AYERS VICTORS OVER INDEPENDENTS IN LEAGUE FIXTURE

Lachute ice was the scene last Wednesday, 27th. of the seventh game of the local league series, when Ayers' Limited won over Independents with 3 goals to 2. H. Prevost handled the whistle in his usual capable manner, but the play was clean and brisk, to a degree creditable to our Lachute puck chasers. L. Prevost made the only score in first period for Independents. P. Patrie and B. Patrie distinguished themselves in the second, scoring for the Ayers team, and Giroux evened up the count at the end of this period with another goal for Independents.

The Mills boys put forth a decided effort in the final encounter, and B. Patrie whipped the rubber in the net to win the game for Ayers Limited. The score closed at 3-2.

The line-up:

Ayers Limited: B. Patrie, goal; G. McFaul, and S. Langille, defence; Mirron, centre; H. Joly and O. Tessier, wings. Subs.—Gagne, P. Patrie.

Independents: Church, goal; Giroux and W. Drew, defence; Jones, centre; Cousineau and Cruise wings. Subs.—Beauchamp, Prevost, St. Jean, C. Drew.

ST. THERESE—LACHUTE AT LOCAL RINK

Saturday night was cold and blustery but a large crowd braved the elements to watch an encounter between St. Therese & the Independents on our home ice.

Our local sextette went into the lead in the initial session, to the tune of 3-1, G. Lefebvre, L. Cruise and W. Drew scoring for Independents, and Senecal on the visitors' wing.

St. Therese boys were keen to even the score in the second stanza, but a goal by Turbois was reciprocated by another triumph by P. Lefebvre, which left our local stars still in the lead, with 4-2.

Both teams exhibited some fast and interesting hockey in the final period and both succeeded in adding two goals to their credit, closing the score at 6-4 for Lachute.

Line-up:

St. Therese: Richer, goal; Guindon and Charron, defence; Secartier, centre; Senecal and Laroche wing. Subs.—Richer, Turbois.

Independents: Church, goal; Giroux and G. Lefebvre, defence; P. Lefebvre, centre; L. Cruise and Cousineau wing. Subs.—Beauchamp, W. Drew, C. Drew, St. Jean.

BROWNSBURG WIN OVER HAWKESBURY

Playing on local ice and before a large crowd Brownsburg won a well earned victory over Hawkesbury on Saturday night.

The excellent display of goal tending on the part of both goalers prevented any scoring in the initial period. In the second period Charlebois opened the score for Brownsburg on a neat pass from Moncrieff. In the same period Moncrieff circled the Hawkesbury nets to make the most spectacular scoring play of the evening. The second period ended 2-0 for Brownsburg.

From the start of the third period Hawkesbury made a determined effort to even the count and were partially successful when McAllister scored for the visitors on a pass from Rooney. However the 'Burg boys soon retaliated, when Charlebois made another goal from an assist from Moncrieff and they were able to maintain the lead until the final whistle. The final score was 3-1.

Both teams played a hard clean game and provided an excellent evening's entertainment for the many who had turned out to support the home team. Before the opening of the

Lachute is Proud of Its Lady Curlers

Mrs. H. McFaul, Mrs. W. J. Deacon, Miss E. Fraser, Mrs. E. H. Wilson

Proud of our Ladies! Why, we surely are; and justly so because of their splendid work in contesting for the coveted Caledonian Trophy, which drew 32 teams in strong competition. Both Lachute teams, skipped respectively by Mrs. Drew and Mrs. E. H. Wilson, went right through the contest with flying colors until the semi-finals when Mrs. Drew's team, comprising Mrs. N. McNeil, Mrs. A. Middleton, Mrs. W. Cottingham and Mrs. Drew, were defeated by points. However, Mrs. Wilson was more fortunate and in the closing game at the Thistle Rink, carried off the honors, winning the Cup, which was proudly brought home to Lachute along with a splendid tea service given by the Caledonia Club.

The coveted cup is a five year trophy and, under the terms of its presentation, with the lapse of the five years it was necessary to play off for permanent possession. The cup was won consecutively by Outremont, Lachine, Lachute and twice by Three Rivers. These teams played off on Monday and Tuesday of this week and the finals were conducted between Lachute and Three Rivers, with the result that the latter won out by one point in the 14th. end; so this particular Cup will permanently adorn the Club Rooms of Three Rivers.

The contest was watched with the keenest interest by friends of both sides, who manifested the true sporting spirit throughout and all players were cheered for good work by the on-lookers, irrespective of where favors were leaning.

Mrs. Wm. Deacon gained the title of "No-Miss Redcap," from a reputation duly merited.

The Three Rivers winners, under the able skipping of Mrs. Balcer, were the same team who defeated Mrs. Drew in the finals of three years ago.

Following the game and prior to the presentation, it was announced that Mr. E. H. Wilson had kindly donated a new trophy for competition on the same terms.

To have played eight continuous games and won seven in succession is a feat which is very notable and our Lachute Ladies have set a record which will take some beating.

A dinner is being given on Thursday evening in their honour, also for the winners of the Junior Bonspeil.

The Wilson Challenge Cup was played for on Monday; the winning rink comprised Miss Lila Giles, Miss Jean McGibbon, Miss Barron, Mrs. J. MacGibbon, skip, against Mrs. Bothwell, Mrs. S. McFaul, Mrs. F. Brennan, Miss Margaret Walker, Skip. Score 18 — 9.

Arthur Meighen will Lead the Senate

Appointment of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen to the Senate and his selection as government leader in the Upper Chamber is now regarded as practically certain. It is understood that the appointment of Mr. Meighen to Senate will be made very soon. His selection as leader of the government forces in the Senate will follow at a Conservative caucus slated for the opening day of Parliament. Hon. W. B. Willoughby, of Moose Jaw, has been government leader during past sessions, but is resigning the leadership.

With Mr. Meighen as leader the government forces in the Senate will be directed by a man who is regarded as being one of the best parliamentary debaters of the day. Both during his period as a minister under Sir Robert Borden, as Prime Minister and as leader of the opposition Mr. Meighen excelled in parliamentary discussion. He has had extended political experience both in and out of Parliament.

Y. P. S. OF BROWNSBURG AND LACHUTE MEET

A good "Old Time" sleigh drive brought the Young People's Society of Brownsburg to Lachute last Monday evening, where they joined in happy fellowship at the United Church Hall with the Lachute Society. The two presidents, Messrs. Wheeler and Smith, conducted the meeting, and an interesting programme was prepared by the Brownsburg Society. The devotional period was followed by several instrumental and vocal selections. These were greatly enjoyed as was evidenced by the appreciative applause. Refreshments were then served by the local society and the meeting concluded with games and a sing-song.

Having received the kind invitation for a return visit, the Lachute Society is hopefully anticipating another "Old Time" sleigh drive to Brownsburg in the near future.

Speaker Stresses the Evils of Alcohol

Ira W. Pierce occupies United Church Pulpit on his Annual Visit Here.

Mr. Ira W. Pierce, secretary of the Quebec League against Alcohol, occupied the pulpit at the United Church last Sunday, conjointly with the pastor, Rev. Mr. Rosborough. Mr. Rosborough conducted the devotional service and introduced the speaker, who proceeded to deal with the various phases of our Provincial Liquor Commission's activities. Their method of regulating the sale and purchase of intoxicating liquors, he declared, was synonymous—in the minds of not a few—with "an easy way of getting quantities of whisky at frequent times."

Mr. Pierce was in good form—earnest, clear, orderly, logical and confident. His facts were emphasised by quotations from official reports and propaganda issued by the liquor interests. The speaker found that, after making due allowances for large quantities of liquor exported from the province by bootleggers and quantities consumed by summer visitors, the money expended by people of Quebec for liquor was still a stupendous amount—representing many millions of dollars. This factor is bad enough, regardless of the degrading effect upon human beings—involving quarrels, accidents, and crime. And while this goes on, Legislators continue in their seats of authority to say "See our profits!"

Speculating on prospects of a change for the better, Mr. Pierce found no immediate hope insofar as legislation is concerned. Premiers pride themselves on their systems of liquor control—but fathers, mothers, husbands, wives, and even the youth of today, cry out for deliverance.

The multitudinous advertisements for various brands of liquor, came in for indignant and heartfelt criticism. Advertising finds copious place in the large dailies of the English press, in Montreal, the illustration

Quebec Voting System Under Study

Changes in the voting machinery of provincial elections in this province are under study by the public bills committee of the legislative assembly.

The changes, in the nature of amendments to the Quebec Elections Act, were proposed before the assembly last week by Premier L. A. Taschereau.

Simplified Ballot papers with a stub instead of a counterfoil, an elaborate system of vote list revision for rural areas, abolition of the "election agent," uniform use of daylight saving time on election days, and a few other changes are incorporated in the amendments.

Premier Taschereau also proposed to eliminate the shifting of voters' names from one parish to another.

Most important of the suggestions was one that "the election of a candidate shall not be annulled by reasons of infringements of this act if the court concludes that such infringement could not have changed or materially affected the result of the election."

C. E. Gault, house leader of the Conservative opposition, suggested Quebec adopt the federal system and model an act on the new federal law, which functioned for the first time in the Dominion elections of 1930.

Lachute United Church Reports Good Year

The annual meeting of Lachute United Church was held on Friday January 29, in the Church Hall. The Minister, Rev. W. B. Rosborough, B.D. presided, and Inspector J. W. McQuat acted as Secretary.

Encouraging reports were presented by all organizations. The treasurer, Dr. G. A. Clunie, reported that the total receipts from all sources amounted to $9611.00, a debt of $200.00 had been paid off, all other obligations discharged, and a balance of $116.00 left in the treasury at the beginning of the new year. The Presbytery's allocation of $2500.00 for the Missionary and Maintenance Fund was raised in full. The Women's Missionary Societies raised the sum of $935.00, the Ladies' Aid Societies $564.00, and the Young Peoples' Society, $182.00. The Sabbath Schools, the Mission Band, the Choir, the C.G. I. T. Groups and the outlying districts of East Settlement and Thomas' Gore presented encouraging and highly gratifying reports. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Rev. W. B. Rosborough for all that he had done to make the year one of the most successful that the congregation has thus far enjoyed. Recognition was also made of the faithful and painstaking service which Dr. Clunie has rendered as Treasurer of the Church.

At the close of the business meeting a pleasant social hour was spent, refreshments being provided by the wives of the members of the Official Board.

The Captain's Corner

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER.

"CARRY ON"

Dear Boys :

This week I want to tell you a little war story. It happened that there were a few, very few, British soldiers occupying what was called an 'out post' a little in advance and on the extreme right of the front line of trenches which faced the enemy. That the enemy was well aware of this isolated section was proved by the fact that all that day and the previous night they had shelled it badly. Under this cruel fire, the small boy of men in charge of a young officer, a sergeant and corporal, held out; though one after another they were either killed or badly wounded.

At last the time came when only the officer, the corporal, and four men remained and as they were wondering what they should do about it, a bomb was dropped from the air and exploded so badly that the Officer was seriously wounded. Knowing that he had but a few moments to live he turned to the Corporal and said with a pitiful smile. "Carry on, Corporal." Quite soon, for things move swiftly in war time, the Corporal found that he and one other only remained. Sheltering themselves as much as possible and keeping up a steady fire with their rifles they held on grimly expecting death at any moment. Just as they had given up all hope, they were suddenly reinforced by their comrades and the position held.

They had obeyed the dying officer's order and simply "carried on."

You like that story? It applies to you. I can hear you say "Yes, they had to do that because given the post of honour and danger it had to be held, be the cost what it may."

You are right. Being British you could not think anything else; but, and here I want you to take particular notice. This great ideal does not apply only to times of war, it is essential also in periods of peace, IN OUR DAILY LIFE WE ALSO HAVE TO "CARRY ON."

You boys are given the "post" of honour, in your school, in your home, in your games, and you simply have to "carry on."

It is not easy, even at times it is very difficult, shadows come and the way appears often dark. You are then tempted to retire out of the fight. I am confident that the Corporal was so tempted—but you must bravely hold on. The battle is not always to the swift or strong and you have at all times the hope that in some way or other, often from the most unexpected quarters, help will be given you.

So my message to you this week is that no matter how difficult, how even hopeless your efforts may be. "CARRY ON."

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

Chapter 5.

The sun was shining brilliantly from a cloudless sky and the sea undoubtedly looked its best as the three boys, each carrying a well wrapped parcel under his arm picked their way carefully over the rocks that lay scattered in all directions along the wide stretch of beach that made up St. Aubyn's Bay. To Eric it was a scene of wonder. Beautiful as was the country that surrounded his own much loved home. The grandeur of his present surroundings greatly surpassed anything he had ever seen before. As he looked eagerly around his eyes rested first on the little vessels that lay far out on the ocean, the spread of their white sails, being reflected in the water, for the sea that morning was in one of its quietest moods, and then backwards to the tall white cliffs that seem to rise sheer out of the water and tower in lofty strength upwards towards the sky.

He became so influenced by his surroundings that he stopped his progress every now and then to take stock as it were of all that he saw. This caused Kenrick to at last become impatient with him. "Come on Eric, he said. "If you keep on stopping to "star gaze" we shall never get on. Hurry up lazy bones."

Henderson with ready good nature waited for the lingering Eric and said, with a humorous look upwards. "Our energetic friend is somewhat out of order in his remarks for behold I see no stars as yet, though doubtless they will come in time."

"Which I hope both of you will" retorted Kenrick "because if we are going to take so long in reaching the boats, we shall have but a few moments to enjoy them."

A few minutes later the boats were reached and after a further animated discussion concerning the advisability of choosing a long row boat, with short mast and sail complete, or one without. These inducements to laziness, the boys eventually decided on the former because as Kenrick remarked.

"You may be sure you fellows we shall be very glad to hoist the sail and be free from pulling at those heavy oars."

"What you say is right," agreed Henderson. "Is not today a holiday? Have we come to work or enjoy ourselves? We will sail provided that there is wind enough, though I doubt it" he added, looking at the calm placid sea.

Eric did not speak, but assisted in pushing the boat down to the water's edge. To him it mattered little what kind of a vessel they had so long as they had one. All he wanted was to feel himself on the water, to be able to look at the shore, the cliffs and the surrounding country, from beyond them, and it was with no little excitement that under Henderson's direction, he jumped into his place followed by Kenrick and the little ship was launched.

Have you ever been in a small boat in new surroundings under entirely fresh conditions and sailing on water you have never known of or seen before? If you have done so. Then, provided that you are just 12 years old, beginning your school career and in company with two good comrades you will be able to understand the sensation of complete joy, excitement and happiness that possessed Eric at this time.

Henderson, who by right of his extra six months in age and longer period at the school, naturally took command and had been busy for the last few minutes raising the mast and fixing the sail. True there was little wind, but enough to gently urge the boat on its onward course. Grasping the tiller, Kenrick kept her head towards the open sea, and Eric, who having nothing else to do, leant over the side watching the ripple of the waves and broken water. If only he thought Mother and Dad could see me now enjoying all this fun how happy they would be."

SUCCESS

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect love poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration, whose memory a benediction.

A TEST FOR YOU.

In the above very beautiful definition of success, what part or parts appeal to you most, and which do you think is the most important?

For example.—Is the love of little children more important than the respect of intelligent men?

I will give a beautiful book for the best answer sent in. Address your letter to me and mark it. "Test."

THE CAPTAIN.

AUNTIE DI'S LETTER.

My Dear Children :

I wonder if you missed Trudy and Peter and Marjory-Ella and me last week? To tell the truth we were all out hunting for Harigold when the "Captain's Corner" went to press. We had hoped to be able to permit the good news that Harigold was found, but alas! he has not returned.

Nevertheless, we have asked all our friends on the ocean liners to keep a look-out for him, and someone may get a glimpse of a tiny streak of gold one day. Then it will just be a matter of letting down a net, very carefully, and catching the little wanderer. In the meanwhile, Marigold has another little companion, for she was so lonely. His name is Barigold, and he is rather tiny, but you should just see how quickly he can swim! We are going to be very careful that he does not dive down the waste pipe when his water is being changed.

I must tell you about Felix, too. He has decided to go right to sleep in a little bowl of earth, and he just takes no notice of anybody or anything. Of course, you know that tortoises do that sort of thing—it isn't bad manners, merely hibernating!

Well, Goodbye, Chicks. Keep a sharp look-out for Harigold, won't you, dears?

Your loving Auntie Di.

TRUDY'S TEA-POT TALES

Marjory-Ella goes to the Fair.

"You were just at the part where the children arrived at the Fair ground," said Peter, as Trudy settled down to tell him his good-night story. So she went on.

It was a gloriously sunny and warm day, and the sun was shining on the little painted caravans, and making the gilt decorations of the roundabouts glitter and sparkle like gold. As the children approached they saw that there were but few people there, as it was rather early in the day.

Nevertheless, the fair owners were doing their best. The roundabout was whirling to the sounds of a popular time; the swings were being waked by some little brown-faced gipsy boys; and the men were busy at the various side-shows, trying to tempt people to "try their luck."

The twins jumped about excitedly and the other children had to hold their little hands very tightly to control them as they walked round looking at everything. They had a little money to spend, and Buddy and Bunny clamoured loudly to be allowed to ride on the round-about.

The prancing horses and big breds fascinated the children so at last they climbed up onto the steeds of their choice. Marjory-Ella was seated on a fine dappled steed, and Mickey and Danny chose two big cocks with double seats, so that they could each hold a twin safely in front of them.

At length they began to move, slowly at first, then faster, faster, faster! Round and round they whirled, their mounts dipping and rising as they went, until Marjory-Ella was breathless with the speed and excitement. The twins shrieked loudly in their delight Mickey and Danny had quite a task to keep them from falling off.

But too soon the round-about slowed down and the children paid their money and dismounted laughing gaily.

"We want to go on the big swings now," said the twins.

"Oh, no!" said Marjory-Ella, "I'm sure you have had enough for the present. You stay with me for a while, and let Danny and Mickey go to the swings."

"That'll be fine, Marjory-Ella," agreed Danny and they ran off, while Marjory-Ella took the protesting twins into her charge.

"Now, come along," she commanded, "and don't make a fuss, or you shall have no more treats today."

This silenced them, for they knew that Marjory-Ella always meant what she said.

"We'll go over to that big, grassy patch by the caravans," said Marjory-Ella, "and we'll sit and rest until Danny and Mickey come back. You twins can eat an apple each."

Thus comforted, the twins followed Marjory-Ella to the grass patch, and sat munching contentedly enough. Marjory-Ella looked curiously at the little gaily-painted caravans, and soon she lay down on the grass and began to day-dream. She wondered what it would be like to live in a little house on wheels and travel from place to place, and to be a brown-faced dark-haired gipsy child. She lay thinking about it all with her eyes closed against the bright sun, until at last she realized that she must sit up, or the twins would be getting impatient. Surely the two boys were finished swinging by now?

She sat up slowly. There were the caravans, and there were the amusements of the fair, and many more people seemed to have arrived. But where were the twins? They were nowhere in sight!

"Goodnight, Peter, dear," said Trudy, "that's all tonight."

"I know where the twins were," said Peter, as he rose to go. "I don't think you will ever guess," said Trudy, laughing. "Be off, scamp!" So Peter went.

Goodnight, chicks, you do the same.

TRUDY.

ASKING FOR FREE SPACE

The one thing the newspaper has to sell for profit is advertising space, as most circulation departments are operated at a loss. Yet it is odd how often people will ask that space be donated. The only way the newspaper can get money to pay its bills is by selling its advertising space. What other industry is asked to give away its product? The situation is a relic of the day when newspapers cost little to equip or produce. In those days the employees got their pay if the money came in. But nowadays the editor has to do like other employers of labor—he simply cannot continue in business unless he is a fair business man. The too generous publisher usually goes out of business. And yet the newspapers keep donating the only thing they have to sell.—(Sidney Review.)

Mrs. C. L. Cooke and Mrs. R. Pinkerton were the guests of Mrs. Walter Mann, at Stardale on Thursday last.

Capt. and Mrs. T. Weir accompanied by Mrs. Gordon Higginson and Miss Grace Hartley, Hawkesbury, motored to Montreal, on Wednesday of last week and visited the motor-show.

Another well-known and respected resident of this locality passed away recently in the person of Mrs. A. Piché, whose death took place on Wednesday in Montreal at the home of her niece, Mrs. J. Aubry. The remains were brought to St. Philippe for interment, the funeral being attended by a large gathering of friends and relatives. The deceased lady whose maiden name was Almerna Ranger was in her 83rd year and for nearly fifty years was proprietress of a store at Greece's Point where she had made hosts of friends amongst all ages and classes of the community and her passing seems now to sever another link with the past.

HOME LIFE INTEREST

DECLARED OBSOLETE

Outside sources have ousted the home from its role as chief shaper of a human being's character, it was decided at an inter-university debate with speakers from McGill University and the University of Montreal recently. The opponents of the proposition, "Resolved that the home plays a greater part in shaping the character than does outside environment," Jean Jodoin and Harold B. Lande, were adjudged winners over their opponents.

Yves Leduc (U. of M. affirmative) led off with a dissertation on the joys of an old-fashioned home. The family creates the atmosphere necessary to good character, he affirmed.

Harold B. Lande (McGill, negative), pointed out that the proposition being debated did not call for illustrations of the home of former days. The family today, he declared, while not disappearing, is being deprived of many of its functions. Emancipation of woman, the keystone of the home, has led to children's character being formed by outside sources, he declared.

R. Melbourne Doig (McGill affirmative) cited numerous authorities in his endeavor to prove that the home is still supreme when it comes to shaping a child's character.

Jean Jodoin (U. of M., negative), stated modern family life was a failure, with the parents sharing the ruling of the household with their children & the latter only eating and sleeping under the parental roof.

OLD TARIFF ITEMS

Ottawa Preserves Quaint List of Articles Long Out of Use.

Eleven faded leaves of the tariff of Canada in 1870 are preserved in Ottawa and at that time they sufficed the needs of the Dominion. In the book appear the names and descriptions of several quaint articles, not to be found in the present day huge volume and they would puzzle the customs officer to-day. Some of these have to do with feminine attire. Sixty years ago styles were very different from the styles of to-day. How could a Customs officer of to-day delicately unravel the intricacies of the hoop skirt and correctly classify its component parts? In 1870 all was provided for and listed amongst the free goods of the old-time tariff appears the following: "The following articles for hoop skirt manufacture, crinoline thread for covering crinoline wire, clasps of tin and brass, spangles and slotted tapes and flat or round wire uncovered." Hoop skirts apparently were at that time, the most outstanding article of feminine attire.

Now the sailing vessel has disappeared from the seven seas a Customs officer might well rub his eyes in astonishment should he, in the course of a day's work come upon articles designated as Ships' Dead Eyes, Ships' Dead Lights, Iron Riders Sheaves and Wedges, all parts of a sailing vessel and listed in the old tariff.

One tariff term has remained practically unchanged during these three-score years, listed under prohibited goods, and dealing with books, drawings, photographs, etc., "of a treasonable or seditious, or of an immoral and indecent character". It is there to-day as it was sixty years ago.

Hints for Homebodies

By JESSIE ALLAN BROWN

MISPLACED THRIFT

Some of the things we hear over the radio are highly amusing—quite unintentionally. The other day I listened to a woman being very instructive and earnest over thrift and economy in housekeeping. Among other things she enthused over the possibilities of using left-over cereals. The recipe she gave required one cup of nuts and was to be served with sliced tomatoes. Imagine one cup of nuts and buying tomatoes at winter prices, in order to use up two cups of left-over cereal, and calling it economy.

Speaking of cereals reminds me of the entire wheat cereals. So few people seem to know about it. It is a cereal made of the entire wheat, ground, with nothing left out, bran, germ and all are in it. You will not be able to buy it at the grocers, because it contains the germ of the wheat and as this has some fat in it, will not keep for a very long time, and needs to be ground fresh. You will likely to be able to get it at a Feed store and undoubtedly you can get it if you are near a mill.

Make it like any other porridge, and you will be delighted with its flavour. It is very good for you as it contains so many of the necessary food elements and vitamins.

To Prevent a Crust

Porridge is improved by long cooking and it is usually most convenient to make it at night in a double-boiler, then it is ready to reheat in the morning when time is at a premium. I am sure many of you who have done this have found that a crust forms on the porridge which is not so good. This may be prevented very easily. After you porridge has cooked until it has thickened, put two or three tablespoons of water carefully on the surface. The water keeps the top soft and moist and if any water remains in the morning it may be stirred in. I find that porridge which is to stand overnight requires a little more water than that which has shorter cooking, or it will be too thick.

GREENS

The bear crawls into a cave for the winter and certainly gets no green or fresh food. Some people are as bad as the bears as far as eating fresh foods in the winter. From Fall to Spring nothing green goes on the table. Some of my readers may say, how can we get green foods? They may think they are too expensive, and there are some places where it is still impossible to buy fresh fruits and vegetables in winter time. Even if you cannot get or cannot afford to buy lettuce, spinach, and so on, there are foods that you can get.

Do not forget the humble cabbage. We can all of us get it and it is one of the best of the green vegetables. Cabbage is the downfall of many a cook. It is so abused in the cooking. Whatever you do, do not overcook it. Fresh cabbage will cook in 15 minutes, but the old cabbage takes longer, but never more than 25 minutes and rarely that. Drain and chop your cabbage in a colander, so that all the water will be drained off, then reheat. If there is anything more discouraging than cabbage floating about in a layer of greenish, greasy, liquid, I would like to know it.

Raw cabbage is even better than cooked cabbage. So serve it often. Cabbage is good with fish. Sardine and cabbage salad or shrimps with cabbage, for example. When celery goes off the market, use finely chopped cabbage to replace it in your salads, adding a dash of celery salt.

Cabbage salad may be made with many different dressings. One of the ways of varying the monotony is to moisten the cabbage with boiled dressing, then add a spoonful or two of another dressing. Plain mayonnaise, Thousand Island, Russian or any dressing you may happen to have on hand. If you have no dressing available for mixing, do a little mixing on your own account. Add a little chili-sauce, catsup, pepper pickle, chopped gherkins, mustard pickles, or what have you.

Canned Tomatoes

Canned tomatoes are available to everyone and they are a food which should be included daily in the diet. If you have not been converted to tomato juice for breakfast you are missing something, both from the standpoint of appetite & health. Use tomatoes, cabbage, and apples freely and you have gone a long way towards solving the problem of fresh foods for the family.

APPLE MERINGUE PUDDING

1 pint applesauce
3 eggs
1 teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon almond extract
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon butter.

Mix the spices, butter, and well-beaten egg yolks, with the applesauce while it is hot. Beat until light. Put in a buttered baking dish and cook 10 minutes. Remove from oven and cover with a meringue made from egg whites, sugar, and flavoring. Return to the oven and cook until gently browned. Cool and serve with cream.

Our Puzzle Corner

There are puzzles that look easy and are easy, puzzles that look easy and are difficult, puzzles that look difficult and are difficult, and puzzles that look difficult and are easy, and in each class we may of course have degrees of easiness and difficulty. But it does not follow that a puzzle that has conditions that are easily understood by the merest child is in itself easy. Such a puzzle might however, look simple to the uninformed, and only prove to be a very hard nut to crack after he had actually tackled it.

For example if we write down nineteen ones to form the number 1,111,111,111,111,111, and then ask for a number (other than one or itself) that will divide it without remainder, the conditions are perfectly simple, but the task is terribly difficult. Nobody in the world yet knows whether that number has a divisor or not. If you can find one you will have succeeded in doing something that nobody else has ever done.

The number composed of seventeen ones, 11,111,111,111,111,111; has only two divisors, 2,071, 723 and 5,363, 222, 357, and their discovery is an exceedingly heavy task. The only number composed only of ones that we know with certainty to have no divisor is 11. Such a number is of course, called a prime number.

A country baker sent off his boy with a message to the butcher in the next village, and at the same time the butcher sent his boy to the baker. One ran faster than the other, and they were seen to pass at a spot 720 yards from the baker's shop. Each stopped ten minutes at his destination and then started on the return journey, when it was found that they passed each other at a spot 400 yards from the butcher's. How far apart are the two tradesmen's shops? Of course each boy went at a uniform pace throughout.

The answer to last week's puzzle is explained hereunder.

The surface of water or other liquid is always spherical, and the greater any sphere is the greater its convexity. Hence the top diameter of any vessel at the summit of a mountain will form the base of the segment of a greater sphere than it would at the bottom. This sphere, being greater, must (from what has already been said) be less convex; or in other words, the spherical surface of the water must be less above the brim of the vessel, and consequently it will hold less at the top of a mountain than at the bottom.

LIGHTS ON HORSE-DRIVEN VEHICLES

"It is positively next to suicide that anyone should drive a horse driven vehicle on rural roads at night without a light," declared Mr. Ed. Quinn, chairman of the Transport and Traffic Section of the Province of Quebec Safety League. "The driver not only places his own life in jeopardy but the lives of other users of the road at night."

"It is time that certain persons got rid of the idea that the placing of these lights on rigs is for the sole purpose of pleasing motorists," said Mr. Quinn. This was far from being so. Think of the accidents that occur because the driver of a horse-driven vehicle has no light. The driver in a collision is always the loser. Of course, many motorists are either killed or injured but the majority are on the other side. For years the Province of Quebec Safety League has been trying to alter this attitude, to create a new spirit but despite it all, these drivers of horse-drawn vehicles still do not realize for themselves the value of the protection of lights. A law will come into force and many will have to obey its edicts.

"Not only does the driver lay himself open to danger, but also the cyclist," continued Mr. Quinn. "The cyclist is always at the mercy of the automobilist until such time as he protects himself. It is essential they all obey the rules of the road and keep to the right, particularly at curves and tops of hills."

A member having brought to the attention of the president the news published in the morning press of the impact which had taken place at the railway crossing at Richmond when a man was killed and another now at the point of death, and especially the report to the effect that the driver had seen the train coming but persisted in passing ahead of same, Mr. Quinn further stated that it was inconceivable that the average motorist would deliberately not take care of his safety when at railroad crossings. The law that makes the stop compulsory was indeed a sane and wise one and motorists should willingly observe same as it was enacted for their own good and it shouldn't be necessary to press further for its observance.

Mr. Quinn stated he wasn't sure if the League shouldn't ask the Government to periodically summons to court motorists persisting in endangering their lives and those of their dear ones. It seemed a shame to find it always necessary to use the whip of the law to convince a few of laws made in their own interest.

The special correspondent of Montreal Gazette, reporting the sessions of Quebec Legislature on Wednesday now announces that the Vehicle Light Bill was killed, the rural members voting down the highway measure so that lights on vehicles are not now compulsory on Quebec highways.

In gleeful mood, the Legislative Assembly tonight killed the bill of Amedee Caron (Magdalen Islands) which would have forced all vehicles to carry lights front and rear. Moreover, as was feared when the measure was driven through the Public Bills Committee of the Assembly yesterday morning, the clause which would have extended compulsory lights to bicycles and tricycles—something that Premier Taschereau was willing to back for this year—went out with the rest of the draft.

By 31 to 19 in Committee of the Whole, the House not merely murdered the measure, but rural deputies chanted the death and announced they were willing to provide a first-class funeral.

The argument for the bill was that the era of education is over and that the great section of this province is now ready for something that protects life not merely of automobiles, but of those who drive horse vehicles, mainly farmers.

From rural ridings, however, came the counter-blast that the proposal was impractical, that it was merely an invitation to motorists to speed more than ever, that there are too many drunken drivers on the road today who crash as well in full daylight as in the night and that before the Government asks the farmers to "give up their liberty," steps should be taken to restrain the motorist, especially the speeding truck driver.

WHY YOUR LOCAL PAPER IS CONTINUED

Newspaper subscribers often wonder why a publisher keeps on sending a paper when the subscription has expired. An exchange thus explains the matter: When a subscription is paid to a certain time, the time expires, and the paper is stopped, it looks as if the editor doubted the integrity of the subscriber, and nine cases out of ten the subscriber will give the editor a calling down for insinuating that his credit was no good. Rather than cast any reflection against a neighbor's honesty to pay a small debt it has been customary for newspapers to continue sending the papers after the time has expired. The city weeklies and dailies do not generally follow this rule as subscribers are at a distance and they do not know their financial standing. One should deem it an honor to know that his credit is not doubted when the publisher continues to send the paper. Should the subscriber desire to have his paper discontinued he should inform the publisher and remit to date, if any is owing.

A JUSTIFIED PROTEST

The recent affront to Quebec womanhood, in Legislature discussion of the women's franchise bill, has evoked heated protest from all right-thinking and self-respecting women in this province.

The following resolution by Mrs. Chas. Fremont, president of the Women's Conservative Association of City and District of Quebec, was unanimously supported at a recent gathering of that Society, and merits the approval of all fair-minded and chivalrous citizens, regardless of their convictions upon the question of women's suffrage.

"That as regards the discussion of the law relative to women's suffrage, which occurred January 20th., 1932, in the Legislative Assembly, we, as women of the Province of Quebec resent profoundly the uncouth insults voiced against women in general by certain members of the House, which had a tendency to degrade feminine dignity in family and social spheres.

"That, in view of this unjust and unqualified attack, aimed particularly at the women of this Province, we deeply regret that the members in question were not called to order and requested to use more suitable language. The present occasion proved, beyond doubt, the necessity of the women's franchise, which would enable them to express their opinion, through their vote, and help to elect dignified representatives to our Provincial Legislature, and the members present at this meeting desire to register their protestations in a most energetic manner and give to the matter the full publicity which it deserves.

BROWNSBURG

A very fine entertainment and one fraught with a great deal of interest to all classes of our citizens, was held in Goyette's Hall, on the evening of Tues- day, Feb. 2nd., in the presence of a capacity house, numbers standing at the rear and every- one manifesting the happiest in- terest in a programme of mixed variety. One of the pleasantest features of the evening was the harmonious presentation of parts in either language, the audience, either French or Eng- lish, seemingly appreciating to the full the pleasantry of the situation, and enjoying and ap- plauding both sections without the least apparent distinction. It was certainly a splendid evi- dence of the very fine spirit of co-operation and mutual inter- est and understanding existing in our village among these two classes of fellow Canadians, and one which exists also very no- ticeably in every department of our social relations.

The concert was under the auspices of the Women's Insti- tute, the object being the rais- ing of a few more dollars to re- coup their relief fund, already considerably depleted by the many calls made upon their all too slender purse during these winter months. What the In- stitute is doing and has done, for many families, in this dis- trict in these trying days, is well known by all our citizens, and Mrs. Smiley, the President, has associated with her on the Ex- ecutive, women of both national- ities, who work together in a manner most harmonious for the good of all. It was this spirit that carried the programme through on Tuesday evening in a spirit of such evident unison, a program of mixed variety, all local talent, with no display or ostentation or eclat to commend it, in the finest feeling of mer- riment and mutual helpfulness. The smaller children, too, con- tributed their quota, and every- one seemed to find nothing lack- ing to make up a good time and to get their money value out of their admission. And if there ever was a time for congrat- ulations on such a scheme, it surely is the present which ought not to go only to the Insti- tute for mothering such a pro- ject, but to every single partici- pant who assisted in presenting such a variety, for the certainly fine harmony and kindness shown throughout the whole evening, in which were fused all the sentiments and good feeling of our different races

There were parts, too, of the program of a very high merit, and it is only the truth to say that in these the English sec- tion have to admit that our French-Canadian sisters lacked nothing in the essential qualities that put a concert across to the public. There is something in the type of setting of French music that gives it a flavor of its own, which joined to the sweetness of enunciation and the difference in dialect, renders the ballad or madrigal a most beautiful and fitting form of en- tertainment. Nor do the words require to be fully understood by the English mind in order to secure this effect, and those of our English people present that evening had the opportunity of judging this principle for them- selves. A lamp was raffled dur- ing the evening and brought in $29.50. The lucky ticket was drawn by Jean Baptiste Giroux. The entire proceeds amounted in all to about $85.00, which, when expenses are deducted will leave a nice tidy sum towards the good work of the Institute for the balance of the winter. The programme follows: Orchestra, "O Canada"; Pres- ident's Address; Solo by Mrs. W. King; Trio by Misses A. Car- riere, A. Quesnel, C. Boisclair; Song by Desmond Doran and Marjory Dixon; Clap Dance by Jean Todd and Edith Williams; Recitation by Mr. Wheeler; Solo by Morris Robins; Piano Solo by Miss Laura Lupien; Sketch, "Le Train Manque" by Misses A. Carriere and M. B. Nadon; Intermission; Raffle of the Radio Lamp by Mrs. E. Quesnel; Recitation by Mr. Wallace Wilson; Song by Florence Robinson; Dance Highland Fling by Jean Todd & Edith Williams; Solo by Miss Annette Quesnel; Sketch, Oper- etta in two acts, "The Murder of Panty Heen" by the Roberts Sisters.

