St. Jerome Man in Unusual Mishap

Swimmer is Pierced by Submerged Anchor.

Athanase Latour, 35, civil engineer, of St. Jerome, is in the St. Johns (Que.) Hospital suffering from an unusual accident which occurred while he was swimming in Missisquoi Bay on Sunday.

Latour jumped off a diving raft anchored in 10 feet of water and pierced his foot with the fluke of the raft's anchor. He managed to reach the surface where the anchor was sawed from his foot with a hacksaw. Later he was taken to the hospital where the steel was removed, and his condition is now reported to be favorable.

Stolen Car Found in Lake near Arundel

Occupant Missing. Car Identified by License Card.

The discovery of a red Lachute roadster almost completely submerged in Lake Bigraw, five miles south east of Arundel, was announced early last Friday morning. The automobile, one which had been reported stolen to the Montreal police last week, was discovered to be the property of Jerome Johnson, 5 Viewmount Ave. It was at first feared that Mr. Johnson had been in his auto and had been drowned, as the ownership was established by the discovery of the license cards inside the vehicle.

Mr. Johnson, however, was soon located in Montreal and stated that his auto, registered No. H. 72, had been stolen two days previously. He had been ill in the meantime, and had been notified of the recovery of his automobile.

The driver of the auto, presumably the thief, was probably in the vehicle when it capsized into the lake and whether he was able to escape or was drowned, was questioned by police authorities investigating the case. A search was made but no signs of a tragedy could be found.

Early fishermen found the car, with only the spare-wheel hub showing, near shore. It was in shallow water and appeared undamaged. They reported the discovery at the Stanforth Filling Station, Arundel, and the provincial roads district superintendent was notified.

Marriage

Duncan — Wilson.

The marriage of Florence Victoria, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Wilson, of Brownsburg, to Mr. John Duncan, son of Mr. Wm. Duncan, of Montreal, took place on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Henry Cousens officiating.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Agnes Duncan, of Boston, Mass., sister of the groom. Mr. Gilbert Wilson, brother of the bride acted as groomsmen, and the ushers were the Messrs. Wallace and Mansiel Wilson.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white georgette over real silk flat crepe with a brussels lace veil arranged in cap effect with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of blush pink talisman roses. The bridesmaid wore a dainty pale blue "Peau d'Ange" frock with large picture hat of the same colour trimmed with pink and shoes to match of a pale pink shade. Her bouquet was composed of two-toned phlox.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which the happy couple left on the evening train followed by the good wishes of their many friends. The bride travelled in a brigade blue silk crepe dress with all-wool coat and accessories to match. On their return they will reside in Brownsburg.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Eva and son James, Mrs. Overson, Mrs. Ellen Eva, Mr. Wm. Duncan and Mr. Jas. McClelland, of Montreal, and Miss Robson, of Calumet.

Rev. J. A. Lackey is Honored by Anglican Congregations.

Upwards of 300 members of the congregations from St. Simon's, Lachute, and St. George's, Brownsburg, gathered in the Auditorium on Friday evening last to bid farewell to their rector on the eve of his retirement from the active ministry. The recipient of this signal honour has forty years of unbroken service in the Anglican communion to his credit, twenty of which have been devoted to the people of Lachute Parish.

A short program of an entertaining nature received well merited applause from the audience. Messrs Ben Maiden and Fred Stansfield in tap dances and Frank Steere, Jack Gorman and Harold Butler in vocal items, contributed in a pleasing manner to this portion of the evening's entertainment.

Mr. H. Stansfield in the capacity of chairman then called upon the Rev. J. A. Lackey for a few remarks. While it was evident that Mr. Lackey labored under emotional stress, there was no outward manifestation of the depth of feeling which rector and people shared alike.

Equal to the occasion, the speaker injected a number of humorous remarks into his short address, which had the desired effect of modifying the intense

High Standard of Music at Charity Recital

Popular Baritone and Organist at their Best, in St. Andrews Programme.

A charity entertainment by Mr. F. Mackay and Mr. Anlon Young in St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, Tuesday evening for the aid of local families in distress, calls for superlatives of appreciation, both to the worthy cause and to the fine music which constituted the entire program. The church was crowded, and proceeds of a silver collection amounted to almost $40.

Mr. Mackay has mentioned to interested followers, the fact that each "stop" on the organ manual produces a distinct orchestral tone; the process was markedly evident throughout his recital, as each organ selection introduced its note of cornet, violin, horn, or vox humana, and each presentation embodied such expression and modulation as wove a complete theme and story for the listener.

Mr. Mackay conducted the program in his usual breezy manner, and his remarkable playing thrilled and gripped the audience, in such varied organ pieces as: 'Staccato' (Dubois) 'Will o' the Whisp,' 'Song of the Basket Weaver,' 'Cantabile' (Damerst) and the popular Londonderry Airs, given by request.

The organ also accompanied Mr. Anlon Young, as the public heard his rich baritone, perhaps for the first time in its full scope and power. Mr. Young has sung locally at devotional services, but never was his voice better heard than on Tuesday evening, when the singer reverted to the operatic, classic, and popular themes of his own choice. His power and range are amazing; his control is scarcely credible, with such volume at his command. 'Spanish Serenade' (with strident accompaniment, in Mr. Mackay's apt handling of the organ pipes), the Baritone Aria from Faust, 'Tally-Ho,' and 'Lindy-Loo' were included among Mr. Young's solos. His presentation of 'Without a Song,' a modern selection popularized by Lawrence Tibbett, called forth a final encore; and the baritone obliged again, with sympathetic rendering of Sylvia.

Mayor Ladouceur of St. Andrews arose to voice his appreciation, in apt and well accepted remarks. Rev. Dr. Ballantyne, seeking to commend the artists upon their superb mastery, frankly confessed that epithets failed him—and this worthy cleric is rarely lost for diction or vocabulary.

The Presbyterian Church was "at home" following this rare session, as many adjourned to a sumptuous supper in the paper had a Social column in which visitors were recorded, a correspondence column, and an editorial leader. The bulk of the news went into the "Items of Interest" section, where camp

The event also marked a farewell gesture to Mr. Francis Mackay, who left this week for his home in Detroit; and all present agreed this gathering was as notably enjoyable as their previous social hour as guests of Rev. and Mrs. Booy at the Rectory.

The C. P. R. Station at Vankleek Hill was broken into one night last week, the strangers entering by breaking a window. The ticket cabinet and money drawer were left untouched and nothing was found missing.

The eclipse of the sun was clearly visible in Lachute yesterday during its first and latter quarter, but the full phase of this phenomenon was obscured by heavy clouds. A minute or two of uncanny darkness, however, marked the time of the total eclipse. It is believed to have been seen to advantage in the higher altitudes of the county, where visibility was considerably better.

Marriage

Todd — Woolley.

The marriage of Allison May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Woolley to Mr. Burrill L. Todd, son of Mr. Robert Todd and the late Mrs. Todd, of Lachute, took place quietly at four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, at St. Philip's Church, Montreal West, the Rev. F. C. Ireland, officiating at the ceremony. Gladioli and ferns were used in decorating the church.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a gown of periwinkle blue satin made in fitted lines falling in soft folds to her slipper heels, worn with a velvet coat, a turban of a matching tone of blue, and blue crepe slippers. She carried a shower bouquet of Pernet roses and corn-flowers. Miss Norma Woolley, who attended her sister as maid of honor, was in a gown of maize chiffon fashioned with a velvet coat of golden brown worn with a hat of a similar shade. Her arm bouquet was composed of pansies. Mr. Daniel Currie acted as best man for the bridegroom.

The reception following the ceremony was held at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Angus B. Christie, where gladioli and roses and a variety of garden flowers were used in decoration, the reception room and dining room being adorned with pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Todd left later on a motoring tour, the latter travelling in an ensemble of printed silk with touches of red, and a red hat and accessories. They will reside in Montreal on their return. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Todd, of Lachute, were out-of-town guests at the wedding.

Musical Progress is Organist's Parting Urge

An interview with the Genial Francis A. Mackay (Mus. Doc.) concluding his vacation in Old Home-Town

In appreciation of a genial acquaintance with their former townsboy, and of his cheerful co-operation during two vacation months in St. Andrews E., the people of that community tendered a farewell supper to Mr. Francis A. Mackay, following his recital with Mr. Anlon Young in the Presbyterian Church last Tuesday evening.

Mr. Mackay's willing services in connection with the St. Andrews and Lachute churches seem to have been inspired not only by sentiment for his early haunts, but in a genuine urge to vitalize the innate love of music, sacred and classical, among our people. He has been impressed by the enthusiasm evidenced by his audiences here—an enthusiasm in church music which has found heart in the younger people, who have been increasingly in attendance at his more recent renditions. Inasmuch as his life's ambition is to seek out and foster youthful talents and to cultivate musical interest, Mr. Mackay is reluctant to leave a promising field where his own guiding enthusiasm might accomplish much.

Prominent in U. S. Musical Circles.

Francis A. Mackay is a great organist—one of the three most prominent in the United States; and in a brief talk with him at the fine colonial Mackay home, something was learned of his present work. Contrary to the belief that church appointments

Prisoners in Rockland Murder Again Suspected

Lavictoire and Laroche may be Implicated in Drowning

Investigations have re-opened in connection with the death of Athanase Lamarche, drowned when an automobile, in which he was seated, plunged into the Ottawa River at Masson, Que., in October, 1930, and may result in exhumation of the body from its grave in Sarsfield, Ont.

Emmanuel Lavictoire and William J. Laroche, Rockland, Ont., now held on charges of murdering Leo Bergeron, laborer, on the latter's farm, were with young Lamarche when the fatality occurred at Masson. Evidence secured at the inquiry into the Bergeron death is said to have resulted into the further investigation of the Lamarche tragedy.

At the time of the Bergeron death the two, Lavictoire and Laroche, were being tried on charges brought by Felix Lamarche, father of Athanase, that they had defrauded him of over a thousand dollars, part of $10,000 he received on an insurance policy held by his son.

Evidence given by the accused men on the occasion was to the effect that Laroche was instrumental in the sale of the insurance policy on young Lamarche's life.

St. Andrews Boy Scouts Enjoy Spell of Camp Life

The St. Andrews Troop of Boy Scouts held their first Summer Camp on Colonel Hooker's land at The Bay, during the ten days from August 15 to August 24. Fifteen boys and three officers were in camp. Scout Master Snowdon was the Officer Commanding; John de Witt Assistant Scout Master; and Mr. H. Kay of Montreal, was the Camp Chaplain.

Camp Potawatomi was the name selected for the camp, "Potawatomi" being the name of a tribe of Indians who at one time were allied with the Ottawa Confederacy, meaning in English, "Keepers of the Sacred Fire."

Mr. Hicks, Provincial Field Secretary, attached to the Montreal Headquarters of the Boy Scouts Association, visited the camp and had dinner with the Troop. He declared himself well satisfied with the lay of the campsite and all the arrangements made for the care of the boys.

Each day had its full program of Scouting. Following breakfast a daily inspection was made by the officers, of the tents and the site. An Honour Pennant was awarded each day to the tent that was the cleanest and smartest in general appearance, the competition between the three tents being remarkably keen, with the result that the camp was orderly and well disciplined. The Honour Pennant was won each day by Tent No. 1, with Patrol Leader Burwash as Tent Leader and Mr. Kay the officer in charge of the tent.

Inspection was followed by instruction in Badge Work, each officer taking a group. The boys showed a tremendous enthusiasm for this side of Scouting and many hours were spent in Pioneer Work, Signalling, Axeman'ship, Cooking, Ambulance Work, Camp Furnace Building and General Athletics. Bathing parades were held every morning and afternoon. Each night saw a Camp Fire glowing with the boys gathered around singing and enjoying that particular thrill one associates with the camp fire.

Saturday night was Masquerade Night. The boys entered fully into the spirit of this event and their inventive genius was very much in evidence in the production of startling costumes. Many of them were created, very truly, out of next to nothing! The prize for the most original costume was shared by Harry Hooker, dressed as a Cave Man, and Walter Sugars, who made a picturesque Mountain Guide. Other costumes included a Cannibal King and Retinue, a Sleepy Man, a Scotch Scout, and a Giant, and if Bud de Witt could have managed a little more wave in his obstinate hair he would have made a stunning turnout as Cleopatra!

An innovation in the camp was the publication of a daily paper. C. de Witt was appointed to the editor's chair and the news and contributions of the day were read by him at the mess table after the evening meal. The boys wrote their contributions during the afternoon rest period and though the literary style was lacking they had a 'nose for news.' The pranks and personalities were from, was given by one of the freely discussed.

Sunday was the visitors' day and a large number of parents and friends came to the camp and joined in the Camp Service. Rev. J. R. Heyworth, of Chicago, delivered an impressive address to the boys. The Scout Master and his staff wish to take this opportunity of extending their thanks to all who helped toward the success of the camp by the loan of tents and equipment; to Colonel Hooker for permission to camp on his land and for the transportation of equipment; and to Mr. E. C. Calder for the transportation of provisions and kit.

On Monday evening the campfire circle entertained several visitors, among them a very strange guest. Just after dusk there was a crackling of twigs and out of the forest ambled a large grey elephant with a gently swaying trunk. He walked around the circle at some distance from the fire. He was a very intelligent animal and could answer questions by wagging his tail or trunk or by stamping his feet. The only information that could be obtained about where he came

Camp Potawatomi.

The camp of Potawatomi's the camp beside the Bay. If you walk to Colonel Hooker's shack you cannot miss the way. On the fifteenth day of August nineteen hundred thirty two, Old St. Andrews heard the scouts march through.

The "Pota" stands for pots and pans to cook our daily mush. They fill us up with Pork and Beans and lots of other slush. The "wato" stands for water—if the well runs dry some day, We're always sure of plenty in the Bay!

The cookee took the biggest pot in Potawatomi. He filled it up with odds and ends of all that he could see. Potatoes, cabbage, cucumbers, as full it would cram, And seasoned it with onions and with ham.

The boys all told the cookee that they would eat a scrap. Said he: "If you won't touch it you can wipe me off the map." But when they cleared the plates away, if you'll believe my words, They hadn't left enough to feed the birds!

Bud is the city editor who publishes the news, And Roy's the jolly jester who will keep away the blues, If you see a goggled figure sitting cross legged in the gloom, That will be Mahatma Georgie with his loom!

John is the camp assistant who will put you through your test, And Moey is the tenderfoot whose record is the best. On a march across the country Lorne and Hugh will lead the hike, While Ernie beats the record on his bike.

Each merry group of campers has a title for their tent, "The Town Hall" and "St. Hilda's" and the "Upper Flat to Rent". When the rain came down in bucketfuls, in "puppy dogs and cats", There were more to rent than just the Upper Flats!

The Scouts of Potawatomi, according to the scribe, Were 'Keepers of the Sacred Fire', an old and worthy tribe, And when along our snapping twigs the flames are climbing, We form a circle round our 'sacred fire' higher,

When Larry's teeth are falling out and Bobby's hair is grey, Our thoughts of Potawatomi will still be bright and gay; Three cheers for Mr. Snowdon, and three cheers for Mr. Kay, And a "Tiger" for the camp beside the Bay!

The absent Lester, Lloyd and Kick, and Ivan we've in mind, Because of urgent business they had to stay behind, Good wishes we are sending with a copy of this rhyme, Here's hoping they will come another time.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

"IT IS FOUND"

Dear Boys:—

Last week I wrote you on this subject and also promised you the conclusion of the matter. Here it is.—Into the darkness of the night shadows, into the deep mysterious stillness of the mountain ranges we travelled. Our large and powerful engine steamed its way along and around the curves, often on a narrow ledge hundreds of feet above some great river, that so far beneath, it appeared but a ghostly ribbon of silver to our amazed eyes. We seemed, in very truth, to be entering The Heart of the World.

The greatest mountains shut us completely in; even the sky appeared to have vanished, except for just one little portion, in which a single star was suspended, twinkling in wondrous brightness, so that it came to me that it was just One of God's Lamps lit to show us the way.

Down in the valley one could just see great trees, silent sentinels of the night, clustered together, making up a forest, many parts of which still remained untrod by the foot of man; and so we pass on into the magic of a Western, natural poem of beauty.

Just before they came to draw down the blinds I looked out of the window as we rounded another curve and saw the great light of the engine piercing into the blackness ahead for the distance of several yards and clearly showing up the track in front.—

*"Life is a journey; God would have us know
That what seems misty and so full of fear,
Is not so bad; for all the way we go
Is lit with radiance; He has made it clear
That nothing hurtful in the dark shall stay
Our onward journey to the Dawn of Day."*

But I promised to tell you what was found. . . We passed out from under a night sky into the first grey light of breaking day, and then later into the warm glow of noonday sun. So it was that very soon afterwards we arrived at the City of Sunbeams.—Yes, that is the name I have chosen to give to this very beautiful place, which is situated on the shore of the still and quiet waters of the Pacific Ocean. No, I am not going to tell you its real name, because I want you to think of it as I did;—and Why? Well here is the secret, at last—I have found the home of happy children, where they reign supreme.

I feel I have walked on enchanted land and have entered, as a highly privileged person, the magic Kingdom of the little people. What is that I hear someone say? . . . "There is no such place!" Poor Boy! Now listen, all of you. There is such a place; and you have all been there! How do you make this out? Wait till next week.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 15.

Mr. Williams, the Chief Officer, stretched out his long legs and tried to make himself more comfortable. He was very fond of his Commander and there were few things that he was not prepared to do for him. One of them however was that of having to listen to long, drawn-out stories of past events, which Capt. Pat. was extremely fond of describing, quite convinced that his listeners were equally desirous of hearing.

However, in the present instance there was no lack of interest on the part of his attentive audience of one. Indeed it was with eagerness he waited for the explanation of the many things that he had been most anxious about,—though he would have indignantly denied such an accusation had it been made. He gave a sigh of satisfaction as he saw that the Commander, having got his pipe into satisfactory working condition was about to commence. He did not expect, however, to be astonished so quickly.

Capt. Pat. Sommerville was looking at him closely, a half smile in his brown weather-worn face.

"You don't like this voyage, my friend?" he queried. "even though it has only just commenced?" It was more of a question than a statement and the Chief knew he would be expected to answer it.

"Well, Sir" he replied, frankly and without any hesitation. "As you have asked me, I confess you are right. I don't care much about this trip.—Too much mystery about it, and though of course it's your own affair—why the children's party? Kids are out of place in a ship, to my way of thinking."

Capt. Pat. still smiled, though now with his eyes, for his mouth had drawn a little tighter into hard and obstinate lines. It almost seemed as if he was annoyed about something, though nothing of this appeared in what he now said.

"Well, well! You're frank enough, Mr. Chief; no beating about the bush with you, I can see! And that's all the more reason why I should tell you the stuff you're now going to hear. This time we're not so much on a trading voyage as on a Treasure Hunt. Now have you got me?"

If it had been the Commander's intention to astonish his Chief Officer, then he had certainly done so. Mr. Williams was so amazed that he sat bolt upright in his chair.

"Treasure Hunt!" he exclaimed, or rather, gasped. "Are you serious in what you say sir?" And for a moment he believed that Pat. Sommerville had taken leave of his senses.

Almost as if the other had read his thoughts came the instant reply:

"No I am not, as you think, mad, Chief, but deadly serious. I know it must sound fantastic to you in these very practical days, and that stories of Pirates and Treasure only exist in the pages of books written to interest boys like my young nephew. But you are wrong, for in a most strange and unexpected manner I have discovered, at least I believe I have, the secret of a real treasure, in all the old-time method, on a desert island." Pat. Sommerville stopped speaking for a moment in order to relight his pipe. This successfully accomplished, he went on—"Yes, I know what you are going to say.—"Where is the proof?"—Well look at that!" and he took from his pocket a battered leather case which he carefully opened, so as to remove a brown piece of folded paper, which he handed to Mr. Williams.

You will see," he continued, as the other looked at it intently, "it is a map of an island which has no name, but is shown there as the smallest of a group of four in the Pacific Ocean.—Now you and I know that there are many such groups, some of which are marked on the chart and some of which are not; some large and many mere coral rocks, uninhabited even by birds. But it ought not to be difficult, if we search well, to discover this group—especially as you see that the smallest island of the four, and the one we are after, has a peculiar hill of quaint formation rising from its centre. And it's at the foot of that hill, in the S. E. corner, where the treasure lies buried!"

"But how did you come by this map, and how do you know it's genuine? . . . And how—Oh, it can't be true!" broke off the Chief, with almost a gesture of contempt, which in no way upset the quiet determination of his Commander.

"I am not at all surprised at your attitude," he said; "Indeed I can sympathise with it, for I had just the same feeling about the matter as you have, and I am going to tell you briefly how that map came into my possession. But before I do so, let me tell you at once that I am not the only one who knows about this treasure. There are others who are after it, and after me, for that very piece of paper which you hold in your hand. And that in itself goes a long way, to my mind, in proving the truth of the story . . . which is this—"

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Miss Florence Brown, of Winnipeg, is a guest at the Manse this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb and son Walter, of Montreal, were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Kerr, on Monday.

A very successful Sale and Tea, under the auspices of the United Church, was held on Saturday last.

The monument commemorating the erection of the first Paper Mill in Canada, built in St. Andrews, is completed and adds very much to the appearance of our park.

Dr. and Mrs. Ballantyne, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. A. Young and Dr. MacKay, visited Ottawa last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Berryhill, of Syracuse, were the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Bradley last week, and while here had their young son christened in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening.

Mr. Harman Barclay and his daughter, of California, are guests at "The Hill", home of his uncle, Mr. Henry Barclay.

The congregation of St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, and all lovers of music, will be afforded an opportunity of hearing Mr. Anlon Young sing, again next Sunday. Mr. Young as a Baritone has brought honour to Canada in having won the highest commendations in the large musical centres of Europe, and recently scored a magnificent success in the Metropolitan Opera House of New York.

Mr. Ernest Kerr will be the guest Organist. Mr. Kerr has distinguished himself as having at different times been Organist and Choir Leader in most of the largest Montreal churches.

Mr. Young, in addition to the choir singing, will be assisted by Mrs. Thom, soloist of St. Andrews Choir, Westmount, also by the Male Quartette of Lachute.

Regular Church Worship at 7.30 p.m. and Musical program at 8.30, both services on Standard Time.

Sweet Young Thing: "Mother what do you think of my soldier friend?"

Mama: "Why, he is all right, but haven't you noticed a certain air of braggadocio about him?"

Sweet Young Thing: Why, Mother, he can't help that—he's in the Calvary."

The Canadian Parliament may assemble in October; it was intended that it would convene in November but the Conference terminating sooner than expected the date of assembling is likely to be the earlier.

HOW TO SELECT SEED POTATOES

(Experimental Farms Note)

Selecting the seed is one of the most important factors in successful potato culture; unfortunately, far too many farmers seem to neglect this essential point.

At the Dominion Experimental Station at Ste. Anne de la Pocatière, much importance is attached to selecting the seed tubers, treating with formalin and cutting into sets. Nothing that will insure a good yield of sound tubers is neglected, for it is not enough to have a big crop but good tubers which are easy to keep must be selected. There are generally three ways of selecting the seed:

1. Putting aside a certain quantity of tubers in the spring.
2. Choosing the nicest part of a field.
3. Selecting foundation seed in isolated hills.

The first method is the most popular; which does not mean that it is the best, as its adoption is due to the law of minimum effort rather than to its results. It consists in putting aside in a corner of the cellar in the spring, a certain quantity of tubers corresponding approximately to the area which is to be planted.

The second method is followed by a fair number of potato planters who wish to succeed, and it is more logical than the first. The nicest part of the field is chosen for the future seed and all diseased plants are removed.

Finally, here is the most methodical and rational method which a very small number only has adopted. It consists in using foundation seed which has been submitted to two field cellar inspections and an extensive selection.

The procedure is very easy. The best looking plants are marked. At digging time four or five tubers from each of these plants are taken and kept separately. The following spring, each tuber is cut into four sections which are planted in a single hill. During the season of growth, all the grower has to do is watch for and pull out the diseased plants. If a plant in a hill shows symptoms of disease, pull out the whole hill.

By following this last method the presence of the qualities in the tubers necessary for a successful crop is assured. These qualities are production, varietal type, vigour and freedom from disease.

Contracting Firm Reflects Credit on Home County

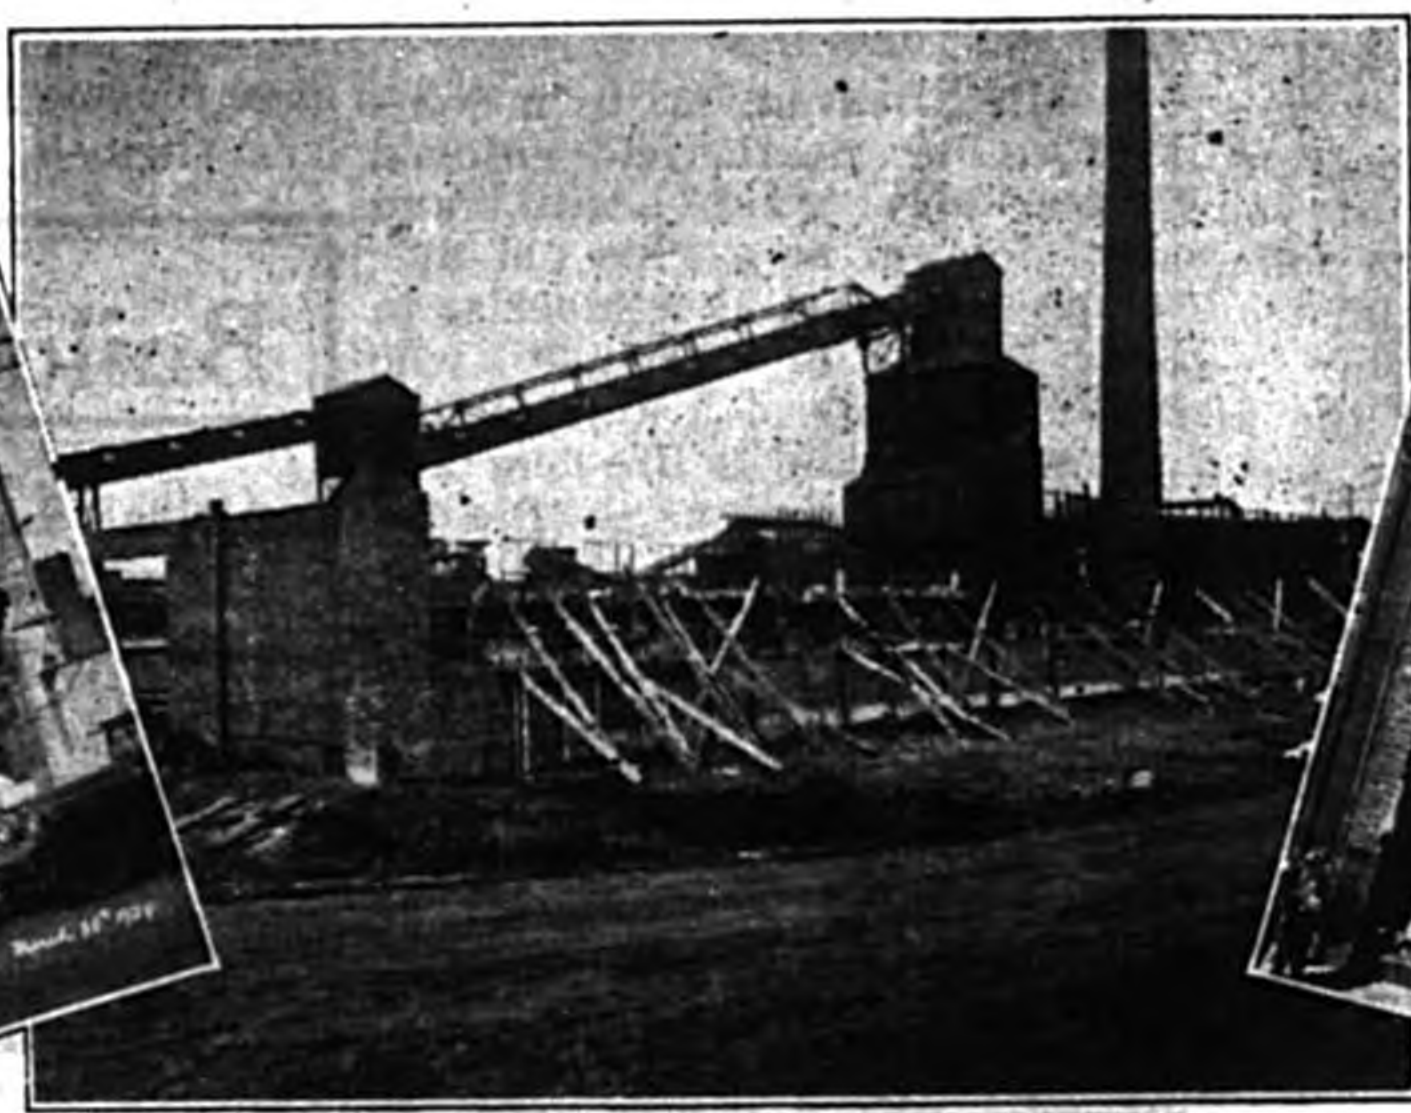

We are always pleased to note the progress and achievement of those of our County who, with ambitious desire, have left the confines of Argenteuil and stepped out in the larger spheres of labor to make their mark in the greater building of our beloved Canada. And proudly we read of success of some who have surmounted countless obstacles in their struggle for attainment. Argenteuil is well represented in all stages of life and from the northern section of the county the Ryan boys of Mille Isles, have contributed in marked measure to the upbuilding of Canada, in proof of which we are pleased to reproduce a few of the buildings they have erected since entering the field of construction engineering. It is pleasing to think that in their wide experience of building this firm should have received the contract to build the $50,000 addition to our High School which is now nearing completion and will be opened with fitting ceremony on Friday, Sept. 2nd. The work has been executed with wonderful celerity and the construction is a further tribute to the Richard & E. J. Ryan firm as builders.

HOW IT WILL WORK

Results of the Conference
A Few of New Tariff Preferences under Review—by the Tara Leader.

From the standpoint of Canada the most important agreement emerging from the Ottawa Conference, is that with the United Kingdom. The existing preference is widened and foodstuffs in many lines vital to the Dominion are given a substantial preference. Canadian agriculture is given a distinct advantage in the greatest market in the world.

A duty of nearly six cents a bushel will be placed on foreign wheat, which should mean much to the farmers of the West. Preferences on dairy products, fruit, eggs, bacon, fish, and copper should be invaluable. One of the most important concessions is the setting of a quota of 2,500,000 hundredweight per annum on bacon and hams from Canada.

The agreements will not bring a new heaven and a new earth overnight. It is, however, a great beginning. The Empire is now on the uproad. The whole spirit of the conference is one of hope. It should bring new confidence to a troubled world.

The Canadian farmer will be particularly the gainer, and it has long been recognized as far as the Dominion was concerned that we could not look for better times until agriculture was more prosperous. That day is now in sight.

"Nothing can ever make us forget our debt to Canada," said S. T. O'Kelly, of the Irish Free State, "and whatever changes the future may bring for us one very certain result of the conference, as far as the delegation of the Irish Free State is concerned, is a determination to do everything in our power to create closer bonds of friendship between the Irish and Canadian people."

The Canadian farmers get the benefits coming and going in the trade agreement signed recently between this Dominion and the United Kingdom. They get important concessions for what they sell and hope to sell in the United Kingdom markets, and may well expect to get lower prices in some of the goods they buy because of the lower Canadian tariffs against Great Britain.

Cattlemen have declared that the lifting of the restrictions would mean at least $3 a head more shippers would receive, and in many cases much in excess of that figure.

Canada will receive a preference of two shillings per eight bushels on wheat entering the British market. Australia gets the same. This works out at six cents a bushel at par or about five cents under present rates of exchange.

Australia and Canada do not produce the same type of wheat so they are not in connection. With the market regulated against Russian dumping and Argentine having to meet a tariff of six cents which will more than counteract any advantage they had in exchange on wheat, it will give Canadian wheat growers a little better of the competition.

Taxation

Having made, in my previous letters, a number of observations about land valuation, population and taxation, and their fluctuations, I will now make a few deductions as to how they apply to ourselves in the Township of Chatham & my readers may draw their own conclusions agreeing with me or opposing me as they honestly choose, for

"A disputed point is no man's ground; roam where you will it is common all around." The time was when the Ottawa River made the only artery to convey the products of our forests to market, and comparatively, said products were the only merchantable goods our country produced. And that portion of our township which bordered on the waters of the Ottawa River, was a busy coast, so to speak, for men from all parts of the township came to the front (as it is still called) in search of employment — which they seldom failed to find. Then naturally some settled near these waters which afforded their livelihood; and they worked on the River the year round, or on the tributaries of the Ottawa.

In other words the population fluctuated toward the shores of the Ottawa River. And, in consequence, land values in the locality climbed higher. But for the past forty years or more, the proceeds of our forests have found other means to arrive at their markets; a substantial network of railroads in the rear of the Township carries the lumber more direct. Manufacturing enterprises have sprung up in the rear of our township, and also in the adjoining township so our population has fluctuated downward.

But notwithstanding what I remarked previously, about supply following demand, our valuations has continued to fluctuate upward, until in many cases the price of lands on "the front of Chatham when sold under the auctioneer's hammer, have been far and away below that placed on the property by our valuers. And still they come, raising our valuation, which in other words means raising our taxation. Our judges have no law to direct them; they say their wisdom is law, and when they determine wrongly, we loyal subjects—should our council turn a deaf ear, have no appeal but to heaven!

C. F. Kains.

Awful!—"My husband's so jealous."

"Isn't that embarrassing?"
"Yes. Isn't yours jealous?"
"Not a bit."
"Isn't that humiliating?"

In expressing satisfaction over the result of the negotiations Hon. Robert Weir, minister of agriculture, explained that from one end of the agreement to the other Canadian agriculture has yielded nothing. The advantages they will receive will be far-reaching.

The lifting of the restrictions on Canadian live cattle going into the United Kingdom marks the successful termination of a battle that had been going on for 25 years. During the past two years in spite of the restrictions Canada shipped from 25,000 to 29,000 head annually.

The present restrictions on cattle include a three-day quarantine in Canada, a 28-day quarantine for near-fats in the United Kingdom ports, a six-day quarantine for store cattle and females not allowed in at all. All the restrictions are to be lifted with the exception of a one-day quarantine in Canada.

REV. J. A. LACKEY HONORED BY CONGREGATIONS

feeling of regret occasioned by the breaking of ties of friendship and love extending over such a long period of intimate association.

Following the address Major E. Smith made a presentation to Mr. Lackey from the two congregations, which took the form of a substantial sum of money. This gift was further augmented when Sam Milnes, in a well worded little speech, presented the guest with a black leather club bag as a token of appreciation from St. Simeon's Sunday School.

Mr. Lackey responded by thanking all most sincerely for these tokens of regard for his work among the people of the parish and for the kind hospitality with which he had been received into their homes. He concluded with an appeal for greater co-operation between the two congregations and felt assured that in parting the prayers of all would follow him, as his also would follow those whom he had ministered to for so long.

The following letter was read by Mr. H. W. Butler and accompanied the gift from the joint congregations.

Dear Mr. Lackey:—

We, the members of St. Simeon's Church, Lachute, and St. George's Church, Brownsburg, desire to express our sincere regrets on the occasion of your retirement following a period of over 40 years in the ministry.

The duties of a minister in a country parish demand the utmost that it is possible for a man to give in both time and energy in order that the work undertaken may be carried out successfully.

During the twenty years that you have laboured amongst us, the services you have so conscientiously rendered in the interests of your people and the sacrificial example that you have at all times set before them has been a true exemplification of your aims to bring about the extension of the Kingdom of God upon earth.

Not only has this interest and devotion to the welfare of mankind been manifest among those members of your own church, it has travelled far beyond the narrow limits of a particular people and has earned for you the respect of the whole community. It can truthfully be said your kindly personality has merited and gained for you the love and respect of all with whom you have associated. As a congregation we feel that the debt of gratitude we owe you can never be amply repaid. The results left behind will ever remind us of the untiring energy which characterized your efforts throughout the many years of arduous labour in our midst.

Tact, sympathy, kindness, cheerfulness and above all Godliness have been the predominating influences in your life and have resulted in the moulding of earthly friendship which will never be broken.

In token of our appreciation of your efforts we wish you to accept this gift from all members of the congregations and it is our fervent prayer that you will be long spared to enjoy that period of retirement which you have so justly earned.

As we have enjoyed your visits to our homes in the past the same ready welcome will always be extended toward you should you desire to visit us at any future time. Indeed we trust that we may have the pleasure of renewing friendships as often as time and circumstances will permit.

From the congregations of St. Simeon's and St. George's Churches,

MRS. GEORGE BEAVEN MOURNED IN VANCOUVER

Lived 45 Years in Arundel, Que.

There passed away on Sunday, Aug. 7th., at the residence of her son-in-law Percy Wesley in a suburb of Vancouver, B.C., Mrs. George Beaven, in her 84th. year. Formerly Miss C. Morgan, born in Ireland in 1849 she came to Canada at 12 years of age and lived in St. Andrews East at the home of Archdeacon Lonsdale. She was married in 1867 to Mr. George Beaven, of Arundel, where she lived for 45 years and was widely known in this County. Mrs. Beaven was predeceased by her husband several years ago, and has now been resident in Vancouver for 20 years. She was highly respected and noted for a generous hospitality. A large concourse of people paid their last token of respect at her funeral and floral offerings paid abundant tribute to her memory.

Of the large family of boys and girls, raised on the Arundel home and several of whom predeceased their mother, the following survive to mourn her departure: Mrs. Joseph Thompson, (formerly Miss Mary Anne Beaven), Mrs. Percy Wesley (Rose), Mrs. Elmhurst (Kate), Thomas and William Beaven. The latter, away in the mountains engaged in prospecting, was unable to reach Vancouver for the funeral.

Mrs. Beaven, up to a week before her death, had enjoyed remarkably good health, and her demise, at a ripe old age, came somewhat as a surprise to her family and friends, who suffer the loss of a kind, genial personality and a life-long and devoted Christian.—"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, from henceforth and forever."

responsible positions as church organists; thousands of voices have rung out individually for his appraisal, and hundreds of shrill-voiced youngsters have grown up, graduating to adult choirs under his training. So altogether, it is safe to remark that his influence is being widely felt today in the culture of sacred music.

