Don't forget to attend "The Lay of the Hen", a three act poultry play to be held in the Auditorium, on Friday, May 2nd., at 7.30 p.m. standard time. Admission free to all those interested in poultry. See back page for further particulars.

—Mr. R. Sicard, Chiropractor, of Montreal, has decided upon opening an office in Lachute as will be seen by his advertisement appearing elsewhere in this issue. He will be pleased to receive any who are desirous of his advice in drugless healing.

—Do you know that May 11th. has been set apart for "Mother's Day" and Miss M. Slater has a nice lot of pretty cards suited to the occasion and if you want some cut flowers it would be well to place your orders early. It is a pleasing way to remember your loved ones.

Mr. D. McAdam, of Chatham, was in town on Friday last and with prompt regularity slipped into the Watchman Office to renew his paper. Being always on time is second nature to our venerable friend as he had a fine record as section foreman of the C. P. R. for so many years.

The last business meeting for the season of the St. Simeon's Club, was held in McArthur's Hall, on Monday evening last. The financial standing of the club was very encouraging, considering the organization has only been in operation for a few months, and plans for raising further funds were also discussed. The aim of the club for the present, is to erect a church hall, which will be a great asset to the Anglican Church here, and all members are expected to help in every way they possibly can.

A very enjoyable social time was spent, after the business section of the evening was over, and the refreshment committee once again excelled in their portion of the programme.

Following an application submitted by Mr. Geo. Dansereau, M.L.A., on behalf of the Lachute Town Council, he received a letter from the Hon. Antonio Galipeault, Minister of Public Works, granting a subsidy of $10,500 to assist the town in improving its Fire Protective System. This matter is referred to in the circular letters sent to the ratepayers this week by Mayor C. Tremblay in connection with By-Laws to be voted on, the 5th. and 6th. of May.

GOOD NEWS

On account of having a large stock of goods on hand and desiring to still serve the public with an up-to-date dry-goods store, we have leased the premises of Mr. Raymond, between the Rodrigue House and Provincial Bank. In our new location we will continue to serve the public to the best of our ability and solicit your continued patronage with the old established and reliable firm.

JUNIOR CHOIR PRESENTATION

On Monday evening the Junior Choir held a social evening in the Presbyterian Church Hall for the closing of the season's work. A large number of the young folk were on hand to participate in the singing and games which were greatly enjoyed by all. During the evening presentations of engraved cuff-links were made to the Rev. Mr. Cousens, as leader, and his assistant, R. A. Giles as a slight token of appreciation for the interest they had taken in the training of the choir.

The ratepayers have by this time received full information of the new by-laws Nos. 115 and 116 relating to the Waterworks and Sewerage questions that have been occupying the attention of the Council for a considerable time. The culmination of their efforts is given in the by-laws presented in a most clear and precise manner in the circular just issued by Mayor C. Tremblay. It may appear somewhat lengthy, but in order that the proper information might be supplied so that the ratepayers would acquaint themselves in an intelligible way Mayor Tremblay thought it advisable to incorporate all the facts. It is to be hoped that the property-holders will take proper interest and turn out to vote on May 5th. and 6th. If Lachute is to grow industrially we must place ourselves in position to meet the demands of those desirous of locating in our midst.

ARNOLD MATHEWS WINS TRAVELLING FELLOWSHIP TO OXFORD

The news that Arnold Mathews heads the list of successful graduates who received honors and degrees at the United Theological Convocation recently was hailed with great pleasure by his associates and his many friends in Lachute.

The Fellowship is the only one given by any Theological Seminary in Canada, and is given by the joint Board of the co-operating Theological Colleges, of Montreal, affiliated to McGill University. It is for the value of $1800, and it tenable for one year at Oxford, Edinburgh, or any other college abroad. This Fellowship is ordinarily of twice the amount, being $3,600 which enables the successful student to put in two years abroad, but this year as there were only 9 marks between Arnold and Arthur Moore (a former Congregational Minister's son) the Faculty agreed to split the amount which allow the two young students to take one year each.

In extending our greetings we understand that the lads have decided upon going to Oxford College for which they expect to leave about August.

LITERARY & DRAMATIC SOCIETY HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting and election of officers took place in the Academy on Thursday evening, April 25th. During the evening a very interesting address was given by Mr. Geo. Thomson on "Robert Burns", which was greatly enjoyed by all present. Rev. Dr. MacLeod also gave a short talk which was much appreciated. Reports were given by the various committees which showed the Society to be in a flourishing position. Votes of thanks were tendered to all who during the year had worked so hard in the interests of the Society. Mr. C. Rogers, as President, and Miss M. Marshall as Literary Chairman were re-elected with the following: Miss R. Rogers, Vice-President; C. Duncan, Treasurer; Mrs. G. Y. Deacon, Assistant to Literary Chairman; W. Blakley, Dramatic Chairman; Miss E. Rosser, Literary Secretary; Miss E. MacKimmie, Dramatic Secretary; Miss M. Slater, Librarian.

On Wednesday, April 30th. as a wind-up to the year's work, a most enjoyable dance was held in McArthur's Hall. Special music was obtained in Jimmie Yelland's Orchestra whose selections were much appreciated and added much to the enjoyment of the evening.

The VANISHING MEN

By Richard Washburn Child

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Brena Selcoss, an orphan, receives a last message from her father before he dies: "Be not afraid; if any danger threatens you, something will protect you. Brena, and Peter DeWolfe fall in love in London and Brena tells him the story of her life. After her father's death and while living in Dallas, Texas, she went to St. Louis to marry Jim Hennepin, who failed to show up. Compton Parmalee then marries her and they travel widely. Parmalee seems to fear something, and he, too, vanishes, as did Jim Hennepin. Parmalee seemed very interested in a scrap of paper bearing the figure of the Aztec deity "Kukulkan," which Hennepin had given to Brent but which had been lost. Peter DeWolfe goes to America and ramracks Parmalee's old house on the Hudson for some clue to the mystery. He finds two costly volumes on Aztec culture from which certain pages have been torn.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

From the lower drawer of a desk Peter took a handful of Parmalee's cancelled cheques and found one made payable to "Brena Selcoss Parmalee."

"That will do," he said, and thrust it in his pocket.

He returned to the lower drawer again, threw out Compton Parmalee's private books of account and went over the items.

At the end of his amateur audit he thrust the books under his arm, and left the house.

Then Peter in tow, again, looked up Lanfrew, Parmalee's lawyer, and told part of his story.

"Let it alone," said the lawyer. "Let what alone?"

"This affair. Let sleeping dogs lie!"

"Would you say Parmalee was thinking of suicide?" asked Peter.

"No, I wouldn't," replied Lanfrew. "He left no word for his wife," Peter went on.

He saw the lawyer flinch.

"To be frank with you, he did," said Lanfrew. "It was too brutal to give her."

Peter leaned forward. "Too brutal?" Lanfrew said, "Yes. He said to me, 'If I make up my mind not to take her away—if I go on a little journey myself, you tell her that I'll be back in two weeks. You tell her I'm going to cut a knot—that I'm going to relieve the hell I've been living.'"

Peter asked, "Then you thought he blamed her?"

Lanfrew threw up his hands, a gesture which said, "There is no question."

"For what?" asked Peter.

"God knows!" replied Lanfrew. "Some women—beautiful women—are poisonous. Rare cases. They carry a deadly poison. DeWolfe. Some influence, some lane, some corrosive, withering, devilish, fatal fluid or vapor or aura—whatever you choose. You know what it is? But she—that woman—when you find her, will blast a man like—"

He stopped.

Peter went home to his apartment where he found a cablegram from Brena.

"Do not go any deeper, I beg you. I am in mortal fear," it said, "I am coming to America. All my love."

In return he cabled her: "Do not come yet. I will cable you again. If you have important news, do not be afraid to send it."

He was glad when that was done. There was an additional reason for it; he was not yet prepared to meet Brena Selcoss for the second time. He must first clear the way for relationship that had in it no reservations.

A day or two later Peter had acquired certain information that he had sought.

He had learned from his father the importance of gathering about him good men as his lieutenants and he set out to find them.

From Smallwood, a book man, he demanded a perfect copy of Father Carlos' story—within a week.

"The operation will cost a great deal of money," said Smallwood.

"I will bear any expense," replied Peter.

"May I say that the—your desire for a copy of this book must be extraordinary?"

"Oh, yes, most extraordinary. Men have gambled away their lives on it. I can't tell you how much I want it until I get it. But to get it I will pay what it costs."

From the publishers he went to one Manfred Eldegard. Eldegard was a surety accountant whose clients, the surety and bonding companies, said of him, "he is the man who can read figures just as a pianist reads music. He doesn't check up your books. He plays them for you! He can bend over the figure on a corporation's account and smell the truth about the company. If he wants to catch a defaulter he can tell by looking at the red edges of a journal's pages whether one has been there."

As Eldegard turned the pages of Parmalee's account books he began to utter "chu-chu, chu-chu" between his teeth.

"What's this credit Account X.D.?" he inquired.

"That's the one that occurs most often," said Peter.

DeWolfe looked at the expert searchingly. He said: "Do you see anything else?"

"Yes—some one has been here before us. Perhaps it was you, eh?"

"No," replied Peter. "What do you see?"

"I see that some one who had a reason has put copy paper and carbons under these pages and copied these handwriting entitles by running a stylus over the original entries. Sometimes the carbon and paper went askew; that's why you see these little blue marks. Did you think it extraordinary that I observed that?"

"Oh, no," said Peter. "Not at all. How could I? It was the first thing that made me wonder about the story these figures can tell. I may want you to go wherever the trail leads—Dallas, New Orleans!"

When Peter reached his apartment Smallwood was waiting for him. "Here I am," he said.

"You don't mean—?" exclaimed Peter.

"Yes, I did find one," said the bookman. "Not so far away either, and he placed on the table a third copy of Father Carlos' Explorations!"

Peter flipped over the pages. Thirty, thirty-one, two, three, four, five. Thirty-six! Thirty-seven!

"All here!" he shouted.

"The way presents no obstacles to progress save the sand, which is loose for the feet of horses," Father Carlos, the Jesuit explorer, had written. "This region of fine sand blown by winds from the Mesa begins at the valley that we have called the Dry Cup and by me is so marked upon the drawing. Thence it runneth straight north for a distance of one hundred and five."

"Here was found a vast mound some of our party saying below a great rock was to be found. The course from this mound is northward; one we have followed by great good fortune, like a miracle, there being only impassable clefts in the plain to the right and to the left and only one entrance into the Great Cleft, where is the ruins of the City—part upon the level ground and part upon the southern wall of the Mesa."

Peter turned to the map.

At the end of twenty minutes of study he drew a deep breath. These pages then were those which Parmalee had sought—and found, the same as those which he had torn out of the book; they had been associated with some strange call.

Was the Call to that region or was the Call something that followed his search for this quaint old volume and its possession?

To Peter it appeared now that one more piece of material was needed to fill the pattern. He had been reluctant to seek this piece but now there was too much confirmation to allow anything to stand in the way.

From a friend he had heard of the man he wanted for this next step, and to his house he went.

The man he had come to see met him in a typical doctor's office.

The physician, acting from habit, put on his glasses, took out a card-case and said in a carefully nurtured tone of sympathy:

"What's the matter?"

"Nothing is the matter," replied DeWolfe. "I'm not ill. I came to consult you in your other capacity."

"Well," said the doctor, "hand-writing has been my hobby for nearly twenty-two years. It began curiously enough by a triviality—an attempt to read character; through penmanship; it has ended in a scientific inquiry, the development of method, a system of rhythm measurements. Scarcely a day goes by that I am not consulted by the prosecuting authorities in many cities. I testified in London in the famous Speere murder case."

"Well?" said the doctor.

From his memoranda book DeWolfe took out two pieces of paper.

One of them was that with the symbol of the feathered serpent and the two words "This Sign" which once had been in the possession of Jim Hennepin. The other was the cheque drawn by Compton Parmalee to the order of his wife, Brena Selcoss Parmalee, which she had endorsed.

He placed this indorsed up and not down as he put the two pieces of paper side by side upon the table.

"That," said the doctor, putting a forefinger upon the words "The Sign," is an excellent example of an attempt to disguise penmanship."

"That is not the problem," said Peter.

"What is it?"

"The problem is whether the same hand wrote the words on these two pieces of paper. Did they?"

"Did they?" repeated the doctor scornfully. "Did you expect an answer to that—at once—in a minute? It requires measurements, in requires the microscope to pick out the arcs. That is all. I could get at it tomorrow morning and in a few hours—"

"Tonight," said Peter firmly. "It is worth a thousand dollars for me to know tonight!"

The doctor swallowed.

"You want a yes or no answer?"

"And I want you to telephone me. No matter what hour, I shall be waiting. Here is my number. No matter what hour. You understand. A thousand dollars."

At half past four in the morning, when Peter was staring out at the first color in the eastern sky, filled with strange chill of a sleepless night, his telephone rang at last.

He had his answer.

At half past four in the afternoon a few days later Brena Selcoss walked into the office of Colby Pennington, Peter DeWolfe's friend and lawyer. She had come directly from the pier on the North River. Her face was white.

"I am a friend of Mr. DeWolfe's," she said. "I have sent a wireless addressed to him here."

Pennington held up the undelivered envelope.

"Are you Miss Selcoss?" he asked. "Peter is out of town."

"Out of town?"

"Why, yes. He went off in a hurry—some hurry and flurry. I believe he had received some kind of message."

Pennington stopped.

"What's the matter?"

Brena Selcoss, leaning forward in her chair, had thrown her arms upon his desk and in the curve of one elbow she had buried her face.

For a moment she appeared as lifeless as if she had been struck a crashing blow upon the head.

A LIBERAL EDUCATION

That man has a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will, and does with ease and pleasure the work that it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear logic engine, ready to spin the gossamer as well as forge the anchors of the mind—the full of life and fire but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a rigorous will; the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love beauty, hate villainy and to respect others as himself; such a one is in harmony with nature; they will get on together.—Thomas Henry Huxley.

Moulded Hipline

Flaring Hem and The New Scarf Neckline

By ANNETTE

A black silk crepe is an excellent choice for all around daytime occasions, particularly with flattering egg-shell silk crepe collar as model illustrated. This attractive scarf collar is passed through a strap of material at end of open Vionnet neckline. The wide loose ends reach to about normal waistline, and tend to break the width through the bodice.

The pointed treatment at the front and at the back of the bodice is a clever idea to add length to the figure. It also emphasizes the flat hipline.

The attached two-piece, circular skirt is shaped through the hips with a widening toward hem that shows rippling fullness.

Style No. 358 rather suggests Princess silhouette. It is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. In the medium size it takes 3 1/2 yards of 39-inch material with 1/2 yard of 35-inch contrasting for collar.

Printed silk crepe with plain crepe, crepe marocain, wool crepe, chiffon and rayon novelties appropriate.

Bug for Bug

The French government is convinced that the present scourge of potato bugs which is ruining crops all over the southwest of France can be traced to the arrival of American troops in 1917. Until then France had never seen a potato bug, and since it is incapable of flying or swimming the Atlantic and is never carried on potatoes, it must have crashed the gate in the baggage or on the person of the American dough-boy, or so the argument runs.

No doubt there are veterans of the A. E. F. who will grieve at this news, who, having thought they had paid their debt to Lafayette, will be chagrined to learn that, in French eyes at least, they are still in arrears. But there are others who will consider this gift of the potato bug a fair exchange for another and much chumlier insect which they picked up on French soil; and some will even insist that the bargain is all in France's favor, since the potato bug, unlike the coccinelle, is herbivorous and flies. This makes it harder to catch, maybe, but easier to bear.

In any case, one hopes the French will look upon the trade as unintentional, if, indeed, it really took place. Our soldiers are not partial to bugs of any kind, even to the winged spud destroyer and friend of the kitchen fatigue.

"Don't you want your office furnishings insured against theft?" "Yes, all except the clock. Everybody watches that."

"Let's see! Your nephew attained his majority several months ago didn't he?" "Yes," replied honest Farmer Hornbeak, "but it ain't a working majority even yet."

Feed Child Mind As Well As Body

Child's Mental Future Made During First Five Years

This is the twenty-third of a series of weekly health-articles sponsored by the Canadian Social Hygiene Council. Parents of to-day are exceptionally lucky in the fund of scientific knowledge they have at their command, as to the feeding and care of their children. In these days of broadcasting health advice, disseminating of health literature, and forming of health centres, there is little or no excuse for sickly children, who are the prey of disease. Vaccination and inoculation remove many of the dangers of infectious diseases and the discovery of the value of sunlight and proper food in preventing others, tend to remove the menace to the bodily health of our children.

The one subject in which all psychological investigators agree, is that the training of their children in the home by the parent, during the first years of their lives, is the most important factor in developing well-balanced adults, free from mental and moral abnormalities.

Although the adult human had so much greater powers than any other creature in the animal kingdom, the human infant is the most helpless and dependent for a longer period than any other creature. The chick can scratch for its own food and the young fish can swim alone for its, but the baby must be cared for throughout the first years of its life. The care of the parents during this period is fitting it to take its place in the world when it grows older and enabling it to become adapted to its environment. This fitting into one's environment, the psychologists say, is sanity. People who can adjust themselves to the changes life bring with it, are essentially sane, while those who shrink from reality and dwell in a world of illusion, are in some degree insane.

This business of teaching the child to become adaptable is the parents' responsibility, and the basis of bringing up children who will grow to be sane adults.

Fear is one of the first things with which the parent has to cope. The infant or young child has very little sense of fear, as shown by the fact that it constantly fails to realize the dangers of fire, climbing and so forth. The child cannot be allowed to discover by experimentation the dangers of these things and so must be taught to fear them.

Aside from these natural fears which come from the instinct of self-preservation, there is neurotic fear, that is, the fear of situations and people which are not harmful. When a child shows fear of strangers it is due to the fact that the child is used to being with one person and he fears every one else until he is able to adjust himself to being with other people.

Fear of the darkness is another common fear of children and this is due also to the absence of his mother and a vivid imagination. These fears must not be laughed at. The parent must understand and help the child to realize that strangers will not harm him and that the dark is the time for sleep. "Children who close their eyes do not see the dark and mother is not far away." And the child sees that while it was a baby its mother's constant care was a necessity, whereas now it should be proud of becoming self-reliant.

Fear of self is a common ailment of childhood and if not coped with can cause untold unhappiness in later life. It causes bashfulness and self-consciousness and the inferiority complex which we hear so much about—or, on the other hand, it may cause bullying and the desire to show off as compensations for this feeling of inferiority. If a child can be prevented from thinking too much about himself by having outside interests and interesting playmates, this fear may be overcome in childhood.

Fear of punishment or ridicule is often the basis of a habit of lying.

Freud claims that the cause of all these fears is to be found in the child's emotional life. He must have proper outlets for his emotions or they become welled-up within him and cause the child to be at a loss for some way of expending them and they may later break out as abnormalities. A child's emotional life often is disturbed because the parents misunderstand him.

There are two recognized emotional classes—the Intraverts and the Extraverts—as one psychologist calls them.

The Intraverts find it more difficult to adapt themselves to their surroundings. They are constantly turning their thoughts within rather than without to people and affairs happening around them. They are always wondering what others think of them and are usually sensitive and self-conscious.

The Extraverts are the opposite type—interested in other people and things and are usually self-reliant. Everybody has qualities of both these types but if parents try to decide to which type their children belong, they will not cause unhappiness and nervous instability in a child of the Intravert type by blaming him for not taking an active part in things and not mixing well with his play-fellows.

There is a happy medium between giving a child too much adult companionship and not giving him enough. Too much tends to spoil the child and make him too demanding when with children his own age. But too little deprives him of sympathetic understanding and the sense of self-respect which adult attention engenders in him.

Anticipation forms a health outlet for a child's emotions. Give him something special to look forward to which will break the monotony of his life and he will have pleasure in anticipating and thinking about it. As well as this, every child needs some sort of hobby into which he can put some of his own personality.

A child's emotional stability often depends on his parents' attitude to his natural questions dealing with sex. A child's question should be answered frankly to prevent him from thinking about the matter any further. It is when a child gets to brooding over these things that harmful results follow. Parents should be the natural source of information in all subjects.

Some sort of religion whose basis is love and which he sees practiced in the daily lives of those about him, is an invaluable aid to a child struggling with the little problems which make up his life. Often a child who has no companions of his own age creates an imaginary playmate. This used to be considered abnormal and queer, but it is now recognized as a normal child's method of making up for its lack of companionship. In fact it is only bright children who are capable of creating their playmates, and they are very real to them and should be treated with respect by parents.

Lying is often a great cause of strife between parents and children. Professor Earl Barnes says that at the age of three it is negligible, unimportant at six, serious at nine and tragic at twelve.

This is because young children do not understand the difference between "truth-fancy and falsehood." During the first five years children are apt to talk merely for the sake of hearing themselves and do not distinguish between the products of their imagination and actual facts.

Lies are of two kinds—moral and normal. Moral lies are those which are acted out and embellished. These are usually told over a long period of time. We have all met this type of person, who tells things about their families or themselves—money or travel—which are obviously untrue. The cure for this type is broadening the child's outlook and getting him interested in some concrete thing so that he can really accomplish things, instead of telling of things he would like to accomplish in the form of lies.

Normal lies told by children of eight or so, when they have some idea of the difference between truth and falsehood are usually from some self-seeking motive—to obtain something they want or to avoid punishment. Truth telling is product of civilization and the young child is not quite ready to take its place in this civilization. The best method of preventing the habit is to place before the child a constant example of truth-telling in all matters. Don't let him see you condoning a "white lie" or he will soon decide that truth is only for certain occasions and use this to his advantage.

CULTURE

"Culture," or what we ordinary people call liberal education is an acquaintance with the best that has been thought and said, even on subjects of general human interest—to say nothing of technical subjects—is impossible in these days. An acquaintance with the best that has been thought and said, even on a few subjects, is difficult, and implies a very high degree of education. But a man may fall very far short of that, and still have had a liberal training. What is essential is that in some subjects he should have been made familiar with the best methods, that he should have come into close contact—as a man does in tackling some great book—with a mind of the highest order. Somehow or other he should have been made to realize what is meant by the term "first-rate."

ADAMSON'S ADVENTURES—By O. Jacobsson

What Will Happen Russian Economics?

A Striking and Exhaustive Survey of Economic Trend in Soviet Russia

"The flower of the peasantry—whose only crimes are industry, thrift and skill—are being stripped of their all and herded into the 'collective farms,' to undergo a serfdom more callous than the Tsars of the darkest ages ever dreamed of imposing. In these slave-pens they are cut off from every tie and tradition that gives life a meaning."

"The Soviet looks to the slave-pen with its large-scale production as the last chance of economic survival. Its devisers do not seem to know that slave-labor is rarely economic—apart from their own notorious shortage of technical equipment and supervisory capacity. Their new regime is at best a gamble, and, as the desperate 'kulaks' are destroying their cattle and consuming their seed-corn, it can inherit little from the old. There are those who think Bolshevism may be on the point of ending in self-starvation."—The Observer.

It has been left to a Russian economist, M. A. Yugoif, to write the most searching and destructive comment on economic affairs in Russia. The author, under the title of "Economic Trends in Soviet Russia" reveals the facts of the situation, and prophesies that whatever else happens, Russia, sooner or later, will have to alter her financial methods, and M. Yugoif sums up:—

"The Soviet Government has been vainly trying for several years to ensure that the process of economic reconstruction shall be actively supported by scientists, technicians, and skill-operatives. But how can production be expected to develop, how can the initiative and activity essential to technical advance show themselves, in a country where the population in general has no political rights; in one where the engineer or the man of science who, for political reasons, is liable to be prosecuted without rhyme or reason; in a country where the holding of opinions distasteful to those in authority will lead to dismissal from the service?

To-Day Permitted—To-Morrow Prohibited

"The arbitrary use of power on the part of the rulers, and the lack of rights among the ruled, paralyse also the initiative of private men of business. To-day an enterprise will be leased to a private entrepreneur, or a private trader will be allowed to carry on business, and to-morrow, owing to a new turn in policy, their enterprises will be suppressed, and they will be banished to some place adjoining the arctic circle. To-day, private credit institutions will be permitted; to-morrow, upon the ground that a formality has been infringed, they will be told to close their doors."

"A decree will be issued, demunicipalizing dwellings which cannot be made to pay, and then, a few years later, when private owners have got them into working order and have made them commercially profitable, they will be taken over once more by the municipality. The mining trial has given plain proof that a foreign concessionary cannot carry on in a country in which there exist neither elementary legal guarantees nor independent law courts nor political liberties."

The Problem of the Peasant

"The interdependence of politics and economics is especially disastrous to the Russian peasant. He is wholly in the power of the higher and lower authorities. He has no fixity of tenure of the land he farms, for he may be deprived of it at the next redistribution; he does not know what taxes he will have to pay, since they are changed from time to time in the most arbitrary way; nor does he know the prices at which he will be compelled to sell his produce to the State, or the moment at which it may please the local authorities to stigmatise him as a 'kulak,' and thus transform him into a parish and an outlaw. How can he be expected to do productive work under such conditions?"

"Finally, the Russian worker, although the dictatorship is exercised in his name, does not possess the minimum of political rights which might enable him to protect his own interests. He has no right to say a word when piece-work rates are being fixed or lowered, nor any right to a voice in the decision of great political issues. These Russian workers, who for decades under the rule of the Tsars were fighting for freedom of the Press, free speech, the right of public meeting, these Russian workers who were banished in their thousands because they strove to secure the right of combination, are now deprived of the possibility of influencing governmental policy by the free election of their representatives, have no right to join the Social Democratic Party, may not form independent trade unions to represent their class, and have neither freedom of the Press nor the right of public meeting."

"The Soviet Government, by justifying the regime of a terrorist dictatorship on the plea that in Russia a working-class party holds power, and by justifying the nationalization of the proletarian organizations on the plea that there are no capitalist employers in Russia, condemns the Russian proletariat to a truly tragical fate; for the workers, now faced with the inevitable re-establishment of private capitalism, have to encounter the enemies of their class disarmed, impotent and disorganized."

"Year by year, the Soviet Government loses touch more and more with the working class. More and more extensive become the concessions which the State, despite all 'swings to the left,' has to make to the private capitalist elements—has to make in order to maintain the dominance of the Communist Party. More and more inevitable economic collapse of the present policy. Meanwhile, the working class, when the re-establishment of its class enemies in power seems at hand, has forgotten the methods of the class struggle, has lost its class consciousness, and has ceased to possess political and trade-union organizations."

"An exit from the economic blind alley can only be found if, under pressure of the steadily increasing dissatisfaction of the masses, the absolutist regime of the dictatorship be liquidated, the political system be democratized, and the present utopian economic policy be radically changed."

"Unless an end be put to the present regime along these lines, there seems to be no prospect for contemporary Russia but the continuance of stagnation and depression, or else the occurrence of grave economic and political disturbances."

"Attractiveness between the sexes is not a matter of youth."—George Bernard Shaw.

Gib is Original $75.00 Racehorse

Is Worshipped as a Four-Legged Gold Mine

The London, Eng., "Sunday Express" in a dispatch from Cholderton, says: That is the story of the Village that Lives on a Racehorse.

The horse is Gib, the famous 'chaser,' who was brought for $75, and has won eight races off the reel, the horse who flashed like a meteor across a corner of the racing world.

When Mr. Alfred Bendon, the London stockbroker, brought Gib to Park House stables at Cholderton, he began the "Once upon a time" of a Wiltshire fairy tale, and they are still living the "happy ever after."

A Sweet Dream?

A four-legged gold mine came to Cholderton, and the 100-odd inhabitants are still pinching each other to make certain that they are awake.

The population are living, loving and dying by Gib. They marry on him, propose on him, furnish houses on him, swear by him, quote him, set the time by him—worship him!

Recently I entered the Bundy Arms, the tiny thatched inn in the tiny thatched hamlet.

The population of Cholderton raised his tankard, squinted amiably inside, and then, with precise languor of the trained beer drinker, allowed the creamy brown foam to trickle daintily down his throat.

Down clanged the tankard on the wood of the bar, and the population wiped his moustache, slapped his thigh, winked, and remarked:

"O! There be folks who don't 'old with 'osses, and folks you can't 'old from 'osses-like, but I says make hay while the sun shines, and so long as Gib lad be in Cholderton, there be o!"

And Mrs. Bundy, the Cholderton Circe, and jovial mule-hostess of the Bundy Arms, laughed and laughed, and her merry eyes twinkled.

At the stables a trim maldservant showed me where Gib was. A young man in the road crossed over to tell me that he had backed the animal all eight times, and was buying a bike!

Gib was in. Although every time he sneezes all Cholderton takes a mustard bath, he is not concealed. He is the most gratuitously ugly and clever horse I have ever met, but his popularity is weighing on him.

"Last time out I won three new bedspreads and a day at the seaside for two chaps in the village," he neighed, "and I am told a friend of mine there wants a piano."

He whinnied mediately.

CHARACTER BUILDING

Necessity may be a grim friend, and yet a real one. To have vacillation ended, and concentration, ingenuity, and determination forced into being, is no small blessing. The moral credit may be slight to begin with, but the moral result will be notable. The development of our powers is the real point, and it thrives best under pressure. Cortes burned his ships to intensify danger, and turned cowards into fighters through indubitable peril. The Prince of Orange, at the battle of Newport, between the Spaniards and the sea, said to his men, "Unless you eat the Spaniards, you will have to drink the sea." To have to fight or work or to endure, though we would not choose the necessity, yet puts us in the way of getting moral muscle that we cannot afford to lose, and that is worth all it cost.

"They tell me Swift is engaged in a shady business." "You don't say." "Yes, he deals in awnings."

ELECTION PROPHETS SWING TO JULY DATE FOR APPEAL TO PUBLIC

The most recent evidence of Government preparedness for an election comes from Washington. It is the news to the effect that in response to a request from the King Government all proposed treaty agreements now lying in various stages are to be rushed along to a point where signatures may be affixed.

Only a few weeks ago Washington advised were to the effect that the Senate Foreign Relations committee was desiginedly holding up all Canadian agreements then under way to compel acceptance by Canada of a definite arrangement for the St. Lawrence deepening scheme.

That attitude has been abandoned and it is announced that the new treaty covering smuggling of prohibited goods, for which negotiations were opened by Premier King just three weeks earlier, was ready for delivery at Ottawa. The treaty covering conversation of Niagara Falls, pigeonholed since last year is being rushed along and the treaty covering sockeye salmon fishing in Puget Sound is being revived.

All these measures will be useful talking points in an election campaign, the anti-smuggling treaty in particular, as it gives Canada something in return for stopping export liquor clearances to the United States.

While it will take another two weeks to find a practical foundation for prophecy as to an election date, those who live on the fringe of politics are swinging to the viewpoint that July and not late August, or September, will witness the polling of the vote. If the budget is to be the issue it will be rather dead fuel by fall and there are many who believe that the election will take place in July, or not until next year.

Indications favor this year. Economic conditions are not of the best, but there is no guarantee they will not be worse before they are better. Premier King and his campaign manager, Senator Hayden, laid their plans during the recess at Bermuda. What they are, time alone will disclose.

THE LATE MRS. ROBT. WOOD

The death occurred on Thursday last, April 24th., at Merrickville, Ont., of Mrs. Robert Wood, at the advanced age of 81. Deceased lady was formerly Miss Christiana McGregor and was born at Lachute Road, married to Mr. Robert Wood, of East Settlement, who predeceased her some 18 years ago. During the last eleven years she has made her home with her son at Merrickville and has enjoyed fairly good health until about a week before her death, coming once a year to visit her friends and relatives in this vicinity.

The funeral was held on Saturday evening last at her late home, conducted by Rev. Mr. Carter, of Moore wood, Ont., after which the body was brought on Sunday morning to Lachute cemetery; the committal service being conducted by Rev. W. B. Rosborough in the presence of a large number of sorrowing friends and relatives.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a loving mother one daughter, Mrs. A. Dolg, of Lachute, and four sons, E. J. Wood, of Lachute; J. A. Wood, of Merrickville; Prof. G. W. Wood, of Winnipeg; and E. J. Wood, of Hanna, Alta.; also two brothers, Alex. and Peter McGregor, of Minneapolis.

THE LATE JOHN THOMPSON

The funeral of the late John Thompson who passed away suddenly at the home of his brother, Albert of Ogdensburg, took place on Friday April 25th. Deceased who was in his sixty fourth year was born in Ste. Eugene, coming to Brownsburg in 1918 where he then made his home. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Doxey. The pall-bearers were his nephews, Kenneth Clark, Roy Mott, Lester Thompson, Wallace MacKiddie, John Thompson and S. Thompson.

He leaves to mourn his loss three brothers, Daniel, of Brownsburg; Joseph, of Montreal, and Albert, of Ogdensburg, also two sisters, Mrs. James Clark, of Upper Lachute, and Mrs. Louis Le Beau, of Montreal. Interment took place in Ogdensburg cemetery.

111th Anniversary of Founding of I.O.O.F.

Sermon preached by Rev. W. B. Rosborough to members of Laurentian Lodge, No. 14.
Independent Order of Oddfellows, at Lachute
United Church, Sunday, April 27th.

We are gathered here this morning in honor of the 111th Anniversary of the founding of the Independent Order of Oddfellows. We go back in imagination to the 26th day of April, 1819, when five humble men, in the city of Baltimore, gathered in a candle lighted room and planted the seed out of which the mighty oak of Odd-fellowship has grown.

The great Apostle of the Order in America was Thomas Wildy, who came from England to Baltimore in the year 1817. Associated with him in the Organization of the first American Lodge were, John Duncan, John Creatham, John Welch and Richard Rushworth. From this humble beginning, the Order has grown and expanded until it is to-day the largest fraternal organization, in point of numbers in the world, with over 30,000 subordinate lodges, including Rebekahs and a total Membership of over 2,500,000. Much of this success is undoubtedly due to the zeal and vision and indefatigable labours of Thomas Wildy. Of this great pioneer of Oddfellowship in America, it has been said that "he had faith in man's reciprocity and affection, he had a firm belief in the brotherhood of all, and absolute confidence in the great scheme of fraternity to arouse and give expression to those generally repressed emotions of friendship and love." His faith has been abundantly justified by the mighty Oak, which has grown from the seed he planted, whose wide-spreading branches afford shelter, comfort and protection to many thousands of men, women and children throughout the world.

As to the principles of Odd Fellowship, let me say that underlying all are the fundamental principles of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Then there are the three golden links of Friendship, Love and Truth. Taking the second of these links for my subject this morning, I should like to say a few words on the story of the Good Samaritan—which has already been read in your hearing this morning—a story that has a special significance for Oddfellows and one that will have an abiding place in every Christian heart.

From an artistic point of view, the story of the Good Samaritan is one of the most beautiful passages in the Bible. The place, the persons and the moral all dovetail into one another in a very striking way.

The object of the Master in this parable was to emphasize the value and the importance of Brotherly-love in man's dealings with his fellow-man. It leads one to see and feel the great truth that a man cannot know God or hold fellowship with Him unless he also loves and serves his fellow-men. It was the Master's way of emphasizing the truth to which the Apostle John gave such strong and trenchant expression: If a man say, I love God and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? And this Commandment have we from Him, that he who loveth God, love his brother also.

The scene of the story was laid on the rugged thoroughfare between Jerusalem and Jericho. It is described to this day as "a particularly laggard stretch of country," with barren hills piled recklessly one upon another, and deep gorges where the sunlight comes late and goes early. In the time of the Master, it was so dangerous for the traveller, because of robbers and desperadoes who made it the scene of their nefarious work, that it was commonly described as "the way of blood."

In the story Jesus tells of how a man, who was once travelling along this perilous road, was fallen upon by robbers, stripped of his raiment, wounded and deserted, and left half-dead in that lonely and desolate place. And the reason why this story is just as full of meaning and suggestiveness for the people of to-day as it was for the people to whom it was originally spoken, lies in the fact that in this poor wounded and deserted man we have a true and life-like picture of many a man and woman and boy and girl of to-day in which we live.

To begin with, this unfortunate man whom Jesus so deftly portrayed in this story was a victim of his environment. Circumstances must have made it necessary for him to follow that lonely and desolate road and through no apparent fault of his own, he had to endure all the suffering and hardship that were inflicted upon him. And are there not a great many to-day who have to bear and suffer a great deal because of the dangerous roads which circumstances over which they have no control often make it necessary for them to travel? What of the many thousands of little children who first see the light of day in the slum districts of our great cities, and of the multitudes of children who seem destined to grind their little lives away in the sweat-shops and factories of the world? A man is thrown out of employment because of some industrial depression which has fallen upon a Country or a Community, and before long, he and his loved ones, through no apparent fault of his own, are brought face to face with the grim spectres of poverty and want. Or sickness comes and lays its heavy hand on the bread-winner of the home and you all know something of the suffering and anxiety that comes through such an uncontrollable and often unavoidable happening as that.

Oh how many victims of their environment there are in our present-day world, who bleed and suffer year, even die prematurely through no apparent fault of their own! Then this poor sufferer was also a dependent man. He was wounded, helpless and deserted, and unless he received help and assistance from some passer-by he could not hope for anything but a lonely death upon the highway. And in this matter of dependence we all resemble him to a greater or less extent. Because of his comparatively longer infancy man is more dependent than any other creature during the earlier years and stages of his life. And when the child grows beyond the care of parent or guardian and has to face the problems and responsibilities of life for himself, he finds that he is still helplessly dependent upon the help and co-operation of his fellow men. But some, because of the vicissitudes, the unforeseen and unfortunate experiences of life are more dependent than others upon the kindly assistance of the more highly favored among their brethren and we cannot tell when, through some unforeseen development, we ourselves may stand in need of help or assistance that our brethren may be ready and willing to give.

But returning to the story, as told by Jesus, we note that the first to arrive at the spot where the half-dead man lay was a Priest, the man who should feel under a special obligation to do the unfortunate man a kindly turn. A soldier who has fallen and lies wounded and helpless in a remote corner of the field, will hail it as an unusually fortunate happening if the first man to come his way should be the surgeon of his own regiment. So if this wounded Priest, as he came in sight, he must have considered it a singularly happy coincidence which brought to his rescue the man who, by birth and by his office, was supposed to be a brother and friend to all the people of his race. But according to the story, this man who ought to have felt some responsibility for his distressed fellow-countryman, passed by on the other side, and left his wounded brother to his fate.

The Levite also, by reason of his order and office, might have been expected to be forward in assisting a distressed brother of his own race and nationality. He also sees, but turns his head away, and almost persuades himself that he does not know that his assistance is required. It is as if a British Consul, in a foreign port, in passing along the street, saw a British subject being assaulted and in peril of his life; but instead of interfering, turned into a side street, trying to persuade himself that the victim of the assault was not a fellow-countryman, or that the affair was not very serious after all.

The behaviour of the Priest and Levite is very suggestively described. They came, they saw, and they passed by, in human un-natural conduct, one is ready to exclaim. It was inhuman but it was not un-natural. For these men did exactly what the majority of people are doing in one form or another almost every day. A lost child is crying on the street; but it is awkward to be seen leading a dirty crying child home, so we refuse to notice that the child is lost. A man is lying as if he were ill; but he may only be intoxicated, and it looks foolish to meddle and might occasion us some trouble, so we leave him to others; though another minute in that predicament may for all we know make all the difference between life and death for a brother man. In many cases we do precisely what the Priest and Levite did in the Master's story. We close our eyes to the spectacle and our ears to the cry of human need and pass it by on the other side.

The last to come the way of the wounded man was a despised Samaritan. He was not bound to the man by any tie of country or of race. He was an alien who, under ordinary circumstances, would be treated with disdain and contempt by the proud and haughty members of the Jewish race. And he would ordinarily treat a Jew in the same haughty and disdainful way. But over all these barriers love triumphs, and a man with whom this wounded Jew would, at any other time, have contemptuously refused to deal, turns out to be the one who befriends him in his peril, the brother who saves him from a tragic and untimely end.

The whole teaching of this story is that it is love that makes man neighbour to man; that the true neighbour is the one who is willing to help his brother in his time of need. And this story suggests to my mind at least two courses of action that ought to be followed in so far as our needy brethren are concerned.

First, it suggests that we should do all we can to clean up the highways over which our brethren have to travel. There's something wrong with the manner in which the affairs of mankind are organized and carried on if men and women who are able and willing to do their part in the carrying on of the world's work are stripped and impoverished through no fault or short-coming of their own. It is the imperative duty of the members and adherents of the Christian Church to do all we can to see that the highways over which men and women and boys and girls have to travel are rendered clean and wholesome and safe.

But while we work incessantly toward this great end, we must not forget that it is also our duty to minister, according to our ability, to the needs of those unfortunate individuals who have fallen or suffered by the way. Prating about love and brotherhood is only so much idle talk unless we are ready to do what we can for our brethren who have been stripped and wounded and deserted on the broad and dangerous highways of life.

There are many who need just the moral and spiritual and material help that we are often able to give. In reading the biography of the late Dr. Alexander Whyte of Edinburgh, I was particularly struck by the Christ like kindness with which he treated the unfortunate people with whom he came in contact during his long and fruitful ministry. In his Men's class, for example, he once told of a College friend, a man of earnest spirit, who entered the ministry, but after a time was deposed for a grave fault. He was left penniless and resourceless until Dr. Whyte found him clerical work in a business house. After a time he was able to go to another University to prepare for another profession, but he had scarcely entered on his new field of action when he died. "I went to his funeral," said Dr. Whyte, "and there was nobody there to let down the coffin. The grave-diggers had to take the cords along with me. He was absolutely friendless." This story of a Minister's ship-wrecked life led up to an urgent invitation on the part of the great hearted Dr. Whyte: "Come to me," he said, "when your back is against the wall; I will never shut my door against you." That is the kind of brotherly love and friendship this old world needs, and this I take it is the kind of friendship and brotherhood for which the Independent Order of Oddfellowship stands.

Have you ever noticed in your reading of the New Testament, that in the only description of the last judgment which He ever gave, Jesus declared that the Judge would measure men, not by their creeds, their Church affiliation or attendance, or by their scrupulous observance of prescribed rituals and ordinances, but by their treatment of their fellow-pilgrims in the journey of life. The fact that they had never known Him and were not conscious that they had ever rendered Him any service would not condemn them. And the fact that they had known Him and had confessed Him as their Lord would not save them from condemnation. "Inasmuch as ye did or did not to one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it or did it not to me."

The teaching of the New Testament is that it is only by serving our needy brethren that we are able to do anything for Him who was the greatest exponent of love and brotherhood that the world has ever known. The story is told of a man in Russia who, in passing through the camp of a regiment one cold winter night, saw a man standing on duty as sentinel without an overcoat, so he took off his coat and placed it on the back of the soldier. Later he died and was carried into the presence of Christ. To his surprise, however, instead of seeing Christ, he saw the soldier whom he had made warm on that cold winter night. When he gave expression to his surprise, the soldier was suddenly transformed into the Divine One and He said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

God grant that there may be created in every one of us who are here this morning a generous, self-sacrificing spirit. May the helpless, the widow, and the fatherless never appeal to us in vain. May friendship, love and truth be not unmeaning words upon our lips, but the sentiment of our hearts and the practice of our lives. May we give obedience to the law which commands us to do unto others as we would that they should do unto us. And when after a life well spent on earth, we shall pass through the valley of the shadow of death, and cross the silent river to join the loved ones gone before, may we meet our Savior face to face and hear from His lips the welcome plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

DE SOTO DEALERS

Located at MAIN ST., LACHUTE, QUE.

