Wedding Reception at Lakefield

Over ninety guests were present at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tomalty of Lakefield, on Tuesday evening, June 30th., when they gave a reception in honour of their son, Lyall J. Tomalty, and his bride, of Detroit, Michigan.

The bride wore her wedding gown of white pointed d'esprit with a long frilled skirt and a lovely necklace of pearls, the gift of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Tomalty received the guests in the living room which was prettily decorated in pink and white with large bouquets of peonies and myosotis.

The dining room was daintily decorated in green and white with a wedding bell over the center of the bride's table. Mrs. George Cresswell, cousin of the groom, poured the tea, and Mrs. Edgar Morrow the coffee; Mrs. Gordon Arnott and Mrs. Wm. Tomalty cut the cakes and ices, while those assisting in serving were Messrs. Robert Tomalty, Edgar Morrow, Gordon Tomalty and Gordon Hynes. The bride cut the bridal cake and Mr. Albert Tomalty proposed the toast to the bride, which was answered by the groom.

There were many beautiful gifts of china, cut glass, silver and linen and several cheques. All joined in wishing for the bride and groom much happiness in the future.

After a honeymoon spent in Lakefield and vicinity, Mr. and Mrs. Tomalty will drive back to Detroit, where they will make their home.

Brandon 50 Years a City

In the Lachute Watchman file of June 30, 1882, just 50 years ago, it is noted: "Brandon, Manitoba, is now an incorporated city. The election of its first board of aldermen takes place today."

Prominent Opera Singer Vacationing in County

ALFREDO TOMASINI is Popular Here, in the Person of Mr. ANLON YOUNG, Summer Resident of St. Andrews.

In the unassuming and sociable personality of Mr. Young, now well known in the St. Andrews East neighborhood, The Watchman was privileged to become acquainted with a star of European and New-world Opera better known in his profession as Alfredo Tomasini, baritone.

Argenteuil folks have already been thrilled, on recent occasions, by the unusual quality, power, and control of this rich baritone; but perhaps in their appreciation they have little suspected the years of hard training, the run of successes and enviable honors to the credit of their quiet and unaffected entertainer.

Alfredo Tomasini made his debut into opera in 1926 at the Royal Opera House, Malta; and his career has since numbered many triumphs in the principal operatic roles of Europe's best presentations, and also in the United States. But it was as plain Mr. Young, of Winnipeg, that our friend first had the notion to take his singing seriously. As Mr. Young, too, he served the colors with the 10th. Winnipeg Battalion, and lent—together with his no mean physique—an unusual vocal talent, to the cause of victory and good cheer in Flanders. Returning to Canada, Mr. Young enlisted for further conquests in the Dumbells of Montreal, and serving with them for four years, began to make singing his whole vocation and profession. He went abroad and studied for another four years in Italy, and with success assured after his Malta performance, returned as Alfredo Tomasini to follow his career in Italy's important cultural centres. He sang in the principal Opera Houses, and subsequently accepted engagements with the Italian Opera Company and the Covent Garden Opera House, London.

While in London, Tomasini appeared before the public with such noted artists as Bachuse, pianist; Mark Hamburg, pianist; Sala, the Spanish cellist; and Pampanini, now leading soprano of the Chicago Opera Company.

Concluding these engagements he returned once more to Italy and established a connection with Signor Ferone, who formed an Opera Company composed of artists from the famous La Scala and the Royal Theatre of Rome. This party was sent to Northern Europe in engagements with the various governments. Tomasini—or Mr. Young, as he is better known to this community—recalls among his successes of the past ten years, performances at Staat's Opera in Regia (Latvia), in Tallin (Estonia), Helsingfors (Finland), and Breslau (Germany). Furthermore, he has been honored to sing before the royalty of several countries. But apart from his many engagements as principal baritone perhaps he counts one of his greatest triumphs in being selected to create the leading role in an entirely new opera, "La Samaritana," composed by Maestro Gusimini.

The singer continued his public performances last year in the United States, appearing in concert and in opera; and only last winter scored an outstanding success in a benefit performance

Verdun Scouts in Camp Hold Sing-Song

Public Welcomed to Camp-fire Festivity

The visit of a troop of Boy Scouts from Verdun gave to many in this vicinity an opportunity of learning a good deal of the Boy Scout Movement which is proving such a benefit to our boys, especially of the teen age. For it is during this period that the habits of the man-to-be are in process of consolidation or reformation, and wise direction at this crucial period in his history makes for the evolution of the ideal citizen.

The ideal of—"Each for all and all for each" will do much to bring into action the needed brotherhood of the world, so that safe and sane ideas of personal responsibility will make this world a better place to live and work in. It is the happy combination of work, play, and good comradeship that gives the ideal recreation for the growing boy.

Those who accepted the invitation to the general public by Scout master Mr. Dave Morwood and his assistant, Mr. Allan Corner, were not only delighted but surprised at the versatility of talent displayed by the troop and its leaders at the Boy Scouts' sing-song and social At Home. It was at the camp fire, situated at the camp-site on Mr. T. McGregor's farm, that a most enjoyable time was spent. Songs, sketches, choruses and recitations rounded out a programme most suitable to the time and place.

It would be impossible in the space available to give details, but the topical local choruses certainly pleased everybody. And Alouette the original, sung by Dr. Drew and the assembly, followed by the Scouts' version "All you eat" (pronounced All-you-et), giving various items of the bill-of-fare partaken of by the boys while in camp, met with hearty approval.

It is hoped that more city troops will avail themselves of a chance to camp in such an ideal place. May the Scouts enjoy life always as Lachute folks have enjoyed their presence here among us.

at the New York Metropolitan Opera House. Today Signor Tomasini includes 35 operas in his repertoire.

This noted singer, once again in the unassuming role of Mr. Anlon Young, is now spending the summer at Mr. Allan Murray's residence in St. Andrews East. Next Sunday, local churchgoers will be privileged to hear

Lachute Odd Fellows Install Officers

Big Attendance from Montreal.

Laurentian Lodge, No. 14 was indeed fortunate on Tuesday evening last when at the Semi-Annual Installation of Officers a large delegation motored up from Montreal. Some 75 visitors along with a good turn out from this vicinity made a real meeting and the work of installing the officers in their various chairs was most fittingly done by D.D.G.M. A. Picard and his team.

It was also a great privilege to have present the Grand Master Rev. W. de Gruchy, of Stanstead, who later in the evening gave a most impressive and inspiring address on the principles of Oddfellowship. Other distinguished guests present were Chief Patriarch J. Devers, Past Grand Masters Decarrie and Penfold; Grand Secretary Bro. Geo. Laing; Past Chief Patriarch, Bro. H. Curran; and Grand Warden Bro. F. Henshaw.

Another very pleasing event of the evening was the presentation of Jewels to Brothers E. Walker, Geo. Brennan, J. Roy Carpenter and H. Poulin, for 25 years membership in the order.

The fact of so many Montreal brothers visiting here is a true exemplification of the fraternity spirit existing among all good Oddfellows and also bespeaks of the hearty welcome always extended by Laurentian Lodge No. 14.

The following will occupy the chairs for the ensuing half year:

P. G. Bro. L. Cruise I.P.G.; Bro. A. Clarke N.G.; Bro. Rev. Rosborough V.G.; Bro. J. Duncan Sec.; Bro. S. Thompson Fin. Sec.; Bro. W. J. Deacon Treas.

CHILD SEVERELY HURT

A very painful accident occurred on Monday afternoon last, when young Jackie MacKimmie son of Mr. and Mrs. W. MacKimmie tripped and fell on an iron picket fence on Main St., the rod entering between two ribs and slightly piercing his lung. A doctor was immediately summoned and no serious complications have so far been reported.

Marriage at Westmount

Temple — Horner

The marriage was quietly solemnized at the Westmount Baptist Church, by Dr. M. F. McCutcheon, on Thursday, June 30th., at four thirty p.m., of Jean Margaret, younger daughter of Mr. Ralph Horner, of Brownsburg, Que., to George A. only son of Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Temple, of Montreal, formerly of London, Eng.

The bride wore her traveling suit of tailored pencil blue georgette with beige hat, shoes and gloves, and a corsage bouquet of tea roses and lilies of the valley.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Temple left on a short motor trip.

Collision at C.N.R. Crossing

Minor injuries to occupants and considerable damage to two automobiles, resulted from a head-on collision at the C. N. R. crossing on Brownsburg road just west of Lachute, at 7.30 on Sunday evening. It appears that while two cars approached in opposite directions and were slowing down to "look and listen," a third driver accelerated his car to pass, and in doing so collided head-on with the automobile across the track.

A Montreal autoist was involved and suffered minor bruises and shock, while his car was towed to the city in bad shape. Mr. E. Campbell, of Browns-

The Centenary of Lachute Presbyterian Church

On the 11th. day of July, 1832, Presbytery having previously authorized, with the approval of St. Andrews East Presbyterian Church, a congregation was duly formed and a session constituted which marked the beginning of a Church which has had a strong and inspiring influence upon the religious life of this community. As the history of its growth and development appeared in these columns in a recent issue, it is not necessary to relate any of the details. A reading of those historical facts will enable one to appreciate the fact that the Presbyterian Church in Lachute is fully justified in giving expression of praise and thanksgiving in a fitting manner. The following arrangements have been made for Sunday July 10th. at 11 a.m., in the Auditorium.

The parent congregation of St. Andrews East have graciously closed their morning worship in order to allow all of its members to worship here. The Rev. R. L. Ballantyne, D.D. will assist at the service. The special preacher for the occasion will be Rev. W. L. Williman, B.A., of Montreal. Mr. A. Young, an artist of international reputation in the musical world has very generously consented to sing. In brief, these are the arrangements made and a cordial invitation is extended to all members, adherents and visitors to be present.

Echoes of Canadian Authors' Convention in Ottawa

The 11th. annual convention of this Association opened on June 21st., in the Chateau Laurier at Ottawa, with Mr. Justice E. Fabien Surveyer, of Montreal (in the absence of the president, Dr. Duncan Campbell Scott) in the chair.

Dr. Scott sent a letter expressing regret at his unavoidable absence. Having arranged for his trip abroad, before his election as president had taken place he felt that he must carry out his original plan.

Howard Angus Kennedy, Dominion Secretary, told the authors that in spite of the economic and industrial depression during the past year, the Association had actually increased in membership, especially in the French-Canadian section, this section having more than doubled since the last convention.

The actual convention itself was rather smaller than usual, due to several reasons, one being the Canadian Women's Press Club convening in Calgary just a few days later and taking several of our noted women writers such as Nellie McLung, Marion Keith, and L. M. Montgomery from our ranks. But we were not altogether disconsolate, having with us still, Madge Macbeth, Margaret Currie, of the Montreal Star, Helen Sreighton, of Halifax, and a great many others.

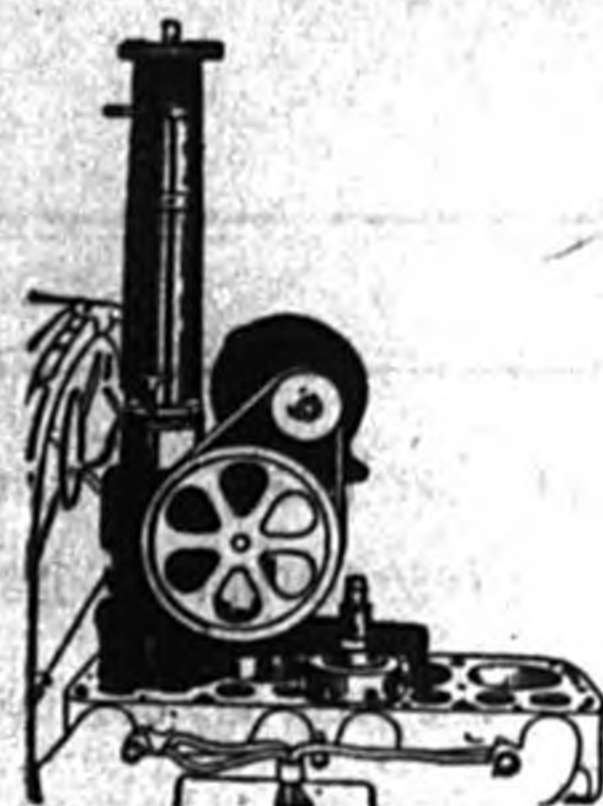

After the usual routine business, which is part of an opening session, was disposed of, Mons. Jean Bruchesi, president of the French Section, addressed the convention in French and in English. Speaking very eloquently, he said he found the composition of this association a factor essential to national unity, its bilingualism as an asset conducive to the benefit of Canadian literature as a whole; and that ideas were the salvation of society; also that every one should fight for the supremacy of education, sacrificing self for a united Canada, not only politically but spiritually. That although French and English writers in Canada were working in different fields their ideals should be a binding of the whole association together in one common allegiance to the British Crown.

In Judge Surveyer's brief speech he stated that the Convention's aim was to be of use to the members of the association and Mr. Douglas Reville, of Toronto, tried to put that term "to be of use" in the practical form, of founding a fund for the purpose of giving financial aid to indigent authors, who, had passed beyond their limit of creative power or through some force of circumstances were forced to cease producing. This motion was supported by the convention.

Dr. Pelham Edgar, of Toronto, thought during the present conditions it would not be wise to appeal to the public, but rather to raise money for this Foundation Fund by entertainments, etc.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

SALUTE THE SCOUTS

Dear Boys,—

Coming down the road were two BOY SCOUTS. They were in uniform and as the sun was very hot I envied them the hats they wore. Down the arm of each were several badges obtained by hard study and though they were talking very earnestly about something ALL THE TIME THEY KEPT IN STEP.

There is quite a lot I like about Scouts.

They always seem to me to be holding their heads so erect their eyes have a sparkle which reflect a clean healthy mind and they always appear to be INSTANTLY READY FOR ANY EMERGENCY.

I thought what a fine thing it is to be a Scout.

Perhaps the best thing about scouting is the spirit of BROTHERHOOD that exists among all the members. Once an invitation was sent me to take part in a 'CAMP FIRE.' When I arrived everyone raised a shout - No not at my coming it was hardly as bad as that - but a match had been put to a huge pile of sticks and branches and a red flame shot up into the darkness accompanied by a shower of sparks, THE CAMP FIRE WAS ON.

Then the boys started to sing. Now if I were to come across a fellow who looked miserable and wanted badly cheering up I would say to him, "Go out and find some scouts and when you have done so join them round their camp fire; catch the spirit of their songs, raise your voice in harmony if possible but if not SING ANYWAY. Then, when the fire dies down and it is hardly possible to see the young, brown happy faces that surround you there will still be something greatly worth while in that grip of the hand, that pat on the back which will be yours, as turning away to their tents, they give you their own particular benediction GOOD SCOUTING.

Yes Arthur boy, I know what you will say when you read this letter. "Have you forgotten the place that we called MAGIC ISLAND? How we camped, fished and swam together; when we made our own fire and I was so busy preparing my lines for the sport of the morrow; when you pointed out for me some of the most important stars that shone like diamonds against the dark curtain of the night sky; when across the grey misty water lay those deep woods so quiet, so MYSTERIOUS that I was eager to turn back to the cheerful glow of our brightly burning fire, WE WERE NOT SCOUTS and yet,—

Quite right Arthur, I DO remember, my apologies are yours. None the less, as the two scouts passed, talking so earnestly while, ALL THE TIME THEY KEPT IN STEP, I saluted them and, knowing you as I do, I am certain that your desire and action would have been the same.

It is getting dark and the sun has set. Possibly you and all my other boys are getting out your books for lesson preparation. Work hard and do well and THEN in or out of uniform I am sure you will all enjoy in the highest and best way,—

GOOD SCOUTING.

Ever your affectionate FRIEND,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 7.

It was quite eight o'clock when little Babs opened her eyes and, from the comfort of her cosy bed, looked round the large hotel bedroom in which she found herself. Not far away she could see Jack asleep, his dark hair making a black smudge against the white pillow. From underneath the drawn blind at the window the morning sun was endeavouring to get into the room and the child smiled as she watched the golden stream of light becoming stronger every minute.

It must be quite late she thought, I wonder how much longer Jack is going to sleep and if Uncle will come in soon. A moment later she let her glance wander round the room taking in the large pieces of furniture, the warm red carpet that covered the floor, and all the signs of comfort, even luxury, which surrounded her. Uncle must have plenty of money to give us all this, her thoughts ran on, and what a lot of beautiful things he bought us yesterday, and, at the recollection of their shopping expedition of the previous day Babs broke out into a happy little laugh.

"I wish you would let a fellow sleep" grumbled Jack sitting up in his bed and looking at his watch which lay on a small table nearby, "here it is only ten minutes to eight and you disturbed the whole place with silly laughter. What's the matter with you?"

"I have a watch also", said Babs inconsequently. "Wasn't it good of Uncle to give us both such beautiful ones yesterday. Oh, Bubbles I am so hungry when do you think we shall have our breakfast?" Jack jumped out of bed and slipped into his dressing gown. "I'm off to the bathroom Babs," he said, "and when I come back you can have your turn. We've got to hurry up as Uncle told us to be down at half past eight sharp because of the train," and grabbing hold of a towel he disappeared.

Very soon both were dressed and together sought the spacious dining room in which several people were already having the first meal of the day. A waiter escorted them to a small table placed near one of the windows through which they could see many automobiles passing down the busy thoroughfare. Here they found their Uncle, who had nearly finished his breakfast.

"Well, well the two slow coaches have arrived at last," he said with a twinkle in his eyes, and then noticing a look of consternation on their faces added kindly, "don't worry I did not wait for you because I have a lot of things to see about before we leave. You Jack must have all your clothes packed again and and those of your sister before I return."

"That I will Uncle," replied the boy, "but all the same we ought to have been down earlier to keep you company."

"Yes indeed we ought Uncle," broke in Babs, as she put her arms round his neck and kissed him. "What a shame you had to have breakfast all by yourself."

There was a very affectionate look in the Captain's brown eyes as he placed a chair at the table for his little niece. It came to him suddenly that there was going to be wonderful happiness in the duty that had come upon him in the guardianship of these two orphan children of his dead sister. Always a wanderer without kith or kin of his own he had of late begun to dread the long lonely years in front of him, and, it was this perhaps more than anything else that had urged him on, as soon as he had heard of the death of their parents, to find them and claim them as his own. In Jack he already began to feel he had a boy after his own heart and one that would, he was sure, do him credit. Not that he had any intention of spoiling him for he possessed some very strong ideas on discipline and he meant to exact from this young nephew of his the most complete believing by this method to fit him later on for command. But Babs was different and on her he would lavish all the wealth of his affection without stint, and now he felt thankful for the first time that he was in possession of money enough to give her all she could wish for.

Very gently he kissed the fair and beautiful little face that was lifted up to his. "You must both of you have your breakfast while I hurry away to keep an appointment", he said getting up from his seat, "but don't forget that we start for the station immediately I come back.

It was a happy meal, that breakfast, the brother and sister had together and they were not at all eager to hasten over it, but at last Jack looked again at his watch and said, "My word Babs its nearly nine o'clock we'll have to hurry and get ready," so they raced up the stairs to their room and packed everything into the new big trunk they had opened the night before. Hardly had they done this when there was a knock at the door and in response to Jack's 'come in' a hotel porter entered.

"Are you Captain Sommerville's nephew, sir," he asked respectfully.

"Yes, why?" was the reply.

"Well sir your Uncle is downstairs waiting for you and your sister and I have to bring along your luggage."

Jack gave a whistle of dismay. "That is the luggage" he said pointing to the trunk. "Come on Babs or we are in for a row." Again they dashed down the stairs to find their Uncle busily engaged in arranging for the transport of their belongings. "Come here Jack" he called out impatiently, "take this money over to the desk there and pay your bill, rooms 59 and 61 we have only a very few minutes."

All indeed was bustle and excitement and it was not until they were being driven to the station that Pat Sommerville found time to turn to his nephew and say, "Jack I have appointed you Junior Pursar of the ship so as soon as you arrive on board you will report to your Senior Mr. White who will tell you what to do and see that you commence your work at once. There will be a spare uniform that will fit you and let me warn you that we have strict discipline at sea so you will address your superiors as Sir including myself, I hope you understand."

The boy's face showed his pleasure at the news. "Oh, thank you Uncle, that is I mean sir," he answered eagerly, "I will try and do my best I promise."

At that moment they arrived at the terminus so further conversation was impossible for the time being.

The Authors were the guests of the city of Ottawa and the Ottawa Branch of the Association to dinner, at which Major Gustave Lanctot, president of the branch, presided, and Alderman E. McVeigh delivered the address of welcome, the tables being beautifully decorated with peonies.

The afternoon held something of interest for everyone, being divided up into group meetings, representing fiction, poetry, drama and general literature.

All of the different sections were most interesting, but that of general literature was really the most useful to Jack-of-all-trade writers. The speakers during the noon hour were interesting and witty. President Lanctot of the Ottawa branch said the authors had escaped a great calamity in the loss of a 40 page manuscript speech which he had prepared for the occasion! He claimed our national capital as the literary centre of the Dominion, and ended by introducing the next speaker, Alderman McVeigh, as an alderman by accident; to which Alderman McVeigh made reply that no man ever became an alderman by accident. He said also that a really successful after dinner speech could only be compared to a lady's dress when it was long enough to cover the subject, yet short enough to be interesting.

Prof. Rhodenyer, of Halifax, in replying to the speech of welcome said that he admired Queen Victoria's taste in choosing Ottawa for as the capital of her Dominion, and the company present felt that he could not have expressed their sentiments more satisfactorily if he had asked each one for a personal opinion, as Ottawa is one of our most important beauty spots.

Anyone who would like to argue on this point should first ascend to the Peace Tower, and gaze out over the city and its surroundings from all sides, before voicing too decided an opinion to the contrary. The view is marvellous, especially at this time of the year where one sees the natural beauties of the situation augmented and trained, as it were, by the skillful hands of man and the outcome of the vision of our public leaders in days of yore who were men of great imagination. Nothing beautiful can be formed without first having ideas and imagination.

An interesting event took place before the evening session in the visit to the Studio of Leslie, Courteny, of Sparks Street. Mr. Courteny has a wonderful collection of Canadian handicrafts, pictures, rugs, mats, basket work, pottery, etc., that is well worth seeing.

The evening meeting was given over to such subjects as "The Writer, the Reader and the Gatekeepers in between", "The Book and the Magazine business, as it is and as it might be". Questions of Supply and Demand, of Changing Fashions, and Enduring Tastes, of Pot-boiling and Hill-top standards, also of fair and unfair practices and agreements.

The principal speaker was Hugh S. Eayrs, President of Macmillan's, other speakers being J. L. Rutledge, Ed. of Canadian Magazine also Arthur Deacon, newspaper and book critic, and Leslie

Roberts. A few of the points brought out by Mr. Eayrs were that the years 1930-31 showed a gradual slowing-up in the buying of books and steady increase in the borrowing of books; also that sex and detective fiction is on its way out, and breezy Western fiction taking its place. Also that, in the non-fiction field, popular expositions of science and economics were superseding popular biographies.

Leslie Roberts declared that the tariffs against foreign magazines and periodicals had entirely failed in their purpose.

Drivel and trash were still being sold, published in so-called Canadian editions in Canada, from type already set and plates already printed in United States also that, if Canadian authors do not write what the public wants, the people of Canada will continue to buy books from other countries; suggesting also that, when an author had work returned to him, he should spend his time criticizing himself instead of the editor.

During the course of his speech, Mr. Eayrs said there was a tendency to much smaller royalties being paid to authors on books published. Mr. Lloyd Roberts, son of our great poet, C. D. Roberts, quite agreed with him and claimed to have the record of being recipient of the smallest royalty check in existence, that of 75 cts! He was corrected by Mr. Arthur Deacon, who produced a check for 11 cts. as proof that he himself held that record.

Wednesday morning was taken up by interesting addresses on Western Writers and their recent work. The speaker for this occasion not being present, the Secretary read this most interesting article.

After W. Arthur Deacon and Leslie Gordon Barnard had given interesting talks respectively, on Newspaper Critics, their Principles and Practices, and the Distinctively Canadian in Canada's Writing and Reading, the American representative, James Hopper, President of the American Authors' Guild, was welcomed.

Mr. Hopper had overheard part of a rather heated discussion on the need of demanding the government to ban much of the American stuff, enforcing a law that Canadian magazines, newspapers, etc., at least use 20 per cent of Canadian authors' work. He laughingly said, "Go ahead and make that law, and we'll retaliate by raising our tariff on your lumber and other things."

Mr. Hopper said he was not in favor of tariffs at all; he thought that was what was the matter with the world today. All the nations had hedged themselves around with high tariff walls, so that they were slowly but surely smothering themselves.

Wednesday's dinner was a delightful one, the authors being guests at the Chateau of the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, who was present with his sister, Mrs. Herridge, and greeted everyone personally before going into the dining room. All felt at home in his presence; and particularly so when speaking to Mrs. Herridge one felt as though conversing with a friendly next door neighbor. Dressed simply in black flat crepe suit with white silk blouse, white straw hat with black velvet band, she stood beside her big brother, gracious, friendly, and intensely interested in the proceedings. The dinner itself was all that could be desired. The decorations were simple but beautiful, being carried out in green and white, table cloths and serviettes of green, brass bowls of maiden-hair, daisies, and garden heliotrope, being scattered about quite lavishly.

In addressing the authors, Premier Bennett expressed his appreciation of the work of Canadian writers, and the important part they were playing as makers of Canadian history. The Premier said he regarded it as a privilege to entertain them, and when he had first heard of the convention coming to Ottawa, had asked our Secretary for the privilege of entertaining us, because he really wanted to do it.

Premier Bennett said literature performed an important role in molding the character of our people, and he was proud of what the Canadian authors had already accomplished along that line.

After the party had been photographed on the terrace together with the Premier and his friends, a drive was made around the city, with visits to the Parliament Buildings and other places of interest, ending up at the Experimental Farm where a garden party had been prepared in honor of the authors.

In the evening the assembly was entertained at the Archives by members of the Women's Canadian Historical Society of Ottawa and Col. Doughty; here a wonderful display of interesting paintings, photographs, war relics, ancient and modern posters depicting a great many views of the great war, were on view, some sad, some comic, but all cleverly executed.

A delightful programme of French-Canadian folk songs was given by Emile Boucher, accompanied by Mrs. Boucher; both were in habitant costume.

Thursday's programme carried talks and discussions on "Our Newspapers", "Radio, its Canadian Future", and "The Writer, the Musician, and the Public." Some of the findings in connection with literary work were that the total number of books lent for home-reading in Ottawa last month was 32,703, an excess of 4,368 over last May's borrowing of books from public libraries. The books in greatest demand are those of a serious character. There never has been a time in the world's history when people read more worth-while books amongst the young people as well as the old. This surely augurs well for the future of Canada. J.G.

A professional partnership has been established between two of our County lawyers, Messrs. Joseph Palliser and Geo. Edwin Bampton, Advocates, who have opened offices both in Montreal and Lachute.

A Meeting of the County Temperance Alliance was held in this village, when a constitution was agreed upon and the following officers elected: Dr. T. Christie, President; Messrs. D. Dewar, Thos. Barron and J. B. Cushing, Vice-presidents; Thomas Henry, Secy.; T. J. Barron, Treasurer.

Prevalent prices for farm produce—butter 25c. per pound; eggs 19c. to 20c. a dozen; potatoes $1.00 a bag.

At Lord Macaulay's funeral recently, a person unknown deliberately walked up and spat on the coffin at conclusion of the service.

The agreement for amalgamation of the Grand Trunk and the Great Western railways has been approved by both companies. Construction of the Canada Atlantic Railway is now completed to Eastman's Springs, eight miles from Ottawa City.

268 Cribbs of mixed timber passed through the Carillon slide from June 3 to July 1. A still larger quantity has also passed through the canal.

As usual, last Monday, little interest was manifested in the election of School Commissioners, and the entire board was re-elected.

At Olivet Baptist Chapel, Montreal, on Sunday, a tablet and portrait were unveiled to the memory of Mr. Andrew Stewart, for many years identified with Bible Class and Sunday School work in that church. Mr. And. Stewart died in Lachute, May 27th., 1905.

Arrangements have been made for the Union S. School Picnic to be held on Mr. G. Perley's beautiful grounds at mouth of the Rouge River. The C. P.R. will run an excursion for the occasion, July 16th.

A Society, under the name of Lachute Cemetery Improvement Socy., has been formed with the following board of officers: Jno. Hay, Hugh Fraser Jr., H. J. Giles, John Jackson, Wm. Banford, John McFaul, J. R. Parris Wm. Duffy, G. F. Calder, J. S. Giles.

Mrs. J. A. McGibbon was hostess at an "At Home" on Wednesday afternoon last.

Carillon. Mr. L. McCoy spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents at Maple Cottage.

Messrs. E. Christie, Douglas Gall, and Miles Walker are camping at Sir John's Lake.

"On entering the Province of Quebec on Highway No. 2 from Ontario," writes a correspondent to the Montreal Star, "at Riviere Beaudette the motorist notices big signs 'Welcome to Quebec,' etc. Are these signs not superfluous and quite unnecessary? Does not the change from the perfect road one leaves in Ontario to the rough, unkept and disgraceful road of Quebec make it obvious that one is entering this Province of Quebec?
No sign is really necessary; our bad roads speak for themselves.

In comparing our provincial highways with those of our neighboring province, one may truly accord with this impression. And considering Quebec's unusually high automobile taxes, high road taxes, tolls on public bridges, etc.—one is apt to wonder where the money goes.

