123 CARRIES WITH BIG MAJORITY

As a result of the vote taken last Thursday and Friday, the Town Council considers they are now free to go ahead with the proposed improvements to our present water system.

The first day little interest was manifested there being only 39 votes polled with 33 in favor of Pollock's site and 6 opposing with valuation of $191,230 as against 44,600. But the second day 130 votes were recorded for and 49 against with valuation of $669,960 & $355,645 respectively. The By-law claimed 108 majority with valuation of 460,- 945 the total valuation over the whole as $1,261,435.

More Tire Trouble.

Another daring robbery was perpetrated in the early hours of Monday morning, when Muir Bros. Service Station was broken into and the mauranders decamped with eight tires and tubes. Entrance was gained by the use of brace and bit with which they calmly bored through one of the panels of the door. The burglars were sure of the nifty type for Muir's Gas Station is located at the most conspicuous part of Main Street surrounded both back, front and side by residences and stands clear out in the limelight. That they only took away so few is a matter of surprise, as there was a big bunch of them in storage, but the Muir Bros. are glad their loss was not greater.

"Ayers" Exhibits

That Ayers Limited are not

School Opening.

Next Tuesday, Sept. 8th., the pupils of Lachute Academy will resume their scholastic duties, after a glorious summer's vacation. From last year's reports that came through, the scholars under Principal Hall and his efficient staff did excellent work and we are pleased to know that with two exceptions the entire staff are remaining with us and are most enthusiastic in their work. Miss Rita Jones gave up teaching and entered the larger sphere of matrimony, while Miss Winnifred Gee has taken up her new duties at Shawinigan Falls.
Both these teachers rendered service that were greatly appreciated & their many friends wish them every success in their new fields of labor.

For the greater convenience of the public, arrangements have been made to hold the prize distributions in the Audi-

Our Boys and Girls

The Watchman's New Feature

Starting with our next issue, we are devoting a certain amount of space each week to the interest, instruction, and amusement of the younger members of the family circle.

All subjects, dear to the heart of boys and girls, will be freely dealt with including among many other good things, short thrilling stories, new games for the winter evenings, the joke corner, competitions and a special Friday evening Bed-Time Story for the Kiddies.

This new feature will be conducted by "The Captain" who will write an interesting letter every week to his young readers, the first of which appears on this page. Boys and girls, between the age of 8 and 15 years, are invited to contribute interesting news concerning their school and holiday experiences, to try and solve the competitions provided for their amusement, and to compete for the useful prizes which will be offered from time to time, as a reward for their success.

What is your big interest? Are you fond of painting and drawing? Do you make or fly model Aeroplanes? What books do you like best? Have you any pets? These are just a few of the many things you can write to "The Captain" about, and he will be pleased, on this page, to publish your letters, and help you in your difficulties. Make a start now by sending him a letter in which you can tell him what you think of having a part of the paper all to yourselves. Address the envelopes as follows:—

THE CAPTAIN,

Our Boys and Girls Page,

"The Watchman," Lachute, Que.

"THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER"

Dear Boys and Girls:

In this, my first letter, I bid you a hearty welcome to our own very special part of "The Watchman," I say "Our Own," because it is my sincere hope, that you will determine to take a very active part in making this new feature a big success.

Now you will be able to do this, best of all, by writing me letters, telling me of your doings in School; how you have spent your holiday, and, trying your hardest in all the competitions that will be provided for you every week.

Some years ago, when I was travelling in Egypt (Look for this Country in your Atlas) a wise old Arab told me the following quaint story:—

"You must know," he began, "that not far from this place, where we were resting, there was a village. Now this village was on the banks of the great and glorious river Nile, and the people who lived in it were not only hard working but very happy.

One day however, when the rains, for a long time had been quite heavy, the river overflowed and, in a short while the whole village was swept away by the angry water, so that a great many people as well as goats, sheep and oxen were drowned.

Now it came about Effendi that because of all this, those who had managed to save themselves were very distressed and going to their Chief said: "We have lost everything and our hearts are sad, so we will now stay here, but go among strangers, where we can forget all the bad things that have happened to us."

The Chief however was a wise man, moreover he loved his people and would not have them go into exile. Consequently he called them together at a special meeting and spoke to them very earnestly. "My Children I listened carefully to all your complaints and as you have sought my advice, I bid you be of good courage, stay here and rebuild your homes and I am sure you will prosper." But they were amazed. "That is impossible O Chief; for it is a task beyond our strength to do this big thing. We shall never accomplish it."

Still gentle and patient, the Chief replied "My Children, I am very grieved at your lack of faith. Each one of you, according to your strength must labour, even your young ones, each to his special task and by so doing, here a little, there a little, you will build your homes greater and better than they were before. So you will find that out of this sorrow will come great happiness."

Hearing these words, the people forgot their fears, and, on the ruins of their old village they built up a great and wonderful city, which, you yourself, Effendi have seen and admired."

Well, that is the end of the story and I am going to leave you to wonder why I have chosen to give it you, in this, my first letter.

Can you write and tell me Why?

Your very affectionate Friend,

"THE CAPTAIN."

Lovers of Wild Birds

Mourn for Heath Hen

Early settlers along the Atlantic coast found huge flocks of the heath hen—in size and appearance much like the western prairie chicken—frequenting the sandy, scrub oak plains of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Long Island, New York and other coastal areas from Maine to Virginia.

The Cavaliers discovered that the heath hen was excellent for roasting on a spit before the huge fireplaces. The fowl helped Roger Williams and his followers through their first hard winters in Rhode Island. Pilgrims who hunted turkey or wild deer without success brought home heath hens for Thanksgiving. Thomas Morton wrote in 1637 that the bird is much "like our pheasant henne of England of excellent flesh and delicate meat."

The heath hen, however, was the pot hunter's prey. It flew in a straight line and rather slowly on flushing and it had an unfortunate habit of congregating in large flocks in open spaces. It was extinct on the mainland as early as the Civil War, but still flourished on islands. Bird lovers called attention from time to time to the fact it was dwindling, and in 1925 there was a heath hen conference in New England in an effort to save the plumed fowl. Thousands of dollars and much time and effort were expended, but it was the old story of priming the pump after the house burned down.

Grateful and Beautiful

Tribute to Loved Wife

Those who report the inscriptions in old burying grounds do so ordinarily to call attention to what is quaint, untutored and bizarre. A different quest in these days might have as its object the discovery of inscriptions which testify, with simple sincerity, to long lives of joint happiness. The present-day world benefits by every reminder that there were such and always are.

Perhaps in all New England there is no more graceful tribute to a grateful devotion than that upon a headstone, placed not so many years ago, in the Old Grove Street cemetery in New Haven. It was placed there at the grave of his wife by a physician whose high skill and learning were long in the service of the community and of the Yale Medical school, whose courtesy and graciousness became a tradition and who bore worthily a great name, Francis Bacon. Below her name and the fact that she was his wife, he added: "For forty years the crown of his felicity."—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Football in America

The first football players in America were the "Onedias," a football club in Boston, the first organization of its kind in this country and the predecessor of modern college football, says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. According to an inscription on a monument in that city the "Onedias" played all comers from 1802 to 1805, and never tasted defeat nor had their goal line crossed.

American colleges had their football during that period. The first intercollegiate game was played between Princeton and Rutgers on November 6, 1869, the latter having 23 men on the field to the former's 21. But the first real development of the modern game came in 1906 when at a meeting of the American Intercollegiate football rules committee the forward pass was introduced.

Up-to-Date Youngster

A new nurse was engaged in the household of one of our most advanced doctors, and the first night, toward eight o'clock, she settled down with a book of fairy stories to read the doctor's daughter to sleep.

The child, aged six and very "modern," listened placidly through "Peter Piper," dozed over "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," and seemed to be sound asleep during the reading of "Jack and Jill," until suddenly, at the end of the poem, she started wide awake again. The poem ends, you will remember, with something about "tum-tum-tum, and Jack mended his crown with vinegar and brown paper."

"Why, isn't that awful!" cried the child, gazing horror-stricken at the nurse. "Didn't he even have an X-ray taken?"

Ashburton Treaty

The Ashburton treaty was negotiated between Great Britain and the United States in 1842 settling the international boundary between Maine and Canada. Lord Ashburton acting for Great Britain and Daniel Webster for the United States. Of the territory in dispute the United States received about seven-twelfths and Canada five-twelfths. The same treaty provided for the boundary of the St. Mary's river near Sault Ste. Marie and to the Lake of the Woods; for the suppression of the slave trade and for the extradition of criminals.

The Proper Comeback

A prominent English woman who recently visited us expressed her bewilderment with regard to the correct reply to the customary American greeting, "Pleased to meet you." No doubt there is a fitting response, if one could only think of it. Of course one might follow the lead of the old duke of Beaufort. An American gripped the duke warmly by the hand and said, "Pleased to meet you."

"And so you do—well ought to be," returned the aged peer, crisply.—Boston Transcript.

THE CABINS IN THE HILLS

Near the Cabins in the Hills, where the evergreens grow On the crest of a breezy hill. There the shadows dance, and the sunbeams play. To the tune of the Whip-poor-will.

There the Fairies sing to the pipes of Pan, And the brook travels laughing as it goes;

And the cow-bells ring to the tread of the kine, As they come at the daylight's close.

There the Irises grow, all unconsciously, Without culture by hoe or spade. In clusters amid the rocks and trees, In natural beauty arrayed.

From the towering hills on either side, All clothed in beauteous trees, Come the calls of the birds, like clarions clear On the scent of the evening's breeze.

But, best of all, at the twilight's close, Is the Orchestra transcendent, Of birds, and birds, and birds, and birds, The loveliest God ever sent.

From north, and south, and east and west, Comes a thrill, clear sweet and high,

Then an answering song of warbling notes Like a Minstrel's Lullaby.

There the trees are grand, and the hills are high, And the brook is a sweet rushing song;

But, the Orchestra at the close of day Is God's voice in a Grande Ensemble!

And will live in my heart, long, long! —Mary A. Catton.

CORRESPONDENCE

To Whom it May Concern:

I, as a lady ratepayer of this town would like to ask through this valuable paper this much discussed question among us, "Why is it that we are deprived of our privilege of voting?" All ratepayers have a right to a vote and why should a lady who owns considerable property in and out of town has no vote in Provincial elections; as on the other hand the men folks, most of them don't own property, have the same rights as those who do.

I just wonder now if the parties who are to blame for the non-voting of the ladies would kindly step around this fall and pay our taxes, as we have been shorn of our own rights.

The Local Highway Problem

The vast increase in motor and other vehicular traffic in Canada, and the proportionately added burden in the up-keep of the highways and by-ways of the different provinces have become a problem, the solution for which is yet to be found and particularly is this the case in the township roads. Mr. G. D. O'Connor writing in the Municipal World, on information obtained from Roy D. Chapin, Fellow in Highway Engineering, Michigan University.

The time has come for a better understanding of the township highway problem. A number of books have been written on the Cumberland Pike and other national roads, but few writers have attempted to describe the "country roads" or advance suggestions for their improvement. This report is written in the hope that the public in general and the highway engineer in particular may have a better understanding of the attempts being made to solve the problem of getting more for the township highway dollar.

Students of political science agree with our road builders that unless more financial aid is assured the townships, they will cease to function as highway administrative units. This failure of the smaller units is general the world over. The smaller units are proving inadequate to provide hard-surfaced ways for the motor vehicle. France, the dean of modern road-building states, with 36,000 communes, has only 3,000 communes with sufficient means to maintain the roads. The percentage in our middle western states, due to a lesser density of population, is much lower. If spent intelligently and economically, there is sufficient labor and capital appropriated to maintain the roads which are not yet embodied in any state or county system, but intelligence with economy is a rare combination to be found in the type of man who is available for township road work, and wastefulness is a national characteristic. The farmer has maintained the nation's highways until quite recently. The city dweller now contributes by the taxes he pays on motor-vehicle operation. The people living on the roadside are doing all that can be expected. If better highways are needed, everyone must contribute. This report is intended to describe the township highway problem, outline what is being done to solve it, submit a proposed solution and make certain recommendations for the future. This investigation, extending over several months, has included highway administration, finance and engineering in the United States, and particularly in the townships, where the situation is becoming critical. A study of the literature on the subject, and a survey of conditions in the field, compel the conclusion that, with the growing demand for better highways, the townships must receive financial aid if they are to construct travelled ways.

In the belief that the township highway organization has outlived its usefulness, and that, since the motor vehicle has come into general use, the county is really no larger than the township of the horse-and-buggy age, the writer would recommend that the administration of the township highways be taken over by the county.

The primary civil divisions are nearly 45,000 in number and vary in population. Those which are organized for the purpose of administration of highways are the towns in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont, and the townships in Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, and Wisconsin. In the other twenty-five states the county is the smallest unit organized for the purpose of highway administration.

In spite of the continued drift of rural population to the city, there are actually more people in the rural districts than ever before, and their per capita wealth was never greater. In consequence, the amount of money available from property taxes for the maintenance of highways grows steadily. These people are also contributing to the up-keep of the nation's highways through the taxes on motor-vehicle operation. Still it is sufficient, for very little of the money so raised each year finds its way back to the roads over which the farmer must drive to his markets. If, however, the number of persons moving from the rural districts to the city should increase more rapidly than the birth rate, there would be fewer people left on the farms and consequently less interest in local self-government. Taxes will not be affected as they are applied to the property. With fewer taxpayers living in the townships, local interest in the administration of highways will wane and county control will be the final result.

Local government in the United States, it need hardly be explained, is exclusively a matter of state control. The national government has nothing to do with it. Each state has full power to devise its own system of town, township, district, or borough government, and to modify this system at will. But although each state is supreme as respects its own form and functions of local government, the state legislatures are not always given a full hand in such matters. The state constitutions contain many limiting provisions which guarantee to the local units their existence and the possession of various privileges. And as constitutions are revised the tendency is to insert more of these restricting provisions. Nevertheless, the towns, townships, villages, and other communities are largely under the legislature's control. Acts of the legislature provide what officers a community shall have, how they shall be chosen and what their duties shall be. Such acts are usually of a general character applying to all local areas of the same legal character—that is, to towns or townships as a class; but special laws applying to individual communities are also common except in states where they are forbidden by constitutional provision.

It is very difficult to describe local self-government in the United States. The fact that there is such a diversity in the organization of the minor civil divisions in the various states is a weakness of the system. Of recent years the people in those divisions have been thinking along the lines of centralization. The county, which is common to all the states, is slowly becoming of more importance in highway administration. As the agent of the state in administering state aid, the county is assuming more complete control over the township highways.

History and Development of the Townships

The origin of the township is lost in antiquity. The early Romans had road districts which contributed to the maintenance of roads but these districts were not organized—for administrative purposes. Rather, certain stretches of highway were let by contract to individuals who collected toll from travellers on the road and from the adjacent property owners. Tacitus, the Roman historian, relates that there were organized districts in Germany in the first century. Local self-government became more pronounced in England and came to this country with the first colonists, being retained after the Declaration of Independence from political expediency. The township, as we know it, came from New England as the settlers moved westward through the New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Unlike the New England town, these townships have artificial boundaries and were created by surveys.

The original intention of the government survey was to divide the land into convenient parcels for sale. Any regular sub-division would have served this purpose. But, once divided, the government endeavored to make political units of the townships.

The number of organized townships steadily increases. There are over 25,000 of them, more than all the other primary civil divisions. The organized townships are destined to continue as such unless for material reasons their authority is handed over to the counties. Considering the rapidity with which the states formed highway departments in order to participate in federal aid it is highly probable that the townships would be glad to throw in their lot with the counties if state aid were increased, on the condition that the county administer the funds so created.

Present Organization of the Townships

There are seventeen states in which the township is organized for the purpose of highway administration. Of these states, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania, due to their location and early settlement, have proceeded further in their road-building programmes than the middle western states, and each has evolved a distinctive form of organization.

The form of organization in the townships of fourteen states is fairly uniform. These states are Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, and Wisconsin. The words "town" and "township" have the same meaning, but the organized town or township may comprise one or more congressional townships or parts of two or more congressional townships. The electors assemble annually and elect one or more supervisors, trustees, or commissioners and various other officers. As a rule, three of the officers form a board for highway administration purposes. The board may appoint as many supervisors or overseers as there are road districts. The matter of road districts is one of convenience. The organized township may be a road district or may be divided into several districts. Road districts formed for the purpose of routine maintenance should not be confused with the road districts formed for special improvement purposes.

To quote from T. H. Noble, chairman of the Grosse Ile Road Commission, Michigan:

The township is the smallest of our governmental sub-divisions. If properly organized, it will first determine which thoroughfares are likely to be taken in hand by its county and state. It is not claimed that organization is a panacea for all the ills affecting the efficiency of township work. The mere fact that township work is being conducted under state specifications, and subject to the inspection of its trained engineers, inspires confidence, stimulates pride, and improves the morale of all that portion of the community capable of being affected by such influence, and thereby the efficiency of the working force is improved. The only way to establish standards of excellence, and perpetuate a policy, is to fall in line, and as a ward of the state, and by a faithful observance of its requirements, enjoy the benefits of its patriarchal attitude. A proper organization and education in road matters necessarily go hand in hand. The organization will demand the education of its officers, and education will demand organization. We believe that the shortest route to an improved condition is by inducing a more general attendance at the road schools.

The doctrine of education and co-operation will help the officials who handle highway funds to spend them wisely, but the funds are inadequate. Our leading students of political science agree that too much money is expended on overhead and unnecessary duplication of road organizations. The political scientist favors centralization. The county, as a unit common to all the states, is recommended to be the smallest political unit.

Kirk H. Porter describes the weaknesses of the smaller divisions in these words:

"The outstanding characteristic of the county and township is that they are, and always have been, areas for local self-government. The measure of real discretion resting with the county or township comes to be less and less each year, and the functions which local authorities have to perform simply as agents of their own community are less and less important. This is a result of the extension of state activity and control, as well as a declining interest in local governmental institutions. American democracy has its roots deep down in the county and the township, and the county particularly is the very basis of the political structure in most of the Local Highway Problem—Continued on page 7.

One Letter He Did Not Mail

By CORONA REMINGTON

"NOW, I'll be out of town Monday but I'll be back Tuesday morning and I'll call you. Maybe we could go to a show that night. Would you like to?"

"I'd love to go," she smiled up at him.

"That's a bargain then. I'll call you Tuesday. Good-by."

Big Jim Spearman pressed her hand lingeringly for a second and was gone. Constance Miller walked back into the living room after he had left and wondered what had happened. There was a strange loneliness about the place and yet a peculiar cheer, too. She felt somehow both the presence and the absence of his big wholesome personality.

"And he's going to call me Tuesday morning . . ." she whispered to herself. "Sunday, Monday . . ." she counted them off on her fingers "Only two days!"

"I believe he likes me a little—I honestly believe he does," she told her mirror as she stood in front of it brushing her hair for the night. "And just think, two weeks ago I didn't know him. I didn't even know him."

With the languid, preoccupied motions of one who is thinking of something else she finished her toilette at last and slipped into bed. She was so sleepy yet so incredibly happy. "Tuesday . . . Tuesday . . . Tuesday." She wished she could stay awake all night just to think about it. The words floated around in her brain, now distinct, now dim, now distinct again. "Tuesday . . . Tue—" Down, down she sank into the land of Nod.

And when she awoke it was Sunday and time to get dressed for breakfast.

"Day after tomorrow!" That sounded so much nearer than Tuesday had the night before. "Day after tomorrow."

Sunday jogged along somehow. Breakfast, church, dinner, a long afternoon of piano and books, peaceful, informal, servileless supper. Leavings from the midday feast—chicken and dressing, sliced veal, jam and bread and butter, tea, scraps. Delicious.

And then Monday. Less time for dreaming. A hurried hour of piano practice, then the lesson and afterward more practice. The afternoon was filled with golf. And Tuesday—Constance decided to break her engagement with the dentist to stay home. He might telephone while she was gone. She practiced a little, then went to the window and looked out, she did not know what for. The telephone bell rang suddenly, sharply. With a start she picked it up, her heart beating strangely.

"Yes?" Her voice was a thrill with expectancy.

"Hello, Conny, this is Margaret."

She could scarcely restrain herself. A tide of disappointment swept over her. That telephone bell rang again and again and each time she flew to it certain that it was he, only to find that it was some one else. The tension became unbearable, and that night she cried herself to sleep, one moment certain that he had been killed in some way or had fallen suddenly ill, the next moment certain that he was a flirt and had completely forgotten her.

Wednesday she decided to telephone to his office. But she hung up the receiver just as the operator asked for the number.

"No, if he can't take the trouble to call me he may go for all I care." (That was one of the moments when she was sure he was a flirt.)

Thursday was a replica of Wednesday—only worse, cumulative tension and disappointment adding to the pain.

Then came Friday and with the evening Jim Spearman appeared, cordial, debonair, conscienceless.

"Mighty glad to see you again."

"Well, where shall we go tonight?" She had not spoken a word as yet.

"I—I don't think we'll go."

"Why, Constance, you promised me tonight."

"I did not," she answered with spirit. "I promised you Tuesday night and Tuesday's been gone—a year!"

"But I sent you a special delivery explaining that I'd be detained and asking you to go tonight. I only got back an hour ago."

"It—it didn't come."

"Well, I mailed it! I put it in this pocket and mailed it Monday night at the post office myself." He slipped his hand into his pocket and pulled out—the letter. There it was stamped and sealed, and addressed to her.

Limply he dropped into a chair—a big, pathetically crestfallen man.

"Well, what on earth do you suppose I mailed that night anyway?"

It was all over. All the suffering and suspicion and doubt. Conny laughed the happiest rippling laugh.

"I can't imagine," she said, "but I know one thing—it wasn't my special delivery."

"Well, after we've been married a few years you'll find out what an absent-minded old man you have for a husband." He said it in the same cheery way he said everything else and with the same certainty—and he was right.

Hours later that night she turned over and over in joyful restlessness.

"Once explained, how understandable the understandable is," she sighed happily.

WORLD'S GREATEST TRAVEL SYSTEM

Its Extra Traction Cuts Down Fuel Costs

It just takes one look at a "Caterpillar" to see why it does so much work on so little gasoline. Look at the traction it gets, with those long, wide tracks. It simply can't slip or sink, whether the going is rough or smooth, level or sloping, wet or dry A full 80 per cent. of its engine power is delivered at the draw-bar.

Best for Farm or Road Work

The "Caterpillar" is without a peer for farm work—economical to operate—abundant power—remarkably low cost of up-keep—long life—goes anywhere—works close to trees and fences—turns almost "on a postage stamp"—easy to steer—comfortable to ride.

Look for the Name "Caterpillar"

There are various tractors on the market. But the genuine "Caterpillar" has the name on the radiator. Look for it. That's your assurance of sturdy dependability.

Send your name and address, and we will mail you the "Caterpillar" Magazine, FREE. Shows you actual photographs of the "Caterpillar" in action. It's interesting.

THE USE OF MACHINERY IN PUBLIC WORKS FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

A very important point regarding public works to aid the unemployed is the use or non-use of machinery. This question is now exercising the minds of the City Council of Montreal through a motion by Alderman J. M. Savignac that the executive committee "be requested to consider the advisability of using, or of making it compulsory to use, in the carrying out of municipal works, hand shovels instead of steam shovels, and this, with a view of providing a greater number of persons with work." As the main purpose of all public works at this time is to provide employment Alderman Savignac's motion is worthy of serious consideration not only by the City Council of Montreal, but by all public authorities having control over construction. It is quite true that in excavation work hand labour is much slower and more expensive than machine labour, nevertheless the difference in time and cost is not sufficient to warrant the use of machines under present conditions. It is better that 200 men should be employed on a public works than 10 men and two steam shovels. In the end it would be more economical for the community.

