Car and Lumber Wagon in Collision

Dr. Lafrance, returning home to Hawkesbury in the dusk of one evening last week, came unawares upon a team and lumber wagon 1/4 mile west of St. Philippe, and his automobile struck the outfit with an impact which might have caused more grievous result.

The 14-year old son of Odillon Fourcalt was driving the wagon, and was adhering to the right side of the road when the car struck him. The lad was thrown from the wagon and sustained bad bruises. The horses were also damaged and the wagon was shattered to matchwood.

Dr. Lafrance was accompanied by his wife and another lady. It is understood that he swerved in trying to avoid the wagon, and the rear of the car swung round, the wagon-rack piercing the body and windows of the machine. The occupants escaped serious injury, although they were all scratched and badly shaken.

Marriage

Murdoch — Jackson

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place in Detroit, Mich., at the home of the bride's sister, when Marguerite Marion Jackson was united in marriage to Alton Hugh, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas Murdoch, of Brownsburg, Que.

The bride looked charming in a gown of blue chiffon velvet made in princess lines with jacket effect, and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard, also of Detroit.

After the ceremony a dinner was served at the home of the bride's sister, and with the opening of the gifts, which were costly and beautiful, the happy couple left immediately for Brownsburg.

On their arrival home a reception was held at the residence of the groom's parents, where some 75 guests were present.

The home was beautifully decorated in yellow and white, the dining table having yellow and white streamers falling from the ceiling and tied with yellow chrysanthemums. Very dainty refreshments were served.

The bride wore her wedding gown and the happy couple were the recipients of many cheques and useful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Murdoch have returned to their home in Detroit, after having spent the week visiting Ottawa, Montreal, and other parts.

International Ploughing Match

The broad acres of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa have been loaned this year for the annual International Ploughing Match and Farm Machinery Demonstrations taking place October 11 to 14. This great farm gathering, drawing each year between 500 to 600 competitors and around sixty thousand spectators, is recognized as one of the major events in Canada's agricultural circles & is intended to promote and demonstrate the first essential of good farming. Several thousand dollars in prizes and many valuable trophies will be given and ploughmen and boys are expected from all parts of Ontario and Quebec as well as from nearby states. Entries are open to the world. In addition to the contests and exhibition of farm machinery visitors will be free to roam over all parts of the Experimental Farm and the advice of all experts will be available. The handsome official program is now available and may be had on application to D. D. Gray, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

An optimistic outlook for lumbering operations in the province of Quebec this winter is seen by Hon. Honore Mercier, minister of mines and forests. He predicted that 650,000,000 feet of lumber would be cut, giving employment to 20,000 men.

Farewell Banquet to Mr. H. Kay at St. Andrews

On Wednesday evening, Sept. 28th., the Citizen's Committee of the St. Andrews Boy Scouts Association, gave a farewell banquet in the Town Hall, in honor of Mr. H. Kay, whose services to the Scout Troop during the past summer have been deeply appreciated by boys and parents alike. An attractive supper was spread on two tables in the basement of the hall. The scouts were in attendance in full force and the following members of the Citizen's Committee were also present; Col. L. M. Hooker, Mr. E. C. Calder, Dr. B. N. Wales, Mr. DeWitt, Mr. A. Gates, Mr. J. Burwash and Mr. F. Robertson.

On behalf of the Scout Troop and all those interested, Col. Hooker, Chairman of the Committee, thanked Mr. Kay for his splendid contribution to the work of the scouts during the summer and asked him to accept a small gift from the Citizen's Committee in recognition of his services. In his reply, Mr. Kay expressed the great pleasure it had given him to work with Scoutmaster Snowden and the boys during the season. He referred to the history of the old town, with which he had just become familiar by reading a series of articles "Memories of Old St. Andrews" (which have appeared from time to time on the pages of the Lachute Watchman.) Mr. Kay impressed upon the boys that they have a noble heritage to live up to, and he hoped they would do all in their power to sustain the best traditions of their native town, and make her proud of her sons.

Patrol-Leader Dawson Burwash read an address of appreciation to Scoutmaster Snowden, whose devotion to his troop has won the loyalty and regard of the boys. Mr. Snowden was presented with a handsomely mounted fountain pen, a gift from the scouts. Short speeches were made by Dr. B. N. Wales and Mr. DeWitt and the evening wound up with the singing of scout camp song and the National Anthem.

Oxen May Replace Horses on Farms

Animals Found Economical to Feed and Capable of Hard Work

History, literature and painting have made famous — and rather romantic — the stolid tranquility of oxen tilling the fields and performing all manner of hard labor connected with farming. And now, in the Twentieth Century, return of the oxen to the forefront of farm animals is understood to be seriously considered.

Proposal to encourage the use of oxen instead of horses has been put forward, it is said, by several officials of the Quebec Department of Agriculture and is now under consideration. The proposal was made in connection with the colonization activities of urban unemployed who have been placed in northern Quebec farming communities to be and are attempting to carve homesteads for themselves out of the wooded plains of the north.

A pair of oxen can be obtained for $35 "up north," it is said, a figure much lower than the price of a single horse. Oxen can be put to the hardest kind of labor and although slow will

Thanksgiving

By Molly Bevan
The Blue Bell Poetess

Lord, I was bred in city ways,
I cannot fitly give Thee praise
For harvest plenty as they yield
Who plough and plant and tend a field.

Let others hymn the fruitful land,
I know that Thou wilt understand
The grateful heart that humbly brings
Its litany of lovely things.

Great books to read, good folk to greet,
Youth, strength and health and daily meat;
The lure of roads, the urge to roam,
At journey's end a roof called "Home";
Earth's wondrous ways; sunrise and setting;
The lilt of song, and laughter kind,
The heart's remembering and forgetting;
Sleep's benediction; peace of mind.

And than all these is one thing more—
I have my friends to thank Thee for!

Town Council Meeting

Valuation Roll Homologated.
Objections to Sewer Tax

The regular monthly meeting of Lachute Council was held on Wednesday evening, at which were present: Mayor P. Dobbie, and Aldermen Dr. L. P. Rodrigue, W. A. Morrison, R. Ledoux, Lamarche, O. Laurin, C. Miller, Jos. Speight.

Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed, and reports of Finance Committee were received and ordered paid.

Mr. W. M. Scott, representing bond-holders of the Cottingham property, appeared before the council for reduction of valuation, claiming that the assessed value is now $18,000 which he considered too high as the property was deteriorating owing to non-use. The valuers were appealed to for reversal of their assessment, but they felt their decision should hold and in consequence the valuation roll was then homologated, on motion of Alderman Miller, seconded by Alderman Ledoux.

Messrs. Delorme and Quesnel were present, to oppose the levy of tax for laying the sewer along Main from Bedard Boulevard. A letter from the J. C. Wilson Co. was also received, complaining against such payment, as they had not asked or been consulted work for long hours. Complicated and expensive harnesses are not necessary, an ordinary rope being sufficient to guide the animals. Also they can be fed much more economically than horses.

And so the Quebec Government is considering equipping its modern settlers with farming materials similar to that used by the ancestral colonists from France. No official announcement has yet been made.

in the matter and so should not be held liable.

The secretary, in explanation of the bills sent, briefly reviewed the situation by stating that the by-law for a complete sewerage system of the town had been submitted to the people and was turned down. The residents of Bedard Boulevard petitioned the Council for a sewer and same was granted. The unemployment situation was serious, and the work was executed in part with the grant received from the government. When at the Main St. line, it was considered advisable to lay a larger pipe which would conform to the requirements of the town sewerage system at such time as they saw fit to build it. This had been done and those who had received bills for their proportion of the work were only charged $3.60 a foot as against the cost of $9.00, the difference being paid in part by the money received from the government.

It was moved by Alderman Miller, seconded by Alderman Ledoux, that the town should not contribute to the Sanitary Unit this year. An adjournment was then called and the Council will meet again on October 13th.

Quebec women are again preparing to make an appeal to Quebec Government to give them the right to vote. The Hon. Gordon W. Scott has been asked to sponsor the bill. Mr. Scott expressed his willingness to present the bill on one condition, however, which was to the effect that the measure should contain a clause which would make voting obligatory upon both men and women and impose a penalty on any enfranchised person who without just cause neglected to perform his duty at the polls.

One man has been found who was detained 76 days in connection with the Lindbergh case. They are finding strange things in connection with that case, everything in fact except the names of those who murdered the child.

Work on St. Andrews Water System to Start this Fall

The proposed installation of a waterworks system in St. Andrews East was up for discussion on Monday at a Council meeting in that town. There appears every prospect that the community will have advantage of an efficient system next year, and the more immediate benefits of labor commencing on this project in the very near future.

J. E. Thibodeau of Shawinigan Falls has assumed the aqueduct franchise held by Mr. McDonnell, and with his associates, Messrs. Gagne, of Vaudeuil, & Lebrun, of Three Rivers, is preparing plans for final agreement with the village council. Monsieur Thibodeau has already sponsored and installed several aqueduct systems.

At Monday's meeting the syndicate were questioned as to their plans, Mayor A. E. Ladouceur enquiring particularly as to the proposed width of pipe. It was learned that they intended to install 5-inch pipe from the springs at Beach Ridge and also in the two principal mains through the village.

The Mayor contended the water-head was of insufficient pressure to feed these mains adequately from a 5-inch supply pipe. Engineers, previously investigating, had recommended 8-inch pipe from the source and a 6-in. pipe installation through the village itself. The councillors expressed disapproval of the plans thus prepared by Mr. Thibodeau and his colleagues, suggesting that they employ 8-inch pipe for 2000 feet from intake, 6-inch pipe for a further 3000 feet, and the remainder of 5-inch pipe.

The meeting adjourned until Oct. 11th., to enable the contractors to make estimates accordingly. After final agreement between the Council and parties concerned, the plans will pass for approval of the provincial authorities, and it is expected that work will start promptly on the undertaking.

W. H. Garretsee Passes Away at Shawinigan

A former and well known citizen of Lachute in the person of Wm. Henry Garretsee passed away on Saturday last at his home in Shawinigan Falls. Deceased gentleman who was 70 years of age, was born in Coneseon, Ont., and for a number of years conducted a jewelry store in our town. He was married to Miss Isabel Creswell in 1887, and during his stay here was an active member of the School Board and Town Council.

Some 15 years ago he left for Hawkesbury where he continued business later moving to Shawinigan Falls.

Mrs. Garretsee and two daughters Leona, of Montreal, and Anna at home, are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father.

His only brother, Bert, of Coneseon, Ont., predeceased him last week.

The remains were brought to Lachute for interment, service being held in the Anglican Church by the Revs. W. P. Garret, of Hawkesbury, and J. A. Lackey of Lachute.

The pall bearers were Messrs. H. M. Gall, Dr. G. A. Clunie, Dr. Jas. Mason, W. M. Scott, Geo. Creswell and R. White.

R. L. Calder Addresses Local Women's Institute

The regular meeting of the Lachute Women's Institute, was held in the High School Hall on Tuesday, at 7.30 p.m., with 27 members and 8 visitors present. The Institute felt greatly favored at this meeting, having present with them Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Calder, of Montreal. Mr. Calder lectured on the subject of "The Rights of Women in respect to Wills and Inheritance." He referred his listeners to the volume of "The Civil Code of Lower Canada," and although he assured them in his humorous manner that "their fate was already fixed when they became married," he very kindly and clearly explained the law in regard to will, marriage contract, and the advantage of both. Mr. Calder generously answered all questions and the ladies felt duly appreciative to him for this educative and enlightening address.

Obituary

MRS. JOSEPH TOMALTY

After a brief illness resulting from a slight cold, death came to Mrs. Joseph Tomalty, at the home of her daughter in Montreal, on Thursday evening, Sept. 29th. Mrs. Tomalty, formerly Margaret McMahon of Harrington, Que., was in her 77th year. After her marriage to Joseph Tomalty over half a century ago, they resided in Edina, Que., until 1908. They moved to Montreal, taking up residence there; here also they resided, until the time of her death.

Mrs. Tomalty was of a very kindly and lovable disposition, having won the affection of all who knew her. This fact was evident in the large circle of friends which attended the funeral, and also by the beautiful floral tributes. The service was held at the home of her daughter on Saturday evening, conducted by Pastor Brown of Verdun. The remains were brought by motor on Sunday and were laid to rest in the Edina Cemetery, where the Rev. E. A. Baxter held a short service.

Besides her aged husband, she leaves to mourn her loss one daughter, Mrs. Aubrey Watts, and two sons, George and John, all of Montreal; also one sister, Mrs. Young, and three brothers, William and John, of Avoca, and James, of Montreal.

Gov. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, Oklahoma, refused a pass to a football game, saying, "Modern education has too many football, basketball and highball policies."

Milk Wagon Struck at Brownsburg

Edward Boyd of Brownsburg suffered severe injury in a collision which occurred last Saturday morning in the early hours. While proceeding to Brownsburg with his milk delivery wagon at 5.30 a.m., Mr. Boyd was met by a truck in which Mons. Chagnon was driving home to Lachute.

A collision occurred between the two vehicles, opposite Geo. Hardie's gate on the main highway. Although the hour was dark, there is a street light at this spot, and the cause of the mishap is not clear. Mr. Boyd was taken home, with a bad cut on the head. Fortunately, it happened that his injuries were not of serious nature, and he is now progressing favorably.

burial was connected with Lodge No. 450 there.

A Masonic funeral was conducted at the grave, at which a number of his former associates were present, together with other members of Argenteuil Lodge.

Hawkesbury Lodge, No. 450, was represented by Rev. Rural Dean W. F. Garrett.

ABOUT YOUR BROTHER

Dear Boys:—

This week I want to have a little chat with you about your brother and I am going to start with a question—Why Don't You Take More Interest in Him?

If he is older than you are, here is a wonderful opportunity to learn from him how to accomplish many things that you would otherwise remain ignorant of; and further you have the additional satisfaction of knowing that because he is your brother you can be constantly in his company and possess his confidence.

If he is younger than yourself, yours is the joy and pleasure that is granted to few. You can teach him more valuable lessons than can ever be learnt in school, and even better than this you can prevent him from making some of the hideous blunders that have caused you much trouble and anxiety. But remember that in both these cases there must be mutual love, respect, and fellowship.

Because I am getting quite an old man now (Not so old either!—Editor) it has been possible for me to see how brothers grow up, how they act towards each other, and what feelings they have in this way when they become men.

Does their affection for each other remain of the same quality when they are older?

This thought is quite an important one and may be answered in the following way: I know of three brothers who, now that they have grown up, are working in widely separated parts of the world, one of them in France, one in Canada, and the third in United States of America. Very rarely do they see each other and years pass by before one or other of them meet. But that makes no difference, for never a month passes by without each receiving full news of the other, and their affection and love only grows stronger because of this unavoidable separation. The reason is that they never forget the days when they were little boys together.

That is the point I want to emphasize in capital letters—NEVER FORGET. Let your thoughts dwell on the time when you were little boys together, played games, shared both your joys and sorrows, fought your battles side by side, and in moments of defeat went to the same source for comfort and loving sympathy.

You have your school friends, of course. You spent many happy hours and days in their company, which is a good thing; but the one who will trust you, love you, make the largest sacrifice possible for you and always be loyal to you till the end of this life, is Your Brother.

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

Mystery Island

By Capt. O. J. Aidom.

CHAPTER 20.

No sooner had Jack departed from the cabin on his way to warn his Uncle of the peril that was so soon to come upon them, than it seemed as if nature itself was going to take a hand in the game. For some time the ship had been sailing through calm waters. The night had been still and the sky clear, so that the stars in all their beauty had twinkled from a wide expanse of sky devoid of clouds, in which the perfect stillness of a sudden night had held full sway.

All this was to undergo a rapid change, for with a suddenness only too common in this latitude, the winds sprang up with fury. Mountainous dark clouds appeared on the horizon, their threatening blackness blotting out the light of all the stars and the glory of the moon. The ship began to heave as the hitherto quiet sea was lashed into fury by the force of the on-coming gale, making it difficult for all who used the deck to keep upon their feet. Every now and again the distant rumbles of thunder could be heard, each growing in intensity as the tempest increased in power.

Jack was forced to cling to the rail of the gangway as very carefully he descended to the cabin, and just as he reached the door he was thrown violently inside by the force of a tremendous volume of water which struck the vessel amidships.

Capt. Pat, who had already risen to close the port-hole, ran to his assistance and picked him up from the floor.

"Are you hurt Jack?" he inquired anxiously as he led him towards the couch.

"No," replied the boy, feeling himself carefully so that he would make sure he was speaking the truth! "I don't think there are any bones broken but it was a pretty nasty crack. There are more important things to think about now."

"You have some news, I can see," replied the Uncle. "Tell me quickly what has happened?"

"Nothing as yet," Jack answered, "but something is going to take place very soon. Mr. Williams has sent me to warn you that they are going to make an attack in less than an hour."

The Captain's lips set tightly, and wasting no time, in words he went to the cupboard at the further end of the cabin, and removed several rifles together with some ammunition.

Babs, who had at the beginning of the storm put away her mandolin, watched him and her brother with large and wondering eyes. "What do you mean, Uncle?" she whispered, her voice trembling a little "And why are you taking those guns out of the cupboard?"

For a moment she received no reply, so busy was the Commander in pushing one cartridge after another into the magazine of each rifle. Then he turned toward his little niece.

"Now listen, Mary," he said, almost sternly, so anxious was he to keep his voice firm and natural. "There are a lot of bad men on the ship, and it is quite probable that in a few minutes they will come here for the purpose of doing us an injury, so you must not be frightened at anything you may hear, even if one of these guns,"—and he smiled grimly, "should happen to go off."

He had hardly finished speaking when a subdued knock came at the cabin door. Jack, ever on the alert and at a nod from his Uncle, sprang toward it and opened it a very little. Outside in the darkness of the passage he saw the forms of Mr. Williams and a small group of men behind him.

"Let me in," he whispered hoarsely.

They boy obeyed very quietly and they all stepped inside, the men grouping themselves at one side of the cabin as if awaiting instructions from their officers.

The Commander looked interrogatively at his Chief Officer. "Are they all there?" he asked.

"Yes," was the reply, "with the exception of Sambo, the cook, and him I could not find. Where he got to, I can't say. I am sorry for this, because if he is loyal to us, I am afraid he is in danger. But I dared not waste any further time looking for him."

Jack started forward eagerly. "Perhaps there is still time for me to get him?" he asked, and then stopped, seeing the stern look on his Uncle's face.

"You will do nothing of the kind," he was told. "Your duty is to stay here and if necessary fight. Now get busy and hand each one of these men a rifle, and we will give these fellows a great deal more than they are expecting."

Very quickly the arms and ammunition were distributed and the men sat around in various positions, a look of serious expectancy on their faces while the two officers conversed together in whispers, and Jack, drawn by an instinct that he would never have been able to express in words, went to the side of his sister and drew her hand very gently into his own.

One by one the minutes dragged on and the fury of the storm seemed to increase rather than diminish, as the good ship plowed its way through the surging, heaving mass of water.

Suddenly Captain Pat looked up. "What about the engines?" he asked, "And where is McGowan?"

Mr. Williams smiled grimly. "I told him what was going to happen but he said he was not going to leave his beloved engines even for the evil one himself; and if anybody attacked him, he had something in his pocket that would make them extremely sorry for themselves!"

"That's good," said Captain Pat cheerfully. "I was worried in a tempest like this, as to what would happen to us if the engines broke down. But I should think they would be fools to interfere with him anyway, for the safety of this ship must be as important to them as it is to us. Now all we have to do, that I can see, is to wait with what patience we can. It can't be long now before they make some move or other."

Just then a tremendous crash of thunder was followed by a flash of lightning which lit up the whole cabin, and hardly had the sound died away than the hearts of all present began to beat a little faster, as they heard a rush of feet clattering down the gangway and a minute later a terrific crash on the cabin door. Instinctively they started to their feet, taking firmer grasp of the weapons they held in their hands.

HE STOPPED THE PAPER

I've stopped my paper, yes I have,
I didn't like to do it;
But the editor he got too smart
And I allow he'll rue it.

I am a man who pays his debts,
And will not be insulted,
So when the editor gets smart
I want to be consulted.

I took his paper eleven years
And helped him all I could, sir,
And when it came to dunning me,
I didn't think he would, sir.

Says I, I'll stop the sheet, I will,
If the cursed thing goes under,
But so I did and you can see
I made him hot as thunder

I hunted up the measly cuss
And for his cunning caper
I paid him 'leven years and quit—
Yes, sir, I've stopped the paper.

History of St. George's Church, Brownsburg

Regular Anglican services at Brownsburg, Que., were initiated by Rev. Herbert Charters, B.A., about the year 1911 A.D. being held at first as open air services on the picnic grounds, and later, in a house used as a school-room, recently taken down, which occupied a site directly in front of the present commodious consolidated school building. After a time arrangements were made for the holding of Anglican services in the Presbyterian Church, every second Sunday afternoon, the rental being $30. per annum. These fortnightly services were continued during the incumbency of less than a year, of Rev. George Gagnon, M.A. Rev.
J. A. Lackey, L. Th., came to the Parish of Lachute (which then included Louisa, as well as Brownsburg), on February 14, 1913. The Parish at that time was receiving the greater part of its support from the mission fund of the diocese, but the new incumbent, having won the esteem and goodwill of his parishioners, their united efforts soon raised the status of the Parish, to that of a self supporting rectory and again and again, from year to year, the Parishioners have increased the Rector's stipend.

Mr. Lackey conducted morning and evening services in Lachute, every Sunday, and afternoon services at Louisa and Brownsburg, on alternate Sundays. After a short time he started to hold services at these two outstations, on alternate Tuesday evenings also, thus giving both places weekly services on either Sundays or Tuesdays.
After a time Louisa was attached to Lakefield Parish, leaving the Rector of Lachute free to give Brownsburg a service every Sunday.

A church Sunday-School was started at Brownsburg, under the superintendency of Mr. F.
Aylward, assisted by Mr. Jos.
Robbins. In the early days of the Sunday-School, Miss Lily Secker and Miss Edith Secker, also rendered good and faithful service as teachers. The former is now the wife of Mr. H.
Butler, who holds the Bishop's license as Lay Reader.

The Presbyterian Church Board after a time, raised the rental of the Church, for Anglican use, from $30. to $100. per annum. The new rate was not unreasonable, yet the people felt that it would be more satisfactory and that they would be more independent and be able to do better work, if they had a Church home of their own, adapted to their particular form of worship.

They hesitated a good while before deciding to erect an Anglican Church building, for they knew that it could not be done without a good deal of sacrifice on the part of the members at Brownsburg and without a good deal of help from outside the Parish. However a meeting was called on Friday, January 13th., 1928, when it was decided to open a subscription list, and at that first meeting, those present pledged, towards the erection of a Church, more than $1,000.

The Rector, Mr. Lackey undertook to canvass for subscriptions among Church people in Montreal and other places outside the Parish, and the result was very gratifying.

The Dominion Cartridge Company Limited, very generously donated the site for the building.

The contract for excavating was given to Mr. Isaiah Fletcher and the contract for the erection of a stone building to Mr. Couvrette, his estimate being lower than that of others, for a wooden structure.

The first sod was turned on Saturday, May 5th., 1928.

Mr. J. B. Davis, Mr. Lemuel Wilson and the Rector were associated in the work of preparing plans for the building.

The corner stone, containing coins and copies of Canadian Churchman, Montreal Churchman and minutes of vestry meetings was laid by the Rector, on Friday, September 7th., 1928. At a meeting held on September 3rd., 1928, it was decided by ballot, that the name of the Church should be "St.
George's."

The first service in the Church was held on January 6th., 1929, and the dedication service was conducted by the Right Rev'd.
Bishop Farthing, on Sunday,
February 3rd., 1929.

Some work has yet to be done in the basement, before all is complete, but even as it now stands (September 1932) St.
George's Church, is one of the most beautiful, substantial and well furnished Church buildings in the country parts of the diocese of Montreal, and was fully paid for in less than three years from the time that its erection was decided on. The total cost has amounted to about $8,000.

This history would not be complete without some reference to the late Victoria Strachan Lackey—wife of the Rector.
In fair weather and foul, she accompanied her husband, in his visits to the outlying districts, and having had fine musical talent and training and a most agreeable personality, she contributed largely to the splendid progress of the Parish, though she did not live to see the fine Church building, which she,
with many of her co-workers, had long hoped for. A very fine East-end window, representing our Lord appearing to Mary Magdalene at the open tomb, stands as a memorial of her faithful and devoted life work.

Municipal Happenings

CULLED FROM THE PRESS

Metropolis Calls for Insuring of Taxis

If a new city by-law is adopted in Montreal, all automobiles used for hire or for taxis must be covered by insurance before the city issues a license to the owner. This by-law has already received the sanction of the Executive Committee and awaits the approval of the Council to be put into force.

The by-law stipulates that all owners of autos for hire or for taxi purposes shall be licensed by the owner on payment of an annual tax of $15, the application to be approved by the director of police.

Water is Assured in Homes of Poor

The City of Montreal never has and never will shut off water for reasons of poverty, Ald.
Gabias, chairman of the Executive Committee, emphatically told a delegation asking for work.
They asked that water be not shut off from the homes of unemployed and the request brought the forceful rejoinder from the chairman.

As to light and gas the City had no authority.
The chairman said that in all cases where an alderman had taken up cases of residents of his ward with the company, consideration had been extended.

Refused to Supply Boat with Water

The Morrisburg, Ontario, council refused to supply the steamer Rapids Queen with water as she was scheduled to dock and serve as an annex to the St. Lawrence Hall hotel. W. A. McGan-non, bringing the former rapids liner to Morrisburg to take care of the overflow of tourists in the town, made application at a special meeting of the council for water supply for the boat, and on a motion of two coun-cillors, he was turned down.

Must Return Stock Seized for Taxes

The town of Barrie, Ontario, was ordered by Mr. Justice Raney at Osgoode Hall, to return stock, seized for taxes, to the custodian of the bankrupt estate of George Hubbard, hardware merchant of that town.

Hubbard made an assignment on July 25.
The town on July 9, claiming $1,000 arrears in taxes, put a bailiff in on the merchant. They had refused to relinquish possession of the stock to the custodian, contending their claim was akin to a lien.

The town, however, will have a preferential claim against the estate, the court ruled.

Modern Demand Uncovers Ancient Metropolis.

Demand for chewing gum has uncovered in Mexican jungles a lost city that 1,500 years ago was a metropolis of an Egypt-like civilization.

Great pyramids and the ruins of temples and palaces in which a teeming population once lived have been found in what is now an uninhabited, almost impassable jungle, by an expedition of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Native chewing-gum hunters, who explored the region for chicle, the "chewing part of chewing-gum", first found the ruins, said the Carnegie institute in announcing the find.

The city was built at the height of the vanished civilization of the "Old Empire" of the Mayas. Soon after the time of Christ they developed what many archaeologists call the most brilliant of the ancient Indian civilizations of America.

Mayas carved dates of their buildings that have been deciphered, and the dates indicate that the city flourished from 364 to 651 A.D. It may have been 250 years later, however, as archaeologists differ in their interpretation of the dates.

The Type who seek "Direct Relief"

Following is a despatch from North Bay that suggests the class that are anxious for direct relief. The Advance has been struck by the number of men who are fairly begging for work but, of course, there are others who prefer direct relief. The average Canadian or Britisher hates the thought of "relief" and only takes it when he cannot get a chance to make his own way. The despatch says:—"Fifteen of 55 men who have been given free board at the relief camp 13 miles north of the city refused to help clear bush from a five-mile stretch along the forestry department's private telephone line, and were ejected from the camp. The other 40 willingly agreed to do the work, as they had not previously been asked to do anything. The 15 malcontents came to North Bay, but were refused shelter at the jail, and were ordered to leave the city at once. The men told Relief Inspector W. E. Sevigny that they didn't have to work as there are enough citizens in the city who will feed them."

Quebec's gasoline tax, primarily designed as a means of helping the province pay for construction of highways within its limits, has yielded $21,000,000 since it first came into force, in the spring of 1924.

Official statistics obtained show that up to and including June 30 last, the amount contributed by motorists of the Province of Quebec, of other sections of Canada, and of the United States totalled $21,434,742.47.

"Can the Motor Car Lead us to Recovery?" was the subject of a recent article in Maclean's Magazine.

How can the motor car lead us anywhere (asks a reader, by way of reply)—so long as Provincial Governments, blind to falling incomes, insist on loading it with heavy license fees, higher gas taxes, etc.? A better way must be formed to balance budgets, than by so handicapping such a great source of employment.

The "luxury" taxes must come off—the motor car and truck are necessities today. License plates and registration "at cost," and a fair tax on gasoline, toward maintenance of roads—then watch a great industry move!

Miss Agnes Macphail is reported to have advised the farmers "not to pay their taxes." Cessation of tax paying would mean the closing of schools, stopping all work on roads and the withdrawal of all services now carried on by the municipality. Difficult though the payment of taxes undoubtedly is, the farmers are not likely to follow Miss Macphail's advice and sacrifice their schools and other valuable services.

