R. L. CALDER, K. C. ADDRESSES KIWANIS

In his address entitled "Wots Taxes", to the Kiwanis in Montreal, R. L. Calder protested against commissions formed by governments in Canada, at such a heavy expense to the country. He said:—

"You can run the governments without the cost of these commissions, which are formed on the slightest pretext, they are formed only to provide the governments with an excuse for not doing something about a certain matter, or, on the other hand, for doing something excessive; because commissions are not responsible to the people, and the governments are."

He also expressed the opinion that such bodies should be done away with because, being amendable to no courts, their existence was not in consonance with the interests of British democracy. Moreover, he believed, both Federal and Provincial Governments should be stripped "to their fighting essentials", to ease the present heavy burden of taxation.

He referred in particular to the Federal Government's engagement in the railway business, whereby, he claimed, it had committed a double economic crime, by getting public money to ruin a competitor that had had the foresight to establish a wonderful business. In the wheat business too, he claimed, the Government had taken a long chance, with odds of 100 to one against winning in such an enterprise.

Officialdom, he declared, absorbed too large a proportion of the State revenues, and centralization of activities in the State through commissions and in other ways resulted in high-level taxes.

What was needed in his opinion, was "to back the governments into their own proper stalls and leave individuals free for the pursuit of happiness." National defence, administration of justice, protection of coast line and inland waters, building and upkeep of roads, maintenance of communications, education, public health and care of the poor, should be their chief concerns, he added.

GIBSON - THOMPSON MARRIAGE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson, Lachute, was the scene of a quiet wedding on Saturday, July 28, when their elder daughter Edna Elizabeth was united in marriage to Mr. Miller Kelton Gibson, of Rupert, Que., youngest son of the late Wm. and Mrs. Gibson, of Ottawa, the Rev. R. Booy, of St. Andrews East officiating. The house was effectively decorated with summer flowers.

Mr. Hopkinson, of Ottawa, played the wedding march on the violin and was accompanied by Mrs. Hopkinson, sister of the groom, at the piano.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was unattended, and wore a gown of white organza made on long lines with taffeta trim, a wreath of orange blossoms and white accessories. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas intermingled with baby's breath and maiden hair fern.

After the ceremony, supper was served. Later Mr. and Mrs. Gibson left for a short trip, the bride travelling in a swaggar suit of mauve flannel with white accessories. Upon their return they will take up residence at Rupert, Que.

Large noses are a notable characteristic of inhabitants of Australia. This is attributed to the hot dry climate. Men breathe faster and deeper there, hence their noses develop.

LACHUTE TOWN TRAFFIC REGULATIONS

Now that traffic is becoming unusually heavy in town it necessitates every one who drives a car to recognize the rules of the road and thus avoid needless risk of danger. The town constable has been given implicit instructions to see that the parking by-law is properly respected and if one gets a ticket handed them for infringement, don't grumble, but just profit by the experience and recognize the officer is only doing his duty. Watch these DONT'S.

Don't park in front of a hydrant.

Don't pass a stop sign.

Don't park on wrong side of street.

Don't park in front of lanes and side-streets.

Don't fail to stop before crossing railway tracks.

ACTIVITIES OF COUNTY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Chatham Branch were entertained by a very interesting report of the annual convention at Macdonald College given by Mrs. Fletcher. Ten members attended this meeting and answered the roll call with the names of Noted Women.

Frontier Branch had interesting meeting, Miss A. Davidson of Kingston, favoring with an address on her Social Service Work at the Y.W.C.A. and Mrs. L. M. Gaston giving an interesting account of the annual convention. A discussion also took place on the coming debate. Sixteen members and twelve visitors attended this meeting and enjoyed the solo kindly rendered by Mrs. L. Maw, of Montreal.

Lachute had seven members in attendance to listen to a most interesting report of the Provincial Convention given by Mrs. F. S. McGibbon, being the holiday week-end no doubt accounted for such small attendance. The roll call was replied to by the name of Notable Canadian Women and why they were notable.

Lakefield had an attendance of ten members and three visitors. Their roll call was Favorite Soap and why. Their subject "Canadianization and National Events with an interesting paper by Mrs. Kuhring, who also reported on the Provincial Board Meeting of Annual Convention and the picnic at Ottawa Experimental Farm, bringing useful suggestions learned from demonstrations given at that event on caring for cream, dressing of poultry, sterilizing milk-utensils and cooking. Mrs. Kuhring also reported on the Librarians Convention recently held in Montreal. Mrs. Shear Smith gave an interesting account of the Provincial Convention meetings for delegates.

FOREST FIRES NEARBY

For over a week, forest fires have been blazing fiercely in the districts of St. Canut and Rigaud. Many square miles of forest timber have been totally ruined, which demonstrates how careful people should be when out picnicking nearby wooded regions.

Scores of men in both districts aided with chemical extinguishers, have been fighting the flames, and the recent heavy rain storms have greatly helped in controlling the fires.

Argenteuil L.O.L. Lodges Unite

One of the best attended and most enthusiastic gatherings in a decade took place in L.O.L., No. 2231 at Lachute, P. Q., on Saturday, July 28th.

Argenteuil Lodge, with the co-operation of County Master S. Holt, worked earnestly to make this meeting a huge success and their efforts were abundantly rewarded with a large attendance, which included a delegation of twenty-four, representative of Montreal County and a degree team under the direction of that grand old stalwart member of the Order, Rt. W. Bro. W. H. Higgins.

The Orange degree was beautifully exemplified by this truly remarkable efficient team from Lorne Lodge No. 1373 who have been holders for the past two years of the cup put up for competition by the County of Montreal and are a real credit to the organization as well as a source of inspiration to all Lodges who are privileged to entertain them. In fact there are many Lodges in this County, if not all, that could very well borrow a leaf from the Lorne Lodge Team's book with beneficial results in the way of properly conducted degree work.

However, even if Argenteuil Lodges are somewhat lacking in ritualistic qualities they certainly excel in dispensing hospitality to their guests; for after the business session was concluded a happy and contented crowd sat down to enjoy refreshments abundantly supplied.

It was originally planned to include Rt. W. Bro. Rev. W. J. H. Lummis, Provincial Grand Master of Quebec among the guest speakers, but unfortunately he was unable to return in time from the Grand Lodge meeting in Halifax. He was ably represented by Rt. W. Bro. E. E. Irwin, Provincial Deputy Grand Master who addressed the members on the importance of leadership in Primary Lodges.

The remarks of Rt. W. Bro. Irwin were further amplified by Rt. W. Bro. R. H. Shaver, Chaplain of the Young Britons Association, who touched upon the value of juvenile work in the preparation of future members for the parent body. The urge to enter whole heartedly

Twenty Years Ago

- On August the fourth, England kept her word, and fought for the liberty of little Belgium.
- The young lions, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa et cetera, realized their obligation, and came to the help of their Mother Land.
- The experienced "old timers" were shocked . . . youth jumped enthusiastically into the fray . . . minors thrilled at the sound of the drum.
- Thirty odd nations were involved in the Greatest of Wars.
- It was to last weeks . . . but months and years passed. Millions died, millions suffered and are suffering.
- And all for what? . . . we are still wondering.
- There are rumblings of guns again. Let aged and youth pause and think of twenty years ago.

FATAL EXPLOSION AT BROWNSBURG

A sad fatality occurred at the C.I.L. plant in Brownsburg, on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 1st., when Miss Corinne St. Onge, aged 19, of Sturgeon Falls was instantly killed by an explosion in the Electric Blasting Cap Department. An inquest was held, over which coroner Dr. J. H. Mason presided and a verdict of "Accidental Death", no blame being attached to either employee or company was brought in by the jury.

The remains were removed to Sturgeon Falls for interment.

ANNUAL PICNIC OF GRENVILLE PARISH

The combined Sunday School Picnic of Grenville Parish was held in Mr. James Stewart's grove last Saturday, with an attendance of about 150. The day was suitable and the children—not to speak of the their elders—had a very enjoyable time. The swimming pool proved a great fascination, while young and old enjoyed the grateful shade and the calm beauty of the place. Softball was indulged in but sparingly on account of the heat. The swings, however, were in great demand. The ice-cream disappeared like magic and a hurry-up was issued for soft drinks. As the coolness of evening drew on the races were held, some of the events providing a great deal of amusement. The thanks of everyone are due to Mr. Stewart for the use of his place, and for the interest he took in having it ready, also to Mrs. Stewart for making the tea, and to Messrs. Bridgen and Arnold for the use of their trucks. The adults on the grounds all took their part in the arrangements and it was due to the willing and able co-operation of all that the children and young people had such a good time.

The results of the races were as follows (1st. and 2nd. in each case): Under 8, Stanley Brazeau and Dolly Gauley.

8 to 10—Roland Matthew, C. Murray.

Sack Race (senior)—Katie Rainey, Edmund Keatley.

Needle Race (girls)—Edith Cousins, Violet Cousins.

Young Men—Roland Beauchamp, Hugh Lloyd.

Two "three legged" races were run, but the reporter is a little confused as to the results. Miss Irene Whinfield distributed the prizes.

ARGENTEUIL HISTORICAL SOCIETY FORMED

On Saturday, July 28th., 1934, a meeting was held in the Consolidated School House, St. Andrews East, Que., to discuss the formation of an Historical Society in the County of Argenteuil. Fifteen were present. Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring as convener of the Committee occupied the chair.

The meeting opened with a brief discussion about methods of organization.

Mr. Archibald Kains, of Ottawa, advised beginning in a small way, and expanding slowly, drawing the membership from those keenly interested in the work and ideals of the Society.

It was moved, seconded and carried unanimously that an Historical Society be organized for the County. A tentative constitution consisting of eight articles were drawn up, to be submitted to a Public meeting to be held in the Town Hall, St. Andrews, on Saturday afternoon, August 11th., at 3.30 P.M. Before adjourning, a cordial vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Kuhring, for the time and thought she had expended on preparatory work.

AUNT JEAN'S RIDDLE
No. 8.

Deaf Deacon Jones is very cross Something's annoying him.
When he goes out to walk each night,

Along the pathway dim,
He says he hears some saucy chap

Making a great ado,
And shouting after him jut this,
Who-Who-Who-Who are you?
"I'm Deacon Jones, you saucy lad."

The Deacon replies quite sure,
"I've told you so quite often
now,

Don't ask me any more."

CHRISTOPHER THOMAS

I just wonder how many of my young readers guessed what my story would be about this time. If I had given them the title of it I do not suppose it would have been any help to them, so I will tell you; it is about a queer little kitten which Auntie Bell sent by express to Jean and Joan.

It had no tail, but their dad said that it had hair enough on its body to make a couple of tails. It was a Persian kitten, a grey one with fine dark markings. There was something about it though that the twins did not care for. They were not just sure at first what it was until Joan discovered that it had a tufted beard on each side of its face.

"There's the trouble, Jean,"
she said "its that tufted beard.
It makes it look like a lynx."

"Perhaps its a baby lynx instead of a real kitten" Jean said, dropping the kitten quickly to the floor.

"Don't be silly, Jean, her sister said "Auntie Bell would not send us baby lynx and say it was a kitten, I am sure."

"I suppose not," Jean said
"but still it is some kind of a beard of a cat I know."

"Of course it is, Jean, there is not one like it in this neighborhood, so we must give it a special name. What shall it be?"

"How would "Princess" do?"
ventured Jean.

"Princess" for a cat with a beard! Jean I am surprised at you. Joan started laughing and laughed so loudly that big brother Tom who was always teasing, peeped in at the door to see what the fun was about. Catching sight of the kitten on the floor he stood staring at it for a moment, whistled in surprise
"Christopher Thomas!" he said
"what a queer looking cat."

Joan looked quickly at Jean her eyes sparkling in excitement. "That's who he is" she whispered as soon as Tom had turned his back.

"Who, who is?" Jean asked.
"The kitten," Joan said, "we'll call him Christopher Thomas."
"That sounds silly to me," Jean objected "it's much too long."

"But he's a special, Jean, you know" a common name would not suit him at all. Let's ask Uncle Rob what he thinks about it. I see him just outside.

Snatching up the kitten Joan ran outside followed by Jean.
Uncle Rob, Uncle Rob", she called "Don't you think that Christopher Thomas would be a splendid name for this funny looking kitten?"

"I do indeed," Uncle Rob said with a chuckle and a sly look at Tom who was standing close by.
"Christopher Thomas" was Tom's pet expression. Jean says that name is too long

Uncle Rob, do you think it is?"
"It's just splendid Joanie, I think; Kit is short for Christopher, so when you get in a hurry you can just say "Kit, Kit, Kit", and he'll come to you.

Stopping long enough to give her Uncle Rob a real bear hug, Joan dashed off to tell mother that the kitten had been named.

Sister Beth laughed when she heard the name. I would expect a kitten with a name like that to do all sorts of foolish things," she said "You will see now if your Christopher Thomas does not do some very queer things."

At first he just acted like any other kitten, ran after strings which the twins trailed along the floor in front of him playing with his little ball which he would roll across the floor then scamper after it, but as he got bigger he began to be real mischievous and upset their mother's work basket every time he found it within his reach. He just loved to play with the thread and balls of yarn which he found in it.

"Dear me!" Beth said one day coming in and finding the contents of the basket scattered all over the floor, "Dear me!" that pesky cat keeps this floor so mused up with thread and yarn that one can scarcely tell it from a spider's web. I am going to warn the twins that if I find things upset like this any more. They will keep their Christopher Thomas outside, or tidy up after him."

Thus warned, the twins kept him out of the sitting room for some time, but one day he crept in unknown to them and had a wonderful frolic all by himself.
Their mother had been knitting a sock for Uncle Rob's birthday gift. Not satisfied with pulling it out of the work basket and hauling it around the floor until the knitting needles were scattered in all directions and the yarn in a dreadful tangle he tried to crawl into it and got stuck. Terribly frightened he tried to run away but just succeeded in hopping about like little folk do in a three-legged race.

Their mother and Beth heard this queer noise and ran to the sitting room to see if old Grannie Moffat who had a wooden leg and who had a room rented from them was in trouble of some sort. Beth had the broom in her hand. Christopher Thomas could just see enough with one eye to see that broom and knew from past experience that a broom in Beth's hand when he was in mischief usually meant a beating. Dashing wildly towards Old Grannie Moffat's door which stood open slightly he tried to go in, the sock caught on a nail and Christopher Thomas pulled himself free. Being all excited Christopher Thomas first ran up the window curtain frightening Grannie Moffat terribly, dropping again with a thump to the floor he seized her stocking as she was about to put it on and darted under the bed with it.

Having a wooden leg, Grannie Moffat could not hurry after him so had to call to Beth to come and rescue her stocking.
As Beth still with the broom in her hand came into the room, Christopher Thomas darted out and ran upstairs, right into the room where the twins were sitting looking at a picture book. Darting across the floor Christopher Thomas caught up Joan's little woolly bedroom slipper and trailed it downstairs as fast as he could, the little slipper making funny little tap, tapping noises on the polished steps as he ran. Joan and Jean raced after him laughing quite heartily. "Christopher Thomas!" Joan called after him "you are the craziest cat I have ever seen in all my life. Give me that slipper at once sir!"

Christopher Thomas raced across the floor to Beth and dropped the slipper at her feet. Looked up into her face and said
"Me-ou quite loudly as though he were trying to say "I have brought you a present now don't beat me please."

"You silly cat," Beth said
"take that slipper back to Joan, then get out. I always said that a cat with a name like that might be expected to do queer things and I was right."

Next week "Who Laughs Last" will be the title of our story.

Lovingly,

Aunt Jean.

Convention at Devil's Gap

In the absence of our genial Dominion Secretary through indisposition his son Mr. R. S.
Kennedy acted as secretary and expressed the desire of his father and himself in co-operating with and assisting the members in every way possible, inviting them to write for advice to publishers of books, music, etc. A telegram of sympathy was sent Mr. H. A. Kennedy from the convention, as well as a great number of personal letters expressing their affection and regret at his absence.

In a discussion of magazine stories Mr. Bromwell of the National Magazine expressed his opinion that, we authors could not edit a magazine that the public would care to read. Mr.
Bromwell on being pressed by Mr. R. S. Kennedy, for the five principal points which he considered a good story should consist of, failed to give them, and was evidently floored as it were by the request, but stuck stub-

Mr. and Mrs. Dalton of Vancouver, gave excellent addresses on "Poetry and the radio."
Mrs. Dalton although afflicted with deafness since her seventh birthday is giving proof that will power can overcome even such obstacles in life, as according to an article noticed last year in one of our newspapers Mrs. Dalton may yet be known as Canada's leading lady poet.

Travelling by Canadian Pacific railway all of the way to this earthly paradise, one was much impressed by the kindness and geniality of the conductors, porters and all connected with the service; also with the friendliness of the manager of the Chalet Bungalow Camp, who even took notice that his guests looked tired, after a strenuous day.

Another thought came to us while comfortably travelling westward, in connection with the railway itself. It was this—what months and even years of hard labor it took to construct this line through bush, brush, huge rocks, around cliffs, crags and across marshes and lakes.

A constant panorama of ever-changing beauty unfolded before us as we rode along so that we were impatient when night-fall came because of the view we were missing; tiny farms, just beginnings of what were as yet only hopes for the future to their owners, children waving small hands to whoever might be watching from the passing train, mothers too, whose only excitement for the day would possibly be the passage of the train, mirages of sky and cloud that seemed to touch the earth itself, summer camps by the lakeshore, white tents nestling among the trees on a hill side overlooking the water, a huge lake boat being loaded with coal at Jackfish, the busy little coaling cars similar to construction dump carts running quickly back and forth on their specially made tracks, cattle in the farming districts clustered under trees, nothing offensive to the eye, but much to charm.

The excitement also of finding people on the same train who knew your own friends, in some cases going to visit them, also of finding people from home in the towns one stopped off at on the return trip, people who had been a long time gone yet retained tender memories of the old home town and those of their old associates who were left and of whom we were able to give them the latest news.

Friends from Minnadosa,
Winnipeg, Fort William, Port Arthur and Toronto were all so eager to do one honor and to hear of friends back east. In some cases we noted that the Watchman was a welcome

weekly visitor and the readers not only greatly interested in it themselves, but people in the neighborhood who had never been east also were delighted to have it passed on to them.

liam, the elk, red deer, buffalo,

Many people who feel sour, sluggish and generally wretched make the mistake of taking salts, oil, mineral water, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage which only moves the bowels and ignores the liver.

What you need is to wake up your liver. Start your liver pouring the daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. Get your stomach and intestines working as they should, once more.

Carter's Little Liver Pills will soon fix you up. Purely vegetable. Safe. Sure. Quick. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes.

FOR BETTER PICTURES

The recent attacks by the religious bodies upon the motion picture producers for a more wholesome entertainment and an elevated standard is a move that will assuredly grow in popularity and the Hollywood film promoters will find it necessary to clean house and eliminate much of the sordid atmosphere that has gained all too much prominence. Such pictures as The Covered Wagon, Cavalade, Little Women, Disraeli, The House of Rothschild, Sorrell and Son, The Sign of the Cross have appealed to the picture going public, and theatre managers can vouch for the popularity of pictures of this calibre.

It is to be hoped that the producers will meet the objections with a type of picture that will increase the moral and artistic prestige of the cinema art.

DEPRESSION?

We read in a contemporary newspaper, that $90,000 is added to Montreal City Hall cost. But that is just a poor man's pocket money compared with the total cost of the extension.

Quietly and smoothly it is estimated at $300,000.

Work has been promoted for the unemployed, which has been a blessing.

But when the interior of a civic building is expensively decorated with fairy grotto work, marble floors and counters, French ebony and walnut, to say nothing of the $300 desks, we suggest that someone has erred and strayed like lost sheep.

Marble floors are lovely . . . for King Solomon's Temple, but paid officials of a city, can slide just as gracefully along good Canadian hardwood floors, especially when taxpayers have to pay the bills.

The $90,000 extra would have gone a long way to relieve the necessities of the poor. But beautiful furniture and trimmings seem to be the first consideration.

Is there a depression in Montreal? . . . Evidently not!

HISTORIES TOO TAME

A Canadian History which has some ginger and pep is wanted. Many of the history text books are too dry and tame is the opinion of the Rt. Hon. George P. Graham, as expressed in an address before the Association of Canadian Clubs.

It may be that the Rt. Hon. gentleman agrees with the statement of George Bernard Shaw and feels that text-books should not be read, or if they are, that the reader should forget them as soon as possible, at any rate, Mr. Graham tells of his own successful method of teaching history when he taught school some years ago. He had the text-books locked up and taught his class with blackboard and story—and they led the County.

FATAL MISHAPS REACH PEAK AT "RUSH HOUR"

Between 5 and 6 p.m. is the fatal hour for British road accidents, it has been shown in London by a recent analysis of accidents released by the Ministry of Transport. The department has been much concerned with the increasing loss of life.

Fatal accidents rise to a small peak between 7 and 9 a.m., drop during the morning, rise again between 12 and 1 p.m., drop in the afternoon and reach their highest point in the evening "rush hour."

This is only for working days. On Saturdays, Sundays and holidays most fatal accidents occur between 10 and 11 p.m.

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 1.—Man is struggling manfully with the wheat situation, and a solemn international conference about it meets at London on the 15th of this month, but Dame Nature has taken a hand recently pretty well all over the world, and she, I fancy, did more toward wiping out the 'surplus' in one crop season than all the legislators have done in the past five years. Indeed, it seems quite possible now that between man and nature the restriction of production may be quickly overcome, and the pendulum may swing from abundance to scarcity all in a couple of years.

The Canadian government is still a staunch believer in an international wheat agreement, and in spite of the growing conviction in western Canada that no such restriction is now needed, Canada's delegates will go to London prepared to sit down with large importing and exporting nations and try to work out shipments for the next twelve months. The government will take the view that an agreement is just as desirable as ever, and that the reduction in crops the world over has made it simpler to come to a satisfactory arrangement.

Argentina to be Forgiven?

The wheat agreement arrived at a year ago did not work out in a very satisfactory manner, it must be admitted, chiefly because the Argentine, which found itself with a much larger crop on hand than it had anticipated, and no elevators in which to store it, deemed it necessary to go on shipping wheat long after its assigned quota had been reached. Canada, the United States and Australia meanwhile kept within their quotas, the United States very much so. Canada had been given 200 million bushels as a quota: she actually shipped about 195 millions.

The United States crop this year is not only the smallest for more than 30 years. It is only about 55% of the average in the previous five years and there is no doubt that our neighbor will have to dip into the bins to the tune of at least 150 million bushels merely to supply her own needs. While the United States could still, at a pinch, export a little from her carryover, that would reduce her stocks to a perilously low figure a year from now, and the general impression is that no exports from the United States are to be expected. Nor will Russia have any to sell abroad, if she feeds her own people. The Balkans are out of the picture. Australia has a smaller crop. What does that leave? It leaves Canada and the Argentine, with Australia, supplying practically all the import requirements of the world for the next twelve months. Not that the imports will be tremendously heavy. France still has a large carry-over. But England, the Netherlands, Belgium, Switzerland, and several other European countries will have to buy wheat somewhere.

Unemployment Relief

There will be some plain talking done at Ottawa before the end of this week. The provinces are alarmed at the threat of the federal government to turn over all unemployment relief costs to them and the municipalities. The plain fact is, that neither the provinces nor the municipalities can carry the burden alone, and even with much federal help the strain has been almost more than many sections of the country can bear. The Bennett government came into power on the cry that unemployment was a national problem and must be dealt with as such, and the provinces won't let them forget it.

And while it is a vast sum which the federal government has spent on unemployment in the past four years—103 millions, plus large loans—it is less by 30 millions than Canada spent on the Welland Canal. It does not begin to touch the expense Canada went to help 'win the war' in Europe. At least two billion dollars was added to the national debt in the four years 1914-1918 (with the aftermath) and if we get through the depression by spending only one-tenth of that sum from the federal treasury, we should, perhaps, consider ourselves fortunate. Whatever the Ottawa government does, it cannot allow people to starve or go naked. I think you will find that a year from now, in spite of its warning about a 'cut off' that the federal government will still be paying out the millions toward the welfare of the unemployed.

EFFECTIVE SAVING

When Fort Worth, Texas, passed an order to switch off the city lights on moonlit nights, the Texas Electric Service Company promptly came forward with an offer of reduced rates. The city has option to accept 1,800,000 more kilowatts of power for $3,000.

into the work of the Order was a point stressed by Bro. Shaver who delivered an inspiring message. Other speakers included Rt. W. Bro. R. H. Butler and L. Janes both of whom injected a feeling of optimism based upon contact with the work being accomplished at the present time.

Something unique in the annals of Orangism was evidenced in the presence of four members from the newly instituted Henry Benoit Memorial Lodge of Montreal, the only French Orange Lodge in the world. The members of this particular Lodge are fired with enthusiasm and aspire to become a beneficial factor in the moulding of the two great races in this Dominion together. We shall not break faith with them in their aspirations.

A united Canada is the aim of the Loyal Orange Association and with the forward movement now in evidence everywhere we hope to do our share towards the accomplishment of this purpose which alone can make Canada truly great in the eyes of the world. The importance of such occasions as the one under review cannot be over emphasized and Argenteuil County looks forward with interest to similar gatherings anticipated in the near future. Let us keep up the good work started.

well as the C. G. I. T. and Boy Scouts of St. Andrews East.

Jerusalem-Bethany had thirteen members and one visitor to hear a wonderful account of the Annual Convention which was given by Mrs. D. J. Rodger, also interesting current events given by Mrs. Strong. Their roll call was on "Interesting Facts of the Times". They planned a community picnic and sent a basket of fruit to a sick friend of that district.

Morin Heights meeting took the form of a picnic which was held at the country residence of Mrs. J. E. Seale, at Lake Ann. Fifteen attended and answered the roll call by naming a Canadian Magazine. A letter of greeting and good wishes for a very pleasant holiday, signed by each member was sent to Mrs.

J. D. Davis in England, also another letter of greeting signed by each member was sent a sick member in the hospital.

By these kind acts the Morin Heights members show quite clearly that they really understand and carry out the message contained in our creed. All our members are striving to do that but there is something especially appealing about those little signed love-messages that mean so much yet cost so little—at least that is the personal opinion of your publicity convener.

It is with regret that we record the sudden death of the late Chas. Mountain on Monday morning. The deceased had been in poor health for the past year yet his sudden death came as a shock to all.

The deceased was in his sixty-first year and previous to the past year had led a very useful and active life, he having been a Church Warden, School Commissioner and Councillor at different times.

He leaves to mourn his loss, a devoted wife, formerly Sarah Beaton and five children, Margaret, Edres, Eunice, John and Clifford all at home. One brother Arthur also at home and Thos. of New Liskeard, Ont.

The funeral service held on Wednesday morning was conducted by the Masonic Brethren at the house at 10 a.m., thence the body was removed to the Church of the Redeemer, where the Rev. G. W. Phillips conducted the service. Interment was made at Arundel.

The sympathy of this community is extended to the sorrowing family in their great loss.

The passing of Marie Dressler, removes one of the movie stars who had gained great popularity because of her contribution to filmdom and to the happiness of the world. The attractions of her individuality were such that she had not to depend upon youth or physical beauty. Because of her happy good humor and generosity there were many who counted her as a friend.

THE UNPLEASANT VOICE

One of my friends has a daughter who has developed a very unpleasant voice. It is loud and shrill and just plain unpleasant. The mother has tried scolding and bribing and punishing and everything she can think of but the voice gets steadily more jarring. This very wise mother has arranged for her daughter to take voice culture lessons. She chose a teacher with a very pleasant speaking voice herself and one who has her class present a number of plays each year. Every child, or should I say every girl? loves to act and the mother feels that taking part in these plays may help the girl to improve her voice. It sounds like a good idea. Voices are so important and they are a neglected step-child because no attention is paid to them. A pleasing modulation should be a part of a child's school training but it seldom is. A teacher can do a great deal by precept and if he or she does not possess a pleasing speaking voice, should make every effort to acquire one. When I hear some teacher's voices I feel sorry for the children who have to listen to them. I have heard children's voices change when under the influence of a teacher with a pleasing voice and unfortunately the contrary is true too. This is more apt to happen with the smaller children and great care should be taken with the voices of the teachers in the lower grades. Care should be taken but how often is it?

ISN'T IT THE TRUTH

I heard a man who has a restaurant talking about the difficulty of pleasing everybody. He said it was impossible as one person would think a food cooked to perfection and the next person would think it all wrong. Isn't it the truth? Look at the difficulty any woman has in pleasing one family let alone a multitude of people with different tastes. We cannot expect everyone, even members of the same family, to like the same foods but oh dear me! it is a tiring proposition trying to plan three meals a day that everyone will like.

BETTER HEALTH IN SUMMER

There is no question about it but people have better health in summer than in winter. Many people dread the winter not because of the cold but because of the bad health of their families. Why should we have better health in summer? The answer is not hard to find. We get more sun, more fresh air, more relaxation, and we eat more fruits and vegetables. When we plan our Fall and Winter method of living, or to tell the truth most of us do not plan our lives, if we would remember why we have good health in summer and act accordingly, we might feel better.

CORRESPONDENCE

Rev. John Fraser of Cushing A Biography

In my making mention in my last letter I forstalled myself a little but now I may as well finish up about the tramp friends that frequented St. Mungo's Manse on their annual and semi-annual rounds with regularity. No less a character was old Baptiste Paquette who for many years had been on the staff of the Quebec Chronicle. Baptiste claimed to have lost his money in some wild cat speculation and it had evidently gone to his brain for he could not he claimed settle himself to anything but the road and many many miles he tramped, making as I said before his semi-annual visit at St. Mungo's Manse for the night, this went on for quite a number of years before Baptiste learned that his host was from Quebec and the son of Alexander Fraser, the Grocer at the foot of Palace Hill, then his delight knew no bounds and he claimed to have set the type for the Quebec Chronicle that announced that James Fraser had passed through Morrin College and become a full fledged minister, after that his visits if it were possible were more regular than ever and lasted three days, and immediately on his arrival he asked for the boot brush and blackening and brushed his boots for Sunday, then he asked for a clothes brush and brushed his clothes then he was ready for his dinner, sometimes he spent Saturday afternoons wandering by the river occasionally doing a little fishing and he was a pretty lucky fisherman claiming to know something about the proper bait to use for the season at other times he would read the paper and any book he could get hold of French or English it mattered not to him which it was. He always retired early on Saturday evening and rose early on Sunday morning and said his prayers, ate his breakfast and read his bible all day long. On

It will be seen by the following that the taxable property in the municipality of Saint Jerusalem d'Argenteuil, in 1881, when the assessment was made amounted to $368,092. The unassessable $22,180. The assessment made this year is $406,788, untaxable $22,455. The increase in valuation of property within the three years being $32,684, but the Council having made considerable alterations in this year's valuation would make it considerably less.

The Band of the 11th Battalion on Wednesday assembled in the beautiful grove of Mr. Thomas Barron and discoursed sweet music to the delight of the citizens of Lachute.

Burglars went into a farmer's house, by the name of Steele at Grenville taking gold and bills from the till of their drawers while they were in the field making hay.

The rain of Thursday completely deluged the streets, but we trust it will not prove injurious to the ripening grain.

Monday my uncle never rose early so Baptiste always waited till he had risen, to enquire the latest news he had had from the City of Quebec and that over, he ate his dinner and sat around awhile and then left and strange to say that of all the calls he ever made no one of us ever saw him coming or going. These periodical visits kept up as long as my uncle lived; after he died Baptiste made us one visit and spent the most of that visit crying about the loss of his old friend and left early on Monday and we never saw him again.

Another character that called quite frequently was an old Irish school master, William Barrett who had been heartlessly deprived by educational authorities of his diploma to teach and no other livelihood provided him though he was a classical scholar. His visits were usually mid-day visits and he dined with us, and after dinner my uncle and he spent an hour or two over their Latin Grammar and the old man was very correct at it. One Brunton, a Scotchman was another regular visitor my uncle named him Sam Slick for he thought him a bit of a humbug always wanting to borrow a dollar and often getting it but never by any chance returning it. But of all the tramps that passed up and down and stayed at St. Mungo's Manse one Wm. Goodwin capped the climax he was a semi-annual visitor generally but one evening he arrived as usual to spend the night and took ill in the night. It was Regarding the waterworks question, Councillor McGibbon considered it necessary, before making the proposed by-law to have the secretary write Mr. Prefontaine to produce the title deeds so as to ascertain through the town attorney what rights the company owned.

