Sir George Perley Hopeful for World Disarmament

Returns From Geneva Conference Satisfied with Progress Made—Confident of Results From Forthcoming Lausanne Gathering.

Quebec, May 26.—(C.P.)—"I feel that satisfactory progress has already been made and that we can look forward with confidence to further progress after the important gathering at Lausanne," stated Sir George Perley, head of the Canadian Delegation to the Geneva Disarmament Conference, upon his return to Canada on the Canadian Pacific Liner Empress of Britain.

Informed that the House of Commons was prorogued at Ottawa, Sir George released to the Canadian Press a statement he had intended to read in the House had it been still sitting. The statement follows:

"We have been in Geneva attending the Disarmament Conference to which we were sent by the Government of Canada, as an indication of the keen interest of the Canadian people in Disarmament and in the hope that we might help in the accomplishment of something concrete to prevent war and ensure peace.

"When we remember the various outside events which have delayed the work of the Conference, I feel that satisfactory progress has already been made and that we can look forward with confidence to further progress after the important gathering at Lausanne.

Progress at Arms Conference

"I know that some people have said that the Conference has accomplished very little, and have expressed some disappointment on that score. I do not agree with that view. No reasonable student of the problem of disarmament ever hoped for immediate or spectacular results. Man has been arming for thousands of years, and before a country will give up its arms it must establish a feeling of confidence with its neighbors. Disarmament is not an act, but a policy and one which can be carried out only by steady and continuous stages. It is not really conducive to progress to expect total immediate and complete disarmament at the first Conference.

"We should never forget that in a Conference such as is now taking place at Geneva, there are sixty states represented and every single step taken has to receive the approval of every one of those states. Unanimity is the first, and always a most difficult essential. We should further remember that the problem of disarmament is essentially political and therefore the solution of many and intricate problems has to be found before disarmament can make real progress," said Sir George.

"We all long so ardently for peace that these considerations are often overlooked by some whose intense desire for an immediate reduction of armaments

Sir G. H. Perley Likely for Post

Sir George Perley may be chairman of the general entertainment committee for the coming economic conference. It is considered that Sir George would be an excellent man for this important position because of his wide connection with club life in Canada, for it is expected the clubs of Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto and elsewhere will play an important part in the entertainment of the visitors. He was for some time Canadian High Commissioner in London and his extended personal acquaintances with many of the visitors is also being urged as a reason why he should accept the post.

Horse-show at Lucerne-in-Quebec this Week-end

Everything is in readiness for the Seignior Club's first annual horse show to be held on Friday and Saturday at Lucerne-in-Quebec, and from the entries received a very successful two days' meet is assured. For the past few days, laborers have been at work making jumps and erecting temporary stables, and provision has been made for the proper handling and feeding of all entrants.

The old nine-hole golf course, the scene of last autumn's point-to-point has again been chosen for the meet and will, no doubt, make an admirable setting. The countryside is now at its best, and besides contributing to the congenial scene of this sportive event, should duly impress visitors with the natural attractions of Argenteuil and this section of the Laurentians.

Lachute Town Council

A regular meeting of the Town Council was held in the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, June 1st., at which were present Mayor P. Dobbie, and Aldermen Jno. A. Rice, J. P. MacKimmie, Chas. Miller, Joseph Speight, O. Laurin, J. B. Raymond.

Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Accounts presented of financial statement and ordered paid.

Permit was granted to Mr. Lapierre to erect a bay window for his store on Main Street. Permit was also granted to Mr. Fassio of the Rex Theatre, to hold a matinee for children on July 1st. for the presentation of the wonderful jungle picture, "Tarzan" which is considered to be of educative value.

Ald. MacKimmie moved that the dog tax by-law be rigidly enforced.

Alderman Rice moved the 1st. reading of by-law relating to sale of milk.

Complaint was made from Mrs. T. McOuat against refuse being dumped on banks of River facing their property near the store. The posting of a prohibitive notice was ordered. Ald. MacKimmie moved the 1st. reading of amended business-tax by-law.

The secretary read a communication from the Board of Trade asking the Council to refrain from taking the vote on the 8th. and 9th. until the result of investigation has been received.

Alderman Miller moved the request be laid on the table. Alderman MacKimmie seconding the motion claiming he thought the request was an insult to the Council. Mayor Dobbie also expressed himself against the Board of Trade trying to run the town, instead of the appointed Council.

Dr. Lalonde appeared before the Council urging immediate closure of the present dump as it was in a deplorable condition and a menace to public health and suggested a good place on the farm of James Hay which would serve the purpose. The council agreed to take measures to remedy the situation.

Alderman Raymond brought up the matter of bush lot offered by Mr. Thompson subject to arrangements being made with the committee appointed of the Mayor and Aldermen Rice and Miller.

Mr. A. Larocque appeared before the Council relative to the East Ward sewer being laid for modern convenience of its residents. A petition is being circulated as it is thought advisable to have this work done before the sides are asphalted.

The Council adjourned until June 9th.

Appeal to the Ratepayers of Lachute

respecting By-law No. 126

"$26,000 for New Waterworks Intake at Pollock's Farm and Pipe Line to connect at present Intake."

You will be expected to cast your vote "YES" or "NO" on the above mentioned By-Law on June 8th. and 9th.

The largest part of the funds to be financed by By-Law in question, for an amount up to, but not exceeding $20,000, including 12½% for the Contractor, are to be disbursed by our Lachute Town Corporation without the supervision of an independent engineer to look after its interest as to class of materials to be supplied and proper execution of the work. The information available is that the Engineer who prepared plans and specifications is an employee of the contractor.

It would appear that the whole thing is left to the Contractor to execute the work at a cost not exceeding $20,000 including 12½% for his services.

WE ARE ABSOLUTELY AGAINST THE PRINCIPLE of our Town Corporation executing PUBLIC WORKS, of any kind, without advertising in the usual way and asking for TENDERS, to be submitted on plans and specifications, prepared in the best interest of the Corporation by its own engineer who will also supervise works and materials to be in strict conformity with said plans and specifications. The only other alternative is for the Town to execute the work by day labor at the lowest possible cost under the supervision of its appointed engineer.

AS BY-LAW NO. 126 fails to give proper protection to the rate-payers, it should be rejected.

—A Group of Rate-payers.

Canadian West Bidding for Re-establishment and Prosperity.

E. W. Beatty, K.C. and Premier Anderson Making Practical Efforts to Stabilize Agriculture in the West.

Canadians in Eastern Canada are well acquainted with Mr. E. W. Beatty, K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and his task of guiding the destiny of a great transcontinental transport system. Moreover, we hear occasionally of the keen interest taken by Mr. Beatty in many activities outside his arduous duties as a president. Now, according to despatches from the Prairies, he is playing a prominent and patriotic part in re-establishing the Western Provinces on a progressive basis, so that farmers and others interested in agricultural pursuits will be enabled, through financial assistance, to re-organize and to commence operations in the new venture of mixed farming.

This movement Mr. Beatty has quietly supported; he has been instrumental in raising the necessary financial assistance, for immediate progress of this new development. Such a move on Mr. Beatty's part is, to say the least, of nation-wide importance, and in bringing about such desired changes, he is carrying on a work that will have far-reaching effect. The agricultural situation in the West has been thoroughly studied by this eminent Canadian, and the outcome of his conclusions will be most interestingly followed from the Atlantic to the Pacific. As a wheat producing country the Dominion has many competitors, as evidenced by the grain situation of the past year, and by adopting the policy of mixed farming our western farmer will be in a better position to supply the Canadian market with the products of the soil and live stock, and to bid against foreign competition in all products of the farm.

The latest information from the West indicates that the provinces concerned have entered heartily into the new idea, in order that they may become self-supporting. It is interesting to point out that one great non-profit organization, which includes Mr. Beatty on its directorate, is loaning money to farmers for this very purpose, in an effort to stabilize western agriculture.

Success has greeted the back-to-the-land movement instituted by Premier Anderson of Saskatchewan, who it is claimed, has gained the support of nearly every urban municipality in the province. It is expected that more than 1,000 families from Regina and Saskatoon will be placed on farms, given a small amount of financial assistance and given a chance to earn livings for themselves.

This is a pioneer movement. Families are to be taken who have actual farming experience and who are physically fitted. No large sums of money are to be loaned but practical help will be extended by Government services. The step has found the unemployed eager to take part. It may reach much success.

Unemployment

"Agricola" Discourses on a National Problem

When we ploughed the earth with wooden sticks—when our clothing came mostly from the backs of animals, and for our use was refitted and refashioned by hand work—in those good old days when machinery had not destroyed the earth as a place of residence, and of happy living, there was unemployment even as now—perhaps not so widespread, nor so hopelessly unmanageable, but more or less prevalent—everywhere and all the time.

It may be that "hard times" are good for the human race, and work out eventually in the building up of a strong and self-reliant character. But there is a limit beyond which the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" are harmful. Hard times that terminate in starvation can be of no benefit to the victims either in this life or in any other.

Our endeavor should be to see that no one anywhere in our broad domain should be in danger of perishing for want of food.

That unemployment has been in the world from of old is shown by the story of the prodigal son who returned to his father's house in abject need; and in the story used by our Lord to illustrate the never failing call for workers in his vineyards:—

"Why stand ye here idle all the day long?" he remarked to

Church Parade for Boy Scouts at Brownsburg

On June 12th. the newly-organized Brownsburg Boy Scout Group will hold their first Church Parade, on the Canadian Industries Limited Picnic Grounds. It is expected that the Scouts from Lachute and St. Andrews will co-operate in making the event successful. Ministers of the various denominations in Brownsburg have signified their willingness to take a part in the ceremony, and the Vickers Boy Scout band of over thirty pieces will lead the hymns.

The Parade will start from the Brownsburg Social Club at 2.30 p.m. and the Flag will be raised by the Scouts at 3 p.m., followed by the service.

It is expected that this ceremony will give an impetus to the Scout movement in this district, and the public are invited to be present to lend moral support to this worthy cause. Further details will be published in next week's issue of the Watchman.

Fifth Anniversary Service

The Fifth Anniversary of the Dedication of the United Church was celebrated last Sunday, May 29th. at St. Andrews East. The special preacher for the occasion was Dr. T. A. Halpenny, Associate Pastor, St. James United Church, Montreal. At the morning service he was assisted by the Rev. Mr. J. Macaskill, and Mr. Kay. In the evening Rev. Mr. Strange of St. Therese also took part.

Dr. Halpenny took for his subject in the morning "Is your religion an asset or a liability?" He drew attention to the fact that it is easy to slip into the habit of mind which regards church work, church giving, and even the periods of devotion, as tasks to be performed and burdens to be carried; whereas, to the healthy spirit, the religious life is a staff to lean upon, a support in times of stress, the vital food which nourishes and strengthens the soul.

In his evening address Dr. Halpenny reviewed the marvelous achievements of modern science. He said that great inventions did not mean that new laws had begun to operate, but that man had discovered laws which already existed and had learned how to harness them for his own use. So, in this period of depression and of crisis, men should search with untiring zeal to discover the secrets, the laws which will bring relief to suffering humanity. The speaker suggested that perhaps the secret is not so far to seek, that if each individual would put in practice, in so far as he is able, the golden rules which make it possible for men to live in peace and harmony with one another, the problems of the race would automatically be solved.

The Lachute Male Quartette were heard in a very impressive number and the organ was under the skilled hands of Mr. Hall, of Lachute.

The beautiful array of white and mauve lilacs, cherry blossoms and pink tulips, together with the new gifts of choir and organ screens, brasses and chairs, combined to give the church a very attractive appearance.

HAWKESBURY ACCIDENT VICTIM BURIED

The funeral of Roland Quimet the last victim of the serious accident in which four were killed outright and two fatally injured near Chute au Blondeau, when a large branch hit a truck in which they were riding, took place last Saturday. Rev. J. Leclerc, parish priest officiated.

Lachute Board of Trade Meeting

The regular meeting of the Lachute Board of Trade was held in the Town Hall on Thursday, May 26th.

Mr. W. M. Scott was appointed chairman to conduct the meeting until arrival of the President who appeared later.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. Letters were read from the Bell Telephone Coy., referring to the request of Board to have the poles straightened. The company replied that they would comply with this request.

It was moved by Mr. Valois, seconded by Mr. A. Bothwell, that the secretary write the Council to fix a day on which to meet the Board and discuss the various matters suggested for betterment of our town, in which the Board is ready to extend its heartiest co-operation.

Mr. Larocque brought up the matter of sewers for East Ward and suggested this as an opportune time to have same installed, before the roads are built into the sidewalks. This aroused a discussion in which Mr. Tremblay referred to former efforts to have these measures adopted in general for the town, but suggestions had been turned down. He hoped, however, that Mr. Larocque would meet with success as the improvements were badly needed.

Insofar as the By-law 126 is to be submitted to public vote on June 8th.—9th., and in view of the diverse opinions on proposed extension of the town waterworks, Mr. Tremblay, seconded by Mr. G. Valois, moved that the Board submit a request to Quebec Public Service Commission for an investigation and a recommendation as to the new source of water supply. The motion was passed, 16 in favor and 2 dissenting, and the Secretary was instructed to write to Quebec, giving the following reasons why the Commission should deem it fit to intervene:

1. "For some time past, the present water supply has been known to be dangerous to public health and this has been proven by analysis of samples of water by the Provincial Laboratory.

2. "Pressure in the houses is insufficient in several sections of the town. Pressure for fire purposes is NIL. The Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association in their report Sept. 3rd., 1924 report as follows: "CONFAGRATION HAZARD"—Pronounced—Due chiefly to poor water supply, etc.

3. "The Provincial Fire Commissioner's report (Mr. Ernest Lavigne) dated Mar. 15th., 1929 terms the water supply for fire protection as insufficient.

4. "Members of the town Council have been discussing the situation for a considerable time but, due to lack of support from the rate-payers, division in the council and wholly divergent views.

Y.P.S. Entertained by Local I.O.O.F.

On Tuesday evening of this week the Lachute United Church Young People's Society met at the church hall for a brief regular business meeting, after which the members assembled at the lodge rooms of the I.O.O.F., No. 14, upon a cordial invitation received from the Lodge, to participate in a carpet bowling game.

Everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the pleasant evening at bowling and was keenly enthused with the game. Refreshments were served by the hosts to the young people, which were indeed appreciated. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the Oddfellows for their kindness, and a suitable reply was made by the Noble Grand, Lawrence Cruise.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

DOWN STREAM

Dear Boys :—

The other day when talking to a friend, he said, 'Let's go down stream.'

Before us was the river. The rains had of late been heavy and there was quite a rush of water, and, as I looked I saw bits of stick, then a log, after which a tree branch, covered with leaves that could not have been very old, so green and fresh they looked. All these followed each other over stones and hidden rocks, around bends, underneath little wooden bridges until they were lost to our view. I wondered much as to their final destination and what really happened to them when they got there.

Again I thought HOW EASY to travel that way, carried by the swiftly moving river. How pleasant just to glide on and on without effort, watching the shadows of the deep woods, the sunlight playing among the trees. To listen to the song of the birds and the whisper of the breeze as it gently circled around the tree tops. And a new picture was always waiting for you just by the very next corner.

When you come to think about it, life is very much like that. How often we are tempted to accept the invitation—LET'S GO DOWN STREAM. It's so easy. No worry, no exertion, no work, no responsibilities, just drifting on to somewhere, and, because we don't quite know where that 'somewhere' will be, well it just does not matter anyway.

Let's go down stream?—Why not?—It's pleasant to drift. Is it? Think again.

What about another invitation? LET'S GO UP STREAM. Ah, that's better. Now with coat off and sleeves rolled up, head erect and eyes alert we feel ourselves fit to battle against all odds.

Up stream against the current, fighting every inch of the way. Now we DO know where we are going. What is that, a snag in front? Oh, bother, look we are drifting back. No we are not, only delayed a little for see the way is clear once more. We must expect this on the journey UP STREAM, those who are floating down are SO careless. We learn by this experience and are gaining knowledge all the time. Yes, that's the secret KNOWLEDGE, you never get such a thing by being a drifter.

So we struggle on, in and out of the deep grey mists through the dangerous places, right out to the open stream. If our bodies are a little tired our hearts are light, for we are GETTING THERE.

Yes it's a long journey up stream and the going is hard, but the reward is greater for your eyes will rest upon the EVER-LASTING HILLS which are God's most precious gift.

A little way up is far better than all the way down stream, where the SOMEWHERE you are going is the NOWHERE that you reach.

Let's go down stream. I think not, thank you very much all the same.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS
By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 2.

On recovering from the shock of his parent's death, and believing like many other boys, that work could easily be found in any large city Jack had come to London, taking at a rental of a few shillings weekly, the small room in which we now find him with one still smaller containing two beds in which he and his sister slept. Day after day had been spent in an almost heart-breaking search for a job as errand boy to a Mr. William Smith who owned, and was very proud of a thriving greengrocer store situated in a busy thoroughfare two streets away.

The wage he earned was small but it more than paid the rent and, as he said, beggars could not be choosers.

His little sister was his great responsibility. Barely nine years old and always the pet of the family she had been kept from all contact with the rough and sordid side of life, and it was Jack's ambition that, come what may, this state of things should continue, though he felt that under present conditions it was not going to be at all easy. Fortunately the wife of his employer was a good natured motherly woman and had, even in this short time, become very attached to the winsome little girl who responded so gratefully to acts of kindness and who was so willing to do everything that she was told. She would indeed have offered to take Mary completely into her home but the suggestion was only made once and then met with such a storm of opposition from the child that it was never repeated. Jack never heard of it at all, which was perhaps as well, for a parting from his sister was the very last thing he contemplated.

Even now, as we have seen, he was becoming terribly impatient at her long delay and occupied himself by placing the kettle on the oil stove and getting out plates and bread and butter for their evening meal.

At last with relief he heard her feet on the stairs as she came running up. 'Where have you been all this time?' he asked, being far too happy at her coming to think of a scolding.

With a child's quick instinct she knew he had been worrying and putting a pair of small arms round his neck kissed him several times. 'Oh, Bubbles' she whispered nestling her head on his shoulder in response to his warm hug, 'you will never guess where I have been and what I have brought for you however much you try.'

'I see that someone has been spoiling my little sister,' he answered, fingering a row of beads that hung around her neck. 'Get down now. Babs and let's have tea, you shall tell me all the news when we have finished.'

Quickly obedient to the slightest request of her much loved brother the little girl moved to the table and looking at it said 'bread and butter and tea.' Is that all we are going to have Bubbles?

Surprised and not a little hurt Jack said gently, 'Sorry Babs, but until to-morrow, when I shall have some money, we must make that do.'

'But we won't' came the astonishing answer. 'We will have ham, sausage and eggs for here they are! and diving her hand into the pocket of her little coat, Mary produced a brown paper parcel which she handed her brother.

Jack took the packet but did not undo the string. 'Babs where did this come from?' he asked sternly. 'You have not been begging for food I hope, surely it has not come down to that' and his voice commenced to break.

In a moment the child was again in his arms. 'Oh Bubbles darling, don't look like that, she pleaded, its all right, really it is, Mrs. Smith said it was only a little treat for both of us. I did not do wrong bringing it? Say I did not, please!'

Greatly relieved and with a further hug and kiss he let her go. 'You did right to take it from Mrs. Smith for you would have hurt her feelings if you had not done so, but Babs, you must never take such things from anyone else, you understand that don't you' Jack said.

'Of course, Bubbles, she answered brightly, "You are a dear good brother to me and never will I do anything that will make you angry."

Because they were unexpected the little luxuries made a welcome addition to their ordinarily simple meal, and as they sat together both brother and sister felt more contented than they had ever been since that tragic day they had lost both their parents.

Talking over the doings of the day, and, looking forward to the work of the morrow, neither of them dreamt of the strange happenings that were so soon to take place and which in their coming would change the whole course of their lives. Indeed but for these same mysterious events this story, in all probability, would not have been written.

some men who were doing no work and their answer was "because no man hath hired us."

And if we continue the "capitalistic" order of things as in the past there will be unemployment forever.

No form of capitalistic government can be so just and universally helpful as a Christian Socialism, but even present forms endowed with that Socialistic, that Christian, spirit might do much for Canada, and pave the way for brighter and happier days in the future.

Any scheme for the relief of unemployment which merely provides for a great army of workmen (active or on the dole), and thereby smoothes the path of big business, but does not take into account the women and children, the weak and crippled, the sick and insane, is unworthy of our civilization, and ought not to be considered for a moment.

And any member of the house of commons voting for such a scheme ought never again to have a workman's ballot cast in his favor.

Big business has got us in such a hole, and has weighted us down with such a load of reckless and unwise promises to pay, and with such a flood of taxes to stave off those promises that it will now be some job to get ourselves dug out. We can only come up a little at a time, but we must dig out or become, even more than we are now, a race of wage slaves—wage slaves and billionaire.

I, for one, would not wish to live in such a country.

Well, what can we do? I admit that there is no hope at present of having parliament enact the golden rule, or establish a fair and just communistic or socialistic government—what I would call a Christian Socialism.

What we can do is to try the next best substitute—a plan which can be associated with our present form of government.

Let Parliament enact a law that all payments for labor shall be subject to a tax of ten per cent.

If I hire you to dig my garden, or shingle my roof, or make me a pair of boots—when I pay you I should deduct ten per cent of the labor charge. And that ten per cent I must deposit with the office, or agency, of the government in my district, in ten days or less.

The government should have on sale, or to be given away, at its agency, receipt blanks with spaces plainly indicated for the names of the employer and employed, the full amount paid, and the portion representing the labor charge.

No payment for labor of $1.00 or over should be made without the taking of a receipt (on government blank). A talon, or stub, would belong with each receipt, and on it a memorandum could be made out for presentation at the government agency, showing how the total is made up and how much is for labor, and how much is the ten per cent due the government.

These stubs, or a summary of them if there are many from one employer, would be the same as a deposit slip for money turned in.

We are supposed to have in Canada a population of about 10,000,000.

Suppose we have (male and female) 3,500,000 wage earners—laborers, clerks and salaried officials—in actual employment. We will estimate the average weekly wage at $12.00. I am figuring low, as we may be facing a period of limited earnings. But even at $12.00 we have in the ten per cent tax a weekly revenue of $4,200,000—a tidy sum to be handled by our government receiving tellers.

What will they do with all that money?

The 3,500,000 employed will have probably at least 4,000,000 dependents (wives and children) whom they must support.

We may reasonably estimate that there will not be more than 500,000 unemployed—who usually work, or wish to work, in some sort of industry; and they may have 500,000 dependents.

Then there are about 500,000 business men, lawyers, doctors, contractors, merchants, milkmen, butchers and those who have wealth, or a competence. They may work as hard as any of us, but are not on pay rolls—are in business for themselves, and need no assistance. We estimate that each of these has (on the average) at least one dependent (wife or child). That accounts for 500,000 more.

And this leaves another 500,000 who are not in the class of unemployed workman, nor among their dependents, but have to be cared for. These I call the unworkable. They are the orphaned children, the sick and insane, the lame, the halt, and the blind, the very aged and those incapacitated for wage earning by accidents or some kind of bodily infirmity.

Now how shall we divide the $4,200,000, the ten per cent. taxes taken from the actual workers?

I would pay $4.00 per week to the unemployed, the jobless workers. That would require a sum of $2,000,000. And I would pay them $1.00 per week for each of their dependents, and that would take $500,000 more.

National, Provincial and city governments might give temporary employment to those listed on the dole. And for such labor the wages paid must be not less than $8.00 per week (or twice the dole)—or for young and inexperienced help not less than 80 per cent of a fair wage paid in like positions.

National, Provincial, City and town governments might employ such labor (on the roads for instance) and pay only $8.00 per week, and that subject to the ten per cent tax. A workman would not be well satisfied with this, but could be relieved at any time by getting a better job for himself.

The idea is to give the $4.00 dole when there is no work for the man receiving it—double the dole (less ten per cent) when the government supplies the work—and nothing only when the man won't work.

The arrangement need not reduce the wages in factories and work employing many hands, as the government would only propose (or introduce) employees for such establishments at regular wages.

The government would (or should) be anxious to get jobs, for the unemployed—eager to get rid of the $4.00 weekly expense, but to receive instead the ten per cent of wages earned.

The National, Provincial and City governments would be able to get a lot of road, park and other work done at a low cost. The workman would be getting a living—a poor one it is true on the double dole, but he could quit for a better job at any time, and that would be not only to his advantage, but also to that of the government.

Manufacturers should be pleased with this plan, as it relieves them from any contribution toward a dole, or labor insurance. They ought to, and probably will, pay better wages in consequence.

The Labor Unions might continue their influence towards keeping up the regular wages in their fraternities, but they could not safely interfere with men on the "double dole" for if such men "down tools" they will lose all allowances due them under this insurance; their names would be dropped from the lists, and only reinstated after a court hearing.

The role of each of the Labor Unions would be to select (elect) from their number a member or two to act as intermediaries between the workmen and the employer, and between the workmen and the government.

These intermediaries could keep the government informed as to employment and factory conditions—could communicate in any way deemed expedient with members of parliament on labor subjects, and endeavor to make conditions and wages as favorable as possible for the men they would represent. Labor Unions well represented by these intermediaries would exercise a justly powerful influence in elections, and would doubtless be able to have the government name a fair wage in regular lines of work and large industrial enterprise.

It is important that the government should fix, or approve a fair wage scale, and then if men on the dole refuse work (of which they are capable) at an approved wage scale, the government would be well justified in dropping them from the dole lists.

But any man willing to work should have such protection and assistance as the government is able to give.

I am writing only in regard to payments received for labor; and money acquired where no labor is concerned is taken no account of. The Income tax will look after that.

WITH THE TRAIL RIDERS

East is East and West is West, but men ride where the sun shines and the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, with a membership which girdles the globe, are creating widespread interest with their plans for their 1932 expedition from Banff to Mount Assiniboine, through some of the most beautiful country in the great mountains from which they take their name. The famous peak, with its many adjoining lakes and valleys, was the focal point of the 1927 trail ride and this year's trip, starting on July 29, will follow generally the same lines, with nights spent in camp, according to the best traditions of the Order. Ample time will be given for exploring the territory traversed, the ride occupying five days and traversing Brewster and Allenby Creeks; Assiniboine Pass and the shores of Lake Magog to the great mountain, which is the objective of the riders. Return will be made through the Valley of the Rocks; the Golden Valley; Citadel Pass and so through Sunshine Camp to Banff once more. The pictures shown above are distinctly interesting and show Lt. Col. Phil Moore, president of the Trail Riders, and Mrs. Moore, on camel-back at the Pyramids, during the world-cruise of the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain", in strong contrast to the cowboy viewing Mount Assiniboine, where this year's trail ride leads. Inset is H. M. King Prajadhikop of Siam, who proved an enthusiastic trail rider during his visit to Canada last summer. Below, two fair bathers are seen setting out from one of the cabins at Assiniboine Camp.

Point Fortune. What might have been a fatal accident occurred here last Thursday. Mr. St. Jean snubbed 24 cribs of cord-wood on the river below Cushing's Mills. Before midnight, some fiend cut the lines while the men were all asleep in their cabin. Fortunately, as the lumber drifted downstream, it struck the pier of the boom before entering the slide, and the men were able to jump off in their shirts and drawers, just before the lumber was washed over the dam.

EASTERN TOWNSHIP FARMERS TO ORGANIZE

(M. Elizabeth McCurdy, Q.W.I.)

A rally of farmers of the Eastern Townships was held in Sherbrooke a few days ago for the purpose of considering the organizing of a Branch of the United Farmers of Canada. A fair attendance of farmers was present, and the discussion which took place covered very radical suggestions, as well as more practical and constructive ideas.

The lack of unity among farmers in marketing their produce was pointed out as the first obstacle to be overcome, of the present prevailing low prices were ever to be replaced by more satisfactory ones.

Co-operation, it was shown, was very necessary. Competition among farmers and the effect of causing some to slash prices in order to get orders, thus lowering the whole scale of

COMPANY'S COMING!

A handful of men in this town all quite busily occupied with the daily concerns of life, have found time and energy to plan for the success of our 1932 Lachute Fair. In spite of the handicap of government grants being greatly reduced, it is expected our Exhibition will pull through with flying colors. The Perley Bridge should make the fair-grounds more accessible to outsiders in Ontario, and promises to add considerably to the "gate."

There rests little doubt, weather-man assenting, that all spectators at the Fair will be gratified with the best available entertainment and fun; the agriculturist, too, will find no decline in either quality or quantity of the exhibits.

In fairness to the directors of the Fair and those who have worked strenuously for its success, it now remains with the Citizenry to co-operate. This can be done by extending hospitality, and by advertising the Exhibition among one's distant friends. By courteous treatment of visitors, and by improving the general appearance of their properties, Lachute citizens will have opportunity of boosting their home town and fostering its progress—A great opportunity!

SERVICE PLEASE!

With no intent to criticise, but purely in a spirit of helpfulness, The Watchman feels at liberty to pass a word of advice to local store-keepers. It has been said, complainingly, that customers visiting certain of our town merchants have met with irreproachable courtesy but deplorably poor service. It is needless to add that to keep a customer unnecessarily waiting is detrimental to a merchant's business, no matter how attractive his goods or his prices. A dissatisfied customer makes poor advertising. As the summer season approaches and incoming visitors are seeking the Best Place to Shop, our Lachute merchants may be well recommended to take stock of their sales-service and shop-methods.

DERBY HORSES SEEN IN LONDON MOVIE AS RACE IS RUN

As the famous Derby was run on Epsom Downs on Wednesday, the audience of a movie theatre were able to see it simultaneously on the screen. Arrangements were made to televise the race, J. L. Baird, inventor of the system of television used, supervised the arrangements himself.

Six cables were laid across the course to a spot near the winningpost. They connected with the main telephone line on the Downs. The apparatus receiving the picture was installed in a caravan opposite the grand stand. It converted these pictures into electrical impulses and transmitted them to the Baird studios in London, from whence they were relayed to the Metropolis Theatre, Victoria.

Thus the race was seen 16 miles away from the Epsom Downs on a screen 12 feet wide made of a wax composition. This is the largest television screen ever used.

The pictures of the race were received at the course in a mirror, which looks the whole way down the course and the horses appeared running towards the audience.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING

gent views held by the ratepayers as to proper site for new intake and proper system of mains for distribution of water etc., the situation appears to be beyond a satisfactory adjustment by the Council owing to considerable lack of unanimity, although it is been generally agreed that the installation of a new intake is necessary.

5. "Rate-payers are generally against chlorination or filtration of water supply. Taste of chlorinated water is objected to and filtration would be too costly.

6. "That a By-law for a certain intake has just been put through by the Council which it is considered does not constitute a safe investment as it is against best expert advice.

7. "That the difficulty cannot be solved, in our humble opinion, unless your commission, after proceeding with the most impartial enquiry, will issue an order, on merits of the case, directing at what site the new intake should be installed, determine the character of works to be executed, will fix delay and mode of execution so that Lachute may have an adequate and safe water supply for its population of approximately 4,000 and also take care of a reasonable increase.

8. "That in reaching any decision, as to amount and time of executing the work, due consideration be paid to the financial position of the Town of Lachute and the ability of its ratepayers to meet the increased taxation thereby incurred.

9. "This being a matter of serious importance as it concerns public health and adequate protection against fire hazards, the present request is submitted to your serious consideration."

Mr. Charron then moved that the secretary write the Council asking them not to proceed with the voting until after the result of the investigation by the Quebec Public Service Commission; the motion found a ready seconder in Mr. Gosselin.

Dr. Touchette reported on the bad condition of the Town dump and thought that arrangements could be made with Mr. James Hay, who had a more suitable place for the dumping of refuse.

The secretary was instructed to forward a letter to the Minister of Roads, urging that Route No. 8 starting at mileage 47.5, which was commenced last year, be at once completed in order to draw traffic which is now actually being diverted to the Ontario side. This would also mean much towards relieving local unemployment.

Those present at the meeting included Messrs. L. L. Legault, (Pres.) A. Bothwell, A. Gosselin, Dr. Rodrigue, W. M. Scott, Jas. W. Gall, A. A. McQuat, A. Larocque, G. Filion, Gaetan Valois, J. E. Walker, J. O. Bourgault, G. Y. Deacon, E. F. Ayers, H. E. Desjardins, Dr. Touchette, A. C. Lapierre, P. Roy, R. Charron, C. Tremblay and J. S. Giles.

The opportunity for many free excursion trips to New York, Boston, Toronto, Ottawa and other Canadian cities is offered by the Provincial Transport Company in a novel guessing contest. The public have been invited to guess the number of miles which their Motorcoaches travel on certain days, very much in the manner of pools on board ship. Details of this competition are given out over the air twice a week and the number of replies indicate that many people appreciate a Motorcoach trip in the warm weather.

blinds them to the difficulties in the way of such reduction.

Unexpected Difficulties.

"Besides that, it happens that 1932 is an unfortunate year for the Geneva Conference which has been interfered with by unexpected difficulties. There was the lamentable outbreak in the Far East necessitating the convocation of a special assembly of the League which interrupted the work of the Conference for some weeks. Then came the German elections and the reconstitution of the French government. Then followed the illness of Mr. MacDonald and the consequent interruption of important conversations which were going on between the representatives of the great powers. There were finally the French elections the inconclusive results of which have made it impossible for any delegation to speak for France on important matters before the middle of June. It is possibly not too much to say that without France no decision could be taken on matters of policy.

"It is in the light of the above considerations that we should try to estimate the achievements of the Conference up to the present."

Atmosphere of Goodwill

Continuing, Sir George said: "In the first place, the general debate participated in by forty-four states indicated an atmosphere of good-will, a realization of the seriousness of the problem and the necessity of doing something to solve it. The organization of the Conference has been established; a most intricate task in itself, and that organization has been functioning efficiently. An agenda has been adopted and the program of work outlined. Important resolutions have been carried, one to the effect that disarmament must proceed by successive stages, and a second, and most valuable one, accepting the principle of qualitative disarmament. This provided that the use of certain arms which are particularly aggressive in character, or dangerous to the civil population shall be prohibited to all states and be either abolished or internationalized.

This to many is a significant and far reaching development indicating the lines along which the disarmament movement can most usefully proceed at this time. It is felt that by prohibiting arms of peculiarly aggressive in character, the possibility of offensive war will be weakened, while the power of defense and the security of nations will be greatly increased, and the maintenance of the peace of the world be made more secure.

Committees Hard At Work

"Technical committees are now hard at work attempting to apply this principle of qualitative disarmament to armies, navies and air forces. But as a new French government cannot be formed and given a vote of confidence before the middle of June, the work of the Conference involving questions of principle has had of necessity to be temporarily postponed. This seemed, therefore to be a good opportunity for me, as head of the Canadian delegation to come over and report to the Government. Miss Winnifred Kydd, Canada's lady delegate, is also with us. She has been very active and helpful in Geneva, and is anxious now to explain to the women of Canada what the Conference has already accomplished. Hon. Maurice Dupre remains at Geneva as head of the Canadian delegation, he is vice president and has lately been acting as president of the naval commission which is engaged on very important technical work, and he has with him a capable advisory staff so that the Canadian viewpoint will be carefully put forward on all questions as they arise.

No Cause For Despair.

"In conclusion, it should be urged that there is no cause for either despair or discouragement in respect of the work of the Conference. A new French Government will soon be in office; important political conversations between the great powers will then be resumed; the Lausanne Conference, which is soon to meet, will give Europe's leaders a chance to deal with problems closely related to disarmament. Every delegation in Geneva is resolved to do what it can to see that this first World Disarmament Conference shall not fail. There is no question about that. They will see it through no matter how long it takes. But public opinion must continue to back them up. It must neither hinder the great work by an unreasonable impatience nor make it impossible by apathy and neglect. The Canadian people have shown their earnest interest in this cause and I am sure that there will be no flagging of this interest."

During the past few weeks there have been several barges of bass-wood shipped from our shores en route to England. This wood is to be used in the manufacture of matches and is being supplied from different parts of Argenteuil County.

Rev. and Mrs. Windsor have returned after spending several months in Florida and are visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. Neve.

THE LATE

MRS. THOS. HALL.

Sincere regret was felt last week when the news became known of the death of Mrs. T. Hall, of Chaboro, who passed away on Sunday, May 22nd., at the R. V. Hospital, Montreal, where she had been sent for treatment three weeks previously following a severe attack of grippe.

The deceased, who was in her 58th. year, was the eldest daughter of the late James Byrne, and was born and spent her life on the homestead, two miles north of Stonefield. In 1905 she was married to Thomas Hall, who, with a daughter Margaret and son Michael, survive to deeply mourn the loss of a devoted wife and loving mother.

Whole-hearted and sincere, a true friend and kind neighbor, she will be greatly missed from the circle of her old friends. The remains were brought from Montreal on Monday, and on Wednesday morning, May 25th. a long procession of sympathizing friends and neighbors followed them to the church at St. Philippe where solemn Requiem Mass was conducted by Rev. Father Bazinet; interment took place in the adjoining cemetery. The late Mrs. Hall is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Jas. Johnson, of Grenville, and Mrs. T. Burgess, of Santa Barbara, Cal.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

World Plane Model Show for Boys.

The glider and airplane model display at the 1933 World Boy Scout Jamboree, to be held in Hungary, will be in charge of Stephen de Horthy, eldest son of the Regent of Hungary, and one of Europe's experts in flying and gliding.

Old Fire Engine for Scout Camp.

A unique addition to the equipment of Mystery Island Scout camp site near Ottawa is an old hand-pump fire engine. It was presented by the Mayor and Council of Masson, Que. It will be used to pump water to the tank of a camp water system.

Scouts' Training Saves Their Mother

Two Scouts of Westfield, N. J. returned from school at noon to find their mother unconscious on the floor of the gas-filled kitchen. One threw open doors and windows and 'phoned the doctor; the other immediately began artificial respiration. The doctor, on another case, arrived twenty minutes later to find the mother partially recovered.
He declared the boys' promptness had saved her.

Home Economics

A Paper presented by Mrs. H. W. Butler at the Chatham Women's Institute, May 5th., 1932.

In dealing with the subject of Home Economics I feel you will all agree with me that it would be impossible, in the short time allotted, to cover more than a very small number of the agencies through which one can practice economies in the home. As a matter of fact the principal theme of my paper deals with elimination of unnecessary waste rather than economies.

Under this very interesting heading, however, we learn of home planning, which of course has a particular appeal to a pair of modern ambitious newlyweds. For example; an up-to-date home, now-a-days, is planned so that madam is relieved of much of the drudgery experienced by grandmother; though I believe that grandmother experienced a fair amount of joy in attendance on household duties in spite of the absence of modern inventions.

This revolutionary change from the old order of things has,
in a large measure, been made possible through the discovery and uses to which electricity can be put. No more standing over a hot fire with a piece of bread posing on the end of a miniature pitchfork, to make toast for breakfast; we have the electric toaster with which to prepare the delicious slice for breakfast. Electric refrigerations also play an important part in the modern home, especially in the prevention of enormous amounts of foodstuffs from going to waste. Electric clocks too that are positive in operation, provided the power remains on, wake us up in the morning. Then there is the electric vacuum cleaner that saves both time and energy in the daily round of household duties, and a host of other contrivances, all of which play an important part in the life of the modern housewife.

