ANNUAL MEETING OF UNITED CHURCH

ENCOURAGING EVENT
REPORTS FROM ALL DEPARTMENTS

The Annual Meeting of Lachute United Church was held on Thursday evening of last week. The Minister, Rev. W. B. Rosborough, presided, and Mr. R. C. Rogers acted as secretary.

Encouraging reports were presented by all organizations. The Session reported that 23 new members had been received during the year, 16 by profession of faith and 7 by certificate. Reference was also made to the loss sustained by the Session, and by the Church, through the death of Mr. Q. R. McAdam, who was called to higher service on May 6th. of the past year.

The Treasurer, Dr. G. A. Clunie, reported that total receipts from all sources amounted to $9,485.00. The sum of $2,358 was contributed to the Missionary and Maintenance Fund of the United Church of Canada.

The Lachute Women's Missionary Society raised $780.00, and the East Settlement W.M.S. $64.00. The Lachute Ladies' Aid Society raised $502.00 and the Thomas' Gore Ladies' Aid $87.00. The sum of $296.00 was raised during the year by the Young People's Society, of which $150.00 was contributed to missionary work.

Three Sabbath Schools, at Lachute, East Settlement, and Thomas' Gore, did good work during the year. The C.G.I.T. Groups, the Mission Band, and the Choir also presented encouraging and highly gratifying reports.

Messrs. John Falconer, H. J. Hammond, Matthew Elder, Harvey Miller, Leonard Boa, E. R. Morrin, W. H. Gordon, and Dr. J. E. Christie were elected to the Board of Stewards for a three-year period. Miss Ruth Todd was appointed as Organist, Mr. Charles Duncan, Choir Leader, and Mr. R. C. Rogers and Dr. G. A. Clunie, Secretary and Treasurer, respectively, for the ensuing year.

Rev. and Mrs. Rosborough were heartily thanked for their efforts during the year.

At the close of the business meeting a social hour was spent when refreshments were provided by the ladies.

GRIPPE SWEEPS QUEBEC CITY 2,500 PUPILS AWAY FROM SCHOOL

An epidemic of grippe is sweeping the city of Quebec according to an announcement by Dr. Valmont Martin, director of the City Health Department. Though there were no serious cases reported, Dr. Martin said, the number of children and adults was considerable. A survey of the schools revealed that 2,500 pupils were suffering from grippe and were absent.

VANKLEEK HILL GOES WET

After twenty-three years under the local option by-law, Vankleek Hill voted recently in favour of the repeal of this by-law by a straight majority of 188 votes, being 14 over the required three-fifths majority.

A very large vote was polled, 808 going to the polls.

In 1911 the local option vote which ended the sale of spirituous liquors in Vankleek Hill was 212-129, being 7 votes over the required three-fifths.

ANNUAL MEET OF HOLSTEIN CLUB

The annual meeting of Lachute Holstein Club was held in the Town Hall Saturday afternoon with Jas. McKenzie presiding. An interesting address was given by Dr. Deakin of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, who spoke on Holstein pedigree work, illustrating his talk with charts and giving a description of the record work being conducted in the United States, particularly in the state of Wisconsin. He urged the breeders of Lachute to establish healthy herds, also to take advantage of the government policies governing record of performance tests. Alex. Bothwell, agronomist of the county, also spoke briefly on the eradication of the warble fly.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted in the appointment of Russell Kennedy as president, Jas. McKenzie, vice-president, and Wm. Wilson, Sec.-Treas. Donald McPhee of Vankleek Hill, was recommended as judge of Holsteins at Lachute Fair, with William L. Carr of Huntingdon as reserve judge.

JERUSALEM PARISH COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the St. Jerusalem Parish Council was held in the Court House on Monday afternoon, with Mayor J. E. Walker presiding, there being present Councillors J. G. Hadley, A. Nichol, A. J. Scott, J. A. Armstrong and J. S. Pollock.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read by the Secretary, J. W. Gall, and adopted. The tax by-law levying a tax of 35 cents on the $100 was passed by the Council.

The Auditors' report was received at this meeting showing the Parish to be in a very strong financial position. The firm of Fletcher, Skafte & Company were re-appointed as Auditors.

CARSTEEL TO VISIT THE BURG ON SATURDAY

HOCKEY IN BROWNSBURG
(Contributed)

The greatest hockey game of the season is listed for Brownsburg on Saturday, Feb. 9th., when the great Carsteel hockey squad, leaders of the Industrial League in Montreal will try conclusions with the Brownsburg C.I.L. Social Club team.

This game is the result of a challenge issued to the Brownsburg sextette by Industrial League teams in Montreal. Arising out of a visit by the St. Lambert team to the 'Burg, in which the visitors had to submit to defeat, the League's second team Savard were sent to wipe out the set-back. After a strenuous struggle in which Savard tried all the tricks they were acquainted with, they were obliged to return to Montreal adding another defeat to the St. Lambert essay. The present match brings the leaders of the Industrial League to avenge the defeats suffered by their co-teams in the league.

Brownsburg has been playing splendid hockey for the past few weeks, and in their present form should offer the Carsteel team the sternest opposition. The 'Burg boys are under no delusion as to the calibre of their opponents. Carsteel are a first class line-up, as their position in the League testifies. They have a beautiful style of play, very fast, with brilliant combination. Their anxiety to do justice to the name they have earned may

LACHUTE PROTESTANT CEMETERY MEETING

The 19th Annual Meeting of Lachute Protestant Cemetery was held in the Town Hall last evening when, in the absence of President A. A. McQuat, the chair was filled by Vice-Pres. Dr. Clunie.

A most encouraging report was received from Secretary-Treasurer James W. Gall, showing liquid assets at $16,956.70, with no liabilities, $13,100 being in Dominion and other bonds. The trust funds are being looked after by the Royal Trust Company of Montreal. The retiring directors, Messrs Geo. Hay, Thomas Millar, H. J. Banford and Jno. Nichol were re-elected.

TOWN HAS BUSH LOT FOR UNEMPLOYED

An emergency meeting of the Town Council was called last week to deal with the unemployment issue, which is at its worst at this season of the year. This meeting resulted in the purchase of a 90-acre bush lot from Jno. Matthews, at the cost of $740. Local men out of work are now given the opportunity to take to the bush and cut cord wood of 3 ft. lengths at $1.25 a cord. While there may be a few who prefer the dole the great majority seek independence in earning their living, and the Council has adopted the logical method to cope with this situation.

Lachute Quartet Won Rankin Trophy Against Stern Competition

FOURTH ANNUAL SEIGNIORY CLUB EVENT

Honours in the fourth annual curling bonspiel for the John I. Rankin Trophy were won by a rink from Lachute, last Sunday at the Seignior Club, Lucerne. The quartet were skipped by J. R. Charron. W. M. Cottingham, lead. C. E. Richardson and G. Valois made up the team, which successfully defeated a large gathering of Eastern Canadian curlers by a margin of 16 points.

The Lachute curlers succeed

Mr. C. N. Moisan's Montreal Thistles, who won the trophy last year and who on this occasion gained a tie and lost their second game by the close score of 10-7.

The runners up, a rink of Parliamentarians skipped by Speaker J. L. Bowman, led the field in the game with an 8-pt. margin. Each of the fourteen rinks entered, represent-

UNJUST TO INCREASE GAS OR AUTO TAXES

Taxation of motorists in Quebec has risen on an ever-ascending scale until, in the short space of five years, for instance, in gasoline tax alone, their contribution to the provincial treasury has increased from 9.3 per cent of the total general revenue to 15.8 per cent, a jump of practically 65 per cent, according to a study of provincial public accounts.

In 1929 gasoline taxes represented 9.3 per cent of the total provincial revenue, in 1930, 9.1 per cent, 1931, 9.8 per cent, 1932, 13.9 per cent and 1933, 15.8 per cent, while figures for 1934 are expected to show another increase. During the same period in registrations there has been an increase from 12.5 per cent to 16.2 per cent.

Official statistics show only 55.4 per cent of the people of Quebec own cars, so on this basis, according to the latest available data, this relatively small percentage of population paid $32 out of every $100 collected by the provincial treasurer in 1933 in two taxes alone—in addition to paying their share of all other imposts including Dominion customs lev-

LOCATION OF POST OFFICE IN BROWNSBURG

Friends of the Rt. Hon. Sir George Perley were pleased to see him in Lachute and Brownsburg on Tuesday last.

The Federal Government have voted the money for construction of a post office in Brownsburg, and the location of same has held up the project for some time. However, from all reports the choice now simmers down between the Donaldson and Hardie establishments, and it is thought the best way to settle the difficulty is for the people themselves to ballot on the issue.

This ballot is being conducted from Ottawa, under the personal arrangement of Sir George Perley, who is having ballot blanks delivered to each voter concerned, same to be mailed back to Ottawa and the matter settled in accordance with the popular vote.

ies, etc., at the time they purchased their machine.

The situation is aggravated, in the opinion of motor club executives, by the fact that, generally speaking, taxes from motorists are not earmarked for the purpose for which they are levied—roads—but are used for general expenditures.

W. H. AYERS RE-ELECTED AS PRESIDENT

The newly elected board of directors of Argenteuil Agricultural Society met last Monday and named their officers for the ensuing year, with W. H. Ayers as president, J. H. Black, vice-president, and Alex. Bothwell, secretary and manager.

A letter was received from Kenneth Dawes, vice-president of the National Breweries, extending the offer to the farmers of Argenteuil, through the society, of a black stallion at a service fee of $2 per mare, all fees collected to be turned over to the society. There was a further offering of several prizes of brewers' grains. After considerable discussion it was resolved that the society approve the plan and the secretary was instructed to write Mr. Dawes accordingly. The secretary also was instructed to write the Department of Agriculture at Quebec advising them that the scheme of operations this year would be similar to that carried out in 1934. The principal business transacted was the appointment of committees for Lachute Fair, which is set for June 12 to 15.

HOTELMEN'S REQUEST MEETS OPPOSITION

A decidedly unfavorable reception was given by Provincial Government last week to the request of the Quebec Country Hotel Keepers' Association that their hotels be made agents of the Quebec Liquor Commission, and in that way be empowered to sell spirits by the bottle to the public, the Commission to be the wholesalers.

PROPOSED SOFT DRINK LEVY IS OPPOSED

Petitions to the provincial government protesting against taxing of soft drinks are being placed in Montreal stores where the drinks are sold. Likelihood that the Quebec Government will use this tax has already been admitted by Premier Taschereau.

HOCKEY ENGAGEMENTS DRAW ENTHUSIASM

END OF OFFICIAL LEAGUE SCHEDULE

Four hockey games this week concluded the official schedule, the last being played here on Tuesday. This was the Ayers-Brownsburg game in the Arena, resulting in a score of 5-1.

Feeling ran high in this engagement, owing to the close standing of the two teams, and the fact that on Thursday Ayers took their first defeat from the 'Burg on the latter's ice. This was a hard fought game (reported elsewhere in these columns by our Brownsburg correspondent). From a 4-4 tie after three periods, Brownsburg broke loose and added two counters for a clear victory. In Tuesday's game, witnessed by a full house who considered this the climax of the schedule, Ayers apparently had the edge. It was on a score by Brownsburg that a dispute arose, threatening to cut the game short. Play however, was resumed, ending with Ayers ahead 5-1.

Between these occasions were two other games, in both of which L.A.A.A. took defeat. Here at Lachute on Thursday Independents were victors to the tune of 3-1, and on Saturday at Brownsburg the latter team beat L.A. in a count which reached unbelievable proportions, 19-9, and a "good time was had by all."

NEW MAYOR AND ALDERMEN SWORN

COUNCIL OPENED IN AUSPICIOUS MANNER

COMMITTEES APPOINTED

The result of the elections held on Friday last found Dr. J. H. Mason heading the polls for the Mayoralty honors, with Mr. P. Chabot as alderman for Seat No. 3, and Mr. H. Lamarche retaining Seat No. 2 for the second term.

In a most commendable manner Dr. J. H. Mason, newly elected mayor for next two years, presided over his new council last evening after being duly sworn in by the secretary-treasurer, who also gave the oath of office to the new members.

After thanking the citizens for their confidence in selecting him to fill the chair, Dr. Mason's first act was to allot the places of the members, stating that on one occasion, while visiting the council, he had noticed that the English members were on one side of the table and the French on the other. As the council were citizens of Lachute sworn to do their duty, there must be no "party lines." "We are here to legislate for all lines and we must know no creed. Our purpose is to serve millionaire and pauper alike, and to that end I ask the patience and co-operation of the ratepayers", said Mayor Dr. J. H. Mason.

An agenda of proceedings was placed before each member of the Council and the secretary was instructed to give the report of election proceedings, after which came the reading of the minutes of previous meeting, followed by the appointment of the various committees, as follows,—

Finance—Alderman Chabot, chairman, and members of the entire council.

Roads—Aldermen Laurin, Durocher and MacGibbon.

Water—Aldermen Deacon, Lamarche and McQuat.

Police—Aldermen McQuat, Durocher and MacGibbon.

Relief—Aldermen Laurin and Muir.

Fire and Light—Messrs. Lamarche, Deslauriers, MacGibbon.

To the chairmen of the respective committees the Mayor explained the responsibilities for careful handling of the business of their departments, and hoped they would all take their tasks in a serious manner. He stated that all sessions of council would start punctually at the hour appointed.

Instructions have already been given to Mr. John Skafte, accountant, to prepare a brief summary of the town's affairs for presentation, so that the public may be enlightened as to its financial standing.

A petition was also presented from the merchants of the town requesting authority for the official closing of the stores, at 6 o'clock on the first four nights of the weeks. The mayor thought that further consideration was necessary before acting upon this petition, and a committee was named, of Aldermen McQuat, Chabot and MacGibbon, to study and report at next meeting.

Adjournment was then made until the call of the chair.

The regular Ayers line-up scored a victory on Saturday against the Strachan team of Montreal, who are considered hockeyists of no mean merit. It was a keen contest, in which the MMs boys took the long end of a 5-2 score.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

NEW MEMBERS AHEAD!

When he's very young, a simple, minimum cost camera is really preferable in most instances, but once he comes under the spell of real snapshotting, he merits—and should have—a modern camera of the better type.

YEAR after year, the idea of cameras as appropriate gifts for birthdays, graduation and other memorable occasions, has grown steadily. Last year, if you'll pardon the personal intrusion, I gave my own mother a simple little camera on her birthday. At first, she was frankly skeptical. She had never used a camera, always relying on my sometimes unreliable self. She was sure she would never master that camera. . . . Now it goes with her everywhere, much to our mutual joy.

To some folks, I wouldn't dream of giving a camera. They're not enough interested in other folks and places and life in general to get any fun out of it.

But there are others—the majority—to whom a camera would mean much.

What kind of camera? It depends entirely on the kind of person who is to receive it. Every youngster should have a chance at a camera, but only of the simplest, most inexpensive sort. By "inexpensive" I mean cameras costing from, say, one to five dollars. They should be of any of the standard makes, using film available everywhere.

Of course, if you have a young friend who has shown more than average interest in picture making and has outgrown his simple little box camera, you can provide vast happiness by presenting him—or her—with a better camera.

Once you get above the five to ten dollar class, the variety of cameras to be had is bewildering. Of recent years there has been a tremendous increase in the use of so-called "precision" cameras—small cameras, beautifully made and equipped with all manner of useful gadgets. Their lenses are masterpieces, their adjustments more accurate than many a professional studio camera. Naturally, they cost money, plenty of money. Beginning at about $25, the prices of these miniature cameras range on up and up and up. If you're really anxious to spend a hundred dollars on a camera, you'll have no trouble at all. However, you can stay in the general neighborhood of fifty dollars and get some amazingly beautiful cameras. By "beautiful" I mean something so expertly designed and constructed that there's sheer delight in handling it.

Many of the miniature, precision cameras use very small-size film. The idea is that the small pictures are kept as records, while enlargements of the best shots are used by the proud owners to show what they've been doing.

Modern, fine-grain film, by the way, makes this procedure possible.

You need not, of course, consider the miniature camera in your gift hunting. For the average person you can select a camera with a reasonably good lens—one that's rated at f.8.3 or even f.4.5—and use a film big enough so that enlargements are not always necessary. The famed "post-card size" camera is a favorite and will probably remain so. There's a reason.

If it has been several years since you last looked at cameras, shop around just for the fun of it. You'll discover that things have been happening.

SCOUT HONOUR FOR BISHOP OF ST. JOHN

BOYS GATHER FROM MANY LANDS

The 11,000 Boy Scouts participating in the recent Australian Jamboree comprised boys from 23 different countries or parts of the British Empire. Europe was represented by contingents from Belgium, France and Hungary. The East sent Scouts from India, Ceylon, Malaya, Dutch East Indies and Japan, the West from the United States.

NEW COMMISSION STATION AT WINDSOR

Another new station will be added to the Canadian Radio Commission's networks on Thursday, February 14, when CRCW at Windsor, Ontario, will come on the air fresh from its final tests. This station will serve a large area in Western Ontario hitherto almost blank as regards the national radio service. For some reason reception of stations in Toronto and other Eastern cities is not good in the southwestern and of Ontario, and Canadians in that area have secured Commission programs mainly from stations on the Michigan network with which the Commission has an international program exchange arrangement. CRCW will be on 600 kilocycles and operate with 1,000 watts in the daytime and 500 watts at night. The lower power at night is necessitated by the presence of several other stations on the wavelength. The station was equipped by the Northern Electric.

BUSY LITTLE TED

I help my dad to break out roads,
And oh! it is such fun—
To watch the snow fly from the plow
As though shot from a gun.
My daddy slaps old Nigger.
And says, "Get on there, Fan,
We've got to get these roads in shape
As quickly as we can."
I grab my little shovel—
'Cause daddy's is too big.
And when we strike a big snow-drift
I dig and dig and dig.

At night my mother says to me,
"You poor, wee, tired chap.
You've had a very busy day,"
And takes me on her lap.

KRINKLY KRUM

As Marjorie started to move away from Iceberg, a little Snow Fairy on the other side of her said, "Don't be afraid of him. He cannot hurt you here. No-one dares to do anything wrong when they are facing the Mirror of Examination—but if he caught you alone away by yourself, he might freeze you right up. He's the coldest and boldest of all the snowfolk and he's just as mean as mean can be."

A movement towards the centre of the sheet of golden ice caused Marjorie to look that way. Krinkly Krum, who had seemingly deserted her, had a golden key and was opening a door which just seemed to appear from nowhere. Stepping back to where Marjorie stood, he said, "Guests first! Come with me, Golden Locks, and please remember that you must not contradict the Princess, no matter what she says. That is a settled and fixed rule in our kingdom." As he talked he led Marjorie down a steep dark stairway, so dark that she must have fallen but for his firm, supporting arm. "Coming from the Golden Mirror we notice the darkness much more but it will soon be light again," he said. "Why, what's that?" he asked anxiously, as a cracking sound at their feet made him pause. "The bottom step!" grumbled a voice from the darkness. "Oh dear, the bottom step! That is Tinker Tom's brother. He is our carpenter and he does hate to work. That bottom step should have been repaired long ago. Hold the step for us Nailer, please, until Golden Locks and I reach the bottom. The others will just have to take a chance."

Springing lightly to the bottom Krinkly Krum and Marjorie moved across the dim hall, to an open doorway where they might see if the others got safely down. On they came with a rush. Crack, Crack went the bottom step as the first contingent of little snowfolk stepped over it and passed on out of the way, but it held until they had all passed over—then gave way completely, tumbling them pell-mell in all directions. Their excited laughter was suddenly hushed by someone saying, rather severely, "How dare you come into the presence of Princess Snow Ball in that manner! How dare you! oh how dare you!"

"How dare we, indeed!" rasped Iceberg's sharp voice. "If you had been thrown, Mr. Grizzly, as we were, you would not be asking a silly question like that. Just look at me," he almost shouted. "I am all chipped with their sharp shoes. I'll bet Nailer did that on purpose to throw us. If he did!" Iceberg's teeth came together with a click that startled Marjorie; and his eyes gleamed wickedly in the gloom. "Come!" whispered Krinkly Krum, chuckling quietly, "let him rave. He thinks it quite funny to hurt others, but does not like being hurt himself. It is too bad he is out of humor to meet the Princess, as he is very apt to be saucy with her." As he spoke he rapped three times on the wall in front of them. The wall opened, letting out a flood of light so bright that Marjorie had to shut her eyes to save them from its glare. She was glad to have Krinkly Krum lead her to a seat. Right up to the front of the room they went. A light seemed to be coming from immense icicles that hung down from the roof. They were of different sizes, which made odd-shaped shadows in different places.

All the other little folks followed them inside and sat down very quietly. A sudden silence seemed to have fallen over them all. Marjorie wondered what was about to happen. Sweet music and sounds of tinkling bells came from an inner chamber. The sound kept coming in nearer, until a retinue of little snow-folks with crystal bells and bugles, which they were ringing and playing softly, came into the room. Walking behind them was such a wonderful princess, with eyes as blue as the stars and shining just as brightly. Her hands were sparkling with diamonds. Her head was adorned with a crown of moon-beam gold, and studded with diamonds that glittered and winked with her every movement. Ropes of pearls seemed to Marjorie to be looped all over her gown. Her attendants led her to a crystal throne and knelt at her feet. "Your Majesty," said one of them, "Krinkly Krum has just brought you a guest, the Lady of the Diamonds."

Princess Snowball looked at Marjorie for a moment without speaking.

Stretching out her arms towards her, she smiled sweetly. "Golden Locks!" she cried, "Oh Golden Locks! My dear, you have come at last. Grizzly told me that they did not catch you as you jumped out of their window, but you have never been seen since, and we were all so afraid that you were lost, like the Babes in the Woods, and would never be seen again. Oh I am so happy."

"If you get up earlier in the morning than your neighbor," said the philosopher, "and work harder and scheme more and stick to your job more closely and stay up later planning how to make more money than your neighbour and burn the midnight oil planning how to get ahead of him while he is snoozing, not only will you leave more money when you die than he will, but you'll leave it a darn sight sooner."

NEW 'ESTATES' IN LONDON SUBURBS HAVE WINDOWS FLUSH WITH OUTER WALL.
MOST MODERN ARCHITECTURAL FEATURES

While the United States was wallowing in luxury after the World War—writes "F. O. M." in the Milwaukee Journal—England was fighting a depression that threatened to overwhelm it. Consequently England is several years ahead of United States in starting its recovery measures. One of these concerns housing. The problem is so complicated that it requires deep study to grasp its details, but there is one phase which impresses even the casual observer. All about the city of London, in what would be called suburban residence districts here, there are being offered to the buying public brand new homes at low prices.

One London newspaper prints every Saturday two full pages of advertisements of these houses. A brief reading of the advertisement shows the way private enterprise is meeting a definite public demand there.

A suburban residence within a few miles of London today is called an "estate." It may be a "freehold," which means that the lot it is built on goes with the house, or it may be a "leasehold," which means that the home buyer pays a rental to the land owner for the use of the land.

Almost invariably the houses being built and offered for sale are "semi-detached." That is, the buyer gets half of a double house. To the Londoner, the advantages of economies in building, heating, etc., make semi-detached homes desirable, as he still has three exposures affording light and air, as well as room for a lawn, garden and garage of his own. He is used to close neighbors anyway.

The suburban house—they build in the suburbs to get away from the dirt and smoke of the city, for one thing, and because land and land rentals are low enough in the suburbs to make the plan feasible—is of a brand new type, for London at any rate. It is usually of what is called "sun trap" architecture. Translated, this means that it has broad casement windows, flush with the outside walls, which are free from jogs and irregularities, so that the rooms are properly lighted and ventilated. Health arguments appear in some of the advertisements offering these homes, which are very much like the modern steel houses being fabricated in this country as far as appearance goes.

The extension of bus lines fanwise in all directions has made available a great many districts for the building of suburban homes. There are besides many sections reached by steam and electric railways. One advertiser points out that his "estates" in Kent are served by 200 trains a day to the principal London terminal. But whether reached by bus, electric or steam train or private motor car, the solving of the transportation question has had much to do with the present London migration to the suburbs.

The advantages of the new "estates" are set out in many of the ads as including "central heating," "wood block floors," "built-in furniture," "bathrooms with 'geysers,'" (water heaters), "lounge halls" with "electric fires," tiled kitchens, extra toilets (still called water closets in the London ads), kitchenettes, reception rooms and so on.

And they are all offered on the instalment plan. Often the down payment which is called a "deposit," is $125. Sometimes it is as low as $25. One advertiser offers a "modern super-home" for $2,750 cash or $125 down and the following weekly payments:

On principal	$3.93
Ground rent	.70
Total weekly "outgoings"	$5.70

There are "no law, survey or road charges," according to the ad, which means no fee for examination of title or making out papers and no special assessment for street paving. Furthermore, this advertiser agrees to buy back the house at any time in five years if the buyer finds he cannot make the payments.

Still another advertiser lets an imaginary buyer tell his closest friend, a guest in the new home, all about buying an "estate" on the instalment plan, as follows:

"Yes, it's like having our cake and eating it. We live in this jolly house, that I can see has taken your fancy as much as it did ours, yet our outgoings including everything are less than the rent we used to pay for a house we didn't like. Then, of course, every payment adds to our savings. It means we have more capital invested in the house each month and the freehold will be ours entirely, at a time when we shall need it most."

"Not only is our capital piling up, we are able to save as well. The payments on the house are so moderate although it's so far in advance in up to date design and has so many good points you won't find elsewhere. We amused ourselves the other day making a list of them. Here they are: Unusual and charming exterior; sun-trap easy-clean metal casement windows; extremely light rooms; anti-dust floor beatings; cheerful well fitted kitchen, independent boiler, tiled surround to sink; big windows in bedrooms and bathroom; space saving wardrobe cupboard; sun basking roof; plenty of garden and room for garage; but those are not all; come and look 'round the house then we'll walk around the estate You've made up your mind to buy too? Good, you won't regret it."

Substantial reasons for buying are offered in other ads. One builder limits his houses to eight to the acre. Another stresses the buyer's choice of 17 different types of homes. An apparently conservative firm announces that it owns and operates its own "brick works, sand and ballast pits, chalk pits, joinery works and paint works," thereby eliminating middlemen's profits. And all provide free trips to see the property they offer.

Underneath the effort to attract the buyer runs a more significant strain, an intention to make it worth the while of the prospective customer to own a home of his own.

Knights of the Golden Horseshoe

The Knights of the Golden Horseshoe were a group of Virginia gentlemen given a courtesy title by a governor of Virginia, Alexander Spotswood, who made a trip on horseback in 1716 from the capital, at Williamsburg, into the back country of the colony, to survey and make plans for its development. Their route led to the north and west through what is now known as Spotsylvania county to the summit of the Blue Ridge mountains. By the reports they brought back, settlement of the valley of Virginia was greatly promoted. Many deeds of adventure and daring were engaged in and there was much danger of hostile Indians; consequently the title.

Lost Castle Found

Believed to be part of the lost castle of the De Mandevilles, an early Norman structure has been discovered near South Mimms, England. It lies beneath extensive earthworks. At the Domesday survey the site formed part of the vast estate of Geoffrey de Mandeville. In the Twelfth century a charter was given to Sir Geoffrey's son to build a castle, of which all trace had been lost for nearly 700 years. The discovery revives an old tradition that South Mimms is haunted by the ghost of Sir Geoffrey de Mandeville.

Ravens, Crows, All the Same

Poe's raven and America's crows, like Rosie O'Grady and the Colonel's Lady, are sisters under the skin. While the raven tapped doors, the crow taps eggs of nesting birds—the baneful influence of both the legendary emblem of death and the pillager of cornfields amounts to the same thing.

BRITAIN HAS 5,800 LEVEL CROSSINGS

Mr. Hore-Belisha's statement in the British House of Commons that in order to expedite the removal of level crossings he was prepared to make from the Road Fund a grant of 75 per cent of the cost of constructing bridges in their stead, follows a long agitation on the subject.

It has been estimated that there are 5,800 railway level crossings in Great Britain, and a census has shown that in every year over 40,000 years of time are wasted by the opening and closing of these gates.

More than 50 lives are lost yearly through trains running-down motor cars and pedestrians. Lincolnshire's main roads are interrupted by railway lines at 51 places.

Since April of last year five schemes for the elimination of level crossings at a total expenditure of £235,000 have been approved.

TOWN HAS BILL TO CORRECT PECULIAR SITUATION

Permission to legalize the illegal collection of $8,785.20 in taxes, which could, in fact, have been legally imposed, is sought by the Town of Montreal South in a private bill which will be presented to the Quebec Legislature.

Anxious to bolster municipal revenues, the town twice amended its by-law No. 1, first in 1926 and again in 1933, so as to impose increased taxes or licences upon non-residents. The taxes and licences were imposed in good faith, and paid without protest. But last year, it was discovered that the amendments to the 1914 by-law were contrary to the provisions of section 526 of the Quebec Cities and Towns Act, and consequently illegal.

Fortunately, the council also found that the said taxes or licences could have been legally imposed and collected under paragraph 12 of section 469 of the same Act, and, in order to remedy the error, a new by-law was passed, adopted and promulgated according to law.

Meanwhile, however, an alert non-resident contributor to the municipal coffers learned that he had been paying out money, which the town had no legal right to collect. So he instituted a lawsuit against the municipality for the recovery of the amount thus paid by him, and there is danger that several similar actions will follow.

Because "it would be ruinous and a severe

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISE TO ALL OVER 21, AMONG REFORMS

Extension of the municipal franchise to everyone over 21 years of age, was one of the reforms urged by Mayor James Simpson, of Toronto, as stated in his inaugural address to the City Council.

Mayor Simpson also announced his support of the principle of municipal ownership and declared "where private enterprise fails to function in the interests of the people because of domination of profit incentive, the municipality has not only the right to assume direction, ownership and control but must recognize its responsibility to act effectively in the interests of the people."

ICE PERMIT REFUSAL TAKEN TO OTTAWA

The city council of Lachine, Que., refused to grant a permit to an ice dealer of a neighboring suburb to cut ice in the river opposite the municipality, on the ground that the commodity should be retained for local ice merchants.

The dealer was thus faced with his first refusal for a permit in four years; he stated that last year he spent $632 in wages in employing Lachine labor. He asked, permission to cut 12,000 pieces of ice.

The question raises the point as to who has control over the St. Lawrence, an issue upon which the applicant has appealed to the Minister of Marine at Ottawa.

OTTAWA BUILDING PERMITS UP

A total of 529 building permits, or 51 more than in 1933, were issued by the city of Ottawa during 1934. Construction work to the amount of $1,271,680 was authorized as compared with $916,065 for 1933. Eight of the 12 months of 1934 showed substantial increases in the quantity of construction undertaken.

hardship for the taxpayers of the Town to reimburse $8,785.20 in taxes", the town is now petitioning His Majesty, through the Quebec Legislature, to enact legislation whereby "no recourse may be had against the municipal corporation of the Town of Montreal South to recover any taxes or licences imposed under the authority of its by-law No. 1, and collected by its council."

HOW WILL CANADA HONOR THE KING?

By Fred Williams
in the Toronto Mail & Empire

What is Canada going to do as a participant in the Empire-wide celebration this Spring of the silver jubilee of King George's accession to the throne? It is not too soon to think about it. Only a short time and May 6 will be here. That date will be the twenty-fifth anniversary of the King's coming to the throne. On that date the celebrations will begin in London and will doubtless be broadcast so that the people of his wide Empire may share in the rejoicing in Britain.

But Canada must have her own celebration of this historic event. During the session the Prime Minister will undoubtedly make a public statement of the Government's intentions, if, indeed, there is not a paragraph in the speech from the throne calling public attention to the coming event and announcing Canada's intention of doing her duty in that regard. In all probability, Monday, May 6, will be proclaimed an extra public holiday; there will undoubtedly be special services of thanksgiving in the churches on Sunday, May 5. If the national service to be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, is broadcast to Canada, arrangements might well be made by which the service could be heard in the largest churches in each community, or even in the public parks, if the weather is fine.

