comprising Aldermen H. M. Lavigne, Dr. Rodrigue, H. Coutu, J. B. Raymond, J. G. Lacasse, P. Dobbie, A.
Elliott, C. Miller, Jos. Speight, all of whom were present.

Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved and report of finance committee adopted.

The Gatineau Electric Light Co.,
Ltd. made formal application to the Corporation of the Town of Lachute, requesting them to adopt the standard ten years franchise which is in force in the majority of the surrounding territory such as

Hawkesbury
whose previous rate was 8c.
Rigaud " " 10c.
St. Andrews " " 10c.
Carillon " " 10c.
Vankleek Hill " " 10c.
Hudson " " 9c.
Vaudreuil " " 10c.

The rates proposed in this new agreement are according to the previous correspondence. The adoption of this new schedule of rates will mean a considerable saving to the customers in Lachute.

On studying the accounts of the customers in Lachute over a period of 12 months and using the proposed rate as a comparison out of 837 accounts 280 customers will pay more and 557 save or remain the same.

The 288 customers pay 493.16 more
The 557 customers pay 3,703.12 less

Total saving of $3,209.96

There were only two recent referendums in municipalities as to the popular favor of adopting this new rate and for the information of the Corporation which were quoted as follows:

In Vankleek Hill, where the existing rate was 10c. net the vote was 218 for its adoption with 11 against.
In Original, 116 for adoption and 12 against.

Four applications were received for position of secretary-treasurer as follows: G. A. Clunie for $1800; James Gilmour, of Lachute, $3,000; W. N.
Miller, of Detroit $1,500 and Germain
Filion $1,800.

The Mayor paid tribute to the capability and energy displayed by the acting secretary. Mr. Filion, who had rendered splendid service during the time of his appointment, and having gained considerable experience he thought the town would be well served to continue with the present secretary who was young, capable and active.

It was moved by Dr. Rodrigue, seconded by Alderman H. Coutu, that Mr. Germain Filion be maintained in the position of secretary-treasurer of the Town of Lachute, at a salary of $1800 per year, to become effective on July 1st. that an agreement be entered into with Mr. Filion, covering his appointment, as to salary, office hours and other conditions mentioned in advertisement in the Watchman, Lachute, that a stipulation be also inserted, that in the event of any party to this agreement becoming dissatisfied for any reason or cause, the said agreement will be discontinued by a thirty days notice from either party, that in the event of dismissal for insubordination, no notice will be given by the Corporation.

By-law 112 amending by-law 108 regarding parking and traffic passed its third reading.

By-law 111 amending by-law 106, regarding early closing, also passed
its third reading.

A 12 inch sewer pipe line was ordered laid on Berry Lane to Barron Avenue and thence to Main Street, work to be executed under supervision of Road Committee.

Mr. Urbain was appointed Town
Constable and to be sworn accordingly, his duties being to act on part of time allowed by his regular occupation, in arresting anyone violating the town's traffic by-law, also peddlers and other outside merchants selling articles of commerce in town without a license, that his compensation for such arrests, providing conviction is secured, will be at rate of 50¢ of fines paid, with exception of first offence for peddlers and outside merchants for which compensation will be $5.00 upon tax being paid to the Town, and that compensation for any other work done as per instructions from the Mayor or Chairman of the Police Committee, will be at the rate of 35¢. per mile travelled, if no arrest made, that Mr. Urbain will act on this basis for one month from now on trial, after which a different agreement can be entered into if any party is not satisfied by giving one week's notice to that effect.

Mr. Leslie Carruthers spent the week-end at his home in Dunany.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Holt and daughter spent Sunday in Carillon.

R. K. Bennett, of the Federal Live Stock Branch, in company with Mr.
A. Bothwell, has been collecting wool and giving sheep dipping demonstrations throughout the County. 3,000 lbs. have been shipped to Lenoirville for purposes of grading which will then be sold on co-operative basis.
Last year's average price to the farmers netted 31½ cents per lb.

There was a sudden snigger from a nervous gentleman in the crowd at the back of the room, and the coroner put on his glasses and stared sternly in the direction from which it came. The nervous gentleman hastily decided that the time had come to do up his bootlace. The coroner put down his glasses and continued:

"Did anybody come out of the house while you were coming up the drive?"

"No."

"Thank you, Mr. Gillingham."

He was followed by Inspector Birch.

The Inspector, realizing that this was his afternoon, and that the eyes of the world were upon him, produced a plan of the house and explained the situation of the different rooms. The plan was then handed to the jury.

Inspector Birch, so he told the world, had arrived at the Red House at 4.42 p.m. on the afternoon in question. He had been received by Mr. Matthew Cayley, who had made a short statement to him, and he had then proceeded to examine the scene of the crime.

The French windows had been fore-ed from outside. The door leading into the hall was locked; he had searched the room thoroughly and had found no trace of a key. In the bedroom leading out of the office he had found an open window. There were no marks on the window, but it was a low one, and, as he found from experiment, quite easy to step out of without touching it with the boots.

A few yards outside the window a shrubbery began. There were no recent footmarks outside the window, but the ground was in a very hard condition owing to the absence of rain. In the shrubbery, however, he found several twigs on the ground, recently broken off, together with other evidence that some body had been forcing its way through.

He had questioned everybody connected with the estate, and none of them had been into the shrubbery recently. By forcing a way through the shrubbery it was possible for a person to make a detour of the house and get to the Stanton end of the park without ever being in sight of the house itself.

He had made inquiries about the deceased. Deceased had left for Australia some fifteen years ago, owing to some financial trouble at home. Deceased was not well spoken of in the village from which he and his brother had come. Deceased and his brother had never been on good terms, and the fact that Mark Ablett had come into money had been a cause of great bitterness between them. It was shortly after this that Robert had left for Australia.

He had made inquiries at Stanton station. It had been market-day at Stanton and the station had been more full of arrivals than usual. Nobody had particularly noticed the arrival of Robert Ablett; there had been a good many passengers by the 2.10 train that afternoon, the train by which Robert had undoubtedly come from London. A witness, however, would state that he noticed a man resembling Mark Ablett at the station at 3.53 that afternoon, and this man caught the 3.55 up train to town.

There was a pond in the grounds of the Red House. He had dragged this, but without result.

Antony listened to him carelessly, thinking his own thoughts all the time. Medical evidence followed, but there was nothing to be got from that. He felt so close to the truth; at any moment something might give his brain the one little hint which it wanted. Inspector Birch was just pursuing the ordinary. There was something uncanny about it.

Antony went on with his thoughts. The coroner was summing up. The jury, he said, had now heard all the evidence. The medical evidence would probably satisfy them that Robert Ablett had died from the effects of a bullet-wound in the head. Who had fired that bullet? If Robert Ablett had fired it himself, no doubt they would bring in a verdict of suicide, but if this had been so, where was the revolver which had fired it, and what had become of Mark Ablett?

If they disbelieved in this possibility of suicide, what remained? Accidental death, justifiable homicide, and murder. Could the deceased have been killed accidentally? It was possible, but then would Mark Ablett have run away?

The evidence that he had run away from the scene of the crime was strong. His cousin had seen him go into the room, the servant Elsie Wood had heard him quarrelling with his brother in the room, the door had been locked from the inside, and there were signs that outside the open window someone had pushed his way very recently through the shrubbery. Who, if not Mark?

They would have then to consider whether he would have run away if he had been guiltless of his brother's death. No doubt innocent people lost their heads sometimes. It was possible that if it were proved afterward that Mark Ablett had shot his brother, it might also be proved that he was justified in so doing, and that when he ran away from his brother's corpse he had really nothing to fear at the hands of the law. Mark Ablett guilty of murder it would not prejudice his trial in any way if and when he was apprehended. . . . The jury would consider their verdict.

They considered it. They announced that the deceased had died as the result of a bullet wound, and that the bullet had been fired by his brother Mark Ablett.

Bill turned round to Antony at his side. But Antony was gone. Across the room he saw Andrew Amos and Parsons going out of the door together with Antony between them.

CHAPTER XIX.

The inquest had been held at the "Lamb" at Stanton; at Stanton Robert Ablett was to be buried the next day. Bill waited about outside for his friend, wondering where he had gone.

Then, realizing that Cayley would be coming out to his car directly, and that a farewell talk with Cayley would be a little embarrassing, he wandered round to the yard at the back of the inn, lit a cigarette, and stood surveying a torn and weather-beaten poster on the stable wall, "Grand Theatricals" it announced, to take place on "Wednesday, Decem."

Bill smiled to himself as he looked at it, for the part of Joe, a loquacious postman, had been played by "William B. Bever," as the remnants of the poster still maintained, and he had been much less loquacious than the author had intended, having forgotten his words completely, but it had all been great fun.

"When did this happen?" he asked.

"Sorry to keep you waiting," said the voice of Antony behind him. "My old friends Amos and Parsons insisted on giving me a drink."

He slipped his arm into the crook of Bill's arm, and smiled happily at him.

"Why are you so keen about them?" asked Bill a little resentfully. "I couldn't think where on earth you had got to."

Antony didn't say anything. He was staring at the poster.

"When did this happen?" he asked.

"What?"

Antony waved to the poster.

"Oh, that? Last Christmas. It was rather fun."

Antony began to laugh to himself.

"Were you good?"

"Rotten. I don't profess to be an actor."

"Mark good?"

"Oh, rather. He loves it."

"Rev. Henry Stutters—Mr. Matthew Cay," read Antony. "Was that our friend Cayley?"

"Yes."

"Any good?"

"Well, much better than I expected. He wasn't keen, but Mark made him."

"Miss Norris wasn't playing, I see."

"My dear Tony; she's a professional. Of course she wasn't."

"I'm a fool, and a damned fool," Antony announced solemnly. "And a damned fool," he said again under his breath, as he led Bill away from the poster, and out of the yard into the road. "And a damned fool. Even now—" He broke off and then asked suddenly, "Did Mark ever have much trouble with his teeth?"

"He went to a dentist a good deal. But what on earth—"

Antony laughed a third time.

"What luck!" he chuckled. "But how do you know?"

"We go to the same man; Mark recommended him to me. Cartwright, in Wimpole Street."

"Cartwright in Wimpole Street," repeated Antony thoughtfully. "Yes, I can remember that. Cartwright in Wimpole Street. Did Cayley go to him, too, by any chance?"

"I expect so. Oh, yes, I know he did. But what on earth—"

"What was Mark's general health like? Did he see a doctor much?"

"Hardly at all, I should think. He did a lot of early morning exercises which were supposed to make him bright and cheerful at breakfast. They didn't do that, but they seemed to keep him pretty fit. Tony, I wish you'd—"

Antony held up a hand and hushed him into silence.

"One last question," he said. "Was Mark fond of swimming?"

"No, he hated it. I don't believe he could swim. Tony, are you mad, or am I? Or is this a new game?"

Antony squeezed his arm.

"Dear old Bill," he said. "It's a game. What a game! And the answer is Cartwright in Wimpole Street."

They walked in silence for half a mile or so along the road to Wood-ham. Bill tried two or three times to get his friend to talk, but Antony had only grunted in reply. He was just going to make another attempt, when Antony came to a sudden stop and turned to him anxiously.

"I wonder if you'd do something for me," he said, looking at him with some doubt.

"What sort of thing?"

"Well, it's really dashed important. It's just the one thing I want now."

Bill was suddenly enthusiastic again.

"I say, have you really found it all out?"

Antony nodded.

"At least, I'm very nearly there, Bill. There's just this one thing I want now. It means your going back to Stanton. Well, we haven't come far; it won't take you long. Do you mind?"

"My dear Holmes, I am at your service."

Riding abreast of the times

You expect more from your motor car today than you did ten years ago. And you get it. Greater speed, smoother power and more responsive performance are common to modern cars as a result of the development of higher speed, higher compression motors.

These improved engines demand a better oil—fuller-bodied, with greater resistance to heat and wear.

To ensure a better motor oil, Imperial Oil Limited goes all the way to Peru for the crude from which to make Marvelube. Marvelube is made from a base that is rich in all the qualities necessary for better lubrication of the modern motor. It is today the oil standard for high-speed motors from coast to coast.

Marvelube is preferred by over half a million motorists in Canada and is the choice of aircraft operators because of its superior lubricating qualities.

There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car, truck or tractor. Consult the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil stations and dealers.

Sahara Yields To Plucky Trio In Light Motor

Shifting Sand Conquered in 5½-Day Trip Made in Narrow-Tired
Lorry

CARGO JETTISONED TO LESSEN WEIGHT

Capt. Owen Tweedy, who has just crossed the Sahara in 5½ days, with two companions, in a half-ton lorry, cables the "Christian Science Monitor" an exclusive story from Algiers. The trio were welcomed by the Governor of Algeria, the Mayor, and the British Consul-General, and were cheered by crowds for their remarkably plucky and speedy trip across the desert.

By CAPT. OWEN TWEEDY

Algiers.—Crossing the Sahara Desert in 5½ days in a small, half-ton, narrow-tired lorry over 850 miles of shifting sands—for 700 we didn't see a single human being—affords sufficient thrill and hardship for the average adventurous motorist, but we've proved it can be done.

Our drive under particular conditions, tiny motor, simplicity of equipment and smallness of party, may be regarded as a pioneer achievement. It was a struggle against torrid heat, terrific sand storms, repeated sinking of the wheels for considerable depths into miniature dunes and drifts.

Like Running on Thin Ice

Our progress over the almost trackless waste depended upon maintaining a continuous advance over lightly-incrusted sand. It was like running on thin ice.

On March 13 our modest party left Rejaf on the upper reaches of the Nile. On April 30, after seven weeks, we arrived at Algiers, 5,500 miles accomplished, an average of 130 miles each running day.

The object of the expedition was to test the possibilities of a transafrican route for the ordinary traveler, embarking on the journey toward Europe without an elaborate or expensive pre-organization of petrol and food supplies, without a professional mechanic, and with an ordinary, standard-designed motor.

The trip was undertaken with a commercial half-ton lorry belonging to a London tourist agency, and led by Capt. Richard Crofton, formerly of Cooks, with a team consisting of only myself and a single native servant.

The first five weeks of traveling were accomplished arduously but eventually over roads often good and never impassable from the Nile basin through the Congo basin northwest to the little-known abundant French equatorial river system to Lake Chad, thence westward through British Nigeria to the River Niger. Throughout, we lived simply but adequately upon the country, relying on local commercial supplies of oil and petrol.

During 3,500 miles we ran through the widest variety of climate and vegetation from the scrub growths of southern Sudan through the tropics of the Belgian Congo, through more scrub to equatorial Nigeria, finally to the fringes of the desert of the Niger.

Great Possibilities for Trade

At the Niger we faced the trans-Saharan route which, although still in the infancy of development, possesses undoubted potentialities for trade, mail and passengers which are being carefully studied on French initiative. The problems of a diminutive expedition with a limited carrying capacity such as ours were the necessity of transport over a waterless unpopulated 350-mile stretch which is almost unique in the world for inadequacy of water, petrol for the motor, and food and drink for ourselves.

The sole solution of our problem was concentration, but, due partly to our inexperience and partly to inaccurate advance information of desert conditions, we were obliged first to jettison many articles before our departure from the Niger, and our supplies proved insufficient, owing to misplaced optimism in the ability of our narrow tires to overcome sand.

The crossing took 5½ days, all a prolonged struggle between ourselves and the motor against permanent sticking in the sand. There was a further complication due to water, because the terrific heat rendered day-time travel impossible, owing to the engine boiling, particularly between our efforts to extricate the lorry from the sand, while at night time our constant and most anxious preoccupation was not to lose the track, which, on account of three intense sand storms experienced during the crossing, was entirely blotted out between landmark places.

Stuck in Sand 40 Times

Altogether we were stuck in the sand more than 40 times, each involving an average hour's delay along with great fatigue before the journey could be resumed.

The prospect of success after the third day when, owing to 15 "sand-sticks" we only progressed 24 miles, was so compromised that we were forced to further ruthless jettisoning of our cargo, leaving only water, petrol, food, overcoats and other clothes we wore.

This self-denial was the turning point of our venture. Thenceforth the sandsticks were less frequent, with less tax on our strength and progress greater. During the fourth and fifth nights of continuous driving from 4.30 in the afternoon to 9 the following morning we averaged, despite the storms and sandsticks, 210 miles daily.

Finally, on April 21, weary, ragged, bearded and unwashed, owing to the water stringency, we arrived at Regan, the southernmost oasis of Algeria, but otherwise happily "unlame ducks," having still ten gallons of petrol, ten of water and ten days of emergency "starvation" rations. Our untoward experiences were due entirely to our failure to appreciate the powerful obstruction of sand upon narrow tires and misleading information from the south regarding details of track conditions.

The route, though always pre-eminently "sporting" for small cars, is entirely feasible with oversize tires and twin wheels. But, above all, the standard of driving must be of the highest.

Constant Movement Essential

The sand surface mainly experienced by us resembled the thinnest ice over which constant movement is essential if disaster is to be avoided. The only solution was to keep moving at any price, nudge the engine and risk a fence which Captain Crofton, who drove practically throughout, did brilliantly.

The retrospect of memories of hardships and long hours paled beside the satisfaction of the goal reached, the difficulties somehow haphazardly overcome, while the impression of the desert's emptiness is inoffensive. For 700 miles we did not see a human being above the great central plateau Tannousrouf.

The depth of the silence was appalling, with no trace within a radius of 300 miles of either water, wood, shade or life, only limitless sand rock on which at night one might perish of the cold. The days particularly were marked by sand storms, hotter than those of the Arabian and Abyssinian deserts. Our achievement was greeted here as a pioneer effort in the interest of unpretentious, unheavily financed, organized trans-Saharan travel. Our experiences, it is hoped, will be valuable to future travelers from Africa, desiring to try an interesting route to Europe, provided always normal precautions are taken. As pioneers in this effort we have received the warmest French welcome. We are proceeding from Paris to London with car.

About a year ago Mrs. Diana Strickland, of Wolverhampton, English explorer and author, crossed the African continent for the first time alone in a motor car from Dakar, in French Senegal on the west coast of Cairo, through virtually uncharted Wadai territory, part of the hinterland of French Congo, a distance of 5,000 miles. Although the actual running time was 53 days the journey, owing to impassable roads, took nearly a year.

Artificial Silk

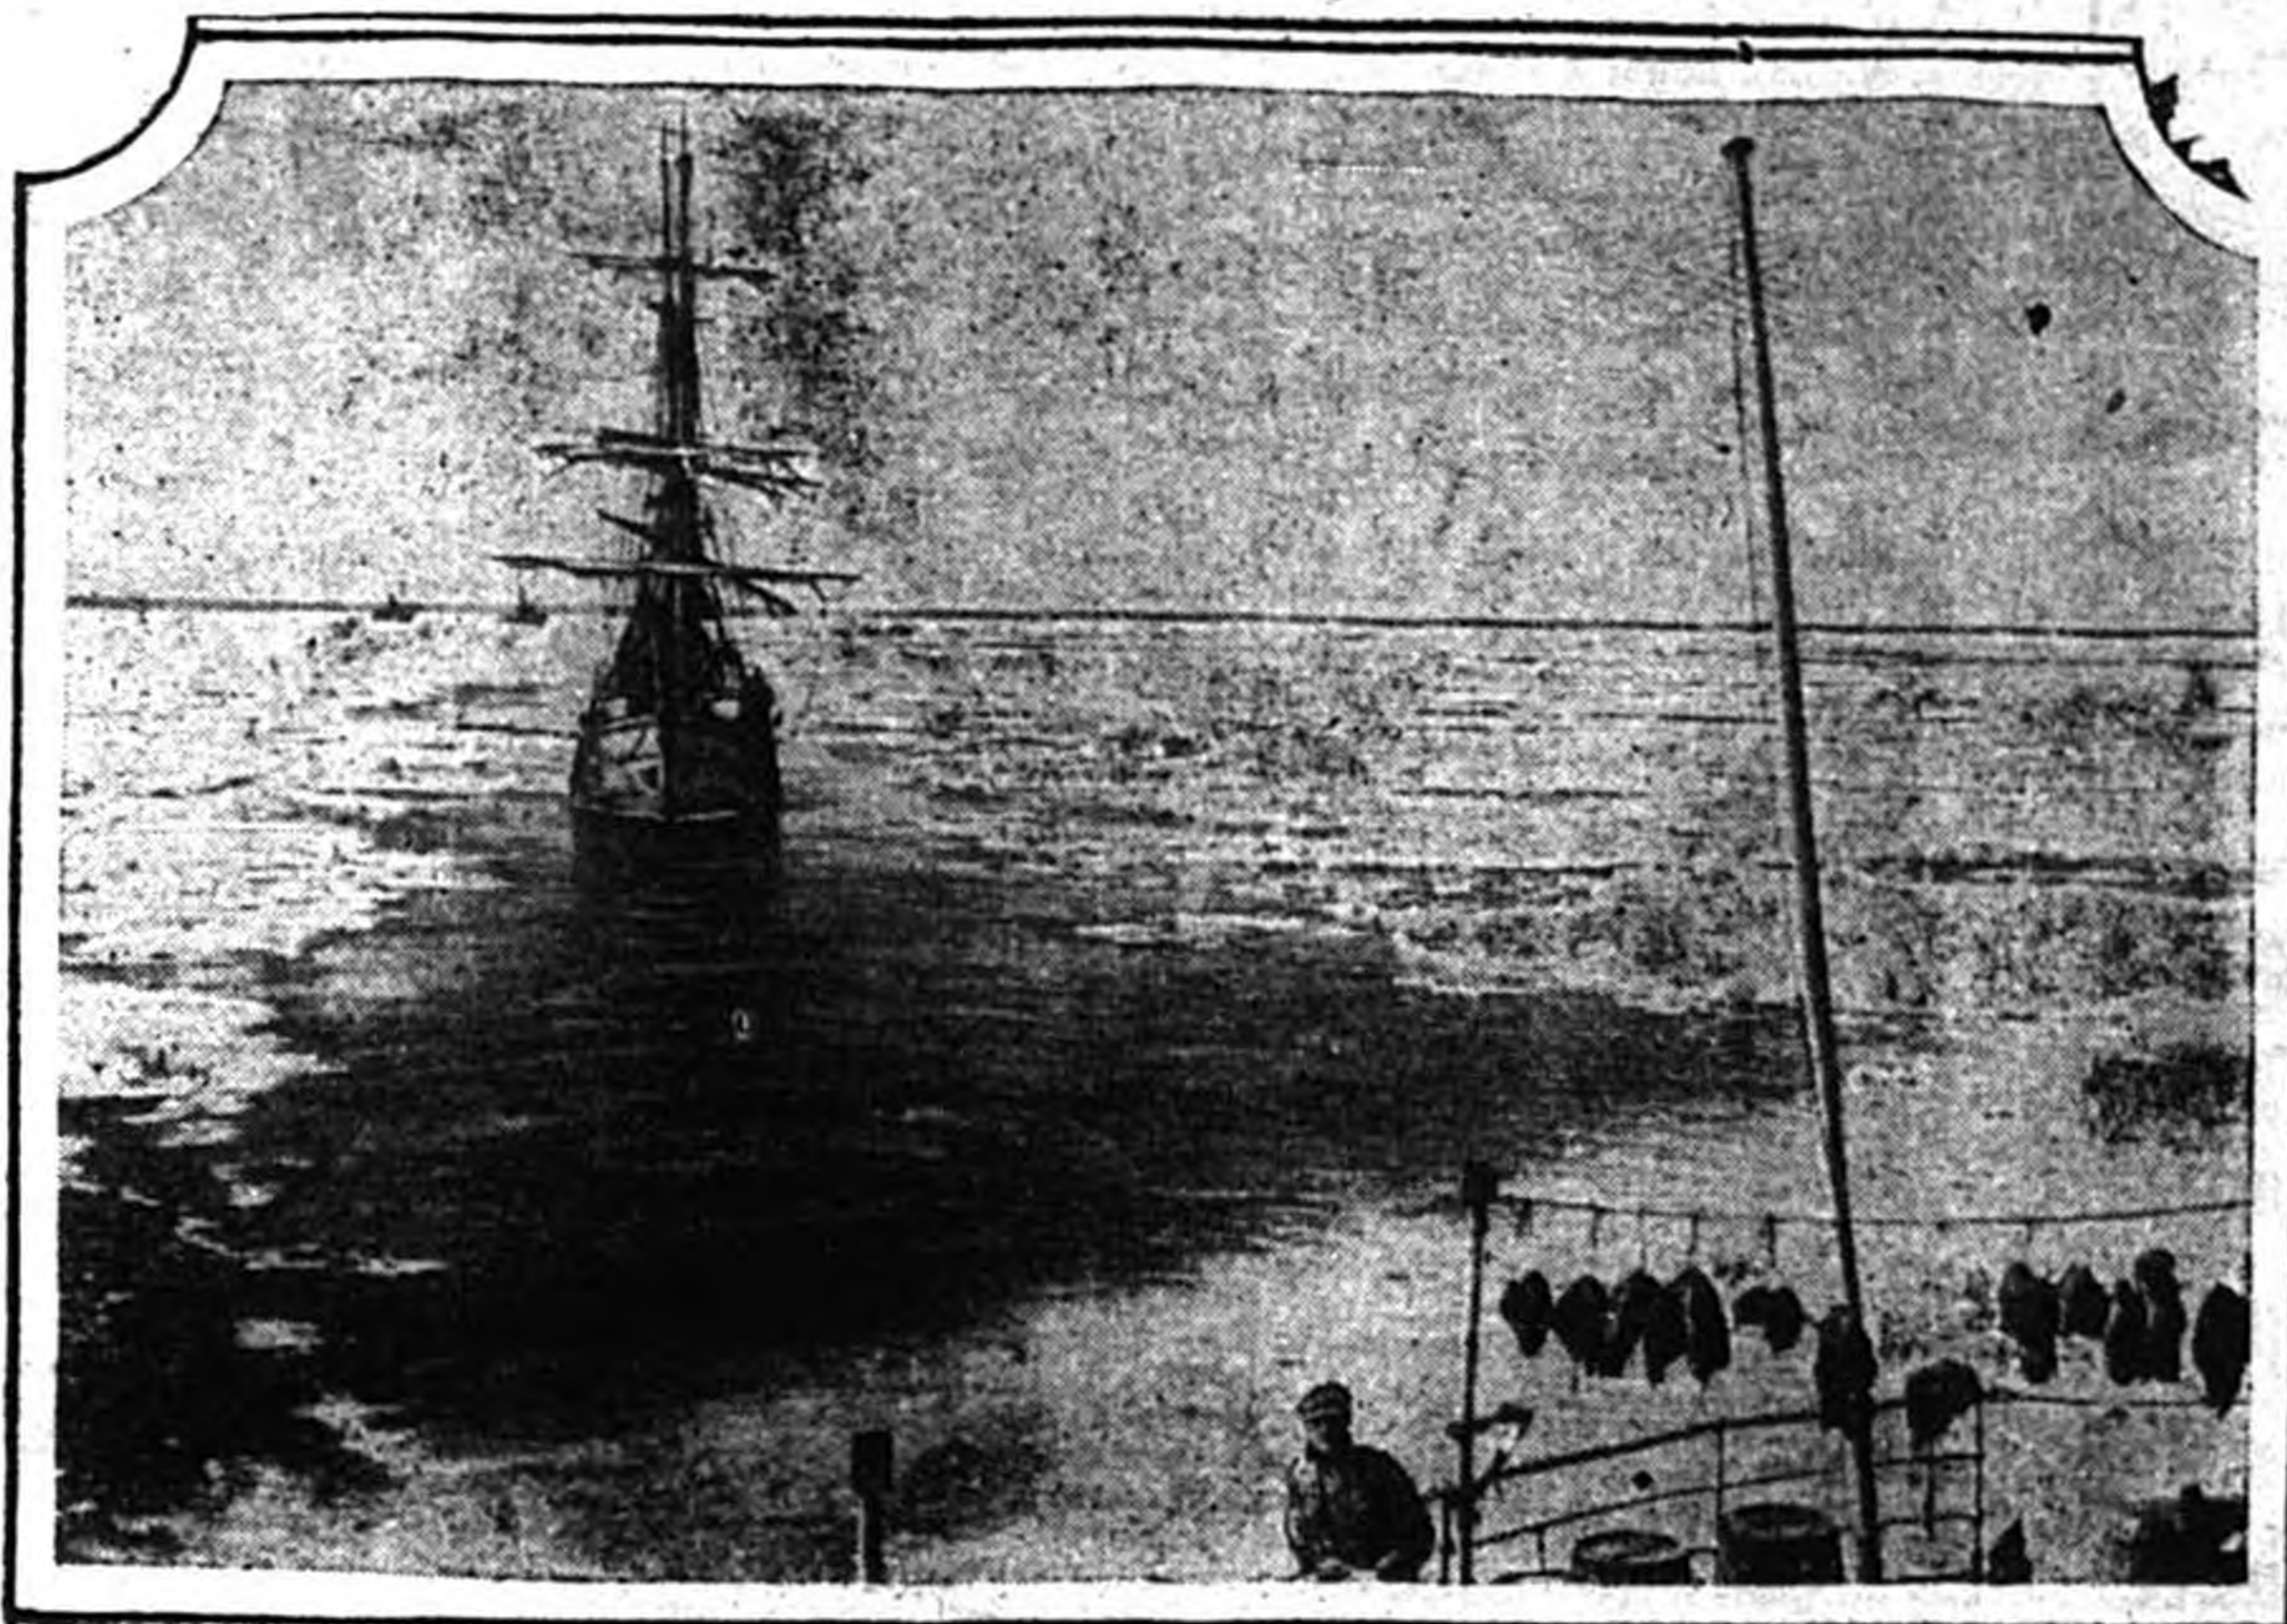

When washing dainty garments of artificial silk, use flakes or dissolved soap of the highest quality.

Make a lather by dissolving the soap in warm water (not hot), and allow the articles to soak for a few minutes. The garments should then be kneaded in the lather until the dirt is removed.

Never rub on a board or wring through the mangle. If pulled roughly silk is liable to stretch. Allow the garments to drain and then roll up in a ball, wrap in a towel and squeeze gently to remove most of the moisture. Hang out to dry in the open air and not in front of a fire. Do not use pegs, but hang with the weight well balanced to prevent stretching.

It would be interesting to know how many millions of gallons of gasoline the people of this prosperous country consume per diem just driving around looking for parking places.

Commandments of Popularity

Co-eds at University of Washington Tell Girls How to Enhance Their Charm, and the Rules Hark Back to Grand-mamma's Day

By DORIS BLAKE

If any old-fashioned person happens still to be nursing a post-war grudge against the younger generation, let him or her glance over the ten commandments of popularity recently adopted by the co-eds at the University of Washington. Then, ask what's wrong with our young people.

The first commandment alone, with its revival of a word thought obsolete in their vocabulary, is enough to make a protesting elder sit up and take notice.

"Always be a 'lady,'" it reads. Grandmamma had no better hand to guide her.

"Use good taste in selecting your clothes and do not let actions belie that taste," read the second commandment.

"Always be a good sport. Do what the majority wants but not to the detriment of your own convictions and ideals," the third advises.

4. "Play bridge, tennis, golf, swim, and dance. If not all then do these two certainly—play bridge and dance." No mamma training her daughter for the cut-ins that make or mar her social debut could suggest a clearer course of widening acquaintances than interest in a diversity of pursuits. And herein lies a sermon for young women of all walks.

Negative Personality Is Out.

A male correspondent recently stressed it in an attack on the girl who expects to attract men with little more than her physical attributes as a woman to interest him. With the woods full of girls who are girls and nothing more, the negative personality goes begging. It is not enough to be able to enumerate the stars of Hollywood nor be conversant with the pictures that have made them famous. Nor does it promise an evening of hearty digestion to be aware of all the crude details of the day's headline scandals.

Conversation, of itself, requires a broader interest—an interest in sports, games and the amusements of our current world. Unless two people are desperately in love and prefer to keep the world outside for the time being, it were well to be proficient enough in several of the branches recommended—to be able to take a hand at bridge, tennis or golf in the interest of more enjoyable companionships.

The popular girl at the summer resort is not the one who idles about the porch, but the girl who is ready at a moment's notice to help make up a party on the beach, on the court, links or at the bridge table. It is assumed that every girl wants to dance. Not every young woman, however, is content with nothing less than to be an unusually good dancer, which explains the neglected rows along the side walls. The dance floor always has been recognized as the meeting place where acquaintance making is done most easily. In order to develop popularity, however, one must be a GOOD dancer.

Advised to Read the Papers

The fifth commandment favored by the co-eds strengthens the suspicion that the day of the feather-brained, light-weight type is over.

"Read the papers," it advises. Know your current events, politics and athletics. It is well to converse on serious topics as well as light ones.

"Handing a 'line' is conceded to be helpful," in the wording of commandment six. And that the advisers know somewhat of the sex of which they speak, they explain, "Even if you're not the type, this 'you-great-big-wonderful-boy' stuff does get over." Its use in moderation, though, is recommended. One can oversubscribe to a hearty appetite, it is understood.

"Do not neck," commandment 7 orders. "If a girl is charming and peppy enough to interest a boy she need not try to be the gold-digger type."

The classification squaring off the necker into greedy little mercenarought to be of particular interest to boys—and serve as a warning to them.

Kissing, in the minds of the young women, is not so cheapening, apparently, as necking. For the eighth rule of popularity reads that "there is no harm in kissing a boy friend of whom you are particularly fond." But the latitude is prefaced by the warning "not to kiss promiscuously."

We understand from the distinction between necking and kissing that the former carries with it more possibility of degrading familiarity. The kiss bestowed on a boy one likes necessarily would be one delivered with self-respecting reservations. Otherwise, commandment 1, to "be a 'lady' always" would be lost.

Be as Pretty as Possible

The ninth suggestion goes to dress again, it naturally being a feature stressed largely in the minds of girls intent on attracting the opposite sex. But here we find the wisdom delivered but recently by a woman of riper years and larger experience. "Dress attractively, but not necessarily expensively," the co-ed commandment says. "A boy notices the general effect you produce, so be as pretty as you can."

The sophisticated older woman voiced an opinion that "half of woman's dress expense is wasted, since by far the greatest number of males are simply not observant enough about women's clothes to notice changes, much less appreciate them." "First, last and always—be feminine," brings to a close the Washington co-eds' shrewd plans for the sake of popularity. Upon the theme "Be Feminine," let each girl write her own thesis. She has eyes to see and wit to grasp the folly of emulating men in dress, in language and conduct.

An attractive girl must spend time upon the care of her person. Raising the standard of her appearance to its highest level, indeed, should be incorporated into every body of popularity rules as one of the first essentials.

"Overproduction encourages people to make little use of what they have." This is especially true of laws.

Old Pybus

Lance went out into the hall. His grandfather was absent. . . . Well, and ask him about the castle. The way to the castle ruins lay through the Saracen yard. Lance followed the inspiration, but it failed at first to show him that little old figure in the alpaca coat. He strolled to the end of the yard. He both saw and heard a fluttering of wings and, rounding the red angle of an old brick coach-house, came suddenly upon his grandfather, the centre of a cloud of birds. Old Pybus was feeding his pigeons.

Father Time and the pigeons! He saw one bird perched like a living crest on the old man's white head. The birds were on his hands and shoulders and around his feet, and old Pybus' face wore an absorbed and meditative smile.

Lance had paused, and when he walked slowly on, it was with a feeling of exultation. Here was his chance—and what a chance! It seemed to him that he was going to speak to someone who straightway would be a friend, an old man whose hands were stretched out to these fluttering birds. How unexpected and how suggestive! But would the birds be shy of a stranger?

Again he paused, standing a little way off.

"Shall I frighten them?" Old Pybus looked up and around. "You, sir? They are only shy of children."

Lance drew nearer.

"Wonder if they'll come to me?"

"Hold out your hands, sir."

"But there's nothing in them. Wouldn't that be swindling?"

Old Pybus gave him a quick attentive look.

"There's a piece of bread in my coat pocket. Right hand side. You can have it."

"That's very good of you," said Lance with eyes that saw John Pybus as his sons had never seen him.

He felt for the bread in his grandfather's pocket and, standing beside him and crumpling it, became a part of the cloud of birds. His impressions were quick and vivid. The birds had no fear of him, they settled upon his wrists and shoulders even as they settled on his grandfather's, and it seemed to Lance that he and his grandfather were sharing some beautiful rite.

"You have made them very trusting."

"I have fed them like this for seven years."

"Every day?"

"Winter and summer—but in winter—I feed the mbefore dinner."

"Where do they come from?"

"Our pigeon loft and the castle. The castle's full of the blue birds."

"I was going to look at the castle. Can I get to it down this yard?"

"Yes, sir, past my cottage and over the field."

"Is that your cottage?"

"Yes, sir."

"Looks out on the castle."

"It does. The harican used to be there in the old days. They have filled up the ditch."

"Very peaceful. A place to read or write in."

"That's so," said his grandfather. "I read a lot. Books stay with you."

—From "Old Pybus," by Warwick Deeping.

Worth Knowing

When making toast, slightly heat one side of the bread and then the other, leaving all brownish to the last. This allows the moisture to evaporate.

A tablespoonful of water with the chill off will make a cake light, if added to the mixture after pouring in the eggs.

Wash rubber hot-water bottles every two months in water to which a little soda has been added. This prevents them from getting hard or perishing. Flannels will not shrink if washed in lukewarm water and borax.

Before cleaning copper kettles, fill them with boiling water. They will polish more quickly.

If you want a weight to press anything, a bucket of water on top of a pastry board does very well. A gallon of water weighs ten pounds.

Salt should not be used in sweeping come wet in damp weather and the carpet will rot.

A piece of bread tied up in muslin and put in the saucepan with cooking vegetables will prevent an unpleasant smell.

The sugar from candied peel will sweeten and flavor a rice pudding. When stacking plates into the rack to drain, first dip them in cold water. This makes them dry with a clear gloss.

Sausages will not burst in frying if they are first rolled in flour.

After cleaning brasses, apply a little furniture polish with a clean rag and polish again. This saves them from tarnishing.

When wet weather dulls the furniture it should be cleaned by washing with a teaspoonful of vinegar to a pint of hot water. When dry, polish with furniture cream.

The addition of a little hot milk when mashing potatoes makes them light and creamy. Cold milk makes them heavy and pasty.

"Table scraps can be converted into many useful things," advises a writer. For instance, if the scrap ends in tears, the Little Woman can convert it into a Spring Hat.—Barber Cities Star.

GETTING CLOSER

Although the bridge at Hawkesbury has been looked upon as a political football for everyone to take a kick at, there is now every reason to believe that it will be an accomplished fact, for the reasons advanced by our worthy member Sir George H. Perley, as he presented his appeal in the House of Commons last Wednesday are such that they cannot be ignored and what is now required, is the getting together of the Two Provinces with the Dominion to ensure its construction.

It is not generally known, but Sir George has fought for this bridge for many years and estimates had been passed, engineers plans secured and work ready for proceeding with immediate construction in 1914, when the war broke out and the matter dropped.

The people of this section will be pleased to know of the continued efforts of our Member, Sir George H. Perley and we quote him from Hansard of May 30th., which reads as follows:—

Sir GEORGE PERLEY: I want to make an appeal to the minister in connection with a portion of estimate No. 142 in regard to the interprovincial bridge over the Ottawa River at Hawkesbury, for which bridge an item of $40,000 has been in the estimates for a good many years. The proposal of the government is to build this bridge, provided the Quebec and Ontario governments will each contribute one-third of the cost. The difficulty of the position is that three governments are interested in this matter, and someone has to take the initiative. In all courtesy to the Minister of Public Works, I say that in his position he is the natural person to take this matter up with the other governments. I want to urge upon him that he ask the representatives of the other governments to meet, talk the matter over and see if there is not some way whereby this very important and necessary work may be built. I want to ask him as a personal favour to take the matter up with the other governments and see if some solution cannot be found. Perhaps the minister does not know the location. This bridge is very urgently required, because there is no bridge over the Ottawa river between Ottawa and Ste. Annes, a distance of 110 miles or thereabouts. I know that at or near Hawkesbury and Grenville many lives have been lost in the last twenty years owing to the fact that people had to cross the river in the fall or spring of the year when the ice was bad and perhaps unwisely took the chance of crossing on bad ice. For humanitarian reasons, therefore, this bridge is very much needed and we have been agitating for it for a long time. With the present development of motor traffic there is a great necessity from the commercial point of view for the building of this bridge, because, if motorists coming from the United States were able to cross at Hawkesbury they would get into the north country via the shortest possible route instead of having to go to Montreal and taking a roundabout route. In the north country back of Grenville there are many lakes and wonderful scenery to attract people from the United States, and if this bridge were built it would be greatly used by motorists who desire to visit that section.

When the Borden government was in power, at my request it was decided to build the bridge and in 1914 tenders were called for the purpose. Unfortunately they came in just about the time war was declared, and on account of the war it was considered impossible to go on with any public works that were not absolutely necessary, so that no tender was accepted. As a matter of fact if the war had not intervened, this bridge would have been commenced in 1914 and completed many years ago. At that time it was the intention of the Dominion government to pay one-half the cost of the bridge, and on that basis arrangements were made with the provincial governments each to pay one-quarter. The minister tells me that the policy of the present government is to pay only one-third of the cost of bridges such as this, and he absolutely refuses to alter that decision. There should be a conference between the authorities of the Dominion and the two provinces on this particular point and with regard to this very necessary work. The counties on either side, one of which I have the honour to represent and the other being the county of Prescott in Ontario, have very little money spent in them. We are satisfied to have our friends from the great lakes and other parts of Canada receive the greater part of the public money that is being spent by the minister's department. We do however demand that this small expenditure be made, and surely in all fairness the people of those two counties ought to be helped to have this bridge built which is so very necessary for the preservation of life and also for the use of tourists who bring so much money into the country. Therefore I appeal to the minister to take a personal interest in the matter and to try to get the representatives together to find a solution so that this bridge may be built in the near future.

Mr. ELLIOTT: This is a matter that has been before the government for some time and in regard to which the attitude of the government as my hon. friend said, is quite well known. It is true that in the earlier years, as I am able to read the history of interprovincial bridges, it was clearly intended at the time of the passing of the British North America Act that bridges between provinces other than military bridges should be constructed, by the two adjoining provinces. Practically the same rule applies as between counties. I am able to speak of the province of Ontario especially, and that rule applies as between two counties. Between townships, and two townships would build it, and between a township and a village the cost would be borne half by each. That has been the practice. Following out that, you would naturally expect that bridges that were not originally military bridges would be built by two adjoining provinces on an equal basis. However, the system has grown up under which the Dominion has contributed different times, but for the last fifteen years the policy has been consistent.

Sir GEORGE PERLEY: Not for so long as fifteen years, I think.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Since the interprovincial bridge over the Chaudiere was built, and I am informed that that was fifteen years ago. Where two provinces have decided upon the necessity of a bridge, I think the Dominion government has since that time agreed in every case to contribute one-third of the cost, each of the two provinces contributing one-third. I quite agree with what my hon. friend has said with regard to the right of a county like either of the two he has mentioned. They do not require much expenditure in the way of wharves breakwaters and that sort of thing, and they should receive some reasonable consideration by way of assistance, so far as it is legitimate for this government to assist in transportation facilities. I question the wisdom of the Dominion, as a general rule, taking the initiative in regard to an expenditure of which the two provinces really have to be the judges to a large extent, and in relation to which their outlay between them is twice as much as that of the Dominion. But I do agree with my hon. friend as to the necessity of a bridge at this point, and as far as I am concerned I am not going to stand on any formalities if I can be of assistance in getting all the parties together and getting an arrangement completed. I know that my hon. friend will be glad to join with me in offering his good offices in getting all the parties together and having this much required bridge got under way at the earliest possible moment. I shall be glad to have a conference with my hon. friend and anything that can be done in the matter I shall be glad to do.

DRINK AND IMMIGRATION TO U. S.

A great deal has been said and written as to the causes of the continual stream of emigrants from Canada to the United States. Dr. Ernest H. Charrington, General Secretary of the World League against Alcoholism, in a recent statement issues a reason not hitherto advanced.

Dr. Charrington said:

"The amazing shrinkage in the population of Canada and the migration from our northern neighbor to the United States is highly suggestive of the contrast between the rival attractions of liquor and prosperity. Not even the ready accessibility of intoxicating beverages sold under Government auspices can hold with the borders of Canada the thousands who cross the line to enter a land where intoxicating beverages are forbidden by law, and where, because of that prohibition the economic opportunities and advantages are far greater. When one considers the natural resources of Canada and the potential wealth waiting exploration in that country one is forced to consider whether the terrific drain upon the financial resources of the land may not be to some extent at least, responsible for the steady flow of immigrants over the border into the United States. Beverage alcohol and industrial development are inevitable antagonists. A nation can no more attain to economic leadership while encouraging the use of alcoholic liquor than can a toper hope to amass wealth in the intervals between sprees."

Whether the Canadian government will consider the liquor to be found in Canada as a factor in driving out desirable citizens or not remains to be seen. It would appear however, that this would be the sane course to follow up, and take such measures as would make it as hard to get liquor in Canada as it is in the U. S.

