COUNTY-WIDE GATHERING TO REORGANIZE LIBERAL ASSN.

Executive Appointed in Session of Party Delegates

PUBLIC MEETING ADDRESSED BY PROMINENT SPEAKERS

An enthusiastic rally at the Court House on Saturday afternoon marked the reorganization of the Liberal Association of Argenteuil County, when delegates from all points in the constituency gathered to elect their Executive Board. Some 110 directors, representing the 49 polling divisions in Argenteuil, balloted for officers, and the following appointments were made:

Honorary Presidents, Hon. McKenzie King and Premier L. A. Taschereau; President, W. D. Graham; Vice-Presidents, A. Brunelle, David Black; Joint Secretaries, L. L. Legault, K.C., and Jas. McGibbon; Treasurer, Arthur Larocque; County Directors, Mayor W. Desjardins, of Huberdeau, J. Milway, of Harrington, G. E. Dansereau, of Grenville, Wm. Watchorn, of Morin Heights, and Dr. J. O. Touchette, of Lachute.

Following this election the meeting was thrown open to the public and prominent Liberal speakers addressed a very large gathering. Among those on the platform were visiting stalwarts of the party, including Dr. Anatole Plante, M.L.A. for Mercier, Vincent Dupuis, M.P. for Laprairie, Dr. L. P. Nelligan of Montreal, Mr. J. H. Malone, barrister, of Hull, and Mr. Lawlor of Verdun.

Resolutions passed by the meeting included a vote of regret and condolence in the passing of the late Georges Dansereau, M.L.A. for this County and a staunch member of the Liberal party, and a message of loyal congratulation to His Most Gracious Majesty King George on the occasion of his Silver Jubilee, the secretary being instructed to send communications accordingly.

Dr. Nelligan, taking the platform, denied any political vein to his remarks. By profession,

The Watchman is indebted to a long-time reader, Mr. C. H. Cottingham, for a copy of the El Paso Daily News giving glimpses and viewpoints from a distant section of the continent. Equally appreciated is Mr. Cottingham's remark, "The Watchman is like a letter from home, and I enclose my bill of thanks in a remittance for subscription."

he said, he was a surgeon—one whose business was to cut up and dissect. With this prelude he proceeded to analyse certain figures in the national administration of the past five years, contrasting them with the previous five years' regime, and leaving conclusions to the intelligence of his listeners.

Dr. Anatole Plante's discourse was in no way camouflaged. Aside from politics, there was a humorous flavor to his remarks, as he drew attention to many deaths among the Liberal ranks, signifying that Liberal leaders were hard workers and

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE MARRIED AT BROWNS'G

JONES — ELLIOTT

A wedding of local interest was solemnized on Saturday afternoon, when Agnes Louisa, daughter of Mrs. Ada Elliott, of Brownsburg, became the bride of Walter Stuart Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Jones of Lachute, the ceremony being performed in Brownsburg United Church in the presence of the immediate family and nearest relatives. The Rev. A. E. Hagar officiated.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her uncle Mr. Leonard Wilson, attired in a blue travelling suit with hat to match, and a large bouquet of Easter lilies, to the strains of the Wedding March played by Miss Edna Reid. While the registers were being signed, Miss Reid also played selections of a nature appropriate to the happy event.

Afterwards the wedding group adjourned to the home of the bride's mother, where a delightful supper was served. The groom's gift to the bride was a grey squirrel fur neck-piece, and to the organist, Miss Edna Reid, a brooch.

After the supper, and accompanied by merry-making friends, the couple took their departure on a short honeymoon and will take up residence in Quebec City. They are followed by the best wishes of their friends, families and acquaintances.

ELABORATE JUBILEE PROGRAMS PROVIDED FOR NATIONAL RADIO

Assisting in celebration of the Jubilee on May 6, the Canadian Radio Commission, with co-operation of the British Broadcasting Corporation, will broadcast more than seven continuous hours of special programs. Commencing at 10.00 a.m. Eastern Standard Time, and lasting until 4.00 p.m., six different programs, three of which will originate in London, will comprise the broadcast.

Featuring colourful festivities as Canada pays homage to her Sovereign, the official Jubilee ceremonies on Parliament Hill will be heard by radio listeners, also bands in the provincial capitals of the Dominion simultaneously playing the same musical selections; a verbal chain of nine lieutenant governors of the Provinces; the proceedings in London and the voice of His Majesty. There will be heard an unusual dramatization called "Canadian Cavalcade", and following it an address to be delivered in London by Rudyard Kipling, and the service in St. Paul's Cathedral in London which will be attended by Their Majesties. During the evening the Commission will present musical programs. At 10.00 o'clock in the morning the official Jubilee ceremonies as they take place on Parliament Hill in Ottawa will be broadcast. The carillon in the Peace Tower and church bells throughout the city, then will be followed by a Royal Salute of twenty-one guns, messages from the Governor General, the Acting Prime Minister, and Hon. McKenzie King.

From 11.00 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. the Commission will present a special broadcast called "Canada in 1935", presenting a panoramic picture of Canadian personalities, places, and affairs. Bands in the capital cities of the Canadian provinces, synchronized in the playing of "O Canada" and "The Maple Leaf Forever", will play in accordance with the time set by a key metronome set beating

BOARD OF TRADE ANNUAL MEETING

Lachute Board of Trade held its Annual Meeting in the Town Hall last Thursday evening, with President A. Larocque in the chair.

Following the reading of minutes, the treasurer's report was given by Mr. F. K. Hind, which showed a balance in the treasury of $228.09.

The following officers were then elected — W. M. Scott, President; L. E. Dumais, Vice-Pres.; J. S. Giles, Secretary; F. K. Hind, Treasurer, with Messrs. C. Tremblay, G. Y. Deacon, W. H. Ayers, E. F. Ayers, A. A. McQuat, C. Stephens, H. E. Desjardins, W. M. Cottingham

The regular meeting of Lachute Town Council was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, presided over by Mayor Dr. Jas. Mason; there were also present — Aldermen C. Durocher, F. Deslauriers, W. J. Deacon, H. Lamarche, O. Laurin, K. McQuat, Jas. McGibbon, Geo. Muir.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Mr. Jos. Constantineau was elected to fill the position of Councillor for centre ward in the vacancy left by Mr. Chabot. Alderman Durocher was elected pro-mayor for the ensuing three months.

Messrs. Geoffroy Bedard, A. Laurin and Jno. Rice were appointed valuers of the town, on motion of Alderman McGibbon, seconded by Alderman Lamarche.

The secretary read a notarial letter from Messrs. Lavery & Legarde concerning complaint of Jos. Desjardins for loss of business owing to the bad state of the street on which his property is built—a street for which, since it has not been officially taken over, no name has yet been given, although it was opened eleven years ago. The Mayor said he had visited this spot and felt there was justice in the complaint; it appeared proprietors had ignored the matter of permits and built irrespective of regulations. The road committee were charged to investigate and report at next meeting, along with a number of other matters brought to their consideration.

Request was received from the Champlain Oil Products for permission to operate on C.P.R. property fronting the Charlebois block on Bethany Street.

Mr. G. Delorme asked for permission to give band concerts in the Memorial Park, as last year, through the sponsorship of Molsons Brewery, but opposition was encountered due

WAR VETERAN DIES SUDDENLY AT STAYNERVILLE

THE LATE WM. RUSSELL KENNEDY

The sudden death of W. R. Kennedy of Stayner, on Monday last, came as a great shock to his many friends and relatives of this community. A son of the late Arthur and Mrs. Kennedy, he was born at Edina 42 years ago. When the call of the Great War came he enlisted with the 148th, and served in France, where unfortunately he was gassed. His recent home was at Stayner, where he was farming. He was married to Miss Ruby Silverman of Dalesville, who with two young daughters and an infant son are left to mourn the loss of a loving and devoted father, together with his mother and two brothers, George of Edina, and Robert of Aylmer.

Honored, beloved and revered, his remains were laid to rest in the peaceful little cemetery at Edina on Wednesday afternoon, following an impressive service in the Dalesville Baptist Church where were gathered a very large assembly, who had come to pay their last tribute of respect. The large attendance and the many tear-dimmed eyes bore silent tribute of the high esteem in which he was held and the loving sympathy felt for the bereaved family.

He was an active member of Argenteuil Masonic Lodge and

"ONE OF THE KING'S GOOD MEN"

One never tires of honoring a sterling, selfless character. In tributes so frequently paid to the federal representative of this County, it stirs us with pride to find leaders and journals, of both parties alike, unstinting in their praise.

The Ottawa Citizen last week carried the following editorial:—

While Premier Bennett's return to active politics is confidently anticipated, nothing definite will apparently be decided until he has returned from London. In the meanwhile, as during the weeks of the prime minister's enforced absence from the House, the ship of state is in the experienced hands of Sir George Perley as acting prime minister.

