Rural Dean Windsor celebrates Fiftieth Anniversary of Ordination

An event, unique in the history of Christ Church, parish of St. Andrews, was very delightfully celebrated on Saturday evening last, June 27th, when the congregation invaded the Rectory in response to a very cordial invitation from the Rev. Rural Dean and Mrs. Windsor to a reception in commemoration of the former's Ordination to the Ministry of the Church. On St. Peter's Day, June 29th, 1881, Mr. Windsor was ordained in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, England, and his "At Home" marked the Golden Jubilee of his taking Holy Orders.

Many difficulties and responsibilities can be faced in a period of fifty years, and we feel sure that our Rector met them all with true British courage and the cheerful optimism that comes from an abiding faith.

The hours passed very quickly and happily, for a welcoming hospitality is the keynote of this Rectory. Mrs. Bezanon, President of the W.A. was responsible for a very pleasing programme, in which Mrs. Fred Robertson, Mrs. Bezanon, Mrs. Gilbertson, Mrs. Macaskill, Mr. Shirley Simpson and Miss Yarker took part, with Mrs. Sheppard as a most efficient and untiring accompanist. Dr. Geoffrey Simpson playing for his brother.

On behalf of the congregation and Church Wardens, Mr. Fraser, a former warden, in a very happy manner presented the Rector with a purse of gold, expressive of goodwill and esteem and carrying a wealth of good wishes for the coming years. The rector responded feelingly and gratefully, touching upon the serious aspect of his long service in our beloved Church in a way to make one realize how truly he has loved the work, and how near to his heart is the spiritual welfare of the people committed to his charge. He also read a very charming letter from the Bishop, congratulating him on holding this record celebration, saying it had always been his own wish that he might be in active work until his Golden Jubilee. Had he known in time, his lordship would have been delighted to come up for this eventful evening, but his engagements are made for weeks ahead.

The Rural Dean then extended very warm thanks from Mrs. Windsor and himself for all the kindness and encouragement, evidenced by such a good turnout of our members. Among the guests present were Rev. J. A. Lackey, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Ballantyne, Rev. J. and Mrs. Macaskill, Miss Mary Macaskill, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hall, Miss May Windsor and Mr. Walter Windsor.

Brownsburg Presbyterians have Successful Social

Ideal weather greeted the Presbyterians of Brownsburg, on Tuesday last for their ice cream social held on the beautiful grounds of Mr. J. Connelly, which were very prettily decorated for the occasion. The usual generous helping of ice cream and cake were served to those present, after which a splendid programme of high order was enjoyed, given by local talent. The chairman, Rev. H. Cousens, expressed his pleasure at so fine a support given the ladies of his church, and also thanked the contributors of the programme for their generous help. Splendid music was rendered by the Brownsburg orchestra, and the Rev. Hagar of the United Church, Brownsburg said a few words expressing his pleasure at being present at the social. "God Save the King" was played by the orchestra, joined by a hearty chorus which marked the closing of so fine an evening.

STICKING TO BUSINESS

One of the lessons which business men have learned as a result of the experience of the past years is that no business will run itself. We think Henry Ford was about right when he said the other day that one of the principal causes of the business slump was that too many men made speculating their business and left the management of their real businesses to their employees.

We have never seen a business yet that would run on for any considerable length of time without the personal attention of the man or men whose money is invested in it. The boss can take a vacation for a while, when things are running smoothly, and his business will go ahead on momentum till competition gets too strong, or collections begin to fall off. But whether it is a big automobile business like Henry Ford's, or an ordinary country store, the only person who can make the decisions which have to be made in a crisis is the boss himself. If he leaves that function to others he is heading for trouble.

We know of many business men who thought that because they had got a business well established and earning a good income they could treat it as a gold mine, continuing to take money out without putting any effort or thought in. We know a man who tried to run a newspaper that way once. He is not in the newspaper business any more.

The only people who have any right to speculate, as we see it are the ones upon whose intelligence, and business experience nobody is dependent. A man who hasn't anything to lose can afford to take a chance. The man who has retired from business and is living on the income of his invested capital can do as he pleases with it. But the man who is responsible for running a business upon which the prosperity of his community depends has no more right to divert his energies into speculative channels than has the head of a bank to use the depositor's money to gamble with.

A Great Canadian Hydro Development and Customer Ownership.

Canada to-day is electrically minded, though in most part she is only sub-consciously, for while it is not given to every person to realize the magnitude of her water powers, and the tremendous strides made in their development, there is not a Canadian family but that is directly benefitting from the results. In most cases the benefits of electricity have become so much a part of the common life as to pass notice—unless there happens to be a breakdown in the supply of the current, which is but seldom. This almost continuous supply of electricity to the household, the store, the street, the factory, the mine and the farm, has been made possible only by the intelligent use of vast amounts of capital, managerial ability and engineering skill. It is questionable if there is any other industry in which these three essentials have been utilized so constructively in the public interest as in hydro development. It is the one industry above all others in which economic vision and public service go together, the one being a counterpart of the other. And so vast in itself has the hydro-electric industry become that over 6,000,000 H.P. has been developed in all parts of the Dominion, involving a capital outlay of upwards of $1,200,000,000.

Such a magnificent development of the country's water powers is the best evidence of the faith that those responsible for it have in Canada's future; for be it understood that until there is a use for the power developed the capital invested is not earning a cent. Yet on the whole so sound has been the judgment of the men behind the various hydro-projects in anticipating demands that in no case have industries failed to follow the completion of a development—industries which otherwise would never have been established. In addition to the encouragement of industries hydro electricity has been the great incentive to the opening up of the resources of the country. Low grade ores have been made to yield many millions of dollars in dividends, lumbering and farming have been made easier by the application of electric appliances. In short hydro electricity has revolutionized industry of all kinds to such an extent that Canada as a producer is in a position to compete with the world.

And this is only the beginning, for Canada has a potential power development of upwards of 43,000,000 H.P., and taking it for granted that the men behind the present developments are more than willing to go on developing power as the opportunity presents itself, it is reasonable to assume that this country will in time become the biggest producer in the aggregate as it is today the biggest producer per capita.

The largest, and in many respects the greatest single hydro-electric unit in the world is, of course, that of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission which distributes about 1,500,000 H.P. This publicly owned enterprise has been for many years the subject of a great deal of discussion. Its supporters consider it a great example of successful public ownership; its opponents have been outspoken in their criticism.

But what of the other provinces, most of which are equally as well served by their hydro developments as Ontario? And the answer is private ownership plus customer ownership. And as this ownership implies 4,500,000 H.P. held by hundreds of thousands of Canadian citizens it is quite easy to see that the importance of the hydro-electric industry is appreciated by a large body of men and women other than those primarily responsible for the different developments.

This customer ownership movement, which in every sense of the term is a co-operative movement, was started in Canada some nine years ago by the Southern Canada Power Company whose operations cover the Eastern Townships of the Province of Quebec. Out of 27,000 customers served by this hydro corporation even 6500 are shareholders, so that its slogan "owned by those it serves" is no idle boast. The Southern Canada is one of the affiliated companies of the Power Corporation of Canada, which corporation is rapidly introducing the system into all the electric companies it controls or is affiliated with. Up to the present moment 34,000 customers, or 17 1/2% of the total number, have become shareholders of one or another of the affiliated companies of the Power Corporation. As their names and titles would indicate these companies are spread throughout central and western Canada—the B.C. Power Corporation, Northern B. C. Power Company and East Kootenay Power Company, all in British Columbia; the Northwestern Power Company, Manitoba Power Company and Winnipeg Electric Company, in Manitoba; the Northern Ontario Power Company, in Ontario; Canada Northern Power Corporation, in Ontario and Quebec; the Northern Quebec Power Company and Southern Canada Power Company in Quebec. In addition to its direct affiliations and control, the Power Corporation is associated with hydro developments in almost every province with which it is using its influence in favour of customer ownership; and there is every reason to anticipate that before very long the general average of customer shareholders of this many company organization will reach the high percentage of the Southern Canada Power Company. The excellent terms, both with regard to security and payment, on which the shares are sold to customers are an assurance of this. As a matter of fact the customer shareholder receives on his investment the lion's share of whatever profits are made certainly much more than those who put up the first capital. For instance, last year the Southern Canada Power Company on its assets amounting to $25,101,327 earned $1,182,700, after depreciation. This is a return of 4.71%. Now the shares which are sold to customers are 6% Cumulative Preferred Stock, so that while the actual return on the investment as a whole is less than 5% the customer shareholder is assured of at least 6% on his investment.

The great advantage of this co-operative policy is that it establishes a personal contact between the officials of the company and the customers, both having a direct responsibility in its success. It is the best stimulus to the building up of the social and economic life of the district, inasmuch as being part owners the customers will have a personal interest in seeing to it that the best possible electric service is given to the neighborhood. The co-operation system also has its advantages in stimulating the growth of industry. The Power Corporation's affiliated companies with their control of hydro installations of approximately one million horse power with a potentiality of another million horse power, are vitally interested in securing new industries to take up their power, and 34,000 part owners are an excellent assurance of their securing the needed industries. In this respect the Southern Canada Power Company has secured for the district it serves upwards of forty-three new industries, and equal success has net the efforts of the Power Corporation's other affiliated companies.

It has already been mentioned in this article that the hydro-electric industry is highly specialized. This is indicated in the Power Corporation which organization is divided into departments composed of experts in financing, engineering and management, whose activities are so co-ordinated as to assure the best results. At the present moment the organization is engaged, either as designers or consultants, on seven power developments, which when completed will have an aggregate capacity of 500,000 H.P.

According to those in a position to know, the hydro industry is still in its infancy, and that it must double its present capacity of 6,000,000 H.P. to meet the demands for electric energy ten years hence. The question is should the new developments be private or public owned? To my mind they should be private owned on the customer owner principle, such as is being put into practice by the Power Corporation of Canada and its subsidiary companies. Under this system the communities are adequately served without a dollar of public expenditure being incurred, while the citizens as users have an opportunity to become part owners of their local development, which because it is efficiently managed assures them of a fair return on their investment.

IF MONEY WERE ALL

If money were all, what a world this would be,
No love for a sunbeam, a flower or a tree;
No friendship no worship, no love to bestow,
And money, the only real God that we know.

If money were all, little money we'd show
To saint or to sinner, wherever we'd go;
No kindness to those who have fallen a prey
To dire misfortune and suffer each day.

If money were all, we'd scheme and we'd plan,
We'd wring the last penny from our fellow man;
Then the old and the blind would never have care,
No hospital bed would be waiting, somewhere.

If money were all, no sweet faces would shine
In parks and in playgrounds; no roses would twine
Around the front porch, or back garden wall
To greet us at sunset, if money were all.

If money were all, that real shrine, we call home
Would never be built, we would travel or roam;
would not greet,
The prattle of babies our ears
But only the racket on some busy street.

A husband and wife, with a fine manly boy,
A girl with affections, that we can enjoy,
The perfume of lilies that stand in the hall,
A home filled with loved ones, no, money's not all.

If we look down then our shoulders stoop. If our thoughts look down our character bends. It is only when we hold our heads up that the body becomes erect. It is only when our thoughts go up that our life becomes erect.

AN UPHILL ROAD

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're treading seems all up hill
When the funds are low and the debts are high,
And you want to smile, but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest, if you must—but don't you quit.

Here and There

Feeding tobacco to sheep is the latest device to check internal parasites. The tobacco is given with salt in the proportion of ten pounds of salt to one of crushed tobacco leaf.

Latest available estimates place Canada's forest resources at 224,304 million cubic feet of standing timber, capable of yielding 424,637 million feet board measure of sawn lumber and 1,121,993 thousand cords of pulpwood, ties, poles and other smaller materials.

Western Canadians are showing resolution coupled with a high degree of industry, was the comment made by Grant Hall, vice-president, Canadian Pacific Railway, on his return from a recent tour of the company's western lines.

Trail riding in the Canadian Rockies has made a strong appeal to Lord Duncannon, son of His Excellency the Governor-General, who with the Hon. Arthur Ponsonby and Major Dollan have been staying at the Banff Springs Hotel.

Intensive campaigns against grasshoppers, wireworms, wheat stem sawfly, cutworm, potato beetle, cabbage butterfly, root maggots are being conducted throughout the west this summer and fall with a special organization in the field.

"Buyers' Week," which has been a great success in the past, will be held for the fourth time in Montreal commencing August 10 next. At the last one in February upwards of 1,100 buyers came to Montreal and purchased in round figures $950,000 worth of Canadian-made goods.

A man catching a fish is not news unless the fish is an outsize, but a fish catching a man rates a big type head. This happened at Lake Minnewanka, near Banff, recently when an angler was pulled off the pier into the lake by the sudden strike of a monster trout. Constable James of Calgary put off in a boat and landed both fish and fisherman.

Six days, nine hours and eleven minutes was the time of the record run of the "Empress of Japan." 26,000-ton flagship of the Canadian Pacific fleet, on her last trip from Yokohama to Honolulu, while a double record was made when the same ship completed the voyage from Honolulu to Victoria in four days, nine hours and 16 minutes.

For the second time in the past three years, Canadian Pacific Railway police are all-Canada revolver champions. The railway's Ontario team defeated Royal Canadian Mounted Police, of Lethbridge, in the finals for the trophy recently. The railway police scored 1410 out of a possible 1500 against the Mounties 1352 thus becoming Dominion Open Revolver Police Champions.

Hon. Gordon S. Harrington, Premier of Nova Scotia, and two hundred of the province's leading citizens, gathered at Yarmouth June 16 for the opening of the Lakeside Inn, Canadian Pacific hotel. This hostelry is the third of a chain across Nova Scotia opened by the railway in the past few years, testifying to the faith in the tourist possibilities of the province held by the Canadian Pacific. The Way of Life!

By Bruce Barton

Have You Seen a Miracle?

Here is an important distinction that many people overlook. God made the world; but He does not make your world.

He provides the raw materials, and out of them every man selects what he wants and builds an individual world for himself.

The fool looks over the wealth of material provided, and selects a few plates of ham and eggs, a few pairs of trousers, a few dollar bills—and is satisfied.

The wise man builds his world out of wonderful sunsets, and thrilling experiences, and the song of the stars and romances and miracles.

Nothing wonderful ever happens in the life of the fool.

An electric light is simply an electric light; a telephone is only a telephone—nothing unusual at all.

But the wise man never ceases to wonder how a tiny speck of seed, apparently dead and buried, can produce a beautiful yellow flower. He never lifts a receiver or switches on an electric light without a certain feeling of awe.

And think what a miracle it is, this harnessing of electricity to the service of man!

Who, unless his sense of awe had grown blunt through constant familiarity, would believe it?

The sun, the center of our universe, goes down behind the western horizon. I touch a button, and presto! I have called it back—the room is flooded anew with light.

The thunder that men once called the voice of God rolls out its mighty waves of sound and the sound carrier only a few score miles. But I—puny speck upon the face of the earth—I lift a little instrument; and, behold, my whisper is heard a thousand miles away.

Do we want heat? We press and lo, heat invisible, silent, all-pervasive, flows into our home over a copper wire.

Do we need power? We have but to press another switch, and giants come over the same slender roadway. Clothed in invisible garments, they clean our garments, they clean our homes wash our clothes, crank our automobiles—do everything that once taxed the strength of men of men and hurried women into unlovely old age.

Don't let your life become a prosaic affair; don't let familiarity with the marvels about you breed thoughtlessness and contempt.

If you had stood with Moses on the shore of the Red Sea, and had seen it divide to let the Children of Israel pass over, you would have had no difficulty in recognizing that as a miracle.

But every night as the sun goes down, a man stands in the power house in your city and throws a switch, and instantly the city and the country miles around are flooded with sunshine.

And you say to yourself casually: "Oh, I see the lights are on."

LAKEFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. Miles Copeland have moved into their new home.

Miss Mildred Sherritt has returned from a lengthy visit to her relatives in Boston.

Mr. Gordon Arnott and Mr. L. Legg have made a small sandy beach on the Rosemount shore, which will be greatly appreciated by the tiny folk.

Summer life is now in full swing and the tenants of the many summer cottages and bungalows are making a great difference to the life of the district.

We extend our heartiest welcome to Mr. Herbert McDonald and his charming bride, who have rented the pretty Copeland place and are settling in our village.

The demolition of the old Methodist Church, while it removes a revered landmark of our settlement; still owing to its ruinous condition, will make for a neater aspect to the place.

A goodly share of tourist and community travelling took place over the holiday of Dominion Day and in spite of the extraordinary heat a good deal of relaxation was enjoyed.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

The St. Andrews East Reading Circle held the last meeting of the season at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pitcairn on June 25th. The guest and speaker for the occasion was Rev. Henry Cousens of Lachute Presbyterian Church. His subject, "The Education of the Child" was dealt with most earnestly. He stressed the importance of having teachers of fine character as well as fine intellects—even if we have to pay higher salaries to obtain them. A child needs the training of his mind, feelings and manners in order to develop a wholesome, right personality. School buildings and text-books and equipment have improved in the rural districts but in some places there are not enough well selected, well trained teachers.

The first meeting of the Reading Circle in the Autumn will be held on Sept. 24th., the subject chosen being "Newspapers". Each member is asked to bring an item, original, or otherwise dealing with the subject.

THE LATE R. HODGE

The death occurred suddenly in Dorval, Que., on Saturday evening, June 27th., of Richard Hodge. He was born in Valleyfield, Que., April 25th., 1853, the son of William Hodge and Agnes Dicey, and came to Lachute at an early age, where he spent most of his life. On the 12th. of November, 1885, he was married to Lizzie Strong, of Lachute. Up to three years ago Mr. Hodge enjoyed perfect health but at that time he was stricken by paralysis, which made him incapable of participating in the more strenuous activities of life, although recovering sufficiently to enjoy a comfortable and happy life until his death. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, five daughters and two sons. The funeral service was held on Tuesday, June 30th., at his summer home Dorval, Que. Rev. T. W. Jones M.A., B.D., of Calgary United Church, Montreal, assisted by Rev. D. Mick, of Summerlea, Que., conducted the funeral services at Dorval and at Lachute, where the remains were interred in the Brownsburg cemetery.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mrs. L. H. Cairns, of Sawyer-ville, is visiting her son, Mr. W. H. Cairns, for a few weeks.

There was an unusually large attendance of parents and friends at the closing exercises of the Consolidated School on Wednesday afternoon. A program by the scholars included the recitation "Lil Batisse" by Miss Janet Watson, a duet by Dorothy Weir and Mary Starnes and a dialogue by Eileen Morrison, Janet Watson, Margaret Hamilton and Dorothy Weir. A class prophecy was read by Miss Grace Wales telling what is to befall the graduate of the class of 1931 in the future. If there is no hitch in the happenings that seem to have been arranged this will be a very interesting little burg to live in during the next few years. After talks by several of the visitors the prizes were given by the teachers.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Wales and their four daughters are taking a motor trip to the Lake Memphremagog county and Miss Jeanette will remain for a couple of weeks at the C. G. I.T. camp.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Calder are congratulated on the arrival of a son.

Rev. J. R. Heyworth preached in the United Church on Sunday evening, and is expected to conduct the evening services through the summer months.

Miss Gladys Hyde is spending her summer holidays at her home here.

Among girls at home from outside schools and colleges are Misses Margaret Taylor, Florence Thompson, Kathleen and Ruth Bradley, Hazel Brown, B. Woods and E. Wales.

The St. Andrews Golf Links are becoming quite popular with sixty or more players a day. We boast one of the most attractive golf courses in Canada.

The Fellowship Circle had an outing at Col. Hooker's Camp on the Bay last Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Aime MacKay and Miss MacKay are visiting Mrs. De la Ronde.

The fiftieth anniversary of the ordination of the Rev. Dean Windsor, in St. Paul's Cathedral London, was celebrated at the Rectory Saturday evening, June 27th. We congratulate him on this long service in a great work and wish him yet many happy years in our midst.

Rowena Rides the Rumble

Second Instalment

Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation wide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon. They are waiting for Bobby to show up to make the start.

Peter himself showed up to good advantage.

From ten until eleven o'clock the photographers snapped and the reporters took notes. First Rowena sat at the wheel, then Peter, then the two together each bravely trying to conceal the worm of fear that gnawed at the core of his being—fear that the chaperon had changed her mind and would not come. Eleven o'clock—eleven thirty. The reporters were getting restive. Mr. Rack had his watch in his hand and Mr. Ruff was talking business off at one side of the room.

A taxicab pulled up at the side entrance and a little brown mouse of a girl slipped out and crept timidly in through the rear door and sidled up to the cashier's cage. She had to stand on tiptoe to be seen from within.

"Where will I find Miss Ros-tand?" she asked and her voice was a rippling low whisper.

"What name, please? Are you from one of the papers?" asked the cashier briskly.

"No. I'm Miss Lowell—Roberta Lowell. I—I am the chaperon for the motor tour," explained the little brown mouse with a roll of brown eyes and a display of deep dimples.

"Oh, Mr. Rack," called the cashier, "here's the chaperon." The little brown mouse looked ready to sink into the floor in shy confusion as the tide of photographers, reporters, automobile executives and salesmen—and Rowena and Peter, you may be sure—surged swiftly toward her.

"The chaperon!" ejaculated Mr. Rack.

"The chaperon?" echoed Mr. Ruff.

She had told Rowena she was twenty-three years old, but standing timidly as she did at barely five feet two, with little brown curls framing her dimpled brown face, she did not at first glance bear testimony to such weight of years. Her small hands fluttered nervously with gloves and chain. Her big brown eyes gazed out, appalled and appealing, at the crowd that surged her way.

"Are—are you Roberta Lowell?" gasped Rowena.

"No wonder they call you Bobby," said Peter.

Rowena rallied first. "Never mind, never mind!" she announced with a quick assumption of severity. "This is Bobby and I'm the chaperon."

A few minutes later, the Rackruff roadster swept into Broadway and turned south, and the cheers of the assembled witnesses rattled the plateglass windows of the show-rooms.

"You were right, Peter," confessed Rowena kindly, when they slowed for the first traffic light. "We should certainly have looked her over."

They were rolling steadily along the Jersey side of the river when Rowena and Peter had their first argument. Rowena considered the ideal plan for them to tear along at a high rate of speed, stopping for nothing until they reached the Rocky Mountains.

And Peter didn't agree with her. Peter's idea was to drive along at a fair speed. He said that if they tore furiously along over roads, good and bad, through boiling heat and chilling rain, they would reach a point of interest, tired, cross and worn out, hence unable to turn out the highclass work that Rackruff had a right to expect of them.

Rowena said that for her part she always worked best under pressure, that something in her responded strongly to hard driving and that she enjoyed working when she was breathless, almost panting with haste. Peter, in that annoyingly gentle, almost disinterestedly lazy voice of his, said he didn't; said he couldn't work at all unless he had a breathful of fresh air in his lungs and quiet comfort in his heart.

"And of course," said Rowena cuttingly, "we will do it your way. Naturally you think good pictures are the most important part of the whole business."

"Of course," said Peter simply.

Rowena was speechless with rage. She was glad she had always hated artists anyhow, it made hating Peter now so much more natural. He was telling himself that he was very glad Rowena was pretty. It would be pleasant painting her. He didn't care in the least about her disposition. This was a business trip.

It just goes to show the sort that Peter was that he never even suspected that Rowena was furious.

A sudden gulping sob close at hand startled him from his comfortable reverie. He looked sharply at Rowena, who sat rigidly erect and stony-faced beside him, blue eyes glittering ice cold.

"Are—are you crying?" he asked doubtfully.

"Me?—Most certainly not! I hope you don't think for a minute you could make me cry!" ejaculated Rowena.

Peter listened. It came again, low and unmistakable, the gulping sob of a weeping woman. They looked back over their shoulders. The little brown chaperon was slumped deep in the rumble seat, her head bowed low, small shoulders rising and falling with great sobs. Peter pulled to the side of the road and stopped the car, and both he and Rowena leaned back through the window.

"Why, what's the matter, darling?" asked Rowena solicitously. "Don't you feel well?" vigorously from side to side.

The small brown head shook. "I—I'm lonesome," confessed a sad small voice. "C-Carter—didn't come to see me off."

"C-Carter?" asked Rowena and Peter in chorus. "We're engaged. I thought surely he would come to see me off, and he didn't. I wish I hadn't come. I feel very badly. Maybe I'd better go back."

Stricken each with sudden fear that the chaperon might fall them—and they no farther west than the Hudson River—Rowena and Peter got hurriedly out and ran back to her, standing on either side while Rowena tenderly wiped the tear stained face with a wisp of handkerchief and Peter patted both small brown heads with great vigor.

"I wrote him a very formal note," Bobby went on, "and said good-by, and told him he would not need to bother taking me out places any more and sending me presents and flowers, for I was going on a long motor trip with some dear friends and would be gone a long time, and was starting on Monday morning at ten o'clock from the Rackruff showroom on Broadway, and of course I thought he would be there to see me off, and he wasn't."

Grief quite overcame her, and she would have slid clear off the rumble seat into the bottom of the car if Peter hadn't caught her firmly and drawn her back. "Don't you care, darling," said Rowena. "Men are all like that. They aren't worth crying about."

"You mustn't feel like that," said Peter gently. "He was probably so ashamed he could not bear to face you. That's the way I am. The more ashamed I feel the more—the more—"

"The more away you stay, I suppose," said Rowena coldly.

"Exactly," assented Peter. "But he knows how dangerous motor trips are," sobbed Bobby. "He knows I'm likely to be killed any minute, or at least maimed for life."

"All alike," repeated Rowena grimly. "That's probably why he didn't come," said Peter comfortingly. "He realized that at thought of you going away into such terrible danger he would lose his self-control and break down before all those people. And then think how he'd feel."

Bobby thought of it. "But Carter's not like that," she said. "I don't believe he'd break down. He's not at all the breaking-down kind of man. He's got red hair—"

"Well, he might pretend he broke down," insisted Peter. "All pretense, every one of them," declared Rowena sweepingly.

"It's terribly lonesome, going off on such a long trip without having Carter there to be ashamed of himself and feel sorry," said Bobby.

"I tell you what, darling," suggested Rowena brightly. "You come around here and sit with Peter and let him cheer you up. He's very good company. It's too lonesome for you back there alone."

"But you said I had to sit in the rumble seat!"

"Well, I've changed my mind. You see, I thought then that Peter and I would want to talk business and discuss our plans, and I never dreamed that every time I made a suggestion it would just lead to a bitter argument."

"Why, I didn't argue with you," protested Peter. "I'd much rather sit in the rumble seat where I can think my thoughts in peace and not have my most innocent ideas contradicted before they are out of my mouth," continued Rowena.

"Why, I wasn't contradicting you," protested Peter.

But Rowena insisted, so Peter helped Bobby gently out of the rumble seat and was just turning to give Rowena a hand when he saw that she was already in, sitting very erect, chin high and eyes extremely blue. So he got in behind the wheel and they started off again.

Rowena settled back in the rumble seat with a malicious little grin. After listening to Bobby's chatter about Carter for an hour, she leaned forward.

"Do you mind if I close this window?" she asked sweetly. "I'm trying to think out the plot to a story and I must have perfect silence to decide whether I want to have Bobby's Carter commit the murder or be committed."

From that moment the rumble seat was Rowena's own.

She seemed to take a morbid pleasure in providing comfort for her privacy, and often smiled to herself in complacent and not unmalicious satisfaction when she heard the steady soft roll of Bobby's voice regaling Peter with vivid accounts about Carter and their last quarrel which caused her to apply for the trip.

Peter was in possession of a complete biography of Carter long before they reached Buffalo, where they were to pay their first official visit to the Rackruff showrooms, and where he was to make his first picture of the roadster and Rowena.

For all the seclusion of the rumble seat, Rowena was able to break in on Bobby's love-affair long enough to voice her disagreement with Peter's plans when she wanted to, which was pretty often. It went without saying that they did not agree about the financial management of the trip. Rackruff Motors, Inc., had agreed to pay all expenses for the car en route, and had allowed Peter and Rowena a joint salary of one hundred dollars a week—an expense allowance, it was really.

Peter's idea of the way to carry on was obviously the simplest and most natural. He said he would pay expenses for both of them and then divide equally with Rowena whatever was left of the hundred dollars at the end of each week. Rowena said it wouldn't do. In the end, Peter agreed to divide each week's allowance with her immediately upon its receipt every Monday morning each thereafter paying his own bills, bearing his own responsibility and saving what he

Women's Institute at Macdonald College

I wish I could pass on to all the readers of the Watchman the good things we delegates enjoyed.

It was inspiring to listen to the members of the Dominion Official Board and learn of the extent of the work done to make the people of the rural districts contented and happy and we felt that though mountain and hill, forest and lakes and rivers separated us that there was a comradeship of purpose and helpfulness that bound us together for Dominion service.

We heard of conditions in every province, but one might say were we down-hearted? Never but ready and glad to carry on with the end in view of making us one in aim, and so we felt that

Blest is the tie that binds
Our hearts in mutual love,
The fellowship of kindred minds

FLOWER MISSION

Say it with flowers to the living,
Not with flowers to the dead,
Why should you lavish your giving,

On body when spirit has fled,
Say it with flowers to the living
The dead cannot feel your embrace,
Nor will all the tribute you render

Bring back a smile to the face.
But pass your flowers on to the living,
The lonely, the sick, and the sad,
And so lighten many that need them

To make their lives cheery and glad.

K. S. M.

I thank all those who sent flowers on Tuesday morning, and hope to have a generous supply next week and all the following weeks.

It would seem to be wise to divide the town into three parts for the purpose. One collector for the East End, one for Centre Ward, and one for the West could from the amount.

Even before they reached Buffalo he realized it would have been money in his pocket to have stuck to his original idea. Certainly it was no great drain on the expense account buying food for Rowena. While motoring in the fresh air made both him and Bobby ravenously hungry, so that they wished to eat often, fully and expensively it seemed to have no effect whatever upon Rowena, who ate so rarely and so little that Bobby accused her of trying to reduce.

"Well," smiled Peter good-naturedly, "if you carry on like this for the next three months you will get rich off your share of the expense account."

Continued Next Week

Is like to that above.

The banquet that concluded the sessions was most enjoyable the speeches in response to the toasts were witty and wise and each province represented had a grand boost, each one being with the other to give a verbal view of the delights that could be available to those favoured enough to live in such havens of abundance.

Handicrafts had a great boost in the speech of Mr. Berian, who informed the audience that there was available facilities for learning for the Quebec Government employe expects in an established school to teach all branches of handicrafts, this rendering the making of a home beautiful at small expense and at the same time providing a market for the work of women and children.