Embarked Early on Career.

Questioned on his earliest introduction to music, our friend recalled his first piano lesson under tutelage of the late Mrs. Jno. Fraser, of Lachute Road, formerly Miss Flowers. He was then nine years of age. His career was later pursued under Prof. Beique, of Notre Dame Cathedral. Filling his first professional call in Oswego, N. Y., at the age of 20, and later officiating for 13 years at the Church of the Redeemer, Chicago, Mr. Mackay has now completed 15 years as organist and choirmaster at St. Paul's and he is proud of his record of having never missed a service on account of ill health or indisposition during the whole 32 years of his career.

The program of the approaching Fall Fair at Vankleek Hill, is to include an Old-Time Fiddlers' Contest.

A flock of sea-gulls were seen at Lake Louisa on Sunday. It is rare to find these birds so far inland.

LACHUTE TEAM IN FIRST LACROSSE FIXTURE

Lachute's new Lacrosse team engaged in its first game of the season last Sunday afternoon in heavy rain-showers, which however did not dampen the ardor of either players or spectators. Meeting Calumet on Brownsburg Picnic grounds, Lachute suffered defeat in a score of 4-3. Mons. Racine refereed, and the game was fast and enthusiastic. Our local boys, mostly new to the game, showed need of hard coaching but gave a promising exhibition. A big crowd braved the elements to witness the game, including a large attendance from Calumet.

THE LATE MISS JANET BLACK

The death occurred this morning (Thursday) of Miss Janet Black at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jno. Campbell, Lachute, after a year of sickness. The deceased lady is survived by two sisters, viz: Mrs. John Campbell, of this town, and Mrs. Simpson (Mary), of Northampton, Mass.; also a brother, David Black, in Fairbanks Alaska.

The funeral will be held tomorrow (Friday) at 4 o'clock, from the Campbell residence, interment to follow in Lachute Cemetery. The sympathy of this community is felt for Mrs. Campbell and family in their sad loss.

Carillon. At 2 o'clock Sunday morning the American boat John Thorpe laden with lumber, broke loose from a tow boat at the head of the new canal, and was carried over the dam.

The new brick dwelling recently put up by Mr. Robt. Dobie in Lachute is a credit to the place, and is considered the best brick work in the county.

Mr. Hamilton is pushing forward the work on his bobbin factory, which should be running in about 2 weeks.

Pleasant and successful meetings were held by Primitive Methodists on the old camp ground last week.

The great slide from Lake Louisa to Lachute is being talked of again, and is likely to be pushed on by a company.

We regret to chronicle the death of Mrs. Saml. S. Hills, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Lachute.

Mr. Thos. Morin of this parish threshold out 22 stocks of oats on Tuesday, receiving 42 bushels of grain weighing over 40 lbs. to the bushel.

Some Lachute merchants want business divided up, so they will not each be required to keep dry goods, groceries, hardware, boots and shoes, crockery, etc.

SPORTSMEN HELP FIRE FIGHTERS

The organized fishing clubs of Canada are doing yeoman service this year in cutting down forest fires, says the Canadian Forestry Association. Rangers everywhere report that experienced anglers are carrying out the dictum of their clubs that sport and forest protection should travel hand in hand. As a result, very few outbreaks have been caused by club members. The same wonderful record as last season has been established by the Boy Scouts. Thus far in 1932 not a single forest fire has been attributed to a Scout, although thousands of them have been camping in the woods and using camp-fires for their cooking.

DIET FADS

There are a great many people who have faddy ideas about diets. I have just finished reading a book written by a man who has some ideas which would be hard to live up to. He thinks that we should live chiefly on fruits and vegetables. If we eat fruit, we should have nothing but fruit at that meal; when we eat vegetables it should be a vegetable meal and nothing else. A small amount of meat may be eaten occasionally. White bread is taboo and very little brown bread is used. No pies, no cakes, no desserts of any kind, except perhaps occasionally plain custard or junket. No ice cream. Any mixture of fruit and starch such as strawberry shortcake, he thinks is fairly poisonous.

How would you like to live on a diet of that kind? He may be right but I am glad I do not follow his way of thinking. We are provided with a taste for food and equipment to digest a variety of foods, both animal and vegetable, and I think we are intended to eat and enjoy them.

A REDUCING PROBLEM

An inquiry has come in as to how one can go to afternoon parties, enjoy the good food provided, and yet not gain. It can be done. Count your afternoon tea as part of your next meal and limit the next meal to something very low in calories. A generous salad of lettuce, tomatoes, and cucumbers will fill you comfortably and yet add few calories, providing you do not use a fattening dressing. If you have been very good to yourself in the afternoon, better cut out bread and butter to accompany your salad.

It is better to eat at the regular time than to do without a meal entirely as many try to do after eating generously in the afternoon. If you do not eat at the usual time your stomach will have that gone feeling later on and in order to feel comfortable you will have to eat before going to bed. So it is better to fool your tummy and fill it with low calorie foods. In this way you can enjoy the good things your hostess has provided within limits of course. No need to gorge.

Remember when you are partying that olives which are usually considered as mere accessories have a high calorie count. It takes only five or six for one hundred calories. I usually provide either gherkins or radishes with my olives so that my guests will not be limited as to choice—and most times the thin ladies eat the pickles or radishes and the fat ones the olives. That is why most of us are either fat or thin! We instinctively choose the food that makes us that way.

AUTO DRIVING TEST URGED

Nobody who studies the toll of automobile accidents and fatalities can pretend that motoring in this Province is a safe occupation. And it never will be safe as long as the careful, expert driver is in perpetual danger of being run into or forced off the road by incompetents and fools.

The Royal Automobile Club of Canada is right to draw attention again to the need for a driver's test in this Province. No new driving license should be issued without a test of the competence and physical ability of the applicant to handle his car. And all license-holders whose driving ability or eyesight is seriously questioned should be made to demonstrate their competence. The case for a strict test is so plain that one almost despairs at the backwardness displayed in adopting it. Must Quebec hang behind the Province of Ontario, behind Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Alberta and Saskatchewan?

The motorist associations are doing good work in pressing for reforms. There is merit, for example, in the suggestion put forward by the Montreal Motorist League that the Provincial Government might reduce the motor license fees for the second half of the year, from September to March. If the customary fees were cut in half for

CHILDREN'S SUMMER LOSS OF APPETITE

Most children are ravenous all through the summer holidays and it would seem almost impossible to fill them. This is as it should be because most of the child's growth for the year is from June to January. Sometimes though, children go to the other extreme and have a great loss of appetite. This usually is caused by over-fatigue. The child is literally too tired to eat. The cure obviously is more rest. Have several rest periods through the day to give the child a chance to gain a little energy before it has expended it all.

Breakfast is often a serious problem. If they will not eat breakfast, then put them to bed most of the morning to conserve the little bit of energy provided by their breakfast. More rest is not an easy rule to enforce but insist on it relentlessly for the child who plays beyond its strength. Sometimes a twenty minute rest immediately before meals is a help as the child has some time to get rested and quieted down before the meal starts. Do not let an undernourished child leave the table before everyone is finished. Often they would rather play than eat and will say they have had enough in order to get out. If they have to stay whether they are finished or not, they often come to the conclusion that if they have to be at the table anyhow they might as well eat some more.

Children have more opportunity to eat between meals in holiday time, so if your child's appetite is failing be sure that between-meal is not the nigger in the wood pile. Watch the candy and ice cream intake.

HAM TURNOVERS

Make pastry, roll thin and cut into rounds. Mix 1 tablespoon ground cooked ham with sufficient white sauce to moisten and place on the round. Fold like a turnover and bake in a hot oven of 400 degrees for about 15 minutes. These turnovers are specially good at picnics.

BAKED EGGS AND TOMATOES

Put a thick slice of unpeeled tomato in a greased muffin tin; season with salt and pepper. Break one egg and each tomato slice and season this with salt, pepper and a little butter. Bake in a medium oven until the egg is set but not hard. Serve on toast.

CHOCOLATE COCOANUT MACAROONS

Melt 4 squares of chocolate over hot water. To this add one can of condensed milk, and one half pound of shredded cocoanut. Mix and drop by teaspoons on a buttered pan. Bake for about 15 minutes in a very slow oven of 275 degrees.

Popularity of Canadian apples abroad has notably increased, and last year apple exports to Europe from Western Canada reached a new high record of 1,174,000 boxes, as compared with 560,000 boxes in 1930. Fruit growers are anticipating an even larger crop this year.

R. Y. Daniaud, formerly Traveling Passenger Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Winnipeg, was appointed District Passenger Agent, Algoma District, North Bay, Ont., effective August 16th. Mr. Daniaud has had a long and successful career with the Company, and is now receiving congratulations on his most recent promotion.

Numbers of anglers returning through Ottawa and Montreal report having experienced exceedingly good bass fishing. This was the expression of a group from Cincinnati, Ohio, who recently visited the bass fishing waters of the Gatineau River, north of Maniwaki, according to A. O. Seymour, General Tourist Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway.

This is evidently the peak year with partridge, one would judge from the reports emanating from various parts of the Laurentian and Gatineau districts of Quebec, according to A. O. Seymour, General Tourist Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway. In almost every locality partridge, as the ruffed grouse and Franklin grouse are best known, are very plentiful. Most flocks hatched this year are nearly full grown.

the balance of the year yet to run, a number of cars might be brought out and used by those who find existing taxes too heavy. —Montreal Star.

HOLIDAY TIME

Christian Science Monitor

It may not be possible for some people to have a yearly cessation from duty and responsibility. Rich, therefore, are those who learn to tuck in some bit of holiday day by day! Perhaps it may take the form of a remembered happy time; or there may be a sudden glimpse of open sky with lovely cloud given when kindness was extended. Whenever some incident, or of a friendly smile, however trivial it may appear, brings joy, gladness, gratitude, then to that person has come a bit of real holiday.

Most of one's time should be spent doing some kind of helpful service. Too much attention spent on self causes one's days to grow stale, and if the practice is continued joy and enthusiasm will soon be stifled. Each humanitarian who forgets self in his effort to help others finds that he too has been blessed.

There are days when human demands seem to exceed one's time and capacity to meet them; and there are times when one's best efforts appear to be reversed. Unpleasant experiences and impatient exactions, these too would weigh so heavily that there is a cry for rest and a longing for holiday at heart. Blessed are those who have learned that rest and freedom come not from any change of place but from change of thought. The acknowledgement that man was created to bear witness to God and is subject to God breaks the dream of having too much to do.

ENGLISH WOMEN'S INSTITUTES FEATURE PRODUCE SHOW

For the first time, Somerset Women's Institutes held a Produce Show at Minehead. Previous shows were held in conjunction with the County Handicrafts shows, but this year the County decided to stand alone, and the result more than justified the venture.

Over one thousand exhibits were shown, covering home cured ham and bacon, bread, butter, cake, horticultural displays and vegetables from the area covered by the Institutes. Home bottled fruits, jam and jellies were among the most attractive features of the show.

Eager competition in the various classes, both for the women and girls, added to the interest in the show. A large number of visitors were present during the progress of the show.

CHAPTER VI.—After making arrangements with Hardcock and old Dad Fence to look after Joyce's safety
while she is alone at the MacMillan
post (her father being jailed at Fort Endurance), Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe. As the days
pass and she does not hear from him,
Joyce is heart sick for Alan. She questions Hardcock when the latter pays her one of his brief calls, and from what Hardcock tells her she believes final arrangements for the wedding
have been made.

CHAPTER VII.—On his journey, Al-
an runs across "Buxard" Featherof,
famous aviator of the World war, and
now "on his own," with a dilapidated machine. Amity of spirit draws them together, and Alan enlists "Buxard"
in the enterprise. Lacking sufficient funds to procure equipment, they loot
government stores, starting their pursuits of the bandits themselves criminals in the eyes of the law.
He smoothes a path on the land floor;
and as the others leaned forward to watch, he drew a rude map with his ong thumb nail. "We'll follow the Inconnu east a ways and then head south for Manitoba. We'll spend the rest of this summer and fall working down into timber country. Then we'll find some good hiding place and build a couple shacks and lay in meat, and we'll wait there till the break-up.
Next spring we'll east on down and out to Winnipeg, and there we'll be with better'n a hundred and fifty thousand in hides and dust!"

His own personal and private plans
after they did get out to Winnipeg.
Jensen did not see fit to disclose.
He knew a party there in the Queen City of the Wheat Plains who would buy the furs at two-thirds of their auction value and say "budding." The lust, being unstamped, could be sold anywhere. He himself, both business manager and leader of this cruise,
would naturally attend to those business matters. Once with the money in his pocket, would he split six ways with these lubbers? Or would he take a train and fade out of their lives and have that hundred and fifty thousand for his own sweet own? You bet your life he would!

With his plans clear and the men completely under his sway, Jensen leaned back against a paqueon of furs
and sat, smoking, thinking.

He guessed that for once the police were altogether baffled. They must be pounding their heads to explain

who he and his men were, where they had come from, how they had got into this country, unknown, unseen; and now they, complete strangers, knew the ins and outs of this northern wilderness as well as the police themselves. He thought of them as a pack of hounds circling frantically to pick up a scent. It was pleasing to know he had out-manuevered them from start to finish. A man who could beat the Yellow-stripes would have no trouble at all dodging the provincial police and town cops.

But this reflection was only on the surface of his thoughts. He was thinking of the MacMillan trading post. "Breed Andre had said that Dave MacMillan was not there. Jensen shrewdly guessed where the trader was. From the MacMillan girl being alone at the post, except for that white-whiskered old coot, Jensen guessed that Dave MacMillan had got into trouble over that pack of otter
furs in the storage shed.

Through the tobacco haze Jensen looked back across six years and saw again all the details of a certain incident between himself and Joyce Mac-Millan. He had re-lived that incident
a thousand times since it happened.
The memory of it, the memory of that laughing-eyed girl, had come down across the years like the scent of fresh violets. Two weeks ago when his party passed the MacMillan trading post, the place had seemed deserted. But he had known she lived there; and drawn by some overpowering impulse to see her, to be near her again, he had lunged caution and hot haste to the winds, and stopped, and gone ashore. The picture of that MacMillan girl asleep, an arm under her head, a great-spurred violet in her hair—that flesh-and-blood reincarnation of her former memory had been a madness in his blood ever since. It had overshadowed his waking thoughts, had flitted across his dreams, had been present with him even during the hot battle with the three Mounties at the edge of Manx Waters.

The news which "Breed Andre nas brought back—that Joyce was practically alone at the trading post, scarcely two days travel away, that the trading had dwindled and few Indians or metis came now, that the officer commanding at Fort Endurance was giving her no protection whatsoever—this news to Jensen was like a match to a barrel of powder.

His deliberate brain saw danger in his scheme; but he had risked death
for the furs and gold, and that hundred and fifty thousand was far less vivid, less tangible, less impressing to him than the memory of that moment when he stood looking through Joyce's window. He had spent a year on a whaler without getting back to port; a year of exile in Alaskan mountains, among prospectors. . . . There are hungers more powerful than the hunger for food or gold. . . .

It would be ridiculously easy, he reasoned, to knock the old coot on the head and take the defenseless girl.
They would land above the station
and creep upon it through the bush.
Two of his men would go in peacefully, as though to trade, and watch their chance to seize her. His party could swoop, strike, and have the whole thing over in ten minutes.

Knocking the ashes from his pipe,
he leaned forward:

"Men, I got an idee. I just showed you lubbers our one chance to 'scapa.
Now I'm gonna show you how we c'n make out getaway dead sure and certain. How we c'n tie them Yellerstripes up in a sack and throw away
the key. Anybody objecting? Anybody wanting to kick over the traces?"

Glaring around him, he saw emphatic denials. The men were hanging upon his words; he knew they would obey him without a whimper of protest.

He went on, "We're going to make a little satchay down the Alooska to MacMillan's trading post. We're going to it tomorrow. We'll rap that old duffer on the head and take the girl. We'll throw them Yeller-stripes clear off the scent. While they're hunting for her, we'll be making racks south-east to Manitoba. Y'mind how we saved our skins on the steamer by taking that other skit? We'll do it again; but we'll carry this'n on along with us. No one'll ever know what happened to her. . . ."

For a few days after Alan Baker bought out of service and left Fort Endurance, Inspector Haskell enjoyed more peace and security than he had felt in many months. But after the first satisfaction wore away, it gradually occurred to Haskell that maybe he ought to make some move to capture those six bandits. To let them escape without raising a hand against them would look bad, very bad, to Superintendent Williamson on his coming visit to the post.

Thinking over his situation, he remembered how Baker had demanded to lead a patrol to the Inconnu river and lie in wait there. Baker had said they would try to escape by that route.
He knew what he was talking about.
Haskell realized he knew.

Should he send a detail to the Inconnu?

The more Haskell pondered the idea,
the more it appealed to him. It was reasonably sure to succeed. It would be the positive action he needed. On his wall map he hunted for the Inconnu. He found a small channel of the Mackenzie by that name, but Baker's Inconnu was some large river.
Perhaps the chart listed it as "The Unknown," the English translation of the name. He searched for an Inconnu and an Unknown, but found neither. Such a stream simply was not shown on his map.

When Little Otter came in to the post for a supply of chewing stemmo,

Haskell pumped him. The sub-chief ad only the haziest idea where the Inconnu was, but Indian-like he would not admit his ignorance. He started talking, gesticulating—till Haskell caught him in a flat self-contradiction and kicked him out of the cabin in angry disgust.

The Inconnu patrol blew up. There was nothing Haskell could do about capturing those bandits. He knew that if Williamson asked why no move had been made, the short-handedness at the post would be at least some excuse. Besides, one of the other detachments, over on Hudson's bay or southeast in the Reindeer Lake country, would probably nail those bandits
and the affair would blow over.

Those rainy imprisoning days, as he sat in his cabin and looked out along the slope for a mere glimpse of Elizabeth Spaulding, he was tortured by the question of why she was still here,
and what stood between her and Baker. Why had Baker bought out in such hot haste and left this North country that was his home? Was Elizabeth waiting for him, or had they split up?

Sometimes it seemed to Haskell that his appointment to this northern post
had not been a mere vagary of luck
but a manifest act of destiny, that he might meet Elizabeth Spaulding. His triumph over Baker, his commission
as a Mounted officer, his career in the Mounted—what did the whole of it weigh as against the prospect of losing Elizabeth after he had found her?
With the sincerity of the only passionate love in his life, he felt that if Baker married her and took her away,
his victory over the ex-sergeant would be a grinning mockery.

Late one quiet evening, when Bill Hardcock was gone on patrol, Haskell saw Elizabeth go up the slope to the cabin which had been Baker's, and light the candles there, and after a quarter-hour come away again. Tripping down the grassy terrace to Mrs.
Irving's flower garden, she sat down alone by the edge of it.

He went out of his lonesome cabin and out along the twilight slope toward her. . . .

But in hand, Haskell came up. With cold sardonic eyes she surveyed him, amused at his humility. Toward her
the man had no pride left.

She reminded him sharply: "I believe I asked you not to talk with me again."

"Yes, you did," he said humbly. "I haven't forgotten. It's made these last couple weeks pretty miserable.
But when I saw you over there tonight . . . Elizabeth, won't you let me—can't I stay just a little while?
I got some news day before yesterday that cut me up pretty bad. . . . He waited for her to comment, but she said nothing. "You remember last winter I said my father was in poor health? I got a radiogram night before last about—about him."

Elizabeth understood that his father had died. She was quite well aware that Haskell was not exactly stricken by the news, though he was trying to play upon her sympathy.

She wondered why he was discussing
the matter with her now.

As he went on talking of it, she began to see his reason. He mentioned the big country estate outside of Cob-ham, the town house in Ottawa, the extensive and valuable timber limits up the Klamiki. When he hinted at himself being the only heir and the owner of all this, she saw his whole drift.

The news left her entirely cold.
From his treatment of Alan she knew how tricky and dishonorable he could be. He was trying to bait her. . . .
She smiled sardonically at him for being so crude about it. Probably he thought to make her his Ottawa mistress.

The affections of such a man were evanescent at best, and certainly quicksand to build upon. Imagining her relations with this man if she ever allowed herself to become dependent on him, she saw him staving off marriage by the old threadbare
dodges, and at last turning coldly away when passion went. Alan Baker in time would go farther than Haskell and his Cobham estate. Alan was every way more a man. He was honest, he could be depended upon.

Angry and contemptuous, she rose.
"I've got to go. But there's something I really must thank you for, Inspector."
"To thank me for?" He too had risen; he was leaning toward her eagerly. "I'm glad . . . I didn't know I'd done—"

"You didn't intend it as a favor.
But it was." With mocking irony in her tones she went on: "Last winter
Alan was offered a very splendid position in Victoria. I wanted him to take
it. You used to say he was a non-comm with no prospects, and that was somewhat as I felt. He didn't want to leave. He wanted to stay in service and live here in the North. Just when he was wavering, you forced his hand. You made him buy out, and so you made our marriage possible. I'm awfully grateful to you, really. You didn't realize what a favor you were doing."

She left him standing there, staring
after her, dazed and speechless.

That same evening, only an hour later, Haskell made a discovery so startling that in some measure it took his tortured thoughts away from Elizabeth.

A knock sounded on the door, and Whipple came in with a report.

"Sir, last week I missed fifty gallons
of gas and five of oil from our stores.
I thought it might be a paper mistake, but today I checked up again and we're short still more."

"Well, what about it?" Haskell snapped.

"Nothing, sir; nothing at all." Whipple said hastily. He saw that his chief was in a vicious mood, and he backed away to the door. "I just thought that you would like to know,

sir. Most likely some half-breed with an outboard motor is stealing this,
sir." And he closed the door quietly.

Alone again, unable to bear his stinging thoughts, Haskell turned in desperation to the service radio set in an effort to distract himself. As he had done on evenings past, he picked up an Edmonton station. Among the orders, news and personal messages,
he heard that an aviator named Feather-
of and another man, name unknown,
had stolen a machine gun, a propeller,
pack-chute, flying instruments and other things at Edmonton; and escaping in Featherof's monoplane, had last been sighted following the Alberta and Great Waterways railroad toward McMurray. The posts were warned to be on the lookout for the plane and to arrest the criminals on sight.

Gender—A teacher was taking a class of boys and said:
"What are the apostles?" One boy put up his hand.
"The wives of the apostles."

Silver Wedding Anniversary

On Saturday Sept. 3rd., a delightful event was celebrated in the form of a silver wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hardie, in the presence of about twenty-five guests, all being immediate relatives of the family.

This couple was married by the Rev. Ernest Thomas, at that time Methodist Minister of Lachute, to which church the family of the bride belonged; and they have resided since in Brownsburg, where Mr. Hardie is an operator with the Canadian Industries. Four children have been born to the union, Wilbert, now teller with the Head Office of Bank of Nova Scotia, Ottawa; Jane and Ella, at home, and one deceased, Richard Lawrence "Buddie," who died at the age of four.

Altogether the occasion was a very happy one, and the "bridal couple" were the recipients of a very fine array of presents, marking the silver anniversary of their wedding. A feature of the evening was the appearance among the guests of the bride's sister, Miss Giles, of Montreal, decked in the original wedding dress worn by the bride twenty-five years ago. This created, naturally, a great amusement, even amazement, at the striking contrast in costume made by a quarter of a century in the fashions of the day. When it was announced that the dress was minus its train which had gone to furnish a baptismal dress for the first baby, the surprise at such a Dame Grundy creation did not diminish in the least.

A very delightful wedding supper of light refreshments was then served and a toast presented by the pastor of Mr. and Mrs. Hardie voicing the good wishes and esteem and the heartiest congratulations of all present, to the bride and groom of twenty-five years. Mr. Hardie replied in a happy and appropriate little speech. The party then engaged in a merry round of conversation and anecdote till a late hour.

For Mutual Understanding

Notary Valois Addresses
Gathering at School Opening.

It is sentiments such as were voiced by Notary Gaetan Valois, who was present at the High School Opening on Friday last as Chairman of the Catholic School Board—which make for understanding and tend to maintain the good feeling that exists among our two races constituting the citizenry of Lachute.

Mr. Valois recognized the good spirit prevailing, as a token of which he was then present as guest and representative of "the other side of the house," and assured the assembly that his Board and the Catholic citizenry at large collaborated in the joy and celebration of this occasion. "boosting once more the educational idea which has made Lachute so well known the Province over. . . Broader still," added the speaker, "for I am told there are school teachers as far as British Columbia who took their first degrees here in the old East End Academy."

Bartholdi's majestic poem of bronze, standing somewhat bewildered in New York Harbour, meets no truer echo than from our Laurentians. For here in Quebec exists true liberty, in respect of education particularly, where our system is adapted to individual rights and liberties. And the good spirit prevailing in this town of Lachute, is a living illustration of the admirable legislative system of our Province, the speaker maintained.

Mr. Valois sought to emphasize our united interests, irrespective of or better, on account of our differences of origin and faith. In civil legislation, where some might seek to form a concrete block throughout Canada, as also in education, uniformity

Mr. Chevrier, of the Radio Bottling Works, driving with three brothers and a friend, by name of Carriere, Lachute, narrowly escaped serious consequence in an accident which occurred late Sunday night on the Hull Highway. Returning from a Tombola at Grenville, the party seem to have been travelling at considerable speed when their car collided with another auto going west, in the neighborhood of Vachon's corner, between St. Philippe and Grenville. Chevrier suffered a bad cut on the nose, and Carriere was slightly injured in the shoulder, but from the appearance of their Essex car after the collision, one may judge the occupants had a

Marriage at Brownsburg

SCOTT-TOMALTY

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday last, September 3rd., at the Brownsburg Baptist Church, when the Rev. F. Walker Dyson united in marriage Wilma Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Tomalty of Brownsburg, and Edgar Frederick James Scott, of Lachute.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very beautiful as she entered the Church to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Mrs. F. W. Dyson. She wore a bridal gown of white georgette over white taffeta made on long lines, with lace bodice and sleeves and with long tulle veil made in cap effect, caught with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of columbia roses and maiden-hair fern.

Miss Dorothy Tomalty, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and was gowned in mesh pink georgette, over pink taffeta, with lace trimming and wore a large picture hat to match. She carried a bouquet of sweet-peas and delphiniums, representing an old fashioned nose-gay.

Mr. Melvin G. Scott, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. The ushers were Messrs Gordon Scott, brother of the groom and Henderson Townsend.

The Church was tastefully decorated with pink and white phlox, and the ceremony was solemnized beneath an arch of ferns and white phlox.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the decorations being carried out in yellow and white. Some 60 guests were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott left later on a wedding trip to Montreal and other points, the bride travelling in a beige tailored suit with hat and shoes to match.

They were the recipients of many beautiful gifts. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Scott will reside in Lachute.

Taxation — A Reply

Editor, The Watchman.

Dear Sir:

Your many subscribers have read with a great deal of interest Mr. Kains' letter on Taxation, and side with him, as far as he has gone, on the unjust way of assessing our property; but he has failed to state a remedy. We would like to make a few remarks on how to cure the disease.

Let the Government pass a law, allowing the councils throughout this Province to tax all lands at so much per acre, (I do not think there is a law to that effect in force at present), both improved and unimproved. That is, the man who does not improve his property or farm will have to pay the same taxes per acre as the man who is improving his property. There are hundreds of acres in our good old county which render little or no taxes, and in some cases the owners are making more off such property than the ones who are highly taxed. In towns and villages, let the tax be so much per foot, on both improved and vacant lots.

As the law is now, if we farmers put up new buildings and clean up to improve the looks of our place, the assessor comes along and takes a look around, then tacks on from two to three hundred dollars more on the property, which in most cases is already carrying more taxes than it should! While the farm without decent house or out-buildings gets off free of charge.

By taxing all land at so much per acre or foot, it puts everyone on the same footing, and I venture to say we would soon see a big improvement on most of the unimproved property in both town and country; and our County would look a great deal better to the numerous tourists travelling through it.

Historical Facts in Grenville Parish

Anniversary to be Observed this Month

Church and Parish mellowed in a Century of Existence.

About 115 years ago, the Rev. W. Bradford commenced to hold Anglican Services along the "Front" of Argenteuil. Soon after that, the Rev. Joseph Abbott came over from England and was appointed Chaplain to the Staff Corps, then engaged in constructing the Carillon-Grenville Canal; and this gentleman also acted as Missionary to the settlers. In 1828 the Rev. Andrew Balfour appears, but it is not certain whether as Chaplain or Missionary. However, three years later, in 1831, the Rev. J. Abbott came back and proceeded to organize the Parish of Grenville. He appears to have been the first settled minister of religion, of any kind, in the district.

Mr. Abbott was apparently very energetic. He held services in various make-shift places until 1832, when a Church building was erected. In the preceding year, a Parish had been inaugurated to include the whole township of Grenville and also Chatham as far as Greece's Pt. Mr. Abbott also purchased 40 acres of land for a glebe, and erected thereon the fine, commodious stone parsonage now occupied by Mr. Willis Crooks. It is about a quarter of a mile east of the present village limits, on the "Front Road."

This year, therefore, is the Centennial Anniversary of the erection of this Church, which by vote of the Vestry was given the name of "St. Matthew's" in 1834, on the motion of the Rev. Joseph Abbott and Lt. Col. Kains. As the exact date of the opening of the Church for worship is not known, the Centenary will be observed on St. Matthew's Day, September 21st. Part of the celebration will consist of the Holy Communion, to be celebrated by his Lordship, the Bishop of Montreal. At this service a Memorial Endowment Board will be dedicated and an offering received for the Endowment Fund. Further details will be announced later.

St. Matthew's is a fine stone building in a splendid state of preservation. Having withstood the storms of a century, it could not apply, since this Province is quite different from the other Provinces of the Dominion. Just as Scotland maintains its own civil law, so the Civil Code of Quebec has been found satisfactory, balanced, pure and human in doctrine, being appropriate to our immediate problems.

Similarly, said the speaker, Catholicism does not face the methods of education in the same way as does Protestantism. "We hold that education of our children must be bi-focal, religion dividing the program with still serves the descendants of those who lovingly erected it. The original subscription book is still preserved, and from it some interesting data can be obtained. The total amount subscribed was $274-12s-2d and the cost was $274-15s-8d, so that the cost was only 3/6d more than the subscription! Among the subscribers, the following figure as the largest: Bishop of Quebec, $75; Mrs. Col Taylor, $45; Rev. Jos. Abbott, $9-15-10; Edwin Pridham, $15; Dr. Farr, $10; Thos. Kains, $18. Among the other persons subscribing, the following names are noticed: Mr. Geo. Kains, Mr. Wm. Kirby, Mr. Orrin Cook, Mr. Grece, Mr. Owen Owens, Mr. W. Clarke, Mr. John Keatley, Mr. Richard Ritchie. A peculiar interest attaches to one name, Lt. Geo. Hopper, who paid two instalments on his subscription and, in October 1833, the name of "Mrs. Hopper appears. Lt. Hopper was buried within the walls of the Church on the 10th. of September, 1833.

From the disbursements, it appears that Thos. Ladford dug the foundation, and that the masonry was executed by the Messrs Hambly & Chapman. The bulk of the carpentering was done by Wm. Willcock and Wm. Smith, but John Rice and James Young also did some of this work. The plastering was done by Samuel Crew and the "Whitewashing Inside" by Samuel Hewson. This interesting Account Book will be on exhibition during the Centenary.

The first entry in the Parish Register is the marriage of Hiram B. Wyman and Jane M. Ellis both of Hawkesbury. The second entry is a Baptism. In it one notes that Lawrence, son of Charles Claude Grece and Elizabeth his wife, was baptized on the 27th., of February, 1831, Edwina Pridham, Owen Owens and Elizabeth Pridham being sponsors. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. W. Abbott, of St. Andrews. Quite a large number of entries relating to Hawkesbury, Upper Canada, appear in these early years. Grenville is thus obviously an older Parish than Hawkesbury.

Surprise Party

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Bradford of the Van Horne Farm, East Selkirk, Man., were the recipients of a pleasant surprise recently on the eve of their tenth wedding anniversary, when the farm staff gave a surprise party to commemorate the event. Some fifty guests were present, including the farm staff, neighbors and friends. A number of very fitting gifts were received and an enjoyable evening spent in dancing, after which refreshments were served.

Gala Day at Lachute High School

Graduates of Gay Nineties Present at Re-Union

Contrast from Early Academy at Walker's School.

"They passed—
Their heads erect and eyes alert,
With conscious pride, inherited
at birth."

These appropriate lines came to mind as one stood and watched the procession of children, pupils of Lachute High School, formerly known as The Academy, when they tried to keep in step to the merry music of the pipes on their march to the Auditorium last Friday, for the annual prize distribution and later to the laying of the foundation stone of their newly completed school building.

It was more than the mere evidence of respect for a piece of work well and truly accomplished that attracted a large and interested throng. They seemed to be imbued with the spirit of youth, which is the spirit of hope. They had dismissed that perplexity and doubt which appertains to adult affairs, and amidst this happy crowd, one recaptured something of one's own lost youth, in company with sparkling eyes that looked into the future with such simple faith and unlimited confidence.

Perhaps there were some present on this memorable occasion in the history of Lachute school work who would tell you that the centre of the day's events lay either in the speeches that were made or in the stone that was laid. But one rather likes to think that these boys and girls themselves occupied the greater part of the picture and did so not unworthily. In the procession they formed behind their banner could be discerned enthusiasm, confidence, anticipation, and pride of school. It was their day and they knew it. It was for them that the flags were flying, and the emblems symbolized a hope and triumph for the future. Here was no room for depressing outlook or frail unbelief, for young Canada was moving forward strong in its tradition, and confident in its aspirations. It seemed appropriate that older people should pay them tribute, for into their young and capable hands shall

Child Hit by Car

The little daughter of Mons. & Mde. A. Carriere of Foundry Street, was struck and knocked down on Monday morning, by a Ford car driven by Mrs. D. Brown. The mishap was unavoidable, as the child, 7 or 8 years of age, ran out from between a number of automobiles parked in front of the Paquin Garage, and was struck by the fender of the approaching car. Although severely scratched on her leg and side, the child escaped any serious injury, and was taken home to her parents.

In view of the interest shown in the Sunday School Lesson featured in this paper, the publishers regret that, owing to demands on space, the item has been occasionally omitted.

Hereafter, the Lesson will appear regularly on the inside pages, and for the benefit of those desiring to give longer study to its message, will be dated ahead for the ensuing week. The Watchman trusts this arrangement will meet with the approval of its readers.

ANGLICAN SUNDAY-SCHOOLS PICNIC AT GRENVILLE

The combined Sunday-Schools of Grenville Parish (Anglican) held their annual picnic last Saturday at the farm of Mr. James Stewart. The weather was perfect and the location ideal; well over a hundred people assembled for the occasion. During the morning several games of softball were engaged in, while others went swimming nearby. A basket lunch, followed by a dessert of ice-cream, was greatly enjoyed by all and after subsequent games, swimming, and a variety of amusements, the sports program was commenced. A number of races were run including the inevitable three-legged race and sack-race which always cause their quota of fun. Prizes were given for these and some of those awarded to the adults created no little amusement. The following were the results of the contest between the three Sunday-Schools:—

Boys' Relay, Grenville 1st., Rawcliffe 2nd.; Girls' Relay, Calumet 1st., Rawcliffe 2nd.; Boys' Tug-of-War, won by Grenville; Girls' Tug-of-War, won by combined Calumet and Rawcliffe teams.

After supper the party dispersed, having enjoyed a most successful picnic. The thanks of all are due to those who lent assistance, especially to Mr. Stewart for his ground and to Messrs. Bridgen and Morrow for the trucks that conveyed many to the field.

STONEFIELD

Quite a number spent the holiday week-end in this vicinity, and have left for their city homes, after a pleasant time in the country.

Miss G. Hoyle was the guest of Mrs. H. Densmore last week, and has left to take up her school work in Harrington.

The community welcomes its former teacher Miss P. McQuat who returns again for another term in charge of No. 3 School.

Mr. L. McGain and family left last week for home in Montreal, after a three weeks' sojourn at "The Elms" with Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Conway.

Mrs. A. Langille, with her two children Edith and Vernon, has left for her home in New York, after spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. Albert Laughren.

The Stonefield Sunday-School has enjoyed a successful summer, both in attendance and results. There is an average of 25 attendants every Sunday under the care of Mrs. Maclean and Mrs. J. Canning.

By the number of cars seen on the highways, there appears to be plenty of gasoline in circulation, and the depression does not seem to have affected the Automobile trade. There is also a great deal of reckless driving by some motorists, which should be checked before any serious damage is done.

On Tuesday, August 23rd., the Sunday School pupils with their parents and friends, had their picnic on Mr. Conway's lawn, about 75 being present. All had a pleasant time, with swings, games, and races which were keenly contested by all who took part and prizes were presented to the winners. There was also served during the day, real old-fashioned ice-cream, which must have been thoroughly good, judging by the way it disappeared. Supper was served following the games. A short address by the Rev. Mr. Maclean concluded a Perfect Day.

MAN'S SEVEN MISTAKES

Man's imperfections lead him to make many mistakes in life, and the pointing out of these frailties has engaged the attentions of philosophers and reformers in all ages. A recent writer enumerates what he considers to be the seven greatest mistakes of man, as follows:

1. The delusion that individual advancement is made by crushing others down.
2. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected.
3. Insisting that a thing is impossible because we ourselves cannot accomplish it.
4. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences in order that important things may be accomplished.
5. Neglecting development and refinement of the mind by not acquiring the habit of reading.
6. Attempting to compel other persons to believe and live as we do.
7. The failure to establish the habit of saving money.

The Captain's Corner

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

THE ANSWER.

Dear Boys,—

Did I not say last week it was found? Did I not take you with me on a wonderful journey through old cities in distant parts of the world and then did we not travel together over the mountains, by the great lakes into the deep forests until we reached the calm blue waters of the mighty Pacific Ocean? I say did we not do all these things?

And then did I not tell you that you had been there? And then did you not say how can that be? Listen.

The things we think are far away
Beyond our aim.

The things we look for every day
And long to gain

Are in ourselves, if but we knew
The secret that is known to few.

How can we say that gifts are rare,
That are so common all can share?

There is no way, however rough and hard,
We can't overcome.

'Tis laziness and lack of will that must retard
The race we run.

So gather courage, be alert and aim,
To do your best and thereby 'Play the Game'

God bless you Son.