If proof was wanted for this contention one could quote the case of the Canadian National Railways terminals at Montreal. Here was the high sum of $50,000,000 set aside for a great terminal, the main argument put up for its immediate construction being that it would give employment to thousands of men. No doubt this is true so far as the fabrication of the superstructure is concerned, but in the excavations the whole of the work was done with steam shovels, while thousands of unemployed looked on. From a purely business point of view the C. N. R. was probably justified in its action; but the community suffered in the large army of unemployed which under other conditions would have found employment.

There is another argument in favour of using hand labour instead of machinery, whenever possible, in public works, and that is the taxpayers' pockets. If all the out-of-works this coming winter are to be given employment on public works, and machinery is to be largely used, the cost will bankrupt every municipality in the country; so those responsible must declare a moratorium on any kind of machinery which will take the place of the human element at least while the present depression is on. This may not be sound economics but it is sound sense.

RELIEF WORK NOW GETS UNDER WAY

Are Aiding Unemployment in Seven of the Provinces.

Unemployment relief work is already under way in seven provinces. Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labor announced recently with the tentative understanding reached with the Ontario Government in Toronto all but Quebec and Prince Edward Island have commenced highway construction work to provide employment. The tentative arrangements provide the Dominion Government is to pay a maximum of 50 percent. of the cost of road building, Senator Robertson said. Further discussions are to take place with regard to construction of public buildings and other works in municipalities.

Recent elections in Quebec & Prince Edward Island have delayed negotiations with those provinces but Quebec has been invited to confer with Senator Robertson and Prince Edward Island is expected to put forward its proposals shortly.

All arrangements so far made must be approved by the Governor-in-Council and the recommendations of the Minister of Labor will be considered upon the return to Ottawa of Premier R. B. Bennett.

Senator Robertson was in conference recently with Premier George S. Henry of Ontario and Hon. William Finlayson, Provincial Minister of Lands and Forests. "I am well satisfied," Senator Robertson said, "with the progress being made towards road construction including the trans-Canada Highway and other provincial roads which will be useful to settlers in Northern Ontario."

LAKEFIELD

Rev. Lester Pollard and Miss Freda M. Cox of Montreal, were guests at Lakeside Lodge this week.

Holy Trinity Church was filled to its utmost capacity on Sunday night last when the Rev. Richard F. Flander conducted his farewell service, prior to his departure for his new duties in Montreal.

In token of appreciation a goodly number of parishioners and friends gathered at the parsonage on Thursday night to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Flander. During the evening a purse containing a very generous expression of the goodwill of the people was presented to Mr. Flander by Rev. Allen E. Mount.

Miss H. Douglas of Montreal, spent the week-end at Mrs. A. Tomalty's.

Mr. Stanley Langille, Miss T. Hynes, Mr. Stanley Boyd and Miss V. Tomalty spent last Sunday at Long Lake.

Miss Helen Douglas and Mr. C. Gordon Hynes, of Montreal, spent last week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tomalty of Lakefield.

THE LATE MRS. HURDMAN

News of the death of Mrs. Hurdman, who passed away in Ottawa, on Wednesday, August 26th., was heard with much sorrow, for Myrtle Arnold was a popular young lady, born in Grenville, on April 26th., 1895. After leaving the elementary school in her home town, she took her high school training in Hawkesbury, Ont., and Normal in Macdonald College, later taking up stenography in an Ottawa Business College. She was with the Mutual Life Insurance Co. for many years.

On Oct. 15th., 1927, she was married to Wilbert E. Hurdman and resided at 512 Bay Street, Ottawa.

During her long illness, she was cheerful, brave and hopeful and her courage endeared her to all who knew her.

She was a member of St. Paul's Eastern United Church and the Young People's Society.

Her remains were laid in the Hurdman family lot at Beechwood, where rests her father-in-law, the late Col. Hurdman.

The Late Margaret Barker

The passing of Miss Margaret Barker on Friday last, removes a member from our Dalesville Community that is deeply regretted by all who have been associated with her through her activities in religious and social circles.

Her loss is mourned by all who have come in contact with her.

After a prolonged illness that extended over a full year spent in the city hospitals, she eventually succumbed to heart failure.

Deceased was the third daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. Barker, of Dalesville, Que., and leaves to mourn her loss three sisters Mrs. E. Parker, of Calgary, Alberta; Emily and Rocina, of Montreal; one brother, Robert E. Barker, of Wheatland California.

The funeral service was held on Monday, Aug. 31st., at Jos. Wray's on Mountain St., by the Rev. C. G. Smith, of the Temple Baptist Church, Outremont. The burial took place at Dalesville Cemetery and was attended by a large number of friends and relatives; floral tributes giving silent testimony to the esteem in which she was held.

TOWN COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the Lachute Town Council was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday last, there being present Mayor P. Dobbie, and Aldermen J. N. A. Rice, J. P. McKimmie, C. Miller, Jos. Speight, Dr. A. Rodrigue, W. A. Morrison and H. M. Lavigne.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted and the Financial report accepted.

Dr. Lalonde appeared before the Council for renewal of the grant to the Health Unit and gave a brief resumé of the work accomplished since inauguration.

Medical inspection had been given to 760 children of the schools of Lachute, 1756 distributions of leaflets for general care and instruction, 125 babies had been brought to the clinic and 345 visits made to the homes in Lachute, also 301 cases of immunization against diptheria, which is made at considerable expense to the government, as each child is given three injections at a net cost of $2.25. Then in regards to sanitation, of which Dr. Touchette is in charge, there is considerable improvement, as for instance—Bread is now carried to the customers in baskets, dairies are properly laid out with machinery to ensure proper cleanliness, barbers are using antiseptic containers for their instruments, etc. Nuisances are gradually being eliminated by the regular collection of garbage in which the town has willingly complied and Dr. Lalonde said they were doing all that was possible towards the general health of its citizens.

The amount of $650. was then granted, on motion of Alderman Miller, seconded by Alderman Rodrigue.

The bill of $76.85 presented by R. Beaulne, several months ago, for breakage to his truck in a bad hole near Delorme's garage in the West End, was ordered paid as it was admitted that the Town should have seen to its proper state of road. Another account of $2.50 from Belanger for help in pulling out of the rut was also paid.

The water question then came up for discussion and Aldermen Lavigne and Rodrigue wanted to know where were the plans for the proposed new dam at Pollocks. Alderman MacKimmie in reply stated that the plans would be here tomorrow and that Mr. Sutherland had told them that the plans would be accepted by the Government.

Alderman Rodrigue protested that the Town action was not in accord with the requirements laid down by the Board of Health who demanded that plans of proposed work must be submitted to them before the public are called upon to vote money for such purpose.

Alderman MacKimmie was of the opinion that someone was trying to block the project from going through, but both Alderman Lavigne and Rodrigue wanted things executed in proper legal manner and this raised the question of the appointment of another engineer, when Mr. Ouimet had already done much work, after taking over Mr. Loignon's plans. Mayor Dobbie however was not alone in his opinion that Mr. Ouimet's services were by the previous votes automatically dispensed with and the town had no further obligations towards him. This Alderman Lavigne contended was a very controversial matter. The Council then adjourned until Tuesday September 8th.

MENU

Sometimes it's difficult to think up new ideas for varying daily menus. Here's one that offers pleasing variety and combines healthful qualities as well. It was prepared by Miss Gertrude Dutton, Western Canada's best known cookery expert, conductor of the Better Cookery Section in the Winnipeg Western Home Monthly.

2 cups flour 1 tablespoon lard
4 teaspoons Magic 3/4 cup cold milk, or Baking Powder half milk and half
1/2 teaspoon salt water
1 tablespoon butter

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in the chilled shortening. Now add the chilled liquid to make soft dough. Toss dough on to a floured board and do not handle more than is necessary. Pat out with the hand or roll out lightly. Cut out with a floured biscuit cutter. Bake on a buttered sheet in a hot oven, 450° F., 12 to 15 minutes.

This recipe and dozens of other equally delightful baking suggestions are included in the New Magic Cook Book. If you bake at home, a copy will be sent you. Write to Standard Brands Limited, Fraser Ave. and Liberty St., Toronto, Ont.

Rowena Rides the Rumble

TENTH INSTALMENT

It was indeed very plain what they thought about Peter. The friendly admiring smiles with which they said good-by to Rowena froze into cold disapproval in their curt nods to Peter. He felt quite cut up over it all.

"Don't you care," said Rowena. "When they find out how things really are, they'll be so mad at me for fooling them that they'll rebound your way and think you're quite the nuts."

"Well," said Peter, "there's one thing sure. Everything in the world has happened to us now. From desert sands to mountain mud, from separate floors to bridal suite, we've run the gamut of the unexpected. Nothing will surprise me after this."

"Me, either," agreed Rowena. "I've used up the very last of my surprise sensations. No matter what happens, I'm expecting it."

But they were both wrong. Incredible as it seemed at the moment they were due for many more surprising denouements and more sensational ones. Even climatic conditions conspired to add to their discomfort.

The sky had been overcast for hours, and a heavy downpour of rain was followed by a steady disheartening drizzle that showed no signs of diminution.

They smiled at each other after a terrible day and in friendly comradely quiet pulled slowly up to the hotel.

"Just ask for two singles," advised Rowena. "And if they give us adjoining ones we can't help it. We've got Spokane to fall back on."

They followed the boy with their bags into the hotel lobby. And the first thing they saw there was little brown Bobby Lowell sitting all hunched up in the biggest upholstered chair in sight.

"Bobby," they cried. "You little duck, you! Where did you come from? Where are you going? What in the world are you doing here?"

Bobby dimpled, wept and giggled, kissing them both again and again with complete impartiality.

"You angels!" she said. "I've been so lonesome and I'm so glad to be back with you again. I feel like a poor little orphan that just found out it is a Smith!"

"Where's Carter? Is it your honeymoon?"

The small brown nose upturned itself to a very haughty angle.

"Never mention his name to me again," she said thickly. "I never want to see him again as long as I live."

"Carter! You never want to see Carter? Oh you can't mean Carter!" protested Rowena, who simply could not conceive of a Bobby with no Carter at the tip of her tongue. "It's just not possible!"

"It is possible—it's a fact. All is over between us for ever and ever. That's why I came to get on the rest of the trip with you."

"But see here," said Peter sternly, you just can't be on and off with us like that. You left us in a terrible hole, running off the way you did."

"I knew I had done wrong," said Bobby, "and so I said the best thing to do was to come straight back as fast as I could. That's why I didn't send back the money I borrowed, Peter. I needed it to come back on."

"Well, what happened?" demanded Rowena. "How in the world did you ever get off with Carter?"

"It was like this. At first he was overjoyed to have me back and then in about an hour we got to talking about it and he got madder and madder and said he really didn't know whether he wanted to ruin his future by marrying a woman who had no more sense than that. So naturally I broke the engagement and gave him back his ring. I put my things in my bag and called up Rackruff to find out where I could catch you and here I am. Oh darlings, I've been so unhappy and it's so good to see you."

They were none too well pleased about it. Bobby was an expensive addition to the party, and seemed doubly expensive now that they could dispense with her presence.

It did not clear the atmosphere when they found waiting a telegram from the company with peremptory orders to send her back at once.

It said it was better publicity for the roadster to have the bridal couple continue their honeymoon alone.

Bobby said it was none of their business what she did, that she was responsible only to Carter. Was she going to let any ten-cent company give her orders? Certainly not! Her arrangement with Rowena had been for the entire tour and for the entire tour she would continue.

So Rowena retired to the rumble seat, although Peter insinuated strongly that he was not vitally interested in the details of the falling out with Carter.

South to Portland proceeded the thoroughly chaperoned party. It was in Portland that Bobby, who had been delighted into genuine hysterics over their gay account of the big doings in Spokane, demanded to see the wedding presents.

So Peter brought out the cocktail shaker and the cigarette lighter and Rowena showed her the watch and the Candy box with the kissing Cupids.—It was the last time Rowena showed that watch for a good many weeks. She left it in extremely safe deposit—for a consideration—right there in Portland.

They gave Bobby a lurid account of the desperate strait in which she left them, and how Rowena conceived the idea of getting married as a sop to the requirements of society. Bobby said she always did think Rowena was just too clever for words.

"But aren't you just as married as if you really were married?" she asked interestedly.

"Not at all. We're just pretending that way. In fact we are the same old maids and bachelors we always were."

"Isn't it too bad you are both so disagreeable?" said Bobby sweetly. "If you were just a little nicer you could fall in love with each other now—you know they write best sellers about men falling in love with their wives, and it would be too romantic for words!"

"Thank God we're not nice then," said Rowena. "With the example before us of you and Carter in love and all it leads to, Peter and I have entirely too much sense to be anything but enemies."

In San Francisco Peter found Rowena was starving herself to send money back East.

He had suspected that she was in debt. Evidently her creditors were pushing her hard. He went abruptly out to the little park where they were snapping the pictures.

"You must have enough," he said. "We're both dead tired. Let's lay off."

Rowena's smile was grateful. "I am tired," she confessed.

When they got in the roadster to return to the hotel he said in a voice so offhand and unconcerned that if she had not been so vitally interested in his words she must surely have suspected some hidden prompting.

"By the way, I got the expense money to-day. Of course we're not supposed to have it till Monday, but I cashed the check so you may as well have yours."

"P-Peter!" gasped Rowena. And pressed the back of her hand quickly to her lips. Peter hoped she was not going to give anything away, confide any embarrassing details, but he need not have worried. Rowena shuddered her own worries.

"I'm hungry as the deuce," he said. "Let's see if we can find a good chop house and get a decent steak."

Rowena never said a word about soup. For himself Peter ordered the thickest, juiciest steak they could lay their hands on, and plenty of "French fries."

"That sounds good," said Rowena meekly. "Two."

She hoped Peter could not tell from her voice how the very thought of it made her mouth water.

"Well, there's one nice thing about traveling trio," said Rowena. "You know just what to expect of every town. A bed, & food, and no adventures. It seems a bit smug after the life of adventure Peter and I have lived."

Bobby said nothing at all. She was brooding painfully over the probable state of affairs in New York and her heart was wrung with doubts.

There was no letter for her at the hotel in Los Angeles and she wilted visibly.

It was probably her absorption in her personal grief which kept her from sensing at the first moment, as the others did, that something was wrong.

Peter registered for all three and the clerk instead of consulting the room chart as clerks are supposed to, turned without a word and went into the adjoining office.

"Peter," whispered Rowena, "I don't like that clerk. He looks like the worst sort of manager to me. I don't like this hotel either. I have developed a sixth sense about hotels. Let's go somewhere else."

"Oh, that's all imagination," said Peter, uncomfortably aware that it was not imagination and that Rowena was right about it.

But the clerk came back from the inner office at that moment, summoned a boy and immediately they were on their way up. Rowena and Bobby shared a large double room with Peter in a single one adjoining, the bathroom between. He was thickly lathering his hands with soap to get rid of his accumulation of motor oil and California dust when there was a knock at the door and Rowena opened it to admit three men, one the manager of the hotel.

"Mr. Blande here?"

"His room is over there. He's in the bath now, I think."

"Call him, in will you?"

"Peter!" Rowena called at the closed door. "Can you come in a minute?"

Peter came at once, the towel still in his hands.

"Hello," he said cheerfully.

"What's what?"

"That's what we want to know Are you Peter Blande?"

"I most certainly am."

"Is one of these ladies your wife?"

"Yes. This lady—Rowena—is my wife."

"Did you register as Mrs. Blande?"

"No, by my maiden name. I am a writer and use my own name for professional reasons."

"You admit that you are his wife, however?"

"Absolutely," said Rowena. "I even brag about it."

"Why, they gave them the bridal suite in Spokane," put in Bobby hopefully.

"Yes, we heard about that. Are you Miss Lowell?"

"Well, I'm sorry, but you're under arrest. All three of you. We have a complaint against you from New York. They say you're not married at all, traveling under false pretenses and want us to hold you. They say you're keeping this young lady by coercion and that you have a demoralizing influence over her."

Rowena and Peter glowered at Bobby.

"What?" they demanded sternly, "does this mean?"

"I haven't the faintest idea," said Bobby. "I never saw anything demoralizing about you."

"That," said the officer kindly, "is because you are so innocent. But that lay out there"—and at his indication they turned and saw a uniformed woman on guard in the corridor just outside their door—"that lady is from the Juvenile Court. She will take charge of you."

Encamped at Loretteville, Quebec, where they are establishing a village in which the ancient arts of the redman are practiced, members of the Six Nations under the leadership of 81 year old Chief Wolverine recently honoured the Canadian Pacific Commodore by adopting him into the tribes and conferring chieftainship upon him as a tribute

Meeting the Empress of Britain in their gaily decorated birch-bark canoes a score of braves and Squaws, led by Wolverine, Running Bull, American Horse and Princess White Eagle, danced their ceremonial dance on the Games Deck of the mighty liner, stood in reverent silence while the old Chief invoked the great spirits and rent the air with their whoops as Princess White Eagle and Chief Wolverine crowned the new chief with a war bonnet of eagle's feathers.

BROWNSBURG

Mrs. T. H. Grey who has been spending a few weeks in the city visiting friends, has left for Ottawa, Toronto and Detroit, and will later visit her daughter Mrs. Arthur Proudfoot of Chicago, Ill.

On the afternoon of Saturday, August 29, the Choir of the United Church held their second picnic of the summer, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wilson, at Dauphin Lake, whose summer cottage was again placed at their disposal for another very happy holiday. Quite a number were in attendance, the afternoon being spent in boating and playing games, the other cottagers joining heartily in placing at the disposal of the young people whatever craft and conveniences they had for amusement purposes. In this manner the afternoon passed pleasantly, and was succeeded by a hearty lunch on the verandah of the Wilson cottage. As darkness fell a large bon-fire was lighted and the group surrounded the genial blaze in company with all the campers and their families, where an excellent concert of an impromptu nature was given, the choir being led by Mr. Taylor in glees, adrials and popular songs of the day, with solos and recitations of a humorous character or otherwise, all of which was followed by cries of encore to which there was always a generous response. A feature of the program was the manner in which various members of the cottage families residing at the lake for the summer joined in the festivities and contributed their quota of songs and quips to the amusement and hilarity of everybody. A couple of young girls also willingly responded, and the Irish wit and brogue were not lacking. The rendering being given in costume by a cottager who, it was announced had just arrived by plane from the "Auld Countree." The sweet strains of the mouth organ and cornet led the group in singing some popular airs, and the entertainment would probably have continued till morning only that it meant the approaching Sabbath, as there seemed to be no end to the excellent quips, pranks and stories, interspersed with songs, harmonies, jokes, all given in good spirit and taken with a laugh. A second pass around supper by Mrs. Wilson, aided by members of the group, brought a most delightful evening to a close for which great credit is due Mr. Taylor for the splendid organization of the party, the spirit shown, and to all who contributed to so fine a program, as appreciation also, and thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and the other cottagers, for their genial and gracious hospitality.

URGING BONUS OF $1 PER ACRE FOR FARMERS

A bonus of one dollar per seed acre for farmers in the drought area was sought in a resolution presented to Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett recently by a delegation representing the Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities and prominent Southern Saskatchewan farmers as a solution for the relief situation in the districts affected. It was pointed out that those farmers with crops were receiving a Federal subsidy of five cents per bushel but that those without any crop through no fault of their own were without means. It was argued that the payment of one dollar compensation for crop failure on each acre put to seed would eliminate much of the relief requirement.

Conscience money is still being received, showing that the still small voice can yet be heard occasionally over the noise of radio and the roar of traffic. One man sends a railway company enough to pay transportation for a child because on one occasion he misrepresented the age. And he lives in Los Angeles where Aimee Semple's stands. But the palm still belongs to the man who many years ago sent $20 to the treasury at Washington because nineteen years before, he had defrauded the customs, and his conscience had been troubling him. In a postscript he added: "When my conscience troubles me again I'll remit the balance." He is not the first, nor the last, to compound with that unfortunate creditor.

TURNING TO THE GENTILES

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13:13-52.
GOLDEN TEXT—For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Preaching in Antioch.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Preaching in Antioch.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Opening a New Field.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Light Unto the Gentiles.

1. Paul's Journey from Perga to Antioch (13:13-15).
From this time forward Paul, who hitherto was called Saul, takes the lead. His companions were Barnabas and John Mark. Leaving Cyprus they sailed northward to Perga, the seaport of Pamphylia.

1. Defection of John Mark (v. 13). From Perga, Mark for some reason went back. He later redeemed himself, and was ready to go again when the second missionary journey was begun, but Paul would not give consent (Acts 15: 38, 39). It is pleasing to note that before Paul's death he testified in Mark's favor (II Tim. 4:11).

2. In the synagogue at Antioch (vv. 14, 15). From Perga, Paul and Barnabas went to Antioch in Pisidia where they entered the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Though Paul was the apostle to the Gentiles, his order of ministry was to begin with the Jews.

11. Paul Preaching in the Synagogue (vv. 16-41).
After the usual reading of the Scriptures, in response to the invitation of the rulers, Paul delivered his first recorded sermon. In its analysis we find four parts:

1. Historical (vv. 17-23). In this section we see how Paul in a conciliatory way led them gradually through a series of changes in which God had dealt graciously with them, finally giving them Jesus, his Son. He indicated these steps as follows: (a) God chose the fathers and exalted the people (v. 17). (b) He delivered them from Egyptian bondage and led them through the terrible wilderness (v. 17, 18). (c) He destroyed seven nations in the Land of Canaan and gave to Israel their lands (v. 19). (d) He gave them judges as deliverers when distressed by surrounding nations (v. 20). (e) After they had selfishly chosen a king, God rejected the dynasty of Saul and chose David, a man after his own heart (vv. 21, 22). (f) Finally it was God who from David's seed raised up unto Israel a Savior, Jesus. This demanded proof which follows:

2. Apologetical (vv. 24-27). That this Jesus was of the seed of David and therefore the promised Messiah he proves by three lines of argument: (a) The testimony of John the Baptist (vv. 24, 25). (b) The prophecies of Scripture fulfilled in their rejection and crucifixion of Jesus (vv. 26-29). (c) His resurrection from the dead (vv. 30-37). Several passages of Scripture were cited as being fulfilled in the resurrection by means of which he was declared to be the Son of God with power. Having proved Jesus to be the seed of David, he proceeded to set down the doctrinal teachings growing out of it.

3. Doctrinal (vv. 38, 39). The great doctrine derived from this proof is justification by faith—the very marrow of the gospel. Observe: a. The ground of justification is the finished work of Jesus Christ. He took our place as a sinner that we might become sons (II Cor. 5:21). b. Who are justified? Those who believe in him. c. From what is one justified? All sins. The one who believes in Jesus is freely forgiven all sins.

4. Practical (vv. 40, 41).
The application of this sermon was a warning lest the judgment spoken of by Habakkuk should fall upon them.

III. The Effect of the Sermon (vv. 42-52).
1. Many of the Jews and proselytes requested to hear these words again (vv. 42-49). Almost the whole city came to hear the Word of God the next Sabbath. This great crowd incited the jealousy of the Jews.