K. S. Massiah.

End.

If the children would take up some of the work they would find it very interesting and it need not be tiresome if they and the grown people with cars would each take a Tuesday so dividing up, and all doing something to cheer the people who in these hard times need our help and sympathy.

I often think of a verse I learned in Sunday School when I was about six years old.

"He went about, He was so kind
He healed the sick, the lame, the blind."

If you could see the faces of those who receive the flowers, the very short time spent to you would feel well rewarded for bringing joy into life, and like the boomerang it comes back to one The true joy of life is service.

We respectfully direct the attention of our personal creditors to a proposal recently made by Herbert Hoover with reference to debt settlements.

While we are talking of sick businesses, look at the tongue of the pulp and paper industry. What does it tell? It tells of a once perfectly good business. They used to float logs, soak them, and grind them into pulp. Then some wizards came along and instead of floating logs they floated companies, soaked them in water and ground them into pulp, too. The trouble is that we can't leave a good thing alone. We overdo everything. What's not overdone is rare. And if we ever get over this, will we do it again? Sure we will. That's big business.

Sir Henry Thornton missed an excellent chance when his parliamentary critics were questioning him about his non paying hotels. "How about your own parliamentary restaurant? he might have asked.

It is heresy to utter one word against government ownership but it can be more easily included in the creed if and when the parliament of Canada, given free light and fuel and freedom from rent and taxes, is able to show that it can run a restaurant and show a profit.

There is an agitation for a retrial of the case of Mr. Aemilius Jarvis who was fined half-a-million dollars on account of certain bond transactions for the Ontario government. At the time the transactions took place we can recall that other brokers were either sore or sorry that they were not getting a slice of the business.

An important precedent has been established at Ottawa, viz, that it is not improper or impertinent, for an employer to inquire what wages he pays his hired help. Under the decision, the hired men are obliged to tell the boss what wages they are drawing. The ruling is considered drastic by some while others hail it as a distinct advance in our economic development.

Railway companies went into the hotel business originally for the purpose of attracting passenger traffic to their roads. They continued building after that object had lost much of its force. Now they have huge hotels built at enormous cost and most of them will never pay a cent of interest upon the capital investment while others will require to have their annual deficits met from the parent source. Generally it is easy to be wise after the event, but here is a case where it was simple to be wise before. There is also to be considered the damage to existing hotels whose shareholders will draw no dividends and may have to sacrifice their principal investment.

Dr. P. D. Ross, editor of the Ottawa Journal, has written the story of his life. Haven't seen it yet, and wonder whether he tells of the narrow escape he had once while he was sporting editor of the old Toronto Mail. He got into a dispute with a stranger who had called at his office to discuss a sporting event. One angry word led to another and P. D. ordered him out and threatened to kick him downstairs. The stranger smiled and withdrew. That night, the editor went to see a prize fight and discovered that his visitor was a contender in the main bout. He was the champion of the United States!

Had it not been for the practical knowledge of Mr. William Blakley, of the Gatineau Power Company, young Roland Lemay would not be relating the experiences of his narrow escape. It appears that Blakley and Bob Miller were sitting on the bank at the bathing place at White's Bridge when a cry of alarm was sounded and young Roland had gone down for the third time. When brought to shore by Mr. Horsey and Mr. Miller the young fellow was pretty well through but Dr. Mason was notified and Blakley worked over the body for considerable time with the satisfaction of bringing him round and today, he appears none the worse for his close call.

"Sunbeams" enjoy outing.

On Saturday, June 27th., a band of happy children of the Sunbeam Mission Band enjoyed their annual picnic, when early in the afternoon five cars loaded with jolly young passengers and their escorts drove to Lake Louisa and had a wonderful time swimming, exploring and breathing in the ozone of the fresh breezes that stirred the languid atmosphere of the horrid summer weather. About five o'clock youthful appetites could hold out no longer and everyone sat down to a sumptuous repast of the usual variety of sandwiches, cake and delectable cooking, the preparation of generous mothers and the donations of considerate friends. Mrs. James G. Thompson, their leader, expressed herself as being pleased and satisfied with the success of the day & wishes to thank those who so kindly loaned their cars for the afternoon.

The world is moving at a faster pace than ever before. A few years ago thirty-five miles an hour was considered high speed for automobiles. Four-wheel brakes and smooth roads make 75 miles a safe speed today and many cars can do 100 miles an hour or better.

The other day the fastest achieved by the new German speed ever made on rails was air-propelled, "rail Zeppelin," Driven by gasoline motors which whirl an air propeller, the car made the 173 miles from Hamburg to Berlin at an average speed of 106 miles an hour, and for one stretch made over 143 miles an hour.

It is certain that travel at the rate of 100 miles an hour by any means of transportation will seem commonplace to the people of the next generation.

WHEN THE PLEASANT OUTDOORS BECKONS....

The Electric Range

Who wants to stay in doors watching a kitchen stove when there are so many things to do in the warm July sunshine? Haven't you often wished that your oven could cook by itself.

It can. That is, it can if you have an Electric Range. You simply set the controls—and operation about as complicated as setting an alarm clock. Then—the day is yours—to do with as you wish. Your cooking will be done to perfection, all ready to serve, when you get back. Could you wish for greater pleasure?

There are other features about Electric Cookery that you're sure to be interested in. Won't you come in and let us show you?

Rita plans her vacation in a hurry

Rita had to arrange her vacation trip in a hurry. A sudden turn of events at the office made it a matter of now or never... and Rita chose "now".

After seven o'clock that evening (when evening rates over Long Distance were in force) she called her old school chum Helen to ask her suggestion as to the best place to go.

"Wonderful", said the happy voice at the other end of the line after she had explained everything. "We are all going to Seabach for two weeks tomorrow. Now you will be able to come with us."

And so Rita spent the most enjoyable vacation she ever had, thanks to her call over Long Distance.

And the cost of that call was less than the tip she gave to the colored porter.

Evening rates on "Anyons" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. (local time). Just give "Long Distance" the number you want — it speeds up the service. If you don't know the distant number, "Information" will look it up for you.

My Kingdom for a Vitamin!

Perhaps if the famous poets had known about vitamins they would have written some of their poetry differently. For he who wrote, for instance, "A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!" or Marston who adapted this line to "A man! a man! My Kingdom for a man!" and "A fool! a fool! My cox-comb for a fool!" would surely have seen an opportunity to call similarly for one of the lately popularized vitamins.

Be that as it may, however,
the fact remains that recently
Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, of the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., made some sweeping statements in an article in the April issue of Everybody's Health, a publication of the Minnesota Public Health Association, that would have made even Shakespeare hesitate before offering too high a price for even the most recently impounded members of the species.

"It is a thoughtless or ignorant person", Dr. Alvarez wrote in part, "who would worry about the vitamin content of the diet. Everyone who eats sensibly has enough vitamins stored in his body to tide through a few weeks or even months of semi-starvation." Yet at almost the very same moment that the public was reading Dr. Alvarez's views, Prof. A. M. Pappenheimer, of Columbia University, and Dr. Marianne Goettsche, of the Storrs experimental station, Storrs, Conn., were telling the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, meeting in Montreal, that medical science is now on the trail of a new vitamin, on the ground of experiments conducted with more than 100 chickens! It really is difficult to see how a few generations ago people managed to get along at all without being consciously on intimate terms with even a single vitamin.

Dr. Alvarez referred to the entire matter as the "vitamin mania of the twentieth century" and virtually assured his readers that if a person eats a normal mixed diet, such as the ordinary individual is brought up to eat, the vitamins will look out for themselves. It would be difficult to find a more fitting conclusion to a discussion on this subject than a verse from a poem entitled, "A Little More Scotch," printed a few weeks ago in the column "Tonics and Sedatives," in the Journal of the American Medical Association. It reads:

Ye've told me a lot about Vitamin D An' hoo it is got frae squash an' the pea, Butgi'e me ma porridge alang till I dee,
An' poke a' th' vitamins intil yer e'e.

CLOUDS

By

Molly Bevan

The Blue Bell
Poetess

Deep in the meadow grass I lie,
Face upturned to the summer sky,
Watching the great cloud animals go,
Lazily, clumsily, to and fro;
Or the chiselling wind, for pure delight,
Fashioning castles of marble white,
Haunting faces, and angel wings,
Unbelievable, transient things;
Changing to windy wisps of lace
Veiling the evening's lovely face.
This when sunlight rules the day;
But I climb a hill when the skies are gray,
To see the clouds like old sails flapping,
Wild and ragged and overlapping;
Eager, wind-worried clouds of quest,
Hastening on to the distant west,
Storm-staunch ships on a mistymain Cargoed with shimmering strands of rain.

The Measure of a Man

Not—
"How did he die?"
But—
"How did he live?"
Not—
"What did he gain?"
But—
"What did he give?"
These are the units
To measure the worth
Of a man, as a man,
Regardless of birth.

Not—
"What was his station?"
But—
"Had he a heart?"
And
"How did he play his God given part?"
Was he ever ready
With a word of good cheer
To back a smile,
To banish a tear?

Not—
"What was his church?"
Nor—
"What was his creed?"
But—
"Had he befriended
Those really in need?"
Not—
"What did the sketch in the newspapers say?"
But—
"How many were sorry
When he passed away?"
— "Slim"

Motorist Burns to Death under Wrecked Machine

The many friends of Mrs. C. Hartson formerly Miss Whilme-nia Shaw of Lachute, will sympathize with her in the tragic death of her husband which occurred at Caughnawaga early on Saturday morning last.

The accident that cost Hartson his life occurred shortly before seven o'clock on Saturday morning when his automobile swerved to avoid a collision with another and ran into a telegraph pole and the gasoline tank exploded and set fire to the vehicle.

Witnesses of the accident told Chief Jock, of Caughnawaga that they had seen the boy pitched out of the automobile and that they heard him shout to save the man inside. In the intense excitement they failed to notice what had become of the boy.

The automobile was coming to Montreal, Hartson being a friend of the boy's parents and he was bringing the boy to spend the week-end with his relatives.
They had been driving all night
Hartson often coming to Montreal on such trips and generally travelling at night. He was passing another auto and was so close that it was feared there would be a collision. Hartson swerved and his car ran into a pole. The auto overturned and the driver was pinned under neath while the boy was pitched out.

RECOVERING BODY

When the police arrived on the scene, the automobile was still a mass of flames. Chief Jocks and volunteers threw earth on the fire, but it was an hour before they were able to search the debris. They found the driver, his legs and lower part of his body badly burned, but his face and head almost intact.

The body was moved to the mortuary and report was made about the missing boy, who it was presumed to be the victim's son. The name of the unfortunate driver was learned from the license card he carried in his pocket, though business cards bearing another name left the matter in doubt for some time. There was also found in the debris an unopened package addressed to Hartson.

The Syracuse police were requested by telegram to aid in finding the relatives of the victim, but in the meantime the boy had been turned over to the Montreal police. They learned from him that his name was Howard Chase; that he was 12 years of age; that he lived in Syracuse; that Hartson, the victim whose name he knew, was a friend of his father and mother, who had gone for a trip to Detroit; that he was coming to Montreal with Hartson to spend a week-end with relatives in Outrement.

A detective was sent to the address with the boy where it was found that the story was correct. He was unable to give any details of the accident because, he said he was asleep at the time, but he thought that Hartson, who had driven all the way at night, was tired and sleepy and that this accounted for his ill-fated move in swerving.

The funeral took place on Tuesday from his sister-in-law's residence Mrs. Geo. McIntosh, Montreal. Interment will be made in Oneida, New York, Cemetery.

Here's why it lasts longer

THE NORTHERN ELECTRIC-ABC
WASHER is bound to give you long years of satisfactory service, because the vital driving machinery is built to reduce friction
... the cause of wearing-out ... to a very minimum.

Enclosed down under the tub is this marvellously quiet, power-saving mechanism. Anti-friction metals are used for moving parts; the gear-teeth slide smoothly together with precise accuracy; and the lubrication is so excellent that it needs attention only once in three years. This friction-free action means cheaper operation as well as less wear ... and, hence, longer life for the ABC.

Northern Electric has remarkable technical facilities for testing even the unseen parts of the appliances which it sponsors. The ABC Washer has been subjected to the most rigorous tests in every respect before being awarded the Northern Electric "SEAL OF APPROVAL" which this made-in-Canada washer bears.

OBITUARIES

The Late Albert J. Titley.

After an illness of the past five years, Albert J. Titley passed away at his home in Thos. Gore, on Wednesday morning. Deceased was born in Lost River forty-two years ago, was the eldest son of Mr. John and the late Mrs. Titley. He afterwards moved with his parents to Dalesville. After his marriage to Miss Ada Morrow sixteen years ago, he purchased the farm of Wm. Murray of Thomas' Gore, where he has since made his home.

Besides his loving wife and aged father he leaves to mourn his loss four young sons, the eldest being 13 years, one brother Wilbur of Thos. Gore; two sisters Miss Louise Titley, of Montreal, and Mrs. Ed. Turney of Dalesville.

The funeral was held on Thursday in the Lachute Baptist Church, and was attended by a large number of friends and the Members of Laurentian Lodge, service being conducted by the Rev. A. Penman, assisted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough. Interment was made in Dalesville cemetery.

Sudden Death of E. J. Zimmer

The sudden death of Ernest J. Zimmer which occurred at his home in Brownsburg, at the age of 57 years, came as a great shock to his family and many friends. Deceased was born in London, England, and has been a resident of Brownsburg for over forty five years and a faithful employee of the Canadian industries for the past 12 years.

Besides his loving wife formerly Miss Elizabeth Redman, he leaves to mourn his loss three sons Herman and Theodore, of Brownsburg; and Ernest, of Montreal, and three daughters Lois, Mrs. Harold Mason; Iva-leen and Alfreda at home.

The funeral took place on Wednesday from his late residence conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, of Lachute United Church. The members of Laurentian Lodge, No. 14, I.O.O.F. of which he was a member for the past 28 years were in attendance.

The Late Mrs. Wm. Morrison.

The community of Arundel experienced a great loss in the passing away of Mrs. William Morrison, one of its oldest and most respected residents. Her death occurred at her home on Sunday, June 21st., 1931, after a brief illness of two weeks.

Mrs. Morrison formerly Jane Rathwell, was born in Shrewsbury, March 9th., 1853 and came to Arundel in 1877, when she married the late William Morrison. She was one of the first residents of this district and can rightly be called a pioneer. Being an industrious woman she was greatly devoted to her home and family, besides an ardent worker in the church of England.

Courage and patience helped her to overcome many hardships and trials and her cheerful disposition won her many friends.

Her wonderful health never failed her and even in her later years she retained that great faculty most remarkable in her life, of always seeing the bright side.

The funeral service was held on Tuesday afternoon, in Grace Church and was conducted by the rector, Rev. G. W. Phillips, in the presence of sorrowing friends and relatives of the community and many from a distance. The beautiful floral offerings were a token of the love and esteem in which the deceased was held.

She leaves to mourn her loss one daughter, Caroline and two sons Alfred and William; two sisters Mrs. Edward Morrison, of Shrewsbury; and Mrs. Tappan Egan, of Boston; one brother Samuel Rathwell, of Pasqua, Sask., also nine grand children.

The Late Mr. J. Moore, Sr.

The death occurred on Sunday morning, June 28th., 1931, at his home in Gray Valley, Que. of James Moore, Sr. He was born in Pine Hill, Que. on January 10th., 1845 and was in his 87th. year. He was one of the first settlers in this place taking up land when this country was all in bush about fifty years ago, and was married on August 3rd. 1881 to Miss Rachel McNaughton who still survives, he also leaves two sons and one daughter, James, George and Rachel of Gray Valley, one son Joseph having predeceased him about three years ago. Although failing in health for the last few months he was only confined to his bed for two weeks, when he passed away quietly on Sunday morning. Deceased also leaves three brothers Joseph of Hamilton, Ont., George of Branch, Mich., Henry, of Nahma, Mich., and three sisters Miss A. L. Moore of Lachute, Que., Mrs. W. McFaul of California, and Mrs. J. Riddle of Arundel, Que. The funeral service was held in the Standard Church, and was conducted by the Rev. T. Connell who preached a very impressive sermon from the text "Therefore be ye also ready" Matthew 24. 44. The funeral was largely attended to pay their last respect to one who was well known and the many floral offerings also signified a showing of respect to the departed.

The Late William Hay

Argenteuil has been losing many of its old and most respected citizens of late, not the least of whom is Mr. William Hay, whose death occurred at his home in Chatham, on Saturday last, July 4th., at the age of 71 years.

Deceased was the eldest son of the late John Hay and first saw the light of day on the old homestead on the Brownsburg Road. In the year 1887 he married Elizabeth Clunie, their family comprising six sons and one daughter. Jack being at Kamloops; George and Kenneth at Vancouver B. C., William at Lethbridge, Angus at Cranbrook, and James on the homestead, & Mrs. Earle Patterson of Calgary, Alta. He also leaves his beloved wife and brothers George and James, of Lachute, his brother John, (who for many years represented this constituency as Provincial Member) having died about five years ago.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon and was one of the largest that this county has witnessed for Mr. Hay was well known and had taken an active part in agriculture, having been a past president of the Agricultural Society. Four of his sons are now in good positions, having graduated with honors from Macdonald College.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Cousens, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of which he was an honored member, being assisted by F. MacKenzie, Principal of the Presbyterian College, Montreal. Interment was made in Lachute Cemetery where the remains were followed to their last resting place, by a large gathering of sympathizing friends.

ANTIQUES

The craze for "antiques" has reached the point where almost any piece of furniture that was made before 1890 can be sold at a fancy price to somebody. There are not enough "colonial" pieces to go around, so the latest craze is for "Victorian" antiques.

In a New England shop the other day I saw kerosene lamps, china dogs, walnut "what-nots" and hair-cloth-covered chairs and sofas, which might have come out of my grandmother's parlor, marked at fancy prices as "antiques."

Alongside of them were a leather-seated cobbler's bench, a home-made boot-jack and a high-wheel bicycle. "We'll sell them all," said the dealer, confidently. "Most people haven't any taste. They'll buy anything that looks old."

BOOKS

It is a widespread belief that Americans generally read nothing but fiction.

As this is written, the most popular book in America is "The Education of a Princess," written by the former Grand Duchess Marie of Russia. The Grand Duchess, reared as a member of the imperial family of the Czar, married a Swedish prince from whom she was later divorced, and came to America to earn her living. She got employment in a fashionable dress establishment in Fifth Avenue, and wrote the story of her life which reveals the inner workings of the Czar's regime, at the suggestion of friends never dreaming that it would sell so many copies as to make her rich.

Actual personal experiences, if well told are far more interesting than the best fiction. The trouble is that few persons who have had interesting experiences can tell them interestingly.

GLIDERS

The nearest approach to flying the way a bird does is the glider plane, which is an airplane of special design without any engine. Once it gets off the ground it navigates on the air currents just the way the big soaring birds do, without moving their wings.

A Canadian, Lieut. Lisant Beardmore, was the first to fly across the English Channel in a glider, a few days ago. A German experimenter recently covered 162 miles in a single glider flight.

There is no likelihood of the glider displacing the engine plane, but every flight made in one increases airman's knowledge of air conditions and navigation and so tends to make flying safer.

FORGET IT

If you see a tall fellow ahead of the crowd,

A leader of music, marching fearless and proud,
And you know of a tale whose mere telling aloud
Would cause his proud head to in anguish be bowed,
It's a very good plan to forget it.

If you know of a skeleton hidden away,

In a closet, and guarded and kept from the day,
In the dark; whose showing, whose sudden display
Would cause grief and sorrow and lifelong dismay,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a spot in the life of a friend,
(We all have spots concealed world without end).

Whose touching his heart strings would play or rend,
Till the shame of its showing no grieving could mend;
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a thing that will darken the joy
Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy,

That will wipe out a smile, or the least way annoy
A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy,

RESTAURANTS ON WHEELS

Strange as it may seem, good housekeeping is one of the prime essentials of modern railroading. Mr. Traveller has become so used to strolling through the train to the dining car, for his needs in the way of food for himself, as well as for Mrs. Traveller and all the little Travellers, that he hardly gives a thought to how he gets a first class hotel meal, while whirling along at 60 miles an hour. The answer lies with about 1,200 highly trained employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway, serving in some 150 dining and cafe cars, from Atlantic to Pacific, and with an organization in stores and farms throughout the country, which places high class foodstuffs in the chefs' cupboards and refrigerators. The average number of meals served in a year is approximately 2,000,000. As to quantities, suffice to say that these include nearly 500,000 lbs. of various meats; 1,000,000 lbs. of tea and coffee and some 400,000 quarts of milk and cream. The pictures show meals being served in a typical C.P.R. diner and types of the staff of chefs and waiters employed in the service.

Asserts Canada Faces Crisis In Industrial Life

Opinions clashed once again in the House of Commons supply committee last night when discussion centered around the "creed" issued by the department of Trade and Commerce. Already the target of caustic criticism from Liberal benches the creed, constituting a declaration of belief in Canada and advocating the purchase of Canadian goods, was the center of a squall of some duration.

Premier R. B. Bennett warned the House that Canada was facing the greatest crisis of its industrial life.

The storm started when Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, was trying to put through a vote of $250,000 for advertising in his department. The estimate finally scraped through, but only Liberal members had condemned the creed on the ground that it was political propaganda paid out of the public purse, and Conservatives had strongly supported the sentiments expressed in this publication.

"Barefaced Pilfering."

"A barefaced pilfering of the public treasury for grossly partisan purposes," was the description of Thomas McMillan, Liberal member for South Huron, of the creed circulation.

Mr. Stevens informed the committee that the creed cost $7,000, while the whole advertising series of letters, etc., urging the purchase of Canadian goods published by the department had entailed an expenditure of approximately $92,000.

The circulation of thousands of copies of the creed in Canadian schools was advocated by G. B. Nicholson, Conservative member for East Algoma, who found it in an antidote to atheistic propaganda which he declared was being circulated.

Discussion of the vote gradually switched over to a debate on tariff principles. Here it was that Premier Bennett made the declaration that Canada is now faced with competition which menaces the industrial life of the Dominion.

"Today," he said, "the Canadian people are faced with the greatest crisis they have ever faced with respect to the whole structure of their industrial life."

Anti-dumping regulations had largely ceased to be effective because the fair market values in European countries had been destroyed. The Canadian people were menaced with the replacement of their industrial products by those from abroad. It was necessary, Mr. Bennett declared, to protect the Canadian industries if they were to survive.

Thomas Reid (Liberal, New Westminster) said 2 cartoons had been issued by Conservatives a few days before the last election date in connection with the five-cent piece and trade. The cartoons, Mr. Reid said, had been printed in the United States, the mats had been made in the United States on paper made in Germany.

MOVIES

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, of America, Inc., which is the organization of which Mr. Will H. Hays is president, takes exception to my statement in this column recently that "Two-Gun" Crowley admitted that he got the idea of being a "bad man" from the movies.

Whether he did or not, however, does not seem to me to affect my contention that children and persons of immature minds who see crime and criminals exploited in the films are much more seriously affected than they can possibly be from reading crime news in the newspapers. For one thing, the immature do not read newspapers outside of the big cities, whereas they go to the movies everywhere.

I have no animus against Mr. Hays or the motion picture industry as such, but I do maintain that in presenting life as it is in the films the movie magazines give youth a distorted impression of values and do immeasurable harm.

protecting the value

GENERAL MOTORS realizes that the investment in a motor car must be safeguarded by a reasonable assurance of continuous satisfactory performance. So General Motors issues to the buyer of every one of its cars a definite statement of the service to which he is entitled. This agreement—known as the Owner Service Policy—is an important part of the extra value that you obtain in the purchase of a General Motors car.

Typical of the eight provisions of this policy is the second, which states that for 90 days after delivery (provided the car has not been driven more than 4,000 miles) defective parts will be replaced by any authorized dealer in Canada or the United States without any charge to the owner for either material or labor. The value of such a clause is immediately apparent; for it is supported by the pledge of more than two thousand General Motors dealers and service stations in Canada who stand ready and willing to safeguard the extra value that has been built into your General Motors car.

Ask your General Motors dealer to show you how the provisions of the Owner Service Policy protect your motor car investment. And ask him, too, to explain how economically General Motors cars may be purchased through GMAC—low-cost time payment plan.

GENERAL MOTORS CARS HAVE OUTSTANDING VALUE

THIRD INSTALMENT

Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nationwide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes tearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

To his intense amazement Rowena flushed hotly and bit her lip in some confusion and most surprising of all, said nothing. Already Peter found it amazing when Rowena had nothing to say.

Certainly she had plenty to say at Niagara Falls when Peter prepared to do his picture of the Rackruff roadster, with her at the wheel, both showing faintly under a fine mist of falling water. When it came to doing pictures, Peter was unbearable. Carter himself could not have been more hatefully dictatorial. He told her what to wear, how to sit, how to rough her lips. He told her how to hold the wheel, which way to turn her head, just where to fluff her hair and where to draw it back.

"Oh, Peter," protested Rowena faintly. "Please don't do my profile. I'm terrible that way. My face is too thin for a side view."

"Oh, I'll fill it in for you," said Peter comfortably. "It shows up better in the car."

"Oh, the car, the car," muttered Rowena crossly. "It's all you think of."

"It's all I'm paid to advertise," said Peter cheerfully.

When he had finished the picture Rowena wrote a brief adjective story to go with it, and both were dispatched to Rackruff headquarters for immediate release. In addition to the motor story she wrote a short skit every day for use in the newspapers of different cities as they passed through.

At Rackruff headquarters in Chicago they received their first mail from home. There was a fat letter for Rowena, addressed in a big boyish scrawling hand. And there was one for Peter from the company with instructions for the tour and a check for the following week's expenses.

Bobby was thrilled with a huge package of telegrams, twenty in all, and every one from Carter. It seemed that every one of Carter's finer feelings was highly outraged, for each of the twenty telegrams ended with a stern command for her to come home at once.

Even in his wildest nightmares, he said in the telegrams, he had never conceived of a horror equal to that of seeing her much-loved features on public posters and monstrous billboards on every conspicuous corner in town, advertising a cheap new roadster.

Bobby's first intention was to ignore each and every one of these telegraphic outbursts, but by mid-afternoon she had relented so far as to send him a five-cent post-card picture of Lake Michigan. At suppertime she sent a telegram saying they had arrived safely and were leaving early the next morning; and then kept Rowena awake until three o'clock in the morning with the scratch of her pen as she wrote him a detailed account of everything that had happened so far.

After Rowena had read her single fat letter and smiled over it, and frowned over it, she went to her pocketbook and counted her money, down even to nickels and dimes. Then she called Peter's room on the telephone and asked if he would please give her her share of next week's expense money right away.

"Of course," replied Peter. "If you need more I can let you have it.—Don't ever run short of money, Rowena, we can always squeeze out a little extra some way."

"Thanks a lot, Peter," said Rowena gratefully. "I think I can manage after this. But you're sweet to make the offer."

Even Rowena was amazed at the number of things about which Peter had his own ideas, all bad ones. The roads provided an unfailing source of dissension. Their route was clear and definite. From Chicago they were to go south to St. Louis, from St. Louis to Kansas City, from Kansas City to Denver. Nothing could be plainer. Between these cities stretched a broad highway heavily travelled expensively paved. The car was supplied with the best of motor maps, and the roads were clearly marked at every turning. Rowena—sitting in the snug shade of the stout umbrella she had bought, was comfortably satisfied to travel swiftly, steadily along the main highways from one objective point to another.

But Peter was all for short-cuts across country, and for all his deceptive air of extreme amiability, was strongly entrenched in his personal preferences. At every town—although not as Rowena disagreeably claimed at every telegraph pole—he made hopeful inquiries for short-cuts—for side-roads—for country lanes away from the travelled thoroughfares.

Bobby, as became a professional chaperon, was non-committally neutral. But so far from appreciating her disinterested amiability, it seemed more irritating to the others than the outspoken opposition they met in each other. And often they turned upon her sharply, as if she were to blame for the entire argument.

It was in an exquisite wooded dell in southern Illinois that Rowena had her revenge. They had stopped at a quaint roadside log cabin for luncheon, & Peter gazing pensively through a wide open window, decided to do a picture on that very spot. Rowena had spent the morning in the rumble seat inditing swift notes on mid-western motoring and was anxious to transcribe them to the typewriter before her memoranda froze on her. She asked Peter, very politely, if he would please do the picture of the roadster and the wooded dell first, while she was putting her notes into permanent form, and then paint her in behind the wheel later on in the afternoon when the rest of the picture was done. Peter was perfectly willing, even eager, to lay over for an extra day, thus to allow time for her work as well as his, but he said a picture never turned out as well when a lady, or a house, or even a dog, was added to a finished product. Said it always stuck out like a sore thumb and never looked just right.

Rowena put up a good argument—Rowena always put up a good argument—Rowena lost her temper—she usually lost her temper—and the delicious log cabin waffles and honey were ruined.

When, very sulkily, but prepared to pose, she flounced down where Peter had parked the car beside a shadowy pool and was setting up his easel, he said he thought better of it and would not use her in that picture—said Bobby was willing to substitute and the change would be a good thing all round. Peter was quite pleasant about it, really thought he was doing her a favor, but Rowena, from being merely sulky, was suddenly furious. She said she had been hired for no other purpose than to serve as a dumb model for his art and that she would jeopardize her contract by accepting this substitute. But Peter insisted that Messrs. Rack and Ruff had left everything about the pictures to his own exclusive judgment, and this was his judgment.

"Bobby is putting on her little red sports suit," he said, "and the costume will show up nicely in this green dell."

"I know Bobby's clothes are much better than mine," said Rowena stiffly. "I know my things are very shabby and threadbare, but it seems scarcely necessary to throw it up to me."

"That is very unfair of you, Rowena," said Peter gravely. "You are very beautiful in every thing you put on, and you know it. I couldn't speak unfavorably of your appearance if I wanted to."

Rowena, without another word plumped herself down behind the wheel with a set chin, a stern glint in green eyes, and a death grip of her slim hands on the wheel. Peter walked slowly up to her and looked her steadily in the face.

"Then if you will have the truth, Rowena," he said gently, "I would see you hanged before I would try to paint you in this lovely spot. I am so disgusted with the way you act sometimes that I would probably paint you with horns, and a tail, which, between you and me, I often suspect you have concealed about you. If I painted you the way you look to me right now they'd never sell another Rackruff short of Gehenna."