Perhaps it is premature to think of local arrangements until after the national plans are announced by the Prime Minister, but it can do no harm to suggest that in each community a committee of citizens should be named to consider what special local celebration shall take place and what form the memorial will take.

We have no monument of King George in Canada. Why should not that omission be rectified at Ottawa? If it could be completed within the time it would provide an excellent form of celebrating the coronation by having it unveiled on June 22, 1936.

Talking the matter over with a soldier as to how Canada would be represented in the jubilee procession and at the military review which will take place in June, I was told that, while the matter had not been officially discussed, there was little doubt that if the invitation came a Canadian composite regiment could be sent over without any trouble, and while I have no desire to slight the younger men in the militia, such a regiment should be representative of all Canada, and every man in it, officer and private alike, should be a man who won the right to wear the King's medals by his service in the Great War. I should not be surprised if we do not soon hear from the Prince of Wales in this connection. We may be sure that if he has anything to say about it, the overseas wearers of the Victoria Cross will be among his guests in London. Some of those who were over in 1929 have passed; the others are ready to go again.

Then special arrangements must be made so that the children in the schools shall be given opportunities to rejoice in the fact that the King has been spared to reign over us for 25 years. In this connection might I suggest that the school celebration could give opportunity for someone who was a child when the King and Queen came to Canada in 1901 to retell their experiences for the benefit of the children of to-day.

His Majesty and his consort have desired that any permanent memorials of the silver jubilee shall take the path of public service. It is not too early for our women's organizations to consider this point. It may be that a national organization can be effected to procure something like the Victorian Order, which is a living memorial of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee; it may be each province has some special need which could be developed this year. May I commend the thought to the Daughters of the Empire that

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs

Specially written for The Watchman
By Wäfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, February 5.—A very important question was settled last week. If the Liberals should be returned to power in the forthcoming election, will they scrap the Ottawa agreements (Those who believe that these agreements have resulted in a much enlarged trade with the United Kingdom have naturally been a little anxious about this matter. Premier Bennett the other day in the house said that the agreements had saved Canada "from national bankruptcy." Hon. R. B. Hanson, minister of trade and commerce, said they were "the very bulwark" of Canadian trade at present. Apple growers and lumber men are most easily impressed with the value of the Ottawa pacts, because the shipments of those commodities to the United Kingdom have been very heavy.

There is, of course, another side of the story, and it was well told last week. The Ottawa agreements were signed at the very depth of the depression. Some increase in trade was to be expected. It is significant, perhaps, that in the past year combined trade with the Mother Country has risen 90 million dollars; and with the United States 120 million dollars. The Ottawa agreements hardly explain that.

WILL SEEK AMENDMENTS

To answer the question propounded in paragraph one: The Liberals will, if elected to power, immediately seek from the Mother Country and other Dominions the right to remove from the agreements certain objectionable features. If they get them—and they are satisfied there will be no opposition—the agreements will continue in force. If they don't, they reserve the right to abolish them, or to permit them to expire without renewal. In any event they are pledged to foster trade in all possible ways with all countries, especially within the Empire.

The feature which is most objectionable, judging from Mr. Mackenzie King's speech, is that which "pegs tariffs" by promising that the preference given the Empire will not be reduced. An example is worth a page of explanation. If the duty against American oranges is 35 cents a cubic foot (and it is) and the British rate is free; that 35 cents a cubic foot duty is "rivetted on", as the Liberal leader said. It can't be reduced without breaking the clause of the Ottawa agreement which promises, within the life of the agreements (five years) not to reduce preferences.

PLENTY OF JOCKEYING

A vast amount of jockeying for position goes on these days: easily apparent from the Press Gallery, perhaps not so evident across the country. It is something like a massive chess game: Bennett moves, and places Mackenzie King at disadvantage: Mackenzie King consults with his "Board of Strategy" and comes back with a subtle counter-move which for a day or two puts Bennett in a jam. The tide of political fortunes seems to rise and fall. This may be only an illusion. Premier Bennett's radio addresses seemed to add tremendously to his chances at the polls. The Speech From the Throne didn't hurt him. The first hour of Mackenzie King's first speech seemed to assist Bennett; that was the high-water mark of Conservative fortunes. Since then the government's stock has fallen. Mackenzie King had handled himself very smartly on the reform legislation; and his statement on the Conference agreements helped his position. The production of the unemployment insurance legislation created a disillusionment which takes some of the frosting off the reform cake. Of course the session is young and both parties are manoeuvring skilfully. Next week the tables may be turned. Or Mackenzie King may score further. The C.C.F. members are delighted to see everybody so enthusiastic about reform. But it's hard to satisfy reformers. Now that Bennett and King are moving left, some of the Co-operating Groups are moving still further left. Perhaps that's their function: pioneers in the field of social legislation. They can at least point out the numerous reforms which they were the first to advocate in the House.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

Unemployment Insurance: That's worth an article in itself. The chance will come when the bill is in committee. It looks like a carefully studied scheme; and will help in the next depression, no doubt. After you've paid in 25 cents a week for 40 weeks (total of $10.) you can draw, if a married man with children, as much as $12. or even more a week for 19 weeks (or a total of $228). in case you lose your job.

For the first time in the history of the city of Ottawa tax collections for last year passed the $7,000,000 mark. It was estimated that collections for taxes, water rates and arrears would total $7,035,000 as against $6,978,000 the previous year.

here is an opportunity to rally all the women's societies and prepare some joint action.

Unity of co-operation all over Canada is necessary. Who will start the ball rolling? It must always be borne in mind that all celebrations, no matter how humble, must be based upon religious thanksgiving. That is to be the dominant note in England. It must be so also throughout the Commonwealth of Nations, who pay ready allegiance to George V.

Hockey in Brownsburg

be judged by the fact that they bring along to Brownsburg with their complete team, three forward lines and two defence lines in all. Mr. Wilson's squad take this as a tribute to the respect with which Carsteel regards them, and are leaving nothing undone to uphold the traditions which attach to a Brownsburg team at its best. Their showing against Ayers Ltd., against whom Brownsburg never plays with confidence, on Thursday night last when Ayers suffered the first defeat of the season, is sufficient to suggest the treat which in store for hockey fans on Saturday night.

The line-up of both teams, with the numbers of the players, is given hereunder for the benefit of spectators:

10. T. Angle	O. Gagne 11
8. G. Gauthier	R. Charlebois 7

BROWNSBURG vs. AYERS

The first and second may go alike, but the third is usually different. Brownsburg suffered defeat by the Ayers aggregation the first two occasions on which they met. Last week the result was different. Ayers departed two goals in arrears when the final whistle was blown. Mr. Roly Moncrieff had charge of the whistle and is to be congratulated on the efficient and impartial manner in which he discharged his difficult charge.

Ayers were attacking soon after the face-off, and despite some splendid defence work by Tomalty and Barker, Ayers' brilliant forwards, the Drew Bros., succeeded in penetrating Brownsburg defence, securing a brace of goals. Brownsburg's stellar forward line, Seary and McGibbon, took control of play for a period and after some magnificent exchanges notched up an even score. A little later Brownsburg were leading. An unruly scene marred the progress of the game at this stage, which was the only blot in an otherwise delightful exhibition of hockey. The third gong found the two teams exerting every effort to break a tie of four tallies. Ayers were unable to maintain the pace in

R. C. Bingham of Montreal Addresses Lions' Club

Guest speaker at the meeting of the Lions' Club on Wednesday evening was Mr. R. C. Bingham of Montreal, who is a member of the lecturing staff of the Ceylon Tea Bureau. His well chosen subject, The Charm of Ceylon, was illustrated by motion pictures and thoroughly appreciated by those in attendance.

Mr. Bingham is well known to radio listeners throughout Eastern Canada for his travel talks on the Orient, and for his wide experience in amateur theatricals. His production last winter of "The Holy Grail", in connection with the Church of the Messiah in Montreal, received high praise from the critics.

Born in England, educated at Clifton and London University. Mr. Bingham speaks with authority on life in the far East. For over a quarter of a century he roamed the Orient as a government servant and an investigator. Often his work required him to assume the guise of a native, his fluency in Oriental languages and dialects, together with his aptitude and knowledge of the theatre, proving invaluable assets.

In moving a vote of thanks to the speaker, Lion Geo. Rodger expressed the hope that Mr. Bingham would be able to visit the local Club again at some future date, when provisions could be made for a larger attendance.

Lion Herb Underhill was boosted by Lion H. P. Johnson. The lucky numbers drawing Lion Underhill's gifts fell to Lions Cottingham and Deslauriers.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday, Feb. 20th., at which time the speaker will be Mr. J. Alex. Edmison of Montreal.

Lachute Quartet Won Rankin Trophy

ing the Seigniory, Royal Montreal, Thistle, Outremont, Governor General's, Parliamentary, Lachute, Hawkesbury and Buckingham clubs, played two games, the margin of victory counting.

Speaker Bowman's rink won the trophy, which was donated by Mr. John I. Rankin of Montreal two years ago, and gained second place in this year's play, followed by a Parliamentary Liberal quartette skipped by Honorable Charles A. Stewart.

The bonspiel opened Friday evening with Mr. J. Rankin skipping one of the Seigniory rinks. He gained first an 8-8 tie with the Thistle defenders and then had a margin of two over a Governor General's four, skipped by Hugh Carson of the Ottawa Curling Club. Competition continued all day Saturday and close, keen games were witnessed. The Lachute rink first gained a 12-5 win from a Hawkesbury team skipped by J. W. Holtby and finally were the only rink to advance to the front by defeating a Seigniory four 12 to 3. Three of the fourteen games played were ties and nine decided by three points or less.

Albert MacLaren, president of the Seigniory Curling Club and past president of the Canadian Branch, presided at a dinner given for the curlers in the grill room of the Log Chateau on Saturday evening. At the head table were Mr. Speaker Bowman, R. H. Gillean, president Royal Montreal, R. Gamble of Ottawa, "Willie" Brown, J. R. Henderson, Branch executive; Hon. Charles Stewart, Hugh Carson, Col. H. J. Mackie and Col. J. T. Clarke of Ottawa. Mr. MacLaren also presented the Trophy to the Lachute team after the finals Sunday afternoon and complimented them upon their success. An individual prize was given to each member of the winning rink.

The Lachute Curlers were hosts to St. Lawrence Curling Club teams on Saturday at a Club Supper, after which two teams engaged in contests, one Lachute rink and one St. Lawrence rink winning respectively, with Lachute higher up on the total score, 21-22.

Disfranchisement

The laws which disfranchise persons vary in the different states. In nearly all of them those who have been convicted of felony or who are of unsound mind are disfranchised. Some states also disfranchise those convicted of treason or bribery or betting on elections; and those who are inmates of prisons, asylums or almshouses; some disfranchise for duelling, embezzlement of public funds, perjury and petit larceny. In the District of Columbia where there is no popular suffrage, citizens previously entitled to vote were all disfranchised by an act of congress in 1878 when the government was placed under direct control of congress.

Most Venomous Spider

The black widow is America's most venomous spider and fortunately for Michigan few specimens are found this far north. It is essentially a spider of warmer climates. The bite of this spider brings an excruciating pain often with serious consequences. The female is larger than the male and does the biting. In color it is jet black with red or yellow spots. The female is about one-half inch long while the male measures less than one-quarter of an inch. It lives under rocks and pieces of wood, in stumps and small burrows in the ground.—Detroit News.

Pygmies in Transvaal

That pygmies once lived in the northern Transvaal of Africa, has been proved by recent finds. Among the finds are the forgotten works of a vanished race, including an extensive irrigation system and a large dam. An implement of the type used by ancient copper miners also was uncovered. An altar, evidently made for sacrifices, was approached by causeways and stairways so small that they could be used only by very small persons.

RADIO NEEDS THE NEWSPAPER

I often wish that the radio stations would use the newspapers to a greater extent. We so frequently miss the thing we would like most to hear because we did not know it was going to be on. Newspapers have the advantage of permanency. The time element comes into the radio question to such an extent that if you do not happen to be listening to the right station at the right moment, you are out of luck. Whereas if that special radio programme was announced in the newspapers, it could be seen when convenient and we would not be so apt to miss it. True, programmes are listed, but as a rule they are made out so far in advance and are so vaguely done that they lose value. The radio and the newspaper each has its place but radio advertising could be more effective if the advertisers would use newspaper space to announce their special programmes.

FREQUENT FEEDING FOR FLU

It is to be hoped that your part of the country has been more fortunate than our city has been. The paper said that 95% of the homes had Flu. Perhaps it was not that many but certainly most everyone seemed to have it. Perhaps the most important part of caring for a Flu patient is the after care, because most people have a tendency to do too much, too soon. One of the ways that we can lessen the need for after care is to keep them well built up while they are actually in bed. Appetites are small and capricious and frequent feeding should be the rule. Give them nourishment every two hours through the day. Something light and easy to digest between meals. Fruit juices with plain or Graham crackers are a good choice. Milk, either hot or cold, should be given frequently. Some of the mildly flavored chocolate malted preparations make a pleasing change. Remember that beef-tea or the clear soups have practically no nourishment and are useful only to stimulate a flagging appetite. Never expect patients to gain on beef-tea. A light diet and all they will eat every two hours will hasten convalescence. If you have had the Flu yourself you will realize how good that between meal feeding is. They say that no one can be a good nurse until they have been sick themselves.

SEA FOODS FOR IODINE

Iodine is one of the requirements of the body. We need a very small quantity of it and that small amount is concentrated in the thyroid gland but if we lack it goitre may develop. Those who live by the sea do not suffer from goitre. The water, the soil and the foods grown in them contain iodine. Sea foods are good for us because they contain iodine and inland people should serve them frequently. That, however, is no hardship. We may use different varieties of fresh or of smoked fish which come from the sea, or we may use the many varieties of canned sea-foods. Salmon, shrimps, clams, lobster, oysters, tuna and crab-meat are all good when creamed. A little lemon juice improves the flavour of any fish. Eggs may be added for flavour and to increase the quantity. Hard cooked eggs are specially good with salmon or shrimp. Most women like to prepare the supper meal ahead of time so that the afternoon may be free. Scalloped fish dishes are useful for this purpose as they may be prepared, put in a baking dish and covered with buttered crumbs, then left until required. Twenty minutes or so before using, put into a moderate oven and bake until the crumbs are gently browned. Sea foods taste good, are convenient to use, and are good for us. What more could you ask?

REAL FRIENDS

I have a few friends who take the time and trouble to send me a recipe when they run across something that they think is specially good or possibly a bit different. And I rise and call them blessed. It is some job to find interesting recipes each week. There are plenty of them about but to find ones that will taste good, are not too fussy, and not too expensive, is not so easy. My recipes may not please you all, as tastes differ, (even in your own family, look how tastes differ), but they are tried and practical. All this has developed because a friend just phoned to tell me about an open-faced sandwich that she had had at a tea. Rounds of bread, cut with a cookie-cutter were spread with white cheese, then a slice of a sweet gherkin about an eighth of an inch in thickness, with its centre partly hollowed out, was placed in the centre of the bread round, and the cavity in the pickle filled with a chunk of marachino cherry. She said that they looked attractive and that the sweet of the cherry and the sharp pickle and cheese made an appetising combination.

SALMON SALAD LOAF

Remove skin and bones from a large can of salmon and flake in large pieces. Soften 1 tablespoon gelatin in 1/4 cup of cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add with 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 cup of boiled salad dressing, 4 chopped pickles with salt and pepper to taste. Fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a moistened mould and chill until set. Turn out on shredded lettuce and slice.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTES SUPPORT BOYS' FARM

The Boys' Farm recently established by the Eastern Townships Immigration Society on the Milby-Coaticook road is now in operation, and a number of boys and young men are finding a home and practical training in agriculture there. The farm was not established primarily for immigrant boys, but for the unemployed boys of the Province of Quebec, who, unable to secure work, were living aimless and drifting lives which must invariably tend to evil ways.

These boys are taken into this farm home, capably mothered by a kindly and efficient matron, and their time is spent in the multitude of tasks which go to make up life on the farm. In response to an appeal for bed linen, socks, etc., the branches of the Women's Institutes have responded with the supplies needed, and are evincing a kindly and helpful interest in the project.

"Anacreon" Music Marked "Star Spangled Banner"

The music of "To Anacreon in Heaven" was appropriated to Francis Scott Key's poem, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The authorship of the air is attributed to a famous English composer, Samuel Arnold, who lived from 1739 to 1802. But it is also claimed for one of the members of the Anacreonic Society of London, which met in the Crown and Anchor tavern during the latter half of the eighteenth century. Ralph Tomlinson, a president of the club, wrote the "Anacreon" words, and the member said to have written the music was a composer named John Stafford Smith.

One version of the origin of the "Star Spangled Banner" is that Francis Scott Key wrote the verses with no idea of fitting them to music; that only after he had been released and returned to Baltimore, and had shown them to his friends, was it suggested that they be given a musical setting; and that one of these friends, paging over some music to find a suitable air, came upon "Anacreon" and adapted it to Key's stanzas. A few days later the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung from the stage of the Holliday Street theater, Baltimore, by an actor named Frederick Durang.

English Buried Hoards When They Left France

There are at least 35 known towns, villages, or castles in which tradition relates the presence of hidden treasure. Many of these hidden hoards were once in English hands, relates a writer in the Montreal Herald. When the English were driven out of France by Charles VII in the Fifteenth century they are said to have hastily buried masses of treasure, expecting to return soon.

In recent years, when the famous underground caves at Padraic were sold to a company which exploits them as a tourist center, the former owners provided in the sale contract that they would have half of "any English treasure" found in the course of reconstruction.

At Triel (Seine-et-Oise) can be seen the "House of Treasure" built on the ruins of a castle in which William the Conqueror hid his treasure before setting out for England. Later on, Bonnie Prince Charlie lived in this house in his closing years, and he is said to have buried the crown of the ancient kings of England in the grounds.

Founded Greek Oracle

Goatherds several thousand years ago in the mountains near Delphi, Greece, says the Milwaukee Journal, noticed that their cattle acted queerly after grazing near a strange hole. The men investigated, found that they, too, acted foolish, talked light-heartedly after breathing the fumes from the hole. They believed this was due to the fact that a god lived in the hole. They built a temple, later an elaborate series of temples and athletic fields. Priests and priestesses got "goofy" with the natural gas that issued from the hole and then made oracular statements. Thus the foolish utterances of these gassed persons determined some of the greatest moves of Greek leaders. Cunning rulers and priests sometimes managed to have an oracle give the wanted advice.

The Revd. James Fraser -- A Biography

The early eighteen eighties was rather a busy time for this district. Work was in progress on the new canal and dam at Carillon, and excavations at Greece's Point for the installing of two new locks. The old canal and locks excavated and erected by the sappers and miners of the Royal Staff Corps, in 1828 and 1830, were becoming inadequate for the growth and improvement of shipping, and the reconstruction found necessary brought many people of different social status in the locality.

Among them was a dancing master, of rather too unstable habits to suit the quiet members of old St. Mungo's. They, in turn, consulted their Minister as to the best way of getting rid of this gentleman as easily as possible; they were afraid his example would not be in the favour of the rising generation. The Minister suggested that the young folk were looking for amusement and thought that the best thing would be to let them get together and just see what sort of entertainment they would provide for themselves, with the elders to one side giving them free rein. This suggestion was approved and the Minister was left to broach the subject to the young folk at next singing class. The idea, needless to say, was greeted with enthusiasm, and a general meeting was called on the following Monday evening, resulting in the birth of the Mutual Improvement Society of Cushing. The opening concert was arranged to be held in the old stone hall at Cushing Tuesday week. The admission was twenty-five cents for this concert, and five cents per individual and fifteen for families in the succeeding ones.

The first concert was voted a great success, and everyone was much delighted with the results. The receipts were such that the greater part of the expense that attends the organization of any society, were almost defrayed, and the society was fairly launched with but little encumbrance. Weekly concerts were held regularly and were a great source of enjoyment; and, as there was very little expense, the young folk all helped to provide the weekly programmes.

The society funds began to accumulate in a modest way; this was the very thing that the Minister was hoping for and, though he said nothing of his hopes until there were funds enough, his proposal was that the funds be partially expended in the travelling expenses of good lecturers from Montreal to lecture to the Society. This expenditure was well repaid with some very interesting lectures.

On fine nights, the attendance was sometimes swelled with villagers from the neighboring communities — Lachute, St. Andrews and Grenville, and this attendance tended to augment the Society's already excellent repute. Now and again there was an evening given to debating, and long and strong were arguments for the pros and cons, as well as those interesting few who aspired to public speaking, with the best of good fellowship prevailing among all.

With the Manse as a rendezvous for business and general rehearsals, these concerts were kept up for two winters and a part of the third, but, with the completion of the canal works the population began to dwindle resulting in due time to the discontinuance of the Society.

All this happened half a century ago. James Miller, with whom I was in company as door-keeper, became later a well known man and rather a noted singer and amateur entertainer. We conversed with many of those who helped to produce the programs and those who attended them. I may say it has also been gratifying to meet, while on my travels, the many people who remembered the Society and its programs. I believe all those who took part in the activities recall with pleasure the time spent at old St. Mungo's Manse, where they met to prepare the future programs. And here all classes and faiths consorted with a friendly spirit and entente cordiale, presided over by the Reverend and Mrs. James Fraser.

Jealousy a Disease

Medical science has until recently regarded jealousy as a defect of character that is incurable. Psychologists have come to the conclusion, however, that jealousy is a disease, with the same general characteristics as other diseases. Jealousy is a mixture of fear, envy and weakness. It is just as uncontrollable as love, which comes and goes without any conscious effort of will. The only difference between love and jealousy is that whereas love is incurable, jealousy can now be treated by means of psycho-therapy. The basic cause of jealousy is discovered by means of exhaustive psycho-analysis and after this a complete cure can be effected in most cases. The jealous person is given hormones and is otherwise treated in the same way as a chronic dipsomaniac.

ONTARIO MAYORS' SEVEN POINT PROGRAM

A seven-point programme adopted by the Ontario Mayors' Association will be laid before the Provincial Government by a special committee. The schedule is based on major resolutions endorsed during the two-day parley and includes a request that municipalities be given authority to tax hydro properties.

The committee also will ask that the statutes be amended to compel all municipal election candidates to comply with a $1,000 property qualification.

Alberta Peer Advocates Settlement along Lines of Brig-Gen. Hornby's Scheme

Baron Rodney, rancher-peer of Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., in a recent address to the British Empire League in London, advocated a plan whereby Great Britain and Canada would cooperate in the establishment of farming communities in Canada where families from the United Kingdom could settle.

He suggested that approved committees in the United Kingdom sponsor establishment of small colonies of British families on Canadian land suitable for mixed farming, having an area of from 1,000 to 5,000 acres each. Then each of the sponsoring committees, under his plan, would select a settlement manager who would live in the community and be responsible for its activities. The land would be held by the society in perpetuity under Lord Rodney's plan.

He further suggested that the farms be worked by the settlers, the rent being proportional to the annual crop, until the farming ability of the settlers had been proved, whereupon they would move from the colonies and acquire farms of their own. Lord Rodney estimated that by the time a family was ready to move on, it would have saved about $1,000 toward the purchase of a farm.

He proposed that the British Government lend an amount equal to this sum at low interest, the money to be made available to the committees for advancement to the settlers.

Speaking on the disadvantages of sending children to Canada, he said that "where children are placed in foster homes they are usually considered as a cheap form of labor, with the result that they are overworked and attendance at school is conspicuous by its absence. The alternative is placing them in training schools."

"Surely," he added, "the children would be better cared for by emigrating them with their parents as a complete family unit." Family settlement was doomed to failure unless community settlement were adopted, he declared.

The plan is essentially similar to the scheme of Brigadier-General M. L. Hornby which has been widely discussed. Canada is not contributing to any such colonization scheme at present, it is understood. Just what attitude the British Government would take in respect to financing the plan is not known.

WINGS OVER CANADA

As new records are set in aviation by the brilliant and daring flying men and women of other countries, Canadians may perhaps forget that the first aeroplane flight in the British Empire was made in Canada by a Canadian. It was at Baddeck, N.S. and was made by J. A. D. McCurdy. The date was February 23, 1909. This milestone in the history of aviation is being recalled in a Radio Commission program to be broadcast on the CRBC national network tonight, February 7 at 9.30 p.m. The program will be called "Wings Over Canada" and has been developed by George Taggart of the Commission's program department. It will dramatize McCurdy's feat and touch on subsequent progress in aviation.

RADIO NEEDS THE NEWSPAPER

I often wish that the radio stations would use the newspapers to a greater extent. We so frequently miss the thing we would like most to hear because we did not know it was going to be on. Newspapers have the advantage of permanency. The time element comes into the radio question to such an extent that if you do not happen to be listening to the right station at the right moment, you are out of luck. Whereas if that special radio programme was announced in the newspapers, it could be seen when convenient and we would not be so apt to miss it. True, programmes are listed, but as a rule they are made out so far in advance and are so vaguely done that they lose value. The radio and the newspaper each has its place but radio advertising could be more effective if the advertisers would use newspaper space to announce their special programmes.

FREQUENT FEEDING FOR FLU

It is to be hoped that your part of the country has been more fortunate than our city has been. The paper said that 95% of the homes had Flu. Perhaps it was not that many but certainly most everyone seemed to have it. Perhaps the most important part of caring for a Flu patient is the after care, because most people have a tendency to do too much, too soon. One of the ways that we can lessen the need for after care is to keep them well built up while they are actually in bed. Appetites are small and capricious and frequent feeding should be the rule. Give them nourishment every two hours through the day. Something light and easy to digest between meals. Fruit juices with plain or Graham crackers are a good choice. Milk, either hot or cold, should be given frequently. Some of the mildly flavored chocolate malted preparations make a pleasing change. Remember that beef-tea or the clear soups have practically no nourishment and are useful only to stimulate a flagging appetite. Never expect patients to gain on beef-tea. A light diet and all they will eat every two hours will hasten convalescence. If you have had the Flu yourself you will realize how good that between meal feeding is. They say that no one can be a good nurse until they have been sick themselves.

SEA FOODS FOR IODINE

Iodine is one of the requirements of the body. We need a very small quantity of it and that small amount is concentrated in the thyroid gland but if we lack it goitre may develop. Those who live by the sea do not suffer from goitre. The water, the soil and the foods grown in them contain iodine. Sea foods are good for us because they contain iodine and inland people should serve them frequently. That, however, is no hardship. We may use different varieties of fresh or of smoked fish which come from the sea, or we may use the many varieties of canned sea-foods. Salmon, shrimps, clams, lobster, oysters, tuna and crab-meat are all good when creamed. A little lemon juice improves the flavour of any fish. Eggs may be added for flavour and to increase the quantity. Hard cooked eggs are especially good with salmon or shrimp. Most women like to prepare the supper meal ahead of time so that the afternoon may be free. Scalloped fish dishes are useful for this purpose as they may be prepared, put in a baking dish and covered with buttered crumbs, then left until required. Twenty minutes or so before using, put into a moderate oven and bake until the crumbs are gently browned. Sea foods taste good, are convenient to use, and are good for us. What more could you ask?

REAL FRIENDS

I have a few friends who take the time and trouble to send me a recipe when they run across something that they think is specially good or possibly a bit different. And I rise and call them blessed. It is some job to find interesting recipes each week. There are plenty of them about but to find ones that will taste good, are not too fussy, and not too expensive, is not so easy. My recipes may not please you all, as tastes differ, (even in your own family, look how tastes differ), but they are tried and practical. All this has developed because a friend just phoned to tell me about an open-faced sandwich that she had had at a tea. Rounds of bread, cut with a cookie-cutter were spread with white cheese, then a slice of a sweet herkin about an eighth of an inch in thickness, with its centre partly hollowed out, was placed in the centre of the bread round, and the cavity in the pickle filled with a chunk of marachino cherry. She said that they looked attractive and that the sweet of the cherry and the sharp pickle and cheese made an appetising combination.

SALMON SALAD LOAF

Remove skin and bones from a large can of salmon and flake in large pieces. Soften 1 tablespoon gelatin in 1/4 cup of cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add with 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 cup of boiled salad dressing, 4 chopped pickles with salt and pepper to taste. Fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a moistened mould and chill until set. Turn out on shredded lettuce and slice.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTES SUPPORT BOYS' FARM

The Boys' Farm recently established by the Eastern Townships Immigration Society on the Milby-Coaticook road is now in operation, and a number of boys and young men are finding a home and practical training in agriculture there. The farm was not established primarily for immigrant boys, but for the unemployed boys of the Province of Quebec, who, unable to secure work, were living aimless and drifting lives which must invariably tend to evil ways.

These boys are taken into this farm home, capably mothered by a kindly and efficient matron, and their time is spent in the multitude of tasks which go to make up life on the farm. In response to an appeal for bed linen, socks, etc., the branches of the Women's Institutes have responded with the supplies needed, and are evincing a kindly and helpful interest in the project.

"Anacreon" Music Marked "Star Spangled Banner"

The music of "To Anacreon in Heaven" was appropriated to Francis Scott Key's poem, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The authorship of the air is attributed to a famous English composer, Samuel Arnold, who lived from 1739 to 1802. But it is also claimed for one of the members of the Anacreonic Society of London, which met in the Crown and Anchor tavern during the latter half of the eighteenth century. Ralph Tomlinson, a president of the club, wrote the "Anacreon" words, and the member said to have written the music was a composer named John Stafford Smith.

One version of the origin of the "Star Spangled Banner" is that Francis Scott Key wrote the verses with no idea of fitting them to music; that only after he had been released and returned to Baltimore, and had shown them to his friends, was it suggested that they be given a musical setting; and that one of these friends, paging over some music to find a suitable air, came upon "Anacreon" and adapted it to Key's stanzas. A few days later the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung from the stage of the Holliday Street theater, Baltimore, by an actor named Frederick Durang.

English Buried Hoards

When They Left France

There are at least 35 known towns, villages, or castles in which tradition relates the presence of hidden treasure. Many of these hidden hoards were once in English hands, relates a writer in the Montreal Herald. When the English were driven out of France by Charles VII in the Fifteenth century they are said to have hastily buried masses of treasure, expecting to return soon.

In recent years, when the famous underground caves at Padraic were sold to a company which exploits them as a tourist center, the former owners provided in the sale contract that they would have half of "any English treasure" found in the course of reconstruction.

At Trier (Seine-at-Orse) can be seen the "House of Treasure" built on the ruins of a castle in which William the Conqueror hid his treasure before setting out for England. Later on, Bonnie Prince Charlie lived in this house in his closing years, and he is said to have buried the crown of the ancient kings of England in the grounds.

Founded Greek Oracle

Gathered several thousand years ago in the mountains near Delphi, Greece, says the Milwaukee Journal, noticed that their cattle acted queerly after grazing near a strange hole. The men investigated, found that they, too, acted foolish, talked light-heartedly after breathing the fumes from the hole. They believed this was due to the fact that a god lived in the hole. They built a temple, later an elaborate series of temples and athletic fields. Priests and priestesses got "goofy" with the natural gas that issued from the hole and then made oracular statements. Thus the foolish utterances of these gassed persons determined some of the greatest moves of Greek leaders. Cunning rulers and priests sometimes managed to have an oracle give the wanted advice.

The early eighteen eighties was rather a busy time for this district. Work was in progress on the new canal and dam at Carillon, and excavations at Greece's Point for the installing of two new locks. The old canal and locks excavated and erected by the sappers and miners of the Royal Staff Corps, in 1828 and 1830, were becoming inadequate for the growth and improvement of shipping, and the reconstruction found necessary brought many people of different social status in the locality.