So many tributes have been paid to Sir George in recent years, they are almost calculated to have the effect of suggesting that he is also reaching the time when he may be expected to retire to the Senate or do as Sir Robert Borden did nearly fifteen years ago. It is related that when Sir Robert decided to retire from active politics in 1920, Sir George Perley expressed some doubt about the wisdom of it personally. He wondered how Sir Robert would ever be able to keep himself occupied after so many years of active public life. Sir Robert has been fully occupied in many avenues of public service outside of politics. It is probable that Sir George Perley would be also, but he is demon-

LAKEFIELD TO HAVE CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S SUMMER CAMP

—Cut, courtesy of Montreal Gazette

Official opening of the new Tyndale Memorial Camp for Crippled and Infirm Children, construction of which will begin shortly at Lakefield, will take place on July 1, according to Miss Smith, secretary-treasurer. The camp is being erected in memory of the late Miss Sarah Agnes Tyndale who devoted her life to the service and education of crippled children, on property donated by Thomas J. Brown, whose son was a pupil of Miss Tyndale for five years.

Many volunteer workers are now appealing to the general public for funds to build the new camp, the objective of the campaign being $10,000. This money is required to cover the cost of the building, furnishings and for food and transportation expenses to allow 300 cripples to be taken to the camp during the nine-week season.

The structure has been designed to house, and to supply the needs of 114 crippled children. Four long wings extend at angles from one large central building. The wings are one-storey high, while the central section of the building will be reserved for the executive offices and reception room. Each wing is divided into a number of well-lighted rooms, each with two beds, and with individual

THE MERRY MONTH OF MAY

May Day came in with the gusto of a March lion, and those clad lightly for an early summer were disconcerted by the cold blasts which greeted them outdoors. There was snow in the air, and the mercury hovered at freezing point yesterday at 8 a.m. . . . A snowfall of seven inches is reported from points in Northern Ontario.

Clean-up Days were taken advantage of to such an extent that scavengers have been kept busy during the early part of this week. East and central town, which were to have been visited on Tuesday after the West-End had been cleared of garbage, were not visited until Wednesday . . . Household refuse, placed on the street for removal, suggests Lachute has been a good market for canned goods during the winter months.

MORE EASY DIVORCES

Divorces should be an easy gag in Germany now, since the Supreme Court at Leipzig rules that "insulting remarks" about Adolf Hitler are sufficient grounds to procure a separation. A man who took exception to his wife's remarks about Hitler has just been upheld in a plea for divorce . . . It is possible the good lady may have jumped out of the frying pan into something worse, for it seems that those who openly dislike the Chancellor often fare unhappily in Germany, and it were unwise for them to relinquish even the protection of a husband.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Make the Camera
Your Traveling Companion

Let your camera be your favorite traveling companion. Your vacation and travel snapshots will serve admirably in illustrating letters you write later to relatives and friends.

A MEMBER of the Snapshot Guild returned recently from a rather long journey after visiting relatives in many cities. "I had a lovely time visiting and enjoyed the traveling," she wrote, "but one thing took a lot of joy out of my trip. I did not take along my camera. No, I didn't forget it. I simply didn't take it and thought no more about it until I reached my sister's home. Then I discovered something. I have been reading the Snapshot Guild, have taken quite a number of good pictures by following instructions, but didn't realize that I had unconsciously developed an eye for pictures," she continued.

"When I arrived at my sister's home—my first stop—I saw unlimited possibilities for interesting, story-telling pictures. I hadn't seen my little niece Jean since she was a month old and here she was toddling around and getting into all kinds of mischief. I could easily have taken six or eight snapshots of this cute youngster doing all kinds of interesting things."

With the coming of warmer weather and more sunshine we are reaching that time of year when nature is discarding her drab, winter clothes for the bright colors of spring and summer. It is a glorious time of the year.

As the sun becomes brighter and the skies clearer, remember that more and better light will be entering the lens of your camera and reaching your film. Your exposures should be somewhat shorter than in the winter.

Suppose, for instance, that on a day in February you took several pictures of your child as she played in the front yard. If you had a folding camera and the day was of average brightness (with sunlight) for that date, you probably set the lens opening at f/8 and the shutter speed at 1/25 of a second, and got a properly exposed negative. Again, suppose you are taking such a picture today. Then what? If the sun is shining brightly and the sky is clear, instead of having the diaphragm set at f/8 and the shutter speed at 1/25 of a second as you did in February, you should do one of two things.

If you leave your lens opening at f/8, your shutter speed should be set at 1/50 of a second. Or, you might set the diaphragm at f/11 and probably get the proper exposure, under average sunlight conditions, with the shutter speed of 1/25 of a second. Personally I recommend the smaller aperture, or lens opening, and the slower shutter speed for the smaller the diaphragm opening the greater the depth of focus. Take advantage of the brighter days. At home and traveling have your camera ready for instant use.

WOOD FAIRIES

I went in search of daffodils Beyond the dark spruce trees, The wind was playing mad-cap tricks, And boughs swayed with the breeze.

Wee velvet wings brushed by my face, No form, though, could I see, But secret whisperings came from 'mong The boughs of those spruce trees.

I could not tell what words were said, What secret pacts were made, I only knew that fairies dwelt Within that forest glade.

THE BIRDS' CONFERENCE

They gathered in the orchard at the back of Bobby Jones' house, in twos and threes, covering the bare branches of the apple trees until they were almost out of sight. Blue Cap the Jay seemed to be traffic cop, for his Hey! he! he! he! sounded so frequently above the chatter of the other birds as he flew from one tree to another.

Bobby and Grace watched them from an upstairs window in great excitement, until Bobby said, "Let's call Bill and Edith to come over and see them!" Not waiting to walk downstairs Bob slid down the bannister and raced to the telephone. "Hey Bill," he shouted, "c'mon over, you and Edie, as quickly as you can and see all the birds in our orchard. Come quietly so you won't scare them off before you can get a look at them."

It was not long until two small figures crept in at the Jones front gate and tinted upstairs to peep out at the birds. "What do you suppose they are all doing and saying?" questioned Edith in an awed voice. "They are having a conference, I am sure," said Mrs. Jones laughingly, "and they're arranging their work for the summer, or perhaps they are assembled in honor of the Jubilee."

"Huh! birds don't work", scoffed Bobby. "They just fly around and have a good time." "You are quite mistaken, my dear", his mother said "our Migratory Bird Officer for Quebec and Ontario says that the economic value of birds throughout Canada amounts to millions of dollars each year, because of the insects, worms, grubs, borers and the eggs of canker worms they destroy. Just listen to that bluebird, I am sure he is telling the gang just how many grass-hoppers he destroyed last year and how hard he is going to work to help keep them under control this year."

"He is making quite an a-do about something", chuckled Bill "but it is that robin that I am watching. He is flying down to the ground every few minutes in the most excited way, just as though he was pouncing on something."

"He must be a demonstrator", Grace said as they all watched the robin. "I expect he is showing them just how he dispatches the cut-worms which form the principal part of his food," said Mrs. Jones. "Without the robins we would have ever so many more cut-worms than we have now."

"What does that funny voiced one live on, Mother?" asked

Grace. "Oh, that is a flicker, dear. He eats ants. Just listen to him, he seems almost to be calling his own name, doesn't he? Flickah, flickah, as he sits gazing up at the nighthawk, who skims about with his eye open for mosquitoes, which he is very fond of." "Oh dear, then I wish he'd catch them all", murmured Edith, "they are such an annoyance at night."

"I was reading something about mosquitoes just the other day", ventured Mrs. Jones. "This article claimed that mosquitoes liked the taste of sweetened water better than human blood. Perhaps if we tried leaving some around, they would not be stinging us."

"Look at that bird with the brown back and the white band across the end of his tail, and the feathers of his head brushed the wrong way. See how he goes after those flies!" cried Bill in an excited voice. "What kind of a bird is he, Mrs. Jones?" "That bird belongs to the Fly-catcher family. He lives principally on flies. See, he has gone back to listen to the conference, but his beady little eyes are on the watch for another fly. He sits and watches for them, and he seldom misses his victim."

"I had no idea that birds were so useful," said Edith, "I just wish I could understand what they are saying to each other."

"Perhaps they are telling each other that the Province of Quebec is a pretty good place to live in. It is true that out of the 41 bird sanctuaries in all Canada, 24 are in this province."

Just then someone down by the creek fired a muskrat and the birds, with a great whirr of wings, flew away, leaving four young folks gazing after them with thoughtful faces.

