Large Bass Landed Near Arundel

One of the largest small-mouth bass ever taken in Laurentian waters was caught at Green Lake, about six miles from Arundel, Que., on Saturday by D. T. Waldron. It weighed five and a quarter pounds. Mr. Waldron was fishing with bait and when he found he had hooked a heavy fish he wasted no time in getting it into the boat. His prize catch was the largest ever landed in that lake. Few larger bass of this type are known to have been caught.

Blood Curdling Rumors

A rumor around town that men had been seen unloading a trunk from a car on Brownburg Road and burying it in a neighboring field, also that the trunk on investigation proved to contain a corpse—has not been substantiated by any further discoveries. The rumor afforded excitement for Montreal journalists who were prompt to weave a story around events which are most vaguely described and as yet unproven.

Dominion Loan is Floated in Britain

For the first time in 20 years a Dominion of Canada loan has been underwritten in London. The issue is of £15,000,000 in Dominion of Canada four per cent. bonds sold at par, repayable in 1953 and 1958 to meet maturing loans and help to forward the general development of Canada.

Arrangements for the loan have been in hand since some time before the World Economic Conference was assembled and the issue is expected to cause no surprise in the money market. It will open for public subscription this week through the Bank of Montreal.

Owing to unfavorable weather the Ayers Limited Picnic was postponed again last Saturday. It is understood that the event is now planned for Labor Day.

Regatta and Carnival at St. Agathe des Monts

Colorful Event Attracts Many Enthusiasts

St. Agathe des Monts, the St. Moritz of the Laurentians, was the scene of jovial activity during last week-end. Despite the unfavourable elements, with torrential rains and electrical storms, the Regatta and Carnival was attended by hundreds of visitors from far and near.

Well organized, and sponsored by the St. Agathe Chamber of Commerce, the Retail Merchants Association and the St. Agathe Ski Club, the Regatta offered attractions to all competitors. Over thirty silver cups and a profusion of prizes were donated by business men of the town and the entries surpassed the expectations of the executive and committee.

The streets and houses of St. Agathe were decorated for the occasion with flags, streamers and colored lanterns, and the regatta was held on picturesque Lac des Sables, bordering the town. Although the sky was threatening on Saturday, the yacht racing, swimming, diving and boating events were contested. Boats and motor launches were prettily decorated, and the continual roar of the speed boats on the lake, and the hum of a gyro-plane overhead, added notably to the gala spirit.

Music was rendered by the Scottish Highlanders, who toured the town, playing as they marched, and their smart white coats and swaying kilts made a pleasing sight.

On Saturday night, Rue St. Vincent was alive with merriment and clamour, the thoroughfare being thronged with natives and visitors in the carnival spirit; and although storms came intermittently the crowd enjoyed themselves into the morning hours.

Competitions for the championship of the North Country, for Jig Dancing and Fiddlers, furnished many a laugh for the onlookers, many of whom joined in the street dancing.

The Regatta on Sunday with more aquatic sports included a number of power boat races, which furnished interest for spectators, as a couple of boats spilled on the sharp turns.

Prize presentations and country dances before the grandstand offered the climax to this popular event, and it was generally hoped the St. Agathe Regatta and Carnival will become an annual festivity.

COSTLY GUN PRACTICE

Gunnery practice in the British Navy has run afoul of the world-wide pressure for economy. Recent estimates of the cost of a salvo from the nine 16-inch guns of the Nelson place the figure at more than $22,000. The practice of three battleships for a few minutes in the presence of King George a year ago—the vessels firing their 15-inch batteries—cost about $50,000.

Storm Did Damage at St. Philippe

Barns Burned, With Hay and Machinery

The early morning storm last Sunday, which scared many citizens from their beds and beat down local crops in a heavy fall of hail, spelled disaster to a farmer named Lauzon in the neighborhood of St. Philippe.

Lightning struck the out-buildings of this farm, completely destroying the barn in a fire which spread rapidly. There was no adequate water supply, nor any means by which the flames could be combatted, and the entire contents, including farm machinery, 60 hens, and 13 tons of hay, were destroyed. The outbreak occurred at around 3 a.m., in spite of the fact, (it was reported) that the barns were equipped with lightning rods.

An unfortunate circumstance in this fire, is that the loss is not covered by one cent of insurance; the coverage had elapsed only a week or two previously, and the proprietor, feeling the pinch of hard times, had failed to renew the policy.

Criminal Record Draws 8-yr. Sentence in Kingston

Frank L. Cox Known Here in Housebreaking Case

News has been received from the Chief Inspector of Ontario Provincial Police that a criminal, Frank L. Cox, arrested here several years ago on a vagrancy charge, and having since pursued his career of robbery and petty crime, has been sentenced to eight years in Kingston Penitentiary.

It is recalled Cox and his brother-in-law John Jones, were extradited from Scotland on suspicion of being implicated in the murder and robbery of an Ontario jewelry salesman in the Meritton and St. Catharines district. Their sentence however, hinges on six charges of Breaking and Entering, Jones also receiving a five year term.

The vagrancy charge was preferred before the local bench after Cox had been arrested for breaking into the Bethany St. apartment of Mrs. and the late Mr. Jos. Belanger, jewellers. It was hoped the lesser charge and minor sentence would prove a lesson and direct the young man to less questionable ways. But he emerged from St. Jerome and Bordeaux only to continue his depredations in another field. His latest sentence before the Ontario courts will at least curb a menacing criminal career for a longer period of time.

Dangers of Lightning

Experts who know something of the incalculable and resistless energy stored up in a lightning flash, who have studied the ways of electrical storms, once more point to the danger of seeking refuge under a tree. Get into a house if possible, or if necessary stay out in the open, but keep away from trees, they say. If in the open, and the storm is very severe, lie down flat on the ground. Lightning, seeking the easiest path into the earth, seizes upon the highest point in an area, and a human being standing erect may be that point.

An automobile is a safe place in a storm, its tires providing perfect insulation, but the car should not be parked under a tree nor driven beside large trees during a storm, to encounter the perils of falling limbs.

The mortality rate from lightning is very low, but it is a danger thoughtful persons will not ignore. Better a wetting in the open than the risk of tragedy in the sketchy shelter of a tree.

A Costly Encounter

Two men, the worse for liquor, engaged in a fistic encounter at 2 o'clock Sunday morning on Foundry street, with the result that one of them was hit forcibly against E. Lavigne's store window at the corner of Bethany. The plate glass window was smashed; the belligerents later agreed to repair the damage to the proprietor's satisfaction, which will put them to an expense in the neighborhood of seventy five dollars.

Lightning Fatality at St. Adolphe

Simeon Clement, a well-to-do farmer of Ste. Agathe, was killed by lightning on one of his farm properties at St. Adolphe de Howard, in a severe storm which lashed the Laurentian district last Friday evening.

Clement had taken refuge in a shanty with his 12 year old son Joseph, when the storm broke. The bolt appeared to strike through the chimney of a camp stove; the boy being the only witness of his father's tragic death.

Sewer System is Piece de Resistance at Council Deliberations

ABNORMAL WEATHER CONDITIONS

Extensive damage to trees and crops has resulted from recent storms, which were the severest attacks of wind, hail, and lightning known in this section for many years. Gardens, and fields of corn and grain, unprotected from the force of the elements, have been flattened down while trees have been blown down and the power and telephone systems damaged in many parts. Similar reports indicate these conditions were general through the lower Ottawa and Laurentian regions.

Edmund Charman Mourned at St. Andrews

Edmund Charman, a respected resident of St. Andrews East formerly of Montreal and Boston, passed away Friday night last at his home. He is survived by his wife, formerly May Hopper. Funeral services were held on Monday at St. Andrews.

The people of St. Andrews are feeling keenly the loss of Edmund Charman, who was laid away under the beautiful pines of the St. Andrews Protestant Cemetery, on Monday afternoon, July 31st. He filled no small place in the social life of the village and countryside.

The St. Andrews Reading Circle will miss his genial presence and his valued contributions in literary as well as in scientific fields.

Mr. Charman was born in Wallace, N. S., in the year 1855. For about 40 years he was in the employ of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, first in Boston and later in Montreal. The esteem in which he was held by his associates in the Singer Company was made evident by the significant fact that all the living members of the office staff with which he worked in Montreal were present at his funeral service. Among these was an old man over 90 years of age.

Readers of The Watchman will recall Mr. Charman's valued contributions, tinged with such a fine strain of humor. He always had kindly thoughts for everyone, and the quality of his Christian life will remain a very favourite memory among his neighbors and fellow citizens.

The deep sympathy of the whole community goes out to Mrs. Charman.

The time to have preached economy was during the boom from 1926 to 1929, not today.

The regular monthly meeting of the Town Council was held on Wednesday in the Town Hall, Mayor A. Larocque presiding with Aldermen J. A. Rice, J. P. MacKimmie, C. Miller, Joseph Speight, O. Laurin, H. Lamarche, Legault, R. Ledoux present.

Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed and reports of Finance Committee accepted with accounts ordered paid.

A letter was received from the Royal Victoria Hospital re Albert Chapman, who for the past year and a half has been under special treatment for his eyes. A splendid improvement has been made, and on motion of Ald. MacKimmie, seconded by Ald. Miller, the council voted to contribute $15.00 per month, for next three months, on the understanding that the Red Cross will assume a like amount.

On behalf of the Lachute Brass Band, Mr. Jos. Belanger appeared to seek permission to erect a kiosk in the Park. The request was granted on motion of Ald. MacKimmie, seconded by Ald. Ledoux.

The secretary reported that he had duly billed all delinquents for taxes, aggregating upwards of $8,000, with very slight returns, and in consequence the accounts will now be handed in for collection.

At many stages of town activities the question of sewerage and drains has occupied much thought, with consequent variance of opinions that has put the quietus upon an organized general system. Past councils have granted consent piecemeal to varied petitioners on different streets which have been confronted by the seriousness of the sewerage problem, and the council has granted and sometimes ordered the execution of drain laying for such services.

A couple of months ago, the Council gave consent to the East End for a sewerage system, which has now been put through to the corner of Clyde Street, although excavators experienced much difficulty at Muir's corner, where the Main and East End converge. Numerous arguments were brought forward as to the continuance of this drain down the Main Street, instead of passing down Clyde Street as intended. In consequence, the Town Council were faced with two petitions from contending parties. These each bore 23 signatures, and were creative of great discussion, and the council adjourned without any final decision being reached. In the meantime another blockade to general improvement has been created.

Mayor A. Larocque expressed himself quite freely, that he had seen lots of temporary work that was ineffective, and he thought anything done now should be with an eye to permanency.

Hon. Arthur Sauve Honored in Celebration at St. Eustache

The tribute paid to the Hon. Arthur Sauvé last Saturday, when several thousand of his friends and supporters gathered at St. Eustache to extend their congratulations on attaining his 25th. year of political activity was very gratifying. Friends in Argenteuil are equally proud, and rejoice that he has won such respect and confidence, that has witnessed his rise from a farmer's son to a journalistic career. Then followed his entry into the political arena, where for many years he was leader of His Majesty's Loyal Opposition in the Province of Quebec, and he is now Postmaster-General of the Dominion.

Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, minister of railways, Hon. Alfred Duranleau, minister of marine, and Hon. Maurice Dupre, solicitor-general, were the three main speakers. All three stressed the discussion of political problems of the day while Mr. Sauvé confined himself to expressing thanks for the compliments paid him by his fellow ministers and the acclaim given him by party supporters. He assured his hearers the demonstration would spur him on to continue to give "my best for the country and the province."

Refused Co-operation.

"We have asked for cooperation and ideas and these have been refused by the Liberal party" said Hon. Maurice Dupre. "Measures to relieve unemployment and retain article 98 of the Criminal Code found the opposition party blocking the government path," the solicitor-general charged, "and that is something history will not forgive."

"The next election will not be fought on tariffs or on agricultural matters, or on banks, or railways, but will be between the element of order and the elements of disorder," said Mr. Dupre. "The fight is between protectors of property and those who would destroy it, between Premier Bennett and Mr. Woodsworth."

"We have asked the Liberals on which side they are and Mr. Lapointe (Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former minister of justice) replied that they were neither on the left nor the right but simply Liberals. That reply is evasive. It is merely a formula, almost a retreat."

The flirting is going on between Hon. Mr. King (Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader), Mr. Lapointe and Hon. Vincent Massey (Liberal organizer in chief), on one side, and Mr. Woodsworth and Miss Agnes MacPhail (a C.C.F. supporter) on the other. No matter what scheme is devised they will find us blocking their path. It is impossible for the Liberals to gain power at the next elections, hence the flirting with Mr. Woodsworth.

It was with heads held high that government ministers could come before the Canadian people and discuss topics of the day because they had knowledge of the valuable accomplishments of the government, said Hon. Alfred Duranleau after paying tribute to Mr. Sauvé. The value of the government's work could

WEST INDIES BUYING CANADIAN MOTOR CARS

The eastern group of the islands of the West Indies are showing marked interest in Canadian motor cars, reports Canadian National Steamships, whose vessel the "Chomedy" carried an unusually large shipment of cars on its last departure from Montreal. The cars were of the smaller, less expensive type, and in every case had the steering wheel set over to the right in the English style to meet the "keep-to-the-left" rule of the West Indies.

St. Mungo's Services Commemorate First Pastorate

Dr. Clark, pastor emeritus of St. Andrew's Church, Westmount, was the officiating minister at St. Mungo's Church, Cushing, on Sunday last, in commemoration of the coming of the first regular minister, one hundred years ago.

Morning and evening services were held, and Dr. Clark's sermons were much enjoyed by a large audience; also Mrs. C. Griffiths of Hudson, in her beautiful and appealing solo, "Jesus is Calling", in which she was accompanied at the piano by Miss Claire Hodgson, also of Hudson, niece of Mrs. F. Fuller. The church was decorated with flowers, two memorial wreaths also being placed, one on the Rev. Mr. Mair's grave and one on the grave of the late beloved pastor, Rev. Jas. Fraser, who served St. Mungo's Church and congregation so faithfully for many years.

These wreaths were made by Mrs. Jas. Cleland, of Montreal, and Cushing, who records almost a life-time connection with the work of this Church, and who though unable to attend the services herself, contributed her part in this beautiful way and in this task of loving service.

Rev. John Maclean intends giving further details of the life and work of Rev. Mr. Mair on Sunday, Aug. 6th., this being considered the actual date of his coming to Cushing. The Church itself has not yet attained its century mark, but will observe its birthday celebration a few years later.

French-Canadian audiences are quick to appreciate attempts however successful, by English-speaking visitors from other provinces to address them in their own tongue, and almost invariably these efforts are reciprocated. An illustration of this exchange of courtesies was given at a recent Liberal meeting at Trois Pistoles when the Hon. J. C. Elliott of London spoke for a few minutes in French as a neighborly gesture. Mr. J. H. Rousseau, N.P., of Trois Pistoles, in thanking the speakers, spoke for ten minutes in English as a reciprocity of Mr. Elliott's courtesy. These exchanges of good will are common in this province and do much to create a favourable impression in the minds of fellow-citizens from other parts of Canada.

THE CAPTAIN'S CORNER

For Our Boy Readers

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER WE BOTH WENT SEARCHING

Dear Boys :

He had a fishing rod in one hand and a net in the other and to my surprise as we climbed into the boat the boy said, "We go for Turtles."

"Turtles!" I murmured, overcome by astonishment, for I had yet to learn that Canadian rivers possessed such things. "Yes, turtles," replied my eleven-year-old companion who though small in size made up for his lack of inches by great determination of character.

"Yes, turtles," he repeated, as if to make quite sure that I understood, "then a pike, if we are at all lucky."

In face of such definite assurance it would have been a waste of valuable time to protest further, so the young fisherman took to his oars and we progressed down the river.

Have you ever sat back lazily in a boat when it is carrying you down a smooth silent river? If you have you will realize perhaps a little of the pleasure that was mine.

The sun was setting in a crimson glow, reflecting on the green of the banks and the tall reeds that almost touched the side of our craft. Every now and again the surface of the water would be disturbed by a loud splash as a fish jumped, turned a half circle, and then vanished out of sight. Dragon flies sped on their way into the deepening shadows, resting for a brief moment on the yellow head of a water lily that showed half shyly above the water.

Perhaps, however, what interested me most was the appearance of my young companion. He was brown, brown as a berry. His small face was tanned as were his bare feet, legs and arms. I would have liked to see him smile, but his lips were firmly closed above a strong little chin while he worked at his oars.

I turned my eyes away from him to see where we were, and discovered that in another minute we should be rounding a bend. There is great fun going around corners, for you never know what is waiting for you.

Suddenly the boy stood up, so suddenly that the boat rocked. "There he is," he shouted, "I see him."

I looked in the direction of his out-flung arm and saw only the woods bathed in golden colour, the mystic charm of our surroundings, and young Canada gazing earnestly towards the object of his quest—which he had found.

"How splendid!" he went on seizing his net, "Aren't you pleased you came?" "Very much indeed," I replied heartily and he was quite satisfied, though of course we were not thinking of the same thing.

Your affectionate friend,
THE CAPTAIN.

When the Redskin Ruled

THE CAPTAIN'S SERIAL
STORY OF ADVENTURE

Special to The Watchman

"No bond so strong as that of common purpose."
—Smile.

The visit to Frankie's pony was a great success. Perhaps at first Walter felt inclined to make unfavourable, if not unkind, comparison between the small animal's rough and shaggy coat and the sleek, well-groomed horses he had been accustomed to ride in his former home . . . but when, on the Canadian boy's invitation, he mounted Tim and experienced his first bare-backed gallop in an adjoining field, he was quite ready to admit that it is not always wise to judge by appearance.

"That's the first time in my life I have ridden without a saddle," he exclaimed joyously on his return, leaping lightly to the ground. "Do you always ride him with only a cloth, Frank?"

"Oh, I have a saddle, which I use when we go long distances, as it is useful for carrying things; but Tim and I both prefer to be without it . . . Don't we, old boy?" and the youngster patted the neck of his pony affectionately.

At that moment Edgar, who had been an interested witness of his chum's performances, gave a sharp cry and started in rub his arm vigorously. "Something stung me horrible!" he said in explanation. "And it's not the first time either, for I believe I am bitten all over." Frank wanted to laugh, but checked himself on seeing the English boy's distress. "Those are mosquitoes," he explained. "They always go for new-comers, but don't worry, they will leave you alone when you've been here some time—You have been bitten, too?" he added, turning to Walter.

"I felt several stings and wondered what it could be. Are they dangerous?" asked Walter, with a look of concern.

"Not the slightest, but when we go indoors I will give you some coal-oil to rub on the stings; then you will get relief." Edgar looked astonished again. "Coal-oil—what's that?" he asked curiously.

"What we burn in lamps, of course . . . Don't you call it that in England?"

Walter grinned. "We don't; and I am beginning to realize that not only have we to learn new customs in this country of yours but a new language as well! You must think English people are very stupid."

Frankie looked at his two new friends with interest. "I don't want you to think that at all," he said earnestly. "You see, I am only a boy, and I know nothing of the land you come from—that would be as strange to me as my country now is to you. All I want is to be your friend, and that more than anything I can think of."

There was something so wistful in his voice and in the look on his face that Edgar immediately responded to the appeal. "So you shall," he replied impulsively seizing Frankie's hand in his own, and shaking it heartily. "You shall be our real chum and teach us all the things we ought to know. And," he added with a laugh, "that will be about the biggest job you have ever undertaken!"

He glanced at Walter, who also shook the Canadian boy by the hand. "It's a compact," he agreed with enthusiasm. "We three united by a common bond. We will stick to each other no matter what happens." The words were carelessly spoken even though they held a note of seriousness, but they were to be remembered long afterwards by all three boys in the anxious dangerous days that lay ahead.

A SAD MISTAKE By Aunt Jean

The kettle is singing on the hob, Black Pussie is fast asleep, Said Naughty little Missie Mouse, "Right through this crack I'll creep."

"There are cheese crumbs by the table foot, And cake crumbs by the door, I am sure that I will not be heard If I dash across the floor."

The cook is away. Black Pussie's claws I do not fear the least; She is fast asleep, I hear her snore, I'll have a splendid feast."

She made a dash and reached the cheese, Black Pussie moved her paws, Her whiskers twitched, eyes opened wide, She stretched out cruel claws.

"Dear Little Miss Mouse!" she purred, "It's just my dinner time, How very sweet of you to come, You'll fill the bill just fine."

Poor Missie's eyes bulged out with fear, She raced towards the crack, But Madam Puss was quite near, And seized her by the back.

"Oh, Mother dear!" she squeaked and squeaked, "She's got me! Oh, oh, oh!" And mother mouse squeaked sadly back, "My Child! I told you so."

A LITTLE HEN CALLED CACKLES

All of the hens at Butternut Grove were quite well behaved hens, except one. This hen was one of a group of black and white hens that were the pride of Madame Bijou's heart. She had imported them from her old home in France and after a few days' apparent loneliness and unrest, they had settled down in their new home, going about searching the Canadian soil as unconcerned as they had scratched the soil in their yard in France.

All but Mignon, as Madame Bijou called her. A strange name for a hen you will think, but Madame Bijou realized this hen was lonely just as she herself had been lonely when she had come to Canada so many years ago, and talked to the little hen as though she was a child, calling her pet names and feeding her little extra bits of food when she saw her standing with drooping wings and with one foot tucked up out of sight.

Sitting down beside her, she would stroke her softly and coax her to eat the soft mashed potato mixed with milk and butter, pushing her beak down into the dish until Mignon would start pecking the food half-heartedly. Gradually, she grew strong and well and was quite ready to hop up on to her mistress' knee, eating out of her hand.

Madame Bijou was rather proud of this, and petted her more and more, letting her out of the henyard every day for exercise and fresh green grass.

Every day Mignon slipped away and laid an egg, beside a log near a half-used hay stack. She was so quick about it that Madame Bijou never missed her until she began to sit on the eggs; then she grew quite alarmed and sent Bob, the hired man, to look for her.

Bob was not fond of work and did not search for Mignon very thoroughly. He passed close by her hiding place, but Mignon had crouched down very low on her nest, watching Bob with keen bright eyes as he kicked the hay stack rather crossly as he passed it, muttering to himself something that sounded very much like this, "I wish Madame Bijou would look for her own old hens. I've got enough to do in the garden, and with the cattle, without playing nursemaid to an old hen."

If Mignon could have understood what he was saying, and replied, she would most likely have told him that she was not an old hen, and did not want him to look for her; that she was quite capable of looking after herself and her nestful of eggs; and that the quicker he got away from that part of the barnyard, the better she would be pleased.

When Bob went back to the rose garden where Madame Bijou was waiting for him, he told her he had looked everywhere thoroughly and could not find her pet hen. Madame felt very badly indeed. She was quite sure that Mignon had died of loneliness, or that a fox or weasel had killed her.

By now the sun had set and lights showed themselves at the farm windows, and with the remark that no doubt Walter and Edgar were both tired, Frankie led the way indoors.

When the visitors had retired to their rooms Frankie, as was his invariable custom, sat down with his legs crossed at his mother's feet, and glanced up at his father who was filling his pipe. He did not speak until the little curls of grey smoke were slowly rising towards the parlour ceiling, and then he said:

"Dad, how long are our friends staying?" Mr. Wilson glanced down at his son's eager little face and noted with secret satisfaction the animated look in the boy's eyes.

"Why, do you ask that, son?" he replied. Frankie took hold of one of his Mother's hands, as if silently seeking her support. "Oh, because those English boys, Edgar and Walter, are fine, and we have become chums, but if they go away—" and he suddenly finished, his voice breaking. Mrs. Wilson glanced over the boy's head at her husband, and there was a world of meaning in the look she gave him. He nodded silently and then said, "Don't you worry, sonny. Mr. Dickson has asked my advice on business matters and in all probability he will locate quite near us. He tells me he was a farmer himself in England, and wants to do the same work here. And you may be sure I will help him all I can, not only because it's the right thing to do, but because of what you now tell me."

"Because of Walter and Edgar?" answered Frankie, looking puzzled.

"Just that," Mr. Wilson answered slowly. "Listen Frank, your Mother and I have often wished such companions for you, and now they have arrived you can depend we shall do our very best to keep them for you."

The boy sprang to his feet and flung his arms around his father's neck.

"Oh Dad, you're fine . . . You are just the finest man in all the world," he whispered.

It was now Mr. Wilson's turn to flash an unspoken message to his wife, and her response also seemed to agree with his boy's affectionate remark.

(To be continued next week.)

It is generally considered . .

that Winter is the Social Season. But it is strange, more social visiting and impromptu calling is done during the Summer . . . That is why it is wise to keep in stock canned meats, desserts and vegetables—and wiser still to keep in mind a phone call will bring you supplies of fresh and prepared meats, fruit and vegetables, at any time . . . Call 136.

Jos. Speight, Butcher . . .

"Keep searching, Bob," she said rather sadly. "You may find her body or some part of her, some place, that will at least tell us what happened to her."

Bob promised that he would, but did not keep his word, which was very wrong of him. People should never make promises that they do not intend to keep. It is cheating no matter how small a promise it is that is not kept.

It suited Mignon quite well that Bob did not make any more attempts to find her. She stole out at daybreak and found enough grain scattered about to satisfy her hunger, took a drink from the water trough that Madame Bijou had placed in a convenient place for her dogs, then walked carefully back to her nest, turning her head first to one side then the other, keeping watch to see if anyone was spying on her.

Madame Bijou kept lamenting about her loss, until one day her tiny niece from the city came to visit her, and on being told of Mignon's disappearance, stood for a time in deep thought before bursting out with a joyful cry of "I know what has happened. She's hiding somewhere cracking out little hens from her eggs!"

Her aunt laughed heartily at the funny way she expressed her idea, then shook her head sadly. "No, no, Celeste!" she said, "Mignon has never laid an egg, I am quite sure."

"How do you know, dear aunt?" Celeste asked. "Did you follow her about all the time?"

"What a funny little niece it is," her aunt said, laughing again, "always so sure that what she thinks must be right. No, I did not follow Mignon around all day. Your Aunt Marie had something else to do than follow a hen about all the time, but Mignon was not a strong hen, nor a smart hen; I am quite sure if she were alive at all she would come to me to be fed."

But Madame Bijou found to her surprise that Mignon was a smart hen, smart enough to hide away her nest and hatch out every egg. Twelve little black chickens, which would one day be speckled black and white like herself, and one little snow-white one. Madame was dozing in the sun in her favorite chair in the rose garden one morning about ten o'clock when strange sounds aroused her. What could it be? Not a hen and chickens surely, and in her rose garden! Where could they have come from?

In her hurry to get up to chase them away, Madame forgot to grasp her cane for support. She stumbled against the step ladder which Bob had been using to stand on, to tie some climbing roses up to their trellis, the storm of the evening before having blown them loose. The step ladder fell with a crash startling Mignon—for it was Mignon who was hunting for worms for her family behind the trellis, in the soft earth. Mignon flew out almost into Madame's face, cackling wildly in indignant surprise at this unexpected disturbance, while her little family crouched in terror in the grass, not daring to make a sound.

"Mignon! Mignon!" almost screamed Madame Bijou. "Mignon! where did you come from? My little one, where have you hidden yourself all this time?"

Leaning over, Madame attempted to stroke her pet, but Mignon was not in the mood for caresses. She had been frightened rather badly and her family had disappeared. Clucking and cackling by turns she darted behind the trellis, Madame Bijou following her as quickly as she could, very much afraid that her pet would disappear again. But she did not. There she was racing madly about calling her family to her.

A wee white chick popped up out of the grass and ran to her. "A white chicken," almost screamed Madame again. "Mignon, where did you get it? Ah! ah! you wicked one, do not hurt it!"—for Mignon was pecking the white chicken most unmercifully. "It is not the chicken's fault that it is not of your own pure breed, but a throw-back to some former relatives of yours."

Picking the shivering little white chicken up Madame Bijou covered it with her lace scarf. "Rest here my little one," she said, until your mother's temper improves. She is frightened and cross just now." Holding the little chicken closely she stood watching Mignon gather her family around her and stalk away still clucking nervously.

We shall be hearing more about Mignon and Cackles next week.

Lovingly,
Aunt Jean.

50 Years Ago

Friday, Aug. 3rd., 1883.

While playing in the Brownsburg Dynamite Mill with her brother, a young girl Katie McAllister was caught in some gearing and suffered a broken arm and shoulder.

John Newton of Morin Flats, while preparing wood for the Bobbin Factory of Lachute, was struck with a piece of scantling thrown from a circular saw, suffering slight injury.

The body of Captain Webb, renowned swimmer, was found floating on the Niagara River, following an unsuccessful attempt to swim the rapids.

Quebec Board of Trade have adopted a resolution in favour of a bi-weekly mail service between Canada and Great Britain.

The Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, it is announced, will spend the coming Autumn in London.

At a public meeting convened by order of the Agricultural Society, Lachute was finally selected for location of the Society's permanent buildings.

Friday, July 31st., 1908.

The tremendous heat of the past two days concluded with a severe storm, and Mr. Jas. Catton, of Beech Ridge, had a barn struck by lightning, containing 52 loads of hay, a bull, and a number of fowl, which were consumed by fire.

Dr. F. W. Howe, of Toronto, was the guest of Dr. G. A. Clunie this week.

Herbert Tomalty, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tomalty of Edina, passed away the 12th. inst., after a brief illness, in his nineteenth year.

Two hay cart drives were enjoyed this week by the young people of Carillon. A moonlight excursion is planned for Aug. 1st. aboard the Steamer Princess.

Mrs. Wm. Canning, of Stonefield, was the guest of Miss L. Clark at Mount Maple last week.

A Pilgrimage Excursion via C.P.R. from Calumet and Grenville to Ste. Anne de Beaupre, is advertised for Aug. 4th., 1908.

"ERRATUM"

The following gem is the result of a mix-up in an Auction Sale announcement and the printer's report of a Wedding. Taken from an exchange and submitted by one of our readers:

"Married at the home of the bride's respected residence, on Thursday, Jan. 27th., Miss Edith Drinkwater, by the Rev. 18 head of Shorthorn cattle, consisting of four bridesmaids, dressed in pale blue, with ten milk pails, and four pitchforks. They had long tulle veils, also forty-six head of hogs, including the groom's father from North Dakota where he is engaged in missionary work, immunized by the double process, gathered in the spacious dining room after the ceremony, and partook of 300 bushels of seed oats, 1000 bushels of corn, and 10 large sacks of millet and Alfalfa. The bride is the youngest daughter of "Our Trusty" incubator, capacity 600 eggs. One John Deer five-roomed cottage, and a trip to Oklahoma. After which they draw 10 p.c. interest from date. Free lunch at noon.

Coins of Eleventh Century

Copper coins about nine hundred years old and a small temple have been found as the result of excavations carried out by the Kashmir state archeological department at Naran Bag, in the Sindh valley. The place is about 20 miles from Gandarbal. The excavations revealed a miniature temple and a basement of a hall, 110 feet by 60 feet, on a plinth 9 feet high. A large cistern for receiving Pula-water carved out of a single block 15 feet by 7 feet by 6 feet was discovered together with a few idols and pedestals. Three Sharda Inscriptions were also found.

Martin Luther's Passing

Martin Luther died on February 18, 1546, at Eisleben in Saxony, where he had been born 63 years before. He had paid a visit to the birthplace in order to arbitrate a dispute between Counts Albrecht and Gebhard of Mansfeld. He successfully accomplished his mission and preached several times to crowded congregations, but the exposure to the inclement weather during the journey and the protracted negotiations proved too great a strain for his infirm body. The cause of death is usually given as heart failure.

Original Mince Pies

Mince pies date back many years and were popular as early as 1596, when they were known as "mutton pies," says an article in the Washington Post. In early times they were baked in an oblong box or coffin-like shape to represent the manger in which the Christ-child lay and derived their association because of their highly spiced character, which brought to mind the gifts of incense and myrrh of the Magi. Mince pies were supposed to represent good luck and for each pie consumed one would have one day's good luck.

DECISIONS FROM THE COURTS

SELECTED RULINGS

No Secret Voting.

The provincial legislature and a municipal council (says the St. Thomas Municipal World) are both representative bodies administering the affairs of their province and municipality, and their constituents are entitled to know how their representatives vote on all questions. Some years ago the Municipal Act provided for the election of warden by ballot, and the legality of such action in the county of Oxford (Ontario) was questioned and it was found that such provision was ultra vires of the legislature. At the first session thereafter, and on the first day a bill was passed repealing the section providing for vote by ballot. Councils have no authority to appoint officials or decide any question by ballot or any other method of secret voting.

No Extras Allowed on Contract.

A contractor who tenders for city paving is presumed in law to have examined the terrain, and no extras can be allowed because heavy grading charges may be encountered after the contract has been awarded and the work begun.

Guillaume Saint Pierre, K.C., chief city attorney, has given this opinion to the administration in the case of a contractor who, having secured a street paving contract now finds himself faced with grading up to seven feet deep over a distance of almost a mile. His request for extras, therefore, is being refused.

Municipalities Not Obligated for Relief.

An important judgment was handed down in a Hamilton division court which may have a far-reaching effect. It was to the effect that municipalities are not under legal obligation to take care of all who are in distress because of unemployment. Commenting editorially on this decision an Ontario exchange remarks:

"It appears that a Hamilton man was deprived of relief by the city because he was the owner of an automobile and a radio. He entered suit against the authorities on behalf of his children and himself, and the decision of the division court was that municipal governments are not bound to provide relief; that any assistance given is a privilege and not a right, so far as the recipient is concerned.

"It might be well for a good many people to realize just what is involved in a judgment of that kind. There is a certain kind of individual who looks upon relief as legally due him, who openly declares that the municipality must take care of him and his family, and who believes that the civic authorities have no other alternative but to provide him with the necessities of life.

"This Hamilton judgment shows that Canadian municipalities are under no such obligation that they are not legally compelled to provide food and shelter for those in need. There is, however, a moral obligation which can hardly be ignored, and is not being ignored. Municipal authorities everywhere recognize this and act accordingly, but that does not alter the situation that anything that is done is not done because those citizens have a legal claim, but because the authorities voluntarily assume the duties of providing relief.

"In view of the fact that a number of municipalities have announced that they will shut off giving relief after a certain date, it is well that this principal has been established by a court decision, and those who may have a wrong impression of the obligations of municipalities will understand."

"NO PASSING 500 FEET"

"No passing 500 feet" is a sign that is being placed on hills in some American centres, and it seems to be necessary in all hilly country. Many of the highway accidents are caused by the practice of taking a long and steep hill on high and trying to pass a motor car that is proceeding slowly and more safely, the speeder running into a car that emerges over the brow at a critical juncture. If passing were forbidden on hills and drivers were compelled to keep well to the right when approaching the top, the spectacle of ditched cars on hills would soon be a thing of the past.

SCHOOL AGE LIMIT IS RAISED

An important measure, which is considered beneficial to the pupil as well as an advantage to the taxpayer, is announced in Niagara Falls, Ont., to the effect that children who are about to start to school in that city must now be not less than six years of age.

DIRECTOR OF SCHOOL BOARD FOR 17 YEARS, CANNOT READ OR WRITE

Michael Wolohowicz, who has served as a director of the Dickson City (Pa.) School Board for 17 years and who has filled the office of board treasurer for a long time, testified in court recently that he cannot read or write and that he never went to school a day in his life. As treasurer of the board he receives a salary of $4,000 annually. The witness was asked to read one section of the school code, but Wolohowicz replied he could not read a word of the code which he and other directors are charged with violating.

Road Elevation Cause of Damage Suit.

The Quebec Public Service Commission awarded Clayton J. Hill, of Richmond, $1,200 for depreciation of the value of his land in that municipality as result of the elevation by the Department of Roads, Quebec, of the highway alongside of his property.

Evidence revealed that Hill's property is situated in the Town of Richmond, alongside of a bridge over the Canadian National Railways' tracks, and near the provincial highway. In 1887, Mr. Justice Brooks, of the Superior Court of Saint-Francois, awarded him $300 for depreciation of the value of his land as result of the elevation by the then Grand Trunk Railway of the bridge over the railway tracks on his land. The surface of the bridge was raised six inches, and then, in 1928, the provincial Department of Roads, deemed it necessary to rebuild the approaches to the bridge, elevating the level of the highway alongside of Hill's property as a result.

Hill consequently asked damages from the Quebec Government, claiming that his property had depreciated in value as a result.

Before the commission, the Government claimed that the judgment handed down in 1887 according Hill damages of $300, included not only then existing damages, but damages which might result in years to come from the action of the railway in raising the height of the bridge, and thus depreciating the value of the land through its level being reduced below that of the bridge, its approaches and the nearby highway.

The commission, however, rejected this claim, holding that the 1887 judgment applied only to damages existing at that time, and that its scope could not be extended to damages suffered many years later. The provincial department had raised the level of the highway and had thus depreciated the value of the nearby land, the commission held; previously, the land was valued at $6,000, and now its value was set at but $4,000. All the reduction, of course, could not be attributed to the Department of Road's action, part being attributed to the results of the depression. The commission, then assessed depreciation as result of the depression at $800, and awarded Hill a total of $1,200.

Alderman Voted Twice.

Acquittal was given Alderman Alfred Glew, of Verdun, Que., on charge of having voted twice at a last municipal election. In handing down his decision, Judge Cusson agreed with the main points of the defence.

The charge against the alderman was that he first voted in his own name, as a tenant, and then in his wife's, as a proprietor.

The alderman admitted that he voted as a tenant, claiming that he had every right to do so. He also admitted having voted as a proprietor, claiming that under the Quebec civil code he was the master of his household and therefore entitled to use his wife's vote, which was, in her case, under the law, automatically forfeit. As for his having voted twice at the same election, he maintained that since the Quebec Legislature had seen fit to institute two sets of elections—one for tenants and one for proprietors—there was more than one election. If one election had taken place six months after the other, he pointed out, it would become clear that they were different and that the act of casting a vote at each would not involve the voter in an offence, provided he was otherwise entitled. He argued that, although the elections coincided as to time, they were none the less distinct.

DECREE CONCERNS ISSUING OF FIREARMS PERMITS

Magistrates and chiefs of municipal police will henceforward have no authority to issue permits for possession and carrying firearms. The responsibility for this important duty, on and after the 15th. inst., will devolve upon the respective heads of the Provincial Police controlled by the Attorney-General, or, where there is no organized Provincial Police force, upon commanding officers of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. This decree is an amendment to curb the promiscuous use of firearms.

COW HAS RIGHT-OF-WAY OVER AUTOMOBILE

Which has the right-of-way, a cow being driven along the highway or a motor vehicle operator? Wisconsin's new State traffic code, says the National Safety Council, settles this point along with many others, on a common sense basis.

The auto driver is presumed to have more sense than the cow, even though some drivers seem intellectually inferior to "bossy." The cow, therefore, is given the right-of-way and the driver must govern himself accordingly.

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 2.—Amos 'n' Andy, the famous negro comedians of the air, ran foul of the Canadian authorities by some remarks they made during a broadcast on July 4th. in which they cast reflection on the British Empire, according to the views of many Canadians who were listening in, and protested to the Canadian Radio Commission.

Since the program was sent out over Canadian stations, an apology was asked from the company which sponsors the nightly program, and the threat was made that unless it was forthcoming they would be denied broadcasting facilities beginning July 25th.

At the last minute the sponsor company came to terms with Thomas Maher, radio commissioner, who was in New York at the time. It was agreed that when the pair of entertainers made a personal appearance in Toronto, which would be broadcast, they would make suitable amends. Hector Charlesworth, commission chairman, personally looked over the script of the proposed apology to make sure it was all right.

The Real Thing.

So much 'return of prosperity' balldoo has been broadcast that critical readers have come to examine closely all reports of a rosy nature which come out from time to time. Reports of increased employment this spring did not mean much to those in the know, because they were seasonal gains and were less than normal; in fact the employment curve in Canada, corrected for seasonal change, fell steadily from Jan. 1st. to June 1st.

But at last we have an upturn 'as is an upturn'. The July employment returns, which became available in Ottawa, last week-end, showed the best real gain, with one possible exception, since the depression began. In fact, in Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia, the advance in employment on July 1st, was greater than on the same date in any previous year since the record began to be kept.

The employment gains of the past three months gave nearly 80,000 Canadians jobs, as reported by the 8,125 large employers of labor who report to the federal government every month.

This is a substantial improvement. Just the same, to keep level-headed about it, we shall have to add another 300,000 to the army of returning employees before 1929 levels are approached. If the gains of the last three months could be projected another twelve months forward, without any loss this fall from seasonal inactivity, then, but not till then, would conditions approaching a prosperity normal be attained.

Forty New Canadian Plants

In the first half of the current year, 25 U. S. branch plants were established in Canada, four British branches, and 40 new factories of Canadian origin started. Eight of the Canadian plants were for food products, eight for wood and paper, five for iron and steel goods, four for shoes and slippers, five for chemicals, three for oils, and the others for varied products.

The cost of living continues to fall and has now reached the lowest point in many years.

Ottawa Journal Pays Fine Tribute to Sir George Perley

"The Acting Prime Minister"

Word from London tells that Premier Bennett will return to Canada about the middle of August, comments the Ottawa Journal. This, therefore, may be the appropriate time to speak of the work performed in Mr. Bennett's absence by the acting Prime Minister, Sir George Perley.

By almost common consent, it has been a very fine work. In Ottawa, at all events—and Ottawa's contacts with government are wider and more intimate than in other parts of Canada—Sir George's conduct of affairs has been generally as "a fine administrator."

His understanding and handling of the problems of the Civil Service are especially noted. It is unfortunate, but true, that in the case of too many politicians, including some in cabinets, the traditions and place of the Civil Service in government are but understood imperfectly. As a consequence, and almost inevitably, there is a tendency to regard the Service chiefly as a rich field for patronage, to disparage its work and personnel, to exercise a meddlesome fussiness over its ordinary activities. More than one department or branch of the Service has had its usefulness impaired by an inexperienced or incompetent minister.

From all of these defects, Sir George Perley is free. A veteran of the public service—it is well nigh upon forty years since he first entered Parliament—experienced in government at home and abroad, he knows the part a civil service plays in a country's administration.