Style Beyond Its Price Class Price Below Comparison

Only custom-built cars can compare in beauty of design and luxury of finish with the new-style Willys-Knight. Sweep and verve of line, distinctive harmony of color and perfection of detail make it the outstanding creation of today's style specialists.

And never before has such a large and powerful Knight-engined car been offered at so low a price. The new-style Willys-Knight brings the patented, double sleeve-valve engine within easy reach of the thousands who have previously been restrained from buying by the necessarily higher cost of this superior motor.

It offers an engine free from costly carbon cleaning and valve grinding. An engine smooth, silent, powerful at the beginning, that actually increases in power and smoothness to a mileage limit impossible to determine.

Arrange today for a demonstration.

Pioneer Re-Union at Winnipeg

1. In the costume of her homeland as she will appear at the festival.
2. An example of Norse handicraft.

As far back as 1869, Paul Hjeltn Hansen, the famous Norwegian journalist, author and social reformer, began to call attention to the fertile valley of the Red River. The river men of his nationality who traversed the territory between Fort Averaromble and Fort Garry brought back wonderful tales of the splendid settlement opportunities along its banks, with the result that a large influx of Norse settlers commenced in the early seventies.

Later, many of these hardy Norwegians moved farther west, some as far as Bella Cools and the sea. Sober and industrious, they have, with each year, progressed and prospered, making a great contribution to the development of the west.

This year a general re-union is planned of the pioneers from the Red River Valley, with those of the west, to commemorate the beginning of Norwegian immigration into these territories. This event has been arranged to take place in Winnipeg between July 5 and 10.

This celebration will feature Norwegian national music, with many pageants descriptive of home life with participants adorned in their native costumes. Of particular interest will be the exhibition of Norse Handicraft and art. The headquarters for this festival will be the Royal Alexandra Hotel, one of the chain of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which will co-operate by running of special trains from such centers as Edmonton, Moose Jaw, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth.

CUSHING

Mr. A. C. Pinkerton, of Montreal, spent Sunday with his parents here.

Mr. John Douglas, of Montreal, spent Sunday & Monday at his home in Chaboro.

Mr. D. G. Greig, of Montreal, spent the week-end with his family at Greece's Point.

Mrs. Denovan, of Rosemere, is at present visiting her cousin, Miss Corner at Mascot Lodge.

Miss Katie and Mr. Eddie Whelan spent Sunday and King's Birthday with their friends here.

Mrs. Frank Gaston was hostess on Wednesday afternoon last, at a well-attended and very pleasant meeting of St. Mungo's Ladies' Aid.

Mrs. E. J. Mahoney, of Montreal, and little sons Teddy and Billy were guests of her mother, Mrs. R. Funchon at Monalea, the early part of the week.

Mrs. S. O. Hartley and Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong are in Montreal this week and will attend the graduation exercises at MacDonald College, when Miss Olive Hartley is on the list of prospective graduates.

A very interesting event is taking place here on Wednesday, being the marriage of Miss Lois Keatley to Mr. George Wishart, of Chatham, Ont. The wedding will be celebrated at the Cushing residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rev. W. Usher. Guests who have already arrived for the wedding are Miss Grace MacCallum of Arnprior, Ont., and Mrs. George Foster, of Pittsburgh, Penn.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mrs. Ferguson and Miss Dolly Ferguson are at Mrs. Patton's.

Miss Bessie Rodger has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rodger.

Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor, of Vankleek Hill, were in St. Andrews on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cousins, of Grenville, attended the play Tommy's Brides, on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Yale have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. De La Ronde for a few days.

Miss Allison Taylor spent the week-end at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Taylor.

The auto-bus from Phillips Square, Montreal, to St. Andrews is now making three trips daily.

Miss Isabel Pinder expects to spend the summer in St. Andrews, and is a guest at Miss Hibbard's.

Saturday evening, the amusing comedy "Tommy's Brides" was given in the Town Hall, by the First United Players, of Rosemount. It was a decided success. The Hall was packed and everyone seemed well pleased with the performance. These players are not new to St. Andrews and we are always glad to have them with us.

Two very pleasant social events contributed to the interest and gaiety of St. Andrews East last week, when Miss Madeline Neve was entertained by the Bridge and "500" Clubs, and also by Mrs. Norman MacGregor in view of her approaching marriage to the Rev. W. Windsor, Rector of the parish. Mrs. E. C. Calder was the hospitable hostess, the first evening, and a most enjoyable time was spent, culminating in the presentation to Miss Neve, of a very handsome Brass Piano Lamp, taking her completely by surprise. Mr. Windsor responded for her in his usual happy manner, thanking the members of the two clubs for this mark of affection and regard.

Mrs. MacGregor's Bridge of seven tables was a very delightful affair, and at the close of the delectable supper, a table was brought in and placed near the guest of honour. A large and artistic bell, covered with tiny pink and white paper bells, was in the centre, with sprays of white lilac forming a guard around it. As the bell was removed, many parcels of every size and shape came into view, and it is hard to say who enjoyed the "Shower" the most, the recipients, the donors or the hostess who had arranged everything so tastefully. Mr. Windsor was again ready with his expression of appreciation and pleasure, and once more "Auld Lang Syne" brought a happy evening to a close.

The afternoon hostesses who have entertained for Miss Neve are Misses Dowd, Milne Craig, and Mrs. Wm. Ball, whose charming Bridge parties were thoroughly enjoyed by all who took part in them.

A Pleasing Comedy Well Performed

"OH, KAY!" a three act comedy by Adam Applebud, was presented last Friday evening in the Auditorium, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Lachute United Church. It was very gratifying to see the hall so well filled and no doubt this factor helped considerably in making the play the great success that it was. Lachute has been favored with plays of almost every description this past season and "Oh, Kay" was something new being a play of mystery with something happening every minute in the way of thrills, surprises and extremely humorous incidents.

The first act deals with mysterious happenings around the Pembroke home. Shots are fired, lights suddenly fail, locks are tampered with and ends with the disappearance of the telephone in the bottom of which "Gram" Pembroke has hidden her jewels, a world known collection worth $7,000.00. Weird telephone messages are also received from some stranger with a voice that gives one the shivers and all these happenings are supposedly the work of a strange character haunting the neighbourhood known as the "Black Terror" and wanted by the police.

"Gram" provides much laughter with her penchant for patent medicines declaring they are the only means she has to keep her alive. The part of "Gram" was very well looked after by Mrs. Wilbur Fraser. Her husband, "Gramp" is an authority on Ford cars. His "Lizzie" is his whole concern and he buys every accessory advertised to keep her running and add to the value of the car.

This part was very well interpreted by Kilgour Wilson who appeared to be very much at home with him "trusty" shot-gun ready for any dirty work. In Act II, Arthur and his sister, Edith Whitman, confess to each other that they have been playing pranks on their elders by getting two of their friends to dress up like the "Black Terror," flash lights, tamper with locks and phone mysterious messages - Edith because she wants to get copy for the detective stories she writes and Art because he wanted to convince his mother and 'Gram' that he was grown-up and able to protect them. Nevertheless, they have to confess that they know nothing about the disappearance of the telephone so decide to say nothing until the detective, who has been summoned to find the missing jewels arrives. Our old friend, Bill Blakely takes the part of Art, and a beginner so far as recent Lachute dramatics is concerned Mrs. Jas. MacKimmie, took the part of the sister, Edith. Their "brotherly" and "sisterly" love for one another was very evident.

In the midst of the excitement a brick is hurled through the window with a message to "Gramp" telling him to keep his "roll" well covered. The lights are extinguished and while they are hiding the money amongst some magazines there is a knock at the door. After they have recovered sufficiently from their scare to open the door they find that it is the detective, "Kay Millis". She proves to be a woman much to the disgust of Art, and "Gramp" who hate to think that a woman has been called in to protect them from the "Terror". "Kay Millis" is ably represented in her role of private detective by Elizabeth MacKimmie and quickly charms Art into telling her all his secrets besides making him fall in love with her. She also changes "Gramp's" ideas with regard to women detectives and makes him her slave likewise.

Kay sends them all to bed but while "Gramp" is taking off his shoes he is visited by one whom he takes to be the "Terror". This man with a black patch over his left eye ties "Gramp's" hands behind his back and forces him into the hall closet at the point of his revolver. Art hearing noise, goes downstairs to investigate and, too, encounters a "Terror" and is persuaded at the point of the revolver to go into the woodshed at the back. "Gramp" manages to free himself and, coming into the room, discovers what he believes to be the same "Terror" hiding in a corner. He levels his shot-gun and is about to discover the identity of the "Terror" when Edith enters. "Gramp" gets her to search but, to his amazement, as soon as she lifts the "Terror's" hat she tells him to run and falls into a faint. "Gramp" and Art bring her round and demand an explanation but she refuses until after "Gramp" has gone to bed when she tells Art and Kay that it was her friend, Alice Borden, dressed up as the "Terror" that "Gramp" was holding up. There is still some mix-up but Art is sure that it couldn't have been his friend, Fred Allen, who threw him in the wood shed so they come to the conclusion that there really is a "Black Terror" around.

Kay sends them to bed again and, after having placed the missing telephone on the floor (which she discovered upon "Gram's" mattress) there is a knock at the door. She opens the door and covers the newcomer with her revolver. He claims to be Captain Whitman (father of Art and Edith) home on leave from a sea voyage but Kay recognizes him as the murderer of her father and, by a clever ruse, relieves him of his revolver and gets Edith to handcuff him. She backs him into a corner when they are interrupted by "Gramp" who enters with a "Terror" he has captured, followed by Art with one he has found on the gallery. Kay lines them up and is on the point of interrogating them when "Gram" enters with still another "Terror". They reluctantly unmask and prove to be Fred Allen, Art's chum, Alice Borden Edith's friend, and Jim Hays, a friend of "Gramp's" whom he persuaded to impersonate the "Black Terror" unknown to any of the others. "Gramp", Edith and Art explain why they invented a "Black Terror" of their own while Kay points out the real "Black Terror" whom she captured alone. Another knock is heard at the door and the real Captain Whitman, who has been roughly used by the "Black Terror" and robbed of his coat and hat, falls into the room in an almost unconscious condition. "Gram" confesses then to cutting the telephone wire and hiding the phone under the mattress because she was afraid the "Terror" might torture the information out of them. The plays ends with Kay marching the "Black Terror" off to the police station and "Gramp" calling to Art to fetch mustard plaster for her from the drug store.

The parts of the pseudo "Black Terror's" (Fred Allen, Alice Borden and Jim Hays) taken by Clarence Rogers, Lillian Hamilton and Charlie Duncan respectively, although small, were very necessary parts of the play and were played in a very realistic manner. Pauline Fraser as Evelyn Whitman, wife of Captain Whitman, played her part in her usual effective manner. Kenneth McQuat, the real "Black Terror," helped considerably in keeping up the mystery of the play to the very end and John MacKimmie, as Captain Whitman, certainly looked the part of the man who had run foul of the greatly feared "Black Terror". The play, on the whole, was well acted throughout and was a credit to Lachute, as well as being a compliment to the training given by the Dramatic Society, of which most of the cast are members.

At the conclusion of the play the cast was entertained at lunch by the Ladies' Aid. Mrs. Wilbur Fraser, on behalf of the Cast, then presented Mrs. Geo. Leggett with a lovely bracelet as a slight token of their thanks and appreciation of the amount of work she had done in coaching and directing the play. The cast also take this opportunity of publicly thanking all those who kindly assisted to make the play the success that it undoubtedly was, including the Boy Scouts who acted so efficiently as ushers.

Here and There

The biggest day for grain handling that the port of Montreal has experienced this season was registered on August 21st, when deliveries went well over the 2,000,000 bushel mark for the 24 hours, and receipts were recorded at nearly 1,500,000 bushels, a total handling of 3,500,000 bushels for one day.

The almost complete absence of forest fires with their smoke screens marring scenic effects—the brilliant clearness of the air in this region has made the present tourist season the best on record in British Columbia. Many touring parties travelled over the Canadian Pacific lines, some breaking the journey to motor over the picturesque Banff-Windermere highway. Among other groups may be mentioned the Alpine Club of Canada, which held its camp at the Lake of the Hanging Glaciers, followed by the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies.

Approximately 250 new elevators have been constructed throughout Alberta this year, it is estimated by local grain men. The total capacity of these elevators would be about 18,000,000 bushels, it was stated. Complete figures for elevator construction in the province were not available, but grain men stated that extension of facilities had been progressing rapidly in all parts of Alberta. The capacity of the elevators varied from 35,000 bushels to 140,000 bushels. The Alberta Wheat Pool alone has 110 grain elevator companies have in 1927 and practically all the public grain elevator companies have increased their storage capacity.

For the first season in a number of years the Nipigon trout may be said to abound. Hydro-development with accompanying fluctuations in water levels, threatened extinction of this exceptionally game fish, but the careful regulation of the past three seasons has apparently restored the world's most famous trout stream to something of its old standing. Six guests of the Bungalow Camp here brought in 125 pounds of fish yesterday, counting a fair number of four and five-pound trout caught mostly at the entrance to Lake Polly. Pike and pickerel still abound in large numbers, so it is thought that the restoration of the water level rather than the destruction of natural enemies has brought back the Nipigon trout.

Entirely new and important schemes involving large expenditures on the part of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the placement of British colonists upon the land, are to be undertaken through the Department of Colonization and Development of that company, working in co-operation with the Overseas Settlement Committee of the British Government. The details of these schemes have been negotiated during the present visit to Canada of Lord Lovat. Under Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs and chairman of the Overseas Settlement Committee. One undertaking provides for the building of one hundred cottages by the Canadian Pacific for the use of British families. They will be used to make families accustomed to Canadian conditions and farm life before being established on farms of their own.

FARMER'S DEATH WAS AN ACCIDENT

A verdict of accidental death was given by the coroner's jury in Grenville on Friday last, investigating the death of Charles Steele, 60 year old farmer, who was found shot at his farm early Friday morning. A rifle was beside the body.

Dr. Wales, coroner, of St. Andrews, presided at the hearing. According to the evidence, Mr. Steele left his home at five o'clock. As he left, he told his wife he was going to use the rifle to shoot crows. When he did not return for breakfast, a search was made and he was found beside a fence. He had been dead a few hours.

In addition to his widow, he is survived by one daughter. Funeral services and burial was held at Grenville.

Many of Outer Hebrides Isles Homes of Birds

Uninhabited Areas of North Atlantic Are Most Distant Extremities of Scotland

Shepherds at Rona Yearly

Region Was Well Known to Scandinavian Vikings

In the North Atlantic Ocean are the islands of North Rona and Sula Sgeir, forty miles north from the Butt of Lewis, that rugged promontory on which the people of Ness cultivate the most fertile land in the Outer Hebrides. These uninhabited islands, writes J. Wilson Dougal in "The Weekly Scotsman," are the outmost bounds of Scotland in the northwest. They are regarded by the people of Ness as an immemorial appanage where solan geese (in Sula Sgeir), seals and birds (in Rona) were taken by the Ness men.

It is, however, with Rona that the regard and affection of the Ness people are most entwined. In other days, most of the smaller islands of the Outer Hebrides were inhabited, but many of these communities have disappeared within recent years, leaving the islands abandoned to colonies of sea birds and seals. The fate of the Flannan Islands, Sula Sgeir and Rona, is being followed by St. Kilda. Their isolation, monotony and lack of communication and transport, with the havoc wrought by trawlers, have produced conditions which have led to migration.

An annual visit is made to Rona by the sheep farmer and a number of men from Ness to shear sheep, of which about 100 graze here. The journey is a life and death struggle with heavy seas. Fierce storms rise sharply around the island from all directions of the Atlantic. Wind, sea, swells and fogs brood about Rona, and uncertain to a few hours is the sea passage between Rona and Ness.

Sail to Rona

Under happier auspices we set sail from Stornoway in a steam drifter, the "Pices," to visit what I had heard described as the Emerald Isle of Rona. A stop was made at the Port of Ness to pick up the sheep farmer and his men with their boat. Owing to the sea swell, the operation of hauling the boat vertically over the ship's side delayed us for some time. The boat filled with water despite the efforts of a dozen men, and, after hauling, had to be finally taken aboard by a rig.

In the evening light, the "Pices" and its twenty-one men proceeded north with the promise of a good night's sail through a heavy swell, which accounted for some sea sickness. On we plodded, pitched and tossed, until about 2 o'clock in the morning all were roused to hear the cry, "Rona ahead!" Peering into the midnight darkness, it was found we had, instead, arrived off Sula Sgeir, ten miles west of Rona. Again we moved eastward and, in the glimmer of a cold, raw morning, Rona was seen as a strip of land nearly hidden by fog.

Slowly the ship was navigated to avoid outlying ridges of rock and, at 4 o'clock, we were anchored comfortably in a bay on the southeast corner. About 5 o'clock the first boat's load went ashore and was greeted by plovers, cranes, from a chorus of birds perched, in thousands, in crevices or circling about the cliffs, while great numbers of seals from the sea joined their barks with the bird calls in protest at our invasion.

The island showed itself on the southern half a series of high precipitous dark cliffs, overtopped by a green verdure on the two hills, while the northern marshy flats are adorned by the bloom of sea pinks amidst coarse, bent grass. Heather finds no footing on Rona.

Known to Vikings

As to how long it is since human beings first abode in Rona there is much obscurity, but its study may prove an interesting field of investigation with that of life in the Western Islands, with their traces of Druidical and more ancient races of men. It is recorded that mariners of ancient Rome, early in the Christian era, found people existing in the Outer Isles, though probably Rona was north of the circuit made by the Roman fleet. There is no doubt that Rona was well known to the Scandinavian Vikings who dominated the north and west of Scotland for several hundred years.

Martin Martin (Western Islands of Scotland, 1703) made an intimate examination of the Outer Isles. He had not, however, had the experience of visiting Rona, but relates a lengthy account told him of a visit made by the Rev. Daniel Morrison, of Ness. In a kindly way, Morrison tells of a primitive group consisting of five families not yet free from pagan customs, simple in their isolation and full of the usual hospitality offered to visitors.

Mr. Morrison gave an account of the matrimonial difficulties of the community which he was able to solve by sending a bride from Lewis a year afterward. The fate of this colony is recorded some years later. A swarm of rats ate up the corn of the people and a few months later some piratical seamen stole the bull. These misfortunes and the want of supplies from Lewis for the space of a year occasioned the death of that "ancient race of people." Martin was afterward told by the steward of St. Kilda that, being driven on Rona by a storm, "he found a woman with a child on her breast, both lying dead at the side of a rock."

Some years after a new colony was planted on Rona. The following year a boat went out with supplies, but the boat was lost and no further account is obtainable as to the fate of this colony. Many traditions are told by the Ness people of Rona and its inhabitants. The last is within the memory of the present generation and is verified by a gravestone erected to the memory of two men in the ancient burying ground. The names and dates are still decipherable.

The story is that a church dispute had arisen in Ness, about fifty years ago. Two of the elders and a catechist, as a result of their views, seceded from the church. The catechist disappeared and was never heard of again. The other two resolved to go to Rona, leaving their families and crafts. Twice a daughter of one of the men removed her father's clothes from the chest to prevent him from going, but the men ultimately set off in a small boat and reached Rona after the perilous journey of forty miles. After two years the fears and anxieties of the Ness people were accentuated by finding the bodies of sheep cast up on the Ness shore.

Tasty Recipes

Banana Fingers

Set some sponge fingers in jelly, and when set cut them out. Sift bananas lengthways and place a piece on each finger. Top with a strawberry (or a pat of jam), and serve with whipped cream.

Overturned Eggs

Ingredients—Eggs, bread-crumbs, butter, salt and pepper. Method—Thoroughly grease some china ramekins or very small patty-pans. Coat them rather thickly with bread-crumbs, into each one break an egg, and sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Bake gently until set, then invert them carefully on to a hot dish and serve. Time—About 10 minutes. Sufficient, 1 for each person.

Rice Biscuits

Ingredients—½ lb. of rice flour, ¼ lb. of sugar, ¼ lb. of butter, 1 egg. Method—Beat the butter to a cream, stir in the rice flour and pounded sugar, and moisten the whole with the egg, which should be previously well beaten. Roll out the paste, cut out with a round paste-cutter into small biscuits, and bake them for 12 to 15 minutes in a very slow oven. Time—About 12 to 15 minutes. Sufficient for about 15 biscuits.

Afternoon Scones

Put ½ lb. of flour into a basin with a good pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of sugar, and a dessertspoonful of baking powder. Crumble into these ingredients a full teaspoonful of margarine. Make into rather a soft dough, with a little sweet milk. Quickly turn on to a floured board, knead very little, and roll out fully half an inch thick. Cut into strips, then into little triangular pieces. Have the oven shelf previously heated, pop the scones on to it and bake in a sharp oven for five minutes. When ready put into a fresh towel to steam.

Ginger Sauce, for Sweet Puddings, etc.

Ingredients—1 tablespoonful of ground ginger, 4 tablespoonfuls of castor sugar, 2 or 3 strips of lemon-rind, about 1 tablespoonful of lemon-juice, 2 tablespoonfuls of brandy or wine, ½ pint of water. Method—Put the ginger, sugar, lemon-rind, and water into a stew-pan, and simmer the ingredients gently for about 15 minutes. Strain, return to the stew-pan, add the brandy and lemon-juice, reheat and serve. Time—About 20 minutes. Quantity—About ½ pint.

Treacle Scones

Put ½ lb. of flour in a basin with a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of sugar. Add half a teaspoonful of baking soda and a teaspoonful of cream of tartar with the lumps pressed out, also half a teaspoonful of ginger. Crumble into these ingredients a small dessertspoonful of margarine, then moisten the whole to a soft dough with sweet milk previously mixed with a dessertspoonful of treacle. Turn out, knead, roll out, cut into little rounds the size of a teacup. Bake for five minutes and steam in a towel.

Halibut, Grilled

Ingredients—Halibut, oiled butter, salt and pepper. Method—Divide the fish into slices not more than ¾ of an inch in thickness, brush them over with oiled butter, and sprinkle them with salt and pepper. Place the slices on a clean oiled gridiron, and cook over a clear fire for about 10 or 12 minutes, turning them two or three times during the process. Garnish with lemon and serve with lemon, or any fish sauce that may be preferred. Time—About 10 to 12 minutes, according to size. Seasonable at any time. Sufficient, allow 6 or 7 oz. per head.

Department of Health of Ontario

The Department of Health, through its laboratories, situated as they are at most convenient points throughout the province, viz.: Toronto, London, Kingston, Fort William, Sault Ste. Marie, North Bay, Peterborough, Ottawa, gives a service which would otherwise cost the people a huge expenditure; but, more important still, the diphtheria swabs, the typhoid blood samples and tuberculosis sputum, etc., are examined the reported back to the doctor in the shortest possible time. Time is a very important factor in the treatment of disease, especially in diphtheria, and a laboratory report made with speed has often meant life to a patient, where as delay in the proper treatment would have been fatal.

What do the laboratories do? Their chief business for the private individual is examination of drinking-water. Altogether last year 20,000 samples from private sources and municipal supplies were received and reported upon. Sterile bottles, together with instructions for taking and case for mailing, sample of drinking water, is supplied free.

To help individuals afflicted with a communicable disease, the Laboratories make examination of:

1. Swabs from sore throats:
(a) For diagnosis, i.e., to find out if diphtheria germs are present and therefore necessary to quarantine.
(b) For release, i.e., to determine the earliest possible date when the patient or carriers may be allowed with safety to mingle with the public.
2. Blood samples for typhoid and syphilis.
3. Sputum for tuberculosis (7,000 cases were reported upon last year).
4. Heads of dogs suspected of rabies.

In addition to examination of specimens, the Division of Laboratories prepares the following products which are distributed free of charge for use of the residents of Ontario: Typhoid Vaccine, Whooping Cough Vaccine, Silver Nitrate to prevent blindness in new-born babies.

Various products used in the treatment of venereal diseases.

Welsh Children All Want Peace

A stirring message will be sent out on May 13th by the Children of Wales, calling for greater efforts for peace in all parts of the world. May 13th commemorates the date of the opening of the first Peace Conference at the Hague in 1899. It is now known in a number of countries as Woodwill Day.

This will be the eighth successive year the children's message has been sent out through the efforts of the Welsh National Council of the League of Nations Union.

Lt.-Col. C. P. Meredith, General Secretary of the League of Nations Society of Canada is arranging for the broadcast of the message over the radio on May 13th to all parts of the Dominion.

The children's message, which will be heard in every part of the world on May 13th, is as follows:

"We, boys and girls of Wales, from our mountains and valleys, our villages and towns, greet with a cheer the boys and girls of every country under the sun. Our hearts are thrilled by the wonderful response to our yearly message and we cherish the many new links of friendship which we have formed. Will you, millions of you, join with us to-day in thinking with gratitude of those men and women of every race and people who are working so hard to build a finer, better world? Next year, in 1930, the League of Nations will celebrate its tenth birthday. Let us determine, here and now, to help it, with all our power, to go forward with its great task of peace on earth and goodwill among men."

Garden Service

A Standard Flower

Because they are easily grown and give an abundance and variety of bloom, zinnias should be included in every garden. These flowers may now be secured ranging from the regular size of about fifteen inches high up to a couple of feet. By a little judicious pruning or wide spacing between the plants, they will grow higher, blending with and leading up to the dahlias, which they resemble very closely in flower. In recent years mammoth sorts have been introduced with huge dahlia-like flowers growing on plants up to three feet tall. Colors range from pure white through the yellows, crimson to fiery scarlet. They thrive best in good loam and in an open position. For best results, start indoors about this time and transplant into the open ground from the third week in May to the 1st of June. Allow about ten inches between the smaller sorts and two to three feet between the giants. To make them branch, nip off the terminal bud, and, if large exhibition flowers are required, never allow more than one or two flowers to come on at the same time. When transplanting these flowers, as well as others, like cosmos, nicotines, marigolds, and also the vegetables such as tomatoes and cabbages, give them a sprinkle of nitrate of soda, dissolving this quick-acting fertilizer in water and applying in liquid form.

Support to Climbers

Sweet peas and the taller vegetable sorts, pole beans, climbing roses, and other similar plants require support, and this should be provided well in advance of the time when actually needed. With the annuals, it should be put in with the seed, so that the roots will not be disturbed. For the beans and peas, where growth does not exceed three or four feet, the old fashioned brush fence is admirable. In the average back yard, however, brush is not as handy as it used to be, and with tall growing sweet peas and beans, it is usually not high enough. In this case two posts sunk at either end of the row and connected with a wire joining tops and bottoms and strong string lacing the wire will furnish good support. Chicken wire may also be used, but it sometimes heats up on very warm days and injures the foliage touching it. For climbing roses a wooden trellis makes the best support. If a climber is being trained close to a wall where there is no room for a trellis, staples driven into the wall and tied loosely to the plant will do. It is not advisable, however, to train roses close to a stone, brick or concrete wall, as these reflect the heat, and the bloom will be withered in a few days. If at all possible, erect your trellis about a foot away from the wall. The bloom will last longer and the hose or sprayer may be got in behind the foliage of effective work.

Object of Cultivation

Killing weeds is only one object of cultivation. Even more important is keeping the soil open and porous and conserving the moisture. The time to kill a weed is before it starts growing. Hoeing lightly from the start will keep the surface soil stirred and prevent the germination of weed seeds. Thier the land, the more frequent should be the cultivation. The majority of our vegetables consist of 80% water at least, and usually more than that. The quality of the vegetables, therefore, depends upon them having a sufficient supply of moisture at all times.

A Garden for the Tenant

The man who moves regularly every spring usually considers that gardening is denied him, but such need not be. He can have a good garden almost as beautiful in fact as the man who has been handling the same spot for twenty years. Of course, he will have to do more planning because he is forced to use annuals entirely, but he has a great variety from which to choose. Over the verandah he can provide a screen with annual hops, sweet peas, morning glories, climbing nasturtiums, or scarlet runner beans. In front of this in place of permanent shrubbery he can plant groups of tall cosmos, dahlias, or zinnias, tapering down to the smaller sorts. He will have a hundred regular annual flowers from which to choose which will give him bloom from June until frost.

Day

One day is the same as another, Prayer, worldly business, calls to be devout, charitable, and faithful: these are the duties that each hour brings in its turn; and if I am faithful in their fulfillment, God will be always ready to help me, and then what signifies a little ennui, pain, or misfortune?

Methuselah ate what he found on his plate.

Dear Editor, We'd gladly know What your intentions are, If rhythmic numbers still must flow.

If rhymes you strictly bar.

We must confess that dollar bills, All new and clean and fine, Arouse the most expectant thrills Along one's eager spine.

But yet—oh house of Limerick, We think it's time you fell! Of threefold rhymes we're deadly sick,

Of ads we won't hear tell.

Some higher task we'd gladly greet, Some more exalted job

Divorced from things we buy and eat, Such things as please the mob.

Perhaps you'd give (we just suppose) Each week some title new Wherefrom a tale we'd all compose, Or do our best thereto.

In words concise and few and smart,

We'd strive to tell our tale And cumulate the writer's art— We could but simply fail.

Content we'd be if you'd arrange The incidental thrills, The rules we'd need, the titles strange,

If only—BIGGER BILLS!

Awakening

Nature, waking at the song of wood-lark birds... fashioned with flying fingers such a robe of young green and amber, hyacinth and pearl as only she can weave or wear. A scent of the season rose from multitudinous "buds, and bells, and stars without a name"; while the little world of Devon, vale and forest, upland and heathery waste, rejoiced in the new life, as it rang and rippled with music and colour even to the granite thrones of the Moor. Down by the margin of Teign, where she murmured through a vale of awakening leaves and reflected asphodels bending above her brink, the valley was born again in a very pageant of golden green that dappled all the grey woods, clothed branch and bough anew, ran flower-footed over the meadow, hid nests of happy birds in every dell and dingle. . . . The primroses, pinked true on downy coral stems and the stars of anemone, celandine, and daisy opened perfect. Countless consummate, lustrous things were leaping, mingling, and uncurling, aloft and below, in the mazes of the wood, at the margins of the water. Verdant spears and blades expanded; fair fans opened and tendrils, twined; . . . diaphanous mist wreaths and tender showers wooed the Spring; under silver gauze of vernal rain rang wild rapture of thrushes, laughter of woodpeckers, chime and chatter of jackdaws from the rock, secret crooning of the cushat in the pines. From dawn till dusk the sweet air was winnowed by busy wings.—From "Children of the Mist," by Eden Phillpotts.

Money Not All

"If I only had wealth there are so many things I would like to do for people," remarked a lady to a friend, and it is an expression one hears almost daily. They forget that there are beautiful and valuable gifts that can be given without any large expenditure of money. There are the gifts of love, sympathy, hope, courage, enthusiasm, inspiration—worth far more to the recipient than the things money can buy. In the Bible story Peter was asked for money, which he could not give, but he was able to bestow health, which was much more valuable. We, by the gift of ourselves may be conferring the blessing needed most of all.—J. J. Kelso.

Trade Discrimination

Vancouver Sun (Lib.): If the British people are sincere in their efforts to promote business between the various units of the Empire, they can accomplish that promotion in a more effective way than by the display and ostentation of a cut-and-dried shopping week. They could, for instance, prevent the occurrence of such incidents as happened in Vancouver this week when a British ship, brought in to a Vancouver drydock for an $80,000 repair job, was, on orders from London, moved to an American drydock for those repairs. And this happened in spite of the fact that the tender of the Vancouver drydock was appreciably lower than any others. How does Britain expect Canadians to enter, with any degree of enthusiasm, into a celebration to promote inter-Empire trade when a British firm discriminates so flagrantly against Canadian institutions in favor of American ones?

We Watch With Interest

All Canada Keeps An Eye On the New Steps Taken by Saskatchewan

The Western provinces are awaiting with interest the outcome of Saskatchewan's latest and greatest step in public health organization in rural and semi-rural districts.

"Full Time Health District Number One" was organized just a few weeks ago. It unites eight rural municipalities, fourteen villages and one town—Gravelburg—in a fight to prevent disease. It will be run very much like the health department in a big city, and will employ a full-time medical officer of health, a public health nurse and a sanitary inspector.

This development is quite in line with the most advanced thinking in public health circles, where it is commonly accepted that the present system of taking care of public health in rural communities especially, is, in the words of one eminent authority, "antiquated and inadequate." This new Saskatchewan unit is expected to achieve the same results as have been achieved in, for example, Quebec, where the death rate has been lowered in several communities by similar "county health units," while at the same time much sickness has been prevented.

Saskatchewan already has the lowest death rate in the British Empire, and it is felt that this forward step will be the first of many to be taken in the near future.

Under the Public Health Act passed in 1923 the municipalities served by these units are to bear one half of the cost, while the other half, for the time being, is being divided between the provincial government and the Rockefeller Foundation.

It is estimated that the cost to the taxpayers for this first-class health protection will be only thirty-five cents per person per year!

Not For Sale

Victoria Times (Lib.): Once again a member of Parliament at Ottawa has suggested that Canada should annex the West Indies. There was a suggestion some time ago that the British West Indies might be traded off to the United States as part payment of Great Britain's debt to the republic. . . . People who talk about annexing and trading countries which do not belong to them seem to forget an important point. They leave out of the question the feelings of the people who would have to be included in the transaction. When the people of the West Indies ask to be annexed by Canada or sold to the United States it will be time enough to consider the proposal seriously.

Canada and the Tariff

Ottawa Journal (Cons.): The first duty of a Government, its fundamental duty, is to look after its own citizens. That is all that is being done by the Government of the United States. And because that is the long and short of it, Canada has really no cause for protest or complaint. All that Canada can do, and what she should do, is to take a leaf out of the book of the United States and look after Canadian citizens. There is no question at all of retaliation. Neither is there need for the slightest of bad feeling. All that the situation demands is that the Government of this country take sensible and courageous steps to meet the conditions the new United States tariff will create. That should be done, not in bitterness or anger, but promptly, intelligently and effectively.

NO MEDICINE LIKE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Once a Mother Has Used Them She Will Use Nothing Else.

To once use Baby's Own Tablets is to use them continually—that is as long as there are young children in the home. That is the testimony given us by mothers from all parts of Canada. They all say that they know of nothing to equal the Tablets, that they find them safe and efficient and at the same time pleasant to take.

Mrs. John Hollinworth, Maldstone, Ont., writes:—"I have three children, the eldest fourteen and the youngest nine months old. I have always used Baby's Own Tablets for them and have found no other medicine to equal the Tablets as a relief for the many ailments of childhood."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach. They drive out constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers and make the cutting of teeth easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Ceylon Jungle To Raise Food As Farm Colony

Employment for Middle-Class Islanders to Be Found on Land

Colombo, Ceylon—The leasing out of blocks from 5 to 25 acres, partly with a permanent crop, probably coconut, partly with yams and other short-life crops, as a means of providing employment for the middle classes in the country districts of Ceylon, has been arranged by the Forest Department. The land released for the purposes is low-lying jungle land in the Kalutara district.

The growing of ginger, chillies, mustard and other condiments, and of papaya and plantain will be encouraged. In the larger allotments principal attention will be given to the growing of lucerne and fodder grasses. The Department of Agriculture hopes to supply the required stock of superior quality and to supervise rearing conditions in all stages of growth and marketing.

Middle-class farm settlers will be given lessons in the most modern methods of poultry farming adapted to local conditions. Literature and instruction will also be available on such subjects as the preservation of products of milk, butter and cheese. Cottage industries, suitable for woman and children, will have the necessary attention at the rural agricultural school of each colony.

It is expected to draw 10 per cent. of the return in cash or kind of all allotments, which yield beyond a certain measure, as an interest upon the stocks and seeds supplied free of cost by the Department of Agriculture. Where necessary, the taxed produce will be sold at the market of the colony and a reserve fund created for the establishment of a crop and stock insurance scheme, which will be run in conjunction with a co-operative credit society.

In the manner described above, it is hoped to establish, in the healthier parts of the island, self-contained colonies of middle-class folk who would otherwise be unemployed.

1,000 Death Toll Feared In Persian Earthquakes

Askhabad, Russian Turkistan—Earthquakes which shook the vast stretches west of Samarkand, once the capital of Tamerlane's Oriental empire, were believed to have taken a heavy toll of life and property.

Unconfirmed reports said 1,000 persons perished in three Persian towns alone, while eleven were killed and forty injured in this vicinity as four successive tremors brought down houses and buildings in many villages. One person was killed in this city and twenty-six injured. Ninety houses were demolished.

The Russian Turkistan government, on request of Persian officials, rushed aid across the border into Persia where the damage and loss of life was believed greatest. Isolation of many of the affected areas accentuated the relief problem.

Was In Bed All Summer

"I have to work in the store and do my own housework, too, and I got nervous and run-down and was in bed nearly all summer. The least noise would make me nervous. I was told to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken seven bottles. It has made me stronger and put more color into my face. I am looking after my store and housework and my four children and I am getting along nicely now."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhoea checked. A vegetable product, a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless, Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is to-day. Every druggist has it.

It takes more than mere size to make a BIG Six. It takes more than beauty, more than style, more than performance. True, a car needs all of these before it can become a BIG Six. True, Pontiac Big Six has all these. But it has something more... something that stamps it once and forever as a real BIG Six. It has the "feel" of a BIG Six. People accustomed to much driving will know immediately what that means.

And it's not a sensation you can counterfeit. You have but to sit behind the wheel, drive the car and get the "feel" of it... you'll know in an instant whether or not you are driving a Big Six.

Manitoba to Hamburg, Germany, recently. They were trapped in the breeding grounds on the Manitoba rat farm and shipped in boxes, each box holding twelve pairs. They were shipped on C. P. Freight Car from Montreal and the muskrats were in good condition with a minimum of casualties when they reached destination.

On the authority of an official report recently issued it appears that the bicycle is gaining in popularity in Canada. In 1928 production of bicycles in Canada reached a new record with the selling value of products 52 per cent higher than in 1927. Last year 27,999 wheels were sold valued at $899,480.

Within the next few weeks the

On Saturday afternoon, June 8th., the first Brownsburg Girl Guides Company went on a hike to McQuat's River. The Company was divided into groups one group going in advance and laying the wood craft signs for them to follow. After considerable maneuvering the second party succeeded in arriving safely at their destination, however there was still one of the happy crowd missing, so a search party was sent out to find her and Lawny was safely ushered into the camp.

COUNTY COUNCIL

The quarterly meeting of the County Council was held in the Court House, on Wednesday last, when there were present Warden Ladouceur, of St. Andrews, and the following Mayors,—D. Black, St. Jerome; J. E. Seale, Morin; S. Boyd, Louisa; C. J. Stanforth, Arundel; J. McGalliard, Grenville and Augmentation; A. Kerr, Gore; L. Carriere, Chatham; Dr. Turcotte, Huberdeau; G. Bothe, Sixteen Island Lake; E. Parizeau, Carillon; A. MacI. Pridham, Grenville; H. Brannan, Calumet.

The principal business done at the meeting was the acceptance for one year, of the Sanitary Unit comprising a Doctor appointed by the Provincial Bureau of Health, a Sanitary Inspector and Three Nurses with headquarters at Lachute. The Unit was adopted with the understanding that the cost must not exceed 2c. per $100 on the valuation of the County, $5,000 being paid by the Rockefeller Foundation Institute and $5,000 by the Provincial Bureau of Health.

Regular routine business was then conducted and the meeting adjourned.

A very pleasant surprise party took place on Wednesday afternoon of this week at the Lachute Academy when Grade IX, presented their teacher, Miss Jones, who is shortly to be married, with a silver tea set as a token of loving appreciation. Miss Jones has been a teacher in the Academy for a number of years and her departure is much regretted except for the happy event which is causing it. Afternoon tea was served in which the Principal and other teachers of the staff took part and a very happy social time was spent.

We would call the attention of our readers to the new Parking By-law which is published elsewhere in this issue and which has been passed in the Council and is now effective. A perusal of the laws governing, and a courteous consideration of their enactment will be greatly appreciated by the members of the Council who have spent considerable time in lining up a by-law that will make for betterment of traffic in the town. The by-law is published in order that the public may not plead ignorance of its rulings which will be rigidly enforced.

Considerable interest is being centred around the old home of Mr. L. L. Legault, which has undergone a remarkable change since he disposed of it to Dr. Sauvé. It has been remodelled according to specifications of the Government for the License Commission Store, in which the public will be able to procure all their favorite brands without necessity of imposing on friends to carry supplies from other places. Just who is appointed as manager is still held as secret, but it will not be long now as it is expected the store will be open for business next week.

Mr. P. Robinson and daughter spent the week-end in Hull.

Dr. and Mrs. G. Archambault, of Montreal, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Lemay on Monday.

Raitt, of Edmonton, were in town this week, renewing old acquaintances. It is some 18 years since Mr. J. W. Raitt left town, and he was pleasantly surprised at the many improvements that have been made. Needless to say his many old friends were delighted to see his smiling face again.

WEDDING BELLS

LEMAI—PAQUETTE

The wedding of Miss Pomila Lemay, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lemay, of Lachute Road, to Mr. Roland Paquette, of Montreal, took place Saturday forenoon, June 8th., at seven o'clock (standard time) at St. Andrews R. C. Church.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father J. A. Dulude. The bride who was given away by her father wore a gown of white georgette and chintilly lace with embroidered chiffon net veil, draped in bonnet effect. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. Lemay.

Later Mr. Paquette and his bride left by Lachute to spend their honeymoon in Washington; the later travelling in a dress of sand georgette trimmed with gold lace and brown velvet coat, hat and shoes to match.

On their return they will reside in Montreal.

WISHART—KEATLEY.

On Wednesday, June 5th., the marriage took place at the former home of the bride's family, Cushing, Que., of Lois Christina Keatley, only daughter of Mrs. William Usher, of Point Fortune, and of the late Edward O. Keatley, of Montreal, to Mr. George Wishart, B.S.A., of Chatham, Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Wishart, of Arnprior, Ont., with Rev. William Usher, officiating minister.

The bride who was given away by her brother Mr. Owen W. Keatley, of Montreal, was beautifully attired in a gown of ivory chintilly lace over crepe back satin, made with draped bodice and flounced skirt, longer at the back, she wore a tulle veil with a circlet of orange blossoms, also the groom's gift, a platinum wrist watch and carried a bouquet of pale pink carnations, baby's breath and ferns.

Miss Mary Drysdale, of Montreal, who acted as bride's maid, wore a lovely dress of pale pink crepe satin, with tiered skirt of tulle, broad pink mohair hat and pink satin slippers and carried pink and white sweet peas and fern. The best man was Mr. Rochester Smith, of Toronto.

After the signing of the register, Mrs. Norman James, sister of the groom sang very sweetly, "O Promise Me", and Mrs. D. M. McLeod, of Alexandria, Ont., played the wedding music.

Miss Whelehan also recited an appropriate selection in her usual charming style. The wedding gifts were very numerous and handsome. The groom's gift to the bride's maid was an aquamarine fob brooch, and to the best man, white gold cuff links.

After a delicious wedding breakfast was served, Mr. and Mrs. Wishart left by motor to spend a short honeymoon, at the country cottage of the groom's father, near Sand Point, Ont., the bride travelling in an ensemble of powder blue flat crepe with blue and grey tweed coat, hat of blue felt, with grey straw and black fox scarf. They will reside in Belleville, Ont.

Besides those already mentioned, the guests from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Wishart, Miss Grace MacCallum and Miss M. Morgan, of Arnprior; Mr. Geo. L. Forster of Washington, Pa., U.S.A.; Mrs. Jas. Chalmers, Smith Falls; Dr. and Mrs. Norman James, Midland, Ont.; Rev. and Mrs. W. S. Dowd, and family of Ottawa; Miss Humphries and Mr. A. Wilson, of Carp, Ont.; Mr. W. M. Watson and Miss Geraldine Watson and Mr. Franklin H. Keatley, of Maniwaki, Que.

Antony gave Bill a smile and was silent for a little, thinking.

"Is there another inn at Stanton—fairly close to the station?"

"The 'Plough and Horses'—just at the corner where the road goes up to the station—is that the one you mean?"

"That would be the one. I suppose you could do with a drink, couldn't you?"

"Rather!" said Bill, with a grin.

"Good. Then have one at the 'Plough and Horses.' Have two, if you like, and talk to the landlord, or landlady, or whoever serves you. I want to find out if anybody stayed there on Monday night."

"Robert?" said Bill eagerly.

"I didn't say Robert," said Antony, smiling. "I just want you to find out if they had a visitor who slept there on Monday night. A stranger. If so, then any particulars you can get of him, without letting the landlord know that you are interested—"

"Leave it to me," broke in Bill. "I know just what you want."

"Don't assume that it was Robert—or anybody else. Let them describe the man to you. Don't influence them unconsciously by suggesting that he was short or tall, or anything of that sort. Just get them talking. If it's the landlord, you'd better stand him a drink or two."

"Right you are," said Bill confidently. "Where do I meet you again?"

"Probably at the 'George.' If you get there before me, you can order dinner for eight o'clock. Anyhow, we'll meet at eight, if not before."

"Good," he nodded to Antony and strode off back to Stanton again.