EQUINE "PANHANDLER" FRIEND OF DOW-TOWN CITY

It has been said that the city panhandlers work certain beats in the down-town sections of big cities; but it remained for "Old Dick" to organize his "beat" so that nothing in the way of "gifts" from the generous hearted is missed. "Old Dick" is probably unique and he has a distinct personality which has won for him the friendship of Toronto's business men and women. These run up into the thousands and range all the way from the humble office boy to the "hard-boiled" business executive, who frowns upon the ordinary panhandler. For "Old Dick" is a Canadian National Express horse and he is not old. Ten years is his age and he has only been on the city streets for three of them. But even though he came from a country farm, he quickly found that by a little scheming life was good for a horse. At each stop he sidles over the sidewalk and thrusts out an inquisitive nose to passers-by. They stopped and the kindly disposed offer him enjoyable tid bits. Soon he collected quite a following. It became the thing to have an apple in the pocket and let his exploring nose ferret it out. Then "Old Dick" would hold the dainty in his teeth and wait for the donator to put it on his hand and feed him in the orthodox way. As "Old Dick" follows a regular schedule in making collections, his movements are known, and now a regular crowd collects at appointed times. Once he made a slight error of judgment and nipped a brass button from a policeman's uniform. It hadn't been that "Old Dick" was "Old Dick" and a privileged panhandler on the streets something unpleasant would have happened. As it was the officer smiled ruefully and "Old Dick's" friends laughed in glee. So each day "Old Dick" enjoys to the full and gets fatter and fatter; and each day he responds with injured dignity to his driver's shout. "Giddap! Shake a leg, you durned old panhandler." Yes, life is good in the city for a horse of individuality who knows its ways.

DOG DOWN WELL

At the risk of his own life, a London policeman went down a disused well, 200 feet deep, to save the life of a starving dog. A faint whimpering attracted the attention of passers-by to the well. It was Rex, a Labrador retriever, which had been missing for a week. Police-Sergeant Garrett volunteered to go down the shaft. He was lowered by a chain held by a squad of men. When he reached the bottom he found the dog, exhausted and savage with terror, but he succeeded in putting it in a sack and bringing it safely to the surface.

"The worst fear of the motor-ing beginner is that he will lose control of his car," says a writer. The only sure method of avoiding this is to keep up the payments regularly.

The Gardens of Europe

By CAPT. F. H. REID

A thoughtful observer, travelling through Great Britain and Continental countries, will find that while there is much to be said for our progress in material things, in other matters, such as art, architecture, horticulture etc., we have much to learn. I do not know the author of the following verse but, I am quite sure, he or she could not have been born on this side of the Atlantic; I may be mistaken, but it seems to me that we are too practical to express sentiments like these.

"If of thy earthly goods thou art bereft
And, from thy meagre store,
Two leaves alone to thee are left;
Sell one — and with the dole
Buy hyacinths to feed the soul."

This is the attitude of many who comprise even the poorer classes in Europe. Flower sellers abound everywhere; at the entrances to tube stations, at corners, where there is heavy traffic and along the curb on the busy shopping streets. Luxurious blooms fill central markets, such as Covent Garden in London and Les Halles in Paris, and are taken from there in baskets on the heads and shoulders of the vendors; the streets leading from the markets being alive with them very early in the morning. These flower girls — as even the oldest of them are called — have their favourite stations and, even amid the rush to and from offices and workshops, the passer-by will hesitate long enough to buy a posy to wear on the frock or in the lapel button-hole. In this country, only the occasional man is so adorned.

The Gardens of Britain

The love of flowers in the sea-girt isles of Great Britain and Ireland impresses the visitor at first glance. Every cottage has, in its front yard, a garden — usually an ornamental one, after the owner's original design. Roses, clematis, honeysuckle and other climbers cover the sides of even the tiniest of houses; the small plots are frequently enclosed with hedges of holly or privet and, in the garden itself, sweet briar is used for divisions in the pattern. Many a time I have been with a party of tourists, motoring through the soft and beautiful English countryside, and have heard their gasps of amazement when first they see the profusion of flowers, with their vivid colouring.

Speaking about colouring, brings up the memory of a typical English garden, with the delphiniums standing as "sentinels of blue" along with the equally tall hollyhocks and foxgloves whose contrasting shades make a gorgeous background for zinnias, poppies, sweet william, phlox, pinks and the myriad varieties of other dwarf plants. The beauty of the grouping and the apparent riot of tints blend together to make a veritable blaze of glory, yet one that is in perfect harmony; plant and shrub and tree make, not a design, but a picture. It may be the neutral tints of a mist-laden atmosphere that makes the British people crave for colour; in no other way is the poetry in their nature better expressed than in their affection for their parks and gardens and all the good things that grow therein. While foreign influence has had something to do with this, there is no doubt that this feeling is inherent and has become part and parcel with their existence.

The English garden is planned for privacy; it belongs to the house and is always, to a certain extent, screened from outside observation. Such a thing as a continuation of gardens, separated by the flimsiest of wire fences, would not be countenanced — another slant to the saying "an Englishman's home is his castle." Oftentimes a little piece of water is included in the garden scheme; the various ways of introducing it range from the formal pond or fountain in chiselled stone or moulded cement, to an attempt to represent nature. These gardens differ according to the shape, size and aspect of the ground and house.

A contributor to the London "Times" stated recently "this is the great difference between gardening in England and in other countries — that in England the cottage garden sets the standard, whereas in other countries the standard is set by the garden of the palace or the villa." But palace and public gardens in Great Britain do not suffer in comparison with those of other countries. The herbaceous borders in Regents Park in London and in the Botanic Gardens of Dublin; the ornamental gardens at Hampton Court Palace and the grounds of Warwick Castle; the sunken gardens off Princes Street in Edinburgh, among other British gardens, are not excelled in any city in the world. Added to this, the many exquisite gardens in private estates give evidence to the skill and devotion of the gardeners in charge.

Public gardens may be put to utilitarian uses; the Royal Gardens at Kew is a notable example. Originally the grounds of old Kew Palace, this park was famous for a botanic garden that had been formed by the Princess Augusta, mother of George III. They were established in 1760 and the valuable collections of Captain Cook and Sir Joseph Banks were accommodated. In 1841 they were established as a State institution and, under the capable direction of Sir William Jackson Hooker, the great botanist, who was the first director, they attained a foremost place among the botanic gardens of the world, a position which has been maintained. The Gardens are now under the Ministry of Agriculture and are of the greatest importance in the domestic and commercial welfare of the Empire, the Directors being the advisors of the Government in all matters concerning plant life. Among the notable achievements of Kew are the introduction of the cinchona (quinine) tree into India from South America, rubber from Brazil into the Malay Settlements and certain forms of vegetation into the barren rocky island of Assension.

Continental Open Spaces

From the flower growing countries of the Netherlands — Holland and Belgium — to Sunny Italy, where oleanders in bloom line the roadways, town planning, as far as park schemes are concerned, is much more advanced than in Canada. In Genoa, the principal seaport of Italy, houses are being demolished and a chain of public open spaces is being projected across the city — one of the finest developments to be found anywhere. Even in Zagreb, the capital of the Province of Croatia in Yugoslavia, a city of only 50,000 population, the sunken gardens, wide boulevards, stately buildings and large

From Kingsville Ontario, Jack Miner, will speak directly from his bird sanctuary. And during the same broadcast, Victoria, British Columbia, will be linked for the first time with the facilities of the Canadian Radio Commission by means of a submarine cable. There, Andrew Alexandra Brown, invalid Canadian poet who is attracting wide attention, will read a special Jubilee poem which she has written for the occasion.

Canadians representative of Dominion industries will express themselves to the national audience. Among them will be Angus Walters, skipper of the world-famous schooner, "Bluenose", who will sail his vessel up from Lunenburg to Halifax to speak on the occasion. From Montreal will be heard the champion farmer of the province of Quebec; from Toronto a famous prospector; from the Prairie Provinces Dr. Seager Wheeler, wheat king of twenty-five years ago; and from Vancouver a pioneer British Columbia lumberman.

Climaxing this kaleidoscope review of Canadian affairs will be interviews with the man on the street by the Commission's inquiring reporter. A microphone will be placed on St. Catherine Street in Montreal. From this vantage point Canadians from coast to coast will feel the heartbeat of Canada as the reporter informally interviews the random passers-by.

Military bands from the cities of Canada will contribute selected numbers. The program will terminate with bands from coast to coast synchronized in "The Maple Leaf Forever."

From 12.30 to 2.05 a broadcast of ceremonies in London, England, will next be heard, and this will be of major importance inasmuch as during it His Majesty will deliver a Jubilee message. Other features to be heard during this period will be a review of His Majesty's twenty-five years of reign; messages from loyal subjects throughout the Empire and from Empire governments.

At 2.05 the Commission will present the "Canadian Cavalcade". The dramatic content of this twenty-five year retrospect will include such items as the burning of the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa in 1916, the death of King Edward, Halley's Comet, and many outstanding happenings of the past twenty-five years.

From 3.00 to 4.00 p.m., there will be broadcast from London an address by Rudyard Kipling, to be followed by a broadcast of thanksgiving services direct from St. Paul's Cathedral in London, which will be attended by Their Majesties.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, May 5th., is "Everlasting Punishment."

The Golden Text is:—"By mercy and truth iniquity is purged: and by the fear of the Lord men depart from evil." (Proverbs 16 : 6)

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"In the meantime, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, inasmuch that they trod one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all. Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy. For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known." (Luke 12 : 1, 2).

Coming shortly to the Rex, a stage classic portraying Montreal's favorite, Norma Shearer, on the screen—The Barretts of Whimpole Street. Supreme acting in this romance of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett.

50 Years Ago.

May 1, 1885.

Commencing Friday and until further notice, Lachute will be considered a flag station for No. 2 express. No. 2 is the Toronto express.