Rowena's lovely red lips parted, then closed with a sudden click. Her eyes grew so wide and turned so deep a hazel that Peter marveled he had ever thought them green.

She got out of the car and went up to the log cabin where she met Bobby coming out of the ladies' dressing-room, all dimpling smiles in the pleasant prospect of posing.

"Peter is terribly tired and cross to-day, poor dear," said Rowena smoothly. "Try to cheer him up, won't you, darling? He's very blue. Tell him about Carter."

"I will," said Bobby sweetly. "I'll tell him about the time he proposed to me. It was terribly thrilling. We were out in a canoe—"

"Peter's waiting," interrupted Rowena quickly. "Yes, tell him about that. Poor dear! He'll be so interested."

A little later, her portable typewriter in her hand, she passed that way to seek a secluded spot in the woods for her own work. Bobby, dimpling and delighted, sat low behind the wheel. Peter, looking just a bit grim, moved restlessly from one foot to the other before his canvas. Rowena's eyes showed clouded flame in blue when she went by.

"And he forgot we were in a canoe way out in the middle of a deep river. He dropped the paddle overboard and bounded down on the cushions beside me. 'Darling,' he said, 'you do love me, don't you?' And splash! Over we went, canoe, cushions, luncheon and all! But a little thing like being upset in a cold river didn't bother Carter. He went right on kissing me and said over and over, 'Darling, you do love me—you do love me, and it wasn't until I promised to marry him that he swam off after the canoe and—'"

"The poor fishes lived happy for ever after," said Rowena softly.

There were five telegrams for Bobby in St. Louis and, curiously enough, five for Peter also. Rowena, he noticed, had another fat letter addressed in the boyish scrawl, and watching with some curiosity as she read it, he saw that while her brows frowned over it ever so slightly, her eyes smiled to their softest hazel. Immediately she finished reading, she counted the bills in her purse and asked the way to the telegraph office.

"Oh, listen to this!" chortled Bobby ecstatically. "Darlings, he's wild! He'll never forgive me, never. He threatens to send the police after me unless I come right straight home. He calls me a little devil in plain English by Western Union."

"Oh, Bobby," begged Rowena "please spare us until we get a little of the well-known fine, black, sandy loam of the Middle West out of our ears."

When they stepped into the elevator, Bobby stumbling blindly as she continued to devour the passionate phrases with her avidly shining eyes, Peter motioned Rowena back.

"I want to speak to you just a minute—about business—if you'll excuse us, Bobby."

Rowena turned back at once and he handed her the five telegrams without a word. They were all from Messrs. Rack and Ruff, saying Rackruff Motors, Inc., was in a state of persistent persecution at the hands of a red-haired chemical engineer who had threatened to sue the company, to burn down the factory, and to beat up every member of the firm.

"What the deuce do you suppose it's all about?" wondered Peter.

"Oh, it must be Carter," said Rowena brightly. "He's mad at Bobby."

So they went up to have it out with her at once. They told her she must quit tormenting him, and write him all the details of their trip, how she came to be a member of the party in the first place, and to send him a copy of their complete itinerary. Especially she must call him peremptorily off Messrs. Rack and Ruff, who were likely to become annoyed at such persecution and cancel the trip.

Bobby finally agreed not to tantalize him further and promised to write him a complete account of the adventure.

A Christian Solution for the Present Depression

In a statement to the Canadian press, which we produce in full in this issue, Mr. A. J. Nesbitt, the senior partner in the well known financial house of A. Nesbitt Thomson and Company, urges more dependence on the Divine will in the present world depression. He maintains in all sincerity that "the moment this nation turns to God there will be a heaven-sent revival sweep this land, and the fear and distrust and hate now prevalent will give place to faith and hope and love; industry shall improve and prosperity and peace shall follow."

Such a statement coming from one of the keenest business minds of the country cannot help but arrest the attention of all men however interested they may be in their own business affairs; for to advance in very positive terms, as Mr. Nesbitt has done, the Christian doctrine of man's redemption through faith as the real solution for our present economic ills requires courage of a high order, and we, like countless thousands of others, respect and admire him for the brave stand he has taken, and this notwithstanding the fact that the appeal will find its echo in the heart of every right thinking man and woman.

Lest we forget it would be well to remind ourselves that Christianity is the basis of our moral code; that through its teachings the old Adomonic code of "an-eye-for-an-eye" was changed to that of the "brotherhood of man", the fundamental principle on which the British Empire has been built. All her institutions and her very constitution are based upon it. This Christian-derived strength has permeated every part of the empire; it has created a sense of security in the minds of people steeped for ages in the lowest depths of slavery and superstition, and given them confidence in a new ideal of national life. It has made white men exile themselves for the best part of their lives to the uttermost parts of the earth so that the British flag might be respected through their sense of Christian duty. And the self-governing dominions are drawn by this same Christian magnet closer to the motherland, because in accepting the responsibility of autonomy each adopted the same principles which underlie the British constitution—the principles of true liberty and real justice in accordance with the teachings of Christ Himself.

Surely then in the time of stress, such as we are going through to-day, Mr. Nesbitt's appeal that the first principles of Christian ethics should be the line of conduct of each individual, as it is that of the nation, is timely and opportune.

How to bring back Prosperity

In this world crisis I believe God is speaking to every heart who will listen, seeking in His Grace to teach us that material things pass away and giving us to realize that man, notwithstanding his boasted progress and scientific knowledge, is helpless when he leaves God out of his life. In these crisis God would have us learn the truth that "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord shall man live."

As this is true, let us hear what God has to say to us if we desire to bring back prosperity. In 2nd. Chronicles VII. 14, God says if my people which called by my name:—

1. Shall humble themselves.
2. And pray.
3. And seek my face.
4. And turn from their sinful ways.

Then:—

1. (God says) I will hear from Heaven.
2. I will forgive their sins.
3. I will heal their land (or send prosperity).

These are God's definite promises, which are sure and certain.

The moment this nation turns to God there will be a heaven-sent revival sweep this land, and the fear and distrust and hate now prevalent will give place to faith and hope and love; industry shall improve and prosperity and peace shall follow.

If we really want prosperity let us follow God's provision for bringing it about; but we must be in earnest and sincere.

God says in Jeremiah 12, 13, 14—"Then shall ye call upon Me, and ye shall pray unto Me, and I will hearken unto you and ye shall seek Me, when ye shall search for Me with all your heart, and I will be found of you saith the Lord."

What does God offer to the individual or nation that turns to Him: Forgiveness of sins, joy, peace and prosperity (the supplying of our needs) on what condition?

1. Humble ourselves.
2. Pray.
3. Seek His Face.
4. Turn from our sinful ways.

If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. There is one Mediator between God and man, the man Jesus Christ. The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth from all sin.

May we turn to God in true repentance and then we shall see that—Righteousness exalteth a nation.

IN MEMORIAM

MORROW.—In loving memory of Mother who departed this life July 12th., 1930.

We cannot say, and we will not say, That she is dead, she is just away

With a cheery smile with no wave of the hand, She has wandered into an unknown land, And left us dreaming how very fair

It needs must be since she lingers there, And you, Oh you, who the wild-est yearn

For the old-time step and the glad return, Think of her faring on as dear In the love of There, as the love of Here,

Think of her still as the same, I say; She is not dead, she is just away.

NEW BOARD OF SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS

According to the new ruling, elections were held last Monday for the selection of a new Board of School Commissioners.

In years gone by the public have rested on their laurels and manifested little interest in the procedure of selecting new candidates, for we have been favored with a Board comprised of Messrs. Thomas Christie, E. H. McCoy, E. H. Wilson, Dr. J. H. Mason and the late Geo. F. Calder, all of whom have devoted much time and rendered good servitude in the interests of education. In consequence the change in the Provincial law necessitated the election of an entirely new Board, and as the old members had expressed desire not to again be placed in nomination, with one exception (that of Dr. Mason) their wishes were accorded to and the following gentlemen were balloted for, Messrs. Dr. J. H. Mason, G. Y. Deacon, J. W. Gall, F. Brennan, Dr. J. M. Drew, H. M. Gall, Major G. Mitchell and Robert McFaul.

The first five gentlemen had considerable of a lead, and were declared elected, Dr. Mason showing his popularity with 84 votes out of 91 cast.

To those gentlemen who have now retired after so many years of active service, the public owe a deep sense of gratitude, for theirs has been a task of loyalty, entailing much personal sacrifice, which they have cheerfully given for the sake of those who have been trusted to their care. As citizens of Lachute Town We Thank You.

PROMOTED TO INSPECTOR

It is with considerable pride and satisfaction that the Watchman is able to chronicle the appointment of our old townsboy, Elmer S. Giles, to the honored position of Inspector of High Schools and special officer of the Department of Education.

Mr. Giles was born at Lachute, P. Q., and was educated at the Academy in that town. After graduating from high school he entered McGill University winning an entrance scholarship to that institution. He also won a special award at entrance to the 3rd. year and gained a special certificate for 1st. class standing when he obtained his B.A. degree.

Immediately upon leaving McGill in 1915 he enlisted for overseas service where he remained until 1919 being commissioned as a Lieutenant in the Royal Garrison Artillery and serving in France for three years in the Canadian and British Armies. He is still an Honorary Lieutenant in the Royal Garrison Artillery.

On his return to Canada, Mr. Giles became Principal of Gault Institute, Valleyfield. Later he was appointed headmaster of Macdonald College where he remained until he accepted the position of Principal of the High School at Three Rivers, P. Q.

The new Inspector attended Columbia University for several summer sessions and received the degree of M.A. from Teacher's College in 1928.

Mr. Giles has served on the executive of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers of Quebec and has been a member of various committees associated with the interests of education in this Province.

Diamond Ring and Roadster

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

"FOR SALE—Diamond ring worth $300 and roadster. $200 cash takes both."

Bob Cross read the ad through once more to make sure he had got it correctly, then jotted down the address of the advertiser.

He had no use for the ring. How could he have any use for a $300 diamond ring when the only girl he could ever have married had refused him last night? But if the ring were worth one-half what the owner claimed, he could sell it for at least one-half of that and still be ahead of the game—providing the roadster was any good at all.

To be any good to Bob, it must be in running order so that he could put as many miles between him and Marcia Fox as possible.

Bob investigated the ad the very next day. The ring looked like a valuable one, although Bob was no connoisseur, and the roadster, although rather in need of paint, seemed mechanically all right. Bob was given a ride all around town, passing Marcia en route, although, busy with the car, he did not see her.

But Marcia saw him. Yes, indeed, and forgot her dignity enough to turn around and stare after him. Bob, out riding with a strange young woman! For the owner of the roadster was a girl, not much older than Marcia herself. What Marcia did not know was that, only a few minutes after she saw him, Bob drove away from the young woman forever, with a ring in his pocket, a roadster beneath him, and his check book bearing a stub for $200.

Now it is quite possible for an automobile to show up nicely for demonstration purposes and then, the minute the salesman's back is turned, to cut up quite meanly. Bob careened gaily along the town's Main street and for about eight miles out into the country. Then something happened that was heralded by an uncanny noise in the rear and followed by a thud, a scrape and a ceasing of all motion.

Back in his home town, whither he was towed, he left the car for repairs and went around to MacIntyre's, the Jewellers. He saw that he would have to sell the ring to pay for the upkeep on the car, and the sooner he got about it the better. He was already behind the game with a towing charge, five gallons of gas, and an order for a new rear end and whatever else might be unearthed in the process of installing it.

Now, Marcia Fox, on her way to the post office, thought she saw Bob Cross going into MacIntyre's and because it was an odd place for him to be going could not resist the temptation of passing MacIntyre's right away.

What she saw did not quiet her curiosity. Over the counter leaned Bob, closely engaged in conversation with old MacIntyre himself. Between them lay a tray of something or other. The day was warm and the door of the shop was open. Marcia loitering, caught a fragment of remark from one of them. "That's certainly a very fine stone. Diamonds like that—"

Marcia's suspicions of the morning were confirmed. Bob was interested in another girl to the extent that he was buying her a ring. And, as it was hardly possible that all this could have happened in the brief time since she had turned him down, the affair must have been going on while Marcia supposed he loved her and her only!

She was desperately curious, but desperately unhappy as well. And the two emotions, welling within her, had the curious effect of slowing down her gait, so that, when Bob came out, who should he see a few feet away but his boyhood acquaintance and youthful sweetheart, Miss Marcia Fox? Bob touched his hat, hesitated, was about to pass by, when he felt a gentle touch on his arm.

"Bob—I want to be the first to wish you every happiness!" Marcia's voice was certainly anything but happy itself, but you could see she was making every effort to appear bright.

"Me—happy?" asked Bob. "What's the big idea?"

"Aren't you engaged?" asked Marcia.

"No longer," said Bob firmly. "The only girl I ever loved wouldn't have me, so I am leaving town in my new car tomorrow."

"I—I thought—you see—well—somebody thought you were buying diamond rings—"

"Buying diamond rings? On the contrary, I was selling one."

A great light dawned upon Marcia. A somewhat false light, but she did not know that. "Oh, Bob," she cried.

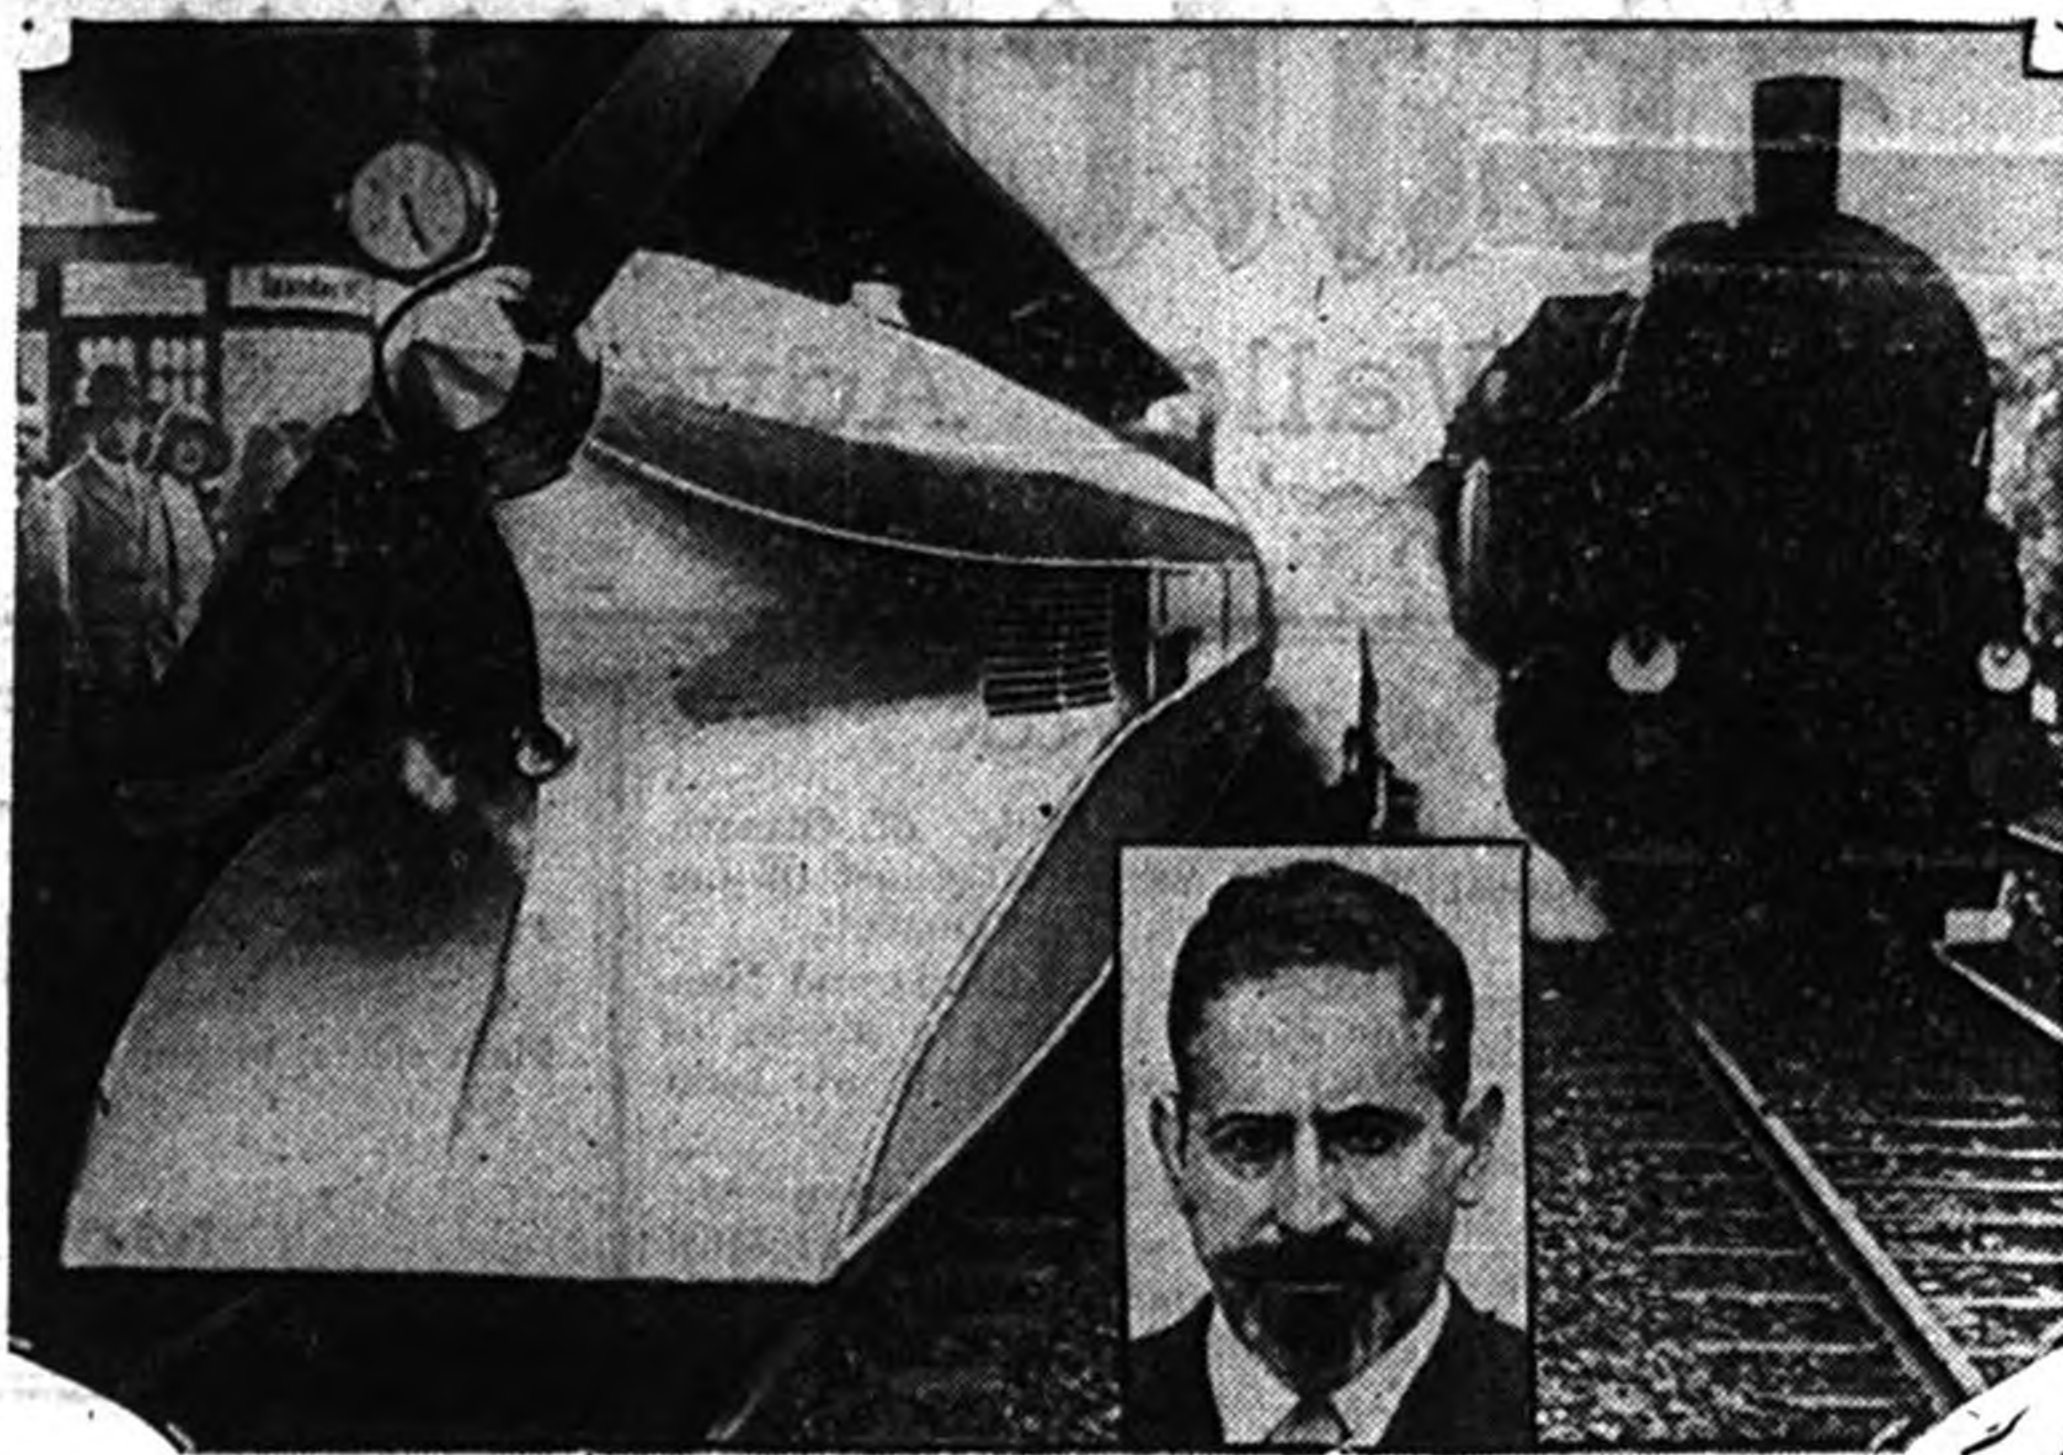

"You were selling the ring that you bought for me and I turned you down before I knew you had bought it. Oh, Bob, how can I ever make you forgive me!"

To some it might have sounded as though Marcia wanted Bob back for the sake of the ring, but Bob, who knew how easy it is for facts to appear other than they are, was not deceived. "Oh, Marcia," he said, "let's forget all that's happened and take a fresh start. I've just bought a car to take our honeymoon in and—say, come on back into MacIntyre's!"

No Miracle Worker

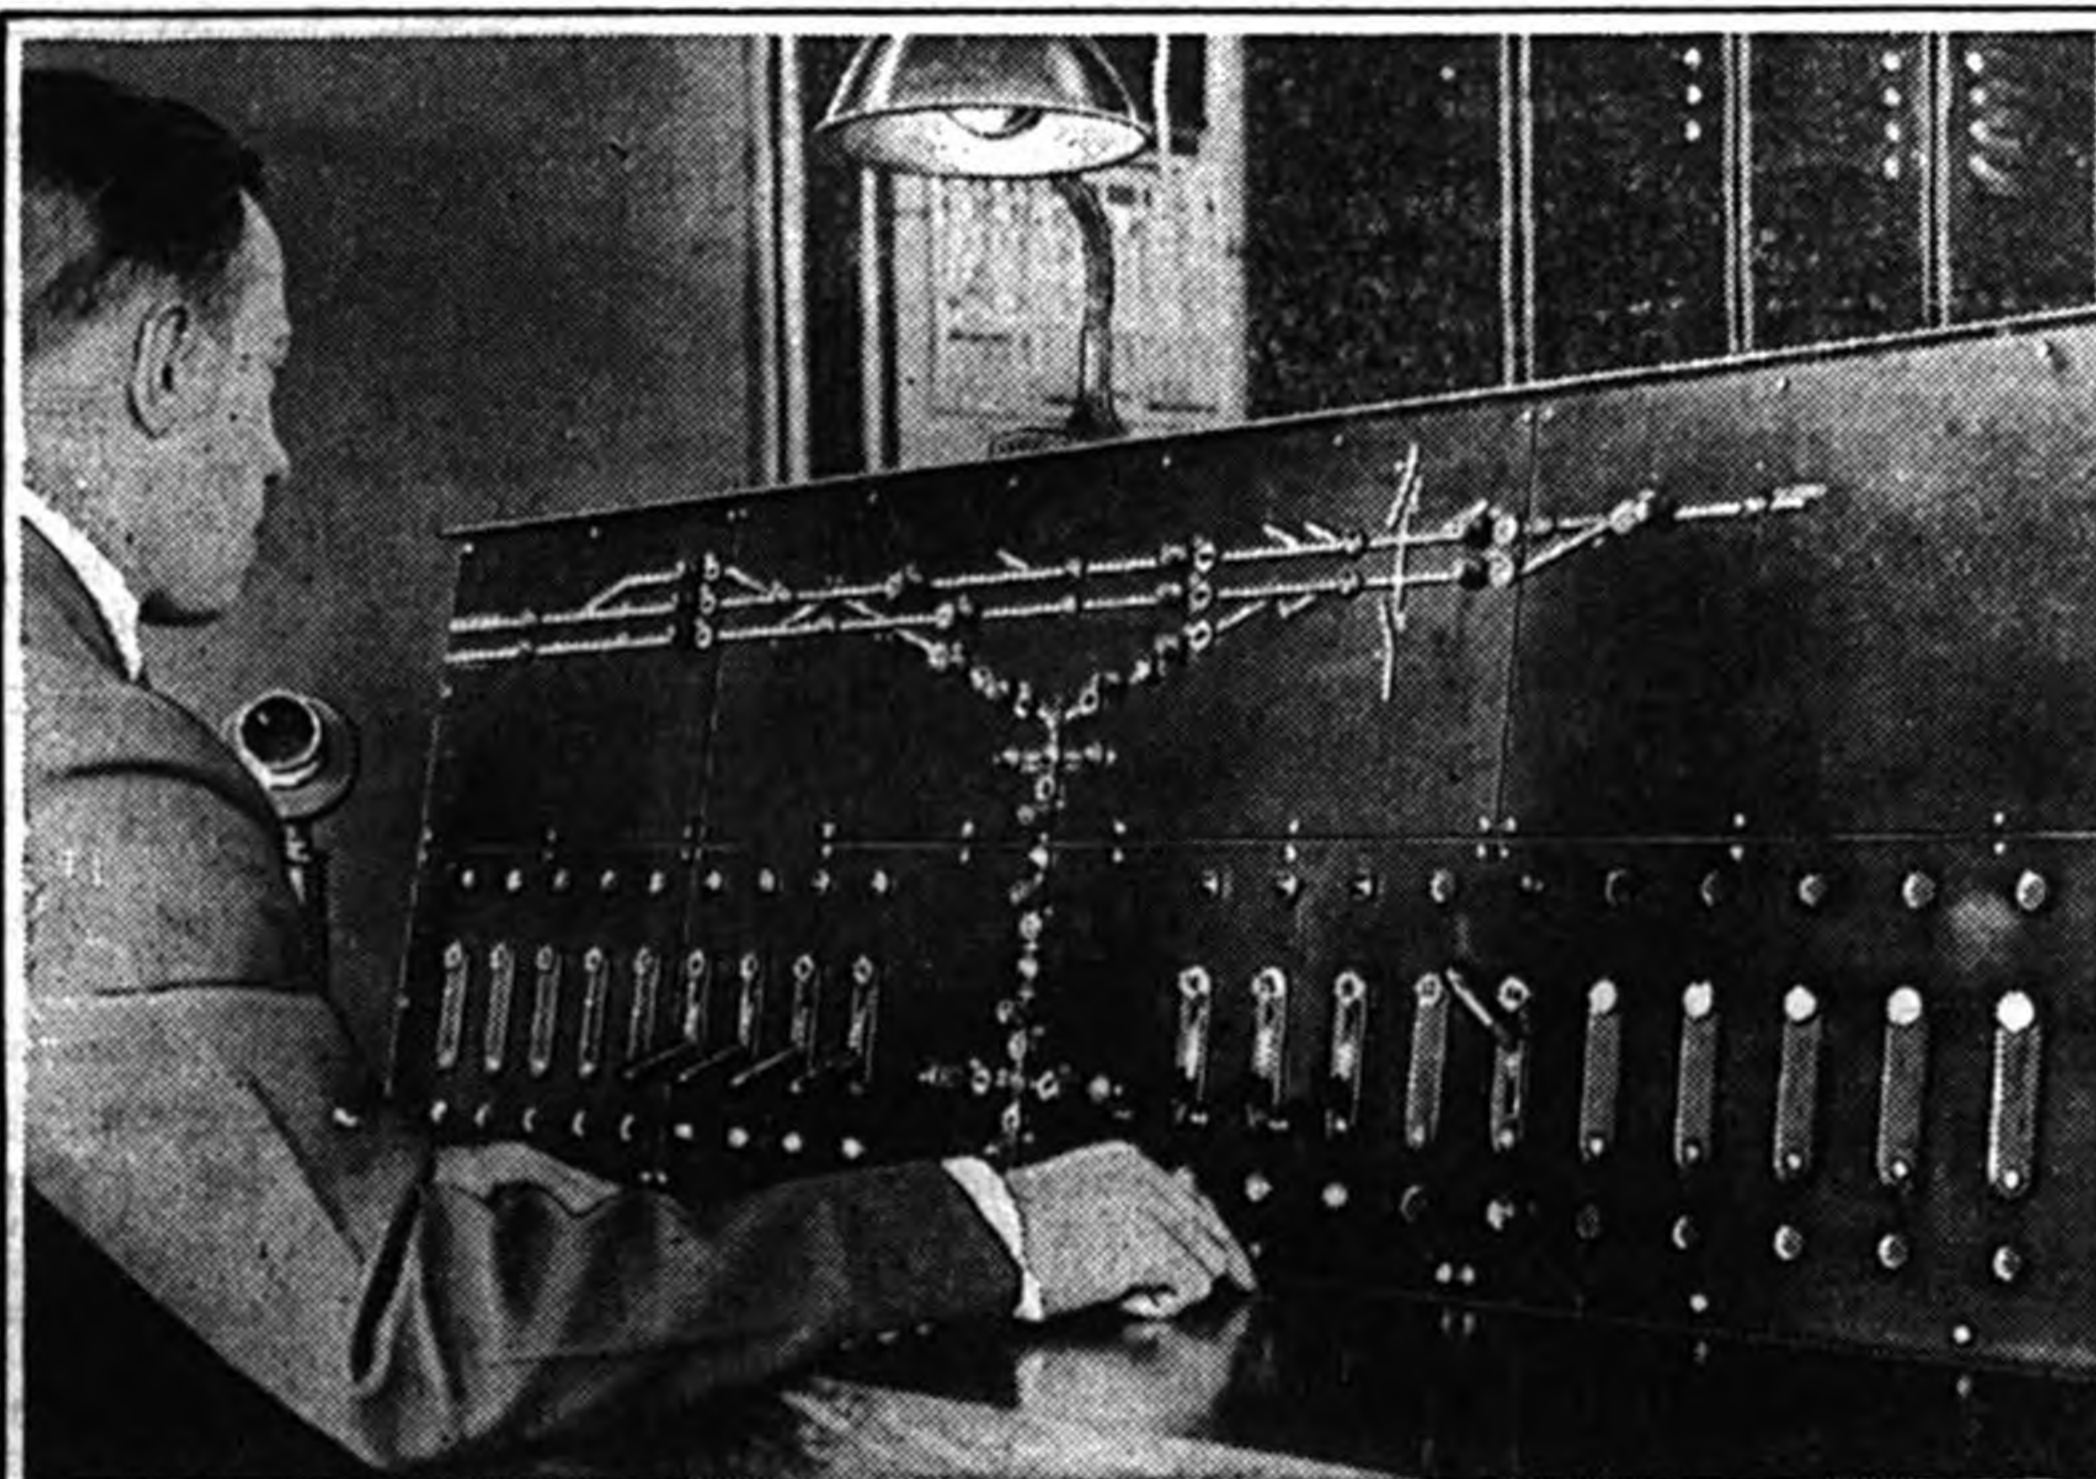

"Why did she get a divorce from that amateur magician?"