2. Open opposition (vv. 50, 51). The persecution became so violent that Paul and Barnabas were expelled from the city. This persecution was answered by Paul's rejection of them and his turning to the Gentiles.

3. The disciples filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost (v. 52). In spite of the bitter experiences occasioned by this opposition, they were filled with joy.

Through Gates of Forgiveness
Through the gates of forgiveness we enter a new world, out from darkness into light, out from coldness into warmth, out from evil into good, out from indifference into love, out from the illusion into the real.—Richard Whitwell.

God's Dews and Showers
God's sweet dew and showers of grace slide off the mountain of pride, and fall on the low valleys of humble hearts, and make them pleasant and fertile.—Leighton.

Fournier, S. Dawson, A. O. Kerr, C. J. Staniforth, W. Beauchamp, J. Bradley, A. E. Ladouceur, J. E. Walker.

A resolution was passed to proceed at once with the County Road, between Harrington and Grenville and Augmentation Townships.

Dr. Lalande of the Sanitary Unit presented his report of work done in the County and after some discussion a resolution was passed renewing the grant of $2196.

TOWN COUNCIL

A regular adjourned meeting of the Lachute Town Council was held in the Council Rooms, on Tuesday evening last, September 8th., there being present Mayor Dobbie, and Aldermen J. Rice, J. P. MacKimmie, W. A. Morrison, C. R. Miller and Jos. Speight.

Moved by Alderman Miller, seconded by Alderman MacKimmie that the C. J. Dryden Company Limited be engaged to prepare and submit for approval by the Provincial Board of Health, whatever plans and estimates were necessary for the construction of a new Water-Works Intake at Pollock's site, subject to the following conditions:—

The C. J. Dryden Company Ltd. Agrees:

(1) To prepare and submit to the Provincial Board of Health, a plan for the construction of a dam not less than 12 feet in height from the existing bed of the stream from which the supply of water for the Town is now obtained; the said dam to be so designed as to provide for the installation of a Chlorination system in accordance with the requirements of the said Provincial Board of Health.

(2) To provide all materials, labor, plant, tools and equipment for the construction of the said dam.

(3) To provide all materials, labor, plant, tools and equipment for the construction of a cast iron pipe line, 12 inches in diameter, of the weight known as Class "A" in the specifications of the Engineering Institute of Canada or of equivalent tensile strength, from the present intake to the new dam referred to above; to connect this pipe with the existing 8 inch and 4 inch supply pipes at a point near the present intake.

(4) To employ residents of the Town of Lachute as far as possible in carrying out the work.

The Town of Lachute agrees:

(1) To pay the cost of all materials, labor, rental of plant and tools (whether owned by the C. J. Dryden Company, Ltd. or not), freight, cartage, Workmen's Compensation and Public Liability Insurance, travelling and hotel expenses and, in short all costs incurred by the C. J. Dryden Company, Limited, in connection with the construction of the dam and pipe line (except for the preparation of plans).

(2) To pay to the C. J. Dryden Company, Limited 12½% of the cost as above determined, provided however that the whole cost to the Town shall not exceed $20,000.

(3) To provide at its own further expense, all necessary rights of way and permits which may be required for the prosecution of the work, together with any fencing of the land to be acquired, or any portion of it, which the Town may deem necessary or desirable.

THE CAPTAIN'S LETTER.

How do you like starting school again? I am sure that, though you will not soon forget the happy holidays you have had, many of you were quite pleased to return to lessons.

Now there are two ways of doing your lessons. If you do them just because you HAVE to, you will make no progress, and your time will be wasted; but if you do them in a happy spirit and because you like being at school then you will be astonished how quickly you get on.

Very soon you will be reading the first Chapters of the wonderful story that is being written for your enjoyment. It is called:—

"THE RETURN OF TIMOTHY"

and is all about the adventures of two boys at school. I hope you will get to like Timothy very much and when you have read the last word of the last Chapter of the story you will know why I very much want you to do so. At present it is a big secret.

This week the kiddies have their promised "Bed-time Story" and you will see I am answering a letter that has come all the way from London, Ontario. I am looking forward to receiving yours when the mail man comes.

There will be a surprise for you next Friday so look out for it.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

THE BED-TIME STORY

"How to Find a Good Fellow."

Here is a little story that comes to us from the Wolf Cubs Handbook.—I am sure you will like it because it is Jungle Wisdom.

Out in the Jungle there lived an old owl with great round yellow eyes and two little tufts on his head like ears. Silly children were afraid of him, because he only came out at night, and gave a weird hooting cry, which they thought sounded ghostly; but every Jungle boy knew that he was a wise old thing and kind to everybody.

In the village there lived a tailor who had two little sons, Tommie and Johnnie. They lived with him and their old Grandmother, their own mother being dead.

Although she loved them both, Grannie was always having to find fault with the boys because of their laziness and forgetfulness and untidiness. They used to tear about the place, yelling and playing their games, upsetting the furniture, breaking the crockery, spoiling their clothes and generally making themselves a nuisance. They never thought what trouble they were giving to other people so long as they had a good time themselves. Then Grannie told them how different it had been in the house in years gone by when the Goodfellow had come there.

"What was a Goodfellow?" they both wanted to know.

"The Goodfellow" said Grandmother, "was a little wee man who came to the house before anyone was up and he swept the hearth and lit the fire, drew the water and got breakfast ready; he tidied up the rooms, he weeded the garden; he did every kind of useful work, but no one ever saw him. He always slipped away before the people of the house got up. But he was the greatest blessing to everyone. All were happy, and home was bright and clean."

So Tommie and Johnnie wanted to know how they could get a Goodfellow to come and help in their house and so save them from having to do the many odd jobs that their Father and Grannie were always asking them to do.

They begged their Grannie to tell them how they could find a Goodfellow, and she told them that the best way to go and find a wise old owl, and ask him, as he probably knew all about the Fairies, and could tell them where to look for a Goodfellow.

So Tommie the older, went out after dark, and when he heard the Old Owl calling he imitated his cry and so got near him and had a talk. Tommie told him his troubles; how he was always being bothered to work when he wanted to play, and if only he could get hold of a Goodfellow to come and live in the house he would not have to do any work himself.

"Ohoo! Hoo-hoo-hoo!" said the old owl "You see that pool over there, go to the north side of it when the moon is bright, then turn round three times and say,—

"Twist me and turn me and show me the Elf—

I looked in the water and saw....

"To get the finishing of the rhyme look down into the water, and there you will see the Goodfellow, and his name will fill the rhyme which you want."

So when the moon was up, Tommie went to the pool and turned himself round three times and cried:

"Twist me and turn me and show me the Elf—

I looked in the water and saw....

But when he looked into the pool, he saw nothing at all except his own reflection.

Well Sleepy-heads that's enough. Yes to-morrow is Saturday, but don't leave those lessons too long unfinished. What is that you say? You've done them already. Good! Good! Good! Now perhaps you will find time to write the Captain a little letter. Good-night.

FROM OUR MAIL BAG

130 Bruce St., London, Ont.

Dear Captain:

It is funny to ask but my mind has gone to the distant North where the deer and moose abound and the song of the reel is music in my ears and where the smell of balsam and spruce is so contenting to the City boy. As I was saying I wondered if you could compose a story where I formed the part of a vagabond who goes into the bush to take up a trapping line. I make good and go and live with the Indians and become Chief. I rule with an iron hand and get from the Government a wonderful hunting ground where I spend the rest of my happy days.

I am, Yours very sincerely,

ORVILLE NEWTON,

(Commonly known as Black Elk.)

"Very glad to have your letter Orville. I don't think however you would find the life of an Indian Chief all you expect. When you write again tell me about your school and home life.

THE CAPTAIN.

The Birthday Club

This is a Club which all of you must join. Who will have the honor of being the first Member?

Here are the rules:—

1. All young readers of the Boys and Girls page between the age of 7 and 15, may become members.

2. Each member must promise that they will try and be—Honourable in all things, Kind to Animals.

Do their very best to help others,

Be very happy every day.

3. Send to the 'Captain' their full name, age next birthday, date of birthday, and their address.

Do you understand and can you remember these three rules?

To be a Member of the Birthday Club Means:—

That you will not be forgotten by the Boys and Girls page of the "Watchman" on the morning of your birthday.

That there are several very pleasant surprises for Members this coming winter.

Every Young Boy and Girl reader of this page should JOIN AT ONCE.

WILLIE WONDERS

Why does a glow-worm glow?

No one knows why a glow-worm glows. The colature is not a worm at all, but a kind of beetle, of which there are 500 varieties gifted by nature with the power of giving off light.

Until quite recently it was supposed that the light was purely phosphorescent, but modern science now believes that the light is in the nature of X-rays, for it will penetrate various substance. The "power" which generates the beetle's light is in some way connected with its breathing, and gives off no heat, a feat which is quite impossible to man.

The object of the light is apparently to show the beetle its path and drive away foes.

Is this Your "Name"?

(Each line contains part of a girl's name)

He violently threw her through

The window—She was black and blue!

Try and find out what name is hidden here,

The answer will be given you next week.

THE JOKE CORNER

"Daddy give me a nickle."

"A big boy like you wants a nickle?"

"Quite-right Dad, Give me a quarter."

Teacher: What happened in 1483?"

Boy (brightly): "Luther was born."

Teacher: Good. Now what happened in 1487?"

Boy (still more brightly): "Luther was four years old."

"Daddy!"

"Yes, Willie?"

"Teacher says that we are here to help others,"

"Of course we are—"

"Well, what are the others here for?"

A small girl was given instructions to write a sentence containing the word "Chicken". Not being quite sure of the way to spell the word, she wrote:

"A Jiken is a small hen (I can spell hen.)"

Do you know any jokes. If you do, send them to the Captain, but don't forget to write your name in full with your address.

MADAME Your Obedient Servant

These things I can do for you:

I can cut your work in two.

I can give you time for the things you want to do.

I can add to your comfort a hundredfold.

This alone I ask:

That you have an adequate number of Convenience Outlets in your home to permit me to do my best work.

I am Electricity

(Let us show you how you can employ electric service to the full for greater home efficiency by installing Convenience Outlets, wiring terminals at convenient points within your home. The cost is small, the benefits great.)

Romantic While It Lasted

By VALENTINE ERSKINE

"THANK ye," said the druggist as he tied up the perfume, "here's yuh change."

Josie took the package, and with a slight nod swept majestically out of the store on the Bowery.

Josie McCarthy was a spinster, fifty-seven years old, and although time had not endowed her with charm, she had generously lavished her with avoirdupois. Josie lived all alone on the top floor of a three-family brownstone house on Oliver street. She had lived there for 29 years. Everybody on the street knew who she was and where she came from. They even knew, to a great extent, how she spent her time. But nobody knew Josie, until one day, the Hochmeyers moved into her house.

One morning Mrs. Hochmeyer's bell rang furiously.

"Who is it?" she shouted good-naturedly at the top of her lungs as she flung a spoonful of salt into the soup. "Candy for Miss McCarthy!" came back from the other side of the door. "Next floor," Mrs. Hochmeyer informed the messenger. "Miss McCarthy lives upstairs."

"Well, land's sakes!" she remarked to herself. "That's a surprise. Who could be sending Josie some candy? It ain't Christmas."

As soon as she heard the messenger's footsteps going past her door on his way down, she put out the fire under the soup and ran upstairs. Not that she expected to be invited in to share the gift, but Mrs. Hochmeyer had an uncanny instinct for news and knew that she would discover nothing about the mysterious box of candy by staying downstairs and peeling onions.

To her surprise Josie's door was slightly ajar, and she could hear her voice issuing forth in dulcet tones. Mrs. Hochmeyer grinned complacently to herself and sat down to listen on the steps.

"Yes, dear," Josie was saying with a giggle. "I just received your lovely box of chocolates. He-he-he! Thank you so much, sweetheart. How did you guess the kind I liked? . . ."

"What's that, Henry? . . ."

"Oh, yes, I'd love to. Please do come over. . . ."

"No, don't bring me any more flowers. . . ."

"All right, sweetheart. . . ."

"Yes, dear, I think of you all the time. . . ."

Mrs. Hochmeyer's jaw dropped in amazement, Josie with a lover? Josie receiving gifts? Why, why, this was indeed a momentous discovery! Josie, whose double chin shook as she walked, and whose neck was coyly encircled in a black velvet ribbon, receiving telephone calls from a man?

Mrs. Hochmeyer's chest expanded with excitement and she took a deep breath. Then she took another. And a third inquisitive sniff.

As days went by, Josie's gifts from her unknown admirer became more and more frequent. Mrs. Hochmeyer usually knew about the candy, because sometimes the messenger rang her bell by mistake, and other times she would poke her head out of the door when she thought she recognized strange footsteps going upstairs. It was always the messenger boy, and to her great regret Mrs. Hochmeyer never once encountered the gentleman who could pass for Josie's swain.

On Monday morning Mrs. Hochmeyer could stand the suspense no longer and decided to march boldly upstairs to Josie's apartment. In answer to her knock, the door was opened by a transformed Josie, clad in a brilliant pink silk negligee and exuding an overwhelming odor of perfume. The apparition transfixed Mrs. Hochmeyer. "Come in," cooed Josie sweetly.

The visitor did not wait to be asked again. She stepped into the parlor and pounced on a chair before Josie could change her mind.

"I'm so tired," yawned Josie as she settled her voluminous self on the sofa, while Mrs. Hochmeyer's searching eyes had already discovered two used wine glasses and a half empty five-pound box of candy on the table. "I'm so tired, we were up so late last night."

"We?" queried her neighbor politely. "Yes, me and my gentleman friend. He's an awful nice man; very refined; but he never lets me have a minute's peace. Always calling me up and coming to see me. But he's very refined. Did we disturb you last night?"

"Oh, no, we didn't hear a sound."

The conversation then turned to a discussion of lingerie.

A few days later Mrs. Hochmeyer went upstairs again; but this time she really had to borrow some matches. She noticed the door once more slightly ajar, and pausing at the top step to regain her breath, she overheard Josie at the telephone.

"No, sweetheart," hissed the amorous one. "I can't go to the opera to-night. My dress won't be ready on time. . . ."

"Yes, perhaps Friday will be all right. . . ."

"Henry, dear, don't forget to . . ."

Just then Josie's telephone rang. And Josie gave a startled sob as she saw her neighbor from the corner of her eye.

Mrs. Hochmeyer decided not to go in.

The next morning Josie suddenly became ill, and since there were no relatives, she was taken to the hospital. She died the following week.

BLIMPS TURN TO LIFE-SAVING

To what new uses blimps and dirigibles can be put in entirely up to the ingenuity of man. A blimp being flown over Long Island recently proved that as an aid to life-saving there wasn't anything much better. To test its value, Byron Hardy, an expert swimmer, swam far out from shore, and at a given signal the blimp flew out to where Hardy was "struggling" for life. Within a few minutes a line was tossed to the swimmer and he was hauled aboard in the manner illustrated.

Scientists Baffled by Malignant Tsetse Fly

Ruling a modern empire is not wholly a matter of troops, treaties and trade agents. Shock battalions of scientists may be required to combat native enemies far more menacing than an uprising of aborigines, according to the National Geographic society. For example, in eastern Africa the British recently captured 1,393 enemies in a day—dread insect enemies, tsetse flies, which were caught in 18 imitation animal traps. The tsetse fly lives in the bush. When an animal wanders into the bush and is infected by the insect the natives flee the region, just as they did before the swarms of the locusts of Bible times and do in present day history. Only the tsetse fly is a much deadlier enemy than the locust. It has effectively wiped out habitations from extensive areas in Tanganyika as large as California and regions as extensive as other of our states in Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Uganda and Zululand. Throughout these units of Britain's political domain cultivated patches of land have been abandoned, farms and pastures have gone back to the bush, and the tsetse fly resumes its jealous reign.

Hungry London Consumes Foodstuffs by the Ton

Nearly 450 miles of bread are eaten by Londoners every day. The weekly ration is 25,000,000 half-quarter loaves, and, although they vary in size and shape, if they were all of the "sandwich" type, about seven to eight inches long, they would extend, if placed in a straight line, for 3,100 miles. Very large quantities of foodstuffs are unloaded at the London docks every year. The figures for last year, according to a statement made by the port of London authority recently, included 1,400,326 tons of wheat, 218,000 tons of flour, 690,000 tons of chilled and frozen meat, and 160,000 tons of butter.

One astonishing figure was 621,000 tons of green fruit and vegetables. And London also imported 491,000 pounds of tea, enough to make 94,320,000 cups—between six and seven every day of the 365 for every man, woman and child in England and Wales.

Quinine Tercentenary

The tercentenary of the first use of quinine was held in St. Louis at Shaw's garden, October 31 and November 1, 1930. The earliest well-authenticated instance of the medicinal use of cinchona bark is found in 1638, when the countess of Chinchon (hence the name), the wife of the governor of Peru, was cured of an attack of fever by its administration. The medicine was recommended in her case by the corregidor of Loxa, who was said to have practically experienced its supreme virtues eight years earlier. A knowledge of the bark was disseminated throughout Europe by members of the Jesuit brotherhood, whence it also became generally known as Jesuits' bark. According to another account, this name arose from its value having been first discovered by a Jesuit missionary, who, when prostrated with fever, was cured by the administration of the bark by a South American Indian.

Noted Scholarship Fund

The Harriet Hurd Schelde scholarship was founded in 1923 at Princeton university by an anonymous donor with a gift to amount to $50,000 to establish scholarships of the value of the annual undergraduate fee, plus $100, to be known as the Harriet Hurd Schelde scholarships. In the award of these scholarships, preference is given to candidates who are sons of Presbyterian missionaries, or Presbyterian educators, or, failing such candidates, to those who are sons of ministers, missionaries or educators of a church holding the Presbyterian system, who without the assistance thus provided would, in the opinion of the university authorities, be unable to obtain an education at Princeton university. Award is made in accordance with the general principles of the Rhodes scholarship plan.

Wassailing Apple Trees

The ancient custom of "wassailing the apple trees," which dates back 300 years, was recently observed at Carhampton, near Minehead, Somerset, England. Two men carried a bucket of cider into the orchard, set it down under the largest tree and hung pieces of toast soaked in cider to the branches for the robins and good spirits. The wassail incantation was then chanted, and when it ended the villagers began to shout and cheer, while guns were fired through the branches of the tree. This custom is supposed to preserve the apple crop by driving off tree "hoggards" and other bad spirits.

"Railroad" and "Railway"

The reason that one transportation company is called a railroad and another a railway is simply that railroad and railway are corporate names. Often when a railroad goes bankrupt it must reorganize under a different name. For example, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad went into the hands of receivers and when it emerged it was the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific railway, the adding of the words "Pacific railway" making a new corporate name. Likewise the changing from railroad to railway changes the name of the corporation.

LAKEFIELD

The recent showers have brought much needed refreshment to our pastures and gardens. In spite of the long continued drought, gardens are looking fairly well.

At an informal meeting lately, it was decided to hold the Annual Harvest Festival on Thursday, Sept. 17th., at 10.30 a.m. (Standard Time). There will D.V. be a service of Thanksgiving in Holy Trinity Church, followed by luncheon in the Gibb Parish Hall. The Rev. W. Cecil Eccleston will be the special preacher.

The Labor Day week-end witnessed a goodly number of guests at the various houses in our beautiful countryside, the weather was fine and added to the pleasure of all.

Bishop Farthing has appointed the Rev. Allan E. Mount as Minister-in-charge of this parish.

By the time this reaches the press, most of the summer cottages and bungalows will be emptied of all the happy vacationists who had been their tenants for the summer.

Mr. F. C. Stoll's attractive bungalow is now nearly finished and amid its beautiful setting of trees, overlooking Lake Dawson makes a charming picture. Mr. H. McDonald has had charge of the work of building it.

Services in the Parish of Lakefield on Sunday Sept. 13th. All welcome.

Flaky Pie Crust

The secret of making good pie crust is: "Use Purity Flour—and keep the dough dry!" Try this recipe—for 2 shells:

3 cups Purity Flour 1 cup lard
3/4 teaspoon salt 1 cup cold water.
METHOD: Mix the flour and salt, cutting in half the shortening until the mixture is like fine meal, gradually adding exact quantity of water but not a drop more. Use less water, if you can, and the pie crust will be even flakier.
Turn out on board very lightly sprinkled with Purity Flour, roll about 1/4-inch thick. Spread balance of shortening over dough, fold over three times and roll again to required thickness. Bake in hot oven (450°).

Here and There

One thousand men will be employed and over $500,000 expended on highway repairs in Cape Breton and Richmond counties, Nova Scotia, during the coming autumn.

Miss Pauline Garon, Montreal motion-picture queen, formerly of Hollywood, sailed on the Canadian Pacific liner "Montcalm" recently, to make pictures in England and France.

Salmon taken in 1930 from British Columbia waters totalled close on 37,000,000 weighing more than 216,000,000 pounds. Number of fish was 9,500,000 more than in the biggest previous salmon catch year of 1920.

The New Brunswick Government is preparing to face the problem of unemployment on a practical basis this winter and has instituted a registration system through city and town clerks, who will gather full data as to out-of-works and their families.

Sir Lionel Fletcher, captain of the British rifle team, which competed against Canadian shots at Toronto and Ottawa, following the historic Bisley meeting, was warm in praise of Connaught Ranges, on his return to England. It is hoped that another Old Country team will compete in Canada next year.

Queen Helene of Roumania and her sister, Princess Irene of Greece, gave British railroad officials a shock recently, by travelling from London to Scotland, third class. The Queen smilingly declared that she was very comfortable and did not want people to know she was travelling.

The name of Admiral of the Fleet Earl Jellicoe has been added to the long list of distinguished travellers over Canadian Pacific steamship and rail lines. "Hell-fire Jack," as he is affectionately called, arrived in Montreal on August 22, on the liner "Duchess of York," to open the Canadian National Exhibition, at Toronto.

Hector Macdonald, of Montreal, was winner of the prize offered by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, for the competition between pipers representing the 17 Scottish militia units of Canada, at the Highland Gathering recently held in the grounds of the Banff Springs Hotel, Banff, Alta.

Among recent guests at Banff were Congressman and Mrs. Frederick R. Laiback, of Washington, D.C., and Newark, N.J., on their way to the convention of the National Federation of Federal Employees at Seattle. They expressed themselves delighted with their stay at the Banff Springs Hotel, punctuating a journey from Montreal to the Pacific Coast over Canadian Pacific lines.

H. M. King Prajadhipok of Siam, accompanied by Queen Rambai Barni and a numerous suite, has been seeing real western life, with the Banff Spring Hotel as headquarters. He was recently made a member of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, following a pack-train expedition, and also attended a rodeo staged for him at Mrs. "Bill" Brewster's dude-ranch, at Kananaskis, Alta. His Majesty has also devoted considerable time to photography, golf and fishing. (7:3)

GRENVILLE

The Late Mrs. W. Murray

The death of Dellema Ranger widow of the late Washington Murray, occurred at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Welden on Saturday night, Sept. 5th., after an illness of over a year, through which she was tenderly cared for by her daughter, Mrs. Welden.

Deceased was eighty two years old and leaves a family of eleven children, three daughters and eight sons to mourn her loss.

