Miss C. McMartin Dies at St. Andrews

The funeral of the late Miss Charlotte McMartin took place last Sunday afternoon from her late residence. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. Macaskill who took as his text "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." He spoke about her beautiful character and quiet influence for good. Her friendship was valued highly by all who had the privilege of knowing her and appreciating her fine gifts of heart and intellect. In her girlhood she brought distinction to her native village by winning the Governor General's prize for the best essay on a patriotic subject. Her loss will be keenly felt in the community. She is survived by two sisters, the Misses Margaret and Priscilla McMartin, and two brothers, Messrs. Alfred and Norman McMartin, all of whom were present at the funeral.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Charles Wales, Thomas MacAdam, Charles Hyde, Harland McEwan, Buchanan Robertson, and James Doig.

Junior Red Cross Concert at Cushing

The concert at Cushing in aid of the Junior Red Cross, passed off very successfully on Friday night, and sincere thanks are due to friends from a distance who helped to make it a success, namely, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Gourley, of Chute au Blondeau, whose violin and piano duets were much enjoyed; also Mrs. Jas. Beattie and daughters, Eileen, Alda and Mabel. Mrs. Beattie's monologue on Digesting the Newspapers was very amusing and well worth hearing. Alda and Eileen favoured the audience with one of the dear old songs which are being set aside for the newer "jazz." Little Mabel Beattie, although of very tender years, was delightfully entertaining in her recitation and songs, giving great promise of being a prominent entertainer in the near future. Mrs. R. Sheppard, of Cushing added some very fine piano solos, and the Cushing "Juniors" Misses Morrow, Greig and Cooke presented a short health play, which stressed the point of better health gained by eating more fruit and vegetables. This play was one of Mrs. A. Graham's productions, as was also Miss M. Starnes' recitation, "The Coming of the Maples." Several other recitations were given by the Misses H. Morrow, H. Weir, A. Watson and C. Cooke. Three songs, O Canada, An Invitation to the Birds, and the Junior Red Cross Song, were sung by the "Juniors" assisted by the Misses Weir and Norma Cooke. My Own Canadian Home was sung by Mary and Walter Starnes, & Spring Time is Coming was rendered by the Misses Catherine Cooke, Mary Starnes and Miss Weir. Miss Catherine Cooke sang the Rain Song as a solo. Walter and Mary Starnes favored with duets and piano solos. The Misses Morrow, Greig and Cooke represented Spring Blossoms in an able manner. The programme opened with the Junior Red Cross Pledge and Salute and closed with the National Anthem. Some of the visitors remained afterwards to engage in what a prominent doctor has termed the "healthiest of exercise"—Dancing.

The annual stock-taking of Canada's power resources shows that recorded water power will permit of turbine installations totalling 43,700,000 horsepower. Of this amount the data shows that to date the actual installation in water wheels and turbines totals 6,666,337 horsepower.

Albert Gordon of St. Jerusalem Dies in his 64th. Year

There passed away on Monday, May 2nd., at the age of 63, Albert Gordon, of St. Jerusalem. Deceased gentleman, was a well-known farmer of this district and had lived here during his life-time. A loving wife Janet Morrin, four daughters, Mrs. Kenneth Sly, of Lachute; Miss Muriel Gordon, of Cornwall; and the Misses Ruby and Mabel Gordon, of Montreal, two sisters Mrs. D. Bennett and Mrs. D. Bryan, of California, and one brother James Gordon, of California, are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral took place on Wednesday from the old home, now occupied by his son-in-law Mr. Kenneth Sly, amidst many sorrowing friends and relatives, service being conducted by the Rev. Mr. Rosborough.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Chas. Hyde, Jas. Leishman, D. T. Morrin, E. R. Morrin, Paul Leishman, Wm. Cleland.

A Correction

It has been drawn to our attention that a recent item in these columns, announcing construction of the new Presbyterian Church, gave a wrong impression as to the origin of the former building. Although our words might have been so interpreted, it was not intended to imply that the church was originally built and owned by the Presbyterians. Such, of course, was not the case. It was a Methodist Church and before the Union of Churches, the Presbyterians had no association with it whatever.

In 1852 the first Methodist Church was built at Lachute in the east end near the old Lane property. The congregation worshipped there until the year 1882, when a fine brick edifice was erected, on the present Presbyterian site, the land generously donated to the trustees by Thomas Jackson. In 1909, during the pastorate of the Rev. B. B. Brown, a beautiful commodious parsonage was built, and a few years later an addition erected for Sunday School Hall, kitchens, etc. The former Methodists owned, built and worshipped in that church until 1925, when union was consummated, the Presbyterians taking possession of the property after that.

Bowling League Banquet

A winding-up Banquet held by the Argenteuil Bowling League on Wednesday night was fully attended and furnished a social fete to a successful season of games. The banquet was held at the Berniquier Hotel, with all veterans of the alley on hand. A vote of appreciation was sponsored by the president, Hugh McEntyre, thanking all members for continued co-operation and enthusiasm which had contributed largely to the interest of the season's schedule. The vote was responded to by Secretary, J. Belanger, and at the close of the evening all hands were agreed in mutual congratulations and good will, and the closing banquet was conceded to be a complete success.

Alderic Fournier, St. Hermas Que., has recently received an R.O.P. certificate for the six year old Holstein cow, Gold Dollar Rose Pontiac. In milk 301 days this cow produced 14,657 lbs. milk containing 653.75 lbs. butter, showing an average test of 3.57% fat. In each of two months during her lactation Gold Dollar Rose Pontiac bred by Wm. R. Cummings, Cummings Bridge, Ont., produced well over 1900 lbs. milk.

Proposed Silk Mill Fails to Interest Investors

Board of Trade Turns Down Offer

Not a little interest was created in town during the past couple of weeks, when it became known that there was possibility of a silk industry being established here in Lachute. But with the unfolding of the proposal it was brought to light that certain details of the proposition were not as favorable as they first appeared.

In order that the public in general may be fully acquainted with the facts, we publish the proposal, in part, as submitted by the promoters to the citizenry of Lachute.

PROPOSITION.

To The Mayor and Citizens of the Town of Lachute.

We will establish within the Municipality of the Town of Lachute a Mill for the weaving of Pure Silk and operate the same the equipment to consist of Sixty Looms with all the necessary Warpers, Winders, Quillers, Extractors and all the necessary equipment and parts for the completion of the plant with a capacity of 10,000 to 12,000 yards per week.

The appraisal value of the plant is $55,000 and the estimated cost of Customs and Freight charges is $12,000.

We would organize a Company under the laws of the Province of Quebec with an authorized Capital of $100,000 Preference Stock and 100,000 of no Par Value.

Of the stock issue we would take for the plant 55,000 of the Common Stock, and for the Customs and Freight charges the cost in Preference Stock.

We would ask the local people to subscribe for the purposes of Working Capital Only the sum of $30,000. of the Preference Stock, being 7 p.c.

The promoters came to Lachute and met the Board of Trade, and while their proposal was duly considered, further information was sought and obtained, resulting in the Board turning down the offer at a meeting held in the Town-Hall on Thursday.

The fact that the citizens were required to furnish $30,000 and the promoters to retain the major voting power, in an industry which is somewhat speculative, did not appeal to the Board. As explained by the promoters representing certain associates of Paterson, N. J., (the home of the United States silk industry where there are some 163 mills, the majority of them now inactive) the machinery would necessarily be second hand, imported from one of these idle plants, and although modern in every respect, could be purchased at an attractive figure. The only preliminary stock issue required by the promoters from the local subscription, would be an amount to cover the freight and customs charges on removal of the machinery. The operation of the looms would, the promoters said, be entrusted to local labor, and 90 per cent of the whole staff (of about 100 employees) would be residents of Lachute.

Tariff barriers are said to have closed the doors of numerous U. S. silk mills, and associate-enterprises have established in Canada to meet the Dominion market. It appears, however, that such branches of the industry have been too readily sponsored; the supply has exceeded the demand. At least, it was ascertained that in several instances these new industries are not finding sufficient demand for their output. It was partly for this reason, and to avoid risk of any loss to local investors, that the Board of Trade deemed fit to decline the offer.

The Board, however, continues in its activity, and if the whole-hearted interest of its members is an indication, it will succeed in securing something industrially worthwhile for Lachute. This town is growing steadily in importance and prestige. The recent census figures indicated a fair increase in population. There are many so-called "boom towns" which, today, are flat—dead—out of business, after a few short years of exaggerated prosperity. It may be maintained that Lachute's solid progress, upon sound and sober lines, is vastly preferable to the brief heyday of these "boom towns." And the Board of Trade may be justly considered an important factor, in ballasting civic progress with the element of business-sense.

Further Comment

On the Price of Pork

Editor, The Watchman,

Dear Sir:

In answer to your recent article "On the Price of Pork," I wish to say the following:

It may be true that we are exporting more farm produce at the present time, and if the "Produced in Canada" campaign has accomplished much, the farmers certainly do not get the benefit of it. When we received good prices for farm produce we were told that we did not get sufficient, we ought to get more; a good many farmers fell for it, helping many politicians to slip in on that "ticket". And now we certainly are taking a licking as our friend from Ontario says, but he takes it in a good spirit and talks about the bright side of farming.

I notice, by several newspapers, that the farmers of Ontario are in just as bad a state as the farmers of Quebec. In Belleville, Ont., eggs are selling for 6 and 7 cents a dozen and even the oldest inhabitants in this district do not remember such low prices.

The Family Herald of April 27th. says eggs are selling at a ruinously low price at country points, and so it is with every article on the farm that is for sale. Calf-skins have dropped from 25 to 15 cents since I wrote my last letter. Butter, beef, pork, wood, hay—anything you have, went the same way. I have official figures here saying it costs from 15 to 24 cents to produce a dozen of eggs and you have to sell them for 13 cents and less. To produce 100 lbs. of pork costs the average farmer $4.12—this price quoted when meal was at $1.05 a hundredweight. Today meal prices are much higher.

Dominion Shuttle Co. Adds New Product to its Output

The business acumen that has dominated the life of our respected townsman, Mr. E. F. Ayers, finds expression in a new department of his activities and a further addition to his already extensive business. With the depression that has prevailed generally throughout the Dominion, there has naturally been a diminished market for bobbins shuttles, cross-arms, etc., of which the Dominion Shuttle Company has been the principal source of supply.

In order to keep his men busy and the wheels of industry turning, Mr. Ayers has added another storey to his already large mill. Here he intends to manufacture veneer boxes, for which there is a growing market; and this practically means a new industry for Lachute. The machinery is now being installed, and it will not be long before the new branch of manufacture will be in operation.

Town Council

The regular meeting of above council was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening at which were present Mayor P. Dobbie, and councillors J. P. MacKimmie, C. Miller, A. Morrison, R. Ledoux, J. B. Raymond O. Laurin.

Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed and the finance committee's report was also presented and accounts ordered paid.

It was moved by Alderman Miller, seconded by Alderman Morrison that a light be placed on the corner of Main and Rodrigue St. leading to station.

Dr. Rodrigue was appointed pro-mayor for next 3 months.

Alderman Raymond moved, seconded by Alderman Morrison that they purchase three lots from Mr. Barron for quarry purposes.

All private houses (excepting farmers') outside of town limits pay regular water rates plus 50 p.c.—moved by Alderman Miller, seconded by Ald. Ledoux and carried.

Moved by Ald. Miller, seconded by Ald. Morrison, that the Auditorium, be granted for use of Lachute Women's Institute, for the sum of $15.00.

Alderman MacKimmie moved, seconded by Ald. Morrison that meeting be adjourned until the 12th., when matters relating to his by-law covering the Pollock site for proposed waterworks would be taken up and discussed with Mr. Sutherland.

Alderman MacKimmie also gave notice of motion that at next meeting he would offer revision of business tax By-law.

The Late J. W. Raitt

The death took place at Edmonton, Alta., on April 15th., of Mr. Jas. Wm. Raitt, at the age of 81 years. Mr. Raitt was born in Lachute and previous to their departure to the West, which took place some twenty years ago, he with his wife, formerly Miss J. Elizabeth Walker were very prominent in the interests of Lachute. Mr. Raitt was secretary of the Town and Clerk of the Commissioner's Court, also owning the telephone system, and was a member of the old Mackie Church. He came home last year and renewed acquaintances with his many old friends.

He leaves to mourn his loss, two daughters, Mrs. W. K. Thomson, of Edmonton, and Mrs. R. C. Pattee, of Hawkesbury; two sons Stanley and Clarence of Edmonton.

The funeral took place from the Strathcona Presbyterian Church. The Rev. R. H. Lytle officiated, and interment was made in the Edmonton Cemetery.

Impressive Memorial Service at Dalesville

Responding to an invitation to re-dedicate themselves to Christian service, a large number of the audience attending the Memorial service for the late Mrs. Charles McKenzie in the Dalesville Baptist Church last Sunday afternoon, rose in their seats and walked to the front of the Church, thus signifying their desire to emulate the life of the departed friend.

The Rev. Mr. Dyson spoke most feelingly of the loss the church and the whole surrounding community had suffered by her sudden death. He referred to her as a woman of unusual qualities, whose wise counsel and influence for good would only be truly realized as time goes on, for she had learned the secret as recorded in the 12th. Chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Romans, (verse 1.): "Present your body a living sacrifice, wholly acceptable unto the Lord."

Wherever her personality touched, it left the fragrance of Christ. While she has gone from us, said the speaker, a challenge is left us, to take up her task of kindly endeavor and shed abroad the light of the Saviour whom she had so learned to love.

Interesting Paper Given at United Y.P.S.

"We are fast becoming a homeless race. We are born in hospitals; we are married in churches or pleasure resorts; we entertain our friends in hotels; we die in hospitals; and we are buried from funeral parlors."

'Tis thus man observes the epochs of existence—at least according to Herbert F. Gordon, speaking at the United Church Y.P.S. meeting on Monday last.

The subject of the evening was The Four Walls of Co-operative Family Life, and the topic was dealt with in an easy and logical manner. The speaker conceded that Canada has not lost its home life so much as other countries which, through denser population and metropolitan attractions, have drawn the younger generation from the fireside to other, speedier habitats. For the majority of us, Home means nothing more than a place in which to sleep, eat, and wait for the family car. We seem bored with our own company and with other members of the family, and seem urged to seek diversion outside.

The trouble, Mr. Gordon contended, is the lack of Christian fellowship at home. The Home is nothing without peace, harmony, and love; and if deep respect and honor for the parents is instilled in young folks, there will be no danger of their going astray—for by so doing they would cast sorrow on their loved ones. It is deplorable that we cannot find joy and contentment in the simple pleasures of Home. For it is in the intimacy of the family circle that we learn the essentials of co-operation, the demands of unselfishness, in living with others. We need to cultivate this fine art of living together; to sacrifice our willfulness and determination; to cease our lack of appreciation and taking things for granted; to desist from picking out the weak points in our fellow-creatures. And in place of these destructive characteristics will come the harmony of true home-life and co-operative spirit.

Reference was made to the Young People's Club, comparing it to the Home in its fostering of sympathy and understanding.

There are over 3,000,000 horses in Canada according to the census of 1931. There is a decrease of over 9 per cent. in ten years. The automobile has been the menace of the horse, but the latter is still king, for in 1931 motor vehicles registered 1,206,836, and many of them had to be hauled out by the horse!

The Captain's Corner

Dear Boys :—

I gave a lecture to a big boys' school the other day, and at the conclusion, when arriving at the part when Vision appears, I thought of my own boy-readers of this page. With the one exception of the Chapel, I am sure it can apply to you. Here it is—

I have a vision!

From this hallowed School wherein your predecessors have been taught the lessons of Mental Culture, Self-discipline, Loyalty and Devotion to Duty, I can see YOU go forth!

A greater light is in your eyes. A nobler courage in your heart, and, in your soul and abiding love and affection for your fellowmen, based on a real spirit of self-sacrifice and service.

I can see into the future—that unknown and mysterious period of time which for you all will be hedged round with much difficulty, many problems, some doubts, and not a few perplexities; all of which will come to you—must come to you—when the world of school has been left behind.

I can see you, because of your sojourn here, fighting the battle of life bravely. More, I can easily imagine you winning the recognition, honour, and rewards that the world delights to shower on its successful sons.

I can see you enter into the shadows of disappointment and sorrow—with you I can feel the keen edge of regret, born of long deferred hope and the non-realisation of your old time dreams.

And THEN! I can whisper to you consolation!

I can ever remind you, as you will remind yourselves, of the great lessons you have learned HERE—of the close friendships you have made. Even more of those quiet, holy, morning sessions you have partaken of in the chapel of this your beloved school.

Like a very tired child at the end of a long, long day, you return, on the wings of memory, to your Alma Mater to re-learn again some of the old lessons and to re-arm yourselves for the battle you must surely take part in and acquaint yourselves like men!

THEN, both you and I can say with the most earnest and grateful recognition of all the blessings we have received—

"It is good for me that I have been here!"

With something far greater than respect for your Principal and your Teachers. Though not OF you but WITH you in very real affection and regard may I conclude with the following beautiful lines—

We'll honour yet the rule we knew,
Till the last bell call!
For working days or holidays!
And glad or melancholy days!
They were great days and jolly days,
At the best School of all.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

"The Return of Timothy"

Continued

The next two or three minutes were fully occupied in a rough and tumble on the floor. The room resounded with shrieks and laughter, while little Gordon thinking discretion was the better part of valour, climbed on to the top of Timothy's book case out of harm's way.

Timothy himself, feeling that his position as host necessitated such action endeavoured to separate the struggling mass of humanity upon the floor without success.

Becoming however at length exhausted, they called peace and disentangling themselves, rose to their feet and made for the table.

With such an introduction, it seems unnecessary to say that the tea party was a great success, so much so, that a real spirit of friendliness and comradeship became evident between the boys. Each of them seemed to see something really worthwhile in the other and the beginning of a friendship that was to last them all their lives was the outcome of this little gathering.

At last the longed for day arrived. Everyone arose in high spirits, not only at the prospect of seeing their parents and friends, at the final celebrations previous to the long summer holidays but also because it was the last day of the term at school.

"No more books,
No more School,
No more being made a fool
By saying lessons you do not know, Because Old Lawrence made it so."

sang Henderson, as he busily washed himself and ended by splashing all nearby occupants of his dormitory with water.

"If I were not so busily engaged in fixing up a clean shirt, I would lay you one for that," said Kenrick. "Why can't you keep your dirty water to yourself. I never saw such a fellow as you for causing trouble."

"Oh shut up!" was the polite retort from his friend. "All that fuss about a little water. I know that you never did like such a thing but we won't quarrel on such a day."

Just then the bell rang for prayers and Eric came rushing down the passage shouting, "Come on you two or there will be none left for us. You know what a greedy lot we have sitting at our table?"

No greater urge than that was necessary and a few minutes later our three friends were too busily engaged in fortifying themselves against the rigours of the day in front of them to worry about anything else.

Eric did give a thought as to Timothy and he would have wondered greatly had he been able to see at that moment his friend pacing up and down his little room, anxiously turning over many matters in his mind.

He had not bothered himself about breakfast, little Gordon had tramped in, boiled his kettle and made his tea and slipped out again as quickly as possible to take part in, as he put it, something more exciting than looking after the stern and silent Timothy.

The main thought that was uttermost in his mind, to the exclusion of everything else, was the fact that he was going to meet his Father and he hoped, though he had had no opportunity of finding out if such was the case, that in some way or other Mrs. Sellingscourt had been able to help him. Then the thought came to him that it would be more than good if it became possible that instead of going home, he could spend the coming holidays with Eric.

As this idea came into his head, a half smile appeared on the boy's face, changing the somewhat stern and overbearing expression into a happy and animated look which would have, without a doubt, amazed both Kenrick and Henderson had they been present to see it.

Then he began to wonder what was happening to his brother and once more his expression changed and the tears began to fill his eyes as he hoped and prayed that everything was well with him.

Suddenly he glanced at the clock and was amazed to see how much time he had spent in thinking over all these things and realized it was quite time that he made a move if he was to answer his name at the call-over.

Running down the steps of his house and crossing the campus towards the big School, he soon realized how late he was because glancing rapidly around he could see none of his school fellows anywhere around. However he must have been very unobservant anyway because he had but gone a very little distance when he suddenly felt a hand laid on his shoulder and—

"No hurry Timothy," said a voice and looking up he saw at once that it was his father that was speaking to him.

For a moment the boy felt a little frightened so unexpected was this meeting, but recovering himself quickly he said, "Oh dad! when did you come?"

For a moment or two, the Duke of Winchelsea was silent. It was good to see his boy again and of late he also had been troubled over various matters regarding his second son and had come very nearly to the conclusion that in some way or other, he had not rightly understood his boy who was now walking by his side and he determined to make an effort to bridge the gulf that seemed to separate them.

"I know Timothy that I am a little earlier than the time given me by your headmaster but I had a reason. Is there not a place, say by the river, where we can go for a walk? There is something I want to say to you."

Timothy flushed a little but not from apprehension for it was a new experience in his life to hear his father, of whom he had always been a little afraid, speak to him in such kindly tones.

"Yes, Dad, we can go down by Boulter's Lock. It is not very far."

CONDITIONS MIGHT BE WORSE

An' thank yer Lord that you're alive—conditions might be worse.

When y've got t' patch britches that y' wore last year, an' try T' scrimp an' save, an' dig an' slave, in order t' git by; Jest remember that yer Daddy, an' his Dad ahead o' him, Found pickin', fer their livings at times most awful slim, So quit yer kickin' brother, an' sing instead o' curse— Yer life can't all be sunshine—conditions might be worse.

When y' fail t' make a "home run" in the puzzlin' game o' life, An' yer strength seems all too little fer to battle 'gainst th' strife; When yer feelin' blue an' lonely an' y' don't know where t' steer Fer t' find some true companion who will drive away yer fear— Jest remember there are fellers who are ridin' in a hearse Who'd be glad t' have yer chances—conditions might be worse.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Free Trees for Farmers

Many hundreds of posters announcing the offer of the Ontario Forestry Branch to provide farmers with trees for planting have been posted this spring by Ontario Boy Scouts.

How many Scouts in Australia?

New South Wales, 16,633; Victoria, 16,279; South Australia, 7,874; Queensland, 3,767; Tasmania, 1,866; West Australia, 4,429. In New Zealand there are 12,900.

Canadian Boys to Fly Model Planes in Hungary.

The display features of next year's world gathering of Boy Scouts in Hungary will include an exhibition of model airplanes. Canadian Scouts are expected to show and fly models.

Disarmament in Fiji.

Once mention of the Fiji Islands called up pictures of fuzzy haired cannibals and poisoned-arrow blow-pipes. Now one hears there are 933 Fijian Boy Scouts. Doubtless the blow-pipes have been turned into harmless pea-shooters, and it is no longer considered a good turn to eat your grandmother.

India's Troubles don't affect the Scouts.

Apparently the Boy Scout code of friendliness is proof even against the political and religious dissensions of India. Latest Scout census reports indicate a continuance of a steady growth of recent years, to a new high total of 173,444. The enrolment includes boys of all castes.

Scouts to check up on path of Eclipse.

Plans are being worked out for the co-operation of Scouts and McGill scientists in checking up on the path of the eclipse of the Sun across Quebec on August 31. Montreal and St. John Scouts will establish the western edge of the path, and Scouts of Sherbrooke, Three Rivers and Quebec City the eastern edge of "totality." In preparation for this, Montreal Scouts will attend a lecture on the subject by Dr. A. V. Douglas of McGill University.

New Camp for Alberta Boys.

Announcement has been made of the gift to the Boy Scouts Association of Alberta of a splendid 122 acre camp site on Sylvan Lake as permanent provincial camp. The donor is the Provincial Commissioner, Hon. Col. J. H. Woods of Calgary.

Russian Exile Scouts.

One of the world's interesting groups of Scouts comprises "Russian Scouts in Foreign countries"—boys of Russian exiles. Units are located in 13 countries, and at the last census numbered 1,301. Their Chief Scout is Oleg Pantuckoff, who resides in the United States.

Scouts Again Avert Panic

Cool and prompt action by Boy Scouts in directing a large crowd to Safety probably averted a panic at the City Auditorium, Atlanta, Ga., when fire broke out during a benefit performance in which a large number of children were taking part. The children were marshalled out by stage exits and the audience directed through the main doors.

Mount Baden-Powell

One of the many unique honours conferred upon Lord Baden Powell, was the naming after him by the United States Geographical Board of a mountain in Washington. and the Board's statement: "We are more than pleased to name this American mountain peak in honour of Lord Baden-Powell who because of his splendid achievements in giving to the world a movement for the youth of all lands, may well be considered a world citizen."

A World Target for Gifts.

Probably few crowned heads or other national figures are in receipt of such a constant stream of honours and gifts as come to Pax Hill the home of Lord Baden-Powell. One of the latest was a silk scarf and an Ikono representing St. George, presented on behalf of the Russian Scouts in Foreign Countries by Dr. B. A. Perott, their International Commissioner.

COMEDY PERFORMED BY BROWNSBURG UNITED CHOIR

On Thursday, April 28th., the Choir of Brownsburg United Church gave, before a large and appreciative audience, a 3-act comedy entitled Forest Acres (F. B. Linsby), under the direction of the Choir-leader Mr. E. Taylor.

It was a very efficient and entirely enjoyable performance, judging from the frequent and hearty applause and the laughter of the audience. The scenery (the cost of which was defrayed by Mr. Leonard Wilson) was made by the choir, and the effects were very tasteful and appropriate. The acting, the enunciation, and the costumes were excellent.

It would be difficult to discriminate between the performers, each being good in their respective parts. Cedric Wheeler in his portrayal of Lem Crockett left nothing to be desired. Edna Reid in the character of Lem's wife, acted her part with considerable talent. Winnie White, as Lizzie Crockett had a very difficult part to play, but her presentation could not have been bettered. Grace Moncrieff as Hepsie Crockett was a revelation to all, her acting and the interpretation of her part being really remarkable. Frank Hazel, as Hiram Crockett, the farmer's son, was also very good. Annie Petley as Lucy Ruggles, gave a very good interpretation. Tom Pasco, as Mr. Brixley, and Ivy Steere, as Mrs. Brixley, acted well together and did fine work. Agnes Elliott as Constance Loring, the efficient girl-graduate, gave an excellent portrayal. Wallace Wilson, Franklyn Arthur, was very good as the summer boarder. Jack Stewart as Andy Hobbs, the bashful farmer, was the cause of a good many bursts of applause and laughter, acted excellently. Stella Tomlinson as Nora, the maid, displayed fine amateur talent in her telephone scenes and other parts. Eleanor Wilson as Evelina, a summer boarder, also filled her part well.