That's the advice of Home Economics experts everywhere. They know the dangers and costs of make-shift food storage. No climate is a sub- stitute for good refrigeration.

There's danger in window box food storage. Weather conditions are right for window box storage only 19 days a year. Freezing spells make food unappetizing, tasteless — a thaw lets bacteria multiply and food spoil.

Guarantee your food safety this winter with the constant, unvarying cold of the Electric Refrig- erator. Then, you'll do away with waste — and make sure of the safety of your food.

The Girl Guides were out for a jolly sleigh drive on Saturday afternoon and on returning enjoyed a fine hot Bean Supper in the Social Club.

On January 24th., 1932, the Young People's Society held their meeting. The meeting was in the hands of the Music and Dramatic Committee and a very delightful program was prepared by them.

The session was opened by singing a few hymns, as usual, and repeating the Lord's Prayer. After the minutes were read and the various items of business were discussed another hymn was sung, which concluded the first part of the meeting.

After this Miss E. Woods sang a solo entitled "One Alone" accompanied by Miss E. Reid at the piano. The Misses E. Woodwork and I. Steere sang a duet. Mr. Wallace Wilson recited "Rubenstein At The Piano" in his usual excellent manner.

After this the members gathered together and spent a very pleasant half hour playing games and singing some of the old favorites.

TH LATE

MRS. ROBT. MACKENZIE

There passed away most unexpectedly, at the Montreal General Hospital, on Tuesday, Jan. 26th., Mrs. Robt. MacKenzie, at the age of 29 years. Deceased lady was before marriage, Nina Everett Wray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wray of Montreal and granddaughter of the late Mrs. Robt. Boyd, of Louisa, Que.

She leaves to mourn her loss, a loving husband and five small children, Jean, Kenneth, Ruth, Bobbie and Buster, also her mother and father.

The funeral was held Wednesday evening from the Chapel of Jos. C. Wray, Mountain St., to Lachute on Thursday for burial in the Brownsburg Cemetery.

The pall bearers were Joseph Boyd uncle; W. J. Boyd, Guy Boyd, Gilbert Boyd, John Boyd, (cousins) and Henry Sutton.

The Evils of Alcohol

tions and text so presented as to persuade unsuspecting youth that sampling of the various brands is the "smart" thing to do in smart company. Having yielded to the temptation, young people start unknowingly on the down grade. The cocktail party, at which young folks are kindly pressed into drinking as many and as much as their fellows, was stressed as a particular source of danger to the young of both sexes. All these things have combined to bring the drinking habit into the home.

Exemplifying his remarks upon liquor advertising, the speaker quoted a letter written by a brewer to others in the trade—in which he said "We must advertise—and advertise. Not only to retain our adult and older customers, but also (and especially) to influence young minds towards drinking, that they may take the place and follow the custom of the passing generation." Terming such propaganda as a most insidious device, the lecturer strongly urged the duty, the necessity, of educating, guiding and safeguarding the young.

Along his line, Mr. Pierce is doing his utmost in this direction, having, within a certain period, addressed no less than 18,000 teen-age pupils at schools and academies, etc. On the following day, he was present to address the scholars at our Lachute Academy, where he stressed the dangers which confront young and adult persons, the difficulty of overcoming destruction which is unsleepingly busy to bring reproach upon our land. One could not but feel that the speaker, deep down in his heart, heard an echo of Goldsmith's lines:

"Ill fares the land to hastening ills a prey, Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

A bold Peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroyed, can never be supplied"

A meeting of the newly elected Board of Directors for the Argenteuil Agricultural Society was held in the Windsor Hotel, on Monday evening last, and owing to the absence from town of the President, Mr. W. H. Ayers, the chair was occupied by Mr. J. H. Black, Vice-President.

Mr. A. Bothwell read the minutes of previous meeting, which were adopted, and the following officers were then elected:—W. H. Ayers, President; J. H. Black, Vice-President; A. Bothwell, Secretary and Manager.

The Board then elected its working committees and the dates set for the Lachute Fair were announced as June 15, 16, 17 & 18

Having successfully passed the examinations as Lieutenant, Messrs J. Paul Legault, vice-president and E.E.M. and Guy Legault, secretary and E.E.D. of the Montreal University have been qualified in the Infantry syllabus of Examination, as laid down in the Regulations for the Canadian Officers Training Corps.

They are therefore eligible for consideration for a commission in the Regular Army Reserve of Officers, Militia, Territorial Army or Active Militia of Canada.

They will be entitled to the privilege conferred on holders of this certificate as set forth in the Regulations concerned, and to any further privileges that may be authorized after the date of the certificate.

The certificate "A" has been addressed by the Director of Military Training & Staff Duties, Col. H. B. Birk and Lt. Col. D. McIlven.

Join the Badminton Club!

Very often during the winter period we are apt to be neglectful of our physical well-being; we convince ourselves that the few summer months with their opportunities to play golf and tennis, or to partake in the healthful exercise of swimming are really enough to keep ourselves fit throughout the whole year. It is a great mistake. We soon find this out, when we tax our creaking limbs with renewed physical activities, and often wish there was a way—a pleasant way—to keep in good form. During the last few years, a certain group of Lachute citizens have planned to organize a badminton club in this community, and they have at last achieved their desire. It is an appreciable step in the right direction, and already about forty individuals, have taken the advantage of the small fees and joined the club. Badminton is a pleasant, fascinating indoor sport, full of amusement, and a healthful exercise. Games are held every Thursday and Saturday in the Lachute Auditorium. Plan to join—keep fit—you'll enjoy it!

Annual Meeting of Protestant Cemetery.

The sixteenth Annual Meeting of the Lachute Protestant Cemetery Association was held in the town council room on Monday evening last, when some twenty-odd members were present with Mr. T. Miller, President, occupying the chair. The minutes of the last Annual Meeting were read and adopted.

The financial statement and Auditor's reports were submitted by Mr. J. W. Gall which showed the Cemetery Association in good sound financial standing.

At the same meeting the following retiring Directors Messrs. Geo. Hay, H. G. Banford, Thos. Miller and John Nichol were unanimously re-elected. The Annual Meeting then adjourned and a meeting of the Directors followed. Those present were T. Miller President and Directors W. Miller, A. A. McQuat, H. Banford, D. Todd, Wm. Murray, Dr. G. Clunie, J. Miller and Mr. J. W. Gall, Secretary. The minutes of the last special Directors' Meeting were read and adopted. The retiring President, Mr. Thomas Miller and Vice-President, A. A. McQuat were unanimously elected and the following committees were then re-elected.

Finance Committee: E. H. McCoy, Chairman; Dr. G. A. Clunie, Wm. Murray, Geo. Hay, and J. A. McGibbon.
Grounds Committee: Thomas Miller, Chairman; J. S. Giles, H. G. Banford, A. A. McQuat and Wm. Miller.

TREES IN FEBRUARYBy
Molly BevanThe Blue Bell
Poetess

Lovelessness never forsakes a tree
No matter what the season be:
Verdant summer, autumn gold,
Springtime's rapture manifold;
Even winter's fingers trace
Lines of silhouetted grace.

Buds are the promise of leaves to be,
Bursting their sheaths in ecstasy;
Leaf-laden boughs are happy to play
For winds that are sad, winds that are gay;
Down-falling foliage spreads a pall
For earth whom winter holds in thrall:
But trunk and branch and swaying bough
Are naked, weird and elusive now.

Come the snow on a listening night,
Soft, persistent and sequin-bright,
Clothes each twig with a frosty flower,
Light as a feather—gone in an hour;
Warms the heart with remembering
April petals that drift and cling.

Here and There

Figures of United States motor cars entering New Brunswick in 1931 issued by the provincial bureau of information and tourist travel, show an 8 per cent. gain over 1930. The new record for 1931 is 58,583 as compared with the former record of 54,068 for 1930.

Approximately $11,000,000 was saved in Canada last year in the cost of construction dwellings and other buildings in 61 cities owing to reduced cost of building materials. Aggregate value in these cities of building permits was $110,971,410.

The aid of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London and of Lord Beaverbrook will be sought by the Maritime Provinces representatives who left aboard S.S. Montcalm from Halifax recently, in an effort to secure the lifting of the British Government's embargo on Canadian potatoes.

A railroad career that has seen many changes and covered much widely separated territory witnessed another movement when Robert E. Larmour, general freight agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, was transferred recently from Montreal to Toronto. Mr. Larmour, aside from his railway duties, is well known as one of Canada's outstanding yachtsmen.

Carnival Queen nominations from Edmonton, Drumheller and Vancouver testify to the great popularity of the Banff annual winter carnival to be held February 6 to 13. The Alberta branch of the A.A.U. of Canada has agreed to hold figure skating championships at the carnival and may hold their ski-ing championships there as well. Every kind of winter sport will be represented.

Entries are coming in rapidly for the great winter event of the 1932 sporting season, the 11th annual Eastern International Dog Sled Derby to be run over a course of 123 miles, spread over the three days February 22-24 and concluding with the Dog Derby Costume Ball at the Chateau Frontenac, February 24. St. Godard, Seppala and other names outstanding in Dog Sled racing are already entered.

The largest shipment of Government-approved cockerels for any one breeder or hatcheryman in Canada arrived recently by Canadian Pacific special at Fergus, Ont., from Winnipeg to the order of J. G. Tweddle, of the former city. The birds were selected by government inspectors from the choicest flocks from British Columbia to Nova Scotia. During the last four years Mr. Tweddle has shipped an average of 200,000 chickens to various points between the Atlantic and Pacific.

Competition between truck and railroad service is shown in a new angle by a letter recently to a Reading paper, "Labor." A cattle raiser of Niobrara, Nebraska, tried out both methods, shipping cattle by truck and by railroad. On the railroad there was a shrinkage of 21 pounds for each animal; by truck there was a shrinkage of 98 pounds each. What the raiser saved on freight he much more than lost on the animals shipped by truck, where the value of the shrinkage amounted to $13.14 on each animal. (319)

BE A BOOSTER, NOT A KNOCKER

There is a town in the South where it has been made against the law to run down, slander, speak or act in a manner that would injure this town.

This ordinance passed a few years ago, makes a person so doing, guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction, may have a fine imposed not exceeding $100.00 or up to sixty days imprisonment at the discretion of the Mayor.

While difficult obstacles might be encountered in this law's enforcement, we can but comment favourably on the result it seeks to attain.

Most of us are lovers of our home town. We all know how, when away from home we leap at the first opportunity of meeting a fellow traveller from our particular "burg" and when among strangers, if we hear a word dropped about our home port, we nervously await a chance to get into the conversation.

Fortunately, the people are in the minority who will not stand by and support the locality which is their home.

Self-respecting and upright citizens will work together in unison and harmony for its advancement. Indiscriminate and chronic knockers, are distinctly in the class of undesirable citizens, and not to be tolerated.

How fine it would be, if every person spoke no word, performed no deed, detrimental to the welfare and progress of their home town, or community!

This condition can be brought about, not by legislation, but by education and example. Loyalty to your town costs nothing and may yield vast returns.

If we have a vision of an upright locality, and endeavour to seek its attainment, with friendliness toward the newcomer, who would fain become one of us, we are on the way to make a delightful spot of the place wherein it is our lot and privilege to dwell.

"Speak well of your town and your town will be blest. By other good boosters admiring your zest. For boosting is catching, it spreads like the flu. That town is a dead one, where boosters are few.

Act well to the stranger who enters your gate. He might be a man though from some other state. And courtesy marks not the stranger but you. He'll credit the town for the acts that you do.

It takes women and men to build a fine town. Who'll give of themselves for their home burg's renown. A good place to live! You bet it is, where The boosters are plenty, and knockers are rare."

This article was contributed by Mrs. B. B. Morrill, Provincial Convener of Committee on Canadianization and National Events, of Women's Institutes.

EXHIBITION CRUISE IS PROVING OF VALUE

Representatives of Canadian firms aboard the steamship New Northland, now on an exhibition cruise to Bermuda, British West Indies, British Guiana and the Bahamas, were successful in securing orders at Bermuda according to Frederic Hudd, Canadian government trade commissioner. In a report to Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, Mr. Hudd says that hardly a representative on the ship failed to secure orders.

Handling Snow on California Mountain Roads.

We of the East are apt to associate California with perpetual warmth and with the sunny delights of near tropical climate, which have popularized the state to health and holiday seekers. California, however, has its snows. In the extreme mountain altitudes, snow clearing is a problem tackled in a systematic way, by highly organized departments. The following article dealing with the clearing of California's mountain roads to the winter-sport grounds, is of timely interest in this province, where our readers may compare snow conditions and methods of attacking them. (Ed.)

The Sierra Nevadas in northern California are crossed by several highways carrying traffic to and from the east, and under present conditions this tends—or wishes—to be all-the-year traffic. But the heavy snow falls in these mountains (averaging up to 65 feet a season in the worst places) render it exceedingly difficult—a few years ago it would have been called impossible—to keep these roads open. How this is accomplished in District Three, east of Sacramento in the vicinity of Lake Tahoe, and some idea of the difficulties, are described by J. W. Vieckrey, district maintenance engineer of that district, in "California Highways and Public Works," the official publication of the California State Department of Public Works. Mr. Vieckrey's description, slightly condensed, is as follows:

Snow removal operations, to provide access to the recreational areas, where a depth sufficient to permit winter sports can be assured, has expanded tremendously in the last three years. The consequent costs have gone up at about the same angle that the snow-flake comes down. The increasing flow of traffic over the roads opened is a good index to the demand, and the continuous enthusiasm of the thousands of snow sport devotees indicates that winter sports and snow frolics, at locations accessible to automobile traffic, have become a permanent part of California's list of recreations.

A Sunday traffic count made at the Auburn ski jump, when Route 37 was open only to Emigrant Gap, showed approximately 750 machines above the snow line. On February 15, the last day of the Truckee-Tahoe Dog Derby, there were approximately five hundred machines parked on the Truckee streets. Donner Summit was closed at the time. On February 22 there were about 1000 machines at Truckee and Tahoe City. The count going east over Donner Summit that day was between 450 and 500.

Snow removal work below the 5000-foot contour last winter was of very small consequence compared with a year ago. The snow equipment provided for such areas lay idle or was moved to higher elevations where the intensity of the storms, over a smaller area, made up any deficiency in the work to be done that may have seemed apparent when viewing the situation from the valley.

The first storm of the year began on Donner Summit on November 15, and during the night became a terrific blizzard driven by a 66-mile wind. Machines attempting to get over the summit before it closed crowded in so fast that the snow plows could not operate efficiently. Any idea of keeping the road open had to be abandoned and all effort made to get out the stranded machines and occupants. At times the storm was so severe that a man could not walk through the summit cut. The maintenance men spent all one night and most of the next day getting people out of the storm. When the skies cleared on the 19th, there was five feet of snow piled up, and thirty machines were snowed in; some completely covered. The rotary plows were started again. The road was plowed out, the machines rescued, traffic was resumed, and steel gates installed on either side of the summit to prevent a recurrence.

Madame Lacroix's delicious CHOCOLATE LAYER CAKE

3/4 cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup milk
2 1/2 cups pastry flour (or 2 cups and 3 tablespoons of bread flour)
3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
3/4 teaspoon salt

Cream butter; add sugar, a little at a time, beating until light; add beaten yolks and flavoring; add flour, sifted with salt and baking powder, alternately with milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in 3 greased layer cake pans in moderate oven at 375°F. about 20 minutes. Recipe for Chocolate Icing and Filling is in the Magic Cook Book.

Why Magic Baking Powder is used exclusively at this Montreal School of Domestic Science

"We teach our students only the best methods," says Madame R. Lacroix, Assistant Director of the Provincial School of Domestic Science, Montreal. "That's why I always use and recommend Magic Baking Powder. Its high leavening quality is always uniform. You get the same satisfactory results every time you use it."

And Magic Baking Powder is the unquestioned choice in the majority of cooking schools throughout the Dominion. Cookery teachers—and housewives, too—prefer Magic because of its consistently better results.

Free Cook Book—When you bake at home, the new Magic Cook Book will give you dozens of recipes for delicious baked foods. Write to Standard Brands Ltd., Fraser Ave. and Liberty St., Toronto, Ontario.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Novelized by Marvin Dana. Author of "Within the Law," From the Successful Play by Daniel D. Carter

"I haven't got you placed exactly," he admitted. "but I've got your class all right. Do you get me?"

Blount bounced heavily to his feet. His expression was suddenly grown sinister.

"My class?" he repeated blusteringly. Walter maintained his evil satisfaction.

"I'd be willing to bet you a hundred that you wouldn't put your Bertillon on a piece of wax."

Blount leaped forward with a lithe swiftness astonishing in one of his bulk.

"D— you!" he said very softly, but with an intensity more vehement than mere sound. "Now, you look here—and look mighty close! My name is John Blount. I'm your father. There's your mother. I'm from Laramie, Wyo."

"Now, you look here!"

They respect us out there. Understand? That goes as it lays. They're going to run me for mayor next spring, and my wife here is president of the Mothers' club. You can look up our record there right through for the last four years. We've lived straight, and we're going to remain straight. Now let me tell you something else. If you want to look any further back than that you're looking for trouble—and a chance to get croaked."

There was a deadly ferocity in the tones.

"Aw, you needn't get so sore about it," Walter urged quaveringly. Blount spoke again.

"It looks to me as if we were likely to be together for some time to come. As far as I know, you're just Walter Blount. Outside of Walter Blount I don't know who you are, and I don't care either."

Walter strove again to placate the man whom he had so seriously offended.

"Aw, I was just kidding," he protested weakly. His attempt at a propitiatory smile was treacherous.

Of a sudden a new curiosity stirred in Walter.

"And the girl—that skirt—my sister, you know! What is she?" he demanded. "Is she one of us?"

"She's only been with us a week," Mrs. Blount explained. "Came from across the pond, so how can we tell?"

Said Blount:

"We don't know a darned thing about the girl except that she's our daughter. That's all we're supposed to know, and it's all we need to know, at that."

A sudden memory moved in the husband's brain, and he continued with increased sternness. "And another thing—don't you dare again to act like you did today at lunch. There we were a-dining at the Waldorf with fine people, and me a-bragging about our big ranches and our beautiful home out west. And then I caught you trying to cop a spoon, so that I had to kick you under the table."

An old instinct revived from the association of ideas, and he added petulantly, "And it was a plated one, at that!"

"What's the odds?" she demanded very spiritedly. "Lots of perfectly respectable people take things like that at hotels just for souvenirs. Why, I know a lady that hasn't got two towels alike in her whole house. And she's real rich too."

Walter reverted to the subject of prime interest to him.

"And the girl?" he insisted. He gazed at Blount eagerly. "Do you think Andrew has anything on the girl, like he has on us?"

In an instant Blount had leaped close, his face furious with passion.

"Andrew hasn't anything on us!" he hissed.

A flash of anger gave fleeting courage to Walter.

"Huh!" he exclaimed scornfully. "Don't try and slip anything like that over!"

Andrew came in from the next room and stood directly between the two men. Then he addressed them with contemptuous coldness:

"If through jealousy and bickering you fail to act your parts so that in consequence my plans miscarry, it will count against you far more than would mere disobedience. What was the cause of this row?"

Blount pointed to Walter.

"Ask the whelp!"

"I was just kidding—that's all!"

"Take care, sir," Andrew said harshly. "One of these days my patience will be exhausted." He waited a moment, surveying the youth with a lash of stare. Then, abruptly, he doffed his dominant manner and in its stead assumed the pose of the respected servant. He bowed humbly to Walter, the nominal head of the household. "Why not show your father through the house, sir?" he suggested.

At once, without any trace of embarrassment, he took the part assigned to him.

"Sure!" he exclaimed, joyfully aglow with pride in the new possession of this city home. He beamed on the bewildered Blount. "Come on, dad!" he urged bolsterously. "You'll sure find this place all to the good."

CHAPTER VI.
Lucene.

MISS BLOUNT possessed the feminine trait of curiosity. She made a dawdling round of the room, scrutinizing every detail of its arrangement. At the very last she came to the little table toward which Andrew had glanced to note the shimmer of blue light. By instinct her eyes went straight to the ring on the instant of her approach. As she beheld the lusters of the jewel her handsome face suddenly flamed with greed, and she uttered an ejaculation of delight. For long seconds she contemplated the glittering bauble with rapture, bending her face ever closer and closer as under a spell. Then, in a sudden realization of her avaricious thought, she started guiltily, and peered about the room with furtive glances, to make sure that none spied upon her. Again, she studied the stone with a sensuous ecstasy in its primed orilliance; again, she tore her eyes from its charm, and now she moved from it in resolute effort to escape temptation. But the old habit of life dragged her back to the table, and she put forth a covetous hand, seized the ring, carried it to her bosom, smiling.

But very soon her mood veered. The smile vanished from her full lips. Her expression became that of poignant grief. By slow degrees the hand that held the ring moved from her breast, reached to the table, set the jewel back in its place. It was at this moment that Andrew reentered. At sight of him Mrs. Blount realized with a shudder how narrow had been the margin of her escape from detection in the very act of theft. She pointed toward the little table and spoke with a catch in her voice:

"Andrew, just look at what you left on that table there. It's a good thing there haven't been any strangers in the house with that lying around loose."

Andrew crossed to the table and picked up the ring. There was a faint smile on his closely set lips as he turned and went to the woman. He extended the ring with a slight bow.

"Mrs. Blount," he said pleasantly, "allow me." Andrew nodded assent as he dropped the ring into her itching palm. "Only a word of counsel," he said. "Remember that who I am and what my exact intentions may be are of no interest to you. So be careful."

And Mrs. Blount, watching the luxurious play of the varicolored rays from the diamond, murmured contentedly in the softest notes of her throaty voice:

"Geel! It sure pays to be honest."

The servant soon announced to Andrew the arrival of Miss Blount and was directed to show the young lady into the library as soon as she should be ready for an interview.

Andrew descended to the library with an eagerness of expectancy that was almost disconcerting to himself. He ordered Parker, whom he found already stationed in the hall, to maintain the privacy of the library, to bring Walter on hearing the bell. And at last a delicate rustling of draperies sounded at the door, and Lucene entered.

The girl stopped short at sight of the man, arrested for a moment by the stress of emotion. No least trace of Maggie Flint, nursemaid and convict, remained visible in the poised loveliness of this gentle maiden. The promise of her beauty had been most nobly fulfilled. She was of dainty fairness, with a golden crown of locks like corn silk in the sun, as lustrous, as finely spun. The exquisite features, set in the perfect oval of the face, were pearl-pure of coloring, save where the blood tint blushed in cheeks and deepened winsomely in lips.

At his smile Lucene came to him swiftly.

"Oh, at last!" she exclaimed.

His smile grew as he spoke: "You're not going to be lonesome for France, are you, Lucene?"

"Indeed, no!" was the joyous answer, given with a half disdainful pout of the red lips. "I was happy enough here. But, after all, it wasn't America—it wasn't home."

Now, since her first strong emotion at the meeting was past, Lucene was constrained to astonishment over some thing strange and unexpected in the appearance of the man before her.

"Why Mr. Andrew," she said, with some show of confusion over her own emotion, "how old you look! What is it? Oh, yes, of course! It's your clothes. What can it mean? Tell me please."

At the request the smile vanished from the face of the Master Mind.

"Patience, patience!" he admonished. "You shall know all about everything presently, but not quite yet. It isn't necessary now."

Then he continued:

"Tell me, instead, has our little girl left her heart in Paris or has she brought it back intact?" Though he put the question so lightly, it was of import to him in his scheme of vengeance.

"Oh, neither the one or the other," Lucene declared, with a moue of resentment against the idea. "I left my heart here, sir, when I went away. You should know that, for I told you all about my one very meager romance, which can never come to anything, of course."

"Never is a long time," Andrew suggested drily, aware of the intricacies he had set in motion by his mechanism for the coercing of destiny. "So, then, you have actually remained faithful to the old memory all this long time?"

"Does it surprise you?" She became grave. "I think that I have that virtue—faithfulness," she said, hesitatingly. "It's only an ideal, perhaps, but—she was violently aroused by Andrew's next words:

"I fancy," he said deliberately, "that I'm going to surprise you a bit. You shall see him soon."

The girl started, and her eyes sought those of the speaker in amazed questioning.

"Oh, Mr. Andrew! You can't mean—you can't mean!"

"Yes," the man said with quiet emphasis, "I do mean just what I have said. You shall see that ideal of yours very soon. That I promise you, my dear girl. Yes, you are to meet the one that owes his life to you, yet doesn't even know your name. And you are to meet him speedily too."

Lucene's eyes were like stars now, shimmering with the gusty joy of her heart, and her lips wreathed to a smile of delight.

"Oh, when?" she cried. "Oh, tell me when! It can't be true. It's too wonderful to be true. Is he—quite well?"

"Quite."

"When they took him away in the ambulance," she continued pensively, "I was sure that he must die. In spite of what I had tried to do for him."

"And so he would have died," Andrew said gravely, "but for you."

"I did do the right thing, didn't I?" she said appealingly.

"Yes," Andrew agreed. "You did the only thing that could have saved him. But tell me, if you please, how did you ever learn to make a tourniquet?"

"Why, as to that," came the ready reply. "I'd seen pictures of them in those 'first aid' things on a placard in a train, and I studied them until I understood the principle just because I had nothing else to do at the time. And then," a tremor was in her voice at the memory, "when he was thrown from the automobile right there at my feet almost and lay bleeding so dreadfully, then somehow I remembered."

"And you never forgot him," the man exclaimed, betrayed into open expression of his wonder over this lightning welding of hearts. "And you never forgot," he repeated softly, with a half envious note in his voice. "You never forgot, though neither of you even so much as knew the other's name."

The suggestion in his words quickened the girl's curiosity.

"Oh," she begged, "who is he?"

Andrew regarded her quizzically. "It was a small chance, a mighty small one, that you two should ever meet again, the little, friendly wail of the city and the brilliant man of the world. Yet so it was to be. Yes; it was for this purpose that I took the house here. For this same purpose I have created a family for you, Lucene, to take the place of the one you lost when you were a mere child. I have provided for you a father, a mother, a brother. Even I have made for you a blameless past—a past that will stand all the scrutiny it is ever likely to receive and more."

Nevertheless the girl, even in the face of these astonishing revelations, held her chief interest on that ideal around which had clustered the dearest reveries of her heart through the years. So now she made no comment, only:

"Does he remember me?"

"Much more than that," Andrew asserted briskly. "He has tried again and again to find you. Since my having you in charge it has been, of course, impossible for him to learn anything of you. But now the time has come to reveal you."

The girl's face darkened a little.

"Oh," she cried, grieved, "why didn't you let him find me, when you knew that I?"— Her voice broke piteously.

Lesson for February 7

THE SLAVERY OF SIN (TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—John 8:31-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Tells Us How to Be Free.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Makes Us Free.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Fight for Freedom.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Slavery or Freedom?

We are living in a day of boasted freedom. Revolt from authority is almost universal. Anarchy lifts up its vicious head in the home, society, business, state, nation, and the world. It is this spirit which is revolting against the Eighteenth amendment under the pretext of liberty and freedom. Sin which is fundamentally and essentially lawlessness (1 John 3:4) is back of all violations of the Eighteenth amendment. The vital truth of this lesson is the only solution of the prohibition question.

1. Discipleship and Freedom (vv. 31, 32).
Violators of the Eighteenth amendment are not true disciples of Christ. Some church men may be against this law, but not true disciples. In these verses Jesus indicates the following stages of discipleship:

1. Believe on Jesus (v. 31). This means not only assent to Christ's teaching, but acknowledgment of his authority. It means to give Christ the place of lordship over the life. All who allow Christ to rule their lives are in sympathetic obedience to the national constitution.

2. Continue in Christ's words (v. 31). To continue in his Word means:
a. Meditation upon it.
b. Confidence in it.
c. Prayer over it.
d. Obedience to it.

The teachings of Jesus Christ constitute the standard of life for every true disciple. His words are adequate for every decision, habit, or duty. The word of God is the sole and adequate rule of authority to the Christian. Indulgence in intoxicating liquor is prohibited by God's Word, even to the extent that drunkards are debarred from heaven (1 Cor. 6:10).

3. Assurance (v. 31). "Ye are my disciples indeed." Continuance in Christ's words demonstrates the fact of discipleship.

4. Knowledge of the truth (v. 32). Those who obey Christ after upon higher knowledge. They have an experiential knowledge. Demands made by God's Word are not always apprehended at the first, but those who continue in the ways of obedience come to know God and see that what he demanded was right (John 13:7).

5. Freedom (v. 32). The one who renders implicit obedience to Christ enters upon real freedom (Romans 8:2).

II. Righteousness and Freedom (vv. 33, 34).

Those who practice sin are in slavery. The evil doer is under the mastery of the Devil; "whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin." Doctor Plerson says that the sinner's slavery is threefold:

1. Slavery to guilt.
2. Slavery to penalty or judgment.
3. Slavery to power or habit.

A little thought shows the abjectness of this slavery. Consciousness of guilt is universal. All know that judgment is coming. In the sober moments of life all men acknowledge coming judgment and have "a certain fearful looking for of judgment." All know that they are helpless to break their habits of wrongdoing. Freedom is possible only in conformity with the divine will.

III. Sonship and Freedom (vv. 35, 36).

Regeneration is necessary in order to obtain freedom from sin. Sin's power must be broken through the salvation of the individual. The works of the Devil can only be destroyed through the regeneration of the individual. Happily Christ can destroy the Devil's works through the sonship of those who believe on him (1 John 3:7-9). The only way to secure sobriety on the part of man is to get him saved through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The Eighteenth amendment can no more make a nation sober than the ten commandments can make a man tell the truth and desist from murder. The only way to get the benefit of the Eighteenth amendment is to have a revival. It is in securing the sinner's freedom by bringing him as a child into the family of God. So long as people are ignorant of Christ they will remain in bondage to sin. Sin is a hard taskmaster and has as its end death (Romans 6:23).

SOME GLEANINGS

Riches are for spending.
Evasion is unworthy of us.
Learn the luxury of doing good.
Faith finds food even in famine.
An active tool never grows rusty.
We shall not see the sunlight of God's favor if we keep our eyes shut.

Two More Games Played on District Schedule

BROWNSBURG VS.
INDEPENDENTS
Saturday, February 6th.

The local rink was well filled on Saturday night and an enthusiastic crowd witnessed another Brownsburg-Lachute fixture in the league series. There were many visitors attending to support the 'Burg team, who won the laurels and added another triumph to their credit. Referees W. MacKimmie and H. Prevost called for a good clean game, and both line-ups complied, at the same time dishing up a display of fast and exciting hockey.

Cousineau led out with the first goal for our Independents and followed up this performance with a consistently brilliant game for the local forwards. His sure aim landed the rubber again in the Brownsburg net, while another goal by Giroux, gave the Independents a good lead of 3-0 in first period.

The visitors were spurred to activity and contrived, successfully, to even up the score in the second stanza. Charlebois scored on a fine pass from Gagnon. O. Gagne followed with another invincible rush and scored, while Pat Seary trebled the triumph on a long shot into the home goal. The Lachute boys were not idle either, but made no hits in the Brownsburg twine. Cruise and Giroux deserve credit for their steady, hard-checking play.

Third period brought Brownsburg well to the lead again, with one goal on the splendid Gagnon-Charlebois combination and two long-shot goals, by Charlebois and Seary—one being a quick score from centre ice, right after the face-off. Lachute was handicapped, having two men in penalty-box at different junctures. However, L. Cruise added a brilliant score for the local sextette. Independents claimed still another goal—which, however, was denied by the goal umpire. Observers also confirmed his stand that the puck had hit the post and bounced off. Brief dispute held the game up for a few moments. The period ended, and Brownsburg were victors with 6 goals to 4, thanks to good co-operative hockey, and stellar performance on the part of Charlebois, who deserves special mention.

The line-up:

Independents—Bedard in goal, Giroux and G. Lefebvre defence, P. Lefebvre centre, Cruise and Cousineau wing. Subs.—Jones, Drew, Beauchamp, Prevost.

Brownsburg—Leclair in goal, Gagne and Gagnon defence, A. St. Onge centre, Charlebois and Petlie wing. Subs.—R. St. Onge, McGibbon, Martin, Girard, Tomalty, Seary.

BROWNSBURG VS.
INDEPENDENTS
Return Game under Protest

A hard fought encounter between Independent and Brownsburg, on Brownsburg ice, constituted the 10th. fixture played among our district Hockey trio. The game on Tuesday night, drew a fair attendance from this town and an enthusiastic gate from Brownsburg itself; the match was ruled by referees MacKimmie and D. Lepine.

Cousineau scored the initial goal for Independents, and was followed by Jones who scored on a long dash which defied check by the 'Burg defence.

In the second clash Brownsburg was stired to action; and they soon managed to even up the count, Pat Seary and F. McGibbon each scoring.

Here, with the figures at 2-2 the game seemed indefinitely stuck, for—despite hard and clean play on both sides, neither team scored in the final period. The Referees called the boys out for an overtime session, but again there was no score, and

Mr. and Mrs. Doig Enjoy
Surprise Party

A most enjoyable time was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Doig, of Hoosier, Sask., on the evening of Jan. 26th., when some twenty of the pioneer neighbors together with the members of the Doig family surprised Mr. Paul B. Doig, who celebrated his 72nd. birthday, on that date.

The early part of the evening was spent in story telling and singing.

The floor was then cleared for dancing, which commenced with Grandpa Doig leading off the "French-eight," which was one of his old favorite dances. At midnight lunch was served, after which the party came to a close with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The Watchman staff and its readers join with the good people of Hoosier in extending their congratulations to our former residents and trust they will yet be spared a long time to enjoy the fruits of their labors.—Ed.

THE LATE MISS BEATRICE ROBERT (Sister Mary Walburga)

On Feb. 5th., there passed away at the Mother House of the Sisters of Providence, Lachine, Beatrice Robert, in religion Sister Mary Walburga.

Born in the parish of St. Philippe, March 24th., 1882, the youngest daughter of the late John Robert and his wife Anne Bryerton, the deceased received her education under the tuition of the sisters of Providence, at Lachine, graduating in June 1900 but a few years later she answered the Call and returned to take up the peaceful life of the religious, taking her final vows in 1906. Since then her time has been devoted to the duties of a teacher, a calling for which she was eminently qualified. In spite of a physical handicap she was also an artist of much ability and specimens of her exquisite work are treasured by her many friends.