Members of the family present at the funeral were Mrs. J. Russell, of Troy, N. Y.; Mrs. P. Stone, Rawcliffe; Mrs. Reuben Welden of Grenville; Mr. Eddie Murray, of Montreal; Mr. Herbert Murray, of Montreal; Mr. W. Murray, of Grenville; also Mrs. H. Murray and children, of Montreal. Several grandchildren and other near relatives.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. Irving in St. Matthew's Church, on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The hymns sung were "Nearer My God to Thee"; Jesus keep me near the Cross" and "Rock of Ages."

The pall-bearers were three sons Walter, Eddie and Herbie; son-in-law R. Welden; grandson, Earl Stone, and N. Golden. Interment in Grenville cemetery.

The Late Mr. McMichel.

The funeral of the late Mr. McMichel was held in St. Matthew's Church, Grenville, on Monday afternoon, Sept. 7th., at 3.30 o'clock.

Rev. J. Irving officiated and gave a most helpful and encouraging sermon. He used the text, "I know that my Redeemer Liveth."

The hymns sung were "Nearer My God to Thee"; "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Jesus Lover of my Soul."

He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Hugh Cameron and one son, also two grandchildren and many relatives and friends by whom he will be greatly missed.

The large attendance of old neighbors and friends from Avoca and surrounding places, testified to his esteem. He was laid to rest in Calumet cemetery beside his wife who predeceased him several years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Matthew visited friends in Ottawa, on Sunday and Monday.

Miss Vera Gauley left for Montreal on Monday, to resume her duties as teacher at the new Rosemount School.

Mr. Keith Pitcairn who went to Edinburgh in October last to take a course of studies, in the University (as provided by a Scholarship which had been awarded to him) returned on the Letitia from Belfast, arriving in Montreal Sunday morning.

He completed his studies and passed his exams successfully. After that he and a friend made a motor cycle tour of France, Germany, Italy, Austria, Holland, Belgium and the British Isles.

He reports having a splendid time from first to last. The students from Canada were treated with the utmost kindness and many gracious attentions were shown them.

He came back in fine fettle, but so far as disclosed brought back no Kilties or bagpipes, and no Hielan' brogue or Scotch of any kind.

Miss A. Funcheon has returned from a three week's visit to Peterboro, Ont.

The river section of St. Andrews over the holiday presented much the appearance of a charming little sea-port, with more than twenty yachts at anchor, or moving lazily about. Many of these boats belonged to members of the St. Lawrence Yacht Club.

CUSHING WEST

Lachute Academy Opening

The Auditorium was well filled with an appreciative audience on Tuesday evening, when the pupils of the Academy received their prizes and Scholarships. The proceedings were opened by Dr. J. Mason, Chairman of the Board. Rev. J. Lackey led in prayer.

Letters of regret for absence were read from Mrs. C. McBurney, Sir Geo. H. Perley and Mr. Archibald McArthur. Dr. Mason then spoke of the activities of the school and of the Annual published in 1931, which was the first in the past thirty years, complimenting the school on the large number of outside pupils and asking the citizens of Lachute to make them feel at home. He also gave an interesting account of the first school Board in the town of Lachute and how our Academy came into existence, also some of the plans and hopes which the present School Board have for the coming year. Three hundred pupils have been enrolled this year which is the largest on record.

Principal Hall in a few brief remarks congratulated the graduation class for their work and the way in which they had stood by the Principal saying, "he had never found a class more satisfactory to work with; all did their best." He asked the parents for their co-operation during the coming year.

Short speeches were given by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, Inspector J. W. McQuat, Mr. Barron, Mr. Jas. W. Gall, Dr. J. M. Drew, Dr. Geo. Clunie. Greetings from Brownsburg Consolidated School were brought by Mr. Wyman McGibbon and Mr. Wales from St. Andrews Consolidated School.

Thanks were also given to Messrs. C. Walker, H. Stansfield and Mr. Miles for their help in making a cinder track for the boys.

The distribution of prizes took place as follows, after which the gathering was brought to a close by the singing of God Save the King.

Nita was worried... she could not imagine where she had lost her bracelet—in the hotel or on the journey home.

"I can't think what I could have done with it," she kept telling her mother.

"Why not telephone to the hotel," mother suggested. "It's after eight-thirty now and a call will only cost a few cents."

Imagine Nita's joy when the hotel clerk told her that the bracelet had been found in her room and would be mailed to her right away.

Thanks to her mother's suggestion, Nita's anxiety was relieved at once... and the cost of the call was considerably less than her taxi fare from the station.

Rowena Rides the Rumble

ELEVENTH INSTALMENT

They find Bobbie awaiting them in the hotel at Seattle and she travels with them to Los Angeles where they are met by an unfriendly hotel clerk, who summons the police who thereupon place all three under arrest for kidnapping Bobby.

Now go on with the Story

"See here, said Peter angrily, 'what sort of tommyrot is this anyhow? This lady is too old for the Juvenile Court. Why, she is her own mistress. She's twenty-three years old.'

"Well, according to the complaint from New York there is nothing we can do about it. Our orders are to put you under arrest. You'll have to talk to the judge."

"But, Peter," cried Rowena, "are you going to let them arrest us for not being married, when we are married! Look at all the trouble we've had. That's proof enough."

"But why should they say you are only pretending to be married if you really are married?"

"Well, who says so? That's the first question. Where did the complaint come from anyhow?"

"From a gentleman in New York by the name of Carter Wellman—"

"You can fix this up," said the officer. "You got influential friends, ain't you? They'll fix you up all right. All they got to do is swear they know all about you and everything's jake and there you are. You just hop down private in your own car with Bill here to show you the way—this is Bill Harmon—fine chap, too—he'll go down with you and introduce you to the judge. He's a swell gent, the judge is. He'll see how things are in a jiffy."

It was the simplest way out, and the officers made it as easy for them as possible, allowed them to walk unescorted through the lobby of the hotel and waited at a respectful distance when Peter stopped to send a telegram, which he wrote with a very firm hand and signed for Rowena to come and read. It was addressed to Carter Wellman.

"Are you going to marry Roberta Lowell immediately on her return to New York, or are you not? If your engagement is canceled, as she believes, I shall marry her myself immediately. A rolling brown dumpling gathers nothing but trouble for all concerned. Please state your exact intentions."

"But you can't marry her," protested Rowena. "You're married now."

"Well, he doesn't believe it—And Rackruff Inc., will pay for that wire if I have to steal a spare tire to get it."

The judge proved extremely sympathetic and agreed with Peter that it was an outrage, no less, the way people in love embroiled innocent bystanders in the tangled web of their affairs. He had his secretary send off a wire to Denver to verify the marriage, and to Rackruff Motors, Inc., in New York, for details of the trip and complete information regarding Rowena and Peter. He even sent for the local Rackruff dealer, who fortunately turned out to be both a native son and a brother Elk. He was willing to stand entirely responsible for their appearance if required.

Besides seeing to their freedom he made Rowena a present of a friendly little dog which he had found in his showrooms that morning and which Rowena promptly proceeded to call Constantine. Peter grumbled at the addition to their party but was overruled.

And so Rowena had a companion on the rumble seat from then on.

By the salesman's good offices they were enabled to return to the hotel without police escort or surveillance of any kind.

In the early morning Peter read to the girls the answer to his personal telegram.

"Such has been and is my intention," read the telegram. "I am probably the last man living entirely honorable in my dealings with women. Our engagement most certainly is not ended and if you interfere I shall sue."

Plan to marry her instant of her arrival. In fact expect to meet her with license, ring and minister. Wire what train."

So at ten-ten Peter and Rowena stood side by side under the quaint tiled portico of the Santa Fe station and waved a fond—and not ungratified-farewell to little brown Bobby.

The misadventures of Bobby's return and their legal entanglements in Los Angeles had keyed them to a high nervous tension, but when they had left the limits of the city a sudden quiet restfulness descended upon them. Rowena drooped drowsily against his shoulder.

"Shall I put up the umbrella in the rumble seat?" Peter asked facetiously.

But Rowena pretended she was asleep.

By the time they reached the outskirts of San Diego, Peter as well as Rowena confessed to a complete exhaustion, mental as well as physical.

They pulled up at the U. S. Grant Hotel. There was no boy in sight and Peter, unwilling to waste a moment, himself carried their bags into the lobby and hurried over to the desk. He was surprised at being immediately accommodated with two single rooms.

Their good fortune followed them and they both had a real good night's rest.

Peter had all the bags stowed neatly away in the car the next morning, ready for their start for the East, when Rowena tripped out of the hotel leading the freshly washed Constantine on a brand-new leash attached to a brand-new collar.

"Gosh, Rowena," ejaculated Peter, "what'll we do with the mutt? I forgot about him?"

"Do with Constantine!" she echoed. "Why, to ride on, and get him a fresh bone every day. And charge it all to Rackruff."

Peter did his best picture at Grand Canyon, one which brought him no small amount of praise and profit. It was the Rackruff and Rowena riding through the rainbow fringe, with Constantine's queer, quaint black and white head nodding approbation beside her.

Rowena was not having the best of luck with her work in those declining weeks of their tour. She kept a pencil and note-book constantly at hand, even teaching Constantine to carry them for her on command but ideas were not coming to her with much frequency. For the first time in her life, Rowena did not feel like writing, did not want to be bothered, and it may as well be added, her writing was far below its usual standard.

They lapsed into comfortable silence. They did not quarrel so much when they were alone—there seemed less point to it. To be sure, when occasion required, they would wither each other with a scathing word, but they never went to the old lengths.

In Albuquerque, when Peter had registered and called for their mail he was handed half a dozen telegrams and two or three letters.

"Nothing for Miss Rostand," said the clerk.

"What!" ejaculated Rowena. "Nothing for me? Not anything? Why, Buddy always—he surely must have written. Oh, please look again! There must be at least one!"

The clerk obligingly ran through the mail again.

"Sorry—not a thing," he said again.

"Dear me," said Rowena thoughtfully. "How—extremely—odd!"

Alone in his own room, Peter took off his coat and settled down to his mail. A quick glance at the letters told him they were of no special importance and he turned to the telegrams. The two that he opened first were from the Company but the third started off on an old note.

"Darling, I hate to ask you again," Peter read his eyes starting with surprise. "Devil's own luck. Lost fifty bucks at craps. Got to have it this week or they will chuck me out. Rush it by wire. Wish I hadn't played." It was signed, "Buddy."

To Peter it made no sense at all. He turned it over and scrutinized the address again. Ah! That explained it. It was addressed not to "Mr." but to "Mrs. Peter Blande."

His mind traveled back over the trip. Buddy—that was her brother—Ronald Rostand. Ready for his third year in college and taking summer courses to cut down the time and expense. Rowena had received a letter or telegram from him at every stop en route. He remembered her subsequent counting of bills and rush for a telegram office—her complete financial stringency—the way she starved herself, eschewing all desserts—her thousand painful small economies.

Now Peter realized fully what it meant—this thing that he was going to do. Knew quite well that when Buddy wrote back in complaint of this unwarranted outside interference Rowena's rage would be beyond bounds.

They had talked sometimes of the future when their motor tour was over, thought they would probably be good friends in later years when their business vicissitudes were separate and distinct, & no longer bound up by compulsion in each other's work and wish. But if Peter flung open insult at Buddy—"The sacred cow!" he sneered—all such hopes for the future were null and void. Well, Peter told himself, he didn't know that he cared. After all, he didn't get on so very well with Rowena. But she was a good sport—the best sport he had ever seen—and deserved a better break than Buddy was giving her.

Peter's grip on the pen made it a sword as he gave form to his scathing thoughts.

"Granting to begin with that it is none of my business," he wrote heavily, "it nevertheless affords me great pleasure to tell you that in my opinion you are an unspeakable cad. You may not know—of course you do not know, for Rowena is one Rostand and who is a rousing good sport and would not throw up her privations to you—that in order to meet your insatiable demands for money, your sister, tired and exhausted as she is by hard work and long driving, has saved money by doing her own laundry in the bathtub at nights has starved herself on soup and coffee and gone without a proper meal for days at a time."

"Better men than you have worked their way through college. For Rowena's sake, I myself am sending you the fifty bucks."

"It is of course quite unnecessary for me to explain that Rowena does not know that you wired for this money nor that I am sending it. Your telegram was handed me by mistake and I opened it under the impression it was for me."

And without an instant's hesitation he endorsed his sentiments with the signature that would one day be worth thousands—"Peter Blande."

Peter was pretty uncomfortable about the whole business. He was not used to any sort of double dealing and was not at all sure but at any moment officers of the law—or perhaps the telegraph company—would hale him away to jail to expiate

WHEN ENGLAND MET A CRISIS—AND WON

Here is a general view of the large crowd of Britishers which gathered in Downing St., London, in which the Prime Minister has his official residence, to see what would develop following the downfall of the British Labor Government. When Ramsay Macdonald (right) left No. 10 Downing Street for Buckingham Palace, to confer with King George about the formation of the National Emergency Government, he was enthusiastically cheered by the great throng.

his unwarranted manipulation of other people's affairs by telegraph.

At El Paso Rowena had two letters. She sat right down in the nearest chair to read them and Peter stalked moodily from cigar stand to desk and back again, and watched her furtively.

Peter could stand it no longer.

"Buddy O.K.?" he inquired anxiously.

"He's entirely too O. K. I'm worried."

"You can't be too O. K.," protested Peter. "Nobody can. What do you mean?"

Have you enough Life Insurance?

No matter how large or how small your estate, it will suffer heavy deductions before it reaches your wife or family. Doctors, nurses, hospitals, undertakers, lawyers, etc., not to mention succession duties, if the estate be considerable, will reduce the net amount payable to your heirs by anything from 10% to 25%. Take your pencil and try a simple sum in arithmetic, using an actual case as an example:

	Typical Case	My Case
Total face value of all my life insurance policies	$5,000	$
Estimated value of my real estate, securities and other assets	$2,000	$
Total	$7,000	$
Less 15% as indicated above	$1,050	$
Total estate (net)	$5,950	$
Invested in good securities at 5% this should yield my family an annual income of	$297.50	$

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for September 13

SOME MISSIONARY EXPERIENCES.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 14:1-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Some Missionary Adventures
JUNIOR TOPIC—Some Missionary Adventures
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Hardships of Missionaries.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christianity Facing Other Religions.

I. Paul and Barnabas Preaching at Iconium (vv. 1-7).

Their experience here was much the same as at Antioch. They entered the Jewish synagogue and preached, causing a multitude of Jews and Gentiles to believe. The unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles to the most bitter opposition. Concerning their work in Iconium observe.

1. Their manner of preaching (v. 1). They "spoke" that a great multitude believed. They were true preachers. Only that which brings conviction of sin and induces decisions for Christ can be truly said to be preaching in the biblical sense. It is not enough merely to bring the truth to the people. It must be brought in such a way that men and women will be induced to decide for Christ.

2. Their attitude toward opposition (v. 3). This is suggested by the word "therefore." "Long time therefore they tarried." The opposition did not prevent their preaching but incited them to continue preaching. Christian workers should not give up work because of opposition.

3. Their preaching accompanied with miracles (v. 3). Since the opposition was so fierce, the Lord granted special help in his vindication of their testimony.

4. The effect of their preaching (v. 4). The multitude of the city was divided. Where men faithfully preach the gospel there will be division.

5. Paul and Barnabas assaulted (vv. 5-7). The Jews and the Gentiles united in this assault. Being apprised of this effort, Paul and Barnabas fled to Lystra and Derby, where they preached the gospel.

II. An Attempt to Worship Paul and Barnabas as Gods (vv. 8-13).

1. The occasion (vv. 8-10). It was the healing of a lame man. God's gracious power shown in healing this lame man occasioned new difficulty. That which ought to have been a help was turned into a hindrance. This was a notable miracle. The man had never walked. On hearing Paul preach, faith was born in his heart (Rom. 10:17). When Paul perceived that he trusted Christ, he called with a loud voice that all could hear for the man to stand upright. The cure was instantaneous, for he leaped up and walked (v. 10).

2. The method (vv. 11-13). They called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul Mercurius because he was the chief speaker. The priest of Jupiter brought oxen and garlands ready to offer sacrifices unto these men (v. 13). In the person of Jesus Christ God has actually appeared to man (John 1:14; Phil. 2:7, 8).

3. Their efforts frustrated (vv. 14-18). This foolish act was happily averted by the tact of the apostles as exhibited in the address of the occasion:

a. They denied that they were divine beings.
b. They directed them to turn away from these vain things unto the living God who made heaven and earth.

III. The Stoning of Paul (vv. 19-22).

Wicked Jews from Antioch and Iconium pursued Paul with relentless hate to this place where they stirred up the very people who had been willing to worship them a short time before. This shows that satanic worship can soon be turned into satanic hate. This hatred took form in the stoning of Paul and the dragging of him out of the city for dead. Having been raised up by God, he with undaunted courage pressed on with his duties as a missionary bearing the good tidings to the lost. Soon after this, Paul turned back and revisited the places where he had preached, telling them that through great tribulation they must enter into the Kingdom of God.

IV. The Organization of Churches in the Field (vv. 23-28).

Evangelization with Paul did not mean a hasty and superficial preaching of the gospel, but the establishment of a permanent work. Elders were appointed in every church. The work of the missionary is not done until there is established on the field self-governing and self-propagating churches.

Christ's Coming

My friends, all the singing about it in the world will not bring the coming of Christ a day nearer—and there are no songs of the Christian church which so fill my heart with gladness and my eyes with tears as the songs of Christ's coming. But service will.—J. Stuart Holden.

washes better

YOU can see for yourself why the NORTHERN ELECTRIC ABC Washer does your washing with greater speed and thoroughness than other machines of equal capacity.

The agitator, which churns the washing, has six large fins... more than any other washer. Each one gives a strong impulse... a total of six hundred impulses per minute... which drives the soapy water through the fabrics with tremendous force.

The fins are so perfectly rounded and polished that they cannot exert any wear on the garments. Even the agitator edge... sunk below the tub level and held rigid by two anti-tilt bearings... cannot catch or damage the fabrics.

There are other reasons, too, for the efficiency of the A B C. Northern Electric has thoroughly tested all the parts and qualities of this made-in-Canada washer before awarding it the Northern Electric "SEAL OF APPROVAL" which assures you of its great merit.

This Beautiful Electric Washer for Only $5.00 Down

Balance spread over 18 months, without interest, if payments are made when due.

This is your opportunity to allow your electric washer to pay for itself as you put it to use, banishing washday drudgery. Free home demonstrations of this beautiful Northern Electric ABC porcelain washer, are now offered during this special sale.

This machine is made in Quebec, and is of the highest quality in every respect. Take advantage of this special opportunity which we extend to you, to place one of these labor savers in your home.

This offer is open from September 14th. to October 17th. only.

LACHUTE TOWN COUNCIL

A special meeting of Lachute Town Council called by order of the Mayor was held in the Council Rooms, in Victoria Hall, on Monday, Sept. 14th., 1931, for the following purposes:

(1) Questions relating to By-Law 123; Waterworks Intake Chlorination.

(2) Questions relating to Finance:

There were present Mayor Dobbie, Aldermen J. A. Rice, H. M. Lavigne, C. R. Miller, W. A. Morrison, J. Speight, J. B. Raymond and O. Laurin.

Moved by Alderman MacKimmie, seconded by Ald. Miller that the contractor engaged to build the dam at Pollock's and install the 12" main be instructed to install the chlorination plant complete and ready for operation if required.

Moved in amendment by Ald. Lavigne, seconded by Ald. Rodrigue that the plan presented to this council not being complete, it should not be accepted today.

Voted in favour of the amendment, Ald. Lavigne, Rodrigue, Raymond and Laurin.

Voted against the amendment, Ald. Rice, McKimmie, Miller and Speight.

There being four votes in favour of the amendment and four votes against, Mayor Dobbie voted against the amendment which was therefore defeated.

The vote was then taken on the main motion as follows:

Voted in favor of the main motion, Ald. Rice, MacKimmie, Miller and Speight.

Voted against the main motion Ald. Lavigne, Rodrigue, Raymond and Laurin.

There being four votes in favor of the Main Motion and four against it, Mayor Dobbie voted in favor of the Main Motion, which was therefore adopted.

Moved by Ald. Raymond, seconded by Ald. Laurin, that the Water Committee be authorized to have the actual dam repaired immediately. Carried.

RESTRICTED AREA

..... FINISHED

Our readers will be interested to learn that the Federal officers under the direction of Dr. J. F. Campeau, of Lachute, finished testing all the cattle in Argenteuil for tuberculosis under the restricted Area plan, on September 4th. We understand that the number of reactors was very small, in fact less than one percent. Where reactors were found a sixty day retest is being conducted after the premises have been thoroughly disinfected and the reactors shipped to Montreal and slaughtered under Federal supervision. Our residents as well as our visitors need have no fear of contracting tuberculosis by consuming milk and other dairy products produced in our County.

In addition to the regular compensation allowed by the Federal Department of Agriculture, the Quebec Department is allowing 25% of the valuation placed on reactors by the Federal officers, for cattle tested since July 1, 1931, provided the owner replaces his reactors with healthy cattle purchased in the Province of Quebec and approved by the County Agronomist.

MILK SHIPPERS ATTENTION

A meeting of the Milk Shipper's Association will be held in the Town Hall, on Saturday, Sept. 19th. at 8 p.m. S. T. to discuss the prices of milk for the winter months.

Mr. G. A. Hammond left on Friday last for a visit to friends in New York. He was accompanied by Miss Ethel Bruce who has been spending the summer here.

Our local member Mr. George Dansereau, M.P.P., received a pleasing call from Premier Taschereau, the Hon. Mr. Mercier and Dr. Plante during a visit to Ottawa this week.

Canada Must Win World Championships

World Championships in 1925 will be won by farmers who recognize that the cleanest and best quality seed with the most careful cultivation are essential to the production of exhibition grain. While it is recognized that these things should apply to the whole crop area, concentration upon a small plot is the best plan for securing an exhibit sample. If such a plot is subjected to extra preparation—with more care probably than it is possible to devote to the whole crop area—and sown to the very choicest seed it will not only provide good quality foundation stock for next spring's seeding, but a winning sample for exhibition as well.

The World's Grain Exhibition and Conference

REGINA, JULY 25 & AUG. 5, 1925

This great World Exhibition and Conference is organized for the benefit of Canadian farmers, for the advancement of Canadian agriculture, to demonstrate the superiority of Canadian field crops, to further stimulate a world-wide demand for Canadian crop production, to emphasize the superior quality of Canadian crops, and win the major awards, estimate all competitors . . . and win the major awards.

A GREAT VISION

Nothing that can be proposed will do so much to strengthen and consolidate the British Empire as trade preferences between the Dominions and the Mother Country.

The bond of blood has held the Empire together in the past, and it will be a powerful force in the future. But the close contacts that come from trade must not be overlooked as an agency for developing friendly relations between nations and peoples. That is seen in the case of Canada and the United States. The trade relations of the two countries during the past decade have become more intimate than ever, and it has led many serious men to look into the future with misgivings regarding our ultimate political development. British sentiment in Canada has been strong enough to resist the drawing power of the United States, and we hope it always will be. But Empire trade would immensely strengthen the loyal sentiment that is so strong a feature of our Canadian life.

It must be encouraging, therefore, to loyalist Canadians to witness the efforts now being made to add the bonds of trade to the ties of sentiment that bind the different parts of the Empire together. A substantial beginning has been made between Canada, New Zealand, Australia South Africa and the British West Indies to find a mutually advantageous basis for Inter-Dominion Commerce. As the mother country adopts the same principle—of which there are bright prospects—the movement will be greatly accelerated. Adjustments must be made that will take time and patience to consummate. We believe, however, that British genius is equal to the task. The result aimed at—the consolidation of the Empire—is of such high importance that it may be expected to enlist the best brains of statesmen and industrialists and finally work out a system that will make each part of the Empire more prosperous and the Imperial fabric more and more enduring.