'Tis not the summer days however bright
That train your mind.

They grant us strength and tune our hearts aright,
Then leave behind,

A greater wish, than idle days can give.
A vast ambition, urging us to live.

And keep 'to line'.

From books and lessons and the things they teach
Come holy thought.

This brings us joy, so well within our reach
And 'tis unsought.

A magic land your school to be explored,
Each battle won but brings a new reward

Dismiss all doubts, for this is very true
There's nothing really that you cannot do.

If just you try then all that's well begun
Will end in triumph gained by you my son.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

By this time the Commander felt that he really had the interest of his Chief Officer, and therefore continued his story with increased eagerness. "Of course I can hardly expect you to credit the idea at once, that in these days it is a sensible thing to go out and look for treasure in the South Seas; but I am sure that when you have learned all I have to tell you about that map which you are holding, and how it came into my possession, you will agree with me that it does not sound so ridiculous after all." He paused for a moment to re-light his pipe, and then continued, "Just before I started on the search for my nephew and niece, which, as you have seen for yourself, turned out so successfully, I happened to be staying in a fishing village which only possessed one small hotel that was known to all and sundry as the 'Blue Dragon.' I had been there for three days before I discovered from the worthy landlord that I was not the only guest. One morning this landlord came to me in a great state of excitement, and when he could get himself quiet enough to speak coherently, begged me to go up to a small room at the top of the house and see what I could do for the man who was my fellow-guest, and shared with me the rather poor hospitality of the place. At first I was reluctant to interfere, but eventually promised to see what I could do when I heard that he was a seaman. On entering the room, which was little more than an attic, I found the fellow lying fully dressed on his bed, and received a hoarse invitation to sit myself by his side. Although no doctor, it did not take me long to discover that he was very near death, and so I naturally started to urge him to see a Doctor. This kindly suggestion on my part was met with a whole lot of curses of a most revolting nature, so much so, that I determined at once to make the interview short and leave him to his own devices; indeed, I made a move to do this, but he shot out a long lean hand, and caught hold of my arm in such a grip that I wondered if I had not been too hasty in my judgment regarding his strength. 'Sit down,' he almost shrieked, 'and listen to me. Oh, I know that I am dying all right, and I cannot say that I will be sorry. Life means nothing to me, though it would have done, had I been able to get the treasure.' On this last word he raised himself up into almost a sitting position, and glared at me with a ferocious light in his deep, sunken eyes. 'Treasure!' he almost whispered, 'Gold! all mine! and yet I shall never be able to touch any of it for myself!' Still gripping my arm he fumbled in the deep pocket of his sea-faring jacket with his other hand, and brought out that little brown case that is on the table there, and ordered me to open it. As I did so he watched me intently, and as soon as I had, under his direction, drawn out that map he said, 'Take care, don't you tear it; that paper is worth a fortune, and I know one or two who are after it. Now, what am I showing it to you for, not knowing you, or anything about you, except that the fellow that runs this house tells me that you are a sailor and a Captain? Still, I know some captains that are not worth their salt, but I must admit that most of them are better than those who sail before the mast; but I have got to take some risk, and you have got to swear to me that if I give you that piece of paper and you go to look for the treasure you will give me some of it.' Again the Commander paused a moment in his narrative, as he caught sight of a small amused smile on the face of his Chief Officer. 'Of course, I know,' he went on, 'it all sounds fantastic as I tell you now, but believe me, it did not sound like that when this man was telling his story. There was something of such deadly earnestness in every word he uttered, that I even now shudder as I recall the whole incident. Well, to make a long story short—as you know, I had to get busy in my search for these two children, so a day or two after I left the village, but not before this man had forced me to take the map and pocket book which you see here, and had made me swear that if I found this treasure I would give him one third share. Mind you, I have not promised that I will even look for it, but he was so afraid of these other people, 'Enemies' he called them, getting hold of the map, that he was willing, as he said, to take the risk of anything I might do. The rest you know. I found my nephew and his sister, in London; I have brought them down here on the ship, and have shown you that map and told you the story. Now tell me what you think about it."

"I am afraid if I tell you what I really think you will be offended," was the reply. Pat Somerville laughed.

"We have taken too many voyages together for me to take offence at anything you say" he answered. "But that is only an excuse, because you do not know what to say yourself," and there was challenge in those last few words that was about to be taken up when a loud lancing came on the cabin door.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Scout Camps are ...

Another summer has added a record of safe camping for Boy Scouts. With some 15,000 under canvas for varying periods, not a single serious accident was reported.

Former Premier to Head Scout Camp.

Count Paul Teleki, former Prime Minister of Hungary, and a member of the League of Nations, will be Camp Chief of the great world gathering of Boy Scouts near Budapest next summer.

Boy Scouts in other Lands.

There are 5,127 Boy Scouts in Burma, 143 in North Borneo, 821 in British Guiana, 5,885 in Ceylon, 2,197 on the Gold Coast, 7,700 in Malaya, 2,658 in Nigeria, 983 in the Sudan, 1,649 in Uganda.

Scouting Would Ensure Peace

"If every man were a Boy Scout there would be no need for international peace conferences," said Mr. Justice J. B. M. Baxter, former Premier of New Brunswick, in a radio broadcast in connection with Saint John's big Scout Apple Day.

Low Cost Camping.

Suggestions from Scout Headquarters for the holding this summer of low-cost "economy" camps, to ensure that no boys were denied outings, brought a splendid response from Scout leaders. As a result approximately the same number of Scouts camped as last year, some 15,000.

Scouts at Economic Conference.

Boy Scouts played a useful part at the recent Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa. They acted as special guides and ushers at the Parliament Buildings, and Rideau Hall, as guards of honour for the Governor-General and in other capacities at the various official functions. A number were requisitioned as confidential messengers by different delegations.

World Meet of Scouts to be Held

The world economic situation will not prevent the holding in Hungary next year of the 4th. World Boy Scout Jamboree, according to Dr. de Molnar, Hungarian Scout Commissioner, in Ottawa recently. Applications for camping space have had to be restricted in the case of Great Britain, France and a number of other countries.

Western Scouts at Ottawa Conference.

The valuable educational experience of Scout service at the recent Imperial Economic Conference was not confined to Ottawa Scouts. First opportunity was given outside boys, and in response 4 Scouts came from Alberta, 7 from Saskatchewan, 2 from Quebec and 13 from outside Ontario points. The Scouts of the Capital were used as a reserve.

Scout Leaders Amongst Economic Conference Delegates

Three members of delegations attending the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa visited Boy Scout headquarters, bringing greetings as members of the Scout Movement. They were Major F. M. S. Stokes of Southern Rhodesia, Mr. John Hungerford of the Transvaal & Mr. R. Stuttaford, M.P. of Cape Town. Each was given a message of greeting to take back from the Scouts of Canada.

JAIL AND FINES FOR SETTING FOREST ABLAZE

The teeth of the forest protection laws are clamping down this year on those who carelessly burn the timberlands. Many fines of $25, and costs have been imposed on fishermen and jail sentences have also visited those convicted of reckless conduct. The Canadian Forestry Association states that education in respect to fire precautions has won over the great majority that insist upon defying the provincial laws and the rights of others.

John Langley says: What is the use of becoming famous? You die and they erect a big monument, and people come and meet at you!

Adventures in Social Evan- gelism

Contributed by Harry Kenneth.
Synopsis of a paper read before the St. Andrews Literary Society last season, by Mr.
Harry Kay.

"The Manchester and Salford Wesleyan Mission was founded in 1891 by the Rev. Samuel Francis Collier. It had its beginnings in an old Chapel. This Chapel once, according to John Wesley, 'Too far in the country' is now in the center of Manchester's warehouseland and is doing duty as a Sunday School. When Collier was appointed to this church it was a dwindling cause with a membership of only 93. In ten years that membership grew to 2,000. A year after his appointment Collier, along with his congregation, was transferred to the newly erected Central Hall—which at the present is the center of Manchester Methodism. He was an immediate success. So great were the crowds that flocked to his services that this large Hall was not able to contain them all. The famous Free Trade Hall was rented to house the overflow congregation and for twenty one years he preached to two congregations every Sunday evening. As soon as he had closed his service at the Central Hall he hurried to the Free Trade Hall and conducted another service of worship. At the end of twenty-one years the benevolence of a Mr. Aston made possible the building of the Albert Hall and Aston Institute. This was speedily organized into a church and the Free Trade Hall congregation transferred their activities to the new building.

The work of the Mission is carried on in two great cities—Manchester and Salford. They are in the center of England's largest industrial area and have a joint population of almost two millions. There are nine Mission branches at work. Each branch has its Mission Hall, Sunday School and Clubs for boys and girls. These Halls are open every day of the week and all day long; and here hundreds of distressed people find sympathy and help. The young people's clubs are open every week-night and special services are also organized for their benefit on Sunday. In this department a definite programme is laid out by the Mission and an annual competition is held between the clubs of each branch. In the winter months the programme and competition consists, in the boys' department, of, Essay Writing, Hobbies, Swedish Drill, Ambulance Work, Singing, and Bands (Bugle, Trumpet & Bag-Pipe). In the girls' department the work includes Singing, Needlework Fancy and Plain, Cookery, Elocution, Millinery, and Musical Drill. Competent instructors gladly give their services to this work and most of them are members of the Mission. With such a programme, each week-night is a busy one for these young people. In the summer months outdoor sports are arranged with the same competitive spirit. An annual swimming gala is held for both boys and girls. This work among boys and girls is looked upon as of paramount importance. Many of the Mission's best laymen pay tribute to the value of this work in their own lives. Another branch of the Mission's work—which has won the praise of experts in all lands—is the work of Rescue, or Relief, a term which explains itself. This department has a staff of over twenty ordained Deaconesses and six full-time laymen. This work is carried on among discharged prisoners, 'out-of-works', and others who are handicapped or have lost their chance in life. It is done with a determination to apply Christianity in its fullest sense to the needs of the people. 'A chance for every man, woman and child', is the motto. The organization began in the early years of Collier's ministry with a Men's Home and Labour Yard. Labour is not the test. In return for work done a man receives food and shelter and very often clothes and a little cash.

Decide Golf Prize On Roof of World

THE Prince of Wales Trophy, one of golfdom's most envied possessions, has just been decided on the spectacular links of the Banff Springs Golf Course, a mile above sea level, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies. This year the trophy went overseas to an Englishman, down from Oxford University, a newcomer to the ranks of champions who made the long trip a week ahead of play. He is W. A. Sime, Bedfordshire Golf Club, Bedford, England, who is seen shaking hands, with the runner-up, Gordon MacWilliams, Bowness Golf Club, Calgary, one time Alberta champion. Mr. Sime won the final, four up and three to play, and the game was refereed by "Bill" Thompson, genial pro of the Banff course, who is seen standing between the pair. A large gallery followed the play.

The Brewster Cup championship was decided at the same time over the Banff Springs course. It was a woman's championship and was taken by Mrs. G. F. Dewolf (right in photograph) of Vernon, B.C., who defeated Miss Jean McMillan, of Calgary, Alta., in a close fight that was only decided on the 18th hole by one up.

Lay-out shows the two champions being congratulated by their opponents; and the Prince of Wales Cup with the Banff Springs Hotel in the background.

"Hello, Gran'ma!— I'm a good boy!"

When Amy married Bill Temple, her people made her promise to visit them often. But after young Bill came, the visits were less and less frequent, although the old folks were only 40 miles or so away.

Then one night Amy's mother telephoned and they found how pleasant and inexpensive a visit by Long Distance can be.

So every Sunday night now Grandma calls them. The weekly chats make them all happier — and the cost is only a few cents.

PAVING THE WAY TO EDUCATION

The little old red schoolhouse,
more often scarred of paint
than not, and woefully lacking in teaching facilities, holds a pleasant memory for many who learned their three R's within its single room. And their children hear of the three-mile walk through winter's snow and over summer's dusty roads—an experience which is now almost a thing of the past.

These early institutions of learning are rapidly passing away, and the muddy or dusty road the scholars once trudged,
have been given over to modern highways; and the little red schoolhouse bell no longer calls pupils from neighboring farms.
In its place, the "school bus"
will now transport boys and girls from a radius of 15 miles
in this County to our new consolidated High School where facilities for a better education
may be provided at lower cost and greater convenience.

Let us then honor the "little red school house" that lives in glamorous memory, for it has served its purpose well in giving the boon of literacy to our people, and still will flourish in isolated districts. But who will regret its passing since the way becomes paved to better education?

it has continued to serve its purpose until the consolidation just

Dr. Mason paid special tribute to Messrs. Jos. Palliser, Peter Cruise, Hugh Fraser and Thomas McQuat, who were de-rid at that time for what was considered "wanton extravagance" and foolish expenditure. But the past years have proven their wisdom and foresight, in the splendid number of men and women who have attained positions of prominence because of the training they received.

Most inspiring addresses were

At 7 o'clock over 400 gathered to the Banquet in the Auditorium and there, over the festive board, the sentiments expressed well repaid those who were responsible for arranging this re-union and bringing together such a fine gathering.
The toast list, which is reprinted below, was carried off without a hitch of any kind, Dr.
Mason making an excellent chairman as he interspersed many jocularities throughout the proceedings.

Readers of the Watchman will be interested to review the list of past graduates who attended the re-union. Of such early connection with the school in some cases—and in others, coming from such distance—the attendance signifies a depth of sentiment and sympathy for our Lachute school, both in its past achievements and its future hopes.

As may be expected, the later graduates attended in larger numbers than those of earlier years who have separated more widely afield. The following list may not be complete, as doubtless many in attendance failed to register; it is however as authentic as possible.

THE LAKE LOUISA FISH AND GAME CLUB

Great interest has been shown this year by the many residents of Lake Louisa, who are nearly all members of the Club, in the endeavor which is being put forth to protect the Lake.

Until recent years fishing and hunting privileges have been ruthlessly abused and the Lake residents are now banded together for proper protection.

The Lake Camps are also protected and with each donation a card is given, to be tacked on residences warning trespassers and poachers, that arrest will follow any infraction of the law.

A guardian is now on duty and the Lake will be closely watched during this Fall and next Spring.

Trout fry are being added frequently and with your co-operation we will soon have in Lake Louisa one of the best fishing spots of the Laurentians.

If you are not already a member join up now and forward your donation to the undersigned.

R. A. Giles, Sec'y.

learning. In other words our education is not "non-sectarian" it is, in a sense, "sectarian." Education is one of the most important functions of the Church. Encouraged by the Church, sponsored, and immediately controlled, by the Church, education and religion cannot be separated.

Without discussing the merits of this policy, Mr. Valois, made mention of the facts in order to illustrate how a single educational mould for Canadian citizenry is not possible.

"Yet concrete is not made from cement alone; sand, gravel and steel intelligently added, from the best structure." So the racial elements of our population have presented the best constituents of a solid and one-spirited citizenship. The erection of the High School represented a gesture in which we may mutually anticipate better results in social and business life. Mr. Valois closed his brief but comprehensive sentiments with a word of genuine congratulation from the "other side of the house," which he represented.

FAR AWAY HILLS

The saying "Far away hills are green" is true but true. When things are not going right most of us are prone to think that if we were only in some other place things would be better. I have been watching bright hopes die out in a struggle for mere existence. A woman who works for me has been doing the struggling. She and her husband lived on a farm and conditions were like they are on every other farm at the present time. Discouraged they thought they might do better in the city, so they rented their farm and moved.

It has been very difficult for the man to find work and he has earned very little. The cash which they got for rent from their farm looked a lot larger on the farm than it has proved to be in the city. In order to keep a roof over their heads and to buy food the woman has had to go out to work. She says that she is working far harder than she ever had to on the farm. They are anxiously waiting for the first of the year when the two year rental period is up and they can go back to the farm.

The amount of money that it takes to buy the plainest food in the city is the thing that worries her most. She is a good gardener and grew all kinds of fruit and vegetables. As she says, they had wonderful meals and had to buy very little but their flour, tea and sugar. She says that she never will complain about the farm again. They worked hard and made no money but they had lots of food to eat and plenty of wood to burn to keep them warm in the winter. In the city they were never really comfortable as they could not afford to buy sufficient fuel and although they were much too close to it many a time never actually without food, were much too close to it many a time for comfort.

What do you think the only drawback she finds in going back to the farm? Summer company mostly on Sundays. The tales she tells of people's thoughtlessness are appalling. But that will have to be another story. Sometimes she had as many as twenty six for Sunday supper, all uninvited. That speaks for itself.

A CONVENIENT COMPANY DISH

One of our favorite family meals frequently finds itself a company one because of the fact that the materials are usually on hand and also because it is so easy to get ready. This is creamed salmon with peas. The creamed salmon is very easily made but there are a couple of little things which make all the difference between ordinary creamed salmon and a specially delectable dish. One of them is the addition of hard cooked eggs and the other is to allow the salmon to stand over gentle heat after it has been creamed for a little while to allow the flavours to be well blended.

Use the usual cream sauce recipe, using a cup of milk and two tablespoons of flour for a half-pound can and doubling this amount for the pound can. Make your cream sauce and hard cook your eggs. I use two to the small can. Chop the eggs (a fork is a handy implement for this purpose) and add the salmon which has been freed from skin and bones, and the eggs to the cream sauce. Mix thoroughly. Sometimes I leave this mixture stand in the double boiler over a gentle heat and other times I put it in the oven in a moderate heat. The main point is to allow it to stand for at least fifteen minutes. Just before serving, heat a can of peas in its own liquor. Drain and season with salt, pepper, a little sugar is necessary and butter. Turn the salmon out in the centre of a heated platter and surround with the peas. If I have sufficient time and energy I make hot biscuits to go with this.

CREAM SAUCE

1 cup milk
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper.
Mix the flour with a little of the milk and rub until smooth. Add the rest of the ingredients and the remaining milk and cook over a very gentle heat until thick, then cook for three minutes longer so that the starch is thoroughly cooked, stirring all the time.

DATE TART

1/4 cup butter
1/4 cup sugar
3 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup milk
1 1/2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
Cook 1 cup dates, 1 cup water and half cup sugar; when thick add 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Cool. While this mixture is cooling, make a cake batter of the above ingredients and put into a long cake pan. Spread this with the date mixture and cover with the three egg whites beaten until stiff and adding gradually 6 tablespoons sugar. Bake 35 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve cold.

VEGETABLE SALAD

2 cups diced cucumbers
1 cup sliced radishes
2 diced tomatoes
1/2 cup diced green onions
1 quart leaf lettuce cut in pieces
Salad dressing to moisten.

SETTLERS FOR CANADA

Remember when Canadians were crossing to the United States at the rate of 300,000 a year? When we were all excited over "the exodus?" Well it has got to be the other way round now—with Americans coming to Canada. This Spring according to official figures, the value of settlers' effects introduced into the Dominion from the United States was $743,000. It was made up of farm machinery, household goods, stock and money. These people are not ordinary immigrants, or poverty-stricken refugees seeking asylum. Most of them are citizens of solid substance, going to the agricultural sections to stay; and welcome.

There is, of course, still something of a counter migration of settlers from Canada to the United States. Their effects, according to United States figures, were valued at $219,000. Balance is now well in favor of Canada; which means that we are keeping our own population and gaining good immigrants besides.

THE REPORTS OF THE SPIES

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 13:17-14:45. PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Brave Spies. JUNIOR TOPIC—Scouting Through the Promised Land.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Brave and the Cowardly Scouts.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Faith Gives Courage.

1. The Spies Sent Out (13:17-20).

Less than two years have passed since the Israelites were delivered from Egyptian bondage. They are now at Kadesh-barnea within sight of the Promised Land. Moses urged them to go in and take immediate possession (Deut. 1:21). But they failed to do so because of unbelief (Heb. 3:19). The record in Deuteronomy 1:19-25 shows that God did not take the initiative in sending out the spies, but that the people, because of lack of faith, made the request. There was a threefold purpose in sending out the spies:

1. To see whether the land was as God had told them (v. 13).

2. To see whether the people who dwell there were strong or weak, few or many (v. 18).

3. And to see whether the cities were made up of strongholds or of tents (v. 19).

11. The Commission Executed (13:21-23).

They entered the land from the south and traversed it to its northern limits. On their return they gathered some specimens of fruit.

11. The Spies Rendered Reports (13:26-33).

On their return this committee of explorers rendered both a majority and minority report to the entire congregation (v. 26).

1. The majority report (vv. 26-29).

a. "The land floweth with milk and honey" (v. 27).

b. The people who live there are strong (v. 28).

c. The people live in walled cities (v. 28).

d. The land is inhabited by giants (v. 28 cf. v. 33). In comparison with the inhabitants they saw themselves as grasshoppers. Furthermore, they saw the people so distributed that it seemed impossible to conquer them.

2. The minority report (vv. 30-33).

This report in part agreed with the first. It did not ignore the difficulties nor dispute the facts, but it did deny the conclusion of the majority. They did not minimize the task before them, but asserted that with God's help they were well able to get possession of the land, and therefore urged immediate action.

IV. The Rebellion of the People. (14:1-44).

1. This rebellion began by crying (vv. 1-3). They even wished that they had died in the wilderness or in Egypt. God took them at their word. He sent them back to wander in the wilderness for thirty-eight years, during which time all of that generation died except Caleb and Joshua.

2. Proposition to return to Egypt (vv. 4-10). They proposed to select a captain as their leader. Joshua and Caleb protested against this, which so exasperated the people that they were about to stone them when God manifested his glory before all Israel in vindication of the loyalty of Joshua and Caleb.

3. God's wrath upon the people (vv. 11, 12). Because of their unbelief God purposed to smite them with pestilence, disinherit them, and supplant them with a nation mightier than they.

4. Moses' intercession in behalf of the people (vv. 13-19). Moses plead with God against this judgment because the Egyptians would hear of it and blaspheme and this they would pass on to the other nations, saying that God was not able to bring them into the land.

5. The Lord's response to Moses' plea (vv. 20-26). He assured Moses that he had granted pardon according to his intercession but told him that although he would bring them into the land according to his promise, yet with the exception of Joshua and Caleb the men of that generation should be debarred.

6. The presumption of the people (vv. 40-44). Having in unbelief refused to go up at the command of Moses, they now in presumption go.

V. The People Smitten by the Amalekites and Canaanites (v. 45).

Because the people refused to heed Moses and presumptuously attempted to go up, God permitted the Amalekites and Canaanites to come down upon them to their destruction.

"I know from experience," says the cookery expert of Western Home Monthly, "that Magic makes most baked dishes look and taste better. Its uniform leavening quality gives dependable baking results."

And Miss Dutton's praise of Magic is seconded by the majority of dietitians and cookery experts throughout the Dominion. They use Magic exclusively because they know it is pure, and always uniform.

Canadian housewives, too, prefer Magic. In fact, Magic outsells all other baking powders combined.

For luscious layer cakes, light, tender biscuits, delicious pastry—follow Miss Dutton's advice. Use Magic Baking Powder.

CHAPTER VI—After making arrangements with Hardsock and old Dad Pence to look after Joyce's safety
while she is alone at the MacMillan
post (her father being jailed at Port Endurance), Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe. As the days
pass and she does not hear from him,
Joyce is heartick for Alan. She questions Hardsock when the latter pays
her one of his brief calls, and from what Hardsock tells her she believes
final arrangements for the wedding
have been made.

CHAPTER VII—On his journey, Al-
an runs across "Buzard" Featherof,
famous aviator of the World war, and
now "on his own," with a dilapidated
machine. Affinity of spirit draws them
together, and Alan enlists "Buzard"
in the enterprise. Lacking sufficient funds to procure equipment, they look for government stores, starting their pursuit of the bandits, themselves criminals in the eyes of the law.

The name and description of reatn-erof meant nothing to Haskell, but the description of the other person made him thoughtful. Tall, rangy, sandy-haired, gray-eyed, with a long prominent scar across his left temple—that description would fit Alan Baker to a dot. And Baker had gone south and might conceivably have reached Edmonton.

Haskell pondered this possibility a minute and then dismissed it. It was Bill Hardsock who innocently opened his eyes to the truth.

Knocking, entering, standing before
the desk, Bill requested:

"Sir, if you don't mind, I've got three days free time coming to me,
and if you don't mind I'd like to take them now. I'd like to have them in a row, if you don't mind—"

"I'm short of men as it is," Haskell cut him off. "You can't go. That's that!"

It wasn't "that" for Bill. Refusing to be driven out, he planted himself
there wide-legged and pleaded for his

So Baker had not given up! He was out of service, but he was coming back to finish with those bandits.
Haskell's knowledge of Baker's grim persistent nature and the man's uncanny wisdom in a wilderness man-hunt, whispered to him: "And he'll corner them, too! He'll run those men down! He's going to have a showdown fight with them."

For a moment he was staggered by the man's superb daring. For a moment, forgetting personal scores between himself and Baker, he felt an admiration for this magnificent attempt.

Then, as he saw deeper into the consequences of this feat, his admiration darkened and flickered out. How would it look for the ex-sergeant to capture or kill those men, or at least corner them and go down fighting?
What would the higher officials have to say about that?

All his hatred and jealousy of Baker flared up. Not only was this man going to marry the girl he loved; this relentless sergeant, rising out of a crushing defeat, was going to show him up and make his very name a joke throughout the Force.

"You are instructed—" he still heard those crackling words flashing
up across the wilderness from Edmonton—"to capture that plane and to arrest those criminals on sight." Baker was a criminal, a wanted man,

subject to arrest, certain of a penitentary sentence! Somewhere to the south he was flying up across the lattudes. He had a rendezvous somewhere with Hardsock.

Hardsock could be trailed to that meeting place! The plane could be captured, Baker arrested, sent up for a term. . . .

Presently Haskell turned around,
smiling pleasantly. "I was disgruntled about something when you first came in, corporal. You really have patrolled hard for several months. I'm sorry I snapped at you. You can have four three days off whenever you like.
You want to start tomorrow?" And when Bill nodded eagerly: "Very well,
I'll throw in the rest of this evening,
oo. By the way, when you go past parracks ask Whipple to stop down here."

"Snakes!" Bill breathed to himself,
as he thanked Haskell and went out
he door. "That Spring-heel Johnny must be winding up to ask a favor of me, or something. But I've got my three days to help Alan out. Lord, I hope Alan shows up during my free time. He might maybe let me go along on his trick."

With no suspicion of the ugly truth,
he turned up the twilight slope.

When Whipple came in, Haskell ordered him to close the door and pull down the window, to guard against possible eavesdropping. Then he tersely explained the situation. He added:

"Hardsock will probably steal some more gasoline and oil tonight. What he's already stolen isn't enough for a plane to do much maneuvering on. I want you to watch him stealing that stuff so that you can later be a witness. He'll probably have time to take those drums only a couple miles from here tonight. Tomorrow he'll take all of it on to the place where he's to meet Baker. He's been sneaking it away little by little when he had the chance, and hiding it close by; but during his three days he'll take it to the meeting place."

"You go down to the river bank now to those two tepees and get that Indian called Ogi-Tomax. You remember Hardsock thrashed him one time
last winter for carrying a squaw-club and beating his wife. He's got a grudge against Hardsock, he'll have a personal interest in this, he's just the man we want. Take a carton of my cigarettes with you and a little rum
as a silence present. I'll personally pay him five dollars a day. Do you understand so far?"

Whipple nodded. Haskell went on:
"You and the Indian are to shadow Hardsock tonight and tomorrow. Find out where he's taking that stuff and where he's going to meet Baker. As soon as you do that, whip back here
and report to me."

It was late, the next evening before Whipple returned. He came back tired, bedraggled, but with electric news.

He and the Indian had watched Bill
steal more gas and oil from the stores.
They had shadowed him to the temporary cache two miles up the Mackenzie. There he had loaded his canoe to the gunwales with the drums and cans and had taken them all to a big lake twenty miles up the river.

He had cached the fuel on a head-land called Goose point; and was waiting there without the faintest suspicion that he had been trailed and was being watched. The Indian, lying low back in the willows, was keeping an eye on him.

As Haskell listened to the report,
he forgot the haggard day and night

just passed. He had scarcely dared hope for such news as this.

After careful thought, guarding against any slip-up, he ordered Whipple: "Go get your rifle and belt-gun.
I'll take mine, too. We'll go up there in the launch. You can drive it. We'll capture Hardsock and those supplies.
That'll be that. Then we'll wait there.
The plane'll be alone in a couple days.
We'll keep the launch in cover close
by. When the machine lights down and they go ashore to get the supplies, we'll ram it and put it out of commission. Then we'll have Baker and this Featherof—and we'll put them
where the dogs won't bite 'em!"

After his despair of their last week,
after his helpless festering anger at Baker, it was a new lease on hope to know he was going to smash Baker's venture and throw him into prison
and make his marriage to Elizabeth impossible! Baker was walking all unknowingly into a deadly trap. Walking into arrest and criminal disgrace and prison. He would be lucky to get off with a sentence of two years. That was the statute minimum for his offense.

Buckling on his belt-gun, Haskell snuffed the candles and went out of his cabin—on the easiest, most exultant, most deadly certain trip he had ever made.

CHAPTER IX

Wings Over the Wilderness

On that first day of flight, as dawn broke full and the sun chased away a layer of gossamer clouds beneath the White Speedair, Alan looked down with marveling eyes at a strange panorama. Evergreen forestry, silvery lakes and silvery network of rivers far below, swam past at a speed to amaze him. In thirty minutes he was covering a distance which would take a whole day's hard traveling by canoe or komatik.

Knowing that if he and Buzard showed up at a police post or larger trading center, it would mean a quick and sorry end of their flight, Alan planned to avoid such places religiously. He had a conviction that he and Buzard were "wanted." They had left too many tracks in Edmonton—

clews that would speedily be followed up. The police there, a wise live outfit, had certainly connected them with the theft of all that government property and had radioed instructions for their arrest.

Eventually he and Buzard were going to be caught. It was as inevitable as sunset. Soon or late they would have to return to civilization and face
the music. To Alan the worst of it was that Buzard was going to pay a heavy price for helping him on this thankless job. For himself he did not greatly care; he hardly thought of
it. . . . He was headed north again,
on his last patrol, his greatest patrol.
As they worked on north, they made moderately good time, but only by incessant care and worry. Engine trouble caused them delay. Again and again they sat down on some unknown river or lake and sweated for hours over the old motor. Fuel was a constant problem. Avoiding Mounted detachments and Royal Signal corps stations like the plague, they dared stop only at wilderness-buried posts
where radios were unlikely and no police handy. They could never be certain of getting fuel, and what they did get was usually half kerosene.

Alan was looking forward to his rendezvous with Bill as the end of all this worry about gas and oil. Besides the fuel there at Goose point,
Bill had promised to cache some supplies up the Alooska near Joyce's home.

Alan was fervently looking ahead
to meeting Bill at En Traverse lake, to getting those precious supplies, to seeing Joyce again there on the Big Alooska. All of his loyalty to the sister of his dead partner could not keep him from comparing Joyce's vital spirited personality with Elizabeth's leisure-bored ennui, and Joyce's
two years of heroic sacrifice with Elizabeth's idle deliberate dependence.

On their last evening, worn out by a day of engine trouble and head winds and blinding rains, they alighted in a little spruce-burled lake on Silver-tip river, a short hundred miles south of Fort Endurance. Anchoring the plane, they paddled ashore, cooked a warm meal, and rolled up in their blankets for a few hours of desperately needed rest.

"Tomorrow's the day of days," Buzard remarked, thinking of the supplies and a base to maneuver from.

"It's the day of days," Alan agreed,
but he was thinking of Joyce running down the path, bareheaded in the sun, to greet them. Tomorrow he would know if she was safe. Tomorrow, after the rendezvous with Bill, the White Speedair would be dropping down upon the Big Alooska.

Buzard was asleep almost instantly, but Alan, tossing in a useless attempt to sleep, finally got up, built a tiny fire, and sat beside it, thinking,
a dead pipe in his teeth.

As he sat there under the solemn spruces, he tried to look steadily at his looming marriage to Elizabeth, and decide his course. No longer blinded by idealization of her as a girl, he saw

now, with pitiless insight, that all along she had not wanted him unless he had a good income and was "out of the North. She might love him as well as she had ever loved anybody;
but to her he was not greatly more than a means of getting what she wanted out of life.

DEANERY CONVENTION OF W. A. AT LAKEFIELD

A year ago at Ste. Agathe at the Annual Convention, the ladies of Trinity Branch of the W. A. invited the members of the Deanery to Lakefield for this year's Annual Conference.

The invitation was accepted, and the large gathering which assembled last Thursday testified to the fact that Lakefield ladies were warranted in undertaking such a serious responsibility.

Arundel, Buckingham, De Ramsay, Grenville, Calumet, Lachute, New Glasgow, Rawdon, Morin Heights, St. Andrews E. and several others, all sent splendid deputations.

At the 10.30 a.m. service, Archdeacon Overing and Rev. Allan E. Mount officiated, and many additional seats had to be brought into the church to accommodate the large congregation. The weather was bright and the heat somewhat oppressive, but one could not but be impressed by the earnest reverence, the beautiful decoration, and the hearty singing. Miss Edith Powles most efficiently presided at the organ.

The luncheon which followed in the Gibb Parish Hall was a success in every way. Although the Lakefield Branch is not strong numerically, the planning and preparation had been so carefully attended to that all passed off most successfully; and many words of appreciation and congratulation were expressed by the visiting friends. That such a small band of ladies could undertake and bring to a successful culmination this undertaking, is a tangible proof as to what can be done when God's blessing is on willing hearts and ready hands.

The following clergymen were present besides Archdeacon Overing and Allan E. Mount: Messrs. Coleman, of Montreal; Lummis, of Valleyfield; Baugh, of Morin Heights; Ball, of New Glasgow; Booy, of St. Andrews East; Brueton, of Grenville and Phillips, of Arundel.

The presence of Mrs. Ferrabee, Dom. Pres., was a distinction not often enjoyed by country conventions, and was much appreciated. Mrs. Strachan, Dis. Pres., and Miss Leders, Sec., were as usual, earnest and enthusiastic, as such leaders have to be.

A bountiful supper was served following the afternoon session.

The minister in charge on Sunday following expressed his grateful appreciation to the ladies for their successful efforts.

Mr. Kains blames the Council for most of these ills, but they are not altogether to blame. We are much to blame ourselves, because there is not the interest taken in choosing the proper men for councillors, men to look after our interests in different parts of the county,—and to see that they are elected. Some of us do not even know who is the Mayor or who are the councillors, and until we take more interest in municipal affairs, we shall still have the old-fashioned way of getting in, of winning office—and of levying taxes—the best way they can. Very likely some of your readers may suggest a better remedy than this. If so, by all means let us have it, so that we may discover some way of improving our Property without being taxed for it.

Sir George Perley Celebrates 75th. Birthday

Premier Bennett First to Offer Congratulations.

Celebrating his 75th birthday, Rt. Hon. Sir George Perley was greeted with many messages of congratulation on Monday. The first to extend his felicitations was Prime Minister R. B. Bennett. Colleagues in the Cabinet joined in the birthday greetings. Looking the picture of health, the former Canadian High Commissioner to London attended Cabinet Council meetings that day. His career has been long and notable. Back in 1902, Sir George first entered the House of Commons as member for this County, and still ably represents the constituency in Parliament. The people of Argenteuil, who have followed Sir George's career with a degree of pride, and hold for him a particular affection and respect, will join with The Watchman in extending warmest congratulations from this community.

It is unwise to wait until a child starts to school to find out if he has any defects. Many parents secure the advice of the family doctor or from their local Health Unit during the pre-school years and so, when school time comes, their child is physically prepared.

Cow testing work is carried out by the Dominion Live Stock Branch in only six of the nine provinces, this work being carried out in the other three provinces under the direction of the provincial department of Agriculture. Quebec leads with 125 associations, 1,425 herds and 14,372 cows.

During the past six years there has been an increase of 16,928 cows recorded for periods of eight or more months, with an increase in production of 817 pounds of milk and 55.78 pounds of butter-fat per cow. During the year 1931 there were 3,152 more cows with records of 300 pounds of butter-fat and upwards than in 1928.

The marriage of Pauline Maud daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Robinson, to Mr. J. Gladioli, astors and ferns were used as decorations in the church. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. A. Oxley, wore a gown of navy blue velvet trimmed with touches of silver grey, and slippers to match and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and maiden hair fern. Mr. Allister Innes, acted as best man. Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Innes left by motor for the New England States, the bride wearing a navy blue cloth coat trimmed with grey squirrel over her wedding gown. Upon their return they will reside in Montreal.

Thanksgiving Day this year will be on Monday, Oct. 10th. Since, by act of Parliament, Thanksgiving was divorced from the observance of the Armistice anniversary, the desire is to have the former festival a month ahead of Remembrance Day, Nov. 11.

Automobile Wrecked

Rented Machine Overturned into River.

A 1930 Ford Sedan, owned by V. Marchand of Grace Street, met disaster at Brownsburg on Sunday evening last. The automobile had been rented by J. Campeau, who was driving from Staynerville to Brownsburg when the mishap occurred. In turning into Joseph St. toward the D. C. Co. Factory, Campeau took the corner precariously and the car turned over into the West River. The driver sustained minor cuts on his face, and the auto was completely wrecked. It was later towed to Lachute by a service truck from Deacon's Garage.

Tomasini Scores Another Triumph

European Operatic Star Affords Rare Pleasure to Local Audience.

Anlon Young at his best, as Alfredo Tomasini, operatic baritone, was warmly received by a select and appreciative audience in the Auditorium, Saturday night last. The attendance, although not remarkable in numbers, evidenced a fine enthusiasm for one of the highest class recitals ever heard in Lachute.

Mrs. Young furnished a brilliant accompaniment to her husband's solos, showing a skill at the piano only equalled by Tomasini's unquestioned vocal talent—and, in fairness to the artist, his long and arduous training. Anlon Young is proficient in French and Italian and a passing conversationalist in German but his long repertoire of European operas and song selections is evidence of a memory most surprising to his audiences.

The program included temperamental songs and the better known opera selections, grouped as to language. And although their text was not entirely understood throughout the audience, there was no doubt as to the nature or mood of these themes, which reflected unmistakably in Tomasini's varying expression, stimulatingly the emotions from pathos to hilarity, and from pleading to exhortation.