The appointment of this new De Soto dealer is one that we announce with much pride and satisfaction. It assures worthy representation of the new De Soto Straight Eight—an Eight of outstanding quality, actually lower-priced than many Sixes—and its companion car, the famous De Soto Six which last year broke all sales records for a first-year car. We are certain you will find every member of the organization spurred on by a sincere desire to serve you. Everyone interested in fine motor cars is urged to come in, meet the men in charge, inspect the facilities at their command and see the special showing of De Soto Sixes and Straight Eights—both of which achieve a standard of quality and value comparable only with far costlier cars.

"Price-per-Gallon" is a very deceiving basis on which to judge the cost of paint. All things being equal, the higher the Price-per-Gallon, the higher the quality—and the lower the initial or ultimate cost of paint is sure to be. Cheap "Price-per-Gallon" Paint increases the cost of painting, the cost of labor, of protection and the cost of repainting. The comparative costs are illustrated below.

LOWE BROTHERS' VS.	CHEAP PAINTS
$5.35 Average Price per Gallon.	$3.50
450 Sq. Feet (2 coats) Average Coverage per Gallon.	300 Sq. Feet (2 coats)

CANADIAN OFFICIALS STUDY- ING AMERICAN FARM MAR- KETING ACT.

Agricultural officials here and in the provincial capitals are following with closest interest the working out of the Agricultural Marketing Act in the United States. The measure is there described as perhaps the most important piece of legislation passed Congress. The chief interest it arouses here is the degree to which it might be applied in Canada to solve the serious problem of marketing farm products.

The purposes of U. S. legislation are condensed in the following explanation.

"In the agricultural marketing act it is declared to be the policy of Congress to promote the effective merchandising of agricultural commodities in interstate and foreign commerce so that the industry of agriculture will be placed on a basis of economic equality with other industries, and to that end to protect, control and stabilize the currents in interstate and foreign commerce in the marketing of agricultural commodities and their food products:

- (1) By minimizing speculation.
- (2) By preventing inefficient and wasteful methods of distribution.
- (3) By encouraging the organization of producers into effective associations or corporations under their own control for greater unity of effort in marketing and by promoting the establishment and financing of a farm marketing system of producer-owned and producer-controlled co-operative associations and other agencies.
- (4) By aiding in preventing and controlling surpluses in any agricultural commodity, through orderly production and distribution so as to maintain advantageous domestic markets and prevent such surpluses from causing undue and excessive fluctuations or depressions in prices for the commodity."

Memories of Old St. Andrews

The life of early St. Andrews was associated with a number of eminent characters who figured prominently during colonial days. Not the least of these was Sir John Johnson who richly deserves to be held in remembrance for the prosperity which his enterprises initiated during his seniorship in St. Andrews.

Of his early life not much is known. The year of his birth was 1742. Three years later his mother died after the birth of his two sisters Mary and Ann.

The alliance of his father with the famous princess Molly Brant, forms the most romantic part of the story. About 1748, Sir William then Colonel Johnson first met the beautiful Indian maiden of sixteen summers at a spectacular Indian Military parade, when her prowess and agile horsemanship won his admiration and forthwith he installed her as the mistress and the presiding genius of Johnson Hall which had already been built, and here she lived with him as his wife throughout the remainder of his life. It is but just to the memory of Miss Brant to state that she always regarded herself as the wife of the Baronet after the Indian fashion, and it is but right to judge Sir William in relation to the standards and conventions of the age and the community in which he lived.

Molly Brant was descended from a proud race of Mohawk chieftains who represented the nobler type of Indian character, the race that inspired the poet Longfellow in his Hiawatha, and the ballads of Pauline Johnson the Mohawk poetess of Brantford. Molly Brant was clever, had pleasant manners, and possessed those qualities of heart and mind that fitted her for the responsible position in which she was placed.

Under the astute tutelage of the Colonel she acquired those accomplishments which prepared her to preside with dignity and grace as hostess when her guests were often times the polished Scions of England's Aristocracy, and on her part she educated her devoted husband in the customs of her race, a knowledge which in no small degree accounted for his wonderful ascendancy over the Mohawk tribes. The young wife took to her heart his 3 little pale faces and nurtured them with the same care as she bestowed on her own eight children.

In the meantime Colonel Johnson was laying the foundation of his great fortune, mainly through the industries which his son Sir John Johnson in later years transplanted to the Valley of the North River.

As early as the year 1745, he was exporting bales of furs to London, and shipping consignments of flour to Halifax and to the West Indies. The passing years brought Military fame, Knighthood, a royal grant of five thousand pounds (£5000), and one hundred thousand acres of crown lands.

The last chapter in the dramatic career of Sir Wm. Johnson brings us to the eve of the American Revolution, when the great man died with a broken heart, his soul struggling between two loyalties, his own strong principles of liberty on the one hand and on the other his duty to his King the Sovereign who loaded him with princely benefactions.

The distinguishing features of Sir William's character were strict integrity, an inborn sense of justice, and democratic sympathies so broad that they embraced the sons of the forest whom he served so faithfully. His last days were spent in a supreme effort to prevail on his Indian Allies to presume strict neutrality during the conflict which he knew to be inevitable. He knew all about the uncontrollable barbarity of Indian Warfare, and he urged that this was a white man's war, and that none but white men should engage in it. Advice which his son did not see fit to act upon; Father and Son differed temperamentally. In their point of view the former was the Whig, the latter was the Tory. It could not well be otherwise for Sir John was brought up in the lap of luxury, and had not endured the toil and self-discipline that developed the character of his reborn father. There seemed to be no doubt in the minds of his biographers who had free access to his extensive Correspondence, that had Sir William lived till it was necessary to take a decided stand, he would have boldly espoused the cause of Colonies.

Not so with his son Sir John Johnson who was a Loyalist from principle and conviction, for he faced the possibility of the confiscation of his vast estates should the fortunes of war turn against him.

There is little recorded about Sir John Johnson's life during pre-revolution days. He accompanied his father on several of his war-like expeditions, and on one occasion the boy when very young went into battle with him.

In his early twenties, the young man was sent to England to wear off the rusticity of a country education. To shorten the story he was presented at Court, was made a Baronet, the second in the family, and the first native born American to receive this distinction. During the summer of 1773 Sir John courted and won the heart of Polly Watts of New York City, one of the Loyalist heroines of the American Revolution, and in late years the charming hostess of the North River Manor house where many happy hours were spent.

No more suitable spot could be found for the erection of a memorial to Sir John Johnson, than the site of the old manor house, the picturesque border of the St. Andrews Golf Links.

Sir John's notable services in initiating and superintending the migration of thousands of United Empire Loyalists across the border which so enriched the life of our nascent nation, has never been properly recognized and the placing of a cenotaph for this purpose and on this spot would be most fitting.

RIVETED

Torrid Zone steel furnaces are the only riveted and caulked gas-tight boiler plate furnaces in Canada. When installed according to the Standard Code, as designed by research engineers for the National War Air Heating Association, they will radiate warm, fresh air evenly throughout every room in your house. Gaswork has surrendered to science in Torrid Zone heating.

MODERN WAYS DEMAND STEEL AND RIVETED CONSTRUCTION

THE TORRID ZONE furnace is the most durable furnace that is made today, because it is made of STEEL—heavy plates of steel, caulked and riveted, gas-tight and dust-tight. The average life of Torrid Zone furnaces has been twenty-one years. The Torrid Zone furnace is GUARANTEED for ten years.

Cupoles in which iron is melted are made of steel, lined with fire brick, just as Torrid Zone steel furnaces are made of heavy boiler plates and are lined with fire brick.

Steel heats quicker than iron. Torrid Zone furnaces will heat with less fuel because their extra large heating surfaces radiate heat from the fire quickly. Soot will not accumulate on smooth steel walls to retard radiation of heat as it does on iron-walled furnaces.

Because they are made of steel—riveted, gas-tight, like a boiler—Torrid Zone furnaces not only heat quicker and more powerfully, and with less fuel than ordinary furnaces, but they always deliver CLEAN heat. No dust, no gas, no smoke or soot.

The trans-Atlantic speed record between the ports of Liverpool and Saint John, was broken recently by the arrival at the latter port of the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of York, after a crossing from Liverpool which took six days, 22 hours and 14 minutes. According to local shipping men this is the first time in the history of the port that a crossing has been made in under seven days.

After 15 years of seed planting, the experimental work of the Canadian Government Department of Agriculture has developed sixteen varieties of apple trees suited to the climatic conditions of the prairie provinces. Of these varieties two have been graded "very good," and four "good."

Capt. & Mrs. J. D. Weir and family, of Ste. Anne de Bellevue, motored to Cushing and spent Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Douglas, of Montreal, and daughter Mildred are spending a few days with Mr. B. Noyes.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bradford, of Little Rideau, Ont., were guests on Tuesday of their son Mr. John Bradford.

Cushing Community Club is holding its annual meeting and election of officers on Friday night of this week.

The Misses N. Hodgson, Ivy and Elsie Graham left for Montreal on Sunday to resume their duties as teachers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Waters, and sons, of Plaisance, expect to take up their abode in Cushing by the end of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles MacKenzie, of St. Mary's, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Graham on Saturday. The Rev. and Mrs. E. Morrison and daughter Esther, of Lachute, were their guests on Sunday.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mr. J. W. Rodger was in Montreal on Saturday.

Mr. Geo. Fuller was in St. Andrews last Thursday.

Col. Evans had a party up last week at his home on the Riviere Rouge.

A Congregational Social was held in the United Church Hall on Thursday evening.

The W. A. of the Anglican Church held a meeting last week at the home of the Rev. Mr. Windsor.

Rev. W. B. Rosborough, of Lachute, will preach in the United Church next Sunday morning, exchanging pulpits with Rev. J. Macaskill.

The evening service in the United Church last Sunday was taken by Mr. Scott; special singing was rendered by a male quartette from Lachute (Messrs. Gorman, Duncan and D. and O. Todd).

The Reading Circle met on Monday evening at Mr. Pitcairn's. Miss Carrie Hooker read a paper in regard to the maple sugar industry of which Canada has almost a monopoly. We listened with the eager attention of children as our minds were carried back to days that are past and gone. The story could not have been made more interesting without samples being passed around. Other members read current items about Canadian Industries, and the evening was a very enjoyable one. The next meeting will be at Mr. Pitcairn's on May 12th. It will be a Dickens evening, and Mrs. De Witt will read a paper.

CUSHING

Sunday guests of Mr. and Miss Whelehan were Mr. and Miss Byrne of St. Philippe, also Mr. Kenrick Dorion, of Montreal, and Mr. F. E. Robertson, of St. Andrews.

Mr. Wallace Walford and his friends Messrs. B. Ewing, B. Deeks, and Keith Clarke, who spent last week at Pine Cottage, returned to the city on Sunday evening.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. Jas. Watson and Mrs. O. E. Leroy, who received news recently of the death of their sister, Mrs. Wm. Douglas, of Indian Head, Sask., who passed away on Friday last at Vancouver, B. C., after an illness of several years duration. The deceased was formerly Miss Marian Webster of Cushing, and was married to the late Wm. Douglas one of the earliest and most prominent settlers of Indian Head in 1885. He also was a native of this place being a son of the late John Douglas. She is survived by a son Mr. Frank Douglas, of Indian Head and one daughter Mrs. Woodward, of Vancouver. The remains will be brought to Indian Head for interment.

what are these DOMINION TIRE DEPOTS?

They are a great chain of tire service depots, spread like a network across Canada. Each is the finest tire store in its locality and all are co-operating to assist motorists in getting the greatest possible mileage from their tires.

These Dominion Tire Depots are painted in a uniform color scheme of orange and blue. All bear the Dominion Tire Depot sign.

From these Dominion Tire Depots you may obtain:

—Tires at the price you want to pay ... each tire the best value at its price.

—A periodic tire inspection service designed to check tire injuries before they become serious. Pressures will be checked and everything possible done to add mileage to the life of your tires.

—Reliable repair work, honestly and promptly executed at fair prices.

Let the orange and blue Dominion Tire Depot front guide you to Canada's finest tire service.

ONE THIMBLEFUL- A DAY'S FEED FOR ONE CHICK!

THINK OF IT! One tiny thimbleful ... all the feed a chick can put in its little crop in one day. On this tiny bit it must live ... grow ... build bones ... build muscles ... start feathers. Think of the job feed has to do!

They must depend on feed for so many things! They get them all in Purina Chick Startena (mash) or Purina All-Mash Startena Chow ... 12 different ingredients in every thimbleful. Cod-liver oil ... dried buttermilk ... alfalfa flour ... granulated meat ... these and eight others are there!

These 12 ingredients ... think how carefully they must be mixed to make every thimbleful alike. Purina Startena and All-Mash Startena Chow are mixed over and over again ... 960 times just to be thorough! You will find the same care taken with Baby Chick Chow (scratch) ... to be fed with Startena until your chicks are six weeks old ... and with Purina Growena (mash) and Purina Intermediate Hen Chow (scratch) ... to be fed from then on until the pullets are laying at 16 weeks.

How little feed a chick eats ... just one thimbleful a day ... yet how important it is ... how much depends on it ... the chick's very life ... its growth ... what the pullets will do for you next fall and winter when eggs are sure to be worth good money. You can afford to feed only the best ... Purina Poultry Chows.

A Great Victorian

By Arthur S. Draper

Time is best measured by those events which leave a lasting impression, and one of these was a luncheon in the London home of Arthur J. Balfour, then First Lord of the Admiralty, almost fourteen years ago. At the table were two sisters of the First Lord, his brother-in-law, Austen Chamberlain, then Colonial Secretary, and the writer. Just how I happened to be Mr. Balfour's guest is of no importance, although the topic was discussed after the meal was of much interest to me and to the other American correspondents in London, and perhaps of some little importance to Mr. Balfour and the British Empire.

In the early spring of 1916 Great Britain had come to realize that it was to be a long war; that business could not be carried on as usual; that voluntary enlistment would not suffice; that it might be a good thing to acquaint the rest of the world, particularly America, with the fact that she intended to fight until the bitter end, and that neutrals were bound to have an unpleasant time of it. In other words, British propaganda, to use a word which hit the ear harshly at that time, was not satisfactorily organized. Sir Gilbert Parker, the later Mr. Masterman and their associates were doing a big job, but the special articles they were getting from Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells, Arnold Bennett, John Galsworthy, Hail Caine and a host of others were not considered sufficient.

Mr. Balfour enjoyed the reputation of not reading "The Times," not to mention the other organs of British public opinion. In fact, the First Lord was reputed to be entirely indifferent to anything which appeared in the public prints—so indifferent that he ignored the editorials when he became Prime Minister. He did not hate newspapers, he was completely indifferent to them.

Most of the talk at the luncheon had to do with some fifty motorcars the First Lord had in Egypt or Mesopotamia or somewhere else in that part of the world which was no attracting nearly so much attention as the region around Arras, Amiens and Ypres. Mr. Chamberlain would adjust his monocle, present an argument and Mr. Balfour would say "No" with apparently as much interest and feeling as he would show in declining a second helping of roast chicken. Mr. Chamberlain was persistent. He wanted those cars; he wanted them for transport—and he got them, when Mr. Balfour seemed to have grown tired of refusing.

Sir Douglas Brownrigg, the Chief Naval Censor, "Cappy" (Admiral Sir Reginald) Hall, the head of the British Naval Intelligence, and Mr. Masterman-Smith often found Mr. Balfour in the same mood—indifferent to subjects of vital interest to them, a perfect genius in solving problems once he was interested, contemptuous of details, but childlike in his enthusiasm when he appreciated that he was expected to untangle some diplomatic problem or write a note which would reflect the views of his countrymen. Looking back over the files I find I wrote this paragraph after that luncheon fourteen years ago:

"I should say that war is the last game that Mr. Balfour would select for enjoyment or recreation. He is the antithesis of Von Trippitz (who died the other day). For forty-odd years Mr. Balfour has been in the service of his country. He was Prime Minister from 1902 to 1905, and First Lord of the Treasury and leader of the House of Commons from 1891 to 1906. Unquestionably he enjoys much more the preparing of his Gifford lectures or a round on the famous course of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club at St. Andrews, of which he was at one time the captain, than he does the planning of how to increase the efficiency of the already efficient fleet under his control. Mr. Balfour is not a sailor. But whatever he does he does well. Now he is in charge of the British Navy."

Then followed a few statements regarding the problem of the blockade and the feeling of Americans (it was a year before we came into the war) and then this paragraph:

"All this is preliminary to the statement that Mr. Balfour is one of the best friends and admirers the United States has in the British government. He is a generous and honorable enemy and loves and is proud of all Britain's naval tradition. He fights as a gentleman and regrets that his enemy resorts to gouging and throttling."

It was not until the luncheon was over and he had taken me into his study that a word was said regarding the reason for my presence in his home. Whatever his views about newspapers he plunged into the subject of the American press, the work of the American correspondents in London, the possibility of extending news facilities. As he stood with his back to the open fire he asked question after question, inviting the frankest criticism and showing instant appreciation whenever I hesitated to give the whole truth as I saw it. One understood why he was known as "Prince Arthur." He made his guest feel that he was doing him a real favor. He saw it as a new problem, something interesting, something well worth while doing and he tackled it as he did a ball on the base line at an age when most men would have been satisfied to applaud from the stands.

Then he invited me to walk from his home to the House of Commons. At a normal gait the trip should be made in ten minutes, but it took us almost an hour because Mr. Balfour was expounding his view that the most important development of the war was trench fighting, much more important than the submarine, the aeroplane or gun range. He wore a frock coat, a soft black hat and a pair of glasses attached to a black ribbon. He stopped at the Admiralty Arch to make a point; he stopped at the Horse Guards and acknowledged salutes and greetings, but it was plain he recognized no one; he stopped half a dozen times more and that despite the fact that his secretary had found him and was politely suggesting that he would be late for questions in the House.

Before tackling the story that day I saw Sir Douglas Brownrigg and told him what I had outlined and that Mr. Balfour had given me permission to use anything I considered of interest to American readers. The naval censor and I reached a compromise and remained firm friends, but suffice it to say that wartime correspondence would have been a simple affair with Mr. Balfour as censor. His frankness was staggering; he took one into his confidence and one was afraid of one's self. It was Mr. Balfour who was chiefly responsible for the framing of the first communique on the Battle of Jutland, which dumfounded the British people and made the rest of the world feel that Germany had won an overwhelming naval victory. Mr. Balfour was never afraid to face the truth; he had the deepest faith in his own countrymen, their courage and determination, and regardless of their political views they admired him in a way they did no other contemporary statesman.

As the war went on Mr. Balfour came more and more in contact with the press. He was "A. J." in those days—sympathetic, calm, the Gibraltar of the Cabinet. Some of those who worked with him at the time were fearful that he would either say too much or be contemptuous. Instead there were few better spokesmen and none that enjoyed these conferences more—the leading, tricky questions, the matching of wits, the fencing in which words alone score.

There is the story of the Cabinet meeting after the German attack in 1918, the drive which almost ended in a decisive victory for Ludendorff—a battle which depressed Lloyd George and unsettled Douglas Haig, though both knew where and when the German spearhead would hit. Most everyone was excited; many had their "wind-up," but "A. J." was content to say "How annoying." It leaked out—Germany was beaten, though "Britain had her back to the wall," to use Haig's words. Some people are always striving, for effect, coining smart words and phrases, but Balfour gave voice to his normal feelings, and the reactions of a great Victorian heartened a people who had grown tired, exhausted, doubtful, disillusioned. A strong man spoke as his ancestors would have spoken and a whole nation responded. There was a challenge, there was only one answer. Aristocracy, democracy, dictatorship—a wonderful background of traditions!

Quick Freezing To Widen Menu, Says Food Man

Sudden Refrigeration Preserves Natural Flavors at Savings, Expert Asserts

Science and increasing knowledge of refrigeration will so transform the methods of handling perishable foods that Canadians of to-morrow will enjoy at all times of year, at moderate cost, essentially fresh delicacies now limited except to persons of wealth to brief seasons, Colby M. Chester, Jr., president of the General Foods Corporation, predicted recently.

Disclosing that experimental tests already have proved that it is possible by "quick freezing" to preserve in original succulence and tastiness for many months strawberries and other fruits and vegetables picked from the garden after they had been ripened naturally under a summer sun, Mr. Chester saw in the use of the discovery a better balanced and more appetizing national menu. And with the development of this method of refrigeration he forecasts that billions of dollars worth of perishable foods now being wasted will be conserved.

Chemical Changes Avoided
"The discovery of Clarence Birdseye that perishable foods suddenly subjected to cold of temperature from 40 to 50 degrees below zero may be kept in containers for months in all their original freshness," said Mr. Chester, "promises to accomplish some rather astounding things in our systems of handling foods and in our national diet. It has been estimated that $10,000,000,000 worth of perishable food is sold each year. There can, of course, be no estimate of the vast quantity of fruits, vegetables and meats that are lost each year through lack of refrigeration or preservation."

"Basically, Mr. Birdseye's discovery is that very rapid freezing of perishable foods is accomplished without any injurious physical or chemical change. It was a chance observation that first gave him the idea. While fishing through a hole in the ice in Labrador he noticed that fish pulled out of the water into air 50 degrees below zero froze stiff almost instantly. The fact that later they would come to life if exposed within reasonable time to warmer surroundings convinced him that the very swiftness of the freezing process had been accomplished without any harmful result to the structure of the living organism.

"In subsequent tests," Mr. Chester continued, "Mr. Birdseye found that with slow freezing the ice crystals puncture the cell walls of the food products and that as a result they frequently became dry and flat. When one pauses to consider that the strawberry crop must be marketed within about six weeks and that the season for many fruits and vegetables is sharply limited, one may readily see the importance of a discovery that enables fresh food products to be put in a carton and then quickly frozen."

"Backed by a system of distribution that will see to it that such quickly frozen products are properly refrigerated and merchandised, there is no reason why enjoyment of any particular delicacy should be limited to any one season."

May Be Applied to Meat

"The same basic idea can be applied to meat. It should be possible to buy standard cuts of meat with all waste removed, packed in a sanitary container and ready to cook. Aside from the economies of saving perishable foods, such a system would effect great economies in freight and cartage through eliminating the shipping of by-products."

"Quite naturally, not all food preservation will be directly along the lines which Mr. Birdseye has developed in his Gloucester, Mass., laboratories. There will be adaptations and additions as many persons add their ideas to this basic plan. But the result, and that not a remote one, will be that our national menu will have a wider variety of fresh foods than it ever has had."

Upsets Malthus Theory

"Demands of that most voracious article of furniture, the Great American Breakfast Table, are expanding in ever widening circles the sources of supply with which to satisfy our national appetite. This craving for good things to eat is forcing productive development and cultivation of vast areas in Canada and far countries and is making more remote the condition against which Malthus warned as he suggested that with every increase in population the world is nearer starvation.

"With the virtual elimination of insalubrious foods, the national menu is more appetizing and nourishing than it has ever been. The Canadian factory hand is better fed on the average than the kings of the eighteenth century. Many lands unite in this task of tickling the Canadian palate. As the Canadian sits down to breakfast he perhaps has Florida grapefruit sweetened with Cuban sugar."

New Shirts From London

Elusive Collar Stud is Held Fast in False Front in Companion Piece to Waistcoat Without Back; Holes for Collar Buttons Remain Fore and Aft.

London.—Although Britons pretend to be the most conservative of the world's inhabitants, London, as "the man's town," must, perforce, be as fickle in the matter of masculine fashions as Paris is with those of women. When Prince of Wales, the late King Edward gave Saville Row a shudder by creasing his trousers along the side, King George has continued this sartorial oddity. The King also fastens his four-in-hand tie with a gold ring instead of a knot. The innovations of the Prince of Wales are echoed all over the world.

Paris, however, always has laid claim to being the correct place for men to buy their shirts. After improving waistcoats to wear with evening clothes by removing the back, London tailors thought they had done enough in the interests of change. The shirt-makers have thought differently.

Cartoonists no longer will be able to lampoon the ubiquitous dress shirt stud. It will not fall out any more, once it is in unless it is bitten off. The shirt-makers have invented a dress shirt which buttons down the side, instead of fastening at the front. The buttons begin at the neckband and travel along the shoulder and down the side.

A dummy front opening with stud holes, is provided to conform to convention, and the idea is to insert the stud once and for all before climbing into the shirt. The neckband also opens at the side, although the holes for the collar buttons are in the usual positions.

Although Englishmen continually "grouse" about the tyranny and discomfort of stiff-front dress shirts, they have not shown any great desire to get away from this starchy form of armor. Even the American coat-shirt, with its peculiar advantages, is still a long way from being generally worn in this country, which all goes to prove that the majority of men do not take their own grumbling very seriously.

Combine-Harvested Wheat Grades High

Combine-harvested wheat *in Canada compares very favorably with binder-harvested wheat from a milling and baking standpoint. In general no difference could be observed between the two in regard to these qualities, although in one season at least the combine-harvested wheat was slightly superior to the binder-harvested wheat.

Jade of Many Hues

Peiping.—To-day, as for centuries past, Peiping is the most famous jade market in the world, although there is no record in history of the cold gem ever having been mined in this vicinity. Jade carvers, however, have lived here for untold generations and the work of these skilled craftsmen still attracts the stone itself to this city, accompanied by merchants from Europe and America who come here to buy the delicate carvings.

The vogue for jade ornaments in the United States is comparatively new but there is every indication that it will grow steadily, for jade has a charm which has long made it the most precious jewel in the Orient.

Besides the carvings, which are the handicraft of men, the qualities in jade which are prized in China are its color, its smooth coolness and its resonant tone, which is music to the ear.

Light green, mottled with white, is the color of jade most commonly seen in Canada because it is both inexpensive and becoming to wear, and thus most useful as a costume accessory. But jade in its natural state has shades from glistening white to deep dull black, including gray, yellow, brown, dark red, pink, orange, and every tone of green from the palest to the most brilliant emerald.

Rare Colors

Emerald-green jade, when clear and translucent, is the most expensive color, and a small well-shaped stone suitable for a ring may cost many thousands of dollars. All green jade is valued by comparison to these ideal jewels, and the faintest shading too light or too dark detracts from the price of the gems, as does also every degree of opaqueness and every flaw in texture.

The rarest color in jade is a flesh-pink hue. No example of this is to be found in Peiping to-day, but the seal of the Nationalist Government of China has been carved from a slab of this color, which was recently discovered in one of the southern provinces.

Black jade, which is also uncommon is prized more as a curiosity than for its intrinsic beauty, for it is neither as translucent as black crystal nor as opaque as onyx, and thus falls into an indifferent grayish class. However, when a carving is made from a piece of jade which combines both black and white sections in one stone, the result is often very artistic.

The most valuable white jade is absolutely white and absolutely pure. It does not have the grain of marble, or the fine lines of ivory, or the cloudiness of white agate, and it cannot be compared to snow or any other thing in the world except fine white jade. It does not glitter but it does shine and it is particularly suitable for the sheerest carving.

A very noteworthy collection of the so-called "mutton-fat jade" has been made by Queen Mary of England. Good jade of this quality is clean in color but it does not glimmer like the purest white jade and its general effect is much more solid. Great pieces of "mutton-fat" jade are to be found occasionally and these are carved into vases, bowls, flat or bas-relief pictures and other art objects.

Buried for Ages

Jade in yellow and red tones is exceptional in nature, but thousands of polished pieces, which have been buried in China through the centuries have been dug up in recent years and many of these have become reddish with age. The discoloration is believed due to minerals in the soil which have seeped into the jade. Sometimes this very ancient jade reveals beautiful shades of brown and orange, merging into the original green, and as these archaeological specimens are not expensive, they may make unique and attractive pendants, paper weights, or other curios.

Although jade is always colder than the temperature that surrounds it, and thus is a particularly suitable gem to wear in summer, it does absorb heat and its coldness cannot be tested fairly if held for long in a warm hand. The sound of jade cannot be tested by a small bit of carved jewelry, of course, but jade bells are made for no other purpose than to create music. The clear ringing tone of a jade gong is considered by Chinese musicians to be the loveliest sound on earth.—The Christian Science Monitor.

A TIRED FEELING IN SPRINGTIME

Not Sick, But Not Up to the Mark—You Need the Help of That Sterling Tonic, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—They Give New Vitality.

With the passing of winter many people feel weak, depressed and easily tired. The body lacks the vital force and energy pure blood alone can give. In a word, while not exactly sick, the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon them. A blood-building, nerve-restoring tonic is needed to give renewed health and energy. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an all-year-round blood builder and nerve tonic, but are especially useful in the spring. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood and with this new blood returning strength, cheerfulness and good health quickly follow.

If you are pale, easily tired, or breathless at the least exertion, if your complexion is poor or you are troubled with pimples or eruptions, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just what you need to put you right. If you have twinges of rheumatism, are subject to headaches and backaches, if you are irritable and nervous, if your sleep does not refresh you, or your appetite is poor, you need the treatment Dr. Williams' Pink Pills alone can give—you need the new blood, new strength and new energy this medicine always brings. Mr. A. Marcotte, North Ham, Que., writes: "I have found great benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I began using them I was in a badly run-down condition, and at times felt scarcely able to work. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have changed all this and since taking them I am enjoying the best of health. Every man who feels run-down and easily tired should give this great medicine a fair trial."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion or nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"KNOW THYSELF"

Sound thy heart to the bottom, and try it nicely, to be thoroughly satisfied of thy sincerity. Let no day pass without an account taken of thy life, and be sure to observe very diligently what ground you gain and lose, what alternation appears in your temper, behaviour, affection, desires; what reluctance or degeneracy from God; how near approaches you make, or to what distances you are cast. Above all other subjects, study your own self; for he who is thoroughly acquainted with himself hath attained to a more valuable sort of learning than if the course and position of the stars, the virtues of plants, the nature of all sorts of animals, etc., had employed his thoughts.

Easter

Far back into the early ages of Christian history, one Christian would meet another on Easter Sunday with the words: "The Christ is risen!" And the answer would be: "He is risen indeed!" Go to church Easter.

Mr. Hardfax—"You seem to be growing prettier each day."
Miss Muggs—"Thank you for the compliment; I'm glad you think so."
Mr. Hardfax—"Yes! If you keep on this way you stand a chance of being a fairly good looking old woman."

If she declares she despises him look out for the wedding announcement soon.

Man proposes—and woman accepts him before he has time to back out.

Candidate—"It is my intention to conduct a bunkless campaign."
Press Agent—"Sweet, brother, and I'm just the guy that's got the baloney to put that hoovey over."

Stern Mamma—"Adolph, you've been a naughty boy. Go to the vibrator and give yourself a shaking."

Justified, By Jinks!!

It's no wonder married men go out with the girls. Their wives won't let them bring them home.

Josh—"Where is the old-fashioned girl who used to hang mistletoe in the front room and blush when kissed?"
Si—"Oh, she's put a parking light on her roadster now."

Symptoms

I am a sort of a cynical cuss, Mellow and mildly sarcastic. My sensibilities hardly will muss. Any more; they're elastic.

I have aversions—God knows it—a score

Motor trips, talkies, recitals, College reunions—they all are a bore. Paining me deep in my vitals. I dislike dancing—at least with a meal. And only when I am drinking; Cabarets long ago lost their appeal—Awful, to my way of thinking. Night life? Man, for it I never was strong.

Really, I'm not a bit sporty; Yes, you are not in the least degree wrong—
I am a shade over forty.

A woman is wise enough to know that when she wants to touch a man for money, her lips are much more effective than her hands.

Young wife (to husband who has just bruised his thumb spading in the garden and expressed his opinion)—"Oh, Harold—and you said you always carried a spade a spade!"

One-half the world may not know how the other half lives, but it has its suspicions.

You can't eat your cake and have it, too; neither can the farmer sell off all his hens in the spring and expect to furnish town folks with cheap eggs in the fall.

The Girl—"I found that book you lent me frightfully dull, Professor. I thought you said there was a naughty problem in it?"

The Professor—"My dear young lady, I said a 'knotty problem'."

When the kick in "white mule" is potash the kick is often fatal.

Daughter—"When did you first get acquainted with dad?"

Mother—"About three weeks after we were married."

Then there was the telephone operator who kept plugging away until she got her man.

A motion to adjourn is always in order.

"That will be enough out of you," said the doctor, as he stitched the patient together.

Empire Agriculture

Victoria Colonist (Cons.): What a vast wealth of horses, cattle, sheep and pigs the British Empire possesses! It is a little weak in pigs, possessing only 11,000,000, or about 5 per cent. of the whole number. America is the place for pigs. There is a hog for every man, woman and child in the United States, and then some left over. Of cattle the Empire has nearly half the number of the whole world, 250,000,000 out of 560,000,000, and it has the same number of sheep. Of horses it has one-tenth of the world's number. This is only a fraction of what the Empire could produce. The grass lands now support 500,000,000 animals. If all these animals were suited by their surroundings, if they had the best kind of grass and roots on which they could be fed, if they were free from disease, their numbers might be doubled or trebled. There might be as many stock animals in the British Empire as there are people in the world.

Flying in Africa

The return of Sir Alan Cobham, the English flying man, after another long stay in Africa, where he has been surveying the air routes from Egypt to Cape Town, emphasizes the fact that the Dark Continent of Livingstone and Stanley is being turned into a white man's touring ground. Progress heretofore, though steady, has been slow. Roads and railways have been gradually pushed forward, and steamers ply on the rivers and lakes. But if the rate of advance is to keep pace with modern ideas it must be accelerated. The establishment of regular air services is essential to the rapid opening up of the interior.

The British have been making careful and elaborate preparations, and the French and Belgians have been actively at work in the western areas. It is the task of the survey party which Sir Alan Cobham has left behind him in Africa to improve the British line of communications. As he sees the problem, it is not enough to run a regular service of airplanes by which the flight from London to the Cape can be accomplished in eight days. It is a proper function of the airplane to bring the remotest settlements in equatorial Africa into close touch with civilization. Already a center has been established at Nairobi, which will be a junction on the main air line, whence light airplanes can be sent off in any direction to stations in the interior.

If the development of the African Continent is to be both rapid and beneficent, it will depend on the extent to which white men can not only settle there, but live a civilized life in remote districts. To-day it is the airplane, and the airplane alone, which can keep them in effective touch with civilization.

General Smuts is surely right in stating that the progress of the African races depends on the wise, co-ordinated work of white settlers. But for many years to come white men in equatorial Africa will be relatively few in number and widely scattered. Their work can only be civilizing in the best sense of the term if they maintain their own contacts with civilization; and it can only be co-ordinated by diminishing the obstacles of distance and linking up the scattered units. For that the airplane—which makes light of impenetrable jungles, swamps, and suffocating heat—and well-placed airdromes are indispensable.—Christian Science Monitor.

HOPE

Hope is the most beneficial of all the affections; and doth much to the prolongation of life, if it be not too often frustrated; but entereth ineth the fancy with an expectation of good; therefore they which fix and propound to themselves some end, as the mark and scope of their life, and continually and by degrees go forward in the same, are for the most part long-lived, inasmuch that when they are come to the top of their hope, and can go no higher therein, they commonly droop, and live not long after. So that hope is a lent-joy, which may be beaten out to a great extension, like gold.—Lord Bacon.

Minard's Will Kill Corns.

GENEROSITY

True generosity rises above the ordinary rules of social conduct and flows with much too full a stream to be comprehended within the precise marks of formal precepts. It is a vigorous principle in the soul which opens and expands all her virtues far beyond those which are only the forced and unnatural productions of a timid obedience. The man who is influenced singly by motives of the latter kind, aims no higher than at certain authoritative standards, without ever attempting to reach those glorious elevations which constitute the only true heroism of the social character. Religion, without this sovereign principle, degenerates into a slavish fear, and wisdom into a specious cunning; learning is but the aversion of the mind, and wit its more pleasing kind of madness. In a word, generosity sanctifies every passion, and adds grace to every acquisition of the soul; and if it does not necessarily include, at least it reflects a lustre upon the whole circle of moral and intellectual qualities.—Melmoth.

Improved Diet

Better Nourishment for Babies Now in Prospect

Chicago.—Through experiment with dogs and rats, scientists attending the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology indicated that better nourishment for infants is in prospect.

The part that diet plays in the ability of a mother to nurse her young and thus provide them with the most natural and satisfactory sort of food was demonstrated by Dr. R. G. Daggs, of the University of Rochester.

He found that in dogs, milk production was greatly increased through a diet rich in liver.

It took a lot of eggs and kidney to produce similar results in experiments with rats, he said, showing that with different animals different diets are required to increase lactation.

Results obtained in these experiments point the way, it was observed, to the development of a diet that probably will make bottle feeding of infants a thing of the past.

Other scientists revealed to the conference new means of measuring the amount of electricity generated by the body in action.

By means of a nerve from a frog's leg, properly hooked up with electrodes and a maze of wires and apparatus, sparks were thrown off as the nerve was irritated and made to perform.

Other demonstrations brought before the gathering a group of dogs and cats that had been deprived by surgery of most of their brains. They displayed traits totally unlike those of normal animals and were used to show live beings can go through the motions of living with almost no brain structure.

DON'T SUFFER WITH DANGEROUS INDIGESTION

Do you suffer after meals with a belching, from sour and acid stomach? Many believe they have heart trouble and tremble with fear, expecting any minute to drop dead. This condition can be prevented, likewise relieved.

Take Carter's Little Liver Pills after meals and neutralize the gases. Sweeten the sour and acid stomach, relieve the gas and encourage digestion.

The stomach, liver and bowels will be cleansed of poison, painful and dangerous indigestion disappears and the system enjoys a tonic effect. Don't delay. Ask your druggist for a 25c pkg. of Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Irritable, Tired? Nerves bad?

That may mean kidney or liver trouble. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy

How can your nerves be sound if your blood is clogged with body poisons that should be thrown off? How can you keep the admiration of people if you are always cross, worn, dull?

Clean out your system with Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, a safe herbal remedy that has won the grateful thanks of sufferers for more than 50 years. Pleasant to take, it gently stimulates liver and kidneys to do the work that Nature intended. Originally a doctor's prescription—and just as good today as it ever was.

Every druggist knows Warner's—has for years. Your health may be in better condition than that of hundreds of others, but all the more reason to take care of it while you have it. Get a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy today. It costs little. It does much. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Toronto, Ontario.

Could not Eat or Sleep after Husband's Death

Her husband's death left her very run down in health, unable to eat or sleep much. Now she is brighter in spirits and eats and sleeps well. What caused the difference? Let her answer in her own words:—

"I think Kruschen Salts are a splendid tonic. After my husband's death in December last I became very run down in health. Had terrible fits of depression and was unable to eat or sleep much. I was also troubled with rheumatism. I decided to take Kruschen Salts and have now taken the little daily dose for nearly two months, during which time my health has greatly improved. The rheumatism has completely left me. I am much brighter in spirits and both eat and sleep well."

When life begins to "get you down," when you begin to feel the results of modern artificial conditions—errors of diet, worry, overwork, lack of exercise—then you should turn to Kruschen Salts. They possess a wonderful power of giving new life and vitality to the countless millions of cells of which the human body is composed. The way to keep smiling is to take Kruschen Salts every morning—just a pinch in your first morning cup of coffee or tea.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

If you have never tried Kruschen—try it now at our expense. We have distributed a great many special "GIANT" packages which make it easy for you to prove our claim for yourself. Ask your druggist for the new "GIANT" 75c package. This consists of our regular 75c bottle together with a separate trial bottle—sufficient for about one week. Open the trial bottle first, put it to the test, and then, if not entirely convinced that Kruschen does everything we claim it to do, the regular bottle is still as good as new. Take it back. Your druggist is authorized to return your 75c. immediately and without question. What would be fairer? Manufactured by E. Crutcher Kruschen, Ltd., Manchester, Eng. (Estab. 1756). Importers: McGillivray Bros. Ltd., Toronto.

Castor, of Los Angeles, were in town on Saturday last, having been up to Montebello to see the wonderful activities surrounding the new Lucerne in Quebec. Mr. Castor motored through from Los Angeles, but were greatly impressed by the splendid scenery of this part of our Province.

Attention is called to the notice appearing in our Coming Events Column of the meeting of those interested in Golf and Tennis, to be present in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening next, May 13th., in order to freely discuss and create greater enthusiasm in these games. The fees have been put down to a will be a goodly attendance so that workable basis and it is hoped there the club may prove of real benefit.

Mr. Kenneth Elliott has been appointed manager of a Branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Masson, Que., and left last week to take over his new duties. Kenneth was one of our popular young men whom every one liked, and while Lachute is sorry to lose him his many friends wish him every success in his promotion. Mr. Jack Skuffham has succeeded him in his position here as local assistant.

Next Sunday morning a Mother's Day service will be held in the Lachute United Church, with music and sermon appropriate to the occasion. The evening service will be in charge of the Young People's Society of the Church. A Young People's chorus will lead in the service of Praise, and an address will be given by Rev. Norman Coll, M.A., B.D., Secretary of Religious Education for the Conference of Montreal, Ottawa and Newfoundland.

Messrs. Wilson Bros., Lachute, Que., have a pair of purebred Holstein heifers in their herd sired by King Posch Raymondale that in the 365 day division of the B.O.P. on twice-a-day-milking with records just completed have finished their lactation periods with an average production of 17,352 lbs. milk and 824.37 lbs. butter. The six-year old cow, Spring Hill Echo Girl, is credited with a production of 17,956 lbs. milk and 870 lbs. butter with an average test of 3.88% fat, while the other individual, Spring Hill Snowball Echo gave 16,749 lbs. milk and 778.75 lbs. butter with an average test of 3.72%. Both animals were bred by Jas. O'Reilly, St. Eugene, Ont.

The Young People's Society, of the Lachute United Church, entertained their parents, at a social gathering on Monday evening, May 5th, in the Sunday School Hall. A "Mother's Day" programme was given by the Christian Fellowship Committee; the programme being opened by a poem of "Welcome" to the parents, followed by a Chorus from "Songs That Mother Sang." The Male Quartette sang, "My Mother's Prayer" and a solo entitled, "The End of the Road" was rendered by Mr. Owen Todd. Readings were given which revealed the origin of "Mother's Day."

After refreshments were served, games and a sing-song were enjoyed by all. The evening was brought to a close by singing the "National Anthem."

THE LATE ALEX. RIDDELL

The death occurred on Sunday last of Alexander Riddell, who for the past 53 years was a well known and highly respected citizen among us.

He was in his 79th year and was the last of the charter members of the Laurentian Lodge, No. 14, I.O.O.F., of which he had lived until next November, he would have been a member for fifty years. He was married in 1877 to Margaret Carpenter, and their golden wedding anniversary was celebrated three years ago. He is survived by his wife and by one son, Austin, of Jackson, Mich; and by six daughters, Mrs. A. Middleton and Mrs. G. Mitchell, of Lachute; Mrs. A. W. Hunter, of Vancouver; the Misses Alice, Gertrude and Ella of Lachute.

The funeral took place from his late residence on Tuesday last, conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, assisted by Rev. H. Cousins, in the presence of a large number of sympathizing friends and relatives. At the graveside a short service was also held by the members of the I.O.O.F. The large number of beautiful floral tributes bore silent testimony to the loving esteem in which deceased was held.

THE LATE MRS. WM. ELLIOTT.

Many of our real old pioneers are fast slipping away and this week we are called upon to chronicle the death of Mrs. Wm. Elliott, who died at the home of her son William, on Friday last, May 8th., at the advanced age of 97 years.