Antony stood watching him with a little smile at his enthusiasm. Then he looked round slowly, as if in search of something. Suddenly he saw what he wanted. Twenty yards farther on a lane wandered off to the left, and there was a gate a little way up on the right-hand side of it. Antony walked to the gate, filling his pipe as he went. Then he lit his pipe, sat on the gate, and took his head in his hands.

"Now then," he said to himself, "let's begin at the beginning."

It was nearly eight o'clock when William Beverley, the famous sleuth-hound, arrived, tired and dusty, at the "George," to find Antony, cool and clean, standing bare-headed at the door, waiting for him.

"Is dinner ready?" were Bill's first words.

"Yes."

"Then I'll just have a wash. Lord, I'm tired."

"I never ought to have asked you," said Antony penitently.

"That's all right. I shan't be a moment." Halfway up the stairs he turned round and asked, "Am I in your room?"

"Yes. Do you know the way?"

"Yes. Start carving, will you? And order lots of beer." He disappeared round the top of the staircase. Antony went slowly in.

had worn off, and he was able to spare a little time between the mouthfuls, Bill gave an account of the adventures. The landlord of the "Plough and Horses" had been sticky, decidedly sticky—Bill had been unable at first to get anything out of him. But Bill had been tactful; lordless, you, how tactful he had been.

"He kept on about the inquest, and what a queer affair it had been, and so on. Then I said carelessly that it must be very hard to remember anybody whom you had just seen once, so as to identify him afterward, and he agreed that it would be 'middlin' hard,' and then—"

"Give me three guesses," interrupted Antony. "You asked him if he remembered everybody who came to his inn?"

"That's it. Bright, wasn't it?"

"Brilliant. And what was the result?"

"The result was a woman."

"A woman?" said Antony eagerly.

"A woman," said Bill impressively. "Of course I thought it was going to be Robert—so did you, didn't you?—but it wasn't. It was a woman. Came quite late on Monday night in a car—driving herself—went off early next morning."

"Did he describe her?"

"Yes. She was middlin'. Middlin' tall, middlin' age, middlin' color, and so on. Doesn't help much, does it? But still a woman. Does that upset your theory?"

Antony shook his head.

"No, Bill, not at all," he said.

"You knew all the time? At least, you guessed?"

"Wait till tomorrow. I'll tell you everything tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!" said Bill in great disappointment.

"Well, I'll tell you one thing tonight, if you'll promise not to ask any more questions. But you probably know it already."

"What is it?"

"Only that Mark Ablett did not kill his brother."

"And Cayley did?"

"That's another question, Bill. However, the answer is that Cayley didn't, either."

"Then who on earth—"

"Have some more beer," said Antony with a smile. And Bill had to be content with that.

They were early to bed that evening, for both of them were tired. Bill slept loudly and defiantly, but Antony lay awake, wondering. What was happening at the Red House now? Perhaps he would hear in the morning; perhaps he would get a letter. He went over the whole story again from the beginning—was there any possibility of a mistake? What would the police do? Would they ever find out? Ought he to have told them? Well, let them find out; it was their job. Surely he couldn't have made a mistake this time. No good wondering now; he would know definitely in the morning.

In the morning there was a letter for him.

CHAPTER XX.

"My dear Mr. Gillingham,

"I gather from your letter that you have made certain discoveries which you may feel it your duty to communicate to the police, and that in this case my arrest on a charge of murder would inevitably follow. Why, in these circumstances you should give me such ample warning of your intentions I do not understand, unless it is that you are not wholly out of sympathy with me.

"But whether or not you sympathize, at any rate you will want to know—and I want you to know—the exact manner in which Ablett met his death and the reasons which made that death necessary. If the police have to be told anything, I would rather that they too knew the whole story. They, and even you, may call it murder, but by that time I shall be out of the way. Let them call it what they like.

"I must begin by taking you back to a summer day fifteen years ago, when I was a boy of thirteen and Mark a young man of twenty-five. His whole life was make-believe, and just now he was pretending to be a philanthropist.

"He sat in our little drawing-room, flicking his gloves against the back of his left hand, and my mother, good soul, thought what a noble young gentleman he was, and Philip and I, hastily washed and crammed into collars, stood in front of him, nudging each other and kicking the backs of our heels and cursing him in our hearts for having interrupted our game.

"He had decided to adopt one of us, kind Cousin Mark. Heaven knows why he chose me. Philip was eleven; two years longer to wait. Perhaps that was why.

"Well, Mark educated me. I went to a public school and to Cambridge, and I became his secretary. Well, much more than his secretary as your friend Beverley perhaps has told you. Mark could never live alone. There must always be somebody to listen to him. I think in his heart he hoped I should be his Boswell. He told me one day that he had made me his literary executor—poor devil. And he used to write me the absurdest long letters when I was away from him, letters which I read once and then tore up. The futility of the man!

"It was three years ago that Philip got into trouble. He had been hurried through a cheap grammar school and into a London office, and discovered there that there was not much fun to be got in this world on two pounds a week. I had a frantic letter from him one day, saying that he must have a hundred at once, or he would be ruined, and I went to Mark for the money.

"Only to borrow it, you understand; he gave me a good salary and I could have paid it back in three months. But no. He saw nothing for himself in it, I suppose; no applause, no admiration. Philip's gratitude would be to me, not to him.

"I begged, I threatened, we argued; and while we were arguing, Philip was arrested. It killed my mother—he was always her favorite—but Mark as usual got his satisfaction out of it. He preened himself on his judgment of character in having chosen me and not Philip twelve years before!

"Later on I apologized to Mark for the reckless things I had said to him, and he played the part of a magnanimous gentleman with his accustomed skill, but, though outwardly we were as before to each other, from that day forward, though his vanity would never let him see it, I was his bitterest enemy.

"If that had been all, I wonder if I should have killed him? To live on terms of intimate friendship with a man whom you hate is dangerous work for your friend. Because of his belief in me as his admiring and grateful protegee and his belief in himself as my benefactor, he was now utterly in my power. I could take my time and choose my opportunity. Perhaps I should not have killed him, but I had sworn to have my revenge—and there he was, poor vain fool, at my mercy. I was in no hurry.

"Two years later I had to reconsider my position, for my revenge was being taken out of my hands. Mark began to drink. Could I have stopped him? I don't think so, but to my immense surprise I found myself trying to. Instinct, perhaps, getting the better of reason; or did I reason it out and tell myself that, if he drank himself to death, I should lose my revenge? Upon my word, I cannot tell you; but, for whatever motive, I did genuinely want to stop it. Drinking is such a beastly thing, anyhow.

China Unlocks Remote Parts By Road System

Motorbuses Penetrate to Backward Regions as Long-Distance Routes Open

Peiping—Chinese officials are considering proposals for reconstruction of the war-torn country, but the money for them is not forthcoming. One project, however, has made headway during the past year, and that is the construction of automobile highways in several provinces, which open up hitherto isolated districts to the outside world.

Some highways have been built under the direction of the China International Famine Relief Association, with its American engineers, but perhaps more significance may be attached to those which have been built by the Chinese, with no foreign advice or assistance.

The Chinese Bureau of Economic Information reports that five great highways have been opened to motor traffic during the past few months, and that 13 other highways have been partially completed, and will be finished during the summer. Chinese engineers have also drawn plans for 11 others, and when these have been completed, China will have a finer highway system than in the most prosperous days of empire.

Chinese officials have been impressed by the fact that the highways already completed have paid for themselves within a short time. In a country where labor is so cheap the cost of construction is not great, and highway building is especially useful in times when so many men and women are out of work. As a rule, the provincial governments which build the highways have shared in the purchase of motorbuses which use them, and the profits from these enterprises have been quick and substantial. The Chinese farmers have taken readily to the new vehicles, and automobile buses now run into districts which had never seen such conveyances a year or two ago.

Some of the greatest progress has been made in Shansi, which has been known as the "model province" under the beneficent rule of Marshal Yen Hsi-shan. Some 3000 miles were completed before the civil war stopped the work. Since then an additional 1000 miles has been completed, and another 2000 miles is contemplated during the summer.

Port of Agadis, Long Closed, Is Now Semi-Open

Coastwise Traffic Imports Admitted to Moroccan City—Exports Barred

London.—Agadir, that long-closed port south of the Atlas Mountains, in Morocco, which figured so prominently in the European diplomatic disputes which preceded the Great War, is now semi-open according to a report of the British Vice-Consul at Mogador.

A considerable import trade has sprung up in certain overseas imports into Morocco, between Casablanca and Agadir, particularly in tea and sugar, and consequently the port of Agadir has been kept open for coastwise traffic (imports). This is not likely now to be altered as, in the middle of this summer, the consul believes that Agadir will be thrown open to deep sea imports and exports on the lines of the other Moroccan ports.

At present, the Government does not permit Agadir to export at all direct but—as for the past 12 years—take their produce across the Atlas Mountains to the port of Mogador. The leading Mogador merchants, whose trade must be heavily hit once Agadir is fully open, have already secured sites and in many cases put up buildings at Agadir. The latest development is the opening by some of the Mogador merchants of a sub-depot at Sidi Mokhtar, about 60 miles east of Mogador on the road to Marrakeesh, in order to intercept there cereals from Sous destined for Marrakeesh.

Great building activity generally is now going on at Agadir, and land values at the port, which is naturally sheltered and the only sea outlet for a coastline several hundred miles long, have risen very rapidly. With the completion of three motor roads which the Franco-Moroccan Government is now driving over the Southern

Why go to Peru?

When crude oil is so plentifully available here in North America, why does Imperial Oil Limited go 4000 miles to Peru for the crude from which Marvelube is made?

It is because Peruvian crude has lubrication properties which make it particularly desirable as a base for a superior motor oil.

That is why Marvelube is giving aircraft operators longer periods between engine overhauls and a greater margin of safety.

Marvelube meets the needs of the modern high-speed motor, in the air or on the road, because its carbon-free and heat-resisting superiorities are created by Nature herself.

Let Marvelube give you the benefits of better lubrication. There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car, truck or tractor. See the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil dealers and service stations.

Gretna Green Still Too Popular

Irregular Marriage Cause Concern and Call for Regain —Scotch Customs Under Fire

"There has been a remarkable boom in what are known as Gretna Green marriages. This week the more or less romantic circumstances of one of these runaway matches received wide publicity. The report of the Committee on Church and Nation on this subject appears, therefore, at an appropriate time. The traffic in these marriages has become a scandal."—The Scotsman.

"The report which has been prepared on the subject by the Church and Nation Committee of the Church of Scotland for submission to the forthcoming General Assembly makes a strong indictment of the loose practice obtaining in the Gretna marriage business, stating as the three most outstanding objections: the absence of certainty as to the marriage being good and valid, the risk of imposing on innocent women and the lack of proper registration.

"The Committee invite the Assembly to draw the attention of the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Lord Advocate to the frequency of irregular marriages in Scotland and to the scandalous traffic in clandestine marriage carried on at Gretna Green, and to ask the Government to examine the whole question with a view to amendment of Scottish marriage law."—Glasgow Herald.

"During the past two years the Committee have been exploring the whole situation. The report now prepared for the Assembly of the scandalous traffic in clandestine marriage presently carried on at Gretna Green," states that the aid of the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Lord Advocate must now be invoked. Early legislation amending the Scottish marriage law has become imperative," says the Glasgow Herald.

"Irregular marriages at Gretna have lately been receiving an undesirable publicity, and there has been an increase of the grotesque ceremonies. The Gretna 'priests' have themselves stated that, during 1923, they 'celebrated' something like 215 marriages; but the registers show that only 18 of these were registered.

"It is probable that the cost and very great trouble in getting their 'marriage' registered account for the enormous number that do not complete the transaction.

"Here are extracts from two letters:

"1. 'I was "married" in the smithy.' (Here date is given.) 'I had just returned from a long voyage, and the lady who made the journey to Gretna with me had known me one day. Apparently she was not satisfied with her lot, for after a week we drifted apart, and since then we have heard nothing of each other. In the meantime, sir, I've met my sweetheart of childhood days, and we have been anxiously waiting and hoping that something would turn up to enable us to be married by the minister here. I may state that after the "ceremony" in the smithy we did not register the marriage at Dumfries. Will you please advise me?"

"Stop So Much Misery"

"2. 'A boy friend and myself were going to Carlisle on his motorcycle and we called in at the smithy out of curiosity. We hadn't the slightest notion of being married, but the blacksmith asked us, and I didn't realize what we had done until it was too late; that was (Here date, quite recent). My husband was frightened to tell his people and said it must be kept secret. We were twenty years of age and our marriage was never registered. I am told that I could have it annulled, but I am only a working girl and haven't the means. Is it legal? It would mean so much to me if I knew that I was free. I do hope Gretna Green marriages will be stopped, and it will stop so much misery."

"The report proceeds to give notes by 'one who is eminently qualified to discuss the question.' This authority points out that while Lord Brougham's Act of 1856 checked the contracting of marriage by runaway couples in Border places, it has, through providing a ready means of recording irregular marriages, rendered possible the business of what may be called marriage agents in the larger towns, and has led to an enormous increase in the frequency of irregular marriage in Scotland. Previous to 1870 the annual average of such marriages registered was less than 50, and previous to 1890 less than 50, and previous to 1890 less than 1,000. During the last ten years for which figures are available, the minimum number has been 2,712 and the maximum 8,351, this latter occurring in the marriage boom which followed demobilization.

"Irregular marriages now amount to about 12 per cent. of all registered. This number may point to civil (non-religious) marriages being desired by some persons in Scotland, but it does not follow that the objectionable class of irregular marriage associated with Gretna Green meets any real want, or that it should be allowed to persist.

"Other than historic and sentimental considerations, there is no special virtue attached to Gretna Green marriages, and no special privileges vest either in buildings or persons there.

"The writer says he has no definite information as to the number of marriages now being celebrated at Gretna, but it is understood that it is something like 200 a year, and if this is the case the marriage business there is at least as active, if not more active, than it was before the passing of Lord Brougham's Act. What proportion of those married come across the Border for the purpose is not known but there are strong suspicions that it is considerable. There are two marriage shops at Gretna, one being in the 'smithy,' and the other in the Old Toll House, the former being the most frequented.

"The following are possibly the most outstanding objections to the marriage business carried on at Gretna: The absence of certainty as to the marriage being good and valid, the risk of imposing on innocent women and the lack of proper registration.

"The lack of certainty as to marriage rests on loose practice; knowledgeable witnesses are not insisted on, and a mere statement of twenty-one days' residence in Scotland is accepted."

Home Life of Western Indians Has Improved

Better Homes and Advanced Mode of Living

The progress of the Indians on reserves in the three Prairie Provinces towards a position of self-support and independence is one of the gratifying features of the work of the Department of Indian Affairs. In farming and cattle raising these wards of the Government have, during recent years, scored conspicuous successes and the prosperous conditions prevailing on western reserves are reflected in the improved mode of living. New houses are springing up on all the reserves at the annual rate of from 350 to 400. These are of log and frame construction with at least six windows providing ample light and ventilation. Well kept gardens are laid out near many of these homes while milk cows, flocks of poultry, and pigs are not uncommon sights in the barnyards.

The improvement in home life on the reserves is due in a large measure to the training received by the young Indian women in the boarding schools maintained by the Department. In these they learn, among other things, the principles of domestic science and hygiene. At one time it was a difficult matter to make the Indians realize the value of milk as a food for themselves and their children and to get them to milk their cows. However, a gradual change has taken place in their attitude. An increasing number of cows are being milked, and milk, cream, and butter are in use in Indian homes. The development of gardening is another gratifying feature of the Indians' progress and last year nearly 350 acres were sown to vegetables.

In the matter of hygiene, the Department of Indian Affairs makes every effort to encourage good practice. Where the wives and mothers are school graduates, the value of sanitary conditions is fully realized, and among the older Indian women the work of the travelling nurses and field matrons is gradually bearing fruit. Four travelling nurses are constantly on the road visiting Indian homes on the various reserves in the West, instructing the women how to live and how to care for their children. This service is supplemented by the work of a staff of field matrons who make frequent visits to give any advice and assistance needed by the native women.

The care of the aged is also a particular responsibility of the Department and officers on the reserves provide food, clothing, and homes for indigent members of the bands. During the last three years the policy of the Department has been to encourage as many old Indians as possible to live in teepees during the summer. The teepees are usually large and well ventilated and the old Indians are greatly benefited in health by this practice of living in these airy, summer habitations.

"Prepared at the direction of Dr. Duncan C. Scott, Deputy Superintendent General of Indian Affairs, by Mr. W. M. Graham, Indian Commissioner."

ADAMSON'S ADVENTURES—By O. Jacobson.

Twenty Ways To Make a Million

An automobile that goes sidewise as well as forward and backward will make its inventor millionaire. And, according to Roger Babson, the industrial statistician, who writes in "The Forum," the device will come within twenty-five years. The machine will probably have its cylinders arranged in a circle and its exhaust will empty on the roof. The sidewise motion will be a convenience in parking. And here are nineteen other ways to become rich via the invention route. Mr. Babson's "Forum" suggestions are summarized thus in the New York "Sun":

A Diesel engine for automobiles that will use crude oil, which is far cheaper than gasoline, not having to go through any refining processes. He prophesies its appearance. The man who does it first will make more than a million.

A practical and fool-proof helicopter—that is, a device that will lift an airplane directly off the earth and do away with the need for starting and landing fields, enabling the aviator to light on city building roofs or the decks of ships without difficulty.

A light that will pierce fog, something greatly needed in the field of air navigation. Until this is discovered Babson holds commercial aviation will be dangerous.

Gliders for children. Babson predicts that these will be, sometime, as plenty as toy wagons and bicycles and "little boys and girls will fly around their yards as safely as they now play in their sand piles."

New sources of power—from the sun, the tides and the heat of the earth. These are the big sources remaining to be tapped.

A new electrical development exploiting the short wave lengths.

Fireless cities. Babson would have some man get rich by sending heat to houses direct from mines or generating sources close to power sites.

Cold light which will do away with 95 per cent. of the electric current now wasted on resistance to create the glow.

Central cooling systems, on the plan of central heating and lighting plants. Electrical clocks. He expects time to be on tap like gas or water.

Horizontal "elevators" that will subjugate the labyrinths of departmental stores.

Talking books—that is, pages that may be fed into a machine and save the bother of reading.

Ready-made subways, smaller in size but of easier construction, being made in cast sections, ready for installation.

Grass paper that will substitute the annual product of the soil for trees that take from fifty to a hundred years to grow into wood-pulp size.

Pills for plants—some condensed form of fertilizer that will do away with wasteful spreading and supply the needed help to plant life economically and directly.

Flexible, unbreakable and bullet-proof glass.

Synthetic foods. These are fast on the way. Milk, cream, butter and cheese already come as by-products of petroleum. Synthetic vegetables have been devised that outdo nature in vitamins, while eggs can be made direct from grasses.

Mahogany lumber from native hardwood trees, by inoculating them with dyes and chemicals that shall make them take on the qualities of the tropical product.

A tooth powder that will prevent the decay of teeth.

Automobile Races Are to Take Place On Sahara Desert

Traveling Has Now Become as Safe as in Any Normal European Country

Algiers—The Sahara, which was, 10 years ago, a desert of mystery, where travellers journeyed at great personal risk, has become as safe as the normal European or American regions. Motorists, even women alone, can travel along its endless sandy or stony roads without much difficulty, the camels of caravans being the only obstacle which they are likely to encounter on their journey.

Two years ago the longest Saharan trip by autocrats did not get beyond Tuggurt (the belle of the desert) and Ouargla, lying amid a sandy plain with over 1,000,000 date palms.

Motorists can now reach El-Golea, the most beautiful Saharan oasis, and continue their journey to the mountainous region known as the Hoggar, situated at the very heart of the Algerian Sahara, where the mysterious Tuaregs live, and even farther, down to the River Niger.

Owing to these improved conditions in the desert two important automobile races are to be run next year under the auspices of M. Pierre Bordes, Governor-General of Algeria, from Algeria to the Sudan. The more important of the two will be known as the "Grand Prix du Sahara."

These auto races will, undoubtedly, be a landmark in this history of the great African desert; they will show the world how the actual means of communications across the sandy hills or along the endless stony wilderness, have been made easy. In fact, new tracks have been created and the old camel caravan ones greatly improved.

The tracks over the Algerian Sahara now cover a length of about 3000 kilometers.

Diplomatist Gives Rules For Success

"Consistent success in business is won by a clear brain, steadfast courage and sustained energy," writes Henry Morganthau, the well-known American diplomatist, in "The World of To-Day." "These qualities enable a man to recognize opportunity when he sees her, and to grasp her firmly when he pursues her. These qualities are elements of character; and character is the magnet that attracts opportunity."

"The essence of these qualities is self-control. He that ruleth himself is greater than he that taketh a city," said the ancient Wise Man, and he could have added that he that ruleth himself shall rule others. The world is eager for leadership, but it yields leadership only to the man who first leads himself, controls his own unruly spirit and proves that he can guide others by first proving that he can guide himself.

"Also—to look at the matter from another point of view—before the world can see any reason to have faith in a man, the man must first prove that he has reason to have faith in himself."

Another thing that prohibition enforcement agent never shoots except in self-defence, even when the prison shot wasn't armed and wasn't even looking at him at the time.—Ohio State Journal.

Believe nothing against another but on good authority; nor report what may hurt another, unless it be a greater hurt to some other to conceal it.—William Penn.

Canada Rich In Game Sanctuaries

Government's Aim is the Preservation of the Country's Fauna—Many Animals Almost Extinct are Now Increasing

Ottawa—Profiting by the fate of the dodo and the passenger pigeon and by the lesson of its own foresight in saving the last remnant of American bison, Canada is taking every care to insure the perpetuation of all wild game within its borders. The Government has already set aside over 11,000 square miles of the finest wilderness as game reserves where, under the protecting eye of the law, the furred and feathered inhabitants may exist unmenaced by the onward march of civilization.

A few years ago such important animals as elk, caribou, mountain goat and mountain sheep, antelope and muskox were diminishing at an alarming rate under the attack of man and wolf; bear, beaver and waterfowl evaded man as a deadly enemy. Now there are wide districts where many of these animals will literally feed from the strangers hand, their timidity or fierceness a thing of the past.

Buffalo and Elk Increase

At Wainwright and Buffalo Park the buffalo roam the prairies and meadows in great herds. Elk are increasing steadily at Elk Island, Jasper and Rocky Mountain parks. Moose, that were growing rare in the West, can now be seen any time at Waterton Lakes, Kootenay, and other places. Antelope are thriving at Nemiskam, Alberta; caribou at Jasper; Rocky Mountain sheep at Banff, while bear, cinnamon and black, forage for food about the back doors of park hotels. Even the mountain goat, that most elusive of animals, can often be seen from the train window, following the cloudland trails.

Increased protection of migratory birds through national and international laws and the setting aside of breeding grounds where most needed are proving highly beneficial. At Vaseaux Lake bird sanctuary, British Columbia, for instance, where there were only a few nesting Canada geese in 1923, when the sanctuary was made, 400 were counted there last summer at one time.

Jack Miner's Pond

On Jack Miner's little pond at Kingsville, Ont., the visiting geese and duck literally darken the sky and blot out the water. Every care is being taken to prevent the extinction of the beautiful trumpeter swan, which have an unfortunate habit of breeding within the borders of settlements and are easily molested. The whistling swan, a smaller variety, are still numerous, although, because their migration is generally by night and usually silent, they are rarely seen by even the most experienced sportsmen. Last spring a flock alighted on the Niagara River during a thunder storm and were swept over the falls, many of them being destroyed.

The chief concern of the game authorities now is the muskox. Not only are they few in numbers and those numbers scattered sparsely over the arctic and sub-arctic regions beyond the haunts of man but their bovine disposition leave them an easy prey to their enemies.

Movies of Muskox Taken

Last year the crew of the government ship Beothic spied a small herd of nine north coast of Devon Island and two bulls were brought to bay, by the efforts of one Eskimo and a single dog so that still and moving pictures could be taken of them. This illustrates the ease with which this valuable animal has been exterminated in many of the valleys along the eastern seaboard where it was formerly plentiful.

Through the aid of the northern detachments of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police special efforts are being made to save the remnants. A couple of years ago a game preserve for muskox, 19,500 square miles in extent, east of Great Slave Lake, was made, and W. H. B. Hoare, explorer for the Northwest territories and Yukon branch of the interior department, is now engaged in surveying the district.

Although the survey was begun last April it was not until January, nine months later, that the first word was received from Mr. Hoare, which gives some idea of the vastness and inaccessibility of this region.

Lord Onslow's Address

He reported having seen muskox along the Hanbury River and their tracks in the vicinity of the Thelon River, and the Government has good hopes of eventually seeing the Thelon reserve a popular grazing ground for this shaggy monarch.

The Earl of Onslow, president of the Society for the Preservation of the Fauna of the Empire, in his last presidential address said, "The whole world is becoming so speedily opened up to travellers, traders, tourists and settlers and so much uncultivated land is coming under the plough that unless some more or less drastic measures are taken to preserve the distinctive fauna it must obviously disappear entirely. . . I am sure I would be only quoting what . . . sportsmen themselves would say when I suggest that national parks are the very best sanctuaries for the big game."

Canada is certainly doing its bit in this direction.

PREMIER MacDONALD'S PROPOSED VISIT TO U. S. A.

There could be a no more inspiring suggestion to those who see in a closer Anglo-American understanding the real hope and promise of enduring world peace than the proposition that Ramsay MacDonald, the British Premier, should visit the United States to confer with President Hoover concerning the entire field of the relationship between the two nations.

Many who have observed the progress of the League of Nations, and have been in a position to evaluate its successes and failures, have held that its greatest advantage to the world proceeded from the opportunity it has given to international statesmen to meet on neutral ground and to form personal friendships. The repeated friendly conferences of the Premiers of Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy at Geneva have undoubtedly established individual understandings of the characteristics and the convictions of their fellows which have been of incalculable value in maintaining harmonious relations between the nations concerned. People accustomed to sit together at friendly tables are not likely to quarrel.

The United States has denied itself the advantage of these meetings of statesmen. When represented, it has been only by unofficial observers or by diplomats acting merely as messengers. The suggestion now being discussed would result in the establishment of a personal acquaintance between the Premier of Great Britain and the President of the United States, and, it is wisely suggested, the Prime Minister of Canada, W. L. Mackenzie King. The people of all three nations will unquestionably applaud this project.

Mr. MacDonald is said to hold that there is no reason why the methods that have kept the 3000-mile unfortified boundary between the United States and Canada a friendly line could not be extended so as to cover the seas which mark the boundaries of the United States and Great Britain as a whole. Doubtless, as he visited Canada as recently as last year, he is aware of the admirable work done for the maintenance of this good feeling by the International Joint Commission, to which may be referred all questions which may arise between these two adjoining nations. Whether or not such another International Commission between Great Britain and the United States can develop out of Mr. MacDonald's visit, only time can tell. Certain it is that he may expect from the people and from the Government at Washington a warm welcome, and may undertake his commission with the knowledge that a very large and influential section of the people of the United States, or at least a majority of its thinking people, believe that closer co-operation on international affairs between the English-speaking peoples will furnish the most certain of all assurances for the enduring peace of the world.

PROTECT THE WILD FLOWERS

Nature lovers should do whatever they can to protect the wild flowers. Picking flowers is instinctive, and many persons gather them in armfuls, without stopping to consider that they may be doing great damage. Fires, agriculture and real estate development have depleted nature's gardens until some of the most attractive wild flowers are in danger of extermination. Many nature lovers aggravate the matter by pulling up by the roots plants which would not be injured if the flowers were cut off with short stems.

All can help to prevent the flowers from becoming exterminated by refusing to pick any of the rarer varieties and by cutting others in such a manner that the plants will not be injured. People who own plots of ground should transfer to these such wild flowers as are growing on soil where they will be destroyed. Farmers should protect the flowers that grow along their fields and pastures. These are not in the way for anybody, and if permitted, they will produce seed and perpetuate themselves. The wild flowers add greatly to the beauty and interest of every landscape.

(—From A Montreale's Diary, Montreal Herald—)

Have you ever thought that the average child at school works a jolly sight harder than those who have left school and gone into business?

Long hours in the class room under a steady and persistent drive, then a very short time for recreation and this followed by more long hours of home study.

Their teachers in many cases also have their nerves on edge, and are continually assuring them that they cannot pass unless they work harder and even harder. And then right through the hot spell they are driven to the point of collapse all ready for the test to see what they know.

This may not apply to all schools or to all children, but I am sure it applies to the majority.

Some day perhaps an enlightened opinion will abolish these June exams and pass all children on their year's work, as is now done in some of the lower grades.

MINISTERS ARE APPOINTED

United Church Conference Arranges New Charges

Forty ministers were appointed to churches at the Montreal - Ottawa

Church of Canada.

Among those named to report to different churches, effective from July 1, are: Montreal Presbytery: Calvin-Westminister, Rev. J. McAvoy; Emmanuel (in process); St. James' United, Dr. Lloyd C. Douglas; Queen Mary Road, Rev. Arthur Wilkinson; Avoca and Harrington, Rev. J. T. Conn; Brownsburg, A. E. Hager; Cushing and Calumet, Rev. J. W. McLean; Hemmingford and Robson, Rev. J. G. Fulcher; Lachute, (in process); Shawinigan Falls, Rev. Robert Chariton.

Mr. and Mrs. John Noble, of Cambridge, received a pleasant surprise on Sunday last, when a large number of their relatives motored up to their door and invited them to join in a picnic they were having under the apple trees of the old Noble homestead. The visitors included Mrs. T. Noble Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Noble and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. Ward and family, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Noble and Miss Laura, of Lachute, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Noble, and family, Messrs. Andie and Herbie Neil, of Louisa, Mrs. Albert Elliott, and family, of Brittonville, Mr. and Mrs. Theos. Noble and family, of Thos. Gore, Mr. & Mrs. Erwin Noble and family, Miss Hilda Sutton, Mr. R. Tool and Mr. W. Robinson, of Montreal. After lunch, a number of pictures were taken of the old home, then all returned home, after spending a happy reunion; it being fifteen years since Reuben had seen the old home.

CUSHING.

Mr. C. F. Kains spent Thursday last in Montreal.

Miss Gaze is spending the week with friends at Rosemere.

Miss Pickett, of Montreal, is a guest at Mascot Lodge this week. Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Usher, of Ft. Fortune, spent the early part of the week at their Cushing residence.

Mr. Owen Keatley returned to the city on Sunday, after a two week's vacation in Cushing and Ft. Fortune.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McIntyre, of Calumet, visited the Rev. and Mrs. F. L. Jobb at St. Mungo's Manse, on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Weir Sr. and daughters Dorothy and Helen, also Mrs. W. Canning motored to Montreal on Saturday.

Mr. Ernest and Miss Olive Hartley the latter of whom was one of the successful graduates at McDonald last week, spent the week-end with their mother Mrs. S. O. Hartley.

Guests of Mr. and Miss Wheelahan last week-end were Mr. and Mrs. S. Wheelahan, Miss Katie Wheelahan and Mr. Eddie Wheelahan and Mr. Kenrick Dorion who motored up from St. Andrews where he with Mrs. Dorion and little daughter were spending Sunday.

GRENVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Matthew were in Hawkesbury last week.

Mr. Alex. McPhee, of Outremont, attended the funeral of the late Mr. C. Steele.

Mrs. W. Bradshaw has returned home, after spending a week with Mrs. G. Clerhuc in Montreal.

Master Willie Dodd who is attending Lachute Academy, was at his home here for the week-end.

Mrs. W. Eaton and Miss E. Steele, of Montreal, attended the funeral of their brother, Mr. C. Steele.

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. C. Steele and daughter Lillian in their recent sad bereavement.

Mr. W. McCullough has purchased the home and farm of the late Mr. Thos. Grey and their many friends wish them long life to enjoy their new home.

The June meeting of the Baptist Women's Mission Circle was held at the home of Mrs. Walter Murray, on Tuesday afternoon, June 4th. Fourteen ladies were present and a profitable time was spent. Besides the devotional exercises some excellent readings were given and several items of business brought up. Two ladies were appointed to attend the Baptist Association to be held in Clarence next week. After which tea was served by the hostess.

ATTRACTIVE PICTOU

Most resorts only offer one type of holiday. They are seaside, lakeland or forest places as the case may be. If they offer salt water joys, freshwater is missing. Spreading sands preclude cool forest depths.

Pictou, N. S., where Pictou Lodge affords delightful accommodation, is unique among Canada's holiday havens. There you have sweet scented forests, a lovely freshwater lagoon and the rolling salt-tanged waters of the sea itself.

Full details of versatile Pictou and particulars of accommodation & convenient train service may be obtained from any Canadian National Agent.

These are the days that will mean much to Lachute, for we shall have many thousands coming to visit with us, and see just what this County is producing. It is in a sense of pride that we extend the open invitation for Fair Week, for we have much that will open the eyes of our visitors. No Fair Grounds in Canada have a more beautiful setting, or better ring and track in which to show off to advantage the varied events that go to make up our exhibition. It is fully expected that 1929 will be the best in the history of our Agricultural Society and that has been the aim of our worthy President, Mr. J. T. Ayers, who personally has supervised all the work of improvements, going on for many weeks.

In addition to the fine show of live stock there will be a splendid vaudeville entertainment fronting the grandstand. Band concert by the celebrated Grenadier Guards Band, a larger and better midway, and on Thursday and Friday nights there is to be the added feature of a beautiful fireworks display. Now the Society have done everything possible to make for an instructive and interesting time so don't fail to come along with your friends, and renew acquaintances with your old friends for they will all be there.

1.—Portrait of General Murray, first Governor of Canada following the Capitulation of the French in 1760. This portrait will be hung in the Murray Room at the new Manoir.

2.—A glimpse of the interior of the new Manoir, Richelieu.

3.—Portrait of Madame de Champlain teaching the Indian children, which will be hung in the Ladies Lounge at the new Manoir.

4.—Glimpse of the beautiful fireplace and French door effects in the new Manoir.

Holiday plans will centre actively this summer about the new Manoir, Richelieu, at Murray Bay which is situated eighty miles below Quebec and is easily accessible by water, rail and road. The opening date is scheduled for June 15th, and it promises to be one of the brightest occasions of the early summer season. Murray Bay has for generations been regarded as the smartest summer colony in Quebec, and among its habitués are many personalities of international interest.

The new Manoir is a completely fireproof building of modern construction and is built in the French manoir type of architecture peculiar to the 18th century and has accommodation for 600 guests. The interior decorations and furnishings are designed to present a complete picture of the late French period in Canadian history, just prior to the Capitulation in 1760 and the beginning of British rule. Neither effort nor expense has been spared in achieving this.

Entirely surrounded by a terrace, the Manoir is entered through French doors opening off a loggia. In the Main Lobby the walls are lined with softly colored Jean d'Arc stone brought from France. The Main Lounges include the Murray Room which is entered by a very fine portrait of the first British viceroy, General Murray, and houses the trophies a very fine collection of Canadiana. In the Lounge is a charming study of Madame de Champlain teaching the Indian children who are examining with interest the tiny mirror worn at her girdle. Great open fireplaces add to the charm of all these rooms which are furnished with many valuable antiques. The Tower Lounge is centered by a magnificent stone fireplace over which is hung an effective portrait of Cardinal Richelieu, the patron of navigation in New France. This is a cosy room softly lighted with leaded glass windows thick with rugs and soft hangings. It is a room designed with an eye to long winter evenings where merry winter sports will gather before the crackling fire and recount the adventures of the day, in all the heady exhilaration of skiing, snow-shoeing and such activities.

The ball-room is a separate building modelled after the Chateau de Ramezay, one of Montreal's historic buildings. It faces an open air heated salt water swimming pool, which is overlooked by a staging, where on seating arrangements are provided for watching aquatic sports. The whole Manoir is surrounded by lawns and gardens in which natural beauty rather than formal arrangement has received primary consideration.

A sporty golf course, tennis, miles of bridle paths, good roads—are only a few of the outdoor activities that promise to make the new Manoir more popular than ever.

Here and There

(GOLF)
The Prince of Wales has again extended his patronage to the Banff Highland Golf Club and Scottish Music Festival to be held this summer at the Banff Springs Hotel in the Rockies. Players, dancers, and athletes from all parts of the country compete in these popular games.

Two baby black bears were great attractions recently at the Detroit Sportsman's Show. They were from Phil Lamotte at Mattawan, Ontario, and were escorted to their destination by a member of the C. P. R. general tourist department, who had sundry bears to show in proof of the existence of the babies' first teeth.

Enough flowers are planted by the Canadian Pacific Railway each year to beautify a couple of cities. The floral branch each year sends out to station agents and employees along its line plants, bulbs, shrubs, seedlings, and seeds by the tens of thousands to decorate the company's right-of-way.

Five railway cars were required to move the equipment of the mammoth Cassavant Organ recently installed in the new Royal York Hotel in Toronto. The hotel is the tallest building in the British Empire.

Tyndall stone, which shows to such great effect in the famous Banff Springs Hotel in the Rockies, is to be used in the construction of the new building for the T. Eaton Company in Toronto, the first unit of which is now being built.

The year's champion cattle raiser in British Columbia is Annie Turner, twelve-year-old daughter of James Turner, Caledonia Bay stock breeder. Her 14-month-old short-horn steer, sired by Braddish Marquis and weighing around 1,100 lbs., won the grand championship of all breeds at the Kamloops bull sale and fat stock show.

SOME KINGS

The class composition was on "Kings", says the Boston Transcript, and this is what one boy wrote: "The most powerful king on earth is Working; the laziest, Shir-king; one of the worst is Smo-king; the wittiest, Jo-king; the quietest, Thin-king; the thirteenth, Drin-king; the slyest, Win-king; and the noisiest, Tal-king."

With a score of 1402 out of a possible 1600, highest ever made since the contest was inaugurated, Canadian Pacific Railway police, Ontario No. 1 team, have been awarded the Dominion Revolver championship for the Chief Constable's Association Trophy. Thirty-six teams competed for the title. The winning team was made up of Investigator E. O'Brien, Sudbury; Constables H. H. Gyves, Port McNicoll; J. H. B. MacDonald, Toronto; D. Prendergast, Sudbury; and W. E. Tringman, White River, Ont.

Addressing the Quebec branch, Canadian Manufacturers Association annual meeting in Montreal recently, Henri Rolland, retiring chairman, said Canada had the second largest per capita installation of water power in the world with its 513,000 h.p. per thousand of the population, being second only to Norway. Today $900,000,000 or $100 for every person is invested in hydro-power plants and there will shortly be another $200,000,000 added by numerous undertakings now in their initial stage.

Pine progress is being made in seedling in the Prairie Provinces according to reports to the agricultural department of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Winnipeg. Lost time due to backward weather is now made up, it is claimed, the soil being in excellent condition. Pastures are somewhat backward but stock are in good shape.

Under its policy of development and expansion the Canadian Pacific Railway has already this season let contracts for 236 miles of branch line construction in western Canada, according to D. C. Coleman, vice-president of western lines. It is expected that when contracts for the Laidlaw-Prince Albert branch are let that construction programme for 1929 will call for slightly more than 400 miles.

Hon. Marcelle Perreault, former Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec, returned from a six months trip to India and the East recently. His Honor was taken ill with bronchial pneumonia when in Bombay and for a time his condition was very serious. When he alighted from the Trans-Canada Limited at Montreal from Vancouver he was however looking well and stated that but for his illness had thoroughly enjoyed his holiday. It was his first visit to India and he was much impressed by the scenes witnessed there.

Each set of equipment of the Trans-Canada Limited and Mountair, and there are eighteen of them, is worth upwards of a million dollars this year, the new rolling stock having added considerably to the value as well as to the attraction of the famous flyer. The C. P. R. Angus Shops at Montreal were busy all winter building special sleeping, dining, and observation lounge cars for this special de luxe service between Montreal and Vancouver and Chicago and Vancouver.

The Indian of old could wield a wicked tomahawk, but to-day he can handle a mean brassie. The pale-face is threatened on the golf links by Indian golfers, and it is likely that at Banff, Alberta, the redskins will develop even greater prowess. Indian caddies, it has been decreed, are to be used on the eighteen hole golf course at this famous mountain resort, and the rising generation of Stoney Indian braves are likely to become ardent golf fans.

W. E. Wilford will assume the title of purchasing agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Toronto, according to an announcement recently given out by B. W. Roberts, general purchasing agent of the railway. Mr. Wilford will have most of the work in connection with the Royal York Hotel purchase. He joined the company as a clerk in the purchasing department in 1904.

Fourteen cases of orchids were carried from England to Japan recently under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific Express Company to the order of the Emperor of Japan, the Empress and members of the Imperial Court. They are sent out from England about three times a year and are highly prized by the Japanese Royal Family and Court.

A new wheat, known as R-48, may be the long awaited rust-resistant wheat. Canadian Government plant breeders have long been experimenting in an effort to develop a variety of wheat that will resist rust and at the same time be of high grade milling quality. Marquis, which is a rough, large, rather poor-yielding grain of the wheat family, which has seemed to be rust-resistant, has been crossed with Marquis wheat and the progeny again crossed with Marquis, resulting in a grain which is three-quarters Marquis stock. The plant breeders have carried on their experiments at the Manitoba Agricultural College and from as many as 35 strains developed, R-48 seems so far to be the most promising.

Car Load of Live Muskrats Take Long Trip

1—Freight car that carried the consignment. 2—Large cage on board S. S. Beaverford where the rats had more space and liberty. 3—Specimen of muskrat enjoying a carrot.

There were a thousand of them, all alive and hungry, shipped by Canadian Pacific Express Company from Oak Lake, Manitoba to Hamburg Germany, via Canadian Pacific freighter Beaverford. Fluffy and friendly they went through the long trip away from their native marshes in good shape and were never so tired that they couldn't put away their carrot rations. It took fifty men several weeks to capture the requisite number without damage and by the use of special traps.

Two attendants in charge of the rodents were kept moving twelve hours a day each feeding and watering them. They travelled overland in specially constructed galvanized iron crates netted with wire and with an enclosed trough in each from which fresh water was available. On board the Beaverford, large cages were built as shown above in which the rats had more space to move around.

This shipment which was made recently, constitutes a record for movement of muskrats or any other fur-bearing animal out of Canada overseas.

Parking By-law No. 112

By-law regulating traffic and parking in the Town of Lachute.

(A) The word "street" means all public roads situated in the Town of Lachute, and which are opened to the public, and which have been taken over by the Town;

1.—Every person driving a motor-vehicle, or a motor-cycle, or a vehicle drawn by horses on the public roads of the Town of Lachute must whenever possible keep to the side of the road at his right;

2.—At bifurcations and at crossings of public streets, the driver of a vehicle on one of the streets shall give the right of way to the driver of a vehicle coming to his right on the other street;

3.—Any person driving a motor-vehicle in the Town of Lachute, shall use the horn or sounding device of his vehicle only to give necessary signals, and in such a manner as not to produce any harsh prolonged noise; and between the hours of midnight and six o'clock in the morning, shall be used only in case of absolute necessity;

4.—No person driving within the limits of the Town of Lachute, shall be allowed to sing, yell, or make any unnecessary noise;

PARKING.

5.—No vehicle may be parked on Main Street between Millway Street and Mrs. Todd's store, more than fifteen minutes;

6.—On Bethany Street, between Main Street and Foundry Street, parking shall be allowed for 15 minutes only;

7.—No one shall be allowed to park at the intersections of streets nearer than twenty-five to thirty-five feet, according to location within the discretion of the Road Committee from the corner of the street; and at a distance not nearer than twenty feet on each side of any hydrant;

8.—The parking on Main Street, between Bethany Street and Barron Ave. shall be done by placing vehicles in the middle of the street, between the two drive ways, in the direction North-South;

9.—No parking is allowed in front of public buildings as Restaurants, Post-office, Town Hall, Fire-station, Theatres, etc.;

In front of schools and churches parking will be allowed for ninety minutes, and to the right;

Time limit for parking may be changed any time by resolution of the Council; Other parking to be within six inches of the sidewalk;

10.—Main Street, from Bethany Street and Barron Ave. shall be considered as one Street, and vehicles going East shall keep to the South road, and vehicles going to West shall keep to the North road;

11.—All automobiles and motor-vehicles, motor-cycles must dim their lights within the Town limits;

12.—No parking on Water Street;

13.—No repairs to cars shall be allowed on the streets of the Town of Lachute, except minor adjustments;

14.—Horses not allowed to trot crossing bridges;

15.—That signs in both languages be posted up in parking zones at convenient places, indicating the time allowed for parking on the streets; and that sidewalk be whitewashed on each side of any hydrant and also at intersections of streets at thirty-five feet from the corner, according to location, indicating that no parking is allowed in that space.

16.—All sections of former by-laws relating to the circulation and parking of vehicles within the limits of the Town of Lachute are by the present by-law repealed;

17.—Any one violating any of the provisions of the present by-law shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Forty Dollars ($40.00) and the costs of prosecution, and in default of payment of the fine and costs to an imprisonment not exceeding one month;

18.—The present by-law shall come into force fifteen days after its publication.