Considering this is the first play the choir has presented, and for the majority of members their first appearance in a play, it was a really talented performance and speaks volumes for their adaptability and application.

In between the acts, Mr. Tom Pasco rendered a vocal solo,

SHOPPING BY SIGHT

Mr. Grocer, do you realize the extent to which your shelf and floor space can be made an effective selling medium? You can make it a most effective silent clerk and a very profitable sales force.

Size up the floor space in front of your counter. Is it just a narrow space for customers to stand while waiting to be served or have they sufficient room to walk around a bit and look over the goods displayed on the shelves and throughout the store. It is said that goods well displayed are half sold—sight shopping proves that they may be fully sold. Sight sales to the people who come in to buy a few things and purchase additional articles, run into big totals and merchants find it pays to keep the aisles clear and the goods on view.

Many women coming into your store today with a shopping list of the things they know they need would buy many additional lines if they could conveniently reach the shelves on which were neatly displayed in classified groups some of the articles they have read about in the newspaper, magazines, or have heard about over the radio, or from their friends.

But if they have to step over half empty boxes, or baskets waiting to be delivered, they will buy only what they came in for and you will lose possible sales. Make your shelves the "pantry" of the housewife.

To make full use of your shelves, group related products. I have been in some stores where one brand of canned fruit may be on one shelf and another brand on a shelf many sections away. All canned vegetables should be grouped for easy selection. All canned fruits in another group and so on through your stock.

Little strips of card fastened along the edge of the shelf giving the names of the types of goods, such as, catsups, marmalades, jams, salt, etc., and smaller cards with prices will be found informative and helpful to your customers as well as profitable to you.

Keep your shelves well filled as partly filled shelves reflect on you by giving the impression of depleted stocks. On the other hand, don't jam them full—a package missing shows the goods are moving. Keep packages clean. Frequent dusting of shelves and packages is quite as essential in the store as in your own home.

In order that your customers may make their selections easily, give careful consideration to the positions you allot to certain types of goods. There are some lines that move more rapidly than others. Place them so they are easy to get at.

Shopping by sight is today a very important factor and is so vital that no merchant should neglect to consider it. Manufacturers have carefully studied and are constantly considering the effect of different packagings on the consumer; frequently trying one colour scheme after another—above and alongside of competing lines so as to get the best effect. The careful study of this has produced new and attractive packages with surprising results and increased sales.

You, Mr. Merchant, will only profit to the fullest degree if you will also study your display to get the best appeal from your own standpoint.

Place related products together—fast moving products at your hand.

Goods in glass—where people can see contents.

Group colours to give prominence to each—by contrast.

FLOATING POWER

"THE RIDE of Your Life!"

I invite you to take it tomorrow"

"That's the Floating Power Ride," says W.P. Chrysler. "The biggest thrill in motoring today."

I WANT you to ride in a Floating Power car. I want you to know the amazing things that Floating Power does to an automobile.

That's why I join with every Plymouth, DeSoto, Dodge and Chrysler dealer in Canada in inviting you to take a Floating Power Ride.

I can't describe a Floating Power Ride to you. Nobody can. It's something you have to feel and experience.

But I promise you a surprise and a thrill.

Imagine, if you can, a car without vibration. Think of the smoothest car you've ever driven. Multiply that smoothness by two or more. Then you'll have some idea of Floating Power smoothness. The flexibility of Floating Power. A handling ease beyond your dreams.

A Nationwide Demonstration of FLOATING POWER

Starting tomorrow and continuing throughout next week, thousands upon thousands of Canadian motorists will participate in the greatest and most spectacular of all automobile demonstrations—the Floating Power Ride.

Of course, you're invited. Cordially invited. You and your family and your friends.

Merely ask any Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge or Chrysler dealer for a Floating Power Ride. Or, if you prefer, ride with a friend who owns a Floating Power motor car.

You can enjoy performance like this in only four cars—the Plymouth, the DeSoto, the Dodge and the Chrysler. Because Floating Power is exclusive.

Of course, competition is making lots of claims about riding smoothness. But can they prove their claims? Find out for yourself.

Ride in a Floating Power automobile. Then ride in any motor car without it. You'll find there's a world of difference. I've said repeatedly that any car that hasn't Floating Power is out-of-date. I mean just that. I know you'll agree with me after you've ridden in one of our Floating Power cars.

So I urge you to take a Floating Power Ride during Floating Power Demonstration Week in Canada. Take the wheel of any Floating Power car as my guest. Ride for fifteen minutes and you'll want to ride for an hour. For a day. That's how Floating Power gets you. Just take a Floating Power Ride. You'll see.

"I agree with Mr. Chrysler 100 percent. And every Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge and Chrysler dealer in Canada is ready to prove the truth of his statements. Take a Floating Power Ride—and discover things!"

With the first of May, a new scale of taxation came into effect, accompanied by the usual amount of grumbling against the Government for these added imposts. The necessity is born of extravagances in which we have all contributed. It arises from excessive demands and steadily increasing outlays, until today, as a country, we are faced with burdensome debts. The need is urgent, and we must face the obligation of bills now due, thus showing our patriotism and loyalty to our Dominion. Just who is responsible does not now enter into the matter; the fact remains, the debts have been incurred and it is up to us to lend a hand and preserve our national honor, uncomplainingly.

BOYS' ORGANIZATIONS

More depends on the proper foundation for citizenship, than on the foundation of a skyscraper, which in time will crumble away.

Twenty-two years ago the Boy Scout organization came into existence. If we undertook to measure its value to the world since that time, we would find that boy scouts working toward the end that communities may be aided and made better, have performed many useful tasks.

Every place fortunate in maintaining a live scout troop, contributes to the welfare of all its citizens. The splendid work these boys are doing and will continue to do while building material things, is also enlarging character.

We cannot have a great country without great men and there are few better ways to create great men than through the good offices of the scout organization.

Surely, never before were the sturdy virtues taught in this way, more necessary for a boy. Never before has the youth of this country needed self-reliance a cool head and heart more vitally than at the present. In training themselves for service they grow to manhood in possession of a knowledge that will enable them to proceed in the interests of communities and governments.

If you have boys, or influence with boys, encourage them to become scouts if they are not already. If they are already, encourage them to reach out persistently for the highest honour that can be awarded in scout hood.

To teach boys responsibility self-control and courtesy, organize school boy patrols for the purpose of protecting women & younger children from danger at street crossings and at all times, thus giving them the thrill that comes through doing community service, tending to make them community minded when they grow up. From this point of view, as well as from the point of safety for our younger children, this would be valuable activity.

Do everything you can, gladly, to promote boy's organizations, knowing that when you assist the child to stepping stones into better fields, you contribute to the upbuilding of your nation and receive richer blessings in citizenship.

MOTHER'S DAY

Sunday, May 8th.

Let every day be Mother's Day—
Make roses grow along the way
And beauty everywhere.
O never let her eyes be wet
With tears of sorrow or regret.
And never cease to care!
Come grown-up children and rejoice
That you can hear your mother's voice.

A day for her? For you she gave Long years of love and service brave—
For you her youth was spent;
There was no weight of hurt or care
Too heavy for her strength to bear,
She followed where you went;
Her courage and her love sublime
You could depend on all the time.

MOTHER'S DAY

About this time of the year the papers and magazines are full of articles and editorials in fulsome praise of Mother's Day. Probably the idea was a good one, in the first place, but it has been so sponsored by commercial propaganda that many people not only have no sympathy with it, but actually resent it. I wondered if I were the only woman who felt that way about it, so I asked a group of women what they thought about Mother's Day, and one & all condemned it strongly. All these women were mothers and some of them at least are devoted daughters, so it was no lack of affection which inspired the feeling. The Americans have a habit of glorifying motherhood and putting it on a pedestal, which, to many, is pure mawkish sentimentality.

Why pick a day and pay a price to respect your mother? Mothers' Day, having gone over big, commercial interests tried to put across a Fathers' Day, but the only place one ever sees it mentioned is in the Gent's Furnishing stores, suggesting a tie or such like for Father.

Affection and respect for mother. Yes. But not a day of commercial sentimentality.

FRUIT JUICES FOR MALNUTRITION

Milk and its products are most important in feeding an undernourished person. The bland taste of the milk allows it to be taken in quantity without disturbing the appetite. It is advisable to give small meals more frequently than to try to force too large meals. For that reason a mid-morning and a mid-afternoon lunch are usually given.

When milk is given at these extra meals, it sometimes happens that the appetite for the next meal is lessened. The reason for this is that fat is slow to leave the stomach and the fat in the milk slows up the digestion somewhat and for that reason lessens the appetite. In cases like this (specially with children) it is advisable to omit giving the milk at the extra meals and to substitute fruit or fruit juices.

Orange, lemon and grape juice are all suitable and as a rule it is not difficult to get a child to take them as they look on them in the light of a treat. Lemon and grape juice require sugar and this gives quick energy. The fruit juices are useful too in supplying both minerals and vitamins, they are not of high caloric value, but calories are not the only thing to be considered even in malnutrition.

CONSTIPATION ON A REDUCTION DIET

Reducing diets are usually high in bulky foods, vegetables and fruits. These are the very foods that are included generously in a diet used to correct

I would like to ask my friend in Ontario where the bright side of farming comes in, when you have a mortgage to pay off (as most farmers have) paying interest, taxes rising, farm machinery high in price, and no price for your goods. How is he going to provide for sickness, old age, give his children an education and clothe them?

Of course, if a farmer has money in the bank and doesn't depend on selling his produce, he is like a millionaire in town and my friend must be in such a position! He also talks about misplaced humanity in town, factories working half time or closed down altogether, constant increase in unemployment, and until we can solve this problem we will not return to normal times.

I will say that the man behind the plough—is the most important man in the country; and as long as he is down and out, everyone will be so. Once the farmer gets a better footing and a better market for his produce then you will soon see a bright star for everybody.

I agree with my friend, that farming is a healthy occupation especially when one is strong, and a fair business when prices of farm produce are right. But otherwise it is a miserable existence.

I do not predict that farming is coming to a standstill or that the world is going under, but I certainly do not see the good market for farm produce and the bright side of farming.

Trusting that my friend will have no difficulties in getting his extra piece of land for which he is in the market.

In my experience of eighteen years, there is always any amount of farms and land for sale wherever it may be!

The same,

Farmer of Morin Heights.

TRAGEDY ABROAD!

The above picture, issued by the Province of Quebec Safety League, speaks eloquently of the danger of night-riding without lights on horse-drawn vehicles. So long as this danger exists, tragedy will stalk abroad on our Provincial Highways. There is, unfortunately, no law in this province to enforce the carrying of lights on farm vehicles. But inefficiency of our legislature does not, however, minimize the danger, which is generally recognized—even among the agricultural community. Yet in spite of this fact, many farmers refuse to take the precaution and neglect to equip their vehicles with a light. The need cannot be too strongly urged, for the safeguarding of all highway users, and for a lower death-rate from highway accidents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph, who have conducted a general dry-goods Main Street, for the past six years, have closed out their business and removed to the neighboring town of Brownsburg, where their many friends wish them every success.

Work is progressing very rapidly on the Presbyterian preparations etao shrdl cmfwly Church construction, and preparations are under way to have the corner stone laid on Saturday, May 14th., full particulars of which will be made known in our next issue.

This week has found several changes on Main Street. The Mason Motor having removed from the South side to the north side into the Bedard property, lately occupied by Mr. Ralph. Then Mr. Lapierre has moved his quarters from Bethany Street to the shop adjoining the Liquor Commission store.

There is every prospect of the return of lacrosse as a past time in Lachute. This at one time had a great following in our town and the game developed some fine athletes. We understand that some of our young men have been in consultation with Mr. L. C. Barron, who captained the team many years ago, and a meeting will shortly be called for organization purposes.

The May meeting of the Lachute Women's Institute was held in the Auditorium on Wednesday afternoon and was well attended, several new members joining. They were favored by the presence of Mr. Walker, of Macdonald College, who gave a most interesting talk on Perennial Borders, their proper location, preparation of soil, when to plant and replant and care in winter. A vote of thanks was given to the speaker, after which adjournment was made.

Owing to ill health, Mr. W. Lamb, who has held the position of manager of the Lachute Branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia for the past few years, has found it necessary to sever his connection in an active way with that institution. He has now left us to take up residence in Montreal. Lachute is always sorry to lose those who have so readily linked themselves with the activities of the town, and while they may be future residents of the big city, Lachute will always retain for them a warm spot in their memories.

Presently he turned again to the boy.

"I thought you said she was at home?" he asked with some warmth.

"So she is," said the boy, "but I don't live here."

A NEW LAWYER

GERARD RAYMOND, Esq.,

Mr. Raymond, who is the son of Notary Z.-N. Raymond, of Lachute, one of our respected citizens, was admitted to the Bar of the Province of Quebec, in January last, after having passed brilliantly in his law examinations.

His many friends, are proud of his recent achievement and wish him every success in the practice of his profession.

Mr. Raymond has opened his office in the Versailles Building, (Suite 400) 60 St. James Street West, Montreal, and on the request of many people of this county, he will have a week-end office at Lachute, No. 281 Main Street, starting on Saturday of this week.

SOAKING THE STRANGER.

A recent visitor to the West Indies tells how some of their party hired a carriage for a sight-seeing trip and were held up by the driver for an excessive fare. This was not in accordance with the agreement made beforehand but the policeman who was appealed to stood loyally by his fellow-townsmen and ruled that the cabby was right and the tourists must pay the price demanded. This is a trick not confined to any particular part of the world. We had a somewhat similar experience with a taxi-driver in Paris and paid to avoid a scene on the street. A stranger who arrived in Montreal hired a taxi to take him to a certain hotel. After a ride which took in all the sights of St. Catherine and Sherbrooke streets he was finally deposited at the hotel asked for. After paying the padded fare, he went to his room and, looking out of the window, made the discovery that he was just on the other side of the street from the railway station at which he had arrived.

NATIONAL WOMEN'S INSTITUTE NEWS

Compiled by Elizabeth Bailey
Price, F.W.I.C., Publicity Secretary.

Women's Institutes Use Radio

Women's Institutes throughout Canada are finding that the radio is an effective method in carrying out their various objectives which deal mainly with home betterment.

Two national Women's Institute conveners, Miss M. V. Powell, of Whitby, Ont., and Mrs. J. Macgregor Smith of Edmonton, Alberta, who are in charge of Canadian Industries and Home Economics Work have been particularly active. The former arranged for a Dominion broadcast on "Fish" and in four provinces on "Wool and Wool Products." The latter, in carrying out a Home Economics week, the first of April, was successful in having talks on various phases of Home Economics broadcasted. Her home province had speakers from Calgary and Edmonton stations every day. Mrs. M. E. Honey, Convent of Home Economics, Quebec, had the opportunity of speaking on the Value of Home Economics Training from station C.K.A.C., Montreal.

Mr. George Putnam, who has been associated with the Ontario Women's Institutes, for twenty-seven years recently gave a brief history of the Women's Institute movement, which originated in Ontario 35 years ago and which today has become worldwide. At a conference held in Vienna last year twenty-eight countries were represented by members of thirty-eight national rural women's organizations, many of them modelled after Ontario's plan of co-operation of groups of women and government service. One of the major activities of this province is its "short course" work, these courses lasting from two weeks to three months. They are conducted by domestic science graduates, nurses and specialists in sewing. Thousands of women and girls take advantage of them yearly.

New Brunswick Women's Institutes have a monthly broadcast on committee work, each convener telling her provincial policy and what the branches are to work for in Canadian Industries, Home Economics, Public Health, Immigration, Agricultural, Education, Canadianization and League of Nations. Quebec Women's Institutes, too, have had talks on the work given by Miss Hazel B. McCain, Superintendent and Miss B. M. Philip, Head of the School of Household Science, Macdonald College, these being given weekly for eight successive weeks.

In remote districts of Canada a new Women's Institute programme is becoming rapidly popular and that is gathering at a central home that boasts a radio and "listening in" when a speaker is giving a talk that is of special interest to homemakers.

National Legislation Outline

Mrs. J. P. Ferguson, of Trochu, Alberta, who is the national convener of the legislation committee is a practicing lawyer in partnership with her husband. She recommends the following topics of study for the Women's Institute branches throughout the Dominion and suggests a detailed study of one or two rather than a superficial study of all.

1. Dominion:

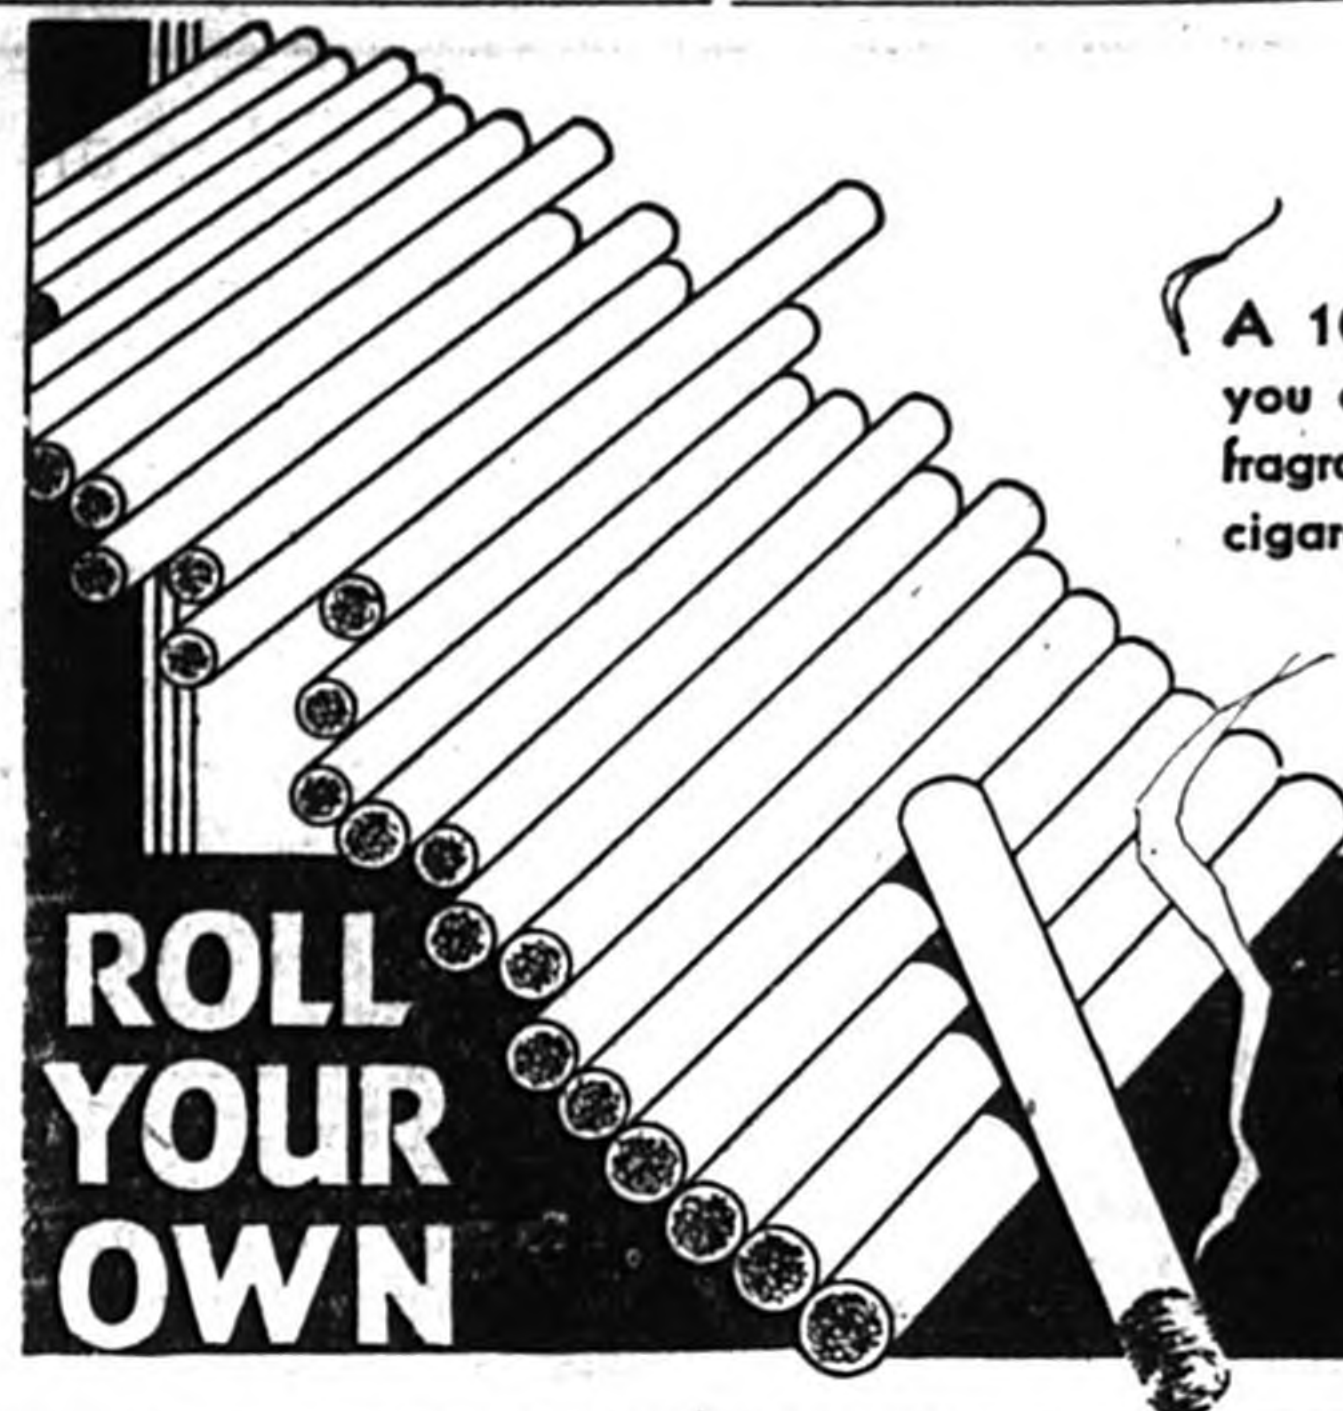

(a) Legislation resulting from the findings of the Hague Conferences respecting the nationality of married women.

(b) Careful study of legislation regarding juvenile delinquency; old age pensions, domicile of married women as regards marital relations, such as divorce, desertion, etc. foods and drugs.

2. Provincial:

(a) Legislation respecting child-labour, with a view to knowledge of what legislation is to be passed in each province, before Canada can sign the Child Labor Convention of the International Labor Office.

(b) Protection of legitimate children in their deceased parent's estates. Many provinces have provided for the illegitimate and the adopted child, but have overlooked the interest of legitimate children

(c) Safeguarding of public highways, i.e., the proper lighting & control of all vehicles.

(d) Legislation needed for the protection of wild fowl; particularly does this apply to the prairie provinces.

Miss Jessie Marie De Both makes her delicious

Apple Dumplings with Magic Baking Powder

WHEN a young housewife asks me what baking powder she should use," says Miss De Both, director of the famous De Both Home Makers' Cooking Schools, "this is my advice: Use the best—one that is pure, uniform and invariably dependable. You can't use second-rate baking powder and expect first-rate results.

"My experience with Magic has been particularly happy. I find that it never varies—that it is consistently reliable. And I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients."

Statements by other well-known cookery authorities give whole-hearted support to Miss De Both's judgment.

In fact, the majority of dietitians and cookery teachers throughout Canada use and recommend Magic exclusively.

Apple Dumplings

1 quart flour 1 1/2 cups milk
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder 1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 cup apples
2 tablespoons butter

Sift into a bowl flour, baking powder and salt. Rub in the butter. Add cold milk to make soft dough. Turn out on to a floured board and roll into a sheet. Cut in squares. Peel and core the apples. Place an apple on each square of dough. Fill the core with a small piece of butter, sugar and a little cinnamon. Fold the dough over, taking care that there are no openings, as the steam inside dumplings cooks the apple while dough is baking. Brush dumplings with a little cream, and place in greased pans. Bake in moderate oven at 400° F. about 40 minutes. Serve with cream or hard sauce.

FREE COOK BOOK—When you bake at home, the new Magic Cook Book will give you dozens of recipes for delicious baked foods. Write to Standard Brands Ltd., Fraser Ave. & Liberty St., Toronto, Ont.

THE MASTER MIND

Novelized by Marvin Dana, Author of "Within the Law," From the Successful Play by Daniel D. Carter

"Now tell me the exact truth," Forbes continued. "Do you think that Mr. Walter is a thief?"

"No, indeed, sir," he disclaimed. "Or that Mr. Blount is a bank burglar?"

"Oh, no, sir—no, never, sir. Not that about Mrs. Blount either."

"Why did you threaten Mr. Wainwright, saying that if he refused to do your bidding you would publish these stories in the newspapers?"

"I'm very sorry, sir," Andrew responded, with a quick reversion to his former meek manner, "but I don't remember anything about it, sir."

"Do you dislike Mr. Wainwright?" was the next inquiry.

"Oh, goodness—no, sir."

"Or Mrs. Wainwright?"

"Oh, no, sir—oh, no, indeed, sir. Very far from it."

"I am glad to hear you speak in this fashion," Forbes said approvingly. "Nevertheless, my good man, it appears on indisputable testimony that you have said these curious and offensive things. What have you to say to me as to that fact?"

Again Andrew looked up.

"Well, sir," he said, "to tell the truth, I am not surprised. A thing like it happened to me once before, sir."