Says the Sherbrooke Record:—If Miss Aggie Macphail were still teaching school at $400 a year in Grey County, and her salary were in arrears in the township, you would not hear her commend to the farmers the idea that they should refuse to pay their taxes until they could raise them out of the ground. In Western Canada, around Moose Jaw, the school teachers and corporation officials had to wait a long time for their pay last spring. Aggie no doubt, will advise her constituents to cuss the memory of the man who invented taxes, and bless the lads who fixed her sessional indemnity at $4,000 per three months.

THE RURAL TEACHER AND THE TEACHERS' CONVENTION

With the opening of schools comes a renewed activity of the educational department of the Women's Institute.

The Institute has always been a source of help to teachers, especially to those in rural schools. Such teachers often are not able to come in contact with others of their profession, as those teaching in larger schools may do. Local associations of teachers have been formed, and these are especially useful to the isolated rural teacher, but in the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers, there is, unfortunately, a very small representation from rural schools.

The reasons are not hard to find. Almost all of the members of the P.A.P.T., numbering at present well over 1,500 attend the annual Convention at Montreal. Aside from the question of expense, this trip to the city presents difficulties to one who is a stranger there, especially if she is travelling alone.

In the matter of finding suitable lodging, it is quite possible that the Women's Institute may help. Have the members friends in Montreal who would be willing to rent a room and provide breakfast for a teacher during the three days of the Convention? If someone can meet the train, all the better for the stranger who dreads finding her way about the city in the evening.

Besides the benefits of attending the Convention, which has a section devoted to Rural School Work, the P.A.P.T., with its subscription to "The Teachers' Magazine," and its opportunities for insurance at a very low rate, gives advice and assistance to its members throughout the year. Help the rural teacher—she needs all the help she can get—and help to P.A.P.T., by encouraging her to attend the convention next October.

This article was written by Miss Alice Dresser, Vice-President of the Quebec Women's Institutes, Richmond, Que.

CENTENARY OF LACHUTE UNITED CHURCH

Lachute United Church, in so far as its Presbyterian heritage is concerned, has had an unbroken continuity for the past hundred years. This Centenary is to be celebrated by special services on Sunday, October 23rd., by a Young People's Rally on the following Monday evening, and a Congregational Social on the Tuesday evening of that week. The special Preachers at the Sunday services will be Prof. R. B. Y. Scott, of the United Theological College, and Rev. B. B. Brown, of Wesley United Church, Montreal. The people of the Congregation are looking forward to these gatherings with eager anticipation, and are hopeful that, as they ponder the labors and sacrifices of those who have gone before, they may derive fresh inspiration for the tasks by which they are now confronted.

Reminiscences of Mother's Garden

Of mother's garden, oh, sweet recollection! There, pansy faces in every direction—Of purple hue, and gold brocade—Colors too lovely to ever fade.

Oh, winsome pansies, fragrant and wise, Blinking their eyes at the pale-blue skies—Pansies that grew when the moon shone bright And woke with tears in the morning light.

The sun's bright light in the morning hours Enhanced the picture of those fragrant flowers. My thoughts of home in the month of June, Are sweetened with pictures of roses in bloom.

Poses of pink—white—and moss-roses, too, All bowing their heads in the morning dew; At noon awoke with renewed erection, And freshened colors that stirred affection.

The morning-glories, how sweetly they twined, And bloomed in the morning—in the evening declined; Their life was sweet, but short and sad Though they climbed the poles all velvet clad.

The ivys too, that shaded the house, Gave shelter and home to many a mouse; And chirping crickets, there thro' night they'd sing, While the spiders danced the "Highland Fling."

Oh, mother's garden in those days of yore, Was tended with hands that shall toil no more; Her dahlias, and daisies, in sweet repose, Smiled for her 'till the evening's close.

The marigolds and the mignonette, And bachelor's buttons, all gold inset; Sweet-peas, so fragrant, and of varied collection—Beautiful colors of selected perfection.

The honey-suckle, with its tiny shutter, Where humming-birds hummed with wings aflutter; Petunias, and phlox of great profusion, Where honey-bees swarmed in hungry confusion.

Oh, mother's garden, all purple and gold—The loveliest garden! Always new, though old—There, father sat on a chair by the door, Enjoying the garden with its colors galore.

Yes, father sat there at each evening's close, Singing hymns and songs of favorites he chose; And there too, one evening to his great surprise, What did he see, both cunning, and wise?

But a jolly bull-frog, which hopped on the step—In fancy, I can see him there yet; He jumped and croaked, and extended his chest, And acted as if rehearsing burlesque.

After seeming to say: "Good-night!" he retired, His duty accomplished, as one who was hired, He hopped to his shelter under a log, Thus ending the story of this star-actor frog.

Oh, carry me back, through the clouds of the night, And bring to my eyes with the morning light—Those realms of glory, with their happy hours, Where Home Sweet Home meant colorful bowers.

The garden has changed, and the old homestead Is shorn of those beauties, still fragrant, though dead. But fond recollections keep them living still As they grew by our home on top of the hill.

Alone, I sit musing, and writing this poem Of a dreamland, that spells: Home Sweet Home. My memory clings to those days now gone, As a night brings again the morning's dawn.

"There is no death, all is but transition!" So, voiced a great soul in benediction: Good neighbors, kindred all, and flowers and friends, Ever live in our hearts—till memory ends.

H. A. Mitchell, O'Brien.

CONTRASTS

Running the gamut from riches to poverty in the short space of an hour was my experience not so long ago. It was my privilege to go through a very beautiful yacht equipped with every means of luxurious living a boat that would cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to buy and a large sum of money to maintain. The owners were enjoying to the fullest the sun and the water and the hearty appetites that the lake breezes develop.

A few hundred yards away from this palatial yacht, we came across a man who had made a camp for himself under the trees, out of a few boards and a bit of straw. He appeared to be a decent respectable man and was earning a living peddling wire appliances which he made himself. He said that he lived well on thirty five cents a day. He was cooking his supper and it certainly was a good substantial one. Two boiled eggs and a pan of sausage and fried onions. I tell you it smelled good. He was not a hobo but a man who was not able to get work at his own trade and was living in the cheapest way he knew how, taking advantage of the warm weather and saving for the cold days to come.

Both rich and poor seemed perfectly happy living in their own way, but the contrast was very striking.

WHY WE SHOULD EAT FRUIT

Most people accept the fact that fruit is good for you but they never stop to think why this is so. Fruit is one of the very best foods and the reasons for it are not hard to find.

One of its chief values is that it contains considerable quantities of minerals and these are very necessary if the body is to function properly. Many persons are partially starved for these minerals.

Constipation is too often a condition of our modern living and fruit is a foe to constipation. This is partly due to the pulpy fibrous tissues known as cellulose which by its very bulk stimulates the regular action of the bowels. Fruits such as the berries and figs have small seeds which are of value. When the skins are such that they may be eaten they too help along the good work.

The juice of acid fruits acts as a mild laxative for some people. The entire fruit with its cellulose is of more benefit than the juice alone. It is more trouble to eat and takes more time so in these days of rush many people content themselves with drinking fruit juices. A drink of acid fruit juice is a very appetizing thing with which to start a meal. They act as appetizers because of the vitamins they contain which act as a tonic. They are much better for you and much easier to take than drug-store tonics.

SEED IS FERTILE AFTER 3000 YEARS

After resting for some 3000 years in the tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen in Egypt, peas have grown up and are now yielding crops in a little garden in Ronneby, on the Swedish south coast

Fruits contain a quantity of easily assimilated sugar. The more of our sugar requirements that we get from fruits and the less from granulated sugar the better for us.

HARD COOKED EGGS

These days most of us are using quite a few hard cooked eggs in our salads. Do you cook just your immediate needs or do you cook enough to last for some days? The latter method saves time and if you have not tried it before you will be surprised to find how convenient it is to have cold hard cooked eggs ready to use. Do not shell them until required.

If you want them to shell easily, be sure that your water is boiling when the eggs are put in and then put the eggs in cold water when they are sufficiently cooked. These precautions will save time and trouble in shelling.

A WALNUT CAKE

The farmer's wife of whom I have written before has been talking about a walnut cake which is a great favorite of hers. She said it was her standby at threshing time as it was a good large cake, and it kept so well that it could be made days ahead. I decided I would try it too, but when I tried to write down her recipe it was so delightfully vague that it would be impossible for any but a very experienced cake maker to follow. As my readers are not all in that class, I decided I had better get it exactly right. So we made it together, and I brought it all down to level measurement terms. It is a very good cake, but I can guarantee nothing about its keeping qualities.—I did not get a chance to find out.

3 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 1/2 cup butter
1 cup walnuts
2 eggs
1 1/2 cups milk

Sift the flour, salt and baking powder. Rub the butter through as for pastry, add sugar and walnuts, broken in small pieces. Beat eggs until light and add to milk. Stir in this liquid and beat for at least five minutes until the mixture is a light creamy batter. Bake in a large pan for fifty minutes in a moderate oven of about 350 degrees. Ice with any white icing desired, but a butter icing is suitable.

BUTTER ICING

4 tablespoons butter
1/2 teaspoon milk
2 cups confectioner's (icing sugar)
1/4 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter very thoroughly. Add sugar gradually, blending well with the butter after each addition. Add milk and vanilla again beating thoroughly. Spread on cake. Draw the tines of a fork over the top to mark.

A Danish professor while taking part in the excavation of the tomb brought home a few peas.

Some of these later found their way to a garden in a little industrial community in Smaaland, where they were planted in 1930. The peas grew up and gave a crop of a few peas, two of which were given to a retired foreman, C. G. Svensson, in Ronneby, who planted them and obtained a crop of 202 peas. Sixty-five of these he again planted. All of them came up and gave a rich yield.

The plants have stalks four to six feet high and clusters of beautiful red and white flowers. (—Christian Science Monitor.)

THE HOME AND THE COMING GENERATION

Genesis 18:17-19; Deuteronomy 6:4-9; 1 Samuel 1:21-23; Mark 10:13-16; 1 Timothy 1:5, 6.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it. Proverbs 22:6.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—Timothy's Home.

JUNIOR TOPIC.—Honoring God in our homes.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Helping to Make Our Homes Better.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—Home Ideals for Today and Tomorrow.

1. The Home Which is to Be (Gen. 18:17-19).

The particular home in mind here is Abraham's. He was not only to become the head of a home, in the ordinary sense, but also the head of a nation through which particular blessings should come to the whole world.

1. Abraham to be the head of the home (v. 18). The husband is the head according to divine arrangement. How blessed it is when the lawful head of the home recognizes his responsibility, and in the fear of God seeks to discharge it.

2. Abraham's responsibility for instruction of his family (v. 19). God was about to destroy Sodom. The interests of humanity were at stake in the judgment upon this wicked city. It was God's purpose that Abraham should teach his descendants as to God's purpose through them. It is a father's solemn responsibility to teach his children the purpose and ways of God so that they may in turn take their place and become a blessing to the world.

11. God's Word, the Foundation of the Home (Deut. 6:4-9).

The home has a vital teaching function. The child develops slowly. It remains in the home for a long time, to give an opportunity to be taught the things of God. To teach God's Word to the children is a solemn obligation imposed upon parents.

1. The central truth to be taught (vv. 4, 5).

a. The unity of God (v. 4). This fundamental truth should be lodged in the mind of the child in its tender years.

b. Man's supreme obligation to God (v. 5). It is to love God supremely—heart, soul, and mind.

2. How the truth of God is to be kept alive (vv. 6-9).

a. It is to be diligently taught to the children (v. 7). This is a responsibility that dare not be delegated even to the Sunday school and church.

b. It should be talked of to the children everywhere and under all circumstances (v. 7). Impressions will thus be made upon the mind which cannot be effaced.

c. It is to be bound upon the hands and placed as frontlets between the eyes (v. 8).

d. It is to be written upon the posts of the house (v. 9).

III. Children Should Be Dedicated to the Lord (1 Sam. 1:24-28).

The union of man and woman in holy marriage is for the propagation of the race. Parents have a solemn responsibility and should esteem it a great privilege to give their children to the Lord. The example of Hannah in giving Samuel to the Lord should encourage all parents to follow her example. According to her vow, she took Samuel to the sanctuary and gave him over to the priest, to assist in the ministry in the Lord's house.

IV. Jesus' Attitude Toward Children (Mark 10:13-16).

1. Mothers desired that Jesus might touch their children (v. 13). Doubtless they had witnessed the healing power of His touch and coveted it for their children. All Christian parents want their children to come into contact with Jesus Christ.

2. The disciples rebuke (v. 13). Thinking the children were too insignificant to engage Jesus' attention, they rebuked the mothers for bringing them to him.

3. Jesus' reply (v. 14). He declared that of such is the kingdom. Therefore, the children have a right in the presence of the King.

4. Jesus blessed the little children (v. 16). He took them up in his arms and blessed them. Christianity is peculiarly favorable to children.

V. The Godly Home (II Tim. 1:5, 6). Timothy's wise and faithful mother and grandmother carefully nurtured him in God's Word. He knew the Scriptures from childhood through their training. His faith came to him not through laws of heredity but through the careful teaching of God's Word. The factors involved were godly ancestors, a Christian home, and diligent study of the Scriptures.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Love never covets.
Self-conceit is always a hard master.
Pride is always hard on a man's clothes.
Many a man behaves himself because he has to.
Continue to wink at a sin and you will fall to see it.

Miss Campbell's Recipe for Cup Cakes

1/2 cup butter 2 cups pastry flour
1 cup sugar (or 1 1/2 cups bread flour)
2 eggs
1/2 teaspoon vanilla 3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
1/4 teaspoon salt 1 cup milk

Cream butter thoroughly; add sugar a little at a time, beating well. Add yolks of eggs and vanilla; beat well. Sift flour with baking powder and salt, and add, alternately with milk, to first mixture. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in greased cup cake tins, or in paper baking cups, in moderate oven at 375° F. about 25 minutes. Serve warm from the oven, sprinkled with powdered sugar. Or cool, and frost the tops. You will find many delicious frosting recipes in the Magic Cook Book.

"Cup Cakes

are delicious when made with Magic Baking Powder," says Miss Helen Campbell, Director of The Chatelaine Institute

"Good baking goes hand in hand with good materials," Miss Campbell will tell you.

That's why Magic Baking Powder is used and recommended by The Chatelaine Institute. Magic meets all the Institute's rigid requirements of fine quality—repeated tests have proved it absolutely pure, uniform and dependable.

The majority of dietitians and teachers of cookery throughout Canada plan their recipes for Magic. They use it exclusively because they know it gives consistently better results.

And 3 out of 4 Canadian housewives say Magic is their favorite. It outsells all other baking powders combined.

Remember—substitutes are never as good. Do as the experts do. Use Magic Baking Powder.

MOTORS AND MARRIAGE

In choosing a wife or a motor car, the modern man apparently thinks that it would be foolish to select the solid substantial kind rather than the showy speedy kind, when he may want a brand new model in a year or so.

This is the time of year when the heart feels the wanderlust; and many a woman wishes that she could take the bell off the family cat and tie it around her husband's neck.

The blessings of this world are very unfairly divided—particularly the husbands. One woman has five or six divorce decrees with which to brighten up her drawing room walls, while another woman hasn't even the old marriage certificate to hang over the kitchen sink. That life! —Exchange.

For several minutes, fighting down a wild elation, Alan forced himself to rough there, asking questions, fixing his map and that spot unforgettably in his mind.

At the wigwags he rejoined Bill.
"Come on! Let's be getting into the dr! An hour and a half from now we'll be saying it with a machine gun.
Then we flew up here we brought our ack along!"

From his height of three thousand feet, reading the country spread below him, Alan could follow the crude finger map without once being in doubt. That should be the great blue-water lake which Mugwa-Etthen had described. It should have islands in the center of it. On one of the islands near the north edge of the cluster the handits should be camped, if they had not moved on.

"Swing north!" he shouted at Buzzard. "Those islets there to themelves."

The machine swerved and thundered lower. One by one Alan started to reach the five. On the first one, nothing. On the second, nothing. But on the third... He started suddenly as he caught that center one in clear focus. Below them on that center island, conspicuous to their sky patrol, stood a solitary dirty-white tent.

After a few moments Alan had presence of mind again. He leaned forward and shouted instruction:
"Drop down to a thousand feet. Fly over that island again. Slow. Want to study it carefully before we start things."

Buzzard dropped down, swung around.
As the plane sailed over a second time,
Alan drew the island up to him studying the tent sharply, he saw a movement of the flap-front and distinguished a man's face, upturned, peering at them.

One bandit there at least! But the others?

A guess shot into his mind: those others had probably gone hunting for caribou over east at the foute.

As though that watcher there below realized what this ominous circling meant and had become panicky, a puff of white, a single puff, burst from the flap-front. Confident the man was alone and the others were gone, Alan decided to take this bandit alive. He needed information about the others, and information about that pack of furs to clear Dave MacMillan.

While Buzzard circled at a safe distance, he tore a page from a memo book and printed a message:

"If you shoot again, we'll splatter you and that island into the lake with our machine guns. Stand out in the clear. No weapons on you. Don't try any crooked move after we light."

He wrapped the message around a monkey-wrench and handed it to Buzzard. From wartime practice of dropping "eggs" on ammunition dumps and second-trench Flammenwerfer and camouflaged batteries of Krupp 79's east of Verdun, with no aerial sights except two nalls and a string along the fuselage, Buzzard was a good judge of speed, altitude and the right split-instant to release. Whirling over the island, a few hundred yards up, he planted the missile within a dozen paces of the flap-front.

As they looked back they saw the man run out to it, read the message, hesitate a moment, and then raise his left arm, waving something white.

A pistol-shot off the island the plane lighted. Buzzard stayed in the machine. Alan and Bill got out the canvas canoe, slipped automatically into their pockets, took rifles prominently in hand and went ashore.

While Bill searched the bandit for a hidden revolver, Alan looked at him curiously. He was a strange character to find in this country. Slant-eyed, his skin olive, he looked as though he had oriental blood in his veins. The rag he had waved in token of surrender was a sling. His right arm dangled limp at his side.

Alan demanded, "Are you the fellow we hit in that fight?"

"Chink!" Woolley nodded.
"Are those other men out hunting?"
Alan asked. "Or where?"

Woolley batted his eyes slowly, as though taking thought "Huntin', yes," he managed.

"Which way?"

"North-east."

"That probably means they went southwest," Alan remarked, and his short laugh was not pleasant. "You lie natural and easy-like, but it won't get by with us. We've nailed too many liars in our time. I want to know who this party of yours is, where they came from, how they got into this country, how they know their way about in it. I want to know how that pack of otter pelts got into Trader MacMillan's storage shed. I want to know the man who killed Jimmy Montgomery there on the Midnight Sun.

Now get busy."

He clicked the safety on his automatic and brought his elbow up against his side.

Chink Woolley trembled, his knees shook, he wilted. He guessed that this man must be the Baker fellow, le sergent terrible, whom Met! Andre always mentioned in lowered voice.
Those hypnotic gray eyes seemed to be boring through him. That heavy automatic was tilted to make his next lie the last. And if he turned king's evidence, he might escape the noose.

It was a strange story that Alan and Bill listened to, there on the island in the heart of Many Waters.

Eighteen months ago, on a whaler

in Beaufort sea, the five whites, excluding the half-breed Andre whom they picked up later, had "run a buck" under Jensen's instigation, but were overpowered by the captain and rest of the crew. Flung ashore with the skipper's sulphurous good wishes at black Demarcation point on the Arctic coast, they made their way across the Romanzoff's to the new placer fields in the Kayukuk headwaters. They came too late to get worthwhile claims; and they discovered, too, that "hawking" in the perpetually-frozen subsoil was even harder work than whaling.

It was Jensen, brooding over their predicament, who conceived the idea that it was easier to find gold which already had been found than to thaw a hole thirty feet down to black sand and bedrock and then maybe get something. It was Jensen who allayed their fears and dangled the golden lure in front of their eyes till their mouths watered and they were ready for anything he planned.

Andre the half-breed was a find. He fitted into the party like a key into a lock. They were crassly ignorant of the country; they were tyros when it came to traveling, hiding, living in the bush. But Andre the breed was bush-wise as a weasel and water-wise as a muskeg mink, and he knew the whole north country from Roes Welcome to Point Barrow as he knew the palm of his hand.

It was Andre who had brought the party into this strange country, by back rivers and untraversed trails, avoiding all sight of men, so that they seemed to have dropped from the sky.
It was Andre who suggested the place of attack on the Midnight Sun, and the Thal-Azzah as a place to hide in after the swoop and robbery. And it was Andre's sharp-speaking Savage that drilled Jimmy Montgomery through the heart.

Alan Baker breathed a little harshly. He ordered, "Describe that breed."
And he added, "So there will be no mistake when I meet him."

Woolley described his meti confederate. Alan nodded curtly. After a few moments' silence, he spoke again:
"Now about Trader MacMillan. How did that pack of furs get in his shed?"

"Jensen put it dere."

"Why?"

Woolley did not know all the details, but from hints Jensen had dropped he was able to place the story together pretty well.

Several years ago at Herschel Island, that gathering place for whalers, Indians, traders, Eskimos and Arctic explorers, Jensen had run afoul of Dave MacMillan. He had come ashore from a whaler, hungry for drink and hungry for woman's company after eight months of following the herds. He had found the drink, and in a whisky haze had started to make rough love to fifteen-year-old Joyce MacMillan.

Dave MacMillan fell upon him. For years now Jensen had been nursing his hairy chin reminiscently where MacMillan's hard fist had caught him;
and his ears still rang with the derisive jeers of those who saw him dog-whipped down across the swells and over the shingle to the whaler.

He had never forgotten the Mac-Millan girl nor the incident of that snowy October day. The incident had smoldered in his vengeful soul; and when his party passed the trading post, it had flared out. It was a neat stroke, putting that comparatively worthless bale of furs in the shed of the man who had dog-whipped him.
He had counted on the trader discovering them, wondering about them, innocently calling the attention of the police to them, and getting into hot water when he failed to explain how they got there.

The revelation of Dave MacMillan's complete innocence was no surprise to Alan but merely a proof that his and Joyce's instinctive belief had been correct. Now he could know that in buying out of service he had saved the reputation and possibly the very life of Joyce's father. Under Haskell's tyranny he could never have vindicated Dave. In his own way he had planned, and had fought through to this partial triumph.

Writing down the essential points of the confession, he forced Woolley to make his mark on the paper, with himself and Bill as witnesses. He made a second copy for Bill, in case something happened to Bill or him.
Then he demanded of Woolley:

"You say those other men went hunting. When are you expecting them back?"

Woolley did not know. He seemed strangely hesitant. Fidgeting uneasily, he would glance up at Alan and then away, as though he had something to tell but was afraid to tell it.

Alan saw his agitation. He demanded: "What're you stumbling over?
Cooking up some lie?"

The man wetted his dry twitching lips. "You'll not kill me if I tell you de truth—where dey went? You maybe can git back dere on de Alooska in time to save de girl."

"On the Alooska—in time to save the girl"—Alan jerked as though a bullet had sung past his throat. His face went suddenly pale. "You mean Joyce MacMillan? What about her?
Tell it, or by G—d I'll choke it out of you! Open up. What about her? What do you mean—in time to save her? I'll not kill you if you tell."

Woolley stammered: "Dey went down de Alooska to git her. It's Jensen's idee. He's almin' to take her along on de escape and keep her for himself. He's all burnin' about dat girl."

His shaky voice trailed off. He shrank back in quivering dread from the expression that had come into Baker's eyes.

For a little while, a few moments only, Alan stared unseeing out across the waters of the great blue lake. To wait here, until the handits came back? Not that; they'd be three days and nights on the return trip. Joyce would be helpless all that time. In the power of the man who was "all burnin' about dat girl." They had left only thirty-odd hours ago. He stood a chance of beating them to the trading post.

Whirling on Bill he ordered:

"You stay here. You attend to this end of it. Buzzard and I will attend to the other. We'll go after them in the plane. There's a chance we can get to the trading post before they do.
You'll have a rifle extra. They're in-

"I'll Not Kill You if You Tell."

tending to come back here after the loot. If anything happens to Buzzard and me, you'll be left, you'll have a chance at them. It'll be all up to you."

He turned on his heel and ran down to the canoe and skirled out to the waiting plane.

"Get back to the Alooska, Buzzard!
To Joyce's home!" He pleaded husk-ily. "For G—d's sake make it straight and fast!"

No one appeared at the doorway of the trading store. No one, with hair shimmering in the sun, came running down the path to get them.

Their shouts at the landing brought no answer from a girl's lips or from old Pence. In some measure prepared, Alan called Joyce's name as he strode into the trading hall. He called but once; he looked but once into her room.

Buzzard came running to him with a piece of paper in his hands. His face was lit with elation.

"Alan! Alan! Luckiest thing in our whole d—d lives! Look here, read this! Joyce and old Pence had left! Weren't here when that pack came! Went after caribou! Almost too good to be true!"

Alan grasped the note and read. It was in Joyce's fine swift handwriting.
No doubt about that. It stated that she and old Pence had gone to Black Timber lake thirty miles north to get caribou and would be back in two days, in case a patrol happened past.

Alan studied the note for half a minute. His face did not relax.

"Yes, too good to be true," he commented slowly. "Don't you see?—this note is addressed to Constable Larry Younge. Why did Joyce do that? She knows Larry is not patrolling, knows he is at Endurance all shot up; and she knows we know it. Don't you see what she tried to do? It was her only way of telling us that something was wrong. She had to write this note as they dierated it, but she tricked them."
"It's so, it's so," Buzzard agreed. "She tricked them under their very eyes, and counted on us to understand."

LET A MOTHER TELL YOU

Mrs. Albert Bolton, Toronto, gratefully speaks of what Eagle Brand did for her little daughter, Margaret Joan. "For the first three months she was nursed, but this did not seem to satisfy her, so after trying nearly everything, I read an advertisement in a newspaper about Eagle Brand and decided to try it. She took to it right away and there has been no trouble since. She has 14 teeth, all coming through without difficulty. Her flesh is firm, lovely straight limbs, good bone development and so contented. She won third prize at the Canadian National Exhibition Baby Show last September in Class D, with 102 entrants."

If you are unable to nurse your baby, or he is not gaining as he should, follow the advice of hundreds of thousands of other wise

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE THANKSGIVING SERVICES

Public Thanksgiving Day Services are held in all Christian Science churches in Canada, on Monday, Oct. 10, 1932.

Golden Text: "I will praise the name God with a song, and will magnify him with thanksgiving." (Psalms 69: 30)

Among the Biblical passages comprised in the Lesson-Sermon are the following: "Let the people praise thee, O God, let all the people praise thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase and God, even our own God, shall bless us." "I have showed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said. It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Psalms 67: 5, 6 and Acts 20: 35).

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon are the following citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "In divine Science, man is sustained by God, the divine Principle of being. The earth, at God's command, brings forth food for man's use." "Are we really grateful for the good already received? Then we shall avail ourselves of the blessings we have, and thus be fitted to receive more." "but if the unselfish affections be lacking, and common sense and common humanity are disregarded, what mental quality remains, with which to evoke healing from the outstretched arm of righteousness?" (Pages 530, 3, 365.)

BAREFOOT NATIVES

FAST DISAPPEARING
*Canadian Trade Commissioner Says Japan is Underselling
Canada on B. W. I. Footwear Market*

In Jamaica, B.W.I., the natives are rapidly abandoning the custom of going barefoot. Japan is the country profiting by this change according to F. W. Fraser, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Jamaica. He says Japan has the cheap, less durable footwear that appeals to the natives.

In the general trend of patronage away from the United States, Jamaicans are favoring England and Canada, but Canadians have need to study the native market closely, the commissioner thinks. In a three-month comparison of 1932 with 1931,
Japan almost tripled her limited Jamaica trade, the United Kingdom increased her larger trade by about 10 per cent, the United States lost about half her considerable total and Canada lost about 5 per cent. Fuller figures are given in Mr. Fraser's study, as published by the Canadian Gazette. Most of the products exchanged by Canada and the British West Indies are carried by Canadian National Steamship liners and freighters.

Old Country Gardener Finds Quiet Triumph

R. V. Smith Pursues Successful Career in Horticulture

While in St. Thomas, Ont., recently, the Editor had the pleasure of spending a couple of days with an old employee of The Watchman, Mr. R. C. Symonds, who is now on the staff of the Times-Journal office. During our short stay an added pleasure was ours in meeting another former resident of Lachute, Mr. R. V. Smith, who for a short time was gardener for Mr. E. H. Wilson.

We are always pleased to chronicle the success of those who have come out here from the Old Country and, seizing upon the opportunities this country affords, have made good. Mr. Smith moved to London, Ont., from Lachute, and secured an appointment as guardian of the park of which that city was quite proud. Here Mr. Smith did good work; later he moved to St. Thomas, a few miles distant, and started in business for himself—a business which during the intervening years has grown considerably and he now has upwards of 9,000 superficial feet of glass, all erected and paid for, where he and his good wife supervise the floral culture that has won them such praise.