But there is something else. It is the something of Sir George's personal qualities: the qualities of integrity, of courtesy and good breeding, of kindness and consideration for others, John Morley once spoke of the people who have "a mercurious tenacity about trifles". There is no such small defect in the character of Sir George Perley. Clear and simple in his language, orderly in his processes of thought, calm in his judgments, he knows that most problems will solve themselves if let alone, or if treated with patience, he refuses to get excited. They are qualities which years ago, made Perley Sir Robert Borden's trusted adviser, which have carried him through more than a quarter of a century to posts of increasing responsibility.

Also there is Sir George Perley's disinterested patriotism, his devotion to public duty. Canadian Privy Councillor, Knight, member of the Imperial War Cabinet, Canada's first Overseas Minister and veteran of Parliaments and Cabinets, there is little left for his personal ambition. Yet, today, in his seventy-sixth year, an age, which finds most men regretfully watching life's sunset, Sir George Perley is the directing head of Canada's Government. Time does not wither nor custom stale his seemingly perpetual youth. The carriage is just as erect, the handshake as firm, the hair as black (well, not quite perhaps) as in the far, brave days of yore. All that time has brought is a more mellow humor, a greater tolerance, a richer and more kindly philosophy.

A Conservative, with everything in life to conserve, Sir George is no reactionary. His wealth and political label notwithstanding, there is with him a sympathy for the underdog, an attitude toward reform of tolerant inquiry. Nor is he unacquainted with those issues, problems and policies which concern the less fortunate of his countrymen. With all social and economic questions, with matters such as old age pensions unemployment insurance and rural credits, he is thoroughly and sympathetically familiar. On more than one occasion he has surprised the House of Commons not merely with his knowledge of such things, but with the revelation of the support which he could accord them.

About Sir George Perley, in short, there is much of that deportment and solidity which make Mr. Baldwin so trusted by Englishmen. It is what the world calls character. Long may he live to contribute that great asset to the public life in Canada.

HON. ARTHUR SAUVÉ HONORED IN CELEBRATION AT ST. EUSTACHE

be judged by the opposition supplied in the House of Commons which the minister of marine described as "hesitating and incoherent."

Arguments advanced by the Liberal opposition against redistribution of constituencies were "quite touching, quite oratorical but somewhat ridiculous," said Mr. Duranleau in discussing some of the changes in Quebec electoral seats.

The previous Liberal regime had not placed the country in a position to preserve itself from the advent of depression, continued the minister of marine. The Bennett government by raising tariffs had succeeded in

With basic food commodities rising, the food index is going up, but declining rents so far have offset the gains in food prices.

British exporters are becoming critical of the Canadian Tariff Board. They are commenting on its slowness and some of them are charging that Canada hasn't lived up to Imperial Conference agreements. At that time Canada undertook to give British manufacturers every opportunity to appeal against tariffs on goods which in their opinion were prohibitive and gave British reporters no opportunity in the Canadian market. The Canadian tariff board has replied, blaming British industrial firms for the delays. Some critics in Britain are saying that the Dominion so far has been getting all the benefits from the Ottawa pacts. Recent figures published here certainly show that exports of Canadian produce to Britain have certainly gained very much more than British exports to Canada.

October 16th is reported as the date for the by-elections at Restigouche-Madawaska, MacKenzie and Yamaska. Lively fights are expected in the last two, with three candidates in Yamaska and four in the Saskatchewan riding.

preserving the Canadian market for Canadian producers and had placed the country as a whole on an equal basis with other protectionist countries which wish to negotiate trade treaties.

"Mr. Lapointe finds that the World Economic Conference is an international comedy," said Mr. Duranleau. "Evidently, if the conference has not secured all the results expected, it is the fault of Mr. Bennett and the other 65 countries which were represented had nothing to do with the failure. We do not expect the Liberals to rejoice that Mr. Bennett represented Canada so brilliantly at London. Did they not say in 1930 that if the Conservatives secured power there would be no one to represent Canada properly at international conferences?"

Manion's Charge.

The system which Canadian Co-operative Federation Leader Woodsworth proposed to introduce into Canada, if his party were successful, was the system which existed under the name of Communism in Russia—"A system based upon tyranny and oppression and the outlawing of personal and religious freedom." This was the charge launched by Hon. R. J. Manion.

An attempt, Dr. Manion declared, was being made by the

C.C.F. leader to capitalize the discontents of to-day—discontents which existed throughout the world due to the three years of depression. Whatever Mr. Woodsworth might call himself, it was the Communistic system of Russia that the C.C.F. head proposed for Canada.

All who owned lands or bonds or stores were really capitalistic the minister continued. And although the capitalistic system under which Canadians and the greater part of the world lived was far from perfect, the advances over the ages had been magnificent. While there were errors in the system, errors under which in times of depression such as the present, people who were willing to work were unable to obtain employment, these errors must be corrected, from within the system.

But he protested vehemently, Dr. Manion, proceeded, that because there were errors, the whole economic system must be smashed and rebuilt to suit Mr. Woodsworth and his followers.

On Liberal Party.

The minister had sharp references for Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and the Liberal party. He saw a very great likelihood of the same type of disintegration taking place in that party in Canada as had taken place in England. This was due to the fact, Dr. Manion declared, that the extreme wing of the Liberal party was following the radical teachings of Mr. Woodsworth. The moderate Liberals, he said, realized that if they were to support stability and order in this country they could only do so by supporting the forceful, brilliant leadership of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, who was a leader among leaders at the World Economic Conference. "And why should not the Canadian people support the Bennett government, a government which in three years of depression has done at least as well, if not better than any government in any country in the world?" he asked.

The Bennett government, he went on, had dealt ably with many severe problems. On unemployment, the four Western Provinces alone had been assisted to the extent of tens of millions of dollars and the credit of the provinces had been saved by the Dominion government.

In a short address, Mr. Sauvé made a plea for less bitterness in relations between politicians of different parties. He recalled the beginning of his political life and the devotion of friends in those early days. He thanked all who had linked the name of Mrs. Sauvé with his own and paid tribute to his companion for the aid she had given him in public life. Speaking in English, he thanked the English-speaking residents of his constituency. "Your presence here is a manifestation of the spirit of good understanding and self-respect which binds together the two races which have built our great country," the postmaster-general said.

Others who spoke included: Maurice Duplessis, Conservative leader in Quebec; George P. Laurin, member of Parliament for Jacques Cartier, and Conservative organizer in chief for Quebec; Alderman Tan-L'Idée Conservatrice, Hon. A. Crede Fortin, K.C., president of Fauteux and a number of members of Parliament.

On behalf of his friends generally Mr. Sauvé was presented with an oil painting of himself and on behalf of his fellow members of Parliament he was presented with an oil portrait of Premier Bennett. Mrs. Sauvé was remembered with a large silver tray.

"Mother says she nearly died laughing over those stories you told her."

Wobbly Pitcher Saved

by Astute Band Leader
A band once won a world series baseball game, according to James J. Coughlin, of Boston, and Mr. Coughlin should know, for he was the band leader.

It was in the world series of 1915, between the Boston Red Sox and the Phillies. The home team took the first game in Philadelphia and the Boston band became worried because if the series ended in four games, the musicians would get no return trip to the Quaker city.

Foster of the Sox and Mayer of the Phillies had been pitching air-tight ball, with the score 2 to 1 in the sixth inning of the second contest. Mayer was working smoothly, but Foster was tired. He started to wobble and Philadelphia got two men on bases with none out. The pitcher needed a rest and he needed it badly.

He was taking his time and was just about to put the ball over when the umpire called time. The gates in the first-base bleachers opened and President Wilson and his party made a dramatic entrance. Coughlin signaled for "The Star-Spangled Banner." But what a rendition he directed.

The band took nine minutes to go through music that should not take more than two. It was a funeral dirge. When the piece had been played once the band started it a second time. Every one was at attention except Foster. He had his hat off but he was industriously relaxing. When the performance was over he went in and struck out two batters and made the other a pop fly. The funeral dirge was a life-saver for him.—Detroit News.

A reception was held Saturday evening in McArthur's Hall in honor of Mr. Nat Boyd whose marriage to Miss Bessie Morrin will take place this week. The event was tendered by business and town friends of Mr. Boyd, who received the gift of a handsome mantel clock from his own employees. The presentation was made with a few well chosen remarks and good wishes by Mr. N. Emblem, who also—on behalf of himself and his brothers, Cecil and Clifford, who are associated with the Transport Terminals Limited of Montreal—presented a fine silver service set in an oak chest. . . Dancing filled the evening hours, and ladies of the Lachute L.O.B.A. served supper, a pleasant time being spent by all in attendance.

LOCATING THE ARGENTUIL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY BUILDINGS
A Minor Conflict in County History.

(Report of Final Discussions, from The Watchman of August 3rd., 1883)

The public meeting convened by the Directors of the Agricultural Society of this County, was held in the Court House on Wednesday afternoon. A pretty full meeting of the members of the society were present. The President, Mr. John Hay in the chair, and Mr. W. Henry acted as secretary in the absence of Mr. Walker who was prevented from being present from illness. After the meeting had been called to order, Mr. Field, of St. Andrews handed in a protest against the legality of the meeting — contending that the Directors were not properly elected, and their acts consequently null and void, and therefore this meeting was not competent to decide the question as to where the Permanent Buildings of the Society were to be located, if located at all. A motion was then made by Mr. Thos. Barron, seconded by Mr. Alfred Center, that Lachute be the place chosen. An amendment was moved by Mr. Field, that St. Andrews be the place chosen. Mr. Mackay moved in amendment to the amendment, that there be no present place fixed upon for holding the annual exhibitions of the Society, but that the present system of perambulation be continued. These two amendments were voted down, and the original motion carried fixing upon Lachute for Permanent Buildings. But before it is finally settled the matter has to come up for approval of the County Council at its next meeting, which, in all probability, will be granted; and thus ends this vexed question. The St. Andrews people contended manfully for that being the proper place chosen for erection of these buildings, and being worsted, it is hoped they will magnanimously bow to the decision of the majority and join in good naturedly to further the prosperity of the Society.

LAKEFIELD

In spite of bad weather over the week-end, Lakefield's popular dance hall, known as "Ralph's Place" report a good crowd, and lucky spot prizes were won by Miss Leneigan and Mr. L. Opanen, of Lachute, and the prizes on Wednesday, July 26th. were won by Miss M. Main and Master Billie Fish, both from Clear Lake, Dunany.

Guests at Mr. and Mrs. A. Tomalty's last week were Mr. and C. McQuat and little daughter Shirley, of Port Huron, Mich., Mrs. Wm. McQuat, of Lachute, and Mr. T. McGregor, of Montreal.

The Monthly meeting of the W. I. will be held at Mrs. A. Kyle's on Aug. 4th.

Last Sunday the service in Holy Trinity Church was well attended and the presence of St. Simeon's Choir, from Lachute, was a musical treat to all present, and added greatly to the earnestness and dignity of public worship on that occasion.

The Ice Cream Social held recently on the lawn of Mrs. T. McCambly's was a success in every way: delightful weather, a large gathering of friends, an abundance of dainty refreshments, an excellent programme all combined to make the evening a most enjoyable one. The chairman thanked all who had contributed in their various ways to make the function the success it was. Among those who helped so kindly with their talents to entertain were, Miss Valpy, Mrs. Bradford, Miss R. Todd, the Messrs. Miles, Mr. D. Todd, Miss Edith Powles, Miss Sherriitt. The ladies of the W. A. are to be congratulated for a pleasant and profitable evening.

THE LATE MRS. ARTHUR TOMALTY

The funeral of the late Mrs. Arthur E. Tomalty, of Louisa, was held on Thursday, July 27, at 2.30 o'clock S.T., at St. Aidan's Church, Louisa. The service was conducted by Rev. A. E. Mount of Lakefield, and was very largely attended by a number of sorrowing friends and relatives.

The deceased was Margaret Ann Morrison, who was born on March 14, 1874, at the Glen, Que. On Oct. 19, 1898, she was married to Arthur E. Tomalty, of Louisa, who with two daughters, Elsie (Mrs. Thos. Gauley) and Freda, are left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother. She also leaves two sisters, (Mrs. Barker of Springfield, Mass., and Mrs. Rand, of Sawyerville, Que.); and three brothers, (Henry of South Walpole, Mass., Val of Montreal, and Frank of Sawyerville.)

She passed away quietly at her home in Louisa on Tuesday, July 25, after a long illness, which was borne with courage and Christian patience, which will long be remembered by those privileged to be with her or to know her intimately.

Many beautiful floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which she was held.

Interment took place at Louisa, Que.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for August 13

HANNAH

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 1:9-22, 24-25; 2:1-2.

GOLDEN TEXT—Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain; but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Prov. 31:30.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Gift of Mothers.

JUNIOR TOPIC—An Honored Mother.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We Owe to Our Mothers.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Devout Motherhood.

As indicated by the lesson committee, the lesson text practically covers chapters one and two of 1 Samuel. In order to get a full view of this unusual woman the salient features of these chapters should be made to stand out.

I. Hannah's Sore Trial (1:1-8).

Elkanah had two wives, in violation of God's law. God's primal thought for man was one wife only. Therefore, for Adam he made Eve. Hannah's sore trial grew out of jealousy which naturally springs up between two women, wives of one man. The violation of this law of God concerning marriage has always been attended with trouble. Since Hannah's name is mentioned first, we may legitimately infer that she was his first and lawful wife.

II. Hannah Prays for a Son (1:9-18).

She had the good sense to take her trouble to the Lord. Believers should do this even though the troubles result from sin.

1. Her bitterness of soul (v. 10). Though Elkanah loved her and sought to lighten her burden, he was unable to bring to her heart the needed solace. Only in God can help be found sufficient to stay the soul in time of great trial.

2. Her vow (v. 11). Hannah asked God for a son. In connection with her asking this gift from God, she vowed to give the child back to God. Samuel was therefore a Nazarite all the days of his life. Much can be expected of children born into the world under such circumstances.

3. Hannah misjudged by Eli, the priest (vv. 12-16). The priest observing the motion of her lips and not hearing the sound of her voice concluded that she was intoxicated, demanded that she put away wine. She defended herself against this vicious inference, assuring Eli that in bitterness of soul she was pouring out her heart to God in prayer.

Even good people may be too ready to impute evil motives to others. The devout Hannah must have been shocked and grieved that Eli should so unjustly accuse her. The Golden Rule should be applied in judging others.

4. Hannah blessed by Eli (vv. 17, 18). Her explanation satisfied Eli, who in turn pronounced a blessing upon her, joining in prayer that God would grant her petition.

III. Hannah Consecrates Samuel to the Lord (1:19-28).

1. Her prayer answered (vv. 19, 20). So definitely did she realize that God had answered her prayer that she named the child Samuel, which means "asked of God."

2. Samuel taken to Shiloh (vv. 20-24). Hannah refrained from going to the place of yearly sacrifice till Samuel was weaned.

3. Samuel lent or returned to the Lord (vv. 25-28). According to her vow, she took Samuel at an early age to the sanctuary and gave him over to the charge of Eli, the priest, to minister therein. It is a beautiful sight to see Samuel in his tender years ministering before the Lord. Godly mothers will train their children for God's service. It was, no doubt, a trying experience for Hannah to part with her child. She dedicated him unto the Lord to the end of his life.

IV. Hannah's Thanksgiving to God (chap. 2).

1. She rejoiced in the Lord (vv. 1-10). So really God had answered her prayer and so definitely had she consecrated Samuel to the sacred service, that she wholeheartedly rejoiced in that she could give up her child in the service of the Lord. She declared that none was so holy as the Lord and that there was none other like unto the Lord. She realized that the Lord was almighty and that the blessings which had come to her were from him.

2. Her love for Samuel (vv. 18, 19). This was expressed in the making with her own hands a coat for him and taking it to him from year to year as she went to Shiloh with her husband to worship the Lord.

The priestly blessing upon Hannah and Elkanah (vv. 20, 21). The old priest highly prized the ministry of Samuel and expressed his appreciation by pronouncing a blessing upon his father and mother.

Faithful Prayer

Faithful prayer always implies correlative exertion. No man can ask, honestly and hopefully, to be delivered from temptation unless he has honestly and firmly determined to do the best he can to keep out of it.—John Strain.

Must Be Patient

We have only to be patient, to pray, to do his will, according to our present light and strength, and the growth of the soul will go on.

SUMMER COTTAGE SUGGESTIONS

A young girl has written to ask if it is necessary to take a gift to a summer cottage and if so to suggest something. The answer to that is that a gift is never 'necessary', but it is a pleasant courtesy. Magazines and books are always welcome; a bit of bright linen for the summer table; or a large mouthed vase for wild flowers. Feed is always welcome as there are such vast quantities of it consumed and it is usually more difficult to prepare than at home. If you have been there before you may know what is difficult to get. Sometimes it is almost impossible to get fresh vegetables and fruit, and in that case they would be appropriate. A watermelon is usually hailed with high glee particularly if there are any younger members of the family—and there usually are at a summer cottage. Candy, something not too rich for summer appetites, such as a bottle of hard candy, is another suggestion. If your hostess has any pet candy by all means choose that. A large box of marshmallows provides material for a roast over the camp fire. A box of cookies or a cake of the 'keeping' variety will be popular. One year I had an oven that simply would not roast, so one of my friends brought me a cooked roast for Sunday dinner, and to make the gift even more thoughtful, she told me that she was bringing it, so I had not made other preparations. My ideas seem to run to food chiefly, but appetites are so keen when camping, that food looms high in our thoughts.

A THOUGHTFUL GESTURE

Speaking of summer cottages reminds me that I heard a woman say that she always took her own sheets when she went for a week-end to the lake. It was so much easier for her to do up sheets at home than it was for her friends to do when at a cottage. I never had anyone bring their own sheets but it is a thoughtful idea. Most everyone brought their own towels for swimming and even that lessened the burden a little.

CROSS CHILDREN

When children are cross—I don't mean babies but children past the baby stage—the first thing to do is to look for a physical cause. Don't think that their crossness is just pure crossness and be cross with them yourself, until you are perfectly sure that there is no physical reason for it. You may be to blame yourself. Are you sure that they are getting their full quota of sleep? So often in the holidays we hear, "do I have to go to bed yet? It is holidays and I will sleep later to-morrow." Weakly, we let them stay up just a little longer and then wonder why they are cross. This sleeping in in the morning sounds good, but it seldom works out. Small children do not as a rule sleep later than their accustomed time in the morning, no matter when they go to bed. When they arrive at the adolescent stage they will sleep as late as they have an opportunity but younger than that they do not seem to be able to make up lost sleep.

Most children are able to play hard all day but there is an occasional child who cannot stand it and that cross child may be one of them. A rest during the day should be insisted upon. Reading may be allowed but the child must be kept quiet. A tired child—rather I should say a tired person—is a cross one.

Constipation is a frequent cause of irritability both in children and grown-ups. Regular habits of all kinds are neglected in holiday time and children should be carefully watched to see that they have not become constipated. Sometimes as little as twelve hours delay will make them very irritable.

SANDWICH SPREAD

½ cup butter
3 eggs well beaten
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon mustard
2-3 cup vinegar
1 3 oz. package cream cheese
½ cup pimientos chopped
1 green pepper chopped
½ cup gherkins chopped
Cook the first 6 ingredients as for salad dressing and then blend in the remaining ingredients. Bottle and keep in a cool place.

CHOCOLATE CAKE

½ cup butter
1½ cups granulated sugar
2 well beaten eggs
2 cups flour
2 squares chocolate melted
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup sour cream fill the cup with sweet milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Cream butter and sugar and add well beaten eggs. Sift flour, salt and soda and add alternately with the cup of cream and milk. Add chocolate which has been melted over warm water, and vanilla. Pour into layer tins and bake in a moderate oven. Put together with date filling and ice with:—

CHOCOLATE ICING

1 cup brown sugar, 2 squares chocolate and enough cream to moisten the sugar. Let boil for 5 minutes, add ½ teaspoon vanilla and thicken with icing sugar.

The three R's used to stand for Reading, 'writing and 'rithmetic—a cynic says they now stand for Rouge, Rum and Runabouts.

Hitler says Germany won the war but was gypped out of the fruits of victory. Well he is welcome to all the fruits of victory we got.—Brandon Sun.

FAILURE AND SUCCESS

"Twixt failure and success the point's so fine,
Men sometimes know not when they touch the line.
Then take this honey from the bitterest cup:
There is no failure save in giving up;
No real fall as long as one 'still tries,
For seeming setbacks make the strong men wise.
There's no defeat in truth save from within,
Unless you're beaten there, you're bound to win."

THE CALL OF THE OUTDOORS

Of the Old Country Scout troops camping in other countries this summer, a Scottish troop, anticipating a hot August has made a canny selection. They're going to Iceland, where they hear camp ice is free.

Breaking Down India's Caste System.

The significant part that Scouting is playing in India has its latest illustration in a camp near Lehora attended by Scouts representing every caste, creed and community in northwest India. Included were 300 boys from the Criminal Tribes Settlement.

Flowers for London's Shut-ins.

On a recent Shut-Ins' Flower Day at London, Ont., some 3,500 bouquets of flowers were distributed among invalids and the blind in homes, hospitals and other institutions. A uniformed Boy Scout or Girl Guide accompanied each distributing car, and delivered the flowers.

Unemployment in Ontario declined 20 per cent. last month, as compared with the same period in 1932, according to figures submitted by Hon. J. D. Monteith, chairman of the provincial relief committee. Other parts of Canada have a similar report to make. Next winter should see a big improvement over last as regards work.

Mayans Good Examples of Downtrodden Males

There was no equality of the sexes among the Mayans, who flourished in Yucatan in prehistoric times, but it was the man who was downtrodden and held in subjection by the woman, according to the investigations by Dr. Franz Blom, a German archeologist. The woman was a heavy drinker, but no man was allowed to drink until he had passed the age of sixty. The favorite drink was a concoction of honey, water and certain wild herbs which had a high alcoholic content. The women drank this regularly, but the man who was caught with even the odor of liquor on his breath was subject to immediate corporal punishment.

Woman at that time was the suitor. She would search until she found a man who appeared to be the best mate for her and would then put him through a trial period to see whether he came up to the standards she demanded. If he failed, he was rejected forthwith. If he qualified he had to bring the prospective bride an adequate dowry.

Laughed at Stories of Yellowstone Wonders

When John Colter came back to St. Louis from the Northwest in 1810, he had a hard time finding anyone who would believe his stories. So wild and incredible were the adventures of the shaggy-bearded explorer that residents of the little river trading post shook their heads in honest doubt. "Colter's lies," as what is now Yellowstone park was known for years in St. Louis, served to give the former hunter for Lewis and Clark a prodigious reputation as a picturesque romancer. But in all the clusters of listeners, no one could contradict the hunter's story. Now, of course, it is borne out by a thousand familiar grotesqueries of nature, a veritable playground of the elements.

Leaving the Lewis and Clark party on the return trip, Colter set out with two companions to have a look at the fire-breathing and cloud-making wonderland of the Indians. The breathtaking exploits which followed make up a dramatic but almost forgotten chapter in the winning of the West.

Old May-Day Custom

In the Gentleman's Magazine for 1754 a custom is alluded to that only of late became obsolete, says "Brand's Observations on Popular Antiquities." "They took places in the wagon, and quitted London early one May morning, and it being the custom in this month for the passengers to give the waggoner at every inn a ribbon to adorn his team, she soon discovered the origin of the proverb, 'as fine as a horse' for, before they got to the end of their journey, the poor beasts were almost blinded by the tawdry party-coloured flowing honours of their heads."

World's Waterfalls

Some of the highest waterfalls in the world, and their respective heights are: Yosemite (three plunges), 2,600 feet; Oroco falls, of Monte Rosa, 2,400; Roraima falls, Guiana (two plunges), 2,000; Grand falls, of Labrador, 2,000; Sutherland falls, New Zealand (three plunges), 1,904; Kukenau fall, 1,500; Gavorule fall, Pyrenees, 1,400; Krimmler falls, Austria, 1,300; Staubbach, Switzerland, 1,000; Bridal Veil, California, 900; Nevada fall, California, 600; Niagara, 165.

Formed to Promote Trade

The International chamber of commerce was established in 1920 at a meeting of chief business interests of Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy and the United States, and subsequently forty other nations joined. Its purpose was to promote the development of international trade, to remove or mitigate the effect of trade restrictions and to foster harmonious commercial relations among the nations.

Here and There

indications point to a fairly early harvest in Western Canada, says a late July weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railway agricultural department. A few points in southern Manitoba, the report added, had already started cutting wheat and barley.

Canada jumped to fourth place in bacon exports to Great Britain last May as compared with sixth place in 1932, behind Denmark, Holland and Poland. Total exports to Great Britain from Canada in May were 5,566,400 lbs. or at the rate of 66,000,000 lbs. per annum.

There were increased retail sales in Canada in May as compared with April and the index number of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics rose from 83.7 to 85.6. Hardware had the best showing, the increase being from 75.8 to 112.3.

A spare blue-clad figure which to thousands of passengers through Vancouver in the past seven years represented a symbol of friendliness in a strange city will no more be seen around the wharves and terminals of the Canadian Pacific railway in the Coast city since Albert Charles Pearsall, terminal passenger agent for the company, died there recently.

With rising prices for wool and a vast Chinese market for wheat caused partly by advantageous monetary exchange, Australia is rising steadily to a greatly improved economic position, declared Warwick Fairfax, managing director of the Sydney Morning Herald, Australia's oldest newspaper, a traveller recently on the Canadian Australasian liner Niagara.

Meeting at a time when the nations of the world were never so much in need of close co-operation economically and politically, the fifth biennial conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations to be held at the Banff Springs Hotel, August 14-23, is regarded as a possible turning point in the affairs of all the nations bordering the Pacific.

Self-regulation of motion pictures by producers to conform with ordinary standards of decency will ultimately render boards of censors unnecessary, predicted Will H. Hays, Czar of Hollywood, interviewed recently at Vancouver where he arrived from a short stay at Banff and Lake Louise. Clark Gable was another movie star visitor at these famous mountain resorts.

All Ontario district brother officers of Norman M. McMillan, superintendent, Bruce Division, Canadian Pacific Railway, with H. C. Grout, general superintendent, as chairman, took part recently in a presentation to Mr. McMillan of a silver tea and coffee service, at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on the occasion of his promotion as assistant to H. J. Humphrey, general manager, eastern lines of the railway.

Unheralded, unrecognized and unexpected, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, after an all day motor trip through French-Canadian country east of Quebec City, motored recently into the Ancient Capital and put up at the Chateau Frontenac. The wife of the President of the United States, the following day, took in the sights of Quebec from the high seat of a calèche, the quaint one-horse vehicles characteristic of Quebec City.

Charity

Help our needy people, for you know they are not to blame, Make 'Charity' your virtue, and blessed be your name. Dig deeply in your purses, with all your power to give. In 'Charity's' sweet name remember, 'Live and let live'. And when giving let me tell you, that the Lord is not blind. He is not watching what you give. It's what you keep behind.

So if in the coffers a dollar you would toss, To keep alive the good work of the noble 'Red Cross'. Your name they will surely remember. And they'll send you the card of an annual member. But even if you can only spare a mite, You'll be just as surely remembered in God's own sight.

There are other organizations of local fame. To whom you can subscribe, anonymous or, with your name. There's the 'Ladies' Aid', who are never afraid. To lighten your burdens, when sickly you are laid. To the dear St. Anastasia Ladies, let us all make a bow. They'll be glad of your help, and they are true to their vow.

The 'Victorian Order' have supplied you with a Nurse, So to defray her expenses, help the committee to re-imburse. We could all do our bit, if only we would care. To remember 'Sweet Charity' by doing our share. And if we would all keep in mind, the words of 'The Master', The good work would go on much faster and faster.

Verily I say unto you, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me".
St. Matthew, 25. V. 40.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR OF ONTARIO WILL OPEN EXHIBITION

Accepts Invitation and Will Pay His First Official Visit to Ottawa on August 21.

His Honor Col. the Hon. Herbert A. Bruce, lieutenant-governor of Ontario, has accepted the invitation to officially open the Ottawa Exhibition in the Capital on Monday, August 21. This will be His Honor's first official visit to this part of Ontario, and the directors are highly gratified at his acceptance of the invitation.

With the exhibition only two weeks away, arrangements are complete in various details, and there is every indication that the 1933 exhibition in Ottawa will eclipse previous efforts. The prize list has been kept up to a high standard and already many entries have been received for the various departments. The Dominion and Ontario governments are making a number of displays.

One of the outstanding features of the exhibition will be the display by the Dominion Archives. This exhibit will occupy the entire fine arts building adjacent to the building occupied by the women's handicrafts. What will be shown will be priceless and could not be replaced. To ensure its safety, there will be constant guards of R.C.M.P. officers and city firemen. In different buildings there will be displays by other departments of the Dominion government, by some distant parts of the Empire, and by the Ontario government.

Patrons of the Ottawa Exhibition are to have the first opportunity of hearing the band of His Majesty's Scots Guards in its 1933 tour. This noted band is coming with the special permission of His Majesty. It will be the first time the exhibition has been able to present an outstanding British band. The Black Watch Band of Montreal and the band of the Governor General's Foot Guards, Ottawa also will participate.

Horse races, a new midway, a wonderful program of vaudeville, an elaborate music and dance revue, automobile show, dog show, pure food show and a hundred and one other factors will combine to make a great week replete with educational and entertaining features.

This year the admission price has been reduced to twenty-five cents, and in addition a limited number of strip tickets will be sold in advance. These coupon tickets give six admissions for one dollar.

Lovers of dogs will find one of the finest dog show buildings on the continent, with every facility for exhibitors and all conveniences for the public. Indications are that some of the finest dogs of various breeds in Canada and the United States will be benched during exhibition week.

Arrangements have been made with the railway companies and the bus lines for reduced fares to Ottawa for exhibition week. Rates are as low as they have been in years and thousands will no doubt avail themselves of this opportunity of visiting Canada's largest one-week exhibition. For those who plan to go to Ottawa by auto, there is provided in the Exhibition Grounds ample parking space.

SCOTTISH WOMEN'S RURAL INSTITUTES AND AGRICULTURE

Co-operative marketing and production of rural products is receiving serious consideration among Scottish Women's Institutes during the present summer. A conference to consider the possibilities of the movement was recently held in Edinburgh at which representatives of all the County Federations of Scottish Women's Rural Institutes were present. Egg grading on a large scale is one of the results of the movement, selling by weight instead of by the dozen following as a natural sequence.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE WEEKLY LESSON-SERMON

"Spirit" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, August 6, 1933.

The Golden Text is: (Psalms 143: 10) "Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God: thy spirit is good."

The following passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God." (1 Corinthians 2: 12).

"Jesus cast out evil spirits, or false beliefs." "Human capacity is slow to discern and to grasp God's creation and the divine power and presence which go with it, demonstrating its spiritual origin." (Science and Health pages 79 and 519.)

Big Fish—Happy Fisherman

Hook a 35 pound musky for yourself like this one and then sympathize with J. A. Gibson of Toronto who fought for four and a half hours near French River Bungalow Camp 215 miles north of Toronto, to land it. It is the seventh musky to be caught near the camp by guests this season and was caught on Friday, July 21st, so fisherman's luck seems to be a complication of opinion. The scene took place late in the afternoon right in front of the outlying camp dock in full view of guests who lined the shore and started fires in order to see the finish, forgetting dinner and later celebrating the latest entry in the bungalow camp annual musky competition fittingly. Since every musky to date has practically been larger than the last, the winner of the challenge shield this year may become famous... if he can land it.

BECOMES RECONCILED TO FACTS

An editorial in a California paper says that after 15 years in the business, a newspaperman becomes reconciled to the following facts: (1) He will always be regarded as some sort of freak; (2) That the favor or he does will usually go unnoticed but his mistakes never; (3) That when he gets in a crowd someone will say jocularly "Don't talk in front of so-and-so, he'll put it in the paper;" (4) That once a week, someone will remark that,—"Newspaper work must be very fascinating."

Running Water in the Country for a few cents a day

For a few cents a day, Fairbanks-Morse automatic, electric water systems supply running water under pressure—in kitchen, bathroom, or any of the places where water at the turn of the hand will save time and steps. Come in and see one of these plants. You will be impressed with their workmanship and design and their low cost.

Quebec Roads Plan Submitted to Federal Govt.

Expected Work will Commence Aug. 15.

Includes Improvement from Lachute to Grenville

Hon. J. N. Francoeur, Quebec Minister of Public Works, who is in charge of unemployment problems of the province, has submitted to Ottawa the programme of road building of the province to which the federal Government is to give a certain measure of help.

The programme includes the widening and improvement of the trans-Canada Highway in eight sections in this province. The cost to the province will be approximately $2,000,000, this including the eight sections of trans-Canada Highway which is route No. 2 in the province, and road work on a number of other highways.

The plan differs somewhat from the tentative project sent to Ottawa about a month ago. The improvement will be as follows: Highways will be widened and improved from Point du Lac to Louiseville; from La Perade to Deschambault and Ste. Foye; Champigny to St. Augustin; St. Sulpice to Repentigny; Lachute to Grenville and on the south shore, from Lauzon to Beaumont to St. Michel; from Montmagny to Cap St. Ignace; a section at Notre Dame du Lac in Temiscouata County, and another at Ste. Rose, also in Temiscouata County.

That work on the trans-Canada Highway, and probably on other roads in the province will commence by August 15, which will mean a period of three months' work for unemployed.

Local Students Successful in Macdonald Summer Courses

Among the teachers who have just completed Summer School Courses at Macdonald College, the following students from this locality are mentioned among the successful entries.

Advanced Intermediate Class: Edna Campbell, Morin Heights; Jane C. Higginson, Calumet; Elizabeth Seale, Morin Heights; Grace Smith and Hanna Smith, Lachute.

Advanced Elementary Class: Ethel Dixon, Dalesville; Mrs. Ruth Graham, Willow Lavery and Gertrude McMahon, Lachute; Pearl McMahon, Arundel; Annie Morrow, Dalesville; Elsie Prowse, and Lillian Stalker, Lachute; Margaret Taylor, St. Andrews; Elizabeth Tomalty, Brownsburg.

It is interesting to note that, among the Summer School staff at Macdonald, Professor H. D. Brunt, former principal of Lachute Academy, was instructor in English.

Successful Boy Scouts' Camp at St. Andrews East

The St. Andrews Troop of Boy Scouts held their Second Annual Camp during the ten days from July 24th. to August 2nd. They were fortunate in again obtaining permission from Col. L. M. Hooker, to camp on his land at La Baie.

Fifteen boys and three officers were in camp; Scout Master A. M. Snowden was the officer commanding, assisted by A. S. M. John de Witt, and Mr. Harry Kay, camp Chaplain.

Mr. Hicks, Provincial Field Secretary, attached to the Montreal Headquarters of The Boy Scouts Association, paid a visit of inspection to the camp. After a tour of the campsite, Mr. Hicks expressed his satisfaction regarding the arrangements made for the care of the boys.

Local Sprint Stars in Police and Legion Sports

Two local boys took part in open running events at the Verdun Police Games last Saturday at Blackburn Park annual field day held by the Verdun Police and Firemen's A. A. A.

A. Graham, of Cushing, took third place in the 440 yards, and W. Drew took second in the 880 yards, each meeting strong competition. Running independently, in each case they were only beaten by stars of prominent city clubs. These two young men thus add another triumph to their record, and another trophy to their growing collections.

Again on Monday afternoon, Graham and Drew with Ken Falconer, were present at the Canadian Legion's annual track meet in Cornwall, and Allan Graham ran in the Men's 440 Metres, taking third place again, with Hamilton Olympic, and Ottawa Glebe runners in first and second.

Lake Louisa Fish & Game Club Held Annual Meet

A meeting of Lake Louisa Fish and Game Club, held last Saturday at A. Habib's Store, was attended by seventeen members who—in spite of a rather slim representation of campers—found satisfaction in the fact that the Club has achieved much towards the protection of properties and preserving the Lake fish.

The secretary-treasurer read a report of the year's receipts and expenditures. It was duly appreciated that the Quebec Dept. of Game and Fisheries had deposited 15,000 young red trout fry in the Lake this spring, through the application of the Club.

All officers were re-appointed, including Wm. J. Deacon, president; Robt. Hamilton, vice-pres., and R. A. Giles sec-treas. A committee was appointed to solicit the membership of all summer residents around the Lake. It was pointed out that this was only fair and desirable, since all the campers benefit alike by the activities of the Club. Fees of $2.00 may be remitted to the secretary for year's membership.

The Lake Louisa Regatta was definitely arranged for Saturday afternoon, Aug. 19th. A committee was called to enlist the enthusiasm of the younger residents, who will have charge of the sports events this year. A large entry list is looked for, as the contests will be open to all comers, and it is also anticipated a generous crowd will be on hand to make the occasion a success.

Hawkesbury Plans for Civic Improvements

Motions for a total of $7,200 worth of civic improvements were passed at a recent meeting of Hawkesbury town council. The motions, subject to the approval of the town's board of supervisors recently appointed by the Ontario Municipal Board, include resurfacing of all streets at an estimated cost of $1,200, repairing of town's water tank, cost $1,000, and repairing of the town's filtration plant, estimated cost $5,000.

Lachute Beat Oka at Lacrosse

Oka Lacrosse team visited Lachute last Sunday, and staged a speedy game in which the local boys were victors with a score of 4-2. Viewing the high brand of Lacrosse for which Oka is noted, the result was considered very gratifying to the Lachute team.

The game was played on the old McFaul Mill grounds in the West End. A fair crowd was in attendance, and a collection in support of the club funds met with appreciable response by the spectators.

Imposing Iron Fence Facing Highway at St. Andrews Cemetery

View showing a section of the 580 feet of steel lawn fence erected at St. Andrews East Protestant Cemetery. This recent improvement is an evidence of progressive spirit among the St. Andrews citizenry and its Cemetery Board, of which Dr. B. N. Wales is president and Mr. Pitcairn is Secretary-Treasurer.

The work reflects credit also on the local firm of T. McOuatt & Son, founders, who filled the order in competition with tenders from the Steel Company and Frost Fence Company of Sarnia. The fence, which adds materially to the dignity of this cemetery, includes two large gates as shown in the foregoing photograph.

Marriage at Beech Ridge Boyd-Morrin

The marriage of Bessie Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund R. Morrin, of Beech Ridge, to Mr. Nat Boyd, son of the late Stewart Boyd and Mrs. Boyd, of Dunany, took place on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 6th., at five-thirty o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. James MacKenzie, of Saskatoon, assisted by the Rev. A. E. Mount, of Lakefield, officiating.

The house was beautifully decorated with summer flowers and ferns.

The bride, given away by her father, wore a gown of white georgette made on fitted lines, and a Bertha collar of hand-made lace, which was worn on her mother's wedding dress. Her only ornament was a white gold bracelet set with diamonds, the gift of the groom.

Her bridal bouquet was composed of talisman roses, lilies-of-the-valley, and a tiny sprig of white heather.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Amy Morrin. She wore a gown of pink organza and carried a bouquet of pastel sweet peas, baby's breath and maiden hair fern. Mr. Melvin Boyd, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a dainty supper was served from small tables arranged on the lawn.

Later the bride and groom left on a motor trip through the New England States, the bride wearing a rose beige travelling dress and hat, with beige accessories. On their return they will reside in Lachute.

Pretty Wedding at St. Andrews East

The marriage of Miss Hazel Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brown, of St. Andrews, and Mr. Herbert Colman, of Ottawa, took place in St. Andrews United Church, on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 5th., at two o'clock, the Rev. J. Macaskill performing the marriage ceremony.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white pointed d'esprit, with veil and carried a bouquet of roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Jean Brown, sister of the bride, wore white crepe de chine, with hat to match, carrying sweet peas. Miss Betty Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roswell Brown of Lachute, made a charming little flower girl. The groom was attended by Mr. Wheeler, of Ottawa.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the church hall. Short congratulatory speeches were made by Mr. Macaskill and Mr. Wheeler, and were gracefully responded to by the groom.

Miss Williamson, of Cornwall, sang very sweetly "The Day of Golden Promise", and "All Joy be Thine."

Ice cream and cake were served. Later in the afternoon the bride and groom left by car for a honeymoon near Algonquin Park, Ont. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, with ferns, gladioli and sweet peas. The arch under which the bridal pair stood, was covered with wild clematis and garden bloom.

Young Bather Drowned at St. Columban

According to the Montreal Gazette, Peter Stasechuck, 15, of St. Columban, was drowned while bathing in the Bonnay-brook River last Saturday morning. A jury under Dr. Ludger Labelle, of St. Jerome, coroner of the Terrebonne district, rendered a verdict of accidental death.

It was learned at the inquest that the youth, accompanied by his younger brother and a friend, had gone bathing together. The trio had eaten green apples before going to the river. Peter Stasechuck was a good swimmer, but it is believed that he was seized with cramps when he suddenly disappeared below the surface. His friend plunged and endeavored to save him from death, but his efforts were futile. There is a depth of approximately ten feet where the fatality occurred.

Town of St. Jerome Nearing 100th. Anniversary

Centenary to be Celebrated Next Year.

St. Jerome will celebrate the 100th anniversary of its recognition as a parish next year, according to preliminary plans which are now being made.

It was in 1834 that Mgr. Signay, Bishop of Quebec, set up the Parish of St. Jerome. Early this summer a group of citizens called a meeting and named a committee to arrange that the centenary of this occasion be suitably celebrated. The municipal council and the religious authorities of the parish have approved of the movement, and a general committee has just been formed.

St. Jerome was born out of the parish of Ste. Anne des Plaines 100 years ago; the latter parish came into being from what was originally the parish of Terrebonne, 50 years previously. In 1832 St. Jerome was known as Riviere du Nord, and it was designated as a mission. Two years later it became a parish.

The decree which gave effect to this change, and which was signed by the Bishop of Quebec, has been carefully preserved and Abbe Geoffrion, cure of St. Jerome, has a copy in his possession. From a little hamlet St. Jerome has grown steadily. In 1881, it was a village with a population of only 2,000, but today it is a prosperous city of nearly 10,000 inhabitants.

"Grand Sire" of I.O.O.F. Cites Canada as International Example

"During the past three years people in the United States seem to have been dropping away from faith in their government, in their church, in their city, in their fraternal organizations," said W. F. Jackson in Montreal last week. Mr. Jackson is an American, Grand Sire, or international head of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, and was honoured recently at a dinner given by the officers of the Quebec jurisdiction of the I.O.O.F.