Deceased lady was formerly Miss Margaret Patterson, who came to this country with her parents from Bel-lana, County Mayo, Ireland, in 1845 being then only 12 years of age. They settled in Mille Isle where they lived and reared a large family, moving to Lachute about 18 years ago. Many stirring tales were oft related by Mrs. Elliott as she told of the hardships encountered in the early struggles, how they walked through the bush to Lachute in order to carry home the necessary bag of flour. About 18 years ago Mr. and Mrs. Elliott moved to Lachute when in the following year Mr. Elliott died. She is survived by two sons and four daughters as follows:—William and Andrew of Lachute; Mrs. Samuel Dawson, of Mille Isle; Mrs. W. J. Rogers and Mrs. Matthew Rogers, of Lachute; Mrs. S. Pollock, of Montreal. Twenty-three grand children and thirty great grand children also survive.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, interment being made in the little cemetery of Mille Isle, after an impressive service, conducted in the Anglican Church.

THE LATE MRS. DAVID MCFARLANE

The death took place on Friday last of one of our old residents Mrs. David McFarlane, after a short illness of a few weeks, aged 87. Deceased lady was formerly Miss Mary Patterson, and was born at Ste. Canute, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Patterson. She was married to David McFarlane of Upper Lachute, who predeceased her some 22 years ago. A bright, earnest christian woman, she was in her younger days, a great worker in the Presbyterian Sunday School, and also greatly interested in the W. M. S., being the last of the Charter members who were present at the first W. M. S. formed in 1885. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. W. B. Rosborough and Rev. E. F. Morrison. She leaves to mourn her loss, two brothers, Edward and James Patterson, of Lachute.

Mrs. Everett MacGibbon & daughter Annie spent the early part of this week with friends in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Corbett and daughter Catherine and Mr. I. W. Roberts, of Montreal, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. McPhail.

The Lachute Tennis Club held its annual business meeting on Friday evening last, in McArthur's Hall. The election of officers were resultant as follows:—President, J. C. Skuffham; Vice-President, E. Middleton; Secretary, Olive Stanforth. The executive planned to make the coming season as interesting as possible, and the ground's committee are now preparing to make many improvements. Fees for adult members were left the same as previous years, being $5.00, but the junior fee was raised from $1.00 to $2.00. New members are cordially invited to join the club, and may do so by writing, or seeing the Secretary.

CLEAN UP DAYS

Tuesday and Wednesday next, May 13th. and 14th. have been appointed as clean up days and the public are requested to gather all rubbish in a refuge and deposit same at the sidewalk where it will be carted away. They are respectfully asked to assist the town by complying with this request.

By order of The Lachute Town Council.

Gorilla Changes Nest Each Night

Dr. H. C. Bingham, of Yale, Reports on Behavior of Primates in Belgian Congo Where Animals are Protected in 500,000 Acre Sanctuary

Less Than 1,000 Are Left

New Haven, Conn.—Last June, under the auspices of Yale University and the Carnegie Institution of Washington, Dr. Harold C. Bingham, research associate in the Institute of Human Relations at Yale, and Mrs. Bingham departed for "Parc National Albert" in Africa to study the habits of the gorilla in the wild animal sanctuary which has been created there. Dr. and Mrs. Bingham have returned, and an account was made public, describing the purposes which Dr. Bingham had in mind in making the study, and the observations on the behavior of these animals.

Gorillas are now to be found in only two regions of Africa. Though far apart from each other, both regions are at the equator. One species, commonly called the coast gorilla, occupies a mountainous region a considerable distance inland from the Atlantic. The other species, the mountain gorilla, the subject of Dr. and Mrs. Bingham's study, is to be found on the slopes of the volcanic peaks of the Kivu region at an altitude of from 8,000 to 12,000 feet. The two regions are widely separated by the forested area of the Upper Congo basin.

Ever since Paul du Chaillu penetrated the forests of Africa and brought back thrilling stories of encounters with gorillas, these great apes have been the prey of the big game hunters of the world. Because they propagate slowly and because many have been shot, authorities have estimated the gorilla population of this area to be fewer than 1,000.

In 1921, the American Museum of Natural History in New York sent an expedition to the region headed by Carl Akeley. It was he who, upon his return to America, directed the attention of the scientific world to the beauty and magnificence of the area, to the richness of its plant and animal life, and to the danger of extermination which threatened the gorillas. Enlisting the efforts of scientists, a movement was launched which led to the promulgation of a decree by Albert, King of the Belgians (1925), that the area should be made a perpetual sanctuary for the gorillas and for all other animals inhabiting it.

The reservation is situated in the northeastern part of the Belgian Congo between Lake Kivu and Uganda and includes three volcanoes—Mount Mikeno, Mount Karisimbi and Mount Visoke. In honor of King Albert, to whose interest the reservation is due, it has been designated, "Parc National Albert."

INCLUDES 500,000 ACRES

Last year the protected area was greatly enlarged and now includes approximately 500,000 acres grouped in four reserves lying in the Kivu district, in proximity to one another. In addition to protecting all forms of plant and animal life in these four reserves, the royal decree expressly forbids "the destruction, capture or pursuit of the gorilla, as well as all forms of hunting this animal."

The expedition was undertaken not only to obtain authoritative information about the behavior of free-living gorillas but to investigate the feasibility of co-ordinating such observations with lines of anthropoid research already established at Yale, and the programs contemplated for the anthropoid station to be established in Florida.

Dr. and Mrs. Bingham sailed from New York on June 7 and landed at Dar es Salaam on the African coast, July 23. From this point they proceeded by train, boat and automobile transport to sixty kilometers north of Lake Kivu and three days distant from Akeley Camp, their objective in the Parc. At Rutshuru they were received by Parc officials, who provided them with comfortable living quarters and helped them to obtain competent guides and porters, and to make the preparations for their observational work.

In telling of this part of the trip Dr. Bingham said:

"Motor services from Uvira to Costermansville (formerly Bukavu) and from Kisenyi to Rutshuru is surprisingly modern. Much of the road from Lake Tanganyika to Lake Kivu is hard surfaced. Between 2,000 and 3,000 natives are occupied in extending the road and keeping it in repair. Such are the industrial changes in a decade that we went from lake to lake in four hours; the Akeley-Bradley expedition covered the distance in record time, but required eight days by porter safari.

"At Costermansville we stayed a week at a comfortable hotel managed by a capable English family. This was the last hotel we saw for three months. We put on our hobnails and bush jackets, employed our first native boy and began to prepare for our work in the mountains that was soon to follow.

From Costermansville we went to Kisenyi on freight boats and barges. This was perhaps the hardest part of the journey. The small barges were loaded with various kinds of freight and swarmed with native workers. There were no sleeping accommodations and there was little protection from the sun. No meals were served. Freight service over Lake Kivu does not yet permit a fixed schedule. The captain calls at those ports where freight is to be received or delivered and lands in the evening for the convenience of the passengers.

WINDS DELAY BOAT

"The first night, Aug. 6, we landed at Kehes to sleep and eat. An unscheduled landing on the 7th, due to heavy winds, delayed our arrival at Kisenyi until the following day. This illustrates the uncertainty of travel over Lake Kivu at the present time. There is a passenger and mail boat, but unfortunately it carries no heavy baggage. We could have chartered this little boat and proceeded quite comfortably to Kisenyi if we had been equipped with sleeping and eating accommodations. Already we had learned from experience to take no chances of being separated from our baggage and food.

"Arriving at Kisenyi August 8 we established camp and began the selection of our personal boys, securing three during the week. Progress with the Swahili language became more rapid when we had to make our wants known to the boys in their own language. None of them could understand French or English.

"On the 17th we reached Rutshuru, the headquarters of Parc officials, and, greatly to our surprise as well as delight, found a house surrounded by tropical gardens awaiting us. We were told that it was ours while we were there, and that we might take the key with us when working in the gorilla sanctuary, leaving behind supplies that we would not need in camp.

"Following the advice of the administrator of Rutshuru, and the conservateur of the Parc, we made Lulunga the base of our field supplies. Meanwhile I had called on the White Fathers at Lulunga Mission in company with M. Hemmeleers, conservateur of the Parc, by whom we were received most cordially. The administrator, M. Dubuisson, had made official arrangements at Lulunga for our porters, storage of our supplies, supplies for the porters and for our personal accommodations in their guest house.

VISIT AKELEY CAMP

"Many of the successes which we experienced are due to the generous aid of Fathers Provost and Van den Hout, of the mission. Through the latter especially our practical arrangements were completed for three separate porter safaris which started from Lulunga as a base.

On August 26, Dr. and Mrs. Bingham with native guides, gun bearers, personal boys and forty porters, left Lulunga for the three-day climb up the wooded slopes of Mount Mikeno to Kabara where they established their first field camp.

It was to this spot that Akeley returned in 1926 for the purpose of exploring the reserve and of obtaining accessories and background for the gorilla group which he was preparing for African Hall in the American Museum of Natural History of New York. It was with difficulty that he reached his old camp site, for he had contracted fever on the lower levels and was not well. He failed rapidly and in two or three days the end came. He was fittingly buried, as he wished, within the area that through his initial efforts has become a safe refuge for one of the two existing gorilla species.

CONTACT WITH GORILLAS

of Akeley's grave and here the expedition remained for the first month of work. During the period, they were in frequent contact with various gorilla groups, following them as they fed their way along, carefully recording for future study, observations on the nests, the feeding habits, the social responses, the nomadic behavior, and the individual traits of the animals. They took moving and still pictures whenever conditions favored.

A belt of forest growth of varying width, in which the bamboo predominates, encircles the central mass of the three great volcanoes of the Kivu region—Mikeno, Karisimbi and Visoke—at an altitude of from about 7,500 to 10,000 feet. In places it is so dense that it is impossible for one to penetrate it except by cutting trails.

It is in the bamboo belt, and for a considerable distance above it, that the gorilla ranges in his search for food. The succulent shoots, the "suckers," which the bamboo roots send through the soil into the air above constitute an important item in his food. The young and tender shoots are eaten entire; the older and tougher stalks are torn open and only the inner portion selected.

FOND OF WILD CELERY

Wild celery is another growth that the gorilla apparently finds appetizing. This plant, which attains a height of six or eight feet, grows luxuriantly over extensive areas. The stalks are thick and filled with water, and the young shoots are tender, and crush or break readily. The gorillas pull the stalks out of the ground and eat the succulent roots and inner and lower stalks.

That the gorilla, however, is not limited in his diet to bamboo shoots and wild celery, but that he feeds upon other plant varieties, is a conclusion which Dr. and Mrs. Bingham found much evidence to support. They gave particular attention to the growths upon which the gorilla feeds, and brought back a number of such plant specimens for examination and identification.

It seems to be evident that gorilla bands are continually moving, though in a leisurely manner. Apparently they have no abiding place, but constantly wander about as the lure of food impels them, though, of course, their movements are limited to the zone in which they find conditions to be the most suitable. Indications are that they sleep but one night in a given "nest," which is a very simple affair made by pulling and breaking down plants and vines which chance to be at hand.

OBSERVE ANIMAL BEHAVIOR

Some reports which reached Dr. and Mrs. Bingham indicated that these animals frequently built their nests in trees; other reports had it that the nests in the region were never built off the ground. While, in general, it seems improbable that the great weight of the fully grown gorilla's body permits him to spend much time in trees, nevertheless, from the evidence obtained Dr. and Mrs. Bingham believe that the varying physical conditions in the area over which the gorillas range may lead to important differences in feeding and nesting habits. It is probable, too, they feel, that changes in climate, seasons and rainfall, may affect the behavior of these animals, resulting in significant environment adaptations.

For nearly a month the observational work of the expedition was carried on in altitudes above the bamboo belt. A similar period was later devoted to exploration from three different field camps in and below the bamboo belt on the slopes of Kikeno. On these lower altitudes they found tree nests of the gorillas, sometimes as high as fifty feet above the ground; and, east and west of Berunga, also old nests made by chimpanzees.

Both above and below the bamboos they observed gorillas and trailed various bands for distances varying from one to three days of gorilla travel. In the course of these studies they virtually girdled Mount Mikeno, and Karisimbi in part, at altitudes ranging from 6,000 to 12,000 feet.

TRAIL BUFFALO, ELEPHANTS

On October 11 the party struck camp returning to Rutshuru where a few days were spent in trailing buffalo and elephants in order to compare the activities of these animals at lower altitudes with their activities on the slopes of the volcanoes. On October 29, Dr. and Mrs. Bingham turned homeward.

Just as with all research workers, study of a problem always raises innumerable queries not before thought of, so with Dr. and Mrs. Bingham. While they obtained valuable information about the behavior of these great apes in their free and untrammelled habitat, they returned with many fresh questions relating to behavioristic adaptations, questions that can not be answered with assurance without further study and observation.

In summarizing results, Dr. Bingham said: "After all, perhaps the greatest contribution of this expedition may be the devising of methods for future study of these varieties of the social and adaptive behavior of which we found fascinating evidence."

Reasons Why They See Different Things

Why the Traveller Comes Home with Stories and Descriptions that Vary from those Given by the Sailor.

Mr. Alex Waugh, in "The Coloured Countries," has written an unconventional travel book. He tells of the Hebrides, Haiti, Martinique, Siam, Ceylon, and the West Indies; fearlessly and frankly discusses the moral problems of the coloured races and the white people; and has that rare gift of revelation that enables his non-travelling reader to enjoy the journeyings he has undertaken. In his chapter on Tahiti, for example, the following passage gives a real glimpse of the life as it is lived or endured:

"One by one we have found, those of us who have made the experiment," writes Mr. Alex Waugh, "that there is something in the atmosphere of Tahiti that prevents the modern sophisticated Westerner from relaxing. He cannot forget Europe. He cannot take root. And before he has been there many weeks he is beset by the last thing that he had expected to be beset by there, a curious restlessness and irritability. His nerves are on edge. He cannot settle down to anything. He loses all sense of proportion. He embarks on the most absurd quarrels with his acquaintances. He loses the very thing he came in search of, tranquillity.

"Looking back in a calm remembrance of all that happened there, I have wondered sometimes whether it is not to the monthly arrival of the mail boat as much as anything that this restlessness is due. It introduces the idea of time, whereas timelessness is the essential condition of island life. A few days before my first visit there I dropped and broke my watch. It did not matter much on board a ship, and in Papeete I would get myself another one I thought. But when I reached Tahiti I found that I had no need of a watch. Hours did not matter. When the sun rose you got up. When the sun was high you sieste. When the sun sank you began to think of supper.

During my six weeks there I had no watch, and never missed it. And it seemed to me a fitting symbol of a return to Western life that practically my first act on my return to San Francisco should be to buy one. I was back in a world where time mattered."

Then again his insight into the real and tangible lure of travel is most illuminating:

"It is not so much that one sees the world through it," says the author, "as that one comes to a whole series of sensations that are to be won to no how else. For, in point of actual worldliness, the sailor, though he has touched at so many corners of the world, knows little of it.

"I have travelled, I suppose, in all, on something like thirty ships, varying in size from the vast Atlantic ferry boats to the little trading steamers that coast round the lagoons of the New Hebrides; I have seen something of the sailor's life, and, knowing much the actual conditions governing it may chance, in its essentials it remains the same.

"We listen enviously at first to the sailor's account of the seas he has crossed and the lands that he has visited, but in actual fact he sees nothing of those far countries except their coastline. He rarely remains for longer than five days at any port. There work to be done upon the ship; there is not time to go far inland. He has only a few hours at his disposal. He has no friends ashore. As likely as not the language is foreign to him. The cafes are the only places that he can go to; there is not much difference between one cafe and another.

"The land life of the sailor is narrow, uninteresting, and, in the true sense of the word, unromantic. It is, however, an inessential part of the sailor's life. You can get no true picture of his real life by watching him in a 'dive' in Colon, or in the chop sueys that are north of the West India Docks. He is a seaman, and his life is on his ship.

"At sea he is a very different person, simple and direct, leading a healthy, pleasant, monotonous existence. His life is centred in his ship and his companions; he has no part in that which constitutes the life of the normal landsman. He rarely reads a newspaper, politics mean nothing to him; his conversation is not a fabric of murder trials and football results. He is concerned with currents and cargoes; with the day's run, with the changing winds, with the interests that compose the sum of the infinite variety of the sea, with a communal and self-contained existence.

"He has simplified life into two things, his ship and his home. Home does not mean to him a fabric of complicated relations, but two or three people—his parents, his wife, his children. A sailor, for all they may talk about the 'wife in every port,' is an extremely domesticated person. He has no opportunity of knowing more than a very few people intimately, and his life is bound up in those few. The excitement of arriving at port is more often the thrill over a mail than the prospect of a hilarious evening.

"We picture the sailor's life in terms of adventure and romance. We think of the sailor as some one who has seen life widely; but in point of fact there is no class of person who is less familiar with what is held ordinarily to constitute life. In consequence, he retains that freshness, almost amounting to an innocence of outlook, that is his particular and peculiar charm."

Secret History of Boer War Revealed

General Sir Ian Hamilton Talks to "Defenders of Lady Smith" in Old London

London—General Sir Ian Hamilton, speaking at a gathering of the "Defenders of Ladysmith" in London told some "secret history" of the South African War. He said:

"I will deal with matters of which I have intimate knowledge, beginning with Elandslaagte on Oct. 21. On that date General French, who was out reconnoitring to the north, 'phoned in at 8 a.m. through the railway telegraph lines to Sir George White that he was in touch with the enemy and wanted reinforcements. I was sent out in command of Field Artillery, the Devons, Manchesters, and Gordons.

"At 11 a.m. we arrived at Modder Spruit, five miles from the enemy, who lay at Elandslaagte. There General French came down to the line and met us. The matter was talked over, and I was kept on pressing on at once. General French said he could not until the horses had been fed and watered.

"One way and another we did not start until 3 p.m., and did not get into action till 4.30.

"We carried the position at 5.45 p.m. Night was falling. You know the course of the battle. With half an hour more of daylight none of the Boers would have escaped.

Immortal Scoop

"But the biggest chance of making an immortal scoop that ever came my way was on Oct. 27. The cavalry reported a big Boer commando with guns to be in laager five miles north-east of Ladysmith. I was sent out with one infantry brigade and found the cavalry had left to guard the railway between Ladysmith and Colenso. But an officer left behind showed us the laager and gave us an excellent sketch of the ground.

"In the laager were 5,000 Boers and eleven guns. From the farm where my brigade lay concealed a road led right up to the laager only two miles off. I sent in to Ladysmith and got leave to make a night attack.

"They gave me leave. My orders were issued. Start at one a.m. by the light of a small moon. Empty magazines and fixed bayonets. The thing was a 'cert.'" The cavalry had come back and French had agreed to plan and to pursue whenever it grew light.

"The Royal Fusiliers and Gordon Highlanders were to lead. We said our prayers and lay down to sleep. At eleven p.m. I was awakened. I thought the hour had struck.

"Alas, it was an order to get back in to Ladysmith at once. Had that attack come off there would have been no mournful Monday and no siege of Ladysmith. But then, dear friends, we wouldn't be here."

A SPRING TONIC AN AID TO HEALTH

You Can Lay the Foundation of Good Health Now by Building Up Your Blood and Strengthening Your Nerves Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The good old fashion of taking a tonic in the Springtime, like most of the customs of our grandparents, is based upon sound common sense and good medical practice. Winter is always a trying time for those who are not in rugged health. Many men, women and children go through the winter on reserve strength they have stored up during the sunny summer months, and grow increasingly pale and languid as the spring days approach. A tonic for the blood and nerves at this time will do much for such people, by putting color in the cheeks and banishing that tired feeling that worries thousands of people at this season of the year.

It is impossible to be energetic if your blood is thin and weak, or if your nerves are frayed or shattered. You cannot compete with others if you do not get refreshing sleep at night, or if your appetite is poor or you are losing weight. You need a tonic at this time to add to your efficiency now, as well as to save you from suffering later on. And in all the realm of medicine, there is no safer or better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills tone and enrich the blood which circulates through every portion of the body, strengthening the nerves and running down organs, and bringing a feeling of new strength and energy to weak, easily tired, despondent men, women and children.

Mrs. L. Hupman, Summerville Centre, N.S., writes:—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been of the greatest benefit to me. A few years ago I was in a badly run down condition. I became so weak and nervous that I could scarcely go about, and doing my house work left me completely used up. Everything seemed to worry me, and I was in a very discouraged condition when I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I soon found the pills helping me, and continuing their use I fully regained my health. Since then I always take a few boxes in the Spring to build me up for the hot weather, and always find the best results. I therefore cheerfully recommend these pills as the best of health builders.

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Truth About Porridge

A few years ago Scots who had crossed the Border and won success used to ascribe their triumphs to the "parritch" on which they had been fed as children.

Recently they haven't been saying quite so much on the subject—probably because porridge is now more easily obtained in England, and those who praised it might be expected to eat it as well. And now a doctor comes along who says that it is lacking in food value, and that, if you are going to eat it, you must take cod liver oil along with it. Porridge and cod liver oil doesn't sound particularly appetizing, but it is certainly true that the old faith in porridge as a food is on the wane. And the porridge fanatics cry: "Look what fine men and women Scotland raised on oatmeal in the old days!" Isn't really an argument. Doubtless they were—because only the very strongest and healthiest specimens could survive the diet.

The condition of salvation is that kind of belief in Jesus Christ which authenticates itself in repentance for the past and in an amendment of life for the future.—Noble.

The new-rich family really needs a big house. It's so much easier to hide old Dad when swell company comes.

Poet—"Have you an opening for a poet of real genius?"
Editor—"Certainly. We have several doors and any number of windows."

Chicago Mother—"And now, my dear, go in and shoot father good night."

Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow the hospital and undertaker will get you.

Happiness

Not what we have, but what we use, Not what we see, but what we choose, These are the things that mar or bless And swell the sum of human happiness.

The things nearby, not things afar, Not what we seem, but what we are, These are the things that make or break,

And gives each heart its joy or ache, Not what seems fair, but what is true, Not what we dream, but the good we do,

These are the things that shine like gems,

Like Jewels in Royal Diadems. Not as we take, but as we give, Not as we pray, but as we live, These are the things that make for Peace, Both now, and after Time shall cease.

The sad part about the prohibition debate is that it never gets to the play in the finals.

"Oh, no," cried Jimmie bitterly, "there ain't no favorites in this family—not much! If I bite my finger nails I get a rap over the knuckles, but if baby eats his whole foot they think it's too sweet for words."

Nothing could be worse than sitting on top of the world all by yourself.

Second Tenderfoot—"I see by the papers."

One trouble with industry is that no sooner than it is adjusted it has to stop for "readjustment."

A patient in a hospital awoke after an operation and found the blinds of his room drawn.

Patient—"Why are those blinds down, doctor?"

Physician—"Well, there's a fire burning across the alley and I didn't want you to wake up and think the operation was a failure."

An old railroad says: "Trying to see through a pair of dirty specs is just about as difficult as trying to see signals in a dense fog."

Nothing grows so burdensome from long carrying as a grudge.

"Now, listen, boy, you had better watch your step, because I work in the supply department of my father's business and he's an undertaker."

What has become of the old-fashioned child welfare program that used to be done in the woodshed?

WARNING TO MOTHERS

Watch the Health of Your Little Ones at All Times.

No mother can expect that her child will escape all the ills to which babyhood and childhood are subject, but she can do much to lessen the severity of these troubles. The mother should be constantly on her guard to prevent childhood ailments, or if they come on suddenly, as they usually do, to have the means at hand to relieve them. Thousands of mothers have found Baby's Own Tablets the ideal remedy for little ones—thousands of mothers always keep the Tablets in the house as a safeguard against the sudden illness of their little ones.

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth easy. The Tablets are absolutely guaranteed free from injurious drugs and may be given to the youngest child with perfect safety. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Premier Hertzog Of South Africa

Picture of Man Whose Party Had Beaten that of Smuts in Two Elections

"Hertzog is not really anti-British," says Mr. L. E. Neame. "He has a fine appreciation of English literature. He and his children speak English better than many English people. His sons and his nephews have been sent to universities in England."

English is generally the language used in his home. He is only anti-British to the extent that Britain has over-ruled, or might over-rule, or weaken, South Africanism. He is, and always has been, anti-imperial. He was, and still is, anti-outside control, or interference or influence.

His hostility would be equally directed against any other country which he imagined might wish to interfere with South Africa's destiny.

South Africa First

"His quarrel with some of the British in South Africa is not that they are British, but that they do not in everything place South Africa first and Britain second. He is so intensely pro-South African that there are times when he seems to be anti-every other country."

"If the gospel of Hertzogism makes South Africa a nation in its own image, it will make it a small one. Rhodesia, which Smuts tried to persuade to enter the Union a few years ago, has been frightened away, perhaps, for ever, by Hertzog's fierce Afrikanerism, and the dread of racial politics, bilingualism and the Union's poor whites."

The native territories of Bechuanaland and Swaziland, which belong naturally to the Union, are less inclined than ever to leave the protecting wing of Great Britain.

The cry that the Afrikaner must be "baas" may ring pleasantly enough in Dutch South African ears; but it is apt to be a discordant note to native tribes and smaller states in Southern Africa.

"Widely read and cultivated, gentle in manner and fond of simplicity, he makes friends everywhere. He is transparently honest, and his bitterest foes would trust his word. Neither ambitious nor avaricious, he prefers the quiet pleasures of life, and he is always happiest with his books or on his farm. He, like ex-President Harding of America, is 'Just folks.' Leading a simple life, he goes little into society, and is rarely seen at amusements."

A Shy Youth

"In his youth he was too shy to learn to dance, and it would indeed be difficult to picture him in a ballroom. He has never read a novel—or war book. He does not play bridge. He is content with his own family circle or the company of a few old friends."

Fond of botany, he delights in long walks across the veld, and whenever an opportunity occurs he steals away to his farm in the Eastern Transvaal, on the edge of the Low Veld. At the end of his day's work in the Union Buildings at Pretoria he walks to his home in a nearby suburb. For him the pomp of power has no attractions. The simplicity of Republicanism appeals to him. He shakes hands with his native servants. He is as courteous to the down-and-out poor white as he is to a multi-millionaire or a duke.

How should a postman's trousers be creased?

While the business community is clamoring for a return to the penny post in the interests of British trade, the "big-wigs" of the Post Office are worrying about the dress of their staffs.

There is a demand, on the part of the postmen, that "trousers should be creased front centre instead of at the side." At the same time, they want a new style of hat.

To make matters worse, the claim that women Post Office employees should be able to wear sleeveless dresses is causing much heart-burning.

It's all very important, no doubt, but most of us would be quite prepared to accept any changes in Post Office fashions without a demur—if only we got back our penny post!

That farmers all over the world realize the advantages of horses for agricultural work is shown by the following figures just published by the National Horse Association. In 1783 the only horses in Australia were one stallion, three mares and a colt. In 1800 they had increased to 203; in 1850 to 159,951, and now there are 2,250,361. In Great Britain there are 1,204,198 horses engaged in agriculture. Despite the enormous depletion of horses in France during the war, there are now 3,000,000 in that country. Although millions of pounds have been spent in the United States trying to displace them, there are 20,000,000 horses and mules in the country. Germany has 3,805,000 horses, excluding those attached to the Army.

Ancient Egyptian Mummy is Found

Discovery Made by University of Pennsylvania Expedition

Philadelphia. — Two very colorful personalities of ancient Egypt have been brought to light by the University of Pennsylvania expedition at Meydum, according to a report just received from Alan Rowe, field director in charge of excavations.

One is a woman called Sat-Her-Em-Hat, who went in for costly jewelry. Her mummy, bearing its amulets and jewels, has been brought out of its tomb where it lay undisturbed for 4,000 years.

The other is a magician named Zedi, who lived in the time of Cheops, about 2,850 B.C. Zedi's mummy has not been found, but evidence of his remarkable life has been unearthed in the form of historical inscriptions.

Heredotus, son of Cheops, wrote as follows concerning Zedi:

"There is a townsman, Zedi by name, who is 110 years of age. And he eateth five hundred loaves of bread, a haunch of beef, and drinketh one hundred jugs of beer unto this day. He knoweth how to make a lion follow after him with his leash trailing on the ground."

The mummy of Sat-Her-Em-Hat lay upon a pad of folded linen 70 feet long by four and a half feet wide, according to Rowe's report.

The railways own the largest group of hotels in Britain are the largest owners of docks, use 16,000,000 tons of coal a year, and have the biggest interest in the canal system.

Willie came in crying and holding his head. "What fell on your head," asked his mother. "I did," he sobbed.

Minister, Run-down in Health, Gains 7 lbs. in 3 Weeks

Rev. W. H. Taylor writes, "After a 7 weeks' revival campaign I was entirely run-down and losing flesh rapidly. I decided to give Ironized Yeast a 3 weeks' trial. After 2 weeks I found my strength returning and the tired feeling gone. In 3 weeks I had gained 7 lbs. and was myself again." Imagine just 3 weeks to change from a "skinny", tired person to a strong, well-filled-out man or woman. Ugly hollows vanish. Broomstick limbs become round and chubby. Tired feeling disappears. Blemished skin clears.

Only when Yeast is Ironized is it more effective—for Iron is needed to bring out the weight-building and strengthening values of Yeast. Pleasant-tasting tablets. Safe for everybody. Never cause gas or bloating, no harmful drugs.

Go to any drugstore to-day and get a full size treatment of Ironized Yeast. If after this generous trial you are not delighted, your money back instantly from manufacturer.

For any BABY

We can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother does not change to stronger medicines as the child grows older. Castoria is readily obtained at any drugstore, and the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature that appears on every wrapper.

LOST POUNDS OF FAT—in 2 short weeks

Kruschen Salts will give many a fat person a joyous surprise. You can knock pounds off your weight and years off your age this safe and easy way. Every morning take "the little daily dose" of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast. This will mean that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases is being expelled from the system. They are the cause of all the trouble because they remain in the system and accumulate in the form of excess, unhealthy fat. "I have lost several pounds in less than 2 weeks. It is so safe and easy. No dieting, no drugs. I have tried several other ways, but with no good results. Kruschen is all you claim it to be."

After three or four weeks of the little daily dose, get on to the scales and see how many pounds of fat you have lost. Your mirror also will tell you what you have gained in health and vigour. Your eyes will sparkle, your skin will be clearer, you will feel unbelievably youthful and energetic—you will feel many pounds lighter and many years younger.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

If you have never tried Kruschen—try it now at our expense. We have distributed a great many special "GIANT" packages which make it easy for you to prove our claim for yourself. Ask your druggist for the new "GIANT" 75c package. This consists of our regular 75c bottle together with a separate trial bottle—sufficient for about one week. Open the trial bottle first, put it to the test, and then, if not entirely convinced that Kruschen does everything we claim it to do, the regular bottle is still as good as new. Take it back. Your druggist is authorized to return your 75c. immediately and without questions. You have tried Kruschen free, at our expense. What could be fairer? DOINGS IN PARLIAMENT

Hon. Mr. Dunning is already appreciating how grief is a Finance Minister's hour of glory. Political Ottawa is busy analyzing his budget, and as the examination proceeds the scepticism grows. Already the impression is well established that a budget which, at first glance, was regarded as the most radical since Confederation, will in reality effect but little change.

There were three things which the budget, on its face, purported to do. In the first place it made a gesture of shaking the fist of tariff retaliation under the nose of United States by the adoption of countervailing duties, a device whereby Canada undertakes to match increases which United States may make upon a limited list of commodities. In the second place it made a great show of protection and of adopting whole-some Conservative principles. The iron and steel industry of the country had its protection increased, the fruit and vegetables growers had their claims for consideration largely met and their grievances over the destruction of their markets by dumping of early fruits and vegetables substantially recognized. The butter and egg producers received immediate protection against New Zealand and an assurance of the termination of the New Zealand trade arrangement on October 12th. next. Finally, after these protective features and the deliberate forsaking of the tariff policy for which the Liberal Party has traditionally stood, the budget advanced claims to having extended the British Preference.

These provisions, then give the budget in its main outline. There was, in addition, the reduction of the sales tax to one percent, a change which will cost the government $22,000,000 annually in loss of revenue, and there are also some adjustments in the income tax in order to exempt donations to charities and to make the same allowance for dependent parents, grand parents, brothers, sisters or adult children, physically incapacitated, as for children. Co-

The question which political Ottawa is asking and is endeavouring to answer by close study of trade returns and other data, is the effect which the protective and British preferential features of the budget will have upon industry. Investigation so far suggests that the reply will be "but little." Amongst the Conservative forces the cry has already been raised, and statistics cited to support it, that Hon. Mr. Dunning has brought down a "camouflage budget."

Experts upon the iron and steel industry are inclined so far to discount the additional protection which has been given it as insufficient for practical purposes. They go further, however, and say that the last state of the industry under the new tariff will be worse than the first because, while the rate against United States products has been increased, the rate under the British preference has been reduced. The British Empire Steel Company serves a market which is cheaply reached by water from Britain, and it is prophesied that Besco will simply face intensified competition from Britain, with out any guarantee that United States pressure will be lessened. The one tangible benefit which appears to have been given to the iron and steel industry is the county of 49½ cents per ton upon Canadian coal used in the manufacture of steel. It is anticipated that this provision may mean in the neighborhood of half a million dollars annually to the Nova Scotia Company.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

A fire here started to burn grass got beyond control and men had to be called to put it out. Before this was accomplished some fine trees and piles of wood, on the property of Mr. E. A. A. Cowan were destroyed. The Women's Guild of the United Church held their regular meeting in the Church Hall on Wednesday.

Mr. Pierce, of the Sun Life, has again taken Mr. Dawson's cottage for the summer.

The celebrated Scottish Comedian, Tom MacDuff Copeland, is to give an entertainment in the Town Hall here Thursday evening, May 15th, at 8 p.m., under the auspices of the St. Andrews United Church. Mr. Copeland is famous in his line and the entertainment will include songs, stor-

WHAT A DIFFERENCE
90 DAYS MAKE!

TODAY A TODDLING CHICK... in 90 days a proud pullet about to lay. There's something to think about! Tiny bones and little muscles have grown several times in size... a delicate fuzz has sprouted into hundreds of feathers... a chick weighing grams has grown into a pullet weighing pounds... all in 90 short days!

A wonderful change... and only one thing can do it... good feed! This year consider Purina Startena Chow (mash) and Purina Chick Chow (scratch) or All-Mash Startena Chow for the first six weeks... and then Purina Growena and Purina Intermediate Hen Chow until your pullets are laying at 16 weeks.

Put these Chows before your chicks. You will see pullets that are built right... pullets that will lay eggs plenty in fall and winter when eggs are always worth good money.

THE DALESVILLE POST OFFICE

The Dalesville folk and those interested will be glad to know that our Federal Member Sir George H. Perley is hot after the Postmaster General in the endeavor to have the post-office at Dalesville re-opened. We are in receipt of the copy of Hansard, dated May 2nd, in which the following discussion took place.

Sir George Perley: I would like to draw to the attention of the Postmaster General the case of a post-office which has been closed in the constituency of Argenteuil.

Mr. Veniot: What is the name of it?

Sir George Perley: The name is Dalesville. I had a question about it on the order paper, which was answered on March 10 last. This post office is one of the very oldest in the Dominion. According to the answer given me, it was originally established on June 1, 1853, so it is one of the oldest post offices that we have. It is a very old community, settlement having taken place there over a hundred years ago. Only three or four years ago the Baptist church there held the centenary celebration of its foundation. It is a small community, and the land is not very good thereabouts, but at the same time I protest as strongly as I can against the closing of a post office like that after all these years. I have asked the reason.

Mr. Veniot: Will the hon. gentleman read the reason?

Sir George Perley: Certainly. I have it in front of me. The reason given is that the post office was closed because they could not get anybody to keep it at the remuneration offered by the department, and the answer also states that the post office will be opened as soon as a suitable candidate can be found who is willing to accept it at the regular salary. What is the salary? It is $181. a year. I am much in sympathy with the pleas that have been made for employees of the Post Office department in the cities and towns, but here is a post office which is needed by that community and which has been closed after all these years. It is true that the revenue is not large, and perhaps that is a reason why the postmaster has not been paid more, but this community is now without a post office because remuneration is so small and no one can be found to take the office at $181. a year. There must be something wrong with the system for that to occur.

Mr. Bothwell: How many people get their mail at that post office?

Sir George Perley: I do not know. It is a small community, and as I have said, the land thereabouts is not good. But I want to draw to the minister's attention the fact that from this post office there was a mail route to another post office, to Pine Hill and St. Michel. Now the carrier has to make the trip from Dalesville to Brownsburg, a distance of three or four miles, in order to get the mail which he used to get at Dalesville. The reason he got it there was that there was one route going from Brownsburg, and he took the mail bag for the carrier who was going to Pine Hill. But now he has to make this extra trip. So the post office could very well afford to pay more for keeping the post office at Dalesville open.

Mr. Veniot: I am sorry that we cannot do it under the law.

Sir George Perley: May I point out to the minister that the Post Office department is put to extra expense on account of the closing of this post office, because the mail carrier going to Pine Hill has to go several miles farther on his round. Surely the post office can afford to pay more. As a matter of fact the Post Office department has to pay extra for carrying the mail from Dalesville to Brownsburg, which it did not have to do before. So if the department gave that much more to the postmaster at Dalesville, the department would be no worse off and the people would have the service. What is going to happen if nobody will take the post office at the present rate?

Mr. Veniot: We can put it on a rural route.

Sir George Perley: All right, give them a rural route.

Mr. Veniot: That is what I am considering now.

Sir George Perley: That would be quite satisfactory but I feel very badly about this post office which we have had since 1853 being closed, and the people of that district being without postal service.

Mr. Veniot: That case was brought to my attention by the hon. gentleman's question some time ago, and I am looking into it. I can assure the hon. gentleman that either that office will be opened or we will place it on a rural route.

TOWN COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the Town Council was held on Wednesday last at which were present Mayor C. Tremblay and Aldermen J. G. Lacasse, P. Dobbie, J. P. MacKimmie, C. Miller, Jos. Speight, Dr. Rodrigue H. Coutu, J. B. Raymond.

Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed and reports of Finance Committee received.

Mr. Lachance was given permission to connect with the sewer on Foundry Street at cost of $35.00 plus expenses and work to be done under supervision of road committee.

Alderman Dobbie gave notice that at next meeting he would bring in a By-Law No. 117 covering the slaughter of animals, and general cleanliness of the town.

At the close of the session Mayor Tremblay reviewed the situation of the defeated by-laws and said that while the people had spoken there had been 46 p.c. who had voted for the extension to Lake Sir John, while others had favored Pollock's and would have voted for the waterworks had this been the issue. In all fairness, we must again face the issue, taking the matter honestly and squarely, because the question is not solved but only postponed. The waterworks is a big issue and means much for the general progress and health of our town.

While there has been a diversity of opinion, we have sought expert advice and have their records before us. It is one thing for us to listen to hearsay but it is quite another thing to have representatives of the Provincial Department of the Board of Health come here at the request of our Council and then ignore their advice and set their judgments to one side. These men have told us what it will mean to be forced to adopt a filtration plant, the cost will constitute a heavy annual drain for chlorination, and then not altogether satisfactory.

Ald. MacKimmie asked the question as to Mr. Ouimet's ability as engineer stating that he did not think the people were satisfied with his judgment as when his services were secured for the installation of the drain from Bank of Nova Scotia to the river he had given a price of $1800 for the job whereas it had cost $4,800.

The Mayor took exception to this statement as unfair and the secretary turned up the By-law No. 104 dated July 1924 in which it was clearly shown that Mr. Ouimet estimated the cost as $4,800 and the work had actually been executed for $4,600 which was $200 under the estimated cost. This is a fair sample of the way reports are spread and in consequence, in order that the public may be entirely satisfied I would like to have someone move the following resolution.

Moved by Ald. J. B. Raymond, seconded by Ald. Jos. Speight that in as much as the vote registered against Waterworks intake at Lake Sir John has not settled definitely the problem of unsatisfactory water supply at Lachute for domestic service and protection against fire, a special committee of the Council composed of the Mayor, Alderman H. M. Lavigne, President of the Water Committee; Dr. Rodrigue, President of the Health Committee; Alderman Dobbie and Alderman MacKimmie be appointed to seek the services of an English Speaking Hydraulic Engineer of repute to help Mr. Ouimet in an advisory capacity in reviewing the situation at present intake, at Pollock's Farm and Lake Sir John and present to the Council a proposal covering alternatives for intake at Pollock's site and Lake Sir John site showing comparison of costs and pressures while having the full approval of the Provincial Board of Health. Carried.

Mayor Tremblay stated that one of the Pioneer citizens of Lachute passed away this week as you know. I refer to Mr. Alexander Riddell, who, I understand, has been a resident of this town for about 55 years. Whoever was at the funeral saw ample evidence how that citizen was widely known and respected and only three or four years ago the 50th. anniversary of his marriage was celebrated. Mr. Riddell was a member of this Council many years ago.

I will ask for a unanimous vote of sympathy to be expressed to the family in their sad bereavement and that a letter be sent to Mrs. Alexander Riddell accordingly.

Une assemblée sera tenue à l'Hôtel de Ville, le mardi 13 mai, à 8 p.m., pour la formation d'un Club de Joueurs de Golf. Tous ceux qui seraient intéressés soit pour le Golf ou pour le Tennis, sont invités d'être présents. Hommes $10. Dames $5.00. Jeunes $5.

PERDUE.—Une médaille d'or, mardi matin, entre Lachute Mills et le Couvent, avec nom gravé. Prière de la rapporter au Couvent.

HOUSE FOR SALE.—On Main St., East, Lachute, a brick dwelling house, 8 rooms, furnace-heated hardwood floors, all modern conveniences. A well built house in perfect condition. Inspection by arrangement for any week-end. For particulars write to Mrs. J. McQuat, 3515 Durocher St., Montreal.

OUT OF TOWN CALLS — QUICKER AND CHEAPER THAN EVER

Mrs. Rush had her things on all ready to go out.

"I wish I knew how many yards of that curtain stuff my sister needs. I wonder if I could reach her by telephone?"

Her sister lived in a city over 80 miles away — but in just a little over a minute Mrs. Rush was talking to her and getting the details she wanted. It didn't delay her shopping trip more than two minutes and it cost her only 50 cents.

"Well, that was certainly worth while! Now I know exactly what to buy", she said as she stepped into her car to go down town.

Our facilities are now so complete that the average long distance call takes only a fraction over a minute and a half!

It is so easy to place a long distance call. Just ask for "Long Distance," and give her the distant number. If you do not know the number, "Information" will look it up. Calling by number speeds up the service.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Brena Selous and Peter DeWolfe meet in London and fall in love. Peter has been warned to stay away from Brena or he will disappear like the others. Brena tells him her story: When but very young her father died and left her an orphan in Dallas, Texas. She journeyed to St. Louis to marry Jim Hennepin, but Jim does not show up. Compton Parmalee, extremely wealthy and retired business man, then marries her, but he is haunted by a fear of something and finally disappears and has not been heard from for a number of years.

DeWolfe determines to get at the bottom of the mystery and comes to America and searches the Parmalee house on the Hudson. He finds two books dealing with a Father Carlos explorations of an Aztec city, but the same pages are missing in both. He spends a large amount for a complete book. He takes Parmalee's personal books to an accountant who is a specialist. Brena returns and is shocked to learn that Peter has disappeared.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
From Colby Pennington Brena learned that Peter had gone to Texas, and that on the twenty-fourth of the month he expected to be in the town of Kremlin Wells. This was a small town in the desert, on the border between Texas and New Mexico.

Within an hour Brena, without even hand baggage, was in the train bearing her on the first stage of her journey to Kremlin Wells. She must be there by the twenty-fourth. She had a sense of racing with death.

And she won. At three o'clock in the morning of that day she alighted from the train in Kremlin Wells to peer into the face of a dark-eyed Mexican. She was frightened for a moment but at the mention of Peter's name the Mexican said: "Come," and led the way to a ramshackle hotel. Up the stairs she followed him and watched while he opened the door of a room.

His lantern's circle of light widened as he held it higher until it covered a cot on which a waking sleeper was pushing himself up on one arm and reaching under a pillow with the other hand.