"He couldn't learn to take money out of his empty pockets."

Signalling Trains Through New Quebec Tunnel

Through a mile-long tunnel, under the historic Plains of Abraham, where Wolfe defeated Montcalm and won Quebec and Canada for Britain in 1759, passengers from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's palatial White Empresses make their first entry into Canada, from the Wolfe's Cove docks, joining the main line of the world's greatest transportation system at St. Malo, thus saving a long trip through local terminals and speeding up their journey to Montreal and their respective destinations beyond. The signal system in connection with the new tunnel is of particular interest, for it not only handles trains through the tunnel and on to the main line, but covers tramline and railway crossings which are made on the way to the tunnel mouth at the land end. A signal cabin on the main line, at the outskirts of the city, houses the control system. The operator faces a board, shown in the top picture, which consists of a number of electric levers for opening and closing switches and also has 20 rotary buttons, for operating the lights of a like number of signals at various points on the trackage covered. By the same board, the operator is able to locate his train or trains at any moment. It will be noted that the control board is practically a map of the tunnel tracks, the numbers on it corresponding to those on the signal posts. The line running down the board is the tunnel and the lines across the top of it represent the tracks of the main line. The signals to engineers from the posts are made by means of red, yellow and green lights, indicating "stop", "caution" and "proceed", respectively. The system was supplied by the General Railway Signal Company, and installed by the C. P. R.'s signal forces.

When Coffee Was First Used Mere Speculation

The early history of coffee as a beverage is traditional. There are many stories as to who first discovered the food value of coffee. One is that Leonhard Rauwolf, a German physician, was the first to make coffee known in Europe in an account of his travels, published in 1573. In some parts of Europe the discovery is credited to the inmates of a monastery in Arabia who had discovered that their goats after browsing upon the coffee berries were decidedly lively. Prompted by curiosity they decided to taste the berries to find out if they would be affected in the same way. They tried chewing the berries and boiling the berries, but the result was not satisfactory. They then roasted the berries and found out that it gave them a delightful flavor. Pilgrims to whom the monks gave shelter and food were pleased with the new beverage and spread its fame. The French have preserved the following picturesque version of the legend: A young goatherd, Kaldi, noticed one day that his goats, whose deportment, up to that time, had been irreproachable, were abandoning themselves to the most extravagant prancings. Kaldi attributed this gaiety to certain fruit or berries. He picked and ate the berries and became the happiest herder in Arabia.

Scientists Delve Into Secrets of Upper Air

Until recently we knew very little about the higher parts of the atmosphere which surrounds the earth.

The growing importance of flying and the development of the science of weather forecasting have made it necessary for us to know something more about the upper air. Kites carrying delicate measuring instruments were tried first, but these soon gave way to balloons filled with hydrogen. With balloons, heights of from 15 to 20 miles have been reached, and a great deal of valuable information has been collected. Tiny instruments are attached to the balloon, and when it bursts these are brought to earth by a parachute.

The fact that shooting stars are seen at heights up to almost a hundred miles showed that the atmosphere must extend to this distance. Shooting stars are tiny pieces of stone or metal from space, made white hot by the friction of air. Now experiments are to be made with giant rockets designed to carry thermometers, barometers, and other instruments to a height of at least 50 miles.

"Three in a Row"

This well-known game known as "Tilt-tat-toe," "Criss-cross," etc., is probably very old, though we cannot give its origin. Edward Eggleston in his "The Hoosier Schoolboy" mentions the game as follows: "Sometimes he played 'tee-tah-toe, three in a row,' with the girls, using a slate and pencil in a way well known to all school children. And he also showed them a better kind of tee-tah-toe, learned on the Wildcat, and which may have been in the first place an Indian game, as it is played with grains of Indian corn."

Gulf Stream's Course

The course of the Gulf stream is influenced to a large extent by the coastline. After leaving the Gulf of Mexico it encounters the Bahama islands and is turned northward, following the trend of the American coast. On issuing into the ocean it is met by the so-called "cold wall," which crowds in toward the New England coast, forcing the Gulf stream water off toward the east. Being forced out farther and farther from the coast, it is spread into a fan-shaped drift of continually diminishing depth.

Long-Lived Superstition

Old foresters have the strongest opinion as to the influence of the moon on timber. In the royal ordinances of France for the conservation of forests it was laid down that timber, especially oaks, should be felled only during the wane of the moon, and the belief—superstition if you like to call it so—still persists both in France and England. The idea is that timber felled at these times is less liable to rot than when felled during the wax. The belief dates back to Roman times.

Paper for Currency

Paper currency is engraved and printed on one grade of paper, which is purchased under contract from the Crane company, Dalton, Mass. Representatives of the Treasury department are maintained in the Crane factory during the manufacture of this particular paper. The Crane company is also under the supervision of the Treasury department's representatives during the delivery of the paper to the bureau of engraving and printing. No outside person can buy this paper.

Landscape Architecture

The modern scope of the art and expression of landscape architecture is expressed in the following definition by the late President Eliot of Harvard: "Landscape architecture is primarily a fine art, and as such its most important function is to create and preserve beauty in the surrounding of human habitations and in the broader natural scenery of the country, but it is also concerned with promoting the comfort, convenience and health of urban populations."

Rowena Rides the Rumble

FOURTH INSTALMENT

Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nationwide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes fearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

The three tourists reach St. Louis, after passing through Buffalo and Chicago. Peter and Rowena have many tiffs, while Bobby is enraptured at the way Carter is fuming over her flight from New York.

Now Go On With The Story.

There were bound to be ever so many pleasant, cool, shadowy shortcuts between St. Louis and Kansas City.

On the way between St. Louis and Kansas City, Peter asked about short-cuts at no end of filling stations and garages as they went west, but no one seemed very well informed about by-roads, and for the most part every one advised against attempting any such thing.

It was well on toward noon when Peter found a man in a garage who thought there really was a short-cut just as Peter wanted. He wasn't altogether sure it was a direct route to Kansas City, but at least it did not lead back toward St. Louis. They had driven about twenty miles along this rambling lane, which at times seemed to turn uncertainly toward Kansas City and then made a dead run for the Nebraska line, when they saw a stalled car in the road before them. The driver lay stretched out on the bank with his hat over his face.

Peter slowed up. Rowena leaned forward and rapped sharply on the glass. "Never ask advice of a broken-down driver," she warned him darkly. "If he knew what he was doing, he wouldn't be broken down."

But Peter for once had struck the right party. The man knew every road in the state.

Peter thanked him for his careful directions and returned to the car. He was too much of a gentleman to leer triumphantly back at Rowena under the awning umbrella in the rumble seat. He just got in behind the wheel and started the motor.

He had driven fully twenty miles over the worst possible sort of country road when he found that a bridge was out, that there was no detour, and the only possible way to go on in the direction of Kansas City was to go back to the main road and start over. Very meekly he turned around to pay homage to her better judgment but stopped short, staring open-mouthed at Bobby, who always looked where others did, turned too and her amazement surpassed his own.

The rumble seat was empty. Rowena was not there.

Peter slowly returned over the roads to where the self-styled expert had given him his directions.

Twenty miles! Bobby closed her eyes. Peter hoped she was praying. He would have prayed himself except that the hard driving over the bad road required his complete attention. But he did keep breathing over and over in his heart the one word, "God! God! God!" and trusted the Infinite would understand it for appeal.

Instinctively his foot lifted from the accelerator and at a noiseless crawl the car rolled up to the shadowy bank under the willow tree where the stranger with the stalled motor had mapped out the futile short-cut.

"Oh!" whispered Bobby weakly. "Look—look! Rowena!"

Rowena indeed, lying motionless beside the road where the afternoon sun slanted behind the trees to throw protecting shadows over her slender figure. Peter was out of the car long before it had come to a stop and was up the bank and kneeling beside her. He lifted one limp slim hand. It was stained red.

"Rowena!" he whispered.

Rowena opened her eyes. "Oh, hello," she said cheerfully. "Gosh, you were a long time coming back."

"Are—are you—hurt?" stammered Peter.

"Hurt? Why, no! What do you mean, hurt?" She licked a bit of red raspberry juice from her finger as she spoke.

"D-did you fall out, darling?" asked Bobby in fatuously affectionate tones.

"Fall out?" repeated Rowena. "Certainly not." She stood up, lifted her arms, stretching her slender figure comfortably to its utmost height. "Had a grand nap," she said. "And wrote out just what I think of Missouri. Poor dears, you must be dreadfully hot and tired. Come and sit down—a nature's feast to feed you. Berries and cold spring water I knew you would be famished so I picked heaps."

"You darling," said Bobby, and greedily fell to. "But will you please tell us," she mumbled, with a full mouth, for she was very hungry, "how you fell—how you got—out of the rumble seat?"

"I climbed out," said Rowena cheerfully. "It's the only way you can get out of a rumble seat."

"But when—"

"But how—"

"We didn't see you!"

"When Peter and the broken-down gent were dusting off Missouri in the middle of the road I noticed the wild berries up on the bank among the rocks. I must have got myself out of sight of the car without knowing it, for the first thing I knew I heard the usual racing of the engine with which dear Peter gets under way so I ran down and there you were—tearing off among the ruts in a cloud of metaphorical glory. So I picked some more berries, and the broken-down gent and I shot craps until the man from the garage came and towed him in. He invited me to go with them but I knew you would be back for me when you got around to it."

"There was a bridge out on the short-cut," explained Peter quickly.

"I know. The broken-down gent remembered it about ten minutes after you had gone. But of course it was to late then."

"You're very game about it. Rowena. Very sporting. I wouldn't blame you if you didn't speak to me again from here to the coast."

"Oh, nonsense!" said Rowena pleasantly. "This was just an accident. Accidents never make me mad. It's just," she added meaningly, "just—certain—people."

In Kansas City, Bobby found thirty-one telegrams from Carter, each increasingly immoderate in its commands for her to give over this outrageous conduct and return home at once.

Rowena had the usual fat one addressed in the boyish scrawl, and surely she had read no further than the first paragraph when she began counting out her money. Peter had a comforting telegram from Mr. Rack with a friendly postscript by Mr. Ruff, advising that the red-haired siege was lifted and that they had been honored with a sort of an apology, but warning them to be careful of their future conduct.

Mr. Rack also said they were extremely pleased with the character of the work that had been turned out, and enclosed check for next week's expenses. Peter was extremely grateful for that check, for Bobby had spent the last cent of her week's allowance by Wednesday, after which time he and Rowena had been obliged to carry her between them.

"Chaperons come high, don't they?" grumbled Rowena, as she counted out nickels and dimes, to make up her portion of Bobby's last manure.

It was a genuine hardship to them to be obliged to contribute so extensively to the maintenance of luxury-loving Bobby.

On the other hand, her presence was so essential to the all-important tour that they were in no position to quarrel very seriously even with her extravagances.

"For my part, I'd rather pay her bills than read Carter's telegrams," said Peter moodily.

"I wouldn't," disagreed Rowena promptly. "I've learned to read with one eye and listen with one ear, and that way I get through with only half the mental strain."

"Yes," but you've got a rumble to retire to."

"So I have. But I have to sleep with her."

One thing was certain. Her presence was essential, and Carter and his telegrams, she and her extravagances, were alike to be endured.

At Topeka she was startled to find but one telegram awaiting her—a ten-word, straight day message.

"Are you taking first train home or are you not?"

It was not even signed. Bobby's fright was so genuine her disappointment so real, that Rowena and Peter tried to console her.

Peter took them out to a movie and Rowena—with her own money—bought her a cunning little Kansas souvenir, a flask carved out of a corn-cob—and she seemed slightly more resigned.

She was very quiet as they crossed Kansas, and when they complained of the notoriously hot winds she smiled patiently and said she didn't mind. She ate very little, and had fifteen cents of her allowance left at the end of the week.

When they reached Denver they hurried at once, as they always did, to get their mail, and there was nothing at all for Bobby, not a letter, not a telegram, not so much as a souvenir postcard. She said nothing but turned pale and a little sad smile froze the dimples in the soft face.

When Rowena went down to dinner she made excuses not to go—said she was very tired, said she wanted a hot bath and a good sleep, said she would just read a magazine she had picked out at the news-stand.

They went up to the room immediately after dinner with all good intentions and Rowena knocked. When there was no answer she opened the door and they went in. The room had a deserted appearance. Bobby's handsome articles of toilet were gone from the dressing-table. Her beautiful dressing-gown was gone from the foot of the bed, her satin mules from beneath it. Her imported traveling bag no longer stood beside Rowena's shabby suitcase on the baggage rack.

Peter and Rowena looked at each other in wide-eyed consternation.

There was a note, written on hotel paper in Bobby's round childish hand. It was pinned to Rowena's pillow.

"Darlings, I'm going home. I've got to. If I don't, I'll never get him back. I'll send Peter the money I borrowed as soon as I get my allowance. I'm going on the seven o'clock train and I have already wired him to meet me. You're both just sweet and I love you. But I do wish you didn't quarrel so. I'm glad Carter and I get along better."

"And that," said Rowena flatly, "is that."

"It's all of that," added Peter gloomily.

"Nothing," declared Rowena drearily, "could be more irrevocably fatal than this."

"It was great sport while it lasted," said Peter. "You have been pretty game all the way through, Rowena."

"It was corking good business too," said Rowena. "And taking it all in all, you are not half bad to breeze around with."

"Well, it's all over now," said Peter.

"You don't suppose we could pick one up here, do you?—By advertising. The way we got Bobby in the first place."

But they both knew it was pretty hopeless.

They said good night with something vaguely suggestive of affectionate regard, for this killing, kindred disappointment gave them a cordial meeting-ground for almost the first time.

Rowena sat alone at her window, little and high up, for she had frugally changed from a double to a single room immediately after the desertion of Bobby.

She was not one to give up without a struggle—nor to give up at all, for that matter.

It was nearly midnight when she shook off her final hesitation with a mind made up. An idea had come to her, terrifying and tremendous, hours before. She had toyed with it, weighed it in the balance and, finding it wanting, pushed it resolutely away; but had permitted it to work its way back, isidiously sure. At twelve o'clock she called Peter on the telephone and that was an end of her hesitation.

"Listen, Peter. You meet me downstairs in the lobby, right away, will you? I have an idea."

"But, I'm in bed!"

Lexie Leigh Johnson, 3-year-old daughter of James M. Johnson, lighthouse keeper on the Farallone Islands, off San Francisco, owes her recovery from a digestive ailment to a navy doctor, summoned from an army transport by radio. The doctor sped to the islands, administered first aid and arranged for the victim's immediate removal to a hospital. The photograph shows Lexie with her mother.

Feeding bees on sugar and milk at the Government Experimental Farm at Agassiz, B.C., has resulted in an average of 23 pounds more honey than on ordinary diet. This may mean a further impetus to Canadian honey production.

Monday, August 10, has been officially set as the opening date of the fourth "Buyers' Week" to be held in Montreal. The first Buyers' Week brought 251 buyers from all over the continent to Montreal; the third brought 1,100 buyers, indicating the growing success of the plan.

Individual holders of Canadian Pacific Railway common stock numbered 21,186 on September 2, 1930, and by the 1st June, 1931, there were 34,372 holders, an increase of 13,686. This shows the growing popularity of this stock since its split into four new shares for one of the old stock.

Completing a coast-to-coast holiday trip, Viscount Duncannon, son of Canada's Governor-General, the Earl of Bessborough, and his cousin, the Hon. I need add very little to this report to show the public what the Health Unit is doing for the country; but I must say that this has only been possible through the co-operation of the general public and particularly through the help the newspapers, the clergy of every denomination, the medical profession, the officials of the county, and finally through the generous support of the entire staff of my Unit.

On Tour with the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association

To those who have never had the privilege of taking a trip out West, the following brief sketch of our attendance at the Canadian Press Association Meeting at Regina, will prove interesting.

Leaving our home town Lachute, via C.P.R., excellent connections are made on the evening train at Ottawa, and we arrive in Toronto the next morning. Via C.N.R. we travelled to Sarnia embarking on the Steamer "Noronic" for a trip through the lakes Huron and Superior, en route to Port Arthur. These Great Lake boats are really wonderful for their size and are fitted with every modern convenience. The fresh lake air proves most invigorating and with almost two days of restfulness, combined with excellent meals and varied entertainment of music and dancing, several pounds are generally added to one's weight. A special boat train next conveyed us on to Winnipeg, during what was one of the hottest days on record, the thermometer registering 108 at Sioux Lookout. Winnipeg, although not as hard hit as some of the cities farther west, is feeling the depression and unemployment seems to be their biggest trouble just at the present time. The Communist spirit is very strong and several riots have broken out, causing severe injuries to the participants. Speeding on towards Regina, via C.P.R., we pass on into the province of Saskatchewan, which has probably been the hardest hit of all. It is possible to visualize conditions in the dried-out areas, especially of southern Saskatchewan, from written descriptions; they must be seen to be realized. Passing quickly along and taking the country side into our vision, we see large comfortable homes, successors of the shacks of 30 years ago, roomy barns and large out-buildings, which in the past have stored rich harvests, but now are empty and at least for this year will remain so. A glimpse at the soil soon convinces one of this fact,—a period of drought is now being experienced that has never been known of in the past 50 years, for there has been practically no rain during the past three years. Over the once fertile soil, there lies the pall of grey dust, which shrouds the farms, houses, gardens and roads, and gives to everything within the district a heart-rending and deserted look. Desertion is really the case, for in some districts it has been necessary to leave behind what was once home and prosperity to seek other places of existence. With each wind the air is filled with dust, which being finer than sand, drifts across fields and roads causing a greyish darkness which necessitates the use of head-lights in the hours of full day-light. Being extra fine, this dust finds its way into everything, no matter how apparently tight it may be closed. Its penetrating powers were well exemplified by all on our train, in passing through one of these dust storms.

Heart-breaking it is to view it all and yet the farmer is most optimistic, for the soil which now lies dormant has in the past yielded an average of 20 or more bushels to the acre, and given time, this period of drought will just be an unhappy memory. Dame Nature will again fill her skies with moisture for the dry prairies and the sun will continue to assist in the task of making the West prosper again.

In the meantime the crisis which is also national, must be taken care of and undoubtedly steps will be taken by the Government to assist the unfortunate.

Reaching Regina, our headquarters were at the Hotel Saskatchewan, which is one of the cities' foremost structures. Towering above all other buildings in its neighborhood, and located on one of the best sites in the city, the hotel is both central and handy to the Canadian Pacific Railway Station. It is luxuriously fitted through-out, the first floor including both private guest rooms, a spacious lounge and the ball-room which is equipped with a stage for concerts and entertainments. A Coffee-shop, sample rooms, billiard room, telegraph and ticket office, with 252 bedrooms each having a private bath, makes this one of the most up-to-date hotels to be found anywhere.

Here in a two day session, were gathered together weekly newspapermen from all parts of our Dominion, who in assembly discussed the various phases of their business and listened with great interest to several addresses given by prominent men of the West.

Regina, although suffering also from the general depression, is to be the home of the World's Grain Fair in 1932, for which great preparations are now being made, and which will be an event unprecedented in history.

Our next journey was by special train to Banff, during which time we greatly enjoyed the scenery of beauties of the Rockies, through a special observation car. Mountain goats, buffalos, and deer are seen in abundance and are roaming to heart's content among the wilds. A short run by motor bus and we arrive at the Banff Hotel, some 4,625 feet above sea level, operated by the C. P. R. and our palatial home for a few days. To endeavor to describe the scenery is impossible, but to look out and upon the gorgeous valleys and snow capped Mountains with the sun shedding its rays over all, makes one really wonder and marvel at the vision and foresight of those responsible for placing this gem in such a setting. Numerous bus drives to various peaks, and lakes, horse-back driving, hiking, tennis and golfing are among a few of the pastimes afforded for entertainment. Large airy rooms, with bath in all, along with sumptuous meals make this famous resort of the Canadian Pacific a place of wonderful attraction. Lake Louise, about 50 miles farther on is most beautiful and presents a magnificent view as one looks out from the Rotunda of the huge Hotel. Nature has presented a grand and glorious picture which one never tires of admiring. Here, too, every consideration has been given to personal comfort, and complete rest or entertainment of various kinds help to make one's holiday all that can be desired. Of the many drives we were privileged to visit Lake Moraine and were treated to an hour of hairpin turns, climbing all the while until we seemed to be nearing the clouds. Speeding along narrow roads, with huge gorges below amid towering mountains, makes one realize how insignificant mortal man really is, and we were glad to feel ourselves safely back at our starting point, thanks to our competent driver, who had given us all the thrills of a scenic railway.

Huge swimming baths are available at both Banff and Lake Louise, and needless to say are in great demand.

Excellent service, real comfort and extreme courtesy may be said to be the Slogan of the Canadian Pacific at these Hotels, which are generally crowded to capacity.

"Happy to meet, sorry to part," had to be our next experience and on Sunday evening a large number of the party embarked en route for their various homes both east and west.

Returning to Winnipeg we spent the day at the Van Horne Estate, some 30 miles from the city and situated at East Selkirk. It is here, that our former townsman, Mr. Cecil Bradford now has complete charge of the farm, which comprises some 3,700 acres, 2500 of which are under cultivation. The estate which is some six and a half miles long and one and a half miles wide, is estimated in value at a quarter of a million dollars and has a steady payroll of 25 to 30 employees. During the busy season, extra help is taken on, and last week 75 were on the wage list. Eighty horses do most of the work on the ranch and there are 75 head of pure bred Guernseys and Holsteins, besides Yorkshire Hogs, Shropshire Sheep, and pure bred Shorthorns for breeding purposes. Automatic milking machines make the work somewhat lighter and the milk is bottled and shipped direct to Winnipeg where it is sold at 14c. per quart. A refinery which hopes to start shortly in Winnipeg has selected the Van Horne Farm as a testing ground for the raising of sugar beet, and some 40 acres are under cultivation as a try-out for this year. Among other grains there has to be cut 850 acres of Alfalfa this season. Mr. and Mrs. W. Gordon, were our hostesses at dinner during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Bradford and we must say that we were royally entertained. Our old friend Cecil, with the assistance of Walter and the foreman Mr. Ranger (another Quebec boy) will we are sure make a big success in his new undertaking.

Entraining once more on Tuesday evening we reached Fort William, on Wednesday, where we took the C. P. Boat Assinaboia for Port McNicoll. Passing through Lake Superior we enter the Sault Ste. Marie Locks, where there is a drop of some 20 feet to Lake Huron. The trip by water covers some 600 miles and occupies 39 hours during all of which time one enjoys the last word of comfort, with cozy cabins, plenty of deck space for promenading and varied entertainment.

A few hours on the train and we are again back to the old home town, which although not as large as many we have passed through is equally as important and prosperous.

At various stops we were privileged to meet old friends, who have all made good in their venture to Western lands, but who still hold a warm spot in their hearts for Lachute and the surrounding district.

The Convention meeting, our trip as a whole and the varied entertainment was a great success, and has impressed upon our minds two facts, "That we should be much more appreciative of our homes and surroundings than we are," and "that there are still great possibilities in store for this great Canada of ours."

Expressions of thanks are due to Mr. Riddell, representing the C. N. Railway and Mr. Harry Smith, of the C. P. Railway, who were both untiring in their efforts to make the convention a big success.

Successful Garden Party.

The St. Simeon's Church held a very enjoyable Garden Party, on the lawn of Mrs. Robert Miller, although the weather was indeed doubtful throughout the day, it fared up during the evening, and a splendid attendance witnessed a fine program. The church wardens, Mr. H. Stansfield and Mr. K. Elliott were responsible for the attractive outlay & decorating of the lawn, while all credit must be extended to the Ladies' Guild in their untiring efforts to serve the gathering. The program of unusual character was composed of all Montreal talent & certainly proved a real treat in the eyes of the audience. The Turner Sisters and their pupil Miss Florence Munfer indeed were very pleasing in their execution of many fine dances, and their fancy costumes added greatly to the attractiveness of the programme. Messrs. Joly and Richard Woods proved a great success with their contribution of step dancing and humorous songs, respectively. Miss Enid Carson & Miss Dorothy Sutton, of Ahuntsic, favoured the audience with many beautiful numbers on their Hawaiian guitars which were greatly appreciated. Rev. J. A. Lackey thanked the entertainers on behalf of the church for their kindness in helping so willingly and also expressed his appreciation of so large support given by those who attended. "God Save the King" was sung at the climax of the programme.

The Functions of a Trust Company

By JOHN W. JEAKINS,

Advertising Manager, The Royal Trust Company, Montreal.

"WHAT A TRUST COMPANY IS" and "WHAT IT DOES"

Sir Charles Gordon,
G. B. E.
President.

R. P. Jellet,
General Manager

Within the memory of middle-aged men, the Trust Company in Canada has come into being as an essential part of the country's financial fabric. Thirty years ago the business man of Montreal, if he did not walk, came to the office in his trap—today he comes in his high-powered automobile. Thirty years ago the provident father or husband went to trusted friend and made him the Executor of his estate—today the sound business man makes a Trust Company his Executor or one of his Executors. The idea of an individual as sole Executor is as out of date as the old fashioned gig.

The reasons for this are obvious. A Trust Company is a company formed for the explicit purpose of acting as Executor and Trustee and Agent for various purposes. It is composed of men who spend their lives studying the intricate questions involved in the settlement of estates, the forming of trusts, and the duties of financial agents. Each department has its trained specialists, and each department has a system of management that has been brought to its present state of efficiency by years of experience. Very few individuals today are capable of fulfilling competently the duties of an Executor or Trustee; the question of Succession Duties alone being one that calls for expert knowledge. The average individual, is too busy to give to the carrying out of a testator's wishes the time that this involves, and it is a fact that very often where individuals are appointed Executors under a will they call upon a Trust Company to act as their agent to carry out the instructions contained therein. Furthermore, an individual appointed Executor is subject to the hazards of life and may be incapacitated, or may die, before his task is completed, causing inconvenience and distress to the heirs. A Trust Company does not die and is never incapacitated. It is in the interest of the Trust Company to see that an estate is administered efficiently and to the greatest satisfaction of the heirs, always having in mind the wishes of the testator, because a large part of its future business will come from satisfied clients.

Besides acting as Executor and Trustee, the Royal Trust Company has many other functions.

It acts as agent for Individuals. There are many men and women who are too occupied with other affairs to look after the details of management of their personal property. For these people The Royal Trust Company will act as Financial Agent—to invest moneys, to collect dividends, coupons, and other income; to manage real estate, collect rents, attend to repairs, to attend to insurance matters and to the payment of taxes; to buy or sell real estate.

It offers a comprehensive service in the Management of Mortgage Investments. Mortgages are highly thought of as conservative investments and are authorized investments for trustees in all the Provinces of Canada. The Royal Trust Company has had wide experience in managing mortgages throughout Canada and is fully qualified to pass upon mortgage applications and to supervise the investment when the loan has been made.

It provides for the Safe Custody of Securities. Clients may deposit their securities with the Company, which undertakes to keep them safe, and, for a moderate fee, to look after them to the extent of collecting coupons and dividends and disposing of the income derived from them according to the clients' wishes.

It acts as Transfer Agent, Registrar, and Dividend Disbursing Agent for other companies. The organization of the Transfer Department of the Royal Trust Company is such that the duties in connection with these functions can be handled with the maximum of speed and efficiency.

It saves individuals and corporations precious time in taking care of Income Tax Returns. It will take charge of payrolls for companies at minimum expense guaranteeing necessary secrecy.

It maintains a large number of safety deposit boxes in various sizes. These are rented to the public from $5.00 upwards.

Finally the Trust Company acts in all the Trust Company capacities that are authorized by the laws of the different provinces where our branches are situated.

It is sometimes suggested by persons, who have given the matter little thought, that the employment of a Trust Company for the functions that have been recounted is too expensive. Investigation has proved that this is by no means the case. On the contrary, the employment of a Trust Company as a rule saves money for the estate, in addition to giving the estate far better service than can possibly be given by an individual.

Close supervision of the management of The Royal Trust Company is maintained by its Board of Directors and by the local Advisory Boards of the various branches.

Members of these Boards are all leading citizens of the Dominion of Canada.

mois de mars

The Imperial Trusts Co. of Canada a, le 1er avril, distribué des gains, pour le mois de mars 1931, de $2.19 par placement de $100.

Cette très satisfaisante distribution s'est faite en dépit des conditions adverses qui affectent l'industrie pétrolière.

What Is An Oil Royalty?

An Oil royalty is the payment which a land owner receives on all the oil obtained from his land by a producing company — usually the market price of 1 barrel of oil out of every 8 barrels obtained.