There was a general movement of astonishment, in which even the physician shared, at this candid avowal of his unfortunate mental condition.

"Yes, sir," he went on, with obvious reluctance, dropping his eyes; "I lost my last place before this in the same way."

"Well, now, Andrew," said Dr. Forbes, "how would you like to go along with me for just a little while to get rested up a bit, you know?"

But the patient displayed a sudden and unexpected animation in opposition to this proposal.

"Oh, no, indeed! Not to an—insane asylum—no, no!" He wrung his hands despairingly, and his face became writhen with fear. "Oh, I am sure that would drive me mad, indeed!"

"But you surely need a change of some kind, Andrew," he urged.

"I know that, sir," he said softly. "I know it only too well, sir." Then a little more of spirit crept into his expression. He took a letter from his pocket and held it forth to the physician.

"I had thought that this might be the thing for me," he ended as Forbes took the letter. "It is from a cousin of mine down in Virginia, sir."

The physician scanned the missive.

"I see," he said thoughtfully. "As I understand it, then, you have entertained the idea of going down there and living with your cousin, for some time in the library, now fell from Andrew as might a garment when he strode forward, so that he faced the others easily.

"Innocuous, Mr. Wainwright," he said, with zest. "Oh, it was really quite innocuous. Its one demerit was that it proved so utterly inefficient."

He looked slowly over the others in the room, with the exception of Lucene, from whom he held his gaze audaciously averted. None of the three criminals who had joined in the futile revolt against him ventured to meet his eyes.

They sat in nervous dejection, expectant of condign punishment. Andrew smiled as he contemplated them, and the smile boded ill. The smile grew amusedly contemplative as he regarded Marshall, who was scowling heavily; then of a sudden the Master Mind's face set itself in stern lines. He spoke with authority.

"Mr. Wainwright will excuse you now," he said briskly to the detective. Marshall snorted indignantly.

"I'm under Mr. Wainwright's orders and following his instructions. Otherwise the situation would be different," he growled wrathfully. "I guess you understand that."

Andrew did not trouble himself to reply. It was Wainwright who re-enforced the command.

"It was at this hour of the morning, Mr. Wainwright," he said, with profound solemnity, "that my brother died—that he was put to death. Well, sir, the time agreed on between us has come. What is your choice?"

Wainwright spoke very quietly, firmly, yet with a sadness that told the greatness of his sacrifice.

"You leave me no choice," he said simply. "You have won. I shall retire from public life."

"Today, you remember."

"I remember—today."

Lucene started up.

"No, no!" she breathed wildly. She went swiftly to her husband and placed her two hands on his shoulders and looked down into his face with her eyes twin flames of dusky azure, burning through a mist of tears.

"Oh, my dear, you can't—you can't! No, I say, you shan't! I can't let you do this dreadful thing—no, no! Oh, let me go instead—you must! I can't spoil your life like this, dear. Let me go—let me go!"

Wainwright ordered the three crooks and the detective to leave the room.

In Wainwright's eyes shone unutterable love for the beautiful woman whose heart was so torn by anguish brought upon her through love of him. At least he must strive to comfort her, to assuage her grief, since her love remained to him. As for this other thing, it was, after all, by comparison, a little thing. Yet, even as he thought so, it was with difficulty that he checked the groan that rose to his lips. It is no light thing to tear out by the roots the honorable ambition of a strong man's lifetime.

The husband's voice was colorless.

"What would be the use?" he said sadly. "As to your leaving me, why, wherever you might go I should follow." The wife buried her face in her hands and shook with sobbing.

"There, there!" he cried soothingly, distraught by her agony. He stood up and drew her into his arms, caressing her hair with exquisite tenderness in the gentle touch of his fingers.

"Hush, hush, darling! Don't you know, Lucene, that I have you, and so nothing—nothing else—matters?"

The scene failed somehow to give its evil genius the bliss he had thought to find in it. This lovers' rapture made a mockery of his vengeance. Yet, even as he asserted this to himself, Andrew knew in his soul that he lied; that the venom of his punishment was even stronger than he had guessed to poison the well of his enemy's hopes and its virulence would increase, not lessen. Nevertheless there was disappointment to him here in the hour of triumph. He had gained all for which he had striven—yes, all! And something more—the misery of Lucene!

In a fury of rage against his own weakness Andrew thrust the thought of Lucene from him. His voice broke gratingly.

"Your resignation in writing, Mr. Wainwright, if you please."

Wainwright spoke listlessly.

"I will write it in my study at once and bring it to you here. Come with me, Lucene."

Abruptly, violently, the wife tore herself from his arms. As he rested motionless, amazed, she darted to Andrew, clutched his wrist in her two hands, when he would have recoiled involuntarily before this onslaught of the woman he had wronged. Her voice came softly, haltingly, painfully weighted with the burden of love's tragedy. The violet eyes, humid, tender, infinitely pathetic in their pleading, met his ere he could turn his gaze aside and held him in their spell.

"Oh, Andrew," she cried, "I have trusted you—I have loved you! Because of that I have tried to think how you could do this terrible thing to me."

"Must we go into that now?" the man demanded roughly as she paused. He felt his strength slipping from him. He felt his wrath leaping high, wrath against himself, against fate—not against her.

"Yes, we must," she said bravely. "For I may never speak to you again. I have tried to think what it could be. And now—now I know! I understand at last. It was because you loved your brother so much—because you loved him so that nothing else mattered at all. Isn't that it, Andrew?"

"Yes, that is it," he answered huskily.

"But don't you see—don't you see?" she questioned with the fierceness of one betrayed. "You've hated the man

I love. And because you think he sacrificed your brother whom you loved now you will sacrifice me in the same way. Don't you see, Andrew?" Her eyes probed the furthest recesses of his soul. They tortured him with their poignant reproach, yet he could not turn from them so great was the strength of her weakness.

But, though he understood too well, he still struggled impotently against her, against a self he thought dead.

"No, no!" he stammered. "No, I—"

Lucene went on:

"You can't ruin his life, Andrew, without ruining mine too. You can't—you can't!" Her voice's music rose thrillingly. "Don't you care what becomes of me, Andrew? Do you know you are turning my love into hate? You don't want that. Oh, you don't! I know you don't, Andrew. You are not going to tell me now that hate, not love, is to rule your life and mine. Oh, surely, Andrew, you are not going to send me through the rest of my life hating you as you have hated him—not that! No, Andrew, you can't—I tell you, you can't!"

Slowly, at last, the lids drooped over Andrew's eyes. He turned his head a little, with a movement of lassitude. Then the lids were lifted again, and he looked full into the eyes of Wainwright, and his own were inscrutable. In his voice sounded a note of futile remonstrance against destiny.

"I've hated you for years," he said quietly, "as you know very well. You are aware also that my hatred of you has been my ruling passion since its beginning. In that time, all my days, yes, every waking hour, have been devoted to the task of accomplishing your ruin. This in the instant of my triumph. I hold you here in the hollow of my hand, with the power and the will to crush you. Well, sir, I—open my hand—and let you go."

An imperious gesture restrained the exclamation that rose to Wainwright's lips.

"The explanation of this inconsistency is very simple. It lies in the fact that I am a fool—the greatest fool in all this world of fools. So, because I am such a fool, you are safe from me, Mr. Wainwright—now, and always. I wish you good morning." He moved toward the door.

But the wife, radiant in an instant, would not have it so.

"Andrew!" she cried. "Oh, thank God!—not only for our happiness, but for your sake, too, since love has conquered hate, at last!"

The Master Mind spoke heavily.

"I only know," he said confusedly, "that the most unlikely thing in all the world has happened. I mean that in the hour of victory my triumph has turned to ashes in my mouth. I only know that, since I cannot crush my enemy alone, I cannot crush him at all. No other could, I think, but you, Lucene—you've beaten me."

Lucene spoke very gently.

"Then I was right all this time. You did love me, and you do still?"

Andrew shook his head doubtfully.

"I only know," he said, "that I cannot do you harm."

Lucene made an impulsive step as if to follow him, then checked herself. This man still held in his heart hatred for the husband she loved.

"Where will you go, Andrew?" He answered very gravely, sadly: "I do not know—only, not back into the shadows whence I came." He paused for a little, and added, wistfully: "Be happy, Lucene, and remember sometimes, if you will, that, after all, it was I who brought you your happiness." Then he went quickly from the room, and so out of their lives. But the happiness that had been his gift abode with them always.

THE END.

"Well, gentlemen of the jury, are you unanimous?"

"Yes, your Worship. We're all alike—temporarily insane."

Lachute Eleven Puts Best Foot Forward

Beat Brownsburg in First Football Game.

Witnessed by an enthusiastic gathering of a dozen small boys and as many adults, Brownsburg and Lachute football "eleven" met last Saturday in a spectacular clash. The D. C. Coy.'s sports grounds was the scene of the game, and although the "gate" was not unusually large, a good time was had by all — especially by the players.

It happened that the majority of Brownsburg's picked team, being ardent disciples of Isaac Walton, were over the hills and far away. And plying the supple rod, we trust they met with greater success than their companions on the football field.

The scratch team, however, put up a good game. But Lachute eleven, in good trim after their solitary practice game on the previous Tuesday, proved more skilful, although somewhat inferior to Brownsburg in weight. The visitors comprised a number of our Academy boys, who—constantly engaged in sports—proved more agile than the older players, whose joints took unkindly to the unusual strain. And of Lachute's flying forwards, half of The Watchman's representation on the right wing went out of business, after a fall in the first half. Otherwise there were no casualties; good friendly spirit prevailed, and the penalties imposed were for reasons purely accidental. Mr. Tom Milnes, of Ayers Limited, handled the whistle as referee.

In the first half Lachute scored a goal, through the quick manoeuvres of J. Gorman. In the second, by luck rather than good management the ball again slipped through the Brownsburg posts.

M. Langille scored a third, which inspired the Burg boys to their only triumph, a goal by Duncan from a neat pass by Stewart. Lachute closed the score at 4-1, when J. Berniquier scored again.

Assembly Under Religious Education Council

An inter-denominational convention was held Friday, May 6th., under the auspices of the Religious Education Council, in the United Church, St. Andrews East. Miss Janet M. Doxsey, Hon. Secretary, was the speaker. In the afternoon there was a discussion of Sunday School problems, and a story telling hour for the children. At the close of the evening session Miss Doxsey gave a very inspiring talk on "Study to be Silent and Work." She said "In these days of restlessness and noise we cannot stress too much the importance of setting aside some time each day for quiet meditation." There were delegates from different groups in the Ottawa River Valley. Among the ministers were Rev. Mr. Maclean from Cushing, Rev. Mr. Hagar, Brownsburg, Rev. Mr. Rosborough and Rev. Mr. Baxter from Lachute. A sumptuous supper was served by the Ladies' Guild, amid a color scheme carried out in decorations of spring flowers.

Action for Damages at Hawkesbury

False Accusation Charges Arose out of Mayoralty Election Campaign

(From L'Original Advocate) Laurin vs. Ethier

The above trial came to an end on Wednesday last, having lasted two full days. As stated in our last issue, Ethier a young man, stranger in Hawkesbury, made a solemn declaration that Mr. Laurin, then mayor, after publishing a proclamation requesting business men to close their place of business on the afternoon of the official opening of the Hawkesbury and Grenville bridge last fall, had himself kept his store open during the afternoon. This declaration was handed to Mr. J. B. Woods, who during the election for mayor which soon followed became a candidate, and used same as one of his best trump cards, with the result that he defeated Mr. Laurin by a few votes. Mr. Laurin at once brought an action for damage against Ethier and after much evidence was taken there was not the slightest fact brought forward to sustain Ethier's statement and a verdict was given against him for damages and costs, which may reach a thousand dollars.

Now as Mr. Woods used this declaration to secure election and defeat Mr. Laurin, the public are awaiting his resignation as mayor and have a new election on fair and true arguments.

Bad Fire Averted in Town

The timely arrival of our local fire brigade again saved a serious situation on Thursday last at the Mason Motor Sales on Main Street. They had only occupied the premises for a few days, when a new truck which was in the back shed took fire through some unknown reason, and soon the building was a mass of flame. Prompt action however and a good pressure of water, were the means of getting it under control, and avoiding further damage.

The list of things taxable has not been exhausted. The city of Saskatchewan has been advised to tax cats. A resident says the city is infested "with thousands of marauding, night-prowling, bird-destroying cats" and a tax on these would bring quite a large sum.

Mayor of Hawkesbury Claims Libel under Criminal Code

Action Arose Out of Alleged Publication of Articles in Weekly Paper

Louis M. Auger, former member of Parliament for Prescott County and editor of "Le Peuple," a French-language weekly newspaper circulated here, has been charged with defamatory libel by John B. Woods, barrister and present mayor of Hawkesbury. A $25,000 action for damages against Le Progres de Hull, alleged publishers of the paper, has been instituted by Mr. Woods. Summonses were in the hands of Chief of Police Joseph Beaulne of Hawkesbury.

Two charges of defamatory libel against the former member of the House of Commons have been laid by Mr. Woods, both based on articles alleged to have appeared in "Le Peuple" concerning Mr. Woods' professional activities. Twelve editions of the weekly have been circulated.

"Louis Auger has been after me for the last twelve editions," Mr. Woods said, "and I've said nothing. But I've stood about as much as I can, and am now taking actions."

A Tache, Hull barrister, has filed suit against Le Progres de Hull on behalf of Mr. Woods in Hull Superior Court.

Laying of the Corner Stone.

Notable Ceremony in Construction of New Edifice for Presbyterian Church

When the late Miss Margaret Rodger as a girl attended the old stone Church and listened to the inspiring sermons of the minister, the late Reverend John Mackie, she never dreamed that any later action of her life would be a sufficient inspiration to warrant the erection of a church to perpetuate her memory. Later on in life when she heard the Call to go over to India and help in laying the foundation of Christianity where Hinduism and Mohammedanism with all their ramifications were firmly established, and with her companion Miss Fairweather went over there as the first women missionaries from Canada, she did not think of her act as heroic or epoch making. Like all great missionaries from St. Paul to Dr. Goforth of the present day, she was possessed with the spirit of true humility and animated with the holy desire to give of her best to the service of her Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. Because she possessed this spirit of self-effacement, self-sacrifice and undaunted courage, no honour roll of great missionaries is complete without her name. It is fitting, therefore that her memory be perpetuated in the community in which she was born and educated, and by the Church of which she was a member. This has been made possible through the generosity of her brother Mr. William Rodger, and the Church which is now under the process of erection will bear her name, reminding the community and testifying to the world that something good has come out of (St. Jerusalem) this community.

The ceremony of laying the Corner-stone of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, will take place on Saturday, May 14th., at 2.30 p.m. (D.S.T.) when it is expected that a large number of friends and visitors from Montreal and other places will be present. Mrs. Agnes Mackie, widow of the late Rev. John Mackie referred to above, and a life long friend of the late Miss Rodger has consented to lay the stone, if her health permits. The address will be given by the Rev. Malcolm A. Campbell, D.D. of Montreal. Others assisting in the service will be the Rev. P. Sampson, Moderator of the Presbytery, Rev. A.S. Reid, D.D. Clerk of the Synod of Montreal and Ottawa, and the Rev. R. L. Ballantyne, D.D., minister of the neighbouring congregation of St. Andrews East.

The Corner-stone will be laid in the South-East corner of the tower and in it will be deposited a history of the Presbyterian Church in Lachute, a brief account of the late Miss Rodger's life, copies of the Watchman, the Montreal Gazette and the Montreal Daily Star, and coins and stamps of recent issue. A cordial invitation is extended to the entire community to be present, as it is felt that the ceremony is an act of honor to one who has brought credit to the community in which she was born as well as the Church of which she was a member.

Memories of Old St. Andrews

Continuing The Watchman's Series of Reminiscent Articles by B. N. Wales

The Seignior of Argenteuil had the distinction of being the only English Seignior within the bounds of Lower Canada, but it included within its limits a French element, both in its democracy and aristocracy. The De La Rondes, the De Hertels, the Mayrands and the MacKays, in aristocratic distinction, could rival their English Associates, and with their visiting relatives, and friends, the Papineaus, the Globenskys, and the De Lesderniers, lent an added charm to the social life of early days. They were bon vivants and entertaining raconteurs, and they contributed in no small degree to the cosmopolitan spirit for which the old town was noted.

Gaspard De Coligny, Denys De La Ronde, the witty Notary Public whose political lampoons could rival those of Racy of the Star, was a familiar figure on the streets of St. Andrews. He bore himself like a Portuguese Grandee, and little wonder, for his ancestry ran back through illustrious families to the King of Portugal.

Mr. De La Ronde played the flute beautifully, and on summer evenings, this music from his back verandah added greatly to the enjoyment of pleasure boating on the North River.

Old Scotland sent us some fine types in James Barclay of "The Hill" and Hugh Robertson of "The Ottawa Lodge", tall and handsome men they were, and in character and deportment, typical of the Lairds of their native land. Their well remembered gardens were the admiration of the country-side, and in the competition for the prizes offered by the County Agricultural Society, they often out-rivalled the Oakland garden enclosed within the now over-grown hedge.

Another Scotchman deserving of notice was Captain Adam Drysdale the retired Merchant Marine Captain, who dwelt for six years with his son Adam Drysdale in St. Andrews before removing to Montreal. This Captain Drysdale was the great-grandfather of William Flock-hart Drysdale to whom the St. Andrews of today owes so great a debt. It is interesting to learn that Captain Drysdale had been a partner of Captain Alexander Allan, (the father of Sir Hugh Allan, of Merchant Marine fame,) in the ownership of two ships, the "Jean" captained by Allan and the "Favorite" by Drysdale. These ships were brigantines for some time employed by the British Government as transports for Colonization purposes. During the Peninsular War, they were commandeered for transporting supplies to the Duke of Wellington.

Captain Drysdale's long career on the sea was rich in adventures, not the least of which was when he was chased and captured by pirates in the Caribbean Sea. He was doomed to "Walk the Plank", and at the critical moment the Chief of the Pirates who had been a Mason fallen from Grace, and on discovering that his victim was a brother Mason relented.

The Marine telescope used by Captain Drysdale engraved with his initials, during this piratical pursuit is now in the cherished possession of his great grandson W. F. Drysdale.

During his St. Andrews days, it was the delight of the old Sea Captain to awaken in the minds of the youths of the town a thirst for knowledge and interest in the great work beyond the Seas.

One of his youthful admirers was young Abbott (Sir J. J. Abbott) who learned from the "Old Salt" the mysteries of Astronomy and ocean navigation, and the secret of "Boxing the Compass."

On retiring from the Sea, and seeking an opening for a career for his son Adam in the new world, he started him in St. Andrews as a manufacturer of plows which became very popular with the Scotch farmers, but in the interests of truth, it must be recorded that the plows were not all paid for.

New Management at Local Bank of Nova Scotia

Good Wishes to popular Assistant Manager, on Departure for Toronto

Acknowledging a request of the Board of Trade, endorsed by friends and customers of the local Bank of Nova Scotia, the general manager of that bank appreciates the esteem and confidence placed in Mr. Kenneth R. Elliott by the people of Lachute. The Bank however, is unable to comply with the petition to retain Mr. Elliott as our local manager, to replace Mr. Lamb, who retired from the post last week. Mr. Elliott is consequently being transferred to Toronto, where he will follow a training in other departments of the Bank's work. And while his friends regret that he is leaving this vicinity they trust the move will prove to his advantage, and they extend to him every wish for success and satisfaction.

Mr. Hind, of Maniwaki, succeeds Mr. W. H. Lamb as local manager, and fills this office with the highest recommendation from the executive at Toronto. He is an experienced manager and his promotion is well merited. The banking fraternity and residents of Lachute accord to Mr. and Mrs. Hind a warm welcome, and look to a mutually pleasant association, both in business and in social activity.

Walter McQuat Passes Away

The death of Walter McQuat took place at his home, Grace Street, on Tuesday morning, after a long illness. Deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McQuat and was born at Hill Head 82 years ago. After his marriage to Miss Jane McQuat, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McQuat, he took up farming at North River (Chatham) removing to Lachute just 29 years ago on May the 11th. He leaves to mourn his loss one daughter Miss Jane McQuat, his wife having predeceased him some years ago.

The funeral took place on Thursday from his late residence, service being conducted by the Rev. H. Cousens. Interment was made in Lachute cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. Dan McQuat, Wm. Murray, Wm. Cleland, Robert Cleland, Peter Dobbie and John Paul.

Good Records Obtained by Holstein Milch Cows

Lachute Farmer's Holsteins in 365-Day Division R.O.P.

A pair of pure bred Holstein cows, both mature, owned by James A. MacKenzie of Lachute, have just been qualified in the 365 day division of the R.O.P. with a production averaging 15,938 lbs. milk containing 703 lbs. butter. The one cow, Pansy Eunice Wayne, bred by Mr. MacKenzie himself, in her year gave 16,015 lbs. milk containing 675 lbs. butter, while the other, Cornelia Princess Hartog, bred by Willoughby Hammer, Norwich, Ont., yielded 15,861 lbs. milk containing 731.25 lbs. butter, giving her an average test of 3.69 per cent. fat. Mr. MacKenzie has also been granted certificates for a pair of heifers the one four and the other two years of age. The four-year-old Pearl Kerk DeKol, sired by King Kerk Colanthis, in a full year 365 days, finished with 11,342 lbs. milk containing 552.50 lbs. butter, giving her an average test of 3.90 per cent. fat. The two-year-old, Minnie Kerk Burke sired by Lyons Burke of Crystal Spring, completed her full year's lactation with 10,472 lbs. milk containing 431.25 lbs. butter, her test average 3.63 per cent. fat. Both of these heifers were bred by Mr. MacKenzie.

Children of Mission Band Do Remarkably Well

Enjoyable Evening at Church Hall

The splendid services that have engaged the attention of the Children's Mission Band, during the winter found their culmination in the entertainment given in the United Church Hall, on Saturday evening. This programme included some thirteen items, all reflecting a careful and patient rehearsal by the children, amply repaid by the success of their performance in these varied numbers and by the applause of their audience. This early training will undoubtedly have an uplifting influence on many of the lives of the little ones. The special work that has engaged the attention of the Mission Band has been the Missionary work in Korea, wherein was studied the costumes and customs of the country. These created many a laugh, as the characters of the numerous castes were so well portrayed by the children.

All the numbers had a real bearing and moral and especially pleasing were selection numbers 5, 7, 11 & 13. The program was as follows:

1. Parade.
2. Band of Mission Workers' Song.
3. Homes
4. March.
5. The Emblem of our Mission Band.
6. Maypole.
7. Korean Hats.
8. Bees.
9. How does our Mission Band Grow?
10. Clock Song.
11. "Good Morning" Round the World.
12. Little Sir Echo.
13. The Three Wishes.

There are 66 names on the membership roll, with ages ranging from three to thirteen. A six year old member Beryl Underhill, made all the candy boxes for the candy which was sold. The total receipts for the evening were $32.05.

Mrs. McNeill has undertaken the task of training this Band and the excellence of the programme evidenced that her heart and soul was in the work. As was remarked by the Rev. Mr. Rosborough much patience and skill was required in bringing the children to realize and cultivate the missionary spirit.

Buckingham Ordered to Enlarge Conduits

Must Supply Masson Village with Water Commission rules

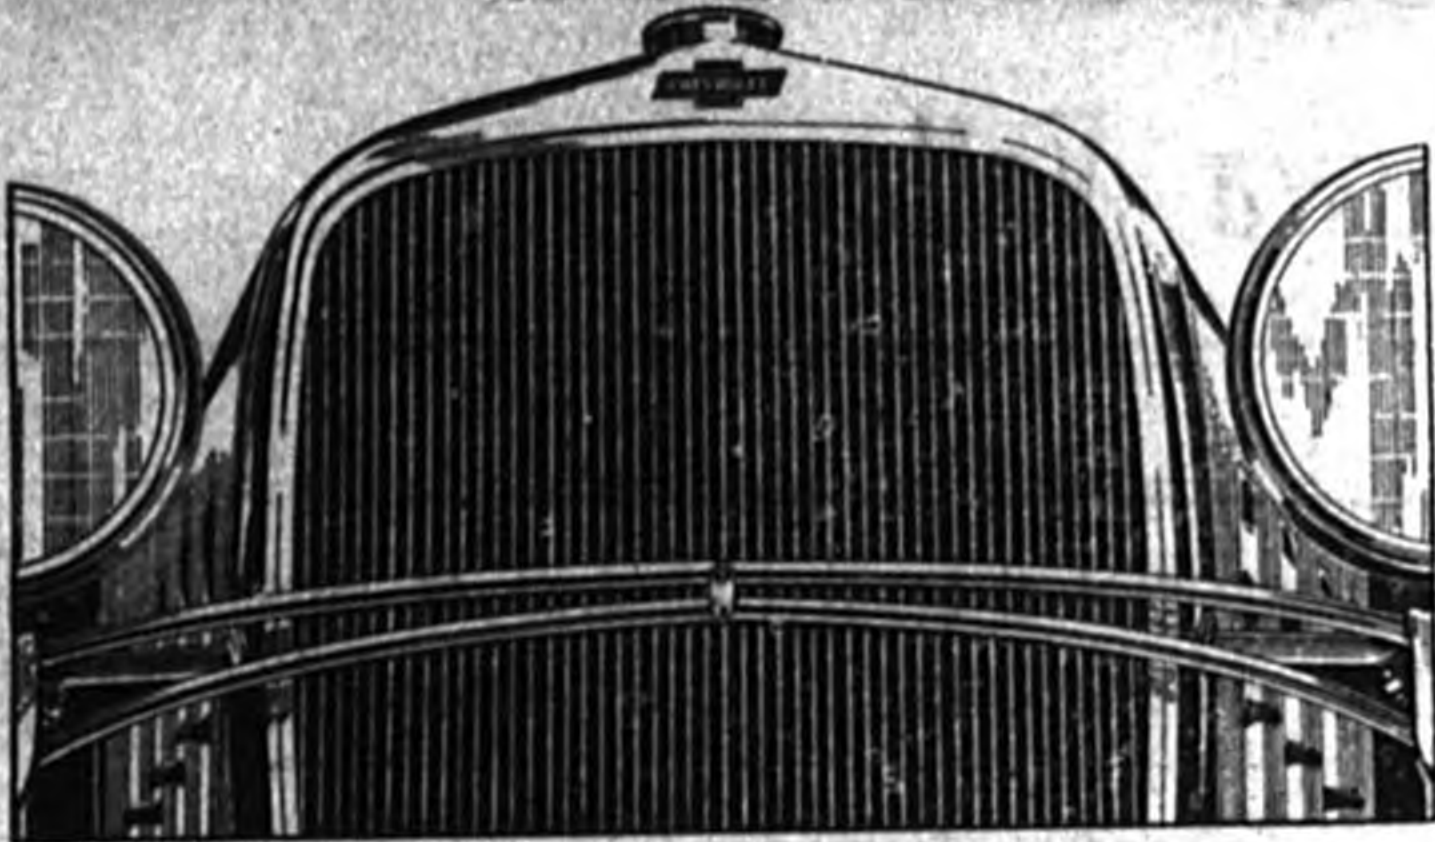

Because sewage from the Town of Buckingham was poured into Le Lievre River, thus depriving the village of Masson of its only source of water supply, the former municipality, by a judgment handed down by the Quebec Public Service Commission, was ordered to enlarge its water conduits from six to eight inches in diameter, at an estimated cost of upwards of $25,000, and pump water from Buckingham's aqueduct into that of Masson for the use of the residents of the latter municipality.