Morning and evening services will be held in St. Simeon's Church, conducted by a clergyman from Montreal.

Friday was a day of excitement around Lachute and district. Flood carried away many bridges here and at St. Andrews. A great many horses, cows and pigs have been drowned.

Due to the severe floods, the presses and equipment of the Watchman Office were transferred to the property of Lar-mouth and Campbell, where the current issue was printed.

The Board of the 11th. Battalion will give a concert in Lachute in honor of the Queen's Birthday.

PAVE for Safety Comfort Permanence

The more you motor over highway and byway, the more you appreciate concrete. For on it you drive with maximum comfort and safety. Its tire-gripping surface reduces the skidding hazard, edges are clearly defined, night-time visibility is excellent. And it means as well, less wear and tear on car and tires and a marked saving in fuel. Concrete paving is permanent. Where it predominates, road budgets can be devoted almost entirely to new mileage. Advocate concrete for highways, streets, lanes, yards and all traffic-carrying surfaces.

EDITORIAL

SUCH ROYALTY AS THESE . . .

A wave of sentiment, such as few jubiliations and fewer calamities have ever caused, will sweep the British Empire on their Majesties' Silver Jubilee next Monday. In true British hearts a glow of warmth will respond to the joy and gratitude they feel—for, to them, royalty has become a lovable institution.

The affection which our sovereign family command is, in these days when monarchs number their days in peril, a thing to be marveled at indeed. Their concern for the interests of their subjects, their familiar contact with the people under their domain, and the personal security which they themselves enjoy abroad from the walls of Buckingham and Windsor—these factors are perhaps identical with the spirit they have sought to foster during their reign. And they have done their duty well, this beloved King and Queen—as their forbears have done and their descendants are doing also. It is therefore with real satisfaction that Britain and the Dominions celebrate this twenty-fifth anniversary of the accession of King George and Queen Mary. Such sovereigns as these are a boon of fealty among a scattered people.

It ill befits the sentiment of this day to waste thought on the dissenting elements. But there are some in our midst who value these attachments but little, having no love for the ties of empire and "servility" to rulers. This must not, however, be taken as a discredit to Canada as a Dominion, for such opinions are by no means representative. Upon those who harbour them, of course, they are a sad reflection. They look back upon an era of enmity between Great Britain and this territory in its infancy. They point to young lives sacrificed at the altar of empire allegiance. But they reckon not the generations of progress, Canada's growth to nationhood, under unity with a mighty empire; they count not the wealth the Mother Country has invested, the rights she has bequeathed and the laws she has given us—nor the immense naval and military strength bonded to protect us from the threats of foreign forces. In the words of a neighboring exchange, published only last week, "Canada has her hands full guarding the shores of the St. Lawrence, without mixing herself in the troubles of England". These words (as we translate them now from memory) reveal how small are the intellects which revolt against imperial ties—for they have little conception of Canada's helplessness. An army manned from a mere ten millions population, and a navy of two small vessels, are little enough material on which to boast our independence!

—But the rebuke is untimely. . . . In the sheer gladness of a people demonstrating their affection toward true sovereignty, it may be that disgruntled factions will feel some sense of shame and futility. At least, to the vast numbers of loyal Canadian subjects, the approaching Jubilee will be an occasion of profound joy.

strating at the moment that he can be quite happy in harness—even in such strenuous years as Premier Bennett's administration has passed through since 1930.

Whatever Sir George Perley may decide about carrying on after the prime minister's return from London, the Canadian people may well unite in honoring him, irrespective of party, as a fine Canadian, one of King George's good men and true who has lived up to the highest tradition of knighthood.

B. C. CITY DECREES "CURFEW" FOR DOGS

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs
Specially written for The Watchman
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, April 30th.—Are the Ottawa agreements heading into new controversial storms? Dispatches from the Old Country suggest that the British are highly dissatisfied with the way they have worked out and that Premier Bennett is going to be told so in plain terms. It is difficult for an independent observer to distinguish sometimes between political propaganda and general opinion. We have been so repeatedly told on this side that the Ottawa agreements saved this country from bankruptcy that it is a little difficult to visualize serious discontent on the other side of the water.

Two facts stand out above all the welter of opinion, however:

1. Canada's sales to the United Kingdom as a result of the Ottawa agreements have risen far above her increased purchases from the Mother country. We have got the best of the bargain so far.

The British farmer and agricultural producer is now anxious to go on to the second stage in protection. The first consisted of levies against the foreign producer, with Empire farm products free. Now the British producer wants duties against Empire products, and higher duties against foreign products. As that is the kind of tariff structure Canada has against British goods, we cannot very consistently oppose such a step. But what becomes of our great 'free market' in Britain then?

WHERE GOES MR. STEVENS?

During the lull in parliamentary activities, there has been much talk about Hon. H. H. Stevens and the part he is to play in the general election. The rank and file of the Conservative party are anxious to have Stevens' dynamic crusading force with them for the battle, but how to do it with Messrs. Bennett, Cahan, Sir George Perley and Matthews still in the cabinet is a puzzle. Many of the Conservatives would be willing to exchange Mr. Cahan for Mr. Stevens. The prime minister was approached by one of the Board of Strategy just before he left for the Old Country to see if he would not consider a reconciliation with the ex-minister of trade and commerce. The answer is said to have been "No."

The whole Conservative campaign really hinges on this question: Will Premier Bennett be permitted by his physicians to come back, and lead the forces? If not, is it not almost certain that Hon. Harry Stevens will be sought to wave the banner of radical reform?

THE WHEAT SITUATION

With July wheat having touched 90 cents at Winnipeg, some people are talking as though John I. MacFarland was out of the woods, and that the holding policy of the government had been completely vindicated. For the sake of the western farmer, one can wish this were so. No use, however, blinking at certain facts:

The Corn Trade of Liverpool, representing the millers of that country, has taken an official stand criticising the policy of John I. MacFarland, and arguing that we have violated the Ottawa agreements and should forfeit our six-cent-a-bushel preference.

"Visible wheat" meaning stocks in store, aside from farmer's bins, is seven million bushels higher than it was a year ago, amounting to about 220 million bushels.

In order to get our present stocks down to a normal carry-over it would be necessary to ship 13 million bushels a week for the remainder of the crop year. As we have only averaged about three million in the first 40 weeks of the year, we should have to "go home" to come anywhere near that figure. More likely we'll be fortunate to ship five million a week, which would leave us with a carry-over about three times the normal size.

The spring wheat prospects both in Canada and the United States are better than they were a year ago.

On the constructive side, Argentine and Australia have pretty well "cleaned bins" and Europe is coming back into the market.

Are we heading toward state medicine? The federal government is at least prepared to have a thorough study made, in co-operation with the provinces. The Minister of Pensions and National Health announced such a policy last week.

What became of the reorganization of the whole old age pension set-up in Canada which was forecast at the beginning of the session? Looks as though it is off for the meantime.

doors opening onto large screened verandahs.

As far as can be ascertained, from local sources, the campsite will be on the north side of Long Lake, about 1½ miles east of the highway. The property is known in the locality as the Brown Farm, and it extends over an area of 100 acres.

Officers of the camp are:—Honorary patrons—His Worship Camillien Houde, C.B.E., Thomas J. Brown, Dr. J. C. Favreau, Dr. G. Caisse, H. E. Ormandy; honorary president, Mr. Justice E. Fabre Surveyer; president, W. R. McLeod; honorary vice-president, Dr. N. T. Williamson; vice-president, T. H. Wilson; secretary-treasurer, Miss Gwynnevere Smith; honorary legal advisor, Frank Genest; and honorary auditor, A. M. Shaw.

MATTERS OF COMMUNITY INTEREST DISCUSSED AT B. of T. MEETING

ham, F. Lavigne, H. Lamarche, P. Valois and J. Belanger as directors.

It was moved by Mr. Geo. Y. Deacon, seconded by Mr. L. E. Dumais, that a communication be forwarded to the Department of Roads, urging them to straighten out the St. Jerome highway at the Mirabel Road junction, keeping the route on the north side of the track for about 8 acres and thus avoiding two level railroad crossings.

A profitable hour was spent in the discussion of many matters of general interest, and it was decided to hold the annual banquet some time in May.

Mr. A. Larocque received a hearty vote of thanks for the services he had rendered during his term of office as President.

Mr. J. F. Lavigne suggested a celebration of some kind for the 6th of May for the King's Jubilee, and the secretary was asked to confer with the Mayor. On behalf of the Lachute Brass Band, Mr. Lavigne also assured that their services would be gladly given for the occasion.

MEETING OF LACHUTE TOWN COUNCIL

to the display of Molson signs in connection, this being considered as detracting from the dignity of the bandstand and the park.

The Pressure Pipe Co'y of Montreal, and the Standard Clay Products, represented by Messrs. R. McArthur and Stewart McFaul respectively, were anxious to supply the town with sewer pipes of which a large installation seems to be in prospect, judging from the number of petitions for different streets.