However, while many of the latest inventions find their way into the homes of Brownsburg residents I do not think a general talk along such lines would be of particular interest to those living in country districts.

During the late war when trade was brisk and money plentiful the majority of people became obsessed with the idea that the period of prosperity would continue indefinitely, and as a consequence money was lavishly squandered without thought for the days yet to come.
To-day we find ourselves living through a period of depression which the world has not before known, and while we in this locality are more fortunate than those in other parts of the country there is no good reason why we should not make a deep study of economies in the home at this time. We can find plenty of food for thought in articles constantly appearing in Canadian newspapers and magazines.

Food, is without doubt a topic worthy of study to-day. Not as to what kind of foods we shall eat so much as learning how to utilize food in such a way so that as little as possible is actually wasted.

How shall we begin to practice economy in the matter of foodstuffs. First of all the keen and efficient housewife will take a particular interest in the purchase of food for the family table. It is a good plan not to buy too large quantities of any edibles that are likely to deteriorate through not being consumed fast enough. Sometimes when prices are attractive, one may be tempted to buy a bushel of apples, when two or three pounds would be sufficient.
About half way through the bushel it is discovered that the apples left over have become soft and one is then afraid to use them because of the possible ill effects from eating food that has certainly started to decay.

Consequently what is left promptly finds its way into the garbage barrel there to continue the process of decomposition;
which is not only wasteful but can also become a menace to health through germ carrying flies. I have used apples merely as an illustration. But the practice of economy in purchases is equally applicable to foods of all kinds including apples. Buy only what you feel reasonably sure will be consumed without unnecessary waste.

Most of us enjoy the art of preserving fruits and vegetables.
Here again we may discover too late that what we thought would produce a saving actually results in a loss, all because of insufficient knowledge, not only in preparation but also in methods of storage after the cooking and bottling process has been carried out. No doubt we gain knowledge by experience, but the suggestion here is not economy at all unless every detail has been gone into very carefully.

Now let us think for a moment or two in regard to the most commonplace, yet one of the most essential foods of the home, which is bread. There is no doubt that a whole lot more than necessary is wasted, perhaps because of its cheapness first of all.

Where chickens are kept the waste is not altogether apparent because bread left over from meals is considered a by-product and is fed to the chickens and shows a return in eggs, and finally the chicken itself. But where these conditions do not prevail stale bread is often thrown away. Bread pudding finds a solution to the stale bread problem and at the same time provides a means of using up any jam which may have been left over from a previous meal.

We may each have a different way of making a bread pudding but unless the dish is camouflaged it may turn out to be only a bread pudding after all and as such not prove enticing enough to tempt the palates of all members of the family.
A good recipe consists of the following. Take a baking dish, butter it, and place therein a pint of bread crumbs and a quart of milk; set these on the back of the kitchen range for an hour to soak the bread thoroughly. Add a cup of raisins, a small cup of sugar, a teaspoon of salt and one whole egg and the yoke of another well beaten.
Bake in a moderate oven for three quarters of an hour—or until done. Spread the top with left over jam or preserves, make a meringue of the white of egg, spread over the top and brown
in the oven.

In re-heating potatoes for supper it sometimes happens that the supply is limited, so slice a piece of bread, cut into cubes and serve with the potatoes, also a finely minced onion adds to the flavor.

Another supper dish has toast
as a basis, minced left-over meat of any kind being re-heated,
seasoned with salt and pepper,
and onion if desired, the whole being served on slices of toast.

It is quite possible to have very little stale bread by keeping all extra loaves in a cool place, like the cellar, and in stone jars. By wrapping left over slices in a clean cloth and placing them in a stone jar, covered, they will not become dried before the next meal.

This concludes what I have to say on Home Economics for this afternoon. There is ample scope for an almost endless discussion of this very interesting subject and I think it should be continued by other members of this branch of the Women's Institute at future meetings.

DIET IN ANEMIA

Spring sometimes brings a run-down condition in it's wake.
We may not feel sick actually, but we just haven't any pep. At times the condition of the blood is responsible for this, and to bring it back to it's normal condition we need to increase the quantity of iron and copper in your foods. We can get iron in pills or medicine, but a great part of that iron is not assimilated and just passes out without doing much good. The iron that we get in our food is assimilated by the body, so that is the best way to get it.

It is not a difficult proposition to add iron to the food as there are so many foods which contain it in relatively high quantities. Modern knowledge has given us the facts of the value of liver in the diet. It is as a curative property in pernicious anemia and in fact is a valuable food for anyone on account of its iron content. Not much liver goes to the cat these days
as it is fashionable and expensive food. Kidney is another meat that might be used in greater quantity. Beef is relatively high in iron and steaks, good roast beef and beef steaks are all valuable. Eggs are another protein food that are valuable because of their iron. The egg white does not contain much but the yolk is rich in it.

Oatmeal is another good friend. In fact all the cereals that contain the whole grains and the breads made of whole wheat or graham flour are good.
The dried fruits such as raisins dates, and prunes are specially good. Then the greens, spin-ach, lettuce, dandelion greens, beet tops, water-cress and others
you may be able to get.

Some of you are old enough to remember having to take sulphur and molasses in the spring.
Molasses is still good as it contains iron and gingerbreads, baked beans with molasses and so on are good foods to add to the diet. Do your children like bread and molasses? I make a sandwich of it for them as it is not so sticky and hard to handle that way. I butter one slice of bread generously and leave the other slice unbuttered for the molasses. If you butter both slices the molasses skids too much. Milk, which is such a valuable food, has very little iron, but it has so many other good points that it should not be neglected even in a diet, high in iron. Nature has so many amazing sides. Milk has no iron and in order to give young animals or babies a sufficient supply, Nature has stored enough iron in the liver to last until the young animal is weaned.

If you are trying to increase the number of red corpuscles in your blood, do not forget that sunshine is one of the best helps.
Get all the sunshine you can when the Spring sunshine tempts you out, obey that impulse.

Iron*

PRUNE WHIP

2 egg whites
12 to 18 cooked prunes
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
2 egg yolks
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon sugar

Beat egg whites with a Dover beater until fairly stiff. Add prunes, stoned and cut in pieces.
Continue beating until the mixture is stiff. This does not usually require any additional sugar as the sugar in the prunes should be sufficient. It is advisable to taste and add sugar if necessary. Make a custard sauce with the remaining ingredients, being careful not to cook at a high temperature or too long as either procedure will curdle the sauce. So remember, slow cooking and remove from the heat as soon as the mixture will coat the spoon.
Chill thoroughly. This recipe will serve six, so it may be halved for a small family.

RAISIN GINGERBREAD

1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter
1 cup molasses
2 teaspoons soda dissolved in cup of boiling water
2 1/2 cups flour
1 egg
1 teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves and ginger

1 cup raisins
Cream butter and sugar. Add molasses and beaten egg. Add soda dissolved in water and sift in the flour and spices. Add raisins and bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees.

SPANISH LIVER

Roll slices of liver in flour.
Brown the liver in bacon dripping. Onion browned at the same time adds to the flavour of the dish, if one likes onion.
When nicely browned cover with boiling water, season with salt and pepper, cover the dish and let simmer gently for an hour. Liver is not a cure for secondary anemia as it is for pernicious anemia, but it is a highly desirable meat and should be included frequently in the diet.

Try Miss McFarlane's Favorite Recipe for BISCUITS

1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups pastry flour
(or 1 1/2 cups bread flour)
1/4 cup milk, or half milk and half water

4 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
2 tablespoons shortening

"For Light, Flaky Biscuits use Magic Baking Powder,"

says Miss M. McFarlane, dietitian of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto

"I RECOMMEND Magic because I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients."

Miss McFarlane's opinion is based on a thorough knowledge of food chemistry, and on close study of food effects upon the body. On practical cooking experience, too.

Most dietitians in public institutions, like Miss McFarlane, use Magic exclusively. Because it is always uniform, dependable, and gives consistently better baking results.

And Magic is the favorite of Canadian housewives. It outsells all other baking powders combined.

You'll find Magic makes all your baked foods unusually light and tender... and gives you the same perfect results every time.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of banditry in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits get away with gold dust and choice fine outfit. . . . He was the only one who drew a gun. . . . But he could not speak; he could only stare at Bill. "And if Father Claverly hadn't stepped in and helped stop a rush Alan, they'd have shot up the whole deck. They slung the dust and furs into their canoes, and . . . Did they get away? What brought me busting up the river? I hope they did—clean slicker'n a whistle!"

In the pause then, Alan fought to shake off his daze. He had to make the plans, find a patrol, get into action. It was all in his hands—the pursuit, the capture, the whole heavy responsibility.

He demanded: "Who were they? Trappers, did you say?"

"Un' know who, Alan. But strangers. Five whites and one 'breed."

"Strangers? Can't be! Not in this country."

"But that's what they were. No body on the boat had ever seen a single one of 'em."

Alan did not believe this, but for the moment he passed it up.

"Which way did they go? Have motors on their canoes?"

"No. Paddle craft. They whipped up the Big Alooska."

Echoing this very fear, Bill said:

"They'll have to pass MacMillan's place, Alan. Ten chances to one, Dave's gone out somewhere after spring peltry and Joyce is there all by herself. . . ."

"But maybe they won't stop," Alan argued. His words were more a prayer for Joyce. "They'll probably try to sneak past. . . . He broke off."

"Bill, go down to barracks, find Ped. tell him to get the launch in shape to travel. While you're doing that, I'll go tell Haskell."

Halfway down the slope Alan came upon Constable Larry Young, who was spreading Haskell's bed clothing on the grassy terrace to sun.

An older man, past forty, a native of this Waterways country, Larry had spent his boyhood years living with Crees and Chipewyans; and by easy odds he was the best bush detective in the whole division. But in matters of discipline he was worse than Bill Hardsock, for he was older, more set in his ways, more resentful of personal affront. Months ago Haskell had busted him from a corporal; and by humiliating him with orderly duties, he had been trying to make Larry knuckle under. Waiting for another month's pay so he could buy out of the Mounted, Larry was going about his "squaw work" with stoical face, chalking up his personal score against the day when he would be out of service and could settle with Haskell in man-to-man fashion.

Alan bade him: "Larry, drop that. Go and help Bill out. He'll tell you what's up."

It was rare that Inspector Haskell allowed his temper to get the upper hand. He had learned self-control in the hard army school, and he considered that any exhibition of temper was a plebeian thing. But when Alan Baker came into the cabin, Haskell was thoroughly and hotly angered.

A dozen things had happened this morning to irritate him. Constable Whipple, his stool pigeon, a thin clerkish recruit whom he had brought along to Endurance, had repeated several infuriating jokes about him which the men were tossing back and forth in barracks. A few minutes ago Bill Hardsock, plainly carrying important news, had brushed past him as though he had not existed, and had taken the news straight to Alan Baker. And just now through the open door he had seen Baker order Larry Young to drop work assigned by a superior officer and do something else.

To be so plainly ignored by his own men when any matter of importance came up, made him appear a nobody. To have Baker issuing orders and getting a patrol ready without first consulting him, seemed to him a gross violation of discipline. He had formerly been forced to let Baker have his way in managing the post; but now, shocked at realizing how very little he himself amounted to here, and confident that his six months of experience made him capable of running the detachment himself, he had sworn he was going to come down on these men and come down hard.

But the secret and real source of his anger was a deep smoldering jealousy of Baker because of Elizabeth Spaulding. More clearly at every talk with her, he saw she trusted Baker, liked him, and was going to marry him. Her cool inaccessibility maddened Haskell; and her comparison between him and a ninety-month sergeant cut his pride to the quick.

Pretty, cool, a trifle haughty, she was just the kind of girl who suited him, and was the only person here at Endurance whom he cared to associate with. His admiration had mounted. It had quickened with passion. It had become a fire in his blood

—the first and only passionate affection he had ever known. His life, formerly so leisurely and purposeless, had taken on an aim, a goal. That goal was to smash her engagement and wrest her away from Baker.

As Alan now hurried into the cabin, Haskell swung on him:

"Don't you know better than to come busting into an officer's quarters without knocking and asking permission? Go out and try it again."

His words went past Alan unheeded. Alan's mind was too much a turmoil. . . . Jimmy murdered, Joyce alone there on the lonely savage Alooska, those six bandit strangers escaping with their loot. . . . There was but one thought in his mind—to overhaul those two canoes before they were lost beyond all pursuit.

Forgetting even his salute, he came across to the desk. As though checked by the look on his face, Haskell did not repeat the reprimand. Instead he listened silently while Alan reported the robbery, murder, escape.

"They're heading up the Big Alooska toward a muskeg country lying back there in the northeast," Alan explained quickly. "It's called the Thal-Azzah, the Land of Many Waters. It's ten thousand square miles of criss-cross waterways—lakes, channels, slow creeks, and soup-thin bog all covered with flags and willows. They're heading for the Thal-Azzah. That's why they staged the robbery at the Alooska mouth—so they'd have a straight shoot into that muskeg. If they reach it we might never get them. I'm going to take the launch and the five men I've got—"

Haskell stiffened. In sarcastic tones he interrupted: "You've got? Just a second, Baker. It would be a little better form to give your report and possibly make suggestions, and then allow me, as officer commanding here, to issue orders."

Alan stared at him in surprise. After all the long months of the winter past when he had initiated every patrol that went out, he was totally unprepared for this testy reprimand.

An anger rose in him at Haskell's housing to bandy personalities just now when those two canoes were whipping up the Alooska.

Trying to fight down his impatience, he said: "Maybe it was tactless of me. But all along I've been—"

"Yes, certainly—acting as though you were O. C. around here. You didn't appreciate tolerance when you had it. You can take note from now on you haven't got it! I'll issue the orders about this patrol."

Abruptly he turned away to the wall behind him where a map of the Endurance country was tacked up. A big six-foot-square mosaic. It was the inspector's own handiwork—a synthesis of government reports, explorers' sketches and unreliable Indian accounts. Though a few of the larger details were correct, in Alan's eyes it was a clumsy and ridiculous piece of charting.

As he waited, swearing at this loss of precious minutes, Alan happened to see Constable Whipple over in a corner, making inventory entries at a table. He said:

"Whipple, you'd better knock off on that and get into fatigue clothes. We'll need all the men on this patrol."

Whipple did not obey him, or stir, but waited for the inspector's orders.

Alan later remembered, to his heavy cost and sorrow, how Whipple had sat there in the corner, listening, scratching away with a pen, while Bill and Larry and Pedneault were down at the wharf hurriedly making ready.

In helpless exasperation at Haskell, he thought: "Good Lord, aren't you ever going to get through studying that crazy d-d map?" Back of this change in Haskell, this angry decision to run Endurance according to his own notions, Alan sensed an ugly hostility against him personally. He was quite well aware of the cause of that bad blood. He had not been blind these last months; he knew Haskell was madly in love with Elizabeth.

Presently, turning around from his map, Haskell said:

"I see that the Big Alooska, about a hundred miles northeast from its mouth, divides into two branches."

To hurry this talk up, Alan stepped around behind the desk, and pointed at the map as he spoke.

"Yes, that forks is called Big Leavanga. But it's farther east than your map shows; it's nearer two hundred miles. Here's MacMillan's trading post. Here's the Forks. The right branch, leads southeast through this . . . it should be marked timber country. The left branch goes northeast into the big muskeg. About here is where the Thal-Azzah should be marked. They're heading up this left branch for the Thal-Azzah—"

Interrupting, Haskell demanded, "How do you know they're doing that?"

"I don't know, but it's a sensible guess. The Thal-Azzah is a hiding place made to order, and they're surely breaking for it."

"Hmmp! Maybe," Haskell lit a cigarette, and went on studying the map. Turning, he ordered:

"You'll take the launch and the five men, Baker, and go up the Alooska. If you don't overtake those bandits before reaching the Forks, leave the launch there, split your party, three men each, and follow up both those branches—"

Alan objected, "But three men against six, the six who pulled a trick like that robbery—three mightn't be able to handle them. They've got a fortune in their possession; they're going to put up a fight."

The Greatest Legacy

of the Canadian people to the next generation

...is life insurance

When the Sun Life began business in 1871 life insurance in Canada was $13 per capita.

TODAY it is $635 per capita.

With one exception, Canadians are now the highest insured people in the world.

The Sun Life has played a leading part in fostering this thrift in the Canadian people and in protecting Canadian homes.

Lesson for June 5

JOSEPH THE WORKER

LESSON TEXT—Gen. 41:45-51.
GOLDEN TEXT—Gen. 41:45-51.
PRINCIPAL TOPIC—Joseph the Worker.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Rewards of Faithfulness.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Religious Value of Work.

Joseph was not a self-made man, but a God-made man. His masters always attributed the quality of his character and the success of his work to the fact that the Lord was with him.

I. Joseph Serving Potiphar (39:1-20).

1. Sold to the Ishmaelites (37:28). Joseph was sent by his father to his brethren on an errand of mercy. At the sight of Joseph the murderous envy of his brethren was stirred up. They first proposed to kill him in order to prevent his dreams from coming true. Finally the prudent suggestion of Judah to sell him prevailed, and he was carried to Egypt and sold as a slave to Potiphar.

2. His prosperity while a slave in Potiphar's house (39:2-6). This prosperity consisted of:

- a. Being accorded the privilege of Potiphar's house. By "house" is meant his private residence instead of fields or public buildings.
- b. He became Potiphar's personal attendant (v. 4).
- c. He was made overseer of Potiphar's house (v. 4).
- d. He brought prosperity to Potiphar (v. 5). The Lord blessed Potiphar for Joseph's sake.
- e. He possessed an attractive personality (v. 6). His fine physique and commanding personality were gifts from God.

3. His temptation (vv. 7-20). Potiphar's wife became infatuated with this handsome slave. He resisted her, unwilling to sin against his master and his God.

II. Joseph Serving in Prison (39:21-40:23).

1. Overseeing the prisoners (39:21-40:4). Being defeated in her wicked purpose, Potiphar's wife accused Joseph falsely. Potiphar must not have really believed his wife's story, or he would have put Joseph to death. He imprisoned him, the least that was possible under the circumstances.

a. The Lord gave him favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison (v. 21). This keeper was none other than Potiphar himself (40:3, cf. 39:1).

b. He was given charge of the prisoners (v. 22). Potiphar knew Joseph's ability and faithfulness, therefore gave him employment of the most important kind.

c. The Lord made him to be prosperous (v. 23). Joseph's success was due to the hand of God upon him.

2. Interpreting the dreams of the butler and the baker (40:5-23). These were two very important officers in Pharaoh's court, their business being to provide the drink and food of the ruler and his household. These officers had disturbing dreams. He interpreted their dreams. His interpretation was favorable to the butler, who gave his pledge to Joseph that he would intercede with Pharaoh for him when he was set free.

III. Joseph Serving Pharaoh (41:1-57).

1. Interpreting his dream (vv. 1-32). For two full years Joseph remained in prison, forgotten by the butler. Pharaoh's dream brought to Joseph a great opportunity. The failure of the wise men of Egypt to interpret the dream caused the chief butler to remember what Joseph had done for him. Joseph was brought out of prison and made known to Pharaoh that it meant seven years of plenty followed by seven years of famine.

2. Advising Pharaoh (vv. 33-50). He suggested to him that part of the produce be stored during the years of plenty. The plan appealed to Pharaoh, and he invested Joseph with authority to execute it.

3. Preparing for famine (vv. 51-57). During the seven years the earth brought forth plentifully. Clothed with royal authority, Joseph went over all the country and gathered and stored the food in all the cities.

4. Selling food to the needy (vv. 53-57).

a. At last the years of fruitfulness ended and then began famine in all the lands (v. 53).

b. Bread was to be found in Egypt only (v. 54). This was the result of Joseph's foresight and preparation.

c. Distribution in the hands of Joseph (vv. 55-57). He opened the storehouses and sold food unto the Egyptians and foreigners.

Sure Remedy

There is no surer remedy for desponding weakness than, when we have done our own parts, to commit all cheerfully to the rest, to the good pleasure of heaven. — Sir Roger L'Estrange.

God's Demands

God demands of us that though we lose health and wealth we do not lose faith in him, and though we have abundantly of both that we do not lose sight of him.

MILLE ISLES

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. Wm. H. Wood, Cambria, on May 25th. when Mr. Garnet Wood and Miss Ruth Wood were united in marriage by the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh. Mr. Harry Burns was best man, Miss Ellen Wood bridesmaid, and Mrs. John Noble, maid-of-honor. As the mother of the bridegroom had recently passed away, only the immediate relatives were invited to the reception following the ceremony.

The community wishes them much joy.

Mr. Frost and family have removed from the Campbell property and are now located in the Craig Settlement.

It was expected that work on the new gravel road would start again early in the Spring. There seems to be some delay. Why?

Miss Pollock is building a new road to her new Boarding house at considerable expense. This will greatly improve the approach.

The Rector visited round the Valley Settlement during the week and took dinner on Friday with Mr. Jas. Dawson, and on Sunday with our worthy mayor.

District roads are very good just now, and all local cars have made their appearance although folks haven't much time to run them—being more busily concerned with planting the crop and preparing for the dairy season.

No serious complaint from this community and all are looking forward to a prosperous summer.

Choral and Dramatic Presentation at St. Andrews

Credit Due to Ladies' Choir for Successful Entertainment on Tuesday last

Those who were privileged to attend the Concert given in the St. Andrews East Town Hall, on Tuesday evening, last were very fortunate.

The first part of the entertainment opened by the singing of O Canada, followed by the selection, "The Lady of Shalot." This was a very difficult item, as all who understand music know, but under the able leadership of Mrs. H. P. Bezanson, was rendered in exact time and harmony. The soloists, Mrs. F. A. Robertson, Mrs. L. H. Bezanson, and Mrs. L. W. J. Morris took their respective parts, with ease and perfection adding much to the impressiveness of the rendering, while Miss Ruth Todd, accompanied perfectly at the piano.

A humorous selected reading dealing with "Buying a Hat," by Miss Yarker was given with much expression and was well received by an appreciative audience.

The closing Chorus, "Come where the Lilies Bloom" was most sweetly sung and the blending of the different voices was very effective.

The Comedy "Down Fido" was very well acted, the cast taking their part to perfection, and keeping the audience in fits of laughter.

Mrs. H. P. Bezanson, who directed the Choral and Mrs. J. Macaskill who was in charge of the play are both to be congratulated for their splendid work and the most gratifying results which were readily seen by the continued applause.

Mayor Euclid Ladouceur expressed his appreciation to Mrs. Bezanson on behalf of the Town for the very pleasant evening that had been given.

Mrs. Thos. Berry, Beloved Resident of Hill Head Passes Away

There passed away after an illness of only one week's duration, one who was highly esteemed in this community, in the person of Mrs. Thos. Berry. The deceased, whose maiden name was Margaret Smith, daughter of the late John Smith and Agnes Scott, was born at Hill Foot on April 20, 1872. Her death occurred on the 40th. Anniversary of her marriage to her late husband.

The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon, from her late residence at Hill Head to Lachute cemetery. The service was conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, who spoke very comforting words to the bereaved. The remains were borne to their last resting place by Robt. Doig, David Berry, Wm. Morrison, Murray McQuat, Wm. Murray, Thos. Hume.

There remains to mourn the loss of a devoted mother, three sons, Sydney of Thos. Gore; Elmer of Hill Foot and James at home; two daughters, Mrs. L. Hardy, Summerstown, Ont.; and Doris at home. There also remains one brother, Robt. Smith of San Francisco, Calif., and seven grandchildren.

Wreaths were placed on the casket by the family; Ladies' Aid of Thos. Gore; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Pollock; Sprays from Mr. and Mrs. A. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. D. Berry, Miss N. C. Berry and Mrs. J. Secord.

Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were: Miss N. C. Berry, St. Lambert; Mrs. L. Nowell, Montreal; and Mr. L. Handy, Summerstown, Ont.

Principal Hall Addresses Frontier W.I.

The Frontier Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Jas. Murdoch on Monday night last and enjoyed a splendid address on Education and Better Schools, by Mr. Clifton Hall, Principal of Lachute Academy, and the ladies present went back fully convinced that Lachute is most fortunate in having Mr. Hall directing the education of its children.

It is to be regretted that we cannot quote Mr. Hall's address verbatim. One point however the speaker stressed, was that Education meant "teaching the children how to live," also that living today was a more complicated matter than in the days of our forefathers. Mr. Hall also spoke of the hardships of the annual promotion examinations in our public High Schools and Universities. Apart from the harm and worry caused to nervous pupils in these exams, the speaker believed that children would work considerably better during the year if they knew that their standing depended on the year's work instead of on the annual "pre-examination cram."

Mr. Hall, in speaking of our international relationships, advocated quite strongly the work of the Junior Red Cross, which he said, could help by educating the school children by means of international correspondence, with the pupils of other countries, and by the exchange of portfolios, etc., in world friendliness. This would help in later years perhaps to avert war.

In speaking of war, he pictured the horror another war such as was experienced a few years ago, would cause.

While the Peace Conference was endeavoring to arrange for peace and world disarmament, what are the scientists doing? Experimenting in terrible deadly gases, which could wipe out civilization in a very short space of time. Mr. Hall thinks, as do many of us, that this depression is the aftermath of the Great World War, and that the people of today are paying for war, as did the people of 100 years ago.

All those in attendance expressed enjoyment of Mr. Hall's address, and hope for the privilege of hearing another discourse from him, at an early date.

Bethany Street Scene of Fire

Damage estimated at approximately $1,000 resulted from a fire on Bethany Street, Monday afternoon, in the property of Miss Bigras, occupied by Michael Lackner as a furniture repair shop. The downstairs interior was burnt throughout, but the local fire brigade under Chief Geo. Y. Deacon were soon on the scene and subdued the blaze with two lines of hose.

The cause of the outbreak was not decided. Mr. Lackner was out at the time and a small fire was left burning in the stove. The outbreak appeared to start in the region of the paint cupboard, and may have been due to an overheated or defective stove-pipe.

It is understood both the property and contents are covered by insurance against fire loss.

The goodly number of entries according to Lachute Fair directors, ensure an interesting line of livestock, poultry, and agricultural exhibits this year. Combined with an attractive programme of performers and fire-works, horse-racing and the best available midway features, the quality of exhibits promises every success to the Spring Fair next week, June 15-18. Every citizen should plan to attend on one or more of these days.

Fall in Line!

There is an element of uncertainty in every undertaking. The utmost of man's contribution toward success is to eliminate, as far as humanly possible the many uncertainties which can be removed.

The only doubtful factor in the coming annual event of Lachute's Spring Fair is the weather. Our Fair directors this year have made every provision, planned every attraction, and eliminated all removeable hitches in the programme, so that the Exhibition next week (15th. to 18th.) may be gratifying to spectators and exhibitors, and a credit to its producers, the Argenteuil Agricultural Society.

Preparations have involved considerable hard work. But the culmination will afford ample enjoyment to County residents and to outsiders, whether it be agricultural interest or mere holiday spirit which attracts them to the event. More than that, it will benefit this County immeasurably in publicity from the viewpoint of commercial and tourist prospects. Illustrating its advertising possibilities, it may be mentioned that a convention of newspaper editors from our neighboring counties are taking occasion to visit Lachute during Fair week.

It remains for the public to fall in line, leaving our visitors with a warm impression of local courtesy and hospitality; and with a vision of a clean and progressive little town set in a prosperous and accommodating territory.

And thus—all co-operating for a bumper and record-breaking Exhibition—we will continue to hope for the best in weather conditions.

Protestant School Board Votes to Proceed with Consolidation

A Public Meeting, as advertised by the Protestant School Board, of Lachute, was held in the Auditorium, on Monday, the 6th. of June, for the purpose of passing the following resolution proposed by Commissioner F. Brennan:

"That, whereas it is necessary to build an extension to the High School and remodel the present building.

"Whereas the cost of the said work is to be the sum of Fifty Thousand Dollars.

"Whereas the Government of the Province has graciously consented to give a grant of 50% of the said cost.

"Whereas the balance of $25,000.00 will have to be borrowed, it is resolved that,

"The corporation is authorized to make a loan by means of a series of bonds for an amount not exceeding $25,000.00.

"These bonds shall be of the denomination of $100.00 or multiples thereof, shall be dated from the first of September 1932 and shall bear the certificate of legality of the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

"A rate of interest at 6% per annum shall be paid, semi-annually on the first day of March and the first day of September of each year.

"To each of these bonds shall be annexed coupons representing semi-annual interest.

"These bonds shall be signed by the Chairman and Secretary-Treasurer: the signatures of those officers may be printed, engraved or lithographed on the interest coupons. These bonds shall be payable in legal money to the Bearer or to the registered holder thereof, as the case may be, at the office of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Lachute, and the interest coupons shall be payable at the same Bank and place."

The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock and was presided over by the chairman Dr. J. H. Mason. The secretary having read the motion, it was moved by Commissioner Brennan and unanimously voted to adopt the resolution as read. It was gratifying to have Mr. J. C. Sutherland, Supervisor of Consolidation, present; he passed along the welcome news that the Provincial Government had agreed to a special grant of $25,000 towards the erection of a modern addition to our High School in order to mature the consolidation of our rural schools, which has been under consideration for so long. It was the climax of many months of hard work, in which the School Board have been studying and coping with many problems which confronted them. It therefore came somewhat as a surprise when they were presented with a petition from residents of the Parish of St. Jerusalem to postpone all proceedings. A large delegation were in attendance to press their claim giving as their reasons the depressed conditions among the farmers generally and the hardship that would be entailed by increased taxation.

The Board having adjourned their meeting prior to the delegation's entry, a general discussion ensued in which Dr. J. Mason gave a lengthy survey of varied steps leading up to the consolidation, stating that a majority petition had been presented from the said Parish, (which was now protesting) asking that the School Board include them in the consolidation. This had been done, and the plans matured according to the request.

That the depression was being keenly felt, everyone freely admitted; but the Board were of the opinion that this was no time to withdraw, but rather to seize this opportunity and avail themselves of prevailing costs which would mean a big saving in the expense of construction.

The Board further claimed they had already obligated themselves to approximately $3,000 for engagement of additional teaching staff, for architectural fees etc., and they were not now prepared to go back on what they had undertaken. As a Board they could not accept the petition presented, and informed the petitioners they must make their appeal direct to Quebec.

Individually and collectively, members felt that the increased taxation would not cause the hardship anticipated, as the bonds were to extend over a period of thirty years. And, for the general good each one should be willing to forego a little pleasure in order to meet the small added payment they would be called upon to make.

Young People's Society hold Church Service

To mark the closing of all activities for the summer season, the Y. P. S. of the Lachute United Church held a church service last Sunday evening.

The society were fortunate indeed in securing as guest speaker, the Rev. Ewart W. Cockram, assistant minister of Erskine United Church, Montreal.

The order of service was arranged by Mr. Linton Armstrong, and the song of praise was led by the Y. P. S. Choir. Miss Freda Mason and Mr. Herbert Gordon read the Old and New Scripture lessons respectively, followed by a beautiful rendering by the choir of the prayer, "Gently Lord, O Gently Lead Us" which was very effectively interpreted, after which the congregation was very feelingly led in prayer by Mr. Linton Armstrong.

During the offertory, a duet entitled "The Homeland" was sung by Messrs. Duncan and Gorman, accompanied at the organ by Miss Ruth Todd.

A very powerful address was given to the Young People by the Rev. Ewart W. Cockram, whose words sank deep into the hearts of those present.

Last Friday evening about sixty members of the society were royally entertained at Lake Louise at the summer home of Mrs. William Deacon.

Although the weather was a little unfavorable, it did not mar the pleasant evening. Those who wished were taken for a "jolly boat trip", and music and dancing were indulged in. Tasty refreshments were served by the hostess and amply justified by young appetites.

Monday evening marked the closing meeting for the summer, and the attendance was exceptionally good. Usual business and devotional exercises were observed, and the meeting was handed over to the convenor of the evening, Mr. H. Gordon. Mr. Bill Glen gave a humorous "brain mixer" (which only an Irishman could give) and the convenor gave a paper on "The closing meeting."

Through the generosity of their President, M. Smith, the members were treated to ice cream, and cake was supplied by some thoughtful young ladies. Games and a hearty sing-song were enjoyed by all, after which "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King" closed the meeting.

Mr. W. Chambers Suffers Great Loss by Fire

The vicinity of St. Philippe witnessed a disastrous conflagration at the farm of Mr. W. Chambers, where over three hundred feet of buildings were ablaze last evening. Of unknown origin the fire was first noticed by Mr. Chambers, who instantly rushed to put the cattle out of danger. All the buildings, consisting of barns, drive shed, horse and cow stables, pig pen, ice and milk houses, as well as all harness and machinery were totally destroyed. Great difficulty was experienced in saving the cattle, horses and pigs, as the fire spread very rapidly, being fanned by a strong breeze, but the only livestock lost was a few turkeys.

Main Street ceases to hold a monopoly as Lachute's shopping centre. Merchants are establishing themselves on the less popular thoroughfares, and appear to be doing good business. More notably on Foundry Street, several new merchants have located of late; and inasmuch as many are using these columns as an advertising medium, they appear to have Started Right.

Dominion Inter-Scholastic Track Meet at Cornwall

Lachute Academy takes One Championship and Fourth Place in Trophy Contest

Lachute Academy won 4th. place in aggregate points for the Sir Arthur Currie Trophy, at the Eastern Canada track and field meet held at Cornwall last Saturday. Two Hamilton schools and Ottawa Glebe were ahead in points, Hamilton Central Collegiate taking the cup.

This event was the tenth Dominion interscholastic championships meet, and although a good performance was put up in speeds, heights, and distances the intermediate running broad jump was the only event establishing a new Dominion record, of 20 ft. 4 1/2 inches.

Lachute Academy, through its star high-jumper Joey Berniquier, won the distinction of a Dominion Championship in senior class of that event, jumping 5 ft. 8 inches.

It is interesting to note the Junior High Jump was also taken by a former Lachute boy, Hayden Bryant, son of Mr. Wm. Bryant, and now a scholar of Strathcona, Montreal.

Winston Drew met strong competition in the senior Mile Run, but took third place, in a good keen performance. Moore of Hamilton Collegiate won the event in 4 mins. 52 secs., with F. S. Shaver of the same school running a close second.

Kenneth Falconer made the grade for the intermediate 100 yards Dash, taking second place in the first heat, but lost out in the finals. The event was won by Patterson Collegiate, Toronto.

Brownburg Boy Scout Church Parade and Band Concert

The first C. I. L. Boy Scout Group Church Service, scheduled for June 12th., will be one of the outstanding Brownburg events of the year. Headed by the Vickers' Scout Band of Montreal, the parade will start from the Brownburg Social Club at 2.30 p.m. D.S.T. The Lachute and St. Andrews Scouts have promised to participate, and, accompanied by the Brownies and Girl Guides, the parade should be quite imposing. The Field Secretary for the Province of Quebec has intimated that he will be present.

The service, at which the Reverends Dyson, Hagar, Lackey, Baxter and Cousens will each have a part, will commence with the raising of the Flag on the C. I. L. Recreation Grounds by the Scouts at 3.00 p.m. D.S.T. It is to be regretted that the Rev. Poitras will not be able to assist on account of a prior engagement. Three well-known hymns will be sung—O God our Help in Ages Past, Fight the Good Fight, and What a Friend we have in Jesus—led by the Vickers' Band. At the conclusion of the service, the Flag will be lowered by the Girl Guides.

In order to assist in defraying expenses, the Vickers' band will give a concert on Saturday evening, commencing at 7.45 p.m., D. S. T. in front of the Social Club of Brownburg. It is to be hoped that the public will turn out in full force for this musical treat by such a well-known band, thereby giving encouragement and much needed assistance to the Committee in carrying on the work they have undertaken. In the event of weather being unfavorable, it is probable that the Band Concert or Service will be held in Carriere's Skating Rink.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

A DIGGER

Dear Boys :—

Yesterday I went down the road, took the first turning to the right and found A DIGGER.

There he was, his coat off, wielding his spade with energy and concentration. So intent was he on his work that he either did not see me or took no notice of my presence.

That is what I liked about the Digger. As I stood there watching him, an aeroplane swept across the sky, a large truck travelled with noise and importance down the King's highway, beyond one field and a ditch a fussy railway train tore along at express speed, but none of these things affected him in the least, he WENT ON DIGGING.

Now so interested did I become concerning this Digger, that I wanted to go up to him and say, "What are you digging?" And I should not have been at all surprised if he had answered, "Sir, I am digging for the FUTURE." and he would have been correct.

Here he was turning over the dark brown soil with his spade. Nothing there yet, but the days to come will show the fruit of his labor. Gorgeous flowers, their wonder colors spreading joy, pleasure and happiness, green fruits of the earth, giving health and strength where oft times it is so sorely needed, are but a few of the products of the Digger, as he labors on. Yes indeed, he is far too busy to take note of such an idler as myself. As I turn away, there comes to my mind the thought, THERE ARE OTHER DIGGERS.

Where are these to be found?

Not among those who are indifferent and idle. No, I shall have to look elsewhere. Ah! I have it, I will ask the Digger himself. He ought to know. I look round, but he has gone. Then from over the hill comes the sound of someone singing.

"These are the songs of the Master
And into a symphony
He will weave the croonings of Nature
With the paeais of Industry
And music will roll down the ages Flooding Eternity."

Was it someone singing? Was it just music to which my own thoughts had put the words?

Perhaps I have been dreaming. There has been no hill, no singer, no digger.

But there is this lesson to be learned that if we want to be successful in life we must keep on digging.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 3.

Much later that evening, after his little sister had gone to bed, Jack took out his school books for the purpose of having a quiet hour of study. He had only been a day boy but none the less enjoyed all the privileges that fall to the lot of a boy belonging to a good school, and no matter the change in his circumstances he was determined to learn as much as possible especially about the subjects that pleased him. Mary also was deeply interested in her brother's efforts to improve himself and would persuade him very often to help her with some hard task the school she attended required of her.

The window was still open and the rumble of distant thunder heralded the coming of a storm. Large drops of rain began to fall, while the sounds of hurrying footsteps in the street below denoted how eager many were to reach the shelter of their homes before the full force of the tempest should come upon them. A louder crash of thunder than usual, followed by a vivid flash of lightning, disturbed Jack and he impatiently rose from the table and closed the window. If this goes on he muttered to himself, Mary will be frightened out of her life and it will mean no sleep for me till it has passed away. Before returning to his seat he crept quietly into the inner room to find, with relief, that his fears, at any rate for the moment, were groundless. His small sister was sleeping soundly.

Hardly had he resumed his lessons when he heard quick steps ascending the stairs leading to his own small quarters, to be followed immediately by a loud knocking on his door. Surprised beyond measure at having a visitor, especially one who chose so late an hour and so stormy a night for the making of a call, he opened the door. Standing on the threshold was a man. The rain water dripped from the peak of his cap and the bottom of the heavy coat he was wearing, making little pools around his feet. That he was beyond middle age was evident by the fact that he breathed heavily and with difficulty from the strain he had undergone in mounting so steep a flight of steps. Recovering himself with an effort he looked at Jack with a smile and said, "I am afraid this is rather an unusual time to pay a visit but first tell me are you by any chance called Jack Evered, for if not there is no need for me to trouble you further."

"That is my name" the boy replied, "but won't you come in and tell me why you wish to see me" and he stood a little aside so that his visitor, whoever he was, could enter.