The commission also established water rates to be paid by the municipality of Masson for Buckingham's water as follows: Ten cents per 1,000 gallons for the first 50,000 gallons; six cents per 1,000 gallons for the next 50,000 gallons, and three cents per each 1,000 gallons of water over and above 100,000 gallons.

The minimum number of gallons to be used daily was set at 50,000. These rates, the commission ruled, could be rescinded within a year's time at the

"SPRING"

Dear Boys :—

This week I want to have a little talk with you on the subject of "SPRING".

SPRING is a wonderful time, which no doubt you know. It is a time when all the trees begin to bud, all the flowers begin to grow and everyone cheers up because it seems as if the whole world is being reborn.

This as you will appreciate is all very nice and makes us feel, all of us, very happy but I would remind you that even SPRING has its drawbacks. It is a time when poets begin to make their verses, some of which are almost as bad as those made by Henderson that you have read in our story, "The Return of Timothy." Editors, when they receive these poems and are asked to publish them, begin to feel that life has its darkest moments and determine to give up their job and go to sea.

SPRING also produces what is called "SPRING CLEANING." This is a disease which attacks the ladies of our homes and we return to find our most treasured possessions so carefully put away that it becomes almost impossible to find them and we are told that we should not expect to. But there, you know all about that because you are warned of what is going to happen to you if you dare to bring in even the smallest speck of dust or mud from outside.

Ah! well, life has its problems and in spite of what I have said, I am sure you will agree with me that it is a good thing SPRING is with us once more. You had better rescue your bathing costume anyway for the Lake is calling.

Your affectionate friend,
THE CAPTAIN.

"That will be splendid my boy," said the Duke smiling, at the same time linking his arm affectionately in that of his son.

Timothy wondered what it was that his father was going to talk to him about and several ideas flashed through his mind. Had his brother's difficulties been discovered and he was about to hear that arrangements were being made that would cause a separation between them for several years. Perhaps this was the reason his father was being so strangely gentle with him and he almost wished that he could be told right away and so end the suspense. Perhaps, but there, what was the good of speculating, already they were near the water's edge and approaching a comfortable seat which was just the place for a quiet and confidential talk.

"My boy," began the Duke, after they had seated themselves comfortably, "I have heard of something that has pleased me very much. Honestly, I did not think that you could have the courage to do so brave an action as to rush in, as you did, and take that little fellow out of that burning building. I am pleased that you have shown such courage and skill." There was a note of pride in the Duke of Winchelsea's voice and Timothy looked up at his father with no little surprise as this was not at all what he had expected to hear.

He was about to say something, when his father continued, "but my boy there is another matter that I have to talk to you about. Your brother Jack has written me a long letter in which he has made full confession of the wrong he has done and has told me how you have helped him. The doing of which has, I am afraid, lead you into much unhappiness. I am not here to find fault with you, my son, but I want to ask you this question. Why could you not trust me?"

For a moment or two there was silence. Timothy had his eyes fixed on some object out on the water, his hands were a little clenched and his lips were trembling. It seemed as if he wanted to say something but could not. The Duke moved a little closer to his boy and affectionately placed his arm round his shoulder.

"Timothy," he said, "I repeat my question. Why could you not trust me?"

The tears began to roll down Timothy's cheeks and then giving way altogether he said brokenly, "Oh daddy! I wish I had but I was afraid of you."

Not daring to look up at his father after making this confession, Timothy began vigorously to wipe his eyes with a handkerchief but had he glanced up even for a moment he would have noticed that his father was almost as much moved as he was himself.

For several minutes longer they sat together each occupied with their own thoughts but somehow or other each more contented that they had passed this short period of time together. It seemed to both father and son that they had never, until then, really understood each other.

However, an interruption came which was a relief and yet a regret to both. The bell of the old school chapel began to ring out chimes as a warning for all to assemble in the big school for the great moment had arrived at last when the ceremony was to take place.

"Is Mother here daddy?" asked Timothy as they walked together towards the building. "I do hope she is."

"Of course my boy," was the reply. "I left her talking to the headmaster because I wanted, as you know now to see you. I have not asked you my son, to in future give me your confidence because I think and know that you will. Am I right Timothy?"

Oh yes, daddy," came the earnest reply. "Never any more will I hide anything from you."

By this time they had reached the entrance of the chapel round which crowded the boys waiting permission to enter. Many curious glances were thrown at Timothy and at the tall stern aristocratic man who was his companion but a way was respectfully made for both as they passed under the ancient entrance to the chapel for the beginning of the day's festivities would be a short service of praise and thanksgiving for the successful ending of another school year.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in all Christian Science Services on Sunday, May 15.

The Golden Text is: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." (Romans 8: 16.)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon are the following from the bible "So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God." "But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ." "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." (Romans 8: 8, Eph. 4: 7 and I Cor. 15: 53).

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Christian Science Textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy. "This mortal seeming is temporal, it never merges into immortal being, but finally disappears, and immortal man, spiritual and eternal, is found to be the real man." "Mortals must gravitate Godward, their affections and aims grow spiritual....In order that sin and mortality may be put off." (Page 190 and Page 265.)

The Show, under the management of Messrs Geo. and John Thompson's laboratory, because they mistook the hum of an

here on Saturday night last, electric furnace for the song which the female of the species sends to attract them. The furnace was being used for fusing a 66-inch quartz disc to make an astronomical mirror, and its normal operating temperature was about 2,500 degrees Fahrenheit. When loaded at 800 k.w., the passage of the three phase, 60-cycle current caused a drone, which was evidently audible to, and mistaken by the insects in the intensive marshy district nearby. Prof. Thomson, commenting on this result says that in spite of the great swarm of insects, none of the men employed in the furnace house was bitten, as the males do not bite. He also suggests that it should be possible to organize an electro-magnetic hummer to attract the males, and thus reduce the laying power of the female. The result would be a great diminution in the mosquito population and even its total destruction.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Glassford were in Montreal last week, attending the funeral of his sister, the late Miss Olga B. Glassford. The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. Glassford in his sudden and sad bereavement.

The first meeting of the Junior W.A. was held in the Church Hall, on Saturday afternoon with an attendance of eight members. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting by the hostesses, the Misses Juanita Gallupe and Katie Craig.

FLOATING POWER

"We Can't Put It In Words

—but we can show you by a ride,"

says Walter P. Chrysler

"CANADA, by now, is filled with Floating Power boosters. The thousands who have accepted our invitation to a Floating Power Ride have had the thrill of their motoring life. Don't miss that thrill."

Walter P. Chrysler
President, Chrysler Corp. of Canada, Limited

Don't Miss Your Floating Power Ride!

To be up-to-date in motoring matters, you must know about Floating Power. Everybody is talking about it. You will, too, after enjoying a Floating Power Ride.

For a surprise and a thrill, call on any Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge or Chrysler dealer and tell him you want a Floating Power Ride. Or, if you prefer, ride with a friend who owns a Floating Power car. Let the car speak for itself.

If you want to know what Floating Power really is, you'll get the best answer behind the steering wheel of a Floating Power car.

I can't describe Floating Power for you. Neither can my engineers who perfected it. Nor the advertising men who write about it. And that goes for the thousands of owners who are enthusiastic about it, too.

I'm told that competition says their cars have Floating Power. That convinces me they don't know what it is. If they did, they wouldn't make such a statement.

Only four cars, you know, have Floating Power. They are Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge and Chrysler. For Floating Power is exclusive.

All I can tell you about Floating Power is that it will give you the smoothest performance and the easiest ride you've ever had.

If I went any stronger than that, you'd think I had no respect for the truth. I'd rather have you find out for yourself.

Again, I invite you to take a Floating Power Ride this week. It will surprise you. Thrill you as you haven't been thrilled since the day you first drove an automobile.

ANGLERS ARE BUSY

Anglers in the Province of Quebec were not able to get going as early this season as they were last year. In spite of mild weather throughout the earlier winter, the last few weeks tightened things up and April still found more ice in streams and lakes than obtained at the same time last year.

Last year the weather conditions were so unusually good that the Quebec government decided to relieve the suspense of anglers by setting back the opening of the trout fishing season to April 15, so giving an opportunity to get out two weeks earlier. This year, however, conditions were not so favorable and the opening date for trout was changed back to May 1st.

One has already encountered numerous fishermen on the high way, some bound on foot, and some by automobile, to their different destinations. And on the river banks one sees flares after dark. And in the pastures one beholds small boys digging diligently for worms. In fact, the season is on.

Reports are in circulation telling of large catches from the mountain creeks, but the lake trout seem to be a little backward.

Addressing these early enthusiasts by the wayside, one is struck again by the unflinching optimism which seems to brand the race. One is not so often rewarded, however, in seeing any substantial "catch"—nothing to warrant all this early enthusiasm. So far, we have personally met with little but the old-time alibi—Too wet—Too dry; Too hot—too cold; Too early—too late... as the case may be.

But then, the season is young yet. We may soon be publishing a choice line of fish stories.

A MUCH-NEEDED AMENDMENT

An amendment is to be made in the Criminal Code, whereby issuing of a cheque, dishonored by the bank for goods obtained, will be an offense under the "false pretence" section, unless issuer can show he had reason to believe that he had the money in the bank to meet the cheque. Such an amendment is very necessary. It will put an end to this class of "high finance," by which business men have frequently been defrauded.

LIFE-SAVING LEGISLATION

Ontario provincial traffic officers have issued warnings against driving horse vehicles at night without a light. No matter on what road, whatever distance travelled, or the conditions under which an accident may happen, the owner of a horse drawn vehicle which does not carry a light, is considered liable. Such drivers in Quebec will do well to heed the common-sense warning voiced by sister province.

Less than two cows out of every 100 in Canada are tested to learn anything about their milk yield or butter-fat test. Denmark dairymen are still way ahead of Canadians,—in scientific production.

DEATH

McOUAT.—At Lachute, Que., on Tuesday, May 10th., Walter McOuat, aged 82 years, 6 months.

TOWN OF BUCKINGHAM ORDERED TO ENLARGE CONDUITS

instigation of either municipality.

The commissioner's decree followed in the wake of action taken by the Quebec Bureau of Health against both the town of Buckingham and the village of Masson. Reason for the action was the bureau's desire to have both municipalities settle, once and for all, the question of supplying pure drinking water to Masson. This village charged that Le Lievre River water was polluted as result of the town of Buckingham's action in dumping its sewage in the river, and that its only source of water supply was thus cut off.

Cost Is Problem
Councillors for Buckingham admitted this fact, but replied that it would be too costly for the municipality to inaugurate any system by which the sewage would be disposed of further down the river, and any question of sterilizing the sewage before it was released into the river was also prohibited by cost. If the village of Masson wanted water, let it pay for a pumping system by which it could be supplied from the Buckingham aqueduct at reasonable rates, was the suggestion.

With a population of only 1,000, Masson village found itself unable to assume any such burden of expenditures.

This dispute has waged for months, until finally the Quebec Government stepped in through its Provincial Health Bureau and ordered both municipalities before the Quebec Public Service Commission for a settlement of these difficulties.

The commission's judgment surveyed the case from all angles; it recognized that alternative plans of supplying Masson village with water were costly, and decreed, in view of the fact that Buckingham had polluted Masson village's only source of water supply by dumping sewage in the river, that that municipality must enlarge its water conduits, at an estimated cost of $25,000, and supply Masson's aqueduct with water from the Buckingham reservoir. This work must be completed before August 1, 1932. Water rates to be paid to Buckingham by the village were set accordingly.

NOTICE

Several complaints are reported to the County Health Unit about garbage, rubbish, and waste matters in the yards and dependencies of many local dwellings. The undersigned therefore draws the attention of the public to the following Provincial By-laws:

No. 51. No dumping-place for garbage, rubbish, street scrapings, nightsoil or filth shall be established in a municipality without the permission of the Municipal Council of such municipality, and such dumping place must be at a distance of at least twelve hundred feet from any dwelling or any source from which drinking water is taken. The garbage, nightsoil and scrapings shall be covered with at least one foot of earth.

No. 52. In places where the Municipal Council does not provide for the removal of garbage, every householder shall burn it (the kitchen stove may be used) or bury it, at least, one foot underground, unless he uses it for manure, and, even in that case, such garbage shall be covered with earth or ashes, and shall never be buried at a lesser distance than one hundred feet from a well.

No. 54. On the 1st. of May of each year, all cellars, yards and dependencies of each house must be cleaned out, and all animal or vegetable matter removed.

No. 55. It is forbidden to deposit dead animals, garbage or filth in rivers, springs, cisterns, reservoirs, streams and ponds.

I urge all property owners and all municipal councils of this county to act in accordance with this regulation. It is the duty of all concerned to try and prevent the outbreak of contagious diseases, endemic or epidemic, and such outbreaks start mostly during summer. Every one is invited to co-operate with us; the county executive Inspector will be forced, by the complaints, to work in accordance with the regulations and must enforce observance of this Provincial By-Law.

WEDDING BELLS

Bradshaw—Cooke

An interesting wedding ceremony was quietly solemnized at the residence of Rev. L. F. Crothers, of 23 Front Street, Hull, Que., on Saturday, evening at eight o'clock, when Miss Grace Cooke, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Cooke, was united in marriage to Mr. William L. Bradshaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bradshaw, of Grenville, Que.

Rev. L. F. Crothers officiated and the bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Miss Maud Martin, as bridesmaid. Mr. Leslie Cooke brother of the bride was groomsmen.

The bride wore a lovely gown of independence blue crepe with a straw hat of the same shade and her corsage bouquet was of Sunset roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Miss Martin, the bridesmaid, was in a dress of black crepe with touches of white and she wore a black straw hat with white trimmings and a corsage bouquet of Sunset roses and sweet peas.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Cooke, wore a gown of black crepe and a smart black straw hat. Her corsage bouquet was of rosebuds and sweet peas.

Mrs. Bradshaw, of Grenville, mother of the groom, was wearing a gown of black satin and a black straw hat. Her corsage bouquet was composed of sweet peas and carnations.

Guests from out-of-town included the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Bradshaw, of Grenville, Que., and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Owen, of Stonefield, Que., brother-in-law and sister of the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents at 216 Primrose avenue, the rooms being adorned effectively with vases of roses, carnations, and mixed spring flowers.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw left by motor for Montreal and points east and on their return will take up residence in Grenville. For travelling the bride wore a crepe dress, coat and straw hat, all of a navy blue shade.

AN ACQUIRED TASTE

Did you know that a taste for maple syrup was an acquired one? I thought everyone liked it, just naturally, but it appears I am mistaken. There are three Englishwomen in the Bridge Club of which I am a member, and when someone mentioned maple syrup there was a regular groan went up from the Englishwomen. It appears they all had the same experience.
The first Spring that they were in Canada, everyone tried to give them a treat, and wherever they went they were given maple syrup. It was fairly forced down them, in large, generous, quantities. The consequence is that they shudder at the thought of it. The moral is:
Go easy with your maple syrup with non-Canadians.

CANADIAN VOICES

These same Englishwomen make me fairly green with envy every time I hear them speak, because their speaking voices are so lovely. They all speak nicely, but they might be graded, nice, nicer and nicest. And the "nicest" speaks so beautifully, that it is like listening to sweet music to hear her speak.

It is most unfortunate, albeit, very true, that the majority of Canadian voices are so flat and uninteresting. The down Easterners, especially the Nova Scoti-ans are the exception to this rule. Most of them have lovely speaking voices. There is a shade of difference even in the different neighboring localities.
Halifax people speak very similarly and have a most pleasing accent. Lunenburg people speak quite differently and it is possible to distinguish the Lunenburg accent even though they have not lived there for some years. When I was in Halifax ever so many told me that I spoke very like Mrs. So-and-So, whose home had been in Guelph.
As I had lived most of my life within forty miles of Guelph, I came to the conclusion that there must be a Wellington county accent.

When I hear some of the ap-paling accents of our teachers, it makes my heart ache for the pupils who are under them.
Voice culture could very properly be taught in the schools, but then I suppose there would be an outcry of "another frill."

SUGAR

We frequently hear of the great dietary changes there have been, even in our time. One of the greatest changes is the amazing consumption of sugar.
A century ago, 8.8 pounds a person was the amount used, now the average is 110 pounds a person. Not all of that amount is used in the home as a certain amount of it is used in the manufacture of candies, soft drinks, canned foods, condensed milk and so on, but eventually this food finds its way to someone's tummy. These figures are for American consumption, but our dietary habits are about the same, and Canadian figures will be found to be very similar.

Sugar (white) is a clean food easily assimilated, produces a large amount of energy. Is germ proof, unadulterated, cheap, and completely digested, leaving no residue. Therein lies one of its drawbacks. We need bulk and residue. It contains neither minerals nor vitamins, and there is a real danger if too much of our energy comes from sugar.

FLUFFY ICING

There is a woman in our community who sells home-baked cakes with the most delicious icing. It is white and fluffy and is very thick, standing up in peaks. One of our friends served a cake with a nice icing, but she was very dissatisfied with it as she had been aiming at a fluffy icing. Several others confessed that they had tried it and were not able to get the desired results. So they appealed to me to see if I knew how it was done. I was quite sure I did as I had made the icing but not recently. Of course the first thing I did next morning was to make a cake with a Fluffy Icing—you know how it is, when you are more or less challenged, you can't wait to try. The icing is not hard to make. It just happened that these women did not have the right recipe. One of them had, but she used a small quantity and it did not seem the same. A great part of the attraction of this particular cake is the lavishness of the icing. Here is the recipe.

2 egg whites.
1 cup water
2 cups granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar.

Mix the ingredients in the top of the double boiler and cook over hot water beating with a Dover beater until the icing is of the right consistency to spread. This icing is sometimes called Seven Minute Icing, because you are supposed to beat it for 7 minutes. Conditions may differ but I have never seen it cooked in 7 minutes. I took much longer to cook this icing until it was firm enough to stand in peaks. If you wanted spread it on smoothly, it need not be cooked quite so long.
Spreading the icing with peaks makes it more attractive looking. Vanilla or other flavoring should be added just before spreading. The cream of tartar strengthens the cells of the egg whites and helps it to hold its shape. This icing will not run, holds its shape, is firm on the outside and stays soft inside. Have your cake cold before spreading.

To make this cake I use my 2 egg recipe and use one whole egg and 2 egg yolks instead of the usual 2 eggs. This leaves 2 egg whites for the icing. Here is a very satisfactory recipe for a plain cake.

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg
2 egg yolks
13-4 cups flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
Half cup milk

Cream the butter and sugar.
Add the well-beaten eggs. Add milk and sifted dry ingredients alternatively. Bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees.

WEDDING BELLS

Tompkins—Chapman.

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Chapman, on Wednesday evening, April 27th., at 4 o'clock, when their only daughter, Viola Elizabeth was united in marriage to Harris James Tompkins, youngest son of the late John and Mrs.
Tompkins.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father looked charming in a gown of ivory satin with shoes to match, and wore a tulle veil arranged in cap effect, reaching to the floor. She carried a shower bouquet of carnations and roses tied with satin ribbons.

Miss Pearl Bradford, niece of the groom was bridesmaid, she wore a gown of pencil blue crepe with shoes and stockings to match. Mr. Wm. John Chapman, brother of the bride acted as groomsmen. Rev. A. E.
Mount performed the ceremony and during the signing of the register, Mr. Leonard Legg sang
"The Voice that Breathed O'er

Eden." A tasty and bountiful supper was served to some thirty guests. Mr. and Mrs. Tompkins left on the morning train for a trip to Niagara, Buffalo and other points, on their return they will reside in Lachute.

the Biggest Clean-up in all Paint Selling History

Once we had tested and proved the new Ramsay All-Canadian Paint, made with the correct proportioning of lead, zinc and linseed oil, there was only one thing left to do. And we did it.

Called in every tin of the old Ramsay paint in Eastern Canada, for, good as the old paint was, the new was head and shoulders above it. And above every other paint made to hitherto accepted standards.

In all the annals of the paint trade there has never been such a wonderful new paint as Ramsay's All-Canadian.

Use the new Ramsay's on this year's paint jobs. It costs no more than ordinary paint yet gives unlimited extras... in coverage, opacity, gloss, colour-fastness and resistance to the elements.

It is so good that we are staking our 90-year All-Canadian reputation on it. At the dealers listed below.

THE LITTLE THEATRE

Henry Traylor, City Manager of Janesville, Wisconsin, outlines a successful venture in Community Recreation, which he describes as a distinct asset to his municipality.

The Little Theatre in Janesville has certainly proven itself a vital force in the recreation program of that city. The movement boasts a membership well over a thousand. All of these members are not participants in the actual productions. The group is split up into those who are interested in the various items that go to make up stage productions. There are play reading groups, directors' groups, actors' groups, stage management groups, scene painting groups, stage electric light groups, stage music groups, etc. until the active participating members number over 250 people. The others obtain their recreation in watching the performers and play reading. The membership fee is only one dollar per year which entitles the member to attend all performances. During the play year lasting from October to May, the Little Theatre puts on about ten one act plays, and three major productions. The casts for the major productions are picked from those participating in the one act plays. The idea is to present as finished a performance as possible in the major production, without inflicting actors onto the memberships who have had absolutely no stage experience. The entire movement is open to everybody in the community and there is no attempt to keep the membership confined to a picked or chosen group of people. In this way the movement has been kept a community project.

The city furnishes the entire upper storey of the public library, a rather large space, for the rehearsals of all productions and also for the painting of all scenery and the storing of all equipment. This is done at no cost to the group. The major productions are staged at the high school auditorium, the use of which is provided free. The entire movement is self-supporting and each year the one dollar fee from the thousands of members is enough to cover all costs of operation, all royalties, and all incidental expenses.

My reaction to the Little Theatre as a city official has been that in a community the size of Janesville with its 21,600 people, any recreational idea that can appeal to over 1,000 adults and take up the slack in their leisure time from October to May of each year is a mighty leap forward in the program of recreation for all. Every person who has a hobby to take up his leisure time makes a better citizen and a finer workman. The complete relaxation that comes from doing what we like to do is a better tonic than anything the best doctors can prescribe.

I have been intensely interested in the Little Theatre as a part of a community recreation program because of its appeal to adults. We have been able to devise many activities that keep our younger folks interested but our adult groups have been seeking their recreation in the seat of an automobile and the card tables. A movement that will develop an interest in drama and music surely brings with it the desire to improve the mind by reading. As a by-product of the Little Theatre movement we have been developing among the membership a more intense library habit. People can spend pleasant leisure hours in company with a good book. Adult recreation for those who cannot afford to buy it, in my mind, is one of the most important parts of the recreation program.

The city of Janesville has also provided a meeting room for some 1,500 citizens of Janesville interested in patriotic societies. Programs, dances, suppers, entertainments and other forms of amusements are being constantly sponsored by these groups for their own membership. The cost to the city is nominal and the leisure time activity it supplies to the 1,500 adults is of vital importance to the welfare of Janesville.

Thus we have two groups, the Little Theatre with its 1,000 interested members and the patriotic group with its 1,500 active participants. These two movements are taking care of part of the leisure time of over 2,500 adults in the city of Janesville. No one can fail to understand the value of these programs to the general welfare of the community.

The Little Theatre movement in the smaller towns can become one of the leading activities in

IS BEEKEEPING AN INDUSTRY?

Jefferson C. Grinnalds of Baltimore submits a brand new problem. Mr. Salley, disabled war veteran, seeks to eke out his income by keeping three hives of bees in a back room on the third floor of his home in Baltimore. A neighbor, claiming that she was stung by one of the bees, complained to the authorities. The Board of Health claimed that it was not up to it to oust the hives as beekeeping was not a matter of public health. When the complaint came to the ingenious building inspector (not Mr. Grinnalds) he declared that Mr. Salley was carrying on an industry in a residence district and must quit. Mr. Salley replied that he did not make the honey. It was the bees which were doing what they had a perfect right to do. Neither did he sell the honey. He said that he and his family ate it, to the extent of 183 pounds last year. They liked honey. Moreover, Mr. Salley, asserted that the neighbor could not prove that it was one of his bees that did the stinging, and that the apiarists' society to which he belongs claims that no member can be held responsible until the stung person can prove who owned the bee. He says that his bees are harmless and he produces a photograph to show that his four-year-old daughter plays with the bees and they crawl all over her. Nevertheless, the building inspector decided that the bees must go because they constitute an industry in a residence district. Mr. Salley has appealed to the Board of Appeals.

So now the bee case is on its way to court. We prophesy (that is, Mr. Grinnalds and the writer) that the bees will leave a long trail of trouble through the Board of Appeals and the courts. The building inspector would have been wiser to let the bees alone. He admits that he has not identified the bee. Mr. Salley says that more than a thousand people in Baltimore keep bees, and that if he conducts an industry, then they all conduct industries and must be suppressed.