Some go there, their time to spend
Some go there to greet a lover,
Some go there, their time to cover
Some go there to bow and nod
But few go there to worship God

Grant us, O Lord, the grace to bear
The little pricking thorn;
The hasty word that seems unfair;
The twang of truths well worn
The jest that makes our weakness plain;
The darling plan o' returned;
The careless touch upon our pain;
The slight we have not earned;
The rasp of care, dear Lord, to-day,
Lest all these fretting things
Make needless grief. Oh give, we pray,

Why Sylvia Tried to Please

By HELEN R. BARTON

SYLVIA gazed with stormy eyes at the tiny slip of paper that she had taken from the envelope. For such a small slip of paper, it contained enough to merit the stormy expression, and also the furious rebellion in Sylvia's heart. For with the brutal ability of most printed slips, this particular one informed the teacher of No. 4 district school that school must be kept with full attendance all day on May 7. And May 7 was the day the greatest of all aviators was to speak at a banquet and open air celebration at Wilson recreation grounds; free tickets had been issued all the schools, but, due to prolonged loss of time owing to a stubborn epidemic of measles, the principal felt it wise for all the members of No. 4 to keep full attendance and grind away at make-up!

"If that's education," muttered the lovely Miss Randall, "then I'm going to grow me a pig-tail and learn to write laundry in Chinese! As if any more book learning could make up for the few pearly words of wisdom Colonel Strombergh will speak!"

And as the children were enjoying their mid-morning recess out of door, Sylvia bowed her lovely head on her folded arms and frankly wept. Teaching was such a thankless job at best, all kicks and few kisses. But to have to sacrifice this opportunity of a lifetime to see and hear the greatest historical character of our era was asking a good deal too much of the teaching profession!

"I beg your pardon," interrupted a fine masculine baritone, "but is this No. 4 district school?"

Sylvia lifted tear-drenched eyes to the concerned, worried gaze of a too thin, too tall young man of serious expression, and the reddish hair, bar none, that she had ever seen.

"Yes, this is No. 4. Why?" stammered Sylvia, acutely conscious of her shiny nose, red eyes and tear streaked face.

"Why—ah—er, you see, I'm the new principal of this district. I was summoned hastily this morning, due to the illness of Mr. Farrel—"

"We're so far behind in our schedule that we may have to keep a few weeks longer at the end of the year," began Sylvia flushing slightly under the tall young man's earnest scrutiny.

"Why, I think you've done wonders. You've had no end of hard luck according to these reports. Do you mind if I stay and see how the kids get along? I won't disturb you."

"I am delighted to have anyone so interested in the school. Do please stay and make yourself comfortable," urged Sylvia, and as the afternoon progressed she forgot, quite, the unhappy cause of her woe earlier in the day. In fact, she was so interested in the business of having No. 4 school shine in the eyes of the new principal that it is doubtful if she would have even understood the name Strombergh had it been spoken to her.

From time to time Gene Henderson, the new principal, would make a low voiced remark or comment, and it amazed Sylvia that a mere man should have such a clear knowledge of school teaching and child psychology, as this strange, quiet man had.

"It's easy to see," smiled the tall young man after school had been dismissed, "that the children love you, Miss Randall. One simply could not achieve such wonders unless the children were enthusiastic and made every effort to please!"

"Do you think that is a sign of affection—a desire to please?" asked Sylvia in a muffled voice.

"But certainly! That's an elemental step in psychology. We always try to please those whom we love!" quickly answered Gene, eying with approval the creamy line of Sylvia's neck, where it merged with the dark fluff of her blue-black hair.

And Sylvia was strangely silent as she walked slowly along beside the new principal, as they made their thoughtful way to her boarding house after school closed. She was thinking with a shy sort of panic that her first instinct had been to please this tall, serious new principal and certainly she had outdone herself all day trying to make her school seem its best!

"Are we going to go to the picnic for Colonel Strombergh, Miss Randall?" was the question asked her 25 times the following day, and each time Sylvia's heart went a bit lower as she explained the reason why they must stay and work.

Her lunch of egg salad sandwiches, cookies and milk went down slowly as she thought about all the various angles of teaching... especially the business of enforcing commands issued by others. And she was again rebellious as the drone of a big motor came waiting over the still air. It was, she decided, the squad of airplanes that were to be the feature of the day. Sylvia looked out and saw, not an airplane, but a huge vanlike truck bearing down upon the No. 4 school.

Sylvia caught her breath as she noted the flaming thatch of hair of the grinning driver. It was Gene!

"Hop in, kids; we're going to the picnic before that ice cream gets eaten!" and Sylvia knew at last why she had tried to please him—no doubt of it!

CIVIL SERVICE SALARIES

Following cuts in the salaries of western provincial civil servants, together with a facetious article in a recent issue of a Montreal weekly, there have been apprehensions in Ottawa lest Premier Bennett and his cabinet should follow the example of some of the provinces and try to reduce expenses by a slash in the pay of government workers.

The Citizen went to his authority on the matter, in fact inquiry was made of most of the sources from whence reliable information can be secured. Briefly, the situation is that at the moment the matter has not (as indicated in the aforementioned facetious article) been discussed by the cabinet. Nor will such a subject be taken up seriously by Mr. Bennett and his colleagues unless outside forces compete it.

Dominion authorities were agreed, in any case, that should the very worst come, the salaries of any person under $100 monthly would be left untouched. Moreover it is strongly hinted that any reductions would apply to the highest, not excluding members of Parliament and the Senate.

But there are many hopeful signs just now that the bottom of the depression has been passed. Car loadings this last week were higher, and in some of the most stable industries a very gradual improvement has been noted. And after all, the future isn't so black. It was Owen D. Young, international banking authority, who recently remarked that "the time is not far off when buying will have to be resumed; then the surpluses will disappear, bringing a new upswing of production." And though that is obvious, some panicky prophets overlook it entirely. As one writer puts it, mere Pollyanna optimism is to be avoided, for it is absurd and harmful. But surely a more general understanding of the essential soundness of the nation's real credit and a courageous readiness to break new ground would be conducive to better business conditions.

So that, taking as much of the horizon into view as possible, there is little to fear at the moment that panic will become so bad that Premier Bennett will have even to consider cutting civil service salaries.

How About Your Corner?

Are you anxious to get back to Japan? asked a sister somewhere on the Pacific Coast.

No, I am not anxious to get back, I replied, I am glad to be where I am. When I get back to Japan then I shall be glad that I am there. We should be contented where we are and make the best of the opportunities immediately at hand. There is a danger of getting the wanderlust and not being contented any where. When here we want to be there and somewhere else and so are not contented anywhere. He who is not a contented worker where he is will not be a contented workman anywhere else. "Brighten the corner where you are."

WEDDING BELLS

McGERRIGLE — INNES

One of the prettiest weddings it has ever been the good fortune of Cushing residents to witness took place in St. Mungo's church Cushing, on Saturday afternoon Sept. 12th. when Miss Flora MacInnes, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Innes, of Cushing, was united in marriage to Dr. Harold William McGerrigle, formerly of Ormstown by the Rev. J. W. Maclean, of Cushing. The church being beautifully decorated with ferns and flowers.

The bride in her beautiful gown of white taffeta with veil worn in cap effect, caught with orange blossoms, carrying a shower bouquet of ophelia roses and lilies of the valley, looked sweet and dainty that all present realized that the name of "Fairy," by which she was best known to Cushing residents was very appropriate.

Miss Anna Neilson, of Stella Ont., wearing a gown of apple green taffeta and green felt hat with ostrich plumes to match, carrying yellow chrysanthemums was bridesmaid. Little Miss Marion MacRae of Ottawa, in green georgette carrying a basket of yellow roses & mauve asters was flower girl. Dr. D. A. MacDonald, of Montreal, supported the groom. Mrs. A. MacRae, of Ottawa, played the wedding march and during the signing of the register.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. McGerrigle left by motor for Boston and other points; the bride travelling in a blue travel tweed dress with coat and hat to match. On their return they will reside at Hanover, New Hampshire.

Guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McGerrigle of Ormstown; Mr. and Mrs. R. McGerrigle, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence McGerrigle, Mr. and Mrs. John Foster, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Meserve, Miss P. Robertson and the Messrs. Floyd and Allister Innes, all of Montreal.

Guests from Ottawa were Mr. and Mrs. A. Weir, Mr. and Mrs. A. MacRae and Miss Marion; Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. J. McAllister; also Mr. and Mrs. J. McAllister and Mrs. E. Higginson of Hawkesbury.

The gifts were numerous and beautiful, bearing mute testimony to the popularity of the young couple.

Raitt—Frith

Of interest to a wide circle of friends in Edmonton was the wedding of Miss Hilda Frith, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Frith and Mr. Stanley Raitt, son of Mr. T. W. Raitt, which took place on Saturday evening, Sept. 5th. at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was one of marked simplicity, the Rev. W. Thompson officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, was charming in a traveling costume of brown wools. Her hat was brown and her slippers and accessories brown suede. Her flowers were pale pink rosebuds. Mr. and Mrs. Raitt are spending their honeymoon at Banff and Lake Louise and will be at home at their house in 102 ave. toward the middle of September.

Rodrigue — Leblanc

A very pretty autumn wedding took place on Saturday morning last when Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hormisdas Leblanc was united in marriage to Mr. Henri Rodrigue, of Ahuntsic, son of Dr. A. and Mrs. Rodrigue, of Lachute. The ceremony was performed by Mr. Abbé Louis Joseph Rodrigue of the Ste. Therese Seminary, brother of the groom.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father wore a gown of ivory satin with tulle veil arranged in cap effect with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of lilies. She was attended by her sister Miss Helene Leblanc who was gowned in pale blue satin with hat to match and carried a bouquet of roses. The ushers were Messrs. Jules, Paul and George Leblanc, Gustave Graton, Roger Maloche and E. St. Laurent.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the Place Viger Hotel, where the rooms were prettily decorated with pink and yellow gladiolus. Mr. and Mrs. Rodrigue later left on a motor trip to Washington. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Rodrigue will reside in Ahuntsic.

I HAVE A FRIEND

I have a friend—
Yet with the world's great riches piled on high,
The wealth that might a king's own ransom buy,
There is no soul, not one, so rich as I—
I have a friend.
I have a friend—
Though starts may fail and darkness rule the day,
Though I may thirst and hunger come my way,
Still I have wealth no thief can steal away—
I have a friend.

Doctor Savage's Dilemmas

By DORA MASON

YOUNG Doctor Savage was not so much worried about his patient as he was about his patient's daughter. And Enid was quite enough to trouble anyone and had succeeded, at her eighteenth year, in driving her lovely mother to the very borders of nervous prostration.

And because, beneath her selfish exterior, there was the making of as charming a woman as her mother was, Doctor Savage felt unable to cope adequately with the case. Had he discovered the selfishness before he became a victim to the charm his way would have been the easier.

And since selfishness was the one characteristic that a doctor's wife most certainly must not have—the problem was a vexed one. So vexed, in fact, that the young doctor took his entire trouble to his much older partner and they talked the thing out frankly.

"Where's the girl's father that he doesn't take her over his knee and give her a sound spanking?" questioned the older doctor.

"Mrs. Walker has been a widow since the girl was ten. It's a case where, I fancy, the man's mind was needed—if not, his slipper. Mrs. Walker is too sensitive, gentle and feminine to guide this modern type of girl—they need a restraining hand these days or there's no telling where environment will lead them."

"So you want me to take over this case, minister to the mother and at the same time make an ultra modern young lady into one that might in time fill the role of a doctor's wife. Is that about it?"

"Exactly!"

"Rather a tall order, my boy."

"She's worth it, though."

"Who? Mother or daughter?"

"Both," said the young doctor.

"Both."

When Doctor Ward made his first appearance in the sick room in place of the young man, Enid pouted quite frankly, but in the eyes of the mother sprang a look of relief as if unconsciously her troubles had leaped from her own shoulders to those of the big kindly doctor.

And he had not been on the case a week before he took the daughter aside and talked to her like the proverbial Dutch Uncle.

"Now look here, young lady," he said, in his kindly but none the less determined way, "you've got to be a bit more considerate of your mother's views of what is good for your welfare. Do you ever stop to realize that your mother has lived twenty years longer than you have and that she knows volumes more than you do about what is good and what is not good for a child of eighteen?"

"Mother's old fashioned," stated Enid, but the doctor's voice interrupted her.

"But not old fashioned enough to be driven into serious illness by her own daughter—is she?"

"You're wearing down your own mother's nerve force by continual disobedience to her wishes. She quite naturally sees no virtues developing in you through dancing half the nights, wearing one-half enough clothing and smoking far too many cigarettes—I think most sensible people would agree with her—don't you, my dear?"

Then suddenly Enid burst into tears and wept uncontrollably on Doctor Ward's broad shoulder. He smiled softly as he patted her into calmness for he knew that victory was his.

"I didn't, didn't realize—I—I was so selfish and silly—I love mamma more than anyone else in the world," and Enid sobbed afresh, but soon the sunlight came into her eyes and her lips smiled. "You must think me very weak and foolish to cry," she finally said and caressed the lapels of his coat.

"No, my dear—I only think the real, true woman is beginning to—sprout."

"And you'll help me to grow—more like my mother?"

"It won't take long at this rate," laughed Doctor Ward and felt very much elated—so much so, in fact, that when he and his young partner met at dinner he told him all about it.

"Do you think so sudden a change will be lasting?" questioned Doctor Savage earnestly but with much hope in his eyes.

"If she falls in love with the right man now—at this stage of the game I think she may develop into a semblance of the woman her mother is. If there were many women in this world like Mrs. Walker—we men would be a much finer lot than we are."

"Then—"

"Exactly. Now that our patient is swiftly throwing off her need of medical attentions I am going to bombard her with such attentions of another order as to make your courtship of Enid seem like a sham affair altogether."

"When I can catch my breath," laughed Savage, "I will tell you that I think I am a fairly good imitation of Cupid. There's no doubt that our dilemmas often prove blessings—is there?"

Perhaps So!

PIPES SKIRL

'NEATH SIAM'S STANDARD

With the red, white and blue barred standard of Siam fluttering above them in the summer sunshine, pipers from all parts of Canada proudly marched and counter-marched in the grounds of the Banff Springs Hotel, Banff, Alta., during the recent Highland Gathering, which was graced by the presence of T.M. King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambai Barni of Siam and their suite and a large number of distinguished guests. His Majesty, who opened the festival by raising the flag of St. Andrew, met an interesting character in the person of "Willie" Campbell, of New Westminster, B.C., who was a piper on the personal staff of

H. M. Queen Victoria, when King Chulalongkorn of Siam paid an official visit to her, at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, in 1894. Piper Campbell gave a special performance for King Prajadhipok, at the Banff meeting. A new feature of the Gathering was a competition for representatives of pipe bands of the 17 Canadian Scottish militia regiments, which was won by Piper Hector MacDonald, of Montreal. Dancing and Highland sports rounded out an excellent program, with specially presented Scotch light operas in the evenings. The picture shows the massed pipers, parading under the Siamese flag and (inset) T. M. the King and Queen of Siam and Piper Campbell.

ARGENTEUIL COUNTY

Other activities of the Institutes, however, did not lessen, and among these are noticeably August picnics and out-of-door events. An interesting account of these comes as a county affair from Argenteuil.

"The Argenteuil County Women's Institute held a county picnic at Morin Heights with Morin Heights Branch members as hostesses. After a basket lunch a gracious speech of welcome from the County President, Mrs. John Gordon was followed by a splendid program of sports. The prizes won by the successful contestants were presented by Mrs. Gordon in a witty little speech. This was the most successful social event that Argenteuil County Women's Institute has ever held, every Branch being represented by a large number of members and their friends. Perfect weather and a splendidly arranged program on the part of the Morin Heights members combined to make the event a never-to-be forgotten one."

Reports from Chatham Branch in this county show that a Short Course for girls is to be held shortly. A community night & reception for teachers marked the opening of the school year. Frontier relieved a fellow whose family had lost everything by fire, and assisted a school girl. A successful social evening was held by this branch. Jerusalem-Bethany Branch had a practical paper on laundering, and Lakefield an address on church needs in Alberta. Pioneer Branch held a garden party with great success, and planned for the winter's work along many lines. "Why women should be on School Boards" was the subject

THE BLUE COLOR SAYS THIS COAL IS THE FINEST OF ALL SCRANTON ANTHRACITE

It is such superlatively good coal that we trade-marked it for your guidance and protection when buying... dyed it with a harmless blue dye so that you can recognize it at a glance.

LOOK AT THE AVERAGE

One of my friends, who now occupies a high position, started out as a salesman for the National Cash Register Company. He thought that if he could sell cash registers to Marshall Field it would be a big feather in his cap, and the example of this leading store would have influence with smaller merchants all over the country.

So he called at Field's and made his talk, but received no encouragement. The next year he called again... and the next... and the next. The tenth year he came away with an order for $150,000.

In telling me about it, he remarked: "I said to myself, that's $15,000 worth of business for each of the ten years. Not a bad average at all."

In 1929, when stock prices were crashing and even the richest men were feeling poor, a New York banker met a capitalist whose fortune, on paper, had shrunk many million dollars. He was in a blue funk.

The banker said: "You ought to have learned better than this. Don't you remember back in 1920 how worried you were, and how you sent for me to reassure you? Even at present prices you must be worth ten times what you were then. If so, your average is mighty good. What are you kicking about?"

A young man and young woman were married. After the ceremony the bride's father, a veteran business man who had fought hard for his fortune, took them into his study. "I want to say just one thing to you," he remarked. "You must not expect that all your years will be good. You'll go along for a while without seeming to get ahead, but at the end of every year you'll own a little more furniture and have a few more dollars in the bank. Then there will come a year some time when you'll have a stroke of luck and make a lot of progress. You must expect to average the good with the bad."

It seems to me that much of the worry and fretting in life grow out of the fact that people do not take a long enough look.

Every human life, at some point has seemed handicapped & doomed to disappointment. At forty, Henry Ford had never saved a cent. At forty-five, Lincoln was a disappointed politician. For twenty-five years, Charles Darwin worked day after day without the slightest recognition. Then, for each of them, there came a few great years that amply made up for all the rest.

The law of compensation works for those who keep their industry and their faith. Those who quit under discouragement are selling out at the bottom. For a majority of courageous lives, taking all the years together, the average is good.

World-Famous Diamonds

From Golconda Region

The only diamond known to the ancients came from the Golconda mines of India and the nearby mountains. The Great Mogul and the Koh-i-noor, oldest of all known diamonds, and the scarcely less famous Orloff gem, each with a history reeking with romance, were found in this region.

The Koh-i-noor, also known as "The Mountain of Light," is said to have been discovered 4,000 or 5,000 years ago, says Gas Logie. It was kept safe at Delhi until the Persian invasion of India in 1739, when the Persian conqueror craftily gained possession of it by exchanging his turban for that of the dethroned Indian ruler, in whose headgear the diamond was concealed. Finally, after passing from ruler to ruler, the Koh-i-noor was presented to Queen Victoria in 1849, and it is now in the British royal treasury at Windsor castle.

The Great Mogul diamond, of 240 carats, figured in some of India's worst revolutions, but disappeared from sight when the Persians conquered India two centuries ago.

The greatest of all diamonds is the Cullinan, now officially called "Star of Africa." Weighing 3,106½ carats, it was found in South Africa in 1905. Of the more than hundred stones cut from it, the largest, 516½ carats, is in the British scepter, while the second largest, 303, is in the British crown.

Light Year Illustrates

Immensity of Creation

Concerning the dateless history of creation, I need to invoke but one illustration. Astronomy, by its marvelous optics, is now able to descry in the depths of space material systems whose rays require at least a million light years to reach our earth. What is a light year? Remember, a ray of light moves at the amazing rate of 186,300 miles in every second of time. Now, multiply the seconds into minutes and days until you reach a full year of seconds, then you have a light year. Then think, if you can, that it has taken a million of such years for the light of some discovered systems to reach our earth. But still the real fact to remember is that the light in which we see these far-distant worlds is itself a million years old. We do not see these realms as they are today, but as they were a million years ago. And yet this is but a mere fraction of an hour in those infinitely far-flung ages which might take us back to the beginnings of creation.—George Preston Mains.

Early Salt Tax

The following excerpt is taken from the "Travels of Marco Polo": "We shall now speak of the revenue which the grand khan draws from the city of Kin-sai and the places within its jurisdiction, constituting the eighth division or kingdom of Manju. In the first place, upon salt, the most productive article, he levies a yearly duty of 80 tomans of gold, each toman being 10,000 saggis and each saggio fully equal to a gold florin, and consequently amount to 8,400,000 ducats. This vast produce is occasioned by the vicinity of the province to the sea and the number of salt lakes or marshes, in which, during the heat of summer, the water becomes crystallized, and from whence a quantity of salt is taken, sufficient for the supply of five of the other divisions of the province."

Custards Long Popular

"The cream of all pies is the custard pie, known to history and literature since the days when Shakespeare taught us how to tame a shrew in 1594," writes Frank H. Vizetelly, dictionary editor. "Quaking tarts and quivering custards were favorite dishes under William and Mary. Unlidded custard pies, filled with eggs and milk, were known as egg pies when the prince of Orange was invited with his good spouse Mary to cross over to England and govern the country, and they brought along with them their custards and jellies, together with the diletto that man is ruled through his stomach. Custard puddings did not come in until a century later when Mrs. Raffald told the English housekeeper how to make them boiled in 1763."—Detroit News.

Petroleum Long Known

Use of petroleum dates back to the beginning of history. It is one of the oldest natural products used by man. It was as a curative for man's illness that petroleum principally appears in legend and early history.

The people of ancient Japan and China, Judea and Persia used petroleum in a primitive way centuries before the Christian era. Noah's ark was caulked with a form of petroleum gathered from the shores of the Dead sea. Job told of a rock which "poured me out rivers of oil." Nehemiah is supposed to have used oil for altar fires—he called the substance "Nepther," from which the present word "naphtha" was derived.—Detroit News.

With the Passing Years

The United States public health service says that the shrinkage of tissue which accompanies old age is probably the result of several factors, among which may be mentioned inadequate nutrition of cells, diminished internal secretions, such as secretions from the pituitary and adrenal glands. The cells of the tissue probably die off from lack of proper metabolism of all the vital activity of the body in the intake of food, discharge of waste products, etc.

Rowena Rides the Rumble

TWELFTH INSTALMENT

"Why, here he's written me two letters, page after page, all about college and the boys and such nonsense, and never a word about money." She marched straight to the telegraph desk & Peter followed her guiltily. He had to know what she was going to do.

"But, Buddy darling, don't you need some money?" she wrote.

"There was no bad news, I hope," said Peter, as they went up in the elevator. "Nobody bothering him—or anything like that."

"Why, no," said Rowena wonderingly. "Nobody ever bothers Buddy. He isn't that sort."

"How—nice," said Peter.

The boy who took them up to their rooms did a very unusual thing, although neither Rowena nor Peter noticed it at the time. Instead of unlocking the door at once, he knocked, and it was opened from within. They noticed that, of course, and framed in the open door was Bobby Lowell.

"Where in the world did you come from?"

"What are you doing here?"