With an exclamation of pleasure, whether of relief at finding the object of his quest or of obtaining shelter from the storm it would be hard to say, he accepted and in a few moments was seated on one of the chairs, his storm coat and cap removed, and his fingers busily engaged in filling an old black pipe, taken from a capacious pocket of his reefer jacket, with some strong tobacco. He then struck a match and in a minute was puffing away with keen enjoyment.

During these operations Jack had been content to sit quietly, though consumed with curiosity, as to what would be the outcome of so strange an intrusion of his privacy.

Suddenly his visitor, removing the pipe from his mouth, said, "So you are Jack, well just to think of that because for months and months I have been looking for you and now, after nearly giving up hope of ever finding you, my search has been successful. Well, well, and where is your sister? because if my information is correct you must have one you know."

"Oh, yes" answered Jack "I have a sister Babs—I mean Mary of course; she is in the other room but asleep just now."

"Yes she would be, I should say ought to be" was the astonishing rejoinder, "But tell me, for I must be certain of my facts, was not your father called Eric Evered and did he not serve in the Indian army as an officer?"

"You seem to know a good deal about my parents" replied the boy, "perhaps you will recognize them" and he handed over for inspection the photograph of his father and mother.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Cape Breton Scouts Plant Trees

As a Saturday good turn in May Scouts of North Sydney and Florence troops, N. S., planted 4,000 young pine trees on the farm of J. H. MacKinnon. The work was directed by a forest ranger.

Scouts to Watch Forestation Plots

The first Saturday of May saw the Scout troops of St. Lawrence County, Ontario, out on a tree-planting bee at Camp Vigor on the St. Lawrence river. Each troop was given 250 trees and a quarter-acre in which to plant them. The plots are marked and the troops will watch the growth of their various plantings.

Assistant Scoutmaster One Spot

Edward One Spot, formerly of the old 13th (Killarney) Calgary Troop, is an A.S.M. of the new Sarcee Indian Reserve Scout Troop. A.S.M. One Spot is one of the first Indians in the Canadian West to hold an A. S. M.'s Warrant.

A Duck Scramble For Boys

A job that any other Scout Troop would gladly have shared fell to the 4th (Elks' Own) Calgary Troop when they were called upon by the keeper of the Calgary Zoo to help catch and move the water fowl to new quarters on St. George's Island. The birds lost a few feathers, and the Scouts gained a few pecks and scratches, but the job was done.

An Island for B. C. Scouts

An island in Williams Lake, B. C., has been presented by the village commissioners to the 1st Williams Lake Scout Troop, as a country home and camp site until needed by the village. A large boat was given by Mr. T. Gibbon. Parents and the general public were invited to attend christening of the boat and the flag-raising on the island.

Sir Michael Sadler on Scouting

Addressing a recent meeting of Scouts and Guides at Oxford Sir Michael Sadler, Master of University College, Oxford, declared that "In the centuries to come people will see in the Boy Scout and Girl Guide Movements the great educational invention of the 20th Century."

Strange as it may seem, the noise of construction work, previously obnoxious to many, has taken on a musical sound under existing economic conditions.

Mr. J. J. C. Abbott has accepted the Conservative nomination, for representation of this County in the next House of Commons.

Mr. Bishop is laying the stone foundation for McQuat and McRae's new foundry.

The first sod of the Gatineau Valley Railway will be turned on the 15th. of June, by the Hon. J. A. Chapleau, Premier of Quebec.

A gentleman from New York made application the other day to the Ottawa emigrant agent for a servant girl. Mr. Willis replied it was impossible even to supply the home demand. Demands for male labor also continue unabated.

Mr. Bannerman is now engaged in erecting a stone building 44 x 88 feet, three stories high, to house the new Rope Works.

Dr. Thos. Christie is having the fence inclosing his residence painted.

Miss M. Redger, who has been in Central India for over eight years as a missionary from the Presbyterian Church in Canada, recently arrived in Lachute.

Mr. Robt. Banford is having a dwelling house built convenient to his brother Jackson's property. Messrs. Chapman, Mathinson & Co. have the contract.

CUSHING

Miss Alberta Cleland spent the earlier part of the week in Montreal.

Rev. J. W. Maclean was in Montreal this week, attending the June Conference of the United Church.

Mr. Neil Maclean motored to Montreal on Tuesday.

The Misses Ivy and Elsie Graham of Montreal, were the holiday guests of their parents.

Miss M. Burton, of Montreal, is spending a few weeks in Cushing with her grandmother, Mrs. Jas. Cleland.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McAllister, of Hawkesbury, Ont., were the Sunday guests of Mrs. T. Weir, Sr.

Capt. and Mrs. J. D. Weir and family spent the week-end at their cottage.

Mrs. Lindley Kerr and daughters, also Messrs Stewart and Rayson, motored to Montreal on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Fuller and Mr. and Mrs. I. Fuller spent last Sunday at Hudson.

Miss Lydia Morrison of Hawkesbury was the guest of Mrs. T. Weir Jr. for a few days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Beecher and family of N.D.G., paid a short visit to friends in Cushing last Sunday.

The Women's Missionary Society will hold their June meeting, on Monday night, 13th. inst at the Manse.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Mungo's Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Lindley Kerr, on Wednesday afternoon, June 15, at the usual hour.

The programme given in St. Mungo's Church on the evening of June 3rd., was one long to be remembered by all who attended, being a real treat from start to finish.

Miss Greene is an elocutionist of no mean merit and delighted her audience with her excellent and varied selections. Mrs. W. Dewar, Grenville, sang such favorite songs as "There's an Old-Fashioned House," and "Danny Boy," and was similarly encored in every number. The Lachute Quartette received the same hearty applause and were much enjoyed by their audience, as was also Miss Whelehan in one of Drummond's poems and an Irish encore. The final act of the programme, not the least notable item was the pantomime by the Misses D. and H. Weir, N. Cooke and M. Starnes.

DRIVER ACQUITTED

Accident When Pin Dropped
From Steering Gear

On discovery of a small pin-missing from the steering gear of his car hinged the acquittal of Alfred Clermont, Montreal, of a charge of having driven furiously and caused bodily harm, on July 26 last between Ste. Adele and Val Morin. The complainants were Mrs. Harold Hingston, Westmount, and Mrs. John Walbank, Ste. Agathe, who were passengers in a car which collided with that driven by Clermont.

The driver of the second car testified that he saw Clermont's car approaching at high speed and swinging from side to side of the road. Clermont stated that a metal pin had fallen from the steering apparatus and was later found on the road back a considerable distance from the scene of the accident.

CORRESPONDENCE

To the Editor of the Watchman.

May I remind your readers that the time is near when we are accustomed to sending in flowers to the poor, sick and sad of Montreal.

For some years we have had the pleasure of knowing that we have been able to send cheer into the homes and hospitals and that the work is appreciated, as is shown by the records of the Flower Committee of the Social Agencies.

Every year we have had a group of people collecting and packing the flowers each Tuesday morning and we are trusting that this year we shall not fall short in the work. It means but a few hours devoted to gathering and bringing to the station for the milk train each Tuesday.

Last year, by the co-operation of Mr. Stuart Campbell and Mr. Stephens who supplied the cartons, and the help of our genial station agent, Mr. Lessard, we had no difficulty.

It must be remembered that all service is voluntary, no one being paid. It is truly a service of love and has been a source of joy to all taking part.

It could be made of wider application if we all, working together, gathered and sent our flowers and there are lots of flowers going to waste in many gardens in Lachute.

Will those willing to help, call by phone or come up and see me so that we can plan out the work.

Yours sincerely,
KATE MASSIAH.

THE DYE-POT

Among the country-women of Canada the dye-pot still has a place, but it is futile to hope that the old vegetable dyes will hold their own against the new, easy and cheap methods that have displaced the charming and interesting colours that formerly were so skilfully employed by a passing generation.

But when, as sometimes happens in Canada, a dyer is far from the sources of supply, there is no reason why he should live colourless, while colours and shades of colour are rioting in the flowers, the roots, the barks, the lichens that abound in forest and field.

It requires but patience and thought to transfer the beauties of nature to the products of the craftsman. The transfer is extraordinarily simple, and with experiment & experience there can be given the enduring quality that makes of the work of one generation the delight of the next, for time adds to instead of diminishing, the charm of colour.

Not only is colour easily extracted from the vegetable world, but the process is both fascinating and healthful. One has to fill the dye-pot from wood or field and the whole process may be carried on out of doors; a tripod of branches, the pot, fire-wood and water being the only equipment necessary. And how the children love to cull the flowers, at the same moment gaining a sweet and generous education in discovering the plants and learning some of their uses.

It is not easy to include directions in an article as short as this but a few suggestions will suffice, for anyone who begins the delightful search for colour will soon discover the exact proportions necessary to produce a variety of shades and colours that will surprise and charm the imagination.

Take for instance, a bowl of blue-berries, and for a mordant (or fixer) a handful of salt. Boil this for half an hour and strain the water off. Soak well a hank of wool in hot water, put it in the dye, and let it boil for thirty or forty minutes; then rinse and dry. If another shade is desired try for a mordant a cupful of lye (which can be made by pouring boiling water over wood-ashes and then straining; or perhaps use a cupful of vinegar; or some alum or tartar; any of these are good mordants, and there are dozens of others. The variety of shades, too, may be multiplied by varying the time of boiling the wool in the dye. Try everything and add to the interest of the experiments.

Blue-berries may not be obtainable. There are hundreds of lovely berries—many that are not edible—that will give just as fine results. Try flowers, roots, barks, golden-rod, wild galardia, black-eyed susan, the willow, the alder, the sumach. There is no limit to the plants, there is none to the possible discoveries.

REDUCING HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.

At the recent meeting of the American Medical Association, according to Science, Doctor Granger asserted that "no cure is yet known for high blood pressure"; and so the doctor believes that "the treatment consists in trying to relieve the conditions in the environment that appear to aggravate it." That is, we should try to find out the cause and remove it. When this is done with a sufficient degree of efficiency, the high blood pressure lessens or may even disappear. In case of failure, the reason may be not the incurability of the condition, but failure to discover and remove the cause. Fortunately, the resources of physiotherapy are so varied and so efficient, a degree of success may be attained in many cases thought to be wholly hopeless.

ILLITERACY DECLINING Advance Seen in Quebec's Standard of Education

Quebec, May 30.—Making an improvement in the standard of education in the province, advanced reports regarding the registration of children under fourteen years wishing employment show that not one case of illiteracy was found this year by the registration officers.

According to a law, which was passed at the suggestion of Hon. Antonio Galipeault, at the time Minister of Public Works and Labor, children are not allowed in this province to get employment under fourteen years of age and at that age must prove that they have at least rudimentary education. To that effect they must appear before the representatives of the Provincial Department of Labor and prove the extent of their education. They are questioned as to reading, writing and arithmetic. A few years ago quite a number had to be refused a permit to work as they were under the requirements and had first to go to school. In the year 1931-32, however, to date, not one case of illiteracy was reported, all candidates for permits to work, being found to fall under the needs of the law without having to be sent to school.

The two 8-week old Eastern Canadian black bear cubs seen above were born on the Wedgewood Hunting and Fishing Club grounds at Blissett, P.Q. They arrived in Montreal accompanied by Arthur Beauvais, well known guide. They've been called Michael and Mary. As shown by the photograph, and photographs cannot lie, these two babies took early advantage of their first introduction to civilization, to telephone Mother, though a little late for Mother's Day, to assure her they were being well looked after. Michael is listening in while Mary is doing the telephoning. They have been fed on tinned milk since their capture, but sugar is also a favorite article of diet. The cubs were brought to Montreal by Canadian Pacific Express and went on to New York from the Windsor Station.

There are some things that just can't be helped, and it's those things that drive radio, stage and film producers crazy. But the margin of error has been reduced to a negligible degree by careful management of radio broadcast, and you don't often hear anything go wrong in a radio programme. Somebody sneezed over a national net work last year, but apart from that we don't remember anything outstanding in the way of mistakes. Once the little green light is shining in the studio every possible precaution has been taken to ensure a perfect programme; broadcasts are worked on a split second schedule, and when you hear the announcer's dulcet tones, you can rest assured that nothing short of an earthquake is going to break the regular continuity.

(—Radio Week.)

Only another week to the big event of the year — Lachute Fair! This means that large numbers of tourists and visitors will be coming into town and it depends largely upon the greeting they receive and the kindly manner extended by our citizens generally as to the impression that is left with them. We trust our people will rise to the occasion, pass along any information desired, and by so doing give a real boost. Lachute Fair is worth it all, for we have without exception the best kept grounds, the finest in stock, thrilling trotting races and a fine vaudeville entertainment with display of fireworks on Thursday and Friday evenings. Let everyone join with the directors in making this year a record-breaking attendance.

ONTARIO ACCIDENT TOLL

Motor accidents in Ontario during the month of April claimed 28 lives as compared with 42 in the corresponding month of last year, according to a report of the motor vehicles branch Department of Highways. The same number of persons—118—have been killed in 1932 to date as met death in automobile accidents in the same period of 1931, the report shows.

ANNUAL SERVICE OF SALVATION ARMY AT BROWNSBURG

The Salvation Army of the Maisonneuve District of Montreal, will hold their annual services in the United Church on Sunday, June 12th., morning and evening, with Capt. Lormier and Col. Burrows, Divisional Commander, officiating. The group will be accompanied by a section of the Band who will, as formerly, parade through the village before both services, discoursing the strains of familiar hymns and tunes and soliciting the usual offering from the citizens of our village, regardless of denominational affiliations, for their good work. The evening service will be particularly an Army Service, and the visit this year is made particularly suggestive on account of its being the last under conduct of Capt. Lormier, who is being transferred elsewhere in a few weeks' time. All are cordially invited to be present at both services.

SERVICE AWARDS AT BROWNSBURG C. I. L.

The May issue of Canadian Industries' house magazine, C. I. L. Contact, congratulates Mr. Wm. King, of its Brownsburg Office, who is shortly to receive his C.I.L. watch for 25 years' service with the company.

"After delving into musty records" (says Contact) "we find that Mr. King was born very young in London, England, on February 24th., 1887. With his parents, he came to Canada in 1907, commenced work in the Old Detonator Dept. and in 1912 was transferred to Head Office. In 1914, he again returned to Brownsburg and eventually became Pay Roll Clerk which position he still holds. Apart from large knowledge bumps developed from Radios and Insurance, there is not much to distinguish Bill from the rest of us."

Other service award recipients are: Messrs. T. G. Pasco, Sr. and Jr., who both receive the 20-year Pin; Mr. W. J. Stewart, 10 year Pin; Miss Annette Quesnel, Mr. Theodore Tasse and Mr. Pierre Rose, 5-year Pins. In the Pyralin Division, Mr. J. Roberts has been awarded the 5-year Pin.

Perhaps you are not the visiting kind? Chores and odd tasks keep you much at home, or around the farm. Come and meet your old friends next week at Lachute Fair. Just the occasion to shake hands, renew acquaintances, and exchange views. Everyone will be there.

IN MEMORIAM

TOMALTY.—In fond remembrance of Roy Tomalty, who died on June 12th., 1930.

Two years have gone since that sad day,

When Roy, so Young, was called away,
Once we all did play together
'Round "the factory" and "the creek."

It does not seem so many years,
But only like a week.
It's hard to think we shall not see you,

Or hear your voice once more,
But once again we hope to meet you
On that far off, shining shore.

Always remembered by his loving cousin.

TOMALTY.—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Roy A. Tomalty, who departed this life June 12th., 1930.

Two years have passed, our hearts still sore,
As time moves on we miss him more
His loving smile, his welcome face.

No one on earth can fill his place
Some day we hope to meet again
Some day we know not when To clasp his hand in the better land

Never to part again.
Ever remembered by Mother, Father, Sisters and Brothers.

MASON.—In loving memory of our son William Francis, whom God called away on June 11th., 1931. Oh, Will how we miss you. Father and Mother.

MASON.—In loving memory of our brother, William Francis Mason (Will), who passed away on June 11th., 1931.

Silent thoughts bring many a tear,
Of one we miss and loved so dear.

Inserted by Brothers and Sisters

TOMALTY.—In loving memory of our dear brother Roy, who passed away June 12th., 1930.

The time was short, the blow severe,
To part with one, we loved so dear
But 'twas God's will, He willed it so;

When He commands we all must go.

He bade no one his last farewell
He waved his hand to none,
His spirit fled before we knew,
That he from us was gone.

Inserted by Myrtle and Lyall

TOMALTY.—In loving memory of Roy A. Tomalty, who passed away June 12th., 1930.

Deep lies in our hearts a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest,
In memory's frame we will keep it.

For he was one of the best.

ARGENTEUIL COUNTY HEALTH UNIT

Babies' Health Contest.

The Health Contest for babies in the town of Lachute, organized at the beginning of the present year, will close on Monday, June 13th.

Numerous prizes given by the Lachute citizens interested in infant welfare will be distributed among those who have attended the clinics regularly and have shown a more constant progress in health.

In the afternoon of Monday, 13th., the clinic will take place as usual, and in the evening (8 P.M.) in the Auditorium, the prizes will be awarded.

The date, hour, and place should be remembered by every mother of Lachute, who should not fail to attend.

Appropriate films will be shown

The present contest is closed, but this is no indication that the clinics will cease to function. The Health Unit will continue to hold a weekly baby clinic every Monday afternoon in Lachute, and we hope that the number of babies attending will increase.

Many lives can be saved by sound advice to mothers, as to how to raise their children properly, and we consider that a physician only, or an organization such as your Health Unit with a staff trained for this purpose, can accomplish the task.

The mothers who have followed this contest to the end, and have attended the clinics regularly, are to be congratulated. They alone can realize its benefits to their infants. To others, we can only reiterate our invitation to make use of the clinic and also tell them that it is their imperative duty to safeguard the health of their Little Ones.

Raising children properly is not an easy matter; many young mothers, and older ones too, would do well to seek medical advice before undertaking the task. I say medical advice purposely, because unfortunately and too often, young mothers are ill advised, by persons possessing every qualification for doing so except a Degree in medicine. Their good intention is their only excuse, and even that cannot be too strongly condemned.

The majority of people of this county have already realized the good work done by the Health Unit. The public knows how devoted our nurses are; the Medical Officers who in turn have had the direction of the Unit, feel assured of public confidence, and hope that in the future these baby-clinics will be attended more regularly, if possible, and that more babies will take advantage of them.

GOOD NEWS FOR LAKE LOUISA RESIDENTS

A building is now under construction near Liberty Hall, where Mr. Habib, of Brownsburg, intends running an up-to-date store and Ice-Cream Parlor for the convenience of Summer campers at Lake Louisa. Cooked meats, vegetables, fruits, Groceries, city and local bread will all be available at very best prices. Plans are not yet fully completed but it is expected that there will be a large landing wharf at his store and motor-boat delivery service. Mr. Habib accommodated the campers last year very effectively and again solicits the patronage of his many customers.

The following notice appeared in a newspaper a few weeks ago:—"The man who picked up my wallet in High street was recognized. He is requested to return it." The next week this reply was published:—"The recognized man who picked up your wallet requests the loser to call at any time and collect it."

THE LATE IZAI MASSON

The death occurred on Friday last June 3rd., of IZAI Masson, an old and respected citizen of Lachute. Born here 78 years ago, he had spent his life time in this vicinity, following the trade of stone-mason. His wife formerly Miss Lapointe of Beech Ridge survives with one brother Fred Masson of Boston; four sons, Fred and Joseph, of Espanola; Philias, of Lachute, and Paul, of Ottawa; one daughter Catherine (Mrs. Rinfret), of Staynerville.

The funeral service took place on Monday at 10 a.m. from the Church of St. Anastasie to the R. C. Cemetery, the Rev. Fathers Marsolais, Cloutier and Claire St. Viateur conducting the service.

The pall bearers were Messrs. E. Charlebois, A. Gibeau, N. Marinier, C. Poirier, G. Delorme and T. Dallaire.

Among the mourners were, his nephews Gustave and Joseph of Espanola, Philip and Gaetan of Lachute, also his nieces Mrs. André Lachance, of Espanola; Rev. Sister St. Marie Azilda, of St. Croix Congregation and Rev. Sister Marie Hebert, of St. Laurent.

The large attendance and many floral tributes spoke silently in esteem of the departed.

HOPE FOR US, THEN

The editor stood at the pearly gate, His face was worn and old, He meekly asked of the man of fate Admission to the fold. "What have you done," St. Peter said "To seek admission here?" "Oh, I ran a country printing plant On earth for many a year." The gate swung open sharply As Peter touched a bell, "Come in," he said, "and take a harp, You've had enough of hell."

EVER NOTICE THIS?
(Tara Leader)

Did you ever pause in a post office long enough to take a squint at the waste paper basket shortly after a number of people had received their mail?

If you have you were probably struck by the number of circulars and form letters and hand bills that littered it up. In fact you doubtless were struck with the fact that many of them had been thrown in the basket as soon as they were removed from the envelope, the recipient never even taking the trouble to give them a second glance.

But did you also notice that you didn't see anyone throwing the newspapers and especially the home town newspapers in the waste basket or on the floor?
Did you notice that newspapers are always carried away instead of tossed away? Well, right there is a mighty good argument in favor of advertising in the local newspaper. The circular letter—a costly form of adver-
ket. The home-town paper goes tising—goes into the waste bas-into the home. Remember this and spend your advertising money accordingly.

LEICESTER PROHIBITS
"FRANKENSTEIN" PLAY

The Leicester Watch Committee today banned the film
"Frankenstein," which was to have been screened here during Whitsun week in England.

The emergency sub-committee saw the film on Friday, and then requested that it be screened before the full committee.

This was done today, and it was considered that the film was undesirable for public exhibition. The manager concerned offered to have cuts made, but was informed that the whole film was unsatisfactory.

Some members, however, considered that while the film was gruesome it was not sufficiently so to warrant its entire withdrawal.

UNITED CHURCH MISSION-ARY SOCIETIES MEET

A very interesting Sectional Meeting of the Women's Missionary Societies of Brownsburg Cushing, East Settlement, La-chute, Pt. Fortune, and St. Andrews East, was held at Brownsburg United Church on June the first. This meeting was called by Mrs. W. H. Sutherland, President of the Montreal Presby-terial, who with several helpers motored up to attend.

Mrs. Sutherland also had in her army, as she termed it, a number of other members from Montreal and outskirts branches
Mrs. J. W. Maclean of Cushing, as vice-president and advisor to the branches represented, was in the chair, taking for the text of the morning session the words "Quench not the Spirit."

Devotional exercises were taken in the morning session by Mrs. John Nichol and Mrs. John Gordon, also by Mrs. Rev. Edmund Morrison, of Lachute Courtsey Committee. Mrs. J.
McGibbon, of Lachute, Mrs. W.
Usher of Cushing, Mrs. (Rev.)
Macaskill, of St. Andrews East, Mrs. A. Graham, of Cushing as Secretary. Mrs. J. McGibbon
Mrs. R. Bradford, Mrs. (Rev.)
Macaskill, and Mrs. I. Fuller also took part in the devotional exercises during the day.

After Mrs. Sutherland and her staff had been introduced and a few kindly words of greeting given from each, Miss Dorothy Flowers, Literature Convenor, sang a beautiful solo, entitled "Others" by Arthur A.
Penn, which was much appreciated by her audience.

Mrs. Tarlton, Mission Band
Convenor, in greeting the audience, said that Mission Band work was a joy and a pleasure, and that she had 40 bands in the Presbyterial doing excellent work.

Miss King, Strangers' Secretary, told the gathering in being kind to strangers one was made to feel the Fatherhood and Brotherhood of God; that God had sent us into the world to help whoever might need such help in our own particular corner.

Mrs. Sutherland expressed delight at seeing so many ladies present, there being 63 members as well as other visitors.
She was greatly encouraged in these depressed times she said,
by the fact that the first quarter's allocation had not only been met but over-subscribed.
Doing missionary work only meant "loving our neighbors as ourselves." She termed the Women's Missionary Society, a group of women working with one great purpose, with girde almost around the entire world;
all people in the world were just neighbors and should be world-friends. She impressed her listeners of the help they would receive from God if they only kept our prayer-batteries strong and in good condition; but one so often let these batteries run, and one's petitions grew weak.

Mrs. Walter Scott pleaded for greater sympathy for the work of the young people, more teamwork between the older societies and the young people's societies and also with the mother's in the home. If we would have joy in this world we must put Christ first, others second and ourselves last. First worship, then work; God did not put any of us in this world without giving some talent; and we should make use of our one talent, in the work of God and in Christian living.

Mrs. L. A. MacLean, Presbyterial Temperance Secretary, expressed the hope that the W. M. Societies were all taking a deep interest in Temperance work, realizing the great work that lay before us in that direction. Mrs. Bezanson, County W.C.T.U. President, gave a talk on the work and questioned if Sunday School teachers and mothers were doing all they might, along the line of Temperance. Mrs. Dobson, C.G.I.T. convenor, favored the assembly with a short but interesting address on C.G.I.T. work.

Miss Elizabeth Bagossy, of Hungary, expressed her sincere thanks to the ladies of the United Church for enabling her to attend the United Church training School in Toronto. Miss Ba-gossy is a clever violinist, and her selections were greatly appreciated.

Miss Mayowna, an interpreter of many languages, who meets strangers from different lands and gives them welcome to Canada in their own tongue

as they disembark, gave an interesting address on her work.
Miss Mayowna learned English in her own country by memorizing the dictionary. Her wonderful perseverance enabled her to gain the position which she now holds, and helps her to see the numerous sides of a great many difficult problems.
Her address was followed by a beautiful solo by Mrs. J. Thompson of Brownsburg, entitled "In the secret of His presence."

An impressive memorial observance was given by Mrs.
Usher of Cushing, in placing 4 roses in a vase to the memory of four departed sisters in the Society's work, namely, Mrs. J.
R. McQuat, and Mrs. R. McArthur, of Lachute; Miss Bessie Nichols, of Cushing, and Mrs.
Wm. Wyman, of Pt. Fortune.

Passing into the Great Beyond, they had left behind them happy memories of themselves and their good deeds.

Miss Ruby McFaul gave the address of welcome, which was responded to by Mrs. Macaskill of St. Andrews East.

Greetings were brought in person from other churches in Brownsburg, from Chatham and Frontier Institutes, and also by letter from Mrs. Henry Wilson, of Athelstan, Provincial President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. The entire meeting was permeated with temperance talks, especially during the evening session. This was given over to Mr. Pierce of the Anti-alcoholic League, after the little ones had delighted the audience with their songs, play-lets, etc. Brownsburg Mission Band, under the supervision of Mrs. J. Thompson, sang several little songs very charmingly.

Four Cushing girls, the Misses Dorothy and Helen Weir, Norma
Cooke and Mary Starnes, acted "Rock of Ages" very beautifully in pantomime, with Miss L. Cleland of Montreal as soloist and Miss Doris Leroy at the piano.

The Lachute Mission Band, trained by Mrs. McNeil, gave a very realistic presentation of costumes from the far-off land of Korea. Brownsburg choir favored with a patriotic anthem
"Canada for God." Keith Canning, of Stonefield, recited "The Youth of our Land." Miss M.
Densmore gave a reading picturing the life of Christ as a boy, and Miss Isabel Densmore told a story of a black boy and a white boy who discovered in the end, that color made no difference after all.

Mr. Hagar spoke a few words in conclusion, on behalf of the Brownsburg people and himself thanking Mrs. Maclean for this enlightenment on the subject of W. M. S. work, and claimed it had been a most interesting and uplifting service. Those members of the W. M. S. not belonging to Brownsburg also felt they had been royally entertained by the Brownsburg people.

A letter of greeting from the Women's Quebec Provincial Temperance Union, was read before the gathering, as follows:

Athelstan, Que.,
Dear Mrs. Maclean,
Vice-President of the W.M.S. of the Montreal Presbyterial, and friends:—

In the name of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of the Province of Quebec I send you heartiest greetings, and best wishes for a successful, pleasant and helpful Convention.

May your gathering together mark a great move forward in every line of your work and particularly along the line of work among your young people.

Every organization working for the welfare and uplift of mankind has its problems and experiences.

As president of the Quebec Provincial Women's Temperance Union I would like to say a word on behalf of our work, and also of your interest in the cause of temperance. Temperance is a question in which everybody should be interested, and it is one in which every one should take a part. It is a most vital question for the church at home and abroad, and no part of the church should be more interested in temperance than our Missionary Societies. Christ is our example. He went about doing good, and his life was a service of love.

All Canada except Prince Edward Island has been caught in the coils of the pernicious system of Government Control, but we must not, and are not discourage. We remember that our task is world prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcohol as a beverage. With this as our goal we go forward in our great cause for God and Humanity.

As women of our church we must educate ourselves to help in this great struggle against the liquor traffic and its companion evils.

As women of the Women's Missionary Society we should take an active interest in the temperance work, because intemperance is a hindrance to any kind of Christian work that we try to do. Temperance and Missions are so closely related that the one serves the other,
and both serve Christ.

The world at present is in such an unsettled condition, almost anything is possible.
There are those who are trying to make selfish profit out of the bad conditions, and there are those who are working to better conditions. Our struggle in the Women's Christian Temperance Union is to get rid of the evils resulting from the use of intoxicating liquors, therefore we are working for total abstin-ance for the individual and prohibition for the nation.

We are all influenced by what we hear others say, and they are influenced by what they hear us say.

We have all heard such silly and ignorant things said about total abstinence, just because people did not take the trouble to find out the facts. We ourselves want to know the facts then what we say will bear weight.

The forces of evil were never so strong against our young people as they are to-day.

The drug fiends, the manufacturers of narcotics, and liquors are making a tremendous bid for them. The great object of the liquor party is to create a liquor appetite in youth, so that they will become the drinkers of the future.

For four years now we have carried on a temperance campaign in the Sunday schools.
This is a great opportunity to train our young people, and to give them the knowledge of the harmfulness of using drugs, narcotics and liquor.

We need the help of all. It must be united effort, and the Church should and must take this lead.

Will you not then women of the Missionary Society give your heart and hand to help overthrow this great evil. May God Bless you.

Yours in the work

Margaret M. Wilson,

Provincial President of the W. C. T. U.

PREVENT BARN FIRES

The following extract is taken from an article entitled "The High Cost of Barn Fires," by Mr. C. H. Hodge, which appeared in a recent issue of The Ontario Farmer.

"A means of prevention that was well known in earlier days though less commonly used of late is the application of salt as the salt improves the flavor of
And the big advantage of this method is that no extra cost is involved. Cattle require salt in any event. Its addition to the hay improves the flavor of the hay as well as preventing the particular type of fermentation that leads to spontaneous combustion. But sufficient must be used if all danger from this source is to be removed. Mr.

Heaton (Ontario Fire Marshal) recommends that for each load (1½ tons) of timothy hay, not less than 10 lb. of salt should be distributed over the mow and for mixed or clover hay not less than 20 lb. per load."

Miss Ann Adam's Recipe for Bran Muffins

1/2 cup bran 1/4 cup sugar
1 1/4 cups flour 1/4 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon salt 1 egg
3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder 1/4 cup melted shortening

Mix the bran with the sifted fine dry ingredients. Make a well in the centre and pour in the milk and well-beaten egg. With the fewest possible number of strokes, blend these ingredients and stir in the shortening. Half fill greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven 400° F. 15 to 20 minutes. A few chopped dates, lightly coated with some of the measured flour, may be added.

Miss Ann Adam bakes her famous Muffins with Magic Baking Powder

"When selecting ingredients for my recipes," says Miss Ann Adam, cookery authority of the Canadian Home Journal, "I consider three points — economy, health value, and successful performance. Magic Baking Powder meets them all. I use and approve Magic, because I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients, and because experience has taught me that I can count upon successful results with Magic every time."

Magic Baking Powder is used exclusively by the majority of cookery experts, dietitians, and housewives throughout Canada. In fact, Magic outsells all other baking powders combined!

HEART OF THE NORTH

BY WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of bandits in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits get away with gold dust and choice peltry.

CHAPTER II—Corporal Bill Hard-sock brings the news of the crime to present Alan Baker at the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, he starts out after the bandits in the big police launch with the corporal and four constables.

"Three men can handle them. Three men with the law behind them."

"A city cop may be a squad by himself," Alan interrupted. "But in the bush a man is a man. A legal bullet don't kill any deader than an outlaw bullet. Men who'll hold up a big steamer in broad daylight and who face the gulls if caught, aren't going to be paralyzed by the sight of a uniform. I believe my party shouldn't split. We ought to stick together and whip up that left branch. That's the fork they'll take."

Alan Was Not the Fool to Believe Haskell Was Bluffing.

"You're merely guessing," Haskell said coldly. "You don't know which branch they'll take. By my plan you'd be sure to overtake them on one branch or other."

"Yes, and have half my men shot up. I'm responsible for them. I know what that kind of responsibility means. You're hog-tying me with orders I know are dead wrong."

Haskell tapped the table with his penknife. "I've given you my reasons, Baker, and listened to yours. If you refuse to obey orders, you'll stay here at the post, and I'll put Corporal Hard-sock in charge of this detail. Take your choice."

Alan was not the fool to believe Haskell was bluffing. The man would keep him here and demote him for refusing to obey a command. He had been waiting months for just such a chance. It was a question of holding out against those ignorant instructions or getting away with the men and making the best of it. Perhaps, after all, he would catch up with the bandits before they reached the Forks.

Beaten, weary of arguing, he gave in. "All right, Inspector. I'll follow both branches."

To cut off further delay he whirled abruptly on his heel and strode out.

Burkoon came down from barracks. A little later Whipple came and timidly took his seat in the launch. Alan and Bill and Younge were storing aboard guns, tent, grub and blankets. On the terrace above, with a book in her lap, Elizabeth Spaulding watched casually.

Then Frank Pedneault, demonic driver of the powerful launch, slid into the wheel seat and slipped in the gears; and headed north, down the Mackenzie.

They were at last away on the pursuit.

But all Alan's ardor had gone. All his leaping urge to be on the chase had gone. Premonition whispered, and its whisper chilled him. As he glanced around at his men, at the comrades he was leading and was responsible for, he was thinking that tomorrow this time two or three of them might be dead—somewhere up the spruce-buried Aloska.

CHAPTER III

A Call to Vengeance

During that dash down the Mackenzie, Alan's thoughts were not enviable. . . . "They used Margaret Fournier as a means of making their getaway from the steamer. It worked so well then that they might try the idea again. They might try to capture Joyce and use her as a sort of hostage to protect themselves."

But somehow he did not greatly fear they would do this. He remembered the gun she always carried, his own gift to her on her twentieth birthday. A black automatic, a tiny thing like a toy, it nevertheless was blunt and effective as a terrier bulldog. That big red-headed bandit who had threatened to put a bullet "squa" a'tween the eyes of Margaret Fournier, would likely get one between his own if he tried any brutality with Joyce MacMillan.

To Alan it seemed pretty clear that Bill in his haste and excitement had made a mistake about those men being strangers to every one aboard the steamer. It didn't look possible. They knew this country, knew it intimately. It took years to learn the ins and outs of so huge a region. But they knew.

Alan concluded: "They aren't strangers, of course. Bill just made a mistake."

Half-hidden between two blanket racks Constable Whipple sat fingering his rifle, peering ahead anxiously, as though at any moment he expected to meet the outlaw canoes here on the Mackenzie. Alan watched him with something of scorn in his eyes. Whipple was constantly spying upon the other men, listening with long ears, reporting everything that happened and a lot that did not.

Forty miles below Endurance, sweeping near to shore around a great bend, Alan looked ahead and sighted the Midnight Sun out in midstream, plowing steadily up south. At his gesture Pedneault swerved the launch and snubbed its headlong speed, and Bill began unfastening one of the canoes. As the two craft drew nearer, Alan rose up and signaled that he wished to come aboard the steamer. The boat stopped, a ladder was let down. Paddling across in the birchbark, he and Bill hurried up on deck.

Margaret Fournier was safely back on board. Several of the men, hastily patching one of the smashed canoes, had followed up the Aloska a mile and found her on a willow island where the bandits had set her off.

When Alan came on deck, almost his first sight was of Jimmy Montgomery's little girl, perched upon a pile of cargo, showered with care and attention from every one. As he glanced at the tiny golden-haired tot, Alan thought of her mother dying less than a year ago, of her young father cut down today by an outlaw's bullet; and he had a swift vision of the bleak orphanage, the friendless and homeless life, which lay ahead for her, now that Jimmy was dead. He was not deceived by the attention she was getting now. Every one was all sympathy for her today, but that would cool mighty quick; and then she'd be thrown into some orphanage, maybe along with half-breed and Indian children, Alan thought. "She's Jimmy's child; Jimmy was my partner; it's up to me to do something about her."

With nothing more definite than this in mind, he directed Ashmun, the white-haired skipper "You put her off at Endurance tonight. Give her to Elizabeth. Say I'll be back in two or three days."

Following the old captain, he stepped softly, hat in hand, into the one well-fitted cabin of the steamer. He remembered Jimmy as a trail partner and a quiet gentle soul and the most utterly fearless man he had ever known. Stone silent he stood beside the berth looking down for the space of half a minute, sick at heart, his eyes blurring. Why had it been Jimmy who was cut down?—a young man, a young father, the best and bravest of them all.

Then like a small whisper in his loam, a thought came, edged with pride in Jimmy and the manner of his death:

"You were the only one who drew a gun. You knew they'd kill you . . . a belt-gun against six rifles; but you stood up and shot. You were always that kind; and so was Curt. Now you're both gone; now I'm alone, of us three—"

The desolation was unbearable. Bill following, he turned and went out of the cabin, into the sunshine of the deck. A grim mood had come over him, a mood shot through with personal and deadly intention. He was no longer merely the stern and efficient representative of the law. Vengeance, a burning and righteous vengeance, had entered his heart.

With a dozen men crowding around to listen, he questioned Skipper Ashmun briefly.

"Bill said these men were strangers. That can't be. Didn't you recognize them at all? Haven't you got some idea who they were?"

"Alan, I positively never seen a man of 'em till I looked up and there they stood pointing their weapons at us. And I see just about everybody that goes up a . . . the river."

"And they knowed the lay of the land like a book," another man spoke up. "That's the queerest part of 't."

Alan was fairly staggered. Bill had reported accurately. The men were strangers.

How under heaven could six men enter this country unknown, unseen? Then, granting they had, granting them strangers, how did they come to know the lay of the land so perfectly?—where to strike, when to strike, how to escape by a straight shoot to their one superlative refuge, the Thal Azzuh.

In all his years of police service he had never met quite so dark a circumstance as this.

As he and Bill went down the ladder, the rail was lined with people wishing them a quick capture, wishing the criminals a swift and speedy justice. Alan did not hear, did not care. But as he stepped into the canoe and with a shove sent it skirling toward the launch, he did hear one voice from some man on the steamer; and it rang in his ears like a croak of evil prophecy:

"Going after men like them, Alan Baker, you'd better take your luck along!"

At the MacMillan trading post Joyce had lighted candles in the kitchen and trading hall. Though she hardly knew just when her father would return from his fur-buying trip, she had kindled a comfortable fire in his bedroom and had prepared a supper of scones and breaded mushrooms and willow ptarmigan which she herself had shot that morning.