"Ye Old Gardens" practically swept the board at the exhibition this year the, St. Thomas paper reporting as follows:

By special invitation, Mr. Smith arranged another of his spectacular exhibits which have been the most distinguished feature of the floral hall at the fair for several years. On this occasion he is declared to have surpassed himself with a South American exhibit, four hundred superficial feet square, which is a monument of rare tropical beauty, and took him and his staff a whole day to build up. It represents a forest with three lagoons, and the display includes sugar cane, cotton, sea rice, thorn tomatoes, wild spice, pomegranates, (all grown in St. Thomas), tropical plants, foliage and ferns. There is growing moss around the edge of the lagoons, fallen trees, leaves, bark, flowers growing in wild, profusion over the prostrate trees, just as they might be found in a jungle, realism being added by the presence of two young alligators, and a number of the brilliant morpho butterflies from his superb collection. "It is safe to say that no other man in Canada has the material to present such an exhibit, and Mr. Smith's annual triumph adds to the lustre of St. Thomas as a city of flowers."

In visiting the surrounding country we were agreeably surprised to find there was considerable activity through the counties of Norfolk, Elgin, Oxford and Essex, which territory has been given over largely to the growth of tobacco. It is reported that upwards of 17,000,000 pounds of high-class tobacco is being produced. To-day, centered around Tillsonburg, is one of the richest tobacco areas in the world, in a district which was held as of small agricultural value until somebody discovered its rich possibilities in this direction. Now, notwithstanding the high tariff of 35 cts, the United States are buying this tobacco extensively, and approximately 25 p.c. of their crop will be shipped south this year, as it is considered to be on a parity with the best Virginia leaf.

Morrisburg Leader pays tribute to the late Mrs. Geo. McIntyre as "one of the community's most highly esteemed citizens." Mrs. McIntyre was formerly Georgina Jackson Law, born in Dundee, Scotland, in 1877. She came to Canada in 1903 and in the same year was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. McIntyre in Lachute. The marriage was held at the home of the late John Hope, in whose employ Mr. McIntyre was formerly engaged. Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre have been away from Lachute around 30 years, and during 20 years' residence in Morrisburg have won the heart and respect of that community. Mr. McIntyre receives the sympathy of many friends, in his sudden bereavement.

Shawbridge Farm Boys Quickly Recaptured

The escape of three boys from the Shawbridge Boys' Home was brought to an abrupt end when they were recaptured by two St. Jerome constables after passing the night in the open near the North River.

Their disappearance from the school was discovered shortly afterwards and an alarm was given to the police of St. Jerome.

Their escape was almost marked by a drowning, the youngest of the trio having fallen into the North River, but being taken out by one of the other boys. They finally reached St. Jerome and hid all night in the bush along the river.

They were apprehended next morning and the police escorted them back to Shawbridge.

Electric lighting equipment on the Grenville-Hawkesbury bridge was expected to be completed last week-end; the attractive fixtures will brighten the general appearance of the bridge and afford better illumination at night.

Activities of County Women's Institutes

Chatham Branch, Brownsburg, held an interesting Social evening on September 16th, to introduce the new school teachers to parents of their pupils, at which Mrs. J. D. Davis and Mrs. Kuhring were present.

Frontier Branch held their meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Murdoch this month.

Mr. J. S. Giles of Lachute, gave a very interesting paper on the growth of Canadian Industry. One impressive point in his talk was that the home was the greatest industry of all, because it was in the home that characters were formed. Mrs. Giles read another interesting paper on Immigration, quoting some very beautiful passages from "His Dominion," by Wm. T. Gunn, one of the late moderators of the United Church.

By special request Mr. Giles favored with a song, "Little Mother of Mine," which had a stirring appeal to the hearts of the mothers present, especially to the mothers of sons.

The evening was made still more interesting by the presence of one of the president's sons, who was home from Detroit, with his bride of a few days. Fourteen members were present and a number of visitors, to enjoy this meeting.

Jerusalem-Bethany held their October meeting at the home of

Lord Byng Appointed Field Marshal

Viscount Byng of Vimy, former Governor-General of Canada, who retired as chief of Scotland Yard last year, was promoted this week to the rank of Field Marshal, succeeding the late Viscount Plumer, who died last July.

As Governor-General of the Dominion, it will be recalled Lord Byng, (then Baron) was in Lachute for the ceremony of unveiling the war memorial.

Christian Science Monitor.—

Canada's Parliament prepares to take up the recommendations of the commission that went deeply into its rail situation. Fundamental remedies are called for by the plight of the Canadian National Railway, over-serving, in hard times, a vast, sparsely settled domain. The first step urged by the report is the halting of unprofitable competitive practices. In bad times governments eliminate competition to save the railroads. In good times they enforce it to save the people.

Horse Electrocuted on West End Bridge

In the windstorm of Tuesday morning, a horse was electrocuted by a fallen power-line, while team-mate and driver escaped death by a narrow margin of good fortune. Arthur Mondoux was driving his team across the West End Bridge when one of his horses was killed immediately by contact with a falling wire. The line narrowly missed the driver, and although it was some time before electricians were on the scene and shut off the power, the current did not reach the second horse harnessed in the team.

Fire Prevention Week.—

This being the opportune season to draw public attention to the dangers of fire, Oct. 10-15 is being observed as Fire Prevention Week in the larger centres of population. One cannot do better than to heed the admonition of acting Director Carson of the Montreal Fire Department and "pay special care to the installation and use of heating apparatus, stove pipes, chimneys, fuel and ashes."

Achievements of County Health Unit.

By Dr. E. Lalande, Health Officer

It is the intention of this article to prove the importance of public health to a country at large, to a province, to a large city even to a small municipality. This is a fact which has been amply demonstrated and which is admitted by everybody. The safeguarding of our human stock (capital), which is precisely the reason of a health organization, will result in wealth to the community which avails itself of such an organization. Our country is already provided with its Ministry of Health, whose duty is to take care of health questions interesting the community at large; the provinces of the Dominion also have their systems of prevention against disease, and the large cities are generally well protected against outbreak of epidemics. What about our rural community? Is our rural population not entitled, for the same reasons, to a well organized system of preventive medicine, to the same degree as the urban centres? Evidently. And it is in this spirit, and in order to do justice to our rural community, that our municipal councils did not hesitate in establishing health centres, whose functions would be to protect and promote the health of each and all.

Who Pays for the Health Unit?

The first Health Unit in the province of Quebec was established in the year 1926. Twenty eight of these have been founded since, whose activities extend to over half of the rural population of the Province. As for the county of Argenteuil, let us consider now what services have been rendered by the Health Unit since its establishment; but before going any further, I think it would be of interest to know who are those called upon to contribute toward its upkeep, and what have been the sums of money paid up to date. It is generally accepted that the yearly cost of a Health Unit is $12,000.00. This covers salaries to the Health Officer; the Sanitary Inspector; the visiting nurses; the Secretary; travelling expenses of the staff; serums, vaccines, etc. . . the rent for offices; in other words all expenses incurred by such an organization. For the first year, the County Council and the independent towns of Lachute and Barkmere were called upon to pay one-fifth of this amount, or $2,400.; the balance or $9,600.00 being paid by the Rockefeller Foundation and the Provincial Government. Moreover, of this sum of $2,400.00, the taxpayers of Argenteuil had only to disburse $1680.00, since the Health Unit is paying back yearly $720.00 to the County Council as rent for premises—which incidentally have been put in proper condition for occupancy, at the expense of the Provincial Bureau of Health. The second year, one-fourth of the total cost or $3000.00, was the amount which had to be met by the taxpayers, and if we deduct again $720.00 rent for offices, the total amount paid by the whole county is $2280.00, the balance of the $12,000.00 being paid by the Provincial Bureau of Health.

Let us sum up: During the last two years, our county has spent for its Health Unit $3,960.00. In return for this money the county had advantage of the numerous services rendered by a Health Unit and the appreciable gift of $21,040.00, since, as mentioned above, $12,000.00 a year is the sum required for the operation of a Health Unit.

These considerations of money, although of some importance, do not matter so much when we consider the services rendered to the population in the protection of its health, the health of old and young, the health of mothers, the health of those going to school, as well as of those employed in industries, living in confined atmosphere and constantly exposed to contagious diseases of all kinds.

Mrs. Edgar Strong, with ten members and five visitors present. Roll call was responded to with the name of a Canadian Lake. Two speakers made the evening a very pleasant one. Mrs. J. D. Davis gave an interesting address on Institute work. Mr. Bothwell was equally interesting in speaking on Agriculture. (Continued on Page 4)

In the "General Merchant of Canada" appears the announcement of Mr. A. Habib, Brownsburg, having won a prize for one of the finest window displays advertising Lux Toilet Soap. Mr. Habib is to be congratulated on his progressiveness and upon his success in being one of the prize winning merchants.

Women's Inst. Handicrafts Create Keen Interest

Fine Specimens of Home Industry and Display of Antiques

A successful meeting of the Women's Institute of Argenteuil was held here, when seven of the eight branches of the Women's Institute of Argenteuil were represented at the handicrafts and antique exhibition in the Lachute auditorium on Saturday afternoon last. The Rt. Hon. Sir George and Lady Perley were present and gave brief addresses, in which they spoke of the splendid work being accomplished by the women of the Dominion, and the great influence which they exercised in all branches of social welfare. Lady Perley then opened the handicraft and antique exhibition, which showed a standard of work even higher in grade than that of previous years. The stalls were beautifully arranged and attracted a large and appreciative crowd of people who examined with interest all that was shown. The president, Mrs. Douglas Davis, and the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Kuhring, received many congratulations on the well organized arrangements.

The exhibition consisted of displays shown by every branch with the exception of Lakefield. Those exhibiting were Chatham Mrs. E. Smillie; Frontier, Grenville and Cushing district, Mrs. J. Murdock; Jerusalem and Bethany, Mrs. E. Kettle; Lachute, Mrs. F. Brennan; Morin Heights, Mrs. J. E. Seale; Pioneer, Mrs. J. McKenzie; Upper Lachute, Mrs. J. Gordon. In addition, Vetcraft, of St. Anne de Bellevue, provided a fine show of work by returned soldiers, while a table of antiques, contributed to by each branch, added another interesting touch to the exhibition. During the afternoon, tea was served to the many visitors by members of the institute, and several dances by the Misses Margery and Phyllis Jowitt, of Montreal, brought the proceedings to a close.

Time-Honored Relics Waft Breath of Earlier Century.

The Handicraft Exhibition, apart from its display of wares fabricated by members of the different County W. I. branches or their immediate families, featured a table of antiques which afforded rare interest to the spectators.

Here one found a collection of old pewter plates, brass candlesticks and snuffers, shawls, mats, plates, bed-covers, etc. One ancient, but well-preserved doll, had been in Mrs. J. Seale's family for 170 years. The president exhibited an ancient picture of Montreal. Mr. J. S. Giles kindly contributed a cut-out picture which had withstood the wear and tear of 112 years. The intricate design was cut with a pen-knife out of paper in 1820, by Mr. Giles' uncle, Robert Giles, of Devon, England, and represented mythical marine figures and a mariner's compass.

Robert Giles was one of a seafaring line, the family and antecedents having lived by the sea.

Mrs. A. Graham, of Cushing, had an interesting letter, 100 years old, on exhibition. It had been written by her grandfather, Wm. Walker, of "Glenburnie," to his sweetheart Margaret Fortime, of Scotland.

In this letter he described his trip across the Atlantic on a sailing ship, when almost all of the passengers were taken ill with the smallpox. "But," wrote Mr. Walker, "By the Grace of God we were not ill very long and escaped without a mark." He seemed very much surprised that Quebec authorities would not let them land, although all those freshmarked with smallpox had been taken from the boat and placed in a hospital across the river from Quebec.

They disobeyed orders by changing to the steamer Heracles and landing from her. Once landed they scattered quickly to their different destinations before the Quebec authorities discovered what had happened. Mr. Walker came by boat from Quebec to Montreal in 25 hours; after a day and night in Montreal he went to Lachute, took another boat to Carillon, and from Carillon to Greece's Point, where he and the late Wm. Bookleys, of Carillon, engaged rooms and took up their abode for some time, working in the woods at Chute au Blondeau.

Vankleek Hill Taxi-men Will Not Pay $40.

At a meeting of the Vankleek Hill Town Council last week, it was decided to adjourn decision regarding the levying of an extra $40 license on all taxi operators within the town limits.

This action was the outcome of a petition by eight of the town's operators, who said that the extra levy was an imposition and not conducive to the best interests of the business generally.

A resolution had been passed at the previous Council Meeting recommending that the levy of $40 extra taxation be placed on all operators, the contention being that such a levy, beside benefiting the town financially, would serve to keep unauthorized operators from plying their trade within the town limits. But this resolution created a deal of bad feeling among those who thought that such an imposition was unwarranted, and the Council have seen fit to shelve the whole matter for a year.

Rex Theatre Proprietor Bereaved

The death of Mrs. Fassio in Montreal on Tuesday, Oct. 11th., has been learned with deep regret by her many friends in Lachute and surrounding country, and the sympathy of this community is extended to the sorrowing husband and bereaved family. The deceased lady was 67 years of age and had been married for 46 years.

Mrs. Fassio was best known as the genial proprietress of the "Rex" Theatre, where the kindly smile and friendly word were always extended, not from business viewpoint, but because her nature was inherently kind and friendly. The generous personality reflected in her willingness to co-operate and contribute to every worthy cause in town; the charity performance in aid of our local poor will be recalled as an instance of this unflinching beneficence.

The Rex Theatre has become established as a medium for consistently clean and selected performances under the proprietorship of Mr. and Mrs. Fassio, and the movie-going public will deeply regret the departure of a congenial and familiar figure from the box office.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning (Friday) at 8 o'clock from the son's residence, 5485 Lafond Ave., Montreal, to the Church St. Francois Solano.

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

"OVERCOATS"

Dear Boys:—

Here we are coming to the days when you will have to get out your overcoats and wear them. Now there is something very interesting about an overcoat apart entirely from the fact that it keeps you warm. An overcoat is without doubt an extra garment and because you are not continually wearing it, is always for some reason or other being lost.

There are many kinds of overcoats. Long ones, short ones, new ones, old ones, and a variety of others too numerous to mention. But I have never found a boy who has been pleased to put one on. Why Tom or Dick or whoever he may be so much dislikes his overcoat is one of the mysteries that have never been solved.

I remember once the difficulty there was to take a young friend of mine to the store to provide him with his winter overcoat. He and his mother started out joyfully one morning and arrived at the store without adventure and then things began to happen.

"I want an overcoat for my little boy," said the lady looking at the assistant.

"What size is your little boy?" was the reply.

The lady was surprised at the question and said, "He is here," but he wasn't.

Enough to say that it took the services of at least three members of the store and two hours of their time to find the boy whom they wanted and desired to provide with an overcoat but eventually they found him. He was playing in another department altogether, with a model aeroplane.

Boys use their overcoats for other purposes than that of keeping themselves warm. They have been called into service as carpets, rugs and as chest protectors for small dogs. In fact when you come to think about it, there is no end to the many uses to which this much disliked article can be put to but perhaps it would not be wise for me to suggest them. All the same when the snow is falling and the wind is cold and you have to turn out of your warm home in order to go to school, you will find that the best friend that you can possess, although you may not think so, is your Overcoat.

Don't you agree with me?

Your affectionate friend,

THE CAPTAIN.

Mystery Island

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 21.

After the crash there was a silence and those within the cabin could hear the sound of whispers outside the door as if a consultation of some sort was being held. Then the voices of Pedro, smooth and sinister, said—"It is no good for you to resist, for we mean to have you and if you want to save your lives, you had better unfasten the door and give yourselves up as prisoners. I am captain of this ship now and I am not disposed to be merciful if you give me any trouble. Do you hear me Mr. Sommerville?"

The Commander was about to return a furious reply to this insolent speech when his eye happened to fall on little Babs, and he realized that at all costs he must in some way or other temporize with this villain and his outrageous demands. If, he felt, it was to be a matter of arguing he considered himself to be quite a good master in this art as Pedro himself so he made the reply, trying to hide the indignation in his voice as much as possible.

"We hear Pedro," and his voice was very quiet, "if you think that by gathering together several members of the crew and exciting them to mutiny you can bully us with your threats, you are making a big mistake. We are armed and you are not, also we have plenty of ammunition and if you break down the door with a rush, I shall put a bullet in you with the greatest joy in the world and rob the hangman of his just due. There is still time for you to come to your senses and return to your duty and that I advise you to do at once."

A mocking laugh from Pedro followed these remarks and another voice joined in the discussion.

"It is no good Mister. That sort of talk won't get you anywhere and if you think that you possess the only arms on board this ship, listen to this."

A pistol shot rang out and a bullet crashed through the wood work on the cabin door and imbedded itself in the wall just above Mr. Williams' head, while a thin bluish cloud of smoke floated round the cabin. Babs gave a cry of fear while Jack thinking for a moment that his sister had been hit, sprang to her side.

Another mocking laugh came to them and then Mr. Williams, boiling with indignation, sprang to his feet. "You fools!" he shouted "What do you think is going to happen if you go on like this? Do you think you can sail a ship? Why there is not one of you who can even keep her on her course, let alone set one. And if you don't clear away from this door, we will send a volley through it that will do deadly work."

But passionate as his words were, they had little effect on the mad crowd that seemed determined at all costs to murder them.

Then Pedro spoke again. "I warn all of you in there if you don't surrender at once, I will kill the lot of you and you, Mr. Sommerville, shall stand by and watch what I do to your little girl. But enough of this talk, I give you fifteen minutes to make up your minds and if you don't submit, you will take the consequences."

At the end of this speech there was silence and all within the cabin could hear the sound of retreating footsteps after which the steady tramp backwards and forwards of a sentry outside the door showed that the attackers were not going to be taken unawares.

All this time Jack had been turning rapidly over in his mind various plans by which he could outwit his enemy, each of which he dismissed as apparently hopeless until the sudden idea flashed to his mind. He got up and opened the port-hole very quietly and looked out. It seemed that the fury of the storm had abated and the good ship having driven through it was now sailing steadily on a calmer water and the sky had cleared up.

Lifting himself on to a couch he put his head through the opening, breathing with pleasure the pure air which rushed to meet him. He turned his eyes a little to the right, and gave a sigh of satisfaction as he saw that the porthole of the next cabin had not been closed; and mentally he calculated his chances of getting through it. It seemed a terribly risky business as he would be compelled to cling almost like a fly to the side of the ship and literally crawl towards his objective. So dangerous seemed the task he was about to set himself that it would have been impossible but for the fact that running the whole length of the ship was a protruding ridge which denoted the water line Jack felt that if once he could get his feet on that it would give him a certain amount of support while above each porthole was a frame-work of wood that he would be able to use for support.

Mr. Williams had been watching his movements intently and going over to him, placed his hand on his shoulder. "What's on your mind, my boy?" he asked in a whisper.

"I was thinking Sir," replied our hero, "that it might be possible for me to crawl through the porthole here and in the same way enter the cabin next door. After that I can, if it happens to be empty, find my way down to the engine room and McGowan and I would attack Pedro and his crowd in the rear when they make their rush on you."

Mr. Williams shook his head, "Too risky, my boy! There is only one chance in a hundred that you will be able to manage it and should you slip and fall into the sea, you will be most certainly drowned. And apart from that, we shall need your help here when the attack is made."

Addressing Boy Scouts after an annual Scout marathon not far from his home in Hertfordshire, George Bernard Shaw offered the typical Shavian advice that for future contests the boys should not sleep under skies, nor carry food, but take possession of homes whose owners were absent, and beg their meals. Returning to his own home, Mr. Shaw found on his doorstep a troop of Scouts requesting food, and entering, found several Rover Scouts making themselves comfortable for the night. No one enjoyed the joke better than G. B. S.

FLIES

The house fly is the filthiest of all insects. It will eat half its weight at one feeding in half a minute or less. During the summer one fly and progeny might produce 5 1/2 trillion flies if nature did not interfere. Civilization has nourished this insect. Civilization must eradicate it.

Mosquito eradication has been undertaken by many towns and cities with remarkable results. Mosquitoes have a painful bite—life seems miserable where they are numerous, but they are not half so dangerous to humanity, in this northern climate, as the housefly.

The fly can be the carrier of at least 30 diseases. It contributes to the death of 75,000 persons annually in the United States by spreading disease. The fly's eating habits are filthy and disgusting. In order to soften its food so that it can be swallowed, the fly vomits on it, leaving on unconsumed food dangerous germs.

In the house fly we have a menace to the health of the town. If people's living conditions are improved and their liability to disease reduced they do better work, have more, buy and add to the general prosperity by a higher standard of living and its accruing purchasing power. Do your utmost to kill all flies about your property and save health.

FUNCTIONS AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF ARGENTEUIL COUNTY HEALTH UNIT.

What has the Unit accomplished?

Let us consider how this work of preventive medicine is done, and let us note here that the Unit's work is concerned with prevention only. The functions of a Health Unit consisting of prevention and not treatment of diseases. If it were otherwise, our reasons for existing as such would cease. To accomplish this task we went to the schools first, because we have reason to think that childhood is more easily directed toward matters of health; and we believe that the child of to-day, if healthy, if he has acquired good hygienic habits, will be the healthy man or woman of tomorrow, capable of procreating a generation free from the physical defects and infirmities which are the lot of those who have ignored that An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure.

During the twenty-two months of our activity, one hundred and eighty schools were visited, and 7,149 children examined. We found among these children 22,898 physical defects; 56 of them were crippled, 598 only could be considered as perfectly normal. Our visiting nurses have made 4,903 home visits incidental to the examination of these children, in order to educate the parents in the importance of having these defects corrected. What has been the result? 119 Children have come back to normal weight; 2,185 teeth have been extracted or obdured; 218 tonsils have been taken out or treated; 16 cases of adenoids have been treated; 319 cases of cervical glands have improved or been cured; 195 cases of bad vision have been improved; and 35 other physical defects have been corrected.

Health Unit and the Physicians.

One may have heard that the Health Unit did not meet with the approval of the medical profession. I do not believe it. Were that to be true, I consider it would be an extra feather in our hat. Since the Health Unit is not giving treatment, who, may I ask, could have corrected the defects and given treatment for diseases which we have noted in our examinations of the children, at school or at clinic? The physicians and the dentists; nobody else.

Following these examinations in the schools, the nurses and the Medical Officer have given 236 lectures in Hygiene within reach of the intelligence of their listeners, in order to impress upon these young ones the necessity of health habits which they will continue to practice after they have left school.

Unit's Interest in the Babies.

Babies have always been for us a matter of great concern. For them we have established weekly clinics in two centres of the town of Lachute; semi-monthly clinics in the village of Brownsburg; monthly clinics in other points of the county, such as Grenville, St. Andrews East, Calumet, Weir, Huberdeau, Kilmar, etc., and we have so far held 131 of these clinics and examined 2,059 babies. Moreover, the nurses have visited 3,065 of these little ones in the homes, giving to the mothers their usual advice as to diet and general hygiene.

Contagious Diseases.

I can say without exaggeration that, through this educational campaign, we have saved a considerable number of children, if not from certain death, at least from various diseases which would have rendered them crippled for life. Our health work for the children would have been of no great value if we had not kept in mind that contagious diseases are killing a great number of them each year in our province, and if we had not put into action every means of combating them. Modern science recommends the use of serums and vaccines in the fight against these diseases. Our every-day experience teaches us that the declaration of these diseases, and the isolation of patients is essential if we are to obtain any result. The declaration is made by the practitioner, after which no time is lost in making inquiries, isolating the cases, and in giving to those concerned the necessary advice in bedside care and the protection of contacts. 112 Cases of such diseases have been brought to our attention so far. 97 Epidemiological inquiries have been conducted. 103 Homes have been visited. 879 Contacts have been examined and 185 cases have been isolated or quarantined.

We have in stock at our office a quantity of the serums and vaccines most commonly used. These biological products are given to the physicians upon request and following declaration of their cases. We have in this way distributed to the physicians of our county 1024 virus vaccine points, 148 c.c. of anti-typhoid vaccine, 263,000 units of serum against diphtheria, and 54 doses of serum against scarlet fever. I may say that these products represent a fairly large sum of money. Moreover, we have immunized against diphtheria 2111 children of our county, who can be reasonably sure of never contracting that dreadful

FORD EXHIBITS NEW

Henry Ford, who revolutionized the motor car industry in America, provided the sensation for the opening of France's 26th annual automobile salon by exhibiting a car which he has had built secretly and with which he intends to undersell his European rivals.

The new Ford, of five horsepower, is built on continental lines with a sloping, V-type radiator. It is exhibited in gaudy colors.

ially in the Eastern Townships, in Argenteuil and Pontiac counties.

disease. This is a very interesting piece of work, the value of which cannot be counted in dollars and cents.

We have then turned our attention to another disease—a disease which deserves attention, since it has killed about 8000 Canadian people in 1931. I mean Tuberculosis.

Almost every municipality of the county to date has had two visits by our travelling anti-tuberculosis clinic. A specialist in tuberculosis, equipped with portable X Ray apparatus and assisted by the nurses of the Health Unit, has already held 36 of these clinics and examined 644 persons. I say 644 persons have been examined; this does not necessarily mean that all were tubercular; but they took this opportunity to have their lungs examined, having been in contact with tubercular patients or having some good reason to believe that their lungs were not in the best of condition.

Sanitation.

The account I have given above, of the work of our Health Unit in regard to child and maternal hygiene, contagious diseases, tuberculosis, etc. . . is of some importance I believe, and should enlist the attention and co-operation of our population. This work, however, would be of little value if the sanitary conditions of the county in which it is done, were not properly attended to—if, for instance, the drinking water was polluted; if the milk, which is the basis of the child's diet itself, was not supervised; if our food shops were to offer for sale food products of doubtful origin. This is why a sanitary service is attached to and controlled by every Health Unit. Dr. J. O. Touchette, who has charge of that service for our Unit, has made up to date 2535 sanitary inspections, as follows:

Sanitary Inspections:

The Provincial laboratory located in Montreal is always glad to make, free of charge for the Health Units and the physicians of the county, the different analyses which we may think necessary. In this way we have sent for analysis and report 352 samples of water and 337 samples of milk. Our local physicians have availed themselves of that service and a great number of analyses of all sorts have been made by this Department.

Conclusion

In conclusion may I be permitted to add that, in order to perform the work I have just mentioned, the Health Officer has to travel 12431 miles by automobile and 2890 by railroad; the Nurses 11434 by automobile and 2912 by railroad; the Sanitary Inspector 8077 by automobile and 2912 by railroad.

At this stage it would only be right to mention the work which is being done at the office. The Secretary, who has charge of the office, must see to the classification of the documents, letters, reports, forms, etc. . . and must be able to answer promptly to the requests of the staff and the rate-payers. She attends to the correspondence in general, and pays special attention to reports submitted to her, which have to be transmitted to Quebec. And one of her most important duties is the compilation, correction, and transcription of statistical returns of births, marriages, deaths,—which are sent to our office every month by the registrars of the different religious denominations.

Our Health Unit is yet at its beginning. I think, however, it has already rendered valuable services to the population under its charge, and that it will be called upon in the future to give greater and better service if possible. This, at least, is the sincere wish of its staff.

DISCOURAGE PEDDLERS

House to house peddlers and solicitors of orders for this and that, are becoming an ever greater nuisance to the American home, as any housewife might truthfully testify says the Herald of Sauk Center, Minnesota. Still the housewife whose home is constantly invaded by these itinerant super-salesmen has the remedy in her own hands. A timely suggestion along this line is made by Prof. Conrad, of the New Jersey Teachers College, who points out that the peddler who boasts that his firm has no store is trying to make a store out of your home. You are expected to furnish a place where he may do business free from the expenses which other merchants must pay. Besides, he insists on making you shop at his convenience, no matter how much it may interfere with your daily routine. He takes up your time arguing you into buying something that in most cases you neither want nor need. Sometimes you buy to get rid of him, when you ought to say: "This is a home, not a place of business, and I am not going to allow you to use it as a store. Good day." That might seem rather inconsiderate. But it is one way of discouraging the peddler, who has not the slightest consideration for your peace and comfort, but uses your home as a market place, in unfair competition with home merchants who pay rent, taxes, license fees, and in other ways contribute to the welfare of the community.

In his letter he begs Miss Fortime to come over with his parents to be mistress of his lonely home, but the grim reaper, Death, had taken his toll and his sweetheart had passed beyond reach of his pleading, so that the letter came back to Canada, and was found amongst the papers at his death.