Règlement de Stationnement No. 112

Règlement réglementant la circulation et le stationnement des véhicules dans les rues de la ville de Lachute.

(A) Le mot "rue" désigne tous chemins publics situés dans les limites de la ville de Lachute, ouverts au public, et qui ont été acceptés par le Conseil municipal de la ville de Lachute;

1.—Toute personne conduisant un véhicule-moteur, une motocyclette, ou un véhicule à traction animale, ou un animal, dans les rues de la ville de Lachute, doit, autant que possible, tenir le côté du chemin à sa droite;

2.—Aux bifurcations et aux croisements de rues publiques la personne qui conduit un véhicule sur une des rues est tenue de céder le passage à la personne qui conduit un véhicule qui vient à sa droite, sur l'autre rue;

3.—Toute personne conduisant un véhicule-moteur dans la ville de Lachute se servira d'un appareil sonore ou d'un cor pour donner les signaux nécessaires seulement, et de manière à ne pas produire de sons stridents ou prolongés; de minuit à six heures du matin l'appareil sonore ne doit être mis en usage que dans le cas d'absolue nécessité;

4.—Il est défendu à toute personne qui conduit un véhicule-moteur dans les rues de la ville de Lachute de crier, chanter, ou de faire toute démonstration bruyante;

STATIONNEMENT.

5.—Sur la rue Principale, entre la rue Millway et le magasin de Madame Todd, il est défendu de stationner plus de quinze minutes;

6.—Sur la rue Bethanie, entre la rue Principale et la rue Foundry, il n'est permis à aucun véhicule de stationner plus de quinze minutes;

7.—Il est défendu de stationner à l'intersection des rues à une distance moindre de vingt-cinq à trente-cinq pieds, suivant l'endroit et à la discrétion du Comité des Chemins, du coin de la rue; et à une distance moindre de vingt pieds de chaque côté d'une borne-fontaine;

8.—Sur la rue Principale, entre la rue Bethanie et la rue Barron, les véhicules qui stationneront devront être placés dans le milieu de la rue, entre les deux chemins, dans la direction nord-sud;

9.—Il est défendu de stationner en face des édifices publics; restaurants, bureau de poste, hôtel de ville, station de feu, théâtre, etc.;

En face des écoles et des églises, il est permis de stationner quatre vingt-dix minutes à la droite du chemin;

Le Conseil municipal peut en tout temps, par résolution, changer et modifier le temps pendant lequel il sera permis de stationner sur les rues de la ville de Lachute;

Tout véhicule qui stationne sur une des rues de la ville de Lachute, autre que la rue Principale, devra être placé à six pouces du trottoir;

10.—La rue Principale, entre la rue Bethanie et la rue Barron, sera considérée comme une seule rue, et les véhicules en allant vers l'est prendront le côté sud de la rue, et les véhicules en allant vers l'ouest prendront le côté nord de la rue;

12.—Il est défendu de stationner sur la rue Water;

13.—Il est défendu de réparer les automobiles dans les rues de la ville de Lachute, excepté pour de courtes réparations;

14.—Il est défendu de laisser trotter les chevaux sur les ponts de la ville de Lachute;

15.—Des affiches dans les deux langues devront être placées dans les zones de stationnement, aux endroits appropriés, indiquant le temps pendant lequel il est permis de stationner sur ces rues; les trottoirs devront être blanchis ou peints chaque côté des bornes-fontaines, et aux intersections des rues sur une distance de 25 à 35 pieds selon l'endroit défendant de stationner à ces endroits;

16.—Tout règlement antérieur concernant la circulation et le stationnement des véhicules dans la ville de Lachute, est par le présent règlement abrogé.

17.—Toute personne enfreignant ou contrevenant aucune des dispositions du présent règlement sera passible d'une amende n'excédant pas quarante dollars ($40.00) et les frais de la poursuite, et à défaut du paiement de l'amende et des frais d'un emprisonnement n'excédant pas un mois dans la prison commune de ce district;

18.—Le présent règlement deviendra en force quinze jours après sa promulgation et publication.

SCOUT NEWS

The "Treasure Hunt" held on Tuesday evening was a huge success. It was a scene of fun from beginning to end. Each patrol followed directions and Scout signs and in this way the four patrols were spread over the mountain in quest of the "Treasure."

In the different patrols the following were treasure finders.
Wolf Patrol—Scout Gordon McFaul and Mildred Valpy.
Crow Patrol—Scout Stanley Langille and Ethel Stansfield.
Fox Patrol—Scout Claude Roby & Reta Gordon.
Bull-Dog Patrol—Scout Robert Miller and Betty Clunie.

The "Treasure" found, the patrol met together to cook bacon which was eaten between rolls, and soft drinks were also enjoyed. The eating over, a jolly time was spent around a camp-fire, and a most pleasant evening brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

The troop is very grateful to Mrs. George Leggett for planning the "Treasure Hunt" and for kindly donating the prizes which composed the treasure.

"Three hearty cheers for Mrs. Leggett!"

WHY TAKE CHANCES

How often have you put off planning your holidays till the last minute and then taken "Pot Luck", with disappointment, or at the most only half-enjoyment following.

Visitors here over Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Barnett and family also Mr. and Mrs. McCormack, of Pt. St. Charles.

DARING PARACHUTE JUMPER

We are pleased to note that at the recent Ottawa Flying Club's First Aerial Circus, Mr. R. G. Perry, son of Mr. Wm. Perry, Lachute's young old man, made a sensational parachute descent from a height of 2,500 feet. The jumper was carried well beyond the limits of the field before he allowed himself to be drawn off the wing of the plane by the unfurling parachute and as the big silk umbrella gently eased its burden to the extremity of the airdrome, cheers complimented the neatness of the landing.

Slight injuries to the daring jumper were caused when he was drawn by the wind into a barbed wire fence after alighting on the ground but this was not serious. He was brought back to the club house in one of the club's automobiles, the idol of thousands of cheering juveniles who vociferously applauded the first jump dared in this district for several years.

In all Mr. Perry has made 31 jumps and although the descent was his first in the last five years the manner in which he swayed to spill the air from the gigantic umbrella showed that in the passing of time his skill had not waned. Much of his parachute experience was gained in jumping at country fairs in eastern Quebec and Vermont.

AGRICULTURE IN CANADA

The early French explorers of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries looked upon Canada as a land of exceeding small importance from an agricultural point of view. A little later when British forces defeated the French at Quebec, Great Britain yIS, tan d and n Fan manyt hesitated whether to hold what her armies had won for her, or let it go back to France. It was at that time 1763, thought to be entirely unsuitable for colonization or agricultural development.

To-day, however, after many years of slow progress, Canada is recognized as a land full of riches. She is, in fact, known as one of the premier agricultural countries of the world. About forty years ago, Canada began to rank among the wheat-exporting nations of the world. For some time now, she has held the first place as an exporter of wheat. Since 1885 up to the present production in wheat has increased from about 43,000,000 bushels to over 500,000,00 bushels.

Her apple and other fruit crops are all that are to be desired, but it is on her live stock and live products that the future depends. Dairying is, of course, of paramount importance in the agricultural life of Canada. Milk, butter and cheese are very necessary items in our home markets and are finding slowly but gradually a good market abroad. Canadian bacon now competes very favourably in Great Britain with the bacon of Denmark. Poultry keeping is of importance in Canada. Poultry to the number of over 45,000,000 are kept in the Dominion.

Behind the Mask

By MURIEL COTRONI

It really had been a horrible accident and it left Esmeralda all scarred and broken, like a butterfly caught in a storm.

She had been driving home in her little two-seater through the painted dusk, her thoughts on Philip's early return. Then the jerk back to reality. The sudden dash of a heedless child across the seemingly deserted lane. A shrill shriek of terror. Esmeralda's wrench at the wheel that had sent the car headlong against an aged oak; darkness black as the pit—oblivion!

She was in bed when next the world claimed her, her little head swathed in bandages. Her left arm was in a sling, and only one dark eye peeped out from beneath the lint.

Her mother and Dr. Burke were there when Esmeralda first opened her eye and looked shakily round. Dr. Burke, old Dr. Guest's new partner, was practically a stranger. He had the bluest eyes Esmeralda had ever seen. His hair, in contrast, was a brilliant red, and a fine peppering of golden freckles adorned his features. Esmeralda had never actually met him before but had heard rumours of his skill and curtness of manner.

Esmeralda tried to smile cheerily, but all she could manage was just an odd little wink from the one eye in action. She couldn't speak, owing to those tight folds of bandages round her jaw. The doctor smiled down at her from the foot of the bed. Esmeralda warmed to that smile. She found it oddly comforting.

"We'll soon have you up again, Miss Rayne; so don't you worry. Sorry we had to sacrifice your hair," he went on; "but it just couldn't be avoided."

Esmeralda tried to reply but she couldn't. Then she tried to smile her thanks, but that also was a failure. The wink was all that she had left, but—well, one couldn't very well wink at one's doctor. It isn't done!

"I'll be in again this evening, Mrs. Rayne. Good-bye! Keep cheerful, little lady! We'll patch you up, don't you worry."

When her mother returned she sat down on the edge of the bed.

"We wired Philip last night, darling and he'll be here this afternoon."

Esmeralda's heart gave a throb. Philip! How utterly she adored him, and he would soon be here to comfort her and make her realize that all the accidents in the world, all the horrid disfigurements, could not lessen their love.

Philip had been and Philip had gone. Philip Mason, the rising sculptor, lover of all things beautiful.

Esmeralda lay very still after his departure. He had been so solicitous enough, but he had not adequately concealed the look in his eyes when first they fell on all the accident had left of Esmeralda. She had caught that look—that first glance mingled with horror and something else—and a rough hand seemed to close round her heart.

Then he was so polite, as though they were mere strangers, and had not been engaged for three golden months. Esmeralda had somehow expected that he would go down on his knees by the bed and murmur warm, comforting little love-words that would have flown straight to her weary heart like dried birds homing. But he didn't! He sat so primly on his chair, and looked at her in a perplexed, frightened way, as though this was not the Esmeralda he so terribly loved, but a changeling.

When her mother came in to say that his time was up he just bent down and brushed his moustache against her bandages and mumbled something. Then the door closed and he was gone.

Esmeralda's mind went back to the afternoon that Mrs. Black's terrier had been run over, and the car responsible had raced on. Esmeralda, returning from a walk with Philip, had hurried over to the dog and taken it in her arms. But Philip had held back. Then, when she came back to him, after the dog was dead, he had almost thrust her away.

"Esme, your dress is all over blood!" he had said, shuddering. "Come along home and change it. I hate accidents and the sight of blood and ugliness!"

The incident returned to Esmeralda now. Her lover's words, full of horror, that look on his face, hit at her with cruel force: "I hate ugliness!"

Esmeralda slept but little that night. In the morning she signalled that she wanted to say something, and scrawled in shaky characters on a pad her mother held for her: "Write and give Philip his freedom."

Of course, Mrs. Rayne refused and tried to soothe her; but the girl was apparently so troubled that she finally did as she was told, and the letter breaking off the engagement was dispatched. After that, Esmeralda seemed satisfied, though perhaps she hoped vaguely that Philip would come, sweep her into his arms and tell her the note was all nonsense and all that he wanted was his Esme.

But Philip did not come. The day lengthened into days and the days into almost two weeks, yet there was no sign from Philip.

Esmeralda could speak now, but she grew no better. She appeared rather to become weaker, as though the wish to recover was not there.

One late afternoon Dr. Burke tackled her with it—not tactfully, in approved bedside manner but in his own brusque, almost rude way.

"Look here, Esmeralda Rayne, I'm about tired of you! Here am I putting every ounce of my medical skill into turning you out whole and you're such a poor sport that you won't raise a finger to help."

Esmeralda, jolted out of herself, looked across at him and met his eyes—angry eyes of the bluest blue she'd ever seen. But she did not speak.

"Why don't you say straight out that you don't want to get well?"

"All right, then; if you ask for it—I don't!"

For a moment Brian Burke was silent; and then, like well-aimed stones: "You little quitter!"

"How dare you!" gasped Esmeralda. "Oh I dare all right! What's more I mean what I say! Esmeralda Rayne, you are a quitter, and you know it. But what you don't seem to realize, or are too selfish to realize, is that your poor mother's fretting herself to death! It's killing her by inches because she's tumbled to it that you don't want to get well!"

"There's so—so little left!" murmured Esmeralda.

"Did your beauty mean so much to you?" The doctor spoke curtly. "I did my best to save it, and I don't think I've done so badly."

"No," she responded warmly. "You're been a brick, but—" She broke off. Then: "You know, I was engaged before—before—"

"Yes, I know. I also know that, when you thought you were disgraced for life, you were sporting enough to offer your fiancé his freedom, and—and he took it."

There was a metal ring in Brian Burke's voice.

"Philip is such a lover of beautiful things," murmured Esmeralda, as though in excuse. "He hates accidents and ugliness. Some men do, you know."

"Do you still love him, Esmeralda?"

This time the doctor's eyes did not meet Esmeralda's.

"I—I don't know!"

"But you do love your mother?"

"I adore her!"

"Then, my dear, put yourself into the background. Cut out this quitter stunt of yours and make an honest effort to get well. Is it a bargain?"

He held out his hand.

"It's a bargain!" whispered Esmeralda, shakily, putting her small, white hand into his big, brown one.

Esmeralda was true to her word. She threw her frail weight on the right side and, slowly but surely, her health began to improve. She was sitting in the cosy lounge one afternoon, a fat, yellow cushion behind her back.

The door opened to admit the doctor. He carried a nosegay of violets.

"Yes, they're for you, Esmeralda, as a reward for being a good girl."

She buried her nose in their cool fragrance.

"Mr. Mason!" announced the maid.

And Philip Mason entered the room.

He walked straight over to where Esmeralda sat. Ignoring the other man, he bent over her chair.

"Philip, have you met Dr. Burke?"

Philip Mason looked up and nodded to the doctor, who was standing at the window.

"How well you're getting on, Esme! I hardly expected to find you so—"

He paused.

Esmeralda looked squarely at him from out of her elfin dark eyes.

"Yes," prompted Esmeralda, her eyes still on Philip, "so what?"

"Esmeralda, may I see you alone for a minute?" said Philip, evading the question.

"You can say what you have to before Dr. Burke. He's quite one of the family now," said Esmeralda.

"I'm just going, Miss Rayne," cut in Brian Burke; "so if Mr. Mason—"

"I ask you to stay, please!" murmured Esmeralda.

"All right, Esme!" said Philip, drawing from his pocket the ring that she had once treasured. "I've come to ask you if you'll—he coloured—" "If you'll take this back? I think I must have been mad to let you go!"

A glancing sunbeam stole through the window. Esmeralda turned, so that the light should fall full on the cruel scar that lay, only half-healed, from ear to chin.

"You still want to marry me in spite of this, Philip, and—glancing down at the sling that supported the injured arm—"this?"

Philip bit his lip, then threw back his head.

"In spite of everything, Esme!" he said.

"Thank you for saying that!" Esmeralda's voice was very soft—"but you've come back too late! You see, I don't love you now, Philip!"

Philip stared, incredulous, and it was then that Brian Burke took a quick step forward. He stood behind Esmeralda's chair, laying a hand on her shoulder.

"Yes, you've come back too late, Mason! Esmeralda's going to marry me! I've loved her for weeks and I've never let her guess it, because I thought you still held her heart, even though—his words rang out—"you did clear out just when she needed you most!"

"I never realized—" began the other.

"No," went on that curt young voice, and the blue eyes gleamed. "You never realized; so, when she lay crushed and broken, with hardly anything left but her fine spirit, you left her to fight on alone!"

"But—"

"All these weeks she's struggled on and on, fighting to get well, not for her own sake but for the sake of those who loved her, knowing that when she faced the world again it would be with a marred face. Do you think

Canadian Air Mail Plane Establishes World's Record

Canada, in proportion to her size, is making greater practical use of aircraft than any other country and the "work" records of Canadian airplanes are regarded as even more important contributions to the advancement of aviation than the endurance and other stunt achievements of other countries.

Canada's latest and most impressive practical record in air is in speedy delivery of air mail and Capt. D. S. Bondurant, pilot for Canadian Airways, as a result of a record flight between Toronto and Montreal, now holds the world's air mail speed record.

Capt. Bondurant, flying a Fairchild "71," powered by a Pratt & Whitney Wasp engine, on March 21st, covered the 340 miles from Toronto to Montreal in just one hour and forty-four minutes, and this has now been established as the world's fastest air mail flight.

Remarkable as this time is, Capt. Bondurant would have bettered it, but for fog encountered a little over 100 miles from Montreal. Up to this point he had flown 215 miles in just 60 minutes, maintaining a speed of over 3½ miles a minute.

Throughout the record-breaking flight Capt. Bondurant reported perfect performance from his plane which was fueled with Imperial Aeroplane Spirits and lubricated with Marvelube Motor Oil.

she cared whether she got well or not, man, after you'd nearly added a broken heart to a broken body?"

It was then that Esmeralda's little hand closed tightly round Brian's brown one, just as a little child's might.

"Yes, Philip," she said in her soft, husky voice, "what Dr. Burke says is true! I'm going to marry him just as soon as ever I'm better!"

The door closed softly and Philip was gone. Then Brian Burke raised the little hand gently to his lips.

Emigration

Nottingham Guardian: Emigration will have to be deliberately re-popularized. Much could be done by an intensive effort in the schools to bring home to boys and girls the advantages and opportunities of life in the Dominions. Parents could also, by the right publicity, be shown that there are more, and often better, openings for their children in the Empire lands than can be found at home. The idea of emigration will have to be popularized by appropriate publicity, and by presenting its merits in simplified and attractive and easily available form. The whole country, in fact, will have to interest itself in the question. Governments can do much, but the real mainspring of effort must come from the people as a whole.

How the Zoo Animals Deceive the Public

By P. B. PRIOR

If the keepers of the large Zoo at Taronga Park, Sydney, New South Wales—or any other Zoo, come to that—kept a record, in diary form, of all the zoon incidents that are reported to them at frequent intervals by visitors, it would provide interesting reading, not without its humorous aspect.

The nature and frequency of these reports is an indication that most people take more than a passing interest in the Zoo in general and its works, and that they are as anxious for the welfare of the big menagerie as are the keepers.

Usually reports to the keepers concern some seemingly untoward incident which, upon investigation, turns out to be a false alarm.

The latest report of this kind at the above Zoo concerned the seals. One hot day recently two members of the seal family figured in what appeared to be a serious squabble.

They swam rapidly round the pool, dived after each other, and often got into bolts. After one deep dive, during which they were under water longer than usual, they rose to the surface and lay motionless with flippers close to their sides, tails turned up, and necks stretched out.

It looked suspiciously like a double drowning affair, so one spectator hurried away and informed a keeper. He came quickly and when he saw the "dead" seals he smiled in a superior way.

"There's nothing wrong," he said. "The seals are only floating. Haven't you seen them do that before?" The spectator hadn't, nor have few other people, for the seals do not often float. When they want to rest they bask in the sun on the rock formation at the edge of the pond.

But there have been stranger reports than the seals' "drowning affair." One was that the beautiful blue bird of paradise had hanged himself by the legs, and was making his last kick. A kindly keeper explained however, that this was the bird's way of showing off his gorgeous plumage.

Another strange report was that the wood stork, which has the habit of puffing up his neck to a remarkable size, had burst his crop. This, of course, was erroneous, for the stork was only displaying his vanity.

On one occasion, however, there was a genuine cause for alarm when a visitor to the Zoo reported that Casey, the chimpanzee, had pulled a little Japanese monkey through the bars of the adjoining cage and was dancing round with it crushed to his hairy breast.

Several keepers made haste to the rescue, but they were too late. Casey had murdered his victim. He had broken every bone in its body by dashing it repeatedly on the floor of his cage.

But Casey will never commit another murder, for nowadays there is no living thing within his reach. Like Napoleon, he is an exile, being situated on his own away from all he is likely to harm.

Swimmin' Don'ts

A promise of warm weather and bright sunshine will soon bring throngs to the bathing places of lakes and rivers. The drowning of an imprudent swimmer is an only too familiar occurrence at any of the resorts throughout the summer.

With the object of preventing as many as possible of these tragic accidents of holiday time we cite a few sane "don'ts" for those who go in bathing.

Swimming is one of the most healthful of sports, but certain necessary rules should be observed.

Don't swim right after eating; wait about two hours.

Don't swim while overheated; wait until you have cooled off. Failure to observe this rule frequently causes cramps.

Don't swim until you are completely exhausted; stop before you get that tired feeling.

If you are going to dive into the water, make sure that the water is deep enough; many a perfectly good head has been completely ruined by suddenly crashing against the rocky bottom of a lake or the concrete of a swimming pool.

Should you be caught in a swift under current, don't thrash your legs and arms wildly; let the force of the current bring you to the surface. Keep your head.

Always have your arms in a position to take a quick stroke if you are wading into a strange pool. You may step into a hole and need that one quick stroke.

Don't go into a swimming pool if you are not well. Communicable diseases are easily spread to others through the water.

Favors Canada for Dutch Immigrants

John de Kuyper of Famous Holland Firm Visiting City

NOTES DEVELOPMENT

Admires Canadian Olympic Champions He Met in Holland

There is no country in the world more suitable to Dutch immigration than Canada, in the opinion of John de Kuyper, member of the John de Kuyper & Sons, Rotterdam and Schiedam, Holland. Mr. de Kuyper is on a business trip in Canada and he said that the climate and living conditions of this country closely resembled those of Holland, particularly in the farming sections.

"The more I see of Canada, and particularly of the City of Montreal," said Mr. de Kuyper, "the more I like them. From year to year it is a pleasure to see your country develop its natural resources and expanding its system of highways. The reasons why I should like to see my countrymen emigrate to Canada are based on the experience of those who are already here and are doing very well indeed."

"Last year, I had the pleasure of being a leading member of the committee of reception, which welcomed the Canadian athletes at the Olympic games at Amsterdam, and I am happy to give expression once more to my admiration for these valiant champions of Canadian sports, and particularly of Percy Williams, the winner of the 100 and 200 metres marathons; of Miss Ethel Catherwood, the winner of the running high jump contests for ladies; Miss Myrtle Cook, the lady sprinter, and last, but not the least, of the splendid hockey team which won the Olympic championship at St. Moritz, without a goal being scored against them."

Foresees Boom

Coming back to his impressions of Canada, Mr. de Kuyper said that he felt that the Dominion was on the eve of a tremendous era of progress and prosperity, the various industries, with one or two exceptions, developing their capacity for production and their markets in a wonderful manner. "And if you will allow me to express a personal opinion, let me say that it would be against Canadian interests to adopt the St. Lawrence Waterways plan because it would spell the ruin of your own harbors, to the benefit of the American ports."

Mr. de Kuyper expressed his satisfaction with the business connections his firm has in Canada.

Speaking of the conditions in Holland, Mr. de Kuyper said they were very satisfactory, much more so than they have been for many years. There is little unemployment in Holland just now, the industries and agriculture giving work to all. Our foreign trade is developing rapidly, Canada being one of our best customers for some of our products.

"Politically, everything is quiet, though we had a little flurry with Belgium about the military alliance she was supposed to have concluded with France against Germany, but the situation has been cleared by the frank explanations given by the Belgian Government."

Warn Motorists Making Repairs

Many Accidents May Be Avoided by Pulling to Roadside

This season of heavy traffic on highways brings with it the need for repeating a warning against a practice that causes many avoidable accidents, in the opinion of T. C. Kirby, general manager of the Montreal Motorists League. The condition is that created by the motorist's failure to pull entirely off the road when changing a tire or making a similar small adjustment or repair to the car.

"Of course, it is impossible to station motorcycle policemen in positions to enforce this on every mile of the extensive highway system. It is a regulation, however, that should need no police enforcement. Based upon a sound principle of safety, the individual car owner should be willing to abide by it under every condition," he says.

"Furthermore, it becomes more and more imperative that the car owner who needs to make a roadside repair take the precaution to move his car from the path of the fast moving traffic. The motorist has been demanding higher speed limits because he knows they are safe, but he defeats their undeniable safety by such practices as this."

"The Montreal Motorists League and others of the 1,065 affiliated with the American Automobile Association have records of many accidents that are to be attributed directly to the ignorance of car owners in this respect."

This warning is just as much needed in Ontario as in Quebec and we take the opportunity of passing it on.

Is your daughter enjoying life?

IT is just in her "teen age" that a girl should be getting the most fun out of life!—Yet so often it happens that girls of sixteen-to-twenty have outgrown their strength—are quickly tired, pale, nervous, generally run-down and unhappy!

These are sure signs of anaemia, a condition that results from thin, worn-out, under-nourished blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have corrected this in thousands of girls. Here is the actual experience of Mrs. Ben Nicholas of Erieau, Ont. "My daughter was in a run-down state. She was easily tired and did not wish to associate with others. As this was unnatural, I began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they soon made a strong healthy girl of her. Now she is as happy a girl as one would wish to see."

Start your daughter on this proven treatment now by buying Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your druggist's or any dealer in medicine or by mail, 50 cents, postpaid, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Rhodes Memorial Opened at Oxford

Designed in Honor of the Founder of University Fund

Oxford, Eng.—The Rhodes House, designed as a memorial to Cecil John Rhodes, founder of the Rhodes scholarships, was opened recently by Sir Otto Beit, a trustee of the Rhodes fund, in the presence of 300 invited guests and Oxford University authorities.

At the same time Sir Otto formally presented the library to the university as a branch of Rhodellian Library. Viscount Grey, chancellor of the university, accepted the gift in a brief speech.

To building is an imposing structure on South Parks Road, close to Keble College, the University Museum and the School of Forestry. It will not only furnish living quarters for F. A. Wylie, Oxford secretary to the Rhodes trust, but will also serve as a centre for the activities centring around the trust and the Rhodes scholarships, which celebrate their twenty-fifth anniversary this summer.

In the small dome in the roof are symbols representing the dominions which compose the British empire. Upon the walls will be carved the names of Rhodes scholars who have deserved well of their country, whether that country be a Dominion of the British empire, Germany or the United States. Rhodes, the Empire builder, desired above all that those who benefitted by his scholarships should devote themselves to public service.

At the entrance of the building, the names and countries of all Rhodes scholars who lost their lives in the World War have been carved.

Science and Health

"The old cry used to be: 'The greatest happiness of the greatest number,' to-day the cry has been changed to the greatest health of the greatest number; take care of the health and the happiness will take care of itself," writes Professor D. Fraser Harris in the Clarion.

"The young people should not be brought up to believe that science does not concern itself with the practical details of our personal daily lives. She teaches us a great deal about ourselves, our food, our clothes, our sleep and so forth. The science of personal hygiene is intensely practical. It tells us, for instance, why we must use hot water and soap to wash our skins, why even hot water alone is not enough.

"A scientific training is one of the most powerful character-builders there is. For science is not antagonistic to the cultivation of artistic taste or to the highest conceptions of ethics. The notion that 'science' and 'materialism' are synonymous is quite out of date.

"Science teaches us reverence and humility—reverence for the beauty in the Universe and humility in presence of its mystery. For although we know so much about the Universe there is plenty of mystery in it—the mystery, for instance, of the origin and maintenance of life and the beauty of numberless living mechanisms so perfectly adapted for their purposes or functions.

"Science—reverent science—fosters a love of beauty. Keats said that Newton, by explaining the colors of the rainbow, had destroyed its beauty. But Keats was very young when he said that. For the adequately instructed mind, the man of science had added to the sensuous beauty of the rainbow the intellectual beauty of a mathematical demonstration. The scent of the lily would be no less delightful to me if some day I should come to know the chemical formula for the substance of the perfume.

"Science teaches us that, as in Peter's vision, there is 'nothing common or unclean.' Science teaches us that the disease-bringing microbes and the stinking, slimy fungus, the parasitic worms and the 'devil-fish' must be studied with as much impartiality and detachment as the lily, the rose, the bird of paradise or the human body."

Children and the Movies

Le Monde Ouvrier (Ind.): The law prohibiting children under sixteen to attend the movies, whether they are accompanied or not, is a ridiculous law, as it is broken thousands of times every day in the year, for want of being able to apply it. How are you going to expect a ticket-seller at the door of a picture-house, especially when there is a crowd, to notice whether a young girl is under sixteen or not? If he stops her he holds up the entrance of others and hurts his employer's business and even then—the young lady have her birth certificate in her pocket? What is he to do? Let her in or stop her? What-ever he does, his livelihood—generally a very poor one at that—will be at stake. What would you do?

BABY'S OWN TABLETS WIN GREAT PRAISE

Many Mothers Always Keep Them in the House.

Thousands of mothers state that they know of no other medicine for little ones to equal Baby's Own Tablets—that they always keep the Tablets in the home as a preventive of childhood ailments, or if sickness does suddenly grip their little ones they feel safe with such a remedy at hand.

Concerning the use of the Tablets Mrs. Danot Plouffe, Tingwick, Que., writes:—"I have nothing but praise for Baby's Own Tablets. They are the only medicine I have ever given my two little ones, and I am glad to state that the Tablets have always kept them in perfect health. I feel so safe with the Tablets that I always keep a box in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth painless. The Tablets are absolutely safe, being guaranteed free from all injurious drugs. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25s a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Government Ships

La Patrie (Cons.): (Sir Henry Thornton, being asked what would happen if the Canadian Government Merchant Marine belonged to a private company, said: "It would immediately be put into liquidation.") Hon. H. H. Stevens has made the suggestion that some of the C. G. M. S. ships should be allotted the task of trying out the navigation conditions of Hudson Strait. If they succeed in bringing out some cargoes from Churchill, it will encourage other ships to go on this presumably dangerous route; if they perish, the destruction of the cargo will be a lot, but that of the ship will in reality be a gain. However, Mr. Dunning has no desire for such an experiment. He wants to give the Hudson Bay route a real chance of proving its utility. He is even entertaining the notion of having special ships built for the route, which makes us quail at the prospect of still more unprofitable expenditure, in keeping with this whole enterprise of the Hudson Bay route.

The Mexican Revolution

Ottawa Droit (Ind.): President Portes Gil, in a public address, has said that he does not believe that the Catholic Church, as an institution, is responsible for the recent military revolution. He denounced certain Catholics, who, according to his statement, have committed reprehensible actions in certain States. But he praised the conduct of other Catholics who kept apart from the revolution. This is a praiseworthy appreciation. Portes Gil admits that the Catholic Church did not provoke the present revolution. If some of its members took part in it, even for religious motives, that would be no reason to throw the responsibility on the official authority of the Catholic Church. The position of the official authority in the present conflict has been one of absolute neutrality.

Leaven

A noted geologist is quoted as saying that "had a man been living during the changes that produced the coal he would not have suspected their progress," so slow was the mighty process. Neither do we suspect the progress of many a social movement in the world about us which in the centuries to come will be seen to have been of the utmost importance. The leaven of the kingdom works slowly and silently, but it works.

The civilized world today is run on the basis of a belief in promises.—Dwight W. Morrow.

HOW BABY SPECIALISTS TREAT CONSTIPATION

Constipation in babies and children is the cause of colic, bloating, skin disorders, etc. It weakens them, just as it does grown folks; makes them cross, feverish and fretful. But don't use grown folks' medicine with them, baby specialists advise. Ninety per cent. of them recommend just one preparation for constipation, colds and other ills of babies and children. They say Fletcher's Castoria. Millions of mothers have proved its merit during thirty years of use. Castoria is purely-vegetable, harmless and pleasant-tasting. Genuine Castoria always bears the Fletcher signature. Avoid imitations.

Those Languid Eyes

They quickly reflect your health and physical condition—restless eyes indicate the temperament of the stomach. Watch the eyes . . . see that the whites are clear with a healthy bluish tinge. The minute a yellow tinge appears it betrays constipation, sluggish liver or biliousness, you need a laxative. Bring back your

ANNOUNCING

ROYAL CORD

A tire built to stand the strains of 1929 motoring—sudden braking, quick pick-up, higher speeds.

Its super-strong carcass combines new engineering principles, new construction.

Side-walls are strongly buttressed to resist rut and curb wear.

Tread is thicker, with deep-cut blocks to give greater non-skid mileage.

The New Royal Cord is the tire you must have to get the best from your car.

again renewing old acquaintances.
It is 20 years since "Harry" left town and during that time he has only made one trip back which was seven years ago. His family have rented a summer cottage of Mr. Geo. Staniforth and expect to spend the summer in the haunts of their old home.

At the close of the last choir practice of the season of the Lachute United Church, the members were served with supper by the ladies.
Following this a very pleasant ceremony took place when Miss Margaret Jones was presented with a silver plated baker; Miss Pauline Fraser with a pair of Indian brass vases and Miss Gwen MacKinnon with an amethyst pendant and ring. These were presented by Miss Drew on behalf of the choir as a token of appreciation of the great services rendered to the choir by these members who are leaving the district shortly.
Dr. MacLeod replied in humorous vein for the ladies and Rev. Mr. Mac-Kinnon thanked the choir members for the help given him in the past.

A very happy evening party was held on Friday last at the home of Mrs. Robert Miller, when Grade VIII presented their teacher, Miss Fraser (whose marriage takes place this summer) with a dainty green and white china tea set and table cloth to match. Miss Fraser who was completely taken by surprise expressed her thanks in her usual gracious manner, also a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Miller for the bountiful supper she had provided.

Lachute Extends a Real Welcome

Lachute is en fête this week in accordance with a right hearty welcome, to those who have come to share with us the pleasures of our Annual Fair which is now widely known and ever growing in popularity. To some of course it is an occasion of their first visit, while to others it is a renewal of friendships.

The Fair Grounds have undergone quite a transformation and the public will see that we have stepped ahead and may now be put in our rightful position of Class A. We are satisfied that nowhere in Canada can any exhibition boast of more beautiful surroundings, or a better lay out of buildings and general accommodation. And the reason of it is that our President, Mr. J. T. Ayers has taken a wonderful interest in the Society, not only in a financial way, but to the extent of personally planning, outlining, and supervising all the improvements. This has required much careful thought. Nothing has been done hap-hazard and for the past four weeks Mr. Ayers has devoted himself to the work in hand, and the thoroughness of its execution is only a reflex of the personality behind the "Quality" mark that figures in the product of the Ayers Limited which is largely responsible for the extensive growth and development of that enterprising firm. Mr.
Ayers' slogan is "If a thing is worth doing at all, it is worth doing 'Right' and those who visit with us may readily see the fulfilment of this principle.

All that is humanly possible to make this year's Fair surpass previous efforts has already been done and we trust the weather will remain favorable so that everyone may enjoy to the full the pleasures provided.

The building has all been remodeled and sheeted inside, and the enlargement has afforded more space for the exhibitors to display their varied products. The two exhibits of the Ayers Limited and the Dominion Explosives are most interesting and instructive. There are many of our county's residents who do not quite realize the importance of our industrial life, and the exhibits bring forcibly home the activities with which we are surrounded.

The magnificent display of woolen goods, made by the Ayers Limited, with the manifold designs and patterns, gorgeous shades and furnishings of the blankets, comfortables, etc., carries a feeling of justifiable pride that Lachute houses an institution capable of turning out such products.

The Dominion Explosives exhibit is one also of considerable interest.
Many were unaware that such a variety of shells were in use until seeing the vast array decked out on the tables, the strength and power of which were demonstrated by piercing through 1/2 in. steel plates etc. Then a very nice display of toilet requisites comprising brushes, combs and celluloid goods proved specially attractive to the ladies. The Giteau Power and J. W. Cottingham Limited occupied the Northern section in which they demonstrated and displayed home comforts and construction.
Downstairs was devoted to Western Flour Mills, Lowe's popular paints, Orme's Limited, of Ottawa, with their large exhibits of Pianos, Orthophones and Radios; Gillett Baking Powder; Argenteuil Motor Sales and the live display of Alderman H. M. Lavigne, who demonstrated that it was unnecessary for anyone to send away for goods, because Henry's store was abundantly able to take care of any custom, be their wants large or small.

Although the stabling has been almost doubled, new additions have had to be made to accommodate the large entries and the secretary reports upwards of 90 horses for the racing events in which figure the well-known horses of J. W. Nesbitt of the Chestnut Stables, W. Minogue, Mount Royal Stables.

We purpose publishing as usual the completed prize list in our next issue.

Paris.—The first refugees to arrive in Paris from Kabul, where civil war has been raging for the last two months and where kings have been rising and disappearing, was Mme. J. C. Ott, a Frenchwoman, who since last spring has lived in close touch with King Amanullah, Queen Souriya and their family.

When the Afghan monarchs were in Berlin—during their trip to Europe—Mme. Ott was asked by Queen Souriya to take charge of her nine-year-old daughter, Sultanja, and to teach her French and English and European manners. Mme. Ott became a member of the Queen's household. She traveled with her through Soviet Russia, Turkey, Persia and the wilderness of Arghandab.

From June to December 31—when she left Kabul as a refugee, on a German Junker plane—she lived in the King's palace, with little Princess Sultanja, meeting the King and Queen many times a day. Amanullah practiced his little knowledge of French talking to Mme. Ott. When the revolt broke out she was surrounded by the rebels in the palace, together with the royal family, and slept in Queen Souriya's room during the eight days of the siege.

King Welcomed by Throngs

"When we first arrived at the Afghan frontier, coming from Persia, I was astonished to see how extremely popular King Amanullah was among his subjects. All the way from the frontier to Kabul we were met with enthusiasm by crowds of simple people, shepherds and peasants. We proceeded in a caravan of fifty motor cars, and behind us came an enormous queue of lorries filled with the luggage—all the gifts the King was bringing from the various European countries and all the purchases made by him and the Queen in Europe. A special road had to be made through the Afghan hills for our journey, and the people themselves built it for their sovereign.

Table Implements Introduced

From the day we arrived the Queen became busy transforming the former harem into a regular Western palace, with fine reception rooms. A big table was put in the middle of the dining room and chairs replaced the carpets, for the King would no more eat in the Eastern fashion. All his relatives and guests were told to use forks and knives during the meals whereas before they always ate with their fingers.

"Twice a day, for lunch and for dinner, we all assembled in this dining room. King Amanullah took the head of the table, Queen Souriya sitting on his right. There were as a rule about forty people sharing the King's meal—his children, his numerous half-brothers and half-sisters, the Queen's sisters and relatives, the widows of the King's father, who had remained in the palace after their husband was murdered.

"At first it seemed very difficult for the elderly women to get accustomed to Western ways, to eat properly, to sit unveiled among men. But little by little they became modernized and seemed to like the new fashion.

Queen Wore Western Dress

"In the afternoon the Queen received guests from the diplomatic corps. At these receptions she wore some of the Western frocks she had brought from Europe. She was very fond of dressing in European clothes and passed all her mornings trying on new outfits and having them changed for her by the Rumanian dressmaker. In the evening Queen Souriya wore delicate gowns, and although none but the family's relatives saw her in these clothes, the rumor about the scantiness of her attire soon spread in Kabul and was amplified by the mullahs who saw their prestige diminished by the King's reforms. Some of Amanullah's enemies received from Europe photographs of the Queen in evening dresses and these pictures were reprinted and sent to chiefs of tribes.

"In July he Queen shingled her beautiful hair. She did not want to do it, but Amanullah had insisted on it ever since they came back from Europe.

Princess in New School

"However, everything remained quiet until the beginning of September, when we went over to Kabul, for my little pupil, Princess Sultanja, was to enter the French school. It was a new mixed school, where girls were to be educated together with boys. King Amanullah ordered all his ministers to send their children to it so that Sultanja should have distinguished company. But there were also sons and daughters of quite simple families.

"All the trouble began when King Amanullah decided that the time had arrived for his country to be Europeanized. On September 15 he went, with his Queen, to a public gathering and there, in front of thousands of people, he took the veil of the Queen's face and made a long speech. He decreed that, like Souriya, all women were to go about unveiled and wear Western clothes, instead of the long trousers and shirt of the national costume. The felt hat and the Western suit were to become obligatory for men.

"The sight of the unveiled Queen made a profound impression upon the King's audience. But in the palace we did not realize what the consequences would be. We continued to live as before, the King being very busy with his reforms. He went out a lot in the car and received ministers and foreign representatives. We often saw the Soviet minister, Stark, drive up to the palace and stay quite a long time in the King's study.

Queen Helped Poor

"The Queen's time was taken up by receptions, by dressmakers and calligraphy. She was extremely kind to anybody who was in need of her help. Frequently poor men or women came to the palace and asked to be received by the Queen. She had them come immediately to her reception room and, whenever it was possible, she helped them.

"However, the King's order to wear Western clothes had caused much discontent in Kabul. Western clothes were expensive and it was often difficult to get them. The Afghans were used to their turbans and baggy trousers. But the King's orders were strict. At first he decreed that men and women clad in the old way would not be allowed to walk in the main street of Kabul or pass through the town park. Guards stood along the main street driving away 'old-fashioned' people. This made the population very angry.

"Soon we noticed that the King was becoming nervous. He spoke of the Shiwar tribe that was revolting against him. But he did not want to take drastic measures against them. 'They are Moslems,' he said, 'and we must spare them.' At the beginning of the rebellion Bachi Sakao, who later crowned himself as King Habibullah, was made prisoner by Amanullah's troops, but Amanullah let him go, as he gave his word never to fight against his King any more.