The Boy Scouts on July 1st., raised the flag on the new flag pole beside the Town Hall. The community is much indebted to them for the work they have done in cleaning up the grounds and putting up the pole.

In spite of the cool evening the Lawn Social on the grounds of the United Church was attended by an appreciative audience, who enjoyed the readings given by Mrs. Macaskill and Col.
Hooker and the songs given by Mr. Harry Kay and Mr. Paul Lodsin. Mr. Leonard Young ably accompanied Mr. Lodsin who furnished a rare treat by his distinguished rendering of the following songs. The Hunting Song, Homing, Invictus, For You Alone. He generously responded to repeated encores by singing The Road to Mandalay.

The Goodfellowship Circle held their annual out-of-doors

THE LATE WM. CAMPBELL

of the Scotch Road Settlement

In the quiet reverence of the Sabbath evening of June 24th., Wm. Campbell, a man highly esteemed and greatly beloved by all who knew him, entered the rest that awaits for the people of God. He was a farmer and the greater part of his life was lived in what was known as the Scotch Road Settlement.

In later years he came to Grenville Village, where the evening of his life was spent surrounded by his family, to whom he was devoted. He never quite recovered from the overwhelming sorrow that overtook his house last fall.

His practical sense, courage and driving force helped greatly to carry through the vision which his faith had conceived.
He was in an emphatic sense a churchman and he found in his Church his opportunity, rendering faithful and efficient service in a striking and unselfish way, which was a marked characteristic of his master. He was a man of warm sympathy and a tender heart, as one whose life adorned the faith he professed.

The funeral service was one of the most impressive and inspiring ever held in this vicinity. The Brethren of the Masonic Order, of which he was a member, made a profound impression in a solemn and devout way. They conducted the Masonic rite in the home and at the grave of their late brother. The service in the church was in charge of the Rev. J. W. Mclean and Rev. J. T. Conn. The building was crowded and many were unable to gain admission—an eloquent testimony to his worth and work.

During the service reference was made to the long and faithful attendance to duties assigned to him as an office-bearer of the Scotch Road Church, in which he had been long intimate and active.

Many expressions of sympathy were tendered throughout the beautiful floral offering.
He is survived by one daughter,
Mrs. W. Cole, and three sons,
Malcolm, Loughie and Arthur, also a sister, Mrs. D. McIntyre and a brother John.

Floral tributes were received from the following:

Wreaths,—"The Children";
Kennedy Construction Company
Mrs. E. C. Whinfield; Grenville
Lodge 101; L.O.B.A. and L.O.L., Harrington East; Jim and Walter Weldon; Misses N. and H.
Hughes and Miss Young; W.
Parker and M. Wilson.

Sprays:—"Tillie and Garnet" and the Moss family.

Pillow,—Mr. J. Campbell, (brother.)

"Yes—they're fine young chickens!"

It was Joe Kingsmill's wife who spotted the advertisement — a firm in town offering to buy 60 young chickens. She showed it to Joe.

"Every poultry farmer in the province will be writing," Joe said. "I'll telephone right now and beat the crowd."

So he did. And got the business too for his alertness. The Long Distance telephone call cost him 35 cents.

Miss Rita Smith, of North End, Montreal, is spending her two week's vacation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tomalty.

Mr. and Mrs. Hargraves and daughter and Mr. Horace Hargraves, of Drummondville, were the guests of Mrs. H. Moseley this week.

Miss Gladys Moseley, who has spent the winter in Bermuda is expected home this week and will spend the summer at Lake Louisa.

The Misses Hanna, Blanche and Grace Smith and Miss Bessie Rodger returned from a motor trip around the Gaspé Peninsula.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Tomalty have returned to their home in Detroit, after spending the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tomalty.

Mr. J. A. Wood with his sons Douglas and Ernest, and daughter Miss Catherine, of Merrickville, visited friends in this vicinity over the week-end.

Mrs. Lorne McArthur and daughters Lorna and Mavis, of Ottawa, are spending this week as guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. McArthur. Mr. McArthur was also here for the week-end.

An old resident, native of this town, Mr. Alphonse St. Louis, has paid a visit to Lachute and vicinity, renewing old acquaintance and bringing to mind experiences and people of the past. Seventy eight years of age he is hale and hearty, and still retains his musical talent which in his younger days made him welcome in many a home.

Two Successful Events in Lakefield, Organized by Trinity W. A.

The two important events planned by the ladies of Trinity W. A. passed off most successfully. On Wednesday last about 20 men and five teams of horses met at the graveyard and gave a hearty day's work for the much needed improvement of the cemetery.

Mrs. Thos. McCambly and Mr. Albert Tomalty gave the earth for filling-in, while absent friends contributed cash subscriptions for hiring men and teamsters later on. Sir George Perley, with his usual generosity, sent $20.00 to help the work. The ladies served bountiful and dainty meals in the Gibb parish Hall. The newly painted fencing, with the brushing and levelling, have made a great difference to the appearance of this lovely spot in Lakefield.

The other event was the picnic on Dominion Day. Mr. A. Tomalty's Grove, kindly loaned for the occasion, was thronged by a goodly gathering, who, in spite of the cool and threatening weather, enjoyed the ice-cream, soft drinks, and home cooking provided by the ladies. The sports committee, comprising Messrs. George Peet, Wilbert Sherriett, Albert Tomalty and Stanley Andrews, supplied an interesting programme of races and sports which afforded considerable entertainment to the onlookers. These efforts of the ladies of the W.A. being crowned with such success, should be a source of real encouragement to them; and they are to be congratulated upon the way in which the men of the community have so ably seconded their endeavours to improve conditions in this beautiful district.

LACHUTE TOWN COUNCIL

The regular meeting of above Council was held on Wednesday, July 6th.

Moved by Ald. Miller, seconded by Ald. Leroux, that as the Council does not feel responsible for the account of $477.05, presented by Mr. S. Ouimet, C.E., payment be declined. Carried.

A grant of One Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars was made to the Argenteuil Agricultural Society.

The Water Committee was authorized to make the necessary repairs to the Intake by building a cement base from one bank to the other, in order to prevent all loss of water, the work to be begun by August 1st.

A Dumping Ground was authorized to be bought at a price of $300. from Mr. Jas. Hay.

Notice of Motion was given by Ald. J. B. Raymond that at the next meeting he will introduce an amendment to the Parking By-Law.

Mr. and Mrs. Firminger and family, of Mount Royal, are spending a month at Lake Louisa.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mulleno and daughter Beatrice, also Miss Hazel Dawson of Montreal, were the holiday and week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Noble at Thos' Gore.

Mr. L. L. Legault K.C., is leaving on Friday the 8th. inst to attend the annual convention of the Provincial Bar Association at Riviere du Loup, and will return on Tuesday next. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Legault and daughter Diselle, and sons Guy and Fernand.

Among those who have successfully passed their Musical examinations at McGill University, both for theory and piano-forte, we are pleased to note the names of Misses Edna Aitken, Betty Clunie, Edith McQuat, G. Robertson, Anna Rosborough, Ruth Brennan, and Edith Rosborough. These young ladies are all pupils of Miss P. Paquette.

MARRIAGE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Silverson was the scene of a pretty wedding on Thursday, June 30th., when their youngest daughter, Katie Eadythe, was united in marriage to Geo. D. MacCormick, of Dalesville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. W. Dyson, in the presence of immediate friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. MacCormick motored to Quebec and on their return will reside in Dalesville.

IT'S ON THE LABEL

It is very easy to forget when one subscribed for a publication and when the subscription expires. In the case of The Watchman it is not necessary for the subscriber to burden his memory with that detail, for the date on the label attached to each copy tells when the subscription expires and should be renewed. It will be greatly appreciated if readers will observe the label occasionally and renew promptly when expiration is near.

Hints for Homebodies

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman.
By JESSIE ALLAN BROWN

TEMPERANCE IN EATING

When people speak of temperance they usually connect it with drinking, but there should be temperance in other things, too. I know a man who is fairly rabid over the question of drinking and smoking. He is so opposed to it that he makes hypocrites of his many employees. This man is a very hearty eater and because of this, frequently suffers from digestive upsets. Incidentally his family and his business associates suffer from them too! He knows that they are caused from intemperate eating, as his doctor has warned him several times. But does he resist? He does not. When he sees food that he likes particularly, he goes to it.

One evening this gentleman was invited out and his hostess knowing that he should eat carefully, prepared attractive simple foods that he might enjoy, as well as the more elaborate richer foods. And he never touched one of the simple dishes. Not he. But the next day he was quite ill and railed at women who invited people to their homes and then give them rich foods to eat at night. Isn't that like a man? The woman tempted me and I did eat.

Temperance is greatly to be desired, but let it not be confined to strong drink.

FLOWER SANDWICHES

June is a month of entertaining and sandwiches are very much in demand. It used to be that a sandwich was two pieces of bread with a filling between. Not these days, a sandwich may be most anything. The modern sandwich is most attractive to look at and there may be real artistry in their shape and colors. Flower sandwiches are a picture to look at. These sandwiches, you know, are not made of flowers, but are made to look like flowers. You may make flowers the like of which Luther Burbank never heard. You may go as far as your imagination and your materials will let you.

The foundation is bread cut in rounds. You may use any kind of bread, brown, white, rye, or nut, fitting your bread to your other materials. First make a centre for your flower, putting it in the centre of your round of bread, then have your petals radiate from the centre. A yellow centre is always acceptable and centres may be made of hard-cooked egg crushed and mixed with salad dressing, or of some yellow cheese. A slice of stuffed olive makes an attractive centre, as does half a pickled walnut. A Brown Eyed Susan may be made, using brown bread as the foundation, a pickled walnut as the centre, and yellow cheese to form the petals.

Petals may be made from cheese of any variety, creamed

so that it is washable. Yellow cheese, white cheese, cottage cheese and pimento are all suitable. The white cheese may be colored to suit any colour scheme you desire. Egg yolk or strips of egg white may make the petals. Pieces of pimento cut to the required size may make either centres or petals.

If you like a sweet sandwich, and they are becoming more popular all the time, try a combination of cheese and ginger on nut bread. Make your centre of creamed cheese and your petals of thin strips of preserved ginger.

A few flower sandwiches added to your plainer ones will give your party an air of festivity and they are neither expensive nor difficult to make.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

2 cups flour
1/4 cup shortening
4 teaspoons baking powder.
1 tablespoon sugar
About 2-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt.

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Rub in the shortening. Add milk to make a soft dough. Divide the dough into halves. Roll or pat to fit a round pan, spread with butter and cover with the remaining dough rolled to fit. Bake in a hot oven at 450 degrees for 15 minutes. Split and butter. Cover generously with crushed sweetened strawberries. Put the second portion on top and cover with more berries. This may be eaten with pour cream or it may be topped with whipped cream and garnished with whole choice berries. If you prefer individual shortcakes, cut your dough into rounds. Bake. Split and butter and cover with the sweetened berries as for the larger shortcake.

Cake is sometimes used as a foundation for a shortcake. This may make an agreeable dessert, but it is not, strictly speaking, a strawberry shortcake.

CREAM CHEESE AND HORSE RADISH SANDWICHES

Mix equal parts of cream cheese and horseradish. Spread between buttered slices of brown bread.

CRESS ROLLS

Cut fresh bread in thin slices and remove crusts. Wash cress carefully and shake dry. Put cress on bread so that some leaves are over the edge. Sprinkle slightly with salt and roll. When buttering bread for rolled sandwiches always be sure to have some butter on the very corners and there will be no trouble about keeping the rolls in the proper shape as the butter will hold them in place. These rolls with their green leaves showing are attractive looking and are a pleasing accompaniment to either tea or cold drinks.

YOU'D NEVER KNOW HER...

...FOR THE SAME BABY

This is what Mrs. Albert Bolton, of Toronto, writes: "Our little girl, Margaret Jean, was nursed for the first few months, but this did not satisfy her. I had heard about Eagle Brand and decided to try it. She took to it right away and there has been no trouble since. Her flesh is firm; lovely, straight limbs, good bone development, and she is so contented. Last September she won third prize at the Canadian National Exhibition, against 102 entrants."

Here and There

Premier Gordon S. Harrington, of Nova Scotia, has returned from his trip to Europe by the Empress of Britain.

Growth of all crops in western Canada is now vigorous and well advanced for the time of year, according to the latest weekly survey made by the Canadian Pacific Railway's agricultural department, and crop prospects in the West as a whole are encouraging.

Members of the British party touring the Dominion under the auspices of the British Columbian Government, arrived at Montreal aboard the Duchess of Bedford, travelled across Canada by Canadian Pacific rail and lake steamship, stopped over at Banff and will spend between June 15 and July 2 in British Columbia.

Delta Gamma, one of the most important Greek Letter organizations on the continent, is holding its annual convention this year at the Empress Hotel, Victoria, June 27-July 1. Stopping over at Banff, a Canadian Pacific special will carry delegates to the Pacific Coast from Chicago, while Canadian members from Montreal, Toronto and Edmonton will join the main group at Victoria.

If early promise is fulfilled, the Annapolis Valley should this year produce an even larger yield of apples than in 1931 when the total crop was close to a million and three-quarters barrels, is the opinion of leading fruit men of Kentville, N.S. The bloom this year lasted over ten days and attracted visitors by the thousand from Eastern Canada and the United States.

Miss Constance Reran, Middleburg, Va., established a record for women anglers on the Tobique River, New Brunswick, recently, when she took a 27½ lb. Atlantic silver salmon, the largest ever caught with a fly by a woman on that river. The record salmon taken in those waters by a male angler weighed 33½ lbs.

Canadian Pacific standard time is standard time the world over. Prior to 1883, every town and city had its own local time, based on the sun, but in that year the suggestion of Sir Sandford Fleming, chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that the world should be divided into 24 sections, one for each hour of the day, and that time within each of these areas should be standard, was adopted all over Canada and the United States. In 1884 the plan was also adopted in Europe after a conference held at Washington.

Gilbert Miller, architect, of Youngstown, O., has a grudge against windows and doors in office buildings and summer homes. He found both too narrow to admit a moose head with an antler spread of five feet five inches taken from a monster he shot near St. Jovite last season. "It looks," he wrote to A. O. Seymour, general tourist agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, "as though both the head and myself will end up in the garage." But that is the kind of trophy to be got in the forests of Quebec. Big heads and lots of them. (849)

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON SERMON TOPIC

The Subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science church services for Sunday, July 10, is "Sacrament."

Golden Text: "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup." (I Corinthians 11:28)

Among the Scriptural selections comprised in the Lesson-Sermon are the following: "Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him; and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." (John 14:23, 27.)

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon are the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The true sense is spiritually lost, if the sacrament is confined to the use of bread and wine." "What a contrast between our Lord's last supper and his last spiritual breakfast with his disciples in the bright morning hours at the joyful meeting on the shore of the Galilee Sea! His gloom had passed into glory, and his disciples' grief into repentance, hearts chastened and pride rebuked Discerning Christ Truth, anew on the shore of time, they were enabled to rise somewhat from mortal sensuousness, or the burial of mind in matter, into newness of life as Spirit." (pages 32, 33, 34.)

"Now," said the super-salesman "this instrument turns green if the liquor is good—red if it is bad." "Sorry but I'm color-blind," apologized the customer. "Got anything with a gong on it?"

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of bandits in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits set away with gold dust and choice peltry.

CHAPTER II—Corporal Bill Hardock brings the news of the crime to Sergeant Alan Baker at the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, Alan starts out after the bandits in the big police launch with the corporal and four constables.

CHAPTER III—Reaching the Midnight Sun, they stop long enough for Alan to board her and consult witnesses of the crime. Alan asks the skipper to put Jimmy Montgomery's orphaned four-year-old daughter off at Fort Endurance and leave her in the care of Alan's fiancée, Elizabeth Spaulding. At the MacMillan trading post on the Big Alouksa, Joyce MacMillan is alone, awaiting the return of Dave, her fiancé, on a fur-buying trip. She is thrilled when the police launch ties up there for the night, as she has not seen Alan Baker for months. Secretly she had hoped to marry him; then she was stunned by the news of his engagement to Elizabeth. She is happy now to perceive from his halting talk that the planned marriage is not definitely certain.

As he parted the reeds in front of his face Alan saw the tops of a clump sway suspiciously. A moment later he glimpsed the dim outline of a man standing up, stretching himself, sitting down again.

In actual sight now, those men who had killed Jimmy Montgomery! And only a pistol shot away! But to take them—Alan cursed savagely at the thought of Pedneust and those two men a hundred and forty miles distant. As he remembered what Haskell said about the law being behind his patrol, his lips curled in scorn at the faint expression. "The law that's supposed to be back of us! I wonder where in h— it is now! What does it mean to Bill and me now?" Here in this watery wilderness in the creeping twilight, he and Bill were going up against six men who had stood off fifty and who had murder charges hanging over their heads. And if they broke away, Larry single-handed would have to stand the whole brunt of stopping them.

At his gesture Bill slid cautiously up beside him. In whispers, Alan said to him: "Bill, we've got to get closer. We've got to get across this pond. Those muskrat houses out there are particularly good luck for us. By keeping down in the water, with these little reeds to help hide us, we can sneak from one house to the next. The last one isn't a dozen yards from those men. If we make it we'll have point-blank range and the best kind of cover to shoot from."

Taking off their hats and jackets, they wriggled carefully out of the tall flags, eased into the water and squirmed toward the first muskrat house, which stood up four feet above the surface and entirely hid their approach. Behind it they stopped a moment, chose their next one, and sank back into the water.

As they crouched down behind the third little dome of mud and reeds, a towering red-bearded man parted the flags they were staring at, bent and scooped up a hatful of water, took a swallow, threw the rest down with an oath at its vile taste; and then, shaking the water out of his hat, he disappeared again.

Alan's last secret doubt about these bandits being utter strangers in the country was dispelled now. He had had a clear view of this huge red-bearded leader; he could say positively, as Ashmun and all the passengers had sworn, that he had never laid eyes on the man before.

To Bill he whispered: "When we reach that last house, I'll splash or do something to draw their attention. They'll come out to the flags edge again to see what it is. Don't shoot when just one man shows up. We'll wait till we have three of them in plain sight. If we get three of them at the first crack, we'll be fighting the other three on even terms. Now, Bill, when you're looking down a rifle barrel at those men, don't hesitate. Aim straight. We can't make prisoners of that outfit. This is a finish fight. One or the other party is going to get wiped out."

They started for the fourth muskrat house.

Halfway there, disaster overwhelmed them, sudden and stunning. It came from the air, in the shape of a pair of red-throated loons. Flapping heavily out of the west, the birds dropped with a loud splash not ten feet away from the two men.

At the splash Alan heard a muffled oath over in the flags; then a rustling movement, as though the bandits had nervously jumped for their guns; then silence. And then a voice from the twilight among the reeds:

"Nothin' Jus' a pair of divers plumped down."

The alarm would have blown over if the loons had swum off. But the birds, crop-heavy and indolent, stayed where they were, showing no intention of moving away. As the female started preening herself, the male turned its eye suspiciously at the two strange objects sticking above the water.

What startled it Alan never knew. Bill did not move; he himself did not but an eyelash. But in that jumpy taut silence the male suddenly threw open its beak and sent up a raucous maniacal shriek, as though some animal had seized it by the neck.

Instantly its mate joined in. The jarring, ear-splitting discord set muskrats diving off their houses and flushed every waterfowl in the lake a hundred yards distant. With a last frantic peal the loons taxied over the water, finally managed to take wing, and flapped heavily away.

But the damage had been done beyond retrieve. All that hour and a half of careful stalking, all the great caution and pains of slipping unawares upon the bandits, had been set at naught by the crazy shriek of a crazy loon.

Over in the murky twilight of the flags there was a commotion, sharp orders, the click of rifle bolts. At the edge of the flags a gun cra-a-chek, a rope of flame reached out, a bullet ricocheted off the water.

It was a shrewd maneuver from the bandits, a tentative shot to draw the fire of their stalkers and discover where they were. Alan was quick-witted enough to see their motive and to lie low; but Bill jerked his rifle against his cheek and shot point-blank at the spurt of fire.

A cry of pain went up. His bullet had scored. But the shot gave away their hiding. With all hope gone now of getting the drop, Alan scrambled behind cover of a muskrat house, fairly dragging Bill after him.

Half a dozen rifles exploded in the flags. Alan thrust his rifle over the top of the house and emptied it at the flashes. A bullet from a Savage, a sharp-cracking deadly Savage, hit his weapon, smashed the mechanism, numbed his hand, and drove jagged fiery bits of steel into his fingers.

For several minutes the bullets of the bandits beat a thundering tattoo against the mud mound. As best they could Alan and Bill lifted their belts over the top of their shelter, and fired back. They heard no more yelps of pain. They were shooting wildly, aimlessly. Realizing this, believing the bandits had crept into the run and were sheltered by its banks, Alan stopped shooting and checked Bill.

Yonder in the reeds the fire died away raggedly. A silence fell. A minute lengthened into two, three, four. Alan heard, or thought he heard, a faint rustling, a faint gurgling of water. He listened intently, but did not hear it again.

With his plans all shattered, with the twilight steadily deepening, he was torn with desperation. If he and Bill moved, it was sheer suicide. If they crouched much longer where they were, the bandits would certainly slip away from them in the coming dark.

As he fought to think of a plan that would break this deadlock, he heard a long whistle, a clear shrill whistle from Larry's direction. It was Larry signaling.

He sprang up. "Bill! They've backed away, they've slipped up, they're breaking for the lake! Larry's alone. We've got to help Larry!"

They splashed out of the pond and into the flags, in a frantic effort to reach the lake edge. The marsh reeds clutched at them, tripped them, wrapped around their legs. Savagely they tore their way on through to get into the clear in time to help Larry stop those bandits.

As he swung his clubbed rifle, smashing a pathway in front of him, Alan heard a lone gun cr-a-a-ch over on the lake, and heard the snarl of half a dozen repeating weapons answering it like an echo. They drowned, they overwhelmed it. . . . The lone gun did not speak again.

It seemed hours to him that he fought and tore through the dense flags, to reach the open and help a comrade who was standing up against six rifles. Before he broke through to the clear, the uneven battle had ended. As he burst out to the lake edge, he had a glimpse of the police canoe drifting helplessly out in the middle; and across at the far side he saw two long blurred objects just entering the deep-water channel.

Numbed and dazed at those six men escaping, there was a moment when Alan could only realize that his patrol had failed. That those criminals had vanished into the twilight and were lost in this watery wilderness, with a result utterly hopeless now. In the next moment he heard a sound, a sound like a growling voice calling his name. It drew his eyes to the drifting police craft. What was it doing out there? Like a flash he understood what Larry had done. When the bandits started across the lake to escape, Larry must have seen he could never stop them in the semi-darkness except at point-blank range. In the police canoe he must have come fearlessly out at them, alone. This first deadly volley had got him. That growling voice was Larry's.

Bill came bursting through to the clear. Alan whirled on him:

"Bill! They got Larry. He's wounded. Hard hit. Here . . . Tossing Bill his belt-gun and broken rifle, he ran out into breast-deep water and struck out powerfully for the drifting canoe.

By a provident mercy he reached it in time. With half a dozen holes spouting water into it, the craft was filling, tilting, about to overturn.

Larry lay at the bottom of it, writhing in pain.

By heroic struggles, swimming, pushing a dead-weight ahead of him, Alan got the craft into shoal water, put his hand under its keel then, and kept it afloat.

He dragged it to the bank just as Bill came splashing around the lake edge to join him.

"Alan! What happened? Where'd they go?"

"They got away. They're gone—gone. Forget it. Help me, Bill—with Larry—"

Together they bent over their bleeding, stricken comrade, and together they lifted him tenderly ashore.

CHAPTER V

The Broken Sword

By the light of an electric torch Alan cut away Larry's clothing and examined his wounds. Larry had been shot twice, and both wounds were fear-some. One bullet, a ricocheting slug, had struck him squarely in the knee, cruelly shattering the bones. The second had pierced his chest high up, just beneath the shoulder, and had passed entirely through his body. Stealing himself to the ordeal, Alan worked desperately with tourniquet and tiny medicine kit till he had stanchied the bleeding. Before he finished, Larry was rousing faintly from the bullet shock.

Half an hour later, when Alan had done all he could and Bill had managed to patch the canoe, they turned their faces toward home, in defeat, in sorrow, in an anguish over Larry.

Alan picked him up in his arms, gently and tenderly, trying to keep that fatal bleeding from starting afresh. With Bill following him, staggering under the weight of canoe, guns and pack, he headed back toward the Alouksa branch.

For an hour they stumbled along, plowed through bog and mire, groped through the tall impending flags. It was an hour of darkness, of blind heroic struggle. But they reached the Alouksa branch at last and set the canoe to water; and making Larry a soft bed of flags, they began their sorrowful journey.

With no sleep in more than fifty hours, with all that long hard chase behind them, they were on the verge of exhaustion, and could make no time. Their hands were raw with blisters from paddle work; their faces were bleeding from insect bites; their whole bodies ached intolerably. They were muddled, wet, gaunt with hunger, heart-sick from the disgraceful failure of their patrol. But they refused to stop or rest; Larry had to be taken home quickly; the hours were a matter of life or death to him. With dogged courage they drove themselves on.

With his spirits at so low an ebb, the picture of that fur pack in Dave MacMillan's shed rose before Alan's eyes, and he foresaw the inevitable consequences to flow from that discovery. In his exhaustion, with all the buoyancy of hope drained out of him, he no longer could feel that somehow he was going to get Joyce's father off lightly. He must take Dave into Endurance and enter charge; and now, with these bandits escaped, Dave would bear the whole brunt of the law's retribution. He felt that all the rest of his life he would be haunted by the memory of Joyce's pale face, frightened and anguished, in the cold gray dawn of yesterday.

The Cool Way to Cook in Summer!

With a Silent Glow Range Burner in your present kitchen range, you can get heat when you want it, and then turn it off when your cooking is finished. A coal fire heats up your kitchen between meals and wastes fuel, besides making all kinds of extra work from dirt and ashes.

More than 125,000 homes have chosen Silent Glow because it is the no-trouble burner. It lights quicker, gives more heat and burns less oil than any other range burner. Fits your Quebec heater or furnace too. Let us show you the "Reverso" oil filter, the "Microfeed" Valve and other patented and exclusive Silent Glow features that assure you dependable service for cooking and heating.

Made in Canada

Approved by National Board of Fire Underwriters

Makers also of Pilgrim Heaters for your home, summer cottage or garage; and Silent Glow Power Burners for large residences, schools, churches, etc.

Lesson for July 10

THE CALL OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2:11-4:30.
GOLDEN TEXT—And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Bush on Fire.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses Given a Great Task.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Hearing and Hearing God's Call.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Accepting a Great Task.

I. Moses Trained in Midian (2:11-15).

The occasion of his being in the desert was the effort of Pharaoh to slay him when he heard of Moses' act in slaying the Egyptian who was smiting a Hebrew. Having fled from the face of Pharaoh, he took up his abode in the land of the Midianites. He himself needed further discipline for his great work. This he experienced through forty years in the desert.

II. His Marriage to Zipporah (2:16-22).

Soon after his arrival in the Land of Midian he defended the daughters of Reuel, the priest of Midian, against the shepherds, and watered their flock. Out of gratitude for this act Moses was called into the priest's house to eat bread. While dwelling in this house Zipporah, a daughter of the priest, became his wife.

III. The Lord Speaks to Moses at the Burning Bush (3:1-6).

While keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert the Lord appeared to Moses in a vision in a burning bush. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the lesson of proper approach to God, who revealed himself as the God of his fathers, the covenant God.

IV. Moses Commissioned as the Deliverer of His People (3:7-10).

1. God's active interest in his people (v. 7).

a. "I have seen the affliction of my people." So keenly conscious is God of all that goes on in the world that not one of his chosen ones can be touched without his notice.

b. "I have heard their cries." No cry ever goes up to God from his child unheard.

c. "I know their sorrows." Many indeed are the sorrows of God's children, but he knows all about them and will adapt himself in grace to their need.

2. God's gracious obligation to his people (vv. 8, 9).

a. To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians.

b. To bring them up out of the land.

c. To bring them into a good land and large, into a land flowing with milk and honey.

3. God's commission to Moses (v. 10). This call seems to have been a great surprise to Moses.

V. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (3:11-4:16).

1. His personal unworthiness (v. 11). He said, "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh?" He realized his insufficiency for his task. Moses did not refuse to go, but laid his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that he would be with him.

2. The difficulty of the people to understand Moses' relationship to God (vv. 13, 14). Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer forty years before. Since God changes his name as he assumes a new relationship to his people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be and his corresponding name. This new name is "I AM." This name is from the Hebrew verb "to be." It indicates:

a. God's self-existence. It sets forth the idea that God is the self-existent one and the source of all existence.

b. His self-sufficiency. He said, "I AM THAT I AM." God is the unique one. He is not dependent upon any other existence.

c. His unchangeableness. "I AM THAT I AM" may be expanded to mean "I am what I always was. What I always was and am, I always will be."

3. Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1-5). This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders.

4. Lack of eloquence (4:10). Moses confessed that he was slow of speech and of a slow tongue. His ability to speak had not been improved since the Lord had spoken to him. This difficulty the Lord in his infinite patience met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron.

Laughter

Laughter should dimple the cheek, not furrow the brow. A jest should be such that all shall be able to join in the laugh which it occasions; but if it bears hard upon one of the company, like the crack of a string, it makes a stop in the music.—Faitham.