Among other things he tells Miss Fortime to advise his mother to bring with her on the ship a barrel-churn, which they were to fill with clean water for their own use on the journey over, as the water on the boat was all measured out to them daily; and he also added some castor oil and a box of Anderson's pills! Quoting men's wages in dollars and cents, he wrote "Men's wages from $6. to $10. a month and women's wages from $2. to $4. per month." Even though we have a Depression, we are still a few laps ahead in the matter of wages compared to those of 100 years ago.

ture. The Handicraft convenor gave her report of meeting on Sept. 12, and the disposal of a quilt in aid of the Institute was arranged for.

erale activity through the counties of Norfolk, Elgin, Oxford and Essex, which territory has been given over largely to the growth of tobacco. It is reported that upwards of 17,000,000 pounds of high-class tobacco is being produced. To-day, centered around Tillsonburg, is one of the richest tobacco areas in the world, in a district which was held as of small agricultural value until somebody discovered its rich possibilities in this direction. Now, notwithstanding the high tariff of 35cts, the United States are buying tobacco extensively, and approximately 25 p.c. of their crop will be shipped south this year, as it is considered to be on a parity with the best Virginia leaf.

In the Niagara Peninsula, farmers have been growing grapes for a long time but it is only lately we learn that the business has taken on important commercial proportions. A recent issue of the St. Catharines Standard reports 12,500 acres of vines, "which at two tons or higher to the acre, and grapes being sold at the wineries for $40.00 a ton, means a substantial gross revenue." There are 51 wineries in the St. Catharines area, and the Ontario Liquor Control Board is being given credit for the price this season of $40.00, as against $19.00 realized in the general market.

In consequence, this section of Ontario is reaping a good harvest, for which it has reason to be thankful.

KEEPING WELL PEOPLE WELL

As one reads the history of the earlier years of the English industrial era, there is left on the mind the imprint of a story of human misery.

These years of affliction were followed by a period of reform. There was born in the land a spirit which demanded action in regard to the improvement of working and living conditions. To-day we stand with certain definite accomplishments in the field of prevention.

We have seen typhoid fever practically vanish when water and milk supplies are properly safeguarded. Summer diarrhoea in infants is practically eliminated as a cause of death following the education of mothers and the provision of a safe milk supply. Education and Institutional cares has lowered the death rate from Tuberculosis. We have the means both to prevent and cure diphtheria and smallpox is unknown in vaccinated areas.

Organized public health has had to develop rapidly in order that the people might receive the greatest benefit from the newer knowledge of disease prevention. There must be no relaxation in any phase of the work in hand or there will be a slipping backward.

The practical elimination of certain diseases and the great reduction in the occurrence of others, have meant a great accomplishment in the effort to keep well people well.

In the field of health education, the Public Health Nurse has been, and still is, the all-important factor. She is a health teacher whether in the home, the school or the health centre.

Health is a condition of well being that allows for the best physical, mental and spiritual attainments.

As Canadians we are alive to the need of a sturdy, healthy population. We must consider health in a national way, and devise means for seeing that all Canadians have the benefit of scientific knowledge which, if properly applied, would make all the years of life, years of health and efficiency.

The above article was written by Mrs. A. L. Chamberlain, Provincial Convenor in Child Welfare and Public Health, Foster, Que.

KIDDIES WELCOME NEWS ABOLITION OF HOMEWORK IN ONT. PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Abolition of all public school homework up to the senior fourth or entrance classes, is reported to be the aim of the Ontario Department of Education, the Toronto Globe says. Only a limited amount of homework is to be provided for students of senior fourth or higher standing the newspaper says, adding action will be taken in the near future.

Officials of the department are convinced that 90 per cent. of all homework is dishonest, in that it is not done by the pupils for whom it is set but by their parents or older brothers and sisters, the newspaper adds.

50 Years Ago

Friday, Oct. 13, 1882.

Opening of the 25-foot channel in the St. Lawrence was celebrated by an excursion to Quebec in the steamship Peruvian, which draws a depth of 25 feet.

A number of men leaving here for Messrs. Campbell, Campbell & McKenzie's shanty on the N. River, were arrested in St. Jerome, for creating a disturbance.

Death. At Chatham, on Oct. 9, 1882, John McKimmie, aged 85 years 4 days.

The means for crossing the River Thames at London are still insufficient, and the Board of Works is considering three schemes for a passage below London Bridge—a subway, high level, and a low-level bridge.

TO GAIN WEIGHT

Sometimes it would seem as if the whole world were trying to reduce; then by way of a change, we come across several who are trying to gain weight. So, to-day, we will talk about the gainers.

Those who are trying to gain are apt to be of two classes—those who are habitually underweight, partly by reason of their temperament; and the other kind, who are underweight as a result of illness.

All persons require a certain number of calories each day to maintain their weight without gain or loss. This is called a maintenance diet. If you eat more than you require, the extra is put by as fat; if you do not eat enough, the fat stored in your body is drawn on and you lose weight. If you wish to gain, you must eat more than is required to fill your needs for the day.

Do not make the mistake of trying to gain by forced feeding nor by eating rich foods high in calories. This will defeat its own ends. As a rule, there is little appetite and the appetite should be stimulated, but not by drugs. Increased consumption of vitamin B and C will do it. That is eat plenty of fruits and vegetables, both raw and cooked, whole grain cereals, leafy vegetables and milk. These will in time create a natural appetite.

Increase the quantity of simple foods which are fattening but not to the point of forcing. An extra slice of bread and butter at each meal of the day will help considerably. I know one woman who gained eight pounds in a month by that simple method. She was eating just her maintenance diet, that is her weight was not varying at all and the extra slice, generously buttered was all that was required.

Breakfast is a good place to increase the calories. Start the meal with fruit juice or fresh fruit. Tomato juice may be used, but as we are trying to increase the vitamin supply, it may be better to use orange juice or to eat grape fruit and serve tomato juice at another meal of the day. A whole grain cereal should be taken. Use cream with it, if possible, as cream is high in calories. Bacon makes a good breakfast to gain on, and eggs may be substituted sometimes, as they are high in minerals and vitamins, too. Finish the breakfast with something sweet. Jam, jelly, marmalade, syrup, and honey all are about 100 calories to the tablespoon. Cocoa makes a good breakfast drink for anyone trying to gain, as it has the added calories of the cocoa and sugar. Dinner can be the usual meat, potatoes, vegetables and dessert meal. If you are trying to gain try to eat just a little more of everything. Eat the fat of the meat and have two helpings of dessert. There should be something fresh included at this meal such as tomato juice, a salad sliced tomatoes, celery, cress, or raw cabbage.

You do not need a special diet on which to gain. Eat what the family are eating but eat a little more. Add an extra slice of cheese and have the second piece of cake. If you deliberately eat more, even if you are not very keen about it, you will stretch your stomach, in a short time, so that you will want more to fill it and will unconsciously eat until you are comfortably full.

Milk is one of the best of foods on which to gain, if it is taken at the right time, but you will never gain on it, if it is taken as part of your meal. Eat all you can and then drink your milk, to fill up the corners. It is not a drink but a food and if it is taken through the meal it will fill up the tummy and there will be neither room nor desire for more food. So eat all that you can and then drink your milk. But be sure and drink it. A little bit of cream added to it will help on the good work.

It is better to give five smaller meals than to eat forced feeding at three. Have a little snack either morning or afternoon and going to bed. Milk and buttered crackers or graham crackers is a good choice. If it is found that the milk is spoiling the appetite for the next meal, use fruit juice instead.

Use less energy by resting more. But have your breakfast at the proper time even if you have it in bed as if you do not it disrupts the rest of the meals and there is no appetite. Do not rest to such an extent that you do not exercise. We need to exercise to get an appetite. Rest in the middle of the day and go to bed early. It is not difficult to gain if you go at it intelligently and really try.

PROBLEMS OF THE MODERN HOME

Joshua 24:14, 15; Mark 10:2-12; Ephesians 6:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. Joshua 24:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Pleasing God in My Home.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Rules to Live By at Home.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—My Home Problems.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Problems of the Modern Home.

I. A United Home to Serve the Lord (Josh. 24:14, 15).

Joshua had succeeded Moses as Israel's leader. He was conscious of his being taken away soon in death from the people (Josh. 23:1), and of their liability to lapse into idolatry. He reviewed before them the history of God's goodness to them, and appealed to them for a rational consideration of their responsibility, and the exercise of sober judgment (v. 14). He wanted their choices of God as over against the false gods to be a balanced judgment. He followed this appeal with his own example (v. 15). He told them that his mind was already made up. He associated his household with himself. His decision was not a hasty one. It had been talked over at home, therefore, he uttered the united sentiment of his family.

II. The Father and Mother in the Home (Mark 10:2-12).

God constituted the race male and female. His purpose was that they should be united for life in holy wedlock, with love as the bond of union between them.

1. Marriage should not be degraded by divorce (vv. 2-5). God ordained the marriage relation, and intended it to be indissoluble. God, through Moses, suffered, limited, and regulated divorce, because of the hardness of the hearts of the people.

2. Marriage is God's primal law (vv. 6-8). The ideal law of life for the subjects of Christ's kingdom is marriage. This is proven by the fundamental fact of sex. "God made them male and female" (v. 6).

3. Marriage has God's sanction (v. 9). God declared to Adam that man should leave father and mother and cleave unto his wife.

4. Marriage of the divorcer forbidden (vv. 4-12). The marriage relation should be broken only by death, or by sin. The party responsible for divorce, who marries again, is guilty of adultery.

III. Members of the Household (Eph. 6:1-9).

In the home are found father, mother, children, and sometimes servants. Each member has rights and privileges which must be respected.

a. Children (vv. 1-3).

1. They should obey their parents (v. 1). The ground for this obedience is the fact that the parents stand in the place of God with the children.

2. The children should honor their parents (v. 2). Obedience to parents is limited to the period of immaturity. When children take their place in the establishing of new units in society, they are no longer under obligation to obey their parents. Honor means to have in reverence.

3. Parents (v. 4). Doubtless the word "fathers" is intended to be inclusive of the mothers.

a. Provoke not your children to wrath. Parents should not irritate or aggravate their children.

b. To bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Nurture doubtless means to educate, and admonition to discipline.

3. Servants and masters (vv. 5-9).

a. Servants are to obey their masters (vv. 5-8). This obedience should be (1) Servants should have proper respect for their masters, and an earnest desire to please them. (2) Servants should perform their tasks as though they were doing them for Christ's sake. (3) The servant's aim should not be merely to please the eyes of the master, but to render honest and acceptable service. (4) With good will. It should not be primarily for approval or pay. Christian servants will perform their duties to their masters with the same fidelity as they would unto Christ. (5) Rewarded by the Lord (v. 8). The Lord takes account of our service in the common ways of life, and will some day reward us accordingly.

b. Masters to be considerate (v. 9). Just as servants are to give whole-hearted consideration for their masters, so masters are to look after the best interests of their servants.

Go With God

God is always ready to go before us. Indeed, we never can go anywhere victoriously unless he does lead us. To go without him into any of life's experience—struggles, dangers, or duties—is to fail.

Reveals Character

Did we get everything we craved for in the hour of asking it, I think it would be a long farewell to manhood. Work reveals character, but so does waiting.—George H. Morrison.

2 cups pastry flour Baking Powder (or 1½ cups 2 tablespoons bread flour) shortening
¾ cup milk, or half milk and half water

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in the chilled shortening. Now add the chilled liquid to make soft dough. Toss dough onto a floured board and do not handle more than is necessary. ## "For Light, Flaky Biscuits use Magic Baking Powder," says Miss M. McFarlane, dietitian of

St. Michael's Hospital,
Toronto

"I RECOMMEND Magic because I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients."

Miss McFarlane's opinion is based on a thorough knowledge of food chemistry, and on close study of food effects upon the body. On practical cooking experience, too.

Most dietitians in public institutions, like Miss McFarlane, use Magic exclusively. Because it is always uniform, dependable, and gives consistently better baking results.

And Magic is the favorite of Canadian housewives. It outsells all other baking powders combined.

You'll find Magic makes all your baked foods unusually light and tender... and gives you the same perfect results every time.

CHAPTER X—Alan is thrilled to see Joyce again, but she is cool toward him. Continuing the fight, Alan locates the bandit tent on an island. He leaves Bill in charge of the one bandit found there, and he and Bursard fly back to the Alooska to try to head off the other bandits. But they have made their raid, killing old Dad Pence, her sole defender, and with Joyce their prisoner are on their way back to the rendezvous.

From room to room—Joyce's room, her father's, the kitchen, the trading hall, the ground outside—Alan went carefully, noting signs, reading the story of what had happened.

Nothing about the post was disturbed. There were no signs of a struggle or flight. Joyce's light rifle still hung on a peg in her room. Its barrel inside was clean and shiny; the weapon had not been fired. Joyce must have been surprised and overpowered without a chance to fight back.

At the clearing edge Alan found a trampled spot in a thicket where two men had lain and watched. Kneeling down, examining the broken twigs, the wilted leaves, the crushed nettles, he read that all this had happened three hours ago and that the criminals were thirty of forty miles up the spruce-buried Alooska, with Joyce their prisoner.

About the whole post there was only one telltale sign of something dark and sinister. In their hurry to get away, the bandits had overlooked that sign. Beside a stump in the sunlit clearing, Alan picked up old Pence's story-stick. Once or twice he had wondered what they had done with that old white-haired walt. They would not burden themselves with him, nor would they turn him free, to report and bring the police hot on their trail. How had they dealt with old Pence?

As he picked up the stick, he saw a brownish-red stain on one end of it, a crimson splash already turning dark; and a few hoary-white hairs clinging to the wood. And this story-stick which old Pence had been whitening at, carving clumsy bas-relief scenes from his own life—scenes of mining camps, of the fur-path and lonely gold trails, of dog teams and packhorses, of broad-shouldered men bent under heavy portage loads and of women with a crude beauty of face and figure.

this story-stick of his life, from its rounded handle to its tapering end, was completed now.

CHAPTER XI

How to Damn an Enemy

A Takudah brought word to En-lurance of a strange happening at En-traverse lake. He had been fishing here at an inlet for barbuttes, he said—half-asleep that morning, with the fish line tied around his big toe. A thundering sound in the sky had roused him; and looking up, he had beheld a fearful thing come out of the southern horizon and roar out over the lake.

The sight of it, said John Afrad-of-is-Squaw, had nearly tumbled him from his boat. It had lit down on the water, he said, near Goose point. And behold, a few minutes later it rose and started across the lake for the south shore. He had watched it no longer, but scurried to the bank and crawled in among some rocks; for the dreadful thing might have been hungry and questing for food.

Frank Pedneault listened very thoughtfully to the Indian's story, and then began drawing some conclusions of his own. To him this Indian's shiny monster was a possible key to many puzzles. To the best of his recollection he had never yet seen Alan Baker throw down a job merely because it was tough. And he knew that Baker had been heart and soul determined to wipe out that first stinging defeat and save Joyce MacMillan's dad. Bill had intimated that Alan had gone after those bandits; without violating his oath of secrecy, he had dropped a few broad hints to that effect.

Pedneault drew a conclusion: "Alan went out and got himself a flying machine to hunt them men out of the Thal-Azzer or make that Inconnu trip. He and Bill arranged to meet somewhere. He picked Bill up and now they're over there together on the roughest trick in a coon's age!"

As he stood in the barracks door gazing wistfully across the Mackenzie to the distant hills, he felt all deserted by his comrades. "And they left me out in the cold. Didn't tell me one d-d thing about it. To b— with 'em both! But Lord! I wish—on a trick like that—oh Lord, I wish—"

Not absolutely sure of its conclusions, he started out along the grassy terrace toward Mrs. Drummond's flower garden where Elizabeth Spaulding was reading. He was pondering. In vague outline, a trick of his own. It was a serious matter, and he wanted to be certain of his guess before he cut loose with a scheme like that. Elizabeth no doubt knew all about Alan's plans, since she was waiting here for him to return and marry her.

Elizabeth did know the story. Haskell had let her know. Not daring to go to her himself, he had employed Whipple to casually tell her that Baker had stolen valuable government property at Edmonton, had broken several flying regulations, and was certain of arrest and imprisonment the hour he showed up in civilization. No longer a policeman, and having no authorization of any sort, Baker might even be charged with second-degree murder if he killed any of those bandits.

The news affected Elizabeth very little. Superintendent Williamson and Colonel Steele were both good friends of Alan's and both had power in high places. If his venture should be successful, they no doubt could get him clear. There is a lot of virtue, she reflected, in success.

When Pedneault came across and began asking roundabout questions concerning Alan and his venture, Elizabeth told him what she knew. She knew that Pedneault would repeat her words to Alan, if he got the chance; and Alan would thus hear from another person of her steadfast loyalty to him.

Very thoughtful, when he found out his guess had been correct, Pedneault walked back across the terrace to the mission hospital where Larry Younge was propped up in a chair beside a window. For twenty minutes, leaning over the sill, Pedneault conferred with Larry in low tones.

From there, he went over to Haskell's cabin.

Haskell was shaving. He turned around and snapped:

"Well, what is it?"
"Sir, a met called Adolphe brought word of trouble down river in an Indian camp. The Snokies, several families of 'em, have got hold of some 'permit,' and they're quarrelling, fighting. I could handle it myself. I've straightened out messes like that. I could be there and back in the launch by mid-afternoon, with your permission."

"You can't go. I need the launch myself in a little while."

Pedneault cleared his throat nervously. "Sir, I know it's not my place to say a thing like this, but—just a mere suggestion, sir—Superintendent Williamson is coming here on the next down-boat, probably tomorrow evening; and he's always very vexed about Indians killing each other in drunken brawls. He's always pleased when we nail a camp like that, sir."

It was a consummate stroke, his reference to Williamson. Larry Younge had prompted him to that.

Haskell took thought. If he sent a man and smoothed out this Indian trouble, it would look very well in a report. It would be a positive action, an achievement. He said: "All right. Go down and reduce them to order. But be back here in three hours. I want that launch."

Pedneault was already on his way up to barracks for rifle, belt-gun and keys from Whipple. Down at the wharf, he hurriedly tanked up on gas and put in a big drum extra. Jumping in, slipping into the wheel seat, he stuck a pipe between his teeth, jammed his hat low over his eyes, yanked the starter chain and swung out upon the broad river.

A little puzzled by these preparations and all this haste, Haskell stepped outside his cabin. As he stood there, watching Pedneault's demolition driving, watching the scarlet-and-gold launch vanish in its own spray down the Mackenzie, he heard a feeble shout up the terrace behind him; and he turned and looked at the hospital.

At that moment Larry Younge, leaning forward in his padded chair, was shaking a fist out the window and emitting a weak—

"Yee-ow! Three whoops for Ped!"

It was Haskell's intention, as soon as Pedneault came back with the launch, to take Whipple and make a trip up the Big Alooska. Baker would probably use the MacMillan trading post as a maneuvering base against the bandits. By muffling the motor over the last few miles the launch could slip up quietly. They would not be expecting him to strike a second blow; they likely would be up at the trading store; and at best it would take them ten full minutes to rise out of the narrow cramped river.

But as he sat there in his cabin, planning this blow, Haskell doubted if he was to succeed. A kind of fatalism had laid hold of him. In his first with Baker he had been successful in the main, but what did all his triumph mean, when he had lost Elizabeth Spaulding? His victory had been a barren one. He saw that she was going to marry Alan Baker. In these last weeks the prophetic knowledge of that marriage had been a waking nightmare. Day by day it was marching closer and he was powerless to halt it.

When four hours passed and Pedneault failed to return with the launch, Haskell began to get suspicious. Five hours, six—and Pedneault still absent. Haskell finally went across to the hospital and demanded of Larry Younge: "What were you and Pedneault talking about before he came to my cabin?"

Larry never smiled. "I don't exactly mind, but I think we were talking about the weather. Ped said he hoped it ain't going to rain any more."

Haskell snarled: "You're laughing in my face. You hatched some devilry with him." He threatened viciously: "I'll fix you, constable. You're to be invalided out of service. I've got something to say about the terms. When you're hobbling around, trying to live on a few dollars a month, you won't be quite so d-d chipper!"

In a seething fury he turned away. Pedneault had tricked him, stolen the launch, and joined Baker's venture!

Unable now to go up the Alooska and smash that plane, he found outlet for his bitterness in avenging plans, vengeance against Alan Baker and those men. At Williamson's coming visit he could deal them some terrible blows. His enemies had played into his very hands. Baker had bought out under suspicious circumstances, had made a criminal of himself, had taken the law into his own hands and turned justice to private ends. Pedneault had given a false report and absconded with police property. Bill Hardsock had stolen supplies and subverted them to his own uses, had gone a. w. o. l., had aided in a criminal enterprise, and to crown it all, had deserted.

Knowing Williamson's foibles pretty well, Haskell foresaw the superintendent's anger when he learned those blunt facts. They violated every tenet in the stern old officer's code, for he was a stickler for discipline. He would soak Hardsock and Pedneault to the limit. He would turn thumbs down on any leniency toward Baker. The ex-sergeant would be branded with disgrace, if he escaped the pen. And if he did get those bandits, he had awaiting him the news that Trader MacMillan, whose innocence he had championed, for whose sake he had done all this and whose vindication had been his great purpose—that Dave MacMillan, broken by shame and bitterness, was lying dead, a suicide, at Resolution.

Haskell saw that his only real difficulty lay in overcoming Williamson's earlier prejudice and winning his personal liking. That called for shrewd psychology, but on that point he knew he could make Alan Baker look like a stammering farm boy.

The next evening, when Williamson arrived, Haskell first of all took him on an inspection tour of the post. Finished with that, they stopped and talked together on the slope, a little distance from the barracks. A respectful distance behind them Corporal Whipple waited, note paper in hand, ready to scrape and salute if they glanced his way or asked for any figures.

Haskell was elated, he was secretly exultant, at his success so far in "working" his superior officer. Williamson was openly pleased with the inspection. Barracks, cabins, dog teams, canoes, guns—everything was in capital shape.

This auspicious beginning was all well enough, Haskell felt, but his trouble with Baker was the all-crucial thing. It was going to make or break him. The whole outcome depended on Williamson; depended on whether the division commander would believe his story or Baker's. As yet he did not know what Williamson thought. The superintendent had heard a few of the bare facts on his way down the Mackenzie, but he had left headquarters before Baker's buying-out papers had reached there for his signature.

Haskell decided that the old officer had been favorably prepared for the story now; and he led into it gradually, shrewdly. Starting with the Midnight Sun robbery, he gave a detailed account of this last month, down to the hour when Pedneault stole the launch and joined Baker's venture.

"What hurts me the worst, sir," he added, with a consummate show of real sorrow, "is the refusal of these men to co-operate with me or let me help them. Maybe I'm at fault; I don't know. But by way of example, sir, if Corporal Hardsock had told me about needing gas and oil, he could have had every drop at the post. But he wouldn't tell me; he st— I mean, he took it. An Indian brought me word about him waiting at En Traverser lake for Baker. I figured Baker might need extra supplies or help, so with Whipple I went down there right away. We tried desperately to get in connection with Baker. Even shot signals for him to wait. But he scorned our offer."

"When I got back here," Haskell went on, "I planned to go up the Alooska and take him supplies. I wanted to put everything I had at his disposal. He's the best man-hunter in the country, and I felt he would get those criminals if anybody could. I didn't give a d-d— if you'll pardon me, sir—about him being so hostile to me personally. ## Delegation to Montreal Discusses Division of Chatham Municipality

Old Contention Aired Before Deputy Minister Morrin

Taxpayers of Chatham Township to the number of 115 formed a delegation to Montreal on Tuesday to interview Oscar Morrin, provincial Deputy-Minister of Municipal Affairs. The gathering assembled in the city's Court House, bent on settling the question of proposed separation of the front from the rear ranges in Chatham. Seventy-five citizens appeared in opposition to this change, with Mr. Albini Lamarche, township secretary-treasurer, speaking on their behalf; forty gentlemen appeared to support the division with Mr. Gaetan Valois as spokesman.

Not Question of Waterworks.

The Provincial Board of Health has requested the Administration of Brownsburg to lay waterworks and sewerage in the interests of sanitation in their community. The urge for the division of the municipality, coming directly after the Board's recommendation, does not however bear direct relation to the waterworks question. It is understood the cost and maintenance of Brownsburg waterworks would rest wholly with the inhabitants of the village, a recent resolution having passed the council to that effect. The system would be paid for by the immediate consumers, as in the case of electric lighting.

It may be noted, however, the present maximum of consumers in Brownsburg is only a possible 388 families, so that, from present estimates, a waterworks scheme would appear quite beyond the town's resources—in spite of the Board of Health's recommendations.

Suggestions Not New

The plea for separation of the municipality's six front ranges, is a revival of the petition advanced some six years ago. It is sponsored by taxpayers in what is known as the "front", who consider their interests are somewhat distinct from those of Brownsburg, and also maintain they are not fairly represented in council. As it is, the administration consists of two Brownsburg aldermen, Messrs. O. Legault and W. McGibbon; the Mayor, Jno. Dixon, resident of Dalesville; and Aldermen Burke, Lemay, Rochon, Clarke, respectively of Centreville, Staynerville, Chatboro, and Ogdensburg.

Matter is Regarded Unfavorably

The deputy minister, six years ago, discouraged the move to effect a division. On Tuesday, he again expressed his forceful disfavor toward the change.

He reminded the taxpayers their township was in a happier financial position than any among Quebec's 3,000 municipalities. With a valuation of two million dollars, they were free of debt and taxed at the exceedingly low rate of 4 mills. Any split in the corporation, Mr. Morrin contended, would be as disastrous as the slaughter of the fabled Goose with the Golden Eggs.

He drew attention to the added expense of administration which would be incurred, and strongly urged a reconciliation between the factions. He further suggested a plan by which the front ranges might be more adequately represented in council.

Referendum to be Called

It is finally decided the question of division in Chatham Municipality shall be submitted to public vote. A referendum will doubtless be decided upon at the next meeting of the council, Nov. 7th. It is understood the existing corporation would stand to lose a revenue of from $3,000 to $4,000 annually by the suggested division.

Granby Board of Trade to Help Farmers

Following the example of Boards of Trade in Montreal and other places, Granby Board of Trade at a luncheon and meeting on Tuesday discussed particularly such plans and suggestions as might help to increase consumption of local farm products. This departure in the efforts of trade and commerce organizations should do much to benefit the towns and the respective territories in which they are centered.

Does it Pay?

Many of our merchants still question whether it Pays to Advertise! To settle their doubts we may quote the experience of one of our advertisers, who has no reason to regret his small outlay toward Better Business.

A lady entered this merchant's store, produced his advt. cut out from The Watchman, and ordered "All of Them." All of them—happened to include a dozen or so of grocery lines which he had advertised as specials for that week. She also made further purchases to the amount of $2.00.

The same enterprising merchant informs us a number of our back-country readers enter his store and call for Specials advertised one, two, or three weeks previously.

Rolland Legault, 15, Victim of Hunting Accident

Rolland Legault, aged 15, son of Mons. and Mde. Simeon Legault, was accidentally shot in the leg last Monday in a hunting accident at Dunany, and has been removed to hospital in Montreal for treatment.

Legault was at W. Cottingham's camp, about one mile back from the main road, together with three other lads, including Albert Paquin.

Legault and Paquin were together when the mishap occurred, the latter demonstrating to his friend the function of the safety catch on his 30 Winchester rifle. He pulled the trigger when young Legault happened to be in line with the barrel, and the catch being improperly set, the bullet exploded and entered Legault's thigh, emerging from the leg without injury to the bone—as it was later learned.

Paquin, who is 18 years of age, made his way to the highway in order to telephone for assistance. Here he met Will Lefebvre driving by from Lachute. Together they went back to the woods and carried Legault out to the road. Medical aid was soon rendered, and the lad was taken home, being ordered to hospital on the following evening for closer attention.

Early Morning Freight Wrecked West of Lachute

Twelve Cattle Cars Derailed, Animals Perish, in C.P.R. Accident.

The Canadian Pacific track, at a point running through waste lands on the Paul and Bradford farms between Lachute and Staynerville, presented a scene of mud, blood, and wholesale slaughter, on Sunday morning, as workers disentangled the mass of debris in a wreck which occurred to the east bound freight in darkness of the early hours.

Around 3 a.m. the freight was approaching Lachute with cattle cars and box-cars loaded with paper. At a weak spot in the track, where the locomotive and the five leading cars had passed safely, the rail gave way and twelve loaded cattle cars ran amok, plunging into the fence, and several were overturned.

Two wrecking trains were called to the scene, and as the mishap became known and crowds gathered on Sunday morning,

Hawkesbury Men Lucky in Sweepstake Draw

Two Hawkesbury men are thanking whatever fates there be, for the good fortune which induced them to purchase a ticket in the Irish Hospital Sweepstake for the Ceasarewich Handicap, which was run off on Oct. 12th.

This year, two of the one hundred pound consolation prizes went to Hawkesbury, Thos. Middleton and John Knox being the lucky pair who will draw down approximately $500 each. According to the Hawkesbury Echo, "as both of these gentlemen can be said to have passed the age when the acquisition of sudden wealth might mean a spending orgy, the sweepstake money will come in mighty handy to them."