Bobby was crying, but they were too amazed, to disconcerted, to offer either greeting or condolence.

"I've been waiting four days," said Bobby. "I nearly died of lonesomeness. You were due two days ago. I had a notion to kill myself."

Peter turned to the boy quite savagely. "Why didn't they tell us at the desk?"

"I told them not to," dimpled Bobby tearfully. "I wanted to surprise you. I told them to show you right up."

Rowena marched into the room, took off her hat and gloves and tossed them upon the bed. Then she got out her lip-stick & powder and concealed the stains of travel in a most efficient manner.

"All right," she said cheerfully. "Come on in, Peter, and don't stand gaping.—Constantine shake hands with one of the Boston Lowells.—All right Bobby, give us the lowdown. Now Carter Wellman—"

"It's all his fault," sobbed Bobby, ignoring Constantine's black and white paw. "You know that telegram he sent you Peter? It was a lie. He didn't mean a word of it."

"Will you sue him, or shall I horsewhip him?"

"How do you know? You haven't had time to get to New York and quarrel with him this time," objected Rowena.

I had plenty of time in Albuquerque and I called him up. I asked him what I should get for the wedding? He said 'What wedding?' I said, 'Our wedding'. That you wired Peter Blande about. Rowena—Peter—he went on something awful. He said if I thought less about clothes and more about my immortal soul I'd be better off. He said what did I mean by telling strangers—and low-principled characters like Peter, at that—the private details of our love-affair. In fact, he said he wasn't going to marry me until New York had a new insane asylum where he could control me by the latest improved methods."

Rowena and Peter screamed with laughter.

"Rowena," said Peter, "I take it all back. I won't punch him in the nose. He's a great old scout."

"What did you say, darling?" inquired Rowena.

"I said," announced Bobby with dignity, "that while perhaps he had never been in jail as Peter had, and had never toured the country under false pretenses and that sort of thing Peter could teach him a whole lot about handling women."

Rowena rolled back on the bed helpless with laughter.

"What did he say to that?" asked Peter.

"Nothing. He hung up the receiver on me—and me paying for a telephone call clear from Albuquerque!"

So Rowena retired with Constantine to her rumble seat and they continued swiftly east. Bobby no longer did all the talking. Peter was showing up as something of a conversationalist on his own account.

"You've made a great mistake Bobby," he told her over and over, speaking in a slow and impressive voice. "I know men. Carter meant just what he said in that telegram, but he resented your taking up such a sacred subject by long-distance telephone. The telephone is such a sordid, mechanical, diabolical device. Naturally he would not wish to make plans for the tremendous romantic experience of his life by telephone at so much a minute. He wanted to have you in his arms."

Bobby was impressed—even a little frightened. "But he used to make love to me over the phone in New York," she said defensively.

"That was different. He was seeing you every day then and the calls were from house to house. It's not like shouting 'I love you' over three thousand miles of farm and factories. I don't blame Carter. I'm like that myself."

"But I didn't know what to wear—"

"That cut him to the quick," said Peter. "Men don't think about clothes in their emotional moments. And to know that instead of every pulse and every vein and every—er—corpusclesinging aloud, 'I am going back to Carter!'—you were wondering what to wear.—Well, I'm just like Carter. It would wound me to the heart."

By the time they reached San Antonio, Bobby was completely convinced, entirely repentant & asking Peter's advice—he being "one of those men" and knowing how they were apt to feel about things.

"If I were you," said Peter, with the heavy air of one who weighed his words, "I should take the first fast train for New York. You can get a good train for Mouston."

"I'll do it," declared Bobby. "I'll take the first train from Houston and I won't breathe a word to Carter. Then if I do change my mind along the road I can call him up somewhere."

So in Houston, Peter put her on the train and went straight to the conductor, pointed Bobby out to him, and gave him the location of her berth.

"She's not very well," he explained in a fatherly manner. "Not really bad, you understand but has queer little aberrations once in a while. Gets odd notions about traveling and wants to get off the train. Cooks up any sort of wild excuse for getting off—wants to send a telegram—wants to call up New York—no end to the silly nonsense she can trump up. Now I want you to see that she goes straight through to New York. Her doctor will meet her at the station and I'm depending on you to see that she gets safely into his hands. She'll be no trouble at all, one of the sweetest girls that ever lived, but just will get that odd notion about travel."

Peter gave the conductor ten dollars, who said he could safely promise that she would reach her doctor without misadventure.

"You'll know him all right," said Peter. "He's red-headed and kind of square-jawed."

The conductor, who was pretty square-jawed himself, promised to see to it. Peter passed on the same word, and a five-dollar bill to the porter of her Pullman and, then sent a telegram to Carter announcing the exact moment of her arrival and advising him to get in touch with the conductor of the train. Then he hurriedly rejoined the girls.

"Good-by, darling," said Rowena cheerfully. "See you in New Orleans."

"Oh, no, you won't," said Bobby. "You won't see me again till you get back to New York."

At the hotel in Houston they found another fat letter for Rowena and a telegram which she opened nervously. But it was only Buddy's answer to her inquiry from El Paso.

"No," it stated briefly. "If I needed money, wouldn't I ask for it?"

And hard up as she was, Rowena gave herself the satisfaction of wiring back the one word "Yes."

There was also a telegraphic money transfer for Peter, to the amount of fifty dollars and with it a short cold message.

"You go to hell."

It was from Ronald Rostand. Rowena was wrong about it. Buddy needed money a great many times after that but never asked for it again. He accepted a job in a haberdashery where he worked two hours every afternoon and all day Saturday. Rowena didn't like that because it kept him away from ball games but all Buddy said to her objections was, "I've seen a ball game."

Rowena was quite uneasy about it all.

Peter wanted to write him again, tried many times to put his friendly feelings into phrases, to say cheerio and tell him he was quite the stuff. He would even have apologized for his meddling. But somehow the kindly thoughts would not be written down, for he had not Rowena's ability with words & it was only in the pressure of deep emotion that Peter turned to the pen. And so, months later, when the two met for the first time, there had been no interchange of opinions between them after Buddy's lucid wire. But when Rowena, with a hand of each in one of hers, said brightly:

"Oh, Peter, this is Buddy!" they shook hands heartily and Peter said, "Well, hello!"

"Hello, hello," said Buddy. And they both laughed a little, and each knew exactly what the other had in mind.

They had looked forward to New Orleans as one of the high spots of the entire tour. They had heard enthusiastic friends rave over its quaint charm, had seen exquisite etchings of its thousand odd little crooks and corners, had sampled its time-honored recipes. Peter had his heart set on doing something really worth while in New Orleans—two really worth-while things—one for Rackruff Motors, Inc., and one for Peter Blande and his future.

It was his idea to pick out the most picturesque and typical corner, with just a small portion of the roadster showing, and with Rowena peering out mistily into a shadowy street—a new Rowena, shimmery and shadowy herself behind a Spanish veil. Rowena, on the other hand, thought it would strike a more telling note to have the quaint old shop and the quaint old street with a strictly modern Rackruff and a strictly modern Rowena standing out in bold relief.

Rowena and Peter never had the same idea about pictures, and Rowena wouldn't admit for a minute that Peter was always right. Certainly, whether right or wrong, he would have his own way when it came to pictures.

It was in vain that Rowena argued she wasn't the type to do a native daughter peeping out—she was strictly a New Yorker, looking fascinatedly in.

Make Household Tasks Easier

Ever since I gave those beauty hints for men I have been aware by the volume of letters received, that the ladies have been feeling rather jealous at my not preparing a special article for them. Well, here it is dear ladies! These little hints, gathered during the days of my bachelor house-keeping, are very precious to me. That they may be a wonderful help to you is the ardent wish of your devoted admirer, Dean.

Wax paper is excellent for cleaning the stove. Save the papers and they will do to line your cake tins whenever you are making a dark cake.

Sprinkle salt over a dingy carpet before sweeping. It will make it look like new. It is well to run the salt through a fine colander before putting it back into the shakers.

Rub old boots with slices of raw potato and they will polish as easily as new ones. Cleanse potato slices with peroxide of hydrogen before frying for supper.

Adhesive tape may be used when preparing stuffed veal or roll jelly cake. It will keep everything nicely in shape. When desired to remove tape, soften with benzine or gasoline.

3 Piece Breakfast Set FREE!

EVERYBODY HAS A CHANCE

In our store window is a charming three-piece breakfast set, consisting of table and two Windsor chairs. The set is worth $20.

Somebody is going to win it. We'd like you to be the lucky one. Here's what you have to do:

FIRST:

The set is finished in a 50-50 blend of two shades of Brandram-Henderson Fast Drying Enamel. We want you to guess which two shades were used to obtain the main color with which the furniture is finished. (Disregard orange trimming.) To aid you, we shall give you a B-H color card. On this card are the two actual shades we used.

SECONDLY:

When you decide which two shades were used, buy a tin of any B-H paint product in our store. With your purchase, we shall give you a coupon on which is a number.

Write your guess on this coupon (name and address also) and give the coupon back to the clerk.

All coupons will be placed in a sealed box. On Saturday evening, September 26th., at 8 o'clock, a draw will take place in our store. The first coupon drawn from the box naming the correct two shades used.....wins the breakfast set!

Remember: To compete you must purchase a B-H paint product (no matter how small)

It Costs You Money

Every day you delay placing your goods before the public is costing you money.

True, everyone may know you are in business — know where your store is, but they do not have time to run to your store to find out about the new things you are showing, about the special bargains you are offering and the hundred and one other things that make your store an interesting place to visit.

Many people may be going past your store every day to buy something you could sell them at a lower price than they are paying—and why? The other fellow invited them to buy—that's all. You didn't.

Try the Watchman Advertising and see what good results it will have for your business.

The Watchman

Beautiful isn't it?

It's decorated with Walpamur, the famous flat finish for walls and ceilings.

Walpamur is permanent, washable, fire-resisting and non-absorbent to moisture. It can be applied to a variety of surfaces, such as rough and smooth plaster, wallboards, etc., and is most easy to apply. It is the most economical wall finish that you can select. The soft, light-diffusing effects it produces, and its lovely choice of colors convert an ordinary room or hall into one with charm and personality.

Consult your decorator or dealer as to its many uses. Ask him for a shade card, or write to us direct.

"It Doesn't Take a Minute."

It doesn't take a minute
To speak a word of grace—
And yet it brings the sunshine
To another's face.

Just some appreciation,
A little word of praise—
A "thank you" kindly spoken,
May brighten someone's days.

It doesn't take a minute
To leave a smile behind—
And make some sad folks happier,
To know the world is kind.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for September 20

THE COUNCIL AT JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:1-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—For brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Christians Working Together.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The First Missionary Convention.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christian Freedom.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christianity at the Crossroads.

I. The Controversy in the Church at Antioch (vv. 1-5).

This difficulty was a most serious one, for it threatened the disruption of the church into Jewish and Gentile divisions. It was not a question of the admission of the Gentiles into the Church; that had been settled some years before when Peter received Cornelius and his household. The question now was, On what ground could they be received? Should Gentile converts be required to keep the Mosaic Law as a condition of salvation? This issue was brought on by the coming of certain men from Jerusalem who declared, "Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved" (v. 1). The question was so difficult that Paul and Barnabas were unable to put them to silence. These Jewish legalists had the letter of the Scripture on their side. They could point to the command enjoining this rite upon the male children of the covenant people (Gen. 17:10-14). Paul could not point to any scripture where this obligation had been abrogated. If Paul should plead that Abraham was justified before he was circumcised, his antagonist could answer, "Yes, but after justification the rite was divinely imposed." The brethren at Antioch decided to refer the matter to the mother church at Jerusalem. Accordingly, Paul and Barnabas and others were sent as a deputation to Jerusalem.

II. The Deliberations of the Council (vv. 6-21).

1. Peter's speech (vv. 6-11). He argued that God had borne witness to the acceptance of the Gentiles by giving the Holy Spirit to them as unto the Jews (Acts 10:34-47). Since, therefore, God had not put a difference, it would be folly for them to do so.

2. Paul and Barnabas rehearsed their experience (v. 12). They told how that God had set his seal of approval on their preaching of salvation by grace through faith apart from the works of the law by the working of signs and wonders through them.

3. The argument of James (vv. 14-21). He took the fact declared by Peter and showed how it harmonized with the prophecy of Amos (Amos 9:11-15). He showed that the reception of the Gentiles was not in conflict but in strict harmony with God's plan. As set forth in the speech of James, God's plan is as follows:

a. To take out from among the Gentiles a people for his name (v. 14). This is what is now going on—the preaching of the gospel to the ends of the earth, and the calling out of the Church.

b. After the Church is completed and removed, the Israelitish nation will be converted and restored to their land and privileges by the Lord himself at his return (vv. 16, 17).

c. Following this will be the conversion of the world through the agency of converted Israel (v. 17 & Rom. 11:15-17). He showed that there is no conflict when the Scriptures are rightly divided.

III. The Decision of the Council (vv. 22-29).

The mother church came to a unanimous agreement and accepted the resolution offered by James. They not only sent a letter stating the decision of the conference, but took the wise precaution to send influential men along with Paul and Barnabas to bear the same testimony by word of mouth. This letter denied the authority of the Judaizing teachers (v. 24) and declared the method by which this decision had been reached (vv. 25-27). They put the Holy Spirit first. They were positively instructed to abstain from meats offered to idols, from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication.

IV. The Decision Delivered to the Church (vv. 30-35).

Upon their return to Antioch, the church was called together to hear the report. Its reading brought great rejoicing. Judas and Silas, who had been sent as confirmatory witnesses, being prophets, now exhorted the brethren with many words, confirming the decision of the Jerusalem church.

Abiding in Christ

Abiding in Christ does not mean that you must always be thinking about Christ. You are in a house, abiding in its enclosure or beneath its shelter, though you are not always thinking about the house itself. But you always know when you leave it.—W. B. Meyer.

God is in All

Be he nowhere else, God is in all that liberates and lifts, in all that humbles, sweetens, and consoles.—Loyell.

Here's why it lasts longer

THE NORTHERN ELECTRIC-ABC WASHER is bound to give you long years of satisfactory service, because the vital driving machinery is built to reduce friction ... the cause of wearing-out ... to a very minimum.

Enclosed down under the tub is this marvelously quiet, power-saving mechanism. Anti-friction metals are used for moving parts; the gear-teeth slide smoothly together with precise accuracy; and the lubrication is so excellent that it needs attention only once in three years. This friction-free action means cheaper operation as well as less wear ... and, hence, longer life for the ABC.

Northern Electric has remarkable technical facilities for testing even the unseen parts of the appliances which it sponsors. The ABC Washer has been subjected to the most rigorous tests in every respect before being awarded the Northern Electric "SEAL OF APPROVAL" which this made-in-Canada washer bears.

WEDDING BELLS

Cleland - Hall

The Presbyterian Church, of Brownsburg, was the scene of a very pretty event on Wednesday, afternoon, Sept. 16th, when Edith Lillian, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hall, of Dal-esville, was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest (Coulson) Cleland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cleland of Dalesville. Rev. H.
Cousens officiated and the wedding march was beautifully rendered by Mrs. C. E. Richardson.
During the signing of the register Mrs. J. Thompson sang "Oh Perfect Love."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father wore a gown of white georgette and lace with tulle veil arranged in fan effect with band of pearls and orange blossoms and carried a sheaf of pink roses and ferns. She was attended by Miss Gladys Cleland, who was gowned in pale green georgette with large picture hat and carried a sheaf of pink chrysanthemums. Mr. Chas. Hall Jr., brother of the bride supported the groom. The ushers were
Mr. Ross Cleland and Mr. Jas.
Hazel.

CELEBRATED DIAMOND WEDDING

Occasions are rare for the celebrations of one's diamond wedding, but Dalesville has been a busy spot this week because of the many congratulations and calls which have been made upon Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Murdoch, of Dalesville, who on Friday last attained this happy day.

They are aged respectively 86 and 82 years and were married by Rev. Mr. Wilson, Methodist Minister, 60 years ago, Mrs.
Murdoch being Miss Betsy Marshall of Mount Maple.

They are two of the oldest residents of Dalesville, Geo. Murdoch, who was one of the best known farmers in the district, retired some years ago. The happy couple now have their home on the homestead of their son, George Murdoch Jr. Ten years ago on the occasion of their golden wedding Mr. and Mrs. Murdoch were given a big celebration by all the residents.

There are seven children,
James, George and Archibald
Murdoch and Mrs. Duncan Macdougall, all of Argenteuil county; Mrs. Charles R. Adams and Mrs. V. Morrison, both of Montreal; and Mrs. J. Wood, of Franklin, Man. They also have 44 grandchildren and 10 great grandchildren.

CUSHING

Mr. Neil McLean of Beauharnois spent Sunday with his parents at the Manse.

Miss Maud Warwick, of La-chute, has been the guest of her cousin, Mrs. T. Weir Jr. for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Snair, of Verdun, were the guests of Mr.
Roy Dobbie also Miss Nicholls on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Candlish, of Point St. Charles, were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs.
A. Graham.

Mrs. T. Weir Jr. entertained a number of the young people, at a china shower for Miss Ruth Dobbie, on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Graham and Mr. Allan Graham, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. A. Scott, of Lachute, spent Saturday in Vankleek Hill.

Mrs. Fred Wilkins, of Montreal, is spending two weeks with her mother Mrs. Walter Smith.
Mrs. C. Wilkins, of Verdun, and
Mr. Jean Dudley, of Montreal, were week-end guests also.

At the meeting of the W. C.
T. U. on Wednesday, Mrs. Bez-anson, of St. Andrews East, and Mrs. Archie Graham, of Cushing were elected to attend the
W. C. T. U. Convention at Sutton, Que., the first week of October.

The Frontier Women's Institute surprised Miss Ruth Dobbie at her home on Tuesday afternoon, with a linen shower and farewell Tea. The trousseau was also shown during the afternoon so that the event ended up by being a combination shower & trousseau tea. Miss Dobbie is being married quietly in Montreal next week & her departure from Cushing is much regretted by her many friends.

The Captain's Corner

For our Boys and Girls

Dear Boys and Girls:

Once again I have to thank many young readers for their letters; and also for the care you all seem to take both with regard to spelling and writing, which is very much to your credit.

As I myself write it is raining very hard and the sky is dark with clouds. This reminds me that I heard a little girl say the other day "Oh bother this bad and wicked rain, I can't go out and play." Now this rain, though it prevented my little friend from having a happy time outside, is doing a very great amount of good. The brooks will no longer be dry. All the animals will have plenty of water. The trees will take on fresh energy and life, so that next Spring you will see them spread out in new glory their splendid foliage under which you will play your games. So don't grumble at these wet days, for you can best appreciate them by watching the logs burning in the fire-grate and enjoying the warmth that comes from the splendid fire they make. You would not have this comfort had not the rain made the wood grow.

Try and think for yourselves, in how many different ways this rain is doing good, and then I am sure you will never wish to find fault with wet weather, even if it comes on a Saturday afternoon.

In conclusion I would like to remind you that God sends us the rain as well as the sunshine and He knows best.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

The Kiddies Bed-Time Story.

Well Kiddies, have you been very impatient to meet Mickey the Squirrel? Do you know I believe I saw him the other day. I am not quite sure if it was Mickey, but if not then it was another squirrel so like him that it must have been his twin brother. If he had not been so far away I would have told him how you were all waiting for Friday evening to hear his story. He would have been pleased.

Now lets make a start.

Mickey was seated at the foot of a tree in the City Park. "Hallo" he said to himself, he had to talk to himself because at the moment he was quite alone. "I am tired; it's not much fun after all going about searching for nuts and acorns that seem to get scarcer and scarcer, besides which I do think there must be quite enough by now to keep me going all the winter," and at the thought of the snow and cold that would soon be coming he gave a little shiver, shook his head, pricked up his ears, and because there was simply nothing else to do started to climb the tree.

"Chip, Chip," said a voice, so suddenly that Mickey gave a little gasp and nearly let go his hold. He turned his head round and saw Teddy Chipmunk his cousin.

"Oh do come down off that tree" went on Teddy "You don't know how silly you look from here; all I can see is your tail which I don't believe you've brushed today at all."

"Not brushed" answered Mickey, indignantly "You judge me by yourself; for saying that, you deserve to be chased by a fox all day, and he added, with one little paw on his nose, I hope you are."

"Thank you for nothing" replied Teddy "but do come down my neck is paining me looking up at you like this."

"Don't see what you want to come bothering round me at all for," retorted Mickey "however, as you are so impatient, I'll come down, so look out for yourself, and he gave a jump which landed him in front of his cousin.

"I suppose its more nuts you want," he said with a sneer "when he had recovered his breath. "Listen" replied Teddy eagerly, ignoring all reference to the subject of nuts "I've just got the most splendid idea you ever thought of, and if you're on it, we'll have no end of fun. You know the farm on the other side of the park, by the wood; well there's a meadow there that has a stream running through part of it and—"That's enough," interrupted Mickey rudely, "another of your truly wonderful ideas! Do you think I am going to walk miles and miles and miles just to see your stupid old stream, besides what about those cows, never did like cows and never shall.

"Oh Chip!" retorted Teddy "Cows don't hurt big as they are. Don't even suppose they will see us, besides Bunny told me to tell you to be sure and come and you could have as many seeds as you like."

"If you are certain those cows won't be bothering us I will consider it," replied Mickey, weakening at the thought of a good feed, "besides I like Bunny."

"For a rabbit he's a jolly good fellow" said Teddy, "but he's mighty scared just now."

"Why?" asked Mickey.

"Because he heard the farmer say that there were too many rabbits about and he would get a party together with guns and kill a lot of them."

Mickey thoughtfully scratched his nose, "Now that's too bad. Why do they want to destroy Bunny and all his family, even if they do interfere with the corn a bit? Haven't they got a right to live just the same as everyone else? "I'd like to do just that to them," he went on fiercely cracking a nut between his sharp little teeth. Teddy swept some leaves away with his tail. "What a chap you are; up in the air every minute. Why don't you take things calmly like me? After all these men don't interfere with you. Why their kiddies even feed you, the fact of the matter is you have no gratitude." Mickey looked at his cousin, and his little eyes gleamed. "Gratitude! Oh my aunt! Have I got to be grateful for hard crusty little bits of bread? Now if they had the sense to give me nuts! —

"Oh goodness" he broke off "Look Teddy! Oh just look! Did you ever see anything like that in all your life?"

Teddy turned round in order to get a better view of what Mickey was looking at and exclaimed in astonishment. "Great snakes and little worms. What a very ugly creature I wonder what it can be? Will it hurt us at all? "It won't if it can't climb trees" replied Mickey and from the look of it I should say it has not enough sense to do that. Be ready now, its coming this way."

Mickey was right. The creature, whatever it was, had turned in their direction and was coming slowly and slowly towards them.

That's all dear kiddies till next Friday evening. No! I won't tell you what the animal was, not now, or else you will have nothing to look forward to. Good night.

OUR MAIL BAG

R. R. No. 6, Lachute, Que.

Dear Captain:

We have been reading the Boys' and Girls' page and thought we would write. We go to school every day. Last year we were never late or absent once.

We would all like to join the Birthday Club. We promise to do our best to remember the rules.

Dorothy, Lexie, Lillian and Percy Titley.

Very pleased to welcome all four of you to the Birthday Club. I hope you will keep up your splendid school record. Now take turns in writing me a letter about your games and work.

The Captain, Wellington St., Verdun, Que.