As she stood tiptoe at a pantry shelf, away from the crackle and sough of the cook stove, she heard some peculiar noise somewhere out in the night. She went over to the window and there heard it more distinctly—a faint drone that rose and fell with the ground winds drifting out of the spruces.

The puzzling sound grew louder, plainer. Then suddenly Joyce knew. The police launch! Coming up the Big Aloska. Coming slowly because of the treacherous channel, but driving on through the twilight in spite of the danger.

That launch went out only on matters of importance. And this patrol must be very important, to bring the men up a perilous river at this hour.

Throwing a cape about her shoulders, she ran through the trading hall, out into the sharp pine-scented air; down to the canoe landing at the river bank.

As she stood on the mud-filmed planking, with the whispering breeze

Joyce Tried to Pray That Alan Was Not Leading This Patrol.

molding cape and dress closely about her vigorous young body, Joyce tried to pray that Alan was not leading this patrol. Her girlish pride was crying out that she did not want to see Alan Baker. Her rational mind was warning that it would be better for her if she never saw him again at all. But no pride or rationalizing could beat down the secret throbbing expectancy of meeting Alan, of hearing his voice, in a few minutes more.

Through the whole long winter Joyce had been slowly realizing that her return to this northern Waterways country had been a terrible mistake. Once she had been away, free of it all. With the true instinct of colonial Britons for their children, her dad and mother had sent her out to school, a solid old English institution in Ontario. When she finished, she quickly hunted up a job for herself, a place with a government bureau, where her knowledge of Indian languages and customs made her uniquely valuable in preparing pamphlets for the far northern agencies. Independent, earning a good salary, with friends and sports and work she liked, she had given up all of it and returned to this isolated fur post on a sub-Arctic river.

Her mother had died, and her father, alone, crushed by the relentless competition of big companies out to "get" him, had morally gone to pieces. Alan in his letters had written her the sorry facts. Her duty, clear as a call, had spoken to her, "If you return, you may be able to stop that; you may help Dad back to where he was." And she had come.

Human Weakness.

We move too much in platoons; we march by sections; we do not live in our vital individuality enough; we are slaves to fashion, in mind and in heart, if not to our passions and appetites.—Chaplin.

"Yes—we're both feeling fine"

Joe Thompson and his wife were glad when Gwen finished Business College and got a good position in the city. But Gwen was the last of the family and the house was pretty lonely.

Then they found they could call her on Long Distance telephone for as little as 30 cents. So now, every Friday evening, Gwen waits for their call and the weekly talks make them all feel better.

Long Distance is easy to use, dependable, and surprisingly inexpensive.

Low evening rates on station-to-station calls begin 7:00 p.m. Still lower night rates at 8:30 p.m.

Death of Mrs. James Densmore of Stonefield.

At her home in Stonefield, after three month's illness, there passed away Mrs. James Densmore, recently in her seventy-fifth year. She was a daughter of the late Matthew Hawkins and the late Ellen Barry, and widow of the late James Densmore, who predeceased her only a year ago. Both Mr. and Mrs. Densmore had lived in Stonefield all their lives, where they earned the respect and affection of all the neighborhood. They had been married fifty four years prior to Mr. Densmore's death.

Surviving to mourn the loss of the deceased are her two surviving brothers, George, of Duluth, Minn.; and William of Pasadena, Cal. Nine of her twelve children are left to mourn the loss of a beloved mother. These are Mrs. A. Sims, of Ottawa; Mrs. H. C. Stroud of California; Daisy of New York, Mrs. G. M. MacWilliams, of Montreal, and Grace at Stonefield. The sons James G., Thomas H., Wilfred R., and Herbert R., all residing at Stonefield.

LAKEFIELD

Miss A. Anderson, of Montreal, spent the week-end as guest of Miss Myrtle Evans.

Mrs. Thomas Pollock visited at the home of her brother, Mr. A. Sherritt, during the week-end.

Mr. B. Laddin is spending the summer months here.

Mrs. S. Woods and daughter Sarah, have returned home, after spending the past week in Montreal.

The weekly dance at Ralph's Corner, was largely attended. The three-piece orchestra seems to be making a big hit, as a "great time" was reported by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and family spent the week-end at their cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Andrews have opened their summer cottage here.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Tomalty, Lakefield, last week-end included Misses M. Bailie, R. Smith, T. M. Hynes, R. Johnston and Mr. C. Gordon Hynes, all of Montreal.

Many of the summer cottages were occupied by week-end visitors for a longer period than usual, owing to Friday last being the King's Birthday.

Owing to the publicity secured by an advertisement in our popular Watchman, Mr. Naylor Mount reports that all his plants etc., are absolutely sold out.

Mrs. George Peet is entertaining the ladies of the W.A. this Wednesday.

Mr. Robert Tomalty has been awarded the contract for painting the church-yard fence. The ladies of the W. I. are to be congratulated upon the fine spirit they are showing by undertaking this much needed work.

ORANGE PEKOE BLEND "SALADA" TEA "Fresh from the Gardens"

ANSWERS to "DO YOU KNOW"

1 This is attributed to Cicero the exact quotation being—"While the sick man has life there is hope."

2 The opening line of Keats "Endymion."

3 Samuel Johnson used the expression "Hell is paved with good intentions" according to Boswell's Life of Johnson, and an earlier saying to much the same effect "Hell is full of good meanings and wishes" is attributed to George Herbert.

4 It was made use of in a sermon by Rev. Charles Wesley, the founder of the Methodist Church.

5 This saying is found in proverbial literature of all countries.

The early fathers of the church and medieval moralists were extremely fond of it.

6 The saying is generally attributed to Shakespeare, but A. J. Butler gives us the following translation of an old Greek poem written by Palladius of Alexandria centuries before Shakespeare. "All the world's a stage, a show; then learn thy part with all thy heart, or bear the burden of thy woe."

We shall be pleased to answer questions of a general nature similar to those appearing in this column each week. Please address your questions to,—

Lachute Annual Spring Fair Now in Progress

It is the fond hope that Lachute will be favored with good weather for the Annual Spring Fair, which opened its doors on Wednesday and is now in full swing. Every barn, shed and stall is filled to capacity, housing the largest entry list of exhibitors that Argenteuil Agricultural Society has ever booked, and the most enthusiastic rivalry prevails in all classes.

High Standards eloquent of Ideals

The site of Lachute's outstanding annual event is well worthy of such splendid patronage. The Fair Grounds are credited with being the finest rural Exhibition site in Eastern Canada. Locally the Agricultural Society's grounds are regarded as a memorial to the unflinching devotion of John T. Ayers, late president of this organization. Mr. Ayers' interest in the agricultural pursuits and general welfare of this County truly need no memorial, for his achievements in the Society will not be lightly forgotten. The present directorate, however, under chairmanship of Mr. Harry Ayers, has sought to perpetuate the ideals and further the ambitions of the late J. T. Ayers on behalf of Argenteuil and its agricultural populace.

To these aims, and to the energies of the Board of Directors, may be attributed the high standards which are manifest again in Lachute Fair.

The grounds present a clean and attractive aspect. Buildings are in fine repair and afford good accommodation for the long list of entries and the large attendance. The race track is also in splendid shape. . . . It may be mentioned the C.P.R. Company Picnic is to be staged on these grounds during the coming month; and through its fine surroundings as well as through this week's Fair, Lachute stands to benefit materially in good advertising.

Industrial Show proving Attractive

The main buildings house exhibits of Ayers Limited with a notable display of woollen goods, in attractive variety of shade and color. These home products are a source of just pride to the people of this community, especially perhaps to our Mills workers and citizens, who devote daily effort to the manufacture and the marketing of products the beauty and quality of which are not surpassed anywhere on this continent. Ayers' exhibits are attracting a very personal and a marked industrial interest.

There is next a fine showing from our neighboring community of Brownsburg. The Safety Fuse and D. C. Company now constitute a part of Canadian Industries Limited, a concern which has risen to importance and repute throughout the Dominion. Besides the products of the Brownsburg plants—ammunition, fuses of the famous "Safety" brand, and pyralin—other subsidiaries of C. I. L. are represented by fabrikoid, chemicals, paint and varnish, and an interesting line of commodities.

Northern Electric Limited are collaborating with our district lighting service, Gatineau Power Company, in a showing of electrical equipment and devices. The fine convenience, utility, and labor-saving qualities of their products are drawing keen interest among the domestic and agricultural-minded in attendance at the Fair.

The Canada Linseed Oil Mills Limited of Montreal and Toronto have also a very fine exhibit of oil cake, meal and linseed oil.

The Government Experimental Farm at Ottawa is next represented by H. W. Cole, of the Publicity Dept. The nature of this exhibit is instructive, seeking to demonstrate the value of fertilizers in improving the quality and capacity of pastures. According to Mr. Cole, while it is not yet possible to give any figures on costs and returns from fertilizing, it has been undoubtedly proved that fertilizers, in increasing the mineral content of the soil, raise the carrying capacity of pastures to a high degree.

In collaboration with several of our town merchants, Ramsay Paints, Beatty Washers, and "Silent Glow" and "Sterling" Oil Burners, are also demonstrating; while Geo. Y. Deacon, Jno. McPaul & Son, W. Lefebvre, T. McQuat & Son, R. McArthur & Son, are all taking opportunity of this occasion and are attractively displaying their respective lines before the public.

Entries Testify to Growing Popularity

That Lachute Fair is gaining in popularity is evidenced by the fact that an unusually large number of entrants from considerable distances are present to contest for honors. Among these are M. J. O'Brien of Renfrew, Ont.; D. A. Cairns, Athelstan, Que.; Edwards Bros. Watford, Ont.; J. M. Fisher, Woodville, Ont.; T. G. Maybury, Aylmer; J. J. McCluskey, Guelph, Ont.; D. A. McCormick, Brysonville, Que.; Garnet Kerr, Campbellford, Ont.; A. A. Ayre, Hampton, Ont.; Thomas McGill, Ormstown; J. A. Raymond, Williamstown, Ont.; D. M. Stewart, Osgoode Station, Ont.; J. T. Thompson, Bainsville, Ont.; R. L. Todd, Milltown, N. B.; Ernest Sylvestre, St. Hyacinthe; Albani Sylvestre, St. Simon, Que.; Wilson's Farm, of Isle Bezaud; W. H. Skinner, Tyrone, Ont.; Alphonse Charbonneau, Lachenoie, Que.; Hectance Charpentier, Clairvaux; Hervé Huserau, Oka; Stanislas Laframboise, Ste. Scholastique; Allan E. Hubble, Havelock, Ont.

Distant exhibitors are, however, meeting with keenest competition from our own Argenteuil livestock fanciers. Outstanding among the latter may be seen very creditable exhibits by Rodger Brothers with 27 head, and J. H. Black with 15 head of Ayrshire pure-breds; also Robt. Morrison, Mrs. Bond, Erskine McQuat, W. J. Rodger, Robt. Deir, and others.

Mt. Royal Riding Stables; J. W. Nesbitt, Montreal; Dawes National Breweries Ltd.; Mrs. R. Poirier, Montreal, and enthusiasts from our neighboring County of Two Mountains, are also upholding a fine quality of animals in the different classes of Horse exhibits; and these are likewise meeting a fine rivalry from our local breeders, among whom G. Arnold, Grenville, is perhaps foremost with his splendid string of Percherons.

Arundel Lodge are Hosts to Montreal Masons

The officers and brethren of Laurentian Lodge, No. 81, were hosts to a delegation of the Brethren of St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 53, of Montreal, on Saturday, June 11th. The visitors were accompanied by Rt. Wor. Bro. W. Eisel, D.D.G.M., Montreal District No. 1, and by several brethren from other Montreal lodges.

The degree work of the evening was exemplified by Wor. Bro. Ritchie and officers of St. Andrew's Lodge.

At the close of the meeting, those in attendance adjourned to the banquet hall to the skirl of the bagpipes, played by Piper Orr of the visiting Lodge, after the usual toasts, an impromptu entertainment was put on by the visitors, and all present enjoyed themselves to the utmost.

The guests returned to Mr. J. Morgan's residence at Weir, spending the remainder of the week-end there, and returning to Montreal by motor on Sunday evening.

St. Canute Farmer is Found Hanging in Barn

Father of Nine Children Had Deeply Mourned Death of Wife

At dawn on Sunday last, Alderic Dumoulin, 43-year-old farmer of St. Canute, widower and father of nine children, was found dead in his barn, suspended from a beam, with a horse's rein tied around his neck. The discovery was made by Laurent Dumoulin, 18-year-old son of the dead man, together with Antheime Gingras, the widower's uncle.

Dr. Ludger Labelle, of St. Jerome, coroner of the Terrebonne district, was notified, and an inquest was held Monday morning.

It was learned by the coroner that the farmer had gone to the St. Jerome market on Saturday, accompanied by his 13-year-old daughter. The girl was left under the care of her uncle in St. Jerome. Dumoulin was last seen alive at two a.m. Sunday, when he left the Hotel Lapointe in his horse-drawn vehicle.

Dr. Labelle was informed by the dead man's relatives that Dumoulin had been despondent since his wife's death five years ago.

Child Succumbs to Poisoning

Took Pills, unknown to Mother.

Deep sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Beaudoin in the death of their little son Roger, under 2 years of age. Following a loss of appetite he took convulsions, and his mother becoming alarmed called the doctor. It was discovered that the little lad had taken a number of pills which had been prescribed for his mother. Everything possible was done to save his life, but it was too late and he died shortly of poisoning. Mr. Beaudoin is Assistant Agronomist of this County, under Mr. A. Bothwell.

Lachute Baby-Contest Creates Interest

Argenteuil County Health Unit announces Baby-Clinic Awards

About 150 Lachute mothers gathered in the Auditorium last Monday evening, when 42 prizes were awarded to babies who had attended the clinics and had shown decided improvement in their health through following scrupulously the advices of the Health Unit staff.

Mr. Deschênes, who was in charge of the clinics in the absence of Dr. Lalande during his sojourn in Toronto, ably conducted the proceedings of the evening, with the help assisted by the two nurses of the Unit. He clearly explained the method by which the winning babies had been selected, and made a few remarks concerning the importance of these clinics.

Dr. Lalande, Health Officer of the Unit, also added a few words of thanks to the donors of the

County Women's Institutes Elects Officers

With the first of June practically all organized Counties have held their annual meeting and have chosen officers and convenors to carry on for a year.

Argenteuil County reports the provincial Publicity Committee had the largest meeting on record for this territory, almost one hundred members attending. The Convention lasted throughout the day and was full of interest to all present. Jerusalem-Bethany Branch had an interesting talk on The Welfare of the Child by a qualified nurse and Immigration and Educational problems were discussed. Lakefield Branch is arranging for improvements to the local cemetery and Morin Heights arranged practical assistance for an underprivileged child and visited sick people, taking fruits and flowers for their benefit. Pioneer Branch planned for a Lawn Social and Upper Lachute had an interesting meeting along social lines.

Disastrous Fire at Lakeview Residence

Lakeview, June 13.—Damage to the extent of over $10,000 was done to the summer residence here of James E. Wright, 1834 Bayle Street, Montreal. The house, barn and shed were all burnt to the ground between 3 and 8 a.m. last Monday.

Mr. Wright had left his house at Biggareau Lake, about 4 p.m. Sunday and everything seemed to be in order. Neither was there any sign of fire at 11 p.m. when some people of Arundel passed. The whole place was burnt down, however, when Howard Bates, Mr. Wright's manager appeared on the scene next morning.

Nobody knows what caused the fire. It appears to have started in the house, to have spread from there to the shed and thence to the stable. In spite of the fact there was no wind, at the time, it is possible the heat might have carried across the intervening forty feet between the shed and house.

A valuable collection of rifles was burned, as well as a truck, a Jewett sedan, and a number of other effects. It is thought that these are not completely covered by insurance.

By-Law No. 126 Defeated

The appeal to the Public Service Commission to study the Lachute Waterworks situation and make its recommendations accordingly, has proved itself justified by the vote taken last week on the By-law for a loan of $26,000.

The proposed development of the old Pollock Site was defeated on a small margin of valuation, and the votes recorded proved exceptionally heavy for this town those voting for the by-law numbered 180, with valuation of $12,680, as against the by-law 156, with valuation of $15,641.

Brownsburg Scouts Church Parade

An Outstanding Success

Success far beyond expectations, attended the efforts of the committee who organized the First Parade and open air Church Service of the Brownsburg Boy Scout Group. Public interest in Scout work was proved beyond doubt; considerably over one thousand people congregating on the Brownsburg Recreation Grounds for the service.

On the evening of June 11th, the Vicker's Brass Band—which by the way, is the only Scout Band of its kind in Canada—gave an excellent concert on the Social Club lawn, thereby materially assisting to defray expenses. The selections were well chosen and were rendered in such a way as to demonstrate this was a band of no mean qualifications. It would not be

The Captain's Corner

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

COME TO THE FAIR.

Dear Boys,—

I say to you this week COME TO THE FAIR. It is of course an invitation that you will accept because I can't very well imagine ANY BOY not going to a FAIR.

Many years ago—more than I care to remember now—I was staying in a very old town in England. Most of the houses had been in existence for some hundreds of years, while the ancient church with its square tower possessed walls erected by the Normans in the 11th. century. Many of the streets were 'cobbled' that is made up with small round stones gathered from the beach for the sea was not far away.

Now the people who lived in this town, with the exception of the Minister, the Doctor and one or two storekeepers, were very quiet folk. The women and children stayed at home and the men, who were fishermen, went out in their boats.

However one day in the year was set aside as a HOLIDAY. The town was decorated with flags, no ships left the harbour, boys and girls, men and women put on their best clothes and a big flag flew from the church tower. Of course the school was shut up and in the early morning you would discover little children dancing up and down those narrow streets with smiling faces and a sparkle in their eyes, and they would be singing,—

*Our slates and books are put away
We'll sing and play throughout the day
Because the FAIR has come to stay.*

Just once a year that's all but did they not enjoy it?

I remember the little boy with whom I was staying saying to me. I DON'T REMEMBER EVER BEING SO HAPPY BEFORE, and all he had seen was a Merry-go-Round, a few swings, one or two clowns, a bear and an elephant.

How far different it is going to be for you. Well I shall look out for some of my friends and when the rockets are soaring high up into the night sky and bursting with all their wonderful colours I shall be more than glad I said,—

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 4.

Jack's strange visitor rose from his chair and took the photograph over to the table so that he could see it better by the light of the lamp. "Yes its Mary" he remarked softly gazing at the framed picture intently; then placing it down almost reverently he went across to the boy and affectionately placed a hand on his shoulder. "Jack", he said, "there is no question about it, your mother was my sister and I am your uncle, Patrick Sommerville. You may not have heard of me, indeed it is not possible you could have done, for when your mother left our home in Ireland for India I was away at sea and for that reason and others had not seen her for years. Only once, a long time after, did I hear she had been married to your Dad, and then that all of you had returned to England. When my ship, for I am a sea captain, reached port some months ago I made enquiries all over the place only to hear that your parents were at a little village named Seaview Cove. I hastened there but arrived too late to see them alive and to learn that you and your sister had left for London. However through the good minister, who has been advising you, I have at last found you, and glad indeed I am, my boy for your troubles must have been many."

All the time his visitor, who now so strangely turned out to be his uncle, had been speaking, Jack's interest grew and he began to experience a feeling of real gladness to which, for many sad months he had been a stranger. It seemed now that his troubles would be over for he felt convinced that this newly discovered relative would help him as well as his little sister.

"Oh uncle" he said excitedly, "this is just splendid. To think that all the time you have been looking for us we never knew it. Why we did not even know that we had an uncle."

Pat Sommerville smiled well pleased to note the boy's pleasure. "Well, well just you sit down there Jack and tell me what you have been doing all this time, after which I'll take a look at my niece without disturbing her."

For the next few hours, regardless of time, uncle and nephew talked much of the past and made many pleasant plans for the future, thus it was nearly an hour after dawn before their conversation was concluded.

"My word" Jack said going to the window and throwing it wide open, "the storm has gone and see, the sun is rising. Why it is morning how the time has slipped away. I shall have to be going to work soon."

"What you are going to do my boy is get right to bed and when there, sleep for as long as you please, I have other plans for you than running round delivering vegetables for any man, no matter how worthy he may be. Off you go now and I will see to things in the morning, that is I mean of course" he added with a smile, "later in the day."

"But what about you Uncle, you must sleep as well, but where I don't quite know" answered Jack, looking round distressfully.

"Well well don't you worry about a little thing like that. It won't be the first time that Pat Sommerville has worked out an all night watch as many there are that will tell you, and I reckon and hope that it won't be the last. Now you obey orders and turn in."

The boy was about to make a further remark, but his uncle turning his back on him, had again taken up the photograph and perceiving how thoroughly engrossed was his attention, Jack quietly and gratefully slipped away.

BETTER FARM PRACTICES

In spite of the depression and the shortage of ready cash, comments the Tara Leader, farmers everywhere in Ontario are using this year more careful and thorough farm practices than ever before. Seed merchants report that they have never had such a demand for high class seeds. All available supplies of alfalfa, alsike, red clover, wheat, barley, oats, buckwheat & peas have been purchased and sown on Ontario farms. Strange to say there has been an unprecedented demand for registered grain. Hardware merchants report a wonderful sale of screening materials for fanning mills. Druggists report greatly increased sales of Formalin for treating grain for smut. Seed cleaning plant operators report heavy increases in business. These facts all indicate that the average farmer is not only taking advantage of low prices but is doing his part toward meeting depressed prices.

A SCHOOL-BOY'S ESSAY.

Henry VIII. was the greatest widower that ever lived. He was born in Anno Domini in the year 1066. He had 510 wives besides women and children. The first was beheaded, then executed afterwards; the second was revoked—she never smiled again. The greatest man in this reign was Lord Wolsely. He was called the Boy Bachelor, "being at the age of 15 unmarried." Had he served his wife as diligently as he served the king, she would not have deprived him of his grey hairs. Henry VIII quarrelled with Lord Wolsely because he courted Anne Boleyn. He also quarrelled with the Pope because he called him "Fide the offensive" and "Dandy Lion" and other offensive appetites. He also quarrelled with the Monasteries. He pulled down barns and built greater and the last state of that man was worse than the first. He died on the "Field of the Cloth of Gold" his horse trod on a cinder and there was weeping and gnashing of teeth. In this reign the Bible was translated into Latin by Titus Oates, who was ordered by the King to be chained up in a church. It was in this reign also that the Duke of Wellington discovered America and invented the curfew bells to prevent fires in theatres. There was also a great fire in London called the Black Death and after the fire came the earthquake and after the earthquake a still small voice. Henry VIII was succeeded by his great-grandmother, the beautiful and accomplished Mary Queen of Scots, sometimes known as the "Lady of the Lake" or the "Lay of the Last Minstrel."

EMPHASIZE THE GOOD POINTS

The end of the school year is an anxious time for both children and parents. There is anxiety over the results of the examinations and sometimes considerable bewilderment over the course of study of be followed in the future.

Parents are prone to over-emphasize the ability to learn at school. Needless to say we are all glad to see our children do well in their studies, but we all know that there are children who are incapable of acquiring "book-learning"—to use an old-fashioned expression. Parents will recognize that other children are not quick to learn, but they cannot or rather will not see it about their own. Parents, at times, allow their pride to over-rule their affection and demand more than a child is capable of giving. Parents cannot see the other capabilities of the child, but only their ability to shine at examinations. We are not all cut to the same pattern and if we cannot be quick at school we may have other possibilities which in the end will be of more value.

Educationists recognize this and try to give different training to different types of minds. One of the chief troubles is to get parents to allow their children to enter classes designed for those who are not so bright at formal education. Small towns and rural districts have no choice, but in the larger places there is a choice and wise parents take advantage of it.

They really do wonderfully good work with some children. One case has come under my observation recently. One lad, we will call him Jim, as that is very unlike his real name, was the middle boy in the family. Both his older and younger brothers were quite clever. Jim was slow and suffered in comparison. His brothers were in High School while he was still in the Public School and apparently little prospect of getting out. His disposition was changing and he became very irritable, sullen, and quite saucy. He slouched around all the time with a chip on his shoulder. His parents had more affection than pride and they sent him to a special class. I forgot to mention that he was very good with his hands and always had money as he was invariably able to find some way of keeping himself in cash. He is just completing his first year in the special class and you would not know the boy. He has had training along manual lines as well as school work. At Christmas, he made Christmas presents, such as smoking stands and dolls houses, and incidentally made money by selling them. He has learned to do such things as cane chairs and sole shoes. There are so many things that he knows how to do that his brothers cannot do, that he is inclined to look down on them. There is no more inferiority complex in this lad. His shoulders are straight and he holds himself well. Incidentally he has done well in the half day at his regular school work and there is every prospect of him passing his Entrance this summer.

If your child is not particularly bright at school recognize the fact, and do not make their lives miserable, for something that they cannot help, but look for the things that they can do well and emphasize those in their training for the battle of Life.

SPRING VEGETABLES

Asparagus and spinach may be served in so many different ways, that they never need become monotonous. Do you serve them for supper or do you just use them for dinner vegetables? Here are some suggestions that may be different to those you have been using.

ASPARAGUS SHORTCAKE

Make baking powder biscuits. Split and butter. Cover with creamed asparagus (asparagus cut into inch lengths, in cream sauce) Serve hot.

SPINACH SHORTCAKE

Split and butter hot baking powder biscuits. Cover with well-drained and seasoned spinach. Hard cooked eggs may be chopped and added to the spinach. Grated cheese may be added instead to make a more flavoured dish.

SPINACH TOAST

Drain thoroughly and season cooked spinach. Cover toast with the spinach, sprinkle with grated cheese and put into oven until the cheese melts. The success of this dish is largely in the very careful draining of the spinach as it must be very dry to prevent soggy toast.

BEEF GREEN WITH BACON DRESSING

Cook beet greens in a small quantity of salted water. Drain thoroughly and to one pint of cooked greens add the following dressing. Slice a quarter of a pound of bacon and cook until crisp. Beat one egg with half teaspoonful of salt, 1/4 teaspoonful of pepper, 1 tablespoonful of sugar, 1 teaspoonful of flour, 2 tablespoons of fat & cook until thick. Pour over the greens and toss lightly until well mixed. Serve hot.

ASPARAGUS SALAD

Cook asparagus in salted water until tender, drain and chill. Make a bed of shredded leaf lettuce, adding a little chopped green onion if desired. Cover the lettuce with the asparagus, which may be in sticks or cut in inch lengths before cooking. Sprinkle with coarsely chopped hard cooked egg. Asparagus is a welcome addition to any salad. We are accustomed to using canned asparagus in salads but the chilled fresh variety is even more to be desired.

ORANGE STRAWBERRY JELLY

Add 2 cups of boiling water to an orange jelly powder. Let cool. Slice 2 cups of strawberries and sweeten to taste. When the jelly begins to thicken, fold in the strawberries. Mould until firm. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON SERMON

"IS THE UNIVERSE, INCLUDING MAN, EVOLVED BY ATOMIC FORCE?" is the subject for study in all Christian Science Churches, June 19.

Golden Text: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." (Psalms 19:1.)

Among the citations comprising the Lesson-Sermon are the following from the Bible:—"Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting thou art God." (Psalms 90:1,2.)

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon are the following readings from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God creates and governs the Universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual ideas, which He evolves, and they are obedient to the mind that makes them." "The tree and herb do not yield fruit because of any propagating power of their own, but because they reflect the Mind which includes all." (pages 295 and 507.)

Annual Meeting

The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

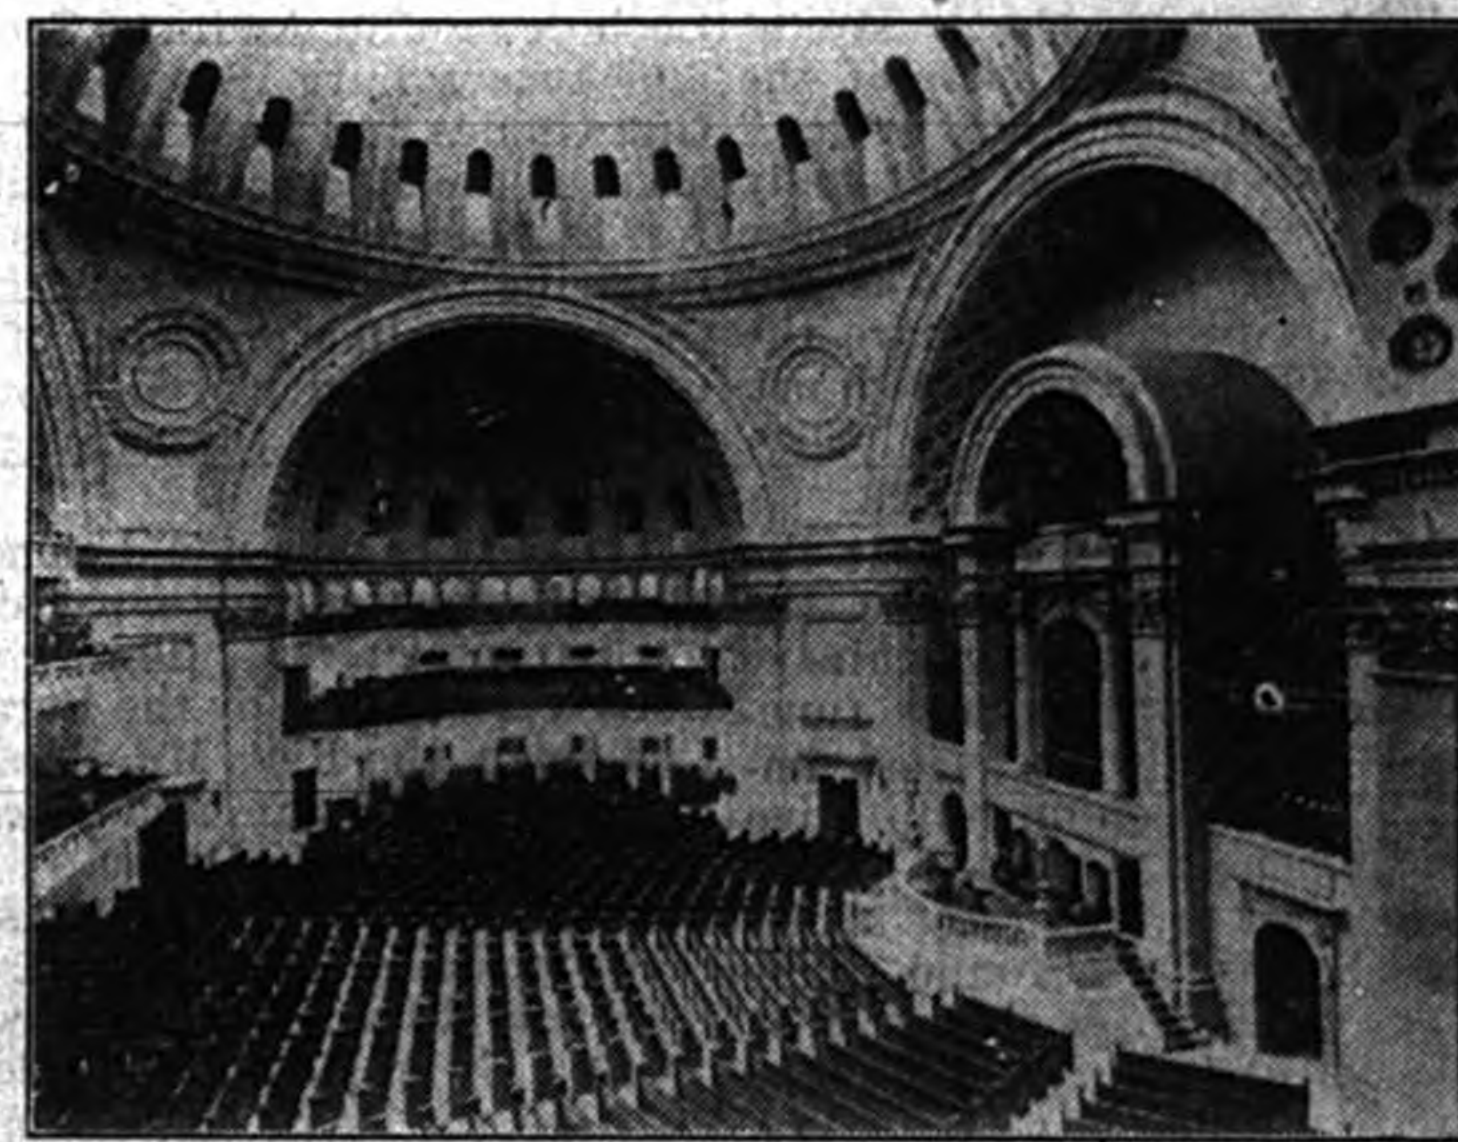

....Boston, Mass., June 6.—The steady progress of the Christian Science movement during the year marked by a general slowing down in human activities was emphasized here today in reports presented at the Annual Meeting of The Mother Church. The First Church of Christ, Members from many parts of the world—more than 6000 in all—listened to reports of the various departments of the organization, which told of steady attainment in its numerous activities.

Close at hand, in the shadow of the dome of the church edifice members beheld an inspiring indication of this growing activity in a structural outline of steel and stone rapidly taking form into the new home of The Christian Science Publishing Society, designed to serve an increasing need for publication of the periodicals.

The firm support of righteous government in thought, word and deed was urged by Mr. R. E. Buffum, of Boston, retiring President, in an address leading up to the introduction of his successor. "At this time when lawlessness and crime seem so evident," said Mr. Buffum, "it is imperative that we, as Christian Scientists, firmly stand on the side of law and order, and that we unreservedly support righteous government."

In his address, the new President, Governor Brewster, stated in part:

"The disciples of Christian Science face with others the challenge of a testing time to determine whether their conception of the universe is founded on words of sand or on the rock of an understanding that is equal to every test. Out into the highways and byways goes the disciple of Christian Science to demonstrate his capacity to meet the problems common to mankind. The world turns more and more to ask the reason for our faith, and can find its answer only in lives that are transformed. This assemblage furnishes teeming evidence, assembled from every quarter of this globe, that a practical religion is the desire of mankind. To the extent that disciples of Christian Science shall exemplify its teachings for suffering humanity, hungry after the things that shall really satisfy, to that extent the world will be restored to the path from which it has wandered."

"It has been our privilege to witness and record inspiring growth during the past year," was the message read by Miss M. Rosamond Wright, manager of the Department of Branches and Practitioners.

The admission of new members has kept pace with expansion and progress, was the report of Ezra W. Palmer, clerk of The Mother Church.

Relief work was an important part of the activities of this department.

Mr. Roland R. Harrison, Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, reported that "the Monitor has strengthened its reputation as a reliable chronicler of world events and as an advocate of peace among nations. While the Monitor has not in any sense attempted to gloss over the apparent conditions of world economics, it has treated the financial and industrial troubles of the world in a way to bring out, through presentation of the news and well-balanced editorial discussion, the more helpful and constructive side of the situation."

"The year 1932," he added, "will see our list of publications in languages other than English increased by a Monitor religious article in Hungarian, Latvian, and Polish, making a total of 15 languages, and by translations of some of our lesser publications."

HANDICRAFTS GUILD WILL WELCOME EXHIBITS.

Readers of the article contributed in last week's Watchman, relative to Dyes and their uses, will be interested in an announcement of the Exhibition to be held by Canadian Handicrafts Guild, at the Sherbrooke Street (W) Art Gallery, Montreal, during the last two weeks of October. Prize lists and entry forms are now available from the Guild Secretary, 1240 St. Catherine St. W.

This year the Guild is offering a special prize for the best collection of natural dyes and recipes. Articles eligible for this competition are of many kinds: Weaving, needlework, basketry, metal work, pottery, leather work, wood-carving, batik, book-binding and many others. Any original article of handicrafts well executed will be welcomed, provided it comes up to the standard required.

EDUCATION AND BETTER SCHOOLS

Address by Principal Hall before Frontier Branch
Women's Institute

I have often heard the remark passed that the standard of education today is higher than in former years. Being somewhat experienced along scholastic lines I often wonder if that is true. I certainly admit that the standard has been changed considerably, and apparently has been improved, but it was necessary as modern civilization demanded it.

In former years the fundamentals of school training were the classics. That is to say pupils were taught classics whether they had an aptitude for them or not. Moreover, to provide a classical education for the best pupils, everything else was sacrificed. They were taught classics, not on the literary method, but on the academic method, as if they were all to enter for scholarships and end by becoming teachers.

Benson suggested an obvious solution in his essay on "Education," and this seems to be the method followed today in our schools, and especially in the universities, where a student may take honour courses in almost any subject he chooses. The staple of education should be French, easy mathematics, history, geography, and popular science. Then, when the first stages were over, pupils with any special gift should be put to a single subject in which he should try to make real progress, but so that there would be time to keep up the simpler subjects as well. The result would be that when a pupil had finished his course, he would have some one subject which he could reasonably be expected to have mastered up to a certain point, and have a reliable knowledge of the other important subjects.