A disastrous fire broke out in Grenville on Tuesday afternoon and destroyed five business places in the village. D. Williamson, general store; H. Laurin, post office and store; Mrs. Laughlen's grocery store; Miss Kelly, Millinery and La-Victoire's block occupied as jewelry and shoe store. The fire was started by coal-oil explosion in the kitchen of Mr. Williamson.

early in January, the Doctor had to be had for him several times and he had to be waited on till well on into April before he was well enough to continue his journey. There is a good number of others that I could mention that called regularly at St. Mungo's and had their claims allowed as regularly as they called but time and space forbid and I question if my uncle were alive if he would even allow what I have written to be printed for he was not fond of letting his left hand know what right hand did.

NOT QUITE THE SAME

A school teacher was explaining to a class of "tots" the meaning of the word "collision". "A collision," she said, "occurs when two bodies come together unexpectedly. She pointed to one little child. "Now, then, give me an example of a 'collision'."

The child was thoughtful. Presently came the reply in a tiny high-pitched voice: "Please, teacher—twins."

What Kind of Equipment Do Farmers Want Most?

A NATIONAL magazine, in a recent investigation, asked farmers what kind of labor-saving equipment was most urgently wanted by them. The investigation showed the interesting fact that milking machines were second on the list.

This isn't surprising. Few people like to milk. It's hard work that must be done—seven days a week—the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night. It is one job that most dairymen have made up their minds to get away from, and many have already done so by means of De Laval Milkers.

De Laval Milkers are used by the United States Government. They are used by the world's biggest dairies and on the world's best cows. Many thousands of smaller dairymen use them under every conceivable milking condition.

Sooner or later you are going to have one, and the sooner you get one to work in your dairy the better you will be pleased. Why not give us an opportunity to tell you more about the De Laval Milker? You will not be obligated in any way.

De Laval Milkers

There is a De Laval Milker for every need and purse. There are two kinds of De Laval Milkers—the famous "Magnetic," which is the world's best milker, and the well-known "Utility." In both of these types you can find a De Laval Milker to fit your need and purse.

peacocks, bears, old and young seemed to be specially interested in our passing, while the owls of various kinds blinked solemnly as we looked admiring them making us realize that they were wishing that it were just a little darker that they might have the opportunity of getting better acquainted with us. All of this we enjoyed as much as the children who were shooting their chutes and landing with a splash into the water while those of their parents who were not bathing were sitting quietly in the shade, enjoying the cool breezes of Lake Superior as they kept a watch over them, yet found time to note the large freight boats with their loads of grain making their way thru the opening between the Welcome Islands while the Sleeping Giant dozed on, his form outlined clearly against the pearly grey-blue of the sky, which to watchers from a distance seemed to form the shore line of Thunder Bay.

We also had the opportunity to visit, and stand in awe as we watched the torrent of brown foam-filled water dashing over Kakabeka Falls, eighteen miles from Fort William. The name means "Angry Waters". Kakabeka Falls are higher than Niagara, wilder and more ominous and are considered one of the scenic wonders of the mid-continent. Electric power developed from them being at the rate of 35,000 horse power, developed in the Nipigon River. Fort William's water supply comes from Loch Lomond a mountain lake 375 feet above the city level, while Port Arthur a city set upon a hill gets its water supply from Lake Superior. Fort Williams' schools have an enrollment of 5,500 pupils, Collegiate and Technical and Vocational schools have 1,500 pupils. A resident of Fort William adds this "and as many more around the streets not yet in school age. No wonder that there are so many promising future residents in Fort William seeing that hundreds of physicians now prescribe a visit to that place as a cure for hay fever. We almost forgot to tell you that the "Sleeping Giant" is formed by a string of mountains so shaped that at a casual glance the figure of a prostrate man seems revealed. This figure is held in great reverence by the Indians who named it "Nanabijou" (meaning Father of Thunder).

At Port Arthur's Park we saw more gulls than we could count, walking and flying about not the least worried about the swarms of children and grown-ups who spent their afternoons and evenings there. Right on the table next to us a pair of gulls strutted back and forth omitting what sounded to us funny little chuckles just three sounds every time "Ha, ha, ha," then a space if time between then the three little sounds were repeated again. They were not posing for a picture, oh dear, no, just looking for left overs. In a Fort William church we heard an eminent preacher from Kansas make a very sweeping statement. He said that he considered that most of United States best and most prominent men came from Canada originally; one man he seemed to think deserved special mention. He was Douglas Clyde McIntosh, formerly of Breadalbane, Glengarry County, Ontario, and very closely connected with our "Sandy Fraser" of the Farmer's Advocate.

This preacher, the Rev. Mr. Currie, in speaking of the depression, quoted it as the one thing necessary in bringing us nearer to God, particularly through our service to our brothers in difficulty. "That", he said, was the one great God-given purpose, "Service to mankind". For this reason, God had stripped us of gold, jewels, bonds. He stated that "Prayer" and "Worship" were as naught without service to others. That message too seemed to be the keynote of Dr. Gordon's address to the Canadian Authors, only expressed in different words. Such messages brought home to us by eminent speakers, gave us encouragement to go forward and do yet better work in future as well as the vision of beauty that will always be retained in our memory, made a visit to the Canadian Author's Convention well worth while.

Closing Dates for Making Ottawa Exhibition Entries

Big Annual Event in the Capital Opens August 20. Many Attractive Features.

Those from this district who purpose showing at the Ottawa exhibition are advised that no time should be lost in making entries. The exhibition dates are August 20 to 25, inclusive, but entries for many departments must be received this week. The rule will be strictly enforced and entries which are received too late will not be accepted. The entries must be in the exhibition office on the closing date or else bear the post mark showing they were mailed not later than the closing date. Entries for horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, dairy, handicrafts, hobby show and child welfare must be in by August 4. Entries for agriculture, horticulture, women's institute displays, Highland dancing, athletic meet, and dog show will be received until August 11.

The demand for strip tickets for the Ottawa Exhibition is very heavy, it is reported at the C.C.E.A. office. With the opening of the exhibition less than three weeks away, intending visitors are taking advantage of the bargain offered in strip tickets, which may be purchased at 6 for one dollar. This is a saving of 50 cents on a dollar as the admission fee is 25 cents for adults. Strip tickets also are good for admission to the afternoon performance on the grandstand and to the dog show. These tickets may be bought by mail, in branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia, or in a number of business places. The Follies Revue of 1934, a spectacular music and dance revue with Broadway artists, is one of the outstanding features and ranks at the top of outdoor attractions. Pretty girls, lavish costumes and scenery, latest songs and dances and bright comedy will make a show such as one rarely sees outside the big theatres. High class vaudeville, automobile races, horse races, a new midway and the many varied displays in the different buildings will ensure profit and pleasure for old and young.

GOOD FOR GARAGES!

Several motorists reported trouble on the Ste. Agathe-Montreal Highway last week-end.

Nor was the trouble due to over-heated or over worked engines, broken pistons, dirty valves and such like.

Some joker, Jonah or business optimist had lined the highway with large flat-headed tacks, just about O.K. for imbedding into tires.

They did their job!

Fashionable Wedding at Dalesville

Stephens — Campbell

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Campbell, of Dalesville, on the afternoon of Monday, August 6th., when their eldest daughter, Phyllis Catherine, was united in marriage to Charles Lawrence Sydney, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stephens, of London, Ont.; Rev. E. G. Baxter, of Brownsburg, officiated. The ceremony was performed in the garden under an evergreen arch banked with flowers. Miss Rena Cameron of Ottawa, played the wedding march. The soloist was Mr. Gordon Cameron, who sang "O Promise Me" before the ceremony, and "Because" during the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white tulle with lace over taffeta. Her veil, arranged in cap effect, was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of talisman roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Ruth Campbell, sister of the bride, wore a gown of shell pink chiffon with wide blue taffeta sash and pink hat and slippers. She carried a shower bouquet of American beauty roses and sweet peas.

The flower girl, little Miss Betty Campbell, looked charming in an ankle length dress of pale pink organdy with blue taffeta sash and hair band, and carried a basket of sweet peas. Mr. Alex. Edmunson, of Montreal, supported the groom.

The mother of the bride wore a gown of eleanor blue georgette and corsage bouquet of sweet peas. Miss Ethel Stephens, sister of the groom, wore a dress of beige chiffon over flowered taffeta.

After the ceremony a buffet supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephens left on a motor trip to the Gaspé Peninsula, the bride wearing a suit of Alice blue suede cloth with hat to match and gray accessories.

Mrs. John Campbell, grandmother of the bride and the oldest resident of the district, was able to attend.

The out-of-town guests included Miss McGugan of London, Ont.; Mr. J. A. Campbell, of Thurso; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Martin, of Morrisburg; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cameron, Miss Anna Poitras, and Mr. Harold Campbell, of Ottawa; Miss Nercoe, of Montreal; and Miss R. Worrell, of Campbellton, N. B.

BEATON'S PHARMACY BROKEN INTO

In the early hours of Wednesday morning, burglars broke into Beaton's Pharmacy and made a get-away with over $300 worth of goods, including the choice perfumes and toilet articles, new importation of Waterman's Fountain Pens and Pencils, also a large quantity of cigarettes and confectionery. Entry was made in rear of the store by forcing the window and bending the cross bars. Everything was left in good order, the marauders not bothering with anything inexpensive. Running short of gas it is presumed it was the same party who stopped at Anderson's Garage, cut the lock of the gasoline pump and replenished their tank, thus enabling them to decamp without any suspicion.

Though Mr. and Mrs. Beaton have only been resident with us a short time their many friends will sympathize with them in their misfortune, and it is to be hoped that the culprits may be found.

R.C. SCHOOL PROGRESS

The Catholic School Board held their annual meeting on Monday evening and elected Mr. P. Chabot as their new president, succeeding Mr. A. Larocque, who has done much good work during his term.

Last year their bonded indebtedness was approximately $47,000 which has since been reduced to $34,000 and although the bonds are not yet complete it is pleasing to note that they are all sold out, being taken up locally, and interim receipts given by the secretary of the Catholic Board, Mr. Germain Filion.

We understand that thirty years ago the School Board agreed to pay $400 annually for 30 years for construction of the Convent of St. Anastasie. These obligations have been fully met and being out of debt they are now considering construction of another addition of like size to the present structure.

AUTO BUSINESS AHEAD

Evidence in this county that the depression means less to us than elsewhere is found in the fact that this is a record year since 1928 in the motor business.

In conversation with Mr. P. Chabot recently we learn that he has up to the present issued 1966 licenses for cars and trucks, 1100 of which are small pleasure cars, 205 farmer's private cars, 177 trucks, 200 heavy cars, 57 farmer's trucks and other varied types, making up the total. In addition to which 1600 operators licenses have been issued, 350 chauffeurs, 7 dealers and 21 for garages, in addition to 94 transfers and two for our fire trucks, and the year is far from over.

Swallows Rout Crows After Titanic Sky Battle

Unusual scene at Morin Heights

Described as one of the queerest of happenings ever to be witnessed in the Laurentians, a titanic battle between a flock of black crows and a swarm of shrieking swallows took place some four miles west of St. Sauveur des Monts, recently, and the small swallows emerged victorious, driving off their heavier foes with fury.

The swallows — hundreds of them — were near a wooded area beyond the Morin Heights highway, when suddenly, from nearby fields, flew a cawing armada—hundreds of crows. High into the air they soared and then, of a sudden and amid a terrific din, they swooned down upon the swallows.

Feathers flew! There was the beating of wings, the frantic shrieks of the swallows, and the defiant caws of the ebullient attackers. The swallows flew away, crows pursuing them.

But then the smaller birds resorted to strategy. The crows were flying separately, and attacking individually. The swallows marshalled their forces, and then in one solid bloc flew away. The crows attacked them on all sides, but they could not pierce that solid phalanx. Again and again they flew into them, but again and again they were repulsed.

By this time, many an automobilist who had stopped on the highway to watch this eerie battle of the heavens was vigorously honking his horn to cheer the brave swallows on to victory in their desperate fight. To the raucous sound of the automobile horns the crows added intermittent caws—and then flew away in all directions.

The swallows held possession of the small wood on the knoll of a hill.

As far as could be ascertained there were no crows killed, but several swallows were seen toppling earthwards, their wings obviously broken by the crushing body blows dealt by the large crows.

First to sight this aerial Armageddon were Mr. and Mrs. Jean Gagnon and Miss Marguerite Geoffrion, who were motoring nearby; amazed at the scene, they watched the battle from beginning to end.

DELEGATION WILL MAKE PROTEST TO LABOR MINISTERS

At a mass meeting of workers of the sulphite mills of the James MacLaren Company, of Buckingham, held last Wednesday, a committee of three was chosen to interview the Dominion and Quebec ministers of labour, Hon. W. A. Gordon and Hon. C. F. Arcand, to protest against the company discharging 18 of its employees because, it is alleged, they joined a newly formed union.

The committee is composed of Henri Laprade, Percy Hamel and Elias Bastien and will seek an appointment with Hon. Mr. Gordon at Ottawa.

The men, in reply to a statement from the company, that the union organizers are merely agitators, claim that they are not, but are officials of various labor unions in Eastern Canada.

At the mass meeting the men claimed that if the two ministers of labor did not help their cause, they would strike in sympathy with the 18 fellow workers who had been discharged. It is alleged that in the MacLaren plant the men are being paid 28 cents an hour which it is alleged is 15 cents an hour less than other mills are paying.

Officials of the MacLaren company at Buckingham, however, have denied that any men have been discharged because they joined the union. "As far as I know no men have been discharged," said Fred Kenney, manager of the Buckingham plant. He added that agitators from outside points were at work among the men at the mill.

W. I. Prevents Arrest

James Fahey, a resident of the small town of Jasper, northern Alberta, has reason to be thankful to the local Women's Institute, since its friendly interference on his behalf prevented his arrest and the possible serving of a life sentence for a crime which he claimed he had never committed, and which was supposed to have taken place twenty-four years ago, when he was eighteen years old. Extradition proceedings were to be taken out to compel his return to the supposed crime.

OUR MEMORIAL PARK

The fact that public meetings are being advertised to convene in our Memorial Park is causing considerable justifiable criticism. Permission was granted by the Council for the St. Jean Baptiste celebration, and at that time it was deemed inadvisable to use it for such purposes, but arrangements having been previously made, consent was given.

Now another supposedly patriotic demonstration has been called for Sunday, August 12, but we are informed that sanction has not been granted and any further requests for its use of public gatherings will be refused.

THE EMPIRE GAMES

Another link that binds our Empire closer together, is the link of the sporting spirit evidenced at the Empire Games, now being held in the grand old City of London, England.

It must have been a thrilling sight to see nine hundred athletes, representing twelve different countries, bound by a common allegiance to our King and Empire, all standing silently erect, while the oath of sportsmanship and loyalty was being said.

Every contestant did his or her best.

We are proud of our Canadian representatives, who are in second position up to the present time.

Our swimmers were wonderful, claiming the overwhelming number of points, and our track members, especially the ladies, put up a splendid fight.

The English ladies' team were in superb form, and their chief opposition came from our Canadian girls.

Much praise is going to Miss Eileen Meagher of Halifax, who ran a splendid race in the 220 yard final.

Although coming in second, she forced the winner to break a new Empire record of 25 sec. Through her excellent performance, Eileen had the honor of speaking to her Canadian followers over the radio, on Tuesday night, from the studio in London.

As before reported, Miss Meagher is the niece of Mrs. J. Berniquier of Lachute, and along

BEAUTY

"You were made for enjoyment and the world was filled with (beautiful) things which you will enjoy, unless you are too proud to be pleased or too grasping to care."

—RUSKIN.

Many find it difficult, in the pursuit of their daily calling, to give a thought to the beauty around them; to the enjoyment to be experienced, or to the pleasure to be given to others by the passing on of a beautiful thought, a cheery word or a smile. The beauty is there to be found by the seeker. Be a seeker.

BOY KILLED AS BARN COLLAPSES IN WIND STORM

A young boy was killed and several persons slightly injured shortly after noon, on Friday, when a terrific wind storm, accompanied by hail and heavy rain swept Papineauville district. Crops were flattened, roofs blown off several houses and barns and telephone wires and poles blown down.

The boy killed was Andre Nault, 11-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nault, of St. Andre Avelin, about eight miles north of Papineauville. With his mother and brother, Paul Emile, the boy took refuge from the storm in a vacant barn half a mile from the village. The roof was ripped off the barn and then the sides collapsed, pinning the three persons.

Paul Emile Nault was the first to free himself and he helped his mother who, was slightly injured. They then started looking for Andre and found him unconscious under a pile of timber in the corner of the barn. He was picked up and carried by his brother to the nearby farmhouse of Louis Seize when Dr. J. L'Allier was called. The boy was pronounced dead on the physician's arrival. Dr. W. J. Costello, coroner of Buckingham, was notified and after hearing the details decided an inquest would not be necessary. Dr. L'Allier said the boy died from a fractured skull.

ORGANIZATION MEETING OF HISTORICAL SOCIETY

It is hoped that all who are interested in Historical matters will attend the organization meeting of the Historical Society of Argenteuil County, which will be held Saturday afternoon in St. Andrews E. This Society will be of interest to both men and women and everyone who is interested in Argenteuil County, whether living in the County or not, and are welcome to join the society. All who join at this organization meeting will be charter members and will have the privilege of signing the original roll.

LIBRARY FOR LACHUTE ?

The necessity of a Public Library for Lachute has been often broached by public-spirited citizens who are duly interested in the development and progress of the town. Just yesterday we were approached by one of our prominent business men, who offered to provide a new set of 29 volumes of Encyclopedia Britannica. This is quite a substantial offer and if any of our readers are in sympathy with the project—which is a most worthy one—we should be pleased to lend our support in furthering the enterprise. The Watchman columns are open for the expression of our readers.

CREATORE AT OTTAWA

There are many outstanding features for the Ottawa exhibition which will open on Monday, August 20, and continue for six full days and nights, but to many the stellar attraction will be Createore and his band.

This is the first Canadian appearance of Createore since 1930, and for the exhibition engagement the band will come direct from New York. The great maestro is at his best and he expresses the opinion that the band is the strongest he has ever brought to Canada. In addition to the band, two lady soloists are featured, Miss Anna Pinto, harpist, who is a virtuoso and who, besides playing with the band, will be heard in a solo number each day.

Making her first appearance in Ottawa will be Miss Lola Monti-Gorsey, dramatic soprano. Born in Italy, Lola Monti-Gorsey was reared in a cultural and musical atmosphere, her mother being a noted writer and her sister, Bella, one of the foremost grand opera stars in Europe. She started her career as a child and composed several songs at the age of six and toured Europe as a child prodigy pianist at the age of eight.

She was not more than a child when she was graduated with highest honors from the Imperial Conservatory of Music, Odessa, Russia. At the age of 16, she was chosen from among twenty competitors for the Odessa Municipal Opera House,

LIBERALS CONTESTING ELECTION OF LIBERAL

Petition asking to be declared void, the election of Aurelien Belanger as Liberal member for Prescott in the recent Ontario election has been filed with the local registrar of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Charges that Mr. Belanger himself or his agents was guilty of bribery, treating, undue influence, intimidation, inducing non-voters to vote, hiring vehicles to carry voters to the polls; and other alleged corrupt and illegal practices in connection with the election on June 19 are set out in the petition. Charges also are made alleging irregularities by returning officers and illegal practices by scrutineers canvassing voters both inside and outside the polls.

The petition is signed by Magloire Landry, Clarence Township, Olivier Menard, Hawkesbury, and Moise Lebel, Clarence Township, on behalf of Louis Auger, defeated as Independent Liberal candidate. No date for the shearing has been fixed, but will take place sometime during the coming fall. A $1,000 deposit as security for costs of the action is to be made by the petitioners.

Vote in the election was: Belanger, Liberal, 5,003; Auger, Independent Liberal, 4,766 and Dr. L. P. Beaudoin, Conservative, 3,117.

Mr. Belanger is a former member in the Ontario Legislature for Russell, part of which was merged with Prescott under redistribution. Mr. Auger is a former Dominion member for Prescott. The rival Belanger and Auger political camps held celebrations on election night, each declaring that their candidate had been elected.

there receiving acclaim such as is seldom earned by singers older in years and experience from such noted conductors as Pribic and Paesvsky.

Then followed engagements in South America, Mexico and the United States, in which she scored tremendous successes. Miss Monti-Gorsey has a repertoire of 53 leading operatic parts, and speaks seven languages, enabling her to sing every opera in the original.

Plant me,

I'll bear bright blossoms on my vine,
My fruit is good for man and beast,
Pies made from it are quite a feast.

WHO LAUGHS LAST

Little Bill was not as nice to Christopher Thomas as he might have been. He called him "That great big, fat, ugly cat", much to the disgust of Joan and Jean, who had grown to love Christopher Thomas so much now, that they thought him quite wonderful, and Little Bill, as he was called to let people know that it was not his daddy they were speaking of (His daddy was "Bill", too) was a visitor; their cousin from the city. He was much bigger than Jean and Joan and loved to tease them.

He laughed when they played with their dollies, upset the doll's table quite often, when they had it all nicely set for afternoon tea.

Joan and Jean not being tale-bearers did not tell the other members of their family how mean Little Bill was to them. It was very hard to keep silent when they saw him kick Christopher Thomas, though upsetting our doll's table is bad enough" Joan said with big tears in her eyes "you really cannot hurt it, but Christopher Thomas is alive and you are wicked, Billy, to hurt him."

"You couldn't hurt that big, fat thing" replied Little Bill with a scornful laugh and another kick aimed at Christopher Thomas. He's no good, he can't do tricks or anything."

"Snatching her pet up in her arms just in time to save him from Little Bill's kick. Jean said rather wrathfully "He can do tricks. We've seen him haven't we Joan?"

"I'll say we have" chuckled Joan "why once he stole Grannie Moffat's stockings and hid it under the bed, and he carried my bedroom slippers downstairs the same day."

"Huh! said Little Bill" I don't call that doing tricks. Doing tricks is when they can jump through hoops and all that. I could teach him I betcha if you'd let me."

After a great deal of coaxing on Little Bill's part, and promises not to be rough with Christopher Thomas, Little Bill was allowed to try to teach him to jump through a hoop. But Christopher Thomas recognized Little Bill, only as his enemy and refused to move for him. When Little Bill tried to make him he scratched him so severely that he let go of Christopher Thomas who ran under the verandah and sat there spitting and growling, his big yellow eyes looking much larger from out the darkness.

"He's no good, I tell you!" "Little Bill almost screamed the words, he was so angry and disappointed, and Christopher Thomas' claws had dug deeply.

Snatching a big stone from the ground he hurled it at Christopher Thomas before the twins had time to realize just what he was going to do with it.

With a wild howl, Christopher Thomas dashed from beneath the verandah out on to the road he went, tearing along it as fast as he could until he was quite out of sight.

Joan and Jean fell upon Little Bill, beating him with their doubled fists until he was able, being so much bigger to grasp their hands and hold them. "You're just a pair of wild-cats like your silly old Christopher Thomas" he said sneering, "he's no good, and I'll betcha he won't be able to find his way home."

"He will too!" Joan stormed back, stamping her foot at him, while Jean sobbed "Little Bill, you are a bad boy and I hate you."

"Now, now, what's all this?" asked Grannie Moffat who had just opened her window in time to hear the last part of the quarrel", nice little girls do not talk like that."

"He! he!" Joan began then remembered that they did not tell tales on their visitors, stopped and looked at Jean rather uncertainly.

"Now, now" Grannie Moffat said again "forget it whatever it was about and come in and see all the nice bright pieces of silk I have here, just big enough for dollies' dresses I think."

Little Bill slunk away as the twins with squeals of delight hurried into Grannie Moffat's room.

Christopher Thomas did not come back for almost two weeks because some one on the road saw that he was a special kind of a cat so caught him and took him away across the country ever so far in their car. Jean and Joan were heart-broken and gave Little Bill some very reproachful looks. He, they felt was to blame for the loss of their pet, but Little Bill did not care, just laughed at them when there was no one around and sneered "I told you so. I told you that he would not have sense enough to find his way home."

"He'll come home, someday!" Joan insisted holding his little head quite high. "I just know he will." And he did too, a poor, dirty looking, half-starved Christopher Thomas, who had walked so many long miles to get home and was so tired when he got there that after he had been washed and fed he curled up in his basket and slept for a long time.

About the time Christopher Thomas came back, Little Bill was sent to the field with a lunch for his uncle. He did not want to go but felt rather glad to be out of sight of his cousins joyful triumphant eyes. He did not come in at dinner time and his aunt quite anxious, asked her husband where he had gone to. "Why, Mary!" he replied "he left the field long ago, he must be around outside somewhere. If you blow the horn perhaps he'll come."

Going outside his Aunt blew several loud blasts on the horn

but there was no answer. "I will go and look for him his uncle said "I hope he has not fallen in the creek." Hurrying away across the bridge his uncle found him sitting behind a big stone crying over and over "I am lost, I am lost. I cannot find my way to the house."

"His uncle was a bit cross to think that a big boy like that should sit down and cry when he missed finding the bridge crossing and sit down and give up so easily. "As he brought the lad with his grim tear-stained face into the house and bade him hurry and wash his face for dinner he said "You are not half as smart as Christopher Thomas who seems to have been miles and miles away from home yet he found his way back."

Joan and Jean had eaten their dinner while their dad was searching for Bill so were able to rush off to their pet hiding place behind the lilac trees and laugh over poor Bill's scare.

They had the last laugh and it was one quite worth while.

Next story "It's only an Old Toad."

Lovingly,

Aunt Jean.

MUSICAL TABOOS

Discussing in The Quarterly Review on "The Taboo in Music," Mr. Clement Harri- confesses he got his general knowledge of taboos out of the encyclopedia, where he found no reference to those connected with music and its instruments. He might have added that they aren't mentioned in the one-volume edition of "The Golden Bough." Some well-known inhibitions he puts among taboos, though they have no relation to Frazer's definition, "a negative application of practical magic." Thus the long objection of the Society of Friends to music and that of the Scots Presbyterians and the New England Congregationalists to instrumental music are not taboos in the strict sense, nor was the prohibition by the English Puritans of the use of the organ in church. Before "the Reformation" the organ was played only "by monks." As a sacred instrument it could not be touched by profane hands.

While David was in the den of lions, Nebuchadnezzar "passed the night fasting; neither were instruments of music brought before him." Since music is peculiarly divine to the Hindus, the Brahmin must undergo a severe sacrifice in the second quarter of his life. He "must abstain from music, singing, dancing, gaming."

Though the instrument is not divine, it may be the subject of a taboo:

Among the Taiyal and Tsou tribes in the Malay Peninsula the nose-flute holds this position; it is taboo to use it except on the most solemn occasions, such as the celebration of a victory. It is played through one nostril only; in New Zealand the right nostril, in Tahiti the left. Getting a good tone is difficult; personally, I have been unable to get any.

Domineering man warns the women away from the nose-flute in Formosa, from the drum in Lapland. Among the Mafulu people of New Guinea, if a woman even looks at a drum accidentally while it is being made, the work has to be all done over. The secular exclusion of women from the public stage is familiar. Less familiar is the fact that "the soprano parts in Handel's "oratorios were sung by boys "till 1784, when occurs the "first record of women assisting them."

A few women sang solos in public during their period, but it was at the risk of their reputation for respectability. Instrumental soloists were still rarer; between 1733 and 1801 I can trace the names of only three women players on concert programs.

Now they play on every instrument. When gynocracy gets into her stride, the taboos may come to be forced upon the old taboos.

THE OLDEST PROFESSION

Three professional men, a doctor, an engineer and a financier, were debating which of them belonged to the most honorable and ancient profession.

The doctor said: "Mine is easily the oldest. Don't you remember that in the beginning Eve was made out of a rib in Adam's side? Well, that is a surgical operation for you."

The engineer said: "Yes, but before that happened, don't you know the whole world was made out of chaos in six days? Now, there was an engineering feat for you."

"Ah," said the financier, "but whom made the chaos?"

QUEBEC HIGHWAYS AND HIGHWAY TAXES

Quebec motorists, representing only 5.4 per cent of the population, paid in gasoline taxation and registration last year, more than the province spent on current account for roads, road maintenance and interest charges on bond issues for roads now outstanding, according to official figures cited by the Montreal Motorists League.

In 1933, 5.4 per cent of the population who own motor vehicles, contributed in gasoline tax and registrations, $9,946,877 or 32 per cent of the total current revenue, while in the same period the provinces, official record show, spent $8,767,216 on current account for roads, road maintenance and interest charges on road bond issues.

Quebec, in the same year, spent $4,811,571 on roads charged to capital account, a decline of nearly $3,500,000 from 1932 in which year motorists in the province paid out $10,382,585 in gasoline and license fees or 28.1 per cent of the current revenue for that year.

The figures, from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, show that Quebec had 35,763 miles of road open for highway traffic at the end of 1931 and 35,058 miles at the end of 1932, a decrease of 705 miles.

The Bureau's figures exclude roads in incorporated cities, towns and villages under the jurisdiction of the provincial highway departments, also such roads under local jurisdiction as far as the mileage is ascertainable by the provincial department.

REGAINED APPETITE AND WEIGHT WITH KELLOGG'S ALL-BRANCereal Relieved His Constipation

If you are a sufferer from headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness, or any other of the frequent effects of constipation, read this enthusiastic letter from Mr. McIntyre:

"For a long time my system was not in very good working order. But since eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, I have regained my appetite and my lost weight. And my system is in good working order. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN sure does the trick." —Mr. J. A. McIntyre (address furnished upon request).

Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides the "bulk" needed to relieve ordinary constipation. It also contains vitamin B and iron for the blood.

You'll enjoy this delicious and healthful ready-to-eat cereal. Serve it with milk or cream—or use often in cooking.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is all bran with only necessary flavoring added. It contains much more needed "bulk" than part-bran products. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

CANADIAN VODOOISM

In the Canadian Health, a magazine published to educate the public for better health, an article entitled "Canadian Voodooism" by Dr. F. W. Bowman, brings to light the serious practices of "quack" doctors, and the generous uses of patent medicines by the public, which is detrimental to the health of the nation.

The appealing advertisements of these cure-alls, broadcasted over the air are hard to resist when one is suffering, and the first thought is try a bottle.

But the public must be warned.

Surgery and medicine through scientific research has made rapid advancements, and if one is doubtful regarding an ailment, it is worth the specialist's fee, to have his advice, and not try a bottle of chance dope for 50c., which is advertised to cure everything from cancer to ingrowing toe-nails.

Dr. Bowman says "We laugh at the ignorant African worshipping and believing in witch doctors. We send missionaries to China to tell the Chinese among other things, that extract of stag's horns and toad skins boiled together will not cure cholera. And yet the above are only a few instances of what is occurring in this country."

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 7.—One hardly knows whether to be sorry for Mr. Bennett or for the provincial leaders as a result of the heart-to-heart talk on unemployment relief which occurred here last week, and which resulted in a radical change in the whole policy. The fairest way is to look at a moment from Mr. Bennett's point of view, then try to get the provincial slant.

The Federal Viewpoint

Mr. Bennett took the firm stand that this business of making large indefinite contributions from the federal treasury toward unemployment relief should not continue. Being a percentage arrangement, divided three ways, no party ever knew ahead how much the bill was going to be in the next 12 months. Another thing, when responsibility is divided three ways, the chances of sloppy administration and downright fraud are much greater. Much better, said the federal authorities, if one body, preferably the province, become financially responsible. We shall continue to make a financial contribution, but it will be in the nature of a lump sum payment, which you will have to make go as far as you can.

Another tack tried out by the Ottawa authorities was the argument that the federal government has more than done its part toward the alleviation of unemployment. The expenditure of nearly 120 millions, the loaning of another sixty million, the intention of spending still another forty million, the betterment of conditions—all these were urged as good reason why the federal government should now be permitted to retire, slowly and gracefully, from the relief picture.

The Provincial Slant.

But of course the picture from the provincial side was quite a different one. After all, wasn't unemployment relief a national problem, with one out of ten Canadians still on relief? Wasn't it a national problem, when several provinces and many municipalities were on the verge of bankruptcy, and were unable to go out into the money market and borrow? Hadn't it been a national problem in 1930, when there were only 200,000 unemployed? Wasn't it still a national problem with at least 500,000 still unemployed?