Among them was a dancing master, of rather too unstable habits to suit the quiet members of old St. Mungo's. They, in turn, consulted their Minister as to the best way of getting rid of this gentleman as easily as possible; they were afraid his example would not be in the favour of the rising generation. The Minister suggested that the young folk were looking for amusement and thought that the best thing would be to let them get together and just see what sort of entertainment they would provide for themselves, with the elders to one side giving them free rein. This suggestion was approved and the Minister was left to broach the subject to the young folk at next singing class. The idea, needless to say, was greeted with enthusiasm, and a general meeting was called on the following Monday evening, resulting in the birth of the Mutual Improvement Society of Cushing. The opening concert was arranged to be held in the old stone hall at Cushing Tuesday week. The admission was twenty-five cents for this concert, and five cents per individual and fifteen for families in the succeeding ones.

The first concert was voted a great success, and everyone was very much delighted with the results. The receipts were such that the greater part of the expense that attends the organization of any society, were almost defrayed, and the society was fairly launched with but little encumbrance. Weekly concerts were held regularly and were a great source of enjoyment; and, as there was very little expense, the young folk all helped to provide the weekly programmes.

The society funds began to accumulate in a modest way; this was the very thing that the Minister was hoping for and, though he said nothing of his hopes until there were funds enough, his proposal was that the funds be partially expended in the travelling expenses of good lecturers from Montreal to lecture to the Society. This expenditure was well repaid with some very interesting lectures.

On fine nights, the attendance was sometimes swelled with villagers from the neighboring communities — Lachute, St. Andrews and Grenville, and this attendance tended to augment the Society's already excellent reputation. Now and again there was an evening given to debating, and long and strong were arguments for the pros and cons, as well as those interesting few who aspired to public speaking, with the best of good fellowship prevailing among all.

With the Manse as a rendezvous for business and general rehearsals, these concerts were kept up for two winters and a part of the third, but, with the completion of the canal works the population began to dwindle resulting in due time to the discontinuance of the Society.

All this happened half a century ago. James Miller, with whom I was in company as door-keeper, became later a well known man and rather a noted singer and amateur entertainer. We conversed with many of those who helped to produce the programs and those who attended them. I may say it has also been gratifying to meet, while on my travels, the many people who remembered the Society and its programs. I believe all those who took part in the activities recall with pleasure the time spent at old St. Mungo's Manse, where they met to prepare the future programs. And here all classes and faiths consorted with a friendly spirit and entente cordiale, presided over by the Reverend and Mrs. James Fraser.

SUNNY LIVING starts at the table

How you feel and how you look depend largely on the foods you eat. The balanced menu provides the "bulk" to prevent common constipation—caused by lack of this essential fiber.

Common constipation frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet, in most cases, it can be overcome pleasantly and safely by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's All-Bran is a natural food for normal individuals. It furnishes "bulk" in convenient and concentrated form. All-Bran also provides vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this sunny way better than taking patent medicines? Two table-spoonfuls of All-Bran daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If relief is not obtained, see your doctor.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Miss Myrtle Donaldson, of Chatboro, has returned home from a pleasant visit with friends in Montreal.

Mrs. Austin McIntyre and little son are spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. J. Donaldson of Chatboro.

Mrs. L. C. Cooke, of Cushing West, was the guest of Mrs. A. Graham on Monday.

Farmer: "No, I wouldn't think of chargin' ye for the cider. That'd be bootleggin'; an', praise the Lord, I ain't come t' that yet. The peck o' potatoes'll be five dollars."

THAT'S WHY

(Stray Stories)

"I had the right of way when this man ran into me, yet you say I was to blame."

"You certainly were."

"Why?"

"Because his father is mayor, his brother is chief of police, and I'm engaged to his sister."

Jealousy a Disease

Medical science has until recently regarded jealousy as a defect of character that is incurable. Psychologists have come to the conclusion, however, that jealousy is a disease, with the same general characteristics as other diseases. Jealousy is a mixture of fear, envy and weakness. It is just as uncontrollable as love, which comes and goes without any conscious effort of will. The only difference between love and jealousy is that whereas love is incurable, jealousy can now be treated by means of psycho-therapy. The basic cause of jealousy is discovered by means of exhaustive psycho-analysis and after this a complete cure can be effected in most cases. The jealous person is given hormones and is otherwise treated in the same way as a chronic dipsomaniac.

LADY COUNCILLOR, 24, ACTING AS MAYOR

Alderman Miss Margaret Strang of Edmonton, Canada's youngest civic councillor, was appointed to fill the council chair in place of Mayor Joseph E. Clarke, during the latter's absence at the conference of western mayors on January 28th.

St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, a place of 13,448 inhabitants, had a surplus of $30,000 in connection with the civic administration of 1934.

ONTARIO MAYORS' SEVEN POINT PROGRAM

A seven-point programme adopted by the Ontario Mayors' Association will be laid before the Provincial Government by a special committee. The schedule is based on major resolutions endorsed during the two-day parley and includes a request that municipalities be given authority to tax hydro properties.

The committee also will ask that the statutes be amended to compel all municipal election candidates to comply with a $1,000 property qualification.

Alberta Peer Advocates Settlement along Lines of Brig-Gen. Hornby's Scheme

Baron Rodney, rancher-peer of Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., in a recent address to the British Empire League in London, advocated a plan whereby Great Britain and Canada would co-operate in the establishment of farming communities in Canada where families from the United Kingdom could settle.

He suggested that approved committees in the United Kingdom sponsor establishment of small colonies of British families on Canadian land suitable for mixed farming, having an area of from 1,000 to 5,000 acres each. Then each of the sponsoring committees, under his plan, would select a settlement manager who would live in the community and be responsible for its activities. The land would be held by the society in perpetuity under Lord Rodney's plan.

He further suggested that the farms be worked by the settlers, the rent being proportional to the annual crop, until the farming ability of the settlers had been proved, whereupon they would move from the colonies and acquire farms of their own. Lord Rodney estimated that by the time a family was ready to move on, it would have saved about $1,000 toward the purchase of a farm.

He proposed that the British Government lend an amount equal to this sum at low interest, the money to be made available to the committees for advancement to the settlers.

Speaking on the disadvantages of sending children to Canada, he said that "where children are placed in foster homes they are usually considered as a cheap form of labor, with the result that they are overworked and attendance at school is conspicuous by its absence. The alternative is placing them in training schools."

"Surely," he added, "the children would be better cared for by emigrating them with their parents as a complete family unit." Family settlement was doomed to failure unless community settlement were adopted, he declared.

The plan is essentially similar to the scheme of Brigadier-General M. L. Hornby which has been widely discussed. Canada is not contributing to any such colonization scheme at present, it is understood. Just what attitude the British Government would take in respect to financing the plan is not known.

WINGS OVER CANADA

As new records are set in aviation by the brilliant and daring flying men and women of other countries, Canadians may perhaps forget that the first aeroplane flight in the British Empire was made in Canada by a Canadian. It was at Baddeck, N.S. and was made by J. A. D. McCurdy. The date was February 23, 1909. This milestone in the history of aviation is being recalled in a Radio Commission program to be broadcast on the CRBC national network tonight, February 7 at 9.30 p.m. The program will be called "Wings Over Canada" and has been developed by George Taggart of the Commission's program department. It will dramatize McCurdy's feat and touch on subsequent progress in aviation.

Mr. L. A. Graham of Montreal, was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Graham.

Miss M. Pope, of Montreal, was a week-end guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Cooke.

Mr. and Mrs. Curran, of Covey Hill, Que., are at present spending a few days at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. Thos. Graham.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. Thos. Graham last Thursday afternoon with a good attendance. At the close of the meeting a very appetizing supper was served by the hostess and Mrs. R. G. Cooke.

A number of very exciting hockey games have been played recently in the league which consists of three teams, the A.A.A.A. and the Wild Cats, both of this place, and Huberdeau. The A.A.A.A. played Huberdeau on the local rink last Friday evening, the game resulting in a score of 3-1 in favor of the home team. Another keen game was played at Huberdeau on Monday evening with the Wild Cats, the victory being one for Huberdeau, with a score of 4-2.

At a recent meeting of the Girls' Guild at the home of Mrs. R. G. Cooke, it was decided to stage a play shortly and put on a Valentine's Supper, both of which are under way.

A business meeting of the Y. P. S. was held Sunday evening for the purpose of deciding whether or not to continue the regular meetings, as most of the members were included in the play being staged by the Girls' Guild, and that hockey games fell on each Friday in February, thus taking the only night of the week suitable for a meeting. It was decided to postpone all meetings until March.

Saturday evening saw the local rink a spectacular sight, with a variety of colors and masked figures floating around on the ice. This year's masquerade was indeed a success. Mr. Stirling Simon, proprietor of the rink, distributed a number of valuable and beautiful prizes to the contestants. Those winning prizes were—Men, Mr. Melvin Graham as Robin Hood, 1st; Mr. Earl Morrison as The Black Hand, 2nd; Mr. Bob Simon (the most comically dressed) as a Habitant.

Boys, Mr. Walter Boyd as a Colored Page.

Ladies, Miss Ruth Simon as a Pierrette, 1st; Miss Dorothy Kerr as a Witch, 2nd; Miss V. Moncrieff as Aunt Jemima, being the funniest costume for the lady contestants.

Mr. Jas. Smellie won the prize for the best skating on the ice in costume.

The Judges included Messrs. J. C. Veit, Geo. Thomson, A. B. Dunn, Dr. W. L. Morrison and Rev. Chas. Cushing.

ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING

The Annual Congregational meeting of the Arundel United Church was held in the church hall last Thursday evening. Financial reports of the past year were read by the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. M. E. Davis, and were met with approval. Mrs. M. E. Davis, Secretary of the Ladies' Aid, read the reports of the Aid which were also most gratifying, while Miss Dorothy Kerr, Treasurer of the Girls' Guild, gave a satisfactory report of the Guild's work. Rev. Chas. Cushing expressed his appreciation as to the progress of the different Societies of the Church, and to the Choir and Organist for their help in the services during the past year. A Board of Stewards were then elected to office for the year 1935, those elected being Messrs. H. C. Cooke, John Moncrieff, M. E. Davis, H. G. Cooke, S. K. McArthur, R. G. Cooke, M. A. Graham, and S. S. Cooke.

IN MEMORIAM

BOYD.—In loving memory of a dear husband and father. Mr. Hugh Boyd, who departed this life one year ago today, Feb. 6th., 1935.

We often sit and think of you, dear father
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend
Whom grief can call its own.
More and more each day we miss him.
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know what sorrow
Lies within our hearts concealed.
The golden gates were opened
A gentle voice said, Come,
And with farewells unspoken
He gently entered home.

—His loving wife and sons,
Hugh and Shannon.

ROGERS—In loving memory of William John Rogers, who passed away February 6th., 1933.

Fond are the ties that are broken,
Dear is the one who is gone.
But deep in our memories we'll keep him,
As long as the years roll on.
Inserted by his loving wife and family.

SAUVE SAYS PROVINCE CANNOT CONTROL RADIO MATERIAL

Charging that the Quebec government has allowed statutes in regard to provincial radio broadcasting control to stand although they had been declared unconstitutional by the Privy Council, Paul Sauve (Cons., Two Mountains) has appealed to the Quebec legislature to abrogate the statutes in question.

Two motions of Mr. Sauve in regard to radio-control were declared defeated on division by the speaker.

One of the statutes objected to by the member for Two Mountains concerns the right of the Quebec government to exercise control over all material broadcast from various stations. The other has to do with the civil responsibility of the station in regard to libel and the right of the station control man to cut off any person believed to be uttering libellous statements over the airwaves.

Mr. Sauve recalled the Privy Council had ruled jurisdiction in matters of radio rested entirely with the Dominion government. Hence, he said, the Quebec statutes were unconstitutional; and that the judgment was concerned only with the general control of radio which was well known to be vested in the Dominion government.

You wouldn't board up a Show Window?

It's just one of the splendid ways of advertising good values.

There isn't any business man who would even consider the idea of boarding up his show window and stopping this splendid means of telling people the values and the goods he has to offer them. There is scarcely any retail business that does not put a great deal of time in dressing the windows and having them properly lighted.

And yet, not a fifth of your customers pass that show window on an average of once a week! You may have a fine window and great values and the best of goods, and yet, if you depend entirely on that one means of reaching all possible customers, you will fall far short of the objective. There are hundreds of busy housewives who do not have time to go walking every day.

These housewives arrange the family buying. If they can't window shop, they do their buying through the advertisements. Even the window shoppers know they will miss many excellent values if they fail to scan the advertisements.

When the merchant does not use the advertising columns he is boarding up the means of selling his goods to a number much larger than the window shoppers. Progressive merchants like to invite all classes to their store. Most people like to shop where the merchants display their goods and values. The day of buying unknown articles has gone.

Every week there are thousands of readers in this County waiting for an invitation to shop at your store. Are you boarding up the Advertising Show Window and telling them you have nothing for sale? They will never know of your values if you do not remove the boards.

Invite new customers to your store.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

HOW ABOUT MOVIES?

Making home movies with a modern, low-cost camera is actually as easy as making snapshots. It's fascinating sport, too.

MAY as well be frank about it. Until a few months ago I had the notion, shared by a good many other folks, that home movies were (1) expensive, (2) difficult, and (3) not very good, anyway.

And then Bill, a friend of mine, got a movie outfit. Neither he nor his family can be classed as wealthy, or anything like it, but there he was—sporting a movie camera. Naturally, I was curious.

The camera itself was about the size of a small book. Slid into a top-coat pocket without any fuss at all. It was neat as the proverbial pin and about as simple. Bill showed me how to run it. You merely held it up, aimed it as you would a gun, pressed a button—and you are making movies. Oh, of course, there was a spring to wind and a lens aperture to set, but it was any amount simpler than my favorite snapshot camera. Even the loading was easy.

That particular camera, as I recall it, cost about $40. It used 8 mm. film and held enough to allow for a couple dozen full-length shots—each shot long enough to show, for example, a sensational football play, from the snap of the ball to the end of a fifty-yard run, forward pass included. All that on about ten cents' worth of film.

Movie film, I learned, is really pretty cheap to begin with and doubly so when you consider that the purchase price includes the cost of finishing done by the manufacturer.

Well, I revised my notions of movies, as to cost and difficulty, promptly. And when I saw the finished movies, a week later, I got all over the idea that amateur movies weren't very good. Bill's were excellent. And he's only an average person, a snapshotter like the rest of us.

I'm passing all this on merely for your consideration. Movies, at their best, will never in this world take the place of good snapshots. The snapshot camera has a charm all its own. But there's no reason at all why snapshotters shouldn't take up movies, too. For, obviously, movies can do things that still cameras cannot. They can get the whole of a bit of action instead of merely a part of it.

As far as technicalities are concerned, anyone who has mastered the essentials of snapshotting can take up the modern movie camera without a qualm. Bill has permitted me to make a number of movie shots and I'm both surprised and delighted with the results. Maybe someday I'll get me an outfit.

I find that there are two standard sizes for amateur movie film—8 millimeter and 16 millimeter (Hollywood uses 35 millimeter film). Naturally, costs are less in the 8 mm. class than in the 16, but even the 16 mm. outfits are surprisingly reasonable in both first and operating costs. Of course, you can spend a great deal of money on special equipment, but it's not at all necessary. By the way, with certain 16 mm. outfits you can get action pictures in full color. That's something we snapshotters can't quite do, to date.

JOHN VAN GUILDER.

CANADA'S ARCTIC DOCTORS

Medical care for the native inhabitants of Canada's Far North is provided by the Canadian Government, and for thousands of miles along the Arctic coast of the Dominion, in fair weather and in foul, medical officers in the service of the government bring their healing art to the aid of the Eskimo citizens, while, inland, Indians, half-breeds and indigent whites are also given medical aid. Winter and summer patrols of hundreds of miles are not unusual, and nearly every mode of transport known to the North country, such as aeroplane, steamboat, motor boat, canoe, and dog-sled has been used to extend this service. Eight doctors are employed in the work, and their efforts to prevent serious illness among the northern natives are bearing fruit.

While civilization has brought many benefits to the Eskimos, its contact with these happy and hospitable people has also resulted in a number of ill effects. Although a healthy and organically sound race, the Eskimos are seriously susceptible to ailments which ordinarily cause white people only minor discomforts. Before the coming of the white man the Eskimos were isolated along Canada's Arctic coast, and they knew nothing of such common ills as colds, influenza, and other kindred ailments. There has been no need for their bodies to build up a resistance to the attacks of these diseases. Consequently the arrival of the first whaling and trading vessels each season was followed by widespread outbreaks among the natives, with often disastrous effects. To-day the medical services in the Far North take particular care upon the arrival of the first ships to check the spread of these diseases, and it is hoped that in time, as closer contact is made with the outside world, the natives will have built up the necessary resistance to ward off such attacks. By instructions as to the proper diets, the doctors have reduced considerably the number of deaths due to dietary causes. The most striking success has been made in the correction of methods of feeding infants and older children.

In this and in other ways the health of the Eskimos is being safeguarded and improved so that the benefits being derived from their contact with civilization are preserved and any harmful effects overcome or avoided.

Those Wise Ants

Long has the ant, with its organized insect social activities, been held up as a great example of wisdom in nature. But according to the London correspondent of the Christian Century, a famous scientist regards the ant as no example for mankind. The ant shares many qualities with man—he keeps slaves, he has domestic servants, he goes forth to war—but the ants seem to have finished their evolution: 20,000,000 years ago ants were as they are today. But man is only a few hundreds of thousands of years old; he is only beginning. All other animals are merely blind products of evolution; man is the conscious trustee of the evolutionary process and can take it further in his own person.

Hydrogen Pots Light in Stars

Not only is about one-third of a star's weight due to hydrogen, but the star is supplied with heat and light by the continual breaking up and rebuilding of the hydrogen atoms, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. That is the belief of a director of Mount Wilson observatory, who says that in their earlier history, stars may have been made entirely of hydrogen clouds. Later, hydrogen atoms condensed to form heavier elements like oxygen, carbon, iron and the like. During this process, enormous energy was released, keeping the star hot and radiant. Spectroscopic study of ionized particles or atoms which have lost their electrons has revealed these secrets of the stars.

Sports at West Point

The United States Military academy, West Point, is one of the few schools in this country that still retains the purely amateur requirement for participation in athletics. West Point maintains that every cadet is a bona fide student, proficient in his studies as well as in his military work, and is at the institution for the purpose of becoming an army officer. Therefore, any cadet who maintains the required proficiency in his studies is allowed to compete in any varsity sport, after he has completed his plebe year, regardless of any participation in athletics at any other institution before entering West Point.

THAT HORRID ICE

"Ice is, oh! such horrid stuff," Said little Annie May, As she pulled her skates off in disgust, One Sunny winter day— "It pulls my feet all crooked, It bumps me when I fall— Although I hotly scold and scold, It won't behave at all. "It comes right up to meet my face, Each time I try to skate, Until I get quite angry And cry 'Now you just wait!' "Next summer I will make you splash, And throw a stone at you, I know, Because you will not let my feet, Go where they want to go."

KRINKLY KRUM

Marjorie was quite bewildered. She could not imagine what this beautiful princess was talking about.

"Come up beside me," the princess commanded, and Marjorie obeyed, to find herself clasped in the soft arms of the princess. "Tell me, dearest Golden Locks, where you have hidden yourself all these long years. Why, the bears whose dinner you ate so long ago have grown so old that they have turned white! See, there is the Big, Big Bear watching us from the back of the room, and the Middle-Sized Bear is just coming in at the door with the Tiny Tiny Bear close behind her." From the shelter of the princess' arms Marjorie stared at the bears. She felt that she had seen them all before somewhere, but was quite sure that she was not the Golden Locks of long ago; and she was just going to tell the princess so, when she noticed Krinkly Krum was holding up a warning finger, and she suddenly remembered that she must not contradict the princess. How thankful she felt towards Krinkly Krum for reminding her.

Seeing that the princess was waiting for an answer Marjorie after thinking for a few moments, said "I have just been wandering and wandering around waiting and watching for an open door, but did not discover it until Krinkly Krum found it for me." "Krinkly Krum must be rewarded for that, my dear. But sit down beside me. You must never leave us again." Marjorie sat down on the crystal throne beside Princess Snowball and listened attentively while one of her attendants called the roll.

As each one's name was called they came forward and curtsied before the princess, telling her what they had done since the roll was called at the beginning of the year. Some had been keeping the daffodil and crocus buds warm, and were going back to their work as soon as the roll was called. Others reported they had made blankets and covered the grass to keep the roots from freezing. A great number of them had piled against a board fence and kept the wicked old North Wind from reaching a little lame dog who was too tired to walk any further. Others had scattered themselves over the ice so that old Dobbin would not slip on it. "And then!" growled Iceberg suddenly, "he paid them for that by eating some of their friends!"

"Oh!" said Princess Snowball, "I think I heard Iceberg's voice? I am glad that he is here to report once more. It seems such a long time since he was here, and we are so anxious to hear just what he has been doing, after he has explained what he means by Old Dobbin eating some of the Little Snow-Folk." Iceberg's face took on a mean, crafty look. "There is nothing to explain, Madame. I saw him eating them, and that is all there is to that." "Princess Snowball" if you please, when you are speaking to Her Majesty" growled Mr. Grizzly. Iceberg stuck out his tongue at him but did not attempt to speak.

"Did you hear me, Iceberg?" Mr. Grizzly asked in a louder tone. "Of course I did!" snapped Iceberg defiantly, "but who's afraid of an old thing like you! If I had you outside, Brother North Wind and I together would soon make short work of you, Mister Grizzly, of oh such ancient date! But you are not any older than the Iceberg Family or Brother North Wind either, and we neither of us give a snap for you, so there!" Iceberg stuck his tongue out at Mr. Grizzly again, and followed it up by a derisive "Yah! yah! yah!" As he finished he turned as if to leave the room, but before he got very far was captured by the Princess Snowball's servants. "Not so fast, my brave Iceberg!" said her first Lieutenant. "The Snowball and Snowflake families are just as old as the North Wind and Iceberg families, even if we are not so sharp. We are sharp enough, though, to know that you have been saucy to our princess and you are not going to leave this room until you report what you have been doing, and apologize to her." Dragging Iceberg with them, they once more faced the princess and made Iceberg kneel down before her, then held him by sitting all over him.

They made such a funny picture that Marjorie was seized with an uncontrollable desire to laugh, so that she rocked about on the throne and held her sides. "Golden Locks is having a fit!" cried Krinkly Krum, dashing up to where she was away from side to side.

This startled the servants, who were holding Iceberg, so that they loosed their grasp, and before they realized it he was up and off again.

BEES PRODUCTIVE IN MICHIGAN A DOUBLE TRAGEDY UNFOLDED

Amherstburg Echo has an interesting story to tell, in the reproduction of a letter received by a resident of the neighborhood. The circumstances are unusual and the letter, following, speaks for itself:

Detroit, Mich., October 19th., 1934.

Dear Friend:

I am sending you a jar of honey right out of the woods with the genuine flavor of the wild flower and of the forest you love so well.

Last Monday accompanied by my hired man I went down to the brush in the back part of my barn, and while walking through the woods we saw a rather large red squirrel apparently coming out of a knot hole in the trunk of a tree. We casually approached the squirrel, but he did not move or seem at all disturbed by our presence, and I struck the tree with a stick but not a move did the squirrel make. We then secured some fence rails and climbed up to the saucy animal.

It was a red squirrel, sure enough, but a dead one and wedged securely in the knot hole. Meanwhile, we noticed a large number of dead bees around the head of the squirrel and on the ground. We realized this was a "honey tree."

With a knife we cut around the squirrel and pulled him out, expecting to be driven away by an army of bees, but not a bee came out. We cut deeper into the tree and found thousands of dead bees in the lower part of the trunk, while, in the upper part we found over a hundred pounds of delicious honey sample of which I am sending you herewith.

All the evidence of the double tragedy was there. The squirrel had inadvertently rushed into the bees' nest, the bees had attacked him and he had tried to make his escape, but too late. He had only succeeded in getting half way out of the hole.

The action of the poison had swollen his body (at the same time preserving it) until it had filled the hole completely, so that the bees could not come out or those that came home laden with honey could not go in. Mr. Squirrel had his revenge, the bees inside had all died of suffocation.

We secured the honey without any smoke or fuss, thus it retained all its native sweetness and flavor so noted in wild honey.

I hope you will enjoy it.

A SHORT STORY

by—

HENRY THOMAS

Time was when Old George Gillespie and Old Bill McGovern had lived neighbourly. Once in summer evenings there had been the friendly trailing of Bill's voice from across the river; Bill calling his dog; Bill talking to his tired horses at the day's end; Bill singing off key on his way to milk the cows. In damp weather from the tin chimney of Gillespie's shack, three-quarters of a mile distant and built below the crest of a fair-sized hill, smoke lazily signalled a friendly message to Bill McGovern. Winter nights and the faint lights in frost-laden windows of either home communed distantly. Unanalyzed yet definite reflections of an atmosphere of neighbourliness until that lawsuit over a horse that Bill didn't want to pay for because it died, most inconsiderately for the sake of friendship, a very short time after Bill bought it from George.

Came springtime evenings when Old George Gillespie didn't listen for Bill's voice from over the river. True, Bill was older. His voice had less of a penetrating quality. Gillespie's ears, too, were duller. But he could have heard. And Bill's eyes, though not so keen, well might have caught the play of curling smoke from George's chimney in wet weather. They didn't, though. In winter evenings the windows winked dim lights with seeming aloofness.

Sometimes the paths of Bill and George crossed. Usually in town. Old neighbours, growing old apart—they passed and didn't speak.

The long winters had been a bit tough on Bill for years. Not so tough for George. George had had a married daughter in town. Usually he had spent one day a week with her and her husband and the little family, returning at night to look after the stock. It was a break that wasn't for Bill. He didn't have anyone in town who thought to ask him in sometimes. And while there were others at a greater distance to whom he could have gone, it would have meant his asking George to look after the stock for a few days, and Bill couldn't do that any more. For in the hearts of some good men there is an acquired crust that gets very flint-like.

George was up early one clear, still, cold morning, preparing for his day in town, when the postman dropped a letter in the tin box at the gate. George's folk has sent word that they were going south for a month. George felt lonely.

From the tin chimney that lifted from the roof of his shack the smoke shot thinly, straightly upward into the crisp air. There was something inspiring about the morning. Kind of lonesome, though. George went to the window and scratched some frost from the pane. Across the frozen, snow-piled river Bill's place stood out clearly in the morning sunlight. Bill hadn't got up yet, apparently.

George put the kettle on the stove, dressed himself for the stable, and went out. As he opened the stable door the contact of cold outside air with the warmer air from within made steam. He finished his morning chores and returned to the shack. Leisurely he prepared breakfast. Porridge, bacon and eggs and toast, the latter accomplished on the nearly-red-hot cook stove lid. The kettle sang pleasantly. The shack was warming quickly under the influence of the fast wood fire.

George went to the window again and peered through the space he had scratched in the frost. Funny thing about Bill McGovern; no sign of him about yet. George wondered if Bill had gone off to town. No, the old sleigh box was still in the yard, near the pump. Bill was home.

Old George Gillespie finished his breakfast and washed the dishes. He shaved and slicked himself a bit, and settled down to read the weekly paper. The alarm clock on the shelf ticked disinterestedly. George finished a story and turned over a page. He read further, then put the paper aside and crossed to the window again, clearing the pane with the warm heel of his hand so that he could see Bill's house across the river. No sign of Bill yet. George read the advancing hour of the clock, considered for a moment, then put on his leather-lined jacket, woollen cap and mitts. He fixed the dampers on the stove and went outside.

Great morning, he thought, as he strode off; bright, clear; made a man want to take in big breaths of air and keep moving briskly. George followed the sleigh tracks across the river, then turned in at Bill's gate. First time in years he had been in Bill's yard. He felt queer about it—sort of sheepish. Bill's dog came bounding to meet him, barking a welcome. George stopped to pat the dog. Then he continued on to Bill's door. He listened outside for a moment and then went in. The place was cold. It smelled of liniment. Bill was in bed. He looked up at George, but didn't speak. Down, sure enough, was Bill. George went outside, returning with an armful of wood, and kindled a fire. He put the kettle on the stove, got the pail and went outside again to Bill's stable. He fed the stock, milked Bill's cow and carried the milk back to the house. The kettle was humming. The wood fire was low. George put in fresh fuel. He made Bill a steaming concoction of ginger, sugar and boiling water. Drinking it made Bill's eyes water. It was hot stuff.

Then George set about making breakfast for Bill. There was a determined set to his jaw. On Bill's face was an expression of entreaty that George wouldn't see, a sort of invitation not to bother. It was a tasty breakfast George prepared. Bacon, eggs, toast and honey, out of a tin, hard as frozen butter. Bill declared he wasn't hungry, but he ate the breakfast. With his mouth full he asked, unexpectedly, "not going to town to-day?"

"Nope", from George. George refilled the stove with wood, poured water from the kettle into a hand basin and washed the dishes. Then, with his jaw set he swept the floor. In the warmth of the room Bill dozed a dozen times, and started from his sleep. George smoked his pipe and read ponderously until the afternoon was well advanced. Finally he put on his heavy wraps and went to the stable again. When he returned ten minutes later with an armful of wood, Bill started from a short sleep. George put the wood into the box, stood inside the door for a minute and said, "I'll be getting back now."

Bill lifted himself on an elbow. "Much obliged to you," he stated.

George's jaw remained firm for an instant. He seemed in pretty deep thought. Finally he offered, "If you like I'll bring the checker board over to-night, seein' you're sick."

Bill nodded eagerly. And going home in that winter twilight to look after his own stock and fetch the checker board, Old George Gillespie was strangely excited. In his slow thinking way he dimly remembered the old friendly trailing of Old Bill McGovern's voice from across the river in summer and thought happily how it was going to be all right to listen for Bill's voice again.

Making History in Argenteuil

50 Years Ago.

February 13, 1885.

In connection with complaints concerning reckless driving, it is advised there is a law regulating this matter and owners of teams driving without bells are liable to a fine.

At last Monday's meeting of the St. Andrews municipal council George Simpson, Esq., was unanimously re-elected Mayor.

D. Dunbar, Esq., has been re-elected Mayor of the Lachute municipal council.

Monday night last was the coldest night of the winter. On Tuesday morning one of our office hands put the thermometer outside of doors and the mercury ran down into the ball, 35 degrees below zero.

Judge Lynch holds court even in China. Outside the gate of Shanghai recently a son killed his father; a conclave of the latter's clan hastily met, deliberated for about five minutes and then took the parricide, bound him hand and foot and threw him into a hole previously dug for the purpose. Mud was thrown into the hole and members of the clan stamped by turns on the grave until it was level with the ground, then they dispersed.

THE TAX ON UNEARNED REVENUE (Montreal Gazette)

The Finance Committee of the Edmonton City Council suggests that the Alberta Government be requested to enact legislation to tax at the source, and at a rate of not less than 25 per cent., all unearned increments, including interest on public and private bonds and all dividends. This indicates that the financial authorities in question wish the people to save from their wages and salaries and invest in enterprises that give employment, so that the city may take at least a quarter of the returns from the profits of thrift. This is rather discouraging to the industrious among the people. What the Finance Committee ought to do instead is to follow the example of the savers and make the corporation live on its income. Then there would be no need to confiscate the savings of the taxpayers.

MONTREAL'S OUTSIDE STAIRCASES

Montreal's outside staircases, which have long been a topic for criticism and ribald jest, have at last found commendation from a sanitary viewpoint.

Aimé Cousineau, engineer of the City Health Department, claims these "horrors" have been a blessing in disguise, and save Montrealers of to-day and of the future having to spend millions in demolishing slums. The much-condemned outside staircase, he contends, has provided every dwelling with an entrance direct to the open air. It has prevented Montreal from being cursed with thousands of those buildings, condemned everywhere as breeders of disease and worse, in which dwelling after dwelling gives onto a long, smelly ill-lighted corridor with each family living in the kitchen odors of neighbors around. Tenements of the nauseous European variety are practically nil in Canada's metropolis, says Mr. Cousineau. And he knows, for his men have surveyed every house in town.

Viewed as unsightly, old-fashioned, and a menace to public safety, it was once proposed to levy a tax of $5 a year on all exposed staircases in the city.