"A lady," the Mexican said, setting down the lantern and departing. The man on the cot sprang up, raised the lantern, and gasped.

"Brena!" he exclaimed.

"Yes, Peter. Thank God, Peter I came in time."

"Time—time for what? I'm all right, dear."

"Yes, Peter, they said you'd had a message—a call. You are the third—I couldn't stand it. It was you—that's different."

"You're tired out."

"No, I'm not, Peter," she said. "I want you to be glad I came."

He dropped the lantern; it went out. He put his arms around her and bent her head close to his shoulder as he patted her hair with the open palm of his hand.

"Glad? Me? Glad? Brena! I can't say it, dear. The cup runs over at the brim!"

"I've been in mortal fear, Peter," she whispered and shivered in his arms. "I thought I had sent you away to your end—the Thing that took the others."

"No," said he.

"Can you tell, Peter?"

"I can't tell—sure. I can guess. I guess I'm going to fix everything. If not, there's something too big—too ghastly—"

"But if you never came back to me—if anything—" She stopped. "Why, Peter, I prayed for relief from the hideous idea that I had let you start at all."

"Look here," he said severely. "Did you send me that warning—to the steamer?"

She was silent.

"Answer."

"Yes, I thought I must stop you, dear."

For a long time they sat on the edge of his cot without a word. At last, "Peter,"

"I'm almost at the point where I score, Brena," said Peter after a time. "I've bought a high-powered car here. Two hundred odd miles into this hell of desert! And to-morrow, I go to-morrow."

He struck a match and relit the lantern.

"Tell me, Peter," she said, brushing the red-gold hair back from her forehead.

"I did tell you. I said I had a theory—a theory about where they went—Hennepin first—and Parmalee. If I am not right, heaven help us! I've not been afraid yet—not in my real self. If I'm right, I'll laugh at myself for totting a gun around. But if I'm wrong now, I'd be afraid. I'm no coward, but I'd writhe with fear!"

Her eyes were full of a troubled expression.

"But you don't tell me, Peter."

"I can't."

"Why not?"

"Because if I was wrong it would always appear to you that I had been the inventor of injustice. Let me test your faith in me, Brena. Give me three days more."

"Yes, but when you ride off into the desert—to danger, maybe—I'm going too!"

"You can't!"

"Yes, I am going with you, Peter!"

"It might be too hideous."

"I am going."

The strange authority with which she sometimes spoke now was in her voice and in her eyes; it was as if she were speaking, not out of herself alone, but were one who voiced a decree of those who had willed an inexorable end.

"Let me show you then where we are going," he said. "Let me show you a map. Let me tell you how we shall steer our way over a trackless waste by compass as if we were at sea! It's a country of terrible distances and heat and thirst. If the car breaks down they'll never hear of us."

"We'd be out there for years," said Brena. "We'd have our hands—like this—together. But very bony, I suppose. I'd rather—do that, Peter—than—not have—each other—"

He picked her up in his arms. He heard her whispering. "I'm not ill, Peter. I am tired. And I don't have to pretend with you, do I?" He felt her warm breath.

He put her down at full length on the cot and sitting beside her moved his finger-tips across her white forehead, Brena's limp hand, that still rested in sleep upon his bare neck, was warm with the promise of living expectancy.

They were driving through a country without mercy to living things. After miles of hard pulling through the bare loose-surfaced plain they found that all vegetation—even the cacti—became sparse, and the emptiness was that of the frontier of death itself.

Peter turned to look at Brena. Her face, illumined by the moon, was lifted a little; with the hair blown back by the hot wind, her eyes glistened like those of one who rides toward battle in a calm spirit.

She felt, perhaps, his gaze, and, turning, smiled. She wondered why he had been unwilling to tell her why they went, what he sought, the facts he had found.

"Will you tell me—afterward?" she asked.

"Yes—if I win," he answered. "I will tell you then. Before that I've no particular right to do it—not till I'm sure. The thing is too tremendous!"

She pulled back the silk sleeves from her round arms that in the pale moonlight were those of an ancient Grecian marble. She folded them and, as they drooped on, she fixed her dark eyes again upon the North with the same calm, the same suggestion of being the possessor of a spirit as eternal as that of the sea.

When the moon had reached the bottom of the bowl of the sky, DeWolfe stopped the car to fill the radiator.

"We are coming into the most arid land in the world, where no rain falls and there is no dew. It is the country of eternal stillness. There is no life; not even the insects live here. There is no motion. There is no sound. Listen!"

"I'm glad I'm with you, Peter," she said. "There is a threat here, isn't there?"

He nodded. "We've been seventy-five miles. To a man on foot without water that would be death—a horrible death with the sand dragging at the feet—with the heat burning all moisture out of the body, with the silence and stillness inviting him to madness, and his aching limbs gradually turning his footpath around and around in smaller circles to a center of death."

At the end of a hundred miles dawn began to come in the brilliant colors of silken veils of rainbow diversity shaken out from the East. With startling suddenness the air of the desert became the tint of heliotrope.

The dark sky split into great cracks here jagged points of the red glow had climbed and then with a clang the yellow rays of day came over the horizon like long golden spears of a charging host held low above the sands.

Peter allowed the car to come to a stop and shut off the engine.

"Both of us need a rest and water," he said to Brena. "And you need breakfast."

She did not talk to him as he looked over the car, nor when, having looked back along the slight cut of a prehistoric torrent bed, now filled almost to its old banks with drifting sand, he squatted over a map, measuring and consulting a pocket compass. His anxiety was evident.

They went forward again, however, under the full light of day into a trackless waste where there was not even a depression to guide them and where Brena, holding the compass in her hands, gave directions to him as he moved the wheel. At the end of twenty miles more Brena uttered an exclamation.

"What is that on the desert?" she asked. "Peter, look! There! To the left."

A little point of light shone on the sand as if a diamond had caught the sunlight. Peter stopped the car again to pick it up, showed it to Brena; it was an empty vial of white glass.

Peter sprang out of the car, and, walking about in widening circles, searched the ground. He appeared excited.

Time and time again he looked at the little glass vial.

"Some one has been here," said Brena. "I'm just Irish enough to say that, Peter!"

"Hush," he said. "I've seen more than you have seen. It means everything to us!"

At nine o'clock they came within sight of a great mound on the desert.

"There it is!" exclaimed DeWolfe. "Look, Brena. And there's the haze on the horizon—the haze that the Jesuit missionaries told about. It comes from the colder air of the Mes-calero Ridge!"

"And it means that we have found our way?"

"Yes, found our way! There's ninety miles more."

"Where are we going?"

"To the oldest city, Brena, in America. To a city at the base of a high cliff, built of clay which crumbled centuries ago into dust. The wall is left perhaps as it was two centuries ago. A dry well. A windless place occupied only by horned toads and perhaps one other misshapen thing."

At three o'clock they came within sight of the tableland upon which mountains were set like piles of food upon a giant's doorstep.

And this step up—this mesa—with its precipitous edge, marked the end of the desert.

"The cliffs that rise to that table land are impassable," said Peter, with his eyes alight and his voice filled with excitement. "The city was built below their protection around a great well and walled in front with thick fortifications. We shall see them, Brena!"

An Unusually Intelligent Dog

Wm. W. Bathiot

I was driving a truck. My road led right by a goat herder's house. Angling across the road was a bunch of perhaps three hundred goats. I slowed down and stopped, for the road was completely blocked. The goats were not frightened by the roar of the engine, and they were in no hurry to get out of the way.

I was about to jump out of the car in an attempt to move the blockade, when a large dog, apparently a cross between a shepherd and a collie, came bounding toward me. I supposed his intention was to bark at the car. From his looks and actions I decided to take time by the forelock and sit tight.

He paid no attention to the car or myself. He worked his way between the front wheels of the car and the herd and by the weight of his body and the use of his teeth pushed a wedge of goats off to the south of the road. As the animals were drifting from northeast to southwest this made a very difficult undertaking for as fast as the dog forced an opening ahead, others would drift in and close up the gap. Four times he sprang to the assault before the goats were cowed and scattered and a lane opened so that I could drive through.

I reasoned that the animal had been trained to do stunts of this kind. Out of curiosity I stopped on my way back and interviewed the owner. I asked him if he had trained the dog to do that work.

He answered, "Me no train that dog to do that. He smart dog. He tends the goats and learns to do these things better than me."

I take off my hat to that dog as being a good thinker and a good manager of goats. I own that I could not have done as well—Our Dumb Animals.

Canadian National Parks Association

The Reason for and the Love of Nature Behind an Unselfish Organization Functioning in the West for all Canada

Did you ever wonder why a city park became such? Did it just happen, or is it the natural result of progress?

In these enlightened days a city without a park would be as unusual as the village of our grandfathers without its commons or nuisance ground where the rubbish of the village was dumped before the days of garbage collection and disposal plants.

It is difficult to realize that the beautiful city park with its flowers and foliage, in which the citizens take such pride and find such keen enjoyment, is the direct outcome of the old fashioned commons, or rather the outcome of the effort of some individual more enlightened and progressive than the rest who found great enjoyment in the outdoors—some individual to whom the open woods, the lakes and streams were a delight, and who could not help but compare these with the probable view from his dwelling of this unsightly commons.

With the progress of civilization it was discovered that health depended upon sanitation, and the nuisance ground was doomed. Doctors began sending their patients to the seaside, to the woods, and to the mountains as a cure for many diseases produced by insanitary conditions of living.

There were then numerous health-giving places belonging to the state, but these were fast being bought up and exploited. Some far-sighted individual, whose name is unfortunately lost, realized that unless steps were taken to withhold from private ownership some of these captivating convalescing and health-giving areas, there would soon be none available except to the wealthy; so he commenced to advocate that a large area of attractive, revitalizing, health-giving land be not only reserved from private ownership, but dedicated for all time to the public and to be developed solely for the public benefit. This is a National Park as established in most of the enlightened countries of the world to-day, having a per acre value in tourist revenue equalled by few agricultural areas, and having a health value in its possibility for relaxation from the nerve strain of this rushing era, of incalculable value.

City parks, apart from those which are the outcome of private generosity, are occasionally the result of an agitation carried on by a few individual citizens, but are usually sponsored by some ratepayers' association. The unorganized citizen is ever ready to grumble at the sins of omission or of commission of the city fathers and demand their defeat at the next election for negligence, shortsightedness and graft—futile action on his part as the harm is already done or the opportunity to act passed. If there is a strong ratepayers' association or citizens' league in the city, with its members alert for the city's advancement and keenly interested in everything connected with their city and its affairs, this organization will react most favorably upon the city officials and through them upon the general welfare and advancement of the city. The Canadian National Parks Association with members from coast to coast, in city, town, village and farm, all working for the welfare of Canada's national park system, is endeavoring to accomplish for the parks results similar to those of the citizens' league for the city.

Governments of course rarely act upon their own initiative; they prefer to have the strong support of voters behind them. The stronger the support given to a park programme the quicker the Government is likely to take those steps which turn an area into a provincial or a national park. It is most desirable that a nation-wide agitation for any national park avoid any semblance of party policy, which would at once create for it political opposition, making the parks a political football resulting in anything but that stability and permanence of policy so necessary to enable the people of the future to enjoy the park facilities of to-day. Far better have people of all political thought and of all walks of life behind an agitation for a park area; then no class or political feeling or opposition is aroused, and all stand shoulder to shoulder and the Parks Bill is calmly considered on its merits alone, and if approved is likely to give the park this necessary endurance.

Obviously the usefulness of the Canadian National Parks Association will be greatly lessened, if not entirely destroyed, should we evince any political leaning; hence the Association is entirely non-political. We have friends and members from each political party who, however they may oppose each other politically, are united in their support of a lasting parks policy. Canada is particularly fortunate at the present time in that her Parks Branch of the Department of the Interior is staffed by enthusiasts who have done much to develop and foster Canada's national parks. Their work would be more far-reaching and permanent if the Park Act prepared for last Session became law. Then park matters would become a subject for parliamentary consideration and not of Order-in-Council control.

Canada is in the most fortunate position of having the experience of our cousins south of the 3898-mile goodwill boundary at her disposal. We can profit by her successes, but most particularly should we avoid her mistakes. We will undoubtedly have a large population in Canada. Shall we wait till this condition of congested population comes, as was done across the line, and then spend millions of dollars to procure from private owners necessary park sites for this coming population; or shall we press upon our governments the desirability of applying town planning principles to the country and to set aside from the public domain at no expense whatever those sites which if not forever ruined by exploitation we will undoubtedly have to buy at boom prices in the future? What kind of business man would he be who knew that a certain piece of land which he would have to have sometime soon could be obtained for nothing or next to nothing, and who failed to grasp the opportunity? He would hardly be classed as a business man but by a more uncomplimentary term.

There are in Canada to-day many thousands of people who have travelled, who read the leading magazines and who realize that a great opportunity is going to be lost forever if speedy action is not taken to plan and provide for the people of to-morrow. This feeling can only find expression and be converted into action by some organization like the Canadian National Parks Association. Our bulletins reach every member of every provincial legislature and every member of both the House of Commons and the Senate. A copy is sent to the editor of every paper and magazine published in Canada, and many of them carry whole articles or extracts in their papers. Of course, each of our regular members receives his copy of all our bulletins and thousands are mailed to influential public men and women throughout Canada.

Some of our members believe that the work done by our Association is of greater value to Canada than that done by any of the many patriotic and service clubs and societies. Our value rests with the future to an even greater extent than with the present. How great this value will be if we succeed in our aims can be easily comprehended by imagining a Parks Association functioning in the United States in 1872, when 3290 sq. miles of Wyoming was dedicated for all time to the people of the nation as the Yellowstone National Park. Would that country have remained inactive until 1890 and then started to buy park sites, or would a country planning commission have been appointed and a Yosemite, a Sequoia, a Mount Rainier, a Glacier Park and many other park sites which have been and will be purchased, have been reserved from private ownership and developed as national park sites as the population required?

Shall Canada hand down to our sons and daughters with our long term debentures the necessity of buying many expensive park sites; or shall we provide them with park sites at little or no cost to ourselves, but which will produce revenues in cash to greatly lighten the inevitable debenture burden and insure their health and recreational facilities and that of their children's children for all time?

Alf. Shrubbs Pub

By Beverly Smith.

In recent months we have seen athletic coaches signing contracts for $30,000 a year, writing learned articles for the magazines, endorsing breakfast foods. I am reminded of a very different kind of coach.

I remember him best behind the bar of his hospitable public house in the High Street, spry and bright-eyed, serving pewter pint mugs of old ale to the members of the Oxford University track team.

"Not too much of this, gentlemen," he would say. "Just enough to keep you from going stale. If I take a drop more myself, p'haps I need an extra glass. I'm getting along in years."

He was Alf Shrubbs, the Nurmi of the beginning of the century, who held every world's record for two to ten miles for nearly twenty years. The record books for five miles and above still read "Shrubbs, Shrubbs, Shrubbs, Shrubbs." On a chilly day in 1904 Alf, already a veteran, ran a ten-mile race. At the half-way mark he smashed the five-mile world's record to smithereens. He was just warming up. Thereafter he broke a world's record at every mile post up to ten, and these stand to this day. It took a Nurmi, training on pie and coffee, and snatching his sleep on board Pullman cars, to shave Alf's marks for the shorter distances. If Alf had had the foresight to take pie with his ale, he might have set records for all eternity.

"Beer never hurt me, gentlemen," he used to tell us. "In moderation, you understand. Just a pint or so every now and then. It's good for the nerves. Makes you sleep good. One more round? Well, yes, just one. I don't want you gentlemen to miss out on your sleep. Sleep's a fine thing for everybody. Ravels up the unravelled sleeve of care, as Mr. Laughnan used to tell me."

The pubs at Oxford, under the post-war regulations, were open only from 11.30 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 10.30 p.m. During the lunch hour Alf would be busy behind the bar serving customers and drinking with them, for he was not a man to scorn his own wares. At 2 o'clock he would utter the ritual cry, "Time please, gents. Move along, please." Then he would lock his doors and proceed to Ifley Field to take up his duties as university track coach.

He would put on his time-worn togs and appear for practice. He was a tiny figure of a man, at that time in his middle forties, with graying dark hair and a gaunt, lined face. He was five feet six or seven inches tall. His legs were like pipe-stems and his arms were thinner still. He was a bit round-shouldered and carried himself slouchily. There seemed not an ounce of strength or muscle about the man. He looked too weak to run for a street car. But a close observer might have noted a hidden depth of chest—I remember my shock when I first saw him in track clothes.

"To think," I whispered to Bevil G. D. Rudd, "that old Alf used to be a champion. He's certainly gone to pieces. I suppose the beer is getting him."

"Yes," said Rudd. "He's all broken up. A couple of years ago he won the twenty-five mile British marathon, and he was all out of breath at the finish."

"Now, gentlemen," Alf would say, rubbing his hands, "we'll just warm up with a few turns." And off he would go down the track, running as lightly and casually as a rabbit. He seemed to be traveling at a mere dog trot. It was only after following him for a quarter mile or so that we could realize the full deceptiveness of that gait. The muscular, pink-limbed young athletes would begin to gasp and drop out. Only one thing sustained us and enabled us to keep at his heels. That was the cheery and potent fragrance of ale that streamed behind Alf as he ran. We could have followed him around the track blindfold.

The conscientious Alf did not permit his duties as coach to end when he left the track. All evening he was behind his bar, ready with advice and counsel for members of the squad who sought it, and there were many. A pleasant pub it was, Alf Shrubbs' Pub. It housed more trophies, probably, than any pub in history. The walls of the private bar and the saloon bar were lined with glass cases crammed with great silver cups, solid silver statuettes of running athletes and discoboli, engraved plaques and scrolls, gold medals by the hundred, all celebrating the prowess of the little figure behind the bar. A silversmith was said to have appraised the collection at £2,000. Back of the bar and in the public bar were scores of photographs of Alf in action in the great races of the past. Most prized of all, an enormous photograph showing Alf in Toronto defeating a horse in a five-mile race. The noble animal looked pretty fagged, but not Alf.

Those evening conferences with the track team were often a trial to Alf because of the strife between his instincts as coach and his instincts as host. As a coach he believed that one pint was enough. As a host he was stirred by the plea of insomnia to serve a second. The conflict became more pronounced when an athlete ordered sherry or port. Anxiety would appear in Alf's birdlike glance.

"You're not feeling run-down, are you?" he would ask. The thirsty one would confess that he was feeling very run-down indeed. "Well, I don't know," Alf would say doubtfully. "I don't suppose there's any harm in a drop of port for a man that's run-down. It builds you up. It's a kind of a tonic like." With whisky the formula was similar, but to obtain this it was necessary for the athlete to explain that he was suffering from a severe cold and felt that he was "about to crack up." A good deal of hearty coughing also was required. The mightiest shot-putter on the team was in a chronic condition of being run-down and about to crack up, and his vast frame was racked continually by a pathetic, hacking cough. It was he who inadvertently gave Mr. Shrubbs' place its other and cherished name, "Alf Pubbs' Shrubbs."

Out of training season Alf was at his genial best. No problems of running down and cracking up then harassed him, and the cough of the shot-putter was stilled. At the legal closing time Alf would lock his doors, but he would take a few special friends and proteges and two or three shove-ha'penny boards up to the parlor on the second floor for an hour of that great indoor sport. But Alf was strictly law abiding, and the ale at such times was on him, and from his private stock.

When I visited Oxford in 1928 I was desolated to find that Alf had disappeared. They told me he had taken his trophies and gone to Canada. Possibly he went to look up his old opponent the horse. I would have preferred to have Oxford lose the Bodleian Library rather than Alf Shrubbs and his pub. Of the precise merits of his training methods I cannot speak. I am too much his partisan. But this I affirm: One hour with Alf above the shove-ha'penny board in the upper parlor was worth all the split seconds ever registered on a stop watch.

"When you spoke to her father did you tell him you had ten thousand in the bank?"

"I did."

"And what did he say?"

"He tried to borrow it."

He: "Another new hat! Where am I to get the money to pay for it?"

She: "I don't know. I'm your wife, not your financial adviser."

Modern Girl: "Bat smoking doesn't do any harm." Mother: "Then why ever did you take it up?"

Princess Betty Learning ABC's

Duke of York's Daughter "Writes" Letters to "Uncle David" on African Hunt Uses Nursery Free-Hand

London.—England's youngest princess and third lady in the land is growing up quickly. Little Princess Elizabeth, only daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, celebrates her fourth birthday on April 21, yet she knows here alphabet—or some of it.

"Lillibet," as her baby tongue pronounces her own name, can say A, B, C with admirable rapidity, but the D, E, F run into one another, and become a word instead of three letters. So the Princess's alphabet goes "A, B, C, Deff."

The letter L she knows, or nearly always knows, stands for "Lillibet." But it is a very difficult letter to find in the alphabet, hidden somewhere beyond "Deff," and then, in the Princess's phonetic calculations, the same letter stands for Elizabeth, though she tries hard to remember that her real name begins with an E.

Counts One, Two, Free, Five!"

The Princess finds D a helpful letter, but it is not hard to understand that it is the first in daddy, duke and duchess.

The letters of the alphabet fascinate her more than the table of figures; but it is a good game trying to count fingers and toes or the fine collection of animals in her nursery zoo. Baby Betty, like many other little learners, would rather say "One, two, free, five" than "One, two, three, four, five."

The Duke and Duchess are not considering serious lessons until after her birthday, but in the inquiring manner of all children the Princess asks many questions and sets herself many tasks. She learns a great deal from her cousins, Princess Mary's two children, and her days include periods of listening to reading, studying picture books of the alphabet and handling a pencil.

An Assiduous Writer

She writes assiduously. At the moment her efforts are directed chiefly to "Uncle David," the Prince of Wales, in Africa. Her writing is the charming free hand of the nursery, which is a script no adult has ever been able to understand.

But Princess Elizabeth knows what she is writing and frequently speaks the words as she scribbles them.

Horseback riding is one of the first accomplishments taught the royal children, but the only riding lessons "Lillibet" has had up to the present are on her rocking-horse.

Don't scold the children when they won't eat and don't coax them. You can judge whether they are well, and if they have cold or some other little childish ailment that makes them fractious just leave them alone, they will eat better at the next meal. Delicate children can be tempted with morsels and with fancy plates on which there is a picture so you can tell a story as they eat. If a child is merely cross and won't eat just look as if it did not matter in the least. Hunger will make him change his opinion, and the next meal will go down well.

"The house of Peers seems to me like a lion in a warm room, buzzing around itself."—Baroness Ravensdale.

THE LATE MISS ELLEN HAWKINS, R. N.

Entered into rest Friday, April 18, 1930, at Pasadena Hospital, Pasadena, California. Miss Hawkins was a member of the class of 1884 of The Orange Memorial Hospital Training School for Nurses, Orange, New Jersey. She was a member of the First-Class of that Training School and was a woman of rare ability and held fine executive positions in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Washington D.C., Orange, New Jersey and New York.

While in Washington D. C. she was personally associated with Miss Sophia Palmer, Miss Jane Delano, Mrs. Isabella Hampton Robb, and others of these fine women who were the advanced guard, of the present great armies of nurses of which Miss Hawkins was always very proud of being their contemporary.

She was the second daughter of Sergeant Major Hawkins, 10th. Lancers known as the Bengal Tigers. He served under Sir Henry Havelock during the Indian Meeting. He had his horse shot under him and his leg shattered in the Crimean War. While being nursed in the hospital for this injury he came under the care of Florence Nightingale, and her corps of nurses. It was his stories of this wonderful woman that planted the seed in Miss Hawkins that later developed into the wonderful kind and understanding nurse, that gave so freely of her life and time to those who were fortunate in having her to care for them.

Miss Hawkins was laid to rest in the little cemetery back of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Grenville, Quebec, by the side of her brother, Pte. T. J. Hawkins, World War Veteran. So Pass Our Pioneers.

Miss Hawkins is survived by her sister Mrs. James Densmore, Stonefield, Que.; and two brothers, George Hawkins, Superior Wisconsin, and William Hawkins, Pasadena California.

THE LATE EDWARD SILVERSON

After a short illness Edward Silverson, of Montreal, passed away in the General Hospital, on Wednesday, April 30th, aged 73.

Deceased was the third son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Silverson, of Lakefield. He was for over 40 years a trusted employee in the Williams Sewing Machine Company, and worked until a few weeks before his death.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his loving wife and 12 children; seven sons and five daughters. The funeral took place on Saturday from St. Jude's Church, to Mount Royal Cemetery. Mr. Geo. Silverson, of Thos. Gore, and Mr. Robt. Silverson of Dalesville, were among the mourners attending the funeral.

THE LATE WM. BLAIR

The death of William Blair, one of Argenteuil's respected former citizens, occurred after a brief illness on May 1st, 1930, at Kerrobert, Sask. Deceased was in his 85th year and had lived in Ogdensburg until eighteen years ago, when he moved to Kerrobert.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife Jane Horner; and seven children, Lillian R.N., of Chicago; Mrs. Fred Townsend, Ogdensburg; Mrs. Dave Tomalty, Brownsburg; William, Norval and Alfred, of Kerrobert, and Everard of Superb, Sask.; also one sister Mrs. Mary MacGillivray and one brother George Blair.

The funeral and interment took place on Sunday, May 4th, at Kerrobert, Sask.

A REAL FRIEND

The passing of Mr. Wm. Perry will be a distinct loss to this community, for in spite of his advanced age he was young in spirit, with a kind word for everybody, and brimful of fun. His regular daily visits to the mail with face all aglow and eyes beaming with merry twinkle because of his enjoyment of life, he will be greatly missed, especially by the younger elements with whom he delighted to mingle. His was indeed a life of usefulness in which both mind and heart were truly active.

CLEAN UP WEEK

The customary notice has been given for our townsfolk to get busy and have their places cleaned of all rubbish. The clean up campaign will not be the success it should unless we all get behind it with a will in which the humblest of our citizens can join. A well raked lawn and yard, use of a little paint and the planting of a few flowers will make our town more wholesome, clean and pretty. Let us get busy and as our visitors come amongst us they will in consequence be able to pass the good word along and enjoy their stay with us.

Mr. & Mrs. R. L. Calder and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Simpson of Montreal; and Mr. and Mrs. Theoren Carpenter and family, of Three Rivers, were occupying their summer homes on the North River over the week-end.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mr. and Mrs. Fair with party of friends spent Wednesday at "Aber-nor Hall."

Mr. R. E. T. Pringle spent the week-end in St. Andrews.

Mrs. (Dr.) G. F. Shaw and Miss Hilda Shaw spent the week-end with friends.

The W. M. S. of the Presbyterian Church held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. R. J. Bradley; Miss Brown, Mrs. Wm. Todd and Mrs. Bradley were hostesses.

Miss K. Bradley motored up from Montreal for the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Larmonth and Miss L. Larmonth returned to Ottawa on Saturday, after spending a couple of weeks at their summer home here.

The Young People's Club of St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, through the kindness of Mrs. Alan Murray, are fortunate in securing the Sun Life Dramatic Society to present three one Act Plays in the Town Hall on May 24th. The Club arranged for an excellent play last year and I feel sure, that this one, will be equally as good. The name of Mr. Alan Murray, who is taking part, should draw a larger crowd.

Mr. Howard Doig, a student in training for the Ministry in the Presbyterian College, Montreal, paid a short visit to his friends in River Rouge, on Tuesday last. Mr. Doig has promised to take the church services for Dr. Ballantyne at an early date.

Mrs. Hollywood and daughter, who have been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elder, for the past month has returned to her home in Verdun.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Doig announce the engagement of their daughter Mildred Elizabeth, to Mr. Ernest Edawrd Rose, of Ottawa, Ont. only son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson Rose, of Hampstead Garden Suburb, London, England. The marriage to take place quietly the middle of June.

Local Items

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Westgate, left on Monday to make their home in London, Ont.

Mrs. Crabbe, of Montreal, is spending this week in town, the guest of Mrs. Geo. Creswell.

Mrs. Wilbur Fraser and son Athole of Montreal, are the guests of Mrs. Wm. Doig this week.

Mrs. K. Massiah has returned to Lachute to take up her residence for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Brisson, Miss A. Dulude and Mr. M. Brisson motored to Ste. Agathe last Sunday.

Miss Ethel Dixon spent the week-end at Notre Dame de Grace, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Dick.

Messrs. F. Ramsay & W. Milmine of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. Goldsworthy.

Mr. James Calder, of Montreal, was the guest of his mother, Mrs. Geo. F. Calder over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Percival and daughter, of Halifax, are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Salter Clarke.

Mr. Gavin Walker, of Lower Canada College, was the week-end guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Walker.

A Sale of Home Made Cooking will be held in Calder's Store, St. Andrews East, on Friday, May 23rd, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon and family and Miss Mary Cruise, R. N., of Montreal, spent Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Cruise.

Owing to the fine weather a number of visitors spent the week-end at the surrounding Lakes, re-opening their homes for the summer months.

Mr. Earle Stone who has been undergoing treatment in Montreal, returned to Lachute on Tuesday and is the guest of Mr. E. McGibbon.

The many friends of Mrs. Holland of Montreal, will be pleased to know that she has returned to open up her cottage "Ivan Bower" for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. McArthur and Mr. Robert McArthur spent the week-end in Ottawa. On their return they were accompanied by little Miss M. McArthur.

Our accomplished young musician, Miss Juliette Rodrigue is in Amherst, N. S., this week where she is giving a concert with Miss Cebra Braut, vocalist, of Montreal.

We are glad to learn that Miss Grace Foster, of Brownsburg, who has been removed to the Royal Victoria Hospital has undergone her operation for appendicitis successfully.

The meeting held in the Town Hall on Tuesday last for the purpose of electing officers for the Golf Playing Club was well attended, the officers being elected as follows:—Gaston Valois, President; James Yelland, Vice-President; P. G. Roy, Secretary Treasurer; Manager, E. F. Ayers. Directors:—C. Tremblay, R. M. Clements, R. Charron, E. M. Jones, W. J. Bryant, J. S. Giles, E. F. Ayers, L. L. Legault.

A delegation from the Tennis Club headed by Mr. Skuffham, President; were present to discuss the feasibility of the fusion of the two clubs and the suggestion was met with favor as the present courts are not quite satisfactory. The Golf Course would make an ideal spot and a committee of gentlemen are now endeavoring to secure enough members to warrant the Golf Club in going ahead with tennis Court which will be a great asset as we understand the courts will be lit by night enabling the players to use the court later than usual.

The manager reports that weather permitting, the Golf Courts will be in readiness for playing on Saturday next.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDREWS.—In loving memory of Thomas Bertram, accidentally killed on May 16th, 1923.

This is the tribute best of all. Richer than the richest clause Loved not for what he had or did But just for what he was.

His loving mother, Mrs. Wm. Evans.

Wm. Perry dies in 94th. Year

William Perry, hydraulic engineer, who prided himself on being the oldest pump expert in Canada, and who celebrated his ninety-third birthday on May 8th, died at the home of his son-in-law, Rev. H. Cousens, Lachute, on Wednesday evening, last, resulant from a bad fall which occurred on April 12th and since which time he has been very ill.

Deceased gentleman was very well known in Montreal as well as in Lachute and throughout the Dominion of Canada. He was a resident of Montreal for over 80 years before coming here a few years ago. In addition to being one of Canada's foremost hydraulic engineers he was also one of the most enthusiastic members of the Montreal volunteer fire brigade.

Full of life and always ready for new ventures, he was taken up in an airplane, by his son, R. G. Perry of the Ottawa Flying Club, and at that time was believed to be the oldest person in Canada to make such a trip.

He was born in England and came to Canada with his father and mother two brothers and one sister. This trip, as he often related and given in detail before a meeting of the Antiquarian Society in the Chateau de Ramesay on April 15th 1926, took seven weeks from Plymouth to Quebec on the good sailing vessel Precilla. The voyage from Quebec to Montreal was carried out on a steamboat and took twenty-four hours. The vessel was the John Munn. The family first resided at the corner of Jurores and St. Alexander streets.

Mr. Perry's father was a hydraulic engineer and the shop was on Craig street, backing on Fortification lane. It was there that Mr. Perry learned his profession and followed it for many years.

Being an engineer Mr. Perry soon graduated to the volunteer fire brigade of Montreal which was then in its infancy. He was enthusiastic and remained many years with the brigade. By a peculiar coincidence when Mr. Perry came to reside here a few years ago, he walked to the local fire station following his habit of many years. Lachute has an old pump which Mr. Perry immediately recognized as one that had once belonged to the Montreal fire brigade and on which he had worked not only as an engineer but as a fireman.

Until the time of his accident recently his memory was clear and he was always pleased to recite happenings of other days. One of his favorite yarns was the recital of the funeral of D'Arcy McGee on April 13, 1868. He was the proud possessor of the only existing photograph of the cortege taken on that day.

He remembered the many changes which took place in Montreal during its rapid progress and often told of the old buildings that formerly stood on a certain site. He could tell of the occupants of the buildings their habits and many interesting incidents.

In connection with the Montreal fire department, his favorite tale was that of the method employed to call out the brigade in the early days. A bugle was blown or policemen tapped on the windows of the homes of the volunteers, who rushed out to their engine house. Mr. Perry's first association with the fire brigade was in the days when the firemen hauled the engines to the scene of the fire themselves or took the first horse that happened to pass along the street. The steed was unharnessed from the wagon it was pulling and harnessed to the fire engine. He often told of Montreal's big fires, such as that which destroyed Christ Church Cathedral in 1856, the potash factory fire in 1861, and later, the fire that swept from Place Viger to the old Montreal jail at the corner of Craig street and Belorimier avenue.

Mr. Perry worked on the erection of a pump which was exhibited in the Paris Exhibition in 1889 and at the London Exhibition in 1891. The pump was awarded several gold medals.

Peter DeWolfe has been warned to stay away from Brena Belos or he will "vanish like the others." He meets her in London and she tells him her story: When but a very young girl her father died, leaving her an orphan. She went to St. Louis to marry Dick Hennepin, but he failed to put in an appearance, and has not been heard of since. Then she returned to her former boarding house in Dallas, Texas, and Hennepin's boss, Compton Parmalee, marries her. Parmalee is very eccentric and has a fear that he is always being followed. He, too, vanishes. Peter DeWolfe determines to get at the mystery. He sails for America and visits the Parmalee house on the Hudson where he finds evidence in an old book of Aztec lore which leads him to make a trip to an ancient Aztec "lost" city. Brena has followed him from England and insists on accompanying him on the journey.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

At last they came to the crumbling walls and the gaping mouth of the ancient gateway. The sun was still sending down its heat in throbbing layers over the desert. It slanted down from the West following the angle of declivity of the wall of rock behind the ruin that mounted up in ragged overhanging crags of red and brown.

Upon the base of this rock, rudely smoothed and carved, was the symbol of the feathered serpent.

Brena clutched Peter's forearm. "It did have a meaning then!" she exclaimed.

"A terrible meaning, Brena," he said with awe.

Amidst the gigantic proportions of desert, sky and cliff, this figure of the Mayan god—a symbol brought from the lands of the Central America by a craven tribe fleeing from its enemies—had looked down with its heathen eyes upon the growth of a city around an oasis, around a flowing giant spring.

It had seen peruations in the coming and going of generations within that fortified pueblo, strange rites, barbaric human sacrifice, the march of a little pomp and power, moving funerals, the dance of naked priests with painted yellow bodies, the endless stream of laborers bending under their loads of water carried from the well to irrigation ditches, the harvest, the miracles of water.

But perhaps it had seen too the day when a subterranean shift had driven the underground water course away, and in a night drained out the life-maintaining supply of five thousand panic-stricken praying men and women and their lamenting priests.

Perhaps, if tradition were right, it knew where the treasures of that city had been hid away.

"You are not going into it alone?" said Brena. "I will go with you!"

"It isn't right, Brena! I do not know what we shall find."

He looked at the opening in the high wall as if it were the maw of Destiny opened to belch forth upon them a sentence.

"Tell me, Peter—are there dangers there? Do you know?"

"I only guess," he answered. "I think there are none. I think, Brena, that beyond that wall there is freedom for us—life for us—a message for us."

"I must go with you."

She put her hands in his; with a smile she said, "You see, Peter, I am in the dark, dear. But just the same I'll do as you tell me."

He disappeared outside the old wall, and as he vanished, so vanished all that attached her to the living world.

There was no sound, no motion within the range of the senses; the place of death was still. Not even a horned toad, like a piece of dried and shrivelled cactus skin, drew trail upon the dust. Brena felt as if she too had become incapable of movement and of sound; she had a sense of being transformed into stone—an adamant statue of a woman, carved from rock, waiting beside the waterless well under the beating sun, the cloudless infinity of sky, the cliff, until the crack of doom.

From the table lands above a lonely buzzard came swooping down on wide, black wings, dipping and turning, with one eye cocked down, as if sometime before he had picked bones in this enclosure and had returned to the scene of gruesome feasts.

Black, ill-omened, carrion creature that he was, Brena felt glad that he had come—a thing of life and motion—into this place of vast dimensions filled by the silences and rigidity of death.

She watched the magnificent grace and power of his flight until Peter's voice broke the silence again, and flapping toward the west, the bird began to circle up whence he had come.

"Brena," said Peter, who came to her with an expression drawn as if with some stress within.

"Yes?"

"Sit down with me here where these blocks cast a shadow, dear. I will show you what I have found—a thing like the writing of a giant finger of justice—here in the desert. But first I want to tell you a tale, Brena—revolting and terrible."

"Tell me," she said, sitting with her elbows on her knees.

"It is of surprising brevity, Brena," he asserted. "Its simplicity is the thing that makes ridiculous the many things I expected, all the nightmares of the unknown. I stumbled on to the trail. I used my head. That's all."

He stopped to think.

"And yet the simplicity is hideous!" he said.

Brena glanced toward all that remained of Jim Hennepin of Virginia—the blackened, fleshless relics of his existence.

"He deserved it, perhaps," said Peter pointing. "He tried to cash in his knowledge."

"You told me last night of the superstition of buried treasure here," she said. "You mean that?"

"No, not exactly," said Peter. "I picked up the trail in the house where Parmalee took you. Two old books; and maps of this country and of this place were missing from both. One Parmalee took when he went away. The other? Well, I began to wonder about the other."

"You thought it must have been used—before?"

"Yes. It had been used and probably destroyed. It was used by one man to lure another to his death!"

He nodded.

At the entrance he stopped, gazing down at the ground—the film, the blanket of fine dust. He uttered an exclamation.

"What do you see, Peter?"

"I see a record in the sand."

"What record?"

"We shall see more," he said grimly. "Come."

In the centre of the enclosure, there was one monument of permanence; it was the great well-curb of mighty slabs hewn from the rock of the cliffs.

Towards this memorial of tragedy, of death, of decay, of the insignificance of time, of the inconsequence of an age of man, Brena and Peter, like two creatures of a moment of life, walked with solemn, awed faces.

"Look!" said Peter suddenly. "Have you your nerve? Look!"

He pointed to a pile of charred bones lying close to the well. Among them was a piece of human skull blackened as if by fire.

"Wait," Peter commanded.

He went forward, bent over the grisly pile, kicked the sand that surrounded it, and, stooping down, gathered a number of objects into the cup of his hand.

"This was no prehistoric man," he said solemnly. "See! The eyelets and the nails of shoes. The owner long ago vanished. Here are two mother of pearl buttons, a pocket knife, coins. This man lost his life, many years ago."

Brena tried to speak, wetting her lips with the tip of her tongue.

"There are things of gold, too," said Peter. "Keep your nerve, dear. Look at this!"

He held out in his trembling fingers a signet ring with an H deeply engraved upon it.

"That!" exclaimed Brena with horror. "It was his!—Jim Hennepin's. This is—he?"

"Yes."

Brena moved toward the pile of bones half consumed by fire; then she stopped and looked away.

"He was killed," she said. "He was shot or stabbed."

"No," replied Peter grimly. "It was worse than that—more ghastly. He was killed. But it was not by a human hand."

"Brena, I want you to stand here by this old well without walking away from it a moment," said Peter, taking her by the shoulders and looking squarely into her dark eyes. "I'm going to leave you alone a minute. It's not pleasant. I want you to do it just the same."

"Where are you going?"

"Outside the wall again. I've seen something there that you did not see."

Brena shivered.

"Don't be afraid, dear," he said. "We have had—both of us—the lesson of futile fear. Once we told each other that fear was a crime—a terrible waste. We are on the verge of learning how terrible a waste it can be."

He disappeared outside the old wall, and as he vanished, so vanished all that attached her to the living world.

There was no sound, no motion within the range of the senses; the place of death was still. Not even a horned toad, like a piece of dried and shrivelled cactus skin, drew trail upon the dust. Brena felt as if she too had become incapable of movement and of sound; she had a sense of being transformed into stone—an adamant statue of a woman, carved from rock, waiting beside the waterless well under the beating sun, the cloudless infinity of sky, the cliff, until the crack of doom.

"You thought it must have been used—before?"

Brena leaned forward.

"I began to be sure, Brena, when I found that expert knowledge pronounced that the writing on a cheque made out by the one man who led the other to his death here was written by the same hand that, with an attempt to disguise, had written the words, 'This Sign,' on the scrap of paper Jim Hennepin left with you and that you gave me. I'd better tell you that when I first took that cheque it was because your indorsement was on it. I wasn't sure, Brena—of anybody."

"I understand," she said. "I understand. And the scrap of paper was a part of the bait?"

Peter raised his hand as if to say that he wished to go on in his own way.

"It was chance, too, that led me to the motive for ridding the world of Hennepin. That miserable man had become a menace. He knew too much! He knew of a long series of embezzlements from a certain estate in Texas. A capitalist had bought vast quantities of something—on speculation—and his agent after his death deceived the executors as to the extent of his holdings. I have had a clue from an old account book sifted to the bottom."

"And Jim Hennepin knew?"

"Knew and began a merciless blackmail, threatening ruin. I can see him now, insatiable, hungry, losing in speculations, asking for more, hounding a man who was balancing between success and failure and always hinting at bankruptcy and the penitentiary."

Peter went on. He told of the probability that Compton Parmalee, the hounded man, a physical coward, but resourceful and ingenious, had come upon an old volume describing this lost city of the desert. There were traditions of vast wealth hidden there. Parmalee had pretended to the possession of knowledge confirming it. He had shown old letter, the scrap of paper with the Kuk-ul-can symbol. He wanted to take the blackmailer to a place from which he would never come back.

"To kill him?" asked Brena.

"No," replied Peter. "He hadn't the courage. He feared that he feared the work. He feared the result. He had a better way!"

Raleigh

It is strange that the work of a poet who ranked so highly among his contemporaries and whose name acquired a romantic fascination for posterity, could have been lost almost completely. It would be natural to expect a posthumous publication on the part of some enterprising printer. Possibly Raleigh's reputation as a poet was overshadowed by his later reputation as a historian and a political martyr, but it seems more reasonable to suppose that if his manuscripts had been accessible, they would have been offered to a public always avid for relics of the great. What happened to them and why they were not accessible is beyond the reach of conjecture. They may have been destroyed by Raleigh himself, reminding him too poignantly of happier days, or by his enemies, scenting treason and atheism in any papers he had written, or by pure accident, in ignorance of their worth. That they were destroyed is only too plain; and Raleigh's poems must be sought laboriously in all kinds of uncertain literary byways of the late sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries.

In so many ways typical of his age, in poetry Raleigh stands curiously, if not incomprehensibly, apart from the ruck. He is thoughtful and melancholy personal and passionate, and these last two qualities, which to some of us "are" poetry, were not common in the sixteenth century lyric. The typical Elizabethan poem contains no lot of personal emotion; as often as not it is translated from a Frenchman, who had it from an Italian, who found it in Plato; and the author is perhaps a literary hack, like Robert Greene, living squalidly—and for all that the poem is as fresh as a flower. It is baffling and beautiful; baffling because it is beautiful and nothing else. Thought is not permitted to distort it nor feeling to betray it into incoherencies.