"If the United States were as well sold as you are here on proper government and obedience to the government we'd be a sight better off than we are," the visitor stated.

Quebec Government Ministers Will Visit Argenteuil

Committee Will Arrange Program of Welcome

Learning from the local legislative member, Mr. Georges Dansereau, that there was a possibility of the Hon. Mr. Perreault, Minister of Roads, and Hon. Mr. Stockwell, Provincial Treasurer, paying a visit to this County, Mayor A. Larocque promptly passed word around and a public meeting was called on Monday evening in the Town Hall. A goodly number of citizens were present, and expressed the opinion that a civic welcome should be accorded to these distinguished visitors, the details of which would be worked out by a specially appointed committee comprising Messrs. P. Chabot as chairman, A. Larocque, J. S. Giles, Dr. E. Lalande and L. E. Dumais who also acted as secretary of the meeting.

At this function it was non-political, invitations are extended to all mayors in the County to assist.

ACTIVITIES AT LAKE LOUISA

Bonfires at Lake Louisa were the centre of attraction for at least two gatherings last Saturday evening, affording a better acquaintance and social enjoyment among the numerous summer residents.

At Habib's Store the annual meeting of the Fish and Game Club was held, previous to a get-together and a sing-song attended by a fair crowd from the lake-shore cottages. The Lake

Louisa Regatta is being held on Saturday, Aug. 19th., and it is expected the event will draw a large attendance and entries to the various sports events.

Church Services, conducted by Rev. Mr. Fisher, are being held at Mrs. Harlow Giles' each Sunday. Collection amounted to $5.00 last week, which amount is being forwarded to the Children's Memorial Hospital.

THE CAPTAIN'S CORNER

For Our Boy Readers

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER

"WATCH THE BALL, SIR!"

Dear Boys:

I am writing this week's letter to you from a large boys' camp which is by the side of a lake, one hundred miles north of Toronto, in Ontario. Many log cabins, tents, and other buildings are around me, and away in the distance, through the tall trees, I can glimpse the blue water. It is hardly six o'clock in the morning, but already the sound of boys' voices can be heard to break the stillness that lies so peacefully over the otherwise sleeping camp. But of course it is not always like that!

Yesterday he came to me. A small youngster wearing a white sweater with a blue linen hat perched on the back of his head. "Will you play tennis with me, Sir?" he enquired, a smile on his healthy brown face—and such an invitation given in such a manner was not to be refused.

"Watch the ball, Sir," he shouted, as later we faced each other across the net. Swiftly it came and only with the greatest difficulty could I run across, and return it in such a manner that the point in this case was mine.

"Watch the ball, Sir," again came the warning, and once more I was on the alert to do the best I could . . . and so the game went on.

Still later as the sun went down and together we walked back to camp for our evening meal, he said.

"I like tennis." "Why?" I enquired.

"Oh, I don't know, Sir," he answered shyly. "I suppose it is because all the time you have to keep on the move." "Watch the ball," I replied, patting him on the shoulder. He laughed, and we then started to talk of other things. When the big moon came up and he, with all his companions, had tumbled into their camp beds, it was a long time before his happy shout, "Watch the ball, Sir," was dismissed from my mind.

It came to me suddenly that in the bigger, larger game of Life, it is also very useful to "Watch the ball," that is, to keep alert, so that you never miss an opportunity, to use all your strength and skill. After all, if you are a slacker, idle and careless, you can't expect to get very far, can you?

Play the game, and play it to the best of your ability, and if you lose the first time, do as my little camping friend has done; say, "We will play again Sir, and I will try hard to do better."

That is the spirit. You boys, I know, have got it; only never forget at all times and in all places to "Watch the Ball".

Your affectionate friend,

THE DOG THAT WASN'T WANTED

(Nixon Waterman, in "Our Dumb Animals")

I once had friends living in Philadelphia who bought a puppy of no particular breed. They simply wished to own a dog and were not fussy about it having a proud pedigree. In due season the animal grew to mature doghood, but, unfortunately, it did not show signs of much intelligence. In fact, it was downright stupid in all its carryings-on. So stupid that that various members of the family finally decided that a better and a brighter dog should be secured to take its place.

All this occurred a good many years ago, when the common manner of disposing of a dog or cat was to carry it away and drop it down in a section where it was to be hoped somebody would want the discarded creature more keenly than did the ones who were disposing of it. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the Animal Rescue League were not then functioning in the splendid, humane manner in which they are today.

So as one of the members of the family was to make a trip by rail of a dozen miles, over many bridges and long, blind, devious ways, it was decided to give the dog a ride and turn it loose in a strange section where someone might be yearning for just such an animal.

The journey was made, and by night. The dog was cast away in the darkness, the poor, homeless victim of its own helplessness. All because it didn't have brains enough to endear itself to members of its own family. In justice to the members of the family, it should be said that their consciences pricked them not a little at the rather cruel manner in which they had disposed of the unwanted, unfortunate member of their household. They hoped he would find a home in which canine intelligence was not in such keen demand.

And so they slept, and the next morning, when they arose, they found waiting at their door the dog they had carried away because he lacked intelligence. They greeted him with great surprise and with loving kindness. The fact that he was able to make his way home over so blind and difficult a route convinced them that they possessed a dog that should ever after be given the friendliest of care, for its high degree of intelligence, if for nothing more; and it was given just that.

A FUNNY FISH

By Aunt Jean

A little red trout was swimming
Swimming in the brook,
A little girl went fishing
With a great big hook.

She heard a wee bird singing
High up in a tree,
She turned her head to listen,
And oh dear! dearie me!

She fell into the water
With such a heavy splash
That the scared wee fish went darting

Behind a clump of grass.

The tiny girl got out again
But her hook had disappeared,
'Twas tangled in her little frock
Just as her mother feared.

She thought it such a splendid joke,

This merry little elf,
"I tried to fish a fish," she cried
"But I have fished myself!"

A LITTLE STORY OF CACKLES

Madame Bijou put the wee white chicken on the ground and laughed to see it hurry away to catch up with its mother and the other chicks.

"Well, well!" said Madame, "Mignon has fooled me. She has stolen her nest away and brought out a family, in which there is a chicken of strange breed. I must watch it or the other hens will kill this little white stranger."

Madame Bijou watched the little white chicken as carefully as she could, but could not keep it in sight all the time, so that many, many times not only its own mother but the other hens used to peck it quite severely. As it grew older it took to wandering away by itself, but always came back at night to sleep in the nest where it had been hatched out of the egg.

Mignon herself found the way back to the henyard and took the remainder of her family into the hen pen at night, but the little white chicken was much happier by herself. There was no-one to scold her and peck at her because she was not the same color as all the other hens.

All through that summer Cackles (for it was Cackles) hunted her own food except what kind Madame Bijou or Marie, her maid, threw out for her to eat. In the winter she had to go into the pen with the other hens, but she was not happy. They were not kind to her, even those of her own family who had been hatched in the same nest, tossed their flopping red combs and scuttled away when she came near them or shrieked what sounded very much like "Get out you, get out you, get out you," until poor Cackles would creep away into the darkest corner of the pen and stand with her head half buried down in the long white feathers around her neck.

When spring came and jolly old Mr. Sun smiled down at the hens who gathered by the low window of the pen to enjoy his warm rays, Cackles grew very restless, walking up and down, as close to the window as she dared because of the other hens; her bright eyes constantly looking for an opening by which she might escape.

When Marie opened the window to let the hens out into their yard once more, Cackles was the first to see that it was open. With a wild shriek of "Cadeck-a-dee, cadeck-a-dee," she flew out through the open window, high up into the air, high enough to clear the wire fence which enclosed the hen yard and she lighted on the roof of the summer house still screaming wildly.

Madame Bijou had been having a nap in an easy chair, very glad to be out in the warm spring sunshine herself. Cackles' screams and the sound of her feet as she came thudding on to the room over her head not only roused Madame Bijou but it frightened her badly.

She sprang up, grasped her cane which she had placed by the chair when she sat down and tried to hurry out of the summer house. Pitou, her pet dog who had stretched himself out to sleep in the doorway of the summer house while his mistress was resting, was sound asleep and dreaming of some wild chase on which he was engaged, judging by the way his paws were twitching and quivering. The book Madame had on her lap went tumbling down on him. He, too, sprang up and raced towards the house yelping "Ki-yi, ki-yi, ki-yi" as loudly as he could.

Marie came running from her kitchen with the rolling pin in her hand, as John ran out from the barnyard with a pitchfork, both sure that something very terrible was happening to Madame Bijou, who, frightened still more by Pitou's yelps, was calling excitedly for help, as she came hurrying as quickly as her rheumatic feet would allow her, toward the house.

Grasping Marie by the arm she said, pointing to the summer house roof "Quickly, Marie, before it escapes!"

"What is there, Madame?" Marie asked, her eyes growing big with fear and her lips trembling.

Madame did not reply at once. She was standing staring at the little white hen on the summer house roof in astonishment. "It cannot be," she murmured "that it is only a hen. But what a noise she does make, and whose hen can she be? I have no hen like that, only a little chicken."

"But, Madame!" said Marie, "the little chicken has grown, oh so big, through the winter. Madame has not seen her, for many months."

"But," said Madame, "my hens are all in the hen pen, are they not, Marie?"

"All but the white one, Madame," said John, who had been to look. "She has disappeared. This must be your white hen, but how strong-winged she must be to fly over the so high wire fence. Shall I catch her, Madame and put her back in the yard?"

"If you can, John," said Madame, "but do not chase her too much. She is like the little colt just now, when it first gets outdoors—wild, and wanting so much to be free."

John tried to catch the little white hen, but he was not quick enough. She was determined to be free, and kept flying from the summer house roof to the gate-post, from the gate post to the clothes-line pole, with Pitou racing along on the ground underneath her, barking excitedly.

Realizing that he could not catch her John left her sitting perched on the top of the high gate-post, cackling defiantly down at him, and he went back to the barnyard to feed the black and white hens who were lying in their sunny yard, dusting the warm earth over their bodies with their wings.

As he threw them handful after handful of corn, he turned to shake his doubled fist at Cackles, and say "you will go without feed, my lady, until you are glad to come home to your pen."

But Cackles was never hungry enough to go back to the pen in search of food; she worked hard digging out soft fat worms from the moist earth by the back of the barn and around the old haystack, or rather, where it had been. John had used the hay for the three white cows that were his special pride, through the winter, to keep their coats fresh and clean.

At first Cackles had found it quite difficult to understand why her old home did not look familiar. The board was still there that had supported the nest on one side; the log was there, but the hay stack was gone too. She crept down beside the log and slept soundly every night until the enemy found her.

We will hear who the enemy was next week, children.

Lovingly,
Aunt Jean.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON TOPIC

"Soul" is the subject of Lesson-Sermon to be read in Christian Science Churches, Sunday, August 13.

The Golden Text is: (Psalm 42: 2) "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God".

Among the Scriptural passages comprised in the Lesson-Sermon is the following: "Lord redeemeth the soul of his servants: and none of them shall be disappointed." (Psalms 34: 22).

Also included in the Lesson-Sermon are the following quotations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Science of being reveals man as perfect, even as Father is perfect, because a Soul, or Mind of the spirit; man is God, the divine Principle of all being, and because this real man is governed by Soul instead of sense, by the of Spirit, not by the laws of matter." "We apprehend Life in divine Science as we live above, corporate sense and correct it." (Page 302, 167).

Mr. Alex. McCallum is erecting a dwelling house alongside his blacksmith shop.

Mr. John Young, of Lachute Bobbin Co., has gone to England on business and to bring out his family.

A youth was fined $40 in Montreal for carrying a revolver and firing at nights.

The Canadian Lacrosse Team will leave Belfast for Canada, this week, and disband at Toronto.

An Eastern Township farmer complains of the unreasonable-ness of immigrants demanding high wages; $20 and $24 a month, with board, is laughed at, he says, and even $36 or $40 will not secure men, and crops in many cases are spoiling because of these queer notions about Canadian farm wages.

Two men were brought back to Lachute from Hawkesbury by Constable Lavigne, and were condemned to pay $5.00 each and $12 costs before Thomas Barron Esq., J.P., for leaving the employ of Hamelin and Ayers without due notice.

Power Company Now Serving 44 Municipalities

Sale of the Pointe Claire electric distribution system to Montreal Light, Heat & Power Consolidated was completed at a figure of $100,000 which increases the company's power circulation to a territory of 44 municipalities. The town will retain its street lighting equipment.

The rate for electricity under municipal ownership was 5.4 cents per kilowatt-hour which will be reduced to the standard rate in the metropolitan area of 3 cents per kilowatt-hour plus a royalty for the benefit of the town. It is estimated this will effect an immediate saving to the consumers of $2,500 per year and Pointe Claire residents will also benefit from any other reductions effected in the metropolitan tariff by the company from time to time.

By the terms of the contract the M.L.H. & Power Cons. is enjoined to collect for the town a royalty on electric consumption to replace the surplus represented by the differential in rates charged by the town and standard rates, and formerly applied towards general municipal expenditures. Thus, any necessity for change in apportionment of taxation is obviated.

To Work Three Days Weekly or Lose Relief.

All unemployed of the City of Lachine will have to work at least three days a week or they will be cut off the direct relief list.

These men will be put to work to clean up the city and do other jobs provided by the city engineer. They will receive cards and if at the end of each week these cards show that the men have not worked three days their relief will be cut off.

Gesture of Friendliness.

Led by their parish priest, 3,000 residents of Rouyn, Noranda and other Northern Quebec mining towns, made a thirty-five-mile pilgrimage to welcome new colonists in the Lonely River settlement.

Symbol of Optimism

Ladysmith, B.C., (says an exchange) keeps the flag flying in spite of the hard knocks it has received. A new flag pole has just been erected at the City Hall, close upon sixty feet high.

Unemployment Relief Office, Scene of Riot.

A crowd of unemployed, about 150 men broke into the relief office at Hamilton Hall, Vancouver, recently, overturned registration files, tore out telephone connections and fled before police could reach the scene.

Practically all records of single unemployed relief cases were scrambled, several days being required to sort them out.

The attack came without warning, the crowd yelling and shouting, forcing its way into the buildings, and knocking down one of the book-keepers.

—When Ladies Meet is one of those human plays you'll like. Nothing sensational, but just a true-to-life presentation of fact and humor as they might appear in any substratum of society. Centenary of Civic Bath Tub

The British metropolis has been interested in celebrating this year the hundredth anniversary of the installation of a bath tub in the Mansion House, the official residence of the Lord Mayor, and some curious innovations have recently been unearthed. The Common Council, it seems, repeatedly vetoed the request for bathing facilities for the Lord Mayor and informed His Worship that if he wished to put them in he was at liberty to do so at his own expense, but as for them they could not see their way to provide such a luxury and charge it to the taxpayers.

Mayor is Ousted by Legal Action.

Mayor Gedeon Blais of the village of St. Boniface near Three Rivers, has been unseated and a new election was ordered.

Blais was elected May 15, by a majority of 15 over Hercule Boisvert whose term is expiring. Later Boisvert took legal action and charged that the new mayor was not qualified as required by law.

"Why Taxes Should be Paid Now."

Making a direct appeal to its taxpayers, Amherstburg (Ont.) council engaged the co-operation of the weekly Amherstburg Echo to boost collections of the first half of 1933 taxes, due recently. The Echo featured a series of Minute Interviews with prominent citizens, emphasizing in a logical manner why it was imperative that taxes should be paid on time.

Want to Suspend Owner-Employees From Civic Payroll

Seeking to create jobs for men at present unemployed, the St. Henry County Liberal Club (Quebec) recently decided to recommend to the Executive Committee the suspension for varying periods of all city employees who own country properties from which they derive revenue.

Quebec City Plans to Build Lake St. Charles Dam.

Formal notice is given by the City of Quebec in the current Quebec Official Gazette of its intention to build the famous dam at Lake St. Charles, for the purpose of storing "at all seasons the waters of the lake, with the object of conserving them so as to regulate their flow, and thus to ensure a uniform supply for its water-works system."

Fitting the Crime.

Those who litter parks and other public places are a nuisance met with in almost every community. But a magistrate in a New York city police court has meted a punishment to suit this crime, and recently sentenced guilty parties to the work of cleaning up the litter they had made, with the alternative of paying a fine or serving a small jail sentence. Policemen were detailed to see that the job was done.

OUR RIVER

Prize winning poem in a Carleton Place Herald Competition.

—By L. A. Robertson.

When great grandad, with his worldly goods,
Searched for a site in the virgin woods
To build a home where he might dwell,
He looked on our river and stopped a spell.

He really did not intend to stay
Trail-weary, he thought he'd rest a day,
But the river held him. Others, too,
Stopped for a day. River laughed—it knew.

It gave them fish and fowl and drink;
They built their homes beside its brink;
It sawed their logs and ground their flour
As it slipped toward the ocean, hour by hour.

Times have changed; but the river's there yet
Still doing business? Well, yes! you bet,
It helps make woollens and stoves and chains,
The railways use it to run their trains.

The settlers now, in their fancy dumps,
Have it delivered through pipes, by pumps.
And they get a blue slip and read at a glance,
"You must pay for your water three months in advance!"

Carleton Place, Nov. 1932.

BRITAIN AND THE HARMSWORTH TROPHY

Announcement that England would contest again for the Harmsworth Trophy at Detroit, did not arouse unusual comment. The race will feature a speedboat entry by Hubert Scott-Paine, British challenger.

Recalling the raw deal which deprived Kaye Don of a fair run in last year's race, the news that England will be represented again this year may be considered a proof of indomitable British sportsmanship. Some might claim it, excusably, as a sign of plain English stupidity; but assuming that last year's tactics were not really typical of American sportsmanship, maybe one can expect a better break for the visiting racers.

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, Aug. 9.—It looks as though the 'dog days' are about over at the federal capital. Ministers are back from London. The royal commission headed by Lord MacMillan has already begun its inquiry into the Canadian banking system. The dates for three by-elections, one in N. B., one in Quebec and one in Saskatchewan, have been finally set for Oct. 23. A provincial election campaign in Nova Scotia will be followed shortly by others in British Columbia and Ontario, it is supposed, with Saskatchewan not so far away.

Schedules for political tours for cabinet ministers are being drawn up, and there is a current report that Premier Bennett, on his return in about three weeks, will give several political addresses. Conservative publicity headquarters at Ottawa, according to federal gossip, will, after being shut down for three years, be opened again soon. The tariff board has some important hearings on British textiles coming up soon. The railway commission will hear some freight rate applications. All in all, the holiday tions. All in all, the holiday

Whitewash Not Desired.

Everyone knows that the Canadian banking system is—from the viewpoint of the banks—just about perfect. We went through the depression without a dollar of any depositor's money being lost. No banks failed. The present inquiry, however, is not for the purpose of telling the Canadian people what they already know. It is to find out whether the banking system looks after the welfare of the Canadian public as a whole, whether it is capable of coping with the peculiar problems of to-day, whether a central bank would be advantageous. The gist of most recent criticism of the Canadian banking system—heard in the House of Commons and elsewhere—is that while it preserves the financial integrity of our financial institutions, it is not always so effective in preserving the financial integrity of our small business men, tradesmen, farmers and other citizens. The banks have been criticised for expanding credit in boom times and so stimulating the boom, and then contracting credit in depression days and thus deepening the collapse.

Another line of attack has been that credit and currency should not be under the thumb of St. James St., Montreal, or under any other group of private citizens or interests, but should be a public utility. Advocates of a central bank expect such an institution to retain in public hands these important matters.

The work of the MacMillan commission will provide much material for debate when the parliamentary committee sits at Ottawa to revise the Bank Act and to extend the charters of the Canadian banks another ten years. Many outspoken critics of the whole system of credit and monetary control have sprung up in recent years and they will have plenty to say next winter.

Premier John E. Brownlee, of Alberta, is expected to provide the most radical viewpoint of the commission, but the presence of such authorities as Lord MacMillan and Beaudry Leman on the board is taken here to assure that however orthodox the report may be it will at least be extremely intelligent and fair.

Small Refinery Threatened.

Out west there is considerable turmoil because the railways want to increase freight rates on crude oil imported by refineries which do not proceed to reship 65% of the product. This would mean that the large refineries would escape, while the small independent refinery would have to pay the shot. The railway board is being bombarded with letters on both sides, some of them alleging discrimination against the little fellow, a monopoly of the big companies and so forth. The railway commission will proceed probably to Regina, in a few weeks time and hear the pros and cons. It is an extremely live issue on the prairie, where the power farmers consume large quantities of gasoline, and where there are reports that the whole thing is a plot to 'get' the little fellow and then raise the price of gasoline.

Retirement of civil servants at 65 has been endorsed as public policy, but each case will be considered on its merits. Key men will not be disturbed, nor will departmental efficiency be jeopardized.

LOCAL FISH & GAME PROTECTION GROUP IS AFFILIATED WITH PROVINCIAL ASSOCIATION

The Province of Quebec Association for Protection of Fish and Game is doing excellent work, and has now established 24 branches, 18 of which are rural. It is two years ago since the preliminary meeting of our local organization was held, and on Wednesday evening, Mr. E. A. Cartier, General Secretary, arranged a public meeting in the Auditorium bringing with him a number of very interesting films, depicting the life of the beaver and showing some fine catches of fish that set the elder members of the audience thinking. In this district are many beautiful lakes, but because of the abuses so flagrantly practised by many in their selfish greed to secure fish without working for them, our sportsmen will eventually be compelled to go further afield.

The purpose of this organization is to cultivate a love of the wild, and outdoor life, and Argeuteuil is now linked up to the parent body with the following officers and executive:

Pres., Charles Fortin, Lachute; 1st. Vice-Pres., Harold Nash, Montfort; 2nd. Vice-Pres., Dr. E. J. Murray, Bark Lake; 3rd. Vice-Pres., Chas. E. Creswell, 16 Island Lake;

Executive:—Col. J. E. Seale, Morin Heights; W. A. S. Ayerst Macdonald Lake; Harry Evans, Bevan Lake; W. Schippel, Round Lake Inn; W. H. Ayers, Fraser Lake; Charles Howard, Lake Anne; Leslie Adamson, Laurel; Geo. Hoff, St. Michel; Jas. Lockwood, Newago; Nelson Morrison, Dunany; Leo Carriere, Pine Hill; R. H. Langille, Lachute.

It was decided to hold the next meeting in Lachute Town Hall at 5 p.m., on Friday, Aug. 25th.

Hard to Get Farmer to See Beauty in Thistle

We scorn the thistle, but Scotland has made it its national flower, its honored emblem. The story goes, however, that the selection of this flower as Scotland's emblem was not due to admiration. Scottish soil was once, at least, pretty thoroughly covered with thistles. The Danes invaded the country. Danes are now one of the most civilized of nations, but then they went barefooted. They stole up on the Scottish camp by night, unperceived, but one of them stepped on genuine Scotch thistle, and let out a yell of pain. The Scots heard it, awoke, arose, drove away the Danes, and saved the country. So the Scots, out of gratitude, made the thistle their emblem. The thistle is a fine and decorative plant, and nearly every spear of it has a pretty flower and a fragrant one. Certainly the bumblebees love it. It has a long and prolific flowering season.

Speaking of emblems, the Nova Scotians have appropriated our mayflower, the trailing arbutus, for their emblem. Why, being New Scotland and also Canada, did they not choose the Canada thistle for the purpose? They would have been good and welcome to it.—Bo-ton Transcript.

Lord Mayor's Banquets

Mr. T. Lewis Sayer's book, "Gog, Magog and I," on the city of London, touches on the famous eating and drinking of the city; quotes Mr. Bottomley Firth's gift—"It could be written on the back of many a common councilman, 'Widened at the expense of the city corporation';" and gives a long list of the banquets in the preparation of which he had a share. One story shows their perils other than that of over-eating. At a luncheon to a prince from Asia the company were actually taking their seats when a trophy of lobster and ice, set right before the royal guest, was hurriedly removed, as the result of a last minute discovery that to him the lobster, being the scavenger of the sea, was an unclean, forbidden food.—London Times.

TAXATION IN ANCIENT TIMES

Tolls, taxes, tithes or tribute, in various forms, have existed from the beginning of history, and range from voluntary religious offerings to the heavy exactions imposed on a subject race.

Glancing over the phases of Jewish history recorded in the Bible it is interesting to note there the important part taxation played. Many were the methods employed in extracting tribute from an impoverished people.

Under the Judges a light taxation was imposed on the people for religious purposes, and consisted of the Tithes, the First Fruits, and the Redemption Money.

After the change, however, from a theocratic form of government to a monarchy, taxation increased. A tithe of the produce both of the soil and of live stock equalling together with the ecclesiastical tithe, 20 per cent of incomes of this nature was collected. Taxation at this time also took the form of forced military service for a month each year; gifts to the king consisting probably of armour, horses, gold, silver, etc.; import duties, chiefly on the produce of the spice districts of Arabia; the monopoly of certain branches of commerce as for example, that of trading in gold and horses, and in fine linens, etc., from Egypt; the appropriation to the king's use of the early crop of hay.

So heavy did these burdens become that exemption from taxation came to be considered a sufficient reward for great military services. At times the complaints of the people culminated in wide-spread rebellion. And after each of their many unsuccessful wars additional tribute would be levied, sometimes even taking the form of large annual payments over an indefinite period.

Under the Persian yoke the Jewish provinces had to pay tribute through direct taxation; excise duty on articles of consumption; tolls at bridges, fords, and at certain points on the main highways; forced labour. The people were compelled at times to mortgage their fields and vineyards, or to borrow money at exorbitant rates of interest in order to pay their taxes. Failure to promptly repay made the debtor liable to seizure to be sold into slavery.

As the centuries rolled by the burden of taxation grew ever heavier. Under the Egypt-

A LESSON FROM ORSA

A parish in the Province of Delecaria, in Sweden, of which presumably very few of us in this country have heard, has set us an example to which it might pay us to give some attention.

For the first time in almost seventy years the Parish of Orsa is paying a local tax. For two generations the happy people of that little corner of the earth have had every local need demanding expenditure supplied because in 1886 their fathers had foresight enough to set aside a forest for intelligent communal exploitation, and since then they themselves have had brains enough to exploit it intelligently. This year revenues from this communal forest fell to a point where the people had to go down into their pockets to make up a necessary tax deficit, but that was only because the demand for timber and the price obtainable for it has temporarily dropped far below normal levels, not because the forest is of less permanent value or is being in any way exhausted.

It is a good thing for the people of Orsa that Canadian methods of dealing with forests have not been popular there. If they had been the Orsa wood would have disappeared long ago, whether sacrificed to that "progress" that apparently means either the devastation or the exhaustion of natural riches in the smallest possible period of time—on the pleasing theory that they are "inexhaustible"—or allowed to burn, because it was too much trouble to protect it. To-day Sweden has more timber ready to cut every year than she had generations ago. The moral for us is too clear to need elaboration. We have still forests that might at least help to pay the taxes of future generations of Canadians, if we are willing to take a lesson from little Orsa.

(Montreal Star)

ian and Syrian kings the farming system of finance was applied in its worst form, and the taxes were put up to auction. For example the revenue to be derived from Phoenicia, Judea and Samaria was put at 8,000 talents. A buyer would bid perhaps double that amount in order to secure the right to farm the taxes, counting on securing a big profit through extortion.

SAMUEL

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 3:1-10; 12:1-4.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Samuel said unto the people, Fear not: ye have done all this wickedness; yet turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart. I Samuel 12:20.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Samuel Talking to God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Samuel Listening to God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Training for Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Responding to God's Call.

I. Samuel's Birth (1:1-20).
He was given to Hannah in answer to her prayer. His name means "asked of God."

II. Samuel Lent to the Lord (1:24-28).

In connection with Hannah's prayer for a man child, she vowed to give him to God. He was to be a Nazirite all the days of his life. In fulfillment of her vow, she took him at an early age to the sanctuary and gave him over to the charge of Eli, the priest, to minister therein.

III. Samuel Called of God (3:1-10).
Dwelling within the sacred courts and ministering before the Lord with Eli, is the innocent Samuel who is to become the saviour of his people. In Samuel we have a striking pattern of child religion. The Lord gave him in answer to his mother's prayer, and from his birth he was dedicated to the Lord. In the Scriptures we have set forth two types of experience; the one experiencing the saving grace of God after having lived in sin; the other of one brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord from his infancy. It is a good thing to have much sin forgiven, but it is far better to grow up without these sins.

Two traits of Samuel's character stand out in his call—his cheerful obedience to the Lord's call, and his surrendered will.

IV. Samuel Established in the Prophetic Office (3:11-21).

Up to this time Samuel obeyed Eli. The time has now come when he must directly hear and obey the Lord. The first message entrusted to him was a most terrible one. It doubtless was a bitter experience to Eli to see Samuel recognized, and himself passed by, but he was submissive. This fearful visitation upon Eli's house was due to the sins of his sons. Eli was accountable because he had not restrained them. He was a good man, but lax in the discipline of his children. Samuel grew and the Lord was with him and did not let any of his words fall to the ground. So fully did the Lord bless his ministry that all Israel knew that he was established as the Lord's prophet.

V. Samuel, the Judge (7:1-17).

1. People called to forsake their idols (vv. 1-6). Because of their sins God permitted the nation to be bitterly oppressed by the Philistines. Samuel promised them deliverance on condition of repentance (v. 3).

2. Samuel prayed for the people (vv. 7-14). In response to his prayer, God miraculously delivered them from the Philistines. This victory was memorialized by the setting up of the stone called Ebenezer (v. 12).

3. Samuel Judging Israel (vv. 15-17). Bethel, Gilgal, Mizpah, and Ramah were his circuits, to each of which he made annual visits. These centers were for the accommodation of the people.

4. Samuel's final address (12:1-25). When Saul, the new king, was crowned, Samuel graciously retired, turning over to him the nation's affairs.

a. Samuel's challenge to the people (vv. 1-5). He reminded them of the way the king had been given and showed their direct responsibility for the change in government. He reviewed his own administration, showing his walk from childhood, and his career as judge and ruler. To this the people responded by a vote of confidence. It was Samuel's right as he laid down the reins of government to have his records vindicated.

b. Samuel reviews God's dealings with the nation from the time of Moses (vv. 6-15). He showed them that national prosperity was conditioned upon obedience (v. 14). Though they had displeased God in choosing a king, if they would fear the Lord and render obedience, national prosperity would still be given them.

c. Samuel's personal vindication (vv. 16-25). The hour was so critical in the nation's history that Samuel sought to indelibly impress upon their hearts its meaning. This he did by praying for thunder and rain out of season. They saw this as an example of God's mighty power which, if directed against them, would destroy them instantly.

He Turned to Prayer

He lived in the atmosphere of prayer from first to last; and when any specially important work had to be done, any specially difficult crisis had to be faced, any specially trying experience had to be endured, he met it by special prayer.—G. H. Knight.

SUMMER VISITORS

There are women on the farms who dread the coming of summer because of the influx of summer visitors. We all enjoy having visitors on occasion but no one likes to be swamped with them. People do not always show consideration and do not remember that they are not the only friends to come visiting. Sometimes the numbers are appalling. It is a difficult situation to handle and still retain friends. Here is how two farm women managed. The first one's difficulty was Sunday visiting. They lived just a pleasant drive from the city and their friends would bring their families and friends until sometimes there would be over twenty for Sunday supper. They tried going away themselves on picnics but that did not work because when they arrived home to do the chores their guests were there waiting for them and they had to pile in then and get them a meal ready. The last straw was when they arrived home one evening and found that their friends had gained entrance and had got their own meal using up all the food that was ready for Monday, and had not even washed the dishes. Such inconsiderateness is unbelievable. This farm lady and her neighbor put their heads together and schemed a scheme. Sunday morning they filled the car with the two families—the husbands would have none of it—went in to the city to church and arrived shortly after at their city friends' immediately took off their things and just stayed for dinner. They made the rounds of all the families who had been imposing on either farm women and being together bolstered up their courage and they managed to have considerable fun over it. The scheme worked as it opened the city people's eyes and they came no more. Towards the end of the summer the farm women made a point of inviting their friends in turn for a specified Sunday and from that time on these particular lot of friends came only when invited.

The second women's trouble was summer visitors. Both she and her husband came from a large family and when the summer came the nephews and nieces were just dumped on the farm household. The work was almost beyond doing and when the hard times came the expense of feeding them amounted to more than they could afford. About April this women wrote to all their relations and told them that she was going to try to help out, by taking summer boarders and that she hoped she would be able to fill her house at $10. dollars a week for adults and $6 for children. Indirectly she heard that her friends were highly indignant. All but one sister-in-law, who wrote immediately that she was delighted, because the children would rather have a holiday on the farm than any other holiday they could have, but she had never felt she could let them come as it made too much work for their aunt, and would she please keep room for them for three weeks in July.

Farms are not the only place. Summer cottages sometimes have the same trouble. I have one friend who came home in the middle of the summer. She had had so many visitors she was exhausted. It isn't that people do not enjoy having their friends. The trouble is that they all come at once—usually on week-ends.

City folks have their troubles too. Many a woman does not come back from the cottage until the exhibition is over to escape a houseful of friends from the country. The truth is that we all like to have visitors at our own convenience and none of us like to feel that we are being used.

KEEP THE SILK STOCKINGS OUT OF THE SUN

The title says it all. If you want your stockings to last, dry them in the shade as the sun rots the silk. In hot weather at least, silk stockings should be washed after each wearing as perspiration rots the silk very quickly.

COCOANUT CAKE

1/2 cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter
3 egg yolks
teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup milk
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder

Mix in usual cake method and put the mixture in a buttered shallow pan. Then beat the 3 egg whites until stiff, add 1/2 cup sugar and 1 cup coconut. Spread on top of the first mixture and bake in a moderate oven.

APPLE DUMPLINGS

Make a biscuit dough and roll fairly thin. Cut in squares and on each square put a half apple, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and add a little butter. Draw the dough together over the apple, and put dumplings in the baking pan and pour over them the following sauce. Mix together 1 1/2 cups white sugar, 1/4 cup butter and 2 cups water. Let this boil for a few minutes. Pour over the dumplings and bake in a moderate oven for about 30 minutes.

WHY QUEBEC LOSES (Another Viewpoint)

Some 4,102,772 foreign automobiles entered Canada in 1932. Of these 3,049,586 went to Ontario, and only 536,146 came to Quebec. One reason is that Ontario borders on some big cities like Detroit, Buffalo, Cleveland and Rochester, whilst on the border line of Quebec there are only smaller cities. Yet the answer is too simple.

Tourists go where there are no toll bridges, where there is first-class accommodation at reasonable rates, where there are good modern highways.

The ever-present toll bridge in Quebec is an irritant to the tourist. The lack of quick uptake of the English language is another. These both explain in part why the business men of Quebec generally fail to reap the rich harvest of dollars from the easy-spending tourists. Quebec suffers too from the license fee differentials. In Quebec last year 479,572 motor cars paid license fees of $5,490,612, whilst in Ontario 562,842 motor cars paid but $5,795,308 for licenses. This should be equalized.

Motorists in Quebec paid six cents a gallon in gasoline tax, which is a further irritant to the tourist. The motorist is taxed two ways.

The antiquated toll bridge should be the first to go.

Irritating taxes always lose to the government more than they gain.—Sherbrooke Record

is often obscured by squeaking springs, rattling bolts and a painful "knock" in the engine . . . It pays, in pleasure and comfort to have your car regularly looked over.

Call here for quick-time repairs, greasing, oiling and tire service. Also expert workmanship on the bigger jobs of overhauling, cylinder reboring, etc.

As part of its plan to encourage Scouting, recently started in that country, the Government of Afghanistan is supplying each new Afghan Boy Scout with two uniforms and camping kit.

Cake and Bread Makers Compete.

A cake and bread making competition for both professionals and amateurs, followed by an auction of the entries, was the means found by the Hanna, Alta., Herald and the Robin Hood Mills for financing the summer camp of the local Scouts.

A River Ferry Sunrise Service.

A sunrise Rovers' Own Service on a ferry boat in the middle of the Red river at St. Norbert, was the climax of the second annual all-night hike of Winnipeg Rovers. The service was conducted by Rover Mate the Rev. E. S. Reed, opening just as the sun showed over the horizon.

Boy Scouts Will Guard Famous Train.

During the return trip from Vancouver to Montreal, of the famous British train the Royal Scot, following its visit to Pacific coast cities at the termination of the Chicago fair, it will be guarded at all stopping points by Canadian Boy Scouts, to prevent vandalism by souvenir hunters.

end of pain

"I suffered exceedingly with indigestion and sick headaches for years. I could hardly eat anything and was badly constipated. I realize now, of course, that I was in a very run-down condition. Fortunately for me a neighbor recommended 'Fruit-a-tives' and I began taking them. I am certainly glad I did. They regulated my system and toned me up generally so that now I am in the best of health. I would not hesitate to recommend them to anyone."

NOTICE OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO BLIND PERSONS

At the Conference of the Canadian Federation of the Blind held recently in Regina there were present delegates representing all parts of the Dominion. One of the important subjects for discussion was pensions for the blind. The great need of definite information as to the financial help blind persons in Canada have been receiving during the past three years from the State, in cluding Governments, Municipalities, Institutions, etc., was very much felt.

There is every reason to believe that very little has been done to help unemployed blind people who are equally entitled to assistance as are those blessed with their eyesight.

The Federation is desirous of securing this information to assist them in making their plea for pensions before the Federal Parliament at its next session. All blind people, therefore, who are in need of financial assistance, are asked to write to Headquarters of the Canadian Federation of the Blind giving full particulars of their circumstances. The Canadian Federation of the Blind has been informed that many hundreds of blind people throughout Canada are in great need of the common necessities of life. The Clergy, School Teachers, Welfare Workers, and friends of the blind are asked to bring this notice to the attention of all blind people and to assist them in forwarding complete information.

The blind of Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, twenty-five of the States of America and many European countries receive pensions and it is therefore high time that the blind of Canada should obtain the same financial assistance. It is estimated that there are over 8,000 blind people in Canada and not 5 per cent of this number are able to support themselves.

A GOOD ARGUMENT

Howard Vincent O'Brien, noted critic of the Chicago Daily News who seems to hit the bull's-eye with uninterrupted frequency in his daily column "All Things Considered," recently advanced the following interesting argument in favor of a drivers' license law for Illinois:

"A locomotive stays on one track, it's guarded by an elaborate system of signals and doesn't go very fast. Yet the locomotive engineer must pass a rigid examination for mental and physical fitness and isn't allowed to drink.

"Anybody can drive an automobile. One may be deaf, blind and oh, so dumb; but the open road is his. The only requirement is the price, and failing that, one can sign notes. One need not know how to write—a cross will do.

"The motor car is, at best, a fairly dangerous weapon. Some day, the person who wishes to drive on the public highway will have first to demonstrate his mental and physical fitness. This perhaps will be society's answer to one phase of over-production.

"SAILING"

By Dr. W. Leslie-Dixon.

The joys of a trip.
When aboard a big ship.
Are really too numerous to mention.
First the passengers names.
And the many ships games.
Usually draws ones attention.

Your footsteps are busy on your first day out.
From stem to stern, maneuvering about.
The ships 'Bar' offers something of a feat.
But locating your cabin, is something of a feat.
And after you've found it out of the maze.
You wonder how you'll live in it for the next several days.

When you've unpacked, you proceed once more.
Up to the boat deck, to look things over.
You hire a deck-chair, and also a rug.
To be placed in a spot that is cosy and snug.
Your next move of course, in case you don't know.
To the chief-steward, at once you will have to go.

If you are a late riser, you'll find that it's fitting.
That he gives you a seat for the second sitting.
For pleasant companions, he'll try to arrange.
But if you don't like them, then later you can change.
For conviviality is the life of a cruise.
And you often make friends, that you won't want to lose.

Then back on the deck, with the book you think you'll read.
But there's too much distraction, and you cannot read.
Companions are being formed on every side.
And they have all come from cities, both far and wide.
Some boast of travelling on ships many times.
On tropical cruises, to far off sunny climes.

Now let us imagine that you are just a first tripper.
On the first day out, you'll be as giddy as a kipper.
Getting your sea legs, while you are able.
And trying to stick it out, when at the dining table.
A jolly ships officer, tells tales like a clown.
While you are endeavouring, to keep your food down.

You make an excuse, and you have to leave quick.
And it's evident to all, that you are going to be sick.
Then like other land-lubbers, to your bunk you will steal.
For the motion of the vessel, conveys how you feel.
And there you will lie, until you feel at your ease.
And the ship has entered, more calmer seas.

Then you are up and about again after two days are gone.
And you get relief, when told by the chief, you weren't the only one.
You've blamed the ship, and thought it at fault.
But soon you become a hardy old salt.
You are ready to praise, all the gladsome days.
And the moonlight nights on the water.

And the weather is fair, and balmier and calmer.
And you are making love to some fair charmer.
The voyage continues, and you spoon, woo, and court.
Until the day, that the ship reaches port.
Pleasant games, and deck sports, and each night a dance.
With the one who has brightened your life with 'Romance'

I recommend a trip, aboard a big ship.
Where romance is ever unfailing.
So from one who knows, just take a trip.
Get your ticket right now, and "Go Sailing."

NOTE: Last week's contribution 'Charity' also by Dr. W. Leslie-Dixon.

ERIC THE ROBOT TO STAY FOUR DAYS AT OTTAWA EXHIBITION

Remarkable Invention Being Brought From England To Be Shown First Time in Canada.

After long negotiations, the directors of the Central Canada Exhibition Association announce that they have booked one of the most marvellous inventions in the electrical world, a gigantic robot. Visitors to the Ottawa exhibition which opens August 21, and which will continue for an entire week will have the first opportunity of seeing this remarkable iron-clad man as it will be brought to Ottawa immediately on its arrival from England, and will be seen and heard for four days.

His Name Is Eric

Known as Eric the Robot, the mechanical man answers questions, tells the time and the date, fires a revolver, reads newspapers and gives an impressive talk describing himself. No human agency is employed either for speaking, reading, or moving by the robot. It is all done by a simple form of mechanism operated by light rays. Eric will be installed in a tent in the Exhibition Grounds and will no doubt be one of the most interesting features of the exhibition.