FOOTPATHS IN BRITAIN (Moose Jaw Times)

While most other countries are much concerned over highways to encourage and provide for motor traffic, Great Britain has made a survey of footpaths in order to preserve this means of travel, the value of which can hardly be exaggerated, and the need of which grows as motor traffic increases.

25 Years Ago.

February 11, 1910.

Mrs. John Heatlie's home at Ogdensburg was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, Feb. 2nd., when her daughter, Miss Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. Russell C. MacKimmie of the same place.

Mr. Sam Caron left on Saturday for Toronto, where he secured a position with the Dominion Valley Paper Company.

The Parish Council met last Monday, with D. Black presiding. The resignation of James Patton was read, claiming that holding the office as valuator he could not act. Jas. Armstrong was then appointed to fill the vacancy. Geo. Armstrong and Sidney Watson appeared before the Council requesting a permit for the Geneva Rural Telephone Association to erect poles and wires in the parish. The petition was granted on condition of assuming all damages resulting thereby.

The annual meeting of shareholders of Lachute Knitting Co'y took place last week, the board of directors being named—P. R. McGibbon, Wm. Howard, J. T. Griffith, Luke Whalley, of Hull, Robt. Dobbie, H. Slater and H. R. Hammond.

Famous Woman Spy Shot
The famous German spy known as "Trautlein Doktor" first came under the notice of the Russian secret service in Vienna in 1908. She was under observation in England in 1912. At the beginning of the war she rendered valuable assistance to Hindenburg in his campaign against the Russians in eastern Prussia. During the Russian retreat an officer of the Russian secret service saw and recognized her as the woman spy of Vienna. She was immediately arrested and shot. It is stated that the German victorious cavalry entered the town just 20 minutes too late to save her.

Fingerprinting
Fingerprinting is as simple as reading large, black numerals, according to a fingerprint expert. "For instance," he says, "we tell a print left by a negro from that of a white man by the size of the pore. We tell a female print from that of a man by the coarseness of the lines. The female print has a much finer line. Then, to get right down to personalities, we class each print into its distinct group and in its group the individual print stands right out as conspicuously as the group itself—simple, isn't it?"

Dreams Are Speedy
Scientists have conducted various experiments to demonstrate the rapidity with which a dream takes place. In one instance the sprinkling of a few drops of water on a man's face caused a dream in which the events of a whole lifetime passed before him. The whole process took but a second or two of time. The great rapidity of dreams is due to the fact that in the unconscious state all the individual's life experiences are on view as if in one flash.

ELECTION FRAUDS

In the last Winnipeg municipal election a woman was caught voting once in her own name and once in the name of a neighbor who had died. She was fined $100.

A suspicious returning officer required her to take an oath, and she solemnly swore that she was the dead woman.

An alleged conspiracy is being investigated by the Attorney-General's department.

MAYOR OF BOSTON WOULD ANNEX SUBURBS

A move to make Boston the fourth largest city in the United States is sponsored by Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield in a bill he plans to file with the Legislature.

The measure would combine Boston and 40 surrounding municipalities into one political division having a population in excess of 2,000,000.

Mansfield also proposes a state-wide two per cent. sales tax to relieve the burden on real estate.

PROVINCE LOSES APPEAL

The Court of Appeals in Quebec unanimously dismissed with costs the appeal of Quebec Province from the decision of Mr. Justice J. A. Prevest in which he upheld the right of the Bell Telephone to collect a tax on long distance telephone calls made at the Parliament Buildings.

The legality of the tax was contested by the province on the grounds that the Dominion Government did not have the right to impose a tax on the provincial Crown, but the higher court ruled that the "extra charge" imposed by the Bell Telephone Company was provided for by special legislation which was found to be constitutional.

In the judgment, which was read by Mr. Justice Dorion, the court ruled that the Dominion Government had the right to levy a tax of that nature just as well as they have the right to collect customs duty from the provincial Crown.

QUEER MALTESE CUSTOM INCREASES CANADIAN EXPORTS

In the island of Malta, an important naval base of Britain in the Mediterranean, milk is delivered on the hoof, being purveyed direct to the consumer from the herds of goats which are driven from house to house. The Maltese people prefer goat's milk to that supplied by cows, although there are two small dairies supplying sterilized or pasteurized cow's milk. This gives rise to a large importation of condensed milk for use by the European population and in this trade Canada has a share, states the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. Other Canadian products which find their way to Malta are bacon, sold to the Navy, Army and Air Force canteens; flour, wheat, fish, canned, dried, salted and fresh; and apples. There appears to be a good opening for Canadian cheddar cheese.

Colds Leave Impurities in the Blood

That is one reason why you are often tired, listless and weak after a cold.
To dispense these impurities, take a bottle or two of Fellows' Syrup Compound of Hypophosphites.
Fellows' Syrup contains the "Vital 3" (calcium, phosphorus, iron) and other blood purifiers that science has proved to be effective in helping to reduce blood impurities. It aids in enriching the blood corpuscles with new energy and vitality.
The restorative effect of the "Vital 3" on blood, nerves, muscles and bones is so vigorous that you'll surprise yourself with your quick "pick-up" after taking a bottle or two of Fellows' Syrup.

EDITORIAL

Cable despatches state that a Lancashire canoeist has started out to cross the Atlantic in an 18-foot craft. The man is 26 years of age, but in intellect considerably younger, one would judge. The sinking of mighty vessels, and loss of life at sea, are unimportant in the reckonings of an adventurer who lacks naught but discretion.

Two million dollars, we are told, lies idle and unclaimed in bank accounts over the Dominion. It seems strange that vast sums should rest with such serenity while many small deposits are constantly overworked and stretched to the merest margin.

Accustomed to the ample accommodations of rural life, small-town folks who visit Montreal will welcome the attempt of Alderman Bray to curb unlimited cramming of streetcars. City trams at rush hours are a nightmare to any self respecting traveller. That Montreal has this matter under consideration at last gives faint hope of a remedy. Public safety and comfort are certainly items which deserve the attention of a city council.

Reaction in the London market to Mayor G. G. McGeer's move to reduce interest rates on Vancouver bonds, and to defaulting among other Canadian municipalities, is said to have reflected unfavorably on the demand for Canadian municipal issues abroad.

It is a fact which illustrates again that, however dire the straits of our cities and however burdensome their debt, it is a sound policy to respect obligations to the last. These obligations are heavy, and they are here to stay for many long years. The only recourse left to our administrations is that which has impressed itself on Federal and Provincial governments, that borrowing must be curtailed, if only for the welfare and solvency of future Canadians, and that—supremely difficult though the task—revenues and budgets must be operated in conformity as nearly as possible, even to the meeting of current interest charges.

PROPERTY QUALIFICATION (Border Cities Star)

Mr. Croll says that for the present at least he is opposed to any deposit being required from candidates for municipal office.

We are not in agreement with the Minister on this point. We think it is desirable not only to ask for a reasonable deposit, in order to discourage purely frivolous candidates who have no chance of election and know it when they run, but to insist that every candidate for office shall be a bona fide property owner with his taxes paid in full on or before nomination day.

We have had a ridiculous number of civic nominations in the Border Cities recently and in plenty of cases those nominated have had no claim to public preferment. Obviously, anyone desiring to hold public office and spend public money should have some financial stake in the community.

There was a time, not long ago, when the regulations contained a reasonable property requirement. This should be restored.

RARE OPPORTUNITIES

Economy has become second nature to housewives in recent years. If you are anxious to save money, a visit to H. M. LEGISLATION TO BENEFIT FARMERS

Just a week ago the Minister of Finance, Honourable E. N. Rhodes, made his first attempt to introduce the amendments to the Canadian Farm Loan Act which will increase the credit facilities of the Dominion Farm Loan to $90,000,000 and abolish provincial boards. Such a flood of commendation came from all sides of the House that it was practically at the end of the second day's discussion of the amendments before the Finance Minister found an opportunity to place the amendments officially before the members.

Coming on top of amendments to strengthen the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act and Prime Minister R. B. Bennett's undertaking to institute scientific research into drought problems, there is considerable jubilation among the representatives of rural constituencies and general approval from the press.

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs
By Wüfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, February 12.—Party warfare broke out again on the debate over the Ottawa trade agreements; statistics were quoted at great length on both sides; very old straw was threshed over with gusto. The performance brought from J. S. Woodsworth a warm rebuke, and the House listened to him with a good deal of respect. This session, he reminded them, was called to deal with the grave weaknesses of capitalism, and a 'New Deal' for the unemployed and the worker was to be introduced. He was sorry to see it deteriorate into a dog fight. Moreover, he objected to members on the government side getting up and metaphorically patting the government over the back for past actions: once that was established as a custom, there would be no end of it. (A Conservative private member had moved the re-endorsement of the Ottawa pacts). However, outside of that one party row, the rest of the week saw a good deal of constructive debate and action, although several of the issues were of comparatively local interest. The bill of fare for the week included beam trawlers, income tax exemptions, Russian timber contracts, the nationalization of banks, chartered and central, and drought relief.

DROUGHT RELIEF IN THE WEST

The problem of the "dried-out" areas in the west is so vast and so important in the national economy, that it is decidedly good news to hear that the government is about to approach it in a long-range scientific way. Of course temporary relief will be required for some time, also; but what is aimed at in the measures announced last week by Hon. Robert Weir is something more permanent, dealing with the present drought cycle but even more valuable as preparation for the next. In typical parts of the drought area it is the intention to set up large demonstration and research areas, with the co-operation of the farmers there, and the aid of committees of prominent citizens. Science and engineering, backed by federal funds to the necessary extent, will be employed to see what can best be done with the large semi-arid drought plains. The development of drought-resistant grasses to check soil drifting, the use of trees, the construction of dams to hold the spring run-off, provide water for stock, and even supply small irrigation schemes, are among the devices which are to be considered.

There is nothing novel about the general attack on drought; all the experimental stations in that part of Canada have done some work along similar lines, and there has been an "illustration station" at Manyberries, south of Medicine Hat, since 1927 set up for the express purpose of serving a 'dried out' area which was abandoned largely by the original settlers. But it now intended to try out new approaches and spend more time and money on the matter. When it is recalled that in their most prosperous years the "dried out" areas yielded many millions annually in new wealth, it is obviously a good investment to spend a few hundred thousands, or even a few millions, in efforts to rehabilitate them.

NOT SO VERY RADICAL

In spite of all the enthusiasm at the beginning of the year for reform, with the Conservative party vying with the C.C.F. for advanced views on social and economic problems, it was obvious in the debate on the nationalization of the chartered banks that public opinion is not yet ready—perhaps it will never be—for the operation of all our financial machinery as a publicly-owned utility. The Liberals would probably have supported the resolution (moved by a U.F.A. member) if it had cited the Central Bank only; but as it was, the two major parties joined to bury the resolution under an avalanche of adverse votes. The big bankers of St. James Street and elsewhere will be able now to breathe easier for a while! If they worried about the resolution at all, which is doubtful.

The power of the federal government to put into effect its program of social legislation will unquestionably be challenged. Much study of the B.N.A. act, Canada's treaty obligations etc. is going on. Many legal authorities think that Premier Bennett will have a hard time—unless the provinces agree not to object—in getting the unemployment insurance bill by the courts. Such legislation has always up to now been considered provincial in jurisdiction. Mr. Bennett says we entered into treaty obligations at Versailles and Geneva; and must carry them out. But the courts in Canada have already ruled on this question; and what they said then did not indicate that the federal government can go into the field of social legislation regardless of the provinces' attitude.

AN EDITOR'S SONG

How dear to our heart is the steady subscriber.
Who pays in advance on the birth of each year,
Who lays down the money and does it quite gladly,
And casts round the office a halo of cheer!

He never says "Stop it; I cannot afford it."
I'm getting more magazines now than I read";
But always says, "Send it; our people like it—"
In fact we all think it a help and a need."

How welcome his check when it reaches our sanctum;
How it makes our pulse throb; how it makes our heart dance;
We outwardly thank him; we inwardly bless him—
The steady subscriber who pays in advance!

Congratulations !

(Contributed)

Hearty congratulations are extended to Mrs. William Drew of Lachute, who celebrates her 97th birthday on Thursday of this week, in conjunction with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Dr. J. M. Drew whose birthday comes on the same day.

Mrs. Drew Sr. is one of the oldest, if not the oldest resident of this historical county of Argenteuil, but her advanced years have not diminished her interest in things of the present day. Friends who call on her find her busy with her sewing, mending or darning, yet quite interested in the latest Hockey Match, Young People's meeting and other new developments of the home surroundings as well as in speaking of the happenings of the past which her keen memory has retained for her.

The handicap of slightly impaired hearing is borne with serene contentment. To on-lookers this contentment of spirit, combined with a life of activity seems to be the secret well-spring of her long cheerful life. Her sister, Mrs. Alexander Smith of St. Hermas, although not so advanced in years, shares with her the honor of being among Argenteuil County's wonderful women.

These two ladies are members of one of the oldest families in the county, daughters of the late Thomas Pollock whose name ranked high in musical and educational circles in by-gone years. They were members of their father's choir, which another of our good ladies, in speaking of the days when she came to Lachute as a bride when the country was but slightly developed, said that Mr. Pollock's choir in the old stone church on Sunday mornings was the one bright spot to look forward to in those lonely days of her first coming to Lachute.

A book entitled "Eminent Scotch Families" records the first use of the name of Pollock of which this family is descended as being that of Robert, younger brother of "Petrus son of Fulbert", who took the name from his hereditary lands in Renfrewshire away back in the eleventh century, giving also a short history of the Pollocks, all down the years, speaking of The Church of Pollok, Peter de Pollok, Baron of Rothes, Aberdeen, of John Pollok, as the name was written in those days, but according to the author of this book, either spelling of it is right; who fought for Queen Mary; also of Sir Robert Pollok who in the time of King William III and Queen Anne was by the latter created Baronet of Nova Scotia for distinguished service, as well as a great many other interesting happenings up until the time of the publication of the book in the sixteenth century.

Mrs. Drew has in her possession a copy of the Coat of Arms of her family with the date of the creation of her ancestor, Sir Robert, as baron. At the top of this coat of arms, inscribed in Latin, are the words "Bravery and Strength" and in modern English the motto of the family "Strike Boldly."

It is also interesting to note that at the present date the special body guard of our beloved Queen Mary is Sir Robert Pollock, presumably of the same family.

"GOD SAVE THE KING"

The sentiment of our National Anthem might with propriety apply to saving him from seeing the carelessness with which the great majority of people join in the beautiful song. There is little attempt to interpret the sentiments of this prayer in music, when it is raised in tune, in nearly every company of people, whether of high or low degree. They overlook the fact that it is a prayer and demands some kind of respectful attention as every other prayer, either in silence or posture. But on the other hand, it seems the signal for a frantic search for rubbers, coats, hats or what not, so as to be ready to go when the song is ended. The National Anthem as received by Canadian audiences is a joke. There is the shining exception—perhaps an ex-soldier—perhaps one who really means "God Save the King" when he joins in the chorus—perhaps a mother whose son died in Flanders Field fighting for his king and country. These stand straight with arms down by their sides, heads erect, their countenances betokening their attunement with the sentiments of the beautiful anthem; their whole attitude in sharp contrast to the jittery scramble of others in preparation for what looks like the start of a race to get away from the meeting. God Save the King!

—Amherstburg Echo.

SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY ISSUES STATEMENT

The annual financial statements of life assurance companies are among the best barometers of general business experience on this continent. Hence, during the past five years when the decline in individual incomes resulted in the purchase of fewer and smaller life insurance policies, the statements in question faithfully reflected that fact. As depression continued there was a more extensive termination of existing insurance and, at its most acute stages, there was an exceptional increase of borrowings and of cash surrenders. Plainly, this was an impairment, in many instances, by the insured, under the stress of immediate necessity, of prudent provision for the future of himself and his dependants.

The report of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, published in another column, and the remarks of its president, Mr. Arthur B. Wood, at its annual meeting, are gratifying evidence of an improvement of conditions. The report reflects a return of confidence and a marked trend toward recovery in business. Because of the huge investments of the life assurance companies in business enterprises, the healthier conditions in trade indicated in this report make encouraging reading. Increases in new assurances and in repayments of policy loans, decreases in policy terminations and reduced demands for new loans—all these demonstrate that life insurance, which proved such a bulwark of strength during trying conditions, is, in turn, keeping full pace with economic recovery.

For life insurance executives the problems of rehabilitation are little less challenging than those of the depression. The present difficulty of people everywhere to obtain investments at remunerative rates of interest and the record of dependability established by life insurance organizations under stress, have, of late, greatly increased the demands for investment insurance and annuities.

Is Keener Than Hubby's
Something burning is something that is smelled. While something burning may be smelled at any hour of the day, the time usually preferred is between 12.30 o'clock and midnight, though the hour may be earlier or later according to when you go to bed. In the smelling of burning things the olfactory organs of the female are keener than those of the male, says the Baltimore Evening Sun. That is probably due to the fact that while the female, after giving the warning, remains comfortably in bed, it is the duty of the male to get up and investigate.

It is true that males of an independent and courageous disposition may, in response to the warning, reply "plish" or "tush," that they smell nothing. But they must expect to be countered by the argument that their senses have been deadened by smoking an awful pipe.

Once the male is apprised of something burning, should he elect to remain in bed he does so upon the understanding that, thanks to his indifference, there is a grave possibility that within the next half hour or so flames will have shot up from the cellar and embraced the living room and dining room and leaped from thence to the second floor where all members of the family will be burned to a crisp.

Under the circumstances, all but the most hardy will drag themselves up, feel around for dressing gown and bedroom slippers and make a tour of the house to report that there was nothing wrong at all, while the female turns over and goes back to sleep with a feeling of rectitude over a duty well performed.

Large quantities of pottery in the form of cups and mugs bearing the portraits of the King and Queen are being produced at Stoke-on-Trent as souvenirs for the Silver Jubilee.

The United Church Hall presented a smart and gay appearance at the Valentine Tea on Wednesday of this week. Dainty refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid and the Surprise packets added considerably to the fun of the afternoon. Proceeds amounted to $59.40.

At the same time insurance companies, themselves, are faced with the very conditions, on a big scale, that are making the individual investor increasingly annuity minded.

A striking fact mentioned by President Wood, in his address, is that of the $88,000,000 which the Sun Life Company paid out to policyholders last year, 85% was in amounts of less than $5,000, with an average of less than $2,000. That fact indicates the invaluable place life insurance holds as a source of first aid to those of modest circumstances. It is, indeed, a rather significant evidence that some of the problems with which governments today are grappling have long since been anticipated and provided for on a sound scientific basis by our insurance companies.

The general character of the report is not only satisfactory to the policyholders of the Company but encouraging to the business community at large.

COUNTRY TOWNS TAKING INDUSTRIES FROM MONTREAL

Strain Too Great

"Not only is this strain breaking our industrial back, but it is also piling up higher dole costs."

"What future do we face unless we take action? I can only see complete disintegration of Montreal as an industrial centre, and complete collapse of the city's financial structure under a monthly dole cost which might go over $2,000,000."

"City Council must take a determined stand in the matter. It must wield its influence to see to it that the spread between urban and rural wages and hours of labor is wiped out."

Ald. Seigler even thought that female wages and hours of labor in industry should be uniform throughout Canada. "Why should a small town in Ontario be allowed to cut Montreal's industrial throat? Must we tolerate unfair competition?"

But he emphasized: "We can begin first by equalizing wages and hours of labor in the province of Quebec; then, when we have accomplished that, press for Dominion-wide action in this regard."

Commission Needed

Montreal needed an industrial Commissioner, he noted—"a man of experience who, with able consultants, will be able to go to the bottom of Montreal's industrial stagnation, peer in to costs, including those of labor and raw materials, transportation, electricity and taxes; map out a plan to eradicate handicaps if any, and then undertake intensified efforts to secure new industries for the metropolis, as well as keep those already established in the city."

PITY THE BRIDE WHO CANNOT COOK

Valentine Day is a favorite time to announce an engagement. I wonder how many of the girls who are so happy over their engagements and so busy planning trousseaus and filling hope chests are able to cook. It ways passes my understanding always passes my understanding how girls can go blithely ahead and plan to be married without being able to fill their end of the bargain. Some of them are apt to boast about it as if it were something of which to be proud. Others think it is a big joke. How would those same girls feel if their husbands-to-be boasted of the fact that they were not able to earn a living? Any woman who cannot cook starts married life under a severe handicap. People who have never cooked seem to think that it is nothing to learn; all you need is intelligence and a good cook-book. You need both but a little experience is a great help. You, who are to be brides soon, make it your business to be able to cook. Most girls can learn at home if they really want to. If there are cooking classes by all means take advantage of them because a Domestic Science teacher can teach you many things that mother does not know. If it is impossible to learn at home nor at school, appeal to one of your married friends for help. Most married women will be rather proud of being able to teach you and will willingly give you an opportunity to practice. And will you be popular with the boy-friend? To make a comfortable home is your end of the partnership, so play the game.

ADULTS ARE RUDE TO CHILDREN

What a pity grown-ups cannot be as courteous to children as they are to other grown-ups. Possibly they do not realize that they are rude but they are, just the same. To-day a youngster came in just bubbling over with excitement and started to tell about something. She had not finished the first sentence when a grown-up rudely interrupted with "Is that a hole in your sweater? You'd better take that off and mend it before it gets any larger. Why have you been wearing it this long?" All Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. It also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. Often more effective than "bulk" in fruits and vegetables, as it does not break down within the body.

Isn't this natural food pleasanter than patent medicines? Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved, see your doctor.

MEAT LOAF

Beef and pork. Pork and beef. No other kinds of meat are available in most smaller places in the winter time and the housekeeper gets to the stage when she almost hates the thought of them. If you cannot get more varieties you will have to exercise your ingenuity and serve them in different ways to vary the monotony. Meat Loaf is a savoury way of cooking meat and makes a pleasant change. Then, too, it is inexpensive and most of us like to lessen the cost of our food. Your meat loaf may be made of all beef or it may have a little pork mixed with the beef. It may be seasoned with just salt, pepper and a little onion or it may have a little sage, savoury or thyme added to it. A slice of bread, wet and then squeezed dry added to your meat loaf will help it stay together. Meat loaf may be moulded in a loaf tin and turned out or it may be moulded so that it will brown on all sides—to my way of thinking that is the nicest. By way of a change put slices of bacon across the top before baking or pour part of a can of tomatoes around and over it.

STUFFED MEAT LOAF

Divide your seasoned meat loaf mixture into two parts. Grease a baking pan and make a flat cake of one-half the mixture in the pan. Cover with your favourite poultry dressing, then mould the rest of the meat mixture over this. Bake as usual.

MEAT LOAF AU GRATIN

Bake a meat loaf and when done remove from the oven and cool partially. Mix 2 cups of bread crumbs with 1/2 cup grated cheese, 3 tablespoons melted fat, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 2 beaten eggs. Cover the loaf with this mixture and brown in a hot oven of 400 degrees.

SPICE CAKE

2 cups brown sugar
1/2 cup shortening
2 cups pastry flour
1 cup sour cream
1/4 teaspoon salt
3 eggs
1 teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons cloves
2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons all-spice

Cream the shortening and sugar. Add beaten egg-yolks and beat well. Sift the flour, soda, salt, and spices and add alternately with the cream. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg-whites. Pour into a greased cake pan and bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

Ice with JAM ICING

Press 1/4 cup of raspberry or strawberry jam through a fine sieve, add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and sufficient icing sugar to make it thick enough to spread.

SOOTHING WORDS

A rich but very eccentric man died. The clergyman, who was young and new to the parish, thought it a fitting opportunity to call and comfort the widow. "You must not grieve," he told her. "The body that lies here is not your husband. It is merely a husk, an empty shell—the nut has gone to heaven."

W. C. T. U. Executive Held Conference

(Contributed)

The Women's Christian Temperance Executive Conference was held on Feb. 6th. and 7th. in the Y.W.C.A. parlors on Dorchester Street. Mrs. F. Dougal led the opening devotionals, her subject being Walking with God and Christian Fellowship. This is what the W.C.T.U. are endeavoring to do—encourage and uplift fellow creatures and help them to walk with God.

Mrs. Harry Brown of St. Lambert led the second day devotionals, using as her text, "Fret not thyself because of evil doers", as an encouragement to keep on steadfastly and earnestly in the work, and in due season all will be, if not well, at least much better.

As "New Resolutions", Mrs. Henry Wilson of Athelstan, Prov. President, presented a set of rules which might be universally adopted: they are—"Three things to govern, temper, tongue and conduct; three things to cultivate, courage, affection, gentleness; three things to command, thrift, industry and promptness; three things to despise, cruelty, arrogance, ingratitude; three things to admire, dignity, gracefulness, and intellectual power; three things to wish for, health, friends, contentment; three things to give, alms to the needy, comfort to the sad and appreciation to the worthy"

Several resolutions were sent out from this conference, some being to Premier Taschereau on the question of the vote for the women of Quebec. According to Mrs. John Scott, who sponsored the resolution, Quebec women are made to feel that being refused the vote, they are considered lower in intelligence and ability than the women of other countries. Mrs. Scott stated that the W.C.T.U. were the first women's organization to sponsor votes for women and had kept the matter constantly before the minds of our premiers. Another petition was that, in view of the present hardships the hours for the sale of liquor be shortened and the amount sold to each buyer limited, that there was more need of good food and warm clothing in the homes of the poor than there was need of liquor.

Mrs. Blair of Ormstown, who is the Contest Examiner for the Temperance Studies, reported much better work this year sent in from the children. She also advised that parents study the lessons on Temperance at home as well as the children. Mrs. Blair was re-elected for another year.

A letter of appreciation was sent to the Quebec Chronicle for publication, so that Quebec and Beaufort residents might realize how the W.C.T.U. appreciated the Temperance Educational Campaign of The Black Cross. The Black Cross rests on the monument at Beaufort, and when a total abstinence dies this cross is carried before the coffin and all other abstainers kiss it. This is an old custom and the educational work amongst the younger members has just been carried on since October.

A former resident of Lachute was honored by being made a county life member of the W.C.T.U. Mrs. Mabon, wife of a former Academy principal, has been made, by the different organizations, World, Dominion, Provincial, and County, a life Member of the W.C.T.U. She is also Treasurer of the Dominion W.C.T.U. and the Little White Ribboners' Convenor for the World's W.C.T.U., as well as being County

President of Hochelaga and First Vice-President of the Provincial Organization.

The Union conferring the County Life Membership at this time was her own union, "Central", which held its annual meeting on the evening of the sixth, also a silver medal elocution contest. The prize winner was Miss Margaret Hamilton; the judges, Mrs. W. W. Menzies, a missionary home on furlough from India, and Major Trickey of the Salvation Army.

Mrs. C. E. Enright, mother of Dr. Enright and Judge Enright of Montreal, was given an ovation of thanks for the $5,029 she had collected towards a W.C.T.U. Building which, when the amount swells a bit more, will be erected in Montreal. Mrs. Enright begged to be relieved of the work in future, as her 82 years made it impossible to continue.

Mrs. John Scott again stressed the influence of the W.C.T.U. in bringing about unity of the denominations. She said times were so different now from what they were when the W.C.T.U. started, so much so that one could almost imagine they were living in a new world; long ago folks were inclined to look down on other denominations than their own, but now, we found that people of other denominations were just as good as we were ourselves, and some of them perhaps a little better.

Rev. J. Jones of Calvary United Church, Rev. Douglas Smith, of Montreal West United, Rev. R. G. Katsunoff of the Church of All Nations, and Rev. R. K. Naylor of the Diocesan College, were luncheon speakers, bringing messages of inspiration and encouragement. Rev. Smith's topic was "Do you believe in fairies?" His message suggested that unless we could believe in the unseen and had our hearts filled with child-like faith, it was almost impossible for us to enter into that great reality, the Kingdom of God.

Rev. Jones compared the spirit of the W.C.T.U. to St. Paul's reference—"Wherefore I faint not", and according to Moffat's translation "I never lose heart." With forces opposing the W.C.T.U. so strongly, but for faith it must have given up e'er this.

Rev. Katsunoff told of drinking customs in the land of his birth, and said that unfortunately the greatest obstacles to temperately some of those habits had come to this side. But the situation was hopeful, with great improvement in some cases. He also spoke of others who had learned the habit here and, like one Italian, classed themselves as good Canadians because they had learned to drink and smoke!

Rev. R. K. Naylor claimed that the biggest problem confronting us today was to train

AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM DESIGNED FOR THE HOME

So simple to use that it may be installed anywhere at a moment's notice, a new fire alarm for the home is screwed into any electric socket like an ordinary lamp bulb. Should the temperature of the room begin to rise at the rate of ten degrees a minute, a sensitive diaphragm closes an electric contact and an intermittent howler shrieks the alarm. If desired, an extension cord to a second howler in a bedroom or upper hall may be attached to the alarm to make sure it will be heard.

Mrs. H. Wilson, in thanking the speakers, stated that one of her work was the indifference of the parents on the subject.

The W.C.T.U. decided to continue to support the work of the Temperance Educational Campaign in Sunday and Day Schools, also to try for more new members.

TOWER FOR BATS

Germany's most celebrated flitter-mouse tower is at Bingen; but now historic Heidelberg is to have its bat tower, too. The tower is to be built in such a way as to attract hosts of bats—a kind of model dwelling for them.

The reason is that folk living in the wooded valley of the Neckar are plagued in summer by midges, gnats and mosquitoes. If only they can get crowds of bats to live in their tower, they hope these sworn enemies of mosquitoes will help to do away with the pests.

History of Mail Service in Canada

Origin and Growth of Service Since Canada Became a British Possession

Some time before Canada became a British possession, the New England States had possessed a rather crude mail service supplied by the sea captains of the lumber packets that plied between Falmouth, England, and New York in North America.

This service was conducted in the following manner. When any captain came to know about the time his packet would be loaded and ready to sail for America, he placed an open mail bag, with a placard over it, in the waiting room of the principal Coffee House in the town of Falmouth, England, stating that on such a date he would be leaving for New York, and he would take any mail matter that was placed in the mail bag for distribution when he arrived there, and in like manner there was an open mail bag hung in Richard Fairbanks' Tavern, New York, with the same sort of a placard announcing that all mail matter in the bag would be delivered on arrival at Falmouth.

By the year 1759 this system had developed into a regular monthly mail service from Falmouth to New York and return.

Canada had not long become a British possession when, in the interest of giving her a regular mail service, no less a personage than Benjamin Franklin made a trip through Canada, calling on the people in the principal towns on the St. Lawrence viz Quebec, Three Rivers and Montreal, and arranging to give them a regular mail service to connect at New York with the packets sailing for Falmouth. At the same time one, Foxcroft, calling on the folk of all the principal towns of the Atlantic coast, made a trip as far as Florida and established a mail service also, to hook up monthly with the packets leaving New York. Thus a regular mail service was established as far north as Quebec in Canada and as far south as Florida, connecting monthly with the packets to and from Falmouth, England, at New York, and Fairbanks' Tavern became a central examining Post Office, where mail bags from all directions were opened, the contents sorted and delivered to the respective mail courriers, for distribution en route for their destinations by sea and land.

And it is very evident that Fairbanks' Tavern, about this time, became a centre for the final closing of much other business of various nature, from far and wide, for it is often mentioned as such in the different records of those days.

OLD INDIAN CACHE FOUND AFTER 60 YEARS

Six sacks of pemmican, thought to have been buried as a food reserve by Indians at least 60 years ago, were plowed up near Irma, on the Canadian National Railways, during the past season by Eldon Fenton, it was learned recently. The incident recalls a similar discovery some months ago, near Crossfield, in the south of the province.

Each sack was made of buffalo hide and weighed about five pounds. They were cached in a hole in the prairie north of Gratton coulée, famed as a buffalo run in the days when the herds roamed the prairies and were hunted. Mr. Fenton had brushed about the hole. In breaking the virgin soil in a district first homesteaded 30 years ago, the plow turned up the sacks. Breaking one open with a pick-axe, he found the meat in the centre soft and apparently well preserved.