The funeral took place at Lachine on Monday morning, the solemn service being held in the convent chapel and interment being in the adjoining cemetery. Her brother Mr. Jos. Robert, of St. Philippe, her nephew Mr. W. H. Robert, of Monalea, & niece Miss Tessie Robert, of Lachute, were present at the funeral, also her sister, Miss Mary Robert, of New York.

the crowd shouted frantically for action. The teams rallied again for a second overtime period, both intent on breaking the impasse. Paul Lefebvre succeeded in landing the puck in decisive territory, when he scored a goal for Lachute on a long, sure shot. He was followed by Cousineau, who scored again on a rush through a weary and winded defence. The score now stood 4-2 for Lachute, most of the players appearing the worse for their prolonged activity. The forward lines were changed to give the boys a rest, and Independents evidently suffered the worst of the shuffle! There remained only 4 minutes to play, when Brownsburg exerted their stronger offensive & turned the tables with four quick goals in as many minutes, Gagnon, McGibbon and Tomalty scoring (the latter, 2 goals). This closed the score at 6-4 in favor of Brownsburg.

Although tentatively a triumph for the 'Burg team in the season's court, this game is under protest and will, seemingly be played over again. The Brownsburg line-up included a goaler not on their registered team, and said to have been a Montreal man. The game was otherwise clean and well contested, only one penalty being imposed throughout the evening.

Mrs. John Campbell of Dalesville Celebrates 90th. Birthday

Reception held at Old Homestead

Mrs. John Campbell

To have attained the ripe old age of 90 years, still retaining all one's faculties and with a full enjoyment of health and vigor, is something for which one may be truly thankful. The editor of the Watchman had the pleasure this week of meeting and having a brief chat with Mrs. John Campbell, of Dalesville, who yesterday celebrated her 90th birthday and received the congratulations and good wishes of her many friends.

Keen and alert, with a wonderfully active mind, Mrs. Campbell was able to recall how, on the 11th. of June 1854, she set sail with her family on the vessel "John Hamilton," from Greenock, and that the boat trip took seven weeks and three days in the crossing; how they were lost in a dense fog outside Anticosti, and when soundings were taken they were perilously near the rock bound shore. Grave fears were entertained for their safety, but they finally landed in Quebec, where they were afterwards transferred to another boat and carried through to their destination at St. Andrews East, on the Ottawa River. Here, the family, comprising Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Dewar and their five children Donald, Catherine, Grace, (later Mrs. Archie Mitchell,) Betsy (Mrs. Jno. McArthur) and Christina (Mrs. Jno. Campbell) were safely landed and they immediately proceeded to walk to the home of Mr. Wm. Buchan on the Lachute Road. Here, they broke their journey, later going on to Jno. Stewart's at Brownsburg, and afterwards to Dalesville, which has been their home for nearly 80 years.

Born on the 10th of February, 1842, in Aberfeldy, Scotland, Mrs. Jno. Campbell has spent her life largely in Dalesville. She was educated in Lachute, being one of the first scholars to attend the College, with the late Rev. Jno. Mackie as Master. A diligent student, Mrs. Campbell sought teaching as a profession and was appointed to instruct in the East Settlement School, one of her pupils being the Rev. Dr. McClure, now deceased. After this she was engaged by the Dalesville Board, and for these duties, her recompense was but $11.00 per month.

The community was originally called "Dales Mill" after a lumber and grist mill founded and run by Mr. Daniel Dale, which was later taken over by Jno. Campbell and is still being carried on by his son Arthur. It was not until the post office was installed that the name was changed to "Dalesville." With the development of the milling industries and the perfection of our highways, the old grist mills have been abandoned. Yet they served their day and generation and proved a boon to those early settlers, who previously had to trek over rough trails to Lachute or St. Andrews, often carrying their loads upon their backs. So, too, the Campbell grist mill ceased to operate; but the saw mill, burnt down, rebuilt, and vastly improved, continued to serve the countryside and to furnish a livelihood for the Campbell homestead.

Thus it was, that Mrs. Campbell's 8 sturdy boys were literally born and bred into the lumber business, and inherited from their father, himself a veteran mill-wright, their keen insight into the handling and milling of timber. And although the sons did not all continue along the same line of business, a certain love and inclination to the family trade was, and is still, inherent in their blood. Mr. John Campbell passed away in February 10th., 1909.

The subject of our sketch was married to Mr. John Campbell in 1862 and their family comprised eleven children of whom two, James and George have passed away, the remaining members of the family being, Daniel and Robert E. of Revelstoke, B.C., Peter C. of Salmon Arm, B.C., John M. and Stewart S. of Lachute, Joseph Arthur of Dalesville, Jessie E. (Mrs. G. Murdoch), Jean E. (Mrs. J. McKenzie), Catherine M. (Mrs. H. Fuller), of Le Pas, Man. In alluding to her large family, one of the remarks made by Mrs. Campbell, regarding the early pioneer days was that while she herself was blessed with good health, doctors were not great frequenters to their homestead, for she counted that $30.00 would cover the doctors' bills for her additions to the country. Mrs. Campbell has 36 grandchildren living and six great grandchildren and all who are left of her generation are two cousins, Allan Stewart, of Brownsburg, and Mrs. Ebenezer Hendry, of Hollywood, Calif., the latter celebrating her 100th birthday last June.

Happily surrounded by several members of her family Mrs. Campbell chatted quite freely of the past. And we could not help but recall those quaint lines penned by another dear old soul whose sentiments Mrs. Campbell was doubtless sharing:—

"I shall be glad when they are all grown up
I said in the day long past;
Now with an aching heart, I wish—
They had not grown up so fast."

A reception in honor of the event was held on Wednesday, when there was a large gathering at the old home in Dalesville. The family were all present with the exception of Kate (Mrs. Fuller, of Le Pas), and Pete, of Salmon Arm, B. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Campbell, of Ottawa and the Rev. Mr. Baxter, of Brownsburg, were also there.

Congratulations were numerous, and greatly appreciated, especially one which came by radio from C.F.C.F. to join in the good wishes.

Lachute Curling Club

CURLERS HOLD MIXED
BONSPEL

On Tuesday evening last a large number of our local Curlers gathered together for a Mixed Bonspell. This event was held with a two-fold idea, firstly to honor the Ladies who recently played in the Caledonia Challenge with such great credit; secondly to pay tribute to Mr. John MacGibbon, who recently celebrated his 80th. birthday.

After Mr. Valois, the President, had explained the object of the gathering, Mr. J. W. Gall was called on to make the presentation of a beautiful cane.

Though not in years, Mr. MacGibbon is one of the youngest members of our Club both in spirit and activity. To see him running up and down the ice in such a spry manner, and taking the keenest of interest, very seldom missing the mark he has in view, one cannot realize that he carries that number of years with him.

Taken absolutely by surprise at the presentation, Mr. MacGibbon, in a few well chosen remarks, thanked the gathering for their very great kindness and thoughtfulness.

He related briefly on the activities of Curling during his earlier days since which time he has been a most ardent supporter of the game. In fact he claims that Curling has greatly assisted in keeping him young.

Prizes were given to Mrs. J. A. MacGibbon, Mrs. Cottingham, Mrs. J. MacKimmie Jr., and Mr. Valois, for having obtained the highest score in the Mixed Bonspell of the evening.

Dainty refreshments were served and a very happy evening spent.

Finals of the Dunany Cup were played off on Wednesday evening last, when Mr. P. Chabot won out against Dr. Drew in a score of 13 to 7.

Great interest has been shown during this contest and it has again been proven that Curling is a slippery game, several teams having practically won until the last stone was played. Too wide, too narrow, too short or too strong. However, such is life.

The line-up was as follows: G. Muir, S. S. Campbell, R. Todd, P. Chabot, (Skip.)
T. Todd, H. McFaul, R. Hamilton, Dr. Drew, (Skip.)

LADIES' CURLING

The ladies entertained three rinks from Montreal on Monday last, comprising St. Andrews, Montreal West and Royal Montreal the latter team being presented with silver spoons.

Miss Lila Giles, Mrs. R. A. Giles, Mrs. J. W. Gall and Mrs. E. H. Wilson comprised a visiting team to Montreal, where they were entertained by the St. Lawrence Curling Club on Tuesday last.

Canadian Ministers Discuss Power Plan

Development of the international waters of the St. Lawrence River for power and navigation will result in the saving of millions of dollars because some of the works are common to both projects, stated Mr. G. S. Henry, Provincial Premier, on his return from Ottawa where the development scheme was discussed with Mr. R. B. Bennett, Dominion Prime Minister, and members of his Government.

Mr. Henry said that the power would pay for its own cost and would not be charged with any part of the navigation costs. It is believed that the development of the two undertakings, power and navigation, will extend over a number of years, probably about 12. Nothing has been decided as to when the work would be commenced.

Burglary Attempt at W. G. Staniforth's Store

Constable Gagne.

Learning that an attempted robbery was to be made at Staniforth's on Monday night, our town constable laid wait for the thief and had rather a thrilling experience before landing his man in the toils. On information received, Constable Gagne passed word to Mr. Staniforth and together they secreted themselves in the store. True enough, about one o'clock they saw a man pass by, then walk through the lane and try the back door, but without success. He then walked down the street, returning a few minutes later with small crowbar with which he worked to obtain entrance. Satisfying himself it was now time to act; Gagne jumped out and the thief took to his heels, with the constable following, and not until a shot was fired did the thief stop. Ordering him to hold up his hands, Gagne saw a piece of steel flash and fortunately ducked his head, thus preventing his being knocked out. With the assistance of Mr. Staniforth's son Cecil, the bracelets were slipped on and the fellow landed safely in the cells.

On being arraigned before Justices Chabot and Daoust on Tuesday morning, he gave his name as Xavier Robinson, aged 19 years, formerly of Beech Ridge, but now of Montreal. He was committed to stand his trial and is now in custody at St. Jerome.

Mr. Staniforth lost heavily in the burglary at his store last fall, and is pleased at the prompt action and alertness of our town constable.

Vankleek Hill Seed Cleaning Plant

The power seed cleaner has been installed in Vankleek Hill. The Mowl grader machine, for grading wheat, oats and barley has not yet arrived, but when this addition has been made, a demonstration is to be held to mark the opening of the plant.

Due to the efforts of the Vankleek Hill Agricultural Society this plant has been made available for the cleaning of seeds and seed grains for the farmers in the district and it is anticipated that a large number of farmers, will take advantage of the service offered. In those sections, particularly in the Ottawa Valley, where seed cleaning plants have been in operation for four or five seasons a great improvement in the quality of the crops has been noted.

The Captain's Corner

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER.

"PENNY WISE AND POUND FOOLISH."

Dear Boys :—

I wonder if you have heard of the above expression. It is an old English saying that at one time was very popular.

Supposing now, you were going into business, one for which you had received special training and in every other way considered you had a liking for, would it not be stupid to limit your activities in time, energy and money, on the mistaken idea that you must be over cautious, careful and anxious as regards the future?

This is what is meant by being "PENNY WISE AND POUND FOOLISH."

You will find that the fellow who is over cautious is bound to be the one that makes the slowest progress in what he undertakes to do. I do not mean that he should rush into things without duly considering the wisdom of each step in his programme; that is mere foolishness, but I do say that to hesitate to invest everything he possesses in a legitimate effort to get ahead in his business shows a lamentable lack of courage and resolution. In other words, he proves that he has no faith in himself or his business. How then can he expect others to give him their confidence? If they don't, he is a failure.

Some historians will tell you that the British Empire, of which you are a part, was built up in early days by the spirit of adventure and the characteristics of pluck and energy and this is to a very large extent true. Turning over the pages of a magazine the other day, I came across a question, "Has the Spirit of Adventure died out of the British race?" Well, for my part, I don't believe it has. True to-day, we are living in an age when everything seems to be made easy for us. Our home, play and business seem to be standardized and run on definite orthodox lines; but right down in our hearts I believe we are just as plucky and just as adventurous as the old soldiers and pioneers who started out to build up our Empire.

You boys show this clearly on your playing fields. You have no use for the fellow who 'funks' the 'rush' of the opposing team and would leave to others the post of danger and difficulty, and it must be the same when you start out in business, after you leave School.

You must have confidence in yourself and be prepared to prove to others that by your pluck, enterprise and energy this confidence is not misplaced. "Don't spoil the ship for a ha'pound of Tar." Think that out and then compare it with the heading under which I have written this week. You will find they both mean the same thing.

Your affectionate friend,
THE CAPTAIN.

"The Return of Timothy"

"Let's drop anchor," said Kenrick suddenly. "It's such a warm day, I vote we have a bathe. What do you think about it you fellows?" "Too deep for the anchor here," replied Henderson, "but it's a good idea, Ken. Turn her round and we will try and get in nearer to the shore." The little boat swung round, answering the helm well, and Eric had to move quickly as the sail adjusted itself to the new direction. A few moments later, Henderson hauled down the sail and gave orders for the anchor to be dropped over the side and soon they were riding the waves, safely held.

"Nothing to do now," laughed Kenrick, "but get undressed. I suppose you can swim, Eric?" "Oh yes," was the eager response. I learnt to swim in the lake at home. You should just see that place for—" "Alright youngster, we will take it as said," interrupted Henderson. "What you have got to do now is to get out of those clothes as quickly as you can and over the side with you, see?" Kenrick however was first undressed and with a joyful shout he sprang in the sea with such force and energy that the boat rocked from side to side.

An anxious look came into Henderson's face. "That was a silly thing to do, to jump off in that way, for its bound to have put an awful strain on the anchor. Look here, Eric, you be more careful as you go over, it will be no joke to have us go adrift."

Eric looked up. He was stripped and ready and he at once caught the serious note in his chums voice. "I will be careful. You watch me," he said and climbed on to one of the seats placing one foot and then the other on the extreme edge. He then raised his hands above his head, took a deep breath and dived.

Oh the joy and pleasure of that first meeting with the waves of St. Aubyn's Bay, on that bright sunny morning. It seemed to him that his downward rush would never end, but ever so quickly, he felt the sensation of rising and then his head appeared above the surface and he was able to look around. A short distance away was Kenrick's dark head, bobbing up and down like a great big cork. He raised his arm and shouted, which action made him turn round so that he could see the boat and was in time to watch Henderson's masterly dive. "What's that you have in your hand?" he asked as his friend joined him. "A ball my friend, a ball. Here you are. Catch it." and though of course he missed, Eric was after it with a yell of excitement, such a yell that it brought Kenrick swimming quickly in their direction.

"By all the powers that be," he spluttered, "at least I thought you were drowning. What! A ball. Oh fun. Here, let me have it. Oh boy, this is a game!"

Fast and furious the game went on, the three boys taking no thought for time. Why should they; was it not a holiday, when Masters, books, and school could well be forgotten for the time being?

At last Henderson suddenly paused in the act of throwing the ball to Eric. "Don't you think we had better finish," he said, "I am beginning to feel hungry."

Eric nodded his head and was about to reply when there came a cry from Kenrick, "Oh look you chaps, Oh look. The boat has drifted and is nearly out of sight."

Dear Captain,—

I read your corner in the Watchman every week and I read this week about your Pet letter contest, so I thought I would try and win a book as I am fond of reading.

I have two very nice kittens and I regret that they are growing up. One is a Maltese and the other a Persian. Their names are Tubby and Bubby and they just suit them as they are fat.

Yours truly, Patty Smith.

Very glad to have your letter Patty, and the news of your pets. You will see I have not had space to print all of it. I hope you win a prize, this or some other time.

The Captain.

Lakefield, Quebec.

Dear Captain,—

I would like to join your Birthday Club. I have been reading your Corner for a long time and I think it is very interesting. I am a girl 14 years old.

Isabel McDonald.

Delighted to receive your letter, Isabel. I am sorry, but we don't seem to have received your previous letter. Write again.

AUNTIE DI'S LETTER.

My Dear Children :—

Isn't this wonderful? News! News! An anon-y-mous correspondent—(My! what hard words!) has sent me a radio-gram (that's a wireless message, you know) from a liner on the Atlantic! It goes like this :—

"Saw Harigold Mid-Atlantic today. He was riding on the back of whale. Said he hoped no-one was worrying but he wants to see the world."

So you see, dears, Harigold is safe! And now we know he just dived down that waste pipe on purpose to get away to seek his fortune. Poor foolish little Harigold! I do hope no harm will come to him on his travels, don't you?

When I told Marigold about the radio-gram she just gave one contemptuous flick of her tail and swam away to join Barigold. So I imagine that she no longer cares for Harigold as she used, and after all it serves him right. Don't you think so?

Well, chicks, how are you all feeling? I haven't had many letters from you lately but I expect you are busy writing to the Captain and entering for his competition. I think he thinks of the jolliest things for competitions, and I am seriously thinking of pretending to be a little member of the Captain's Corner so that I can enter and win a lovely prize. Don't you tell him, now, will you?

Good-bye till next week, dears.

Your loving Auntie Di.

Marjory-Ella goes to the Fair.

"Go on, Trudy," said Peter, as Trudy finished her tea. "I do so want to know where the twins are?"

So Trudy went on.

"Marjory-Ella was frantic. She felt dreadfully worried because the twins had been left in her care, and through her careless day-dreaming some harm might have come to them. She could see the swinging boats at the extreme end of the fair ground, and her first thought was that perhaps the naughty little couple had crept away to see if Mickey and Danny would let them swing. So she hastily turned to go towards the swings, but just as she did so a small crowd of people standing round one of the side shows attracted her attention. There seemed to be quite a commotion going on there and Marjory-Ella hurried over to see if by any chance her little charges were amongst the little knot of people gathered there.

She pushed her way between a stout old lady and an errand boy, with a big basket, and at last saw what was the cause of the confusion. To her utter horror and amazement, there stood a great, big policeman, holding a sobbing, frightened twin by the shoulder, one with each of his great, big hands! An excited showman was talking very fast and very angrily, and the big policeman was trying to quieten him and the twins at the same moment.

Marjory-Ella ran up to the children and when they saw her they clutched at her with their little hands, wildly. "Oh, Marjory-Ella; we didn't, we didn't!" sobbed Biddy.

Marjory-Ella put her arms round them both, for she could see that something terrible must have happened and the twins had somehow become involved. As she was soothing them, the excited showman burst out again to the policeman :—

"But I tell yer I saw 'em. They put them there watches back on my table when I caught sight of 'em and tried to run away! I say I saw 'em do it, an' every day this week something's been took from 'ere!"

Marjory-Ella was furiously indignant when she heard this. Just as if Biddy and Bunny would steal!

"These children did not touch your things," she began, "and today is the first time we have ever been here so—" But the showman grew more angry still at this and began to shout "Oh you're another one of 'em, I guess! You will go to the station, too, then, with the policeman. I will have my 'joolry' made good. I will!"

But here the big policeman saw fit to interfere. He looked at Marjory-Ella's crimson cheeks and big blue eyes full of tears, and said kindly to her, "Look here, girlie, I'll settle this. You hold these kiddies a moment."

Marjory-Ella clasped the twins to her and gave the policeman a grateful look. He went aside and talked earnestly to the showman for a few moments, and at last the latter seemed a little pacified.

"Well, alright," Marjory-Ella heard, him say at length. "You take 'em down to the police station and see what you can find out. I'm not going to have you let 'em go scot free when I tell you I saw 'em with them watches in their 'ands.'"

So the policeman took a twin by each hand and told Marjory-Ella to come along. "Don't be scared, now," he said, because I'm just going to get you out of this mess as soon as I can. We'll just go along to the station and see if these little twins can explain things a bit."

Poor Marjory-Ella! She tried not to mind the dreadful situation, but how could she ever hold her head up again! To have to walk along with a policeman and go to the police-station, just as if they were all arrested! And as for Biddy and Bunny, the poor little things were so frightened that they just ran along by the officer's side with tears rolling down their cheeks, trying to keep up with his long strides.

As soon as they were clear of the fair ground and the last few curious people had ceased to follow them, the policeman stopped and looked at the twins.

"You poor little kids!" he said. "If you ain't scared stiff!" He bent down and with a big handkerchief dried their tearful little faces and then said, "How about a nice ride, one on each of my shoulders? We'll soon be there now and then I'm going to see you safely looked after. Now don't cry any more," he went on, and swung the twins up, one on to each of his broad shoulders. "Come along, little girl. Why, you don't need to be afraid of me!"

Indeed, Marjory-Ella was not afraid of him any more, he seemed so nice and kind, but she was dreadfully scared at the idea of going to the police-station, though she noticed gratefully that the twins were looking happier, almost as if they were enjoying the ride.

"Now I'll have to finish this story next week, Peter," said Trudy, because it's growing so late. Goodnight, dear!"

"I can't make out what the twins have done, Trudy!" said Peter.

"Well, be patient, and it will all come right in the end, I hope, Peter," replied Trudy. So Peter ran off, fairly satisfied for once.

Goodnight, Chicks, sweet dreams!

TRUDY.

Our Puzzle Corner

The maxim that there are always a right way and a wrong way of doing anything applies in a very marked degree to the solving of puzzles. Here the wrong way consists in making aimless trials without method, hoping to hit on the answer by accident—a process that generally results in our getting hopelessly entangled in the trap that has been artfully laid for us.

Occasionally, however, a problem is of such a character that, though it may be solved immediately by trial, it is very difficult to do so by a process of pure reason. But in most cases the latter one is the only one that gives any real pleasure.

When we sit down to solve a puzzle, the first thing to do is to make sure as far as we can that we understand the conditions. For if we do not understand what we have to do, we are not very likely to succeed in doing it. We all know the story of the man who was asked the question, "If a herring and a half cost three-halfpence, how much will a dozen herrings cost?" After several unsuccessful attempts he gave it up, when the propounder explained to him that a dozen herrings would cost a shilling. "Herrings" exclaimed the other apologetically; "I was working it out in haddocks."

Many years ago a Royal Palace was so overrun with mice that the King gave orders that all cats from the country round should be obtained to exterminate the vermin. A record was kept, and at the end of a year it was found that every cat had killed an equal number of mice, and the total was exactly 1,111,111 mice. How many cats do you suppose there were?

Do I hear someone say that one cat killed the lot?

Out upon thee brother I said cats. Or 1,111,111 cats did not kill one mouse each either. I said "mice" and all I need add that each cat killed mice then there were cats. Answer next week.

All that is necessary to solve last week's puzzle is to add the two distances at which the messengers meet to twice their difference.

Thus 720 plus 400 plus 640 is equal to 1760 yards which is the distance required. Or put it another way, three times the first distance less the second distance will always give the answer, only the first distance should be more than two-thirds of the second.

When the children have left me at bedtime,
And the day has come to a close
I sit in my chair, by the fireside,
For restful and quiet repose.

What should be the day's precious hour
Is with me; but then I do miss
The loved ones gone off to their bower,
After prayers and the good night kiss.

Their little arms were around me
And still do I feel the sheer joy
Of the fetters of love and that abound there
As I gaze at some childish toy.

Riches and fame have ne'er found me,
But still I feel sure in my head
That God has been good in his kindness,
He sent us our Children instead.

WORK AHEAD OF CANADIAN PARLIAMENT

With the opening of another session of the Dominion Parliament at Ottawa, it is probable more will be heard of the Government's plans for the Imperial Economic Conference to be held in the Canadian capital later in the year. The parliamentary session may be to some extent, a prelude to the meeting of Prime Ministers and other responsible leaders from the several nations within the British Union.

Among possible measures to be dealt with at the Empire conference, steps toward the lowering of tariff barriers for preferential trade are being discussed. Opposition members of Parliament doubtless will want to know how far the Government of Canada is prepared to go in the direction of freer trade. Mr. Mackenzie King, the Opposition leader, declared recently in Winnipeg that the Liberal Party would favor the return of the Canadian tariff to

THE TALE OF A STEW

This is a very humble tale. Just about an ordinary everyday stew. Merely to show that you can have good meals at a low price. This particular stew weighed around three pounds & cost 39 cents. Now, if you want to have a good stew to-morrow, you must cook it to-day. That may sound Irish—oh, well! So is the stew. Seriously though, stew is very much better the next day and should not be eaten the day it is cooked. We cooked the stew at a low temperature for several hours until the meat was so tender it was fairly falling to pieces. Then the next day for dinner we cooked it for a little while and just 12 minutes before serving we added Dumplings.

DUMPLINGS

1½ cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Sift these and add sufficient milk to make a soft dough, much softer than a biscuit dough. Drop by tablespoons into the boiling liquid. The following things should be remembered & you will have dumplings as light as a proverbial feather.

1. Have your stew boiling & keep it boiling.

2. Cover the kettle closely & do not remove it while cooking.

3. Very important. Place your dumplings on solid pieces, either meat or vegetable. Do not put them into the liquid.

After the dumplings are cooked and taken out, give the stew a vigorous stirring to break up the pieces of meat (if you like it that way) and thicken with flour mixed to a smooth paste with water. Cook long enough after it has thickened to take away the starchy taste of the flour.

MEAT PIE

The next day we made Meat Pie with the rest of the stew which was left after the first day's dinner. You may make the paste to either biscuit dough or pastry. The chief thing to remember in making meat pie successfully is to have the meat cold. Pastry on hot meat is ruined.

CORNISH PASTIES

There was still some meat left so we made some pasties for supper, and I am telling you the family liked them. There were made from biscuit dough fairly thin, slightly thicker than pastry, and much thinner than biscuits. The dough was cut into squares and a spoonful of meat placed on each square to one side of the halving line. The dough was folded over and the edges pinched together and baked in a hot oven. These were served with tomato sauce.

Tomato Sauce—1 cup strained tomatoes; 2 tablespoons flour 1 tablespoon butter.

Add ½ teaspoon minced onion or onion juice to tomato and heat. Mix flour with sufficient water to make a smooth paste. Add the hot tomato juice to this stirring it slowly. Cook until thick and then cook two minutes longer. Add the butter and season with salt, pepper & sugar. Tomatoes vary so much that it is difficult to give the exact amounts of seasoning required.

PRE-WAR PRICES

Meat costs should be reckoned by portions to get an accurate cost. For instance, that stewing meat served 5 people for three meals, that is 15 portions and cost 39 cents or 2-3/5 cents a portion. When we first started keeping house, shortly before the war, I reckoned on the cheaper cuts costing from 2 to 3 cents a portion and the steaks and chops from 5 to 6 cents a portion, which is what they are costing about now.

The moral of this tale is that you can have attractive meat dishes at slight cost, providing you are ready to do a bit of work and fussing with them. I can safely say that these three particular meals were the cheapest and most attractive meals we had that week.

"It's Lucky you have a Telephone"

Jim Ross hadn't noticed the broken fence until his favorite roan mare got caught in the barbed wire and cut her leg.

It didn't seem a bad cut at first, but blood poisoning set in and Jim thought he was going to lose a valuable horse. A hurried telephone call brought the veterinary surgeon.

"I think we can save her, Jim," the veterinary said, "but another couple of hours might have been too late. It's lucky you have a telephone."

these river-born towns and cities be duplicated, for they are the essence of the spirit of this great river.

The river has a personality and it has impressed itself upon the people. The valley has been the cradle of the Canadian people, a kind resting place for those who, in pioneer days, had the courage to cross the sea to new and untried lands, or those who sacrificed everything but their loyalty in the revolution of the American colonies and trekked north to live under the flag to which they had been born. More than a dozen generations have used the broad river as a highway to adventure and from the metropolis to the tiniest hamlet that clusters in the fold of a hill, each and all have taken on something of their character from the river.

PROSPERITY AHEAD

From newspapers published in 1907, the following headlines have been compiled, in a column reproduced by the Sydney Herald. Depression appears to have been rampart, at that time, and the foundations of the stock and bond business were evidently shaken, as severely as in these past two years. But subsequent revival of business after that crisis, may now re-assure us that prosperity will return once again, as it did then. We need not be downhearted in our anticipation of the future. Here are the "scare headings" of the 1907 depression:—

"New York Central Fails to Earn Dividend—Deficit of $2,411,592 for Six months."

"Heavy Selling in United States Steel—Directors Admit Falling off of New Business."

"General Decline in Prices."

"Stock Continue Downward Plunge."

"Wall Street Believes Financial Chaos Near."

"Stocks Tumble to New Low Levels."

"Scared Brokers May Appeal to President."

"Excitement at the Union Pacific Post—U. S. Steel at 30."

"Whole World Fast Turning to Socialism."

"Call Money New Low at 2½ Per cent."

"Stocks Tumble Like Ninepins in Bear Raid—Northern Pacific Post—U. S. Steel at 30."

NEW GAME "NURSERY" MANITOBA

Largest Herd of Elk in Canada Found in Riding Mountain Park

Riding Mountain Park in Central Manitoba, recently set aside by the Canadian Government as a prominent National Park, promises to become one of the most remarkable natural zoos in the world. Although there are no cages in the whole 1,400 square miles of its extent, visitors may here make personal acquaintance with all kinds of Canadian wild life, including several assorted varieties of bear, moose, deer, beaver, marten, and even buffalo, a small herd of these rugged creatures having been transferred to the park from Wainwright, Alberta. In the confines of the park these animals roam in complete freedom, protected from the hunter and propagating their kind under ideal conditions.

As in other Canadian game sanctuaries, the animals of Riding Mountain Park are quickly losing their instinctive fear of man, so much so that their friendly visits to the camp fire in search of tit bits from the larder have become one of the most attractive features of the park for all who love the great outdoors. In the park also are found some 3,000 Elk, the largest herd in the whole of Canada, and almost any morning early, visitors to the park may see bands of 50 to 100 of these magnificent creatures browsing casually among the lush marsh grasses which border the smaller lakes.

Much work has recently been done to improve conditions for visitors to the park. The golf course on Clear Lake has been still further conditioned for the coming summer and facilities for tourists added to. New trails running to its farthest confines have also been cut through the forest for the benefit of hikers and trail riders. With the Canadian National Railways line running within

There are many, many arguments against war—which fully justify every heartfelt effort toward disarmament which may evolve from the Conference deliberations at Geneva. This prolonged period of post-war readjustment, constitutes in itself one potent reason for real and lasting peace.

During a recent address before the Union of Manitoba Municipalities, Dr. D. A. Stewart, a veteran member of that organization, stressed the argument very forcefully in the following words:—

"What tremendous things have happened since 1909! Since then we lived through the war. Now we exist through the peace. There are ten thousand reasons against war, but if all the other reasons, if religion & civilization and humanity were cast aside, there is still one reason why war should be outlawed, and that is to avoid the years of so-called peace that follow the war—the wrangling, the disarrangement, the jealousy, the unrest, and the crushing debts that burden the children's children even unto the third and fourth generation of the nations that seek war.

"The destruction of war must surely be followed by the reconstruction of peace. The noisy, riotous, drunken night of war must be followed by the headaches, and the heartaches, and backaches also, of the sobering morning after.

"This time of fighting our way through false and unstable peace to assured and permanent peace threatens civilization as much as war itself. What is civilization? It is not radio or an electrical age, or travel at two or three hundred miles an hour, or two or three thousand miles an hour for that matter. The word "civic" means citizen, and civilizing means citizenizing. In so far as we can live together in communities, and in a world of communities, wisely, efficiently, kindly, orderly, nobly, happily, peacefully, equitably, brotherly,—in so far as we are citizenized, civilized. But in so far as we live ignorantly, quarrelsomely, dishonestly, cruelly, hatefully, inefficiently, either in our community or in the world of communities, we are not yet civilized."

Romance in St. Lawrence River.

To those who love their Canada—and where is there to be found a Canadian who does not love her—this extract from Saguenay by Blodwen Davies will be of interest:—

If there is a river anywhere haunted by old ships and old adventurers, surely it must be the St. Lawrence. I am quite sure that there are still summer nights when ears delicately attuned to the things of long ago can hear the sweep and splash of Viking oars, or late sunsets when they catch the rustle of Basque sails, lowering for the night. There is no doubt whatever that there are still echoes of the old songs of Normandy and Brittany as they were sung from sea-washed decks, and even lusty tunes that came from Devon with Saunders' sea dogs.

Of all Canada, the lands lying on the shores of the St. Lawrence are the most characteristic. Nowhere in the world can

"They're Off!"—In Old Quebec

The Eleventh annual Eastern International Dog Sled Derby—crowning event of the 1932 Winter Sport season—is scheduled for February 22-24. For those three days, all eyes turn to Quebec City, where each day the fight between the best dog teams in America over a course of 40-odd miles a day is staged. Emil St-Godard, Leonhard Seppala, hero of the rush with diphtheria serum to Nome a few years back, are among the contenders, of whom last year there were eleven and this year there will likely be even more. In all, the race covers a distance of 123 miles and the finish is in Quebec itself through crowds of thousands of fans, lining the streets and cheer on the victor.

Handsome cash prizes are awarded, but this year interest is much above the usual. St-Godard who has won the race four times in the last five years, has two legs on the Speed Cup and another win this year will give it to him permanently. Seppala has two legs on the Gold Cup for the best conditioned dog and stands to win it permanently this year. Prizes total $2,150 with a first prize of $800; second prize, $600; third prize, $300; then $200, $100, $75, $50 and $25 in that order. In addition there is the Gold Cup for the best conditioned dog and the Speed Cup awarded to the team making the fastest time for a lap during the three days of racing.

The event winds up with the Dog Derby Costume Ball held at the Chateau Frontenac, the Canadian Pacific's great hotel, on Wednesday, February 24 at which prizes and cups are awarded to the winners.

RURAL MEMBERS OBJECT Claim Extension of Health Unit Too Costly

Rural members made it plain to the Government in the Legislative Assembly that although they personally and many within their own counties are anxious to have health units, there is a feeling that this is no time for the Government to extend the bill and force municipalities to contribute around $6,000 per year per county for these units. General opinion was that the matter should remain optional for each county, and that it would be best to await better days when the counties will be richer and the Government might be able to give more generously for the units.

Who Says it Doesn't Pay to Advertise?

Judging by the numerous enquiries we received by phone, mail and other sources of communication by land, sea and air last week in reply to an advertisement for "An Organ Wanted", we have come to the conclusion that Argenteuil County is not so musical as in the good old pioneer days, for at least twenty-five answers were received within a day and a half, which shows what results the "Watchman" advertising can bring. Does it pay to advertise?

ONLY COWS, YET—

Of course, the cows didn't know anything about it. They may have heard their human caretakers talking about it, but they did not understand. If they had, maybe they might not have done what they did. But being blissfully unaware of the almost universal attitude, the cows of Washington State contentedly chewed their cud and bountifully produced $53,000,000 worth of dairy products right in the midst of the "depression" of 1931.

Furthermore, as though to show they could not be influenced by adverse conditions, these cows produced more than any Washington cows ever had done before. While in former years they had made an average of 4900 pounds of butter fat each in 1931 they made 5800 pounds each. This fine showing not only hung up a record for themselves, but another result was that some dairiest that had not been making expenses last year made a profit.

In recognition of their splendid performance, Dr. Robert Prior, state superintendent, of dairies and livestock, announces he will award blue ribbons to these cows as wealth producers.

The cows hadn't heard of anything to fear. They didn't quit spending money for food and shelter. They kept right on eating and living as normally as they had been accustomed to do and produced the best they had to offer in rich, foamy milk.

To be sure, they were only cows—but they accomplished something so worth thinking about that it got them into the newspapers.