Another argument which Nova Scotia and British Columbia are particularly mindful of is this: The fiscal policy of the federal government has more to do with unemployment than any other single factor.

Granted that a high tariff gives employment in Cornwall, Ont., or Sherbrooke, Que.—isn't it Cornwall, Ontario or Sherbrooke, Que.—isn't it a fact that the same high tariff makes it pretty tough for the fishermen of Nova Scotia or the lumbermen of British Columbia, who have to sell in a depressed world market, and have to buy in a sheltered home market at prices much above world levels?

No One Going to Starve

While sympathizing with the provincial view, I do think there was a tendency to cry before they were hurt. Just because a 'lump sum' is substituted for a percentage contribution, it doesn't necessarily mean that the actual contribution will be smaller. As a matter of fact, I understand that in the case of two provinces, the payments this year will be as large as last, and with any improvement in conditions the province would have more money to spend on relief, not

The lawn social, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid was a huge success, and an excellent programme was provided for by the ladies.

The A.Y.P.A. held its regular meeting on Sunday evening after church. Miss Ruth Simon was welcomed back after her holiday in Erindale, Ont.

Mrs. Thos. Graham, Miss Muriel and Mr. Melvin Graham motored to Postdam, N. Y., for the week-end and were guests of Mrs. Kidd, a former resident of this place.

The Wolf Cubs, with Wen-ville Graham, and the Reverend Gordon Phillips took over the camp in the Grove, after the Brownies vacated. The Cubs spent an enjoyable and worthwhile two days in the camp. The 2nd. Laurentian Scouts entertained them, Friday evening, with a bean supper and with singing around the camp-fire.

The Grace Church Girl Guides and the Guides of the Church of the Redeemer, Weir, spent an enjoyable afternoon as the guests of the St. Agathe Girl Guides, at the home of Mrs. Phelps, Lake Manitou. Swimming, boating, games and singing and most of all the companionship of congenial fellow-guides, not to mention the delicious refreshments served, made a delightful afternoon.

The Grace Church Brownies, organized this year, held their first camp, in the Grove, with about fifteen Brownies attending. The only regret expressed with regard to the camp was that their leader, Miss Daisy Craig, was unable to be present. Swimming, games, Brownie lore, camp fires and singing, and sleeping on hay under the tarpaulin made an experience that none of the girls, ranging in age from eight to twelve, will ever forget.

DR. BARTON TO HEAD MARKETING BOARD

The Canada Marketing Board will have as its first chairman, Dr. G. S. H. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, it was learned recently. For some time Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, has been working out plans for the board which will operate under his supervision. The final details will be before the cabinet this week and the board will be in a position to operate at once.

The duties of chairman of the board will not necessitate Dr. Barton surrendering the position of deputy minister to which he was appointed in 1932. He came here from McGill University, where he was dean of the faculty of agriculture of Macdonald College.

Submissions have been received by the department urging several lines of products being made regulated products and put under the Marketing Board. Of course the most pressing is apples, with the crop soon entering the market, although it is not so abundant as last year except in British Columbia.

A submission is also being prepared, it is understood, with respect to course grains. The move for the regulating of these grains is coming from the Prairies. Among the lesser crops, grapes and pears are likely to be regulated.

The board is understood to consist of five men with the heads of the various branches of the Department of Agriculture acting as advisors to the

Dr. J. F. Booth, head of the economics branch, is expected to be a member of the board. In the handling of apples, there will probably be an export board covering all the provinces with a local board in addition for British Columbia.

less. And while the unemployed from one end of the country to the other will naturally be exercised about the matter, and wonder if their present low scale is to be further reduced, one gathers that there is no intention to become more callous, just because there is a measure of recovery. If there is relief money going to people who no longer need it, or who never deserved it, surely for the sake of the real victims of the depression, and the taxpayer, there should be stricter supervision. And that will unquestionably result from the placing of the responsibility on one party instead of dividing among three.

Political Repercussions

No one seems to suppose that the firm stand taken by Mr. Bennett will add to his popularity throughout the country, but that is one thing characteristic about our prime minister, if he makes up his mind that a certain course is right, he sticks to his guns. It is magnificent, but it is not democracy.

Now we're borrowing money at New York for two per cent. The old family mortgage at eight per cent, or lien notes at nine, will be all the more irksome. Why can't the 'common people' get a look-in at some of this very cheap money? They might be able to make the farm and the store pay, if they did.

OUR FRIENDLY DOG

We have an Irish terrier named Con. Now Con is a very friendly dog but he does not look the part. Strange men walk very warily about the place and some of them are frightened but the children know better. There is a little two-year old who lives across the street and another one visiting next door and these babies have a continuous competition to win Con's attention. The welkin rings with cries of 'Con' and 'Doggie'. He is very impartial, and takes turns playing with them, and takes all sorts of love and abuse. When he has had enough he just quietly leaves but he soon goes back again. Of course everyone thinks that their own dog is good but ours must be because even the neighbors think he is a good dog.

SOUR MILK COOKERY

Old-fashioned cook books give us a good many recipes which call for sour milk. Modern ones use little of it. Most households have very little sour milk or cream these days because of better refrigeration. There are times that it is difficult to keep cream sweet but if you ever want to sour some for cooking it always seems hard to get it to turn properly even with the use of lemon or vinegar. It is a funny thing how Science so often backs up a custom. Milk utensils have been scalded with hot water for time immemorial to keep the milk. The milk-maid did not know why she did it but she knew that she got results. Now Science tells us that the boiling water kills the bacteria which sours the milk. We go on doing the same thing but it makes it more interesting to know why we do it. The Russian Scientist Metchnikoff believed that the long life of some of the Eastern people was due to the amount of sour milk they drank as because of the great heat the milk soured almost immediately. His theory was that the bacteria which soured the milk was strong enough to destroy harmful bacteria.

COTTAGE CHEESE

Cottage Cheese or Curds is one of the best of foods from the standpoint of nutrition. It contains all the valuable parts of the milk in a form that is easy to digest. To make good Curds the milk must be properly soured. If it is too sour or kept too long it may develop a peculiar taste. The last mess of curds that I made was from freshly soured milk and although the milk had soured enough to be thick it had not been soured long enough to develop any flavour and the resulting curds were tasteless. To make Cottage Cheese put the milk in the top of a double boiler and heat until the whey separates. Do not let the water boil and do not heat too long as too much heat or too long cooking will give a tough leathery curd. When the whey has separated strain through a cheesecloth or a fine strainer. Let drain until quite dry then add a little cream, salt and pepper—Curds must have pepper. These may be eaten with Strawberry Preserve or with any preferred variety of jam or jelly. They may be mixed with salad dressing and used to accompany a salad or they may be a basis for sandwiches and mixed with a sweet or with the savoury things such as olives, peppers, pimientos peanut butter or any thing else that our fancy suggests.

CHOCOLATE CAKE

To my mind a chocolate cake that is made with sour cream is the nicest. You will hear people say that they have no luck with a chocolate cake. That they will make them and they will be fine and then they make some poor ones and they never can depend on having a good cake. The variation in results is due to the varying degree in the sourness of the cream. To obviate this difficulty add a teaspoon of baking powder to your recipe if it does not call for it and you will have surer results. I am going to give you two of my favorite cake recipes. The first one is I think the nicest one I know but I find that some people who do not usually like a chocolate cake like the second one because of its spicy flavour.

1/4 cup butter
1 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
1 cup flour
1 cup sour cream
1/2 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
4 tablespoons cocoa
1/2 cup walnuts
Cream the sugar and butter, add the well beaten eggs. Sift the dry ingredients and add alternately with the cream. Add the walnuts broken in pieces. Pour into a buttered pan 8" by 8" and bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees.

CHOCOLATE ICING

3 tablespoons cocoa
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons water or coffee
Icing sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla.

Cook cocoa, butter and water until thick over a gentle heat. Let cool. Add vanilla and icing sugar to thicken. To be at its best this icing must not be too thick but just stiff enough to be creamy. The amount of sugar required varies as the amount of evaporation in cooking the mixture is not always the same. If you have thickened it too much add a little cream or coffee until it is the required consistency. I prefer using the coffee rather than the water as it improves the flavour but either gives a good icing. Pile the icing on the cake lightly and mark by drawing the tines of a fork over it.

SPICY CHOCOLATE CAKE

1 cup granulated sugar
1/4 teaspoon each cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg
1 teaspoon soda
1 tablespoon cocoa
1 1/2 cups flour
1/4 teaspoon salt

Put all the above ingredients through a sifter and add two well beaten eggs and 1 cup sour cream. Pour into a buttered pan 8" by 11" and bake in oven of 350 degrees.

50 Years Ago.

August 15,—1884.

Our Shrewsbury correspondent relates a sad affair which happened at the parish of Ste. Marguerite, when one of the French farmers had gone to work in the rear of his farm and was awaiting his daughter to bring his dinner. When three o'clock came the farmer returning and nearing his home noticed a big bear eating something, he then fired and killed the animal and on examination found the remains of his little 12 year old daughter, there being nothing left but the hand.

Centreville records a pleasing event on July 28th., by Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Matthews celebrating their golden wedding after which their daughter Emma and Geo. P. Coghill, of Montreal, were united in marriage. Following this was the baptism of one of their grandchildren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark, of St. Eugene, the Rev. Thos. A. Mitchell officiating throughout.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Aug. 12th. is "Spirit."

The Golden Text is: This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts. (Zechariah 4: 6).

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." (11 Corinthians 3: 17)

"Jesus taught but one God, one Spirit, who makes man in the image and likeness of Himself,—of Spirit, not of matter. Jesus did his own work by the one Spirit." (Science and Health pages 94 and 79).

HIGHWAY COMPLETED
THROUGH ROCKIES

Sunwapta drive, the completed section of the Jasper-Banff highways, has become very popular since its opening.

Besides its unusual scenic attractions, which include a close view of the tumbling, roaring Athabasca Falls, where tons of water leap and writhe in a narrow gorge under the highway, this road affords easy access to lovely little lakes and streams where fishing is a thrill. These have been hidden from the main arteries of travel and only occasionally visited by the guided parties.

Sporty rainbow trout have made their home undisturbed in these lakes and splendid fishing can now be enjoyed. Many fine catches already have been made there this season.

Countless other such beauty spots lie along the road. It is a fascinating sport to find these hidden places and Jasper Park with its thousands of acres of woodland, mountain ranges, lakes and streams, still has visitors.

VAGABOND CRUISES
ATTRACT TOURISTS

The "vagabond cruises" of the Canadian National Steamships to the West Indies are steadily proving their popularity with tourists who have the time to make a leisurely tour of five weeks. With all the comforts but none of the "frills" of their sister ships, the Lady boats, the Colborne and the Chomedy, offer a vacation at a rate appreciably cheaper than that of the ordinary first-class hotel. There are six more sailings of these vagabond ships from Montreal during the present summer and fall season, August 9, August 23, September 20, October 4, November 1 and November 15. They go

Song of the Simple-Hearted

By Molly Bevan

Oh whenever we come to die
Nobody grieve for us, nobody cry;
We were happy in lovely things—
Stars, the sun on a butterfly's wings,
Greening meadows when day is long,
Winter firelight, a tuneful song,
Friendship, laughter, the simple graces,
Peace of the little country places.
What though our bones be dust again
One with the earth and the drifting rain,
Nobody cry for us, nobody grieve,
If this be true which we believe,
Free of the mists of doubt and fear
We shall be happy as we were here;
Nothing we brought, nothing can take,
Yet, when in that Unknown we wake,
Strangely we feel that we shall find
All that we loved and left behind.

Historical Society for Argenteuil County

Details of Organization . . . Constitution Adopted . . . at Public Meeting in St. Andrews East.

The historic little town of St. Andrews East was the scene on Saturday afternoon last of an interesting function which is likely to rank as an event of the first magnitude in the annals of the fine old County of Argenteuil. This was the organization of a County Historical Society—which was the outcome of action taken on June 23rd. last, the occasion of the unveiling of the cairn to the First Paper Mill in Canada, erected at St. Andrews by the Historic Sites and Monuments Commission. At that time a Resolution was moved by Dr. B. N. Wales, seconded by Dr. Maude E. Abbott and passed by the assembly, that such a Society be formed and that Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring, of Lakefield, Que., President of the Women's Institutes of Argenteuil, be made Convenor of arrangements to this end. Mrs. Kuhring accordingly appointed a small Organizing Committee consisting of Mr. A. C. Kains, of Ottawa; Mrs. A. E. Ladouceur and Mr. T. Raymond, Dr. B. N. Wales and Miss L. T. Wales, Dr. Maude E. Abbott, Miss Beatrice Robertson and Mrs. O. Dorian all of St. Andrews, who met at the School-house on July 28th. for the transaction of the necessary preliminaries and the outlining of a provisional Constitution for submission to the Public Meeting here reported.

This Meeting, duly called by Mrs. Kuhring, was held on August 11th., with its Convenor in the Chair and a representative attendance from various parts of the County and elsewhere, most of whom were descendants of the pioneer settlers or early colonial residents of their localities. The Resolution that a Historical Society be this day formed for the County of Argenteuil was moved by Dr. Wales, seconded by Dr. Abbott and unanimously carried. It was further voted that Mrs. Kuhring continue to occupy the chair throughout this meeting.

The Report from the Organizing Committee was read by its Secretary Miss L. T. Wales, and the Constitution as drafted thereon was proposed by the Chairman, Article by Article, and after adequate discussion of each paragraph was adopted in full in the following form:

Article I. The name of this organization shall be the Historical Society of Argenteuil County.

Article II. The headquarters of this Society shall be the town of St. Andrews East, for the reason that this town was the domain of the Seigneur and that it was the site of the earliest English-speaking settlement.

Article III. The objects of the Society shall be (1) To promote interest in the early history of the county. (2) To provide a repository for the records of the past and the present. (3) To foster an interest in historical matters and Canadian loyalty and patriotism. (4) To establish as soon as opportunity permits a historical museum for the County of Argenteuil.

Article IV. The following qualifications shall cover membership and voting: (1) Membership shall be open to all who are interested, whether resident in the County of Argenteuil or not. (2) The membership fee shall be fifty cents a year. (3) Qualifications to vote shall be restricted to regularly enrolled members, who have paid the annual fee. (4) Life membership fees shall be $20.00.

Article V. The officers of the Historical Society of Argenteuil shall be an honorary president, a president, one or more vice-presidents, a secretary-treasurer, and four or more directors, the latter to be elected for a term of four years, and relieved by rotation, two being retired and substitutes elected each successive year.

Article VI. No member shall incur any indebtedness on the credit of the Society unless authorized by the same.

Article VII. The funds of the Society shall be applied to covering expenses incidental to meetings, advertising, postage and stationery, and to paying other expenses incurred, such as the acquisition of a Museum and its upkeep.

Article VIII. (1) The Society shall have at least two regular meetings a year, one general and the Annual Meeting, which latter shall be held at St. Andrews East. (2) All historical documents and other material of historic interest shall be deposited in the care of a specially appointed committee of two members of the executive, until such time as a historical museum be established, when a Curator will be appointed by the Society.

Drs. B. N. Wales and M. E. Abbott were made Trustees for the care of historical material belonging to the Society until such time as a Curator can be appointed.

A Resolution was unanimously passed electing Sir George H. Perley and Mr. G. Dansereau, the County's representatives in the Dominion and Provincial Parliaments respectively, as Honorary Patrons of the Society. The following Officers and Directors were then elected:

Honorary President, Mr. Archibald Kains, Ottawa; President, Dr. B. N. Wales, St. Andrews East, Que.; First Vice-President, Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring, Lakefield, Que.; Second Vice-President, Dr. Maude E. Abbott, Montreal, and St. Andrews East; Other Vice-Presidents, Dr. H. B. Cushing, Cushing, Que.; Mr. J. S. L. M. Hooker, Lachute Road; Mr. A. E. Ladouceur, St. Andrews East; Mrs. W. J. Pitcairn, St. Andrews East; Col. J. E. Seale, Morin Heights; Mr. Staniforth, Arundel.

The President, First and Second Vice-Presidents and Secretary-Treasurer were together constituted an Executive Committee, any three of whom shall constitute a quorum, for the transaction of business arising in the interim of the meeting.

Mrs. Kuhring, Convenor and Chairman of this meeting, then placed before it the details of the procedure necessary for Incorporation under the National Benefits Act of this Province. Whereupon it was moved by Dr. H. B. Cushing, seconded by Mr. Kains and Resolved: That the Society proceed to Incorporation and that the Executive Committee be empowered to take the necessary steps to this end.

The Chairman announced that Mr. Kuhring had kindly undertaken to prepare a scroll embodying the Constitution in heavy blocked script which should bear the signatures of Beautiful flowers bore silent tribute to the memory of the deceased.

Stratford veterans have set a good example, in dispensing with words and suiting the action to a prevalent need . . . A self-styled Communist and an organizer for the Workers' Unity League, was taken to the outskirts of the city by a group of citizens and emphatically warned not to return. The man was ordered into the first of a dozen cars driving in line, and was driven to the city limit and warned that his personal safety would not be guaranteed should he return.

ENGLISH SCOUTS VISIT TAMARACOUTA

Lachute Boy Scouts in camp this week at Tamaracouta, near Morin Heights, will strike acquaintance with a group from England, who, having arrived aboard the S.S. Alaunia on Monday, are due to spend a visit at Tamaracouta this week-end.

The English Scouts are public school boys from such well-known institutions as Clifton, Winchester and Eton. On Monday they will continue on their itinerary to Ottawa, spending next Thursday and Friday at another camp in the Gatineau Valley, and later visiting Toronto and Niagara Falls.

PIONEER RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

Grenville North—We regret to record the death of Mrs. David Kennedy, a beloved and life-long resident in this county.

Mrs. Kennedy was one of the pioneers of this district and had some few years ago passed the mark of three score years and ten. She came from her son's home in Brownsburg to visit her daughter, Mrs. Peter Mott, and it was there that she succumbed on Friday, August 10th.

The funeral service was held from her daughter's home on Sunday, Aug. 12th., conducted by Rev. J. Maclean, of Cushing. The beautiful floral wreaths and large gathering of friends paid silent tribute to one who had been a devoted mother and neighbor. The remains were laid to rest in the family plot at Edina cemetery.

The sympathy of this community is extended to her bereaved relatives.

YOUNGSTERS ENTERTAIN AT MORIN HEIGHTS

Concert at Summer Boarding House

"Watchorn Farm" at Morin Heights was the scene of an unusual event recently in aid of the Children's Memorial Hospital, Montreal. The function, taking the form of an open air concert, included all juvenile performers from the locality or guests at the farm, aged from 5 to 14 years, who drew hearty applause from their audience. The cast comprised Doris Watchorn, Helen Watt, Julian Fayet, Kenneth Sanford, Joan Green, Lillian Emmert, Lorne Crawford, Gerald Cleary, Dorothy Taylor, Douglas Robinson, Russell Cornell, and Walter Watt, in a program of songs, recitations and choruses.

The Children's Memorial Hospital benefited by this event to the amount of $31.50, which is a credit indeed to these young entertainers and their enthusiastic audience.

FORMER RESIDENT DIED AT BROCKVILLE

Late Mrs. David E. Barclay; Was Related in this District

Mrs. David E. Barclay, a native of this town and for the past eight years an esteemed resident of Brockville, Ont. died last Thursday afternoon at the General Hospital in that city. Before her marriage Mrs. Barclay was Miss Margaret Elizabeth (Bessie) Jackson, daughter of the late John Jackson and of Mrs. Jackson of Lachute.

The deceased lady left this community 26 years ago. Since moving to Brockville the late Mrs. Barclay had been a valued member of St. John's United Church, in which she was a past president of the Mother's Club and member of other organizations. She was also active in the W.C.T.U. and in the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Besides her husband and her mother, she is survived by three sons and two daughters. She also leaves two brothers, William Jackson of this town, and John Jackson, of Kemptonville.

The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon from the family residence to St. John's United Church, where the service was conducted by Rev. David Grey, assisted by Rev. R. White-side, of Addison. The members of the W.C.T.U. attended in a body and assisted in the service. A large number of friends were present and many flowers showed the esteem in which the deceased was held. During the service Boyce Ker-

Interesting Session of Lachute Town Council

Telephone Cables Under Discussion

Reflooring of Auditorium

Quite a busy and interesting session of Lachute Town Council was held at an adjourned meeting on Tuesday evening, with Mayor A. Larocque presiding, there being present Aldermen J. A. Rice, C. Durocher, Jas. MacGibbon, Legault, O. Laurin.

Two representatives of the Bell Telephone Company were on hand to discuss the matter of re-arranging long-distance lines, removing the open wires on Bethany Street and placing new cable on south side of Main. Mayor Larocque was insistent that something should be done at the Post Office corner for removal of the unsightly poles and anchor wires, and that the cables should be laid under ground. It was then arranged that the members of Council would meet the representatives at the Post Office corner and see what could be done to fill these recommendations.

The town officer was instructed to have another hydrant installed at the corner of Isabel and Bedford Boulevard.

Mr. Milne, of the Canadian Refractories Co., presented samples and photographs of flooring which is almost entirely a product of the Kilmar Mines in this County. Discussion of this matter among several members of the council indicates there is a disposition to consider this method of flooring for the Auditorium, notwithstanding the additional cost. The matter however was left over for consideration.

FIRE AND POLICE CHIEFS AT ST. ANDREWS

Last Thursday, Mr. John Irwin of the St. Andrews Golf Club, who is also an honorary member of the Police and Fire Chiefs' Association, and Col. B. Bishop, V.C., were guests of the latter organization in their second annual tournament at the St. Andrews Golf Course, which incidentally is considered second to none in the Province.

Despite the fact that the St. Andrews course is a 9-hole layout, the competitors were sent out on their rounds on scheduled time, with the result that the last foursome completed their play in ample time to join in the festivities observed at the club-house.

Mr. Irwin welcomed the association to the club, and expressed the hope that they would continue to honor St. Andrews as the scene chosen for their annual championship tournaments. Director Dufresne responded with thanks to the officials of the club, for the hospitality they had extended to his association and the privilege of using their beautiful grounds and club premises.

The Club has expended a vast amount of money in building out of the density of the forest, such a splendid course, and had the depression not struck when it did, further extensions would have been made. However, there is still a place for other enthusiastic golfers who wish to avail themselves of these golf links, in their charming environment, on the banks of the North River and the Ottawa River, and the membership fee is by no means excessive. We understand that the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy are looking forward to their annual field day which is scheduled to be held at this spot on August 22nd.

foot sang "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere".

The friends and relatives present from out of town were: Mrs. John Jackson, mother; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jackson, of Lachute; Mr. and Mrs. John Jackson and son William, of Kemptonville, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Dangerfield, Mrs. Bert Dangerfield, Kemptonville; Wm. E. McClintock, Ross Barclay, Mrs. N. Scanlan, and daughter, Mrs. Geo. Barclay, of Point Fortune; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Barclay, Winchester; Mrs. D. Barclay, James P. Barclay, Miss Eleanor Barclay, Mrs. J. C. Barclay, Miss Dorothy Barclay of Ottawa, Mrs. E. J. Knight and daughter, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Wilkins, North Augusta; and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Fawcett, Smith Falls.

TOURIST TRAFFIC BETTER

The Automobile Club has estimated that tourist traffic in Quebec will register an increase this year, (at least 25% over that of 1933.

LAKE LOUISA REGATTA SATURDAY NEXT

The annual meeting of the Lake Louisa Fish and Game Club was held on Saturday evening, when various matters were discussed pertaining to the welfare and interests of the lake residents, and protection of the fishing rights. Splendid work has been done by guardians of the lake, who are on the look-out each spring and fall for poachers and illegal fishing. A close watch is kept and anyone found netting is severely dealt with.

A Regatta is planned for next Saturday, August 18th., for which a splendid program of events is being prepared. There is also to be a bonfire at night, and if possible a display of fire-works. Events will be started as early as possible in the afternoon, and will take place in the bay below Liberty Hall.

The Club invites all interested to visit Lake Louisa and spend the day.

Officers elected at the meeting were: Wm. J. Deacon, President; T. Furlong, Vice-President; R. A. Giles, Secretary. The Membership fee is only $2.00 and anyone wishing to join the Club may do so by remitting to the Secretary, or may obtain membership card at Habib's Store, Lake Louisa. Join up and help support the interests of Lake Louisa as a summer resort.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT LACHUTE MILLS

Young Man Fell Backward into Shaft

Philippe Lemay, son of Jos. Lemay of Chatham Street, met with a fatal accident last Saturday at 5.45 p.m., while loading ply-wood at the siding of Dominion Shuttle Company, with whom he was employed.

At an inquest held by Dr. J. H. Mason, district coroner, it was learned that the young man, 22 years of age, had fallen backwards from the platform on which he was working. He had dropped 12 feet into the shaft of a hoist, striking his head on the concrete floor.

Dr. A. Rodrigue was summoned immediately after the mishap, but Lemay's injuries proved fatal, and the victim died some 15 or 20 minutes later. After hearing the evidence of fellow workers, the coroner's jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.

DUNANY REGATTA HELD

A successful Regatta is reported from Clear Lake, Dunany, where a pleasing event drew large attendance last Saturday to the lakeshore camp of Mr. D. T. Main. Keen competition was shown in the various sporting events, and financial proceeds of the occasion were given over to the Dunany Church.

AUNT JEAN'S RIDDLE
NO. 9

"Mrs. Puddle-Duck, Puddle-Duck, where are my children?"
Shrieked old Mrs. Biddy, one day,
"I left them right here, at the foot of this haystack
When I went to my nest to lay. They can't have gone far, for I hurried right back, Pray tell if you've seen them, my dear Mrs. Quack!"

—Where and what were Mrs. Biddy's children?

IT'S JUST AN OLD TOAD

Little Bill was finding the time rather long, as he sat idly throwing stones into the pond just to see how much of its smooth surface he could disturb. Looking around, so far he had found nothing to tease or disturb but the quiet water of the pond. But something was wriggling in a bunch of short green ferns; perhaps there was something there he could tease. As he watched, the ferns parted and out hopped a large, warty green toad. Little Bill's eyes danced. "Well, old toad," he said, "you like to hop, I see, so I think I'll keep you hopping." Seizing a long, sharply pointed stick he poked the toad rather roughly with it. The toad, in sudden fear, hopped high in the air, and landing down by a large burdock bush he crawled under the leaves. With a wicked chuckle Little Bill poked him again; again he hopped away. This time he landed in the midst of a tangle of thistles.

Little Bill was not so anxious to follow him; thistles and bare legs were not good mixers.

Looking around for something to chase the toad out of the thistle patch, Little Bill caught sight of a stone pile and immediately began pelting him with stones, throwing them so quickly that the poor toad, being struck several times, hopped out of the thistle patch on to a rock, slipped off it, down a crack between two other rocks and there he stuck. Left to himself he would possibly have worked his way out but Little Bill did not give him a chance. He followed him and poked again, saying "Now I have you where I want you, you old hopper!"

Joan and Jean had been watching Little Bill from the summer-house and wondered what he was doing. "Let's go and see" said Joan, and without another word they ran out of the summer-house and were at Little Bill's side, without his hearing their soft footsteps. "Little Bill", Joan cried, "you are cruel! you must not hurt that poor toad."

"Will if I want to," growled Bill, shaking his arm free from Joan's grasp, only to have it seized by Jean, who was sobbing. She could not bear to see anything tortured.

"Aw, what's all the fuss for anyway?" snapped Little Bill. "It's only an old toad."

"Little Bill, oh Little Bill!" a soft voice cried, rather sadly. "I did not think my son would be so cruel."

"Mother!" shouted Little Bill, dropping the sharp stick and rushing to throw his arms around her. "Mother, when did you come? I am so glad to see you. It's lonesome here with nothing but just girls to play with, and nothing to do all day." There had been a great many things that Little Bill could have done to help his uncle and aunt, but he was not keen on real work so had not done them. If he had, he would have been so much happier.

"And so you tease a poor, helpless toad—oh Billy Bill!"

"But mother!" Little Bill said again. "It doesn't matter about an old toad."

"Come over to this bank, dears, where we can sit down while I tell you just how important toads are to farmers and gardeners."

"Toads" began his Mother, "usually hide in the garden during the day, and at night hop around feeding on slugs and insects which they catch by darting out their queer sticky tongues. They have very sharp eyes for moving objects, and are considered very valuable on account of the cutworms they destroy. If there were not any old toads, as you call them, perhaps you would not have any tomatoes to eat."

"I couldn't manage without tomatoes, Mother. I really couldn't," Little Bill said with a sort of scared look on his face. Tomatoes and tomato juice had been on his bill of fare as far back as he could remember, for a great many months during the year.

"Then you ought to be thankful to Mr. Toad for helping to save plants for you," his mother said, "besides a toad can do things you cannot do. It can live all winter without food or water and we read of toads that have been found embedded in rock, that are alive when the rock is broken open. Do you think you are as wonderful as that, Billy Boy?"

"I am afraid not, Mother", Little Bill replied with a look of shame, "I am not even as smart as an old toad, and I am just wondering if we could help this one out from between the rocks without hurting him."

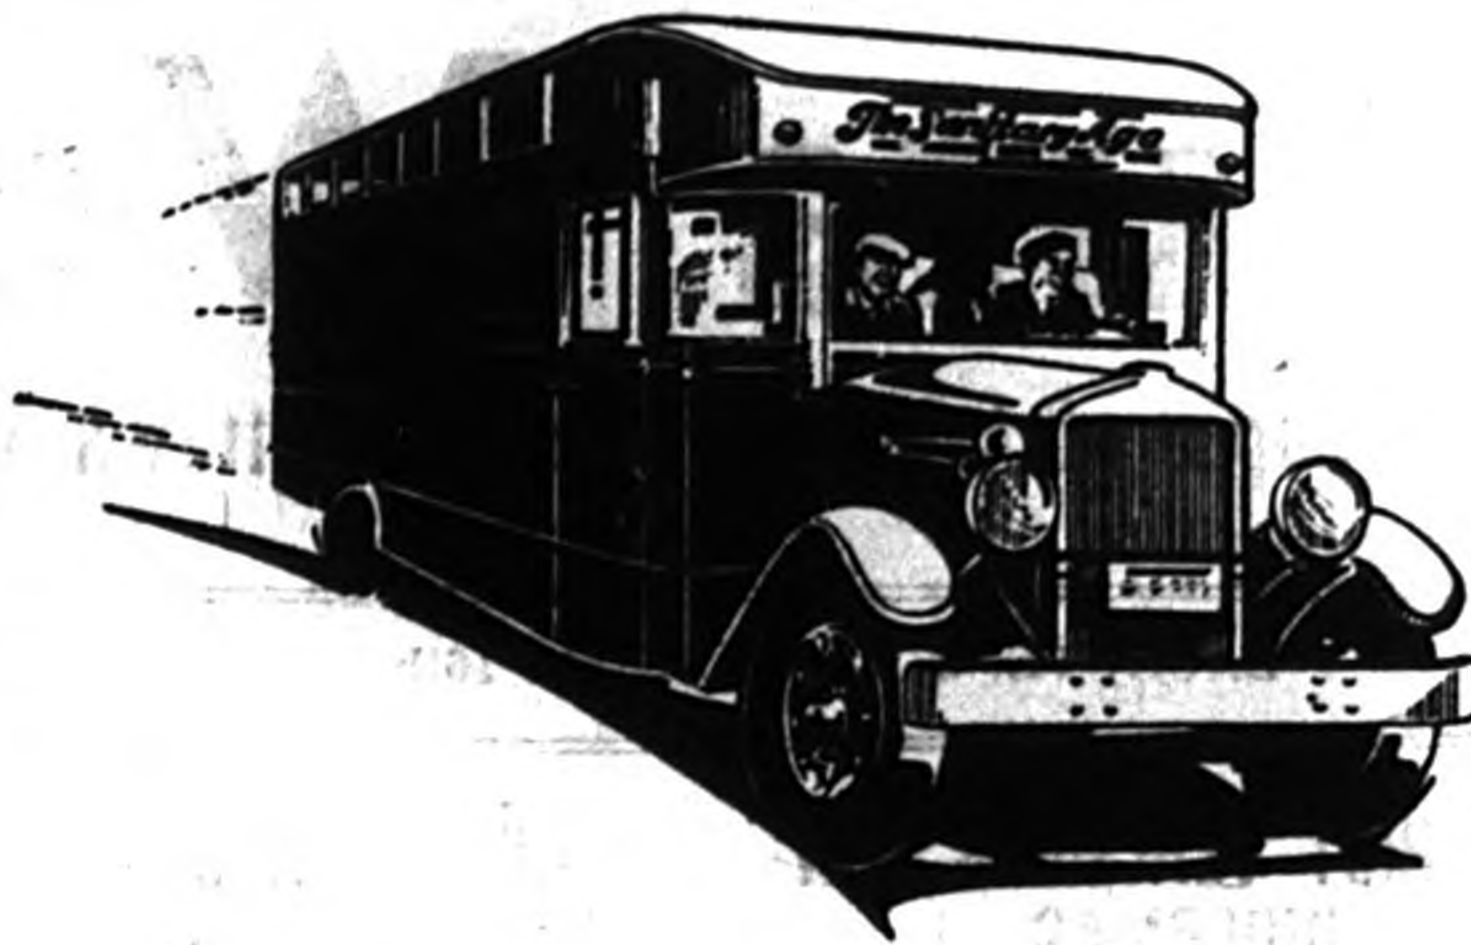

"We can try," His mother picked up a strong narrow piece of wood and shoved it in between the rocks under the toad, forcing him slowly but gently upwards until he was free.