Chewing some of it, Mr. Fenton said he found it tasty, having been preserved with wild cherries which showed red and the stones of which he found therein.

As the buffalo were practically extinct in 1879, it is thought this cache must have been placed some years before that. The find was made 18 miles from the present national buffalo park.

What Became of German Fleet

Under the terms of the Armistice the entire German fleet surrendered to the British navy at Scapa Flow in November, 1918, and was there interned. On June 21, 1919, the German crews scuttled all the ships of the fleet with the exception of the cruiser "Baden." Three light cruisers and some smaller vessels were beached before they sank. That these ships were scuttled was not due to the laxity of the British navy, since the allies would not permit the ships to be turned over completely, but merely interned. The German sailors sank the ships to keep them from being incorporated in the allied navies. A number of the ships were raised in 1928 and sold as scrap iron.

Secret Orders in China

A curious story is told of the complications in China where so many belong to some secret society or other. An imperial general once chasing a notorious bandit noted part of his army falling back to form a line of reception and on inquiring learned that his army was preparing to receive with full honors the very bandit he was chasing. The bandit in question was head of a great secret society and the only way the imperial general could get ahead with the work of capturing the bandit was to hold a full council of the society right there, declare himself the head of the society, be accepted as such, and the business of the campaign was resumed.

Atmosphere at the Poles

Where the pressure is high the air flows spirally outward, and where it is low the directions of the air currents round about are more or less inward. As a rule, the surface air flows outward from the region of each pole, and of course a corresponding amount of the upper air inward. The conclusion is reached, therefore, that the surface pressure in the general region of each pole is high—at least higher than that of the air at the same level at some considerable distance round about. This conclusion is supported by the relatively few observations obtained near the poles.

HOLDING HER REP

The Jones family went for a day's outing to the wonderful cave of echoes. When they reached home, Mr. Jones noticed that his wife was not present.

"Do you know where your mother is?" he asked his daughter.

"Oh! I expect she's trying to have the last word," she replied.

William Penn Fostered

First German Settlement

It is said that when Port Royal, in South Carolina, was settled by a band of Huguenots under Jean Ribault in 1562, there were some Alsatian and Hessian Protestants among the company. This settlement was destroyed by the Spaniards in 1565.

There are also supposed to have been a few Germans, Swiss and Dutch in the Jamestown settlement, founded in 1607. From then on there are numerous references in colonial history to German immigrants and settlers. There were some in New Netherland, probably some in the Swedish settlements on the Delaware, and an occasional German in the Spanish and French colonies.

The first permanent German settlement in America was that fostered by William Penn at Germantown, founded in 1683. Francis Daniel Pastorius, a leader of the movement of German Protestants to America, took ship in advance of those he had induced to migrate, and landed at Philadelphia, August 29, 1683.

On October 6, 1683, the ship Concord, the Mayflower of the German immigrants to America, arrived in Philadelphia, and this date has customarily been observed by Germans in America as the beginning of their history in the United States.

PLAY-OFFS BETWEEN AYERS LIMITED AND INDEPENDENTS

We leave without ill-will or animosity from or towards our co-teams of the league, to whom we wish the best of luck and a successful conclusion in the play-offs.

I take this opportunity of expressing my deep appreciation to the league officials and particularly to yourself for the unfailing courtesy, patience and consideration which we have experienced in all our dealings since the inception of the league. For my own part and on behalf of my colleagues, if we have at any time incurred the disfavor of your officials, through any ill-suited word or action, I can assure you it was unintentional and I hasten to sincerely apologize.

Mr. M. V. Trayers, Sec.-Treas., Brownsburg Social Club Hockey Team.

Dear Mr. Trayers, I beg to acknowledge your favor of the 7th. instant, informing me that the Brownsburg Social Club had decided to withdraw from the League. It is indeed a very unfortunate decision from your part, and this departure is much regretted by all amateurs of hockey all over the County of Argenteuil.

I am very thankful for the kind words you express to myself, and wish to reciprocate them.

I knew that a great hockey rivalry existed between the 'Burg and Lachute, but I never thought until this winter, it was so keen. My sincere hope is that, once the super-combative

President, Sec'y. and Members of Lachute - Brownsburg Hockey League

Gentlemen: I beg leave to tender my resignation as a referee under your league. In doing so, I wish to express the hope that there will be more harmony among the various members of the league in the future. The league has my best wishes for a successful season.

However, I wish to give a report of the proceedings at the last game at which I officiated, last Tuesday night. Before going any further, I may say that no matter what action the league may take in the matter, I will never again officiate in any game in this league under any circumstances whatsoever, and particularly in any game in which Brownsburg is interested. The chief disputes of my rulings last Tuesday night were two outside goals, both of which were scored against Ayers Limited. In the first instance, player Seary was carrying the puck near center ice, but to the left side, flanked by McGibbon on the left and another Brownsburg player on the right, whom I could not name at the time but whom I now believe to have been St. Onge. On nearing the blue line (Ayers defending zone) McGibbon stopped to make the play on side as Seary had changed his direction, or pivoted. However, St. Onge on the right was carried over the blue line ahead of Seary by two Ayers players who were returning to their defending zone to cover up behind their defence players. This made the play offside and I blew my whistle immediately. The play continued for sometime after my whistle and it was only then that the puck went into the net. One of the Ayers players in question was Cyril Drew, the other I cannot name.

As to the second goal in question I will not go into detail, as my ruling was concurred in by referee Lépine at the time, and player McGibbon manfully acknowledged that he was across the blue line ahead of the play.

I am criticized for ruling off player Patrie in place of player Drew, whom I now believe should have received the penalty. But I would point out, that both players were involved in the play, that both players fell to the ice, and moreover it is the duty of the referee, not to stop play until any chance of a score on the play is passed.

I would further remark that in the balance of the game I paid particular attention to player St. Onge on right wing and on nearly every attack by Brownsburg he was offside at the blue line. I did not call them because, although they were offside, I knew that a similar dispute would arise.

I am told from a reliable source that Brownsburg were making objections to my officiating, among themselves before they took the ice. I would ask you if it would not have been sportsmanlike, to have come to me, myself and said so? In which case I would never have acted at all. My only purpose in accepting the duties of referee, under your league, was to have been of service to the league and sport in general, but in as much as I do not feel that I have the support or confidence of the Brownsburg players or officials, my resignation is the only course available.

I resent most keenly the aspersions upon my honesty and integrity, not by spectators or rabid hockey fans, for every referee must expect that and take it in good part, but by the players and more particularly by the officials and managers of the Club in question. I would welcome a protest for it would give me an opportunity to justify myself. Should the game not be protested I would suggest that the league or its officials hold a court over the matter and give the interested parties an opportunity of putting their positions before the league rather than having the same discussed in private and on the highway and by-ways.

Yours very truly,

G. F. Calder.

BROWNSBURG VOTING ON LOCATION OF POST OFFICE

Ballot to Decide a Long-Debated Issue

Great interest is evident in Brownsburg over the location of the new post-office which is shortly to be erected in that community. The electors have been served each with a printed plan and ballot showing the two locations from which the choice is to be made, and ballots are to be sent to the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, not later than the 25th. of this month.

Montreal Gazette on Rural and Industrial Hockey

Following our reference, last week, to plans for linking Lachute in a hockey league under the Q.A.H.A., it is interesting to note what the Gazette hockey writer has to say on the probabilities for rural hockey in Quebec next season:

Montreal—A rival organization to the Senior Group in the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association may be in operation next winter. Plans are under way to form a provincial senior league with the leading industrial centres throughout the province represented, with one club each from Montreal and Quebec rounding out the circuit. The Montreal senior entry would play its games at the Mount Royal Arena.

The success of St. Jerome and Three Rivers against Montreal clubs this year has motivated the scheme. If the league is formed these two centres are certain of berths. St. Jerome finished first this year in the Mount Royal Intermediate League. It is the consensus of opinion that these clubs will meet in the final for the provincial intermediate title with the winner clashing with the Senior Group champion for the right to represent Quebec province in the Allan Cup play-downs.

LACHUTE HOCKEYISTS CLASHED WITH ST. JEROME

FIRST OF LOCAL PLAY-OFFS LAST TUESDAY

The Ayers Limited line-up, with a few players from other town teams, qualified last week for their amateur cards, awarded by authorities of the Q.A.H.A. This was a preliminary necessary before week-end engagements between a Lachute team and St. Jerome of the Mount Royal League.

The outcome of these games was not highly inspiring from local standpoints, but the engagement here at Lachute on Saturday at least evidenced some fine stick-handling on both sides. In the first period St. Jerome took a 3-1 lead, but were held fairly in check. Second period advanced the score to 5-2, and the final session gave St. Jerome a long margin of 11-2, in a slick offensive game which muzzled the ice in the Lachute zone and gave the home forwards little chance.

At St. Jerome on Sunday, Lachute was equally out of the running, the score being reported as 11-0 for St. Jerome.

Final stages of local League hockey this season opened with the first of the 3-out-of-5 play-offs last Tuesday. Brownsburg having dropped out voluntarily from second place, Independ-

TREE FELL ON TRANSMISSION LINE

(Our Grenville Correspondent)

Grenville — A singular mishap occurred here on Monday. A tree that was being felled hit the electric power line and snapped it. There was a blinding flash, and a ball of fire appeared to travel down the wire. Several people in the locality reported flashes of green flame when they pulled the switches in their homes. Two radios are reported to have been burnt out. Fortunately the accident occurred in the day-time, and before nightfall the linemen had everything in running order once again.

Other centres being considered for franchises are Granby, Drummondville, Joliette, also Shawinigan Falls and Lachute. All those towns have a covered rink. If an arena is built in Valleyfield, it will be considered for membership. Nearly all of them also have commercial hockey and it is the intention of the sponsors to form an all-star team from local leagues as an entry in the senior provincial circuit.

Quebec City is anxious to get back into major company after being confined to commercial and intermediate competition. The intermediates have been playing to small crowds and the gates haven't been sufficient to pay for the sharpening of skates. It is believed that a return to senior hockey would mean a revival of interest in the Ancient Capital.

Sponsors of the movement include backers of teams in each of the cities and towns mentioned, with a prominent hockey official as organizer. Missionary work has been carried on all winter and final arrangements will be concluded in the off season. The new league, when formed, will immediately apply for a franchise in the Q.A.H.A.

ents are meeting Ayers Limited for the championship, and Tuesday's result was much as the public expected.

In the opening period, however, spectators came to their toes as it appeared the laurels might go to Independents in an unexpected turn of events. Lloyd Cruise's veterans held their sturdy Mills opponents, taking the period with 3-0. Ayers, however, stepped lively in the second and final sessions, closing the score in their favor at 6-3.

BARON BYNG RECOVERING FROM ILLNESS

Viscount Byng, hero of Vimy Ridge and former Governor-General of Canada, is reported to be out of danger, following a critical illness at his hotel in Pasadena, California.

The 72-year-old soldier suffered a heart attack and his physicians feared for his life. He rallied, however, and is now able to sit up in a wheel-chair.

Viscount Byng went to California for his health a month ago. His term as Governor-General of Canada was from 1921 to 1926, during which time it will be recalled he visited Lachute, to officiate at the unveiling of the War Memorial. He was appointed head of Scotland Yard in 1928 and served until 1931.

IMPRESSIVE C.G.I.T. SERVICE, UNITED CHURCH

Evening service at Lachute United last Sunday, conducted entirely by the two C. G. I. T. groups of the Church, was an impressive occasion. The form of service was one nationally adopted in keeping with the C.G.I.T. Week program.

Members of both senior and junior groups filed into the church singing the C. G. I. T. hymn, "Now we unite to pledge a new allegiance." Occupying the pulpit Miss E. McQuat led the service. Prayers and scriptures were read by assisting members, responses being voiced by the entire gathering of girls, who occupied the choir seats.

The theme of the service was "The Beauty of the Lord our God", upon which the devotional exercises were centred; and the entire ceremony, both in its spirit and presentation, exemplified the worship of God as a rite of gladness and of beauty. It was a quiet inspiration to behold these girls, uniformed in white middies, ardent in a duty to be performed and happy in its execution; reverence was not a cloak to be assumed for this occasion, it was so obviously an element in every activity of the C. G. I. T. movement.

In keeping with the theme of this ceremony was Miss Grace Wales' address — a refreshing discourse on the Beauty of Religion. Wrapt attention among the congregation bore witness to the speaker's eloquence and to the expressive manner in which she dealt with her subject.

The service concluded with a candle-light processional, the

WORKER FELL INTO STEAMING TANK

On Monday last a most painful accident occurred to Lucien Charron of Lachute Mills, who, while engaged at the Dominion Shuttle Company in rolling logs into the pond where they are steamed in readiness for the veneering plant, missed his footing and fell headlong into the hot water.

The mishap occurred around 8.30 in the morning and his two fellow workmen, Victor Larocque and Omer Church, soon hauled him out of the water but not before he was badly scalded. Dr. J. H. Mason was immediately summoned and ordered the young man's removal to Notre Dame Hospital, where he is putting up a brave fight for his life. Charron is but 23 years of age, of heavy build, weighing 190 lbs., and a sober, industrious workman who had been engaged with Dominion Shuttle Company for the past year.

—Late reports indicate that the young man is considerably improved and suffering no pain.

girls singing "Day is Dying in the West" as they filed out of the church. The pipe organ was ably handled, by Miss Edna Aitken. To other members who took responsible part, and to leaders of the two groups, who had trained their girls in the detailed procedure of this service, every credit is due. Leaders of the senior body are Misses Florence Armstrong and Eleanor McCoy, of the junior group Misses Cora Miller and Edith Morrison.

Month's Activities of Argenteuil Women's Institutes

Chatham Branch had twenty-three members and four visitors to enjoy a talk on Home Economics, given by Rev. H. Cousens of Lachute, also to witness a demonstration on cake icing by Mrs. McCulloch.

Frontier Branch had a small but enjoyable meeting with mixed topics, each member furnishing an item of interest. A paper on Legislation was read and Home Economics stressed by the donation of money, to be spent for a needy family. Education and Better Schools also was brought to the forefront by the donation of a prize to a pupil for heading the class in school.

Jerusalem - Bethany had a very interesting address on Municipal Law by Mayor J. E. Walker. Their roll call was the name of a Cabinet Minister. Members signed Incorporation Papers at this meeting, also held a contest on making some useful article out of a yard of unbleached cotton. Canadian Industries was featured by Miss Hilda Hume reading a paper on the Silk Industry of Canada.

Lachute Branch had an attendance of 23 members. Their roll call was, "What domestic duty I would like a man to do." Education and Better Schools was ably brought forward, especially Education Week, by the convenor, Mrs. J. H. Mason. A donation of $25.00 was given to the School Library, also a baby blanket sent to the correspondent of the Home-makers.

HUSBANDS will be interested to know the sentiments expressed recently at a meeting of the Lachute Women's Institute. At this gathering, members responded to the roll call with "Domestic duties I should like a man to perform" — among which were suggested the serving of breakfast on Sunday, darning his own socks, sewing buttons, interior repairs, putting out the milk bottles, appearing on time for meals, and eating the foods prepared for him without plea or plaint. . . . Certain male readers will probably identify these responses!

Club in Wingo, Kentucky, as a gift from this Branch.

Lakefield's meeting took the form of a Valentine and Card Party.

Morin Heights, in featuring Canadianization and National Events, heard a biographical sketch of Lord Bessborough. The branch gave financial assistance to the Committee of the Dramatic Club toward platform curtains, in the interests of Education and Better Schools. An address was heard on the Franchise for Quebec Women and the Naturalization Act. A Home Economics contest was held, in the making of useful articles from one yard of unbleached cotton, the articles made being put in a basket and the members choosing parcels, other than their own, which when opened disclosed a charming array of laundry and table-napkin bags, as well as dusters, aprons, and pillow-cases.

Pioneer's meeting took the form of an enjoyable and well-attended social.

Upper Lachute - East End held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. J. S. Giles, on the subject of Child Welfare and Public Health. Mrs. Gordon Miller in her talk explained "Why Babies Cry", and Mrs. L. Barron spoke on Tuberculosis. The twelve members present answered the roll call by naming children's diseases and their treatment.

Boy Scouts bearing traffic slogans were used at busy crossings by Manchester, England, police to "teach pedestrians road crossing sense."

HAWKESBURY NAMED AFTER BRITISH M.P.

(Comment, Contributed)

I do not write for the sake of differing. The writer in last issue of the The Watchman has as good a right to his opinion as I; and I agree with him that Hawkesbury was founded between 1790 and 1800 and the first white man to settle there was my great grandfather, Nathaniel Hazard Treadwell. There he built the first saw mill that was built in Hawkesbury, and not many years after building it sold to the firm of Mears and Pattee; and he moved further on up river and built a saw and grist mill at L'Original. It is now a long established fact that he was the first white settler above the Longue Sault rapids on the Ottawa River in that locality. For a good while this was a disputed point, as one of the Van Kleeks claimed priority to him, but in the end the difference was settled.

DIFFICULTIES CONFRONT WESTERN FARMER

Watchman Subscriber Notes Little Improvement in Conditions

A Western subscriber to this paper, in writing of conditions in the prairie provinces, throws a somewhat cheerless light on the lot of the farmers. Such impressions, from personal experience in the West, may be considered more authentic than official reports, and we publish an extract from our subscriber's letter received this week:

"Our western country, especially the southern part of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, has got into a pitiful condition of poverty on account of cheap wheat and all other farm products. Conditions have continued to get worse because of drouth and the persistent destruction by grass-hoppers.

"A few years ago I had to mortgage my farm property in order to carry on, and now I am compelled to go further into debt in buying feed to keep my animals living on the farm.

"Premier R. B. Bennett at Ottawa should have pegged the price of wheat in January 1930 too, 70 cts per bushel at Fort William. Wheat is a natural resource, therefore it is the national wealth of the Dominion; and for any government to expect a farmer to pay such a

THE WHEAT MARKET FROM ANOTHER ANGLE

Another side of the western wheat situation and the misfortune of our farmers—which is subject of a letter published in a column adjacent to this article—is revealed in an editorial leader of the Montreal Herald . . . Price pegging, which our reader claims should have been instituted in 1930, is here seen as the root of Canada's failure in the world wheat market.

The Herald article, viewed in comparison with our subscriber's letter, proves of timely interest:

We Keep the Wheat—Others Do the Business

Canada has devised and perfected the most efficient machinery in the world for not selling wheat.

That is Canada's contribution to the world stagnation of trade, and it surely is a sizeable one.

And a ruinous one for Canada.

Argentina and Australia are in the wheat business and doing a thriving trade at world prices. Canada is voluntarily withdrawing from the wheat business because she puts a price on her wheat which the world will not pay.

Over four years ago John I. McFarland was given the job by the Dominion Government of selling Canada's wheat, of which an immense carryover had been piled up by the Wheat Pools' "Pay - our - price - or - starve" mania.

Behind Mr. McFarland was the backing of the Dominion Treasury, and he has been a free agent in his operations.

Nationality Not Being Intelligently Shaped, says Professor

Deplores Religious and Racial Discrimination

The following is the text of a radio address, by Professor W. F. Osborne, head of the French Department at the University of Manitoba. The lecture evidenced such a deep and sympathetic understanding of phases in the life of our Dominion, that the Northwest Review of Winnipeg reported it in its entirety. From this newspaper the Watchman also takes liberty to reproduce Professor Osborne's discourse:

Lack of Constructiveness

It is to be regretted that a larger share of Constructive Imagination has not been at work in the shaping of our Canadian Nationality. We have in the main taken it for granted that the business of bringing under physical control a half continent absolved us from the need of entertaining those large, germinal ideas that are fitted to inspire and direct national growth.

The solution and possession of a national psychology is seen to be a matter of more import today than at any earlier moment in the world's history. Science and Trade have brought the nations into close contact; and the temper and the temperament of each are potent factors in deciding what the results of such contact shall be. For the moment, the world seems to be at an impasse. Of this impasse the chief causes are Animosity and Prejudice. Nothing has contributed more to international bad feeling than the unfair treatment of minorities. But yesterday the world breathed uneasily because War might follow the assassination of King Alexander of Yugo-Slavia, an assassination that had its roots in the harsh treatment of Croats in the new Kingdom of the South Slavs.

But, someone may ask, does Canada within her own borders know anything of the asperities that are so sad a feature of the European scene? I cite in answer the bitter opposition that has been shown particularly in Saskatchewan to French

Boy Scouts' Campaign

League of Nations. "They say I've got no army; but why should I want one with these allies?"

(By courtesy of Puck.)

His Excellency, the Governor-General of Canada, challenged Canadian Boy Scout leaders to celebrate the coming visit to Canada this spring of the World Chief Scout, Lord Baden-Powell, by initiating a drive to increase the ranks of Canadian Scouts from 65,000 to 100,000, thus extending the benefits of Scouting to hundreds of Canadian communities now without an organized programme of any kind for their boys. The Scout movement as a whole accepted the challenge, but expansion demands more trained leaders and more field work. To ensure the success of the enterprise and finance the Scout movement in Canada for the next five years, a Campaign to raise $500,000 was inaugurated with a nation-wide appeal on February 18th by E. W. Beatty, K.C., LL.D., Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who is also President of the Boy Scouts Association in Canada.

This Campaign has the hearty support of every thinking Canadian citizen.

E. W. Beatty, K.C., Behind Boy Scouts' Appeal

Montreal — E. W. Beatty, President of the Boy Scouts Association, appealed to the citizens of Canada for support in the financial campaign being conducted on behalf of the Boy Scouts Feb. 22 to March 4, to ensure their growth to 100,000 members, as requested by His Excellency, the Governor-General.

The objective of $500,000 aims to finance the movement for the next five years and guarantee its expansion to hundreds of communities throughout the Dominion which now have no organized programme for their boys.

Mr. Beatty said: "In appealing to my hearers for support for the Boy Scouts Movement at a time when an unending series of worthy social activities is calling for financial assistance, I must unquestionably give my special reasons.

At one time the Boy Scout Movement was alleged to be a disguised form of military training. A generation of experience has taught us that it is a method of training soldiers—but soldiers of peace, not of War.

It is based on the sound assumption that boys will be boys—that the primal instinct of young humans is to group together in gangs for mutual support in noisy, healthy and active play. It takes into consideration the essential democracy of the young—their refusal to believe that social distinctions are important. It accepts the fact that boys place little value on race or creed, and only accept extreme nationalism with its crop of hatred because their elders tell them to.

In a word, the Boy Scout Movement starts with faith that boys are merely men not yet made suspicious, overcautious or narrow-minded by their experience of a world which is only too artificial.

On that basis it has built a system by which boys are given the maximum of freedom to play, to set free their abounding energy and to develop healthy contact with other boys. To this is added the minimum of formal discipline—only enough to prove the worth of organized effort without stifling initiative.

The movement covers the world, and brings the youth of nations into a great union directed by the single ideal of play made worthy because it has a purpose.

I can offer no more powerful argument for your active support of this movement than my honest faith that a country whose leaders in public and private affairs are trained in youth to hold the ideals of the Boy Scouts will be a country in which service will be placed before profit, and the community ahead of the individual.

Honesty, courage, resourcefulness, clean living and kindness—these are the lessons which the Scout learns. Can any of you suggest what more we can do to help our nation and the world than to teach these?

The Boy Scout Movement, founded by Lord Baden-Powell nearly 30 years ago, has had a powerful influence in serving the Empire, while teaching its young members that there is a need for loyalty to humanity at large, which loyalty to the Empire can only strengthen. It is an amazing fact that the Scout Movement the world over now numbers some two and a quarter million members.

The movement comes very close to being self-supporting, chiefly owing to the fact that those responsible for its organization, and for the discipline of its members, give their services generously. The coming campaign, which will start on the 22nd of this month, already has had the endorsement of a very eminent personage, who has had long experience in this field. His Excellency the Governor-General has reminded you that this is probably his last year of service in Canada, and I am certain he looks forward to being able to report to His Majesty that a movement which has had every mark of interest and of favour from His Majesty and members of his Family, has excited keen interest and received general support from the citizens of this Dominion.

Canvassers will commence a direct appeal to citizens in a few days, and I have no doubt or scruples in appealing to men and women of goodwill for their fullest support of the Boy Scout Movement.

WHO'S AFRAID OF THE WEATHER!

A big East Wind and a little West Wind
Met in a field together;
Said the Little West Wind to the big East Wind
"Come on! Let's make some weather."

"Let's blow and blow, and move this snow Away to some other place."
"Agreed!" said the great, big, bold, East Wind
"Then you and I'll have a race."

So they puffed out their cheeks so bold and fierce
And blew such a mighty blast
That the Sun hid his face in a heavy cloud
And the snow fell thick and fast

But five little chaps just pulled down their caps
To make their ears quite cosy,
They played and played right thro' the storm—
And came in warm and rosy.

KRINKLY KRUM

Marjorie became so excited at seeing Iceberg escape, that she forgot her desire to laugh and hopped up and down on one foot instead, frightening Krinkly Krum still more. "Hot water! cold water!" he kept shouting, himself hopping up and down without knowing it. The little Tiny Bear started doing an impromptu bear dance at the back of the room, until the Middle-Sized Bear cuffed him with her paw and said quite severely, "Stop, you silly thing, you know you are not supposed to dance until the princess asks you to. Your dancing was to have been kept as a surprise until the last moment. Now you have gone and spoiled everything." The Middle-Sized Bear gave him another cuff with her paw as she finished speaking, which sent him sprawling with a funny "Woof! Woof!" under the back bench. Seizing it, he turned it over suddenly, upsetting the little folk in all directions. "Tiny!" screamed the Middle-Sized Bear, "leave the room at once! Go and help your father to catch Iceberg and bring him back. If you do that I am sure the princess will forgive your naughtiness—Will you not, dear Princess?" "I will, indeed!" said the princess, her voice breaking with laughter. Princess Snowball liked a bit of fun herself, even if it did upset her court at times. She always said that there was no harm in good clean fun in the right place so Tiny, being a special favorite of hers, was excused, particularly as he explained that he had thought the last minute had come when he saw both Golden Locks and Krinkly Krum dancing about the platform; so he had started dancing himself.

With Mr. Grizzly and Tiny off hunting Iceberg, the court questioning was proceeded with. "Let me see," said the princess "where were we when the fuss started?" "We had just heard Iceberg telling that old Dobbin had repaid our kindness by eating some of the snowfolk!" replied the Little Snow Fairy—the one that had told Marjorie she need have no fear of Iceberg as they waited by the Mirror of Examination.

"Please, Your Majesty!" the little fairy continued, "I can explain how old Dobbin happened to do what he did.—Your Majesty, it is like this; poor old Dobbin is half-blind, and on being brought out of the stable into the bright sun-light, being hungry too (for the lazy boy who looks after him had not given him enough breakfast) he started nibbling at some straw which was lying in the yard and did not notice the little snow-folks who were resting on top of it, until it was too late and they were melting in his mouth. I know that this is the truth, for I was there and just escaped by rolling quickly off the straw and hiding under the arch of Bob's boot as he was hitching old Dobbin."

"Thank you for telling us, dear child, and while I am very sorry to lose any of our people before it is time for us to disappear, I feel sure that perhaps they helped old Dobbin in another way. No doubt that lazy boy you speak of had not given him water either, and you know that good clean water is so necessary to animals, and people too. I am sure you agree with me, my dear Golden Locks?" she added, turning to look at Golden Locks, who was watching the doorway. She had been listening to the little snow fairy's story and had decided that she must see to it that old Dobbin was properly fed and watered when she got back home. But just now she had only time to smile at the princess and nod her head vigorously. That was not a polite thing to do, she knew, but who could be polite when they were too excited to speak — for Mr. Grizzly was coming, stamping down the aisle of the room, hauling Iceberg along with him, while Tiny pranced behind him nipping playfully at Iceberg's heels.

"Here he is!" said Mr. Grizzly, in his proudest, most rumbling voice. "I guess he knows now whether there is any reason to fear me or not." With the paw that was not grasping Iceberg, Mr. Grizzly thumped upon his chest and made such a low bow to the princess that his head bumped against the platform.

All the Little People, except Krinkly Krum and the princess' servants, giggled but they stopped immediately when Mr. Grizzly looked around to see who was laughing. "One sweep of my paw", he continued in his grandest manner, "and he was done for! I could have broken him in pieces, but I left him to you for punishment, Your Majesty."

A JUVENILE COURT JUDGE ON SCOUTING

In meeting the problem of the underprivileged boy, which is particularly pressing under present-day conditions, the Boy Scout movement is of great assistance, in the opinion of Judge J. F. McKinley, of the Ottawa Juvenile Court, and one of the Dominion's recognized authorities on juvenile and domestic court problems.

"I have no hesitation in saying that Scouting is a wonderful force for good, especially among underprivileged boys," declared Judge McKinley.

"Many boys go wrong simply because they have no proper channels to give outlet to their physical and mental energies. As a result they make associations and form habits which ultimately lead to serious wrongdoing."

"In Scouting such boys are afforded a splendid outlet for their energies. They are thrown into intimate contact with qualified leaders, and altogether their associations are of the finest."

TRAINS OF LILLIPUT OPERATED IN ENGLAND

The smallest commercial railroad in the world, with locomotives which are no higher than the average man's chest and which operate over a track of 15-inch gauge, is the Romney, Hythe and Dymchurch Railway operating on the south coast of England, states J. Cecil Nelson, in an article published in the February issue of Canadian National Railways Magazine, now being distributed. The R.H. and D. Railway operates at a profit, with lilliputian engines and rolling stock and the small locomotives can haul a full train of 300 passengers up a 1 in 100 gradient at 25 miles per hour.

WHISKERS

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

Where are the winter whiskers of yesteryear? Like the snows of that lamented period, they have vanished. They no longer have a purpose to serve and practical mankind has discarded them.

Whiskers were formerly much worn for their decorative effect—to conceal weak mouths and chins, to lengthen a short countenance or widen a long one, to give a dignified appearance or, as scanners of old albums say, merely to make the wearer look funny.

But they were also worn, by many who were above the vanity of caring about what the mirror told them, to keep the face warm. About December 1 an outdoor man would lay aside his razor and soon he had a fine thick coat of fur between his skin and the weather. Out all day in the wintry storms, he might come home festooned with icicles, but the chin and cheeks inside were unfrosted, to emerge pink and white in the spring.

We now require no whiskers for face protectors. Our faces are, for the most part, indoor faces.

It's a Dog's Life

SHORT STORY

by—

A. C. LIVINGSTONE

Late afternoon revealed Rosie O'Laherty's broad forehead wrinkled; the fiftful expression sat strangely upon her; ordinarily Rosie's face and eyes reflected a wealth of merriment springing from a warm young Irish heart. To herself, since no other person was with her in Mrs. Delgarth's shining kitchen, she declared audibly; gesturing with protest:

"Mark ye this, no good will come of it at all, at all, so it won't."

Rosie's brow furrowed deeper and she shook her head slowly, solemnly. "Mushrooms," she declared, naturally substituting an 'n' for an 'm', in naming the delicacy, and passing quickly before her pretty nose a saucer upon which were heaped hot, freshly cooked rooms and maybe poison. And 'try them on the dog, Rosie, in case they're toadstools,' says she."

Rosie tossed her head, having come to a point of action. "And so I will, just that," she declared. "Here, Barney, me fine fellow." She whistled, attracting Barney from the back yard.

She placed the saucer of mushrooms on the step outside the kitchen door and watched the collie. She was obsessed with a minor sense of dread. But not so Barney. He approached the saucer slowly and sniffed. He sampled a morsel. Seemingly pleased with the dish he devoured the mushrooms with dog-like zest.

The mushrooms eaten, Rosie, more concerned in consequence than before, studied the dog's actions closely. For the time being at any rate there appeared in the dog's conduct no evidence of pending disaster. On the contrary, Barney's behaviour suggested only gratitude for the meal.

"It's a fine dog ye are, Barney," Rosie declared, impulsively stroking his head. "And it's to me dyin' day would I regret that ye should ever come to harm by my hand. How d'ye feel?" she questioned.