Consider This

In all differences consider that both you and your opponent or enemy are mortal, and that ere long your very memories will be extinguished.—Aurel.

LIFE TIME RESIDENT PASSES

Mrs. Dr. H. Legault, of St. Andrews.

A life-long resident of St. Andrews East, in the person of Henriette Sauvé, (Mrs. Dr. H. Legault), passed to her reward on Sunday, 3rd. inst., after a long sickness, being for two years stricken with paralysis. Aged 77 years, and born at Ottawa, she had spent practically the whole of her lifetime in St. Andrews, where she is survived by her husband Dr. Legault, aged 74, and her sister Mrs. J. E. Belanger, 84. A wide circle of friends mourn the loss of a familiar and respected figure in the community.

Several brothers and sisters, resident in Ottawa and in U. S., also remain to mourn their deep loss. A large and impressive funeral was held on Wednesday the 6th., conducted by Rev. (Father) L. C. Raymond, cure of Aylmer, Rev. L. Ladouceur, and Rev. L. Raymond, of the Seminary of Ste. Therese. Revs. L. P. Longpré and R. Roux were also present. Interment followed at St. Andrews cemetery.

GRENVILLE

Strawberry Festival at St. Matthew's

Although somewhat damped by recurring showers, the annual Strawberry Festival of St. Matthew's Church on July 1st., was a decided success. The various attractions were capably managed and well patronized.

The stall-holders were: Home cooking, Mrs. W. M. Bradshaw; Mrs. Fitzgerald and other ladies; Candy, Miss Grace Williamson; Bingo, Mrs. A. MacI. Pridham and Mr. and Mrs. A. Clark Soft drinks, Mr. Allan Cameron "Doll Shy", Mr. Walter Dewar; Fish pond, the Misses Kathleen Bradshaw, M. Jowett and Mrs. John Stewart; Ice cream, Mrs. R. B. White, Miss Morrow; and Miss Jessie Williamson, with other ladies, looked after the strawberries and cream.

The programme was in charge of Miss Pearl Dawson and, in spite of some last-minute disappointments, a very enjoyable entertainment was arranged. The offerings of the various performers, Miss Willahan, Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mrs. John Stewart, Mr. Dobbie and Master Keith Canning, were much appreciated by the audience. The proceeds, while not quite as much as usual, was nevertheless gratifying. The Rev. K. N. Brue-ton was Chairman. The thanks of the Church to all those who assisted by contributions and otherwise, are heartily tendered.

3 Months-old Baby Found on Highway Near Hawkesbury

Maurice Lucie, driver of an Ottawa truck, discovered a bundle alongside the highway, about four miles east of Hawkesbury last week, and on investigation found the bundle contained a three months' old baby boy in apparent healthy condition. The baby was taken to Chute au Blondeau, Ont., and received immediate attention. The Provincial Police Constable, Traffic Officer, and Ernest Johnson of the Children's Aid Society, were notified and are investigating.

Hold Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. John Silversen
Arundel Pioneers

Mr. and Mrs. John Silversen, of Huberdeau, celebrated the Golden Anniversary of their wedding, July 4th., and acted as hosts to a large number of friends and relatives who assembled to offer congratulations and good wishes for the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Silversen were married on July 4, 1882, at Lachute, by the Rev. Mr. Walton, coming to Huberdeau, at that time a part of Arundel, where they took up land and lived as pioneers of the district. They have spent all their married life there.

Mrs. Silversen was formerly Elizabeth Staniforth. She was one of the first white children to be born in Arundel, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Staniforth, having been among the original English settlers of this district. Mr. Silversen's family was among the first settlers in Lakefield, Que. and have all taken part in the building up of that district.

Among those present were several members of the family, including three married daughters, two married sons, twenty-seven grandchildren, and other relatives. Both Mr. and Mrs. Silversen are in excellent health and outstanding examples of the pioneers whose courage and perseverance resulted in the opening of the country in this district.

Bishop of Montreal Holds Confirmation Services

The Annual visit of Bishop Farthing to Lakefield was an event to be remembered by all interested in the well-being of the community.

The glorious weather, the well filled Churches, the earnestness of the worship and singing, the sincerity and helpfulness of the Bishop's addresses and the number of young candidates for confirmation, all combined in making a blessed and inspiring season.

The Bishop held services in all the four churches of this large parish, holding confirmation at St. Paul's Dunany, and St. Aidan's Louisa.

C.P.R. Picnic on Saturday

The C. P. R. Angus works are holding their ninth annual picnic at Lachute on Saturday, July 16, and a program of 20 events has been arranged by the sports committee. The picnic this year is again held under the auspices of the C.P.R. A.A.A.

Four special trains have been arranged, three in the morning, and one at noon. The picnic is being held at the fair grounds.

A soccer football game, a ladies' soft ball game and a men's soft ball game are included on the programme.

"The Place of Music in Church Worship"— Rev. H. Cousens

At St. Andrews East Special Musical Service.

A subject most appropriate to the musical service at St. Andrews Presbyterian Church last Sunday evening, was selected for a brief address by Rev. H. Cousens as visiting preacher, who dealt with this prolific topic in a concise, comprehensive manner refreshing to the large congregation in attendance.

Defining "Worship" as a spiritual act, and an attitude of heart mind, and will, the preacher identified the truest form of worship as that spontaneous expression of an overflowing heart to God.

We must be constantly alert to protect our religion from the forces that threaten to mar its beauty and usefulness. And strangely, those forces are as much within as without our Church doors. One tendency today is to view the church sermon as the principal observance in a service of worship—considering the organ prelude, the hymns, the Scripture-reading, the prayers, and the choral selections, as mere preliminaries and a gilded setting for the sermon! Too truly, "Protestants go to Church to hear sermons."

"We do not recognize any preliminaries in our order of worship," asserted the speaker, "apart from the preliminary of holy meditation before the service begins—rather than the conversation and unseemly behaviour too frequently noticed at this time. What may be excused as ignorance in a concert hall, becomes insolence in the House of God."

Our hymns and musical selections are essentially a part of worship itself, a means of expression for our own feelings and for being impressed by the feelings of others.

Touching interestingly on the history of religious music, Rev. Cousens pointed out it appeared as far back as the history of religion itself. David, the lyric singer of Israel, is credited with introducing musical instruments in the worship of the sanctuary. "Praise Him with the sound of the trumpet," sang the psalmist, "Praise Him with the psaltery and the harp. Praise him with the timbrel and the dance, praise him with stringed instruments and organs. Praise him with the loud cymbals, praise him upon the high sounding instruments. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." The Old Testament reveals that from very early times, music occupied a prominent place in Hebrew Worship.

"When we turn to the New Testament" continued the speaker, "it opens with the strains of a heavenly choir. It contains, further, such beautiful hymns as the Magnificat, Benedictus, the Gloria in Excelsis, and the Nunc Dimittis."

Music, finally, is a universal language and one which furnishes an eloquent expression for our feelings. "It is so full of expression that it overflows from the cup of man and spreads to the feathered singers of the air, as well as to the beasts of the field. The matins of the full-throated choir from the tree tops at early dawn, is a Gloria in Excelsis to the one who has ears to hear; while the music of man conveys a message to the dumb creatures that obey and serve his will. 'Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast.'"

—Yet man cannot understand music, for music is feeling. Religion is mystical, because it deals with God, who is mystery. Music is mystery, because music is divine. It is heard at its best when used in religion, for religious feeling runs deep, and it alone expresses all that is within man. "Bless the Lord, O my Soul, and all that is within me, bless His holy name."

Two Local Tennis Teams Tie Score

A friendly match was played on the courts of Ayers Limited Tennis Club last Tuesday evening between the players of that Club and those of "Le Club Canadien." The entire programme which consisted of Ladies' and Gent's singles and doubles, also mixed doubles, was very keenly contested, and it was only by a great effort that the Ayers team was able to tie the score by taking the last two events.

Of special interest was the Gent's singles match, between M. Cousineau and M. Beauregard, and won by M. Cousineau of the visiting team, with a score of 6-4.

The players who defended the honors of their respective clubs were as follows:—

Les Canadiens—Mlle. Larocque, Mlle. Ethier, Mlle. Lamarche, M. Lamarche, M. Blais, M. Chevrier, M. P. Lefebvre, M. Cousineau, M. Lamarche, M. Chevrier.

Ayers—Mlle. V. Tessier, Mlle. C. Tessier, Mde. D. Paquette, R. Beauregard, O. Tessier, G. Leggett, L. Desrosiers, C. Henderson, R. W. Elliott.

Former Lachute Girl Athlete will Represent Canada

Breaks Two Provincial Records
Will be Member of Olympic Team at Los Angeles

Miss Mary Vandervliet, who will be remembered by many in this town as a former Academy pupil, scores a head-liner in the New Liskeard Speaker, breaking two Ontario records, the 100 metres and the 200 metres respectively.

Says the Toronto Telegram, "100 Metres—standard 12 2-5 seconds. And this mark was reached by the fast-striding Mary Vandervliet, the New Liskeard ace stepper, who incidentally set up a new Ontario record. The former mark was 12 7-10 seconds. It looks as if the fleet Miss Vandervliet will be hearing the "All Aboard" for Los Angeles. She also captured the 200 metres in 26 4-10, making another brand new Ontario record."

Miss Vandervliet has since been selected to run on the Dominion's sprinting team at the tenth Olympic Games, an enviable honor among amateur athletes. The women's Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada has turned over the sum of $2,100 to assist in defraying expenses of the girls' teams representing Canada at Los Angeles.

It is interesting to note also that Miss Aileen Meagher, Halifax, sprint star, is entered among the Canadian runners as result of the Hamilton trials. Miss Meagher is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Bernier of this town, who are both duly proud of her success.

Orangemen Celebrate at Lakefield

242nd. Anniversary of Orange Order

The members of Lachute Local Orange Lodge, No. 2231, extended invitations to the Orange Lodges throughout this County to attend their Annual Orange Picnic, on Tuesday last, the "Glorious Twelfth." The invitation was enthusiastically responded to by the members of Louisa, Dalesville and Arundel, and was headed by two pipers and a Drum Band from Glangarry. The procession left Lachute from the Oddfellows' Hall and was met at Lakefield by the members of Shrewsbury and Morin Heights Lodges. After lunch the gathering was addressed by the Rev. H. Cousens, Rev. A. E. Mount, Mrs. Porter, Grand Organizer of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association. Rt. W. Bro. W. J. Roberts, P.G.M., the latter both of Montreal, also by Mr. A. O. Kerr, County Master, and the Rev. J. A. Lackey. Afterwards a program of races & sports was engaged in and greatly enjoyed by both old and young. Mr. L. Dawson was chairman of the gathering, and Mr. G. F. W. Kuhring acted as master of ceremonies for the various events.

Report of Argenteuil W.I. Branches

....Chatham's June meeting was favored with an interesting paper from Mrs. Wyman McGibbon on "Education and Better Schools," and were pleased to have Mrs. John McQuat, a former member with them, who delivered an interesting address.

Frontier, with 14 members in attendance, listened to a splendid address from Mr. Clifton Hall, principal of Lachute Academy, in June, and held a combined business meeting and quilting in July, being favored as well with some interesting reports on the annual convention at Macdonald College, also making arrangements for a lawn social to be held in August. Twelve members and five visitors were present.

Lakefield: 7 members and 4 visitors held a discussion on Poultry, in June.

Morin Heights reported a very interesting meeting for June, with Rev. Geo. W. Mingie, of Montreal, as speaker. His speech was in the form of a comparison between French civil law, and British common law, and stressing the necessity of registering births, making of marriage contracts and wills. Reports of the Convention in Macdonald College were heard, and a decision made to provide clothing for a child going to hospital, also a fund to be placed to credit of an aged indigent.

Upper Lachute—East End heard an interesting paper on the Value of Social Intercourse, Evening topic, National Events, the branch also made arrangements to cater to a booth at the Farmers' Picnic, and to help provide funds for prizes for sports.

Impressive Service at Centenary of the Lachute Presbyterian Church

"The Life of a Church is the Life of a Community."

Gratitude, rejoicing and optimism were outstanding sentiments in the Centenary observance of Lachute Presbyterian Church, at a crowded service last Sunday morning in the Auditorium. St. Andrews congregation joined with the Lachute membership, Rev. Dr. Ballyntyne assisting the Lachute minister, Rev. H. Cousens, in an impressive service fitting to the auspicious celebration of 100 years of Presbyterian worship in this town.

On the Auditorium platform, tastefully decorated with flowers for the occasion, Rev. W. L. Williman of Montreal, expressed appreciation for the privilege of being present as guest preacher, and won the attention of his large audience in a sermon particularly fitted to the occasion.

His remarks were based upon a text from the First Book of Romans, 1: 16, viz: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation, for every one that believeth." And although many who profess a belief in the Gospel have still no conviction of personal responsibility, the foregoing passage must impress upon every Christian a divine commission to individual service and sacrifice. The preacher lamented the fact that often, although we sing our praise and talk generously of our faith, in actual practice our Christianity means little.

Faith was expounded in its three aspects. Firstly, through the historicity of the Christian religion—whereby the world accepted Jesus Christ, unquestionably, as a figure of history, living and working 2,000 years ago on earth. Secondly, the aspect of reflection—by which faith was intensified, in the knowledge that Christ and His gospel had descended to man in accordance with a set plan and purpose. And thirdly, the absolute conviction which came from experience of Christ; this aspect of faith the speaker termed as experiential. Furthermore, a personal experience of Christ—typified for our own daily life by the vision, the conviction, and the conversion of Saul of Tarsus—is a reality which cannot be gainsaid, and furnishes the strongest element in Christian faith.

The historical, and the long-reflective faith in Christ, was also illustrated in the story of the woman who sought to touch His garment. The incident culminated in a conviction which left no room for doubt, and the woman's devotion was lastingly assured in the pronouncement "Thy faith hath made thee whole". Such experience of Christ may, and must, impress each Christian with His utter reality.

Returning again to Paul, the preacher urged that faith in this community might be exemplified as it was in Saul, the tyrant, who, being converted, devoted his life thereafter to a practical service and sacrifice. Christianity of this practical type can exert strong influence for good in this particular church and this particular community.

Surveying the past 100 years of successful service, the conclusion was reached:

Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Phil Bennis, of Toronto, who passed away on Sunday last. Deceased was formerly Miss Margaret McDiarmid and spent her early girlhood in Lachute attending our Academy. She leaves to mourn her early death, beside her parents, a devoted husband and young son, and several brothers and sisters. A largely attended funeral took place on Tuesday.

D. A. McPhee is President of New Livestock Improvement Ass'n.

Prominent Livestock Breeders of the United Counties of Prescott and Ontario, met recently in Vankleek Hill, to lay the foundation of a Livestock Improvement Association. The object of this Association is to follow up the Livestock improvement work which has been started by the establishment of a Restricted Area for the eradication of tuberculosis in dairy cattle. In co-operation with the Ontario Department of Agriculture new policies will be put into force, such as cow testing, better feeding, bonus to farmers buying their first purebred bull, etc. Twenty-five farmers were present at this meeting, D. A. McPhee being elected to the Presidency of the executive committee.

Charity Regatta Ball

Annual Laurentian Event Set For Saturday, July 30

The annual international charity masquerade regatta and ball of the Laurentians will be held this year on the night of July 30, the committee announces through its permanent chairman, F. Maurice Child, of New York. During the afternoon boating, canoeing and swimming events will be run off, and prizes awarded to the winners. The regatta starts at 2 p.m., in Round Lake, Weir.

Started some five years ago, this annual event has grown yearly, until now it becomes one of the principle sources of income to the Episcopal Church at Weir, and the Roman Catholic Church at Huberdeau, which divide equally the money raised at the masquerade ball. This year the dresses will follow the motif of "In old New Orleans," although no masquerade dress will be barred. Movies of previous balls will be shown during the evening, and refreshments will be served at midnight. The committee will be formed from the guests of the Round Lake Inn, where dancing will commence at 8.30 p.m., and continue until sun-up.

Rev. F. L. Jobb Inducted at Maniwaki

Representatives from Maniwaki, Desert & Gracefield were in attendance at the induction of Rev. F. L. Jobb at Maniwaki United Church. Mr. Jobb, formerly of St. Mungo's Church, Cushing, is the successor of Rev. E. T. Montour, who has been transferred to the Canadian West. Rev. Dr. B. T. Holden of Wakefield had charge of the service and inducted the new minister. Opportunity was given Mr. and Mrs. Jobb to meet the people in a social hour at the close.

Admitted to Bar

Mr. Paul Raymond, son of Notary and Mrs. Raymond, of Lachute, was admitted to the Bar of this Province last week.

Mr. Raymond made his classical studies at Rigaud and St. Laurent Colleges. During his law studies at the University of Montreal, he was elected President of his confreres of the Faculty of Law, and as President of the "Société des Débats" he represented the University of Montreal, together with Mr. P. Massé, in a debate held at Quebec City. This debate was broadcast over the radio, being the first time in the annals of the Universities of Montreal and Laval.

Mr. Raymond's brother, Gérard is also a lawyer, with a week-end office at Lachute.

Every wish for success is extended to Mr. Raymond, who will practice his profession in Montreal.

THE GLORY OF THE MOUNTAINS

Dear Boys :-

Since I wrote you last week, I have been once again traveling this time instead of east, my direction has been West, & now I am in the very midst of the Rocky Mountains. My train, one moment passing through a deep ravine, with the Mountains towering above us on either side, and the next we are climbing upward, on and on until we sweep around a curve and from the windows of the carriage I look down hundreds of feet where a mountain stream is bubbling and splashing its way onwards towards either a lake or large river. All of which makes me wish that you could be with me to share the wondrous beauty that surrounds me on every side.

Mountains have a wonderful fascination for me. They appear so strong, so eternal. They have of themselves nothing in common with man's futile efforts, that is in comparison with Nature's Magnificent handiwork. They are unchangeable, and will remain so for all time. This thought I feel should help us a great deal. How often we think that because things do not go just as we would wish that nothing is any good, and no effort of any avail. I am reminded of a story of a man. Who, having failed at something on which all his efforts had been put, said, "This is the finish, the end of everything" and gave up, trying any more. I would have liked to have taken that man by the hand and led him onward and upward to where I am now, and pointing to the scenery around us have told him. "Friend, you are wrong. IT IS NOT THE END — IT IS ONLY THE BEGINNING. See for yourself these Mountains and recall to your mind that they stand there as the ETERNAL CHALLENGE TO MANKIND, for they represent the unfailing testimony of the Creator. I will raise up Mountains and will build my habitation therein, so that my word shall endure for ever."

In Mountains, we, perhaps better than anywhere else, see the contrast of sunlight and shadow. In places, where the deepest gloom prevails, the brilliant sunlight just lurks around the corner. Therefore, take courage and try once more for there is so little way for you to go if only you but knew it, until you have reached the spot where the sunshine, unhampered, and unspoiled, reigns supreme.

What little distance doth divide
One shadow from the sunny side
Of life's long trail. That rugged road
So wrought with danger; yet bestowed
With God's true gifts
They seem to lie on every hand
Like roads that scatter Mountain land.

And so this week, dear boys, I leave you with the thought in your minds of STRENGTH, ETERNITY and RELIABILITY. Take courage then and I am sure that in all the years to come you will so adapt yourselves as to bring honour and distinction upon the Wonder Land of Canada which is your own beloved Country.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 8.

It is not my purpose here to give a detailed description of that memorable journey taken by our hero, his sister and uncle, to the Port of Southampton, enough to say that it proved of the greatest possible interest to all three of them and in different ways.

First, Captain Summerville was happy and contented for the reason that he had accomplished that which he had set out to do, namely the finding of his nephew and niece and was highly gratified in the discovery that both of them were of such character that he could be justly proud to acknowledge them as relatives.

Then there was little Babs to whom the events of the past two days had taken upon themselves the spirit and form of a great adventure, and she was not very much concerned as to what was going to happen in the future but was contented enough to leave that important question in the hands of her uncle and brother. She had made up her mind to take things as they came, and, as long as they were nice, make the most of them.

Lastly there was Jack. His uncle's words to him concerning his future had aroused his highest hopes and interest. If he had been given the choice of any work, he would most certainly have voted to that of the sea in preference to any other, and now it seemed as if his fondest hopes and ambitions were to be realized. All the while the train was making its way across the country, his thoughts were on and about the ship; already he could feel the spray of the sea as the vessel, of which crew he was to become a member, forged her way through the mighty waves. He could even now, above the rumble of the wheels beneath him, hear the whistle of the wind through the rigging, and his imagination carried him far ahead to the beautiful waters of the Pacific Ocean, to the Islands of Coral, to the tall waving palm trees within the shadows of which he hoped to find altogether new experiences and unlooked for adventure.

Lost in such thoughts, he was quite ignorant of the fact that Babs had spoken to him no less than three times and, receiving from him no answer in response, had plaintively turned to her uncle with the remark, "What is the matter with Jack, Uncle? He has taken no notice of me at all."

Captain Summerville laughed, "So you think that you should be taken notice of, do you young lady, and that this brother of yours is so absorbed in his own plans that he has no longer any use for his little sister."

Jack flashed up with vexation at being caught in a state of what he called "day-dreaming," "I'm sorry, Babs, what was it you said to me?"

The little maiden tossed her head, "It doesn't matter now, anyway, because we have passed it, but if you are never going to answer my questions, Bubbles, I don't know what I'm going to do."

Again Captain Summerville chuckled, "I'll tell you, Babs, what you can do if Jack has taken a vow of silence where you are concerned, you can devote all your attentions to your old uncle who will value them more than he can say. Don't you think that's a good idea?"

Whether Babs thought this was a good idea or not it would be difficult to say for just then the train ran into its destination, and their journey was over.

It did not take long for them to jump out onto the platform where Jack was immediately detailed by his uncle the job of looking after the baggage, which he promptly set about to perform, pausing just a moment to see his uncle return the salute of a man in naval uniform whom he rightly conjectured to be the ship's first officer and under whose authority he would be in the future.

A few minutes later they made their way to a small hotel near the docks, and old building of historical interest in which as the landlord proudly pointed out, the great Admiral Drake had stayed previous to putting out to sea.

"Only one more night on land," stated the Captain as Jack and Mary were shown the room in which they were to sleep, "So make the most of it. I'll have to leave you two youngsters by yourselves for a while because I have much business to see to. So with a final injunction not to get into mischief and with a last warning that a meal would be ready for them about two o'clock, their uncle with his officer left them.

"Now what shall we do, Babs," inquired Jack, looking at his sister.

"Suppose we go out and look at things," was the reply, "Perhaps we might even be able to find the ship if we try hard enough."

A VANISHING TRIO

An interesting news story records the impressions of an old-time harnessmaker who is well past the allotted span of life. There is pathos in the narrative. Time was, and not so long ago, when there were few places more attractive than the harness shop, where the horses came to be outfitted; and now such a store hardly can be found. In country towns the harness shop had rare charm for the country boy, whose visit was not complete without a chance to jingle the long strings of sleigh-bells, while he inhaled the pungent odor of leather, and watched the cutters at their work.

There was ready-made harness; also the made-to-order variety. Just as with man the horse of standard size was easily fitted, while the big fellows who had run to grith or had other unusual physical outlines had to be measured. Altogether, it was a nice business, and between the skilled harnessmaker and the artistic tailor there was something like a bond of sympathy. Fitting was their business, and they were proud of their work.

The tailor remains in business but the harnessmaker is passing from the scene. Hand-in-hand, the harness shop and the lively stable are walking slowly down the road that leads to oblivion; & not far behind goes the blacksmith. Great glaring garages and oil stations have usurped their places not only in the cities but in towns and villages, and even at the crossroads. Saddles and bridles may be seen when the thoroughbreds step about the race-tracks; and the odd heavy draught gray horse is dressed up in the old way, but the harness business has seen its great day.

Between 6 and 7 o'clock Thursday evening, a bear invaded the barn of Mr. Wm. MARRIAGE AT GLENBORO, MAN., OF INTEREST HERE

A pretty ceremony took place at the United Church residence Glenboro, Man., on Thursday morning, June 30th., when Patricia Eunice Marguerite, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. River, became the bride of Mr. Robert H. Dowd, of Cypress George Rolston Holmes.

The bride looked very charming in a gown of rose lace with matching accessories. A novel feature of the wedding was that it was held on the bride's birthday.

Rev. J. B. Frances officiated in the presence of a few relatives. Following the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the bride's parents, where a delicious wedding breakfast was served, the table being centred by a three-tier wedding cake.

Later the bride donned a travelling gown of blue flat crepe with navy coat and hat to match, with grey accessories and the happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes, for a honeymoon in Winnipeg, returning via Sidney and Brandon, where they will attend the fair before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes will reside on the groom's farm near Cypress River.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE FOR LACHUTE PRESBYTERIAN CENTENARY

gregation was inspired with the devotion of its forefathers and the pioneers of Presbyterianism in this territory. Rev. W. L. Willman pleaded that the coming era might see further progress, inspired by the dynamic of Love and through a practical, sacrificing faith among the youth and rising membership of this church. In conclusion, words of congratulation, good wishes to the church, and personal thanks to Rev. H. Cousins were appropriately voiced. An epitaph on the Covenanters' graves at Greyfriars, where the preacher had been urged to renew his vows to the old traditional faith, was left as a parting message to the audience. The passage was: "Halt, ye passers-by, and Think."

Rev. Dr. Ballantyne, on behalf of the parent congregation of St. Andrews, voiced his pride in the virulence of Presbyterianism throughout this countryside, and congratulated the Lachute session upon its century of successful life and ardent worship. St. Andrews East Presbyterians after 115 years, were "still going strong." In Lachute, they were not only going strong, but going "stronger than ever."

Mr. Anlon Young, baritone, contributed to the marked success of the gathering with two sacred solos, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Young. Messrs. Perrie and A. Murray, of St. Andrews, also sang in duet, "Watchman, What of the Night?"

Favorable Factors Draw Visitors to Ottawa this Year

Outstanding Event Will Be the Visit of United States Marine Band.....Empire Displays Due to Imperial Economic Conference.

With the opening of the Central Canada Exhibition at Ottawa less than six weeks away, the directors announce that all indications point to this year's exhibition adding to the successes of the past. No effort has been spared to maintain high standard of excellence in each department, in fact the aim is to exceed all previous years. Many favorable factors are helping.

Perhaps the most outstanding event is the visit of the United States Marine Band, the official band from Washington, which will be heard in two programs each day of exhibition week, August 22nd. to 27th. To give exhibition patrons the opportunity of hearing the organization the directors required the co-operation of the Dominion government and the United States government in extending the invitation and in having it accepted. The Ottawa visit will be the first time the band has been in Canada and it will come at full strength, 75 men.

The Imperial Economic Conference also is helping. On account of this conference the usual displays of the merchants and manufacturers, Dominion and provincial governments, will be enhanced by exhibits from far-flung parts of the Empire. Then too, the distinguished statesmen attending the conference are expected to accept invitations to the exhibition. Many will combine a visit to the exhibition with an opportunity to be in Ottawa when the momentous parley is in session.

Topping the entertainment program for in front of the grandstand will be The Winter Garden Revue, a spectacular song and dance offering, with New York favorites, in leading roles, pretty girls, in fascinating attire, gorgeous scenery and lighting effects and an ensemble that will rival an indoor theatrical attraction of the first order.

The Ottawa exhibition, growing each year, is now so large that one can scarcely enumerate all the departments. These include a pure food show, automobile show, dog show, child welfare demonstrations, baby show, horse races, handicrafts and arts, dairy, agriculture and horticulture, live stock of all kinds, poultry and pets, and scores of other features not forgetting the midway where the latest in shows and rides will be seen and where fun will be rampant.

Prize lists are now available and may be had by applying to H. H. McElroy, manager and secretary. Reduced fares have been arranged on railway and bus lines and for the motorists special parking space will be provided inside the grounds. For a party intending to visit the exhibition the best plan is to buy coupon tickets which give five admissions for one dollar, a saving of seventy-five cents, but these must be obtained in advance of the opening of the exhibition.

At a dinner at the University of London last week the honored guest was a white-haired old fellow wearing tight-fitting trousers a wide-brimmed straw hat, a loose white collar. He spoke to no one, ate no food. He did not even move during the whole dinner. Britishers are traditionally polite, impassive; the other dinner-guests ate their food and paid no attention to this funny old stuffed shirt. A stuffed shirt was literally what they were honoring. When Jeremy Bentham, famed economist-philosopher, died at 84, he left to the University of London his body, to be dissected in the presence of friends. In his will he provided that "my skeleton will be caused to be put together in such a manner as that the whole figure may be seated in the chair usually occupied by me when living in the attitude in which I was sitting when engaged in thought." Jeremy Bentham's bones were dressed up in his own garments topped off with a wax effigy of his head.

Who splits the wood in your house - You?

WHETHER it's you or not, it's a mighty disagreeable task. Even after the wood is split, carried and burned, you are not through with work. Ashes are still to be disposed of, cleaning up to be done... and so on every day you have a fire. The same with coal, only coal is dirtier still. Honestly, is all this work and trouble worth while when, at a very small cost, (soon saved) you can install a

CANADIAN VS. U. S. DEPRESSION

Rev. Father James Cox, pastor of St. Patrick's R.C. church at Pittsburgh, Penn., was in Quebec city the other day en route to Dublin, Ireland, to attend the Eucharistic Congress. He expressed himself quite freely regarding the present depression as it affected Canada and the United States. Perhaps a few paragraphs of the interview he gave the press will be interesting to Canadians, especially those who think Canada is the centre of the world's depression.