Following the Italian, German and French presentations, the English selections evoked perhaps the heartiest applause, and Tomasini obliged repeatedly with encores of well-known and popular items, and left his reluctant listeners with a strange sense of atmosphere—the classical atmosphere of Bohemia and the arts, of distant Europe and the traditions of music. But more notably, he left the impression of a master singer in his friendly and congenial person.

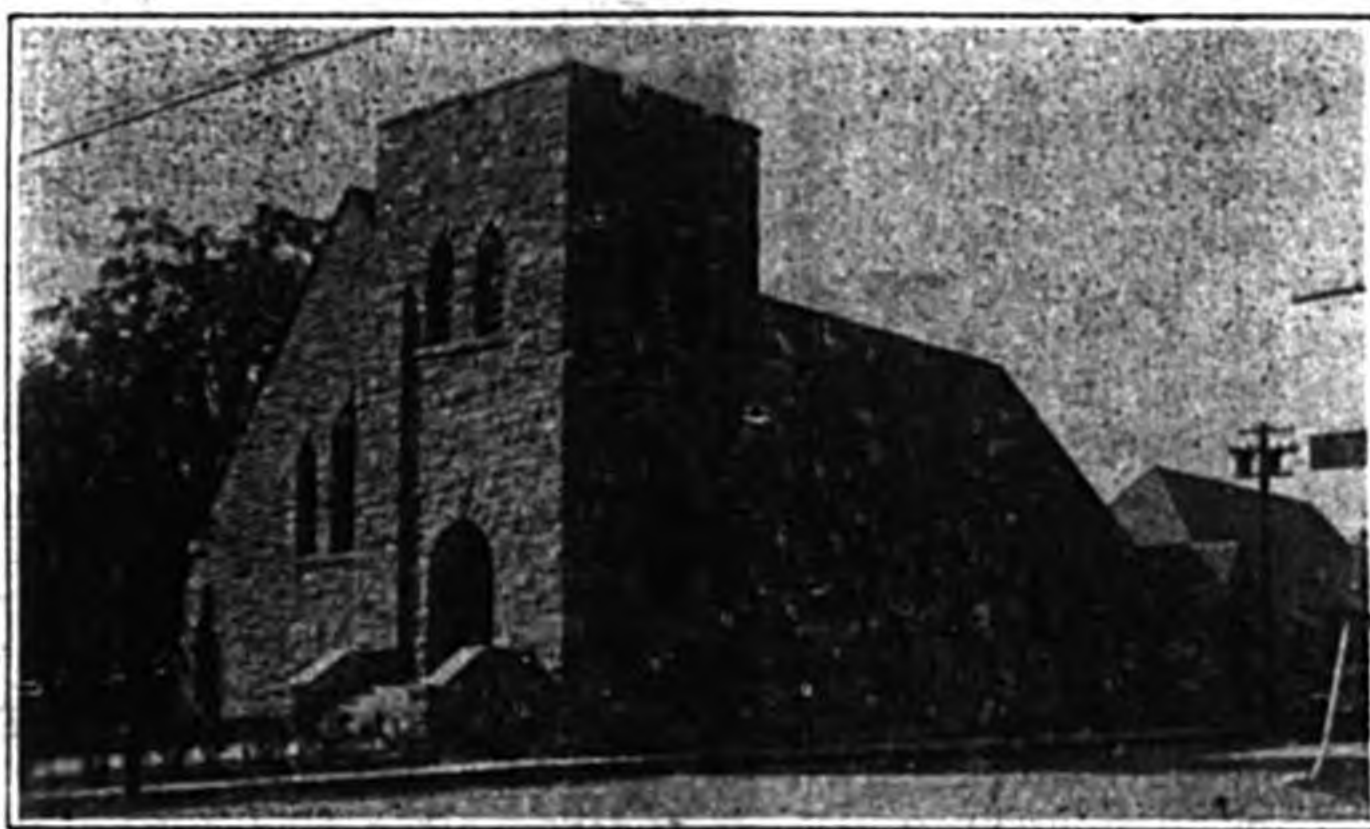

Mr. and Mrs. Young leave St. Andrews shortly where they have spent the past summer and made a wide circle of friends. But they leave assured of the warmest welcome, should they return in future to these parts.

Moderator Here for Dedication of Margaret Rodger Memorial Church

Presbyterian Congregation and Friends in Celebration Impressive Ceremonies in Lachute

"In this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of Hosts."

It was a new church. There could be no contradiction: one had many times walked by it when in course of construction. First the foundation was laid; then these walls of granite arose, after which the tower took upon itself form and shape and, finally, the roof was built and completed. Men had diligently applied their tools, the sound of mighty hammering was continuous and then, out of dust and chaos, was raised the Temple of the living God in beauty and noble architecture.

It was a new church and yet, entering for this first service of praise and thanksgiving, it seemed that after all we were mistaken. The sunlight streamed through the arched windows, falling gently upon the bowed heads of a devout people gathered there for worship. It was the moment for private prayer and there was a holy silence only broken by the whisper of the gentle summer breeze outdoors. No, here there was nothing new; instead there was the breath of an eternal and everlasting peace, revealing not a beginning but a continuance of the faith which led our fathers, and their fathers before them, to so build for the glory of God and His most wondrous service.

So it seemed that this beautiful place of worship was not new at all; that only those parts which had been fashioned by the hand of man and wrought with so much skill and care, were of the present; for the great Master Builder, Himself, in supervising and controlling every effort made, must need teach His people life's greatest truth: "Out of the past have I called My church."

The whisper of the breeze had, it seemed, grown into notes of sublime and sweetest music coming to us over the bridge of time so that, whether we would or no, we must recall those years in our lives when the light of happiness was mingled with the shadow of sorrow, until both were merged into the soft twilight of the peace of God.

Upon the quiet of the sabbath morning had come a joyful and spiritual influence, making of these assembled children of the Father a confident and united people. What of the doubts, troubles, and perplexities of a torn and disgruntled world? For a moment these things are forgotten, for they have faded into the obscurity where they rightly belong; they can have no part or place in this supreme hour when a new, or an old, house of God has been raised to His everlasting honour and for His worship both now and in the many, many years to come.

When eventide draws near, when the sun sets, when the old and impoverished pass by, when the careless and indifferent hurry along; yes, when even the tired little children pause for a moment in its shadow, the grey stone tower of this church will stand for a sure and certain sign that—

"This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of Heaven."

It was somewhat in this spirit, conveyed in the foregoing impressions by an observer from the Watchman office,—that people gathered on Sunday for the auspicious opening of this Church. It will remain a joyful memory for all whose hearts are in the Presbyterian denomination or in the religious welfare of this community at large. For, since the laying of the corner stone on May 14th., folks have watched eagerly, and a congregation has awaited anxiously, the opening of its new church home.

Long before the hour of service friends from far and near began to gather, and it was not long before the new edifice was taxed to capacity.

The service was impressive throughout, the Rev. Henry Cousens being assisted by Rev. R. L. Ballantyne, of St. Andrews East, and the Rev. R. Johnston, D.D., of Ottawa, Moderator of the Presbyterian Assembly, who also preached the Dedication sermon.

No change is to be made in the size of Canadian one-dollar bills, the Finance Department stated last week. Recent rumor said the Canadian bill would be cut down in size, much after the style of the smaller United States bills.

Fire in Attic

A chimney fire occurred on Berry Street last Saturday morning in a dwelling house occupied by Mr. Jos. Lafontaine. The outbreak was of minor consequence, and everything appearing in order, the Fire Brigade withdrew from the scene. A defect in the brick chimney, however, must have started a mouldering in the attic, for later, towards 5.30 p.m., the fire fighters were summoned again. They found a stubborn blaze under the roof of the house, which was duly extinguished with a single stream from the hose line. Damage to the property was estimated at between $200. and $300.

Successful Field Day in Lachute

The farmers who gathered at the Illustration Station of S. R. Smith, at Lachute, on last Monday afternoon showed keen interest in the work being conducted on this farm.

The visitors inspected the several divisions of the farm, starting with the summer fallow where Mr. Chauvin explained the methods employed to keep quack grass under control. In the newly seeded field a distinct difference was noted in the extra growth of Alfalfa where commercial fertilizer was used. Mr. Moynan explained the experimental work being conducted on the various stations across Canada.

A new phase of work was started last spring when a pasture field was divided into two sections, on one section commercial fertilizer was applied, the other being used as a check. The fertilized field pastured the same number of cows nearly twice as long as the check field. The daily milk flow was also greater from the fertilized field.

Mr. Muir gave a very interesting talk on dairy cattle. He strongly favored good cows, well fed on home grown feeds. He also congratulated the farmers of Argenteuil for having all their cattle tested for tuberculosis under the Area plan, and hoped that very soon other troubles in cattle would be dealt with under the same system.

Work on the High School extension indicates that this part of the building will be ready for occupancy by October first, as was expected. The heating and plumbing arrangements are completed, and hardwood floors will be laid tonight with the exception of one room. The carpenters are expected to finish work in a few days, and during next week, varnishing and painting will proceed in the interior.

District correspondence is, in several cases, arriving too late to receive our best attention, a number of dispatches having reached this office as late as Wednesday night, this week and last. The Watchman would request its good contributors, once again, to have copy delivered as early as possible each week—not later than by Tuesday evening's mail.

Lachute Athletes Again Successful

Win Successes in Vankleek Hill and Hawkesbury Sports.

Lachute's younger athletes have won notable successes during the past week at district sports meets.

At the Vankleek Hill Fair sports, Joey Bernier, local star of the high-jump and a keen athlete, carried off the laurels in the senior high-jumping event, taking first prize at 5ft. 7 1/4 in., which, however, does not reach his highest mark in previous contests.

Ken Falconer, running in the 100 yard dash for boys 16 and under, took second place on this same occasion.

At Hawkesbury, in the Labor Day Sports Meet, Winston Drew star sprinter, took four trophies in a fine exhibition of running. The presentations included two cups, a statuette, and a medal. Winston triumphed in the mile and the half mile, breasting the tape well ahead of his competitors. He also took second in the 440 yards, and running with Allan Graham, was victorious in the 880 yards relay. Graham, a Cushing lad, took first place in 3 solo events, 100, 220 and 440 yards respectively.

Ministerial Association Meets at Brownsburg

A meeting of the Ottawa Valley Ministerial Association was held in the United Church at Brownsburg, on Tuesday of last week. Rev. Dr. H. C. Sutherland of L'Orignal gave the report of the program committee, and after some discussion, the meeting agreed that the list of subjects be given each member and that all matters in this connection be completed at the next meeting, which is to be held at Kirk Hill, on Monday, Oct. 3.

An excellent paper on "Astronomy" was given by Rev. E. D. Mitchell. He gave interesting information regarding the solar system, and the eclipse of the sun, the record of three of which he quoted from Holy Writ.

The members at the meeting were Rev. A. E. Hagar, Brownsburg, who presided; Rev. Dr. H. C. Sutherland, of L'Orignal; Rev. Dr. J. R. MacLeod, of Lachute; Rev. R. H. McKelvey, Brodie; Rev. L. M. Somerville, Glen Sandfield; Rev. D. M. MacLeod, Alexandria; Rev. George Irvine, Williamstown; Rev. E. D. Mitchell, Vankleek Hill; Rev. J. W. Maclean, Cushing, Que.; Rev. J. J. Macaskill, of St. Andrews East; Rev. E. G. Baxter, Rev. R. McEachern and Rev. C. G. Poitras, of Brownsburg; Rev. C. K. Matthewsson, Kirk Hill; Dr. Wales and the Rev. H. Kay, of St. Andrews East.

History of Grenville Parish

Last week an account of the building of St. Matthew's Church at Grenville, was given. Let us try to imagine what the interior was like. The walls were plastered and whitewashed. In the Chancel were two high pulpits. In the right (south) one, the clergyman read the prayers, wearing his surplice. Before the sermon he retired into the Vestry, changed his surplice for a black gown and proceeded around the back of the altar to the pulpit on the left (north) where he preached. At the back of the altar was a high screen bearing the Ten Commandments, the Creed and the Lord's Prayer. The Church was lighted by candles (1860—1 lb. candles, one shilling). The Tower had no spire; this was not put on until the seventies.

In 1846 Mr. Abbott resigned being followed by the Rev. E. G. Sutton. He was followed in 1847 by the Rev. Chas. Forest. (Continued on Page 4)

I'M GLAD THERE'S A CHURCH NEAR MY HOME

By Edgar A. Guest

The church stands as a symbol of the finest aims and aspirations of the human heart.

The church has outlived persecution from without and open disloyalty from within. It has withstood bitter and unrelenting attacks of atheists and the cynics of every age. It has outlived changing times of peace and war, prosperity and depression, and many a fad and fancy.

God Himself builds no churches. The oldest church in the world was built by men and women who believed in God and sacrificed their personal pleasures for that house of worship. Every church that has ever been erected since then has been reared by the same courage and devotion.

Churches do not appear miraculously. Now and then one man of great wealth has made a gift to his neighborhood of a church. I know one such case, but in the main almost every church is a group contribution. I think it is only fair to say that the ideas back of those contributions were lofty. Some of those men and women may themselves have later made a mess of life. Clergymen have been known to err. One of the most brilliant ministers I have ever known was obliged to leave his pulpit in disgrace. It was tragic and unfortunate.

But I'll say this for him, in none of his public utterances did he ever urge his weakness upon others. He did not try to lead the young astray. He had not been hired to deceive or delude, and when it became apparent to the group who paid him his salary that he was not squaring his life to his teachings, he was dismissed. These things are apt to occur in little churches and in big. They hurt the cause of the church, but they do not, in any way, affect its purpose.

A church to me is a symbol of faith in the life eternal. It typifies decency, kindness and fair dealing. It offers comfort to the sorrowing. With the golden rule it would make neighbors of us all.

The poorest sermon I ever heard had no profanity in it. Dull though it seemed to me to be, it would not in the slightest have altered for the worse the youngest member of the congregation who listened to it. Brilliant parson and tedious have this in common—both earnestly are striving to persuade men to cleaner living.

For that reason I like to see the downtown churches holding their places. I seem good to me that here and there amid the rush of traffic there should remain a building that has no bargains to offer and no shop window display.

The church is a hospital for sick and weary souls. It is making a battle not for its own sake, but for the sake of others.

A church in any neighborhood is an asset. Any street is better for its presence.

A church-goer may sometimes cheat his neighbor; he may lie to serve his own advantage; he may be petty and narrow and bigoted; he may not represent his creed well nor be a worthy example of his faith, but whatever his sin may be he does not contribute to a church to glorify that sin. He sends his children to Sunday School for noble purposes. He wants his children to be clean and kindly and honest; he wants them to avoid his weakness and his mistakes.

Nor did he learn his viciousness in the church. He acquired that in spite of her teachings.

The church-goer who wrongs another has forgotten his church.

The worst elements of mankind build nothing. I have never known a crook who would recommend his way of living. Boys drift into crime. The hard-boiled gangster would keep them from it if he could. No embezzler wants his child to embezzle.

The church stands against all the errors and blunders of life. It is the united voice of a group of people who want their children to know what is best. It is a plea in brick and stone or board for all that is most worth while. It offers to give more than it asks. It would end murder and theft and jealousy and hatred; it would keep men out of prison, not send them there; it tries its best to comfort the bereaved and it works without cunning or connivance.

It is more often than not in debt, but strangely enough more business houses than churches fail. With the pennies and the nickles and the dimes the churches continue to exist struggling against all the odds to lift men up.

There never was a church erected to drag men down.

For that reason whatever the church may be, I like to see it. The street is better for its presence.

CHRISTIAN-SCIENCE LESSON-SERMON

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in the Christian Science churches for Sunday, September 18.

Golden Text: "Every man is brutish in his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image; for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them." (Jeremiah 10: 14.)

Among the citations comprised in the Lesson-Sermon is the following verse from the Bible: "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens, and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." (II Peter 3: 13).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Nothing we can say or believe regarding matter is immortal, for matter is temporal and is therefore a mortal phenomenon, a human concept, sometimes beautiful, always erroneous." "Denial of the claims of matter is a great step towards the joys of Spirit, towards human freedom and the final triumph over the body." (Pages 277, 242.)

ABOUT YOUR MOTHER

Dear Boys,—

I would like to say a few words to you this week about Your Mother, and in consequence have set myself rather a difficult task. Perhaps I shall get along better if I put the matter before you like this:—

What Does your Mother Think of You?

I wonder how many boys have asked themselves that question.

I am afraid most of you, especially if you are living in that truly wonderful period between the age of 12 and 15 years, have just looked on your mother as a very necessary part of your life, and the fact that you love each other very, very much has been for you all sufficient.

Now if you think that because your mother loves you she is blind to a great many of your faults, you are fooling yourself. There was a small boy once who was punished by his teacher for continually breaking school rules. "What would your mother say if she knew of your behaviour?" he was asked. The little lad looked up, his eyes swimming with tears, "She would not believe it, she loves me" he replied.

And almost at the same time his mother was writing to his Father, "I do wish Eric would be a better boy."

Now I want to tell you something. You can get away with quite a lot of little things in school; you can play tricks on your companions and even at times, if you are lucky, on your teachers; but you never can deceive your Mother and for this reason she knows you better than you know yourself.

If you don't believe this then you are just an ignoramus, which (in case you do not know the meaning of this word) means a very silly little boy.

What does your Mother think of You?

I like the story of the officer in the British army who, during the late war, was presented by the King with the V.C., which as you know is the very highest award in the Empire for bravery on the field of battle. No sooner had he received this great honour than he hurried away from the Palace to obtain from his mother her congratulations. When this lady was asked if she was proud of her distinguished son she is reported to have said, "Proud, but Not at All Surprised. I knew my boy!"

Listen. There are other battles than those of war in which we can gain great and honourable victories. What about the overcoming of selfishness, slackness, and that very particular weakness which you know, is just about smashing your prospects? And above all, never cease to remember that in your moments of doubt, in your periods of despondency, there will be no one who will await more anxiously, or with such unwavering trust and confidence for your final and most glorious triumph, than your Mother.

Again I tell you that, if you don't believe this, you are fooling yourself.

What do you think of your mother? She is Great.

What does she think of you? "He is my Son.".....

Let us leave it at that.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 17.

"Now what can that be?" said Capt. Pat. impatiently, looking rather startled at this sudden interruption of their conversation. But his chief officer wasted no time in idle speculation as with swift strides he was at the door and in a moment of time had flung it open.

Hot and panting and with uniform all covered in dust as if he had just come from the deepest part of the ship's hold, Jack almost tumbled into the room.

"Thank goodness Uncle—Sir, I mean," he stammered, "I have found you here! I have some awful news to tell you and it is only by chance I know it."

"Perhaps you will be able to give us your news, whatever it is, much better if you sit down," remarked Mr. Williams in his cool incisive manner, though there had sprung a light in his eyes, as if he already knew what was coming and half expected some vague suspicion of his own to be confirmed.

With a grateful look in his direction Jack obeyed and, pausing for a moment to collect himself, he went on,—

"I don't know if I told you, Sir, that before we sailed Babs and I took a walk, that day you remember, when after breakfast you told us to do so."

Capt. Pat. nodded but did not interrupt.

"Well, we had not gone very far when, coming down the steps of a large building a man ran into us; he was in a hurry and swore at me for getting in his way. I said I was sorry, and as he stooped to pick up some papers that his collision with me had made him drop, I saw his face clearly. It was so fierce and angry-looking that it stuck in my memory, particularly so as he was rude and abusive over what I thought after all a very small matter. However, it is likely that I would have forgotten all about him, indeed I had nearly done so when—and here the youngster lowered his voice to a whisper—"I discovered him here on the Ship, and he means mischief."

The boy gave a hasty look around as if fearing immediate interruption, and continued, "A little while ago when checking up some of those hardware cases in number three hold, I heard voices speaking very softly. At first the sound did not interest me until I remembered that it was against orders for anyone to be there at all, unless like myself, they were on duty. Then I became curious, while something urged me not to expose myself too soon. Creeping round several corners, where the cargo was so arranged that it made an excellent shield against observation, I was able to get fairly near to the speakers, but though I could see their faces quite clearly, I could not gather all that they were saying. There were three of them, Sir, one being the man I have been telling you of. It amazed me how they had come down there without a lantern and they must have concluded that the one I used was a permanent light."

"Did they know that you were there?" interrupted Mr. Williams.

"I don't think so Sir, in fact I am sure they did not, even when I put the lantern out."

"Why did you do that?" queried Capt. Pat.

"Because, Sir, in moving a little forward to hear better what they were talking about I was careless enough to knock over a screw hammer which fell with such a loud crash that I knew my discovery was certain."

"And you were afraid of being discovered, Why?"

Jack's face went white and his lips trembled. "Sir, I heard the man I met on the quay tell the other two that there was only one thing to be done, and that was to kill the officers and take the ship."

"Mutiny, my God!" exclaimed his uncle "and did you hear anything more this precious gang were discussing?"

"Nothing much Sir, for after I had put out the light I got away as quickly as possible."

"But did you hear Anything?" persisted the Commander. "Only, Sir, something about A Map and some Treasure; and they mean to have Both."

Even at that serious moment, when their lives were in extreme danger, Capt. Pat. could not refrain from a chuckle of satisfaction. "Well, well! to think of that now! My story is not so fantastic after all, Mr. Chief. Eh?"

"Perhaps not, Sir," was the calm reply, "Let us hope it will have no tragic ending."

Here and There

Maintaining her position among world nations as a producer of minerals, Canada led the world in the production of nickel and asbestos in 1931, came second in gold, platinum metals and cobalt, third in silver and fourth in refined zinc.

Mystery cruises, so popular out of New York, Southampton and Montreal, have come to the Pacific Coast, being ushered in there by the trim little coastal liner "Princess Patricia," of the Canadian Pacific service, which took the first of these cruises recently. The ship had a full sailing list.

The Canadian Open Golf Championship, third of the ace contests figuring yearly in the Royal and Ancient game, will be staged on the course of the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, next year, word to that effect having been received by the secretary of the links from the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

Seventy-seven per cent. of wheat and 63 per cent. of oats and barley in the three western provinces were harvested by September 3, according to the report issued on that date from the general agricultural department, Canadian Pacific Railway, Winnipeg. This result was reached in spite of the halt in harvesting operations due to heavy rains in wide sections of the Prairie Provinces.

All records for the story of the "big one that got away" were broken recently when a well-known fisherman hooked a beaver in Vermilion Lakes and played it for five minutes after which the tradition was fulfilled with loss of fly and leader. The hero of the exploit was S. C. Bennett, of Toronto, a guest at the Banff Springs Hotel.

Canadians got a thrill recently when Captain J. A. Moillon, intrepid trans-Atlantic solo flyer, spoke over the air, which he has conquered, from the Mayfair Lounge of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain. Captain Moillon was heard on 34 radio stations from Halifax to Victoria over a network arranged by the Canadian Pacific Department of Communications. Loud speakers distributed the broadcast to 50,000 visitors at the big exhibition at Toronto. 865

Though the "Princess Royal," veteran of the Canadian Pacific Railway B. C. Coast steamship fleet has been scrapped and is now in the limbo of departed ships, her forecastle bell remains on the air at Ocean Falls, B.C., where it has been installed at the Ocean Falls United Church mission, which ministers to the spiritual welfare of Japanese children.

Official and unofficial delegates to the Imperial Economic Conference went sightseeing from August 12th to the 14th. Two tours from Ottawa were arranged, both leaving the capital in special Canadian Pacific trains late Friday night, August 12. Shawinigan Falls and Three Rivers were visited by one party, while the other members were cruising down the St. Lawrence from Kingston to Montreal and spending Saturday evening in the metropolis. None of the United Kingdom, Canadian, Australian, New Zealand or Newfoundland or Irish government ministers were able to absent themselves from Conference deliberations, but their delegations were well-represented. Ministers enjoying the trips were Hon. N. C. Havenga and Hon. A. P. J. Fourie, South Africa, and Hon. H. W. Moffatt, Southern Rhodesia. The Canadian Government was represented by Hon. Arthur Sauve and Hon. Maurice Dupre, with the Shawinigan party, and Hon. Alfred Durand and Hon. H. A. Stewart, with the other party.

Presbyterian Congregation and Friends in Celebration

Before calling upon the Moderator, Mr. Cousens precluded the Dedication with a brief explanatory address, commenting, in brief, as follows:

Remarks by Lachute Minister.

"We are assembled here to-day to dedicate this Church to the Glory of God, which has been made possible through the generosity of Mr. William Rodger inspired by the Holy spirit and a whole-hearted desire to serve the cause of His Master, in whose service his sister, the late Miss Margaret Rodger was pleased to devote and dedicate her life, in India.

"Miss Rodger was one of the first women missionaries from Canada to the foreign field, and because of their love in common to Jesus Christ, and their mutual love for each other, it was Mr. Rodger's desire to perpetuate her memory both at home and abroad, in a useful and beautiful manner. To this end Mr. Rodger has made donations to the work of our Mission at Thansi and a beautiful boys' hostel is being completed, which shall bear the name of Miss Rodger. Here at home, the birthplace, Mr. Rodger desired not only to perpetuate her memory in a practical and beautiful way, but also that the memory of her life should prove an inspiration to all within the congregation to become actively interested in the missionary work of our Church. Hence we have this beautiful building, which in many ways reflects the character of the one whose name it bears. As none can mistake the purpose of this building, from its architectural lines, so none who knew her could mistake the consuming passion of Miss Rodger. The granite from which the building is made, quarried from our own vicinity and giving a sense of solidity and permanence, beautifully exemplifies the character which refused to be discouraged by adversity or overthrown by the winds of opposition, and in the face of the storms of personal suffering and privation, stood firm in her determination to teach the Word of God.

"During this ceremony we also dedicate a baptismal font to the glory of God and in loving memory of the late Mr. William Perry. This font has been donated by his immediate family, feeling that such a memorial would be appropriate.

"The late Mr. Perry was a resident of Cote des Neiges and during his early residence there, gave of his time and talent to the establishing of the Cote des Neiges Presbyterian Church. When it was gutted by fire he was made the chairman of the building committee, and raised money by subscriptions for making it once again a habitable church building.

"After his retirement from active business he made his home in our midst, and frequently gave expression to the cordiality and friendliness of this congregation while he worshipped with us. The warmth and sincerity of your welcome deeply affected him and caused him, from other than personal motives, to become interested in our welfare.

"He was also a lover of little children and children loved him. He realized the importance of bringing up children in the ways and admonition of the Lord. To this end he devoted his life to the work of the Sunday School, and in the city of Montreal taught a Sunday School class made up of the boys from the poorer classes. For many years to come, it is felt that the boys and girls privileged to know him in this community will speak of him and tell future generations of his kindness, joviality, and Christian worth.

"We therefore dedicate these memorials to the glory of God, feeling that the spirit in which they are given shall prove acceptable to God and a source of inspiration and usefulness to those who use them."

With a joy of a first service in the new building came the added pleasure of a first baptism and the infant son of the Rev. and Mrs. Cousens was given the name of "John Raymond." The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Johnston who earnestly prayed for Divine blessing upon the child. Following the usual custom the parents were presented on behalf of their child, with a beautiful silver mug furnished by the congregation for this occasion.

Fitting Sermon by Moderator.

Rev. R. Johnston took for his subject "Loyalty to the Home, the State, and the Church." These represent the basic institutions of the World and are truly Divine, he said, remarking that so many today are scrapping the sanctities of home, which they look upon as only a place in which to sleep and eat. The Home should be made a shrine; and our Country demands our loyalty. Invest loyalty in your church, urged the speaker—and your faithfulness will draw dividends. Some people pride themselves on being broad-minded; but we must remember that broad rivers are often shallow, and narrow rivers run deep. Some feel themselves so "broad" that they can almost do without a Church at all! The speaker concluded by telling of a very dignified church elder who was extremely poor, and when someone questioned why he continued to hold that position, the answer was readily given that "though poor he belonged to the aristocracy of God, being of kindly and lovable character."

Before calling upon the soloist, Mr. Anlon Young, whose two selections fitted in so harmoniously with the rest of the impressive service, the Rev. Mr. Cousens expressed grateful acknowledgement to that gentleman for his kindly help.

The parent congregation of St. Andrews joined generously in both morning and evening services at the new Lachute Church, Rev. R. L. Ballantyne conducting the evening session and expressing very feelingly the joy which St. Andrews Presbyterians shared in this token of service to God and in the success of their Lachute friends.

Church Supper and Social Celebration.

These memorable services were followed on Monday evening by a congregational supper, given in the Church Hall at 6.30, and later in a church meeting and social gathering. Here the Rev. Mr. Cousens extended his more personal thanks and appreciation, to the different communities who had worked so faithfully during the stages of construction, and seeing that the Church

Unbreakable dishes are being made in a new material developed in Germany.

Assistant: "Have you an account with this firm, madam?" Customer: "No, but maybe I can arrange matters with your manager." Assistant (to manager): "A lady of no account to see you sir."

"You know you'll never have your name inscribed in the Hall of Fame." "Perhaps not. But I'd rather have people asking why it isn't there than why it is."

had been turned over to the congregation practically free of debt. This was indeed something to be extremely thankful for. Quite a number of invitations had been sent out, to the clergy and other friends, and there was wholehearted response. The various speakers extended on behalf of their respective congregations, congratulations upon the completion of the splendid new church, expressing a hope that it would contribute to more ardent Christian life and religious activity in the community. An enjoyable programme was also given, in which Miss Gracie Lavis, Mrs. Graham, Messrs. W. Gall and W. Drew took part, and also included several anthems by the Choir.

A Life of Christian Effort and Inspiration.

It is fitting to turn back the pages of memory, to the life and Christian devotion of one Margaret Rodger, to whose memory the new Church now stands.

Margaret Rodger, daughter of Joseph Rodger, and his wife Jean McQuat, was born at East Settlement, on March 10, 1847. After leaving the parish school she was awarded an elementary teacher's certificate by the Montreal Board of Examiners. In 1867 and 1868 she attended the McGill Normal School in Montreal, receiving Elementary and Model School diplomas, after which she spent one year at the Ladies' College, Ottawa, preparatory to taking up her work as a missionary.

On the twentieth of October, 1873, she left her home for New York, from which point she sailed with her friend, Miss Fairweather for India. She laboured under the American Board of Missions but was remunerated by the Canadian Presbyterian Church.

In 1877 a definite field known as Central India was set apart for the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Rev. James Douglas began work in Indore, on January 26th., 1877, where the Misses Rodger and Fairweather at once joined him. Miss Rodger continued her work in Mhow, fourteen miles from Indore, with Rev. John and Mrs. Wilkie, until 1882 when her first furlough was due.

After spending eighteen months in Canada, she again returned to India, where she joined Rev. J. and Mrs. Wilkie and worked with them until 1891. She returned home again to her birthplace, where the remaining thirty eight years of her life were spent with her brothers and sisters.

Though unable to return to India, she, to the end, evinced her interest and gave her support to the work of the foreign mission field.

Says the Argenteuil Advertiser (predecessor of Lachute Watchman), dated Oct. 29th., 1873:—

A Missionary to India.

On the 25th. inst., Miss Margaret Rodger set sail from New York for Liverpool, and thence to India. She goes out under the auspices of the Canada Presbyterian Church to labour in the important city of Allahabad.

The Oldest City in the World

Tiahuanaco, Bolivia, the oldest city in the Americas, and perhaps in the entire world, is situated on the transAndean plain, 12,000 feet above the sea—literally on the roof of the world, according to A. Hyatt Verrill in The N. Y. Herald-Tribune. Here, ten miles from Lake Titicaca, are the astonishing ruins of a city populous in the days of Moses, old before the fall of Babylon and ancient at the time of the fall of Rome.

An expedition of the American Museum of Natural History now at Tiahuanaco—the first in thirty years that has received permission from the Bolivian government to excavate at these ancient ruins—has been on the ground for several months. Dispatches have announced many important discoveries. Among the noteworthy finds reported are a number of stone images or idols, one more than twenty feet in length; quantities of beautiful though broken pottery, and sculptured stones covered with strange hieroglyphs, or symbols.

When the Inca dynasty was founded, fully 1,000 years ago, this most ancient of cities had been a deserted ruin for so long that the Indians had no legends or traditions as to its origin or its former inhabitants. So the Incas called it Tiahuanaco—"The Place of the Dead."

No one can say with certainty when the city was built. But Dr. Rudolph Muller, the eminent German scientist and astronomer, computes its age as between 10,000 and 14,000 years. Using a formula adopted by the French Society of Astronomers, Dr. Muller gave the city's age as 14,500 years. Unable to credit this almost inconceivable lapse of time, he tried another formula, and obtained 10,500 years as the age of Tiahuanaco. Even this would make it the oldest known city on earth, a city antedating by centuries Ur and Ish and the Pyramids. Yet even then, in that dim and remote era of the world's history, the people who built this great city beyond the Andes' summits were a highly civilized race, possessing an advanced knowledge of astronomy and mathematics, having a writing of at least an inscribed language, and with engineering and architectural abilities which never have been equalled.

Not only is Tiahuanaco the oldest city—it is also the world's most mysterious city. For no archaeologist can hazard a guess as to the identity of the race that built, why it was deserted, how the people accomplished titanic feats which have no parallel anywhere, whence they came or whither they went or why it should have been built on the lofty plain where its amazing ruins now stand.

It is one of the true wonders of the world; a city absolutely unique. Nowhere on earth is there anything that resembles it in architecture, sculpture or culture. There are no known traces of an earlier culture from which Tiahuanaco might have been developed; no signs of a decadence. Judged only by what is known of Tiahuanaco it might well have been created by Aladdin's jinn and inhabited by giants, or brought bodily from some other planet.

Imagine a vast city covering more than a square mile, with immense edifices built of blocks of stone weighing hundreds of tons each and fastened in place, not with cement or mortar, but with huge staples and bolts of solid silver!

A city with a stone-faced pyramid 200 feet in height and 700 feet square, towering above the magnificent temples and palaces, with a great stone stairway leading to the summit, where was a huge stone reservoir!

A city with a temple, with a stone-paved court 500 feet square, surrounded by hundreds of great stone columns twenty feet in height, with sculptured stone idols twenty to sixty feet in height, and with a titanic stone gateway hewn from a single block of rock!

Perhaps of all the remains of this once great city, this "Gateway of the Sun," as it is called, is the most famed and the most striking. Hewn from a mass of hard arsenite rock fifteen feet in length, eleven feet in height and nearly three feet in thickness, this marvelous specimen of stone cutting is the largest known example of prehistoric monolithic sculpture in the world. But it is fully as remarkable for the sculptures that cover it as it is for its size. Occupying the entire surface of one side above the doorway is a facade of 112 symbolic figures surrounding a great central figure of the "Condor-god" or so-called Sun God, all in bas-relief and embellished with intricate ornamental designs.

To the ordinary visitor the most interesting and astonishing feature of the ruins is the gigantic size of the stones used in the construction of the buildings. There are flights of stairs with each step a single squared cut stone twenty feet in length, ten feet in width and three feet in thickness, flanked by ornately sculptured stone monoliths fifteen feet in height, which serve as newel posts. Yet these huge masses of cut stone are puny things compared to the stupendous slabs that once formed the walls of buildings—slabs larger than any others known in prehistoric architecture.

Blocks weighing sixty to eighty tons each are so numerous they scarcely attract notice; many weigh more than 200 tons each! And all as accurately and smoothly cut, squared and carved as if sawed and planed by the most modern machinery—though for that matter no modern machine is capable of duplicating the work performed by the unknown ancient inhabitants of Tiahuanaco. Moreover, many of these stupendous slabs of hard arsenite rock are elaborately sculptured. Everywhere are geometrical designs cut deeply into the rock or left in bold relief—moldings, squares, rectangles, crosses and Greek key designs.

Often, too, these are cut far into the stone in a series of concentric steps to a foot or more in depth, the deepest portion being only a few inches square. And in many places there are identical patterns in high relief and evidently designed to fit into the recessed cuttings, thus locking the stones together, and so accurately cut that there is less than a millimeter variation in angles or size in a feat of mortising that few modern artisans could duplicate in wood, to say nothing of stone.

In other cases the titanic slabs were designed to serve as tiling for floors. About the edges of these, numerous niches were cut, like seats, deeply into the stone and intended, no doubt, as resting places for idols or statues.

Everywhere along the edges of these enormous stone slabs are numerous T-shaped recesses, frequently with the cross of the T extending through the stone as a perforation. In many places two or more of these cuts still remain in line so that their purpose is obvious; as previously noted, the blocks were originally held in place by immense metal staples or keys. Until quite recently it has always been thought that these keys were of copper or bronze, but as several have been found which are of silver, it is safe to assume that all were of the same metal.

CANADA'S Permanent Character

Head Office Montreal

There is iron and rock in the veins of Canada, as well as gold and silver. The stern and heroic qualities that conquered a wilderness and built a Dominion, united from Ocean to Ocean, still predominate in Canadian character. There is a permanency in this country that grows out of that character. It is expressed in institutions as well as individual craftsmanship and frugal industry.

The Bank of Montreal was the first permanent Bank in Canada. Having successfully co-operated with this country's people and business through the ups and downs of 115 years, the Bank today faces the future firm in its faith in the permanency of Canada's progress and the character and resourcefulness of the Canadian people.

PARLIAMENT TO OPEN IN OCTOBER

Interest at present is centred upon the opening date of the parliamentary session. While no official intimation has been given, the general feeling is that members will be called to meet in October. Parliament would thus be able to deal with the Imperial Conference agreements and other business requiring speedy action and then adjourn for a couple of months over the holiday season. With the conference agreements, the report of the transportation commission, and the St. Lawrence waterways treaty on the agenda, the sessional program this time is of major importance. As a session of Parliament is inevitably preceded by a great deal of preparatory work, busy days will follow the announcement of the opening date. Estimates must be compiled and reviewed and necessary legislation drafted. A number of appointments, some of which are of great importance, may be dealt with before very long.

A caucus of the Conservative men of the Quebec Legislature will be held within a few weeks to decide on matters of importance for the party. This will be the first held since last October, when a temporary leader was chosen in replacement of Camillien Houde in the Legislative Assembly in the general elections. This information was given by one of the Conservative members. Among the questions which will crop up at this caucus, it is further said, is the temporary or permanent leadership of the Opposition. It appears that there are many who are in favor of deciding the matter immediately without waiting for the holding of a convention, which would entail delay and great expenditure. If the present leader, Camillien Houde, receives a vote of confidence, the caucus will have to tackle the question of the House leadership until such time as Mr. Houde can take his seat in the Legislative Assembly.