For a moment he sat panting and blinking, rather uncertain what was expected of him, then suddenly he hopped over the rock with a splash into the pond and sat cooling his sore sides in the water.

"Good luck, old chap!" shouted Little Bill. "I promise you I will never hurt a toad again!"

OTTAWA EXHIBITION WILL OPEN MONDAY
FOR SIX BIG DAYS

Creator and His Band, High Class Vaudeville, Automobile Races, a New and Better Midway and many other Stellar Factors to Appeal to all.

Next Monday, August 20th., the Ottawa Exhibition will open its gates for six days and six nights of education and enjoyment. This year the high standard of previous exhibitions will be more than sustained by the outstanding attractions and the excellent displays. To thousands of music lovers the interest will center in Creator and his band.

Creator and his band! The picturesque conductor and his musicians have a grip upon the imagination and affection of music lovers of Ottawa and district unequalled by any similar organization. Other bands of distinction come and go with well deserved popularity, but it is the magic name of Creator, the magic of the music evoked from superb instruments under his magnetic direction that lures throngs twice a day to the vicinity of the shell in Lansdowne Park while a Central Canada Exhibition is in progress.

Creator is a great personality, and he is a great musician with taste, temperament, imagination and fire. He gives his audiences the great classics of ensemble music and famous operatic selections, and he makes "high-brow" offerings so interesting that people are enthusiastic over them. They clamor for more.

An idea of the tremendous repertoire of the band may be gained from the fact that throughout the 12 programs to be presented during the whole week of the coming Central Canada Exhibition from Monday afternoon, August 20, to Saturday evening, August 25, not a single repetition is announced in the 96 numbers.

As upon the occasions of former visits of Creator and his band, distinguished soloists will assist in the programs. Miss Lola MontiGorsey, soprano, will be the vocalist. Anna Pinto, Automobile races, horse races, high class vaudeville, the best ever assembled for the exhibition; spectacular fireworks, displays, a new and bigger midway, automobile show, the model home, a new feature with the latest in building construction and furnishing; dog show, child welfare demonstrations, pure food show, poultry, pets, government displays including live fish, wild animals and game birds; live stock, horse shows and scores of other factors will combine to attract old and young.

Reduced fares on railway and bus lines, ample parking space in the grounds for automobiles and the low admission fee of six tickets for one dollar if bought now are also attractive aspects of the Ottawa exhibition. The coupon tickets may be obtained at branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia and from various business places or will be mailed from the exhibition office.

The young man seated in the dentist's chair wore a marvelous shirt of striped silk and an even more wonderful check suit. He also wore the vacant stare that so often goes with both. "I'm afraid to give him gas", the dentist murmured to his assistant.

"Why?" asked the assistant. "Well," said the dentist, "how shall I know when he's unconscious?"

YOUR LIVER'S MAKING YOU FEEL OUT OF SORTS

Wake up your Liver Bile
—No Calomel needed
When you feel blue, depressed, sour on the world, that's your liver which isn't pouring its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. Digestion and elimination are being slowed up, food is accumulating and decaying inside you and making you feel wretched. Move bowels-movers like salts, oil, mineral water, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage, don't go far enough. You need a liver stimulant. Carter's Little Liver Pills is the best one. Safe. Purely vegetable. Sure. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c. at all druggists.

"Men are glad to love the one who joins them in their pleasures; but it is rare when they respect him."—Andre Maurois.

It was during the War. A patriotic woman, visiting a farm, noted a stalwart young man milking. "See here, young man! Why aren't you at the front?" she demanded.

"Well," said the milker, "I guess it's mostly because this cow ain't any different from any other!"

Wife: "Before we were married Jack, you said I was a queen."

Husband: "Yes—but I have lost my taste for a monarchical form of government."

Young Wife (anxiously)—"Do you think I've put too much salt in the soup, dear?"

Model Husband—"No, darling, not at all. There is, perhaps, not quite enough soup for the salt, that is all."

"Prima Terra Vista" -- Beautiful Cape Breton

By Estelle Jean Worfolk

Beautiful Cape Breton! How many men and women in other lands know much, if anything at all, about this far flung outpost of Empire?

Separated from the mainland of the Peninsula of Nova Scotia by a channel, fourteen miles long and from one to two and a quarter miles wide, lies this gem of beauty and peace.

Whilst the French revolution was brewing, the greatest fortress ever built in America reared its walls upon her shores. Here, romantic history was being weaved within a city, walled and bastioned, bristling with canon, and sheltering behind its barricades some 20,000 souls; all the while, Nations were fighting for the possession of the great North American Continent, and here also, the fate of those same nations was decided.

For half a century this Island was a menace and a challenge to the neighboring colonies of New England, yet, the first expeditionary force ever sent from the territory of the United States of America, fought in and for this Island, with Colonel William Pepperell and Britain's Naval Squadron, under Warren, in 1745.

About one hundred years earlier, Admiral Walker, with a fleet of forty-two sail, arrived late in September, nailed a large board to a tree, on which was painted in Latin, this inscription "Cape Breton for Queen Anne" and sailed right back to England, satisfied with his own deed of valor.

Turning backwards history's pages to the year 1594, we find that Cape Breton then called Baccalaos (so named on account of the abundance of cod in the surrounding waters) was known to the civilized world as a great trading centre, and was famous for its fisheries.

By letter patent this Island was given to Sieur de Monts by Henry IV, only to be recaptured by Captain Argall and eight years later King James I granted Sir William Alexander—Secretary of State for Scotland—a vast territory in Acadia (Nova Scotia) including the Island of Baccalaos, in consequence of which, the first English settlement was made in Cape Breton. In 1629 Lord Ochiltree, son of the Earl of Ar-ran, set sail with some sixty Scotch families. They entered a small harbour near Louisbourg and erected a fort. In September of that same year, the French returned and recaptured Cape Breton, taking Lord Ochiltree and his friends as hostages back to France. However, as before mentioned, Warren, with the help of the American Expeditionary Force routed the enemy, and on May 5th., 1745 the first Protestant preached in Cape Breton. He addressed a large audience and very appropriately took for the text of his sermon "Enter into His gates with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise."

But this little Island was not to be allowed to remain in peace: in 1848 it was again returned to France, but through the genius of William Pitt (afterwards Earl of Chatham) arrangements and plans were made for a second siege of Louisbourg, because Pitt, in his wisdom, saw that Louisbourg was the key to Canada, and on June 2nd., 1758, the British Fleet, under command of General Amherst, arrived at Gabarus Bay. There were fourteen line regiments under Brigadier Generals Whitmore, Lawrence, and the illustrious Wolfe.

The result of the second siege of Louisbourg is common knowledge. After the victory, eleven sets of French colours were sent to England, and by command of the King, deposited in Saint Paul's Cathedral, amidst national rejoicing. To-day, England holds undisputed sway in this Island, which is loyal to the core. In the Great World War one of her towns (New Waterford) sent more men per capita of the population than any other town in the British Empire. Cape Breton's Highland Regiments, Artillerymen, Nurses and other units of service were second to none in their devotion and courage in the hour of her Empire's need.

"Prima Terra Vista"—according to a map found in Germany in 1843, called the "Sebastian Cabot Mappemonde" dated 1544, Cape Breton was the first land sighted by him, and he is supposed to have landed 24th. June, 1497, where to-day a lordly mountain rises over 1000 feet above the sea, bearing his name.

Although one hundred and fifteen years have passed since Cape Breton ceased to be a self-governing colony, to become part of the Province of Nova Scotia (4 counties—Richmond, Victoria, Inverness and Cape Breton), the Highlanders and Acadians hold themselves peculiarly aloof from the mainland; carry themselves with a kingly dignity and remain true to the highest traditions of their forefathers.

Monuments have been erected, both by United States and Canada, marking the ancient battlefields where the bravest and best of Britain and France colored the salty soil with their blood. Few, if any, spots can boast more historical associations than Louisbourg, and the memory of friend and foe alike, Briton, Frank, New Englander, and the native Mic-Mac, is for all time preserved.

Cape Breton is a land of buried cities: "If you want real hair-raising thrill! go to New Waterford, Glace Bay, North Sydney or Sydney Mines, where a drop of a few seconds takes you down into one of the largest mining shafts in the world. Down there you are a thousand feet below terra firma and about two and a quarter miles beneath the Ocean's bed."

From this land of humble homes and small beginnings have emanated men of the highest degree of education and culture in the western world, men who have become College Professors, Statesmen, Doctors, Judges, Bankers, Preachers of note. I have in mind one little country school house in the vicinity of Baddeck, on the shores of that Naples of America—the Bras d'Or Lakes.

SCENE OF WAR DAYS RE-ENACTED

"Forty Men - Eight Horses."

The old favorite of war days in France, the side-door Pullman, made its appearance at the Canadian Corps Re-Union at Toronto recently, when the Canadian National Railways
"Vimy Ridge" Branch of the Legion arrived in true veteran style from Montreal. Many willing hands wrote the familiar quirks and quips in chalk all over the car and the painter added the immortal inscription in white paint.

Although only an aged box car, it drew into Exhibition Park in true style, behind the biggest locomotive in the British Empire—103 feet of engine and 45 feet of box car; but the 40 men were all there, including Major Alistair Fraser, M.C. and Vice-President of Traffic for the National System, down to the engine wiper at the Point St. Charles Shops. There were no rank or office in the group, just all ex-service men in a jubilant mood, exchanging old experiences and singing old songs, not forgetting that popular ballad, "They Say There's Rum in My Coffee."

Lieut. W. Self and Captain Fred Webster, himself a Canadian National man, members of the general re-union committee, welcomed the "Vimy Ridge" branch to the skirl of the veteran members of the Irish Regiment Pipe Band, who turned out to see again this replica of war-time France.
Major Fraser carried with him an official telegram from the Quebec Provincial Command expressing its appreciation of the arrangements made by the railways for bringing the Quebec Legion members to the Toronto celebration.

DEVELOPING LEADERSHIP IN BOYS

That leadership ability was a "hidden virtue" in some boys, and that Boy Scouting was a most effective way of developing it, was the declaration of Lord Hampton, before a gathering of English public school boys.

As a public service project
Rover Scouts of Pembroke, Ont., have made a beauty spot of a vacant lot on a prominent street corner. They levelled the ground and planted grass and flowers, and will maintain the plot throughout the summer.

"A Bible and a newspaper in every house; a good school in every district—all studied and appreciated as they merit—are the principal support of virtue, morality, and civil liberty."

OBSERVATIONS IN THE MARITIMES

Observations during a recent visit to New Brunswick revealed undoubted signs of business improvement. Timber operations, which have been of prime importance in Maritime development, show the grim, abandoned evidence of depression. But, while the lumber market is slow to revive, there is a marked increase in the shipment of pulpwood. Wayside scenes substantiate the report that peeling and cutting of pulp in New Brunswick will exceed last year's figures by one quarter, while contracts with France, a new customer for this Canadian product, will doubtless react with profit to Maritime lumbermen.

Drought has reduced the farmer's hay crop in certain sections, and high prices are forecast. It is doubtless that the potato output will also show ill effects of the dry summer.

Speculators on New Brunswick elections are undecided as to the date, whether this year or next, but probabilities of a landslide change in government seem generally agreed upon.

EDITORS WILL CELEBRATE

The annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, at which representatives of Lachute Watchman are now in attendance, will include an attractive program on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

Montreal today is the rendez-vous of what we fondly consider a most representative body of citizens—sturdy right-thinking Canadians such as constitute the towns and smaller cities of this country—cities forming the backbone of municipal and industrial Canada.

The weekly newspapers suffer much criticism by comparison with their daily contemporaries. They feature such items of news as city readers might consider gossip. They revel in the "small town stuff" and community affairs of small relative importance. But critics of the home-town weekly have no capacity to realize how nations emerge from mere communities; how solid, self-reliant settlements have eased a formidable burden of poverty and distress; how celebrities and leaders have risen out of rural districts, drilled in the elements of integrity by just this "small town stuff" which they scorn in the columns of the weekly newspaper. Nor do they credit the weekly pages with their absence of yellow journalism—that sensational clap-trap which inspires more crime than gang movies at their worst.

The weeklies of Canada fill an important role in our national life. Their value and influence in the moulding of public opinion are recognized by those whose business entails the finest points of publicity. The public spirit of the country editor is similarly acknowledged, to an extent which disarms the attacks of ill-advised critics.

—For once, at least, the editors are set for a good time. Aside from the more serious deliberations of the weekly newspapermen in Montreal, a generous program of entertainment has been prepared. This afternoon, the delegates will be guests at a garden party at "My Mother's Home", Dorchester and Fort streets, by Lord Atholstan, while a civic welcome by Mayor Houde, a luncheon address by Premier Taschereau and the annual ball are other features. On the third day of the great gathering a trip will be taken down the St. Lawrence on the C.S.L. Steamer Quebec.

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, Aug. 14.—The Stevens' pamphlet has monopolized conversation at Ottawa for a week now, and the end is not yet. It will surprise all the wisecracks on Parliament Hill if more sensational developments do not arise out of it. Now that the text has been made available to at least a considerable section of the reading public, the Stevens pamphlet turns out to be a powerful if fool-hardy document—a speech which it took guts to make an even more audacity to issue to the extent of several thousand copies.

Depends on Viewpoint

What you think of the Stevens' speech depends almost entirely on the way you view it. I have read it over very carefully, and have considered the conflicting views, and my mind is quite open on the subject. For the benefit of readers who may not have been able to go into the subject, here is a brief presentation of the several points of view.

First, there is the viewpoint of Mr. Bennett, the Financial Post, the Winnipeg Free Press, and of the firms named, who happen—strange fellowship for the moment—to have the same attitude. They are thinking of the injustice of the chairman of a royal commission, engaged in getting at the truth in regard to certain grave accusations, coming out in the middle of the investigation with a forthright indictment of certain firms and persons. It is not quite so bad as though a judge, during the adjournment of a criminal case, should issue a pamphlet in which he called the accused a downright scoundrel—but it smacks just a little of the same sort of thing. If the Stevens inquiry is a real trial, under British rules of fair play, how can Mr. Stevens now go back and sit impartially as chairman of the inquiry. Shouldn't he be the crown prosecutor?

The Popular View

So much for the judicial view. The man on the street, especially the underdog and unfortunate householder, the victim of the depression, the victim of hapless speculations or of betrayed investments, won't pay so much attention to that. He will read Mr. Stevens' speech as a powerful human document—a stirring indictment of exploitation and manipulation, a fighting plea for the welfare of the farmer and the working man.

To me the most stirring and inspiring passage in the speech is that in which he reminds all and sundry that this country is built up on two indispensable bases: the farmer, and the working man. If they do not prosper, the country may get along for a while, but it cannot prosper long. It is a fine thing for a prominent Conservative leader to be stressing such an important truth. Indeed, the reader is inclined to feel that in Stevens there may be the makings of a Rooseveltian leader some day: a man who would give the Canadian 'forgotten man' a Canadian 'new deal'.

Sincerely Indignant.

The speech is permeated with a kind of righteous indignation which led the Minister of Trade and Commerce to indiscretions. From the political sense it seems as though he was prepared to "Live Dangerously." He says he will never rest until these inequities, these exploitations and manipulations, are righted. That is a splendid sentiment. We have had similar messages from J. S. Woodsworth, but there is a greater momentary hope from the present one because it comes from a leading minister of the government of the day.

Abuses of Capitalism.

What annoys Mr. Stevens most is the watering of stock, the defrauding of the investor by merger and amalgamation, the building up of capital structures so costly to maintain that wages have to be slashed and consumer costs have to be increased in order to keep the bond interest paid. He says there are three ways out: dictatorship which continues to make the people swallow these injustices, revolution, and reform. For his part, he wants the system reformed from within, and he calls fervidly on the Conservative party to adopt a 'reform' attitude towards Canada's problems.

There you have the substance of the Stevens pamphlet. I don't think there is any serious rift between Stevens and Bennett, nor do I think that the former is likely to leave the cabinet, set up an insurgent wing of the party, make a bid for the leadership. But I would say that the Stevens utterance throws down a challenge which cannot be lightly forgotten.

Congratulation

The Watchman takes pleasure in congratulating Mrs. John Mackie, who on Wednesday, 15th. inst. attained her 91st birthday. Apart from her achievement of carrying over four score years and ten with health and equanimity, Mrs. Mackie is highly esteemed as a link with the early days of this community, and as one who has taken active part in its progress and cultural development. We trust she may be spared many years yet, to look up upon the changing scenes of this locality.

The day was one of happy greetings, Mrs. Mackie being surrounded by her children and grandchildren, also receiving many visitors, to whom afternoon tea was served at the fine old Mackie residence.

all Charter members and be later framed for hanging in the future Historical Museum. To this end all present were invited to enroll themselves as such by attaching their signatures to the blanks provided and payment of their annual fee. Dr. Abbott moved, seconded by Mr. Kuhring, that enrolment of Charter Members should remain open for three months.

Mr. A. C. Kains spoke at some length upon the duty devolving upon all descendants of the pioneer settlers or early colonial residents of Argenteuil who become members of this Society, to deposit in its Archives a record as complete as they can make it of their family and county history and other data of importance within their knowledge. He further called the attention of the meeting to the fact that a Fund for a Memorial to the late Sir J. J. C. Abbott, to take the form of a panel or bas-relief plaque, in the Church erected in the Parish of St. Andrews by his father the Rev. Joseph Abbott, had been initiated some years ago by the Rev. Mr. Howard, its then Rector, with the collaboration of Dr. Maude E. Abbott, (a descendant of the Rev. William Abbott, brother of Joseph), and urged that the support of this project should be the first and most immediate concern of this Society.

It was explained that the Memorial Fund already under way, and which had been begun some fifteen years ago had received at that time generous subscriptions from eminent persons now deceased, including the late Dr. R. B. Angus, Lady Mount-Stephen, Lady Tait and Mr. Smeaton White, as well as the F. E. Meredith Co., Mr. E. W. Beatty and other leading citizens who are still with us. That within the last few weeks it had been brought to the personal attention of our own Prime Minister, the Hon. R. B. Bennett, who had expressed his interest in and warm approval of the undertaking, and had just forwarded his own cheque for a substantial personal contribution. In view of the fact that the late Sir John Abbott was in his lifetime known and beloved from end to end of this, his native County of Argenteuil, whose Representative he was for over a quarter of a century, and in which he stood as the personal friend of all its inhabitants, and one whose great legal powers were ever at their disposal both of his political opponents as well as his supporters within its bounds—it would seem peculiarly fitting if the first official act of this Society might be a motion in support of this Memorial.

It was thereupon moved by Mr. Kains, seconded by Dr. Cushing, and Resolved: That this Society give its sympathetic support and assistance to the projected memorial to the late Sir J. J. C. Abbott and this especially for the reason that Argenteuil, in thus honouring her greatest son, will best do honour to herself. Carried unanimously.

Mrs. Kuhring urged upon the membership the necessity of keeping the interest and work of the Society alive by each preparing some suitable communication for its annual meeting, as well as by collecting material for a Loan Exhibition of Archives and early possessions, which it was hoped might be arranged for at no very distant date, and then called upon the incoming President for his remarks.

Dr. B. N. Wales spoke of the pleasure it gave him to see here inaugurated a Society which it had long been his cherished wish should materialize, and thanked the membership for the honour it had conferred upon him.

Votes of thanks were passed to Mrs. Kuhring for the splendid work she had done in the organization of this meeting, in drafting the Constitution, and in preparing the way for Incorporation; and to Miss L. T. Wales for her efficient help. The enrolment to date is most encouraging, including already 33 members.

MONEY NOT THE ONLY CONSIDERATION

A good many weekly news papers come to my desk and as I am interested in anything pertaining to education I frequently read the reports of the school board meetings. Lately they have been occupied in engaging teachers. I have been struck with the number of times that the board has engaged the applicant at the lowest salary. Money has been the yard-stick most frequently used. One town had the principal pick out the several most suitable (that seems to be a sensible procedure because the principal should know what is required and will be most anxious to get the best), and the Board after looking over the several applications chose the one asking the highest salary as they felt he had the desired qualifications and would be worth the extra money. What a pity that is not more often. School boards are anxious to reduce expenditures and the first thing they usually do is reduce the teacher's salaries—that reduction is a good talking point as it is most easily seen. It is a mistake to draw the line too tightly, as teachers are too important and if we want to get the desirable persons, particularly the men, to go into the teaching profession we must be prepared to pay them a reasonable salary. The difference between a poor teacher and a first class one may be only a few hundred dollars and it would not add one mill to each tax bill. I forgot to say that the school board who engaged the best teacher, replaced the cuts that were given their teachers in the harder times. The number of applications for each position vacant has made the choosing of teachers a difficult and trying task; but trustees should remember that although money is important it is not the only consideration.

THE CONCEITED PERSON

I have come to the conclusion that a conceited person is apt to be a happy person. They are so thoroughly satisfied with themselves and their possessions. So many set their goal so far beyond their accomplishments that they can seldom be satisfied. Of course the intense satisfaction that they feel when they occasionally do what they dream about may make up for the more general steady satisfaction of the conceited. There are some people who lack conceit in themselves and yet are well satisfied with their possessions. If it is theirs it is good. That really must be a very pleasant way to feel. But after all, possessions have very little to do with happiness.

PROTECT THE BABIES' EYES

How would you like to have to lie on your back and look up at the glaring hot sun with no shade for your eyes? It would not be very comfortable, yet that is what so many babies have to do. When His Majesty the Baby is in his royal carriage, the top should be adjusted so that there is some shade for his eyes.

QUICK PICNICS

Picnics B. C. (before cars) used to take hours of preparation, when piles of sandwiches had to be made. Now, a sandwich picnic is just as good as it ever was but there are so many easier things to do. Pack your food and make your preparations while picnicking, it seems much less work and besides it is not nearly as hard to get help as every one is hungry enough to hurry along the food. Take along the end of the roast or if you haven't a roast you can always buy some cooked ham or even a can of corned beef. Canned sea foods are grand for a picnic. Salmon, shrimp, lobster, tuna or sardines all come in cans and all you need to do is to take along your handy can-opener and some lettuce, tomatoes and cucumber and in a jiffy your meal is ready. Buy some rolls and save the work of cutting bread and butter. Dressed spare-ribs are a good picnic meat. Have you ever tried taking along a hot dish well wrapped in newspapers? It will stay hot for a surprisingly long time if well wrapped. Irish Stew, baked beans, spaghetti macaroni and even boiled corn may be used for a picnic. One of the best picnics I have ever had was the very simplest. A car full of women went to the lake, and on the way we bought fish and chips which were well wrapped up in newspapers, rolls and some fruit. And coffee from a vacuum bottle completed the meal. People take too much food to a picnic, particularly too much dessert as the savouries taste better than the sweets in the open air. Just fruit makes an ideal dessert.

ORANGE BREAD

3 cups flour
1 egg
1 cup sugar
2 small or 1 large orange
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
Milk

Squeeze the oranges and cut the rind as for marmalades but do not put through the chopper. Add 1/4 cup of sugar and 1/4 cup of water to the orange and boil for ten minutes. Let cool. Sift the flour, salt and baking powder. Add the beaten egg and the orange mixture and enough milk to mix into a fairly soft dough. Put in a buttered loaf pan and let raise an hour. Bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees for 1 hour.

SOUR CREAM DRESSING

1/2 cup thick sour cream
1/2 teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon salt
Speck of pepper
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar
Mix all ingredients, beat until thick. Chill.

CUCUMBER SALAD

Pare cucumber, cut in quarters lengthwise, remove seeds and dice. Add a finely chopped onion and mix with salad dressing just before serving.

CONDUCTOR RETRIEVES PASSENGER'S LOST HAT

A twelve-dollar Panama hat, plus a breeze, plus an open window in a speeding train adds up to disaster—to the hat. A willing train conductor, plus efficient telegraph service, plus one handcar and two obliging section men, spells recovery. It did in the case of a hat whose owner placed it on the rack in a Canadian National Railway coach as his train was leaving St. Hyacinthe, P. Q. recently. To his chagrin, the passenger glanced upward in time to see the hat sail out of the coach window. Conductor Arthur Boucher was on the job. At Ste. Madeleine he spoke to the section crew. The section crew boarded their trusty handcar and "pumped" two miles down the track. At St. Bruno Conductor Boucher handed the passenger a telegram: "Hat recovered. Where will we send it?"

"And that," said Conductor Boucher, as he showed the telegram to his passenger, "is Canadian National Railway service."

"THE POTATO—IN PERSONAL EXPERIENCE"

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Mr. Editor:

I read with interest Dr. H. Wright's letter in your last issue on Potatoes, and the difficulty experienced in persuading people to include them as an article of diet, and the extent to which they have now become an agricultural and commercial element, particularly in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. Being reared on a farm, and more or less a farmer all my life on farms where potatoes were one of the chief crops, I thought it might be in order to make a few remarks about the culture of them, as I have seen it in the different parts of Canada and the United States.

My earliest recollection of potatoes was the first year the potato bug, then known as the Colorado Bettle, made its appearance in Ontario, on the shores of Lake Erie. My father that year had planted about four acres of potatoes, and Mr. Potato Bug made his appearance not exactly unannounced for he had been steadily coming eastward for some time and folk were somewhat prepared for him—though they did not anticipate quite what he was going to mean, both then and in later years. Paris Green and London Purple were to be had in plenty at $1.50 per lb., and they seemed to do the trick all right for a day or until the rain came, then the preparation had to be applied again—at $1.50 a lb. Times were about as hard as they are now, and money was even more scarce, so this expense was keenly felt; but it filled the bill, and with an ordinary amount of labor there was a good crop (I would say about 250 bushels to the acre) and they sold off the field at 35 cts. a bag. The dealers came with their own wagons and took them away, and they netted a pretty fair profit. When the labor of cultivation, Paris Green and London Purple was paid for, there was nearly $200.00 to the good. These were an old fashioned potato called the Peach Blow, not then a potato of high quality, but a very pretty potato and a good cropper. In preparation for planting a good sized potato was cut lengthwise into four quarters, and a half of a potato was put in a hill three feet apart each way, planted on top of a very thick clover sod which had been turned under the previous fall, well manured in the spring, cultivated, drilled, and then carefully planted. When the potatoes were coming through the ground they were harrowed and cross-harrowed three or four days between each of the harrowings, and in a week or ten days they had grown up sufficiently to permit their first cultivating, and to the best of my knowledge the field of potatoes never saw a hoe from the day of planting till the digging. That is over fifty years ago, and up till the present time I have never seen but one better tilled or cleaner field of potatoes, and that was at the farm of Mr. T. B. Terry, champion potato grower of the State of Ohio. I had for many years been a reader of an agricultural paper called the Country Gentleman published by Messrs. Luther Tucker & Son, and had frequently read his letters on successful potato growing. Returning home one spring from the lumber camps, in the news rack of a hotel where I was staying I picked up a copy of this magazine and my eye fell on a letter by T. B. Terry on potato growing; not being very far from there I resolved to call that way and verify Mr.

Greenland Likened to Immense Bowl of Ice

Important yet not unexpected was the report of the German scientist, Doctor Sorge, and his associates that Greenland is like a great bowl filled with ice 8,550 feet deep at the places where its depth was measured. Measurement was made possible by a method somewhat resembling the method of sounding the ocean's depth by timing an echo. On the ice cap, however, little earthquakes were created by explosions, and the reflection of the seismic waves was measured. So far as they go the results obtained bear out the theory of the eminent geologist in Greenland. According to his theory the continents are afloat on a semi-liquid layer and are slowly drifting—the map showing how America and Africa have drifted apart. The German expedition was undertaken specially to test the theory that Greenland, long weighted down by ice, is gradually rising as the ice melts.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Terry's tales about five and six hundred bushels of potatoes to the acre. So next morning I took the train out to his farm and, arriving there I asked for Mr. Terry and explained that I was looking for a job, also that I was a reader of his letters on potato growing and was much interested in them. It took a little while to get him interested, but finally we struck a deal when I had demonstrated my capabilities with a team of horses, that I was a passable milker, and a fairly handy man about a farm.

"Prima Terra Vista"

From this humble seat of learning — a small frame building, with six small windows, crude wooden benches and an even cruder wood stove — went forth twenty boys and as many girls. Twelve of these boys became outstanding preachers of the Gospel, one a Lieut. Governor, one a Judge. Two doctors and the remaining four famous professors in the finest colleges across the Border. The girls have been equally successful. This story might be repeated again and again, for thousands of Cape Breton people are filling honourable positions — they are to be found in every corner of the world today.

Mrs. Herridge, wife of the Ambassador to the United States, and sister of Canada's Prime Minister, in addressing the Maritime Women's Club at Montreal, recently, expressed her wonder that there were any Maritimers left at home, because wherever she had travelled, she had met large groups of Maritimers, all engaged in some lofty calling, but there are a goodly number still left in Cape Breton, and I can conceive of no greater stimulant than to leave worry behind and spend a holiday amongst these fine descendants of Highland Clans. Here, you will find a people more highland than in the highlands of Scotland. Here, a country whose God is the Lord. Could one ever forget such an inspiring sight as a Sacrament on the hillside? Many of the older folk know no other language than Gaelic. The music of their festivals is a real delight.

Cape Breton abounds in sport. You can catch any fish from a tiny smelt to a monstrous tuna. A day's battle off the banks with a courageous swordfish is worth any man's time and energy. Her brooks abound in salmon—the most sportsmanlike of all fish; her woods teem with game of every description. Cape Breton has truly been called the "Sportsman's Paradise."

If you enjoy fine scenery, come to Cape Breton! Nowhere in the world can you get such a variety. Study the aerial architecture of the hills—Frane's chimney 1498 feet: view Lakes O'Law in their uncanny reproduction of Kilarney, where the verdant herbage seems to quiver into flame on its banks; roam through the flower decked fields that follow the lakes' course: visit the Loch Lomond of America, duplicated in lake after lake of superb beauty: or, see the Margaree, the moorland loveliness of which, to many, surpasses anything on earth: Framboise with her endless allurements and Seal Rocks.

So much beauty crammed into so small a space, yet not cramped either! Inland seas of salt water, land-locked waterways, flowing inland seventy miles: rocky cliffs, unbosomed to the lash of Ocean's waves, rivers, the beauty of which makes you catch your breath in wonder, and find a sudden need for your handkerchief to wipe your tear-dimmed eyes: lordly mountains, 'Smoky', 'Sugar Loaf', 'Hunters', 'Crowdis', 'Mount Cabot': Capes, rising in grandeur from the sea, their green skirted slopes studded with great trees, sentinels of the forest, robed in Imperial colours as they stand amidst their brethren of the hills, guarding the kingdom of beauty about and below, and over all the marvelous cloud effects.

Sunsets! Only a Divine Artist could paint a Cape Breton sunset; for another to attempt to do so would be sacrilege. Sky and sea appear like a half-opened shell of mother-of-pearl; every shade of rose and purple, yellow and grey and the like predominating, with sometimes a sunset of pure gold, wherein the Divine Artist paints the Heavens with yellow fire and the whole western sky resembles the corona of an eclipse. One could not forget a Cape Breton sunset.

Sunrise: No words can adequately describe the sunrise. In some parts there is what is called the twin dawn—a beautiful crimson and gold streaks the East and the earth is suddenly lit up with a mellow radiance, the next moment to be plunged in darkness, a darkness that is followed by the real dawn of unspeakable splendour.