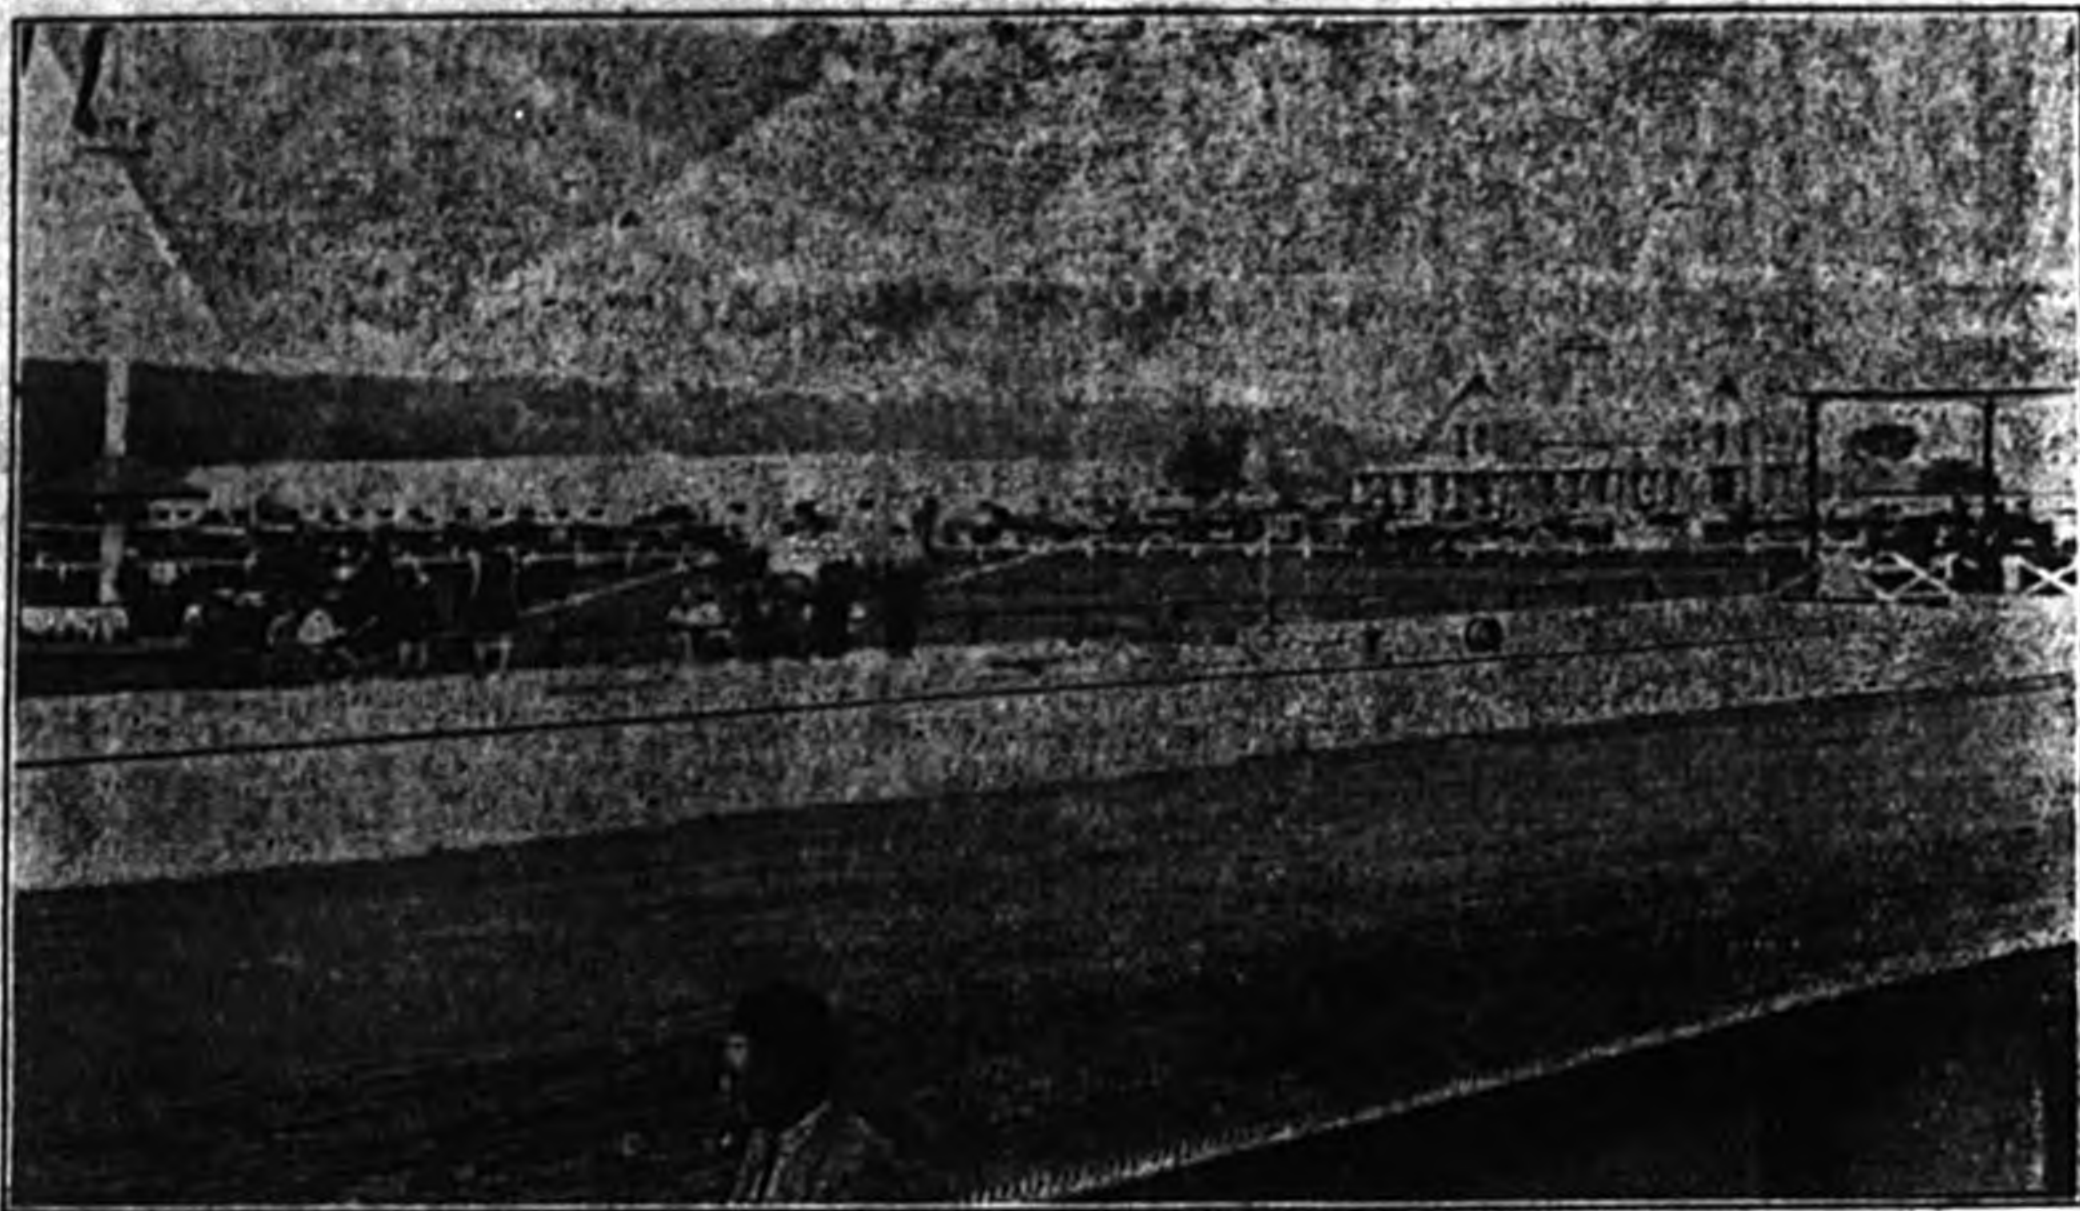

The defenders of the classical system say that it fortifies the mind and makes it a strong and vigorous instrument. Where is the proof of it? It is true that it fortifies and invigorates minds which have to start with plenty of grip and interest, but pure classics are, as the results prove, too hard a subject for ordinary minds, and they are taught in too abstruse and elaborate a way.

Within the last few years the charges of public schools have risen greatly. The increased charges are used mainly for the comforts of the pupils; and in opportunities for athletic exercises; while teachers are so often poorly paid that it is often impossible for the best one to adopt the profession, unless they have enthusiasm which causes them to put consideration of personal comfort aside.

It seems absolutely unnecessary to even mention the subject of better schools when we have only to see the new Consolidated School at Brownsburg to have adequate proof of the vast improvements introduced in the building of new schools. They are bigger, well-lighted, well ventilated, and well heated. Although not quite as elaborate or as well equipped as some of the schools of the larger cities, country schools have certainly been improved and will no doubt be still further improved in years to come.

Lachute Fair in Progress

There are altogether 110 local entries in live-stock classes, which—together with outside competition—should afford interest and satisfaction to the most fastidious live-stock enthusiast among spectators at the Fair.

Entertainment and Catering.

Of fun and entertainment, the very best has been obtained, to accord with the high standard of our agricultural and industrial showing.

"Benny" is on hand as usual, with his ferris-wheel, merry-go-round, and midway attractions. Not the least of these is the exhibit of Miss Edna Van Wickle, whose beautiful big white Percheron "Sillon", imported from France, is on view for the sum of 10 cents; but it is a real education to see this huge animal. It is 8 years old, weighs 2960 lbs., and stands 21 hands high; it is reputed to be the world's largest draught horse on record.

The Dance Pavilion will be in full swing, while trotting and racing events, and choice items of entertainment, promise to keep every hour of the Fair merrily occupied.

The catering of meals is being most efficiently handled by ladies of the local Red Cross Society, and first class meals are being tastily served in the dining room of the Main Building.

The attendance so far, in the two first days of the event, has proved very gratifying to the directorate, and it is hoped the final figures and general results will fulfill the expectations of all concerned in the success of this important annual function.

BROWNSBURG SCOUTS' PARADE AND SERVICE AN OUTSTANDING SUCCESS.

amiss to take this opportunity of congratulating Mr. McGruer, who conducted, on the wonderful performance of his boys, who ranged in ages from thirteen to nineteen years.

Promptly at 2.30 p.m. on Sunday, the Parade formed and headed by the Vicker's Band, Lachute and St. Andrews Scouts and Brownsburg Scouts, Cubs, Girl Guides and Brownies, marched to the Recreation Grounds for the ceremony. It was an inspiring spectacle to witness the machine-like precision of all units as they deployed around the flag-staff for the raising of the flag.

The service was non-denominational, and was participated in by five ministers. The devotions were opened by the Parade Chairman, the Rev. Mr. Baxter, followed by a hymn, and a prayer by Rev. F. W. Dyson. All people joined in the responsive reading led by the Rev. A. E. Hagar, and the lesson was read by Rev. J. A. Lackey. Following a prayer by Rev. Mr. Hagar, Rev. E. G. Baxter next made a few remarks concerning the reason for the Parade and exhorted parents to encourage their boys and girls to become members of Scout or Guide units. The Rev. H. Cousens then gave an inspiring address based on the story of David and Goliath, this old world that the younger generation develop high ideals, in order to overcome the Giants represented by War, Political Corruption, Professionalism in Sport, etc. The Benediction was given by the Rev. Dyson.

Equally impressive was the flag-lowering ceremony, while the Band led the gathering in the singing of "God Save the King." This was followed by the march past, the salute being taken by Field Secretary for the Province of Quebec Boy Scout Association, Mr. Hicks, and Mr. C. E. Richardson, President of the Brownsburg Boy Scout Group.

It is said that bow legs are a sign of courage. But with skirts so long again, what good is this information to a man who wants a brave wife.

The W. A. of the Anglican Church met last Thursday afternoon, June 9th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fraser, Lachute Road. The meeting was well attended and quite a lot of business transacted. Plans were made to have a concert some time in July and a sale during the month of August.

The W. A. were pleased to welcome at this meeting their new rector, Rev. R. S. Booy, Mrs. Booy, also Miss Booy. They also enjoyed having Mrs. Shaw, of Montreal, a former president, with them.

The St. Andrews East Choral and Dramatic Society met for the last time this season at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Macdonnell, Monday evening, June 13th. They voted to divide the proceeds from their concert amongst the three different churches.

Mrs. Shaw, of Montreal, has been the guest of Mrs. Willett and Miss Maggie Dewar during the past couple of weeks.

The St. Andrews troop of Boy Scouts, under Scoutmaster A. Snowdon, sent a delegation of nineteen to attend the district rally at Brownsburg, on Sunday afternoon, June 12th. The program of worship in the open air during the inspiring music led by the Canadian Vickers' Band, and the excellent address from Rev. Mr. Cousens, all contributed to making a very impressive service.

ADVERTISING THAT FAILED

One insuperable drawback to radio broadcasting is that the advertisers have no means of ensuring that the public is listening to their programs. Sponsors seem to be dazzled by the salesmen's talk that there are so many million people within the radius of so many radio stations, and at huge cost, they buy time over a certain number of stations, fondly believing—or just fondly hoping—that a few million people are listening to the programs. But many of them have had very disappointing results.

There is the cast of a hosiery manufacturer who booked thirteen weeks over one of the big American chains. With a large part of the contract unexpired he has asked to have it cancelled because the advertising has cost a great deal more than it has brought in.

The advertiser's program was heard over 42 stations every week. By way of "keying" the result he offered prizes for a contest. Yet out of all those millions who were supposed to be listening, only 4,500 answers were received, or an average of about one hundred people per station, each being in a large city.

The program was one of those irritating fifteen minute affairs with a sales tax at the beginning, middle and end, from six to seven minutes being taken up with the ballyhoo. Obviously, the advertiser did not care a rap about the entertainment; it was publicity for his goods and nothing else he wanted.

This is just a sample of what the public has to put up with under a system of radio run for private profit. Soon it will be impossible on Canadian chains.

(—Huntingdon Gleaner.)

The first vessel to cross the Atlantic wholly under steam was the Royal William in 1833, which was built in Quebec in 1831. This honor belongs therefore to Canada.

MARRIAGE

Quinn—Davis

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. George's Church, Brownsburg, on Saturday, June 11th., when the Rev. J. A. Lackey, Rector, united in marriage, Irene Charlotte youngest daughter of Mrs. and the late James Brachenbury Davis, to Gerald Hamilton Quinn, youngest son of Mr. E. H. Quinn, of Montreal. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Albert Davis, and wore ivory satin in long straight lines flared at hem, long pointed sleeves, and veil of ivory net forming a train with clusters of orange blossoms at sides, white shoes and necklace of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a shower bouquet of pale pink roses, lilies of the valley and fern.

Mrs. A. Werritt, the bride's sister, was matron of honour, in pink embroidered Organdy and large hat of straw trimmed in green ribbon velvet, and carrying a bouquet of deep pink roses.

Little Shirley Werritt, the bride's niece, was flower girl, in long Victorian gown of frilled blue Organdy, Juliette cap of ribbon and pearls and long mittens, and carried a small colonial bouquet of pink sweet peas.

A reception was held afterwards at the bride's home.

Lachute is Entertaining

Hang out your Flags!

This is Fair Week! Citizens are invited to contribute to its success, by lending the spirit and appearance of hospitality to our town. Flags and bunting to decorate both stores and dwellings, will mark the spirit of celebration in, and leave an impression of Lachute as a live and progressive little town. General co-operation by our citizenry will prove mutually beneficial and generally appreciated.

NEWSPAPER COSTS
Bowle (Ariz.) Tribune.

The 12,000 weekly newspapers in the United States have figured out the actual cost in cash per line of every line of editorial, local and news items that goes into a newspaper, no matter how large or small the paper and that cost varies from 7 7-8 to 21-2 cents per line. So when you feel like cussing the editor for not publishing your spring poetry, just stop and think that it is going to cost him 2 cents per line in cash to put it in type, make it up in the newspaper forms, run the paper through the press, fold them, then take the forms off the press and distribute the article or poem back in the case again.
And it has happened many times that the author of the poem became quite peeved when the editor hesitated on handing out a dozen free copies of the paper.
This newspaper game is a great game—yet there are scads of both men and women (who were never in a print shop in their lives, and who wouldn't know a newspaper press when they saw it) could—or think they could—run the newspapers better than they are being run.

FORFEITING FREEDOM
"All men are born free and equal, but most of them spoil it by getting married."

Taxation !

CORRESPONDENCE

Editor, The Watchman.
Sir :

I would address myself again to the rate payers of the Township of Chatham and indeed to the whole County of Argenteuil, on the subjects of Valuation and Taxation.

The valuers are again at our doors and as usual they can give no account of themselves, when asked what they base their calculations upon. To one question they will answer, "Oh, that is the old valuation, and we left it as it stood—The previous val-uators are responsible."

To another question, "Why is valuation of such a property, such and such?" they reply, "Oh,
he is well able to pay for that valuation." Again to the question, "Do you value the land or the improvements?" the answer is,
"Sometimes the one and sometimes the other."

I could go on ad infinitum, attacking the rule-of-thumb method applied to our proprietors, along the front of Chatham.
Further I would say that quite a few of our properties have been sold and they have not realized the valuation put upon them by the valuers; while in other parts of the township sales have far surpassed the valuation put upon them. And this rule of thumb they apply in their rounds is far from satisfactory to the former mentioned ratepayers. When spoken to on the question, the reply from the valuers is invariably, "We have not time to discuss such matters. If I read history and political economy correctly, I would say that when we are out to settle the affairs of our nation we have all the time there is, and we must take it. Those that cannot live up to this standard should retire and give their places to those who can take time to perform such duties properly. And if these unbalanced orders (such as we have) exist over our whole County, no wonder we are in a state of chaos. Yet possibly, for all I can say, they may be in existence over the whole Province of Quebec. For an element has been crying in our province Peace, Peace! here we can see very clearly there has been no peace; and our incomes have been steadily declining, while our taxation has been as steadily increasing.

The Country in the hands of a lot of Stock Jobbers, making immense fortunes out of watering stocks. Many of our natural resources in the hands of Utility Companies, are being tardily meted out to us who own them;
and we pay exorbitant profits to said Companies which make their prices little short of tribute. I would grant every dollar
I own for Freedom, but I would not vote on my death bed one dollar for tribute.

Furthermore, there is a dispute raging between Ottawa and Quebec as to which will control the Radio, both claiming the right of control; and we in whom the right of said control exists, are consulted in the matter.

I am perfectly aware, many will say that I know nothing about Taxation and Politics, and I should leave them alone. They are privileged to disagree with me, but let them not forget I have as good a right to my opinion as they have to theirs;
and a disputed point is common ground. If the wind would let the waves alone, we would have no storms. If the gentlemen would let the ladies alone there would be no unhappy marriages, so I conclude that I have as much right as others, to say publicly what I think about Taxation and politics. And I trust at least to do away with the abominable method of valuation existing in this County and in this Township. Concerning taxes, we are wearying of them, indeed. We are taxed for what we eat, taxed for what we wear taxed while we live and taxed

when we die—to run the Government, it is said. What we require is a frugal government permitting men to do no harm to their neighbour—a government that will leave us, as a people, in every other way free.
Our cause then, must be intrusted to, and conducted by its own friends—those whose hands are free, whose hearts are in the work, and who do care for the result.

In my early days in Ontario
I remember with pleasure the debates we had on such matters;
how the country-folk flocked to hear at the cross-road schoolhouses the pros and cons of such questions. Young and old could express their opinions, and none would deny them. But now such gatherings have ceased to be. Why, I cannot say. But my memory carries me back to certain sentiments expressed (I believe) on the Chicago Trades Union platform—which might correctly apply to our present times, viz.

We should do neither, more nor less than we gave the people reason to believe we would,
when they gave us their votes.
And while providing revenue for support of the General Government, by duties upon imports, sound policy requires such an adjustment of these imposts as will encourage the development of industrial interest of the whole country. We command that policy of national exchange which will secure to the working man liberal wages; to agriculture remunerative prices; to mechanics and manufacturers adequate reward for their skill;
labor and enterprise; and to the nation commercial prosperity and independence.

I may have omitted a clause or two from the above sentiments. But it would be beyond reason to ask more than that ideal for ourselves today.

C. F. KAINS.

Making History in Argenteuil

Extracted from files of
The Watchman.

50 Years Ago

Friday, June 16, 1882.

Despite the repeated protests of this paper, Lachute sidewalks are as bad as ever they were,— holes here, loose planks there, and no sidewalks at all in other places.

James Brodie, a young man of Chaboro, met his death on May 30th., in a drowning accident, while crossing Pipestone Creek on his way to Qu'Appelle, in the N.W.T.

One engineer and two assistants went back with Mr. Newton to Lake Louise, to locate the flume to be built between that point and this village.

On numerous occasions, the Watchman has advocated the establishment of a library and a reading room in Lachute. At the present time there is no place where the young men can meet to spend a quiet and pleasant evening, except in the barroom.

Miscreants broke in the tailoring establishment of Mr. John Webster, St. Andrews East, and stole customers' clothing to the value of sixty or seventy dollars.

The Election for Argenteuil is over and Hon. J. J. C. Abbott was returned without opposition.

At Dalesville School-house,
the competitive examination for School Municipality No. 2 Chatham, was held with the following pupils writing—Jessie Mc-Gibbon, Peter McArthur, Jessie Fulton, George Campbell, Peter
Campbell, Harriet Bain, Jas.
McGregor, Inspector.

25 Years Ago

Friday, June 21, 1907.

Messrs. Albert Giles, Ivan Fraser, Lorne McCoy and Andrew Forbes, of Montreal, spent Sunday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. M. Campbell of Dalesville, left on Tuesday morning for a trip to the Coast and other points.

Mr. Robt. McFaul of Avon-more, arrived in town this week and will continue the business formerly carried on by his father.

Mrs. Silas Carpenter Sr., was thrown from her horse and seriously injured on Monday last;
the accident occurred near Mc-Faul's saw-mill on the Brownsburg Road.

Lachute youngsters have organised the "Star" Junior Football Club with Master A. Drennan as President, Douglas Mc-Gibbon, Sec.-Treas., and working committee, comprising Masters Jack Menzies, Reid Giles, Arthur Joss, Verne Riddell, and Robbie Giles. Master Charlie Palliser has been chosen as captain.

A C.P.R. engineer and a fireman were badly injured last night when a fast through freight collided with a number of cars at the Cleland Crossing during shunting operations at Wilson's Mill.

Louisa. Our young ladies will no doubt get some nice drives now, as some of the young men have purchased rubber tire buggies.

Madame Lacroix's delicious CHOCOLATE LAYER CAKE

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup milk
2½ cups pastry flour (or 2 cups and 3 tablespoons of bread flour)
3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream butter; add sugar, a little at a time, beating until light; add beaten yolks and flavoring; add flour, sifted with salt and baking powder, alternately with milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in 3 greased layer cake pans in moderate oven at 375° F. about 20 minutes. Recipe for Chocolate Icing and Filling is in the Magic Cook Book.

Why Magic Baking Powder is used exclusively at this Montreal School of Domestic Science

"We teach our students only the surest methods," says Madame R. Lacroix, Assistant Director of the Provincial School of Domestic Science, Montreal. "That's why I always use and recommend Magic Baking Powder. Its high leavening quality is always uniform. You get the same satisfactory results every time you use it."

And Magic Baking Powder is the unquestioned choice in the majority of cooking schools throughout the Dominion. Cookery teachers—and housewives, too—prefer Magic because of its consistently better results.

Free Cook Book—When you bake at home, the new Magic Cook Book will give you dozens of recipes for delicious baked foods. Write to Standard Brands Ltd., Fraser Ave. and Liberty St., Toronto, Ontario.

From and including Sunday May 1st., the local C.P.R. schedule will run on STANDARD time as follows:

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, 'Midnight Sun,' while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of banditry in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits get away with gold dust and choice jewelry.

CHAPTER II—Corporal Bill Hardock brings the news of the crime to present Alan Baker at the Mounted police post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, Alan starts out after the bandits in his big police launch with the corporal and four constables.

She knew that other folk were surprised at her loyalty, and thought her foolish, and were shrugging shoulders at the hopelessness of a mere girl trying to lift Dave MacMillan above the whisky and Indian-woman life he had sunk into. But Joyce did not consider it foolish, and she could see no great loyalty about it. Whatever his demoralization now, her father had been the best of fathers to her. Looking at him not as a father but as a man, she could realize, in her own womanhood, that he had been the best of husbands to her mother. She felt it was her mother's death, the inconceivable tragedy of God withdrawing his hand, which really had broken sturdy Dave MacMillan.

And Joyce was beginning to realize, as the slow months passed, that her patient battle was anything but futile. Slowly, so slowly that only she herself could see it, she was winning her struggle. She was lifting her father out of his bewildered demoralization. If only she were given an other season or two, she could salvage his life.

Down in Ontario, debating what path to take, Joyce had thought of asking her dad to come and live with her. From a money standpoint, considering her good salary, that was the sensible thing to do. But she had chosen to return here. At that time she had not fully realized the secret and irresistible reason of her return. If anyone had told her that reason, she would have denied it hotly. But now, face to face with a personal tragedy which forced her to disillusioned thinking she looked into her heart and saw there the real motive. It was Alan Baker who had drawn her. By degrees unknown, unperceived by her, childhood friendship had deepened into love.

She had come back to be near Alan Baker. She had come back in the passionate hope that he and she would marry.

There had been an unspoken understanding between herself and Alan that when the road ahead was a little clearer for both of them, they would be married. And then Elizabeth had come.

Alan's engagement to Elizabeth had been a dazing, unexpected blow. When Bill, coming past on patrol, awkwardly blurted out the news of it, she had not believed. It took days of racked wanderings in the woods, weeks of helpless anguish, before the spirited strength and courage that were so great a part of Joyce, fought up out, and she steadied herself and began to believe.

But even now she did not fully accept. That engagement seemed strange to her. Though she knew nothing of Alan's secret motives, she did feel there was something behind it which Alan had told no one. It seemed to her, from what she had observed, that Alan had no passionate affection for Elizabeth.

Month after month Joyce had waited for word of his marriage. The word had not come. She wondered. . . . What was causing this long delay? She could only guess at possibilities, but during the lengthening months the belief had been born in her that something had arisen as a barrier to the marriage and that the engagement might be broken off.

When she thought of all these things and remembered how intimate and comradely she and Alan had been to one another, Joyce could not kill her lingering hope. As she stood there on the plank now, awaiting the patrol, with her heart thumping at the prospect of seeing Alan and talking to him once more, she knew that tonight she would come a little closer to discovering whether her wild guesses were truth or only wishful hoping.

Down the river a great yellow eye blinked through the trees. Swinging around a bend, it played up across the water. In a few moments more it picked her out, there on the landing; and Joyce stood bathed in the blinding shaft of the launch's searchlight. The craft came on and on until by shielding her eyes she distinguished its outline and caught the glitter of rifle steel.

The engine ceased. Skillfully, gently, the launch nosed in toward the landing. A figure stepped past the searchlight and stood holding the painter on the half-deck of the bow; and Joyce knew then, her eyes seeing only him, that Alan Baker led this patrol.

Joyce tried to welcome him calmly, but in that moment she was thankful for the deep twilight, and she stepped back a little, where the shadows of a low-sweeping balsam veiled her face. About the only rag of pride left to her was the fact that Alan Baker did not know or remotely guess her heart toward him.

With his first question, after their warm handclasp, he asked her:

"Has anybody passed here lately, Joyce?"

"Not that I've seen. Nobody in the last four days."

"But surely they did! Were you here all day?"

Joyce noticed then a tautness in his voice, and she saw he had brought five men with him on this patrol. It was no routine work, no ordinary pursuit, this time.

She answered: "I was out hunting this morning, and I slept a couple hours this afternoon. They might have passed then. But they couldn't have gone by while I was here and awake."

"What time were you asleep this afternoon, Joyce?"

"I can't exactly. . . . our clock isn't. . . . Probably from about four till six."

Alan half-turned to Hardock. "Bill, you heard what Joyce said? They couldn't have reached here this morning, so they must have passed here after four. We're nearer up with them than I figured. We'd better stay here till the deep dark breaks. At night this way we can't sight those men on ahead. Dodge hear the launch coming and dodge aside into some creek."

He turned again to her. "If it won't be imposing, Joyce, will you give us a bite to eat and some coffee?"

Imposing—an hour of his company, setting a meal for him, learning the truth of his relations with Elizabeth! But she merely nodded and invited the patrol up to the trading store.

Ahead of the men the two of them went up the path together, Alan shielding her from the brush overgrowing the trail; and as they went he told her briefly of the robbery, the murder, the escape up the Alooska.

The news fairly stunned Joyce, as it had him when Bill reported. And with her there was an added reason, a reason that struck her with sudden fear. Before Alan finished, she was grasping his arm in trembling fright.

"My dad! He's on northeast, up river—up there somewhere! He's bringing down some furs. Alan! what if he runs into these men?"

"Good Lord!" Alan breathed to himself. "If they meet Dave. . . . They're not the kind to let anybody go past alive and report their whereabouts!"

For Joyce's sake he tried to lie convincingly. "They may not meet him at all, Joyce. And if they do, why, they'd hardly shoot a man down wantonly. If for no other reason, it doesn't pay. They've got charges enough against them as it is. And they won't rob him; their canoes are riding heavy now."

He saw that his lie succeeded with Joyce, for she began questioning him about the details of the robbery, wondering who these six strangers could be, and giving him some valuable information about the water stages on up the Alooska.

They went on back to the kitchen, and Joyce set about getting a meal for six tired hungry men. As he set extra plates and cups on the table, Alan asked himself:

"Isn't she wondering why I haven't been here for so long? I'd think she would wonder at least why I stopped helping her about Dave. But she hasn't mentioned it; she must not have missed my help much. It was pretty shabby of me to stop like that, even if. . . ." He recalled how Elizabeth, jealous of the comradeship between him and Joyce, had asked him to let Bill attend to any patrol work up the Big Alooska. Elizabeth's references to "that MacMillan girl" had antagonized him at times. They seemed positively cruel, considering the hard lines Joyce was in.

A question from the girl broke into his thoughts.

"When are you and Elizabeth going to be married, Alan?"

Her question, or rather the way she asked it, hurt Alan, for some reason he could not exactly word. Her voice was so very casual, as though she had not even a friend's interest in his marriage. Could it be possible that he and Joyce, once so intimate and so near to each other that they had spoken of children and a life together, were now casually discussing his marriage to another girl?

He said, "We haven't—we're—we don't exactly know yet."

There was a pause. A swift color had flown into Joyce's cheeks: a little feverishly she was repeating to herself those surprising words: "He doesn't know yet, he doesn't know yet! Does that mean—mean he's doubtful if it will ever be?"

"But it'll be this summer, I suppose?" she questioned, poking at the stove and still not looking at Alan.

"I don't know. Yes, I guess so, Joyce." Then he explained reluctantly. "Elizabeth wants me to get out of the Mounted."

Joyce gasped. Out of the Mounted—she could not imagine such a thing. The work was a part of Alan. What would he do without it? And what would Fort Endurance do without him? She said: "But Alan! What would you turn to? The Mounted has been your work—"

"Well, I've got the offer of a job down in Victoria. It's pretty good, as far as money goes. And Elizabeth would like it there. I haven't exactly decided. It's a big step to take."

Those few reluctant sentences were a revelation to Joyce, like a white light beating upon something which had been dark to her. Alan didn't want to go! Elizabeth was trying to force him. She wanted to live in a city; she wanted the things which that salary would bring her; she was using Alan to get what she wanted. But she and Alan were not of one mind! If he really loved her, deeply and passionately, would he be so reluctant, would he allow anything on earth to come between them?

Joyce dared not ask him anything further then; he might add a word that would destroy this new-born hope. But a hundred thoughts were running wild through her. "Suppose he doesn't yield to Elizabeth! Suppose he won't go! Then she won't marry him! She'll throw him over for Haskell; that's what she'll surely do. Bill says she and Haskell are together half the time Alan's away from Endurance. Isn't that the reason—she's not sure of Alan yielding; and if she can't have her way with him she'd like to be an inspector's wife!"

With swift unerring insight Joyce saw the all-crucial question: Would Alan get out of the Mounted? She was still uncertain what he truly felt for Elizabeth, but from his own lips she had learned one thing which an hour ago she had scarcely dared hope could be true. The marriage was not sure; it might never be!

In her abjectness she whispered to herself: "I don't care if he does like her. I don't, I don't care! If she throws him over, then we'll be friends again, then he'll come here to me again; and then—after that. . . ."

CHAPTER IV

Rifles in the Prow

During the meal, as Joyce sat at the head of the table pouring coffee and watching a pan of biscuit in the stove, Alan kept studying her, wondering how any girl could stand the isolation and poverty and lonely battle she was enduring. Two whole years here, two years out of her young womanhood, the choice time of her life, sacrificed at this isolated trading post, giving up everything that a girl holds dear! She was too fine to be leading a life like this. She ought to get out of it! There was a limit to her bravery and spirited strength.

As the men were pushing back their chairs and reaching for pipes, he felt some one prodding him with a boot under the table. Looking up, he saw Larry elevate an eyebrow at him.

"Wants to talk with me alone," Alan surmised; and he gave Larry a slight nod. To the other men he said rather sharply: "You men, put away your pipes and police up these dishes. Don't leave a stack like this for Joyce. Bill, you see to that."

Casually going outside a few moments later, he glanced around and saw Larry waiting for him a dozen yards away, over near the storage shed. Sauntering across, he asked quietly:

"What's up now, Larry?" Larry flipped his cigarette aside. "Come in here with me, Alan. I want to show you something."

Producing a pocket flash, he played its yellow shaft upon a pack of furs on a low shelf.

"Alan, you see that wolf skin they're wrapped in? That's what caught my eye. It's a Yukon animal, probably from the Kayukuk headwaters in the Endicott mountains. It made me curious, so I pried into the pack and saw these dark otter. They came from the Yukon, too. I thought to myself, 'There's no wolf or otter like them in Dave MacMillan's trading territory.' But say, Alan, look—(hold the flash a minute)—look here." Larry pulled out several of the rich, dark-gleaming otter pelts and rolled back the fur at the broad end. "Take a good look at them blue stamp marks."

Alan bent closed and he suddenly gasped.

"Good Lord! They're L. & H. furs! What're they doing here, Larry—in Dave MacMillan's possession?" "Stolen! What else? What's more to us, Alan, I checked on them serial numbers, and this bunch is one of the packs stolen from the 'Midnight Sun'!" He added slowly: "Maybe we don't know yet who them six strangers are, but now we sure'n h— I know who's directing 'em!"

In low tones, there in the darkness, they talked the situation over.

Larry finally asked: "You're going to arrest him, Alan? An accomplice that way, even if he didn't have a hand in the actual killing, they'll give him the limit. It'll be h— I on Joyce."

ALL within twenty years. Could this be a more gruelling test?

Yet life insurance stands invincible. During that whole period it paid every obligation promptly and fully—as it has ever since the Dominion was formed.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada itself paid to policyholders and beneficiaries in cash during these periods—

The War (1914-1918)
The Flu (1919)
The Depression (1930-1931)

—over $226,000,000. It has paid to its policyholders and beneficiaries since formation nearly $600,000,000.

In prosperity, life insurance is valuable; in adversity it is indispensable. The protection of your home, the security of your business, the comfort of your old age, depend first on adequate life insurance.

Lesson for June 19

JACOB THE AGED FATHER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 46:1-7, 28-30; 47:1-7.

GOLDEN TEXT—Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Joseph Honors His Father.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph's Father Blesses the King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May We Honor Our Parents?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Obligations to Our Parents.

I. Jacob Journeys to Egypt (46:1-7, 28-30).

1. Joseph sends for his father (46:1-24). At Pharaoh's request Joseph sent an urgent invitation to Jacob to come to Egypt, promising to give him the "good of the land."

2. Jacob consents to go (46:25-28). The news that Joseph was alive and "lord of all Egypt," backed up with the sight of the "wagons which Joseph had sent to carry him," induced Jacob to consent to go.

3. Jacob's vision at Beer-sheba (46:1-7).

a. He offered sacrifices unto God (v. 1). As he was now about to leave Canaan, Jacob sought God's guidance and blessing. His soul, no doubt, was moved with great emotion.

b. God's response to Jacob (vv. 2-4). He bade him go to Egypt without fear, assuring him of the divine presence and blessing and his ultimate return to Canaan.

c. Arrival in Egypt (vv. 5-7). Jacob was accompanied by his sons, their wives, their children and cattle. With the meeting of Joseph the family circle was now complete, seventy souls in all (v. 27).

II. Jacob Meets Joseph (46:28-34).

Though the journey was now over, they were faced with perplexing problems. God had promised to be with Jacob, and Pharaoh had promised to Joseph that they should "eat of the fat of the land," but the details were not known.

1. Judah sent before (v. 28). He was sent perhaps to direct them to the Land of Goshen.

2. Met by Joseph (vv. 29, 30). Joseph, being the lord of Egypt, properly traveled in his royal chariot. Though he was Jacob's son, it was proper that he should extend a royal welcome.

III. Joseph Presents His Father and Brethren unto Pharaoh (47:1-6).

1. Pharaoh's invitation (47:1-6). Jacob and his sons were in Egypt by the king's invitation. Joseph, though occupying an exalted position, was not ashamed of his father.

2. Joseph's tact (47:1, 2 et. 46:30-34).

a. In introducing his father and brethren in a personal way, thus capitalizing his own influence in favor of his kin.

b. In having his father and brethren come to Goshen (47:10). Since possession is "nine points of the law" they were already in Goshen before asking Pharaoh for permission to occupy it (v. 4).

c. In coaching his brethren (46:34). He taught them beforehand what to say because he knew how awkward they would be before the great king.

d. In choosing five, not all (v. 2). In all probability he chose the five who would make the best appearance.

3. Their request to Pharaoh (vv. 3, 4). Joseph anticipated Pharaoh's questions and put the proper words into their mouths to be used in making their desires known.

4. Pharaoh's response (vv. 5, 6).

a. His gracious offer. They were to enjoy the best of the land.

b. Positions of trust offered to capable men among them. He knew how capable Joseph was and surmised that some of his brethren might be likewise gifted.

IV. Jacob Blessing Pharaoh (47:7-10).

Here is an appraisal of true dignity. Though Pharaoh was the great king and Jacob now a suppliant at his feet, receiving natural blessings, yet morally Jacob was above Pharaoh and therefore conferred blessings upon him.

V. Joseph Nourishes His Father and Brethren (47:11, 12).

1. He placed them in the best of the land according as Pharaoh had commanded (v. 11). They were thus ready to go forward in business as soon as the famine was ended.

2. He nourished them (v. 12). Since there was no bread in all the land to be obtained except as dispensed by Joseph, he distributed to them according to their needs. Our Joseph, Jesus Christ, supplies all our needs according to his riches in glory (Phil. 4:19).

To Kindle Love

Love may not, cannot, be attained in its fullness at once; but the person of Christ, if indeed we see him as he is presented to us in the Gospels, will kindle that direct affection out of which it comes.—B. F. Westcott.

CUSHING

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Evans, of Cornwall, Ont., were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Evans.

Miss Mary Smith, of Montreal, is spending a few weeks as the guest of her mother, Mrs. Walter Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Graham were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Jolley, of Calumet.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Brosseau spent Sunday with the latter's mother, Mrs. Lauzon, of Rigaud.

The Misses Ivy and Elsie Graham accompanied the Misses M. and V. Bryerton and Messrs. A. and G. Bryerton, of Verdun, to St. Chrysostome, on Sunday, where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert McComb.

Mr. and Mrs. McLaren, Jr., of Vanleek Hill, also Mrs. Maclean Sr. and three grandsons motored to Cushing on Sunday and attended service at St. Mungo's Church.

Dr. and Mrs. Harold McGerrigle, of Hanover, New Hampshire, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Innes, Dr. McGerrigle left on Tuesday morning for Chicoutimi; Mrs. McGerrigle will remain with her parents for a time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Barron spent Wednesday last in Hawkesbury.

Miss Emma Kerr who has been spending the winter months with Mrs. R. Morrison, of Lachute Road, has returned to her home in Cushing.

Mrs. Rev. Maclean and Mrs. A. Graham spent Thursday and Friday of last week in Montreal attending the W.C.T.U. Convention in Emmanuel Church, enjoying particularly among the speakers Mrs. Newcombe, of Nova Scotia and Mrs. Dr. Armour, of the U. S. Mrs. Armour denied that prohibition in the United States was a failure and outlined a great many improvements it had effected, since coming into being. She claimed that the fight was not over because of that victory; that the women of United States were ready to fight to the finish for its maintenance and observance.

Mrs. Armour strongly upheld Prayer as our mightiest power in this fight, and not only prayer but faith in our own prayer. Thirty years of experience in public speaking and in this particular work had evidently taught her many lessons, which she willingly passed on to her interested listeners.

CUSHING WEST

Mrs. Usher spent the week-end in Ottawa and Metcalfe, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Young and Miss Edna Young spent the week-end at the Bungalow.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Villeneuve, of Carillon, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Miss Wlehehan.

Dr. Cushing and family spent the week-end at their residence.

Mrs. Arthur Dawson and daughter, Miss Muriel, of Montreal, visited Mr. E. Dawson, of Stonefield Heights, on Sunday.

Mrs. S. O. Hartley, Messrs. Ernest and Laurence and Miss Olive Hartley, were up from the city for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. King, of Montreal, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred O'Brien at Greece's Point, over the week-end.