PIGEON CAUSE OF FIRE Flew to Nest With Cigarette Butt in Beak

Inspector Robert E. Molt forwarded to the state police headquarters in Boston a report that, in his opinion, a fire which damaged a shed and a pigeon loft at the home of W. J. Condon in Milford on July 11 was caused by a pigeon with a lighted cigarette.

Inspector Molt bases his report on evidence he secured from young men who were near the shed that they saw the pigeon fly to its nest with a cigarette butt in its beak.

CHURCH COLLECTIONS

A country minister in Australia has insured his Sunday collections against rain. In case of a downfall calculated to interfere with the attendance he will get $20 and, it costs him $1.50 weekly to carry the policy. It is not known whether prayers for him were included in the bargain.

LACROSSE FIXTURE

Lachute and Calumet teams will meet in another Lacrosse game on Saturday next. The fixture is arranged for 3 o'clock to be played at Calumet.

During the incumbency a plan of the churchyard was drawn up (1850.) In 1859 the Rev. F. S. Neve was appointed. A minute of that date records his absence on the first Sunday of every month "to minister in the destitute parts of the Ottawa." The Rev. J. N. Dixon came to Grenville in 1871. It is interesting to note that this year the accounts of the Church were kept for the last time in pounds, shillings and pence. The next year the change to dollars was made. Early in 1876 the Rev. John Rollitt was appointed incumbent. Both he and Mr. Dixon were subsequently created Canons. Mr. Rollitt was also Rural Dean from 1883 to 1888. The spire of the Church was apparently completed in 1878, the design being furnished gratis, by Mr. John Beswarick, of Boston. In 1879 a fence was built in front of the Church, "after the style of the one before the Presbyterian Church." The gallery was well filled at this period and "unseemly disturbances" were reported to have taken place therein during the services. A threat of legal action seems to have improved matters! In 1887 the Rev. A. J. Greer became incumbent. During his short term the following things were accomplished: Trinity Church, Calumet, was built, the debt on the Parish paid off and the present Rectory secured as a Parsonage. The Rev. Wm. Harris, of Arundel, was appointed in 1889. In 1890 the old Parsonage was sold to Mr. George Foreman. The next year the Parish became self-supporting, thus reaching the status of a Rectory. Later improvements to the Church property were made, included paneling of the interior with basswood (1893), the donation of a font by the Girl's Branch of the W.A. (1893,) complete set of new stained glass windows for the Church (1896), new iron fence (1902), new altar (1907) given by the Junior Branch of the W.A., and new pews (1913).

The Rectors in more recent years have been the Revs. Stephen MacInneson, 1898-1902; W. F. Fitzgerald 1902-1905; A. C. Asch, 1905-1907; W. J. P. Baugh 1907-1913; W. J. Ellis 1913-1925; J. Irving 1925-1932.

From time to time the incumbent of St. Matthew's has held services at various outside points. In 1849 the Rev. Chas. Forest ministered in various places, going as far as Buckingham, travelling by sleigh, horseback and by canoe. About 1850 services were held in St. John's Church, on the Mountain, but these services were discontinued and the church pulled down in 1890. In 1888 Calumet Church was built and is still in use. From time to time services were held at Betts' Schoolhouse. In this Centenary Year these services have been revived, at Rawcliffe. Services have also been held at Stonefield, at "Brown's" and at "Rourke's."

Ordinations have been held in the Church on two occasions. In 1899 the Rev. L. Foulkes was ordained as deacon. In 1911 the Revs. F. W. Chaffton and H. G. Baugh were raised to the priesthood.

During its century of existence the Church has been faithfully served by a devoted body of lay men and women. The list of those who have been church wardens is extensive, but certain names stand out. Mr. Edwin Pridham held the office for 36 years, and his son Alexander Pridham for 32 years. His son, MacInnes Pridham, was warden for five years, but is now chiefly resident in Montreal. Over 70 years service in one family is surely outstanding. Others who filled the office for many years are:—Thos. Owens

State Support of Opera Advocated

Alfredo Tomasini Asserts Artists Have No Incentive to Remain Here.

Government subsidies for the formation of a Canadian national opera company are the suggestion of Alfredo Tomasini, principal baritone in leading opera houses of Italy, according to a recent conversation with The Montreal Gazette, as the best means of encouraging Canadian talent to pursue the arduous task of preparation for an operatic or concert career.

No incentive is offered in the Dominion for artists who make good. To stay in the country, Mr. Tomasini said. In his opinion, there are a sufficient number of Canadians in both America and Europe to make feasible the formation of a truly national opera company. What he could not understand was why musical organizations in this country go to American booking agents for talent when there are well-known and experienced artists here who can barely make a living.

Canadian singers rank very high in the world of Art, according to Mr. Tomasini, who cited several cases where natives of the Dominion take prominent roles in such internationally-known organizations as Covent Garden, London, and the Metropolitan Opera House, New York City. The countries of the world, however, gradually are closing their doors to foreign artists, and Mr. Tomasini felt that future movement of Canadian artists, as well as others, would be in a narrow groove, unless steps were taken by the Canadian Government to take a definite stand by subsidizing a national opera company.

WILL ROGER'S OPINION

Will Rogers, the great American humorist-philosopher, recently wrote the New York Times concerning a convention of weekly newspaper publishers being held near his home. Here is what the man whose every word is eagerly sought after by thousands of admirers, has to say about us: "We have a great bunch out here prowling around. It's the National Editorial Association, composed of editors in smaller towns and weekly publications. They are just eating their way around the country, having a good time, and getting a lot of pleasure out of it. And giving everyone that meets 'em a close-up of just about as representative a gang as would be possible to band together—intelligent, well read, and no national advertising controls their pages. They are not conceited enough to think they 'mould public opinion.' They just go along and service the community with the most indispensable article it has. And yet their real power is greater than all your metropolitan dailies combined. Any person that doesn't read at least one well-written country newspaper is not truly informed."

PAMPERED

Keen Gardener: "What that little plants wants, Ethel, is plenty of air and sunshine."
Helpful Wife: "Well, Cyril, when we go for our holidays, couldn't we take it with us?"—Humorist.

SAME IN NEWFOUNDLAND

The editor of the Listowel Banner has just returned from a trip and visit to Newfoundland, where his parents were born. In the story of his trip, published in part in last week's Banner, he says: "No, I do not think I would want to live in Newfoundland. It certainly has its attractions. is a delightful spot for a vacation for it is so different to what we are used to in Ontario, but this country is hard to beat. Living is dear there as everything is taxed. About the only thing that is cheap is cod fish. Butter is forty cents a pound, eggs are thirty cents a dozen and Kellogg's corn flakes are twenty cents a package. A pound of chocolates which can be purchased here for sixty cents is ninety cents there, and fruit which is so plentiful here, is a luxury there. In the out ports the cost of living is a little easier, as their needs are simpler. They have their own cow, or goats, their own garden and all the fish they need. I would much prefer living in one of these smaller settlements along the coast than in St. John's. The depression is felt there also, many are out of work and the fishermen, like the farmers here are securing very little for their product."

The facilities of The Bank of Nova Scotia have developed correspondingly. A small local bank one hundred years ago it now serves industry and enterprise with a Coast to Coast system of Branches in Canada, world-wide old established banking connections and ample resources to meet the needs of modern business.

The aerial was not connected with the radio in Dr. Brymer's home, but the lightning made a connection which destroyed the radio. Although the occupants were a little dazed, no one was injured.

A cordial invitation is extended to all ladies interested in missionary work.

Mrs. King, of "Ingleside" Cushing, entertained the United Church Missionary Societies of Cushing and St. Andrews at a joint meeting, Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 13th. A very interesting address was given by Miss Greig, formerly of the China Inland Mission. Mrs. Bezanon's solo was very much appreciated.

The United Church Goodfellowship Circle had a 'corn bake' last Tuesday evening at the Macdonnell Picnic Grounds overlooking the Ottawa River. Moonlight added to the pleasure of the outing. It was discovered in the course of the evening that there are many uses to which corn cobs can be put besides the obvious one of holding kernels. Necessity is the mother of invention and when cutlery was lacking corn cobs were found to make an excellent substitute for teaspoons. The members of the Circle are very grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Macdonnell for their courtesy in offering the use of the grounds for the evening.

A large number of the music-loving people of St. Andrews attended the song recital given by Signor Alfredo Tomasini in Lachute Auditorium last Saturday evening. All those who had the privilege of being present had an opportunity not previously afforded them, of hearing Signor Tomasini in a variety of songs. The generous proportions of the hall made it possible for the hearers to appreciate the magnificent capacities of his voice—its power and flexibility—and the singer's rare gift of interpretation. Signora Tomasini's brilliant and sympathetic accompaniments contributed greatly to the distinction of the programme.

Hints for Homebodies

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman.
By JESSIE ALLAN BROWN

Many of us remember when no woman who considered herself a lady could work for money. It was possible to teach or to be a nurse and still retain one's gentility, but other than that it could not be done. Women worked but not for money. They helped in the homes of their parents or relations and sometimes were so dependent that they did not have a very happy time of it.

The leaven of financial independence for women was working in the early part of the century but the war completed it and now any woman may work at anything she can find to do.

Many women who have considered themselves well educated have found to their sorrow when they tried to earn a living that they had an assortment of general knowledge and were not equipped with any one definite thing by which they could earn money. No girl, whatever her station in life, should be considered educated until she has some definite training by which she could earn her living if necessary. Many parents think it highly unnecessary that their daughter should ever earn her living but in this topsyturvy world one never knows what is before them. Fathers, specially, wish to protect their daughters and think they are doing it by never having them work, but the truth is that they would give them much greater protection if they educate them practically. They may never need to use it but it will never hurt them to know how.

TO MAKE JELLY

The tendency of the present generation is to use commercial pectin in their jelly-making. However there are still many who prefer the old-fashioned methods so we will consider them today. Fruits contain pectin and this is found in greatest quantity in under-ripe fruits. As the fruit ripens this pectin is changed until in dead ripe fruit there is practically no pectin. Consequently slightly under-ripe fruit should be chosen for jelly-making.

Most people use 1 cup of sugar to 1 cup of juice in making jelly regardless of the kind of fruit that is being used. Fruits containing a small amount of pectin, such as berries, require only ¾ cup of sugar to a cup of juice. Jelly may be made from as little as ½ cup of sugar. If a jelly is tough it is apt to be due to too little sugar. If it is soft and sticky too much sugar has been used, providing there has been sufficient pectin in the fruit.

If you wish to be absolutely accurate as to the amount of sugar to use, a test may be made by using grain alcohol. Mix 1 tablespoon juice with 1 tablespoon alcohol, if a firm jelly forms, use equal quantities of juice and sugar; if a loose jelly forms, use ¾ of a cup of sugar to a cup of juice; if a very loose jelly forms use only ½ cup sugar to one cup of juice.

It is a help to heat the sugar in the oven because long boiling develops a strong flavour and a dark colour. The warm sugar lessens the time of boiling.

The jelly is sufficiently cooked when it will sheet off a wooden spoon, that is, two drops will merge as one. I have not tried to give directions as to making jelly, but have tried to make clear the difficulties.

APPLE MINT JELLY

This jelly may be made from either apples or crabapples. Extract the juice as for ordinary jelly. To each quart of juice add the crushed leaves and stalks from a bunch of mint. Let boil twenty minutes, then strain. Add three cups of sugar which has been warmed in the oven and boil until the juice will sheet off, usually about five minutes after it has reached the boiling point. Sufficient green coloring may be added to tint it a delicate green if desired. This jelly is used as an accompaniment to meats and is specially good with lamb.

ROWAN BERRY JELLY

Stem and wash berries; put in a preserving kettle with enough water to barely cover. Boil until soft and strain through a jelly bag. Measure juice and measure an equal quantity of sugar. Boil juice twenty minutes and heat sugar in the oven slowly. Add sugar and cook until jelly is cooked; that is when two drops run off as one, usually five minutes after it starts to boil. Pour into hot sterilized glasses and seal. This may be served with cold meats or chicken.

PEACH CANDY PIE

Cut firm peaches in slices and arrange in layers in a baking dish, covering each layer thickly with brown sugar. Cover with the following mixture, one cup flour, one half cup sugar and one-half cup butter rubbed together as for pastry. Sprinkle these crumbs on and cook in a moderate oven until the crumbs are browned and the peaches soft. Serve with cream.

BAKED HAM WITH PEACHES

Buy a slice of ham about an inch thick. Rub with a mixture of three tablespoons of brown sugar and 1 teaspoon mustard. Cover and bake for thirty minutes in a moderate oven of 350 degrees. Cut in portions for serving and place a half peach, peeled, on each portion. Stick a clove in each peach and dot lightly with brown sugar and butter. Return to the oven for about ten minutes. Leave the cover off so that the peaches will brown.

Miss Rodger is well qualified for the work of a Christian Missionary. She is a young lady of no ordinary ability, she possesses a retentive memory, and her intellectual faculties are of a very high order. She received an education of a very superior character, and attended three sessions at the Normal School in Montreal, also one session in the Fine Arts classes at the Female College, Ottawa, in which she displayed great aptitude for sketching, and in fancy needle-work a refined taste.

She has received three diplomas as a teacher, and holds two certificates of honour for proficiency in geography, geology, and algebra.

Her disposition is of a retiring nature, but when in conversation one is at no loss to discover she is a young person of superior talent and great piety. May "God bless her and keep her," is the earnest desire of all Christian friends.

Lesson for September 25

REVIEW: MOSES HONORED IN HIS DEATH.

GOLDEN TEXT—Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 32:48-52; 34:5-8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses Goes to Live With God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Death of a Great Leader.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We May Learn from the Life of Moses.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What the World Owes Moses.

I. Moses Debarred From Canaan (32:48-52).

This act of God strikingly displays the tragedy of an unfinished task. Moses was loyal to God and faithfully served him through a long life. Though his "eye was not dimmed nor his natural force abated," he was obliged to leave his work unfinished. This is true of all of us. However, the tragedy is only apparent. Life is a probation. The question is not of finished tasks, but fidelity in service and growth in divine grace.

1. The reason for (v. 51). It was sin. The nature of this sin is given in Numbers 20:1-13. It was his failure to sanctify the Lord at Meribah. This penalty, while severe, was not too severe, for the righteousness of God demands the meeting out of penalty upon every transgression. This was too glaring a sin for the Lord to pass over, though Moses had served him faithfully for many years.

2. God's treatment of Moses (vv. 49, 50). While it was severe, it was yet most tender. It was in keeping with God's nature. While God cannot pass over sin, he is always as gracious as his justice will permit. He appointed the place of Moses' death on the mount of vision. Moses was gathered "unto his people."

II. Moses Views the Promised Land from Mount Pisgah (34:1-4).

At the Lord's bidding Moses ascended the mountain of Nebo from which he got a view of the promised land. He obeyed though he knew that he was to die there (32:50). He greatly desired to go into the land (3:25), but submitted to the will of the Lord. Though he was not permitted to enter the land God gave him a view of the fullest dimensions of the land which was to be the inheritance of the people he had delivered and led for forty years. While Moses suffered this severe penalty, we should remember that his salvation was not affected. He was debarred from entrance to the land at that time, but we see him in the land some fifteen centuries later in a state of glory discoursing with Christ on the loftiest theme of the universe: namely, the death which he would accomplish at Jerusalem (Matt. 17:1-5; Luke 9:28-31).

III. The Death and Burial of Moses (34:5-8).

1. His death (v. 5). Though he died in the vigor of manhood, his work was done. God put him into the world for a purpose and as soon as that work was done he called him home. It is stated in verse five that he died according to the word of the Lord.

2. The burial of Moses (v. 8). God buried him. Moses had no human help or sympathy in his dying hour, but he had something better. The Lord was with him. His grave was concealed to prevent his people from making it a shrine.

3. The time of mourning for Moses (v. 8). They mourned for thirty days. It was customary to mourn for the dead from seven to seventy days. It is not wrong to lay away earthly friends even with tears, but as Christians we should not mourn as those who have no hope.

IV. An Encomium upon Moses (34:10-12).

In this eulogy Moses is given a place at the head of the Old Testament prophets. With the exception of the greater prophet (Deut. 18:15-18) of whom Moses was a type, he stands as the greatest prophet of Israel.

1. Because of his intimacy with God (v. 10). "Whom the Lord knew face to face."

2. He was great in that he gave to the world a code of laws unequalled in the world's history.

3. He was great as a general in that he liberated the Israelitish nation from the oppression of the greatest nation of the earth.

4. He was great because he led two or three million Israelites through the desert for forty years.

5. He was great because he gave to us in the book of Deuteronomy three orations, which, according to the judgment of competent critics, stand at the head of the world's literature.

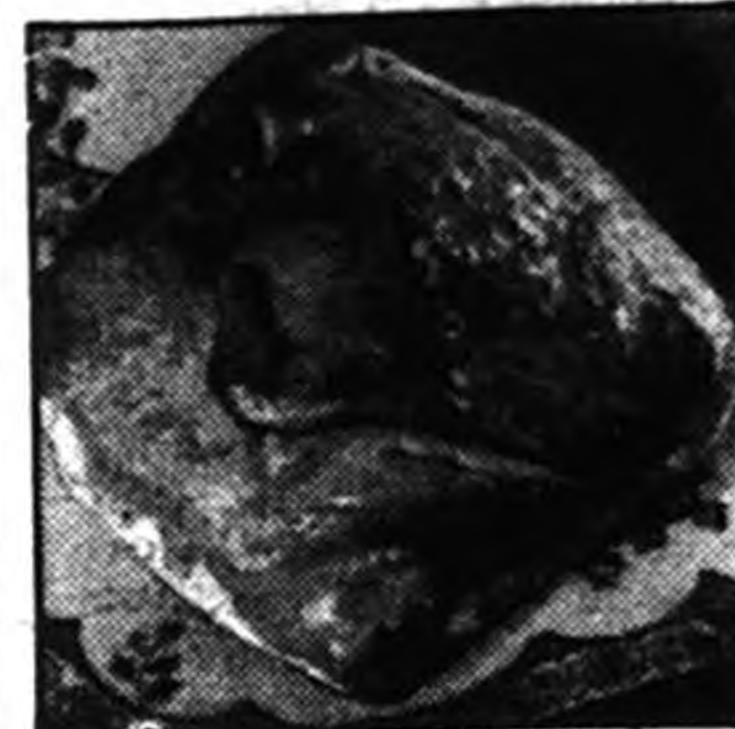

PITHY PICK-UPS

Honesty is the first most important school of character.

Be considerate and you will find men always compassionate.

Good morals are nobler than good manners, but not so popular.

Gossip has been well defined as putting two and two together, and making it five.

Miss Jessie Marie De Both makes her delicious

Apple Dumplings with Magic Baking Powder

"When a young housewife asks me what baking powder she should use," says Miss De Both, director of the famous De Both Home Makers' Cooking Schools, "this is my advice: Use the best—one that is pure, uniform and invariably dependable. You can't use second-rate baking powder and expect first-rate results."

"My experience with Magic has been particularly happy. I find that it never varies—that it is consistently reliable. And I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients."

Statements by other well-known cookery authorities give wholehearted support to Miss De Both's judgment.

In fact, the majority of dietitians and cookery teachers throughout Canada use and recommend Magic exclusively.

Apple Dumplings

1 quart flour 1½ cups milk
2 teaspoons Magic Sugar
Baking Powder Cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt Apples
2 tablespoons butter

Sift into a bowl flour, baking powder and salt. Rub in the butter. Add cold milk to make soft dough. Turn out on a floured board and roll into a sheet. Cut in squares. Peel and core the apples. Place an apple on each square of dough. Fill the core with a small piece of butter, sugar and a little cinnamon. Fold the dough over, making sure that there are no openings, as the steam inside dumplings cooks the apple while dough is baking. Brush dumplings with a little cream, and place in greased pan. Bake in moderate oven at 400° F. about 40 minutes. Serve with cream or hard sauce.

CHAPTER VI.—After making arrangements with Hardrock and old
Dad Pence to look after Joyce's safety
while she is alone at the MacMillan
post (her father being jailed at Fort Endurance), Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe. As the days
pass and she does not hear from him,
Joyce is heart sick for Alan. She questions Hardrock when the latter pays
her one of his brief calls, and from what Hardrock tells her she believes
final arrangements for the wedding
have been made.

CHAPTER VII.—On his journey, Al-
an runs across "Buzard," Feathered,
famous aviator of the World War, and
now "on his own," with a dilapidated
machine. Affinity of spirit draws them
together, and Alan enlists "Buzard"
in the enterprise. Lacking sufficient
funds to procure equipment, they loot
government stores, starting their pur-
suit of the bandits, themselves criminals in the eyes of the law.

CHAPTER VIII.—"Slob-ice" Jensen,
leader of the bandits, plans to capture
Joyce MacMillan and escape to Manitoba. At Fort Endurance, Haskell catches on that Bill Hardrock is caching gasoline and oil for Alan at
En Traverse lake, and plans with Constable Whipple to capture Alan when
his plane alights there.

The prospect of marrying her, when his respect was gone, made Alan wince. And his respect was gone with a vengeance. Those moments in his cabin, when she offered herself to him, had been a shock and revelation.
She had acted not out of excusable passion, not out of love, but as a warrantee that he would take that Victoria job. He thought of the incident with something of revulsion.

Now he was groping to see the honest
and righteous thing for him to do.
He wondered whether it would be courage, or a weak yielding to desire,
for him to break with Elizabeth and weep aside the obligations binding
him. There was right on both sides.
Elizabeth was waiting for him; he had promised to marry her and take her out; he had burned his bridges and committed himself to that Victoria
job. Yet it was wrong to enter a loveless marriage that would bring tragic unhappiness. It was wrong to marry Elizabeth when his whole-hearted respect and love went out to Joyce Mac-Millan.

In the lonely anguish of his thoughts
he laid his decision more or less in the hands of time. He felt he must see Joyce again before he could take a decisive step. If he did capture those six criminals and so cleared her name, then he would be grateful with all her heart. He meant to tell her about the tragic happening which had bound him to Elizabeth. If he could win back that old intimate comradeship with her and they could begin anew, then the righteous thing was to put Joyce's happiness above Elizabeth's.

A little after gray dawn Alan rebuilt the fire, cooked breakfast, and reluctantly awakened his partner.
Later, when they skirted out to the plane, Buzzard glanced at the tanks
and remarked tersely:
"I hope your buddy, this Hardrock,
has got some gas and oil out to that lake. It'll be our finish if he hasn't."
"Bill will have it there," Alan assured. "He may not be there himself, he's probably on duty; but we agreed exactly where to cache it. It'll be waiting for us."

They climbed in, taxied twice around the lake to warm the spluttering motor, took off and headed north toward Goose point at Lake En Traverse.

With the heavy rains stopped and the insect scourges abating, Alan knew the bandits were on the move again or shortly would be. When they did stir, he wanted to be there on the Big Alooska to look out for Joyce.

Ever since he came to believe that Dave MacMillan knew nothing of the crime, he had been puzzling about that pack of stolen furs. Something dark and sinister lay behind that pack.
There was some connection between the trader and those criminals. But what?

Alan reasoned: "Those furs didn't get in that shed by accident. Those men might have had a grudge against Dave MacMillan and planted them there. They might have figured he'd show them to us and get in hot water.
That guess is at least possible. If it's true, then their grudge might lead them to strike at Joyce."

If they intended anything against Joyce, they doubtless would attempt it just before they started eastward on their trek through the Great Barrens and Strong-Woods. Alan had dreamed of that, dreamed of her being captured and taken along, as the bandits
had captured Margaret Fournier.

With Haskell refusing to extend her any protection whatsoever, Alan felt that he and he alone stood between her and a terrible danger. If anything happened to the plane, or to him and Buzzard. . . .
Looking ahead through the propeller disk, he glimpsed the great blue lake of his rendezvous with Bill. A few minutes later on the northern shore he sighted Goose point reaching out into the sunlit waters of En Traverse.

Leaning forward, he pointed out the promontory to Buzzard and shouted
into his partner's ear:
"There's the place. Glide down and light, close in as you can. I don't see Bill there, but he probably couldn't get away from duty to wait for us.
Our supplies are cached in that red-willow thicket back next to the woods.
We'll go ashore and get them."

Buzzard cut off ignition. The engine sputtered. As the plane glided down at a mile-long tangent
and swept over Goose Point, Alan leaned out into the slipstream and toed under keel, searching the flag-and-willow headland for a possible sight of Bill Hardrock.

Hardly expecting to meet Bill, he was not surprised when his old partner failed to show up. But as the machine glided silently over the point,
his eyes were caught by an object
there on the muddy landwash. At a second glance he saw it was a large gasoline drum lying in full view at the very tip of the headland.

The sight of the drum startled him.
He queried silently: "Why the devil
did Bill put that thing out there so glaring? He didn't need to draw my attention; we arranged about the cache."

Beyond the point the plane touched the surface, plowed on through a shower of spray and came to a stop
three hundred yards off the landwash.
In the scarlet-and-gold police launch,
hidden behind a low-sweeping balsam
at water edge, Inspector Haskell and Corporal Whipple watched the machine whirr low over the point. As it came down and down, Haskell clutched his rifle a little tighter and watched intently.

from the height of a hundred feet
Alan looked ahead through his glasses, ruminating that timbered point where he hitches were still ablaze.

He started as the glasses picked up a tiny man-figure far away on that headland. Watching, he saw it rush out upon the extreme rock tip. With the plane whirling nearer, he caught the figure in sharper focus—and recognized Bill Hardrock!

Waving his arms, hat and part of a pine tree, Bill was frantically trying to draw their attention.

Alan leaned forward, cupped his hands and shouted to Buzzard:
"That's Bill! There on the head-land. Light and taxi in. He's waving us down, so it must be safe. We'll soon see what the trouble is."

They angled down on the water and skipped close in ashore. In a canoe Bill came paddling out to meet them.
"I knowed you'd make it, Alan!"
he panted, looking with marveling eyes
at Buzzard and the plane. "I knowed you'd show up sometime. The gas and oil—that is, most of it—it's right ashore here, ready for you. There's more cached up the Alooska, too. I was scared. . . . When you lit down over there. . . . Lord! I was afraid you were a goner!"

Hastily introducing a new partner
to an old one, Alan demanded: "What d'you mean, Bill? What under heaven are you doing over here? What happened? Man, you're all shot!"

"Am half-dead," Bill admitted. His voice was thick, he could hardly stand up. With the long strain over, a fearful reaction had set in. He looked ready to fall down dead asleep.

"But what happened?" Alan repeated.

"Alan, that Johnny Jump-up caught onto our trick. He was out to bag
this air machine and nail you two.
And he came skittish close to doing it.
Lemme tell it:
"I had those drums cached over
there on Goose point like we arranged,
and I was waiting there, never suspecting a thing. One evening. . . .
Must've been four or five days ago;
I've d—n near lost track of time. . . .
Anyway, I was sitting there in the willows slapping mosquitoes and listening to a couple ychisky-jacks raise Cain with something back at the timber edge.

"I hadn't nothing much to do, so I sort of moseyed back that way to see what all the fuss was about. When I got up pretty close I all at once smelled tobacco smoke, cigarette smoke. Just a faint whiff, but no mistake about it.

"What the h—? says I. 'Who's smoking Turkey tobacco around here?'
It made me leery right away. I followed my nose up-wind and snuck up real careful. There in the first drogue of balsam was a Smoky, that Oel-To-max, sitting against a tree. Lighting
one cigarette on the butt of the last.
They were that kind of cigarette that Haskell gets clear from Paris, Alan.

"When he finally got wise to somebody being near, he grabbed for his rifle. But I jumped for him too quick and hit him a couple times, and while he was coming out of it I lopped that gun of his around a tree. Then I collared him and asked him what the condemnation his intentions might be. At first he closed up like an oyster and wouldn't do nothing but grunt and look sour. I was suspicious of him laying low there watching me,
so I up and lammed h—I out of him
then and there till he did pry open his jaws.

"Haskell had hired him to shadow
me and spy out what I was doing.
He must have got hep somehow to me taking that gas. And he and that fishworm Whipple were coming there to Goose point in the launch to get me, gas, oil, then lay low and nail
you two when you lit down. Two bits to a shirt button they're over there right now!"

As he thought how close he and Buzzard had come to going ashore and being captured, Alan shuddered.

Bill went on: "When the Smoky told me that. . . . Say, did I make some tall tracks? I never got such a wiggle on in my life. With the Smoky helping, I made two trips across the lake and snaked the drums all away—all except one drum which I heard the launch coming and didn't have time to take—"

"It's still over there," Alan interrupted. "They rolled it out in plain sight like a decoy, but instead of that it made me suspicious. They overplayed. But what got you all shot
this way, Bill?"

"I've been awake four or five days and nights, that's what! Not a wink!
Didn't dare sleep. It made me sweat blood to think of you lighting down over there and getting nailed. I had to draw your attention somehow, when you were over the lake; and it had to be one whopper of a signal, that far away. I got a couple big-plies of birch paper ready and had a drum of gas bandy to soak it with; and I kept a dry-wood fire going so's I could stand back and throw a blazing chunk at the paper. But it made the signal, all right. It nearly singed me and I stood thirty feet back."

"I'll vow it made a signal," Buzzard commented. "It looked like the evacuation of Lens."

"I had to stay awake every minute," Bill continued, "for fear you'd come and fly right into the trap. And then I had to guard the Smoky. He's tied up back there; didn't dare turn him loose, or he'd told Haskell where I was. If I'd ever got started dozing, I'd have beaten this Rip Winkle fellow for long-distance sleeping. There was times when I got so pear pverpowered

BROWNSBURG UNITED CHOIR PICNIC

On Saturday last the choir of the Brownsburg United Church held another enjoyable picnic.

A goodly number left the church at 2.30 p.m. for Dauphin Lake, the weather being ideal for the occasion. On their arrival, swimming and boating proved promptly popular, while others of the party, with zeal worthy of a better cause, went fishing, but with negligible result.

An old-time paper chase, led by Wallace and very much assisted by astute feminine minds, led the followers over hill and dale, across stream and swamp, to arrive tired and minus a few accessories, back at camp in due time.

Supper was served on the verandah of Mr. L. Wilson's cottage and being sorely needed, great inroads were made on the good things provided. The guest of honor, Mr. Cooper, School Principal, essayed to read the tea-cup for some of the hopeful young ladies; his flights of fancy were remarkable. A game of softball followed on the athletic field mere males competing against the formidable females. Play progressed, strictly against all rules, until darkness obscured the ball and the males claimed victory with a tremendous majority.

An animated sing-song around the huge camp fire was next enjoyed, Mr. Cooper pleasing with choice and humorous recitations. Mr. Jack Stewart sang in his unique style and both were loudly applauded. In the subsequent repast records for hot-dog consumption were set up, one demure lady accounting for a very large number, and an extremely pleasant session time was thus brought to a close. Appreciation was expressed to the Dauphin Club, and particularly to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson for the unrestricted use of their property and their great kindness.

Bishop Farthing Opens Centenary Service at St. Matthew's

Commemorate 100 Years of Existence for Grenville Church.

Pages in history were turned back 100 years when more than 300 residents of Grenville and the surrounding district gathered to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of St. Matthew's Anglican Church. Former residents of Grenville and members of the Church crossed the Ottawa River from Ontario to join with the present members of the church in celebration.

The gathering took place in a pretty setting amongst the tall trees on the banks of the river. The celebration was inaugurated with a special Eucharistic service conducted by Bishop Farthing of Montreal, at 11 o'clock on Wednesday morning. The church was crowded to capacity and many were obliged to remain outside and hear the service through the open windows. Rev. W. J. Ellis, rector of St. Aidan's Church Montreal, who was in charge of Grenville parish from 1913 to 1925, preached the sermon.

Recalls History

As the members listened attentively he recalled the history of the church back to 1832 when it was built by missionaries with the aid of members of the Royal Staff Corps who were there working on the canal and subscribed to the church funds besides lending their aid.

Mr. Ellis told of some of the many dangers faced by the missionaries in the early years of the church and lauded those who had given their efforts to continue the work of God. "This celebration," he said, "is being held not only in memory of the founding of the church but also in commemoration of those who toiled to make it easier for the present members of the church to follow the Catholic faith." Friendship, he said is the link that serves to hold men together

—friendship and the love of God and each other.

He asked his hearers to try and continue in friendship, forget bitterness, evil speaking and any hatreds and live in the spirit of the faith.

Fourteen members of the clergy from Montreal and the surrounding district here besides Bishop Farthing and Rev. K. N. Breuton, minister of the church, attended the service. They were Rev. A. C. Asch, Archdeacon Overing of Montreal, Rev. O. E. Rollitt, Rev. Percy Rollitt, Rev. C. G. Rollitt, Rev. E. Dawson, Rev. Jos Irving, Rev. R.

Lachute Beats Calumet

The week-end fixture at Calumet brought a victory of 3-2 for the newly organized Lachute team, in an interesting Lacrosse game with Calumet boys. Many enthusiasts from this town attended the game, also appreciable numbers from Grenville, Hawkesbury, and district.

Booe, Rev. A. S. Mitchell, Rev. W. P. Garrett, Rev. F. C. Phillips, Rev. Loding Crothers and Rev. A. B. Back, minister of the Presbyterian Church, Grenville.

Many Visitors

Visitors from all over the district and residents of Grenville continued the celebration at a special lunch in the Masonic Hall, followed by speeches by Bishop Farthing and other members of the clergy.

Rev. Joseph Abbott was first minister of St. Matthew's when it was founded in 1832. Thirteen ministers have followed Mr. Abbott.

History of St. Matthew's Church

As summarized in Pamphlet regarding Centenary.

Rev. Joseph Abbott

St. Matthew's church was built in 1832, during the ministry of the Rev. Joseph Abbott. The Royal Staff Corps were here at the time, working on the canal, and they helped in the work and subscribed to the funds. In the churchyard are graves of soldiers dating back to 1821. The church was consecrated in 1849. The Wardens in 1831 were Edwin Pridham and Joseph Hamley who was succeeded in 1832 by James Wheeler. In the early days, the inside of the church was plastered and whitewashed. Rent was charged for the pews, but this came to an end in 1890, after the rents had been frequently changed. In 1850, the plan of the churchyard was drawn up by Geo. Kains, who with his brother Thomas were prominent in those days. Other names occurring frequently are Edwin Pridham, C. C. Greece, W. Whinfield and O. Owens. In 1862, we read of the desirability of obtaining a key board for the organ, which at this time was of the "Barrel Organ" type. In the same year a vote of thanks was passed to Edwin Pridham for reading the service in the Clergyman's absence. A subscription list of this date contains the following names:—Edwin Pridham, Owen Owens, T. and W. Owens, Daniel Reeves, James and Thomas Welden, Samuel Dodd, D. McMillan and Andrew Stuart.

In 1871, a resolution authorizing the building of a spire on the tower was passed but this does not seem to have been acted upon for several years. Three years later the envelope system was adopted, it fell into disuse and was later revived. The old organ was disposed of in 1876 and a new one secured. In 1879, Mr. Edwin Pridham gave up his work in the church; he was succeeded by his son Alexander who greatly helped the Parish both in faithful service and financially. In 1881, Mr. Edward Dawson, who is happily still with us, was elected People's Warden, an office he has held in several subsequent years. About this time the gallery was the scene of unseemly disturbances, which were ended by a threat of legal action.

Trinity church, Calumet, was built in 1888 and consecrated in 1889. The first Wardens were A. Bridgen and James Wilson. Subsequently Mr. Nicholas Whinfield was Warden for several years with Mr. Bridgen. The land for the church was donated by Mr. S. M. Brannan.

At this time the present building was occupied as a parsonage, for in 1890, the old one was sold to George Foreman. The next year, 1891, the Parish became a Rectory, that is a self supporting Parish with the right of nominating the Rector.

View of Interior St. Matthew's Church

The church was much improved in 1893 by the sheathing of the interior with basswood. In that year a font was given by the Girls' Branch (W.A.). In 1896 a new bell was hung in the belfry, donated by Mr. Daniel Reeves who also gave the organ in memory of his daughter Elizabeth, the old bell going to Greymount in Thorn Parish. In the same year, the present beautiful windows were installed; eight were paid for by the W.A., one in memory of John H. Loughren (by his wife) and the East Chancel Window is in memory of the late Daniel Reeves and family. The present pews were installed in 1912. This brings us up to the present state of the church.

St. Lawrence Waterways Plan Upheld by Sauvé

Attitude of Premier Taschereau Criticized at Conservative Rally.

Electors of the county of Terrebonne flocked to the grounds of the Bellevue Hotel, at Lake Ouimet, Sunday, to hear Hon. Arthur Sauvé, Postmaster General, Hon. André Fauteux, and a number of other speakers discuss federal and provincial politics.

The outing was held under the auspices of the recently formed Conservative Association of Terrebonne and was presided over jointly by Leopold Nantel, of St. Jerome, and A. Godon of Ste. Agathe. Messrs. Sauvé and Fauteux were supported by J. P. Sauvé, M.L.A. for Two Mountains, and other notable figures in the ranks of Quebec Conservatives.

Vigorous Attack

Mr. Sauvé made a vigorous onslaught on the opponents of the the St. Lawrence waterways project, claiming that Premier Taschereau, in his attack "seems to forget that the river is not the exclusive property of the province of Quebec, but is owned jointly by the United States and Canada as well as by the various provinces that composed the confederation."

He claimed that Ontario and the United States were mainly interested in the project that was embodied in the treaty signed at Washington, though other sections have their interest in it. The minister declared that the rights of Quebec had not been endangered by the treaty, and that when the time comes, the Government of the province will be consulted, but not before.

Mr. Sauvé also dealt at length with the Imperial Economic Conference, claiming that the

Fashionable Wedding at Grenville

Paul—Dansereau

A pretty wedding took place in the Catholic Church at Grenville, when Miss Gabrielle Dansereau, daughter of Mr. Geo. Dansereau, member of the Quebec Legislature for this County, became the bride of Mr. Jean B. Paul, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. N. Paul of St. Jerome, Que. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. X. Larose, an uncle of the bride. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion. After a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the couple left on a trip to New York and Bermuda.

Car Crashes into Tree

Driver and Friend Injured in Mishap on Brownsburg Road.