"You Canadians don't know what depression is," he said, "if you want a real description of depression, take a trip to the United States. There was never any real panic in Canada. There were no periods of inflation or deflation. This depression in the United States has been used by capitalists as an excuse to cut down wages and make men slaves. Instead of improving conditions they are making present problems worse. Every time there is a wage reduction four or five families are added to the long list of hungry Americans. Already there are 18,000,000 men out of work, and if present conditions continue, in a short time there will be between 25 and 27 millions without work."

Father Cox said that farmers in Canada were in a "heaven" compared with those in the United States. "Up here," he said, "the farmers have wheat, cattle and horses. They possess material wealth if not gold. In our United States the farmer has nothing and what he has he cannot sell."

We believe that Canada's depression is a fifty-fifty depression—fifty per cent real and fifty per cent imagination. We have allowed our minds to dwell so much on it that conditions are very much worse than they would be if we forgot our troubles and let these conditions adjust themselves. In contradiction to the policy followed by the United States employers, Canadian industry has made an honest effort to keep going, and while wages have dropped from the figure of a few years ago, we do not think there has been very much tendency to take advantage of the unemployment situation to beat down the workman, or hire his labor at less than his just done.

Perhaps, too, Canada's superior condition over the United States is attributed to a more stable government, a solid banking system, and her connection with the grand old British Empire, which always has, and will again, weather the storm and emerge financially stronger than before. Durham Chronicle.

THE WEST IS OPTIMISTIC

In Western Canada, after three years of poor crops and drought, the outlook is for a bumper yield; in addition, the world forecast is favorable to better prices. As a result the good old Western spirit is returning. The people of the West are in cheerful mood. Senator W. A. Buchanan, writing in the Lethbridge Herald after returning from Ottawa, says that there is more hopefulness in Alberta than anywhere else in the country. He adds that a trip to Montreal, Toronto or Ottawa, with a little mingling with the nabobs of finance and industry, places one in an atmosphere of gloom, and the only escape is to move westward, where people do not take their setbacks with so much down heartedness. He says that Alberta is not talking blue ruin as they are in the Eastern centres.

Electrical Firm Is Fifty Years Old.

P. F. SISE, President of the Northern Electric Company Limited.

Aerial View of the present Factory Plant of the Northern Electric Company, Limited, at 1261 Shearer Street.

One is always pleased to hear of the progress and development of those firms who are building up the industrial life of Canada, and this week we are pleased to chronicle the fact that the Northern Electric Co'y., whose advertisements have been consistently before our readers, have now attained their fiftieth year in business, and their march of progress is of noteworthy interest.

Northern Electric Began Production in Modest Way on Craig Street.

Just 50 years ago the first Canadian telephone factory was started on an upper floor of what is now 22 Craig street west in Montreal.

The staff consisted of a superintendent and a single 30 h.p. steam engine which served all 10 men and boys and the power was derived from the tenants of the building. From this modest beginning has grown the largest organization of its kind in this country and one of the largest in the Empire, the nation-wide organization known as the Northern Electric Company, Limited, with its great factory and warehouse in Montreal with an area of more than 1,000,000 square feet of floor space, and its 16 branch warehouses and sales offices across the Dominion from coast to coast. P. F. Sise is president.

The demand increased so rapidly that in 1900 the company designed and erected its own factory building where besides telephone equipment the manufacture of a number of lines closely allied apparatus was also undertaken. This marked the commencement of "A National Electrical Service" which has now been adopted as the company's motto. As these new enterprises multiplied in number and grew in volume in response to the ever-increasing demand of the rapidly developing territories in the west still larger premises were required for factory and warehouse, and in 1914 the company found itself obliged to erect the great new building which houses the manufacturing departments of the Northern Electric Company, Limited, on two entire city blocks, from which issues a constant stream of electrical equipment for some form of the transmission of power, light, signals or sound for use in industry or the home which is distributed to all parts of the Dominion through a chain of sixteen branch warehouses.

Many Products.

The telephone has always occupied a very large proportion of the Northern Electric Company's activities, but is by no means the principal product today. In response to the ever-increasing demand and the constantly widening field of the electrical business, the Northern Electric Company has steadily increased the variety of its products which now embrace every field of the electrical industry and trade, every form of electrical sound or visual signal or communication fire alarm systems, radio transmitting and receiving, scientific instruments and equipment, wires and cables of every description, sound-amplifying for theatres and auditoriums, power lines supplies and so on, in addition to what the company manufacturers it directs the manufacturing and sales distributing policies of a large number of other lines of electrical home equipment, besides merchandising many other lines for other Canadian manufacturers, and operates on one of the country's most up-to-date broadcasting stations with the call letters of C. H. Y. C.

In all, some 70,000 separate items are listed in this company's general catalogue, a fact which testifies to the completeness of the service rendered by this progressive Canadian organization to the industry and commerce of the country.

Splendid Empire Achievements

An enterprising Sydney, N.S.W., newspaper, in order to convey to its readers the magnitude of the huge new Harbour Bridge recently constructed at the Australian port, printed the composite picture shown above for the enlightenment of its readers.

Thrilled by descriptive stories of the new Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain" that appeared in Australian papers when that giant liner was sped on its maiden voyage last year by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Australians have taken as prideful an interest in the "Empress of Britain" as Canadians, and the picture, labelled "Empire Achievements" paid tribute to the enterprise of the Dominion and the Commonwealth. Underneath was the legend, "Sydney Harbor Bridge, opened March, 1932. Length of Arch Span 1,650 feet, breadth 160 feet, weight of arch steelwork 38,000 tons. "Empress of Britain," in service May 1931, length 760 feet 6 inches, breadth 97 1/2 feet, gross registered tonnage 42,500."

The "Empress of Britain" on her voyage from Canada June 16th, 1932, justified Australia's faith in her as an Empire achievement by creating the magnificent new record, Father Point to Cherbourg, in four days, seven hours, 58 minutes.

ANSWERS TO
"DO YOU KNOW"

1. The electron is the fastest thing known to date.
2. There is an altitude at which water will not boil; however no one has ever reached that point as it is about twenty miles above sea level.
3. A pebble thrown overboard will reach the bottom at any depth.
4. The less often water is changed the better. Rusting is caused by the free oxygen in water. After water is boiled water is riven off and no more rusting will occur.
5. Two sound waves meeting each other so that the condensation part of one wave will meet the rarefaction part of the other will neutralize each other. Strike a tuning fork, and twirl it slowly about its axis. The sound will become faint four times in a revolution where the two sound waves from the two prongs interfere with each other.
6. The statement that there is an instrument that will measure the heat of a candle five miles away is correct. There is in the Bureau of Standards an instrument to measure the heat so delicate that it is responsive of a single star, which is made to the heat of a candle several hundred miles away.

A THORN IN THE FLESH

One of the most difficult things we are called to do is to come in frequent contact with a person who irritates us constantly and not lose our sense of proportion. Most of us, at one time or another, have had to meet people who seem to rub us the wrong way no matter what they say or do. We may not actually dislike them but they keep us upset all the time. When you come to think about it, it is very foolish to allow any person, especially someone about whom we are indifferent, to spoil our dispositions and our happiness.

It was necessary for me to come in frequent contact with a woman who riled me all the time about trifling things. I finally shook myself mentally, and decided I was very weak-minded to allow anyone to make my whole life uncomfortable and that I was going to stop it. Fortunately, just at that time I read a book with a character in it very similar to this woman who was my bete-noir. I enjoyed the woman in the book immensely, so I wondered why I could not enjoy the woman in actual life. I started looking on her as a character in a book. You know when you are reading you will often be able to look ahead and to know just what the character will say and do in any given circumstance. You know what is going to happen, but enjoy reading about it anyhow. That is what I did with this woman. I thought ahead to see what she was apt to say and do. When she did it, I was amused instead of annoyed. I supposed I was subtly flattered on my ability to read character. In any case the sting was gone. She still annoyed me, but not nearly so much, as I derived more amusement than annoyance from that time on. Try the scheme and see if it will work with your thorn in the flesh.

The anchovy is a small fish of the herring variety, found in the Mediterranean region. Almost any description of an old-fashioned meal will mention anchovies. Then they went out of fashion. (There are fashions in foods, too,) now they are having a slight revival and many of the food-wise are welcoming anchovies to give variety. They may be had whole, or in paste. I use the paste for a good many purposes. The most frequent use is for sandwiches or canapes. It may be made into sandwiches with no addition, simply spread the buttered bread with the anchovy paste. It has a very decided flavor, so go easy with it and use just a small quantity. Sometimes I spread it on soda crackers, preferably the little round variety, and if I wish to be really festive, I put a slice of stuffed olive in the centre. These cannot be made too long ahead as the cracker loses its crispness. If I want to make them sometime ahead, I put the cracker which has been spread with anchovy in a hot oven until the cracker has browned slightly.

TOASTED ANCHOVY ROLLS

Anchovy toasted sandwiches are very appetizing. These may be the plain sandwich toasted in the oven or on a toaster, or they may be rolled. To make the rolled variety, butter thin slices of fresh bread and remove the crusts. Spread sparingly with anchovy paste. If you want small dainty sandwiches, cut the slice in half before rolling. Roll the bread and fasten with a toothpick. Put these rolls in a hotoven until toasted and serve hot. The other evening I served a variety of toasted rolls. Anchovy, Cheese (made by covering the buttered bread with grated cheese then sprinkling with salt, and Asparagus (dip canned asparagus in salad dressing and place one on each slice of bread and roll, if you use a half slice, cut the asparagus in half too. These rolls were very popular. I might as well confess, I counted noses and made ten apiece and every last one was eaten. I served them in silver entree dishes to keep them piping hot. Olives and radishes were the accompaniments. These two are particularly attractive served in the same dish because of their contrast in color.

Because of their pronounced flavor, Anchovies combine well with other foods such as eggs and cheese. Combine anchovy paste and mayonnaise with either chopped hard-cooked egg or cheese. A little anchovy added to the egg yolk in devilled eggs makes another pleasing change. These are all very simple ways of using anchovies and they are worth trying by way of variety.

SNOWBALLS

Bake a cake in a large tin so that it will be about 1½ inches thick when cooked, or cut a loaf cake into the desired thickness. Cut cubes about 1½ inches and round off the corners and edges. Cover with boiled icing and roll in shredded cocoanut. Repeat this again. These are specially attractive when served with other small cakes which have been tinted delicate shades.

COCOANUT PIE

2 cups milk
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons cornstarch
½ cup cocoanut
Heat milk in double boiler. Mix sugar and cornstarch. Separate eggs. Add beaten yolks and mix well. Add hot milk to this mixture, a little at a time. Return to double boiler and cook until it thickens. Remove from fire and add cocoanut. Beat the egg whites stiff and carefully fold them into the mixture. Pour into a baked pie shell and brown in a slow oven of 300 degrees.

MAGIC CHOCOLATE FROSTING!

Good-bye to old-time chocolate frosting that took a long half-hour! This frosting—in five minutes—is ready to spread on your cake, in lovely, creamy-rich swirls, a half-inch thick, if you like. It always succeeds. It's always perfect!

And this frosting trick leads to many others! Add hot water—it's a Chocolate Sauce. Add more hot water—it's a delicious Hot Chocolate. Or add water and egg whites, it's a Chocolate Pudding!

MAGIC CHOCOLATE FROSTING

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1-1/3 cups (1 can) Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk*
1 tablespoon water

Melt chocolate in double boiler. Add Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk, stir over boiling water five minutes until it thickens. Add water. Cool cake before spreading frosting.

*MAKE NO MISTAKE—Be sure you use the right kind of milk in this recipe —Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk. Although evaporated milk is fine for many uses, it simply won't work in this magic recipe.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS OF PROGRESS

A forgotten artist, too modest to sign his name, and a second-hand dealer form the strange combination that brought to light one of the best examples of the growth of Canada's trade with the Orient. Forty-five years ago the first ship ever to fly the house-flag of the Canadian Pacific, a flag that has since found its way into practically every port in the world, set out from Port Moody, B.C. She was the barque-rigged steamer "Abyssinia" and, such a marvel was she that the modest artist referred to transferred her graceful shape to canvas with painstaking detail.

Another artist, chancing upon the picture, imposed it upon a photograph of the latest Canadian Pacific ship in the Orient trade, the magnificent Empress of Japan. They are shown above in exact proportion as they would have appeared passing each other on the broad wastes of the Pacific.

Some idea of the development of shipping in the 45 years may be gained by a comparison. The "Abyssinia" was 363 feet six inches long, 42½ feet wide, had a tonnage of 3,376 and a speed of 15 knots. The "Empress of Japan" is 670 feet long, 87½ feet wide, has a tonnage of 26,000 and, during her record-breaking passages between Vancouver, Victoria, Yokohama, Shanghai, Hong Kong and Manila has developed as high as 23 knots—more than half as fast again.

A strange coincidence is that the "Abyssinia" was chartered from W. G. Pearce, who later became the Fairfield Shipbuilding Company which famous Clydeside shipyard built the Empress of Japan two years ago.

Here and There

The Nova Scotia Dairy Producers' Association will hold their annual convention in 1933 at the Cornwallis Hotel, Kentville, N.S.

Shipments of celery to Canada this year from Bermuda totalled 25,000 crates in contrast to last year when the shipments were virtually negligible.

Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., had heavy traffic on an excursion from New York to Nova Scotia on the occasion of the first trip in June of the S.S. Acadia from New York to Yarmouth, N.S.

Railroad transportation is an essential economic function on this continent and given reasonably free rein should speedily show good recovery using it to increase buying of materials and employment of labor, says the Greenville (S.C.) News editorially.

Total production of honey in Canada in 1931 amounted to 27,867,397 lbs., valued at $2,058,094. Ontario led the Dominion with a production of 12,000,000 lbs., with Manitoba second with 7,367,375 lbs., and Quebec third with 5,633,400 lbs.

Ten thousand rainbow trout fingerlings have been deposited in the French River in June, following 7,500 fingerlings deposited last year. The previous experiment was so satisfactory that the present action has been taken and if success still attends these efforts, the French River Bungalow Camp will have added rainbow trout to its already well diversified angling attractions.

Bob Davis, globe-trotting New York Sun columnist, is back in his beloved British Columbia, having recently arrived from Honolulu aboard the Empress of Canada, of the Canadian Pacific fleet. He proposes to spend some time in fishing expeditions both in the province and also in the Rockies where he will meet Irvin S. Cobb and Courtney Riley Cooper, also famous American publicists.

Tourists spent almost one million dollars for every working day in Canada last year, a sum virtually equal to $280,000,000, the Cannington, Ontario, Gleaner, points out and claims that this puts it into the class of big business which should be carefully fostered. Commenting on the same subject, the Nelson, B.C., News states that there are numbers of small towns throughout Canada which have not yet realized what the tourist business could do for them.

Evidence of the growing popularity of the Canadian Pacific Railway low rate bargain return trips, inaugurated this year, was again furnished by the success of the Quebec Province and Montreal excursion to Toronto and Niagara Falls, June 17, when no fewer than 2,500 Quebecers took the trip in four specials on the Friday, returning the following Sunday night. His Honor the Mayor of Toronto issued a hearty welcome to those making the trip.

The thirty-two business and professional men and women from the British Isles now touring British Columbia under provincial government auspices found Victoria much to their liking and quite up to advance notices of being the most "English" city on this side of the Atlantic. They were particularly impressed by the beauty of the formal gardens at some of the homes they inspected and specially with the famous Butchart Gardens. They are travelling by Canadian Pacific Railway. (853)

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while the land her and consult with the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of banditry in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits get away with gold dust and choice peltry.

CHAPTER II—Corporal Bill Hardcock brings the news of the crime to Sergeant Alan Baker at the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, Alan starts out after the bandits in the big police launch with the corporal and four constables.

CHAPTER III—Reaching the Midnight Sun, they stop long enough for a meal. Alan asks the skipper to put Jimmy Montgomery's orphaned four-year-old daughter off at Fort Endurance and leave her in the care of Alan's fiancée, Elizabeth Spaulding. At the MacMillan trading post on the Big Aloska, Joyce MacMillan is alone, awaiting the return of Dave, her father, from a fur-buying trip. She is thrilled when the police launch ties up there for the night, as she has not seen Alan Baker for months. Secretly she had hoped to marry him; then she was stunned by the news of his engagement to Elizabeth. She is happy now to perceive from his halting talk that the planned marriage is not definitely certain.

CHAPTER IV—Larry Young, one of Alan's men, discovers in MacMillan's fur shop a half of pelts stolen from the Midnight Sun. The evidence incriminates Dave so strongly that Alan is compelled to tell Joyce. She hotly defends her father. Alan leads his expedition up the Big Aloska. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan fails to capture the bandits. The police expedition returns to Fort Endurance with Larry badly wounded.

In this white miserable business—Jimmy Montgomery dead, Larry in the shadow of death, that tragedy hovering over innocent Joyce MacMillan, the bandits escaped and the patrol disgraced—in all this evil-starred affair, only one thought held any comfort for Alan. It was a vengeful thought, born of a savage and vengeful mood. He held a sword now over Inspector Haskell. Haskell had ordered this patrol to be split. Out of his ignorance and jealous anger, he had issued that crazy order, and it had wrecked the patrol. His gross incompetence, which heretofore had been only a vague charge hard to prove, now stood out glaringly in all its inescapable guilt.

Alan swore to wield this sword in his hand. By mid-afternoon of that interminable day they came to the first straggling trees at the Thal-Azzah edge. At deep twilight they reached the Aloska Forks and the anchored launch.

Pedneault had just returned from his useless trip up the south branch. In a few words he understood all that had happened. With one glance at his spent and staggering partners, he took their heavy burden from their shoulders.

Alan flung himself down beside Bill, driven to the limit of human endurance. His last waking thought was the grim satisfaction of knowing that he held a sword over his guilty arrogant officer and could bring him to account at last.

In his cabin Inspector Haskell sat behind his desk, waiting for Alan Baker to come in and report. He was thinking, thinking hard; and for all his self-control his nerves were jumpy.

Over in a corner Whipple sat at the table, pretending to write but in reality waiting there, as Haskell had bidden him. Something cold had gripped Haskell half an hour ago when he saw the patrol returning without the six bandits and with Constable Young, desperately wounded. He knew the details of that patrol already; Whipple had come up and privately told him. How the bandits had headed for the Thal-Azzah, as Baker had warned. How Baker had run those six to earth and cornered them. How Pedneault and the other two constables had been a hundred and forty miles away during that crucial hour.

As he knew, this crime was the most spectacular in years along the Three Rivers. The defeat administered to the police was the most stinging in a decade. This incident would have reverberations at headquarters. Superintendent Williamson would investigate. The very first question of that veteran old officer would be:

"Why in h— did you order Baker to divide that patrol? Splitting up his detail that way—didn't you realize that neither party would be able to handle those criminals?"

Not deluding himself, Haskell knew he was caught. He knew he had made a capital mistake in a force where a man's first mistake is usually his last. In these thirty minutes all his prospects of promotion in service, of smashing Alan Baker, of swinging Elizabeth Spaulding to himself, had come tumbling down like a house of cards, and he was thoroughly frightened.

A wound such as this to his career if the facts of the patrol became known. The blame of this shameful defeat lay squarely at his door. Baker surely realized that; Baker surely was going to use that sword against him. It was war now, open and avowed war between them.

Step by step, logic led him to the one and only recourse he had. If Williamson ever found out he had ordered that patrol split, he was sunk. Therefore Williamson must not find out. There was a way to keep him from knowing the facts.

Haskell tried to still his conscience by thinking that Baker had wanted the patrol to fail. If that was so, then this measure was exactly what the sergeant had coming to him. He ought to be smashed, and smashed hard. You've got to fight fire with fire.

Still in his muddled and torn uniform, Alan came down the slope toward Haskell's cabin, intending to bludgeon some hard and fast terms out of the guilty inspector or shoot a complaint over his head to Superintendent Williamson. If Haskell did not give in to his demands, he meant to send a half-breed runner to the Royal Signal corps station at Resolution and flash a message to the division commander that would start an avalanche.

Over at Mrs. Drummond's house where Joyce had gone, candles were gleaming in the windows. Across at Father Claverly's tiny hospital, Larry Young lay fighting for his life. Up the slope at barracks Dave MacMillan was locked in the police "butter-tub," charged with being accomplice to robbery and murder.

Joyce had reported secretly: "Alan, I talked with him. He isn't guilty! He never had heard a whisper about these bandits, till I told him. He couldn't have deceived me!"

That same impression had been Alan's—"He couldn't have deceived me." There was something behind that pack of furs which hadn't come to light yet and which would explain those damning circumstances.

It was his conviction that Dave MacMillan was not guilty at all.

He meant to put up a fight for Dave. It was easy to resolve that, but the actual job was the hardest thing he had attempted in his whole life. The only way under heaven of clearing Dave was to capture the guilty men and either wring a confession out of them or hold out king's evidence as a lure and get them started talking against each other.

Which way would they try to escape? They'd go east when they left the Thal-Azzah. They'd go across the Great Barrens to Hudson's bay and try to pick up passage on a ashling smack, or go east and south toward The Pas in Manitoba. There was only one route leading east out of the Thal-Azzah, and they'd have to take it. It was an old Tinnah trade route, the Inconnu river.

Alan meant to lead a patrol to the Inconnu. As he strode into the cabin, he saw Haskell waiting for him, coolly smoking a cigarette. It seemed to Alan that the man actually did not realize that his ignorant orders had wrecked the patrol and that the whole blame and shame of it lay at his door.

When he finished his report, Haskell made no comment. Wondering at his cool air, Alan was silent a few moments. He could not understand the man's nonchalance. This was war between them; each knew it; and yet Haskell showed no fear, no concern, no conciliatory spirit whatsoever. Keeping back his heavy weapon, Alan took up his defense of Joyce's father.

"About Dave MacMillan. My opinion is, he's entirely innocent. There's no call to send him outside to Edmonton. A traveling court is coming down the Three Rivers in August, and his case can wait for that. He can be kept here, or released on bail. Drummond will put up bail; I'll be personally responsible for him. There's another reason: he's got some good friends among the Dogribs; if he's released he'll get busy and stir them up to help hunt these bandits."

Haskell interposed. "What was he doing last week? Where was he? Can he put up any alibi?"

"He was in the Candle-Ice lake country, trying to locate Little Otter's band. He'd fed them all winter, and they owed him their spring peltry; but they'd sneaked away and taken their peltry in to the L. & H. He saw no one; he has no alibi."

"That trader won't be released," Haskell said flatly. "I'll decide whether to keep him here or send him outside to Edmonton."

Dismissing Dave MacMillan's plight with a curt gesture, he demanded: "What made you leave Constable Burden take at the trading post, signed handed as we are?"

"To watch after the furs and trade goods."

"That's MacMillan's lookout. I'll have to instruct Pedneault to get Burden tomorrow."

"But Miss Joyce expects to return there. She has good reasons. What protection do you intend to give her?" "If she insists on returning, I don't feel any responsibility. This isn't an orphanage; it's a Mounted Police post."

Alan entered that remark in his account against the inspector. Haskell's callous attitude toward a defenseless, grief-stricken girl seemed to him an index to the man's real mood.

Still keeping his sword hidden from Haskell, he broached the matter of that patrol to the Inconnu. As he sketched his plan briefly, he saw that Haskell, listening to him coldly, was not even interested. An uneasiness came over him. What was Haskell thinking? Didn't the man realize he had made a fatal mistake?

Alan summed up his plan: "In three weeks I want to have a patrol ying low on the Inconnu. I'll take Hardcock and Pedneault, and enlist three good breeds as special constables."

Haskell stopped him. "I'm not interested in your plan, sergeant. You're merely making a long guess about what they'd do. It sounds thin—"

"About as thin as my guess that they'd take the north branch into the Thal-Azzah!" Alan flung back at him. "I know this country. I know what I'm talking about. Now, get this straight, inspector: I'm going to make that trip. I didn't come in here to ask your permission. You've wrecked one patrol. If Superintendent Williamson hears about that, you won't have a chance to wreck any more. You'll keep Dave MacMillan here, you'll keep your hands off this Inconnu trip, or Williamson is going to hear d—d quick!"

The threat daunted Haskell not at all. He scarcely seemed to have heard. With that faint sardonic smile on his face, he intoned coldly:

"Besides the flimsiness of your plan, sergeant, there's another absurdity about it. You just came back from a patrol that started out with every chance in the world of succeeding. You yourself admit you met the bandits and even had them cornered. But by your weak vacillating fight you allowed them to escape—"

"What's that?" Alan cut in. "A weak vacillating fight? . . . Good Lord!" His memory whipped back to Bill and himself belling up behind the muskrat house, and to Larry Young coming out against six men on open water.

"You failed dismally," Haskell proceeded, in knife-edge voice. "You probably wanted to fail, so you could try to hang something onto me. Those criminals escaped clean, and one of your men was badly shot. After such a performance, don't you think it's a bit ridiculous of you to stand there and baldly ask me to let you lead a thousand-mile, all-summer patrol with five men? Instead . . . Well, you've been in the Mounted long enough to know what the consequences are of a failure like yours."

Alan stood dazed. Haskell was actually blaming that disaster upon him! Did the man still fail to realize that the patrol had been wrecked by his own crazy orders?

"Consequences?" he repeated. "Consequences for me? I warned you we shouldn't split our party. That was the cause of us failing. I predicted just what happened."

Haskell brushed the words aside. "The consequences of a blundering, botched-up patrol such as you led are usually demotion to the ranks. That's what you'll have to take. In an important matter like this I haven't any choice but to make you a constable. Whipple, write out the papers for this demotion."

For moments Alan stared at him. Then he laughed. It was incredible, a travesty. Busted! Busted because of this man's orders. Busted because he had been sent out, tied hand and foot, on a patrol doomed to disaster before it started.

He snapped. "You can quit that scratching, Whipple; I'm not a constable yet. And you, inspector, if you haven't got sense enough to know you're hanging onto your command by a couple of fingers, I'll tell you about it. When Williamson finds out about you ordering me to split my party, he'll either ask for your resignation or fan you down to the Border where you belong. You're going to give Dave MacMillan a decent chance, and I'm going to make that patrol to the Inconnu."

Across the desk Haskell surveyed him coldly. "Just a moment, Baker. You said something about my ordering you to split your party. You're blaming me for your failure." He met Alan's eyes without a tremor; he was able to look steadily at Alan, as he added: "I didn't order you to split your detail. I may have suggested it, but that patrol was yours, and you're not going to hang the blame on—"

"You didn't order me to? You say you didn't order me?"

"That's exactly what I said, sergeant. I gave you no such orders." Speechless for moments, Alan finally found words. "You're a liar. A sneaking liar! You're trying to crawl out—"

Haskell jerked around to Whipple. "Make a note of that remark." He turned to Alan again, and in hard tones, with no hesitation or weakness, he said: "To be Continued."

Spiritual Intruder Hurl'd Aside

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

FENWAY thought of her as the Spiritual Intruder because he had only found her in the world of spirits. She was an ephemeral being who filled all his waking dreams with visions of what a woman should be.

Fenway was only admitting his normality when he let himself know that he wanted to marry and have a wife about the house. He visualized a sewing basket there beside the sunny bay window and perhaps a carelessly flung feminine something lying on the chesterfield. He would even like to see the pink satin slippers she had kicked off making a warm touch of color on the blue velvet carpet.

Yes, Fenway wanted very much to marry but that Spiritual Intruder kept coming between him and the flesh-and-blood girls he took any kind of fancy to. His mind was held in thrall by that soul of some one and she permeated his very existence with her unknown lure. Fenway had tried at times to shake off that clinging vine and grasp the more tangible happiness of an earthly presence but it was like attempting to blow the fragrance out of the heart of a rose.

In his dreams this Intruder had raven hair and eyes of smoldering brown and her cheeks were scarlet and her lips a crushed petal of crimson. She must sing. He was keen on good music.

With the drawing near of his brother's wedding at which Fenway was to be best man he wished more than ever that he too might be leading a lovely lace-clad bride to the altar instead of just giving the ring to his brother, then leading a maid of honor back through the church back to the waiting car.

It was to be a big affair—just such a ceremony as Fenway himself would like—rose embowered church, twelve gold-clad bridesmaids, all of whom Fenway had met, and the lovely bride in silver. Her maid, coming from the West, Fenway had not as yet met. She was an old school friend of Janet's.

On the morning of the wedding Fenway and his bridegroom brother left the house and each tried to huck up the other for there was no doubt that weddings were nerve-racking affairs. Each wore a tiny white rosebud in the immaculate lapel and the best man felt for the ring every few minutes.

"Wish you were joining me," laughed the groom. "But I'll be glad when it's over. Hope Janet won't keep us waiting."

Janet didn't. She was prompt, just as a lovely bride should be, and when she stood at the altar, her face glorified by the love she had for Tom Fenway. Jack thought he had never seen anyone so exquisitely beautiful.

Then he saw Beth Sawyer. The maid of honor was accepting the bride's white glove and when she felt it securely in her hand she looked straight across at Jack Fenway. His knees became as pulp and his heart thumped a mad paeon. The blood mounted his forehead and he strove to detach his glance from the glowing blue eyes still clinging to his own.

And while the ceremony continued Fenway was only conscious of Beth Sawyer in her gold and silver clouds of lace. Most of all he was conscious that for the first time in his memory his Spiritual Intruder was hurled into the body of a real woman.

They were one. In the girl standing quietly waiting Fenway knew he had found his future wife.

A moment later, the procession started from the altar and Fenway felt her hand warm as a nestling dove on his arm. He looked into her eyes and smiled, but his throat refused to pass even the softest remark.