U. S. Fears Big Drop, Result of Empire Pacts

Reduction of About $75,000,000 Predicted As Experts Study Treaties

Washington, October 13.—United States exports to Canada may be reduced by about $75,000,000 under their normal level as a result of the higher tariffs on non-British products made effective in that country today, assuming that Empire exporters can take full advantage of the increased preferences accorded them and that domestic producers will be unable to overcome the handicap by lowering production costs and other means.

This was the conclusion reached in Washington following a partial analysis of information from the American Legation at Ottawa, setting forth the commodities affected by the agreements reached between United Kingdom and Canada at the recent Imperial Economic Conference.

Autos Collide in Fog

A heavy mist Sunday night rendered the highways dangerous for driving and inconvenienced week-enders returning to the city. Many stopped over till the following morning.

One accident is reported, due directly to the inclement weather, when two cars collided between Brownsburg and Dalesville. The cars were proceeding in opposite directions, one driven by a Mr. Champagne, resident of this district, and the other by a Mr. Jones, of Montreal. The machines "side-swiped" and both took the ditch. One of the drivers was scratched about the face.

Deacon's Garage took charge of the local car, towing it to Brownsburg, while a service truck was called to remove the other to Montreal.

Fans Enthusiastic as District Hockey League Takes Shape

Larger Ice, Interesting Schedule Planned for Lachute

On the information of M. Navion, who will again manage the local hockey team, it is learned there will be a district league and an interesting schedule of hockey fixtures this season. The league will be of intermediate standing, affiliated with the Q.A.H.A., and will include teams from Hawkesbury, Lucerne, Ste. Therese, St. Jerome and Lachute respectively.

Mr. Jos. Raymond, proprietor of the L.A.A.A. Rink, has agreed to extend the ice, giving an increase of 25 feet in length. It is promised the local club will be thoroughly organized and well handled, so that enthusiasts will suffer no disappointment in the team, nor in the season's program of matches. In this regard, spectators at the rink this year may expect "double header" events, with two contests staged in the same evenings.

Concerning a purely local league, it is speculated there will be arrangements between neighboring teams as last year, in competition for a cup or similar trophy. It is not yet announced whether Brownsburg will participate, or even whether that community will organize a team under the same management as last winter.

Further arrangements will be decided by the Lachute club at a meeting next Tuesday night. Until the line-up is definitely announced, several old favorites have been named as probable players on the Lachute team; these include Cousineau, Cruise, O. Tessier, A. Mirron, Jones and W. Drew among the forwards; Raymond and Giroux, of St. Andrews, Geo. Lefebvre and Lafleur, of Lachute, in defence (Giroux well remembered for his sprightly play last season; Lafleur a newcomer to local hockey, but known around for a skill with watch springs and recalcitrant alarm clocks.) Patry will likely tend goal for Lachute; and the home town will enter the league contests with a hand-picked team.

Shrewsbury Orangemen Entertain

Shrewsbury L.O.L., No. 716, were hosts last Saturday evening to the neighboring lodges of Lachute and Louisa. The Orange degree was conferred upon a new member Leslie Kerr, son of Mr. A. O. Kerr, Lakefield, and inspiring speeches were given by various members of the order present. A pleasant hour was spent around the festive board, and it was announced the Lodge at Louisa would be "at home" on the following Saturday, when an interesting session is expected.

Auto Club Still Urging Enforcement of Lights

The Royal Automobile Club of Canada will ask the Government again to pass a law making it compulsory for all vehicles using the public highways to carry a light at night, and continue their campaign until it meets with success. The club has received a report from a motorist, who drove from Three Rivers to Montreal on the evening of Thanksgiving Day, who counted 41 horse-drawn vehicles on the highways minus a light of any kind, and not one with a light.

At the same time the Royal Automobile Club urges all automobile owners to make sure that their tail and head-lamps are in working order. The danger at this time of the year is particularly great as fog, drizzling rain and early darkness make driving more hazardous than at any other period.

LACHUTE BOY SCOUT NEWS

The 1st. Lachute Troop has resumed its activities with eight new boys, and has taken up its new quarters in the Lachute High School.

The regular weekly meeting was held on Wednesday, October 19th. During the evening instruction was given in the Tenderfoot Tests and Signalling. Later several interesting games were played.

Two of the new boys, Arthur Ashworth and Harold Deacon, passed their Tenderfoot Test, after having been in the troop for only a short time.

The Court of Honour held a short session after the regular meeting was dismissed.

Plowing Match Draws Interest

The Farmers' Club of Gore, held their annual plowing match on Oct. 19th., at A. Kyle's farm, Long Lake, where great interest and keen competition was noted in the contests. Several plowmen took active part who had never before entered for competition of this kind, the number of entries being the largest ever booked in the history of the club.

Mr. Jas. Hay, Lachute, judged the plowing on its various classes of merit, awarding the following standings, for which prizes will be distributed at the next meeting of the club.

Class 1.—Advanced Plowmen: 1st. Austin Kyle; 2nd., Albert Tomalty; 3rd., A. O. Kerr; 4th., Allan Scott; 5th., Wilbur Sherritt; 6th., John Smith.

Class 2, New Plowmen: 1st., Wm. Wood; 2nd., Victor Morrow.

Class 3, Boys under 21 years: 1st., Charles Napp. Best outfit, horses, harness, etc.: 1st., Victor Morrow; 2nd., A. Kyle.

Best Crown, Austin Kyle. Best Finish, Austin Kyle. Best Ins and Outs, Wilbur Sherritt.

Best Crown, Wm. Todd. Best Finish, Wm. Todd. Best Ins and Outs, Victor Morrow.

It is said that the man who squeezes a dollar never squeezes his wife. In looking over our subscription list, it is evident to us that many of the good ladies in this community are not receiving the attention they deserve. (—Exchange.)

ing havoc might have been more serious, but it is fortunate neither engine nor caboose were derailed, and none of the train crew was injured. The livestock was in transit from Shawville, Wakefield and Chrysler, Ont., billed for Montreal.

No blame is attached for the accident, which was investigated and found to be due to a flaw in the rails.

ESSEX COACH TOPPLES INTO GULLY

A tricky spot in Lachute Rd. familiar to local users, proved the Waterloo of two men motor-ing merrily last Saturday night from Lachute to St. Andrews, where they were said to be visiting. The particular section of highway is near the Jas. McKenzie farm house, where the road takes a twist and a dip, crossing a gully. The driver in question took both the twist and the dip rather precariously, and the car, an Essex Coach, broke through the fence, toppling into the gully. Neither the driver nor his companion appeared any the worse for their fall, despite the fact their car was badly battered. Lalonde Garage, of St. Andrews East, despatched a truck to the scene and removed the remnants.

An Appeal for Tin-foil Collectors

Through the columns of The Watchman, a number of appeals have been made for the collection of Silver paper, Tinfoil, Lead from tea packages, etc., all of which is sent in to the Shriners' Hospital, Montreal. It is then melted down, and the metal thus obtained is fashioned into designs and moulds, such as door stops, book-ends, ash-trays, etc. These in turn are sold, and the money thus derived is used in connection with the Hospital.

This is really a splendid institution, equipped with all the latest needs of medical science, but the wonderful part is that it is non-sectarian, and no matter who the child is, whether black or white, Catholic or Protestant, he or she is given the best of attention.

Since collecting, we have received quite an amount, which is baled and ready for shipment. There is still room however for more. Shipment will be made on Tuesday, October 25th., so look over your cupboards and see what you can find; then parcel it up and send over to The Watchman Office, Foundry St., Lachute.

Every little helps, and your little bit may be the means of giving endless joy to some poor heart who is now crippled.

U. S. Faction Opposes Waterway Scheme

New York Shippers Conference Adopts Resolution

The shippers' conference of Greater New York adopted a report last week disapproving of the proposed St. Lawrence-Great Lakes deep waterway on the ground that it would be "economically unsound and of questionable value."

The report said the waterway which has reached the treaty stage between Canada and the United States, would "further deplete the earnings of the railroads without providing an economically sound substitute."

George Hainsworth, popular goal-keeper for the Canadiens hockey team, was in town on Sunday with Mr. Hoffman, Montreal's leading movie operator, visiting Mr. Jean Fassio, of the Rex Theatre.

THE CAPTAIN'S CORNER

"NO SMOKE WITHOUT FIRE"

Dear Boys:—

Have you ever heard the expression No smoke without fire? If you have, you will understand that whenever you see a little smoke rising up from somewhere, you may safely say that at some time or other there has been a fire.

Now I am wondering which you like best, smoke or fire? Which do you think is the most useful? I remember hearing a little chap once express himself very strongly about smoke. He had been watching a bonfire and the wind had driven a large quantity of dark black smoke right into his face. "Nasty, horrid stuff!" he exclaimed rubbing his eyes, "I can't see any use for it at all." He did not know what it was purely owing to smoke that many lives were saved in the last war. Swift war vessels often used smoke from their funnels, to throw what was called a screen around them, and by so doing prevented the enemy from finding them as a target for their guns.

Of fire it can be said, "It's either very good or very bad." When it gets out of control it can burn down our homes, destroy our forests, and kill many people. But on the other hand fire gives us warmth and comfort, heat and power, so that without it we should have to go without many necessities that we require from day to day.

There can be no Smoke without Fire. This means that smoke is a result of fire and people naturally connect one with the other. The same principle points to other things. There can be no success without work; there can be no holiday joys without school labour; there can be no sunshine without shadows.

Think this out for yourselves, and try to remember what I have written here if at any time you should hear the expression, no smoke with fire.

Your affectionate friend,

Mystery Island

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

CHAPTER 22.

Jack smiled, "I am sure that I can do it, Sir, and when these fellows find that they have to fight two parties instead of one, it is a sure thing they will lose heart and give up."

The chief turned toward his Commander, and still speaking very softly, explained to him what Jack thought of doing. At first Captain Pat refused point blank so risky an experiment, but the boy was so persistent in his belief that it could be done and the situation was so desperate that at last he gave his consent. Having made up his mind he acted quickly.

"All right, Jack, I agree. But you must have a rope round you, the end of which we can hold here, so that if your foot does slip when outside, we can prevent you from falling into the sea. You can easily unfasten it when you are in the other cabin."

Preparations were quickly made, and thinking quickly Jack stooped down and removed his boots and socks, convinced that he could obtain a better hold in his bare feet. When everything was completed he climbed through the porthole and began his perilous experiment. Clinging with his hands to the framework above his head he felt for the ledge with his feet, wondering if his legs would be long enough, which fortunately they were. Very cautiously he then began to push himself along the side of the ship, praying that no one from the deck would take it into his head to glance down the side. It was a slow and laborious piece of work, and there were moments when he thought he would have to give up and allow himself to be dragged back to the cabin. His feet and hands began to give him intolerable pains, while the motions of the ship, because of his position, caused him to experience an intense feeling of sickness in his stomach. However, he bravely persisted, until at last his efforts were rewarded by finding himself leaning up against the other porthole.

Exerting himself to the utmost, he crawled through, but he was so overcome by exhaustion that for a moment or two he could only lay panting on the floor and rubbing his hands together to restore his circulation. He did not even think of the danger of his position, or that at any moment some one might come in and find him there. Indeed, he was fortunate in finding the place unoccupied, for had it been otherwise his enterprise would probably be rewarded with a crack on his head. In a moment he had recovered sufficiently to realize all this, and creeping towards the door, which was closed, opened it gently. He saw at once that the corridor was deserted, and thinking that there was no time like the present and that he had better be going while the going was good, he darted out and swiftly made his way to the engine room.

Not for nothing had he spent many hours in exploring every part of the ship, and the knowledge he had gained by so doing proved helpful to him now. Also the darkness of the night favoured his enterprise and it would have taken a keen pair of eyes to see the slim, boyish figure move so mysteriously in the shadows.

There was one light burning in the engine room, but it was enough to illuminate the iron stairway that led down to the boiler-room, where the boy knew he would find his friend.

Now there was no necessity for him to move quietly, for the noise of the engines would drown any that he was likely to make himself.

"McGowen," he whispered, "are you there?"

In reply, the form of the chief engineer seemed to rise almost at his shoulder. "And what may you be wanting?" came the question in a gruff voice.

Poor Jack was bewildered, and hardly knew how to give such urgent and desperate news.

"Listen," he said eagerly, "we are attacked and the Captain, Mr. Williams, as well as some of the crew, are besieged in the cabin. I have escaped in order to get your help in making an attack on them from behind. Do you think we can manage it?"

McGowen gave a chuckle as a dim idea of the plan began to formulate in his mind. "Of course we can. While they are busy trying to break down the door and get at the Captain and the rest of them, we are to do just a little bit of fighting on our own account. And if they are very much surprised, I don't know what I'm talking about."

"Good," responded Jack, with a sigh of relief; but he added fearfully, "We only have a few minutes to make plans. You see they only gave us fifteen minutes, and they must be nearly up now."

His companion stretched out a grimy, oily hand and patted his shoulder. "Laddie, we will be in plenty of time. They cannot do the job without making a noise, and that will be our signal."

Jack then realized for the first time that his throat and mouth were parched and dry. "You haven't any water, have you? I am as thirsty as can be."

"Then you have come to the right place, my boy. Who ever heard of an engine room without a good supply of water. Here, help yourself." He handed Jack across a pan of clear, cold liquid.

Very gratefully Jack drank, and then throwing back his shoulders, said with a sigh, "Now I feel fit for anything."

He looked up at the chief engineer, who had taken out a revolver and was stroking it gently. He was about to speak again when suddenly a shot rang out, followed by a cry of pain and fury.

20,000 Danes Greet Scout Courier.

A novel cross-country event which attracted much public attention in Denmark was the carrying by Scout messengers from the northern-most point of Jutland 500 kilometres to Copenhagen of a kudu camp horn, the gift of Lord Baden-Powell to the Danish Scout Association. The arrival of the horn was witnessed by 20,000 spectators. One courier crossed an arm of the sea by sail boat, and another piloted an airplane. Danish papers published photographs of the progress of the horn across the country.

A truck was hired to take these to the camp—the work was apportioned day by day. All report a wonderful holiday. Mrs. Frank Underwood of Culross, will supply further information to anyone interested.

FIRE AT HAWKESBURY GIVES FIREMEN BATTLE

$6,000 Damage in Three-Hour Blaze

Fire which broke out about three o'clock on Saturday morning in Hawkesbury damaged a brick building occupied partly as a cafe and owned by Mr. J. F. Millette. The blaze spread to a wooden structure occupied by Mr. Gregoire Rochon. The local firemen were given a stiff three-hour struggle to battle the flames. The fire, it seems, started in the rear of the floor occupied by the cafe and was noticed by one of Mr. Millette's children, who awoke and saw smoke. Fortunately both families were able to save the greater part of their belongings but the damage to Mr. Millette's property is very severe, being about $5,000 as practically only the walls remain. His loss is partly covered by insurance. The loss to the property occupied by Mr. Rochon will run near the thousand dollar mark.

Read in this issue "The Passionate Violinist," a story of love, music and adventure.

Barron's Bridge is being repaired; while holes in the roadway of same bridge are such that an accident may any day bring suit for damages upon the parish. Such is the way of public affairs when a community is not incorporated.

Mr. A. G. McArthur has had his house painted by Mr. Samuel Cleland. Mr. Alex. Riddell has also had his residence painted, by the same artist.

Work has stopped temporarily on the St. Andrews Branch Railroad.

Messrs. McOuat & McRae have recently added bolt cutting and planing machines, also a lathe, to their well equipped machine shop.

Our esteemed townsman, Mr. John Hope, Baker & Confectioner had his shop and stock destroyed by fire on Thursday night. The contents of the shop, valued at between $300 & $600, were not insured.

Laurels, pansies, elderberry blossoms and lilies-of-the-valley will be much used for dress garniture this season. Flowers are banished from millinery and feathers take their places. Five long-stemmed roses are the most favored for corsage bouquet. The drapery of latest walking skirts consists of the flowing folds and puffs, which fall from the belt to the foot of the skirt.

Tourist Fares Slash Cruise Rates

Captain E. Griffiths and his ship the "Empress of Australia."

If transportation was sold like merchandise, a recent announcement by the Canadian Pacific Steamships would have read something like this: "The Holy Land, Egypt, and the glory that was Greece for less than $4.50 a day!" But it isn't done that way so winter holiday makers learned of the latest thing in cruise fares in more modest fashion.

The latest thing in cruise fares is the institution of Tourist Class on the Mediterranean Cruise by the Empress of Australia; and for a minimum of $300 a 69-day cruise that calls at 25 ports is now available.

Palestine, the Nile, Cairo and the Pyramids, Rhodes—site of the famous Colossus—Barcelona, Casablanca, Gibraltar and Funchal, Madeira, where Mrs. Christopher Columbus was born, are high lights of the cruise which leaves New York January 31st.

Tourist accommodation in the magnificent 22,000-ton Empress of Australia is famous for its comfort as thousands of students, teachers, and professors who have crossed the Atlantic in the speedy vessel know. Divided by the 69 days of the cruise, which allows a stopover in England and return Tourist Class by any Canadian Pacific liner—even the Blue Rib-bon holding Empress of Britain—works out at a daily cost of a little less than $4.35.

It is believed that the new rate will introduce the joys of winter cruising in sunny southern latitudes to many who have not been able to enjoy such a holiday before.

THE CITY OF TOMORROW

Beauty Lies in Order

In a city there should be two kinds of Order. There is the important and practical Order which comes from a proper street plan and from general tidiness. The necessity for the other kind of Order is not so practical. It is very difficult to convince people that it is important in City Planning to pay much attention to this kind of order, for nearly everybody thinks that it is a matter of taste. As a matter of fact this is a mistaken attitude. This other kind of Order is that which comes from having a single style of Architecture throughout the city and is of the greatest importance if the city is to have any real beauty and repose. Different styles of Architecture have different characteristics. Such things as doors, windows, chimneys and roofs in one style are usually quite out of harmony with those of another style. The result is DISORDER AND DISORDER MEANS UGLINESS.

North Side of Sherbrooke Street Between Guy and Peel

Think of the amazing collection of buildings in this section of Montreal. A heavy American apartment-house of the Taft era, a "modernized Gothic" church, "pseudo-Gothic" church, a "neo-class Greek Ionic" Museum, a North French Renaissance (Francois Ier) apartment-Italian Romanesque church, a modernized early French Renaissance (Francois Ier) apartment-house, a modern New York brick Romanesque apartment-house, a McKim, Mead and White classic revival club, to name the more outstanding buildings. All this in six blocks. You get the idea of confusion even if you are not interested in the architectural terms. The mere fact that it is necessary to talk about "pseudo-gothic" and "neo-classic" at all shows us one of the grave faults of present-day Architecture. The idea that one should sit down and choose a "style" for a building, would perplex and amuse any one of another age. An 18th Century man, for instance would never dream of building in any other manner than that which he had developed for himself and which perfectly and beautifully met all the requirements of his life. Styles change, of course, but they should change surely and gradually as man's habits of life change, they should not be dictated by whim. One does not build a ship or a motor car or an aeroplane in any particular "style." One builds, for instance, the best automobile one knows how, as efficiently and as strongly as possible and one gives it beauty by making certain harmonies between the parts, taking care that features introduced for the sake of beauty do not affect the efficiency. If buildings were designed in this spirit we would have in a few years a fine modern style, perfectly suited to our habits and style of life.

We are learning to do this more and more whenever it is a question of machinery. We invent machines to do certain special jobs and if these machines are designed scientifically they naturally take new and strange forms. We very soon get used to these forms—the aeroplane is only about fifteen years old—and recognize their beauty. We never think of designing a yacht in the "Chinese Junk" style or an automobile in the form of a stage coach. Why, then, a Gothic church or a Queen Anne house? People took refuge in historical styles during the last century at a period when they were afraid of machines. We now understand them, we glory in their use for they tend to make life easier for us. This typewriter I am using is saving me a lot of trouble, it has a form which has never been seen in the world before and yet is "swell" looking and, frankly, I get a great "kick" out of it. What building in Montreal will thrill you as Sir Malcolm Campbell's "Blue-bird" does? But Architecture is supposed to be a practical art. Let us then adopt the same attitude in designing houses as we do in designing machines. A house is a machine for living in—a machine designed for beauty as well as use.

GOVERNMENT ACCEPTING PAYMENT IN KIND

The Government of Saskatchewan has worked out a plan to allow the farmers to pay their debts in wheat. Until November it will be accepted on the basis of 70 cents per bushel. That will apply to dealings which farmers have had with the government in the way of relief and advances for seed grain, etc. Details are not given in full, but with the exception of binder twine the farmer can pay his obligations to the government with his wheat. Relief, as we have come to understand the word, is something which is not repaid by the person who receives it. If it has to be paid back it is not relief in this sense; it is a loan. The Saskatchewan idea is sensible. The farmers cannot pay their debts in the form of taxes and loans in cash because they have no cash. Wheat to them is the one medium of exchange, and it is reasonable to accept it at a fair price, even if that price is in advance of that paid on the open market.

UNITED STATES AND THE ST. LAWRENCE

It is anticipated the St. Lawrence Waterways treaty will not come up for debate in the U. S. Senate before next March. Lord Bessborough's Speech from the Throne at our federal Parliament opening, called upon the House to approve the treaty as soon as the United States had ratified it . . .

It is assumed the States are solidly in favor of the scheme; but it is worthy of note, there is quite a strong element of opposition from across the border. Only last week at a conference of New York shipping interests, a resolution was adopted against the development, as "economically unsound and of questionable value." It is interesting to read further comment on the subject by the New York Times, which says:

The waterway plan is certain to meet with vigorous opposition, especially from commercial interests along the Atlantic seaboard. The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York long opposed to the canalization of the St. Lawrence, adopted a report last week reviewing the old familiar arguments against the venture: great expense, slow speed, short season, fogs and ice foreign ports, the exigencies of war, and so on. But the real significance of the report lies in its emphasis on recent adverse developments: the drop in the cost of steam-generated power which has made hydro-electric enterprise less advantageous, the sufficiency of existing plants to meet all local post-depression industrial needs for years to come, increasing doubts as to the benefit of the canal to the American wheat-grower and as to the wisdom of adding to the present difficulties of the railroads. They are suffering not from a glut of traffic, as in war days, but from a dearth induced not alone by the depression, which may be transitory, but by growing competition from other means of transportation, which may in part at least be permanent." These are American viewpoints.

THE HONOURABLE BANANA

On being asked to write an essay on the Banana, a Japanese schoolboy produced the following gem:—

"The banana are great remarkable fruit. He are constructed on the same architectural style as the honourable sausage; difference being in skin of sausage are habitually consumed while it are not advisable to eat wrapping of banana. Perhaps are also interesting the following differences between the two objects: Banana are held aloft while consuming, while sausage are usually left in reclining position. Banana are first green in culler, then gradual turn yellowish. Sausage

DEMOCRACY IN THE WORLD CRISIS.
Hon. Albert C. Ritchie

If we could all once get our feet on the ground, see things whole and recover our morale this crisis would be over the sooner.

We may also take some comfort from the fact that never before in history has its best intelligence been so mobilized and concentrated on trying to find out what is wrong and what to do.

Someone has said that the optimist in politics is likely to be inconstant and even dangerous because he does not take into account the great difficulties presented by his projects.

The essence of democracy is peace; good-will, understanding, faith, and the ability of group to co-operate with group. Are not these after all the very qualities which a sound democracy should strive to translate into a sound foreign policy?

National boundaries and economic boundaries no longer seem to have much relation to each other. Economic mistakes are not confined to the country making them. They are costly everywhere.

In an economic sense, self-help is coming to mean mutual help. World crises are arising in which we must co-operate with other nations, either for our own welfare or because of the responsibility which our leadership in the world places on us.

With human nature as it is, it may be too much to expect the world to beat its swords into plowshares and its spears into pruning hooks; but if history has taught us anything, it is the absurdity and futility of war.

Militarism and democracy can never trot together in the same harness, for they are the negation of each other.

In order to make that good-will and co-operation which are implicit in democracy function in this world crisis, a better understanding between nations is perhaps the first step.

It may be that the greatest service democracy could do for the world is to settle permanently the status of international obligations and the assessments of the victors on the vanquished.

If the American taxpayer should feel that to forego the debts and assume them himself would cure the ills of the world and would also promote his own ultimate welfare. I believe he would make even that present sacrifice cheerfully; but the added burden would be so great that he should not be asked to do this on altruistic grounds alone.

Perhaps a good deal of our demoralization is due to fear that this world crisis has put democracy to a test it cannot meet, and that instead of the war making the world safe for democracy it has done quite the opposite.

We have seen great changes; still greater ones will follow. Old values are being revalued; old ideals giving place to new. Man has developed a knowledge and technique by which he can shape and control and multiply his own energies and those of nature, and make or mar his institution and his destiny. Democracy is not a creed but a mode of organized life. Democracy is better fitted to meet this law of life than any social-political device the world has so far been able to discover or evolve.

The World War resulted from the fallacious application of group dictatorship and the ignoring of the common man, and the Treaty of Versailles, in spite of all the fine idealism of Woodrow Wilson, became the product of this same undemocratic grouping fortified by the spirit of war and prejudice.

Democracy is the one method by which an international public opinion can be created and made effective.

For spiritually and idealistically, and even politically, democracy envisages itself as a social order in which men co-operate or associate upon an equal basis of common humanity.

start out with indefinite culler (remble-terra-cotta) and retain same hue indefinitely. Sausage depend for creation upon human being or stuffing machine, while banana are pristine product of honourable mother nature. Both article resemble the other in that neither have pit or colonel of any kind. In case of sausage, both conclusions are attached to other sausages; honourable banana on the opposite hand are joined to one end of stem while other termination are entirely loose. And finally, banana are strictly member of vegetable species, while origin of sausage are often undecided."

He might have added that the banana is a valuable addition to any meal, and that by buying bananas in Canada one encourages Empire Trade, for the chief source of our banana supply is the British West Indies which in turn are rapidly becoming very good customers of ours. —(C. I. L. Contact.)

New Method of Cleaning Drains.

A drain cleaning method, which is not, so far as is known, found in textbooks, was described in a recent issue of New Zealand Board & Council. It explained that, as the farmer who invented the method had not patented it, the journal felt at liberty to disclose the scheme to its readers. At the heads of his drains this farmer, who lived in South Wairarapa Valley, had vertical 9 in. pipes connected with the drain, the top of a 9 in. pipe at ground level thus acting as a manhole. A big, lively eel was caught, and a strong cord was tied to his tail. It was started down the drain from the manhole, and if it showed any inclination to stop a sharp jerk on the cord started it off again. The eel's passage through the pipe stirred up the mud, and the water following did the rest.

The World's Largest City.

Year by year London, England, spreads out. This expansion is particularly marked in Middlesex. In the past ten years the population of the administrative County of Middlesex—all of which lies within Greater London—has grown by 387,726, and now it numbers 1,638,728. This is shown by the decennial census of Middlesex

Trees or Speed?

The question whether a row of fine trees is worth more than a wide, straight automobile highway is one that comes up frequently in this motorized age, comments the Victoria Times. Unfortunately, it usually gets decided in favor of the highway. One of the trunk highways in the middle west has proved a bit narrow for the volume of traffic it has to carry. It can be widened very quickly except for one stretch of about four miles. There it passes through a village, and on each side it is flanked by a row of enormous maples and elms. Highway engineers insist that the trees must come down so that the road can be widened; village residents are out to defend their trees to the end. We hope the villagers win. What if the stream of traffic does have to move slowly for a few miles?

Of Doubtful Efficiency.

The County Council of Victoria and Haliburton published the names of all those receiving the old age pension, the list appearing in the Lindsay paper, giving the amount each receives. The council took this way of dealing with the matter in an effort to find whether any are drawing the pension who are not entitled thereto. While it may be true that some have got on to the pension list who do not really need it, the publication of the list will have the effect of humiliating many who actually have no other means of support, and deterring some from making application although they are in real need. This is a case in which the remedy applied is really worse than the disease.

Referendum on Tax Exemption

The question of Tax Exemption to the Empire Clothing Company, proposing to establish a factory in St. Hyacinthe, Que., is to be referred to a civic vote in that town. The council, presided over by Mayor T. D. Bouchard, decided to submit for referendum a by-law by which the company would receive a 75 per cent tax exemption, in return constructing a $10,000 building to employ at least 50 workers.

Quebec Towns favor Scheme

Returns from 15 towns and municipalities in Quebec Province indicate that 500 families will be taken care of by them in connection with the back-to-the-land scheme, and if Montreal accepts the plan in its entirety this number will be swelled to the provincial quota of 1,000.