Raleigh was not, like Donne, a rebel against the cult of beauty, but he put his personal feelings before his aesthetic sense. He was not content to say the common things exquisitely, but wrestled to express the thoughts that really stirred him, the emotions he was actually feeling, with the result that his poetry is sometimes obscure and restless, disfigured by abrupt turns, ellipsis and anacoluthon. And sometimes it has the compensating virtues of sincerity and a rare poignancy. From the Introduction to "The Poems of Walter Raleigh," edited by Agnes M. C. Latham.

WRIGLEY'S DOUBLEMINT

Altogether cool

All in a Saturday Morning

Margaret E. Creswick, Howland Ave., Toronto.

"Ho, hum! Saturday morning."

So muttered young Nancy, as she roused herself from a happy state of being nearly asleep, yet enough awake to know that people were moving about her home, and that there was no real hurry for her to get up.

The world outdoors was flooded with sunshine. Some of it poured in at her window. Stretching her slender arm over the edge of the bed, she could feel its warmth, like a gentle caress. Through her sleepy eyes she fancied she could see the Fairy Queen dancing on the sunbeams and reaching out to touch, with a magic wand, the little outstretched hand.

She laughed and sat upright in bed. "Fairies, indeed!" she said. "Miss Nancy, you're far too old to believe in fairies. You're thirteen, now!" She liked to hear that 'teen, so she repeated the word. Then with a little less elation, "Yes, old enough to help with the dishes and dusting."

She sat there, hugging her knees, and contemplating the important age she had reached, yes, a very important age! But oh! it meant ever so many more responsibilities!

"Bother the work," she declared. "Who wants to get up to dust and sweep, a morning like this? What a horrid world it is. Mighty unfair, too!" At that moment she heard, her eleven-year-old brother, come beneath her window, and talk to his companion, young Tommy Jones, about going to "the cut" to swim.

Nancy jumped to the floor quickly, dragging the bed clothes half way to the window.

"Hey, you!" she called to Bob. "What do you mean running off like this? How about helping with some of the work, for a change?"

Nancy wasn't the least embarrassed that Tommy could see her leaning over the window sill in her 'nightie'. In fact, in her sudden anger at the unfairness of things, she had forgotten that she was hardly presentable.

Bob was shocked and displeased. "Oh, go get dressed!" he answered, "and mind your own business. When you start getting up before noon maybe you can talk to me then. Come on, Tom," he concluded in an injured tone.

Tom agreed promptly, and the two boys were soon out of sight, leaving an angry girl looking out at a world of sunshine and joy. She felt none of either, now. Who could after such injustices?

Naturally her temper was not very sweet when she descended to the kitchen, a few minutes later. And she certainly found nothing there to improve it.

"Well, you lazy little good-for-nothing," said her sister, Janet, offering the first irritation. "It's about time you got up. Hurry and have your breakfast. It's half past nine. I'm not going to wait all day to get the dishes done."

"Oh, shut up!" replied Nancy, "I'll eat when I please."

Then her mother's sweet voice broke in. "Nancy, dear," she said, "you'll have to get up earlier, Saturday morning. You can't waste the whole day indoors. Hurry, clean the breakfast things up, and then you can go out."

"Well, I like that!" protested Janet. "If I do the sweeping surely Nancy can dust. I'm not going to do everything and let that youngster get spoiled."

Janet was interrupted by Frances, still another sister, who had just come in from the summer kitchen. "Mother, how much baking powder do I put in this cake?" she asked. Then, noticing her young sister, "Oh, good morning, Merry Sunshine!" she remarked. "Well, up so early? Why, it's not ten o'clock yet."

"What difference does it make to you when I get up?" retorted Nancy. "A lot of difference, Miss 'Snapping Turtle,'" Frances replied hotly. "You upset the whole household, coming down long after everybody else."

Nancy started to fight back angry tears. "Oh, that's too bad!" she cried. She hated being called "Snapping Turtle."

Mother soon squelched the quarrel. "That's enough of this wrangling," she ordered. "Frances get on with your baking. Janet, go up upstairs and do the sweeping. Nancy can help me with the dishes and when you are through, she can go up and dust and make the beds."

By the time Nancy had eaten breakfast she was feeling much more amiable. She chatted gaily with her mother while they worked together. Janet was soon down again to say that she had finished her part of the cleaning. So Nancy, finding a duster, went reluctantly upstairs.

There was the bookcase in the hall. It was dusty. She would start there. Besides, it was more interesting than anything else in sight. So the duster moved slowly over the top, then it ran along the edge of the first shelf. Nancy may have had her faults, but she was thorough. Out came every book. She dusted the shelf well, and each volume, too. It was slow work. Presently her eyes rested on a favorite book. She took the volume from its place and dusted it carefully, then she started turning over the leaves. Twice she had read it before, but now she couldn't resist the temptation to run over a few pages once more.

She became absorbed and sat down on the floor, legs crossed and the book in her lap. Soon she forgot all about her work. What an odd picture she made, with her duster lying idle beside her! She would have gone on reading for ever so long, probably, but someone called up asking her to throw down the broom. Quickly she was again brought back to the world of cleaning. "Golly, I must get on with my work!" she exclaimed.

Shortly she went into her own room and noticed her sister had turned back the bed covers and had put the pillows in the window to air. Nancy's first impulse was to throw her little young body across the mattress for another rest. The sunny window and soft pillows, however, proved a greater attraction. She tossed the duster over to a chair and turned towards the window, addressing a sleepy looking cat. "Well, Miss Kitty," she said, "if mamma saw you curled up on those clean pillows she wouldn't be very pleased." Kitty paid no attention. She just blinked, closed her eyes and started to purr again.

Nancy sighed as she looked out of doors at the beautiful view, beyond the fluttering white curtains. She longed to be out there, this beautiful warm, sunny June day, wandering through the woods and looking for violets. Oh, how glorious it would be!

Before her now the whole universe was drowsy and peaceful. A faint breeze was rustling the leaves; the chickens in the yard were clucking lazily; a robin in the orchard chirped blithely, in the garden were men working, but their voices were mellow, as though they were far away.

Nancy took another long, long breath. "What a lazy world," she remarked to herself. "Lazy chickens, lazy robin, lazy white clouds, lazy little village sleeping down there—lazy—lazy—lazy! Everything is lazy. Why can't I be, too?"

Well, she would be; that was all. So she sat down on the floor, and pushing the kitten to one side, rested her arms on the downy pillows. She smiled dreamily. The view, looking out from here, was grand. She never tired of it. Often before she had come to gaze and dream, and it had always offered some rapture.

Nancy's home was at the top of a hill, one of those that formed the valley in which the little village of Astervale nestled, but which she could hardly see for trees. At a distance the place looked like a small forest. She loved Astervale because it seemed so happy and contented, sleeping there in its cradle. She wondered if it would ever wake up and climb up the hills, as a town, or city. She hoped not. It was so much nicer just as it was, for it left the lovely fields, all laid out so neatly on the hillsides. Oh, how she did love the open country, the hills, the valleys, and the woodlands! All the fields were green now, with many different shades. The woods, too, away to the south, had still other tones of green.

Nancy smiled joyously. "Green everywhere," she said aloud. "Every kind there is. And green is the fairy color. Why, the view is just like a fairy world."

A train had just come into the station at Astervale. The sound of its whistle interrupted her reflections. Then as it started again, she heard the chug-chug of the engine and the ding-dong of the bell. White smoke rose above the trees, and soon the train, like a huge dark worm, was whirling out through the fields. Shortly it came to a grade and began to climb, puffing, roaring. "The ugly black monster," she protested to kitty, "tearing through my beautiful green Fairyland!"

While Dobbin, Jr., and Rover support his throne, this little bushy-tailed favorite chirps a merry greeting as he makes a royal breakfast from acorns.

For a few moments it was lost to sight as it went through the cut in the hill. Nancy laughed to herself as she thought of the boys swimming in the pool, there. They would have to duck when the coaches went by. When she could see the train again it was smaller, its whistle fainter.

She watched it for some time. Now it would disappear behind an elevation or grove, then re-appear, still smaller again than before. Finally it was only a heavy dark line, leaving behind a stream of smoke. "Ah, now it is a tiny fairy train," she exclaimed in glee.

Away to the southwest stretched many miles of picturesque, undulating country. Some days the hills were covered by haze, which gave them a bluish tint. That was why they were called the Blue Mountains. Nancy liked them best when the haze veil was gone—like it was to-day—when she could see the outline of the forests against the horizon.

As she pondered she began to wish herself on the train. Then she wondered where it was going. It must be to some very enchanting place, for everything in the whole world was so beautiful and alluring! Soon indeed she was, in imagination, far away, speeding on with the magic thing to a happy land of enchantment. Suddenly she was so startled as to almost jump from the floor.

"Nancy!" came an authoritative call from downstairs.

"Yes," she answered, rising quickly. It was the voice of her mother. "Whatever are you doing?" asked Mrs. Luke. "Haven't you finished your work yet?"

"No, oh—not quite, mamma."

"My goodness, you are slow!" declared Mrs. Luke, rather cross now. She was coming upstairs. "You'll have to hurry." She added, "Why it's nearly noon. Come, you must finish before lunch."

Nancy picked up her duster and started working for dear life.

Mrs. Luke paused when she reached Nancy's doorway. "Good gracious, my child," she exclaimed, "why, you haven't even made the beds yet! What have you been doing, all this time? You should have been through in twenty minutes, and here you've been an hour and twenty minutes!" She walked over to the window, and kitty, startled by the angry voice, jumped down to the floor and scurried away. "Nancy! didn't you see that cat on the pillows? I wish you would pay some attention to your work. I can't count on you to do anything, properly." Out of patience, she began making the beds.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself!" she chastised as she worked. "It shouldn't take you all this time to do a simple little task. Bless me if I couldn't do everything myself on Saturdays with less trouble than in trying to make you girls help. But, oh dear, I guess it's all in the day."

Nancy listened respectfully. She didn't like to be scolded. Now it made her so unhappy she wished she could run away—away from everything disagreeable.

She took one more yearning glance out of the window to the enticing countryside, then turned to help her mother, but with a lighter heart. After all one could imagine things; and it was worth while just to think how lovely it would be to be flying away on trains to all sorts of wonderful places! Besides, there was a dreamland, a sweet, enchanting dreamland, away off there beyond those wonderful Blue Mountains! There must be. There would be, for her!

LONG LIFE

Man is living longer now than in days gone by, and there seems no reason why he should not live much longer still. Old age may not always be pleasant, but that depends largely on what we make it. Many of the finest achievements in statesmanship, literature, medicine, and the arts have been made by men of 60 or over. The astronomer Galileo, the philosophers, Herbert Spencer and Lamarck, Brown and Goethe, the poets, Verdi the composer, produced their masterpieces between the ages of 70 and 85. Titian painted at 98. Most of the successful generals in the World War were far past the retiring age of 64.

It is certain that productive mental activity is greatest after the age of 40, provided that the health of the individual is good and that cares and responsibilities do not take away his ambitions. To live long and to live usefully are two different things. We may do both if we know how.

Sir Esme Howard

London Morning Post (Cons.): The Embassy at Washington is not only one of the prizes but also one of the ordeals of our Diplomatic Service, for it demands for its successful occupancy a rare combination of qualities. In no other foreign capital is British diplomacy exposed to such severe proof by the reactions of domestic as well as international politics and by the fierce light of publicity in which it must move and have its being. It is so terribly easy for a British ambassador not to succeed at Washington. From this exacting test, Sir Esme Howard, by general consent on both sides of the Atlantic, has emerged with what may be called first-class honors.

Judge Nation by Child Death Rate

Infant Mortality in Index of Any Civilization

This is part of an article on Infant Mortality, prepared by The Social Hygiene Council. Part two will follow next week.

One of the best criteria of the civilization of a nation is the care which it expends on its infants. The only method of estimating this is by observing the infant mortality rate. This is usually computed on the number of infants out of every 1000 born who do not live until the end of the first year.

It is a common superstition that the rearing of children is instinctive with the human race. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The mother must be taught how to care for her child if the child is to have any sort of a chance of surviving the dangerous first year and of reaching a healthy maturity. Poverty may be an excuse in some quarters for not giving a child all that it needs. But poverty is no excuse nowadays for not knowing what the child needs and how to take care of it. Ignorance on the part of the mother is inexcusable as there are health centres throughout the country to which those within reach may go at regular intervals and which will send reliable information to women in outlying districts.

Although ignorance, as I have said, is no excuse, it, with poverty, is still the greatest cause of a high mortality rate among infants. Poverty affects the child both before and after birth in several different ways. The child of really poor parents, particularly if they are of the proud kind and will not accept aid when it is offered them, is often undernourished either because the mother is herself undernourished and unable to nourish the infant sufficiently or because the child, if artificially fed, doesn't get enough of the right kind of food. Then too, living conditions for the child are apt to be crowded and more or less unhealthy. Poverty may force the mother out to work which is bad for herself and the child. A working mother is unable to nurse her baby and the infant is sometimes left at home in the care of some incompetent person, such as a small child or an ignorant older person.

The ally of poverty—ignorance—is usually helped along by meddlesome older persons who are more ignorant than the mother herself and who are sometimes superstitious. I have known of the most preposterous remedies being used by an ignorant mother at the suggestion of some busybody of a woman who, perhaps, learned it from her grandmother—or perhaps invented it herself.

The mother should learn from her physician or from a competent nurse and if neither of these are available because of the mother's isolation in some inaccessible country district then from the literature which can be obtained from a number of sources.

Children of ignorant mothers are rarely properly bathed, rarely get sufficient sunlight, enough fresh air or the right kind of food. They are nearly always treated as if germs were non-existent. Their bottles are sometimes filthy from a scientific standpoint.

A public health nurse once told me of a thing she saw one time. It was hardly believable. The nurse was paying her first visit to a poor family and it happened to be what the mother figured was the baby's feeding time. The mother was putting milk into a bottle which she carefully washed under the tap before putting the milk into it. The procedure was to fill a tumbler with milk and then pour it into the baby's bottle from that. As the nurse watched wide-eyed a fly fell into the glass of milk. The mother calmly picked it out with her dirty fingers and went on filling the infant's bottle. Needless to say that mother had a few lessons in the preparation of feeding for babies within the next few days.

A baby's food must be wholesome and pure. With a mother who is both poor and ignorant such a standard is impossible. A mother who knows what she is doing but who is poor and unable to afford the proper surroundings finds it hard to maintain the standards necessary if her baby is to grow up with an even chance in the world.

A mother between the ages of twenty-five and thirty has the best chance of giving birth to a healthy child—one which will be able to resist the dangers besetting it during the first year. Care of the infant should begin long before the child is born as the physical condition of the mother is of the utmost importance. If the mother is poor and undernourished or suffering from any of the complications of pregnancy the child's chances of life are greatly lessened. If the mother has to work she should arrange it that she has some rest before the birth of the baby. The death of weakly infants, due to overwork and undernourishment on the part of the mothers, forms a great part of the infant mortality rate.

It is quite obvious the part that poverty plays in keeping up our infant mortality rate—and in bringing children poorly equipped to maturity. Bad housing and poor sanitation are detrimental to the health of the child. Families that are forced to live in cramped quarters of one or two rooms cannot but suffer. There is lack of fresh air and sunlight, there is dirt and filth tracked in from the street by many feet, and—a very important consideration—a lack of proper storage space for food. Nearly always there is a complete lack of refrigeration—all these things tend to lessen a child's chances for life and in life. As long as our cities have slums their mortality rate will not be lessened. Great strides have been taken by the health authorities, but there is much work yet to be done. The work of health officers in connection with housing is no bed of roses. You may find it hard to believe but their efforts are often misunderstood and they are always meeting strong opposition from different quarters. No landlord—unless he is very public spirited, will allow a house or building of his to be condemned without a fight. There are many landlords of course who are ready and willing to help in any way possible. They very often need no word from the health officers that their properties are uninhabitable and they make changes or rebuild of their own volition.

If you are a landlord you can help greatly by taking a pride in your properties and by seeing to it that they are a help instead of a hindrance in the solution of the very real housing problem.

You must not think that the problem is confined wholly to the cities. Towns and villages have it just as well. I know of an Ontario town where a great percentage of the houses are on the market for sale or rent. The same economic conditions that have reduced the town to this have made the poorer residents so poor that they cannot afford to pay even the ridiculously low rental that are asked for excellent brick houses in the best of condition. Many of these people are living in what are real slums and under unsanitary, unwholesome conditions. Without hurrying the town any, ninety per cent.—yes, 100 per cent.—of the bad houses could be condemned. But—and here is the problem—in that town everybody knows everybody else. It is extremely hard for the health officers to do anything at all.

Statistics compiled in England show that the infant mortality rate varies directly with the amount of space in which a family has to live.

Little Men

We are dumb at heart; Although the air is thick with little words Mouthed into petty speech, and lost again. Great poets voice their love, And so the birds; But we are dumb at heart.

For we are little men And such as we can never tell desires Or speak our love as birds and poets do;

So friendship shrouds its glow, And love its fires: For we are little men! —Thomas Sergeant, in the Bermondsey Book.

PREMIER ANNOUNCES ELECTION; JULY IS MONTH OF BALLOTING.

Canada is to spend the summer in the throes of a general election. The challenge of the opposition, voiced by Hon. R. B. Bennett, has been accepted by Premier King. As soon as the business before Parliament can be brought to an orderly conclusion the house will be dissolved. At this writing July 14 or 21 are regarded as the likely polling dates.

Already members have started to drift back to their constituencies to complete their organizations and to arrange their conventions, where they have not been held. Another two weeks will see the campaign in active progress, though the party leaders are unlikely to get into action on the platform before the first of June. Radio and direct mail publicity will take a more important part in the campaign, though the older forms of advertising are not to be neglected. Headquarters of both parties insist that there will be diffusion of publicity on an unprecedented scale and that electors will go to the polls equipped with a wider knowledge of the issues than ever before.

So far as the budget is concerned the issues of the next campaign are fairly clearly defined. Mr. Bennett found in it nothing to stimulate, or to build up the Canadian home market either for agriculture or other industries. If the extension of British Preferences are effective, he contends, they will simply transfer a portion of our purchasing of manufactured goods from the United States to Empire sources. If they go further than that they will reduce existing employment in Canada.

The principle of countervailing duties he found, ineffective as they applied to articles of which Canada is on an export basis and, therefore, an unlikely importer. Nova Scotia coal was aided with a subsidy of 49½ cents a ton when used for coking for steel making in Canada but he held that that benefit was more than eliminated by added competition which secondary steel industries will face through the extensions of the British Preference.

Another criticism did betray what must have been a ministerial oversight, the budget neglected what is regarded as the first essential of a budget, an estimate of expenditures and of revenue for the current year. The charge is laid that this was left out because the Government expects its first deficit in many years in 1930. The surplus last year was said to be $44,000,000, will follow enforcement of the new no-clearance law for liquor laden vessels bound for the United States. The cut in the Sales Tax will lop another $20,000,000 off revenues in 1930, while a drop in income tax receipts of probably $10,000,000 is expected as a result of stock market and business conditions. Subsidies to the Prairie provinces and to the Maritimes, as well as Old Age Pensions will require more outlay while, if they prove effective, tariff reductions in favor of the Empire will reduce customs income.

Such are the major criticisms of the 1930 budget. In its favor there are a number of important features. The War-time tea tax of seven cents a pound goes off and while that amounts only to about fourteen cents a month to the average family it is a reduction that will be noted twice a month by every family, if not more often. The duties to be imposed upon fresh fruits and vegetables are welcomed, though agricultural associations are protesting that they are not high enough to give relief. The increase in butter and egg tariffs, though they have been urged by the opposition, should prove decidedly helpful to the government, while the radical advance in the duty on field beans will probably make four more or less doubtful seats certain to the Liberal party. The move to promote Empire trade will have a sympathetic reception over a wide area. How well the secret of the budget's contents was guarded is proved by a rather humorous reaction. Almost up to the day of its presentation Liberal members of the House and the Liberal publicity bureau took every opportunity to laud the Government's prior tariff policy and to urge that the Government remain steadfast against tariff increases. The increases brought down, particularly on agricultural products, were a complete surprise and considerable of a shock within the party.

With the exception of Manitoba and Saskatchewan members the Liberals are well pleased with the policy.

How long the debate upon it is allowed to continue will depend upon what the Prime Minister hears as to the reaction of the country. If he thinks it favorable there will be a July election. If not, the debate will run its course but preparations for the campaign go merrily forth.

WOMAN'S PLACE IN POLITICS

To the Editor of the Watchman:

Sir,—Woman as the home-maker is vitally interested in all that relates to the expenditure of the funds which she is of necessity by reason of her position responsible for, and it is therefore necessary that she should know the why, and the wherefore of any changes affecting that of which she has charge; so that if she would wish to realize the true value of what she buys, she must study not only the sources of supply, but also the actual needs of her household, and to do this there are the illuminating reports of our imports and exports, the place of their origin, and how far they are necessities rather than luxuries, for these latter are the things on which hangs much of the high cost of living. Inter-related with these is the matter of health, and as a nation's wealth is its health, it behooves women to so regulate the food provided that there shall be nothing inimical to the welfare of either the infant or the adult. In the past, women, for the most part, have adopted, the laissez-faire policy in regard to needs and wants, and so habits have been formed, and adhered to, that have done much to undermine the health of this Dominion. Always as home-keeper, woman had a definite responsibility for all things affecting this country, but since she has been given the vote her responsibility has become more acute. Far too few women realize that fifty-five per cent. of the voting power of this country is theirs, and on them accordingly rests the added responsibility of choosing wisely and well what part they shall take in the coming elections. It is not necessary to sacrifice home duties for the street, the platform or the forum, but it is necessary to study the real bearing of the issues of the day on the home for which she is responsible.

KATE S. MASSIAH.

Montreal, May 13th., 1930.

MANY CABINET CHANGES RUMORED

The customary crop of pre-election rumors of cabinet reconstruction is now being resped. The speaker of the House, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, will, it is said, go to the Senate to be succeeded in the event of a Liberal victory by Fred G. Sanderson of South Perth.

Hon. Dr. Motherwell is slated for the Lieutenant Governorship of Saskatchewan while Hon. Charles Stewart, whose department is to be merged, will probably find that seat in the Senate which he has for the past two years. Mr. Stewart is being urged to take over the Department of Agriculture but if he has his way will not do so. The Department of Marine and Fisheries is to be more definitely split with a new minister in charge of fisheries. In this connection Dr. Cyrus McMillan of McGill University is prominently mentioned.

Transfer of their natural resources to the Western Provinces takes every thing but the Northwest territories away from the administrative work of the Department of the Interior and this will be transferred, probably to the Secretary of State. The handing over of immigration to the provinces automatically wipes out the Immigration Department.

Hon. Mr. King is expected to leave the cabinet for the Senate.

Keep FIRE at Bay with GYPROC

FIRE seldom visits houses having Gyproc Wallboard ceilings, partitions, walls and sheathing. On the contrary Gyproc has saved many homes.

This pioneer Canadian fire-safe gypsum board has a new Ivory coloured finish this year that makes decoration unnecessary (when panelled). It is just the thing to use for making extra rooms in the cellar or attic.

Quickly erected, inexpensive, structurally strong, Gyproc Wallboard gives permanent fire protection.

of it before it is lost up the chimney.

The gas-tight, dustless, clean heat furnace is here. It is the Torrid Zone boiler plate furnace and it will deliver more clean heat from less fuel than any other furnace that has ever before been known. It is far better than radiation heat and costs less to install. It recirculates fresh and sterilized warm air throughout the home.

RIVETED

MODERN science now brings the Torrid Zone steel furnace—built like a steam boiler, riveted and caulked absolutely dust-tight and gas-tight. The Torrid Zone has no cast-iron fire pot, no joints from which cement may work loose. The fire pot is enclosed in a steel drum riveted gas-tight like a city gas tank or a steam boiler.

Torrid Zone heat is always clean heat.

No cast-iron fire bowl to crack and require replacement, for boiler plate steel never cracks. The average life of Torrid Zone furnaces has been twenty-one years.

Huge combustion chamber creates more perfect combustion as in a steam boiler. Most of the coal is burned and less goes up the chimney in smoke.

The hot smoke passes through a secondary radiating drum on the back, which gets more heat out

Torrid Zone steel furnaces are the only riveted and caulked gas-tight boiler plate furnaces in Canada. When installed according to the Standard Code, as designed by research engineers for the National Warm Air Heating Association, they will radiate warm, fresh air evenly throughout every room in your home. Gasworks has succeeded to science in Torrid Zone heating.

Here and There

(Que.)
Twenty-two days will be occupied by the annual tour across Canada to be conducted by Dean Stclair Laird, of Macdonald College, when his party leaves the Windsor Street Station, Montreal, by special train over Canadian Pacific lines on Sunday, July 20. This year will be the seventh trip conducted by Dean Laird and, as in past years, will include automobile drives over the famous Banff-Winnipeg highway and from Field, via the Yoho Valley, to Lake Louise, as well as steamer trips across the Kootenay Lake to Nelson, from Vancouver to Victoria; and on the Great Lakes steamships from Port William to Port McNicoll.

Spring seeding in the west is proceeding at a rapid pace, according to report at the end of April from the agricultural department of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Winnipeg. Taking the three prairie provinces as a whole it was then estimated that 43 per cent. of wheat seeding is completed, with some districts in south-eastern Alberta reporting between 50 and 65 per cent. finished. Heavy showers have somewhat retarded progress in north-western Saskatchewan.

Twelve representatives of the New Zealand press are at present travelling through Canada via Canadian Pacific on their way to the fourth Imperial Press Conference to be held in London, Eng., next June. The members of this party with their wives and children have been visiting Banff and Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies.

Contracts are let and grading has been started on three additional branch lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway covering 145 miles in Saskatchewan and Alberta. It is announced by the company's engineering department. These new sections of railroad will provide facilities for passengers and freight into one of the richest agricultural areas now under settlement and will give encouragement to farmers already settled in the areas affected.

With 1,969,200 pounds more fish landed in Nova Scotia, during March, 1930, as compared with the same month of the previous year, fishermen of the province received a total of $385,334 for their catch, according to the monthly report of the fisheries branch of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. Total quantity landed in March was 9,475,000 pounds.

The new Montreal Harbor Bridge, a two-mile span across the St. Lawrence River, built at a cost of $12,000,000, will be formally opened on Victoria Day by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada. This bridge, work on which was commenced five years ago, is one of the longest and largest in the world.

Marquis wheat still constitutes more than one-half of the western grain crop. This is shown by the test samples taken from 48 cargoes of Canadian wheat exported to England in 1929-30 and reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The tests were made at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Brandon from samples collected by the Canadian Co-operative Wheat Producers at export ports.

Getting Ready for Shriners

Between 30,000 and 40,000 members of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine will meet in Toronto next June under the leadership of Esten A. Fletcher (inset), incoming Imperial Potentate of the Order. Hotels of the city, including the Royal York with its 1184 rooms will be insufficient to meet the demand, and the Canadian Pacific Railway is building a city of sleeping cars to accommodate some 8,000 of the Shriners. "Faz City," as it will be called, will cover 21 acres of land and construction data given out show the tremendous scope of the labors. There will be required 115,000 feet board measure in 30 sets of switch ties weighing 210 tons; 12,900 track ties weighing 800 tons; 30 switches weighing 86 tons; 11 1/4 miles of 85-lb. rail weighing 760 tons; 35,000 tie plates weighing 150 tons; 60 tons of rail fastenings; 30 tons of track spikes; 6 tons of track bolts; 18,000 cubic yards of ballasting for tracks; and 9,000 cubic yards of material for 3 1/4 miles of platforms with a breadth of 14 feet. The city will be fitted with modern conveniences and a building 220 by 20 feet wide will accommodate 100 cold and hot showers. Lighting will require 75,000 watts, enough to supply 14 miles of city residential street-lighting power. This electrical work will call for 35 miles of wire strung on 200 poles. Photo shows site of Faz City.

ST. ANDREWS EAST.

Rev. J. Macaskill attended the Presbytery in Montreal last Tuesday. Mr. Willie Perks was up from Montreal for the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Perks.

Many St. Andrews people attended the lecture given by Prof. Summerby in the Community Hall, Lachute Rd. Mr. John Irwin now has Mr. Peter Frank, from Switzerland, as a landscape gardener, besides his gardener, Mr. Farley.

The Reading Circle met at Mr. W. Pitcairn's on Monday evening, May 12th. It was a Dickens Evening and the whole time was devoted to consideration of the life and works of the great novelist, Charles Dickens. Mrs. DeWitt read a paper giving a short sketch of his life, with interesting notes in regard to certain of his stories. It would be difficult to give more valuable information about the author in so short an article. Other members read selections from his different works. The next meeting will be at Mr. W. Pitcairn's on May 28th, and the subject will be The Empire.

CUSHING

Mr. and Mrs. T. Weir and family motored to Pt. au Chene last Sunday.

Mr. S. Whelehan of Montreal, and daughter Katie spent Sunday in Cushing.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Watson and Mrs. C. L. Cooke were in Lachute on Wednesday.

Miss Muriel Cooke who is attending school at Lachute spent the week end at her home here.

Rev. and Mrs. Irving of Grenville, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Watson on Wednesday last.

Mrs. S. O. Hartley and the Messrs. Douglas, Ernest and Laurence Hartley also Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Hartley and two little daughters motored up and spent the week-end at their Cushing residence.

Dr. H. B. Cushing and his brother Mr. Walter Cushing also the Messrs. Marjorie and Florence Cushing and the Messrs. Thompson, Byers and McDougall motored up from the city on Saturday and spent the day at the doctor's residence.

A brush-fire which was started in the woods north of Greece's Point by an enterprising citizen with clean-up ideas last week shortly assumed such proportions as threatened to wipe out that picturesque hamlet and considerable alarm was felt until the fire was got under control which was not until it had consumed a quantity of fence belonging to adjacent farmers.

For Lachute Merchants Only
Being one of a series of chats with Lachute Businessmen in which it is suggested how they may increase their volume of sales.

Speeding Up Your Turnover

WHEN your merchandise turnover is sluggish and your revenue falls off it's time to look your business squarely in the eye.

Disturbing as these conditions are, advertising is a way of getting around them. Advertising, that is, where it can do you the most good, advertising where your customers are certain to see it—advertising in your local, home newspaper.

Your own advertising is essential. There's no doubt of that. But if your merchandise turnover is to speed up and stay that way, the advertising support of the manufacturers whose commodities you handle is just as necessary.

And you can go a long way in enlisting the support of these manufacturers quite easily.

When the salesmen of the manufacturers whose goods you stock call on you, impress them with the thought:

If you are to do any sizable amount of business you must keep Lachute's folk coming to your stores and that advertising in your local, home newspaper—your own and that of the manufacturer—is therefore an absolute necessity.

Make this thought impressive enough and the salesmen are bound to convey it to their home offices where advertising moneys are decided upon and advertising media selected.

You need the advertising aid of the manufacturers whose goods you stock—urge their salesmen to recommend your local home newspaper.

THE "WATCHMAN"

THIS newspaper has joined with the town newspapers all over the country in a nation-wide campaign to convince national advertisers that they can best assist small town merchants by advertising in the local home town newspapers of the small town merchants.

NOTICE

We ask our patrons to kindly be lenient to the slight defects that may occur in talking pictures. Our machines are equal to those in use in the theatres in Montreal and in common with them we have to put up with annoyances as you yourselves, in a slighter degree of course, have to bear while using your phonographs and radios. The mechanism in our machines is very fragile and so minutely balanced that the least thing will affect the synchronisation.... The talking picture industry is yet in its infancy and you may rest assured that all new devices tending to improve and perfect this new Art will be adopted at once in pursuance of our policy of giving you always Entire Satisfaction.

"R E X"

WE THANK YOU.

AVIS

Nous prions l'assistance de bien vouloir être indulgente pour les quelques défauts qui puissent se produire dans les vues parlantes. Nos machines sont égales à celles des théâtres de Montréal et de même que ce théâtre nous devons subir les ennuis que vous mêmes vous subissez avec vos phonographes et radios, vu que c'est la même base la moindre chose peut dérangé la synchronisation. Les vues parlantes n'en sont qu'à leurs débuts et soyez assurés que tout perfectionnement nouveau important sera adopté par nous afin de continuer à vous donner toujours les meilleurs satisfactions.

THE LATE MRS. G. H. BIGELOW

One of our old and much respected residents passed away on May 9th., 1930, in the person of Mrs. George H. Bigelow.

Deceased lady was in her 77th. year. She was afflicted with cancer and was bedfast since December. She was patient and bore her long suffering without a murmur.

She leaves to mourn her sad loss; her husband, two sons; Wm. G. of Dalesville, and Malcolm, of Lachute; two daughters, Mrs. James Cookson, of Mascoche; Miss Elizabeth and an adopted daughter, Mrs. Wm. Bigelow at home; also two brothers, John Kerr, of Brownsburg; and Malcolm Kerr, of Wilmar, Minn.; four sisters, Mrs. H. J. Nixon and Mrs. S. Kelly, of Rawcliffe, Que.; Mrs. R. A. Clark of Chippewa Falls, Wis.; and Mrs. A. J. Hubbard, of Eau Claire, Wis.

The funeral took place from her late residence on Sunday, conducted by the Rev. A. Penman, in the presence of a large number of sympathizing relatives and friends. Rev. Mr. Penman spoke very comfortably to the bereaved relatives.

The hymns sung were Mrs. Bigelow's favourites, "In the Sweet Bye-and-Bye" and "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

Interment was made in Edina cemetery.

God saw the road was getting rough, The hill was hard to climb, He gently closed her weary eyes, And whispered, "Peace be thine."

THE LATE MRS. JNO. BARRON

It is our sad duty this week to record the death which occurred on Monday, the 5th. inst., at her home in Grenville, of Mrs. John Barron, in her 70th. year.

Deceased was the eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John P. Johnson, of Rawcliffe, and was married in 1885 to Mr. John Barron, of Grenville, who predeceased her three years ago.

Of a bright and cheerful disposition, she was beloved by all who knew her, and, although not in good health for the past few months, the end was not expected and came as a great shock to all.

The funeral which took place on Thursday 8th. inst., from her late residence to the R. C. Church was largely attended. A guard of Honor of the Ladies' of Sta. Anne to which order the deceased belonged, walked in escort. The funeral was conducted by the Rev. Father Broseau, P. P., with Rev. Father Mandeville of Calumet, and Bazinet, of St. Philippe, as deacon and sub-deacon, the remains were then conveyed to the cemetery at Calumet, for interment. The bearers were E. and W. Barron, sons of the deceased, J. Johnson, E. Byrne, W. McCoy, and W. Loughren.

She leaves to mourn her loss five sons, Frederick, of Montreal; Edward, of Grenville; John and William, of Detroit; and Peter, of Kirkland Lake, and three daughters, Annie, and Theresa, R.N., of New York and Ettie, at home, also one brother Jas. Johnson, of Rawcliffe, and three sisters, Mrs. J. Grace, of Stonefield; Mrs. Wm. Loughren, of Grenville; and Mrs. D. Byrne, of St. Philippe.

Those from a distance who were present at the funeral were Mrs. J. Rayson and Mr. L. Milway, of Montreal; Mr. W. McCoy, and Mrs. R. McIntery, of Thurso, Que.

The sympathy of the community is extended to the family in their sad bereavement.

THE LATE MRS. E. BIGELOW

It is with regret we record the death of Mrs. E. Bigelow, of Calumet, who passed away on Wednesday, May 7th., at Dr. MacDonald's Hospital, in Vankleek Hill, in her 72nd. year. Deceased was of a most kind and loving disposition and loved by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn her loss, a loving husband, four sons, Elijah, of Rivington; John of Calumet; Ernest, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Gilman, at home and two daughters (Jessie) Mrs. Duncan MacVicar, of Calumet; and (Ellen) Mrs. W. W. MacVicar, of Vankleek Hill; two brothers, John, Graham, of Montreal; and James Graham, of Hawkesbury. The funeral service was held from her late residence, on Saturday afternoon last and was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Maclean, of Cushing of which the deceased lady was a devoted member of the United Church of Canada, assisted by the Rev. Jos. Irving, of the Anglican Church, Grenville, and the Rev. C. K. Mathewson, of Kirk Hill, Ont., who spoke of the deceased lady as a true, loving and christian woman how at her bedside she had so often repeated that she was ready to go and meet her Saviour face to face shall I behold Him. Far beyond the starry sky; Face to Face in all His glory, I shall see Him by and by, and to be with Him for evermore.

The wreaths were from the Ladies' Aid of the United Church of Calumet, of which the deceased was President; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Pender, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clarke, Mrs. McGillivray, Mr. John Graham, brother, of Montreal; Ernest Bigelow, her son; and a pillow and wreath from the family.

The pall bearers were Messrs. John Hawkins, H. G. Brennan, L. G. Martin, Thomas Bennett, George Arnold, and Eddie Wilman.

Among those from a distance were Mrs. Greig and two sons George and James, Miss Margaret Bigelow, of Thurso, Mrs. Percy Weston, of Montreal; Mrs. B. Bigelow and Mrs. Jas. Stewart, of Buckingham; Messrs. O. J. Wood and son Crawford; James Mooney and son David, James Walte Wm. Kingsbury, W. Ward, George MacVicar, of Vankleek Hill; and Jas. Graham, of Hawkesbury; Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Roberts, of Montreal; Mrs. W. J. MacNaughton and son Thomas, of Lachute, and Nurse Dewar.

The remains were laid to rest in the Calumet Cemetery.

ANALYSING THE BUDGET

Critical analyses of the Budget upon which the King Government is appealing for re-election is recapitulated in the Ottawa Journal of May 12 in these words.

The more Mr. Dunning's budget is examined, the more it becomes apparent that it is largely a fake, a cunning but discreditable attempt to fool the public for purposes of electioneering. Dozens of items declared free under the preferential rate mean nothing at all; were clearly put in for no other purpose than to give Mr. Dunning a chance to go out West and say: "See what I've done for Free Trade!" These items, in fact, are nothing more than a mask for the Government's humiliating surrender in the matter of action against the United States. They are simply and solely a part of the old game of throwing dust into the eyes of the electors, a part of the policy of holding on to office regardless of consistency or principle.

Trickery of this kind must be exposed. So far as Mr. Dunning's budget is a step toward meeting United States tariff aggression and dealing creditably with the British Preference, it is to be commended. But Mr. Dunning must be taught that he is not now in Legislature of Saskatchewan, and that all this mosaic of nonsense and crazy-quilt patchwork that he has tacked on to a few substantial tariff changes, are a long way from fooling the Canadian public. This Government, even with a wholly sensible tariff budget, would still be subject to censure. It would be subject to the censure of a death bed, electioneering recantation of folly with which it has injured Canada for nearly ten years. But when Mr. Dunning comes to Parliament with a long list of alleged tariff changes that are nothing but a fraud, seeking with these fraudulent changes to trick himself back into office, then the censure must be doubly severe. There has been too much of this sort of political dishonesty during the past ten years.

The Province of Quebec Association for the Protection of Fish and Game wishes to bring to the attention of the commercial fishermen and sportsmen some orders-in-council which were passed in Ottawa concerning net fishing in certain waters of the Province of Quebec.

The Association, following the policy which it has adopted since its reorganization, is anxious to educate rather than prosecute and for this reason will endeavour to bring any change in the laws before the people by publishing same in all newspapers and other publications which will be good enough to lend us their space for this purpose. By being so advised the people will not render themselves guilty of any misdeed without having at least a chance of knowing the laws.

Order-in-council passed November 8th, 1928 :-

"Fishing with hoop-nets, seines, or nets of any kind is prohibited in the Lake of Two Mountains and the Ottawa River."

Order-in-Council passed May 1st, 1929 :-

"No one shall sell, expose for sale, or possess with the intention of selling purchase or export speckled trout or rainbow trout, no matter where procured, provided however, that any non-resident fishing in the waters of the province under a license or permit from the Provincial Authorities may upon leaving the province, take away the lawful catch of two days' fishing but not to exceed a total weight of twenty-five pounds if such catch is accompanied by the shipping coupon furnished with the license or permit."

Order-in-Council passed September 11th, 1929 :-

"Fishing with hoop-nets of any kind is prohibited in the portions of the Desprairies and des Mille-Iles Rivers, District of Montreal, above the Canadian National Railway bridge at the junction of these rivers with the St. Lawrence River."

Order in council passed September 18th, 1929 :-

"Smelt gill-net fishing shall be permissible from September 1st in each year to February 15th. following, both days inclusive, provided that at the Magdalen Islands such fishing shall be permissible only from October 15th. in each year. Smelt bag-net fishing shall be permissible from the 25th. of November in each year to February 15th. following, both days inclusive, provided that at the Magdalen Islands such fishing shall be permissible from October 15th. in each year."

The above orders in council were all signed by Wm. A. Found, Deputy Minister of Fisheries.

It is necessary to bear in mind the fact that in the Ottawa River, Lake of Two Mountains, Riviere des Prairies, Mille Iles River down to the Canadian National Railway Bridge at Bout de l'Isle fishing can only be done with a hook and line.

SO ECONOMICAL to Cook Electrically on a Hotpoint Hi-Speed Range

WHEN you cook the modern Hotpoint way you get far more cooking heat per dollar . . . food shrinkage is much less . . . and oven current can be automatically controlled. More important still is the saving in labor, for Hotpoint electric heat means no sooted pots or pans . . . no oven watching . . . no basting and turning of meats.

Hotpoint Hi-Speed Elements have proved in actual tests to be not only the fastest electric range units but also the most economical. And these elements save replacement costs because they are practically indestructible. Hotpoint's Economy Cooker utilizes insulated heat and makes possible an infinite variety of inexpensive dishes. Hotpoint's All-Steel Construction protects your investment by giving long service. And Hotpoint's Super-Automatic Oven Control represents a big saving in time and current.

See the various models of this new Hotpoint Hi-Speed Range "designed by women for women". They are priced as low as $85 and may be bought on convenient terms.

Africa Bares Copper Veins to Supply Wealth

Discovery of Red Metal in North Rhodesia Brings in Era of Civilization

By MAXWELL NORMAN

Who would associate industrial prosperity with Central Africa? Who indeed, would think of the interior of the continent, the heart of the explorer's paradise, the big-game hunter's stamping ground, as the hub of an industrial activity that would startle the world? Yet it is an established fact.

Imagine a land of open forest, abounding in many varieties of big game, traversed by streams and rivers, populated sparsely by villages of savage blacks, wrapped in its entirety in ignorance and bound by ties of a superstition bred of centuries of unenlightenment. Imagine hundreds of thousands of square miles such as this, where the only means of transport is walking, and that on narrow paths worn smooth by the constant tread of naked feet.

Spirit of Wilderness Reigns

Picture this country where the total extent of the native's world is limited to the dozen or so little villages within his immediate surroundings, where knowledge of an outside world, other countries, oceans, cities, civilization, is simply non-existent. Imagine ever-present death lurking amid these trees, creeping on softly padded paws in the long grass around the drinking pool; the constant battle with nature, the struggle for existence, with the reality of the elements.

Then vision, in the very heart of such a country, townships paved with streets, electricity, radio, airplanes, power plants, great smokestacks towering above the topmost branches of the forest trees; giant smelters, with their enormous reverberatory furnaces; the hum of machinery, and, in fact, all the conglomeration of modern scientific industry and mechanical invention. This offers a limited portrayal of the phenomenal development, during the last three years, of northern Rhodesia.