Fenway knew nothing about the etiquette of returning to the wedding breakfast. He only knew that he hustled the maid of honor into his own waiting car and drove her himself.

When they got out of the greatest of the crush he turned to her.

"Who are you?" he asked breathlessly. The billowing mass of silver and gold and the fragrance from it all was the sweetest thing Fenway had ever experienced. He could more than fancy the pink satin slippers on his blue rug.

"I'm Beth Sawyer," he girl answered him, and Fenway wondered how he could have supposed his future wife would have raven hair and dark eyes when this golden glory was looking at him. "I couldn't get on from the West a minute earlier as my engagement—"

"You're not the Beth Sawyer who sings—" Fenway could scarcely believe, and yet—certainly, then, her spirit had found its way to him through those many records he had of her glorious voice. The thing was not so strange as it had seemed.

"Yes I am." And Beth smiled as if a long-expected moment had at last arrived. "And what's more, Mr. Jack Fenway, I have had your photograph on my table for nearly a year—so I know you quite well—don't I? Janet sent me one of Tom, of course, so I could admire her future husband, and you are also in the picture. I have—"

She dropped her heavy eyelashes swiftly.

The light that jumped into Fenway's eyes was far too brilliant to be met without a flutter. She did not tell him, just then, that every day for nearly a year she had looked longingly at his pictured face and that in her heart she knew he was the One Man.

Prime Minister Issues Agenda of Conference at Ottawa

No Place Given To Immigration

Official announcement of the provisional agenda for the Imperial Economic Conference was made last week by the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. Tariff and trade matters and monetary and financial questions, broadly speaking, will comprise the program of Empire discussions opening in Ottawa today. Immigration is not one of the subjects on the provisional agenda.

The statement of the agenda issued by the Prime Minister, and simultaneously released in all parts of the Commonwealth, is as follows:

"As a result of discussions which have been proceeding for several months past between His Majesty's Governments, it has been agreed that the economic questions of general importance to the various parts of the Commonwealth might be conveniently discussed under the following general headings, which will constitute the provisional agenda for the conference:

On General Trade

"A. General trade questions.
"1.—Examinations of aspects of general trade and tariff policy and administration affecting Empire trade, including, inter alia, the following subjects:

"(a) Recognition of the principle of reciprocal tariff preferences within the commonwealth;
"(b) General application of existing and future tariff preferences within the Commonwealth;

"(c) Extension to other parts of the Commonwealth of tariff advantages accorded foreign countries;

"(d) Determination of percentage of "Empire content" necessary to secure preferential tariff treatment;

"(e) Export bounties and anti-dumping duties within the Commonwealth.

Trade Outside Empire

"2.—Commercial treaty policy with respect to foreign countries, including, inter alia:

"(a) Relation of Inter-Imperial preferences to concessions to foreign countries;

"(b) Interpretation of most-favored nation clause, particularly with reference to the development of regional preferences and of systems of import quotas.

Economic Co-operation

"3.—Consideration of the appropriate basis and means of effecting inter-Imperial economic co-operation, including review of existing agencies, examination of the report of the Imperial Economic Committee of Industrial Co-operation and discussion of communications and of research and standardization.

Monetary Questions

"B. Monetary and financial questions.

"Consideration of existing inter-relationships of the various currencies and monetary standards of the Empire, and of the desirability and feasibility of taking steps to restore and stabilize the general price level and to stabilize exchange.

"C. Negotiation of trade agreements.

Announcement of the provisional agenda follows consultations by the Canadian Government with the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, Irish Free State, Newfoundland, India and Southern Rhodesia. The work of preparation of the program of economic questions to be discussed is one of the important preliminaries to the parley.

Two Hawkesbury Girls Injured in Accident

Two young girls were injured in an auto accident near Hawkesbury last Friday, when a car driven by Mrs. Allan Gourlay, of R. R. No. 2, Hawkesbury, accompanied by her two daughters aged 12 and 5 years respectively was hit in the rear by a car driven by Mr. Gabriel Labrosse, of Vankleek Hill. It is reported Labrosse was endeavoring to pass the other car and when he found he could not he applied his brakes, but the oily condition of the road forced his car to skid into the other car which was forced into the ditch, turning upside down. Vivian Gourlay received scalp wounds, while her sister received shoulder and leg injuries. They were treated by Dr. Smith, of Hawkesbury, and then taken home.

Heavy Damage by Fire at Grenville

The Arnold & Gauley Garage at Grenville was razed to the ground between 9 and 10 o'clock last night (Wednesday) by a fire of uncertain origin. The blaze, it is reported, commenced in the neighborhood of an acetylene welding unit which was in operation at the rear of the shop but no definite particulars could be learned, as to the cause of the outbreak. The building and its contents, including a number of cars, were completely burnt, in short time.

Water was pumped from the canal, and the Grenville brigade poured two streams constantly on the blaze, but appeared to be handicapped by poor pressure. The new civic waterworks are not yet completed, and the mains it is said, will not be connected for another two weeks.

Three Calls Upon Local Fire Brigade

Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon reports three minor outbreaks in town, which fortunately caused no severe loss or damage.

On Saturday afternoon last, the brigade was summoned to the Grace Street residence of P. Masson, but the fire, in a shed at the rear of the dwelling, had already been extinguished when the fire truck appeared on the scene. The outbreak had resulted from hot ashes, which had ignited rubbish and wood-work at one end of the shed.

On Monday, 18th. inst., the brigade was called again to a fire in Rev. H. Cousen's garage. The flames, which appear to have started in the roof, caused by a spark from a boiler used in the neighboring school construction, had not spread far before the incident was discovered and the outbreak was quickly subdued.

At 11 o'clock the same night, Mrs. Albt. Payer of Chatham Street dropped a coal-oil lamp while going upstairs. The lighted lamp fell on a couch, igniting the upholstery. The flames might have been disastrous, but some one nearby had the presence of mind to drag the blazing couch onto the street, and no considerable damage resulted. The fire brigade were quickly on the scene, but found their services were not required.

The Many friends of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Wilson are sorry to hear of their removal to Montreal, where they are taking up residence. Mr. Wilson, who for a number of years has been an active employee of the Brownsburg Branch of the Canadian Industries Limited has now been transferred to the Head Office in Montreal. His duties as Secretary-Treasurer of the School Municipality of Chatham No. 1, will be taken over by Mr. Geoffrey Scudamore.

Four Thousand Employees of Angus Works at C.P.R. Annual Picnic

Lachute Extends Welcome duly Appreciated by C.P.R., A.A.A.

Four thousand persons attended the ninth annual picnic of the Angus Works, under the auspices of the C.P.R. A.A.A. on Saturday last at Lachute Exhibition Grounds. As early as nine o'clock in the morning, the first four sections left Place Viger Station for the exhibition grounds and favored by sunny weather, the picnic was under way at an early hour. Those of our citizens who were on the grounds took full enjoyment of the occasion along with the visitors.

The sports program featured an interesting list of events, including races and two baseball games. The half-mile race created considerable interest, and was won by Winston Drew of our local Academy, followed closely by A. Graham of Cushing, and J. Dufour.

The Women's softball game between members of the A. and B teams of the C.P.R. A.A.A. was won by the A team; the men's softball game between the C.P.R. seniors and a picked team, won by the C.P.R.

There was a race for men over 50 years of age, J. Larose, a 60-year-old veteran of the Shops, won in the 75-yard stretch, followed closely by T. Troy and H. Plater. In the single women's race, Miss E. Stewart led a large number of starters in the 75-yard run. W. Dunk acted as recorder and G. Wilding was the announcer in all events.

A number of attractive prizes were awarded to the winners among which appeared 4 blankets donated by Ayers Limited. The lucky gate prize, it is announced, was won by the holder of blue ticket No. 534.

General satisfaction was expressed among all present concerning the local Exhibition Grounds, which afforded an ideal location for an event of this kind with its large attendance. The arrangements for catering, undertaken by the ladies of our local Women's Institute, also met with hearty approval. Mr. John Gow, manager of the C.P.R. Amateur Athletic Association expressed a hope that Lachute would be selected again next year for the annual picnic. Music for the dancing was admirably furnished by Jack Burns and his orchestra.

Canada and the Olympiad

By M. V. Trayers.

Canada's athletes are en route to Los Angeles and the 1932 Olympiad, with brighter hopes and at least equal chances with the little band of athletes which flashed Canada's name across the athletic horizon and proudly hoisted the Maple Leaf over the Stadium at Amsterdam in 1928.

When Percy Williams broke the tape at Amsterdam and incidentally the world's record, in the 100 meters event we were delighted beyond measure. It was more than we hoped for, but when the news was flashed of his triumph in the 200 meters we became jarred out of our complacency; and throwing our hats in the air, and giving vent to our pent up feelings in lusty vocal discords, generally disported ourselves in a manner to say the least of it, not quite befitting respectable people—such is the contagion of athletic fervor. Percy's victories had dethroned the fetish which our neighbors worshipped and which they claimed or recorded an almost complete monopoly of. Speed. We had so long been fed with records of their superiority in this respect that we had begun to develop an "inferiority complex." Great Britain followed Canada in these two events with Germany third in one and the U. S. in the other. This year we again have Percy Williams and any doubts as to his condition are more than offset by the remarkable performances of Bert Pearson, a Canadian school-boy who has been showing his back to all our hopes in the trials at Hamilton. Pearson has shown wonderful form which if maintained should give the U. S. second splitters an uneasy time. In the next distance we have a new hope in Alex.

Tribute to Dr. Francis MacKay, Detroit Organist

Native of St. Andrews East, now One of America's leading Church Organists.

Dr. Francis A. MacKay, of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, will again be guest organist in the Presbyterian Church next Sunday morning at St. Andrews East, and Mr. Young will be the soloist. Mr. MacKay has just completed fifteen years of service in the Cathedral at Detroit, and "The Diapason," official Journal of the National Association of Organists, contains the following article, written by the Dean of the Cathedral.

"We celebrated, on May 1st., the fifteenth anniversary of the coming of Francis A. MacKay as Organist and Master of Choristers. One has only to think over the hundreds of choristers, boys, men and women, who have composed the various choirs of St. Paul's Cathedral and rendered such inspiring music, through these fifteen years, to get some idea of his loyalty, faithfulness and his worth to this institution. We question whether in spirit, and musical excellence, as well as in the large number attracted to the Cathedral and to its activities in life long service, there are many organists and choir di-

Hawkesbury Nine Lose To Brownsburg Blues

The Brownsburg Blues handed Hawkesbury Research their third defeat in thirteen starts in the Interprovincial Softball League, when they took an 8-3 decision in Hawkesbury. Superior fielding and the ability to bunch their hits provided the Blues with their margin.

The line-up was as follows,— Brownsburg Blues—Jenkins, p; A. Martin, 1b; L. Martin, 2b; Johnson, 3b; Charlebois, ss; P. Seary, lf; McCullough cf; Tife rf.

Research—B. Shields, c; J. Lighthall, 1b; P. McLeod, 2b; W. Barnes, 3b; L. Lighthall, ss; A. Price, lf; T. Barnes, cf; E. Holland, rf; F. McLeod, p.

Umpires—Markey, Hawkesbury and St. Onge, Brownsburg.

Scoffing at Our Good Money

Canadian money is at a severe discount in the United States. Yet no Canadian city has failed to pay its debts promptly or has found itself unable to meet its pay rolls. Detroit owes a million dollars to its employees. Chicago is practically bankrupt. The banks turned down a loan to New York. But here in Canada Toronto raises $15,000,000 in two hours and a half; Montreal sold a $11,000,000 loan without trouble; Hamilton gets all the money it wants from the banks, and so on. There is absolutely no question about Canadian credit. Our people have a billion and a quarter on deposit in the banks. Yet with this clear record, we allow the U. S. to say what our money is worth.

Lachute Academy Extensions Taking Shape

Lachute Academy promises to be the finest school structure outside the cities of this province, as work proceeds on the improvement and extension of the familiar old building. Due credit is recognized to the enterprise of Messrs. Richard and E. J. Ryan, contractors, and to the interest of the various school commissioners who have an eye constantly upon the scene.

This week six routes have been drafted out and tenders are called for the transportation of the out-of-town pupils, who will number over 100. Plumbers, carpenters, and electricians are busily engaged in the original structure; and changes in the old building, including improved heating arrangements, will be completed before September 1st.

In the large extension on the east side, the pouring of concrete for foundation and main floor was completed yesterday, and bricklayers will commence work before the end of the week, while steel structure for the two upper floors will be erected. It is expected the roof will be placed inside of two weeks.

The site presents an appearance of intensive industry, with no suggestion of hitch or delay in the progress of the structure. It will prove worth-while to visit the scene of these labors, reflecting not only upon the material growth of our educational facilities, nor weighing the cost but thinking also of the immeasurable contributions to Character in this territory and of a younger generation well equipped for Canadian citizenship. "The building of a school is the building of character."

The new school will reach final completion some time in October. The School Board, until such time, has made ample provision to accommodate its classes, and school studies will proceed without interference.

Canadian Plan for Waterway is One Finally Decided Upon

The signing of an international treaty this week for the St. Lawrence Waterway Development excites widespread interest not wholly devoid of suspicion and misgiving. The scheme appears to be more favorably regarded as the facts become publicly known and investigation of the prospects shows many possible advantages which may accrue to the Dominion through this development. Not the least of these, perhaps to the individual citizen, is the supposed prospect of cheap electric power—a prospect which the Quebec consumer regards somewhat dubiously, in the light of past experience.

Mr. Taschereau's prime objection indicates the deleterious effect upon our railways which might result from construction of this new waterway. On thing appears certain. The treaty is not yet ratified; two respective national governments have yet to act. The matter will be fully discussed, and investigated from all angles, with a genuine concern for the future progress of this country. The stringencies of depression, and the wakeful memories of our all-too-costly Public Blunders, in the past, will together ensure a thorough investigation of the project, before it is finally undertaken. If there is anything wrong, with the St. Lawrence waterway scheme, Canadians will know about it.

Agreement between the governments of Canada and the United States on a two-stage development in the international section of the St. Lawrence river indicates final adoption of the plan advocated from the outset by Canadian engineers. As far back as 1924, when the joint board of engineers examined into the project, this point was an issue between Canadian and American representatives. Canada favored a two-stage development—the United States a single stage project.

Decision to construct a dam at Crysler Island and another at the foot of Barnhart Island means the carrying out of the Canadian scheme. Power developed will aggregate 2,200,000 horse power, and navigation canals and locks will be provided for. Throughout this section the river takes a total drop of 92 feet.

One of the reasons why Canadian engineers strongly support the two-stage development was that they felt the construction of a single large dam would result in flooding large areas of Canadian territory. It meant that a number of communities along the Canadian shore of the international section would be flooded out. Also certain Canadian towns situated immediately below the dam would have been in serious danger if a break occurred.

In support of the United States single stage scheme, it was contended that the cost would be considerably less, and also that the power would be concentrated at one point.

Automobile tire dealers are putting out a timely warning about the false economy of motoring with badly worn tires. An increasing number of accidents is said to be due to this risky practice. It would be better to leave the car in the garage until new tires can be bought than to drive at the ordinary highway speed with worn-out tires.

the appearance of enterprise and progress. The new Church on Main Street, which is on a fair way to completion, is another splendid asset to our Main Street, reflecting great credit on the builders, the Stuart Construction Co., of Sherbrooke.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

THE PASSENGER

Dear Boys :-

I wonder if you ever think that when you travel you do not travel ALONE. There will always be someone who will join you on the train, to share with you the interest, joy, and entertainment that comes with travelling.

You may have heard of the story of the two Englishmen who found themselves, the sole occupants of a carriage on a journey of over three hundred miles, which is a long distance in that country. They sat opposite each other and the train started, mile after mile was covered but neither spoke. At length when half the journey had been travelled one of them said "It's a fine day" and the other replied, "Yes" then both resumed their complete and deadly silence for the remainder of the trip and parted without another word, without a doubt both were entirely satisfied and had they been questioned would have said that they had thoroughly enjoyed their journey. But there was something wrong. Both had missed a golden opportunity which had come to them and had they conversed together during those hours of travelling each would have learnt something from the other and each would have gained considerably. Remember this, the other fellow knows something that you don't know and if you are wise you will try to get into conversation with him in order to increase your knowledge and widen your point of view.

Here were two men who had, probably from very different spheres of activity, been thrown together by chance and forced by circumstances to travel in each others company for some hours. Instead of talking together on some interesting subject, they had adopted an attitude of mutual suspicion and distrust thereby, remaining entirely ignorant of many things that would have been to their material advantage.

You cannot live for yourself alone. A journey by train is like unto a journey through life. You are not bound to agree with the other fellow, but at least you must travel with him in a spirit of brotherly fellowship and goodwill.

If you are prepared to do this when you reach the Journey's End, you will have learnt something from and given something to The Passenger, who has joined you on your trip.

We travel always, the stations wide apart,
While in between the markings on the chart
Of human progress show a crooked way,
If to ourselves we live from day to day.
But if we aim for happiness complete,

We'll show another's lines upon our sheet,
We dare not reach our journey in the end,
Without in travelling we have made a Friend.

Ever your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 9.

"I don't think we had better do that," answered Jack, "If Uncle had wanted us on board, he would have said something about it. No we had just better wander around until it is time to eat. There will be plenty to see, I'm sure."

Not a bit tired from their train journey, both of them left the hotel and wandered down the old-fashioned cobbled street, noting signs of great activity as men were busy loading and unloading the great ships that had entered the port from all parts of the world.

Now and again they stopped to watch with no little wonder the great cranes swinging at the end of their strong iron chains large bales of goods from a ship's hold to the upper floor of some large warehouse.

"I don't think I have ever seen so many ships in my life," said Babs at which Jack, already feeling the responsibilities of a junior ship's officer, condescendingly informed her that he was sure that she had not but that it was quite a usual everyday affair for such things to be carried on, and he went on in order to encourage her, "Well you know you have only lived eight years, so you cannot expect to see much in that short time," which piece of information did not seem to please Babs at all for she retorted indignantly. "You can see an awful lot in eight years."

Just at that moment a man came out of a doorway so suddenly that he collided with Jack, who was intently watching the efforts of a seaman who was manipulating something or other almost at the top of a tall mast belonging to one of the ships in the harbor.

On feeling the sudden contact, Jack turned around prepared with a word of apology for his inattentiveness in such a busy place.

But the man, who had suffered what he considered a loss of dignity, by being nearly thrown off his feet and who was stopping to pick up some papers which had fallen out of his hands, gave him no opportunity for speech.

"You careless young rascal," he shouted, "You have no business standing here and getting in the way of busy people. You ought to be in school learning your lessons, and if I had my way, you would be somewhere else."

Jack was indignant at such treatment and felt now no inclination either to apologize or in any other way show sorrow for the mishap but stood there silent, taking in the man's dark foreign look, his fierce black mustache and the sombre look in his angry eyes.

He did not know it, but he was to meet this man more than once under very different circumstances to the present.

With a further curse at the boy's stubborn silence, the fellow hurried away and left them.

"What a nasty horrid man, talking to you like that," said Babs indignantly, "I wonder who he is."

Jack, who had quickly recovered his good spirits, turned to his little sister with a smile, "I suppose you have never seen any one like that before," he asked innocently.

"No I have not, and I don't want to again."

"Well that is surprising," replied her brother with a mischievous look, "And you have lived the whole of eight years. I should not tell Uncle that if I were you."

Babs saw that her brother was laughing at her so determined to treat the matter with indifference and offered no reply.

Though greatly interested in all that they saw around them it was not long before Babs suggested that it might be a good idea if they returned to the old hotel where there would be a meal awaiting and probably news of when they would be allowed to walk the deck of the good ship.

"Well and what do you think of this place?" asked their Uncle, when both the young adventures had satisfied the pangs of hunger.

"I think it is the busiest place I have ever been in," replied Babs with enthusiasm "and about the nicest except of course that horrid man who was so rude to Bubbles."

"What's that?" said Capt. Somerville looking towards Jack. "I hope you have not been getting into trouble already."

2. Special oil strainer that is durable, covering large area, prevents blockage.

3. Oil bowl of large capacity has reserve space, a feature which prevents overflowing.

4. Heavy chromium nickel sleeves that are fire-resisting. Guaranteed for ten years.

5. Specially thick wicks that are efficient, also lasting.

6. Adjustable base which can be moved to meet the exact requirements of each individual stove or heater.

7. Specially designed valve that prevents fading fires.

EVERY PART OF THE STERLING OIL BURNER IS MADE IN CANADA BY CANADIAN LABOR FOR CANADIAN HOMES BY CANADIAN CAPITAL.

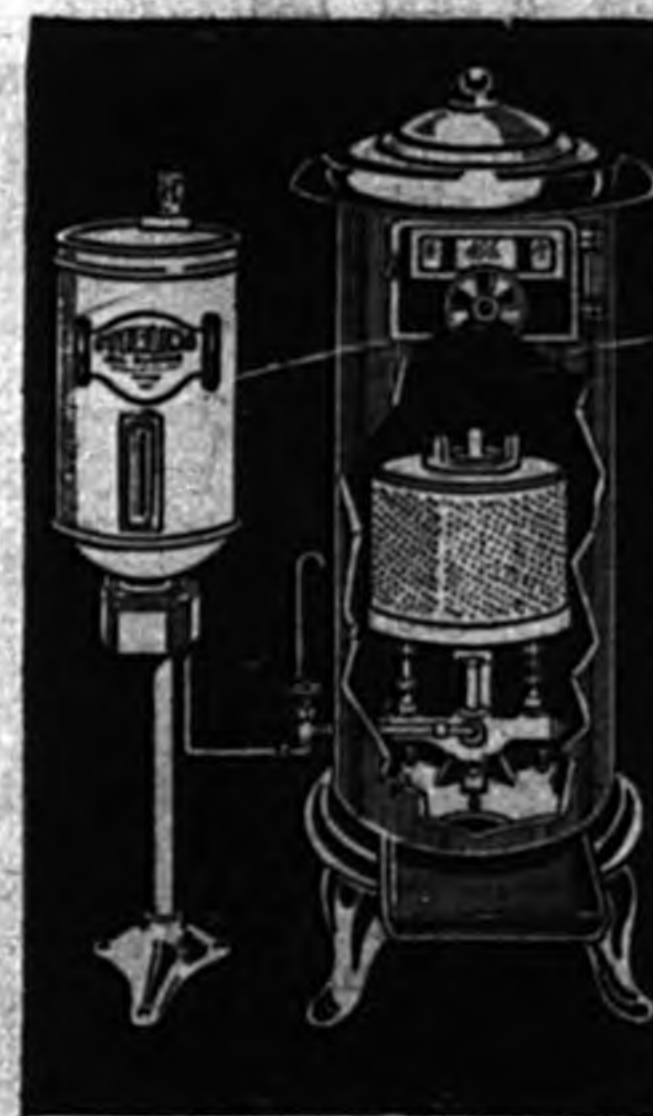

Absolutely Guaranteed for 10 Years

Do not fail to take full advantage of these demonstrations, for here, indeed, is a rare opportunity to see for yourself how the use of oil for cooking and heating does away with all the dissatisfaction, dirt, work and nuisance of burning coal or wood.

Come in by all means and let us show you why. Coast to coast, the STERLING OIL BURNER is the unanimous choice of the wise housewife. Why these Burners are so economical in operation, so easy and safe to use, and why you can depend on them for years of carefree, enjoyable service.

There is a correctly designed STERLING OIL BURNER for every type of Stove, Range, Heater or Circulator, and every installation is backed by a definite, far-reaching guarantee! STERLING OIL BURNERS are exceedingly cheap to operate. They are easily and quickly installed without trouble or fuss. Just imagine how you would benefit from installing one with no more cinders to sift, ashes to move, and full freedom from harmful dust or odors.

However, come and see for yourself. You will be surprised how little it costs to install one of the truly modern and decidedly better Oil Burner, and how really effective they are for all heating and cooking purposes.

ANNOUNCING

Daily Demonstrations of the

STERLING OIL BURNER

Canada's Finest Oil Burner

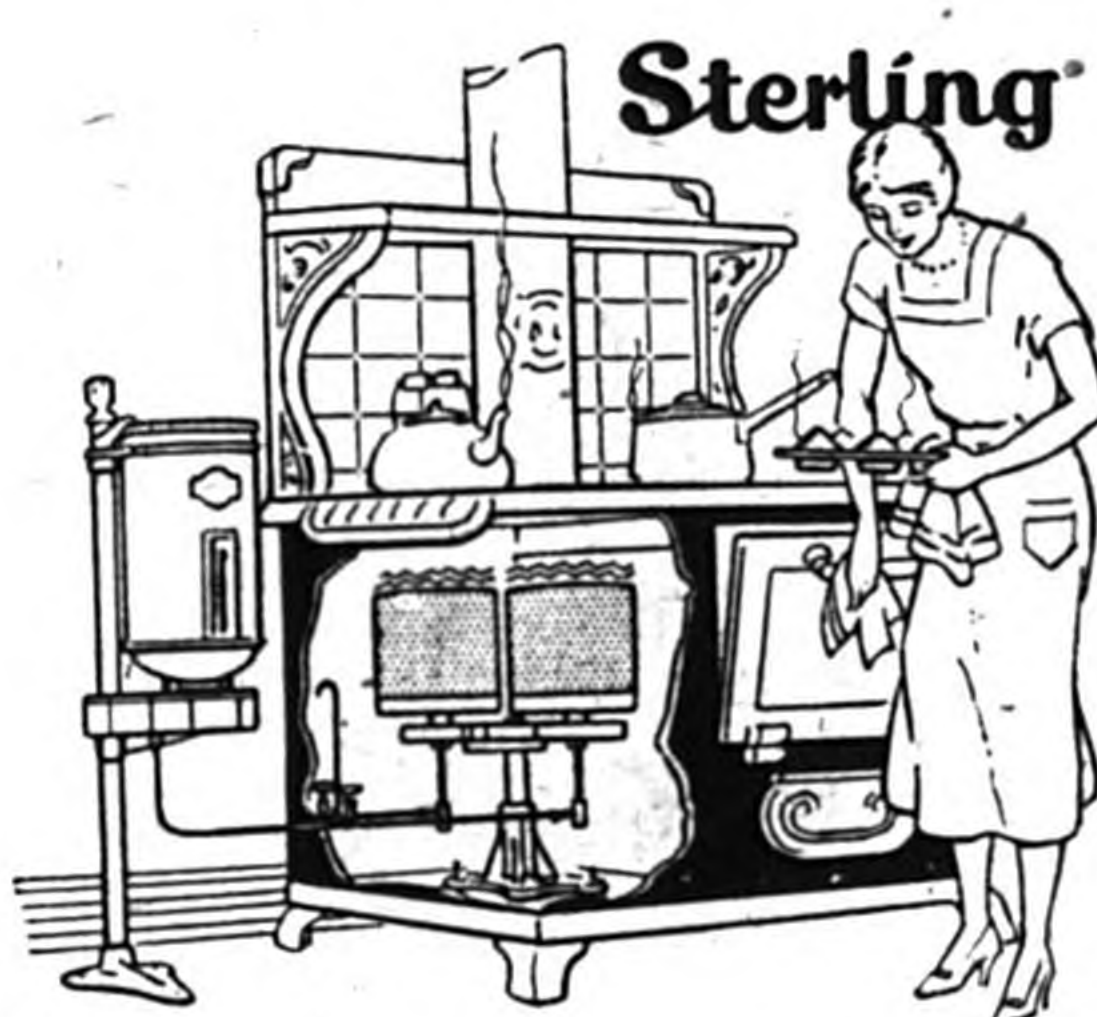

= The Seven Points of Sterling Superiority =

1. Metal containers that cannot be accidentally broken or cracked by the heat.

2. Special oil strainer that is durable, covering large area, prevents blockage.

3. Oil bowl of large capacity has reserve space, a feature which prevents overflowing.

4. Heavy chromium nickel sleeves that are fire-resisting. Guaranteed for ten years.

5. Specially thick wicks that are efficient, also lasting.

6. Adjustable base which can be moved to meet the exact requirements of each individual stove or heater.

7. Specially designed valve that prevents fading fires.

EVERY PART OF THE STERLING OIL BURNER IS MADE IN CANADA BY CANADIAN LABOR FOR CANADIAN HOMES BY CANADIAN CAPITAL.