Mr. H. Desjardins appeared with the purpose of securing his supply of wood, and Messrs. Laurin, Lamarche and McGibbon were ordered to negotiate the deal.

Fire-chief Deacon reported the Brigade had been increased from 10 to 20 men, according to requirements of the Fire Commission, and requested that the grant of $300 be increased accordingly. This was left for further consideration. Ald. McGibbon enquired about the reduction of fire insurance rates, and the secretary reported they were awaiting a visit of the Fire Inspector.

CHORAL CONCERT DREW WARM APPROVAL

CREDITABLE EFFORT, TO AID CHOIR FUNDS

An unusually pleasant evening rewarded those in attendance last Thursday at the Lachute United Church choir concert. Choruses, part songs and quartets by members of the choir were interspersed by solos, recitations and character portrayals by two talented Montreal artists, and made a varied program which drew warm applause.

The visiting artists were Mr. J. J. Russell, familiar to radio listeners as a tenor soloist, also member of the Isaac Stearns male quartet, and Miss Betty Tavor, an elocutionist of rare ability. In pathos and humor, Miss Taylor gripped her audience with the sentiment of her pieces, and her eloquence held a power seldom displayed in so youthful an artist. Mr. Russell, well known through his radio associations, sang selections in varying moods, including ballads, classical and southern songs. With the rich tenor range and volume at command, the voice was remarkable for its complete control and clarity.

Home talent came forward at its best in selections by the church choir—songs and anthems which gave evidence of painstaking practice. Two successful numbers were sung by the female quartet, comprising Mrs. K. McQuat, Mrs. R. A. Giles, Mrs. C. Duncan and Miss Janet McQuat. A pleasing feature of these items was the prelude by Miss Taylor, who read out the words of each composition.

Rev. W. B. Rosborough, who was chairman of the evening, concluded with a word of appreciation to the visitors, and commended the work of the choir members under leadership of Mr. Chas. Duncan.

Mr. J. J. Russell was accompanied in his selections by Miss Russell, while Miss Ruth Todd, organist of the church, was accompanist for the choral pieces.

Mrs. T. Christie was hostess to the choral group and their guests at a supper following the concert. Gross proceeds of the evening amounted to around $65.

Old Resident of Dalesville and Louisa Died

There passed away at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morrow, Saturday, April 27th, at Dalesville, one of the district's oldest and most respected residents, Mr. Peter Conlin, in his 82nd year. Mr. Conlin was second son of the late Lochlan Conlin and Jane Driscoll, and was for many years a farmer of Louisa, Que.

Mr. Conlin moved to Dalesville some ten years ago, where he resided until his death.

One of a family of thirteen, he leaves to mourn his loss one sister, Mrs. Ellen Vallee, all the other members having predeceased him years ago. The funeral was held Monday at 2 p.m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morrow, and was largely attended. Interment took place in Dalesville Cemetery. His Louisa friends of long standing acted as pallbearers, namely Messrs. Hiram and Syria Watchorn, Guy and Gilbert Boyd, Ed. Cleary and Anthony Hall.

Among Rex Theatre bookings (published on page 5) special attention is drawn to the Gold-Diggers of 1935, a spectacular production which commands all the resources of film-dom and presents the prettiest of girls and the finest stars in song and dance yet assembled on the screen. In more dramatic vein, We Live Again offers special appeal to lovers of the romantic and classical; this picture is based on Tolstoy's Resurrection, one of the best literary efforts of this author.

European Light-Weight to Fight Here

A boxing bout of more than usual interest will be staged here toward the end of May for fans of the fistic art, when an appearance is arranged for Charles (Kid) Formosa, Europe's fly-weight champion, at the Lachute Arena. Formosa is the only Maltese boxer, a college graduate with B.A. after his name, and speaks 5 languages; he starts a tour in Canada and the States under management of Charlie Colthorpe, well known in Lachute through his dance and show activities in recent seasons.

This is the first of Kid Formosa's bookings, and it is hoped to match him here with Young Lionel of Toronto—and no other than Al Foreman, holder of the Lonsdale Belt, emblematic of the British Empire light-weight title, as referee for the occasion. Other contests will complete an interesting bill, to be announced in detail later on.

COUNTY-WIDE MEETING LIBERAL ASSOCIATION

Mr. Malone was a spirited speaker, who like Dr. Lawlor and fellow Liberals on the platform, commanded an enthusiastic hearing. Hon. Vincent Dupuis, as representative of a rural constituency, said much to interest the farmers among the audience. Criticism of the Tariffs and the Marketing Board as effecting the production of grain, referred to by Dr. Nelligan, was followed up by Mr. Dupuis as he reviewed the unsatisfactory results of the grain and hay embargo, and the still worse effects on butter and dairy produce markets which had followed the present government's policies in relation to agriculture.

A motion of thanks to the speakers, voiced by Mr. L. L. Legault and seconded by Mr. Black, drew hearty response from the assembly. In view of dissensions among the party here in recent months, it was considered the meeting had instilled new vigor and placed the County Liberal Association on a well organized footing.

Americans' Greatest Battle

Over 1,200,000 American troops took part in the Meuse-Argonne offensive, which lasted from September 26 to November 11, 1918. This battle has been described in an official government account as the greatest ever fought by American troops and as ranking with the greatest battles in the history of the world. Statistics show that the battle lasted 47 days, employing in the American attack 1,200,000 men, 2,417 guns, 4,214,000 rounds of ammunition, 840 airplanes, 324 tanks. One hundred fifty villages and towns were liberated, 16,069 prisoners taken, 498 artillery pieces and 2,664 machine guns were captured. The American casualties were 120,000.

THE HABIT OF FAILURE

When children continue to do poorly at school possibly it is because they have been allowed to build up the habit of failure. Most times when a child begins to fail in a subject the only thing that happens is that the child is scolded. And when did scolding ever accomplish anything in improving a child's knowledge? When the child first begins to fail, something should be done about it. The first thing to do is to build up confidence. The child knows that it has failed and because of the discouragement of failure is apt to get worse and worse. The person who can do good work with a background of failure is a rarity. Scenes like this will occur. A child will come home with a mark of 52 let us say, in a subject in which he is not very proficient. He will hear, "You only got 52 marks! You ought to be ashamed of yourself. How many did Jack get? Well if he can get 70 there is no reason why you can't." And so on, ad infinitum. In another home, with a wiser mother, the scene may be something like this. "You got 52 marks. Well, that is not so bad in one of your poorest subjects. It is three marks more than last time. That shows you are improving a little. If you work a little harder this month perhaps you will get even better marks." The first mother makes the child feel that it has failed. The other mother encourages the child and gives him a hope of doing better. To work against a feeling of failure is a heart-breaking job, so build up a feeling of hope, being careful not to over-do it and induce false confidence. Then see if your children will not do better work.

FOOD FADDISTS

It is a queer thing but people who become food faddists feel called upon to save the world and convert all they come in contact with to their way of eating. There is really no necessity to be faddy over food. Some say we must eat no meat. Yet our digestive apparatus is equipped to digest meat and is not a lengthy one like that of herbivorous animals. Some say we must eat no starch with our meat. Yet proteins and starches are not digested at the same time nor in the same place. Some think for the salvation of our health we must eat vast quantities of roughage in general and bran in particular. Undoubtedly we need roughage and bulk and many people do not get sufficient, but there is reason in all things. Too harsh roughage may injure the lining of the intestinal tract. We could supply most of our bulk in a bland condition. We need a certain amount of raw food but we do not need to go to extremes over it. Undoubtedly some of the food fads do good. Frequently it is a sort of faith cure. The person expects them to be a help and because of this mental condition he is helped. Because a certain diet suits your peculiar condition is no reason why it may suit your next door neighbor. But you cannot make the food faddists see that and they go about boring everyone within reach by their constant talk of food and diet.

MEASURING A HALF-SPOONFUL

Do you know how to measure a half-spoonful? It is a simple thing to do and yet so few people do it accurately. First fill your spoon and level it off with a knife. Then divide it in half lengthwise. This will give you an accurate measure which you would not get if you divided it crosswise.

COMBINE FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Do you ever combine fruits and vegetables in a salad? We were out for Sunday tea and had a most delicious salad. It combined fruits and vegetables. Asparagus (canned), wedges of tomato, sliced pineapple and bananas were arranged on head lettuce. Salted peanuts were passed and made a valuable contribution both as to flavour and nutriment. This friend said that she frequently combined tomatoes and bananas in a salad. We have tried it several times since and everyone

OTTAWA LADY RECALLS OLD TIMES FOR THE JUBILEE

Nearly 100 years of age, yet retaining all her mental faculties, Mrs. Elizabeth Abbott, of Ottawa, is to take part in the Canadian Radio Commission's broadcast of the King's Silver Jubilee on May 6. Mrs. Abbott will be prominently featured when she converses with her 13-year old great-grandniece, Betty Brown, also of Ottawa, in an exchange of greetings during the program, "Canada in 1935", which will be heard from 11.00 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. EST., over the coast-to-coast network. They will be representative of Canada's oldest and youngest citizens.