The case has a serious side along with much instruction. The Roundtable has referred to similar problems,—that of the chicken farm, the duck farm, and the moveable rabbit hutches. An interesting court opinion has recently been handed down in Connecticut (Chudnoy v. Board of Appeals of Town of Bloomfield, 154 Atl. 161) holding that a chicken farm is not a farm such as can be maintained in a residence district. Of course, the building inspector should have let the bees alone. So far as zoning goes, the keeping of bees is an incidental home use. In many cities bees are kept numerous in suburban localities. Beekeepers know that they cannot keep a large number of hives because the radius of the bee is only about three miles, and the various groups of hives must be well separated. Hives will not prosper if they are too numerous in one spot. Probably administrators of zoning will not be troubled by honey-making as an industry.

There is no doubt that the council of Baltimore has power to regulate the keeping of honeybees. It could pass an ordinance excluding hives from thickly-settled parts of the city. Probably the council would be unwilling to extend such exclusion to the outlying sections. The enforcement of this ordinance might be left to the police or the board of health or some other suitable department. It should not be left to the zoning authorities.

Some people think that zoning is a new discovery that will cure everything. It probably will not cure loud-speakers, scolding neighbors, or the vicarious honey-bee.

that community. However, it must always be operated on a broad plan so that the appeal will be to the community at large. It should spread the idea that all adults in the community are welcome to enter and participate; the opportunity for expression shall be denied no one who has ability. Broadcast the thought that the entire movement is not being fostered to train a chosen few but rather to gather together people of all walks in life who are interested in the play and its production, and who hope to receive as their reward the satisfaction of having spent many happy hours in doing something that they really enjoy doing

"I'll see if Ella can come"

The very day visitors were coming, Bob Emery's wife caught a bad chill. She tried to keep going, but it was obvious that she would have to go to bed.

"Now don't worry," Bob said, "Ella's only 30 miles away. I'll just get her on the telephone and see if she can't come and help us out."

A few minutes later they had Ella's cheery promise. Once more, in an emergency, Long Distance had proved quick, dependable — and surprisingly inexpensive.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Two Smiths Falls men, Harold Edgers and Henry McConnell, sustained slight injuries and narrowly escaped more serious effects by an accident in which the flywheel of the truck which they were driving, burst and hurled pieces through the floor of the cab. Mr. McConnell's right leg was severely bruised while his companion also suffered painful effects.

Mayor Webb, of Winnipeg, would like to see all newspaper editors starve. Unless there is a more generous response from back-subscribers of The Watchman, the Mayor may rest assured that one editor at least will soon go hungry.

"Dear May," wrote the young man, pardon me, but I'm getting so forgetful, I proposed to you last night, but really forget whether you said 'yes' or 'no'. "Dear Will," she replied by note "so glad to hear from you, I know I said 'no' to some one last night, but I had forgotten just who it was."

Large Attendance at Ceremony

Mrs. Jno. Mackie Lays Corner-Stone of New Presbyterian Church

The ceremony of laying the corner-stone of the new Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church was largely attended by members and friends of that body, when on Saturday afternoon they gathered to participate in the service of dedication.

Those taking part in the proceedings were the Rev. P. Sampson, Moderator of the Assembly; Rev. A. S. Reid, D.D., Clerk of Synod of Montreal and Ottawa; Rev. Jas. Adams of Montreal West; Rev. Dr. R. L. Ballantyne, of St. Andrews East, and the Rev. Malcolm Campbell, D.D., who gave a very inspiring address.

Before calling upon Mrs. Mackie to lay the corner-stone, Rev. Henry Cousens announced that the sealed box to be deposited contained the history of Presbyterianism in this community to the present day, along with an account of the life and work of the late Miss Rodger, copies of the Lachute Watchman, the Gazette and the Montreal Star, coins and stamps of current issue, and also copies of last year's Annual Report of the Church.

Mrs. Mackie then came forward, and with the silver trowel placed the mortar and graciously declared the stone to be well and truly laid.

The history of the Presbyterian Church, which appears elsewhere in these columns and is now preserved in the masonry of the new edifice, will, we are sure, be read with keen interest.

Several of our Academy athletes are entering in the McGill inter-collegiate track meet to be held at the Molson Stadium on May 24th. Numerous Montreal and rural high schools are participating in the events, including our neighboring high school of Hawkesbury. Lachute boys brought home the laurels last year and credit to the Academy in several classes of contest. It is fondly hoped they will continue the good record and meet with further triumphs in the approaching McGill rally. It is understood the local Academy is also competing at Cornwall, Ont. on June 4th., for Dominion inter-scholastic championships.

Canada Selling More to Britain

Canada is selling more to Great Britain. Detailed figures tabled in the House of Commons revealed a steadily increasing trade.

British purchases of Canadian wheat in the four months ending April 30, amounted to 9,104,000 hundredweights of 112 pounds, compared with 7,074,000 hundredweights in the corresponding period of 1931. Imports of Russian wheat dropped again. For the month of April there were only 5,200 hundredweights against 1,337,000 in April, 1931.

Imports of Canadian bacon, for the four months ending April 30, amounted to 57,275 hundredweights, a heavy increase compared to the 4,695 of the corresponding period of 1931.

Imports of Canadian cheese, although showing a decrease in the month of April, had a remarkable increase in the four month period of from 6,387 to 21,065 hundredweights.

The total British purchases of Canadian merchandise in the quarter ending March 31, it was also shown, were $8,360,000 against $6,160,000 in the corresponding quarter of 1931.

United Kingdom products exports to Canada in the quarter ending March 31, totalled $3,475,000 against $4,048,000 in the corresponding quarter of last year.

Summer Activities Occupy Branches of W.I.

Report from Argenteuil County

With the opening of the summer season Quebec Women's Institute members are turning their faces to the great outdoors and are planning social gatherings suited to the season, as well as keeping an eye open for the needs and progress of both flower and vegetable gardens. From the Q.W.I. headquarters comes the following report of recent activities within Argenteuil County.

Chatham Branch arranged a community social evening to be held early in May. An address on the timely topic of Agriculture was the principal item on the programme. Frontier was occupied with arrangement for the annual county convention. A successful social and fancy work contest was held during the month. The needs of the poor were considered at the meeting of Jerusalem-Bethany Branch and supplied as far as possible. Lachute Branch, the youngest in the Province is up-to-date in its methods, choosing as the subject of study, Perennials. The speaker was Mr. Walker, of Macdonald College, and his helpful advice will be of great assistance to flower lovers in Lachute. Lakefield's meeting was held under difficulties, sickness keeping many away. Morin Heights had practically an all-Canadian programme—Canadianization, National Events, Canadian Industries and Industrial Schools all receiving attention. Upper Lachute Branch took advantage of the maple sugar season to hold a taffy party for the school children. A sale of useful articles provided funds for the work of the Branch. Pioneer Branch sent a flower "shower" to a sick friend. An octogenarian member was presented with a life membership certificate and pin on her birthday.

The Sports Motor Cycle Club of Montreal selected Lachute as the scene of their trials last Sunday, and the number of smart solo and side-car outfits assembled on our Main Street aroused considerable interest. Trial runs were held, to compete for different trophies, and keen competition was shown between the machines in various classes of cylinder capacity.

1832 the members residing in Lachute and neighbourhood "petitioned the Session to disjoin them from the church at St. Andrews" that they might be formed into a distinct church of the same denomination under the pastoral care of the Rev. Wm. Brunton, who then ministered among them. This petition was granted by the session at St. Andrews on July 11th., 1832, and the Presbyterian Church at Lachute entered upon a separate and independent existence just 100 years ago on July 11th., of this year.

The Rev. Mr. Brunton, who had resigned his charge in Ste. Therese in November 1831, was chosen as the first minister of the new congregation and promised "an annual stipend of $246.00." The Rev. Mr. Brunton is spoken of by his successor at Ste. Therese, Rev. David Black as "a sound and practical preacher, being a man of very extensive learning, and deep acquaintance with the Scriptures, and a most exemplary character, a perfect Nathaniel in temper and disposition." Under the guidance of such a leader, well might the people "rally" as they did, in a spirit of brotherhood and unity, to support the cause of Christ and to establish His Kingdom in their midst. Encouraged by the growth of the congregation and urged on by a desire to have a suitable place of worship, the people decided to build a church which they began in 1833 and completed in 1834. This was the first church in the settlement, as well as the First Presbyterian Church of Lachute. The building was a plain stone structure, large and commodious and bespoke the sanguine hopes of the congregation in the future success of their church. The Church prospered until the death of the Rev. Mr. Brunton on August 12th., 1839 made it necessary to call another minister.

The congregation was composed of adherents to the "United Secession" and the "Church of Scotland," and this constitutes the rock on which, in the selection of a minister, the Union Church of 1839 divided into separate congregations just 93 years ago.

Preparations for the Fair

Do you realize that in less than a month's time we shall be in the midst of our Annual Exhibition? The dates set are June 15-16-17-18 and they will soon be upon us. The Board of Directors have, with the Secretary-Treasurer, A. Bothwell, been studying and laying plans for the success of this year's fair. One thing is sure, they have wisely decided to keep up and maintain the reputation now held and they have secured a splendid programme of entertainment both interesting, instructive and amusing. To those who vie with each other in the show ring we are assured of the keenest competition in all classes as many enquiries bespeak the large entries.

It is good news that the ladies of the Red Cross have again undertaken to handle the Dining and Refreshments Stands, so that the public may be sure of receiving the best of meals and careful attention.

That First Impression

Did you ever stop to think of the influence of first impressions? Just throw your memory back to the trips you have made while on motor tours or when visiting friends in neighboring towns and cities. How you are sometimes delighted at the evident pride, and at other times almost disgusted by the apparent indifference of the inhabitants. The influx of cars bring many thousands of tourists in the passing and it is suggested by the Board of Trade that the Town Council should put up large signs, bearing the name of our town in large letters, followed by the words, Gateway to the Laurentians.

Lachute is naturally a pretty town, beautifully situated on the Main Highway between Montreal and Ottawa, but we can still make it more attractive by seeing that the streets are kept clean and our homes painted and trimmed up. Let us get busy and lend the ready helpful hand to boost this town as a prosperous and contented community.

History of the Presbyterian Church in Lachute

The settlement of Lachute began in the year 1796, and for several years there were but few settlers in the community. At this time the territory, now known as the counties of Two Mountains and Argenteuil, was embraced in the county of York, and in all this extensive tract of country there was no Presbyterian minister of the Gospel until the year 1818. In the year 1816 sixty-four persons, feeling the need of regular Gospel ordinances, signed a document binding themselves to pay £101 annually for the support of a minister, and appointed the Rev. Robert Easton, of Montreal, John Hutchins and Phineas Hutchins, of Lachute, and Benjamin Wales and Wm. G. Blanchard, of St. Andrews, a committee to correspond "with the friends and promoters of Christianity in Britain," with a view to securing the services of a "faithful minister of the Gospel."

Rev. Mr. Easton was pastor of a Presbyterian Church on St. Peter Street, Montreal, in connection with the Associate (or Burgher) Synod of Scotland, and he communicated with Rev. Dr. Jas. Hall, of Edinburgh, "a leading minister of the Associate Synod," who brought the matter before his Presbytery. After some delay and disappointment Rev. Dr. Hall succeeded in securing the services of Rev. Archibald Henderson, M.A., of Carlisle, England, "who after due consideration accepted the appointment" and came to St. Andrews in the summer 1818. With Rev. Mr. Henderson's appointment came also financial assistance from the British Government, which had agreed to pay annually £100 sterling, "in addition to such provision as might be made for him by the settlers." Thus was the first Presbyterian Church established in St. Andrews 124 years ago, under the pastoral charge of Rev. Mr. Henderson, who did not confine his labors to St. Andrews, but preached the Gospel in many of the outlying districts and thus were established as the population increased, separate congregations. From 1818-1832 the Presbyterians at Lachute formed part of the congregation at St. Andrews, but in

The meeting was resumed, following the brief adjournment and Ald. C. R. Miller, seconded by Ald. J. A. Rice, moved that By-law 126 above referred to, be declared as read the third time. Carried, Ald. J. B. Raymond and O. Laurin again dissenting.

It was then moved by C. R. Miller, seconded by J. P. MacKimmie, that the voting on said By-law 126 be held on Wednesday and Thursday, June 8th.—9th. Carried.

Moved by Alderman C. R. Miller, seconded by Ald. J. B. Raymond, that tenders be called for installation of a hot-air furnace, burning either wood or coal, at the Victoria Hall. Tenders must mention a separate price, for furnace to heat the whole building and for furnace to heat the building less portion used as Fire Hall. Carried.

Moved by Ald. C. R. Miller, seconded by Ald. R. Ledoux that S. Laurin be instructed to build a concrete floor in cellar of the Victoria Hall at a price of $69. Carried.

Three men who were arrested two weeks ago at Napanee for stealing a car at Vanklee Hill, last fall, and also for holding up a storekeeper at McAlpine, came up before magistrate Lawlor last week, and all pleaded guilty. They were each given two years at the Kingston Penitentiary. There were half dozen charges for which they pleaded guilty.

United Y. P. Society Hold an "At Home"

Splendid Gathering Assembles in the Church Hall

The regular weekly meeting of the Lachute United Church Y. P. S. held on Monday last, was arranged in a form of an "At Home," for the pleasure of relatives and friends of the members. It was very encouraging to the younger folk to see a generous gathering of older people present, thereby showing their keen interest in the splendid work the Y. P. S. is doing, not only to the youth of the church, but to the whole community at large.

After the usual periods of business and devotion, President Melville Smith expressed his delight in seeing such a splendid attendance, and on behalf of the society extended a cordial welcome to those present.

A very pleasing program of musical selections and readings was participated in by several club members, which indeed were appreciated.

The humorous contribution of the evening was entitled "A Womanless Wedding" wherein a number of our male members really flattered those of the opposite sex with their fine make-up, and will at anytime, free of charge, give the secrets of beauty preparation, to any fair lady who wishes to apply for same. The dialogue that was cleverly and humorously written, featured a husky bride with a fragile groom,—"two fools, wishing to act as one" with the assistance of a bespectacled minister. The bridal chorus is played, and here comes the bride holding the groom, with steady, secure grip, who seems to tremble at its touch. The bridesmaid, dressed all in white, carrying a bouquet of plum blossoms is next, followed by the groomsmen, father of the bride, and close relatives. The ceremony is peacefully performed, except for a slight disturbance, when the rejected lover objects and the bride faints,—but the ring is placed, and the "two fools" embrace as one.

Refreshments of dainty and careful preparation were then served, after which a sincere vote of thanks was expressed by Mr. A. McOuat to the Y.P.S. The hearty gathering joined in a merry sing-song, closing with "God Save the King."

Hawkesbury Libel Case Woods vs. Auger

Mr. Auger in his paper "Le Peuple" of Hawkesbury, Ont., has published articles which Mr. Woods, Mayor of Hawkesbury, claims are defamatory libel and detrimental to his reputation as a man of integrity and honesty and for that reason has taken criminal proceedings against Mr. Auger to prove that the statements are false and malicious. The case came up before magistrate Lawlor in Hawkesbury last week. Mr. C. W. A. Marion, Crown Attorney, represented the Crown and Mr. Woods at the hearing, when the case was further adjourned for a few days.

Mr. Auger was remanded on a $500. bail.

Following the adjournment, Mr. Marion withdrew from the case, upon instructions from the Attorney-General's Department that it was not interested in the case. As a result, John B. Woods the complainant, will conduct the prosecution on his own behalf.

Mr. Woods has also taken an action for $25,000 against "Le Progres" of Hull, for having printed Mr. Auger's paper, "Le Peuple," which contained the libellous articles complained of. The case has been adjourned until Friday, 20th. inst.

The "United Secession Church" remained in the stone building and has since been known as the First Presbyterian Church. Its first minister was the Rev. Andrew Kennedy, who was succeeded in 1851 by the Rev. Walter Scott. In 1856 Rev. Mr. Scott resigned his charge of the congregation and was succeeded by the Rev. John Mackie, who was inducted on the 18th. day of May 1859, although he had ministered to the congregation previous to that date. Rev. Mr. Mackie continued the faithful pastor of the church until the month of April 1898, when, at the advanced age of 76, he resigned on account of failing health.

The "Church of Scotland" congregation continued its connection with the Scottish Church until the disruption in 1844 "when, with the concurrence of the congregation and at the desire of the minister, their connection with the Church of Scotland ceased and they joined the Presbyterian Free Church of Canada." Although ministered to for a time by the Rev. Mr. Blood, its first regular minister was the Rev. Thomas Henry, who was inducted in 1842 and remained pastor until 1862. It was during the Rev. Mr. Henry's ministry that the congregation, in 1851 erected their beautiful and spacious brick church. It might be well to state that during the period from 1839 to 1851 both congregations worshipped in the same church with but one interruption, when the Seceding minister (name not known) locked the building and the Free Church people held service in the graveyard the minister using a tombstone for a pulpit. This action apparently was not approved of by his congregation. The Rev. John Eadie was the next minister until 1870, when he removed to another field of labour and was succeeded by the Rev. William Furlong in 1872, whose pastorate extended until 1892, when he resigned and was followed by the Rev. Nathan Waddell, B.D., who was inducted February 3rd., 1893 and was pastor until 1899.

"CHANGES"

Dear Boys :-

Have you ever experienced the sensation of not knowing exactly where you are? I am prompted to ask you this question because the other day, wishing to pay a visit to a young boy friend of mine, I went to his house where he had always lived only to discover that it was occupied by strangers.

On May 1st. he had moved and his family had moved with him. This started me thinking on the subject of MOVING. What a lot of changes there are always happening in this world. We experience them as soon as we are born because we start by being a baby, then we become a child, later we are called a boy or girl, as the case may be, after which we become men or women.

All these things, in themselves, are changes but this constant alteration in our lives does not only take place outwardly but inwardly also for our ideas as well as our character undergo a CHANGE. We think differently, act differently, the result being that we naturally surround ourselves at times with CHANGES of environment and habitation. These CHANGES are often at times so rapid that we become bewildered just as my little friend was when he was showing me over his new home, and plaintively remarked, "I don't know where I am. I am always going in at the wrong door."

Do you see what I mean? We, all of us, have to learn by experience and to discover for ourselves the right door and use it.

Did I say everything under-went a CHANGE and if I did, I am wrong—two things, FAITH and LOVE do not CHANGE. If we have these things, nothing else, after all, really matters.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

Continued

At the conclusion of this short service, both boys and guests made their way across the College field towards Big School. There the speeches were to take place and the prizes donated to those boys who had done well in their examination at the end of the school year.

Timothy had bidden farewell to his Father and had, with a far happier look on his face, joined the other members of his class but with little hope or expectation that his name would be called among those who were to receive prizes. He had caught sight of Eric but was too far away to do anything more than give him a smile, which because it was so unexpected, had thoroughly upset that young gentleman who turned in amazement to Kenrick, who was sitting at his side, and said in a whisper. "Did you see that Ken?"

"See what," retorted his chum, who had his eyes fixed upon the Doctor, who at that moment had mounted the platform, in all the glory of his Scarlet Hood, to take his place as Headmaster.

Eric gave an exclamation of disgust. "Why, Timothy smiled at me," he said impatiently.

Kenrick grinned and replied, "Well what if he did. This is a free country and a fellow can smile if he wants to though," he added thoughtfully, "you are right. It is a bit astonishing for a fellow like that to do a thing like that."

"Hush!" cautioned Henderson, who had made himself comfortable just behind the other two. "The proceedings are about to commence."

It is not my purpose here to give any detailed account of this gathering. Most of it consisted of speeches by the Headmaster, giving a detailed account of the school's work of the year. A talk by the Duke of Winchelsea in his capacity as one of the Governors of the School. The reproduction in part of one of Shakespeare's plays by the Senior Form. All of which though of tremendous interest to most of those present, somewhat wearied our own particular bunch of heroes.

"What absolute rot," confided Henderson in a subdued whisper into Eric's ear, which sentiment was so much in agreement with his own that he felt.

Almost bound to give way to an uncontrolled fit of laughter but just then a diversion took place in the form of Mr. Lawrence.

Rising in his place, at the conclusion of the applause, that was the reward of the heroic efforts made by the actors in the aforesaid play. A few of those nearest to him became aware that the master held in his hand a little case. When silence had been reached, rather nervously, he began to speak.

"It was not my intention to take any part in this morning's farewell celebrations, but a duty has been given me that I feel bound to perform. As most of you are aware, a little while ago, a serious fire broke out in the School Sanatorium. At the time of the outbreak only one boy by name, Eric Sellencourt, occupied this part of the school building. Very few in the excitement remembered he was there, indeed hardly any knew of the fact, and he would undoubtedly have lost his life but for the courage and quick thinking of one of his school fellows. With supreme bravery, this boy disregarding any consequences that might come upon him for his act, rushed into the place of danger and brought out into safety the little boy."

"I have here in my hand," went on the master holding out to full view the little case he had been holding, "a medal, which is only given to those who have earned it by self-sacrifice and devotion to duty. It is my purpose, in a minute or two, to ask this boy to come forward and receive it when I shall hand it to him on behalf of the school which he has so honoured but—", and there a very earnest note crept into his voice, "before I do so, I have a statement to make. This boy is not new to the school. He has been here before but last year left us under a cloud of suspicion. On his return, at the beginning of this term, as I considered that these suspicions had as yet not been cleared away I withheld from him my respect and dealt with him in a way which I now see to be both unkind and unjust. For the changing of my opinion, the act for which this medal is to be rewarded, has nothing to do. It was by means of the influence and I believe work on his behalf of a very gracious lady, that was responsible."

"I am glad, more glad than I can say," he continued, "to be given this opportunity of publicly stating that M. T. Lacey Montague, son of the Duke of Winchelsea and known to all of us as Timothy, stands before us to-day as an upright and honorable as well as brave boy and I would ask him now to step up and receive at my hands but from the whole school, this silver medal."

All the while the master had been speaking these words, a deep hush had fallen over the audience. It had not been easy for this proud man to make his statement and there were many present, who realized something of the effort he must have put forth in the cause of justice.

For a second or two after he had finished speaking there was silence and then as Timothy, his face rather white, made his way slowly towards the platform, such a tumult of applause broke out as rarely had been heard within the walls of this old and ancient building.

What more is there really to say. Where better could I leave Timothy than in the midst of the joy brought about by his reinstatement for the story is finished and we will leave him and his companions on the threshold of their school life.

Perhaps it will be well to add that Timothy did spend many of the long days of summer with Eric during which time their friendship became a very real and important thing in their lives.

In a corner of the field on this memorable day, three friends might have been seen closely talking together. They were Kenrick, Henderson and Eric. Something had been said about Mr. Lawrence, much had been spoken of the happy events just concluded but it was left to Kenrick to say.

"Well Eric, we have had, at least you have had, first term of school but I think all of us have a great deal to be thankful at THE RETURN OF TIMOTHY."

LETTERS OF ADVICE

Have you ever wondered if people really wrote letters asking for advice to the papers, or were these letters written in the newspaper office? I know I used to wonder about that same thing, and have my doubts about it. However, I changed my mind after starting this column, and I do not pretend to write an advice column. One of my friends used to work on a large city daily. This paper had an advice column which did not amount to much as it answered only a few letters each week. They turned this work over to her and apparently she took the work very seriously and had a particular aptitude for it, because the letters increased until in a short time they were averaging about 100 letters a week. She made such a success of it that a weekly magazine asked her to take over their advice column and she built that up until there were around another hundred letters coming to her there, too.

Imagine listening to the troubles of 200 people a week! Finally, she was worrying about other people's troubles all the time and got so that she could not get them off her mind. She has a lively disposition and at that time was in her twenties, although her readers thought she was much older. It got so on her nerves that she asked to be relieved of it, but she was too much of a success and they insisted that she keep on with it. Not being able to persuade her superiors to relieve her of the advice column, she at last resigned and went to work on a paper in another city. It gave her a wealth of experience and she knows human nature as people do. People will unburden their hearts to a complete stranger as they never would to a person they know personally.

VARIETIES IN FLOUR

Millers make flours that are specially suited for different purposes, and it would be well to check up and see that you are using the correct type of flour. First there is a real flour, which is used for bread making chiefly. This flour does not make a good pie and pastry. Then, there is Household flour. This is a general utility flour and will make both bread and cake. It does not make as successful pastry as a flour milled for that purpose, called Pastry flour. I would advise having more than one kind of flour, if you make your own bread. Keep the pastry flour on hand too. There is a finely milled package flour that is used for cake making. Very successful cakes may be made with Pastry Flour, but if you are very particular it would be advisable to use the cake flour, although to my mind it is not necessary. Sometimes, though I use it if I want to be specially fussy. I find that women who never make bread are using Household flour. This is a mistake as Pastry flour should be used to make tender pastry. If you are not sure what kind of flour you are using, look on your flour bag and find out. Then if you are not using the variety best suited to your needs change your flour and see if you are not pleased with results.

SALAD DRESSINGS FOR SPRING SALADS

Boiled Dressing

3 teaspoons mustard
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon flour
2 eggs
2 tablespoons butter.
4 tablespoons sugar
3-4 cup vinegar
1/4 cup water
1 cup milk
Dash of pepper
Mix the mustard, flour, sugar salt, and pepper with the cold water. Add beaten eggs, vinegar and butter. Cook until it comes to a oil stirring steadily. Reduce the heat and add the milk a little at a time and cook until it again comes almost to the boil. Too hot a fire or adding the milk too quickly will cause the salad dressing to curdle. This is a very satisfactory dressing as it is easy to make, keeps well, and is well-flavored.

MOCK MAYONNAISE

Blend 1-3 cup flour, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup water, and cook in a double boiler for 10 minutes. Mix 2 egg yolks, 1 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 1/2 teaspoon mustard, 2 teaspoons sugar, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup oil. Add the hot mixture to this and beat until thick. This is a good salad dressing for any who are not too fond of oil, as it tastes much less oily than a real mayonnaise. To anyone accustomed to making real mayonnaise, it will seem queer to mix all the ingredients in such an apparently reckless manner but the results are good.