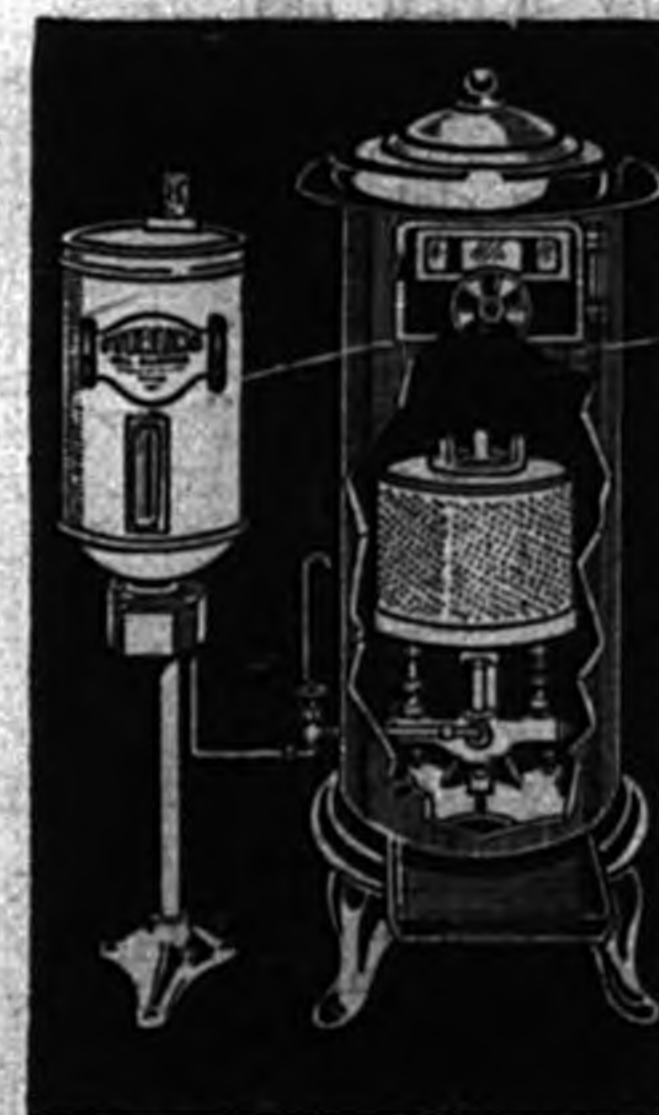

Absolutely Guaranteed for 10 Years

Do not fail to take full advantage of these demonstrations, for here, indeed, is a rare opportunity to see for yourself how the use of oil for cooking and heating does away with all the dissatisfaction, dirt, work and nuisance of burning coal or wood.

Come in by all means and let us show you why. Coast to coast, the STERLING OIL BURNER is the unanimous choice of the wise housewife. Why these Burners are so economical in operation, so easy and safe to use, and why you can depend on them for years of carefree, enjoyable service.

There is a correctly designed STERLING OIL BURNER for every type of Stove, Range, Heater or Circulator, and every installation is backed by a definite, far-reaching guarantee! STERLING OIL BURNERS are exceedingly cheap to operate. They are easily and quickly installed without trouble or fuss. Just imagine how you would benefit from installing one with no more cinders to sift, ashes to move, and full freedom from harmful dust or odors.

However, come and see for yourself. You will be surprised how little it costs to install one of the truly modern and decidedly better Oil Burner, and how really effective they are for all heating and cooking purposes.

The Efficient Modern Housewife Cooks and Heats With OIL

DAILY

9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Come in at any time
but be sure you do come!

NO OBLIGATION
NO URGING TO BUY

In business and manufacturing plants and on steamships, Oil has long been given preference. Now it is brought to your home—at the highest point of efficiency—by the STERLING OIL BURNER. It does away with all carrying of coal, bother of ashes and continuous stoking of fires, at the same time providing clean, uniform, healthful and economical heat.

The latest of home improvement devices, STERLING OIL BURNER easily ranks as the most useful of these, because most other recently adopted household appliances, such as vacuum cleaners, washing machines, etc., are used only a few hours each week, whereas STERLING OIL BURNER serves you from 10 to 24 hours per day almost every day in the year.

Your Dealer
Will Show You
The Simplicity of the

STERLING
OIL BURNER

It is odorless, noiseless and works automatically. It will give you more clean healthful heat than you can possibly require . . . and an especially designed valve regulates the exact amount of heat you want, correctly at all times. Once tried, you will not want to be without one.

TASK FOR OTTAWA— LATE, BUT NOT TOO LATE

An Impression from England
by Scrutator

At Ottawa we start with an agreed general principle, but its application has been left dangerously late. Thirty years ago if we had not been hampered by the rigid Free Trade theory and could have given the concessions that we are prepared to give now, an almost complete measure of internal Free Trade between us and the Dominions might have been possible. The absurdity of India, naturally the most purely agricultural country in the world, competing against Lancashire cottons would never have arisen.

We have now disposed of the principal obstacle on our side, and there exists now in this country what did not exist formerly, a definite preference of the popular mind for the products of the Dominions. In the meantime the long start of Protection in the Dominions has created obstacles there almost as formidable as was our own Free Trade system. The application of the principle on which we are generally agreed has grown more difficult.

The problem is not insoluble given sufficient preparation. On our own side, very elaborate schemes have been prepared. We have something to offer which is well worth counter-offers from the Dominions. It is a little discouraging to hear that the Dominions have not been equally definite. The program of the Conference which has been sent to this country is said to be a mere list of general heads of discussion, without specific proposals. Perhaps they have not realized the corollaries of our adoption of Protection.

A Continent like the United States may maintain its population without great exports to the outside world, or a continental archipelago like our own Empire Commonwealth may find consolation in freer internal markets for a measure of exclusion from outside markets—but not an island. We must enlarge our economic unit, and if that were not possible within the Empire Commonwealth, we should need a discover another Empire of the Sterling Area.

But there is still time to attack the practical and specific problems of economic union. A completely rounded scheme of economic union no one expected from the first Conference to be held after we had acquired our freedom of negotiations; but a beginning must and will be made.

And it must be a beginning that carries with it the principle of growth. There is everything to be said for a permanent Council, representing the ideal of a Federal Commercial Union, and working continuously to that end. We need not abate any of our hopes that Ottawa will do for us what Alexander Hamilton did for the political federal union of the United States.

Empire Currency? In Ottawa recently Canadian Senator Alexander Duncan McRae proposed that the Imperial Conference establish an "Imperial Bank" backed by the gold reserves of the whole Empire (which he estimated at $900,000,000) and issue an "Imperial Currency."

"Such a system," cried Senator McRae, "would carry with it immediately the position of leadership in world exchange. Our Imperial Currency might come in time to be adopted as the currency of the entire world."

A new regulation in the Ontario motor vehicle act reads that everyone in a car driven by one who has not a driver's permit is liable to a fine.

Wilson who notched a new record on Saturday at Hamilton, in the 400 meters an event which Jimmy Ball threw away by a slight mistake when he had the race in hand at Amsterdam. Jimmy has gained a lot of experience since then and may reveal a flash of his old form at Los Angeles. In the 800 meters Phil Edwards carried the Canadian Standard in 1928 but has now gone back to the longer distance 1500 meters. His time for the trial is 4.00, 7 secs slower than the olympic record. Considering that the Hamilton track was slow and that Les Wade Montreal pressed Edwards to within a few inches of the tape we have much to hope for in this event. In the 10,000 meter a new star, Cliff Bricker Galt hung up a new Canadian record with 31.42. The "Flying Finn" who is at present under suspension Paavo Nurmi is the present record holder of this event. His time is 1.36 faster. Again we have to consider that the trials track was very slow and Bricker was not pressed at any stage of the grind.

In the field events Canada's chances are not so rosy. Geo. Spitz holder of the running high jump at 6 ft. 8 3/8 inches can be depended upon to bring victory to the U.S. and even if he should fail there are half a dozen other bar toppers who have gone over the 6 and a half mark.

We have no pole vaulter to compare with Lee Barnes the present holder at 14 feet 1 1/2 in. Victor Pichard who beat Barnes for fourth place at the last olympiad was not present at the Hamilton trials last week. Pichard's jump was under 13 ft. The Hamilton trials were set at 12 feet yet the U. S. have Seelye, Thompson, Beecher, Brown and Miller all of whom have crossed the bar at 14 feet.

In the running broad jump the Japanese claim a record of over 26 ft. and their present title holder Mikio Oda has caused the tape to be stretched to 50 ft. in the Hop, Step and Jump.

The U. S. will probably hold the 16 lb. shot put with John Kuck at 52 ft. though the Germans will place high in the event. Herman the Canadian representative was marked at 42 feet on Saturday.

Dr. Callaghan Ireland stands out by himself in the 16 lb. hammer. The best American mark is slightly under 169 feet. The Irishman has heaved the hammer over 180 ft.

The Discus, Javelin, and Decathlon are almost certain flag raisers for Finland. Lord D. C. Burghley the genial British Peer should again capture the Hurdle event. No one has ever succeeded in beating him and it is not likely that he will relinquish his laurels at this meeting.

In the ladies' section Canada is well and ably represented and despite the lack of funds which has very severely hampered the committee a strong team has been sent which should uphold the worthy traditions of the 1928 representatives.

Sir Henry Thornton Resigns as C.N.R. President

Sir Henry Thornton has resigned his position as president and chairman of the Canadian National Railways. Explaining his resignation, Sir Henry wrote in a letter to Dr. Manion, Minister of Railways:

"In my opinion a publicly owned railway can only be successfully directed if the management has the complete confidence of the owners of the property. The public criticism to which I have referred indicates that such confidence is, at least, not general, and in this period of financial depression, and in view of the further fact that a royal commission is investigating the whole railway situation of the country, I feel that I should tender my resignation."

Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Tuttle, of New London, Wisconsin, are visiting relatives and friends in Lachute and vicinity. Mrs. Tuttle is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thompson, of East Settlement.

The position of School Inspector for all Elementary Schools in county and city, between Quebec and Buckingham, so ably filled by the late Mr. J. W. McQuat, has now been taken over by Mr. L. J. King, whom we are pleased to welcome as a resident of our town.

BROWNSBURG CHOIR PICNIC

(Contributed.)

The choir of the Brownsburg United Church held their first picnic of the season at Lake Dauphin on Saturday, July 16. The weather was ideal and a merry party left the church at 2.15 p.m., arriving at the lake in good time.

It did not take long for a number of the party to get in the water, and the remainder were soon on the water, both having an enjoyable time. Some of the rowers displayed their prowess by rowing in circles. When this began to tire, the whole party adjourned to the field where a ball-game was organized and it is feared that official rules of the game were violated. (A bee scored two strikes on one player.) Great batting ability was shown by some of the ladies, and the call for supper finished an exciting game, the "A" team being led on to victory by the Leader and beating the "B" team, led to defeat by the Librarian.

Supper was served on the verandah of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson's cottage, and justice was done to the good things provided. About dusk, the woodsmen of the party built a large camp-fire while some more susceptible members of the gentler sex floated around the lake, singing very soulfully a few of the approved sentimental songs and classics. At 7.45 p.m. the party gathered around the camp-fire, which was lit amid much merriment. A sing-song was started accompanied by skilful playing of a banjo-mandolin. Love songs were sung for those afflicted, inspiring songs for the young and ambitious, and a few "old timers" for the elders. Several choir members contributed items which added to the enjoyment, and "Little Winnie" also sang very delightfully. About 11.30 p.m., the party returning to the cottage heralded Mr. and Mrs. Wilson with "For they are jolly good people," amid usual cheers, and the party left again for Brownsburg.

Appreciation is felt for the members of the Dauphin Club, who gave the use of their beautiful property, also to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson for the unrestricted use of their cottage and property.

According to the census taken recently in our town, the population is now 3,927.

Empire Touch at Ottawa Exhibition this Year.

August 22nd to 27th Looks Like Favorable Time to Visit the Capital When Imperial Economic Conference is in Session. Much to Attract.

An added Empire touch is given the Ottawa Exhibition this year by the sessions of the Imperial Economic Conference. The buildings and booths in the exhibition will be the Empire show window for the delegates as there will be displays not only by the merchants and manufacturers of the Dominion but also exhibits from far flung parts of the Empire. Dominion and provincial governments also will have displays of the natural resources.

To those who have been wondering when will be the best time to visit Ottawa when the conference is in session, the answer seems to be from August 22nd to 27th, the week of the Ottawa Exhibition. The distinguished delegates have been invited to be the guests of the exhibition directors and the invitation has been accepted tentatively.

Owing to the conference the Dominion government has arranged for Siskin planes from the Royal Canadian Air Force to give formation flying during the six days of the exhibition. Owing to conditions the government decided that no exhibition flying would be carried out this year but an exception has been made for Ottawa owing to the delegates to the Imperial parley.

Directors of the exhibition view as an evidence of goodwill and fellowship the acceptance by the United States Marine Band of the invitation to visit Ottawa during the exhibition. This famed organization, the official band of the nation to the south, will come to Ottawa and will give two concerts each day of the exhibition. It is the first time for this organization to visit Canada and it will come at its full strength, seventy-five men.

Unusually high class attractions have been booked to augment the agricultural live stock industrial and other displays. Topping the bill for the grandstand will be the Winter Garden Revue, an elaborate song and dance offering with a large cast mostly girls, headed by Broadway stars. The costumes and scenic investment are on a scale not before equalled by any outdoor production.

Among the hundred and one factors which make the Ottawa exhibition so attractive are; the automobile show, dog show, pure food displays, dairy produce, agriculture and horticulture, live stock comprising the finest in the land, poultry and pets, child welfare demonstrations, hobby show, displays by merchants, & manufacturers handicrafts and arts, horse show, horse races, sports program, new and large midway with the latest shows and rides, spectacular fireworks, and scores of other factors of an educational and entertaining nature appealing to old and young, rural and urban residents.

Prize lists or any other information concerning the exhibition may be had on application to H. H. McElroy, manager and secretary, Ottawa.

RADIO ADVERTISING

There are times when the advertising that we hear over the radio is very insulting to our intelligence. The things they expect one to believe! I just heard a man say that their particular brand of coffee was so much cheaper than other brands. You only required a heaping teaspoonful of their coffee instead of the tablespoon per cup required by other brands. Needless to say it was a man who said that. Any woman, that is a woman with housekeeping experience, would know that a heaping teaspoon will fill a tablespoon. If you doubt it, just try it for yourself.

ACCURATE MEASURING

This brings us to accurate measurements. If you do not measure accurately, your cooking is apt to be of the hit and miss variety. Some days you will say you had no luck. Luck! Careless measuring, or an improperly heated oven.

To measure a half spoonful fill your spoon and level it off with a knife, then divide it in half lengthwise. If you want a quarter spoonful, divide that half crosswise. Simple isn't it? A glass measuring cup makes the measuring of liquids an easy matter, specially when you want to measure a part of a cup. Always use two measuring cups of standard size and keep one for dry ingredients and the other for liquids. Did you ever hear the story of the bride who told her husband that they would have to buy some more cups. He wondered where all their cups had gone, so she said that the cook book had said to use a cup without a handle for measuring and she had not been able to break just the handle off. Every time she tried, she broke the whole cup.

TO MEASURE SHORTENING

I always like to buy my shortening in pound prints as it simplifies measuring. A pound is 2 cups. If you want one cup, divide your pound into halves. A half-cup is quarter pound, and so on. If you wish to use bulk shortening, use another simple method. For instance, if you want to measure a half-cupful put a half-cupful of water in your measuring cup, then add shortening until the cup is full. Similarly, if you want to measure a quarter cupful of shortening, fill your measuring cup to the three-quarter mark with water, then add shortening until the cup is full. Pour off the water and you have your accurate quarter cup.

If you have ever tried to get a recipe from an old-fashioned cook who never measures anything accurately, you will realize the advantages in accurate measuring. A pinch of this and a bit of that, is alright if you have done it so often that

The announcement in recent Montreal newspapers that Mr. R. F. Stockwell, K.C. of Cowansville, member for Brome County at Quebec, will shortly be made a member of the Provincial Cabinet with the portfolio of Treasurer, is received with gratification. The Eastern Townships Associated Board of Trade and other similar organizations have made representations to Premier Taschereau that this position of Treasurer should be filled by a man resident in the Eastern Townships and preferably an English-speaking one, and evidently the Premier is considering their requests. Mr. Stockwell is held in the highest esteem by everyone who knows him and there is no doubt he will strengthen the Provincial Cabinet.

—Granby Leader.

you automatically get about the same each time; but you will get much more even results if you measure your heaping cups and find out exactly what you do use. Two heaped cupfuls will never be twice the same. So be modern and measure..

VEAL CUTLETS IN SOUR CREAM

1 veal cutlet about 1½ inch thick
2 tablespoons fat
3 onions
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
paprika
¼ cup sour cream
Slice the onions and brown in the fat. Rub the flour into the cutlet and brown. Add salt, sour cream and a dash of paprika. Cover and simmer gently for an hour, turning the meat once.

TRIPLE CONSERVE

1 cup diced rhubarb
1 cup diced pineapple (fresh or canned)
1 cup strawberries
2 cups sugar
Cook the rhubarb until soft and add the other ingredients. Cook until thick and pour into sterilized jars. Seal while hot.

OVEN STERILIZING

Fill glasses or jars until one quarter full with water; set in a pan and heat in the oven until the water simmers.

OVEN CANNING

Fill your bottles with fruit and syrup just as you would for canning on top of the stove. Set the bottles in a pan and put them in an oven heated to 250 degrees. Quart jars require one hour and pints require forty minutes. Remove from the oven. Seal tightly and turn upside down until cool.

SPICED CURRANTS

4 pounds currants
2 pounds brown sugar
2 tablespoons cloves
2 tablespoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup vinegar
Remove stems and wash currants. Add remaining ingredients and boil twenty minutes. Pour into sterilized glasses and cover with wax. Serve with meats.

Correction: Some weeks ago a recipe for Fluffy Icing was published in this column. There was a mistake in the quantity of water used in the recipe, and in place of 1 cup it should have read ½ cup. The corrected recipe is as follows:

2 egg whites
2 cups granulated sugar
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar.
Mix the ingredients in the top of the double boiler & cook over hot water, beating with a Dover beater, until the icing is of the right consistency to spread.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of banditry in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted, draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits retreat with gold dust and choice furs.

CHAPTER II—Corporal Bill Hard-sock brings the news of the crime to Sergeant Alan Baker at the Mounted police post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his superior, Inspector Haskell, Alan starts out after the bandits in a police launch with the corporal and four constables.

CHAPTER III—Reaching the Midnight Sun, they stop long enough for Alan to board her and consult witnesses of the crime. Alan asks the skipper to put Jimmy Montgomery's orphaned four-year-old daughter off at Fort Endurance and leave her in the care of Alan's fiancée, Elizabeth Spaulding. At the MacMillan trading post on the Big Alouka, Joyce MacMillan is alone, awaiting the return of Dave, her father, from a fur-buying trip. She is thrilled when the police launch ties up there for the night, as she has not seen Alan Baker for months. Secretly she had hoped to marry him; then she was stunned by the news of his engagement to Elizabeth. She is happy now to perceive from his halting talk that the planned marriage is not definitely certain.

CHAPTER IV—Larry Young, one of Alan's men, discovers in MacMillan's fur shed a bale of pelts stolen from the Midnight Sun. The evidence incriminates Dave so strongly that Alan is compelled to tell Joyce. She hotly defends her father. Alan leads his expedition up the Big Alouka. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan fails to capture the bandits. The police expedition returns to Fort Endurance with Larry badly wounded.

He said: "You came in here thinking you had some heavy artillery against me. You want to get me. Whether I gave orders or merely suggested, isn't the question now, sergeant. The question is: How are you going to prove your charge? Do you happen to possess any documentary evidence, or can you produce any witnesses, that I gave you that order? You can't! Hardsock and Young were down at the wharf. On the other hand Constable Whipple here was present and heard what you said. So it is the word of two people against yours, and one of them your officer commanding. What do you think of your heavy artillery now?"

He smiled sardonically, in triumph. Alan stood mute, thunderstruck. A moment ago he had thought that Haskell had actually forgotten those crazy orders. But now, with the meaning of those words dawning upon him, he realized that Haskell had deliberately planned this ploy. By a brazen, incredibly brazen lie, he intended to squirm out of any and all responsibility for the wrecked patrol.

The very effrontery of the denial staggered Alan. In a dazed manner he sought to find a way out of what Haskell had just said. But after a little space it was borne in upon him that Haskell had beaten him; that he no longer held a sword over the inspector; that his own heavy weapon was turned against himself now. Whipple had been here; his own men had been down at the wharf. In sickened despair he felt his situation like the fanged jaws of a trap pinning him.

He stood there speechless, staring into the cold taunting eyes of his enemy. Presently he was able to say, throatily: "I hadn't thought of that, inspector. I knew you were tricky, but still I thought you were too near being a man for a thing like that. I've been associating with men like Larry and Bill and Ted for so long that I'd forgotten your kind exists. A lie, a damnable bare-faced lie, from an officer—in that uniform. . . Good God! If you hadn't said it, I wouldn't have believed it.

"Is that all, constable?" Haskell inquired, with a faint sneer on his mouth.

"Yes, that's all. You've got me."

He turned and trudged out the door. His thoughts were all a confused turmoil. Busted—a constable—saddled with the whole blame of that disgraceful patrol—the ground cut out from under him by that brazen lie!

Now he realized to the full how unscrupulous Haskell could be in a showdown fight. When reputation and Elizabeth Spaulding and command here were at stake, Haskell was as cunning as a slinker wolf and as malign as a caracal. The inspector had been out to get him, and had got him. He stood on a level now with Whipple and Burgoon—he, once the proud leader of a proud detachment.

One fact came home to him, hard and inexorable: his Inconnu trip was smashed. To make that patrol he had to have Haskell's backing. But to hope for any co-operation from the inspector would be a fool's wishful thinking. Haskell was out to get him, not those criminals. That Inconnu plan was dead.

Alan felt the terrible hopelessness of his situation. He was bound hand and foot. There was nothing on earth he could do—nothing except forget the aching vision of running those six unknown murderers to earth.

Did he dare forget? . . . Dimly through the creeping mist he saw the candle light of the tiny hospital where Larry, his able silent comrade on many a patrol, lay tossing in pain and fever; where Larry, so strong of body, so proud of his physical powers, was facing the black realization that he would never again go out on patrol with other men, and would never again follow a Strong-Woods trail. Jutting out from the barracks he could see the massive outlines of the cement cell where Dave MacMillan, helpless to prove his innocence, awaited the full vengeance of the law. He felt a responsibility toward Dave MacMillan, all aside from Dave being Joyce's father. If it had been his duty to arrest MacMillan and bring him in, it was a higher duty now to fight for him, to clear a man whom he knew in his heart to be innocent.

Thinking in hard practical terms, Alan saw that so long as Haskell had power over him, he could not stir a hand. If he was ever to get those criminals, he had to be free. Several paths lay open to him. One by one he studied and rejected them, till only the last remained.

For minutes he weighed that possible act. Its cost to him was a terrible cost. It would wipe out his brilliant reputation, his whole police record. It would kill his last chance of ever bringing Haskell to account. It would uproot him and take him for good and all out of this North country. Torn by doubt and indecision, he wavered. The price seemed too staggering.

Presently he heard some one come up the terrace and glide past him and go on toward his cabin. The figure was merely a moving blur in the mist, but Alan recognized that light foot-step.

He called softly: "Joyce! You wanted to see me?"

"Alan! I've been wondering where you . . . Your cabin was all dark, and I couldn't find you." In eager hope she asked him: "Alan, what did Haskell say about Dad? He's going to release Dad on bail, as you thought?"

Alan shook his head, sorry for her, sorry for all the heartache that lay ahead for her now. "Joyce, Haskell can be brutal and inhuman. He wouldn't consent even to letting your dad remain here. He intends to send him outside to Edmonton."

It was on his lips to add, "Your father is being sacrificed to Haskell's need of a victim." But he could not bring himself to tell Joyce that. The news had stricken her cruelly enough.

If only she could be near her father, if only she could visit him, the ordeal might be lightened for her. The lonely waiting weeks of suspense would be agony, if her father was a thousand miles away, among strangers, with no one to lift a hand for him.

He offered gently: "Joyce, if you want to go along and be near him, I'll pay—I'll see to it that you can. It'd be best for you, and for him too, if you would."

Joyce did not answer at once. As he looked down at her, Alan was struck by the sense of how young and innocent a girl Joyce was; and with bitter self-reproach he remembered those long months of the winter past when he had left her alone to her battle, because Elizabeth, protected, sheltered, kept in ease here at Endurance, had demanded it of him. He realized that in her desperate plight she needed his strength and protection far more than Elizabeth did. Except for him Joyce was alone in the world, without friends, relatives, money and . . . father in the shadow of the gallows.

Presently, with the spirited courage he had always loved in her, Joyce asserted:

"Alan, I'm going back home. The Dogribs are bringing in their furs next week. I'll send several of their men en route to the Hares and Loucheux and get their furs, too. I'll sacrifice all our trade goods and raise money for Dad's defense. It'll be a true way of fighting for Dad if I go back home. I don't mind being alone. I can take care of myself. It'll be lonesome, but all the time I'll be knowing that I'm doing the right thing and being a real help to Dad."

Alan acquiesced reluctantly, against his better judgment. A slender girl like her, scarcely out of her teens, going back to that isolated post. . . . A white girl, winsome, pretty, of handsome body, alone there, with Indians coming and going, with half-breeds coming and going. . . .

Joyce asked him: "What happened between you and Haskell, Alan?"

Briefly Alan told her what had taken place down there in the cabin. His account left Joyce speechless, in a silent fury, her little fists clenched, her lips parted in astonishment.

"But he can't demote you, Alan!" she cried. "He can't blame you for his mistake."

"He can't? He's already done it! If I try to fight him, if I make the slightest insubordinate move, he's actually got the power to jail me!"

"But the Inconnu patrol—he'll let you go on that, Alan?"

"And capture those men and get the credit? Not Haskell! He's too wise. Getting those bandits comes second with him. So long as he saves his face, he doesn't really care whether he gets them or not. That Inconnu patrol is dead. It was our best hope, but now it can't ever be. I could stir up trouble for him, I could bring on an investigation; but that would take months. It'd be too late then; those bandits'll be gone."

She repeated, brokenly: "Gone, gone—yes, it'll be too late then. Alan, that means—means Dad will be found guilty—and sent to prison—or worse. . . ."

For the second time in the years he had known her, Joyce broke down and cried. It hurt Alan as few things in his life had ever done. As he felt her sobbing against him, as he thought of this tragedy looming over her, his last hesitancy about his plan was swept away. With those bandits safe in the watery wilderness of the Thalach, Dave MacMillan would be convicted; he would be sent up for life. It would break Joyce, break her spirited courage, her wild-born nature. When he thought of the terrible stigma upon a girl so innocent and brave, he swore silently:

"I'll never see her brought down to that. I'll get those men, I'll bring the truth into court."

He realized fully that he was starting on a long trail, a trail never to be retraced. He was committing himself to a staggering self-sacrifice. But he had to traverse that path; in honor he could do nothing else.

He rose abruptly, brushing away his last trace of hesitancy; and gave Joyce his hand to rise.

"Joyce, there's something I've got to do now. I've got to go. You mustn't stay here. Come." He took her arm, and as they went down the slope, he asked: "I want to see you again before I—some final arrangements with you. . . . Won't you be down at the wharf in half an hour?"

Wondering at his odd tones, his stern purposive manner, Joyce promised him.

At Mrs. Drummond's house he left her and started out along the terrace to Haskell's cabin.

Across the desk he demanded, with no preliminaries:

"I want to buy out. Tonight! Here! Now!"

Haskell's eyes narrowed in suspicion. He could hardly believe it. He knew how deeply Baker was rooted in his work and friendships and life in this northern country; and he could scarcely conceive of a man deliberately throwing away a long brilliant police record at one irremediable step.

But there was no doubting Baker's words, no doubting his grim manner. Baker was demanding to buy out—to get out for good. As he studied the sergeant, Haskell drew back warily. Baker might be laying some trap for him.

He refused, "I'm too short-handed here as it is now."

"I don't give a d—n about that. I'm buying out."

Haskell's confidence was returning as he saw that Alan intended no physical violence. "If you buy out, your record ends. You'll have to start all over."

"I'm buying out for good. There'll be no starting over again. I'm getting out of the Mounted, out of the country!"

Haskell debated swiftly. He was not averse to Baker cutting his own head off; and he saw now there was no trap laid for him. But there were other things to be considered. His sober judgment, casting back over the last nine months, recalled the score of times Baker had corrected bad mistakes of his and kept the post running smoothly. Wisdom whispered to him that he needed the man, needed him desperately. And Elizabeth Spaulding. . . . Was she going away with Baker? Was Baker taking her with him?

If she went, his act in busting the sergeant would prove a boomerang against himself. He tried to temporize.

The Cool Way to Cook in Summer!

With a Silent Glow Range Burner in your present kitchen range, you can get heat when you want it, and then turn it off when your cooking is finished. A coal fire heats up your kitchen between meals and wastes fuel, besides making all kinds of extra work from dirt and ashes.

More than 125,000 homes have chosen Silent Glow because it is the no-trouble burner. It lights quicker, gives more heat and burns less oil than any other range burner. Fits your Quebec heater or furnace too. Let us show you the "Reversflo" oil filter, the "Microfeed" Valve and other patented and exclusive Silent Glow features that assure you dependable service for cooking and heating.

Made in Canada

Approved by National Board of Fire Underwriters

Makers also of Pilgrim Heaters for your home, summer cottage or garage; and Silent Glow Power Burners for large residences, schools, churches, etc. 100

THE DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 14:1-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation.—Exodus 15:2.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Walking Through the Sea.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Dry Path Through
the Sea.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—How Israel Won Freedom.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—How God Helps His People.

I. Israel in Straitened Circumstances
(vv. 1-12).

1. Going out of the land of Egypt (13:18). The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty made Pharaoh willing to let Israel go. The tenth turn of the screw of Omnipotence brought him to time. The Israelites went out from Egypt on their way to the promised land with a high hand. The way of the wilderness was a longer route, but it had many valuable lessons for them. By this way they escaped the experiences of war which would have come to them at the hand of the Philistines, but they learned the crookedness and perverseness of their own hearts (Deut. 8:12).

2. Hemmed in (vv. 1-3). At the Lord's direction they turned from their first course and were made to face a great difficulty. The Red sea was before them and mountains on either side. However, they should have been encouraged because the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light. He took not away the pillar of cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night (13:21, 22).

3. Pursued by Pharaoh (vv. 4-12).
The stricken Egyptians had now recovered from their sorrow, and perceiving the straitened circumstances of the Israelites they interpreted this to mean that Moses was unable to lead them out of their difficulty. Therefore they went in pursuit, hoping yet to prevent their leaving the country.