Royalty owners employ no labour, buy no equipment, risk nothing in drilling, or operating, yet participate in all the oil produced from the property.

Participation Trust Certificates

(Series A)

Represent actual ownership of producing Oil royalties. So carefully have these royalties been chosen that Participation Trust Certificates are paying a high return. For February The Imperial Trusts Co. of Canada, as trustee, paid a monthly return of $2.32 on each $100. investment.

Oil Royalties Pay Consistent Profit

In 1929, United States wells produced 894,435,000 barrels of oil with a market value of $1,172,830,000. One-eighth of this great sum — or $146,605,000—was paid to royalty owners who receive a fixed share of all oil and gas produced from the land, without any expense to themselves — either present or future.

Participation Trust Certificates

represent actual ownership of producing oil royalties in carefully selected fields operated by the leading oil companies.

Proceeds derived from these oil royalties come directly to The Imperial Trusts Co. of Canada, and are distributed by this trustee, pro rata monthly, to registered holders of such certificates.

Why Oil Royalties Are Profitable

The owner of land on which oil wells are drilled receives a royalty on all oil produced by all wells on his land.

Ownership of the land may change — the oil lease may expire — the company, operating the wells, may sell out — but, no matter what happens, the royalty owner will receive his stipulated royalty on every barrel of oil produced from that land, for all time to come.

Pourquoi les Royautés Pétrolières sont Profitables

Le propriétaire d'un terrain sur lequel se creusent des puits d'huile reçoit une royauté sur toute l'huile que produisent tous les puits dudit terrain.

Le terrain pourra changer de propriétaire, le bail huilier expirer, la compagnie qui exploite les puits pourra vendre son entreprise; mais, quoi qu'il advienne, le propriétaire d'une royauté recevra le montant stipulé sur chaque baril d'huile extraite du terrain, et cela indéfiniment.

Les Certificats Fiduciaires à Participation

ont pour les appuyer des royautés pétrolières sur puits producteurs d'huile situés exclusivement dans des champs éprouvés. Ces certificats sont émis en dénominations de $100 et multiples, avec l'acquiescement de The Imperial Trusts Co. of Canada comme fiduciaire.

How Oil Royalties Are Paid

Oil is pumped from oil wells into field storage tanks, which are connected with pipe lines of the Company purchasing the oil in the district. The quantity of oil is measured by a meter, is checked by gaugers of the pipe line company, as well as gaugers of the producing company, and a daily dual meter record is kept. Every month, the pipe line company pays the market price for the crude oil, sending its cheques to operating companies and to royalty owners for their pro rata share of oil. As trustee for

PARTICIPATION TRUST CERTIFICATES

The Imperial Trusts Co. of Canada receives this cash distribution every month on all the oil royalties which constitute the security behind Participation Trust Certificates. Regularly every month, the return is distributed pro rata to certificate holders by The Imperial Trusts Co. of Canada. Last year, $146,605,000 was paid by U.S. pipe line companies to owners of Oil Royalties. This in itself, shows the sound investment value of these trust certificates.

Qu'est-ce qu'une Royauté Pétrolière?

Une royauté pétrolière est le paiement qu'un propriétaire de terrain reçoit sur toute l'huile extraite dudit terrain par une compagnie productrice — habituellement le prix du marché de 1 baril d'huile sur chaque 8 barils obtenus.

Les propriétaires de royautés n'emploient pas de main-d'oeuvre, n'achètent pas d'outillage, ne risquent rien dans le forage ni dans l'exploitation et, cependant, ils ont leur part de toute l'huile extraite de la propriété.

représentent la possession réelle de royautés pétrolières productives. L'on a apporté tant de soin au choix de ces royautés que les Certificats Fiduciaires à Participation paient de forte revenus. En février, The Imperial Trusts Co. of Canada a payé, en qualité de fiduciaire, un revenu mensuel de $2.32 par $100 de placement.

ARGENTEUIL COUNTY ORANGE LODGE HOLD CELEBRATION AT LOUISA

On Saturday last, members of the Orange Lodges throughout the County held their 101st anniversary of the Order in Mr. Hiram Watchorn's Grove, at Louisa. Invitations had been extended to other lodges, and there was a very fine response.

A Bagpipe and Drum Band, under leadership of Piper Ewart of Montreal, furnished music throughout the day and were accompanied by a Scotch lassie, who very cleverly devoted much time to dancing Scotch reels and sword dancing.

Mr. Stanley Holt, chairman of Louisa Lodge then called upon Rev. J. A. Lackey for an address which was most attentively listened to. He gave a brief history of the Anglo-Saxon race and was followed by Mr. W. J. Cooper, who urged the members to be loyal to the cause and ever be on guard to protect the interests of their faith. Mr. Melvin Copeland also gave a short address emphasizing the necessity for men to stand strong in the cause of right.

The members then lined up and marched to Louisa Hall, after which they returned to the Grove where Nelson Morrison was kept busy handling the refreshments.

On Sunday, about 60 members of the Ladies' Lodge of Lachute, accompanied by their brethren, motored to Lost River and attended Divine Service in the Presbyterian Church, when the Rev. Dr. Ross of Montreal, delivered a most inspiring address on the subject of "Tempted and Patience." The members afterwards marched to the Orange Hall when Mr. Roderick McMillan expressed his pleasure at such fine attendance and wished them all success in the good work in which they were engaged.

Lesson for July 19

SOCIAL SERVICE IN THE EARLY CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 4:32-35; 6:1-4; 9:36-39. II Cor 9:1-7.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I have shewed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—Sharing With Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC.—Sharing With Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Christians Sharing With Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—The Generosity of the Early Christians.

Social service as such was not a department of church activity. However, the early church was most ready to discharge its social obligations. Members of the body of Christ are sympathetically related.

I. Characteristics of the Early Church (Acts 4:31-35).

1. It was a praying church (v. 31). These early Christians for every need betook themselves to God in prayer.

2. It was a Spirit-filled church (v. 31). When they prayed, the place wherein they were gathered together was shaken and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit.

3. It was a church with a bold testimony (v. 31). The ministers of the early church did not offer any apology for the Bible, but expended their energy in fearlessly preaching it.

4. It was a united church (v. 32). They were all of one heart and soul. 5. It was a generous church (v. 32). They held nothing back from those who had need.

6. Its ministers had a powerful testimony (v. 33).

7. Its members had an unblemished character (v. 33).

II. Appointment of Deacons (Acts 6:1-4).

1. The occasion (v. 1). The church was threatened with disruption over suspected partiality in the distribution of alms. The Grecians felt discriminated against in that their widows were neglected in the "daily ministrations."

2. The issue met (vv. 2-6). A congregational meeting was called, the case placed before the church, and the church instructed to select seven men of good report, filled with the Holy Spirit and wisdom to administer the temporalities of the church, leaving the apostles freedom for prayer and the ministry of God's Word.

3. The ministry of the deacons (v. 7). They looked after the poor, but while distributing alms, they were witnessing for Christ. Social service is a by-product of Christianity and not Christianity itself.

III. The Raising of Dorcas (Acts 9:36-39).

1. Her ministry (v. 36 Cf. v. 39). Her life was full of good works, such as making coats and garments for the poor. Her noble ministry has set in motion countless numbers of needles, and has given incentive to many noble women to follow her example. The good deeds were not merely those which she intended to do, but "which she did."

2. Her death (v. 37). In the midst of a life full of good works she was overtaken by death.

3. Peter sent for (v. 38). In their distress the disciples sent two men urgently to request Peter to come to them. Having heard of the healing of Aeneas at Lydda, which was near, they no doubt believed that he could restore Dorcas to life.

4. Dorcas raised (vv. 39-41). In answer to Peter's prayer Dorcas was "presented alive to the saints and widows."

5. The effect (v. 42). So astounding was this miracle that "many believed in the Lord."

IV. Ministering to the Saints (II Cor. 9:1-7).

The saints in need were Christians at Jerusalem. Many were impoverished because of embracing Christianity. Sending money to the saints at Jerusalem was an expression of affection on the part of these Gentile Christians for the Jews. As an incentive to giving Paul shows:

1. That the volume of reaping is based upon the volume of sowing (v. 6).

2. There should be a heart purpose (v. 7). This calls for intelligence as to the object in giving.

3. Giving should not be of necessity (v. 7). No particular value accrues to the giver who only responds under pressure.

4. God loves a cheerful giver (v. 7). Right understanding of responsibility toward God with reference to temporal possessions will make giving a glorious privilege.

All Who Come

Christ saveth unto the uttermost all who come unto God by him; and it is best to leave Christ to determine where the uttermost lies. What is impossible with men is easy to omnipotent grace.—W. L. Watkinson.

By-law No. 123, sponsored by Alderman MacKimmie and C. Miller passed its first and second reading.

A regularly adjourned meeting of Lachute Town Council, was held in the Council room on Thursday last, when were present Mayor, Peter Dobbie & Aldermen Jno. A. Rice, H. M. Lavigne, J. P. MacKimmie, Dr. A. Rodrigue, C. R. Miller, W. A. Morrison, Jos. Speight and J. B. Raymond.

The adoption of the finance committees report was on motion of Alderman Rice, seconded by Alderman MacKimmie.

Moved by Alderman J. B. Raymond, seconded by Alderman Joseph Speight that the request of Mrs. Racine Larocque for relief be referred to the finance committee.

Alderman Jno. A. Rice, seconded by Alderman C. R. Miller that the Agricultural Society of Argenteuil be granted the sum of $250.

Moved by Alderman J. B. Raymond, seconded by Alderman Joseph Speight that the contract of laying a 24 inch collector pipe in the river bed be given to Jno. Braney at a price of $5.00 per running foot, the town to supply the pipes, gravel and cement, the contract to last for eight days, after which time Mr. Braney will be given the contract of completing if work is found satisfactory.

Moved by Alderman W. A. Morrison, seconded by Alderman J. P. MacKimmie that L. C. Barron be required to grade and put in good order Isabella Street within thirty days. This motion was carried with exception of one dissentient Alderman Jno. A. Rice who claimed the town had nothing to do with the street in question.

Alderman C. R. Miller gave notice of motion that at the next meeting he would introduce a by-law to effectuate a loan by Bond issue for improvements to the waterworks intake at Pollocks, and to acquire suitable fire equipment.

The meeting then adjourned until Monday, July 20th.

Indignant because the Council had transacted its business behind closed doors and had not imparted information to the large gathering of citizens assembled in the Public Hall of the Council Chamber, who had attended a citizen's meeting called on Thursday last, July 16th. for the purpose of deciding whether the town were desirous of proceeding with the improvements to our water system, said meeting being adjourned until Monday July 20th., the crowd left the hall and marched up to the Mayor's House and not finding him there they proceeded to Alderman MacKimmie's store where several of the town officials had gathered in conference to get further particulars relative to the work in prospect of building the proposed new dam at Pollocks.

The crowd had assumed a threatening attitude and had stopped a number of automobiles from passing through diverting them to the other side of the street when town constable Gagnier arrived and cleared the right of way. After their demand for work Alderman MacKimmie told them they were doing their best to push the waterworks through and hoped to give them work by the middle of August. The crowd then dispersed.

The Council had met in the Secretary's office where sixteen tenders had been received for the position of town officer. They were all ranging between $900 and $1200. The four that engaged attention were those of R. Todd at $1,000; H. St. Jacques $1200; W. McFaul $1100; and Adelaire Malette at $960. for whom there was considerable discussion, Robert Todd being finally appointed on motion of Alderman MacKimmie, seconded by Alderman Millar on a vote of 5 to 4.

The finance committee then dealt with Mrs. Mews for help, she was granted relief of $3.00 per week for one month.

Echoes from the Canadian Author's Convention

One of the most outstanding features of the recent convention of authors held in Toronto, was the cordiality of the people of Toronto towards the visiting authors who were gathered from all parts of the Dominion.

They were given a reception by the Toronto authors in the art gallery. This beautiful building was formerly "The Grange," and was built by Mr. Darcy Boulton in 1817 and willed to the city of Toronto by the late Prof. Goldwin Smith. The Art Museum of Toronto as it was first called was established in 1900, and was moved to its present quarters in 1911. Though filled with many beautiful works of art, the most interesting and beautiful to the mind of the writer was the display of paintings of wild flowers, an entire room being filled with them, and all the work of one man, who, evidently had the same thought in mind as Ruskin that all the learning that a man has is but nought, when he comes face to face with nature."

The visiting authors were received by Mr. Donald French (retiring president of the Toronto branch), Mrs. French, Mr. Wyly Greir, Miss Stella Greir, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Robson, & Mr. Fred Haines, who gave the address of welcome, in which he referred to the authors as a distinguished body of men and women representing Canadian arts, and letters, who were doing something for their country in attempting to interpret the spirit of the country, and who should be encouraged, whether their work conformed to our ideas of literature, music, art, or not.

Dr. William D. Lighthall, of Montreal, responded to Mr. Haines' address of welcome in a few well chosen words.

One writer in speaking of Dr. Lighthall, classes him as one of Canada's most eminent archeologists, and a philosophical thinker, and suggests that perhaps his greatest service has been in his leadership for many years in the Union of Canadian Municipalities, and in his strenuous and fruitful activity in the improvement of our cities and the championship of the rights of the people.

We regret that our rule of two years service makes it necessary to elect a new Dominion president, and while we welcome Dr. Scott of Ottawa, as our new president, we part with Dr. Lighthall with sorrow.

His words of council will be borne in mind by many of us when he said "You cannot," he said, "expect a nation to exist by vulgar aims, and second rate expedients, by selfish comfort and cunning politics, by great monopolies and shows of wealth, by domination of one class over the liberties of the other, by ignorance, sectional fanaticism, hatred and injustice to other people, or by defiance of the moral instincts."

The best and highest ideals only are essential to the life of any nation."

These are Dr. Lighthall's ideas of the right living, and in his own life and business, he has practised what he preached.

Amongst other noted speakers at the convention was Michael Luchkovich a Ukrainian and member of parliament for Vegreville Alberta. His subject was "The New Canadian as a reader," and expressed his opinion that there should be more Canadian prose and poetry in our Canadian elementary and secondary school text books. He thought this would be a great contributing factor in bringing about the much desired Canadianization of the foreign racial element with which this country, particularly the West is greatly populated.

This Western M. P. told us that he had been directed to a convention of conservatives which was held on the main floor of the hotel, and on telling the elevator boy that it was the Canadian Authors convention he was looking for the boy said "Oh their up on the eighteenth floor, you know that authors are always up in the air." "But" said Mr. Luchkovich from my experience with politicians, I think that it is the politicians that are always up in the air."

Wallace Havlock Robb of Abbey Dawn, whose bird sanctuary has become internationally famous, emphasized the study of bird life as a means of interpreting nature. He also said that until Canadians paid more attention to Canadian poetry & Canadian poets so that they could read our Canadian literature more intelligently and understand our poetical atmosphere which was permeated with influences, that were here before Cartier, or Champlain, we could not help but remain in the doldrums.

Mr. Robb is a nature poet, and favored the audience with one of his poems describing the calls and whistling of birds which was very beautiful.

Mr. Fraser, veteran writer of fiction, particularly stories of horse racing, in speaking of books, loudly denounced several writers as writers of stories that would not meet the approval of the lovers of clean tales, and for several days after the daily papers carried letters pro and against his open speech. Those who were against, telling him that in speaking of them in that manner, as well as mentioning their names he was creating a demand for the very stories he was denouncing. People who were not familiar with their works would make a point of buying them for curiosity sake if nothing else.

When guests of The Ontario Government at dinner in beautiful Hart House, the authors were addressed by Premier Henry who expressed personal pride and pleasure in bidding them welcome to Hart House, claiming that it was a peculiarly fitting place for such a gathering as our association stood for all the higher and beautiful things of life, also that it was a sign of progress when a gathering such as ours met in such goodly numbers. Speaking of the many Canadian Authors who migrated to the United States, Premier Henry said he was once deploring that fact to a friend and received this reply "We send missionaries to China—why not to the United States" (laughter.)

Prof. Delury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts of Toronto University, in his address used these words "To my way of thinking the poet is the creator of what we term our 'National Life.'" What the poet thinks today the people think tomorrow, also that a glance over a few hundred years would show conclusively that the poet and the author were the determining factors in the trend of national thought and life."

Sitting listening to the speeches in the great hall of Hart House, our eyes wandered to the assembled company of ladies and gentlemen in evening dress and the thought Ah! what a different crowd tonight from that which filled Hart House during the Great War. Then it was eager eyed young men in training that sat at the very same tables discussing the latest movements of the army in Belgium, and looking forward to the time when they too should be "over there" for Hart House, with the crest of the Prince of Wales carved above the windows of the east common room, and the arms of the four colleges in the University displayed on the walls of the quadrangle, St. Michaels, Trinity University and Victoria College was the training home for soldiers for overseas. The entire house being used for military purposes.

The erection of Hart House was carried out under the personal supervision of the Hon. Vincent Massey and is called Hart House in memory of the late Mr. Hart Massey of Toronto. It is built of local gray sandstone, the cutstone being Indiana limestone. The Soldiers' Memorial Cloister and Tower are built of the same material in memory of the six thousand graduates of the University who served in the Great War, of whom six hundred were killed. Their names are carved on the walls of the cloister.

The Founder's Prayer which is carved in stone at the east end of the main corridor, is as follows:—

"That Hart House under the guidance of its warden, may serve in generations to come, the highest interests of this University by drawing into a common fellowship the members of the various colleges and Faculties, and by gathering into a true society the teacher and the student the graduate and the under graduate further, that the members of Hart House may discover within its walls the true education that is to be found in good fellowship, in friendly disputation and debate in the conversation of wise and earnest men, in music, pictures and the play, in the casual book in sports and games and the mastery of the body; and lastly that just as in the days of war, this house was devoted to the training in arms of the young soldier, so in times of peace its halls may be dedicated to the task of arming youth with strength and suppleness of limb, with charity of mind and depth of understanding, and with a spirit of true religion & high endeavour."

Reading that prayer makes one think with Plato "that he who writes leaves to posterity a reputation worth while. The writer of a prayer like that must certainly have had a reputation worth while."

Amongst the very witty speakers at the dinner in the King Edward Hotel given the authors by the city of Toronto, John M. Elson writer of interesting Canadian historical tales, and prominent Toronto citizen, Andrew Watson, F.R.G.S. of Winnipeg, Man., and Alderman Baird Rychman were the most prominent. Alderman Rychman brought vision of a former Methodist minister of Lachute, when the writer was a child, and in hearing him speak and watching his features it was not hard to trace a great resemblance and realize that he was in all truth "a chip of the old block."

Andrew Watson had his audience convulsed with merriment describing the various ailments of his books, such as rickets, paralysis, and so on, each ailment older than the last named. "In fact" said Mr. Watson I have buried so many books, that I am not sure whether I am an author, or an undertaker." Hearing the laughter of his audience, he said "You are laughing but it is a sympathetic laugh, as you are all in this undertaking business the same as I am," meaning that there were many of others who had written stories that they thought were good, only to have them turned down by hard hearted editors.

Mr. Watson claimed that Canada did not pay half enough attention to her writers, while Argentine, which we Canadians thought was not just as well civilized as we were, spent thirty thousand in aid of literary work.

Canadian Authors were dined and feted, but found it hard to sell their books, yet we were constantly reading in our newspapers where some heavy weight champion succeeded in knocking a few million dollars off the face of his opponent in one blow. However he was not faint hearted but laughingly advised his hearers to keep on writing even if they did not make one cent,—providing the publishers did not make it either.

It was quite a treat to lovers of Nellie McLung, Marien Keith and L. M. Montgomery's books to see the three of them sitting conversing together. Mrs. McLung gave an address at one of the meetings, and with her usual charm had her audience laughing one minute and very near to tears the next. One story told in proof of the fact that the Great War had made a great difference in the way of people's ideas. It was of a Ukrainian woman who lay on her death bed and very much afraid to die in this strange land far away from her own minister. A Methodist minister hearing of her illness, her fear and her need of comfort, went to her bedside, took two little red Xmas candles lighted them and placed them at the foot of her bed, knelt down by her and repeated the orthodox prayers of her church, for the dying, until she was no longer afraid, put passed into the Great Beyond serene and calm.

"That" said Mrs. McLung is what I call religion." Yet before the war a Ukrainian woman would never have felt satisfied that a minister from another church could have given her such comfort, nor would a minister of our church ever thought of repeating prayers in the language as it were of the Ukrainian church.

Mrs. George Black, of Ottawa, & the Yukon gave a very interesting talk on the flowers of the Yukon, and a post card copy of a great many different varieties were distributed amongst the guests, copies of Mrs. Black's paintings. Mrs. Black has found and classified over four hundred sorts, and painted pictures of them, which goes to prove that the Yukon is not at all the barren land that some people would have us believe it is.

Ralph Connor asked this question "Why does the Canadian Author exist?" Then answered his own question by saying "to serve his country as best he can by writing good clean literature. Authors he said were the citizens of the universe, everything they produced in co-operation with the universe. The whole earth, the moon, and the star belonged to them, no matter where they looked was raw material. Also that it was a wonderful gift to be able to write books that made people laugh. That books and laughter often saved people's sanity."

He harked back as it were to the old log school house in Glengerry, saying that although he owed a lot to the education he got there, he owed still more to his early home training.

That speech ought to hearten parents, particularly the mothers who, in these times of fast living, are earnestly striving to bring their children up in the way they should go, and with apparently no result. Let them not be weary in well doing, for in due season, these same children will no doubt eulogize their childhood training as Ralph Connor is doing at the present day.

Ralph Connor said in concluding his speech "There is great stuff in Glengerry," & we quite agree with him; Sandy Fraser for instance and a few others.

Miss Louise Silcox, and Mr. Arthur Guiterman of the Authors League of America, brought greetings from the American Branch, and were very interesting speakers Mr. Guiterman who recited one of his poems about The Hills, claimed that it was all nonsense that a man who lived in a level country could not write about the hills.

A professor from the Maritime provinces told us that there were no public libraries in the Maritime provinces, just libraries in connection with the schools. He deplored the fact, and claimed that the provinces were striving towards that end but so far without success.

The French section was well represented by members from Montreal, Quebec and Ottawa, and a very cordial relationship existed between the two sections. Madame Benoit, of Montreal, bringing greetings from the Montreal Branch, also Dr. Camille Roy of Laval University who spoke on several occasions both in English and in French.

One speaker who preceded him had mentioned the immortal "Drummond," and his Habitual poems, in reply Dr. Roy did not speak so highly of the "patois" as he called it in which they were written, claiming that this "patois" as he called it did not exist in the language of the French Canadian, but in the mind of Drummond only.

We who live in a French Canadian farming community differ with Dr. Roy there. We have heard it with our own ears and know whereof we speak in saying that it does exist even today.

One particularly nice French lady from Quebec said "We will always have happy memories of each other, and of our convention, and we agree quite heartily with her, as it was a delightful convention from beginning to end. But we must not forget the musical part of it. Wonderful sweet songs rendered by Dorothy Allan Park, Mrs. M. H. Brown, The Musical Crusaders and music from the Hambourg Trio consisting of Clement Hambourg, Pianist; John Langly, Violinist; Boris Hambourg, Cellist and director.

The Musical Crusaders were under the management of Alfred Heather. One particularly beautiful song given by them being Bliss Carmen's "Low tide at Grande Pre."

After the regular convention was over the visit to Niagara Falls seemed a fitting ending to our celebration, and those of us who were seeing the falls for the first time, felt very much as Dickens did when he visited them in 1842 "that we were standing very near to our Creator."

And later in the day when we stood by Brock's monument, and also by Laura Secord's grave, and looked upon the calm serene face carved upon her monument we lived in the past and went with her step by step on that swift perilous journey through forests, rough, tangled and filled with lurking Indians and wild beasts, and shared in her ecstasy on finding that she was in time and had saved her friends and her country from death and carnage.

Coming back to Toronto by train through the fruitful regions of St. Catharines, Hamilton over the River Jordan we realized that we were indeed living in a goodly land, and thanked God for our inheritance.

As we rode on in the gathering darkness we turned back for a last look at Hamilton, our glance was caught and held by the beauty of the lights reflecting on the waters of Burlington Bay. Watching in silent admiration our thoughts were again busy with the past, and in fancy we heard the soft swish of water against the red man's canoe as he silently paddled along its banks, his head erect, his eyes piercing the deep darkness, which lighted only by the short flickering light of a firefly which had ventured out a little way over the cool water and was hastening landward again as the fear of losing her way in this trackless blackness.

The train whistled, and we came back to the present with a start realizing that time and science has done much to improve this old world of ours and wonder if humanity to day is any happier than the red men of those olden days. We doubt it. Indians were supposed to be crafty and always seeking gain for themselves. What about the people of to day? What will historians write of us a thousand years from now.

J. A. G., Cushing.

Tonight is the family re-union. It has been a weekly event ever since the young folk scattered to various towns, each to make his or her own way in the world.

It started when Dick left to work in a neighboring city. Dick was full of enthusiasm, but apt to be just a little bit wild. So Dad started the habit of calling him once a week just to keep him under the parental influence.

Then Helen was married and moved away, and mother must needs make weekly voice visits with her.

And now Betty has taken a position in another town. Her voice comes home each week too.

Dad and mother gather all the news and pass it on to the others. It keeps the family together—and the cost of the three evening calls is less than a dollar.

Evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. (local time). Just give "Long Distance" the number you want—it speeds up the service. If you don't know the distant number, "Information" will look it up for you.

Rowena Rides the Rumble

Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nationwide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes fearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

The three tourists reach Denver, after passing through Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis. Peter and Rowena have many tiffs on the way while Carter keeps wiring Bobby to return to New York. The morning after they reach Denver, Peter and Rowena discover Bobby has deserted them and returned to New York by train. They are faced with the impossible condition of continuing their trip without a chaperon.

"Well you're not chained there are you? There's nothing to keep you from getting out is there? I'm in bed, too, but I'm not going to let a mere being in bed interfere with my professional future, am I? I'll meet you down stairs in ten minutes." And she hung up the receiver.

Now on the whole, no one could have been more practical about things connected solely with business than Rowena. Her clothes were smart, for all their increasing shabbiness, but they were extremely tailored and so trim. Her very manners were crisp and business-like. But something, she didn't know just what, prompted her to discard her chic sports costume that night. She dived to the bottom of her bag and pulled out a soft and shimmery little dinner gown of enticing line and beguiling color. She put on her highest-heeled silken slippers. She got out tinkling little blue bracelets and earrings and chains. And she accentuated her shimmery sweetness with the flattering lines of a chiffon velvet scarf, deep and wide and ruffled.

When Peter, waiting rather sulkily in the lobby of the hotel, first saw her floating toward him he could scarcely believe it was Rowena of the Rumble seat. Her rouge-red lips smiled at his frank amazement and she took his hand in hers, powdery soft to the touch and faintly perfumed.

"Peter darling," she said. "I have a gorgeous idea."

Peter's sulkiness took instant flight. "Gosh, Rowena, you—you're exquisite! You're just ravishing! You must let me paint you like that. You're simply unbelievable—you're not real!"

"Oh but this is the real Rowena," she said with seductive sweetness. "You never saw me before. You know only a poor little working girl trying to earn her daily bread."

"I—I've just got to paint you like that!"

"You shall," she promised, smiling.

"I suppose it's too late to do it now—" he began.

"I'm afraid so," Rowena drew a deep, deep breath. Something about it—something about her—made Peter think vaguely of a swimmer standing cold and bold & bare, body poised motionless, for a distance plunge into icy water. "Peter—you—you are very sure you are not in love?"

"I will be," he assured her gallantly, "if you look like this very often."

"I'm serious, Peter." "No, I'm not in love." "Absolutely?" "Absolutely."

"Then Peter, how about this?" Another deep breath—another premonitory of cold flesh anticipating an icy plunge. "You know, marriage isn't the sweetly sacred thing it used to be. It's only a sort of expediency, these days, a matter of expediency, or convenience, or emotional experiment. And besides, business is far more important. Don't you think so?"

"I hadn't really thought of it in just that way," said Peter vaguely.

"Well, you think of it and you'll see I'm right. And as long as we're not in love with anybody else or anything, and nobody cares one way or the other—well why don't we—why can't we—don't you see what I mean? Why not just go ahead with the trip the way we are, and do the work, and get the money and everything—and just get married? That's all."

Peter hadn't remotely suspected what she had in mind until she brought the word out, struck him full in the face with it, as it were. And it pulled him up short, shocked and resentful like a struck man.

"Why, Rowena, that's—that's very nice of you—I suppose. But I really had never thought about—being married to you—"

"Well," she interrupted tartly, "if it comes to that I can't think of anything in the world I'd like less than being married to you, either." But she realized at once she was off on the wrong track and quickly changed her method. "Of course, darling," she added kindly, "I know we don't get along very well together, and that we're anything but in love. But it isn't a real marriage I have in mind. Just to cover the proprieties and let us finish up the trip. And just think how much more money we can save, not always having to buy manicures and souvenirs for Bobby!—I know a judge in New York and he'll annul us as soon as we get back. No harm done."

"Maybe he won't do it."

"Oh, yes he will. He wants to marry me himself. He'll annul us like a shot out of a gun."

"But, Rowena—" he began wretchedly.

"And, Peter, dear Peter," said Rowena moving prettily in the transparent velvet scarf, "I'm really a terribly nice sort when I'm not working hard and worried about money. Ever so many quite nice people are terribly anxious to be married to me. I dare say as a married couple we shall get along better than most. And we will be careful to get rooms on separate floors of the hotel and make the clerks give us a receipt making a note of it, so we can use it for evidence that we have never—uh—never been—anything but just—well married, you know."

"That's enough, if you ask me," said Peter in a troubled voice.

"I'm terribly hungry," said Rowena. "Let's go down to that cunning little place the clerk told us about and have a sandwich or something. And you think it over. I had to think up some way out of it, Peter. We just couldn't chuck it—not here—not right at the very front door of the Rocky Mountains. I couldn't bear it."

So they took a taxicab and went down to a nice little place and Rowena didn't say a word about business or money, or professions. She talked softly of lovely lovable things, and smiled and the beads shone blue on her throat, and stars shone in the blue of her eyes, until Peter declared it was a very good idea of hers and they would get it done first thing next morning.

After breakfast the next morning Peter insisted upon using a small portion of their dwindling expense money to buy a plain wedding ring.

They had no trouble procuring the license, hurried directly to the office of the nearest justice and by twelve o'clock they were married.