BAHAMA TOMATOES FIND FAVOR WITH HOUSEWIVES Large Quantities From West Indies Shipped to Several Cities Throughout Canada

Although the shipment of Bahama tomatoes to Canada in quantity began only last year, it is expected that before the present season is finished well over 100,000 crates will have been absorbed by the Canadian market. One of the largest single shipments to reach Canada this season came in by the Canadian National freighter "Cathcart" and reached Montreal in special Canadian National Railways refrigerator cars. It consisted of 9,000 crates, most of which were for the Montreal and Winnipeg markets. The "Lady Rodney," arriving in Halifax, also carried a heavy consignment, believed to be in the neighborhood of 11,000 crates.

This year's crop, although later than last, is of excellent quality and the method of packing has been improved. The price is lower than that which has to be charged for United States, Cuban and Mexican tomatoes owing to the preferential treatment accorded West Indian produce under the Canada-West Indies trade agreement. Most of the fruit is absorbed in Montreal & other Quebec points although this season Toronto & other Ontario cities are taking a larger proportion than ever before, the tomatoes having found great favor with the Ontario housewives because of their fine coloring and flavor. Considerable quantities are also being shipped successfully as far as Winnipeg and other western cities.

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Sir:—

Since the publication of the last number of "Memories of Old St. Andrews" which referred to the Manor House Bell from the Mohawk Valley, the writer has had an opportunity to make a more careful examination, and he has discovered that the bell (which exhibits the lettering of "Amsterdam," and was presented to the Rev. Archibald Henderson by Sir John Johnson bears the date 1764.

This settles finally the question of its age.

The publication of this correction would oblige.

Roads and Road Makers----Past and Present
Romance and Reality of other Days

By Evelyn Lea, in the Cape Times

Roads are an evidence of civilization. Primitive man makes no roads—he follows, maybe, the winding way grazed by the elephant or the game tracks leading to the water holes, or rhino as he browses among the undergrowth. The Bushman followed no track at all. With the homing instinct of the lower animals and the fear of being himself trapped, he sensed unerringly his direction towards home or food.

From their habit of walking one behind the other (Indian file), the Redskins wore but narrow tracks, whilst the impies of South African natives trod down broad paths across the veld.

In nature there are many roads. Besides those leading to the water holes, there are the monkey paths through the jungle trees, and the, to us, invisible way along which the newly-hatched elvers, hatched in mid-Atlantic, find their way to the rivers of England and Scotland, up which the eels will travel to pass the second stage of their strange life cycle, and along which they will return to spawn again in mid-Atlantic. Salmon and seals share this strange habit of journeying to and from the place of spawning, and the time of their outward and backward journeys may be known to a day or two.

Then there is the invisible way, be it an air current, ancestral memory or what, along which the birds will migrate at their appointed time.

Different circumstances have gone to form the beautiful curves of the English lanes. Broadly speaking, all the old lanes led to the parish church, usually set upon a hill, and so visible to many. But before the age of drainage, many a turn had to be made to avoid a swampy bit, and so came the lovely, winding roads, opening up ever-varying views. How much more beautiful than the dead-straight roads of later make. The British Government spent much money in making direct roads through the forests of West Africa, along which the natives might bring their produce, but the long, straight vista was too heart-breaking for the loaded natives, and the broad, straight roads were abandoned for the longer, winding paths hacked out by their own axes, and browsed clear by flocks of goats driven in for the purpose.

Roadmakers.

To come to the professional roadmakers, one's thoughts turn, perhaps, first to the Romans. Their most celebrated road was perhaps the Appian way, the "Queen of Roads," as it was called and of which, although built in B.C. 313, a large part is still visible.

To such road builders as the Romans it was but natural that, following on the conquest of Britain, they should set to work on road construction, and, with slave labour, length of road was of less importance, and for nothing did they turn aside—the roads must be straight whatever the obstacle.

Watling Street, one of these roads, ran from Dover, through Canterbury, to London and then on north. Parts of this road may still be traced, and it has given its name to one of London's streets.

Later in England's history came the post coach roads, and the toll gates at which toll was collected for the upkeep of the roads. The mention of the coach roads calls up many a romance—Dick Turpin's ride from London to York, coaches help up by masked highwaymen, picturesque clad men replying with their pistols, and swooning women inside the coach. Headlong races towards Gretna Green—an eloping couple in the first post-chaise, and frantic father close in pursuit.

Mule Pack Roads.

Meandering through a wood in Yorkshire I have seen one of the old mulepack roads, along which the farmer brought his wool on pack-mules to sell at Bradford or other wool-buying towns. Great square slabs of stone, in some places so steep they were almost steps, sunk into the soil, made a good road for the sure-footed mules.

From Thetford to Norfolk, straight to the sea, runs the Peddlers' Way. Ancient, when the Romans came, it may still be traced. Beneath the grassy way, shaded for miles by overhanging trees, the stone pavement lies buried—one of England's dream roads.

The Sahara has two historic roads, each marked out by bones. One, but recently located from an aeroplane, is the old slave road, the Via Dolorosa of many an anguished parent or tender child, whose bleached bones testify to the inhuman cruelty of both slave raider and buyer.

The other, the great Salt Way, the track hardened by the steady, patient tread of the camels, bringing the salt from the salt marshes in the north to Timbuctoo. Camels' bones line this road, for not even to a camel was the way light, but they died in the cause of health and happiness to man.

Mountain sheep are the pack animals of Thibet, and these sure-footed creatures have made many a road through the mountains where wheeled transport is impossible.

A cobbled mule road across the isthmus of Panama recalls Spain in the heyday of conquest. This road was built to convey the treasure to the waiting Spanish ships on the eastern side of the isthmus.

Another famous road was that on the top of the Great Wall of China, in itself a mighty work, and the roadway, always high and dry, in an often marshy land, was broad enough for several lines of traffic.

The corduroy, road of logs, is familiar to many who were in Flanders, for only such a road could cross Flanders mud. Similar corduroy roads are the only possible ones in certain sandy parts of Cape Colony.

In our modern motoring world roadmaking reaches an ever-increasing state of comfort and safety, but even the very goodness of the roads makes for danger by their temptation to excessive speed.

But with our road perfection and motor comfort, can we deny that much of the romance of the road has passed?

CORRESPONDENCE

TAXATION

Nine tenths of the benefit of all knowledge is gotten by applying our wisdom in time. It does not require a person of great brain power to know it is going to rain after it has poured, or to lock the stable door after the horse is stolen. Now is our time to get the benefit of our knowledge for we are an agrarian nation, well knowing that the only bird that ever laid a golden egg is NOW and keeping things uncertain kills the cow.

I would first illustrate what I am going to say about the evil results of our sinister taxation system of this country, by the following story as it came under my notice during the past thirty-five years.

Seeking his fortune, a thrifty young Irishman settled in our country, worked when he could get work to do and during his spare time attended some short courses at an agricultural college, to his credit and improvement. While there he attended a tax sale and purchased a deserted lot of 4½ or 5 acres of land, which during off spells, he fenced and ditched. The valuator called and up went his valuation and in consequence, he was taxed more heavily, for his thrift and expenditure. Three years later they called again and found a thriving plantation of apple, plum, and cherry trees, grape vines and a thriving garden. Up went his valuation and taxes once again. His brother had written him frequently that there were good opportunities in the United States for men like him, but he preferred to stay in Canada under the King, but the last straw broke the camel's back and made him decide to leave our country. He pulled up his fences and sold them, got rid of his fruit trees and departed. Today he is a wealthy citizen of the United States, and we have our valuator to thank for it.

This is only one of many cases of a very similar nature that I could mention and we shake our heads and wonder why our young men leave the country, while we keep on blowing hot and cold air in the same breath and condemn the very principles we keep going, thereby plucking the goose that lays the golden egg. We can't take a hammer in our hands to drive a nail, a saw to saw a board, a square, trowel or paint brush, but the valuator is at our heels to tax our thrift, particularly at the doors of our small holdings of land or dwellings. A gentleman cannot come from the city and buy a tumbled down old property and put it in repair, thereby giving employment to a number of otherwise idle men of the neighborhood, but up shoots his valuation and taxation with leaps and bounds, irrespective of all the benefit he has been to the locality. Such principles act like mill stones in the way of others who would follow the example of the city gentleman.

It is high time we modified the ruinous taxation system all over our country and placed taxation where it properly belongs.

It will not be long now till the valuator will be at our doors. Let us be wise in time and get some powder in our holsters and keep it dry against the day of their coming. To be fore warned is to be fore armed.

Bonne chance, my readers.

CHICKEN SHORTCAKE

2 cups pastry flour
(or 1 1/2 cups of bread flour).
3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
1 egg 1/2 cup water

Sift dry ingredients; add shortening and mix in thoroughly with a steel fork; add beaten egg and sufficient water to make soft dough. Roll out with hands on floured board. Cut out with large floured biscuit cutter, or half fill greased muffin rings which have been placed on greased baking pan. Bake in hot oven at 475° F. about 12 minutes. Split and butter while hot, and fill with hot creamed chicken. Makes 6 shortcakes.

Chicken Shortcake

"I always use and recommend Magic Baking Powder," says Miss Alice Moir, Dietitian of one of Montreal's finest apartment-hotel restaurants. "Magic combines efficiency and economy to the highest degree. Besides, it always gives dependable results."

In whole-hearted agreement with Miss Moir, the majority of Canadian dietitians and cookery teachers use Magic exclusively. And 3 out of 4 Canadian housewives use Magic because it gives consistently better baking results.

No wonder Magic outsells all other baking powders combined!

WORK AHEAD OF THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

tional Railways, to bring about complete national ownership.

It may be found to be in the best interests of Canada to continue as at present, with limited competition, moderated for the sake of economy in places where there is wasteful duplication of railway services. There is no likelihood of anything being done hastily, in any case. Parliament will desire, ample time to debate any proposed railway readjustment.

Similarly, while it is possible that this session at Ottawa may provide an opportunity to discuss the proposed St Lawrence Deep Waterway, it is hardly expected that the necessary treaty with the United States will come before Parliament for ratification. The desire of the Government to curtail the length of the session, so that decks may be cleared for the Imperial Economic Conference, may be one of determining factor in delaying consideration of the St. Lawrence project.

THE MASTER MIND

Novelized by Marvin Dana,
Author of "Within the Law,"
From the Successful Play
by Daniel D. Carter

"In order, first, to educate and train you, so that there could be no question as to your fitness, your standing as a woman of refinement and breeding; and, secondly, to gain time for the blotting out of a past which, though you yourself were absolutely innocent, would have forever kept you apart from him."

The girl acquiesced by silence in the justice of her guardian's reasoning.

"And you really—really do know him?" she questioned.

"At least I have seen him, and I know that he exists right here in this very city just now," Andrew replied, smiling again.

"Oh! And don't you, too, admire him—ever so much?"

Fortunately for the girl's peace of mind she did not see the unlovely yardening of the man's face. But his self control was strong.

"Why, once he unknowingly rendered me a great service, and I—well, I desire to return it in kind."

"You mean, without letting him know?" In her eagerness the girl looked up into Andrew's face.

"Yes," came the glib explanation. "You see, Lucene, that's what these old clothes of mine mean. You will please remember that for the present I am merely Andrew Watkins, your brother's valet and confidential man."

"Oh, Mr. Andrew," she objected with some embarrassment, "don't you see that you're asking me to deceive him?"

"My dear little girl," he declared gently, "I am only doing my best to give you a fair chance of happiness."

The Master Mind walked away from his ward to where the call button was set in the wall. He pushed it to notify Parker that it was time for Walter's recess in the library.

Walter came into the room with curly hair writ large on his boyish face. Andrew addressed the girl suavely.

"Permit me, Lucene, to introduce to you your brother, Mr. Walter Blount."

Walter strode forward and heartily shook the hand she reluctantly yielded to his proffered clasp.

"How do you do, Lucene?" he exclaimed, with a brotherly familiarity highly distasteful to her.

Andrew frowned as he watched the dry intimacy of manner assumed by

"Does he remember me?"

Walter. He again touched the bell call and spoke to Lucene.

"Parker will take you to Mrs. Blount," he said.

The girl went rather hastily out of the room.

The face of Andrew was forbidding as he spoke to Walter.

"You perceive," he said sharply, "that this young lady is not of your class. You must understand that thoroughly, and you must remember it, sir. Never presume."

The thief scowled heavily.

Andrew continued:

"When Wainwright comes and the conversation begins, you must bear in mind my written directions for your guidance." He went close to the door into the hall. "Now, if I stand in the position corresponding to this in the drawing room, then, according to your instructions, in my memorandum for you, what form of conversation must you adopt?"

Walter answered with the alert confidence of a schoolboy, sure that his lesson has been well learned:

"The lonely stranger gag."

Andrew moved to the end of the library table and paused there.

"And if I stand by the large table there?" he demanded.

"The gay White Way."

"The teacher went to one of the windows at the end of the room."

"And here?"

"The hard to get acquainted gag. But just the same, you'll find this work all for nothing." Walter declared aggressively, in a new access of rebellion.

Parker appeared in the doorway, announcing visitors.

"Mr. Wainwright, sir, and Dr. Forbes, asking for Mr. Walter Blount."

CHAPTER VII.

In the Toils.

AS Wainwright and his friend, Dr. Forbes, sat waiting in the house of which the titular head was Mr. Walter Blount of Laramie, Wyo., Andrew entered the drawing room, wearing his deferential aspect of the old family retainer, somewhat inclined to garrulity.

"Mr. Blount has been informed of your call, sir," he said. "He will see you, sir, at once." He bowed again.

"I hope, sir, you won't mind if I go on with a few bits of my work here, as it's so late."

"Oh, certainly not," Wainwright said, indifferently. Next came the entrance of Walter, who halted just within the doorway, and looked from one to the other of his guests, in obvious perplexity between the two as to which might be Mr. Wainwright. That gentleman, standing up and smiling, went forward with his hand outstretched.

"I am Mr. Wainwright," he said, as he shook hands with his host, "and I must tell you that I'm mighty glad to meet you—again!" The emphasis on the last word was significant. Then, he turned toward the physician: "This is Dr. Forbes, a particular friend of mine, who was good enough to accompany me. He is the superintendent of the Powhattan asylum for the insane."

The three men were seated near one another.

"I called," Wainwright explained simply, "in order to deliver in person the thanks you were at such pains to escape last night."

Walter beamed pleasantly.

"Oh, that's all right," he exclaimed, breezily. "Of course, I knew you tonight the minute I caught sight of your face, though the name didn't explain anything to me when your card was brought. I only did what any one would. It's not worth mentioning."

"My dear sir," Wainwright returned earnestly, "I must insist on mentioning it. Why, but for you I should surely have been shot. You struck up that fellow's hand just in time."

"Awfully glad I happened along as I did," Walter said genially. "Have they caught the man?" he inquired interestedly after Andrew had served lights to the smokers.

Wainwright shook his head.

"No, I'm sorry to say, they have not," he replied with disgust in his voice. "The scoundrel really made a wonderful getaway. And that reminds me, Mr. Blount—how did you contrive to disappear so soon?"

"Why, the fact is," he said with an assumption of great candor, "I'm a stranger in New York, and I knew, of course, there'd be a big hullabaloo about a thing like this, and I hate notoriety—police courts and so on, you understand—newspapers too. So when I saw the fellow that attacked you had skipped I had the idea that I'd do the same thing, though for a different reason. I just mixed in the crowd a minute and then slipped around the corner into the next block and came home."

He chuckled complacently and then added, in order to change the topic, "But how'd you manage to find me?"

"Well, now," Wainwright answered, "that's a bit odd too. An anonymous person called me up on the telephone at my place last night after I got back, said he'd been among those present at my little adventure, had seen my rescuer and had guessed afterward that I might like to know who it was, and he gave me your name and address."

Walter perceived that Andrew was now occupied in rearranging some magazines on the large table, and he recalled the memorandum prepared for his guidance. Yes, the Great White Way! That must be introduced next. He spoke mechanically.

"Funny," he commented. "You see, I know so few people in New York."

Dr. Forbes peered with curiosity at the young man.

"You're a stranger here, you say, Mr. Blount?"

"Yes," was the answer, very cheerfully given, for now the thief saw his way to carry out the required instruction. "And I can't say that I like your town very much. Of course there are some things right enough. I'll admit that the first month I spent along the Great White Way passed off lively enough. But, you know, a man soon gets enough of that. When dad and mother came on east to meet sister, who's just got back from Europe, I took this place so we could all be together for awhile. Dad's been joshing me about getting homesick," he added, with a shamefaced grin that acknowledged some justice in the charge. "He says I won't be able to stick it out for a year, but I think I will—maybe—just for a stunt."

"Where is your home, may I ask?" Wainwright inquired.

"My home town is Laramie, Wyo. Of course I'll have to admit that it's a dinky little place, but I like it at that. You see, everybody's your friend out there."

Andrew had gone to a window at the far end of the room—a fact duly observed by his pupil. "Yes; everybody's your friend out there," he repeated, with a hint of emotion in his voice, "but here it's so hard to get acquainted—that is, with the right sort."

"If I can be of service to you in any way," Wainwright suggested.

"Oh, I don't mean to butt in," Walter declared modestly.

Wainwright smiled in friendly fashion.

"I'm glad you did last night," he said emphatically.

"Oh, that! But, say, have you got any idea why this particular man tried to kill you or who he was or anything?"

"Nothing definite," Wainwright replied. "I dare say it was just some one with a grievance. You may happen to know, Mr. Blount, that I was for some years district attorney here. During my term of service I was compelled to send a good many men to prison, first and last, and some even to the electric chair."

As the last words were spoken Andrew, who had been surreptitiously watching the speaker, turned his face instinctively to hide from view the distortion of hate that transformed it. "Yes," Wainwright continued, unwittingly the feeling around in one of his hearers; "a good many rascals have come to hate me."

"Gee," Walter ejaculated, "it gives me a chill just to think of it!"

"Oh, you'd soon get used to it!" Wainwright returned indifferently.

Walter shook his head violently.

"Yes," he agreed, "I suppose it's all in the day's work; but, just the same, he idea of receiving threatening letters and all that sort of dope—"

Wainwright interrupted. "My secretary usually destroys them at once."

"There is one notable exception," Dr. Forbes observed in his characteristic precise manner of speech as he re-folded his hands carefully and smiled a wintry smile. "I refer to the white card episode."

"The white card episode?" Walter repeated.

Wainwright's face lost its rather bored aspect.

"Ah, the white card!" he said thoughtfully. "Yes, that is something different. And the white card is still coming—coming from some very mysterious person, a sort of genius in his way."

He put a hand into the breast pocket of his coat and drew forth a bit of white cardboard, which he extended toward his host. "This is one I received yesterday."

Walter, who had examined the card curiously, looked up in disappointment as he returned it to its recipient.

"Why, there's nothing on it," he complained. "What's the idea? Is it from somebody you sent up?"

"It carries a message in spite of its being blank," Wainwright said somberly. "As to your question, no, it is not from some one I sent up. I've never seen the man that sent me this and the others like it, and promises to send me more, of different colors."

Wainwright then proceeded to describe the Allen murder, the sentence and the threatening developments thereafter.

Walter's desire for details concerning the curious situation outlined by Wainwright was thwarted by the entrance of Mr. and Mrs. Blount, pursuant to Andrew's privately conveyed instructions to them. Husband and wife were in evening dress. He sprang up, as his guests rose, and introduced the twain as his father and mother.

"I'm right glad to meet any friend of my son's," the husband affirmed.

"He proved himself my friend last night," Wainwright said. Blount chuckled.

"Yes, he happened to be right on the job, didn't he?"

Mrs. Blount, who did not approve of being left out of any conversation in her neighborhood, interposed hospitably, as she arranged her ample form in a chair near the guests.

"Now, do sit down," she urged, and beamed on first the one visitor and then the other. She felt a triumphant pride in her position here as hostess in metropolitan society and wished that the members of the Mothers' club of Laramie, Wyo., might see her now, entertaining thus intimately two distinguished gentlemen of New York city. Wainwright remarked, as he seated himself in a chair facing his hostess: "I fear we are detaining you."

"Not a bit, you ain't," Mrs. Blount asserted, with forcefulness. "Father and Lucene and I were just going out to have dinner at some restaurant, and we ain't in any hurry at all."

Mr. Blount re-enforced his wife's statement.

"No, sirree, we ain't in any rush. We've got a taxi waiting," the westerner went on as he opened a cigar case. "Let it wait, I say. Mother and I don't come to New York often, and when we do come why, darn the expense! Eh? Ain't that right, mother?"

Dr. Forbes made an effort to sustain a share in the conversation by addressing Blount. "You come from the cattle country, I hear."

"It used to be a real cattle country," was the answer, "but nowadays it's all sheep. It's good business, too, all right, though the smell of those critters is something awful. The last few years have been wonderful. I tell you, sir. Why, I can remember when 11 cents for wool was considered a very good price. But two years ago we got 27. That's some price for raw wool, believe me. But of course no one knows what this new tariff—"

Walter interrupted the speaker with an admirable imitation of the pert son's rude manner toward the father.

"Now, dad, for heaven's sake, don't you get started on the tariff."

"No, John," Mrs. Blount tittered. "I wish I had a dollar for every hour I've had to listen to that stuff."

She said in tones expressive of deepest maternal pride, "that you'd go and ask Lucene to please hurry."

Walter stood up obediently.

"Yes, mother," he said, "if you will excuse me to our guests." And he hurried from the room.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON-SERMON

The Subject of the Lesson-Sermon for Sunday, February 14th. in all Christian Science churches is "SOUL".

Among the citations comprising the Lesson-Sermon are the following verses from the Bible (Psalm 66: 8,9) "O bless our God ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard: Which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved".

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon are the following lines from the Christian Science Text book "Science and Health with the Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: (page 307) "The divine Mind is the Soul of man, and man gives dominion over all things." (page 214). "Neither age nor accident can interfere with the senses of Soul, and there are no other real senses. It is evident that the body as matter has no sensation of its own, and there is no oblivion for Soul and its faculties."

Painting, paperhanging and decorating. Estimates given on all work if desired, also agent for Empire Wall Paper at very moderate prices. Have just received my 1932 samples. Book of two hundred to choose from. R. N. Moore, 282 Main Street, Lachute, Phone 279 w.

50 Years Ago.

February 10th., 1882.

The lecture and Magic Lantern Views which D. V. Campbell gave in Victoria Hall, on Thursday evening of last week was an entertainment of very great interest. The account given of his tour around the world was illustrated by views which he had taken in his visit. Such means of instruction, combined with pleasure is seldom enjoyed by people in small towns and villages and it is astonishing that when such opportunities are given so few avail themselves of it. There is a reason for it. Lachute has become proverbial for its lack of appreciation of lectures. Is it lack of intelligence? We think not. Is it the lack of means? We think not, for any one can afford the 10 or 20 cents for this pleasure. It has been said that wherever there is a community whose minds are absorbed in the art of cultivating the "light fantastic toe" they become singularly indifferent to everything else.

The Lachute Grist Mills were leased last week by our townsman Mr. Peter Campbell. We wish him success in his undertaking.

Councillor McQuat moved that John Todd be appointed to fill the unexpired term of Mr. John McGillivray as pathmaster of Jerusalem.

The Caledonian Club Concert on Monday night was well attended and the several pieces were well rendered. The Caledonians seem to be in favor as all their entertainments are well patronized. Perhaps the small admission fee (only 5 cents) has something to do with it.

About two weeks ago Mr. Lane, of this village, purchased at an Auction Sale in Montreal of town lots in the City of Winnipeg, Man., twenty lots. For these lots he was offered the other day an advance of 50 p.c. on his purchase.

A petition was presented to Lachute Council by 32 petitioners praying to pass a by-law to cause certain works to be done on the Main road between Barron's Bridge and Mr. MacKimmie's among which will be found all prominent individual names.

Grand Bazaar on February 14, 15 and 16th., in Victoria Hall, in aid of the Catholic Church. Among the articles to be raffled are valuable gold watch and chain, sewing machine, two oil paintings, and large variety of ornamental oddities. An organette will be in the hall and pieces will be played for five cents. Raw and stewed oysters, tea, coffee and cake every night. A harmonium will be at the disposal free for anyone wishing to play and sing.

The Rev. T. A. Mitchell, wife and daughter arrived in town last Thursday and have taken up their residence in the Presbyterian Manse.

Mr. Geo. Deacon who has been on an extended visit out West, arrived home on Monday being accompanied by his mother and sister from Renfrew. Mrs. Deacon intends to reside in town.

At the last meeting of Municipal Council of Grenville Mr. John Kelly was duly elected Mayor.

Pay of Postmasters. During the discussion of postal estimates in the Commons Sir George Perley expressed his hearty approval of the proposed increase and said "I sympathize thoroughly with the idea of giving country districts better postal facilities, and also paying rural postmasters better salaries. I do not think there are any people in this country who give such good service for such small pay as the rural postmasters."

"Bringing in the ice" now seems to be the occupation and our good men are now hustling with it in spite of all Jack Frost can do to prevent them.

Lachute beats Rockland—Score thrice tied! Six goals to five in a gruelling match with the old Rivals of Rockland. It was played here on Thursday night with the local line up of E. Wilson, G. Brennan, E. Foreman, J. Gervais, G. Hampton, Ray Styan, G. Drennan, with F. Patrick, of Montreal, as referee.

Mr. Fred Gervais having been transferred to the Granby Branch of the Bank of Ottawa, left on Wednesday morning and received quite a send off from his many friends. He is succeeded by Mr. Dumouchel, of Hull.

Our Beech Ridge correspondent hopes that the young man who appears from the south occasionally will not lose his way in the fields as the road was badly covered with the last snow.

Our St. Philippe scribe reports that Mrs. Wm. Davidson is entertaining on Thursday afternoon, 14th., the Cushing Methodist Ladies' Aid Society and in the evening the young people of the C. E. Society.

Inspector McQuat paid his annual visit to School No. 6 on Jan. 31st.

In Dunany, services are called for St. Paul's Church at 6 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 17th. Rev. Mr. Mount expects to bring a Missionary from Japan with him.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. P. H. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Lesson for February 14

JESUS AND THE MAN BORN BLIND

LESSON TEXT—John 9:1-41.
GOLDEN TEXT—Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes a Blind Man See.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives Sight to a Blind Beggar.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Jesus Did for a Blind Man.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus the Light of the World.

I. Working the Works of God While It is Day (vv. 1-5).

1. The disciples' problem (vv. 1, 2). In their minds all affliction, negative and positive, was God's retribution for sin. Therefore, they argued that this man's blindness proved his sin. They recognized also that the effect of sin is sometimes hereditary. The common philosophy of men about us today is that sickness, disease, and all sorts of calamities, is God's judgment for sin.

2. The Lord's answer (vv. 3-5). Jesus affirmed that in this case there was neither sin on the man's part nor that of his parents but that it was an occasion for the display of the works of God and that he had come to execute this task while it was day because the night would come when no man could work. Since Christ is the light of the world, the task which challenged his attention was the opening of this man's eyes. The purpose of Jesus in working miracles was not a mere exhibition of miraculous power, but "to illustrate in the physical sphere his power in the spiritual sphere." It was illustrative of man's utter helplessness in his own salvation. The natural man is blind and dead (II Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:1). God, by his Spirit, must quicken the soul dead in trespasses and sin before he can see to take hold on Christ, the remedy for sin.

II. The Man's Eyes Opened (vv. 6, 7).

1. The means used (v. 6.) Jesus spat on the ground and made clay of the spittle and anointed his eyes. Observe that the means used in this miracle were a little less than foolish in themselves. The object must have been to show the man the utter inadequacy of the means to the accomplishment of the end, that he might be convinced that the power was of God.

2. His obedience (v. 7.) He immediately obeyed. He did not stop to question the reasonableness of the command. Obedience only to that which seems reasonable is not obedience at all. He did not inquire as to what would be the result.

III. The Man's Testimony (vv. 8-36).

In his testimony we have a fine example of the development of faith.

1. He testified to his personal identity (v. 9). This was very easy. His self-consciousness enabled him to know that he was the same man who was born blind.

2. He testified as to how it was done (vv. 11-15). So definite was his experience that he was able to tell just how it was done.

3. He testified that the one who opened his eyes was a prophet (v. 17).

4. He testified that this healer no doubt was sent of God (vv. 30-33).

5. He worshiped him as the Son of God (v. 38).

IV. The Results of His Confession.

1. As to the people, they were divided in their sentiment (v. 16). Some believed Jesus was from God because of his works. Others believed that he was a sinner because he did his work on the Sabbath day.

2. As to the man, they cast him out (v. 34). Faithful testimony will often result in ostracism from religious people, but there must be faithfulness.

3. As to Jesus, he found the man (v. 35). Being cast out by men, he found himself in the arms of Jesus. He was led on to a deeper faith. He first saw Christ as a miracle worker, then as a prophet, and finally as the Son of God.

This whole lesson may be viewed from three angles:

1. As an acted parable of a life that issues from faith in Christ. It is an illustration of the spiritual sphere in terms of the physical.

2. The testimony of the deity of our Lord. This testimony is fourfold:—
a. The miracle itself an unheard-of work, that a man born blind should receive his sight.

b. The unwilling admission of the enemies themselves who made a public and official investigation.

c. The testimony of the man himself.

d. That of his parents.

3. An illuminating example of the development of faith.

SAGE REMARKS

Talk without action saps the will.

Example is the school of mankind.

Good is best when soonest wrought.

As the purse is emptied, the heart is filled.

If you wish your neighbors to see what God is like, let them see what he can make you like.

Geo. Dansereau, M.L.A., Upholds Sanitary Units

Speaking to the motion of the Hon. Mr. Mercier, which is occupying considerable attention, as it is seeking to make the Sanitary Units become obligatory in all counties of the Province, our local member, while opposed to the compulsion said in part that,

"The Government had done a lot for these Units, and I think that it is in the interest of all the counties in the Province, to encourage them to have at least one, each.

The county of Argenteuil, which I have the honor of representing in the Assembly, has had a Sanitary Unit since 1929 and I cannot tell you of all the services, which have been rendered by it to the county. I am positive that over 75% of the people of Argenteuil are in favor of these Units, this is the reason why, Mr. Speaker, I do not hesitate to favor this motion as presented to the House.

If twenty-five counties, had one Unit each, I think that it would be sufficient proof of the numerous advantages rendered by same.

However, it will take a few years before these Units can prove their numerous benefits.

As this question is very important in this Province, I think that the government could give more aid to the councils of the county, which would encourage the other counties to be partners to those Sanitary Units.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I leave it to Dr. Lessard, with the aid of the Prime Minister, to find a solution which will give satisfaction, and that in the course of five years all the counties in the Province will be supplied with these Units.

Gasoline Prices in Canada

To be Investigated

Investigation of gasoline prices in Canada will be made by a parliamentary committee. The Commons last week passed a resolution calling for inquiry by the banking and commerce committee of the House.

The government had no objection to the inquiry, Premier R. B. Bennett announced. It was prepared to pass the resolution and supply technical assistance for the committee. Three of the largest companies, the Imperial Oil Company, Mc-Coll-Frontenac Oil Company & the British-American Oil Company, had assured him they would welcome investigation of prices and would bare their books before any court the Prime Minister added.

Dr. Donnelly, sponsor of the investigation, laid before the House comparative gasoline prices in Canada and United States. Reduced to the same gallon-measure and shorn of taxation, the average price in eight United States cities in 1931 was 15 1/4 cents, he said. In eight Canadian cities, the average price was 23.3 cents. This discrepancy, Dr. Donnelly asserted, was due to the increased tariff.

WATSON SELLAR APPOINTED COMPTROLLER OF TREASURY

Congratulations are due to Mr. Watson Sellar, erstwhile editor of the Huntingdon Gleaner—an esteemed contemporary of the weekly press, who has been recently appointed Comptroller of the Treasury for the Dominion of Canada. The appointment was made by Premier Bennett, and Mr. Sellar fills an important post in this newly created office, on the merit of his long association with the state Treasury and his success while acting latterly as Deputy Minister of Finance. Watson Sellar was formerly private secretary to the late Hon. J. A. Robb.

United Church Tea-Meeting Proves Most Enjoyable

The United Church fell in with rather a bad day for their Annual Tea-meeting which was held last Thursday, but notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, the heavy and steady rain that made it almost impossible for people from any distance to be present, there was a fair turn out and those who braved conditions were well repaid for so doing.

The ladies as usual had made the accustomed provision of good things and the programme committee had furnished a splendid variety of entertainment which was greatly appreciated.

Rev. W. B. Rosborough, B.A., B.D., was chairman for the evening and announced the different items.

The opening number was a four part chorus by the Church Choir, under the direction of the leader Mr. C. L. Duncan, entitled "Soldiers Chorus" from "Faust", which was sung with real fervor and rhythm, giving the proper effect characteristic to the piece, and was accompanied by Mr. C. L. Hall.

The guest vocalist of the evening was Mrs. Dorothy Duncan, soloist of St. James United Church, Montreal, who delighted the audience with three beautiful selections, namely "Little Grey Home in the West," "The Fairy Pipers" and "Sunbeams," interpreted in such a pleasing manner that those present truthfully lost themselves in the sense of feeling of the named pieces.

Miss Jean Williamson of Montreal, our favorite elocutionist, proved just as popular as ever with her humorous and serious readings, and excelled herself with her interpretation of "The Highwayman."

Our own local gifted pianist, Miss Juliette Rodrigue, gave some beautiful selections, which were indeed greatly appreciated, and we can surely feel proud of having such a talented musician in our midst.

"Ave Maria," the world-wide known sacred solo, was then most sweetly rendered by Mrs. Duncan, accompanied by Mr. Hall on the pipe organ, and the blending of voice and organ was a perfect synchronization, and very effective.

Miss Helen Hall of Huntingdon, graduate of the Montreal Conservatory of Music, gave an Organ solo by Mendelssohn, to which the audience responded with an appreciative applause.

"My Task" was rendered by the Choir as final selection, giving every opportunity for beautiful blending of the four parts, and the result was pleasing in all respects.

The chairman thanked those present for the willing support given the ladies of the Church, and the National Anthem was then sung, bringing the meeting to a close.

QUEBEC WOMEN'S INSTITUTES ROUND UP YEAR'S ACTIVITIES

Chatham Branch has spent $156.46 on relief work during the winter. Frontier made plans for a social evening, and Jerusalem-Bethany planned for hot lunches for the schools, and is collecting clothing to send West. Lakefield catered for the annual farmer's club banquet, and supplied fruit to the sick and clothing for a needy family. Upper Lachute assisted fire sufferers with bedding and arranged for health talks in the school. Several papers were read in Morin Heights Branch. The local school was visited and interest shown in its condition & welfare. "The League of Nations" was the subject of study. Pioneer branch studied many phases of Child Welfare, and will devote a meeting entirely to the children in the community. Clothing was sent to the West, and $10.00 donated to the Children's Memorial hospital in Montreal.

Dr. Wm. McClure Still Active and Happy in his Work in China

As Dean of the Medical College in Tsien-Tsien, Dr. William McClure is still carrying on his labor of love in the foreign field and his children are imbued with the same spirit for they are both in China his son as a doctor, and his daughter Janet (Mrs. Dr. Kilburn), who is with the China Inland Mission. Dr. McClure was home on a visit two years ago and on the 9th. of April last year he celebrated his 75th. birthday, which was the occasion for a fine big birthday cake being carried into the Assembly Hall of the Medical School, where several beautiful scrolls and silver shields were presented by the alumni with all good wishes.