Palace Under Attack

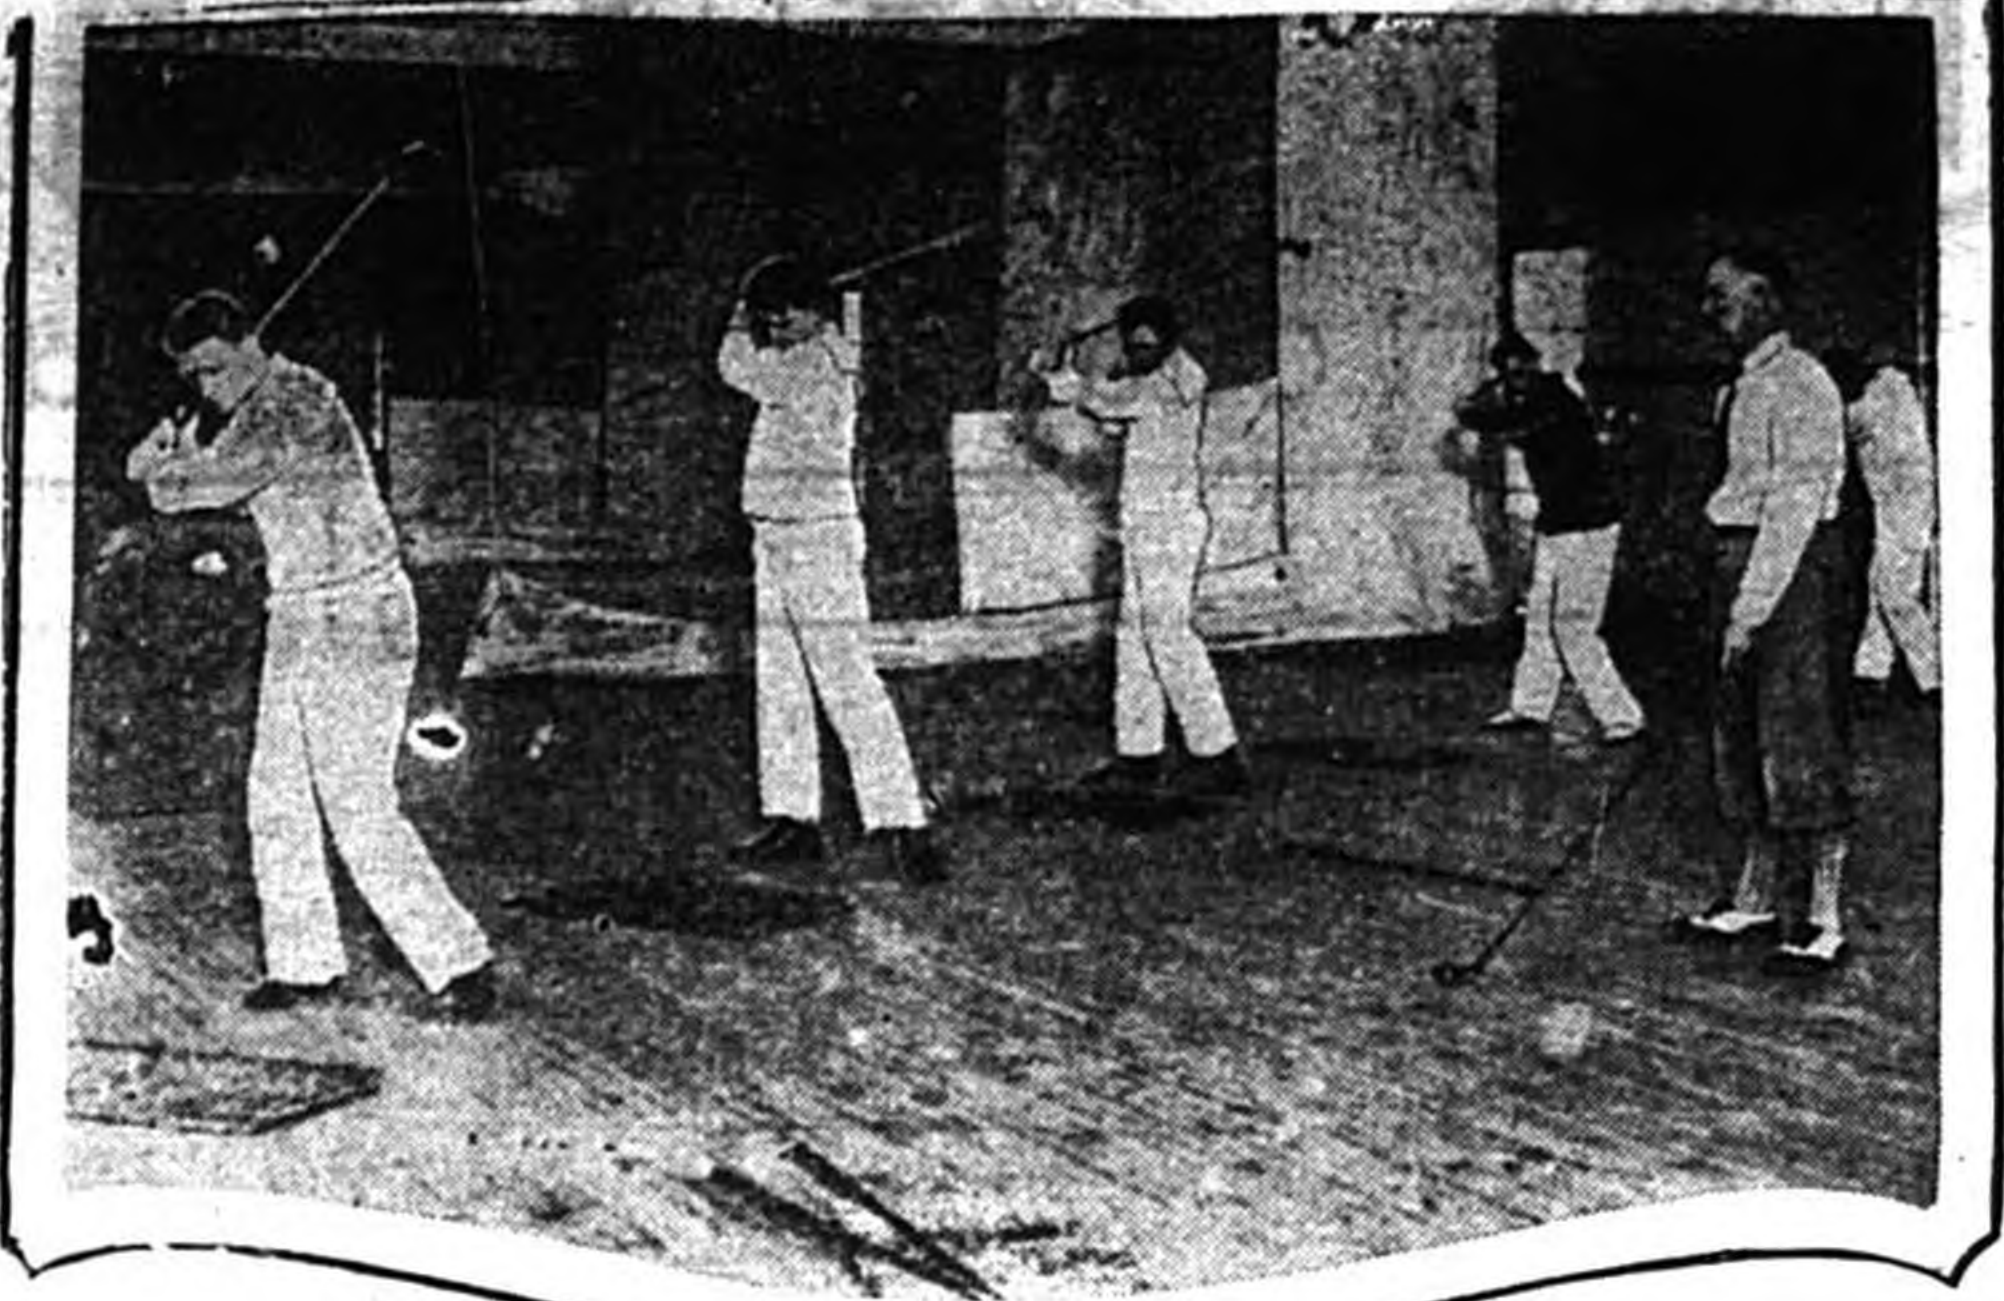

"At the beginning of December we all were in the palace—all except the King, who had gone out for a drive—when the servants began to run around the rooms shouting that we were surrounded by the enemy. The rebels had entered the town and raised against the King the lower population of Kabul. The scene outside was terrifying; ragged armed crowds were vociferating and shouting threatening words against Amanullah and Souriya. The Queen was pale with fear, for her husband was out and she did not know what fate he had encountered.

Soon, however, he returned, having dashed in his motor car through the insurgents. He organized the defense of the palace, even his twelve-year-old nephews receiving weapons. Guns were loaded and the siege began. It lasted for over a week. Bullets fell on the upper floors of the palace, so I had to go down with my pupil to the Queen's room. About ten of us slept there on mattresses on the floor.

Royal Family in Flight

"The rebel's first condition was that the King should repudiate his 'shameful' wife. He refused flatly. After a week's siege the King's Guards ejected the rebels and cleared a part of the town. He decided to put Queen Souriya and his children out of danger. His whole family—about fifteen people, among whom was my little Princess Sultanja, were packed in the huge plane he had received in Germany. I was to go on the same day to the French legation and to be evacuated from there. On the morning I had to

Prisoner Sees Strange World After 30 Years

The world is indeed a strange place, to a man who has been removed from all contact with it for three decades. The things he was used to 30 years ago, have disappeared. Their place is taken by things he knows not of.

Such is the fate of Albert Gauthier, aged 49, who has just returned to his native Montreal, after 30 years in a United States prison, served as punishment for a crime regarding which he still disagrees with the verdict of society. Like a former famous prisoner, "his hair is gray, but not with years . . . his frame is bent, but not with age," and the iron of his chains has entered into his soul.

Thirty years ago, his father deserted him and his mother. Hot-headed and indignant, he sold his Sunday suit to buy a revolver, made his way to St. Paul, Minnesota, to mean journey 30 years ago, and there found his father. He challenged his father to return home and give to his mother the care and protection a wife and mother advancing in years was entitled to expect of a husband and father. His father not only refused, but added insult to injury by offering the boy a railway ticket back to Montreal.

The boy's rage, smouldering for weeks and fed daily by brooding over the wrong done the mother he worshipped, suddenly burst into flame. His fingers found the weapon for which he had sacrificed his finest wearing apparel. Three shots rang out, and Albert Gauthier was a prisoner, arrested a few minutes later on the charge of murdering his father.

There is no capital punishment in Minnesota. Gauthier went to jail for life, found guilty of patricide. He knew practically no English then, and during the weeks that he waited for trial, and the days that his trial lasted, he thought his life hung in the balance, for he did not know that the death penalty had been abolished in Minnesota.

To-day, after 30 years and two weeks of prison life, he speaks English fluently, but only beginning to learn what life means as the world understands it now. Of his crime, he speaks with the same detachment, as if he were speaking of someone's else's act. It was premeditated, he says, and therefore it was easy for the state to convict him. But he does not admit that it was unjustified.

He never saw his mother again. The impulsive act by which he sought to redress or, failing that, to avenge the wrong done to her, deprived her of her last means of support, and after struggling for 15 years to maintain herself, she died when only half of his imprisonment was over. Speaking of prison he admits that he was well-treated and, in fact, he loves the routine of prison life, the shelter from all outside worries, the absence of any need to care for himself.

Civil Flying to Serve Canada

Dominion Takes Steps to Convert it into Emergency Divisions of Royal Air Force

Commercial flying is assuming such proportions in Canada that the authorities are taking steps to control the traffic and to utilize and facilitate the new developments with the purpose of converting them into emergency divisions in the National Defense scheme of the air service.

All matters pertaining to aeronautics are to be administered by the Minister of National Defense. The air services from a part of his department and are to be divided into four branches: the Royal Canadian Air Force, the directorate of civil aviation operations, the control of civilian operations and the aeronautical engineering division.

The Royal Canadian Air Force is to be responsible for the air defenses of the Dominion to the chief of the general staff. Its work will include the administration and training of the air force and its reserves, the supplying of training facilities for all government air enterprises, the collection and distribution of air intelligence and the co-operation with the militia and naval services. It will also provide trained personnel to be attached to other branches.

At present the air force has five units: headquarters at Ottawa for the administration, organization and intelligence bureaus; a land training station at Camp Borden; seaplane training station at Vancouver; the stores depot at Ottawa, and the communications flight department at Ottawa.

The Controller of Civil Aviation is to be responsible to the Deputy Minister of National Defense for the administration of air regulations, the survey, location and equipment of airports, airways and aircraft.

A minimum of fifty hours of solo flight is one of the requirements of the applicant for a commercial pilot's license. All except the private pilot's are required to pass written examinations on the construction, maintenance and operation of aircraft and engines.

Red Hot Sun, Kind Cool Moon, India's Amazing Contrast

Cruel Orb of Day Burns from Horizon to Horizon, Until Luna Brings Hours of Rest

Two great discoveries are to be made by those who go to India for the first time, the Indian sun and the Indian moon, writes James Milne in "The London Daily Telegraph". One might say they are India, because they are orbs which govern her day and night in their own way, for nowhere else are there just the same sun and the same moon.

The Indian sun is very cruel—so cruel at its worst that the human body, white or brown, almost melts under its torture. You see in the morning a brazen-looking ball on the edge of the far sky. It is angry and flushed and you know that this brazen bolt in the blue will assuredly have you.

He climbs the sky slowly, getting more and more brazen in the face more a creature of fiery particles burning in a furnace. At noon he is in possession of the earth, as well as the sky, and his savagery is unbearable and unsatisfied. He goes on with the clock, grasping everything with his molten arms; your head, your eyes, your desk, or the pavement from which your feet retreat in pain. He balances an hour or two, at that sweating agony, playing with you, and then, sour of aspect, he condescends to grow less afflictive. But he is still angry and when he retires for the night, a ball of red coal, you can fancy you hear him hiss, "Ah! I return to-morrow."

Meanwhile the Indian moon has crept faintly into the sky, and it is the loveliest thing imaginable. It has a face of almost childish delicacy and innocence, a real baby face, until it grows clear and manly, and strong with the fullness of night.

The Indian moon is all a hero, a lovely friend, and you give him your full confidence, as he gives you his soft radiance. He has no arrogance, like the sun, only beneficence and a curious mobile warmth of expression. You want to bask in his light and shadow, loving both, because their interplay with each other tells you that he is romantic. It was Byron who said, possibly some foolish night in St. James's Street, that the devil was in the moon. He is not in the Indian moon, maybe because all the Oriental devils with planetary homes are in the Indian sun.

New Cereal Introductions

During the past three years the Cereal Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has introduced for trial in field areas by farmers two early-maturing varieties of spring wheat, bearing the names Garnet and Reward, a heavy-yielding variety of field peas known as MacKay and a strong-strawed two-rowed variety of barley known as Duclon Ottawa No. 57.

ABOUT YOUR NERVES

Headaches and Other Troubles
Follow When the Nerves
Give Way

Nerves are delicate fibres running from the brain to all parts of the body. Some of them give us the sense of touch and feeling; others convey the will to our muscles and enable us to move. When we have an "attack of nerves" it means that the body is in some way out of order and the nerves have become over-sensitive, so that we get neuralgia, nervous headache, sciatica, or some other nerve trouble. Sometimes the nerves get too weak to do the will of the brain, and we get trembling hands or limbs, or perhaps St. Vitus dance. The whole nervous system is fed and kept healthy by your blood. If that is thin and poor, nervous weakness follows. In that case a tonic is needed to build up the blood, so that it may in turn feed the nerves, spine and brain. The very best medicine for enriching the blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You cannot take them without feeling the uplift they give. Your appetite improves, your brain is clearer, you gain strength in every way, and you feel full of new life. One sufferer, Miss Margaret R. MacDonald, Catalone Road, N.S., tells what this medicine did for her. She says:—"I suffered for a long time from severe headache and nervous exhaustion. I tried several kinds of medicine but got no relief until I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these, before long, gave me complete relief. From my own experience I feel that I can not praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly, and would advise anyone who is suffering from headaches or nervous exhaustion to give them a fair trial, as I feel sure the results cannot be anything but satisfactory."

Take these pills as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A NEW RACE OF BEEF ANIMALS

The yak, a native of the plateau of Tibet, is being used by the Experimental Farms in hybridizing experiment to mingle the blood of the buffalo and ordinary cattle. After many attempts to make direct crosses between cattle and the buffalo, failure was the result owing to reproduction difficulties. The yak has been introduced as an intermediary and hopes are entertained that a hardy beef-producing animal will be evolved for grazing in northern territory. The report of the Dominion Animal Husbandman for 1927, published by the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa, contains an account of the work so far accomplished. This breeding work is being carried on at Wainwright, Alberta, in the foothills of the Rockies. The Dominion Animal Husbandman states in his report that the experiment, in so far as it has gone, has been remarkably successful as shown through the numerous excellent individuals combining the blood of the yak and buffalo, the yak and domestic cattle and their offspring now coming combining the blood of buffalo, yak, and domestic cattle.

Indigestion

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise. The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn—now—why this method is supreme. Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Children and World Peace

A Story of What the Junior Red Cross is Doing for Health Service and Good Citizenship the World Over

11 MILLION MEMBERS

By ANNE ANDERSON PERRY

In a day when the attainment of peace among nations and the encouragement of international understanding occupy the attention of masses of our people, the figures recently issued by the Canadian Red Cross Society, showing the amazing growth of the world league of Junior Red Cross school children, came with added significance.

The Junior Red Cross has extended to forty-one countries of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australasia and the Americas, in which its members now number 11,017,358. Organized under the triple slogans of "Health, Service and Good Citizenship" these eleven million school girls and boys are in truth very promising harbingers of peace among the nations, for they are intensely interested in the Juniors of all lands, with whom they continuously exchange correspondence; they work wherever organized toward the same ends in the same ways; they begin to make international understanding something more than a dream. "The front door of any little school which has membership in the Junior Red Cross," says Philip Gibbs in "The People of Destiny," "opens to the wide world, and the spirit of that school is directly in touch with the children of many countries."

Examination of the detailed figures reveals just what this means. It is shown that in 22 European countries there are 2,869,413 Juniors, of whom no less than a million and a half are in the schools of Italy; that Czechoslovakia and the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes adds another half million; that Austria and Hungary have 140,000 and 116,000 respectively—while even Poland has 115,000 Juniors. Other European lands in which this cult has taken firm footing are Belgium—where it is recognized by government and put on the curricula of the national schools, Norway, Britain, France, Lithuania, Latvia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Estonia, Germany and Spain. A remarkable feature of this development of the Junior Red Cross is the very strong hold the order has taken in those middle European states where before the war health knowledge was at its lowest ebb and internecine strife at its highest peak. Another is the amazing growth in Italy where the dictatorship has given the cult its blessing as a valuable means of building good citizens; and a third the small figures for France (20,000), Germany (10,000) and Britain (8,100), where the conservatism of these great stabilizing nations has made progress slow. But in all three the Junior Red Cross has shown its worth and is now being rapidly extended, through the efforts of educationalists themselves.

In the two Americas the Junior Red Cross has attained very impressive proportions, particularly in North America, where there are 157,155 children enrolled in Canada and a yearly increase of twenty thousand; 5,636,407 in the United States and another million in the Philippines, where the Juniors have been organized, as in Middle Europe, in order to raise the standards of health and right living among a backward people.

In Latin countries in South America, where the Junior Red Cross is of very recent growth, there is a total membership of 62,458. In Brazil, Argentina, Ecuador, Panama and Paraguay, all of whom are kept in close touch with the 15,000 Juniors in Spain and with other European lands. In Asia Japan leads with the amazing total of 1,333,640 boys and girls organized as Juniors, while a good beginning has been made in Siam and the Indian Punjab, with 50,000 more in the government schools. In South Africa the Transvaal has been enterprising enough to introduce the Junior Red Cross and some 10,000 children follow the cult in their classrooms, while in Australia proper there are no less than 94,953 Juniors with an additional 12,500 in New Zealand.

Amongst all these millions of Juniors in so many lands there goes on every year, with always increasing volume, a continuous correspondence. This takes the form of bulky portfolios prepared in classrooms by the children and then forwarded to other classrooms, mayhap across the world. These fascinating compendiums are like nothing so much as glorified scrap books. They contain many delightful letters written by children, say in Czechoslovakia, to those in Canada, or by Japanese Juniors to their brothers and sisters in South America, all of the children concerned being not more than eight to twelve years of age. There is excellent craftsmanship in composition, writing, illustration and explanation. Frequently the fauna and flora, with resources and products of the country of origin are exhibited in attractive manner, while the habits, schools, sports and feelings of the little writers are realistically presented. The arrival or departure of one of these portfolios is an affair of moment in any "Junior" classroom where all the children take the keenest interest in both preparation and reception of these treasures.

During the past year 152 such portfolios from Japan, Britain, Middle Europe, Australia, the Philippines or United States were received in many parts of Canada and 191 carefully prepared volumes were despatched to the ends of the earth for Juniors abroad. So that on personal touch and ever-increasing knowledge among the children of many countries there is being laid a foundation for better understanding and international relationships than those of the ignorance, suspicion and prejudice which have too often pertained in the past. It is one of the hopes of the world that there exists such a league of children allied in the cause of health, service, good citizenship and international goodwill. It is indeed hard to over-estimate its importance for as Philip Gibbs says, "The possibilities of better things to come are shown by the work of the Junior Cross and it is in my opinion so inspiring a lesson to the world that it ought to fire the imagination of every civilized people so that there would be a never greater world-wide league of children on this model. Such a league would be a greater promise to use than any League of Nations which may now be formulated."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS WIN GREAT PRAISE

Many Mothers Always Keep Them in the House.

Thousands of mothers state that they know of no other medicine for little ones to equal Baby's Own Tablets—that they always keep the Tablets in the home as a preventive of childhood ailments, or if sickness does suddenly grip their little ones they feel safe with such a remedy at hand.

Concerning the use of the Tablets Mrs. Donat Plouder, Tingwick, Que., writes:—"I have nothing but praise for Baby's Own Tablets. They are the only medicine I have ever given my two little ones and I am glad to state that the Tablets have always kept them in perfect health. I feel so safe with the Tablets that I always keep a box in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thoroughly laxative. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth painless. The Tablets are absolutely safe, being guaranteed free from all injurious drugs. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Living Costs

Victoria Times (Lib.): Figures just published by the Canadian Department of Labor show that what one dollar would buy in the way of necessities of life in 1913 now demands from $1.55 to $1.58. Canadians need not be unduly alarmed about this condition. The year 1928, compared with the years since 1922, shows very little difference. In comparison with other countries, our advance of 58 per cent. over pre-war living costs compares favorably with the 60 per cent. increase in the United States and the 65 per cent. in the United Kingdom.

DRINKS WITH EASE

"No; he drinks with the greatest ease."

Sherbrooke Tribune (Lib.): Though the maple sugar industry is barely developed in certain parts of Canada, it is very important in Quebec's wide territory, as in certain districts of the Provinces of Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The number of those who now manufacture maple sugar in Canada is estimated at more than 50,000.

PARENTS UNDERSTOOD THIS BABY'S LANGUAGE

"We thought we were going to lose our baby, teething," says a Kentucky mother. "He couldn't digest anything and was getting thinner every day. After one of his fretful, crying nights, I thought of Castoria and got some. A few drops made him comfortable, and after a few doses, he seemed like a different baby." Doctors everywhere recommend purely vegetable, harmless Fletcher's Castoria for colds, constipation, colic and other ills of babies and children, and millions of mothers know its gentle influence is best. Avoid imitations. The Fletcher signature is the mark of genuine Castoria.

Beware! Flu May Affect Kidneys!

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, old herbal remedy tones system

How often people say, "I never had kidney trouble till after the flu!" Wise Nature, trying to get rid of poisons, sends them to kidneys and liver. But these organs, weakened by illness, can't stand the strain. The poisons are retained in the system. Then come pains, aches, swellings, loss of appetite, debility, lassitude. What a pity, when a stimulant diuretic, taken in time, might have helped.

For over 50 years thousands have depended on Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, a physician's prescription, made of Nature's herbs. A gentle stimulant for kidneys and liver, it urges excretory glands to action, and thus helps shift the excess load from the kidneys.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy contains no harmful drugs. Costs little. Thousands have written, telling how it helped them. Get your bottle today. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Toronto, Ontario.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE PROVINCIAL CONVENTION ST. ANNE DE BELLEVUE

The 16th. Annual Convention of the Women's Institutes of our Province opened on Tuesday, 11th. June with the President, Mrs. J. B. LeBaron, of North Hatley, in the chair. As usual "O Canada" was heartily sung by all in the Assembly Hall, at Macdonald College.

After a piano solo rendered by Mrs. W. M. Goodwin, of Ste. Annes. Miss Lefebvre, Provincial Convenor of the Dept. of Canadian Industries gave her report.

Mr. W. B. Rower, of the Canadian Celanese Co., of Montreal, gave a most interesting talk on Celanese, its origin, manufacture and use, and had a very fine exhibit of the finished product.

The audience was favoured with duets by Messrs. Coalson and Heunpel, of Macdonald College, which were followed by a very good report on Legislation given by the Convenor, Miss Alice Dresser, of Richmond, Que.

An address on "What Women should know about Banking" was very lucidly given by Mr. Jackson Dods, of Montreal, whose advice was listened to with marked attention.

God Save the King concluded the evening meeting.

He announced that Mrs. Martin would again offer a scholarship in Macdonald College for the home-makers course which this year had been won by Miss Rosamund Lamb, of Lachute.

The address was ably responded to by Mrs. I. J. Bennett, of Inverness, Que.

The address following was that of the President Mrs. J. B. LeBaron and was optimistic and encouraging, reviewing as it did the year's work and future anticipation.

The Financial Report of the Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Alice Julchard, was most satisfactory.

Greetings from the F. W. I. C. by Miss Annie Stuart were complimentary, instructive and most encouraging.

Provincial Superintendent, Miss McCain reviewed the activities of the year based on the branch reports. After partaking of a luncheon provided by the Macdonald Women's Union the toasts of "The King", "Our Guests", "Homemaking the greatest Profession", "The Rural Teacher", "The future of Women's Clubs" and of The Press were proposed, supported and responded to by some of the ladies. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the hostesses, after which Mr. I. Morgan Powell, of the Montreal Star, gave timely hints on "Interesting the Press."

Convenor of Publicity, Mrs. G. G. McCurdy, of Lennoxville, gave her report.

Many delegates took advantage of a motor trip to Montreal with Musicale and lunch at Oploris, while the others inspected the various buildings, and others spent the time visiting the Military Hospital.

Wednesday evening the delegates were treated to a demonstration of English Folk dancing under the able tuition of Miss Ruth Collis, of London, England.

Report of Child Welfare was followed by an address from Dr. Grant Fleming on Public Health Units which showed the necessity and possibilities of establishing them in rural communities.

It was unfortunate that the much anticipated address of Dr. E. I. Rexford was crowded out as he had to catch a train.

Delegates from Argenteuil: Mrs. Geo. Armstrong, Pioneers; Mrs. J. Bradley, Pioneers; Mrs. Reid, Chatham; Mrs. Campbell, Chatham; Mrs. T. Morrison, Hill Head; Mrs. A. Gordon, Miss Sherritt, Lakefield; Mrs. W. McFarlane, Upper Lachute; Mrs. Massiah, Upper Lachute; Mrs. John Gordon, County President; Mrs. Kuhring, Lakefield; Mrs. Jos. Seale, Morin Heights.

MASONIC SERVICE

About one hundred members of the Masonic Order from the South Eastern half of the Ottawa District assembled at the local lodge rooms last Sunday afternoon and marched to the Presbyterian Church for a Church service. This service was unique, in that it was the first time in this District that so many lodges have co-operated in this event, the usual procedure being for each lodge to hold its own service. Buckingham Arundel, Shawville and Lachute lodges were included and the success of the service which was sponsored and encouraged by the District Deputy Grand Master, Right Worshipful Bro. George H. White is due to his efforts and the co-operation of these lodges. The service was conducted by the District Grand Chaplain Right Wor. Bro. Rev. Henry Cousens who preached on the subject of "Friendship", taking his text from Proverbs 18: 24.

Besides the present D.D.G.M. Rt. Wor. Bro. Geo. H. White, the following Grand Lodge officers were present Rt. Wor. Bro. Geo. A. Clunkie, P.D.G.M.; Geo. W. Rodger, P.D.G.M.; H. M. Gall, P.D.G.M.; J. N. A. Rice, P.G.J.W., and the presiding officers of the various lodges.

CORRESPONDENCE

To the Editor of The Watchman,
My dear Sir:

May I bring to the notice of your readers the fact that the Flower Mission season opens on Tuesday, the second of July.

Last summer Lachute gave the best lot of flowers each week, and I hope that this year we shall have even a better showing.

If any of you could go in and see the flowers distributed you would realize what a real joy they are to the poor, the sick, and the sad.

The C. P. R. delivers the flowers free at the station in Montreal and please be on time at our own depot, for at least a quarter of an hour before the Ottawa train leaves here.

Both garden and wild flowers are needed, and they should be put up in bunches with the stems wrapped round with damp paper. There will be some one at the station to receive the flowers and place them in the boxes.

With sincere thanks for your success last year, and good wishes for this season.

Yours gratefully,

LAKEFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mann, of Montreal, spent the week-end at their summer home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Andrews, of Montreal, accompanied by Miss Ruby Millar, spent Sunday visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Richards, of Montreal, were guests of Mrs. Geo. Peet over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Andrews, of Montreal, are spending their vacation at "The Chateau" their summer cottage here.

Mr. W. LeMarquand and Mr. D. Sanderson, of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mr. Tom Evans.

GRENVILLE BAY.

Mrs. E. D. Chantall visited in Ottawa this week.

Mrs. David Kennedy spent last week in the village.

Miss Lois White and Mr. Earl T. Grey spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Brechin.

Congratulations to our friend Mr. Earl T. Grey, who drew the lucky card and got a Willys-Knight Coach.

Nurse Larose spent the week-end at her home here, returning to St. Agathe on Monday, to resume her duties there.

Mr. Lawrence Chantall is home from College, and will spend his holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Chantall.

The Story of Bimbo a Lead Dog of Note

With Dog Derbys Over the Tale of Bimbo Will be Enjoyed By All Who Love
a Dog

SAGACIOUS CANINE

The icy Alaskan river, plunging through its snow-clad gorge, was not frozen entirely over. In the middle the channel was free. At this particular place the gap was only three or four feet across—an easy jump for the malamute dogs pulling the sled, and negotiable by the sledge itself. But Bimbo, the lead-dog, ordered to cross the ice and make the jump, refused to leave the shore. Three times the driver, Merle Howard Guise, who tells Bimbo's story in "By's Life," urged Bimbo across to the opening, and three times the canny canine refused to budge. Then "on the third attempt, as we reached the channel, he turned sharply up-stream and dragged the disorganized team along the glare ice, in spite of the fact that I dug in the brake. A short distance up-stream he again turned, leapt the gap and, when the entire outfit had cleared the opening, dropped down upon the ice and put his head between his paws to receive his whipping." And Mr. Guise admits that he was sorely tempted to punish his lead-dog, but he remembered Bimbo's intelligence, bravery and devotion. So, instead, he went back to the place where Bimbo had refused to cross. With a stick he struck the ice, and to his consternation it broke. It was only a thin sheet, not several feet thick as he had supposed. Bimbo had saved them all from an icy death in the water, and he had his reward in increased affection.

Bimbo showed his devotion in many ways. As lead-dog he was a stern disciplinarian to his fellows, and guarded jealously his own privileges. An instance of this is related by Mr. Guise:

A low grow . . . a snarl . . . a yelp of pain . . . a heavy object rolling down the rocky hillside!

The disturbance woke me, and I raised myself to one elbow. A slight brushing against the screen door, then silence, and I dropped back into bed.

Bimbo had gained his objective! The post of honor, the gunnysack that served as welcome doormat in front of my little log cabin, was his, my leader's, by right of might, and for the rest of the night he would guard my slumbers even if he had to slash the throat of every contending malamute in the team to do it.

Poor Moos, undoubtedly it was his one hundred and fifty pounds that had tumbled down the slope, and he always took his discomfiting hard. In harness, at the "wheel," he was a veritable Red Grange. Dragging sled and dogs, he fairly waded through unfriendly teams that he chanced to meet upon the trail. But to Bimbo size meant nothing, for he had the knack of upsetting his opponent at the first onslaught.

Though a splendid fighter, Bimbo was not a quarrelsome dog. In fact, he avoided a fight when he could, and many a bully would display his teeth and utter contemptuous, low-throated insults, without seeming to arouse the slightest interest. In the matter of guarding my person against any animals, predatory or friendly, Bimbo probably considered that, because of his position in the team, he was entitled to this special privilege, and, fortunately for him, he possessed the fighting prowess to support him in this contention.

No two dog mushers agree upon the extent of the qualities that might reasonably constitute the perfect lead-dog, says the writer, adding, "but all agree that, as with men, pedigree is not necessarily the measure of capacity for real leadership. Many potential leaders are bred from selected, pink-eyed Siberian wolf-hounds, or from pedigreed setters trained to service in the North, and a chosen few might set up speed and endurance records in the great Nome Sweepstakes." Reading on:

Yet a Mackenzie River husky, born in the humble environments of a lullid Indian camp, and maintaining an existence in spite of starvation rations and native abuse, might possess the very qualities necessary to lead his team over the most perilous trails.

To me, Bimbo was the ideal lead-dog; to others, perhaps, he was merely a splendid leader. With his uncanny trail sense, he was easily the best that I had ever known. He was the kind of dog that stood in one's mind for ancestry, pedigree, blue blood; as if bred from registered stock, and trained from puppyhood to wear the jingle-bells of a leader. And yet he was simply one of the litter whelped in a Siwash fish-camp on the coast of Alaska, and turned loose as a puppy to reach maturity as best he might.

When Bimbo was about one year old he had been picked up as a common young work-dog for fifteen dollars, and for weeks thereafter was thought to be worth just fifteen dollars less than the sum paid for him! He had been bought at Seward to fill out a team on the long mush north to the Yukon. At that time he answered to some other name. It would be more correct to say that he responded to no name at all and, placed in the team, he persisted in spite of frequent lashings by the Jap who drove him on the Yukon this sullenness continued to a point where soon his end would have been the usual one of dogs not considered worth their feed. Only a fortunate mix-up in the harnessing of the team saved him. A driver borrowed the dogs, a musher unfamiliar with their position in the team. By chance he placed Bimbo in the lead!

Immediately Bimbo's right to leadership was apparent; and from that time he retained it. This honor entitled him to the freedom of the camps, and thereafter he was seldom chained, winter or summer.

A new dog in a team is always a problem, we learn, but Bimbo was always equal to such occasions. Continuing:

A dog accustomed to taking orders only from some shouting driver soon learned, when placed in my team, that the real orders came from the lead-dog. When the rest of the team were straining at their collars to get the heavily loaded sled up the steep grade, and the musher had his hands full at the gee-pole, was no time for any dog to shirk. At such a time, a quick, backward glance from the panting Bimbo might be of no special portent to the shirker if he were a newcomer; perhaps the laggard might even return the look insolently, as if to say, "Well, what ya goin' to do about it?"

A little more of this lagging and he would get Bimbo's answer—at the next stop for rest, or even at the end of the day. For a moment he would imagine, probably, that the whole team had jumped him, as Bimbo set upon him and gave him the neatest trimming he had ever experienced in so short a time.

Usually one such lesson was sufficient to make a "good soldier" of the newest acquisition to the team. But once Kobuck and Notsack, dogs new to the team, decided to "gang up" on Bimbo to revenge initiatory trouncings each had previously received. We had just completed a six-hundred-mile trail journey, and were enjoying the last few miles on a train of the partly-completed government railroad. Half a dozen other teams were crowded into the box-car, and the cramped quarters gave these two newcomers the opportunity, they thought, for retaliation.

The two Siwash dogs were chained to the sled next to Bimbo. Soon they began to edge into him, forcing him to move over. Not satisfied, they crowded him still farther until he was at the end of his chain. Again they pressed him. It was too much! Bimbo struck!

In a moment half a hundred dogs were at it, although in quarters too confined for a good free-for-all. Bimbo handled himself in a most masterly style, and the pair must have thought they had been set upon by half-a-dozen Bimbos, so quickly did he turn from throat to leg or tail, or whatever part of their furry hides presented itself. By the time I got a grip on Bimbo's hind legs, the two bullies had been soundly thrashed. Needlers to say, Bimbo secured plenty of room, which he made use of by stretching out full length and going to sleep.

A small lead-dog, however intelligent, is sure to cut a sorry figure in a team of powerful brutes if he has not the weight and strength to hold them in check. It is practically impossible for one man to harness and put in line a large team of high-spirited dogs without first lashing the towline and sled to trees or stumps. A good leader, first to be harnessed, will help considerably in keeping the team in place by lying down in the snow and digging in his toes as the harnessing proceeds. Even then he may be dragged about by the other dogs.

When his harness was snapped into place, Bimbo would drop immediately into the snow, face to the front. A tug or two on the tow-line he would ignore, refusing to look back. A dog might give a pull that would move him a foot or so, which would be riet with a turn of the head. But a violent tug that jerked him to his feet brought swift retaliation from Bimbo, and for the next few days the offender would be too much occupied kicking his wounds to disturb his leader on a harnessing or any other occasion.

The feet of the Northern malamute and the husky are exceptionally tough, and better adapted to hard going than the feet of the "outside" dog of fine breeding, yet they require the same attention that the driver gives his own. When the trail is gritty, and marks on the snow indicate bleeding feet, the careful driver halts and puts moosehorns on the furred pads to protect them from the sharp particles of ice. These moosehorns, or canvas sacks, if not ripped off by the fangs of the wearer, usually last for one or more days' travel.

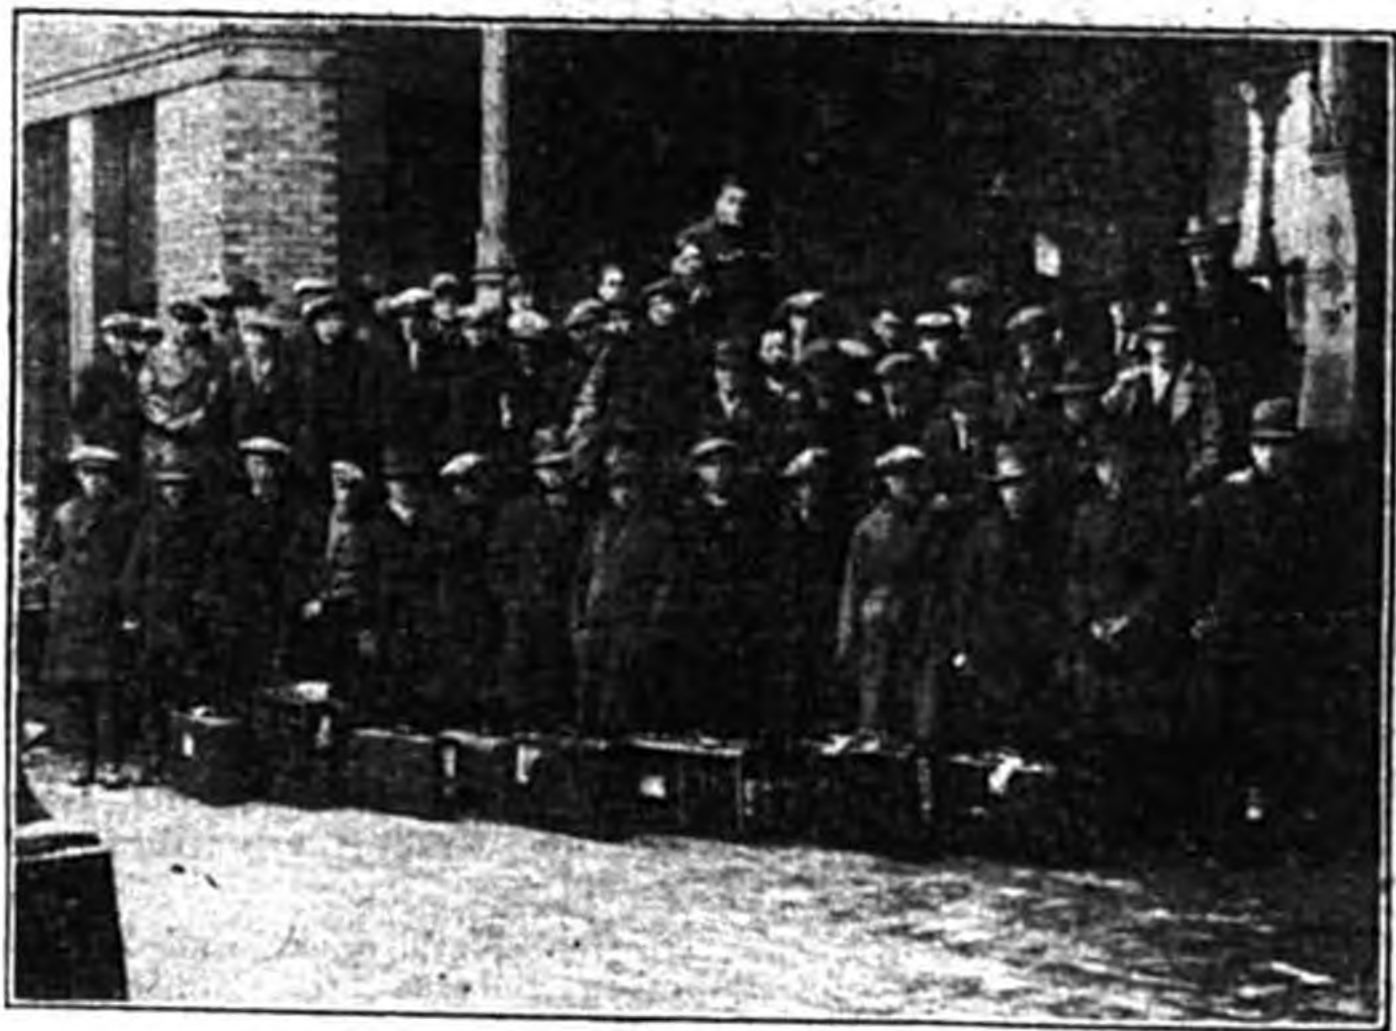

Bimbo, because of his strong, steady pulling was unusually hard on shoes, an inspection at the noon rest sometimes revealing his moosehorns, especially those on his hind legs, worn through the bottom. He wore out twice as many moosehorns as any other dog in the team, attesting to his conscientious work. He put his best into the tow-line until a word from the driver or a slowing down of the sled, indicated that the other dogs must have time out for a "blow."

A sledge-dog should be a good trailer, and Bimbo was. One of the best pieces of trailing he ever did was to lead Mr. Guise over Rainy Pass, on the ridge of the high Alaska Range, in a driving blizzard. This is how Bimbo handled the situation:

When the storm broke we were too far up the mountain-side to turn back. There was nothing to do but stagger blindly ahead—and leave the outcome to Bimbo.

For three hours I could not see Bim-

British Boys Welcomed to Canada

Fifty British boys, arriving at Montreal over Canadian National Railway to commence farm work in Canada, were given a hearty reception and were entertained at a luncheon by Dr. W. J. Black, Director of Agriculture and Colonization for the Canadian National System. The boys are going to Lindsay, Ont., where they will be placed on farms under the jurisdiction of the Rotary Club of that city, which already has succeeded in its efforts to place British boys with Canadian farmers and give them a chance to establish themselves in the new country.

bo or the other dogs—scarcely could I make out the handle-bars of the sled which I g-i-ped. Then, about three o'clock, as we passed out of the storm zone just before night settled down, there stood the government tripod—three sticks marking the summit of the dangerous pass! As I made my way forward and rewarded Bimbo by rubbing the ice from his face, it was with a feeling of wonder at an instinct that to me seemed inspired.

The World War separated Mr. Guise and Bimbo in this way:

It was at Seward that Bimbo had been purchased, as a common work dog, for that first long trip to the Yukon. After many years of trailing throughout the vast interior of the North with him, the war finally brought me out. I was now on my way to the Outside, and from Seward I sent the team back to the Yukon—all save Bimbo. Bimbo, now in his twelfth year, had served me faithfully. The thought of separating from him was unbearable, so I took him out with me, to live the rest of his life on a well-earned pension.

At Seward, I installed Bimbo on the spacious back porch of a friend's home on Capital Hill. I was certain that his view of the down-town section of the city would be more appreciated than the sight of Elliot Bay beyond, for Bimbo had suffered much from seasickness.

Frequently I took Bimbo on long walks about the residential sections, and observed his keen interest in city life. Moreover, he thrived on his new diet of beef scraps and other delicacies, and did not seem to pine for his salmon, tallow, and rice.

In the North, Bimbo had never played with other malamutes, for he always had held himself apart from them, as he had been rejected by dogs of breeding. Here, though, he seemed to enjoy meeting the city-bred dogs who dashed out at him from back yards, but refrained, fortunately for them, from anything more bellicose than bristling back and threatening growls. Particularly was he amused at a little puff-ball lap aristocrat that came sputtering out from a parlor and, sniffing and snarling feebly, strutted around him and under his belly, as though daring him to knock the blue-ribbon bow off its neck. When a young woman in maid's apron and cap came to the door and stamped for "Wiki-Wiki's" return, Bimbo seemed hurt at the little fellow's being taken away.

A Texas man says it's his ambition to have a suit of clothes for each day. Most of us have that now, but it's the same one.

Henley in the Middle Eighteen Hundreds

Early morning in Henley! From over the wooded hills in the east there comes a great flood of sunshine that lies warmly on the ruddy side of the old inn, on its evergreens and on the slopes of the sweet-scented magnonette, and sweetbrier and various blossoms that adorn the bank of the river. The river itself, lying apparently motionless between level and green meadows, has, its blue surface marred here and there by a white ripple of wind; the poplars that stand on its banks are rustling in the breeze; there are swallows dipping and skimming about the old bridge, and ducks paddling along among the rushes and weeds, and cattle browsing in the deep green; and farther on, some high-lying stretches of rye-grass struck into long and silvery waves by the morning wind.

All the stir and motion of the new day have come upon us; and Henley, clean, white, and red, with its town-hall shining brightly down its chief street and all its high clusters of old fashioned houses backed by a fringe of dark-wooded hills, shows as much life and briskness as are usually seen in a quaint, small, old-fashioned English town. But where the silence and the stillness of the morning dwell is away up the reach of the river. Standing on the bridge, you see the dark blue stream, reflecting a thousand bright colors underneath the town, gradually becoming greyer in hue until it gets out amid the meadows and the woods; and then, with a bold white curve that is glimmering like silver in the north, it sweeps under the line of low, soft green hills that have grown pearly and grey in the tender morning mist. Bell is standing on the bridge, too. The Lieutenant has brought out his sketch-book, and has placed it on a stone parapet before her. But somehow, she seems disinclined to begin work thus early on our journey; and, instead, her eyes are looking blankly and wistfully at the rich green meadows, and the red cows, and the long white reach of the river shining palely beneath the faint green heights in the north.

"Is Henley the prettiest town in the world, I wonder?" she said. "Yes, if you think so, Mademoiselle," replied von Rosen, gently. "From 'The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton,' by William Black.

Indian Hospitality

Curiously enough, the North American Indians have always been highly advanced in the art of hospitality. While they were yet in a state of savagery they had customs of hospitality which were an inspiration to the white people who first came among them. . . . Few people were so open-hearted and generous as they. Their unaffected kindness and their willingness to share a last morsel astonished the early white settlers who came in contact with them. Some of the tales of English and Indian intercourse, as recorded by these early white people, are touching.

In the summer of 1584 an expedition under the auspices of Sir Walter Raleigh landed on the Island of Wococken, off Albemarle-Sound. They invaded the land of the Algonquin tribes and made themselves comfortable. Yet "there came down from all parts great stores of people" bringing ducks, hares, fish, fruits, nuts, and many good things for the new-comers. The wife of the chief, Granganimeo, came personally and invited the two leaders of the expedition (Philip Amidas and Arthur Barlow) into the house. She washed them, and gave them every comfort, "and served roasted fish and venison on a board that stood along the side of the house."

Captain Clark, of the famous Lewis and Clark expedition, wrote with enthusiasm of the hospitality which he encountered. He told how the Indians of the Columbia Valley boiled salmon and served it on a platter of rushes, neatly made. "It is the custom of all the nations on the Missouri to offer every white man food and refreshments when he first enters their tents."

We have borrowed many things from our Indian brothers, but nothing more valuable than their custom of generous hospitality. They paved the way for the hospitality which has become so peculiarly associated with this country. We owe them, as we owe all peoples of the world from whose manners and customs we have borrowed, a debt of gratitude.