It would be an enlightening experience to drive one day as a perfect stranger into one's own home town. ( . . . an adventure, of course, beyond the realm of possibility, unless one cares to inebriate oneself against recognition of his surroundings!) But we have often thought it must be confusing to tourists driving into Lachute, who must find the correct outlet in order to follow the one of many highways for their destination. The difficulty applies to many other towns; in our own case, it is more confusing to motorists driving through from east to west. Two large sign boards just erected across Barron's Bridge will tend to obviate these difficulties. Indicating distances to points on both the Hull and the St. Jovite highways, they will prove very convenient to the passing traveller.

HERE AND THERE

New Brunswick is to stage the North American Cover Dog International Trials as an annual sporting event. Success of two days' trial concluded at Petersburg recently, has brought about formation of a permanent dog fanciers and owners association which has fixed dates for 1933.

Photographs of Bangkok's shrines, temples, statues, and other places of interest in Siam taken during world cruises by Canadian Pacific liners, are being taken to Bangkok for King Prajadhipok by the Siamese Consul-General in Canada, who sailed for the Far East on the Empress of Asia recently.

Hon. Herbert M. Marler, Canadian Minister to Japan, left for Tokyo recently aboard the Empress of Asia after a two-month vacation in Canada, strong in the belief that the Dominion is on the threshold of great trade developments in the East. With 500 million people in Japan and China, the possibilities, said the Minister, are incalculable.

China is on the eve of an era of tremendous development in railway expansion, engineering works and general trade, in the opinion of Major W. S. Nathan, chairman of the Pekin syndicate, who recently sailed on the Empress of Japan from Shanghai to Victoria en route for England. Rationalization and expansion of China's railways would be the first step in this expansion, he stated.

Three months in the unexplored regions of the Fairweather Range in Alaska, with mountain climbing, airplane explorations, and ski-ing, was the unusual summer holiday of a party of Harvard undergraduates, headed by H. Bradford Washburn, Jr., president of the Harvard Mountaineering Club, who returned on Canadian Pacific "Imperial" train to his Alma Mater recently. "We had bad luck with weather and snow," said Mr. Washburn, but otherwise the party is bringing back some very interesting moving pictures of their experiences. (873)

GUARD THE VITAMINS

The fact that vitamins are more or less unstable compounds and may lose their potency if the foods which contain them, are improperly handled, makes it necessary to study the subject to enable us to prevent this destruction.

There are today, at least, six kinds of vitamins and each is not only different in function, but different in its response to food handling.

I shall here, deal with only two vitamins, A and C, as these are the ones that are of special interest at this season. Vitamin A helps resist infections, C are concerned. It is poor get our vitamins A and C in plant foods, from structures such as leaves, fruits, and young roots and seeds. As the plants age, the vitamins tend to be less potent. Green peas and young carrots are richer in these factors than mature peas and old carrots. Youth and succulence are, therefore, guides to Vitamin A and C richness.

In cooking A and C sources we should try to avoid mixing them with air, which permits active oxidation. For this reason, the pressure-cooker is less destructive than open-kettle cooking. It is also a reason against the use of soda in vegetables, for in an alkaline medium, oxidation proceeds rapidly.

The need of preventing oxidation, if Vitamin C content was to be preserved, became of practical interest to the manufacturers of the now widely-used tomato juice. In pulping and sieving these products, with their subsequent sterilization, it was found that the Vitamin C content was markedly reduced unless special measures were taken to avoid mixing with air during the pulping process. These measures cannot be duplicated with home equipment, so we shall have to be content with cold-pack canning of whole tomatoes, straining only at the time we wish to serve the juice. While cold-pack tomatoes are practically identical, in Vitamin potency, with the raw tomatoes from which they were made, open-kettle tomatoes have lost much of their antiscorbutic potency.

In commercial canning the conservation of Vitamin C is due largely to the fact that all products are sterilized in the cans, away from the air. The cold-pack method of canning in the home brings identical results.

It is evident that oxidation and over cooking should be avoided as far as vitamins A and C are concerned. It is poor economy to buy vitamins and then destroy them in cooking. The subject merits the housewife's attention.

TELLING FATHER

One of the meanest things I know of is for a mother to hold the father of a family as a disciplinary body. They will say "if you do that I will tell your father when he comes home." Why doesn't she look after her own disciplining problems? Fathers deserve to be loved and if they are held as an object of fear, it is not as easy to love them.

One woman was telling about her small son and saying that he had done such and so and she had told the child she was going to tell his father when he came home. Apparently she felt guilty because she said that but that the child took advantage of her. Which of course was not the child's fault, but a lack of firmness on the part of the mother.

The average mother is inclined to be a bit easy with her children, and they will try to take advantage of her. Mine do, I know, at times and I know, too, that at times they get away with it. But I am certain that I never yet have said "I will tell your father when he gets home". That is not fair.

WOOLWORTH BRIDGE

Last year a small Bridge Club decided to economize on their prizes, times being what they were. They limited the price to fifteen cents and called them Woolworth prizes, although they could buy them any place they liked. These prizes were a huge success as every woman tried to outdo the others in the ingenuity of their prizes. They got a real kick out of it and had more fun than they ever had out of their expensive prizes. Each felt that her shopping ability was at stake. Any time they left town they would scour the new stores to find something different for their prizes, and at home or abroad they were always on the lookout for something suitable. The idea has much to commend it.

A DIET FOR CONSTIPATION

A request has come in to outline a day's meals to help in overcoming constipation. We must try to include large quantities of bulky and coarse grained foods. Breakfast should start with tomato, orange juice, or grape-fruit. There should be a wholegrained cereal either cooked or one of the prepared ones. Whole wheat cracked or crushed or however you may buy it in your local stores makes a delicious cooked cereal.

We do not wish to use too much harsh food so it is a good plan to cook a good bit of the fruits and vegetables. This does not mean not to use raw fruit and vegetables, but to use both and to make the diet a little more bland by softening some of the cellulose by cooking. Have a liberal helping of cooked fruit. Apple sauce or baked apples are a good choice. Baked pears are a pleasant change when in season. Prunes, cooked figs, rhubarb, in fact any fruit available may be used. If cream is added to the fruit it acts as a lubricant. Often increasing the amount of butter is quite a help, but if the patient is over weight one cannot increase the fats.

Whole wheat bread should be eaten at this meal as indeed every meal. Bacon, eggs or anything of this type may be taken if desired, but the raw and cooked fruit, the whole grain cereal and the whole wheat should all be used.

Dinner should have a liberal helping of at least one cooked vegetable other than potatoes—two are better. A salad should be eaten if possible. Any dessert that is desired may be used but a fruit pudding is an excellent choice.

Supper should include vegetables such as scalloped tomatoes or corn; spinach with cheese or eggs, vegetable soups; cream soups with the vegetables left in; creamed celery and cheese. Whole wheat bread, or graham or bran muffins should be a part of the meal. Then fruit, either cooked or raw. Raw fruit may be eaten during the day at any time desired.

BROWN BREAD

One cup white flour, 1 cup Graham flour, 1 cup of Roman meal 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 cup of raisins or chopped dates 3/4 cup molasses, about 2 1/4 cups sour milk.

Sift the first five ingredients and add raisins. Stir in molasses and sour milk. Bake for an hour at 350 degrees.

BAKED BEAN SOUP

2 1/4 cups canned baked beans, 2 slices onion, 2 tablespoons of chili sauce, 1/4 teaspoon powdered mustard, 4 cups water.

Combine all the ingredients and bring to a boil and simmer for 20 minutes. Rub through a sieve and add 1 additional tablespoon chili sauce. Heat and serve.

JOHNNIE CAKE

One cup cornmeal, 1 cup white flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1/4 cup white sugar, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup sweet milk.

Beat the egg and add the sugar and melted butter. Add milk and sifted dry ingredients. Bake for 20 minutes at 400 degrees.

CHRISTIAN-SCIENCE

"Probation after Death" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches, Sunday, October 23.

Golden Text: "Behold, now is the day of salvation." (II Corinthians 6: 2).

Among the Scriptural selections comprised in the Lesson-Sermon are the following: "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." (I Corinthians 15: 19 and Revelation 2: 11).

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon are the following citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Baker Eddy: "Either here or hereafter, suffering or Science must destroy all illusions regarding life and mind, and regenerate material sense and self." "Universal salvation rests on progression and probation, and is unattainable without them." (Pages 296 and 291.)

THE CHRISTIAN AND LAW OBSERVANCE

(World's Temperance Sunday)

Romans 13:1-7; I Corinthians 2:19-27; Galatians 6:1-10; I Peter 2:11-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be not deceived: God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. Galatians 6: 7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Laws for Me to Keep.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why We Have Laws.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Observing the Law for the Sake of Ourselves.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Church and Law Observance.

I. The Christian Obligation to the State (Romans 13:1-7).

The believer is a citizen as well as a Christian. The instructed Christian will be loyal to the state as well as to the church.

1. Obedience to rulers (v. 1-4). This obligation is upon all Christians. The civil government is ordained of God and rulers are his representatives.

2. The spirit in which the Christian renders obedience to rulers (v. 5). He should regard it as his obligation, not only because it serves a good purpose but because it is morally right.

3. Method of expressing this obedience (v. 6, 7).

a. In payment of taxes. The citizen who enjoys its benefits is morally bound to support the government.

b. Payment of duty upon merchandise, and license fees. The business exchange between nations must be regulated, and for this the citizen should pay.

c. Veneration to magistrates, "fear to whom fear." Those who have the fear of God in their hearts will venerate their rulers and representatives.

d. "Honor to whom honor" is due. Civil officers should be honored because of the ministry they perform.

II. The Christian's Self-Control (I Cor. 9:19-27).

The true way to get people to be free from Intemperance is to help them gain self-control.

1. Paul's own life and example (vv. 19-23). Though free from all men, he made himself servant unto all.

2. The Isthmian games (vv. 24-27). Paul uses these popular games to illustrate the need of self-control.

a. Life is a race (vv. 24-25). In order to win a prize there must be self-denial and definite exertion. The Christian obtains life by contact with Jesus Christ through faith (John 3:16; 3:36; 5:24). This he must possess before he can begin the race.

b. It is a fight (vv. 26, 27). The Christian has a real antagonist—his carnal nature.

III. The Christian Life and Walk in the Spirit (Gal. 6:1-10).

Those who are freely justified in Christ will live and walk as follows:

1. Restore the sinning brother (v. 1). "Restore" is a surgical term which means the placing back of a dislocated member to its place. We are members of the body of Christ and the sinning of a brother ought as really to give us pain as the dislocation of a member of our body.

2. Bear one another's burdens.

3. Bear our own burdens (v. 5).

4. Support teachers of God's Word (vv. 6-8). It is incumbent upon those who are taught in the Word of God to give of their means for the support of the teacher (I Cor. 9:14).

5. Be not weary in well doing (v. 9). Some fall of the reward because they quit even when the goal is near.

6. Work for the good of all men.

IV. The Christian's Behavior as a Sojourner and Citizen (I Peter 2:11-17).

1. As a sojourner or pilgrim (vv. 11, 12). Christians are pilgrims on the earth. They are journeying to their eternal home in the heavens. Such citizenship demands

a. That they abstain from fleshly lusts (v. 11).

b. Behave so as to glorify God before the world (v. 12). The word "conversation" means behavior.

2. Behavior as citizens (vv. 13-17). He has a responsibility as a citizen on the earth. As such he should

a. Obey all requirements of civil rulers (v. 13). His duties as a citizen he performs as the Lord's free man, not through servile fear.

b. Honor all men (v. 17). We should see in every man the image of God, and in that sense give honor to him.

c. Love the brotherhood (v. 17). The brotherhood is composed of those who are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ.

d. Fear God (v. 17).

e. Honor the King (v. 17). This has a peculiar significance because in all probability the wicked Nero was then reigning as emperor.

CHAPTER X.—Alan is thrilled to see Joyce again, but she is cool toward him. Continuing the flight, Alan locates the bandit tent on an island. He leaves Bill in charge of the one bandit found there, and he and Buzzard fly back to the Alooska to try to head off the other bandits. But they have made their raid, killing old Dad Pence, her sole defender, and with Joyce their prisoner are on their way back to the rendezvous.

was to keep him run down those bandits. If they escape, it will be a blot on the splendid record here at Endurance. But, as I explained, Pedneault told me a lie about some trouble at an Indian camp, and ran off with the launch."

As he watched his superior's reactions, Haskell smiled to himself. His generous praise of an enemy was having its calculated effect. He was doubly damning Baker by praising him. He was gaining Williamson's sympathy, his approbation. He had beaten down the old officer's former prejudice against him, and had instilled a subtle hostility against Baker and the two deserters.

For moments afterwards Williamson made no comment. Surprised and alarmed at discovering this bad blood here at an important post, the old officer gazed silently down upon the purpling river.

His gray eyes, which through forty years of self-sacrificing service, had looked upon human weakness and hardships and heroisms, were filled with a profound sorrow. What cut him to the quick was this blow at his faith in Alan Baker. He had always liked Alan, had trusted him as he trusted few men; and had fought for his promotion. He, who had given forty years of his life to the service at a miserable salary; who with his brother officers of the old guard had unselfishly watched other men of their generation carve out fortunes in timber, ranches, land and mines in the developing West—he had thought of Baker as of one to carry on that tradition and spirit of loyalty to the Force.

Now, according to Inspector Haskell's account, Baker had quit because his commission last fall had not come. At the beck of a higher salary he had tossed aside loyalty and his invaluable work here in the North. He had made a miserable failure of a patrol, had imbued the other men with insubordination, and then bought out.

Stern and impartial, Williamson could not help feeling that Haskell, though a newcomer and not fully experienced yet, had been fair, and more than fair, in this trouble with Baker and these other men. Baker had certainly had a fearful moral lapse from the man he used to be. Without doubt his failure to get commissioned had set him brooding and had worked a pernicious harm on a once-superlative man.

As he looked thoughtfully at Haskell, Williamson considered it very creditable of him to praise a man who had done him so much injury. And he thought it showed exceptional stuff in the inspector to remain in service, to stick with his hard thankless work here in the North, when he had come into a large inheritance and might be leading a pleasant life in Ottawa. Playing no favorites whatsoever but trying to give every man his just dues, the old officer felt that his former uncharitable opinion of Haskell had been entirely wrong, as wrong and misplaced as his faith in Alan Baker.

Presently, in slow decisive tones, he said: "You did right to demote Baker after that patrol. It was fool-hardy of him to split his detail. Constable Young over there will pay the price of that mistake for the rest of his life. And about those other men, I think the rough sledding you've had with them is easily explained. Baker was in charge before you came; he was rather lax on discipline so long as the work got done. One of the things urged against him when he was up for commission was the fact that he was too familiar with his subordinates. When you came and insisted on stricter discipline, I presume they resented it. The faults is theirs, not yours. I'm backing you to the limit against them and against Baker, too. If he tries to stir up any further trouble."

Haskell drew a deep breath. His story had gone across handsomely. In half an hour of skillful talk he had accomplished more than Baker could match in a month of labor and heavy expense and danger.

For Alan and Featherof there at MacMillan's trading post after their discovery of the catastrophe, the waiting was the worst of it—the long hour after hour of grim, self-enforced delay.

"We've got to let them get out of timber country into the open Thal-Azzah," Alan spoke to Buzzard, who was looking to his experience and leadership in this fraught crisis. "There we can be sure of sighting their canoes. They'll have no shelter there, when we drop down on them. We'll make ourselves give them a fifteen hour start on us."

It was his cold man-hunting wisdom that spoke; but all his being clamored to start instantly, flinging himself against those men and tearing Joyce away from them before twilight fell.

He forced himself to go up to the trading store and cook a meal, for they had eaten nothing since dawn.

He remembered the little automatic Joyce always carried; remembered the hard bulge of it that time he lifted her down from the window. Knowing her spirited pride, her passionate nature, he had fearfully imagined her choosing a proud escape from her horror.

When he and Buzzard had forced themselves to eat supper and were putting the things in order again, as though for Joyce to come back and find, they heard a far-away drone miles down the Big Alooska. A breeze whipped the faint sound away for several minutes. When they caught it again, the sound was clear and unmistakable. They once had heard that same low throaty drone approaching across En Traverse lake to destroy their plane and stop their venture.

Alan rose up, with an expression on his face that frightened Buzzard.

"It's Haskell. He's coming to smash us. He didn't quit with that one attempt. I don't think—even if he knew that you and I are all that stands between Joyce and a horror—I don't think he'd hesitate a second. Buzzard, you stay here. I'm going down to the landing. I don't want you to be involved in—I suppose it'll be called murder."

He went out through the trading hall and down to the landing, and crouched there behind the machine gun. With his hand on the spade grip, training the weapon down river, he waited.

But, as he listened to the launch tearing wide open up the treacherous Alooska, he grew convinced that Whipler never would or could drive it at so demonic a clip. Frank Pedneault was the man behind that wheel.

Uncertain, in a dilemma, he reasoned: "Haskell might have forced him to make the trip. But Ped would never throw himself into it. He that, he'd never risk his life that way, unless it was something he felt like putting all his heart into."

Lifting the binoculars, he focused them on the first bend below. When the launch came tearing into sight and thundered on up toward the post, he saw at a glance that it carried but one man—a man with his hat jammed low on his eyes and a dead pipe in his teeth.

Swinging the launch around in mid-stream like a toy, Pedneault gently nosed it in beside the plane. "Thank Lord, you're here, Alan. . . . Was afraid you'd be gone—"

"Ped! What are you doing up here? You're on some patrol?"

"Patrol h—!" Pedneault panted, breathless and excited. "I caught onto your idea. Elizabeth told me about it, too. She's aching for you to win out, Larry and I talked it over. I said, 'By Lord, I'm going, Larry! I'm going to be in on that with Alan and Bill!' So I eucked the launch away from Haskell, pitched off, and streaked for here. Brought you some extra gas if you need any."

Alan was staggered.

"Good Lord! And you've deserted, too, Ped!"

"But I couldn't miss out on a trick like this, could I?"

Alan winced. Here was Pedneault mixed up in his trouble. Like an eager wolf-hound whom his master has left behind, Ped had chewed his collar and come along on the hunt.

"Where's Bill and Joyce?" Pedneault's face grew long, his eager excitement sobered down. He decided it was better to say nothing just now about Dave's suicide. Alan had enough anxiety preying on him.

"I'm thankful for that gasoline," Alan said. "And for you throwing in with us, Ped, at the price you'll pay. But I don't see how you can help. We can't carry a third person on this trip. I'll have to have room to work the machine gun—"

"Then I'll go in the launch."

"You can't make it. Above the Alooska forks there's twenty miles of low water that you can't get through."

"I can make it now. I know what the launch can do. After all these heavy rains, draining down that left fork from the Thal-Azzah. . . . Look there—" he pointed at the water stage on a pier—"that's eighteen inches higher than when we made our first patrol after them. I can get through, and once I'm in those deep-water channels of the Thal-Azzah—"

"All right," Alan agreed. "You'll be a mighty big help. If they put us out of it, you'll be in position to carry on with them. Let's go up to the post and make our arrangements. You'll be leaving ahead of us."

Meeting Buzzard in the trading hall, he introduced Pedneault and explained. They went on back to the kitchen and worked out their plans.

Pedneault was to leave at dawn in the launch. Then the plane would leave at ten o'clock. Passing Pedneault just inside the Thal-Azzah, the plane would fly on ahead, locate the bandits and bring them to bay. The two craft would thus close in together for the battle.

There was but one hitch in the plan. All three men were aware of it, but no one mentioned it. Those bandits had Joyce with them; they could and would use her for protection. How could they be swept with a machine gun's deadly spray when she was with them?

It was something which had to be left to luck or fate.

Alan gave final instructions: "If anything happens to the plane, don't try to fight those five men by yourself, Pedneault. Saving word of them, go on east to that big lake I mapped for you, and join Bill there. Then the two of you fight them to a finish."

"One other thing. I don't want Buzzard or myself to be charged with murder. You're in service, Pedneault; you'll not only be on a legitimate patrol, but you have the power to deputize us as special constables. We'd better put that down in black and white."

It seemed strange to Pedneault, who had sworn in half-breeds and Indian scouts and dog-team drivers on emergency occasions, to be swearing in his former officer commanding in so lowly a capacity. He wrote out the formal authorization: James A. Featherof; status, special constable temporary; capacity, aviator. Alan McCleod Baker; status, special constable temporary; capacity, scout and machine gunner.

At the earliest hint of dawn they went down to the landing, inspected the launch and lashed Joyce's light canoe on the stern half-deck. Pedneault shook hands with them, slipped into the wheel seat, and set out alone, a solitary figure, up the Big Alooska.

Waiting, nervous and jumpy, as both had waited for zero hours in France, Alan and Buzzard stalked about the unutterably lonely post.

At nine o'clock, drawn down to the landing, they went over the plane for the third time, and Alan mounted the machine gun in the cockpit. When their zero hour came, he towed the craft out into midstream, held it there while Buzzard warmed the spluttering motor; and then, sending the canoe spinning with a kick, he sprang up into his seat.

Buzzard lifted the plane out of the river, climbed to five thousand feet, and headed into the northeast.

Here and There

A total of 120 sailings to and from Halifax will be made during the coming season to the Old Country, the majority of which will be by Canadian Pacific steamships.

A rise in wholesale prices in Canada during September is considered to be one of the outstanding favorable events in the Canadian economic situation, according to a statement recently issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce.

Popularity of Canadian tobacco in the United Kingdom is increasing. For the eight months to August last, 8,950,568 lbs. of Canadian tobacco valued at $2,545,380 was exported to Great Britain as compared with 4,917,128 lbs. valued at $1,429,832 exported in the same period of 1931.

The Canadian silver production in 1931 was approximately 20 1/4 million ounces, or 10.5 per cent.
of the world's computed production of 196 million ounces. Canada has for many years ranked third amongst the silver-producing countries of the world, being exceeded by Mexico and the United States.

being held this week at Aylmer.

be present at the convention in her capacity of County President.

Dr. Cushing accompanied by a party of doctors from the Children's Memorial Hospital, motored up and spent Sunday at his residence.

Mrs. H. Hunt, of Toronto, spent the latter part of the week here as a guest of Nurse White at Mascot Lodge and on Sunday
Miss White also entertained
Mrs. Dr. Allen, Nurse Dawkins of the Royal Victoria Hospital.
The visit was in the nature of a reunion, as with the exception of Mrs. Allen these ladies were all at one time colleagues in the V.O.N. but had not met for a number of years and a very jolly time was spent recalling past times and experience.

Mrs. R. Dawson, of Island Brook, Que., is at present visiting her brother, Mr. Edward Dawson at Stonefield Heights.

spent the week-end with friends winter.

Quite a crowd from this community visited the scene of the train wreck near Staynerville on Sunday, in spite of inclement weather.

There was a large attendance at the clinic on Friday last.

Training for all Emergencies.

The wide variety of heady acts for which Scouts are awarded medals was illustrated when the Governor-General presented medals to two Moose Jaw boys. One had saved the life of a gunshot victim by applying a tourniquet, the other had gone to the aid of two men attacked by a moose in the Moose Jaw Wild Animal Park.

Distinguished Speakers at Centenary Sessions, Lachute United Church

The Centenary of Lachute United Church was observed with a good deal of enthusiasm by special services last Sunday, by a Young People's Rally on Monday, and by a Congregational Social on Tuesday evening of this week. The Sunday services were very largely attended, the music was especially good, and the sermons were of a helpful and uplifting character. The preacher at the morning service was Prof. R. B. Y. Scott, of the United Theological College, Montreal. He spoke of the difficult and perplexing experiences through which we are now passing, and of the necessity of following the leadership of Christ if order is to be brought out of the present chaos. He based his message on Mark 8: 34, "Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me."

The Preacher in the evening was Rev. B. B. Brown, of Wesley United Church, Montreal, and a former beloved Minister of one of the Churches that had helped to form the Lachute United Church. He emphasized the need of joining Christ's triumphal procession, and doing all possible for the extension of His cause and Kingdom in the World.

At the Young People's Rally on Monday evening the special feature was an address by Prof. King Gordon, of the United Theological College. Speaking on the subject of "Social Reconstruction," he referred to the break-down of the social system, which has been in vogue during past days, and emphasized the need of substituting for the "profit motive" a real concern for the welfare of people generally. To attain this end, he claimed we must get back to the religion of the Prophets and of Jesus, which placed great emphasis upon the worth and value of the common man.

The Late Miss Catherine C. Barron

The death of Miss Catherine Cushing Barron, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Barron, of Lachute, Que., occurred on October 22nd., at her residence in Montreal after a long illness.

Miss Barron was well known in Montreal, having been a teacher in the Dufferin School for a number of years and latterly in the Commercial High School. She was a graduate of Lachute Academy and Valedictorian of her year; also a graduate of the McGill Normal School, winning the Prince of Wales Gold Medal.

She leaves to mourn her loss relatives in Montreal and other parts of Canada. Among them are her brothers Thomas J. Barron, of Nakusp, B.C.; Lemuel C. Barron, of Lachute; Robert R. Barron, of Montreal; and Sydney B. Barron, of Vancouver, B.C. Her sisters are Miss Barron and Miss Kenmore Barron of Lachute; Mrs. Douglas MacFarlane, late of Halifax; Mrs. Alex. MacGregor, of Toronto; and Mrs. E. W. Archibald, of Montreal.

Miss Barron was a member of the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul, Montreal, where she took an active interest in the work of its Women's Missionary Society.

The funeral service was held at the family residence at Lachute on Tuesday afternoon. A large number of friends and acquaintances from Montreal, Lachute and elsewhere were present. The service was conducted by Rev. Henry Cousens of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, assisted by Rev. A. G. MacKinnon, of Montreal.

On Tuesday evening a Congregational meeting was held, a brief Musical Programme was rendered by the Choir, and an historical sketch of the Congregation read by Mr. Rosborough. At this meeting a message of Congratulation was read by Dr. T. Albert Moore, Moderator of the General Council of the United Church, and from the following Ministers who served the people in times past: Revs. N. Waddell, J. L. George, J. A. Mackenzie, Dr. Ernest Thomas, and T. Creighton Cassidy. Rev. A. G. MacKinnon conveyed his message in person. Rev. R. Strange, of St. Therese bore the greetings of the Presbytery of Montreal and of his own Congregation. Rev. J. Macaskill, Rev. A. E. Hagar and Rev. J. W. Maclean brought the good wishes of the United Congregations in St. Andrews East, Brownsburg and Cushing. Dr. B. N. Wales of St. Andrews East also spoke briefly. The meeting was conducted by Mr. Rosborough. Prayer was offered by Dr. J. R. MacLeod and the Benediction pronounced by the Rev. E. S. Morrison.

Then followed a pleasant hour of social intercourse, when refreshments were served by the Ladies of the Congregation.

At the Sunday Services and at the Congregational Meeting on Tuesday evening the music rendered by the Choir and Male Quartette was of an exceptionally high order, and was greatly enjoyed by all. Another pleasing feature, which elicited many favourable comments, was a large board bearing a graphic representation of the history of the Congregation, this work having been very finely done by Mr. Charles L. Duncan.

Altogether the celebration was a splendid success, and reflected credit upon the committee that planned and carried it through.

"Swanton Courier"—

The man who lives in a town of 100,000 population wonders what the fellow in the town of 10,000 population finds to amuse himself, and the fellow in a town of 10,000 population wonders what a man in the town of 1,000 population finds to amuse himself, and so on down the line. It isn't the size of the town, or the house that a man lives in that makes him happy, it is his attitude of mind towards his surroundings, and the attitude of his heart. Many times the man in the small town and in the little house is the happier of the two.

Team and Auto Head-on in Foundry Street Collision

Driving home to supper soon after six o'clock Monday evening, Philippe Lefebvre had just left his Butcher Shop on Foundry street when he met with an accident almost opposite the Paquin Garage. Seated beside Lefebvre in his coupe was I. Chaloux, an employee, and both narrowly escaped injury when the car met a team of horses head-on, with considerable impact. The team and wagon belonged to J. McKimmie, of North River, who was on the wrong side of the road and appears to have turned the team into the course of the machine as Lefebvre attempted to pass.

The wagon pole struck the windshield, emerging through the top of the coupe, the chassis plowing into the team, which were both badly cut up. Constable Gagne later shot the horse which was most severely damaged, and the other was removed to a nearby stable. No serious consequences were suffered by the drivers but the automobile, an Essex with light-delivery body, was wrecked almost beyond repair.

Samples of Quebec Tobacco Taken South

A new and extensive market for Canadian tobacco has been discovered, and many tons of that commodity will probably soon be shipped to the Bahama Islands, following a visit to Montreal of Cyril F. Solomon, brother of the Receiver General of the Bahamas.

Mr. Solomon is buying up lower grades of Quebec tobacco with a view to selling it for consumption by the native population of the British West Indies, who smoke and chew enormous quantities of tobacco, and only ask for two qualities, strength and cheapness. Quebec's lower grades of tobacco excel on both counts.

Mr. Solomon took a large stock of samples of Canadian tobacco with him, on his return last week to Nassau.