I am only a little boy. My age is eight years and I hope you will let me join the Birthday Club. I have two kittens, one black and white and one brown.

Your loving friend,

Eric Williams.

Very glad to have your letter dear Eric. You are just the right age. Welcome to Birthday Club.

The Captain.

THE HAT TRICK

Here is a really good little catch. Get three Nuts and three hats, and under each hat place a nut in full view of your friends.

Now mumble some "Magic" words, and at the same time raise the hats, one at a time and eat the nuts. "As you see," tell your pals, "I have eaten the three nuts that were under these hats. Yet I will now undertake to bring all three under which-ever hat you wish. When they point out a hat, you wave your hands over it for a while, mumbling more "spells." Then when you have your friends' excitement properly worked up, just raise the hat—and put it on your head! No one can say the three nuts aren't under the hat.

BE CLEVER AND DO THIS.

EEEESSSPNLL

Each of these rows of letters makes up a well-known word when rearranged. Are you clever enough to spot the words? A prize is offered for the first correct answer received by the Captain.

And this:—

There was a fellow named Rickett,
Who was fond of playing cricket;
He tried to bowl fast,
And slipped on the grass.

Complete this little verse; making your last word rhyme with grass. A prize is also offered for first correct answer received.

"HE'S THREE HOURS"

Written for all the little folk who read the Bed-Time Story.

The Clock struck five, and with a frown
A little boy his books flung down
Upon the table; to prepare
His lessons, to be done with care,
For having stood there times before
He hated "corners" more and more.

The Clock struck Six. What tragic woe
Was on a face he dare not show;
For eyes were wet, and cheeks besmirched
With inky fingers, which had searched
In vain for that beyond his reach;
His lost and vanished handkerchief.

Those figures smudged; he could not see
A difference in an 'eight' or 'three'
And writing! Well, his alphabet
Had much to answer from neglect,
His 'G' and 'R'. That 'A' and 'B'
Would more than puzzle you and 'Me'.

When hope had gone, despair set in,
His mother comes upon the scene,
A tear-stained face, all pale and wane
Becomes quite cheerful once again
"O Mummy," Come and show me quick
How I can here divide by six."

Dear little boy, cannot you see
That into 'eighteen', six goes three?
Ah! That's much better, draw a line
Now add all up, but take your time
And when your spelling you have said,
We'll have a romp; then off to bed.

The Joke Corner (Contributed this week by Billy Dougall.)

(Friend showing lady around)
"This is the Forth Bridge"
Daddy—"Oh, what became of the other three?"

Doctor—"Well, Mrs. Jones, how is little Jackie getting on? Did those red pills do him any good?"

Mrs. Jones—"Oh yes Doctor, he's been sitting up all day playing with them."

Teacher—"Who was the first man to make up a joke and drive it home?"

Pupil—"Please, sir, Henry Ford."

Manager (to applicant seeking job)—"Do you know how to make a Venetian blind?"

Applicant—"Sure; knock his eyes out!"

Prison Governor—"You say you have a complaint to make? Well, What is it?"

Convict—"There ain't enough exits in this place, sir."

The clock struck eight, Yes! Yes! I know,
It passed the seven down below,
While games were played, with sister Rose,
Its wonderful how time just goes!
But here upstairs, young sleepy-head
Has had his milk, is into bed
And, that is why I add a line
To tell you now its story time.

WILLIE WONDERS

What is Thunder and Lightning?..

Lightning is a flash of light resulting from a sudden discharge of atmospheric electricity. It may be a reddish-white, or violet flash, seemingly spread over a considerable extent of the sky, or a zig-zag line of very brilliant light; resulting from a discharge between two clouds, or between a cloud and the earth. Heat or sheet lightning is not accompanied by thunder. Sometimes during a thunderstorm fire balls are seen, but no exact observations of them have been made. The duration of a flash of lightning is very small, not more than a millionth part of a second. Thunder is due to the sudden disturbance of the air produced by a lightning discharge. The long rolling noise is perhaps due to echoes from the clouds. Sound travels about 1100 feet a second, so that a thunder clap from a distance of one mile would reach us in about five seconds.

Have you enough Life Insurance?

No matter how large or how small your estate, it will suffer heavy deductions before it reaches your wife or family. Doctors, nurses, hospitals, undertakers, lawyers, etc., not to mention succession duties, if the estate be considerable, will reduce the net amount payable to your heirs by anything from 10% to 25%. Take your pencil and try a simple sum in arithmetic, using an actual case as an example:

	Typical Case	My Case
Total face value of all my life insurance policies.....	$5,000	$.....
Estimated value of my real estate, securities and other assets.....	$2,000	$.....
Total.....	$7,000	$.....
Less 15% as indicated above.....	$1,050	$.....
Total estate (net).....	$5,950	$.....
Invested in good securities at 5% this should yield my family an annual income of.....	$297.50	$.....

It Costs You Money

Every day you delay placing your goods before the public is costing you money.

True, everyone may know you are in business — know where your store is, but they do not have time to run to your store to find out about the new things you are showing, about the special bargains you are offering and the hundred and one other things that make your store an interesting place to visit.

Many people may be going past your store every day to buy something you could sell them at a lower price than they are paying—and why? The other fellow invited them to buy—that's all. You didn't.

SUCCESSFUL CALF SHOW

Almost thirty farm boys and girls of the surrounding district exhibited calves in the club competition which was held on the Lachute Fair grounds, on Saturday, Sept. 19th.

Mr. J. P. Fleury of the Federal Live Stock Branch placed the various classes to the general satisfaction of the ringside.

Archie McKenzie had the first prize Holstein calf. This boy also won the Judging competition. In the registered Ayrshire class some fourteen entries were present. Stanley Doig was placed first with his heifer calf that won in the calf competition at Ottawa, and which formed part of the group of three calves which won the Sir Henry Thornton Trophy at Sherbrooke. Judge Fleury also awarded Doig's calf the grand champion ribbon with Bradley's reserve.

The following are the results :—

CLASS 1, HOLSTEINS.—A. McKenzie, Janet McKenzie, J. Boa, Keith Boa.

CLASS 2, REGISTERED AYRSHIRES.—Stanley Doig, Gordon Bradley, Marjorie McOuat, Kenneth Kettyle, Léodas Ouillette, Eileen Morrison, Lillian McOuat, Howard Doig, Shirley Heatlie, Junior Heatlie, Clifford Armstrong, Douglas Dixon, Keith Titley, Edward Duncan.

CLASS 3, GRADE CALVES.—N. Bradley, E. Copeland, Lexie Titley, Gladys Berry, Milton Titley, Lester Ward, Howard Ward, Russell Noble, Sterling Noble.

SHOWMAN CLASS.—Stanley Doig, Gordon Bradley, Kenneth Kettyle, Eileen Morrison, Marjorie McOuat, Léodas Ouillette.

GRAND CHAMPION CALF.—Stanley Doig.

RESERVE CHAMPION CALF.—Gordon Bradley.

JUDGING COMPETITION.—Archie McKenzie, Gordon Bradley, Kenneth Kettyle, Ernest Copeland, Lexie Titley, Edwin Duncan.

REPORTS AND INSPECTION.—Léodas Ouillette, Lillian McOuat, Marjorie McOuat, Archie McKenzie, Eileen Morrison, Lexie Titley, Russell Noble, Edwin Duncan, Clifford Armstrong, Janet McKenzie, Sterling Noble, Stanley Doig, Keith Boa, Milton Titley, Douglas Dixon, Howard Doig.

This competition was organized under the St. Jérusalem Farmers' Club, the Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture represented by Alex. Bothwell and J. P. Fleury.

Before the close of the show Mr. Fleury gave a short resume of Boys and Girls Club work in Quebec province, he complimented the members of the Lachute Calf Club for the splendid showing they had made locally, as well as at the Ottawa and Sherbrooke Fairs, especially at Sherbrooke where three of the boys had exhibited calves and won the Sir Henry Thornton Trophy for the second time in succession. Mr. Fleury stated that he considered the Lachute Calf Club the best Boys and Girls Club in the Province of Quebec.

THE QUEBEC ASSOCIATION FOR THE PREVENTION OF INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

Reporting the great progress made to date by the Quebec Association for the Prevention of Industrial Accidents, Allan M. Mitchell, president of the Association, stated that nearly 85 per cent of the firms had answered in detail the questionnaire sent out by the Association a short time ago.

Mr. Mitchell pointed out that these questionnaires were needed to allow the checking up of the list of employers in the Province and for finding out the places where accident prevention was carried on. This would help the various groups to organize more rapidly.

"The chairmen of each group," said Mr. Mitchell, "are hard at work and it is expected that each group will be functioning at the commencement of October. The inter-plant no-accident competition which the Province of Quebec Safety League's Industrial Section has started is proving to be of valuable assistance and has created an ambition in the hearts of the employees to build up, maintain and better the reputation of their firms with the aim of winning one of the trophies.

Employers are interested in two ways in the Accident Prevention work of the Association.

(1) They fully recognize the value of the Association's being able to gather from the four corners of the earth, information on the most modern ways of preventing industrial mishaps from happening and how to apply such experience in our plants here.

(2) The employers are on the other hand most deeply interested in the service the Association can render them, since the division of the industries into groups such as enacted by the new Compensation Act, places the responsibility of the cost of accidents of any company member of that group, upon the shoulders of every other member of this respective group, whether he has or not introduced in his business, prevention activities. Therefore when the Association through its supervising forces arranges to promote such Safety activities everywhere specially into the smaller firms, it will be to the interest of every one concerned in any given group.

"It is with this double purpose in view that the association will at once commence to assist employers by organizing committees and safety activities and render whatever services the employers may ask for, in an effort to create a spirit of co-operation.

"The Association will service industries by having its representatives visit the plants and aid the employees and the members of the safety committees. The work can be divided into four fields; engineering, education, enforcement and enthusiasm and anything that can be done to create that enthusiasm is to the benefit of both the employer and the employee. For this purpose a survey of the establishments will be made throughout the Province. Experts will ascertain the extent of protection and safeguards existing on various pieces of machinery particularly in places where accident prevention has not yet been fully developed and make necessary recommendation. First aid activities will be inaugurated so that slight injuries are checked before they have turned to be serious beyond control.

"The Association, being composed of an executive committee and of a board of directors consisting of representatives from each and every one of the groups, it will readily be understood what value there is in the extended service that the Association is called upon to render. Each of the above mentioned groups will be distinct one from the other, having its own president and board of directors, carrying on its own program and directing its own activities but being able to benefit by the whole machinery of the Association, the co-operating experience of everyone, the value of the supervising activities into each and every plant in the Province.

"I would also like to remind employers that the filling in and prompt return of our questionnaire does not relieve them from the obligation of furnishing to the Workmen's Compensation Board the employers' payroll statement which the board has sent out returnable on August 10. If any employer has delayed in fulfilling this obligation I remind them that article 82 of the act "requiring act "requiring employers mentioned in schedule one to furnish the commission a statutory declaration of the estimate of wages expended covering up to December 1931." I mention also that an additional assessment of 5 per cent of the ordinary assessment is chargeable if such is not submitted with in the specified time with additional 1 per cent for each additional month or fraction thereof.

"The Quebec Association for the Prevention of Industrial Accidents will organize branches in Quebec, Three Rivers, Drummondville, St.-Hyacinthe, St. Johns, Sherbrooke and in the Lake St.-John district in an effort to furnish to the industrialist a handy and individual centre."

"The Supervisors will be experts of outstanding reputation rendering a service worthwhile to the Cause."

ARGENTEUIL COUNTY HEALTH UNIT'S FIRST ANNUAL MEETING.

With perfect unanimity every one voiced strong approval of the good work that has been accomplished by the Sanitary Unit since its establishment here, less than a year ago.

It was one of the most representative and pleasurable gatherings ever held in Lachute and guests numbering almost one hundred sat down to a banquet served in Desjardins' Hotel on Monday evening with Col. J. E. Seale, Warden of the County, in the chair.

Dr. Lalande, Superintendent of the Unit, presented a very full report, recording in detail the activities in which he and his efficient Staff have been engaged. He took occasion to express his gratitude for the splendid co-operation that had been given him in the work, and stated that the results may not now be apparent, but would become in stronger evidence during the next two or three generations. He uttered warning to those who might know of contagious diseases and failed to report them. He also spoke of the good work of Dr. Touchette in his efforts of better sanitation.

Dr. E. Nadeau spoke of the evolution that had taken place with regard to the light in which health units are now looked upon, intimating that some 24 units were now functioning in this Province, and he was delighted to see the splendid progress made in Argenteuil and the spirit of close unity by both races working so harmoniously together. He urged that in order to get the proper spirit of independence the people were called upon to bear part of the burden as by doing so they would appreciate it the more.

Telegrams of regret for unavoidable absence were received from the Hon. H. A. David and the Hon. Sir George H. Perley, expressing good wishes and their hope for continued success of the Unit.

Dr. Plante, M.P.P., representing the Hon. A. David and Geo. Dansereau, M.P.P., County representative, spoke briefly on the "Health System in our Province," being followed by a short speech from Mayor Dobbie.

Outstanding addresses were given by Rev. H. D. Brosseau of Grenville and Rev. H. Cousens of Lachute, as representing the clergy. The former gentleman emphasized that what was missing in nearly every field of endeavor was the lack of intelligent and persevering action and he was proud to feel that Dr. Lalonde was a man of action and one who could not readily be turned aside when duty was to be performed.

The Rev. H. Cousens spoke upon the relationship of the Clergy to the Health Unit and said that while we may be divided in race and religion or politics, we were all one in the matter of Public Health which stood by itself. This movement is sponsored by the Government and we must lend our support in order that the work may proceed and the children be allowed to grow up with healthy bodies.

GYPROC makes the change

A BIGGER HOUSE inside the same four walls sounds impossible of accomplishment—but it only sounds that way.

Gyproc is a fire-resistant wallboard made from gypsum rock. It comes in sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ½ of an inch thick. It nails and cuts just as easily as lumber and with a minimum of waste. It is used for making inside walls, ceilings and partitions.

It has structural strength, insulation value, is draught and vermin-proof and costs very little.

Gyproc that does not burn is exactly the material to use for it needs no decoration when panelled yet is an excellent base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

Get a Gyproc direction sheet from your dealer or write us for the FREE booklet, "Building and Remodelling with Gyproc".

3 Piece Breakfast Set FREE

EVERYBODY HAS A CHANCE

In our store window is a charming three-piece breakfast set, consisting of table and two Windsor chairs. The set is worth $20.

Somebody is going to win it. We'd like you to be the lucky one. Here's what you have to do:

FIRST:

The set is finished in a 50-50 blend of two shades of Brandram-Henderson Fast Drying Enamel. We want you to guess which two shades were used to obtain the main color with which the furniture is finished. (Disregard orange trimming.) To aid you, we shall give you a B-H color card. On this card are the two actual shades we used.

SECONDLY:

When you decide which two shades were used, buy a tin of any B-H paint product in our store. With your purchase, we shall give you a coupon on which is a number.

Write your guess on this coupon (name and address also) and give the coupon back to the clerk.

All coupons will be placed in a sealed box. On Saturday evening, September 26th., at 8 o'clock, a draw will take place in our store. The first coupon drawn from the box naming the correct two shades used.....wins the breakfast set!

Remember: To compete you must purchase a B-H paint product (no matter how small)

PUBLIC LIFE IS SELDOM A PAYING PROPOSITION

Some of the provincial newspapers are still speaking with a certain reverence of the $4,000 indemnity our M.P.'s receive for going to the front at Ottawa. And in these depressed and depressing times $4,000 is a lot of money. But after an amateur statesman has figured up his election expenses, made his subscription to every cat show or dog fight in his constituency, paid for four or five months' living in Ottawa, and looked at the deep dent his absence has made in his business or practice, he is lucky if he can figure a "five cent piece" to the good. Cabinet ministers who get $10,000 indemnity have been known to 000 per year in addition to $4,000 resign because they couldn't afford to hold on. Others have been known to hang on to the fleeting coat-tails of fame till death overtook them and left their families practically penniless. Ask the old-timers in the press gallery who for years have watched the ever changing personnel of the house. They'll tell of the scores who had bid good-bye to public life poorer if not wiser men. But they'll have to think hard to mention half a dozen who profited financially from their brief day of glory.

CIVILITY

The open sesame to the heart of the world.

Costs you nothing, entails no sacrifice, and what an opulence of pleasure follows in its train. Civility...our heritage. What wonderful potentialities are embodied in its teachings. Among the big vital issues of life, civility plays a prominent part.

Civility, the summit of our social structure. Civility, an objective of supreme desirability. It is a personal equation, and, as such, dissolves the grouch like water melts the winter's snow....It gives an added zest to the weary traveler, gives the timid a sense of relief, the aged a feeling of security. No labour union has ever been organized to regulate rules for civility. It is a worth while habit, all should cultivate. It goes further, means more, and brings better results, than the average individual realizes.

So cultivate civility...practice civility at all times, and never let your personal animosity mar your good judgment; as a kind word turneth away wrath, so will civility net you the good will of all you may come in contact with as you pass through life.

Those who bring sunshine to the lives of others cannot keep it from themselves.

"A thought of home! What sweet recollection mingle with that sound. Home, the sanctuary of the soul, the altar around which cluster the sweetest and purest affections, flowing from hearts all unused to selfishness, the nursery of heaven-born friendship, the harbour to which we may fly when the storms of adversity rise, & the mad waves of life's ocean lashed to fury, threaten to engulf our frail bark."

You are either drifting down stream with the tide and the dead ones, or you are pulling for all you are worth against the current of events. You cannot anchor, for life is one continuous voyage. You are either reading, studying, working, or you are fooling away your most valuable asset—time. If you are trying to improve yourself you are moving ahead. If your brain is full of nonsense you are drifting down the stream.

A Supper was held on Wednesday evening of this week, at Dalesville Regular Baptist Church to bid farewell to Rev. A. Penman and his family, who will sever his connections with the churches at Dalesville. Brownsburg and Lachute on Monday next, having received a call to Long Branch, Ont.

During his three years residence here, both Rev. and Mrs. Penman have made many warm friends and varied expressions of regret were heard, also well wishes for their future usefulness. Pastor H. C. Slade, of Timmins, Ont., was also present and gave a short address which was much appreciated by those present.

An advanced Superheterodyne Chassis has been built into four of the 1932 Models, just announced. Best of all, you can own this finer Superheterodyne radio for fewer dollars than ever before in Rogers history!

A timed 3-minute test of the new Rogers "Superhet" amazed even radio experts. You are invited to make a similar test at any Rogers dealer's store. Note particularly these four points:

1. Number of stations received.
2. How "sharp" each program comes in.
3. Freedom from interference of one station with another.
4. Quality of the tone... a weakness in some receivers employing superheterodyne circuits.

Other new 1932 Rogers Radios just placed on sale are the Tuned-Radio-Frequency Mantel Model at $74 and Lowboy at $94. See them today.

The Misses Jennie Staniforth Grace Boyd and Ruth Simon of Montreal were week-end guests of their parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gass and daughter Dorothy have returned to Everett, Mass., having spent the summer months here.

LAKEFIELD NOTES

There was a generous thank-offering for the Mission Budget Fund of the Diocese.

A most noticeable feature of the happy gathering was the presence of many most welcome visitors, who came from St. Andrews, Lachute Road, Lachute, etc., and furnished several Automobiles full of friends who participated in the enjoyment of those present.

The Ladies of the W.A. served a substantial & appetizing luncheon in the Gibb Parish Hall, at the close of the service and very many kind words of appreciation and encouragement were said which must have cheered and helped the faithful little band of earnest workers who had provided so abundantly for the occasion.

The Annual Harvest Festival of Trinity Church, Lakefield, was held on Thursday last and was a gratifying success in every way. The old church was decorated as usual and looked especially festive with its garnishings of vegetables, fruits and flowers. There was a large congregation and the hearty singing and responding with the inspiring sermon of Rev. Cecil Eccleston, of Montreal, made a service to be remembered by all participating.

Rowena Rides the Rumble

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT

Rowena was a little more touchy even than usual just at that time because she was having some trouble with her own work, and the fact that Mr. Rack had not been entirely satisfied with her last three stories had done nothing to improve her disposition.

When the picture done Peter's way, in spite of her—he turned the roadster east once more, Rowena retired sulkily to the rumble seat.

In Richmond they received a long telegram from Bobby Lowell. It was "Prepaid." As Rowena said afterward, "We should have known from that they were married." As indeed they were.

"Darlings," exclaimed the telegram extravagantly. "We did get married and my gown was lovely. Carter was going to sue the railroad but the conductor took him off and apologized so Carter gave him ten dollars instead. Can't we fly down and meet you some place and finish our honeymoons together—even if yours isn't real?"

Peter said he thought he had better answer that telegram and he wrote very fast indeed without one pause for thought.

Love, kisses and condolences I mean congratulations. As your honeymoon wazeth ours alas doth wane hence how could we twain ride opposite directions in one Rackruff? Anon."

"It doesn't seem to mean much," objected Rowena.

"It means plenty," said Peter firmly. "It means that our honeymoons aren't riding the same sky if I can help it. Carter'll understand."

They were increasingly quiet as they neared New York and the end of their adventure. Peter thought Rowena was troubled about the future because she often referred to things she might do and regretted that her work had fallen off. "If I had kept up as well as I started I could land a good job on the strength of it," she said ruefully.

"You can, anyhow. Your work, as a whole, has been top-notch. You were good down to the last adjective. The trouble was that in the beginning you were so superlative you got them to expecting miracles. Never begin at the top," he advised her wisely. "It leaves no place to climb to. Anyhow," he added slyly, "you must have saved up enough on your expense money to keep the children in bread & milk for a long time—what with doing your own laundry and living on soup and cheese."

"Well—some," she admitted evasively.

"Do you suppose we'll ever be real good friends, Rowena? And never quarrel again?"

"I'm good friends now! I've been friends from the very first. I am really fond of you, Peter, but you're so darn mean the angels themselves couldn't get along with you."

"That's odd. Every one has always remarked what a good disposition I have. —No credit to me," he added modestly. "I was born with it."

"People are so dumb," sighed Rowena.

"Do you think your judge will have any trouble getting the annulment?"

"No."

"How long will it take?"

"I don't know."

"When will he start?"

"He's started now."

"Started now! Why, what do you mean?"

"I wrote to him the day we were married and told him to go ahead with the preliminaries so he could put it through with a rush."

Peter resented that. "I think it was needlessly insulting of you, Rowena! To spread the news like that the day we were married."

"Married! Oh, tish, tosh & even tush! That was no marriage."

"No. But it was nasty of you just the same."

"I'm sorry you feel that way about it, Peter," she said gently. "I did not mean to be offensive. I assure you. I really thought I was doing the stitch-in-time sort of thing."

"Do you think you'll ever marry the judge?"

"I don't think I'll marry anybody. I hate men."

"What are you going to do when we get home, Peter?"

"Oh work at something, I suppose. I don't know just what. Maybe I'll go to Paris."

"You can't go until we get that annulment. They will need you here to swear that we didn't—that we never—that we never were really married, or anything."

"How long will it take?"

"Why? Are you in such a hurry for your freedom?"

"No. I was just wondering."

"What do you intend to do first, Rowena?" Peter asked.

"Oh, I really don't know. Write up those stories perhaps."

"No plans for the far future?"

"No. Maybe I'll keep house for Buddy when he gets through school. Maybe I'll get married."

"But you say you hate men!"