When making tests for the broadcast, Mrs. Abbott whose voice is particularly suitable for radio purposes, told Commission officials that, although she cannot always recognize faces, she can see "a bright pin lying on the floor." Laughing heartily at pleasant memories, Mrs. Abbott displayed keen interest in the tests and was insistent on knowing exactly how satisfactory she was.

Mrs. Abbott, whose memory recalls many outstanding happenings of the past half century, gave descriptions of the disastrous fire that destroyed the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa in 1916. Mrs. Abbott also recalled seeing King Edward, as the Prince of Wales, as he looked from the windows of the old Victoria Chambers.

"I hope that my message to the people of Canada will be one of hope for as long and happy a life as my own, with all prosperity and no war, or anything else to disturb," she said, her eyes dimmed with tears of happiness.

Mrs. Abbott was born at Ottawa on the Richmond Road, the daughter of George and Elizabeth Bayne. She lived for many years in Stittsville. Her husband was William Abbott and they were married for 71 years.

STRANGER HER SON

Calling a gas man to make some repairs in her home, Mrs. David Fraser, of Somerville, Mass., thought the looks and voice of the man were so familiar she asked about his past. She discovered he was her own son, Walton, who had left their home in Canso, Nova Scotia, 30 years ago and had not been heard from since.

"Well, since you seem to love being miserable, you can be glad you've got so many things to make you miserable!" So said Pollyanna to John Pendleton, who had not smiled for twenty years. See Pollyanna, in Lachute Auditorium, May 3, presented by Lachute Womens' Institute.

seems to like it. Changes in salads are rather hard to get just now so you may like this one, too.

CHEESE BISCUITS

2 cups flour
2 tablespoons butter
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt about 2/3 cup milk
1/2 cup grated cheese

Sift dry ingredients. Rub in shortening. Add cheese and milk enough to make a soft dough. Roll lightly, cut into biscuits and bake in a hot oven of 450 degrees for about 15 minutes. These are delicious buttered and served for afternoon tea. If necessary they can be made earlier and reheated in the oven.

RHUBARB JELLY

2 tablespoons gelatine
2 1/2 cups hot rhubarb and juice
3/4 cup cold water
2 tablespoons lemon juice (sweetened to taste)

Soak the gelatine in the cold water for five minutes. Add to the hot rhubarb and stir until dissolved. Add lemon juice. Pour into a wet mould and chill. Serve with whipped cream.

History of the Canadian Mail Service

The Canadian Post Office, as I explained in my former letter, did not come into being as an independent organization. It was but an extension into new-acquired territories of a system which had been some time in operation, and some of my readers have asked if I could not go back to earlier times of the older colonial postal system. Now, to describe the relation between the colonial postal system and the general post office in London, to which it was subordinate, would be an undertaking indeed, and most interesting, but to do this it would be necessary to make examination of the records of the general post office, London, the British Museum, the journals of the colonial legislators, and Franklin's account book in the Public Library, Boston.

I believe the first notice of a post office in North America appears in the records of the general court of Massachusetts Bay for the year 1639 when the colony was quite young. In view of the distracted state in England, these mails were awaited with double anxiety.

King Charles was at this time in the course of his great experiment in absolute government, which ten years before had driven these people from their homes, and ten years later was to carry him to the block.

Some effective arrangement for exchange of correspondence was necessary between New and Old England. Until 1639 there was none that could be called regular except that which was conducted by the sea captains, and where this scheme failed there was no-one in America charged with the duty of receiving and distributing letters; and consequently, many letters were misdelivered and many not delivered at all. It was to provide a remedy for this state of things that an ordinance was passed on the 5th of November, 1639.

By this ordinance public notice was given that all letters from beyond the seas were to be taken to the tavern of Richard Fairbank, who engaged that they should be delivered according to their address. He was to receive a penny for every letter delivered, and was to answer for all miscarriages due to his neglect.

The ordinance of 1639, besides giving directions for the receipt and delivery of letters coming from beyond the seas, also authorized Fairbank to provide for despatch of letters posted at his house, and addressed to places abroad, but the ordinance laid down carefully that "no man shall be compelled to bring letters unless he please." In those times anything presenting the appearance of a monopoly found small favor. The jealousy with which claims of exclusive privilege were viewed, was heightened to the point of hatred during the struggle for constitutional government, by the fact that trading monopolies, granted to courtiers, not only enhanced unreasonably the price of many necessities of life, but also furnished the means by which the King pursued his illegal and arbitrary course in defiance of parliament.

From 1635 to 1646 the sole right to convey and deliver letters was conferred upon the post office in England. This right was contested in the courts and in the latter year was pronounced illegal; and prior in 1642 the Long Parliament dealt the post office monopoly a blow. But in 1656 Cromwell again conferred the monopoly of conveyance on the post office, and this was confirmed after the Restoration in 1660; and that monopoly of the post office has remained since that time, though it was never popular in the North American colonies, but was regarded with indifference until the War of the Revolution.

In the calendar of state papers, America and West Indies from 1661 to 1668, it is noted that on June 1st., 1663, the King wrote the governor of Barbados that it had become of daily complaint that there was no safe means of communication with Virginia, New England, Jamaica, Barbados, and other colonies in America; and he directed to establish a post office within Barbados and the Caribbean Islands. The rates of postage were to be the same as those fixed for England by the act of 1660, and the post office was to be under the control of the Post-master General of England to whom the accounts were to be sent, and nothing seems to have been done to establish a post office in either Virginia or New England. In Virginia it would not appear that the legislature at this period took any steps towards providing a place of deposit and delivery, for letters passing between colonists and their correspondents beyond the seas; but this want was not much felt in the exchange of letters by means of trading vessels which visited Jamestown. New York was a recent acquisition, having passed from the Dutch to the English in the year 1664. The Dutch, the former possessors, had an arrangement with Amsterdam, similar to those in force in New England. In 1652, the Dutch West Indian Company informed their Director General in New Amsterdam, having observed that "private parties give their letters to this or that sailor or free merchant, which letters to their great disadvantage are often lost through neglect, remaining forgotten in boxes or because one or other removes to another place." They had a box hung up in their place of meeting, in which letters might be deposited for despatch by the first vessel sailing; and they directed that the same step might be taken in the New Netherlands.

For the above I am indebted to my late friend, Mr. Wm. Smith, some-time secretary of the Post Office Department of Canada, who in his lifetime promised to come to Argenteuil and give a lecture on the same subject concerning which I write.

par would put some of our cities to shame. The Borgese Gardens and fine open squares of Rome, with their numerous fountains, are not the least of the glories to be seen in the Eternal City; the tiergarten in Berlin, that magnificent tree-filled area, laid out after the fashion of a hunting seat; the Tuileries Gardens, with their flower-beds and statuary in the centre of Paris and the gardens adjoining the Ringstrasse in Vienna—these and many other European places of rest and recreation have distinctive charms of their own.

One must concede that we owe much in park planning to the autocratic rulers of days gone by. Perhaps this is due to the fact that there was one dominant mind, that conceived an idea and was able to carry it out, without the interference of different sets of jealous politicians, who could see no good in any work initiated by their predecessors. Be that as it may, the immense grounds of Versailles were carried through to completion by the instructions of one monarch, Louis XIV—these have been the model from which many famous gardens—Schonbrunn in Vienna, Nymphenberg in Munich, Sansouci at Potsdam and others—have been copied.

Hotel Gardens

Now and again you will find exquisite gardens in connection with some of the fine hotels—I call to mind a number of such which seem deserving of special mention. For instance, the lovely garden of the Hotel de Russie in Rome, luxurious with tropical vegetation; winding walks and steps leading up the side of the Pincian Hill; here and there a piece of marble statuary; a tiny waterfall, making a pleasant tinkling sound in the midst of all this leafy splendour. The street side of this interesting hotel gives no inkling of the beauties within. Another fine hotel garden, although of a different type, is in the grounds of the Diana Majestic Hotel at Milan. These are more formal in character and are intended for amusement, a huge stage being cunningly set in the garden, presenting an unusual effect when occupied by performers. Two other hotels, with gardens in their own grounds, are the Carlton Tivoli at Lucerne and the Grand at Kitzbuhel in Austria. These charming flower parks are on the public side of the hotel property yet are an integral part of the institution.

Some hotels, realizing that ground space is valuable, have outstanding roof gardens—two such are located in Naples and Madrid. Other hotels are conveniently situated with their doors opposite magnificent public parks. Some of the finest of this type are to be found in Brussels, Belgium; Nice and Vichy in France; Spezia in Italy; and Prague in Czechoslovakia. One of London's principal hotels has its own park in a square across the street. Like similar squares in London, this garden is surrounded by an iron fence and entrance is only obtained by those having a key to the gate.

This brings to mind the fact that most of the large parks and gardens in the great cities overseas are enclosed and the public is excluded at a certain hour each night. One custom, connected with a great Paris park, is the signal by the bugler, notifying occupants of park benches and others that it is time for the closing of the gates.

Manitoba's two per cent wage tax, which is collected by employers from their workers, brought $1,543,400 into the provincial treasury last year, and in addition the personal income tax netted $892,000.