Eric comes to Ottawa from London, England, where he created a sensation at various exhibitions, including the Radio Exhibition there. Mr. Sidney Anam is Eric's keeper, being in charge of the robot. One of the most remarkable feats performed by the robot is the firing of a revolver.

Resembling an armor-clad man, Eric weighs two tons. Despite its size, it is impossible for a man to secrete himself inside the robot as the entire space within the metal covering is taken up with mechanism. Eric's larynx is a transformer, his windpipe is flex, his heart is a resistance, his lungs are rheostats, his brain is a condenser. Wires go from this complicated mechanism to a control room adjacent to the main room. In the control room are dials and meters on which the electrical power used by Eric in performing his feats is registered. A chain-driven wheel revolves into a black iron-cased box in the control room. This box contains sound films, of Eric's sales talk, an electrical clock-calendar, which photographs the time and date in terms of sound waves and transmits the information to the robot by means of light refraction, and other instruments required.

Of course, the robot is not human and no-one has ever claimed that it can think. It answers any questions for which answers have been prepared in advance.

Eric is fourteen years old, that being the number of years in which the inventor was working in bringing about the remarkable invention which is now being brought to Canada. Directors of the Central Canada Exhibition are indeed fortunate in being able to present this remarkable invention to the visitors to the Ottawa exhibition.

McLAUGHLIN-BUICK GIVES MORE AND BETTER MILES

THE leader attracts leaders. And so it is that McLaughlin-Buick is 2-to-1 favorite among all fine cars with doctors, lawyers, successful business men and farmers the whole Dominion over. Check over, right now, the acknowledged leaders in your own community—see if they, too, do not favor McLaughlin-Buick as the wise motor car investment. Then take the tip that their preference suggests—ride in one of the new McLaughlin-Buicks, and drive it, before you decide on your next motor car. Just a few minutes at the wheel will convince you that McLaughlin-Buick gives better miles—and records of 200,000 miles and more of faithful service will witness that this fine car gives more miles, too. Why not call us and arrange a demonstration—today?

PIGEON'S INSTINCT

What brings a homing pigeon back to his loft? Does he recognize certain landmarks which guide him on his way? A strange story is now being told which, if true, suggests that there is something deeper and more mysterious in the homing habit than is usually believed. It is said that a British breeder of homing pigeons sent some eggs to France, where they were hatched. When they were able to fly, the young pigeons found their way back to the ancestral left in England. They had never seen this place before — when they left it they were in the egg stage. Yet they found their way across the Channel — and home. —London 'Answers'.

LAKEFIELD

Mrs. Austin Kyle entertained the ladies of the W. A. of Trinity Church last Thursday. Quite a lot of business was transacted and final arrangements were made for the Annual Bazaar to be held on Thursday, Aug. 17. It is hoped the many friends of the congregation will rally to support this little band of faithful workers, and make the Bazaar as successful as the Lawn Social and the recent Bridge.

Archdeacon and Mrs. Overing are spending a vacation at their charming cottage here, and are expecting to entertain Mr. and Mrs. Alton Overing, of Toronto, in a few days.

Miss Kyle and friends motored from Montreal last week, and are occupying their country home in the village.

Lakefield is looking its best just now, and the numerous visitors are favorably impressed with the beauty of our countryside.

Mrs. Percy Dodds and Mrs. Harold Williams, of Montreal, who are spending the summer at Peek-Inn Cottage, Lakefield, were joint hostesses at a benefit bridge, in aid of the Bazaar Fund of Trinity Anglican Church, on Wednesday afternoon, August 2nd. Cards were played at five tables, after which refreshments were served, and a very pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by all present.

Misses Thelma and Ruth Hynes and Mr. William J. Carragher have returned to Montreal, after spending the week-end at Rosemount.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Hynes, of Montreal, are spending the month of August at their summer residence at Rosemount, Lakefield.

—We expect the game of horseshoes will boom around Lakefield, seeing we have the Vice-President of the Montreal Horseshoe Pitchers Ass'n. with us for the month of August. We hope it does, Mr. Hynes.

Over 100 Stray Dogs Were Destroyed in Hawkesbury

The order issued during a rabies epidemic six months ago, that stray dogs in Hawkesbury must be taken into custody and destroyed, has now been withdrawn. Police officers reported that since the order went into effect over 100 dogs were picked up in the town limits and destroyed.

Funeral of Jason Stewart

Was Native of Seignory

There passed away at his home in Lachute last Thursday, Mr. Jason Stewart, son of the late William and Martha Stewart, who was born in the Seignory, Argenteuil County, on February 12th., 1856.

Mr. Stewart was married to Miss Cassie Robinson of Lake Louise, on November 3, 1878, and to this union were born 12 children: William, of Ontario; Jack and Norman, of Seuring, Wis.; Jason, of Edmonton, Alta.; Frank of Red Deer, Alta.; Albert and Herbert, of Lachute; Etta (Mrs. R. E. Sachs), Marlette; and Gladys (Mrs. Kingston), of Detroit, Mich.; Cassie, (Mrs. Joe Meagher), and Amby (Mrs. H. Cluff), of Ottawa; and Elsie at home, all of whom remain, together with his devoted wife, to mourn his departure.

Ten years ago Mr. Stewart retired from his farming pursuits in Chatham Township and moved to town, where he resided until his death.

The funeral service was held on Sunday, Aug. 13th., at his late residence on Grace Street, conducted by Rev. J. Macaskill, assisted by Rev. Dr. MacLeod and Mr. E. C. Kelloway. The remains were laid to rest in the Lachute Cemetery, many beautiful floral tributes bearing testimony to the esteem in which he was held by a wide circle of friends and relatives.

Those who attended the funeral from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Bachus; Marlette (Mrs. Geo. Kingston), of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Meagher, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cluff, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meagher, Mrs. Tighe and daughter, Mr. Jim and Ted Sherwood, of Ottawa.

The pall-bearers were his two sons, Albert and Herbert, two sons-in-law, R. E. Bachus and H. Cluff, and two nephews, Jack Stewart and Archie Robinson.

Double Drowning Sunday Near St. Jerome

Two residents of St. Jerome, an undertaker and his assistant, were drowned last Sunday while bathing in the North River one and a half miles south of the town. The victims were Arthur Deschambault 50, and Edward Ingall 26.

According to information given to a jury before Dr. Ludger Labelle, coroner, the men had been walking in a depth of two or three feet of water when they suddenly disappeared below the surface, in a spot which shelves steeply to a depth of 12 feet. Neither of the men was able to swim. The bodies were recovered an hour or two afterwards, with the aid of grappling irons; artificial respiration proved unavailing.

Labor Would Restrict Employment age from 16-65

Suggestion at English Conference

Elimination of employment of those under the ages of 16 and above 65 will be suggested as a method of dealing with the unemployment problems of the United Kingdom at the Trade Union Congress to be held Sept. 4th. at Brighton, Eng.

The resolution, urged by organizations of iron and steel workers, demands withdrawal from the labor market of children under 16 years and adults over 65 years and the reduction of working hours in productive industry to provide for the absorption into industry of all workers between the ages of 16 and 25.

CONGRATULATIONS!

To Mrs. John Mackie of Lachute, who celebrated her 90th. birthday on Tuesday, The Watchman unites with her many friends in extending congratulations. The occasion was one of happy remembrance, when a large number of acquaintances sent greetings and good wishes; and a gathering at her home, which included her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, afforded her extreme pleasure. Mrs. Mackie came to Lachute as a bride on March 2nd., 1864, and in nearly 70 years of residence here has made a wide association of staunch and loyal friends. She continues to enjoy unusually good health.

If you don't advertise you will have plenty of time to read about the success of those who do. — Montreal Star.

Visitor Takes Liberties - a Warning

An item appears on Page 7 of this issue which deserves greater prominence; it sounds a warning to be heeded in just such communities as Lachute. The experience of one of our citizens confirms the thought that transient beggars should not be too generously encouraged. This gentleman was recently called upon by one in search of food, but the householder failing to hear the doorbell, it was assumed there was nobody at home, and the visitor walked unhesitatingly through the house to the kitchen.

Had he not met with the proprietor, who promptly invited him to leave, it is safe to assume this man would have found more to attract him than the contents of the refrigerator. It is not charitable to turn away the hungry; but to leave a house unattended and doors unlocked is a misguided form of hospitality.

Cigarettes Stolen From Freight Car

$400 Worth of Goods Removed from Local Yards

Railway detectives are investigating a robbery, discovered in the local C.P.R. freight yards last Monday morning, where it was found seven cartons of cigarettes valued at $400 had been stolen from a box car.

Unusual tracks, in a section of the yard adjoining Paquin's Garage, Foundry Street, and close to the car containing these packages, indicated the freight had been stolen from the yard during Sunday night. Neighbors had seen an automobile at the spot, around 1.30 Monday morning. The seal had been broken on the car door, but had been replaced in order to leave no conspicuous evidence. The tracks in the sand furnish the only substantial clue.

The stolen goods were consigned to local merchants. A chain of similar robberies have been committed in the neighborhood of Montreal, all in localities where large shipments were due to tobacco jobbers, and it is suspected this theft is the work of an organized and well informed outfit.

Thanksgiving Day this year will be celebrated on the second Monday in October (the 9th,) as was the case last year.

Mr. Jos. Robert of St. Philippe reported last Saturday having received the first season's grain for grinding at his mill. These oats were from the farm of Dave Black, at Mabel, and were considered of good body and fine quality.

Argenteuil Women's Institute Activities

Chatham branch heard an interesting address on Legislation by Mr. R. L. Calder, with 22 members in attendance at the meeting.

Frontier held Canadian Authors and Poets night, with an attendance of 24. Miss Whelehan, Mrs. J. Murdoch, Mrs. A. Graham, Mrs. S. O. Hartley, Mrs. R. Kennedy gave short papers on Favorite Authors. Mrs. Kuhring, who was visiting the Institute, read a very interesting paper on Three Types of Institute Members.

Lakefield heard an interesting report of delegates' visit to Macdonald Convention.

Morin Heights had an evening devoted to the study of Immigration, also an address by Mrs. J. S. Giles, of Lachute, who gave her first impressions of Canada on her arrival in this land.

Pioneer held a picnic for the children, with about 40 children in attendance; also an agricultural meeting, Mrs. J. Mackenzie giving the address on "Agriculture" and a paper on "What we can grow for our hens." Mrs. J. Cooke read current events, and the Misses P. and E. Thompson gave papers on "Paper Mulching for Winter Protection," and "Jack Miner and the Starling." 15 Members and 5 visitors were present.

Jerusalem-Bethany had 13 in attendance, with a roll call on Industries of Argenteuil; also a very interesting paper on Legislation by Miss M. Leishman. This branch is providing bread for a needy family for a month, and also held a dance at the Black & White Pavilion on Aug 15th.

Upper Lachute and East End. August meeting was an Educational address on the Value of Education in all walks of Life and the value of co-operation of parents and teachers during School time. Roll call was Why we should be Proud of Canada. Members present 15.

"Divinity"

I searched for God in temples raised by man's dream-driven hands,

But found Him not. Nor yet in Nature's beauty could my darkened eyes descry

The God I sought.

And then a passing stranger's glance shed sudden light upon

The way I trod . . . Lo! Shining like flame within his friendly smile, I saw The eyes of God!

Capone's Car Goes Overseas

(from an English Exchange.)

Death Dealing Machine Meets Inglorious End. Is Sight for English Holiday Makers

To its many other attractions and delights Southend-on-Sea has added the bullet-proof car of Mr. Al (i.e., Alfred) Capone, of Chicago, Mich. The car is the genuine thing. And a beauty it is. It cost every farthing of $2,000, not mentioning extras. Modest in appearance, it is a Cadillac sedan, finished in olive green, and it has a very long bonnet. To look at, it is such a car as any American multi-millionaire would be proud to drive. It is now on view at the Kursaal Southend, a pleasure park of infinite delights. The car was purchased by Mr. de Forest Morehouse, and, after various difficulties had been overcome, it was brought intact to Southend, equipped with machine gun and other devices of gangdom.

On Friday the car was introduced to the English public at the Kursaal. It was filmed, and was made the subject of a talkie, in the presence of a number of representative men and women. Most artfully constructed is the private car of

Mr. Al Capone. In appearance it exactly resembles the car used by the police chiefs of Chicago, and it is equipped with the official hooter, that sends every thing else flying. Armour plating is placed under all the metal work. To the ordinary man the most surprising feature is the glass. The windscreen and windows are well over an inch and a half thick. They are bullet-proof. The car can travel at 110 miles an hour and can turn safely at 40. A little window at the back serves as a loop-hole for the machine gun. This is a handy weapon, easy to grip. Before the English police took out its works it would fire 100 rounds a minute. The tires are shot-proof and puncture-proof.

Mr. Morehouse has secured an American ex-detective, who has been "taken for a ride" in the car, and who narrowly escaped being bumped off. This gentleman gave an interesting lecture. He greatly appreciates the safety and security of life in England. At an inaugural lunch, the chair was taken by the Mayor of Southend, a delightful gentleman. He seemed to have a partiality for black cats, for he said, the white variety were little better than pirates. An expert in advertising, the mayor said the firm he is connected with have spent over a million in making their products known. He extolled the attractions of Southend—its marvellous sunshine, its unequalled pleasure gardens, and the many delights of its Kursaal.

At the present time some of the unions connected with the railways trades are taking a ballot to see whether they shall call a strike or not. Before doing anything so drastic the members should consider the matter with a view of what the result of such a strike might mean. The railways have been trying to impress people that the country cannot do without the railways, yet, an effective strike might easily show the people that the country can do without them.

Forty-Four New Townships Created in Quebec

Quebec's steady policy of colonization has resulted in the formation of 44 new townships within the Province, indicating a vast area of land surveyed, cultivated, and divided off. An Order-in-Council last week recognized the establishment of these 44 townships by the Province. The continuance of this back-to-the-land movement should help materially to counteract the over-crowding of cities, which has been largely responsible for the poverty and distress in big centres.

The Quiet Charm of Old Age

There is a pathetic charm about old age. We are sure there is nothing quite so lovely as grandmother, sitting in her accustomed place in the corner. You love to watch the silver-haired matriarch fondle a grand child, upon her knees. They are the salt of the earth and a treasure in any home. They are the familiar figure in community life. And more than any measure of love for others, there is coming a time when we shall crave the love and caresses of our intimates and friends. Old age is keenly sensitive to any form of neglect. It is not intentional. We may often commit this neglect through attention to other matters.

We forget that this inward craving of old age allows of no apologies and understands no reason for the absent caresses and the old-time fondlings. It transmutes everything into neglect. Age softens the heart, and the soul finds itself pining for the touch of a vanished hand. Nothing stirs us quite so much as the vacant chair. Love them more and more. What would we do without them? We shall reach their estate if the chord of life lengthens out. Some day we ourselves are going to sit in the twilight of an evening that is full of dreams and longings. As was sweetly said:

"Put your arms around me—
There—like that;
I want a little petting
At life's setting,
For 'tis harder to be brave
When feeble age comes creeping,
And finds me weeping,
Dear ones gone.
Just a little petting
At life's setting:
For I am old and tired,
And my life's long work is done."

Depression Left No Restraint on Local Generosity

Between three and four hundred people assembled on Tuesday of last week at the Black and White Dance Hall, in a gesture of neighborliness which betokened the fine spirit of our farming communities in spite of hard times. Friends from St. Jerome, Lachute, and St. Andrews were there, and Mr. Leslie Gordon, of East Settlement, was the guest of honor and recipient of a purse, presented by Mayor J. E. Walker, of St. Jerome on behalf of the gathering.

Mr. Gordon had the misfortune to lose his barns and equipment, in a fire which occurred this spring. The purse containing a sum of nearly five hundred dollars, contributed among town and country friends is designed to help re-establish his farm and tide over a difficult session.

Lachute G. & T. Representatives Climb in Tennis League

The tennis section of the Lachute Golf and Tennis Club secured a safer berth in the Ottawa Valley League by defeating Ayers Ltd. The match, played on the beautiful courts of the Lachute Club, was keenly contested and afforded some spectacular playing. Though defeated at the 6th. event the visitors played the last one, which proved to be their Swan Song. The final results were 4-3. This victory enables the winners to play the St. Andrews Club. SCOUT JAMBOREE NOTES

Magyar Alphabet Locates Contingents.

Alphabetical order according to the Magyar alphabet ruled the location of the Scout contingents of the various nations for the great 'march past' that opened the 4th. World Scout Jamboree in Hungary, August 1st.

Ten Sub-Camps.

The great camp at Godollo is divided into ten sub-camps, representing the Ten Scout Laws, and known by the names of birds and animals.

The Nations Thoroughly Mixed.

Each sub-camp comprises as many national groups as possible, including a British Empire unit.

British Overseas Units.

Australia's contingent of 85 was the largest British overseas unit, the next in order being India, with 72, South Africa with 65 and Jamaica with 60.

The Camp Bank.

A specially erected branch of the Hungarian General Credit Bank is taking care of the currency problem, the money of all nations being changed into Hungarian on generous terms.

How the British Empire Marched.

The British contingents lined up thus:—Anglia (England), Anglo kufoldo (British Scouts abroad), Australia, Canada, Ceylon, Del Afrika (South Africa), Essah Iroerszag (Northern Ireland), Gibraltar, India, Ir szabred allam (Irish Free State), Jamaica, Malta, Newfoundland, New Zealand, Palestine, Rhodesia, Skocia (Scotland), Trinidad, Wales.

Scout Linguist Guides.

Three hundred Hungarian Boy Scouts who have taken special courses in 13 languages will act as guides to foreign Scouts visiting Budapest during the World Scout Jamboree.

The Jamboree Camp and Scout Nation.

The Hungarian government, which is doing everything possible to make the Jamboree a success, has granted the camp the unique honour of extra-territorial rights. In all administrative details the camp is thus self-contained.

THE CAPTAIN'S SERIAL STORY OF ADVENTURE

Special to The Watchman

Chapter 32.

A few mornings later Sunny Jim was standing looking across the wide range of fields that made up River Farm. His eyes were carelessly directed towards where, in the near distance a busy throng of workers were gathering up the last remaining sheaves of wheat to be stored away that year. It was not that he was interested in Agriculture, for indeed he knew nothing about it and cared less; but at this particular time he had nothing else to do, and under these conditions one thing is just about as good to look at as another. In fact, if the truth has to be told, Sunny Jim was not altogether pleased at the way things were turning out. Walter and Edgar in the strangeness of their new surroundings found so much to interest them that they had quite openly deserted him, and though he gave no outward sign of his feelings, it was none the less a matter that rankled in his mind and was the cause of the discontented look on his face. Further, the wild and undeveloped look of the country that lay beyond the farm, tended to irritate him, for in spite of his roving life, he did like things orderly and systematic.

He was about to turn away in disgust when a young voice addressed him. He looked around quickly, to see Frankie, dressed in dark brown trousers and a red shirt, almost at his elbow.

"Why do they call you Sunny Jim," the boy enquired with a friendly grin. "It's not your right name, is it?"

For a moment the man resented this question, especially as it came from one so young, but his genial good nature soon asserted itself and he replied, "Ah, that's a story, Frank, which few know, because I seldom tell it."

"A story—oh, good! Is it exciting?" came the eager response.

"Well, some would call it so, and maybe some wouldn't; but as I say, I so seldom tell it that it is difficult to find out."

"But you will tell it to me, won't you?" pleaded Frankie.

"There is nothing I like better than listening to a story."

Sunny Jim was very tempted to grant the boy's wish, and was about to reply to this effect when both Walter and Edgar came up.

"Frankie, I have been looking for you everywhere, to ask you to take me out in your canoe" said Edgar, his eyes sparkling with anticipation. "Can't we go now?"

"Oh indeed, so that is what you have been dragging me around for all the morning!" retorted Walter, not giving Frankie an opportunity of replying. "You can't do that this hot day; it's hotter than I have ever known it in my life, and you want to paddle around in a canoe as you call it. You are far too energetic, old chap. I, for one, shall find a shady spot and probably go to sleep, that is if these pesky insects will let me."

"You're a lazy fellow" replied Edgar with indignation.

"Sleeping in the morning when the sun is shining! You will take me, won't you?" he continued, turning to Frankie.

"Of course I will, if you really want to go" the Canadian boy replied, "but listen, Sunny Jim here has a story to tell me and I am sure he won't mind you hearing it. Though perhaps he has told it you already—?"

The two English boys became dumb with astonishment and looked towards Sunny Jim, as if it was the most amazing thing that he could be a teller of stories! but after a moment or two, Walter welcomed the idea. "A story!—the very thing for such a boiling day as this. Let's get somewhere out of the sun, and I'll listen for hours."

"Go to sleep, you mean!" retorted Edgar, "but I am ready enough to hear a story; all the more so if Frankie wishes it."

That youngster threw his new-found friend a grateful glance, and as Sunny Jim had evidently made up his mind to fall in with the general desire, the four made their way towards a clump of trees under which they would find at least, some sort of protection from the sun's rays.

When they had seated themselves more or less comfortably, Sunny Jim cleared his throat in a vigorous manner and began . . .

A DISAPPOINTED DOG

By Aunt Jean

"Bow wow, bow-wow, bow-wow," said a little white dog. As he sat and barked at the moon.

"Bow-wow, bow-wow, bow-wow bow-wow,"

"I hope to be up there soon. 'There's a big white cloud coming close to the earth, I'll hop on it and go for a ride. How I'll bark and bark at the little blue stars As up to the sky we glide."

The doggie ran towards the fleecy cloud,

But it floated far away,

Right over his head, right by the moon,

Quite near to the Milky Way.

The disappointed dog sat and barked and barked,

"Bow-wow, bow-wow, bow-wow bow-wow,"

Till the folks in the house got really cross

Although Cackles slept contentedly every night by the log, with her head tucked under her wing, she was not a sound sleeper; the outdoor sounds were so different from the sounds in the hen pen. Sammie Mouse and Mammie Mouse went for a nightly walk right by her outdoor bedroom. Their squeaky little voices disturbed her rest at first; she did not know just what they were and would crouch closer and closer to the log until she grew accustomed to them; so much so that when they came closer to her than she cared to have them, she would peck sleepily and peevishly at them.

Night-hawks and bats flew over her head; little creeping bugs crawled beneath her wings. They would not have dared to do it had it been daylight—but a hen is rather helpless in the darkness; not having eyes like Hootie the owl, they cannot see what is going on about them.

Red Eyes, the weasel, was travelling about the neighbor's yards killing chickens and hens wherever he could find them. Madame Bijou heard that he was about, and worried about her little white hen. The other hens, she knew, were quite safe from him, she had taken care that her hen house had been made secure from skunks and weasels.

Farmer Jones tried to shoot Red Eyes one day; this drove him over to Madame Bijou's yard in a very angry frame of mind. To make matters worse it was raining quite heavily and all of the little animals that he liked to eat were staying under cover as much as possible. As he ran about here and there searching for food he smelled the scent of the little white hen as he passed quite close to where she sat. He stopped to look and listen. There was a strange roaring sound coming closer and closer that was not the sound of rain alone. Red Eyes did not know just what it was, but whatever it was it could wait until he had found that hen.

He had just reached her, was about to seize her, when a large grey rat dashed out from beneath the barn and crossed the log with a frightened squeak. Cackles waked up quickly. It was almost morning, just light enough to see Red Eyes in a shadowy sort of way; but something about him alarmed her. She flew up on to the log and scurried to the end of it. The roaring sound was getting louder, so loud that she did not hear the scratching of his claws as he crept up the side of the log after her. But he was too late. A flood of water from the broken dam poured into the barn yard, caught Red Eyes in its current and swept him away.

Cackles sat still on the log too frightened of Red Eyes to get down. In trying to save herself from Red Eyes, she saved herself from being swept away like he had been.

The water grew deeper and deeper, until the log was lifted from the ground where it had lain so long, and carried to the river where it floated down, down, until Nora Craig saw it and its little white burden, and persuaded her uncle to go and rescue the baby or pussie whichever it was.

Her uncle went on horseback (as we have seen) and found it was a little white hen which cackled very loudly when she saw him, and afterwards when he had brought her home, so that Nora had promptly named her Cackles. When Nora went to her own home she took Cackles with her and let her go in the hen pen with her mother's hens. Mrs. Craig's hens were white Plymouth Rocks and were very much inclined to look down on Cackles, who was so much smaller, but they were not so unkind to her as the black and white speckled hens had been.

Cackles tried very hard for some time to find the old familiar nest beside the log, but she could not. She was quite unhappy about it; she had planned to lay her own eggs in the same nest. She scratched for worms half-heartedly for some days until she remembered that she must find a nest for herself soon. She did not like the nests in the henhouse; besides they were always full, and some of the hens who sat on them scolded so when she crawled in beside them to see if their nests were comfortable, and pecked at her so fiercely that she felt she must look elsewhere for a nest.

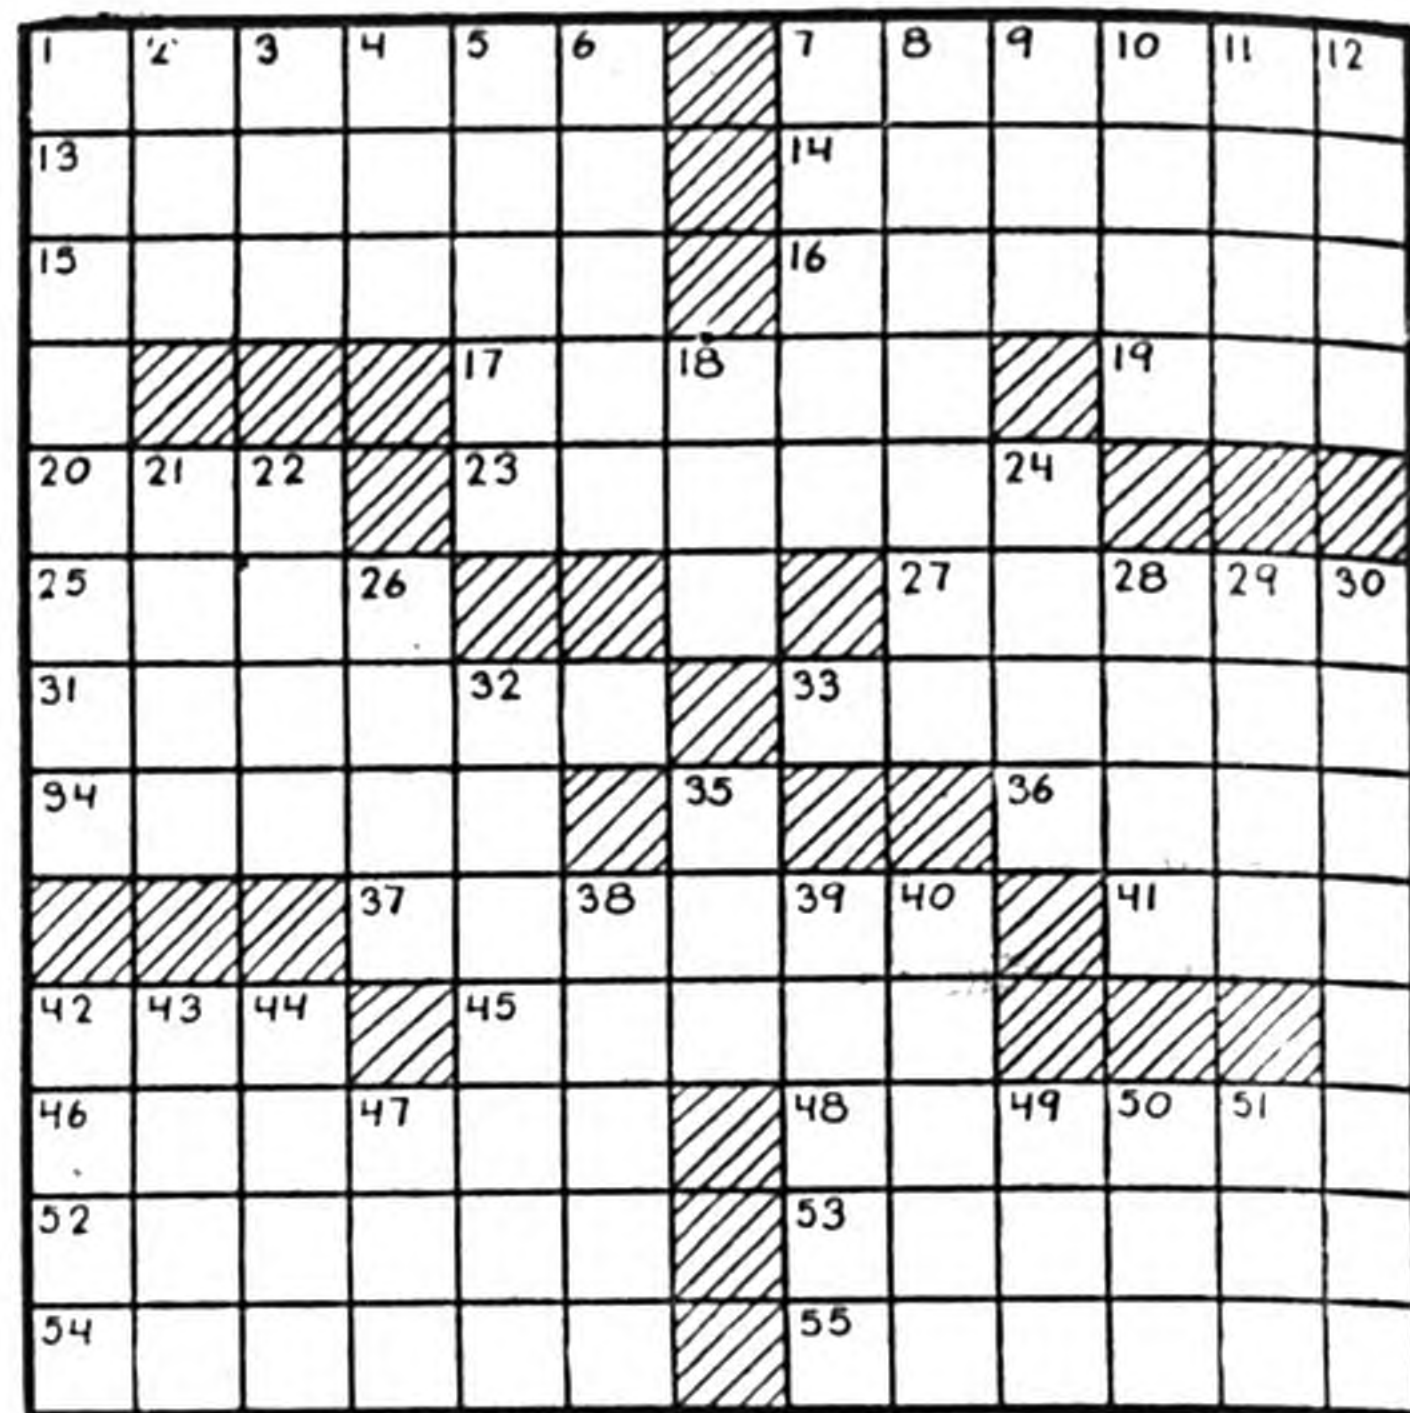

Walking about in the barnyard one day she decided to fly up onto a beam near the stable window and look around her. On the opposite wall she saw a hole where the pressure of hay had broken a small piece of board out of the loft. Flying across, she crept in and sat down to rest. She felt quite tired and quite strange, so rested there a long time. When at last she got up to fly down to dinner, she saw that she had laid a small white egg. Flying to the ground she shrieked out the news to all the other hens, but they just looked at her as if to say "Why, you silly little thing! that is nothing wonderful to do. We all lay eggs and have been laying them for some time now."

Every day Cackles flew up onto the beam and from there to the hole in the hayloft and laid an egg, telling the other hens about it when she came back. Finding that they paid no attention to her, she grew quieter about it, and finally decided to stop laying and hatch out a family for herself.

All these weeks Maud and Nora Craig had been watching the hen pen quite closely in hopes of finding that Cackles had started to lay. Nora had promised Baby John that when Cackles should start to lay he should have her eggs for breakfast; but he had to do without them as Cackles, like Mignon her mother, had her nest safely hidden and Nora did not know that she was laying at all.

PITCH LAKE ONE OF WORLD'S ATTRACTIONS
 Montreal, August.—A natural phenomenon which attracts numbers of visitors to Trinidad in the British West Indies is the pitch lake, states the Canadian National Steamships, whose liners call regularly at that port. During the past 50 years, 5,000,000 tons of asphalt have been shipped from this lake to all parts of the world and there is still plenty for future generations. During this time the level of the lake has fallen 20 feet. The estimated depth is 285 feet and the lake covers an area of 114 acres.

there. Cackles knew quite well how she was to get down herself, but it was the getting of her babies down that worried her.

Daddy Craig was too busy to go to the stable loft to see what was disturbing Cackles, and in a few minutes had forgotten all about her. Cackles, seeing that she was not getting any help from that quarter, went back in the hole out of sight.

She was quite worried indeed. Her children were getting unmanageable. They were creeping from underneath her wings and she was so afraid that they would fall down into the henyard. Her fears were quite justified. Some of her babies wandered too close to the edge and tumbled down; one fell on Nora's head, another at her feet, the third one was just falling as she looked up to see where they were coming from. "Oh! oh!" shouted Billy who was with her, "it is raining chickens."

Hearing his shouts, Maud and Ned ran to see what the noise was all about. By this time Cackles herself had again appeared in the opening, and was clucking quite loudly to the chickens cuddled in Nora's apron.

"Cackles, you rascal!" Maud said, "Is that where you have been hiding yourself? Sue was just telling me she had not seen you lately."

Cackles, of course, could not talk, but was doing her best to explain in her own way.

Calling Daddy Craig to help them carry a ladder, the children rushed to where it always stood ready, and in a few minutes Nora was up and peeping into Cackles' nest. "Black chickens!" she cried, "they are every one black, Daddy, what does it mean? Cackles is white."

"She must have had a black or a black-and-white speckled mother," Daddy Craig explained. "I wonder where she came from in the first place?"

It was some months later before the story of the hen being rescued from the log reached Madame Bijou's ears. She was quite excited about it and begged John to take her to Craig's home to see if it was her hen.

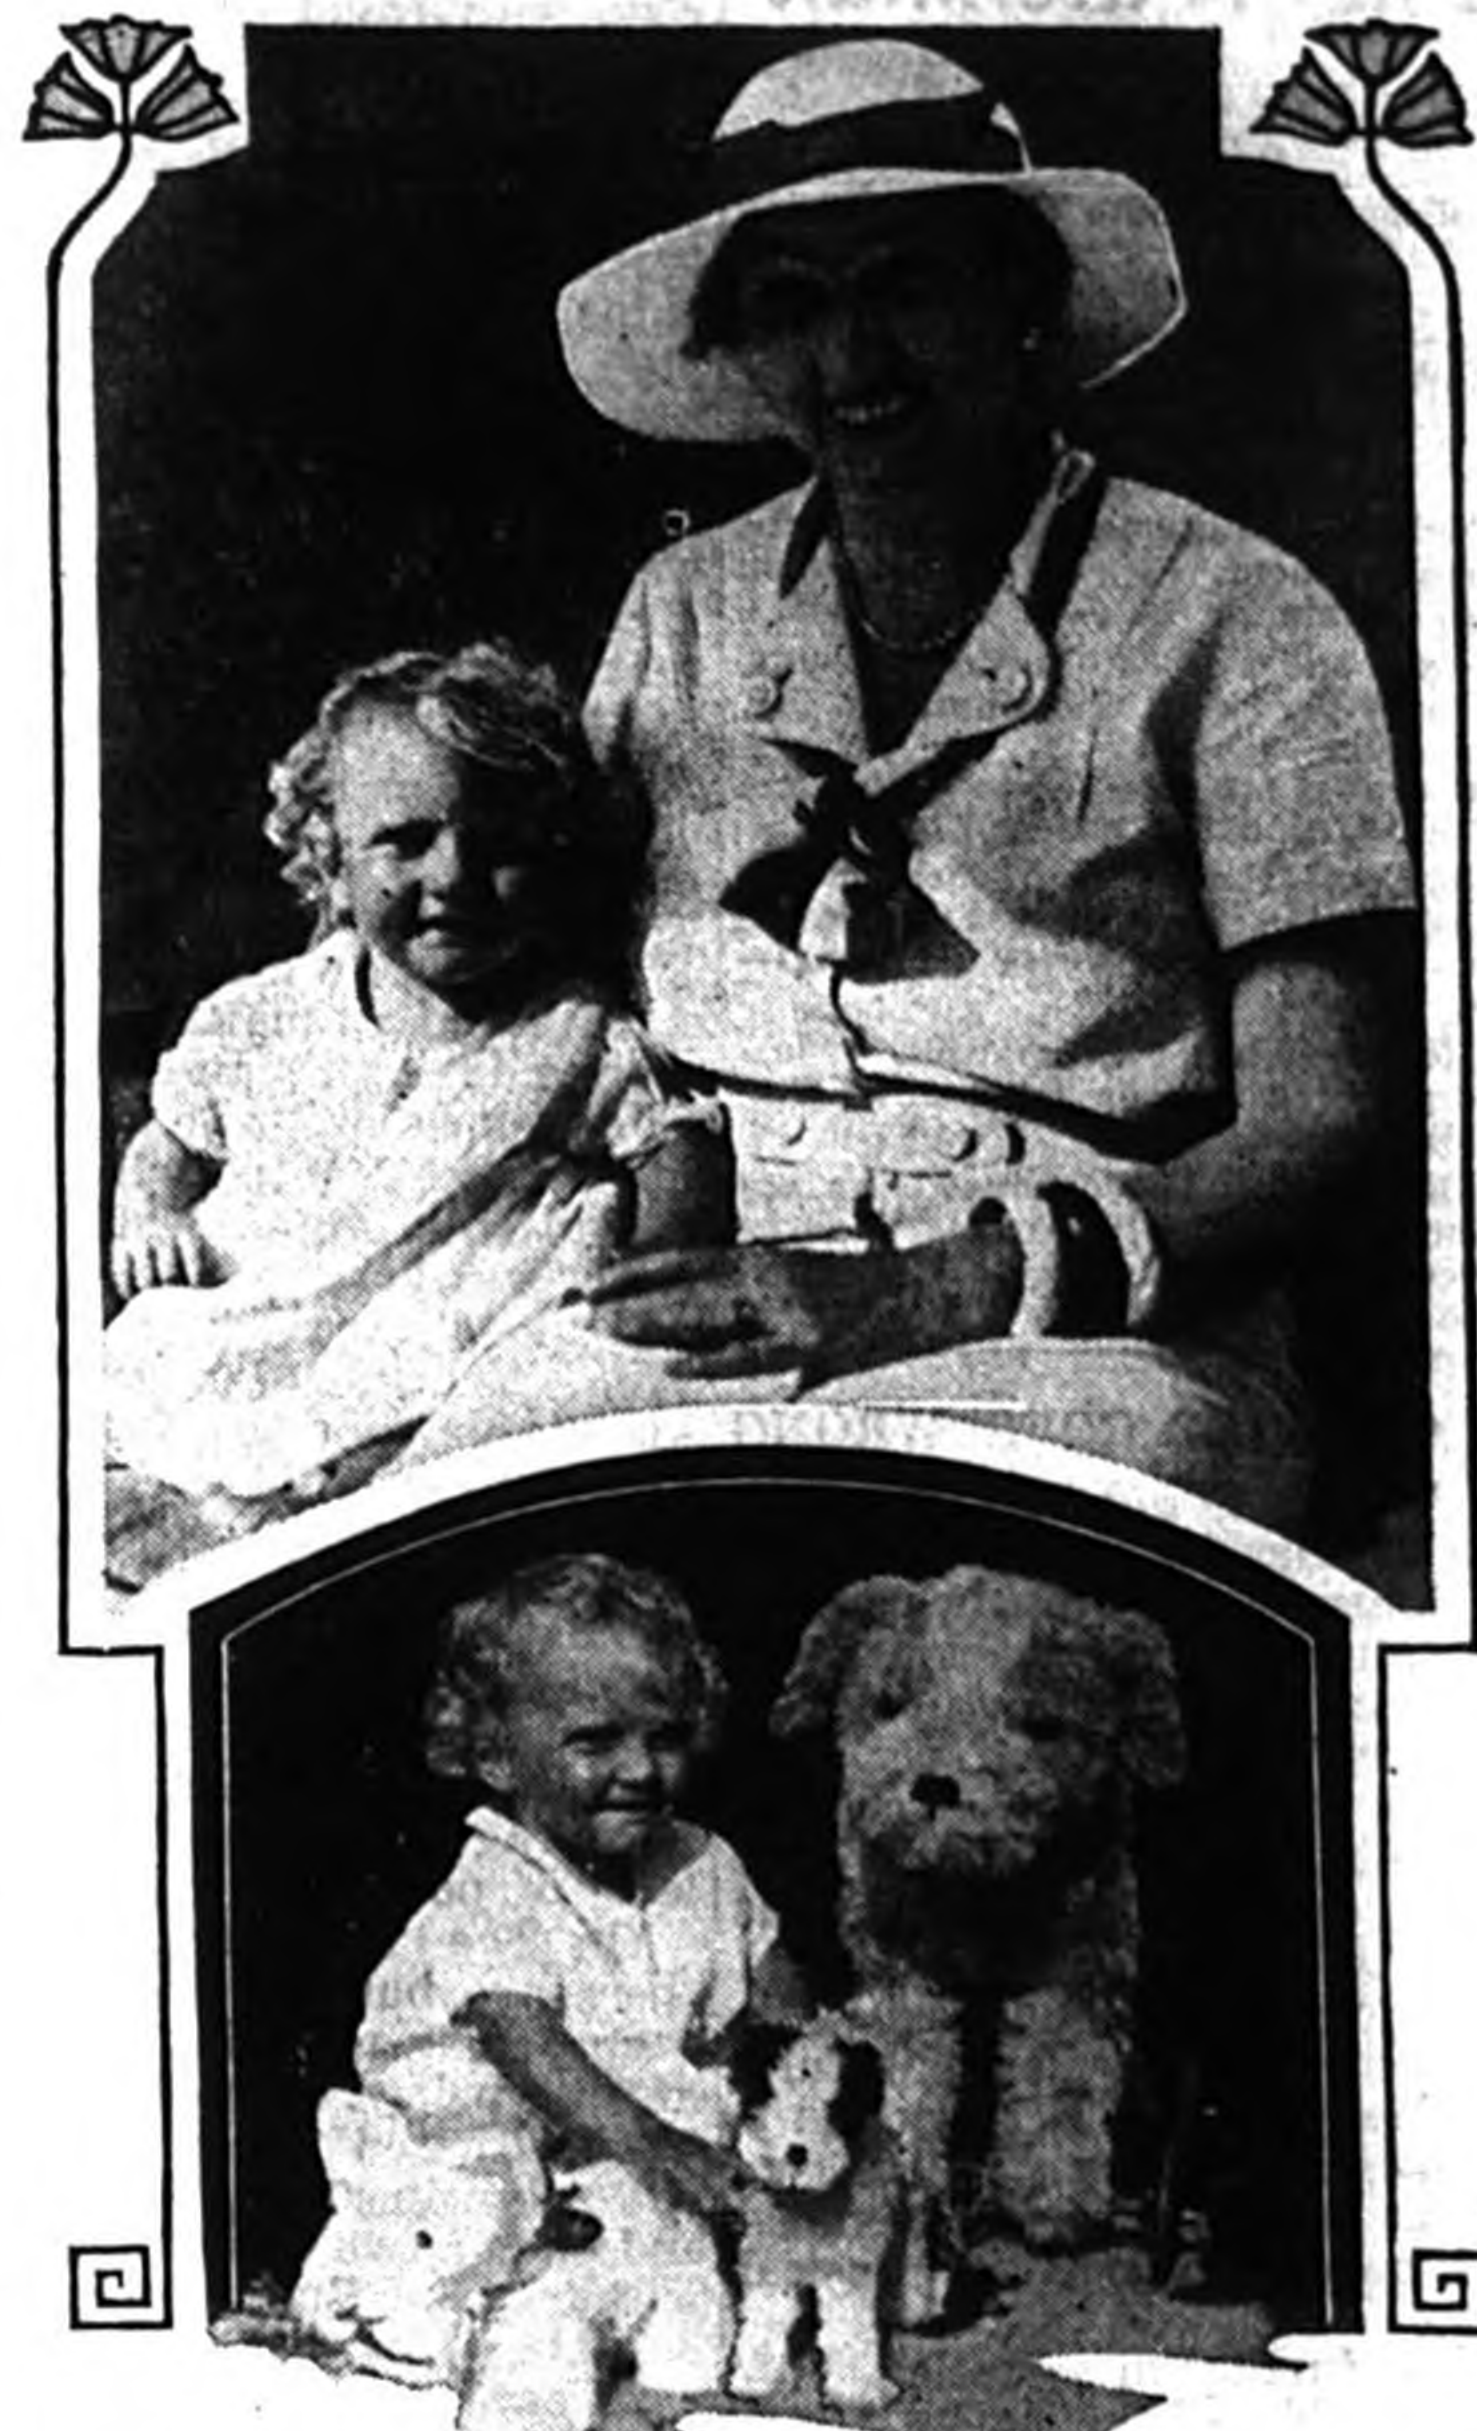

Nora was a bit afraid she was going to lose her pet, but Madame said that she was so glad Cackles had found a home where she could be happy, and that she would be pleased to have Nora keep her always.