And the reason? Just copper. No more, no less. Metal in hundreds of millions of tons, in thousands of square miles—in fact, briefly, a field that may prove the richest and largest ever discovered in the world.

A year or two ago Northern Rhodesia was a tract of country almost unknown to the world at large.

For years after the energy and genius of Cecil John Rhodes first opened up the country it lay dormant. A few lone prospectors did a certain amount of desultory prospecting, but they were handicapped by the fact that a fair thickness of geologically recent detritus overlies the whole country hiding the rock outcrops and covering up the surface showings of potential mineral wealth.

When Progress Started

It was not until 1923 that the first of the big concession companies came into existence. The government then granted exclusive prospecting rights over 52,000 square miles of land in return for a guarantee to expend a certain sum of money in the country annually. This company brought in trained geologists and engineers and scattered them over the country, and by the end of 1926 it was realized that there were huge possibilities for wealth in minerals there.

As soon as this became apparent other companies were formed, more concessions granted, and now almost the whole of Northern Rhodesia is taken up by concessions from government of exclusive prospecting rights. Within the last few months the greatest and richest copper field in the world has been discovered.

But there are difficulties. The thousands of miles which separate the country from so-called civilization means that the importation of machinery, European food and living necessities is difficult and costly.

Labor offers another problem. The native men never have worked in their lives, nor even have any of their ancestors. Their women have done all the unpleasant jobs—hoed the gardens, kept the huts in good shape, cut and carried the grass for thatching the roofs, and so on. If a family moved its habitat, all the household possessions were gathered into one bundle and the woman carried it on her head.

Tax Made Native Work

The first difficulty, then, was to make these natives work. So the government placed a "hut tax" of $2.50 on each adult male native, and this had to be paid in cash. There was only one way for them to obtain cash. They had to go to work for the white men. And then, when they began to learn to work, they learned also to covet the cheap goods of the traders.

The wages of a "raw" native amount to about $2.50 a month at the start plus his food, which costs a similar amount, for he lives almost entirely on "bunaga" (corn meal porridge). But even now it is very rare for a native to work for more than six months. After that, when he has earned enough to pay his hut tax and buy some of the kaffir truck from the traders, he goes back to his village to do nothing for the rest of the year.

Then, superstition plays a large part in his everyday life. For example, among certain tribes it is considered a sin calamity for a child to cut its upper teeth first. This foretells that the child will become a witch and will kill many people. In the more distant villages and those off the beaten track of the native commissioners the only remedy is the death of the child.

Such cases illustrate the difficulty of introducing civilized law into this country, inhabited by a people who, though they have a strict code themselves, are almost incapable of appreciating the meaning of anything different.

Then coincidence plays a large part in the "proving" of their superstitions. I remember once my cook-boy appearing in shirt only to explain that he was unable to serve the mid-day meal owing to his having no trousers. Upon inquiry I elicited the fact that he had given his trousers, valued at four shillings to a witch doctor in the native compound in payment for some "muti," or magic medicine, that would save the life of his child. I had a look at the piccaninny, who was very far gone with a severe attack of dysentery, gave him some good medicine, and, under dire threats, made my cook go to the witch doctor and give back the muti in return for his nether garments again. After some argument he did so. The child died. I was to blame.

Look, now, at the heart of the copper belt as it is to-day. The diligence and perseverance of the pioneers have discovered a number of mines with huge potential futures. There are Bwana M'Kubwa, Nkana, Roan Antelope, Chambishi, Mutlira, N'Changa, Mindola, Baluba and several others. At each of these townships are being laid out great power plants being erected; concentrators, shops, smelters, stores, streets, schools, hospitals are under construction. Three new railroads have been laid down and put into operation and others are in process of construction. Giant steel structures, bridges, automobile roads, service stations, telephone lines, hotels, film theatres, clubs and so on are springing up everywhere. Millions of dollars are being expended annually.

The airplane is playing a large part in this development. Some 20,000 square miles of country already has been surveyed and mapped by aerial photography and a further 60,000 square miles is being surveyed at present.

It was a memorable moment when the first airplane took off from N'Changa. Thousands of natives had flocked to the air field. They had never heard of such a thing before. Suddenly the engine burst into a roar and the machine started off across the field and in a few seconds was climbing into the air. Men shouted and women screamed. They ran helter skelter. The next day, however, their fear was gone. They had come to accept it all as the magic of the white man.

Radio Arouses Fear

It was the same with radio. I constructed, as a recreation, a short wave transmitter and receiver and operated under the signal VQ2NC. It was the first one in the copper belt. The natives heard music played by instruments that even yet have never appeared in northern Rhodesia. They heard concerts from Europe and once, during a test, they heard one of my own natives broadcast in their own Chinyanja language from a few miles away. I was immediately dubbed an "mtiti" (wizard) and was given the name "Bwana Nsambo ya Mpepo," which means "The White Master of the Wind of the Wire." And "Nsambo ya Mpepo" (Wire of the Wind) is now the standard name for radio throughout the country.

In a few years more the district will be producing more than 1,000,000,000 pounds of copper a year. But the world can absorb it. Since 1920, or roughly since the World War, statistics show that the world's consumption of copper has increased by an average of 9 per cent on each previous year's demand. This is due, not only to the rapid advancements and expansion of the electrical industry, modern scientific discoveries, and so on, but also to the fact that the population of the world is steadily increasing. Especially is this so in the large cities and industrial centers where copper is used far more than in the rural and less populated areas.

In 1923 the world's consumption of copper was 2,000,000 tons. By a very simple process of arithmetic it may easily be seen that by 1934 the world's demand for copper should reach, theoretically, 3,204,000 tons for the year.

The native is accepting civilization. The marvels of science and invention have come, and, for a moment, surprised him. He has become, unconsciously, the operator of inexplicable wonders, but he still remains, at heart, the savage. He has welcomed the white man as the "master," and though he is learning to perform the operations required of him, he will always remain, pathetically I think, the native.

Britain's Financial Problem

Nation and Athenaeum (London): Although the immediate problem is to find the cash to pay our bills, the fundamental problem is to stimulate the productive activity which provides the ultimate sources of revenue. On the narrowest view this is so. Even a cow must be well fed if she is to yield her full quota of milk. And incomparably more essential, on the broadest grounds, is at present the wise husbanding of our national resources. Our most vital need is to encourage industry, expand production and increase employment.

ADAMSON'S ADVENTURES—By O. Jacobsson

Exercise Well Not Violently

Steady Exercise Adds to Life —Violent Exercise Cuts it Short

This is one of a series of weekly health articles sponsored by the Canadian Social Hygiene Council.

Nowadays one hears a great deal about exercise. It is fashionable to keep in trim, and a very good fashion it is too. Unfortunately however, it is just as easy for a certain type of person to do himself harm by improper exercise as by not taking any at all. Too little is conducive to a weakly constitution; too much is apt to result in very serious consequences indeed. For moderation in everything, is an excellent motto and applies with especial force and significance to this particular problem.

Man is a creature of impulse and all too frequently we see a flabby, more or less middle-aged individual who for years has given himself over to luxurious and easy living, suddenly take it into his head to reform. He feels the need for more exercise, and so he suddenly puts on a whirlwind campaign of golf, or tennis or squash that would tax the energy of a man in perfect condition. Consequently when it is all over he has not only done himself more harm than good by straining the muscles and possibly organs, almost certainly over-taxing his heart and doing no good to his arteries, but he also has quite taken the edge from his desire to be a "he-man" and consequently settles down to another period of inactivity until once more a spasmodic urge moves him to action.

This sort of thing is decidedly harmful and even dangerous. Exercise should be steady, moderate, calculated to satisfy the particular needs of the individual taking it. It should continue from day to day and be kept up all the time. A good rule is to have a physician examine you before you go in for any form of recreation. The Universities make this a rule. If a is a good rule for healthy vigorous young men to follow, it is certainly a better one for their fathers and uncles. Follow it, whatever your age might be then if you observe the excellent practice of being examined regularly by your physician, you can consult him from time to time as to the suitability of the form of physical activity that you are practicing. The importance of some form of exercise for everyone's muscle development can not be over-estimated. The muscles of the body are made up of many strands and these are composed of very fine fibres. The fibres are again divided into separate parts or segments, each one of which has its own blood and nerve supply. As we all know the muscles are so constructed that they must be used often because the more work they do the stronger they become. Everyone knows how weak a convalescent patient is upon arising from a sick bed after many weeks. Similarly if a man were to tie up his arm for a considerable length of time he would find when he did come to use it that inactivity had robbed that member of all its strength. Usually the best exercise one can get is something that he likes to do. Fortunately indeed is the man or woman who can play golf or tennis or swim, or play almost any game and get real pleasure out of it. Yet for those who can not there are many very simple and enjoyable exercises quite as good. One of these is walking.

A great doctor once wrote that the best way to acquire a good complexion is to take a pot of paint two miles from home and walk every day to see if anybody has moved it. But remember walking and strolling are different things, and strolling is what most people do when they think they are walking. For one thing a good walker carries himself erectly, strides out, spurning the ground. Try the plan of setting yourself a certain distance to walk every day. If your time will allow make it a good long walk. You will find this is one of the most excellent forms of exercise that you can take and is in itself sufficient to keep the average person in ordinarily good trim.

Select a destination two miles from your home. Start out with your shoulders back, head up, chin tilted, arms swinging. In other words march along as though you were in the army. Wear comfortable, loose clothing and allow yourself half an hour to do the two miles. That is a program which if carried out consistently day by day whenever the weather permits will do a great deal towards improving the health of any one. Of course children are in a different class from adults as regards exercise just as they are in most other matters, and the average small boy would get no great fun out of walking as a regular sport. But as a rule children look after their own exercise pretty well, and the parents has little cause for worry on this

New Type Race

Ocean Air Mail Race Between Airship and Plane in Prospect

Rio Janeiro—An international air mail race between an airship and an airplane from Europe to Rio Janeiro is in prospect for the early days of May.

The Graf Zeppelin will leave Friedrichshafen, Germany, at a date in May to be fixed later, for her long-scheduled South American flight, carrying mail and passengers. A day later an airplane of the French Aero-Postale Company will leave Paris on the first all-air transport of mail from France to South America.

Experts here estimate that the Graf Zeppelin will take at least 96 hours to make the distance, while the regular air mail from Paris should reach Rio in 73 hours.

The French airplane will make the first flight across the South Atlantic ocean with mail from Dakar, Senegal, to Port Natal, Brazil. Jean Mermoz, veteran French pilot who recently broke a world endurance record in a hydro-airplane, will be at the controls, and will fly the hydro-airplane with which he made his record.

On arriving at Port Natal, the South American mail will be transferred to land plane. Mermoz will pick up the return mail for Europe, which according to schedule will arrive at Paris before the Graf Zeppelin reaches Lakehurst, N.J.

score, providing the child is kept out of danger and is regularly examined as every child should be by the family physician.

Children who are kept at home in houses that are apt to be over-heated and poorly ventilated are at a great disadvantage compared to the healthy youngsters whose mothers encourage them to be out-doors every minute of the time that is possible, so that they can build up the health which is going to mean so much to them when they grow older. For much of a child's life, should be made up of tag, baseball, marbles, kite flying, paper chases lacrosse, bicycle riding, rowing, paddling, swimming, skating, hockey snowball fights, sking and sliding, each in its own season.

Of course children do not do any of these things because they think it is good for them. They play games because they like them and if an adult will take a leaf out of childhood's book in this regard he will profit. Unquestionably exercise should be enjoyable. It should be a recreation not a drudgery.

And of course one of the most important things about your physical program is this; try and keep in the outdoors. Gardening is excellent. The habit of taking photographs is an excellent one. If you have a car, take it home once in a while.

But if you cannot get out very easily and above all regularly then here are three little exercises that you will find very beneficial if you carry them out day after day. Suppose you try them just for a few weeks every morning when you get up, every evening when you go to bed, and watch the resultant improvement.

(1) Stand erect, feet together, hands at sides. Count one, raising arms sideward and upward inhaling through the nostrils. Count two lowering the arms sideward to position exhaling strongly through the mouth. Repeat this exercise four times.

(2) Stand erect hands on hips, feet spread. Count one, twisting and bending to the side, touching the hands to the floor at the side of foot. Count two, coming back to position again. Do this eight times, right and left side alternately.

(3) Lie on the floor face down, with palms of hands flat opposite shoulder pits. Count one pushing body up until arms are straight. Hold the body straight, so that when you are up the body will be resting on the toes and the palms of the hands. Count two, returning to the floor. Do this eight times.

With these exercises you will not be getting any more exertion than you would if you were playing badminton. It just seems harder work. However, if badminton and that sort of thing is out of reach, these exercises will do just as much good, particularly if you do them in the fresh air. And if you go at them as if they are a game, and go at them regularly, your health will surely benefit.

HIDDEN RESOURCES

The interior of the earth contains in the form of heat, a countless supply of physical energy. This would be more than sufficient to drive all the machinery which is now or ever will be operated by mankind, and will be available for countless other kinds of service. Through hot springs and volcanic vents this is now being done on a diminutive scale. When economic necessity furnishes the demand, there will be extensive use of these vast stores of power. Within the soul there is an infinite store of spiritual strength. Largely because there is no pressing need, it usually remains untouched. But in the experiences of difficulty, pain and suffering, its inspiring and sustaining presence is felt. In a supreme crisis, such as is seen in the last days of Jesus Christ, there may be a full and glorious use of these hidden and unbounded resources. In direct and unbroken contact with the Source of Power. He turned sorrow into joy, transformed defeat into victory and made a throne of His Cross. Rev. Edmund J. Cleveland.

ST. VITUS DANCE SUFFERER MADE WELL

Nerves Strengthened Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Time after time cases are brought to the notice of the public where sufferers from nervous troubles have been relieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—where victims of St. Vitus Dance have been made well through the use of these pills after other medicines have failed to be of benefit. The reason for this is that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly upon the blood—they make new, rich red blood and in thus banishing all impurities from the blood strengthen the nerves and make St. Vitus Dance impossible.

Mrs. P. Donnelly, Montreal, Que., is one more grateful mother who wishes to add her testimony to those already published. She says:—"My little girl, aged eleven, was a great sufferer from St. Vitus Dance. Several doctors prescribed for her without benefit. She was in the hospital for two weeks—still no benefit. I then saw an advertisement recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for St. Vitus Dance, so decided to try them. My little girl had only taken a couple of boxes when I noticed some improvement so I continued with the treatment till now she is completely free from the trouble and can enjoy herself as other children do. I can highly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone suffering from St. Vitus Dance or any other form of nervous trouble, for what these pills have done for my daughter I am sure they will do for others."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Do You Know—

A slice of lemon stewed with the prunes will greatly improve their flavor?

If you rinse cooked noodles with hot water they will not stick together.

You can make pistachio flavoring by mixing equal parts of vanilla and almond flavoring?

Before washing new lace curtains, calico, or anything containing lime, soak them overnight in water to which salt has been added. This takes out all the lime and, consequently, saves soap and labor.

An egg is "new-laid" for ten to twelve days; it is "fresh" until it is twenty-one days old; then it becomes a "cooking-egg."

If a cracked egg has to be boiled, wrap it in greased paper, tie with string, and put in boiling water.

To give a stove a good polish, mix a teaspoonful of powdered alum with two ounces of blacklead and apply in the usual way.

When cleaning knives mix a pinch of carbonate of soda with the bath-brick. They can then be polished quickly and easily.

Moist table salt will remove egg stains from silver.

A cupful of fine ashes and two teaspoonfuls of bicarbonate of soda mixed with water into a smooth paste make an excellent polish for metals.

Varnish may be brightened by rubbing with a cloth moistened in linseed oil.

A few drops of lemon juice added to the dough when making pastry renders it more digestible.

A Pioneer in Photographic Mapping

Canada was the first country to make practical use of photography in surveying, on an extensive scale. Methods of photographic surveying were developed over forty years ago by the late Dr. Deville, Surveyor General, Department of the Interior, and large areas of the Rocky Mountains have been so surveyed.

The hardest doctrine to practice is the doctrine of self-denial. This is a doctrine that pinches.

"Public speaking a business asset," says a headline. Go down the street any day and see it demonstrated. And that brings to mind the question, why does everybody else want to talk when you are trying to say something? Why will a girl stock up on hose and then go bare-legged?

Little Junior, six years old, from the city, was visiting his grandmother in the country. He had been going to school and had been copying his A B C's. He went to help her gather the eggs and, finding the china nest egg, cried out: "Look, grandma, what kind of egg is this?"

SELF-CONTROL

We have need not only to watch, but to keep up a strong habit of self-control. How it is that every act we do leaves upon us its impression, we know not, but the scars and the seams of our bodily frame may warn us of the havoc sin makes in our unseen nature. The current of our thoughts, the wondering of our imaginations, the tumult of our passions, the flashes of our temper, all the movements and energies of our moral being, leave some mark, with some springing grace, strengthen some struggling fault, decide some doubtful bias, aggravate some growing proneness, and always leave us other and worse than we were before. This is ever going on. By its own continued acting, our fearful and wonderful inward nature is perpetually fixing its own character. It has a power of self-determination which, to those who give over watching and self-control, becomes soon unconscious, and at last involuntary. How carelessly men treat themselves.

Picturesque Yukon House Has Bottles in Window

This is a house of hospitality whose owner combined his extravagance in entertainment with an innate modesty in home economy by using the bottles left after his guests had departed to make a substantial and unique filling for an empty window frame. Window panes were scarce in the Yukon in those days of the Gold Rush and the chances are that before the bottles were placed in the opening, paper or hide was used to let the sun rays in and to keep out as much as possible of the cold and rain. The Yukon and Alaska are alive with mementoes of a past that is dead. Each summer thousands of tourists from the United States and Canada, and many from overseas as well, take the colorful journey across the continent through the great wheat fields of the prairies and by Jasper Park and Mount Robson in the Canadian Rockies—Mount Robson is the highest peak in the Rockies—to Vancouver and Prince Rupert where steamers equipped with every modern detail take them through the Inside Passage to the glamorous land on the Midnight Sun. The lower picture shows the Prince Henry, newly constructed ship of the Canadian National Steamships, which will make its first voyage on this popular run from Vancouver on July 3. Launched by Isabel MacDonnell, popular run from Vancouver on July 3. Launched by Isabel MacDonnell, for the Canadian National Pacific Coast Service. Two others, the Prince Robert and the Prince David will ply between Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle. The Prince Henry will supplement the Alaska service already afforded by the CNS Prince Rupert and Prince George of the same line which have become widely known among travellers on the Pacific Coast.

KEEP THEM HAPPY BY KEEPING THEM WELL

It is natural for children to be happy, active and full of fun. When they are fretful, fussy and disinclined to play you may be sure something is wrong. Almost invariably that something lies in the digestive tract.

It is to meet the need for an absolutely safe corrective of childhood ailments that Baby's Own Tablets have been designed. They gently regulate the stomach and bowels and thus drive out constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and allay teething pains. Concerning them Mrs. W. E. Forsyth, Dover, N.B., writes:—"I would not be without Baby's Own Tablets as I know of nothing to equal them for fretful, fussy babies who are troubled with colds or sour stomach."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Stingless Bees" Introduced by Jersey Station

Good-Natured Species from Caucasus Rarely Use Their Stings, Specialist Finds

Produce White Honey

New Brunswick, N.J.—Stingless beekeeping has been made a reality at the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station through the introduction of "good-natured" Caucasian bees as a substitute for the "hot-tempered" species found in many apiaries, Ray Hutson, the station's bee specialist, reports.

For three years now Hutson has been working with Caucasians, which are natives of Caucasus, Russia, and during this time he has never been stung by them. Neither veil, gloves nor smoker has been used in manipulating the bee colonies. B. F. Driggers, of the station staff, who also assisted in testing the Caucasian bees, has yet to be stung by them. Both of these men report that with Italian and hybrid bees, however, it is not uncommon to be stung, sometimes frequently.

Swarm Less Than Italian Bees

A two-year test of sixty colonies here revealed that the Caucasians produce just as much honey as Italian bees. The record for a single colony was 135 pounds and the average was 90 pounds. The Caucasians produce an extremely white comb honey. The tests further revealed that the Caucasians swarmed less than the Italians and that propolis, or the gathering of an undesirable sticky material from the buds of trees and other plants, was not carried to excess.

"These pacific workers," Hutson stated, "resemble the Italians in size and appearance, except that their bodies are brown and covered with silvery hairs, which gives them a silvery-grey appearance. They are not only the best-natured bees, but also the most beautiful."

"The sting of the Caucasian," Hutson explained, "like that of any other bee, is a delicate and complicated organ. The worker bees, which comprise the greatest proportion of the colony's population, have the most effective stings. The queen bee also possesses a sting, but it is seldom used except in combat with other queen bees."

"In only a few instances is it reported that queens have stung persons, and the sting of a queen is reported as mild. The drones, or male bees, have no stings, and they are particularly susceptible to attack by other members of the hive when their purpose has been served or when stores of honey are running low."

Ruth: "Even if you can't enjoy best sellers, there are books in the running brooks, you know."

Jack: "Yes, but even the brooks are getting dryer every year."

The Aeroplane in the North

The aeroplane has in the last few years been employed in the north-land of Canada and its use for mail service, prospecting, and general commercial purposes is rapidly increasing.

A BABY REMEDY APPROVED BY DOCTORS FOR COLIC, CONSTIPATION, DIARRHEA

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 5 years since its invention. One spoonful of this harmless, taste-

Britons Make Their Own Beer

High Excise Tax Encourages Home Industry and Works Greatly to Injury of Brewers

London.—Bootlegging, an industry supposedly confined mainly to the United States, is now baffling British excise authorities. Home brewing of beer is being carried out on a large scale, according to customs officials.

Such practice eliminates paying the duty now enforced by the Government. Brewers' associations are objecting to the new underground liquor traffic. A Government inquiry is to be made and some form of national control suggested.

Penny a Pint

Packets of malt and hops and other ingredients necessary to make three gallons of beer can be secured from the corner grocer, or nearest drug store, for about 35 cents. The bootleg brand can be made for two cents a pint, compared with the usual price of 16 cents a pint now charged.

Official figures show that during the past 16 years the annual consumption of legal beer has decreased by 67,952,286 gallons. Cellar and kitchen breweries are held largely responsible for this diminution.

Beer is excisable if it contains the alcohol equivalent of 2 per cent. proof spirits. Packets now sold with the proper ingredients also contain printed instructions for correct brewing.

Still Increases

An excise official said about the existing condition when questioned: "We know that home brewing is on the increase, and we are taking all possible precautions to discover those making beer without license. There have been many prosecutions this year."

"We are almost powerless, for a house to house search is obviously impossible. We take immediate action, however, on information received, or evidence obtained by police."

LIFE

I always believed in life rather than in books. I suppose every day of earth, with its hundred thousand deaths and something more of births—with its loves and hates, its triumphs and defeats, its pangs and blisses—has more of humanity in it than all the books that were ever written put together. I believe the flowers growing at this moment send up more fragrance to heaven than was exhaled from all the essences ever distilled.—Holmes.

Strengthening Butter Boxes

Recent tests on butter boxes at the Forest Products Laboratories, Department of the Interior, showed that one wire applied around the centre of the box doubles its strength.

I Was Weak, Skinny, "After Baby Came Gained 22 lbs."

"After baby was born I was very weak, skinny. Since taking Ironized Yeast feel fine. Gained 22 lbs."

Mrs. Laura Benoit. Thousands write new Ironized Yeast adds 5 to 15 lbs. in 3 weeks. Ugly hollows fill out. Bony limbs get graceful roundness. Muddy skin gets clear and rosy like magic. Nervousness, indigestion, constipation vanish overnight. Sound sleep, new pep from very first day.

Two great tonics in one—special weight-building Malt Yeast and strengthening Iron. Pleasant little tablets. Far stronger than unmedicated yeast. Results in 1/2 time. No yeast taste, no gas.

So quite being "skinny," tired, unattractive. Get Ironized Yeast from druggist to-day. Feel great to-morrow. Money back from manufacturer if not delighted with quick results.

When Pain Comes

less alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any druggist.

The Rockies Are Calling You

The combination of the extremes of natural and sophisticated at Banff Springs Hotel and Chateau Lake Louise, which open May 15 and June 1, respectively, until September 30, is perhaps the secret of their charm. Located in the heart of the finest scenery of the continent—mountain, lake and forest—each offers to the visitor everything that the most ritzy hotel in the most cosmopolitan cities of the world can furnish. You may cut dancing to look through huge windows at slices of billion-dollar scenery or you may attire yourself to please yourself and go out for days on horseback into territory virtually untouched by the white man and all within a few miles of either hotel. You may live plainly but well on food packed into the wilds by horse or you may dine on exotic dainties drawn from the ends of the earth. You may be strictly formal or you may wander around in plus fours—everything goes, whether you are admiring the moonlight on snow-crowned peaks or listening at your ease to a cosmopolitan dance orchestra playing the latest blue. Anyone visiting either of these hotels has laid in a memory that will last a lifetime. Lay-out shows, left, view from Chateau Lake Louise; lower right, the Banff Springs Hotel.

Word has just been received here of the death of our old townsman, Mr. Mort Derbyshire who died in Santa Paula, California, recently.

"Mort" will be remembered as the owner of quite a number of cheese factories throughout the county, but left here some twenty years ago.

While weddings are solemnized throughout the year, the months of June and July have the biggest call for ministerial assistance. To those who are contemplating the matrimonial step the Watchman will be pleased to print the invitations that will carry the good news to your friends.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. James Armstrong were deeply grieved when learning of the sudden death of their son Gordon Griffith, which occurred on Saturday afternoon last. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon, from Lachute Road service being conducted by the Rev. Mr. Rosborough, assisted by the Revs. Mr. Macaskill, of St. Andrews and Rev. Mr. Morrison, of Lachute.

The VANISHING MEN

START HERE TODAY

Peter De Wolfe has been warned to stay away from Brena Salcedo or he will "vanish like the others." She tells him her story. When but a young girl her father died leaving her an orphan. She went to St. Louis to marry Dick Hennepin, but he failed to put in an appearance and had not been heard of since. She then married Compton Parmalee, Hennepin's boss, who has a fear that he is being followed. He, too, vanishes. De Wolfe determines to solve the mystery. He visits the Parmalee house on the Hudson and finds evidence in an old book of Astor lore which lead him to make a trip to an ancient Astor "lost" city. Brena accompanies him and they find the remains of Hennepin. Hennepin, Peter said, had been blackmailing Parmalee.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"A better way—to kill him?" Brena gasped.

"It is all there—here in the sand—a record," De Wolfe said. "A ghastly record. Seven years have gone, but in this deep fine dust never disturbed by wind, there still remains the story."

He paused; lit a cigarette; went on: "There around the entrance are the marks of horses' hoof-prints—almost lost—but still readable—three horses, two saddled and one carrying the packs. They came in two horses abreast, and the pack horse led behind. Two men in the saddles. Night came on. One man slept. The other crept to the animals—and rode away!"

"Yes, beyond hope—no horse, no water!"

"How do you know?" "Because, Brena, when the three horses went out from this place into the desert their footprints are in single file—one man led the other two. I will show you. It is in the sand—a record and a good guess."

He was silent and he broke his silence with a cry.

"I can see him—Hennepin—awakening, realizing, seeing far away the little galloping specks in the pale moonlight with the treacherous man upon the leader—a tiny bobbing figure. I can hear the curses hurled after them. And he—the one left—alone under the moon, alone under the sun, alone under the moon again—without a drop—rushing out into the desert, only to be driven back to the shade after weary marches dragging through the sand, hunting among the rocks, crazed with thirst, gone mad, cursing, blithering mad—his tongue black—the end—perhaps a thought of you—the curl!"

He looked up at Brena; he set his jaw.

"I'm sorry," he said. "But I can see it so clearly—the terrible retribution in this place of silence. His screams echoing back from the rocks, his curses rising into this thin pale blue sky and the vultures swinging overhead."

"Seven years ago!" she whispered. "Yes, seven years. And four years of torturing fear—that was the pay of the one who rode away."

"Compton Parmalee?"

She said it without any external sign of emotion.

"Yes," said Peter. "He had succeeded in wiping out one blackmailer. But another, more terrible, sprang up—fear."

"He feared discovery?"

"Yes, and something else. He could never feel sure that Hennepin was dead. That was the curse upon him—the fear the murderer feels, twisting and alternating with the fear of a physical coward who ever hears those threats, those curses, those promises of vengeance coming across the moonlit desert as he rode away that night."

She shuddered. "Yes," said Peter. "That was why Parmalee destroyed the map. He had probably ridden back to some other settlement after shooting Hennepin's horse in some gully and he wanted to wipe out all evidence. For months he resisted the temptation—that burned and scorched inside—to see you."

Empire Free Trade

Calchas in the National Review (London): An opportunity is like a kiss; if it is not taken when it is offered, it is not again to be counted upon. In 1837 the Colonies would probably have agreed to a complete fiscal union if they had been offered security in the British market for their produce; it was the old Colonial system against the destruction of which by Cobden and Bright they had passionately but vainly protested. But in 1930 it is different; Great Britain indeed begins to repent herself of Free Trade; but the Dominions show no sign of repenting of Protection.

SUNSHINE

I do not say you can make yourself merry and happy when you are in a physical condition which is contrary to such mental condition but by practice and effort you can learn to withdraw from it, refusing to allow your judgments and actions to be ruled by it. "What does that matter?" you will learn to say. "It is enough for me to know that the sun does shine, and that this is only a weary fog that is round about me for a moment. I shall come out into the light beyond presently." This is faith—faith in God, who is Light.—George MacDonald.

INDULGENCES

Suppose that the money now wasted in foolish indulgences were expended upon wholesome food and furniture and clothing, or were invested in such a way as to become part of the capital or wage-paying fund of the community, what a transformation for the better would be involved in this!—Dean Vaughan.

Head the Sprain with Minard's

Farm and Garden

When and How to Transplant

Head lettuce, tomatoes, cabbages, as well as many of the flowers should be transplanted at once before being placed in their permanent positions. When done carefully, this strengthens the roots and produces a stockier plant. If planted directly in the garden they are inclined to become spindly and tender, besides losing the three or four weeks' start they get when sown indoors. At transplanting time have a supply of nitrate of soda on hand, putting a pinch about each plant or dissolving this quick-acting fertilizer in water, one ounce to the gallon for each four square yards of soil and applying at intervals of two weeks. This will make your plants shoot ahead.

Importance of Good Seed

The importance of good seed cannot be too strongly emphasized. Many amateurs when they raise some particularly fine corn or an excellent specimen of flower think that by saving the seed from these particular plants that they will get perfect reproductions the next season. This is rather a serious mistake, however, as no consideration has been taken of the fact that bees and other insects mix the pollen of the corn or other vegetables or flowers indiscriminately and that the average seed saved in this way will produce very weak plants. The production of seed is a specialized business, the art usually being passed down from generation to generation, and whole districts are devoted to this business and nothing else. Unless one is willing to take the precaution of screening the individual blossoms on the vegetables and flowers and to mix the pollen by hand, and also to make sure that similar varieties are not being grown close together, one would be well advised to purchase the very best seed procurable. And in this case the very best seed is that which is put up for conditions in Ontario and not something that will do well in another climate. After all, the best seed in sealed packages with the variety, date and sowing directions printed plainly on the outside is by long odds the smallest cost in gardening, although it is the most important because without it labor, fertilizer and care is in vain.

The Preparation of Window Boxes

Window boxes may now be prepared. If one bears in mind that these are simply intensive gardens producing as many flowers to the square foot as one ordinarily grows in about four square yards of garden soil results are easy to obtain. Rich soil, plenty of fertilizer and daily watering are essential. The boxes must be very strongly constructed as when filled with earth they will weigh over a hundred pounds, and they must be from eight to ten inches wide at the top, six at the bottom and at least seven inches deep. The corners should be strongly reinforced on the inside with iron straps, secured at any hardware store, and wire or chains should be used to fasten them to the window frame. It is well to so arrange your box that it hangs flush with the top of the window sill and does not sit on it as, otherwise, the foliage will soon fill up most of the window. There should be holes in the bottom of the box and also a layer of cinders, broken crockery or gravel to provide drainage. Put in a layer of well-rotted manure next, if this is available, and then fill up with fine garden soil. If there is still a danger of light frost leave the box in some place where it can be protected after planting. In any case it is well to screen the newly set out plants with newspapers or light cotton for a few days until the plants get established. Use stocky plants and prune off all bloom, buds and weak growth. Heading back the main stem is also advisable so that they will branch well and fill the box. They may be planted close together, a few inches apart for the short or trailing types at the front of the box, and six inches between the taller plants at the rear. Firm the soil down well about the plants. Next dissolve a scant handful of nitrate of soda in a fair-sized watering can which will be sufficient fertilizer for a box about four feet long. This will give the plants a good start. Now, saturate the soil with another can or two of water and water daily from then on. Even on rainy days it will usually be found that little moisture has reached the box owing to its sheltered position, while the evaporation from these hanging gardens exposed on all sides to the air is very rapid. These same general directions may be followed in making up hanging baskets and pots. Along the front put in trailing nasturtiums, German ivy, lobelia, alyssum and similar plants, while farther back petunias, geraniums, ageratum, begonias, ferns and other types recommended by florists and greenhouse men may go in.

Shamrock V. And Its Chances

Sir Thomas Lipton's New Bid for the America Cup
BY ARTHUR LAMSEY

By a curious coincidence the fourteenth British challenger—Shamrock V.—for the much coveted America Cup is to be launched on April 14th. This will be a great day for British yachtsmen all over the world, and also for the builders of British yachts, for once again hope will be reborn of winning back the cup, which left our shores as far back as 1851, when the famous United States schooner America won it in a thrilling race round the Isle of Wight.

The new challenger has been built for Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth attempt to win back the cup. This latest adventure is particularly inspiring to British youth, for Sir Thomas is eighty years of age on May 10th, and is still fired by the ambition to bring new laurels to his country.

BUILT OUR FASTEST YACHTS
He was about fourteen months old when the American yacht first won the cup. He has been trying for over thirty years to get it back, and has spent a fortune of £500,000 in his last four attempts.

Shamrock V. has been built at Camper and Nicholson's yacht yard at Gosport, on the western shores at the entrance to Portsmouth Harbor. Her keel of seventy-eight tons of lead was cast at midnight on October 30th last and since that time work has proceeded with feverish intensity.

Her designer, Mr. Charles Nicholson, is the most successful yacht builder in the country and has been responsible for designing and building the fastest yachts ever sailed in British waters. He is one of the most retiring and shy men it is possible to meet, and has spent most of his life in the little town of Gosport.

MAHOGANY AND STEEL

The new challenger is built of wood, specially chosen mahogany planks from selected trees grown in British Honduras being used. The frame is of steel ribs, to which the mahogany planks are secured with brass bolts, riveted over the nuts, and then planed to line.

Her graceful lines, daring in conception and originality, are a delight to the eye even of the uninitiated. Her highly-polished hull is a miracle of beauty. So marvellously have the artisans done their work that it is impossible to detect the joints between the planks. The average thickness of the hull is about two and three-sixteenths inches.

The deck is a masterpiece of craftsmanship. Over 8,000 feet run of timber, two and a quarter inches square in section, have been used, while to make the deck watertight—it must be remembered that she might easily be awash one side in a good breeze—some 48,000 feet of caulking cotton have been punched into the seams and secured with a special marine glue.

Below deck there is much more room than one would think. The Shamrock V. will carry a crew of twenty-one, together with a mate and captain, the latter of whom, Edward Heard, has had experience in American Cup races and is a most popular skipper. The crew will live in the forepart of the yacht and the officers in the stern. Sir Thomas has a small cabin at the after end of the vessel.

TALLEST MAST FOR A RACER

One of the most striking things about the new challenger is the towering mast, 162 feet in height, and hollow. No racing yacht has ever had such a tall mast. It is built of silver spruce, grown in the South Pacific, and made in fifty pieces. It is a really wonderful piece of splicing, the wood being laminated to guaranteed greater strength. The yacht will also have two sets of spars, and a mizzenmast for use during the Atlantic crossing. Shamrock V. will carry approximately 7,600 square feet of sail canvas. The sails are being made of the finest Egyptian cotton, and the thread used for sewing the sections together is of the same material. The stitches are cast in regular zigzag form to give greater strength under the enormous strain to which they will be subjected. It is interesting to note that the sails are being made in the same mill which made the sails for Lord Nelson's flagship, H.M.S. Victory, about 130 years ago.

The yacht will be Bermuda-rigged, and measures about 76 feet on the water-line. In common with the American defender, she is built to Lloyd's rules for yacht construction, meaning that she will be ocean-worthy in every respect.

Hitherto the American yachts racing for the cup have been breaks designed especially for racing, but this year, under a new agreement between the two countries, both yachts have to be seaworthy in every respect and actually registered at Lloyd's. This means that the race this year is fair and equal as far as yacht construction is concerned. The obvious handicap in past races was that the challenger had to be taken across the Atlantic, which ruled out the purely racing boat.

WHAT CHALLENGE WILL COST
Besides her racing equipment, the Shamrock V. will carry an owner's launch, a lifeboat, and a dinghy. The approximate cost of the challenger is in the neighborhood of £100,000, and it is estimated that the actual cost of the challenge will be about £130,000. Lady Shaftesbury, an old friend of Sir Thomas Lipton, will for the third time "name" the challenger before she slips down from her building cradle into the calm waters of Portsmouth Harbor. It will not be many days after her launching that Shamrock V. will be skimming over the blue-green seas of the "Silvery Solvent," between the Isle of Wight and the mainland, in her preliminary trials before she races for the first time at the end of May.

In the special trial races arranged by all the yacht clubs of Great Britain, King George has entered his famous Britannia, so that Sir Thomas' yacht will have the most severe racing tests before she crosses the Atlantic for the real cup races, which commence on Saturday, September 13th.

THE BEST FOUR WIN.

Under the new rules governing the cup races this year the course will be 33½ miles, and will be sailed either to windward and leeward or in a triangle, on alternate days. The time allowed to complete the course is 5½ hours, but Shamrock V. should do the course in a good breeze in little over two hours, perhaps less. The best four races out of seven wins. In the earlier cup races it was the best three out of five.

From the first hour of the building of Shamrock V. it has been evident that the craftsmen working upon her have been deeply sensible of the responsibility of the work they were doing. They put their entire mechanical skill into the making of this yacht, knowing that very soon the whole world would be watching and admiring the work of their hands.

These workmen were really recreating the glory of the sailing ship, recapturing the inspiration of our seafaring fathers. Shamrock V., win or lose, will have added one more solid link of friendship to the chain of memories that unites the British and America.—Answers.

Value of Trade Canada-West Indies During Past Year

An Interesting Table Showing How Market Values
Affect Trade Figures

Ottawa.—The value of the trade between Canada and the British West Indies during the calendar year 1923, the first year when the five new "Lady" class passenger and freight liners built in accordance with the terms of the Canada-West Indies treaty were all in commission, showed a slight falling off from the previous year, although the volume of trade showed an increase.

The decline in values was due to lower prices for some of the principal commodities traded in, such as fruit, sugar and flour, officials of the Trade and Commerce Department here explained.

Exports from Canada to the West Indies were less than the previous year by $1,470,000, while imports into Canada from these countries were down by $3,000,000. While detailed figures of the trade are not yet available, the aggregate trade has been reported as follows:

Exports	1923	Change From 1922
British Guiana	$1,774,000	—$549,000
Barbadoes	1,143,000	—13,000
Jamaica	5,310,000	—12,000
Trinidad & Tobago	4,095,000	—578,000
Other B.W.I.	4,723,000	—549,000

Imports	1923	Change From 1922
British Guiana	$4,255,000	—$1,582,000
Barbadoes	4,702,000	—696,000
Jamaica	5,164,000	—310,000
Trin. & Tobago	2,949,000	—255,000
Other B.W.I.	1,271,000	—877,000

Large shipments of bananas from Jamaica maintained the value of imports from that island, but prices were lower than in the previous year when bananas mostly reached Canada via United States ports. The general depression and the low price of sugar affected trade with the other islands and British Guiana. The West Indies are important customers for Canadian flour, taking nearly 1,500,000 barrels annually.

Cuba is also a good customer of flour made mostly from Canadian wheat, but as the milling is done in the United States, the imports of such flour into the Port of the Antilles do not figure in the Canadian trade returns.

There have been complaints, especially in British Guiana and Barbadoes, about the sharp falling off of their sales to Canada last year, in spite of the new service and trade treaties. About the only answer seems to be that if the new ships had not been in service it might have been worse. One thing, Canada bought more bananas from Jamaica and consumed many more last year than in any previous year.

War in China

Hong Kong Press: To the foreign observer of Chinese affairs prospects of peace and returning prosperity in the Republic are no better now than they were a year ago. A general opinion is that when this exceptionally long and severe winter ends, and campaigning conditions become easier, the smouldering embers of war throughout the land will again burst into flame.

In spite of popular belief, it is stated that Frenchwomen use less make-up than women of any other civilized race.

ADAMSON'S ADVENTURES—By O. Jacobsson

The Broken Wind- Shield

By LUCY CHANDLER FULLER

One day when John and Peter were on a picnic they accidentally broke the wind-shield of Peter's uncle's car. The two boys were trying to hit an abandoned bird's nest in a tree near which the car was parked. They each threw a stone, and, as bad luck would have it, both stones instead of hitting the target went through the wind-shield of the car.

The boys were terrified at what they had done. Peter hesitated a moment and then ran to find his uncle. "Uncle Harry, I didn't mean to do it! I didn't mean to do it!" he cried. "Do you think Peter's uncle in amazement."

Uncle Harry was very angry when he understood about the accident. "It may cost ten dollars to have that replaced," he said between his teeth.

"Do you think Father will whip me?" asked Peter.

"You had better go and tell him and find out," advised Uncle Harry who looked as if he would like to do the whipping himself.

Peter ran off to find his father just as John's father appeared on the scene. "Who broke that wind-shield?" he shouted at his son who was retreating behind a bush.

"I don't know," said John.

"You do know," shouted his father, "and you and Peter threw stones right at it. I'll teach you to lie and to smash other people's property."

So saying, he grabbed his son by the collar and gave him about the worst whipping he had ever had. When his wrath was exhausted he turned to Peter's Uncle. "When you find out what the damage is, let me know and I'll settle for John's share in it."

In another part of the woods the following conversation was taking place. Peter had told his father of the accident. "Are you going to whip me?" he asked.

"Would whipping you mend that glass?" asked his father.

"No," replied Peter, wondering

BRINGING HAPPINESS

The man who goes more than half way in trying to make other people happy in this world, has traveled more than half way toward his happiness in the next one. It is not what we have that brings happiness. It is what we are and do.

What form his punishment would take. "You're not a baby any more," continued the boy's father. "Don't you know that when you damage another person's property the only thing you can do is to try to repair the damage?"

"You mean pay for the new glass?" returned Peter. "Uncle said it would cost ten dollars."

But when the bill came in it was eleven dollars. Peter's share was therefore five dollars and a half. He turned the contents of his bank over to his uncle but that amounted to only one dollar and a half. There was still four dollars to be paid.

Peter had started to save up for a bicycle. How he hated to see his first dollar and a half go and how hard it was to put every cent he got toward the plate glass bill! All the rest of that summer Peter worked. He was only a small boy and no one wanted to pay him very much for the things he could do. He went without candy and chewing gum and a new ball which he wanted very badly. He knew that he must pay his debt before he could spend money for anything else. The day before school opened Peter gave his uncle the last fifty cents.

"Well, you're all paid up now, Peter," said Uncle Harry. "It's been a hard job but I guess you'll think twice hereafter before you choose a target."