Mills Pay Tribute to Late Employer

Fitting tribute was paid to the memory of a departed leader in Canadian industry and a citizen sadly missed in this community, when the entire staff of Ayers Mills observed two minutes of reverent silence today, just one year after the demise of Mr. John (Jack) Ayers. It was a silence which spoke eloquently, of deep love and esteem which the mill workers and staff

Fire Sweeps C.P.R. Station at Val Morin, Cause Unknown

Val Morin railway station on the C.P.R. Laurentian line was destroyed by fire on Monday evening. No information is available as to how the outbreak occurred, but visitors who were staying at Pinehurst Inn, across the lake, saw the flames shooting out of the wooden structure and crossed on the ice to see if there was anything that could be done to save the structure.

The building was about 50 ft. long, and had been remodelled in the past year or two, comprising a general waiting room, ticket office and waiting room, while alongside was a freight shed.

Lakefield Women's Institute Hold Meeting

As has been the custom the February meeting of the Lakefield Women's Institute took the form of a Valentine Social held on Friday evening, Feb. 12th., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Tomalty, in Lakefield. In spite of the bad roads there were over fifty present. The guests on arrival found the rooms decorated prettily with hearts, streamers and other appropriate decorations. All present entered into a programme composed of guessing games & a bean contest which caused much laughter. Each contestant kept his scores on a heart-shaped score-card. At the close of the games dainty refreshments were served and the scores were added. Miss M. Sherritt the President, of the branch presented the prizes to the lucky winners whose names follows:

First prize: Mrs. Arthur Dawson and Mr. Albert Tomalty. Second Prize: Mrs. Edgar Morrow and Mr. Percy Rodgers. Third Prize: Miss Norma Boyd and Mr. Edgar Morrow.

Miss Sherritt proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Tomalty for their kind hospitality and loaning their home for the occasion and to Mr. and Mrs. Kuhring who had charge of the programme of games. At the January meeting of the Lakefield Women's Institute the new officers for the coming year were chosen as follows:

President, Mrs. Albert Tomalty. Vice-President, Mrs. Kuhring. Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. A. Kyle.

Mrs. Wm. Drew Celebrates 94th Birthday

Taking a keen interest in all that is going on Mrs. Wm. Drew who attained her 94th. birthday on Sunday last, is wonderfully hale and hearty notwithstanding her advanced years and was able to enjoy a happy day with her family and near relatives at the home of her son, Dr. John Drew.

Born in Hill Head on the 14th. of February, 1838, Mrs. Drew (formerly Miss Elizabeth Pollock) spent her early life, and in 1863 she was married to William Drew and resided in Beech Ridge until 1917 at this time she retired and with her two daughters moved into Lachute, where they have since lived, on Robert Street. Eight children were born, of whom four survive, Elizabeth and Janet residing with their mother, James, of Beech Ridge and John, of Lachute, while suffering slightly from impaired vision and hearing, Mrs. Drew's mind and memory are quite clear and she still insists on taking her share with the housework as well as being keenly alive to her surroundings.

The Watchman joins with its readers in extending congratulations to our aged resident.

In January the number of unemployed in Italy increased by 69,000, the total now being 1,051,000. Apparently Premier Mussolini has at last reached his match in General Depression.

Lachute and 'Burg Teams in Line for Play-off

Our three district teams, Independents, Brownsburg, and Ayers, which have staged an interesting season of hockey in their League matches displaying clean contest, a consistently amicable spirit, and hockey of no mean quality, conclude their series of games tonight in an encounter between Brownsburg and Ayers Limited. This match will have no bearing on the final play-off, which rests between Brownsburg and Independents. Tonight's result will merely decide the scene of the final fray, for a victory for the 'Burg will give priority to that team, so that two of the play-off games—first and third—will be billed for the Brownsburg rink. The first of these will be played on Saturday and local fans will doubtless have no complaint as to lack of enthusiasm. In keeping with a keen rivalry existent between these two teams—through many years since each respective community became large enough to sponsor a line-up against its opponent—there will be high contest for the honors in these three play-off games.

It is interesting to review the results of League matches to date, as follows:

Thursday, Jan. 7th., Ayers Ltd. 4; Independents 2.

Saturday, Jan. 9th., 'Burg 7; Ayers 5.

Tuesday, Jan. 19th., Independents 6; 'Burg 3.

Thursday, Jan. 21., Independents 6; Ayers 1.

Saturday, Jan. 23rd., 'Burg 5; Ayers 2.

Monday, Jan. 25th., Independents 9; 'Burg 2.

Saturday, Jan. 28th., Ayers 3; Independents 2.

Tuesday, Feb. 2nd., 'Burg 6; Ayers 5.

Saturday, Feb. 6th., 'Burg 6; Independents 4.

Tuesday, Feb. 9th., 'Burg 6; Independents 4.

Thursday, Feb. 11th., Brownsburg-Independents protested.

Tuesday, Feb. 16th., Independents 6; 'Burg 5.

Thursday (Tonight) 'Burg vs. Ayers.

The League and team managers are to be congratulated on having provided a well-arranged and interesting program of hockey during the season. Lachute enthusiasts have felt a need of just such a speculation in local hockey, during recent years. Attendances this year have been good, and an efficient schedule has been maintained, to the benefit of promoters and spectators alike.

Arrested for Bootlegging

On Friday last Henry Mohr was picked up at Lachute by Provincial detectives and arrested for the charge of bootlegging. We are informed that several others are implicated and that between Pt-au-Chene and Lake Comondoo was the scene of operations. In the meantime Mohr and two other friends are in the cells at St. Jerome awaiting trial.

SUDDEN DEATH OF PIERRE DESJARDINS

The death of Mr. Pierre Desjardins, father of our respected townsman, Mr. H. E. Desjardins, occurred on Sunday morning. Deceased gentleman had resided with his son since coming to Lachute and was in his 86th. year. Death came as a distinct shock to his many friends for he was going around as usual and had arisen about four o'clock, and passed away a few hours after. The funeral was held on Tuesday, the remains being taken to St. Jerome for interment, followed by a number of sympathizing friends.

Independents vs. Ayers Limited

Independents secured another victory in a League encounter last Thursday, with our West End, sextette from Ayers Limited. Soft weather prevailed and the ice was not in very good trim. R. Giroux, filled the role of Captain to the Independents' line-up, L. Prevost having resigned from the position.

Neither side scored in the first clash, although the play did not lack for keen enthusiasm, since this game was to be decisive in the League play-offs. Cousineau opened the evening's figures in the second period, scoring on a splendid pass from Lloyd Cruise. However, the Mills boys promptly evened up the count, as H. Joly landed the rubber in the network behind Church, the Independent's goal-keeper. That gentleman involuntarily held up the procedures for a few minutes, when he received a bad cut over the eye.

The game continued in the final rally, with both teams exerting their utmost for a lead. Cousineau and Bernier decided the score in favor of Lachute, each aiming accurately between the Ayers posts and closing the count at 3 goals to 1.

Line-up: — Church in goal; Giroux and Geo. Lefebvre defence; H. Jones, centre; Cousineau and Cruise wing. Subs. Drew, Bernier.

Ayers Ltd.: — Ben Patrie goal; S. Langille and G. McFaul, defence; H. Joly, Centre; Patrie and Mirron wing. Subs.—P. Patrie, O. Tessier, J. Brisebois.

INDEPENDENTS VS. BROWNSBURG

The protested match between Brownsburg and Independents was played over on Brownsburg ice last Tuesday. Wm. MacKimmie ruled the manoeuvres with a lone hand, and the game was clean, serene and fast throughout. The Lachute boys were somewhat handicapped with shortage of substitutes, and Cruise was not in his customary stand due to an injured ankle.

Independents however led the offensive and the initial stages appeared slightly in their favor. Brownsburg boys soon rallied in the fray, however, and during most of the second period kept our home team busy behind the blue line. The 'Burg boys won out in a final score of 6-5.

Enthusiasm in the closing games of the League run, was manifest in the large attendance of spectators, the Brownsburg rink being filled to capacity.

Lachute Curling Club

After a further hold-up in the changing weather, the finals of the Junior Mackie contest were played off on Monday evening last when Mr. A. W. Muir, defeated Mr. F. S. McGibbon in a score of 8 to 14. The line up was as follows:

C. E. Richardson	E. Todd
Geo. Muir	A. F. Aitkin
L. L. Legault	H. McFaul
F. S. McGibbon	A. W. Muir

(Skip) (Skip)

The play for the Senior Mackie Cup is now well under way and is causing keen interest. Two teams will visit Montreal on Saturday, next to play for District Medals, while two city rinks will be entertained here, in the same contest.

On Monday last the Ladies played the finals in the Doubles Mrs. Rice and Mrs. McFaul winning out against Miss J. McQuat and Mrs. Wm. Deacon in a score of 7 to 5.

Wednesday the finals in the President's Competition were played for Mrs. W. Cottingham winning over Miss E. Fraser in a close game of 11 to 10. The line-up was as follows:

Mrs. G. Deacon	Mrs. F. Earle
Mrs. J. Rice	Miss B. McQuat
Mrs. A. Bothwell	Mrs. Christie
Mrs. Cottingham	Miss Fraser

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER.

"WHEN I LEAVE SCHOOL."

Dear Boys :-

All of you at some time or other say, "What shall I do when I leave School?" Some times you go a step further and say, "What shall I be?" Then you suddenly make up your mind to do this, that and the other thing which interests you most and this is as it should be, because the only men who are ever really successful are those who are heart-whole interested in their jobs.

This brings me to what I want to say to you this week. Nobody but a fool would do any work in which he is not interested but by this I mean, that he must have sufficient attachment to his job to keep at it. You have to teach yourself bigger lessons after you leave school, than you ever learnt when you were there and perhaps the chief of these is that you must carry out your work for its own sake and for that only. True you look for a certain financial return for your efforts in the form of salary but if you make that the main thing you aim for then you miss the secret of a successful life.

There is honour, dignity and fascination in work and the more difficulties it possesses, the greater joy one has in the doing of it. A great man once said that the only satisfaction he ever got out of life was in his work where he was able to forget all the social and other troubles and so absorb himself in the details of his business that it was not possible for him to be effected by what happened outside. He tells us further that in his work he found courage and he looked upon it as a sort of child on which he could lavish the most minute care and attention sometimes even affection so that he felt proud when he saw it growing upward and forward under his hand.

This, I feel, is the spirit in which we should undertake all our labour and this dear boys is the spirit with which I want you most earnestly to approach your first job when you leave School.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

"The Return of Timothy"

Henderson was the first to recover his composure. He looked around at his two companions who were swimming near by. By this time the boat appeared as a mere speck away in the distance and the elder boy realized that if it was ever to be recovered, a long swim was in front of him; at the same time he felt that it was of the utmost importance that his younger companions should not become frightened at the possibility that their only means of safety might be lost to them forever! Not that he was free from fear himself as it seemed to his anxious and imaginative mind that cramp was laying hold of him. The sun that had been with them all along had now hidden itself behind a thick mist while a cold and bleak wind had arisen to lash the hitherto calm water into a whirlpool of foam tipped waves that seemed every moment to be increasing in size and strength.

He turned himself quickly in order to face the others because he felt that otherwise his voice would not reach them. "It is no good," he said, "for all of us to fetch the boat, so you two chaps wait as patiently as you can here until I bring it back to you. I won't be long."

Kenrick waved his hand and shouted, "All right Henderson, we will be waiting for you." But little Eric on whom already the biting cold water and the keenness of the wind was having its effect cried out in fear, "Oh Henderson don't leave me, I believe I am going to drown."

Henderson waved his hand in encouragement and without wasting any further time, he turned over on his side and with long steady strokes began a swim for life and safety which all the after years of his life he was never to forget.

Everything in nature seemed to join forces against the noble boy in this, his supreme effort. Every now and again a large wave buffeted him, cold spray lashed his face until he could have cried out in agony and he felt deadly tired. Raising himself, when opportunity occurred, on the crest of a wave his straining eyes sought eagerly for the missing boat but he could not see it and he struggled on with the despairing idea that all his efforts would be in vain.

At last he felt he could go on no longer and he began to sink. Then it was a wave, larger than any he had experienced before, caught hold of him and he was lifted up and up until he began to wonder how much further he was going to be carried, when to his amazement and astonishment he saw the boat but a yard or two ahead, riding gracefully on a troubled sea. If only he thought with renewed hope, the wave would carry him towards it and then a new danger arose; supposing it did, he would in all likelihood be dashed against its sides. But he had no further time for speculation, the wave which had carried him forward and upward had now passed on its way and he was left struggling in a hollow green water, the boat still some distance from him.

Reviving hope gave him new courage and setting his teeth hard, he continued to swim gallantly forward with the boat drawing nearer and nearer. Now or never, he said to himself, this is the last real effort I shall be able to make out his hand taking hold of the boat. Lack of strength prevented him from climbing in immediately and he enjoyed all the sensations of one who had reached safety after passing through the valley and shadow of death.

How long he would have remained in that position, it is difficult to conjecture, but suddenly the thought of his companions and Eric's despairing cry rushed into his mind and he was never able to explain to anyone how he managed the difficult task of entering the boat but a second or two later he had seized the oars, turned the boat round and was rowing furiously towards the place where he had left the others struggling in the water.

Now the wind and current which had fought so hard against him a while ago assisted him and the little vessel swiftly speed its way on its return journey.

Veteran Railroader Gets Important Post

A railroad career that has seen many changes and covered much widely separated territory witnesses another movement in the transfer of Robert E. Larmour, general freight agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, from Montreal to Toronto, under announcement dated January 1st.

Mr. Larmour has enjoyed a very wide experience in railway freight matters. Entering the Canadian Pacific Railway as a clerk in the superintendent's office at Fort William in November, 1898, he was promoted chief clerk the following year and in 1900 became acting agent at Fort William, being transferred back to Fort William as chief clerk in 1901. The same year he went as agent to Port Arthur and in 1903 was sent to Vancouver as assistant freight claims agent at Vancouver and in that year was appointed freight claims agent, Pacific division of the railway at Vancouver.

In 1905 he was freight claims agent at Winnipeg; in 1906 city freight agent at Winnipeg and the same year was promoted general freight agent at Fort William. He acted in the same capacity during 1908 and 1909 at Nelson, B.C., and Winnipeg. In 1911 he was divisional freight agent at Vancouver and in 1914 was assistant general freight agent at Vancouver. In 1915 he was transferred to New York as general agent and in 1919 became general freight agent eastern lines, stationed at Montreal. In 1921 he was appointed acting assistant freight traffic manager at Montreal and since 1922 has been general freight agent at Montreal.

He is an enthusiastic, yachtsman, hunter, and fisherman.

Gentlemen :-

Read our proposition very attentively, and study the benefits deriving from it, which are enumerated below. Think specially of these of which the amounts are replaced by the question marks :

- | | |
|---|---------------|
| 1. Reduction of two (2) cents per gallon of gas.
Average annual consumption, 300 gallons, | Saving $6.00 |
| 2. Reduction of twenty (20) cents per gallon of oil.
Average, 10 gallons per annum, | " $2.00 |
| 3. 5% Discount on tire and 10% on tubes and accessories. Average purchase $30. per year, | " $3.00 |
| 3. Complete Alemite greasing (including Spring bath), regular price $1.00, reduced to 75c..
Average greasing eight times a year, | " $2.00 |
| 5. Free 10 minute service, at our station | " ? |
| 6. Free changing of tires within city limits | " ? |
| 7. 10% discount on all repairs above $1.00 | " ? |
| 8. Free delivery of gasoline for members stalled on the road within a radius of 5 miles (10 miles round trip), minimum, 5 gallons, at regular price | " ? |
| 9. Free towing within a radius of 20 miles from our station (40 miles round trip) | " ? |

The membership fee being $10.00 per year, a member not only saves this amount, but indeed much more, for it goes without saying that the above figures are based on below-the-average expenditures.

GERMAN COFFEE CAKE

I have been asked for a recipe for Coffee Cake. Many people make it by using the bread dough and adding eggs, melted butter and sugar. The following recipe is rather expensive but it makes a very delicious coffee cake.

1 pint milk
3 yeast cakes
¾ cup butter
½ cup sugar
6 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
1¾ (7 cups) bread flour

Make sponge, then cream butter and sugar, add well-beaten eggs and salt, and beat into sponge. Add flour and knead. Put in pan and let rise in a warm place. When bulk is doubled, sprinkle with a mixture of sugar and cinnamon and bake in a hot oven.

WEATHER IN CONVERSATION

Whatever would we do without the weather to talk about. It is the opening gambit in most conversations. These days it is not merely an opener. It is the chief topic of conversation. Some like this queer winter. Some don't. In any case they talk about it. The older they are the more they like the mild weather. Some hate the rain, others prefer it to snow and cold. The mothers wish for the snow for the sake of the children; some because they prefer removing snow from the youngsters rather than mud. Some are delighted with the small amount of coal used, and the coal merchant is in the dumps because he is selling so little. Others are not so interested in their own coal bills as they appreciate the less amount required by the hard-up. Business people think conditions would be better if the weather were colder. Others are worried about ice supply for next summer. How are the farmers going to handle the milk? This just touches on the fringe of the matter. Doubtless you have talked about it yourself, so you can add your own conclusions.

IODINE

When we speak of iodine we usually think of it as a brown liquid that we use to disinfect cuts and so on. This is one of its uses, but there is an even more important one. Iodine must be present in the body for its perfect functioning and a lack of it causes much distress. The amount of iodine found in the body is very small and it is found chiefly in the thyroid gland.

Iodine is not very widely distributed in Nature and it is to be found chiefly in sea foods. The diet of children should include foods of sea origin. Those living near the sea have no cause to worry, but the most of us live inland and we need to take precautions. Children need iodine before they are born, and all expectant mothers should include it in their diet. Cretinism is one of the things most dreaded by mothers. We feel that we can stand anything, so long as our children are normal. Cretinism is influenced by the extract from the thyroid gland and although doctors are not definitely sure that a lack of iodine will cause this dread condition, they think that it is so, and all modern doctors see that their patients include iodine in their diet.

Iodine is necessary for growth and it also influences our energy. So if you lack energy see that sea foods become a part of your diet. Goitre is caused by lack of iodine. As girls are particularly susceptible to it, any mother who has girls should be very careful to see that they are getting iodine. The easiest way is in the foods. If we cannot get fresh sea fish that should not prevent it, as sea foods of many varieties are to be found canned. Salmon is one of the most commonly used and there are numerous ways of using it. Fortunately most children are fond of it. Then there are herrings, sardines, shrimps, clams, crab-meat, lobster and many others. Smoked fish is always available.

Canada Offers Unequalled Attractions for Tourist.

Choice holiday locations in Canada, being sought by Canadians and Americans alike in preference to more expensive travel abroad.

Under the present exchange situation, Canada offers every attraction in the way of inexpensive holidays, said Alan N. Longstaff, Press Representative of the Canadian National Railways, in the course of an illustrated address to the members of Lachine Curling Club at their weekly dinner. There is a distinct tendency on the part of Canadians who in other years have spent their vacations outside of the Dominion, to remain at home this year and to reap one hundred cents' benefit from every dollar they spend. At the same time, people in countries which enjoy appreciated currency, are realizing that they can holiday in Canada more cheaply than at home, and hundreds of inquiries are being received by the Canadian National Railways and other transport agencies as to the choice holiday locations in Canada.

Application of low-week-end fares by Canadian railways have encouraged the spending of holidays out of doors, Mr. Longstaff said, and as a result more Canadians are beginning to realize what their Dominion has to offer for the lover of sport. Now, hunting and fishing areas are being constantly opened up to the sportsmen, and through the medium of pioneering trips made by representatives of the railways and other organizations, the way is being made easy for the man or woman who desires adventure over unfrequented trails in the north.

To illustrate his address Mr. Longstaff screened films from the Canadian National Railways libraries, showing the man in which the sportsman's map of Canada is being continually rolled back to the north with the establishment of guides and outfitters at hitherto inaccessible spots.

"Canadians have a valuable heritage in their wilderness areas," the speaker stated. "These north woods have already produced crops of firs & timber and in some cases also of minerals. Now they are producing a new and valuable crop—the tourist dollar—and the tendency of the Canadian tourist is to keep that dollar at home under present conditions."

A CANADIAN VIEW

The New York Times published a letter from Mr. Leonard P. Crout, of Toronto, in which he, as a Canadian, sets forth his view of his country's relationship with the United States. He complains that the United States discount on Canadian money has caused him to cancel arrangements for a trip which he was arranging through a New York tourist agency. He adds that he has cancelled his subscriptions to several United States enterprises and that he will not send a dollar into the American Republic until the exchange rate is righted. He adds that "being one of the common people in Canada, I am at a loss to understand why we should be compelled to pay 20 to 25 per cent. more than we did six months ago for anything purchased in the United States. Our natural resources are almost unlimited, we being the second largest gold-producing country. Surely, we can be depended upon to pay our debts, not being one of those nations which have a revolution when they need a change of government, repudiating debts by so doing."

In another paragraph, Mr. Crout remarks: "Our mother country, Great Britain, loaned some of your Southern States approximately £100,000,000 prior to the Civil War, none of which has yet been paid. I fail to see why you should expect Great Britain to pay her war debts to you when you are well aware that some of your States repudiated their own." This correspondent voices in clear terms the views held by a great majority of people in this country. We do not claim that we can place the entire blame for the adverse exchange rate in the United States upon the United States authorities. The discount is in part, due to well-ascertained economic conditions but there is a widely held impression that the money changers in New York have been ex-

REDUCED FARE FOR EASTER TRAVELLERS

Travellers in Canada at Eastertide will have the benefit of the same ticket and reduced fare privileges as were granted them at Christmas, according to an announcement made by C. P. Riddell, chairman of the Canadian Passenger Association, on behalf of both the Canadian Pacific, the Canadian National and the other railways of Canada. Special concessions will also be made in favor of non-resident pupils and teachers in Canadian schools. This is the first time in many years that such concessions have been made.

The railways will charge one first class fare and one-quarter for round trip, to the general public, permitting starting of journey on Thursday, March 24, Friday March 25, Saturday March 26 and Sunday March 27, with return available up to and including Tuesday, March 29th, 1932.

It is anticipated that these fare concessions will add in no small measure to the volume of travel during the great spring holiday and that many persons desirous of spending Easter in their own homes, or with relatives in other parts of Canada will avail themselves of them. The time limits make ample provision for the public to employ both Good Friday and Easter Monday for journeys to and from holiday points.

Arrangements for passengers from schools will be completed through the principals of such institutions in co-operation with the Canadian Passenger Association.

SPHERE OF THE HOME- TOWN WEEKLY

The influence of the country weekly in relation to the metropolitan daily in the communities they serve is often a point of discussion. It is worth reading the comment on this topic contributed by Arthur Brisbane, the brilliant American columnist: "The smaller newspapers of the country are the most important newspapers, and incidentally in proportion to their circulation, their advertising results are the biggest and their advertising rates the smallest in the country. They are read through from end to end. Every copy of circulation means an entire family, not a family that lives in one room with a can opener, but a family that owns a home, and land around it, at least ninety times out of a hundred; a family that buys everything from the roof on the house to the cement on the cellar floor from the hat on mother's head to the shoes on the boys' feet.
The service that their publishers render to the public is, in my opinion, the most important service rendered by any class of citizens in Canada. The country editors are distributors of information; they reach the minds of the boys that leave the farms, and they are the nation's mental police force."

WHAT ARE THE WILD WAVES SELLING?

"Believe it or not, radio is essentially commercial; its principal function is to entertain. It is no more a philanthropy than a newspaper or a book. It lives on advertising, and heaven help us if we have to listen to unsponsored government programs."

We, however, at the receiving end, are sometimes apt to wonder whether the principal function is to Advertise, rather than to Entertain!—It would seem so. We have just tried, in vain to tune-in upon a good continuity of passible music from U.S. broadcasts. There is a generous supply of music to select from, but alas, no sooner is a program obtained than it is interrupted for the "boosting" process. This happens in every case, some high-class work being even cut off suddenly to permit the advertising talk. Is it any wonder that listeners in increasing numbers are giving up listening in despair?

And "Heaven help us," as a Toronto radio journal says, above speculating on unsponsored government programs. But with practical experience in the British Isles, where broadcasts have been government operated ever since they were efficiently organized, the tide of favor is against syndicate-control. Britishers may grumble at their radio service, but they would not change it. British radio, in spite of criticism, continues to lead the world, in the variety of its appeal.

A few million Old Country listeners realized this truth just recently, when they heard, radicated across the Atlantic, a typical broadcast from a New York studio. British radio fans took note of it all; they seemed surprised. Then they went back to their domestic programs with the firm resolve that they would not again grumble at the B.B.C.

—for some months to come at all events.

What radio listener in Canada within reach of "typical New York" broadcasts can fail to appreciate the reaction of British-ers to the United States program they heard, even allowing for insular prejudice? For what, nowadays, is a typical
New York broadcast?

It is an assembly of first-rate musicians playing third-rate. It is a series of interpolations by quartette and tenors & sopranos who can sing fairly well but are not permitted to present the better class of vocal music for fear of the displeasure of the fans.
And it is a further exasperating series of interpolations by announcers boosting to the skies for its marvellous properties some toothpaste, food or cigar—boosting to which no intelligent persons pays the slightest attention.

Our Canadian broadcasting operates much along the same lines, but among the medley of mediocre features and super-persuasive sales talk, our programs comprise many unmistakably good items, of interest and uplift to Canadian listeners.
And we look to the future for consistently high-class programs from Canadian stations; whether privately or nationally controlled, matters less than the imperative need for good entertainment.

REVENUE HIGHER FOR FIRST PERIOD IN A LONG PERIOD

January Sees Improvement Over Last Year, Chiefly Due to Higher Sales Tax

Canadian customs and excise revenue showed an increase for January as compared with the corresponding month a year ago of $409,947. The Total for last month was $14,348,109, and for January 1931 the total was $13-938,161.

The customs receipts were lower, and so were the excise duties, which chiefly come from duties on liquors, etc. These decreases were more than offset by the big increase in the excise tax, chiefly resultant from the higher sales taxes.

This is the first time for many months that the revenues from the foregoing combined sources have shown a total greater than the corresponding month the year before.

The total revenue for the 10 months of the fiscal year was $176,131,612 and for the corresponding period in 1930-31 the total was $194,916,657.

Window sill refrigeration as impractical as Window sill cooking

Cooking with the sunshine on the window sill—did you ever hear of anything so silly in all your life?

It's just as silly to expect efficient refrigeration from a box suspended outside a window in the winter time...with foods exposed to the elements, temperatures rising and falling with the weather
...inconvenience, frozen foods...

After all, electric refrigeration is the best refrigeration. And why should you put up with inconveniences and makeshifts, with possible danger to health, when electric refrigerators are within the reach of every one?

Let us show an electric refrigerator of the correct size for your family. No obligations! Call our nearest office and they will tell you about

Miss J. Valpy spent the week-end with friends in Montreal.

Mr. Geo. Deacon was in Ottawa, the latter part of last week.

Miss McDowell spent the week-end at her home in Shawville, Que.

Miss I. Boyd & Miss M. Duncan spent the week-end visiting friends in Montreal.

Misses Nellie and Lizzie Hay of Montreal, spent the week-end the guests of their parents.

Miss Willow Lavery, of Montreal, was the week-end guest of her sister, Mrs. Walker McArthur.

Mrs. Norman Holland, of Montreal, passed the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Carpenter.

A home was destroyed by lightning in Ottawa last week, in an electric storm phenomenal to this season of the year.

We are pleased to note that our respected young townslady and talented pianist, Miss J. Rodrigue, is to be heard in piano recital at the Provincial Hour, over C.K.A.C. on Friday night at 8 o'clock.

The sympathy of many friends and relatives in Lachute is extended to Mrs. Stanley Appleyard (Miss Allie Law) in the sad loss of her husband, whose death occurred quite suddenly at Saranac Lake, of bronchial pneumonia, on February 4th.

In Revelstoke, B. C., and neighborhood snow records for the past ten years have been broken, three days of steady snowing recently having brought the fall for the season up to fourteen feet. That part of Canada, at least, is having real Canadian winter.

News has been received here of the death of the Rev. W. K. Thomson, well known and loved Edmonton minister who passed away on Feb. 5th., 1932.

In his young manhood and before his ordination Rev. Thomson spent a couple of summers as assistant in Lachute Presbyterian (now United Church) afterwards going out to the West, where he married Miss Maud Raitt, one of Lachute's most popular young ladies. She with two children also his mother and two sisters in Scotland are left to mourn his loss. A largely attended funeral took place on Monday, Feb. 8th., at Edmonton.

DEATH

BRYERTON.—At Carillon, Que., on Thursday, Feb. 11th., 1932 after a lingering illness, Charlotte Maud (Lottie), dearly beloved daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bryerton. Interment took place on Saturday, Feb. 13th., at St. Andrews East R. C. Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM.

CRUISE.—In loving memory of dear May, who passed away on Feb. 20th., 1914.

Never shall her memory fade, Sweetest thoughts will ever linger, Round the spot where she is laid Parents, Brothers and Sisters.

KENNEDY.—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, William Kennedy who departed this life, Feb. 10th., 1930.

Two years have passed, our hearts still sore, As time goes on we miss him more. Ever remembered by his wife and family.

MORRISON.—In loving memory of Olive Janet, who passed away February 19th., 1928. Ever remembered by father, mother, sisters and brothers.

NEILL.—In loving memory of W. J. Neill, who departed this life on February 18th., 1931. Deep in our thoughts your face we see, Held dear to us in memory. Sadly missed by Mollie.

PAUL.—In loving memory of John Paul, of Chatham, who passed away on Feb. 17th., 1931. Deeply loved and mourned. Mrs. John Paul and family.

Mr. R. H. Barron, Mrs. S. D. Francis and Miss Janet Francis of Montreal, spent Sunday the guests of the Misses Barron.

The right way to treat women is to show them that you're BOSS. Come and see "Apple Blossom" Time and get a few pointers.

ST. PHILIPPE

Miss Mary Robert, of New York, spent a few days visiting her brother, Mr. Jos. Robert.

Rev. Fr. Bazinet was absent in Montreal on Monday. He assisted at the ceremony of the taking of the Holy Habit of Miss Rita Maisonneuve, who is the daughter of Mr. Amedee Maisonneuve, and belongs to the Order of the Grey Nuns.

Mr. M. Mayer, student at the Ottawa seminary is at present at home. His ordination to the priesthood will take place some time this year.

The sudden change in temperature has proved popular with the younger set as it has provided several skating rinks, which are well patronized.

BROWNSBURG

Little Florence Robinson who has been ill, is much improved in health.

Mrs. Charles Kennedy who had the misfortune to fall last week, is much better.

The stork paid a visit to Brownsburg and left a fine baby boy with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Walker Mr. John Simon, and Miss E. Winters, of Lachute, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. Wm. Stewart.

A very successful 'sleigh ride' party was held in the basement hall of the Brownsburg United Church by the choir and the young people's society on Friday evening the 12th.

Unfortunately the sleigh ride had to be postponed owing to the deluge, but a very merry party gathered and did ample justice to the beans and other good things provided, (the amount of beans consumed by some of the young ladies reminded one of an endurance contest.)

Games were indulged in, a newspaper was composed and published, (fortunately the libel law was not enforced).

Another striking feature was the choir theme song, 36 verses and a chorus to each verse, every member was mentioned with honor? in the theme, a prize was offered to the one who could sing it through without laughter, but it was not won.

In the witching hours the party wended their way homeward, after enjoying an extremely pleasant evening.

Great credit is due to the organizers, particularly Cedric & Wallace.

MRS. RACHEL BRADFORD PASSES AWAY AT HER HOME IN PRAIRIE CITY, MO.

News has just been received of the death of Mrs. Rachel Bradford who passed away at the home of her son Ned, after a short illness of a few hours. Deceased who was formerly Miss Rachel Armstrong, was born on June 11, 1847 and was married to George Bradford of Chatham, Que., in 1867. To this union were born eleven children, nine boys and two girls. In 1891 she with her husband removed to Prairie City where she lived until her death.

Besides her seven sons and two daughters she leaves 26 grandchildren and 15 great grandchildren to mourn her loss. Funeral service was held from the Methodist Episcopal Church of which she was an active member. Interment was made in Prairie City cemetery.

REMOVAL

Mr. A. C. Lapierre, Jeweller, 10 Bethany Street, wishes to inform his customers and the public in general that owing to moving there will be a 25% reduction on all his merchandise.

From May 1st. his new store will be located on Main Street next door to the Liquor Commission Store.

Our Puzzle Corner

It sometimes requires more care than the reader might suppose so to word the conditions of a new puzzle that they are at once clear and exact and not so prolix as to destroy all interest in the thing. I remember once propounding a problem that required something to be done in the "fewest possible straight lines" and a person who was either very clever or very foolish (I have never quite determined which) claimed to have solved it in only one straight line, because as she said: "I have taken care to make all the others crooked". Now who could have anticipated such a quibble?

Four merry tramps bought borrowed, found or otherwise obtained possession of a box of biscuits, which they agreed to divide equally amongst themselves at breakfast next morning. In the night while the others were asleep under the greenwood tree, one man approached the box, devoured exactly a quarter of the number of biscuits, except the odd one left over, which he threw as a bribe to their dog. Later in the night a second man awoke and hit on the same idea, taking a quarter of what remained and giving the odd biscuit to the dog. The third and fourth men did exactly the same in turn, taking a quarter of what they found and giving the odd biscuit to the dog. In the morning they divided what remained equally amongst them, and gave the odd biscuit to the dog. Every man noticed the reduction in the contents of the box, but believing himself to be alone responsible made no comments. What is the smallest possible number of biscuits that there could have been in the box when they first acquired it?

The Answer to Last Week's Puzzle.

The reader is aware that there are prime numbers and composite numbers. Now 1,111,111 cannot be a prime number because if it were the only answers would be those proposed and rejected. Also it cannot have more than two factors, or the answer would be indeterminate. As a matter of fact, 1,111,111 equals 239 x 4649 both primes, and since each cat killed more mice than there were cats, the answer must be 329 cats.

THE SPHINX.

Appeal for the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children

A Baby's Prayer

Just a little Prayer at twilight, Spoken by a baby who Had been taught her "Now I lay me,"

Just the same as me and you.
But this Prayer, somehow, is different,
From all other Prayers e'er said,

For 'twas whispered by a baby
In a Shrine Hospital bed.

Just a little baby kneeling
When the lights were dim and low:

Bowed head in True Devotion—Fingers clasped and face aglow

"Down to sleep", she lisped so slowly,
"Pray the Lord my soul to keep."

Slower came the words, then a baby,

Said "If I," then, fell asleep.

Nurses in their Love and mercy
Will watch o'er her day by day;
And the tortured, crippled body
Will by Him be healed, and may We who have grown older, Allah,

Have the Faith beyond compare
Of the baby who at twilight Bowed her Head To Thee in Prayer.

"So Mote it be."

Investigations by Scientists and other enquiries reveal the fact that more than 400,000 children in the U. S. A. and Canada suffer from Crippled condition. Little folks whose only error seems to have been that they were born into this world—suffer from birth, misshapen, and disabled, with no door open to them and no relief within financial reach of their parents. To meet these conditions, to answer the cry of a multitude of suffering tots, the chain of Crippled Children's Hospitals were established, equipped and are being maintained by the Ancient Arabic order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, one of which is located in Montreal.

From this institution of love and practical philanthropy, no child is turned away because of Race, Creed or Nationality. It is enough to know that the child is in dire need and that there is hope for recovery. Since 1922 over 12,000 little patients, for whom there was apparently no relief, have been received into the wards of the Shriner's Hospital; more than 20,000 have been treated in the Out-Patient Departments; but there is still a long, long line of wistful little faces turned longingly towards these institutions, and the waiting list continues to grow. With a view of extending the work of the hospital—passing out hope and joy and love to a greater number of little sufferers—a movement has been inaugurated to establish convalescent homes, which it is estimated will double the capacity of the hospitals, and one of which is contemplated for the City of Montreal.