Madame explained how the chickens came to be black, and Daddy Craig promised to send her half of them when they grew up; and Nora and Madame Bijou were both very happy about it.

Lovingly,
 Aunt Jean.

SCARY MOTHERS

There are many mothers in this world of ours who seem to forget how eager they were to play when they were young.

Boys of twelve, thirteen or fourteen who are anxious to join some organization like the boy scouts often report in a shame-faced way that their mothers will not let them join.

In plain words, mothers are fearful of camping trips, nights in the open and all those things, that go to make boy life so enjoyable. They keep their boy from joining his local troop until he is fifteen or sixteen years of age—and by that time he probably does not want to join.

Mothers forget that accidents among the boy scouts while engaged in their properly-supervised scout activities are few and far between. They forget that accidents on city streets during vacation months and over week-ends are many and serious. In other words in their fearfulness they keep their boys at home where they are forced to play in the heart of danger, rather than allowing them to go out in the fresh air, where they are properly supervised.

This fondness on the part of mothers causes them to seriously handicap their boys. Boy Scouts play all of the games that other boys play, but they do many things that other boys never learn to do. Furthermore, the young business men of today are largely the boys of fifteen or twenty years ago who were Scouts. More and more the question is being asked applicants for positions "Are you a Boy Scout?" The answer has much to do with whether or not the position is obtained.

Do not be a stumbling block to your boy.

A CROONER GOES WRONG

We never did like crooners; but if they would stick to the business of crooning, we might tolerate them as graciously as any other form of torture. Rudy Valee a strict specialist, has a weakness for discussing subjects which he knows little about, and on two occasions has made a bad break which should discourage this ill-advised radio pastime. He has blissfully referred to Victor Hugo, as a composer—although Hugo, as far as is known, never composed two consecutive musical notes. In a further dissertation, Valee is said to have hailed Laurence Hope (writer of the Indian Love Lyrics) as a contemporary, expressing the desire that he might some day meet him and congratulate this fellow artist. A correspondent to a Montreal daily, points out that Laurence Hope was a lady, not a gentleman, and has also been dead for the past quarter-of-a-century. Otherwise Rudy is more or less accurate in his facts—but we would still recommend him to stick to his crooning.

PARTY FIRST!

Partyism in extremis was the dish served to young Liberals on Monday, in a gathering of the St. Denis-Dorion division of Montreal. Here the party spirit was carried, in fact, to a point of self-deprecation, and one beheld the humorous instance of a Liberal attacking a Liberal for handing credit to a Conservative!

Dr. J. Arthur Denis, M.P. for the said division, roundly abused Hon. Athanase David, fellow Liberal, for commending the actions of Premier Bennett at the World Conference. It is generally admitted, he claims, that the conference was a fiasco and Mr. David "might better have held his peace" than to laud the efforts of Canada's chief representative.

Honest Liberals, we believe, will deplore the instilling of such an un-national outlook among their young partisans. Rather the fair judgment of Mr. David, who does not withhold credit when it may be due to a statesman of the opposing ranks.

NEWSPAPER POLICY

An editorial by E. A. Duncan in the Warton (Ont.) Echo deals with the policy of the weekly press, and has been held up for discussion by other weekly newspapers on the Pacific Coast. The article follows:

"I would like to be worth quite a bit of money for one reason only—that I might run the newspaper as I would like; to say the things I think; to express my honest-to-God opinions every week.

"As things are situated now, my bread and butter depends on my being diplomatic. My pen is shackled by a consideration of my pocket, by a constant respect for the well-being of my subscription list, and for the continued patronage of our advertising customers.

"Burns has said that 'An honest man's the noblest work of God.' No small newspaper man can afford to be honest, and most of them are governed by the cash box. If I could afford to be honest and say what I think, I would be the most unpopular man in town, and that calls for courage. Honesty and courage—they are almost synonymous terms, and two of the rarest virtues among men.

"And yet our modern society is saturated with humbuggery, with cant and hypocrisy, with fraud and make-belief and sham. So there is a great field for such a newspaper today, an honest, fearless sheet that would express the truth, regardless of where the chips might fly, but the man who could run such a paper would have to have clean skirts and not live in a glass house."

—Commenting on the above, a western exchange differs from Mr. Duncan in his conviction that editors are hampered, by material considerations, from expressing their honest opinions.

Coming close to home — we leave it to our readers whether The Watchman has taken a decided stand in matters of community interest. In every two-sided question, one clean-cut opinion must meet with disapproval from opposing thinkers; an expression of that opinion will usually incur their displeasure. Yet we are modest in the knowledge that the local editor (who is out-of-town this week and cannot gainsay this conviction) has spared neither commendation nor criticism in his policies. His opinions have been definite, and if not infallible, at least one can attribute to them a courage and honesty regardless of pecuniary influence.

On The Watchman's record there are but few instances to suggest the material unwisdom of this policy. The odd friend has withered under fire; the odd subscriber has dropped out; and one or two advertisers have withdrawn. But generally speaking we hand it to our readers, who have taken criticism graciously and good naturedly when occasion arose. The function of a newspaper and an editor includes the wielding of a constructive pen, and the local weekly can prove most useful in a territory such as this, where folks are tolerant and broad-minded. Broad minds have the faculty of hearing and weighing the other fellow's viewpoint.

The Ottawa Spotlight A Weekly Review of National Affairs

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, Aug. 16—The 'National Recovery' drive in the United States has appealed to the imagination of thousands of Canadians, and there are proposals afoot to institute in Canada some kind of similar action. Business men in the larger centres are reported to be willing to co-operate with the federal and provincial governments in increasing the purchasing power of the consuming classes as much as possible, by similar steps to the those being taken in the United States. Press reports credit Premier Henry of Ontario as saying that Sir George Perley and other federal ministers are studying a plan, but so far, at least, very little has been accomplished. It is safe to predict that no important decisions will be made until Premier Bennett returns from England later in the month. The authorities here take the stand that the United States' experiment is very much in the infant stage, that it may not work out as expected, and that for a few weeks at least Canada can well afford to watch developments. The government also feels that it has already done many of the things now being proposed in the United States.

A Political Angle?
Just the same, acute observers here at Ottawa would not be surprised to see the Bennett government attempt before long some spectacular 'drive' like Roosevelt's, which would appeal to the public imagination and help banish the depression. After all, there are several elections not far away, and anything which would mend business and put people to work would be worth all the political propaganda in the world toward the re-election of existing governments and the defeat of such uprisings as the 'C.C.F.'

Lord Macmillan, the chairman of the banking inquiry, made a favorable impression on Ottawa at the opening of the probe. There is every indication that the commission will make the fullest and most unprejudiced investigation of Canada's banking problems.

It goes almost without saying that Canada will have a central bank before very long. The banks won't like it, but they will have to put up with it. All three parties have come out openly in favor of such an improvement, and it was rather significant that Lord Macmillan, interviewed on his arrival, observed that Canada was about the only Dominion left without such an institution.

More Trouble Over Radio

The Radio Commission seems fated to be the centre of controversy. There are two or three rows brewing simultaneously. First of all, there is widespread criticism pouring in to Ottawa over the amount of French being employed in programs. Thomas Maher, French member of the commission, replied to the first barrage of criticism by observing that Canada was a bi-lingual country with one-third of the population French-speaking. In only critics argue that more than one-third of the programs to date have been French; and they also argue that only about one sixth of the license holders of Canada—the people who financially support the commission with their $2. a year—are French.

Then E. A. Weir, formerly program manager and at one time director of radio for the Canadian National Railway system, the man who arranged all the early programs of the Canadian Radio Commission, was first demoted, then let out entirely. Thomas Maher took over his duties as director of programs, and the latest rumor floating about parliament hill is that a French-Canadian is being appointed to fill Weir's place in the publicity department. From what I can learn 'he commission is storing up a flood of criticism for itself which will be thoroughly aired at the next session of parliament. Of course it would be impossible for a commission dealing with such a delicate and controversial matter to avoid a certain amount of onslaught. On the credit side should be mentioned the fact that the quality and variety of the programs lately being arranged have won the praises of a considerable section of the Canadian public.

The wheat crop of western Canada will be, like the fruit and vegetable crop of Ontario, very much below normal. In fact the former will set a new low record for many years. While deplorable in a way it will serve to reduce the appalling carry-over of grain which would have been the worst in history had the 1933 crop been a 'bumper.'

In Chicago the car became known to the police gangster squads and had to be discarded. Negotiations were begun for its purchase by an agent of the Kurssaal, Captain Harry le Breque, and eventually after careful work he managed to buy it. Then trouble arose. Driving the car through Chicago, he was stopped by Lieut J. Treacy and his bomb squad, who immediately recognized the car as that belonging to the Capone gang. Le Breque and his two companions, though not recognized as hoodlums, were taken to the detective bureau. There they were detained and questioned for some hours, and were not released till their statements were verified. Then Le Breque was allowed to leave with the car and ship it to England, where it arrived at the King George V. dock last week. A feature of this remarkable exhibit is that it is fitted with the latest police radio and broadcasting station pick up.

THE "GRANDES EAUX" PUT ON MARVELOUS DISPLAY SINCE BEING RESTORED

This picture was taken recently during the fountain display held in Versailles palace gardens, in France. These fountains are said to be the most beautiful in the world and since their restoration recently displays are given more often to the gratification of thousands of visitors. Owing to the very high cost of pumping the water from the Seine at Marly, the fountains only work for three-quarters of an hour at a time. The particular fountain shown above is called the "Bassin de Latone."

The Perpetual Councillor

Under the above title, Mr. P. M. Abel writes in "The Country Guide" an interesting article on Steve Williams, Councillor of M.D. Marquis. The article begins thus:

"Last year a certain councillor in southern Alberta, Steve Williams by name, let it be known that he was going to drop out of local politics. He had been at it too long to the neglect of his own affairs. He was going to give someone else a chance.

"That simple announcement created a mild panic among the ratepayers of Marquis Municipality. Steve was part of the established order. His zeal in community service was one of the few dependable facts in a changing world. True, he was only one of four councillors, and there were other good men to replace him, but there was only one Steve. So forthwith they got up a petition with 140 farmers' names on it, begging him to remain in office, and at a public function held in the village presented him with a purse as a token of appreciation of past services.

"Now it takes genuine sentiment to raise a purse in a farming community in these times. Just how genuine the sentiment was Steve found out in the ensuing election, for of course he surrendered. Councillors in the Municipality of Marquis are elected at large. When the votes were all counted Steve got 472 out of 498. At the four polls nearest his home he got all the votes but one, and it is pretty generally agreed that that one was his own vote."

"If you travel south from Blackwood Crossing as soon as you are across the Indian reserve your car is on a smooth, hard-packed, nine-mile stretch of dirt road. I made 40 miles an hour on it with as little discomfort as on the Trans-Canada highway which I had just left. Throughout the whole countryside this is known as "Steve's road." This is the piece of road Williams used to drag as a labor of love before the municipality began its road-making program. This is the piece of road which he as a councillor built with Fresno at a cost of $368 a mile for a 22-24-foot grade. This he regards as his greatest contribution to the municipality, even more notable than the tax reductions which he and his fellow councillors have been able to put into effect in the last two years. For, mark you, the tax rate in Marquis Municipality has been cut from seven mills in 1931 to five mills in 1932 and to four mills in 1933.

"Considering the price collapse which hangs about the neck of agriculture like a millstone, I found Councillor Steve quite unafraid of the grain grower's future. Production concerns him not at all. Soil drifting? Yes, bad enough now, and getting steadily worse, but he is commencing this summer to strip farm, and will in time have his whole 1,200 acres protected by that method. The economic outlook? You couldn't shake a handful of loose silver out of all the trousers in that neck of the woods. But the councillor has distributed less relief in the last year than in the year before. Farmers are living better. Gardens are being tended more seriously. There may not be more confidence, but there is less worry. If conditions mend there will be more for the creditors. If not—well, a farmer's first duty is to his pantry."

Current Notes of Municipal Interest

NOVEL ROAD SIGNS

Amherstburg Echo draws attention to strange road signs in two Ontario communities. At Lucknow, a Scotch town, the admonition is to "Drive Canny", while in another town there is a sign, "Drive Sanely, We Want to see You Again".

Jobless in Britain Decrease 144,771.

The total number of unemployed in Great Britain on June 26 was 2,438,108, a decrease of 144,771 for the month and 309,235 for the year.

Marriage vs. Relief.

According to a Vancouver newspaper, twenty-one couples on relief there have been married recently in order to prevent the authorities sending the husbands out to work camps. They prefer to stay in the city as married men.

Winnipeg Jobless in Revolt.

Tear gas bombs, batons and bricks were used recently when police and unemployed staged a sharp skirmish near Winnipeg's City Hall. Before the fray was ended, two policemen were compelled to retire with minor injuries and six demonstrators were arrested.

Montreal's Water Supply.

A Montreal Water Works report for 1932 shows that the pumps supplied 127,626,873 gallons of water daily to the citizens, which is a high average. Water has been piped into Montreal homes for more than a hundred years and the present municipal system had its origin in 1852. Now the engineers are preparing plans for increasing the service.

Inhalator and Police Radio for Mount Royal.

In an effort to co-operate more extensively with the police and emergency squads of the City of Montreal, officials of the Town of Mount Royal have authorized the purchase of an inhalator and an additional radio receiving set. The radio will be installed in the town's police automobile and the inhalator will be kept in the fire station where it will be readily accessible for calls in adjoining municipalities as well as in the town.

Southampton has World's Largest Dry Dock.

The largest dry dock in the world, built for the 78,000-ton Cunard liner that is now lying unfinished on her stocks at Clydesdale, was opened by the King this month.

The Southern Railway has spent about $65,000,000 on a vast harbor development scheme to make Southampton second to none as a seaport.

The dry dock is a notable engineering achievement. A couple of years ago the site was a useless tidal mud flat. A great quay wall, a mile and a half long, was built out into the bay and 1,258,000 cubic yards of mud, sand and gravel were excavated from the site of the dry dock. Construction of the walls and floor took nearly 500,000,000 cubic yards of concrete. The dry dock is 1,200 feet long, 135 feet wide at the entrance and 60 feet from the cope to the floor. Not only will it accommodate the new Cunarders when it is completed, but it can take vessels up to 100,000 tons, if they are ever built.

—Storm at Daybreak (see Rex Theatre program) rolls a number of very human virtues and emotions into a drama of married life, which cannot help but capture the interest of movie-lovers; the star cast makes the best out of a heart-touching plot... A fine program this, too, including the pick of the comedians, Laurel & Hardy, in Twice Two; also a rare musical attraction, The Street Singer, Aug. 24-25-26.

Messrs. Stanley Holt, D.C.M., H. J. Hammond, E. Boyd, W. J. Cooper, P.C.M., James Stewart of Grenville, also Rt. Wor. G. Mistress, Mrs. J. H. Morgan, Mrs. S. Holt, Rt. Wor. Deputy Treasurer, Mrs. L. Mrs. J. H. Morgan, Rt. Wor. G. Mistress of the L.O.B.A. of the Province of Quebec, was in town last week, visiting a number of L.O.B.A. lodges in the County, and was the guest of Mrs. Stanley Holt.

Appreciation has been expressed for the fine entertainment given by Prof. Boyce and his Hawkesbury School of Music, at a recent Lawn Social held by St. Simeon's Church, Lachute. The orchestra comprised a dozen stringed instruments and their selections were generously applauded. A local quartette, with Miss Valpy, Mrs. Pollock, Messrs. George and Henry Miles, contributed to the enjoyment with vocal numbers. It is understood Prof. Boyce has aroused the enthusiasm of the young people in Hawkesbury, and has a banjo band, a string band, and a 7-piece jazz orchestra making fine progress at his studio.

Here and There

An orchard consisting of only one tree which has borne 116 different varieties of apples and one variety of pears by means of careful grafting, is located in Eastern Canada. This season 47 varieties of apples put forth blossoms.

Canada produced 1,285,888 ounces of silver during March as compared with 1,207,154 ounces in February and 1,460,137 ounces in March 1932. 3,976,818 ounces were produced during the first quarter of 1933, a 17 per cent. decline as compared with the same period in 1932.

Hon. Frank L. Polk, acting secretary of state for the United States in 1918-19, well-known corporation lawyer and director of many companies including the Chase National Bank and the Northern Pacific Railway, is staying at the Banff Springs Hotel with his family for the summer vacation.

More than equalling expectations the New York-Montreal cruise of the Duchess of Bedford, set a new holiday record for special trips recently when 900 passengers took the excursion. Guaranteed a romantic moon every night and a picturesque run down the St. Lawrence, the passengers embarked steadily at the rate of three to the minute for five hours.

Wheat-cutting is now general in Manitoba and under way in the other prairie provinces, according to a recent weekly report issued by J. M. McKay, general agricultural agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Western Lines. There is still, however, great need for further moisture, especially in the central and southerly parts of the grain-growing provinces.

"Did the Mayor show presence of mind when the Town Hall caught fire?"

"Yes, he cancelled the fireworks display arranged for that evening."

About 20 young people gathered around a bonfire at Campbell's pond for the annual Corn Roast on Monday night.

Mrs. Jos. Hamilton, accompanied by the Misses Lila and Margaret Hamilton and Mr. E. Hamilton, spent a few days at the old homestead.

A very novel and interesting entertainment in the form of a Conundrum Tea was held on the lawn at the home of Mrs. J. A. Campbell, under auspices of the Mission Circle, on Thursday afternoon. A very enjoyable programme was presented, including songs by the Misses Helen White, Rena Cameron and Ruth Campbell; recitations by Mrs. H. T. Fuller and Miss R. Poitras. Mrs. A. E. White and Miss Rena Cameron were the accompanists. Miss Cameron also rendered several piano solos.

With apologies to Lindbergh, our friend with the 1920 Ford has aptly named it the "Spirit of St. Vitus."

SATURDAY, REGATTA DAY

A real good time is looked forward to on Saturday next at the Lake Louisa Regatta. A good program is prepared and nice prizes will be given the winners in the various events. Citizens and Merchants of Lachute and Brownsburg responded loyally in donating prizes and all that now awaits is good and all that now awaits is "good weather." A hearty invitation is extended to all. Come along and enjoy the fun.

Lesson for August 27

SAUL

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 15:13-26.
GOLDEN TEXT—And Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. 1
Samuel 15:22.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning to Obey.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Why a King Failed.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Successes and Failures of Saul.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—The Strength and Weakness of Saul.

Few men had greater advantages than Saul. Certainly all human history fails to record a more tragic failure. In order to present this lesson properly, it is necessary that the teacher have a synthetic grasp of Saul's history.

I. Saul's Advantages.

1. A worthy inheritance (9:1). His father was "a mighty man of power."
One's inheritance is a strong factor in determining his success or failure in life.

2. His natural gifts (9:2).

a. He was humble (10:22). When facing the responsibility of national leadership he hid himself.

b. He was considerate of his father (9:5). Not being successful in the mission committed unto him and thinking that his father would be concerned about him, he proposed to go back.

c. The grace of God was upon him (10:5-7). God visited him with his grace to enable him to perceive the divine choice and to make good in it.
d. The Holy Spirit came upon him (10:10). Acceptable service can only be rendered in the energy of the Holy Spirit.

e. He was zealous for God (11:4-15).
As leader he rendered loyal service unto his people because of zeal for God.

3. The friendship of Samuel (15:35).
Saul not only was loyal to Saul in the time of his life, but greatly mourned his death.

II. Saul Made King (chaps. 8-10).

1. The demand of the people (8:1-22). The reason for this demand was threefold:

a. Incapacity of old age (v. 5). This was at least the plea of the people, which seems not to have been denied.

b. The unfaithfulness of his sons
(v. 6). Samuel greatly blundered in the appointment of his sons as judges.
The office was not hereditary, and they were morally unfit (v. 3).

c. Desired to be like other nations
(v. 5). The surrounding nations had strong leaders and rulers, and it was natural that the Israelites should desire proper leadership. Samuel protested, and took the matter to the Lord in prayer. The Lord directed him to solemnly point out to the people the meaning of their action.

2. Saul chosen as king (9:1-11).
While on an errand for his father,
Samuel found him and anointed him
(10:1-16). In due time the divine choice was confirmed by the people at Mizpeh (10:17-27).

3. Saul's leadership displayed (11:1-15). He revealed his military genius in effecting a great victory over the Ammonites at Jabesh. Samuel took advantage of this opportunity to have Saul confirmed as king.

III. Saul's Failure (15:1-25).

1. God's command (vv. 1-3). God directed him to utterly destroy the Amalekites because of their evil treatment of Israel (Exod. 17:8; Deut.
25:17).

2. Saul's disobedience (vv. 4-9).
Agag, the king, was spared and the best of the goods appropriated.

3. Saul rejected by God (vv. 19-25).
a. Samuel cried to God (v. 11). The news of Saul's disgraceful failure greatly disturbed Samuel, moving him to pray to God day and night.

b. Saul's hypocritical pretense (vv.
15, 16). This pretense carried a lie upon its face. His disobedience was revealed by the bleating of the sheep and the lowing of the herds.

c. Samuel rehearses before Saul God's dealing with him (vv. 17-23). He brought him face to face with his sin.
God is more concerned with having obedience on the part of his servants than he is to have them offer sacrifices unto him.

IV. The Divine Judgment Falls Upon Saul (15:26-35).

1. The loss of his kingdom (vv.
26-31). For the presumptuous offering of sacrifice the kingdom was rent from Saul and the dynasty passed from his house.

2. Under the control of an evil spirit (19:9-11). When Saul refused allegiance to God, Satan took control of him.

3. His shameful death (31:1-4). He refused to destroy the Amalekites and was shamefully treated by an Amalekite (II Sam. 1:10), and ended his life by his own hand.

Pray More

No resolution or, better, no determination you can make will mean so much in wonderful results as to determine that you will pray much more than ever, that you will pray longer and more widely and deeply in the "closet hours" at a time to do it, that you will have a worthwhile daily family worship, and that you will really pray in church services. Real praying breath turns to mighty steam power, to radio messages farther than you dream, to results immeasurable.

LITTLE WHITE RATS

When I tell you that the present family pets are white rats you will know that there are boys in the family. They belonged in the first place to the boy next door, but he could not remember to feed and water them so his father made him get rid of them. Our small son came in great excitement to see if he could not take the rats.
He could. After the novelty wore off, he too forgot to look after them, but rather than see them go his big brother took on the care of them and they are usually fed. The boys would open the cage and let the rats play around and once or twice they forgot to shut them up but found that the rats stayed about the place. Now they never shut them up and they come and go at their own sweet will. They are the friendliest things—mice too friendly to suit me. They seem to desire water more than food and as soon as their water dish is filled they drink almost endlessly. Oh yes! Much as I shiver at them, I have even given them water myself on these hot days. They are much too grateful so I prefer to water them when they are out of sight but it does not take them long to find the fresh water. There is a Boston Ivy which covers the back and one side of our house and they spend most of their time in it. One morning while still in bed we saw one run along the window sill of an upstairs window. It played about there seeming to be quite pleased to be talked to and then climbed in the vines and went on up until it was out of sight.
They say you can get used to anything but I never thought I would get used to white rats.

MOTHER INSTINCT OVER- RATED

Some people still seem to think that being a mother automatically endows one with all the necessary knowledge to bring up and feed a child properly. This may be so with animals but it certainly is far from so with human beings. Mother-instinct supplies a great deal but it is over-rated. Most mothers very sincerely try to do the best they can for their children but anyone who comes in contact with many mothers knows that they lack knowledge. Knowledge of how to feed their children is most lacking in many mothers.
I was talking to a kindergarten teacher and she remarked that she wished it was compulsory for every mother to study Nutrition. She said that she found so many mothers anxious to do the right thing but did not know what to do. She went on to tell of a child in her room—remember it was kindergarten and he would not be more than 3 years old. This child was very much under-weight and quite nervous. His mother was anxious about him and was trying to bring up his weight. She said she had great difficulty in getting him to eat breakfast as he disliked it but she insisted on him eating. One morning he slept in and rather than have him late she sent his breakfast to school with him. And this was his breakfast. Heavy, course bread, of a texture like Boston Brown Bread; a large piece of mince pie; and a regular slab of a moist cake filled with fruit and nuts. That is a perfect example of a mother who meant well, but was doing the wrong thing through sheer ignorance.

CUCUMBERS

Cucumbers are one of the pleasant things of summer. They fit into so many places in the meal.
It may surprise you to know that cucumbers contain more water than does milk—cucumbers are about 94% water and milk is only about 87%. Most of the solids of cucumbers is cellulose which makes the frame work, whereas the solids of milk are in suspension. Cucumbers contain vitamins and minerals and but few calories so they are a real friend to those who are trying to keep down their weight. It takes all of three cucumbers to give 100 calories.
There are a very few people who find cucumbers difficult to digest but fortunately most of us don't and they supply a part of the fresh foods which we all require.

Most of us serve sliced cucumbers in vinegar—I hope you put a good dash of water in the vinegar, as it is much too strong if not diluted. If you score the pared cucumber lengthwise, with the prongs of a fork, before slicing you will have a fluted slice for a change.

CUCUMBERS WITH SOUR CREAM DRESSING

Season freshly soured cream with salt, pepper, sugar and a little vinegar or lemon juice and pour over sliced cucumbers.
Many like this dressing on a salad of lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes.

CUCUMBER SALAD

Quarter a pared cucumber lengthwise and remove the seeds. Cut the cucumber in dice and add finely chopped onion, the amount of onion depending on the taste of the family. Moisten with salad dressing. Do not add salad dressing until just before using as it becomes too moist if allowed to stand. This makes a good salad to accompany hot meat, and there are not many in this category.

SUMMER SALAD

Mix one package of lime flavoured jelly powder with 2 cups hot water, add 1 tablespoon vinegar and chill. Prepare radishes, cucumbers and green onions by dicing the cucumbers after paring and removing the seeds, slicing the radishes thinly and cutting onions in small pieces. Prepare 2 cups of vegetables altogether, using them in any proportion that suits your taste. When the jelly is just beginning to set, stir in the vegetables and mould in individual moulds. Serve on watercress if possible in place of lettuce.

CANNOT PRACTICE SUBJECT PREACHED

Bermuda's the place to write, and a play dealing with neighborliness should not be written in too neighborly an atmosphere, says Charles B. Milholland, New York playwright who is now in Bermuda.

Milholand writes on a flat stone in an isolated Bermuda cave, though the subject of his next play is international neighborliness. He found New York too noisy and Bermudians too neighborly, so he secluded himself. He says President Roosevelt gave him much material for the new play, which will succeed his "Twentieth Century" now running in New York.

VISITING QUEBEC

LAURENTIAN TRAILS

" . . . Yes, in spite of all,
Some shape of beauty moves away the pall
From our dark spirits" . . .

Economic conditions cannot make us forget that the Laurentian country—that Promised land of vacationists—is now at its charming best. There, shimmering amid thick growths of spruce and balsam are our hundreds of lakes,—our hundreds of cascading brooks.
There, spreading themselves into fantastic shapes, rising one above the other, are our mountains and our hills . . . And,
Nowhere in the world, during August, September, October, do the modern motor trails wind through more enchanting glades

One of these trails,—the nearest, the most accessible,—is called prosaically the Montreal-Terrebonne-St-Donat Road. But what's in a name? The fact is that this road, although easily reached and only seventy-five miles in length, is a typical Laurentian trail with all the gorgeous landscapes, all the opportunities for hunting and fishing that the name implies.
The discoverers and present users of this road who have come to consider it as their own royal "apanage", will resent the present article as a sort of encroachment on their assumed privacy. But it will be admitted that their selfishness in keeping to themselves their knowledge of the beauties of this road, constitutes a variety,
—if a genteel one,—of "road-hogging".

At the end of this road is the village of Saint-Donat. In years from now, when the Laur-entians have become the international Mecca for holiday-seekers, Saint-Donat shall be a sort of New World Biarritz. It has everything. Situated on the shores of Lake Archambault, at an altitude of 1,285 feet, it is the hub of a huge characteristic Laurentian region. At only a short distance is Lake Ouareau, one of the gems of the whole North Country, and all round Saint-Donat are thickly wooded mountains—of from 2,000 to 2,500 feet above sea level. In the clear, cold water, often of great depth of the numerous near-by lakes, live those spirited aristocrats of the game fish world,—our trout, our dore, our bass. In the woods, are to be found our own pretty Canadian deer, our own partridge,—and, as big as life, wolves, bears, and foxes, who have priority rights to the occupancy of our forests.

Of course, it may be that when Saint-Donat becomes a swanky tourist centre, it will lose much of its present charm and delightful Frenchy atmosphere. At present, the village is genuine and unspoiled. It has its own little industries and a few stores, and the prices for comfortable hotel and boarding-house accommodations,—for canoes and guides and farm produce are most reasonable.

On leaving Montreal, the road to Saint-Donat crosses Pont-Viau, Saint-Vincent-de-Paul, Saint-François-de-Sales, Terrebonne, Mascouche, Saint-Esprit, Sainte-Julienne, Saint-Theodore and Notre-Dame-de-Merci. The four latter villages offer, like Saint-Donat, fine opportunities for camping, hunting and fishing. But, from Mascouche to Montreal, the country is no longer pioneer country. The villages are much more important and more self-conscious, the cultivated fields more numerous, the farm houses more civilized. It is a fertile region where tobacco, growers, dairy, fruit and vegetable farmers wax prosperous. Here and there are a few important industries, employing, even through the depression years, hundreds of workers.

To this immense region, comprising the counties of Laval, Terrebonne, L'Assomption and Montcalm, the road Montreal-Terrebonne, Saint-Donat furnishes easy access to the metropolitan market.

Tourists may obtain free road maps and all necessary information from the Provincial Tourist Bureau, 1013 Dominion Square, Montreal.

ALL-BRAN RELIEVED HIS CONSTIPATION

Delicious Cereal Brought New Health to Mr. Bartholomew

We quote from his voluntary letter: "I had considerable trouble with my stomach. Digestion was out of the question. I got medicine which gave me only temporary relief.

"Then I thought of taking ALL-BRAN. I started eating a cereal dish-ful two or three times a day.

"It has been over a year now since I ate that first dish of bran, but from that day to this I have had the pleasure of enjoying the proper functioning of the digestive organs.

"Thanks to ALL-BRAN. I still eat it regularly and like it better all the time."—Lester Bartholomew.
(Address furnished upon request.)

Constipation is usually due to lack of "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to promote elimination. ALL-BRAN supplies both, as well as iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Certainly this food is more natural than taking harmful patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. With each meal in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

BATHER HURLED THROUGH WATER MAIN

A bather in the Ottawa River was suddenly sucked into a 10-foot city water main. Twenty minutes later he arrived at a pump-house in the heart of a residential area of Ottawa—and for the first time remembered he had left his clothing on the river bank. In desperation he shouted to a man in an apartment house to throw him a pair of trousers. Explanations followed the trousers and eventually the swimmer walked overland to his own clothes.

RESTRICTION UPON UNDERTAKERS

City Councillors of Three Rivers, Que., are seeking to pass a by-law prohibiting the display of coffins, etc., in the windows of undertaking parlours. A notice of motion to this effect was passed, and it seems probable the new regulation will be entered, before long, in the city's bylaws.

CIVIC WOOD-PILES

Mr. J. Frank Kelly, mayor of Huntsville, recently stated that he is opposed to direct relief and that, in his own municipality, the unemployment problems had been dealt with during the past three years by the purchase of a bush in which men were set to work cutting wood. This was sold locally and to adjoining municipalities
"and when the season closed there was a small surplus and no increase in taxation." This happy idea is also carried out in some Quebec towns and has proved successful, Lachute, where this journal is published, being one of them, and Stanstead, Que. another.

The man who was driven to drink by trouble, now has a son who gets in trouble trying to drive after getting the drink.

Look' Em Over

Residents should be very careful about their dealings with transients who beg on the street and from door to door.
The police recently began fingerprinting all transients caught begging at Guelph. The prints of 16 were sent to Ottawa and word was received that every one of the 16 had a criminal record. One man had 16 convictions.

—Amherstburg Echo.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE TOPIC IS "MIND"

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Aug.
20, is "Mind."

The Golden Text is: (Philip-pans 2: 13) "It is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure."

The following passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy:

"For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor?" "Who forgiveth all thine iniquities;
who healeth all thy diseases;
..." (Romans 11: 34 and Psalms 103: 3)

"God is Mind, and God is infinite;..." "Which was first, Mind or medicine? If Mind was first and self-existent, then Mind, not matter, must have been the first medicine, God being All-in-all, He made medicine; but that medicine was Mind. It could not have been matter, which departs from the nature and character of Mind, God." (Science and Health pages 492 and 142.)

CO-OPERATION NEEDED IN WEED CONTROL

Weed control is one of the most vital agricultural problems which we have, a problem in which every person who owns a square foot of land should be intensely interested. If neglected they will soon take possession. In every municipality we have persons who are careless and places which have been neglected. Fortunately the percentage is very low. There is nothing so discouraging for the man who is making an effort to control weeds as to be living near someone who does not make any attempt to do so.
One neglected patch will pollute acres the following year. Every country in the world that has developed a worth while agriculture has weeds and the majority have adopted legislation to control them. It has been necessary to do likewise in this province. The careful farmer demands protection and is entitled to it. However legislation in itself will not control a single weed.
Any work done must be the result of definite human action.

Perennial sow thistle is on the increase and must be kept under control. New weeds are continually appearing and must not be permitted to increase. If a municipality is clean this is a good time to keep it clean. Weed Inspectors have been appointed and the 1933 war on weeds is under way. Every one must enlist and help destroy the enemy. Make this a weed month by pulling, cutting, plowing and cultivating weeds, and by persuading some one else to do likewise. Weeds have no place in a progressive community. Do your share to prevent them from going to seed, and help protect the most important industry in the province.—Agriculture.

Ottawa Exhibition Will Open on Monday

Scots Guards Band and Eric
the Robot Among Notable Features. C.C.E. Opening Next Monday.

Many new and outstanding factors are contributing to the keen interest taken in the Ottawa Exhibition which will open on Monday, August 21st.
and continue for an entire week
six days and six nights.

To many the important feature will be the programs by the band of His Majesty's Scots Guards. This famed organization is now on the Atlantic by the gracious permission of His Majesty, the King, and will open its Canadian tour in Ottawa on the Monday of exhibition week, giving two concerts each day for the first four days of the week. In addition to the band proper there will be four Highland dancers and a piper, a champion of Scotland. For the last two days the band of the Black Watch, Montreal, will be heard. This is an outstanding Canadian band and it features concert programs.

Eric, the Robot.

Eric the Robot, one of the only two mechanical men in the world, also will open his Canadian tour on the Monday of the Ottawa Exhibition. Standing little higher than an ordinary man, this creature of metal and electricity weighs three and a half tons. Without any human aid other than the voice, Eric stands or sits down by word of command, smokes a cigaret, fires a revolver, answers simple questions, reads from a book and does other amazing things.

Grandstand Program.

For the feature evening of fencing in front of the grandstand will be a Schooley production, an elaborate music dance revue, the Winter Garden Revue of 1933. Schooley has been in Ottawa before and is coming back because of the wonderful outdoor presentation which he stages with gorgeous costumes and remarkable lighting and scenic effects. The production and cast will be entirely different from those of previous years. In addition to twenty-four ballerinas there will be an outstanding prima donna and special acts by artists who have made good on the theatrical stage, and in the night clubs of the large United States cities.

This offering will be in addition to the high class vaudeville acts and the spectacular fireworks display which will conclude the program each evening.

Centres of Interest.

For the first time the Dominion Archives will make a display at an exhibition. This will be one of the most interesting displays ever seen in any exhibition. It is being installed now and on account of the priceless articles which are being placed they are under constant supervision of the R.C.M.P. and of a city fireman. The live fish, wild animals and game birds from the Ontario Game and Fisheries Department will be another center of interest for young and old. In addition many other departments of the Dominion and provincial governments will have educational and interesting displays. The city waterworks department also is arranging a novel exhibition.

Horse races, a really new midway with the latest in rides and shows, automobile show, pure food show, displays by merchants and manufacturers, horse shows, live stock, poultry and pets, flowers and fruit, child welfare, baby show, dog show and a long list of other factors will contribute to the making of a great exhibition.
Coupon tickets giving six admissions for one dollar are now on sale and are in good demand.
These may be obtained from agents or from various business places and from branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia outside the city. Only a limited number of these tickets will be issued.

GRENVILLE NORTH

An enjoyable occasion was spent on the grounds of Mr. W. Murray, last Wednesday. The evening was cool and wood had been gathered, by the brook and placed in readiness for a bonfire. Mr. Murray had also made benches for the use of the guests.

As the shadows began to fall, the fire was started and the children of the Baptist Sunday School, led by Miss Vera Gauley, sang old-time songs, camp songs and hymns. After singing and story-telling, Miss Gauley produced a supply of marshmallows, and both children and grown-ups enjoyed these toasted delicacies.

The evening was brought to a close by more singing and the gathering joined hands in a friendship circle while singing the last hymn. Credit is due to Miss Gauley who has so willingly, all through the summer, been teaching these children to sing. She has endeared herself to all the youngsters and the community extends to her a hearty vote of thanks.

It has been reported the old farm house of Mr. Jim Nixon, on the Scotch Road, was struck by lightning and completely destroyed in one of the recent thunderstorms.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sart and daughters, of Montreal, called at the home of Mr. William Cousins on Saturday last.

Mr. Tom Hall, Mr. Michael and Miss Margaret Hall, were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Johnson.

Ticket Agents are Royally Treated on Annual Convention Trip

Life on shipboard was brought forcibly home to the members of the Canadian Ticket Agents' Association as they embarked on the Canadian Pacific liner "Duchess of Bedford" for their 47th. Annual Convention on the New York cruise, whose sailings are becoming so deservedly popular.

To those unacquainted with ocean travel it is indeed an impressive sight to watch the embarkation proceedings and the natural excitement of friendly partings as the big vessel pulls away from the dock amidst the fluttering of the myriad colored paper ties that are fondly held by those on dock until distance snaps the link and we are out on the bosom of the noble St. Lawrence.

No specially assigned section of the boat had been allotted to the members of the Association and no special privileges were accorded, which was as it should be, in that this trip was made, not alone for pleasure but of education, in which the members might have first hand knowledge when imparting information to the travelling public.

It is pleasing to stand aside and watch how quickly one adapts themselves to their new surroundings. At first sight one may note slight disappointment on the part of some who passing through the maze of corridors and alleys, up until reaching their cabin which looks a mighty small apartment for their eight days housing but when it is considered that nearly a thousand passengers were tucked comfortably away with obliging attendants to supply their every need, we marvel at the manner in which it is all accomplished.

In such a vast throng it is but natural that there should be at first, a feeling of strangeness, but this is only a matter of brief space till each one begins to know some one else, parties are formed, friends are found, and all assume a comfortable feeling and strangeness is banished. The music and the dance bring many together when new friendships are formed and it is interesting to observe the various means in

SIGNS AID MOTORISTS

Improvements of marked value to motorists are noticed in town and on the neighboring highways. Several signs have been erected during the past week, indicating the direction and distance to surrounding points, while mileage posts have been marked more explicitly to aid users of the highways.