Back in the hotel they turned abruptly away from each other as soon as they had their keys from the desk and went up to their rooms by separate elevators. And at one o'clock they were drawing out of Denver, headed north, both a little hushed, a little excited and more than a little nervous.

It was very late that night when they reached Cheyenne. The last twenty miles Peter drove slowly, creeping along as one who dreaded the ultimate arrival and when no amount of slowing down could postpone the inevitable he was plainly on edge.

"It's going to be awkward as the devil," he said moodily.

"Not at all," said Rowena.

"Just go right in and ask for two rooms on separate floors."

"You'd better come with me. It will look odd for me to go in alone and then come back for you."

Rowena got out. "J-just be off-hand about it, Peter. Be casual."

"Yeh," he growled. "They're going to think it's very fishy."

Obviously, they did think so. Peter strolled up to the desk with a conspicuous assumption of nonchalance, Rowena tagging nervously at his heels.

"Got a couple of rooms?" he asked the clerk.

"Yes, sir," said the clerk briskly.

"On—er separate floors, I suppose," said Peter hopefully.

"No—connecting," said the clerk.

"Er—well—" began Peter, weakening.

But Rowena nudged him.

"We'd rather have them—er—on different floors, if you don't mind," he stammered and his face grew red.

The clerk looked up at them strangely. The telephone girl came around from her desk in the corner and lounged within good hearing distance. A large man in slouchy clothes sauntered over from the cigar stand. Two men sitting near dropped their papers in their laps, and one began to rub up his glasses.

"Separate floors?" repeated the clerk.

"Y-yes, please," chimed Rowena helpfully.

"So—so we won't wake each other up mornings. We—sleep late."

"Um, I see," said the clerk.

"Traveling together?"

"Yes," said Peter firmly. "My wife and I are taking a motor trip up to Yellowstone."

The clerk swung the register toward him and handed him the pen.

"Will you register?"

"Peter Blande," wrote Peter firmly.

"Your—wife, too, please," said the clerk.

Peter hesitated. "Mrs.—Peter—" he wrote slowly.

Rowena leaned over. "I'd rather use my own name, Peter," she said.

"For—for professional reasons."

Peter crossed out what he had written and wrote "Miss". Then he scratched that out and wrote "Rowena Rostand". But it did not look just right to him so he carefully inserted "Mrs." over the scratched-out "Miss."

The clerk studied the name, the telephone girl looking over his shoulder as he did so. The large man in the slouchy clothes studied Peter.

"New York, eh?" said the clerk.

"Yes," said Peter.

"Yes, indeed," chimed Rowena.

"Motor out together?"

"Yes," said Peter and Rowena in well-timed chorus.

The clerk frowned over the room chart. "I'm afraid we're full up," he said slowly. "Not a thing left."

Peter leaned over the desk and his mild face looked quite grim and ugly. "You said you had two rooms," he said in a low voice.

"We did then," said the clerk evenly. "But just now"—he shook his head—"I'm afraid not."

The telephone girl snickered a little and one of the men sitting near by rustled his paper. Rowena flushed and caught a sharp breath, cowering slightly, but Peter suddenly showed surly and efficient.

"Oh, yes, you have," he said. "Two rooms, and we'll take them. We've got a marriage certificate, if that's what's eating you!"

"Yeah?"

"Rowena, get the certificate!"

Rowena hurriedly took it out of the side pocket of her bag. The clerk read it slowly and handed it to the large man in the slouchy clothes who looked it over and nodded churlishly.

"Denver, eh?" inquired the clerk. "To-day, eh?"

Some other people drove out with us," Rowena hastened to explain. "And they were unexpectedly called back to New York—and so—the rest of us—Peter and I—just got married."

"We've got a very nice suite on the second floor," suggested the clerk.

"All right," said Peter grimly.

"No," cried Rowena faint but firm. "Separate floors."

The clerk grinned, not unsympathetically. "All right, all right," he said. "Don't be nervous, lady. We'll put him on the top floor. Congratulations."

Mr. Blande. She's certainly a beauty. She'll get over that nervousness."

Peter muttered unspeakable things deep down in his throat, and the boy came in and took their bags and led them off to separate rooms on separate floors. A loud gust of laughter swept up the elevator shaft in their wake.

In the doorway of the room assigned her Rowena turned and held out an appealing hand.

"G-good night, Peter," she said sadly.

World Honors Its Brave

Men of Army and Navy

The Congressional medal of honor is the highest American award for valor. It is granted only to officers of enlisted men of the army who in action involving actual conflict with the enemy distinguish themselves conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of their lives above and beyond the call of duty. There is also a corresponding medal of honor for the navy. The Distinguished Service medal, established in 1918, may be awarded to "any person who, while serving in any capacity with the army of the United States, shall distinguish himself or herself by specially meritorious service to the government in a duty of great responsibility." There is a corresponding medal for the navy. The Distinguished Service cross is purely an army decoration to reward individual extraordinary acts of heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy. There is also a navy cross. Some of the most notable foreign decorations are: British Victoria cross; French Legion of Honor; German Iron cross; Belgian Order of Leopold; Japanese Order of the Rising Sun; Italian Order of St. Maurice, etc.

Co-Operation Basis of

All Success in World

If there were more co-operation in the world, there would be less fiction. No home life, no business, no nation can succeed without co-operation. Confusion and wastage of time and energy must naturally result. Look around at all the successful men today, and then look at the business concerns they direct. In every case you will find that co-operation is the corner stone of their success. They have been shrewd enough to realize that only failure would have resulted had they neglected co-operation.

And do not think that co-operation means only co-operation on the part of one section of the business, the home, or the nation. The worker and the owner; the head of the house and the kitchenmaid; the prime minister and the people—everyone must do his bit at co-operating.

There can be no happiness, no content of any kind, if co-operation is missing. We should have fewer broken lives, less unemployed, and no wars if co-operation were given a reasonable chance.—London Tit-Bits.

Master Your World

Youth must face the world as it is. Tackle it unafraid, and with courage and faith master it. Enter your field of service in the spirit of a servant and with the enthusiasm of a freeman. That field of tomorrow will demand more than the past; stronger bodies, more alert minds, and sincere spirituality. Speed, efficiency, production, ideals, money, leisure and life await you. Your body will be called upon for the first three, it will take your head for the next two, and the heart will find its fullness in giving the world a royal life. Here's to you! The greatest age, the grandest world, and reward of true living await the youth of today.—Exchange

German War Decoration

The war decoration worn by the Germans in the World war is sometimes mistaken for a Maltese cross, but it is the Iron cross and dates from the former Prussian kingdom. It was presented for the first time in 1813 for bravery and merit, regardless of rank. It was renewed in 1870 and again in 1914.

In 1813 the Iron cross had curved arms and a silver border. The front side was smooth, and the reverse had three oak leaves, the initials of the donor, and beneath that the year. In 1870 this cross bore the letter "W" for the Kaiser's name, and above it a crown. It was the same in 1914 except for the change in dates.

Poverty Defined

The following definition of poverty is that of Dr. Robert W. Kelso, sociologist: "Poverty is that condition of living in which the individual, whether from lack of means or the failure to apply them, consistently fails to maintain himself and those properly dependent upon him at a plane of living high enough to insure continuous bodily and mental fitness to carry on permanently in his occupation and locality, and which allows him and them to live and function in their community with decency and self-respect."

Marking Historic Locations

Virginia claims to lead all the states in attention to historic locations and the marking of them for the information of visitors. "Writing history on iron instead of paper," state officials call it. Two-faced metal markers call attention to places of renown, and they are set in historic sequence. Thus the movements of armies in Civil war days and the inland spread of settlement from tidewater can be followed by the observant tourist.

Helping Mother

Gene was near by when her mother and a neighbor were discussing the approaching housecleaning problems. A few days later when the four-year-old's mother returned from an errand, the youngster, smiling, ran to meet her, saying:

"I helped you, mother. A woman wanted some old clothes and I cleaned out your closet."

BEAUHARNOIS ENQUIRY CLOSED

The committee investigating what is now recognized as the "Beauharnois Scandal" have had some great surprises when unfolding the early happenings of this gigantic enterprise, where millions of dollars have been handed around in such fragrant style as to create a general feeling of public indignation.

The Ottawa Citizen of July 22nd. dealing editorially says in part:—

This latest exposure of election campaign funds may help to awaken public interest in possible methods of ridding party politics of an incubus. It is the skeleton in the cupboard of both parties. Men in public life who would bitterly resent being offered a personal bribe become involved in the corrupt business of bribing parties.

When candidates accept financial aid from such funds as Beauharnois paid to the Liberal party, they know that they are obligated to some undisclosed special interest. Some members in the House become cynical about it. They regard themselves merely as voting machines. They vote according to the party whip, without troubling to examine the merits of the case too closely—unless they are liable to be personally affected.

It must be a humiliating experience for honorable members however, to find that they have sold themselves, more or less, to patrons of the party who expect to receive special consideration in return for contributions made to election expenses. It is hardly inspiring to be bought politically like cattle.

The desire to obtain contributions to campaign funds has been responsible for some scandalous votes at the expense of the taxpayers. As Mr. Bennett said, in attacking a railway bond guarantee for $45,000,000 in the session of 1914, the proposal is made by one side of the House; it is acquiesced in by the other side, after pretending to oppose so that the campaign contributions may be larger.

It is possible that contributions to campaign funds caused Canada to be saddled with three transcontinental railways around the north shore of Lake Superior, when two would have been adequate. The corrupt percentage in the letting of contracts has been responsible for extravagant expenditures right across Canada. But for the necessity of having to raise money for election expenses, taxes in Canada could be very substantially lightened.

Many people are shocked to hear of the enormous bribes paid to the parties by the Beauharnois promoters. But many taxpayers need to ask themselves whether the surprise is genuine. They must have heard, however vaguely, that candidates have election expenses. Some must have known it by legitimately contributing.

There can be very few active election workers who have never heard of the patronage list. Political patronage is maintained for no other purpose than to win elections. When contracts are awarded under patronage, and government supplies are ordered from a patronage list, it is a form of bribery. But it is generally practised by the party in power.

It should be possible to find means to relieve otherwise honorable men in Canadian public life of this degradation. Both parties are involved. It happens that the Liberal party has been caught taking the big bribe from Beauharnois.

Mr. Bennett's apparent refusal to accept $200,000 from the same source for the Conservative campaign fund will be recorded in political history as a service to Canadian public life. He set an example to emulate in election politics.

It may be well said that honesty in politics, as in everything else, is a matter of individual demonstration. But the Conservative party cannot pose to be so much holier than the Liberal party. Campaign fund transactions are common to both.

On both sides of the House, and in the Senate, there must be party members who would like to see election expenditures greatly curtailed so that party managers would be relieved of the apparent demand for large funds. Some safeguards against election corruption have been set up; too often, when an instance of corruption is disclosed on one side, it is answered by threats to uncover similar corruption on the other side; so that legal proceedings are dropped by mutual agreement. The laws stultified.

A special committee might well be appointed to examine the whole situation in Canadian politics relating to election expenditures. The business of collecting contributions from privileged interests, in effect, the prostitution of party politics, is directly related to the expenditure of individual candidates in party contests. It is equally related to the attitude of the electorate toward this expenditure.

Why Not Mobilize Our Relief Work Into Constructive Effort ?

By CHAS. W. FREDERICK,

Managing Editor, Northern Newspapers,
Grand Prairie, Alberta.

When the organization of industry becomes disrupted by an economic upheaval, widespread unemployment follows. The first wave of such unemployment floods the labor market, and a condition is thereby created of which other employers are quick to take advantage. Labor is too plentiful, they declare, and therefore must be cheaper. Wages tumble, and in many cases the selfishness of the employer is carried to the point where the unfortunate workers are exploited heartlessly and they are compelled to work for a mere pittance.

Following the collapse of the labor market, Canada is to-day feeding thousands of unemployed. Every municipality has its quota of people to whom the general public must lend a helping hand. There is no work for them to do, yet they must be fed. Our governments are spending millions of dollars in the cause of relief.

Yet we have the anomaly of the government's inability to carry on public works because of the large expenditures for the support of the unemployed. Because of keeping the unemployed it can not afford to employ labor to carry on works of permanent value and development.

Germany and France have less unemployment than other nations. But Germany and France are using their surplus men in the building up of militia. Which should provide us with a cue for the solution of our own problem.

A study of the ranks of the unemployed discloses that while there are thousands of good Canadians among these unfortunate people, there is also a generous sprinkling of foreign agitators, who are seeking (and succeeding to a marked degree) in fostering the spirit of communism and anarchy. They are a detriment to this country, and yet in the cause of humanity, we are feeding them at the public expense.

Why should Canada not undertake to mobilize her unemployed under a military plan?

With the establishment of such a plan, every male person in Canada would be required to register with the authorities, giving his name, age, nationality, and whether or not he had become a naturalized citizen of Canada. He would also be required to state whether or not he was employed at the time of registration. All unemployed single men would then be enlisted in the industrial army, sent to training headquarters, and given most of the usual military training, particularly the discipline which brings the raw recruit to his greatest efficiency.

While such a mobilization would reduce the per capita cost for maintenance, it would provide uniform and adequate maintenance for the men. It would centralize authority, and afford the necessary opportunity for weeding out the anarchists and the mischief makers for deportation. Following the first few weeks of training and discipline, this industrial army would be available for moving about and concentrating, not on works of destruction as in war time, but in the work of development and construction on projects of great national value. With such an army available, highways or railways would be merely a matter of an army campaign, and the funds the country is now spending for relief would be directly applied to those construction projects which are now denied because of the cost of labor involved.

The industrial army plan could be developed to a marked degree of efficiency. Promotion from the ranks and through the several official ranks would be based on the record of the man or officer, having regard to his proved ability in maintaining loyalty and morale in the company or battalion under his charge; the economy with which he carried on his particular work (to be commensurate with the acre taken of the men under him), and the progress made with the work in hand.

The removal of such an army of men from the cities would leave room for the absorption of those unemployed who, by reason of their families, should find employment near their homes. Labor in general would be placed on a more firm basis, with less opportunity for exploitation by reasonable and grasping employers. Community support of the indigent would be removed, and the entire country given a prosperous outlook. And, what is of real value, the process would give the necessary opportunity for ridding ourselves once and for all the bolshevist element with which the ranks of our unemployed are so thoroughly sprinkled.

Enlistment in the industrial army would not be permanent nor for a definite and fixed period of time. Where individuals were offered bona fide employment they would be released, and where industry required various types of labor, selections would be made from the ranks by the officers in command, such selections being based on the rating of the individual men and their record both before and after enlistment in the industrial army.

Through an industrial army, organized on a permanent basis, there would be provided a haven at all times for the unfortunate out-of-work. It would be a respectable haven where he would be given many more advantages than merely the food to keep body and soul together, and while there would be a scale of pay that would permit some leeway in his choice of diversion, it would be sufficiently low that enlistment therein would not be made attractive to any others than those who really need consideration and relief.

The Canadian Government could do worse than to consider seriously the organization of our unemployed into an army whose work would be turned to constructive development.

The Orangemen of this lodge held their annual Church parade on Sunday, July 19th., and an unusually large gathering assembled in St. John's Church; filling the building to its capacity.

The service was most hearty and the singing all that could be desired; while the many welcome friends from Dunany and Louisa made the occasion a pleasant reunion of old time friendship.

Rev. Allan E. Mount was the special preacher for the occasion.

(D.V.) there will be service in St. John's Church, Sunday next at 2.30 p.m. (S. T.)

Lone Watcher in the Shadow

By A. W. PEACH

BEFORE him stood the House of Mystery. It had been a long walk from the village, but Morgan, after listening to the story of the place as told by a wide-eyed native, had made up his mind to visit it. And here it was.

Morgan went on, taking no stock in the superstition that kept the mountain villagers away from the place. The view down the valley was superb; but he thought of other things told him by his informant. Here the strangers had come, asking questions of no one, but building the pleasant house which now stared like a dead thing down the valley. The man, so Morgan was told, was named Albrecht; his wife, young and handsome with a grave, dark beauty, was known as Erna. They gave out the brief information that they had come there because of Mr. Albrecht's health. They had lived in peace, coming to the village for a brief visit and returning to the distant house, until the fatal night.

Morgan shook himself from his reverie and turned to the house. The door yielded to his touch, and looking in he remembered something else. The house and every thing in it had been left as it was that night.

No one knew what had taken place. When the constable from the village came, he found the wife there, in a stained nightgown, and in the room beyond Albrecht, a raving maniac, with blood upon his hands, and near him a knife of foreign make.

It had been easy to charge him with the murder; and so the case had been settled.

Morgan turned into the room. Most of the furniture was still there, dusty, sagging. He went on into the living room and found him facing a pipe organ, built into the wall.

Morgan left the room and started to go upstairs, but the dark, forbidding landing above, the musty odor from the cellar, these, with the thoughts the place had aroused, drove him out to the fresh air.

"Enough for me!" was his conclusion, and he worked his way through the weeds to what had evidently been a summer house, thinking to rest there before his tramp back to the village.

As he stepped into the summer house, his eye caught between the floor boards unheaved by the frost and change of years, a glint of paper. Bending over he pulled out a folded note, stained and faded. He opened it.

"Somebody was reading that here and shoved it down between the cracks," he murmured to himself.

The first page was faded completely. Inside, the dim lines read clearly enough to make sense. As he read his heart slowed its beat. He was reading a note addressed to some one who was being threatened with death unless she renounced the love she held for another. It was a brutal letter, written by a man seemingly beside himself; and at the end was the name, Hilmar.

Morgan read the note again and his mind became calm. Erna had come here with the man she loved, to be followed by a man who loved her enough to slay her if he could not have her.

A noise stiffened Morgan. He looked up to see a man coming in the yard and greeting him with a smiling, "Hello, I didn't expect to see anyone here at the end of the earth. I am thinking of buying this place—like to fish and hunt here. Hope you are not on the same errand?"

The eyes were keen and cold but kind, and the stranger's smile was winning. Soon Morgan found himself in pleasant conversation with him.

"Well, I certainly don't want the house, but I intend to buy the place and raze the house from top to bottom. I guess that will wipe out the story for good," he said quietly.

Morgan started to tell him of his find in the summer house, but decided to avoid spoiling the man's pleasure in the site he was buying.

The conversation drifted about until the stranger rose and said he would ride back to the village as he had a saddlehorse tethered in the grove. As they parted he handed Morgan a card, and at the same time invited him to come up the next autumn for a hunting trip.

Morgan slipped the card into his pocket; then carefully drew it out and read with a sense of shock that made him reel—"John Hilmar."

Morgan stared in the direction the man had gone, then at the card. "He came here to clean up everything to make sure nothing would ever appear against him; but here it is—hidden in a moment of fear by that poor girl. Where sure is a watcher in the shadows. Now I must get everlastingly busy!"

Six months later the long arm of Justice had claimed its own. Morgan watched the case develop. Patiently the net had been woven about the cool murderer. He had fled the country after the murder, made money, returned after safety seemed assured, planned to buy the property to make sure no evidence would ever appear against him, had done all a man could do to wash the stains from his past only to have a faded note speak voicelessly from the ruins of the girl's beloved haunt—a girl faithful to one she loved even in extremity, and dying because of that love.

Beauty and Banff, the heart of the famous Canadian Rockies are synonymous and as like attracts like it is not surprising to find such a bevy of beauty as is shown in the accompanying pictures, disporting itself in the beautiful swimming pools of the Canadian Pacific Railway's palatial Banff Springs Hotel. There are two baths, one of naturally heated sulphur water and the other of ordinary stream water, both of which are extremely popular with the many visitors to the renowned summer resort. Recreations in infinite variety run the gamut of sports from golf to mountaineering. Real cowboys are on hand to take trail-riders through the innumerable passes of the historic mountains, while Stoney Indians and scarlet-coated "Mounties" add yet another touch to the already colorful scene. Banff is something that has to be seen to be appreciated. Its devotees come yearly from the four corners of the globe. There is always something new; always something to do, and when the long happy day is over, dancing to the smart orchestras in the spacious ball room of the hotel forms a fitting prelude to a restful night in the health-giving mountain atmosphere. Yes, Banff is beauty and beauty is Banff and the smiles on the faces of its mermaids speak volumes for the happiness of this great playground.

WATCH THE CALORIES

Canadian prosperity, the problem of the wheat surplus, and everything eating habits—particularly those of women from 15 to 50—are more closely related than most people think, according to Corwin Wickersham, president of Standard Brands Limited.

"If the average woman would be guided in the matter of diet by facts instead of fads," he further states, "they would be happier, healthier and Canada would be more prosperous."

"There are approximately two million women between the ages of 15 to 50 in the Dominion. Hundreds of thousands of them eat bread very sparingly, thousands upon thousands do not eat bread at all, because of the misguided belief that it will make them fat.

"Nothing is further from the truth. I wish it were possible to reach all of them and bring to their attention the seriousness of such unwise discrimination against this fundamental 'Eating bread does not make part of every meal.'

people fat. As a matter of fact the kind of food people eat is not important at all; it's the amount they eat as related to the number of calories they use in work, in play and keeping alive.

"If they eat more than they use up, they get fat; if they use more than they eat, they get thin; when the two are in perfect balance they neither lose nor gain.

"If a woman, whether she's fifteen or fifty, uses up only 2,000 calories a day, doing nothing more strenuous than playing bridge or riding in the back seat of an automobile, and gets 3,000 calories in the food she eats, she will get fat, but not because she eats bread. She will get fat because each day she is taking into the storehouse a thousand calories more than she is using. The extra thousand calories are stored as a reserve supply of fat. She can keep right on eating the same amount of food and not get fat, however, if she will only 'spend' these extra calories doing some housework or playing tennis or golf, tending the garden or getting any other kind of exercise that appeals to her.

"If she uses all the calories she eats she won't ever get fat and she won't have to worry about eating bread, and what is more important, if she will stop discriminating against bread, while she is supplying her body with this nourishing food that will provide extra energy for the enjoyment of everyday living, she will help a great deal in the important economic problem of using considerable of our wheat surplus. In that way she will have the satisfaction of knowing that she is doing her bit to hasten the return of Canadian prosperity."

RIDING IN THE CLOUDS

The pictures show: a typical trail ride, camp scene, fording a river, and the sterling type of cowboy, who is guide, friend and counselor to the disciples of the saddle.

Up, out and away from the cares and limitations of modern life; sharing the joys of long days in the saddle in flower-studded Alplands and stately passes with a goodly company of kindred spirits; happy evenings round the campfires and restful, health-giving nights in the wine-like atmosphere of the mountain; such is the life of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, on their annual expeditions from Banff and Lake Louise, which have long since become famous items in the summer programs of the two great Canadian Pacific Railway hotels at these renowned holiday places. Carefully planned rides, of varying durations to suit all comers; experienced guides, cooks and horse-wranglers; a pack train always ahead to welcome the riders at the evening meal, with the night's camp all ready for occupation; horses that are as sure-footed as goats all contribute to making this form of holiday one of the most original and enjoyable on the American continent. Canadian Pacific lines carry enthusiasts and new recruits from the four corners of the earth to Banff and Lake Louise, each summer. This year the official four-day ride will be held from July 30 to August 2, covering 52 miles through Banff National Park, in territory with special appeal to the photographer and fisherman, and will be followed by a 10-day ride of greater mileage.

Announcements made by the Directors of the Central Canada Exhibition Association in connection with their 44th. Annual Exhibition opening in Ottawa, August 24th. and continuing through August 29th. indicate that the Directors have made no curtailments through fear of hard times. In fact the Directors feel that exhibitions make for better times for all classes of the Community and so the programme for this year, it is confidently promised, will set a new standard for excellence.

Live Stock and Agriculture continues to be the backbone of the exhibition & this year augmented prize lists and new features will appeal to rural visitors. Innovations include boys and girls Calf Clubs, colt championship, domestic Science judging and various other factors in the Junior Agricultural department. Extra purses also have been offered for the Trials of Speed, horse racing appealing to both rural and urban visitors.

For some time the free concerts by an outstanding Band have been features attracting thousands of music lovers. This year the Directors are spending more money than ever before to get the best Band available, Cavallo and His Band of 53 artists. This musical organization will be the feature band for the Toronto Exhibition, the Directors of which very kindly allowed the band to accept the Ottawa engagement before going to Toronto.

"Sensations of 1931" will be premier evening offering in front of the grandstand. This is an Edgar I. Schooley production, a musical and dance revue with Broadway stars, pretty girls, gorgeous stage setting, elaborate lighting effects, bewitching costumes, clever humour, tuneful melodies and snappy dances. The production will be presented from a large outdoor stage and amplifiers will ensure the enjoyment of the music and comedy. The other numbers on the grandstand programme are the pick of the offerings by the New York booking agents. This will be the strongest programme ever assembled for the Exhibition is the claim made by the Directors.

Balloon ascensions and parachute drops, aerobatis, a new bigger Midway, Dominion and Ontario Government exhibits, live fish, wild animals and game birds from the Ontario Government, a pair of Buffalos and a calf from the Dominion Government, automobile show, pure food show, horticultural displays, dog show, child welfare, Hobby show, exhibits by merchants and manufacturers, live stock poultry and pets, grain exhibits, horse show programs in the Coliseum and a hundred and one other factors will combine to make the Exhibition such that visitors no longer can count on seeing it in one day.

Reduced rates are offered by all railways for exhibition week and for those who travel by automobile special parking areas inside the grounds have been provided.

Any information as to entries prize lists or any feature of the exhibition will be cheerfully given. A card to H. H. McElroy, Manager & Secretary, Central Canada Exhibition, Journal Building, Ottawa, will bring an immediate response.

Improved Uniform International

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. J. B. FILLWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Lesson for July 26

CHRISTIANITY SPREAD BY PERSECUTION.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 7:54-8:4; 11:19-21; 1 Pet. 4:12-19.

GOLDEN TEXT—Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: but thou shalt be a crown of life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Gospel Spread by Persecution.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Christianity Spread by Persecution.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Martyrs of the Early Church.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Results of Persecution.

Christianity is a life, a "way." Because it is the life of God expressing itself through men, it is indestructible. Its genius is to prosper through opposition. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." Prosperity may ruin the church, but persecution never.

1. Stephen Stoned (Acts 7:54-60). In Stephen's ministry as deacon he testified of Jesus Christ and wrought miracles in confirmation thereof. This aroused violent opposition on the part of the synagogue officials. Not being able to meet the wisdom as Stephen spoke by the Holy Spirit, they stirred up the people against him. They arrested him and brought him before the council. They accused him of blasphemy and employed false witnesses against him. They could not silence him by argument before the council so they decided to do so by violence.

2. He saw the glory of God (v. 55). Instead of looking about upon his murderers in their raging fury he looked up to heaven. This was the secret of his calmness.

3. He saw Jesus at the right hand of God (vv. 55, 56). The fact that Jesus was standing showed his actual interest in the sufferings of his faithful witness.

4. Cast out of the city and stoned (vv. 58, 59).

5. His prayer (v. 60). He kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." How like the prayer of Jesus on the cross!

6. He fell asleep (v. 60). The Christian's death is only a sleep.

II. Persecution of the Church at Jerusalem (Acts 8:1-4).

1. The ringleader (v. 1, 3). As a member of the Sanhedrin Saul had cast his vote against Stephen. He perhaps was the Sanhedrin representative to guide and direct in the execution. Saul's consenting to Stephen's death shows that he was not taking part himself, but directing the activities.

2. The disciples scattered (v. 1). The stoning of Stephen had so aroused the passions of savage men that they proceeded to wreak vengeance upon the Christians, who, as a result, were scattered abroad.

3. Preaching the Word (v. 4). Though forced out of Jerusalem, they did not go out in a panic, but went "everywhere preaching."

III. Preaching the Lord Jesus at Antioch (Acts 11:19-21).

In the providence of God a new missionary center was now being prepared. With the conversion of Saul and his commission as the apostle to the Gentiles, a new center was needed. Antioch was well suited as that center, for it was the natural door to the Graeco-Roman world. The persecution at Jerusalem sent the disciples as far as Antioch.

1. Preaching to Jews only (v. 19). In this they followed the example of Christ. They had not yet come to realize the universality of the gospel. Even thus limited, they were used in carrying out the divine purpose.

2. Preaching to the Greeks (v. 20). The disciples who had come from Africa and Cyprus were of broader sympathy than those of Palestine, and they courageously crossed the line preaching the Lord Jesus to the Greeks.

3. The hand of the Lord upon them (v. 21). Perhaps the Holy Spirit was poured out anew as at Pentecost. Their ministry was accompanied with the divine blessing. Many believed on the Lord through their ministry.

IV. Rejoicing in Persecutions (1 Peter 4:12-19).

Flery trials are to be expected by the disciples of Christ. The world hated Christ and put Him to death. To be reproached and hated for Christ's sake is a badge of honor, and those who may be called upon thus to suffer should rejoice.

Christ Wins at Last

No matter what the obstacles, Christ wins at last. No matter what the delays and disappointments, Christ triumphs in the end. In spite of suffering and loss and repeated defeats, Christ is the eternal conqueror. Lord, we believe! But we need a lot of help—Charles E. Jefferson.

The Highest Bidder

The highest bidder for the crown of glory is the lowliest bearer of the cross of self-denial—A. J. Gordon.

GEORGE A. HARTLEY IS DEAD IN HIS 57th. YEAR

Prominent Business Man Died Suddenly

George Alfred Hartley, widely known business man, and vice-president and managing director of Verret Stewart & Co. Ltd., agents for the Canadian Salt Company, died suddenly at his summer home, near Foster, on Brome Lake. He was in his 57th. year.

Mr. Hartley was taken suddenly ill and his death came as a great shock to his large circle of friends and business acquaintances in Montreal.

Always a man to enjoy good health, early in the week he had left his home, 421 Metcalfe avenue, Westmount, for his summer residence on Brome Lake.

Illness seized him, suddenly and from the sudden attack he never rallied. The body was brought to the city and the funeral was held from his home to Mount Royal Cemetery.

Born in Grenville, Que., the son of the late Christopher Hartley, he received his earliest education in the town of his birth, but in his boyhood moved to Montreal. He was employed with the Verratt Stewart & Co., as junior clerk. In 1911 he became vice-president of his firm, and five years ago became managing director.

A prominent clubman, Mr. Hartley, was a member of the Engineers' Club, the Chapleau Club the St. Lambert Country Club, and the Thistle Curling Club.

He was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Surviving are his wife, formerly Miss Edna May Inglis; three daughters, the Misses Rhoma, Mary and Marjorie Hartley, one son, George Haven Hartley, and a brother, Reginald Hartley.