To assist the financing of the construction & maintenance of such a home in Montreal, the cost of which cannot be met from the General Fund, a Tin Foil Campaign was launched in 1930. Thanks to the generous interest of people in all walks of life, more than 20 tons of scrap foil have been collected and smelted into bars. But more foil is needed, wont you help us to carry on this work of love. Save your tin foil,—tea lead, foil from tobacco and cigarette packages, tooth-paste tubes, etc. every little helps and by so doing you will be doing your part to help those, who are unable to help themselves.

Did you ever vision your own child in the handcuffs of fate, suffering from twitching nerves, gnarled muscles and misshapen limbs? Life, vivid and pleasurable, all in a moment by the fell descent of disease changed to a monotony of acute misery? Did you ever realize just how fortunate you had been and haven't you often wondered why rejoicing in place of protest was your daily portion. Light for you—shadows for the less fortunate. Have you ever compared those limbs of your own boy, clad in warm and satisfying clothing, with the thin shoulders under shabby smocks? and doesn't it appeal to you to join the army to set at naught the callous decree of nature. All Tin Foil may be left at The Watchman Office, or, if more convenient, at the Post Office.

HELPING

The greatest thing you ever did, Was showing kindness to a 'Kid' When you have helped a fellow man,

In whatsoever way you can, You're surely helping someone who has grown,

From whom the chance of youth has flown,

But when you touch a little child Just new in life and undefiled,

And help to make his body strong,

And fill his heart with hope and song—

Behind such deeds is always seen

The features of the Nazarene.

We human adults have the knack

Of helping those who help us back;

And think we do a golden deed, In serving those who have no need,

But love has shown a better way In helping those who can't re-pay,

In charity that's most worth while,

In making crippled children smile.

When Shriner's thus their strength employ

In doubling little children's joy, Behind their Red Tez Caps is seen

The features of the Nazarene.

Yours in the faith,
H. M. GALL,

Representative to the Board.

A Strange Birthday Coincidence

February 22nd. again brings the strange coincidence of the common birthday of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell, World Chief Scout and Chief Girl Guide.

800,000 Scouts in the Empire. At the end of 1931 there were 808,307 Boy Scouts and leaders in the British Empire, an increase during the year of 51,424. Canada's total was 58,568 an increase of 5,996.

Loyalty Without Antagonism.

A noted French educationist has said that the Boy Scout Movement has two tendencies which appear contradictory, yet which have worked out perfectly. These are, loyalty to one's own nation, and the ability to understand and appreciate others.

Of Racial Value to Canada

We have one particularly effective agency for bringing about a mutual understanding between the French and English-speaking and other lesser national groups represented in Canada, declared Mr. F. S. Rugg K.C., in a recent address at Sherbrooke, Que. This agency was the Boy Scout Movement.

Cenotaph Custodians.

Boy Scouts are the official custodians of the Cenotaph at Hamilton, Ont. A Scoutmaster and four boys from each troop in turn mark war anniversaries by running up new flags. The duty was turned over to the Scouts in consequence of anniversary dates being overlooked at the City Hall.

Not Taking Him Too Seriously.

"Don't take yourself too seriously," one of Baden-Powell's philosophies, was interpreted to the Chief Scout in amusing fashion by Cambridge University Rovers. On the evening prior to the conferring upon him of the degree of Doctor of Laws, he was invited to a banquet, put through a mock ceremony and in nonsensical terms created a "Doctorum Scutorum Pelargonium." B.P.'s account of the affair reflected as much enjoyment as that of the Rover undergrads.

THE YEAR'S BUSINESS REVIEWED

"... I think you will agree with me that for a year such as that through which we have just passed the showing is a remarkably fine one.

"New assurances of over $527,000,000, and a total in force exceeding $3,000,000,000, are figures so great as to need no emphasis.

"The distribution of our new business is interesting. Canada contributed $101,000,000, United States $291,000,000, Great Britain $50,000,000, and the rest of the world $85,000,000.

"Our mortality experience has been even more favourable than that of last year, the claims being but 54.3 per cent. of the expected, against 57.6 per cent. in 1930.

"Since business was commenced in 1871 we have paid out in benefits $594,000,000. Last year alone our payments were $93,000,000, an amount exceeding the total assurances written in 1922. We may well rejoice over the magnitude and importance of the social service which the Company is performing.

"During the past year life assurance has been tested as perhaps never before, and it has withstood the trial triumphantly. So far as I am aware not one life company on the continent has had to close its doors, a wonderful record. In Canada we can claim with pride that even since Confederation not one Dominion licensed company has ever failed.

"It will be noticed that in addition to the surplus of $16,000,000 over all liabilities and capital stock, we have a contingency reserve of $4,700,000 to provide for possible shrinkage in mortgages and other real estate investments. Our reserves have been calculated on the same strong basis as last year. Although our investments payable in American currency greatly exceed our liabilities in that currency, we have treated both as on a par, taking no credit for the premium on American funds. Our liabilities under contracts in other currencies also are included at a total greater than required at the prevailing rates of exchange.

"Our holdings of stocks have been valued on the basis laid down by the Dominion Department of Insurance, which is practically the same as that adopted for all companies by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners of the United States.

"In new investments we have favoured high grade bonds, the yield on which is now very attractive. Our purchases of Canadian Government bonds during the year amounted to $23,000,000.

"The profits paid or allowed to policyholders amounted to over $26,000,000, or over 20 per cent. of the total annual premium income.

"In the light of these figures, the report is indeed an excellent one.

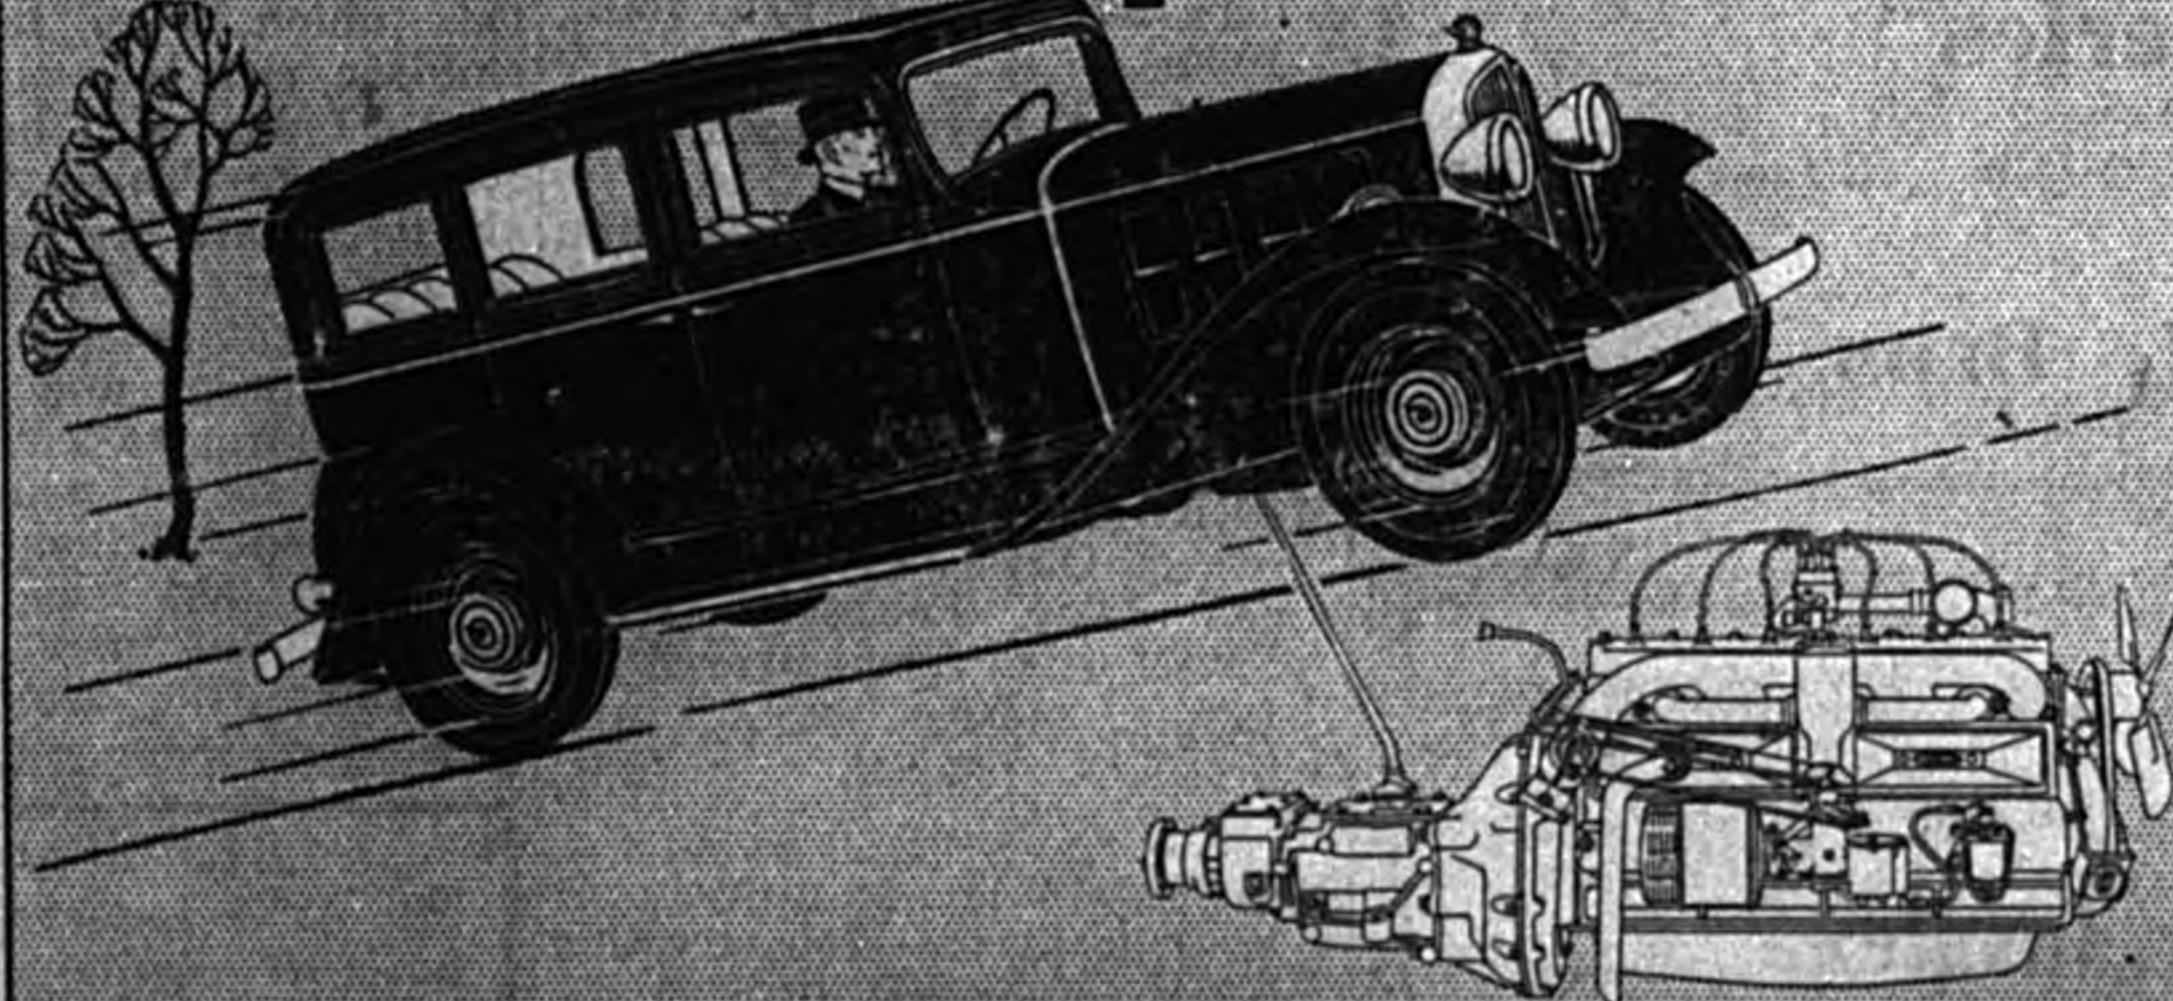

"And what of the future? No one believes that the depression will last for ever. It is impossible to say just when the turn will come, but with the vast natural resources of this continent, and the brains, energy, and actual wealth of its people, business recovery is inevitable. When prosperity does return no company will share in its benefits in greater measure than our own."

Devil's Food Layer Cake

¾ cup butter
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
1 cup milk
2½ cups pastry flour (or 2 cups flour and 3 table-spoons of bread flour)

¾ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3sq. unsweetened chocolate, melted

Cream butter thoroughly; add sugar slowly. Add beaten yolks; mix thoroughly. Add flour sifted with baking powder and salt, alternately with milk; add vanilla and melted chocolate. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Put into 3 greased layer cake tins and bake in moderate oven at 350° F. about 30 minutes. When cool, put together and cover thickly with Chocolate or White Icing (recipes are in the Magic Cook Book).

with Magic Baking Powder

"I know from experience," says the cookery expert of Western Home Monthly, "that Magic makes most baked dishes look and taste better. Its uniform leavening quality gives dependable baking results."

And Miss Dutton's praise of Magic is seconded by the majority of dietitians and cookery experts throughout the Dominion. They use Magic exclusively because they know it is pure, and always uniform.

Canadian housewives, too, prefer Magic. In fact, Magic outsells all other baking powders combined. For luscious layer cakes, light, tender biscuits, delicious pastry—follow Miss Dutton's advice. Use Magic Baking Powder.

THE MASTER MIND

Novelized by Marvin Dana,
Author of "Within the Law,"
From the Successful Play
by Daniel D. Carter

Blount took advantage of the reference to the daughter of the house to enter again into the conversational reins.

"Yes, Mr. Wainwright, and you, doctor, we're just naturally some proud of that girl of ours. You might think our years in France would spoil a girl. So it might—some of them, I guess. But not our girl! Why, Lucene is just crazy to get home again—out to Laramie, Wyo."

"I don't know, father," the wife said doubtfully. "I'm afraid she'll never be really satisfied here in her own country any more."

"I guess that's right," said Walter, who had re-entered in time to hear his mother's remark.

Blount waved an arm in vehement denial. Then the visitors stood up quickly, looking toward the doorway. Lucene had paused there, and her blue eyes, now darkly lustrous, were fixed on Wainwright in a gaze that penetrated to his soul.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Lovers' Meeting.

LUCENE was in an evening gown of a white flimsiness that revealed with modest truth the gracious lines of the slender,esome form. A deeper rose blossomed warmly in her cheeks, the tender bow of the lips was slightly parted to a tremulous smile of rapture. On the man, too, a spell was laid, like unto hers, yet unlike, for where she knew him in the first instant his memory did not stir as yet, though the exquisite charm of her there thrilled him with longings new and masterful. The voluminous voice of Blount, making the introductions, freed the twain in part at least, from the enchantment fallen upon them.

Wainwright managed artfully to be beside the girl as the general exodus was begun. He was filled with an unreasoning indignation that wholly obscured his sense of humor as he heard the dialogue between Dr. Forbes and Mrs. Blount as they passed on their way toward the door.

"Your daughter is a dainty creature, Mrs. Blount," the physician was saying with enthusiasm.

Mrs. Blount swept an approving look over her own majestic frame.

"Yes, all our family are just like that."

"Really, the woman is indecent!" was Wainwright's angry thought.

"Come on, Cortland," Forbes called over his shoulder as he reached the doorway. Wainwright turned again to the girl beside him. The others were all out of the room now, and she looked up at him with a little smile, so wistful that it set his pulses bounding in a wild longing to comfort her—why, for what, he knew not.

"Shall we go now?" she asked timidly.

"Yes—no—that is, wait, just a moment." Then, as she faced him with a certain shrinking bravery born of long yearning, their eyes met and held in a lingering look that stirred each to the depths. And, in that look, the man's memory stirred and leaped to life.

Amazement crept into the lines of his face, and awe glowed in his piercing expression. The girl stood rigid, pale from stress, waiting patiently of body, with an infinite impatience of the heart.

"I—I can't be mistaken," Wainwright murmured. His voice grew firmer, vibrant with conviction, subtly caressing: "Surely it's the same little girl. Oh, surely it's my little savior of the Chicago street, isn't it? Tell me! But—I know!" The final words rang triumphantly, though uttered so softly.

The girl's words came faltering, for her heart raced with happiness.

"Then you—you remember me?"

Impulsively Wainwright put out his hands. With equal impulsiveness Lucene laid her slim fingers within his warm clasp.

"Remember you?" he cried, with a laugh of sheer joy. "Well, yes, I think I do."

The words sounded a melody of bliss in the depths of the girl's being.

"After all these years!" she breathed.

The rigidity of her pose relaxed.

"Yes, after all these years," he half-whispered. "It is wonderful—wonderful!"

"Yes," she agreed simply, nor dared to lift her eyes to meet the warm regard that reached to her heart.

"Not wonderful that I should remember you," the man explained in a low, quite unaware of his words in contemplation of her loveliness. "Only wonderful that we should at last meet again like this."

She spoke sedately enough, though with a happy quaver in the music of her voice.

"They will be waiting. We must go."

But the glamour was still on the man, and he spoke again, his tones full of a reverent tenderness:

"What a princess you've grown to be!"

The girl turned away resolutely, though her heart was listening to the singing of his praise for her.

"We must go," she commanded.

Wainwright aroused himself.

"Yes," he said very softly as he walked beside her. "We must go." And then he added still more low, "Together."

The days that followed this first meeting were halcyon ones for the lovers—for lovers they were. Lovers they had been, in a fanciful, dreamy, altogether extravagant fashion, since the few seconds together in Chicago years ago, with never a word exchanged between them.

Lovers, they were of a different sort, from the instant of the association brought about by the machinations of the Master Mind. There was never any tiniest suggestion of doubt on the part of either. The love that had been no more than a romantic chimera was sprung into full, glorious life—the single reality in the universe, the beginning and the end of all things.

Little by little Wainwright, self-conscious, fearful as never before, dared to profess his adoration. And, by so much as he dared to speak, she shyly dared to listen, until at last the supreme confession set them brimming with ecstasy. For once, it seemed that there was no obstacle to prevent the smooth running of the course of true love. The Blounts, concisely advised by Andrew, welcomed Wainwright as a suitor for Lucene's hand. For the rest the young man was his own master, the possessor of an ample fortune. There was nothing to occasion delay, and, as soon as a sufficient trousseau could be assembled, the marriage took place.

After a heavenly honeymoon season, the bride and groom established themselves joyously in a country place near New York, with the admirable Andrew in charge of a considerable staff of servants. The arrangement was satisfactory to the Blounts, as they were invited to a long visit with their daughter and son-in-law, before leaving for their home in the west.

Of the various persons concerned in this strange menage Wainwright was most wholesomely happy, though even his happiness was qualified. Yet the element of peril, the threat of impermanence which he feared, gave even an added zest to the delights of love.

That which menaced him was the familiar dread of the mysterious vengeance to be visited upon him, but this dread was swollen to dimensions new and ominous. It was the very morning following the wedding, in a remote hotel, whither the bridal pair had gone secretly lest any one know their whereabouts, that the blow fell.

As Wainwright passed along the hallway of their suite he perceived something white under the outer door. On examining this he found it to be an envelope bearing a typewritten address to himself. Something in the look of the unexpected missive sickened the man, nauseated him with nervous apprehension of disaster. And his emotion was, indeed, justified, for on opening the envelope he plucked forth from it a red card.

The day of doom, then, was near at hand.

It took all the lover's strength of will to hide from his bride the shock he had sustained, but somehow he carried the effort through to success, and Lucene had no suspicion that all was not well with the man she so worshipped. But, at once on his return from the wedding journey, Wainwright summoned Marshall, the Pinkerton agent, and directed the detective to use every resource in an endeavor to discover the mysterious foe.

Lovers They Were.

Nevertheless he was happy in his life, happy beyond thought that he had ever conceived as possible, for the love between him and his wife was a perfect love. The vengeance that threatened him was not one to make a brave man weaken; for it was undeserved. He had no sin on his conscience. He could hold fast to his happiness undimmed.

It was otherwise with Lucene. The burden of guilt drained her forces. She had pleaded with Andrew in vain for the privilege of open confession, of the whole truth concerning her past life, to her husband. Such candor had been the instinct of her innocence, and that instinct was never slain, though shocked to silence by the specious sophistries of the Master Mind. He succeeded, however, in convincing her superficially that perfect frankness to her husband would repel, would drive the lover from her arms.

If Wainwright was the one most happy in wholesome wise it was the Master Mind himself who found an unholy happiness in the bizarre situation that he had contrived so cunningly for the ultimate accomplishment of his revenge. Thus far in truth his success had been unequivocal. There had been no failure anywhere in the processes he had evolved for the consummation of his revenge against the man he hated.

In the drawing room of the Wainwright mansion Blount was pacing to and fro somewhat nervously, brooding over many things and wondering mightily as to when he should be permitted to return to the tranquil pleasures of Laramie, Wyo., where he knew not fear and where he was respected of all men. Mrs. Blount and Lucene sat near each other by the windows, looking out over the fast darkening landscape. But presently Mrs. Blount turned to her husband.

"My goodness, John!" she exclaimed reproachfully. "I do wish son-in-law would hurry up. Why, I'm so horribly hungry I'm fading away to a shadow."

Blount halted.

"You really hungry, mother?" he demanded.

"Hungry, mother?" she cried. "Well, I guess yes! Why, I ain't had a mouthful since din-lunch. And I didn't think much of that if you ask me—so there! Queer old soup!"

"You had some fried smelts besides the soup," the husband reminded her. Lucene, also, turned toward the two and smiled demurely.

"And you had three lamb chops, breaded."

"And some creamed potatoes," Blount added.

Lucene nodded assent.

"Yes, and some fruit salad."

"And three pieces of punkin pie," quoth the husband.

"And a pot of chocolate," declared the mistress of the house, laughing outright.

"Dearie me!" Mrs. Blount said halfily, facing the young wife. "To bear you talk anybody'd think you begrudged me enough food to keep body and skirt together."

Parker, whom Andrew had brought on to the new establishment, appeared with the announcement that dinner was served.

Mrs. Blount bolted in the direction of the dining room. But the westerner turned courteously to his hostess.

"Come on, Lucene," he said kindly. The distressed girl, however, refused with a shake of the head.

"You go, please," she directed. "I prefer to wait for Cortland. He's in the library talking politics with his campaign secretary, but he must come soon."

"With Mr. Marshall, eh? And does he think he's going to be elected?"

Lucene forgot her trouble for a moment in her interest over the political fortunes of the man she loved, as Blount had hoped she might.

"He's not sure," she replied animatedly.

"Mistress of the executive mansion at Albany!" Blount said half banteringly. "Hum! Pretty soft for you if he pulls it off, eh, daughter?"

Lucene laughed happily.

"Go to dinner," she repeated. "I think I'll go and hurry Cortland up."

Blount went his way obediently since he saw that such was her preference. The dilatory husband made his appearance to be greeted with an exclamation of pleasure by his wife.

"I was waiting for you, Cortland," she said fondly. "I couldn't bear the idea of going in without you, for I was worried. You must not work so hard. You'll get sick."

"Nonsense!" he answered gayly. "I'm as strong as an ox." He stooped and raised her to his side, drew her close and the lips of the two met in a tender caress.

"But even oxen get sick sometimes, I suppose," Lucene said, with a pout. "Anyhow, we must go in to dinner. You must have food for work, like the beasts of the field, you dear, big, silly man!" the wife said, with a huge content in her voice.

"Oh, you adorable, lovely little woman!" he said affectionately.

Of a sudden he released her, put her from him, to her hurt surprise. "That poem," he muttered, and picked up a book from the nearby table, with which he returned to Lucene. "Do you know, I've found some verses here that might have been written for you and me. Somehow it seems that one takes to poetry naturally when in love. Listen, dearest, to this stanza:

"I have led her home, my love,
My only friend;
There is none like her—none!"

A kiss made sweet caesura in the rhythm of the verse.

Then he read on:

"And never so warmly ran my blood,
And sweetly on and on—Calming itself—"

The soft palm of the girl on his lips brought the reading to an end.

"Oh, please, please—you mustn't—you mustn't!" The low voice was pleading.

"Why not?" Wainwright demanded, greatly surprised by this insistence, a little grieved.

"Oh, if you only knew! If you only knew!" The words came walling. As she uttered them, Lucene sprang from him and turned her face aside.

"See here, dearest," Wainwright exclaimed, in much distress over her sudden dejection. "You're not—not worrying over anything, are you?"

"There's nothing the matter—nothing whatever. Only sometimes I—I'm so happy that I just know it can't possibly last!"

THE LATE MISS C. M. BRYERTON

Once more it is our sad task to record the passing away of one much respected and beloved by all who knew her, for her life of Christian piety and many kind and gentle deeds.

Miss Charlotte M. (Lottie) Bryerton was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bryerton of Carillon. She had been ill for almost a year, for the most part confined to bed, but endured her sufferings with patience and resignation to the will of God. She was tenderly cared for by her sister, Mrs. W. H. Villeneuve, in whose home at Carillon, she passed away on the morning of Thursday the 11th inst. The funeral was held on Saturday morning and was attended by a large gathering of friends and relatives. The high requiem Mass at Carillon Chapel was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Deguire of Cote de Neiges, a friend of the deceased, who came up from town specially for the occasion, with Rev. Frs Dulude of St. Andrews and Gerard of Carillon, as deacon and sub-deacon respectively. There were present besides in the sanctuary, the Rev. Frs. Decarie of St. Andrews and Boylan of Cote de Neiges. At the close of the impressive service, Mrs. E. G. Poole of Montreal, a sister of the deceased, sang very sweetly a hymn "In the Better Land", composed by Miss Ella Bryerton, another sister, shortly before her death, some years ago. The remains were then conveyed to St. Andrews Roman Catholic Cemetery, where interment took place in the family lot. Those attending from a distance were, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Chaufy and son Robert, of Carthage, N. Y., sister and brother-in-law of the deceased, her sister Mrs. E. G. Poole of Montreal, also Rev. Fr. Boylan of Cote de Neiges and Miss Edith Derrick of Montreal.

The W. M. S. of the Presbyterian Church met at the home of the Misses Walsh last Wednesday afternoon.

The W. A. of the Anglican Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Ball last Thursday afternoon.

Miss Florence Aylen and Miss Dorothy Stanley of Montreal, were the guests of the Misses Walsh over the week-end.

Mr. Kenrick Dorion motored from Montreal to Gatineau Point, a week ago Saturday. He stopped on his way through St. Andrews to have dinner with his mother, Mrs. Oscar Dorion.

In spite of the bad roads there was a good attendance at the Women's Service of Prayer, held at the United Church last Friday afternoon. Those representing the missionary societies at Cushing and Point Fortune were able to be present and take part in the programme. The St. Andrews Choral Society contributed a musical number entitled, "Glory to God", which was greatly appreciated.

The fifth of the McGill Lyceum lectures was given last Friday in the United Church. The lecturer, Professor, W. D. Woodhead presented about forty slides dealing with ancient and modern Crete. His story of the discoveries of the famous archaeologist Sir Herbert Evans, runs like a romance. The audience was astonished to hear about the wonderful civilization which existed on this island, thousands of years before the birth of Christ. The frescos and wall paintings were of extraordinary beauty.

CUSHING

Cushing Community Club will meet on Saturday night of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Weir and daughters arrived home from Thorold on Saturday last.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Matthews of Stardale were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Weir on Sunday.

St. Mungo's Church Ladies' Association will meet at the home of Mrs. T. Weir Jr., on Thursday, Feb. 25th.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Weir and son Bobbie of St. Anne de Bellevue, motored to Cushing to visit his mother Mrs. T. Weir, Sr.

Mrs. T. Boyle received word on Thursday, of the death of her niece Mrs. Green of Montreal, which occurred on Wednesday night.

Mrs. J. W. Maclean, Mrs. L. M. Gaston, J. Canning and F. Fuller are spending several days in Montreal this week, attending the United Church W. M. S. Annual Presbyterian meeting.

The Misses Violet and Myrtle Bryerton, also Grant and Arthur Bryerton of Verdun, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bryerton and attended the funeral of their Aunt, Miss Lottie Bryerton of Carillon.

Robt. G. Meikle Esq., Ex M. P.P. for Argenteuil, leaves on Monday for the Northwest.

Mr. D. P. Beattie of Montreal, informs us that Mr. Clovis St. Jean, of Clarence, Co. Russell, sowed last spring 15 bushels of wheat and reaped 450 bushels. He also sowed two bushels of barley and reaped 84.

A very cool piece of robbery was perpetrated at the bankrupt sale last Tuesday. A man walked and deliberately sat down, took off his moccasins and two pairs of socks, helped himself to a pair of boots which he put on leaving in their place the moccasins and socks, and coolly walked off with the boots.

The weather this winter has been the most changeable we have ever experienced—changes from cold to warm being very remarkable. On Monday it rained all day and the roads in consequence became almost impassable. Tuesday was as balmy as a day in April or May, the sun being quite warm. From present appearance, it looks like an early spring and we hear the "caw-caw" of the crows flying about.

A very successful carnival was held in St. Andrews rink last Friday evening, and among those participating were, Miss Albright, Evening Star; Miss Alice Abbott, Fish Wife; Miss Maud Abbott, School Girl; Miss Maggie Bell, Bohemian Peasant; Miss Fuller, Swiss Peasant; Miss Eva McMartin and sister Lillie; Miss Wanless, Snow Flake; the Misses Stackhouse.

Messrs. Tom Bell and John Banford, Snow-shoers; Robert Fraser, Mr. Lamb, Jos. Palliser, Raftsmen; Henry Todd, Sailor; Jim Middleton Peter McGregor.

Mr. and Mrs. Winch of Montreal are in town owing to the severe illness of Mr. Hugh Fraser, Sr.

Mr. Wm. Hills left for Winnipeg, Man., on Tuesday, where he intends following the hardware business.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McRuar left for Boisvau, Man., on Tuesday morning, and Mrs. McMillan with her two children left the same day for Winnipeg.

Don't forget the St. Andrews Tea-meeting on Tuesday Feb. 26th., (1907.) The finest male quartette on the continent, composed of Messrs R. Diplock, Dr. Armitage, R. Dumbrille and S. Dunn, whose selections throughout the evening will be a rare treat, irrespective of the sumptuous tea for which the St. Andrews folk are noted.

Lachute defeated Buckingham in an exciting game last Wednesday with the fine score of 11 to 5. Throughout the game Foreman and Brennian made many brilliant rushes, which had much bearing on the results. Styann and Hampton also put up a wonderful game, as did Drennan and Raitt, while Wilson in goal proved a real wonder, as nothing hardly passed his keen eye.

The teams were afterwards entertained by the ladies of the town to a supper in the Victoria Hall.

Timekeepers were, Dr. A. W. Stackhouse and R. H. Cowan; Umpires, H. W. Neil and J. McAndrew; Referee, F. Patrick.

Lesson for February 21

JESUS THE GOOD SHEPHERD

LESSON TEXT—John 10:1-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Our Good Shepherd.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Our Good Shepherd.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Following the Good Shepherd.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus the Good Shepherd.

The occasion for the parable of the Good Shepherd was the excommunication by the Pharisees of the blind man, who had been healed by Christ.

1. The Good Shepherd (vv. 1-18).
1. Jesus is the true shepherd (vv. 1-6). He came by the divinely appointed way. John the Baptist and others of the prophets had performed the function of the porter and opened the door to the sheepfold (vv. 2, 3). The power exercised by the Pharisees in casting out this man was not obtained by lawful means. It was stolen by them and exercised in the bold spirit of robbers. The reason the man suffered excommunication was that he recognized Jesus as the true shepherd and turned from the Pharisees, not only as strangers, but as thieves and robbers. Despite the deceit, audacity, theft, and robbery of these Pharisees, those who were Christ's sheep were declared to be forming a new flock and following him as the true shepherd (v. 4).

2. Jesus is the door of the sheep (vv. 7-10). The way to fellowship with God is through Christ. He is not only a door, but the only door (Acts 4:12). There is absolutely no way into the fold of the redeemed but by and through him. All who attempt to gain access to God except through Jesus Christ are thieves and robbers (v. 8). Those who become members of the flock of God through Jesus Christ enjoy marvelous privileges and gifts (v. 9, 10).

a. Salvation—"shall be saved" (v. 9). They not only enjoyed present salvation, but are eternally saved (vv. 27, 28).

b. Liberty—"shall go in and out" (v. 9). Only those who accept salvation in Christ know what freedom is.

c. Contentment—"shall go in and out and find pasture" (v. 9). The one who really enters the fold by Christ, the door, receives that which is all-satisfying to the soul.

3. Jesus is the good shepherd (vv. 11-18).

a. He giveth his life for the sheep (vv. 11-13). The hireling abandons his sheep in time of danger. The hireling, represented by the Pharisee, takes up his work and continues it for his own sake, for the profit that is in it. Jesus was so devoted to his sheep that he willingly laid down his life for them.

b. He has perfect knowledge of his sheep and they know him (vv. 14, 15). Knowing his sheep so well, he looks after their welfare. He enjoys such personal intimacy with his sheep that he knows them by name, goes before them to lead the way and defend them from every danger.

c. His sympathy is world-wide (v. 16). He declared, "Other sheep have I which are not of this fold." This suggests that the Gentiles have a place in his fold.

d. He enjoys the love of the heavenly Father (vv. 17, 18).

II. The Sheep (vv. 19-30).

1. Unbelievers are not Christ's sheep (vv. 19-26). Christ's assertion that he was the good shepherd caused a division among the people. Some accused him of being mad, others that he had a devil. To their request that he would tell them plainly if he were the Christ, he responded by referring them to the testimony of his works, declaring that the secret of their inability to recognize him was their unbelief.

2. His sheep recognize his voice (v. 27). There are many voices in the world: the voice of the hireling, the voice of the thief, and the voice of the stranger; but none of these will the sheep hear. The voice of the true shepherd is recognized by his sheep even amidst the babble of voices in the world today.

3. He knows his sheep (v. 27). Regardless of how helpless and ignorant the sheep may be, he knows every one and he looks after them.

4. His sheep follow him (v. 27). This is the proof that they are his. The true sheep will flee from strangers (v. 5). This should be a solemn warning to all such as are following strangers.

5. His sheep are eternally secure (vv. 28, 29). The sheep are entirely dependent upon the shepherd. It is the shepherd's business to look after and care for the sheep.

WORDS OF WISDOM

The short way to spell holiness, is I-o-v-e.

The glory of labor is a commendable harvest.

A companion of fools shall be destroyed (Prov. 13:20).

Most of the shadows of this life are caused by standing in our own sunshine.

Service in Times of Stress

The social significance of life insurance has possibly received insufficient attention in recent years while some of its other features have received unusual emphasis. If this tendency has been in greater evidence in periods of special prosperity, it is, perhaps, natural that the trying conditions of the past two years should cause people to realize the old primary values on which life insurance is based. During a time when all forms of business suffered severely and many succumbed, life insurance has withstood every strain, and has justified every claim. Not a single company on this continent has failed to meet every demand, even though these demands were unusually heavy. Within a decade and a half, life insurance has successfully survived the tests of a world war, of pestilence, and of unexampled depression.