CONDENSED MILK DRESSING

2 eggs
1 can condensed milk
1 teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup vinegar
Mix salt and mustard with a little beaten egg add the remainder of the egg and the milk and beat until mixed. Add vinegar and beat for about 4 minutes. This will thicken with standing.

SOUR CREAM SALAD DRESSING

1 teaspoon mustard
1 1/2 teaspoons butter
1-3 cupful hot vinegar
1/2 cupful milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
Speck pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
1 egg
1 tablespoon flour
1/2 cupful sour cream
Combine the dry ingredients in the top of the double boiler. Beat the egg, add the milk, and stir into the dry ingredients gradually. Cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture coats the spoon. Do not let the water boil in the bottom of the double boiler. Add the hot vinegar and butter. Cool and add the sour cream.

CLEANING UP THE TOWN

(—Granby Leader)

A novel stunt was recently tried in Bowmanville, Ontario, which we are told was very successful. The manager of the local picture theatre put on a "Tin Can Matinee." The show was staged on a Saturday morning and the admission fee was 25 or more old cans on a string. Over 500 kiddies packed the theatre. Four prizes were offered for the biggest strings—two for boys and two for girls—and the largest number turned in by one of the boys was 558 cans. During the programme Mayor Geo. W. James, who is also editor of the local paper, addressed the children, telling them they had done an important piece of clean-up work and reminding them that old food cans around the home encourage flies, which breed many diseases. A "Tin Can Matinee," however, is only possible in provinces where they have no law to prevent the attendance of children at picture shows.

OUR PUBLIC PARKS

Visitors to Canadian Government parks scattered throughout the country total approximately 550,000 annually, a large proportion of whom are tourists from other countries. The 18 parks are a strong attraction for tourists in addition to providing Canadians with ideal recreation grounds, situated as they are in the most beautiful parts of the country and covering a total area of nearly 13,000 square miles. Their value to the tourist trade of Canada has been readily recognized, and they are considered veritable magnets for visitors from both the United States and abroad.

When pious Doukhobors paraded minus their clothes in Thrums, B. C., last week during a religious enthusiasm, police peppered them with itching powder and spanked them with short lengths of rubber hose. 200 angry, itching Doukhobors retaliated by throwing water at the peppering police.

WHEN TAXES ARE UNCOLLECTABLE

The problem of collecting taxes under present conditions promises to be a somewhat serious one. Some weeks ago in these columns we reported an incident in connection with a tax sale in West Luther Township, Ont. The property of a farmer in distress was seized for taxes and sale proceedings were instituted. The farmer's wife bought the best cow for $1 and then not another bid could be obtained and the sale was called off. Here is a very similar story from Strathroy.

The Adelaide township tax collector has been busy for some little time. With some $2500 arrears on his books the collector proceeded to make seizures left and right, with the result that the majority of this amount has been paid without the necessity of having a tax sale, until recently, when the tax collector accompanied by the auctioneer, proceeded to hold a sale on a farm quite close to Strathroy for the payment of one year's taxes to the value of $58. This family had been paying taxes for 60 years, and this was the first time taxes had been allowed to get in arrears.

The attitude of those present toward the principal of this procedure can best be described by the fact that not one single bid could be raised for any of the articles put up for sale. Naturally this leaves the tax collector in a quandary to know what is the best thing to do, says the Arthur Enterprise. We suppose the last resort is to return the roll with the amount reported uncollectable, and to be made a first charge against the property, as is done in towns.

All-Canadian Paint COSTS no more than ordinary paints

You may say, "It's all very well. The new Ramsay All-Canadian Paint may be better but it's sure to cost more than ordinary paint." The headline of this advertisement is your answer. Good as it is, Ramsay's All-Canadian Paint costs no more to produce. Its superiority comes from the newly discovered correct proportioning of lead, zinc and linseed oil plus extra fineness in grinding.

And so great did this superiority prove under tests that we recalled every tin of old Ramsay paint in Eastern Canada, to make room for the new and revolutionary discovery.

Paint up with Ramsay's All-Canadian Paint for the paint job of your lifetime. Resists climatic action as no paint before it has ever done. Gives greater spread and opacity; finer gloss; faster colours. At the dealers listed below.

British railways have been speeding up their fast trains, with some rather astonishing results. The L.N.E.R.'s Leeds to King's Cross express covered the 105½ miles from Grantham to London in 100 minutes, which is claimed to be Europe's fastest non-stop run, while the Anglo-Scottish services of that road and the L.M.S. have made gains of over 25 minutes on their London-Edinburgh route. Several thousand minutes daily are being saved on the systems. The railways of Britain continue to be leaders in their field of endeavor and when business conditions are normal again they should be equal to whatever competition arises.

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE MUTUAL INSURANCE CO. COMES TO QUEBEC

After 48 Years in the West, Company Expands in Other Provinces

Forty-eight years ago, a group of settlers from the Portage plains of Manitoba organized the Portage La Prairie Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company. At that time, the sole purpose of the organization was to diminish the individual loss of the early Manitoba settlers by pooling all losses at the end of the crop year and levying an assessment on each member to cover the losses of the preceding 12 months. This then, was the early beginning of Western Canada's oldest insurance company.

Today, the Portage La Prairie Mutual Insurance Company enjoys an enviable reputation for service, both to the farmer and the city dwellers. Its field has been enlarged to cover Automobile, Plate Glass, Burglary, as well as Fire Insurance. Its activities are no longer confined to Manitoba. Offices have been opened in the East, and now the Company's services are available in the Province of Quebec through its Montreal Office, at 244 St. James Street, and through its representatives appointed to cover the many centers of Quebec.

During the early days of the Company, principles of sound business management were firmly established. Looking back at the early entries in the Company's books, it is interesting to note that the auditors, for instance, of which there were two, received only $5.00 each for their services.

Analysis of the Company's balance sheet reveals total assets of $1,625,156 as compared with $1,507,565 a year ago. Of cash assets the Company has $521,419 invested in high grade bonds and debentures on the basis of market values as at December 31, 1931.

LAKEFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert McDonald have moved to their summer home at Long Lake.

The prolonged dry weather has benefitted the seeding and roads, but rain is needed.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Andrews and young son are settled in the village for the season.

Mrs. Winchester, our teacher, returned to Richmond, Vt., after a successful term's work with our young folk.

Mr. Morrison is building a house, and hopes to be occupying it by July.

A large number of week-enders visited Lakefield over last Saturday and Sunday.

Whitsunday was observed by a good congregation at Holy Trinity Church last Sunday.

History of Presbyterian Church

that the two churches should again become one, and several efforts were made to unite them. In 1868 a definite "Basis of Union" was arranged by the Sessions conjointly, but the terms when submitted to the people though accepted by the Free Church were rejected by the First Church and there was no definite result. The union of all the Presbyterian churches in Canada in 1875, removed all denominational differences, especially as both churches had entered the general union, and accordingly in 1887 a second "Basis of Union" was arranged by the Sessions and submitted to the congregations. The terms were almost unanimously accepted by the Free Church, but were again rejected by the First Church whose chief reason was to safeguard the interests of its aged pastor. Since 1887 union services, Sabbath Schools and other means of grace; all tended to bring the people of both churches together and to strengthen the desire for a union.

Wherefore, when the First Church pulpit was made vacant in 1898 by the resignation of the Rev. Mr. Mackie, and the Rev. Mr. Waddell of the Free Church had generously offered to resign, if the churches desired to unite, the Sessions consulting with the boards of management and the congregation, prepared a third "Basis of Union" which when submitted to the members, was accepted by both churches on July 27th., 1899.

The Sessions, thereupon, petitioned the Presbytery in accordance with the facts to consummate a union of the churches. The petition was granted by the Presbytery, after fullest deliberation and a union congregation was formed January 5th., 1899, under the name of the Lachute Presbyterian Church.

For purposes of this record, it should be stated that the Rev. Mr. Mackie did not live very long to observe the efforts of the union thus consummated, for he died in December 1901 at the age of 79 years.

Following the reunion of the Presbyterian Churches in 1899 the Rev. M. Waddell who had so generously obliterated his own interests for the cause of reunion, remained in charge of the congregation for a year, his pastorate being followed by those of the Rev. Jas. McLaren 1901-06 and the Rev. Thomas Mitchell 1906-11. After supplying the pulpit for nearly one year the Rev. J. L. George, was inducted into the charge in 1912, his ministry continuing until 1920, when failing health forced him into semi-retirement from the active ministry.

A call was then extended to the Rev. A. G. MacKinnon, of Lachine, who was inducted into the charge in 1920.

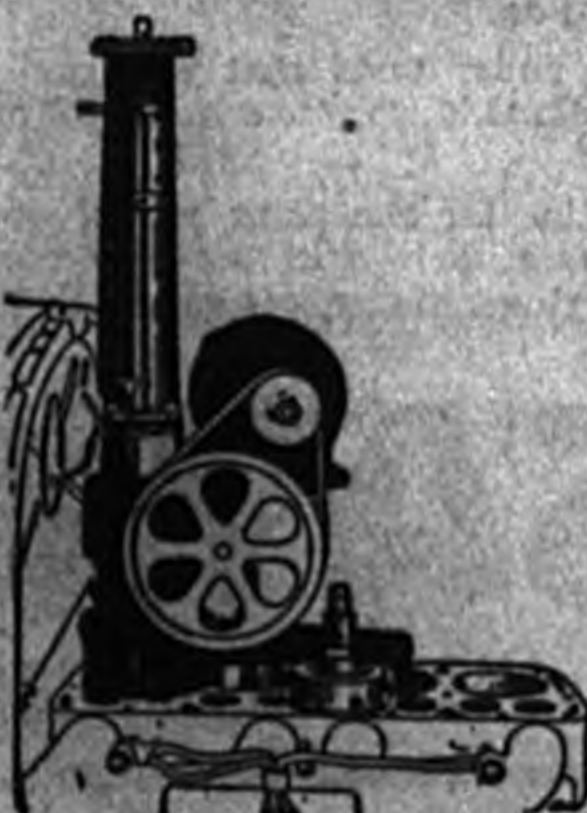

Ever since the reunion of the two Presbyterian Churches in Lachute the question of Organic Union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches throughout Canada had been periodically under consideration by the General Assembly and had been voted on, on several occasions, an analysis of the situation revealing a growing sentiment in favour of organic Union within the Assembly itself, but as interest in the Movement grew among the members, the minority vote against Union had increased out of all proportions to the vote in favour of Union.

It is not the intention of the writer of this article to revive or review any portion of the controversy which waged around the subject of Organic Church Union, but suffice it to say that the General Assembly took final action in the matter during the pastorate of the Rev. A. G. MacKinnon and another vote was taken, resulting here, as elsewhere, in a cleavage of the Presbyterian Church, and about forty per cent of the congregation including four members of Session, Mr. John A. Rice, Mr. Wm. Murray, Dr. J. M. Drew and Mr. D. D. McGibbon, withdrew to carry on, on a purely Presbyterian basis as part of the continuing Presbyterian Church in Canada. Prominently associated with these elders, and their wives in the cause of Presbyterianism should be mentioned the names of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hay, Mrs. Geo. F. Calder, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McFaul, and Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Gall, to all of whom much credit is due for the guidance of the congregation during the dark days; Mr. Gall having acted as chairman of the board of Managers ever since 1925, and having also served in the capacity of representative elder for one or more terms, while Mrs. Gall has presided over both the Ladies' Aid and Women's Missionary Society for several terms. Mr. McFaul has acted as treasurer up until the present year that office being at present filled by Mrs. McFaul.

At first our Baptist friends came to the rescue, and owing to their kindly overtures, we were able to hold Sunday morning services in Lachute and afternoon services in Brownsburg during the first year with student, and occasionally ordained pulpit supply. Mr. Grant Hollingsworth, now the Rev. Grant Hollingsworth, of Prince Rupert, B. C., laboured with great energy and enthusiasm among us, his sermons being full of spiritual lessons and well worthy of one of more veteran experience. The enthusiasm of the congregation also grew apace and the desire for a settled ordained pastor became general resulting in a call being extended to the present minister, the Rev. Henry Cousens, B.A., then of Paul Smith's, N. Y. Mr. Cousens was inducted to the charge in March 1926, and has filled the pulpit and guided his ever-increasing flock with outstanding ability. Since coming to Lachute Mr. Cousens has pursued his studies privately and successfully passed the examination for the further degree of Bachelor of Divinity in 1929; while Mrs. Cousens has endeared herself to the congregation by her friendly though retiring disposition.

The question of church property having been finally settled, and the Presbyterians finding themselves without a church home, the next urge was to procure a permanent meeting place which we could call our own. The purchase of the former Methodist Church and Manse was effected, and regular morning and evening services in Lachute became possible.

Meanwhile steps were being taken towards the erection of a new Presbyterian Church in Brownsburg which was completed in 1929.

In the following year the latent desire for a more modern and substantial building on our present or some other suitable site, became an actual possibility through the great generosity of our good friend William Rodger, of East Settlement, whose zeal and interest in the Mission work of the Church in India had already caused him to send many thousands of dollars to that field, and now a desire to perpetuate the memory of his beloved sister and her work at Indore seized him, and his generous donation of $16,000.00 towards the erection of a new Presbyterian Church at Lachute, to be called the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, came as a glorious culmination to our days of struggle, and we give thanks to Almighty God for the guiding hand of Providence which prompted Mr. Rodger to so generous an act and noble a purpose.

Although an invalid for upward of two years Mr. Rodger has not allowed his suffering to obscure his missionary vision. His stewardship finds true expression in the passage "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel."

Having accumulated a considerable fortune by dint of sheer frugality, and hard work, Mr. Rodger has expended it all freely in the support of Missionary enterprise, with the exception of certain smaller gifts to needy congregations, and the memorial now being erected to the memory of his late sister, and who can tell that this may not yet prove the greatest missionary gift of all through acting as an incentive to others to copy the life and example of his late sister in going forth to teach the gospel.

A word should be said concerning Mrs. Mackie, who laid the corner-stone, wherein the documents were placed.

Before her marriage she was Agnes, daughter of the late Capt. Dunlop, of Greenock, Scotland, born in the year 1843 and married in 1864. During her 68 years of residence here she has been a comfort to a large number of people in sorrow and sickness, and she is loved and respected by the entire community.

The Industries of Canada

Paper Read by
MR. WALLACE WILSON
At the Chatham Women's Institute, held in the C.I.L.
Club Rooms

It is not overstepping the mark to say that Canada's advance, particularly during the last thirty years, ranks as one of the features of the world's recent economic progress. Nowhere during the present century, has national growth advanced along a wider front.

While certain phases of Canadian growth during that period were clearly foreseen by those who knew the country, other phases were almost wholly unexpected. The capital factor in the Dominion's progress—the sweep of settlement over the western prairies—was to a certain extent anticipated. Very few persons, however, had the slightest inkling of the manner in which the business life of Canada was to be re-inforced by other events—by the invention of paper, by the rise of modern hydro-electric development, by the opening of great new mineral areas.

Now, in the midst of the second quarter of the century, the Dominion carries forward high prospects. No one can predict how its record of progress will compare with that of the first quarter. But the basic fact that still stands forth is the comparative strength of Canada's capacity for growth. No growth of ten million people anywhere possess a physical estate which excels the national domain of the Canadian people in extent, productive value, access to markets and proximity to the attention of the world's centres of capital and enterprise. Canada enjoys as much and as many of both the natural and commercial advantages for growth as any country could reasonably wish to command.

The real strength of the country does not lie in its wealth of any one form of natural resource. Canada to-day is best known to the business world by reason of its colossal grain trade, but it must not be thought that the Dominion is relatively richer in arable lands than in forests, minerals, water-power or fisheries. In fact, while Canada ranks high among agricultural countries, its rank among nations is even higher in other respects, notably in forest and water-power development. Canada is not and never will be a country with all of its eggs in one basket. Its growth is fed from many sources.

Instead of being equipped by nature in one or two directions only, the physical property owned by the Canadian people includes a liberal measure of even, form of natural resource. It is a country where no broad class of industry need be stunted. Agricultural and mining, fishing and forest industries, power development and manufacture have all been naturally equipped to reach and retain first-class stature. Every natural avenue of economic advance is open to the Dominion.

It requires but a fleeting glance in three or four directions to illustrate the varied sources of Canada's progress and the versatility of the country's outlook.

First, let us consider the industry of Growers, or Agriculture. Canadian agriculture has made such great strides since 1900 that it is difficult to choose facts capable of conveying the real measure of advance. The short term of thirty years saw more land taken up as farms than had been so occupied in the whole period of nearly three centuries prior to 1900, and the Dominion rose from a minor position in cereal commerce to that of the world's foremost wheat-exporting country. Nor has wheat-farming monopolized recent growth. Dairying is a huge and progressive rival. Ranching, stock-farming and fruit-farming are important. Tobacco culture and fur-farming are typical of new fields of solid progress and greater promise.

Barring always its human resources, arable land forms Canada's greatest single economic asset. But to speak of the "field of Canadian agriculture" is hardly correct, for the feature of agriculture in the Dominion is its many and distinctive fields. There is no such thing as the typical Canadian farm. The Canadian farmer may be dairyman, grain-grower, orchardist, tobacco farmer, or may follow any one of half a dozen other lines of husbandry. His landscape varies all the way from the broad expanse of level, open prairie to the wooded slope of a river valley, hemmed in by towering mountains.

Nor does the field of Canadian agriculture be within definite known bounds. Its physical limits refuse to be fixed. Within the last generation millions of acres of new land have been brought into occupation, mostly in regions which at no very remote period were considered of no use agriculturally. Even to-day the most careful soil and climatic studies can only roughly estimate the extent of Canada's farmland, for the latest triumphs of wheat-breeding do away entirely with the climatic handicap of millions of acres which once seemed of no practical use for agricultural purposes.

As to the future, no ranch of farming enterprise in Canada has yet reached its full stature. It is true that pioneering conditions have been greatly changed and that future settlement will proceed at a much more moderate pace. But, if the latest estimates now available are of any value whatever, half only of the possible farm-land in the Dominion is yet occupied.

The board and varied field for agriculture stands foremost among the major national assets of the Dominion. Although it is as yet developed far within the limits of its productive capacity, it ranks as the greatest single source of livelihood to the Canadian people, as the chief contributor to the country's export trade and as the chief support of its industrial and commercial life.

It is, above all, a field of growth—of agricultural and national growth not merely for years but for generations to come.

Deeply written in the commercial history of Canada is the story of the lumbering industry. From earliest times the forest has been the main source of materials for construction. First commercial activities consisted of the production of square timber, but there rapidly developed industries for the manufacture of wood into various products. To-day, the different branches of

WHY ADVERTISE THE DEPRESSION?

Herbert N. Casson, editor of the Efficiency Magazine, London England, says the depression has lasted so long "because it is so well advertised." "News-papers," he says, "have given it about $50,000,000 worth of space for nothing. Parsons, bishops and arch-bishops have advertised it. Politicians have advertised it. Writers and lecturers have advertised it. Worst of all," he continues, "even travelling salesmen, who ought to know better, have advertised it and carried the bad news from customer to customer." Then he issues this warning: "Every one who talks depression and predicts depression is advertising the depression. The continuance of the depression . . . proves the power of advertising. It keeps the fear of bad in men's minds. It prevents them from buying what they ought to buy."

Canadian wood industry are very numerous.

The greatest and most spectacular progress has occurred during the last twenty-five years, owing to stupendous development in the pulp and paper industry, and to the introduction of large-scale mechanical logging and saw-mill operations, particularly on the Pacific Coast.

Of Canada's land area of 3,600,000 square miles only a small percentage was originally open plain. Great areas have been cleared, but, even if all lands suited to agriculture were brought under cultivation, there would still remain about three-quarters of the whole. Of this non-agricultural land about one-half is suited to timber-production and its chief utility lies in that direction. Canada has, there, 1,200,000 square miles of absolute forest land. This area will contribute permanently to the needs of the forest industry.

Situate in a northerly latitude, this forest is primarily suited to the growth of conifers, commonly called "softwoods," and fortunately so, for while rare hardwoods of the tropics may command fabulous prices the market for such woods is very limited. The urgent demand of the world, to-day, is for softwoods. In the production of softwoods, therefore, lies the true destiny of the Canadian forest.

Until thirty years ago, when wood became the main material in pulp manufacture, the lumber industry held sway. In the East, and later in British Columbia, a large trade developed in lumber, lath and shingles. So long as large logs were available the eastern provinces competed strongly in American and European markets and for many years held the lead in lumber output. These provinces still compete, but with the opening up of extensive operations on the Pacific coast, using large-scale methods, the Pacific region forged to the front. To-day the largest single contribution to Canada's lumber trade originates in British Columbia, where over 70 per cent. of the Dominion's saw-timber supplies are situated.

Decline in the lumber industry of Eastern Canada has, however, been offset by phenomenal development in the pulp and paper industry. In the latter the spruce and balsam stands have found ready market for all sizes of logs. Quebec now leads in pulp and paper production. Ontario is a close second, while New Brunswick and Nova Scotia supply much smaller amounts. British Columbia has also shared in this development, and now contributes about one-tenth of the Dominion total. Heretofore the Prairie Provinces have not to any great extent participated in pulp manufacture, but within a short time it is expected that they shall manufacture it quite abundantly. It is reasonably sure to be followed by similar developments elsewhere in the Northwest.

Manifestly, with the studies already made, many of Canada's opportunities for pulp and paper development have been taken advantage of, but broad scope still exists for new forest enterprise.

LUXOR CAKE*
with Magic Baking Powder

"My advice to all housewives, both skilled and inexperienced, is: Use Magic Baking Powder. Then there is no uncertainty about your baking," says Miss Ethel Chapman, Editor of the Home Section in the Ontario Farmer.

This unqualified statement is particularly impressive because thrifty Canadian homemakers have learned that Miss Chapman's advice is invariably practical.

Other well-known food experts and cookery teachers in the Dominion share Miss Chapman's high opinion of Magic. In fact, the majority of them—and housewives, too—use Magic exclusively. No wonder Magic outsells all other baking powders combined!

Miss Chapman's recipe for
"LUXOR CAKE"

1 cup fine granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 cup egg yolks
1/2 cup lukewarm water
1/2 teaspoon Magic Soda
1 1/2 cups pastry flour (or 3 tablespoons less of bread flour)
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
2 teaspoons salt

Sift sugar. Measure out 2 tablespoons, pour on vanilla extract and set aside. Add water and soda to egg yolks; beat with egg beater until foamy. Add sugar a little at a time, beating in well. Add flavored sugar and beat. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Fold carefully into mixture; pour in ungreased angel cake pan. Bake in moderate oven at 350° F. for 40 to 45 minutes. Invert pan and let stand until cake is cold, when, with the aid of a spatula, it will slip from pan. Remove all crumbs and moist crust from surface and cut in three layers. Spread Lemon Cream Filling between layers. Ice top and sides with Marshmallow Seven Minute Frosting. (Recipes for filling and frosting are in the Magic Cook Book—see free offer below.)

FREE—Send for the Magic Cook Book to use when you bake at home. Address: Standard Brands Ltd., Fraser Ave. and Liberty Street, Toronto, Ont.

CHAPTER I

The Killers

Father Claverly, leaning against the rail of the Midnight Sun, suddenly straightened up, stiff with shock; and stared incredulously at the six men.

For moments he could not believe he actually was witnessing a robbery. Here in this Canadian Northland where outlawry was rare and futile, here on the mighty Mackenzie where river boats time and again carried unguarded cargoes of half a million in furs and gold, a brazen daylight attack upon a big steamer was simply unthinkable.

A few minutes ago the six men in a pair of birch-bark canoes had skirted out of the tributary river, the Big Alouka, and hauled the steamer as though they were merely trappers or a trading party wanting passage up south. A ladder was innocently let down for them, and they had come aboard, taking a despicable advantage of the friendly, accommodating spirit extended from man to man in this North country.

Now, under the leadership of a huge red-bearded fellow, they stood on a pile of deck cargo amidships, watching each way. With repeating rifles alert in their hands, they loomed ugly and menacing over the crowd.

Father Claverly, quickly recovering from his shock, stared sharply at the six men, trying to identify them. One was a "breed"; the other five were nondescript whites. All of them were unknown to him.

While he was wondering what their next move would be, a girl among the passengers suddenly cried out:

"Bandits! They're bandits! Oh—oh—!"

To half the people aboard the Midnight Sun the girl's cry was a first warning of the holdup. Whirling, the passengers stood transfixed, staring at the six vicious strangers who had them covered.

Fearful of bloodshed, Father Claverly glanced around at the crowd. Realizing that a fight would turn this deck into a shambles, he prayed that somehow, by quick thinking, he could avert a battle.

There were courageous men among those fifty on deck; but only one man had the quiet deadly courage to draw a long belt-gun against six rifles.

He was Jimmy Montgomery, mate of the steamer.

Crouched beside a bale of wolf skins, Jimmy had been pointing out things ashore to his four-year-old daughter. At the cry he glanced up, saw the bandits, understood instantly; and his face hardened. He was mounted-trained, Jimmy was—seven years with the scarlet-and-gold Mountaineers of the Right. Shoving his baby girl behind the wolf peltry, he whispered, "Lie down, sweet; keep down, down," and rose to his feet.

His first bullet, fired from the hip, sang between two bandits and whanged into the pines beyond. His second knocked the floppy betson from a bandit's head. His third was never fired. A Savage spoke out sharply. Jimmy grabbed at his breast, his revolver dropped to the boards, he swayed a moment, then sank down, shot cleanly through the heart.

Father Claverly heard a mutter arising among the crowd; heard the shuffling of feet, the half-hysterical sobbing of women, the snarling oaths of men. Out of the corner of his eye he saw men glancing at one another, waiting for one of their number to raise the long yell; and he realized that this ominous, swelling mutter was the prelude of a concerted rush.

The bandits realized it, too. It was plain to Father Claverly that they had not bargained on a battle, and were cowering at the prospect of rifle talk. But there was no retreating now; they would be forced to fight. In a flashing thought he visioned this deck as it would be a few moments hence: the criminals, rifle-armed, shooting from cover of the cargo piles; the blood-spattered promenade, with women and children caught in that swath of death.