The Messrs. MacDowall of Montreal, spent the latter part of the week at their cottage.

Hostess—"Won't you have another piece of pudding Tommy?"

Tommy—"No, thanks."

Hostess—"You seem to be suffering from loss of appetite."

Tommy—"It isn't loss of appetite. What I'm suffering from is politeness."

LAKEFIELD.

Mrs. Dorothy Carmichael with her family and maid are now living in their summer cottage at Rosemount.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Andrews were at their summer home over the week-end; as also were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stoll, Mr. and Mrs. Kercher and many others.

Archdeacon Overing's kindness in taking the services in Holy Trinity Church, lately, has enabled the resident minister to take extra services in other parts of the parish.

Mrs. George Peet entertained the ladies of the W.A. last Wednesday. There was an unusually large attendance including welcome summer residents. A great deal of important work was done. First,—The Peck lending library was placed upon a permanent basis. It's home will be at the residence of Mr. Addley Sherritt, with Miss L. Sherritt as Librarian. Miss Sherritt is well qualified for the position and it is felt that the library will be a real help to the community. The Secretary, Mrs. Geo. Evans, was requested to write to Mrs. Peck expressing the grateful appreciation of the W. A. for her interest and practical help in this important matter.

The second item of business was the decision to hold a picnic on July 1st. Messrs. George Peet, Wilbert Sherritt, Albert Tomalty and Stanley Andrews were appointed as a Sports Committee; and, it is felt that with these able gentlemen's management, and the co-operation of the people, if weather is suitable, the affair will be a success. There will be a table of home cooked food as well as ice cream and soft drinks for sale.

The third item arranged for was a "Bee" for the purpose of improving the condition of the Graveyard of Trinity Church. It is most earnestly hoped that all the interested friends will help on this much needed work. The date is fixed for June 30th. The ladies will serve luncheon and supper in the Gibb Parish Hall; and it is hoped that any who have teams will be there to haul earth for grading while the brushing and cleaning up is done by others.

Donations in cash will be welcome to further on the improvements. The ladies of the W. I. have generously undertaken the painting of the fence, so it is hoped that a real improvement will be seen in our burial ground.

In the unavoidable absence of the President, Mrs. W. E. Richards, The vice-president, Miss M. Sherritt provided with her usual ability.

Dainty refreshments were served, and a pleasant profitable meeting was brought to a close by the benediction.

ARUNDEL.

BROWNSBURG

Mrs. Roy Jackson and Mr. Thos. Carpenter were in Montreal on Tuesday visiting Mr. Jackson who is a patient in the Verdun General Hospital.

The many friends of Mr. O. Gagne will be pleased to learn that he is progressing favorably after undergoing a serious operation.

Mrs. H. Gardiner is visiting friends in Montreal this week.

Miss Hazel McVicar of Montreal was a visitor at her aunt's, Mrs. McCluskey, who celebrated her 84th. birthday on Saturday last.

Miss Alma Fletcher R.N., of Montreal, is the guest of her parents this week.

Mrs. Archie Robinson is a visitor to Montreal this week.

Mr. Roy Jackson had the misfortune on Saturday evening to have his hands and arms severely burned while making a preparation of floor wax. He was taken to Montreal for hospital treatment.

Mr. Alvin Stewart and his mother who are taking a motor trip to Boston report a good time and expects to return home on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard McAdam and little son are visiting his old home and renewing acquaintances here.

Miss Eileen McGibbon is visiting friends in Concord, N. H.

A meeting of the Girl Guides was held in the school hall on Tuesday evening.

Brownsburg enjoyed a rare treat on Saturday evening, when the Scouts' Band of Montreal, visited the local group and gave a concert at the Social Club.

A very pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Winnie White, on the celebration of her birthday, at the home of Mrs. White, on the evening of the 13th. A large number of friends gathered for the occasion, and were completely successful in "springing a surprise." Singing, games and dancing were enjoyed.

After a late supper Winnie, with merry and hilarious ceremony cut the birthday cake, and after more dancing the party broke up in the early hours, all agreeing that an extremely pleasurable time had been spent.

WEIR

Among the Girl Guides and Boy Scouts from Weir who attended the Church Parade at Brownsburg on Sunday last were the Misses Margaret Craig and Inez Williams, and Messrs. John, George and Billie Owen, and Carrol and Clyde Gallupe.

Answers to "Do You Know?"

1. Actual steam is not visible. The visible white vapour which is frequently referred to as steam is in reality a collection of fine moisture particles which are formed by the condensation of true steam.

2. Helium has never been frozen.

3. Radium loses half its value approximately in 1800 years, no matter how it is packed.

4. Radium is ordinarily obtained from its ores in the form of hydrous sulphate, chlorine or bromide, and it is in the form of these salts that it usually sold and used. These are all white or nearly white substances whose appearance is quite similar to common salt or baking powders.

5. The production costs of helium is approximately 2.08 cents per cubic foot. The transportation costs to the air station is higher and raises the cost to seven or even ten cents per cu. ft.

6. Helium will lift 0.066 lbs. per cu-ft. under ordinary conditions Hydrogen will lift 0.071 pounds per cu-ft.

If air and gas are at the same pressure reduction in pressure on the gas decreases the lift. Helium gas is non-inflammable, non-poisonous and the next lightest gas to hydrogen.

Highway Accident Sequel to Cymbeline Disaster

Ottawa Fireman Killed on Way to Funeral

Tragedy was piled upon tragedy, when four Ottawa firemen, driving by automobile to Montreal on Tuesday to attend the funeral of Chief Gauthier and the other three firefighters who lost their lives in the Cymbeline disaster, ran off the highway near St. Eustache and crashed into a tree. Fireman Edouard Lacroix, 35, of Ottawa, was instantly killed, and the other three suffered injuries.

The accident occurred shortly after 1 o'clock on the North Shore highway near Petit Brule road, St. Augustin.

Fireman Lacroix, lone occupant of the rumble seat of the coupe-type car, was killed when the driver, MacRostie, lost control, and the car swerved, uprooted a small tree, and crashed into a larger tree. The automobile flipped up from the rear and Lacroix was catapulted head first against the tree trunk.

The Late Miss Kate McVicar

The community of the Scotch Road lost one of its oldest and perhaps most diligent inhabitants, in the person of Miss Kate McVicar, who died on the 9th. day of June 1932.

She was a keen observer and very efficient worker in anything to further the welfare of her community. Her best work was done in the church of her own faith and order, where she laboured with great acceptance in the women's work of the Church, as organist and choir leader, in sabbath school and in every other agency of Church life and work.

She was held in high esteem by her neighbors, a woman of rare piety, possessing that faculty of meeting and fitting into every occasion that arose in the community.

Her funeral was held Saturday, June 11th., 1932, and was very largely attended. Service was conducted at the house by Rev. J. T. Conn assisted by the Anglican Minister of Grenville. The body was interred in the old Scotch Road Cemetery, under the shadow of the Church to which she was devoted and had long served. She will be greatly missed by the entire neighborhood. Her brother Mr. H. McVicar received many tokens of sympathy from his circle of friends and neighbors.

Depression Lifted in Laurentian Travel

Railways Report Jump in Business

The railways are staging a come-back in regard to traffic in the Laurentians, and are doing more business than for several years past. One reason is the growing popularity of the Laurentians, people apparently having decided, in regard to vacations, to "See Canada First". The second reason is that many people who formerly journeyed to the mountains in automobiles are this year using the railways. The high cost of operating motor cars, and particularly the 6-cent tax on gasoline, is said to be responsible for this.

Trains to and from Ste. Agathe and other points have on a number of occasions had from eight to ten passenger coaches, all well filled, specially during the week-end, and further train service, it is stated, is to be inaugurated after the schools close in Montreal this month.

The outlook for the present season, according to the hotel men, is the best they have had, and in practically every district there is a keen demand for summer cottages for rent.

Ayers Limited Again Exhibiting

Blanket loom in Operation at Eaton's Canadian Industrial Show

T. Eaton Ltd are featuring an instructive and highly interesting Exhibition of Canadian Industries in Montreal, continuing from 16th. to 30th. of June. These exhibits are giving the public an insight into production of the particular goods handled by the Eaton Company.

Ayers Limited, Lachute's leading industrial concern, has installed one of its automatically-operating blanket looms, which demonstrates the weaving of those luxurious three-color Overthrows which are so well known to this community. Besides the loom in operation, Ayers' stand includes an array of finished products similar to the attractive outlay last week at Lachute Fair.

The T. Eaton Company is reputed as a progressive, all Canadian retail store; and in demonstration of this kind one recognizes the mutual benefits to manufacturer, to retailer, and to the buying public.

While commending our local industry for its progressive and persistent policy of seeking publicity, Lachute itself duly appreciates the advertising which reflects upon the community through such exhibits.

Mrs. Stephen Burwash Dies in 85th. Year

The death took place on June 17th. last, at the residence of her son, James Burwash, of Phebe, Ann Hooker—widow of the late Stephen M. Burwash, in her 85th. year. She was the daughter of the late Geo. B. Hooker, of Centreville, and had lived her entire life in this vicinity. She is survived by five daughters, Miss Winnifred Burwash, Mrs. Jno. Knox, of Hawkesbury, Ont.; Mrs. W. Geo. Rodger, of River Rouge; Mrs. Chas. Bancroft, of Los Angeles, Cal.; and Mrs. W. J. Blair, Silver Heights. Her eldest daughter Mrs. David Black predeceased her some years ago. There are also three sons, Ernest, of San Francisco, William, of Tacoma, Wash.; and James, of St. Andrews East.

Rev. R. S. Booy will be Inducted as Rector

Ceremony at St. Andrews East, July 10

The induction of the Rev. R. S. Booy as Rector of St. Andrews East by the Lord Bishop of Montreal will take place on July 10. Ordained into the priesthood by Bishop Farthing in the fall of 1910, Mr. Booy's first charge was at Campbell's Bay, where he cleared the parish of debt, and where for many years Mrs. Booy did splendid work in nursing the sick, regardless of creed. Later Mr. Booy removed to Foster, and subsequently was appointed rector at Clarenceville, which he held for eight years, prior to moving to Temiskaming.

Mr. Booy is a Greek scholar of merit and obtained his degree as a Fellow of the Society of Science, Literature and Arts. He is past worthy Grand Master of the Clarenceville Chapter of the Masonic Order. His eldest daughter, Miss Gladys Booy, was a graduate of Lachine General Hospital and after receiving her theological training in Toronto, went to the North-West Territories as a medical missionary. She is now residing with her parents at St. Andrews East, while another daughter, Mrs. Ivy B. Draper, resides at Peterborough.

Town Council Meeting

A regular meeting of Lachute Town Council was held in the Council Room on Tuesday evening, June 21st., with the following aldermen in attendance: Mr. Peter Dobbie, Mayor; and Messrs. J. P. MacKimmie, C. R. Miller, J. B. Raymond, Omer Laurin, and J. A. Rice.

It was moved by Ald. J. A. Rice, seconded by Ald. J. P. MacKimmie that a reply be sent to a letter received from M. L. Lacombe, lawyer, (in which the sum of $100.00 indemnity is asked for an accident which occurred to Miss A. Leger) stating the Town does not feel responsible since the sidewalk on which the accident occurred last winter was in good order at the time.

Moved by Alderman J. B. Raymond, seconded by Alderman C. R. Miller, that the Victoria Hall Committee be authorized to accept work done to the building and to make a settlement with Mr. S. Laurin.

It was moved by Ald. C. R. Miller, Ald. Laurin seconding, that Mr. Eddie Laurin be granted a building permit for a two-storey structure to be erected in the rear of his lot on Meikle St., same to be under supervision of the Roads Committee, and floor to be made of concrete.

Ald. C. R. Miller next moved—seconded by Ald. J. P. MacKimmie, that the Presbyterian Church be granted free use of the Auditorium on Friday evening next.

It was moved by Ald. J. B. Raymond, seconded by Ald. C. R. Miller, that Mr. R. Todd be instructed to inspect water intake three times a week, and that Mr. W. H. Hume be notified that his services will not be further required in this connection.

Quebec Women's Institutes Celebrate Twenty-First Birthday.

Fourteen County Delegates Attend Provincial Conference.

Quebec Women's Institutes may be said to have attained their majority, for this year the Province celebrates twenty-one years since the organization of its first Women's Institutes, at Dunham.

No conventions were held for two years, so that the gathering held last week at Macdonald College was the nineteenth annual Convention of the Quebec Women's Institutes.

The beauties of Macdonald College and its campus never disappoint any one who has seen them before for they seem to increase year by year. This year the velvety lawns and green and stately trees, with the wealth of bud and blossom, symbolized not only beauty but contentment and peace.

And not merely the physical senses were delighted with the environment, but the mind found a rich store of wealth to enrich and inspire, for the program of the Convention was indeed replete with information in its most palatable and attractive form.

With such speakers as Prof. F. E. Lloyd, F.R.S.C., and President of the Royal Society of Canada, to welcome with an address, which, as it were, charged the whole convention with intellectual electricity, with Rev. T. W. Jones, of Montreal, to uplift to loftier ideals of patriotism with his story of "Canada Among the Nations," and with Mr. W. J. Buck, of Montreal, to entrance his audience with his description of the most romantic industry in the world, "Silk, its origin and Culture," it will be seen that the whole gamut of human interest was thoroughly canvassed.

"Junior Club Work" on which subject Mr. A. E. MacLaurin of Ottawa, gave an address, became a live issue in his hands. As Secretary of the newly organized Council of Boys and Girls Clubs, Mr. MacLaurin's interest and enthusiasm communicated itself to his hearers, and the discussion was one which may be expected to bear fruit in the near future.

A practical and telling address on "Interesting the Public" by Mr. S. Morgan-Powell, assistant Editor-in-chief of the Montreal Daily Star, focussed a brilliant search light on the subject of proper publicity methods. A mysterious insight into child mentality was exhibited in Dr. G. N. Paterson-Smyth's thought-provoking exposition of "Mental Hygiene in the Schools" and Lt. Col. Bovey's topic "Vocational Education," which carried out the subject of efficiency into new channels of thought.

The advisability of an understanding of the proper allotment of finances was clearly explained by Miss B. M. Philp, Head School of Household Science, Macdonald College, in her excellent address on The Household Purse.

Conceding the argument that little immigration is coming into Canada, Miss Helen Davidson, of Montreal, proved that there is still need of interest in "The New Canadian" who, unused to the country, is facing the life it offers with courage, and sometimes with despair.

Many familiar bird friends were depicted on the screen during Mrs. C. L. Henderson's lecture "Protection of Birds."

"Canada's Heritage" Rev. Canon A. P. Shatford's subject on the last evening of Convention filled his hearers with pride in their native or adopted country, and with even greater affection for the Homeland from which come the heritages of adventure, of ideals of freedom, of science, literature and art. If applause can make glad the heart of the speaker, then may Canon Shatford feel deepest pleasure, for clapping of hands did not cease for many minutes after the close of his address.

Music played an inspiring part in the Convention, the solos, vocal and instrumental, of Mrs. R. H. Murray, Macdonald College, Mrs. D. A. McIntosh, St. Anne de Bellevue, Mrs. W. M. Goodwin, St. Anne de Bellevue and Mrs. D. L. Stackhouse, St. Lambert as well as the organ recital given by Mr. R. B. Musgrove, Lecturer in Music at Macdonald College, providing restful times between the strenuous business of Convention.

The tea in Miss B. M. Philp's practice house with the members of the Quebec Women's Institute Board as guests, the luncheon arranged by the Household Science School and Macdonald Women's Union, were social events in the Convention calendar, each perfection in its own way.

The conducted tour about the grounds was in itself a privilege to a group essentially interested in growing things.

An amazing total of activities was collaborated in the reports, which were the real business of Convention, and which keep the women of the Institutes busy and with a healthy outlook upon life throughout the year.

From the various Argenteuil County branches, the following delegates attended, and greatly enjoyed the business and social sessions of the Convention.

Mrs. E. Kettle, Mrs. W. Jackson, Mrs. J. McKenzie, Mrs. R. L. Kennedy, Mrs. Kuhring, Mrs. J. S. Giles, Mrs. Ardill, Mrs. Smilie, Mrs. Archie, and Mrs. Jas. Murdock, Mrs. W. Wert, Mrs. Douglas Davis, Mrs. Ivall.

Hawkesbury Will Have New Highway

Making a general survey of the highways in the Province of Ontario, Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, and other Provincial officials, were in Hawkesbury on Wednesday last. Prior to their arrival the party crossed Perley bridge, driving as far as Lachute.

At a dinner which was tendered at the King Edward Hotel Hawkesbury, at which many prominent citizens and officials attended, Hon. Mr. Macaulay was introduced by Mayor Woods. Several introductory speeches were given concerning the visit of the provincial minister and the engineers to Hawkesbury.

Hon. Mr. Macaulay, stated it was the intention of the provincial Government at the request of Hawkesbury authorities to undertake at its own expense the construction of a highway from the Main Street, to Perley bridge.

"The Government will" stated the speaker, "without promising most probably undertake the work of constructing other roads to provide for the unemployed. It is our intention to construct a Lancaster-Hawkesbury highway," he concluded.

It was intimated further by the minister that it may become possible that the Highways Department would undertake the total cost of the repairs on the provincial highway in Hawkesbury.

Towns Revise Traffic By-Laws

Granby City Council have prepared a traffic by-law to suit the requirements and to create safety and freedom of movement in streets of that town. The principal features of the by-law pronounce certain narrow streets as one-way thoroughfares. There is also a revision in the parking regulations.

Rural towns on provincial highways are doing well to review and study their traffic difficulties. Lachute could do worse than follow this example. Even a strict enforcement of our existing traffic laws, would make a notable improvement.

Hawkesbury Corporation has also realized the timely need, having revised and re-enacted a comprehensive Traffic By-Law.

Daniel McMartin Killed at St. Eustache

Fatally Struck by Car. Victim was Well Known in Argenteuil

While picking up two heads of lettuce which dropped from his arms as he was crossing the street at six o'clock last evening, J. Daniel McMartin, 63 years of age, of Freniere, Que., was struck and instantly killed by an automobile driven by Alphonse Marchand of St. Philippe. At the inquest held last night by Dr. Ludger Labelle, coroner for the Terrebonne district, a verdict of accidental death was returned.

Albert Diotte, of Freniere, testified that he and MacMartin drove out to St. Eustache to buy some lettuce from a vegetable merchant. They stopped their horse-driven vehicle opposite Prud'homme's home and MacMartin crossed the road to make the purchase.

While returning towards the vehicle with an armful of lettuce, the witness stated, two heads dropped. MacMartin stopped to pick them up and, as he did so, he was struck by the automobile which was travelling in the direction of Montreal.

Rev. Dr. J. R. MacLeod 84 Last Monday

Occupied Sunday Morning Pulpit in United Church.

Rev. Dr. MacLeod, a well known and respected figure in this town, marked the occasion of his 84th. birthday by filling the United Church pulpit at the Sunday morning service, and preached an impressive sermon on the theme of "An Age-long Quest." Dr. MacLeod received the congratulations of a wide circle of friends and colleagues on Monday, his birthday, looking back on a term of fifty-four years in the ministry.

Rev. Mr. Rosborough voiced the general appreciation of his Church, that Dr. MacLeod had been spared so many years and was able to lend a willing assistance so frequently, to the United Church and to ecclesiastical observances in Lachute.

Dr. MacLeod came to Lachute ten years ago from Three Rivers to reside with his daughter, Mrs. Thos. Christie, and has won the regard and affection of all who know him.

Tragedy is Recalled

Insurance adjusters were in Hawkesbury last week interviewing the fathers, mothers and guardians of the five children who lost their lives when the motor truck on which they were riding was struck by a large tree near Chute au Blondeau on May 24, for the purpose of reaching settlement.

Mr. A. E. Wilson was adjuster on behalf of the Globe Indemnity Insurance Company, of Toronto. W. H. Hall of Vankleek Hill, is solicitor acting on behalf of the families, and John B. Woods, mayor, was acting on behalf of the Provincial Government, and the insurance company. No settlements have been reached.

Hon. Mr. Macaulay, Ontario minister of highways, in the course of a 400-mile road inspection trip which he and officials of his department made through the eastern counties, examined the elm tree which had been the cause of the recent disaster. The minister expressed the opinion that the rot in the branch which fell on the passing truck, would not have been apparent except upon a most painstaking examination of the tree.

Third Speedboat Event at Lucerne

Dates Set for Seignior Club Races—International Field

Entry forms for the third annual speedboat regatta to be held on the Ottawa river, July 1 and 2, by the Seignior Club have been sent out to leading sea-flea racers in Canada and the United States. This year's regatta promises to surpass the efforts of previous years owing to the possibility of a large number of American racers taking advantage of the holiday week-end to make the northern trip and swing south again on the American regatta circuit.

The committee handling the Seignior Club regatta this year is headed by Gerald Decary, of Montreal, who has had a notable career in speedboat circles during the past few years. Decary is working with Gorman Kennedy, sports director of the club in the handling of entries and arranging of events.

Classes will be held on each day for B. C. and free-for-all craft with special events for cruisers and runabouts. The regatta is expected to attract many local racers from the Iroquois Yacht Club as well as members of the National Yacht Club, of Toronto, who captured so many prizes last year against the American contenders from Buffalo, Rochester, Detroit and Albany.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

FRIENDS.

Dear Boys,—

Have you any friends? What a question to ask us is at once your indignant reply, even if you do not go as far as to say,—What business is it of yours anyway?

Well I am not going to apologize because after all this long time and by reason of all the letters I have written you I kind of feel I am in a somewhat privileged position where you are concerned. If you think otherwise, come and see me at the office. When you arrive we will forget the object of your visit and IN THE GRIP OF THE HAND I GIVE YOU will be found something at least of what is meant by FRIENDSHIP.

I knew a boy once, many years ago, who would at one time have laughed heartily if I had said to him HAVE YOU ANY FRIENDS? He belonged to a famous school and during the holidays was always having some of his school-fellows staying with him in his beautiful home, or going off to visit them in theirs. Also he was what is called 'popular' in school, captain of his football and cricket teams and the leader of his class in many an expedition. His father was a wealthy man and provided him with plenty of pocket money which he shared most generously with his companions. Then suddenly the crash came, for his father's business failed and he had to leave school in order to take up a poor position as a messenger boy in a drug store. None of his former school-fellows came near him, no letters reached his home from any of them and HE WAS DESERTED. When he most needed FRIENDS there were none to stand by and help him.

THINK AGAIN, HAVE YOU ANY FRIENDS?

Not the fair weather ones that only share with you the long and happy days of boyhood, but that when sorrow and distress come upon you, aye when even disgrace and sin may cast their shadow on your life, who then disappear and are known to you no more. Rather have you the FRIEND that comes closer to you than a brother, fights for your honour and happiness as if these were his own and considers no obligation too great to take upon himself if only he can relieve you of some of your anxiety. If you can say,—"Yes, I have such a friend" then even if you are poor, even if you are hungry, if your home is indeed but the veriest hovel and your clothes are rags, THEN I SAY INDEED YOU HAVE THAT WHICH ALL THE RICHES OF THE WORLD CANNOT PURCHASE, and which is a gift from God Himself.

So see to it that you guard most carefully such a treasure.

*"He that wrongs his friend,
Wrongs himself more; and ever bears about
A silent court of justice in his breast;
Himself the judge and jury, and himself
The prisoner at the bar, ever condemned
And that drags down his life."*

Ever your affectionate FRIEND,

THE CAPTAIN.

Mystery Island

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter. 5.

The next morning, or rather we should say a few hours later, Jack woke with a feeling, first that something really good had happened and then, as full recollection of his strange and unexpected visitor dawned upon him, that life in the future both for himself and Mary was going to be ever so much brighter. "Wake up Babs" he whispered, bending over his little sister, "Hurry and get breakfast ready and put out plates and cups for three."

The little girl opened her eyes sleepily and sat up.

"Why three, Bubbles, who is here?"

"Get up lazy bones and see" replied her brother, going over to the wash-stand to bathe his face. "You are going to get the biggest surprise of your life or else I am much mistaken." A few minutes later there was a loud knock on the door of their little bedroom and Pat Somerville walked in.

"Better introduce me my boy" he said with a whimsical smile on his face as he saw Mary run to her brother for protection, "she evidently does not like the look of me."

Jack laughed, "Well uncle, Babs was hardly expecting you so it is no wonder she is a little scared. "Come" he went on turning to his sister, "this is the surprise I told you of just now, we have an uncle, he is our dear mother's brother, and though you don't know it, has been here all night."

Mary still appeared to have grave doubts as to the advisability of leaving her place of shelter, but when Jack, holding her hand, led her towards their newly discovered relative and Pat Somerville very gently kissed her, all misgivings vanished and in another minute she was in his arms.

"And are you not going to work Bubbles?" asked Mary as they sat round the table enjoying their simple breakfast, "you know we must have some money to-day and Uncle has taken the very last piece of butter."

Both her listeners burst out laughing, also there was quite a comical expression on the sea-captain's face as he looked towards his little niece. "Upon my word," he said, "your sister is right Jack, we must have some money it is true but to-day is a holiday for both of you. We will clear up decks, arrange everything in good order and then go on a voyage of exploration and"—He stopped as a loud bang resounded on the door and Jack rose from his seat to answer it. "It's Mr. Smith, my employer, uncle" he said over his shoulder.

"Come in, come in," invited the Captain, cordially, "You are indeed welcome."

The new comer entered the room with a glance of astonishment at so unexpected a reception. "I came Jack" he said addressing the boy, "because as it is so late it occurred to me you must be ill but," and then he paused at a loss how to continue.

"No buts, my dear sir" was the immediate reply, "my nephew here owes you an apology, or rather I do, for it is my fault he is not on his job, if you will kindly sit down I will explain everything." So once more the story was told and at the end the worthy Storekeeper said, "I am glad and yet sorry at what you have been good enough to tell me Capt. Somerville; Jack has indeed not been with me very long but during that time his work has been so well done that I shall be sorry to part with him, though of course he will be much better off now that he has you to look after him, and as for Mary here, the wife will be sorely grieved if she also goes away."

He got up and put a hand in his pocket. "Your wages my boy" he said kindly handing some coins to Jack, who very hesitatingly took them. "I don't think I ought to have any now" he answered glancing at his uncle.

"Certainly not" replied that gentleman firmly. "No, no, he went on as Mr. Smith protested, "Jack leaves you in a difficulty for there will without doubt be some trouble to you in replacing him. I am sure he will never forget your kindness but he must not take that money. Give it back to Mr. Smith at once Jack."

With no little relief that boy did as he was told, and it came to him then for the first time that for the future he was to be under authority. It would not be his part to make plans but very obediently carry them out.

Soon after this their visitor departed with many good wishes for the future welfare of his two young friends. These same wishes would have been given with even more sincerity than they were had any of them known of the long period of time the many dangers, and the mysterious adventures that lay between them and their next meeting. Perhaps it is as well that we cannot look into the future.

WEIR

Mrs. Jas. Champagne and son Leslie, of Montreal, were the guests of her sister, Mrs. Jos. Loudin for a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Beaven and daughters, Mary Rose and Lucienne, of Montreal, spent the past week visiting friends in Weir.

Mr. Oliver Lane, of Montreal, is spending the summer holidays at the home of his aunt, Mrs. A. J. Kerr.

Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Williams were, Mr. and Mrs. P. Simpson and son Donald, Mrs. J. Simpson, Miss Janet Simpson and Mr. Roy Williams, all of Montreal.

Several people from these parts attended the Lachute Fair last week, and all report a good time.

Mr. Ray Craig of Lachute, spent the week-end at home.

It was a shock to this community to learn that Mrs. Oliver Purcell was taken to the General Hospital, Montreal, on Saturday last, and all wish her a speedy recovery.

"Will you give ten cents to help the Old Ladies' Home?"

"What! Are they out again?"

Lachute Spring Fair Successful in Every Respect

Hon. Sir George and Lady Perley Among Distinguished Guests.
Favorable Weather Throughout.

While the general depression, as was largely expected, was responsible for a smaller "gate," splendid weather contributed to the general success of Lachute's Spring Fair, which in point of excellence and quality excelled all previous exhibitions by the Argenteuil Agricultural Society. The big parade in the showing, which marked the close of the class judging at three o'clock Saturday afternoon, was ample indication of the record entries and fine quality of this year's exhibits.

Among distinguished visitors for the occasion were Hon. Sir George and Lady Perley; Mr. and Mrs. I. Robertson and family, of Ottawa; George Dansereau, County member in the Legislature, accompanied by Mrs. Dansereau and family. It is regrettable that Hon. Mr. Godbout, Minister of Agriculture for this province, was unable to attend.

On Friday, members of the St. Lawrence Press Association held their annual convention here, and took occasion to view the town and to attend the Fair. To these, as to numerous out-of-town visitors, the industrial exhibits in the main building and booths proved exceedingly interesting and attracted considerable attention.

Appreciation is due to the directorate of the Agricultural Society, and to all who contributed toward the success of the recent exhibition. Special mention should be made of the local Red Cross Society, who catered so efficiently to the gastronomic needs of those in attendance at the Fair grounds. From a community viewpoint, the publicity and general benefits deriving from the exhibition cannot be too highly estimated. Industrial, agricultural, and tourist interests stand to benefit immeasurably, and it has been gratifying to note a spirit of civic hospitality and public co-operation throughout the event.

Especially pleasing to the society and to County agriculturists was the sentiment of the judges; Mr. D. A. McCormick's commendation on the splendid quality of local livestock exhibits, was perhaps typical of the favorable impression among these authorities. Opinion was expressed that no better selection of local exhibits could be found at any rural exposition throughout Canada.

The following list of awards stands very creditably to our County entrants:

GROUP INSURANCE FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

A plan to cover school students with insurance up to $100 in case of accident was presented to members of the Moose Jaw School Board and has been adopted. Moose Jaw is thus the first city in Canada and possibly on the North American continent to have an accident insurance policy covering school children. The two plans adopted are:

1. Covers any accident which may happen on the school grounds or in the school during regular school days between 8.30 o'clock in the morning and 5.30 o'clock in the afternoon at a premium of 50 cents per year per pupil.
2. Twenty-four-hour coverage on regular school days covering any injury sustained by the child, whether at home, on the street, at play or on school property at a cost of $1 per pupil per year. Both of these policies will pay up to $100 for medical and surgical treatment, including X-ray fees and municipal confinement. Parents may subscribe to either plan they wish.

Making History in Argenteuil

Extracted from files of
The Watchman.

25 Years Ago

Friday, June 23, 1907.

The Annual Meeting and conference of the W.C.T.U. in the Vaudreuil, was held at Pointe des Lacs, Argenteuil and Fortune on 20th. inst.

The Ladies' Aid of the Baptist Church were entertained on Thursday by Mrs. Jno. McGibbon, in honor of her guests Mrs. Buchanan, of Detroit, and Miss K. McGibbon.

Messrs. Carpenter Bros. have placed a water trough in front of their store on Main Street.

Mr. J. R. Parris lost his valuable red mare on Tuesday, from an attack of inflammation.

Buggy Harness, etc.—Wm. Creswell, Clyde Street, Lachute.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Perley will give a county picnic and luncheon to the people of Argenteuil, with an attractive social programme, on July 9th.

In Superior Court, Joseph Paliser operating a water power at Lachute, claimed $4,000 but was awarded $1950 and costs, in a case against Consumers' Cordage Co'y. Mr. Paliser alleged he had suffered losses in his municipal lighting plant through fall of water in water-power leased from defendants; he also claimed the price of reconstruction for flame, guard-piers, and head-gates which had been carried away by the spring floods. The Company finally appealed the decision, in Supreme Court, and the judgment was reversed, plaintiff's action being dismissed, with costs.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. McCoy are occupying Maple Cottage, Carillon, for the summer months.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Graham of Arundel, Que., announce the engagement of their niece, Miriam Florence Elizabeth Patton, to Mr. Melvin Coral Cooke, of Arundel, Que. The marriage will take place early in July.

STOP SIGNS

The Town authorities, in order to minimize the dangers of accidents on street corners have placed "STOP SIGNS" at all danger points in town, and the public are warned they must come to a dead stop when confronted by same. All offenders will be rigorously prosecuted.

—By order of Roads Committee
Lachute Town Council

OF INTEREST TO LAKE LOUISA CAMPERS

There's nothing quite so homey as rustic camps among regular town conveniences. Mr. Habib of Brownsburg, is lending added attraction to Lake Louisa summer haunts this year, by establishing an up-to-date Store and Ice Cream Parlor near Liberty Hall. Landing wharf and motor-boat delivery, of fresh groceries, vegetables, cooked meats and provisions. Courtesy and service are assured, and a good patronage will be appreciated by this enterprising merchant.

FLOWER MISSION

Please remember the Flower Mission. Our contribution leaves Lachute on the Milk train every Tuesday morning, so that all must be at the station in time to be packed to catch that train. Helpers are needed and there cannot be too many.

Wild flowers are liked very much. The Master, who spent so much of His time on earth in the Country, took flowers and weeds as texts for his sermons. They teach lessons to all. Small bunches, stems, wrapped in damp paper. Women's Institutes take note, and kindly send flowers.

Signed—Kate Massiah.

Above All . . . SECURITY

Established in every city and town of importance throughout the Dominion, the Bank of Montreal has been the trusted custodian of Canadians' savings for generations.

Throughout the Bank's history of 115 years, safety has been a watchword and conservative management a guiding principle of those directing the institution.

Customers of each of the more than 600 Branches of the Bank have the satisfaction of knowing that behind their own Branch, for the security of their deposits, are the full resources of the entire organization.

Why Miss Lillian Loughton's Strawberry Shortcake* is famous

"I use Magic Baking Powder," says Miss Lillian Loughton, Dietitian and Cookery Expert of the Canadian Magazine. "My successful baking results are due in large part to its freshness, uniformity, and consistent high quality."

"My own recipes are planned for Magic, and I recommend it for all recipes calling for baking powder."

Miss Loughton's high praise confirms the judgment of other Canadian dietitians and cookery experts. The majority of them use Magic exclusively, because it gives consistently better baking results.

Magic is first choice of Canadian housewives, too. It outsells all other baking powders combined!

*STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

2 cups pastry flour
(or 1 1/2 cups bread flour)
4 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
3/4 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg 1/2 cup milk

Sift together the dry ingredients; rub in shortening till very fine; add sugar. Beat egg and pour with the chilled milk to make soft dough (but not too soft to hold its shape when baked). Turn the dough onto a floured board, roll lightly to one-third inch thickness. Cut out with a round cutter. Brush one round with melted butter; place another round on it; bake in hot oven. Split, fill with fresh berries slightly sweetened. Put top round on and pile whipped cream over it, decorating with whole berries.

FREE COOK BOOK—When you bake at home, the new Magic Cook Book will give you dozens of delicious recipes. Write to Standard Brands Ltd., Fraser Ave. & Liberty St., Toronto, Ont.

HEART OF THE NORTH

BY WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of banditry in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomerie, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits set away with gold dust and choice peltry.

CHAPTER II.—Corporal Bill Hardwick brings the news of the crime to "Agent" Alan Baker at the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, Alan starts out after the bandits in his big police launch with the corporal and four constables.

CHAPTER III.—Reaching the Midnight Sun, they stop long enough for Alan to board her and consult witnesses of the crime. Alan asks the skipper to put Jimmy Montgomerie's orphaned four-year-old daughter off at Fort Endurance and leave her in the care of Alan's fiancée, Elizabeth Spaulding. At the MacMillan trading post on the Big Aloukska, Joyce MacMillan is alone, awaiting the return of Dave, her father, from a fur-buying trip. She is thrilled when the police launch ties up there for the night, as she has not seen Alan Baker for months. Secretly she had hoped to marry him; then she was stunned by the news of his engagement to Elizabeth. She is happy now to perceive from his halting talk that the planned marriage is not definitely certain.

Alan stirred. His voice was torn with pain. "I don't know what I'll do. But I'll have to do something about it."

After a little silence he directed: "Larry, you go down and relieve Pat. Don't tell these other men anything about this yet."

When Larry had gone, Alan left the musty-smelling shed, and walked up along the side of the trading hall to Joyce's window. As he came up, purposefully cracking a stick, he had a glimpse of her whole room. Its furniture was a dresser, a chair originally straight but with a pair of rockers fitted to it, a sheet-iron stove with woodbox against the wall, and a bed which he knew had been a condemned barracks cot. But Joyce had somehow lifted the bleak room almost to cheerfulness. There were blushing creeds of great-souled violets and Arctic primulas and adder's-tongue on the dresser, some sprigs of bright-red berries above it, a wolf-rug across the foot of the bed, and on the dresser a picture of himself, of her former employer down in Ottawa, of her dad and mother.

She had heard him and turned toward the window and recognized him in the weak light.

He said: "Joyce, I've got to talk with you. Maybe you'd better come out here where we'll be alone."

She stepped to the window.

As Alan helped her down, trying to say lightly, "It's unlikely, Joyce, to come through a window that way," he felt the hard bulge of that little bulldog automatic pressed against him. At least his gift was still protection to her.

He suggested: "Let's go a little farther away, Joyce. I don't want that long-eared Whipple overhearing this."

Rather aimlessly, he led her a stone-throw west of the storage shed to a little clear place in the spruces. Trying to prepare her in some measure, he told her of Larry going into the shed, happening to notice a strange pack of furs, examining them, seeing the L & H marks and the serial numbers. He hesitated a moment then, with Joyce frowning perplexedly at those strange furs being in the shed; but there was no mercy possible now, and he took the final step.

"Joyce, I hate myself for telling you this. But you've got to know. Those furs in your father's shed are one of the packs stolen from the Midnight Sun."

"Stolen? From the Midnight Sun? But Alan! What—what's it doing here?"

"This afternoon while you were asleep, Joyce, your father, or else one of these bandits, put the furs in there. That pack is—it must be his share in the arrangement. Joyce, your father is somehow connected with these bandits."

Realization came slowly to Joyce. Then sharply, like an instinctive defense, came passionate disbelief and anger; and she drew a little away from him.

"I'm sorry, sorry," he said in heart-felt sympathy. "You father used to be my friend. And he's your father; that's what hurts the worst."

Joyce drew still farther back from him, with her eyes flashing, with a defiant toss of her head. He believed her father guilty! He had gone prying around for evidence! He was blind! Heartless! A man-hunting wolf! Inhuman! Worse.

Alan was thoroughly surprised. He had seen Joyce handle insolent Indians and breeds, shooting their dialects at them like fluted Yellowknife arrows; but with him, with Bill, with her father, she had always been as quiet as a summer wind. The way

she was assailing him now, defending

Without a Word of Reply or Self-Protection He Took All She Had to Tell Him.

her father, revealed a new depth to her nature.

Without a word of reply or self-protection, he took all she had to tell him. He felt that her anger was not so much against him personally as against the inexorable duty he represented.

"Joyce, please don't," he begged. "Please listen. Maybe I am inhuman and a wolf, and I've got sawdust where my brains ought to be. But also I'm . . . Don't you understand how I'm between the devil and the deep sea?"

She looked up, with tears still glistening on her cheeks.

"Alan, I don't believe—oh, I can't believe—that pack. Alan, say it isn't so!"