The early pages in the history of our country, darkened by the pathetic struggles of the colonists to master the conditions in which they found themselves, are brightened here and there by tales of jolly entertainments and generous hospitality. We read with quickening heart-beat of a pathetic little wedding feast in Plymouth. We read with a sudden warmth of tenderness of a Thanksgiving dinner in the wilderness. We follow a train of covered wagons westward and rejoice with the pioneers when they reach at last their destination and every man, woman, and child gladly helps in clearing the grounds for the great celebration.

There were kind to one another, generous, hospitable. They shared alike the hardships and the pleasures of their experiences. And they built strong because they built together. . . . We have never wholly lost that heritage bequeathed us by the early colonists—a love of simple kindness and hospitality, a love of sharing with our neighbors and having them share with us.—Lillian Eichler, in "The Customs of Mankind."

The Old Way of Warmth

Manchester Guardian (Lib.): It is interesting to notice that in these days of frigid travel some passengers are calling out for old tin foot-warmers which used to be the most comforting of railway companions. There are two main schools of thought about the proper strategy in campaigning against cold—the European and the American. The American practice is not to heat the person but to heat the room, and this method is often carried to what English taste finds intolerable stuffiness. . . . Perhaps, if the cold continues, the American habit of taking iced drinks as a defense against the hot dryness of steam-heated rooms will give way to the consumption of mulled wines and the neguses which Englishmen drank before the days of the cocktail and central heating. The real argument for supplying local heat by means of a fire or foot-warmer was that you could keep your feet warm and your head cool; in a centrally heated room or carriage it is possible to have only a stuffy head while one's extremities grow unpleasantly chilly.

Love

Old as the ages,
Bright as the day
Love is immortal,
Happy and gay.

All in a sea!
Gold for a ruler—
Love still for me!

Trout Fishin'

How a withered old man who might have been the very shade of Isaac Walton explained the peculiarities of "procrastinating" trout is told by Ray Bergman in the April issue of "Field and Stream". This old fellow ambled up to a fisherman who hadn't been having the best of luck and casually said, a twinkle in his faded blue eyes:

"Guess ye ain't had much 'perience w' these here 'crastinatin' trout, have ye? Tain't nothin' unna'al. They often git that-a-way, an' ye must have had some 'perience w' 'em, fer ye cert'nly n'ly do a lot o' trout fishin'. Yer shoes is all worn 'om the rocks, them wadin' pants o' yours is all patches, yer rod is hand-made—Oh, everythin' ye got shows 'perience an' use. But say, d' ye ever study the game like ye orta? I mean the way trout feel 'bout it. They's a lot like ourselves."

"They's three things does it," continues this sage old angler. "Trout as are slightly willin', continual castin' over the same spot and these here bivisible flies. See how they's made? Good stiff hackles, a stiff tail to make 'em ride high, without the hook point penetratin' the water, an' white of the top so's ye know where 'tis yerself. An' say, don't get so peevish an' disgruntled 'cause ye ain't gettin' fish. Chances is, it's yer own fault, an' ye'll never learn that-a-way. Try an' think like a trout does, an' ye'll get better fishin'. S'long."

Soon Now

"Skunk cabbages poking their noses up through the earth, restless anglers fumbling among flies books and lines are all signs of approaching spring. In the same paper Seth Briggs starts the season with a few suggestions to fishermen.

"The best way to catch fish," he says, "is to keep your line wet and not think too much about the lure you are using or going to use. It is seldom possible to take trout on a dry fly during a snow storm or when the water freezes on your line, but the man who fishes consistently, conscientiously and intelligently with any lure with in reason, usually comes home with a good catch of fish."

"Here is a suggestion to those who in the past have twiddled their thumbs until the first of May. Get out this year on the opening day with a good selection of wet flies and try your luck. Take a few each of Hare's Ear, Coachman, Cahill, Cowdun, March Brown and Queen of the Waters. Put on one or at most two different flies of the above assortment on your leader and fish them hard for a while before you change to a different fly."

Jamaica's Red

On exchanging Kingston for the country, one soon realizes that the color of Jamaica is red. Green, of course, prevails—the green patches of the mountains, the green covering of the hills, the green of the great leaves of the bananas, the green of palms and ferns and grass. And yet it is red that remains on the retina: the red of the hibiscus, the red of the poinsettia, the red of the Flame of the Forest, the red and purple red of the bougainvillea, and, by no means least, the red of the clothes: the old women's handkerchief turbans, the young women's dresses—so many of them crude crimson conflicting with every natural bloom. There seems to be no sense of prismatic harmony in the negro temperament.

The green you take for granted; the red is the surprise; and if I were to be asked what color came next I should say white; the white of teeth usually smiling, the white or eyes turned lazily upon the passer-by. For every one is looked at in Jamaica, not with the insolent Latin stare, of even inquisitively, but with mild and engaging and genial curiosity; and the spectacle of the passer-by is, next to gossip, the island's principal amusement, for you see no games.—E. V. Lucas, in "A Fringed Isle."

"The average tourist is not so much interested in the bridge of sin, but the average dentist is."

Probably when Cupid twanged one in the direction of Lindy he pulled that old one about "the higher they fly the harder they fall."

I noticed your wife sitting by the window sewing this morning. I thought you told me she was ill! "So she was; but to day she's on the mend!"

THE CIRCUS vs. LITTLE ONES

Circus Day is Children's Day, it belongs essentially to them—Tradition has made it so. There was a time when "Taking the Children to see the Animals" was the most convenient excuse offered by those who thought against their religious scruples or their fancied dignity, to go to the Circus. Happily that form of Hypocrisy is about extinct.

Years of the most careful effort by the management of the "BARNETT BROTHERS Three Ring Circus and Trained Animal Shows" to eliminate everything and anything in the slightest degree immoral or impossible in the character of their exhibitions, or in the demeanor of their employees of whatever rank, have at last convinced the Public generally of the absolute cleanliness of the Circus as a place of entertainment, and with such comprehensive shows as the Barnett Brothers are offering to the Public, it is a course of practical and profitable instruction.

There is no longer any excuse or apology for going to the Circus. The presence of the Clergymen at every performance, with seldom and exception, attests to the general and sensible change of consideration for the Circus, by the Church going people.

But all this does not release any one from a moral obligation to take the children to see the Animals and the accompanying Circus performance. It is only a matter of extreme delight to the children to see the "show" but it is a duty as well as a pleasure upon the part of the PARENTS, relatives, and friends to enable them to see it.

The Barnett Brothers Three Ring Circus and Trained Animal Shows will exhibit at Lachute, on Friday, July 5th, for one day only, afternoon and evening. Doors open at 1 and 7 p.m. Show starts one hour later. The shows will positively appear as advertised Rain or Shine. Our mammoth tents are waterproof and are all lighted by electricity. Street parade at noon on day of the show, and a free exhibition on the show ground immediately after the parade. Show located in Barron's Field.

CUSHING

Sergt. Major Holmes, of Montreal, spent Sunday in Cushing.

Mr. Owen Keatley was another Montreal visitor to Cushing for the week-end.

The Misses Grace and Katie Wheelahan spent the week-end with their friends here.

Dr. Cushing and little daughter Marjorie spent Saturday and Sunday at his residence here.

Mrs. McFarlane, of New York City, arrived on Saturday to spend a few months with her sister, Miss Corner, at Mascot Lodge.

Miss Olive Hartley is spending the week with her mother, Mrs. S. O. Hartley. Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Hartley and son Kenneth, also Messrs. Laurence and Ernest Hartley also spent the week-end in Cushing.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Young arrived on Friday and opened up their bungalow on the bank of the Ottawa for the summer months. Mr. Leonard Young who recently arrived from New York also spent the latter part of the week there.

Miss Wheelahan, accompanied her sister Mrs. R. Funcheon and Mr. W. H. and Miss Tessie Robert on a motor trip to Alfred, Ont., last Sunday, where they visited the Rev. Sister Mary Walburga, at the convent of the Sisters of Providence. The rev. sister was formerly Miss Beatrice Robert, of St. Philippe. Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Lowe, of Grenville, and Mrs. Ernest Wylie and daughters, of St. Eugene were also of the party.

News was received here last week of the death at his home in Black River Bridge, N. B., of James McRae, whose wife was formerly Miss Grace Fraser, daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. Jas. Fraser, for many years pastor of St. Mungo's. The deceased had been ill for some months from the effects of an accident which he met with in March last. Besides his wife he leaves three young children, two daughters and a son. The sincere sympathy of this community is with them in their loss.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mr. and Mrs. J. Fair and Miss L. Fair spent the week-end at Abernethy.

Miss A. Dorion is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Oscar Dorion.

Miss Adria Barclay is visiting her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Robertson.

The W. M. S. of the Presbyterian Church held a "Lilac Tea" last Saturday on Mrs. Aitkin's lawn.

Visitors to Montreal last week were Mr. J. W. Rodger, Mrs. C. W. Lang, Miss Harris, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Wales and Miss Wilson.

Mrs. E. Charman left on Saturday for Moncton, N. B., where she will attend the funeral of her brother, Mr. Gordon Hopper, whose death occurred on June 14th.

The Young People's Society of the St. Andrews United Church gave their amusing play "The Blundering Mr. Brown" at Grenville, last Saturday evening by request.

The Women's Guild of the United Church held a meeting last Thursday in the Church Hall. Mrs. Jeffrey, the Misses Hooker and Miss Hendry were the hostesses.

On Sunday morning, June 16th, in the absence of the Rector, the Rev. T. B. Jenkins, of Montreal, took the service at the Anglican Church and preached a very interesting sermon on Nature in all her phases. During the offertory the choir sang the Anthem "Come unto Me," which was much appreciated.

An enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the Women's Auxiliary was held at Mrs. Fraser's, Lachute Road, on Thursday, June 13th. The Rev. A. E. and Mrs. Mount, of Lakefield, were very welcome visitors. Many matters were discussed, and two important dates settled—July 6th, a Strawberry Festival, combined with a sale of home made cookery, beginning at 7 p.m., Standard time, on lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbertson—and August 3rd, the annual sale and supper of the Society in the Town Hall. (Everybody please remember these dates.)

Dr. B. N. Wales starts on Wednesday (the 19th.) with a large party of tourists, for a tour of the Maritime Provinces, and will likely be gone for several weeks—which time we hope will be replete for him with interest and pleasure. Dr. Wales is the Corner for this district, and during his absence the affairs of his department will be attended to by Dr. Labelle, of St. Jerome. (But why crowd any of this business on to another county? Intending suicides and reckless gunmen please slow down operations for a while.)

WEDDING BELLS

BOYD - CARRUTHERS

A very pretty, but quiet wedding took place on June 12th, at Trinity Church, Morin Heights, of Violet Laura Carruthers, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nixon Carruthers, of Mille Isles, to Cyril Russell Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Boyd, of Lachute, the ceremony being performed by Rev. C. W. P. Baugh.

The bride was daintily attired in a gown of powder blue silk, and hat to match, and carrying a bouquet of Roses, ferns, and lilies of the valley; the church being decorated for the occasion.

Later the young couple left on a short trip, and on their return will reside in Lachute.

She Hated Her Brother's Way of Life—But She Had to Shield Him!

By RUTH ALEXANDER

"There's just one thing more I ought to mention, and that is that I've no intention of marrying again."

Prue Moore finished. She stared at her prospective employer, and her little chin went several inches higher. It was a rounded chin, dimpled, but capable of becoming stubborn when occasion arose. Such an occasion seemed this moment when Mr. Julian Strange, the taciturn, rather tired-looking man standing by the fire in his great neglected studio had the temerity to suggest that the girl he was engaging as his little daughter's governess would naturally set her cap at him.

"I'm going to hate him!" thought Prue. "I shall never stay!"—and longed to end the interview with a chilly: "If that's the sort of idea you have of me, hadn't we better decide I'm quite unsuitable for the job?"

Then she thought of Henry, who was always losing his work, and of Nora, who simply must have another year at school, and swallowed her pride with a gulp.

"That needn't worry either of us," she told him distantly, chin still well in the air. "In fact," she added, on a sudden thought, "I'm engaged."

"Then we shall suit each other admirably, and I shall expect you on Monday, Miss Moore."

Julian Strange took her hand, and his rather stern face lighted up with an unexpectedly sweet and twinkling smile.

"I'm going to like him," she thought. "It won't be so bad, after all."

At first Prue felt somewhat forlorn in the big, silent London house, with just the servants and the housekeeper and little Joan, who had been thoroughly spoiled, and was at times a perfect little beast and at others entirely lovable.

There was a garden which was a great delight to Prue; it led out of Mr. Strange's studio, unfortunately, but she soon learned his habits and avoided going through when he was at work. Her one endeavor, indeed, after that remark of his, was to avoid Mr. Strange. He was an artist, and painted still life pictures of flowers and fruit and pottery.

"Someone rang you up to-day, Miss Moore," he told her one afternoon, when she encountered him unexpectedly. "Henry," he said his name was; "I didn't catch the surname. Your fiance, I suppose?"

"Yes," she acquiesced, her heart sinking a little.

She was vexed with her brother; she had told him especially not to telephone her. Mr. Strange might not like it, and, with the family dependent on her, she mustn't run any risks of losing her job. She hadn't meant to tell that fib, all the same. Henry had practically forced it on her.

"I asked him to come and see you here whenever he likes," he went on kindly. "Don't be afraid you'll disturb me. The house is big enough."

"Thank you!"

Prue felt a rush of gratitude. But she was worried about Henry. Henry wasn't the sort to refuse any invitation; he was a charming and attractive youth, but he didn't in the least mind sponging. Besides, his affectionate messages always meant that he was hard up. Probably he had lost his job again and wanted money.

When Henry called next afternoon Prue was playing games with little Joan in the garden. She tiptoed through the studio fearing to disturb the artist, and, meeting her brother in the hall, enjoined him to silence as she led the way back again. But Mr. Strange looked up as they passed, and Prue stopped and made the introductions.

"This is Henry!" she murmured, slightly tremulous, for fear he should demand Henry's surname and explanations. But Mr. Strange was much too engrossed in his work.

"Ah," he said absently, "good afternoon!"

"How do you do?" Henry replied with that engaging heartiness that always earned him friends—at first.

"That's a lovely group you're painting, sir! A valuable piece, I should say."

Mr. Strange glanced at him with a spark of interest in his eyes, and removed a brush from his mouth.

"Yes," he answered, "Old Dresden. A collector's piece. It is practically priceless."

Henry's eyes gleamed as he surveyed the exquisite little porcelain group. Prue put her arm through Henry's and nudged at him.

"We're disturbing Mr. Strange. Henry, let's go into the garden."

And Henry allowed himself to be drawn away.

"How did you manage to get off from the office?" she asked apprehensively.

Henry shrugged his shoulders. "I've left," he told her light-heartedly. "Couldn't stick the old blighter any longer! We had a tearing row."

"Oh, Henry!" she cried despairingly. "You can't afford to go on throwing up jobs like this!"

"Don't you worry," he reassured her, with a swagger. "I'll soon get another."

That was the first of several visits for Henry, till presently it became a habit for him to call every day, generally in time for lunch or tea.

Fortunately, Mr. Strange was so absorbed in his new picture that he did not appear to notice whether Henry was there or not, though Prue occasionally caught him standing at the studio door and gazing at her and the child in the garden.

The task of finding Henry's new job seemed a very long one, and there came a day when Prue's little chin took on its stubborn angle.

"I'm sorry, Henry, but you don't seem to be bothering at all, and I really can't afford to lend you any more money! And I don't think we ought to let Mr. Strange supply you with any more lunches and teas!"

"How do you suppose I am going to live, then?" Henry demanded.

"I really don't know," said Prue, at the end of her patience. "I suppose you could get work as a hall-porter, or a dustman, or something."

Henry glared. He seized his hat and lunged out. Prue, instantly remorseful, ran after him.

"Henry, I didn't mean it! Of course I'll give you some more—"

But Henry had gone.

She spent two miserable days, alternately worrying over the idea that she might have driven him to suicide and comforting herself with the belief that he would come back. Then on the third morning she returned from a walk to find him on the doorstep.

"Oh, Henry, I'm so glad you're back! Do come into the nursery and have lunch!" She was almost tearful with thankfulness.

Henry magnanimously allowed himself to be fed before making any explanations. Then he said:

"No, I haven't got a job, but I'm on the track of one. I was offered thirty bob a week yesterday."

"I am so glad! It isn't much, but it's something to be going on with!" cried Prue happily.

"What! Thirty bob! Do you think I'd take a job of that sort?"

"You don't mean to say you turned it down?"

"I certainly did."

Prue was thoroughly roused. Her chin went up.

"So you'd rather live on my money and Mr. Strange's food than work at a small salary!" she flashed at him.

"Go away from this house, and don't you dare to come again!"

"Look here, Prue, I've got something else in view, but I can't go after it without money."

You turn down an offer, and then expect me to supply you with money! If you don't go I'll call Mr. Strange!" she stormed at him.

"I'm going!" said Henry furiously, and went out.

Prue stood stock still. Her anger abated as quickly as it had risen. She held her breath and waited for the sound of the front door. She crept to the top of the stairs and listened. Everything was quiet. Perhaps he had actually gone to Mr. Strange for money! She ran noiselessly down.

The studio door was open, and Henry was in there alone. He was standing as if fascinated before the Dresden china group. Suddenly he pulled a silk handkerchief from his pocket, wrapped the ornament in it, tucked it under his coat, then, with a quick glance right and left, made for the garden door.

Before he had reached it Prue was at his side.

"Henry, what are you thinking of?" she cried in a distressed whisper. "Give it to me! You can't—steal!"

She snatched at the bundle.

"Let go, you little fool! You'll break it!"

They struggled. The silk handkerchief fell to the floor. All at once there was a sharp, ominous crack. Henry let go his hold immediately, leaped through the door into the garden, and left Prue staring down at the fragments of the Dresden group.

Dazedly she heard Henry's footsteps running on the gravel path, heard other footsteps at her side. There was a dead silence, broken by the slight scraping sound of Henry's boots as he scaled the wooden fence. Involuntarily she moved swiftly, so as to interpose herself between the fugitive and Mr. Strange's gaze.

"I'm sorry!" she gasped. "I was just admiring it—and I broke it! I did it!" Beneath her quivering mouth her little chin was resolute. "I'll pay for it—if you give me time! I'm dreadfully sorry!"

The storm she expected did not break. Instead, she heard Mr. Strange's voice gentle almost to tenderness:

"You couldn't pay for it, Prue. It's a tragedy—but you didn't do it."

"I did!" she cried hysterically.

"You blessed little white liar! I came in and saw the whole thing! Don't worry; I shan't blame Henry."

And she found herself folded in a pair of strong, warm arms.

Somehow the amazing happening didn't seem amazing at all to Prue. She forgot Henry and everything else in the wide world till Julian whispered:

"There's just one thing, Prue—your fiance!"

"That was another fib?" she confessed chokingly into his coat. "You see, you said—you weren't going to marry again!"

Prue caught her breath.

"I wasn't—ill—met you!" said Julian Strange, and kissed her.

Street and Highway Trees

The Ontario Horticultural Association have done a good service in issuing recommendations for the guidance of municipalities in planting and caring for street and roadside shade trees. The Association, composed of delegates from all parts of the province, has realized the need of some better policy to take care of this matter. Many miles of highway are without trees of any kind and thousands of trees that once were an ornament to the country have been mutilated for the accommodation of companies stringing wire lines through the country. At the convention held in Toronto recently a strong appeal was made to the delegates to do their utmost to save the shade trees and so help to preserve the scenic beauty of their neighborhoods. To the extent that this is done will the country attract tourists and derive revenue accordingly. Recommendations for the guidance of municipalities were brought in by a tree committee appointed a year ago. These dealt with the varieties that should be planted in towns and country places, and the distances apart they should be planted. For the central and southern parts of the province such trees as White Ash, Hard Maple, Pin Oak, Tulip Tree and Oriental Plane may with advantage be planted and not closer than 40 feet. For wider streets and boulevards this distance should be increased to 55 or 60 feet and on roads 70 feet. The varieties for the country planting should include Elms, Red Oak, Sugar Maple, White Ash, and Walnut, where these are indigenous to the locality. The Soft Maple so commonly planted, was regarded as less suitable than many other varieties except for northern areas where they make a rather slow growth and mature into a more desirable shape. Such unsuitable trees as the Manitoba Maple and Poplars, including Cottonwoods, the committee considered, should not be planted on any street or roadway.

Handsome is as Handsome Does

A Parisian Beauty Doctor, or "cosmetic surgeon," as she prefers to call herself, has been trying to persuade the German people that it is a sin to be ugly. She did not suggest that the Germans, as a race, are less fortunate than other races in those physical gifts which are commonly described as "good looks," but simply that, having them, they neglect to improve upon them by art. To be content to show your features as Heaven meant you to show them she regards as a sin—the "sin of ugliness." Yet people are not ugly unless they look ugly, and it is within the power of us all not to look ugly. Ugliness has nothing to do with features or hair or coloring or anything else that shows upon the surface. We may have features like the Apollo Belvedere himself and yet be repellent, if our tempers are bad. "Handsome is as handsome does," says the old proverb, which means that if you are courteous and chivalrous you will look happy and others will like you for it. A ready smile wins more hearts than millions, but a scowling face will soon make a Croesus bankrupt of his friends.—Montreal Star.

No Quarter

Halifax Herald (Cons.): The lash for drug peddlers may sound like harsh punishment, but it is possible to conceive of a more unspeakable, a more despicable crime? . . . It is useless to waste soft sentiments over criminals who peddle drugs. Theirs is a deliberate act, a cold mercantile decision to capitalize a habit that grips its victims and drags them down to the depths of physical, mental and moral degradation. No quarter for the drug peddler, is a decision that will meet with the complete approval of the citizenship of the Dominion.

A sweet little thing who didn't care any more for a nickel than she did for her right eye was having a lunch with one of those daddies. "Tomorrow is my birthday," she mentioned cooly. Every day was her birthday to Dora. "Well, here's $50," her escort replied, "and I wish you a happy birthday." "What! On $50?"

Water Noises

When I am playing by myself And all the boys are lost around, Then I can hear the water go; It makes a little talking sound. Along the rocks below the tree, I see it ripple up and wink; And I can hear it saying on, "And do you think? and do you think? A bug shoots by that snaps and ticks, And a bird flies up beside the tree To get into the sky to sing. I hear it say, "Kildee, kildee!" Or else a yellow corn comes odwa To splash a while and have a drink. And when she goes I still can hear The water say, "And do you think?" —Elizabeth Madox Roberts, in "Under the Tree."

BAYER

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If the name Bayer appears, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it's not! Headaches are dispelled by Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Aspirin—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) indicating Bayer Manufacture. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assure the public against imitations, the Tablets will be stamped with their "Bayer Cross" trademark.

NICE WORDS WON'T DYE a dress or coat...

Neither pretty pictures nor colorful adjectives will dye a dress or coat. It takes real dyes to do the work; dyes made from true anilines.

Next time you have dyeing to do, try Diamond Dyes. See how easy it is to use them. Then compare the results. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree they are better dyes.

You get none of that re-dyed look from Diamond Dyes; no streaking or spotting. Just fresh, crisp, bright new color. And watch the way they keep their brilliance through wear and washing. They are better dyes because they contain plenty of real anilines—from three to five times more than other dyes. But you pay no more for them than for ordinary dyes.

The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original "all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material. It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye for silk or wool only. With it you can dye your valuable articles of silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. Remember this when you buy. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package will dye every kind of goods, including silk and wool. Your dealer has both packages.

Canada's Land of The Midnight Sun

Director of Northwest Territories Describes Vast Section Bordering Mackenzie River

Canada, too, has her "Land of the Midnight Sun," and the little that is known of the Great Valley of the Mackenzie River and the northern coast of Canada, inhabited chiefly by Indians and Eskimos, is vividly described in Natural History, journal of the American Museum of Natural History, by O. S. Finnie, Director of the Northwest Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior of Canada. He writes:

"One million three hundred thousand square miles of Canada lying north of 60 are known as the Northwest Territories. They extend easterly from the delta of the Mackenzie River to Baffin Island, a distance of approximately 2,000 miles, and reach more than 1,000 miles from north to south, from Cape Columbia to latitude 50 degrees north, including all the islands in the Canadian sector as far as the Pole.

"Neither the natives, nor the fauna, nor the other resources of so vast a country can be adequately described in a short article. From agricultural lands in the southern areas the country stretches to the world's most northerly headland; the natives include Indians and Eskimos speaking three distinct languages and living under as many sets of conditions. The wild life covers almost every species of land and sea mammal known to Canada, and the other potential resources of the Territories are found under a variety of conditions that differ in climate and accessibility.

DISTRICT OF MACKENZIE.

"The District of Mackenzie, the most important of the three main divisions of the Northwest Territories, can be most readily approached by the route leading north by rail from Edmonton, Alberta, to the southern watershed of the Mackenzie River. Fort Smith, the administrative centre within the district, is situated on the Slave River in latitude 60 degrees north, where a series of rapids forms a barrier to river navigation. At this point we find ourselves in the hands of the Chipewyan Indians.

"Should we listen to the casual conversation of the crowd we would hear English, French, Cree and Chipewyan used impartially for, although the language of the district is Chipewyan, the Crees from the south are well represented, and the traders and missionaries are chiefly of British and French extraction.

"Fort Smith, situated on a high, sandy plateau overlooking the river, is typical of many of the northern posts, its principal features being government offices, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police Post, a wireless telegraph station, a mission church and house with hospital and school, and establishments of the principal fur traders of the North. To these should be added the log homes of the natives and a host of dogs, which constitute the motive power of the country's winter transport. In winter Fort Smith is dark and bleak and windswept, and in summer it is a noted gathering place for all varieties of insect pests known to the northland, while for weeks daylight never fades entirely from the sky.

"Immediately to the west lies a country of alternate swamps and low sand ridges, difficult of access, but valuable because it has given perfect protection to the only remaining herd of American bison that has never known captivity. In 1901 the Dominion Government prohibited the killing of these animals. An estimate made about twenty years later placed their total at approximately 1,500. To these have been added recently 6,000 young buffalo from the Wainwright National Park, and it is confidently hoped that the next decade will see an increase in their numbers great enough to make them an important factor in the food supply of the district and possibly to warrant licensed hunting under the supervision of official game wardens.

FUR RESOURCES.

"The fur resources of the Fort Smith area have been intensively drawn upon for more than 100 years, but still the trapper thrives. Each winter yields pelts of bear, wolves, lynx, colored foxes, fisher, otter, marten, mink, skunk and muskrat—fox, mink and rat predominating. It is possible, however, that the time is not far distant when fur farming will bring to many a better living than is to be secured today from the taking of wild animals.

"From Fort Smith to the Arctic Ocean, a distance by water of 1,400 miles, river transportation is uninterrupted. Large and comfortable steamboats serve the public, and already the excellence of their service, the novelty of the life of the lower river settlements and the river scenery have popularized them among those on the outlook for summer tours in little-known lands.

"Two hundred miles of river, winding slowly through the country of the buffalo and the moose, lead from Fort Smith to Great Slave Lake. One legend of the source of the name 'Great Slave' tells how, even before the advent of the trader, a white child was sold as a slave to an Indian tribe which had its home on the shores of the lake. The child grew to be a man of the ordinary stature, with long fair hair and light blue eyes, who lived a long life among his Indian masters. His presence led to the area being known as the 'land of the great white slave,' eventually abbreviated to Great Slave. The story further states that the child slave was the rightful heir to the throne of France—an interesting echo of the rumors spread by the devotees of Napoleon that the son of Marie Louise had not really died at Vienna, but had been spirited away by the wily Metternich.

"Another legend, quoted by the Geographic Board of Canada, is to the effect that Great and Lesser Slave Lakes and Slave River were named after a tribe of Indians that once dwelt in that region. These Indians called themselves Etchareottine, which means 'the people dwelling in the shelter of the (Rocky) mountains.' In contradistinction to other Northern Indians, who were caribou eaters and traveled widely in pursuit of game, the Etchareottines were fish eaters and kept to the lakes. When the more warlike Crees went on the warpath against the tribes on the Peace River, they came from the south in canoes to Lesser Slave Lake and, leaving their canoes there, proceeded overland. Finding that the lake-dwelling Indians did not possess their own warlike attributes and ideas, the Crees showed their contempt by bestowing on the lake dwellers the epithet of 'awonak' or 'slaves.'

"By way of Great Slave Lake the traveller reached the land of the Slave Indians, and to the babel of tongues is added still another dialect. Revolution, the most important settlement on the southern shore, is the meeting place of the Indian traders from east and west, north and south. The Southern Indians, the Crees and Chipewyans, are represented chiefly by the imported servants of the traders, this point marking the northern limit of the influence of both these nations. Three highways lead from Resolution—one to the northwest following the waters of the Mackenzie to Beaufort Sea, one due north to the country of the Yellow Knife Indians, and the third east to the lakes and plains of the Arctic prairies and the home of the caribou and musk ox.

FORT RELIANCE.

"To the east a cruise of 200 miles along the shores of Great Slave Lake—one of the great lakes of the world with an approximate area of 11,500 square miles—brings the traveller to Fort Reliance. From this point the trail leads overland until the headwaters of rivers flowing to Hudson Bay are reached. Here are the great Arctic prairies, a country well flowered by nature except with trees.

"From any point of vantage can be seen an apparently endless expanse of grass, moss and Arctic flowers. Sparkling lakes nestle in the valleys, and winding streams disturb the quiet of the scene as they tumble their way down their many rapids to mingle their waters finally with those of far-distant Hudson Bay.

"The rolling country is the home of the caribou, the wolf, the Arctic fox and the remnants of the few remaining herds of musk ox to be found on the mainland. The streams and lakes are plentifully stocked with fish, and their shores are the nesting grounds of many varieties of waterfowl. The potential wealth of this Arctic plains area lies in its undoubted ability to yield liberal supplies of meat and hides from caribou and other hardy animals, fish from its waters and fur from its hills.

"Humanity is but poorly represented on the Arctic prairies. A small band of Indians, who winter along the northern fringe of timber, each Spring follows the caribou in their northern migration, and lives entirely upon caribou meat and fish. Eskimo from the shores of Coronation Gulf to the northwest and coastal points to the eastward move each Spring toward the Hibernia River to meet the same migration on its way to the Arctic coast. The only permanent residents are three bands of Eskimo who base their operations on the shores of Kasba, Sigolgyusk and Baker Lakes, from which points they eke out a living from the eastern sections of these northern plains.

WHERE FRANKLIN CAMPED

"Starting again from Resolution, another road leads to Rae, on a northern arm of Great Slave Lake and the land of the Dog Rib Indians. In 1921 Franklin and his party followed their route to the North. A winter camp was built half way between Great Slave and Great Bear Lakes, which was known as Fort Enterprise. From this point a season was spent in exploration of the Coppermine River and the shores of Coronation Gulf. Part of this route was also followed by Hearne from Hudson's Bay Company, when from 1769 to 1772 he pioneered the valley of the Coppermine River. One of the great tragedies of the North was enacted during this trip, when the Indians who accompanied Hearne massacred more than twenty defenseless Eskimo men, women and children, camped at a point since known as Bloody Fall, on the lower reach of the Coppermine.

"During the past winter a unique event occurred in the vicinity of Fort Enterprise, about 150 miles north of Great Slave Lake, the spot where Sir John Franklin, with Lieutenant Back, spent such a terrible year of hunger and privation in 1821 and 1822. Two years ago, while an official of the Canadian Government was making a patrol from the bottom of Bathurst Inlet, 500 miles over a bleak and desolate territory to Rae, he had with him a young Eskimo youth from Coronation Gulf. They had many adventures on the way, but, on reaching Rae, the young Eskimo was delighted at what appeared to him a veritable metropolis, although it cannot boast of more than half a hundred people.

"So enamored with the place was the youth that he wanted to remain, forgetting entirely the pretty wife he had left in a distant igloo. The official, however, had no intention of permitting the youth to remain, for, had he done so, the lad's tribesmen would have assumed that the white man had killed him, and so would probably have taken his own life in retaliation.

A PEACE MEETING

"When they finally returned to Bathurst Inlet the young native must have told his tribesmen how well they had been treated by the Indians and, as a result, the Eskimo in a body appeared shortly after Christmas at Fort Enterprise. Here, though face to face with their traditional enemies, the Indians, a ten-day powwow of feast and dance took the place of bloody war.

"It was the first occasion on record where groups of Eskimos and Indians from these districts have buried the hatchet, and is in marked contrast to the warlike attitude of the time of Hearne.

"The Dog Rib Indians are one of the larger tribes of the North. Long association with the white trader has advanced them to a life of semi-civilization, but they still depend upon the wild life of the country for an existence. As they wander over a wide country of rocky hills, some of which are timbered, though sparsely, their harvest consists of fur, fish, caribou and moose, with rabbits to fill in periods when larger game is not available. Much of this area has been reserved by the government of Canada as a hunting and trapping ground for the exclusive use of the natives.

"To the west and north of Resolution lies the valley of the Mackenzie River. Hay River, a settlement lying near Great Slave Lake in the broad valley of the river from which the community takes its name, is the home of a well-conducted boarding school, two missions and several trading establishments.

"Providence lies on a level plain on the bank of the Mackenzie. The buildings of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, of the mission with its boarding school for native children, and of the several trading companies are practically the only permanent structures in the settlement. At points further south the Indian and half-breed trappers have built for themselves cabins from which they pursue their activities, but the natives of the Providence district are still the itinerant people of a hundred years ago. Many of them are born, live and die in their native tepees and brush camps.

NAVIGATION UNINTERRUPTED

"Between Providence and Simpson on the way north the river narrows and runs swiftly, but navigation is uninterrupted. Simpson is located on a large island just below the confluence of the Liard and the Mackenzie Rivers. It is one of the larger settlements of the Territories, and was at one time the trade headquarters for the whole valley of the Mackenzie. Originally a typical Hudson's Bay Company fort, dating from the early days of the last century, it has grown to be a prosperous settlement with missions, hospitals, schools, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police post, a government wireless station, a number of trading establishments and a government Indian agency which conducts an experimental farm. The surrounding country, consisting of rolling hills lightly covered with timber, has up to date produced little but fur, though it is not without promise for the future. The Rocky Mountains are less than 100 miles to the northwest, and far back in the mountain lies a valley about which little is known beyond the fact that in it hot springs are so numerous that its temperature has been materially affected. While the surrounding country suffers from a somewhat rigorous climate, the 'semi-tropical valley,' as it has come to be known, sees but little snow and is the winter home of a great variety of wild life.

"The Liard River is the highway serving the territory to the west. It boasts of a steamboat service, adequate to the needs of the country, which each year carries a wealth of high-grade furs to the markets of the world. The upper reaches of the Liard, penetrating far into the mountain ranges, connect through British Columbia with established routes of travel leading to the Pacific Coast.

"Sixty miles below Simpson the Mackenzie enters a bolder and more rugged country, and for many miles the traveler is regaled with true Western mountain scenery. When the river swings back to the foothills, Wrigley, a fur post active enough in winter but presenting little of interest during the open season, is passed, and the journey is continued to Norman. This settlement stands on the high banks of the Mackenzie at the mouth of Great Bear River. The usual essentials of a northern post are here in evidence. The country, east and west for many miles, is tributary to this post.

"The Great Bear River is the highway to Great Bear Lake and the country beyond as far as Coronation Gulf, while to the west an overland trail follows the valley of the Gravel River to the headwaters of the Stewart River and on to the Yukon. The Great Bear River is shallow and swift, but can be ascended by suitably constructed power boats. Great Bear Lake is the largest lake in the northland, covering an area of something like 12,100 square miles, but its use as a transport route is limited to not more than three months in each season, as it is icebound for the rest of the year.

"Much of interest centres around Norman. Not only is it the trade centre of a large and productive district, but the scenic and mineral resources are also outstanding. A few miles from the settlement lie lignitic coal beds of doubtful commercial importance, but spectacular, having burned continuously at least since the first exploration of the river by Mackenzie in 1789. To the north of the post lies a prominent mountain known as Bear Rock, and along the western horizon lie the bold peaks of the Rocky Mountains. The burning of the coal seams and the three peculiar red stains, probably caused by oxide or iron, which show on the face of Bear Rock have given rise to a typical Indian legend.

"Many years ago, according to the story, both the people and the game of this area were giants of their kind. A giant hunter armed with bow and arrows, while standing on Bear Rock, saw a colony of giant beaver in Bear River. With his arrows he secured three of these, but several of his arrows which had missed their mark remained embedded in the river bottom, but one end still showing above the water. As in all the northern rivers sunken trees are to be seen, the story-teller points out the giant arrows without difficulty. The hunter then skinned three of the beaver and spread the skins on the face of Bear Rock to dry; the blood left the three stains in the shape of the three beaver skins. Taking some of the beaver meat to the point where the coal now burns, the hunter made a fire to cook a meal, but the fire burned so fiercely that the ground became ignited and has been burning ever since.

"Fifty miles below Norman there is every evidence of an oil field of economic importance, but the cost of a pipeline or other means of transportation prohibits, for the present, its development on any major scale. It has given promise enough to suggest the establishment of a small refinery for the production of gasoline and oil fuel to supply the local demands.

"Further north the river flows through a canyon known as the Rapids, whose white limestone walls rise 150 feet above the water. From the foot of the Rapids, Good Hope can be seen crowning a high point on the eastern side of the river. This settlement is sixteen miles south of the Arctic Circle and is a large and prosperous fur trading centre. It is also the northern limit of the Hare Indian nation, as at the next settlement (Arctic Red River) their language will be understood only with difficulty, that of the Loucheux tribe having taken its place.

"The settlements of Arctic Red River and McPherson are the trading centres of the country entirely apart from the valley of the Mackenzie to the south. McPherson was established early in the last century, and was at one time the gateway to the Yukon Valley. An eighty-mile portage across a comparatively low-lying country leads to the headwaters of the Porcupine River, which joins the Yukon at Fort Yukon. The delta of the Mackenzie marks the north-eastern limits of a group of Indian tribes which spreads south and west to the valley of the Yukon.

"The most northerly post on the Mackenzie is on an island in the river delta that is known as 'Akivik,' meaning, in the Eskimo language 'Where the bear abounds.' Here the sun in summer is visible throughout each of the twenty-four hours, and here is another important boundary between native races—the meeting point of Indian and Eskimo. Originally this area was controlled entirely by the Eskimo, but the Indians following the white man have extended their hunting grounds to the north, and the Eskimo are gradually retreating to the Arctic coast line.

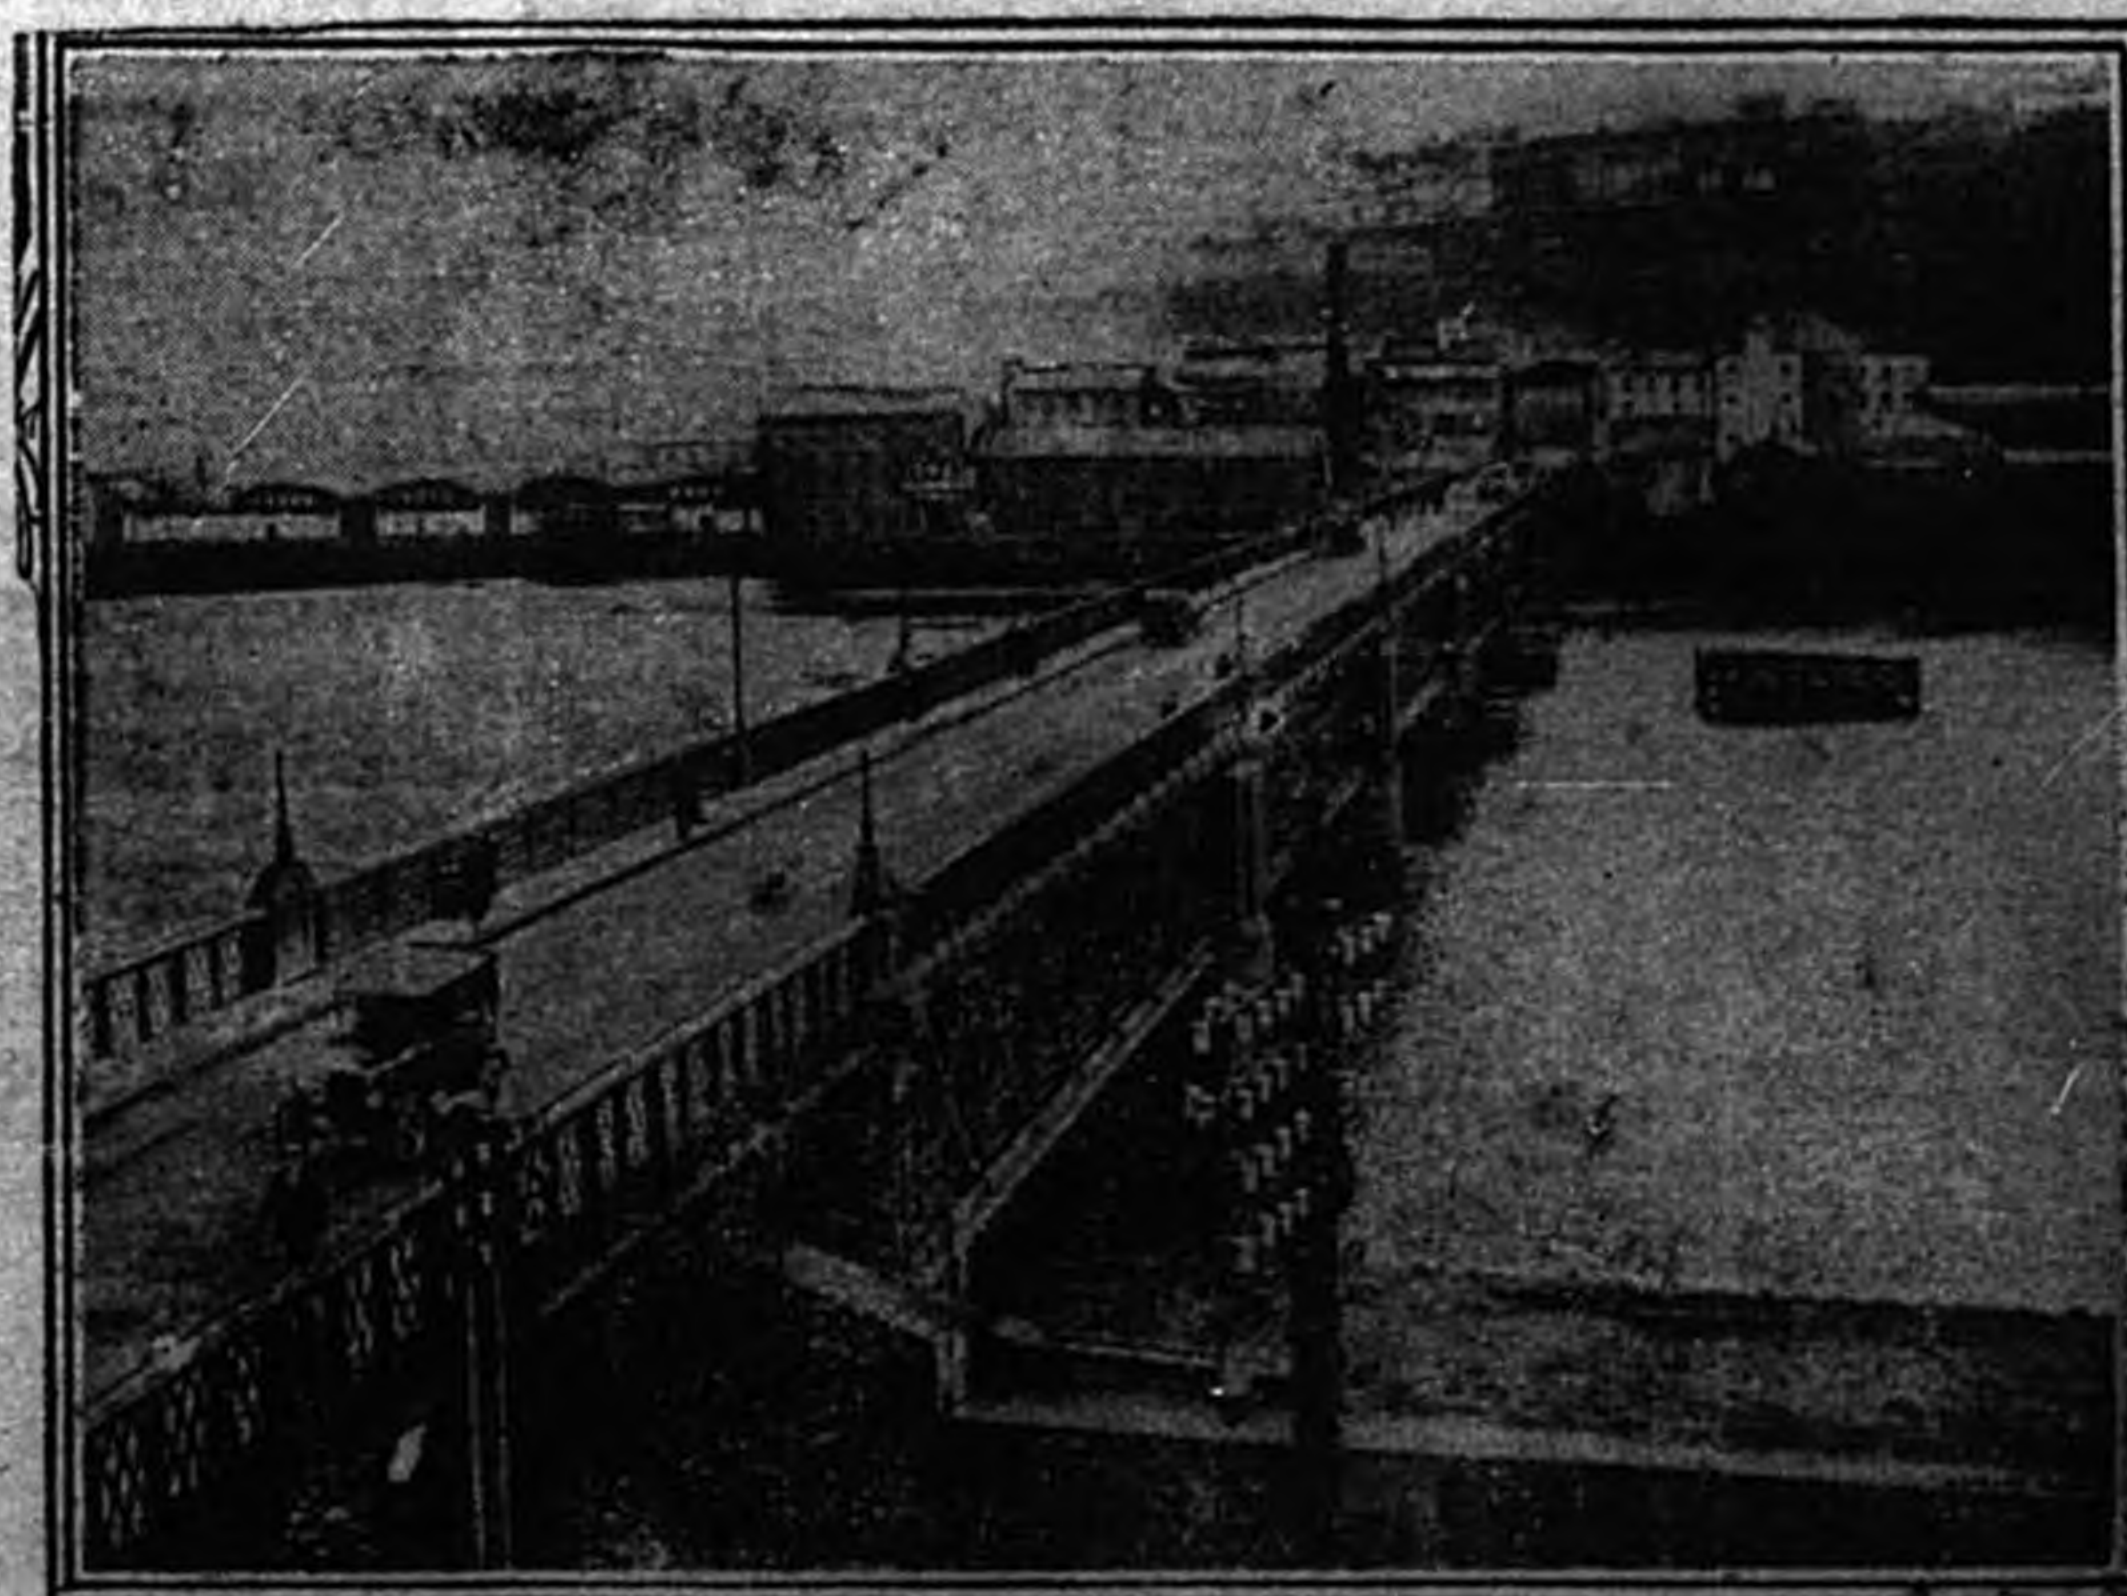

"Akivik is also the junction of two transportation routes, one of which follows the Mackenzie Valley, while the other is the ocean route from Pacific Coast ports which leads through Bering Sea and along the northern coast of Alaska. Both routes have their drawbacks. The cost via the river route is excessive, and on the ocean route there is the ever-present danger of loss of both ship and cargo when rounding the northerly capes of Alaska.