Its steady, unobtrusive, but wonderfully helpful service to its policyholders is strikingly phrased in a reference by President T. B. Macaulay at the annual meeting of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada held recently. He pointed out that the Sun Life Company last year paid out $93,000,000 to policyholders and beneficiaries, and that since organization it has paid out nearly $600,000,000. In the ordinary course of business, there will be paid out to policyholders and beneficiaries during the present generation the whole three billion dollars of assurance now embraced in the huge Sun Life business in force.

The stabilizing and constructive factor of the Sun Life and other companies in modern economic life is but lightly appreciated.

The annual report of the Company indicates that its new paid-for assurance last year amounted to $527,000,000, indicating how generally the public, during a trying period, turned to life insurance as a sure and tested refuge.

With assets of $624,000,000 and total assurances in force of over $3,000,000,000 the Sun Life Company continues to set new records in the life insurance field.

Local Hockey

ACADEMY TEAM IN GOOD FORM.
BROWNSBURG AHEAD IN LEAGUE FINALS.

TEAMS TIE 3-3 IN FIRST PLAY-OFF. BROWNSBURG WINS SECOND PLAY-OFF

A time-honored rivalry was at its height, when Brownsburg and Lachute swung into the play-offs last Saturday. And the enthusiasm which now prevails, since Saturday's 90 minutes of keen hockey ended in a 3-3 tie, is comparable to the Hawkesbury-Lachute fury of earlier decades. The 3-3 impasse was the first of play-offs between Independents & Burg teams, the winner of which will step up for provincial championship contests closing the season.

The game, at Brownsburg, featured a polished brand of hockey, not merely polished but Clean—only one penalty being called-for throughout; and was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators. Referee MacKimmie was on the job, and passed a busy evening. Weather cold and ice keen.

Cousineau, in his usual good form, led off with the initial tally, Gagnon and Seary also scored for the 'Burg, giving the latter team a 2-1 lead at close of the first clash.

Independents set out to even the count and all hands seemed inspired to utmost effort and speed. Cousineau skated through again and landed the rubber safely behind Leclair in the opponents' cage.

The third stanza, opening at 2-2, brought the fans to attention. Brownsburg put on a fine performance, and spectators appeared to enjoy this local mix-up more than any Big-League Big-City game. The quality of hockey was, in fact, insurpassable. Church, in the Lachute net, turned aside a battery of sure-fire shots from Brownsburg forwards, and his saves were an inspiration to his team-mates.

Drew played a first-class game throughout, handling the hickory in his frequent poke check which was pretty to watch. Brownsburg maintained an offensive in Lachute territory, and our local boys, in turn, found their defence impassable.

A prolonged overtime session, of 30 minutes, was necessary to break the tie, and the honors seemed destined for Lachute when Drew took charge of the disc and followed a rush down the ice with another goal for Independents.

Lachute fans went crazy. But Brownsburg raised a still noisier bedlam when their team scored and again evened the count. Independents seemed to be crowding behind the blue line, somewhat to the confusion of Church, who slipped a well-directed puck from Gagnon. Cruise, on the locals' reserve line, played a good game, but was apparently hampered by his stiff ankle. The defence players were active through the whole 90 minutes' performance. Eleven-thirty saw the close of one of the finest games in district hockey with the score at 3-3.

The Independents-Brownsburg fixture on Tuesday, Feb. 16th., brought victory to the Independents with 5 goals to 4. This result was incorrectly reported last week in these columns, the victory having been credited to Brownsburg.

The Raymond Cup, on view in Deacon's show-window, still awaits the winners in our district league, as Brownsburg is due to meet Independents tonight in what may, or may not, be the decisive game.

Tuesday witnessed the second of the play-offs, when Brownsburg handed a 5-4 defeat to Lachute, thus gaining a lead of one game and a fair chance of winning the local championship tonight. Meanwhile our local puck-chasers are all set to grab a triumph this evening and so bring the two teams back in even place.

Tuesday's encounter was well-matched, but not so spectacular as the previous clash in Brownsburg, when the teams drew 3-3. The play was clean, only one penalty being imposed on each side. Referee MacKimmie piped the tune, ruling the game with his usual precision and fairness.

Paul Lefebvre led the tally for Lachute, scoring on a slick pass, and Charlebois promptly evened up with a goal for Brownsburg. The second period opened faster and Drew scored neatly on a rebound, taking Leclair unawares in the Brownsburg cage. Lachute boys followed up with some smart co-operation in the Brownsburg end and Beauchamp scored two successive goals. The visiting sextette were quick to take the cue, however, and slipped two goals through the Church blockade, McGibbon scoring on both occasions.

The third session opened at 4-3, with Independents in the lead, spectators on their toes, and Brownsburg keyed to a high pitch. McGibbon again evened up the count for the visitors; and finally—with the Lachute reserve line in play—Brownsburg broke through again and Seary placed the winning goal to their credit.

The opponents' 5-4 victory was a disappointment to our home town enthusiasts, but the Burg boys were well supported and received a cheery ovation from their fans.

The Raymond Rink was well packed, and counted the largest gate in its history of recent years.

Play was fast and there was no lull in the proceedings. Our hard-hitting Independents were not quite up-to-scratch at times, and appeared a little slow on the get-away. Drew, Beauchamp and Cousineau were outstanding on the offence line, while Giroux, the tireless defence-man, maintained a splendid game. The visiting team staged a good program, with all-star cast, Gagnon a headliner for speed and expert stick-handling. Brownsburg team-work was something to write home about, and their slim victory was well earned.

ACADEMY VS. MONTREAL WEST HIGH SCHOOL

This promises to be the game of the season. Last year the Academy Team was twice defeated by Montreal West. Last Saturday the two teams played a scoreless game in the Loyola Stadium, of which the Montreal Standard said, "Both clubs played fast and thrilling hockey for three periods," and the Gazette said, "The evenly balanced teams battled through the periods without being able to reach a verdict in the fast exhibition tussle." Puck faced at 2:30 p.m.

Death of a Well-known Resident

Late Mrs. J. R. McQuat
Deeply Mourned

On February 21st. at Lachute the death occurred of Mrs. J. R. McQuat, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Quinn. She was a member of one of the oldest families of Lachute and a life long resident. Her husband predeceased her 12 years ago.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Rutherford, wife of Dr. A. P. Rutherford, of Hawkesbury, Miss Gladys McQuat, of Lachute, and one granddaughter, Miss Gladys Rutherford. Two sisters also survive, Mrs. Thos. Cushing and Mrs. A. I. Morrison, of Montreal.

Mrs. McQuat was a valued member of the United Church.

The funeral, conducted by Rev. W. B. Rosborough, assisted by Dr. J. R. MacLeod, and Rev. A. G. MacKinnon took place on Tuesday at 2 p.m. at her late residence. Rev. H. Cousens offered prayer before the committal service. Interment took place in Lachute Cemetery.

MRS. J. D. BOYCE PASSES AWAY IN CALGARY.

It is with deep regret that we record the passing of Mrs. J. D. Boyce, at her home in Calgary, Alta., on Friday last, after an illness of several months. Mrs. Boyce was 62 years of age. Born at Chateaugay Basin, she spent the greater part of her early married life in this town, residing on Main Street where the Licop block now stands. She was a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church and wherever she went, one was left with a lasting impression of her ardent religious convictions and the warmth of a strong Christian personality. Mrs. Boyce is fondly remembered by her early associates in Lachute, where, migrating to the west in 1906—she left lasting respect and affection for a true friend.

Heartfelt sympathy is extended to the bereaved husband, in Calgary, to her brother Mr. R. Goodfellow, in Upper Lachute, and to her family of three sons (Norman, Stanley and Clifford) and a daughter (Mrs. Andrews.)

Quebec Dept. of Roads, under Hon Mr. Perrault, has just distributed the new 1932 road map of this province. The map, in a compact pocket form, contains much valuable information for the tourist, suggesting motor trips and outlining highways in a concise and explicit manner. From a publicity standpoint, the province should benefit materially in the half million copies which will be in circulation.

AYERS vs BROWNSBURG

The last game of the local hockey series, preliminary to the play-offs, was staged between Ayers Ltd and Brownsburg last Thursday, the 18th. The Brownsburg rink was packed and high enthusiasm was evident, among players and spectators alike. Referee MacKimmie handled the whistle and was kept busy, especially in the closing period, when there was undue vindictiveness in the play and sticks were manoeuvred for other business than merely pushing the puck.

The first session was fast and evenly matched, neither team scoring. Ayers sextette, in the second, seemed particularly inspired to action, but the breaks were against them. B. Patrie, one of their stellar stick handlers, sustained a cut near the mouth, and in his absence from the ice, Brownsburg rallied with the two initial goals—one by Pat Seary, one by Roy Charlebois.

Sir George Perley Optimistic Over Arms Parley

Definite Progress Made Despite Sino-Jap Conflict, Sir George Says

Geneva, Feb. 22.—Despite the tragic irony of the fact that shells are now falling in China on military and civilians alike, while the representatives of nations attend a disarmament conference in Geneva, definite progress still is being achieved at the international meeting, "Sir George Perley, Canada's chief delegate to the conference, said today in an address here."

Sir George stressed the fact that the Sino-Japanese situation aside from the question of its immediate tragic consequences in death, injury and privation, resulted also in a most unfortunate effect on the disarmament conference. He added, however, that while this situation may delay the work of the conference it also may so arouse world opinion that it will force a satisfactory settlement of affairs in the Far East.

"The situation in China," he said, "is the most graphic proof of the necessity of a reduction in armaments." Sir George praised the attitude of the various delegations, and said he regarded their proposals as of concrete value.

"Naturally," he said, "one proposal differs from another, and these differences must be reconciled, but they are made much less difficult to harmonize by the moderate way in which they have been brought forward. Each delegation has shown a sincere desire to understand the viewpoint of the others, and this is most hopeful."

There are two points, Sir Geo. stated on which there already is general agreement among the nations represented at the conference—first, that certain instruments of war must be either curtailed or abolished; and, second, that certain military practices, should be prohibited because of their barbarity or because they do not distinguish between military and civilian populations. There is genuine hope in Geneva that the progress achieved at the present conference will be the first all-important step toward the ultimate goal of disarmament, he said.

"Toward this end the United States and Canada are co-operating in the fullest manner," he said, "and nowhere is disarmament more desired than in the western hemisphere."

In closing his address Sir George extended the greetings of Canada to the people of the United States on the occasion of the 200th. anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

The Fifth Annual Fair of Ottawa Valley Seed Growers' Association is being held in Hawkesbury this year. The event has been held in Arnprior, Almonte, Renfrew, and Pembroke in preceding years. The dates announced are March 16-18.

The third clash, with Brownsburg two goals in the lead, got under way and developed a fast and furious encounter—mostly furious. St. Onge added another goal for Brownsburg, but the only spectacular highlight in this period was a goal by G. McFaul which somewhat salvaged the pride of our Mill boys. On a long drop shot from centre ice, McFaul hit the Brownsburg net-work with no uncertain aim. The game closed with a score of 3-1 and a list of minor casualties on each side.

The line-up was as follows,—Ayers Limited,—Ben Patrie in goal; G. McFaul, S. Langille, defense; O. Tessier, centre; Mirron and Joly, wing; Gagné, P. Patrie, B. Patrie, Brisbois, subs.

Brownsburg,—Leclair in goal; Tomalty and Petlie, defense; L. Roberts, centre; Gagnon and St. Onge, wing; F. McGibbon, K. McGibbon, Charlebois and Seary, subs.

Grenville Progressing

LACHUTE'S NEIGHBORING TOWNSHIP IS BIDDING FOR PROSPERITY

Someone high up in Government circles has said that the County of Argenteuil was destined to be one of the nicest counties in the Province. Of course few of the county haven't the slightest doubt about it; for the progress we have already made and the progressive spirit of our population are ample grounds for our optimism.

The village of Grenville in doing its bit in that direction and of late years has given evidence of intelligent, energetic and progressive action.

Within the last two years the already famous Perley Bridge has been built and respectable signs have been put on the highways and the land between the Canal and the river has been secured and made into a most beautiful free campsite for tourists. The Gatieneau Electric Coy. has renewed all poles and wires, thereby giving perfect service, and is further prepared to supply any amount of electricity desired. The Bell Telephone Company is installing private telephones. The town has purchased a very effective apparatus for protection against fire. The beautiful $50,000 wharf has been repaired and a freight shed built, giving business the advantage of water transportation besides the two railroads passing there. A beautiful road has also been built through the village from the Perley Bridge to the highway and $9,000. worth of sidewalks have been laid. A central park has been formed; and to afford adequate accommodation to our visiting public, a perfectly modern hotel has been erected while the two others are now remodeled and modernized. Now, also, the waterworks and sewerage system are being installed—All these additions and civic improvements are evidence of Grenville's spirit of enterprise and progress,—and are the practical outcome of its intention, to afford every opportunity to its inhabitants and those who may come to visit or locate there.

LACHUTE CURLING CLUB

Play for the District Medals was the chief excitement for the week-end curlers. Two teams came up from St. George's in Westmount, the first comprising W. H. Murphy, G. Stewart, A. Clift and H. J. Roffey, (Skip), playing against Jas. MacKimmie, E. M. Jones, G. Valois and J. P. MacKimmie (Skip), with a result of 10-22. The second team H. Martin, T. Dickson, C. N. Moison, and H. F. Mills (Skip) played against George Muir, W. J. Deacon, F. Falconer and P. Chabot (Skip) and were also defeated 16 to 10. Two teams representing Lachute played at the same time at St. George's Rink and were down 6 points. Those visiting the city were K. Wilson, R. McArthur, J. Gall, F. A. Brennan (Skip) R. Richardson, R. Todd, R. Fraser, Geo. Hay (Skip). On the total count Lachute was 12 points to the good thereby winning the medals. Both Clubs, royally entertained their guests and all expressed having enjoyed the day's sport very much.

The finals for the Mackie Sr. took place on Tuesday evening between Skips Rice and Charron, and after a very good game resulted in a win for Mr. Charron of 11 to 5.

Information has been solicited concerning the whereabouts of Amedee Seguin, aged 56 yrs., a merchant tailor of Alfred Village, Ont., who was last seen in Grenville on Saturday, and apparently travelling in this direction.

Mr. Seguin's disappearance is attributed to loss of memory. His car was found abandoned at the curb in Hawkesbury, near the railway station, and he was seen by acquaintances in that town on Friday. The missing man is treasurer of the village, Union St. Joseph, and the village court of the Catholic Order of Foresters. He is described as being clean shaven, 140 lbs. in weight, five feet six inches in height, and wears glasses.

SPECIAL LOW RATES TO BE CONTINUED

Montreal, February.—In response to public demand, low week-end round trip fares, which have been offered by the Canadian National, Canadian Pacific and other railway lines in the Dominion since last summer, will remain in force after February 29, the date originally set for their discontinuance.

In making this announcement the Canadian Passenger Association draws attention to the privileges now in force and of which extension is now to be made. Round trip tickets between any Canadian stations for any week-end are offered by the railways at the rate of one and a quarter times the regular single fare. These tickets are good going from Friday noon until Sunday noon and returning until Monday night.

The travelling public will thus be able to continue its week-end journeys, which have been so popular during the past year; it is anticipated that the volume of traffic will be even greater as the spring develops. The popularity of the concession is already assured by the thousands who have availed themselves of it, and its extension will, without doubt, be very welcome.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Several of our townsboys had a narrow escape on Sunday, when an over-loaded car driven by Hector Boyd broke through the ice on the Ottawa river at Rigaud. It appears the boys, in taking a short cut to cross the river, left the regular winter road and drove over a section where strong undercurrents make ice less secure. Everything appeared safe, however, until the car and its eight passengers crashed through. Luckily, the boys were able to scramble out of the car from one end which was not totally submerged and what might have been a tragic outcome was happily averted. The party escaped injury, although the shock of being suddenly thrown into ice-cold water doubtless provided enough thrill for the day. The automobile and equipment were left on the scene and the boys repaired to warmer and drier surroundings.

An M.P. says he never argues with a pig-headed person. He just takes what he says for granted.

We suggest timidly that maybe things would be better if time were spent in taking cotton off the market and putting it on the girls.—Boston Herald.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER.

HUMOUR.

Dear Boys :—

It came to me the other day that the fellow who had no sense of humour was after all to be pitied. He indeed misses a great deal in life.

To be able to look at things from the mirthful side is perhaps one of the greatest of gifts, and if we possess it we ought to be most thankful.

When we are plunged into the very depths of despair, on account of some real or imaginary disaster and then to be able to see the bright, and even in some cases discern the humorous angle of the situation, is, to my way of thinking, almost a Divine inspiration.

To be able to laugh at troubles, shows a courageous spirit and helps greatly to overcome them.

Humour we are told is the "spice" of life if you take the trouble to turn up any book of reference you will see for yourself what is meant by "spice". It is that which gives flavour or zest and changes the mere commonplace into something really worthy while. It is a curious fact, but for all that none the less true, that there are many people who seem to find a weird sort of satisfaction in continually looking on the dark side of things.

They reveal in gloom, and this is reflected on their faces and in their general attitude towards others. It would not be so bad if they would keep their wretchedness to themselves but in some way or other they are able to spread it abroad like an evil disease.

No, with a host of others, I prefer the man with a sense of humour. The hearty, cheery chap who can at all times raise a laugh no matter in what circumstances he finds himself. He spreads happiness, goodwill and contentment. He represents the silver lining that is always to be found on the inside of every dark cloud. You can almost hear him say—"Smile darn you smile," and he it is who believes from the very bottom of his heart the old time motto.

Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep and you weep alone."

Ever your affectionate friend,

THE GREATEST THING

Lachute, Que., Jan. 30th., 1932.

The Captain :—

"The greatest thing" I have is my mother. Because she raised me from the time I was a baby.

She suffers many hardships for my sake. She sends me to school and she will look after me until I am old enough to look after myself.

Your Club Member, A. WARD.

You have certainly written a good letter on this subject, and what you say is very true. We will decide this contest very soon.

THE CAPTAIN.

"The Return of Timothy"

In the meanwhile, unconscious of the valiant efforts which were being made by Henderson, Kenrick and Eric had done their best to keep up each others spirits by playing a sort of touch-me-if-you-dare game in the water. For a little while this kept their attention and when Eric noticed that Kenrick kept looking in the direction where Henderson had disappeared with a look on his face that betokened increasing anxiety he said, "Don't you think Ken, that he has been gone a long time?" with a tremble in his voice. "I am beginning to feel so cold and I don't think that I shall be able to swim much longer."

Kenrick looked at him and saw to his dismay that the little fellow's face had become white and drawn and his lips were an ugly purple colour. "I'll tell you what to do," he said cheerfully, "you come over here and put your hands on my shoulders and that will give you a nice rest for a little while."

"But—but what about you Ken, you must be tired too?" faltered the little boy.

"Oh, I am alright, good for a few hours yet," was the sturdy response. "You just do as I tell you and no further nonsense."

Eric obeyed only to willingly and put his hands on his school-fellow's shoulders. "You are good to me Ken. What should I do without you," whispered Eric but Kenrick was not listening, he was wondering what had really happened to Henderson; had he reached the boat or had he been already drowned in his attempt.

Bravely as he had spoken to Eric, he felt that it would not be long before he would be unable to carry this increasing burden, he cried, "see, here is the boat. Henderson has come and Eric," he cried, "see, here is the boat. Henderson has come and now you will be able to swim yourself for a few moments longer."

But there was no reply from the little fellow behind him and he was puzzled when the boat swept on and Henderson's long lean arm shot and held him fast.

"What is the matter with the youngster?" was the first anxious question.

"I don't know," replied Kenrick, "can you manage to get him off my shoulders, he seems to have frozen there."

Very skilfully Henderson manipulated the boat and worked it round to the back of Kenrick and then ever so gently leaned over using both hands to draw the quiet dripping form of his little school-fellow over the side. With a grunt of satisfaction and the relief thus afforded, Kenrick was soon with him.

Fortunately their clothes were just as they had left them and their first care was to strip Eric of his wet bathing costume and to wrap him up with all the coats and shirts they had at their disposal in the endeavor to restore circulation and warmth into his chilled body. For a long time their task seemed hopeless but after a while his eyelids began to quiver and a warm tinge of color came into his waxen cheeks. Encouraged by these signs they renewed their efforts and with such success that a little while later they were rewarded by seeing Eric open his eyes and endeavour to sit up.

"If only," muttered Kenrick, "we had something warm to pour down his throat, it would be splendid."

"Well," replied Henderson, "get to the oars 'Old Man' and we will make for the shore. I don't think we could be very far off if you ask me," and he was right because all this while the boat left to its own resources had been drifting steadily, helped by the wind from over the sea towards the land so that Kenrick really had very little work to do before the boat was safely beached.

THE JOY OF BEING AN EDITOR

Getting out this paper is no picnic.

If we print jokes, people say we are silly;

If we don't, they say we are too serious.

If we clip things from other papers—

We are too lazy to write it down ourselves;

If we don't, we are stuck on our own stuff.

If we stick close to the job all day,

We ought to be out hunting up news.

If we do get out and hustle,

We ought to be on the job in the office.

If we don't print contributions.

We don't appreciate true genius.

If we do, the paper is filled with junk.

If we make a change in a fellow's write-up.

We are too critical;

If we don't, we are asleep.

Now, like as not, someone will say we swiped this from some other paper.

WE DID.

Interchangeable Money System.

St. Andrews East,
Feb. 15, 1932.

Editor of The Watchman,
Lachute, P. Q.

In one of the papers a few days ago mention was made of a proposal likely to be made at the Ottawa Conference, that the coinage and monetary systems, of all the countries Dominions and colonies of the British Empire should be unified; and fear was expressed that it might be difficult to bring countries accustomed to the pounds, shillings and pence to shift to a decimal system; and perhaps still more difficult to bring those used to the dollars and cents to accept the more cumbersome figuring of the £.s.d.

I have been studying out a possible and workable combination of the two systems, so that no nation, Dominion, or colony would have to give up present methods of figuring, but they would be given the use of some new coin values to facilitate transactions with the citizens of other countries. The new system could also be utilized, as fully as desired, on the decimal plan where pounds, shillings & pence are still employed.

I wish you would kindly publish the results of which my study led, and perhaps some member of the Conference, in looking over your valued columns might get from them a hint useful to their inquiries. Our own distinguished representative for Argenteuil County will no doubt be on the committee studying the question of monetary unification and we think he can be depended upon to use his influence toward improvements that will facilitate trade between the various parts of the Empire and with the United States.

I am proposing that the standard unit of value be either the English pound or the American five dollar gold piece—preferably the latter, as the adoption of the American standard would bring the monetary systems of the two countries into harmony without the need of any treaty for that purpose and at the same time would retain for Britain and those countries using the pound all the advantages it has ever possessed along with the added convenience of the decimal system to just such an extent as may seem good unto them.

The great advantages of this plan would be the unification, not only of the monetary systems, of the great British Empire, covering a quarter of the earth, but that of the United States as well—all at one stroke with no delays for understandings and treaty-making.

We could assure our Uncle Samuel that in stealing his gold standard we are playing him a compliment that will make him none the poorer, but is likely to work out as a blessing to us both.

The proposed new coinage would include the following:—

	Value in	Pence	Cents
Five Dollar gold piece	250	500
Pound (20 shillings)	240	480
*Dollar	50	100
Shilling, or 12 penny piece	12	24
* 10 penny piece	10	20
6 "	6	12
5 "	5	10
3 "	3	6
1 "	1	2
1/2 "	1/2	1

* The dollar, 10 penny piece,

5 penny piece and 1 cent could be figured on the decimal plan, and might even constitute a complete system without use of other coins, and perhaps, it would be advantageous to have a small round hole in the centre of each after the Chinese idea.

In Canada no more quarter dollars and no more nickel or silver, 5 cent pieces would be coined (because they cannot be changed for equivalent coins in pence): those in circulation to be exchanged up to May 1, 1936 at any bank, for their value in bills or standard coins: after that date they would be redeemed at only 24 cents for the quarter dollar and 4 cents for the 5 cent piece.

The pence value, and also the cents value should be stamped on one side of each coin of base metal (any other than gold), and on the reverse side should be shown the name of the country, Dominion, or colony issuing same; and the year of issue.

The banks of each country, if called upon so to do, should redeem in gold, or bills, the silver, copper, nickel or other base metal coins of their own country if offered in even five dollar quantities.

It might be hoped that an argument could be made with the United States on similar lines for redemption of their base metal coins at some point or points, near the border.

Liverpool's Lord Mayor on Scouting.

That there is too much spoon-feeding today, and that Scouting "helps boys to fend for themselves," was given as one of his reasons for supporting the Scout Movement by the Lord Mayor of Liverpool, Mr. John H. Inskip. "Scouting taught boys to be independent and to find their places in life, instead of drifting," he declared.

World Scout Jamboree will be held.

The statement in a Budapest despatch to a Toronto paper that finances will prevent the holding in Hungary of the projected 1933 world gathering of Boy Scouts has been specifically denied by Dr. Vali, Hungarian International Scout Secretary. Conditions are not as bad as painted, and the Jamboree will be held as planned, Dr. Vali declares.

Boys Trained for Public Service.

During 1931 a total of 4,566 Canadian Boy Scouts passed Proficiency Badge personal health tests, and tests qualifying for public health and safety service. Of the total 1,019 became Ambulance men (advanced first aiders), 517 Missioners (junior nurses), 256 became Public Health Men, 326 Public Safety Men and 318 qualified as Rescuers (from drowning.) 474 passed the Healthman tests, 510 qualified as Athletes, 268 as Masters-at-Arms, and 876 as Swimmers.

DISARMAMENT

Did you know that interest charges are now equal to the War debt? We know that money doubles itself at 5%, in approximately 14 years, so it is not hard to see how the interest charges are piling up. They tell us that 'money talks.' It certainly has not talked loud enough or there would be more advancement in Disarmament. All other consideration aside, the appalling waste of money the large amounts that everyone is forced to pay, sometimes with out realizing it, should cause everyone to take a keener personal interest in the question of Disarmament. Now, it is left chiefly in the hands of the statesmen and politicians with the rest of the world standing by, unconcerned. Let us hope there will be direct action resulting from the coming Disarmament Conference.

AFTERNOON TEA

The English have the right idea about afternoon tea. A cup of tea with thin bread and butter, toast, or a sandwich with possibly a piece of plain cake or a biscuit. The Americans with their usual enthusiasm have seized upon the idea and have made it a function with elaborate food.

Afternoon tea should never interfere with the next meal. That is there should not be too much, nor too rich food nor should it be served too late. I am sure we have all come home with no desire for our evening meal. Then our poor families suffer! With no appetite ourselves we have no idea what to feed them.

It is a pleasant custom to serve a cup of tea to your afternoon callers and it can always be done. Cookies and small cakes keep so well that we should try to always have some on hand. Where there are families of growing children sometimes this is easier said than done. There are so many delicious little cakes to be bought that are put up in small airtight packages, it is wise to keep a supply of these tucked away out of sight for emergencies. A cookie or a biscuit is all that is necessary to serve for tea.

I like these because they require no last minute preparation and it always makes me cross to have to leave my guest long enough to have to prepare food. Any kind of simple sandwiches may be served. Most people like toast for tea and there is always Cinnamon Toast. That is my standby. When I seem to have nothing in the house to serve I always make Cinnamon Toast.

Cinnamon Toast

There are several ways of making this. The usual way is to mix butter, granulated sugar and to add sufficient cinnamon to colour it a good brown. It is rather a good idea to mix a quantity of this and keep it in a covered jar for quick use. After having tried several methods I like the following the very best. Make toast and butter, spread with honey and shake on cinnamon, then spread it around with a knife to make even. Remove crusts, cut in strips and arrange on a plate, log-cabin fashion.

Ginger Sandwiches

Mix ginger marmalade with a very little mayonnaise and spread on buttered bread. Cover with crisp lettuce if desired and top with another slice of bread. These are delicious and a bit different.

Walnut Sandwiches

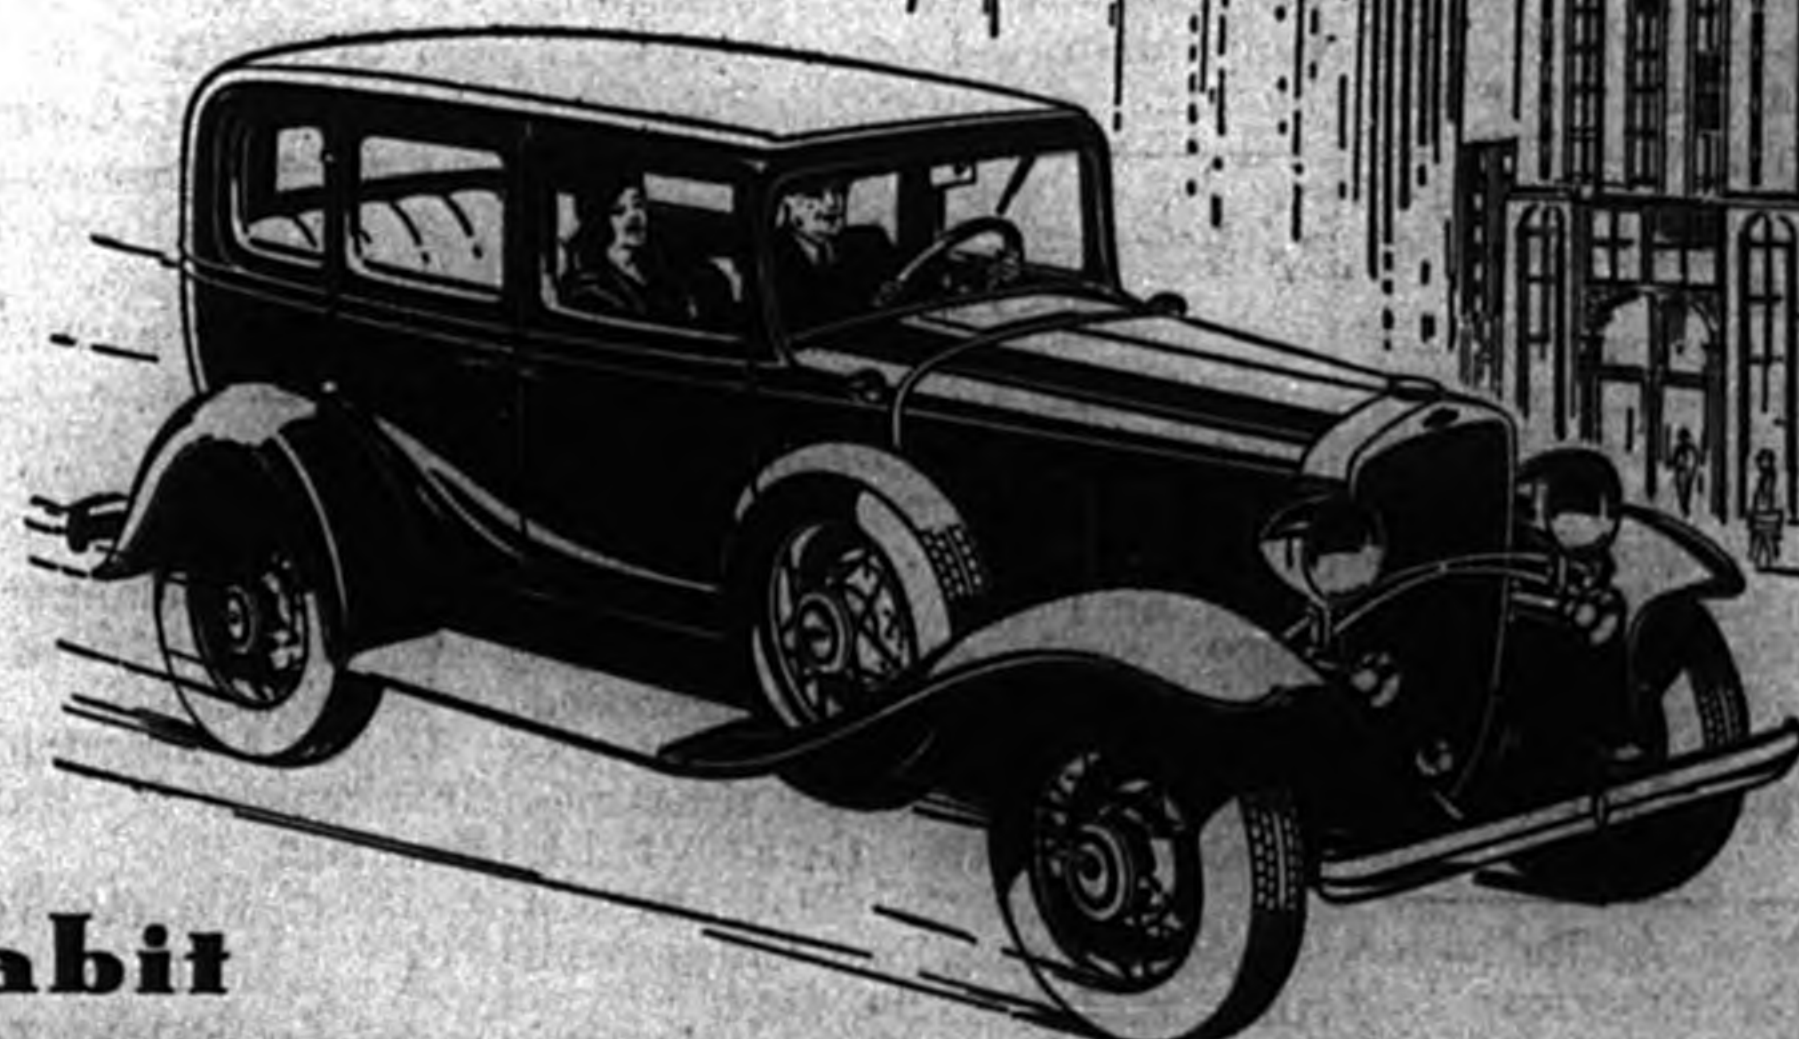

Chop walnuts coarsely (do not put through grinder) and mix a salad dressing that is highly seasoned with mustard. You may add a little mustard to your ordinary salad dressing, but the secret of these sandwiches is to have enough mustard to definitely taste it.

Cake for Afternoon Tea

One of my pet hates is a sticky cake for afternoon tea. Some of them are so messy to eat. Small cakes, cup cakes or cookies of some kind are so much easier to handle and to my mind are in better taste to serve for afternoon tea. Most small cakes will keep for some time.

EXPERIENCE.

Periods of depression have been recorded intermittently in the history of world affairs. In the business of living, we are obliged to confess that, individually, we have not always taken to heart the lesson of Experience. But perhaps it is not too much to believe that, with the balance of human intelligence in its favor, mankind advances through its small segment of evolution to triumph lastingly over its difficulties. Today we are emerging from Depression. The immediate indications show that we are the wiser for our experience. Apart from a keener urge to brotherhood and co-operation, inspired by the misfortunes of our fellow men; apart from a finer sense of values, impressed upon us by the crash of unbalanced possessions and unearned returns; the sober consideration of our public men to provide against the recurrence of such mishaps, leads us to believe we have learned something by the experience.

"It is no tragedy to go through a period of bitter conditions, but it is a tragedy if we do not learn to put its lessons into effect."

With the ghastly memory of a world war still vivid in our minds, and with nations laboring still under the debt of its waste and extravagance—today we turn our eyes to the Orient and wonder if the universe is wiser for its orgy of blood and plunder. We believe it is; for out of the War came powerful influences to subdue militarism, to preserve peace, and to respect the sanctity of human life. The nations have lent their mightiest intellects to a solution of the problem. We are learning from experience. Yet Rome was not built in a day. Nor yet in a single century has this complicated mechanism, which is Mankind, evolved from the primeval slime.