Her bewildered misery tugged at Alan. He wanted to comfort her with some lie. But he dared not build up any hope, for he knew it would only prove a tragic disappointment to her in the end.

"Joyce, we've got to believe. The pack is there. No use going over to see if it is. Larry and I made no mistake. We mustn't blind ourselves to the truth."

She suggested eagerly: "Don't you think these furs might have got there some way besides—besides. . . Alan! Don't you see?—that pack was planted there! Those men knew you'd find it, and stop, and investigate, and arrest my dad! That would give them time and chance to escape—"

As gently as he could, Alan interrupted her. "No, Joyce. Your dad wasn't framed. Larry and I talked that possibility over. If those men had reasoned as you suggest, they'd have put the furs in a conspicuous place where we'd have been sure to find them. The pack wasn't planted. Let's not delude ourselves."

"Joyce, let's try to look at the evidence as others will see it. Your father is absent, and has been for four days, just at this particular time. There is the question of these bandits being strangers and yet getting about this country so well. There's the fact that he was bitter against the big companies and probably was tempted to retaliate against them in the only way in his power. And, Joyce, there's the tale of furs; that evidence alone is enough to prove a connection. . ."

Joyce listened to him piling up the evidence, but the entire staggering total of it did not sway her. Against it she set all she knew of her father's nature. In her whole life she had never seen him enter a penny of false debt against the most ignorant Indian, or deviate a hair's breadth from his word of honor. She often had thought that the only person in the world her dad had ever wronged was himself. Though he had been drinking heavily and taking up with none-too-unwilling Indian women, it seemed contrary to his whole nature to plot with bandits, to gang with murderers.

As Alan finished his reluctant indictment, her resolve hardened. . . She was going to fight for her father and defend him with every weapon in her power.

One way shot into her mind. Her proud head dropped a little, and she asked hesitantly: "Alan, do you have to arrest him? Only you and Mr. Young and I know about these furs being here. If you could—if we could some way cover it up—"

She checked the plea. She could not bring herself to put Alan in so fearful a dilemma. Looking up, she met his gaze squarely again. "No, I can't ask that of you. I'd never ask that."

He chose his words very carefully. "The question with me, Joyce, is this: How deeply is your father involved? I can't think he'd go the whole length with these bandits. I can't think he'd countenance murder or even so brazen a robbery as these men staged. Perhaps they deluded him about their intentions. If they're caught, they're going to die and throw as much of the blame on him as they can. But if I can have the truth as a working basis, I can nail their lies. We can't hope to save him from a penalty, but we maybe can save him from the—the worst."

Joyce blanched at the last word, at the specter it aroused. Her father stood charged with murder. In her heart the Law suddenly became a tangible and fearsome thing.

Alan went on: "You stand a better chance of getting the truth from him than I do, Joyce. He'd suspect me if I tried to talk to him. But with you he'd be more frank and open. When he comes in, won't you try to find out what you can?"

"You mean I'm to watch him and gather what hints I can, and perhaps ask questions that seem innocent?"

"That's exactly it, Joyce. Exactly what I meant. If you'll do that for me, if you'll help me that much . . . Joyce, don't you see why I told you this? Don't you see it's because I'm going to stick with you? I won't see your dad railroaded. I'll help him to the limit I can—because he's your father."

He was facing her in the ghostly morning light. Again he was conscious that his four months of absence, breaking the friendship between them, had invested her with an aura of strangeness to him; and that all during this brief fateful visit he had become aware of her in a quickened sense. How brave and comradely a girl! And in spite of her hard life here, in spite of her efforts to be a good bush-loper, how winsome and girlish and adorable she was!

Unwilling to detain him, Joyce offered him her hand, wishing him success today, hiding her fears for him when he should come up with these men. Alan bent nearer her, he bent down a little to kiss her, as more than once he had done in the years past. It was an impulsive act; he was swept by admiration of her bravery, of her girlish prettiness. And it was a humble act of contrition, too, and self-reproach; for he had said to himself that if he had kept up his visits here, instead of leaving Joyce all alone to the battle, he might have halted Dave MacMillan's plunge into crime.

She went with him down to the wharf and stood watching the patrol embark. At the first bend above, he turned to look back. Vaguely through the mist he saw Joyce still standing on the wharf in the gray chill of earliest morning. He waved to her and caught the tiny white of her kerchief answering.

When the mist had hidden her from him, he turned his eyes ahead. Somewhere on up the spruce-buried Aloukska were those six bandit strangers, rifle-armed and desperate and certain to give battle. Against them he was pitting his life and the lives of his men today.

Fifty miles above the MacMillan trading store, Alan ordered Pedneault to swerve in toward the north bank and stop.

He believed those bandits could not be very far ahead now. Across this silent wilderness the roar of the launch's engine carried for five or six miles. Warned of pursuit, those criminals might lift their canoes back into the timber and let the police go harmlessly past. Likelier still, they might lay an ambush where the river was narrow, and open on the launch with repeating rifles at a murderous point-blank range. But if he located them on up-stream, he could slip upon them quietly in the paddle craft and lay a deadly ambush himself.

Taking a pair of binoculars he splashed ashore and hurried up a hill to its summit. There he had a clear view of a long river "straight" reaching twenty miles up-stream.

He moved his glasses slowly up-stream, praying for a glimpse of those two outlaw canoes. Carefully focusing, he scrutinized the river, the banks on either side with their little curves and hollows; and searched above the trees for a wisp of camp smoke. Nothing, nothing whatsoever, of two creeping black dots. The bandits were twenty miles ahead at least.

As he hurried back down to the launch, he began to realize that those two canoes had traveled more swiftly than he had thought possible. For the first time in his police experience Alan found himself ill at ease and uncertain of what he was running into. Though he could understand, on the assumption of Dave MacMillan's guilt, how the bandits knew just the right moves to make in this dimly known country, still he was utterly unable to explain how six absolute strangers could get into this country unseen.

Who they were, where they had come from, how they had got in here unknown to everybody—the whole thing was uncanny. He hardly knew what to expect of them next.

Splashing back upon the launch, he told his men tersely: "They're not in sight yet, and I could see for twenty miles. We've got to meet up with them before they reach the Forks. They're making tracks. Ped, you're light to drive by now. We'll take our chances."

Lesson for June 26

REVIEW: WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED FROM GENESIS.

GOLDEN TEXT—And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Some Friends We Have Made.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What We Have Learned in Genesis.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Favorite Characters in Genesis.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Genesis Teaches About God and Human Relationships.

Genesis, the book from which the lessons of the quarter are taken, as its name indicates, is a book of beginnings. It contains the only reliable information we have of the origin of the heavens and the earth, plant and animal life, human life, institutions, and relations.

Lesson for April 3.
God was before all things. Everything but God had a beginning. The things which are came to be by the creative act of a personal God. Man himself came into being by the creative act of God.

Lesson for April 10.
An explanation of the ill and sorrows of the world can be made only on the basis of the historic fall of man as recorded in the Bible. Man is not what he was when he came from the Creator's hand. The prime actor in this tragedy was the personal, cunning, and malicious being called "the Devil." Because man is a free being, possessing the power of choice, sin entered through the act of man's will in believing the Devil instead of God.

Lesson for April 17.
Following man's fall, God gave the promise of a redeemer. God chose Abraham to be the head of the new race through which this gracious promise was to be realized. The failure of this new race to carry out God's plan is the explanation of the disordered world.

Lesson for April 24.
Lot's prosperity was due to his relationship to his uncle, Abram. In spite of this fact, he selfishly grasped for the best. Abram, to avert possible strife between Lot and himself, accorded to Lot the choice of the best of the land. Though Lot's choice involved him in trouble, Abram graciously went to his rescue, delivering him from his oppressor, thus being a fine example of the art of living in peace.

Lesson for May 1.
Isaac was a child of the covenant, gentle and peace-loving. Though a lover of peace, he had enemies. His very prosperity incited the envy of the Philistines. His peaceable withdrawal from them gave him increased influence.

Lesson for May 8.
Esau sold his birthright for a bowl of pottage. The birthright was the right of being at the head of the patriarchal family. In a time of physical exhaustion he relinquished his claim to the future in order to gratify a present desire.

Lesson for May 15.
Jacob's scheming involved him in trouble. On his flight from an outraged brother he was overtaken by night and obliged to sleep in a field with a stone for his pillow. It was under such circumstances that God gave him the vision at Bethel.

Lesson for May 22.
On Jacob's return to Canaan to meet Esau, the Angel of the Lord wrestled with him at the ford of Jabbok. Jacob's self-will needed to be broken before he could enter Canaan. He was humbled by the dislocation of his thigh. When thus humbled, he quit wrestling and clung to God. Jacob did not get the blessing through wrestling, but because of his clinging to God. It was only for Jacob to be reconciled to his brother because he was now right with God.

Lesson for May 29.
Joseph was hated by his brethren. The father's favoritism fanned this hatred into a flame, and resulted in his being sold into slavery.

Lesson for June 5.
Joseph's success was not primarily due to the fact that he was a good worker, but to the fact that the good hand of his God was upon him. Joseph was not a self-made, but a God-made man.

Lesson for June 12.
Though Joseph severely tested his brethren, he graciously forgave them and nourished them through the years of famine. He knew that God had sent him to be their deliverer.

Lesson for June 19.
In old age after many years of sorrow for the loss of Joseph, Jacob goes to Egypt and is there nourished through the famine by Joseph. After Jacob's death, Joseph continues his gracious attitude to his brethren.

Three Kinds of People
There are three kinds of people in the world, the wills, the won'ts and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything; the second oppose everything; the third fail in everything.—Selected.

He Is the Loser
It has been said that certain insects which sting, lose their lives when they sting. A man who uses his tongue to express the venom of his hate loses that which to him is better than life.

ANSWERS TO "DO YOU KNOW"

1. Freedom of trade is a term that has been used since the time of Adam Smith, to mean the removal of all restrictions on commerce that favour one form at the expense of another. It involves in particular equal treatment of home and foreign products. Under this policy no preference is shown to either class and consumers can choose the most suitable article without having to pay a penalty for their selection.

2. The first foreign merchants of whom there is record were the Arabs: their trade was by land. The first maritime carriers were the Phoenicians, the founders of Tyre and Sidon.

3. In law, barter is a contract for transferring property, the consideration being some other commodity, or it may be described as a contract for the exchange of two objects or commodities, while a sale is a contract for the transference of property in consideration for a price in money.

4. The sequence of phenomena known as a business cycle has been described as follows: "state of quiescence, improvement, growing confidence, prosperity, and excitement, overtrading, convulsions, pressure, stagnation, distress, ending again in quiescence."

5. The present disordered exchange situation militates against the recovery of the world's commerce, but it is an effect rather than a cause. Exchange is like a barometer; the barometer indicates the weather, but it does not make the weather.

6. If a tariff quotes a through rate in which two or more railroads are involved it is known as a joint tariff. In other words if the commodity starts with one carrier and terminates with another it is a joint tariff.

Two Months Late but Welcome.

Town Roads undergoing Repair, and Traffic better Regulated

Provincial roads in this immediate vicinity are now undergoing repairs, and the marked improvement is welcome, both in and outside the town. The repairs within town limits are merely filling a need which has been felt for two or three months past; and one would hesitate to figure the wear-and-tear on good machinery, and on frayed temperaments, as a result of these thoroughfares.

"Stop" signs throughout Lachute are generally welcomed as a good precautionary measure, and the average driver does not object to the slight inconvenience they impose, in the interests of public safety.

The white division-lines marking the right from the left of our main roads, should also prove helpful in minimizing accidents, and the serve to give impression, to the outsiders, that traffic movement is not wholly neglected in Lachute. One little inconsistency arises, however, on Bethany St. between the C.P.R. and Post-Office. A traffic by-law purports to prevent parking on this narrow section; no less than three cars were noticed yesterday parked within a short distance—this observance of the by-law making the white line useless to define the traffic lanes.

Near the post-office, close to the street mentioned, two col-

Induction of Minister at Grenville.

The Induction of the Rev. K. N. Brueeton, B.A., L.Th., into the Parish of Grenville took place before a crowded congregation in St. Matthew's Church, on Monday evening last. The ceremony was conducted by the Ven. Archdeacon Overing, L. Th., assisted by the Church Wardens, Messrs. Walter Dewar & Hugh Rayson (Grenville), and H. G. Brannan, (Calumet). The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. F. Morris, B.A., B.D., of Montreal, (under whom Mr. Brueeton once served as curate). The preacher stressed the need of growth on the part of the priest or prophet, of Divine approval empowerment and of the people's co-operation. The following priests were also present: the Revs. W. J. Ellis and Jos. Overing (former Rectors, now of Montreal), W. P. Garrett (Hawkesbury); A. Mount, (Lakefield); and R. S. Booy, of (St. Andrews). Mrs. W. Dewar very beautifully sang "Open the Gates of the Temple."

At the conclusion of an impressive and inspiring service an informal reception was held in the Rectory, when the two former Rectors renewed old friendships.

lisons are reported to have occurred over the week-end. The authorities, consequently, should see that traffic is regulated to best advantage in this particular area.

School Consolidation Assured as Ceremony Marks Commencement of New Building

School Board and Church representatives at Turning of First Sod.

"The building of a School is the building of Character."

—Dawson.

There is ever a touch of sadness in the thought that what is old must at sometime or other give place to that which is New. Old customs die out, severing a link with past history not possible to replace, old ideas give place to more up-to-date and progressive thought.

While buildings, aged in their service to mankind and no longer adjusting themselves to modern requirements are ruthlessly pulled down, so that on the space they occupy may be raised, the structure demanded by present day, commercial and other enterprises. Perhaps the deepest note of pathos is struck when the aged building, condemned in part to destruction, happens to be a School. Here if anywhere tradition has taken firm root. This influence lies in the very walls themselves, the worn stairs of the doorway, the gravel of the playground, and is a familiar landmark to past students. And change in such a picture, even if it be but the cutting down of a tree, the building of a wall, or the erection of another section to the structure itself, will reduce its value in the eyes of those one time boys and girls who cherish a memory of lessons learned, hopes achieved and ideals formed within the precincts of their beloved one time school.

These thoughts naturally arise in our mind as we learn that our own Academy is about to be enlarged. With the passing of time, changes are inevitable and it is hoped a right and proper thing that our children should be given further and better opportunities of advancement, along right and proper lines, or rather we should correct ourselves and say along the lines already in force, which have stood the test of experience and produced such students of whose abilities, both academic and in the field, we are so justly proud.

Not for nothing has Lachute

Academy for so many years carried on its work. There are men and women, many occupying no mean positions in this land of ours, who look back, over the years, with unfailing gratitude to the never-old school and freely admit that much of their success is due to the simple yet high ideals they met with there. They have, with those before them, created a tradition, and no matter what structural changes may be made or better equipment provided, the spirit of the past, with its high purpose and divine inspiration will stand fast.—Not only shall we see the blending of an old building with a new but we shall know, with a very real feeling of gratitude that the students who will return to an enlarged and renovated Academy will be but living links in an unbroken chain that stretches back, far back, along the rugged road of honour. Into their hands shall be placed the torch of a noble tradition, may they with God's blessing keep the flame burning and undimmed.

At the invitation of the Lachute School Commissioners a large number of those interested in the progress and development of the project attended the ceremony of turning the first sod for the new building.

Prior to this act, Dr. J. H. Mason, chairman of the Lachute Board of School Commissioners gave a brief resume of the high place the Academy had filled, and how it had become inadequate to present needs. The Board some years ago had approached the Educational authorities at Quebec for assistance in order to enlarge the present building, but were told that they were not giving monies only for consolidation, and they would be pleased to offer 50 p.c. if this became effective. Then it was that the outlying schools decided to come into the consolidation, in consequence of which the Board have now given the contract for $42,367 to the

June Weddings

Campbell - Ayerst

A charming wedding took place at half past four o'clock on Saturday afternoon at Glen Ayerst, Lake MacDonald, Que., the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. S. Ayerst, when their daughter Doris Victoria was united in marriage to Mr. James Kenneth Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Campbell, of Lachute. Rev. Burton H. Robinson, of Fairmount St. Giles Church performed the ceremony.

The spacious country house was gay with pink and white peonies and the ceremony took place before the fire place in the living room. The attendants were Miss Margaret Ayerst, sister of the bride, as maid of honour; Miss Doris Campbell, sister of the groom and Miss Eileen Ayerst, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. Mr. Hugh C. Blair acted as best man.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of white lace, with short veil edged with lace to match her gown held in place with a bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and lilies of the valley and wore white satin and crepe sandals.

The maid of honour was gowned in shell pink pointed d'esprit with wide sash of shell pink and pale blue taffeta, and pale pink crepe sandals. She carried an arm bouquet of marguerites. Miss Campbell wore a net frock of peach colour with sash of green and peach taffeta and wore peach crepe sandals and carried an arm bouquet of marguerites. Miss Eileen Ayerst wore a net frock of yellow colour with mauve and yellow taffeta sash with yellow crepe sandals to match and carried an arm bouquet of marguerites. Mrs. Ayerst wore a model gown of beige peau d'ange lace, with corsage of crimson roses. The groom's mother, Mrs. Campbell, wore a model gown of white and

Yelland - Jack

Trinity Memorial Church, Montreal, was the scene of a very pretty and stylish wedding when two popular members of that church were united in marriage by Rev. Canon Almond, on Saturday, the 25th. Miss Janet Ruth Jack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jack of Woodlands, and George Thomas James Yelland, son of our former townsman James Yelland, were the contracting parties.

The bride was attended by two little nieces who as flower girls were dressed in corn-colored organdy, as was also the matron of honour. The bride's two sisters and a cousin, were her attendants. Orange blossoms and a veil of tulle and lace completed the bride's costume of white.

A large and fashionable assembly witnessed the ceremony and congratulated the happy couple. During the signing of the register "O Perfect Love" was sung.

The Jacks are a well-known Chateaugay County family. "Jimmy" Yelland is well known to this community where he was ever ready to give his musical talent in a good cause.

Old friends in Lachute extend hearty wishes for their health, happiness, and prosperity.

Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Stansfield, Miss MacKimmie, Mrs. K. Massiah, Mr. Eric Middleton, and Mr. Charles Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Hewis, Miss Yelland, Mrs. Huggins, and Mr. James Beach. The reception was held at Woodlands, the residence of the bride's parents.

blue chiffon with corsage of pink roses.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Campbell left on a motor trip, the bride wearing a fawn colored triple crepe frock with brown felt hat, shoes and gloves to match, with travelling coat of a darker shade in polo cloth. They will reside in Montreal.

Fashionable Marriage in West-End Church.

Payette - Ayers

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the west-end Church of St. Julien, Lachute, on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, when Miss Blanche Ayers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Harry Ayers became united in marriage to Mons. Gaston Payette, son of Mde. and the late Mons. du Tremblay Payette, of N.D.G.

The ceremony was performed by the bride's great-uncle, Rev. J. B. Routhier, cure of Masson, and the church was tastefully decorated in a flower scheme of gladioli and peonies backed by tall palms and ferns. During the mass an impressive musical rendering was given by Mde. Racine Langis and Miss C. Forest accompanied at the organ by Mons. Felix Bertrand. The bride was given in marriage by her father, the groom being attended by his brother, Bernard Payette.

The bride was charmingly gowned in a Lucien Lelong creation of ivory satin, Empire model, with a rich Chantilly lace decoration and a long court train of silk tulle. Her veil, of the same material, was tucked with tiny orange blossoms, held in place by a crown of the same blooms, and she carried a bouquet of Calla lilies and lilies-of-the-valley. Her only jewel, the gift of her grandmother, was a cross of engraved gold.

The bride's sister, Miss Pearl Ayers, as maid of honor, wore a dress of Isabelle model in mauve tulle and Chantilly lace over satin of the same color, a large tulle hat, finished with Chantilly lace and a knot of orchid velvet. Her cascade bouquet was of tea roses and sweet peas in graduated shade.

Messieurs Roger Beaudry, Leonard and Richard Ayers, acted as ushers.

Mrs. Ayers, mother of the bride, wore a French dress of Agnes cut, in black Alencon lace and chiffon, with short train. Her black Italian straw hat was set with French flowers shaded with a Lewis pointe d'esprit and she carried a corsage bouquet of American beauties. Mde. Payette, mother of the groom, was dressed in a chiffon and lace gown of orchid color with porcelain straw hat trimmed with white and mauve velvet ribbon. Her bouquet was of Opheelia roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, and the happy couple left shortly for an automobile trip to the U. S., the bride travelling in a long tailored suit of blue and white striped worsted, of Princess design, with an English straw hat and silver fox furs. Their wedding gifts were numerous and costly, testifying to the esteem and good wishes of a wide circle of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Payette will take up residence on Cote St. Antoine road in Notre Dame de Grace.

Regular Baptist Conference at Dalesville

The fourth Annual Summer Conference of the Montreal-Ottawa District Churches, of the Union of Regular Baptist Churches, of Ontario and Quebec, is planned to be held at the Church in Dalesville, on Thursday and Friday of next week, July 6th. and 7th. There will be two sessions each day, beginning at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and 7.30 in the evening. Daylight Saving Time. Delegates and visitors are expected from Westport, Ottawa, Westboro Buckingham, The Gore, St. Amede, Papineauville, Avoca, Lachute, Montreal, Verdun and Sawyerville. Most interesting sessions have been planned, outstanding features of which will be the presence of Rev. H. L. Davey and Mrs. Davey, missionaries, who have just returned on furlough from Liberia with a thrilling story to tell, and who will have with them Daniel the little Bassa black baby who was abandoned and whom they rescued from death. Mr. and Mrs. Davey will fill a large part of the evening sessions and the closing address on Thursday evening will be delivered by Rev. Dr. T. T. Shields, of Toronto. There will be other visiting speakers also.

Why should Canada be obliged to feed the 118 Doukhobors who staged a nude procession at Nelson, B.C.? If they cannot be deported why not send them north to live with the Eskimos where they will find clothes rather comfortable.—Pembroke Standard Observer.

19 Pound Trout Caught in Bark Lake, Arundel

The Montreal Star is authority for the claim of record catches in Bark Lake, near Arundel. A photographic illustration also shows the lucky angler, B. W. Carruthers of Montreal, with his 19 pounder. It is stated that another fisherman, F. J. Bougie, caught a trout of 23 lbs. from the same lake last week.

These catches would seem to refute the complaint, that Argenteuil's more popular lakes are all "fished out." The yield this season, even from waters in the populous areas, has proved unusually attractive and even if our native trout are wily and elusive, it is now reasonably certain and proven, "there's fish in them thar lakes!"

While driving in the neighborhood of Belle Riviere Saturday night, Mr. Laurin had the misfortune to run into the ditch and his large sedan was badly damaged. Fortunately the car was not travelling very fast, and with exception of scratches and bruises, Mr. Laurin, his wife and family were not severely injured. The mishap seems to have occurred when the driver became overcome with drowsiness.

Flower boxes have been recommended by Dr. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist, as an effective feature in city beautification. They are to be generously used in the city of Ottawa, as a special feature of beautification for the Imperial Economic Conference.

County Pioneer, 81, Takes Trans-continental Motor Trip to Renew Old Associations

Reminiscent of School Days in St. Andrews East.

Fresh and spry after a cross-country motor trip from Vancouver, one of an old pioneer Argenteuil family, in the person of H. Naughton MacNaughton, breezed into the Watchman office on Saturday. One might have judged he had just driven over from Hawkesbury, instead of having crossed canons, mountain-passes and dusty prairies, in a 3,000 mile trip to renew old acquaintances and associations in Argenteuil. Mr. MacNaughton is 81 years old, and regards his long drive as just one more experience in a lifetime of "seein' things." He was accompanied and driven by his nephew Gordon Alder, of Vancouver.

Occupied MacNaughton Farm in "The Bay."

Mr. MacNaughton was born in Montreal in May 1853, and when his father was drowned in Lachine Canal one month later, was brought to St. Andrews E., where his family settled on what became known as the MacNaughton Farm, located on the Bay. "When Mother married again," related the visitor, "we moved into St. Andrews Village. I resided there until I was eleven years of age, and I recall my first school teacher was Miss Clouthier. She was succeeded by Miss Hyde, and later by Miss McArthur and Miss McIntosh. The old brick school was out in the Commons, not far from Simpson's Tannery." At 11 yrs. of age, Naughton MacNaughton moved again into the woods, back-country near the village of Arundel, and resided there until 1887. He held office as secretary-treasurer of the municipality for several years, and also the secretaryship of the French Separate School. Reminiscent of the early associations of half-a-century ago in Argenteuil, the visitor naturally finds great change in this part of the country. He nevertheless has tender recollections and an enduring affection for this section of the East. Out west, before leaving on this trip, he had been severely ill. Friends had sought to dissuade him from undertaking so long a journey, but Naughton had set his mind on it, and just came ahead—contending that if he were going to die, he would be "nearer to heaven in Quebec, anyway!"

Describes Interesting Trip.

One of the few regrets of Mr. MacNaughton's recent experience was the indignity of losing 15 dollars and 60 cents of exchange on every $100 of good Canadian currency. His trip took him across the U. S. Border by way of Stephens Pass from Everett, B. C. At a 5500 ft. elevation, they encountered snow banks and considerable hard driving. Passing through Wanatchi, Spokane and eastern parts of Washington State; through Idaho, Dakota, Montana, and again encountering slush and snow in the Calcalhol Pass; through Minnesota to Minneapolis and St. Paul, and finally through Michigan State to Sault Ste. Marie, the travelers crossed the border again into Canada. During the remainder of the journey they appear to have been favorably impressed with many of our Canadian highways, as they were doubtless prepared for a worse reception.

"Don't be ashamed of your Quebec Roads!"

"Do not be ashamed of your Quebec roads," urged Mr. MacNaughton "There are lots worse in the West." It was a matter of regret that the All-Canadian route through the Rockies was not yet completed, to accommodate early-summer touring. The longest distance covered by Mr. MacNaughton and his nephew in one day was 600 miles. They left Vancouver on the 9th. inst., arriving at Lachute last Saturday, 25th., after a pleasurable and not too strenuous trip.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

LIFE'S HARVEST.

Dear Boys :-

My congratulations to you all on being out of school and my very best wishes for a Really Happy and Safe Vacation.

I am sure that this coming holiday is the best in the year because though the winter has a very special charm of its own--for who does not enjoy those crisp bright sunny days when the snow lies deep on the hillsides--there is indeed magic in the green woods and music in the rustling trees that grip you as nothing else can or will.

Summer Time is Harvest Time.

Is it not a fact that Nature has been steadily and persistently preparing throughout the year for this final tableau of the seasons? Hail, wind, snow, rain and sleet have in their turn swept the country side. Long and continuous sunless days to be followed by cold bleak nights have all contributed towards the production of a picture, so beautiful, so full of fascination, above all so picturesque that the charm of it lingers in the memory long after it has faded away for yet another year. And it is into such a picture you are stepping now.

Lift up your eyes and behold the glory of the hills. Do not be blind to the beauty that surrounds you; is on your right hand and on your left; that lies at your very feet and is over in the air you breathe. Try and catch some of the wistful charm of these long summer evenings that are peculiarly your own because out of that which is old has grown the fresh beauty of young life and been born once again in a new vitality.

All this has not come about suddenly. The process has been slow and the way not easy, even for Nature. How often because a plant here or a flower there has grown too quickly, careless of the inexorable laws that it must follow, withered away and died? There is sadness in this thought because of the promising material that is for ever lost.

Sometimes this is so with us. Our hopes are high; we feel the sap of ambition running so strongly in our veins that we heed not those cautious words of counsel or follow the rules set down for our guidance. That is why, when our friends and those whom we love are there, we ourselves remain outside the picture, that great masterpiece conceived and painted by God Himself.

But I started by wishing you a happy holiday, well when you walk by still waters, when you see the wonder of the sunset, when you look up and glimpse the glory of the stars and perhaps remember what I have written here you will have one.

Ever your affectionate FRIEND,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 6.

Not much time was lost, as their Uncle expressed it in 'clearing decks' and soon all were ready for the expedition.

"Where are we going, Uncle," asked Babs, as she ran down the stairs. "Are we going in a train?"

"Not yet Babs," was the kindly reply, "we are going to do a little shopping first of all, I think my boy and girl require a new outfit," and the Captain glanced at Jack's well worn suit.

What a morning that was. One after the other of the big stores were visited and it soon became apparent to the two youngsters that their uncle was determined that they should have complete new clothing in every respect. "No use doing things by halves" he said jovially when Jack felt called upon to protest at the quantity of the clothing he was purchasing, "now all that remains to be done is to secure some trunks to pack all this into." An obliging assistant at the last store offered his help and quite soon three huge travelling boxes containing the results of their efforts stood securely packed in front of them.

"Where to, Sir" asked the store attendant of Capt. Sommerville after the last bill had been paid and they were ready to depart.

"Well, well just you send these things round to the Terminus Hotel this afternoon," we will be there to receive them," was the casual reply, and the man agreed that they should arrive without fail.

"Oh how lovely," exclaimed Babs, "are we going to a big hotel, but what about our things at home?"

"That's for Jack to see to" answered her uncle, "he can return there after we have had our dinner, bring away what little things you really value, pay what is owed and return to us at the hotel. You won't be living there any more."

Later that evening, after they had partaken of an excellent supper at which Babs was asked more than once if she was sure the butter would last out, the Captain spoke seriously to his young charges. "Now listen to me you two for the time has come when I must explain just what is about to take place, since I have been fortunate enough to find you. My ship is called the 'Dauntless' and is a very large steamer. I not only command her but am her owner as well and for that matter possess two other vessels which are sailed by friends of mine."

"What Uncle you own three big ships, then you must have heaps and heaps of money," interrupted Babs, while Jack looked at him with increased respect.

"Well yes" admitted the Captain with a chuckle, "I am a ship owner alright but a trader as well, and as regards the 'heaps and heaps of money' well I guess I am a long way off that mark as yet, though not doing so badly, business being what it is; however, let's get back to what I was saying before you interrupted me, young lady."

"Oh Uncle forgive me" Babs pleaded, "I won't speak again until you say I may."

Just pausing to give the wistful little face a kiss, the Captain continued. "Well the 'Dauntless' is at present lying in Southampton Harbour which is not so very far from where you used to live with your mother and father. We brought a cargo of various goods from Cape Colony that by now should have been unloaded and also another taken aboard; Mr. Williams, my chief officer, will be expecting my return so we are travelling down there to-morrow morning by an early train and this brings me to the main reason for my telling you all this." He paused a moment determined to tax the interest of his audience to the limit then he said quietly, "Well and what do you say to coming with us on our next voyage?"

It is difficult to conjecture quite what Pat Sommerville really expected when making this suggestion, but whatever it was it came as a complete surprise to him when his young recently acquired niece gave vent to a shriek of delight and followed it up by throwing herself on to his knees at the same time clasping her arms tightly round his neck. "Oh" she said delightedly, "how wonderful to travel on a ship; please don't say you won't take us."

"I shall not be able to say anything one way or the other" gasped the Captain "if you do not stop trying your best to choke me. Here Jack come to the rescue."

When order had been restored the commander of the good ship 'Dauntless' looked across at his nephew.

"Well" he queried, "and what have you to say about my plan, youngster?"

I think it splendid Uncle, but won't we be in the way on the ship? Of course I could work and make myself useful but what about Babs?" "No difficulty at all about that," was the instant rejoinder, "the Dauntless is really a cargo steamer" but there is also accommodation for passengers and this next trip we shall probably have one or two, though of course I cannot say as to that before we actually sail, anyway there will be a nicely furnished cabin which you can have, and as you have looked after your sister on land you ought to be able to do so on the sea.

"But you will give me some work to do won't you uncle", persisted Jack. "And a touch of the rope's end if you don't do it, eh my lad, well, well then that is settled for which I am glad. "Come to your uncle," continued Pat Sommerville turning to Mary, "and tell him, but mind no strangling tricks if you please, that you are happy."

The remainder of the evening was spent in discussing plans and it was a very cheerful party that eventually went off to their rooms to sleep; the Captain in one with Jack and his sister in another, for notwithstanding their Uncle's humorous suggestion that a young lady should have a room of her own, Babs refused to be separated from her brother.

For a long time the boy lay awake turning over in his mind the exciting happenings of the day until at last he fell asleep to dream of pirates, desert islands, and cannibals.

THE COST OF LIVING.

The only consolation available to the average citizen in these days of depression is the substantial decline which has occurred in the cost of living. It does not represent, of course, a universal advantage. It is a matter of more or less indifference to the family without money whether this or that food commodity or article of raiment is a few cents cheaper now than it was four or five years ago. Nor is it a matter which affords much pleasure to the producer, who must content himself with a very low return upon his labor, while in the various channels of trade between the primary producer and the ultimate consumer competition becomes so keen that profits, if profits can be had, are negligible. Nevertheless the fall in commodity prices does to some extent offset the decline in domestic purchasing power.

In a recent communication from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics the general index number is stated to have fallen from 83.7, the April figure, to 81.8 in May. Forty-six items of food show a decrease from 65.4 to 62.9, some of the commodities included being meats, eggs, butter, milk, canned salmon, tea and coffee. As regards butter, the decreases were substantial, while milk dropped 1.10 cents per quart. Some increases were shown, as for example, in the price of onions, but these are taken into account in determining the average reduction. In the fuel and lighting group there was a decline from 93.1 to 91.4, the decrease in the case of coal being from 94.8 to 91.9. On the basis of 100 for the year 1926, wholesale prices are shown to have declined from 68.4 in April to 66.7 in May, there having been 65 increases, 107 decreases and 330 unchanged figures. The classifications include consumers' goods and producers' goods, raw and partly manufactured commodities, goods fully or chiefly manufactured, farm products, all showing reductions.

The fact that mortgage rates have been maintained, and that taxation and rates have been steadily increasing, partly explains why rentals are not keeping pace in the general downward trend.

CUSHING WEST.

Mr. Leonard Young left on Monday to spend a week in Toronto.

Mrs. S. O. Hartley has opened residence for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maguire and family arrived at the Green Cottage on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley and family, of Montreal, are spending a few weeks at Mrs. Greig's cottage at Greece's Point, where Mr. and Mrs. Stedman and little daughter also spent the week-end.

Miss K. Whelehan, of Montreal spent the week-end with her relatives here.

Dr. H. B. Cushing and Miss Marjorie Cushing had as their guests at their residence here over the week-end, Mr. and Mrs. Turnbull and Miss Helen Byers, of Montreal.

Rev. Ernest Dawson and Mr. Killick, of Lacolle, were guests of the former's father, Mr. E. Dawson, at Stonefield Heights, on Wednesday of last week. Mr. and Mrs. Harris Dawson, of Irons Falls, were also guests at Mr. Dawson's over the week-end and are now visiting friends in Montreal.

Mr. Sylvester Robert who has been absent for several years in Detroit, Michigan, arrived last week at his home at Monalea. Mr. Cecil Graham who has also spent some years in Detroit accompanied him and is visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. A. Graham.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH SERVICES

"God" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches Sunday, July 3rd.

Golden Text: I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me." (Exodus 20: 2, 3.)

Among the citations comprised in the Lesson-Sermon are the following verses from the Bible; "And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him...and said, Lord, I am not worthy that shouldst come under my roof; but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed." "And Jesus said unto the centurion. Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the self-same hour." (Matt. 8: 5, 8, 13)

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon are the following lines from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Truth is God's drugs or hygiene, nor provide them for human use; else Jesus would have recommended and employed them in his healing. The sick are more denorably lost than the sinning, if the sick cannot rely on God for help and the sinning can. The divine Mind never called matter medicine, and matter required a material and human belief before it could be considered as medicine." (pages 142, 143.)

The world does not belong to the man who makes the most noise.

The latin line, "A mari usque ad Mare" on the new Canadian Coat of Arms, means "From Sea to Sea." It is taken from Psalm 72: 8, which reads: "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea from the rivers to the ends of the earth"—the verse which is said to have suggested the word "Dominion" for the Confederation.

HOW FAR WILL A DOLLAR GO?

Here's a stunt in high finance A man purchased a tie in a men's furnishing store. When he came to pay for it, he found he did not have enough money so he issued a cheque for a dollar. The merchant endorsed the cheque and turned it over to the barber in exchange for a dollar's worth of service. The piece of paper went through the hands of nineteen different merchants in exchange for goods etc. The twentieth man took it to the bank, where he found out that there were no funds to meet it. He called the other nineteen men together and after considerable discussion they all decided to put 5c. a piece and retire the cheque. Twenty people received a full dollar's worth of goods or service for a nickel. How's that.—Glencoe Transcript sued the Offway Indians to produce a riverside version of "Hiawatha".

Howl, Wolves, HOWL

A survey of the Wolf Week programme reveals a combination of sentiment and excitement. Governor Roosevelt of New York State has presented the citizens with a British flag taken by the U. S. troops when they burned the Sault in 1814. The flag will be hoisted with appropriate ceremonies. The excitement comes in when the visitors will be invited to amuse themselves running the Sault Rapids in canoes, attending Algoma Wolf Club dinners, and sympathizing with the unlucky winner of a bear, which animal, Jim Curran proposes to raffle in lieu of one of his beloved wolves. The Algoma Self-Denial Club has added three pleasant features to the programme. The members of this club never deny themselves anything, and they advise that there are no peevish cops in the Sault; that their city is only an overnight ride from Toronto on the Canadian Pacific's homeliest train, and that they still serve cheese with the apple pie in the Sault, which Jim Curran says is built beside Lake Superior in the great Algoma forest, near the timber wolves.

Jim Curran, Editor of the Sault Daily Star, believes with Old Sam Martin that "a man who says he has been et by a wolf is a liar". Jim Curran, as all the world knows, is an expert on wolves, so much so, indeed, that he has persuaded Sault Ste. Marie to hold a Wolf Week, July 25-30. That is the kind of a week it's going to be. Jim Curran, the wolf expert, says it will be worth attending; that the Sault is the friendliest town in Canada, and that respectable strangers will be welcome. Plug hats will not be practical headgear during Wolf Week at the Sault. This is a warning, and is understandable at a show where the background is totally composed of timber wolves, Hudson Bay Barbecues, Indians and whiskers. Jim Curran and his fellow-citizens of the friendliest town have cornered the world's best professional long distance swimmers for some real racing, and have per-by Mrs. Usher, of the doings at the recent convention of the W.C.T.U. held in Montreal at which she was present as a delegate representing Cushing, Pt. Fortune and St. Andrews.

Mr. C. F. Kains, of Greece's Point, has been the recipient of numerous congratulations on his collection of antiques which he sent to the Exhibition recently held by the Women's Historical Society, of Ottawa.

WHETHER it's you or not, it's a mighty disagreeable task. Even after the wood is split, carried and burned, you are not through with work. Ashes are still to be disposed of, cleaning up to be done... and so on every day you have a fire. The same with coal, only coal is dirtier still! Honestly, is all this work and trouble worth while when, at a very small cost, (soon saved) you can install a

Here and There

Anticipations are that there will be an attendance of 500 Rotarians at the district convention to be held at the Cornwallis Inn, Kentville, N.S., June 1 and 2. It is expected that Sir John Bennett, of St. John's, Newfoundland, will address the convention.

Hon. Gordon S. Harrington, premier of Nova Scotia, accompanied by Mrs. Harrington, left Halifax recently for Montreal where they boarded S.S. Duchess of Bedford for a short holiday in the Old Country. During his absence, Hon. Percy C. Black will be acting premier of the province.