"The shores of Beaufort Sea are still the undisputed heritage of the Eskimo. Between the Alaska boundary and the eastern end of the delta of the Mackenzie lie four settlements—Demarcation, Point Herschel, Shingle Point and Kittigazuit—whose inhabitants, living largely on the resources of the country, draw their harvest from both land and sea. The hills produce caribou, which meat both food and winter clothing; from the lakes and streams the natives secure fish, while the ocean supplies more fish and various kinds of seal and white whale, which solve the problem for materials for boats, tents and footwear and add to the food supply. While tree life is no longer in evidence, the heavy drift from the Mackenzie has stored the beaches with fuel adequate for many years to come, placing the Eskimos of this area in a different position from their brothers to the east, who are largely dependent upon sea-mammal oil for heat and light.

"Both the eastern and western groups received their first impression of civilization from the whalers, while those of the central area are only now drawing their first knowledge of the world from the fur traders from the south. The influences prior to the white invasion are still stamped on all in clothing, accoutrements and home life. These differences are, however, entirely regional; the language throughout the Eskimo world is basically the same; and a study of the folklore proves the common origin of the Eskimo people from Siberia to Greenland.

"The government of Canada is confronted with a complex problem in the administration of the Far North, but, in so far as it is possible, the various situations have been met as they have arisen. Communication is maintained by a well-organized mail service and an efficient system of wireless telegraphy operation stations at Edmonton, in Alberta; at Fort Smith, Resolution, Simpson and Akivik in the Northwest Territories, and at Herschel Island, Dawson and Mayo in the Yukon. Schools and hospitals are subsidized, relief is given to the sick and destitute, game sanctuaries are maintained while wild life is molested by no one, and many thousands of square miles of territory are set aside as hunting and trapping grounds for the sole use of the native population.

Mr. H. Whissell returned last Thursday from a four weeks motor trip with his family down to Gaspé, having covered some 1600 miles. He reports a wonderful outing and is now ready with renewed energy to attend the wants of his customers at his store on Bethany Street.

REX THEATRE ALMOST READY.

The New Rex on Main Street has just been inspected by the Provincial Government and proclaimed one of the strongest and best theatres in the Province. Saturday, July 6th. has been set for the Grand Opening and a special program has been arranged. Don't miss the opening.

The Quebec Liquor Commission opened their new store on Saturday, but there appeared to be no special rush as anticipated by many. We understand Mr. Wilfred Jolicoeur is the appointed representative of the Government with Mr. Parizeau, of Carillon as assistant. "Wilfred" has held the position of traffic constable for several years, and his work has always proven satisfactory, but he will doubtless find it an agreeable change to be in the store on regular time, rather than pounding the roads on his cycle at all hours of day and night.

Just recovering from a painful accident by having his eye burnt with lime, Mr. James Hay met with another accident on Monday morning by being thrown from his express while driving to the station with his milk. Mr. Tattersall, of Mass., who had been attending the Fair and had purchased a number of cattle, was driving with him when the rig crumpled and threw them to the ground where it was found that both men had received compound fractures of the leg. The were tended by Drs. Drew and Mason and driven in by special express to the Royal Victoria Hospital.

A congregational meeting of the United Church Lachute, was held on Monday night, for the purpose of electing a minister to fill the vacancy now existing. Quite a number of names were before the meeting, and the first ballot resulted in the unanimous election of Rev. W. B. Rosborough, B.A., B.D. of Amherst, N. S. of St. Stephens Church. Mr. Rosborough has been very highly recommended and bears splendid record and there is little doubt but that he will accept the call. The induction it is hoped will take place late in July.

A pleasing feature at the close of the Church meeting was the presentation of a solid leather club bag to the Rev. A. G. MacKinnon, accompanied by a substantial gift of money and a sterling silver brush and comb was also received by Mrs. MacKinnon. The presentation was made by Mr. Arthur McQuat on behalf of the Church members, and it came as a great surprise to the Rev. gentleman who after a few moments was able to fittingly respond, in which he extended his deep gratitude for all the many kindnesses extended to him during his pastorate of eight years. Refreshments were served at the close.

A large number of the members of the United Church, Brownsburg gathered together in their church, on Tuesday evening, for a farewell social to the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Cassidy who leave this week to make their home in Montreal. After a few speeches had been made with expressions of regret at their departure Mr. T. J. Anderson presented them with a leather wallet containing a considerable sum of money. The Reverend gentleman responded in his usual happy manner, leaving with them his good wishes for his successor. Refreshments were served by the Ladies of the Church.

On Tuesday evening of this week, the choir members of St. Simeon's Church were entertained with their friends, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stansfield.

The party enjoyed many selected games that created much fun and laughter, and a pleasant period of dancing was also spent. After refreshments had been served, the main item of the programme took place, which consisted of a presentation to Miss Mildred Valpy, organist of the church, who is about to leave for her home in Gaspé. The present was a lovely three piece Pyralin Toilet Set, given by the members of the choir.

It was indeed a pleasant surprise for Miss Valpy, and she thanked her co-operates for the way they had remembered her.

WEDDING BELLS SEALE — BENNETT.

On Wednesday, June 12th, the wedding of Miss Ida Seale, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Seale, of Morin Heights, Que., to Mr. Herbert L. Bennett, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bennett, of Harrington, Que., took place at 3 o'clock in H. M. Church, Montreal; the ceremony being performed by the Rev. John Wat- chorn of Montreal. The bride who was given away by her father wore a powder blue gown trimmed with sand also hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses, maiden hair ferns and lilies-of-the-valley. After the ceremony the happy couple left for two weeks by motor to spend their honeymoon at Niagara Falls, Toronto, New York City and others points. On their return they will reside in Rivington, Que.

"The announcement at breakfast went well. After the golfing party had gone off, we had the morning in which to complete our arrangements. What I was chiefly concerned about was to establish as completely as possible the identity of Robert. For this reason I suggested to Mark that, when dressed, he should go out by the secret passage to the bowling green, and come back by the drive, taking care to enter into conversation with the lodge-keeper.

"In this way I would have two more witnesses of Robert's arrival—first the lodge-keeper, and secondly one of the gardeners whom I would have working on the front lawn. Mark, of course, was willing enough. He could practice his Australian accent on the lodge-keeper. It was really amusing to see how readily he fell into every suggestion which I made. Never was a killing more carefully planned by its victim.

"He changed into Robert's clothes in the office bedroom. This was the safest way—for both of us. When he was ready, he called me in, and I inspected him. It was extraordinary how well he looked the part. I suppose that the signs of his dissipation had already marked themselves on his face, but had been concealed hitherto by his mustache and beard; for now that he was clean-shaven they lay open to the world from which he had so carefully hidden them, and he was indeed the wastrel which he was pretending to be.

"Wonderful," I said to myself. "Nobody could possibly guess." "I peered into the hall. It was empty. We hurried across to the library; he got into the passage and made off. I went back to the bedroom, collected all his discarded clothes, did them up in a bundle and returned with them to the passage. Then I sat down in the hall and waited.

"You heard the evidence of Stevens, the maid. As soon as she was on her way to the Temple in search of Mark, I stepped into the office. My hand was in my side-pocket, and in my hand was the revolver.

"He began at once in his character of Robert—some rigmorale about working his passage over from Australia; a little private performance for my edification. Then in his natural voice, gloating over his well-planned retaliation on Miss Norris, he burst out, 'It's my turn now. You wait.' It was this which Elsie heard. She had no business to be there and she might have ruined everything, but as it turned out it was the luckiest thing which could have happened. For it was the one piece of evidence which I wanted; evidence other than my own that Mark and Robert were in the room together.

"I said nothing. I was not going to take the risk of being heard to speak in that room. I just smiled at the poor little fool, and took out my revolver and shot him. Then I went back into the library and waited—just as I said in my evidence.

"Can you imagine, Mr. Gillingham, the shock which your sudden appearance gave me? Can you imagine the feelings of a 'murderer' who has (as he thinks) planned for every possibility, and is then confronted suddenly with an utterly new problem? What difference would your coming make? I didn't know. Perhaps none; perhaps all. And I had forgotten to open the window!

"I don't know whether you will think my plan for killing Mark a clever one. Perhaps not. But if I do deserve any praise in the matter, I think I deserve it for the way I pulled myself together in the face of the unexpected catastrophe of your arrival. Yes, I got a window open, Mr. Gillingham, under your very nose; the right window, too, you were kind enough to say. And the keys—yes, that was clever of you, but I think I was cleverer.

"I deceived you over the keys, Mr. Gillingham, as I learnt when I took the liberty of listening to a conversation on the bowling-green between you and your friend Beverley. Where was I? Ah, you must have a look for that secret passage, Mr. Gillingham.

"But what am I saying? Did I deceive you at all? You have found out the secret—that Robert was Mark—and that is all that matters. How have you found out? I shall never know now. Where did I go wrong? Perhaps you have been deceiving me all the time. Perhaps you knew about the keys, about the window, even about the secret passage. You are a clever man, Mr. Gillingham.

"I had Mark's clothes on my hands. I might have left them in the passage, but the secret of this passage was now out. Miss Norris knew it. That was the weak point of my plan, perhaps, that Miss Norris had to know it. So I hid them in the pond, the inspector having obligingly dragged it for me first. A couple of keys joined them, but I kept the revolver. Fortunately, wasn't it, Mr. Gillingham?

"Goodbye, Mr. Gillingham. I'm sorry that your stay with us was not of a pleasant nature, but you understand the difficulties in which I was placed. Don't let Bill think too badly of me. He is a good fellow; look after him. He will be surprised. And thank you for letting me end my own way. I expect you did sympathize a little, you know. We might have been friends in another world—yeh and I, and I and she. Tell her what you like. Everything or nothing. You will know what is best. Good-bye, Mr. Gillingham.

"MATTHEW CAYLEY.
"I am lonely tonight without Mark. That's funny, isn't it?"

CHAPTER XXI.

"Good Lord!" said Bill, as he put down the letter. "What did you write to him? Was that last night? After I'd gone into Stanton?"

"Yes." "What did you say? That you'd discovered that Mark was Robert?"

"Yes. At least I said that this morning I should probably telegraph to Mr. Cartwright of Wimpole Street, and ask him to identify the body."

"Bill nodded thoughtfully and went back again to the letter.

"I see. And you told Cayley that you were telegraphing to Mark's dentist?"

"Yes. And then of course it was all up for him. Once we knew that Robert was Mark we knew everything."

"How did you know?"

"Antony got up from the breakfast table and began to fill his pipe.

"Well, let's see if I can go through my own mind again, and tell you how I guessed it. First of all, the clothes."

"Yes?"

"To Cayley the clothes seemed an enormously important clue. I felt certain that, in that case, the absence of the collar was unintentional. In collecting the clothes he had overlooked the collar. Why?"

"I took out my revolver and shot him."

"It was the one in the linen-basket?"

"Yes. It seemed probable. Why had Cayley put it there. The obvious answer was that he hadn't. Mark had put it there."

"Go on," said Bill eagerly.

"Well, why had Mark changed down there instead of in his bedroom? The only answer was that the fact of his changing had to be kept secret. When did he change? The only possible time was between lunch (when he would be seen by the servants) and the moment of Robert's arrival. And when did Cayley collect the clothes in a bundle? Again, the only answer was 'Before Robert's arrival.' So another x was wanted—to fit those three conditions."

"And the answer was that a murder was intended, even before Robert arrived?"

"Yes. Well now, it wasn't possible a murder could be intended without any more preparation than the changing into a different suit in which to escape. The thing was too childish. Also, if Robert was to be murdered, why go out of the way to announce his existence to you all? I began to feel now that Robert was an incident only; that the plot was a plot of Cayley's against Mark—either to get him to kill his brother, or to get his brother to kill him—and that for some inexplicable reason Mark seemed to be lending himself to the plot." He was silent for a little, and then said, almost to himself, 'I had seen the empty brandy bottles in that cupboard.'

"You never said anything about them," complained Bill.

"I only saw them afterward. I was looking for the collar, you remember. They came back to me afterward; I knew how Cayley would feel about it. . . . Poor devil!"

"Go on," said Bill.

"Well, then, we had the inquest, and of course I noticed the curious fact that Robert had asked his way at the second lodge and not at the first. So

Dry mouth and parched throat are grateful for the refreshing coolness of Wrigley's Spearmint.

Wrigley's whitens teeth, sweetens the mouth, clears the throat and aids digestion, while the act of chewing calms and soothes the nerves.

I talked to Amos and Parsons. That made it more curious. Amos told me that Robert had gone out of his way to speak to him.

"Parsons told me that his wife was out in their little garden at the first lodge all the afternoon, and was certain that Robert had never come past it. He also told me that Cayley had put him on to a job on the front lawn that afternoon. So I had another guess. Robert had used the secret passage—the passage which comes out into the park between the first and second lodges. Robert, then, had been in the house; it was a put-up job between Robert and Sayley. But how could Robert be there without Mark knowing? Obviously, Mark knew too. What did it all mean?"

"When was this?" interrupted Bill. "Just after the inquest—after you'd seen Amos and Parsons, of course?"

"Yes. I got up and left them, and came to look for you. I'd got back to the clothes then. Why did Mark change his clothes so secretly? Disguise? But then what about his face? That was much more important than clothes. His face, his beard—he'd have to shave off his beard—and then—oh, idiot! I saw you looking at that poster. Mark acting, Mark made up, Mark disguised. Oh, priceless idiot! Mark was Robert. . . . Matches, please."

"Yes," said Bill thoughtfully. "Yes. . . . But wait a moment. What about the 'Plough and Horses'?"

Antony looked comically at him.

"You'll never forgive me, Bill," he said.

"What do you mean?"

Antony sighed.

"It was a fake, Watson. I wanted you out of the way. I wanted to be alone. So—" he smiled and added, "Well, I knew you wanted a drink."

"The Duke of Wellington once slept in that bed," volunteered the landlord. "Um." "And sat in that very chair you are now sitting in." "And refused to eat this ham sandwich, I s'pose," interposed the tourist. "Well, I don't think I want it, either."

4000 miles for a better crude

In far Peru—more than 4,000 miles from the station where you fill with Marvelube—Imperial Oil secures the rich petroleum from which this better motor oil inherits its lubricating superiorities.

To bring this better crude to Canada in Imperial's own ships and transform it by special processes into Marvelube is an undertaking which is possible only because of Imperial Oil's immense resources and facilities.

But Marvelube, a better oil because of the natural lubricating superiorities of its carbon-free, sulphur-free base, is well worth the huge effort and investment.

Marvelube is preferred by aircraft operators because it ensures a greater margin of safety in the air and gives longer periods between engine overhauls. It is the favorite oil of more than a half million motorists in Canada, because it ensures smoother, more powerful, more economical operation.

There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car, truck or tractor. See the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil stations and dealers.

Bishop of London On Luck In Life

Mere Chance of Winning Exhibition at Oxford Determined Course

AIM AND PURPOSE

Just Slogging on Without Hope is Depressing Business

With all due respect to Lord Haldane, whose wonderful ability and work is being now fully appreciated I do not think that the question which he started in his Memoirs is really worth discussing at any length, observe the Bishop of London in this interesting article in the "London Daily Express." For good or for ill, we are what we are, we have done what we have done, and we have left behind us what cannot as a rule now be done.

But I expect that the answer which he gave to his distinguished friend would be the answer that most of us would give. He says: "We are apt greatly to under-rate the part which accident and good luck have played in the shaping of our careers." Even if we add a belief in an over-ruling Providence, few can deny by what apparent chances our whole lives have been affected.

It was the mere chance of winning an exhibition at Oxford which decided my father (who had six other sons to educate) to send me there and re-engage the whole family tradition, which had been "Trinity College, Cambridge." But for that I should never have been appointed Head of Oxford House, or in all probability come to London at all.

That is merely an illustration of apparent chances which have great effect upon one's life, and which one has no right to expect to happen again if one had to live one's life over again. I might easily have accepted the small family living offered me at the age of thirty, instead of making the great venture of a plunge into the unknown when I accepted the call to live in East London for nine years. I could not be bold enough to be sure that I could again have the security of a settled post at Lichfield and "face the music." I might, if I lived my life over again, have made "the great refusal."

The Unhappy People

But, as I have said, I honestly think such a question is not worth discussing at any length. What is much more serious is the second question: From the experience you have gained what are the lessons life has taught you?

Undoubtedly the first is the joy of congenial work. I always think that Aristotle's definition of happiness cannot be bettered, "The bloom on a successful energy." I believe that the only really unhappy people are the idle.

That is not a mere copybook maxim, but the result of a life's experience. Even in East London, so long as a man was not sweated or underpaid, he enjoyed his work. We spent our time at the Oxford House in helping him also to employ and enjoy his leisure, but the carpenter, the bootmaker and the weaver, who abound in Spitalfields, clearly enjoyed their work.

There was an old bootmaker in Bethnal Green who made my boots, all the time I was in Bethnal Green and at St. Paul's, and finally put up over his little dwelling, "Bootmaker to the Bishop of London." He enjoyed making these boots till the last day of his life, and bringing them up to Fulham Palace.

Achievement

Of course, the lamentable feature of modern industry is that the subdivision of work necessitated by machinery does, to a certain extent, destroy the joy of workmanship.

But, roughly speaking, it is the joy of a successful "energy" which is the dearest and most satisfying joy of life. I think that it must be felt to be, in one sense, "successful" to give the full joy. The world may know nothing of it, and the man himself may have no so-called "fame," but the sense of "something accomplished, something done," must be present with him, to give him the full joy.

Richard Wilson, who worked for thirty-six years in a poor parish in Stepney, said to me on his deathbed, "I suppose I am the happiest man who ever lived," and certainly when I buried him the wealth of affection and gratitude from his poor people may well have made him happy, and the same might be said of Father Wainwright, after his fifty-five years' work at St. Peter's, London Docks.

This really is, I think, the answer to the third question:

Is achievement the only way to peace of mind?

Certainly not, if you mean by it visible achievement which the world will applaud and crown with its approbation; but merely to slog on without hope and without any belief that it does the slightest good is a depressing business, and we bishops have to look carefully round to see if we are allowing any of our men to get into this hopeless state.

It really all comes round to a question of motive. What are we really aiming at in our lives? If we are really and frankly only considering this world and judging the worth of an action by its immediate effect, then we shall be terribly disappointed

If our efforts do not have some immediate result or bring us some visible credit; but, if we take a large view and are working for an unseen Task Master who has Eternity to work out His plans, and who allows us to do our little bit in the short span of life allotted to us, then "the mind is its own peace," and we are not unduly worried about immediate results.

There are some lines of Wendell Holmes I found written up in my dear old father's study after he was dead:

So might I, toiling morn to eve
Some purpose in my life fulfil
To live and move when I am still.
I ask not with that work combined
My name shall down the ages move,
But that my toil some end may find
Which man may bless and God approve.

This seems to sum up the situation.

Eckener's Skill Saved Zeppelin, Passenger Says

Water Ballast, Dumped as Ship is About to Strike Mountain, Avoided Crash

Parachutes For Life Belts

Dance on Board Ended by Grim Drama of the Skies

(The following story of the struggle of the Graf Zeppelin to reach safety was written by Alexander R. von Krynha, a passenger, for The Associated Press, from notes made while the dirigible was seeking a landing place.)

Cuers, France, May 18.—Dr. Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin en route to the United States, walked into the salon of the ship Thursday afternoon as the passengers were dancing merrily on the tunes of a phonograph and, striking a serious attitude, said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have bad news to impart to you. We must return to Friedrichshafen. There is some trouble with the motors, but there is no danger. Remain calm, we shall reach home safely Friday evening or Saturday morning."

The announcement came as a thunderstroke out of the clearest sky to the passengers, who were not aware of any difficulty to the motors. The dancing stopped immediately as the ship swung about to return to Barcelona.

Such was the dramatic manner in which the passengers of the Graf Zeppelin were made aware that their flight to the United States had failed. Then, after a long, hard pull over the Gulf of Lion and over the southern part of France, the Zeppelin fought for headway past Nîmes, Montelimar and Valence.

Just as the sun was setting in the troubled western hazy horizon Friday afternoon Captain Christian Biser, official German passenger, entered the salon as the ship was tacking about above Valence.

"Ladies and gentlemen: There is danger. Remove your bags and remain calm. We are forced to land." General silence greeted the announcement. All, or almost all, of the passengers made for the cabins to get their baggage, when one of the men passengers in a high-pitched voice exclaimed:

"What are you talking about?"

EVERYONE ELSE LAUGHED.

In spite of the tension of the moment, the other passengers who had understood the grim warning which had been spoken in German, broke out into a general roar of laughter.

It was then explained to the passenger, who understood no German, that there was trouble ahead and that the ship, unable to proceed, must land.

"That's all right with me," he replied. "Now I understand, it is quite all right."

With parachutes wrapped around their shoulders, instead of the usual lifebelts of steamships the passengers watched as the Zeppelin manoeuvred above Valence and Montelimar from 3.30 p.m. until 5 p.m. in the most unusual "lifeboat" drill ever held in the air.

BECOMES A MERE BALLOON.

The Graf Zeppelin by this time had completely lost all control of steering and was turned into a mere balloon, buffeted by the wind continually and drifting toward the Mediterranean in spite of the one motor that was still throbbing. Then suddenly this last motor stopped after several coughing spells, sputtered and died.

The dreaded minral, blowing from the northwest, was pushing the helpless Zeppelin toward the sea at a speed of forty miles an hour. The passengers, thoroughly alarmed, delegated one of their number to go to the navigation cabin where Dr. Eckener with his officers were sitting quietly in their seats. The doctor's son, Knud Eckener, was at the steering wheel. Dr. Eckener, in response to a question, said that it was imperative to find a landing field.

HEADED FOR MEDITERRANEAN

Flying before the wind and headed straight for the Mediterranean with only one motor to aid in the steering, the Graf Zeppelin went through the most momentous hour of the entire flight. Dr. Eckener himself directed his son at the steering wheel and the mechanics at the various levers, seeking to find favorable air currents.

The ship hopped up and down several hundred feet at times. Then suddenly straight ahead there loomed out of the deepening gloom of the evening the abrupt flank of a small mountain on which it appeared the ship must crash.

LEAPED OVER MOUNTAIN

While the passengers waited tensely, the ship suddenly leaped several hundred feet in the air like a trained steeplechaser. Everyone gasped until it was explained that Dr. Eckener, aware of the danger, had dumped a large amount of water ballast, thus lightening the ship.

The last thrill for the passengers came as the airship, flying before the wind and with all her motors silent, averaged fifty miles an hour en route to the landing field at Cuers. The passengers thought the ship was certain to be blown over the Mediterranean, but by skillful manoeuvring she came down and was quickly tethered by the strong hands of hundreds of men on the field.

A Mission

"The intellectual elite of each country has as its mission the improvement of the genius of that country, to manifest in their highest forms all the nuances of thought and feeling which characterize the personality of that country among others." But there is another mission which must also be filled; it is to understand profoundly the souls of these other peoples and to be in a way the interpreter of other peoples among one's own.—M. Painlevé, in the Revue de France.

It is typical of Colonel Lindbergh that he flies nonchalantly over a whole war to call on his fiancée.

All These Are Mine

All these are mine; these none can take from me—

The golden arrows of the rising sun
That pierce, at dawn, the long swell
Of the sea . . .
The chiming of evening bells when day is done.

All these are mine; Life's gifts of love to me,

My treasures fair which none may break or steal—

The winds of Springtime blowing light and free,
Sea foam beneath grey gulls that died and wheel.

If nevermore were I to bear or see,
Yet these were mine until life's latest day,
Securely locked within my memory—
Dawn, chiming bells, Spring winds and white sea spray.
—F. Robina Monkman, in "Willison's Monthly."

Inter-Empire Trade

Victoria Times (Lib.): Whatever the ultimate action of Congress may be, however, the Government at Ottawa should lose no time in making its plans for a more intensive development of inter-Empire trade. "Buy from those who buy from you!"—Glasgow's slogan in appreciation of Canada's huge shipbuilding orders—should guide us more in the future than it has in the past.

HOLIDAYS AND HEALTH

Health protection for the holiday-maker has come to be regarded as an important necessity. The extensive automobile traffic of recent years has caused tourist camps and highway refreshment booths to spring up in great numbers. Unless these tourist services are properly cared for they may be the means of spreading disease. Improper sanitary measures including polluted drinking water, fly nuisance, infected utensils, contaminated food and refreshments must all be avoided. In order that the tourist and others using these facilities on the highways may be safeguarded the Provincial Department of Health inspects all tourist camps and highway refreshment booths each year. Where conditions are found satisfactory and equivalent to the standards adopted by the Department conspicuous banners of approval are given. These are displayed in prominent positions by the camp or booth and indicate to the tourist where the safest and best services can be secured.

Water

Nothing requires more consideration than the water we drink when away from home. If contaminated, it may cause typhoid or other illness. A few simple precautions are all that are necessary.

Swimming

One of the summer's main attractions is swimming. Swimmers cannot easily avoid taking some water into the mouth, nose and ears; consequently the water should be as safe as that required for drinking purposes. All indoor and artificial pools must be chlorinated in order to protect the bathers. In open streams or lakes, on the other hand, it is seldom feasible to treat the water by chlorine as in closed pools. Under these conditions the bather must exercise discretion about the quality of the water in which he swims. Running streams or lakes may be receiving sewage or other contamination so close to the bathing area as to make it unsafe for use. Safety demands that you look around before you dive. Where possible, use artificial pools. They are treated for your safety.

Milk

Be careful about all food away from home, particularly milk. Milk is responsible for the spread of much sickness. Pasteurization protects the consumer against this danger. Safe milk is pasteurized. Where this cannot be secured it may be rendered safe by heating to 142 F. for 30 minutes. If raw milk must be used, get it from a dairy free from infectious diseases, and from cows that are free from tuberculosis.

Sanitary Conveniences

Out-door closets are the usual sanitary conveniences at camps and summer cottages. A pall closet—with lots of dry earth or ashes thrown on the contents after each visit—cleaned every week and made fly-proof—is more sanitary than a pit closet. A small quantity of kerosene added to the pall helps to keep it free from flies and odors. Flush closets are, of course, most desirable, but chemical toilets, employing a caustic solution, are well adapted for use at summer cottages. They can be had at a reasonable cost, and are installed either indoors or out. When given reasonable attention, they are fly-proof, free from odors, and quite satisfactory.

Foods and Fads

The Rev. the Hon. Edward Lytton in the Nineteenth Century (London). It is the fundamental conviction that because an ox which feeds on grass is very strong, therefore a man by stuffing himself with the twice-dead flesh of the animal will add some of its strength to his own. An impartial observer might suppose that if food is so important for muscle, the aspirant would imitate the ox in his feeding, and, instead of turning the noble beast into a gory mass of animal tissue, would ask if fruits, herbs, and greens were after all not the best and most natural food. Instead of which, what happens? He calls the vegetarians faddists and goes his way with a smile on his face, as from a problem solved! A faddist is a man who, on a point of not first-class importance, thinks and acts differently from the majority. The majority dub him with a name implying that he is wrong; while at the time acknowledging that they know nothing about the matter whatever, but secretly believing he is right.

Railway Construction

Windsor Border Cities Star (Ind. Lib.): One of the most optimistic signs in Canada today is the energy being displayed by both the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways towards branching out and expanding their services. Each company looks forward to a busy season and hundreds of miles of new tracks are to be started. Particularly in the West is there intense activity. Not only does this centre around the Hudson Bay route, but both lines are making plans to give better service to the mines and the farms.

THIS CAN'T BE TRUE

"Who is that behind us?" asked the motorist of a man beside him.

"Only a woman driver," said the man beside him.

The motorist quickly turned the wheel to the right, the car bit the ditch, hopped into the mud, turned turtle a couple of times and smashed. The motorist got out from beneath the wreck and yelled:

"Thank heaven we escaped."

Creaming Power of Various Milks

Dairy specialists at the New York Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva have been investigating the factors that affect the creaming ability of milk, we are told in the New York "Times." A comparison has been made of Holstein and Jersey cows, with the result that milk from these breeds has been found to have equal capacities for producing cream in proportion to the amount of fat in the milk. "Milk from Jersey and Holstein cows has the power to produce four per cent. of cream layer for each per cent. of fat in the milk," says J. C. Marquardt, dairy specialist at the station, who points out that the establishment of a creaming power factor for normal milk is an important advance in the study, and that knowledge gained from further studies is expected to prove of special interest to the dairy industry. He adds:

"An exhaustive study of the factors affecting the creaming of milk has been undertaken in the station dairy laboratory. The first step in this work was to establish a creaming power factor for normal milk of a high and a low fat content. For this purpose milk from a Jersey and from a Holstein herd has been used."

"It is possible to conclude from these studies that the normal creaming power of Holstein and Jersey milk is equal when the layers of cream formed after twenty-four hours were measured. It was found, also, that normal Jersey and Holstein milk will produce approximately four per cent. of cream layer for each per cent. of fat in the milk when the latter is held at a low temperature."

"Holstein milk was found to cream more completely and uniformly during two and four-hour periods than does Jersey milk. The age of the cow, the season and the period of lactation did not seem to have any material influence on the creaming capacity of milk from either breed. The health of the animal, however, was a factor, for in most cases sick cows produced an abnormally deep cream layer."

Lachute Fair a Huge Success

The Lachute Fair will go on record as being the very best in the history of the Society. There were many ominous looking clouds at the outset and a heavy storm on Thursday night after the show and it looked as if we were to meet our usual inclement weather, but fortune smiled upon us and the Fair had four royal days.

Nothing but admiration for the wonderful transformation of the grounds and buildings was heard and the ears of President, J. T. Ayers would certainly have been burning could he have listened to the many tributes of appreciation that were recorded to him for his generous help in placing the Lachute Fair in its present enviable position.

Lachute is now on the map and because of the splendid exhibits of the Ayers Limited which comprised some 120 varieties of beautiful fleecy blankets, rugs, comforters, etc., in all sizes, shades and colorings, there are many who have been enlightened as to what is going on around them and just what this firm means to Lachute. Then there was the wonderfully interesting and instructive exhibit of the Canadian Explosives Company, representatives imparting information as to the manufacture of their varied lines of cartridges, fuses, and also of the Pyralin Products which comprise toilet articles, etc. Although not a Lachute product, Brownsburg is closely allied to us and we were proud of this County feature for our Fair.

Sir George and Lady Perley were present on Friday and remained over until Saturday and the Hon. J. L. Poirer, new Minister of Agriculture, who was here for Friday afternoon only, expressed his admiration and great pleasure as he wandered his way through the cattle sheds, stalls and buildings, his keen eyes taking in the splendid rows of cattle, horses, sheep, pigs and poultry in which he is more keenly interested than ever. Messrs. J. Dodd, Assistant Gen. Manager of the Bank of Montreal and W. W. Bruce, Supt. of Quebec Division of the Bank of Montreal; Mr. Caron and Mr. Ringham, of Ottawa, were welcome visitors and we were also glad to see with us President Ness, of the Ormstown Fair; Mr. McElroy of the Ottawa Fair, and many others from the Capitol at Ottawa, whose exhibition is to be from August 19th, to the 24th.

The grand stand performance provided an entertainment of real merit. The acts were both clean, clever and duly appreciative as was the music furnished by the Grenadier Guards Band and the Piper. The fireworks display proved an excellent attraction and made a wonderful finish to an already pleasant evening.

There was much of interest for everybody. Keen competition among the cattle breeders and horsemen, real excitement in the horse races where the track record was broken twice in same afternoon in the same race by Mare Lady Helen, driven by R. Johnson, of Sarnia, Ont., who paced the first heat of the 2.20 Thousand Dollar stake race in 2.9 1/2 and third heat in 2.9 1/2. The County race was also of great interest and was easily won by Wilfred Morrow, of Grenville, with Hal Garner, who trotted the three heats in 2.32 1/2, 2.29 1/2 and 2.30. The second win was by Tootsie owned by J. R. Monty and the third went to M. Lessard, all of Grenville.

The displays of the Magic Baking Powder and the Western Canada Flour Mills were of special interest. In the special offered by the former the prize was awarded to Mrs. E. Morin for best cake and a second prize for best biscuits. Mr. Berthiaume, sounded the praises for Purify Flour and dispensed freely the cooking receipt books to the great delight of the ladies. Then Mr. Keyes, of the famous Lowe Points was kept busy handing out the yard sticks and tape measures and much attention was drawn to the varied uses of the popular paints. As usual Ormes Limited had a splendid line of beautiful instruments and Mr. Dumais demonstrated the Frigidaire and the new Oilomatic oil heaters. Mr. H. M. Lavigne, J. W. Cottingham and the Gattineau Power, completed the building exhibits but outside Mr. G. Y. Deacon had a fine showing of cars, and other products as also did the Matthews Moody, of Terrebonne, and Welden Bros., of Calumet, Mr. Walker McArthur and Mr. John Simon also had interesting exhibits of milking machines, pumps, oil burners, etc.

The cost of a Suit isn't the Price on the invoice

It isn't the purchase price— it's the final cost that counts. The Final Cost of a Top Notch Suit at $27.00 is less, because of the better cloth values and workmanship embodied in them. We have just received 43 additional Spring and Summer patterns from Top Notch Tailors. We will be disappointed if you do not come in and look them over, and you will too—if you don't.

Scenes along the route. Sinclair Canyon, Calgary and the Locks of Sault Ste. Marie. Centre, as the Empress Hotel at Victoria will appear. Vancouver, Chateau Lake Louise

Dean Sinclair Laird of MacDonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue is better known as an educationist than a philanthropist, but he is really both. Some years ago he made a tour of the Canadian west. His time was more or less limited and in planning his itinerary he was obliged to miss several points he considered worth while and to spend more time than he thought necessary in places less interesting. While he made up his mind that this condition should not obtain if he made the trip again, he was greatly thrilled by his journey. The beauty and the wonder of the Canadian west deeply impressed him and he returned, as he says, with a more sympathetic understanding of the western people and problems and more thoroughly convinced that the education of a Canadian can not begin until he has seen his own country.

It was his idea that if a tour could be organized at reasonable cost, to cover all the important cities and resorts west of Toronto, and the participants were assured of relief from all the worries of travel arrangements, enough might be interested to warrant the running of a special train.

Thus the first "Dean Laird Special" came into existence and this year, for the sixth time, and in conjunction with the Canadian Pacific Railway the Dean is again organizing a de luxe all-expense tour which for a stated sum, affords the maximum of enjoyment and variety of scene and recreation that can be provided in three summer weeks.

Dean Laird devotes a great deal of time and energy to his tour and each year goes over much of the same ground, but he now knows the high spots in western travel, and by carrying on year after year he feels that he is making his contribution towards a greater and more united Canada. Altogether, Mr. Laird has piloted some fifteen hundred people through the great cities and scenes which lie between Montreal and Victoria—Banff, Lake Louise, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vancouver—over a diversified route. He has found that, while the travellers appreciate having a special train as a home and base, they appreciate the Great Lakes and optional motor runs, so that the steamships and the motor cars are very generously used by him.

The Dean is doing a great work and the only qualifications he demands from applicants or membership in his tour are companionship and the capacity for enjoyment.

double-drop frame and a wheelbase increased to 115 inches. Here is the riding ease for which all Studebaker cars are renowned.

And here is the economy which you have demanded—an economy which begins with low first cost and is carried through with remarkable thrift of fuel and oil and with traditional Studebaker sturdiness.

The New Dictator Straight Eight today awaits you. Come in—take the wheel—put it through its paces.

Here Is the Evidence of Fine Car Quality!

Straight eight motor; Fore-shock front springs; One-piece steel-core steering wheel; Non-shatterable windshield; Adjustable steering column and front seats; Amplified-action 4-wheel brakes; Double-drop frame.

HERE is an eight—a worthy companion car to the World Champion President and famous Commander Eights. The New Dictator Eight places abundant power at your command—adequate to every emergency—an engine which makes play of mile-a-minute speed, yet which is thrifty of oil and gas.

Studebaker engineers have enhanced quality and performance, beauty and economy. In The New Dictator these qualities fittingly complement that finest expression of modern motoring—the straight eight engine. Since the introduction of its line of straight eights, Studebaker has won every official stock car speed and endurance record.

"BARNETT BROTHERS THREE RING CIRCUS" and Trained Animal Shows.

An added attraction to the already wonderful programme of the Barnett Brothers Circus is Lillian Thelma Alton's Elglands Premier Prima Donna in her presentation - "LILAC TIME" a Gorgeous, Spectacle and Pageant, introducing hundreds of people and Animals. This precedes the Regular Circus Performance and without an extra charge a fete participated in by Women, children and animals, aside from the wonderful, glittering and brilliant wardrobe worn in this wonderful offering. The Management Guarantees that one ticket admits each person to this wonderful added feature without extra charge if in their seats in time to witness it.

The largest City, the smallest City or town the Barnett Brothers Circus is always the same. Exhibited as one complete unchanged whole, with out a single curtailment at either the afternoon or the evening performance. The Country having comparatively few holidays & where work too often shuts out play, the advent of the Barnett Brothers Shows, is hailed with boundless delight, then it is, that the young and the old far and near join hands to celebrate, for it is the one big circus day. One that Teems with Gleam, glitter and gold, the music of the Four Bands, the Quips of the Funny Clowns, the smell of the saw dust, and all the thousand thrills of spangle land.

Millions of people revel in the merriment and the wholesome fun of this annual folk and festive holiday. This is the Circus acknowledged by every one as the best loved, by all amusements lovers.

The Barnett Brothers Circus and trained animal shows will exhibit at Lachute, Friday, July 6th, for one day only, afternoon and evening at 2 and 8 p.m., doors open one hour earlier. Grand free street parade at noon, through the principal streets free exhibition on the show ground immediately after the parade. The Mammoth tents of this show are all waterproof and are lighted by electricity. Show located in Barron's Field.

Beatty Bros. LIMITED

Attention! Ladies of Lachute!

The representatives of the

are in town, and hope to have the pleasure of calling on every home to tell you the story of Canada's Premier Washer.

The Washer that is out-selling its next FIVE COMPETITORS and every home owes it to itself to know why this is so. A few minutes of your time given to a Beatty man now will mean THREE SAVINGS in the home in the future. Let us explain what these are: The BEATTY WASHER has no BELT to SLIP or BREAK; steel shaft drive and built like a steel bridge, with the most efficient washing action to be found in any washer; washing a tub of clothes clean in six minutes without hand-rubbing or boiling, including cuffs and collar bands.

Have a demonstration in your home without obligation to buy, and if the machine does not sell itself do not buy.

Call at John McFaul and Son's Store and see the Beatty man, or phone 8 and he will call and explain to you what a real washer means in the home.