Travelling from Lachute towards Brownsburg on Sunday, a car driven by William Dixon, of Montreal, swerved in loose gravel and crashed into a tree beside the road. It appears the driver was crowded to the side of the highway while passing another car, and the automobile took the ditch near Richard Clarke's gate, telescoping the engine into the cab when it hit a tree with considerable force.

Dixon suffered cuts around his face and mouth, and Gerald Boyd seated beside the driver was hurled against the wind shield and had his head badly cut, the injury requiring 8 or 9 stitches. Dr. Christie was immediately summoned from Lachute and rendered medical assistance.

The automobile, a 1930 model Ford Tudor, was badly damaged, needing a new frame and chassis.

252 Tomatoes From Single Plant

Responding to a challenge in last week's Local column re the profusion of tomatoes on a plant grown by Russell Rogers, Mr. Thos. Stewart advises he has a plant in his garden on Grace Street which produced no less than 252 tomatoes. These, however, were of the small golden variety used for pickling.

Emilian Yaroslavsky, head of the "Godless Society" in Soviet Russia, recently told American tourists in Moscow that his group now has more than 5,500,000 members and that these represent only a fraction of the atheists in that country. Yaroslavsky stated, however, that there are still 100,000,000 Russians who profess religion, and said that "some children are still being given religious training at home in spite of the efforts of our public schools to prevent it."

ROTARIANS HOLD FIELD DAY AT SHAWBRIDGE FARM

The field day of the Rotary Club of Montreal at the Shawbridge Boys' Farm and Training School, held on Saturday, was one of the most successful held during the fifteen years that the Rotarians have taken an interest in the school; about 150 members and friends attended and donated prizes and candies. Following the races there was a baseball game between the Boys' Farm Team and the Adanacs Club of Notre Dame de Grace, in which the latter proved the victors.

Arthur McMaster, president, presided at the buffet supper served after the sports, and read a letter from Mr. Beatty, president of the Boys' Farm, which expressed to the members of the Rotary the appreciation of the directors for their continued practical interest in the school.

Truck Breaks Through Bridge

Lucky Escape in Accident While Drawing Wood.

Messrs. Will. Reilly and Ken. McQuat narrowly escaped injury when the truck which they were driving crashed through a bridge on Tuesday morning. The scene of the mishap was near Hammond's Mill, across the North River.

As they were driving over a creek in the vicinity of Mr. D. Rowe's, the bridge collapsed beneath the truck which was heavily loaded with hardwood, dropping the vehicle and occupants a distance of 8 or 10 feet. The machine turned completely upside down, but the stove-wood appears to have taken the weight of the fall and protected the cab, in which the young men were driving. Fortunately there was no great depth of water beneath.

Although severely shaken, Messrs. Reilly and McQuat were not injured in the fall, and the truck was only slightly damaged. It was later raised by a wrecking outfit from Deacon's Garage.

MILK PRODUCERS MEET

A meeting of the Milk Shippers of this district was held in the Town Hall on Saturday evening the purpose of which was to consider prices for the winter's supply of milk. It was the consensus of opinion that last winter's price of $1.70 would be acceptable, but whether this will be allowed will be decided at the dealers meeting to be held in Montreal on Friday.

The future is what we hoped the past might have been but wasn't.

Three Fires in Same Evening

Conflagrations in Neighboring Villages.

While Mons. Racine's residence at Calumet was in flames, which consumed and entirely destroyed the dwelling, 2 other fires are reported to have been in progress Sunday night last—one in Hawkesbury and another in Grenville. In the latter place a minor outbreak burnt a shed on Mr. Pilon's property near the Dansereau saw-mill.

Grenville fire department sent hose and a pump to the assistance of the Calumet firemen, but it is understood the Racine property and contents suffered heavy damage from the fire.

Struck by Automobile

A car driven by Mr. O. Bourgault, the district roadmaster, knocked down a man, who was walking near Lavigne's corner in the West End, on Sunday afternoon last.

The automobile was moving slowly, as is necessary through the sharp crossroads at this spot. When the driver sounded his horn, the victim appears to have run hurriedly from the sidewalk, straight into the path of the machine.

The man, Charbonneau, 22, of St. Augustin, sustained a fractured leg. Mr. Bourgault immediately stopped and placing the lad in a passing car, took him to the doctor's for medical treatment. He was afterwards taken home and is reported doing well.

Barn and Contents Burnt at St. Hermas

Lachute fire brigade were summoned to St. Hermas last night (Wednesday) at 11:30 when fire in a hay-barn threatened to ignite neighboring buildings.

The barn was the property of Mons. Chenier, C.N.R. Agent, located on ground adjacent to the depot. The firemen found that neighbors had averted the danger and saved further damage. The barn, however, was gutted, with considerable loss. Mr. Chenier had bought quantities of hay from Alfred, Ont., and the building and contents were completely consumed. It is understood the loss is largely covered by insurance.

Allan Hannah, son of Mrs. Hannah Barkmere, is suffering from a rifle shot in the ankle, sustained at Dalesville when he and a number of friends were target-practising on Labor Day. The young man is reported doing well, under treatment at the Royal Victoria Hospital.

Back Streets are not the Dumbest

During a business survey of one of the County highways, Watchman representatives received complaint that back-country residents, on their occasional visits to Lachute, had been unable to locate the printing office.

Perhaps we have neglected to advertise in this detail—we who acclaim advertising as a large-sized business asset!

For the information of such friends, the Watchman Office is situated directly behind the Auditorium, on Foundry Street, a much-used thoroughfare running parallel to Main Street, Lachute, on south side of the C.P. R. track.

Our country friends might take a suggestion in turn, along the same lines. We would recommend that the proprietor's names be clearly painted on all rural mail boxes. This would prove of great convenience to infrequent visitors. And where dwellings are situated back from the highway, mail boxes should certainly afford some indication as to who lives there.

TOWN OFFICERS ALERT

Town Officers are giving strict attention to the traffic regulations and are acting promptly upon infringements of the by-law. Automobile owners driving in or into Lachute, will do well to acquaint themselves with the rules in regard to parking, and to observe the Stop Signs at street corners.

Copies of the Traffic By-Law may be procured from Mr. P. Chabot at the Auto Registration Bureau.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

THE BOY WITH AN AEROPLANE

Dear Boys:

The other day I saw a little lad looking earnestly into a store window in which a beautiful model aeroplane was displayed for sale. As I stood by I saw his hand go down deep into his pocket and come out again holding tightly three quarters. Then, looking over his head, I noted that the splendid toy was marked at exactly seventy-five cents.

For a long time he hesitated before entering and I wondered much at the thoughts that must have passed through his mind. Eventually he disappeared within the building to emerge later with a parcel under his arm. Of course I could not follow him but I would have liked to see this lad in his home. After all, it was not necessary, because as he turned away I caught a glimpse of the light in his eyes which gave a picture of joy, anticipation and hope.

Have you ever flown a model aeroplane? If you have, there is no doubt that you have had an experience that is unique. To fly one properly, you have to handle it carefully, work it with skill and see that there are no obstacles in the way of its flight and you have to follow the experiment very, very earnestly in order that you can note where there is room for improvement.

The boy who flies a model aeroplane is bound to LOOK UP; the things on the ground have no interest for him and will not help him. The thrill of accomplishment is only obtained when your model, on which you have spent so much time and patience is flying gracefully and beautifully above your head, and you will learn from this that the only things really worth while are those that make you LOOK UPWARD.

It was a long, long time before the little lad could induce himself to part with the three quarters, and it came to me that he made a big sacrifice when he did so. After all, you have to give up something to obtain those things which you most desire; and because of this, they are so much more worth the while.

"It's not the things that come with ease or gather round us just to please, but those we fight for, strive to gain, that help us on the road to fame."

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS
By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

CHAPTER 18.

For a minute or two there was a silence that could be felt; and then the importance of making some preparation to meet this sudden and unexpected peril urged immediate action on both the men.

"What's the best thing to do?" asked Capt. Pat., looking towards his chief officer who was calmly scraping out the inside of his pipe with a well-worn pocket knife. Without removing his attention from this important operation, the other replied, "Nothing, at least for the present. I know the man Jack speaks of and when, at the last possible moment, he asked to be signed on as an ordinary seaman I did not at all care about his looks. But, as you know Sir, we were one man short, and being due to sail in an hour, there was no other course open to us but to take him."

"We seem to have a bad crew with us this voyage. How is it that so many of our old hands are not with us again?" asked the Captain. "I wish I knew" was the gloomy response. "Where they all went to is a mystery. Robins, the Bo'sun, with Stringer and Jim Hawkins, are all we have of those who sailed with us last voyage. I certainly don't like the looks of those others who have taken their place, and how loyal they would be in a case like this is a matter open to grave doubt."

"Then we shall have to unite against them, that's all" replied the Captain. "How many are we certain about?"

After placing his pipe carefully in his pocket Mr. Williams stood up. "Well," he said, "there's myself, Tim Kelly, our second officer; O'Hagan, the engineer; Dick and Mark, the two stokers; Robins, Stringer and Hawkins; Henderson, Chief Pursar, and Jack here; these with yourself, Sir, make up the party that we know would not stand for mutiny on the high seas."

A very thoughtful look showed itself on the face of Capt. Pat. "That makes a total of twelve," he said. "Not a bad number; all things considered, I think we shall be able to look after ourselves!"

"Yes, but you must remember, Sir, that the remainder make up far the larger crowd, twenty of them including the cook, and, as he is a nigger you can't say what he will do. Then they depend also on taking us by surprise."

"Which they won't do, thanks to Jack here!" was the hearty reply. "What are you so quiet for?" he added, turning to his nephew. The boy started, on hearing himself directly addressed. For the past quarter of an hour he had been busy thinking and a plan, only half formed as yet, had come into his mind. "I was only thinking Sir" he replied, "that it would be a good thing if we could just find out something more of what they intend to do."

"Very sensible," commented Mr. Williams, "but how?"

"Well Sir, I heard you say yesterday that it would be a good thing if those three holds in the Fo'castle were cleared out and made ready for extra storage of cargo so as to balance the ship better. If we did this and told off a large number of the crew, including our man and his two friends, and you put me in charge of the work with Mr. Henderson, we might learn something, if not from what they actually say,—for they would hardly talk much if we were there,—by their actions and general behaviour. They would not know we were watching them closely and they could hardly be contemplating murdering us without showing some sort of excitement."

"A splendid idea," was the ready reply. "Boy, you certainly have brains, and we will arrange this at once. But stay a moment! Supposing they discover your knowledge of their plans; I am sure afraid they will kill you at once."

Jack grinned. "They won't find that out, Sir; how could they? The very fact that I am alone in their company, for I think you had better not send Mr. Henderson with me, will convince them that I must be ignorant of their designs and learned nothing of their plans, even though I was recognized down in the hold, though I am sure I was not."

"Still Mr. Williams hesitated. It seemed like sending the boy to almost certain destruction."

"It's quite safe for him to go, I am sure," said Capt. Pat. "We must obtain knowledge of their intentions in some way. Should there be the slightest sign of danger, he can run back here. This is by far the best place in the ship to withstand an attack, and what arms and ammunition there are on board I have in that cupboard over there. I shall of course keep Babs very close to me, but it will be necessary until the last moment for her to appear on deck, otherwise suspicion might be aroused."

"Well, that is settled then," replied Mr. Williams with great satisfaction. "Come on, Jack, we will start operations and after I have set you to work I will let our loyal friends know what we have discovered and put them on their guard. We had better ask them, one at a time, to see you, Sir," he added, turning to the Captain. "If they all come together it would cause question." Capt. Pat. agreed and then turned his attention to his niece, who had been quietly playing all this time.

When he spoke to her there was nothing in the tone of his voice that showed the serious thoughts occupying his mind. Mr. Williams and Jack made their way slowly to the deck.

WHY SOME PERSONAL NEWS ITEMS ARE NOT PRINTED

Many people think personal items constitute news for a weekly newspaper. The fact is that these items are the last thing to be considered. The Watchman and the weekly newspapers of the Ontario-Quebec Division of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers' Association have advised their correspondents not to report when one neighbour calls upon another; for that is not news, but pure gossip. We have also asked that they make no mention of visits of persons who live within a few short miles of where they are visiting, unless the person is very aged and the occasion rare. The Watchman is endeavouring to increase its news both in volume and value, and also to exemplify its ideals of being free from gossip. Will you assist your district correspondents by supplying them with real news items that will be of interest to all readers?

NEWCOMERS FIND FRIENDS

"Best of all I have found friends" was the expressive sentence used by a mother from the Old Country, when in her time of need, destitute and a stranger in a strange land, members of a Stanstead County Women's Institute discovered that I provided necessities for herself and her children. A comfortably furnished home was provided, the services of a nurse secured during a period of illness, and little social gatherings arranged for the welcome to the new arrivals.

No wonder this woman looked upon her new friends as an unqualified blessing, and regards them and the work they are doing with unstinted admiration and gratitude.

"Going Up".

"The Hearts Content", gallant little Puss Moth plane that carried her courageous pilot, Captain J. A. Mollison, on the first East to West solo flight across the Atlantic, went up in new style at Wolfe's Cove, Quebec, recently.

Obedient to the orders of his physician and the request of his backer, Lord Wakefield, Captain Mollison decided to return to England in the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain". The monoplane went, too, and is seen being hoisted over the side of the liner.

Inset is Captain Mollison waving a greeting to Montreal Light Aeroplane Club pilots who roared past the Empress of Britain in a flying farewell.

With the idea of getting tourists to visit the Muskoka district during September and October as well as during July and August, Huntsville is this year holding a "foliage week," the Huntsville Forester announces. This town is to be congratulated on its initiative in seeking to prolong the tourist season in this manner. It should prove successful, for Muskoka trees are said to be beautiful indeed in the Fall of the year, and quite worth travelling a distance to see.

CLERGY OF QUEBEC ALERT TO STOP FIRES

One of the most valuable preventives of forest fires throughout Quebec is the strong conservation attitude of the clergy throughout the province, states the Canadian Forestry Association. In all sections, the clergy have displayed great alertness in clearing land and have warned repeatedly against destruction of the woodlands through preventable acts. The clerical attitude is not only due to knowledge of the economic effects of forest destruction, but in equal degree to a native love of the woodlands.

Municipalities Fall Down in Simple Demands of Self Respect

Golden Opportunities Missed—as a Tourist sees it.

Surely if municipalities realized the value of advertising, and a good appearance, they would wake up to the importance of the impression they make on the tourist who passes through.

One has just returned from a motor trip covering 2500 miles in Ontario and Quebec—nearly all in the latter province—and one is more than ever convinced of the implied advice contained in the truism "a man is known by the clothes he wears."

Our manufacturing concerns would not long employ a man who was careless of his appearance: every traveller knows that he must be at least fairly well groomed, and that a down-at-the-heel appearance will sell no goods, no matter how much better they are than the other fellow's.

Of course many of our municipalities realize this and the last 15 years has seen tremendous improvements in the approaches to our towns and cities, but one is speaking more particularly of the smaller places; our villages and small towns. Certainly those on the Highways, where a goodly bit of business is to be picked up in the summer from the passing tourist, should see to it that the traveller is impressed with the appearance of the place he is approaching, perhaps to the point of stopping the night, and if he is industrially inclined, to the extent of considering it even from that point of view.

No matter how modest the home there is no excuse for it to have an untidy and unkempt appearance, and the workman who lets his house and garden go to seed, will likely prove sloppy in his work, whereas the man who takes a pride in his home will also, in all probability, see that the work he turns out is up to the same standard.

The Horticultural Societies are doing a great deal to turn ugly spots into little parks and corners where flower beds may be planted and maintained at practically no cost to the municipality, but there are towns and villages where there is no such society (unfortunately) and where the onus rests to a large extent on the municipal officers themselves.

While one is on this subject, it may not be amiss to state that no village, no matter how small, should tolerate a dump for refuse on a highway, whether a side road or a main thoroughfare. It should be possible to find a spot off a side road where such refuse may be dumped. Not a mile from here (the writer lives in Ontario for 6 or 7 months of the year,) along a really beautiful concession road, there is such a dump where old stoves and tires and tinware and glassware, no longer usable are taken and left until kindly nature throws over them a covering blanket of vines or the grass grows up sufficiently tall to cover them. But refuse should not be allowed to be deposited there in the first place.

One was impressed, on this trip, by the evidence of unemployment everywhere. The fishing and lumbering and farming industries have been badly hit, men are out of work; one saw them sitting on old verandahs, leaning against buildings, at the stores, everywhere. Not only that, but at the shrines—some very modest, perhaps a rough cross of unpainted wood, perhaps a more ambitious one—one saw the implements of man's work (hammers, spades, saws, etc.) placed there as a real evidence to the spiritual power, of the very great need for work in the mill, on the farm, or in the forest.

One was touched with the simplicity of such faith; but without any reflection whatever on such sincerity, one could not help noticing that the plot of ground surrounding some of the homes was badly in need of care, the cemeteries right up to the foot of the shrine in some cases needed attention, and wondered why these men could not be employed to "clean house," as it were, and give the passing tourist an impression of courage in the face of hardship. Money may be scarce but labor is indeed plentiful.

Perhaps one might be pardoned for mentioning more explicitly a place which has all the natural advantages nature can give, but which leaves one with a feeling of great depression.

Thousands of tourists from Canada and the United States take the Saguenay trip. Its terminus is Chicoutimi, a city with a population now somewhere round 13,000. It has seen prosperous days, but now the lumber and pulp mills are closed and the families, many of them, in dire straits. But it was not always like this. Like the rest of us, it has seen prosperous times when money was more plentiful. Having half a day to spend in Chicoutimi, we hired a motor to take us round, but before the hour was up (and we were prepared to give a couple of hours to this mild dissipation) we were glad to be taken back to the boat or hotel. The roads were mostly unpaved, and those that were paved, were in a wretched condition. No attempt was made, by anyone to whom we spoke in the city, to impress us with the beauty of the scenery in which the city nestled, or to tell us of the limitless forests which surrounded it, and which, when good times came back again, would make the mills hum busily. Instead we were taken out half a mile on a road which (it was August, and the weather had been dry) proved so bad we were forced to turn back, and were told that all the roads were in similar condition. There were no nice gardens in connection with any houses, except perhaps one or two; in fact no attempt had been made to fix the places up, and the tourist was not encouraged. Prosperity will again return to Chicoutimi, as it will to other cities, but with it we trust a consciousness of the possibilities of a good appearance, will also be born. Hundreds of men were out of work in this city, and it did seem a pity that they could not employ themselves, first, in fixing up their homes, second, in being employed, even at a very low wage, by the municipality to fix up the roads. Here is a city, the end of a magnificent trip, with immeasurable possibilities from a tourist point of view; yet we were glad to escape from it. Some one with enterprise, who would start up a good looking tea-room not far from the boat, would make a small fortune, and this is but one way in which depression might be turned to good account.

Even if our words should bring upon us the scathing wrath of the Council of this city, we cannot refrain from mention of such a glaring example of poor advertising.

One of necessity has to slacken speed through towns and villages; therefore one has time to look round. We have all heard the remark, when recounting experiences of a trip and wishing to recall some adventure of it, "You know, it was when we were passing through that lovely little town, what was its name?" and the name is associated with the good impression it made on the traveller.

Time was when the railway was the principal method of transportation from one point to another, but now when the motorist pays for and demands good roads, when in Toronto, and Montreal and on the Highways adjacent, one may, in the summer, see motor cars from practically every Province in Canada and every State in the Union, it behooves the municipalities, small and large, to see to it that they make a good impression on the travelling public.

Heywood Broun, may become a kibitzer if the kibitzer dies or goes home. But kibitzers never do die or go home. You know that.

Excavation watching, however, is a gentler art. No watcher ever speaks. It is not in the records that an enthusiast ever cupped his hands and shouted to the steam shovel operator, "That was very good old man, but if I were handling that shovel I should have dug a little bit further over to the left." Or, "I hope you don't mind a suggestion, but if you had only put a little more English on that last shovelful you wouldn't have missed the wagon so badly." No, they don't do that. For one thing, the appearance of the average steam shovel operator does not invite suggestions.

What the clan are doing now we have no idea. Is it possible that they have become volunteer dentists' assistants?

Old man Carrington was selling his farm and there were two fine teams for quick sale. Bill Smart didn't need them but he thought of a man he knew in the cartage business in town.

Owing to the large number of accidents which have occurred in this vicinity of late, it is well for motorists to take warning and be ever on guard for the unexpected. The fact that a permit has been granted one to drive a car, does not give the right to do exactly as he or she likes. Drivers must be subject to the rules of common decency on the road, recognizing that dangers lurk at all crossings when going through a town; and the only way to play safe is to drive one's car under proper control.

Quite apart from the demands of the law, which will doubtless be more rigidly enforced in town and neighboring highways as a result of the havoc and tragedy of the past week—the simple standards of humanity and respect for human life, call for the exercise of greater care in motoring.

BUY BRITISH

Does 'Buy British' mean anything to you, or is it just another catch phrase? Any buying campaign depends to a very large extent on the women of the country, but it is a very difficult thing to make them realize their power. You may think that your influence is not worth bothering about. It may be compared to the dropping of a pebble in the water. The pebble itself is very small but it disturbs the water for some distance.

It is not enough to merely buy the British made article but the reason for your choice should be mentioned. Any merchant who hears frequently that an article is chosen because it is a British production is going to be affected by that choice in his buying.

Women would be well advised to do as much of their buying as possible in their own town. It is said that charity begins at home—buying should begin there too. If there is more buying at home there will be less need of charity. Every transaction that is carried on creates work for someone. If that work is done by someone at home it liberates wages to be spent on possibly the very thing that you are selling. When it comes to the fine point, anyone who is working for remuneration is selling something, whether it is the product of our hands or of our brains.

Buy in your home town and ask for Canadian and British productions. Make your individual influence count.

WATERWAYS PLAN UPHELD BY SAUVÉ

work accomplished by Premier Bennett and his colleagues would be productive of great results, not only for Canada, but for the Empire and the entire world.

Hon. André Fauteux spoke briefly of the Imperial Conference, showing that the ministers of Quebec, Messrs. Duranleau and Sauvé, had played a useful part in it. The speaker twitted the Liberal critics claiming that while some expressed the opinion that the conference was a dismal failure, others said that whatever good results could be expected from it were due to the fact that Mr. Bennett had adopted the Liberal views on tariff matters and British preferences.

Other speakers were Gaston Gibeault, Leonard Blanchard, Herman Barrette, J. P. Sauvé, and the chairman, Leopold Nantel.

Text of Speech

Mr. Sauvé's speech, in part, was as follows:—"The Governments have done a large share and they are disposed to continue, but what will be the individual effort? What shall each one of us now do? Where will political ambitions lead? To what goal will be directed selfish interest, covetous speculations, the diffusion of subversive doctrines, the education of the classes, the formation of the educationists, the instruction of competent authorities? The crisis and its causes offer touching lessons. Governments are always sufficiently responsible for their own actions, too often even for those of the citizens, but the question of the individual's direct responsibility cannot be treated too often. Democracy and its offspring, socialism, as well as its adjunct, communism, have given a false importance to the individual and have led him into the valley of disorder, by failing to impress him with a true notion of his responsibility."

Mr. Sauvé outlined Canada's trade relations within the Empire, recalling what had been done in the past to extend and stabilize them and asked:

"Was it worth while? In 1931 England imported from countries outside of the British Empire, wheat, meat, wool, lumber, cattle and mineral products, etc., to the extent of three thousand millions of dollars ($14,512,000 pounds sterling). In 1931, the countries of the Empire bought from foreign countries to the extent of twenty-five thousand million dollars. These importations consisted of cattle, fruit, meat, cereals, dairy produce, eggs, hides, condensed and powdered milk, wool, poultry, grain, tobacco and vegetables. Canada bought for over three thousand millions in 1930. In 1931, England imported from Russia over one hundred and fifty million dollars worth of products; from the Argentine, two hundred and fifty million; from Denmark, over two hundred and twenty-five million."

"We ask England for preference, not only against the products of these foreign countries, considered our most dangerous competitors, but also for an agreement which would limit her purchases in the above countries in such manner as to obtain that the English consumers purchase as much as required from the Dominions."

"Russia for example, offered ruinous competition to our lumber industry on the English market, so far as to paralyze our timber industry here and to close our lumber camps. It is expected that business will pick up again shortly."

Scheme Endorsed

Mr. Sauvé said that he could not understand Premier Taschereau's attitude on the waterways plan. The scheme had been repeatedly endorsed by the leaders of the party, and even by Premier Taschereau himself, the speaker claimed. The a-

AGED RESIDENT OF ARUND- DEL, PASSES AWAY

An old and esteemed resident of Arundel, in the person of Robert McDonald, passed away on the 9th. inst. at the Lakefield home of his nephew, Henry McDonald, after a brief illness of eight days.

Mr. McDonald was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry McDonald of Lakefield. He became married to Miss Catherine McMullen, and spent over 40 years in Arundel where he was respected for his community interest and industrious living.

The deceased gentleman is survived by his widow, one son, Henry, at St. Eugene, Que., and six grandchildren: two daughters having passed away some years ago.

The funeral service was held at the residence of his nephew, interment following at Lakefield Cemetery.

Wheeling airplanes added a roaring farewell to the cheers with which passengers and well-wishers speeded Captain J. A. Mollison on his return to England aboard the Empress of Britain as she sailed on her seventh departure of the 1932 season from Wolfe's Cove, Quebec. The intrepid solo trans-Atlantic flyer was promised a quiet time on his trip by Captain Latta, commander of the Empress.

"I am not running away from the election. I am out of politics and have no vote in the district of Columbia," said Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the famous United States war-time President, interviewed at the Banff Springs Hotel recently, where she stopped en route to Tokyo where she is attending the marriage of a family connection. Mrs. Wilson motored on to Chateau Lake Louise as part of her tour of the Canadian Rockies.

"I have never seen a more beautiful country or enjoyed a visit more," said Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, British Secretary-of-State for the Colonies, as he said farewell to British Columbia when boarding the Canadian Pacific Imperial Limited on his way to Calgary. He enjoyed his favorite sport, fishing, in that province, where he and his party took four fine fish, including a 17-pound salmon. (869) mentment presented to the David motion by Jean-Paul Sauvé at the last session of the Legislature did not condemn the enterprise, but aimed to protect the interests of the province in the matter, the speaker said.

The Postmaster-General claimed that Premier Taschereau, when he condemns the St. Lawrence Waterways scheme, is mainly trying to protect private interests, those of the trusts, his great friends. This would explain, said the speaker, why Mr. Taschereau is not supported in his campaign by the Federal Liberal Leaders of Quebec nor by those of Ontario.

PRETTY WEDDING AT WEIR

Williams—Dubeau

A very pretty wedding took place on Saturday afternoon, in the Church of the Redeemer, at Weir, when the Rev. Gordon W. Phillips united in marriage Beulah Pearl, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Dubeau of Arundel, and James Douglas, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Williams of Weir.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very beautiful as she entered the Church to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Mrs. W. L. Morrison. She wore a bridal gown of white georgette made on long lines with a lace bodice, and a long tulle veil made in cap effect, caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white dahlias and gladioli.

Miss Vera Williams, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid, and was dressed in a pink taffeta dress and large picture hat to match. Mr. Ray MacRae acted as best man.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. L. K. MacAdam sang, "Oh! perfect love."

The ushers were, Mr. Ray Craig, nephew of the groom, and Mr. Arthur Loudin.

The church was tastefully decorated with autumn flowers. Following the ceremony, a delightful wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents, to the immediate relatives, and later in the evening a reception was held at Round Lake Inn, Weir, where some 350 guests gathered together and spent a pleasant evening dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams left later on a motor trip to several points in Northern Quebec.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts.

The out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Code, Mr. Alex. Cowan, The Misses Janet Simpson, Violet and Amy Williams, Messrs. Roy Williams, A. MacNab, Harry Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bell, Mr. Leonard Davis of Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. H. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. J. McMahon, the Misses Gertrude Grace and Ruth McMahon, Messrs. Find their Missing Man in St. Jerome Jail

R.C.M.P. Officers Arrest Three Men and Seize Still in Barn, Near Montfort, Quebec.

Sought by the Outremont and provincial police forces when he failed to return home recently from a hunting trip in the woods near St. Jerome, Que., Samuel Rotter, 43 years of age, of 801 Querbes avenue, Outremont was located last Thursday night by the Outremont police in the St. Jerome jail. Rotter had been arrested about four days previously by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in connection with an illicit still which had been operating at Montfort, Que., a few miles from St. Jerome. Two other men were also arrested with Rotter. They are being held at the jail where their bail was set at $1,000 each.

When Rotter was arrested, he failed to notify his wife and she learned that the three friends with whom her husband had left the city were back and was told that when the friends were leaving for Montreal, Rotter had told them that he would remain for a few days "on business." Mrs. Rotter became anxious as to her husband's whereabouts and notified the provincial police when a wide search for him was started.

The Provincial police communicated with St. Jerome, and later with the jail authorities, and found that Rotter and two other men were being held awaiting $1,000 bond each in connection with a raid made on a still four days previously.

The detective could obtain little information about the still. He was told however, that members of the R.C.M.P. had swooped down on a lonely barn on the outskirts of Montfort where they found Rotter and two other men. A most up-to-date distilling apparatus was seized by the officers and the three men were sent to jail when they failed to supply the bond money.

Man is Killed when Auto Turns Turtle

Three Others Injured In Accident Between Lachute and St. Hermas.

Charles McCluskey, aged 50 dies almost instantly.

One man was killed and three persons were injured when the roadster automobile in which they were riding missed the road in taking a curve and toppled into the ditch where it turned turtle on the highway between here and St. Hermas at 10.15 o'clock last night. The three injured persons are not in a serious condition and the three including the driver of the vehicle, were held by the local and provincial Roads Department police for the inquest which was held this morning by Coroner B. N. Wales.

The dead man is Charles McCluskey, 50 years of age, of Montreal. He suffered a fracture of the skull and died almost instantly. The others, Harry Braiding, 46 years of age, of Verdun; Mrs. J. H. Bailey, 35, of Montreal, and her four-year-old daughter, Thelma, suffered general bruises, but were not in a serious condition. They were treated by Dr. J. H. Mason and were later taken to the Desjardins Hotel.

The accident was investigated by Officers Turgeon, Legault and Drolet of the Provincial Motor-

Apple-seller Killed on Highway Near St. Canute

The absolute necessity of watchfulness when driving an automobile was brought forcibly home to Germain Lemay, 28 years of age, when on Thursday afternoon last he had the misfortune to cause the death of Adelard Gravel, 68, of St. Joseph du Lac.

It appears that Lemay, who is local agent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., was on his way to the district manager's office at St. Jerome, and when passing through St. Canute, he noticed a wagon at the side of the road, from the front of which there suddenly appeared Gravel, who was about to cross the road with a basket of apples. Lemay acknowledges looking through his mirror and seeing the man lying in the road, but seized with sudden fear he drove ahead, hardly knowing which way he was going.

On his return to Lachute he informed his father and friends what had taken place, and they immediately left for St. Jerome where Lemay surrendered himself to the Chief of Police, Dr. Labelle, of St. Jerome, who at this time was holding the inquest, was notified by the chief that Lemay had confessed to having accidentally struck and killed Gravel and the jurors withheld their verdict until such time as Lemay arrived to give his evidence.

Lemay testified that at the time of the accident he was travelling about 25 or 30 miles per hour and did not stop because he was unnerved by the accident. He further testified that he saw, from the mirror of his motor car, the victim lying on the roadway, but was so nervous under the circumstances that he took the wrong route; drove towards St. Sophie instead of St. Jerome. Lemay then added that he lost his way and asked a farmer the way to St. Jerome.

It was learned at the inquest that Gravel had left St. Joseph du Lac with a load of apples, accompanied by Henri Lefebvre, 20 years of age, his nephew. At St. Canute the wagon was first parked and Gravel and Lefebvre went from door to door for the purpose of selling apples. The accident occurred at Lachapelle, situated about 2 1/2 miles south of St. Jerome. At the time of the accident the vehicle loaded with apples was parked opposite the Laganier Dairy, Lachapelle.

Henri Lefebvre, the victim's nephew, testified that the driver of the motor car was travelling quite fast. Witness further testified that Lemay did not stop although he slowed down after having struck his uncle.

Adelard Gravel, the victim, a hunchback, suffered a fractured skull and fractures to both legs and arms. He was struck by the automobile after he had passed in front of his own vehicle for the purpose of crossing the highway.

The preliminary hearing was to have taken place on Tuesday, but was adjourned to a later date.

The cycle Police who found that the quartette was seated on the one seat of the roadster which was travelling rapidly in the direction of Lachute. In taking a curve, the driver lost control and the vehicle went into the ditch.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE TOPIC IS "REALITY"

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon for September 25, is "REALITY."

Golden text: "From everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." (Ps. 90:2)

Among the Scriptural citations comprised in the Lesson-Sermon is the following: "Thine O Lord is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine." "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." (1 Ch. 29:11, Pr. 16:7)

Girls should never accept a ride from a stranger. He may be that kind of a man. In any case he'll think she is that kind of a girl.

Hints for Homebodies

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman.

STARTING TO SCHOOL

Many cities have a thorough health inspection for the little children who are just starting to school. Unfortunately, very few smaller places and rural sections have this inspection. Individuals may have their own child examined, but as a rule they do not think about it and if they did, would not think it necessary.

It is surprising the number of minor defects that are brought to light by this inspection. Defects of eye-sight and of hearing are among the most common. Diseased tonsils and adenoids are to be found only too frequently and as a rule there is dental work to be done. Occasionally more serious troubles are found.

Even the minor defects impair efficiency and many a poor child is blamed for its slow progress at school when it is not the fault of the child's brain, but is due to a physical defect.

Organizations such as the Women's Institute and the Home and School Club are puzzled at times to know just what work to undertake that will be a benefit to the community. If there is no inspection of the classes entering school, there is work which lies in the scope of either organization. It should not be a very expensive undertaking as most doctors are ready to co-operate for the good of the community.

County health-units are proving to be a benefit. It is a pity there are not more of them. They will come, but it takes time.

TOMATO JUICE

Many people have not a sufficient quantity of Vitamin C in the diet. This vitamin is to be found chiefly in raw foods, as cooking usually destroys it. Tomatoes are an exception to this as properly canned tomatoes will still contain Vitamin C after cooking. It has been found that it is not the cooking that destroys the Vitamin C in canned tomatoes, but the oxidation, that is the exposure to the air. So when canning tomato or tomato juice, great care must be exercised to prevent oxidation. No matter how they are canned tomatoes are a valuable food because of the minerals which they contain, but as we all need vitamin C and few of us get a sufficient quantity, we might as well make the extra effort to prevent its destruction.

Choose well ripened tomatoes as they are the richest in vitamins. The green portions develop a bitter flavor. Core the tomatoes and mash slightly with a tomato masher. Fill the kettle in order to exclude as much air as possible, and heat almost to boiling point. Put the tomatoes through a sieve to remove skins and seeds. Work as rapidly as possible at this point as the tomatoes should not be exposed to air. Return the juice to the kettle and bring to the boiling point. Have the sealers or small pop bottles sterilized and fill with tomato juice, filling the bottles as full as possible. Place the bottles in a pan of boiling water and cook for five minutes for the sealers and two minutes for the small bottles.

This gives plain tomato juice suitable for babies. If it is not required for babies, add 1 tablespoon each of salt and sugar to the gallon of juice. Give your children plenty of tomato juice. It helps prevent disease, aids in growth and calms the nerves generally.

SPICED RIPE CUCUMBERS

Twelve ripe cucumbers, 1½ cups sugar, 2 cups vinegar, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon of whole cloves, 1 tablespoon whole allspice, 2 tablespoons cinnamon bark, 1 tablespoon white mustard seed.

Cut the cucumbers in slices one inch thick. Place in a bowl and sprinkle over them ½ cup salt. Let stand over-night then drain and wash in cold water. Mix the sugar, spices and vinegar and boil them together for five minutes. Add cucumbers and cook slowly until tender. When sufficiently cooked the cucumbers should be clear and the liquid should be the consistency of a medium thick syrup.

FRUIT CHILI SAUCE

This is a frequently printed recipe but as it is a very popular one I will repeat it for the benefit of any who have missed it. It is delicious with cold meats and is an excellent sauce to combine with salad dressing to make a Thousand Island Dressing.

Thirty ripe tomatoes, 6 peaches, 6 pears, 6 onions, 3 red peppers, 1 quart vinegar, 2 tablespoons salt, 4 cups brown sugar, 2 oz. whole allspice.

Blanch tomatoes, pears and peaches in boiling water, then cold dip and peel them. Cut into small pieces. Remove seeds from peppers and chop onions and peppers. Tie spices in a bag and combine all the ingredients. Boil for about 3 hours. If you do not wish the pickle to be too highly spiced, the spice bag may be removed when spiced to suit your taste. Bottle in sterilized jars and seal.

"LET'S FIRE SOME CUSTOMERS"

The Sales Manager jumped to his feet.

"Wait a minute, gentlemen. I have a better recommendation than that. Let's fire some customers. And let's tell our prospective customers that we don't want their business."

"Do what?" interrupted the chairman. "Why, what do you mean?"

"That's just what we are doing," was the answer, "when we decrease or cut our advertising. We fire our greatest asset: Our Customers. When we quit telling them about the goods we have to sell, they will go elsewhere to buy products that they read about. Every year our business has grown, because our number of customers has increased."

Sid: "Your uncle seems rather hard of hearing." Sam: "Hard of hearing! Why, he once conducted family prayers while kneeling on the cat."

"Instead of being in favor of fewer customers, I want to see more. I move the original full amount recommended by the advertising manager be approved."

Startled at the realization of what they might have done, the group, without further discussion passed the motion.

Can any business grow and prosper without customers?

Without, in fact, a constant growing number of customers?

Obviously, No! Certainly this is no time to discharge customers, to send them to buy goods of your competitor. Instead, isn't it a period when you must hold all your regular customers, and invite and attract new ones?

Lesson for October 2

THE CHRISTIAN'S DEVOTIONAL LIFE

GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory now and for ever.

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:15-17; Daniel 6:10; II Timothy 3:14-17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Talking to God. JUNIOR TOPIC—What Real Prayer Is. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Christian's Devotional Life. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Means of Christian Growth.

The Christian's growth is by means of his devotional life. It requires the symmetrical development of his understanding and heart. Bible study and prayer go hand in hand. The believer's affections need proper direction and exercise.