Legend! If you have a liking for the legend—surely here your joy will be full. Tales! Aye, tales of gallantry, jealousies, tender love episodes, heart-burnings, conspicuous bravery, and the weird superstition that persists in the hills about the "Little People" the Faeries.

This, and much more could be written about Cape Breton, but you needs must come and see for yourself, for the half can never be told.

Post Office Aids to Retail Merchants

Retail merchants of Canada have every reason to be grateful to the Post Office Department for its many aids to business, particularly in the field of developing sales through advertising by mail.

For many years retailers felt that mail order houses had a monopoly of mail selling and that the Post Office was a mere adjunct to their sales force. The mail order houses used their own private facilities to compile mailing lists; they had the opportunity of sending out advertising circulars to any point in the country at the same rate as if mailed for local delivery and then, too, owing to the confidence created by their wide-spread advertising campaign persons dealing with them were ready and willing to send money in advance for goods ordered from catalogues.

Mailing lists were jealously guarded by these firms and the small retailer who wished to advertise by mail had to depend on lists obtained from private firms, which lists were too often carelessly compiled and charged for at a high rate per name. This situation was radically changed, however, when the Post Office made use of its vast organization to compile and issue Rural Directories containing the names and occupations of householders in the various towns and villages and on the many rural routes throughout the Dominion. These rural directories are arranged according to Electoral Districts and as they are sold at the very low price of $1.25 each, are already in great demand among alert retailers who realize the advantages to be gained by circularizing persons in the nearby districts. It is an open secret that the large mail order houses looked with disfavor on this Post Office activity for it enables any merchant to compile his own mailing list at small cost.

Another aid to business is the 1/2c rate allowed on unaddressed circulars mailed for local delivery whereas circulars mailed from outside points must be paid at the 1c rate. Here the Post Office grants the local merchants 100% protection against his mail order competitor.

The C.O.D. Service gives the retailer a further chance to develop business which otherwise would be lost to him. Many persons residing in rural districts have been in the habit of sending cash with an order to a mail order house and have hesitated to send cash in advance to the merchant of a nearby town as, lacking previous dealings with him, they were timid about taking what appeared to be a risk of losing their money. The Post Office Department C.O.D. Service changes all this, however, as no payment had to be made in advance but instead only on delivery of the order. The wise merchant now advertises that he will ship goods Post Office C.O.D. on request.

In this connection it is interesting to note that repair firms have made a very considerable use of the Post Office C.O.D. Service as through it they avoid the annoyance of small charge accounts or the inconvenience of having to notify out-of-town customers of exact charges before delivery of goods. The customer too benefits as he does not have to estimate the amount of charges or wait extra days while the question of payment is settled.

In the short space at our disposal it is impossible to elaborate on the many other ways in which the Post Office assists retailers but before leaving this subject we must recall that on parcel post rates the Post Office Department has greatly favored the local merchant. Imagine being able to send goods to persons on rural routes or to any other point within a radius of twenty miles for about 2c per pound, whereas the outside concern shipping goods to your community has to pay rates two and three times as high. The protection in this case is practically 150%. The country community should be looked on as a real opportunity for developing retail trade and a persistent attempt made to capture the business going to the big centres. The local merchant with the opportunities for advertising by mail, the low parcel post rates and the C.O.D. Service together with his nearness to the market has an unique advantage over the larger competitor and should not let timidity or indolence deter him from increasing his business in this way. Remember even when times are bad people must live—eat—buy clothes and other necessities.

Truly retailers should take advantage of the many ways afforded them by the Post Office Department to build business.

"WAS TAKING EVERY KIND OF DRUG FOR CONSTIPATION"

Then ALL-BRAN Brought Relief

Read this very enthusiastic letter:

"I am 34 years old and as far back in my life I have been constipated. I was so bad that I had one bowel movement every five or six days. I was taking every kind of drug known for constipation."

"Now for the last two months I have been eating a little ALL-BRAN night and morning and I have at least two to three bowel movements each day."—Mr. Frank Piratsky (address furnished upon request).

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN is also a fine source of iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, this clears out the intestinal wastes.

Isn't this safer than taking harmful patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Severe cases with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

You'll enjoy eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream—sugar or honey or fresh fruits added. Or, to use in cooking.

In the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

PRIZE WINNING CATTLE LOST IN FIRE

Herve Husereau, Oka, Annual Exhibitor at Lachute

Five prize winning cows were burned to death, together with a year-old bull, in a disastrous blaze which razed the two-storey barn and stable of Herve Husereau, of Oka, on Tuesday. The fire, believed to have been caused by the blower of a threshing machine in operation, broke out at three o'clock in the afternoon and the buildings were reduced to ruins. The damage is estimated at $10,000, only partly covered by insurance.

The valuable cattle are described as first and second prize winners at Ormstown and no doubt include some of Mr. Husereau's exhibits at the last Lachute Fair, where he has won the reputation of a strong competitor in the cattle classes.

TENNIS CLUB VISITS LAVAL-SUR-LE-LAC

The Tennis Section of the Lachute Golf and Tennis Club were the guests of the Laval-sur-le-Lac Tennis Club last week-end. The match, played on their beautiful and well illuminated courts, was keenly fought and neither clubs were certain of the victory until the last and final point was played. The result was 3 to 2 in favor of Lachute.

Throughout the match the spectators showed fine sportsmanship by applauding both sides impartially.

After the match a reception was tendered to the Lachute Club at the cosy summer resort of Mr. R. A. Girard.

Following are the results :

Doubles :

J. Girard, M. Laverdure, (Laval sur le Lac) won against K. Pitcairn, R. Rinfret, 7-5, 6-1.

M. Pinsonnault and Desgrois lost to F. Legault, R. Rinfret, 5-7, 6-4.

M. Pinsonnault lost to F. Legault 7-9, 6-1, 6-0.

M. Lemieux lost to J. Lafleur 1-6, 4-6.

J. Girard won against K. Pitcairn 9-7, 6-2.

BROWNSBURG LOST OLD AND RESPECTED RESIDENT

Death of Mrs. John Graves

On Tuesday, August 14, there passed away another of the old residents in the person of Mrs. John Graves, who had resided since 1891, in the village of Brownsburg, where she was well-known and respected. For many months she had been in failing health and since early spring confined to her room, but ever retaining the cheerful disposition which had endeared her to a large circle of relatives and friends. She bore patiently the increasing weakness of her age and infirmities, and the end, which came peacefully at the close of a summer's day, found her ready for "the rest that remaineth" in the reward of a long and eminently useful life.

Her maiden name was Isabella Tatchell, born in the year 1852 at Chatham, Que. She was the eldest of five children, her parents coming to Canada from the Old Land, the father from England, the mother from Scotland. Two of the family yet survive, a sister in Neville, Sask., and a brother, Henry, who has resided for many years in Brownsburg. At the youthful age of sixteen she was married to her late husband, John Graves, Feb. 17, 1868, by the Rev. Jabez B. Keough, a then

CUSHING RESIDENT RELATED TO CELEBRITIES

Had Cherished Association with Figures in County History.

Mr. George Bradford, who although ninety years of age on August fifth, still retains great interest in historical and contemporary affairs, has added his name for membership of the recently formed Historical Society in this County. Mr. Bradford is a great-grandson of the Rev. Richard Bradford, who formed the first Anglican Church in St. Andrews East, and is also a cousin of the late Sir John Abbott.

Mr. Bradford has lived the greater part of his life in this vicinity as farmer, mill-owner, and also as lockmaster at Greece's Point, except for some years spent in Ottawa when a young man. He was the first settler in the Britannia section of Ottawa, a street in that part being called Bradford Street, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Bradford. Mrs. Bradford still shares with him the joys and sorrows of this world, and their friends wish them still many more years of happiness together.

APPROACHING SCHOOL TERM

Thoughts on Welfare of Pupils

At this season of the year our thoughts naturally turn to the opening of school.

Mothers have made, and made-over, garments for their boys and girls, and have them ready, as far as dress is concerned, for another term. If they are wise they have also consulted the dentist and the oculist as to their children's oral and optical preparedness.

Let us direct our thoughts further in this channel. Are our schools ready for the children?

How many mothers actually go to the school where John and Mary are to spend the next nine or ten months of their lives and look it over to see if it is a proper place either from the standpoint of sanitation, health or beauty?

Are the blackboards properly placed, so that glare is avoided and the windows so arranged as to give the best light? Many men and women go through their lives suffering from eyestrain, contracted at school, which might easily have been avoided had someone with knowledge and interest looked into those important matters.

As citizens of the Province of Quebec let us make it our interest and our duty to see that our schools are properly arranged.

Methodist Minister at Grenville. Together they settled on a farm at Grenville, which still remains in the Graves name, and to them were born 6 boys and 7 girls. Of this large family the surviving members are—Mrs. B. P. Reynolds, Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. Humphries, Jericho, L. I.; Mrs. Sarah A. Haskell, Newton, Mass.; Mrs. C. Stewart, Brownsburg; Alfred, Mount Maple; Hiram, Hamilton, Ont.; James, Windsor; and Herbie of Brownsburg. Besides this immediate family she is survived by 18 grandchildren and 23 great-grandchildren. Also, in addition to this, her own family of 13, she brought up and sent to school 6 others, members of other families nearly related.

While originally Methodist, she early joined the Baptist Church, and on coming to Brownsburg in 1891 she attended the old stone church at

AUTO AND STREET-CAR COLLISION IN MONTREAL

Lachute Residents Rushed to Hospital

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Lemay of this town were taken to Notre Dame Hospital last Wednesday after an unfortunate accident, in which Mr. Lemay's auto was struck by a street car, at the corner of Papineau Avenue and Boulevard St. Joseph. The impact caught the front of the machine, and Mrs. Lemay received a bad cut on the knee. Mr. Lemay was also suffering from shock.

Accompanying them in the car were Madame Jolicoeur and Madame Bigras, also of Lachute, who escaped without any serious injury. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lemay returned home after a few days; the latter, although still confined to her home, is now making satisfactory recovery.

BINDING GRAIN, FARMER HAD PAINFUL ACCIDENT

Chas. Lummis Making Good Recovery

Charles Lummis, a well-known farmer of the North River district and brother of Rev. Lummis of Morin Heights, met with a painful accident while cutting grain on his farm at 5.30 p.m. last Thursday.

Mr. Lummis was driving his binder in the field, with the lines attached to the stump of his hand, which was amputated in a somewhat similar accident several years ago. A jerk in the machine threw him from his seat and he toppled over the grain platform to the rear of the binder. He was unable to loosen the reins from his arm, and the horses backed up as the lines tightened, with the driver underneath the machinery. His escape from death is considered miraculous. His injuries were severe, however, his side being crushed and bruised, ribs fractured and suffering injuries of an internal nature. Dr. Christie was summoned immediately from Lachute, and gave medical assistance. Friends and neighbors of Mr. Lummis, who has met with a series of misfortunes in his recent years at North River, are pleased to learn he is making good progress in recovery.

MARRIAGE

Armstrong - Hume

The marriage of Janet Isabel Grace, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. D. Hume, to Mr. Thos. Armstrong, of Montreal, son of the late Mr. Thos. Armstrong of Frankford, Ireland, took place quietly, at St. Luke United Church, Notre Dame de Grace, on Wednesday afternoon Aug. 15th, at six o'clock.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was unattended. The Rev. B. B. Brown, of Wesley United Church, officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong left later, by boat, for Quebec and Murray Bay, and on their return will reside in Montreal.

The fire engine was called out Monday evening to a minor outbreak at Desjardins' lunch car on Main Street. A short circuit in the electric wiring had ignited the front portion of the car, but the flames had already been extinguished when firefighters arrived on the scene.

The Miller Building on Main Street has been rented by Mr. F. J. Leblanc of Brownsburg, district agent for La Feronerie de l'Islet, Ltée. The showroom is attractively filled with a modern array of kitchen ranges and stoves.

EXHUMED BODY OF LATE CONSTABLE

Action Follows Disquieting Rumors

On instruction from the Attorney General's department, the body of the late Lionel Gagne, former constable of this town, was exhumed last Tuesday at the burial ground in St. Michel. This action follows certain ugly rumors circulated in the vicinity, in connection with the constable's sudden death on May 14th. It is recalled that Constable Gagne succumbed to an acute attack of indigestion at his home here, after having eaten his supper that evening.

Dr. J. H. Mason, district coroner, was instructed to make preparation for an autopsy. Mr. Germain Filion, clerk of this town, and present constable Brunelle, were accordingly authorized to have the remains disinterred. Dr. Roussel, assistant to Dr. Rosario Fontaine, provincial medico-legal expert, arrived on Tuesday, and accompanied by Dr. Mason at the St. Michel school house, removed portions of the viscera for examination. Results of the examination will not be known here for a week or so.

Provincial Constable Robert was also on hand, and the event aroused considerable excitement in the little community of St. Michel. The body was afterwards restored to the grave in the local burial ground.

THEY BURIED HIS YOUTH !

Young Citizen is Subject of Unusual Ceremony

The obsequies of Laurent Lamarche, bachelor, whose marriage this week will terminate his single estate, were observed with fitting ceremony last Saturday by his young friends in Lachute.

Mr. Fernando Lamarche, uncle of the bridegroom elect, staged a party in his honor. In spite of its funeral aspects, the affair was not so utterly mournful as one might have concluded from the cortege witnessed on Main Street at a late hour last Saturday.

Following the band concert in the Memorial Park, Laurent Lamarche, in silk hat and black attire, was placed tenderly in the bier, which, mounted in an express wagon behind a decrepit white steed, was escorted the length of Main Street. The coffin was decorated with cucumber vines, and the mourners carried lighted torches, creating a scene not readily comprehended among the passers-by. The procession came west down Foundry Street to McArthur's Hall, where the remains of Laurent Lamarche, bachelor, were awaited by his fellow members of the brass band, who serenaded him in a tune not too pathetic.

Ceremonies following in the hall were more jubilant than tearful. A large gathering were on hand; speeches and felicitations were offered, Mr. Lamarche receiving also the presentation of a purse from his circle of friends. Dancing followed, and a pleasant social time was enjoyed.

The marriage of Mr. Laurent Lamarche and Miss Evette Desjardins will take place on Saturday morning next.

The Lamarche Creamery truck, proceeding east toward St. Hermas, came to grief last Saturday on the Montreal highway. An axle broke and the truck slid into the ditch. Fortunately, nobody was injured. The same yellow truck narrowly escaped disaster, when it was extricated from the recent fire at Leger's Garage. This familiar vehicle seems destined to a checkered career of late.

MOLSON BAND CONCERTS FINISHED SATURDAY

The series of concerts by Lachute Brass Band, sponsored this summer by the Molsons Breweries, terminated with Saturday evening's performance in the Memorial Park.

These band concerts have been greatly appreciated by our townspeople, not alone for the music they have rendered and marked progress in the quality of their performance, but for the added prestige of a community having its own civic band for public appearances.

Mr. Guenette, conductor, is to be congratulated on the outcome of his patient efforts to organize and rehearse this band which is now a distinct part of, and a credit, to the town. Appreciation is also due to the Molson Breweries, who have made possible the series of Saturday night concerts just concluded.

GRENVILLE CONFERENCE OF S.S. TEACHERS

Addressed by Rev. W. J. Bradbury

A conference for Sunday School teachers of the parish and surrounding district was held in Grenville on Monday night. After a buffet supper had been served, Rev. W. J. Bradbury, of the General Board of Religious Education, addressed the gathering.

The speaker pointed out that Sunday School teaching consists of three elements—the Teacher, Worship, and Instruction. The teacher's personality is important, also her manner of approach to the class, and the subject. Under the heading of Worship, he stressed the desirability of children understanding the hymns and prayers, and spoke of ways of learning new hymns. Instruction should not consist merely in cramming facts, but should lead to self-activity—should lead to some perceptible result in the pupil's life now. Also it should be related to every-day life. "Ideas can only find entrance by being related to ideas already in the child's mind," he stated.

After the address, a number of questions were asked and answered, and a general discussion on the best way to use the lesson material took place.

Those present declared that the evening had proven very helpful, and they were grateful to Mr. Bradbury for his interesting and instructive address.

LAKE LOUISA REGATTA EVENTS CLOSELY CONTESTED

Weather Man Favors Annual Occasion

The Annual Regatta, held last Saturday at Lake Louise, afforded the perennial pleasure and enjoyment experienced in this event. There were many visitors on hand and an encouraging number of younger folk, who entered gaily into the open sports contests and thus contributed to the success of the function.

From a dull and rainy forenoon the weather changed for the better, and the afternoon was warm and sunny. Many motor boats and smaller craft on the Lake gave evidence of an increasing popularity in this summer resort, which is drawing more and more visitors to its shores every year. The spirit of the Regatta typified also the sociable nature and hospitality of the summer residents—an atmosphere which adds immeasurably to the enjoyment of campers at Louise.

Owing to a somewhat stiff breeze it was deemed advisable not to light the huge bon-fire,

ANOTHER ACCIDENT ON ST. PHILIPPE HIGHWAY

Lachute Citizens Badly Hurt

A stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway frequently in the accident headlines witnessed another automobile mishap on Saturday night last, in which local persons featured with serious results. The car was owned and driven by Mr. Alex. Bradford, who with three passengers was returning home from St. Philippe.

According to reports, a truck was driving in the centre of the road, travelling west, and in an effort to avoid a crash, Mr. Bradford got into difficulty in the gravel bordering the road, and collided with a telephone pole with considerable force. This occurred about a mile east of St. Philippe. All occupants of the car suffered cuts and bruises. They were taken to the Laframboise Hotel at St. Philippe, where Dr. Sauvé was summoned from Lachute. Mr. Bradford himself received several stitches in his forehead and neck. Jos. Derrick of Carillon sustained a twisted arm, Miss St. Jacques of Lachute, was also injured about the face; but the most severely hurt was George Maiden of Lachute Mills. Riding in the rumble seat, he was hurled in a heap onto the floor, and was not seen immediately as neighbors gathered at the scene of the mishap. He was taken, unconscious, with the three other passengers to Dr. Smith's Hospital at Hawkesbury. The three received treatment and were able to leave the hospital. Maiden, however, did not recover consciousness until Monday, and has since been in a delirious condition; suffering with serious injuries to the head, his condition was at first considered critical. The young man has been engaged on the farm of K. McDougall, at North River. Friends entertain sincere hopes for his recovery.

Mr. Bradford's car was a complete wreck and was taken away later by a tow-truck from the Argenteuil Garage.

TWO OF FAMILY RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

Troubles rarely come single handed—an adage which was illustrated this week in the experience of Mr. H. E. Desjardins. His young daughter, Céline, was hurriedly taken into Montreal last Friday, with acute appendicitis. While the family were still anxious for her welfare, their son, Guy, developed a serious hernia and on Monday was also rushed to the city for treatment. The two children are both confined to St. Justine Hospital, where reports now indicate they are progressing favorably.

much to the disappointment of the many who had gathered for the evening. However, a display of fireworks, coupled with the distribution of free corn on the cob, made everyone feel the day had been a pleasant one. Lake Louise Regatta is organized every year by the Fish and Game Club. Prizes for the different events are generously contributed by the district merchants, and certain of the younger residents show commendable energy in assisting with the arrangements.

AUNT JEAN'S RIDDLE NO. 10

My nose is cold, oh very cold,
My teeth are long and sharp,
But oh! how I can—
I cannot sing or laugh or dance,
Please fill in that missing word,
And tell me who I am,
You'll find it very easy, dears,
For I am a friend of man.

THE QUARREL

By Aunt Jean

Mrs. Robin Red Breast had been sitting on the highest branch of the crab-apple tree for such a long time without moving, that Betty Lou, watching her from the sun-room window, began to think that she was ill, or even dead. But she was neither—for suddenly she flew to the ground, pounced on a fat beetle that was crawling from one tomato plant to the other in a vain attempt to hide from the burning sun.

—The sun would never be able to reach him where Mrs. Robin put him when she caught him! It served him right too, as he had spoiled several of the plants.

That little affair over, Mrs. Robin uttered a satisfied "Chuch, chuck," pulled a piece of string from a withered sweet-pea vine and flew back up to the crab-apple tree. Fastening the string to a forked branch she flew to the ground again and gathered up all the wisps of hay that had been dragged from Bob's load as he passed by the tree, and she wove them in and out with the string, much to the surprise of some curious sparrows, who had flown over from the barn roof to watch her.

Some saucy chick-a-dees who had been hanging head downward from another limb suddenly tittered and chuckled "Te-he, he, he, Mrs. Robin is making a nest."

"What if I am!" snapped Mrs. Robin, "I will if I want to; I guess I am my own boss and I would like to see anyone try to stop me." As Mrs. Robin said this she wheeled around, her feathers all ruffled, her eyes bright with anger. But the chick-a-dees were not afraid, they just straightened up on their perch and kept on chuckling "Te-he, he, he" until Shiny Coat, the crow, stopped to see what all the fun was about and Mrs. Starling left off digging in the melon patch to listen.

Madame Lazy-Bones, the cow bird, who had been hiding behind the morning glories, just waiting to see what Mrs. Starling would find in the melon patch, forgot that she was hiding, and flew up beside the chick-a-dees.

"What's all this about! what's all this about?" screamed Billy, the cat bird, puffing his feathers and strutting up and down on the roof of the sun-porch, until Betty Lou grew so tired of the sound that she too felt like screaming. Who would not, having to sit quietly in a chair because of a sprained foot and listen to that scratching sound, "Ticky-tack, ticky-tack, ticky-tack," above her head.

"Nothing!" trilled Mrs. Robin, in reply to Billy's question, "nothing that is any person's business but my own. I am building a nest and I don't care who knows it. I am going to lay eggs in it too—so there!"

"Tut tut!" said Mrs. Bob-o-link, "lay eggs at this time of the year? You are foolish, Mrs. Robin; why, I am going South very soon now."

Without waiting to hear what Mrs. Robin was saying she shrieked "Peter, Peter, Peter," rose higher and higher into the air, and in a moment had forgotten all about Mrs. Robin and her new nest.

Madame Lazy Bones, the cow bird, thought it was just a splendid idea for Mrs. Robin to make another nest. She herself had never got around to making one at all, and decided that Mrs. Robin's new nest would be a splendid place to lay an egg in if she felt equal to it, this hot weather. And as for Mrs. Starling, she just sat listening with her claw on one end of a wiggling worm, and her eyes gleaming wickedly. Little birds just hatched were such tender food!

Mrs. Robin finished making her nest, rested for a day or two, then laid a plump blue egg in it. The next day she laid the second, and flew off to look for some corner of the garden where she might find worms to feed her babies when hatched. The moment her back was turned Madame Lazy Bones slipped into her nest and laid a much larger white egg, burying it under the layers of hay so that Mrs. Robin would not see it when she came back. This went on until Mrs. Robin had four eggs and Mrs. Cow Bird had two, when Mrs. Robin suddenly decided that four babies would be enough to hatch out if the weather should become suddenly cold, and she began sitting on her eggs, very much disturbed to see Madame Lazy Bones come every day and sit on the lilac tree opposite, making such funny little chuckling sounds. Getting quite angry one day, she chirped angrily, "Get away, Mrs. Cow Bird, get away at once. You don't need to think you are going to lay an egg in my nest, for you are not. I'll see to that." Madame Lazy Bones chuckled more than ever, and the chick-a-dees were maddening with their smart little "Te-he, he, he." (They knew something that Mrs. Robin did not.) So did Mrs. Starling, for when Mrs. Robin went to breakfast next morning she stole into her nest and dug out a big white egg, cracked it, and was calmly swallowing the contents when Madame Lazy Bones arrived. With a piece of white shell still between her beak, out flew Mrs. Starling, away as fast as she could. Madame Lazy Bones saw the shell and flew screaming after her. Mrs. Robin arrived just then, and joined in the chase, quite sure that Mrs. Starling had one of her eggs. Such a quarrel followed that all the birds in the neighborhood joined in, not really knowing what the row was all about. Mrs. Starling, in her sudden fear, flew against an electric light wire that was fully charged, and she dropped with a soft flop to the ground. —In her case, as in all cases, it had not paid to be a thief.

Finding that it was a white shell and not a blue one that Mrs. Starling had in her beak, made Mrs. Robin suspicious. She went back to her nest and looked it over very thoroughly and of course discovered the other white egg. Still very angry and excited, she rolled it to the top of her nest and pushed it overboard. "Whack!" it went on a sharp stone; that was the end of Madame Lazy Bones' eggs—while Mrs. Robin's blue ones were covered snugly by her warm breast. And I should not be surprised if, some day, you would see four baby robins sitting in a row in the sun on your garden fence.

—Next story. At the Beach.
Lovingly,
Aunt Jean

DAINTY DISH SET BEFORE A KING

The following is an excerpt from an Edinburgh paper at the time of a visit to Scotland by King George and Queen Mary.

"An urgent message was received by an Edinburgh firm the other evening. It requested that a packet of Kellogg Corn Flakes be sent to the Palace of Holyrood house. It had to reach the palace before 7 o'clock the following morning.

"At midnight, a wholesome house had to be opened up and the packet was dispatched to the palace by taxi."

"Holyrood House" is the official residence of the King and Queen while in Scotland.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Aug. 26th., is "Mind."

The Golden Text is: "Who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his councillor? For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever." (Romans 11: 34, 36).

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"The counsel of the Lord standeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations." (Psalms 33: 11).

"Divine metaphysics, as revealed to spiritual understanding, shows clearly that all is Mind, and that Mind is God, omnipotence, omnipresence, omniscience,—that is, all power, all presence, all Science. Hence all is in reality the manifestation of Mind." (Science and Health page 275)

"How does that watch go that you won at the fair?"
"Fine—it does an hour in 50 minutes."

THAT DEPRESSED FEELING IS LARGELY LIVER

Wake Up Your Liver Bile . . .
Without Calomel, And Feel Like a Million Dollars.

Nothing can put your system out of kilter more quickly than your liver. All it has to do is stop pouring its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels—and life certainly gets grey. That sluggish flow of bile slows up digestion and elimination and makes you "feel pink." Your stomach acts up—gas, bloating, sourness, pain. Your breath is bad and the taste in your mouth is nasty. Your head aches. Skin is blotchy. All of course, because your system is full of poisons. . . .
Mere bowel movers like salts, oil, mineral water, roughage, laxative candy or chewing gum are not good enough to correct this condition entirely. You're livery and you must wake up your liver bile to be happy again. . . .
Avoid calomel (mercury). The thing for you is a box of Carter's Little Liver Pills. They never upset you because they're purely vegetable, gentle and safe; but how they do change your view on life! . . .
Don't waste your money on substitutes. Be definite. Ask for Carter's by name—and get them! Look for the name, Carter's, on the red label. 25c. at all druggists. 50

CORRESPONDENCE

"MUSICAL DISTURBANCE" AT GRENVILLE

Grenville, Aug. 18.

Dear Sir—

A disgraceful episode occurred in Grenville Village on Thursday last. Just before midnight some persons from outside invaded the village beating a drum and playing upon musical instruments. Why they came, I do not know. I was in bed at the time, but I believe that they eventually arrived at one of the Taverns in the village, after which they were quiet. Of course Grenville is partly responsible, by allowing the Taverns to keep open until such hours, so attracting the less respectable elements from outside. But I am sure that the more responsible citizens resent such an intrusion and I write this in the hope that those who perpetrated this outrage will abstain from such unseemly behaviour in the future.

Yours truly,

Kenneth N. Brunton.

Mr. T. B. Terry's farm was an up-to-date one, for those days, and he made a specialty of growing potatoes. When I arrived, the preparing of the soil was well under way. I do not remember what crop had been grown on the soil the previous year, but it was a stubble of some sort, fall-ploughed and manured during the winter or spring, and at the time of my arrival it was getting a second ploughing and subsoiling with a subsoil plough.

It was beautiful, dark-mellow, loamy soil, and even the subsoil seemed to me to be a rich mixture of sand, clay, and other vegetable matter, good enough I thought to grow anything. But it was getting its share of attention just the same. The manure was well worked into the surface soil, and when this was done the land was drilled for planting the potato seed, that had been carefully prepared a couple of days before each day of planting. The preparing of this potato was no small job. Mr. Terry first saw that the seed potatoes were in first class order; they were not allowed to sprout the least bit. If he found that the potatoes he had put by for seed had sprouted the least bit, he would send north for other seed. As I mentioned in my last letter, up to that time what I thought was good potato seed was a good sized potato split in four quarters, but when I saw Mr. Terry take a good-sized potato and cut it into single eyes I was amazed indeed; and when it came to the planting, to see one of those pieces of potato dropped nearly a foot apart in the row, nearly took my breath away. Nevertheless that was how Mr. T. B. Terry planted his potatoes. As soon as they commenced to appear above ground the weeder and cultivators were started in earnest and kept going at regular periods till the potato stocks would not allow a horse to pass. Then it was considered the potato roots were in danger of getting damaged by the further passage of the cultivator. When toes, the best field crop of potatoes were dug they averaged more than 500 bushels to the acre, of beautiful clean-skinned, large-sized, marketable potatoes I ever saw. In my rambles I have seen potatoes planted in many different-sized, marketable potatoes. (Continued on Page 3)

For a Country Guest Room

By Molly Bevan
in the "Blue Bell"

All the house is yours to roam
While you share our simple home,
But this room we keep alone
For our guests to call their own.
May you find such peace within
That the city's dust and din
Leave you, like an ebbing tide,
Or a garment cast aside.
Every happy outdoor thing
Joins us in our welcoming;
Every wave upon the shore
Lips the message o'er and o'er;
Little wistful winds will say
They are glad you've come to stay,
Flowers, bright with dawnlit dew,
Smile to see our guest is you.
May the mirror's silver space
Never see a sorry face,
May the bedside books we leave
Never rouse a thought to grieve;
May the bed so wide and deep
Bring the benison of sleep;
These and one more boon we pray,
"Grant our Guest enjoyed to-day."

"SEA CHANGE"

A famous Atlantic skipper severed his connection with the sea at the completion of voyage 44 of the Canadian Pacific flag-ship, Empress of Britain. Captain Robert Gilmour Latta, first Commodore of Canada's big passenger fleet, first commander of the Empire's latest luxury liner, and friend of Princes, Prime Ministers, and thousands of other travellers from all parts of the world, has been retired under the pension plan of the Canadian Pacific after 30 years in passenger service between Canada and the Old Country.
E. W. Beatty K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific, said in announcing his retirement: "His departure from the sea will be a loss that is balanced only by the gain which will accrue to the land in which he takes up his residence. While it is with regret that his friends in the Company say farewell to Commodore Latta, and that his close association with us comes to an end, all, I am sure, join with me in felicitating him upon being still young enough to anticipate many years of useful service to his community."

At the age of 62 Commodore Latta completes 33 years as a seaman. He started as an apprentice in the sailing ship "Ardenraigh" in 1896, and joined the Canadian service eight years later as a Fourth Officer. He was appointed to command in 1923, and became the first Captain of the 42,500 ton Empress of Britain for her maiden voyage in May, 1931, from which date the big liner has not known the hand of any other commander in the course of travelling 320,000 miles.

V. C. Captain Promoted.

Co-incidental with the announcement of Captain Latta's retirement was the appointment of Captain R. N. Stuart, V.C., D.S.O., U.S.N.C., R. D., R.N.R., as the second Commander of the big white liner, and the second Commodore of the Canadian Pacific fleet. Captain Stuart also commenced his association with the sea in a sailing ship, and his appointment at the age of 47 as the youngest Commodore in the Merchant Service culminates 32 years of sea service which included four and a half years in the navy during the war.

His war service is well known, and as a commander of "Mystery Ships" and Destroyers he was awarded the Victoria Cross, Distinguished Service Order and Bar, and the Navy Cross of the United States. Of him Mr. Beatty said, "Captain Stuart's record for his Country is one of the outstanding war stories of the sea, and his record with the Company is equally brilliant."

"Command of the Empress of Britain with her high speed and almost continuous service, calls for men of very high calibre, and I know that in appointing Captain Stuart to the Empress of Britain, and naming him the second Commodore of the Canadian Pacific fleet, we have chosen a worthy successor to Captain Latta."

The transfer of command took place at Southampton July 7, when Captain Stuart took over his new command, and the genial "Jock" Latta swallowed the anchor.

ferent ways, and one way I would mention (and it seems to be one of the most successful) is the Irish method of planting them in what they call lazy beds. The whole potato is dropped on the sod, and the sod next to it is just turned over on the potato.