In the next instant Father Claverly saw how he might stop the slaughter.

Stepping forward from the rail, he uplifted his arm to draw the eyes and attention of the bandits. Oblivious to personal danger, thinking only of the innocent lives he might save, Father Claverly walked up closer, closer, till the criminals could have touched him with their guns. Either his calm mien or his black robe and hat had power over those rifles, for the muzzles swerved aside from him.

"Don't shoot again," he bade quietly, as one, with authority. "You have killed a man. You have murdered."

The dark-faced bandit who had fired the shot flinched before that steady accusing gaze, and turned his eyes away from Father Claverly's.

"I was compel' to keel heem. He should not tried to interfere wit' us."

Father Claverly scorned so flimsy a justification of a brutal killing. Turning away from the bandits, he faced the crowd. Steady, clear, his voice rose:

"Men! Don't stir! Don't make a shambles of this deck. There's nothing aboard this boat as precious as the lives that would be lost. Let them take what they want and go peacefully."

His appeal fell on deaf ears. A slow vengeful wrath was gathering. . . . Jimmy Montgomery, known and loved all along the Mackenzie, lay murdered there on the deck. . . . Those killers were going to pay for that barbarous crime.

The snarling oaths rose again; the muttering swelled audibly; hands crept down and closed upon belt-gun butts. . . .

It was the bandit leader who stopped the rush, who stopped it dead short at one stroke. Swinging his gun at a young schoolmistress, Margaret Fournier, one of the passengers, he ordered her, "Step up here, sister; step up close;" and when she obeyed him, wild-eyed with terror, he cocked his weapon with an audible snick and pointed it at her breast.

His voice rose so that the whole deck heard.

"Now shoot! You can't git me afore I c'n git her! First move I see made with a gun, I'll give her what that gent there on the boards just got!"

Without turning or swerving his rifle from the girl, he bade two of his men:

"Andre, you and John go below. Git the dust. Sort out some furs, too, good furs, six or seven hundred pounds—martens, mink, dark fox. You know what's light and valyble."

The two bandits stepped down and seized one of the crew and made him take them down the companionway.

Coming up presently, they lowered their booty into the two birch-bark canoes that bobbed against the side of the steamer.

As though every man aboard realized that the bandits held the whip-hand, that no one dared stir, that retribution must come from elsewhere, a whisper started, spontaneously, from a dozen points at once:

"Baker! Alan Baker! Sergt. Alan Baker!"

This whisper went from neighbor to neighbor, from group to group; and men smiled grimly as they heard this mere mention of a man's name:

"Baker! Sergt. Alan Baker—at Fort Endurance."

Another of the bandits, protected by that rifle pointing at Margaret Fournier's breast, walked boldly out among the passengers; and securing a fire ax, he went from boat to boat on deck, smashing their frail sides so that there could be no pursuit, no retribution, if the two canoes could only get out of rifle range of the steamer.

Seeing now that the threat to Margaret Fournier's life had checked all thought of a rush, Father Claverly walked toward the stack of wolf skins, crossing himself as he stepped over the dark stream of blood that trickled slowly toward a scupper. Bending, he picked up the little Montgomery girl, who was looking with wide, uncomprehending eyes at the body of her father. Mercifully taking her away from there, he walked over to the rail, holding the little tot so that she could not look back.

The man beside him said in a low voice: "Look at that devil smashing the boats! They must have planned that 'caution' beforehand, so we couldn't chase 'em. But don't that big red-haired devil know we'll be splattering their canoes afore they get ten rods gone? G—d!—what we'll do to them six!"

The whisper spread. . . . "Wait!

Wait! they start away. . . . Men folded their arms, and watched quietly, biding their moment of vengeance.

And then, when the canoes were loaded with their booty, the red-bearded leader played his last and best card. Flipping his gun at Margaret Fournier, he ordered her:

"Git down into one of them canoes, sister. We're going to carry you a couple miles up this Big Alouka here and set you off on a bar, see? We ain't meaning to harm you at all. Just start ankling over and climbing down into a boat. . . . That's right; that's a sensible girl."

He raised his voice so that every one could hear; he spoke to Margaret Fournier, but his words were intended for the men aboard:

"Some of these fellows is figuring to shoot h—l out of us afore we c'n git clean gone, see? But they'd better think twice about that. And I guess they will. First hunk of lead comes whistling our direction, you'll git a bullet 'squer' atween them pretty eyes, sister!"

CHAPTER II

A Northern Man

At Fort Endurance, in his big three-room cabin overlooking the rest of the post, Alan Baker was changing uniform and making himself regimental again, after a four-day patrol to a camp of drunken Hares.

Just turned thirty, tall and lanky and powerful of body, Baker had shaken off the last vestige of an unhappy boyhood and his three harrowing years across. He was in the prime of a virile and hardened manhood. Coming here to Endurance as a corporal seven years ago, with Jimmy Montgomery and Curt Spaulding as his constables, he had speedily showed his worth as a "northern man" and a detachment leader able to cope with frontier problems. To him it was like coming into his own. In his boyhood he had daydreamed of hunting big game; and here, at this post just beneath the Arctic circle, these daydreams had been realized, though in a strange way. For here he had hunted the biggest of big game—human game that had intelligence to match against his; that carried a rifle in its hands, and wore a belt-gun, and must be captured alive, at risk of his own life.

During the years that he had been officer commanding here, he had built up an enviable reputation. With his gradually increasing pack of northern men he had successfully brought his big territory through Indian troubles and epidemics, and had smashed those lawless elements that came in with the oil-prospecting rushes farther south.

With a record like that and with Superintendent Williamson as his friend, Alan had expected to get his commission last fall when the post was raised to an Inspectorate. No one in all the Three Rivers country doubted that Baker would be the chosen man. To them, to Alan, the blow came unexpectedly. A political appointee named Haskell, a newcomer to the Force, a worse than raw newcomer to the North, got the Inspectorship and command of this coveted detachment.

In these last months, Alan had been very thoughtful about his future. Here, at thirty, he found himself in a blind alley, a non-com on meager pay, with no hope of promotion. He had turned down the opportunity of going into a big mining company that was prospecting by planes through the Athabasca country. He had refused half a dozen offers that held prospect of advancement and fine money. And then the Force that he had given such loyalty to had betrayed him. Worst of all, most stinging of all, he was forced to manage this territory still, straightening out the mistakes and enduring the arrogance of the man who had got the place he himself had earned.

As he brushed his sandy hair and dressed quickly, Alan's glance strayed down the slope to Mrs. Drummond's flower garden. Elizabeth Spaulding, his fiancée, the sister of his dead partner, was there.

And Inspector Haskell was there with her. . . . that blue and gold of his uniform, through the shrubbery. . . . Alan wondered how many hours Haskell had spent with Elizabeth in these last four days.

Commanding all the other buildings at Fort Endurance, Alan's cabin, which he and Curt Spaulding had built for themselves one summer, was light and airy, homelike with fireplace, bookshelves, radio, flower pots on the ledges; and comfortable with good furniture which Jimmy Montgomery had turned over to him when Jimmy's young wife died. But in spite of its comforts after barrack life, the cabin was lonely to Alan. Eighteen months rolling by had not made him forget a dead partner. Every log and every nail in the building held some memory of Curt Spaulding; and Curt's picture, his chevrons, his empty gun, were poignant reminders of that fatal patrol a year ago last January. . . .

When he finished dressing, Alan stepped over to a deep alcove, a sort of library and study—a tiny niche for a man so tall and lanky. Above the work table hung a shelf of dog-eared books and three pictures framed in carved walrus ivory. One was of Elizabeth Spaulding taken two years ago when she came down north to this Waterways country to live with Curt, her brother. Another was of Jimmy Montgomery in jaunty "walking-out" uniform, taken before Jimmy got his raw deal from headquarters and bought out of the Mounted.

Hawkesbury Rallies at Dollard Memorial

Historic Ceremony at Carillon

A large crowd attended the ceremony of commemoration held on the 24th., at Carillon, to the honor of Adam Dollard des Ormeaux, the hero of the Long Sault Rapids, and his companions. Military honors were observed before the Dollard Memorial and addresses were given both in French and English, touching upon the heroic stand of that handful of French Canadians whose sacrifice saved Montreal from sacking by hostile Iroquois.

Many hundreds of Hawkesbury residents, after a gathering at their own civic Soldiers' Monument, journeyed to Carillon for the occasion. Among the speakers were Mr. John Woods, Mayor of Hawkesbury, and Mr. Victor Barrette of Le Droit, Ottawa, who—together with Dr. Beaudoin—are both enthusiastic to perpetuate the memory of this and similar highlights of heroism in Canadian traditions. The Hawkesbury band played appropriate music, and several uniformed War Veterans also participated. Hawkesbury children paraded and took an active part in the ceremony.

One of the features of the programme was a chorus recitation by the children of the Carillon schools dealing with the wonderful feat of arms of Dollard Des Ormeaux and his companions.

The fete is an annual one and while it is organized by the Hawkesbury school commission, invitations are sent to all the children of the district. It is intended in future years to broaden the scope of the fete and have all the children of eastern Ontario visit the Monument and there meet the Quebec school children.

Tribute was paid during the day to Miss Maud Fletcher, through whose efforts the monument was raised and to whom is due the fence around the monument. By selling flags and pennants, Miss Fletcher has been able to obtain sufficient money to keep the place in order.

ANGLICAN CONCERT

A very successful concert was held in Goyette's Hall at Brownsburg on May 17th., when the Ladies of St. George's Anglican Church presented an amusing Comedy entitled "The Rev. Peter Bryce Bachelor." A good musical programme was also rendered.

Granby Installing Filtration Plant

(Granby Leader)

The building which houses the new filtration equipment of the Granby water works, located alongside the city reservoir, is rapidly nearing completion. Once in operation there will be no further fear of water shortage during a dry season. When the lake on Shefford Mountain runs low, as it has done occasionally during recent years, the turn of a switch will bring the supply of water from the river into action, which, with the chlorine treatment, will be just as good as the drinking water to which Granby citizens have been accustomed. Delicate instruments keep an accurate record of the water pressure and flow at all times. The costs of the installations will total in the neighborhood of $53,000 part of which will be taken care of by the government grant for the relief of unemployment.

Empire Day Service

Rev. W. J. Emslie at St. Andrews East Church.

Rev. John W. Emslie, M.A., a distinguished graduate of Edinburgh University, was the guest speaker at a special Empire Day service held on Sunday morning last in old St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, in St. Andrews East. Rev. Dr. R. L. Ballantyne, the minister of the church, conducted the service, which featured "Empire Day" memories, and included music appropriate to the occasion. Miss Bertha Taylor, soprano, and Allan Murray, baritone, were heard in solos, and Ernest F. Kerr presided at the new memorial organ recently donated by Mrs. Philip Seipp, of New York City.

In the evening there was a praise service, and at the close an organ recital was given.

Vankleek Hill Cadets Praised at Inspection

The annual inspection of the collegiate institute cadet corps at Vankleek Hill took place at the athletic grounds last week, before a large crowd. The fifty-five cadets went through the marching manoeuvres, platoon drills, squad drill and physical training exercises in a smart manner.

Captain Malcolm Isbester, M.C., of the P.P.C.L.L., district cadet officer, military district No. 3, and inspecting officer, addressed the cadets and highly congratulated the corps on their excellent showing, and stated that he was well pleased with the progress made during the past year.

The commanding officer was Denis Brennan. The sergeants appointed are Robert Proudfoot, Donald Kerr and Emmett Miller.

A considerable gale swept this section of the Ottawa Valley last Sunday afternoon, accompanied by thunder, heavy rain and—towards the north—a fall of hail. Several large trees were blown down and obstructed the highways. Fortunately the storm did not last long; but during a fresh onset Sunday night, the rain fell more heavily and local electric light service was disrupted for a short time.

Quick Action Prevents Spread at West End Fire

Responding to a call at 10.10 p.m., on Saturday last, Lachute fire brigade found a west end house in flames and fire spreading quickly. The dwelling was the property of Mr. Trudel, on Main Street, near the old Victoria Foundry. There was no one at home at the actual time of the outbreak, and the fire was only discovered when Mr. Fournier, looking across the street from his store opposite, noticed light flickering in the downstairs rooms.

It was learned that Eug. Trudel had left for Montreal a short time previously. His son, lighting a fire in the Quebec heater, had left the house for a few minutes, to attend to some matter of business at his shop nearby. It is thought the stove-pipes became overheated, or some fabric had come in contact with the heater, and thus started a blaze. The downstairs interior was soon almost gutted and the outside also badly scorched. Damage to property and effects, was conservatively estimated at $1500—$2000.

The fire was subdued under two streams, with a good pressure of water. This notable improvement, it may be said, is accredited to the recent laying of 8" watermain on Bethany St. The added pressure will facilitate the work of our fire-fighters who have been so often handicapped by inadequate water-pressure.

The Most Urgent Need in Town

Roads in Deplorable Condition

Lachute Town Council is to be commended for its timely move to complete the government highways in town, by adding a width of crushed-stone roadway to extend to the sidewalks. The "shouldering" of this paved road rests with the civic Roads Committee. The town, however, has no concern with the actual highway paving—except that the town has to use it.

Lachute contributes heavily in automobile and highway taxes, and nothing could arouse the indignation of local drivers (so soon after the annual "touch" for licences) than the state of our town roads—especially those in the Mills and West End.

Quebec Government is responsible for these roads—and Quebec collects a high rate of automobile taxes compared with other provinces in the Dominion. With all due credit to our Highways Department, good work is being done on the general provincial system. Of tourist propaganda and publicity work in this department, one need not complain. It is even conceivable (there are slow indications of repair work) the roads in question will be in good condition toward the end of the season. But we see no reason why this most heavily-used section of highway should be left till last, while repairs are proceeding on the less frequented sections out of town.

Conforming with the publicity campaign of Quebec Roads Dept., and in the interests of business in Lachute—the Board of Trade recommended to Lachute Council the use of signs at town entrances, welcoming tourists to Lachute, The Gateway of the Laurentians. . . One thing is now reasonably sure: If certain of our town approaches are not thoroughly and expeditiously repaired, visitors will avoid this approved Gateway and invade the Laurentians via Grenville, St. Jerome or some other side-gate.

Argenteuil County Meeting of W.I.

Mrs D. Davis, Morin Heights, Elected President.

The annual county meeting of the Women's Institute was held in McArthur's Hall, Lachute. The meeting opened with the recital of the Creed in unison. The president, Mrs. J. S. Gordon, in her opening remarks welcomed the delegates and visitors and expressed the hope that all would co-operate to make all undertakings successful. Mrs. Kuhring gave the Secretary's report for 1931 and of three executive meetings held during the year. The treasurer's report was also given and the report of work done by the 9 branches of the Women's Institute in this District. Adjournment was made for dinner which was provided by the ladies and a social time was spent.

The meeting was resumed at two o'clock, being opened by the singing of O Canada. Reports from conveners of the county were heard and approved.

The report of the nominating committee for the coming year brought in as follows: Honorary presidents, Mrs. J. S. Gordon and Mrs. R. J. Bradley; president, Mrs. Douglas Davis, Morin Heights; 1st. vice-president, Mrs. Alex. Bothwell, Lachute; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. McKenzie; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Kuhring, Lakefield.

The conveners elected were: Agriculture, Mrs. Jas. Murdoch; Canadian Industries, Mrs. Wm. Jackson; National Events, Miss Hilda Hume; Child Welfare and Health, Mrs. Gordon Smith; Education and Better Schools, Mrs. Richardson; Home Economics, Mrs. Mossman Gall; Immigration, Mrs. J. S. Giles; Legislation, Mrs. J. P. Bradley; Publicity, Mrs. Archie Graham; and Auditors, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Bothwell.

The retiring president, Mrs. J. S. Gordon, gave a most interesting address on the work during her term of office, which was followed by a solo by Mrs. R. A. Giles. The address of the afternoon was given by Miss McCain, superintendent of the Women's Institutes of Macdonald College, and was listened to with rapt attention. The new president was welcomed to the chair and after thanking the meeting for her election, the matter of holding a Handicraft Exhibition, with tea and food sale in the Fall was discussed. It was also decided that the Women's Institute would lay a wreath on the War Memorial on Armistice Day.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God Save the King." The number present was 97, the largest meeting on record.

Academy Athletes Win Honors at McGill Meet

Quebec and Ontario high-schools were well represented in the McGill Inter-Collegiate Track Meet at the Molson Stadium on Tuesday, and Lachute rejoices in the fair share of triumphs won by local Academy representatives.

W. Drew brought home the laurels in a strenuous 1 mile run, which was one of the day's outstanding events. . . For sheer thrills, comments a Montreal Star reporter, it would be hard to have excelled the finish put up by Drew, of Lachute, and Rip Jonas, of Montreal High, in the mile run. These two runners took command of the race after the first half mile. Coming into the stretch, Jonas appeared to have a splendid chance of closing up a narrow gap of three yards between himself and the leader, but he missed his stride from weariness as the last twenty yards were reached, with the result that the Lachute lad was acclaimed the victor of a highly popular event.

Joe Berniquier, another of our leading scholastic "sports," brought distinction to the Academy by winning the running high jump at 5'8½". Lower Canada College proved a close contestant for this event, represented by J. Martin, who lost out in the jump-off.

Following up these two senior triumphs Cyril Drew took a first, for running high jump in the Class II events. His height was 5 ft. 1½ inch, equalling the previous inter-collegiate record for this class. Kenneth Falconer triumphed in the running broad jump, taking second place, and also won the 75-yard dash, taking first place, in 9 seconds.

Wilson-Dowler Wedding

The marriage of Dorothy Mary, daughter of the late Oliver Dowler and of Mrs. Dowler, to Mr. James Crockett Wilson, son of the Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wilson, of Lachute, took place quietly on Wednesday at the Church of St. James the Apostle, the Rev. Canon Shatford officiating. Vases of butterfly roses blue delphiniums, and pink snap dragons adorned the altar, with standards of the same flowers intermingled with cherry blossoms arranged on either side of the chancel steps. Canarasis ferns were placed in front of the altar rails, and standards of palms lined the aisle leading from the chancel to the altar. Mr. J. F. Martin, organist of the church, played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Harold J. Lawrence, was unattended. She wore her travelling suit of navy blue French crepe in three piece style with a blouse of lighter shade of blue, a hat of navy blue crocheted straw trimmed with paler blue flowers and a silver fox fur. Her corsage bouquet was composed of white orchids. Mr. Kilgour Wilson, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left for an extended motor trip. On their return they will reside at 3973 Ramezay Avenue, Montreal.

Outing Party Spells Death to Five

Killed by Falling Tree

Four boys and a schoolmaster were killed, with another boy probably fatally injured, in an accident which occurred at six o'clock Tuesday evening near Chute au Blondeau, eight miles east of Hawkesbury. The truck in which the victims were riding was struck by a large tree which was broken by a strong gust of wind. Those killed and injured were directly in the path of the tree, but fourteen other occupants of the truck escaped with slight bruises and scratches. The truck was only slightly damaged.

The dead are: Andre St. Amand, 10 years of age; Althonia Durocher, 14 years of age; Paul E. Larocque, 13 years old; Lucien Lachaine, 21 years of age; Marcel St. Amand, 13 years of age, all of Chute au Blondeau. The last named, brother of Andre St. Amand, died in the Notre Dame Hospital, Hawkesbury, on Wednesday morning.

Rolland Ouimet, 13 years of age, of Chute au Blondeau, is suffering from a fractured skull.

The party was on its way back from an excursion to Carillon to celebrate the anniversary of Dollard Des Ormeaux and his companions, when the accident occurred.

They had travelled by special train from Hawkesbury to Carillon and returned upon the same train. At Hawkesbury they were met by William St. Amand, father of two of the victims, who is a general merchant in Chute au Blondeau.

The party were all in happy spirits, having enjoyed a wonderful day and the truck went merrily along the highway from Hawkesbury towards Chute au Blondeau at a fair rate of speed, with St. Amand driving.

Scene of Tragedy.

Five miles east of Hawkesbury the accident occurred. There was a high wind blowing but nothing seemed to indicate any danger. The sky was clear and there was no sign of a storm. As the truck passed under a large tree at the edge of the road, the wind ripped it apart and it fell with a crash on the passing truck. Seven occupants of the truck, which was almost half way past the tree at the moment of impact, were caught beneath the shower of branches leaves and wood.

St. Amand stopped the truck as soon as possible and first aid was given to as many of the victims as needed it. It was found however, that four of them were already past all aid. Of the three others, two were seriously hurt, and a third was slightly injured. Doctors were summoned.

Grenville Installing Waterworks System

Lack of Water Facilities Has Been Handicap.

The neighboring village of Grenville is making progress with the installation of its new waterworks system. Water is to be obtained from a mountain stream back of the village where a dam is being built. Work is expected to be finished within a month. The Dante Construction Co. of Montreal has the contract for the installation of pipes in the village while the McCarthy company of Quebec is said to have the work from the village to the source of the water. Most of the work is through rock and quite a number of men are at present employed. Grenville has suffered considerably during the past few years, both through fire and lack of water facilities and this installation will be of great advantage.

The Captain's Corner

— FISHING —

Dear Boys :—

The other day I went with a friend to a very large lake in the Laurentian Mountains, because he was going fishing.

Now I don't know why it is but the subject of fishing has always been a very fortunate one with humorists. These funny people are constantly making jokes about those who, with rod and line, go out and try for fish. The humorist will also tell you that a fisherman will always increase the size of the fish he catches every time he tells the story of how he did it.

Be this as it may. I am not here telling you any of these stories but something on the subject of fishing quite different. Do you know there is something about a fisherman that is quite likeable. He is a patient individual; nothing worries him or puts him out. When he pulls in his line and finds his bait has been eaten it only brings a smile. They are biting anyway he says happily, and fixing things throws back his hook into the water and goes on waiting.

Our fisherman also is a sociable fellow. He will always be ready to pass the time of day with you, even has a cheerful word for the small boy who asks him, with a grin, how many he has caught after looking into his empty basket. He is invariably kind to animals and his dog, if he has one, is his constant companion.

More than this he is a lover of nature. I believe he enjoys the crimson glow of the setting sun, the night shadows creeping over the lake water, I feel that he listens with joy to the coy of the night bird and out of the wonderful stillness of a summer evening obtains in some mysterious way a great deal of very real happiness that is denied to others who are not, let us say, fishermen.

So we find that our fisherman is an out-of-door-man, genial, kind, generous and quite a good fellow after all, so that is why when I was given the opportunity I mentioned at the start of this letter to go out with one I did not hesitate, but went.

Did he have any luck? Oh yes he caught a splendid trout, it weighed, let me see—wait a moment.—Yes two and a half pounds!

Another fishy story! You are wrong I saw it weighed.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

Mystery Island

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS — Chapter 1.

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Jack Evered sat at the open window and looked out on to a collection of chimney pots and sloping slate roofs that gave him but little satisfaction. He was alone in a small attic room of the dingy house, which for lack of a better word he called home. It was not a nice place to live in, and but one of many similar villas making up a back street in the city of London.

He was still a boy, sixteen years old, with large blue eyes and a frank open countenance that usually carried a bright smile but which at this particular moment looked both grave and careworn. A distant clock chimed the hour and wearily he counted each stroke until the time of day, five o'clock in the afternoon, had been proclaimed for all the world to know. With an impassioned movement he glanced over his shoulder at the gathering to conceal the poverty of the furniture and the thread-bare piece of carpet that only partly covered the hard wooden floor. Rising out of his chair he began feeling in his pockets for a match but not finding one walked to the table on which he had placed his coat on entering the room almost an hour since.

It was late in the month of August and London was experiencing a heat wave of unusual intensity, and in this squalid neighborhood it was almost unbearable. He lit a cheap oil lamp and with a sigh took a look round, his eyes resting first on the discolored wall paper which showed much exposure to the dirt and fog of many winters, then to three rickety common wooden chairs and lastly to a cheap worm-eaten sideboard on which, appearing quite out of place amid such surroundings, stood side by side three beautiful silver framed photographs. To the first he gave scant attention being one of himself taken two years previously, on the second, being a good likeness of his mother and father taken about the same time, he lingered longer until with another sigh, this time of relief, he turned to the third a bright and happy picture of his little sister Mary over seven years his junior.

Jack Evered's father had been a soldier who during his years of active service, spent mostly in Egypt and on the Indian frontier, had distinguished himself greatly, and many regrets had been expressed by his brother officers when Major Eric Evered had sent in his papers and retired, giving as a reason his wife's increasing ill health. Mrs. Evered had never really recovered her full strength on giving birth to her little girl and the climate of India had not helped forward matters to any extent. After serious and long discussion with a doctor the final decision was made, and the Major brought his wife and two young children back to England. A small house was taken in the country, not far from the sea, with the hope that such change would prove beneficial. For a time indeed everything went well and then Mrs. Evered was stricken with a disease that brought back all the old and terrible anxiety. Constant medical treatment and night and day nursing compelled her husband to dip seriously into the very small fortune he had brought back with him from abroad, and, as he saw it rapidly diminishing under such a strain, he was tempted to invest what was left in a mining syndicate that promised him large returns on his capital. Though a brave and clever soldier he knew nothing whatever about business and was only too ready to believe all he was told which, unfortunately, was far from the truth. True one large dividend was paid and with the money he had bought a small car and one evening, finding his wife considerably improved in health and hoping that at last there was to be an end of his troubles, he persuaded her to go with him a short trip but from this expedition neither returned. A drunken driver speeding from the coast and making for the city, failed to swerve in time causing a cruel accident in which all concerned lost their lives. The two children thus became orphans, and a week later the mining syndicate went into liquidation leaving them practically without money. On the sale of the home and furniture, and, after all bills had been paid, Jack found himself in possession of but seventy five dollars, the clothes he was wearing and his little sister to care for and support. There were unfortunately no relatives to whom in his trouble, he could look for advice and help. His father had been an only child and his grandparents, he knew, were dead. Of his mother's people he was entirely ignorant, though he was aware that before her marriage she had been a governess in a family belonging to one of the officers of his father's regiment and had been born in some out of the way place in Ireland, though where that place was he had never been told.