1. The Christian's Prayer Life (Matt. 6:6-15).

In Christ's teaching in this passage on prayer we note:

1. False prayer (vv. 5-7). This consists:

a. In one praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). Many prayers uttered in public are false, for the supreme consideration is what the people think rather than what God thinks. Men who thus pray get a reward but not from God.

b. In using vain repetitions (vv. 7, 8). This does not mean that we should ask but once for the thing desired, for we have examples of Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26:39-46; II Cor. 12:7, 8); but rather that the use of meaningless repetitions, reiterations of empty sentences be avoided.

2. True prayer (v. 6). Real prayer is communion of the child of God with his heavenly Father. Life for its fullest development needs both solitude and companionship. God, our Creator, knew what our natures require. Therefore, he commands both public and private prayer (Heb. 10:25; Matt. 6:6).

3. The model prayer (vv. 9-13). This was given in response to the disciples' request that the Lord would teach them to pray (Luke 11:1).

a. A right relationship—"Our Father" (v. 9). Only those who have become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ can pray aright.

b. A right attitude—"Hallowed be thy name" (vv. 9, 10). When one realizes that he has been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of his dear Son (Col. 1:13) by being a child of God, he cannot help pouring out his soul in gratitude and praise, intensely longing for the kingdom, the righteous rule of Christ on the earth.

c. A right spirit (vv. 11-13). This spirit involves:

(1) Trust which looks to God for the supply of daily need. We are dependent upon him for our daily food. With all man's boasted progress he cannot make a harvest.

(2) The spirit of love which results in forgiveness of others. God will not listen to the prayers of one who has an unforgiving spirit.

(3) That of holiness which moves one to pray and not to be led into temptation and moves him to long to be delivered from the Evil One.

(4) Regular prayer (Dan. 6:10). Though prohibited by royal decree from asking a petition from any god or man except the king, Daniel did not depart from his regular custom of prayer to God three times a day.

II. The Christian's Bible Study (II Tim. 3:14-17).

This scripture exhibits the value of the Holy Scriptures. Devotional life undirected by the Scriptures will develop in a wrong direction. The affections need to be disciplined through the understanding.

1. The Scriptures able to make one wise unto salvation (v. 15). Salvation is in Christ alone. It is secured through faith in his finished work on the cross. True wisdom leads to Christ crucified since "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12), "and without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. 9:22).

2. The Scriptures discipline the life (vv. 16, 17). In the Scriptures doctrine is set forth, the standard of conduct which is absolutely needed. The only place to find God's standard of life is in his Holy Word. It not only exhibits the divine standard, but it improves; that is, refutes error. The way to deal with error is not denunciation, but the positive presentation of truth. Then, too, it corrects: that is sets straight many of the dislocations of personal and social conduct. The Word of God not only sets straight but instructs in righteousness and equips for service.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

If you expect to get to heaven you must go in that direction.

Do not pray for easy lives; pray to be stronger men and women.

If I take care of my character, my reputation will take care of itself.

It is one thing to see the way you should go, and quite another to go the way you see.

HEART OF THE NORTH

BY
BYRON MOWERY

CHAPTER VII.—On his journey, Al-
an runs across "Buzzard" Featherof,
famous aviator of the World War, and
now "on his own" with a dispirited
machine. Amity of spirit draws them together, and Alan enlists "Buzzard"
in the enterprise. Lacking sufficient
funds to procure equipment, they loot
government stores, starting their pur-
suit of the bandits, themselves criminals in the eyes of the law.

CHAPTER VIII.—"Buzzard" Jensen,
leader of the bandits, plans to capture
Joyce MacMillan and escape to Manitoba. At Fort Endurance Haskell catches on that Bill Hardsock is caching gasoline and oil for Alan at
En Traverse lake, and plans with Constable Whipple to capture Alan when
he plans alights there.

I had to wade out and set on a rock
with the water up under my chin,
where I didn't dare go to sleep or I'd been drowned."

Merely by looking at Bill, Alan knew that his former partner had left half his story untold. It was only afterwards that he heard all the details of Bill's heroic siege.

"How about Joyce?" he asked.
"You've been to see her, Bill?"

"I ducked aside twice. Last time was a week ago. She's taken in a big raft of peltry. She's closing up the place to go out to Edmonton and be with her dad."

"A week ago," Alan thought. "Anything could have happened in a week."
He asked, "Any news at Endurance?"
Just everyday things, Bill reported.
Except for Larry. Larry would cry, Bill said, whenever he looked at his chattered leg. Larry, who kept himself as young as men half his age,
who prided himself on his wolf-lean body—he was wasted away to a mere shadow of his former self.

Glancing out across En Traverse, Alan suggested: "We'd better be leaving here. Haskell and his stool algeon over there probably saw us light.
They may take a notion to whip across the lake after us. Where's the oil and gas, Bill?"

"Right you by that rock jumble.
The Smoky is just this side. I'll go along—"

"You stay here; you're about once in. Buzzard, you turn the plane and make ready for a quick getaway in case that launch shows up. I'll get the drums."

He hurried to the tangle of jun-pers and granite boulders where he found the precious gas and oil which Bill had sworn to bring to the rendezvous. Taking a load out to the plane, Alan hoisted it up to Buzzard,
who began siphoning into the wing tank.

With an anxious inquiry in his bloodshot eyes, Bill asked:
"Say, Alan, why can't I go along on this trick? I'd give a leg to. I'm a
w. o. l. now. Haskell can't do much worse to me than he intends to do,
as it is."

After all that Bill had done for them, Alan hadn't the heart to refuse
him. He asked Featherof:
"How about it—can we carry a third person?"

"Well, we maybe could. But I wouldn't like . . . It'd cut down our gas load, and this is only a two-place plane."

"Then I'll not go," Bill agreed
sturdily. "Don't want to be a drag.
I'll sleep off my dry-jag here and then mosey in to Endurance."

Alan went after two more drums.
As he reached the plant with them,
his ears caught a faint low drone barely audible far out upon En Traverse. Standing up on the cockpit edge, he turned his glasses north.
Six miles out, the powerful scarlet-
and-gold launch was heading straight
toward them.

"Knock off on that!" he jabbed at Buzzard. "We've got to get gone.
They'll ram us, or shoot at us from protection of the launch. You've got enough in the tank to take us to the Alooska. We'll stow these drums aboard, and what we can't take we'll leave here on this headland. Can get it later."

Under Buzzard's direction they worked frantically. When they were ready, when Bill clambered down into the canoe and held out his hand in good-by, Alan was struck to the heart
by the pleading unspoken prayer which Bill stoutly refused to word.

"Buzzard!" He jerked around to his flight partner. "Bill's got to go along!
D—d if I can leave him out in the cold! I simply can't do it."

"Then try to wedge him in with you.
We'll carry him, if we have to tie
him on!"

Alan pulled him up. Bill managed to squeeze into the tiny one-place compartment, and by that act deserted the Mounted Police.

With the big boat only a mile out,
Buzzard taxied the plane and headed it parallel to the shore line. It seemed to Alan that the White Speedair, heavily laden with gas and oil and a third man, would never rise from the water.
It taxied nearly a half-mile before it began smacking the wavelets. The police boat swerved right and diagonalized in to cut across its course.
White puffs of smoke were bursting from a rifle in the prow, from a rifle
in the hands of George Haskell.

But when the plane finally did take hold of the air, it left the boat behind in a twinkling. Roaring out of range, it swung away into the northeast, toward its goal on the Big Alooska.

CHAPTER X

The Secret of Many Waters

Two miles down river Buzzard throttled the motor, eased the stick forward and glided expertly down and down into that difficult narrow lane
of evergreens.

Alan started to get out the canvas
canoe to tow the plane in to the landing; but Joyce, understanding, untied her father's sturdier craft, laid in an extra paddle, and came skirling out
toward them.

As Alan clambered down upon a float and waited, he remembered his decision to tell Joyce what had happened within him since he saw her last, and to tell her of that inexorable circumstance which had led to his engagement to Elizabeth. Easy that decision then, but he wavered
now. Did he dare tell her that? If it was useless, if she had put him out of her life, did he dare resurrect all the poignant memories and intimacies between them? Today he would find out how she regarded him; today she would surely give him some clear token.

Reaching out, he caught the prow of her canoe. Joyce rose and stepped up. . . . In another instant he was clasping her hand.

"Joyce! Joyce! I was afraid for you—here alone, girl. I can't tell you how glad—when I saw you . . . And glad to be back here."

As their eyes met, as Alan felt her small hand warm in his, he was torn between fear. In that first moment of their meeting, when impressions stood out so sharp and clear, it seemed that all passion had gone out of Joyce's manner toward him. She greeted him warmly, she was friendly, even cordial, but in the same way as she would have met Bill Hardsock or Pedneault or Larry.

Introducing her to Buzzard, he stepped down into the canoe, lapped
the painter rope around a strut; and together he and she guided the plane athwart current to the landing. After mooring it securely and getting part of their personal duffle, the four of them, with old Pence appointing himself guard over the machine, went up the path to the trading store.

Alan could fairly feel the dozen eager questions Joyce wanted to ask him: Who was this new-found friend whom he called Buzzard? Where had they got this plane? How did they intend to use it against those bandits?
But practical little soul as always, she asked no questions then. The three men, tired and hungry and desperately in need of rest, were her first consideration. Going back to the kitchen, she heated them water to wash and shave, and set about getting a hot substantial meal.

Alan happened to notice that his picture, which for two years had stood on Joyce's dresser, was not there now.
It halted him like a blow. Why had she taken it down? Was it some accident, entirely innocent? Or . . .

Back in the kitchen, while Buzzard was outside washing away the grime
and oil of five days' flight, he remembered the celture fleecie and found it and brought it to Joyce.

"I thought of you, out in Edmonton," he said awkwardly, breaking the string. "I believed you might like this. Joyce. It isn't much, but I was short of . . . I was pretty near broke."

As Joyce unfolded the sash-belt and saw its exquisite beauty, an admiration leaped into her eyes. "Oh, it's beautiful! It's the loveliest I've ever seen anywhere."

But then, as she looked from the gift to the giver, something seemed to check her. With an effort she forced herself to say quietly, "It was kind of you, Alan, to think of me."

Alan turned away in bitter disappointment. "It was kind of you . . ."
How cold and distant those words sounded. She was talking to him across an abyss.

When Buzzard and he came back in,
they sat down to their meal. As she passed them food and the three of them talked, Alan could not help noticing Buzzard's quick ardent admiration of Joyce. Buzzard kept glancing

Buzzard Kept Glancing at Her, Studying Her Intently.

at her, studying her intently, evidently astonished to find a pretty, well-educated girl like her living almost alone
here in this far-northern wilderness.

Later, when Joyce had insisted on their getting a few hours of rest and had left them in her father's room, he remarked:

"There's one lucky devil in this world, Baker. The man that Miss MacMillan's going to marry."

Alan winced. He had never thought of Joyce marrying another man. The remark aroused a passionate unreasoning hurt in him.

Sitting at the edge of the bed, Buzzard smoked a cigarette and glanced nervously at his partner who had lain down and was trying to get a little rest to fit himself for the flight and battle just ahead. Something was wrong between Alan and this winsome, spirited Joyce MacMillan. There was,
or had been, some passionate relationship between them. It had evidently gone on the rocks: Baker was engaged to some girl at Fort Endurance;
and Miss MacMillan . . . Well, there was that incident which he himself had seen half an hour ago when he happened to glance through the window.

"It's a pity," he thought, "for them to bust up. A d—d shame, that's what. She's a regular girl. Looks, personality and spunk. . . . Lord,
I'd hate to ever quarrel with her!"

He wondered whether to tell Alan about that incident he'd seen. Alan was evidently floundering around in the dark about Miss MacMillan. He was a bit awkward and blundered in such matters. Buzzard thought:

"First chance I get, believe I'll tell him what she did. He ought to know.
She either loves him or hates him, to do a thing like that!"

When Alan woke up, late in the evening, Buzzard was still asleep and Bill Hardsock was dead to the world. Hoping to find Joyce, he went out into the trading hall.

Joyce was not there. For a few moments Alan stood looking about. As Bill had told him, she was closing out the post. He hated to think of Joyce's girlhood home being sold to some utter stranger. Thinking of Larry,
soon to be invalided out of service
and condemned to a life of intolerable idleness, he wondered whether he might not get this post for his crippled patrol partner. It was well located, and Larry's host of friends among the Indians would be sure to bring him their furs.

Still hunting Joyce, he went down to the landing where old Pence, whittling at his story-stick, was guarding the plane against any log floating down and damaging it.

"You rise up early, Alan b'y."
"Yes. Got a couple things to do.
They must've been on my mind.
Where's Joyce?"

"She went down th' river bank,
down thar t' that fast brook comin'
out'n th' timber, to snag some trout.
We're shy on meat."

Alan stepped into Dave MacMillan's canoe, laid in an extra paddle, and started down stream. Gliding around the first bend, he saw Joyce two hundred yards ahead, standing on a jutting rock beside a brook mouth. When he came alongside and lifted the canoe prow out upon the shelving
rock, she greeted him with a quiet friendly smile. They sat down together on the wolf-foot moss.

After his days in the plane, with the swish of hurtling struts and the thunder of a motor dining his ears, it was incredibly quiet on the spruce-buried stream.

Very observant, he covertly stared at Joyce. She was looking past him at the far shore and woods. As he studied her features, it seemed to Alan that something profound had happened to her since he saw her last. She had changed; she was hardly the same girl. There was some new strange spiritual quality about her, as of a person who has gone down into a ravaging sickness and has had the

GRATEFUL MOTHER'S LETTER

"With my last baby," writes Mrs. William McLean of Elora, "and I have a family of eight children, I was only able to nurse him for about four months, and then naturally turned to Eagle Brand to bring him along. He was a normal infant all the way, but after starting him on Eagle Brand he gave me little or no trouble, sleeping regularly between feedings, and grew to be such a happy, contented little fellow. He cut his teeth without difficulty and has not had a sick day since. Wherever I go, people admire him and say 'What a lovely baby,' and ask me how I feed him. Eagle Brand is highly thought of in our home, and I recommend it to every mother seeking a satisfactory food for her infant."

Dr. J. A. Gordon Coming to Grenville Church

On Sunday, October 2nd., the Grenville Baptist Church will celebrate its forty-fifth anniversary. Dr. J. A. Gordon, a veteran preacher of the denomination and retired pastor of the First Baptist Church, Montreal, will preach morning and evening on the Anniversary Sunday and will remain for the Harvest Home Supper and program on Monday evening.

There are still many people in Grenville Township and vicinity, who remember the spiritual revival of forty-five years ago, when Dr. A. J. Vining, then a student at Woodstock Baptist College, came to Grenville and conducted meetings in the Betts' Schoolhouse, now Rawcliffe, and later at Ogdensburg. Night after night and week after week the meetings continued, with marked success. After six weeks' meetings at Betts Schoolhouse gatherings were held in the Ogdensburg Schoolhouse and many more were converted.

Before Mr. Vining left for Chicago that fall, forty persons had been baptized and work on a building commenced. More were baptized and the Church building opened that year. Since that time more have been added as members of the church and most of the charter members have passed to their reward. But some remain. During the intervening years, this church has continuously served the community under faithful pastors.

Under these same pastors, the services were continued at the Ogdensburg Schoolhouse and for a time at the Mabel Schoolhouse. Another church building was erected at Stonefield, but this was moved some four years ago to a position between Mabel and Ogdensburg, where it now is known as the Chatham West Church.

Dr. Irving visited this community in July of this year and conducted two services in the Grenville Church. He regretted very much that he could not attend this forty-fifth Anniversary of the Church he organized. However, the congregation looks forward to receiving a word of greeting from him and from other former pastors.

A cordial invitation is extended to the friends of this Church to join in celebrating its forty-fifth Anniversary.

Milk Producers Represented At Dealers' Meeting. Hope For Better Winter Prices

Just what will be the outcome of the Milk Dealers meeting in October at their next conference is hard to say and the milk producers are becoming rather uneasy. The summer rate has been ridiculously low and the farmers are justified in their protests for only receiving $1.35 per 100 lbs.

Less Charges

Calculating at the usual 10 gallons to the 100 pounds, present prices mean that the farmer gets a trifle more than 3.4 cents a quart for the milk he sells to Montreal distributors, from which transportation charges have to be deducted. These amount to about 25 cents per hundred pounds when milk has to be shipped approximately 50 miles.

David Black, of Lachute, president of the Milk Producers' Association, when interviewed by The Star on Friday stated that all the principal dealers were represented at the conference held during the course of the day and called off only when the farmers had to get back for their milkings.

"There has been overproduction of milk," he admitted, "and that has made it hard for us to raise prices. In addition some of the chain stores in Montreal have been selling milk as low as five cents a quart during the past month or two."

Hope Not Lost

"We hope to hold another meeting towards the end of October," he continued. "We haven't given up hope of getting better prices."

Representatives of Montreal distributors based their arguments at yesterday's meeting on the admitted fact that larger quantities of milk were available than could be absorbed by the local market, and that while their distributing charges were more or less static they were meeting with grave competition from stores who sold milk at low prices without having the heavy cost of house to house delivery.

J. L. St. Jacques Elevated to Judgeship

Elevation of J. L. St. Jacques, K.C., Montreal, to a judgeship of the King's Bench Division, officially announced at Ottawa last week, marks the recognition of one of Montreal's best known lawyers and of a Conservative politician of considerable reputation.

Born at St. Herbas, in 1877, a son of Joseph and Cazille Lafond St. Jacques, he was educated at Jacques Cartier normal school and Laval University, Montreal. Following his call to the bar in 1901, Mr. St. Jacques practised here in Lachute, and moved to Montreal in 1907. He was taken into partnership by Gustave Lamothe, K.C., later chief justice of the Court of King's Bench. Mr. St. Jacques is now head of this firm.

Entry into politics came for Mr. St. Jacques with his election to the Quebec legislative assembly, for this constituency of Argenteuil in 1925. He refused the nomination again in 1927 and has not since sought re-election although he has remained in close touch with things Conservative both in the provincial and Dominion field.

An exchange says that one of the reasons why Quebec doesn't feel the pinch so much as Ontario is that in Quebec, there is a car for every 16 people while in Ontario there is one for every six.

Lachute Orangemen Honor Their Chaplain

Rev. J. A. Lackey recipient of expensive regalia collar.

The Lachute Orange Lodge met in McArthur's Hall, last evening, (Wednesday) for their regular monthly meeting; and the L.O.B.A. also met in the lower hall, being honored at their gathering with the official visit of the M.W. Grand Mistress of British North America, Mrs. Darracott, of British Columbia, and the Rt. W. Grand Mistress of the Province of Quebec, Mrs. Morgan, of Sherbrooke, as well as other visiting sisters from Montreal, Grenville, Avoca and Harrington.

After the business sessions were completed, the two lodges assembled in the banquet room for refreshments that had been prepared by the ladies.

W. Bro. W. L. Dawson presided, and a toast was extended to "The King". The principal item of the evening was the presentation made by W. Bro. John A. MacGibbon, (oldest Orange member in Argenteuil) to the Rev. J. A. Lackey, Chaplain of the lodge for 20 years. The address read by W. Bro. MacGibbon on behalf of the members of the lodge was as follows:

The Rev. J. A. Lackey, Chaplain L.O.L., No. 2231. Dear Bro:

Marriage

Funchion — Murray

The marriage of Mona, daughter of Mr. John Murray and the late Mrs. Murray, to Lyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Funchion, of Beech Ridge, Que., took place on Sept. 21st., at three-thirty o'clock at St. Aynes' Rectory, St. Denis Street, the Rev. Father Wyse officiating.

The bride who was unattended was given in marriage by her father, and wore a gown of skipper blue Russian crepe made on long simple lines, with crepe slippers and felt hat to match. She carried an arm bouquet of pink tea roses. Mr. Albert Clark was best man for Mr. Funchion.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. David Carleton, 242 Wood avenue, Westmount. Later, the bridal couple left on a motor trip to Newport, Vermont, the bride travelling in a costume of skipper blue broadcloth trimmed in grey squirrel with a hat of the same material as her costume and matching accessories. They will reside in Montreal upon their return. The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Milton McDuff, of Point Fortune, Que., and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Funchion, of Beech Ridge, Que.

Canon Allan P. Shatford at Lakefield

Delivers Harvest Home Sermon

Trinity Church, Lakefield, was indeed an inspiring scene of thanksgiving on Thursday morning of last week, when the members and friends from surrounding districts gathered en masse at the quaint stone building, which was appropriately beautified for the "Harvest Home" Thanksgiving with products of the fields.

The congregation was honored with the visit of Rev. Allan P. Shatford, minister of St. James the Apostle Church, Montreal, who is renowned in many lands as a prominent speaker and lecturer.

Rev. Allan Mount, rector of Lakefield parish, presided at the organ, which led the hearty singing of the congregation in a truly thanksgiving spirit. Archdeacon Overing and the Rev. Lummis, of Valleyfield, participated in the service; other ministers of the Anglican denomination present were Rev. J. A. Lackey, of Lachute, Rev. Thos. Ball, of New Glasgow, and the Rev. A. Mitchell, of Ste. Agathe.

On behalf of Rev. Mount and the Lakefield congregation, Archdeacon Overing extended welcome to the guest speaker.

Basing his text upon a portion of the 4th. Chapter of Revelations, Canon Shatford delivered a stirring address on "Vision and Thankfulness," and emphasized the fact that one was so dependent upon the other in our thanksgiving.

If our vision is limited to the many blessings of this life, then our expression of thankfulness is bound to the very limited also. That we should not only be thankful for the present, but for the past, and for the future also, was forcibly impressed by

Section Foreman Has Leg Broken

Jas. O'Brien of Chatboro, section foreman of the C.P.R., is in the General Hospital, Montreal, suffering with fracture of the leg, sustained during the execution of his duties on the local line.

The accident occurred on Friday evening, when Mr. O'Brien, together with the C.P. Roadmaster, was examining some new equipment for use in railway switches. It is understood a part of this equipment fell against O'Brien, injuring him severely.

The victim was rushed to Lachute by hand-car, where Dr. Mason gave temporary treatment and advised that he be sent to hospital without delay.

Brownsburg Card Players Hold Continental Endurance Record

Play Continuously for 73 Hours

Four boys of Brownsburg, Que., with a passing skill and unfailing taste for cards, proclaimed they were not to be outdone by an endurance record of 72 hours at the card-table, reported recently in an American newspaper. These local enthusiasts, Philippe and Mathieu Daoust, Rosaire Massie, and Georges Racine, all temporarily lacking employment, set out to break the record.

The scene was prepared at the local barber shop, Cousineau's, and the pasteboard marathon was on. It started on Sunday, 25th., at 9 o'clock, and two appointed watchmen, Leo Paul Danis and Fernando Massie, heaved a concerted sigh as they settled to their long vigil. They watched and yawned, alternately, until 10 o'clock on September 28th., Wednesday morning, when the quartette decided to quit. They were all a trifle dazed, and had experienced difficulty in keeping awake during the last record-beating hours. But they emerged triumphant, having played continuously for 73 hours, and now believe themselves to be champions of all endurance card-players on this continent.

During their long and trying session, the four boys did not lack for food, and appear to have played, even to the last, with a commendable degree of intelligence. Their games numbered four hundred, comprising euchre, casino, Charlemagne & 500.

They were besieged by spectators who, on hearing of the venture, became anxious to witness the players in action. The quartette received much good-humored encouragement, besides an assortment of presentations by friends and admirers.

FIREMEN RESPOND TO FALSE ALARM AT HILL FOOT

Neighbors of Thos. Pollock, Hill-Foot, seeing his buildings silhouetted in a glare of fire on Saturday night, thought the barn was ablaze and turned in an alarm to Lachute. The fire brigade was promptly on the road, ready for business, and fire truck was followed across the river by dozens of cars from town, with occupants curious as to the location and extent of the fire.

It was learned that the glare reflected from some distance behind the barn, where Mr. Pollock was burning brush, and his buildings were in no danger whatever. The firemen turned for home, still in good humor.

CANADIAN PACIFIC REDUCES STAFF SALARIES

Motives of economy have led to further salary cuts on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The president, directors, and the members of the executive committee are to accept a reduction of 15 per cent. Salaries of other high officials, including general district, divisional and departmental officers will be reduced to 10 per cent. The decreases go into effect Oct. 1.

In a letter from Mr. E. W. Beatty, president of the railway, attention was drawn to "continued and unprecedented" decreases in the company's revenues.

Thousands of unemployed students go back to work—or do they? And so on to longer nights and bigger light bills.

THE CAPTAIN'S CORNER

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

"THE BOY THAT LOOKS ON"

Dear Boys:—

Have you ever noticed that in a large City when something unusual happens, immediately a crowd collects? Where they all come from is hard to say, but in some mysterious way, in a few minutes, an almost deserted street will be crowded with an excited and interested throng of spectators.

In the very front of such a crowd will be found the small boy, and for that matter the big ones also! For this reason I want to have a little chat with you this week on the subject of The Boy that Looks On.

Now it comes to me that it is a very good thing to look on at anything that happens. I can't very well understand any boy who, seeing a crowd gather, does not possess a wonderful desire to find out what it is all about; and if you hear someone say that this is just curiosity and waste of time, you may take it from me that they are altogether quite wrong.

Next to asking questions about things you don't understand, the best thing is to go and find out for yourself! Of course you must be careful not to carry this matter too far. When for instance you are on some urgent message or have a piece of work to do for which you are responsible, that is not the time that you should make one of the crowd that merely looks on. I am reminded however of a story, about a boy who was engaged as a messenger by a large fire insurance company. He had been sent by his employers with a bill to one of their clients for the payment of an installment which was a month overdue. On the way to deliver the bill, he joined an excited multitude of people to look on at some exciting event. When he returned to the office he handed in the letter undelivered. "Why didn't you carry out instructions?" he was asked. "No good," was the smart reply, "I watched Mr. Smith's house burning beautifully."

Yes, I have a wonderful sympathy for the boy that looks on, and I would remind you that it is not always a waste of time. Use your eyes in conjunction with your brain and you will make progress. Never forget that we live in a most interesting world, and if we are wise we can learn much from the things that happen around us.

Let me add for your information that the looker-on is the One that Sees Most of the Game.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

Mystery Island

A TALE OF THE SOUTH SEAS
By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

CHAPTER 19.

It was night and the good ship Dauntless was making her way slowly but very steadily through a quiet sea. Northern waters had been left far behind and the wide expanse of the Pacific Ocean lay all around her. Several days had elapsed since Jack had carried his startling message to his uncle; and while nothing further had taken place to increase their sense of danger, there had been, on the other hand, nothing to reassure them as to their safety.

Jack was disappointed. His plan of getting information by watching the men at their work in the Fo'castle had produced nothing. All had performed their duty well, including the man Pedro, for that was the name by which he, whom they knew to be the leader, was called by his messmates. True they appeared to work under protest, while scowling looks were the order of the day; but try as he would Jack could gather nothing from their attitude that would be of value.

A full moon shone from a cloudless sky, and, as he paced the deck there came to him through the open doorway of the Captain's cabin the notes of a mandolin played by Babs. The tune was a haunting one and after a minute or two she sang the words, her sweet voice blending with the silent beauty of the night,—

*I am now sailing far, over the sea,
My homeland is left 'way on the lea,
Dear Country I love, and leave with regret,
Your glory and beauty remain with me yet.*

Jack stood very still, for both words and music moved him strangely, so much so that the silver light of the moon on the water, the dark curtain of the sky, pierced with the twinkling lights of countless stars, appeared as something unreal in their mystic beauty and magic lure.

Then he pulled himself together and smiled. "Babs is a little witch," he thought. "How amused she would be if she knew how her singing had made my wits wander." He was about to move away when he felt a hand on his shoulder. Not a little startled he swung round only to find himself held firmly by Mr. Williams.

He gave a little gasp of relief. "My word, sir, you did take me by surprise," he said, a note of protest in his young voice; "I nearly cried out."

"Good thing you did not for I have something—Ah, and how do you like this beautiful evening?" The question was put in a much louder voice while the grip on the boy's shoulder tightened.

Jack looked at his officer in amazement at this sudden change of voice and action, but before he could utter a word Mr. Williams continued very quietly:

"Listen Jack, there is trouble, and I have to be careful in case we are overheard. Just now someone passed near us by that boat. I fear they are going to attack to-night, for quite by chance I heard Pedro tell another man to be ready in an hour and bring a weapon. Now you must go and warn your uncle and at the same time tell him that I am getting the others into the cabin as quickly as I can. Do you understand what I have said?"

The boy looked up into his face. "Yes sir," he whispered, "I understand."

"Very well then. I will leave you. But be very careful not to be seen, dear lad." And with that final word of warning the officer slipped away into the shadows.

For about a minute Jack remained where he was. He looked up at the sky, so clear and so beautiful. How unreal it all appeared to be. Here was the good ship moving so steadily forward, lights fore and aft burning brightly; and to him it seemed impossible that there could be danger, that both mutiny and murder might take place before the first streak of dawn appeared and,—

*'Dear Country I love and leave with regret,
Your glory and beauty remain with me yet.'*

Again the sweet childish voice was raised in song. "Oh Babs," the boy whispered brokenly, and hurried away on his errand.

To be Continued.

JUST LABOUR ON.

By Capt. O. J. Aldom

Just labour on. The task is well begun, If but you strive the best in you to give, No flower grows, if not towards the sun It lifts its head and thereby learns to live, We must do more than merely pass the day In aimless thoughts that never with us stay.

Just labour on. Who does regret the grade? Though it be rough and every ascent steep It's not our faults, however many made That hurt us; for indeed they help to keep Our courage high, our faltering steps in line Amid the shadows where no sun doth shine.

Just labour on. Success is not a prize Obtained by ease or 'praying for the moon'; It bids us use the will that in us lies And not expect a miracle too soon. Life has no favours that she can bestow— More worth the while than our work can show.

LITTLE HOUSE

by Monica Roberts

I found a little house upon a hill That overlooked the sea, I found a little house, and oh! It fascinated me!

For roses clambered up its walls, While hollyhocks galore, And daffodils and snowdrops grew Around the tiny door.

And oh, it was a rendez-vous For every kind of bird, They warbled ecstasies of song, The sweetest ever heard!

The perfume of the lilac Seemed to weave a fairy spell— Each sobbing little sea-breeze Had some magic tale to tell.

At twilight here, the hooting owl And gentle cooing dove Sang operas of wisdom sage, And lullabys of love.

It was so very beautiful; It made me strangely sad, I thought the very nicest thoughts I think I've ever had!

I found a little house upon a hill That overlooked the sea, I found a little house, and oh! It fascinated me!

CORRESPONDENCE

September 23, 1932

The Watchman, Lachute, Que.

Dear Mr. Giles:

On behalf of the Flower Committee of the Montreal Council of Social Agencies I wish to thank you most sincerely for the assistance which you rendered during the past summer, by inserting notices in your paper free of charge.

The Committee would be grateful if you would oblige once again by publishing our appreciation in the columns of your Watchman;

The Flower Committee of the Montreal Council of Social Agencies wishes to thank all those who helped in any way to make the work the success that it was this summer,—and are certain that there are many who have been of great assistance whose names have not been made known to us.

We are very proud of Lachute's accomplishments and appreciate the whole-hearted support given the work by the community as a whole. In fact, we may say without hesitation that Lachute has been for a number of years, and was again this year, one of our very best districts, contributing most generously.

If it were only possible for you to see the expressions on the faces of the people when they receive their little bouquets you would feel that the work which you have undertaken is very much "worthwhile."

Trusting that we may 'count on' Lachute again next year.

Yours very truly,
Hazeldine S. Bishop.
Secretary, Flower Committee.

Husband: "What? You don't mean to say you are going shopping in all this rain?"

Wife: Of course I am. I've saved up $5 for a rainy day, and this is the first opportunity I've had to spend it.—Answers.

Municipal Happenings

Seattle Sued for Drying Frogs' Home

The Jay Harringtons, of Juanita Beach, filed a suit against the City of Seattle for $10,350, alleging that city workers diverted water from a stream into a gravel pit, thereby drying up the pools on their property operated as a frog farm. The damages sought included $2,000 worth of frogs and $2,000 said to be the cost of building the pools.

Quebec's Fire Boat

Quebec.—The first fire-fighting boat that the Port of Quebec has ever possessed will start active service on October 10. The vessel, which is being built in the Davie Shipyards at Lauzon has been launched and is now having her engines and other machinery installed.

Dust Costs London $10,000,000 Annually.

On a windy day an occasional reference to London as a dust-heap may be heard, though it must be admitted that many of our smaller cities, could learn something from the way in which the dust problem is handled there.

Nonetheless London has its dust problem, which makes the task of collecting and disposing of the dust which gathers on its streets neither an easy or inexpensive job. The 20 London boroughs are now conferring in an effort to cut down the bill of £2,200,000 a year which they have to pay for the collection and disposal of refuse and dust.

A Different Sort of Mayor.

New York is enjoying the rare spectacle of a real working mayor, Joseph V. McKee, who succeeded to that post after it was vacated by the celebrated "Jimmy" Walker recently, actually is giving evidence that he takes seriously his pledge to cut expenses.

It is reported that in one day at the City Hall, he accomplished a big clean up, as will be seen by the following:

Cut his own salary from $40,000 to $25,000. Notified all department heads under his appointment that after October 1 none of them would receive more than $12,000 a year. There are 27 receiving from $15,000 to $25,000 and the annual saving will be $151,000.

Abolished what he called a "printing monopoly" held by a company which has been paid about $2,000,000 a year by the city. On one contract given another company, through his insistence, there was saved $50,000.

He began a check-up on the $3,000,000 spent each month by the city on relief; wants to know where the money goes and whether such a huge expenditure is necessary.

Went down to Wall Street and in a half-hour arranged a loan of $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 at 5 1/4 percent, which is 1/2 percent less than the city has been paying for accommodation.

Made an appointment to meet a committee of the Unemployed Council, much to their surprise. In the past the official attitude towards the Communists has been expressed with police batons.

McKee's term of office may be brief, but it promises to be memorable. New York is to elect a mayor on November 8, and there is no certainty that he will be a candidate, although stranger things have happened than his adoption by Tammany Hall.

Montreal may Municipalize Power

Serious consideration of Montreal's plan to municipalize electricity for lighting of streets and parks, for waterworks' purposes and to light civic buildings, with the possibility that if this is satisfactory the city might eventually go into the electric power business, was promised recently by Ald. J. M. Gabias, chairman of the Executive in a communication to the Press.

Back to the Land

The matter of relief continues among the prime considerations of governmental authorities and as the fall months draw us nearer to the perennial problems of Canadian winter, there promises no abatement to this bug-bear of administration.

Different measures have become generally adopted, with varying degrees of success, and the distress of unemployment has been dissolved in a small and temporary measure. . . . One scheme which becomes increasingly popular among our municipalities, has resulted satisfactorily in its primary stages, and promises, we believe, the most favorable result from every aspect, is the Back-to-the-Land movement.

Government assistance to this scheme, apportioned between municipal, provincial, and federal exchequers, will prove it far less costly than continuous grants for direct relief and expensive outlays for construction works. What is more important, however—in the material building of the Dominion, land settlement will promote the country's basic industry, cultivate her soils, fill her homesteads, and thereby raise a monument more useful and far more worthy of a nation than mere concrete structures. Perhaps still more

Stratford (Ont.) Civic Auditorium Overburdened

The objectionable custom of "parking" chewing gum on the underside of theatre seats was brought into the limelight when a group of men, renovating the 500 seats in the Stratford city hall auditorium, scraped off over ten pounds of second hand chewing gum, evidently the accumulation over the past 19 years since the seats were installed. Evidently a new parking limit is needed in Stratford.

48-Hour Industrial Week For Quebec Is Expected

A 48-hour week for all industrial establishments of Quebec will be the object of a bill to be submitted at the next session of the Legislature. In its fourth report, the Royal Commission on Social Insurance recommended this legislation as a means to reduce unemployment and it is learned that the Government intends to give effect to this recommendation with as little delay as possible. The Government of Quebec also intends to confer with that of Ontario, in the near future, to ascertain whether the latter province would join Quebec in this move, so as to obtain uniform legislation, as much as possible.

Public Ownership of Land is Urged.

Public ownership of land is the policy of the joint Farmer-Labor Party of Saskatchewan. At a joint political convention of the United Farmers of Canada, Saskatchewan section and the Independent Labor Party, Saskatoon, the clause in the former political platform favoring "nationalization" or "socialization" of land was endorsed despite fears of some delegates it would alienate farmer votes.

The 19th. Annual Convention of Canadian Good Roads Association.

The three day meeting of the Canadian Good Roads Association which opened at Digby-by-the-Sea, N. S. on the 12th. of this month has resulted in much good work being accomplished for the advancement of Canada's highway system.

The exchange of ideas of highway administrators, engineers, builders and users proved very valuable, while outstanding authorities on various subjects relating to road problems gave interesting lectures which were followed by open discussion.

Among those attending were George A. McNamee, Manager of the Royal Automobile Club of Canada, John Davidson, of the C.P.R.; S. L. Squire, Chairman of the Executive of the Association; Hon. A. C. Stewart, Minister of Highways, Saskatchewan; Hon. W. R. Club, Minister of Public Works, Manitoba; and the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, Ontario.

Ontario Township Settling Families

Council of the Township of Teck, meeting recently at Kirkland Lake, Ont., laid plans for placing families on farms in the vicinity. From among the families receiving relief from the township will be chosen those who have had previous experience on farms, and who, in the opinion of the authorities are likely to make a success of the work. The Dominion and Provincial Governments and the township each pay $200 toward the costs of settlement.

46 Percent of Halifax Property is Exempt

That 46.10 per cent of the assessable property in Halifax is exempt from taxation is shown in the annual report of City Auditor A. M. Butler, presented to the council recently.

The report states that the value of assessable property has increased from $91,247,130 in 1929 to $101,257,110 in 1932. The value of tax exempt property this year is $41,314,186 or 46.10 per cent.

SHORTAGE OF BUTTER IN CANADA. PRICES WILL GO HIGHER.

(—Tara Leader)

Now is the time for the Canadian farmers to step in and make some money. This is the deduction to be drawn from the memorandum submitted to the Hon. Robt. Weir, Minister of Agriculture, by J. F. Singleton, Dominion Dairy Commissioner, recently.