Rosemary's One Night Out

By JANIS PARKER

ELLEN wished she were dead. Because Rosemary, her sister, had the one and only thing that Ellen would ever want, Tom Brandon. What hurt most was that every time Tommy called, Rosemary was not ready. So she would ask Ellen, oh, so sweetly, if Ellen would mind trying to amuse Tommy till she was ready. And tonight that would be many times harder because Tommy would come, his serious gray eyes shining, and with a little white box from the jeweler's—for Rosemary, in her teasing little way, had said, "Maybe."

The day dragged its heavy feet from one hour to the next.

"Ellen, you knew Tommy was coming tonight!"

Ellen's heart thumped as she thought of the little white box. "Why, yes, I believe you did say something about it."

Rosemary's big laughing brown eyes did not leave the mirror. "Try and amuse him till I get back, there's a dear."

"Till you get back! Why, he'll be here any minute!"

"No, he won't!" Rosemary responded. "I phoned and told him to make it 9:30."

"But why...?"

"Because I have another date. Oh, don't look so shocked. Why shouldn't I have another date if I want to?"

"Well, of course... but Rosemary, Tommy is getting terribly attached to you..."

"I should think he was. He wants to become attached for life."

Ellen tried to keep her voice steady. "What about you, Rosemary?"

Rosemary took her hair down and started to do it all over again. "Well, he's good and steady. But I intend to have a little fun, first. And fun means Dick."

Ellen was aghast. "Not Dick Somley?"

"Dick Somley."

"But Rosemary, he and his wife haven't really split, yet!"

Rosemary chuckled. "Maybe I can help them along." Rosemary patted her sister's cheek. "Don't look so shocked, darling! Tommy has the ring, but diamonds don't melt!" And she was gone, a flurry of scented, lovely clothes.

Three minutes later the bell rang with Tommy's special happy ring. "Tommy! Rosemary didn't expect you until 9:30!"

"I probably have my nerve, but I thought I'd come, anyway. You don't mind, do you?"

Tommy spoke slowly. "There's something awfully restless about you, Ellen. When Rosemary called up and said she had to visit a sick friend I thought I'd come over and talk with you. Come, Rosemary's down, you'll have to play my sweetheart till she comes back."

Ellen thought of Rosemary and Dick and her blood boiled. But she smiled. "All right. You've told me nice things. Now I'll tell you you're a wonderful man. You're so dependable, so, I don't know—clean. I love you terribly."

Tommy had put his hand over hers but at the look in her eyes he drew it quickly away.

"Don't look so scared!" she laughed. "You asked me to play sweetheart, didn't you?"

She turned back to the fire. "When I think of our going down the years together, pulling our wagon of life. It just doesn't seem I can pull lustily enough, I'm so happy. And I know you're the real thing. If I get weak or discouraged, you'll just pull the harder. And Tommy, if you ever need bucking up I'll be there. But you know that, don't you?"

"Ellen!" His hands clasped hers.

"Do you mean that?"

She drew her hands away. "Now, you're spoiling it! Just when I was beginning to think how nicely the hour and a half was going to pass!"

He jumped to his feet. "You're just like your sister, only more so! Here I've been coming week on end just to see you and you quietly shift me over to Rosemary!"

"Tommy!" Her face was radiant. "Don't Tommy me! And then Rosemary strings me along until it seems she expects me to marry her—even asking when I'm going to bring the ring! Well, I brought it, but it will never fit her doll-like finger because it wasn't made for it!"

He stood tugging at his suit pocket. "Let me help you." Ellen's voice was calm but her ears were drumming. She couldn't believe... Then she stood spellbound before the lovely stone. Slowly she took it from its white satin-lined box and slid it on her fourth finger, left hand.

"Ellen," he whispered haltingly, "do you really mean it, or are you still play-acting?"

For answer she touched the ring lightly with her lips.

Rosemary banged the front door open. Then Rosemary started to explain to Tommy in her winning way but Ellen was speaking and holding out her left hand.

"You're right, Rosemary, diamonds don't melt, for Tommy and I have been sitting by the fire all evening and nothing has happened."

"Oh, hasn't it?" demanded Tommy. "Don't you believe her, Rosemary. She has promised to wear a plain band beside the ring she's wearing now she's promised to wear it forever."

NOTED FLYER VISITS ST. ANDREWS EAST

On July 22nd., Mr. and Mrs. John Irwin, St. Andrews East, Que., had the pleasure of a visit by Col. W. A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., D.F.C., accompanied by Major Frederick Neilson, U.S.N., Capt. Boris Sergievsky, Col. J. C. Scott and Mr. L. Choyce, who arrived from Montreal in a twin-engined Sikorsky Amphibian Aeroplane. They all reported that the countryside was most beautiful more particularly in the region of Lachute and St. Andrews East. The plane landed in the Ottawa River in front of the beach of St. Andrews Estates Ltd. and taxied out on the sands. The gentlemen above mentioned immediately took to the water and had an enjoyable swim.

Mr. and Mrs. John Irwin, Miss Irene Irwin, and Miss Allison Chown, of Winnipeg, together with Mr. Irwin's chauffeur and groom, were taken up by pilot, Capt. Sergievsky, for a spin over the countryside. On arriving back at the beach they were most enthusiastic regarding the scenic beauty of the country & mountains surrounding Lachute and St. Andrews East, which they viewed from over two thousand feet. The Sikorsky Amphibian may justly be termed a flying drawing-room. In addition to the pilot and mechanic it has a carrying capacity of eight passengers, and the interior cabin decorations and arrangements are most comfortable, consisting of a settee and deep easy chairs well upholstered. The cabin also contains a wash basin and other rest-room features.

The Sikorsky Amphibian is powered with two 450 H.P. Pratt and Whitney Wasp engines, developing an air speed of 110 miles per hour. To give an idea of the speed at which it travels, flying with a full load, the plane took off from St. Andrews East on its return to Montreal at 8.10 p.m., passed over Snowdon Junction at 8.21 p.m., coming to a dead stop in front of the Administration Building at St. Hubert Airport at exactly 8.30 p.m.

Col. W. A. Bishop is well known to Canadians as their "Flying Ace" during the world war, having shot down seventy-two planes. He is also Vice-President of McColl Frontenac Oil Co. Limited. Col. Scott is well known in aviation circles of Canada, only recently retiring from Commander of the Royal Canadian Air Force. Major Neilson, U.S.N., is Vice-President of the Sikorsky Aviation Corporation of Bridgeport, Conn., a subsidiary of the United Aircraft Corporation, the largest commercial aviation enterprise in the world. Capt. Sergievsky is chief test pilot for the Sikorsky Company and has been flying for the past twenty-three years, commencing his aviation work with the Russian Imperial Government, where Sikorsky first developed the multi-engine aeroplane. Mr. Choyce is Secretary to Mr. Irwin, President of McColl Frontenac Oil Co. Limited.

It is to be hoped the next time Major Neilson visits his friend Col. Bishop, they will again fly to St. Andrews East, where they will always be welcome.

Find Tomb Richer Than

That of Tut-Ankh-Amen

What may prove to be the most important Egyptian tomb yet discovered is that of Ra Ouer, who lived nearly five thousand years ago. He was high priest of Egypt, but he seems also to have held a bewildering number of high offices. The tomb consists of two chambers. One of these contains the sarcophagus of a queen whose name has not yet been found. The mummy, though, has a wonderful gold crown flashing with jewels.

The second chamber is, perhaps, the more interesting owing to the objects it contains. The Egyptians believed that the soul of a dead person passed to a land where it would need all the things that had been necessary in life. For this reason they often placed in their tombs not only food, but clothing, boats, carriages, chairs, beds, weapons, and a complete outfit of household utensils. Thanks to this custom we know more about the Egyptians than about any other ancient people.

Owing to his many state offices, the articles placed in Ra Ouer's tomb are of astonishing variety. Professor Hassan believes that, when all have been examined, the find will prove of greater importance than the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen.

Dreaded Penal Station

Made Into Bird Haven

The Dry Tortugas are a series of islets, ten in number, at the extreme end of Florida keys, belonging to Monroe county. They are low, barren and desolate, except where partly covered with mangrove bushes. Fort Jefferson on Garden key was used as a penal station during the Civil war, and it was here where Doctor Mudd, O'Laughlin, Spangler and Arnold were sent to serve out their terms of imprisonment after being found guilty by a military commission of participation in the assassination of President Lincoln. All of them were pardoned by President Johnson, except O'Laughlin, who died there.

In 1904 a marine biological laboratory was established on Loggerhead key, one of the islands, at which much important scientific work has been done. In 1908 the United States government set aside the entire group as a federal bird reservation.

Is It the Unicorn?

Lord Belhaven and Stenton has recently suggested that the unicorn of the Bible may be really the Arabian oryx, or wathahi, says London Answers.

One oryx, a present from Ibn Saud to the king, was at one time in the zoo. Her favorite delicacy was cigarettes, which she ate with great gusto.

Some Biblical commentators consider that the unicorn, or reem, of the Scriptures, was the animal known as the rima by the Assyrians, a wild ox of great size, strength and ferocity, very like the extinct aurochs. But neither the oryx nor the aurochs was a unicorn proper, for both had double horns.

This does not rule out either as the Biblical unicorn, however, for the Revised Version reading of "unicorn" is always "wild ox."

Origin of Ice Hockey

The fantastic explanation has been advanced that the Canadian Indians originated the game of ice hockey by taking la crosse (called baggataway by the aborigines) and making it applicable to play on skates. In contradiction, the French-Canadians maintain that their ancestors were the inventors. Still other factions claim that ice hockey was a "steal" either from "bandy," a somewhat similar sport that originated in England, or "shinty," as played in Scotland, or "hurley," the Irish winter pastime. The now proved facts are that ice hockey was created merely by taking field hockey and playing it on ice. The first game ever played was in Montreal in December, 1879. The first hockey rules were drawn up on September 17, 1879, by R. F. Smith of Montreal.

Washington and the Stage

The play and pageant department of the George Washington bicentennial commission says that he had his first contact with the theater when he witnessed the play "The Tragedy of George Barnwell," when he was in the Barbados with his sick brother, Lawrence. Washington notes in his diaries that on Thursday, November 15, 1751, he "was treated with a play ticket by M. Carter to see 'The Tragedy of George Barnwell' acted. The character of Barnwell and several others was said to be well performed there was music a Dapied and regularly conducted by M." After this time Washington was a great lover of the theater.

Unfriendly Wish

The two young men were walking along the road when one of them stopped and clutched at his companion's arm.

"I say, George," he said, "I thought you were a friend of Hatton. He's just passed you by without saying a word."

"We're not friends any longer," George replied. "The last time he went abroad he sent me a postcard. On the back were the words, 'Wish you were here.'"

"But I don't quite see—" interrupted his friend.

"No? Well, it was a postcard of a foreign prince," London Answers.

PICNIC OF THE BROWNSBURG CHOIR

The Choir of the United Church of Brownsburg spent a very enjoyable picnic at Lake Dauphin, Saturday, July 25th.

We started from the Burg at 2 p.m. amid showers of rain and a promise of more showers, but the clerk of the weather was good to us as not a drop of rain came to tend to spoil our enjoyment.

No time was lost on arrival at that lovely spot, but almost miraculously there appeared numerous forms clad in swimming costumes, boats were filled and swimmers and non-swimmers were soon having a right royal time, judging from the sounds of merriment all were having a very merry time.

When swimming and boating got a little tame we started a game of softball, Ladies vs. Gents, fortunately the first call for supper arrived and saved the gents from a very decisive beating the score was something like 20 to 7 in favor of the ladies.

We all crowded on to the verandah of Mr. Wilson's cottage and there the male section of the party saw to it, that the ladies did not go hungry or thirsty, whilst we were enjoying the good things, very efficiently prepared by Mrs. Wilson and Miss McPherson. Miss F. Hazel regaled us with choice selections from some gramophone records which were very much appreciated. When all had satisfied the inner man, a lengthy job for some, we gathered together and various members of the party took photos of the groups.

More sports were indulged in to shake down the supper, then more swimming and bathing, a charming effect was obtained by two ladies taking the gramophone out on to the lake and playing it for the benefit of the others, as dark began to fall, Wallace and the other men began to prepare the camp fire. As darkness fell we all gathered round augmented by the residents of the summer cottages Mr. Wilson lit the huge construction and soon the blaze was soaring up and incidentally some of the choir moved back. We consumed bags of fruit and then started an impromptu concert, numerous choruses, were sung very heartily by all present individual items were rendered by various members of the party, Cedric was on the job with humorous songs and recitations. The Misses Wallace and Stone sang very effectively and their items were very much enjoyed. Maureen Cumbers sang very sweetly. George Bourne surprised everybody by his comedy songs they were very much appreciated, judging from the laughter and the clapping. Wallace told a very touching story about some hot dogs—the pajama kids also contributed very successfully and tunelessly—the items were many and varied intercepted by popular choruses.

While this was being enjoyed Fred Hosgood, Frank Hazel and a few others slipped away quietly and behold a wonderful exhibition of fuses & fireworks out on the lake the effect was excellent and great praise is due to the organisers of the show.

We then gathered for late supper at Mr. Wilson's cottage, an al fresco repast that added to the hilarity and good humor of the crowd that jostled one another.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were paged and the crowd gathered around and sang "For he's a jolly good fellow," also "For she's a jolly good lady" three cheers and Auld Lang Syne."

We loaded up the cars and still singing made for home, arriving at the Burg about midnight, all agreeing that a very happy enjoyable day had been spent, one lady saying it was the most wonderful day in her life.

Great thanks is due to Mr. & Mrs. Wilson and the members of the Dauphin Club, for the unrestricted use of their property and to Mrs. Wilson and Miss McPherson for the way in which they toiled for our comfort.

X-RAYS IN INDUSTRY

Diagnosing Machinery Troubles

That there are wide possibilities in the use of X-rays in industry for detecting machinery troubles is indicated by a release from the Westinghouse technical press service. An interesting example may be seen at the plant where the auto-gyro planes are being constructed. Castings for the main support of the tripod arrangement, carrying the revolving auto-gyro, are subjected to severe strain, and X-ray investigations of these castings have shown that external appearances are very misleading. The result of the use of X-rays for inspecting this these castings has functioned perfectly.

It is not generally known that a piece of aluminium 16 inches thick can be X-rayed within a few minutes, and any defects which may exist can be readily determined. The German State railways use the X-ray machine in their shops as an everyday tool of inspection, for concealed imperfections. Russia is also developing to a great degree the use of X-rays in the industrial field.

Town Planning and Zoning in Quebec.

PERCY E. NOBBS, M.A., F.R.S.C.
President, Royal Architectural Institute of Canada

The following is an excerpt taken from a paper by Mr. Percy E. Nobbs, urging the adoption of certain town planning and zoning legislation, which a special committee, of which he was the head, had prepared for the Province of Quebec, the full draft of which was published in the Municipal Review, January 1929.

Town Planning and Zoning are no new things. In the ancient empires of Egypt, Mesopotamia, Greece, and Rome, they were practiced with enthusiasm and efficiency; mediaeval Europe made its own contribution of a more elastic technique, on which the Renaissance superimposed the sweet reasonableness of what had been forgotten.

The monarchies of Europe throughout the Eighteenth Century were busy applying these (the most scientific of the arts) to the development of their capitals at least, and the Nineteenth Century inherited a fully developed town-planning tradition, besides experiencing the stimulation of archeological research on the glories of the cities of ancient times. But so far, the planning has been dictatorial, whether at the behest of a Pharaoh, a Caesar, a King, a Czar, of the civic dignitaries of the free cities of Greece, Italy, or the Hansa League.

Legislation for Town Planning and Zoning on the other hand is a recent affair, though ultimately founded in the conception of Roman Law with regard to the nature of ownership of land, which involves the principle of so using it that a neighboring owner does not suffer. This new body of jurisprudence became necessary with the growth of the democratic idea, which largely stimulated by industrialism began a century ago to take cognizance of the assertion of individualism—that spirit, so ripe among us, to do what one wants with what one regards as one's own without regard to one's neighbours or fellow-citizens; a spirit not to be distinguished from predatory anarchism and the direct enemy of all culture and civilization whether Christian and Pagan.

The evolution of modern Town Planning and Zoning Legislation during the last hundred years you must take for granted, as the story is too long and technical to touch on this afternoon. Suffice it to say that the Province of Quebec is singular among all modern states inhabited by white men in having neglected to put anything worth serious consideration in this field of legislation upon its Statute Book. The Scandinavian countries are the most advanced in these matters and oddly enough, the basis of their economic prosperity closely resembles that of this Province. But all Europe is today alive with Town Planning. The South American republics are conspicuously active. The states of the Union, though somewhat late, have accepted the creed. Industrial England is in process of reconstruction under Town Planning Laws. India, Australia, New Zealand, and the other Dominions of our Empire have notable developments to record. In the French Empire in Africa, the "Lex Adickes," of German origin, is applied drastically. Every other Province in Canada has a town act, and in the Western Provinces, these Acts are producing real results. There is hardly a city of a quarter of the size as Montreal the world over today, whether growing fast or slow, that is not subject to town-planning legislation. Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Ayres, Rome, Milan, Copenhagen, Stockholm, wherever you go, it is the same story.

Now all Town Planning Legislation is very much the same in actual content and technical effect, but there is a great variety as to its legal structure. The English Legislation for example, is an amendment to the Health Act. The American Legislation is in the form of Police Powers. The Civil Code of this Province seems to afford a more logical and direct avenue of approach. In Ontario, they go the point with a "Cities and Towns" act, to which legislation for town planning and zoning purposes is readily added as required.

The Philosophy of Town Planning

To philosophize for a moment on the alleged failure of democracy, I readily admit that, at first sight, the misgovernment and mismanagement of Montreal for a generation past as patently evidenced in all that is wrong with the plan of our city, constitutes a very perfect argument for those who see virtue in the old autocracies and in such experiments in dictatorship as are being tried in Russia and in Italy. But I think that all is the matter with us is that we have not recognized that, with the evergrowing complexity of social and economic problems, the rough and ready assumptions that the people know what is good for them, and that technical knowledge sufficient to bring about what they want can be found under the hats of their elected representatives, require revision. The people do know what they can afford, and their freely elected representatives can well judge what should be spent on this or that at a given time, but what this or that may be is a matter for experts with long views to consider and decide upon, at least where town and district planning is concerned. And these experts must not be subject to biennial dismissal and the spoils system.

A permanent Town Planning Commission, left to itself might easily become both corrupt and extravagant. City Councils the world over have proved their inefficiency as instruments for town planning. Permanent planning commissions to determine what things should be done, and elected municipal bodies to decide when these things should be done (all with due safeguards for the rights of the individual and of the community at large), offer the only best means for the realization of the general good in matters of town and regional planning.

SHOULD QUEBEC WOMEN HAVE A VOICE IN THE SALE OF COMMUNITY PROPERTY?

A striking illustration of the fact that the men and women of Quebec Province have outlived some of the laws under which they are governed was noticed some time ago in the columns of a newspaper. Under the usual statement that "Whereas my wife - has left my bed and board without just cause or provocation, I will not be responsible for any debt contracted in my name" was the signature of an irate husband.

The very next issue of the paper brought a few lines from the wife saying that, her husband having sold the home in which they had been living without her consent and against her wishes, and put the proceeds in his pocket, she had no choice but to do what she had done.

This man was quite within his legal rights in selling the community property of himself and wife without asking her consent. Not even a woman's signature to such a deal is required in the Province of Quebec.

GREAT PATHFINDER HONORED BY CANADA

Cairn Raised in Jasper Park in Memory of David Thompson.

Jasper Park Lodge.—To commemorate the public services of David Thompson, probably the greatest geographer over to set foot on the soil of North America, the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada has erected a cairn in Jasper National Park, which will be unveiled with appropriate ceremony on July 29th.

It was David Thompson who, fighting against the odds of a foul weather, hostile Indians & discouraged companions, found the pathway through the Rockies which was to be the trade route to the Pacific for many decades, falling into past history only when the railroad appeared.

Sent out with Simon Fraser to extend the domain of the North West Company, west of the Rocky Mountains, Thompson prepared the first accurate map of the Great West and did it so well that the most modern and thorough researches have found but few flaws in it. Turned aside from Howso Pass by the Indians on one of his journeys to the ocean, he was forced to find a new route, and in the winter of 1810-11, he passed through what is now Jasper National Park & discovered Athabaska Pass.

FOR BETTER HIGHWAY

The following letter which appeared in the Montreal Star this week is only one of many protests that has reached the Government of late from a disgruntled public who have been compelled to ride on roads that are anything to be proud of, and now that we are shortly to be faced with elections, we understand that the Government are sympathetically lending their ear to the protests and have ordered Mr. Bourgeault to start immediately with the widening and paving the Lachute to St. Hermas Road. Mr. Bourgeault is awaiting instructions for widening and completion of the main Montreal-Hull Highway from Lachute to Masson. This of course is badly needed and will provide legitimate work for our unemployed and enable them to earn their own livelihood rather than depend on charity.

This letter is emphasizing the protests that have been lodged against the government.

JUST BY WAY OF CONTRASTS

The Editor, Montreal Star :
Sir,—Mr. Taschereau and Mr. Perreault make big talk about the gravel highways and roads they have made in this great province of Quebec. Now if they want to see a sample of their greatness let them leave Montreal on No. 8 highway for Ottawa, on which the car owners in Two Mountains, Argenteuil and Labelle have to travel and for the privilege of so doing have to pay three times as much as their brother car owners in Carleton, Russell and Prescott, who have a ROAD. If they do start out on this adventure, would advise them to tie in their back teeth and have a spare car follow with parts or to pick up the parts, and if they are able to talk when they reach Ottawa it won't be so big.
Poor Bone-hearted Public.

In fairness to Mr. Bourgeault and his staff, they are in no way to blame for the condition of the Roads, for he is there only as a Public servant of the Province, awaiting instructions from an official source, without which he is unable to act.

GOOD BUSINESS AT OTTAWA

The most important business concern in Canada has its headquarters at Ottawa. It is called the federal government, and the general manager or managing director or "big boss" is the Hon. R. B. Bennett. Like all other business concerns in the country the government is experiencing declining revenues. With falling business, about the only thing that the average business concern can do to maintain a sound financial position is to curtail expenses. The government, however, is not so restricted—the government can borrow money on the public credit when the private business concern has to reduce its current loans.

Canada's general manager, Premier Bennett, is showing courage in his efforts to balance the national budget by methods which have been proven sound in business experience. His budget proposals include increases in direct and indirect taxation which are evidently, designed to place a minimum burden on business. At the same time he no doubt appreciates that to impose taxation which will provide all the desired revenue during a period of depression will not only impose a heavy burden on business and capital but will, with the return of a measure of prosperity, create those surpluses of revenue which are always an attraction to political manipulators.

Considering all the circumstances there should be general approval of Mr. Bennett's proposal to provide a closer control over all expenditures of money by the Dominion. It would seem to be a good time to overhaul the whole accounting system of the Department of Finance and adjust it to modern business requirements. The proposal to appoint a Comptroller of Revenue to have control of federal expenditures would also seem to be a stride in the proper direction at this time.

When business corporations generally are curtailing expenditures to meet declining revenues, it is highly desirable that the Federal Government should follow the same course and, so far as possible, overlook that borrowing power which it alone peculiarly enjoys during this period of depression.

Great Wrestling Match

Town Council vs. Water Works Problem

Members of the Water Works Committee, after a leisurely period of training, left recently, to enter into an argument with the Provincial Bureau of Health. Some say, rightly or wrongly, that the encounter proved unsatisfactory, but the outcome is yet to be seen.

News has been slowly leaking out that our City Fathers were treated with a sound lecture on the importance of safeguarding public health in Lachute and the bad reputation which would attach not only to our town but to the whole Province, if the greatest precaution was not taken in the matter of water supply. The Health Dept. had been asked not to enforce Chlorination at Pollock's if the new intake located there.

It is now rumored that the members of our Town's Water Works Committee are initiating the establishment of a new intake for water works at Pollock's site with the hope that, once the Dam and other works have been completed, the Health Department will not compel chlorination of water any more than with the present intake at Hume's site. It should be understood that untreated water from the latter site is tolerated simply because the Health Dept. expect remedial measures to be taken within a reasonable time, by the establishment of a new intake, and they do not wish to impose unnecessary expenses on the Town on a site which will be discarded. If the rumor aforesaid is true, it then becomes evident that some members of our Town Council, perhaps in the majority, have in mind to make Lachute Citizens drink impure water, as a supply from Pollock's site, without chlorination, will be neither more nor less than a polluted beverage.

If the rate payers wish to secure their water supply from Pollock's site and vote accordingly, despite the recommendations made by eminent engineers and the Provincial Health Department, it is their own business but it is proposed to inform them through the hospitable medium of the Watchman just what the approximate cost will be, including the very expensive and most annoying method of treating water by chlorine; also to make a comparison with the Lake Sir John proposition as regards the quantity and quality of water, pressure for fire purposes, etc. The first vote relative to Lake Sir John site was lost only by a very insignificant margin and the second vote resulting in a majority for the Pollock's site was influenced by a hostile campaign quite unwarranted as, instead of leaving the subject, which had been fairly submitted to the rate payers on facts alone, to the calm consideration of those concerned, an active cabal was resorted to when all sorts of foolish arguments and even innuendo were used in securing contrary votes.

The least said, the better, about that vote.

There is no question but that a change from the present intake to the Pollock's site would be quite an improvement and the former administration had decided to locate the new intake there upon the basis of Engineer Loignon's report, but upon referring to the Provincial Health Dept., for their permission in accordance with the law, they made a survey of the situation and concluded that it was too dangerous to allow water supply from Pollock's site without treating the water with chlorine and they recommended Lake Sir John as the best site, which would be permitted as a water supply without treatment of water, owing to danger of pollution being very remote. It was then that Engineers Ouimet and Lea were sought to make reports on Lake Sir John as compared to Pollock's, and the late Mr. J. T. Ayers, in a truly civic spirit, paid the cost of a separate survey by the Firm of Milton Hersey Ltd., highly reputed Chemists and Engineers. These reports will be given in full in subsequent numbers of the Watchman. They all arrive at the same conclusion.

In the meantime, here is the letter dated January 12th., 1931, from the Sanitary Engineer of the Board of Health acknowledging receipt of report on results of vote in connection with the last referendum:

Provincial Bureau of Health

98 Notre Dame

Montreal, January 12th., 1931.

Mr. C. Tremblay, Mayor,
Lachute, P. Q.

Dear Mr. Mayor:—

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 9th. inst., informing me of the results of the referendum held recently in your municipality as to the choice of the new water intake. I regret very much that your rate-payers have elected to vote in favor of an intake on Pollock's Farm instead of choosing an intake in Lake Sir John.

According to the estimates given in your circular letter of January 3rd., it is apparent that an intake in lake Sir John would be less expensive than one on Pollock's Farm, and, moreover, would give a water of a much higher quality.

However, as the proposed intake is an improvement on the present one, you have been informed that it would be approved provided that the water be previously chlorinated.

Consequently, if you will be kind enough to submit to the Board of Health, for approval, detailed plans of a water intake on Pollock's Farm, giving also in detail the method which it is intended to use to ensure proper chlorination at the intake, I will recommend approval of the plans to the Directors of the Provincial Bureau of Health.

Considering that in moving your water intake from Hume's Farm to Pollock's Farm, the contamination is only slightly decreased, it will be necessary that proper measures be taken to obtain efficient chlorination. Our experience with chlorination of gravity supplies has led us to require that an operator be constantly on the premises to look after the operation of the chlorination. Moreover, it is necessary to have a Venturi Meter that will indicate at all time the rate of flow of the water and the chlorine must be applied in solution, which necessitates the housing of the machine in a heated building in which is also placed the pump and motor necessary to supply the water for the operation of the machine.

In the event of such an installation being made, we shall require that daily water samples be sent to the laboratories of the Board for examination and if the results of these samples demonstrated that chlorination was not efficiently carried out, it would be necessary, then, to install a filtration plant.

Your rate payers should realize that a water intake in a brook on which are situated 12 or 15 dwellings, is exposed to the contamination coming from such dwellings. Your population has not suffered yet through a typhoid epidemic, but it would be sufficient that such a case occur in one of these dwellings, to contaminate in a dangerous way the water of the brook which would spread infection through your population.

A good chlorine apparatus, under the supervision of a competent operator, would offer a good degree of protection, but it will never give to the supply the quality that would be obtained if the water was derived direct from the lake itself. It would be easy to protect the lake against the small amount of contamination which may be due to the two or three small cottages near the outlet of the lake.

I wish to draw your attention to article 56 of the Quebec Public Health Act, which requires that plans and specifications be submitted to the Board for approval and, in particular, article 59 of the same Act, which requires that such plans and specifications be approved by the Director of the Board of Health before any loan by-law is submitted to the rate-payers.

I enclose a map of the locality showing the water-shed of the brook at Hume's Farm and also at Pollock's Farm, indicating the houses comprised within these areas.

Yours truly,

THEO. J. LAFRENIERE,

Sanitary Engineer.

In view of the foregoing remarks and letter from the Health Department, it is most important, if members of the present Council wish to impress confidence to the rate payers, to come out with full details of any proposition they have in mind to allow same to bear full scrutiny and criticism as improvements to water works, no matter where the site will be, will cost a good sum of money and care must be taken not to install anything which may prove only of temporary use or may have to be supplemented by a costly filtration plant if chlorination proves insufficient. Lachute has to be taken care of for a number of years and a larger population than it now has if we are at all progressive. There is such a moderate price demanded for both the Lake Sir John and Pollock's sites that, no matter what site is definitely accepted by the rate payers, both should be acquired as a first class investment. If Dam is built at Lake Sir John, it is good policy to buy the Pollock's site as well for the same reason that the Council several years ago purchased a right to a certain number of Horse power at Hammond's Mill - to prevent possible claims for diversion of water. If Dam is installed at Pollock's site, the control of outlet at Lake Sir John is essential for protection of supply as well as preventive measures to be exercised to forestall the establishment at the Lake of any buildings or undertakings in the future such as might cause contamination. This would also be a reliable supply to turn to if a costly filtration plant was ordered at Pollock's site. Really, the two sites are necessary for full protection and the problem to be decided is "where to locate the new intake" in the best interest of the population.