NO SUCH DEPARTMENT

People approach the City Hall for all kinds of things, to obtain contracts, to be let off on traffic offences, to be excused from paying water bills, etc., but it remained for Lieut. Lepine, guard and guide at the Montreal City Hall, to be asked "for the office in the building where separations were granted to married people."

Some years ago, it is noted, a newly married couple entered the same City Hall, bedecked with wedding finery, bouquet and ribbons, and asked Lieut. Lepine for a room in "Hotel de Ville", to which they had been directed by some wag whom they had asked for a good hotel.

Doctor: "You should take a bath before you retire." Patient: "But, doctor, I don't expect to retire for another ten years yet."

SON OF LATE REV. JAS. FRASER, CUSHING, COMPOSED JUBILEE HYMN

J. M. Fraser, of Picton, Ont., composer of Wakelin, a hymn in honor of the Silver Jubilee, is a son of the late Rev. James Fraser of Cushing. The tune was composed for another hymn the melody itself being Mr. Fraser's, to which he adapted the following words as a Jubilee Hymn. Copy of the music is also in possession of The Watchman, but was received too late for publication.

WAKELIN

HYMN FOR SILVER JUBILEE

We thank Thee, Lord, for present good,
For aid in darksome days;
For unity and neighborhood
Pray we as well as praise.
Around the world one song we sing—
God Save, God Bless, The Queen,
The King!

In time of joy and jubilee
Give, Lord, protecting care;
Prosper our statesmen o'er the sea,
Our pilots of the air.
God grant our King long spared be
To wield the sceptre of the free.

The future and the past is one
To Thee who still doth hold
The people blest which 'neath the sun
A meekness great unfold:
With truth, love, peace and righteousness
Do Thou, O God, the nations bless.

O God to Thee true thanks we raise
For blessings of their reign;
In peace, joy, health and length of days
Them, Thou, O Lord, sustain.
Around the world one song we sing—
God Save, God Bless, The Queen,
The King!

War story in brief: Preparations, rations, reparations.

The wife of a small farmer sold her surplus butter to a grocer in a near-by town. On one occasion the grocer said:
"Your butter was underweight last week."
"Now fancy that," said Mrs.
Farmer, the baby mislaid my weight that day, so I just used the pound of sugar you sold me."

Marking the Silver Jubilee celebrations of the coronation of King George V. to be held this year, the Canadian Pacific Railway has issued a strikingly handsome folder covering the main events of the function from the King's drive to St. Paul's Cathedral on May 6 and ending with the Lord
Mayor's Show on November 2.

A beautiful new menu card for the King's Jubilee celebrations has been designed by the Canadian Pacific Railway to be used in all the company's hotels from coast to coast, on ships of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets and on world cruise ships. Its front cover is done in gold with the Canadian Coat of Arms in color at the top and the Canadian Pacific crest at the bottom. The back cover, also done in gold, shows a train in the Rockies, the Chateau Frontenac at Quebec City and the Empress of Britain. A maple leaf below the Coat of Arms and a space on the back for autographs completes the menu card.

standing fetes of the United States, will this year show many embowered in roses at that time of year.

Addressing an audience of more than a thousand representative business men at Toronto recently, E. W. Beatty, K.C., LL.D., chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stated that the Canadian National Railway system was never an honest experiment in public ownership and that it was neither more nor less than a sad accident. This problem, he said, constitutes Canada's most difficult problem and threatens national solvency.

Safety Pin Is Ancient

Safety pins, instead of being a modern invention, as most people suppose, are so old that their origin is lost in the midst of antiquity, says Pathfinder Magazine. A very beautiful specimen was dug up in Sweden, the workmanship of which was quite rich. The ancient safety pins were made of bronze—an alloy of copper and tin. It was at a comparatively late date that men learned how to make a fire hot enough to smelt iron and make steel.
Most of our safety pins are still made of brass.

owners have made and clothed all its

a month and there is no charge for admission, a collection being taken during the performance.

LACHUTE, QUE. MAY 9th., 1935.

No. 19

QUEBEC PROVINCE HAS 18 TOLL BRIDGES

There are some forty ferries operating in the Province of Quebec, fourteen of them being on the Ottawa River, between Quebec and Ontario, twelve on the St. Lawrence River, and six on the Richelieu. Toll bridges in the Province number eighteen, there being four across the St. Lawrence, with the remaining fourteen spanning ten of the main rivers in the Province. A nineteenth bridge, which will link the Island of Orleans to the North Shore of the St. Lawrence, will be open to traffic about the middle of July next.

On seven of the ten bridges owned by the Province, the Government has recently established a uniform tariff, by means of books of tickets which will be sold at $5.00 per book of 50 tickets. These tickets are not valid on the bridges between Lachute and Montreal, namely at St. Eustache and Ste. Rose.

A much needed improvement is receiving attention this week. The C. P. R. station yard, which has been in a bad state causing discomfort to liveries and drivers approaching the depot, is being covered with cinders to fill the depressions and level the thoroughfare.

UNDERWRITERS' OFFICIAL EXPRESSES APPROVAL OF FIRE SERVICE

NOTABLE IMPROVEMENT IN FIRE PROTECTION

Inspector Price, of the Fire Underwriters' Association, expressed satisfaction with Lachute's fire service during a visit here Tuesday and Wednesday for the purpose of making a report on local conditions.

Mr. Price made inspection of the town's water system, taking pressures at different hydrants. He issued a summons to the fire brigade, in the nature of a test call, the results of which were a distinct credit to the local force. Only three minutes after the summons had been phoned in, the brigade had turned out and were on the scene of the call, at the Town Hall, with hose connected, all ready to go into action. Even Mr. Price conceded this was excellent work, and speedy action had been put forward in a brief space of three minutes. Twelve firemen joined the truck in answer to the call.

The visiting inspector remarked with approval, that the new water main installation on Brownsburg Road had been constructed with 8-inch pipe. Chief Geo. Y. Deacon had urged the use of this gauge for better fire protection, in preference to the proposed 4-inch main.

Altogether, a remarkable improvement was noted in conditions since the last Underwriters' inspection eleven years ago, and it is confidently hoped Mr. Price's report will result in reduced insurance rates within the town limits.

FORD PUTS $4,000,000 MORE INTO EQUIPMENT

Henry Ford, who announced a few months ago that "the depression is over as far as the Ford Motor Company is concerned," added a few more millions of dollars last week to the company's investment in production equipment, with the letting of contracts for new additions to the plant.

VISITOR COMMENTS ON UNSIGHTLY STRUCTURE

SPEAKER AT W. I.

Familiarity breeds indifference, and certain structures which have been an eyesore in Lachute for many years have been accepted, either as inevitable or as quite the proper thing. It is when an outsider remarks upon these sights that one is reminded there should be an immediate adjustment, in the general interests of the town.

Mr. F. Rowe of Ste. Anne de Bellevue was guest speaker on Tuesday before the Lachute Women's Institute, in the High School. As an amateur horticulturist, Mr. Rowe has won recognition, and his seasonable topic drew approval from the gathering. In speaking of horticulture he treated matters from a civic angle, and made recommendations which showed his personal knowledge of Lachute and its precincts.

MASTERLY PERFORMANCE BY LACHUTE PIANIST

UPHELD BY LEADING ARTISTS IN MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT

The public's anticipation of a first class entertainment was well fulfilled in Miss Juliette Rodrigue's program staged in the Auditorium Tuesday evening, on behalf of the Lachute Catholic Cemetery funds.

The hall was well filled to hear Miss Rodrigue, reputed pianist, and her guest artists from Montreal, who provided a musical performance of rare merit. The visiting performers were Mme. Annette LaSalle-Leduc, violinist, Mons. Roland Leduc, cellist, Mlle. Germaine Bruyère, soprano, and Mons. Jean Leduc, piano accompanist.

The contributions were classical throughout, arranged with a perfect balance and variety, which kept the audience fascinated till the final chord of an instrumental trio which concluded the program.

Miss Juliette Rodrigue's ability and technic at the keyboard have met the exacting demands of European conservatories. No local commendation could do justice to her powers, but a representative audience such as heard her on Tuesday evening will heartily affirm the pleasing effect of her performance. The same can be said of her associate artists, who were all obviously masters of the art which they expressed.

The program covered works by composers of the French, Spanish, English, German and Italian schools. Mlle. Germaine Bruyère, soprano soloist, proved herself equally accomplished both in French and English, and like the instrumental selections played during the evening, her songs ranged from a profound to a lighter vein among classical works.

Encore numbers were added in response to the public demand. Hearty applause, and several tributes of floral bouquets, betokened appreciation both for the performance itself and for Miss Rodrigue's tireless effort on behalf of a worthy cause.

Gross proceeds of the evening, at this early date, are estimated in the neighborhood of $200.

In last week's report of the County Liberal Association gathering, the name of Mr. W. A. Bradley was inadvertently omitted from the county directors in attendance.