Barney's answer was expressed reassuringly in a sharp bark and a further tossing of head.

"I'm hopin' ye'll be none the worse for thim mushrooms," Rosie encouraged. "Get out now to the yard, and if ye feel aillin' at all, just bark for Rosie like the good boy that ye are," and she shoved the collie away and closed the kitchen door.

During a period of half an hour, at intervals, while preparations for dinner were in progress, Rosie glanced out of the window upon the back yard to convince herself that all continued well with Barney. She was at the window for such a brief moment when Mrs. Delgarth came into the kitchen.

"Did you try the mushrooms on Barney, Rosie?" she asked, laughing.

"I did, ma'm," Rosie answered, leaving the window to busy herself with a salad. "The Saints be praised, that fine animal, Barney, seems to be nothing more than glad that he ate thim mushrooms," she added. "He's a grand dog, is Barney, ma'm, and I wouldn't want to cause him any harm."

Mrs. Delgarth, noting the depth of feeling expressed by the Irish girl for the collie, said, "Even if the mushrooms are not fit for humans, Rosie, the small bit that you would give to Barney could do him no great harm."

A new look of fear crept into Rosie's eyes as she recalled the generous portion her Irish nature had apportioned to the dog. "I—I hope he'll be all right ma'm, but if the mushrooms were bad do ye think a big saucer of thim would—would..."

"How much did you give him, Rosie?" Mrs. Delgarth interrupted.

"A saucer full." Rosie's fingers trembled on her lower lip as she made the answer. Anxiously her eyes followed Mrs. Delgarth's movement to the window.

"I wouldn't worry, Rosie," the lady of the house finally counselled. "Barney seems to be in the best of spirits. Now just forget about him and finish the salad. If you want me for anything," she added, "I'll be upstairs," and Mrs. Delgarth smiling reassurance at Rosie, quitted the kitchen.

The occasion for Rosie's unusual activity in the kitchen at this time was Mr. Delgarth's birthday. For several years past the event, had been celebrated modestly by a dinner to which friends of the Delgarth's were invited. In the present instance Mrs. Delgarth had decided that mushrooms would be included for the menu. But she had not arrived at this decision readily, for she was a little bit dubious about mushrooms. She had read and heard such stories of the ill effects wrought by toadstools, mistakenly consumed. But having decided that mushrooms would add to the dinner splendidly, it had occurred to her that possible evil effects to her guests could be obviated by preparing a small portion of the food in advance and trying it on Barney. And this, excepting the fact that a large helping was served by the generous natured Irish cook, had been done.

The party was proving a very happy one. All had gone well, and dinner was about concluded, and Rosie, having served the coffee, was in the kitchen again, gathering a few scattered utensils and thinking pleasantly of a red-headed boy in far away Ireland, when a sharp rap sounded on the kitchen door. Startled from her reverie, Rosie answered the summons quickly. An excited little girl stood outside, breathing heavily.

"Please, Miss, there's something wrong with your Barney," she stammered. He's lying on a lawn down the street, and a man is with him, trying to help him."

Rosie shrieked. When Mrs. Delgarth came into the kitchen to learn the cause of the girl's cry, Rosie was so upset that she could not do little more than moan, and twist her hands frantically and say, over and over, "Poor Barney; Poor Barney."

Mrs. Delgarth, realizing that something out of the ordinary had occurred, and being unable to learn from Rosie what was amiss, shook the girl. "What is it? What about Barney?" she demanded.

Rosie gulped. Her face was ashen. "He's dyin'." It's thim mushrooms, sure. And to think that my hand fed thim to the darlint," she sobbed.

In telling the story to her friends afterwards, Rosie, with a twinkle in her eye and a nice sense of the proper, always contrived, in the narrative, to confine herself to the kitchen, during the confusion following news of Barney's ill fortune, with the door separating that and the dining room continuously closed so that she was not in a position to see just what first aid treatments were favored by Mrs. Delgarth's guests before the arrival of professional help. It was reasonable, however, for one, listening to her recital of the occurrences of that unhappy night, to assume that Rosie could hear Mrs. Delgarth's frantic voice at the telephone, and that the family physician, Dr. Bolton, was out on a case, and not expected back for half an hour. In view of the apparent urgency of the situation, this information was alarming. Other items in the programmes offered by the Canadian Radio Commission, and the ungracious response made a year or so ago to the appeal of Winnipeg Catholics to be eased of the burden they have borne for forty years in the matter of their Schools, as a result of devotion to their religious convictions. These, along with the incipient prejudice against the Jews, are current Canadian examples of an intolerant attitude that is, in character if not in degree, exactly of a piece with the animosities that are devastating Europe.

Co-operation Needed

The average English Canadian is inclined to regard our French population as a burden that has to be carried. Does this attitude not influence powerfully our national psychology? Had we had an effective imaginative view of our country's future we should have seen that cordial co-operation of the two great racial elements constituted a distinct advantage. The English and French racés are admirably fitted to supplement each other. It is combination and synthesis that produce strength, richness, and variety. The French-Canadians remain strikingly French. We thus had had the chance, to make the ultimate Canadian type a real synthesis. Our grand opportunity has lain in the chance of blending, without effacing either, English and French. A more vivid contrast than the French and English, can hardly be imagined. The English are at bottom Teutons; the French are Latins. Teuton and Latin are polarly different. The Teuton is taciturn, the Latin talkative; the Teuton is repressed, the Latin, effusive; the Teuton is practical, the Latin, artistic; the Teuton makes approximations, the Latin clamors for exactness. The two languages confirm this picture. By and large, English — not as practiced by its great masters, but by the masses — is shambling; French is neat; English is suggestive; French is explicit. English is elliptic and inaccurate; French is highly articulated and logical. English is a Romantic, French a Classical idiom. These are surface indications of deep differences.

Unique Chance

What I am submitting is that no people could have a more challenging chance that we have had to place before itself a great goal of intellectual, cultural and moral development. We have one Province where the French language and the Catholic religion are assured in their functioning by terms conceded after the Conquest. Another, where equality in respect of Schools is provided by the Act of Confederation. Suppose we had recognized, first, the quickening quality working itself out almost inevitably even in the material domain — that would have resulted from a demonstration of eager partnership, and secondly the greater variety and richness that would attach to our nationality if—as an outcome of amity, of equal rights cordially extended — it should comprise the joint capacities of the two foremost strains of the modern world. Remember that the French-Canadian is essentially French. I never hear a French-Canadian proffer a vote of thanks, or propose a toast; I never watch a French-Canadian group producing or listening to a program of music, producing or observing a play; I never hear a French-Canadian of any standing developing a subject in a speech, that I do not realize how poles apart from us of English stock, and how rootedly French, the French-Canadian has remained. This great intellectual, cultural, artistic resource has lain at our hand ready to be worked into our composite nationality, and we have largely stripped ourselves of this advantage by unintelligently fighting French and Catholics at every point where their rights were not so unassailably established to be moved beyond debate. The attitude of the English-speaking people with respect to the French Question has been grudging and unintelligent, and the repercussion on Quebec and on our national development has been unfortunate.

French Genius

What has the French genius to contribute to our Canadian nationality?

To begin with, the French genius is the most brilliant racial genius of the modern world. This may not be easy to prove, but it is easy to feel. Think of the vistas of Paris, think of the People in the West End who have been depending on the waterworks for their supply, find the old adage true, blessings are not appreciated until they take their flight. For ten days now the want of water has caused great trouble.

At Lakefield, in the mill of Jno. Newton, on the 16th. inst., the saw which was in motion came in contact with the shifting gear of the carriage, by which P. guests, similarly excited, with voices highly pitched, took turns at the telephone, when the hostess failed. Within ten minutes four doctors had answered the several S.O.S.'s.

But Rosie's distress centred upon the unhappy dinner guests for only a moment. Her thoughts went out to Barney, alone on a lawn down the street. With the door bell ringing sharply, announcing the arrival of one or another of the several doctors summoned, Rosie, with a prayer on her lips, ran out the back door. Reaching the street she peered ahead, fearful, searching for the place elegance of French oratory, think of the perfection of French prose, think of the unequalled diction of the French stage. I remember hearing Athanase David, Provincial Secretary of Quebec, speaking in Paris. He had been preceded by a heavy-footed orator of, we shall not say what extraction, who had all but put his audience to sleep. Before David had been speaking three minutes, the whole house was emotionally on tip-toe. What did it? Gallic brilliancy, unclouded by three centuries of residence in Canada. I remember listening, Canada. I remember listening at Montreal in 1926, to three front rank Englishmen and three Frenchmen of the same class: Gilson, Brunhes and Senator. The Englishmen read, and read indifferently; the Frenchmen spoke extempore. The Eng-

NO LIMITS TO THE SHOW BUSINESS

The Hauptmann trial, for kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh child, set the whole world agog until a verdict was rendered last week in the little New Jersey town of Flemington. Bruno Hauptmann was sentenced to death.

Now comes news that the jury are to make capital of the part they played in condemnation of this heinous crime. It is reported they are contracting to appear in vaudeville. If such is the case, the law should step in and put a stop to this degrading travesty. The procedures of justice should not be exploited in this way, nor should smart showmen be permitted to capitalize on morbid curiosity.

MORE PRECIOUS THAN RICHES

The Dionne quintuplets are still a good drawing card. Associated Press despatches tell how their parents missed attending church on Sunday because, under management of an amusement promoter, they had been "going too strong" the previous day.

But Dr. Dafoe, typifying the country practitioner—a unique type—has refused to be swept off his feet by fame, publicity, and the blazoning attractions of big cities. He is not forgetful that the true fundamentals of life are to be found just as readily in the little town of Callander, Ontario. He is quoted as saying recently:

"The people whom I know best, the families of the far-flung Canadian countryside among whom I have practiced for more than a quarter of a century, in many respects lead poverty-stricken lives. But they are rich in faith, devout believers and attendants at their church, and their children are the better for it."

VEGETARIANS THIN-SKINNED

Paraphrasing a line from the Bard of Stratford, it may be remarked that—the quality of tolerance is not overworked. It is very evident today that, with so many isms and eties and addictions to the pseudo-sciences, one cannot express the merest opinion without danger of treading on sensitive toes.

The instance comes to our attention, of a rhyme included in a Children's Hour program by the British Broadcasting Corporation. The simple ditty follows:

Mary had a little lamb,
The butcher killed it dead;
So Mary takes the lamb to school,
Between some bits of bread.

—and harmless though they may sound, these lines were taken exception to by the London Vegetarian Society, who found them "offensive."

We have every sympathy with vegetarianism, or with any other theory backed by sincerity of purpose. But with the world chock-full of fads and faiths in this century, not every movement can hope to dictate the policies of broadcasting and similar forms of publicity.

Last week Mr. McFarland defended his policy in a lengthy speech which is now being widely interpreted as a confession of failure.

Last fall he predicted that our huge surplus would all be disposed of during the current season.

Now he admits that the wheat is still in storage and offers the hope that it may be reduced to 100,000,000 bushels.

The present sluggish move-in Europe.

ment of wheat offers no basis for such a hope.

All the arguments in the world about the wisdom of pegging the price and holding out for that price will not stand against the plain reality, which is that under such a policy we keep the wheat and other nations do the business.

Before a crowd of 10,000 at Basle, Switzerland—a local record for a hockey game—Winnipeg Monarchs defeated a Swiss national team by 4-0, continuing their unbeaten record.

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, February 19.—The way things are shaping up just now, the general election will come sooner than most people think. The trend of opinion on Parliament Hill is swinging towards an election possibly in May or June. There are still so many factors to consider, of course, that this view may have been scrapped by next week. I pass it along for what it is worth. Premier Bennett is clearing decks for speedier government action. Private members' days are now all but gone; and there is nothing to stop the reform program from proceeding full steam ahead. The Liberals are meticulously avoiding anything which can be branded as obstruction. The nearest they have been to downright opposition recently is on the constitutionality of Premier Bennett's method of dealing with the unemployment insurance measure. Without exactly waving the banner of 'provincial rights' such men as Hon. Ernest Lapointe have cast grave doubt on the legal position taken by the prime minister on the matter. Until a very few months ago the prime minister himself did not think the federal government had any right to pass social legislation binding on the provinces.

TARIFF DISCUSSION TABOO

It looked for a while as though that hoary but ever popular subject, the tariff, was due for a good airing. Hon. Charles Stewart moved for the free entry of agricultural implements; another member was all for free mining machinery; still another wanted fishing tackle to enter free. It looked like a series of promising debates; but it all went down the drain when the Minister of Finance got up and said that just now, with reciprocal trade agreements being negotiated with our neighbor south of the line, such discussions were embarrassing. The Liberal members were adroit enough not to be caught putting anything in the way of a successful trade agreement with the United States, and though most of them failed to see much force in Mr. Rhodes' contention, they let matters stand. The discussion of tariffs is sub judice just now, so it would seem. You can bet that it won't be so on the hustings, however. And, of course, members have the right on the budget to raise such matters.

ODDS AND ENDS

The past week was one of odds and ends, rather than of any major development.

Donald Kennedy, U.F.A. member for Peace River, asked the government for about the 18th. time to build an outlet so that the agricultural products of his riding could reach ocean ports without going a thousand miles or so out of the road with correspondingly high freight rates. The Minister of Railways said that railway deficits made the fulfillment of the request in full quite impossible; still, he would try to have a modest start made, to give work to the unemployed, if for no other reason.

The Minister of Marine told the House that representations were being made to the Imperial Shipping Committee, in view of the successful season at Churchill this year, to secure lower insurance rates for the trip into Hudson Bay. High rates are the chief obstacle to a great extension of traffic there, we are told.

The Minister of Finance hopes to save a tidy sum in the present year by exchanging maturing and callable issues of C.N.R. bonds for new ones at lower interest rates, he told the house. An appropriate measure was started on its way accordingly.

CHEAPER MONEY SOUGHT

George Coote, U.F.A. member for Macleod, introduced a bill which would make it illegal to contract for more than seven percent interest on any contract, or more than four percent on a mortgage. The bill will be studied in banking and commerce committee. I'm afraid when it comes out again you won't know it.

The price-spreads committee is preparing some drastic penalties for the people who break minimum wage laws or otherwise create working conditions similar in character to those exposed by the committee.

A committee to study the best means of amending the constitution has been named.

E. J. Garland, United Farmer member for Bow River, contributed a brilliant address on the difficulties of restoring capitalism, the free market, and the operation of the law of supply and demand, during the debate on J. S. Woodsworth's motion calling for the setting up of a Co-operative Commonwealth in Canada.

RELIEF WORKER INJURED

One, "Johnny" Gagne, engaged with men working on the town bush-lot in the direction of Dunany, suffered an injury to his eye this week when a piece of steel broke from a wedge with which the men were splitting logs. The metal struck his eye and cut him quite badly. Gagne was brought to Lachute immediately and received medical attention.

The hilarious Eddie . . . you haven't seen him in his master hit . . . coming shortly to Rex Theatre.

Lions' Club Heard Interesting Talk

Quebec's Electrical Problems
Topic of Discourse

Speaking before a large and representative meeting of the Lions' Club on Wednesday evening, Mr. G. Lorne Wiggs, B. Sc., A.M.E.I.C., M.A.S.H., & V.E., P.E.Q., Consulting Engineer of Montreal, gave a very illuminating address on Electrical Problems of the present day. It was interesting to note that although Canada ranks second among the countries of the world in per capita consumption of electricity, many and varied rates prevail through different sections. The ideal situation would be a more uniform and, in many parts, a more economical rate. In Mr. Wiggs' opinion the present

Electrical Commission can do much towards this end.

In moving a vote of thanks to the speaker Lion Geo. Mitchell made mention of the many interesting facts and figures brought out by Mr. Wiggs, which were in themselves a revelation.

Lion Clement Tremblay was boosted by Lion Ernest Deslauriers. The fact that "effort does not go without reward" was shown in the drawing for Lion Tremblay's gifts, the first number drawn falling to Lion Deslauriers and the second to Lion Gaetan Valois.

The next meeting will be on Wednesday evening, Mar. 6th., at which the guest speaker will be Mr. A. A. Gardiner, Assistant General Passenger Traffic Manager of Canadian National and Grand Trunk Railways, whose subject will be Canadian National Assets.

George Arliss in The Last Gentleman, coming next week to Rex Theatre, Lachute.

THAT FIRST BRANCH BANK AND 500 MORE

The founders of the Bank of Montreal firmly believed in branch banking. Two weeks after opening the Bank in Montreal on November 3rd, 1817, the directors appointed an agent at Quebec. By the following June the agency was made an "Office of Deposit and Discount," and thus the first branch came into being. Two others soon were created—at Kingston and York (afterward Toronto). Those early bankers sought to extend and perpetuate for the farmers and merchants, the benefits and stimulus of a branch banking system the worth of which had been abundantly proved in the British Isles. Thus they introduced one of the elements of elasticity for which the Canadian banking system has received so much praise.

Consistently, throughout the decades, the Bank of Montreal has added branches wherever business warranted, giving to new and growing communities the advantages of banking strength, ample facilities and sound management. Today over 500 branches are serving Canada. Each branch is the Bank of Montreal, with all the facilities and public service for which the institution is known.

From the first branch in Quebec to the most recent one opened, the spirit of the Bank of Montreal is expressed—and will continue to be expressed—in terms of useful banking.

Death of Mrs. H. Kearns

FORMER RESIDENT OF LACHUTE WAS IN HER 73rd. YEAR

The death occurred on Wednesday, in her 73rd. year, of Mrs. H. Kearns, at her residence, in Montreal. She was the wife of the late Hubert Kearns and lived for many years here in Lachute, where Mr. Kearns was connected with the Wilson Paper Mill. For some time Mrs. Kearns had been in failing health.

She is survived by one son, Hugh, president of B. and F. H. Thompson, Reg'd.; and by six daughters, Mrs. J. F. Callanan, Mrs. Robert White, Mrs. R. B. Jones, and the Misses Isabel Jeffie and Lila Kearns. In Lachute Mrs. Kearns and her family retained a wide circle of friends, and deep regret is felt here in her passing.

The funeral will be held at the chapel of Jos. C. Wray and Bro. on Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, burial to take place in Lachute, on arrival of the train from Montreal.

Sudden Death of Brownsburg Resident

LATE MRS. M. McLEOD

Brownsburg — This village was shocked to learn of the death of a life-long resident in the person of Mrs. Malcolm McLeod, who passed in her sleep during the night of Thursday, Feb. 14. The deceased lady, who was in her sixty-fourth year, had retired to bed in her usual health, and her husband, on awakening, had gone into his wife's room before putting on the fires to enquire how she had slept, as was his custom, and found her as if sleeping, with no apparent evidence of anything unusual. As she made no response or movement he summoned Dr. A. R. Côté and the absent daughters to her bedside. Dr. Côté pronounced her dead of a cerebral hemorrhage. She had passed in her sleep.

Two years ago Mrs. McLeod had suffered a slight stroke, which although it crippled her, had not diminished her bright spirits, and she had so far recovered that she had again taken charge of the household.

Hints for Homebodies

Specially written for Readers of the Watchman.
By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

A CAT TALE

We often hear tales of dogs who recognize their masters' voice, but for a change, this story is about a cat. One of my friends has a very lovely orange colored Persian cat. When she practices, the cat usually sits on the piano bench beside her. Not long ago, she sang over the radio. The cat was asleep on the piano bench at home, but the minute she started to sing, sat up and listened, and when she took one very high note gave a "meow", whether of approval or protest, it is hard to say, but it might very well have been approval as it was beautifully taken. Just as soon as her song was over the cat settled down to sleep again.

COUNTING THE CALORIES

Calories are a unit of measurement, just as feet, ounces or dozens are. Everyone knows how many pounds or ounces, or how many pecks or bushels they are buying but all too few have any idea of how many calories they get with the money they spend. All the other tables of measurement are taught in school but not the calories and they are really equally important. If neither you nor your family know your calories, learn them together. You will be surprised to find how interesting it is and what an interest the children will take in counting the calories at the meal and then finding the daily total. There are plenty of books that give tables but if none are available, write to your Provincial Department of Health and ask for them. When you start to count your calories you are due for some surprises.

BAKED FISH

Have you tried the new way of cooking fish? Baking it in a very hot oven, after first crumbing it. It is something like fried fish, but many people prefer its flavour. It is more digestible and certainly is much less trouble to cook, as you can pop a pan full in the oven and forget about it until it is time to take it out of the oven. The heat of the oven is the important thing. It must be very hot about 500 degrees. Any fish may be cooked in this manner but the fillets or any small fish are specially suitable. Have plenty of dried bread crumbs, dip your fish first in the crumbs, then in milk which has been liberally salted, then in the crumbs again. Arrange the fish on a greased pan, dot with butter and cook in a hot oven. The length of time of cooking depends on the thickness of the fish. A thin fillet will cook in about ten minutes, a medium one will require twelve. The last fillets I cooked were quite thick and took fifteen minutes to cook. I like to break one gently with a fork to see if they look cooked before taking from the oven.

SCALLOPED TOMATOES

Tricky things they are. If you put enough crumbs in them to really thicken them, it spoils the flavour. If you don't, they are runny, and that is disastrous. I am keen on quick tapioca for thickening food so I thought I would see what tapioca would do for tomatoes. It is the best thing yet. Thickens them sufficiently and yet you cannot detect the tapioca. If you have the kind of family that dislikes tapioca, keep its presence a dark secret. A No. 2 can, which contains a pint of tomatoes, (but you know that as well as I do), requires tablespoon quick tapioca (that is the ground kind), 1 tablespoon sugar and 1/2 teaspoon salt, and of course a dash of pepper. Better taste it to be sure it is seasoned correctly, as tomatoes and tastes differ. Mix in a baking dish, and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake for twenty minutes and serve in the dish in which it is baked.

BUTTERED CRUMBS

There are two ways of topping dishes with crumbs. One is to cover with crumbs and dot with butter. The other and better way is to melt the butter, and don't be too stingy with it, then stir in your crumbs, and stir until well mixed. Sprinkle over food and put in the oven until the crumbs are slightly browned.

AN APPETIZING DINNER

Baked fish with scalloped tomatoes and baked potatoes, is an appetizing dinner on a cold day. Put your potatoes in early, then twenty minutes before serving time, start your tomatoes, and five minutes later put the fish in the oven. If you are lucky enough to have an oven platter the fish and the tomatoes may be served in the dishes in which they were cooked and that is a grand saving on dishes.

POTPOURRI

Use a small paint brush to keep the open coil units of an electric stove clean.

Try seasoning your stews, soups, or any meat dishes with a bay leaf, or what have you from your package of mixed pickling spice.

Use the vinegar from your sweet pickles in making salad dressing by way of variety.

QUEBEC WOMEN'S INSTITUTES STRESS ADULT EDUCATION

The subject of adult education is receiving considerable attention from the Women's Institutes of Quebec this year. Many Branches have formed study groups of their members and interested outsiders, and these are studying classic literature as well as that which is more modern, along with other subjects. They are being assisted in this work by Dr. Beck of New York, himself an enthusiastic adult educationalist whose services are given free of charge to the Institutes.

HAWKESBURY NAMED AFTER A BRITISH M.P.

in favor of N. H. Treadwell and is recorded on his headstone in L'Original cemetery to this day.

In 1790 Hawkesbury was then known as Point L'Original, but when N. H. Treadwell sold out he took the name with him further up the Ottawa River, and L'Original is still the name of the county town of Prescott. The name L'Original is Indian for "moose"; Pont L'Original was where the moose came to drink from the waters of the Ottawa, and the Indians used to shoot them while drinking. Hawkesbury had also another name given to it by the French voyageurs and it was named much earlier and in a truly French fashion, as they then named places indicative of the atmosphere, the physical geography, the general appearance, or the surroundings of things. Lachute, for instance, was called after a peculiar condition of a stream that ran near by, the channel of which disappeared in a large marsh. So to this day a suburb of Hawkesbury retains a portion of its first name given to it by the French Voyageurs, though it is so murderously mispronounced that it is most difficult to trace to its origin by either pronunciation or spelling of the present form, namely The Sny. Some three or four generations back the Irish, whom the then-known lumber firm of Hamilton Bros. brought from Quebec City (when they had disagreed with their French Canadian laborers) to work in their saw mills and live there, called it Sny-Karty, which was the best possible offer they could make at the pronunciation of the French which was Le Chenail Ecarté, which translated to English is The Lost Channel.

It is most strange that this should come up just now, for when I was in Ottawa for my Xmas holidays, I went to the Archives Building and unearthed much matter bearing on the above subject. I had intended to write an article in this connection for the Hawkesbury newspaper, when my eye fell on the item before mentioned in last week's Watchman.

WHY NEWSPAPERS ARE LIKE WOMEN

Because they have forms.
Because they always have the last word.
Because back numbers are not in demand.
Because they have a great deal of influence.
Because they are well worth looking over.
Because you can't believe every word they say.
Because they carry the news wherever they go.
Because if they know anything they usually tell it.
Because they are never afraid to speak their minds.
Because they are much thinner than they used to be.
Because every man should have one of his own and not bother with his neighbour's.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Church of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Feb. 24th., is "Mind."

The Golden Text is:—"Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding." (Job 28:28).

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all." (1 Chronicles 29:11).

"Mind is the grand creator, and there can be no power except that which is derived from Mind. If Mind was first chronologically, is first potentially, and must be first eternally, then give to Mind the glory, honor, dominion, and power everlasting due its holy name." (Science and Health, page 143)

NOVA SCOTIA HENS' PULL OFF FREAK PERFORMANCES

Nova Scotia hens have been putting on some remarkable performances of late, according to the Agricultural Department of the Canadian National Railways. One citizen of Halifax the other morning on opening his egg at the breakfast table found therein a threaded needle. The needle with the thread attached was stuck through the yolk and was in perfect condition. A hen in Truro, not to be outdone by any Halifax prodigy, laid a compound egg, an egg inside of another egg: the inside egg had a soft shell.

Squirrels Credited With Planting Hardwood Trees

Gray squirrels will not live in any old kind of a woods. Squirrels are plentiful only where there is plenty of squirrel food. They like the shelter and protection of evergreen trees, especially when other trees are bare, but they cannot live in an evergreen forest long unless there are hardwoods near by to supply them with food. As soon as the acorns and nuts are ready, squirrels begin to store them up for winter. Contrary to what most of us think, says a writer in the New York Herald Tribune, squirrels do not select a hollow tree and fill it with nuts, each carefully weighed in one paw to make certain that it is not false. They hide individual nuts here and there, and all over, usually on the surface of the ground tucked under leaves and grass but often in the bark and crotches of the trees.

The hiding of nuts and acorns explains a curious fact that often puzzles farmers—when a stand of evergreens is cut off it usually grows up to hardwoods, hickory or oak. Squirrels living in the evergreens have hidden away thousands of nuts and acorns for their winter food. When the snow is deep the ground will be covered with a maze of criss-cross tunnels marking where these busy little animals have searched out their hidden winter supplies from cold storage. They do not find all the nuts and acorns—no squirrel memory is capable of that—and when the evergreen trees are cut down during the winter they are forced to move out suddenly and abandon what is left of their remaining provisions—which sprout and grow up the next summer into young hardwood trees.

Temple of Heaven

Many of the famous shrines of old China are located within the "Forbidden City," which lies within the Tatar portion of Peiping (Peking), but there is one in the Chinese part of the city which is as noteworthy as any in that land of illustrious craftsmen. This is the Temple of Heaven where the Chinese emperors came at daybreak on December 21 to offer sacrifices to Shang-ti, the supreme deity.

HOW MUCH BRAN
you buy?

The popularity of bran as a cereal to promote regular habits has brought forth all kinds of bran products. Some of these contain only a small quantity of bran. Naturally, many purchasers have been disappointed by certain of these products.

It's the actual amount of bran in a cereal that counts. Most individuals require an all-bran product for effective results. Bran furnishes the "bulk" needed to correct common constipation. Within the body, this "bulk" absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass. Gently, this clears out the intestinal wastes.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the most popular product of its kind in the world. It is used regularly, with success, by millions of people. It is all bran just as the name implies—with nothing added except the flavor of Malt, Sugar and Salt.

Whenever you purchase bran, read the wording on the package. Make sure by getting Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—in the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers.

CANADIAN NATIONALITY NOT BEING INTELLIG- ENTLY SHAPED

lishmen were poorly groomed; the Frenchmen, immaculately. From the Englishmen we got solid papers, from the Frenchmen we got brilliant speeches that swept the audience with admiration. The other evening I saw a French film—a combination of "Le Barbier de Seville" and "Le Mariage de Figaro."

There it was, a whole plot based on, and brimful of seduction, and yet not a shadow of the suggestive or vulgar, because the whole was handled with such airy grace and carried through with such unequalled elegance.

Disciplined Intelligence

The intelligence of France is the most severely disciplined of the modern world. We think much of the regimenting of the German race before the War in the direction of Prussianism; of the intentional fixing of Japanese ideals by the State-directed religion of Shintoism; but I question whether any people has been submitted to an intellectual and political discipline more stringent than that to which France was put in the 17th century under the leadership of Richelieu and Louis the Fourteenth, a discipline that left on the French character an impression of order, of luminous clarity, of trained power that has proven ineffaceable, and that has remained the special hall-mark of the genius of France. Of the results of this discipline—intensity through concentration, control through obedience to law—no better example could be given than the Classic Drama of France, which remains a perfect mirror of the French mind. The leading representatives of the French-Canadian people possess similar marks of severe intellectual discipline. There has regularly been in the Canadian House of Commons a group of French-Canadians who outpoint in the variety of their culture any English-speaking group that may be put in comparison with them.

More than any other of the Latin peoples, France is the lineal heir of Rome. There is hardly anything in history more remarkable than the ease, the avidity even, with which the Celtic population of Gaul absorbed the lessons taught them by their Roman conquerors. I remember the amazement with which I first saw the Roman remains of the Valley of the Rhone. Arches of Triumph—now slight and delicate as at Aix-les-Bains; now massive and crowded with ornament as at Orange theatres and amphitheatres—Orange, Nîmes, Arles—seating 12,000, 15,000, 25,000 people, an occasional one rearing against Time a front so indomitable that it looks as if erected yesterday; aqueducts that in their massive solidity laugh, in the midst of solitude, at the flight of the centuries. Well, I remember thinking at first, how large the immigrant Roman population must have been to erect such vast constructions. But it was not a Roman population that reared them; it was a Gallic population that had learnt perfectly its Roman lesson. And on French mentality the genius of Rome has left indelible marks. Rome has gone; her legionaries no longer keep vigil on the shores of the Black Sea, in the forests of Germany, or across the North of Britain, but the genius and instinct of Roman order, of Latin clarity, of Roman organizing power, lives on in the centralizing tendencies of the French mind. I recall the splendor of the picture painted in implication by La Bruyere of the Court of Versailles, rising in stately gradation to the Central Orb, the Great King himself. Alongside that literary memory I put a memory of the old City of Quebec, seen in the flashing sunshine of a summer morning from the Ile d'Orleans, with its buildings clamoring up the hillside as if in eagerness to group themselves about the Cathedral and the Seminary of Laval. As I saw those edifices ranging themselves about the structures that most truly embody their ideals I said to myself: the French instinct and the French tradition at work.

Have Qualities Needed in Canada

I have used the expression: the French tradition. There is no modern people in whose case the national, the secular tradition operates so potently to augment and enforce individual performance. Thus the superb skill of French actors is due in a special sense to the supplementing of personal talent by the organic and conscious tradition of the French stage. The French race in Canada represents this valuable combination of organic tradition and personal performance, and this combination offers one of the aspects of the worth of the French-Canadian contribution to our developing nationality.

It is a far cry from the Brilliance that I mentioned first to the Tenacity that I mention now, as one of the attributes of the French race. I question whether there is a tougher, more resistant race in the world. The French peasant, his feet rooted in the soil, by his love of it, guarding France against the undue predominance of Industrialism, and thus giving her an admirable balance in her economic life, how tenacious, how indomitable he remains, Verdun showed. Now, the Quebec habitant is the French peasant, and who will deny that, in these nomadic days, he is well equipped to be a stabilizing element in our national life? His devotion to Canada, to his language, and to his religion, and his expansion from 10,000 or so to three million on this continent, show what a tenacious and prolific ethnic factor he is.