To effect relief for unemployment, the Council should be prompt in reaching a decision which should be governed by actual merit and not by sheer obstinacy to follow up a policy however erroneous it may be. There are changes to be made in replacing 4" mains by 8" installing new hydrants etc., as recommended by the Provincial Fire Commissioner and Canadian Fire Underwriters and, even at this late date, there is a chance of securing grant of $10,500.00, for improvements to fire defences of the town, from the Provincial Government.

Before concluding, just a few brief remarks to answer a letter from a rate payer which appeared in your Paper a few weeks ago. The point was made that the high pressure from Lake Sir John, if intake placed there, would burst water pipes. It should be readily understood that such an elementary objection would be taken care of by Engineers when preparing their plans and by means of properly designed automatic valves, specially made for such purposes, placed at strategic points, only the required pressure would be allowed for domestic requirements through the proper adjustment of a suitable valve at entrance to Lachute. In emergencies, to fight fires, the valve would automatically allow more water to flow as required and a relief valve would take care of the excess over and above the normal flow. Same as for a 2200 volt circuit of electricity being regulated by means of a transformer to penetrate into the houses only as 100 to 120 volts, same as for the flow of gasoline from the tank in the rear of a motor car being regulated by a carburetor for proper feeding of the engine, the flow of water from the Lake would be controlled by suitable valves and nothing will burst except my friend's theory. His remarks anent the springs at Pollock's site being sufficient to feed Lachute by themselves are subject to the measurements already made by Engineer Ouimet to the effect that they produced only 65,000 gallons whereas the estimated consumption in Lachute on a conservative basis is 260,000 gallons per 24 hours. His other remarks about the water from Pollock's being quite satisfactory without treatment have to face expert opinion from Engineers of Note such as W. S. Lea, Milton Hersey Ltd. and the Provincial Board of Health.

A suggestion is made to the Council to invite here for discussion the Chief Sanitary Engineer of the Provincial Board of Health and Engineer Ouimet, as it is rumored another Engineer is being engaged and verification of the new plans and figures etc., would be helpful and would protect the interest of rate payers. The valuable co-operation of our Sanitary Unit should not be ignored.

Thanking you for your kindness in publishing this letter, Mr. Editor, believe me,

Yours sincerely,

C. TREMBLAY.

Popular Little Tea Shop

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"BUT why a tea shop?" inquired their friend, Mrs. Gray. "That is such a foolish question, Dolly," retorted Lois Raymond, "but I will try to explain; we are opening a tea shop, Polly and I, in the hope of making money."

"All the luck in the world, my dears," cried Mrs. Gray, folding them both in her long arms. "but everything has turned out so differently since I went abroad—I expected to find you both engaged! Polly to that durned boy—and you, Lois, why you were engaged to Gardner Allen. Where is he?"

They both flushed. "I shall be giving a luncheon next week," decided Mrs. Gray, "to about twelve people—you must let me have the shop that day."

When they were alone, Polly looked at her year-old sister. "Dolly Gray is a dear," she said sincerely; "that luncheon will be the making of us, Lois."

Lois lost the little broken, far-away look she was wearing and she essayed a cheerful smile. "It may be the making of this shop! In the meantime we must just pick up business the best way we can. Our food is delicious, we know that, Polly."

"Even if grandfather did say—"

"Never mind what grandfather said about the tea-room business, Polly, never mind anything about the way he treated us—what he said to Gardner Allen or Bob Burnett. We cannot even guess that he could say anything very unpleasant after we have spent our lives with him since we were orphaned, but he might have given the impression that he questioned their ability to keep us in style—oh, dear, and then we both quarrelled with him, and he sent us out with a hundred dollars between us—we will have to forget poor grandfather, Polly."

After that luncheon the success of the tiny tea shop was assured.

Then one momentous day, Bobby Burnett came in with another girl! Polly turned so pale that Lois whispered that she would take her place. Of course Polly would not stand that, so she dabbed some color on her cheeks, powdered her charming nose, and tried in hand approached the newcomers.

The girl was studying the luncheon card. Bobby looked rather bored, suddenly saw Polly standing beside their table and started violently.

He stared while the girl ordered, and when she had finished and waited for him he made a strong effort to concentrate.

"A sandwich—anything will do—and a cupful of tea," was his order.

Polly's dimple suddenly came into her cheek, and she went behind the scenes and worked furiously over a very delectable chicken salad sandwich for Bobby. Somehow the little look of joy in Polly's eyes remained there for days.

One sunny autumn day when both of the girls secretly longed for a good horseback ride in the country, business in the little shop was very dull.

"I suppose it is too beautiful out of doors for people to spend a spare moment in here," murmured Lois.

"Somebody coming now," remarked Polly, as three men entered the low door. When the first one lifted his bowed head, the girl almost cried aloud.

It was her grandfather, and accompanying him were Gardner Allen and Bobby Burnett! The latter came forward, smiling pleasantly at Polly.

"Can you arrange a table for five—we are expecting two ladies to join us—just a regular luncheon—anything you please will do." He rejoined his companions and they stood in front of the window looking into the sunny street where their car was at the curb, while the two girls rapidly arranged a round table for five. When everything was ready, Lois went forward.

"The table is ready, sir," she said.

"Very good, Lois, my dear," he said and bent and kissed her tenderly. This was too much for young Polly, who came for her embrace and then when the three were standing at their chairs, grandfather said, "We are waiting for you girls to join us, one on either side of me, if you please!"

At the close of the meal it was the grandfather who rose in his chair with his water glass in his hand. "I propose the health of the Tea Shop," he said.

They drank solemnly, and grandfather lifted his glass once more and looked at the two girls and the two young men with smiling eyes. "Almost a year ago," he said, "two young men came to me and asked me for the hands and hearts of my granddaughters. I asked them to go away for a year, and then return—and they have kept their word. Before my granddaughters married I wanted to be sure that they could be self-supporting in case of adversity, so I quarrelled with them and we parted. It has nearly broken my heart, but they have proved to be pure gold—they have succeeded, and if all four of you are of the same mind, we will consider the matter settled, and close the tea shop now, and then we will all go out to the country club for the afternoon!"

That is the real secret of why the popular little tea shop changed hands, and how Lois and Polly married the men of their hearts and they all came to live with grandfather in the big house.

CANADIAN ROCKIES ECHO WI' SKIRL O' THE PIPES

From the four corners of Canada and from across the seas, men, women and children of Scotch ancestry are preparing to meet at the Canadian Pacific Railway's palatial Banff Springs Hotel, Banff, Alta., for the annual Highland Gathering, August 27-30, 1931. The event, which has become historic, is under the distinguished patronage of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and will be formally opened by H.R.H. Prince Sukhodaya of Siam. A feature of this year's program will be the inter-regimental piping competition between representatives of the 17 Highland Regiments in Canada. There will also be the other bagpipe competitions and displays which have made the Gathering famous, as well as dancing and Highland games. The meeting always draws a large gallery, in addition to the army of costumed participants. Juvenile competitions in piping and dancing are particularly attractive. In addition to the regular events, two Scotch light operas, "Prince Charming" and "Prince Charlie and Flora" will be presented by members of the resident company. The setting is ideal for the Gathering: the peaks of the famous Canadian Rockies, with their gracious valleys and spray-flecked streams forming a magnificent background for the Banff Springs Hotel, which is built in the Scotch baronial style.

Marked Contrasts In Feminine Types Ottawa Exhibition

Ubangi Women With Distorted Faces, Petite Japanese, and Beautiful Show Girls Will Be Seen.

From the four corners of the earth will come men and women of striking contrasts, animals, fish, birds, fruits and products of all kinds for the entertainment and edification of visitors to the Ottawa exhibition. The most striking contrast of all will be that of the Ubangi women from the African wilds with the fascinating and dainty Japanese performers, the pulchritudinous water nymphs or the Broadway beauties of the music and dance revue.

When beset by the Arabian slavers the Ubangi women made themselves hideous and thereby lessened their chances of being drafted into slavery by extending their lower lips to enormous size. It is claimed that the coal-black females of the Ubangi can stretch their lips to the circumference of a large dinner plate.

A number of the Ubangi women are to be on exhibition at the midway shows of the Ottawa exhibition, and will form only one of the many new features to be seen in the pathways of bizarre sounds and sights during the six big days, August 24 to 29 inclusive.

Ottawa's midway this year will be provided by the William Glick Greater Shows, and will include 28 separate side-shows and rides, in addition to many new features which may be conceived by the showmen up to the time of the exhibition.

Many premier acts will supplement the grand stand revue in such a way as to make it the greatest outdoor show of its kind in Eastern Canada. The Kikuta Japs, a group of marvellously clever tumblers and head balancers & the sensation of New York, have been engaged to appear and the fact that they have been booked up for two and one half years at a stretch indicates how much in demand they are and how unique and enjoyable their act is. Beautiful girls comprise the personnel of the Billy Ritchie Water Show, a performance of skill and daring in aquatic evolutions, featured by the sensational high fire dive of Captain Sol. Solomon. Max Gruber will be on the bill with his jungle oddities, including an elephant, Zebra and a Great Dane, who go through all sorts of clever tricks. Mr. Gruber is noted as the first man to "gentle" a Zebra.

Bee Starr, the personality of another fine act, is a winsome girl, who is one of the wonders of the scientific world for her great feat of acrobatic strength. One of the thrills of the program is promised to the thousands who will see her performing at a dizzy height over the great stage seemingly oblivious of the danger, going through a gruelling exhibition of human endurance.

The Leach LaQuinlan Trio is another stellar attraction, the principals giving a wonderful exhibition of skill and strength on a thin wire stretched across the stage, while for laughs the management have been fortunate in securing the White Brothers, a splendid team of world-wide fame, whose irresistibly funny antics have scored hits wherever they have appeared. The Frisco Seals, performing clever stunts of rolling, balancing objects on their noses and playing musical instruments is but another of the splendid acts of the grand stand performance.

Anyone wishing information about the exhibition or about the city, with particulars which will help to plan a visit to the Capital, will hear promptly if communications are addressed to the manager and secretary, Herbert H. McElroy, Ottawa.

NEW LIST OF RULES FOR SUCCESS

Rules for success in business are always appropriate to quote, and they are especially acceptable in these days. The Niagara Review has unearthed a number bearing a few truths which will hardly be challenged and which may help discouraged souls to face the tasks of the day with a little firmer faith and renewed energy. They are:

Word Hard—tackle the hardest job first each day.

Be Exact—Accuracy is better than haste.

Have Initiative—Ruts often deepen into graves.

Wear A Smile—Only friends people become successful leaders.

Be Friendly—It opens the door into the sunshine beyond.

Cultivate Personality—Personality is to man what perfume is to flowers.

Love Your Work—There's a sense of satisfaction in doing work well.

Study Hard—The more you know the easier and omre effective your work will be.

Have courage—A stout heart will carry you through difficulties.

Do Your Best—For if you give to the world the best you have, the best will come back to you.

Here and There

"What could we farmers hope to accomplish without our railways?" asked a Kentucky agriculturist recently. He added that no agency had contributed more to the prosperity of the farmer than the railways.

"I have never yet found any place where the salmon fishing could compare with New Brunswick," said Arthur Train, well known novelist, spending at a camp dinner given in his honor recently by the New Brunswick Tourist Travel Bureau.

Encouragement came to western Canada's farmers and agriculturists with the return to normal temperatures and varying rainfall of mid July. In the drought areas of Manitoba and Saskatchewan and to a less extent in Alberta very great benefit has been felt.

Authentic rainbow trout weighing 7½ lbs. were taken recently in the French River six miles below the bungalow camp, the first ever caught there according to the oldest guide. It was caught by E. A. Farintosh, of New York, a yearly guest at the camp.

Since the split up of Canadian Pacific Railway common stock into four for one, this issue has taken on great popularity with the general run of investors. Between September and June 1931, the number of these increased from 21,186 to 34,872, an increase of 13,686.

Over 250 members from Ramesse Temple, Toronto, went to Cleveland recently by Canadian Pacific special to attend the annual convocation and imperial council of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This convocation was held last year in Toronto.

A great influx of tourists is coming into the Maritime Provinces this year, the chain of the Canadian Pacific hotels at Yarmouth, Digby and Kentville proving strong influences in promoting the traffic. The ten-day all-expense Canadian Pacific tour to the Toronto Exhibition next month is also drawing much attention in the Maritimes.

Grain exports from the port of Vancouver this year will probably exceed 75 million bushels. Up to June 4th wheat shipments amounted to 65,331,501 bushels. Accommodation for deep sea vessels has increased from 12 piers in 1920 to 24 piers at the present time and elevator capacity has increased from 1,240,000 bushels to 16,205,000 bushels.

An Indian Schoolboy's band of which the leader was also a schoolboy and in which the instruments were mouth organs, gazooks and other noise-makers was one of the features of Indian Park at Banff which opened July 21. This was counterbalanced by a septuagenarian Chief's Choir of 18 chiefs and ex-chiefs who rendered airs taught by the first western missionaries back in the 1860's long before the Canadian Pacific Railway penetrated the mountains.

Six First Aid championships and five second places fell to Canadian Pacific Railway teams across Canada according to the recent annual report of the St. John Ambulance Association. Of these, three firsts and one second were captured by the Railway's Montreal Police Team. The second was in the coveted Montmartre Trophy, representing the championship of Canada for all corners in which they were only five points behind the winners, Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps of Kingston, Ont. Rowena Rides the Rumble

SIXTH INSTALMENT

....Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation-wide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

....A few miles out Bobby becomes tearful at being parted from her sweetheart & Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

The three tourists reach Denver, after passing through Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis. Peter and Rowena have many tips on the way while Carter keeps wiring Bobby to return to New York. The morning after they reach Denver, Peter and Rowena discover Bobby has deserted them and returned to New York by train. They are faced with the impossible condition of continuing their trip without a chaperon.

Rowena suggests to Peter that they make a "companionate" marriage. They are married and go to Cheyenne, where their actions, when they ask for rooms on separate floors, arouses the suspicions of the hotel clerk. They finally succeed in getting rooms, but not without exciting the laughter of the hotel loungers.

Now go on with the Story. Although Peter was furiously angry, highly humiliated, and blaming Rowena for everything he was kind at heart and could not resist the plaintive pathos in her voice, usually so crisp and cool.

"Good night, Rowena," he said more pleasantly than she had any right to expect. "Don't worry. Everything will be right."

After a sleepless night Peter was down in the lobby at an unbelievably early hour. But early as it was, he did not precede the interested smiles and stares of the day staff which had replaced the night-workers—clerks, telephone operators and elevator boys.

Even at that unreasonable hour there were loungers in the lobby. And each and every one of them, and even the head waitress smiling in the door of the dining-room, knew all about the young New Yorkers married the day before in Denver who demanded rooms on separate floors. Confusion stung his face with burning red.

He went up-stairs, walked up to Rowena's room and knocked sharply.

"Yes—who?" called Rowena in a bright voice that had obviously been schooled to register good nature in the face of adversity.

"Me," he answered surlily. "Chuck your things into your bag and let's get out of here."

"How about breakfast?"

"The hell with breakfast."

"O. K. by me," called Rowena in the maddening voice of one who has stoutly enjoined one's inner soul to smiles and sweetness. And indeed even in her sleep Rowena had been reminding herself that she must be very patient with Peter for a few days, as he was apt to be just the least bit in the world cross about the state of affairs.

Within an hour they were hurling the dust of Cheyenne from the wheels of the roadster and as soon as the last outpost of the city lay buried in the past Peter pulled off to the side of the road and drew up to a grinding stop. Then he turned to Rowena and his was not the look of a newly married man.

"Well, you see what fools we made of ourselves," he began. "I hope you're satisfied."

"I'm terribly sorry," said Rowena humbly. "I feel just wretchedly about everything. But I couldn't possibly foresee such awful complications, now could I, Peter? What experience have I had with husbands and hotel registers and such monstrosities?"

"We'll just have to make the best of a suite or adjoining rooms hereafter," said Peter more kindly. "It's this demanding separate floors that makes them give us the razberry."

"But we can't have connecting rooms," Peter protested Rowena unhappily. "We just can't."

We have to be terribly careful about things like that or we can't get it annulled. Don't you see, Peter, if we stay in adjoining rooms clear across the country, nobody in the world is going to believe we—we really did stay in adjoining rooms."

"Then we'll have to get a divorce instead of an annulment. I am not going to make a fool of myself like that again."

"But we can't get a divorce in New York," protested Rowena. "I wrote a story about that once—I know how the laws are. One of us would have to go to Reno or Paris to get it and it would take every cent of money we can save on the whole trip to pay for the divorce. And what good would that be to anybody?"

"I'll give you grounds to get it right in New York," said Peter grimly. "I'm desperate."

"That's like you, Peter," said Rowena impatiently. "Think—only of yourself as usual.—Well, don't you think for a minute that I'm going to get a divorce in New York. I'm not going to be made a fool of there before all my friends."

"What do you mean—made a fool of?" Peter demanded.

"Why, having everybody think I'm so no-good I can't hang on to a husband for two months!—No, if it comes to that, I'll give you grounds."

"You'll what?"

"Give you grounds for a divorce?"

"What grounds?"

"The same grounds you so magnanimously offered me."

"Rowena are you crazy? A woman can't do a thing like that. Why, it—it would ruin you. You're crazy!"

"Oh, am I?" Well, let me tell you one thing. Mr. Peter Blande! I'd rather have my friends think I stepped out on you two months after our marriage than that I couldn't keep you from stepping out on me. It's much more flattering, I assure you!"

"You would, Rowena, I honestly believe you would. You're just that dumb," said Peter. "However, let's not fight over getting the divorce today. The thing to agree on now is that we've got to put up with rooms adjoining or en suite and say no more about separate floors."

"If you're too proud to ask for separate floors, I'll do it," said Rowena. "I'd rather be embarrassed before a strange hotel clerk than be the laughing stock of my own friends."

"Yes that would do me a lot of good, wouldn't it?" demanded Peter. "That would certainly save my face! To have my wife sail up to the desk and register for me and ask for rooms on separate floors. Oh, yes, that would make everything fine and dandy."

"I'm your wife," stormed Rowena.

"No, thank God."

"I'm—I just happen to be married to you—by accident. A—sort of detour."

"Worse luck," growled Peter. Rowena opened the door and sprang out.

"What are you going to do? Walk to Yellowstone?"

"I am going," said Rowena coldly, "to retire in peace to my rumble seat."

"Rowena, I ask you, don't be any more ridiculous than usual," he pleaded. "How's it going to look—only two of us in a roadster and you riding in the rumble seat in this boiling hot sun?"

"I'm above worrying about how things look," said Rowena. "I'd rather be bounced and bruised and blistered in the rumble seat than insulted in the lap of luxury."

She raised the umbrella with a vicious little click of the snap, adjusted the cushions about her slender body, and rode the rumble in solemn grandeur, leaving Peter to fume futilely alone in front.

It was about the hour of sunset when a sudden shadow blackened the west, a sudden cool breeze touched their faces.

"They must be having showers in the mountains," said Peter.

But Rowena, deep in a painful sleep of complete exhaustion, did not answer.

It was more than showers they were having in the mountains—it was cloudbursts, one after the other in torrential downpour, and in less time than it took for the cooling breeze to sweep down the plain with refreshment for their tired faces every dry creek bed and parched arroyo that led from the hot mountains to the burning plains was flooded with rushing water from the heights.

He guided the little roadster along the yellow mesa road toward another of the narrow rocky gorges through which they had been passing at intervals all day long. The roar in his ears grew louder, closer. Suddenly it sounded ominous and threatening. Peter looked to the west and was amazed to see a solid wall of water nearly as high as the car sweeping down the little canyon.

Instinctively his foot pressed the accelerator. The roaring wall of water was close but the arroyo itself was closer—a scant few feet away—and in a few minutes the onrushing river would render it impassable for cars. The car leaped forward down the steep slope into the arroyo. But the hungry water as if zealous, of this boldness, roared down upon them. The car swung powerless beneath his hand, slid away from the road and the river tossed it lightly down-stream and drove it securely into a crevice among the rocks.

Rowena, suddenly aroused from her exhausted sleep, had started up in terror at sight and sound of the torrential river bearing down upon them. Prompted by an innate impulse she struggled quickly up to the seat of the rumble, intending to jump, but the car was flung violently from beneath her and cheated of her insecure foothold she fell head-down, face downward in the icy water.

Peter, stunned by the unexpected onslaught of water was startled to action at sight of Rowena whipped helpless against the rocks by the irresistible flood.

"You little fool—what did you jump for?" he shouted, but even as he spoke he was out of the car and in less than a moment had her firmly in his arms. Slowly he drew her back until they had the support of the car behind them against the cold pressure of the water.

"I—didn't!" she shouted as soon as she recovered her breath. "Fell!"

"Sorry!" roared Peter regretfully. "My fault! Shouldn't have tried it!—No good racing a river!"

"Cheerio!" comforted Rowena loudly. "You nearly made it!"

Other cars pulled up beside the new-born river, and the occupants lent their willing assistance in getting Peter and Rowena safely up on shore. And Peter, against the advice of the tourists and the frightened orders of Rowena, went immediately back to the car for their bags.

"All the clothes we've got," he explained cheerfully. "They're important."

Fortunately the bags were not yet soaked through and except for a few articles on top the contents were dry. Rowena and Peter, soaking wet, hurriedly got out dry clothes and then paused abruptly, regarding both the crowd and each other with timorous hesitancy.

"I'll have my tent up in a jiffy," said a big red-faced Kansas farmer with loud kindness. "River'll be down by morning, but we'll all have to pitch camp here to-night. Give a hand there, youngster."

And before he had finished announcing his kind intentions he had raised a diminutive tent and extended its hospitality to the dripping pair.

"Key to the city, lady and gent," he said with a great laugh.

Peter made a hasty motion to Rowena who slipped quickly inside and dropped the flap.

"Your wife, I take it," said the red-faced Kansan with a puzzled air.

"Yes," said Peter. "But—the tent isn't so very big—and we're both so terribly wet—and besides—I want to have another look at the car. I don't want it carried off down the canyon."

"Don't you worry about that car, brother. That there car is put for keeps. At least till the river goes down."

Other cars pulled up and their occupants joined the enforced camp on the river bank. They put up tents and staked out claims here and there. Children were set to gathering stones and sticks for a fireplace.

All together they ate impromptu supper on the plains, sitting in a cluster of friendly groups about the fire, and afterward as the darkness fell and the stars lit the black sky over the black prairie, they gathered closer and talked. Some sang, and the men smoked. And presently by twos or by families they crept away to their separate camps for the night.

"Here's an old mattress you can use," said the Kansas farmer, tossing it across to Peter. "We've got another one. It's not very big but you're not a very big family."

OIL ELECTRIC ENGINES IN MANY LANDS.

Canadian National Operation of Car Studies by Scottish Motive Power Engineers

Moncton, N. B.—"Oil electric locomotion in Europe is making rapid strides, Spain in particular is greatly interested and we have had several of our installations working there for the past three years," declared H. C. Gill, chief engineer of the Wm. Beardmore Company of Glasgow, Scotland, who was come to Canada to study the results of oil-electric motive power operation on the Canadian National Railways. France is also experimenting with this form of motive power. Mr. Gill stated, his company, having installed several units on the French Railways, Italy has only about two which were designed by Italian engineers, while German engineers are also working out a type for use on their railways. The Beardmore Company has also supplied installations to South America and to Australia and India. In the United States the Westinghouse Company are licensees of the Beardmore Company and they have built several units for experimental on United States railways. Mr. Gill, in commenting on the future development of this class of motive power, remarked that his company is working along the lines of perfecting the lighter units as leads on European railways prohibit the use of the larger installation. The aim has been to simplify this oil electric engine and much has been accomplished along these lines, he said, it having been found possible to do away with many of the parts used in the earlier engines and thus reduce the cost of maintenance.

Canadian National engineers, with the idea of adopting the oil engine idea to heavier operations, designed a two engine unit each of which could be operated independently of the other as a separate locomotive but for heavy work such as main line passenger trains the units are operated as one locomotive. This locomotive known as the "9000" class was operated as a test on the famous fast train the "International Limited" operating between Montreal and Chicago and the results were very gratifying. Cheapness in operation is the greatest advantage which this class of motive power possesses. It is also of great value where there is poor water and through desert country. Mr. Gill made an inspection of the oil electric cars in use on the lines of the Canadian National system in the Maritimes and is accompanied by R. G. Gage, signal and electrical engineer of the railway with headquarters in Montreal. Mr. Gill expects to return to Scotland about the end of the month.

Miss Frances Douglas, of Montreal, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. John Douglas Jr. is spending his vacation at home.

Mrs. John Moss and son Francis left on Monday for California. They will stop off at Vancouver for some time, where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Dobbie.

The Women's Institute Lawn Social held at the home of Mr. John Douglas last Thursday evening, was well attended in spite of a raffle and dance to the west of them and a boxing bout to the right of them, which took quite a few of their patrons.

The programme was much appreciated and consisted of wonderful piano solos by Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Miss Millar, local solos by Mr. Roy Dobbie; recitations by Gladys Donaldson and E. Gauley, and the Misses Violet and Kathleen Murdoch, duets by Gladys and Elmer Gauley, which were much enjoyed also a song by the Misses Eileen and Alda also Ross Beattie. These children's voices were wonderfully sweet and give great promise for the future.

Miss Helen McFaul and Mr. Wilson Gall also sang several songs in duet, which were much enjoyed, their voices blended so beautifully together. Miss V. Murdoch's recitation was very well rendered and decidedly new to this vicinity and proved out the Old Proverb that even a worm will turn to perfection.

Miss K. Murdoch was a very fitting one in this time of depression, reminding us of the good times we had with the money while it was going; which is very true. No such depression could have ever been had, if each & all of us carried on in the saving manner of our grandparents. People flew too high, lost control and crashed.

Mrs. (Rev.) Maclean gave a short, but interesting address on the aims of The Women's Institute, claiming that the Institute stood for the bettering of humanity for the sake of humanity's God, and we wished the same could have been said of the exhibition put on in a nearby town.

To the writer, it seems a thing that such an exhibition should have been allowed at all, when people need their money so much for better and more useful things, let alone the lowering of our standards, by attending matches of that sort. To my idea such things are only for the idle rich who have no desire for the better things of life and we as citizens should band together and do what we can to suppress such exhibitions in future. If men are strong let them use that strength for the bettering of humanity in same way for the sake of Humanity's God, instead of showing off in front of mankind. But, of course, if there was not money in it, it would not be done. If people were penny wise there would be no boxing matches, as no one would waste their money just to watch a couple of men beating each other up.

An interesting feature of the Institute Social was the presentation of prizes to the pupils of different schools in our district by the Frontier Women's Institute. The prizes were given for deportment and were won by Miss Myrtle Donaldson, of Chabro; Evelyn Heatlie of Mabel; Ruby Smith, of Cushing; May Densmore of Stonefield; & Melvin Graham of North River School.

Mrs. Jas. Murdoch presided during the programme and presented the prizes to the children.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for August 2

PHILIP'S MISSIONARY LABORS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:4-40.
GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Philip Tells a Stranger About Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Philip An Early Missionary.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Pioneering for Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Gospel Breaks Over the Frontier.

I. Philip Preaching in Samaria (vv. 5-8).

In taking the gospel to the Samaritans we see the broadening of the scope of Christianity. Philip was one of the seven so-called deacons. He went to Samaria and preached Christ showing that God's purpose included these despised people. Christ is the true message of the evangelist. Not Christ as an ethical teacher or as an example, but Christ as the Savior from sin through the offering of himself on the cross as a substitutionary ransom.

II. Philip Preaching to the Ethiopian (Acts 8:26-39).

Following the preaching to the Samaritans, the gospel was preached to the Ethiopian who was in all probability a Gentile. In his conversion we see the gospel in its outreach to the ends of the earth.

1. Philip meeting the Ethiopian (vv. 26-30).

a. Leaving work by divine direction (v. 26). The Lord called Philip away from a great work in Samaria and specifically directed him to this man. The Spirit of God directed him to go near and join himself to the chariot. The tactful question put to the treasurer gained him a seat by his side. The mission which at first seemed so unpromising was now clear.

b. An officer of state seeking the way of salvation (vv. 27, 28). The Ethiopian had been to Jerusalem to worship. Despite his high official position he was not ashamed of the worship of God. The journey from that far-off country required hardship and expense, but to one whose soul yearns after God this is all joy.

c. A providential meeting in the desert (vv. 29, 30). The coming together of these two men was clearly the predetermined way of God.

2. Philip preaching to the Ethiopian (vv. 30-35).

a. The Ethiopian's employment on the way (v. 30). He was reading the Word of God. The particular portion was the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. A most excellent way to spend one's time while traveling is to read God's Word. It is through God's Word that the individual is shown the way of life.

b. The need of an interpreter (v. 31). The Ethiopian was reading one of the clearest testimonies to the Messiah in the Old Testament, yet he was unable to understand it. The Ethiopian, a great statesman, needed an interpreter of the Scriptures. The gospel needs to be experienced before one can be a witness to its saving power. The human mind in its natural state is blind to spiritual things, making the work of an evangelist indispensable. Preaching the Word of God will always be necessary. God has designed that through the foolishness of preaching, men shall be saved. Valuable, indeed, as the Bible is in the hands of men, the touch and influence of the believing man who has experienced the work of God in his own heart is needed.

c. Philip's message (vv. 32-35). He began at the scripture which the Ethiopian was reading and preached unto him Jesus. This shows us that the person presented in the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah as suffering in the stead of others was Jesus Christ, also that the central theme of the preacher's message should be Christ crucified. He did not preach Jesus as a great teacher, but as a Savior who had suffered and died in the stead of sinners. The vicarious atonement is a note which is at the very heart of the message of every evangelist.

3. Philip baptized the Ethiopian (vv. 36-38). As a result of Philip's preaching, the eunuch proposed baptism. When Christ is truly received men will desire to confess him in baptism. Where this desire is lacking the gospel in its fullness is evidently not preached. The Ethiopian might have offered many excuses as to why he should neglect this important ordinance, but like every man who is honest before God, he was willing at any cost to render obedience.

4. The Ethiopian rejoicing (v. 39). Having been baptized, he went on his way rejoicing. Confession of Christ and obedience to his Word always brings joy.

Worry

Oh, if religion can only rid us of this cursed habit of worry, what a blessing it will be! And Paul says it can. He is writing in the shadow of a prison. "Be anxious for nothing!" What a song to sing itself through prison bars!—James L. Vance.

The Cross

The cross is the real measure of life. You either stumble over it to spiritual death or you rise on it to newness of life.—P. T. Forsyth.