"I'm sure Peter learned a lesson but I wonder if John feels any more respect towards other people's property now than he did before the accident happened."

Montreal Press (Ind.): Whatever may be said to throw doubt on the value of pasteurization and tuberculinization, it is impossible not to recognize that since these hygienic measures were put into effect, tuberculosis has made fewer and fewer inroads on our population. This fact will be still more noticeable on the day when milk destined for human consumption will be obtained entirely from herds which have been immunized and sterilized as well.

Dainty little houses, reminiscent of the one that Peter and Wendy built for themselves in the tree tops, are attracting the attention of those who pass a certain florist's shop in Montreal.

The little dwellings seem to have found their proper setting among the flowers and foliage in the window; but a display card states that they are for sale as birdhouses and that they are the work of the Handicapped Workers' Division of the Protestant Employment Bureau.

Behind this plain statement lies the story of a unique legacy. Some years ago, the Handicapped Workers' Division assisted a man, suffering from tuberculosis. Gradually he built up a means of livelihood for himself, making birdhouses according to specifications obtained from the Society for the Protection of Birds.

During a whole season he supported himself in this way, and then the Handicapped Division got him a job at Bank as a gardener and he left for the West.

Out of gratitude to them, he presented them with his birdhouse business, in trust, to be given each year to the most disabled person on their books.

This year the business belongs to a father and son, both badly crippled.

The son was a chauffeur but, coming home one night on the back of his chum's truck, he was knocked off by a motor car and was permanently injured. Unable to claim compensation either as a war or an industrial cripple, he and his old father are eagerly counting on the birdhouses providing them with a livelihood they had despaired of getting. All winter they have toiled together in their back kitchen, the one doing what the other couldn't.

Sunshine to Them

The coming of spring means more than sunshine to them. It means that the time has come when they can sell their birdhouses. Very special ones they are, too—the latest 1923 models in birdhouses, rainproof and rodent proof, and with all manner of ornithological gadgets.

Mrs. Wren, out house-hunting and coming upon one, could hardly fail to clutch her husband by the wing and force him to decide then and there that here was the Ideal Home.

The task of providing the lame, the halt and the blind with a means of making bricks without straw is one which keeps the Handicapped Workers' Division busy from morning till night and makes a heavy toll on their ingenuity. Their latest scheme is the collection of old gloves, bags and such like discarded bits of leather.

These were handed over to a little Indian woman who supported herself and her husband by the dexterity of her fingers making little new bags out of large old ones.

Clever Indian Woman

Behind this work lies a story of a different shade of color. Io-Sat-Aus and his wife lived with the Coughnawaga Indians, but being Protestants and in a hopeless minority, they were none too happy and so Io-Sat-Aus decided to come to Montreal and prospect for work, leaving his wife with relatives in Coughnawaga.

The little Indian woman, however, preferred to walk the streets of Montreal with her husband. This they did for many nights until somebody directed them to the Protestant Employment Bureau, but the food supplied to them by the Emergency Relief was so different from that to which they were accustomed that they were unable to eat it, and the fact that the wife of Io-Sat-Aus could speak neither French nor English made things doubly difficult for them.

The problem was solved when the Handicapped Workers' Division, knowing the ability of the Indian woman along certain lines, collected leather and provided designs which enabled the little woman to keep the husband upon whom she had begun to feel a serious drag for several weeks.

This may offer a suggestion for other sections.

Instability

The Earth has played us false: we held its rocks.
The one stability, impregnable,
And now the oracle of Science mocks
With tales of frailty more than words can tell:
We see the sounding stones beneath our feet
Ghostly and tenuous, and disintegrate;
And winds of space blow through them, and they beat,
Even as we, with furious rhythms of Fate.

So passes all the surety of the earth:
We walk on shadows, we who shadows are;
And there is nothing found of solid worth.
Not everlasting hill, nor farthest star:
Only the Truth behind the shadows stands, Building the Tabernacle without hands.

DOINGS IN PARLIAMENT

If the present temper of the major parties in the Commons is to last into the general election campaign, then Canada is on the verge of witnessing a political struggle which should be spectacular in its vigor. That is if the contention which surrounded the adoption of the Dunning budget can be taken as a criterion.

There was little that was unexpected about the result. The government's majority of 28, to which two Conservatives whose ridings are strongly interested in the steel industry contributed, was not unexpected. It represented simply the normal margin by which the present administration, elected four years ago, rules the house. As was to be expected, the Conservative amendment charging lack of confidence was also rejected on a straight political vote, while the Progressive amendment favoring an extension of the British preference was snowed under by a vote of 177 to 139, not, however, before it had served its purpose of putting the agricultural group on record before their constituents of having associated themselves in an effort to both lower the tariff and encourage British trade, projects both in which their ridings are commonly supposed to favor.

The temper of the house during the proceedings which the various votes climaxed was the most interesting feature of the day. It was undeniably warm. Both tensions upon the part of the respective parties, eager to assail the opposition speakers upon any vulnerable point, and the vigor with which they jumped to the attack, told of an impatience for the actual election day.

There were no less than three major tempests during the day and Rev. J. L. Brown (Liberal, Lisgar) was the stormy petrel in two of them. He engaged in dispute with C. H. Dickie, of Nanaimo, which engagement ended in a draw, whereupon he opened combat with Hon. R. B. Bennett. An interesting passage ensued. Rev. Mr. Brown charged the Conservatives with raising a religious issue in Saskatchewan. Hon. Mr. Bennett, in repudiating the charge, showed for his part a copy of "L'Action Catholique," a leading Liberal periodical of Quebec, which carried a portrait of Hon. Ernest Lapointe on its front, and a cartoon of Premier Anderson burning the separate schools of Saskatchewan on its back. That, remarked Hon. Mr. Bennett, was typical of the Liberal Campaign in Quebec.

With the budget adopted and work commenced upon the passage of the various budget resolutions, the prospect for the close of the session by May 30th at the latest, if not by May 23rd, is bright. July 28th, is still regarded as the best bet for election day.

The house has before it the final report of the special committee on soldiers' pensions. It is unanimous and, while complicated, is expected to be implemented by the house in legislation with but little delay. Its main provision is that in any case the soldier is to receive the benefit of the doubt, a feature rejected by the Government when Mr. Bennett advocated it three years ago. The pension machinery, moreover, is radically altered by the appointment of a new tribunal of nine members, two of whom make a quorum, which is to be distributed over four sections in Canada. In future the Board of Pension Commissioners will have no power to refuse any applicant a pension, but must refer all cases to which they are doubtful to this new tribunal of nine, by which they will be decided. There is further appeal court of three members established. Other features of the report are the restoration to pension of the soldiers who commuted their pension for a lump sum, this sum of course, to be charged against the pension to which they would have been entitled and the provision that widows who married a returned soldier subsequent to the appearance of his disability, but before January 1st, 1930, shall be eligible for pension.

The recommendations of the committee are being viewed favorably by the Conservative opposition, being in fact, in principle, the very changes for which Hon. Mr. Bennett, Dr. Peter McGibbon, and other have been contending since 1927.

The liquor export bill is still being postponed from time to time in the Senate, awaiting the tabling of the proposed anti-smuggling treaty with the United States. It is now scheduled to be taken up for third reading on Tuesday. Meanwhile the Upper Chamber has passed the Western Resources bill, and is engaging in debate upon the measure to create a Divorce Court in Ontario.

GRENVILLE

Mrs. J. E. Arnold has been visiting in Ottawa the past few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnet McIntyre spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. D. McIntyre.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomson, of Grande Ligne, visited her sisters, Mrs. L. E. Cooke and Miss Robertson on their return from Florida, where they spent the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowden of Westmount, accompanied by her sister, Miss Robertson, of Montreal, spent Sunday with their sisters, Mrs. L. E. Cooke and Miss Robertson.

Mr. Wesley Dodd, of Gatineau Pt., spent Friday and Saturday evenings with his family. We are glad to know that his little son who has been very ill with pneumonia, has recovered.

In the passing of Miss Jessie Hamilton on Saturday, May 10th, in Montreal; Grenville lost one of its highly respected citizens. She was the only child of the late Rev. Robt. Hamilton and Mrs. Hamilton. She taught in The Aymer Academy, the Grenville Model School and in the Eastern Townships, but for many years devoted her life to the care of her mother. We extend our sympathy to her aged mother, who deeply mourns her loss. She leaves an uncle, Mr. Thomson, of Hemmingford, besides other relatives and friends who shall miss her. Funeral services were held in Montreal and on the arrival of the C.P.R. train on Monday evening, interment was made in Calumet Cemetery, where she was laid beside her father Rev. Mr. Irving of St. Matthew's Church, Grenville, officiated at the grave.

The Minister of Highways of the Province of Quebec has instructed his traffic officers to exercise close supervision over drage-crossing and see that motorists stop their cars before venturing across railway right-of-ways. This step was taken at the opening of the motoring season when two grade-crossing accidents which caused the death of five persons. The law prescribing the full stop before the traversing of an unprotected railway crossing is the surest protection for motorists. No case has been noted in which a motorist has come into collision with a train after having taken the trouble to stop and survey the railway track before crossing it. Accidents at grade crossings result from inattention and negligence on the part of motorists. The Department of Highways is confident of having the approbation of the public in its campaign of rigorous surveillance.

The W. M. S. of the Presbyterian Church held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. Robt. Bradley, Lachute Road, on Wednesday afternoon. The subject for study was "The Conquest of Europe by Christianity," and was very ably presented by Miss Hattie McEwen. The response to Roll Call was the Mother's of the Bible and Mrs. J. P. Bradley sang with much expression a solo entitled, "That wonderful Mother of Mine." Current events for the month were completed by Miss Mary Walsh and formed an interesting item of the programme. Mrs. R. Bradley, Mrs. Wm. Todd and Miss Elsie Brown were tea hostesses. Rev. Dr. Ballantyne spent a few days in Montreal the guest of his sister.

The new hotel in course of construction for the Dominion Atlantic Railway at Kentville, N.S., will be completed this fall and is expected to open shortly before Christmas. It will replace the present Cornwallis Hotel while retaining the name, will have 100 bedrooms, ballroom and assembly hall, main dining room, rotunda, billiard room, card room and usual offices, and will be a notable addition to the list of new and up-to-date hotels in the Maritimes.

No widespread or general depression exists in Canada, though several factors, notably the failure to market our grain and the loss in buying power resulting therefrom, have contributed to a slowing-up of traffic, declared E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, addressing the shareholders of the company at the 49th annual meeting held early in May. He added that there was nothing of a fundamental character which should prevent the return of normal business conditions within the next few months. Mr. Beatty said, "We have all been hopeful that the first and perhaps most essential change both because of its psychological as well as its commercial effect, namely, the free movement of grain out of the country, would be in evidence during this or next month."

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company held early this month dividend of 2 1/2 percent on common stock for quarter ending March 31 last, was declared from railway revenues and special income, payable June 30 next to shareholders of record May 29. R. S. McLaughlin, of Oshawa, president of General Motors of Canada, Limited, was elected to the board of directors.

Canada's new championship 18-hole golf course, the Royal York of Toronto, is scheduled to be opened officially May 19, when it is expected there will be a distinguished gathering of golfing notables present together with E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the organization responsible for the creation of the course. It has a length of 3,140; 3,370; 6,810 yards from the championship tees and a par of 35-37-72.

A bright Atlantic silver salmon, weighing 28 lbs., hooked on the Cain's River, April 28 last, by David Hayes, vice-president of the General Electric Company, Bridgeport, Conn., is regarded as the record spring run salmon ever taken by early anglers in New Brunswick. The party with Mr. Hayes landed 342 salmon, all of which, except some eaten, were returned to the water. "I never saw such good fishing," he said.

LOCOMOTIVE GRATES IN HOME FURNACE

Lennox Torrid Zone Has Many Features Besides Steel-riveted, Gas-tight Construction

The most durable type of grate in the world are used in the Torrid Zone Warm Air Furnace. They are of the special rocking design as used in locomotives and are controlled from the outside by a long-handled "key" shaker. Hardly more effort is required to shake them than is required to shake them. Any woman can do it—and she could do it in a party dress without heat of dust or dirt because of the unusually tight-fitting doors.

The Torrid Zone is the ideal furnace for the fine residence and is made in types and sizes for homes of every class and for schools, churches, stores and office buildings. There are combination hot water and warm air types and others equipped with electric blowers for large scale operating. They are made for hard or soft coal, coke, lignite, wood, gas or oil—and they'll save money for you in the burning of any one of them. Made by the Lennox Furnace Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto, Ont. and Winnipeg, Man.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mrs. Wm. Drysdale is visiting at the home of Dr. Wales for a few days.

The W.M.S. of the United Church met last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. B. N. Wales.

The funeral of Mr. McRuer was held on Thursday at his late residence, Riviere Rouge.

Mrs. D. Ross, of Winnipeg, and her two children are visiting her mother, Mrs. MacEwen.

We very much regret to report that Mrs. (Rev.) W. Windsor and Miss M. Yarker are still very ill in the Royal Victoria Hospital.

This community sympathizes deeply with Mr. and Mrs. J. Armstrong on the sudden death of their youngest son, Gordon, on Saturday.

The Union Church has been redecorated, and furnished with pews instead of the chairs: beauty and comfort are seen in the result. The third anniversary of the opening of this Church will be observed next Sunday, May 25th. The Rev. Mr. MacFarlane, of St. Giles-Fairmount Church will preach at both services and there will be special singing.

Much interest is focused on the first golf competition of the season at St. Andrews East. This will be an 18 hole invitation tournament over the St. Andrews Golf Course and it is scheduled for Saturday, May 31st. The Province of Quebec Golf Association, under whose auspices the event is held has perfected all arrangements for this opening event.

The entertainment by Mr. T. MacDuff Copeland in the Town Hall on Friday evening was a decided success, and was enjoyed by an audience that filled the hall. His was somewhat of a "one man band" but nothing was lacking in the matter of variety as Mr. Copeland seemed to be highly proficient in the use of all sorts of musical instruments and the bagpipes. His selections proved very agreeable to the hearers, and his stories were indeed funny.

from the aerodrome. This sub-committee has decided upon the course to be followed by automobiles, a course designed to prevent traffic congestion.

Moreover, all roads forming part of the circuit will be indicated by special signs and there will be no possibility of mistaking the way.

There will be at the aerodrome parking space for several thousand cars, as well as First Aid Station.

OWES HER HEALTH TO PINK PILLS

This Weak Anaemic Woman
New Rejoices in Health and Strength.

It is a scientific fact that nearly all the ills that afflict women are due to poor, thin blood. This anemia is the one cause of low spirits and languidness, the poor appetite, breathlessness and aching backs that make life a burden for so many women. But suffering women could banish all these miseries by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for it is a known fact that these pills create an abundance of new rich blood—their wonderful reputation is based on that. Proof of these statements is given by Mrs. L. Deschenes, La Tuque, Que., who says: "Before I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was in a badly 'un down condition. I appeared to be almost bloodless, had frequent headaches, and the least exertion would leave me breathless and worn out. My husband advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got for me six boxes. Almost from the first I noticed an improvement in my condition, and as I continued taking the pills my blood became better and I steadily grew stronger, till to-day I am enjoying the best of health. I am now able to do all my housework without feeling the least fatigue; my appetite is better and I sleep more soundly at night. All this I owe to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I unhesitatingly recommend them to all who are run-down in health."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at all drug stores or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Balkan Crisis—New Style

"One touch of powder makes the whole (feminine) world kin," and the hearts of girls all over the globe will go out to sisters in distress in Rumania.

There, it seems, the Minister of Agriculture is trying to turn back the clock by forbidding the Ministry's female employees to use either rouge or powder. He also expects them to wear a black office dress, covering neck and arms, and reaching to the ankles.

From time to time similar efforts have been made to prohibit "make-up" and to prescribe the style of dress to be worn by women at work. None of them seems to have made any difference. And the denunciations of modern fashions by some churches haven't had much effect, either.

So perhaps it's wasting time to sympathize with the girls in Rumania's Ministry of Agriculture. It's the Minister who really needs sympathy.

LOYALTY

Man's first loyalty should be to himself. No one else can live his life for him, no one else can be expected to discharge his obligations. Acknowledge all you owe, yes; be grateful for all the help you are given, surely; but if an opportunity to advance yourself comes along grasp it at once. Make no mistake about this: though you have run a drill press or a lathe for ten years and have rendered good service to your employer, the very moment it becomes plain his business can be operated without that machine no foolish ideas of loyalty will save your job. We will must bow before economic progress and he best succeeds who does his bowing quickly and straightens up to look ahead. The world needs loyalty. It is one of the finest virtues. But it needs the real thing—not a silly imitation of it.

Too Much ACID

Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do that—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any druggist.

Mother's Day — May 11th

Who'll wear a rose for Mother's Day,
A half-opened rose and white,
Plucked in the morning while the dew
That gathered over night
To kiss its petals like a gem
In its pure heart appears,
As pure and sweet as mother-love,
As rare as mother's tears?

Who for a Mother's Day will wear
A blossom pure and white
Above his heart, wear it from dawn
Until the shades of night,
Come in upon the perfumed breeze
And wrap the world and him
As softly as the mother-love
Wrapped him in days grown dim?

A white rose just to honor her
Whose rose was purer far
Than any gem the world has known,
Than snow-white roses are;
A white rose for the mother-love
That knows nor stop nor stay,
That up the heights or in the depths Goes with him all the way.

—Judd Mortimer Lewis.

A Lesson For Shrimps

Pat's left eye was badly discolored. His wife asked who did it.
Pat—"Mike Murphy."
Wife—"What! Do you mean to let a little shrimp like Mike Murphy black your eye?"
Pat—"Martha, don't speak disrespectfully of the dead."

The "daily grind" is absent from the work one likes.

An elderly couple had stopped in front of a neighborhood movie and were looking at the billboards when the man noticed some pictures of bathing beauties on them. He shook his head and said: "My! My! That's terrible!" Turning to his wife, he said: "Well, let's go in," and then led the way.

Woman, Customer (to haberdashery clerk)—"My husband is a conductor and I'd like to buy him one of those railroad ties I hear him talk about."

Now that smoking by ladies no longer shocks anyone, the girls will not enjoy it half so much.

Judge—"You are charged with beating up this government inspector. What have you to say?"

Grocer—"Nothing. I am guilty. I lost my head. All morning I held my temper while the government agents inspected my scales, tasted my butter, smelled my meat, graded my kerosene. In addition, your honor, I had just answered three federal questionnaires. Then this bird came along and wanted to take moving pictures of my cheese and I patted him in the eye."

Hubby—"That girl over there shows distinction in her clothes." Wifey—"You mean distinctly, don't you?"

HEALTHY CHILDREN ALWAYS SLEEP WELL

The healthy child sleeps well and during its waking hours is never cross but always happy and laughing. It is only the sickly child that is cross and peevish. Mothers, if your children do not sleep well; if they are cross and cry a great deal, give them Baby's Own Tablets and they will soon be well and happy again. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach, banish constipation, colic and indigestion and promote healthy sleep. They are absolutely guaranteed free from opiates and may be given to the newborn babe with perfect safety. You can obtain the Tablets through any medicine dealer at 25 cents a box, or by mail, post paid, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

'Ware Lightning!

It May be Safe Under the Trees than on an Open
Thunderstorm

Thunderstorms are now apt to become more frequent. Lightning, it should be remembered, is more dangerous out of doors than in. For those who believe in "safety first," therefore, their own home is perhaps the best place during a thunderstorm.

If you are caught out in the open, there are a few simple rules which will greatly minimize your risk of being struck. Avoid hills or slopes towards which the storm is approaching. Try to find a depression in the ground and crouch there until the storm has passed.

Avoid trees, especially tall ones, but a position close to a tall tree may be safer than open ground, for the tree acts as a lightning conductor and protects a circle of ground three times greater than its own height.

For this reason a forest is, despite popular ideas to the contrary, a safe place during a storm, providing that you do not actually stand close to the trunk of any tree. A tree may be struck, but the presence of a man under a number of "conductors" will not cause the lightning to seek him out and go to earth through his body, as often happens in open fields away from cover.

It is inviting trouble to shelter under an iron roof that has no metallic connection with the ground. Water always attracts lightning. Avoid, therefore, wet and marshy ground and river-banks, and keep as far as possible to dry ground.

Protecting Our Houses

The notion that lightning strikes twice in the same place has no foundation in fact, for numerous cases have been reported where the same house, and even the same tree, has been struck twice, sometimes during one summer. There are, indeed, some houses known as "thunder houses" which have been struck repeatedly, usually because they are built over ironstone or subterranean water which attracts the lightning.

Every flash of lightning is accompanied by many "side flashes," and for this reason a single lightning conductor on a house is no guarantee of complete protection. The up-to-date architect provides for all the metal-work in a building being interconnected, so that if the house is struck at any point, the discharge will be carried safely to the ground by way of the main conductor.

Finally, don't be afraid of thunder. A clap is only heard after the personal danger from the flash which produced it has passed. When you see a flash of lightning you are already out of danger from that particular discharge.

Toothless Dog Fined for Biting

Chicago.—For a dog without teeth, John Guara's mongrel is some pup. Twelve men, good and true, decided that recently they saw the dog occupy a seat in the witness chair, heard its color described as "muckledum," two feasts few dogs ever achieve, and then decided Guara must pay $100 to a woman neighbor who had been bitten.

Not so bad, for a toothless dog, said John.

Mr. Amery's Escape From Germany

London.—Mr. L. S. Amery, M.P., at a reunion of Salonica Leaguers at the Guildhall School of Music Theatre, recounted how he eluded capture by the Germans after the ship on which he was sailing home from Salonica had been torpedoed.

Mr. Amery, who was then Captain Amery of the Intelligence Department, said that he was sleeping the sleep of the just after lunch on the Caledonia, when he was awakened by a terrific bang from the torpedo, which hit the ship just behind where he was sleeping.

There followed a long drop down to the boat, which had already put off, and there he found himself with a small company. They saw the ship sink slowly down, and then the submarine came back to them.

Wisely, he crawled into the little three-cornered space at the stern of the boat. The Germans took General Ravenshaw and several officers, but missed him, and when they had gone he crawled out.

Seven Times and Out

A Greek professor has discovered seven to be destructive. Writing for a Greek paper that appears in Paris, he produces a mathematical curiosity, which we reproduce from the London Evening Standard:—

"The magic figures are 142,857. If they are multiplied by two, the result is 285,714. That is, the same figures and the same sequence. Multiply by three, and the figures (428,571) and the sequence are still undisturbed. Multiplied by four, the result is 571,428. Here again the same figures and the same undisturbed sequence. Multiply by five, and the result is 714,285, by six, 857,142. In this last example the result is even more curious, because the two sets of three figures are exactly transposed.

"When, however, the doubtless weary figures are multiplied by seven, the magic formula breaks down, and the following curious result is achieved—999,999."

DO YOU SUFFER FROM CONSTIPATION?

Countless remedies are advertised for constipation. Many relieve for the moment but they are habit forming and must be continued. Others contain calomel and dangerous mineral drugs, which remain in the system, settle in the joints and cause aches and pains. Some are harsh purgatives which cramp and gripe and leave a depressed after effect. Avoid lubricating oils which only grease the intestines and encourage nature's machinery to become lazy.

A purely vegetable laxative such as Carter's Little Liver Pills, gently touches the liver, bile starts to flow, the bowels move gently, the intestines are thoroughly cleansed and constipation poisons pass away. The stomach, liver and bowels are now active and the system enjoys a real tonic effect. All druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.

A Plea for the Deaf

The Duke of York, who presided at the festival dinner of the Royal Association in Aid of the Deaf and Dumb, held at the Mansion House, London, made a forceful plea for the deaf. The Duke said:—

"Here, in the very heart of the Empire, in London itself, are more than 4,000 people who are deaf and dumb, the largest aggregation of them in the world. Handicapped throughout life, constantly misunderstood, often denied the chance to show their ability to become self-supporting, knowing loneliness and isolation in a way that we who can hear and speak can never fully realize, their lot would be pitiable indeed were it not for the devoted work of the staff of the Association.

"For 90 years the Association has labored unceasingly to befriend, to assist, and to save from utter despair these afflicted people who are our own kith and kin, English, and yet cut off from ordinary intercourse, like a strange community in a foreign country.

"Think for one minute of the difficulty of such people in securing employment in the tense struggle for existence of these modern days. It is a stern battle for all, but for people so handicapped it is heart-breaking. A good deal of the time of the staff is taken up in tramping round interviewing employers and persuading them to give the deaf a chance. Yet they prove themselves quite capable workmen if they are given an opportunity.

"The real greatness of a nation is often shown by its regard for the weaker brethren, the poor, the afflicted, the blind, the deaf, the maimed. "I commend the work of the Association most earnestly to your generosity and your practical sympathy."

WORDS

We are students of words; we are shut up in schools, and colleges, and recitation-rooms for ten or fifteen years, and come out at least with a bag of wind, a memory of words, and do not know a thing. We cannot use our hands, or our legs, or our eyes, or our arms. We do not know an edible root in the woods we cannot tell our course by the stars, nor the hour of the day by the sun.—Emerson.

"Skinny! I Gained 11 Lbs. in 8 Weeks and Boy Friend"

"After trying several tonics tried Ironized Yeast. In 8 weeks gained 11 lbs., new complexion, round limbs; best of all a boy friend."—S. M. Salino.

Men and women are amazed at gain of 5 to 15 lbs. in 3 weeks. Ugly hollows vanish. Bony limbs round out. Sallow, blemished skin gets clear and rosy like magis. Nervousness, indigestion, constipation disappear overnight. Sound sleep. New pep from very first day.

Two great tonics in one—special weight-building Malt Yeast and strengthening Iron. Pleasant little tablets. Far stronger than unmedicated yeast. Results in 1/2 time. No yeast taste, no gas.

Don't go round "skinny," ugly, unattractive. Get Ironized Yeast from druggist today. Feel great tomorrow. Money back from manufacturer if not delighted with results.

Children CRY for it

It may be the little stomach; it may be the bowels are sluggish. No matter what coats a child's tongue, its a safe and sensible precaution to give a few drops of Castoria. This gentle regulation of the little system soon sets things to rights. A pure vegetable preparation that can't harm a wee infant, but brings quick comfort—even when it is colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance.

And don't forsake Castoria as the child grows older. If you want to raise boys and girls with strong systems that will ward off constipation, stick to good old Castoria; and give nothing stronger when there's any irregularity except on the advice of a doctor. Castoria is sold in every drugstore, and the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

HOW ONE WOMAN LOST 28 LBS. OF FAT

This headline is exactly true and means just what it says. Read her own letter: "I take a daily dose of Kruschen and I have lost two inches round the waist and hips and 28 lbs. since last summer. I feel very well on it, and people tell me I look very fit. I am 5 ft. 4 ins. in height, 40 years old, and come of a stout family."

Miss E. L.
If you are fat, first remove the cause. When your liver, kidneys and bowels can't throw off that poisonous waste material which is always accumulating in your body—before you realise it you are growing hideously fat. Take Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning. In three weeks' time, get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished. Notice also how you have gained in energy and health. Your skin is clearer, your eyes sparkle with glorious health. You feel younger in body, keener in mind. Kruschen will give many fat people a joyous surprise.

Health Now

"In May and June I was badly rundown and had faint spells until it was a drag to do my work. In July and August I didn't seem to pick up so I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I saw it advertised. I took two bottles and now I am the picture of health. I feel fine, do all my work and milk two cows. If any woman writes, I will certainly answer her letter."—Mrs. George R. Gillespie, Punnichy, Saskatchewan.

WILLIAM PERRY.

The tide of time has carried off another of the old timers of this Province in the person of William Perry, who in the short time he resided in our midst endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact.

Nearly sixty years ago I first knew of Mr. Perry's activities as a member of the Montreal Volunteer Fire Brigade. At that time many of the members were still living, and one very frequently heard from the late Fred Perry, William Tealery and others stories of the various fires they had assisted to quell, and the many narrow escapes from death they had had in consequence of their arduous undertaking.

A civic Fire Brigade took the place of these pioneers, and they became, outside of their regular business, interested in matters of vital importance to the community of which they formed a part. The late Fred Perry will be always associated with the Verdun Asylum for the mentally afflicted, for it was owing to his efforts that it was started. William Perry always alert to do all he possibly could for the welfare of his fellows was for thirty seven years the mainstay of the Church of England in the North End of Montreal and Outremont, in starting with the late Rev. James Flanagan the little mission of the church that by the work of these two developed into the Church of the Ascension that is one of the most popular and prosperous churches on the Island of Montreal.

The outstanding feature of Mr. Perry's character was quality, and any one who has had the privilege of working with him felt that in all the social life of the church he was a host in himself; and made every one feel at home and a part of the family which every church should aim to realize.

Since his coming to Lachute it has been a real pleasure to me to recall with him the past of Montreal life. A life well spent with its life long lesson of usefulness to business, social and church life leaves its impress on any community of which such men form a part.

KATE MASSIAH.

IN MEMORIAM

SCOTT.—In loving memory of my dear wife Clara who passed away May 27th, 1929.

What would I give to clasp her hand
Her dear kind face to see
To hear her voice and see her smile
That meant so much to me
It's sweet to know we'll meet again
Where troubles are no more,
And that the one I loved so dear
Has just gone on before.

Inserted by her husband, J. W. Scott.

GO SLOW MARY

Something new?—Yes, this is a Comedy that you can't miss; you will talk about it for weeks after; you will laugh as you have never laughed before; you will call it the play of plays. We have seen what our local dramatic society can do, and they exceeded all our expectations, now come and see what Weir can do in the art. Remember, Lachute Auditorium, Saturday, May 30, at 8.15 p.m. (D. S. T.)

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Anderson and Mildred Anderson, of Ottawa, were holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Y. Deacon. Miss Florence Anderson is their guest this week.

Several teas were held last week by the ladies of our town to bid farewell to Mrs. Stead, who with Mr. Stead left on Friday last for their new home in Amherst, N. S. Although they will be greatly missed here, we extend to them our best wishes for future work and happiness.

A programme of outstanding value both educational and entertaining, has been chosen by the Rev. R. G. Katsonoff, B. A., the genius of languages. The subject is one that is of interest to all, young and old, and especially appeals to the lover of music. Titled, "The Relation of Music to Life," showing the practical value of music in our everyday life, and sixteen songs from many different nations, will be sung, describing the life of man, from the cradle to the grave. See notice in Coming Events for particulars.

It will be pleasing for our readers to learn that the proprietors of the Watchman have acquired a new magazine of considerable import "The Municipal Magazine of Canada" which is the official organ of the Canadian Municipalities, and will be published and edited from this office. It is a monthly magazine ranging from 40 to 50 pages and carries a circulation of close to 3,500 copies. In order to effectively cope with this increase of business we have found it necessary to extend our premises and instal new machinery, so that we will be better able to handle our ever increasing business.

We are always delighted to chronicle anything that pertains to the development of the industrial life of our community and we take pleasure in bringing to the attention of our readers this week the announcement that the proprietors of Lachute Dairy have inaugurated an ice-cream department for the supply of that delicious and health-giving commodity to the public of Lachute and surrounding country. Messrs. Bradford and Matthews are keenly alive to the need which has been largely supplied by outside firms, and as there is an abundant local supply of good rich milk from our pure-bred herds, the public have but to ask for the "Lachute Dairy" Ice Cream and so boost our home-town products.

Everything is shaping up fine for the Lachute Fair which takes place on June 18-19-20-21. It is your privilege to make it known and boost it for all you are worth. No other fair can boast of more pleasing surroundings, finer buildings or better programme of entertainment. To those coming from a distance the public will be assured of good meals and lunches in the dining-room because the ladies of the Red Cross have undertaken to render this service. Let everyone lend a hand and put it over big this year and just remember that the President and Directorate, who spend much time and consideration in working out the best programme possible, are relying upon you for real support.

"Broadway Jones" is the title of a four act Comedy which will be presented in the Auditorium, on Saturday, June 7th. Its full of laughs and something you cannot afford to miss.

HAWKESBURY BRIDGE IS NOW ASSURED.

The following letter from our Federal representative Sir George Perley, is self explanatory and bears the information that will be gratefully received by not only our country but by the entire population of the Lower Ottawa Valley.

As Sir George points out, the bridge has been a long time coming, but now that the Dominion and the Provincial Governments of Quebec and Ontario have come to an amicable understanding as to proportions of cost, we may expect action.

Ottawa, Ont., May 27th., 1930

Dear Giles:

You will be glad to know that the bridge between Grenville and Hawkesbury is going to be built in the near future. The Dominion Government has given way to our representations and has decided to pay five-twelfths of the cost, as you will see by the enclosed copy of the Supplementary Estimates which have just been brought down. With the contributions from Quebec and Ontario this ensures the building of the bridge.

As you know I have been trying for twenty-five years to get this bridge built, which is so much required in the public interest. It is not in any way a political matter as both sides have been interested in getting it done but I feel that we must all congratulate ourselves on the successful result.

Yours sincerely,

GEORGE H. PERLEY,

THE LATE

MRS. MALCOLM SMITH

It is with deep regret we record the death of Mrs. Malcolm Smith, who passed away suddenly on Tuesday, after a long illness at the age of 69 years. She was born in St. Jeansville, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cleland, and was married to the late Malcolm Smith, who predeceased her some 8 years ago, living with her husband and family on the farm at Beech Ridge until the last five years, when she came with her daughter Mrs. Picken to reside in Lachute.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a loving and devoted mother, one daughter Mrs. Douglas Picken and three sons, Lawrence, of Star City, Sask.; Gordon, of Beech Ridge; and Leslie, of Aurora, Ill.; also one sister Mrs. Thos. Smith, of Aurora and two brothers, Robt. J. and Wm. J. Cleland, of Lachute.

The funeral service was conducted on Thursday afternoon, from her late residence by the Rev. Henry Cousens and Dr. Ballantyne in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, after which interment was made in Lachute Cemetery.

THE LATE JOHN BOYD.

After an illness of several months the death occurred on Tuesday, of Mr. John Boyd, one of the respected citizens of our town, aged 63. Deceased was born in Mille Isle and was the youngest son of the late Wm. Boyd. Eighteen years ago he came with his family to reside on a farm in Bethany, removing from there five years ago to Lachute. He was married to Miss Maria J. Strong, who survives him.

The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon from the St. Simeon's Church, conducted by Rev. J. A. Lackey, in the presence of a large congregation of sympathizing friends and relatives.

Besides his loving wife, he leaves to mourn the loss of a devoted father three boys and seven daughters, Norman and Leonard, of Lachute; and Ernest, of Montreal; Mrs. Gordon Todd, of Brownsburg; Mrs. William Rowell, of Derby, Vt.; Mrs. Gordon Smith, of Beech Ridge; Mrs. Stanley Lunan, of Sorel; Reta, Edith and Doris at home; also two sisters, Miss E. Boyd, of Montreal and Mrs. Hammond of Lodi, Calif.

Great Powers Can Control Any Menace Out of Asia and Russia is Powerless

Mussolini Does Not Fear Yellow, Red Nor Black Perils—Sees in "Principle of Relativity" in Attempts to Maintain Peace Fear of Another War

By Benito Mussolini

Rome.—The intermittent eruptions of temper in the east stimulate speculation as to whether or not these eruptions will have an influence on the trend of world policy. The nations of the west are very deeply imbedded in the east, and the turns and twists of the eastern peoples have a far-reaching importance for the peoples of the west, some in a greater and others in a minor degree.

Since the war, we have witnessed an almost constant restlessness in some parts of Asia. China has gone through a long and painful upheaval, Afghanistan had a couple of twists, Asia Minor has been the scene of troubled agitation, and now India is passing through a period of disturbance.

Many have wondered whether the "Balkans" have been removed to the east. It was the dreaded Balkans which were always furnishing Europe with scares. Timid statesmen shuddered at the Balkan outbreaks because of the old alignments which a Balkan outbreak might disturb. And well they might, for such Balkan excess carried with it a potentiality for the world war, eventually settling on the incident at Sarajevo as the one with sufficient ignition to cause the final and disastrous explosion. The war fought and the post-war status quo established, has the inflammable structure shifted to the east?

Is there a potential world war nestling in the outbreaks and quarrels of the Asiatic peoples? Modern transportation and modern communications bring the world closer together, making it smaller. Competition for balance between the powers for spheres of influence and markets has extended and sharpened. Not so long ago the Balkans were without railroads, ports or factories, and decidedly primitive. For primitive civilization, one must now go further east.

There was a European balance of power which created foes for the world war. Does such a combination exist and provide opposing forces over the Asiatic question? The problem is removed from the boundaries of the European continent. The Balkans were distinctly a European problem, but Asia involves the world, in which, besides the powerful European powers, there are the extra-European nations in all parts of the world.

But, to-day, there are pacts of peace and every type of agreement that can be designed to forestall and prevent war. Practically all signed the Kellogg Pact, including Russia. Then we have our Locarno and the present tripartite naval pact between Great Britain and the United States, and Japan. The work of promoting disarmament still goes on in the League of Nations, and the world of to-day is accumulating peace pacts after peace pact as if to weave a magic wand against the evil spirits of Mars.

There are no strict alignments as there were in 1914. There is now no triple entente or triple alliance; but there is fear of war. The pacts of peace are proof of it. Each power must chase the other around these days, and this was shown at the recent London Conference. It was what the Italians called the principle of relativity, because each one's feet was based on the size of the others. On land and in the air it is the same, so we are now in the period of counting on the possibilities of our next conflict and with whom, and on this basis we fix the size of our armed forces. It may be one enemy or it may be a group of enemies, but we have no alliance of the type of 1914.

What About Russia?

The consideration is often put forward that Russia is attempting an Asiatic bloc. But is Russia in the economical and financial state to lead such a bloc. She is engaged in organizing her own industrial and agricultural system. Her gigantic schemes of industrialization will take decades to realize, and for the time being she is content with the introduction of foreign capital and foreign technicians to direct the work of the reconstruction of her industrial organization. Since she is not in a position herself thoroughly to equip and maintain a vast military establishment, it is hardly possible that she could undertake the task of preparing others. Moreover, the Russians are signatories to the Kellogg Pact.

Besides, though we are not discussing here the merits and demerits of collectivism, we can certainly ask ourselves whether or not such a system does not interfere and destroy even the very desire for personal initiative. The days of liberalism are certainly over. The Fascist state is not backward in establishing the necessary control of the relations of so-called freedom and economic activities, but I feel very strongly that a wide margin must be left to private initiative in any case for it represents the dynamic impulse to enlighten progress. I have been careful to establish this principle expressly in our "Carta la Lavoro," which is the Magna Charta of our labor policy. Without freedom of initiative there is either stagnation or violent upheaval; energies are thus precipitously unleashed. So much for Russia.

No Menace From Asia

The fear has been expressed also of a great Asiatic threat against Europe. For my part, I harbor no present fear of the so-called "Yellow Peril" any more than I do of the Red Peril or Black Peril. Though the Asiatic peoples reach hundreds of millions, they are yet living in the musty atmosphere of the distant past, centuries behind civilization, and lost in religious hatreds which again will require centuries to weld into one organic whole solidified with one pride of race. Who can comprehend enlightenment for four hundred million people slumbering in their ancestral apathy? The task is staggering. Before such a people could rise and threaten the existence of the western world, a millennium must come to pass. Then in a thousand years what will the civilization of the west be like in its lightning advance in scientific research and discovery?

The internal race hatreds of the Asiatic peoples are also an obstacle to their steady advance. Jealousies and prejudices are inherent in them. They are as they would the white man. It is would just as soon fight their brother, the civilization of the west which has brought them their present progress. It will be the guidance and direction of the west which will bring them out of their dormant past, and inspire them onward to a higher plane of development. It is true there are great potentialities there, but these dormant forces need not be set in motion or crystallized into the spirit of progress before an effective advance can be realized.

Spirit of the East

The spirit of the east was made pointedly clear to me by an episode which occurred to one of my Ministers. Being a man of youthful energy, though not young in years, he flew from Tripoli to a distant oasis in the desert where he was met with the homage due to his rank by the native chiefs. The Minister showed them his airplane, emphasizing to them with natural pride in the western civilization that it carried him there in 45 hours. They did not seem impressed, but, to push further his point, he asked them to realize that it took him two days to reach them, while for the same journey they would employ 30.

"All right," replied the head-chief calmly, "tell me what you will do with the other 25 now."

It is natural to ask ourselves whether this state of mind can be interpreted as decrepitude of age or the retardation of adolescence. Perhaps it is both these. The immemorial civilizations of Asia are perhaps like their vast evergreen forests. Under the old growth, which is decaying and falling into pieces, there is a new sap giving birth to other plants which will soon be budding, perhaps invisible, masked behind the other's decay.

I find no seeds sown in the present Asiatic eruptions that will bring forth a world conflict. The world in its present hierarchy of nations is not set to breed a struggle between alignments of eastern peoples with western peoples against others of the east and west. The problem of present peace rests with the Great Powers. They are in a position to thwart and obstruct any combination coming from periodic uprisings of the east.—Copyright article in Montreal Star, and printed with their kind permission.

Saves Your Babies Lives From Disease

Ontario Health Department Will Send Free "Baby Book"

(This is one of a series of weekly articles on health sponsored by the Canadian Social Hygiene Council. So important is the subject of Infant Mortality that the article on this subject has been divided into two parts. Part one is published below. Part two will follow next week.)

Poverty is responsible for more infant deaths than anything else, because most of the predisposing causes of infant mortality are due to a lack of money and to the ignorance and carelessness that often goes with it.

A nation needs all the healthy and strong children it can acquire in order to keep its place in the world march of progress.

The population of a country depends, aside from migratory fluctuations, on the number of children born and the number of those children that reach maturity. The strength of a nation can be no greater than the strength of its citizens, therefore the future strength of a nation depends on the health, vigor and intelligence of its children for the child is the father of the man and the school boy of to-day is the citizen of to-morrow. There can be nothing more clear and obvious than that.

The aim of every nation should be, then to have every child grow up strong in body and strong in mind, agents in producing a higher type of civilization.

One of the best criteria of the civilization of a nation is the care which it expends on its infants. The only method of estimating this is by observing the infant mortality rates. This is usually computed on the number of infants out of every 1000 born who do not live until the end of the first year.

It is a common superstition that the rearing of children is instinctive with the human race. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The mother must be taught how to care for her child if the child is to have any sort of chance of surviving the dangerous first year and of reaching a healthy maturity. Poverty may be an excuse in some quarters for not giving a child all that it needs. But poverty is no excuse nowadays for not knowing what the child needs and how to take care of it. Ignorance on the part of the mother is inexcusable as there are health centres throughout the country to which those within reach may go at regular intervals and which will send reliable information to women in outlying districts. Such information may be had by writing to the Social Hygiene Council in care of this paper.

The mother should learn from her physician or from a competent nurse and if neither of these are available because of the mothers isolation in some inaccessible country districts then from the literature which can be obtained from a number of sources.

Children of ignorant mothers are rarely properly bathed, rarely get sufficient sunlight, enough fresh air or the right kind of food. They are nearly always treated as if germs were non-existent. Their bottles are sometimes filthy from a scientific standpoint.

A public health nurse once told the writer of a thing she saw one time. It is hardly believable. The nurse was paying her first visit to a poor family and it happened to be what the mother figured was the baby's feeding time. The mother was putting milk into a bottle which she carefully washed under the tap before putting the milk into it. The procedure was to fill a tumbler with milk and then pour it into the baby's bottle from that. As the nurse watched wide eyed a fly fell into the glass of milk. The mother calmly picked it out with her dirty fingers and went on filling the infant's bottle. Needless to say that mother had a few lessons on the preparation of feeding for babies within the next few days.