Canada's Future Depends On Understanding

I end by saying that the cordial admission of the Canadian French to complete equality and recognition, not only in the Province where they are supreme in numbers, but in all the Provinces, would be the best guarantee at once of our domestic prosperity, and also of our emerging in the troubled international field endowed with psychology and the experience that would enable us to play an influential role in world affairs.

IT'S A DOG'S LIFE

"It's Barney. He's all right now," the lad called cheerfully. "Oh, is that you Dr. Bolton?" Rosie called, recognizing with relief the Delgarth family physician. And then, to her intense joy, Rosie saw Barney rise slowly, shake himself and wag his bushy tail jerkily in token of recovery.

"You dear boy," Rosie half laughed, half sobbed, getting to her knees and throwing her arms tightly around Barney's neck.

"My car bowled him over," Dr. Bolton was explaining. "Fortunately the wheel did not strike him fairly. He was chasing a cat across the road, and he ran into the car and was stunned."

Rosie was crying happily and clinging to the collie, until the treatment for poison being given to the guests at the Delgarth home came to her mind.

"Can Barney come home with me now, Doctor?" she asked.

"Yes, take him along, Rosie." "And you come back with me, too," Rosie invited. "Oh," she explained, "there's been a terrible mistake, and I don't know what to do." On the way back to the house Rosie told the story.

Doctor Bolton greatly desired to laugh. The glint in his eyes reassured Rosie. But the physician restrained himself and said, gravely, "I see; rather an odd situation, Rosie. Have you any suggestions?"

"I have one," she answered. "If you think it will be all right."

"What is it?" Dr. Bolton asked.

"Suppose you don't say anything about the car accident at all. Suppose you haven't treated Barney for stun at all. Suppose you treated him for toadstools—could you do that?"

Dr. Bolton considered the problem. "Very well, Rosie," he consented, "toadstools it shall be. I'll go to the front door, just to learn if everyone has recovered. Good night to you, Rosie."

"Good night, Dr. Bolton," said Rosie. "And thank ye for your kindness." Then, to Barney, her hand at his collar, "come Barney me lad, your supper's waitin' ye, but not any mushrooms, no, sir!"

Arthur Burke favored with a solo, also in a duet, Reuben and Rachel, with Katherine Cooke. Mr. Roy Dobbie sang some old Lauder favorites, and Miss Whelehan delighted the audience with a rendering of Burns' ode "To a Daisy". Keith Canning told, in his own bright way, about the old Scotch couple: "For she was Scotch, and so was he." Helena Morrow also gave a humorous description of how a maiden lady treated a burglar.

After the young folks' programme was finished, Rev. J. W. Maclean treated the audience to an interesting lecture on Burns and some of his works, with colored lantern slides.

Hooker and Frances Murray. The affirmative won the debate.

Two weeks ago a setback had confined her to bed for two or three days. But she had quickly recovered and, though weak, was seemingly as usual. The end came suddenly and unexpectedly.

Her maiden name was Jennie Gilmour, the daughter of Robert Gilmour and Jane Hutchin; she was born at Mount Maple, in 1872. Her entire life was spent in these parts, the old homestead being still occupied by a brother, Patrick Gilmour, who, with one sister, Mrs. Joe Thompson of Montreal, are the only members of a large family to survive. She was married to Malcolm McLeod in 1892, and the couple settled in Brownsburg. To this union were born four girls and four boys, of whom four only are living: Mrs. Wesley Doran of Brownsburg; Mrs. Gordon Elliott, Lachute; Robert, North Bay; and Gilmour, at present a patient at Ste. Agathe. Four children were taken by death, and the sorrow of many bereavements may have had much to do with the stroke that finally seized her. She was endeared to a wide circle of friends by her cheerful disposition. During her former long illness, she bore her misfortune with a splendid courage.

Belonging to a Baptist family, Mrs. McLeod was very broad in her Christian beliefs, and attended service in the former Methodist Church as well as her own. After union, as her children attended the United Church in Brownsburg, she grew to think of it in a way a hers, though she never joined, and in later years scarcely ever left her home.

The funeral was held at her late home on Sunday afternoon, February 17, and was very largely attended, being conducted by Rev. A. E. Hagar. Beautiful wreaths denoted the high esteem in which she was held. Two hymns, favorites of hers, were sung—Jesus, Lover of my Soul, Safe in the Arms of Jesus; and the lesson taken was Revelation 21 and 22. The pall bearers were Messrs. George, James, and Archie Murdoch, James Gauley, Wm. and Dave Tomalty. Interment was in the vault at Lachute.

To her sorrowing husband and family deep sympathy is extended in their bereavement.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Malcolm McLeod and family desire to thank most sincerely the many kind friends for expressions of sympathy and tokens of friendship and condolence on the occasion of the death of a beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Malcolm McLeod, who passed in her sleep at Brownsburg, Friday, Feb. 15, 1935.

CANADA PARTICIPATING IN BRITISH INDUSTRIES FAIR

Much benefit to Canadian trade is expected from Canada's participation in the British Industries Fair this year, which opened in London last week. While Canada has been participating in the Fair, in the past years, 1935 holds exceptional possibilities owing to the gathering in London of thousands of officials and dignitaries from all over the Empire as well as foreign lands to attend the Silver Jubilee.

Canada is being represented by 44 individual manufacturing firms as well as by the Canadian Government which will have an extensive exhibit in the Empire section.

A number of manufactured Canadian foods will be on exhibit, including breakfast foods, jellies, honey, cereals, also rubber manufactures of all descriptions, ranging from automobile tires to toy balloons and erasers.

EUCRE HELD IN AUDITORIUM

A largely attended Eucree was held last Thursday evening in the Auditorium, sponsored by former pupils of Lachute Convent. The effort was for charitable purposes, in aid of poor children of local families, and met with a whole-hearted response from the public. The Lachute Orchestra provided music. Pupils of the Convent served refreshments and an evening around the card tables, interspersed with other items of entertainment, filled a most enjoyable occasion.

The proceeds of the event amounted to over $100.

JUNIOR HOCKEYISTS' FINALS

A large crowd witnessed the third of the junior play-offs on Sunday afternoon at the Arena, which gave Ayers Juniors a two-out-of-three supremacy and the title for the season. The score was 1-0. In the preceding two games, the first had resulted in a tie, and the second in favor of the Ayers boys, winning by 4-3 in an overtime session. The College team were the losing contenders. The games evidenced good, clean spirit, a brand of hockey which was surprisingly keen in these young players, and a remarkably close contest.

The senior championship games appear to be at a standstill, Independents having dropped from the contests after their first play-off with Ayers Limited, in which the latter were victors. Ayers, therefore, are virtual champions of the Lachute - Brownsburg Hockey League again this year. This is the third successive season in which they have won the title through a more-or-less complete series of games. Four years ago, it is remembered rightly, the cup went to the Brownsburg team by default, after a somewhat interrupted schedule.

The triumph, this time, appears to be somewhat shorn of its glory; in previous years the final play-offs proved an exciting climax to the season's hockey, and the championship, won in a hard-fought encounter, brought with it a keener satisfaction.

A series of three games is now in progress between the junior players - Red Indians and the French School team competing for a cup put up by the local Brothers.

HAWKESBURY TO VOTE ON FRANCHISE

CONTRACT RENEWAL FOR GATINEAU POWER

In the town of Hawkesbury, voters will be called upon in the near future to ballot on a by-law for renewal of a ten-year contract with the Gatineau Power Company. This service company has supplied the town with light and power over a ten-year period, and is seeking the franchise for another term. The rates have been somewhat revised. The question has aroused wide interest among the ratepayers; the procedure has been complicated, and popular approval to this contract must later be validated and confirmed by Provincial Parliament. The local vote will be taken on March 11th.

Hawkesbury Town Council voted last week in favor of granting an assessment exemption to the Canadian International Paper Company Limited, in connection with the construction of a new laboratory plant at Hawkesbury. The company's application was given with assurance that, as far as possible, local labor would be used both in the construction and operation of their plant.

SNOWDRIFTS—IN TOWN AND OUT

One of the winter's heaviest snow-storms brought the railroad snowplows and local sidewalk scrapers into action this week. This snowfall gave evidence again of the inadequate arrangements to clear Lachute's sidewalks within a reasonable time after a storm.

In this regard, a word of credit is due to the private enterprises which have done much to keep the streets clear of drifts this winter—a matter which has given the town authorities little worry or concern. This work has been voluntarily attended to on certain streets by Ayers Limited, Geo. Y. Deacon and Boyd's Express; with privately-owned plows they have been seen constantly operating around the town. While these concerns are sufficiently interested to keep the thoroughfares passable, it is to be hoped that our committee of councillors will bear the circumstance in mind and make provision for more prompt cleaning of the sidewalks next season.

Heavy drifts on the St. Jerome Highway have called for renewed attacks by squads from Boyd's Express and Deacon's Garage, who have expended much time, money and strenuous labor to keep the road passable for winter traffic. Recent snows have presented difficulties comparable almost to their first attempts at breaking the road. It will be recalled that, with winter already advanced before the plow arrived from the manufacturers, this was no small task.

Citizens of Coldwater, Ont., are tendering a banquet to the Municipal Council. In many towns the civic councillors are already in the soup.

FIREMEN SUBDUED BLAZE

Meikle Street was the scene of an outbreak of fire last Saturday morning when, at 8.15 o'clock, the firemen responded to a call from the residence of Mrs. J. W. Lister. Fire was found to have caught in the flue downstairs, and had ignited the wall up through into the attic.

The booster tank of the fire truck was brought into play through a ¾-inch hose, and the firemen were able to extinguish the flames with a minimum of damage by water and flooding. This is the first time Fire Chief Deacon and his men have had opportunity to use this smaller equipment, which is part of the outfit supplied with the new Bickle truck, and it was found most satisfactory in a fire of the proportions encountered here on Saturday.

Damage to the contents and interior of the dwelling, estimated at around $300, is fully covered by insurance.

JEWISH PIPERS JUDGED BEST IN SCOTLAND

Glasgow—A blow to national pride has been administered here by the discovery that one of Scotland's very hottest bagpipe bands is composed exclusively of Jews.

Hitherto Scotsmen, have proudly boasted that only a true born Scot could master the rousing skirl of the national musical instrument.

Now comes the news that the "Jewish Lads' Brigade" has won the Scottish championship trophy for their skill with the pipes and bellows.

Every argument between two people is liable to sink, or rise, to the level of a dogfight.

DAUGHTERS OF ISABELLA HELD BENEFIT SHOW

FULL HOUSE AT THE REX THEATRE

Wednesday evening was the occasion of a benefit performance at the Rex Theatre under auspices of the local circle of Daughters of Isabella. A large attendance was on hand, and the proceeds of the evening will be devoted to the charitable work of this order among poor people of the town.

Additional to the program of pictures, which included The Rosary in French, and a Spencer Tracy picture, with other short features, there were items of rare talent contributed by local artists. Mr. A. Fassio, genial proprietor of the Theatre, played the violin, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Berthe. Little Miss Cecile Labelle gave charming vocal selections, and Georges Belanger gave a whistling number, displaying that rare ability which is a familiar accompaniment to his daily rounds. The local dance orchestra was on hand, adding appreciably to the pleasure of the evening. Other novel items completed a very successful program.

Mr. L. E. Dumais, on behalf of the order of Daughters of Isabella, spoke a few words of appreciation for the generous response of the public.

QUEBEC GOVT. MAY TAX STOCK TRANSFERS

The Quebec government has made known its intention of imposing a transfer tax, in a bill tabled in the legislature by Provincial Treasurer R. F. Stockwell.

Another new tax is foreshadowed on gasoline tanks and pumps, the amount depending upon the population in the various centers of the province.

NO BLAME ATTACHED IN MILL FATALITY

Despite the hopeful reports received last week from Notre Dame Hospital, Lucien Charron, 23, succumbed on Monday to severe burns received when he fell into the steaming pond adjoining the veneering plant at Dominion Shuttle Company, Lachute Mills. The accident occurred a week previous to his death, when the young man slipped and fell headlong into the tank of hot water.

The body was brought to Lachute on Monday, and Dr. J. H. Mason empanelled a jury at the home of the man's parents on Tuesday morning. Here witnesses gave evidence bearing upon the accident. Mr. Rist, foreman of the works, expressed an opinion that reasonable precaution was observed for the safety of employees, and stated the Dominion Shuttle Company's plant was superior to any mill he had worked in during a long experience of 25 years in the business. Omer Church, fellow employee with Charron and the only one present at the scene, was also heard. He had not witnessed the man's fall, but, hearing a splash, had rushed to the tank and found him in the water.

The jury, after reviewing the evidence and inspecting the tank, felt that the tragedy had been purely accidental and no blame was attached to anyone. A verdict was rendered to this effect.

Lucien Charron is survived by his parents and by eight brothers and sisters. The funeral was held at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, the remains being taken by train to the Plaisance Cemetery for interment. The Charron family were formerly of Papineauville and

MINISTER'S IMPRESSION FROM THE HAUPTMANN TRIAL

Rev. Dr. Arthur Runnells, a Renfrew minister, gained admittance to the Hauptmann trial during a recent visit to Flemington, N.J., and returning home gave his impressions in an address before a body of young people at Renfrew. A long and interesting report of this address is carried in the Renfrew Mercury, but one of the sidelights in Dr. Runnells' views is found in a brief paragraph which we take liberty to publish:—

This big criminal lawyer rose and threw all kinds of questions and aspersions at the witness, trying in every way to discredit his word. That was one of the things which in United States courts today was making it very difficult to get responsible men and women to give evidence that would assist justice; the witnesses are bullied by the defence. It was a most pitiable thing when Betty Gow was on the witness stand. The prosecuting lawyers had to get up and say this girl was not on trial. She fainted. We wouldn't have a thing like that in Canadian or British courts. No one was yet in that witness chair connected with the Lindbergh home without having reflections cast upon their character. No-one but Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh. Dr. Runnells supposed Reilly didn't dare do that. This bullying of witnesses by defence lawyers and by criminal lawyers was one of the worst things that could possibly happen in the courts. Owing to that, many men and women who had evidence they could contribute hated to go in to the witness stand to give it. And we were not entirely free from it in Canada. There were criminal lawyers in Canada who were not above it.

Dr. Runnells declared that in this, possibly the most famous trial of 100 years, not only was Hauptmann on trial but the whole United States was on trial and the whole law system of the United States was on trial; and if defence lawyers could bully witnesses in that way, no baby that slept in the United States today was safe.

UNITED CHURCH W.M.S. ANNUAL PRESBYTERIAL MEETING

(Contributed)

A number of Watchman readers attended the annual meeting of the United Church W. M. S. in Montreal recently, some as delegates, others as interested members who were visiting in town.

The topic for the session was "The Uplifted Christ." After the usual formalities had been dispensed with Mrs. Rupert Bradford of Lachute, who is the newly appointed Sectional Vice-President, took charge of the devotionals, using as an illustration the story of Zaccheus and his struggle to see Jesus. She asked her listeners this question: Are we struggling to get a view of this same Jesus or examining ourselves in the light of His clear shining countenance? We must go deeper, she said, if we would go further.

Miss Mackay, President of St. Luke's Church in which the meetings were held, said that the church was seemingly being re-dedicated, having the Missionary members there, especially as the church had always been missionary-minded, and was just a new church.

STORIED SPOTS FROM SEA TO SEA

THE FORT OF THE ISTHMUS

After founding Halifax the British determined to consolidate their hold on Nova Scotia and Major Lawrence built on Chegneeto Isthmus a fort which took his name. Across the River Missisquash the French countered with Fort Beauséjour, and the little stream came to be regarded as an unofficial boundary to cross which was an act of aggression by either side. The militant Futher Le Loutre continued to inspire resistance to the British among the Acadians and in 1755 Colonel Monckton with a strong force sailed up the Bay of Fundy, determined to clear the French from disputed territory.

In two weeks Fort Beauséjour surrendered and was renamed Fort Cumberland. Monckton reported that three hundred Acadians, nominally British subjects, had formed part of the garrison. The commandant gave assurance that they had taken service with the French under compulsion but the circumstance increased suspicions and prejudices, and contributed to the decision for wholesale expulsion. Witnesses reported having seen Le Loutre, in his shirt sleeves, directing the Acadians in laxity of the officers made him unpopular with them and he had managed to get away before the surrender, only their work on the ramparts. But his reproaches for the to be captured by the British when sailing from Quebec to France.

One cannot wonder that the energetic priest found fault with the defenders for inefficiency. The commandant, Captain Vergor, was a friend of the unscrupulous Bigot. "Profit, my dear Vergor, by your place, the intendat had written. "Trim, lop off; do it quickly so that you may be able to come and join me in France. "Vergor was tried for misconduct but remained in the service long enough to bring upon his country a greater disaster. For he was in charge of the guard at Le Fouion whose laxity made possible the success of Wolfe's daring plan to reach the Plains of Abraham.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Mar. 3rd., is "Christ Jesus."

The Golden Text is:—"As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." (Colossians 2: 6, 9.)

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." (Matthew 2: 1, 2.)

"Jesus' spiritual origin and his demonstration of divine Principle richly endowed him and entitled him to sonship in Science. He was the son of a virgin. The term Christ Jesus, or Jesus the Christ (to give the proper translation of the Greek) may be rendered "Jesus the anointed," Jesus the God-crowned or the divinely royal man, as it is said of him in the first chapter of Hebrews:—Therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee With the oil of gladness above thy fellows." (Science and Health, page 312)

JUST PRETENDING

"Gid-ap, horsie," — I heard a voice

Quite near to my kitchen door, Where no horse should be, Nor ever had been before.

I pulled on my tam and mittens, Drew closer my bright red shawl,

And went to chase out the intruders For my garden space was small.

My face lit up with sudden smiles

Astride of my garden wall.

"You have done right, Mr. Grizzly," the princess said, "we must hear just what use he has been making of his time before we can decide what is to be done with him. Give him to my two lieutenants, please. They will hold him while he is being questioned."

Mr. Grizzly handed Iceberg over to the two lieutenants, who led him to Princess Snowdrop. "Now apologize to the Princess," they said, but Iceberg did not obey. He just stood glaring from one to the other of the speakers.

"Never mind that part of it just now," said the princess very sweetly. "Let him tell us first what he has been doing with his time since we saw him last." The princess was tender-hearted and hoped that Iceberg would have so many kind deeds to tell that his naughty behaviour might be forgiven him. If he had, he did not speak of them. Wild with anger because he had been brought back an humiliated in front of Marjorie, as he thought, (quite forgetting that other people do not humiliate us, we do it ourselves by our naughty deeds) he boastfully told of all the evil things he had done, ending up with "—and I froze an old tramp's feet so that he could not walk,—and I'll freeze another one too as soon as I can find one."

Marjorie looked at him in shocked surprise for a minute before turning to see what Princess Snowball thought of this. Poor Princess Snowball was gazing at Iceberg with a face so full of horror that it frightened Marjorie.

At last Princess Snowball said, in a queer strained voice "To think that one of my people could be so cruel. The poor old helpless beggar."

Tears gathered in her beautiful blue eyes, and at this sight a low wail came from the lips of her subjects, while Krinkly Krum whispered hoarsely in Marjorie's ear, "Don't let her cry, Golden Locks! don't let her cry, please. She mustn't! oh she mustn't!"

Marjorie stared at him in surprise, her own eyes filling at the urgent entreaty in his voice. "We shall lose her if she does," continued Krinkly Krum. "Do something about it, quickly, please."

Marjorie wanted to something about it very much, but did not know what to do. She turned to the princess, who by this time was weeping quite hard, and the strange part of it was that the tears, instead of running down her cheeks or turning into diamonds as Marjorie's had done, were forming into great icy crystals on her cheeks and closing her beautiful eyes.

Marjorie looked at Iceberg and at once understood that he was the cause of this. He was standing, held fast between the two lieutenants, his eyes fastened on the princess with such a hateful icy glare that he was freezing the tears as they rolled from her eyes. He took his gaze from the princess' face long enough to give Marjorie a sneering, baleful look, but Marjorie was so hot with indignation that his icy stare had no effect on her. "Help! help!" moaned the princess in a queer, strangled voice.

Marjorie caught her in her arms, laid her down on a couch, knelt by her side and blew upon her eyes with her warm breath. At first nothing happened and Marjorie was in despair, but she kept on blowing until she felt that her lungs must surely burst. At length the icy crystals showed signs of melting, but they melted so slowly that Marjorie called, "Help me, Tiny, please. Come and breathe heavily on Her Majesty's left eye, while I blow on her right."

Thanks to their united efforts Princess Snowball regained her sight and sat up. Without looking at Iceberg she said, "Please take the wicked Iceberg to the back of the room until it is decided how he shall be punished." "It is decided now, Your Majesty" said Mr. Grizzly. "I have just been handed a scroll from the Inner Chamber, and the decision of the Knight of the Inner Chamber is that Iceberg shall be chained in the drain pipe where Mammy Sue runs all her hot water down." "Oh" said Marjorie with a gasp. "It will melt him!" She knew just how hot the water was that went down that drain pipe, but felt that anyone so wicked as Iceberg should have a very terrible punishment indeed.

She must have been heart in the Inner Chamber for what seemed like a multitude of voices suddenly roared, "Let him melt; we will not have anyone so wicked in our midst. Not only did he freeze the poor beggar's feet but, if it had not been for you my dear Golden Locks," here Mr. Grizzly made her a low bow, "he would have killed Princess Snowball. One of the decrees made by her Fairy Godmother, Queen Snowdrift, was that she must never be grieved to tears by her subjects. If she were, some terrible thing would happen to her — and it almost did happen." Turning to the two lieutenants Mr. Grizzly commenced, "Deliver Iceberg over to Jailor and Nailor, and tell them to see that Tinker Tom makes his chains good and strong."

"You'll remember me, Marjorie Black" hissed Iceberg, as he was being led away. "You will remember, when you find your pet rose-bush dead. As I melt I shall find its roots and scald them to death."

Lovingly, Aunt Jean

Doctor: "Your master is decidedly better, Thompson, but very irritable. He mustn't be thwarted."

"But he expressed a desire to wring my neck, sir."

IF SOMEONE BREAKS THROUGH THE ICE

A Few Rescue Hints as Taught the Boy Scouts

With the approach of spring comes the annual toll of drownings through breaking ice. The February "Scout Leader" reminds Scouts of ice rescue technique in an article which might well have wider circulation. It may be noted that every winter and spring numbers of such rescues are made by the Boy Scouts.

Says the "Scout Leader":—

In the event of an ice accident, the most important things are a cool head and quick action. Needless risks are to be avoided. Plunging into the water with him won't help the victim. Call at once that help is coming and warn him not to get excited and struggle, but merely to hang on to the ice.

When compelled to cross dangerous ice to reach the victim, secure a ladder or plank and push it ahead of you. If such things are not at hand, crawl flat, holding a pole or staff, until you can reach him and assist him to solid ice. If using a plank or ladder, push it across the break in the ice and if necessary crawl along it until you can grasp and help the person upon it.

If a rope is available, tie one end securely to a hockey stick or short pole, and shoot it across the ice to the person in the water. Direct him to place the stick across the ice in front of him, rest his elbows upon it, and raise himself as you pull. If the ice breaks, repeat the operation.

If you have a rope only, endeavour to toss it to him. If he is too weak to assist himself, tie it about your body, have someone hold the end, then crawl flat over the ice, distributing your weight as much as possible, until able to grasp the hand of the person in the water. Hold firmly. Ask the person on the other end to pull, and direct the sufferer to endeavour to roll sideways upon the ice.

ALBERTA INDIAN SCOUTS TO MEET B. P.

One of the Boy Scout troops hoping to meet Baden-Powell during his coming visit to Canada is the troop of the Sarcee Indian Reserve, near Calgary. On his last visit B.-P. was made a chief of the tribe, and christened "Chief Spotted Eagle." The young Indian Scouts hope for an opportunity to display their ability at Indian sports and horsemanship, as well as scouting.

Scout units in various parts of the Dominion have made it a practice to provide for a number of boys of needy families at their summer camps. The Alexander Mackenzie Rover Scout Crew of Galt and Preston, Ont., holds an annual summer camp for such boys. Last summer over 100 boys were given the ten days' outing. The Scouts of a British Columbia troop gave up one week of their paid-for camp for the benefit of boys of needy families.

Facts from the Record

By Frederick Edwards

Ottawa—Sooner or later the Canadian people are going to resent in no uncertain terms the continuous insinuations on the part of Opposition speakers and writers that the Prime Minister's programme of reform for security is nothing more substantial than a pre-election soap bubble, pretty to look at, but ephemeral as mist on the mountain tops.

It is no self-praise to say of Canadians that they are a patriotic people. Whichever party may be in power, the Prime Minister receives from the vast majority of our citizens the respect and consideration to which his high office entitles him. When a party — any party — in opposition can find no more effective method of attacking the government than to impugn the personal sincerity of the Premier, that party displays something of great significance — an irascibility which in time leads thinking Canadians to a deep resentment.

Anyone professing to be a student of Canadian political history knows that Mr. Bennett throughout his career has been outspoken on behalf of reform measures, whenever he considered such reform measures necessary. He fought his own party in 1914 in opposition to a grant of $45,000,000 to those reckless adventurers, Mackenzie and Mann. He is an implacable foe of those who lobby on behalf of greedy corporate interest. He has urged restrictions on insurance companies. Again in 1928 he warned against stock speculation. He placed himself squarely on record, more than a year before the market crash, in these trenchant sentences, spoken in the House of Commons on June 9, 1928.

"Some people imagine that trading in pieces of paper upon which there are engraved words and figures constitutes the creation of new wealth. It is not so. The new wealth of the country is being created by the application of labour and capital to the natural resources of the country, and this trading in stock certificates, this great era of speculation in this country and on this continent is one fraught with possibilities of the gravest danger to Canada."

Had the government of the day listened to Mr. Bennett in 1914, we would not in 1935 have so grave a railroad problem confronting us. Had the country listened to Mr. Bennett in 1928, the bitterly tragic effects of the 1929 debacle would surely not have been so widely spread.

To accuse a man of insincerity who so staunch a record behind him of plain speaking on behalf of reform, simply is not good enough. Not for Canadians, who have a habit of thinking for themselves, and prefer to develop their thoughts from factual theses.

Passenger Pigeon Has Disappeared From U. S.

It is difficult to reconcile the fact that so far as is known not a single living specimen of passenger pigeon exists anywhere in the country today with accounts of their abundance less than a century ago, observes a writer in the Detroit News.

This pigeon, a bird 16 inches long with a ruddy breast, but gray back and a pointed tail, is said to have been so numerous in the early days of the United States that at times the flocks covered the entire view for hours at a stretch. They were so plentiful in 1800 that flights were visible almost constantly at all hours of the day during periods of migration, authorities say, and when roosting at night their weight broke down large branches and even small trees.

An old nesting site of these birds near Shelbyville, Ky., covered an area several miles wide and 40 miles long, while there is record of a pigeon nesting place 28 miles long and 3 or 4 miles wide in Michigan in 1876.

The fact that advantage was taken of the gregarious habits of these birds by hunters seeking to kill them in large numbers is thought to have been largely responsible for their extinction. What is supposed to have been the last survivor of the passenger pigeon race died in the Zoological gardens of Cincinnati in 1914.

FIRE AND POLICE CHIEFS TO MEET AT QUEBEC

The Association of Fire and Police Chiefs of the Province of Quebec will hold its annual meeting at Quebec from July 26 to 28. The date was definitely set at a meeting of the members of the administration committee of the association. Nearly 300 delegates will attend the meeting, which will be presided over by Fernand Dufresne, director of Montreal Police, and president of the association.

BRITISH SPEED RATE SET AT 30 M.P.H.

A maximum speed of 30 miles an hour for all vehicles in England after March 18 has been ordered by the Government.

In addition, city traffic measures, now in effect in London for the protection of pedestrians, will be extended to the rest of the country. In London shining nail-heads or colored stones mark the crossings to be used by the pedestrians. Traffic signals consisting of black-and-white posts, surmounted by bright orange-colored lights, will be installed in many places.

POLITICS IN MUNICIPAL VOTE (Sault Ste. Marie Star)

A few months ago there was a good deal of talk at various centres in the province which seemed to indicate that party politics was to be dragged into election contests.

Fortunately most of that has died down and it is just as well, for it is far better that party politics, which has to do with federal or provincial issues, should be kept out of municipal voting.

After all, municipal elections have to do with purely local matters which, for the most part, are not involved in any way with the national or provincial issues.

Municipal contests should thus be judged purely on the basis of what is best for the community in which they are being held, and party battles, which have no relation to the question at hand, should be forgotten.

ON HIS LAST LEG

(London Daily Express)

Lord Nuffield, the English motor magnate, recalled a "fight" he had with the Oxford city council when they wanted to start trams in Oxford in 1913.

"I applied for a license to run busses in Oxford," he said. "I did not even get a reply."

"I bought motor-busses and arranged that they should arrive in Oxford after dark. Within an hour of the busses' starting there was a detective on every one taking the drivers' names and addresses!"

"The only way I could obviate going to jail was by taking no money. Accordingly I arranged that shops on the routes should sell coupons saying they entitled the bearer to ride on a motorbus."

"The city council engaged two eminent K.C.'s who advised locking me up."

"However, the whole of the population wanted motor-busses and after three months the council themselves decided to put them on."

"I called the drivers together and said, 'We have twice the number of busses they have. Now remember—one in the front and one behind all the time.'"

"The consequence was the council busses never got a passenger. Eventually they made an offer for my busses and I accepted, and I do not mind telling them now that if they had not made that offer I would have been 'bust'."

First Gold Coins

Ancient tradition, Xenophanes in the Sixth century B. C. and Herodotus in the Fifth century B. C., ascribes the invention of coinage to the Lydians; the latter says they were the first to strike coins of gold and silver. The period usually given for this invention is the Eighth century B. C., and the name of the ruler given credit for it is Phaulon, king of Argos. The earliest discovered coins of Lydia and Ionia appear to have been made of electrum, a natural mixture of gold and silver. These belong to the Eighth century B. C. and are little globules with a variety of stamps, suggesting that they are private issues and not of a state authority. This early coinage is irregular in weight and quality and unsystematic in character, and it is not till the issues of King Croesus that we have in Asia Minor an undoubted coinage by a state authority. While this refers to gold and silver coins, it does not mean that gold and silver were not used for money long before this, in the form of weighed bars, bricks, plates, etc. These may be traced back as far as the Tenth century B. C.

PURITAN CLERGYMAN "KICKS OVER TRACES"

"Kicking over the traces" of a puritan upbringing, Rev. H. S. Arrowsmith recently speaking at Marlborough stated that he now regarded with indulgence alcohol, theatres, tobacco, gambling, and dancing. He looked upon excessive gambling as a sin, though he could find nothing against it in the Bible. All life was a gamble.

His attitude to gambling had been altered by the remark of a woman parishioner that she always had five shillings on the Derby.

He had with him an insurance prospectus offering to insure his life for £9 16s. for a year and pay his wife £1,000 if he died in that time. That was

A SCOTTISH CANADIAN BOAT SONG (Contributed)

Editor, The Watchman—

A gentleman in Harrington asked me if I could get him the lines of the Scottish Canadian Boat Song, which though it is anonymously written is very much older than the St. Ann Boat Song. I have lost his name and address, so I am hoping to reach him through your columns now that I have found the verses.

—C. F. Kains.

Listen to me as when ye heard our fathers
Sing long, long ago the songs of other shores,
Listen to me and then in chorus gather
All your deep voices as ye bend your oars.