KNOW YOUR OVEN

More good food is spoiled in the baking than in the mixing. So many cooking experts give all kinds of directions concerning the ingredients and mixing and dismiss the baking with a casual—'bake in a hot oven.' I think I have mentioned before about the satisfaction I am having with a thermostat on my oven. It is a device which keeps your oven automatically at the degree of heat desired. For instance if you want to bake a cake at 375 degrees, you never need to worry whether your oven is too hot or whether it is cooling off. The thermostat regulates the heat and your oven stays at just the desired heat. It certainly saves a lot of worry.

Cake making seems to be a stumbling block for so many inexperienced cooks, and yet really they are not hard to make. A short time ago, one of my younger friends consulted me about her cakes. She said she was in despair as she had been making cakes for three years and they were never satisfactory. She would give up in disgust and then after eating a particularly delicious cake of someone else's baking, would try again, disastrously. Upon questioning, I found that she mixed her cakes properly, and the trouble lay in the baking.

She used an electric stove and heated her oven to the desired degree of heat she turned off the heat and cooked her cake with the heat which was stored. This was not sufficient. It requires a gentle heat during the baking. The top element must not be turned on during baking as it would form a crust on top of the cake and would prevent the cake from rising properly. She has been baking her cakes with the heat turned low underneath and they have been turning out quite satisfactorily, proving again my theory that most of the trouble lies in the baking.

I have used wood, coal-oil, gas and electricity as fuel for baking; I think I prefer gas, as it can be regulated exactly as one desires. Although, I do not think that I baked better cakes in my life than I did in a coal-oil oven. The one objection to electricity is that it is difficult to increase the heat of your oven successfully, after your food is once in the oven. The electric oven cooks meats to perfection.

If your baking is not all that you desire, look to your oven, and be sure that it is being managed as it ought to be.

ANGEL CAKE

Angel cake seems to be very popular these days. Probably because of the prevailing price of eggs. Angel cakes are judged by their tenderness and they can be very tender—also, they can be quite tough. The tenderness depends chiefly on the degree of heat at which it is baked. So, once again, the baking is very important.

Angel cake has no lightening agent, other than the air which is incorporated by beating, so it is important to get all the air possible into the eggs. Sifting the flour several times helps to do this. The cream of tartar does not help to lighten the cake but it helps stiffen the air cells of the egg white and prevents it from falling.

Angel cakes should be baked at slow temperature. Best results are obtained when they are started at 275 degrees, baked for 30 minutes at this temperature, and then the temperature raised to 325 degrees and baked another 30 minutes.

1 cup egg whites (about 8)
1½ cups sugar sifted
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup pastry or cake flour
1 teaspoon flavoring

Beat the egg whites until fluffy but not dry. Add the cream of tartar. Add the sifted sugar a little at a time, folding it in. Fold in the flour gradually, after stirring it four times. Measure after the first sifting. Do not beat when adding the sugar and flour but use a folding motion, down, over and up. Bake in an ungreased tube pan. To remove from the pan, invert and the weight of the cake will gradually loosen. If the cake is removed while hot, it may break from its own weight. You may use any flavoring you desire, but almond is particularly delicate for Angel Cake, and a mixture of vanilla and almond makes a good choice.

CHOCOLATE WHIPPED CREAM

Angel cake makes a delicious dessert if hollowed out and filled with whipped cream or with sweetened fruit and topped with whipped cream. Chocolate Whipped Cream is particularly pleasing with Angel cake. To 1 cup of whipping cream use 2 tablespoons cocoa and two table spoons sugar. Mix the cocoa, sugar with 2 tablespoons of the cream and beat gently, stirring until the cocoa is dissolved. Let cool and add to the cream. Whip

Owing to the critical state of timber supplies in the United States, Canada is strategically situated to benefit by the trade involved in supplying the world's greatest consumer of wood. And, by reason of ready access to tide-water from her major centres of forest production, Canada has developed and will continue to expand a widely diffused overseas trade.

Nowhere in the world do forests play a more vital part in sustaining the industries of the country than they do in Canada; nowhere in the world does financial participation in forest industry represent a more necessary and permanent activity, and nowhere in the world are the opportunities for wise investment of capital more promising than in the forest industry of Canada.

The exceptional variety of the country's mineral wealth has provided a third broad highway for Canadian progress. Canada's present mining industry stands out in notable contrast with that of thirty years ago. Gold and coal were then the only large items of mineral output. Coal mining was important in Nova Scotia, but British Columbia and the Yukon engrossed mining interest.

No phase of primary Canadian development appears likely to outstrip mining in proportionate growth during the coming generation. A strong combination of commercial and physical facts lends exceptional promise to the Dominion's future as a mining country.

The extent of Canadian territory is so broad and the definite knowledge, which is gained only through close field examination so incomplete, that any present evaluation of Canada's mineral resources must be accepted as a very elastic estimate. But this much is known—that from Cape Breton Island on the Atlantic coast to Vancouver Island on the Pacific, a distance of over 3,000 miles, and from the international boundary to the islands of the Arctic there are few extensive regions of the Dominion that do not show evidence of being richly endowed with some form of mineral wealth.

To-day mining enterprise holds a much longer line and is spread over a vastly greater territory than formerly. It has opened such new fields as the world-famous gold and silver regions of Ontario, the coal, oil and natural gas areas of Alberta, the mineral belts of Manitoba and Western Quebec. Mining industries which at the start of the century boasted but slender output have expanded many fold and the Dominion's mineral productions now counts among its substantial items not only gold and coal but silver, copper, lead, nickel, zinc, asbestos and natural gas—not to mention a dozen others of material value. It is a remarkable fact that Canada's mineral output to-day includes practically every major metal entering into modern commerce.

As to future progress, no main branch of Canadian development exhibits a more active immediate programme of expansion. And, certainly, none enjoys a greater potential field for long-time growth. Three factors in particular help to illuminate the probable future of the Canadian mining industry: (1) its past performance; (2) the known mineral reserves and the great extent of unprospected areas; (3) the rising world demand for minerals.

Viewed from all angles, the Canadian mining industry may be said to enjoy, both physically and commercially, the strongest assurance of broad and long-continued growth.

Now we shall take into consideration the fishing industry, an asset which, in Canada, is only beginning to be realized. It is now rapidly expanding year by year and has enormous possibilities.

until stiff and flavor with vanilla adding more sugar if desired. This amount of cocoa makes a delicately-flavored cream, very much like French Chocolate. If a more highly chocolate flavour, but personally I prefer the delicately flavored chocolate for this particular purpose.

Fisheries form a particularly valuable asset to a nation. Fish caught in a high seas and landed in the ports of a country are importation for which no money goes abroad. Moreover, unlike mineral resources, the fisheries as a capital asset are not depleted by any reasonable use.

While participation in the fisheries of the high seas is open to the world, geography plays a part in their development that cannot in the long run be offset. The country lying adjacent to prolific fishing banks—the shallow areas of the sea to which fish resort and constitute the great producing areas of the commercial fishermen—and the country further so situated that it can readily and economically ship its surplus abroad, commands a natural opportunity to dominate such fisheries beyond that enjoyed by other nations equally, interested but less fortunate in their position.

Having regard to these essential factors, Canada may with propriety claim to have, within ready economic reach, fisheries which in quality, quantity and variety are second to none anywhere.

While it may be too much to say that the sea fisheries are inexhaustible, there can be no room for doubt that vastly greater quantities of fish than are now being obtained could be produced from the fishing areas adjacent to the Dominion's Atlantic coast, without detriment to the supply. And such production can most economically be effected from Canadian ports.

Apart from the halibut and salmon fisheries which are now being so exploited that measures must be taken to safeguard them from depletion, the same situation holds true with regard to the Pacific coast waters. In this instance, also, the fisheries can most economically be conducted and expanded from Canadian ports.

It is safe to conclude by adding that, in the whole range of Canada's natural assets, no major class of resource appears physically capable of supporting greater proportionate growth than the fisheries.

In conclusion let us examine for a little the manufacturing industry. At the time of the Peace of Paris, when Canada passed to the English, or even thirteen years later when the New England states gained their independence, there was little or no manufacturing anywhere, not even in England, that was not performed by hand in the home or in a small shop which bore a relation to the

HONORS

Several years ago the world acclaimed the heroism of an aviator who faced alone the hazards of Trans-Atlantic flight and crossed to Paris in a little over 35 hours. This week, the same world pauses in its grief and sympathy for this same daring Lindbergh, and pays tribute to his successor for the laurels of trans-oceanic flight.

Aeronautics have advanced by leaps and strides since the triumph of Lindbergh's lone crossing. But regardless of mechanical efficiency and improvement, it takes the same fearless grip to face, single-handed, the uncertainties of this perilous flight. That the skill of flying and navigation, and the spirit of adventure should be embodied so intrepidly in a woman, is today the source of universal wonder and admiration.

Prevented by a mechanical defect from completing her flight, the U.S. Avatrix, Amelia Earheart Putnam made a triumphant crossing of the Atlantic and landed her plane on Irish soil after nearly 14 hours of flying. Her safe arrival was fittingly heralded, and two nations joined in genuine ovation of her daring and achievement.

STRONG POSITION SHOWN BY BANK OF MONTREAL

Total Assets Stand at $748,612-481—Liquid Assets are $385, 483,225, Equal to 57.34 Per Cent. of All Liabilities to the Public—Large Holdings of Gilt-edged Securities

Ready ability to meet rapidly changing conditions and at the same time maintain its uniformity strong position is shown by the Bank of Montreal in its statement of the affairs of the bank as at April 30th. The statement, which is the semi-annual one, appears elsewhere in this issue and is presented in an easily understandable form. It shows total assets at $748,612-481, compared with $786,897-706 a year ago. Of this amount quickly available assets are $385,483,225, equal to 57.34% of all liabilities to the public.

Included among these liquid assets in cash in vaults and in General Gold Reserves amounting to $78,491,119, equal to 11-67% of public liabilities.

Every section of the statement reflects a policy of maintaining a strong liquid position throughout a period of unusual trade conditions and also indicates the readiness with which the Bank will be able to meet any demands that may develop from its customers.

Liquid Position Strong

The most important change in liquid assets is represented by an increase in government and other bonds and debentures to a total of $228,901,146. These are recognized as gilt-edged securities, the greater portion of which mature at early dates. Included among them are Dominion and Provincial government securities of a value of $174-246, up from $149,229,626 a year ago. Call loans outside of Canada are $20,262,324 and are secured by bonds, stocks, and other negotiable securities of greater value than the loans and represent moneys quickly available without any disturbing effect on conditions in Canada.

Call loans in Canada secured by bonds and stocks of greater value at current quotations than the loans stand at $5,645,610, as compared with $11,347,487 at the same date last year.

The total of current loans made to manufacturers, farmers merchants and others, is reported at $336,572,388.

Deposits have held up remarkably well under prevailing conditions. Total assets are reported at $626,701,081.

Total assets of $748,612,481 are available to meet payment of liabilities to the public of $672,310,382, which leaves an excess of assets over these liabilities of $76,301,599.

Profit and Loss Account

The profits for the six months amounted to $2,589,292.70 as compared with $2,771,753.71 for the corresponding period last year. The profits were distributed as follows: dividends, $2-160,000.00; provision for taxes
Dominion Government, $228-316.28, and reservation for bank premises, $100,000.00, leaving a balance of $100,976.42

CANADIAN INDUSTRIES

home similar to that of the country blacksmith shop of to-day. Every piece of work was done by hand. The grain was threshed with a flail and ground with a mortar. The invention of machinery and the develop-ment and application of mech-anical power has been simul-taneous in Great Britain, United States and Canada. An in-vention or a discovery made in anyone of these three countries was not long in spreading to the other two.

The ten years beginning with 1880 saw an outburst of inven-tive activity that dwarfed all similar periods in the history of invention. It seemed that the discovery of things electrical in the last three or four years of the previous decade was a sig-nal for the pent-up genius of the world to let loose.

The ten years that followed produced the trolley car, the in-candescent lamp, the automobile the typewriter, the cash register the steam turbine, the gasoline engine, the type-setter and cas-ter, the cyanide process, electric welding, smokeless powder, the photograph, the air-brake, the transparent film, the pneumatic tire, the half-tone process, the coupler, the cream separator, dynamite, etc. In the eighties the generation and utilization of electricity were developed and the dynamo, the transformer and the motor began to be manu-factured on a large scale. The manufacture of machinery re-sulting from all these inventions and discoveries and their oper-ation in factories and shops has produced industries that absorb the energies of a large and ever-increasing number of people.

The country has been expand-ing with such rapidity, occasion-ing a corresponding increase in the demand for domestic con-sumption, that the manufactur-ing industry has had abundant opportunity for growth. An-other feature of considerable en-couragement to the manufactur-ing industry is the existence of excellent water falls, which fur-nish large quantities of electric-ity—the latest and most satis-factory kind of motive power—at a comparatively low rate. Canada's proximity to the mar-kets of the world is another fac-tor of much importance in the outlook for the Canadian manu-facturer, as well as for the pro-ducers of her natural products.

Viewed in the light of its phys-ical strength—its strength of resources and of location—Can-ada to-day is not highly or in-tensively developed. In fact, a glance at the present intensity of Canadian development re-veals a very surprising situation. A half-century ago both Can-ada and the United States were mainly agricultural and their respective populations bore a very similar ratio to their re-spective areas of improved land. For every thousand acres of im-proved land Canada had 212 persons and the United States 205 persons.

To-day, the situation is strik-ingly different. In the last fifty years the number of the coun-try's inhabitants per thousand acres of improved land has in-creased in the United States, but in Canada has declined by over 40 per cent.

But Canada is admirably equip-ped for varied and intensive de-velopment. She is naturally equipped with a broad and strong foundation for agricul-ture on the one hand, and like-wise, for mining, forest indus-tries, power development and a singular diversity of manufact-uring enterprise.

Clearly the diversified natural wealth of the Dominion leaves the Canadian people little to want and nothing to envy in strength of national property and prospect. To considerable areas still available and attrac-tive to extensive growth it cou-pled a broad and varied region of remarkable promise as a field for a long upward trend toward greater intensity of develop-ment.

Miss Campbell's Recipe for Cup Cakes

1/2 cup butter 2 cups pastry flour
1 cup sugar (or 1 1/4 cups
2 eggs bread flour)
1/2 teaspoon vanilla 3 teaspoons Magic extract Baking Powder
1/4 teaspoon salt 1 cup milk

Cream butter thoroughly; add sugar a little at a time, beating well. Add yolks of eggs and vanilla; beat well. Sift flour with baking powder and salt, and add, alternately with milk, to first mixture. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in greased cup cake tins, or in paper baking cups, in moderate oven at 375° F. about 25 minutes. Serve warm from the oven, sprinkled with powdered sugar. Or cool, and frost the tops. You will find many delicious frosting recipes in the Magic Cook Book.

"Cup Cakes are delicious when made with Magic Baking Powder,"

says Miss Helen Campbell, Director of The Chatelaine Institute

"Good baking goes hand in hand with good materials," Miss Campbell will tell you.

That's why Magic Baking Powder is used and recommended by The Chatelaine Institute. Magic meets all the Institute's rigid requirements of fine quality—repeated tests have proved it absolutely pure, uniform and dependable.

The majority of dietitians and teachers of cookery throughout Canada plan their recipes for Magic. They use it exclusively because they know it gives consistently better results.

And 3 out of 4 Canadian housewives say Magic is their favorite. It outsells all other baking powders combined.

Remember—substitutes are never as good. Do as the experts do. Use Magic Baking Powder.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits came aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she lay tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat were amazed at the sight of banditry in this great waterway country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, drew his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fired upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits set away with gold dust and choice peltry.

The third was of Curt Spaulding. And that picture, flanked with the chevrons and the belt-gun, hung more prominently than even the other two, as though, with that face always in front of him, Alan felt less lonely for his dead partner and could imagine Curt here in this cabin still.

In Curt's death he had lost the best and truest friend he had ever had or ever would have; and he knew that through all the years of his life he would be lonely for that strong hand-clasp and a voice he once had known. From a little pigeonhole between two logs—a secret mailbox for himself and his hard-working men—Alan pulled out a scrawled note from Corporal Bill Hardsock. He had to smile as he read, for the note was so like Bill.

"Somebody found an awfully dead Smoky on a mud bar down river this side the Big Alooska. Alan. He probably got drowned in the break-up but I'm going down to see who he is so's he won't be drawing treaty money by proxy for the next 20 years."

Alan sat down to write out the report of his last patrol. But his thoughts strayed to Elizabeth in the garden; to Haskell, there with her. He knew that these trips he constantly was sent on, these trivial assignments that took him away for days at a time, were deliberate on Haskell's part, to get him out of the road. With anger at this gross abuse of authority, he thought: "If Haskell could come with in a mile of managing this post him self, he'd frame some detail to keep me out in the bush altogether. Any person who'll wield his official power in a personal matter like this. They used to cut off a knight's spurs with an ax."

There was little passion in Alan's emotions toward Elizabeth, but there was a sturdy loyalty and a certain blind idealization of her as a girl. In that fatal patrol he and she had suffered a mutual loss of partner, brother. During the eighteen months since then, he had been her only friend here at Endurance, for even Mrs. Drummond, with whom she was living, did not like her. To have a girl so dependent upon him, not only for friendship but for maintenance itself, aroused a very tender and protective attitude in Alan. But at times, deep in his heart, he was troubled about his engagement to Elizabeth. At times the fear rose in him that their marriage was going to be a terrible mistake. Something lacked in their betrothal; they weren't the deep and intimate friends they should be.

It shocked him to realize he was going into marriage with a girl knowing he did not love her wholeheartedly. In brooding hours, when he thought of another girl in his life, of Joyce MacMillan and his comradeship intimacy with her, the old longing for that deeper and richer relation surged through him. He grew bitter at the secret powerful circumstances which had separated him from Joyce; which he kept locked within himself, telling no one, neither Joyce nor Elizabeth.

To other folks at Endurance, Alan's engagement to Elizabeth Spaulding had come as a staggering surprise. Knowing nothing of the all-powerful reason which had driven him to that engagement, they felt he had treated Joyce MacMillan rather badly; and not even their friendship for him would make them accept Elizabeth.

Father Claverly, alone, of all the people at Endurance, knew that there was something back of that engagement which Alan had kept to himself—some hidden reason, some unalterable fact, that would explain it. At first he had thought that the profound shock of a partner's death had caused Alan to turn to Elizabeth; but, with the passing months he became convinced the reason was not that. It was something deeper and more lasting.

With infinite sorrow Father Claverly had seen Alan's fine comradeship with Joyce break up and had watched the engagement come about. He saw that Elizabeth was a wise, cool-headed girl, very clever at managing relationships for her own ends. In the good priest's opinion the marriage of this cool-headed, calculating girl to a man so sincere and warm-hearted, would be a sorry, sorry pass.

When Elizabeth came in the door, she merely nodded to Alan's warm greeting. In her precise tones she said:

"I want to talk to you, Alan, about something very important to us both. Unless you're too busy. . ."

Her rebuff hurt Alan. Her coldness, her lack of any passion, were always bewildering to him. Waiting, painfully aware he could never answer her arguments, he glanced out the window at the river and shimmering pine hills. A mile down the broad Mackenzie a canoe, a small patrol craft with outboard motor, came whipping around a headland. Alan thought: "That's Bill Hardsock coming. And coming wide open. Something's happened."

Elizabeth saw the craft, too. But she glanced only once at it, entirely uninterested. Police work—patrols, arrests, map surveys, treaty money, pelts to be stamped, bickering Indians—all this bored her, now that the novelty of it had worn off.

She loved Alan—with reservations. She admired his natural-born leadership over other men; admired his rugged honesty, especially in contrast to Haskell's lack of it. In their life together Alan would always be loyal to her; she could always depend upon Alan Baker. And he could get her what she wanted of life. Much better than he himself did, she realized he had qualities that would take him far in any other profession: a good intellect, ambition, the ability to work hard, and—most valuable of all—a rare capacity for friendship.

All in all, Elizabeth felt that if only he did not choose to bury himself here in this northern backwoods Alan Baker was by far the likeliest man, of the four or five she had known well, to lift her out of genteel poverty to a more agreeable plane of life.

She said, "You know what I want to talk about." She asked pointedly, "When your term is up next month, are you going to re-enlist or not?"

Alan knew that Elizabeth was determined, heart and soul, that he should get out of the Mounted and take a good salaried position down in Victoria which Colonel Steele, commander of his regiment in the World War, had been wanting him to accept. But he was loath to take a job on a friendship basis; he preferred to stand on the more self-respecting ground of honest work honestly performed. And to leave this land where he had found freedom and happiness was an intolerable prospect. He loved this northern Mackenzie country as intensely as he hated the hectic stifling oppression of city life; and his comradeship with men like Bill Hardsock was precious to him.

If he tore himself away from all this, if he became a mere cog in an industrial machine, he would be uprooted and miserably unhappy.

But as things stood, he was in a blind alley. Haskell was riding him hard for personal reasons; a rank injustice had been done him. . . . There were a dozen powerful arguments on the other side, too.

After a moment he said slowly: "I suppose I oughtn't to sign on again. But it's hard to decide, Elizabeth."

"What is there to decide about? How can you tolerate this situation you're in? You're a subordinate, taking orders; you're liable to be demoted any day; you're compelled to do another man's work for him! You don't think your situation is going to change? You aren't expecting a commission any more now, I hope? Then why under heaven do you want to stay?"

Alan started to answer, but he checked the words. His reasons were deep and intangible things—his friendships, the freedom he'd found here, the sense of being rooted in the country, his ramified duties that held him with invisible bonds, his unwillingness to desert comrades when they sorely needed him, his reluctance to give the impression of having quit just because a commission was not forthcoming.

Down on the river Bill Hardsock came skimming full-tilt up to the landing, swerved the canoe around in a complete circle to stop it, leaped out upon the plank, tossed the painter to a sleepy Loucheux. He did not seem to notice Inspector Haskell only a couple rods away. At a lope he headed up the terrace, straight for Alan's cabin, as though Alan was the man to hear his news.

"If you had nothing to turn to," Elizabeth persisted, "it would be a little different. But you've got a position waiting, at four times your present salary, with advancement sure, with a chance to make even more on the side." She broke off: "But what's the use of going over and over these arguments? We've gone over them a dozen times. I didn't come for that."

She paused a second, to emphasize her next words. "If you intend to stay in the Mounted, I wish you would tell me so frankly, so that I can plan."

JOSEPH THE DREAMER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 37:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Boy's Dream.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Boy's Dream.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Right and Wrong Ambition.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Right and Wrong Ambition.

I. Joseph the Favored Child (vv. 1-13). Joseph was Jacob's favorite son. This favoritism expressed itself in a superior position and more respectable clothes. That Jacob should feel partial toward Joseph perhaps was inevitable, but that he should manifest it was extremely unwise.

II. Joseph Hated by His Brethren (v. 4). His superior character was a continual reminder to his brethren of their evil deeds. The silent rebuke of a righteous life is hard for the wicked to bear. His father's favoritism fanned this hatred into a flame which at last burst forth upon him. Such parental indiscretion may lead to murder. The good are not always loved.

III. Joseph's Dreams (vv. 5-11). God showed to Joseph by means of these dreams his future. It was right for Joseph to have these dreams because they were from God, but perhaps he was indiscreet in making them known. Often times the manner in which a thing is done offends more than the thing itself.

1. His brothers' sheaves bowing in obedience to his (vv. 5-8). This was rightly interpreted by them to mean their subjection and obedience to him. This intensified their hatred of him. It was hard enough for them to endure the father's favoritism, but to have this dream narrated, which pictured his rule over him, was more than they could endure.

2. The sun, moon, and eleven stars rendering obedience to him (vv. 9-11). This dream is wider in its application than that of the sheaves. The eleven stars are identical with the eleven sheaves. The sun and moon is rightly interpreted by his father as representing his father and mother rendering obedience to him. This dream created within his father's mind a suspicion of a lurking ambition of selfishness and vanity in Joseph's bosom. He rebuked him for it, but possessed the good sense to observe it. The hatred of his brethren revealed itself in envy.

IV. Joseph Sent by His Father on a Mission of Mercy to His Brethren (vv. 12-17).

His brethren had gone to Shechem, about fifty miles distant from Hebron, where was abundance of pasture for their flocks. Jacob became anxious about their welfare and sent Joseph to find out their condition. Knowing the attitude of his brethren toward him, he no doubt realized that his mission was fraught with grave danger. It means exposure to highway robbers, wild beasts, and the murderous hatred of his brethren. Undeterred by the envious hatred of his brethren, he willingly responded, "Here am I."

V. Joseph's Reception by His Brethren (vv. 18-28). As soon as they saw him their hatred began to burn.

1. Their murderous plot (vv. 18-22). They said, "Behold, this dreamer cometh. Come now therefore, and let us slay him." They thought to prevent these dreams from coming true by destroying the dreamer. Reuben dissuaded them from this act by proposing to cast him into a pit, thinking to rescue him and return him to his father.

2. They stripped him of his coat of many colors and cast him into the pit (vv. 23, 24). In spite of his earnest entreaty against this wicked act, they perpetrated this heartless cruelty (Gen. 42:21).

3. Their feasting (v. 25). Their heartlessness manifested itself in their enjoyment of a meal, perhaps within the sight and hearing of Joseph's cry.

4. Sold to the Ishmaelites (vv. 25-28). In the providence of God, these merchantmen passed by at the opportune time. Judah proposed that they sell him, as no gain could accrue from letting him die in the pit. Having done this infamous deed, they sought to cover it up by lying and deceit. They took his coat of many colors and dipped it in the blood of a kid and sent it to his father, allowing him to draw his own conclusion as to the matter. Jacob is now reaping what he had sown. Many years before this he had wronged a brother and deceived his father by trickery and lying.

"We can thank Long Distance for that cheque"

Old man Carrington was selling his farm and there were two fine teams for quick sale. Bill Smart didn't need them but he thought of a man he knew in the cartage business in town.

Bill called his man by Long Distance telephone that night and arranged to buy both teams for him next day on commission.

A few days later he had a nice cheque in the mail — and his telephone call cost him only 30 cents.