A baby's food must be wholesome and pure. With a mother who is both poor and ignorant such a standard is impossible. A mother who knows what she is doing but who is poor and unable to afford the proper surroundings finds it hard to maintain the standards necessary if her baby is to grow up with an even chance in the world.

A mother between the ages of twenty-five and thirty has the best chance of giving birth to a healthy child, one which will be able to resist the dangers besetting it during the first year. Care of the infant should begin long before the child is born as the physical condition of the mother is of the utmost importance. If the mother is poor and undernourished, or suffering from any of the complications of pregnancy, the child's chances of life are greatly lessened. If the mother has to work she should arrange it that she has some rest before the birth of her baby. The death of weakly infants, due to overwork and undernourishment on the part of mothers, forms a great part of the infant mortality rate.

It is quite obvious the part that poverty plays in keeping up our infant mortality rate and in bringing children poorly equipped to maturity. Bad housing and poor sanitation are detrimental to the health of the child. Families that are forced to live in cramped quarters of one or two rooms cannot but suffer. There is lack of fresh air and sunlight, there is dirt and filth tracked in from the street by many feet, and a very important consideration—a lack of proper storage for food. Nearly always there is a complete lack of refrigeration—all these things tend to lessen a child's chances for life and in life. Great strides have been taken by the health authorities, but there is much work yet to be done. The work of health officers in connection with housing is no bed of roses. You may find it hard to believe, but their efforts are often misunderstood and they are always meeting strong opposition from different quarters. No landlord—unless he is very public spirited will allow a house or building of his to be condemned without a fight. There are many landlords of course, who are ready and willing to help in every way possible. They very often need no word from the health officers that their properties are uninhabitable and they make changes or rebuild of their own volition.

If you are a landlord you can help greatly by taking a pride in your properties and seeing to it that they are a help instead of a hindrance in the solution of the very real housing problem. You must not think that the problem is confined wholly to the cities. Towns and villages have it just as well. I know of an Ontario town where a great percentage of the houses are on the market for sale or rent. The same economic conditions that have reduced the town to this have made the poorer residents so poor that they cannot afford to pay even the ridiculously low rental that is asked for excellent brick houses in the best of condition. Many of these people are living in what are real slums and under unsanitary, unwholesome conditions. Without hurting the town any, ninety per cent.—yes 100 per cent.—of the bad houses could be condemned. But—and here is the problem,—in that town everybody knows everybody else. It is extremely hard for the health officers to do anything at all.

Statistics compiled in England show that the infant mortality rate varies directly with the amount of space in which a family has to live.

AUTO-SUGGESTION

"How do you account for this?" snapped Mrs. Brown, dashing into the butcher's shop and waving a small parcel in front of the butcher.

"What's the matter?" asked the butcher nervously.

"Matter!" cried the angry woman. "This is the matter." She unwrapped the parcel. "I found this piece of rubber in one of the sausages that I bought here this morning."

The butcher sighed unhappily. "Yes, madam," he said at last, "the motor-car is replacing the horse everywhere now."

"The occupant of a rumpled seat finds his new car sets him back quite a bit."

German Sneers At Disarmament

If we credit the German press, it would seem that the London Naval Conference from the start, and that the longer it lasted the more obvious the "deception of it became."

In the view of the Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten, it was a device to "befool the artless," and this daily continues:

"The London Naval Conference never had anything to do with disarmament."

"This fact was, naturally, perfectly well known to the men taking part in it."

They knew that disarmament was just the lettering on the sign over the door behind which they sought to agree on the subject of armaments so as not to involve themselves in a ruinous competition.

"The five naval Powers wanted to form an armaments trust under the auspices of England and America, so that the whole of mankind would feel satisfied with the business done by the firm of Disarmament & Company."

"This was certainly no easy thing; but to play the game right, no one ought to have defied its rules so flagrantly as Tardieu—that is, if the conference were not to crash, as it did, over the abyss."

"Tardieu was somewhat intoxicated with the success he had at the Hague Conference, and he tried to bound the London gathering just as he had done the previous one with helpless Germans in front of him."

"If this London gathering has taught one thing more than another, it is this: not one of the great Powers, even remotely, dreams of adhering to its obligation to disarm as a requital to Germany for her disarmament."

"All the great Powers are persuaded that they must keep armed so as to be in a position to vindicate their rights with their own mailed fists."

The "fiasco" of the Naval Conference, declares the Hamburger Nachrichten, proves that there will be "no more reconciliations of great Powers on the back of Germany." The Berlin Kreuz Zeitung similarly remarks that "the map of Europe traced in the Versailles Treaty is doomed."

Meanwhile, not a few German papers, and among them the Koelnische Zeitung, are enjoying what they at least consider the greatest French diplomatic defeat in history.

The sum of German present opinion inclines pretty strongly to this view. On France alone it is asserted, must henceforth fall the burden of holding down the Continent of Europe. The Hamburger Fremdenblatt remarks that "France has only herself to blame if to-day she is isolated," and it proceeds:

"Mussolini does not believe in enduring peace."

"He makes a mockery of the rigidity into which Continental Europe has been forced by recent diplomatic pacts."

"Is it not against all reason, he has contended again and again, that the area of Italy should be so reduced as to force the Italians to migrate, whereas the area of the French empire remains so vast that she is unable to people her own colonies?"

"In France itself now two groups confront each other."

"One is actuated solely by distrust of Germany. It would pay Italy a good price for a free hand against Germany."

"Next, it would reverse the pro-German policy of the Locarno pact. We must not forget that dread of Italy, really inspired a certain element in France to reach a better understanding with Germany."

"Briand, and with him a great number of French statesmen, is afraid that a yielding disposition in France will be interpreted as an admission of the rights of races to a greater independence of development."

RHEUMATIC VICTIM FOR SIXTEEN YEARS

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restored
Her Health

Rheumatism is a disorder of the blood. Wet, cold weather may aggravate it but that is not the cause. Bad blood charged with uric acid is the reason. Re-build the blood and rheumatism will disappear. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enrich and purify the blood and that makes good health.

Mrs. John C. McPherson, St. Mary's, Ont., writes:—"For sixteen years I was a victim of rheumatism. For eleven years I was unable to walk. Massage and chiropractic treatment failed. I was utterly discouraged till I heard how strongly Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended for cases like mine. I began their use and in a few weeks the pain lessened, my appetite and color improved, and now I am able to do light housework. It is wonderful what these pills have done for me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing but they do it well—they enrich and purify the blood. This rich blood banishes rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia and neuritis and promotes health and strength. The Pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Jew and Arab in Palestine

Major H. L. Nathan, M.P., in the Nation and Athenaeum (London): The report of the Palestine Committee of Inquiry is not a satisfactory document. . . . The whole report has a pro-Arab tendency. . . . It may be the British genius for understanding Eastern peoples that gives the Committee's whole report its Arab tinge. They understand the Arabs in a way they do not and cannot understand the Jews. They have great sympathy with the Arab demands for self-government. . . . But it must not come by way of surrender to murder.

The Trucks Driver's A.B.C.—Always Be Careful

Accidents won't happen—if all drivers are careful! The ABC of accident prevention—"Always Be Careful"—has been learned so well by drivers of over $60 Bell Telephone trucks and cars in Ontario and Quebec that accidents to these vehicles rarely occur.

The telephone truck driver whom you see along street or highway knows and follows carefully all the rules in his instruction book. One of these is shown plainly on the back of his truck to warn others—he always stops at railroad crossings. And no Bell Telephone truck has ever been involved in a level crossing accident! In fact, any mishaps of the road are so scarce in Bell Telephone circles that other vehicle-operating organizations are studying and adopting the same successful safety-first principles.

Song

How I loved to lean above you,
Laughing at you,
Swearing that I did not love you—
God knows I do!

Sorry now and quite relenting,
Heart-sick with fear,
I regret all my tormenting
When you were here.

Had I sworn that I adored you
Now I'd be glad;
But perhaps I might have bored you
If I had.

Carillon.

A Leader for India

Stephen Gwynn in the Fortnightly Review (London): Whatever India may be, and it is certainly not a nation, nor a race, Great Britain has made it a community, and the community is becoming politically self-conscious. It has an unassuaged pride, and nothing is most explosive.
Beyond all reasonable doubt, India does not need democracy, nor, one may be sure, does it want freedom in any sense that we in this island give to word. But a community in that stage needs leadership, and feels the need of it. It needs leadership of its own. The weakness of Lord Irwin's position is that neither he nor any Englishman can give such leadership to India; and though it is argued plausibly, and cogently, that no Indian can hope to be accepted as the leader of all India, whereas the alien, standing aloof from all jealousies of race or caste or religion, can be the impartial governor, that argument denies at once the whole possibility of native leadership, and thwarts the craving which Mr. Gandhi's assumption of command to some extent must satisfy, even among Moslems.

The Dignity of Labor

Sir J. A. R. Marriott in the Hibbert Journal (London): To banish the trivial task, the sordid occupation, is impossible, save perhaps in Utopia, and even in Utopia you can do it—if at all—only by strict limitation of population. But it is not impossible to idealize the lower occupations; to help the scavenger to perceive that in the scrupulous performance of his allotted task he is performing a service to the community as important as the trained skill of the great surgeon. Few dairymen, perhaps, are idealists; nor are all artists. But it should not be impossible to convince the former that the health of the community is not less, but more, important than its appreciation of color and form. Such a conviction—the sense of service, whether the service be "honorable" or "menial," can alone give dignity to labor.

TRUE LIFE

A man is simple where his chief care is the wish to be what he ought to be; that is honestly and naturally human. We may compare existence to raw material. What it is matters less than what it is made of; as the value of a work of art lies in the flowering of a workman's skill. True life is possible in social conditions the most diverse and with natural gifts the most unequal. It is not fortune or personal advantage, but our training them to account, that constitutes the value of life. Fame adds no more than does length of days; quality is the thing.—Charles Wagner.

DISCARD AUGUST 4 AS ELECTION DATE.

The Government this week rejected August 4th. as an alternate date to July 28 for the election. If parliament is not dissolved by May 29 to permit use of the last Monday in July for balloting, Canadians will go to the polls on August 11 to choose their government for the next five years.

Objection to August 4 was twofold. In the first place a large number of Canadian cities observe the first Monday in August as a civic holiday, an occasion which finds many thousands away from their homes. Hence polling on that date might have an unpleasant reaction upon a party which kept the holiday-makers at home. Another objection this year is that the date is the anniversary of Britain's entry into the Great War. These two factors have decided the issue and unless polling is possible on July 28 it will go until August 11. As events develop it appears more and more probable that local factors, rather than the budget, or its provisions, will be the deciding factor in the election outcome.

Premier Ferguson sounded the keynote of attack in Ontario at London in a scathing denunciation of Premier King's 'not a five cent piece' to a Tory Government declaration. Mr. King took the first opportunity in the House to quote other parts of his speech made the same day to assure the five Conservative provinces that his reference to 'not a five cent piece' was being misused. Conservatives have branded this 'Mr. King's new constitutional issue' and propose to force it.

In Quebec the prelude to the campaign shows the undercurrent of bitterness, with Saskatchewan the butt of racial animosity which is being exploited particularly in rural districts.

The Maritime provinces have not yet developed their campaigns to a point where forecasts can be indulged in. It is in the West, perhaps that the budget will play the largest part in determining results. There arises the question as to whether or not any definite swing has taken place towards protection, and if not, what favor will be accorded Mr. Dunning's new duties. In British Columbia little alteration, in the present standing is anticipated.

Mr. King and Mr. Bennett hope for a few days rest after the House closes. After that the flood of oratory will run sixty days and nights—a fifty per cent. advance on the flood of biblical history.

MONEY FOR SHOW BUILDING FOR ORNSTOWN EXHIBITION

President, R. R. Ness of Ormstown Exhibition, in company with Mr. D. J. O'Connor, M.P., waited upon the Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture on Wednesday last in the interests of Ormstown Exhibition. The local men informed the Minister that the Ormstown Exhibition was much in need of an industrial building. Mr. Motherwell agreed with them, and informed them that the Department of Agriculture would contribute towards the erection of such building, as had already been done at Sherbrooke. From the Federal Government the amount of money that will be forthcoming for the building will be $8,000, payable in two annual payments of $4,000 each. Messrs. Ness and O'Connor are in hopes of receiving a similar response from the Quebec Department of Agriculture.

$212,950,000 TAKEN FROM CANADIAN FORESTS IN YEAR

An estimate of the total forest production of Canada for 1928 has just been completed by the forest products branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The figures which include all the products of operations in the woods, the manufactured materials cut in Canadian forests during the year show a total value of $212,950,799.

An estimate has also been made of the extent to which the forests are being depleted annually in the process of exploiting these materials. For this purpose converting factors based on actual measurements have been used. Each of these factors represents in cubic feet the quantity of standing timber that must be cut in the forest in order to produce one unit of the material in question, based on the total cubic contents of the tree. By the use of these factors it has been estimated that the total forest production of 1928 involved the cutting of 2,988,038,430 cubic feet of standing timber.

This constitutes only the annual depletion for use and to it must be added the volume of material annually destroyed by fire, which exceeds 900,000,000 cubic feet of merchantable timber, and young growth on 1,800,000 acres.

Insects and fungi destroy annually at least 800,000,000 cubic feet to the annual drain on the forest resources which is considerably more than 4,788,000,000 cubic feet.

The latest available estimate places Canada's forest resources at 224,304,000,000 cubic feet of standing timber which is capable of yielding 242,637,000,000 feet, board measure, of sawn lumber and 1,121,998,000 cords of pulpwood, ties, poles and other materials.

A total depletion of 4,778,000,000 cubic feet per annum does not necessarily imply that the total resources are reduced by that amount every year and the supply will therefore be exhausted in forty seven years. Estimating the probable duration of supply of forest products is not a matter of simple arithmetic. The rate of utilization is far from constant. It tends to increase with the discovery of new uses for woods the increase in population and the increase in the demand for forest products from other countries whose supplies have been reduced to a greater extent than Canada's.

On the other hand there is a steady increase in volume taking place in all healthy stands of timber due to annual growth. By the application of scientific forest management this annual growth can be stimulated and could be made to take place over the entire area of potential forest land, it is believed.

In the value of forest products, logs and bolts headed the list in 1928 with $76,000,000. Pulpwood comes second with a total value exceeding $74,000,000 and is the most valuable item of forest production in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Firewood, with a total of over $41,000,000 comes third for the Dominion as a whole, but heads the list in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. Heavy railway ties with over $5,000,000; poles with over $4,000,000 and square timber with over $3,000,000 are among the more important of the other items.

ALL CANADA WILL HEAR SPEECHES OF POLITICAL LEADERS.

Radio will provide the most radical departure in campaigning the approaching election.

Over 2,000,000 people stretching from the international boundary line to the frozen northern wastes will be able, when the campaign is actively on, to tune in nightly on one or another of the prominent figures in either of the old parties, to hear at first hand a much more complete presentation of the issues than it is possible to gather from necessarily condensed reports.

There will be national hook-ups for both the Premier and Mr. Bennett and there will be Provincial hook-ups for them and their lieutenants. There will be local broadcasts in every settled section of the Dominion.

What the effect will be upon the attendance at public meetings remains to be seen. There is of course, no substitute for personal contact between political leaders and the public whose franchise they seek but the radio is the most personal of mediums apart from actual contact.

Direct mail publicity, personal letters directed to the recipient will largely supplant the general broadcasting of printed matter. There is to be a drive to make the campaign and the issues a matter of direct personal interest to the elector, to make him feel that he is a shareholder with a material interest in the business of the country and that this election is the "annual meeting" at which he chooses the board of directors who will run his national business for the next four or five years.

Newspaper and out-door advertising campaigns are in course of preparation and the statement is repeated at both party headquarters that the best informed electorate in the history of Canada will go to the polls on election day.

In connection with radio broadcasting satisfaction is expressed in Ottawa that the proposed nationalization of broadcasting did not eventuate on the eve of an election. It would inevitably have been associated with charges of partisanship in allotment of time not only in national hook-ups, but in the provinces as well.

Both parties are now free to manoeuvre for advantage in dates and in hours with the private interests controlling the stations.

CANADA BORROWS $58,000,000 FROM U.S.

Canada continued to borrow substantial volume during the first quarter of the current year, according to a report on financial activities, by Paul D. Dickens of the Finance and Investment Division of the Department of Commerce. Small Canadian provincial and municipal issues made up the bulk of its total of about $58,000,000. There were two corporate issues guaranteed by the Dominion, totaling nearly $18,000,000. Canadian private corporate flotations were practically all for public utilities.

Low Brothers

INTERIOR LIQUID PAINT

Is, at once, the best and most economical to use, whether judged by the initial or ultimate cost. Just how deceiving is the "Price-per-Gallon" basis of figuring your painting costs, may be judged by the comparative cost of decorating two rooms of the same size shown below.

Low Brothers' Paint Cost	US.	Cheap Paint Cost
$2.75	Approximate cost of 1/2 Gallon Interior Paint	$1.85
425 Sq. Feet	Average coverage of 1/2 Gallon Interior Paint	325 Sq. Feet
1 Gallon	Required for 850 square feet.	1 1/2 Gallons
$5.50		$5.55
1 Gallon	Approximate cost of applying Paint	1 1/2 Gallons
$7.00		$10.50
$12.50	TOTAL COST	$16.05

And $3.50 on the cost of labor—a total of $3.55 per room.

Buying Low Brothers' Paint on a "Square Foot" basis, not only saves you money on the initial job, but on your yearly cost of painting—besides ensuring you of richness of appearance—long life service and a surface in good condition for repainting—Try it on your next job.

THE SMALL TOWN

One frequently hears the complaint voiced by the very young members of the community that they are fed up with the small town and that they long to get out into the big world where they could do things and enjoy life to the full.

Only experience can teach that these juvenile hopes and aspirations are in the majority of cases doomed to bitter disappointment in the realization of what the great outside world holds in store. The majority of this juvenile army of longers, after life and excitement come to the stage where they would give anything to get back to the simpler pleasures and real friends of the small town only to find that they are carried by a current which renders the backward swim a feat impossible of accomplishment.

Perhaps the restless youngsters are old enough, and big enough and know enough to care for themselves, but it usually is the case that those who brag about being able to care for themselves are the ones who need the most restraining.

While those who have gone through the experience can sympathize with those who chafe at the confines and restrictions of a "little burg," yet they can assure the young people of today that they have in that "little burg" nearly all the things and nearly all the opportunities which the young folks of a couple of decades ago thought they had to go to the big city to get.
Young folks of today have pleasures and opportunities manifold greater than those which were presented to the young folks of yesterday. In the "little burg" today are all the things that would have contented the young folks of yesterday.

The girl or boy of today who hasn't an automobile in the family feels that Providence has been very unkind to him. In days not so very long ago the two-horse rig that could be driven with one hand was thought quite sufficient for a Sunday afternoon's pleasure. We didn't get quite so far along on the road but the time didn't drag on our hands and the road seemed short enough.

When those now in middle age were young there were no moving picture theatres and unless they moved out of the "little burg" they had no chance to see a good show, but looking back through the years the little family parties and taffy pulls, almost never heard of now, seem to have been far from unpleasant affairs and to have possessed pleasant features.

We got along pretty well with all our handicaps and there was far more sociability when there were fewer places to go than there is now when even staid folks who were raised under the more prosaic conditions of a couple of three decades ago have been partially carried away by the growing craze for amusement to be entertained, to be doing something and to be going somewhere.

CORRECT PLAN FIRST STEP IN HEATING

Only Specialists Authorized to Install the Steel-riveted and Gas-tight Lennox Torrid Zone Furnace

Proper planning and installation is absolutely necessary if your furnace is to perform satisfactorily.
Every home presents a different problem. Every door and window means lost heat. The construction of your house, its location and ex-posure, must also be considered.

Accurate formulas governing pipe sizes and furnace capacities have been developed through years of experimental work at the University of Illinois, resulting in what is known as the Standard Code of the National Warm Air Heating Association. Torrid Zone dealers
formulas—and are granted the franchise solely on their ability to follow the scientific principles of the standard code.

On proper installation the Lennox Furnace Company guarantees to replace any part of the Torrid Zone, except grates or liners, if it wears out within ten years from date of purchase. The average life, however, based on actual service records, is 21 years.

"Stay away from her or you will disappear like the others," Peter DeWolfe is warned in regard to pretty Brena Selcom, but Peter and Brena fall in love. Brena tells him her story. When but a girl in Dallas, Texas, she journeyed to St. Louis to marry Dick Hennepin, but he does not meet her. She returns and marries Compton Parmalee, Hennepin's rich employer. Parmalee is obsessed by a fear that he is being followed, and he, too, vanishes from her life. Peter DeWolfe then proceeds to unravel the mystery. He finds that Hennepin has blackmailed Parmalee and that Parmalee has deceived him to an ancient Aztec city and left him to die of thirst. Then hunted by fear that Hennepin might still be alive, Parmalee returned. "He is here," Peter tells Brena.

"He is here," Peter repeated. "Do you understand?"
"I understand!" said Brena.
"Then come with me," Peter said, holding out his hands. "I will show you all that remains—the record—the story written on the sand and dust."
He led her again toward the charred bones; he found no resistance in her.

"Look there, Brena. Do you see the footprints? Here are yours and mine. But look again on the sand. There are others, too. A thin veil of dust is over them. They move here and there; they cross-cross and move away. They are the footprints of Compton Parmalee. He has come to stand gazing down at the white skeleton—white as oyster shells."

"Blackened," she said.
"Wait!" Peter said. "There are the spots where he stood looking down. He had his answer; no living Jim Hennepin would ever fill him with lead! And as he stood, Brena, perhaps gazing down for a long, long time—because his footsteps are lost in that stew of impressions—he was filled with all the concentrated terror that I suppose only a murderer can know. He went into a crazy, wild panic of fear. These bones were him—the grinning skull. They must be hidden."

"How do you know all this?"
"Because he has moved toward this old well. He reached the stone well curb. He sprang up. Do you see the marks? He found the mouth choked with massive blocks. Nothing could be hidden there! His tracks moved back."

"Go on," said Brena.
"Now he goes running out along the walls searching for something. Look! Here! He ran out along the base of the wall searching."

"For what?"
"For bits of wood—for anything that would burn—for fuel. He must have for Hennepin a funeral pyre! He has been crazy by fear again. But he finds nothing, Brena. There is no wood here, no paper, no grass. There's nothing but sand and stone. Nothing that will burn. Nothing within a half a hundred miles. Like Hennepin, he, too, now screams and the scream comes back from the cliff with a terrible mockery."

"But he did find fuel, Peter," she said. "He must have found something."

"Yes, he found something that would do—not very well, as we can see. He had hoped for better results than he got. Come."

On the way toward the gate of the fortification walls Peter stopped and kicked at a blackened spot on the sand. He said laconically, "Their fire. Where seven years ago they ate their last supper together—the vanished men."

They went outside and Peter's eyes were upon that which he had seen before.

He dropped behind her and turned her body so that she faced toward the bend in the southern end of the fortification wall.

"There!" said he. "You did not see it as we drove in."

Standing in the desert, like a ragged unkempt impropriety, was the ruin of a touring car. All that was left of its top was hanging in wispy strips on the metal frame, its paint and varnish almost gone, the tires had hardened and crumbled on the wheels, shreds of dry rotted leather dangled from the cushions. It had turned its back upon Pueblo Mesquero, as if it had wanted to go away but could not find the strength.

"He came in that, Peter?" Brena asked.

"Yes."

"But never got it away! Did he kill himself?"

"No," Peter answered. "A great abstract justice—a great equity from which there was no appeal—sat in trial of him here. I tell you, Brena, the thing is of magnificent, awe-inspiring dignity! It's a tremendous thing—an unforgettable majesty of inexorable dealing out of sentences. The place of his crime was the scene of his trial, his conviction and sentence. He died as Hennepin had died—of thirst."

Brena started to speak.

"No, not yet," Peter said. "As Hennepin had suffered, so he suffered. More, perhaps, because in his car—just as we have—he had a two days' supply of water. Do you see that black thing, out there on the desert? It is a metal container for water. Parmalee was so crazed that he had tried to drag it along with him on a hopeless journey through the sand. When he lost hope after many miles he dragged it back, tapping its contents to wet his cracking lips until the last drop was gone. His foot-prints are still there wherever the sand is deep in the bottom of small depressions."

"But the car?" she asked. "What happened to the car?"
"The car was all right," replied Peter. "Come this way. Don't go in front of it. Look behind it—the tracks it had made from the enclosure entrance. But here it stopped. Oh, I tell you, it is a thing of stateliness—as if some great hand had come down."

Brena stared at him in open-eyed wonderment.
"He was the instrument of justice—he himself," Peter went on. "A man who would save his life lost it. The madness of fear brought all that he had to fear—and more."

He paused.
"Brena, I will tell you," he said in a hushed, awed voice. "The man was mad, irresponsible, without power to reason! He was in a panic of fear. He wanted to hide his crime at any cost! He had filled his gasoline tank for the return journey. Look!"

Peter pointed to the hole in the back of the car into which the gasoline is poured. The screw cap had gone. A bent copper pipe still dangled out of that hole.

"He wanted a hatful of gasoline. That was the fuel, Brena—the fuel to burn the remains of Jim Hennepin."

He wet his lips.
"He used a siphon. This bent copper pipe taken from his tool chest—a spare length of oil feed pipe! And with that he filled his hat and ran back."

Peter looked up into the sky. He continued quietly. "But the siphon ran on. He had forgotten it! It ran on with its little stream saturating the sand until the tank was empty and the heat of the day was evaporating the last drops at the bottom. Parmalee had condemned himself to death! He had lost the fuel he had put in for the return journey!"

Brena pressed her lips tightly together and for many moments looked into the great fanlike spread of the sunset. Then suddenly she turned toward the car and took several steps.

"No," said Peter firmly. "You mustn't."

"I must know, Peter, beyond a shadow of a doubt."

"He is there—nothing for you to see, dear. He must have had the delusion at last that he could drive the car. He's there—at the wheel—fallen forward. And so—"

She looked up.

"And so—to be sure—I took the watch—a gold one—this one. Is it his?"

"Yes, it is—his, Peter."

He looked down at it a moment; then tossed it into the sand as one tosses aside a poisonous fungus.

"Peter."

"Yes."

"We mustn't let this go with us when we go—following us away. We must leave them both—here."

She took his hand.

"I am sure. For myself I can answer. I know the desert has served some great Will. The book is closed."

They slept upon one great square blanket spread on the open desert beneath the stars while the pale moon moved on its great silver arc across the heavens.

Now the morning came over the desert's edge with a host of golden lances. Brena awoke, sat up, unbraided her hair and tossed it loose with her fingers. As she threw out her arms toward the sun, so now this thing within her for the first time came forth from its depths to greet a dawn of its own. And because she had found her mate in this ultimate romance, Brena bent over and kissed Peter's lips.

He smiled in his sleep and slowly his body moved and his eyes opened.

"Where are we going, Peter?" she asked.

"Somewhere with you," he said, sitting up. "Somewhere with you. I suppose we'll have to be married, dear one. But I feel that we were something more than that a long, long time ago."

Brena moved her head up and down in silent assent. She sat with her hands clasped in her lap, her dark eyes moist, and a calm smile upon her sensitive, flexible lips.

For now she knew that he, too, understood the way to the greatest of all the mysteries.

(The End.)

Clover Leaf Rolls

made with ROYAL YEAST CAKES are a Delightful Change

Try this recipe:

1 Royal Yeast Cake dissolved in one-half cup lukewarm water.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 tablespoon sugar
1 1/2 cups flour
1 1/2 cups scalded milk
1 cup butter

Pour the scalded milk over the sugar, salt and butter. When cooled to lukewarm add the dissolved yeast and one and one-half cups flour. Allow to stand well covered in moderately warm place over night, or, if sponge is set in morning, let stand until light. Add flour enough to knead. Let rise again until double in bulk, then cut down and knead slightly. Butter muffin rings and place three small balls of dough in each ring. Let rise until double in bulk, brush over with melted butter and bake in hot oven.

Bread is one of the most nourishing of foods. It can be made more interesting, however, by occasionally varying the form of serving it.

If you bake at home, the Royal Yeast Bake Book will provide you with many practical tested recipes for all kinds of home-made breads. It will be mailed—free—on request.

Canada's Air Mail Service

Growth of this New Branch of Post Office Department—New Routes Opened this Year

Canada, with her vast area and widely scattered population, is advantageously situated to derive the greatest benefits from the development of internal air mail service. The great distances which separate the principal urban centres and the steady and broad-fronted advance in settlement and development serve to render postal communication by air peculiarly valuable in the Dominion. In addition the Post Office Department of Canada has entered into a reciprocal arrangement with the United States postal authorities whereby Canada may take full advantage of the extensive United States air mail services connecting with points in Mexico, the West Indies, and Central and South America.

The establishment of Canada's official air post services is of comparatively recent date, but the conveyance of mail matter by air within Canada has been an actual fact for over ten years. In the early days of mail transportation by air, the Post Office Department, as a temporary measure, gave permission to the operating aviation companies to carry letters, entirely at the sender's risk and subject to a small fee ranging from five cents to twenty-five cents per letter, in addition to the regular postage. This fee was retained by the operating company. The successful operation of numerous "sticker" services demonstrated beyond question the essential practicability of air mail transport in the Dominion, for these services were conducted in many cases under considerable operating difficulties although not on hard-and-fast schedules.

Civil aviation in Canada assumed proportions in 1927 which justified the Post Office Department in utilizing the facilities available for the fast transport of mails, not only to remote areas but between the larger centres of population. Services of the latter type had of course to be arranged on definite time schedules and this involved a much greater problem. As a beginning a service was inaugurated by which incoming British mails were taken from transatlantic steamers and transported by air to Montreal, thus considerably hastening their delivery. Later, on October 1, 1928, a service of daily frequency was established between Montreal and Toronto and on the same day an international air mail route was opened between Montreal, P.Q., and Albany, N.Y. On July 15, 1929, the Montreal-Toronto route was extended to Detroit, via Hamilton, London, and Windsor, Ontario, and thus a point of contact with the United States air mail routes westward was established, in addition to providing the most densely populated portion of Ontario with speedy air mail service. On the same date a still further connection with southern air mail routes was provided by the establishment of daily service between Toronto and Buffalo. Notwithstanding the difficulties of operation in the Maritime Provinces—scarcity of suitable landing fields, densely wooded areas, broken country, and fog—the Postmaster General inaugurated a service early in December, 1929, between Montreal, Quebec, Moncton, and Saint John.

The next major development in Canadian Air Mail Service was the inauguration of the trans-prairie route on March 3, 1930. Planes are now operating daily between Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw, Medicine Hat, and Calgary and between Regina, Saskatoon, North Battleford, and Edmonton on a schedule which clips a full twenty-four hours off the transcontinental movement of Canadian mails. This not only constitutes a marked advance towards the coast-to-coast service which is being developed link by link but revolutionizes inter-communication between the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

It is in the outlying portions of the country, however, that the most valuable work of Canada's Air Mail Service has been carried out. Until recently the remote settlements along the north shore of the St. Lawrence river, on Anticosti and the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and along the sub-arctic reaches of the Mackenzie river, have been almost cut off from the outside world during the winter months. Communication was necessarily by dog team and other primitive methods until the recent dramatic change to swift aeroplanes reduced the duration of mail trips from weeks to hours.

The establishment of contract air mail service in the Mackenzie River District—the most northerly of all air mail services—in December, 1929, attracted world-wide attention. The route from McMurray, down the Athabasca river, along the south shore of Great Slave Lake, and down the mighty Mackenzie river is nearly 1,700 miles long. Hitherto, in the winter months, dog teams had been the sole means of conveyance and the volume of mail was correspondingly small, being limited to letters and a few newspapers. The total amount for Aklavik in the winter of 1928-29 was less than two hundred pounds. Contrast this with the remarkable conditions obtaining on the advent of air mail facilities. Ten thousand pounds of mail were carried on the first flights—over a thousand pounds alone for Aklavik at the mouth of the Mackenzie.

The chief remaining routes are those which penetrate the rich mining areas of Ontario and Manitoba, i.e., Red Lake, Kispiox, and Blasett. They are the principal mineral areas served by air mail in Canada.

The development of flying fields and provision of lighting facilities, not to mention the constant improvements in aircraft which may be expected during the next few years, will undoubtedly do much to facilitate the performance of regular scheduled air mail services within Canada. Meanwhile the efficiency percentages maintained by the different operating companies are among the world's record for speed over contract air mail lines, the Canadian service proudly boasts that it has never lost a single piece of mail out of the hundreds of tons that have been entrusted to it.—Natural Resources.

English Maidens Ready for the Rally

Two hockey girls prepare to speed to recent rally of Yorkshire Women's Hockey Association at "Knavesnive," Yorkshire, in which over 500 took part.

built in the heart of the woods, each consisting of five or six bunkhouses, canteen, administrative buildings, mess house and Y.M.C.A.

Coming from the misery of the trenches or the hungry desolation of the base camps, the men found their new life ideal. Discipline, as understood by the military mind, disappeared; saluting and button polishing were reserved for the infrequent visits of staff officers, and as most of the camps were miles from railway communication a surprise visit could be discounted. More often than not the local stationmaster's larder was kept supplied with game from the woods, and no "brass hat" had much chance of swooping down unannounced on a camp.

In many cases the companies were working on great estates, where the game had been preserved for generations for their personal diversion, as it seemed to the Canadians, who poached for trout and salmon and brightened the unimaginative menu furnished by army rations with grouse, woodcock and venison.

200 Logs Cut Daily
Each mill had a capacity of about 20,000 board feet a day, which meant that it had to be supplied with some two hundred logs, for as a rule the timber did not run much more than two feet in diameter. Railroad ties remarkably high. In addition to hold the first consideration, and material unsuited for them went largely into deals and one-inch boards, while the smaller limbs were cut for pit props.

When the man-power pinch came in the spring of 1918, at the peak of the German Western offensive, the companies were combed out and every possible man drafted to the fighting line. At one of the camps an attempt was made to fill the gap with the remnants of English man-power, White-chapel tailors and Eastcheap potboilers, the maimed, the halt and the less reputable of the conscientious objectors. A pathetic, ragged force they were. A march of nine miles from the railway station to the camp produced 50 per cent. casualties, in bunions, blisters, varicose veins and a determination to wait for the baggage truck.

When they arrived they took possession of everything. They roamed housed in the Y.M.C.A., rioted in the canteen, rushed the doors of the mess house and ate up everything in sight, and then refused to work. After suffering them for a week the Canadian authorities packed them off.

But the corps was never the same again. Its old friendly homogeneity was invaded by other auxiliaries, Finns, White Russians, Czechoslovaks and like unhappy folks uprooted by the war and salvaged in out-of-the-way corners of the earth. Their ways were not our ways, and their presence in the forestry camps, however necessary it might have been, brought trouble. Besides, the war was obviously drawing to a close. Those who had not been in the fighting line were anxious to get home; those who had wanted to get home.

Within two months after the armistice most of the quiet villages in England, Scotland and France, which had come to regard "the Canadians up in the woods" as permanent fixtures, had said good-bye to the last of them. The auxiliaries were left to clean up the wreckage, and the Canadian Forestry Corps, a sideshow of the World War, was disbanded.

Mouse

O tiny satin-skin, so sleek and gray,
Like a leaf's shadow when the trees sway

You come and go as hardily to be seen
And leave me staring where you just have been

You speak of dust, life is so warm and sweet
Your love of it makes swift your timid feet

Little dun comet, I see you there
Flash across the carpet to the chair
Set in your peaked face, your wary eye—

Ready and glistening and sharp and shy,
Accuses me as though this were your house,

And I, the interloper, cheeky mouse!
O treacherous cheese! Poor mouse who would have dined,
Your small gray ghost darts through my startled mind.

Empire Trade

Perth West Australian: It will be slow and difficult work persuading the preponderant urban population of Great Britain to tax food for the benefit of Empire products, and hard to persuade Australian politicians to surrender a secondary industry once established however costly and exotic. The most that can be expected is a general extension of preferences to our products in Great Britain, a preference supported perhaps by a slight tariff, but stimulated by sentiment and met by us with good quality at fair price—and on our part the retaining of an adequate margin of preference to British manufactures—a margin at least sufficient to cover the differences between British and Continental wage standards—and the scaling down of more flagrant and costly tariff absurdities.

Forestry Corps Ran "Sideshow" In World War

Lumberjacks and Mill Men From Canada Kept Army Supplied With Timber

One of the most curious of the many little known sideshows of the World War was that put on by the corps organized from the unit and casualty cadres of the Canadian Overseas Forces to deal with the acute shortage of lumber which developed in France and England early in the struggle.

A heterogeneous collection of convalescents, of old men and boys whose physical powers had not proved equal to their martial enthusiasm, backed by a few technical men combed out of the fighting units, produced in the neighborhood of 500,000,000 board feet of railroad ties and other lumber and hundreds of thousands of pit props, which played no inconsiderable part in maintaining the efficiency of the railroads and mines.

The use of wood for trench supports, for light railway construction behind the lines and for the thousands of temporary huts and cantonments in France and England combined with the possession by the enemy of many French forest areas to produce a great shortage, while importations from Norway were stopped, as every available cargo ship was thrown into the primary service of carrying food or munitions.

Royal Forests Invaded

In this dilemma the Imperial War Council in London called upon the Canadian army authorities in 1915 to pick out of their regiments, lumberjacks and technical mill men and to organize a corps to exploit what timber reserves England and France possessed. The great English estates were surveyed, and in some instances stands were cut which had been untouched for hundreds of years, notably in the royal forests around Windsor. Several fine century-old stands were felled which had last been cut in the emergency of the Napoleonic wars.

Convalescents and the unit, who were doing odd jobs in the various base camps in England, were gathered around the nucleus of sawyers, sawmillers and hammermen, in a concentration camp in the heart of Windsor Great Park, not twenty miles from London, in the midst of giant oaks and heavy limbed beeches which had made this royal domain from time immemorial. A director general was appointed. He and his staff invented new and complicated army forms, and the Canadian Forestry Corps came into being.

Scheme Extended to France
Companies of about 150 men were made up and placed in the Thames valley, the Cumberland lake district and the Highlands of Scotland. The scheme was extended to France, and more men were sifted out of the Canadian forces in the field, especially those who by reason of age, youth or wounds were physically unfit to stand the increasingly severe strain of service in the line regiments, until about 10,000 men were in the force.

One company was sent as far afield as Cyprus, but the ship bearing it was torpedoed in the Mediterranean. The survivors landed in Italy and were sent to reinforce the companies in France. Some of the latter were involved in the German advance in 1918, and from peaceful foresters became combatants again, fighting rear-guard actions while their stocks of lumber were being fired to prevent their falling into enemy hands.

Woodman's Axe Their Weapon

Many of the later drafts to the Forestry Corps came from regiments raised on the prairies or in the mining regions, and had never handled an axe. They had to be taught how to avoid chopping their feet and which way a tree would fall. Those who could not learn went to hospital and passed the rest of their army careers after convalescence in that interminable occupation, building roads.

For the most part, however, the new companies soon settled down to their work. They set up tents on the edge of their locations while they rigged up temporary sawmills to cut lumber for their permanent quarters and in two months had snug communities

These five playful youngsters are trying to figure out the "ins" and "outs" of this photography game. "There is more," says the one in the case, "than at first meets the eye."

How's Business In Russia?

There are a Dozen Different Answers to the Above Question. We Learn from Various Russian Journals

Some say Russia's economic situation is good. Others call it shaky.

Take first an official view, that of the Moscow "Isvestia." We find it asserting that the famous Five Year Plan is being carried out. It is succeeding, this newspaper adds, even beyond expectation, and this in spite of all forms of "capitalistic opposition."

If this plan is destined, "Isvestia" goes on to say, to deal a blow to "the rotten, corrupt, and hypocritical civilization of capitalism," so much the better.

With all the greater joy then, it adds, will the laboring masses of the world greet "not the dawn, but the morning of the new historical day rising over the world."

From statistical data published in this newspaper we learn that Soviet industry "has surpassed the industry of Russia as it was in 1913." If it is alleged, we take Russia's total industrial production for the year 1913 as 100 per cent., then the total Soviet production for 1929 will be equal to 135 per cent.

But some of the observers of Soviet conditions assert that editorialists like the one above from the official "Isvestia" are intended chiefly for propaganda purposes in foreign countries.

On the other hand, even some Moscow newspapers have regrets to express over poor business conditions in Russia. For example, "Za Industrializatsiyu" avows:

"The inferior quality of goods we are producing has become a very important setback in the growth of our industry."

"If, in our struggle to increase the quantity of our production, we have suffered during the last three months only a relative and temporary failure, in our struggle for the quality of our production we have been suffering failures for years."

Also spreading of the quality of Russian merchandise, "Ekonomicheskoye Obozreniye," an economic weekly published in Moscow, avers that some of the Soviet factories turn out "an appalling high percentage of trash that can not be used."

It charges that the rubber overshoes produced by the Soviet rubber factories can be worn for only four months, while the rubbers produced in 1913 could be worn for eight or even ten months.

Moreover, it adds, there are glass factories in which 30, 40, or even 60 per cent. of the total production is "defective."

"Vozrozhdeniye" (Paris), a National anti-Bolshevik Russian daily, prints an article by B. Basharov, formerly a secretary of J. Stalin, Russia's "Big Boss." About three years ago he turned against the Communists, and fled to France. This author, after a detailed review of the Soviet affairs, comes to the following conclusions:

"In 1926 the reconstruction of Soviet economics reached the climax. In 1927, the system cracked, and then began a deterioration which, at first, was hardly perceptible."

"In 1928 the Soviet economics began to roll down-hill still more rapidly. But as yet there was nothing startling. Symptoms of a serious crisis appeared only in 1929. Agricultural production decreased greatly during that year. The output of Soviet industry deteriorated in quality, and financial inflation became an obvious fact."

Another source of information about Russian conditions we find in a Moscow United Press dispatch. From it we learn that the preliminary figures for the six months ending March 1, 1930, show Soviet Russia's industrial output is more than double that of prewar production in the same territory. We read:

"The production, the government figures demonstrate, far exceeded the original Five-Year Plan, having been 28.8 per cent., as compared with 21.5 per cent. for the same period in 1929."

THE INEVITABLE LOSER

"No true man can afford to quarrel," wrote an eighteenth-century clergyman to his son in college. "Personally, I should rather suffer a thousand wrongs than quarrel over one. I have always found that to strive with a superior is injurious; with an equal, doubtful; with an inferior, sordid and base; with any, full of after-disquieting and remorse."

There is much of truth in this observation. There is just one thing of which the quarrelsome-minded person can be absolutely sure—that whether he wins or loses his quarrel, he will be worse off than he was before. No man resolved to make the most of himself, can spare the time for personal contention. Still less can he afford to take all the consequences, including the vitiation of his temper and the loss of his self-control.

POWER

The desire of power in excess caused angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall; but there is no charity in excess, neither can man nor angels come into danger from it.—Bacon.

IN MEMORIAM

SCOTT.—In fond and loving memory of my dear sister Clare, who was called home so suddenly, in the evening of May 27th, one year ago to-day.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear,
'Tis sad, but true, we wonder why,
The best on earth is called to die.
Sadly missed by Minnie

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian Church in connection with their Annual Sale of Home Cooking have prepared the Dramatic Section of the Pathfinders Club, Montreal, to present "Broadway Jones", a four act Comedy in the Auditorium, on Saturday evening, June 7th. The Montreal Star in a write-up of the play recommended it highly and states that it would be difficult to imagine in an amateur company, better played parts, better acting or better judgment in the selection of characters for the parts. "Broadway Jones". Do you know him? If not come to the Lachute Auditorium on Saturday evening and see him in a four act Comedy.