II. The Miraculous Escape of the Israelites (vv. 13-22).

There seems to have been a twofold object in leading them in to this particular place.

1. To strengthen the faith of the people. To be delivered from such circumstances would impress upon them anew the reality of the love and power of God. The people, as usual, displayed their unbelief, and even censured Moses for leading them out of Egypt. Moses replied to their murmurs by saying, "Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold on God's promises.
God said, "Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Having had his definite promise, to have prayed longer would have been unbelief. They were to go forward a step at a time without raising any question as to the outcome, for from the source from which came the command, came the power to obey. The presence of the Lord was adapted to their needs as they went forward. When the situation was such that the Lord's leadership was not necessary, the cloud passed to the rear and held the enemy at bay. The presence of God had a double effect—darkness and confusion to the enemy, and light and guidance to his people.

2. To lay a snare for the overthrow of the Egyptians. Those who will not heed the warning judgments of God may be allowed to go to their destruction under the presumption that the Almighty is helping them.

III. The Overthrow of the Egyptians
(vv. 23-27).

Having seen the Israelites go across the sea dryshod, Pharaoh and his people madly pursued them. They insanely thought that they in their unbelief could follow in the wake of God's children. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. He not only looked upon them but took off their chariot wheels which caused them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring destruction upon the Egyptians.

IV. The Song of Triumph (15:1-21).

Standing on the other shore of the Red sea they could fittingly sing the song of triumph because of their miraculous deliverance and the overwhelming defeat of the Egyptians.
They attributed it all to God. In a glad coming day, a similar but much larger company will sing the same song with an important addition, namely, the "Song of the Lamb" (Rev.
15:3).

GEMS OF THOUGHT

The question of duty is one of the most serious. On that pivot swings both usefulness and destiny.

We spend too much time ringing the doorbells of earth, and not enough the doorbell of heaven.—Quoted by Hanna.

The purpose firm is equal to the deed. Who does the best his circumstance allows, does well, acts nobly.
Angels could do no more.—Young.

MORIN HEIGHTS

The L. O. L. Dance for the benefit of the local lodge, held at Hammond's Hall, was a decided success in every way. Some hundred dancers took the floor; local talent supplied the music; the ladies served refreshments; everybody appeared to be well pleased with the event. The W. I. kindly lent their dishes.

Mr. Barnes' house is nearing completion. His new manager is Mr. Godliff.

Mr. Dewy is carrying out extensive alterations and repairs, at his summer home at Lake Anne.

The Mount Royal Cadet Camp which is in this territory for the first time, under the direction of Major Green, M.C., & Lieut-enant Rubens. A substantial headquarters with terrain and water front has been purchased from Mr. J. E. Seale. The full equipment includes tents, (also hospital tent, with trained nurse) boats, flota, physical exercise paraphernalia—and the first group of boys has arrived. The Camp is intended for the better class of boys, whose parents not only want the best for them, but are able to pay for it. Military discipline, supervised recreation on land and water, properly balanced diet, is designed to produce health, courage and culture.

The weather is glorious in those parts. Roads, since the rain are dustless and better than ever. Those with cottages are here as usual, and the boarding houses are filling up. Visitors are not so numerous as before perhaps on account of the depression, but improved train service and cars are adding to the number day by day.

Three men have been employed on the Anglican cemetery and driveway, and everyone seems pleased with its appearance.

Boy Loses Life in Rouge River.

Stanley Campbell, 16 years, succumbs while swimming at Harrington East.

A sad fatality occurred on Monday evening, 18th. inst., when Stanley A. Campbell, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Rodrick Campbell of Harrington East, met his death while swimming in the Rouge River with his brother Alvin and other friends. As he approached the shore he was noticed by his younger brother Vernon to have stopping swimming. Vernon suspecting something amiss, called to Alvin, who immediately rushed to his brother's assistance and carried him unconscious out of the water.

A doctor and two nurses were quickly on the scene and did all that was humanly possible to save the young life. But their efforts were of no avail, the doctor pronouncing death due to heart failure while in the water. A loving father and mother, three sisters and two brothers, remain to mourn their deep loss.

Funeral service was conducted by Rev. Butler, Baptist minister, in the church building crowded to capacity with friends and neighbors. The large attendance and the profusion of floral offerings testified to the love and esteem in which the boy was held.

The pall bearers were: his brother Alvin, Erving McLean, Melvin Diarmid, Clair Bennett, Roland McCulloch, and Lornie McTavish.

Conference Uniquely British Says Preacher

"England has always sought to glorify God and God has made her glorious," said Col. the Rev. R. H. Steacy, C.M.G., in his sermon last Sunday in All Saints' church, Westboro, at a service in which prayers were offered for the success of the Imperial Economic Conference.

The Empire, continued the preacher, had always been the most powerful factor for good and the moral leader of the world. The Empire Conference is uniquely British and one could not think of Spain, Italy, Germany or even the United States, holding a similar gathering. The British Empire was the only collection of states encircling the globe and bound together by love and not force.

Referring to the Dominion, Col. Steacy said that Canada had no right to fence off such a large portion of the earth and simply say, "This is ours," and let nobody else come in. If this was done it would be rightfully taken away from us and filled up by people foreign to Canadian ideals.

Canada's Conference Call

Canadian observers are quite well aware that there is grave responsibility on the Canadian prime minister. He invited the conference to be held in Ottawa. It is up to Canada to give the lead, whether it is to be in the direction of freer trade or of co-operative policy.

There is no desire in Canada to see the food of the British people taxed, nor any strong belief that such additional burden on Britain would be of any benefit to Canadian agriculture. There is widespread hope in this country that Mr. Bennett will reverse the high-tariff policy of 1930 by reducing duties on British textiles, footwear and other goods of significance to hard-working people in Canada. Obviously, however, Mr. Baldwin can say no more about the desired course to follow than he did in his opening speech. When Canada is specific about lowering tariffs against British trade there should be no doubt about Britain's response.

MONTREAL-OTTAWA DAILY SERVICE BY AIRPLANE

A daily passenger service by Airplane, between Montreal and Ottawa, was inaugurated last week. One or more planes, depending on the amount of traffic, will leave St. Hubert daily at 9 a.m., arriving at Ottawa 10 a.m., and returning to Montreal again in the evening. It is considered likely that many persons attending the Imperial Conference at Ottawa will make use of this service.

King John - and Argenteuil's Liberal Committee

Open Letter to Electors of the Liberal Party in the County of Argenteuil.

Sirs:—

I would like to address you as 'party friends', but because I clamor for rotation of office I am considered a traitor to Liberalism. Still the old committee of a quarter-of-a-century hold sway. If we so long allow the freedom of our rights to be trampled with, we shall soon lose them entirely—those rights that were guaranteed by the Magna Charta, descending, as I do, directly from a number of those old barons who met King John in the swamp at Runny Mead. They obliged him to sign that great charter of liberty—albeit with much ill grace and many a twist (for the King wrote an awful fist—indeed, so poor a fist that he struck the parchment before his witnesses; being unable to write his name.) To their honor be it said, that it is to these old English barons we are indebted for the just constitution we possess. Their virtues may have been rude and uncultivated, but they were sincere. They had heart and understanding to distinguish right from wrong; they understood the rights of humanity, and had the spirit to maintain them. I think history has not done justice to their conduct in securing from their sovereign that great acknowledgment of national rights contained in Magna Charta. They did not confine it to themselves, but delivered it as a common blessing to the whole people.

And coming, as I do, from such a stem, I do not allow my own freedom to be wrested from me with a grace. Moreover, I will step aside and stand alone from any that attempt to infringe upon these rights.

The pen is said to be the mighty instrument of little men. "Why doesn't he stop writing!" you cry. I answer promptly, "He can't!" He has played so long with that foolish old feather that the goose quill, in spite of him, now cackles in song. And long may my pen cackle in the cause of liberty and uphold my old ancestors, who fought and bled to give us that great privilege!

To desire freedom is not enough; we must know how to use it aright; for freedom under the law guaranteed us by British Constitution is the fairest fruit produced on the tree of British liberty. But—sad to say—we have so seldom tasted it that few of us know its sweetness.

Our Liberal Committee for Perpetuity sits fast, in spite of all that is blue, fearful that if they let go the steering wheel and retire from office, the good old Liberal party will go to pieces. But let them not excite themselves, for their steering in the past has left little of the party's old hull intact. They remind me of the Southerner who fell over a wharf, who, thinking himself of great importance, was sure someone would come & fish him out. But finding he was about to sink for the third time, he cried "Oh dear, here's somebody going to lose a two-thousand-dollar nigger!"

Lightning Starts Fire in Hotel

Considerable Damage from Small Outbreak

Responding to their fourth call within a week, Lachute Fire Brigade subdued a small but persistent outbreak of fire during the electric storm of last Friday morning. Lightning struck the wiring in the neighborhood of Ampleman's (Palace) Hotel on Foundry St., jumping the fuses and igniting the hollow wall toward the top of the third floor. Firemen attacked the blaze with two streams, from inside and from the roof above; and after cutting away a stretch of roof and coping, succeeded in quenching the flames which might otherwise have spread extensively.

Damage was liberally estimated at $3,000, and was amply covered by insurance. Inasmuch as the fire was first noticed at around 11 o'clock in the morning, there seems little foundation for a sensational report in Montreal newspapers, that "Guests occupying the Palace Hotel, a summer resort in Lachute, were forced from their beds when fire partially destroyed the building, with an estimated damage of $6,000."

Car Overturned Near St. Canute

Four Passengers Have Miraculous Escape.

A new Chevrolet roadster came to grief on Sunday afternoon between St. Canute and St. Jerome, on a stretch of straight and unobstructed highway. The car, bearing an Ontario licence plate, was being driven at a very moderate speed bound from Lachute to Arundel, via St. Jerome and Ste. Agathe. The accident occurred when the steering gear suddenly locked, and the car took the ditch. The machine overturned completely, the rear bumper being suspended on a wire fence beside the road. This circumstance is believed to account for a miraculous escape by the passengers,—three adults and a little boy, two of whom were riding in the rumble seat. All four escaped injury. The car, however, was badly wrecked and was later towed to a St. Jerome garage.

Local farmers report this year's hay crop is less than 50 per cent of last year's yield. The hay, however, is generally of good quality.

Granby Editor Passes

Last Respects by Fellow Citizens and Newspaper Colleagues

The funeral of George Legge, publisher and editor of the Granby Leader-Mail, weekly, who has been resident in Granby since 1900 and who died in Montreal following an operation last Thursday, took place from his home on Sunday afternoon last. The cortege was the largest seen in Granby for many years.

The service was conducted by the Rev. I. M. Lidstone, rector of St. George's Church, Granby. During the service H. G. Hodgson, of Montreal, sang Rossini's "In Memoriam" and the choir sang "Crossing the Bar," the words of which Mr. Legge quoted in one of the last articles he wrote in his paper. The Granby Boy Scouts and Girl Guides formed the guard of honor, the latter being particularly anxious to show their recognition of Mr. Legge's kindness during his life. One of his last acts being to provide the Girl Guides with flutes for a flute band and to train them himself.

The funeral ceremony, and its large attendance, were eloquent of the high esteem and deep respect with which Mr. Legge was regarded.

With the passing of one of its most familiar figures, Granby loses a loyal, solicitous, and constructive citizen. The fraternity of weekly-newspapermen, among whom he was widely known in Eastern Canada, also mourns a warm friend and a progressive fellow journalist. Mr. Legge's congenial and agile contributions will be missed in the Leader-Mail columns which he has so ably edited for many years.

The Crusader from Canada

The Ottawa Citizen Criticizes Lord Beaverbrook.

Lord Beaverbrook's latest attack on Mr. Baldwin could be ignored in Canada, but for the mistaken belief of some British people that the London newspaper peer is an influential Canadian. He is no more competent to speak for Canada than for South Africa. He happened to be born in New Brunswick, but he never took any part in Canadian public life. As Max Aitken he had the reputation of being a shrewd bond salesman; but just as soon as he could afford, he left Canada, more than twenty years ago, to carve out a political career for himself in England.

The adventure proved successful for Max. The winning smile that had served him so well as an enterprising promoter, put him across in British politics. Under the wing of Bonar Law, a safe Conservative constituency "fell for" him. He became Sir Max in 1911.

The war gave him a great opportunity to connect up again with Canada overseas. In the reflected glory of Canada's spontaneous enlistment in the British cause, Sir Max became the first Baron Beaverbrook in 1916. He engaged in political adventures in the years of intrigue from the fall of the Asquith ministry, but Lord Beaverbrook's activities were of no interest to the people of Canada. They would have forgotten about him long ago, as they have about other Canadian peers in England, but for the investment he has made in publicity.

Occasionally Lord Beaverbrook has made a fleeting trip across to Canada, but such trips mean nothing to the Canadian public. Another former Canadian, Cyrus S. Eaton, about as successful in steel as Max Aitken has been in cement and paper, occasionally comes up from the United States to revisit boyhood haunts in Nova Scotia. Lord Beaverbrook should no more be regarded as representing Canada in London than Cyrus Eaton would be in Washington. Happily the former Nova Scotian has never manifested any such political ambition: nor would he commend himself to American public opinion by attacking the president were he so prompted.

Lord Beaverbrook is reported as saying in a personal article on the front page of the Sunday Express:

What a tragic thing that the leadership of the Empire has passed from Great Britain to

TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION TO GREAT BRITAIN

Within the last week or so a great new advance has been made in intra-Imperial communication, with the inauguration of direct telephone service between Canada and the British Isles through all-British circuits. One can now telephone from Canada direct to England, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man without the detour through United States points which has hitherto been used.

One Prime Cause of The Depression

Non-Essentials Had the Call and the Essentials Were Sadly Neglected.

Mr. Alex. Fraser of Renfrew, senior member of the firm of Fraser & Son, submits the following to one of our exchanges, from a Flat Lake, Alberta, man as one of the prime causes of depression in Canada:

"Dear Mr. Editor,—There seems to be so much talk about our so-called prosperity, I believe it's my duty to write my views, on the same, and help analyze the situation so far as possible, so's we can make up our minds we had auto change our ways of living, and so forth.

"I have taken my own case for instance. I see my mistakes and many others have acted likewise. I bought an auto instead of a farm and it is worn out, but the farm I figured on is still O.K. I invested in a radio instead of a cow, and the radio gives static instead of milk.

"I am feeding five nice hounds which answer to the names of Red, Red Wing, Slobber, Jake and Bayrum, instead of five pigs. I had our piano tuned instead of the well cleaned out. I spent all my cash in 1928 and used my credit in 1929 and traded up my future wages on instalments in 1930, so hard times caught me in bad shape last fall.

"If I had spent my last ten dollars for flour and wheat instead of gas and oil, I'd have been O.K. I built a nice garage last year instead of covering my barn, and I loafed in a mountain two weeks instead of being the pasture fixing it so's cow won't get out, but she is dry and mortgaged to boot for two blankets my wife bought from an agent instead of paying the taxes.

"I'm on a cash basis now, but ain't got no cash. I am tied to the end of my rope and the man I'm working for is busted on account of nobody won't pay him. I had $4 saved up for a rainy day; it turned dry and I spent the $4 saved for 2 inner tubes.

"I tried hard to make both ends meet with a turnip patch, but when I got turnips ready to sell everybody was selling turnips for nothing, and the market was glutting. I'm worried plum to the bone and my wife's kindfold are coming over next Tuesday to spend two weeks.

"Write or telephone if you hear of any relief from the Government coming down my way, and I'm willing to be either a Conservative, a Liberal, a U.F.A. or a Communist for a few months; if that will help out any."

Canada. What a splendid thing that it passed from the uncertain and faithless hand of Baldwin to the statesman-like grasp of Bennett. We must place our trust in Bennett and Hailsham. Our hopes are in them.

The "tragic thing" is that any considerable number of British people should be so misled, under the impression that a representative Canadian is expressing this opinion. He might just as well say that Britain's trust must be placed in Beaverbrook; but it should clearly be understood that Canada is placing no such trust.

Hitch-Hiker Strikes Lucky

The Open Highway holds no Fears for this Young Boy Scout

Setting out from Philadelphia on foot to visit his grandmother, Mrs. Wm. Banford—David McLaughlin, intrepid Boy Scout, 15 years of age, visualized many footsore miles before he reached his distinction across the border to Lachute. But a letter mailed at that time, announcing his proposed visit, reached Lachute just two hours before the lad himself!

Fresh and happy, in his Scouts' uniform, David landed in upon his relatives and told an unusual story of his trip. Leaving Philadelphia Friday morning last, he was promptly picked up by an obliging motorist who conveyed him as far as Stroudsburg, Pa. Well content the traveller thanked his benefactor, and set out with a light heart to tackle the rest of his long journey. He had tramped only 2 miles when a vacationist bound for Canada, offered the hospitality of his car and brought the lad to Montreal. Having rested overnight in the city the generous tourist, with no definite itinerary planned for his trip, offered to drop his young passenger at Lachute en route to Ottawa.

That is how David McLaughlin completed his long hike so speedily and economically. Shoe leather, at least, numbered among the lightest of his traveling expenses. The young visitor will spend his vacation here as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Horsey in the East Ward.

Quebec Women's Institutes to be Incorporated Shortly.

After several months of strenuous work in compiling a new constitution for Quebec Women's Institutes, (the organization having outgrown the old) together with the drafting of an act incorporating the Institutes, the necessary legal procedure is now under way for the incorporation of the Province as a whole, after which the Branches will attend to the matter for themselves.

The Institutes are to be incorporated under the National Benefit Societies Act. The Act will give to the Province and to each Branch which has followed up the procedure, adequate protection in the matter of holding property, such as community halls, equipment, bonds, etc., and will doubtless stimulate activities along these lines throughout the Province.

Suspect Attempted Robbery

Constable Gagné was summoned at an early hour this morning (Thursday) when an attempt was made to enter the "Bazaar St. Jerome" store on Main Street. Mr. and Mrs. Assad, who occupy the tenement above the store, heard an automobile stop nearby, at around 3 a.m. Shortly afterward, someone was heard stealthily pushing on the door of the Bazaar beneath their dwelling. Mr. Assad immediately got up and notified the police by telephone, but the marauders, seeing they had been observed from upstairs withdrew from the scene, and left no trace of their identity.

Presumably en route for the workers' conference at Ottawa, where district delegates will assemble on August 1st., to discuss labor conditions, etc.—between 40 and 50 unemployed passed through Lachute on Wednesday from Montreal. With exception of a few who rode in a truck, the party were parading on foot, and consisted largely of young men. Several of them stopped off at Lachute.

The greatest fault is to be conscious of none.

It is rumored that the Ontario Legislature will make public liability and property liability insurance compulsory on every automobile, from and after Sept. 1st. The appalling number of accidents this year is given as the reason for this action.

The first sheet of paper is stated to have been made from the bark of a mulberry tree in the year 75.

Another $20,000,000 public loan has been gobbled up in a couple of days; which indicates a plentitude of cash and unbounded faith in the country. So why be downhearted?—Toronto Globe.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

THE BOY WHO CRIES

Dear Boys:—

This may seem to you a strange heading for this week's letter. What can he have to say to us about a Boy Who Cries, you wonder. Well, I am prompted to write you on this subject because the other day I had to spend a very long time in company of a boy of twelve years of age who did just this very thing!

He was sharing the compartment of the train in which I travelled, and though at the beginning he seemed quite bright and cheerful, suddenly the tears began to gather in his eyes and his lips trembled. With a valiant effort for self-control he kept his head turned toward the window in a pretence of being interested in the scenery, but eventually he gave way altogether and thus became for all time fixed in my memory as the Boy Who Cried.

No, I am not going to tell you what he was crying about. He told me later, when we became friends; and FRIENDS, you know, do not betray each others' confidence.

However, I am going to tell you this: He Was Doing the Right Thing by Crying. After all he was, even at twelve years of age, only a little lad, and he had been brought into contact with the first great sorrow of his life. He was, as it were, leaving the sunshine and entering the grey shadows of an unknown experience, and it was entirely natural that in consequence he should be FRIGHTENED.

Now it comes to me that it is sometimes a very good thing indeed that we should be frightened; not perhaps for the reason my little friend was, but for other causes. We all of us know the difference between RIGHT and WRONG, and we are taught to believe that the Right thing is done by the Brave man, and the Wrong action performed by the Coward. If you tell a lie you are a weak and miserable coward because you only do so to save yourself. Punishment is your just reward for so evil an action. The brave boy will own up and take his medicine like a man, even if by so doing he is made to cry.

By the way, have you ever heard of Crocodile Tears? These come from the crying of Pretense, and are shed to try and convince people you are sorry when you are not! This, I think, is the worst form of crying, and the boy who lowers himself to do this is beneath contempt. But to come back to my little friend, he found relief in crying, and very soon won out and was able to look at the future more cheerfully. So you see from all this that, though on the surface, it may appear rather a childish thing to do, crying is not always wrong, though at times it is.

When you see one of your companions crying, don't be too ready to find fault with him. He may be right and You may be wrong.

Anyway, don't shed Crocodile tears, if you please!

Your affectionate friend,

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 10.

And now, said Pat Sommerville as he sat at the breakfast table next morning, facing his young nephew and niece, it's all aboard the good ship Dauntless for an early start, as everything is arranged and settled and it's the wide and open sea for all of us. How do you young people feel about it?

Babs looked up at him with a smile. I thing it is splendid, Uncle, and now I know why there was so much noise going on when I was trying to get to sleep last night. It was our baggage going down to the ship.

Her uncle nodded. Clever girl, you have guessed right. And now Jack, you must be off at once and report yourself to Mr. Williams who will fit you out in uniform and set you to work. We will not be long after you.

Finishing up his meal quickly and after listening carefully to the directions given him as to where the ship was to be found Jack left the hotel full of eager expectation as to the future. This indeed was the start of a new life, and he wondered much as to what would happen to him before the voyage they were all going to take would be over. It was a fine sunny morning and an invigorating sea breeze met the boy as he made his way down the long narrow street towards the docks. On every every side of him were signs of activity and it was with difficulty that he avoided the constant stream of traffic and trucks conveying material of all description to and from the boats.

Above his head the sky was clear blue, without even the vestige of a cloud, and as he had by now reached the harbour he could catch a glimpse of the wide expanse of ocean which stretched away right to that unbroken line, the horizon. Very soon his quick eye discerned the Dauntless looking large and beautiful under a fresh coat of paint. From her tall funnels a thin grey smoke was ascending into the early morning atmosphere, to be gathered up by the slight wind and swept away. Several men were moving up and down her decks under the direction of Mr. Williams, wearing his smart blue uniform and peak cap. It was to this gentleman that Jack addressed himself after he had made his way on board by means of a long gangway that connected the ship to the quay-side.

My uncle told me to come on board, and he will be down here before long, he said.

The busy officer looked at the boy, surprised for a moment at the familiar mode of address seldom heard on ship board. Then he spoke; Oh, he did, did he? Well, let me tell you this, boy, there are no 'Uncles' on board the Dauntless. This ship is commanded by Captain Sommerville, and when you want to speak of him you will say 'Commander', and as I am his chief officer you will address me as 'Sir'. Now, if you are the boy the Commander has engaged as second purser, you had better get down below and look around you till you find a cabin marked No. 14, in which you will discover, if you have any sense, a long box. Open it and put on the uniform you will find there, stow away the civilian clothes, and when you are presentable, come to me here and I'll set you to work. Look lively now, he added sharply, seeing Jack was about to say something. "I have no more time to waste on you." And he turned away abruptly. With a puzzled expression on his face our hero concluded that the wisest thing to do was to carry out his instructions, though where the particular cabin, put aside for his use, was to be found was to him a mystery. However, without hesitating further he found his way to the cabin hatchway and descended a number of steps till, finding himself in a long corridor with small doorways on either side, he searched eagerly for the number fourteen. After a few minutes of active endeavour he spotted the required figures painted in white on a doorway towards the far end of the passage, and turning the door-handle, walked into the small apartment. Two bunks, one above the other, occupied the right-hand side of the cabin, while opposite him was the port-hole, now wide open as the ship was in harbour. Glancing round he soon found the box mentioned by Mr. Williams, and on lifting the lid the boy saw his uniform neatly folded and ready to be put on. Another five minutes and he had changed, and placing the cap on his head, in what he fully trusted was the correct angle, and not a little self-conscious at the alteration in his appearance, he made his way again on deck. Going up to Mr. Williams, he saluted as smartly as he knew how and said, "I report for duty, Sir."

THE BOY WHO DIDN'T PASS

A sad-faced little fellow sits alone in deep disgrace; There's a lump arising in his throat and tears drop down his face, He wanders from his playmates, for he doesn't want to hear Their shouts of merry laughter since the world has lost its cheer

He has sipped the cup of sorrow, he has dripped the bitter glass, And his heart is fairly breaking—he's the boy who didn't pass.

In the apple tree the robin sings a cheery little song,

But he doesn't seem to hear it, showing plainly something's wrong; Comes his faithful little spaniel for a romp and bit of play,

But the troubled little fellow bids him sternly go away.

And alone he sits in sorrow, with his hair a tangled mass,

And his eyes are red with weeping—he's the boy who didn't pass.

Oh, you who boast a laughing son and speak of him as bright,

And you who love a little girl who comes to you at night

With shining eyes and dancing feet, with honors from her school,

Turn to that lonely little lad who thinks he is a fool,

And take him kindly by the hand, the saddest of his class,

He is the one who most needs love—the boy who didn't pass.

—Cornwall Standard-Freeholder.

WORD 'OTTAWA' AS VAGUE ASPIRATION LIKE 'EXCELSIOR'

Viscount Sumner Comments on Imperial Economic Conference and Other Gatherings.

Viscount Sumner, one of England's greatest jurists until he was overtaken by ill-health, writes in the Saturday Review that for months the word "Ottawa" has represented a "bright vague aspiration, like the cry 'Excelsior!'"

The conference habit is now an old one, says Lord Sumner. Locarno began it. Geneva, in his opinion, is a dreary place now and politically the word connotes "gas." As for Lausanne, it suggests "handsomely giving up something you know you cannot get."

Lord Sumner is kinder to Ottawa. "The conference there is at any rate a domestic affair and an ingenuinity of peace," he observes. "Great publicists have exclaimed it is unthinkable Ottawa should fail. Of course it is. Conferences are not allowed to fail; something is always patched up for the delegates to take home—that is the technique of the thing."

The former lord of appeal thinks it is improbable Ottawa will be a great success all at once "Imperial preference," he remarks, "is a sound and indeed indispensable policy, but after the principle come the figures, which is a difficult matter to decide. On the other hand, politically there should be no real difficulties. We at home had better keep quiet, content to live in hopes."

ANNOUNCING

Daily Demonstrations of the

STERLING OIL BURNER

Canada's Finest Oil Burner

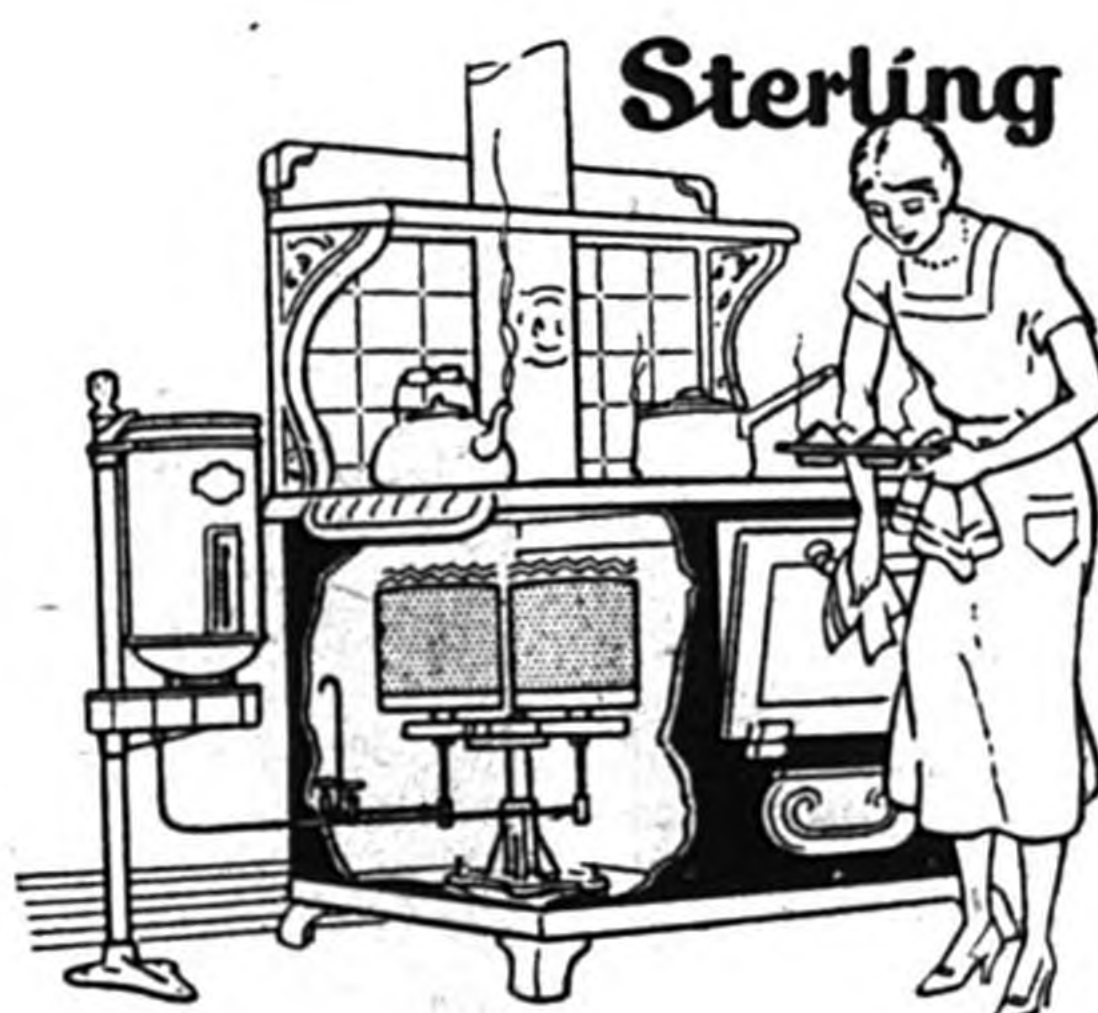

= The Seven Points of Sterling Superiority =

1. Metal containers that cannot be accidentally broken or cracked by the heat.

2. Special oil strainer that is durable, covering large area, prevents blockage.

3. Oil bowl of large capacity has reserve space, a feature which prevents overflowing.

4. Heavy chromium nickel sleeves that are fire-resisting. Guaranteed for ten years.

5. Specially thick wicks that are efficient, also lasting.

6. Adjustable base which can be moved to meet the exact requirements of each individual stove or heater.

7. Specially designed valve that prevents fading fires.

EVERY PART OF THE STERLING OIL BURNER IS MADE IN CANADA BY CANADIAN LABOR FOR CANADIAN HOMES BY CANADIAN CAPITAL.