Historical Sketch of Lachute United Church

As Compiled and Narrated by Rev. W. B. Rosborough during Centenary Observances

We are gathered here this evening to celebrate the Centenary of our beloved Lachute United Church.

Joseph Home very wisely says that "A wise Nation preserves its records, gathers up its monuments, decorates the graves of its illustrious dead, repairs the great public structures, and fosters national pride and love of country by perpetual references of the past." And I feel that what is true of the Nation is equally true in so far as the Church is concerned. I take it therefore that we are here to-night to refresh our minds concerning the many noble men and women, who have laboured for the good of this Church and Community during the days and the years that are gone.

The Community itself dates back to the year 1796. In that year Hezekiah Clark emigrated from Jericho, Vermont, and settled in this Parish with a family of five, three sons and two daughters. At that time Lachute was an entire wilderness, and it was not till after two years that he was joined by six more families from the same part of the United States. Mr. Clark was obliged to convey his wife on an Indian sled from St. Andrews East to Lachute. For the first night they had to sleep under a cover made from the branches of trees. The next day they contrived to make a rude hut as a place of shelter, and we are told that in two years after this, the settlement was able to provide for its own needs.

In the year 1800 the first day school was commenced with from twenty to thirty scholars in attendance. In the same year 1800 a Sabbath School was organized and subsequently carried on, by a Mr. Thoddeus Os- goode, who afterwards moved to Montreal, where he was also abundant in good works. There being at this time no stated Minister of the Gospel among them, the people, in a most commendable spirit, met together on the King George, heard a record of one of his radio speeches. "Dear me," said he, "I must have had a cold."

Death by Drowning at Shawbridge

Victim Left Note

The body of Mrs. Margaret Stearn, wife of Frank Stearn, Montreal, was found in the North River about one mile from Shawbridge, early on Sunday morning. Her disappearance had caused much alarm, and some time later a note was found, signed by Mrs. Stearn, saying she "could no longer stand being ill."

The funeral took place in Shawbridge on Tuesday.

Local Lodge I.O.O.F. at Carpet Bowling

Enthusiasts of Carpet Bowling from Laurentian Lodge, No. 14, I.O.O.F., paid a visit to Lafayette Lodge, No. 15, in Montreal last Monday evening, and were the proud winners of the Fraternity No. 21 Challenge Cup.

The team from here comprised L. N. Cruise, Geo. McCormick, H. Cunningham, and R. McArthur (Skip), playing against Chas. Belanger, G. A. Clunie, A. St. Pierre and O. Dupont (Skip).

The District meeting takes place on Saturday, October 29, in McArthur's hall, when Landsdowne Lodge will play a Challenge Match with Laurentian Lodge.

While in Montreal the team, along with several visitors, report having been royally entertained.

Members of the Canadian Railroad Historical Society were exultant in their discovery of an old railroad relic nearby, during a visit last week to Carillon, where the party were tracing facts relative to the old Carillon and Grenville Railway. The relic, which will be taken to the Chateau de Ramezay and placed on Exhibition, is a large balloon smoke stack, said to have adorned the locomotive "Dufferin," the first engine ever built in Montreal, which was delivered in 1853 to the C. & G. Railway. It was found at the home of Mrs. John Hodgson, Carillon, pressed into service as a flower stand.

The locomotive was built by Kinmond Bros., whose foundry was situated at the west side of Chaboillez Square. The plant was closed in 1857 after operating for five years.

The stack stood six feet in height and was five feet across, at the mouth. It was buried four feet deep in the ground and it is feared that the sheet iron of which it is made may have rusted away under the soil but it will be taken up, and as much as possible preserved.

The delegation included Messrs. John Loye, P. O. Tremblay, L. A. Spriggs, D. F. Angus and R. V. Nichols.

Mrs. Robt. R. Brown and Miss Anna O'Dowd, custodian of the Chateau de Ramezay, accompanied the party.

New Dominion Loan Officially Announced

Safety of Investment

The security behind the forthcoming issue of government bonds is in reality the integrity of the Canadian people and their undoubted determination to meet all their financial obligations as they mature. Nevertheless, it is worth while briefly to examine some features of the physical security which lies behind every Dominion of Canada Bond.

Unfortunately, the last figures on national wealth available in the 1932 Canada Year Book—an official government publication—cover the year 1929. Nevertheless, the fact is significant that the tangible wealth of the Dominion at that time, without including undeveloped natural resources, amounted to a figure equal to thirteen times the net public debt, excluding indirect liabilities such as the C. N. R. The 80 million loan, to be floated on October 31, will produce a net increase in the public debt equivalent to about 1-6 of 1 per cent of the figure at which the net tangible assets of the Dominion were carried three years ago.

Despite conditions during the last three years, the actual net debt of the Dominion was lower at the end of 1931 fiscal year than at the end of 1921, and on a per capita basis no less than 18 per cent lower.

The mineral production in 1931 was almost double the annual charges on the public debt. The Canada Year Book estimate of Canadian capital invested alone equals more than 3/4 of the public debt. Canadian production of automobiles and parts in 1930 almost equalled the annual interest requirements on the debt. The value of annual wheat and flour exports, or pulp and paper exports in 1931, are in ex-

Now that summer is past and everyone is settling down for the usual activities of winter, may we remind the secretaries of varied organizations throughout the county that The Watchman is pleased to receive and publish anything that savors of public interest. We would again urge that all copy be mailed on Tuesday, in order to ensure publication in the current issue and must bear the writer's name.

Lachute Boy Scout News

The regular weekly meeting of the 1st Lachute Troop Boy Scouts was held in the High School on Wednesday evening, October 26th. During the session instruction was given in first-aid and signalling. Several interesting games were also engaged in. H. Deacon and A. Ashworth were invested and H. Miles and F. Stein passed their Tenderfoot Test.

The Patrol standing in the Troop competition is as follows:

Crow Patrol 222 points.
Fox Patrol 208 points.
Bulldog Patrol 203 points.

cess of annual interest requirements. The same can be said of the revenues of Canadian electric plants. (1930.)

The foregoing comparisons are not presented to minimize the national debt, but to bring out its relative proportions.

"THINGS THAT GROW"

The Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont.

Dear Boys :-

It seems to me that a great many of us do not take the interest we should in Things That Grow.

Nearly all of my young friends devote a large portion of their spare time in the things that are made. Notice a boy when he takes upon a magazine; he will give his undivided attention to mechanical construction; the steam engine; perhaps some new electrical device, or a model aeroplane. These are the subjects that seem to appeal most to his youthful mind and imagination. As for The Things That Grow—well, he seems to have no time or thought for them at all.

Now, thinking this out, it appears to me the reason why so few of you take an interest in such things, is because you have always assumed there is nothing new about them; that every year the same old "stuff" comes up out of the ground; and what you've seen before you'll see again; and it all goes on and on without change! You ask, "How can I take an interest in something which is always the same?"

Well, this is perhaps where I may be able to put you right. Anyway, I will have a try. As I write to you I am living in the very centre of a wonderful district where things are grown; I am in a College, where the pupils are studying everything that comes up out of the earth! And let me tell you that, in so doing, they have discovered that everything changes. Fruits take on new shape, weight, and taste; grains are richer and finer in quality; animals become not only more virile but more productive; while flowers alter their form and colour in such a wonderful way that it seems as if a magician had waved his wand and willed that it should be so. And all this change takes place, not once, but most regularly every year!

Listen now. They have shown me things as they used to be and as they are now. It is most difficult to believe that in both these cases, the origin was the same; but it is. In this field of knowledge, as in any other, a wider, better understanding of your subject will result in the production of a more perfect article.

Thus all this work and experimenting is but a striving for improvement. Even in Nature there are ugly things that mar the beauty of perfection, and all effort is being used to eliminate these things for ever. So if you have the heart to appreciate, the mind to understand, and the will to learn, you will quickly come to realize that the story of the Things that Grow can become one of the most enthralling stories you have ever read!

I hope you believe this, for it is true.

Your affectionate friend,

Mystery Island

By Capt. O. J. Aldom.

Chapter 23.

As it happened, things did not turn out exactly as Jack had expected they would. The attack had hardly re-commenced on the occupants of the cabin when the sudden stopping of the ship's engines caused a diversion. The boy looked at his companion and noted with relief that there was no sign of anxiety on the engineer's face. "It's not a break-down?" he enquired eagerly.

"Not to me, my boy," was the grim rejoinder. "But I'm just thinking, those villans will have some sort of trouble to get the engines going again. Listen, they have noticed already that the ship ain't moving and have stayed their proceedings against our party. Hear them rushing up on deck! Soon they'll be down here to make terms."

McGowan was right, but not to the extent he thought he was. As soon as the throb of the engines had ceased, Pedro called his band together and ordered them on deck; after which he held a consultation as to what was now the best thing to do. This did not give him much satisfaction—owing to the fact he had been unable to carry out his promise of "plenty of rum for all hands when the officers are overcome".

"You're a fine kind of leader," said a dark-skinned, swarthy-looking seaman by the name of Marlowe, spitting hard on the deck. "Here you goes persuading honest seamen to mutiny against their officers, tempting them with gold and plenty of good liquor, and saying it was dead easy . . . and now see where you lands us! Ship ain't running, and nobody ain't as much as hurt,—and all of us nowhere! What I says and what I repeats is, what are you going to do now?"

With a curse Pedro turned on the speaker. "What am I going to do? Will you listen to me, all of you. It's your fault we're not masters of this ship—look at the time you've lost! I wanted this business done days ago. Then we could have wiped them all out without trouble; but Marlowe here, called for delay, and you began to whisper to each other, after dark in little groups. No wonder the officers got suspicious and that put them on their guard. No there was not one among you man enough to slit their throats when you had the chance, but you all whine loud enough when things go against you! Well, I'm content, say the word, and I'll throw up the whole thing, and that will mean prison for the lot of us, if not hanging."

Pedro ceased speaking and glared at the group in front of him, waiting for a reply, and realising that he was gambling with odds decidedly against him. There did not seem much chance of holding his gang together, and if they once broke loose and made terms with those in the cabin all his plans would go by the board. So with gritted teeth and beads of perspiration on his face, he stood clenching his hands, awaiting the reply to his challenge.

It came in a most unexpected way. These exciting events had so occupied everyone's attention that no heed had been taken as to the direction of the ship's movements, so easy had they been since the engines had stopped working. The sea, after the storm, had settled down, undisturbed by the faintest breath of wind. So clear and bright was the moon that a silvery light shone from end to end of the ship. Even the look-out man, sent forward by Pedro for this work because the safety of all demanded such precaution, had dozed at his job. He had awakened however on the return of his comrades from below, and now raised his voice in warning: "Land ahead! Land ahead!"

In a moment everything else was forgotten while a rush was made to the ship's side. For a second or two there was a great silence, as all eyes followed the direction indicated by the outstretched arm of their companion aloft. It was indeed a wondrous sight upon which they looked. Rising right out of the water was an island, not large, but beautiful in its formation. Though still some distance away, it was easy to discern tall and graceful palm trees growing on its gentle slopes, and a low white line showed where the surf was breaking on wide stretches of golden sand, while behind the cluster of foliage, thick enough to be a forest, arose the summits of two hills. All stood, as it were, spell-bound, until roused by an angry shout from Pedro. "Are you all moon-struck, you fools?" he bawled. "Get the anchor-gear ready to let her slip. Don't you see we are drifting towards the rocks! And you, Marlowe, get to the wheel and see if you can use your hands as glibly as you can your tongue! There is bound to be an opening in the barrier reef somewhere. This is real luck, for as soon as we can, we'll anchor and get on shore. Then I'll show you how to get everything you want." The words brought forth a cheer, for the sight of land, always so welcome to seamen, had roused beyond measure the drooping spirits of the mutineers, discouraged by their failure to defeat the cabin party. As the minutes passed they became more and more impatient to set their feet upon the island, which appeared larger and larger as they drew closer to it. Pedro went across to the wheel. "Look, Marlowe, there is an opening just on your port side there," he said eagerly. "Make it carefully, man, we don't want to wreck the ship." And very gracefully the Dauntless slipped through the reef and entered a moonlit lagoon. Then with a rush the anchor was let down and preparations were promptly made for lowering a boat.

—But, what about the cabin party all this time?

Aunt Jean Tries Some Hallowe'en Tricks

By Aunt Jean

Tibbie says there's nae fule the maitter. Noo ye men folk needna be listenen'—I am no mairryin' again. At least I dinna think sae, not as far as I ken the noo, ony way.

If I had keptit ma plans tae mysel, t'wud hae been aicht, but I had tae go and tell Tibbie. She said I was fair daft, and if I got much daffter they wud hae tae be pittin' me awa tae Brockville. I tried tae coax her, but 'twas nae use, she said wi' a toss o' her heid "Yin auld fule was enough," and gaed awa hame. She's awfa thrawn, is Tibbie.

I had niver been alane on Hallowe'en, and it felt gey creepy. The wind was chappin' at the doors and wundays like something alive, sae says I tae mysel! I'll hae tae dae something tae amuse mysel, sae I peeled an apple and threw the peelin' ower ma shoulder tae see whatna letter it wud make. In lookin' round I found I had pit tae much force intae ma throw, for it was a' in wee bits, and weel scattered. "Humph," says I, "But maybe yon wee bits be scattered fancies, and ivery yin

I am gey auld fashioned in a great mony things, but I dinna haud wi' the relegion that curbs wee innocent bairns in their play. I do believe in teachin' bairns that Oor Father is a God o' Love, and pressin' that point haem tight. Train them from infancy that he grieves o'er their wrang-daein's and yince ye hae them beleivin' that—ye're a'richt. If ye teach bairns that he is a God tae be feart they'll no love him, sure. Ye canna love onybody ye rear, at least I canna. Tibbie's aye sayin' that I hae an awfu lot o' queer ideas about me that naeboddy else has, an maybe that's yin o' them. But that's gettin' awa from what I staired oot tae tell ye, sae tae gang on wi' my story about the Hallowe'en tricks, I maun say I read the wee bookie all over, and decided that bein' a widow woman I had a richt tae be da'en as I pleased aboot

o' them represents a mon; but they mauna be nameless; I'll hae tae try again!" I did. Fate was again me agin! Ma foot slipped on yin o' the wee pieces a'ready on the floor, and I landed on the cat. He leapt intil the air wi' a yowl that wud hae scairt auld Harry his-self, and when he landed doon again he turned and faced me wi' his back a' rouslet up, and yon green eyes juist fair sparklin' wi' fire. He was sae muckle like thae pictures o' witches' cats ye see, that I juist had tae lauch; "Weel Tam," says I, a' I am needin' the noo is a broom and a high cocked hat, and we wud be a' ready tae stait. We would hae a great nicht scarin decent folks, wud we no! We'd begin wi Tibbie first." Tam doesn't like Tibbie. He seemed tae ken her very name, for he slunk spittin' and growlin' aneath the stove, where he should hae been a' the time.

I lookit fer the apple peelin'. It wasna tae be seen. I was juist aboot tae say there must be spooks aboot, when Dickie began tae sing and hop round his cage as though he was possessed. I lookit up. There was ma peelin, richt on the top o' his cage, yin end o't danglin doon inside and still wigglin about.

Sma' wunder ye're scairt, Dickie," says I. "Ye can keep it tae pick at, and I'll juist peel one anither. I am wantin' a pie fer ma denner onyway."

I threw this one wi care, mind I am tellin ye. "The third time's the charm", I muttered. But it wasna! The letter it made was a C—and the only C that I kent in the neighborhood was auld, deaf Chairlie Grant. A scrippin' mean auld joker whae made his wife's folks bury her when she deid.

I lookit oot o' the wunday in the direction o' his hoose. "Ye'll no get me," says I, and stopped dumfounded. There was a wee glimmer o' a light in the hoose. "What's came ower the mon?" I cried. Chairlie Grant wi a light in his hoose at this time o' nicht! A mon that always ga'ed tae bed wi' the hens, tae save candles.

A sudden thoct came to me. "I wonder noo," says I tae mysel, "if he's daein Hallowe'en tricks tae." I got fair mad at the thought o'it. "You'll no git me, you auld loon ye," I cried, and shook ma fist at the licht. "Jean Chalmers has mair sense."

This arrangement, by which services were supplied to Lachute Presbyterians by the Minister of the St. Andrews East Congregation, was maintained for a period of fourteen years. But as time went on, and the Presbyterian population increased, the people felt that they would like to have a Church and Minister of their own. The matter was finally brought to a head in the year 1831 when they were offered an acre of land as a site for a Church by Mr. William Johnson. This offer was formally accepted at a meeting held on the first day of December in the year 1831. At the same meeting arrangements were made for the erection of a suitable edifice of worship. A committee was appointed to carry out the purpose of the meeting, and subscriptions pledged for the prosecution of the work. The committee was composed as follows: Major Barron, Messrs. John McCovatt, Alex. Bilsland, John Gibson, J. Sinclair, Chancy Davis, Wm. McCovatt, Sr., and Samuel Hills, the latter gentleman acted as secretary of the meeting, and, I presume, Secretary of the Committee as well. I hold in my hand the original agreement, and the subscription list, of one hundred and one years ago.

The people then "petitioned the session to disjoin them from the Church at St. Andrews" so that they might pursue their course as a distinct and independent Congregation. This request was granted by the Session at St. Andrews on July 11, 1832, and, in the same year, Rev. William Brunton, of the "United Secession" Church was inducted as the first Minister of the Presbyterian Congregation at Lachute. In 1833-1834 the first Church building was erected, and was subsequently known and spoken of as "the stone Church". Here Mr. Brunton ministered with zeal and conspicuous success until he was removed by death on August 12, 1839.

The people of the Congregation had affiliations with both the "United Secession" Church and with the "Church of Scotland". And when some disagreement arose between these groups over the calling of a Minister they decided to dissolve the partnership of the previous seven years and pursue each one a separate course, though they continued to use the same building up to the year 1851.

The "United Secession" congregation, which worshipped in "the Stone Church" throughout its entire existence, and eventually came to be known as "The First Presbyterian Church", pursued its independent way until the year 1899. Throughout the sixty years of its history the Congregation was served by three faithful and God-fearing Ministers:

Rev. And. Kennedy 1839 to 1851
Rev. Walter Scott 1851 to 1856
Rev. John Mackie 1859 to 1898

The "Church of Scotland" group continued to carry on under the banner of the "Auld Kirk" until after the Disruption which took place in Scotland in 1843. But in the month of August, 1844, "by general concurrence of the Congregation and at the desire of the Minister, the connection with the Kirk of Scotland ceased and they united with the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland." In so doing they followed the courageous lead of Dr. Thomas Chalmers, and identified their interests with what subsequently came to be known as the Free Church of Scotland. As has already been noted both Congregations made use of the same Church building for a period of seventeen years. But in the year 1851 the "Free Church" Congregation erected a beautiful and commodious Church of their own, which came to be known and spoken of as the "Brick Church."

During the sixty years of its independent history this Congregation had but five Ministers:

Rev. Blood 1840 to 1842
Rev. Thos. Henry 1842 to 1862
Rev. John Eadie 1862 to 1870
Rev. Wm. Furlong 1872 to 1892
Rev. N. Waddell 1893 to 1899

Previous to the year 1899 a couple of futile attempts were made to reunite these two Congregations. It is not necessary for me to go into detail with respect to the causes which led one of the groups concerned to reject, on two separate occasions (one in 1868 and the other in 1887) the terms laid down by the Sessions as a Basis for reunion. Suffice it to say that these efforts were at length crowned with success, the two congregations coming together on a third "Basis of Union" on July 27, 1899.

Mr. Mackie retired from the active work of the Ministry in 1898, and Mr. Waddell, who had tendered his resignation of the "Free Church" in order to facilitate the Union, remained in charge of the congregation, for a period of one year. From that date forward the happily reunited congregation was faithfully served by the following Ministers:

Rev. Jas. McLaren 1901 to 1906
Rev. Thos. Mitchell 1906 to 1911
Rev. J. L. George 1912 to 1920
Rev. G. MacKinnon 1920 to 1929

It now remains to say a word about the history of the Methodist Church in this community. As already stated a Methodist service was held in this vicinity by a Rev. Mr. Suval in the year 1801. About the same time the Methodist people were served by a Minister appointed by the New York Conference in the person of Rev. Daniel Pickett. The historical facts for the next few years are somewhat scant, but it seems quite clear that, for some years, this section of the country was embraced in what was known as "the Ottawa Circuit of the United States." In his "sketches of Lachute," Mr. F. C. Ireland says that, "In 1819 the Rev. Thomas Madden was appointed to the Ottawa Circuit of the United States. The Circuit embraced all the territory between Montreal and Kingston. Mr. Madden had just married a daughter of David Breckenridge, Esq., of Brockville, a man of considerable standing in the community, and his daughter, had been brought up tenderly, and was accustomed to all the comforts and many of the requirements of good society. Mr. Madden took his bride with him on the rounds of the Ottawa Circuit, one appointment of which was in the East Settlement near Lachute, a few Methodists who had come from the American side lived here, and among them was a Mr. Hyatt, whose rudely constructed barn was the first chapel in which the settlers from many miles around assembled to hear the Gospel preached. In the loft of Mr.

Hyatt's new log house, the minister and his wife found a comfortable lodging place for the night. The Hyatts were an intelligent and interesting couple, and their house was the home of the itinerates for many years and was enjoyed and looked forward to with pleasing anticipations when travelling for miles, through the uncleared country, over the roughly constructed roads and bridgeless rivers, from Bytown to Montreal."

Mr. Ireland also records another incident: "The Rev. Mr. Luckey, who had closed his labours for the year, by preaching his last sermon to the people of the East Settlement in Mr. Hyatt's barn, left next day, to attend the Conference in New York. In crossing the Ottawa river at Point Fortune, his horse got into the water, and was nearly drowned. Mr. Luckey also narrowly escaped, but was lucky enough to get safe on the other side. Being fatigued, he went to a French house, to seek rest and something to eat. His appearance was not very clerical just at that time. His beard had grown out considerably since his last shave, and when he asked for something to eat, the simple-minded but kind French people mistook his meaning, and brought him a razor, and it was some time before he could get them to understand that he was hungry. Rev. Mr. Hibbard was another of the itinerates who followed." "The appointment by the General Conference (in 1815) of that intensely devout young preacher—Nathaniel Reeder—was a God-send to the little societies and English-speaking settlements in that region, albeit he was removed before the year was out, and another was sent on in the person of Israel Chamberlayne. Mr. Reeder traversed the country from La Chute to the Bay of Pancote, and from L'Original to Côte St. Charles. The next year the return for the Circuit was the highest it had ever been, namely 153. There was a revival all over the Circuit during the few months Reeder was there."

In 1841, or possibly, at an earlier date, Lachute was included in a Circuit of which St. Andrews was the main appointment, and was served by the following Ministers and assistants:

1841 John Armstrong, Wm. Dignam
1842 John Armstrong, Wm. Morton

St. Andrews continued to be the main appointment until the year 1865, when Lachute became the Head of the Circuit, and the Main Centre of Methodism in so far as this part of the country was concerned. From 1865 to 1925 the following Ministers, and possibly a few others whose names have been inadvertently omitted, ministered to the spiritual needs of the Methodist community in Lachute and the surrounding country.

Revs. Wm. Shaw; Joseph Kilgour; David Winter; E. Robson; B. Longley; John Walton; John Hiscocks; H. W. Knowles; I. Armstrong; J. V. MacDowell; Wm. Craig; John W. Clippsham; Alfred A. Radley, D.D.; W. H. Raney; Ernest Thomas, D.D.; B. B. Brown; J. H. McConnell; F. J. Hayden; W. P. Wornell; Geo. A. Adamson; Albert Matthews; T. Creighton Cassidy.

On June 10, 1925, the United Church of Canada came into being through the Union of the Congregational Churches of Canada, The Methodist Church, The Presbyterian Church in Canada, and the Local Union Churches in Western Canada. The Lachute Presbyterian Church, by majority vote, having decided to enter the United Church, the way was open for a Union between it and the local Methodist Church, which automatically became part of the larger Body. This Union was accordingly consummated on the first Sunday of December 1925, and has been working out very satisfactorily to all concerned. Rev. A. G. MacKinnon and Rev. T. C. Cassidy continued for a short time as joint Pastors, but, before long, Mr. Cassidy assumed charge of the Brownsburg Congregation, and Mr. MacKinnon continued in ministry in Lachute until ill-health made it necessary for him to resign the charge in 1929. He was succeeded by the present incumbent, Rev. W. B. Rosborough, who was inducted on September 12, 1929.

Up to 1925 Brownsburg was tributary to Lachute, both Methodists and Presbyterians being supplied by the ministers residing in this community. But after the consummation of Church Union the two Brownsburg groups came together to form an independent and self-sustaining congregation. The first minister of this congregation was Rev. T. C. Cassidy. He was succeeded, in 1929, by the present minister, Rev. A. E. Hagar, who has carried on the work of that charge with zeal and conspicuous success.

In this historical review we have mentioned a good many ministers who laboured with great earnestness in the various Churches that were the precursors of our present congregation. On this centenary occasion we think also of the many noble lay-men and lay-women, who gave their best to the building up of Christ's cause in this community. Who knows but that many of them are among the unseen witnesses of what is going on in this Church to-night? To us, from failing hands, they have thrown the torch. May it be ours to hold it high!

THE RADIO EXPERIMENT

Owners of radio receivers still find much to complain of in our broadcast programs, and look with pleasurable anticipation to the days of government control in Canada.

Much has been said in praise of the British Broadcasting Corporation, of the quality and arrangement of its programs; likewise much criticism prevails for the existing standards of American radio entertainment. . . . With several details of this criticism we can heartily agree, and we personally incline to the preference for controlled broadcasting. There is an essence of reliability in a brand of entertainment which is government censored and officially inspected.

The unfavorable aspects of such control cannot be ignored, of course. While speculation is rife, as to the outcome of such an experiment in Canada, we append one adverse opinion on the subject, clipped from recent correspondence in the Montreal Star. In the following vein, this writer forecasts "Dark Days for Radio":

Radio fans and fanatics should not complain so loudly of the local programs. Remember we are faced with Government control.

If the R. B. Bennett Broadcasting Co. intend (as I believe they do) to take a leaf from the book of the B. B. C. then we will have plenty of reasons and real ones, to complain.

I have just returned from England and a couple of days of B. B. C. programs would sicken you to death.

Let us all enjoy the "Fire Chief", "Country Doctor", "Jack Benny", and all the rest of "stars" of the air while we can; they are well worth two dollars. But our Government program, unless I miss my guess, will not be worth the energy of switching the radio on for.

THE ETHER AND THE SPIRIT

There is nothing that so nearly approximates to the condition of the after-life as that modern invention—the radio.

The soul, released from the body in which it had its abode, has escaped from the bondage and ills that flesh is heir to, and has gone, whither we know not; and we are left to wonder and surmise, until we realize that there, where earthly ties of flesh are dissolved, soul meets soul and all the happy and blessed contacts of soul are united with those souls that we loved.

We do not see the voices going over the ether, crossing oceans and continents; but we listen and know that somewhere the message is sent that we receive; and we have ceased to question how and why the message has been transmitted to us, that unless our ears were attuned we should not receive.

The All-wise God inspired one of his creatures to realize the possibilities of communications by wireless, to show us that where we are in tune with God and the souls he has taken, we do not mourn, for they are with us here, and we are surrounded by the love they had for us.

We have the happy memories, and we can with surety feel that soul will be with soul in that prepared place for those who love God; and till then we have followed the gleam to the best of our ability, looking to God to teach us, and to help us grow from strength to strength, till we attain here the full stature that we should.

In the sunshine of God's presence

Souls enjoy the other life,
And wait for our own coming,
When done with all earth strife.

And so we wait with patience
The dawning of that day,
When freed from fleshly burden
Our souls will take their way.
And meet and greet the loved ones,

Not lost, but gone before,
Enjoying, free from sorrow,
The life on that far shore.

BROWNSBURG UNITED CHOIR ENTERTAINMENT BY CITADEL PARTY

The entertainment under the auspices of the choir of the United Church furnished by the Male Voice Party of the Montreal Citadel Band, on the evening of Saturday, October 22nd., proved to be most interesting and was a great success. On arrival at the church from the city, at about 5 o'clock, the party was greeted by the choir under the leadership of Mr. E. Taylor, who had prepared a most appetizing supper, to which the entertainers sat down in due course and did ample justice. This was followed by a few addresses—one of welcome by Mr. Taylor, followed by the Pastor of the Church and Mr. Frank Hazel, who both spoke of the pleasure the visit of the party gave them, and the anticipation of the entire evening's program. This was responded to by Mr. C. Tatchell, conductor of the Party, and Mr. N. Audoire, who voiced the appreciation of the Party at being present and of the hospitality accorded them.

After about an hour's interlude they assembled in the auditorium of the church before a large congregation where a program of unusual interest and inspirational power was given, and to which the assembly responded with enthusiasm.