In that way the bed is formed, and then a light mulch of straw is spread over to keep the weeds from growing—and it is wonderful the great crops of potatoes grown in this way. Down on the shores of the Gulf of St. Lawrence I have seen potatoes planted in green sod with a plow and yoke of oxen. A furrow is struck, then one boy drops into the furrow a good sized whole potato, and another boy comes behind and drops in a good sized fish beside the potato; then the oxen plow another furrow of green sod on top of the potato and the fish. Then they plow more furrows, and the fish and potato are dropped again—and so on, till the whole is planted with potatoes and fish. In the fall a very good average crop of potatoes is the result. Some will tell you that when cooked these potatoes taste of fish.

I have seen folk try the experiment of how many potatoes could be grown from a single pound: indeed I have tried it myself, and when I managed to grow 60 lbs from 1 lb. of seed, I thought I had something wonderful and so did my neighbors. But when I saw that a gardener in New York, and another in England, had from a single pound grown 1975 lbs. and 1982 lbs. respectively, the wind was taken out of my sails.

As regards the different kinds of potatoes on our Canadian markets, during my life time, I will name a few of the outstanding ones: I remember the Early Rose, the Snow Flake, the white and blue Pink Eye, the Late Rose, St. Patrick, Little Gem, Brownwell's Beauty, Beauty of Hebron, and the White Elephant. Of all these the Old Early Rose held its own and excelled the others, but of late years the white potatoes seemed to fill the requirements of the market better, so they take precedence over the older

The Funny Side of Egyptology

"Here is a tale told to me years ago by the late Professor Sir Gaston Maspero, which everybody will agree is funny. The absurd incident occurred at the Louvre in Paris, I think; and I still recall how Maspero's rotund figure shook with laughter as he related the story."

"He and Professor Naville, another celebrated Egyptologist, were standing at the top of a flight of steps to receive the ex-Empress Eugenie, who was coming up to see some recently discovered antiquities stored in an upper room. Naville, who was in those days a very shy and nervous young man, happened to be standing with his back to a wall whereon were hung a row of buckets full of water to be used in case of fire, each bucket hanging free on a projecting hook; as he bowed and stepped back before the ascending Empress his shoulders touched one of the firepails, and tipped it slightly."

"Maspero saw what was going to happen, and held his breath. Naville was wearing a stiff collar several sizes too large for him, and when he bowed once more, about half a pint of water was tipped down the back of his neck; but he was too shy to reveal his predicament, and except for an involuntary shudder and a slight chattering of his teeth, continued his dutiful salutations, with the result that another half-pint quickly followed the first. "And, you know," said Maspero to me, "the Empress never knew why it was that a little torrent of water issued from the ends of Naville's trousers and flowed down the steps towards her. She just raised her eyebrows and murmured 'Mon Dieu' under her breath: that was all."

50 YEARS A MARTYR TO CONSTIPATION

But Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought Welcome Relief

Read this splendid letter from Mrs. Haynes:

"For 50 years I have been a martyr to constipation. Have tried every remedy under the sun.

"One day I read an account of some one who had been relieved by ALL-BRAN, but I thought 'What was the use of me trying anything more when all else had failed?'

"A while after, I read it again. That time I thought I would try it, it would do no harm anyway.

"I began with a small dish of your ALL-BRAN for breakfast, and wonderful to say, I never need to take any physic at all now. How I wish other poor sufferers from constipation could be persuaded to try it."—Mrs. Sarah Haynes (address furnished upon request).

Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid regular habits. Also iron for the blood.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. It's so much safer than taking patent medicines! Two tablespoonsful of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Severe cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get this delicious ready-to-eat cereal from your grocer. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

kinds. Of these I would name two that seem at present to be taking first place—viz. the Irish Cobbler and the Green Mountain. These are the most in demand today.

Memories of Old St. Andrews

"Preface"

SEVEN YEARS ago it so happened that the author of this book was requested to prepare an article on local church history for an event in his native town, and his researches led him so far beyond the field of church history that he became fascinated with the adventure. It resulted in the publication of a prolonged series of his historical sketches in the LACHUTE WATCHMAN and the MONTREAL GAZETTE. At the time, they were written with little expectation of their assuming the proportions of a book. As he worked, the life of early colonial days cast a spell over the writer's mind, until he came to the realization that St. Andrews of old has not received the place it deserves in colonial history, and it was borne in upon him that there was a sacred obligation to preserve for posterity much of important history that would otherwise be lost.

In this adventure he has been living over his boyhood and young manhood days; he has been made the custodian of old maps, valuable letters and documents yellow with age; and he has been entrusted with records from the descendants of the old seigniors, whose achievements have never been adequately recorded. The work has meant a considerable expenditure of time on wide correspondence and much mental toll for one unaccustomed to literary effort.

The writer is aware of the limitations of his work and that it is only a minor contribution to what may become of value to future historians. The word pictures and character sketches, however, are a record of the impressions of youth, and the historical background has been found in authentic history.

A specimen and introductory page to this fascinating volume, which, in point of contents and fine appearance, will prove a worthy addition to even the most selective library . . . Price to advance subscribers will not exceed $2.00. Communicate with the author, Dr. B. N. Wales, at St. Andrews East.

TO LIVE ON OTHERS

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

One of the chief difficulties with which governments in this country, as in other countries, have had to deal is found in the development of a class which, after two or three or four years on relief, does not wish to go back to work. We recall the recent case of a lumber company in Eastern Quebec. Having obtained some orders for the first time in years, the company proceeded to re-open its camps and to re-engage its old workmen. It went into village after village with the announcement that work was available for all. In one village 80 per cent of the workers responded, though the remaining 20 per cent, made trouble. Those belonging to this minority had learned to rely on the Government for support and they had no thought of straining their muscles while food and lodging and clothing were free. The local relief camp was therefore closed and the men were quickly absorbed in the lumber camps. Abuses of a similar kind cropped up in some parts of Northern Ontario.

We have here touched upon an issue which may become formidable in later years. Too many have learned to lean upon the public treasury. As in the United States, a certain number of agitators believe that working men have a vested interest in the relief funds of the state, and that they should not be called upon to labor. The New York Times fears that the creation of such a class is under way in the neighboring republic. This is a danger to which our federal and provincial governments are awake, and they will have the warm backing of the taxpayers in any measures which they may take to protect the public treasury. Prime Minister Bennett has given assurance that no person willing or capable of work will be permitted to lack food, clothing or shelter. But he has also made it clear that professional idlers will not be allowed to fatten upon the state.

700-YEAR-OLD CUSTOM

The picturesque village of St. Briavels, in the Forest of Dean, England, was again the scene of a time-honored custom which perpetuates certain rights enjoyed by the inhabitants of the parish for more than 700 years. The occasion was the annual distribution of bread and cheese after the service in the church on Whitsunday evening.

The origin of the custom is somewhat obscure, but the privileges it commemorates date back to the 12th century, when a grant of woodland was made to the inhabitants of the parish of St. Briavels.

The parishioners of St. Briavels have the right to this day to cut and take all the timber they require for their own domestic use from a certain neighboring woodland.

"WHEN I GROW OLD"

When I have gathered all the fresh, sweet bloom of youth,
And stand upon life's hilltop, looking back;
When I have sounded deeps of clear unfettered truth
Have left some hopes, some dreams, along my track;
May Peace her cloak of white about me fold,
And Love hold fast my hand as I grow old.
When down the western slope of time I take my way,
And leaves of autumn rustle 'neath my feet;
May I recall with quiet joy life's glad young May,
When dreams were real, and days were long and sweet,
Keep me, O God, from growing hard and cold,
For, oh! I would be young when I grow old.
—Myrtle A. Aldrich.

Dalesville, but was no sectarian in religion, attending the Methodist Church at the services of both Presbyterians and Methodists, and giving of her means to every good cause that needed assistance. Members of the family in nearly every case worked for the Dominion Cartridge Company, and thus through the years the family kept together, till one by one they settled elsewhere. She was known to everyone as a kindly, helpful and true-spirited Christian, and a friend to all. Even as her age advanced, she maintained her religious devotion to the end, when her infirmities necessitated her absence from church attendance. She died in the faith, full of years and rich in the respect of a very wide circle of friends, her family and relatives.

The funeral was held in the United Church on the afternoon of Thursday, Aug. 16, and was largely attended, being conducted by the Rev. A. E. Hagar and the Rev. E. G. Baxter. The hymns were her favorites: Rock of Ages and Safe in the Arms of Jesus. Representative singers of both United and Baptist Churches formed the choir. Burial was at Dalesville.

Pall bearers were: Messrs. Ira McFaul, Herbert Graham, Thomas Wilkes, Edward Wilkes, Archie Robinson, A. Lough. "The memory of the just is blessed."

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 21.—The capital is breathing a little easier after the Stevens' incident, and there were no sensational episodes in the capital last week. Mr. Bennett was down in New Brunswick a couple of days assisting in historical celebrations, and during his absence there were no important announcements. But some useful work is being accomplished without the accompaniment of much publicity, and the trade and tax returns published during the week made good reading.

The naming of the Dominion Marketing Board contained at least one surprise: all members of it are civil servants. It is an economical board, as no additional salaries are to be paid. There was a general impression that the government would go outside for at least one outstanding man in private business, a leader in the meat-packing trade, or a grain man like John I. McFarland, for example.

After all, when one looks into it, the Dominion Marketing Board is not given such a responsible or onerous task as might have been thought. Its task is to review marketing schemes submitted by the producers. If they approve of them, the Minister of Agriculture then looks after the matter, and the task of the Marketing Board is over, so far as that scheme is concerned. The operation of it in future years, the interests of the growers and consumers, are for the Minister to safeguard.

The nature of the new marketing board seems to emphasize what has been said before: that if the producers of milk, apples, honey, wheat, cattle, wool or eggs—or whatever the product is—want to avail themselves of the benefits of the new legislation, they will have to supply the brains, the energy and the imagination themselves. The idea is not to superimpose on industry from above a rigid scheme—unless circumstances make that inevitable—but to assist the farmers to co-operate, regulate, and control.

The fruit and vegetable growers already have some strong organizations, and it is likely that they will be the first to submit schemes to the new marketing board. The apple growers of British Columbia, who were, probably, more responsible than any other group for the new legislation, are already to talk turkey to Dr. Barton's new marketing body. They want pretty large powers over the production, distribution and sale of apples in western Canada. It will be interesting, to see if as a result the growers get a better break, without the apple consumer having to pay the whole shot.

Trade and Revenue Up

July was the fourth consecutive month in the present fiscal year, which began on April 1, in which Canada's external trade and her national revenue were well up over the corresponding month of the previous year. The July totals were not quite so sensational as those for the earlier months, but they were pretty good. The income figures are now about $19,000,000 above 1933 figures, and a continuation of the trend will ensure a balanced federal budget next year, so far as ordinary expenditures are concerned. All sorts of taxes are up, even income tax. The latter was based on 1932-3 incomes, and it is rather remarkable that, without any increase in taxation, there should actually be an increase this year. Evidently the decline in individual incomes reached an end at least fifteen months ago. Also the increase in tax revenue from other sources shows quite unmistakably how much more active business and import trade generally is.

In the first third of the present fiscal year, the value of total trade was actually $96,000,000 higher than for the same months of 1933. We are so used to talk in millions that such an increase is not easy to grasp. Of this total, $40,000,000 represents the additional sales abroad of Canadian produce, while the other $56,000,000 means larger Canadian purchases abroad, more fruits, more raw materials, more fuels and gasoline.

Considerable headway is being made in the details of the machinery for relieving farmers of their debts, in those cases where a man has got beyond his depth and wishes to make a compromise with his creditors. The former attorney-general of Saskatchewan has been given the job of supervising the federal machinery, and the benefits should be available at an early date.

Bazaar at Lakefield

The ladies of the W. A. of Holy Trinity Church, Lakefield, held their Annual Bazaar on Thursday last.

Mrs. Geo. L. Rogers and Mrs. Geo. Peet were in charge of the home cooking and vegetable; Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. Allan E. Mount, fancy work, sewing, etc.; Mrs. Walter Shearsmith and Miss Mary Evans, candy, cut flowers and potted plants; Mrs. Miles Cope land, fish pond and "white elephants"; Mrs. Thos. McCambly and Miss Mildred Sherritt gave their very capable attention to the tea tables.

The weather was all that could be desired, and Mr. Leonard Legg was kept busy dispensing ice cream and soft drinks. As the Synod and Bishop had earnestly requested that Anglicans refrain the practice of holding raffles, the nature of this effort was arranged accordingly, even though the W.A. realized less in actual cash proceeds. The Bazaar was considered a success in every way.

A Good Start

The senior partner had dismissed his office boy for untidiness and general slackness, and was interviewing in turn a waiting line of some twenty applicants.

Presently a smart looking youth was ushered in.

"Well, my boy," said the senior partner, "I am looking for some one who is smart and tidy. He must look round the office and note down little things that have to be done. The office must look clean and tidy. I'm fed up with boys who never see anything that requires doing, and I'm determined to have an office boy with some idea of keeping things as they should be kept. You understand me, of course?"

The boy nodded briskly.

"Yes, sir, certainly," he said. "Shall I begin by putting your tie straight?"

Science Scouts Proverb

Another bit of folk-lore, the idea that oysters can be eaten safely only during the months with the letter "R" in their names, has been exploded by a skeptical scientist who took the trouble to test it. At the congress of public health in Paris, a French physician reported experiments, which he since has repeated and extended, indicating that oysters apparently can be eaten in the "R-less" months quite as safely as in others. Experimenting on himself and on friends and patients, he found no harmful effects from oysters in the forbidden months.

SECTIONAL PHRASES

Sectional usage of words is interesting. Sometimes a bit of slang or a catch phrase will be in frequent use in one part of the country but never heard any place else. Sometimes it will be a peculiar meaning of a word or a place name. For instance London, Ontario, never gives its Avenues the dignity of their name but uses the abbreviation Ave. It will be Queen's Ave. or Dufferin Ave. but never Avenue. Toronto will never say Danforth Avenue but The Danforth. Most of Ontario is its electric power developed by the province for the Hydro Electric Commission with Niagara Falls as the chief source of power. Rural Ontario calls electricity the Hydro. They never use electricity but always the Hydro. They speak of their stoves as Hydro stoves and I heard a new one the other day—that was a Hydro Refrigerator.

THE GENERAL PRACTITIONER

One of the hardest things to find is a good general practitioner. At least it is in the city but it may be different in a town. Our city has plenty of good doctors but many of them have specialised and the general practitioners we have found are interested only if you are seriously ill. They can't be bothered with minor illnesses. The worst of it is that people are not seriously ill very often but they too frequently have minor illnesses which make them very uncomfortable. Most doctors seem to relieve the condition but make little effort to find the cause. If these small troubles were dealt with properly and carefully at the beginning they might never develop into the serious troubles. The general practitioner has an advantage that the specialist seldom has because he knows the family condition, physical, mental, financial and hereditary. These conditions are so inter-related that it is hard to tell where one begins and the other leaves off. If you have a family doctor who is really interested at all times you may consider yourself fortunate, because it has been our experience and most of our friends tell us the same thing, that the doctor is not called as often as necessary because we feel it is not much use. The general doctor might take a leaf out of the pediatrician's. I never have come in contact with a children's specialist who was not interested and helpful at all times.

were all set but even then there were books left over; and since then there has been the slow but steady accumulation. Some of them are school books that we have wanted to keep for future possible use or to use for reference. The trouble has been that whenever we did want to refer to a book it always seemed to be one of the ones that was buried in the boxes, and we never could find the right box. There did not seem to be either money or room for new bookcases so I have assembled one from four orange crates. It is at the back of a large clothes closet, and holds the seldom used book, the old school books, some of the ones that have become very shabby through long use, and the odds and ends generally to say nothing of a large number of boys' books. The top holds piles of such magazines as Yachting, Motor Boating and Popular Mechanics that are almost worn to shreds with frequent reading. I must say I am gloating over our new book case.

THE BABY GOES ALONG

It used to be that anyone who had a baby never left home in the summer but things are so convenient these days that it is quite possible to take the baby along and make it very comfortable. It is wise to use either condensed or evaporated milk as then you can be sure of good milk. Accustom the baby to it before you leave so that there will not be too many changes. Remember if you use the canned milks you must increase your amount of orange or tomato juice to balance. You can buy strained vegetables for the baby that are very satisfactory. We can buy Canadian grown ones now. Never heat a supply of milk and put it in a vacuum bottle to keep warm until ready for use as the warmth will sour the milk very quickly. Use the vacuum bottle to keep the milk cold if you want to, but heat it when it is required. Keep the regular hours that your baby has at home.

SALAD DRESSING

1 egg
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons mustard
1-eighth teaspoon paprika
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup salad oil

Mix the above ingredients in a bowl. Mix ½ cup water and 3 tablespoons corn starch and cook slowly until transparent. Add this while hot to the mixture in the bowl and beat with a Dover beater. This contains less oil than mayonnaise and is preferred to it by some.

SUMMER SALAD

2 tablespoons granulated gelatin
¼ cup cold water
2-thirds cup boiling water
2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon sugar
1 cup diced cucumbers
½ cup diced tomatoes
¼ cup chopped green peppers
2 tablespoons chopped onions
Soak the gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes, add the boiling water, salt, sugar and lemon juice. Let stand until it starts to thicken then add the vegetables and mould. Chill and serve on lettuce.

Late Mrs. David Kennedy

There passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. Mott, of Rawcliffe, Que., on Friday morning, Aug. 12th., one of the oldest and best known residents of that community in the person of Isabel Moncrieff, widow of the late David Kennedy, who predeceased her Nov. 30, 1910. The deceased lady was born at Edina, in 1856, and will be sadly missed by her many friends. She was a devout Christian and always ready to lend a helping hand. She leaves to mourn her loss one daughter and five sons: Mrs. P. Mott, of Rawcliffe; Joseph Kennedy, Rawcliffe; Allen Kennedy, Pine Hill; Charlie and Ernest Kennedy, of Brownsburg, and Gordon Kennedy, North Augusta, Ont.; one sister Mrs. Nightingale, High River, Alta.; one sister-in-law, Mrs. Jos. Moncrieff, and one brother-in-law, Mr. H. Grey, besides her many grandchildren and great grandchildren.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from the home of her son-in-law, Mr. P. Mott, and was largely attended by sympathizing friends and relatives. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Maclean, of Grenville United Church. Interment took place in Edina cemetery. There were many floral tributes,—wreaths from Mr. and Mrs. C. Kennedy and family, Mr. and Mrs. A. Kennedy and family, Mr. and Mrs. E. Kennedy and family, Mr. and Mrs. Porter, Moncrieff family; Sprays from Miss Paquette and Mr. J. Kennedy and Mrs. Forin and many others.

The pall bearers were her five sons and John Kennedy (grandson.)

Another Myth Exploded

"Granby Leader" on the Ontario Hydro

For many years those in favor of public ownership have always held up the Ontario Hydro as the shining example of successful public ownership. Recent investigations have disclosed that this government proposition has been conducted after the style of a Ponzi scheme. The expenses and losses have piled up the provincial debt sky high.

Turning to the Citizens' Research Institute report we find that on July 1st., 1923, the net debenture debt of the province of Quebec was $57,196,281, whilst at the end of the ten year period, i.e., at June 30th., 1933, it was $97,191,657, an increase of $39,995,376 in the period, or 69.9%.

Now taking the case of Ontario we discover that on November 1st., 1923, their net debenture was $253,379,056, whilst it was $516,167,408 on October 31st., 1933, an increase of $262,788,352 in the ten year period, or 103.7%.

Next we have occasion to compare the per capita net debt at the end of the ten year period: Quebec's is $33.47 as against $149.22 for Ontario.

All authorities agree that the operation of the Hydro Electric has been in a large measure responsible for this state of affairs in Ontario. The selling of electricity below cost, making gifts of electric apparatus in order to increase consumption of current, etc., are some of the reasons.

While newspapers all over Canada have been commenting on this, there is one feature of the case which we have not seen mentioned. That is the fact that by this system of operation every citizen of Ontario must some day pay the bill. That means that instead of the users of electricity paying for the service those people who are not customers of the Hydro—and there must be thousands of them—must help to pay the bills of people who have used electricity. The alternative would be to jack up the rates until they become not only high enough to pay the costs, but also to eventually pay off the deficits. In this way the people who pile up this debt would be the only ones to pay it off. However, there are difficulties to this scheme. At the first suggestion of this the reply would be that many industries which have been given cheap power to bring them to Ontario might leave the Province if the rates were increased to such an extent. Therefore, it will be necessary to do what is finally done in all public ownership companies,—have everybody pay for the privileges of the few. That is just what is happening in the case of the C.N.R. People who have never used the railways are having to pay part of the cost of their operation.

Ottawa Exhibition is in Full Swing

Creator and His Band Repeat Triumphs. Automobile Races Featured. Splendid Displays.

Ottawa's annual exhibition is in full swing this week and bids fair to break records both for exhibits, attractions and attendance. To start with, there was the large advance space in the buildings well filled, and ground space was in such demand that the management was able to shut out undesirables.

The opening day found the bill complete in every detail, and the full bill will be continued all week, with a grand finale on Saturday night. Creator and his band are repeating the triumphs of previous years and are proving a wonderful attraction for music lovers. Two concerts are given each day without extra charge, commencing at four o'clock and at 6.15.

For the first four days, horse races augment the vaudeville bill, and for the last two afternoons of the week there will be sensational professional automobile races with the pick of the dirt track speedsters. The vaudeville is pronounced the best ever assembled, with plenty of thrills, novelty and comedy. In the evenings the feature is the Follies Revue of 1934 an elaborate song and dance revue with the latest novelties, elegantly costumed and gorgeously staged. The fireworks which conclude the programs at night have set the city talking.

True to his promise, Max Linder has brought a wonderful midway with the latest rides and shows. It is possibly the biggest ever brought to Ottawa.

The Ontario exhibit of wild animals, game birds and live fish is attracting thousands. Splendid displays are put on by various departments of the Dominion government. In the automobile show, a modern home of 1934 has been built inside. It is of the regular bungalow size and is furnished throughout with the very latest. Railways are offering reduced rates, and for the motorist parking space is provided inside the grounds.

TOO LATE!

It would facilitate the work of publishing this paper if correspondents would send their bulletins early in the week. It has been necessary to omit contributions received as late as Thursday morning. DESERTING THE FARM

One proof that Canadian and American agriculture is sorely in need of re-organization is revealed by recent statistics which show Canada's population to be 46.63 per cent rural and 53.7 per cent urban. As late as 1923 these figures were reversed. Also, the United States now boasts a 74.3 per cent urban and 35.7 per cent rural population, but as recently as 1870 76.8 per cent of the people in the U. S. A. eked out a living from the soil. With agriculture widely heralded as a nation's basic industry, this fairly rapid desertion of farming pursuits for a supposedly easier existence in cities and towns may account in part for the lingering depression and unemployment.

Montreal a Century Ago

Col. Wilfrid Bovey, Authority on Early Days in Metropolis.

Reminiscences of a Montreal of other years were vividly brought to life by Col. Wilfrid Bovey, director of extra-mural relations of McGill University, speaking at the annual dinner of the twenty-seventh annual convention of the Canadian Gas Association, in Montreal recently. Just after the turn of the 19th century oil lights were installed in the fashionable residential section of Montreal, south of the Power Building, so that ladies might visit their friends without walking in the muddy pools which filled the streets, he told the delegates.

"A century ago the main part of the town was still south of Craig street," Col. Bovey said, "as it had been during the French regime. Little rivers ran everywhere. Besides the St. Pierre River, which is still a public nuisance in the west end there was the 'burn' which flowed through the McGill grounds, then called 'Burnside,' and went on running through them for a long time. It was still there when I was a small boy. It flowed into another stream which started in a swamp where Viger Square is now, flowed west along Craig street, turned round by Dow's Brewery and finally flowed into the St. Lawrence, near the foot of McGill street. The citizens used this river for the disposal of garbage. In winter, when the stream froze, the garbage was left on the ice and the smell that arose in the spring, when the frozen garbage melted before the ice is easier to imagine than to describe.

"There was a hotel and Montrealers regarded it with intense pride. You can still see the sign across its stone front, if you know where to look, announcing Rasco's Hotel, but its glory departed a long time ago. Before that time there had been taverns of which the best were Cushing's, Lyman's and Lesperance's. From these stage coaches set out daily for distant spots such as Kingston. Rasco's Hotel placed Montreal in a new class. It was not yet in a very high class, but it was getting along.

"Dickens, who stayed in Rasco's hotel, a little over 90 years ago, had this to say about the general atmosphere of the city and of its environs: 'Canada has held, and always will retain a foremost place in my remembrance. Few Englishmen are prepared to find what it is. Advancing quietly; old differences settling down, and being fast forgotten; public feeling and private enterprise alike in a sound and wholesome state; nothing of flush or fever in its system, but health and vigor throbbing in its steady pulse; it is full of hope and promise. To me, who had been accustomed to think of it as something left behind in the strides of advancing society, as something neglected and forgotten, slumbering and wasting in its sleep, the demand for labour and the rates of wages; the busy quays of Montreal; the vessels taking in their cargoes, and discharging them; the amount of shipping in the different ports; the commerce, roads and public works, all made to last; the respectability and character of the public journals; and the amount of rational comfort and happiness which honest industry may earn; were very great surprises. The steamboats on the lakes, in their conveniences, cleanliness, and safety; in the gentlemanly character and bearing of their captains; and in the politeness and perfect comfort of their social regulations are unsurpassed even by the famous Scotch vessels, deservedly much esteemed at home. The inns are usually bad because the custom of boarding at hotels is not so general here as in the United States, and the British officers, who form a large portion of the society of every town, live chiefly at the regimental messes; but in every other respect, the traveller in Canada will find as good provision for his comfort as in any place I know.' And the same Dickens tells us of his visit to a theatre lighted by gas."

There was also a house in Montreal fifty years ago, the speaker recalled, which had electric lighting. It belonged to Frank Redpath and was at 29 Ontario avenue. The lighting was supplied by a generator run by a small gas engine connected to the house main.

Scientific Research and its Applications

By Dr. W. D. Coolidge of the Research Laboratory, General Electric Company

A question frequently asked by visitors to our laboratory is "What will the future bring?" Of course we make no pretense to gifts of prophecy, but the question is not a foolish one, for the closest one can come to an intelligent guess by studying current scientific developments and their possible applications.

We all know that our present civilization is based on engineering. To realize how completely this is so, we need only to imagine what would happen to any modern city if all products of engineering were suddenly wiped out, leaving the city without electric light and power, with no motors to drive its machines, no pumps for its water supply, no trolley cars, buses or automobiles for transportation, no telephones for communication, no railroads for bringing in food or shipping the city's products. That city would survive about as long as a snowball on a hot pavement in July.

So this much we may safely predict about the future. Whatever life may be like fifty or a hundred years from now, we may be sure that the comforts, conveniences, conditions of labor and of recreation, in short, all that determines the standard of living, will depend on the engineering developments that will have occurred in the meantime.

Now engineering is simply applied science. Just as the engineering of today sprang from scientific researches of the past, so the engineering of the future is being shaped by the scientific researches now in progress. That is why the best guess as to the future may be formulated only by a study of recent scientific developments and their possible applications.

There are two things that must strike any student of current scientific progress,—the constant acceleration of that progress and the closeness of its approach to the fundamentals of the universe.

In each generation there are those who think that so much has been accomplished that the end of progress is near. I believe it was more than fifty years ago that a Commissioner of Patents resigned because all worthwhile inventions had been made and the Patent Office would soon be useless. It was less than fifty years ago that an eminent physicist said that all the fundamental discoveries had been made, and yet, almost as he said it a series of discoveries was beginning which has resulted in far greater progress toward an understanding of fundamentals than had been made in all the previous history of man.

It is true that the most obvious things have been discovered, but the army of scientific workers has enormously increased and now weapons of marvelous range and accuracy have been developed for attacking the unknown, so that although the terrain grows more difficult, the forward drive is steadily gaining in momentum. Great as has been the progress of the past fifty years, we may be sure that it will be far surpassed in the next fifty.

The existence of our laboratory has been almost contemporaneous with the development of the newest field of physics—electronics. The electron was first identified by J. J. Thomson in England less than five years before our laboratory was founded. Since then we have taken active part in the development of the present great variety of electron tubes which are already serving man in multitudinous ways. We have the radio tubes which made broadcasting possible, creating a new art which gave employment to tens of thousands and entertainment and instruction to millions; we have the tubes which gave a voice to the motion picture and so increased the range and potentialities of the cinema art; we have the improved X-ray tubes which have so strengthened the hands of the medical profession in its war on disease as to have saved many lives and much human suffering; we have tubes which are producing light more efficiently than our best Mazda lamps; we have the tubes which, in industry, are beginning to take over many control jobs and inspectional jobs, doing them better and quicker than a human operator, and thereby carrying on the work, begun by the electric motor, of relieving labor from drudgery, heightening its efficiency, and thereby raising standards of living; and we have the supersensitive tubes which are enabling astronomers to pry into secrets in the far depths of space hidden from the eye and from the photographic plate.

Thus physical research, through its discovery of the electron, has added to human enjoyment, decreased human suffering, raised the standard of living, and supplied new and powerful tools for extending scientific knowledge.

The same forty year period has seen corresponding advances in other fields. Medical research has gone far toward bringing under control such diverse and dire diseases as tuberculosis, diabetes, and leprosy. We may confidently expect that in the next forty years such scourges as cancer and pneumonia will lose much of their terror.

County Orangemen Gather in Church Parade

Many Distinguished Visitors Attend from City Lodges

Rev. B. B. Brown Speaker

With fife and drum and a kiltie band of pipers, Argenteuil County Lodge held their first church parade last Sunday afternoon to the United Church, with upwards of 1,000 taking part. Representatives from outside lodges were present in the parade, including George Clifford, County Master of Montreal; L. W. Janes, G. M. P., Quebec; W. H. Higgins, P.G.M., Hugh Kilpatrick, P.G.M.; R. H. Shaver, G.C., of B. A.; R. H. Butler, H. H. C. On the platform were Rev. Rahard, Stanley Holt, local County Master; L. W. Janes, P.G.S.; Sister P. Cross, Provincial G.M. of Quebec.

A memorable address was given by the Rev. B. B. Brown, of Montreal, who spoke from Gal. 5, 1 and 13. He was assisted by Rev. W. B. Rosborough, pastor of the church.

INSPIRING DISCOURSE BY REV. B. B. BROWN

The Rev. B. B. Brown of Montreal, former beloved pastor of Lachute Methodist Church, launched out by asking the pertinent question, "Why are we here? . . . It is well that we should understand each other at the outset. What is the purpose of this remarkable gathering of men and women?"

"I salute you as a group of earnest and sincere Protestants, who are united in a holy fellowship. At the altar of your lodge room you have vowed a solemn obligation to defend, at all costs, the liberties and rights won and handed down to us by our forefathers. Therefore, the aim of this grand rally of Orange-folk is to worship God in His Holy Temple . . . To remind ourselves of the debt we owe to the pioneers, to study anew our liberty in Christ, and to receive new impulses to live our religion and defend our faith."

"You are sons and daughters of a valiant ancestry; and as descendants of a hardy, fearless stock who settled the valleys and hillsides of this grand old County of Argenteuil, we must emulate their example of dauntless faith and courage in loyalty to Great Britain and to the evangelical religion."

"They established their churches and schools, and hewed their farms and houses out of the wilderness; and for the maintenance of those three mighty bulwarks of the Empire."

FARM HAND KILLED UNDER HAY RAKE

Dragged under a hay rake off which he fell in some unknown manner, Raymond Leduc, a young farm hand of Caledonia township, near Hawkesbury, was found dead last week in a field on the farm of his employer, O. Marleau. Apparently Leduc fell off and under the rake as he was driving through a gate, one of the wheels presumably having struck the gate post.

LONDON NIGHTS

Traffic authorities in London have issued a new rule, providing that no automobile horns may be sounded anywhere in the city at night. The period of silence will last, approximately, from 11 p.m. to 6 or 7 in the morning; during that time the sleep of Londoners will be protected, and roving traffic policemen, will crack down on any driver who touches his klaxon button.