Canada faces the necessity of importing nearly 5,000,000 lbs. of butter this winter unless butter production in this country is stepped up very materially. Butter is selling in Montreal at from 22c to 22½c a pound which is a very substantial advance from last July when it was about 16½ cents. New Zealand butter is selling in London at 19½ cents. It could be laid down in Montreal at the same price. Add the five cents a pound duty to this and the excise tax and the cost would be slightly over 25 cets. Accordingly the Canadian price can go up considerably more before it would pay to import from New Zealand.

Last year on Sept. 1, the butter stocks in storage were 39,890,281 lbs. Another 161,890 lbs. were imported and 4,870,900 lbs. of Canadian butter was exported between Sept. 1 1931, and March 31, 1932. Thus between those two dates the domestic market took 32,271,271 lbs. in addition to what was produced in Canada during that time. This year on Sept. 1, the total in storage was only 30,411,024 lbs., so it will be seen that if no butter is exported, the Canadian dairy farmers will have to produce 4,860,177 lbs. more from Sept. 1 to March 31 than last year to supply the market. The supplies on hand last Spring were no more than adequate.

So far production of butter has been lower this year than last. For the seven months ending July 31, the butter production for all Canada was 3.9 per cent. below the year before. Ontario showed a considerable increase for July but has not yet reported for August. Quebec showed an increase of 11.7 per cent. in August, Manitoba 19 per cent., Saskatchewan 24 per cent., and Alberta 19.4 per cent. The returns from the other provinces are not available.

So far in September there also has been no prediction of any increase in butter production. Other branches of the department which study forage supplies state that Canada is abundantly stocked with forage, and it is contended now is the time to increase production by heavier feeding as a strong steady butter market is assured.

GRENVILLE CENTENARY WAS SUCCESS IN EVERY RESPECT

Communicants to the number of 168 took part in the special anniversary service at St. Matthew's Church, reported in these columns last week, and there were in all about 350 persons in attendance. Among the officiating ministers were Bishop Farthing, who conducted the Centenary Service; Rev. W. J. Ellis, preacher; Rev. A. C. Asch, who read the gospel; Rev. Jos. Irving, reading the Epistle; and Rev. C. J. Rollitt, acting as Chaplain to the Bishop.

Interesting features of the occasion were the dedication of a Memorial Endowment Board by the Bishop, Masters Donald Pridham and Garth Dawson unveiling the board; a solo "My Task", sung by Mrs. Fitzgerald during the offering; and the presentation to the church of a pulpit or lectern which had been reposing in the old parsonage for many years and was part of the original furniture. This was installed in the church for the occasion of the centenary and was presented by Mr. Willie Crooks, a desk and base having been added by Mr. Fraser Watson. The Memorial Endowment Board is placed in the historic old church, for the purpose of commemorating the names of those benefactors who leave moneys to the Endowment Fund of the Parish, amounting to $100 or more.

About 250 signed the Register, which, along with other records of this occasion, will be kept in the church archives. At the dinner, a 35 lb. cake made by Mrs. Russell Owens, and bearing 100 candles, a design of the church and the inscription 1832-1932, was cut by the Bishop and all present partook of the cake. The 1st. Grenville Troop Boy Scouts conducted a refreshment booth during the afternoon, and met with good patronage and success in their venture.

Several expressions of regret were received by Rev. K. Brue-ton, the minister, by those who were unable to attend; these included communications from Rt. Hon. Sir Geo. Perley, Rev. J. W. Baugh, Mrs. MacInson, Rev. J. Lackey, Rev. J. F. Morris and others. Beside those mentioned, however, the following were in attendance among the visiting clergy; Rev. E. J. May, Rev. C. W. Baugh, and Rev. H. Godard. A group photograph of former rectors and incumbents of St. Matthews was taken.

It is the desire of the rector, through these columns, to express hearty thanks to the various committees, to the ladies who served and prepared the dinner, and to all those who helped toward the success of the occasion. Special thanks are due to Mr. W. M. Bradshaw, who has worked many months toward a fitting celebration and conclusion to this anniversary; faithful and united effort have been repaid in its all-round success.

the speaker, saying how much we owe to those who had worked, organized, and suffered for us in the past. Then for the future, —for the opportunities the health, strength and power of doing that which is good; for to do His will in years to come; all these may be incorporated in our thanksgiving and expression of praise.

For the "Thorns" as well as the "Roses", our thanks should be offered; and as an example, the preacher took the great affliction of George Matheson, the composer of that beautiful hymn "O Love that will not let me go," —who was suddenly struck blind, and although he suffered physically as well as mentally found that through his affliction he experienced many things to be thankful for. Hence his inspiration to pen that wondrous, beautiful old hymn.

Canon Shatford expressed his pleasure at being able to come to Lakefield, and said it was twenty years since he preached a Thanksgiving sermon at Trinity Church, the Rev. A. Mount being the rector, then as now.

After the service the Ladies' Guild of the Church served a Harvest Thanksgiving dinner, which many attended and enjoyed a splendid repast.

THOS. WM. KELLY Was Lifelong Resident of this County.

After a year of indifferent health, there passed away on the 15th. inst., Thomas William Kelly, aged 56, at his home in Bell Falls—a lifelong resident of Argenteuil County and a prominent Orangeman.

In 1888 Mr. Kelly was married to Miss Jane Bates, who predeceased her husband in 1910, leaving a family of two girls and two boys. He was married again in 1917, to Miss C. McCluskey, who now survives to mourn her deep loss. The deceased gentleman had retired from farming in Avoca, just six years ago and had since made his home at Bell Falls, Que. He had a record of 23 years as an elder in the United Church of his community.

The funeral service, conducted by Rev. J. F. Conn, was held at the Avoca United Church, and full rights of the Orange Order were observed at the grave. Many beautiful floral tokens bore evidence of esteem and respect for the departed. The offerings included flowers from the family—Maggie, Joe, Grace and family; Rupert and Ruth; Ernie, Christina and Phillip; Fred, Susan, and family; Freda. Also from a wide circle of friends as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Joe Young; Mr. and Mrs. Neil McLeod; Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Bates and family; Mr. & Mrs. Isaac Young; Mr. and Mrs. Evan Bates; Mr. and Mrs. Willie Arthurs; Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Page and family; Harrington East L.O.L. and L.O.B.A.; Ladies Aid, Avoca; Mr. and Mrs. David Bates; Mrs. D. Page; and Mr. and Mrs. Tom McNeil and family.

TOURIST LOSES CAR

Complains of No Co-operation From Provincial Police

A complaint was made last week by a prominent American tourist at St. Jovite, that he had been able to receive no co-operation from the provincial police in difficulties in which he found himself. He stated that his car had been stolen early in the morning and that this was reported to the provincial police at 9 a.m. Meantime he made a search of the district himself and found the car in a barn five miles distant, stripped of everything that could be taken from it. A second car was found in the barn in similar condition. This was also reported to the provincial police, the tourist stated.

Following the tire tracks of his car, the owner was able to locate the garage where it had evidently been filled with gas and stripped. The suspect was apprehended and held for some time, but as nothing had yet been heard from the provincial police the man had finally to be released. The American tourist further reported that he had both telephoned and wired the provincial police, without response.

St. Andrews-By-The-Sea

Sea bathing in the warm waters of Katy's Cove, St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, New Brunswick, and sun bathing on the shining sands, are two of the most healthful and entertaining occupations of those who visit this popular and smart resort, which centres on the Algonquin Hotel of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The illustration shows a group of socially prominent people from Canadian and United States cities sun bathing after a most refreshing plunge, and includes:—Mr. and the Hon. Mrs. R. M. Redmond; the Hon. Peggy, Hazel and Anne Shaughnessy; Judge and Mrs. Bond; Miss Margot Redmond; Mrs. S. Watson; Mrs. R. D. Bell; Mrs. George Balfour; Mr. Donald Markey; Col. Allan Magee; Gordon Shirres; Gordon Reed; Miss Dora Magee; Mrs. Nora Walnwright; Mr. R. C. Stevens; Miss Cantlie, of Montreal; Miss H. D'Arcy, St. Louis; Miss V. Schoonmaker, New York; and D. A. Anderson, Ottawa.

Inset is little Miss Lucinda Marguerite Vaughan of Montreal, who is showing the world what the well-dressed infant wears when about to paddle in the warm water, or build a great big castle on the sands.

carrying out two important duties.

First we have to conduct the general business and welfare of our Noble Order so that all things may be in keeping with its high aims and traditional ideals.

Secondly we are here in order to pay tribute to the work which you have performed as our greatly revered chaplain for the past twenty years.

We are grateful for your unfailing loyalty to our beloved Lodge; for the kindly personal interest you have displayed in all our undertakings and above all for the deeply spiritual influence you have exercised among us.

In token of this we ask you to accept the collar which we hope that you will be long spared to use as a memento of our love and esteem.

On behalf of the Lodge,

W. L. Dawson, W.M.,

W. T. MacNaughton, Rec.-Sec'y.

The recipient of the regalia collar was indeed surprised, and thanked his fellow brethren for their kindly remembrances. Bro. Lackey said he had been a member of the Orange Order since he was 18 years of age (although he would not say just how long ago that was, on account of ladies being present). He spoke of the necessity of the Order and the good being accomplished by it, as well as the true loyalty to the King and the British commonwealth.

A toast to the "Distinguished Visitors" was extended by W. J. Cooper, and the M. W. Grand Mistress of British North America Mrs. Darracott, responded. She expressed her pleasure at being able to attend such a splendid gathering, and gave an interesting talk about her visit to Ireland, while attending the Triennial Council of the Orange Order at Belfast.

During the programme, Miss Gracie Lavis gave a beautiful dramatic recitation, and musical selections were rendered by Mrs. R. A. Giles, Mr. H. W. Butler and the Lachute Male Quartette (Messrs. Duncan, Gorman O. Todd and D. Todd). "God Save the King" was sung, which brought a climax to a very pleasant and successful evening of the Orange Order.

On behalf of the Order, W. Bro. W. L. Dawson, master of the lodge, wishes to thank those who contributed to the program and added to the success of the evening.

ALGOMA ENLISTS ITS YOUTH IN CONSERVATION

Emanating from a body of determined business men in Sault Ste. Marie a forward movement has been instituted by the Algoma Game Fish and Forest Association to build up a body of senior boys in towns and villages, committed to protection of the woodlands and the fishing and hunting that flourishes therein. Lecture tours have been undertaken without regard to "depression," and hundreds of splendid boys have been linked to the cause of the adult association. The entire district has become keenly alive to the need of vigilance in protecting forests and wild life and to retain these natural assets for the future.

Hints for Homebodies

By JESSIE ALLAN BROWN

THE HALF SICK

Sir William Dawson, physician to the King, recommends sanitariums for those who are not actually sick, but are not really well. There they would be treated and would be taught the principles of healthy living. This would include the choice of proper food without following any fad.

The efficiency of a great many people and their zest for living is undoubtedly seriously impaired by feeling half-sick most of the time. Many serious illnesses might be prevented if they were caught in time. The doctors are partly to blame for this condition. Too much emphasis has been given during their training to curing and not sufficient to prevention. Doctors must get a good many patients who enjoy poor health and these must be a sore trial to a conscientious doctor, but all ailing patients are not of this class.

There are too many clever doctors who are interested only in their seriously ill patients and give very cursory care to the half-sick. Any intelligent person knows that the doctor is not interested and it discourages them seeing a doctor in the early stages. This was brought home not so long ago when I met a friend who looked white and drawn, as if she should have been home in bed instead of up and around. We asked her if she had seen her doctor and her answer was 'what is the use, he is not interested unless you are about ready to die'.

This idea of a sanitarium for the half-sick seems like a sound idea. The sooner both the profession and the laymen shift the onus to prevention, the better for us all.

APPLE GINGER

4 pounds sour apples
4 lemons
2 pounds sugar
1 ounce ginger root

Pare, core, and slice the apples; wash, remove seeds, and slice lemons; add sugar and ginger root, and cook very slowly six hours. Pour into glasses and cover.

APPLE BUTTER

One bushel apples, eight quarts of cider; cover and boil until tender. Rub the pulp through a strainer and cook thirty minutes longer, then measure. For each gallon add eight cups sugar eight teaspoons ground cloves, eight teaspoons ground cinnamon. Stir and boil twenty minutes longer; fill into jars and seal with paraffin.

CANNED APPLE SAUCE

Pare, core and cook until soft with a small quantity of water. Press through a colander or strainer & measure, ½ cup sugar to 2 cups apple. Put into hot sterilized jars, half seal and sterilize for 12 minutes.

APPLE CATSUP

Quarter, core and pare 12 sour apples. Put in a saucepan, cover with water and let simmer until soft. Nearly all of the water should be evaporated. Rub through a sieve and to each quart add the following:

1 cup sugar
2 grated onions
2 cups cider vinegar
1 teaspoon cloves
1 tablespoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon mustard

Cook until thick and bottle and seal.

GINGER PEARS

Use pears not quite ripe; peel core, and cut into thin slices. To 8 pounds of pears allow 8 lbs of sugar, 1 cup of water, juice of 4 lemons. Cut the lemon rinds into thin strips and add them. Also add 1-8 pound of ginger root cut into pieces. Simmer until thick as marmalade. Pour into glasses and seal.

PLOUGHING

(Experimental Farms Note)

Ploughing is one of the most important of all tillage operations. The kind of ploughing done is quite largely indicative of the final condition of the soil following later tillage operations. The object of ploughing is to commence the preparation of a seed-bed which will result in the optimum tilth. Other things being equal, to produce the maximum germination and growth of crops planted therein. Ploughing should be done, therefore, in such a way as to best loosen the soil and provide a desirable tilth, and at the same time to cover all trash and crop residue, as well as manures which are to be ploughed down.

In experiments conducted on several of the Dominion Experimental Farms, results show that it makes very little difference what depth or width ploughing is done, providing the furrow is ploughed at a uniform depth and is cut and turned the regular width of the plough. That is to say one should not attempt to turn a 13-inch furrow with a 10 inch plough. A field ploughed in this way, with irregular depressions or "hog troughs" all over it, is not only unsightly but the soil is not properly loosened, weeds are not cut, and it is very difficult to prepare a fine, uniform seed bed.

The time to plough is rather important, although conditions are not always ideal at the most convenient, or in some cases, the most suitable time. If land is ploughed when too wet the soil is likely to puddle and become very hard and of poor tilth. If ploughed when too dry the labour of ploughing is increased and a cloddy condition may result. This is particularly true of clay soils. It is not so important in light sandy soils. Fall ploughing is generally recommended, & from the standpoint of weed control summer ploughing topworking and reploughing in late fall is very effective.

In order to plough down crop residue especially where sod is being ploughed, a jointer or skimmer is a very important part of the equipment. Sod should not be ploughed without using it, as it is impossible to turn under the grass at the edge of the furrow without it. The plough point and coulter should be kept sharp, both to reduce the draft and to make sure of a clean cut at the bottom and side of the furrow.

During October ploughmen from all over the continent will gather at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa to match their skill in the International Ploughing Match. At this time some of the best ploughmen in the world will be seen in action. At this match ploughing will be seen which approaches perfection as nearly as is humanly possible. The road of all enthusiastic ploughmen should lead to Ottawa in October if not to plough, to see ploughing at its best.

Lesson for October 9

THE CHRISTIAN IN THE FAMILY

Luke 2:4-52; 10:38-48.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way. O when wilt thou come unto me? I will walk within my house with a perfect heart. Psalm 101:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Happy Family.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Home Life of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being a Christian at Home.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making the Home Christian.

Confessedly our subject is a strange one to fit to the texts selected by the Lesson Committee. Jesus is the central person in both texts. It is manifestly improper to think and speak of him as being Christian. He is the eternal Son of God made flesh (John 1:14). A Christian is one regenerated by the Holy Spirit and joined to Jesus Christ by faith on the ground of his redemptive work. Two views of him are presented in these texts:

1. Jesus in the Home of His Mother and Joseph (Luke 2:4-52).

2. Jesus growing (v. 40). While Jesus Christ was divine, yet his deity did not interfere with his development as a human being. The processes of his physical and mental growth were the same as those of any normal human being.

a. He grew and waxed strong. It was necessary for his body to develop. His brain, nerves, and muscles must not only attain unto their proper sizes, but must become correlated.

b. "Filled with wisdom." His mother doubtless was his teacher in those early years. It is reasonable to assume that she taught him to commit Bible verses to memory, and told him the great narratives of patriots and prophets of the Old Testament.

c. "The grace of God was upon him." God's love, favor and tender care were upon him.

2. Jesus found in the Temple (vv. 41-47). At the age of twelve the Jewish child took his place as a worshiper in the temple. He was then considered a "child of the law." Being conscious of his mission, Jesus tarried behind in the temple when his mother and Joseph left Jerusalem after the Passover. When they made search for him, he was found in the temple. Observe.

a. He was found sitting (v. 46). He was no passing visitor or sight-seer, but at home in his father's house.

b. He was hearing the teachers of God's Word (v. 46). He was eager to learn God's will.

c. He asked questions (v. 46). His growing mind inquired after truth.

d. He answered questions (v. 47). His answers astonished those who heard him.

3. Mary's complaint (vv. 48-50). She remonstrated with him for his behavior. To this he replied in a dignified, yet tender manner. He made no apology, showing that he was more than the son of Mary. God was his father.

4. Jesus' obedience (v. 51). Though he was fully conscious of his divine being and mission, he lived a life of filial obedience, teaching us that obedience to parents is pleasing to God, and a duty which will be discharged faithfully by those who have the spirit of Christ.

11. Jesus in Martha's Home (Luke 10:38-42).

1. Jesus welcomed into Martha's home (v. 38). Though Jesus had no home of his own, into Martha's home he could come at any time. This home was his special retreat in the last days of his ministry on earth.

2. Mary sitting at Jesus' feet (v. 39). Mary had a peculiar spiritual insight which prompted her to sit at Jesus' feet and listen to his words.

3. Martha's complaint (v. 40). She desired doubtless to prepare the very best possible meal for Jesus. He prefers the love which concerns itself with himself and his message to any personal ministry. Because of her failure to see this, she was "troubled with much serving." She not only found fault with Mary, but found fault with Jesus for allowing Mary to sit at his feet while the dinner was unfinished.

4. Jesus' reply (vv. 41-42).

a. He rebukes Martha, telling her that she is careful and troubled about many things. Those who are primarily concerned with the Master are anxious for nothing (Phil. 4:6).

The one thing that is needful for everybody is to sit at the feet of Jesus.

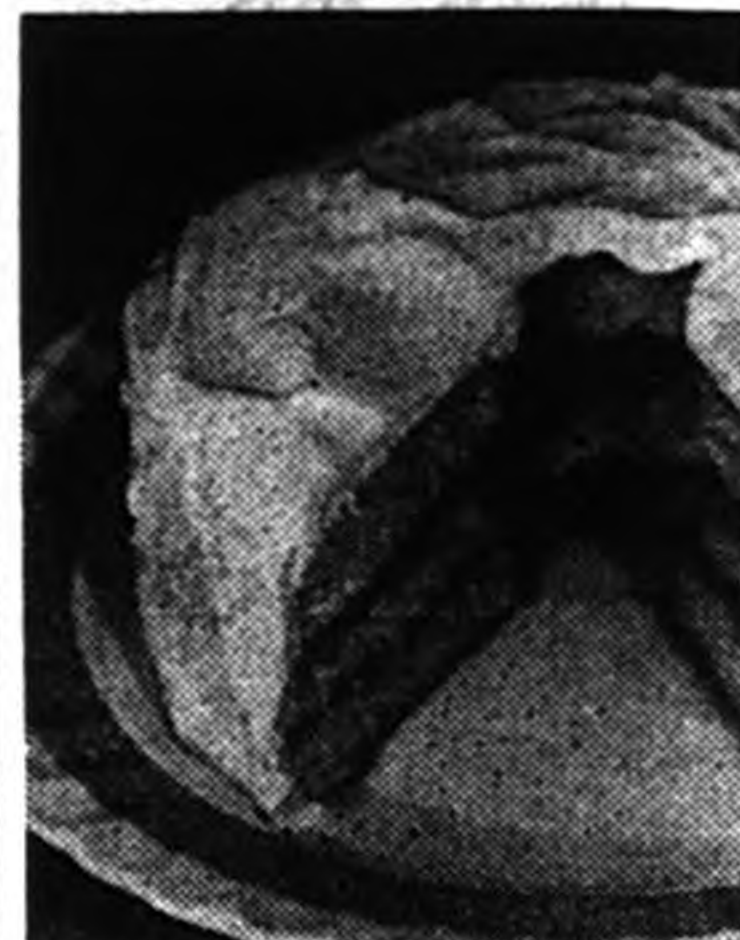

b. He commended Mary, saying "Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her."

Never Say Can't

Miss Ethel Chapman makes this novel

LUXOR CAKE*

with Magic Baking Powder

"My advice to all housewives, both skilled and inexperienced, is: Use Magic Baking Powder. Then there is no uncertainty about your baking," says Miss Ethel Chapman, Editor of the Home Section in the Ontario Farmer.

This unqualified statement is particularly impressive because thrifty Canadian home makers have learned that Miss Chapman's advice is invariably practical.

Other well-known food experts and cookery teachers in the Dominion share Miss Chapman's high opinion of Magic. In fact, the majority of them—and housewives, too—use Magic exclusively. No wonder Magic outsells all other baking powders combined!

Miss Chapman's recipe for "LUXOR CAKE"

1 cup fine granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup egg yolks
½ cup lukewarm water
1½ cups Magic Soda
1½ cups pastry flour (or 3 tablespoons less of bread flour)
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt

Sift sugar. Measure out 2 tablespoons, pour on vanilla extract and set aside. Add water and soda to egg yolks; beat with egg beater until foamy. Add sugar a little at a time, beating in well. Add flavored sugar and beat. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Fold carefully into mixture; pour in ungreased angel cake pan. Bake in moderate oven at 350° F. for 40 to 45 minutes. Invert pan and let stand until cake is cold, when, with the aid of a spatula, it will slip from pan. Remove all crumbs and moist crust from surface and cut in three layers. Spread Lemon Cream Filling between layers. Ice top and sides with Marshmallow Seven Minute Frosting. (Recipe for filling and frosting are in the Magic Cook Book—see free offer below.)

CHAPTER VII.—On his journey, Alan runs across "Buzard" Feather-foot, famous aviator of the World war, and
now "on his own" with a dilapidated
machine. Affinity of spirit draws them
together, and Alan enlists "Buzard"
in the enterprise. Lacking sufficient
funds to procure equipment, they loot
government stores, starting their pursuit of the bandits, themselves criminals in the eyes of the law.

CHAPTER VIII.—"Slob-ice" Jensen,
leader of the bandits, plans to capture
Joyce MacMillan and escape to Manitoba. At Fort Endurance Haskell catches on that Bill Hardstock is caching gasoline and oil for Alan at
En Traverse lake, and plans with Constable Whipple to capture Alan when
he alone alights there.

To break the silence between them
he began telling her of these last weeks—his trip to Edmonton, his pro-vential luck in meeting Buzard, the prison charges that stood against him, their flight back north, their escape from Haskell's trap, his gladness when he saw her running down the path.

As she listened, thoroughly alive to the danger and hardships he had gone through, Joyce felt a profound gratitude, for she knew Alan had done this largely for her sake. When he mentioned the prison charges facing him,
she experienced a moment of pain;
and imagined herself testifying in his behalf, fighting for him as he had fought for her.

A little later, after they had discussed plans for closing in upon the bandits, Alan rose up and gave her his hand to rise. He said:

"I've got to go down river a few miles. Joyce, Bill caught some supplies near that sand where you and I got upset that day and had to swim for it. I want to bring them up here
this evening."

He waited a moment for some hint that she might wish to go along with him. None came. He suggested:

"It'd take only a couple hours. If you'd care to, I'd like for you to go."
"I'd better stay. Bill and Mr. Featherfoot will be awake before long. I'll have supper ready when you get back."
"I can help you with that—if you'll go."

Joyce hesitated. She was aware that Alan deeply wanted her company.
After all he'd done for her, it seemed ungrateful to refuse. And she herself wanted to go. But bitter wisdom whispered a warning. Since that morning when she turned his letters and picture and gifts to ashes, there had been no looking back. There must be none now. She had strength and courage to talk with him calmly
and to act toward him as though they had never been more than good friends; but she dared not presume so far on that new-born strength. To be alone with him two hours on a willight river, with their talk inevitably drifting to former times—it would be unbearable.

With gentle firmness she said: "I'd like to go Alan. But I'll have to run back to the post. There's so many things to do." She tried to smile. "I don't want to be a neglectful hostess
to Bill and Mr. Featherfoot."

As she started up the river trail,
or thoughts brooded on several things Alan had said in the course of his story, especially on his occasional references to Elizabeth. Not that he had said anything derogatory about Elizabeth. But his tone, his manner was becoming a little disillusioned?

Was he seeing Elizabeth Spaulding
not as the sister of his dead partner Curt, not as a girl to be cherished and shielded, but as a selfish, calculating person? Was he dimly foreseeing
what his married life with her was going to be?

Joyce checked herself sharply from hoping or even thinking that Alan might break off his engagement, or from extending him anything more than grateful friendship. She was glad, profoundly glad, that his words
had caused no resurrection of hope,
no tremor of emotion. The discovery of her strength sufficed her with a kind of pride. But for all that, she felt a great sorrow for Alan. He was bitterly unhappy, and she knew it.
What was his situation now? Police work, his life in the North, comradeship
with his old friends—everything that he had cherished was stripped away from him, and he was going into a marriage reluctantly and forcing himself into a life that was alien to his whole nature. When Joyce thought of all that, her sympathy, tender and compassionate, went out to him wholeheartedly.

Returning at deep twilight with the drums, Alan found Buzard cleaning fouled spark plugs on the plane engine.
Candles were already lit in the trading store. Alan looked up the path, expecting to see Joyce's figure in the lighted doorway. He hoped to have an hour or two alone with her this evening. But all day the conviction had grown upon him that a talk would be worse than useless. If only God's truth didn't sound so preposterous; if only he could tell Joyce that he had become engaged to Elizabeth, had expected to marry Elizabeth, and yet all the time, in his deepest longing, had wanted not Elizabeth but her.

"If we're going to get away from here first thing in the morning," Buzard broke into his thoughts, "we ought to put in a couple hours' work
after supper on these all-or-no leads.
They're pretty bad frayed around the pulleys."

Alan knew that Buzard was asking him to help with that job. But he did not answer. He wanted this evening with Joyce. Unless he took circumstances into his own hands tonight, he and Joyce would drift across a continent from each other in a few days more. Torn with uncertainty of her affections for him, he was debating about this evening. After the incidents of today—his picture gone, her coldness, her refusal to go with him—
he was wavering, undecided.

He tossed his cigarette out on the water. "Maybe we'd better go up and help Joyce what we can."

Buzard did not stir. For several minutes he had been glancing uneasily at Alan. Finally he screwed up courage to speak.

"It's strictly none of my business, Alan, but—but . . . You're engaged to a girl there at Endurance, but you bought Miss MacMillan that rainbow scarf with your last dollar and you talked a lot about getting back here
and helping her."

Alan was loath to speak of Joyce, even with a partner. He tried to say quietly: "We've been good friends for several years. She's one of the sweetest girls I ever knew. You've met her now. You'd naturally want to help her, wouldn't you?"

"Of course. But—but . . . See here, I may be imagining things; you can tell me to shut up if you want to
—but it seems to me there's something wrong between you and her."

Alan repeated, rather shortly: "We're good friends. There's nothing more than that."

Buzard knew different. He had had a vague suspicion of it ever since Alan first mentioned Joyce MacMillan's name at the cafe in Edmonton. As he remembered the incident of this noon, he wondered at the Spartan courage Joyce had shown and at the passion behind such an act. Surely some bitter unhappiness lay between her and Baker.

He said reluctantly: "If that's true, if you're merely friends and

"What!" Alan Whirled on Him, Gasping. "Burn Up That Cel-ture Flechee!"

nothing more, what made her burn up that scarf you brought her?"

"What!" Alan whirled on him, gasping. "Burn up that celture flechee!"
He half-rose. "You say that's what she did? You're sure about that? You didn't make a mistake?"

For a moment, groping about to retrieve his blunder, Buzard hardly knew what to say or do. There had been no mistake; he had seen that incident with his own eyes when he glanced through the window to find where Alan was. He debated whether to draw back from his statement or to plunge ahead and tell the rest of it—Joyce's momentary battle, the shudder that swept her whole body

when she put the scarf into the stove,
and the quick blinding tears that she dashed away.

He thought: "Better not get any deeper into this. I'd only blunder again. Better back out entire."

He stammered: "I might have made a mistake. I might—uh—it might have been the wrapping paper. I just merely saw her put—uh—something into—and I jumped to conclusions.
Must have been the wrapper. Why would any person want to burn up a gift like that? Let's forget it."

His tones carried no conviction. He realized it himself. Alan disbelieved him; Alan knew Joyce had burned the scarf he gave her.

Cursing himself hotly, Buzard
looked out across the purpling river.
He had meant only the best, and he had dealt Alan a savage pitiless blow.
After a little time Alan said to him:

"You'd better go up, Buzard; she may be waiting for us."
"Aren't you going?"

"No—not now; I don't much care.
I don't want supper."

Something in his voice warned Buzard not to urge him. As he turned away, Alan said, in the tones of a man who has made some hard and abiding decision:

"When you've had supper, come back down here; I'll help you with that work; we'll do it now, so we can get away early. I was thinking—for this evening—something else. But that's out—now."

At three o'clock the next morning
Buzard lifted the plane out of the Big Alooska. With Alan directing him,
he headed due north.

One hundred and thirty miles away,
nearly four hundred miles from Fort Endurance, a small tribe of Tinnels lived along the western fringe of the Thal-Azzah. They were a timid, skulking, inoffensive band, shouldered into a region where other tribes scorned to live. Dave MacMillan had been their friend and they brought him
their furs; and Alan, during his years at Endurance, had sent a protective patrol to them twice a year.

Joyce had found out where they were spending this summer; and Alan had a mission with their old headman, Mugwa-Etthen.

When the timbered country began yielding to lakes and semi-muskeg, he got out his glasses and started searching ahead for their camp. At a height of five thousand feet he could sweep a region of more than two hundred thousand acres. The eyes of an eagle, the wings of a bullet-swift curlew, and that big-barreled Browning machine gun—through luck and driving purpose and a faith in his dubious plan,
he had smashed through obstacles till now he held the power and heavy odds over those bandits.

The sure knowledge of this was about all that was left to him. His work in the Mounted, his life here in the North, were both gone; and Buzard's cataclysmic words last evening
had showed him that his secret hope towards Joyce had been a fool's hope,
a fool's wishful thinking.

How low he must have fallen in her esteem, that she should burn his gift to her! At first it had seemed a little cruel of Joyce to do that. But then he looked at the incident with relentless honesty, and he could not blame
her. Once he and she had planned to marry. People had spoken of it; it had been generally accepted along the River. She had liked him, loved him.
What must her feelings have been as she watched his relations with Elizabeth, and saw him engaged to another girl and coming no more to the Big Alooska? She must have felt shame,
a burning shame, at being jilted.
Month after lonely month of that—it had been an outrage to her girlhood.
Nothing she could do to him could be so heartless as what he had done to her.

Through the propeller disk he at last sighted the Indian camp, a cluster of brown leather tents beside a lake
where the band was passing the summer near their fish weirs. Buzard roared over the camp and banked to alight. Old Mugwa-Etthen, a gaunt and wrinkled old savage, stalked up and gravely bade them welcome.

After this flood season of heavy rains, Alan knew there were a few areas in the watery wilderness of the Thal-Azzah where a party of men could camp. He himself had only a hazy idea where those areas lay; but this old headman, Mugwa-Etthen, Who-Follows-the-Caribou, had lived his life
along the border of that great marsh
and knew it better than any man alive, and could probably give him a pretty definite idea where to look.

Very wisely, Joyce had kept from letting the nomad hands know anything about the police defeat. The Shagalahs maintained order in so huge a territory largely through their reputation of never failing, and the news of their stinging defeat would do incalculable harm. Joyce had not even told old Mugwa-Etthen.

After pledging the headman to silence, in guttural Tinnel Alan began sketching the story of the robbery and battle. As he told of the bandits escaping up the Alooska, he noticed that the old chief suddenly became all interested.

Alan looked at him keenly. "Something's up," he thought. "I've stumbled onto something." He demanded:
"When I was two three breaths ago
you start like hit buck. Why?"

Drawing a crude map of the Thal-Azzah with his bony forefinger, the old headman sprang his astounding
news.

Ten suns ago, he said, Tukeok and another young buck had gone westward into the Land of Many Waters
to locate rat colonies for autumn trapping. One evening they heard the boom-boom of fire-sticks far away southwest. Slipping up, timid, cautious, they saw some strange men shooting waves for food. They saw a tent, a camp on an island.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Dr. Robert D. Roach last week visited his uncle, Mr. E. Charman, after having returned from a year's practice and study in London, Eng., where he received the degree of F.R.C.P. He reports times improving in England and the people in the usual good spirits which gave that country the name of "Merrie England." He is intending now to locate in New Brunswick, at Moncton.

Messrs. K. H. Oxley, D. B. Wilson, G. K. Gregg and K. Pitcairn, all on the teaching staff of the Westhill High School, Montreal, spent the week-end in Dr. Wales' bungalow.

Mrs. Elder spent last week in Montreal visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hollywood.

Rev. W. and Mrs. Windsor spent several days in Montreal last week.

Miss Ida Hopper visited her sister, Mrs. E. Charman, over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollywood and little daughter May, were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elder.

The Kardo Company seem to have left town as mysteriously as they arrived, after giving two concerts in the Town Hall last Wednesday and Thursday evenings. It is hoped that they will have better luck at their next stopping place.

On Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 20th., the W. M. S. of the United Church was entertained at the home of the Misses Hibbard. Mrs. Macaskill (the President), Mrs. Pease, Mrs. Jeffrey, Mrs. Bishop, Miss F. Hibbard and Mrs. Usher, of Cushing, took part in the devotional exercises. The special speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. King, of Cushing. She told of the devoted work done by Miss Cameron and her assistants among the destitute Chinese women in San Francisco. The stories that Mrs. King recounted, though often pathetic, had an undercurrent of cheerfulness. They could not fail to enlist the sympathies of all who listened. A musical number was rendered by Mrs. H. P. Bezanson and Mrs. Macaskill. At the close of the meeting the members of the executive served afternoon tea.

Miss Edith Say, of Montreal, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Neve, last Sunday.

It is rumored that a very original play is to be produced in the Town Hall, Saturday evening, Oct. 1st. The title—"The Five Year Plan"—sounds a bit "red," but the posters have somewhat of a domestic complexion. Better come and see for yourselves!

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Calder and little son spent Sunday in Montreal.

Mrs. R. Simpson and daughter Edith spent the week-end at their cottage.

The opening half-hour was given to the reading and discussion of an article on the equal distribution of wealth.

At nine o'clock the President called upon the speaker of the evening, Mr. Harry Kay, whose subject was The Making of a Newspaper. Mr. Kay described in graphic detail the process which newspaper copy goes through from the time it reaches the editorial office until the paper is ready to be delivered at the news-stands. With the aid of hand drawn diagrams he skillfully introduced his hearers to the intricacies of the marvelous monotype machine, which should certainly be counted among the fairy-tales of mechanical science.

Mr. Kay was, for eight years, in the employ of one of the large printing firms of Manchester.

The next meeting of the Circle will take place Friday, October 14th., when a paper will be given by Mrs. Pease.

The Frontier Women's Institute meets at the home of Mrs. Jas. Murdoch on Tuesday evening, Oct. 4th. An interesting meeting is expected.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE TOPIC "UNREALITY"

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon for October 2, in all Christian Science churches is "UNREALITY."

Golden Text: "In the multitude of dreams and many words there are also divers vanities; but fear thou God." (Ecclesiastes 5: 7).

Among the Scriptural passages comprised in the Lesson-Sermon is the following: "And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father. Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ." (Matthew 23: 9-19).

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon are the following citations from, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Personality is not the individuality of man." "Mortal existence is a dream; mortal existence has no real entity, but saith 'It is I'." "Upon this stage of existence goes on the dance of mortal mind. Mortal thoughts chase one another like snowflakes, and drift to the ground." "To break this earthly spell, mortals must get the true idea and divine Principle of all that really exists and governs the universe harmoniously." (Pages 491, 250, 39).

Churchill, Canada's new Northern ocean port, has greeted its first passenger, a professor, who the news says, "satisfied Customs and immigration authorities." Curious minds will be wondering how many of these officials looked after this lone passenger and what they will do until the next one arrives.

Rev. Macaskill, of St. Andrews East in charge. School children eligible from Stonefield, Cushing, Chatboro, Ogdensburg, N. River, St. Andrews East and two schools in Pointe Fortune.

Cushing congratulates Mr. Hanson Bradford on his marriage to Miss Lily Kinsey, formerly of England, who has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. John Kirby, Sr. of Chute au Blondeau, for a number of years. The Rev. Mr. Macaskill was the officiating minister and the event took place in Pointe Fortune United Church on Wednesday of last week, the church being prettily decorated for the occasion.

This marriage was of much interest to Cushing, not only because of the proximity of the contracting parties to Cushing—the beautiful, swift-flowing Ottawa river being all that divided their homes, but that Mr. Bradford was a constant attendant in his youthful days of St. Mungo's church and his parents before him.

This being Mr. Bradford's second matrimonial venture, a hilarious party of young people took advantage of that fact to serenade the bridal couple, at their home at Bay Side Inn, with horns and whistles, etc., and were very kindly received.

Mrs. Jas. O'Brien, of Chatboro, spent Saturday in Montreal, visiting her husband who is in the General Hospital with a fractured limb. The accident happened on Friday evening at Mr. O'Brien who is section foreman on the C.P.R. line, and the C.P.R. Roadmaster were examining some new equipment for railway switches. Part of the equipment fell against Mr. O'Brien injuring him severely. He was rushed by hand car to Dr. Mason of Lachute, who advised that he be sent to the hospital immediately.

Our sympathy is extended to Mr. Thos. Hull, of Grenville and his family of young children in the sudden death of his wife on Saturday last. Mrs. Hull was formerly Jessie Cameron, second daughter of D. V. Cameron and the late Mrs. Cameron, of Stonefield. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Brueton, of St. Matthew's.