"So I do. That's the only way to get even with them."

From Pennsylvania Peter wanted to cut through as quickly as possible into New Jersey and home that way. He said it was shorter and he knew the roads.

Rowena, on the other hand, wanted to go up through Pennsylvania. She admitted it was a longer route, but said she would try to endure a few more days of Peter's company for the sake of the scenery. Peter didn't argue with her. He just turned off and went over the Water Gap into New Jersey. Then they realized indeed that they were nearing home, for New Jersey was their neighbor and Peter recognized every road and landmark. The sign-posts began to give mileage to New York seventy-five miles, sixty miles and then fifty.

They had luncheon at a lovely little wayside place near a cool blue lake and Peter said if Rowena would excuse him a few minutes he wanted to call up some people in New York.

"Gosh, but you're in a rush to get in touch with everybody," she protested irritably. "suppose you'd like me to call up the judge and ask him to have the papers ready for us to sign tonight."

Peter didn't say anything, but went on into the telephone booth. When he came back his face showed a little white under his summer's tan and his lips were grimly locked.

"I suppose she had another date," said Rowena disagreeably. "And I'm glad of it."

Peter had nothing to say, but when they had reached the next town he said he hoped Rowena wouldn't mind waiting as he had a little shopping to do.

"Shopping!" she ejaculated. "Shopping within forty miles of home? what do you want? Is it anything I can lend you?"

"Oh, no, nothing like that," said Peter vaguely. "Just some odds and ends—little souvenirs—presents, you know—nothing much."

"You would go through Yellowstone and the Rocky Mountains and buy your souvenirs in New Jersey," she remarked coldly.

When he came back his arms pretty well filled with stoutly tied bundles, Rowena and Constance were under the umbrella in the rumble seat.

"For heaven's sake—" he began impatiently.

"It's a sort of sentiment with me," she said. "I would never feel that we had a grandstand finish unless we breezed into Times Square in our regular traveling order. You can put your souvenirs in Bobby's place."

Rowena slumped lower and lower in the rumble seat as he drove swiftly along the heavily shaded roads. She did not feel at all well. In a way, she almost believed she was sorry it was over. It had been fun—all except Peter. It would have been great glorious—without Peter. Rowena certainly was not feeling well. Her heart was leaden within her. Two large tears forced themselves under her hot lips and through the silken lashes. Rowena closed her eyes and pretended she was asleep.

"If Peter thinks I've got anything to cry about, he's crazy,"

At a sudden lurch of the car she opened her eyes. Much to her surprise she saw that they were far from the state highway, and following a narrow dirt road through a thick piece of woods. She tapped on the window.

"Peter, you're off the road. This isn't the way to New York."

"I know it. It's a short cut."

Rowena sighed. "I knew I should watch you," she resignedly.

Presently he turned off from the dirt road into a narrow wood lane, no more than a cow-path it seemed. Rowena knew instantly it would never take them any place at all. She knocked on the window again.

"Peter, you're lost. This road doesn't go anywhere!"

The cow-path turned abruptly up a sharp and jagged hill and ended abruptly at the foot of an immense boulder in the very heart of the forest.

"It's a dead end," said Rowena. "What did I tell you?"

Peter got out of the car and went back, very slowly, to stand beside her, folding his arms rigidly on the rim of the rumble. She noticed immediately how very grim he looked, and his lips set. She stared deeply into his eyes, her lashes still wet with tears, and waited for him to speak.

"Get out, Rowena," he said at last thickly. "This is our last stop."

"Why, we can be in New York in two hours!" she protested faintly. "We've had our luncheon—there's nothing here to stop for!"

"Get out," he repeated doggedly. "We're staying here tonight."

Rowena looked at him wonderingly and put out her hand, slender and unburned, pink palm upturned and fingers curling. Peter ignored the silent appeal of it.

"Rowena," he said, his voice grown low and strange, "you've made a damned fool of me day after day the whole summer. You've made me the laughing-stock of reporters and hotel clerks and automobile mechanics from coast to coast—not to mention the kick your friends in New York are getting out of my predicament. Well, it's my turn an annulment, you may get a divorce, you may get anything you damn please, but you're my wife—you're married to me—"

"But—not really married—"

Peter—

"Well, you are going to be, and pretty damn quick," he said decidedly.

With a wave of his hand he indicated a little log cabin, deserted and still, that showed above the boulder in the thick of the forest.

"We're honeymooning here till Monday."

Rowena blinked her lashes very fast indeed. She fumbled around in the pocket of the rumble until she found rouge, powder and lip-stick and painstakingly repaired the ravages of travel. After that she looked at Peter and laughed.

"You—you're good-natured about it," he said.

"Of course," she declared gaily. "This is an accident. Accidents never make me mad."

"Well, save up as much good humor as you can," he told her. "You're going to need a lot of it between now and Monday."

Rowena looked about her. The little cabin as tucked away snugly in a huge cleft of great rocks and about it on every side towered broad-branched trees, beginning to show gold and blood-red with the touch of autumn. Somewhere, near a noisy brook chattered down-hill over the stones. And there was no wandering woodsmen in all the length and breadth of the forest.

"It belongs to a friend of mine," said Peter. "That's what I phoned about—to say we were tired and would appreciate the use of the cabin for a few days?"

"Are—are we to be quite alone here?" she inquired casually.

"Quite alone."

"It—it will make it—difficult—about the annulment."

"That," said Peter haughtily, "is up to your friend the judge."

Rowena put her hand on his arm.

"Peter," she said gently, "don't do anything rash. You'd better think it over."

Here and There

Ontario gold production for the half year to June 30 reached $20,608,195, the greatest on record. Indications are that the output for the full year 1931 will be well over $41,000,000 in value.

Working at the rate of a mile a day and employing a daily average of 450 men, completion of rockballasting in the Ontario district from Windsor to Smiths Falls on the Canadian Pacific tracks was announced recently.

Canadian hens are working much harder than their ancestors of ten years ago. In 1920, statistics show that 6010 birds produced an average of 122.1 eggs apiece. This average rose steadily until in 1930 it was 178 eggs per bird.

New Brunswick moose and deer will make their debut on the talkie screen this Fall while the famous moose calls of New Brunswick guides will be recorded in sound for the edification of millions of patrons in thousands of theatres across the continent.

The site of the first cheese factory in Canada, located in Oxford County, Ontario, will be marked with a cairn as an historic site. There are now more than 2,800 factories in Canada making butter or cheese, and the cheese production exceeds 150,000,000 pounds yearly.

"Generally satisfactory," is the comment on wheat grading in the Prairie Provinces, according to reports coming in from the Agricultural Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Winnipeg. Wheat cutting in the West was virtually completed by the middle of September and rather more than half of it was threshed at that time.

Playing spectacular golf, F. G. Hoblitzel, of the Lambton Club, Toronto, defeated Phillip Farley, Ontario amateur champion, in the finals of the Prince of Wales Trophy, played at the Banff Springs Golf Course in September. Sixteen players from all over Canada and the United States, qualified for the title fight.

Award of three scholarships at McGill University to minor sons of Canadian Pacific employees has been made to M. M. Madge, D. K. Gowans and Keith W. Shaw. The scholarships provide for five years' tuition in architecture and chemical engineering, all fees being met until the recipients have taken their degrees as Bachelors of Science.

"We are coming to realize that most of our national problems have an international background and can only be solved by international co-operation," declared Hon. Vincent Massey, former Canadian Minister at Washington when sailing recently on the Empress of Canada at the head of the Canadian delegation to the forthcoming conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations at Hangchow, China.

"Jim" McKenna, dean of passenger travelling agents and friend of presidents, passengers and porters from Saint John to Victoria and from Montreal to New Orleans, with over 4,000,000 miles of railway travel to his credit, died recently at Quebec in his 79th year. His intimate knowledge of the Chinese whom he accompanied across Canada earned him the sobriquet of the "Chinese Ambassador" and "The Man darin."

THE Finest Flat Wall Finish

WALPAMUR, the famous flat finish, in this room was applied on an insulating wall-board.

It can be applied on any type of wall or ceiling surface from attic to cellar.

It is washable, and therefore the ideal sanitary decoration for children's rooms.

It is easy to apply, permanent, fire-retarding, and most economical.

It gives a lovely soft light-diffusing effect, and is made in a wide range of modern colors.

Consult your decorator or dealer. Ask him for a shade card, or write to us direct.

World's Grain Exhibition and Conference

REGINA 1932

Farmers Will Win $210,750.00 in Prizes

The World's Grain Exhibition and Conference offers Canadian farmers an opportunity to share in cash prizes amounting to $210,750.00. Comprised in 50 competitive classes, open to the whole world, are 1,701 cash prizes. A few of the major awards follow:

- $2,500 a first prize for 50 pounds of wheat 30 pounds of oats
- $1,500 for 40 pounds of barley, 50 pounds of rye.
- $ 800 for 10 ears of corn
- $ 300 for 30 pounds of peas, 30 pounds of flax, 20 pounds of clover.

With this splendid opportunity before them, Canadian farmers should keep a watchful eye on their growing crops. They should mark for special care those areas that appear most promising.

It should be understood that all seed and grain samples, if they are not already selected, will have to be found in crops of this year. All exhibits must be received by the Exhibition authorities on or before March 1, 1932.

Of vital importance to the advancement of Canadian agriculture will be the winning of World Championships in 1932 by farmers of Canada. Their seed and grain exhibits must demonstrate to the world the quality of Canada's field crops.

Select the classes from the prize list most suited to the crop you grow, then select your samples from the best you have.

It is best to make your entry NOW.

Your sample for exhibit must be in the hands of the Secretary at Regina on or before March 1, 1932.

Valuable information relating to the preparation of grain and seed for exhibit may be secured by writing to the Secretary of the Provincial Committee, World's Grain Exhibition and Conference, care Department of Agriculture, your own province.

Show what you grow and share what you know

On application, the Secretary, World's Grain Exhibition and Conference, Imperial Bank Chambers, Regina, will send you prize lists, rules and regulations governing competitive entries and all other information.

Valuable Idea of Young Durrow

By JACK WOODFORD

"THERE'S a very bright young man in the outer office that I'd like you to meet," Mr. Simpkins said to Durrow, who was frowning daggers at last month's balance sheet. Simpkins knew that Durrow must be tremendously pleased with the balance sheet; he always frowned like that when he was pleased. When he looked blank and mild—then it was time to look for one of those sarcastic interjections that meant somebody's job.

"Seen enough bright young men," Durrow growled. "Got one at home. A silly, good-for-nothing freak. And all he can think of is that I ought to blow him to a big income and let him play for five years before he settles down to business. . . . Try to tell him that it took me years to learn this business, and that his college education isn't worth a whoop without practical experience and he tells me too many men don't get rich till they're too old to enjoy it. What a philosophy. Play when you're young and work when you're old. Who ever heard of such a thing?"

"Well," Simpkins mildly remarked, "this, sir, is not that kind of young man. He's the one, in fact, responsible for the fact that we're showing an increased balance sheet this month, despite the depression, while every other furniture establishment in the city is in the red."

"What do you mean?" roared Durrow.

"You see, sir . . . we've been instructed not to bother you with detail, but to get results; so I, as sales manager, went ahead and got results. But I must confess that were it not for this young man and his suggestion—I've offered him a permanent position in my department, but he has declined, and asks only to meet you. You see, he went to all the well situated vacant stores he could find in town, and got options on their windows, until such time as the stores were rented. He got the Chamber of Commerce to back him, on the theory that vacant stores were a very embarrassing reminder of business depression, and would look better if they had something in their display windows anyway; sort of gave the town a cheerful air. The young man rented the store windows for next to nothing, representing that a display would draw the attention of people; and once their attention had been drawn toward how nice the store looked with its window trimmed, it might be easier to find a tenant. He came to me with these options, and offered to rent this firm all of this window display space in vacant stores all over town. I thought it was a splendid as well as a cheap means of advertising. We sent single pieces or whole sets of furniture to each of the stores and got up tasty displays."

"You'd be surprised how effective it was. Of course we put placards in the store windows, to the effect that the goods displayed were our furniture; giving, naturally, our business address, prices, our arrangement for credit terms, etc. We traced thousands of dollars' worth of sales direct to those vacant store window displays. It would have cost us a ruinous sum in advertising, in any other way, to bring in the same sales. The young man cleaned up, we cleaned up, and now he wants to meet you."

"Mean to tell me an outsider got us out of our difficulties!" Durrow thundered. But Mr. Simpkins was not fooled. He knew that Durrow was tickled right down to the ground, and was dying to see the young man.

"I'll tell him you're too busy to see him," Simpkins said smoothly.

"Tell him nothing of the kind!" Durrow snorted. "Send him in."

When the young man was sent in, Durrow rose from his desk. Fell back into his chair. Rose again. Bellowed something.

"This is Mr. Walter Smith," Simpkins said smoothly.

"Walter Smith!" roared Durrow. "You're crazy. It's Walter Durrow. What sort of frameup have you two been—"

Walter grinned at Simpkins. "He thinks it's a frameup," Walter told him, "because just the other night he told me I couldn't make a thousand dollars by honest means in a year; and when I said I could, he told me if I did he'd give me ten for every dollar I made honestly my first six months out of school. He now owes me twenty-four thousand dollars."

"You fool!" Durrow roared at Simpkins. "You've cost me more than the profits on our balance sheet. Get out of my sight." Simpkins beat a hasty retreat.

Durrow stared at his offspring almost in apoplexy; but the offspring had understood that stare since childhood.

It took Durrow four hours to recover from the writing of a check for twenty-four thousand dollars; but when he had, he sought Simpkins. There was the frown of a Gorgon on his face. He shoved open the door to Simpkins's office with a thrust that all but took it off its hinges.

"Can you imagine!" he asked Simpkins, handing him a cigar, "that boy's inheriting his father's business ability even in spite of his having a college education! Sent him off to romp awhile. Young fellow ought to enjoy himself while he's young; plenty of time for sober work later on."

"Precisely," agreed Mr. Simpkins, without the twitch of an eyelash.

Vankleek Hill Field Day.

Favoured with splendid weather, a very enjoyable re-union concluded the three days' fair at Vankleek Hill, on Saturday. A large crowd was in attendance when the track events were run off, and some exciting finishes were witnessed. The officials of this popular meeting deserve a special word of praise for the courteous and efficient manner in which the meeting was conducted. Everything was carried out in a pleasant and capable manner down to the smallest detail.

The athletes responded with true sportsmanship and keen competition. When one sees the fine talent, so obviously untrained, it seems a pity that our athletic officials would not devote a little more time to postening athletics among the country boys, by promoting meets in the various small towns, providing an national coach to lecture and assist on training methods and organizing athletic clubs for the promotion of clean interesting competition as we have witnessed at Vankleek Hill.

Saturday next will see a further "gathering of the clans" at Brownsburg. Several prominent M.A.A.A. men have promised to compete and a series of splendid medals are offered for competition. Granted favourable weather an enjoyable afternoon should be experienced. We are hopeful that Lachute will take the cue and hold a meeting before the season passes.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Lachute, Sept. 23rd., 1931.

Editor Watchman, Lachute.

Dear Sir,—

After reading the news in last week's "Watchman" about the appointment of Mr. Geo. Rodgers to the position of Registrar, I decided to write to you.

It hurts me deeply to think that a returned man who lost a brother in the service of his Country should be ousted from his position which rightfully belongs to him, by a man who may have a little political pull. This shows how little some of the people of this County care for the boys who offered their lives to protect them.

I am enclosing a piece of poetry which I have written on this subject and I trust you will be able to find space to publish same.

I remain,

Very truly yours,

TED. HAMMOND.

Men of Argenteuil! where are you?

Do you stand for wrong or right?

Do you stand for truth and justice

Or let others for you fight.

When the world was rent asunder

'Twas you who bade your boys to go

'Twas you who bade them do the fighting

Stand between you and the foe.

But now the bloody war is over

And the boys are home again

Can they not now take their places

With the very best of men

Their's has been a road of travail

Fighting hard and dying too,

Just to keep your name unblemished,

That is what they've done for you.

Now you've gone and let your soldiers

Get along as best they can,

Take from one his meagre living

And give it to another man

Do you think that that is justice

To the boys who went to war

Is that the way that you now treat them

Is that what they were fighting for?

Don't you think that in all fairness

You should give that one his due

Creed or party do not matter,

When he's done so much for you

He who took your place in battle

When you'd surely have to go,

Can't you now in part repay him,

The debt of gratitude you owe.

STANDARD BRANDS LTD. EXPANDING THROUGHOUT DOMINION

New Buildings for Montreal & Halifax Larger Quarters in Edmonton and Saskatoon

Montreal - Corwin Wickersham, president of Standard Brands Limited has recently announced a program of expansion for the company that includes new office buildings in both Montreal and Halifax and new, larger premises in Edmonton & Saskatoon. He further states that this expansion is a direct result of the steady growth in popularity of all Standard Brands products since the merger of Fleischmann's Yeast, Chase & Sanborn, E. W. Gillett & Co., Limited, and Royal Baking Powder, two years ago.

The new building in Montreal will serve as headquarters in the Montreal District for all Divisions of the company. It will provide increased storage facilities for all products, and at the same time permit of the concentration of all activities, other than manufacturing, under one roof. This new structure completes, for the present, the development plans started in Montreal, just over a year ago, when the new, million dollar Fleischmann's Yeast plant was erected at Ville La Salle.

Similarly in the Maritimes & West, the new larger quarters being taken over in Halifax, Edmonton and Saskatoon are part of the company's plan to provide improved facilities for the sales and handling of Standard Brands Products in all parts of the Dominion.

Flaky Pie Crust

The secret of making good pie crust is: "Use Purity Flour—and keep the dough dry!" Try this recipe—for 2 shells:

3 cups Purity Flour 1 cup lard

3/4 teaspoon salt 1 cup cold water.

METHOD: Mix the flour and salt, cutting in half the shortening until the mixture is like fine meal, gradually adding exact quantity of water but not a drop more. Use less water, if you can, and the pie crust will be even flakier.

Turn out on board very lightly sprinkled with Purity Flour, roll about 3/4-inch thick. Spread balance of shortening over dough, fold over three times and roll again to required thickness. Bake in hot oven (450°).

EXTRA FOOHOLD means CHEAPER PLOWING

WATCH a tug-of-war team on the end of a rope. Note how easily and steadily the boys pull when they have a firm foothold—how they slip and slither if they have no holes to brace their feet.

The same principle applies to a tractor. The more traction it has, the easier and steadier it pulls—less slipping—less waste of power. That can mean only one thing—more actual work from every gallon of fuel—cheaper plowing, cheaper cultivating, etc.

Look at the long, wide tracks of the "Caterpillar"—compare "Caterpillar" traction with that of any other tractor—then you will see why "Caterpillar" owners save so much on their fuel bills.

CORRESPONDENCE

Editor Watchman, Lachute.

As the date of my return to Lachute is uncertain I have asked Mrs. Squires and Miss Prime to take charge of the sending of flower slips and ferns to the Montreal Flower Mission, and I have written the secretary, Miss H. I. Bishop, Room, 101, Forum Building, Atwater Ave., Montreal, to tell her, and to ask her what date would suit them to have them sent in. She has charge of arrangements for transportation with the C. P. R. and as soon as the date is received here, the notice will be put in the Watchman through the courtesy of Mr. J. S. Giles.

Thanking everyone who has in any way contributed to the marked success of the Lachute branch and hoping that we shall all find some way of expressing in a practical manner our sympathy with the deserving unemployed.

I am, yours very sincerely,
KATE MASSIAH.

REVIEW: THE SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY IN ASIA

GOLDEN TEXT—And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Giving the Gospel to Asia.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Spread of the Gospel in Asia.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Early Christian Triumphs.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christianity Becomes a World Religion.

The interests of the quarter are so varied, the personalities brought to view so interesting, that the grade of the class and the genius of the teacher will readily determine the method of review. Two methods are suggested for senior and adult classes. Assignment of work a week in advance is required in both cases:

1. A study of the persons actively concerned in the lessons with the object of discerning the strong and weak points in the character of each.

2. A summary of the facts and teachings of the lessons for the quarter. The following suggestions are offered for the second method:

Lesson for July 5.

The missionary program is for the gospel to be preached to the whole world, beginning at Jerusalem. The supreme obligation of the Church is to evangelize the world. This can only be done in the energy of the Holy Spirit.

Lesson for July 12.

After the Spirit came upon the disciples at Pentecost, their supreme impulse was to preach the gospel. In spite of opposition, even imprisonment and threatened death, the disciples preached Christ in the energy of the Holy Spirit.

Lesson for July 19.

The primitive Church spent much time in prayer. The Spirit of God was upon them. Therefore, they boldly testified for Christ and systematically cared for the poor and needy.

Lesson for July 26.

Christianity spread by persecution. Christ declared himself to be the way, the truth, and the life. Missionary endeavor is but the life of God expressing itself through redeemed men by the Holy Spirit. Christianity is therefore indestructible.

Lesson for August 2.

In taking the gospel to the Samaritans we see the broadening scope of the Church. The leader in this work of evangelizing is Philip, one of the seven deacons. He seems to have been the only one ever called "evangelist." If the world is ever to be evangelized, it must be done through the activities of the laity.

Lesson for August 9.

Saul was arrested in his mad effort to stamp out Christianity by the direct interference of the Lord. His conversion illustrates the transformation of the Jewish nation. One of these days the multitudes of that nation shall see Jesus Christ, their Messiah. Penitently and enthusiastically they shall proceed to complete the task for which they were ordained.

Lesson for August 16.

Gracious justification by faith is the dynamic for right living. The one thus experiencing the life of God through faith will manifest the fruit of the Spirit, living a temperate life.

Lesson for August 23.

In the conversion of Cornelius we see the missionary program widening to embrace the Gentiles. In this connection the Holy Spirit was poured out anew.

Lesson for August 30.

The sending out of Barnabas and Saul marks the beginning of foreign missions as the deliberately planned enterprise of the Church. The Holy Spirit calls and sends out missionaries.

Lesson for September 6.

When foreign missionary work began in earnest, Saul took the place of leadership, since he was called to be the apostle to the Gentiles.

Lesson for September 13.

The treatment accorded Paul in his missionary work shows the attitude of the world toward Jesus Christ. Such behavior reveals the awful need of the saving power of the gospel.

Lesson for September 20.

The speech of James at the Jerusalem council shows the outline of God's plan. It is through the preaching of the gospel to take out from the Gentiles a people for his name, which is now going on. Afterward Israel, as a nation, shall be converted, following which shall be the conversion of the whole world through the agency of converted Israel.

No Man is a Blank

"Every man is a missionary, now and forever, for good or for evil, whether he intends it or not. He may be a blot radiating his dark influence outward to the very circumference of society; or he may be a blessing, spreading benediction over the length and breadth of the world; but a blank he cannot be."—Doctor Chalmers.

Perfectly Clean...

THE NORTHERN ELECTRIC-ABC

Washer will handle a sheet, a bath towel or the laiciest garment with equal care and thoroughness. The clothes dance in the soapy water like live things, protected from injury by smooth porcelain. They emerge ready to decorate your lines in the sun.

Handsome in appearance, silent in operation, with a capacity equivalent to eighty sheets an hour, this washer stands supreme among modern inventions to lighten labour. The wringer can be swung into eight different positions, resulting in much greater convenience of operation.

Every ABC Washer bears the Northern Electric "Approved Appliance" SEAL, which means that you can rely on its perfect service.