Efforts of this kind by the Provincial Highways Department do not pass unnoticed, and are duly appreciated in the districts benefitted.

Vankleek Hill Farmer Gored by Bull

William Haughton, a farmer, in the neighborhood of Vankleek Hill, sustained severe injuries last Wednesday when he was gored by an infuriated bull. He was probably saved from death by the prompt action of his daughter, who rushed to his assistance. The farmer was leading the bull into the barn, by a rope and a ring through its nose, when the animal attacked him. His cries for help brought his daughter, who with her brother, succeeded in diverting the animal's attack to themselves and ultimately quieted the brute. It was discovered Mr. Haughton had sustained a fracture of several ribs and his collar bone.

Farmers' Club and W. I. Picnic at Lakefield

A beautiful day, a large crowd and a good programme of sports combined to make the Farmers' Club and the Women's Institute of Lakefield joint picnic a splendid success. Mr. Tomalty's grove especially prepared for the occasion was an ideal place and everyone reported an excellent time.

A new departure this year was the introduction of regulation horse-shoes for pitching, through the kindness of Mr. A. Tomalty. There is a rumor that a horse-shoe pitching club will be formed in Lakefield very shortly.

Mrs. A. Tomalty and Mrs. H. Scott were in charge of the refreshment booth and Mr. and Mrs. Kuhring were in charge of the sports.

The following were the prize winners in the various events: Boys and Girls under 6.—1st. Earle Thomson; 2nd. Edith Beeley; 3rd. Arthur Beeley. Girls 6-10.—1st. Edna Jones; 2nd. Phyllis Solomon. "Punishment"

What did you steal, O dying thief,
To win that wondrous sentence?
What evil did you work, that brought
That last, God-heard repentance?

Was it for theft of gold, or bread,
They hung you to that cross?
(Had you not learned, before that hour,
That bread and gold are dross?)

What were the lame and twisted steps
That led you through the years
To that sweet moment, when your words
Fell on a Saviour's ears?

Strange, that a dying criminal's gaze
Should meet a King's proud eyes!
Strange, that a hand stretched out to steal
Should grasp . . . a Paradise!

Regatta Day at Lake Louise Drew Big Crowd

Lake Louise Regatta, which for several years past has signalled a hoo-doo of the elements was held on Saturday in surprisingly fine weather. The event drew a large attendance, numbering around five hundred people.

Sports had been listed in an attractive program, and the entries showed enthusiastic competition, livened by spills, thrills and a generous measure of good humor. Merchants and business men had contributed nobly to the success of the occasion, and some 50 attractive prizes offered inducement to the swimmers, rowers, speeders, and stunt-artists. Appreciation is expressed to those who contributed so generously.

The program is published below. Evening was the occasion for several bonfire assemblies around the Lake, climaxing a day of interest and social enjoyment. The largest of these gatherings was held at A. Habib's premises, where this progressive store-keeper had arranged for a corn-roast and bonfire to entertain his patrons. It was generally conceded Regatta Day had substantiated the friendly spirit which prevails in this growing summer resort.

Highway Walker Carries Tail Light

The carrying of lights by pedestrians has been advocated in our sister province, but hitherto the idea has not been taken seriously in Quebec. Last week, however, a walker accompanied by a lady on the Mont Laurier route near Val Morin was seen carrying a species of tail-light, designed to protect him from speeding motorists who frequent this section of the paved highway. Pointing rearward, the light was attached to a belt around his waist, and was switched on whenever a car came in view of the walker.

Motor Cyclist Trials Passed Through Lachute

A novel trial run for motorcyclists, which did not, however, draw the approval of residents in its path, was billed for Saturday night last, commencing at midnight from Montreal. The trials were sponsored by the Province of Quebec Centre Auto Cycle Union which governs the sport of motorcycling in this province and in part of Ontario. Competitors left at one-minute intervals following a course through Rosemere, Lachute and Lancaster and finishing at Cornwall.

Points were based on regular running past time checks at various points, and also on noisless driving.

Fire Destroys Barn at Staynerville

The reflection of a blaze west of Lachute on Monday evening attracted curiosity in town. The glare, which was seen around 9.45 p.m., proved to be a barn ablaze adjacent to the grounds of Staynerville Hotel, near the C.P.R. Station. The property is owned by H. Guay, and there is no dwelling house adjoining. It was rumored the outbreak started from a gasoline engine housed in the barn. The building was completely demolished, the heavy damage including loss of two hay-mows and machinery; it is stated the loss is fully covered by insurance. The hotel sheds were threatened by the proximity of the fire, but willing hands succeeded in averting any further spread.

Canadians Highest Per Capita Consumers of Electricity

Canada, a young country with a small population, has a per capita consumption of hydro-electric energy more than twice that of the United States, four times that of Germany and six times that of Great Britain; in fact it has the highest ratio of this kind in the world, according to R. H. Dean, director, Nesbitt Thomson and Co., Limited, speaking recently over the radio.

Only 20 per cent. of the Dominion's power possibilities have been developed and the advances of science, both as applied to domestic needs and to industry, will find, within the next few years a wealth of energy ready to its hand for practical application of its discoveries and developments. Canadians, Mr. Dean submitted, are the most electrically-minded people in the world.

Ontario Car Licenses Half Price from Sept. 1

The Ontario Department of Highways will cut all 1933 marker permits for passenger cars, motor trucks, trailers and dealers' use to one-half their present cost commencing Sept. 1. Up to August 1, it is stated registrations for passenger vehicles had decreased only three per cent and motor truck registrations only five per cent in Ontario.

ST. EUSTACHE HAS BY-LAW TO ENFORCE PASTEURIZATION

Typhoid Directs Attention to Milk Supply

All milk sold in the town of St. Eustache-sur-le-Lac must be pasteurized in future, the council having passed a new by-law to this effect at a special meeting held on Monday night. The by-law provides for the appointment of a committee, whose duty will be to satisfy themselves that all applicants for a permit to sell milk, cream and other dairy products can fulfil the requirements.

The by-law is designed to ensure that all milk in the town will be free from bacteria, and it will go into effect 15 days from the date of its passage. It will also prevent the sale of milk, whether pasteurized or not, unless the seller possesses a permit granted by the town.

This action is in line with the recent revision of the milk by-laws in the city of Montreal and vicinity. It follows on the report of 22 cases of typhoid in the town of St. Eustache.

Arguing against the by-law, ex-mayor Caron feared it would be creating a monopoly in favor of one or two big firms. Ald. Pauley retorted that the council were not going to jeopardise the health of the community for the sake of one or two farmers who probably kept unclean cow barns, and that it was a simple matter for them to get their milk pasteurized in the village.

"Collingwood Bulletin"

The value of the local newspaper to the constituency in which it is located is emphasized by the Sarnia Canadian Observer. It rises to remark that without the co-operation of the newspapers, probably half our community organizations would cease to exist. They could not live without the publicity, largely unpaid, which the newspapers give them. There would be no means, without newspapers, of calling attention to the service and benefits of these movements. People would settle down in their narrow little lives, and the movements for national and community welfare would languish. The newspapers keep the world awake.

Civic Welcome to be Tendered Provincial Ministers

Lachute is to be favored on Monday next with a visit of the Hon. J. E. Perreault, Minister of Roads; Hon. R. F. Stockwell, Provincial Treasurer; Hon. J. H. Dillon, Dr. A. Plante, M. L. A., for Mercier; Desire Lahaje, M.L.A. for Papineau and Geo. Dansereau our local representative.

The ministers will arrive early in order to make an inspection of roads in and around Lachute, after which they will return to Desjardins' Hotel where the Mayors of the varied municipalities have been invited to be present at a banquet given in honor of the distinguished guests, after which an adjournment will be made to the auditorium where the public meeting will be held at 8.30 daylight saving time.

Marriage

Whinfield-White

A wedding of local and district interest took place in Trinity Anglican Church, Calumet, Que., on Saturday afternoon when Miss M. Elinor White, daughter of George S. White, superintendent of the Canadian International Paper Company's plant in Calumet, became the bride of Robert C. Whinfield, son of Mrs. and the late E. C. Whinfield of Calumet. Rev. K. N. Brueton, rector of St. Matthew's Anglican Church in Grenville officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was dressed in a white flat crepe gown with veil and carried roses. She was unattended. The matron of honor was Mrs. D. R. Kalbfleisch, of Ottawa.

Wilfred Morrow, of Grenville, was the best man, and the ushers were Harry White, of Ottawa, and Stephen Arnold, of Calumet. Miss Estelle McGibbon played the wedding music. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's father. The couple then left on a motor trip to Toronto and Muskoka lakes, and on their return will take up residence in Calumet.

THE CAPTAIN'S CORNER

For Our Boy Readers

"WE WANT A STORY"

Dear Boys :

It was the end of the day in camp. The sun had long set, and from a cloudless sky the stars twinkled down on all the world, but certainly on no better part of it than this place where so many young boys were spending a joyous and happy vacation. The scene, as I write these lines, is truly beautiful, for away in the shadows there is a back ground of trees against which the white canvas tents stand out with all the appearance of silent ghosts that are half afraid to venture forth and join the magic circle of youthful campers, who are gathered round their camp fire.

It burned with a sharp crackling noise, while the gay sparks flew upward as if eager to meet those bright silver stars. The light of the flames played on the brown animated faces, and a look of expectancy could be discerned in many eyes. Suddenly a great shout arose which must have startled every living creature in the nearby woods—

"We want a story!"

After a few moments the boyish appeal was answered, and the tale told, amid a silence only broken by the sound of burning logs and the voice of the speaker.

When you come to think about it, there are many kinds of stories. Some are gay and humorous; others tell of adventure and excitement, causing us to hold our breath as we listen; while there are still others that bring to our minds the thoughts of home and loved ones, some familiar and wonderful place from which we have been parted, maybe, for just a little while. Then the story ends, as all stories must do, and the shadows grow deeper; the firelight dies down, while night in all its mystical beauty comes into its own.

But there is just this about it all; if the story itself is finished, the memory remains. And thus it is with the greatest story of all—that of your own life.

When we reach the last chapter and the final page, when the book must be closed because there is nothing more to write in it, may the memory of that great tale, the history of your own happy and useful existence be for all time a great and splendid thing to remember.

Your affectionate friend,
THE CAPTAIN.

STORY OF ADVENTURE

Special to The Watchman

Chapter 33.

"Though perhaps you would not think it, Young Masters", began Sunny Jim, "I am getting very near to sixty years of age, and so, as what I am going to tell you happened when I was a boy not a day older than Master Walter here, you can make up your minds at once that it all happened a good long time ago. I don't remember my father, for he died shortly after I was born, but though very poor, my mother worked hard to keep me and my two brothers the best way she could. When I grew to be 14 years of age, I considered it well time to start and earn for myself. First a farmer employed me to go round his fields with a rag on the end of a stick, to scare off the birds after the seed was in the ground, but after a while he told me that I was no good at the job—too lazy; and maybe he was right; for when the sun was hot I often found a shady spot to sit down, possibly falling asleep and leaving the birds to do as they pleased. Well, I had to find some other work as quickly as possible, for in those days, as now, you don't get food given you unless you labour for it hard. Many times I pleaded with this person and that, to employ me, but met the same remark, all the time, 'Grow up and come to me again'. I can tell you that never did I want to be a man so much as then.

"Still, in spite of all these disappointments, I determined to keep on smiling and take life as I found it; and curiously enough in the end, it was my laughing loudly one day that gave me my first big piece of work! It was, I remember, late in the afternoon, and being hungry and not a little weary with tramping the roads, I sat down on the bank under a tree, hoping but not expecting something to turn up. It is when you least look for it that things begin to take place. Suddenly down the road came a horse and cart, the driver of which was the most curious creature, for one could hardly tell if it were man or woman, though it afterwards turned out to be a man. He was small in legs and feet, but large in shoulders and head, and as he drew near to where I was sitting I could do no other than burst into a loud shout of laughter.

"With that he immediately pulls up his horse, and looking down at me out of a pair of fierce black eyes, he says 'You saucy knave! What meanest thou by laughing at me? Am I to be so insulted by the meanest tramp that travels the King's Highway? So fierce was his attitude, despite the ridiculous figure he made, that I stood up and replied, 'Your honour mistakes me. It was not at you, but at my thoughts, I laughed.'

"On hearing this he appeared to be mollified, but still continued to gaze at me with anger. 'I suppose you consider your present hopeless condition a matter of mirth' he suddenly shot at me, with contempt in his voice.

"It's one that cannot be bettered by weeping, so why not laugh! I rejoined with spirit.

"This answer of mine, for a reason it was impossible to guess at, pleased him mightily.

"Ah, a lad of spirit I perceive, and yet I tell you there are happenings that take place this very night that would make you weep, in spite of those brave words.' On hearing this a wild impulse urged me towards an action which in calmer moments I would not have had the courage to take.

"Try me!" I challenged. "Lead me to whatever dark evil there may be, and I promise you I'll laugh and laugh while breath remains in this body of me."

"Without another word he waved me to seat myself by his side, and we drove off at a sharp pace down the road. We had no further conversation together in all that long drive, and a full two hours passed before he eventually pulled up. By then we were beside the river of London Town, and ordering me to get down he also joined me in the road, and leading the horse

Of course he got caught,
Who's to blame?—Himself!

OLD MISTAH TOAD IS WISE

Old Mistah Toad and Sneaky Sneak, the striped snake, were not very good friends. Old Mistah Toad knew that Sneaky Sneak was just watching for a chance to catch him and gobble him up.

Snakes of course do not gobble, really, but once a toad has the misfortune to get inside a snake's hungry mouth that is the end of him, just as surely as if he were gobbled for snakes have a tremendous suction power and suck their victims gradually in, and in still further, until they disappear from view on the outside, but the hump they make inside is plainly visible for some time.

During the time a snake is sucking a victim down it is so occupied of course it cannot crawl about.

One day Sneaky Sneak had caught one of Old Mistah Toad's little grandsons and was sucking him down his throat. Old Mistah Toad heard his squeals and started squealing loudly too, just like a chicken that is getting hurt. Sue heard him and came running to see what was wrong. Seeing the poor little toad disappearing, Sue got a big stick and brought it down Whack on Sneaky Sneak, just near the little toad. Sneaky Sneak was so surprised and hurt that he lost his power of suction for a time; this with by the bridge we entered a narrow lane which led down to the waterside. Telling me to wait by the quay till he came back, he went along some distance, still leading his animal. What he did with the cart I don't know to this day, but in about half an hour the strange little man came back accompanied by two others, as rough a looking couple as I have ever clapped eyes on. Our leader wasted no time in introductions but curtly ordered us to follow him on board a small coasting vessel, after which we set to work to hoist sail. In those days I knew little of seamanship and could tell no rope from the other. But I was willing, and when told to haul I did so, and tried to prevent myself from getting in anyone's way. There were several seamen on board, and yet not too many for the work on hand, for the hatches were taken off and the cargo, which I learned had paid no duty to His Majesty, was to be landed. By this time it was dark and we had to labour silently by lantern light.

"Suddenly, when almost the last bale had been lifted out, a shout arose, and dark figures with gleaming cutlasses rushed down on us. Though taken by surprise my companions were by no means an easy prey, and they fought with savage desperation. It came to me then that I had mixed myself up in a funny business, that might have serious consequences in the end. And then it was, I laughed!—Oh, how I laughed! Seizing a weapon, boy as I was, I threw myself into the fray, slashing here and there regardless of whom I was attacking, and many a curse and cry told me that I was doing good work. They always say that desperate men fight hardest, and this must be the reason why, at the end of a few exciting minutes, the King's men drew off leaving us, though sadly diminished in numbers, the victors.

"When things had settled down again the curious little man, who I discovered was the ship's captain, came to me and said, 'My lad, methinks that, though young, you have proved yourself a fighter, and upon my soul I have never heard such laughter in my life! You shall join us, for it's good fortune you bring'. In spite of my pleading to be let go, I was made a member of that crew, and I got to know my shipmates well; so well that they gave me the name of Sunny Jim. And so I have been called ever since. I don't think I could tell you my real one for it is long since I heard it."

The three boys had listened to this story with great enjoyment and when Sunny Jim got up to move towards the farm, they thanked him very earnestly. Sunny Jim looked at them for a moment in silence, and then shaking his head replied.

"Well, I can still laugh, Young Masters, I can still laugh."

strong limbs with a story book. He had been sound asleep a few minutes before Sue passed, but Billy and Ned had suddenly decided to get down from their seat above, and had slid down on the ground right beside him, with such a thump that Old Mistah Toad had bounded right up in the air with fright.

Seeing that it was only Billy and Ned and knowing that they never hurt little insects or animals, he hopped closer to the root of the tree and sat blinking lazily, and hoping that a big fly would come along and settle down close to him that he might catch it.

Hearing footsteps he turned his queer lumpy-looking head in that direction and flattened his body down quite near the ground; but he need not have feared, Sue did not hurt little 'hings either, and only called out gaily "Hello Old Mistah Toad, come along and have a sweet drink."

Sue had not passed again on her way back to the kitchen very long until several flies flew by, attracted to the smell of honey. Old Mistah Toad watched them greedily. They alighted on the ground not far away.

Hopping over to a sandy spot Old Mistah Toad watched them for a while. More flies kept coming all the time. This promised to be a feast!

But before he went to enjoy it he must see that he could escape easily, as flies buzzing as loudly as these, were sure to attract a great many fly-lovers, and Sneaky Sneak might be among those attracted!

Digging his hind feet into the sand in several places he found that it was quite soft and that a hole could be made easily. He hopped around digging holes here and there, some quite close to where the flies were and some farther away. Quite satisfied at last that he had all the hiding places that he needed, he hopped back and feasted on the flies, his long hairy tongue darting in and out with great rapidity. The flies would fly away but they were back again in a moment.

An immense fly with a proud, buzzing voice had arrived and was attempting to drive the smaller flies away. Old Mistah Toad was so busy watching him that for a moment he did not notice Sneaky Sneak's arrival, and Sneaky Sneak was so busy watching the flies that he did not see Old Mistah Toad. When he did see him, he ran his wicked little forked tongue out in anticipation of the feast he was going to have, then settled down to stare at Mr. Toad until he attracted his attention, hoping to fascinate him as he had the smaller toad.

Old Mistah Toad felt that horrid stare; he looked in Sneaky Sneak's direction and was almost tempted to squeal with fright. In fact he started to squeal, but suddenly remembered all the little hiding places he had been wise enough to prepare before he started to feast on the flies, and sat quite still watching Sneaky Sneak as intently as the snake was watching him. For a few minutes they were quite still, then Sneaky Sneak raised his head and struck Old Mistah Toad. Old Mistah Toad leaped up into the air, sailed right over Sneaky Sneak's back and landed down into one of the holes he had dug. There he hurriedly turned over on his back and burrowed down deeper with his hind feet, until all in a minute he was covered with warm loose sand; so that when Sneaky Sneak turned around and started wriggling about on the sand looking for Old Mistah Toad he was nowhere to be seen. —Old Mistah Toad was wise; he did not go into danger without knowing how he was going to get out again!

Lovingly,

Aunt Jean.

PITY THE PREACHER

The preacher has a great time. If his hair is gray he is too old. If he is a young man, he hasn't had experience. If he has ten children, he has too many. If he has none, he isn't setting a good example. If his wife sings in the choir, she is presuming. If she doesn't, she isn't interested in her husband's work. If a preacher reads from notes he is a bore. If he speaks extemporaneously, he isn't deep enough. If he stays at home in his study, he doesn't mix with the people. If he is seen around the streets he ought to be at home getting up a good sermon. If he calls on some poor family, he is playing to the grandstand. If he calls at the homes of the wealthy, he is an aristocrat—whatever he does someone could have told him how to do better.—St. Mary's Journal.

The man who was driven to drink by trouble, now has a son who gets in trouble trying to drive after getting the drink.

Mount Pelee's Anger

Mount Pelee is an active volcano on the northwestern side of Martinique, an island in the West Indies belonging to France. Notable eruptions of this volcano occurred in 1762, 1851, 1902 and 1903. During the eruption of May 8, 1902, a giant rock 1,000 feet high was forced out through the crater dome. The town of St. Pierre was completely destroyed and some 25,000 or 30,000 people were killed. In the fall of the same year another eruption partly destroyed Morne Rouge and killed about 2,000 persons.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Diplomacy

The little daughter of a landlady had rummaged through the effects of a new lodger, causing him much annoyance. After settling things to rights with many expressions of regret, the landlady told the child that she must go and apologize for her mischief. Complacently she walked to the bottom of the stairs and called:

"Oh, mister, I'm coming up to apologize to you, so please don't throw anything at me till I get it over with!"

Valuable Criticism

Criticism is of little value—in fact, it is usually harmful—unless it is constructive in nature. Tearing down something requires few tools and little intelligence. Constructive effort is the real test in life. Let's build, and leave the wrecking to others.—Grit.

Old Country Impressions

By George Gale.

Historical London.

Buckingham Palace, a massive yet stately looking building, which faces the beautiful Victoria Memorial, is an unusual place of interest in London, especially for lovers of pomp and ceremony. When King George is in residence there is a rare military spectacle in the forecourt of the palace every morning, that of changing the guard. A company of the Guards, forming part of one of the crack regiments of the Brigade of Guards, in their scarlet uniforms and huge bearskin busbies, accompanied by a band and drums and fifes, perform the unique ceremony in true military style. Even the guardsmen on sentry duty are a picture in themselves, as they march to and fro, looking neither to the right nor to the left, with a steadiness and precision that appears to the civilian to be more mechanical than human. The ceremony is sufficiently interesting to attract a large number of spectators, who, however, are not admitted to the palace grounds, but must be content to remain outside the great gates. This is one of the many sights that London has to offer its visitors, and at which His Majesty is often to be seen at one of the open windows of the palace an interested spectator of the parade. Apart from the state apartments one room in the north wing of the palace provides space for the King's insignia, it is said, and another room is for the storage of the Royal robes, mantles of chivalry as well as naval and military uniforms, etc. The high officials at the palace wear gold and scarlet uniforms and the household staff dark blue uniforms. The palace gardens, the scene of many of the Royal parties, are forty acres in extent.

The ancient St. James' Palace, the residence of the Prince of Wales, at the west end of Pall Mall, and Marlborough House, the home of the late Queen Alexandra, after the death of King Edward VII., are in close proximity to Buckingham Palace.

Hampton Court, dating from 1515, and built by Cardinal Wolsey, Chancellor to Henry VIII, is located on the Thames, above Kingston, a suburb of London. In 1525 the Cardinal presented the ancient building to the King and it was a favorite home for the English sovereigns until the death of George the Second in 1760. The Court, which is still in good condition, surrounded by beautiful gardens and a great park, is a popular resort for Londoners as well as visitors, who are escorted around the magnificent Royal apartments by uniformed guards. The Court, with its wonderful centuries old carved furniture, valuable pictures, priceless tapestries and beautiful works of art, is maintained at the personal expense of the King for the benefit of his millions of subjects.

Famed Tower of London.

Probably one of the most popular places where crowds gather daily, is the Tower of London, first built by William the Conqueror as a state prison and who was the monarch who introduced beheading as a mode of punishment in England. The Tower was enlarged in the twelfth century and is a wonderful stronghold or fortress with towers, bastions and walls of immense thickness, covering an area of thirteen acres. It was occupied as a palace by all the kings and queens down to the time of Charles the Second. The Tower was used as a state prison to the beginning of the nineteenth century and was seldom or ever without some captive, English or foreign, of rank and importance. Indeed during the Great War enemy spies taken in England were imprisoned here, while in more ancient times the fortress guarded London Bridge and the approach to the city from invading armies. The cloak on which Wolfe died on the Plains of Abraham is to be seen in the Record Room of the Tower, while the crown jewels, of fabulous wealth, are on exhibition in the Wakefield tower. In other towers are numerous reminders of the past centuries, when kings, queens and people of noble birth suffered imprisonment and cruel deaths. The block and axe used in the work of execution, and many other reminders of the punishment suffered by prisoners in the form of instruments of torture including stocks and whipping posts, are still in evidence. In addition to the towers and many rooms filled with souvenirs of the past there are several chapels of ancient date. The tower is in charge of some forty-five Yeomen warders, garbed in picturesque Tudor costumes, who owe their position to meritorious service in the army or navy. The tower is closed nightly with an old-time ceremony, after which no person can enter or leave without the password. A regiment of Guards occupy quarters in the Waterloo barracks, within the walls of the tower.

Many Lovely Parks.

For outdoor life Londoners are well supplied with many lovely parks almost at their doors. Among others are St. James', of ninety-three acres; Green Park of fifty-two acres; Hyde Park with the Kensington Gardens, six hundred and forty acres, and Regent Park of four hundred and twelve acres. Each have extensive open grass spaces and charming tree shaded spots, where the great London population may enjoy life in the open air. Among the parks in the suburbs, within easy reach of the city, are Richmond Home, Bushey and Greenwich. In Bushey and other parks scores of tame red deer and other game roam the grounds in all directions without the slightest fear of molestation from the crowds of visitors, but rather appreciate their company. Of all the outdoor pleasure grounds Hyde Park is easily the most popular and the best patronized. Here, in the vicinity of the Marble Arch, the soap box and other orators are afforded an opportunity to air their grievances on political, capitalistic, labour, religious and other pet subjects to their hearts content.

INTERESTING PROGRESS ON CAUGHNAWAGA BRIDGE

Interesting progress is being made on the construction of the new $2,500,000 Caughnawaga bridge being erected over the St. Lawrence at a point just west of Montreal. In the placing of a huge all-steel welded caisson for the building of one of the piers, the contractors made use of what is stated to be new technique in bridge construction in Canada. The caisson, 74 feet long, 20 feet wide and 14 feet high, weighing 65 tons, was sunk in the St. Lawrence at the north, or Ville La Salle, end of the bridge from a trestle built on piles.

The operation required ten winches for raising the caisson from the trestle and lowering it to the water two inches at a time. Workers descending to the bottom of the river inside the caisson will have to excavate 30 feet before the caisson is brought finally to rest on solid rock. Successive steel strips will be added by welding, the caisson being sunk with concrete and entirely filled after it reaches the rock foundation.

The Lake St. Louis Bridge Corporation awarded contracts for the bridge last November, the new span from Montreal Island to the south shore at Caughnawaga, to be erected at a cost of $2,559,243, with A. Janin and Company, Limited, of Montreal undertaking the work on piers, approaches, and cement work at a price of $1,786,000, and Dominion Bridge Company, Limited, Montreal, the erection of the super-structure at $773,243. The bridge is to be completed and opened for traffic by May 1, 1935.

COST $1255 TO SWEEP CITY AFTER BALBO PARADE

Twenty-four truck loads of paper were swept up from the streets of New York City after a parade in honor of General Italo Balbo and his men of the Italian Air Armada. It took 200 workers to clear away the newspapers, ticker tape, and torn telephone directories showered on the visiting airmen.

TURNIPS ON COURT HOUSE LAWN

As crops advanced in the State of Missouri, it was discovered that turnips had been sown instead of grass seed, on the Court House lawn, at Carthage. Officials were seeking the culprit.

END OF FEUDAL VILLAGES

No other institution in America is a more perfect example of the feudal quality in American industry than the mill villages which, in the South particularly, lie around the mills in the shadow of their smoke-stacks and within the sounds of their whistles. The passing of the mill village and the home-ownership of the worker have been set up by Presidential order as definite goals of the New Deal.

This means no less than the abolition of the most pernicious form of industrial feudalism in America. Its aim is not only to save the worker from exploitation in the guise of paternalism but to set the American worker up upon his own land as an independent man with his contribution to make and his right and dignity to maintain in industry in a democratic land.

—Raleigh News and Observer.

SHOULDER TO WHEEL

Let us be sparing of our criticism toward men of all political parties who are devoting their best endeavors to the service of our country during these trying days. It is difficult for those not in the midst of public affairs to realize how severe an ordeal confronts leaders and legislators responsible for wise policy and for effective action in the midst of problems, trials and perplexities such as seldom, if ever before have arisen in the world's history. It is our hope that in these troublous days their thoughts may be of co-operation rather than conflict.

—Sir Robert Borden.

ENFORCE BATHING STYLES OF GAY '90'S

If by-laws passed by the Gatineau Point and Aymer (Quebec) town Councils are enforced, all those desiring to go in bathing will have to revert to the styles of the gay '90's in order to conform to the law effective Aug. 15th.

With the passing of the by-law in both towns, which are close to the capital, and where many Ottawans have summer homes, bathers in swimming attire must stay within 25 to 30 feet of the water's edge, and women are required to wear bathing suits which completely cover the chest and extend to the knees. The by-law also sets the hours of bathing from 7 a.m. till 10 p.m.

NEED NOVEL REBUKE FOR NOVEL CRIME

A Brooklyn hoodlum, who has been operating a series of hold-ups in Montreal which won him the classification of a "trousers bandit," was arraigned in court yesterday following prompt and plucky interception by a cigar store clerk. It is not too late to suggest this robber's novel tactics should call forth a novel remedy, and in addition to a long-term sentence the court might relieve him of his own trousers and apply punishment where it would be most forcibly felt. A criminal with so keen a sense of humor should surely appreciate the joke.

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, Aug. 23.—What's all this flurry about wheat?

With prices hopping up and down—five cents this day, and ten cents the next, until 'pegs' have to be inserted; with the Bennett government owning upwards of 100 million bushels; with the prime minister promising a 15% reduction in wheat acreage; with crop failure over wide areas in the west coupled with the largest stocks in store ever; with the United States talking one week about the smallest crop in 25 years and next week threatening to 'dump' wheat on the world market—it's become almost impossible for the average newspaper reader to get a clear picture of things, even for a moment.

I've just had a long chat with government wheat experts in the capital, and I'm going to try and describe the situation, because I think it's one of the most timely and interesting subjects before the public to-day.

Here it is:

1. Canada's wheat bins, at the end of the crop year, three weeks ago, held some 220 million bushels, the largest store ever carried into a new year.

2. But Canada's 1933 crop is the nearest thing to a failure in many a long year. Cora Hind is reported to have estimated the western crop at not over 215 million bushels. Last year it was 410 million.

3. The situation in the United States is quite similar. They too carried over a record stock, some 375 million bushels. They too are harvesting an extremely small crop, probably in the neighborhood of 500 million bushels.

4. Normally the United States consumes some 640 million bushels for domestic requirements. That means she will have to take 140 millions out of reserves to meet this year's needs.

5. Under usual circumstances the world's import requirements between now and the middle of February, when the Australian and Argentine crops come on to the market, would be sufficient to absorb a large part of North America's available stocks. The Argentine is reported to have only about 25 million bushels left from last year. Australia's bins are almost cleared.

6. Canada will have some 350 million bushels to sell, and the United States another 240 millions. In normal times the world imports are over 15 million bushels a week, and with the North American stocks the chief source until next February the prospects would ordinarily be bright for cleaning up most of the glut which has existed on the north American continent since 1928.

7. But—and there's the rub—Europe, which normally is a big importer, is harvesting perhaps the record crop in her history. Countries like France, which often have to buy large quantities, this year will have considerable to sell. Russia is an unknown quantity, but reports from overseas indicate she is again chartering space.

8. For the first two weeks of the present crop year the world shipments were at the rate of only nine millions a week, and the Argentine sold 2½ million each week. There is a threat that France will sell some wheat to Britain at prices much lower than those existing at home. Even the United States has threatened to dump wheat unless acreage restriction is agreed upon.

9. In the last crop year Canada succeeded in disposing of 270 million bushels. Experts here don't believe that much more than 200 million can be sold in the next 12 months. Even so, that would cut down the stocks on hand considerably below the present record level.

10. With Europe's requirements away down, and threats of dumping in the air, Ottawa is worried about the price. Not only is the morale of the West much affected, but the success of the government's 150 million bushel wheat gamble depends on a continuation of prices at a reasonable level.

There it is! It is a highly chequered picture. Some spots are bright, some are black; others can't even be guessed at for a few months yet.

SOCIALIST FOR SHORT

(Winnipeg Free Press)

The new party still retains its mouth-filling name, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation. But it can be called the Socialist party for short.

ORANGE LODGES AT LOUISA

On Sunday last some 50 members of the Lachute, L.O.B.A. and L.O.L. lodges of Lachute and Louisa attended Divine Service in St. Aidan's Church. The Rt. Wor. Bro. Rev. W. J. H. Lummis, Provincial Deputy Grand Master of Morin Heights was assisted by Mr. J. Hill, of the Diocesan College of Montreal. Among those who attended were Rt. Wor. Bro. Wm. Roberts, Past Provincial Grand Master; Rt. Wor. Bro. E. Janes Prov. Grand Secretary; Rt. Wor. Bro. J. Troughton, Prov. Grand Treasurer, and Rt. Wor. Bro. Ivall of Prince of Wales Lodge, all of Montreal. The Church was filled to overflowing.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mrs. George McClure is the guest of Miss Hattie Wales.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Flower, of Montreal, spent the week-end as guests of Mrs. M. Yale, Mr. Flower singing in the United Church at the morning service.

Miss Lena Gates, a bride of the near future, was the guest of honor at a shower given by her aunt, Mrs. R. Brown last Saturday evening, when the bride's school friends showered her with gifts and good wishes.

St. Andrews is looking forward with interest to hearing the Missionary address which is to be given in United Church on Tuesday evening, Aug. 29th. Miss Mary Lamb, missionary on furlough from West China, will be the speaker at this open meeting, and will tell about her work in the province of Sze Chuan. We understand there is also to be an exhibit of Chinese curios, and that young people dressed in Chinese costume will have charge of the curio table. It is hoped there will be a large audience to hear Miss Lamb's address.

Mrs. Fuller, of Ottawa, is the guest of her brother, Dr. Ballantyne.

Rev. J. R. Heyworth, of Chicago, and family, who are summing at "Land's End" at the mouth of the Ottawa, had the annual United Church picnic last Tuesday on his lawn. A beautiful day, the charming surroundings and gracious hospitality were enjoyed by all.

Life Expectancy

Science seems to be coming slowly to the conviction that long life is an inherited characteristic. One family history has been so thoroughly studied that the dates of birth and death are known for 2,850 of its members. Those who lived long had long-lived children. Fathers and mothers who lived to the age of eighty had children who averaged a life of fifty-two years; those who died at sixty were followed by descendants whose average life was only thirty-two and eight-tenths years.

Excessive work, accident and the diseases of childhood are the principal factors which interfere with the inherited tendency toward a certain life span. Medical science has made the third of these much less deadly during the last century and thereby immensely increased the average expectancy of life.

Modern Slang Expression

Honky tonk is the expression used to describe a restaurant which has the characteristics of those of the Times-house district of London. The expression originated from the words given to the type of music usually played in these places. The music is Chinese and is characterized by deep drum beats used as bass for wailing melody. If one stretches his imagination he can almost hear in the drum beats the words "honky tonk, honky tonk." The cafes were of the lower class, dancing girls and opium being two of the attractions. The expression was used during the World war to describe Parisian dance halls of the lowest class.

Ancient Caravan Routes

The caravan routes to the eastward in the China trade were across Persia to Khurasan, Balkh, up the Oxus to the Plains of Pamir; thence to Kashgar, Yarkand and Khotan; thence across the Gobi desert to Tangut, not far from the Great Wall. In China the routes followed the wall. There was an alternate route down to Hormuz, at the foot of the Persian gulf, and thence by sea. As the trade developed there were side routes and Samarcand and Bokhara became important stations. It was said that in Tamerlane's time these routes were so well policed that a woman could travel them unguarded and that a purse could be lost on the way and returned to its owner.

Italy's Artistic Glories

Italy is history in stone and canvas; here are meccas of the soul like Rome or Assisi, which Dante called "the garden of the Peninsula," and Renan "the Galilee of Italy." Here for the literary saunterer is the road to Arque, with its vine-clad hillside, that Petrarch, lover of Laura, so enjoyed; here you may ride with Byron along the banks of the Brenta or on the hillside of Este and enjoy with "Child Harold" the "fairest garden of the world." Here are Michael Angelo and Raphael, and Cellini and other immortal artists.

A Woman at Banff

I know God fashioned little fields
So they would be
A comfort for old homely folk
Like you and me.

Small gardens with their fences
Snug and tight,
And tiny gates to shut us
From the night.

At THIS He made with
In His veins,

This solitude, where Might Forever reigns.

Molded the hills with glad Exultant hands, Shaping the valleys for Wide pasture lands.

And so this towering peak
Forever bears,
Old finger-marks upon
Its rugged stairs.

And every shining height
Reflects the glow
Of some white virgin field
Of drifted snow.

And over it he laid
With loving care,
The mantle of His peace
Forever there.

WORTH LOOKING INTO

A rare display of the famous Simmons' beds, couches, etc., is attracting public attention at Geo. Y. Deacon's show rooms. These products are of particular interest to householders, who should take advantage of the visit by the Simmons' factory representative at Deacon's on Friday and Saturday 25th. and 26th. inst.

There are definite indications that steamship lines everywhere are emerging from the difficult times of the past years, is the considered opinion of William Baird, Steamship Passenger Traffic Manager, Canadian Pacific. He cited the operation of 43 short trips by Canadian Pacific from the British Isles to the Mediterranean and nearby ports, patronized by around 30,000 people as a proof of his assertion.

Trade is said to be warming up. Which isn't strange considering where it went to. —Ottawa Journal.

PARACHUTE JUMPS TO THRILL PEOPLE

Autogyros and Planes Coming For Week-End.

The Leavens Bros. Air Service, known throughout Canada from the Maritime Provinces on the east to the foothills of Alberta on the West, is coming to Lachute for the week-end. Not only will the company of airmen with their three planes, do stunt parachute jumping, but they will conduct a passenger service on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 26th. and 27th. The company have three places and one autogyro. Jumps will also be taken from their latter plane. The parachute jumper is Clem Ennis, of Oshawa. The pilots are Walter Leavens in the autogyro, Art Leavens in the Eaglerock and Andy Raney in the Waco. Passengers will be taken up at any time during the day.

The company have been operating for a period of six years, during which time they have carried over 40,000 passengers without mishap. They have operated in practically all the towns and cities of Ontario and Quebec, and also in the Maritime and the Prairie provinces. For a time they were with the Canadian Flying Club putting on air shows.

After a careful survey of the display in the windows, Macpherson entered the shop and approached the counter.

"I want," he said, "a cheap coat-hanger."

"Yes, sir," said the assistant. He took out a drawer. "These are two-pence each," he added. Macpherson pondered over the collection for a while, then shook his head.

"Ha'e ye nothin' cheaper?" he asked.

"What about a nail?" suggested the assistant.

LAKEFIELD

A millionaire who wrote a dreadfully illegible list took a shoot in the North of Scotland.

One night before retiring he sent the head keeper detailed written instructions for the morrow.

Next morning he was awakened very early by the persistent skirling of bag pipes beneath his window.

Summoning his manservant, he said testily: "What's that fearful racket?"

"Oh," said the man, "that's Donald the keeper playing that we bit tune ye sent him last night."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for September 3

DAVID

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 16:1-13; Psalm 78:70-72.

GOLDEN TEXT—But the Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. I Sam. 16:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Shepherd Boy.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Shepherd Boy Who Became King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why David Was Chosen King.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Secret of True Greatness.

I. David, the Shepherd Boy (I Sam. 16:1-13; 17:34-37).

As a young man he was engaged in keeping his father's sheep. Such a life might have tended to indolence, but it proved otherwise with David. He became athletic. As he himself tells us, in the defense of his father's sheep he slew a lion and a bear. His musicianship had brought him such fame as to be called to play at the royal court. Then, too, he had become such an expert marksman as to throw his stone to fell the Philistine giant.

II. David Anointed King (16:1-13).
1. Samuel sent to anoint David (vv. 1-3). The situation was delicate. Saul had become a desperate character. For the divine commission to become known to Saul, therefore, would imperil Samuel's life.

2. The method of selection (vv. 6-12). The Lord had made known to Samuel that one of Jesse's sons was to be the king, but not the particular one. All but one of Jesse's sons had been looked upon, and still the Lord's choice had not appeared. When the shepherd lad appeared before Samuel, the Lord indicated his choice. When the oil was applied the Spirit of the Lord came upon him.

III. David, a King Without a Kingdom.

While Saul was rejected, the time had not yet come for David to be head of the nation. He needed much training before assuming such responsibility. Then, too, the evil influences inaugurated by Saul needed time for development so as to be properly discerned and controlled.

I. David's life at the royal court (I Sam. 17-20).

a. He was called as a musician to minister before the king (chaps. 16-23).

b. Victory over Goliath (chap. 17). The armies of Saul and the Philistines were arrayed against each other. According to an ancient custom, the issue was to be determined by a combat between two selected champions. The nation whose champion was victorious was to rule. The Philistine champion was Goliath, the giant. The sight of Israel's cowardice prompted David to offer his service. When Goliath beheld David coming against him, he cursed him by his gods, showing that it was not merely a battle between David and Goliath, but between false gods and the true God.

c. Friendship with Jonathan (chap. 18). This friendship has become immortalized in the world's thought. It was unique in that it occurred between two men of rival worldly interests. Jonathan was the crown prince, and therefore heir to the throne. David was heir according to the divine plan. Jonathan knew this and waived his rights to the one whom God had chosen. In the establishment of the covenant between them, Jonathan stripped himself of his coat, robe, and equipment, giving them to David. This meant a virtual abdication of the throne to David. As a friend, Jonathan—

(1) Defended David from Saul's frenzy (19:1-7).
(2) Revealed to David Saul's murderous intent (20:30-40).

2. David's life as an outcast. Chapters 21 to 31 describe David's life between his being driven out from the presence of Saul and his being established king. The praise accorded him following the victory over Goliath provoked such violent jealousy in the heart of Saul that he sought to kill David. To escape Saul's wrath he fled the country and feigned madness.

IV. David Made King (II Sam. 2:1-4; 5:1-5).

1. Over Judah (II Sam. 2:1-14). Upon the death of Saul, God directed David to proceed to Hebron and he was there anointed king over Judah.