NATIVE OF DALESVILLE DIED AT TIMMINS

Highly Esteemed as Ontario Resident for 22 Years

On August 19th. there passed away at Timmins, Ont., George Vary, a native of Dalesville, who had won high esteem in Northern Ontario, where he had followed mining as a calling since his early manhood.

The late George Vary was born in Dalesville, and at the time of his death was 67 years of age. After a few years spent in the U. S. he moved to Cobalt, Ont., in the early development of that mining territory. From Cobalt he moved with his family to Timmins, in 1912, engaged with the McIntyre mine and later with the Porcupine Crown, where he remained until his health failed some years ago.

Mr. Vary was married some 41 years ago in Michigan, and is survived by his widow, two daughters and one son. Here in his native county, there remain also two brothers and two sisters to mourn his passing. They are Alex. Vary of Pine Hill, Charles Vary of Dalesville, Mrs. John Graham and Mrs. Prosser, of Brownsburg.

The deceased gentleman was prominent in fraternal, church and other circles and he leaves behind him large numbers of friends and acquaintances who will deeply regret his death. He was of a friendly, genial disposition and won the high regard of all who knew him. He was especially prominent in Masonic circles and was honoured by life membership in both Cobalt and Timmins Masonic Lodges. He was a Past Master of Golden Beaver Lodge, A.F. & A.M., Timmins, being the second to hold that office in the commencing years of the lodge.

The funeral was held on Aug. 21st., observed with full Masonic honours. The floral tributes were many and beautiful.

MARRIAGE

Alder—Graham

A pretty wedding took place last Saturday afternoon at the Grace Street residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Graham, when their youngest daughter, Mary Helena, became the bride of Gordon Douglas Alder, of Montreal, eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Alder, of Ottawa.

Rev. W. B. Rosborough performed the marriage ceremony in the presence of immediate friends and relatives numbered among the guests. Miss Ruth Todd played the wedding music, and Mrs. R. A. Giles sang during the ceremony; her solo was entitled "Because". The bride was given away by her father, and was attended by Miss Kay Giles as bridesmaid. Mr. Sharmen Doig was groomsmen.

The bride's costume was of pale pink silk organza, with blue accessories, hat, shoes and gloves. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas. The bridesmaid was dressed in powder blue silk organza with pink accessories. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

A reception and supper followed the happy event, Mr. and Mrs. Alder leaving later for a motor trip to Toronto, Niagara and Detroit. The bride traveled in a powder blue flannel serge ensemble and grey accessories.

Many beautiful gifts and felicitations spoke eloquently of the friendship with which this young couple are regarded.

In Ontario they are called "beverage rooms", in Manitoba "beer parlors," but, in its customary direct fashion, Quebec calls a tavern a tavern.

BOYS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE ON BICYCLE

Lachute Lads in Collision With Auto

While riding on a bicycle last Thursday, Raymond, 14, and George, 5, two sons of Mr. and Mrs. V. Marchand of Grace St. were knocked unconscious in a collision with a car driven by Mr. Norman Boyd. The car was proceeding toward St. Hermas and the mishap occurred at the corner of Grace and Bethany Streets.

Raymond, the older boy, was taking his brother to the doctor at the time. His bicycle was caught in the mudguard of the car and he was dragged several feet; the younger lad was hurled some fifteen feet from the collision. The latter was carried unconscious to the residence of Mrs. Plouff while Raymond was taken to Mr. Ethier's and recovered shortly afterwards. The younger boy was badly bruised on the knee and hands, but both are making good progress and will be little the worse for their narrow escape.

NEW TRAVEL BUREAU BECOMES ACTIVE

Boosting Canada in a Business like Way

To the Editor's desk come proofs of attractive advertising, designed for leading U. S. dailies, and representing the initial efforts of Canada's newly-formed Travel Bureau, to bid for tourist business on a larger scale.

The Travel Bureau was set up late this summer by the Federal Government, under supervision of Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals. The lateness of the season has not left sufficient time for advertising of a general tourist nature, but messages addressed to sportsmen will be circulated during the fall in a selected list of American newspapers. This advertising will appear in a coast-to-coast list of U. S. dailies, the combined circulation of the listed papers reaching a total of over 6,000,000—so that Canada's story will reach approximately 30,000,000 people throughout the United States.

With the opening of the 1935 tourist season this campaign will be followed up, with an extensive campaign in American dailies, together with a "See Canada First" campaign in Canadian newspapers.

Stanforth—Reynar

Very quietly last Saturday afternoon, the marriage was solemnized at the Church of St. Columba, Montreal, of Miss Dorothy Vivian Reynar, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Reynar, of Quebec, to Mr. R. Perley Stanforth, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Stanforth, of Arundel. The Rev. Elton Scott officiated.

Both bride and bridegroom were unattended. Mr. George B. Watt gave his niece in marriage and she wore a gown of mandarin crepe romaine trimmed with brown lace, a brown hat and shoulder bouquet of Talisman roses and lilies of the valley. An informal reception for relatives and intimate friends followed the ceremony, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Watt in Montreal. Deep pink gladstoli decorated the living room and pink roses and baby's breath centred the bride's table. The couple left later for a wedding trip to Northern Ontario. They will reside in Ottawa. For traveling the bride wore a brown tweed tailored costume with brown accessories.

Month's Activities of Argenteuil Women's Institutes

Lachute and Morin Heights took a holiday during August, but the remaining branches held meetings as usual.

Chatham had a meeting dealing with Canadian Industries, with Mr. R. Cooper, principal of Brownsburg School, as speaker; he gave an interesting address on this subject before an audience of ten members. Canadian Minerals was the roll-call.

Frontier had fourteen members and as many visitors, to listen to an interesting paper on "Cellophane" given by Mrs. Burke who had samples and booklets illustrating her subject. Their roll call was a joke on country people travelling to the city, and vice versa. A report was also given of the County Executive meeting. One new member joined the ranks.

Lakefield Branch met at the home of the County President, thirteen members and four visitors attending. Their subject was "Canadian Industries"; Roll-call "A Canadian-Made Article", Mrs. E. Morrow giving a paper on the subject for the evening. Mrs. Kyle also gave a talk on the Making of Maple Syrup. A book of maple syrup recipes was given to each lady present. Mrs. Kuhring enumerated Current Events, and also "Canada Week by Week."

Jerusalem-Bethany, with an attendance of fifteen, answered their roll-call with "First Aid Suggestions." An interesting paper on First Aid was read by Mrs. Albert Stewart, and Current Events by Mrs. Simon Wilson. Arrangements were made to send a box of food each week for four weeks to a needy family.

Pioneer had ten members and three visitors, to hear Mr. Holt of Carillon discoursing about "Bees"; he illustrated his talk with a display of filled and unfilled combs.

Upper Lachute-East End had an educational meeting with twenty-one members and two visitors in attendance. Dr. Mason was the speaker of the evening, giving an interesting account of his visit overseas.

ARGENTEUIL COUNTY SCOUT RALLY

Provincial Secretary Hicks in Command

Rural Dean Booeey Gave Address

The Argenteuil County Boy Scout Troops held their Annual Church Parade on Sunday last at St. Andrews East. Under the command of Francis G. Hicks, Provincial Field Secretary, the parade assembled on the school grounds, at 2 p.m. Headed by the band, les Voltigeurs d'Argenteuil, the troops marched to the Town Hall, where an open air service was held on the adjoining lawn.

The chaplain of the St. Andrews Troop occupied the chair, and was supported on the platform by F. G. Hicks, Rev. R. S. Booeey, M.A., Col. L. M. Hooker, Chairman of the St. Andrews Group Committee; Mr. G. Y. Deacon, chairman of the Lachute Group Committee, and Mr. A. E. Ladouceur.

The address was delivered by Rev. R. S. Booeey, of Christ Church, St. Andrews, who held his audience of Scouts, parents and friends, with his interesting discourse. At the conclusion of the service the parade formed up for the March Past, at which F. G. Hicks took the Salute.

Basil E. Jackson of Brownsburg, who is building an enviable reputation as dog fancier and showman, has several recent triumphs to his credit.

At the Ottawa Exhibition last week, meeting strong competition, he claimed the second limit and second open reserve winners in cockers. At the Montreal Ladies' Kennel Club on the 25th. inst., his dogs took a string of prizes including: First limit; first open; best of winners; best of breed, best junior female and the best junior male or female cocker puppy. In wire haired terriers he claimed the award for best wire puppy junior male, and the second for wire puppy male or female. With the three dogs he took to Montreal for this event Mr. Jackson secured nothing lower than second awards.

are popular additions to the program and the races scheduled include: Farmers' flat race; ladies' flat race; trotting race; military steeplechase and two steeplechase events. The $500.00 open jumping sweepstakes, open to all; the trophy presented by the 17th. Duke of York's Royal Canadian Hussars for the Canadian Militia steeplechase and three purses of $200.00 each offered to winners of three trotting and pacing classes are some of the more interesting prizes in the Seigniory Club Show. The Seigniory Club will be open to the public during the Horse Show.

SEIGNIORY CLUB PREPARING FOR HORSE SHOW

Annual Event Draws Wide Patronage

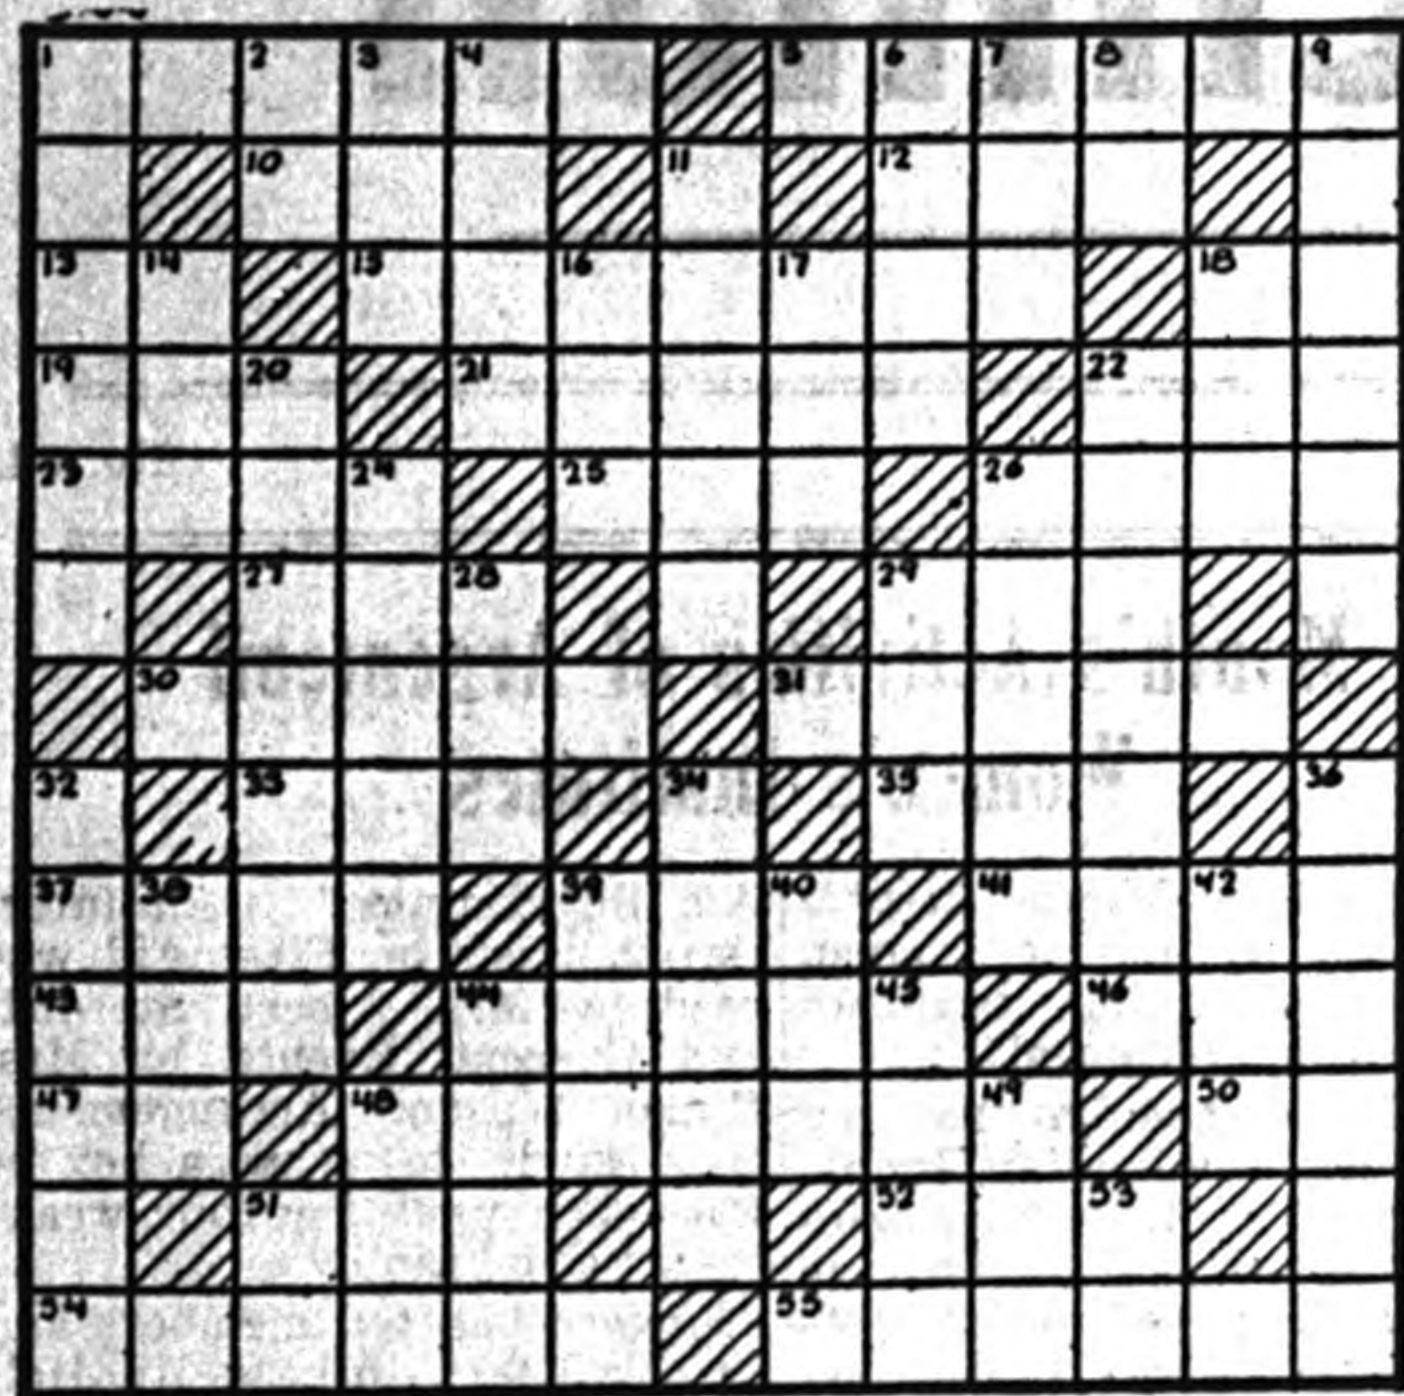

The horse show circuit in Canada is moving slowly toward the third annual Seigniory Club Show and Race Meet set for September 13 to 16 next. The Governor General of Canada, Lord Bessborough, has graciously extended his patronage to mark an event that has won a place for itself in sporting annals of this part of the world.

A distinguished entry list is expected, including the stables of several Seigniory Club members whose names are well known in horse show worlds. R. S. McLaughlin, W. B. Cleland, R. Y. Eaton, J. P. and D. F. Porter are likely to be represented, as well as the United States Army Cavalry Division at Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont. Their entry last year lent an interesting international aspect to the Seigniory Club Show. On the personnel of the management, it is noted that Mr. Kilgour Wilson, local horse fancier, is appointed to the Executive Committee, and will doubtless uphold this County's reputation in the ring with several fine entries.

A huge show ring and a track for flat and steeplechase races are now under construction on the grounds that once were a temporary golf course at The Seigniory Club. A frame building containing a hundred box stalls, each ten feet square, is being erected near the present shelters. A new ring two hundred and fifty feet by one hundred and twenty-five feet, making use of the jumps in vogue last year, is being suitably graded, and new and improved equipment will facilitate the running of the Show.

A well balanced program of saddle, harness, hunter and performance classes has been arranged, including forty show ring events in saddle, hunter and jump classes and in addition two steeplechases and three trotting races. A children's saddle and two agricultural classes attractive to competitors and smaller stables situated near the Seigniory Club

I love the wind, I love it so,
That when outside, I go and go Away up high, as high as can be
With the jolly wind upholding me.

I dip and dive and soar about,
While down beneath the children shout,
And clap their hands with happy glee,
Just watching me, just watching me.

When the wind dies down
I lose my courage and drop, drop, drop,
Straight down to earth,
With a rustling flop.

ON THE BEACH

"A picnic on the beach, a picnic on the beach!" sang wee Betty Green softly to herself, as she swayed back and forth on Grandma Green's big red rocker.

"Who said so?" demanded noisy Carl in a peevish voice. Carl was rather a blusterer and really afraid of the big ocean waves, but hated to admit that he was. He had often boasted to the smaller boys as to how far he had gone. "Away, away out into the ocean" on his side of the continent. But he had forgotten to add that his mother had a good strong rope fastened to a belt around his waist, as well as water wings!

With all that he had been afraid and begged his mother so often not to make him go into the water, that she had stopped doing so at his home, but had hoped that when he saw how fearlessly his little cousins went wading he would get over his fear and follow their example.

"Mummie said so and Aunt May", said Betty, swinging herself off the rocker and running towards the beach where Joey and Tom were piling up little pieces of dry driftwood. She knew that meant a clam bake and all sorts of delightful stories after.

The moment Betty's back was turned, Carl looked about him for a hiding place. He did not mean to be at the picnic if he could help it.

Not finding any place around the cottage where he could hide he hurried toward some high rocks quite near the shore. He meant to hide behind them until they would get tired looking for him and get on with the picnic without him. "Perhaps they'll forget all about me" he muttered. He had just got into a comfortable position behind the rock when Auntie May came out on the verandah and called him. For a moment the thought came to his mind that he should let her know where he was, but the deceitful little spirit in him would not let him, so he kept still.

For a long time Auntie May called "Carl, Carl, Carl", but he did not reply. "He must have gone with his mother", she said at last, "but I did not understand that she intended taking him with her."

She did not think of asking the other children, when at last she went to the beach with a dainty lunch and their bathing suits, and the children themselves were too busy watching the clams bake and gathering drift wood to keep the fire going, to even remember their rather difficult cousin Carl. In fact it was such a pleasure to play without him that, after the first little wonder as to where he had gone, they decided that if he did not want to come to the picnic he could stay away.

At first Carl thought it great fun to be hiding from the others, but as time went on and they seemed to have forgotten him, he began to feel rather abused that no greater outcry had been made about his absence, and dug his sandalled heels viciously into the sand at the foot of the rocks. Tiring of that, he moved out a little into the sunlight, lay down on his back and watched the gulls circling around overhead. "I wish that I had wings" he murmured sleepily. "I wish you had too", a soft, sweet voice said quite near him, "but I am afraid you never will have. You're disposition is too heavy." "Too heavy?" Carl said, looking around in surprise. A dainty fairy with long yellow curls and clear bright, blue eyes was sitting on the top of a deep green wave not far off, watching him with rather a disdainful look.

"Who are you?" Carl demanded, in his most bustering voice—the voice he used when he wanted to make Betty afraid of him.

"I do not answer people who use that tone to me" replied the fairy, dipping her hands in the water and dashing it over Carl until he was drenched to the skin and oh, so cold.

"Please, please!" begged Carl, trying to move out of reach of the water, but something seemed to be holding him. Try as he would he could not escape the drenching water.

"More than that" the fairy continued "I do not like children, especially boys who tell lies."

"I do—don't tell lies" gasped Carl as another shower of water struck him.

"Oh you don't, eh!" snapped the fairy. "You did not tell all of the little children on this beach that you could go away, way out in the ocean on your side of the world and not be afraid, eh? What was that but a lie? And more than that, you are telling me a lie right now."

"Telling a lie right now?" gasped Carl in surprise. He knew that he was much too afraid to tell a lie just then, and he wondered.

Lovingly,

Aunt Jean

SPORT FOR THE FUN OF IT
(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

Eddie Eagan, now a lawyer in his homeland, was an American Rhodes scholar at Oxford. He was a world's amateur boxing champion, and having quite a reputation as an athlete was invited to take part in the Oxford sports.

First he was introduced to rugby. The game was a bit strange to him. The players wore nothing except a shirt, shorts, shoes and stockings. He had learned the American code with protective armor, flung himself violently at his opponents and bowled them over after hardening himself by tackling dummies. In his first game at Oxford he tackled in full-bodied American style and disabled the other side's best man for the rest of the game. There were only students on the sidelines. No vast stadium; just a nice playing field.

At supper that night he found his colleagues were strangely silent. He felt a frigid atmosphere and asked one of his friends about it. "You play frightfully rough," he was told. "It isn't necessary to cripple your opponent. A game is for enjoyment and an injured leg isn't fun, you know."

Eagan was a guest at the home of the Duke of Hamilton, whose son, the Marquis of Clydesdale, was a fellow student, who not long ago achieved fame by flying over Mount Everest. The house party got up a game of cricket. Everybody played. There were gray-haired gentlemen, middle-aged ladies and boys of 10. All took their turn at bat. When it was over they discussed the incidents of the play as if they had taken part in a Test match. "One forgot," writes Mr. Eagan in the Christian Science Monitor, "who won. It didn't matter anyway. They did not care how good or how bad a player was so long as he played the game—played cricket."

When rebuked for rough play at rugby Eagan learned the main difference between English and American sport. The Englishman, he says, takes his sport as a leisurely relaxation, requiring little in the way of external equipment. To the American it is a very serious business that demands gymnasiums, stadiums, publicity and business organization. The emphasis is put on champions and championships. The American sports writers encourage the ideal. They "ballyhoo" the "kings of the ring," the "king of swat," "the four horsemen of football," and they decry the loser. A baseball or football season is only successful when the home team wins; the good playing of the losing team is little applauded. As athletes Americans become specialists; they strive to become experts in one sport, rather than to enjoy several.

British athletes are still taking part in competitive sport when past fifty. General Poore, the uncle of the Marquis, played for England in Test cricket when in his fifties. The Hon. Michael Scott won the British amateur golf championship against the best players in Britain and the United States last summer at the age of 55. Nobody laughs an oldish player in England. In the United States they are the butt of satiric jibes. Yet the younger British athletes hold their own at the Olympic games and other international sports.

"But I do wish," adds Mr. Eagan, "we Americans could enjoy ourselves at our games as much as our cousins across the water."

Strike hard, friend Life; the sweetest songs this old world hears have all been set to music in the key of tears.

—Ernestine Coburn.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON-SERMON

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, September 2nd., is "Christ Jesus."

The Golden Text is: "Who-soever believeth that Jesus the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him." (1 John 5: 1)

The following passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom and the grace of God was upon him." (Luke 2: 40).

"Man as the offspring of God, as the idea of Spirit, is the immortal evidence that Spirit is harmonious and man eternal. Jesus was the offspring of Mary's self-conscious communion with God. Hence he could give a more spiritual idea of life than other men, and could demonstrate the Science of Love—his Father, or divine Principle." (Science and Health pages 29 and 30).

EARNING $79 WEEKLY, FAMILY ON DOLE

"Unemployed" on the dole uprooted by investigators in Montreal recently included a man, supposedly earning $3 a week on a part-time job. The true revenue of the family, however, was found to be $79 a week, several grown-up children all being employed. The applicant was collecting for a family of five. He was working himself and the family was settled at a summer camp, where they had three employed boarders.

MAYORALTIES AND HOUEDE FAMILY LINKED

It would seem that in connection with a mayor's post and the Houede family, the job goes seeking the man.

In three municipalities in Quebec province—one of them the metropolis of the Dominion—the mayors are all named Houede, and all are relatives.

Camillien Houede, of political fame, is mayor of Montreal, his cousin Camillien Houede, is mayor of the parish of Lotbiniere, and another cousin, Alberic Houede, is mayor of the village of Lotbiniere. The last two named are brothers.

VICTORIA, B. C.

The city of Victoria had its origin in a Hudson's Bay fort. Anticipating that under the Oregon treaty, then being drawn up, the 49th Parallel would be chosen as the international boundary line, the Hudson's Bay Company, in 1843, moved its fort from Vancouver on the Columbia River, to the southern end of Vancouver Island.

It was around this fort, first named Camosack or Camosun, then Albert, for the prince consort, then Victoria, for the reigning queen, that the city grew. But while it was the Hudson's Bay Company that gave the city its impetus, it was the gold rush into the Cariboo in 1858 that started it on its career to the status of a city. From a population of a few hundred, the figure leaped to 20,000 in a few weeks and Victoria's destiny was assured.

B. C. NUDIST COLONY FIRMLY ESTABLISHED

British Columbia's nudist colony, the only one to exist in Canada, is firmly established and has elicited no complaints from the police authorities this summer.

Operation of the colony became known shortly after Edmonton reported plans under way for a colony at Fallis, a summer resort near the Alberta capital. Opposition to the proposed Fallis encampment is being made.

The British Columbia colony is on Vancouver Island, 20 miles from Victoria. Membership is reported to be by invitation only with all members adhering to strict regulations. The colony is said to consist of several groups, the largest numbering eight to 21 persons.

Week-end gatherings are the chief feature of the nudists. They are held at the many lakes in the Sooke Hills and all are on private property. Members claim they derive great benefit physically and mentally from the absorption of sunrises. Most of the members are said to be from city offices.

AN EXAMPLE OF THRIFT

Here in Lethbridge (says a refreshing article in the Lethbridge Herald) we have had an example of Scottish thrift. There are plenty of things which as a community we need and would like to have—paved streets, a better city hall, finer parks and playgrounds, to mention a few. We might have kept borrowing more and more money to pay for the things we wanted. We didn't. We got along without. We tried to pay our way as we went, at the same time laying by money to pay off the existing debenture debt.

This year, we are told, more than 80 percent of the city's debt will have been wiped out. Interest and sinking fund charges which today take about half of the levy for city purposes will have been almost wiped out.

Will Lethbridge pay as it goes thereafter? Will it pave its streets out of current taxes, build its buildings out of money saved up for that purpose?

Lethbridge and a lot of the towns and school districts in Southern Alberta are rapidly cleaning off their indebtedness incurred during the boom times. Let's think this matter over very carefully and see whether we cannot in future get along by paying as we go, incurring no further debt except in case of absolute emergency.

And we can well afford to give thought to whether we cannot do the same thing in our farming operations and in all our business dealings.

The way to save billions is to pay as you go.

THE STURDY SCOT (Brantford Expositor)

Ottawa newspapers are commenting in favorable terms on the number of Scotch names to be found in the new city directory.

Without the slightest thought of being invidious it is worth remarking, that the sturdy Scot has played a prominent part in the development of our nationhood. To this new land he brought those qualities of thrift and tenacity of purpose which have everywhere left their mark.

The late Principal Grant of Queen's University, returning from a trip around the world, said: "Wherever I have been and found a good thing, a Scotchman was sitting beside it." This was a tribute to the Scot's sharp appreciation of values, as also to his love of adventure. South Waterloo, large sections of Oxford and Perth, were settled by pioneers from Auld Scotia in the early part of the Nineteenth Century, and their prosperous descendants are still there.

In later years we made some of our blunders in the matter of immigration, by bringing in thousands who did not so readily adapt themselves to the Canadian atmosphere. We were in too much of a hurry to get population, and lost our sense of discrimination. The case of the Doukhobors is illustrative, although there were other nationals who have not yet been entirely assimilated. It is a strange commentary on our impulsiveness of forty years ago that today our gates are practically closed to the immigrant.

POLICEWOMEN INDISPENSABLE

Policewomen may be discarded in London—but not in Chicago. Police Commissioner Allman shook his head when he heard that the London women police force was being disbanded.

"Chicago policewomen are among our best assets," he said. "They are indispensable for certain duties."

MILLION HOUSES WANTED

Erection of 1,000,000 houses to be rented at $2.50 a week, including taxes, is advocated by the British National Housing Committee headquarters, by Lord Amulree, in a report just issued. The committee proposes the creation of a housing commission, under the Minister of Health, to take charge of housing and the provision of $2,000,000,000 to carry through the project. The report is signed by Lord Amulree (chairman), Lord Balfour of Burleigh, E. Beddington Behrens, Sir Basil Blackett, Sir Edgar Bonham-Carter, Alfred C. Bosson, Sir Theodore Chambers, B. Seeborn Rowntree and Sir Raymond Unwin. It is in addition to houses required to replace slum dwellings that the million new houses are required, the committee states.

ANCIENT CITY UNEARTHED

Soviet archaeologists have discovered the ancient city of Nissa, once capital of the Parthian Empire, according to announcement by the official Russian news agency.

On the Turkestan-Persia border the excavators uncovered a city three miles in diameter. Towers still standing on the town walls were found at a distance of 600 yards apart.

A thousand years ago they were used as watchtowers by the Parthian warriors who exacted tribute from all caravans passing from China and Persia to Greece and the Caucasus.

POVERTY IN NEW YORK

"Nowhere in the world have I seen such poverty as in the poorest sections of New York and Chicago," said Charles Dukes, Lancashire, secretary of the National Union of General and Municipal Workers on his return from the United States where he attended the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

"The depression, although it reached the United States later than England, has been felt much more severely there. There was no preparation for it, and no adequate effort to meet conditions now. The 'dole' would be Godsend to the unemployed there now."

The same views were expressed by the other British delegate to the convention, William Holmes, secretary of the National Union of Agricultural Workers. The United States are 40 years behind Britain in the matter of social legislation, he said. They have done almost nothing to ameliorate the conditions of workers during depression or to relieve them from the hardships that overtake them periodically through no fault of their own, although considerable progress has been made in compensating workers for death or injury in industrial accidents.

POLICE RECORDS OPEN TO INSPECTION

In the case of Times-Dispatch Publishing Co. vs. Sheppard et al., Judge Ingram of the Hastings Court of the City of Richmond, Virginia, held that all the police records of the city of Richmond, whether kept at police headquarters or at the various police stations in the said city, or elsewhere, are public records, and that the public may not be barred from access to and the right to inspect and copy any of the said records; but that certain of the records of unfinished police business may for reasons of public policy be temporarily withheld from public inspection and from publication, and decided that as to such records there is a discretion lodged in the Department of Public Safety of the City of Richmond, Va., which discretion may, by that department through the chief of police, be properly and reasonably exercised, but not otherwise.

He also held that finished police business, consisting of the information on the police blotters at the police stations and at police headquarters, namely, the record and list of arrests, with the names and descriptions of arrested persons, and the charges against them, as well as the warrants which have been executed and returned, are finished police business and become immediately public records to which public policy demands prompt and immediate access, with the right of inspection and copying for publication, or other proper purposes, and that to deny such rights in any case is contrary to law and public policy.

Boy Scouts, the World Over

Copper at The Pas

A "Copper Trail" at The Pas was the modern kind—pennies placed on a chalk line. Boy Scouts "watched the pennies grow" until there were sufficient for the needs of a tonsil clinic for some needy children.

Boys' All Night Fight with Fire

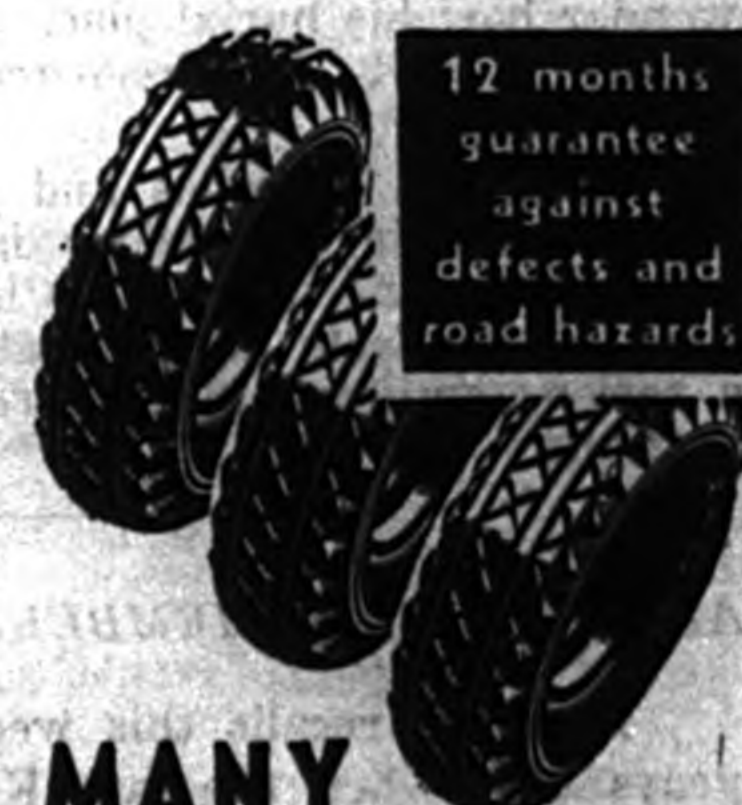

An all-night fight with a forest fire was the thrilling experience of five members of the 18th Halifax Scout Group. At the troop cabin on the Waverly reforestation area when the fire was discovered, they at once volunteered to accompany the ranger, and fought the flames until finally conquered at dawn.