"It is not too much to say that any improvement in the revenues of the railroads will immediately make itself felt in all channels of trade and that the maintenance of railroad solvency will do more than any other domestic factor to restore strength to the nation's institutions," says an editorial in the Charleston, S. C., Post.

The "career open to merit" in railway affairs is well illustrated in the case of Charles H. Ewing, a railroader for 49 consecutive years, recently promoted president of the Reading Company. In 1883, at the age of 17, Ewing began his railroad career as a rodman in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway, now the Reading Company.

There were 447 moose and 3594 deer shot in New Brunswick last year, according to figures contained in the annual report of Chief Game Warden H. H. Ritchie to the provincial Minister of Lands and Forests. There was also a very successful partridge season with a bag of 44,469 birds.

Warmer weather and generally favorable conditions point to normal development of the western wheat crop, according to the report of the agricultural department of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Virtually all of Manitoba's seed is in and Saskatchewan and Alberta seeding will be completed by the end of the third week of May.

Two famous globe-trotters, Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, noted anthropologist, and Bob Davis, New York Sun's world-travelling correspondent, came together at Victoria recently on Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada, the former on his way to Peking and the latter travelling with Mrs. Davis to Honolulu.

Success attending the inaugural cruise of S.S. Princess Alice last year to northern British Columbia and Alaska has led the British Columbia Coast Steamship service to provide another special Alaska cruise with the S.S. Princess Charlotte, leaving August 9 from Vancouver. It is announced by E. F. L. Sturdee, general passenger agent, Canadian Pacific Railway.

Capital, Labor, the learned professions, diplomacy and business were all represented in the passenger list of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Australia on arrival at Quebec recently. The list included Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal; Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada; F. E. Meredith, K.C., Dr. Moser, consul-general for Czechoslovakia, and Colonel Hercule Barre, Canadian Government Trade Commissioner in Paris.

Residents of Maritime Provinces will have a fine opportunity of visiting Montreal's great Naval and Military Tournament, May 27-29, through a special low rate Canadian Pacific coach excursion leaving Saint John, Fredericton, Woodstock, St. Stephen and St. Andrew's May 27. Similar excursions over the same week-end are being operated by the railway from Vermont, and the Sudbury, Ontario, areas. (843) firm of Richard & E. J. Ryan, who, we are proud to acknowledge, are old county boys, and as such have met with considerable distinction in the building world.

SCHOOL CONSOLIDATION ASSURED

Very interesting addresses were delivered by Mayor Dobbie, W. Jackson, Revs. W. B. Rosborough, H. Cousens, F. W. Dyson, W. McGibbon, chairman of Brownsburg Consolidated School, Dr. Drew, Mr. Wm. Copeland.

Principal Hall when called upon by Dr. Mason, said he was very sensible of the honor conferred in being privileged to speak, for some two years ago, when considering changing places, he was led to Lachute because he had always heard it was a town where education was highly spoken of and as a second consideration that the town was recognized as one that had a good future. "All that I heard," said the speaker, "has proved true and while being personally fond of watching construction of buildings, I would have you feel that in our new construction we must not look upon it as a gilded tenement, but as a building for creating a new and true citizenship."

The Rev. Mr. Rosborough said this was a time when we could look to the past as well as to the future. The past was rich in historical interest and the speaker gave a brief outline of Lachute Academy, how it was established in Feb. 23rd., 1855 and incorporated on July 1st., 1856, eleven years before confederation. The old academy was erected in 1858 and occupied in 1859 with the Rev. Jno. Mackie in charge. In 1878 the old building was enlarged and in 1891-2 the present building was erected where it had been a centre of light and learning for over 40 years.

We should not forget the pioneers and those no longer here, who have made strong contributions to the growth and development of this fine old Academy. Now we look to the future and witness the initiation of another stage in its progress. It is hoped that the traditions of the past may be worthily maintained, and that it may fill increasingly a large and more important place in the life and thought of this community.

The Rev. Mr. Cousens spoke of the sacrifices made by early pioneers who had sowed where they never expected to reap and considered their greatest investment had been in the youth of their community. We are starting to write a new chapter and as we admire those men of the past we see the sacrifices highly revered, as we remember the men and women that are taking their places with distinction and honor.

Those paying this are building for a heritage, and the new structure will stand as a source of inspiration. The Commissioners give of their time and it is our sincere wish that the project will fill all desires and ambitions.

The Rev. Mr. Dyson bespoke the hearty co-operation of the people to get behind the Board and uphold them in their efforts to maintain the high standard of our Academy. He also spoke of cultivating a true civic pride and could not refrain from urging the town authorities to beautify our Main Street.

Mr. Wyman McGibbon, as chairman of the Brownsburg Consolidated School congratulated the ratepayers upon having such an aggressive Board.

Dr. J. M. Drew spoke of the excellent work done by the past commissioners especially that of the late G. F. Calder and Mr. J. W. McQuat who were ardent educationalists.

He also paid tribute to the teaching staff and to Principal Hall who, he said, was truly a builder of character. Dr. Drew stated that though there had been slight opposition from some sources, the argument was not well taken as the Government had given 50 p.c. of the cost and 30 years was extended over which to pay the balance.

Mr. Copeland, after an historical outline of the early Boards, was then made the centre of a group picture as he turned the sod and started operations for the new building, which is expected to be in readiness by September or early October.

Boys, 12 and under—Herbert Miles, Leslie Lloyd, Arthur Ashworth.

The Coleman Citizens' League has been formed to combat communism in the Crow's Nest Pass mining fields of Alberta, and similar organizations are being established in other towns of the region. Communism was responsible for some recent strikes in western mines, which unprejudiced observers maintained were uncalled for, especially in the present circumstances. The spirit of citizenship now in evidence should result in maintenance of order and a supervision of the distributing element, whose aim is destruction rather than construction.

Land Settlement as Relief Measure

Premier Tolmie of B. C. stated recently, according to the Municipal News of that province, that as soon as he received official advice outlining the Federal Government's plans he would consider steps to develop land settlement as part of the general relief programme. Announcement in Parliament that the Federal Government would include land settlement under its new unemployment legislation followed strong pressure from British Columbia in favor of this important new departure. Hon. R. W. Bruhn, Minister of Public Works, took the matter up personally with Premier Bennett in Ottawa recently, explaining that British Columbia feels that many unemployed could be far better placed on the land, than on roads or idle in relief.

Hon. N. S. Loughheed, Minister of Lands, has announced the formation of a special non-political committee to work on the proposed land settlement programme with a view of putting it into early execution.

This Committee will have full charge of the selection of families who are considered suitable for settlement purposes, and for land for their use. Most of the settlement will be concentrated in the Fraser Valley on government land, partially cleared or with only small second-growth on it.

Where this land is in rural municipalities, the municipal authorities will be asked to pay a third of the cost involved, instead of using a similar amount of money for direct relief, with no permanent results.

The programme is based generally on the principle of helping a man to establish himself on the land with the money which he would otherwise receive in direct relief. He will be given enough to build a house, and then a monthly allowance according to his family's size, such as he would receive otherwise in the form of direct relief.

Meanwhile he will devote himself to land clearing and getting in a crop of foodstuff which will help to maintain him and his dependents. Some men will sow a crop this year, others will be unable to grow anything until next year. It is expected that by the end of two years most of the families will be self-supporting to a large extent, and meanwhile will not have cost the treasury any more than if they were on direct relief in their present homes.

Where men abandon the land, after a year or two, the country will be repaid for its expense to some extent by the ownership of improved land, which can be sold to other settlers. Municipalities investing in the scheme will also be protected in this way.

Mr. Loughheed emphasizes the fact that the success of the programme will depend primarily on the selection of the right men and the right lands. There was no use in placing unsuitable men on the land, since they could not make a success of agriculture under any conditions. The expert knowledge of the special settlement committee is relied upon to handle these problems.

Meanwhile, Mr. Loughheed has written to every municipal council in the Fraser Valley of B. C. urging it to keep its settlers on the land rather than allow them to drift into cities or apply for admission to government employment camps. Where necessary the Government is giving direct relief in the form of supplies to poor settlers and urging them to put in a crop this year.

"Every man on the land today ought to stay there," he writes. "If we can hold our present preference in the British market as a result of the Imperial Conference, and I am confident we can, we should be able to sell all our agricultural products this year. Despite low prices, this undoubtedly is the time for the man on the land to stay there and grow a crop. To this end the Government is doing everything possible and we certainly will welcome any federal assistance. I have made it clear to the municipal authorities of the farming districts that there is no reason for any family on the land to go hungry. We have money for direct relief of that sort, and we do not know where it can be better used than in keeping settlers on their places improving them and producing a crop."

The summer season at Tadoussac officially commenced on June 25, with the opening for the summer of the Hotel Tadoussac here, and many members of the summer colony are expected to arrive on the steamer calling at this summer resort.

A few of the summer cottages are already occupied and since the opening of the Canada Steamship Lines Montreal-Saguenay River service more cottagers have been arriving every week. With the opening of the hotel and the regular steamer service four times a week the holiday season is in full swing. Tadoussac has enjoyed increasing popularity during the past few seasons and has become particularly popular as a family holiday resort. The fine bathing beach on Tadoussac Bay and the facilities for bathing and swimming have made it the ideal resort for children and those who are seeking a quiet and restful holiday. Although easily accessible by steamer and car as it is located only a few miles east of Murray

Bay and the Manoir Richelieu, Tadoussac remains almost untouched by modern civilization and attracts many visitors each season from eastern Canada and the United States.

Tadoussac is a port of call on the famous Saguenay River cruise and the proof of this quaint little French Canadian village's instant appeal is shown by the number of steamer passengers who after a passing glimpse of Tadoussac's picturesque surroundings arrange to stop over in this unique Quebec summer resort.

John Leslie Retires

1. John Leslie. 2. E. E. Lloyd. 3. L. B. Unwin. 4. E. A. Leslie.

John Leslie, Vice President of Finance and Treasurer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, after more than 53 years of service with that Company and its subsidiaries will retire from office under pension rules, on July 1st, according to an announcement made by E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President. Mr. Leslie will be succeeded by Mr. E. E. Lloyd, presently Comptroller of the Company. L. B. Unwin, Assistant Comptroller, will be appointed Comptroller and E. A. Leslie, Assistant Comptroller, will be appointed Deputy Comptroller. "The Directors and myself desire to record our appreciation of Mr. Leslie's long, loyal and efficient service," Mr. Beatty said in announcing Mr. Leslie's retirement. Mr. Leslie has given a lifetime to railway work in this country. He became a railroader as a boy of 16, when in March, 1877 he entered the service of the Toronto Grey & Bruce Railway, as a junior clerk in their Toronto office. He became Vice President and Comptroller, Montreal in January 1926, and Vice President in charge of Finance, and Treasurer on February 10th, 1928.

break of the world war. He early answered the call to arms by enlisting in the first Contingent. Mr. Unwin was awarded the Military Cross, earned his majority, being demobilized with that rank in April, 1919. On July 2, 1926, he was made Assistant Auditor of Miscellaneous Accounts, and on February 10th, 1928, he was appointed Assistant Comptroller.

Mr. Lloyd, who succeeds Mr. Leslie as Vice President and Treasurer commenced his railroad career with the Canadian Pacific at Winnipeg in December, 1887, when he became a clerk in the Stores Department. He became Auditor of Stores & Mechanical Accounts at Montreal, in December, 1904; and after holding different posts in that department, became Auditor of Disbursements in March 1918; Assistant Comptroller in February 1921, and Comptroller in February 1928.

Mr. Unwin, who succeeds Mr. Lloyd, was first a clerk in the office of the Assistant Superintendent at Chapeau, Ontario, in 1908 and served at Chapeau, White River and Schreiber until the out-

ANSWERS TO "DO YOU KNOW"

1. Dry farming is a scientific farming of land where there is a limited or unfavourable distribution of rainfall. Irrigation is not practised, the fertility and moisture of the soil being managed by a system of deep cultivation, rotation of crops and the plowing in of green crops.

2. A silo should not be less than 30 ft. high, the height being two and a half to three times the diameter.

3. The character of their growth indicates the quality of the soil. Wild carrot and the ox-eye daisy grow only upon poor soils, or soils that have been robbed of their fertility. Sheep sorrel indicates acid land, the necessity of applying lime to sweeten the soil. Bracken, sedge and moss show that the land needs drainage. Dark green foliage and large size plant and leaf are good indications of abundance of nitrogenous food in the soil, while yellowish foliage and sparse stringy growth shows lack of this material.

4. Barberry bushes harbour a rust that attacks wheat. For that reason they are undesirable in wheat growing sections.

5. If corn is dipped into tar pitch before sowing, the cows will not eat it. Allow a pint of tar to one-half a bushel of corn. Put the corn in a measure, pour in the tar, and stir until every kernel has come in contact with the tar.

Mrs. James Calder, of Montreal, was the guest of her mother, Mrs. Robert Hamilton, the early part of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mahon, Mrs. Jas. Mahon and Mrs. F. Javalagh of Trenton, N. J., were recent guests of Mrs. D. Dixon.

Miss Jessie E. Walker has left for Jonquière, where she will spend several weeks with her brother Major F. C. Walker.

Mrs. Allan Muir who has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Cruise, left last week for her home in Lynchburg, Va.

Mrs. John Cruise entertained the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lachute Baptist Church at an afternoon tea on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hodge and family and Mr. Charlie Lister spent the week-end visiting friends in Ottawa.

Mrs. Stanley Holt and Mrs. J. Turney of Brownsburg, were in Montreal, the early part of this week, attending the Supreme Grand Lodge of the L.O.B.A. of British America.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker McArthur and Miss Willow Lavery, were in Montreal the early part of this week, attending the funerals of the late Mrs. Tyler and the late Mr. Murray.

Miss Gabrielle Joly, who is sailing aboard the New Northland with the Montreal University, left last Tuesday for a cruise of ten days around the St. Lawrence Gulf.

A Matinee will be held at the Rex Theatre, for children on Monday, July 4th. "Tarzan the Ape Man" also Our Gang in "Choo-Choo" and Pearl and the Devil Fish will be shown. Admission 15c.

We are pleased to note that Mr. Jules Lefebvre, fourth son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lefebvre has received his B.A. at Bourget College, Rigaud, Que. He intends taking up a course in Civil Engineering.

L. B. Roberts, of Cobourg, Ont., wishes to announce that he is re-opening the Black and White Tea Room and Restaurant on the No. 8 Montreal Highway, 1 1/4 miles east of Lachute, and trusts to receive a generous patronage. Good service assured. Free parking grounds.

Dr. and Mrs. N. H. Touchet, accompanied by their daughter Miss Gilberte, and two sons Edmour and Lucien, motored from Duck Lake, Sas., a distance of 2,800 miles in five days. They are the guests of his cousin, Dr. J. O. Touchet and will later visit relatives in Montreal and Beauharnois.

Lake Louisa seems to be gaining in popularity and this year a number of new cottages are being built. With the growth of the summer population Mr. Habib, of Brownsburg, has risen to the occasion and now has an up-to-date store with all necessary camping requisites. Daily delivery and prompt and obliging service now make the holidays there much more enjoyable. If going for only the week-end phone Mr. Habib, at Brownsburg, and your order will be ready.

GOLDEN WEDDING

We extend our congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Paul, of Saranac Lake, who this week celebrate their 50th. wedding anniversary. They are spending the summer with their daughter, Mrs. McTavish, of Germantown, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Paul were former residents of Lachute, and have many warm friends in this vicinity who join with us in good wishes for their happiness.

DECORATION DAY

On Sunday last the Independent Order of Oddfellows from Laurentian Lodge, No. 14, held their annual Decoration Service. Some 60 members and visitors assembled at the Lodge Rooms, bringing bouquets of flowers, which with a memorial flag were placed at the head of each brother's grave. After the service at Lachute, the same token of respect was paid to departed brethren at the St. Andrews and Dalesville Cemeteries.

FLOWER MISSION

To those who sent flowers on Tuesday, many thanks. Next Tuesday will see our branch in full swing, so please be on hand early with your bunches. Wild flowers are very welcome, and put in with them grasses and live-for-ever, for they continue to keep green and grow when the flowers are faded.

K. Massiah.

MORIN HEIGHTS.

There will be a Food Sale at the United Church on Saturday, the second of July.

The Annual School Closing of our Intermediate School took place on Monday, the 27th., with Rev. Baugh in the chair. The Auditorium was filled to capacity with parents, children and friends. The Chairman called upon Mrs. J. E. Seale to distribute the various prizes, which had been given by the teachers,
The School Board, the W. I. and Mr. W. H. Payne.

The fact was mentioned, with regret, that our principal, Miss Shaw, was leaving us to become principal at Hemmingford. Under her direction, during the past two years, better progress than ever has been made, especially in discipline and deportment. Miss Ruth Simon is leaving to teach in her home town, Arundel. She has made many friends during her year in Morin. Miss Scott, of Lachute, remains and will be promoted from the Elementary to the Middle Dept.

There will also be a male teacher
as principal next term. Mr.
Fred Baldwin was congratulated upon maintaining the School premises on fine condition at all times; also Mr. Fred Kennedy, of the transportation departments who had rigorously adhered to his motto: "Never absent, never late." An enjoyable time was spent by all in attendance.

Bishop Farthing will be at Holy Trinity Church, Morin at 8.30 D.S.T., Tuesday night, and at Christ Church, Mille Isles, on Wednesday morning 10 a.m.
Standard time. July 5th. and 6th. respectively.

Ottawa Exhibition

United States Marine Band Will Be Feature Musical Offering.
First Time In Canada.

From Ottawa comes the announcement that the directors of the Central Canada Exhibition Association have made exceptional plans to ensure this year's annual exhibition being of a standard to delight not only the regular patrons but also the visitors who will be attracted to the Capital by the Imperial Economic Conference. Nothing has been curtailed, in fact, attractions have been planned on a more generous scale than usual.

The exhibition is for one full week, August 22 to 27. The prize lists which are now off the press show generous provision in prizes for all departments, livestock, poultry, dairy, agricultural and horticultural,
handicrafts and arts, dog show,
etc. On account of the Imperial Conference, Empire exhibits & displays by Canadian manufacturers will be given special prominence.

For several years the Ottawa exhibition has featured a band for concerts each afternoon and evening from the bandstand in the grounds without any extra charge to patrons of the exhibition. This year the directors make the most important announcement since the policy was inaugurated; the engagement of the United States Marine Band of Washington.

The Marine Band is the most important of United States military bands. In addition to playing martial music for marching Marines, this famed organization has played for presidential balls, weddings at the White House, events of national importance, not only on gala days but on days of national bereavement. In its annual tours it has visited practically every state in the Union but its appearance in Ottawa will be its first official visit outside the United States, and the first opportunity to hear it in Canada except over the radio.

The band is composed of 75 artists under the direction of Taylor Branson and will come to Ottawa direct from Washington in special cars. Two concerts will be given each day, one in the late afternoon and the other in the early evening, during exhibition week. Since Jefferson's Day, it has played at every inauguration when the ceremony called for the presence of a band. Every President has called upon it to play for functions at the White House and all have praised its efforts. From 1798 there have been seventeen leaders, including John Philip Sousa from 1886 to 1892. Taylor Branson was appointed in 1927.

Owing to the band being the largest ever heard in Ottawa,
the bandstand will have to be enlarged for the occasion but this will be done in a way to preserve the acoustic properties.
Were it for the band alone, exhibition visitors would be more than repaid but every other factor in the big exhibition, where at all possible, will be of a higher standard than in previous years.

This year the special rates arranged by railways and bus lines will encourage more than the usual number of visitors from this district. Literature prize lists, literature dealing with the various features of the exhibition and any information desired may be obtained by writing H. H. McElroy, secretary and manager, Central Canada Exhibition, Ottawa.

One of the things being said
by the Democrats about President Hoover is that he is the greatest engineer the world ever saw because "he has drained, dammed and ditched the United States." (Tara Leader.)

PUBLIC HEALTH

It has been expected that the health of the public would suffer because of the depression, as people could not buy proper food. Undoubtedly this has occurred under some conditions.
However, those who have had their food supplied by relief come under the observation of Social Service workers, are found to be improved in health, because they have been supplied with properly balanced foods.
Relief work has been under the supervision of dietitians and the food has not been chosen hit-or-miss, but has been chosen to give adequate calories and properly balanced meals. Much to everyone's surprise, the people supplied with these meals, are in a healthier condition than ever before.

It is to be hoped that this supervised purchasing of food
may have a lasting good effect.
The less money there was to spend on food the less they knew about it, seems to be the usual condition. This experience has shown that it is not necessary to spend a large amount of money for healthful food, for certainly the relief menus could not be accused of being extravagant.

THE CONTAGION OF TIDINESS

Have you ever noticed when driving through the country, that there will be stretches of prosperous looking places; large barns, comfortable houses, with lawns, verandahs, trees and flowers? Well cared for, prosperous-looking places. It will not only be one farm, but every farm in the neighborhood. Drive along a bit farther and you will find just the opposite. Smaller places, poor-looking barns, no lawns or gardens and not a lick of paint to be seen. What causes the difference? Apparently, soil conditions are the same in both stretches of land and there should be the same opportunity for prosperity. Is it because there is one ambitious farmer in the neighborhood, who fixes up his place, believes in paint, and manages to find time to keep his surroundings from looking neglected. When one place is looking well cared, it fires the ambition of the surrounding owners and they fix up their places, too. When several of them are all spick and span it shames the rest. That is the only reason I can see. Tidiness and neglect both, are slightly contagious.

ICE CREAM

Ice cream time has arrived and is there anything more delicious than good ice cream?
Mothers are at a loss frequently to know how much ice cream to allow their children to have. Ice cream is a good food as it is made from milk, cream, eggs, gelatine, sugar, and flavoring.

Like every other milk product, it must be clean to be safe. Ice cream which has melted and is frozen again is dangerous. That fact is recognized now and it is seldom done as it was at one time.

Ice cream is a very good dessert and it is a wise plan to satisfy the children's hunger for it by serving it frequently. The chief danger of ice cream for children is that they eat it between meals and so spoil their appetites for their proper meals.
It is better for them to spend their pennies on an ice cream cone than on candies, popcorn and so on. The best time to have it is after a meal as then it will not spoil the next meal.

Ice cream is a good food as it contains vitamins, minerals, and from 200 to 300 calories a portion, depending on the richness of the ice cream. There are many delicious sauces which add to the flavor and the nutritive value of ice cream. The fortunate owners of electric refrigerators are making a great variety of frozen desserts. One of my friends keeps a trayful of plain ice cream in her electric refrigerator all the time so that the children can have it when ever they feel like it. As soon as one lot is finished she makes another. How many children are lucky.

STRAWBERRY SAUCE

Crush fresh strawberries and sweeten to taste. Chill and let stand for at least an hour to ripen. This is delicious in ice cream and it is one of our favorite desserts served in another way. Simply put the crushed and sweetened strawberries in sherbet glasses and top with sweetened cream.

COLD STRAWBERRY SAUCE

Hull, wash and drain a basket of ripe strawberries and press them through a ricer. Boil together three quarters cup sugar and half a cup of water for ten minutes. Let cool and add the strawberry pulp. This sauce is delicious served on Cottage Pudding.

CHOCOLATE SAUCE

1 square chocolate or 3 tablespoons cocoa
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1/4 teaspoon vanilla
Melt chocolate add sugar, butter, and water. Let boil five minutes, cool slightly and add vanilla.

GINGER ALE SAUCE

Whip 1/2 cup cream. Stir in 1 cup chilled ginger ale and 1/2 cup chopped nuts.

Here and There

Captain L. D. Douglas, R.N.R., recently named commander of the Pacific speed Queen, the Empress of Japan, largest of Canadian Pacific liners on the Pacific, recently brought his 25,000-ton charge alongside Pier B, Vancouver within 44 minutes of the Pacific record.

His Excellency Rana Phagat Chandra Bahadur, Rajah of Jub-bal, was a traveller on the Empress of Japan from the Far East, recently. He might have been taken for any business man but for the presence of his wife, daughter of

Why Miss Lillian Loughton's Strawberry Shortcake* is famous

"I use Magic Baking Powder," says Miss Lillian Loughton, Dietitian and Cookery Expert of the Canadian Magazine. "My successful baking results are due in large part to its freshness, uniformity, and consistent high quality."

"My own recipes are planned for Magic, and I recommend it for all recipes calling for baking powder."

Miss Loughton's high praise confirms the judgment of other Canadian dietitians and cookery experts. The majority of them use Magic exclusively, because it gives consistently better baking results.

Magic is first choice of Canadian housewives, too. It outsells all other baking powders combined!

*STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE
2 cups pastry flour
(or 1 1/2 cups bread flour)
4 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg 3/4 cup milk

Sift together the dry ingredients; rub in shortening till very fine; add sugar. Beat egg and pour with the chilled milk to make soft dough (but not too soft to hold its shape when baked). Turn the dough onto a floured board, roll lightly to one-third inch thickness. Cut out with a round cutter. Brush one round with melted butter; place another round on it; bake in hot oven. Split, fill with fresh berries slightly sweetened. Put top round on and pile whipped cream over it, decorating with whole berries.

FREE COOK BOOK—When you bake at home, the new Magic Cook Book will give you dozens of delicious recipes. Write to Standard Brands Ltd., Fraser Ave. & Liberty St., Toronto, Ont.

HEART OF THE NORTH

BY
WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of bandits in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomerie, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits set away with gold dust and choice furs.

CHAPTER II—Corporal Bill Hardcock brings the news of the crime to present Alan Baker at the Mounted office post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, Alan starts out after the bandits in his big police launch with the corporal and four constables.

CHAPTER III—Reaching the Midnight Sun, they stop long enough for Alan to board her and consult witnesses of the crime. Alan asks the skipper to put Jimmy Montgomerie's orphaned four-year-old daughter off at Fort Endurance and leave her in the care of Alan's fiancée, Elizabeth Spaulding. At the MacMillan trading post on the Big Alouka, Joyce MacMillan is alone, awaiting the return of Dave, her father, from a fur-buying trip. She is thrilled when the police launch ties up there for the night, as she has not seen Alan Baker for months. Secretly she had hoped to marry him; then she was stunned by the news of his engagement to Elizabeth. She is happy now to perceive from his halting talk that the planned marriage is not definitely certain.

Twice more that morning, between Pedneault's reckless dashes, he hurried ashore and futilely searched the beach. Something had gone wrong. The patrol should be within sight of them. Estimating their speed and the speed of the pursuing launch, he knew the police craft should have overhauled them about eight miles above the MacMillan trading post. He had some a hundred and twenty, and no sight of them yet. They had either lodged aside, or had done something to give them a big edge over what he thought possible.

It was afterward, when the waters of the Alouka had given up their hastily secret, that Joyce MacMillan listened to the accounts of several "yellowknife men" and gazed upon certain grim evidence, and pieced together the story of how those bandits were able to keep in the lead. But Alan knew nothing of that harrowing story now; he knew only that something had upset all his calculations.

Fifteen miles from the Alouka Forks he went ashore a last time and climbed a squat tree. He had a clear view to the Forks. The glasses picked up a sight that set his heart pounding madly against his ribs.

Far ahead, three short miles from the Forks of the Alouka, a pair of tiny black objects, like bugs crawling along a silver ribbon.

He jumped out of the tree, leaped down the slope. Splashing aboard, he flung all caution to the winds. "Throw into it, Pedneault! We've got to beat them to the Forks. We'll close in on them in the launch. Got to! They'll hear us but they won't stop, won't fight, if they can make it there. Open her up! To—h—l with rocks and mud bars now!"

His last words were drowned in the engine roar as Pedneault opened out the launch. With the wind stinging his eyes and the spray lashing him, Alan clutched the painter to keep from being flung bodily overboard, and gave Pedneault what help he could.

The craft careened around the last bend, a scant mile from the great Y of the Alouka. A clear open stretch lay in front. Dashing the blinding spray from his eyes, Alan rose precariously to his feet, looked ahead; and his heart sank as the truth was borne in upon him.

Those canoes had beaten him to the Forks.

It was maddening, his defeat—doubly maddening for its closeness to a smashing triumph. He had come within five minutes of overhauling them in the launch, and then had missed, had missed by a mile that loomed gigantic as two hundred. They had beaten him. They had heard the thundering boat, had flung their whole strength into the race; and now were whipping on eastward along one or other of the Alouka branches.

The launch would have to be abandoned at the Forks. He knew the police boat would be stranded or wrecked within half a mile if it attempted to go up either of those shallow streams. He would have to take to paddle canoes and split his party.

Unbeaten, he planned swiftly. The chances were ten to one that the bandits had darted up the left branch leading northeast into the Thal-Azzah. He decided quickly: "I'll follow that left branch. I'll take one canoe and two men. I'll take Bill with me; he's a red-haired devil in a fight, he's our best shot, he'll be dependable in whatever comes. But the third man—Ped or Larry?" Both splendid men, both experienced veterans of many a patrol. He made up his mind: "I'll send Ped up the right branch with Burgoon and Whipple. Bill and Larry and I'll shoot up the left. We'll be the ones to do the business."

As the great Y of the Alouka loomed up, he turned and gestured to Hardcock and Larry. Silently understanding, they crept back to the stern deck, unslashed the canoes and had them ready by the time that Pedneault, slowing down the launch, steered it in between two little willow stands at the Forks and stopped.

Alan ordered him: "Ped take these two men and whip up the south branch. Larry and Bill and I'll cover the north. If you sight them, don't pitch into that back. You'd be fighting six men single-handed. If they did happen to go that way, you drop back here to the Forks and wait for us. We'll be able to track them in that timber country. Let's pile out. They can't be over a mile and a half away."

Bill snarled: "H—l's blue blazes. Alan—let's stick together. Us splitting this up like this, it's the d—dest fool trick I ever heard of!"

"Shut up!" Alan snapped. "General's orders, not mine. Every d—d thing you say or do will be tattled to him." He tossed the launch anchor into the mud. "I said pile out. Let's be moving." He stepped down into a canoe, stood rifle between his knees, caught up a paddle.

Cursing beneath their breath, Bill and Larry clambered in with him. The two canoes separated.

Alan's estimate that his quarry could not be more than a mile and a half in the lead, was true enough; but a term chase is a long chase, and if those bandits were aching from exhaustion, they had the fear of death in their hearts to goad them on.

A whole hour, an hour of terrible labor, went by, and still no sight or sound of the bandits. With the responsibility of this patrol on him, with human lives, the lives of comrades, at stake, a fear gripped Alan that those bandits had taken the south branch of the Alouka. If they had, Frank Pedneault and those two raw recruits might run into an ambush; or Ped might attack them, reckless fellow that he was, practically lone-handed, and get killed.

The chase was entering the Thal-Azzah itself, that watery wilderness of lakes and labyrinthine channels and muskeg thousands of square miles in extent. Not far ahead the branch split into a dozen channels leading in every direction. Pursuit would end there. A few miles more, and those canoes would be swallowed up in the watery oblivion of the Thal-Azzah.

But then, as he skirled around a headland, his prophecy yesterday to Haskell, and his conviction, founded on long man-hunting experience, that those bandits would surely follow this left branch, were suddenly proved true to the letter. On ahead, a scant thousand yards, he caught one fleeting glimpse of two heavily laden canoes that carried six men.

Dipping faster, deeper, he and Bill and Larry paddled at a furious pace to come up within rifle range. The river was so winding that they could see only a few hundred yards in front. There was danger, a terrible danger, of running headlong into a blind ambush where all three of them would be killed outright and their canoes sunk before they even could start to shoot back. Every stroke, every curve, every clump of flags they skimmed close past, was a deadly peril. They knew it, but they dared not slow up. They were taking their chances.

As they skirled out upon a shallow little lake fringed about with tall flags, Larry suddenly heaved back on his paddle.

"Lift out! Look! Alan, look over there!"

Larry, a dozen steps in the lead, glimpsed the silvery sheen of water ahead; and stopping dead-short, motioned Bill and Larry to be cautious. They heeled forward toward the lake edge where the flags were thin and they had clear view.

After several minutes of waiting, Larry pointed across the lake and stated quietly:

"You see that big patch of brownish bugs over there, about thirty or forty yards back from the water? See that little run leading back into them? That's where our men are hiding. They're laying low along that little run. I just noticed a rat start up that run. He came back in a hurry. Then, here's a silent spot over there where I don't hear any bird or animal calls, and then some other signs."

He was silent for half a minute. Finally he whispered: "I'll show you a sign. You see that pair of canvas-backs a-coming this way? They're flying low, making for this lake. Canvas-backs like blue water. Watch 'em close."

Skimming just over the flags, the pair of graceful ducks came on; but just as they stopped beating and started the glide down upon the lake, they suddenly breasted high up in the air exactly over the spot Larry had indicated. Veering away, they winged swiftly out of sight into the west.

Lying there in the reeds and bog, Alan studied the bandit covert and tried to plan. If all five of his men had been along with him, the outcome would have been swift and certain. He could have come at the bandits from either side, cut off any chance of escape, boxed them between two fires and deliberately shot them down. But he had split his party at the Alouka Forks, as Haskell ordered. Now, at the crucial hour here in the Thal-Azzah, Pedneault and those other two men uselessly following that south branch were a hundred and forty miles away.

He planned, rejected and planned again, and finally came to a decision. "We've got to carry the fight to them, and we've got to keep them from getting away by that creek yonder. There's only one way we can do both those things. Bill and I are going to circle around them on foot and come at them from the other side. We'll get there somehow, even if we have to swim part way. With any luck at all we ought to get into a position where we can put two or three of them out of business at the very beginning, before they wake up to us. They won't fight if they can help it. Why should they take chances on some of them getting wounded or killed, if they don't have to? They'll try to whip back across this lake and lodge into that channel yonder. Now, Larry, you'll stay here to head that off. Keep out of sight yourself; have a couple or three extra magazines handy, and wait till they get into the middle. When they get in good range, open up on them. Sink those canoes. We don't care about those men. Let them swim ashore and hide if they want to. On foot a man can't make ten miles a week in this muskrat country. With no tent, no shelter, the mosquitoes and flies would drive them crazy in less than a day, and they'd fall into our hands. If you understand now what's cut out for us, we'll be starting."

Both men nodded.

Bill and Alan backed away with infinite caution, for one flushing waterfowl would raise all the others. Yard by cautious yard the two men slipped back into the rushes till they were a safe distance from the lake.

Then they began the long hard job of circling around the bandits.

Wet, muddy, tortured by insect pests, they pushed steadily on, mindful of coming twilight.

It took an hour and a half to make the wide careful circle and start coming in toward the bandits from the north. With the sun cut in two by the western horizon and the chill of twilight in the air, those six men would shortly be on the move. But Alan's hopes had risen again; it seemed that he indeed "had taken his luck along." The bandits did not know they were being stalked. In half an hour more, if luck held, he and Bill would be in position to open on them all unawares.

Dropping at last to hands and knees, the two of them crawled along through muck and water, keeping only their guns dry. They came up within a hundred yards of their quarry.

The little creek took Alan's party a thousand yards north to a lake, a deep blue lake covering several acres; and there, within the Thal-Azzah itself, late in the afternoon, the long relentless chase came to its end.

CHILDHOOD AND EDUCATION OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2:1-10; Acts 7:19-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby Moses. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Slave Boy Rescued by a Princess.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Preparing for Life's Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Influence of a Godly Home.

I. Moses' Parentage (v. 1).

Both father and mother were of Levitical stock. Being from the same tribe, they had a common bond of interest and sympathy. Amram had the good judgment to choose for a wife a woman who had sympathies and ambitions in harmony with his own.

II. Moses' Birth (v. 2).

Two children, Aaron and Miriam, were born to Amram and Jochebed before Moses. However, Moses was the first one that his mother was assured was to be the deliverer of the chosen people. There was something striking about this child which caused her to believe that it was sent of God. She saw that he was a "goodly child." In Stephen's speech (Acts 7:20) he asserts that the child was "exceeding fair." No doubt his mother believed him to be the deliverer of his people and instilled that truth in his mind from childhood. Because of this belief, she had confidence that somehow God would save him from the cruel decree of the king.

III. Moses' Preservation (vv. 3-8).

Though Pharaoh's edict was in force Jochebed's faith was such as to cause her to ignore it and hide Moses for three months. The hiding of the child was not because of fear, but because of faith (Heb. 11:23). It was her faith that made her brave to ignore the king's order. The unfailing antidote for human fear is a vital faith in the living God (Ps. 27:1).

1. Placed in an ark (v. 3). Perhaps the story of how Noah and his family were saved in the ark suggested to his mother the expedient used, namely, the ark of bulrushes.

2. Ark placed in the flags by the river (v. 3). Doubtless she was familiar with the place where Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe. She placed the ark at the particular place where it would attract attention.

3. Miriam watching (v. 4). She was, no doubt, stationed here by her mother. It is interesting to note the steps, as pointed out by another, by which God's plan was carried out:

a. A mother's wit (vv. 3, 4). She devised the ark and placed the baby in it at the proper place and at the opportune time. She also instructed Miriam as to her action.

b. A woman's curiosity (v. 5). The strange object among the flags attracted the attention of Pharaoh's daughter, and she directed her maids to bring it to her.

c. A woman's compassion (v. 6). When the ark was brought and opened, the baby wept. The true woman is always moved with compassion at the cry of a motherless baby.

d. A baby's tears (v. 6). The tears of Moses aroused the womanly instinct of Pharaoh's daughter and she was therefore susceptible to the suggestion as to the care of the baby.

e. A faithful sister (v. 7). Miriam's question was in the form of a suggestion as to a nurse for the baby from among the Hebrew women. This suggestion met a willing response and Miriam called the child's mother. In the providence of God we see that Jochebed was hired to nurse her own child. The best nurse possible for a child is its own mother.

IV. Moses' Education (vv. 8, 10, cf. Acts 7:20-22).

1. At his mother's knee (v. 9). We thus see his education began at the proper time and at the proper place. It was during this period that his character took form. Here his mind was filled with the Word of God and he was made acquainted with the Jewish hopes and prospects. In these early years, no doubt, the indomitable purpose was fixed, to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season (Heb. 11:24-26).

2. Adopted by Pharaoh's daughter (v. 10). At the proper time Moses was brought unto Pharaoh's daughter and adopted as her son. She called him "Moses," which means "drawn out," "because," said she, "I drew him out of the water."

3. Educated in the Egyptian court (v. 10). It was here that he became acquainted with the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7:20-22). This was of great importance. It peculiarly qualified him to be the law giver and the historian of his people.

Small Offenses

A very small offense may be a just cause for great resentment; it is often much less the particular instance which is obnoxious to us, than the proof it carries with it of the general tenor and disposition of the mind from whence it sprang.—Greville.

To Plead Our Cause

"We have a God in heaven for our father, and a son by his side to plead our cause, and a divine executive on earth to look after our interests."

ST. JEROME WARNS AGAINST SPEEDING

A war against motorists who do not decrease their speed while travelling through St. Jerome is being waged by authorities of that municipality. A letter despatched by the town clerk to the Royal Automobile Club of Canada has requested the Club to notify its members accordingly.

Has it "QUICKENED" Pick-up?
Has it "REDUCED" Knocking?
Has it "INCREASED" Speed?
Has it "IMPROVED" Power?