2. Over Israel (II Sam. 5:1-5). After the death of Ishbosheth, the children of Israel came and formed a league with David, anointing him as their king. They assigned as their reasons:

a. He was their brother.
b. He was their leader in war.
c. He was the Lord's choice.

The Everlasting Arms
"The everlasting arms." I think of them whenever rest is sweet—how the whole earth and the strength of it, that is, almightiness, is beneath every tired creature, to give it rest, holding us always. No thought of God is closer than that.—Adeline D. T. Whitney.

Heavy to Bear
Losses and crosses are heavy to bear; but when our hearts are right with God, it is wonderful how easy the yoke becomes.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Hints for Homebodies

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman.
By JESSIE ALLAN BROWN

SALMON

This paragraph is going to be about fresh salmon and my readers who live on either coast need read no further, as I can tell them nothing about salmon that they do not know much better than I. But first I will give away a secret—to most inlanders salmon is something that comes out of a can. What they are missing, who do not know of fresh salmon! The only reason I speak so knowingly is, that I married a Maritimer and my friends and relations have seen to my education. In Ontario we are getting Eastern salmon now and if you have not used it do try. Salmon may be cut in steaks or slices and fried like any other fish but the nicest way of all is to steam it or boil it in the piece. For the average family a three pound piece is a good size and the tail is better than a centre cut as it is not as fat.

Usually I steam salmon as there is not the same danger of having it fall to pieces as when boiled, but the other day it was not convenient to steam it so I boiled it in salted water and the flavour was almost better because of the salt. Try it both ways and choose for yourself. Allow about 15 minutes cooking to each pound of fish. When the fish is cooked remove the skin. It comes off very easily.

Salmon may be served hot with a sauce such as an egg or cucumber sauce but it is even better served cold. To serve cold it may be removed in large pieces from the centre bone. Salad dressing or one of the sauces may be served with this or just lemon juice or a little vinegar. Any that is left may be soured or if you prefer it that way as many do, the entire piece may be soured.

SOUSED SALMON

Cover the fish with hot vinegar which has been seasoned with salt, pepper and a little sugar, also a little whole pickling spice if desired. (I prefer mine unsliced but many like the spice.) It is wise to dilute the vinegar with water as most vinegars are a bit strong. Let stand for at least a day, in a cool place and serve.

CUCUMBER SAUCE

1 large cucumber
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup cream
Speck of pepper
2 teaspoons vinegar
Pare the cucumber, chop and drain well. Whip the cream until stiff, add the salt and pepper, then add the vinegar a little at a time. Fold in the drained cucumber and chill. Serve with fish.

TO PEEL OR TO PARE

Do you know the difference between peeling and paring? You peel a banana or an orange but you pare a potato, an apple, or a cucumber.

TASTE AND TRY

If you want to be a good cook you must taste your cooking as seasonings cannot go by rule alone. Vegetables are more sinned against in cooking than any other class of food. It is no wonder some people think they do not like vegetables when you see the way they are often spoiled in cooking. Be careful not to over-cook your vegetables. Tasting is the only way to tell if you have enough salt, and the salt is much better added before the vegetable is cooked than added after it has been drained. Some vegetables need sugar and that you can on-tell by tasting. Beets, peas and corn are sure to require sugar unless they are just freshly picked. Taste and try.

CHICKEN LIVER

The other day I roasted a chicken and just before sewing it up I tucked the liver in with the dressing. It cooked beautifully and if you once try it you will understand the meaning of 'tender as liver'. Tomatoes which have been skinned, scooped out and chilled are delicious when stuffed with a salad made of diced chicken liver and celery, using about twice as much celery as liver.

LIVER CAKES

2 1/2 cups ground liver
2 slices bacon, cut in small pieces
1 egg
Speck of pepper
1/2 cup bread crumbs
1/4 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
Moisten the bread crumbs with the beaten egg and milk, add salt, pepper, liver and bacon. Make into cakes and fry in greased pan, preferably in bacon dripping.

CHOCOLATE DROP COOKIES

1/2 cup shortening
1 egg
1 cup sugar
2 squares chocolate
1 1/2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon vanilla
Cream shortening and sugar and add well beaten egg. Sift flour, salt and baking powder; and add to mixture alternately with the milk. Add chocolate melted over hot water, nuts and vanilla. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees for ten to twelve minutes.

Go by Motor Coach

Cool - Comfortable - Inexpensive

One takes a motorcoach, naturally, to run into the metropolis of Montreal, but hundreds of people are now using the motorcoach to reach almost all points on the continent. We sell through tickets, in Canadian Currency, daily to such distant points as San Francisco, Miami, Kansas City, Denver, Vancouver, in fact, to all points of the compass. On long journeys there are frequent rest stops and meal stops, and stop-over privileges are allowed en route.

Chicago World's Fair is drawing many by motorcoach on pre-arranged all-expense tickets. Next time you happen to go anywhere, short of crossing an ocean, take a motorcoach. Full information on request. We plan your itinerary to suit your pocket-book.

which enjoyment is found, some spend their time in music and dancing, some playing cards, others participating in the many games provided on the ship while others enjoy the waters of the swimming pool or practice athletics in the well-equipped gymnasium which is in charge of a capable instructor.

As we sail down the mighty St. Lawrence we are wonderfully impressed by the beauty and grandeur of the scenery down through the Province of Quebec, around the Gaspé peninsula, through the Gulf of St. Lawrence and then passing through the delightful Straits of Canso and out into the Atlantic till we reach the City of New York. The Duchess of Bedford is one of four sister ships and is one of the best up-to-the-minute oil-burning Trans-Atlantic liners. Of 20,000 gross register, and a length of 600 feet, she affords spacious accommodation with facilities for all sea diversions. There is a fine open-air salt water swimming pool with sun deck adjoining, plus all the customary paraphernalia for deck sports, such as horse-racing, deck tennis, shuffle-board and deck quoits. The unusually large public rooms on board provide accommodation for the many social functions that feature Canadian Pacific cruises. At the forward end is the observation and drawing room with deep recesses and windows that permit of glorious views. The lounge ballroom is in the Empire style with wood-work of silver-gray sycamore and wonderful oak floor, while the smoking room is panelled in natural oak. The dining room, with seating capacity of over 300 people at one time has a large octagonal well-opening, 18 feet in height, with musicians gallery at one end. There is also every facility of the modern hotel with stenographer, barber, beauty parlors, valet service and a novelty shop which proves a great attraction and the prices are quite moderate.

Upon arrival in New York the party were met by Mr. Parkinson, of the Grey Line Coaches and we were taken on a tour of the city afterwards being returned to the dock for inspection of America's finest vessel the "Manhattan," which had just returned from a cruise to Bermuda. This new trans-Atlantic aristocrat is the largest and finest liner ever built in America and boasts of being the world's fastest cabin ship. She is 705 feet long, 86 feet broad and has seven decks for use of her passengers. One cannot fail to be impressed by the wonderful service provided by the company and its officials and staff officers to care for the comfort and enjoyment of its passengers, as well as for their safety. It is striking to think that one is travelling on a veritable "Palatial Sailing Hotel" providing all the advantages of such in the comfortable state rooms.

lantic till we reach the City of New York.

In conversation with many on both the going and returning portion of the cruise we purposely engaged in conversation with numbers of passengers to ascertain their viewpoints and it was pleasurable to note the appreciation expressed on all sides. No discordant note was heard and everyone seemed only sorry that the trip had come to the final stages all too soon.

Our Convention proper was held on Wednesday, Aug. 16th, and after routine business the following officers were duly elected for the ensuing year: President, R. L. Armstrong, Toronto; 1st. Vice-Pres., A. V. Bell, Midland; 2nd. Vice-Pres., J. Munn, Bothwell; 3rd. Vice-Pres., G. Robinson, Pencaiguishane; Sec.-Treas., N. A. B. Smith, Woodstock.

Executive:—J. A. McDonald, J. S. Giles, R. E. Richmond, G. Sutherland, W. R. Martin. Auditor:—J. H. Stewart.

We were pleased to have with us on the trip Messrs. G. B. Burpee, D.P.A. C.N.R., Toronto; H. F. Tilley, G.P.A., C.N.R., Toronto; J. B. McKay, G.P.A., O.S.S., Toronto. That Charlie Mason, of the White Star Line, F. V. Higginbottom, C.P.A. Lehigh Valley R.R., H. E. Heale, C.P.A. Pennsylvania Lines; were missed goes without saying, but their courtesy in arranging for the splendid drive around New York City was a kindly gesture on their part and gave much pleasure.

Tents in Iceland.

To many readers tents in Iceland still will suggest igloos. Reminding that real tents may be used, and that Boy Scouts camp out as in Canada, the Icelandic government has made a gift of tents to the Icelandic Scouts, in recognition of public service.

Original "Patent Law"

In very early times in England the reigning prince considered himself entitled to grant privileges of the nature of monopolies to anyone who had gained his favor. These grants became so numerous, oppressive and unjust that during the reign of James I (1603-1625) a statute was wrung from the king declaring all grievous and inconvenient monopolies to be void. There was a special exception from that enactment of all letters, patents, grants and privileges of the "sole working or making of any manner of new manufactures within the realm to the true and first inventor." Upon these words hangs the whole law of letters and patents for inventions.

Gardener's Prayer

"Grant that in some way it may rain every day, say from about midnight until three o'clock in the morning, but, you see, it must be gentle and warm so that it can soak in; grant that at the same time it would not rain on camellions, alyssum, helianthemum, lavender and the others which you in your infinite wisdom know are drought-loving plants—I will write their names on a bit of paper if you like—and grant that the sun may shine the whole day long, but not everywhere (not, for instance, on spirea, or on gentian, plain-lily and rhododendron), and not too much; that there may be plenty of dew and little wind, enough worms, no plant lice and snails, no mildew, and that once a week thin fertilizer may fall from heaven."—Gardener's Year.

Odd Georgetown Fence

The fence in Georgetown made of barrels of old muskets is at the northwest corner of Twenty-eighth and P streets. The musket barrels are topped with cast-iron lance heads. After the War of 1812, realizing that Georgetown had rendered special services, the government, too poor to make any expenditure, invited the citizens of Georgetown to help themselves from the scrap heap of iron and steel in the navy yard. This accounts for the fence and for the presence of the United States coat of arms on the iron work of many old Georgetown buildings.—Washington Star.

Small Scout Substitutes for B.P.

The always original B.P. was not stuck when asked to open a swimming pool in London's latest camp site for city Scouts at Downe, by taking the first plunge. The Chief nominated a small Scout in bathing costume for him, and shaking his hand, said, "I'm glad to meet you, Lord Baden-Powell. Will you plunge in and open the bath?" Needless to say the small Scout proudly and promptly obliged, to the cheers of the spectators.

TALKATIVE CARS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

An amusing moment at the Chicago World's Fair. First you come upon a stretch of smooth concrete highway on which a 1933 Oldsmobile rests. To the left, apparently disputing the intended passage of the modern car, sits a 1901 Oldsmobile, decked out in tiller and coffee grinder starting crank, not to mention numerous levers that once set off all sorts of terrifying noises. The old car is bogged down in a hopeless mud road that ends where the modern concrete begins. The bulb horn on the old veteran honks gravely. It is immediately mocked by the Klaxon on the new car; at which point an amusing dialogue ensues, in which the two cars argue their respective merits. Their hood's pop up, lights reveal the one lung anatomy of the 1901 job, eight red bulbs come on to count the cylinders of the new model; doors open, no-draft ventilation windows swing in and out, and roll up and down, and engines stop and start until the comparison of old and new puts to flight the thirty-year claims of the 1901 Oldsmobile horseless carriage. The bearded one then breaks down and admits that the new job has its virtues. It says to the current model, "But how did you get that way?" The answer is research. The new car invites the old car to take a look around the research displays and draw up a chair and learn something.

Conditions That Affect

Human Eye Injurious

Too long hours of continuous use of the eyes should be avoided by a rest at intervals. If only for a few minutes, at which time they can be benefited by being bathed with ordinary cold water from the faucet. Dr. Sol Rosenblatt explains in "Eye Hygiene and Heat," an article appearing in Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

It is the heat that is generated over a long period by excessive use of the eyes that causes the eyes to become tired. Heat affects the eyes in numerous ways. Doctor Rosenblatt explained. The heat generated by excessive use of the eyes over long hours, added to the ordinary body heat; the heat of ever repeated over a period of years; the heat of brilliant sunlight or too intense artificial light, and the heat of furnaces over a period of time are detrimental to the function of the eye.

Nature provides a safeguard in a manner somewhat similar to that of the water-cooled motor. Transparent fluids are circulated within the eye, and the anterior surface of the eye is bathed with fluid coming down from the tear gland above the eye. The peculiar special function of the eye requires transparency, and excessive heat destroys that quality; the loss of transparency is fatal to the function of that special organ, even though its form and strength are fully regained.

FUNNY SIDE OF FARMING

Our Mixed Farm (May Issue Nor-West Farmer)

We bought a mixed farm three years ago and things are badly mixed. We sow No. 1 wheat and get a mixture of No. 3 wheat, wild oats, mustard and other weeds. We sow oats and get a mixed lot of sheaves, oats, barley, spear grass, rye and Russian thistle.

Our cows are pure bred but they give us milk and cream mixed. After we get it separated and churned the butter has a taste of stinkweed mixed in.

Our pigs get fed according to rule with a mixture of wheat, oats, barley, tankage, salt, coal and sulphur but instead of being select they grade heavy No. 1 and mixed lots of runts to use at home.

Hens are pure bred Barred Rocks but their eggs are badly mixed No. 1, seconds, cracks, and dirty.

Turkeys are government-banded birds but their offspring grade A, B, and lots of C's as well as culls.

Everything we buy is grade A, top grade, choice grade or some such grade. What we sell is always mixed; not evenly mixed, just an odd No. 1.

Even Pa's tobacco is mixed—a mixture of leaf, cut up with my scissors, and a cheap can of "hay". Money we never mix, because we never have any—Jenny Pringle.

Mrs. Chas. Stewart has returned from a motor trip to Boston, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Haskill for a visit.

Miss Gwyneth Wilson and Mrs. Gladys Neveau of Brownsburg, have received their diplomas in the Normand & Normand dress making and sewing system, in which so many here are interested. The awards were given by Prof. A. L. Duganier, of Troy, New York.

Mrs. R. K. MacLeod and family, of North Bay, Ont., are home visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. McLeod, of Brownsburg.

Mrs. Haskill has left for home, after spending a week with her mother, Mrs. J. Graves. Miss Edith Gilmour has returned from the Royal Victoria Hospital, where she had her tonsils removed.

Miss Gladys Gilmour spent last week-end in Brownsburg, visiting her mother.

Mrs. Stewart Moiley, of Montreal, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. George Murdoch Sr.

He brushed his teeth twice a day with nationally advertised tooth paste. The doctors examined him twice a year. He wore his rubbers when it rained. He slept with the windows wide open. He stuck to a diet with plenty of fresh vegetables. He relinquished his tonsils. He golfed, but never more than 18 holes at a time. He got at least eight hours sleep every night. He never smoked, drank or lost his temper. He did his daily dozen, daily. He was all set to live to be a hundred—The funeral will be next Wednesday. He had forgotten about trains at grade crossings.

Highways, Labor, Agriculture are Discussed by Quebec Ministers Visiting Argenteuil

Plead Reasonable Local Demands in Expropriations for Brownsburg and Trans-Canada Highways

When our local member Mr. Georges Dansereau made it known recently that he had exacted a promise from the Hon. Mr. Perreault, Minister of Roads, and the Hon. Mr. Stockwell, Provincial Treasurer, that they would pay a visit to Argenteuil in the near future, Mr. Dansereau at once conferred with Mayor Larocque of Lachute, who called a public meeting in the Town Hall. Here it was unanimously decided to tender our distinguished political leaders a civic reception, the warmth of which was evident in the splendid turnout of representatives from all sections of the County last Monday.

This being their first visit to Argenteuil, the Minister in company with a number of other representatives and officials made a tour of inspection and saw evidences of the money grants that had been expended, in the network of roads that have proved so beneficial to open up our county as a tourist centre. Needless to say they were much pleased, and arrived at Desjardins' Hotel in time to enjoy a Banquet, to which invitations had been extended to all mayors of the county.

Adjournment was made at 8.15 to the open meeting in the Auditorium, which was packed to overflowing with an interested and enthusiastic audience.

Mr. L. L. Legault, K.C., moved that Mayor A. Larocque and County Warden Amos Kerr be appointed joint chairmen.

Mr. Dansereau gave a brief address in both languages, expressing his pleasure at having the two men most needed, Mr. Perreault and Mr. Stockwell, the first to give the work, and next the one to pay for it. He also thanked Dr. Plante and Mr. Lahaie for their presence.

Mr. Dansereau then gave a resume of the money expended by the roads department since 1911, which amounted to $1,881,416, this being for new construction and maintenance.

The total mileage which the Government has under charge, is now 232 miles in this County, and while expressing personal gratitude to the Minister he trusted he would grant us the concessions we are now asking. Three things are badly needed at the present time, and these are the road from Grenville to Lachute, the road to Brownsburg eliminating the dangerous hill and curve; also a new bridge over the Rouge River. Mr. Dansereau said he had seen Rt. Hon. Sir George Perley, who assured him that the Brownsburg Road improvements had been accepted and he urged Mr. Perreault to accede to his appeal, for the dual purpose of improving the highway and also furnishing our men with work instead of being on the dole.

The Trans-Canada has now been given assurance of an early start; and it is hoped locally that the Government will see fit that construction will be of cement, in order that permanence may be thoroughly assured. The initial cost of such construction is higher, but is more than balanced in the reduced expense of upkeep.

Other speakers were Dr. A. Plante, well known orator of Montreal and Mr. Lahaie of Buckingham, M.L.A. for Papineau, Vincent Dupuis, M.P., and Mr. L. L. Legault, K.C., who heartily thanked the ministers for their visit.

Hon. J. E. Perreault spoke in both languages and was given a hearty reception. He said the Government had built 233 miles of roads in Argenteuil at a cost of $4,700 a mile which was not high. He explained the arrangement with Ottawa provides that the latter pay 50 cts.

per day per workman, the province paying the other $1.10 of the $1.60 paid per day as well as the cost of expropriations, materials and supervision which worked out on a basis of 20 per cent for Ottawa. He hoped work on the trans-Canada highway from Lachute to Grenville would commence in a few days, but he begged there would be no exacting demands for land expropriated. The people might very well co-operate with the Government by being moderate in their demands for land required for road widening, not only on the trans-Canada highway, but also for the road to Brownsburg, he said.

Revenues Dropped

He spoke of the difficulties which had confronted the Government. The big main services had to be continued at all costs. There had been a principal animating the Liberal Government for many years

Athletes Shine Again at Ottawa Exhibn. Sports

Further laurels fell to young local athletes in open competition at the Ottawa Exhibition sports last Saturday.

Ken Falconer took three credits in the Boys-under-17 class, namely first in the low hurdles, third in the 440-yards, and third in the 100-yards dash. His success in the hurdle jump is a particular credit, considering the wide field of entrants to which these games appeal. Allan Graham, of Cushing, added again to his recent successes by taking third in the men's open 440 yards. In the lead were two M.A.A.A. runners.

Stan Langille came third in the junior half mile.

Sewerage Situation in Town

The delay in completing the sewer from the East End to the North River, was caused by the difference of opinion as evidenced before the Council by two opposing petitions, one agitating to have the sewer pass down Clyde Street and the other to continue down Main Street to Barron's Bridge. This has now been definitely settled by action of the Provincial Board of Health, who came to Lachute, studied the question and finally gave orders to have the installation continued down Main.

In consequence a special session of the Council was called last week at which they passed a by-law authorizing the loan of $8,120.00 to carry on the work; the resolution has now been forwarded to the Municipal Commission of Montreal for permission to effect the loan.

Sir John's Little Joke

Gave Occupation as "Cabinet Maker"

In the visitors' register in the Legislative Building in Charlottetown, P.E.I., where the first meeting took place in 1864 at which Confederation was first discussed, being later consummated in Quebec City, there is a column headed "Occupation." In glancing through the various entries, states the Tourist and Convention Bureau of the Canadian National Railway, there is one by Sir John A. MacDonald, the first Prime Minister of Canada after Confederation and one of the leaders in bringing the union of Canada about, who entered his occupation as "cabinet maker." Another, by a famous general in the British army, gives his occupation as "warrior."

Passenger Flights Over Week-End

Unsettled weather detracted from the success of the airplane flights conducted last week-end on Ed. Kettle's farm, near the Montreal highway not far from town. No passenger flights were held on Saturday but as the weather fared next day a large crowd trooped out to witness the operations of two bi-planes and an auto-gyro. Many passengers were taken up, at one cent per pound avoirdupois, and took a bird's-eye view of the familiar scenes in Lachute. The landing field was wet and swampy, which did not facilitate the working of the planes.

Chatham Gardener Grows Souvenir of Air Armada

Three Italian seaplanes separated from the rest of the armada when en route to Chicago from Montreal passed over Chatham, Ontario. That afternoon John Cable, working in his garden, was surprised when a small white paper parcel fell from one of the planes. He opened it to find the remnants of a lunch which he carelessly tossed aside. Several days later a plant began to grow at the spot. Now it has a stalk an inch thick, and numerous shoots supporting large leaves almost as big as those of rhubarb, a purple flower and groups of pods shaped like a bean but much larger.

A member of the local Horticultural Society pronounced the plant an okra, which is not grown in Canada. The raw pods are used in the making of salads in warm countries.

Wentworth Railway Highlight of Discussion 50 yrs. ago

An Editorial in The Watchman of August 10, 1883

There is a charter issued for the Wentworth railroad, and it is a question for the Company to settle whether the road will be made from Lachute or St. Jerome. We understand that a meeting of the projectors is to be held in Montreal in a few days for the purpose of appointing directors, opening stock books, and otherwise arranging the complete organization of the Company. It is to be hoped someone from Lachute will be authorized to attend this meeting to lay before it the interests of the people of this place, Wentworth and Gore, which would be so much promoted by having the road come here instead of St. Jerome. It is said by persons well acquainted with the land that there is an excellent route from here to Wentworth for a railroad. It will pass through a beautifully picturesque country, rich in minerals and various kinds of wood suitable for the open market, besides tracts here and there of good farming land. We feel sure the projectors of the enterprise would find this route much shorter, more easily made, and more profitable than by way of St. Jerome, besides the advantage of tapping the main line of the C. P. R. instead of only a branch. The advantage to Lachute of having a railroad running into the rear of the county is incalculable.

Late Philias Gagné

The death of Philias Gagné occurred at his home in Centre Ward, on Monday last, after an illness of nearly two years.

Deceased was 63 years of age and leaves a family of four to mourn his loss—Lionel, Alexina, Gracia and George, of Legal, Alberta.

The funeral service was held in St. Anastasie Church, after which the remains were taken to St. Michel cemetery for interment, followed by a large number of sympathizing friends.

Thieves Broke Into Dominion Store

Thieves were busy again in Lachute early Tuesday morning, when the Dominion Store was broken into by four men sighted on Main Street at around 4 a.m.

Madame Desjardins, of the Desjardins Hotel next door, heard noises and looked out to investigate. Seeing one of the quartet on watch outside and others inside the store, she raised the alarm and the men quickly disappeared in the direction of the C.P.R. station.

The store was discovered wide open early next morning and the manager, W. Raymond, was notified. Two locks had been forced on the front door. A dollar bill, stuck to the show-window, had been removed, finger prints on the glass furnishing the only clue to the thieves. The cash register was untouched, but cigarettes, biscuits and other provisions had been removed. The exact loss was not ascertained, but was thought to be small.

St. Jerome Bank Bandits Get Prompt Sentence

Fourteen years in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, plus five lashes on entering and five more before discharge, was the sentence meted out at St. Jerome on Tuesday by Judge Lalande to Laurent Pilon, 22, and Joseph Geoffrion, 20, both natives of the town, who pleaded guilty to holding up the Provincial Bank of Canada, at Ste. Anne des Plaines on Wednesday last.

Practically the whole population of the little village neighboring St. Jerome turned out to corner them and hand them over to the police. The loot and 3 revolvers, previously stolen in St. Jerome, were discovered hidden in the woods.

The pair were taken to provincial police headquarters at Montreal, taken back to St. Jerome for arraignment on Saturday, returned to Montreal and again taken to St. Jerome on Tuesday.

They pleaded guilty as soon as they appeared and no evidence was heard. Joseph Fortier, Clerk of the Crown, submitted to the court the records of the accused, who are only a few months out of the penitentiary after serving two years each for a similar offence.

Sentence in the present instance was assessed on the records and also on the attack on the bank manager, who was struck on the head, partly undressed and left bound by the robbers.

There has been some comment on the indecent haste with which many of the audience rush away from the band concerts before the closing national anthems are finished. The first bar of either "O Canada" or "God Save the King", is the signal for a rush to start cars and otherwise cause a din and commotion which almost drowns out the band, and we have been asked to bring the matter to our readers' notice.

—Granby Leader.

Research Took Softball Title

In the Inter-provincial schedule, Lachute Tigers fell out of the running, local sports correspondents fell down on the job, and The Watchman had no up-to-the-minute information on the progress of the final games. These concluded last week, however, Hawkesbury Research beating Brownsburg Red Wings in an exciting game. It was the final of a 2-out-of-3 play-off series, each team having previously won a game. The attendance is stated to have numbered around 1500 people. Hawkesbury received the Greenspon trophy, which was exhibited in Lachute early in the season. The outcome now credits Hawkesbury with its third consecutive year as champion among neighboring teams.

Fish and Game Association Seeks More Adequate Protection in County

More Wardens Sought for Critical Season

Urge to Curtail Indiscriminate Slaughter of Deer

A small but fair representation met last Friday at a regular gathering of the Argenteuil Division, Province of Quebec Association for the Protection of Fish and Game. The brief session, held in Lachute Town Hall, dealt with constructive topics, and recommendations were put forward for consideration of the parent body.

The following members were present:—

Mr. P. A. Fortin, Pres.; Dr. E. G. D. Murray, Mr. Nelson Morrison, Mr. Leo. Carriere, Mr. A. E. Bulley, Mr. Geo. Hoff, Mr. Ireland and Mr. D. Titman as acting secretary.

Long-sighted views for the protection of fish and game were discussed, including a suggestion by Dr. Murray that biological departments might be urged to investigate fish foods. Depleted food supply had caused under-nourishment and undersized fish, due to oil on water and other elements destroying food. Accurate information on this topic might enable people to encourage food growth and improve conditions.

Attention was drawn to the unsatisfactory proceedings against infractions of game rules. Wardens' arrests or reports were rarely followed up with convictions, and the work of protection was becoming less effective on this account.

It was here pointed out by Mr. Ireland that the most effective protection could be achieved by membership in the branch, and every existing member should be encouraged to talk protection and to enlist as many followers as possible. An active campaign to increase membership, is therefore planned, in the interests of the cause.

President Fortin suggested the need for a hatchery in the County. The general feeling was that it was inopportune to make any such request, inasmuch as hatcheries involved much expense, and also trout fry had been secured and could be secured locally on request to the provincial department.

Two definite recommendations were framed for consideration of the Provincial Association. With regard to the open deer season, it was considered too long a period, for two reasons,—(1) Wastage of meat during the mild weather in early part of the season, and (2) Indiscriminate shooting and loss of animals in early season with foliage still on trees and no snow to enable tracking.

It was therefore resolved, on motion of Mr. N. Morrison, seconded by Mr. L. Carriere, that the Provincial Association be petitioned to urge a shortening of the deer shooting season by one month, that is, to commence on October first instead of September first.

It was further pointed out that the number of fish and game protection officers in this county is inadequate during the spawning season, and it was resolved on motion of Mr. Geo. Hoff, seconded by Mr. Ireland, that the Provincial Association be asked to request the appointment of additional fish and game wardens for a period from October first to January first, one warden in each of the following localities, being a man recommended by an association member in that locality:—(1) St. Michel, (2) Montfort, (3) Lachute, (4) Lost River, (5) Dunany, (6) St. Adolphe de Howard, (7) Weir. This petition further requested the Provincial Association to urge that government fire rangers be instructed and enlisted in the work of fish and game protection.

The meeting adjourned, well satisfied with its achievements, and deciding to call another assembly late in September.

GET A HORSE

The first railroads, like the first automobiles, often aroused the derisive cry of "Get a Horse!" The Eastern Railroad included in its rules for 1838 the following: "When anything shall happen to a train, to render assistance necessary, let a brakeman be dispatched to the nearest point of assistance and let him get on horseback as soon as possible." The depot master, too, had to be an equestrian. Another rule stipulated: "If at any time a train should not arrive at either depot in one hour from the time of its starting from the other, the master of the depot will immediately start on horseback to learn the cause of the delay."

Drowned in North River

The North River claimed another victim by drowning last week-end, when nine-year-old Lucette Hebert of Montreal lost her life while bathing at Val Morin. The child was spending her holidays in the mountains and went bathing early on Saturday afternoon after having eaten a green apple. She sank before aid could reach her.

THE CAPTAIN'S CORNER

For Our Boy Readers

THE CAPTAIN'S WEEKLY LETTER "MY FRIEND SMITH"

Dear Boys,—

This Week I want to tell you of my Friend Smith. I knew him first many years ago; indeed we were little fellows at school together, and even in those days he used to grumble very much because his name was Smith. "There are too many Smiths in the world," he would say, "I feel as if I belong to a tribe of Indians." One day he was really angry when a new boy arrived whose name was also Smith; and because this youngster was much younger than my friend, he was known as Smith II.

Now I have rarely seen Smith I. since school and college days, but he still remains "My Friend Smith," and this because the memory of those early times still lingers. We have not forgotten the competitions we had together in games, the struggles over lessons when we used to help each other with difficult sums and Latin exercises, and the plans we used to form to continue together when we were grown up—and which of course never came to anything. Today miles of sea separate us; the work he is doing does not interest me any more than mine pleases him; but for all that he is still "My Friend Smith". As I write this I wonder if you also have such a friend—one in whom you confide all your cherished hopes and plans, a boy who is your constant companion in all you do and in whose company you find pleasure. If you have you are fortunate, for in him you possess one of the most valuable gifts the world contains.

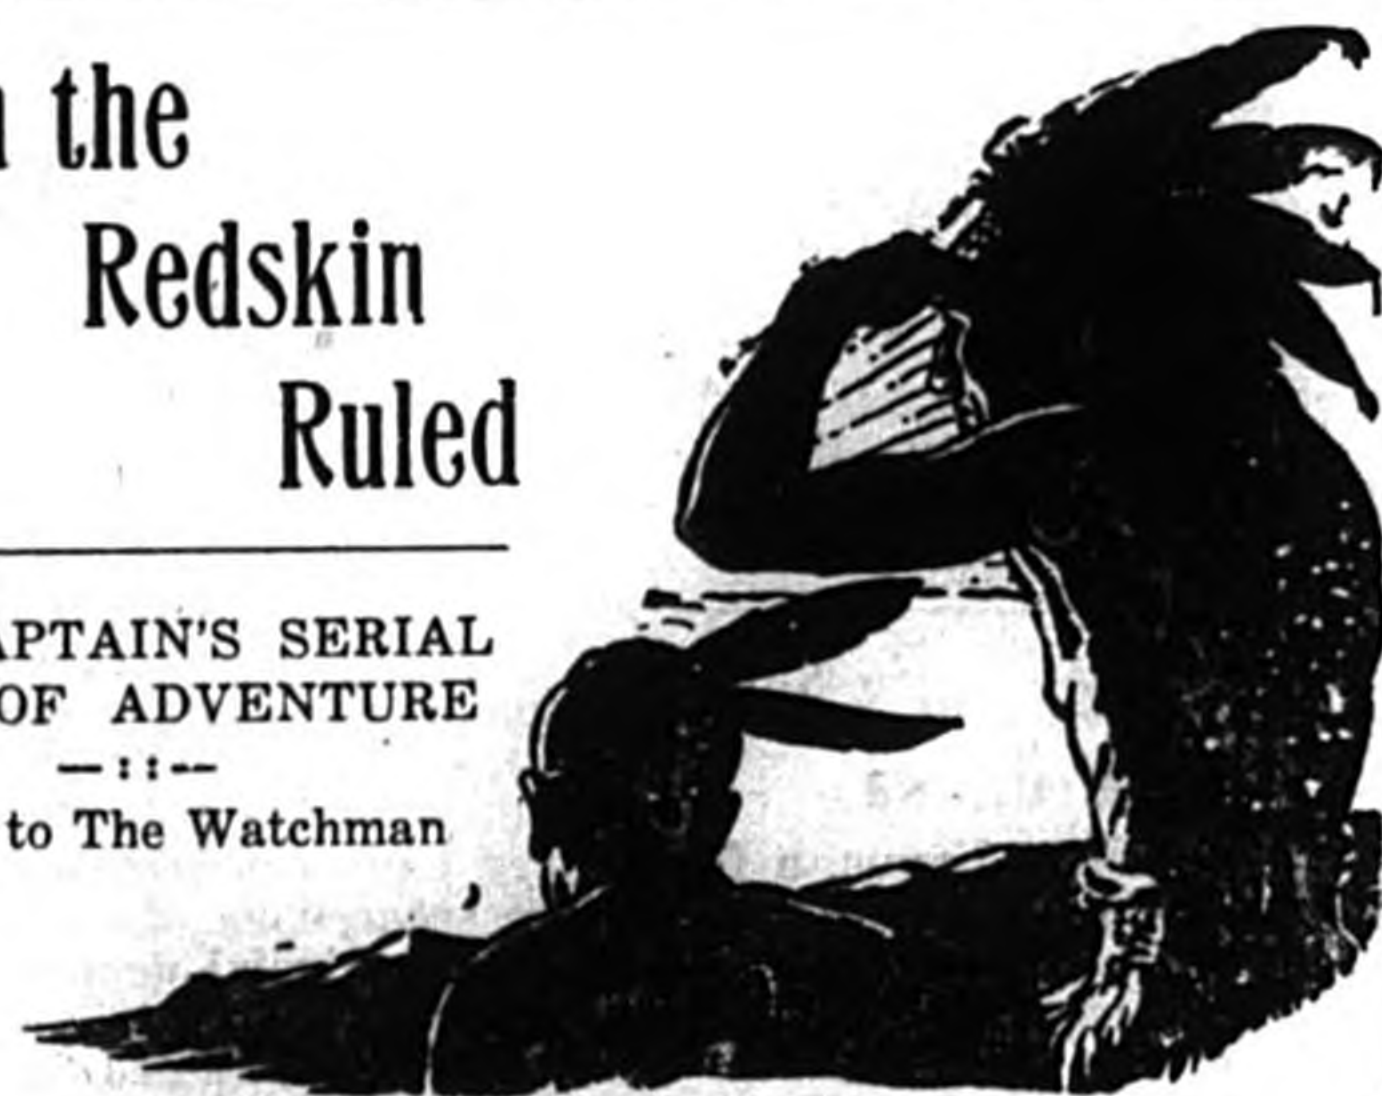

One day I shall cross the sea again and then on the other side will be waiting for me, the green fields, winding rivers, tall trees, and the everlasting hills I know so well. I doubt not that they will welcome me in their own peculiar way, but their reception will be as nothing to that which will be given me when I take the hand of My Friend Smith.

Your affectionate friend,
THE CAPTAIN.

STORY OF ADVENTURE

Special to The Watchman

CHAPTER 34.

"The Enemy is lurking ready to strike."

"That was a splendid story by Sunny Jim," said Frankie, "and I wonder if things like that will happen to me when I get older?"

Walter laughed as he looked round on the quiet countryside and noted the smoke rising in the still air from the farm chimney. "I shouldn't think so, in a place of this kind. As far as I can see about the most exciting event round here would be the sting of a mosquito. What about a drink, you two chaps? Let's go down to the well and refresh ourselves. I for one won't be sorry when the sun sets."

The others agreeing, all three made their way to the corner of the farmyard where water could be obtained. Walter had just let down the bucket when Mr. Wilson came hurrying out. "Frankie and you two other boys, I want you to follow me inside at once," and there was an unusually serious note in his voice, one which brought the youngsters immediately to his side.

"What's the matter Dad?" asked Frank. "Is mother ill?" "Not as bad as that, my son," replied Mr. Wilson with a smile, "but still it's serious. The Indians are on the war path." It sounded a simple enough statement, but in those early days was one of gravest importance to the many settlers and pioneers, who, like the Wilson family, were carrying on good and useful work in agriculture. Even Frankie, young as he was, realized that danger was lurking somewhere, maybe quite near at hand, and what the consequences would be, it was hard to tell. To the others, who were as yet quite unfamiliar with the conditions as they existed then between the different types of Indians and their pale-faced neighbours, the fact that Redskins were out for WAR meant little. Savages there might be, in this strange land, though they had never seen any, but what could these poor people do against the power of Englishmen?

"Where is my Guardian, Sir?" asked Walter eagerly. "Inside the house, and waiting for you and Edgar," replied Mr. Wilson; then turning to his son, he added: "Run Frankie, find Sharp Eye, and bring him in with you. Make haste for every moment is of importance."

A few minutes later the Wilson family, with their guests and those responsible for the direction of the farm, were gathered together in the main parlour. Tom Dickson had given his two boys injunctions to ask no questions, pointing out that none of them could give any advice of value on a matter about which they were ignorant. They were however soon to learn how matters stood. Mr. Wilson, after a rapid glance round on the arrival of Frankie and Sharp Eye, to make sure that those he wanted were present, said quietly: "For some weeks now we have heard rumours that the Redskins are out to give trouble. You may not be aware of it Mr. Dickson, but our Indian neighbours are always a source of trouble to us. At times they content themselves with raids on our cattle and other live stock and we suffer considerable loss in this way. Unpleasant as such acts are, we were content to bear them as best we could provided matters were not carried too far. But as I say, for some weeks now the feeling against us has taken another form, and the call among at least two tribes, if not more, has gone forth to kill and scalp all pale-faces, wherever they may be found and captured. This means fighting, deadly fighting, and I am thankful to have your help under present conditions."

"You can depend on us," answered Tom Dickson with a grim smile, "but surely it will not be difficult to drive off a few savages?"

"Moreso than you think, unfortunately," was the reply. "The Red-skin is no mere savage; he is skilled in the warfare of the plains and woods. He practically knows no fear, and is deadly with his bow and arrow, the tip of which is poisoned. Furthermore, they always attack in large numbers, whereas we are a small party, though armed with rifles. Then we have to protect ourselves against fire!"

"Fire?" exclaimed Tom Dickson in surprise, "What do you mean by that?"

THE NAUGHTY WAVE

By Aunt Jean

Toddle-kins was bathing
In the deep blue sea,
Toddle-kins was waving
Tiny hands to me.

A great big wave came slapping
Bang—right on the beach.
Toddle-kins stopped laughing
For Nurse Bain tried to reach.

The naughty wave just tossed Against a heap of sand, her Scattered all her treasures,
And swept towards the land.

It kept on rolling, rolling,
Behind it came another,
Toddle-kins sobbed out in wrath
"I'm going to tell my mother!"

LILA'S UMBRELLA

Lila had been left alone at their cottage by the seashore for what her mother thought was only going to be a very short time. Someone had taken ill and a neighbor had come for Lila's mother. Her mother had not been very enthusiastic about going and leaving Lila alone, but Lila had been quite sure she would not be lonely and that she would not be tempted to go to the beach alone.

Her parents never allowed her to go by herself; they were too careful of their only little daughter for that.

For a time after her mother had gone, Lila played quite contentedly with her dolls, but the stillness of the house gradually got on her nerves, to use a grown-up expression. She laid her dollies down on the couch and started to wander around in search of something to distract her attention from the boom, boom, boom of the waves beating against Kelpy Rock. When Lila was down at the shore with her mother she loved hat sound, and loved to see the spray tossing about in the air. She often begged her mother to go closer, that she might feel the spray on her hands and face. But it was not so pleasant to listen to at a distance, and with no beautiful rainbow-colored spray to see.

Wandering into her mother's bedroom she noticed the end of a brown paper-covered parcel, just peeping as it were from beneath a cushion on Daddy's big arm chair. All little people are curious, but Lila's worst fault was inquisitiveness. From a very small baby, if a paper-covered parcel appeared anywhere in sight, she could not rest until she had torn the paper off it to see what was inside.

She had been punished again and again as she grew older for this bad habit, and was over-coming it to a certain extent, but the longing to see what was in that parcel was too much for her. She reached out to pull it from under the cushion, and as suddenly drew her hand back. She must not touch it, she really must not. It was not her parcel. Arguing thus she turned and ran out of the room and out-of-doors. She looked in the direction from which her mother should be coming. There was no one in sight. She walked back and forth in front of the house for what seemed a dreadfully long time; still no signs of mother. "Dear me!" she said soberly, "Why doesn't mother come?"

Sitting down on the verandah she commenced kicking holes in the pebbly sand. That sport did not satisfy her as it usually did; besides she was scraping all the polished kid from the toes of her slippers. "I'll go and put my sandals on" she said darting into the house for them. "Of course they will have to be in Mother's room" she said. They were,—right beside Daddy's chair.

She sat down in it and pulled her sandals on. All the while the parcel kept pressing against her little back as if to say, "Open me, open me."

Reaching around she put her hand under the cushion and felt it. It was long, just like the boxes that Daddy sent flowers to her mother in. Perhaps it was flowers. If it was flowers they should be in water. Jerking the box out excitedly, she undid the wrapper carefully and lifted the lid. "It's flowers all right," she murmured. "They are all covered with pink tissue paper."

But when she lifted the pink tissue paper it was not flowers but a sweet little pink umbrella. all trimmed with silk ruffles and lace. "Oh!" she said, "Oh! isn't it sweet!" Forgetting that she should not be touching other people's things, she put it up, and trotted up and down in front of the mirror with it. Lifting up one corner of her tiny skirt she curtsied to herself in the mirror, and was quite pleased with the picture she made. Her big brown eyes were dancing, her cheeks like twin roses, and this darling little umbrella . . . it was just too sweet!

A wild thought darted into her mind, she spoke aloud, "Oh! if the other little girls could only see me."