Mr. Tatchell showed himself a conductor of marked ability, some of the numbers being particularly fine both in melody and interpretation, and were put on with a fine sense of harmony and shading. The instrumental numbers and marches were very pleasing, although the lack of all the parts afforded less balance, as only 18 out of the 45 bandmen were able to be present, but these numbers showed remarkable skill and the fine instruments afforded a rich blending of harmony that was delightful to listen to.

The Negro Spiritual, "Look away to Heaven," was by far the best of the Southern Melodies, and it was regretted that more selections of this type were not included on the program. This piece was put on with a beauty and naturalness that showed excellent training and a fine sense of valuation, while "All the world can ne'er console thee," "Never to be remembered," "A little longer," and "Sometime, Somewhere" afforded the audience an opportunity of hearing religious songs of a very high order giving a most unusual interpretation in rhythm, shading and tempo. The vocal solo "I know that my Redeemer liveth" by Bds. E. Burch, was a real treat in the art of single voice harmony, and the Trombone solo, "The Lost Chord," by Bds. D. Ritchie, was a clear and fine delineation of this delightful melody. Andy, too, was a wonderful success on the Bag Pipes, and considering he had nothing but a handkerchief for an instrument it is not to be wondered at that the audience broke into rounds of cheering at the inimitable imitation. Mr. N. Audoire, L.T.C.L., proved a musician of marvelous versatility and expression. Both on the organ as an accompanist and at the piano in instrumental numbers; whether in his own compositions of a great variety of blending harmonies or as interpreting the great masters, he proved himself as Master Musician of wonderful technique and adaptation. In the hands of such an artist an ordinary church instrument becomes a pipe-organ; and the works of the great masters, played entirely from memory, take on a new meaning. It is safe to say such a rendering of familiar and difficult numbers was a revelation, and probably Brownsburg has never heard such a fine interpretation of the best musical productions at the hands of any artist. The Euphonium solo by Bandsman Fisher, "The Village Blacksmith" was a very pretty madrigal, and was well played while the Vocal Trio "The King's Highway" was at once both humorous and sedate, and the audience was not slow to catch the merriment!

Nor must one omit the very fine Bible Reading by Band Sergeant Knights—the story of Naamon the leper in I Kings, and its simple but effective exposition, which was a nice addition to the program. At a late hour the program was brought to a close with an invocation and with the Benediction.

Dougald MacTavish Honored in Death

Dougald MacTavish, an honored and esteemed citizen of the community of Harrington, and widely known throughout the County of Argenteuil, passed from this life on October 21st.

Deceased was a grandson of Rev. Dougald MacTavish Parish Church Minister of the Church of Scotland. He had also a nephew in the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

There were many evidences of that reverend nobility in the life of the deceased, that was an inheritance from the ancestors who were brought up in the strict reverence of the Presbyterian Church.

He had been in poor health for over two years and had been confined to his room for the past six weeks. He suffered much without murmur or complaint; visited by many who knew him, to all of whom he was grateful, expressing that cheerful hope borne out of a trust in God, the Father of us all.

Deceased passed away on Friday afternoon, surrounded by his family, relatives and friends.

A successful farmer, a man of wise judgment and good counsel whom many were glad to seek in the hour of strait and trial.

The funeral on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 23rd., was one of the largest held in the memory of the oldest residents of Harrington East. Upwards of eighty cars and carriages formed the procession—surely an eloquent tribute to his worth and life, in his own community.

He is survived by four sons, Dougald, Roderick, Alexander & Malcolm; five daughters, Mrs. Ernest Kennedy, Mrs. T. Bishop, Mrs. Norman MacRae, Mrs. D. MacRae and Mrs. Ernest Cope-land, also three sisters, Mrs. John Fox Sr.; Mrs. H. Trineer, Sr., and Mrs. Oron Robillard.

Among the floral tributes were wreaths from Mr. and Mrs. R. MacTavish and family; Mr. and Mrs. T. Bishop and family, of Port Arthur, Ont.; and one from the remainder of the surviving daughters, also a spray from Mr. and Mrs. Dougald MacTavish and family.

The sympathy of the whole community goes out to the surviving relatives. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. T. J. Conn.

CHURCH GOERS PAY IN FARM PRODUCE

—A chicken, a jar of jam, a few dozen eggs or other farm produce—these the rural communicants of the Baptist Church in Montgomery, Ala., plan to use to pay their pledges this year.

Short of cash, the rural Baptists in that section hit on the plan of paying in produce of which they had plenty. The idea caught with church officials and congregations.

Plan Now to Buy DOMINION OF CANADA BONDS 1932

On Monday, October 31, Canadians will have an opportunity to invest in a new issue of $80,000,000 Dominion of Canada Bonds. By buying these Bonds you will accomplish two things:

1. You will obtain the soundest investment available to Canadians, secured by the resources and integrity of the Dominion.
2. You will assist in further strengthening Canada's financial position, with favourable effect upon general business.

NOTWITHSTANDING the trying conditions which have prevailed during the past three years, Canada has established an enviable record of financing. For example, among other accomplishments, the Dominion has refinanced—before maturity and at a reduced interest rate—$640,000,000 of its public obligations, due in 1931, 1932, 1933 and 1934.

The new Dominion of Canada Bonds, which will bear 4% coupons, will be offered at a sufficient discount to provide an income yield in line with current interest rates. Within the last few months Great Britain and other countries have arranged important financial operations. In each case, these have met with marked success, investors having quickly recognized the trend toward lower interest rates.

The success of the new Canadian loan is important. It will further demonstrate the confidence of Canadians in their own country and this confidence will be reflected in the money markets of the world.

For national advantage—and for your individual benefit—plan now to buy Dominion of Canada 4% Bonds, 1932, when they are offered next Monday

This preliminary advertisement is published by THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE to enable Canadian investors to make arrangements to participate in this offering.

CARILLON.

Miss Smart received a pleasant surprise on Sunday, in a visit from Mr. and Mrs. George Brophy of Port Arthur, Mrs. H. Dunn and son Brophy, Mrs. Dickie and Miss Uland Murphy, of Ottawa. They later went to visit Miss Barclay, who was the raison d'être of their visit and afterwards made several calls in St. Andrews, motoring back to Ottawa by way of Lucerne.

Mr. Barclay and Mr. Pringle made a trip to the Eastern Townships on Tuesday last.

Miss Mabel Green spent Saturday in Montreal.

An interesting relic of the first locomotive was located in the yard at Mrs. Jno. Hodgson's. It is the large balloon smoke stack of the locomotive "Dufferin", the first ever made in Montreal, which was sent to the Carillon and Grenville Railway in 1853.

The discovery was made by members of "The Canadian Railroad". Historical Society, who visited Carillon to study traces of the old railway.

Miss Smart has the only picture supposed to be in existence of this old engine. The delegation included Messrs. J. Loye, P. O. Tremblay, L. A. Renaud, Robert R. Brown, W. M. Spriggs, D. F. Angus, and R. V. Nichols. The relic will be sent to the Chateau de Ramezay.

"Acacia Cottage" is again closed but affords a splendid resting place for tramps. Carillon regret the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Morrison and Miss Draper, who during their short stay made the cottage and grounds a place of beauty and incidentally made many friends here.

Carillon "River Front" colony is still flourishing. Just why the powers-that-be do not take action to remove these undesirable, seems a mystery.

QUEBEC HOUSE LIKELY TO ASSEMBLE JAN. 18

In all probability the Quebec legislature will meet on Tuesday, Jan. 18.

Indications are there will be a new provincial treasurer appointed before that time, the name of Col. Ralph Stockton, (M.L.A., Brome), being prominently mentioned. At present the post is held by Premier L. A. Taschereau.

Little George, the garage mascot, was visiting his aunt. He found the cat in a sunny window purring cheerfully. "O auntie, come quick," said Little George: "the cat has gone to sleep and left his engine running."—Annapolis Log.

Under the slogan "Buy from your Local Grocer," Jos. Speight Butcher Shop is featuring an attractive display of apples from the Ayers' Orchard, Brownsburg road. The show has been arranged by Mr. Cross, manager of the orchards, and warrants the inspection and patronage of local shoppers.

Among seventy lucky Canadians announced as winners in the Army and Navy Veterans' sweepstake, on the "Cambridge-shire" which is being run today—appears the name of Jos. ### REWARD OF INDUSTRY

The editor of a Texas country newspaper recently moved into Dallas and deposited $50,000 in one of the local banks. He had been publishing his little country paper for thirty years, and had moved to the city with around $50,000 to his credit. When asked the secret of his great financial success, he said: "I attribute my ability to retire with a $50,000 bank account after thirty years in the country newspaper field to close application to duty, also heaving to the mark and letting the chips fall where they may, the most rigorous rules of economy, never spending a cent foolishly, everlastingly keeping at my job with a whole heart, and the death of an uncle who left me $49,999.50."

FAT AND LAZY

We often hear people say that such and such is fat and lazy. After studying people and their habits to try to determine what effect they have on their weight, I have come to the conclusion that a great many women are fat, or had I better say pleasantly plump, not because they are lazy but because they are very efficient. A fat person knows the shortest distance between two points—and takes it, while the thin one splutters about, hither and yon, and accomplishes no more than her fat friend, but uses up a lot more energy doing it.

Very often it is just this difference in the amount of energy used that puts the pounds on one person and takes them off the other. Fat people are not so fond of moving and unconsciously eliminate every waste motion. If they want to get thinner, they need to take more exercise as well as changing some of their food habits. If the thin person wishes to gain she should try to do her work with a little less action. The fat woman is apt to make her head save her heels' and plan her work most efficiently. I would not go so far as to say that all fat women are efficient—we all know slatternly fat women, but all the thin ones aren't so hot either.

VITAMIN B FOR BABIES

If you want to have a good-natured, smart baby, be sure that it had plenty of vitamin B in its diet. This vitamin is widely distributed, so it is not hard to get. It is found in the leafy vegetables such as spinach, lettuce, beet tops, watercress, radishes, cabbage and brussels sprouts; root vegetables and tubers contain it; fruits are a good source; glandular meats such as liver, kidney and sweetbreads; peas, beans and whole grains are all good sources.

It will readily be seen that all these foods are not suitable for babies, but the best way for the baby to get it is from the mother's food. If she eats food containing plenty of vitamin B, the baby will get it too. Unless, of course, it is a poor unfortunate bottle baby. Orange juice, tomato juice, spinach, cooked fruits and vegetables will provide vitamin B.

Experiments have been made with rats and they found that baby rats whose mothers had a liberal supply of vitamin B in their diet, learned quickly, while those whose mothers had been deprived of vitamin B were stupid and found it difficult to learn. They can even measure the learning ability of rats! They do it by a maze and in some of the cages, food is kept. The quickness with which the rats learn to find the cages with the food, is a measure of their quickness to learn. To have bright babies, the mother rats had to have vitamin B in their diet before the rats were born and during the time of nursing them. Judging from these experiments, it would be wiser for the human mother to have liberal quantities of vitamin B before her child is born and while she is nursing it.

CRYING BABIES

This same experiment of depriving rats of vitamin B showed that the baby rats had fits of squealing. They continued the experiment still further and tried increasing the vitamin B for babies who were subject to crying spells and they found a decided improvement. So if you do not want to have a crying baby see that you eat food with plenty of vitamin B.

EGGS AS A THICKENING AGENT

Sometimes when eggs are used to thicken a mixture such as custards or puddings, they are added to the hot liquid, & there will be little lumps of hard egg. If the process were reversed and the hot mixture added to the slightly beaten egg, there would be little danger of the egg going in lumps. So remember, always add the hot mixture to the egg and not the egg to the hot mixture.

PEA SOUP

1 1/4 cups dried split peas
1 ham bone or small shank end
2 slices lemon
1 medium onion, sliced
3 or 4 celery tops
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
10 cups cold water

Soak the dried peas in 2 cups cold water for at least 4 hours and over night if possible. Then drain. Fry until tender in a few slices of ham cut from the bone, the sliced onion. Add the drained peas, the lemon, celery tops, salt, pepper and 8 cups cold water. Cover, bring to a boil, and simmer gently for 3 hours. Rub through a coarse sieve and skim off all surface fat. Heat and serve.

CAULIFLOWER WITH CHEESE

Trim a cauliflower and soak for one-half hour in salted water. Cook until tender but not broken. Cover with a medium white sauce and sprinkle thickly with grated cheese. Place in a medium oven until the cheese is melted. The cheese may be added to the white sauce and melted in it if desired, but the whole cauliflower with the melted cheese makes a more attractive looking dish.

CREAM OF VEGETABLE SOUP

To 1 can of vegetable soup add an equal quantity of milk instead of water. Bring slowly to the boiling point. To my mind a teaspoon of butter is an improvement to any canned soup, whether made with milk or water.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

"EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches Sunday, October 30.

Golden Text: "Woe to the rebellious children, saith the Lord, that take counsel, but not of me; and that cover with a covering, but not of my spirit, that they may add sin to sin." (Isaiah 30:1).

Among the Scriptural passages comprised in the Lesson-Sermon is the following: "My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction: for whom the Lord loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth." (Prov. 3: 11, 12.) Also included in the Lesson-

FORMER ENEMY SONS MEET AS FRIENDS

Among the 3,000 Boy Scouts at the Dutch National Scout Jamboree held this summer near The Hague were boys from England, Scotland, Belgium, France, Germany, Denmark, Norway & Hungary.

Sermon are the following citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Error excludes itself from harmony." "The way to escape the misery of sin is to cease sinning." "Divine Science adjusts the balance as Jesus adjusted it. Science removes the penalty only by first removing the sin which incurs the penalty." (Pages 537, 327, 40).

THE CHRISTIAN AND WORLD PEACE

Psalm 22:27, 28; Psalm 68:1-7; Psalm 72:1-9; Isaiah 2:1-4; Matthew 28:16-20; Ephesians 2:13-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God. Matthew 5:9.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Peace and Good Will Among Men.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Our Part in Making World Peace.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Work for World Peace.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Duty to Promote World Peace.

The Scripture selections for today's lesson are vital, but in the settings given by the lesson committee will be decidedly misleading. World peace can only come through the appearing of the Prince of Peace, and the establishing of His Messianic Kingdom. Clearness here is imperative.

I. The Lord, the Ruler of the Nations (Ps. 22:27, 28).
The present unhappy conditions in the world are a result of the failure of the nations to recognize Jesus Christ. As long as the peoples of the earth refuse allegiance to Jesus Christ and are swayed by the gods of their own creation and lust, there will be war and bloodshed.

II. How Gladness is to Come to the Nations (Ps. 68:1-7).

This is to be realized by the assertion of divine power. When God arises

1. The enemies will be scattered (vv. 1, 2). They shall be put to flight before the Lord God Omnipotent. Two figures are used: Smoke dispelled by the blast, and wax melted by the heat. The wicked shall perish before the whirlwind and fire of divine power.

2. Happiness will prevail among the righteous (vv. 3-6). The rule of the Lord will bring rejoicing on the part of the people of God.

III. The Character of Christ's Reign (Ps. 72:1-19).

This Psalm describes the glorious reign of Christ upon the earth. It is that reign for which we pray when we say "Thy kingdom come."

1. It will be a reign of righteousness (vv. 1-4). Justice and equity shall be meted out to all.

2. It will be an unending reign (vv. 5-7).

3. It will be a universal kingdom (vv. 8-11). All kings shall fall down before him, and all nations shall serve him.

4. It will be a beneficent reign (vv. 12-14). Christ, the King, will have compassion upon the weak who are unable to help themselves.

5. It will be a prosperous kingdom (vv. 15-17). Full blessing shall then come to the earth. There will be no depression at that time.

IV. Israel's Spiritual and National Position (Isa. 2:1-4).

This scripture pictures the place of influence which shall be exercised by Israel in this time.

1. When shall it be? (v. 2). "In the last days." By last days is usually meant in Scripture, the times of the Messiah, for this is the primary subject of all prophecy.

2. What shall it be? (v. 2). The restoration of the kingdom of Judah to the place of pre-eminence among the nations of the world. This vision of Zion's glory refers to the millennium age, at which time other nations of the world will learn of the truth of God through the chosen nation.

3. The result (vv. 2-4). The return of God's favor to this chosen people shall be "life from the dead" to the nations of the earth (Rom. 11:15).

a. Nations shall flow unto it (v. 2). This pictures the masses of the people moving toward Jerusalem.

b. Nations shall encourage each other (v. 3). Jealousies will be forgotten and each will move to Jerusalem to be taught of God.

c. Peace in the earth (v. 4). When Israel shall be in her God-appointed place with Jesus Christ as King, wars will be over.

V. The King's Great Commission (Matt. 28:18-20).

1. The royal authority (v. 18). By virtue of his divine authority he issues this commandment to the disciples and declares that all power in heaven and earth has been given unto him.

2. The commission itself (vv. 19, 20). a. To teach all nations.

b. To baptize them in the name of the Triune God.

c. To teach them to observe all of Christ's commandments (v. 20).

3. The available power (v. 20). Those who obey Christ in carrying out this commission shall enjoy his abiding presence.

SOME WISE SAYINGS

"We teach our students only the surest methods," says Madame R. Lacroix, Assistant Director of the Provincial School of Domestic Science, Montreal. "That's why I always use and recommend Magic Baking Powder. Its high leavening quality is always uniform. You get the same satisfactory results every time you use it."

And Magic Baking Powder is the unquestioned choice in the majority of cooking schools throughout the Dominion. Cookery teachers—and housewives, too—prefer Magic because of its consistently better results.

CHAPTER X.—Alan is thrilled to see Joyce again, but she is cool toward him. Continuing the fight, Alan locates the bandit tent on an island. He leaves Bill in charge of the one bandit found there, and he and Buzzard fly back to the Alooska to try to head off the other bandits. But they have made their raid, killing old Dad Pence, her sole defender, and with Joyce their prisoner are on their way back to the rendezvous.

CHAPTER XI.—Haskell cunningly poisons Superintendent Williamson's mind by his account of Alan's conduct, and feels he is master of the situation. Pedneault, old friend of Baker, tricks Haskell and goes to join Alan with the police launch. Dave MacMillan, broken by his inability to prove his innocence, has committed suicide in his cell at the fort, but Pedneault does not tell Alan.

CHAPTER XII*The Swan Nest

Thirty miles above the Alooska forks, they caught up with Pedneault. When he saw that all was going well with him, Alan turned his glasses ahead again, sweeping the dozen waterways within vision. He picked up two tiny black objects creeping up a broad blue channel ten miles on into the Thal-Azzah.

Signaling Pedneault that they had sighted the canoes, Buzzard slowed down to stalling speed. Pedneault answered back that he understood and they saw him open out the launch till a long narrow V-wake of white froth stretched behind it. Then, winging on ahead, they closed in for the battle. As they drew near and Buzzard dropped to a couple thousand feet, Alan began to make out figures in the two craft. His heart leaped as he counted six persons. Nearer still, he distinguished a slender girlish figure in the prow of the lead canoe. They must have found that gun on Joyce, or else she had clung to her faith that he would save her.

Half-raising, Alan glanced back westward to find how near Pedneault was. A puzzled expression crept over his face as he failed to glimpse the launch in either the Alooska branch or the broad blue channel. With a premonition of disaster clutching him, he whipped up the glasses, focused on the connecting creek, and caught the big boat in clear vision.

The thing he saw brought a cry into his throat.

The craft was not moving. It lay on its side, half out of water, hopelessly stranded. Either from reckless piloting or from an accident no man could have averted, Pedneault had struck a mud bar hidden under the treacherous muskeg water; and now the scarlet-and-gold launch, lodged solidly in the muck by the momentum of its headlong dash, was out of the battle for good and all. Pedneault could not even go and help Bill.

Alan tore his gaze away from this disaster. It was all up to him and Buzzard now. Pedneault was out, the launch was out; Bill was a hundred miles away, and alone.

He tilted the Browning muzzle downward and steadied himself to run a burst at the rear canoe. But that craft darted up alongside the leading boat and hovered there, protected against his machine gun by their nearness to Joyce. With sullen faces upturned, the bandits watched the maneuvering plane, waiting for Alan's next move, defying him to touch them.

Buzzard had banked in a neat half-pin turn, had dropped down to six hundred feet and was flying back past a hundred yards off the vertical, so that Alan could fire down at them diagonally and double his concentration by ricocheting bullets off the water. It was a superb position. Alan could have killed those five bandits and sunk their canoes in half a minute. But he dared not fire a shot.

It was in that space of hopeless deadlock that Joyce came through. Alan saw her make him some slight sign, a mere gesture which the bandits, leering up at him, did not see. He read the meaning of that gesture;

But He Dared Not Fire a Shot.

Joyce was preparing for some sudden action; she was signaling him to be ready!

Without a whisper of warning, so swiftly and neatly that the bandits looked around in dazed bewilderment, she half-rose in the canoe, dived headlong over the gunwale, and disappeared.

It came so suddenly that for moments Alan himself hardly comprehended what she had done. When he did realize that she had given him his splendid chance, his finger tightened on the trigger and the Browning leaped into play.

For twenty seconds, till there was danger of Joyce reappearing, he flailed and swept the two canoes with a rain of bullets. He scorched one man, who jumped and yelled. The deadly hail drove them pell-mell in terror of their lives, into shelter of the nearest flags.

Fifty feet from where she had dived, Joyce reappeared a moment, cast a frightened glance back, tossed the disheveled hair from her eyes, swam a stroke or two, and then flipped under again like a young otter, making for a soggy reed bed on the other side of the lake.

"Low! Fly low!" Alan shouted into Buzzard's ears. "Sweep low over 'em! They'll try to get her again if we don't force the fight now!"

With rifles snarling at them from flags below, with white puffs of smoke drifting away on the breeze, the plane banked and dived; and less than four hundred feet high, it soared over the bandits, its third time, its last and fatal time.

Nearly flung out bodily by the quick wrenching maneuvers, Alan braced himself and hung grimly to the Browning and ran a burst at the flags that the bandits were firing from. He killed a man; he saw the criminal fling up his arms and stagger and fall face downward in the reeds and water. With another burst, enflaming those flags from a side angle, he would have wiped out the other four.

But that chance was not given him.

The thunder of the engine suddenly slackened, the motor spluttered and died; in place of the throbbing roar Alan heard only the swish of struts and hum of wires. In the sudden quiet he heard Buzzard's cry of consternation and saw his flight partner turn a white face toward him; and he guessed the engine had been put out of commission by those snarling rifles in the flags below.

The next instant, with those rifles still blazing away, a tremor seemed to hit the plane, as though other bullets had struck it. It lurched violently, its nose and right wing dropped, and it started a steep side-slip. With a gesture of sickened despair at this second mortal blow, Buzzard cut off ignition and battled with stick and rudder-bar to keep the plane from plummeting into the bog under keel.

Two-thirds of a mile from the bandits, it fell heavily into the water on one wing and pontoon, rocked a moment uncertainly, righted itself and floated—but disabled, useless, out of the battle.

Before the spray from the plane's heavy fall had fairly settled, Alan was on his feet, stripping off helmet and jacket, looking back at the flags where the bandits lay hidden and the reedy bog where Joyce had found a temporary refuge.

For a moment, numbed by this sudden crash of all his plans, he stared hopelessly across that watery thousand yards. The launch was stranded, miles away; Pedneault and Bill were both out of the reckoning; the plane was disabled; the bandits were free to recapture Joyce and escape in their canoes. In the space of five minutes his whole venture had come to nothing.

From the bandit's covert to the bog where Joyce was hiding was a scant two hundred yards. Whatever move he tried, he must act swiftly. In a very few minutes, when those men recovered their wits, they were going to seize their advantage; they were going to whip across, beat through those flags and find her again. She would never flit out of their hands a second time.

Whirling on Buzzard, he demanded sharply: "You can't taxi back there! Can't get me close enough to use the Browning?"

"Can't taxi a foot. Motor's out. They hit something; that's why the engine knocked on us. Think the wire to the timber box is cut."

"How long—us to fix that?"

"Take us an hour."

Even as Buzzard spoke, Alan saw the bandits rise up yonder in the flags and start shoving their canoes into the water. They were going to dart across and recapture Joyce.

At the sight of that, his last hesitancy was swept away. Snapping around to the fuselage cubby, he jerked out the frail canvas canoe and unfolded it. Buzzard had been thrusting pliers, wrench and tape into his pockets, but now he stopped and stared wide-eyed at his partner.

"Good Lord! You don't intend . . . ?"

"What else? Stand here and watch them hunt her down?"

"Across that open water? Right into their rifles? Them-shooting into you from cover? Alan, don't! For God's sake, don't try that!"

Alan jammed the last thwart-prop into its notch, lifted the canoe one-handed down upon the water, flung in the paddle and jumped down upon a float.

"Hand me the Browning and the cartridge web. Come alive! Don't you see they're starting across to get Joyce? Why shouldn't I go after them on open water? Larry Younge did once. Hand those things down!" "All right, then," Buzzard gave in. "But if you're going . . ." He seized the second paddle, caught up the light rifle which had been Joyce's and flung a leg over the cockpit edge. "I'm in on that, son."

Alan fended him back with an arm. "Stay here! That's what I mean! You can't help—out there. If you'd go, if they'd sink the boat, we'd both be out. Get busy on this plane. Fix it. You've got her rifle to fight 'em away from you. If they put me out of business, you can whip down and get Pedneault and fly over to join Bill. You three can carry it on with them."

He pushed off Buzzard's restraining hand, skirled away from the plane and headed west toward that acre of thick flags where the bandits had been driven to cover.

Pliers in hand but his work forgotten, Buzzard climbed upon a wing to watch the outcome of that fearfully uneven battle.

Alan's goal was a little patch of reeds three hundred and fifty yards from the bandits. It was a miserable place to fight from, when those four rifles yonder would be snarling at him from perfect hiding. The patch was merely a few yards square; the reeds, only a couple of feet high, were so sparse that one could see through the clump; and the approach to it across that open water was a gantlet of death.

But it was all the cover Alan saw, and it was better at least than nothing! The reeds meant that the water there was shallow enough for him to plant the Browning. By paddling up fast with the canoe bow-on, he believed he might get to the flags. Once there, once the Browning leaped into play, he could smother those rifles in a few seconds.

The bandits had been shoving their heavily laden canoes back through the flags to the open water of the pond lying between them and Joyce. But when they saw him skirling away from the plane, they stopped and watched him for a few moments until his intention became unmistakable. Alan saw them hold a quick council. And then, as though realizing how deadly that open water stretch was, how impossible to cross in the face of four rifles, they pulled the canoes back and secreted themselves in the flags and coolly waited.

When he was still two hundred yards from the reed patch and nearly six hundred from the bandits, they opened on him. A rifle boomed dully like a carbou Winchester, and its heavy bullet ricocheted off the water a dozen feet to his left. Another barked at him. A third kicked up spume a little nearer. Then the fourth, a sharp-cracking Savage, spoke out. Better aimed, in the hands of a deadly marksman, it sent a bullet so close past Alan's ear that involuntarily he winced and bent lower.

The second bullet splintered a hole through the blade of his paddle, up-lifted for a stroke. Its third, still closer, struck the water between paddle and canoe, ricocheted off, spun endwise and tore through the fat side of the canvas craft, missing the middle thwart by an inch. The fourth, elevated a little, sang past in air, harmlessly, but with a murderously close wh-a-ang that jerked a gasp from his lips.

The fifth bullet hit Alan.

His left hand felt numb and paralyzed. Glancing down at it, he saw the blood start spurting—falling in crimson splashes upon the white canvas. And then he saw that his ring finger, almost completely severed, hung by a mere shred of skin.

With one glance he realized his finger was beyond any surgery to restore. The dangling thing hampered his grip on the paddle. As though its loss was of no consequence in these moments of life and death, he took firm hold of it and pulled it off. The pain came then, in darting throbs that shot to his elbow and made him shiver.

As he gripped the paddle and turned his eyes ahead again toward the thin patch of reeds, he was hit a second time, by the sixth and last bullet of the "breed's" magazine. For a second he was dazed, so dazed he could not realize where he had been struck. Then he felt a pain like a hot iron pressed along his forehead; and some-

LET A MOTHER TELL YOU

Mrs. Albert Bolton, Toronto, gratefully speaks of what Eagle Brand did for her little daughter, Margaret Joan. "For the first three months she was nursed, but this did not seem to satisfy her, so after trying nearly everything, I read an advertisement in a newspaper about Eagle Brand and decided to try it. She took to it right away and there has been no trouble since. She has 14 teeth, all coming through without difficulty. Her flesh is firm, lovely straight limbs, good bone development and so contented. She won third prize at the Canadian National Exhibition Baby Show last September in Class D, with 102 entrants."

If you are unable to nurse your baby, or he is not gaining as he should, follow the advice of hundreds of thousands of other wise mothers and try Eagle Brand Milk. If you will send us your name and address, we shall be glad to send you helpful, free booklet on infant welfare, filled with advice and practical suggestions that will delight you.

Every photograph and letter published by the Borden Company is voluntarily sent us by a grateful parent or other relative.