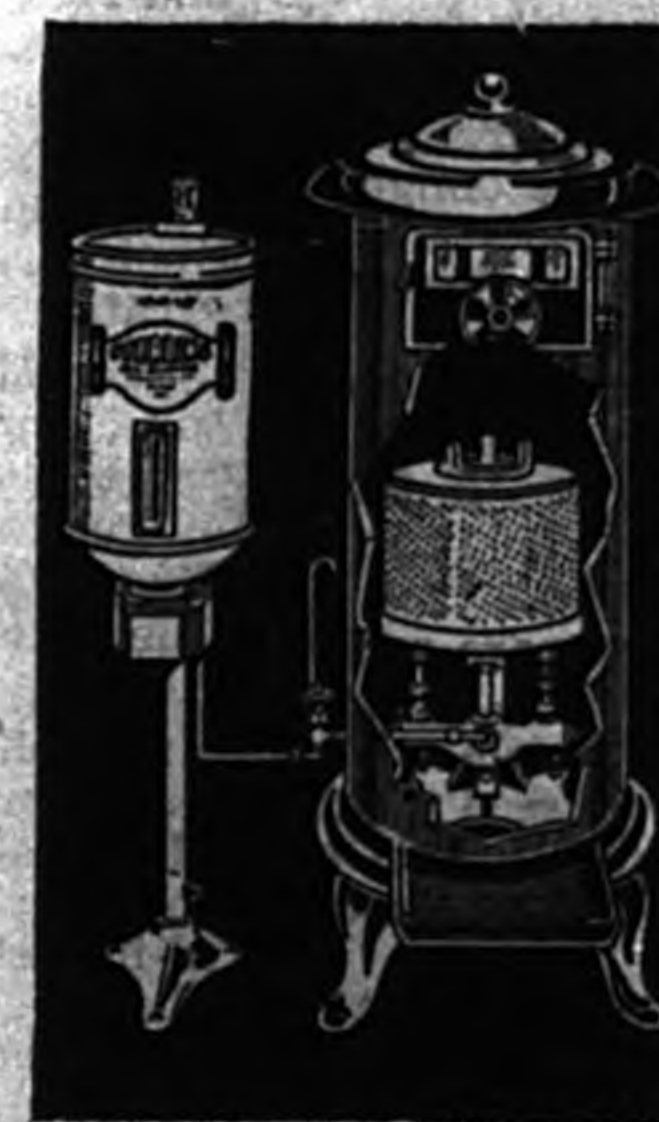

Absolutely Guaranteed for 10 Years

Do not fail to take full advantage of these demonstrations, for here, indeed, is a rare opportunity to see for yourself how the use of oil for cooking and heating does away with all the dissatisfaction, dirt, work and nuisance of burning coal or wood.

Come in by all means and let us show you why. Coast to coast, the STERLING OIL BURNER is the unanimous choice of the wise housewife. Why these Burners are so economical in operation, so easy and safe to use, and why you can depend on them for years of carefree, enjoyable service.

There is a correctly designed STERLING OIL BURNER for every type of Stove, Range, Heater or Circulator, and every installation is backed by a definite, far-reaching guarantee! STERLING OIL BURNERS are exceedingly cheap to operate. They are easily and quickly installed without trouble or fuss. Just imagine how you would benefit from installing one with no more cinders to sift, ashes to move, and full freedom from harmful dust or odors.

However, come and see for yourself. You will be surprised how little it costs to install one of the truly modern and decidedly better Oil Burner, and how really effective they are for all heating and cooking purposes.

MOTION WOULD MAKE PEACE PACT EFFECTIVE

No More General Mobilizations and No More Wars, Object of Resolution in French Chamber.

No more mobilizations and no more wars by nations unless the people themselves authorize them by national referendum, is the object of a resolution introduced in the Chamber of Deputies for the purpose of putting real teeth in the Briand-Kellogg Peace Pact.

The auditor of the resolution,
Leon Abrami, Independent Radical and former under secretary of war, declared that his project already had the support of 70 of his colleagues as well as associations of former soldiers, workers and intellectuals.

The resolution invites France to have the League of Nations ask its members and the signatories to the Briand-Kellogg Pact to insert provisions in their constitutions interdicting mobilization or war unless their people, both men and women, approve by a two-thirds vote.

Excerpts From Preamble

The foreign affairs committee already has the resolution.
Here are some excerpts from the preamble:

"In signing the Briand-Kellogg Pact states were obliged to organize world conditions so that war becomes an impossibility.

"It is governments who always have declared wars in the past. Let us make it impossible for them to do it in the future.

Governments prepare and decide wars but do not fight in them, while the people who do the fighting are asked neither to decide nor hinder them and usually they do not understand them.

"The referendum must include mothers, wives, sisters and daughters, for they understand the carnage of wars."

The only exceptions in which a referendum would not be necessary would be when a nation was a victim of general mobilization or attack, or was acting in behalf of the League of Nations.

British Statesmen Relax

The British delegation to the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa, headed by Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council and former Prime Minister of Great Britain, despite its heavy labors during the five-day voyage to Canada on the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain" had its lighter moments. The scenes above show members of the delegation visiting the Navigating Bridge of the big white flagship, and Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Dominion Secretary, enjoying a game of quoits. Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin autographs a picture of the "Empress of Britain" for Captain Latta, her commander; looking on is Geoffrey Lloyd, M.P., a brilliant younger member of the House, who is his Parliamentary Private Secretary. Lower picture shows Rt. Hon. Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, Lord Hallsham, and Sir John Gilmour, receiving a short lesson in navigation from Capt. R. G. Latta. While the delegates were on the bridge a small steamer showed a message of welcome, and above is seen the "Empress of Britain's" signal "Thank you."

Here and There

Four guests at the French River Chalet Bungalow Camp recently brought in four muskies totalling 73 pounds, of which the largest weighed 26 lbs. and the smallest twelve. Fishing at this popular resort is most successful this season, and there will be keen competition for the Canadian Pacific trophy.

Native Sons of Glasgow enroute to the big Convention of their Association at the Scottish city have been travelling across Canada via Canadian Pacific Railway from Victoria and points in Western Canada, Ontario and Quebec, for the sailing of the "Duchess of Bedford". Members will gather from all over the world for a monster celebration July 15-22.

John Findlay, who is by way of being the all time big game hunter of the world, arrived at Vancouver recently aboard the "Empress of Russia", enroute to England "for a little rest." He adds to his big game hunting the disciplining of Malay headhunters, who disregard the white man's laws. "One raid we made," said Mr. Findlay, "left a trail of twenty dead men."

Canadian Pacific low rate bargain return trips, which have been a very successful feature of the company's operation this year, will include one to the Maritime Provinces July 22, when Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will be covered in round trips to take in most of the show places of the two provinces. The trip will be varied by a sea passage in the fast new steamship "Princess Helene" across the Bay of Fundy to the Land of Evangeline.

A hole-in-one, though rare, is not unique, but when it is made by a lady and for the first time on the course it rates a headline. This was done by Mrs. Guy Lapraik on the 150-yard par three hole at the Canadian Pacific Recreation Club Course at Sorun near Montreal recently.

Favorable development of this year's crop on the prairie provinces is noted by the Canadian Pacific Railway's weekly report issued recently by the Agricultural Department in Winnipeg. Most of the wheat in Manitoba and Eastern Saskatchewan is headed at an average height of two feet, and elsewhere ranges between advanced shot blade to headed stage. Hail loss has been only local and in scattered districts.

Bob Davis, roving columnist of the New York Sun, and probably the most travelled newspaperman in the world, has been staying at the Banff Springs Hotel on his way back from Hawaii, accompanied by Mrs. Davis. Mr. Davis has a flair for the unusual, and will likely unearth a wealth of good material for his column among the old timers of the Rockies.

Taxation comparisons in connection with motor vehicles and railroads should take into consideration that the railways pay for their own roadway, and also to some extent for the roadway used by their motor vehicle competitors, says the "Traffic World". This brings in the question of how much the motor vehicles should pay for the highways and whether they are doing it. (856)

NEWLYWEDS ARE HAPPY ONIONS CAUSE WEeping

Assorted Cargo Arrives From West Indies by C. N. S. Lady Somers

Montreal, July.—"Enough onions to make everybody in Canada weep for a week, and yet by no means a record shipment," so local vegetable brokers describe a consignment of $375,000 Bermuda onions brought here by the C. N. liner Lady Somers. One record shipment on the liner was made up of 72,000 Bermuda-grown tomatoes, succeeding Bahamas-grown tomatoes and yet preceding Canadian-grown tomatoes. The rest of the all-British cargo aboard the Lady Somers consisted chiefly of 400 crates of celery, 2,000 crates of other vegetables and a few million bananas. The liner also brought 20 newlyweds who spent their honeymoons in Bermuda.

Mrs. Waters and family are visiting at "Mountview."

Mr. Geo. Maybury and Miss Edith Graham visited Mrs. Maybury over the week-end. Austin and Linley Dixon were also guests of Willard Maybury during the week.

DO YOU REMEMBER?

We often wonder how many of our "old-timers" can recall when we put our shirts on over our heads; when anybody could hitch up a horse; and there were no such things as wrist watches and a hired girl was lucky to get $2.50 a week. Or how many remember when boys collected cigarette cards; when everybody had tonsils and kept 'em; when nobody had appendicitis and most everybody kept the Sabbath. Surely there must be a lot of folks around here who can remember when they carried a lantern on the dashboard of the spring wagon and drove it through mud and dirt most of the time; when they slept on a straw tick and took a bath in the wash tub in the kitchen only on Saturday night; when women wore Mother Hubbards and when a brick covered with a carpet served as a door-stop and when congress gaiters were the most stylish shoes. This isn't a sign that you are getting old. It's a sure sign of a good memory.

SMOOTH DESSERTS IN ELECTRIC REFRIGERATORS

Some women are having considerable trouble with the smoothness of their desserts in their electric refrigerators. This may be due to using too large a proportion of milk. Milk will not make smooth ice-cream of this type as there is too large a proportion of water in it and it makes an icy product. Cream is expensive, but it is necessary for a smooth cream. Whipping the cream gives a smoother product and increases the bulk. A small amount of gelatine will help obtain smoothness, one teaspoon of gelatine to a cup of liquid is about the proper proportion.

The mistake of not stirring the cream frequently enough is another one often made. To insure smoothness, the cream should be stirred several times, specially in the first thirty minutes. Without enough stirring such desserts as the favorite Maple Parfait will separate.

The temperature of the refrigerator has its effect on the finished product and it must be sufficiently cold if you want a smooth cream. This is more easily done in the newer refrigerators.

A GARDEN CALENDAR

Have you ever wondered just when a certain flower or shrub would be in bloom and have not been able to remember? A garden calendar obviates this. The simplest type is to take a generous sized calendar and mark on it just when each variety blooms. If you have a methodical quirk in your system, you may want to enlarge on this and copy it into definite form. However the easy way will appeal to many gardeners.

The garden calendar will add to the interest of your garden, even if you think that you are as interested now as you can possibly be. It is a pleasure to look back and see the slight difference in blooming time from year to year.

Very often you wish to invite friends, especially out-of-town ones to come when such and so is in bloom. But just try to remember the particular time and you may find yourself bewildered. Very often people like to entertain in their gardens and if they can know just when to plan for this, it makes it much easier to plan.

It takes only a minute to write down this information and you will be surprised to find of how much interest it is to you in the following years.

CHOCOLATE CAKE

1 cup granulated sugar
1½ cups flour
¼ teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg

1 tablespoon cocoa
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon soda
Pinch salt
2 eggs beaten
1 cup sour cream

Put all the dry ingredients through the sifter. Add the beaten eggs and sour cream and beat for three minutes. Pour into a buttered cake pan and bake about 45 minutes in a slow oven of 360 degrees. This cake has no other shortening than the sour cream. It will fill a large cake pan or two nine inch layer tins. Date filling is a delicious one to use.

ICED DRINKS

The recipes for Lemon Syrup and Chocolate are a hardy perennial in this column. I repeat them for newcomers as they are such convenient ones. After considerable amount of experimenting I have reduced the amount of sugar in the Lemon Syrup from 1 cup to 7-8 of a cup as it seemed to make a more refreshing drink when less sweet. This lemon syrup is good for many drinks besides its original use of making lemonade. I add it to almost any kind of cool drink as lemon juice brings out other fruit flavors. Occasionally I even add it to ginger ale, by way of variety.

The chocolate syrup has become a family joke. Every boy who has visited us at our summer cottage has asked if I could give them the recipe, so that they could get their mothers to make it. I cannot recall any boy ever asking for any other recipe. Here are the recipes:

Mix sugar and water and boil for 3 minutes.

Squeeze the lemons and add to syrup. Bottle and chill. To serve, put some in a glass and add water to taste.

CHOCOLATE SYRUP

½ cup of sugar
1 cup water
Pinch salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
Mix cocoa, sugar, salt and water. Boil for 3 minutes stirring to a smooth paste. Bottle and chill. To serve, add about 2 tablespoons of this syrup to a glass of cold milk.

SANDWICH SUGGESTIONS

Salmon and walnuts (chopped) moistened with lemon juice
Cottage or white cheese with chopped marachino cherries and mayonnaise.
Peanut butter and thinly sliced sweet cucumber pickles.
Cottage or white cheese with a very little finely chopped onion.
Ham and onion, using lots of onion. Put through chopper together and moisten with salad dressing.

Agent at the door: "This book of universal knowledge will tell you everything you ought to know." Man: "Don't need it. My wife tells me all that—and a lot more besides."

College graduates are being advised to travel this summer. One obstacle is the new activity of the railway police in ejecting travellers from the box cars.

GRATEFUL MOTHER'S LETTER

"With my last baby," writes Mrs. William McLean of Elora, "and I have a family of eight children. I was only able to nurse him for about four months, and then naturally turned to Eagle Brand to bring him along. He was a normal infant all the way, but after starting him on Eagle Brand he gave me little or no trouble, sleeping regularly between feedings, and grew to be such a happy, contented little fellow. He cut his teeth without difficulty and has not had a sick day since. Wherever I go, people admire him and say 'What a lovely baby,' and ask me how I feed him. Eagle Brand is highly thought of in our home, and I recommend it to every mother seeking a satisfactory food for her infant."

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of bandits in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the "Annapolis Mounted," draws his gun in the face of the covering rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits get away with gold dust and choice peltry.

CHAPTER II—Corporal Bill Hardstock brings the news of the crime to Sergeant Alan Baker at the Mounted office post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, Alan starts out after the bandits in his big police launch with the corporal and four constables.

CHAPTER III—Reaching the Midnight Sun, they stop long enough for Alan to board her and consult witnesses of the crime. Alan asks the skipper to put Jimmy Montgomery's orphaned four-year-old daughter off at Fort Endurance and leave her in the care of Alan's fiancée, Elizabeth S. "Auld" At the MacMillan trading post on the Big Alaskan, Joyce MacMillan is alone, awaiting the return of Dave, her father, from a fur-buying trip. She is thrilled when the police launch ties up there for the night, as she has not seen Alan Baker for months. Secretly she had hoped to marry him; then she was stunned by the news of his engagement to Elizabeth. She is happy now to perceive from his halting talk that the planned marriage is not definitely certain.

CHAPTER IV—Larry Young, one of Alan's men, discovers in MacMillan's fur shed a bale of pelts stolen from the Midnight Sun. The evidence incriminates Dave so strongly that Alan is compelled to tell Joyce. She hotly defends her father. Alan leads his expedition up the Big Alaskan. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan fails to capture the bandits. The police expedition returns to Fort Endurance with Larry badly wounded.

"I haven't the authority to let you. You'll have to make out application and wait for permission from headquarters."

"That's the rule for close-in detachments. Down north here where a communication would take several months, it's understood that an officer can accept a buy out on his own recognition."

"But it's not the official rule. Under the circumstances I don't choose to accept your papers."

"You will choose! I'll make you choose! You've busted me, all right; you've saddled the blame and shame of that patrol on me; you've mouthed your lie and you've got a stool pigeon there to back you up. But I can bring on an investigation just the same. There's things happened last winter that you can't lie out of. Williamson is coming down here next month. He hasn't got any too much use for you now. If I'm here when he comes, what I'll tell him won't help your standing much."

Haskell lit a cigarette to hide his nervousness. He asked, "Where are you going if you get out of service?"

"That'll not be your affair, thank God! I'm leaving here. Tonight. That all you need to know."

Haskell started a little. Tonight—no boat coming past—it meant Baker was going by himself! Meant Elizabeth would not go with him but would stay here at Endurance!

Very thoughtful, he looked away, debating. Baker's motives, his reasons for this precipitate move, were dark and puzzling. But he saw no way in which they could possibly harm him. Hardstock, an experienced northern man, would still be available, a reliable veteran to turn to, especially if baited by the hope of this vacated sergeantcy. Hardstock would be easier to manage, too. Since Elizabeth was going to stay here, at least temporarily, why shouldn't he let Baker go? The farther away he was, the better!

The more he studied the situation, the more it seemed too good to be true that Baker was deliberately cutting his head off, buying out, getting out of the country, leaving Elizabeth here alone, killing any possibility of the investigation that he secretly dreaded.

"I'll consent on one condition to your buying out. Otherwise you'll have to wait for official and regular approval."

"What's the condition?"
"There seems," Haskell said steadily, with the ability to look Alan squarely in the eye, "to be a difference of opinion between us about the responsibility of this Alboska patrol. If you'll sign a statement to the effect that you had complete charge of the detail and split your party on your own initiative—if you'll do that, you can buy out. Otherwise you can't."

Alan wavered. Signing a brazen lie, taking all the stinging disgrace upon himself, strengthening Haskell's guilty hand. But then his thoughts leaped to Jimmy and Larry and Dave MacMillan, and to Joyce, planning her last hope to him. What did it matter, his signing a lie? Would it change one jot or tittle of God's truth? What did a rag of paper matter on his long free-flung hunt for those murderers, avenging his partners, shielding Joyce?

He said: "I'll sign. Load it as heavy as you like. But don't knock Hardstock or Pedneault or Young."

Haskell wrote out the declaration of responsibility. Alan read it. As he wrote his name, he sneered:

"If I were you, I'd frame that, inspector, and hang it on the wall. It's a certificate of your dishonor."

Not answering, Haskell went on looking up the remaining enlistment period and figuring the amount. Whistle brought over the forms and filled in the data. Both Alan and Haskell, with the constable as witness, signed the numerous official sheets of the procedure.

Folding his copy of it, Alan walked out of the door, out of service, out of the Mounted Police.

CHAPTER VI

The Dark Hour

In his cabin Alan took off his uniform and changed to civilian clothes. It seemed to him he was stripping off his foot-free adventuresome life with that uniform.

What money he had on hand, several hundred dollars, he buttoned carefully in his shirt pocket. His expenses on this trip ahead would be heavy; he would have to borrow. But he was going to take that Victoria job, and he knew Colonel Steele would gladly give him a salary advance.

Then he made up a slender pack—a single blanket, a change of clothes, food for a week or ten days. That was all. No camping outfit, no weapons, no equipment for wilderness travel.

As he was buckling his pack together, Elizabeth unexpectedly came into the cabin. As she stepped into the light, she exclaimed: "Alan! That MacMillan girl told Mrs. Drummond that Haskell demoted you! That you're a constable! That he put all the blame of this patrol on you!"

"That's what he did," Alan answered, straightening up, facing her. "I didn't believe he was capable of it. But I shouldn't have been surprised; he's given me cues enough to his nature."

"I'm Out of the Mounted—Out for Good!"

"And you're going to stand for that?" Her voice rose, sharp, nagging. "You're going to be his orderly, a constable, disgraced, bossed around? I'd think that any man would—would—"

She checked herself as she saw the government property laid out on the bed and noticed that Alan was in civilian clothes.

He said quietly "You were a bit hasty. I didn't stand for it. I bought out. I'm out of the Mounted. Out for good!"

Elizabeth gasped. For moments she stared at him, incredulous.

She did not know just why he had taken this drastic step, but vaguely she guessed he had had some fierce clash with Haskell. It did not matter, the circumstances. He was free of this ninety-month rut, this backwoods calling. There had always been a doubt in her mind whether Alan, when the great test came would actually tear himself away from the Mounted. She had expected a fight that would embitter him against her. But now he was out; he would surely take that Victoria offer; next winter she would be living in Victoria!

Her heart leaped at the thought, and her whole manner toward Alan changed. She drew near him, slipped an arm about him; and a softness came into her voice.

"Dear, you're sorry to be out. I'm sorry to see you so hurt. You didn't want to leave here, Alan. I—I did want you to; but I wouldn't have insisted. I'd have given in to you, dear, before I'd seen you unhappy. In the long run, we'll not regret; it'll be the best for us."

Alan watched the candle shen in her hair, the auburn hair that always brought him poignant memories of her brother Curt. His thoughts, leaping ahead to his lone-handed venture, were scarcely with her at all, yet he was bewildered by her sudden change, her ardent affection. There had been times when affection from her would have cheered and heartened him; but now her lips, inviting him, asking for his own, meant less than the pack lying at his feet.

She asked him: "And now—you're going to take—we'll be down in Victoria, now? Won't Colonel Steele be glad when he hears! You'll write to him right away?"

"I suppose so. Yes, I'm going to take that job. Not much else to turn to."

She noticed how cold, how unmoved he was; and she went on, half-whispering:

"On our way outside, we can be married at Edmonton, and have that trip we planned to the Blackfoot Selkirks. And we'll have—we can afford to have now—a cabin back in Vancouver island; back in the mountains by ourselves, Alan."

He merely said, gesturing at the alcove: "I'm leaving Curt's keepsakes here. You'll watch after them, won't you?" And he added, "I'm leaving here tonight, Elizabeth."

"Leaving here? Tonight?" Her eyes went to the pack on the floor. Suddenly startled, she looked up at him again.

Feeling that he owed some explanation to the girl he was engaged to, he partly explained: "I'm pitching off on a trip, Elizabeth. By myself. I'm going after those men that shot up two of my friends. Haskell blocked a patrol I wanted to make. To go after them I had to be free. I don't know how long it'll take me. Maybe three weeks, maybe six. I'd like for you to wait here."

Something in his manner stopped Elizabeth from questioning him. She knew he intended to marry her and take her to Victoria; but something told her that in this present hour it was not well to question or oppose Alan Baker.

She acquiesced: "I'll wait, dear. I'll wait here for you. But, Alan, before you go . . ." She stood on tiptoe, reproaching him, begging, "Aren't you going to tell me good-by?"

Alan bent and kissed her, as she invited. But he did it dispassionately, as a thing expected of him. He felt her breath on his cheek, her arm tightening around him, her body pressed against his. He was subtly but unmistakably aware of a certain willingness about her; she wanted him to linger; she would have stayed with him there in the cabin. . . . It surprised, it shocked him, after all these months when she had been so cold and passionless.

When she had gone, he buckled his pack and caught up his hat. As he started to snuff the two candles in the alcove, he heard a thumping footstep on the threshold and turned to see Bill Hardstock. In a flash he guessed that Bill had been waiting outside, not wanting to come in while Elizabeth was there.

"Alan! H—! It's blue blazes!" Bill was all but incoherent as he advanced across the cabin. "Say it isn't so! I heard . . . wasn't meaning to listen . . . Joyce told me part of it, and I just heard you tell Elizabeth. . . . He didn't bust you? He didn't dare! And blame you for splitting our party? You didn't buy out—"

"That's what I did, Bill. He busted me, blamed me. What's worse, he wouldn't let us make the Inconnu trip. I couldn't stand that. I'm out. Leaving Endurance. Right now."

Bill's face turned gray. His jaw dropped, he stood in stupefied shock, with a look of misery on his blunt, bulldog features.

"You're—leaving—us," he gulped. "You're—pitching away—for good. You always stood up for us men, against Haskell. You and me . . . pretty good partners. . . . Now you won't be here any more, Alan. . . ."

"Bill, shake yourself together and listen. I'm going after those bandits. There's several things you've got to do for me. One is, I want you to cut aside from patrols whenever you can and visit Joyce and see she's safe. Another thing, I'm giving you this cabin and what's in it, except for a little personal stuff that I'll get some time or else send for. Then, there's one last thing. Got any free time coming in the next couple weeks?"

"I don't know. Yes, must have three or four days—way we've been hitting the ball all winter."

"Two days will be enough. I need a little help on my plan; and you, here at Endurance, you can give me a hand. It's not much, but it'll mean a lot to me. I'll tell you what I've got in mind, so you'll understand."

In a few terse sentences that left Bill gasping and swearing at so staggering a scheme, Alan sketched his plan.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. P. H. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, (C. 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for July 31

THE GIVING OF MANNA

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 16:1-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights, James 1:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Bread from Heaven.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Bread from Heaven.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God's Daily Gifts.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Daily Gifts.

I. Lusting for the Fleshpots of Egypt (vv. 1-12).

1. Murmuring against Moses and Aaron (vv. 1-3). As they journeyed from Egypt into the great wilderness, they became conscious of the scarcity of some of the things they had enjoyed even in Egyptian slavery. Only a few days before they were singing God's praises for their wondrous deliverance at the Red sea (Exod. 15). Many complain bitterly of their experience in the service of God, while at the same time they will endure all sorts of hardships uncomplainingly when pursuing their own selfish interests. Their complaint not only displayed ingratitude but a deep-seated impiety. They went so far as to express the wish that they had died in Egypt with full stomachs rather than to be walking in the wilderness by faith. The very fact that God had gone to so much trouble to deliver them should have convinced them that he would not forsake them now.

2. God's answer to their murmurings (vv. 4-12).

(a) He promised to rain bread from heaven (vv. 4, 5). His purpose was to teach them that man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceeded out of the mouth of the Lord (Deut. 8:3).

(b) He promised to give them a vision of his glory (vv. 6-10). This served as a warning and encouragement. Moses and Aaron told the children of Israel that the glory of the Lord should be seen in the morning as a reminder that their murmuring was against the Lord and not against themselves.

(c) He promised them flesh and bread (vv. 11, 12). "At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread."

II. Quails and Manna Given (vv. 13-15).

At the appointed time God gave the Israelites the promised food. He first allowed them to feel their need to show them that man's highest need is not physical food, but living faith and fellowship with God. He followed this with a display of his glory, showing them that he was able and willing to supply their need if they would but trust and obey him.

1. In the evening the quails came up (v. 13). Since they desired flesh, he gave them flesh to eat. God frequently caters to the desires of his people, knowing that the best way to teach them is to allow them to be filled with their own folly.

2. In the morning God gave the manna (vv. 14, 15). The Israelites did not know what it was. Moses told them it was the bread which the Lord had given them to eat.

III. The Responsibilities of the Israelites (vv. 16-31).

1. They must gather a certain portion daily (v. 16). They must look to God for their daily bread (Matt. 6:11).

2. Every man must gather for himself (v. 16). Every man must appropriate Christ for himself.

3. They must not gather in excess of one day's supply (vv. 18-20). Those whose greed prompted them to do so realized their mistake when it became corrupt and bred worms. Christian grace and Bible truth must not be hoarded up—they are only good when put to use.

4. The manna must be gathered fresh every morning (v. 21). This was to be done early before the sun was up. So must we seek Christ, who is our manna, every day, and the first thing in the day (John 6:57).

5. The manna must be eaten to preserve life. They were in a wilderness, so could live only by the eating of the food which God gave. It is so with Christ, "except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you" (John 6:53).

6. Due consideration should be given to the Sabbath day (vv. 22-31). A double portion was to be gathered the day before, so as to keep inviolate the Sabbath day.

IV. Manna Kept as a Memorial (vv. 32-36).

This was to be kept as a reminder of God's favor in feeding them in the wilderness, even for supplying them with bread for forty years until they reached the promised land.

PITHY PICK-UPS

The praying that is stressed in the Bible is personal praying—alone with God.—Phillips.

Perhaps we need more Andrews (personal workers) than Peters (preachers) just now.—Phillips.