Without stopping to think, she darted out of the house and ran towards the beach. It was deserted. She had forgotten that this was the hour that most little girls rested before having their dip. She stood a minute twirling the little pink umbrella

"A favourite form of fighting. Some of the Indians creep round the outskirts of our buildings, which you will notice are all made of lumber in the rough, and throw lighted torches on the roofs. Given a wind, the flames quickly spread, and if we are not already killed by their arrows, their intention is to smoke us out and dispatch us with their tomahawks."

"However, we can no doubt protect ourselves against that, and fortunately the wind is very light and likely to drop altogether." Then, feeling he had taken up quite enough time in explanation, the farmer turned towards Sharp Eye.

"What's the latest news?" he asked sharply of his Indian foreman.

"Chief, I am not certain," came the slow reply, "but I think there will be an attack tonight. The warriors are gathering on the banks of the river two miles down, and have put on war paint, besides which I have seen scouts within a very short distance of the farm."

"Men we must be prepared. You had better get in a good supply of water indoors and fill as many buckets as possible for fire prevention. When that is done, close the stockade. Are all the animals inside?"

"Yes Chief, the last have just been driven in." "That is good. Have you and your boys rifles, Mr. Dickson?"

"We have," was the instant reply, "and I can promise you they will be made good use of."

"Excellent. Perhaps after all the attack may not take place, but if it does—well we can at least give a good account of ourselves."

50 Years Ago.

Friday, Aug. 31, 1883.

The Creamery and Cheese Factory which started here with such good prospects, has been forced to close.

The Printers of Montreal, with their wives and families, are visiting Lachute for a picnic next Saturday. They will patronize Mr. Barron's grove, west of the railway track.

A fine cow owned by Mr. Jno. Hope, was killed on the street crossing at the Court House. Caught by the cowcatcher of the west bound train the animal was lifted bodily and hurled over the bridge into the river.

A frost this week damaged potatoes, beans, and other vegetables.

When the C.P.R. took over the government line from Prince Arthur's Landing to Winnipeg, they named the former place "Port Arthur." The name commended itself to the townspeople, who held a meeting and resolved to call the town Port Arthur.

lightly in her hand.

"I'll hurry back and put it away before Mamma comes," she said to herself, but it must be mine; there is no other little girl in our house, and this umbrella is much too small for Mamma, I should think."

The wind began tugging at the umbrella. Lila thought it fun and stood holding it lightly and laughing to feel the wind tossing it. As she turned to go back to the house the wind took it away from her. It started along the beach, hopping along just in front of her. She dashed after it but could not catch it. Her hands would be almost on it then the wind would catch it and away it would go again. . . .

Lila began to be worried. Would she ever be able to catch it? If she did not, what would her mother say? If she had only left it in the house; if she had not touched the parcel at all!

It was really too late for Lila to be thinking thoughts like that; she should have remembered her promise not to touch parcels that she had been told not to touch; also her promise not to go to the beach alone.

We will have to wait until next week to see what happened to Lila and her umbrella.

—Lovingly,

PROMINENT PHYSICIAN URGES NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE

Regarding the constitutional obstacles which blocked the hatching of a Health Insurance scheme, during discussions at the inter-provincial conference, Dr. John C. Meakins had something to say recently at a Montreal Kiwanis luncheon.

Dr. Meakins, physician in chief of the Royal Victoria Hospital, pointed out that the British North America Act made no mention of public health. "It is always assumed by the federal government and provinces," he said, "that it is a matter of provincial legislation; but we have a number of instances to the contrary. The Federal Government is responsible for the Indians, or, if anyone contracts leprosy, the Federal Government is responsible. Why the distinction between leprosy and tuberculosis?"

Emphasising this anomaly, the speaker also urged the adoption of compulsory health insurance throughout Canada, under a plan by which no profit could be made by any outside organization, but would be conducted by the Government of Canada for the people, and supported by the people.

This state-controlled medical system would include free choice of the family doctor by the patient, and reduction of administrative costs to the lowest figure.

At present, especially since the financial and economic disruption throughout the country, the almost abnormal economic relationship which the people have to the question of health, can easily be seen. This barrier could be wiped out by a sane system of health insurance, by which medical services would be available to all people at all times.

Seeing Quebec

ALONG THE BANKS OF THE GATINEAU

So lavishly has Quebec been endowed that it encompasses within its own frontiers the advantages and attractions of ten or more different countries.

The Riviera offers no better climate or more mellow landscape than our Baie des Chaleurs. What lakes, in the whole world, are more beautiful than our thousands of Laurentian lakes? Where have you a more cosmopolitan centre than Montreal? Where more atmosphere than in Quebec city?

Many Canadians boast of having made the beautiful Rhine trip, and yet they know little of their own St. Lawrence, and nothing of the Ottawa, or the Gatineau, or the St. Maurice. Are the Norway fjords more enchanting than the rocky North coast of Gaspé?

Hundreds of Canadians will tie field of Waterloo, who have never taken the trouble to visit our own inspiring "Parc des Batailles" on the Plains of Abraham.

This year, don't go abroad: discover your own province.

This is the time of year when the Laurentians are at their best.

Road No. 11—Montreal-Mont-Laurier-Maniwaki-Hull - winds through the heart of the Laurentian country. It is 289 miles long and is one of the most picturesque.

This road may be divided into two sections. The Montreal-Mont-Laurier branch is the older one and the more frequented. It winds through a country of fertile farms and of prosperous little industrial centres, drawing their power from local hydro-electrical power plants.

During the Summer season, the twenty-five towns of this section blossom forth into attractive watering places, where Montrealeers have their cottages or spend week-ends at the numerous hotels and boarding-houses. The region offers every opportunity for hunting, fishing, bathing and canoeing. Everywhere are to be found tennis courts and some of the sportiest golf courses of the Province.

The other sections of this route, the Mont-Laurier-Maniwaki-Hull branch, although offering the same opportunities, has not yet been invaded to the same extent, perhaps because of its greater distance from the

KENTUCKY CITY HAS TWO FIRE CHIEFS

SEEK TO CONTROL SKY WRITING PRACTICE

Municipalities of Essex County in England considered that they should have power to prohibit any display which might be considered offensive, and demand authority to control the practice of sky writing. A clause of the Essex County Council Bill, seeking powers to prohibit this form of advertising except under licence and prescribed conditions, was passed by the House of Lords but reversed by the Commons with a 49 majority.

QUESTIONNAIRE WITH TENDERS TO PROTECT LOCAL PLANTS

The City of Montreal received tenders for its asphalt paving programme, and for the first time each tenderer was required to answer a questionnaire designed to guide the city administration in its policy of protecting local contractors against outside competition. The following were the questions to be answered:

"Since what date is the paving or sidewalk company in existence?"
"Does the firm own an asphalt plant?"
"Where is the said asphalt plant situated: is it in operation?"
"Since when is the said asphalt plant in operation at the above address?"
"Specify places in Montreal or district where the bidder has laid paving or sidewalks and give the date of such construction?"

Legend Metic

In the old, a days, a picture of the pillars of Hercules, when stood on either side of the straits of Gibraltar. These mighty rocks marked the western boundary of the empire of Spain. Beyond these rolled the mighty, unexplored ocean. On the scroll over the picture of the pillar of Hercules they inscribed the word Ne Plus Ultra—nothing beyond. After Columbus, the man of mighty faith discovered America, Spain struck out the negative, leaving the inscription, Plus Ultra, "more beyond." For every earnest soul there is always more beyond. Strike out the negative and make Plus Ultra your motto.—Montreal Family Herald.

The Firefly's Light

The light produced by the firefly is believed to be caused by the oxidation of gases in a series of air cells located on the abdomen of the insect and not, as originally believed, the result of the presence of phosphorus. There are many types, including the beetle in the United States, known as the lightning bug. In tropical countries, the insects are much larger and their light much more brilliant.

The glow worm of Europe is a species of lightning bug of which the female has no wings. Because of this, the female and the larvae, while still possessed of the mysterious power of light, are usually termed glow worms.

Truncheon Only Weapon

A wooden truncheon, or staff, made of cocus wood, 15 inches long, with a leather strap to secure it to the wrist, is the traditional weapon of the metropolitan police of London. Revolvers are kept only at the stations, to be issued in special cases where there is reason to believe that encounters with armed criminals are likely to occur. Mounted police have longer truncheons. The metropolitan police orders provide that truncheons are to be used only in extreme cases, and whenever used by a constable must be submitted to the station officer for subsequent inspection.

City Victim of Eruption

A melancholy interest attaches to Martinique, the "Queen of the Caribbees." What was previous to May 8, 1902, a beautiful and prosperous island is now half desolate. It was on that date that the eruption of Mt. Pelee, plainly visible from the ship's deck, utterly destroyed the charming city of St. Pierre with its 30,000 inhabitants. The city and its people lie buried beneath a thick blanket of lava ashes. It is recorded that the gayety-loving creole women of St. Pierre were the most beautiful females to be found in the entire West Indies. Empress Josephine was born in Martinique.

Osprey Expert Fisher

The osprey, or fishhawk, as its name implies, lives entirely on fish. It is an expert at hovering above the surface of the water until a fish is seen near the surface when the osprey dives in a swift, powerful rush which often carries it a foot and a half beneath the surface, but which seldom fails to land its prey. Unfortunately, in areas frequented by eagles, the osprey is often robbed of its catch by the larger bird which seizes the fish while the osprey is in flight away.

THE AGE OF CENTENARIES

This is the age of centenarians. Scarcely a day passes that the press does not announce the 100th anniversary of somebody, something, or somewhere. To-day we remark no less than 3 such important anniversaries. The modern day is brimful of epochal creations and developments, but one is still apt to remark there was a queer lot going on in the world just about a hundred years ago:

IN REAL LIFE

There comes to mind a verse which asserts "the man worth while is the man who can smile, when everything goes dead wrong" . . . and last week brought an instance to deny the claim that "between you and I, there is no such guy, excepting in fiction and song."

H. H. McElroy, genial manager of the Ottawa Exhibition, sat back from his fair-week duties on Thursday long enough to remark how much good the rain would do the country! The declining "gate" was uppermost in his thoughts, of course, but no-one would have guessed it.

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 30th.—More than 600,000 Canadians were removed from the relief lists of the various provinces and municipalities in the past four months. While some reduction was expected as a seasonal effect, the improvement has been much more than a seasonal one. A large part of the gain was recorded in the industrial areas of Ontario and Quebec, showing that men and women in large numbers were getting back into employment again. This is confirmed by the recent employment figures collected by the Dominion Bureau, which registers important gains in manufacturing and other industries.

In spite of considerable talk to the contrary, the direct relief method of meeting unemployment will be continued this coming fall and winter. Any large-scale return to the "public works" schemes by which attempts were made to give jobs to the unemployed in 1930-31 would be financially impossible at the present time. The municipalities and provinces, which would have to put forward the bulk of the money for such public works and undertakings, are still in straightened circumstances, while the federal treasury is very little better off. After consultation with the authorities here, it is safe to predict that there will be no wholesale return to the "public works" scheme of relieving unemployment until municipalities and provinces are in better shape financially, even if then.

Help with Roads

A certain amount of help is being given by Ottawa in road-building. The federal treasury will contribute 60 cts. per man-day toward all construction done on the Trans-Canada highway, and 50 cents per man-day on all other roadwork. Ottawa will also pay one-third of the direct labour costs of all municipal undertakings, the provinces to contribute a similar amount. The $600 "Back to the Land Scheme" by which selected families are being helped to earn part of their living on small farms or plots of land, is being continued for another year. While certain parts of the west are suffering acutely from loss of crops through grasshopper and drought damage, and will have to be supplied with fodder and other requirements, the information available here does not indicate that anything like the southern Saskatchewan disaster of 1930-31 (the 'Calamity' area) has been approached this year, in spite of the fact that the yield of wheat and of coarse grains will as a whole reach perhaps a record low figure. But unless fodder is forthcoming in large quantities, tens of thousands of cattle will have to be slaughtered.

A Shock to Ottawa

Although the results of the provincial elections in Nova Scotia were accepted philosophically by the federal cabinet, and dismissed with the remark federal issues were not involved, there is no doubt that the sweeping nature of the Liberal victory came as something of a surprise. Government supporters who had been in touch with the situation had expected a close fight, but were not prepared for such a reversal of fortunes. The Liberals, of course, were jubilant, and Mackenzie King hailed the result as a 'handwriting on the wall' and as evidence of 'the rising tide of Liberalism.' There was considerable comment over the unimportant showing made by the two C.C.F. candidates, and the conclusion was drawn that however powerful the new Farmer-Labor-Socialist party may be in other parts of Canada, to date it has made little impression in the Maritimes.

Will Support Reciprocity

What is held here to be perhaps the most important new pledge made by the Liberal leader in the course of the western tour he concluded last week is that if Premier Bennett introduces a reciprocity pact with the United States, the Liberal party will get behind him on it. It raises the question whether all of Mr. Mackenzie King's supporters would be able to vote for such a measure. However, in 1911 reciprocity may have meant free interchange of natural products; today about the best it could be would be a trade agreement offering minimum duties on goods not highly competitive, and it is unlikely that even the most protectionist Liberals would have to shy at the most far-reaching agreement Bennett and Roosevelt could readily reach.

WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS

Plowing under growing crops is no permanent cure for farm distress, Mr. Henry A. Wallace the Secretary of Agriculture, warned farmers at the Chicago world's fair recently. "We can't do this kind of thing indefinitely," he said with a wisp of plaitiveness which showed how deeply he felt it. "I know it was warranted this time, and maybe for two or three years. But it goes counter to all that is deeper and best in us."

Then the leader of American agriculture offered the farmers a new type of farm relief—new, yet going back at least as far as Bible times. He advised them to do a little praying.

The nation has spent hundreds of millions to help the farmer, has had its best men studying their problem, and finally has resorted to destroying crops and taking millions of acres of fertile land out of production. Even that gives no assurance of lasting success. Something better must come along. The Secretary of Agriculture advises the farmers to pray for it.

Agriculture is in trouble, just where many a person has been. The farmer can do all the human things that may be done, and still not see his way out. So still doing the best he can, he may reach out to the divine source of help for what he needs to carry him through.

The kind of relief that Secretary Wallace advised is one that has worked many many times.

DO CARRIER PIGEONS THINK?

(L. E. Eubanks in "Our Dumb Animals")

Since pigeons were used as messengers as early as the fifth Egyptian dynasty and have served man so faithfully through the centuries, it would seem that they should be given some credit for a feeling of responsibility.

I believe that when a bird is used repeatedly to carry a message, that bird becomes more or less conscious of its mission, realizes that there is a purpose in the flying. The use of birds is no longer confined to times of war; present-day activities employ them in many other ways. Forest rangers prize their help in the control of fires. Air pilots frequently carry several pigeons as a means of communication should they be obliged to land in an isolated place.

One of the most recent uses for pigeons is in the making of aerial photographs with a small light camera which is strapped around the bird's body. Sometimes air messages are attached to the same bird's legs. At intervals the camera automatically makes exposures, as the bird flies. I think that the pigeon flying with such an outfit, anyway after a few repetitions, feels himself to be an actor in something important. It is significant that the bird lets nothing happen to the equipment, and seldom gets "side-tracked."

Unless pigeons think, how would we explain this: Some time ago a pigeon-fancier in Dover missed one of the birds from his loft, and tried in vain for several days to locate it. Finally, the man noticed strange behaviour in one of his other pigeons. It would fill its crop as full as possible then fly away at great speed. The owner resolved to find out where the bird went, and so the mystery was solved. He traced the pigeon to a certain chimney-stack on the outskirts of Dover, and saw it drop the grains of corn down into the chimney. Ladders were brought and the chimney examined. Down in there, resting on a little brick ledge, was the lost pigeon, and it was still alive, thanks to its mate's care.

Melody Cruise, commencing Sunday at the Rex and lasting four days, is a musical revue of outstanding appeal. A production well worth seeing and hearing.

Possible to Retrieve

Letter From the Mail

If, in a moment of artificial bravado or pensive dream, you should mail a letter which, come morning, you are sorry you mailed, there is a regulation way of getting it back. I am told that an average of two letters a day are thus recalled in Manhattan and the Bronx, says a writer in the New York Morning Telegraph.

By the Monroe doctrine, or something like that, one's letter belongs to one until the sender gets it in his hands. That's a post office rule.

Here, then, is what you do. Read dress a second envelope, a duplicate of the first, and rush to room 224 at the central post office. This is the office of the assistant postmaster. Give the man your facsimile envelope and ask for form 1500. Fill it in. It asks nothing more personal than your name, we understand.

The post office promptly gets in touch with the substitution of the district to which your letter has been sent and with the carrier who naturally would deliver it.

You then go home and wait for notification that the letter has been recalled, whereupon you go down and claim it. Letters to distant points are wired or even cabled for, and the sender must pay for this, but for letters within the city there is no charge. I thought you'd like to know.

Mosque of Omar

Visitors to Jerusalem never fail to make the Dome of the Rock or the mosque of Omar one of the first things to see. It is sometimes considered to be the finest building in Asia, if not in the world. It is octagonal in form, each side being 63½ feet wide and composed of richly colored marble and tile, with a dome of beautiful proportions. In part it is the work of the Moslems before the Crusaders, but the Crusaders enlarged it, and Suleiman the Magnificent completed it in 1561. When you have seen its interior, says a confirmed globetrotter, the mosaics, the rich rugs given by a past sultan, the sixteenth-century stained-glass windows and all the architectural effects and groupings, you realize why it is so praised. It is the chief landmark of the city.

Stamps for Reparations

One of the most valuable stamp collections in the world was assembled by Count Philip von Ferrari, duke of Galliera. Of unlimited resources, he roamed the world for single specimens. In his Paris quarters hung a bag in which he placed $10,000 a week just for stamp purchases. Two secretaries spent all of their time looking after his collection. The stamps were kept singly in file cases instead of the usual albums. When the count died, an estate from France, at Lausanne in 1917 it was found that he had willed his collection, valued at millions of dollars, to the German postal museum at Berlin. French courts seized it as alien property and sold it at public auction. The sale of the 25,000 specimens extended over four years. The amount realized was $337,000 which the French promptly applied to German reparations.

Orangemen Meet at Lachute

Friday evening last witnessed the largest assembly of Orangemen ever held in Lachute under the auspices of the Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 2231 and was presided over by Wor. Master, Bro. Edgar Morrow, of Lakefield. The Louisa degree team conferred the R.A.P. degree, in a very creditable manner after which the Wor. Master called upon the Prov. Grand Master, Rt. Wor. Bro. Hugh Kilpatrick of Aylmer, Que., to give an address which was listened to with marked attention and also the addresses given by Rt. Wor. Bro. Robert White, Past Provincial Grandmaster of Alberta, and a number of other speeches from Grand Lodge Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec. Among these were Deputy Grand Master Rt. Wor. Bro. W. J. H. Lummis of Morin Heights; Junior Deputy Grand Master Rt. Wor. Bro. E. Irwin, Rt. Wor. Bro. W. J. Roberts, Past Provincial Grand Master; Rt. Wor. Bro. L. James, Provincial Grand Secretary all of Montreal. Rt. Wor. Bro. W. J. Cooper, Past County Master of Brownsburg; Rt. Wor. Bro. W. L. Dawson, County Master for Argenteuil County, Lakefield. Afterwards the visitors and members from the surrounding lodges throughout the County adjourned to the banquet hall where the Ladies of the Lachute L.O.B.A. served supper which was much enjoyed by all, after which the happy event broke up, with the singing of "For they are all Jolly Good Fellows" and "God Save the King."

WORSHIP

With candle light and organ notes and surplice white and young boys' throats peace enters in my weary breast, at last I win
a sense of rest.

With bending priest and lifted host the holy feast can calm me most;
in that still hour
of counted beads
I feel the power which fills all needs.

The ritual
and chant and prayer,
the silver bell
and perfumed air thick-veiled, I see hull thought to sleep;
new deep on deep
of mystery.

Few Corpulent Bad Men

in Life or Literature

Doctors say that the man of middle age and beyond who is overweight has a better chance to live out the year than the man who has too much poundage. Doctors look askance at the individual of large girth and excess weight. His days are likely to be fewer in number than are those of the skinny man with a natural site for a belt.

A medical officer at a Japanese prison has been studying the physical aspects of his charges and he gives his approval to fat men. They are not lawbreakers or if they are they avoid the expected results of a lawless life. They do not go to prison.

Winkle Collins apparently did not know that fat men are not criminals or he made the villain of his "Woman in White" a fat scoundrel. He is the only fat villain in literature so far as the records go. On the theory that there are exceptions to all rules this fat villain can be accepted in spite of the Japanese medico who asserts that the pinguinoid lawbreaker is rare.—Miami (Fla.) Herald.

Metallurgic Changes

Since the discovery of radium by professor and Mme. Curie in 1898, the enormous importance of this and other metals which behave in a similar way has been more and more strongly realized. Radium, thorium, uranium, and one or two other metals, have extraordinary properties. They are never at rest, but are always flinging off parts of themselves and changing as they do so into something else. In the course of millions of years radium, by far the rarest and the most valuable of metals, turns into lead, one of the commonest and cheapest.

Lesson for September 10

JONATHAN

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 18:1-4; 19:1-7; 20:30-40.
GOLDEN TEXT—A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity. Proverbs 17:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—New Friends.
JUNIOR TOPIC—David's True Friend.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Choosing Worthy Friends.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Be a Friend.

I. Friendship Established Between Jonathan and David (I Sam. 18:1-4).
The friendship of Jonathan and David has become immortalized in the world's thought. It was unique in that it occurred between two men of rival "worldly" interests. Jonathan was the crown prince and heir to the throne, according to hereditary rights. David was to be king according to divine choice and arrangement. Jonathan knew this and yet magnanimously waived his natural, personal rights in favor of God's chosen.

1. Love at first sight (vv. 1, 2). At the end of the interview between David and Saul, following the victory over Goliath, Jonathan's soul was knit with that of David. While there was mutual love, this trait stands out prominently in Jonathan. To him it meant great loss, the loss of the throne, while to David it meant immense gain, the acquisition of the throne, to which he had no natural right.

2. A covenant established (vv. 3, 4). This mutual love found expression in the establishment of a covenant between them. Following this love covenant, Jonathan stripped himself of his court robe and equipment and gave them to David. This act was a virtual abdication of the throne to David. Truly, "Love seeketh not her own." (I Cor. 13:5).

II. Jonathan Defended David Against Saul's Frenzy (I Sam. 19:1-7).
David went into the battle with Goliath out of zeal for God and true religion, not for personal glory; but he turned out as always, that because he put God first, God honored him. It is always true that those who honor God shall in turn be honored of God.

On David's return from victory over Goliath, he was met by a triumphal chorus of women of all the tribes of Israel, chanting praises to him of the victory over their enemy. They ascribed more praise to David than to Saul. The one group sang "Saul has slain his thousands," and the other answered, "And David has ten thousands." This praise of David aroused the murderous envy in Saul's heart and moved him twice to attempt to kill David.

This wickedness was in Saul's heart. The occasion fanned it into a flame making it a burning passion of evil. Let no one think of this as an imaginary sin. Its counterpart may be found in many of us. The supreme test is as to whether the success of others and the honor bestowed upon others arouses within us envy and jealousy. It is hard to forgive those who outdistance us in the race of life.

In Saul's third attempt to kill David, Jonathan defended him and secured from his father the oath that David should not be slain. He thus exposed himself to the anger of his infuriated father for David's sake. This willingness to lay down his life for David proved his real friendship (John 15:13).

III. Jonathan Revealed to David Saul's Murderous Attempt (I Sam. 20:30-40).
The beginning of the new moon was celebrated by sacrifices and feasting, at which all the members of the family were expected to be present (v. 5). David's excuse for being absent was that he might go home to attend the yearly sacrifice of his family. Matters were now so serious that Jonathan and David renewed their covenant. In this renewal the terms were broadened beyond the life of Jonathan (vv. 14, 15).

Saul's anger was now so fierce that for Jonathan to be found in David's company was most dangerous, so he cleverly planned this sign by which he could make known to David Saul's attitude and purpose. True friendship warns those who are exposed to danger. This pledge was faithfully carried out by David (II Sam. 9:7, 8).

Testing Christianity

To examine its evidences is not to try Christianity; to admire its martyrs is not to try Christianity; to compare and estimate its teachers is not to try Christianity; but for one week, for one day, to have lived in the pure atmosphere of faith and love to God, and tenderness to man, that indeed is to have made experiment of Christianity.—William Archer Butler.

Beautiful Sentences

One of the most beautiful sentences in the Bible is this brief sentence from the thirty-second chapter of Genesis: "He blessed him there." No life can be at its fullest, strongest and best until one can say, referring to some time and place: "He blessed me there."

Like a Diamond

"The nature of a human being is like a finely-cut diamond; it reflects a multitude of color-flashes as the light of other personalities is played upon it."

Hints for Homebodies

Specially written for Readers of The Watchman.

WAFFLES — MORNING, NOON OR NIGHT

By Barbara B. Brooks

The next time you sit down to plan the day's meals and have an attack of that tired-of-the-same-old-thing feeling, take a look around at equipment and utensils. Of course you know what's there, but look at things anyway and with some imagination, as if you have never seen them before. You will get a lot of ideas, perhaps more than you can use right away. We know, because we tried this and took hardly more than a peep into the cupboard and there was the waffle iron. At once, we knew that we did not use that waffle iron nearly as much as we might.

Perhaps plain waffles do not appeal to you as something new or different. In that case, let's add something to the batter or bake something in the iron that is not a waffle batter at all. We shall start with a labor saving luncheon or supper menu.

BRAN CORN MEAL WAFFLES WITH BACON

Butter Syrup (if desired)
Quartered Tomatoes
French Dressing
Hot or Iced Beverage

There is a real secret about the waffle recipe. It is just a corn bread mixture. You can use almost any corn bread recipe you like, provided it is a rather thin batter. Add a little milk or water to thin if necessary. This recipe was pronounced just right by all who tried it. We liked it especially because it is almost a meal in itself. Both the bacon and bran add flavor and nourishment. No other meat is needed and the bran supplies sufficient fiber to balance the meal in this respect. The best part for the cook is that these waffles are fun to make and there are very few dishes to wash afterwards.

BRAN CORN MEAL WAFFLES WITH CORN

2 eggs (beaten slightly)
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup bran
1 cup corn meal
1 cup milk
3/4 cup flour
1/4 tsp. salt
2 tps. baking powder
4 slices bacon (diced)

Combine eggs and sugar thoroughly; add bran, corn meal and milk. Sift dry ingredients together and add to first mixture. Preheat waffle iron. Sprinkle a tablespoon of diced bacon on the hot iron and fry until partially cooked. Pour on batter.

Close iron and bake until nicely browned.

Note: Grease the top of the waffle iron before baking the first waffle. After that no greasing will be needed.

Yield: 6 waffles.
Other mixtures suitable for waffles are cake batters that are not too rich, such as ginger, spice, chocolate or plain butter cakes. These waffles are delicious as dessert, or for tea and party refreshments. Sprinkle with powdered sugar, or cinnamon and sugar. Cookies, too, can be baked in the waffle iron. Serve them hot right from the iron for a real treat.

CORN FLAKE WAFFLE COOKIES

1/4 cup shortening
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg (well beaten)
1/4 cup milk
1 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 cup shredded cocoanut
1 cup corn flakes

Cream shortening and add sugar gradually. Add eggs and mix well. Stir in sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk and add cocoanut and corn flakes. Drop by spoonfuls on hot waffle iron and bake until golden brown.

Yield: 15 cookies, 2 1/2 inches in diameter.

A few suggestions for making "plain" waffles different and also fancy are:
Add to your favorite waffle batter vegetables, such as corn, grated raw carrots or sweet potatoes; berries; shredded pineapple, chopped cherries, dates, figs, citron; minced ham, cooked sausage or bacon; grated cheese; chopped nuts; crisp cereals or bran.

Make Texas Waffles by substituting brown for white sugar and placing over the batter a few pecan meats just before closing the iron.

Sprinkle the batter with some shredded cocoanut to make toasted cocoanut waffles.

Make sandwich waffles by spreading on iron a thin layer of batter, place on each quarter a thin slice of cheese or crisply fried bacon, and cover with batter.

Occasionally serve waffles instead of fritters with meat, instead of toast under creamed foods or poached eggs, instead of cake for shortcakes or ice cream sandwiches. And quite often serve waffles as waffles and we know the family will love them.

THE POPCORN MAN

By Edith D. Osborne

Do you hear his whistle, blowing—Softly blowing—as he stands
At the cold and wintry corner,
With mittens on his hands?
"Popcorn! Popcorn! Five a sack!"
and inside the little wagon,
Through the little steamy window,
You can see the white grains popping
And hopping round,
Hear a little, crisp, staccato
Sort of sound,
Watch the fleecy grains go hopping,
Gaily dropping,
Softly dropping,
Never faltering or stopping,
Like a fall of fairy snow.
"Popcorn! Popcorn! Five a sack!"

And the children gather round
When they hear the whistle sound, Staring wide-eyed, wonder-bound,
At the fragrant, snowy mound Heaped inside the little window.
They watch his kindly face,
With his twinkly eyes of black;
They watch his mittened hands
As he deftly fills each sack.
Oh, I hear his whistle blowing
As through the streets I'm going.
"Popcorn! Popcorn! Five a sack!"
(And I wish I were a child again,
With the years turned back!)

Two Locomotives That Made Civil War History

The old wood-burning locomotive known as the "General" has long been on display at Chattanooga. The equally famous "Texas" is housed at Atlanta. In Civil war times some enterprising Union spies stole the "General" while it stood with steam up on a siding near Big Shanty, Ga. The Confederate engine crew were having breakfast at a tavern near at hand. By handcar and afoot they followed up the track until they found and commandeered the old freight engine, "Texas," and then the real chase started.

Box cars on fire were rolled down grade on the single track line by the fleeing federals. Heavy rains were falling, but they managed to set fire to a bridge at Chickamauga over which the "Texas" scooted just before it crashed. At last the Unionists set the "General" in reverse and sent it speeding southward while they took to the woods. The southerners reversed the "Texas" just in time to avoid a collision, and then managed to capture these enterprising spies.

Manna Found No Favor With Wanderer in Asia

Iraq is not an arid plain and marshes; there are forests in the north, which yield even the "divine" food of the Hebrews in the wilderness. For the first time, in England recently, I saw manna (sap of the European flowering ash), and I did not hanker for a fraction of an ounce of it. A look, a taste—and the mercy of Jehovah!

It is exhibited in burlap, a blackish mass, hard and insipid. Even made into a candy, plentifully powdered with sugar and packed in wooden boxes, it is no more than acceptable: "Turkish delight" makes it bitter with envy.

When the Bedouin Arab tasted first the crude product and then the candy he said: "My boot, if cooked with sugar, will be toothsome." He preferred pickled locusts.—Ameen Rihani in Asia.

Greyhound races drew a attendance of 20,000,000 persons during the 1932 season in England.

FOR DELICIOUS BREADS...BAKE WITH

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

KEEP a supply of Royal Yeast Cakes handy. Sealed in airtight waxed paper they stay fresh for months. For over fifty years these famous dry yeast cakes have been the standard of quality. You'll like the ROYAL YEAST BAKE BOOK, too, to use when you bake at home. Write Standard Brands Limited, Fraser Ave. and Liberty St., Toronto, Ont.

Your family will love these tempting Cinnamon Rolls

Scald 1/2 c. milk and dissolve 1 tsp. salt and 3 tps. sugar in it. Cool, mix with 1 c. Royal Yeast Sponge. Add 3 tps. shortening (melted after measuring) and 2 1/2 c. flour to make soft dough. Let rise until double in bulk, about 1 1/2 hours. Knead again. Turn onto board and roll out 1/2 in. thick. Spread with melted butter and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Roll like a jelly roll and cut off sections. Put these on end in greased pan and allow to rise till double in bulk. Wash tops with egg or milk and bake at 375° F. about 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 12 large rolls.

ROYAL YEAST SPONGE: Soak 1 Royal Yeast Cake in 1/2 pint lukewarm water for 15 min. Dissolve 1 tsp. sugar in 1/2 pint milk. Add to dissolved yeast cake. Add 1 quart bread flour. Beat thoroughly. Cover and let rise overnight to double in bulk in warm place free from draughts. Makes 5 to 6 cups of batter.

HITLER'S IDEAS ON CARS

To the motor car industry in Germany, the Swastika is a friendly emblem. Herr Hitler has positive ideas about the transportation industry, and to show where he stands in the matter, has removed the tax on new automobiles, which used to be quite heavy. Also being convinced that master highways were much needed, he has started work on these modern arteries of travel. Hitler's highways are minus curves wherever possible, and, to handle traffic in two directions, on paved surfaces each 27 feet wide separated by a strip 15 feet in width.

INCOMPATIBILITY

(Correspondence in the Wiarton Canadian Echo.)

I never read an account of a wedding in the columns of the Echo but what I look upon it as another great adventure and I keep my eye upon that pair for a long time to see if they are going to hit it off. Some wise philosopher, after observing mankind, male and female, for a lifetime has come to this conclusion: You never really know a man till you do business with him, or a woman till you have lived with her. I'll leave its verification to any married man alive. Take this young pair, Elliott Roosevelt and his wife after being married about a year and a half are going through the divorce court. Well that is no uncommon thing in the States but he being the oldest son of the President it naturally has given the case a lot of publicity. And the reason given for it is incompatibility. And what is incompatibility? Well I claim it is just plain ignorance, they don't understand one another and apparently are refusing to study themselves. Why we have incompatibility in our family, me and my wife, but I refuse to let it boss me. She is north of Ireland and like the whole race has a temper quick as lightning. I often think that George McManus has patterned his famous character, Maggie Jiggs, after my wife. Only the difference in our case is that unlike Jiggs I thoroughly understand my Maggie and act accordingly. She don't mean nothing. She aint no clinging vine type is my Maggie. She is a rip snorter when she is mad, but understanding her thoroughly I never get mad at the same time. She is as sourcraic as a dill pickle but the beauty of her is that she don't mean a thing that she says. She resembles our kitchen clock in Wiarton. It is a good clock but it is hard to tell time by, it keeps running along and ticking regularly but it is confusing. You got to understand that clock to get the best use of it.

When the hour hand points to twelve and the minute hand to a quarter past four that clock will strike nine, then I know it is twenty minutes after seven, but to understand and reason out the time, it is only possible by being sharp at mathematics and knowing the system. And it takes years to get on to.

And so it is with my wife. She is peculiar. Her tongue don't mean a thing, but once you understand her there ain't no better woman stepping around in Canada in shoe leather. Yes, we got incompatibility in our family but I got it liked to a frazzle and I wouldn't trade either my Maggie or our kitchen clock for anything I've ever seen in their lines.

And the secret in the whole thing is in understanding them. Once you know them you don't notice their oddities.

Inauguration Day

The Continental congress, on September 13, 1788, selected the first Wednesday in the following March as the day on which proceedings under the federal Constitution should begin. On that day, which happened to be March 4, the terms of congressmen and executives began. As the terms of these officers were set for two, four and six years, it follows that they always begin and expire on March 4.

The period between election and inauguration was made as great as it is because of the time required for communication and travel in those days between such distant states as New Hampshire and Georgia and the capital.

Littleton Ghost Story

Ghost-story lovers may be interested by an incident of which the details are claimed to be perfectly authentic. On the night of November 25, 1779 the second Lord Lyttleton dreamed that a bird flew into his room, changed to a woman, and bade him prepare for death within three days.

He told the dream to his family at breakfast next morning, but made light of it, being to all appearances in excellent health.

He joked about it again just before going to bed, a few minutes before midnight on the third day.

While he was undressing he suddenly fell dead.—London Times.

Toys Children Favor

A comprehensive survey leads to the conclusion that building blocks are the favorite toy for children up to the age of seven. Drawing and painting materials rank high. With little girls' dolls and housekeeping equipment are favorites. Sand and clay for modeling retain the interest of most children. Mechanical toys, on the other hand, are soon discarded. Adults usually enjoy the mechanical toys more than the children for whom they are purchased.

John McFaul & Son

Half a Century on the Great Lakes

Since 1883 when the late Henry Beatty, father of E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway brought from Scotland three vessels equipped with sail and steam as was the regulation at that time, for service on the Great Lakes, thousands of travellers have enjoyed this delightful inland voyage from Owen Sound and more recently from Port McNicoll through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie to Fort William and Port Arthur.

It is a fitting tribute to the service maintained by the Canadian Pacific that for fifty years this particular mode of summer travel is still considered a necessary part of one's Canadian travel itinerary as evidenced by the large passenger lists on the S. S. Keewatin and Assiniboia leaving twice weekly from Port McNicoll and on the S. S. Manitoba from Owen Sound weekly. The two former vessels have been in continuous service since 1908 and provide commodious quarters and an excellent table for those seeking quiet relaxation fresh lake breezes and pleasant travel companions. Both the Keewatin and the Assiniboia, 4,000 ton steamers, have had but three captains among whom Captain McCallum on the Assiniboia is considered one of the best-known authorities on Great Lakes shipping. Until a few months ago there had been but three managers the late Henry Beatty, the late Arthur Piers, father of A. S. Piers, manager of the Real Estate Department of the Canadian Pacific and M. McDuff, now assistant to the chairman, Canadian Pacific Steamships. Alvin Gallagher is now superintendent.

Since the S. S. Algoma went ashore on Isle Royale in 1885, no vessel employed in this service has been lost. The S. S. Manitoba also carrying freight from Owen Sound, was built in the Polson Iron Works in that city, the remaining ships in Scottish yards.

Highways, Labor, Agriculture Discussed by Quebec Ministers Visiting Argenteuil

and that had been to hold expenditure within the revenue, but revenues in the last two years had dropped sharply and the Government had been obliged to adopt a middle course between expenditure beyond revenue and a course of curtailing necessary services. History would pay tribute to Mr. Taschereau and even now the part which he had played since 1920 when he became Premier was being realized. One of the biggest problems had been reducing unemployment; the province had spent for relief works and direct relief more than $15,000,000 since 1930 and the end was not in sight though there were signs of better days.

"On the one hand we are reproached for not spending enough for roads and on the other hand an agricultural paper tells us we are spending too much for roads," said Mr. Perrault. "In answer to one criticism, let me repeat that the revenues have dropped and we do not want to impose more taxes, so we had to suspend some projects. As to the agricultural criticism that the budget for agriculture had been cut and millions are spent for roads, let me admit the agricultural budget has been cut, but so has roads expenditure, but we cannot go too far in that direction and be the only province not going ahead. Furthermore, most of the benefit of money spent on roads has been to the farmer. We have put roads close to his church, his butter factory, the railway station and have increased the value of his farm. We hear often that Ontario has wider roads than we have and more permanent roads. That is true. The reason is the law in Ontario provides for 66 foot wide roads whereas in Quebec the roads were originally narrow and our people like to build close to the road. Furthermore Ontario has spent $200,000,000 more than we have. By the time we have reached that point our roads will be as wide as those in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Perrault pointed out also that Quebec has taken over the entire cost of main road maintenance. He spoke of the various benefits which the roads had brought to the province and especially of the fact that the roads had created an entirely new industry, that of tourism. Even in as bad a year as 1932 tourists had spent as much as $45,000,000 in the province. This new industry had been created by the Roads Department by means of advertising in the other provinces and in the United States and the intention of the Government was to continue this advertising campaign.

Further said Mr. Perrault, the Government has despite all difficulties maintained the hospital and other charitable institutions and education and the efforts to settle people on the land had not relented and certainly one of the best means of alleviating the present situation was to return to the land.

The Government sold good land at 30 cents an acre, built roads, school houses and gave bonuses for clearing the land. Surely, said the minister, the young men of today were not inferior to those of an older generation. When the part of the province where he lived was opened up there were no government grants and the colonists of those days had to get along as best they could without government aid.

In 12 years the government had placed 10,547 families on the land representing a population of more than 50,000.

Since Mr. Taschereau had been in office $20,000,000 had been spent in colonization.

Farmer Better Off

Hon. R. F. Stockwell, Provincial Treasurer, agreed the farmer even with low prices was going through the depression better than the city man since he was better able to look after his physical needs. Still there were cities in the province and industry created problems and the province was fortunate in having ing as Minister of Labor such a fair-minded and able man as Hon. J. C. Arcand. Mr. Stockwell said he did not agree that we are passing through a situation that has to be faced. In the United States an attempt was being made to face the new problem but Hon. Mr. Arcand had started before President Roosevelt, with the measure of last session to limit the hours of labor in certain industries.

The Treasurer explained the workings of the Moratorium Act passed last session. Some people had wanted to have a general moratorium but that would have meant throwing many creditors into the street. Many people had practiced thrift and put their money into a mortgage so as to be able to live in their old age and should be treated fairly even while the Government tried to help the debtor class. Mr. Stockwell said he believed the law was working out well.

Hon. Mr. Stockwell also had words of praise for Hon. Adolard Godbout, Minister of Agriculture, saying he possessed a happy combination of qualities fitting him for his task. An effort had been made to protect the farmers in the matter of being paid for the milk they deliver to the creameries and distributors. This was a law which should be well received by the farmers and corrected an evil which had caused much harm.

Secret of Face Powder

Known to Greek Ladies

For many years archaeologists have been searching for "psymthion." They have uncovered the ruins of ancient cities, and excavated tombs full of gold and other treasures, all in vain. No where did they find so much of a thimbleful of "psymthion."

Aristophanes, Pliny and other writers referred to this substance, and from their writings it appeared that it must be some kind of cosmetic. And this plainly appeared from an old Hellenic poem warning the reader "never" by the use of psymthion can you make a Helen out of a Heecuba." But this merely excited the curiosity of the archaeologists and caused them to dig deeper into the earth, and at last they found what they were looking for.

Prof. T. Leslie Shear of Princeton university, while excavating the tomb of a Corinthian lady, found a terracotta box containing "psymthion," which the lady, before she entered the tomb, used in powdering her face. Analysis showed that it was a carbonate of lead manufactured along the same lines as white face powder that modern ladies use.

This shows that the ladies of ancient Corinth did not have shiny noses, and indicates they were just as skillful in makeup as those of the present generation. Helens use "psymthion" as freely as the Heecubas.

—Keen contest is expected in a Box Lacrosse game scheduled for tonight in the Lachute Skating Rink, when the local team will play against Oka.