Modern Sea Rovers

A safe and clean bathing beach for the people of Anyox, B.C., was the public service project carried out by the Anyox Rover Sea Scouts this summer. A footwalk for each bathing house was built from low water mark, and life guards maintained during bathing hours. A flag informed parents that a Rover life guard was on duty.

A Ten Year Old Man

According to a Chicago paper, the manly self-possession of a ten year old Wolf Cub, Billy Gerry, of Guelph, Ont., provided the unique incident of a motor accident in which his grandmother was fatally hurt and his mother and a cousin seriously injured. After telling police what to do with the wrecked car, the small lad accompanied the injured women to the Woodlawn hospital. There the question of payment was raised. The Junior Scout produced and emptied his purse of 75 cents. "Don't worry, lady," he said, "I'll pay for my Mother. I'm a Canadian Scout. I'll look after everyone until my Dad comes."

WHAT OF JACQUES CARTIER?

While the commemoration of Cartier's great adventure has drawn pilgrims to the shores of Gaspé, including celebrities from four countries—and while a shrine has been erected where the explorer first set foot in Canada four centuries ago—it is strange that these posthumous honors give scant thought for the earthly remains of so great a man.

Concerning the resting place of Jacques Cartier, the hero of Saint Malo, there was a communication recently published in the London Times, which said in part—"I wonder how many of your readers have seen his burial place. Along the dusty road from Parame to Cancale are two or three villages. In the second village (I am not sure if it is La Meltrie) is a very small mixed school—three small cottages together. Over the door of the end cottage is a cross, and as you look through you see the third small classroom, and by the east wall a small Renaissance altar of very poor quality. In front of it is some deal boarding, on the top of which are the desks and forms where the children do their lessons. Under this boarding, so the school mistress told me, lies Jacques Cartier, and I wonder how his burial place can be so poor and mean."—Rev. A. R. Tremearn, Redbourne Vicarage, Lincs.

Banquets, speeches and monuments are in accord with this auspicious date; but, as an Ottawa correspondent suggests in quoting this clipping, if the facts are as stated there has been a serious omission in the program of the celebrations.

ARGENTEUIL REMEMBERS

Montreal recalls this week an event of 74 years ago, when the late King Edward, then Prince of Wales, honored the "Grand Municipal Concert" with his presence while visiting the metropolis. Seventy-four years ago last Monday night, at the Ball Pavilion (then the largest ballroom in the world, located off St. Catherine Street, between Peel and what is now Stanley Street), H.R.H. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, danced from 10 p.m. until 4.30 on the following morning.

Argenteuil County has its own recollections, equally interesting, of this same week in 1860. It was then that the village of Carillon played host to the young Prince, as the royal party entrained from the S.S. Prince of Wales to meet the S.S. Phoenix at Grenville, thence proceeding on their way to Ottawa. The Prince of Wales was a craft specially constructed and named by the Ottawa River Navigation Company for this grand occasion. The railway approach at Carillon was adorned with flags and evergreen arches; there were dense and admiring crowds as Royalty stepped forth—where in this year of grace, on any sunny afternoon, fishermen may be seen plying their rods, oblivious to the associations of the ground beneath them.

In the glamor of reminiscence, Montreal has nothing on this ancient territory of the Ottawa Valley. Our local historian, Dr. B. N. Wales, records this royal visit in his book, Memories of Old St. Andrews, now in the course of publication. There are other, strictly local and more amusing references, to this loyal visit to the colony, besides a wealth of tradition and romance, which will imbue the routine of local inhabitants with much of interest in their daily contacts. Those interested in this fascinating volume should place their order with the publisher in good time.

ANOTHER INAUGURATION

As an inaugural gesture to usher a number of new ambulances into the service of New York City, Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, was supposedly run over at a street intersection. Several hundred persons gazed on the scene, including Mayor La Guardia, while an ambulance hastened up and drove Dempsey to the hospital. He jumped out; more people cheered.

Other cities initiate their machinery with less ceremony—and considerably less melodrama.

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 28.—Here in beautiful and tranquil Ottawa, it is easy to develop a sort of cheap optimism about conditions and to lose sight of the really desperate conditions which Canadians are coping with here and there across the Dominion. No one wants to be a professional crepe hanger, and the instinct of most of us is to look on the bright side of things as much as possible. But there is no sense in shutting one's eyes to the facts. The conditions are there, and we have got to do the best we can about them.

These reflections arise out of a trip I took this week in Montreal, where I had a chat with Mayor Houde. I came away from the city rather deeply disturbed over its financial condition, which, of course, is similar to that of other municipalities in other parts of the country.

And what is that? Well, in a sentence: thousands of workers are unemployed, thousands of families on relief, the city treasury is about dry, the taxpayer is burdened to the limit, the city is facing bankruptcy. What is badly needed is money—lots of it, to finance work, to provide relief, medical services and all the rest of it. Now where can the money be secured? The province also has a deficit; so has the federal government. The latter has been handing over money pretty freely, but the time comes when even that great well is dry.

Meantime there are large obligations—particularly to the bond holders who came through with the money when Montreal wanted to expand, add to its utilities, erect buildings and so forth.

Only about Four Solutions

It seems to me that in the Montreal problem—and it is similar to that of Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver, and lots of others—there are only four possible ways out:

1. Repudiate its debts
2. Get more money from the taxpayers
3. Get more money from Quebec City or Ottawa.
4. Refund its funded debt at lower interest rates.

A fifth may occur to the reader, namely,—economize further, tighten the belt, reduce relief rates, salaries, etc. Possibly something in this line can be done. But I believe that the great bulk of Montreal's expenditures are fixed and uncontrollable, at least without extraordinary action. And as for relief rates, they are near the danger line.

The first is a course which no city can contemplate with equanimity. Aside from it being dishonest, it is unwise, for it destroys the city's credit and makes future borrowing difficult and expensive.

The second is a sorry prospect, because the taxpayer is already being subject to a multitude of taxes from city, province and Dominion. Perhaps a little more could be raised from the more wealthy classes.

The third is a popular method with mayors these days, but the pickings are getting slimmer all the time.

The fourth is equivalent to asking the bondholder to take a smaller interest payment than he agreed to when he loaned the money. To many people there is no inequity about asking money lenders to take a cut in their wages, at least not when virtually everybody else has taken a cut in theirs. I think it may be taken for granted that the time is coming when re-funding of bonds at lower interest rates will be widespread. In the long run it will probably not be to the disadvantage of the bondholder, on the principle that "half a loaf is better than no bread." Better re-funding than stark bankruptcy.

Premiers like Hepburn and Pattullo are in a sorry jam. They promised their people better times, and they are finding that instead they are having to enjoin them to tighten their belts, because nasty Mr. Bennett won't give them the money they are asking for, and because they haven't any method of their own of manufacturing money.

Hepburn's condition seems to be particularly sad. The last administration seems to have left him a lot of construction debts which will have to be paid and which Mr. Bennett declines to settle. Adroit politician that he is, Mr. Hepburn reveals the unpaid debts and says: "The only way we can hope for better times is to turn Mr. Bennett out of Ottawa!"

Just time and room to say that welcome freight cuts on cattle and feed are being made to assist the drought-stricken areas, and speculative export of hay and straw is being squelched by the new Dominion Marketing Board.

RELIEF COSTING U. S. $110,000,000 MONTHLY

Direct unemployment relief will have cost the United States Government more than $2,000,000,000 by August 1. Relief officials predict another $1,000,000,000 will be added to that amount within the next year.

The Roosevelt administration will have spent $1,600,000,000 in the 13 months since Harry L. Hopkins became federal emergency relief administrator. That total does not include many millions spent by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration for foodstuffs turned over to a federal Surplus Relief Corporation for distribution to needy unemployed.

Relief expenditures now are running about $110,000,000 a month. Officials estimate 4,000,000 families—17,000,000 people—were on relief rolls in May.

Former Brownsburg Lady Died in U. S.

Late Mrs. Chas. G. King

The death occurred at North Tonawanda, N. Y., on Saturday, Aug. 18th., of Mrs. Charles G. King, formerly Miss Lena Stewart, of Brownsburg. She was the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart, and was 44 years of age. She received her early education in the Brownsburg School, later passing through Lachute Academy and afterwards taking a business course at a Montreal college. Following her residence in Montreal she went to western Canada, and for a time lived in Calgary, and later moving to Banff, where she married Mr. Charles King.

At the outbreak of the Great War Mr. King enlisted with a western battalion, going overseas in 1916. A few months later, in order to be near her husband the late Mrs. King crossed the Atlantic and took up residence in London, where she lived for several months. Later she lived in the Scottish Highlands, remaining with relatives until the end of the War. When they returned to Canada, Mr. and Mrs. King again took up residence in Calgary, later moving to North Tonawanda, N. Y. At this place she was well and favorably known, being prominent, socially and actively, in Lodge affairs.

The funeral was held on Monday, August 20th., and was largely attended. Besides her husband, the deceased leaves to mourn her loss two sons, Stewart, aged 18, and Alwyn, 14, and one daughter Joan, aged 8. There remain also four sisters, Mrs. Lalanne of St. Lambert; Miss Maimie Stewart, of Montreal; Miss Annie Stewart, and Mrs. James Flood, of Brownsburg; and also six brothers, Alex., of Calgary; Edward and Percy, of Butte, Montana; William, Robert, and Gordon, of Brownsburg.

THE THAMES

(Alfred Noyes)

It is not a large river, but it flows by the towers of the Mother of Parliaments; and by Westminster Abbey, with its memories of a thousand years. It is a river on whose wharves Dan Chaucer once made out his bills of lading; a river that flows by the Tower and Traitors' Gate; a river on which the Golden Hind was once anchored. An obscure poet once walked beside it on his way to the first performance of his play called Hamlet; like his fame, its masts have sailed since then over all the seas of the world, a river of magic indeed.

Ministers and their Brides Visit Brownsburg

Former Pastors of Maple Avenue Baptist Church, Take Active Part in Church Devotions

During last week two former pastors of the Maple Avenue Baptist Church, and their brides, were visiting in Brownsburg. Rev. J. E. Waltho, a student pastor of five years ago, now pastor of the Arkona Baptist Church, and his bride, formerly Miss Vivian Utter of Arkona, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Smillie. Mr. Charles Humber, student pastor of last year, now stationed at Belle Ewart, Ontario, and his bride, formerly Miss Evelyn Jarvis, of Toronto, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Petley.

Last Sunday these young people proved their fitness for the calling by contributing largely to both the morning and evening services. Rev. J. E. Waltho preached in the morning on "Believing unto Salvation", and Mrs. Waltho sang a contralto solo "Have Thine Own Way, Lord". Mr. Charles Humber took as his subject in the evening "Finding the Risen Christ," and Mrs. Waltho and Mrs. Humber sang a duet, "Pass Me Not, Oh Gentle Saviour".

On Monday evening, the B.Y.P.U. meeting was largely in their hands. A beautiful duet was sung, again by the two brides, with Mr. Humber at the piano. Mr. Humber also gave a Bible Character contest. Rev. J. Waltho spoke on humility and religion. This visit will not soon be forgotten. On Tuesday morning Mr. and Mrs. Humber left for Montreal, and Rev. and Mrs. Waltho for their home. Their friends in Brownsburg and vicinity wish them every joy in life and great blessing in the high work to which they have been called.

POLITICAL TALK

freed from the bondage of Jewish legalism and dead ceremonies. Out of the debt of idolatry these people had been delivered, and lest they again be enthralled in the wake of bondage Paul called them—to beware!

"The history of the struggle for liberty in the 16th. and 17th. centuries sparkles with romance and adventure, few pages of history having a more fascinating appeal to the modern student than the rise of Protestantism and the long fight for religious and political freedom.

"Our debt of gratitude to those courageous souls who purchased our liberty at so great a cost, should never be forgotten.

"The dangers that threaten the growth and prosperity of Protestantism are not persecution, not inquisition, not the prohibitive decrees of Kings and Popes, not the stake or the pillory, the dungeon or the sword—but race suicide and mixed marriages."—These were deplored by the speaker, who asserted that the three cankers eating out the life of Protestantism are—Indifference, Materialism and Moral Laxity.

"Paul insists upon the restraint of lustful desires and admonishes us to be clean, pure, holy and straight in our living. The clarion call of the first century, by that veteran champion of liberty in A.D. 58, rings out to all lovers of our evangelical faith. To all who value the freedom so dearly bought by our fathers comes this S.O.S. call, to be ever watchful and to safeguard our liberties so dearly bought."

ABOUT THE SAME

Binks: "Have you ever seen a prize-fight?"

Hinks: "No, never, but I once looked in on one of my wife's afternoon bridge parties."

Like a Cheshire Cat

Once upon a time, it is said, Cheshire cats were made in the shape of a cat, bristles being inserted to represent the whiskers. But people have queried whether it was a cat. It is said that it really was a wolf's head, as the armor of Hugh Lupus, one of the earls of Chester, had a wolf's head on the coat. A cat's face is seen on the arms of the city of Chester, but the old drawing of a wolf, or, as some say, a leopard, in the city arms, might easily have been taken for a grinning cat, hence the saying, "Grinning like a Cheshire cat."

The Doldrums

When a person is suffering from low spirits or mental depression he is said to be in the doldrums. "Doldrums" is an old English word of uncertain derivation. Some authorities suppose it to be related in origin to "dull" and "dolt." "The doldrums" is the popular name for a shifting oceanic zone lying near the equator between the trade winds and noted for its calms and light, baffling winds, which in the old days sometimes prevented all progress of sailing vessels for weeks.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Reveals a New World

The complexity of the diatom forms need be no barrier to the layman who desires to find them for himself. There are a number of very low-priced microscopes that will reveal to him not only the diatom, but also another world of things, the very existence of which he has not even dreamed. A student-type microscope with a power of magnification from 50 to 150 diameters is sufficient for the beginner and, if desired, an additional eyepiece may be obtained later that will increase its power to 250 diameters.

A Loss—Blithers: "I see that they're going to remove all feeble-minded persons from the world. Isn't that wonderful?" Smithers: "Yes, but who will write the words for popular songs?"—Railway Employees' Journal.

"Small Town Stuff"

The writer answers the question: "What is the small town?" by saying that it is a place where everybody isn't three months behind in their instalments, where homes are filled with Canadians, where the wild life which stays out all night belongs to the cat family, where the way of the transgressor is hard, where the Cop calls you "Bill" instead of "Hey, you!", where the editor gets results if he announces that he is out of potatoes, and where people can tell all about one another by seeing the family wash out on the line.

He might have added that the small town is the place where the leaders of the city world are bred and groomed. A list of the big men born in small towns would take up too much space, but Woolworth, Doherty, Chrysler, Ford, Eastman, Edison, the Wright brothers, Loblaw, Franklin, Fulton, Morse and Lindbergh are but a few of the well known names of small town people who went to the big city and taught it things it did not know.

Why does the small town area produce such a great per cent of its leaders? What is there about this small town stuff which breeds statesmen, inventors, showmen, merchant princes and industrial magnates?

Perhaps it is because in the small town there is a peace which enables a man to have leisure to think things out. He doesn't have to spend half a day getting to his office and home again, and almost as much time getting to the golf course for a bit of recreation. He is close to people and close to his job. He has time to listen and is not carried off his feet by passing fads, economic brain storms or mass psychology. He learns what real work is and when they go to the city they give their whole selves to their tasks and succeed. The city man is handicapped by never having really learned what hard work is.

Let us keep our small town enthusiasm and optimism, our small town thoughtfulness and clean-mindedness. Let us pray to retain the proud title of "small town stuff," and hope to live up to traditions of the small town people who have for generations led the world in every line.

—Canadian Statesman.

BOY SCOUTS KNEW THEIR FLAG TECHNIQUE

A city druggist who flew a sidewalk flag in front of his store was mystified when a boy entered and offered his help. "Help with what?" asked the druggist. "Whatever you need, sir. Your flag is upside down—a signal of distress." Enjoying the joke, the druggist left the flag as it was. And during the day more than a score of Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs came in to tell him his flag was "up wrong."

Quadricentenary of Cartier's Discovery of Canada

On August 27th. the four hundredth anniversary of the landing in Canada of Jacques Cartier, prominent men of Great Britain, France and the United States united with Canadians in commemorating his discovery of the great St. Lawrence River.

The celebrations were opened first at Charlottetown, P.E.I., and continuing at Gaspe, Que., a feature of the celebration. at that historic spot, where Cartier first landed, was the unveiling of a great cross carved in stone hewn from a quarry at St. Malo, France, the port from which the hardy explorer set out on his epochal voyage. Premier R. B. Bennett of Canada officiated at the unveiling.

Mr. Bennett read a message from King George, sending thanks for expressions of continued loyalty and devotion, which had been forwarded on behalf of the Canadian Government and people.

His Majesty said in the course of his message: "I am convinced the spirit and courage which animated those heroes of old still remain a precious heritage and under God's guidance will continue today to inspire the peoples of Canada in their united efforts for the greater happiness and prosperity of this great Dominion."

The story of Cartier's voyage of discovery four centuries ago tells how the explorer, after his ships crossed the Atlantic and negotiated the passage north of Newfoundland, anchored opposite the Isle of Anticosti in Pillage Bay. This Cartier named the Bay of St. Lawrence and afterward gave that name to the river also. He and his companions landed at what is now Gaspé Harbor and set up a rude wooden cross. The stone cross has been erected on the site of Cartier's wooden one.

From Gaspé, Cartier and his comrades explored the river in long boats as far as the site of Montreal.

Three bells, cast by famous Belgian bell-makers, were placed within the towering spire of the Christ-Roy Memorial Basilica, erected at Gaspé to honor Cartier.

Dignitaries of four countries assembled later at the ancient citadel of Quebec to pay further homage to Jacques Cartier.

The big French ocean liner Champlain, with hundreds of guests from France, steamed into Quebec Harbor with a convoy of three French warships. Representatives of Canada, England and the U. S. arrived from Gaspé by special trains, presenting an impressive assembly at the final exercises of the celebration.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE PROGRAMME PLANNING

A woman who is a University graduate and has been interested in various women's clubs and organizations in a large city said that she felt that she had considerable experience in programme planning but had her eyes opened when she came to live in a small town and had something to do with planning the Institute programmes. The Institute programmes were made to a definite plan and were much more intelligently planned than any other programmes with which she had come in contact. Hats off to the Women's Institutes.

GOING HOME

Most people have a sentiment for the place in which they spent their early years. If they have moved about it is apt to be the place in which they spent their adolescent years as sentiment is quickened then and friendships are quickly and easily made and are apt to be very intense. People look forward to going home and if an interval of years has passed there is apt to be considerable disappointment. Changes that we see in the making are not noticed much but when we come home and they strike us all at once that is different. One man who had not been in his home town since just after the war, came home and felt fearfully let down. He went down town and did not happen to see a soul he knew. Even the stores on Main Street were run by different people. The river was a shock. It flows through the centre of the town, and when he saw it last was a busy little stream. Now it is a gentle trickle and the old river bed is almost devoid of water. The Mill Pond was the greatest disappointment of all. As a youngster it was there he had spent many happy hours running logs, swimming, and have a good time generally. But the Mill Pond has completely disappeared. It is dry-land in the very place where there used to be several feet of water. It comes as a shock to realize that places as well as people change.

WHAT NOT TO DO

Mothers have heard so much about the value of the sun for their babies that some of them are a bit inclined in overdo it. The sun is a valuable friend but can be a powerful enemy. It always makes me very cross when I see babes out in a glaring sun with no protection whatever. The other Sunday we were at the river and it must have been field-day for all the babies in the neighborhood for they were there by the dozen—oh, well, there were quite a few anyhow. It was a boiling hot day and these babies of different ages got all the sun there was, except for one or two who had the good sense to bring their grandmothers along, and then they stayed in the car in the shade. Another day I saw a baby who looked to be a little over a year, in its pen in the middle of the lawn at noon on one of the very hottest days. It had only a sun suit on and nothing on its head. Babies' heads need some protection from the very hot sun. A floppy sun hat is best as it protects the nape of the neck—just as the old-fashioned sun-bonnet used to do. It is not necessary to put the babies in the sun in the middle of the day in the very hot weather to have them derive benefit from it. If you put them in the shade they get what the scientists call sky shine and this will do the babies more good than the too hot sun. They need direct sunshine too but it must be used with discretion.

A SIMPLE CONSTIPATION REMEDY

There are many people who find that drinking water at least a half hour before breakfast is sufficient to relieve constipation. Sometimes cold water is satisfactory but warm water is better. Drink at least a glass of water, not hot so that it has to be sipped but cool enough to drink. This does not invariably help as constitutions differ but it so frequently does and is such a simple remedy that it is worth trying.

BLAME SOMEONE ELSE

The City Council announces that if and, also, when the taxes go up, it must not be blamed. Requirements of other branches of the civil service have been lowered but the school board has raised its levy. Arguments have been started on much less.

ORILLIA EXPECTS INDUSTRY

The town of Orillia is negotiating with the Canadian Mechanical Rubber Corporation in the hope of having that firm locate there. At a special meeting of the Town Council held recently, a tender of Royal Securities Limited was approved. This, it is reported, covered the issuing of $50,000. worth of bonds that the purchase of a suitable factory might be made.

The press carries the following report: "According to the triple agreement between the town, the rubber corporation, and James B. Tudhope, owner of the factory property, the purchase price is to be reinvested in the company. The company has already shipped $70,000. of machinery here, and is expected to begin operations in a few weeks."

Strict Treasury Rules as to Damaged Money

There is no federal law forbidding the total destruction of coins by their owners. But there is a statute forbidding the mutilation or lightening of a coin in such a way that the original coin may later be circulated in its impaired condition. It is also illegal to deface a coin without removing any part of it.

Occasionally the ashes of burned money are identified by the Treasury department and redeemed at face value. But no relief is granted by the government to the owners of paper currency totally destroyed. Three-fifths or more of a mutilated United States paper currency bill, note or certificate is redeemable at face value by the Treasury department. When less than three-fifths, but clearly more than two-fifths of the original bill remains, it is redeemable at one-half the face value of the original bill. Such fragments, however, must be accompanied by satisfactory evidence, as affidavits, subscribed and sworn to before a notary public, setting forth the cause and manner of destruction.

Needed the Trappings to Lure "Other Sucker"

The late Chief Justice William Howard Taft told, with many characteristic chuckles, this story to which an obvious political moral can be attached, says Collier's Magazine.

An old Quaker who wore the characteristic old-time Quaker costume—wide-brimmed, flat hat and shad-bellied coat—sold a horse to an ordinary citizen.

After the horse had traveled a few miles and the dope had died out, it proved to have spavin, ring-bone, heaves, incipient blindness and other horse maladies. In great anger and with much difficulty the stung purchaser dragged the decrepit wreck back to the man from whom it had been obtained at a fair price.

On seeing the irate buyer and the tottering horse approach, the Quaker slapped his hand forbiddingly and cried out:

"Thee bought him of thine own volition! Thee bought him with thine eyes open—"

"Yes, but—"

"I repeat, thee bought him willingly; I did not force him on thee; I can do nothing for thee!"

"Oh, shut up!" said the victim. "I don't ask you to take the animal back. I just wanted to borrow your coat and hat so I could sell him to some other sucker."

Philosopher Sets Fifty as Golden Age of Man

While drinking a bumper of apple cider, there awhile back, one day at a roadside caravansary, a man asked us what age would we choose to be if we could live for a thousand years.

It was a funny question to ask. Maybe we would not care to live a thousand years more. And yet we sometimes think we would. It might be interesting to see what the world will be like a thousand years from now. Well, anyway, we said if we could have the say about it, we would decide to go through the thousand years at the age of fifty. Not twenty-one nor ninety-one, but fifty.

Fifty seems to be the ideal age, writes John Steven McGroarty, in the Los Angeles Times. A normal man or woman ought to be in ideal shape at fifty. Still virile, not yet senile, all the mistakes and follies of youth left behind.

No doubt others will not agree with us, but, anyway, fifty would be our choice.

50 Years Ago.

Sept. 5th., 1884.

The trustees of District School No. 1 are to be congratulated on their new school-house in the West End. The building was constructed by Noël Larose and was erected during the vacation period.

Mr. Robert Newton, son of Jno. Newton, while making some repairs required at the mill belonging to his father in Glen Morrison, on Tuesday last met with his death. The water wheel not working freely, he went down into the flume or pipe, when the earth caved in at the end in connection, with the flood gate. Water lumber and earth came with such force he was unable to make his escape and was drowned.

Messrs. McQuat and McRae have just completed the first part of their contract for the Locks between Grenville and Carillon. Some castings turned out weighed over 700 lbs.

Tom Pollock of Hill Head, got his leg broken by a kick from a horse he was shoeing the other day.

Jno. Rodger Sr. while on his way home with a load of grain saw a bear entering the field he was leaving; he hastened home to procure his gun and bagged the bear, which weighed nearly 400 lbs.

Zoo Specimens Come High

Lions are the lords of the jungle, but their value on the open market is often much less than that of other animals. A good gorilla usually is worth about $1,000, while lions have sold for even less than $200. And a gorilla is a risky purchase because the climate of most American cities is hard on the big apes. In the zoo market, the rhinoceros brings the highest price—$500 or more. Snakes are sold by the foot, some of the more interesting varieties selling at $15 a foot. Giraffes run the rhinos a close race in price. A pair of angelfish are snapped up at $100. Among birds, the little blue lovebirds are worth their weight in gold.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Gorilla Walks on All Fours

Contrary to popular belief, the gorilla walks on all fours, points out a writer in Boys' Life Magazine. "There have not been many gorillas brought out of Africa," says he, "and most of them have lived only a few months in captivity. Gorillas have only recently been brought to the attention of the world. The first gorilla in England arrived in 1837, and the first exhibited by the London Zoological society was received in 1855. On the other hand, an Indian rhinoceros was shown in Europe in 1513, a giraffe was sent to the emperor of Germany in 1559, and the first elephant in England was presented by the king of France to Henry III in 1255."

25 Years Ago.

Sept. 3, 1909.

Mr. Jno. MacKimmie, who has been attending the Golden Wedding of his parents, left for his home in Aurora on Wednesday, in order to proceed with a contract just awarded to him for the construction of the Napierville Dept. at a cost of $25,000.

Horses passing through Brownsburg should be grateful to Mr. J. McDonald for his thoughtfulness in building a substantial watering trough by the roadside in which cool spring water is constantly running.

The West River is getting its annual tired feeling and the D. C. Coy. can barely get it to furnish sufficient water to keep them running.

Among the boys who took in the excursion to the West on Thursday, were Jas. Warwick, Jas. Stewart, Lex. MacGibbon, and Alex. Tomalty.

A very enjoyable afternoon was spent at the home of R. Horner on Aug. 23rd., when his daughter Nellie was entertained at a birthday party by many of her friends.

The social held at Mrs. J. Healtie's was most successful and added $16.25 to the Church treasury.

The Compliment

Jinks meant well, but somehow he was always putting his foot in it. At the seaside carnival dance he was introduced to a young woman whose proportions were anything but meager. Jinks asked her for a dance.

"I am only free for the last dance," she replied, "and I cannot pledge myself for that because I'm afraid my people will be leaving early."

Jinks thought he saw a chance for a compliment, and said, "Oh, how empty the place will seem when you've gone!"

Unsubstantial

Some Los Angeles reporters had buttonholed Death Valley Scotty for the hundredth time, trying to get a new story out of him. When he flatly refused to talk about his new palace out in the desert one of the boys asked:

"You won't be as lonely out there as you think. Suppose one of these airplane companies decides to make it a stopping place? By the way, what do you think of these cross-continent airship companies?"

"Aw, nothing but fly-by-night schemes," snorted Scotty.

Step out into the SUNSHINE

How many days of your life are lost in feeling under par? How many hours which might be bright are dull and spiritless?

Half-hearted days are frequently due to common constipation. It clouds your waking hours, takes the sunshine out of living. Yet it can be overcome so easily by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN is also a fine source of iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this "cereal way" pleasanter than risking patent medicines?

Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal or use in muffins, breads, omelets, etc. In the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

The return of the bicycle to popularity may be due to the fact that so many people desire to combine a sense of safety with the thrill of rounding a corner on two wheels.—Exch.

The "Talking Book" -- Exhibit at Canadian National Exposition

The talking book, one of the latest sensations in the world of the blind, is now being demonstrated at the Exhibit of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in the Electrical and Engineering Building at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. This year, for the first time, all the activities in which blind persons are engaged are being carried out on the premises, and every phase of the Institute's Canadian-wide programme is included.

The National Library of the Institute which contains over 17,500 volumes is conducting a booth where Braille books are on view, and a Braille typewriter operated. The current issue of the monthly Braille magazine "The Courier" sent out by the National Library to all parts of Canada, is being produced, showing the process of Braille printing, followed by the stitching of leaves together.

Thirty-one blind persons are present, some demonstrating home handicrafts, another turning out attractive dresses and aprons on one of the power driven machines used in the garment factories of the Institute located in Toronto and Winnipeg.

Rubber door mats made from old automobile tires are being manufactured in the booth representing the Western Division of the Institute (British Columbia and Alberta) and netting is one of the occupations found in the booth of the Newfoundland Division. In between these two extremities comes the Central Western Division (Saskatchewan and Manitoba) where a blind man is caning chairs, next a blind girl from the Quebec Division typing letters on a standard typewriter taking her dictation from the dictaphone, and a blind man in the Maritime Division booth (New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island) demonstrating the manufacture of willow signal cones used by the Dominion Meteorological Department for weather signalling on the sea coast.

The Industrial Placement Department arranged for a blind man employed in industry by a well-known sporting goods company to carry on with his regular job of stringing tennis racquets, another to fit spokes in joy cycle wheels, while a blind employee in one of the Motor Car Companies is demonstrating his job of stuffing cushions for automobiles and assembling control handles for car windows.

Games used by the blind such as Braille playing cards, checkers, etc., are on display as well as Braille watches, thermometers and other appliances. In this booth information can be obtained regarding the special privileges for blind people, such as radio services, street car passes, theatre passes, etc.

Institute factory work including the process of manufacturing Blindcraft brooms is fully demonstrated with one man sorting broom corn, another winding brooms and a third sewing and clipping them. Wicker furniture is being made and serviceable baskets take shape while they are being watched.

One of the special features of the exhibit is the engaging group of dolls in the Prevention of Blindness booth, portraying, with the assistance of artistically designed verses above them, the particular care that must be taken of the eyes at various stages of life.

Literature published by the Institute is available in a number of the booths, also cards for testing vision that may as well be used for telephone number memoranda and Braille alphabet cards.

The complete structure, containing all the demonstration booths of the Institute, which is finished in red, black and cream, is constructed so that a general view of all the various activities can be seen from the main entrance, there being no high partitions between the different booths.

Soldiers and Sharpers

Perhaps the queerest of all the stories of old thieves' words is that of the expression "forlorn hope." Nowadays, it is perfectly respectable, and means a last, desperate chance. It passed into ordinary speech from military books, in which a couple of centuries ago it was used to describe an attack made by a small party of men who deliberately sacrificed themselves in order that the main body might be victorious. The army borrowed the word from the cardsharper's jargon of Elizabethan days. The forlorn hope was an accomplice who took part in a game of cards and deliberately lost in order to whet the appetites of dupes and so to make his confederates certain of winning. Every three-card trick man today employs one or more "forlorn hopes."—London Tit-Bits.