FAREWELL SERMON
Preached at Brownsburg by Rev. T. Creighton Cassidy. I Cor. 16: 10.
In the good providence of God, we have come to the end of another conference year. To the end of four years term as pastor and people. I am going to say some things to you that a new pastor would not say, but I trust that the word spoken may do good and conduce to a successful year. Paul is sending Timotheus to Corinth with a letter of introduction to the people among whom he is to labor. In this letter he reminds them of their duty to the pastor, for there is as great a duty of the people to the pastor as of the pastor to the people. You may think this a strange text to preach from on this occasion, but trust as we proceed you will find it strangely appropriate.
First impressions count for a great deal. What impressions are you going to give your new pastor of you when he comes? There is a virtuous fear in the heart and mind of every pastor as he faces his people for the first time, a strange fear, the effect of Faith in God, and the greatness of the work he is to undertake. How he thinks and dwells upon the success of his work and prays that he may not be hindered in its accomplishment. A true minister has a natural timidity and fear about his work.
He will be anxious for the salvation of his people, that he may be a power amongst them, that is work may be owned of God. On the first sabbath when the minister has preached his first sermon, what remarks you hear from the member who thoroughly enjoyed the sermon down to the one who saw no good in it at all, and is quite certain the church cannot have a successful year under his ministry. Did you ever ask yourselves the question, "Does the minister like us? Is he pleased with us as a congregation? Do we suit him?" I am not speaking of this congregation personally, for I know your life and fellowship too well, but there are congregations conceited enough to think that the minister must of necessity like them.
The minister's words have a great deal to do with his success. The greatness and responsibility of his work press on him in a way you cannot understand. He is not a machine, wound up to run a certain number of years, and then run down; a machine which you then send away and get another. He is a man—he is human, with human longings and desires, a man called to certain work consecrated to God and dedicated to His Service, but a man whom you can help to success or failure. There is a mutual responsibility. You can make, if you will, any minister whatever he is, a power for good in your midst.
But you say, "How is it possible to see that he is without fear." You must make it your business, your duty, to remove all causes for fear. Do not think this will humble him before God. If a sermon does you good say so. What spirit, strength, inspiration, will he receive from your encouragement. Encouragement is a word of which we all know the value. Want of encouragement will make a minister's ministry a failure. Speak to your minister, welcome him to your midst, to your homes. Do not wait for an introduction. Remember he is the stranger. Visit him in his home. There is a loneliness in the life of a pastor that you cannot comprehend.
The fear in your pastor's heart may be caused by undue praise as by need less faultfinding with your late pastor. Do not do that. Don't speak to your new pastor of the weakness of your brethren. Let him find them out for himself. He must be impartial as a minister if he is to do real work. There is a danger in the church of playing as in politics, "the ins and the outs." There are some who are "in with the old pastor, and some who are out, and when the new pastor comes, the outs expect to be "in." You must all be the friends of the pastor if the church is to prosper. There is no fear in love. Don't sit in judgment on your minister, but pray for him. He needs your sympathy and your prayers. Take care of your minister's character. It is largely in your hands, the world will judge him as you judge him. God will judge the man or the woman who seeks to cast a stain upon the character of the minister. Don't talk him down, speak kindly of him in your home, to the children, to the young people. Speak kindly of him or not at all. This loyalty to your pastor will ensure your superlative success in your work. Some are asking, "What is the matter with the Church?" It is not reaching the masses. Brethren some church members are following God afar off. There is a lack of spirituality in the Church. Church officials are not deeply interested in God's Kingdom. We want a deeper, truer, spiritual life in our church officials as well as in our church members, the church needs a believing, consecrated ministry.
Dear friends, throughout this service I have been impressed, oppressed and depressed, by the thought that this is the last time I shall ever stand before you in the present relationship. This is the last sermon I shall preach as your pastor. I remember the kindness with which I have been received. The joy and privilege of a preacher. It is my chiefest joy to preach the gospel, to be Christ's ambassador, to carry the Divine Message. I have been called to the bedside of the sick and the dying. I have made the most of these opportunities. If not they are gone forever, they have made me better or worse. God's angel has kept an accurate record of them all, stored away in the archives of Eternity. These pages of life will be brought out again when the last year of all years stands crowned in the presence of God.
Can we say that we are satisfied with the record they will reveal when we are called to our final account? The closing term speaks to us of the importance of the higher life. The shroud of the dying conference term covers the graves of some who with us welcomed its birth. There are vacant pews in our church, empty chairs at the presidies; they were not vacant when I came four years ago. Many who were in health and happiness when I came are now in the far off world of spirits. Who shall say that are another term shall close we too may not be numbered with the slain of death? How important then that we should be prepared to go when God calls us away. We should be living not for today but for the future, not for the body but for the Soul. On a sun dial near Stirling in Scotland is this striking inscription. I mark time dost thou? I am a shadow's part thou." This sentiment is true of our lives here but in that higher life time shall be no more, and the real substance of which this life is but the shadow will be realized. While I am speaking, this watch is slowly and solemnly beating the funeral march of this conference year and our hearts are beating the death march of our existence. The ticking of the watch, and the throbbing of the heart seem to blend and the voice whispers "Watch and Pray."

Higher Duties Or Better Friends?

Frank H. Simonds in the Reviews of Reviews States the American Side of This Very Timely Topic

By FRANK H. SIMONDS

There have been many indications that tariff is going to furnish a new chapter in American foreign relations. From Canada and South America alike have come warnings of the certainty of evil consequences if our new Congress shall predicate its measures of farm relief upon a further and considerable raising of the tariff as it affects the agricultural and cattle interests of our American neighbors.

To-day we are faced by the fact that if we raise our tariff we make more difficult the task of our European debtors to pay us in goods and services the only method by which they can pay. And we are likewise confronted by the fact that if we raise our tariff in such ways as will affect our Canadian and South American neighbors, we destroy the famous goodwill recently brought about by Mr. Hoover's journey, and at the same time give unmistakable advantage to our European rivals in South American economic and political spheres.

The Canadian detail is most immediately important. Canada's exports to us are precisely those which would be most affected by any tariff made to please the western farmer. It is Canadian livestock, in particular, which is to be aimed at in all schemes so far proposed. But any blow aimed at Canada will lead to immediate and far-reaching reprisals.

Moreover, Canada is in the position to strike back. While American exports to Canada amount to nearly a billion annually, Canada sends us no more than half as much. And much of what Canada gets from Britain, Germany, and Belgium. In recent years we have overtaken Britain in the Canadian market; but it would require no considerable elevation of the tariff upon American goods, as contrasted with those of British manufacture, to permit John Bull to ride back to his old situation.

As for South America, I recall one expert in Latin American affairs who warned me that an increase of a few cents in the duty upon linseed oil would destroy the last lingering benefit incident to Mr. Hoover's excursion, at least in so far as Argentina is concerned. Nothing would be more easy or more natural for Argentina than a policy of reprisal, which would advantage the European nations eagerly seeking to regain lost ground and ready to make reciprocal tariff arrangements to please the Argentinians.

Moreover, what is to be looked for is not merely a spasmodic raising of tariffs among nations severely affected by our own action, but combined action of the American nations—to-day our most promising markets—and of the European countries which are our most active competitors.

There are a certain number of suffering farmers in our West and Northwest. A simple remedy for their troubles may lie in the raising of duties on such things as live cattle and wheat. But over against this relief must be set two items: an immediate contraction of the Canadian market for American manufactures, incident to reprisal and the worsening of our relations with Canada. The same situation manifestly exists in South America.

Is Canadian friendship worth keeping? Are Canadian markets of sufficient importance to be worth retaining? Is it a wise policy to make an American tariff system the foundation of European economic supremacy and political predominance in South America, predominance in the sense of friendship? These are questions which the present Congress must face.

Europe is steadily organizing a supreme attempt to recover its pre-eminence lost to the United States as a consequence of the war. It is definitely setting out to reduce our hold upon its own markets and to recapture those markets in Asia and both Americas which we have successfully invaded since 1914. It is prepared to offer all sorts of tariff advantages in its own markets in return for better rates than we have in foreign markets.

Therefore it is of vital importance to know whether the new Congress will limit itself to keeping the foreigner out of the American market, or whether it will consider the interests of the United States in foreign markets as well as the immediate difficulties of a single American industry, namely agriculture. Canada and South America are waiting to know the answer to this grave question.

It should be apparent that the time is at hand when the country and its rulers will have to appreciate the fact that new conditions require new treatment, that tariffs will have to be framed not merely with an eye to the interests of specific domestic producers, but quite as much to the general interest of American exporters in foreign markets. Anything which makes relations more difficult and less friendly, anything which even tends to lead the American countries to turn toward Europe, is extremely dangerous for us.

Considerable and crippling tariff changes adopted in the present Congress would certainly strengthen the hands of every political party and group in Canada and in South America hostile to the United States. Canada is our greatest present and prospective market. The Canadian people are our closest neighbors and the nation most friendly to us of all on this planet. While every sensible citizen of the United States recognizes that Canada is rapidly developing a national sentiment and a national soul utterly distinct, that all its evolution is toward complete independence of even the shadow of an American control, it remains true that there is a steadily expanding community of conception. We and the Canadians instinctively think the same thoughts about many subjects and primarily about European problems.

Both our friendship with Canada, and Canadian markets are involved in the question of farm relief which is coming up for final adjustment at Washington. Certainly nothing could be more absurd than a good-will tour of the President-elect, with all its immediate and prospective benefits, sacrificed to satisfy the demands of a few linseed-oil producers in the Northwest.

The proposal solemnly advanced, that we should put a heavy duty on bananas in order to encourage our people to consume oranges and apples instead, furnishes a fair sample of present-day tariff conceptions in many quarters. One can easily conceive how readily European countries would encourage banana imports, and in return obtain low duties for their own exports, which would enable them to replace the United States in the markets of the banana-raising countries and enlist the governments of those countries in their campaign to recover lost influence in Latin America.

For several generations tariff discussion has centered in the doctrine that the American workman must be protected against the cheap labor of Europe in our home market. But now our own tariff legislation may easily become the insuperable obstacle to the sale of the products of the American workman in those foreign markets which have become a vital circumstance in our domestic well-being.

Every European country which competes with us is watching the new Congress with divided emotions. While all will certainly protest our action as it affects them directly, they will with equal unanimity hail it as it restores to them their old customers and brings back their lost markets.

Canada to Take Part In Congress

P. B. Fowler to Attend International Chamber of Commerce Meeting

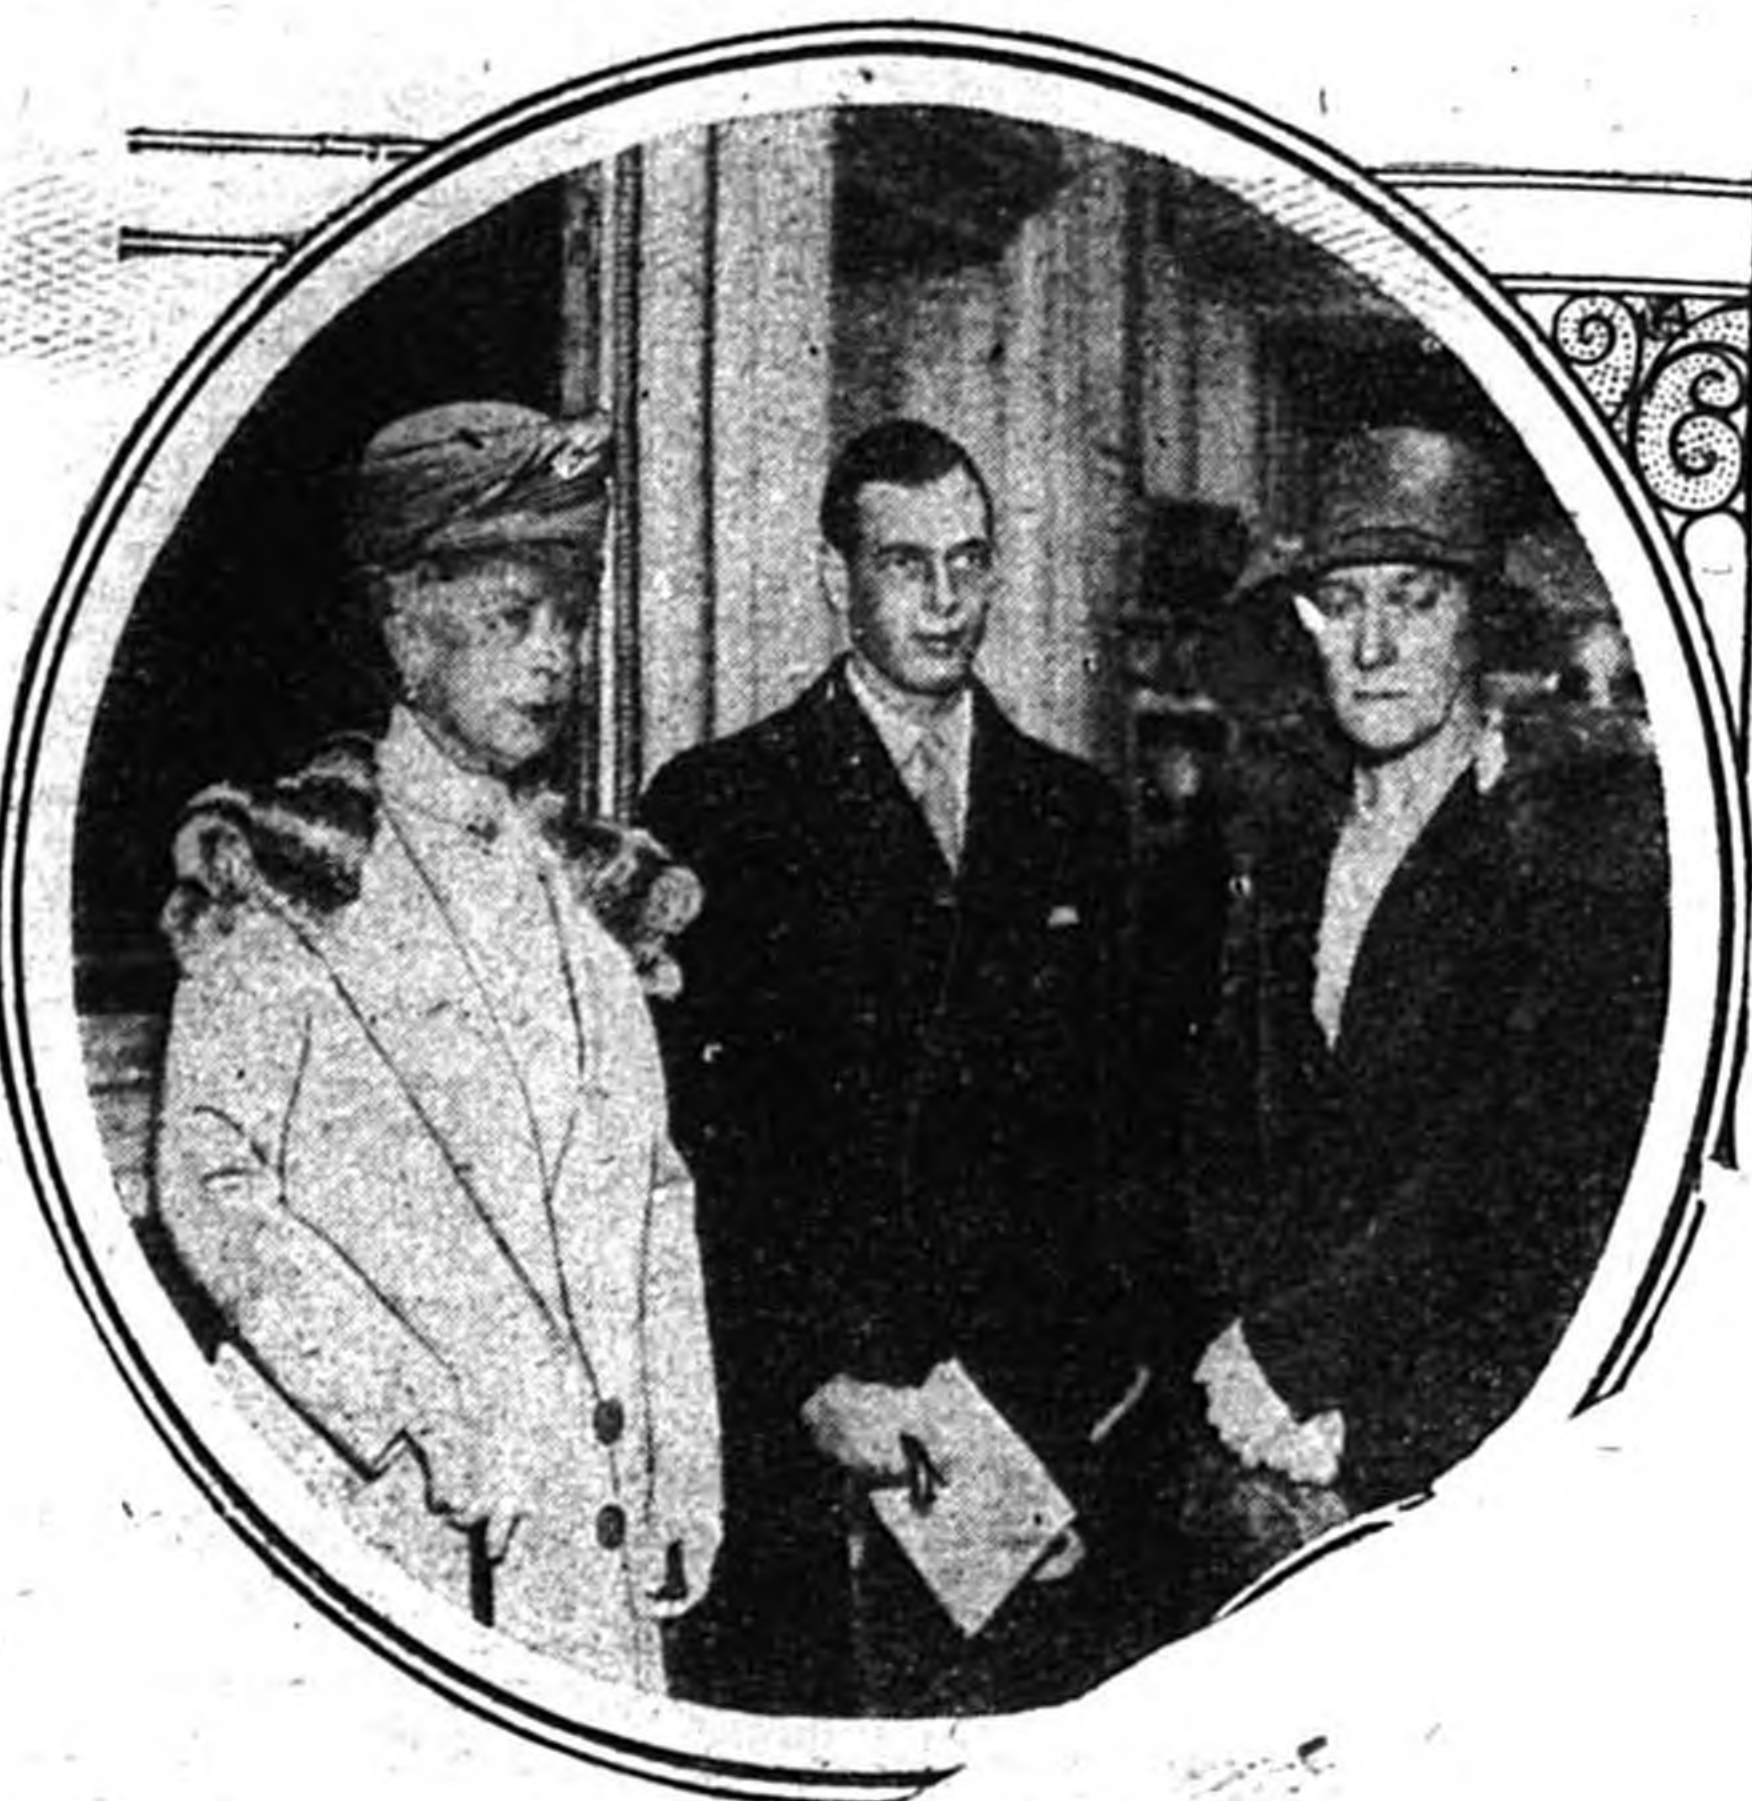

For the first time, Canada this year will take its place among the great countries of the world at the biennial congress of the International Chamber of Commerce at Amsterdam, Holland. As first of the men to represent Canada, P. B. Fowler, president of the Victoria, B.C., Chamber of Commerce, and manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in that city, has been chosen.

When the congress is held, from July 8 to 15, leading business men from 48 nations will be gathered together.

Belonging to the International chamber are 950 business organizations in addition to many business houses which have joined individually. The world-wide organization arose nine years ago out of the need for discussions on commercial and business problems of international importance.

Alberto Pirelli, president of the international chamber, who is a rubber manufacturer and a senator of Italy, sent a special invitation to the chairman of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Dr. John W. Ross, saying that it was felt imperative that Canada should be represented.

Duty On Live Cattle Would Affect Canada

Ottawa.—The amendment, which the house of representatives at Washington has placed in the new tariff bill to increase the duty on live cattle, if it becomes law, will have a very considerable effect on the Canadian cattle-raising industry. That seemed to be the consensus among members of Parliament from the districts most affected and from live stock officials of the Department of Agriculture, when questioned over the weekend.

The first result of the increase coming into effect would be to boost the prices in the United States just that much. At the present time there is a shortage of cattle in the United States and, as a result, of the demand there, a shortage has also been created in Canada so that live stock men here think the present prices in Canada would hold regardless of the duty and the United States consumers would pay the higher prices. Three or four years from now Canadian cattle raisers would more likely feel the pinch of the increase. If the tariff accomplishes the object which its framers have in view, it would encourage United States farmers to raise more cattle and this takes from three to four years.

Western members of Parliament expressed the opinion that the prairie farmers have already this spring turned more to cattle raising because of the comparatively low price of wheat and the high price of beef.

The increases which the amendment propose is larger than would appear at first glance. It would raise the tariff on the bulk of the cattle shipped by Canada to the United States from one and a half cents to two and a half cents a pound. The live cattle shipped across the line would average perhaps under nine cents a pound at Canadian yard prices, since a considerable portion of them are stockers. Accordingly, the two and one-half cent rate would be easily equal to a twenty-five per cent. ad valorem.

Maximum Effect
The amendment has been so drafted that the increase will have the maximum effect on Canadian shipments. As the law now stands, cattle weighing over 1,050 pounds meets a duty of two cents a pound, and under that, one and a half cents.

The new proposal would make the rate on cattle weighing over 800 pounds two and a half cents and under 800 pounds one and a half cents. The experts point out that of the 200,000 head of cattle which Canada shipped to the United States for the year ending March 31, 1928, and of the even greater numbers she has shipped since the bulk weighed between 800 and 1,050 pounds. They would therefore have a one-cent increase if the new proposal comes in force.

Few changes which the new bill proposes would have a greater ultimate effect on Canada than the amendment on live cattle. When the new bill was first made public one of the bright spots from a Canadian standpoint was the fact that live cattle rates were unchanged.

Cattle prices are as high as at any time since 1920, when they soared to a 15-cent-a-pound top in Chicago yards. Then they dropped suddenly to seven and a half cents. Last month the average top for steers in the Toronto yards was $10.40, as compared with $10.53 for April, 1928, and $8.42 for April, 1927. Average tops for stockers was $8.33 last month, $8.72 a year ago and $6.72 in April, 1927.

Canada sells United States cattle over a year old to the value of around $12,000,000, so that the proposed increase in the tariff wall is one to which considerable attention will doubtless be given.

On the other hand, the change in the butter rates does not cause much reaction locally because of the relatively small amount shipped out.

A bishop found one of his flock leaning in helpless drunkenness against a wall. "Wilkins!" cried the bishop inexpressibly shocked. "Oh, Wilkins! You in this state! I am sorry. I am sorry. I am sorry!" As the bishop was passing on Wilkins pulled himself together, and hiccupped after him—"Bishop. Bishop." The bishop hastened back in the hope of hearing a resolution of repentance. "Bishop, if you are really sorry, I'll forgive you."

Proposes Quota for Canadians

Bill Introduced in U.S. House Makes Further Restrictions

Washington.—A bill to make the quota restrictions of the Immigration Act of 1924 applicable to peoples of the Western Hemisphere including Canada and Newfoundland, was introduced in the House of Representatives last week by Adolf J. Sabath, Democrat, Illinois. The bill which began by mentioning Canada and Newfoundland and thereafter mentioned Mexico, Cuba and other countries, would permit wives and unmarried children under 18 years of age to follow the immigrant.

The bill was referred to the immigration committee and will probably not be considered by the House until the next session of Congress.

Representative Cabath said that immediate restriction on immigration from the countries mentioned in the bill was needed because he felt that it was easier for the United States to assimilate some Europeans than it was some of the immigrants from countries of the Western Hemisphere.

The suggestion that the quota provisions of the immigration law be made to apply to countries of the Western Hemisphere has been made from time to time by Members of Congress. The Immigration Act of 1924 placed immigration from European countries upon a basis proportionate to the number of natives of those countries living in the United States in 1890. The national origins clause since passed will go into effect July 1, unless postponed by legislation. It will change the date for calculation from 1890 to 1790, allowing greater immigration from Britain and less from Germany and Scandinavian countries.

"I suppose," said the casual acquaintance, the day after the wedding, "it was hard to lose your daughter?" "No," replied the bride's father. "It did seem as if it were going to be hard at one time, but she landed the fellow just as we were beginning to lose all hope."

Training Courses For Fliers to Open

Royal Canadian Air Force Has Class of 40 Men

Ottawa.—Training courses of the Royal Canadian Air Force will shortly be opened for 1929. A class of 40 will be given training in flying during the next three months. Later on courses will be undertaken in the mechanical and other branches of the force.

Commissioned pilots are of two general classes—permanent and non-permanent. Permanent commissioned pilots may expect a career in the Royal Canadian Air Force, whereas non-permanent pilots are appointed for limited periods of service, which may, from time to time, be renewed according to the demand for pilots. The pay of permanent and non-permanent pilots is, for all practical purposes, the same.

The main source of supply of prospective commissioned officers is the science faculties of Canadian universities and the Royal Military College. Undergraduates of these institutions who are British subjects, single, medically fit for full flying duties, under the age of 21 years and over 18 years at the commencement of the course, and who are recommended by university or Royal Military College authorities as likely to make efficient air force officers, are eligible for a course of flying training. This training is carried out during the summer vacation period for three successive years. Candidates selected for this course are appointed as provisional pilot officers in the non-permanent Royal Canadian Air Force. They are required to give an undertaking to complete both their college and air force courses before they can be appointed to the Royal Canadian Air Force, but are under no obligation to join the service after completion of training.

Throughout their training these officers are paid at the rate of $3 per day for the first year, $3.50 per day for the second year, $4 per day for the third year, plus clothing, quarters, rations, medical attention and transportation to and from their homes.

Application for the above training is made through the university or military college authorities, who have full information on the subject. Priority in selection is given to applicants who belong to the Canadian Officers Training Corps.

The Color Problem

Dublin Irish Times: General Hertzog has taken a bold stand. He announces that in no circumstances will his party consent to the placing of the black population on a par with the white. South Africa must remain a white man's country, and, for that reason, he declares, he is opposed unalterably to the suggestion that the Union should enter into federation with those Northern territories which, in his nature of things, always must remain "native" States. Well-meaning idealists have been trying to secure for the South African native complete political equality with the Europeans. General Hertzog refuses point blank to have anything to do with this suggestion.

Overcrowding of London

Truth (London): Two or three years ago London practically awoke to the fact that its innumerable and priceless "squares" were all in danger of being built over. If a certain number of them have now been rescued, it is only with the voluntary consent of its owners, not because the public had any power to act in its own defence. If the six acres in the heart of London occupied by the old Foundling Hospital and its gardens are not covered with tenement houses accommodating hundreds of families, it will be due to the generosity of one millionaire, not to the power of any public authority to avert the calamity, though a calamity every thinking person knows it would be. It is only by the creation and exercise of such power in regard to all new building and rebuilding that the overcrowding of London can be checked.

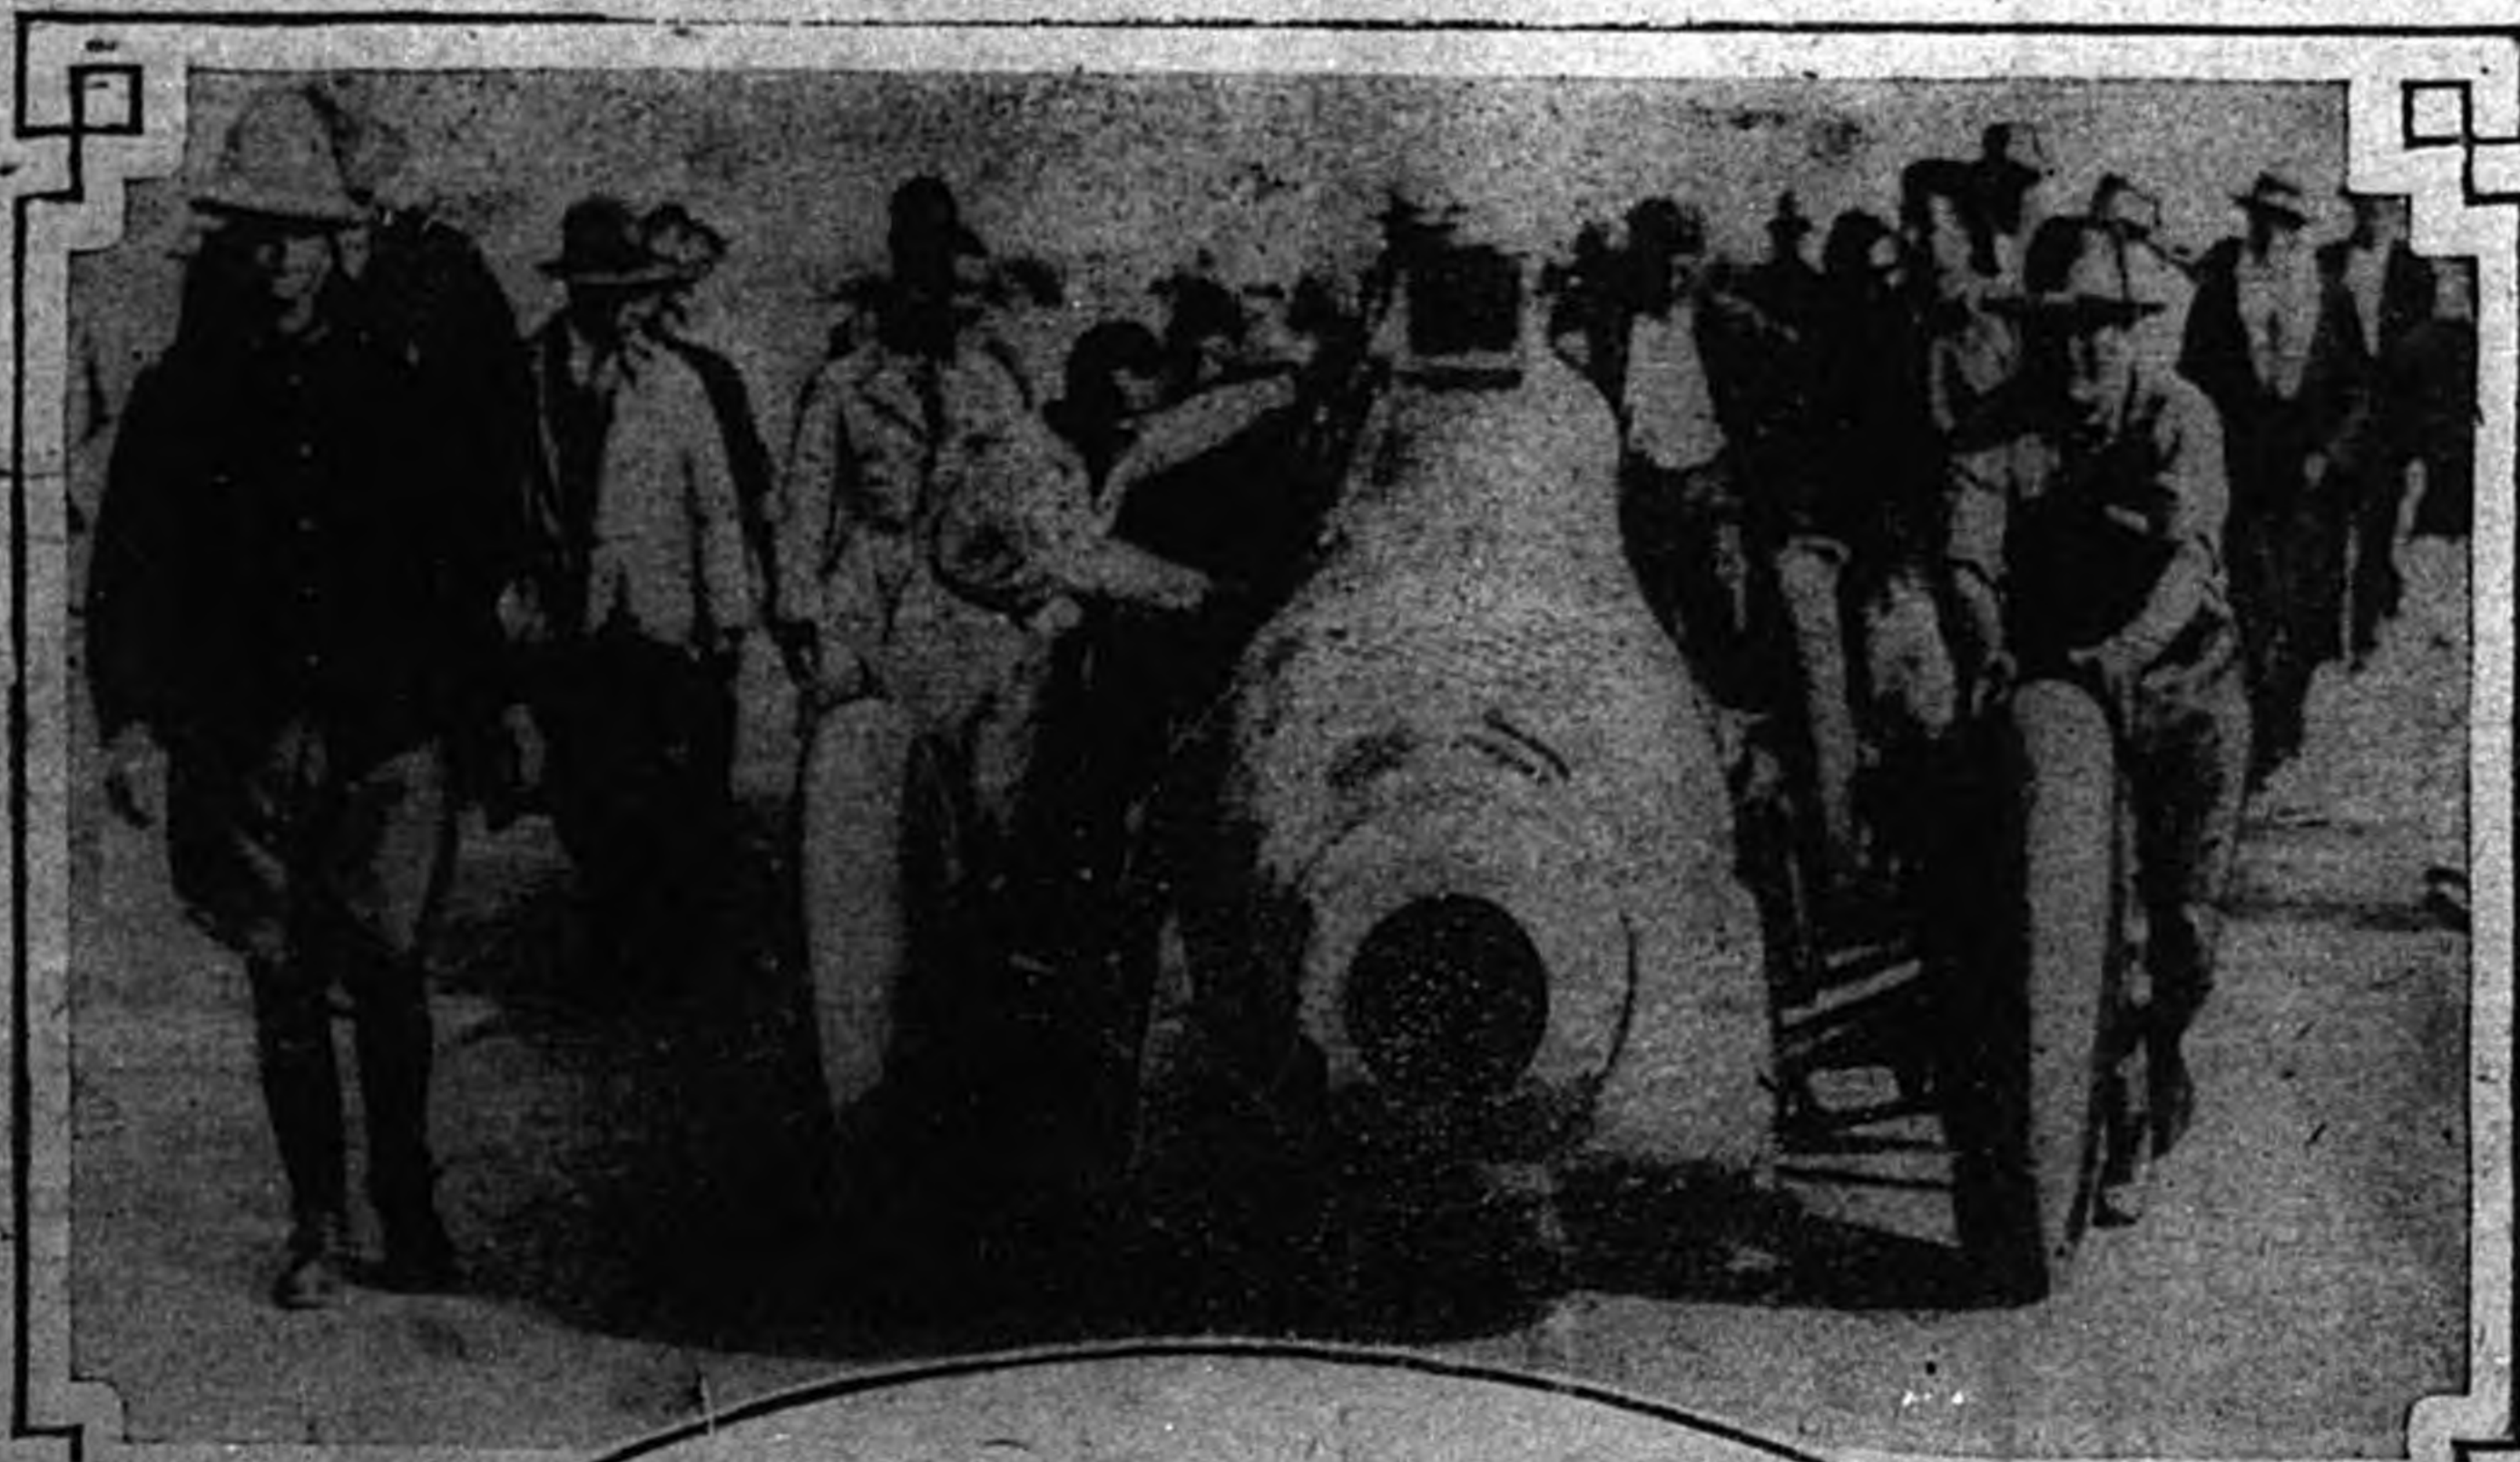

Killing No Murder

Manchester Guardian (Lim.): If President Hoover is really going to procure the general enforcement of Prohibition he will be the first to realize that he must employ means which are themselves lawful and which do not lead to a further contempt for the law. And the first necessity for this object is the reform of police methods. In this matter, as in others, one crime of violence breeds another, and the use of unnecessary violence by the police is not only a grave evil in itself but also a direct cause of the lawlessness which it is supposed to put down.

British Immigrants to the U.S.A.

Manitoba Free Press (Lib.): Taking into account the unrestricted immigration of native-born Canadians and the new European quotas, it would appear that at least 75 per cent. of the immigrants of the United States hereafter will come from countries flying the Union Jack. This should be a good thing for the United States, and it may be a good thing for both countries, as tending to maintain friendly relations between the British Empire and the United States.

Are you miserable and run-down?

WOMEN of all ages, all over the world, are finding new health in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Actual microscopic tests have shown that the medicinal elements contained in them increase the blood count and build up and revitalize the entire system. Miss Juliette Seguin, of Dalkeith, Ont., testifies as follows:—

"Two years ago I became weak, nervous and run-down. Various prescribed treatments did not help me. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and it was not long before I noticed a big improvement; and soon I was in the best of health. A year ago also my mother was badly run-down; her nerves were shattered and life became a burden. She began taking the pills and as a result she is in perfect health."

"A HOUSEHOLD NAME IN 54 COUNTRIES"

The Task is India

Manchester Guardian (Lib.): Enough has been said about the difference of caste, creed, language and race existing in these territories, but we are apt to think too little of other fundamental difficulties which have to be taken into consideration by statesmen who would construct a political system suitable to India's need. These are the difficulties which arise from the vastness of the country's population, combined with its poverty and ignorance, all three connected in a vicious circle. The sums required to enable the next generation in India barely to reach the standard of literacy are big enough to appal the financiers of New York. Yet India's credit depends ultimately on the productivity of her workers, and that productivity cannot be increased till they have received an education good enough to give them a new outlook on life.

The Pigs at Weaning Time

Hog raisers who make it a rule to remove the litters at four or five weeks of age can have no correct idea of the extent of the mistake they make. Unless one has new milk and is very skillful in feeding the young pigs they are bound to be given a "setback" that is quite unnecessary and which requires a lot of time and much feed to make up during the following weeks. Mr. Eric D. McGreer, Sheep and Swine Promoter of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, with headquarters in Kingston, in addressing special hog breeders' meetings in Eastern Ontario, recommended keeping the litters on their mothers for at least six weeks when two litters a year are being raised, or eight weeks when the litters are to come at periods wider apart.

To prepare the young pigs for weaning a good plan is to feed a mixture of equal parts of middlings and finely ground oats with the hails sifted out. It is well to start feeding the mixture dry a handful or so at a time. Skim milk should be given in a separate trough. This should be given sweet and not too cold during the first few weeks. Afterwards it may be fed slightly sour, but it is a mistake to feed sweet one day and sour the next as this is apt to bring about digestive troubles. After the pigs have been removed entirely from their mothers the daily ration for the next two or three months may well consist of a mixture of 1 part of sifted crushed oats, 1 part shorts, 1 part middlings, and 5 per cent. linseed oil meal—all soaked for 24 hours in skim milk. Another mixture may consist of equal parts of middlings and sifted crushed oats supplemented with 5 per cent. linseed oil meal; all mixed with skim milk. If skim milk is not available digester tankage, which can be purchased at feed stores, may be substituted at the rate of 6 per cent. to 8 per cent. of the meal ration.

It is a good plan with pen fed pigs to scatter a little dry grain, oats or cracked corn in the litter.

WHAT TO DO FOR YOUR BABY'S COLD

When the cold is in Baby's head, you can make his breathing easier by putting a few drops of liquid alcohol in his nostrils several times daily. But to throw off the cold completely, keep him warm, and make his bowels move freely. For this purpose, doctors advise Fletcher's Castoria, because it's purely vegetable and harmless. It acts as quickly as castor oil and doesn't gripe or sicken. Millions of mothers know how easily Castoria soothes crying, fretful babies and children to sleep; how quickly it relieves those common ailments, such as colic, gas, constipation, diarrhea, etc. To protect you from imitations, the Fletcher signature is on every bottle of genuine Castoria.

MADE HER BABY PLUMP AND WELL

Nothing makes a mother more grateful than a benefit conferred upon her child. Mothers everywhere who have used Baby's Own Tablets for their children speak in enthusiastic terms of them. For instance, Mrs. Zepherin Lavole, Three Rivers, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets are a wonderful medicine for little ones. They never fail to regulate the baby's stomach and bowels and make him plump and well. I always keep a box of the Tablets in the house and would advise all mothers to do likewise." Most of the ordinary ailments of childhood arise in the stomach and bowels, and can be quickly banished by Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets relieve constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers, expel worms, allay teething pains and promote healthful sleep. They are guaranteed to be free from injurious drugs and are safe even for the youngest and most delicate child. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

In court the other day, we listened to a smart-witness. The prosecuting attorney had encountered a rather difficult witness. At length, exasperated by the man's evasive answers, he asked him whether he was acquainted with any of the jury.

"Yes, sir," replied the witness; "more than half of them."

"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?" demanded the lay.

The other thought quickly. "If it comes to that," he replied, "I am willing to swear that I know more than all of 'em put together."

Duna
By Marjorie Pickthall.
When I was a little lad
With folly on my face
Fain was I for journeying
All the sea in ships.
But now across the southern swell,
Every dawn I hear
The little streams of Duna Running clear.
When I was a young man,
Before my beard was gray,
All to ships and sailormen
I gave my heart away.
But I'm weary of the sea-wind,
And I'm weary of the foam,
And the little stars of Duna
Call me home.

A Girl Worth Knowing

In these days of convention it's like a breeze from the ocean or the mountains to meet a girl who disdains the powder-puff and lipstick, and whose hand grasps a pistol or a sword much more readily than a golf club or tennis racket.

Such a girl is Tiger Dawn, the fascinating heroine of Selwyn Jepson's latest novel. Beautiful in face and form, she disdains to use her loveliness as a weapon, fighting for her right to a fortune with the valour of an adventurer of old.

"Tiger Dawn" is a book to read on holiday; it is full of that speedily movement and thrilling plot which every novel-reader likes. The characters live and love. So don't miss "Tiger Dawn," or you'll miss a good thing.

A Complacent Victim

Leo Maxse in the National Review (London): All political parties have done extremely badly by the British taxpayer, who, as we have frequently had occasion to point out, is "let down" over every international cash transaction, because while everybody is out to "do" him, he has no one to champion his interests except "internationalists," who are too "broad-minded" to adopt a "selfish" British standpoint, or sentimentalists, who conceive their whole duty as consisting in getting some other Power "on its legs" regardless of the fact that its main object is to knock us off ours.

You Must Enlist in the War Against Flies
If flies were only a nuisance, we wouldn't ask you so urgently to join in the fight against them. But flies are disease carriers. They carry germs of typhoid, cholera, etc., into your food. This is a danger not only for you but for the whole community.
You must act or be branded as a slacker. Now, it is proven that one of the most efficient and convenient means of exterminating the fly evil is the AEROXON HONEY FLY CATCHER.
IT HAS ALL THE ADVANTAGES:
Convenient:—because of the push-pin.
Hygienic:—once caught, the flies never get away to die elsewhere.

Does it pay to wear tires OUT?

It does NOT pay to run tires till they go to pieces—because——It's dangerous. A blowout may easily lead to a crash.

—It's false economy. You can't afford the time, the trouble and the inconvenience that blowouts bring.
—It's not worth the worry. You can't ride in comfort if you know a blowout is due any minute.

It will pay you to let us pull off those old tires and put on a set of brand new Dominion Royal Cords of Royal Masters. They will free you from worry. Royal Cords will cost you less in the long run than any other tire in their class—Royal Masters are in a class by themselves.