If all is not serene today—if wars and rumors of wars persist—we need not despair. The world is not standing complacently by; but as diligently as is permitted, to the best that is in human nature, men are learning by Experience, and Futurity will stand to profit more notably by the upheavals of our day and generation.

Miss Josephine A. Rathbone, president of the American Library Association, reported this week while on visit to Montreal that the circulation of books in U. S. libraries alone last year had increased by 10,000,000. She further stated, in evidence of the fact that unemployed are turning to literature during their idle hours, that the libraries today are crowded with men and women out-of-work. Some libraries had been obliged, in fact, to post the "Standing Room Only" sign. Miss Rathbone finds, in these unusual conditions, the indications of "a new and greater intellectual renaissance."

THE EAST AND THE WEST

In spite of the generous newspaper space accorded to Sino-Japanese manoeuvres, and mass reporting from the battlefield, the average reader still has but a vague idea of the warfare in Manchuria. Or perhaps one may say it is largely due to these prolific despatches, that the reading public has so vague an idea—for the news from day to day has been both contradictory and conflicting. In many journals it has been generously spiced with a misplaced humor, doubtless aroused by the unpardonable names exuding from the fray, and born of a certain lack of sympathy with races to which we are, after all, but brothers under the skin.

By reason of outlaw uprisings, of flood, earthquake and disaster in the Orient, China and her territories have for years been in the limelight—a limelight obscured by her very remoteness, which precludes our closer understanding of the East. Lacking a better knowledge, one is apt to imbue these peoples with primitive instincts and to overlook their attainment of civilization. And surfeited with the gruesome order of publicity which has emanated all these years from across the Pacific—perhaps we are overlooking the gravity of the present climax.

Together with such readers as may share our candour, we too must plead a misty conception of Sino-Japanese relations as they now stand. We refrain from discussing the ethics of the situation. The past with its banditry and depredation may have convinced us of the need for civil order and justice in Manchuria; Japan's interests in that territory may have justified her move towards policing and protecting the area. But, at this stage, we cannot conscientiously condone her extreme militarism, nor the utter disregard for civilian rights which has, rightly or wrongly, been attributed to her forces.

The situation is serious. And one thing stands out clearly; it is the complication of neutral relationships. There appears a danger that foreign interests will be violated. Already, in fact, the neutral settlements have been imperilled by air attacks and bombardments, although so far with no extensive damage or casualty. Japan, moreover, has been quick to apologise, and has disclaimed any aggressive intentions toward neutral powers. But the danger of involvement remains.

If we may add anything original to the discussion of these affairs, it is merely to decry the levity prevailing in the press, on a subject which interests our journalists but affects them so little. Massed misery stalks among men, women, and children in this stricken area. Life has been sacrificed. Machinery and supplies are being imported, to prolong the horror and carnage of war. The prospects are not bright, indeed. We may not understand these things; but it behooves us, at least, to drop our merriment at the expense of distressed humanity. If such matters can continue to provoke levity in the newspapers, alas—there is something sadly distorted in our western humor.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE ON "ENGLISH CATHEDRALS."

Professor McCulloch of McGill University was the guest lecturer of the Young People's Society meeting, held on Monday last in the Lachute United Church. The Rev. W. B. Rosborough introduced the speaker, who lost no time in gaining the interest of those present.

To make the talk more realistic, Prof. McCulloch started his journey from Montreal on one of the mighty ocean liners, and showed colored slides appropriate for the trip.

Disembarking at a Scottish port, we were ready to make our tour throughout the length and breadth of England, which is so full of historic & scenic beauty. If ever the opportunity arises for us to visit the Old Country, we can do no better than copy the example of Prof. McCulloch as the ideal method of sight-seeing when touring, who chose the bicycle, so as to see all the important details.

"English Cathedrals" our topic of study, is one of unlimited interest and fascination. These magnificent wonders of the middle ages, high in the standard of architecture, with their beautiful towers lifting heavenwards, and peaceful, holy sanctuaries furnish superb examples of fine art, that would indeed be hard to equal in these days of modern science. Many of the Cathedrals of England have evidences of several styles of architecture due to the fact that three of four centuries were taken in building and completing them. Pictures of fine specimens of stone and wood carving were shown on the screen, although sometimes the imagination of the sculptor was indeed curious but the workmanship was excellent. Cathedrals of Edinburgh, Durham, Ely, York, Canterbury, and several others were described, with beautiful pictures to show the magnitude, which gives one reason to wonder and appreciate the marvelous structures of the medieval ages.

A hearty vote of appreciation was moved and seconded by the Society to Professor McCulloch for the carefully prepared lecture, and Dr. MacLeod expressed his personal thanks.

Messrs. R. Woods and Fred Calvert, of Montreal, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Stansfield this week.

Miss Shirley Hamilton, of Montreal, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Hamilton.

Messrs. Colin Copeland and James Young, of Macdonald College, were week-end guests of Mrs. M. Copeland.

Mr. D. A. Stanforth of Lashburn, Sask., has been spending the past few weeks visiting friends and relatives in Montreal, Lachute and vicinity.

Mr. Ben Rogers of the Bank of Montreal Office Staff has been transferred from Windsor Ont., to Ottawa. He was the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Rogers for the week-end.

Accidents happen in the best regulated businesses. But those who have some notion of the fever-heat prevailing in news offices, even in a country weekly as the paper goes to press, may more readily understand how errors appear in the newspapers. Due to an unsigned copy sheet, a special offer of paints and oils by the Cottingham Supply Co. was wrongly inserted last week in T. McQuat & Son's advertising space. We direct our readers' attention to the error; for any folks desirous of painting the town red, blue or green at reasonable outlay, it is not too late to consult the Cottingham Supply Co. on their special offer.

Plan to be at the Auditorium Friday, Feb. 26th. The Hit of the season.

Bowling Activities

Members of the League are invited to a Bean Supper which will be given by Mr. Jos. Berniquier on Friday evening, Feb. 26th., at his hotel. Mr. Berniquier also offers a novel prize contest which is open to any members of the league and will be played earlier in the evening. The bowler making a score nearest to the number enclosed in a sealed envelope, will be awarded the prize.

Lachute Badminton Club.

Members kindly note that on Tuesday, March 1st., there will be a mixed tournament commencing at 7.30 p.m. sharp. There will be a fee of 10 cents to defray the cost of birds which must be paid before you play your games to the Secretary, Mr. R. P. Fraser. Prizes will be given to the winners.

A few venturesome motorists enjoyed the novel experience last Sunday, of driving to Lake Louisa. More remarkable perhaps than actually reaching the lakeshore by road at this season of the year, was the fact that a good thickness of clear ice enabled them to drive over the Lake from one end to the other. Among the parties were certain ones who frequent this Lake in the summer months, but had never previously crossed in any conveyance other than a boat. For them, this experience, and a view of their respective camps in the scenic surroundings of winter, provided an unusual thrill.

BROWNSBURG TEA-MEETING

On the evening of Thursday, Feb. 18th., the congregation of the United Church celebrated their anniversary in the form of the Annual Tea meeting, under the auspices of the Auxiliary. It was a clear, cold night, with atmosphere close to the hero mark, but the roads, though icy were usually excellent, with an absence of deep snow and friends motored over from surrounding towns and villages to enjoy the excellent supper for which the congregation has been always famous and to share in the splendid program provided afterwards. The people of the village, too, as well as members of the immediate church, were present in large numbers, and the entire evening was excellent to a degree eminently satisfactory to both Auxiliary and friends attending. The supper was excellent in variety and quite characteristic. Care had been taken to prepare the Sunday School hall and arrange the tables, both of which presented a very festive appearance, and the usual array of fruit cakes, adorned with icing and festooned with ornaments, was quite in evidence. Ample justice was done to the repast by friends from far and near, who didn't seem to worry about their cars in the freezing air outside but were out to have a royally good time in an event of unusual interest and the finest merriment. About 8.30 a program followed in the character most amusing and inspiring. The church choir furnished two very fine anthems under the direction of Mr. E. Taylor with Miss Edna Reid at the organ, followed by two exquisite melodies sung by Mrs. Thompson, both splendidly interpreted, and accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Cumbers. Two piano duets by Miss Ivy Steere and Miss Laura Lupien were played with remarkable force and expression, and Norman Bourne, a new arrival from England, a youth in his early teens, gave two selections in very fine voice and interpretation, with Miss Reid accompanying. The entertainer of the evening was Miss Jean S. Williamson of Montreal, whose visits to surrounding towns and villages had previously earned for her such a splendid reputation, and it need only be said that on the occasion of this visit her first to Brownsburg, she gave a program of very high merit, both humorous and otherwise, and in excellent tone and manner. As an elocutionist she captures her audience at the start and the interest in her delineations never flags throughout the various selections, with which, too, she is generous, responding deep, rich voice and an impersonation most artistic and realistic. The presence of local ministers of neighboring Churches added spice and repartee to the evening's proceedings—Mr. Rosborough and Mr. Cousens of Lachute, and Mr. Baxter of Maple Ave—and these addresses were enjoyed by every one. The evening broke up by everyone voting it a truly excellent event, and one quite in keeping with the reputation for good suppers and programmes of an energetic and loyal people.

The Best Cake Jim Ever Tasted

"It's surprising how things go astray. When I was visiting my sister Martha she gave me a new recipe for lemon cake. Yesterday, when I specially wanted it, I couldn't find it anywhere."

"So you had to do without it, I suppose?"

"Oh no, I just called Martha on the telephone and she gave me the recipe over again. Jim said it was the best cake he ever tasted, and I said that it's lucky we have a telephone."

Our Puzzle Corner

Then if you give a "crossing the river" puzzle, in which people have to be got over in a boat that will only hold a certain number or combination of persons directly the would solver fails to master the difficulty he bodily introduces a rope to pull the boat across. You say that a rope is forbidden; and he then falls back on the use of the current in the stream. I once thought I had carefully excluded all such tricks in a particular puzzle of this class but a sapient reader made all the people swim across without using the boat at all. Of course some few puzzles are intended to be solved by some trick of this kind; and if there happens to be no solution without the trick it is perfectly legitimate. We have to use our best judgment as to whether a puzzle contains a catch or not; but we should never hastily assume it. To quibble over the conditions is the last resort of the defeated would be solver.

An economical carpenter had a block of wood measuring eight inches long by four inches wide by three and three-quarter inches deep. How many pieces each measuring two and a half inches by one inch and a half by one inch and a quarter, could be cut out of it? It is all a question of how to cut them out. Most people would have more waste material left over than is necessary. How many pieces could you get out of the block?

Answer to last week's puzzle.

The smallest number of biscuits must have been 1021, from which it is evident that they were of that miniature description that finds favour in the nursery.

Students may like to know that the general solution for puzzles of this kind is that for n men the number must be m (nn plus) - ($n-1$) where m is any integer. Each man will receive m ($n-1$) $n-1$ biscuits at the final division, though in the case of two men, when m equals 1, the final distribution only benefits the dog. Of course in every case each man steals an nth of the number of biscuits, after giving the odd one to the dog.

THE SPHINX.

"MAY I USE THE 'PHONE?"

Empress of Britain as Floating Pay Station.

Madeira got a new thrill recently when telephone communication was established between that pleasant island and London, England for the first time.

The occasion was the arrival of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain at Funchal on a cruise around the world. This magnificent new liner has the most powerful ship-to-shore telephone system in the world and Madeirans were not slow to recognize a chance to make island history.

During her stay there, lying at anchor just beyond the famous Loo Rock, the Empress was host to many visitors. Amongst these were two who casually asked, "May I use the 'phone?"

Just as casually the telephone operator of the ship called up London and put the callers through over 1,323 miles of water.

Reports from the Empress of Britain, now at Colombo, Ceylon, indicate that the wireless telephone is a popular feature of the ship. The longest distance yet reported is Haifa, Palestine, to Montreal. The liner works on a daily schedule with Canada, through the Canadian Marconi stations at Yamachiche and Drummondville, Quebec, and the Bell long distance board in Montreal.

Photos show: Empress of Britain at Madeira with Loo Rock in the foreground, and a typical bedroom fitted with telephone.

Death of Mrs. E. Notting

The death occurred on Sunday of Mrs. Elizabeth Notting, in her 78th year. Mrs. Notting was born in Lakefield, Que., the daughter of Daniel Parker, and came to Montreal as a child some 71 years ago. She was one of the original members of All Saints Church, and was at one time president of the Ladies' Guild. Surviving are a sister, Mrs. David Ashkanese and a brother, Alfred Parker, both of Montreal; a cousin, Hon. R. Rogers, of Winnipeg.

IN MEMORIAM.

BENNETT.—In loving memory of William George Bennett, of Carillon, who departed this life Feb. 27th., 1931.

Since last we bade farewell,
One year has rolled away,
But thou art gone to meet the loved ones,
Who are gone before to the other shore.

Ever remembered by Mother,
Father, Brother, Arthur & Sister Mary.

HODGE.—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, who passed away in Thomas
Gore, on Feb. 27th., 1928.

Four years have passed
Since that sad day,
When one we loved
Was called away.

The grief was bitter
The blow severe
To part with one
We loved so dear.

Sometime we hope
To meet him face to face,
No one can fill
His vacant place.
Inserted by his wife and family.

BENNETT.—In loving memory of my dear husband, William George, who departed this life Feb. 27th., 1931.

I have lost my dearest companion,

A life link with my own
And day by day I miss him more

As I work through life alone.
Ever remembered by his wife

BARLEY.—In loving memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. John Barley, who passed away on February 19th., 1923.

There is a sad but sweet remembrance,
There is a memory fond and true,

There is a token of affection,
And a heartache still for you.
Sadly missed by her daughter

CHOCOLATE CUP CAKES

¾ cup shortening
1 cup sugar 2 eggs
¾ cup milk
2 cups pastry flour (or 1½ cups bread flour)
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
¾ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2½ squares unsweetened chocolate

Cream shortening; add sugar slowly; add well-beaten egg yolks. Sift dry ingredients together and add, alternately with milk, to first mixture. Add vanilla and melted chocolate; fold in egg whites beaten stiff. Put into greased muffin tins and bake in moderate oven at 375° F. about 25 minutes. Cover with chocolate icing.

Why Miss Lillian Loughton's Chocolate Cup Cakes are famous

"I use Magic Baking Powder," says Miss Lillian Loughton, Dietitian and Cookery Expert of the Canadian Magazine. "My successful baking results are due in large part to its freshness, uniformity, and consistent high quality."

"My own recipes are planned for Magic, and I recommend it for all recipes calling for baking powder."

Miss Loughton's high praise confirms the judgment of other Canadian dietitians and cookery experts. The majority of them use Magic exclusively, because it gives consistently better baking results.

Magic is first choice of Canadian housewives, too. It outells all other baking powders combined.

MORIN HEIGHTS

Quite a few skiers here for the week-end.

There will be the W. I. Dance on Friday the 26th.

The sleigh drive for the benefit of the United Church was a decided success.

Mrs. Rev. Baugh attended the Diocesan W. A. meeting held in Montreal this week.

Relatives and friends of the late Ms. James Bennett journeyed by train to Arundel for the funeral on Sunday.

Some of our friends tested their horses for speed on Lac Echo on Saturday. Our worthy Mayor plowed out the driveway.

Our Rector, Rev. Baugh laid to rest the late Mr. Henry Mappin, in Shawbridge, on Thursday. He preached from Rev. 22, verse 14. Miss Cleary was at the organ and played very sweetly the two hymns: "Nearer, My God to Thee"; & "Abide with Me". Our sympathies are with his daughter, Mrs. Rush-ton Woods. Some 45 friends attended.

THE MASTER MIND

Novelized by Marvin Dana.
Author of "Within the Law,"
From the Successful Play
by Daniel D. Carter

Wainwright smiled gently. "You mean you're so happy that you're troubled?"

"Yes," she said, but she did not yet lift her eyes to his.

"And that's all?"

"Yes, that's all." Still the eyes remained downcast.

CHAPTER IX.The Advent of Creegan.

WALTER sought the library immediately after dinner, to smoke and to brood over various personal concerns of his own. He found, indeed, that his moods were fickle to such an extent that he hardly knew from hour to hour whether he were glad or wretched. Always, at the back of his thought, there was the haunting dread of the detectives that sought his trail.

On account of them he was grateful for this refuge. But, on the other hand, he experienced a growing alarm over this intimate relation with Wainwright, the renowned foe of criminals such as he. There was something monstrous to Walter in the fact that he, the thief, was here posing openly. If not boldly, as the brother-in-law of the most effective district attorney New York had ever possessed, whose popularity thus secured him fair now to make the man the chief executive of the state. This association with Wainwright kept the youth in a constant tremor of apprehension lest the worst befall. He expostulated in vain with Andrew, who treated him and his arguments with a galling contempt. His offset to the disdain of the Master lay in the patent admiration accorded him by Helen Wainwright, the great man's sister, who, to be sure, was merely a schoolgirl of sixteen, on her vacation, yet the heiress to a tidy fortune and remarkably pretty. If not especially burdened with brains. With something of her brother's power of idealization, though with a less worthy subject, she was able to see in Walter excellence enough to make him the hero of her first foolish maidenly dreaming.

On his part, Walter, drawn by her demure face and demure manner, was inclined to think that he might make himself a safe position in the world and secure a satisfactory living without work by marrying this bread and butter miss. Unfortunately, however, he soon found that the carrying out of his design was beset with difficulties, for somehow latterly it seemed that he was never to see Helen for a moment alone, much less given opportunity for an elopement even were the preliminary arrangements made.

As he meditated now, it was clear to him that he must appeal directly to Lucene for aid in the execution of his purpose. Under this necessity he was irritated by the fact that already, under Andrew's compulsion, he had set himself before his putative sister in a remarkably bad light. He had been forced to pretend financial distress to her and beg her to help him in saving him from exposure and disgrace. Naturally, to save the possibility of baring the whole hateful truth to her husband, Mrs. Wainwright had yielded to his demands and supplied him repeatedly with money without her husband's knowledge. The fact increased her self contempt. But Walter's sole concern in the matter was dissatisfaction over the effect these transactions must have in making her hostile to himself and so an obstacle, not a help, in his plan to possess Helen.

Walter scowled as he reflected on the fact that this financial intriguing with Lucene was altogether an annoyance to him since even the money involved did not remain with him, but was invariably turned over to Andrew by that taskmaster's orders. "Devilish poor pickings, I call it!" was the thief's unspoken comment, with a sneer. Anyhow, he decided he must make the effort to enlist Lucene's assistance in his wooing of Helen. With this resolve he looked up to behold Parker in the doorway.

"A gentleman to see you, sir," was the announcement.

Walter was astonished and alarmed, for he knew of no acquaintance likely to be within miles of this neighborhood and certainly none aware of his identity as Walter Blount. But before he could determine an answer to the waiting servant Andrew himself appeared.

"Pardon me, sir," he said in tones of the utmost respect; "but perhaps you had better leave the matter to me. I think I know the man's business. It is really not of the least importance, sir." He gave a low order to Parker.

"Oh, all right, if you say so," Walter returned, grumpily, concealing the relief he felt in learning that this was probably another of his tyrant's contrivances rather than a pursuer on his own trail. "Who is the guy?" he asked, as Parker disappeared after the low spoken command from his employer.

Andrew regarded the young man with wintry eyes, through narrow lids.

"That," he said gently, but with an infection that was convincing. "Is one question too many." Then, he turned slowly, and went out of the room, unmindful of the scowling thief, who cringed helplessly under his domination.

Andrew, after leaving the library, ascended directly to his own room at the top of the house and there found the caller whom Parker had just guided thither.

"My eye!" the somewhat rough appearing individual remarked amiably, as the Master Mind entered. "This is some swell joint, hey?"

"Mr. Wainwright will be pleased with your commendation, sir," Andrew answered, with a manner of habitual servility.

"Say, don't you get fresh, old geezer!" the visitor exclaimed angrily. "And, anyhow, why am I tucked up here in the attic. What's the game, eh?"

He stood for a moment, blinking thoughtfully at the butler of the household, and a sudden recollection assailed him. "Wainwright's just got married—what?"

"Yes, sir," Andrew replied, still in his assumed character. "Mr. Wainwright was married about six months ago, sir."

"Some class to him!" the caller declared, with much respect; if little admiration. "Married and nominated for governor all in the same month. That's going some, believe me!"

He nodded toward the window, and there was a noticeable apprehensiveness in his voice when next he spoke. "Say, 'bo, what's that big building off across there on the hill? Ain't no jail 'round here, as ever I heard."

"No, sir," Andrew said. "That is the Powhattan Asylum for the Insane, under the direction of the celebrated Dr. Forbes."

Abruptly a change came into the manner of his address, and he spoke to the stockily built man facing him with an incisive directness that caused the sharpened features of his listener to express a new, suspicious alertness. "You are from Chicago, sir?"

"What's that to you?" the fellow snarled, his small eyes lowering.

Andrew wasted not time.

"Your name is Creegan," he said coldly. "You were sent here by Mr. Whitcomb."

"Well, now, Mr. Know-it-all," was the insolent retort. "maybe I was, and maybe I wasn't. What's the answer?"

"You were to inquire for Walter Blount, but another person was to give you a sign."

Andrew set the fingers of his right hand to the familiar symbol of protection against the evil eye.

The heavy face of the visitor relaxed instantly, and he breathed a sigh of relief.

"So you're the guy!" he growled.

"I'm the man, yes," Andrew corrected.

Creegan went close and spoke in a whisper, his face lighted now with a glow of avarice.

"Listen!" he said rapidly. "The boss said this was a pipe, that there'd be ten thousand in the haul for me, and even if I was pinched they wouldn't do anything to me. That gets my nany. Say, is it on the level?"

"It is."

"Just the same," Creegan insisted violently, "you got to show me. I tell you I ain't a bit stuck on it. Yep, you got to show me. If it's such a pipe why did you send all the way to Chicago for me when New York's full of smooth propositions just askin' for the chance?"

Andrew made no answer in words, but went to his bureau, from which he took out a japed tin box, which he unlocked with a key from his ring. He brought forth a photograph, which he passed to the curious Creegan.

A single glance sufficed the man. He stared at Andrew in stark amazement.

"Well, I'll be —!" he gasped. "Maggie—Maggie Flint!" He regarded the photograph again, astounded.

"Say," he demanded curtly, looking up again, "how did that come here?"

Andrew put forth his hand, possessed himself of the photograph and restored it to the box, which he carefully locked and replaced in the drawer before answering; then at last he turned to the impatiently waiting Creegan, whose thick lips were twitching from nervous excitement.

"Now suppose," he said evenly, "for example, that you planned to steal some valuable jewels you have heard spoken of?"

Creegan's eyes grew furtive.

"Like the Wainwright sparklers, huh?"

"And let us suppose further," Andrew continued imperturbably, "that you were apprehended in the act?"

The supposition appeared to disconcert Creegan. If one might judge by the thick furrows in his forehead and the savage tightening of his lips.

"Say, you," he grunted. "Just you parade the kind of talk I know. Get that?"

"Suppose you get pinched, collared," Andrew amended tranquilly. "And, furthermore, let us suppose that the owner of the jewels was of an old and honorable family and at this particular time a nominee for high office. Now, do you think he would risk scandal by prosecuting you if it so chanced that you recognized in his wife some one you had known in very different circumstances, some one named, let us say, Maggie Flint?"

A silence fell, in which Andrew stood immobile, impassive, regarding his new tool with a calm yet piercing scrutiny, and Creegan rested again, his widened eyes fast on the other, striving dumbly to digest the bewildering fact that the girl with whom he had wandered fondly in the streets of Chicago years before was become in very truth the mistress of this mansion. At last he shook his head incredulously.

"No," he muttered. "It can't be Maggie—the wife of that swell guy, Wainwright?"

"But it is!" Andrew retorted sharply, and the words carried conviction.

"Geel! Maggie!" he mumbled confusedly. "Well, I'm a son of a gun!"

"I am to understand, then," the Master Mind suggested suavely, "that you know the lady?"

Creegan's dull face lightened instantly. Something of the bestiality bred out of evil years fell from him.

"Do I? Why, I knew her from 'way back. Guess she come from pretty good stock, though her old man was down and out when I knew 'em. She had darn poor pickin's, Maggie had. Any other skit with her looks would have gone to the bad lickety split; but not her! Worked in factories and then got a job after her father died as nurse girl. Kept straighter'n a string all the time. I got foolish over that kid myself. I'd just about made up my mind to marry her when she was caught with the goods and sent to stir. Never could see why she did it. It wa'n't like her to steal. I tried to find her when she come out, but there wa'n't nothin' doin'. And I was dippy over her. Geel! he concluded sheepishly. "Can you see me bein' dippy over a skit?"

Andrew then said:

"And, if you should be caught, for a further defense you might perhaps say that robbery was not your intent, but that instead you were here for a meeting with the lady—at her request."

Once again Creegan gaped sheer amazement. Then, swiftly, the light of understanding twinkled in his little eyes.

"I'm wise, 'bo—I'm wise!" he chuckled, with a villainous smirk. "Now, where do they keep the sparklers?"

Fourthly Andrew entered into a detailed explanation concerning the plan of the house, with particular reference to the library, in an alcove of which the safe was set.

"And now," he concluded, "as to the time tonight when you should start operations, I have only to make a suggestion. This room of mine, as you perceive, is situated in the cupola of the house, with windows on each side. In its way it's a sort of beacon at night. The lodgekeeper says that when I put out my light he is sure that every one else in the house is sleeping."

"I got ye, Steve—I got ye!" Creegan declared. Then, in another moment, he spoke with a half-shamed eagerness: "Say, she didn't send for me, did she?"

"That is a leading question," was the answer, with a noncommittal smile.

"Who is the guy?"

draw answered, with a manner of habitual servility.

"Say, don't you get fresh, old geezer!" the visitor exclaimed angrily.

"And, anyhow, why am I tucked up here in the attic. What's the game, eh?"

DEATH OF PROMINENT PUBLISHER.

Cornwall loses one of its most respected and honored citizens by the death of Wm. Gibbens, who passed away last Monday morning, following a stroke of paralysis. Deceased was in his 76th year and was a prominent publisher in which he commenced his newspaper work with the Prescott Tribune in 1872 later going to the Brockville Recorder. The following year he took possession of reporting staff of the Ottawa Citizen and in 1884 became manager, continuing until 1888 when he went to Cornwall, where he has since published the Standard.

He is survived by his daughter, Miss Gertrude E. Gibbens, a sister, Mrs. A. L. Bearden, of Abernethy, Sask., and three brothers, Thomas Gibbens, of Chilliwick, B.C., and David and George Gibbens, of Cadillac, Sask. His wife, formerly Miss Culbert, of Lindsay, Ont., passed away on May 6, 1926. The funeral took place Monday afternoon at 2.15 o'clock to Trinity Church and Woodlawn Cemetery.

LAKEFIELD.

On Saturday evening last, a pleasant gathering took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McCambly. Games, cards, and dainty refreshments combined to make the time pass in a happy and friendly way for all present.

Quite a busy scene is witnessed daily as the teams haul many loads of logs over the lake to the mill. Owing to an accident to the machinery Messrs. Dawson are compelled to cease sawing until the necessary repairs are made.

Mr. Herbert McDonald is busy at his summer cottage at Long Lake and expects to have all ready for occupation next summer. This will make another addition to the rapidly growing summer colony on this beautiful lake.

A gloom is cast over our district by the passing of Mrs. Albert Elder, after a prolonged illness. Before her marriage, as Miss Ada Strong, she was well and favorably known as a teacher, and as Mrs. Elder, she was an important member of the community. The Strong's were among the first settlers, coming here over a hundred years ago. The bereaved husband, only daughter, and two sons have the sympathy of all in their sorrow. Mrs. Elder passed away in the very prime of a useful and busy life, and will be greatly missed.

Making History in Argenteuil

50 Years Ago.

Friday, Feb. 24th., 1882.
A Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has been formed in Montreal, as a result of the recent exposés in connection with charitable and educational institutions.

The Census ten years ago gave the population of Lachute as 600 souls, now there are 2,013. The County of Argenteuil ten years ago had a population of 12,806, now it has 16,062. These figures show an encouraging increase, notwithstanding the croakings of those people who believe the population is leaving us for the United States. Lachute would be called a City if it were the North West, but it will not be a great many years before Lachute will be called a city here. It is now a town of no mean proportions. The population of St. Andrews is set down at 2,387.

Primitive Methodist services will commence in Olivet Hall, on Sunday 5th. March at 10.30 a.m. and 7 p.m., and S. School at 2.30 p.m.

Mr. Hickson, who ran the late Argenteuil Advertiser, was here last week, and has gone to start a paper in Manitoba.

The Manitoba fever is raging. An Ontario man, on being a day or two in Winnipeg was forcibly impressed to find the boom in real estate to such a pitch that in buying a necktie in one of the shops—the clerk, while doing it, asked him to purchase a lot. The hotel waiter who brought him his morning porridge, asked him to buy some of his lots, while his washerwoman said, on bringing his washing, that she had ten nice lots for sale in St. Boniface.

Sermons on behalf of the Methodist Mission will be preached next Sunday by Rev. George Forsythe, of Montreal.

A fatal accident occurred on Tuesday on the Grenville Canal works, by which a man named Murphy, of Quebec, lost his life when crushed beneath a falling derrick.

Every mail from Newfoundland brings fresh evidence of the growing popularity of the railway now being built across the island.

J. Hope's Bread still leading, as testified by the great demand for his Household Loaf—necessitating the employment of extra hands in the Bakery and the putting on the road of another Double Horse Wagon, to supply his increasingly numerous customers in the country around Lachute.

Mr. W. C. Hamelin, son of W. Hamelin, Esq., Reeve of Longueuil, and for several years in the employ of Messrs. Hamelin & Ayers, proprietors of Lachute Woollen Factory, left here for Winnipeg with the intention of starting a ranch of this enterprising firm in that city.

25 Years Ago.

Friday, March 1st., 1907.

Last Friday, between 5 and 6 p.m., the central span of Fish's Bridge collapsed, and Mr. Lamarche of St. Hermas, who was drawing logs for Hamelin and Ayers, is congratulating himself upon his narrow escape. The bridge had only been opened to the public two or three days, after repairs.

Senator Douglas, of Brandon, is the guest of Mr. Thos. Christie, for a few days.

Dr. Legault, Mayor of St. Andrews, and Mr. W. S. Todd, Sec.-Treas. of the St. Andrews Municipal Council, were in St. Scholastique on Monday.

The dressing room of the men engaged in the detonator dept. of the D. C. Co'y. at Brownsburg was totally destroyed by fire last evening.

By one of the most shocking disasters that has befallen Montreal in many years, sixteen children lost their lives yesterday afternoon at the Hochelago Protestant School, while their principal, Miss Sarah Maxwell, perished with them after an heroic exhibition of courage in endeavouring to save their lives.

The relatives of Miss Kate Campbell, of these parts, are relieved to learn of her safety. Miss Campbell was teacher of the second class, and reports all her children rescued from the second floor by means of ladders.

Correspondence...Editor of the Watchman. Dear Sir: Kindly allow me, through your paper, to acknowledge receipt of books for the Academy library from G. H. Perley, Esq., M.P., and to express my thanks and appreciation. These books will form an excellent nucleus for a scientific library, which is much needed in this institution. Chas. McBurney, Principal.

Masquerade Carnival. A successful carnival was held in the L.A.A.A. Rink on Saturday and much fun was caused over the various "get-ups." The prizes for adults were awarded to Miss Maggie Marshall, who figured as a Girl from the West, and took her part to perfection, and Mr. George Hamilton who represented a Groom of 1460. There was considerable competition among the juveniles but the prizes were awarded to Bessie Menzies as "Grandma" and to Elmer Giles as a Clown.

Inspector. J. W. McQuat made his annual visit to School No. 4, Pine Hill, on Monday.

Louisa. The many friends of Mr. Wm. Creswell are pleased to hear he is recovering from his recent illness, under the skillful treatment of Dr. George Christie.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Lesson for February 28

JESUS RAISES LAZARUS FROM THE DEAD

LESSON TEXT—John 11:1-57.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes a Dead Man Live Again.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives Life to His Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Giver of Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Assurance of Immortality.

I. Lazarus Sick (vv. 1, 2).
Even those who are in close fellowship with the Lord are not immune from sickness.

II. Martha and Mary Send for Jesus (v. 3).

Because they had come to know Jesus as more than a mere man, they instinctively turned to him when the shadow of death fell across their home. Those who receive Jesus into their home when all are well and happy can be sure of his love and sympathy when sickness and death overtake them.

III. Jesus' Strange Delay (vv. 4-6).

Martha and Mary sent for Jesus because he loved Lazarus. They said, "He whom thou lovest is sick." Observe that when Jesus heard that Lazarus was sick he "abode in the same place" because he loved Lazarus and his sisters (v. 5). This mystery is to be explained by the fact that Jesus was divine and knew all things.

IV. Jesus Goes to the Bethany Home (vv. 7-17).

Jesus knew, and apparently the disciples knew that Jesus was in Judea at that time in his own death. He told his disciples that his purpose in going was to awaken Lazarus out of his sleep to the intent that they might believe (vv. 11-15). Jesus fearlessly discharged his duty even though his life had been threatened.

V. Jesus Teaching Martha (vv. 18-27).

As he was nearing the village, Martha met him with a complaint because of his delay. He ignored her complaint and taught her concerning the resurrection and life.

1. "Thy brother shall rise again" (v. 23). Most blessed words are these to fall upon the ears of a sister sorrowing for a dead brother.

2. "I am the resurrection and the life" (vv. 25, 26). He is the source of life and all who are joined to him by a living faith experience such a vital fellowship as to be unaffected by any bodily change, death being but an incident in the course of an endless life.

VI. Jesus Weeping With Mary (vv. 28-35).

Mary fell at Jesus' feet uttering the same words used by Martha but no doubt with a different tone of voice and attitude. She had been sitting at his feet in the days of sunshine, therefore, she knew where to go in time of sorrow. Being a real man, he suffered with these bereaved sisters, and though he knew the joy that was soon to come in the restoration of life to Lazarus, he wept.

VII. Jesus Raising Lazarus (vv. 38-44).

In this stupendous miracle we see an illustration of the quickening into life of those dead in trespasses and sins. Observe:

1. Lazarus was dead (v. 39). This is a type of the sinner dead in trespasses and sins, even morally corrupt (Eph. 2:1).

2. The stone must be rolled away (v. 39). As Christian workers we should remove every obstacle from between a dead sinner and a life-giving Saviour.

3. Martha's protest of unbelief (v. 39). She insisted that Lazarus had already undergone putrefaction. Christ is able to save the sinner regardless of the degree of his sins.

4. Christ's intimacy and fellowship with the father (v. 42). In his prayer he declared that it was not for his sake that he prayed but for those who stood by.

5. Christ's manner of dealing with Lazarus (v. 43). It was by a call. He is calling men and women today by his Spirit, Word, and providence.

6. The response of Lazarus (v. 44). This shows that the call of Jesus is with authority and power.

7. The command to the people (v. 44). They were to remove the grave clothes and set him free. They could not make Lazarus live, but they could remove the grave clothes which bound the man whom Christ made alive.

VIII. The Effect of This Miracle (vv. 45-57).

1. Some believed (v. 45).

2. His enemies sought to put him to death (vv. 46-53).

3. His withdrawal (v. 54).

SOME GLEANINGS

Worldly fame may be a defame at the judgment.