Chor—
Fair these broad meads, these hoary woods are grand,
But we are exiles from our fathers' land

From the dim shelling in the misty islands
Mountains divide us and a world of seas,
But still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides

Chor—
We ne'er shall roam the fancy haunted valley
Where through the dark hills flows the clear small stream,
In arms around our patriarch banner rally,
Or view the moon on royal tombstone gleam.

Chor—
When the bold kindred in the days long vanished
Conquered the soil and fortified the keep,
No seer foretold the children would be banished
That a degenerate lord might boast his sheep.

Chor—
Come foreign rage, let discord burst in slaughter,
Oh then for clansmen true and strong claymore,
The hearts that would have given their blood like water
Beat heavily beyond the Atlantic roar

Chor—

OLD LONDON STREET STILL BURNS LAMPS

In old London there are houses in which oil lamps are still the only lights—houses of ancient memories. Some are less than 100 yards from the roar of Fleet St. Off a very narrow court these stand—houses built in the reign of Charles II.

In the largest, in Nevill's Court, lived Keir Hardie, the Labor M.P. There is a chapel belonging to the Moravian mission. Visitors in search of picturesque old London look at these buildings with a sense of their history and romance.

But there are plans afoot for a new street. Nevill's Court may go the way of other old London corners.

CIVIC RESPONSIBILITY

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

There is something wrong with the spirit of a community when men refuse to assume the responsibilities of municipal office, says the Winchester Press. Up in the town of Renfrew a second nomination meeting was called, because none of the men nominated would qualify for the position of mayor.

STATE ASSUMES FIRE INSURANCE

Governor Talmadge of Georgia announces that the state will insure its own property against fire. Funds which ordinarily go to insurance premiums are to be put aside in the Treasury and used to meet losses by fire. It is said that in the last five years the state has paid out $311,000 in insurance premiums and in ten years the cost to the state for insurance has amounted to about $500,000 in excess of claims.

TIME-HONoured WAY

Many experiments have been attempted in making cigarettes, but nothing has yet been found to equal the time-honoured Sweet Caporal method. It calls for the choicest tobaccos, aged and mellowed like vintage wine for at least thirty months, then firmly rolled in the finest papers. It requires a large amount of money, and complete facilities, but it's the only way to make a good cigarette. This is why more and more smokers are saying every day that "Sweet Caporals are milder—and they taste better".

CANON SHATFORD AND SPORTS

In a message delivered last Sunday by Canon Allan P. Shatford and broadcast by radio, one or two enlightening comparisons were made. The topic was Evangelism in Recreation, and expounding an ideal which is practically non-existent this side of the Atlantic, Canon Shatford did his job well and left an impression—which is after all, the object of every discourse from the pulpit.

The purpose of recreation is the re-creation of human energies, the restoring of flesh and spirit from the tension in which we live. The instinct of play is evident in every form of life, but among mankind sport has become sadly abused. Today, our highly commercialized, highly sensationalized athletics are a far cry from the re-creative motive with which they were endowed.

The minister's comparisons showed only the extent to which sport has taken hold of modern life, crowding out the spiritual and cultural essentials. . . . Ten thousand hockey fans, he said, could be found in attendance at Saturday night games in the Montreal Forum: to a masterly address by Senator Meighen on the subject of Shakespeare, only 300 people gathered in the same city. . . . In a newspaper which he cited as an everyday example, several pages were devoted to sport, while one quarter of a column told the news of the League of Nations. . . . Fifty thousand dollars is the weekly reward of a movie star; a Prime Minister gets the same for a whole year's services to the country.

Canon Shatford did not mince matters. He had been annoyed, on turning to his radio for amusement, to find that all three stations in Montreal were emitting hockey broadcasts at the same time—and Canon Shatford does not like hockey, least of all big time hockey. His complaint is well founded; there is no moderation in organized sport; it is a livelihood, a profession, and it has overstepped its bounds. For the pulsing remnants of sportsmanship one must turn to unexploited fields, to simple games and simple hearts—but here the outside world finds little enough excitement.

In many phases of activity we have lost our sense of proportion, secondary interests occupying the centre of the stage while the better things pass unnoticed. But this tendency is perhaps most noticeably marked in the modern applications of sport.

MINT OF THE KING'S ENGLISH

It was with keen approval that our attention rested, some weeks ago, on a letter to the Carleton Place weekly written by a former neighbor and contributor to The Watchman. Our friend soundly condemned distortions of the English language as spoken in the United States, not so much for their prevalence both here and across the border, but for their acceptance by lexicographers and publishers of so-called standard dictionaries in America.

To ourselves also, these peculiarities and practices are both distasteful. But it is a trend which cannot be halted; our only resort is to regard the most blood-curdling of these spellings and pronunciations (the latter constantly jarring, in the films, talking reports and radio broadcasts) as, not English, but American—and to leave it at that. Similarly, modern editions of the dictionary this side of the Atlantic may be considered to deal with a tongue that is American, not English.

The writer in question takes umbrage at the pronunciation of words ending in -le—given as authoritative in these volumes referred to. We agree, this is painful. Here it may be noted, fertil, futil, and similar pronunciations may be credited also with a Scottish origin (which makes them none the less painful). . . . But it is an origin which our Ontario friend himself might be reluctant to disown!

Criticism aside, it is refreshing to learn how dubious pronunciations are handled by the British Broadcasting Corporation. In the British Isles, seemingly, radio is an instrument whereby the language is idealized, not abused. A committee of nearly two dozen scholars and writers give judgment on the pronunciation of any Ottawa, February 26.—The Unemployment Insurance measure was endorsed by a vote of 101 to nothing,—a vote quite without precedent in the history of the Commons. Although one member indicated that he would have voted against it, had he not been paired, he rose a minute or two later to say that he was in favor of it on principle. The only opposition of any moment expressed was from Henri Bourassa, the veteran Nationalist leader from Quebec, who said that the effect of the whole so-called "social reform" was to debase the spirit of the people and to create a class of 'beggars, loafers and crooked men'. Mr. Bourassa, however, was not in the House when the vote was taken.

An attempt to remove the 'contributory' feature of the insurance bill was made by two members in the Independents' corner. They took the stand that for many workers even the small weekly contribution would work a hardship, that these people were already living below a decent standard, that the sums contributed by the worker, amounting to perhaps $14,000,000 or so a year, would represent that much withdrawn from purchasing power, and so forth. Instead of financing the scheme by contributions from the worker and employer, these members advised the government to do so by issuing currency based upon the resources of the country—not interest-bearing bonds, but bills. There amendment was defeated.

WHO IS TO PAY?

Complaint was made by some members that the measure did not include certain groups of workers who should be entitled to share in the benefits. It was admitted that agriculture could not very well come in, but there were such workers as stevedores and longshoremen, to name only two groups who ought to be permitted to benefit. Although there are perhaps 4,500,000 workers in Canada, only about 1,700,000 are expected to come into the scheme. This raises a point which was discussed casually last week: who is to pay for the scheme? In this first instance, of course, the worker and the employer contribute equally. But it is urged that some part, perhaps a great part, of this additional cost to industry will be passed along to the consumer. Then the other third comes from the federal treasury, and will be obtained from taxes on the general public. Thus it is quite reasonable that the farmer, who does not stand to benefit in any direct way, will be called upon to make an important contribution to the cost.

Two more Liberal members attempted to obtain the approval by the House of lower duties on instruments of production. William Duff, the genial "Commodore" from Nova Scotia, wanted easier entry of fishing tackle and supplies while Colin Campbell, newly elected member for Frontenac Addington, sought lower duties on mining machinery. The same argument was used by the Minister of Finance as last week: namely, that to press such motions to a vote might embarrass the reciprocal trade negotiations now proceeding between Ottawa and Washington, and the debates were not pressed to a vote.

A BILLION TOO MUCH

A curious discovery has been made that the estimates of the total Dominion and railway debt as usually made by speakers on public platforms is actually one billion dollars (count them) too high: The federal debt is about $2,700,000,000. The railway owes the public about $1,250,000,000; it also owes the government over $1,000,000,000. The tendency has been to lump these all together and to say that the total debt under which Canada is staggering is five billion dollars. Actually the billion which the railway owes to the government is already included once in the government debt to the public, so that it is added in twice. Also, the report is going the rounds that because the auditors of the C.N.R. recommended that this anomaly be removed by recapitalizing the Canadian National Railways, their contract was cancelled, and the job given to a Toronto firm.

The Senate ratified the Eight Hour Day Convention. The committees on a national housing scheme and the revision of the B.N.A. act have just nicely started. The Stevens commission is still driving along through heavy weather trying to write its report.

words, technical or otherwise, which create doubt among the authorities in the course of B. B. C. broadcasts. Chairman of this committee is George Bernard Shaw himself.

Misgivings are manifold in the discussions of this group. Their verdict follows inquiry into the derivations of words, their many phases of use and application, and not infrequently into the dictionary version. Here, again, it is interesting to note that the dictionaries are not considered infallible. The right pronunciation, apparently hangs upon the form of a word most widely accepted and understood among educated men.

The efforts of this committee on "B. B. C. English" may be tending to standardize the spoken language; transmissions from the Corporation's studios have a far reaching influence. But in contrast to the haphazard accents of western broadcasting, in which the latest and newest version is considered a fine achievement, one may be sure the English practice is striving toward a higher standard of speech. The B. B. C. is termed, in this respect, "the Mint of the King's English" . . . but it deals in fine polish rather than in new verbal currencies.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

MR. & MRS. SCOTT OF WEST GORE

Warm congratulations are due to Mr. and Mrs. John P. Scott of West Gore, who are about to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.

On March 3rd., 1885, they were united in marriage by the Rev. J. H. Dixon, in the city of Montreal, and as bride and groom came to live in Shrewsbury. They will observe their golden wedding anniversary at their home in West Gore, where they have resided for the past thirty-five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott have six children—Wm. Scott, Mrs. Pearson and Ruby Scott, of Oxbow, Sask., Ethel Scott of Farnham; Mrs. Walker Scott of Lachute, and Wallace at home.

The Watchman joins with many friends and relatives in extending best wishes to this honored couple, and trusts that they may be further blessed with many years of happiness together.

Appreciation

A letter has been received by the publishers of this newspaper conveying the warm appreciation of Mr. Hughie Kearns and his sisters, of Montreal, whose visit to their former town, occasioned last week by sad circumstances, met with feelings of kindly sympathy and concern in their bereavement. The letter reads, in part, as follows:

Dear Mr. Giles:

It would be difficult for me to address personally the words of appreciation which I and the family feel towards our many friends in connection with Mother's interment.

One does not get these kindnesses shown to them in a big city and it is one of the reasons that my heart always goes back to our little Lachute.

We do deeply appreciate the further evidence of friendship on the part of our many friends at what we call our Home, and perhaps someday I or we may be able in some way to reciprocate.

Particularly pleasing were the flowers which we received from the Boy Scouts of the Town—something entirely unlooked for, but which will long be remembered.

Yours sincerely,
Hughie Kearns

DAY OF PRAYER SET

World Observance to Take Place

Throughout the world, March 8 will be observed as a day of prayer, which was instituted first in 1920. The programme has been prepared this year by the Baroness Van Boetzelaer Van Dubbeldam, of Holland, vice-chairman of the International Missionary Council. Last year more than fifty countries shared in the observance of this day.

In Lachute United Church, a service will be held on that day, March 8th., at 3 p.m., to which all are invited.

The new tax proposed at Quebec is an impost of 1 cent per 24 liquid ounces on soft drinks and a license fee of $1 on each retailer selling soft drinks over the counter.

UNITED CHURCH W. M. S. ANNUAL PRESBYTERIAL MEETING

Mrs. J. I. Murdock, Conference Branch President, enumerated the things contributing to a successful society.—Prayer, Study, Reading, Talking and Giving; she made short comment upon each subject, particularly stressing the reading of the Missionary Monthly, which was sent "for a postage stamp per month and one cent over." Her comment upon Prayer is applicable to all walks of life "Let us," she said "ask God for what we want, then come back and thank him." During the reading of reports a ten percent increase in membership and finances was suggested for the next year, the tenth anniversary of the United Church in Canada. Receipts for the year were $30,336.78, with $300 more than last year being sent to the general W. M. S. Board at Toronto, as well as the distribution of 10,670 pounds of clothing to the needy in different sections, such as the Indian reservations at Saddle Lake, Alta., Caugnawaga and Oka, also Pointe aux Trembles, the Church of All Nations, the Hungarian and Chinese Missions, Assyrian School, French Protestant School at Tourville, and the Children's Home at Lachine, as well as for those underprivileged in the City of Montreal. Quilts to the number of 237 had been given and 1,267 gifts, as well as 1,680 new garments in mission schools and homes at Christmas time.

Mrs. Robinson, Recording Secretary, reported a total membership, including circles and mission bands, of 4,477.

Miss E. Mitchell, travelling field secretary, gave an entertaining account of her work, particularly stressing the medical phase of it. No sphere of adventure was so great as that of mission work, she said. One of her tales was of the aged mother who, on visiting her daughter in Toronto and viewing the wonders of Niagara Falls, said as she turned away, "If our old creek back home had had the same, chance it would have been just as wonderful." Miss Mitchell compared this reference to the small scattered societies, and the societies handicapped by being in the dried-out area—these bearing resemblance to the old creek back home, and given the same chance as larger societies working under easier circumstances, they could reach the same height of attainment.

The retiring president, Mrs. W. H. Sutherland, left with the meeting in her farewell speech the encouraging thought that she had noticed greater individual effort amongst auxiliary members; she also emphasized the crusade for more members next year.

Miss Irene Stewart of Central India told thrilling tales of that country and the work carried on there. Miss Stewart quotes one eminent Indian chieftain as saying when questioned about the book Mother India, the writer of it told very many truths, but he thought she must have mixed with very low people during her visit in India. "If," he said, "you doctors and nurses were to write a book about experiences in your slums, would you like it to go abroad under the title of Mother Canada, giving the world the impression that it was typical of all things Canadian?" Among Miss Stewart's expressions were these: "The Hindoo believes that God has actually been born into the world several times." "A Hindoo girl-widow is one of the saddest sights this old world has ever seen." "Caste is breaking down, but the process is very slow." "If you are born a Persee well and good, you can be a Persee all your life, but you can never become one."

Made Ski Trip from Morin Heights to Montreal

58 MILES IN DAY

Completing a 58-mile ski jaunt in a total time of 11 hours and 23 minutes, Paul Baumel and Warl Reigel, members of Morin Heights Ski Club, arrived at Snowdon Junction at 4.30 Wednesday afternoon. The trip is believed to be the first that has been made from the Laurentians to Montreal in one day, according to a Montreal Gazette report.

Leaving the Alpino House, two miles west of Morin Heights at dawn, the skiers followed the railway line through St. Sauveur to Shawbridge. They stopped there to have their log signed and continued immediately down the hill to within four miles of St. Jerome and then headed across country to the town and took the windswept, snow-drifted highway to Ste. Therese, where they stopped an hour for lunch and then continued into the city. Mr. Baumel used ordinary touring skis and Mr. Reigel, semi-racing skis.

Brownburg Post Office Situation Settled

Word has just been received from the Department of Public Works at Ottawa that the location of the new Post Office at Brownburg will be on the Hardie lot.

As reported in last week's issue, the question of location became a source of deep concern, as there were at one time no less than five applications in hand. These were finally brought down to a choice of Donaldson's and Hardie's. Having secured the grant of $25,000 for the construction of this Post Office, Sir George Perley, parliamentary representative for this constituency, considered it just that the people should be the final arbiters in its location; ballots were issued accordingly, with the result that the Hardie place received 615, and Donaldson's 445, which gave a majority of 170 votes.

The recording of 1060 votes out of a possible 1200 is evidence of keen interest in this question.

He was about to propose, but before doing so he wished to make sure she was a good housewife.—So he asked her: "Can you wash dishes?" "Yes," she said sweetly. "Can you dry them?" He didn't propose.

The family of the late Mrs. H. Kearns accompanied the remains of their mother from Montreal to Lachute last Saturday. The graveside ceremony was largely attended by local citizens, and the array of wreaths and flowers gave impressive testimony of esteem for the deceased and of deep sympathy for her family and relatives.

At the Presbyterian Meeting of the United Church in Montreal last week, recognition was paid to the ministry of Rev. J. T. Conn, in charge of the Avoca and Harrington field in this County. The following paragraph appears in a press report of the proceedings: "Rev. J. T. Conn was granted a leave-of-absence from the Presbytery to accept an invitation to Arden, Kingston Presbytery. High tribute was paid Rev. Mr. Conn for his years of service in his present charge."

Mrs. A. Aitkin was called suddenly to Toronto on Thursday of last week, due to the death of her uncle, Mr. John W. Gordon, who passed away at the General Hospital on Feb. 20th. It will be remembered that, prior to his leaving Montreal over a year ago, Mr. Gordon gave two interesting addresses to the Young People of the United Church on "The Hame and Haunts of Bobbie Burns" and "Scotland in Song and Story", discourses which were greatly enjoyed by all who were privileged to hear him. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved relatives.

DANCING DEVELOPS GRACE

There is many a mother who does not know the meaning of the word psychology, who nevertheless is a good psychologist. Here is another case of a mother who accomplished what she wanted by the use of sound psychology. She had two teen age daughters, both of them being very diffident and with no assurance whatever. This worried their mother as she herself had assurance and a definite feeling of social aplomb. She knew that she could not overcome it by words, but she felt that something could be done about it. And something was. She decided that the girls should acquire some accomplishment and the feeling that they could do something well would help to give them assurance. She wisely chose dancing lessons and was fortunate in securing a French teacher who taught them more than just dancing. First they had to learn how to walk properly. She would mimic them and show them their mistakes; showed them how to walk across the room properly; had them walk like the most graceful of the movie stars; and eventually had them so that they walked across a room gracefully and with assurance, as a matter of course. They were taught different forms of dancing and they frequently dance at entertainments. They are not forward girls but they have lost their shy awkward way and have acquired grace and confidence. Weren't they lucky in having such a wise mother? It is not always possible to find a competent teacher in a small place but a good many of the teachers in the High Schools who look after the physical training have had training in folk dancing. If there is no one competent on your staff, why not encourage one of the present teachers to take summer school work or ask the board to engage a teacher who will use dancing as a part of the physical instruction for girls?

CHEESE FOR CALCIUM

Calcium has always been known to be a bone builder. Our grandparents called it lime but what's in a name? Milk and its products are about our best sources of calcium, and cheese should not be overlooked. Cheese has rather a bad name for being difficult to digest but it is not so much to blame as the company it keeps and the late hours. If you eat apple pie and cheese at the end of a big meal, why blame the cheese for the indigestion? Biscuits and cheese are a popular mid-night snack and deservedly so, but if you are one of those people who cannot eat at night comfortably, why blame the cheese for your distress. Cheese undoubtedly is difficult to digest for some people because of its concentration. If cheese is finely divided and mixed with other foods and cooked at a low temperature most people will be able to digest it easily, even though they find cheese as ordinarily eaten, bothers them. It is a valuable food because of its proteid, fat and mineral content. Teen-age girls often dislike fat and as they require an extra supply of fat calcium and proteid, see that their menu often includes cheese. A good wedge of it on their salad plate is apt to be relished. Cheese requires a low temperature for cooking to make it easily digestible. Too great a heat will make it stringy.

POTATO AND ONION PIE

Pare and cut into thin slices six large potatoes and three large onions. Butter a casserole and arrange a layer of potatoes, then a layer of onions, dot with butter and season well with salt and pepper. Continue in this manner until the dish is full, making the top layer of onions. Add one half cup of hot water and sprinkle grated cheese. Cover and bake for two hours in a moderate oven of 350 degrees. Remove the cover a half hour before taking from oven, to allow it to brown. It may be necessary to add a little more water if the pie seems too dry. This is one of those handy dishes which may be popped into the oven before going out in the afternoon and will cook without attention.

BAKED FINNAN HADDIE

Place fish, either fillets or a large fish in a baking pan. Dot with butter, and if desired a little chopped onion. Cover with milk and bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees for an hour, basting occasionally.

ENGLISH MONKEY

1 cup bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup cheese thinly sliced
1 egg, slightly beaten few grains cayenne

Mix ingredients in the top of a double boiler and let stand for at least fifteen minutes. Cook over gently boiling water for a few minutes, until set, stirring occasionally. Serve on toast or crackers. This is another recipe that may be prepared beforehand, and cooked while the table is set. This quantity will serve four but not too generously.

COFFEE IN QUANTITY

Judging from the stuff that is served and called coffee at large gatherings, coffee in quantity is difficult to make. Yet it needn't be if a few simple rules are followed. The first thing is to use enough coffee. That seldom happens. Use 1 pound for fifty. Tie it in a bag that is large enough to allow the coffee to swell, put in cold water and bring slowly to the boil. When it has come to the boil, time it and allow it to boil for only four minutes. Remove the bags and keep the coffee warm over a gentle heat until time to serve. Good coffee requires cream, but if you must use milk, better results will be attained if you boil the milk and add it while hot.

"More attractive in appearance and taste and more easily masticated," is the official report on the new and thinner biscuits issued to the British army.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE AND ITS PLACE IN THE LIFE OF A GIRL

Let us take a peep into the home life of two or three generations ago . . . We find ourselves in a comfortable farmhouse, the centre of which is a cheerful, busy kitchen, in reality, the main living-room of the family—for here the neighbors congregate before the ruddy glow of an open fire. Here the men and boys of the family breakfast in the early morning hours. Here also the mother and her daughters carry on the household activities of a large family depending for sustenance mainly upon the products of the farm. Clothing, in all probability, is made of goods spun and woven of wool from the sheep in a nearby pasture, and most food products, including flour, have been produced on the same farm.

It was natural for the daughter to spend much of her time in apprenticeship to her mother obtaining from her the training of a good homemaker. She must learn to be a garment-maker as well as weaver, cook, nurse, accountant, laundress and hostess. With such a preparation, the girl was enabled to assume the responsibilities of her own home and maintain the health and happiness of those for whom she must care.

Contrast this condition with present day home life. The lot of the housewife has improved greatly, many processes have been removed from home to factory, and household equipment has had the benefit of scientific research.

With greater freedom, it is only natural that the average mother spends her time, after daily tasks have been completed, in seeking some interests outside the home. This means also that the daughters of the family must lack the opportunity of observing and participating in the home tasks which are carried on largely while they are in school.

Again, the girl herself has many of the hours away from school absorbed by membership in a girl guide or other club group, or perhaps by athletics, all very worthy in themselves, yet failing to aid in her preparation for home-making. Nor does the situation improve as the girl grows older, for with the present tendency to engage in some gainful occupation, there is the consequent need for increased training, which again deprives her of the home-maker's instruction.

Thus, all too frequently the girl must reach womanhood with little or no opportunity for the apprenticeship in home-making. What is the remedy for such a situation? Inasmuch as the greater portion of a girl's time is spent in school, it would seem that this is the logical place for her to receive such training.

In this Province the Protestant Schools of Montreal proper, Montreal West, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Macdonald High School, and Sherbrooke, are endeavoring to meet the need by presenting a household science course. In Montreal this is given to girls of the sixth and seventh grades; in Ste. Anne's it is given to grades seven and eight as well, while in Montreal West and Sherbrooke, the work is introduced with high school classes.

In a term of twenty weeks, it is usual for half of the time to be devoted to nutrition and cookery, and half to sewing. With the somewhat limited time at her disposal, the teacher endeavours to create as nearly as possible the home situation, grouping food preparation around the various meals, with due thought to the principles of nutrition. A certain amount of home-management, such as table service, care of equipment, laundering of towels and so forth, is the natural accompaniment of this work. With practice of a lesson in the home, which is encouraged by the teacher and frequently follows as a consequence of the interest aroused in the school, the girl gradually acquires a portion of the training required as a home-maker.

That a large number of young women realize the lack of such a course in their own school training may be seen from the heavy enrolment in evening household science classes, most of the pupils being about to enter homes of their own.

It is interesting to note that the young mothers of today understand family food requirements and attendant problems much better than those of twenty years ago—for which a large portion of the credit may doubtless be claimed by the schools.

A social service worker had occasion to visit a family in which there are seven or eight children, most of whom were in various states of ill health due to poor nutrition. It developed that the mother had little or no home-maker's training either at school or in her own home. A number of months passed by, with the mother faithfully carrying out instructions given by the worker. At the end of this time she was overjoyed to find improvement in her children, especially the youngest, whose condition had failed to progress to serious stages due to prompt action. Almost with tears in her eyes, the mother exclaimed, "Oh, why didn't someone give me a better chance?"

In concluding this article, we may well echo "Why?" Health and contentment in daily living are largely the result of happy and sane home conditions. These in turn are made possible by one who understands the many problems with which she must deal.

Harold: "On what grounds does your father object to me?"

Mary: "On any grounds within a mile of the house."

Boss (to Pat)—So you want to leave the works. Are your wages insufficient?

Pat—The wages are all right, sor, but I'm afraid I'm doin' a horse out of a job.

Negro Tobacco Pickets

Traveling through the tobacco districts of the South one sees many old log cabins, through the corner of which runs a flue constructed of rocks, mud, cement or any other handy material. In front, opening to the outside, is a fireplace or stove of this same material, says a bulletin of the American Gas association. When the tobacco leaves are cut, the negroes hang them in these cabins and fires are maintained day and night until the tobacco is dry. These cabins are still used and the night fires with the negroes singing and dancing about are most picturesque.

MAKING THE LIPS RED

"So far as my experience goes," said a physician, "painting the lips is not a widespread vice in America. It is seldom the smallest observation know the resorted to, for men of the methods women pursue for making their lips red."

"What do you mean?" he was asked.

"They bite them. It is impossible to see women in a car or elsewhere, when men are around, that do not continually press their lips with their teeth, and bite them with more or less fierceness. This brings the blood to them and makes them red. Still, as it also keeps them from chapping in the winter, there is no reason why the practice should be condemned. As for cosmetics, they have almost gone out of date, and have not anything like the run they used to have. Women have at least learned that good health brings colour, and exercise has taken the place of powder and paint."

—Readers may wonder what source this opinion is quoted from. Anticipating the enquiry, we may add that the passage is clipped from a 50-year-old issue of the Watchman dated March 6, 1885. The physician, here mentioned, has doubtless turned in his grave many times since.

Have you found the
on your grocer's shelf?

It's a delicious ready-to-eat cereal. Millions of Canadians have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a safe, effective means of correcting common constipation—the kind caused by lack of "bulk" in the menu.

Laboratory measurements show that ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in this tempting cereal is more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables—because it resists digestion better. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass. Gently, this cleans out the intestinal waste.

Isn't this natural food better than taking patent medicines? Two table-spoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases with each meal. If this fails to give relief, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or cook into appetizing recipes. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains much more needed "bulk" than part-bran products. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Pearson's Antiseptic Company of England a few months ago completed its negotiations with the City of Lachine, Que., to establish a plant for the manufacture of Disinfectants.

This brings to Canada one of Britain's oldest manufacturers in this line. It also shows British confidence in the future of Canada as a market for their materials. This whole venture was brought about after a careful survey of the Dominion as to its consumption of Disinfectants. Last Summer, the General Manager of this company, Mr. V. G. Gibbs, paid a visit to Canada and gave this matter his personal investigation.

This plant is now in operation and will employ when running to full capacity over two hundred people. Its maximum output per annum will be over one million gallons. It is undoubtedly the largest Disinfectant plant in Canada and the only one devoted exclusively to the manufacture of Disinfectants.

The plant comprises an area of over 100,000 square feet. It has taken many months to equip. Machinery of special construction was built in the Pearson's works at Hull, England, and shipped to Canada. Other parts of the plant were built under the supervision of an engineer sent out for the purpose. The plant is now complete and in actual operation.

In the set up of this plant, Pearson Company practically shipped intact from Hull a complete bacteriological laboratory and an analytical laboratory; also a trained bacteriologist and analyst from Pearson's works in Hull has been brought here to supervise the operation of the plant.

The Pearson's Antiseptic Company was first established in 1885 by Mr. William Pearson who is the inventor of Creolin, a disinfectant well known in this country. This is the eighteenth plant established.

ASK YOURSELF

"how easily?" not "how much?" you see

MOST of us have abused our eyes so long and so regularly that the poor things don't protest as they should! But the damage piles up, just the same.
Next time you're engrossed in your newspaper, remember this. To read a newspaper with the same ease with which you'd read a well printed book, requires three times as much light. Next time you sew, remember that though you can see all the finest threads, it's much harder on your eyes than reading, and so requires more light.

The new Science of Seeing has revealed startling facts about the partnership of sight and light. When you know its principles you'll be able to safeguard your own eyesight and that of your family. Good lighting is inexpensive! Let one of our Lighting Experts call on you, and tell you what amounts of light are needed throughout your home. Often the addition of a few EDISON MAZDA LAMP bulbs and possibly a different placing of your portable lamps will work wonders.

Sharks' Teeth and Nose

Prove Valuable to Them
Sharks never lack for razor-sharp teeth. Functional teeth stand erect on the edge of the jaws in a single row. As these teeth become worn and lost, says a writer in the New York Times, the membrane from the inner surface moves over the edge of the jaw, carrying with it fully developed teeth of a new secondary row. At any given time there are behind the functional teeth a series of reserve rows from five to seven in number, lying recumbent one below the other on the inner surface of the jaw, all in reserve, being covered by a broad band of membrane that extends up over them from the bases of the jaws.

These are the terrible weapons which have ability to slice into the shagreen-protected hides of other sharks, when they bite out hunks just as you would bite a piece out of an apple.

But more important to the shark than even this is his ability to smell. Two prominent nostrils in the anterior extremity of the head and covered with skin flaps permit him to scent his food in an uncanny fashion from unbelievable distances.

Eskimos know that when seal blood is allowed to ooze from a chill bladder placed in an ice hole the sharks, no matter how distant, will scent it on the sea currents and come hurrying in a horrible rush. Woe to the juicy sea animal that cannot escape or hide from the shark once it is scented, for the shark tracks down its prey like a buzzard, and with more decisive results.

Handling of Radium Is Done by Nimble Fingers

Though accounts often appear of heroic doctors and investigators who lose limb, and even life itself, in their experiments with the radium used for the cure of such diseases as cancer and other malignant growths, few people know how the danger arises, says Tit-Bits Magazine.

Three different rays are given off by the element. By far the most powerful are the gamma rays, which can penetrate through 8 inches of flesh and bone, as well as through as much as 5 1/2 inches of lead. Continued exposure to the searing power of these rays results in death unless protective measures are taken. The skin becomes burned, and acute blood-poisoning is set up.

But some one must perform the highly-skilled task of filling minute platinum or gold needles, tubes, or stainless steel plaques with small quantities of precious radium salt for use in hospitals and clinics. This is mainly done by girls, many of whom are recruited from match factories on account of the deftness of their fingers. Their wages are high, because they are engaged on the understanding that their employment will be for six months only.

Their task needs a delicate touch, yet they wear heavy gloves and a large apron from throat to well below the knees, both gloves and aprons being impregnated with particles of lead, which cut off a high percentage of the gamma rays.

Bamboo of Great Value

in Its Native Country

In China one may eat bamboo with bamboo chopsticks sitting in a bamboo chair before a bamboo table in a bamboo house, writes a correspondent in Nature Magazine. One may travel in comfort lying on a bamboo mat under a woven screen of bamboo while a boatman pushes his craft along with the aid of a bamboo pole, shouting or whistling now and then for a wind to come and fill the great bamboo sail. In the streets coolies stride by with bamboo carrying-poles supporting bamboo pails filled with water, swerving to avoid the bamboo sedan chairs in which the wealthy citizens ride.

And this is not all. In addition to the objects mentioned and innumerable others that are made from it, we are told that bamboo is greatly admired for its beauty and frequently planted for ornamental purposes.

There are about 200 species of bamboo, which is classed with the grasses despite its tree-like size. Most of them are considered tropical plants because they thrive best in warm countries, but there are varieties that may be grown successfully in districts where zero temperatures are experienced in the winter time. And bamboo has one advantage at least over most other plants and trees used for decorative purposes, in that it does not shed its leaves when cold weather comes.