SOFT DRINKS TAXATION WITHDRAWN AT QUEBEC

Hon. R. F. Stockwell's taxation on soft drinks, soda water and fruits used in ice cream, was withdrawn by the Minister in the Legislative Assembly last week.

Members of the Opposition burst into applause at the announcement.

"I never saw such enthusiasm before as regards soft drinks," commented Premier Taschereau. He added that the Government had been justified in bringing in the legislation, but that study of the matter had shown that it would require an army of inspectors to carry out the law, the soft drink manufacturing plants being distributed all over the province.

RALLY OF DISTRICT C.G.I.T. GROUPS

GATHERED IN LACHUTE

The C. G. I. T. groups of St. Andrews East, Brownsburg and Morin Heights, together with the senior and intermediate groups of Lachute, met in the United Church basement on Saturday last, May 4th.

Registration took place at 2.30 p.m. followed by friendly games, in which everyone became acquainted.

A pleasing feature of the occasion was the visit of Miss Evelyn Crow, National Girls' Work Secretary, who led the discussion group on the Responsibilities of the Teen Age Girl. This was followed by reports, which were also discussed in turn. At six o'clock there was hearty response to the supper call, where those in attendance did full justice to the good things provided, after which there was a short programme and lantern slides were shown of last summer's C.G.I.T. Camp at Cedar Lodge. These proved very interesting. A worship service, led by Miss Crow, followed by the singing of "Taps", closed a very pleasant evening.

RAD'O CONTACTS THRILLED THE EMPIRE ON KING'S JUBILEE

No review of scientific progress could have impressed the people more forcibly on the King's Silver Jubilee than the radio ceremonies which united the Empire in celebrating this occasion. Among the many changes of the quarter-century during which the King and Queen have reigned, nothing in the material world has advanced so radically, perhaps, as methods of communication.

Through complex wireless hook-ups, remote inhabitants of each dominion and colony were transported to the heart of London, where the devotions were heard at Westminster and St. Paul's and the cheering crowds on Ludgate Hill echoed anew thousands of miles away.

Through means of the radio, the real sincerity and affection of the King for his subjects was manifest in his own voice, which millions have now counted it a privilege to hear for themselves. His Majesty's Silver Jubilee message was one of heartfelt gratitude and love—the latter no mere sentiment assumed for this glad occasion, for in many spheres of experience the people of Great Britain have known expression of the King's devotion in their daily life. King George and Queen Mary are sovereigns of whom the Empire may be proud.

Meanwhile, the radio, from the first elementary discoveries of Senor Marconi, has grown to

INTER-SCHOLASTIC TRACK MEET MAY TWENTY-FIFTH

As the Boy Scouts of Montreal are holding a demonstration for Lord Baden-Powell on the afternoon of May 24th., it has been decided to postpone the Dominion and McGill Inter-scholastic Track and Field Championships until the following day. The 13th Annual Dominion Championships will therefore be held on Saturday, May 25th., 1935. Entries will be accepted until Monday, May 20th. The 440 Yard Runs and 440 Yard Relays will be run in lanes for the full distance. It is important that all competitors are aware of this condition, for the penalty for running out of one's lane is necessarily a disqualification.

RICH SENTIMENT IN 4-ACT PLAY

"POLLYANNA" STAGE HIT

Those whose customary attitude is a grouch—and there are many such—might have absorbed a lasting lesson from the play staged by Lachute Women's Institute in the Auditorium last Friday, for "Pollyanna" proved to be one of the best presentations with which Lachute has been favored. The large audience entered heartily into the spirit of the play, and were loud in their acclaim of the splendid manner in which the actors carried out their respective parts, the interest being maintained to the last appeal made by Pollyanna to the audience to enter into the game of "being glad for everything."

The first scene presented three ladies of the Mission Circle, (Mrs. Carmody, Mrs. Gregg, and Miss Carroll), in the ancient home of Miss Polly Harrington, busy packing a barrel of much-patched garments for the missionaries. Nancy, the Irish maid, brings them a cool drink of lemonade, and after making much fun of the barrel and its old-fashioned contents, affirms that they are

PLAN REFERENDUM FOR INCORPORATION OF BROWNSBURG

COUNCIL NOMINATIONS

At the last Chatham council meeting held on Tuesday, a large petition signed by ratepayers of Brownsburg was received, requesting a referendum on the question of incorporating the village. This was duly granted, and the vote will take place on the 18th. inst. Only proprietors included within the boundaries of incorporation will be entitled to vote.

Nominations were held yesterday in the Club House, Brownsburg, at the Chatham Council for mayor and three councillors. There were six contestants, namely Adrien Rochon, Geo. Moncrieff, Albini Foucault, Alphonse Ouellette, Etienne Lacasse, Leo Carriere.

Nominations for Mayor were as follows: W. J. Burke, Jas. Chambers, W. J. Graham, Geo. A. Clarke.

UNUSUAL CEREMONY BY BROWNSBURG W.I.

PLANTING OF TREE AND ENTERTAINMENT FOR CHILDREN

Special Jubilee services were held in all the churches of Brownsburg on Sunday, the church buildings being beautifully decorated with flags, bunting and an array of flowering plants and cut flowers. Music suited to the memorable occasion was also a feature of the services.

On Monday the Women's Institute, in conformity with their high ideal of civic enterprise, conducted a ceremony on the school grounds in the presence of members of the school board, teachers, citizens, and children, when a maple tree was planted in commemoration of the twenty-five years of the reign of the King. A point of interest in the event was the use of a Bosche entrenching shovel, picked up on the battlefield, now draped with the Union Jack, and used by all, boys and girls, men and women, to fill in around the roots of the tree as part of the ceremony of planting.

In the afternoon the W. I. gave a free entertainment to the children of the village, a treat of candy and a large souvenir button, secured by Mr. T. Pasco, Sr., as a memento of the Silver Jubilee. The children, French and English alike, were most enthusiastic over the entertainment and the pleasure afforded them.

148th. BATT. MEMORIAL AND REUNION

On Saturday evening, May 11th., members of the 148th. Battalion C.E.F. will gather together at the McGill C.O.T.C. Headquarters, 3480 University St., Montreal, at 8.30 o'clock, for a re-union. It is some time since there has been a get-together of the old boys and a large attendance is expected.

On Sunday at 3 p.m., a tablet will be unveiled at the Redpath Library, McGill University, McTavish Street, in memory of members of the battalion who gave their lives for King and Country. All ranks and their families are invited to attend this ceremony, which will be followed by refreshments. Medals and decorations will be worn.

It is hoped that all interested will endeavor to attend this service and so pay tribute to those who made the supreme sacrifice.

BUSINESS MANAGERS TRANSFERRED

General regret is felt in announcement of the removal of two local business managers who, during their sojourn in Lachute, have made many warm friends. Mr. T. K. Hind, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, is to be transferred to Ottawa, and will be replaced in Lachute by Mr. G. Cheley, of the Capital. Mr. Hind has served three years as manager of the local branch. Both he and Mrs. Hind have mingled freely, taking active part in town organizations. Mrs. Hind was honored on Tuesday by a presentation from her lady friends, receiving a handsome sterling silver dish and woollen blankets.

News is received also that Mr. Roger Gravel, popular manager of Lachute Atlantic and Pacific Store, is being transferred to Montreal. Mr. Gravel is an enterprising and courteous salesman, who has done much to promote the business of the A. & P. among local shoppers during his three years' management of the store. His position is being taken over by Mr. Archambault, lately of Waterloo, Que., who is already established in Lachute.

ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY VOICED EMPIRE SENTIMENTS

A CANADIAN EULOGY

Under the great dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, the Archbishop of Canterbury on Monday's Jubilee Thanksgiving Service voiced the inarticulate feelings of an empire people.

"The years of the reign of King George", the Archbishop said, "have been years of almost unbroken anxiety and strain. Yet beneath the troubled surface, there has been in the life of our nation a deep underflow of the spirit of unity and confidence.—That spirit has found its centre in the Throne."

Outside, the silent throngs heard the words boom forth from loudspeakers.

"Elsewhere," the Archbishop continued, "ancient monarchies have been swept away by storms of revolution. Here the throne has been established in ever stronger security. The people have discerned in their sovereign a man whom they could understand, respect and trust . . .

"Thus in the passage of years he has come to be not King only but father of his people, and to loyalty has been added a warmth of love. This is the secret of the real personal emotion which today fills the heart of his realm and empire."

The primate paid special tribute to Queen Mary, who, he said, "has not wearied in her care for the health and happiness in the homes of all people", and to the Prince of Wales and other members of the royal house.

"As we lift our hearts in thanksgiving, so let us bow them in humble prayer for our King and Queen", he said.

Among many appealing sentiments voiced in appreciation of His Majesty, our contemporary, the Sherbrooke Record, has presented one of the briefest but perhaps most touching paragraphs, as follows—

That which has been said and can be said, or ever will be said about our King, has been better said in the Psalms of David, No. 45:

"My heart is inditing a good matter; I speak of the things which I have made touching the King; my tongue is the pen of a ready writer. Thou art fairer than the children of men; grace is poured into thy life; therefore God has blessed thee forever."

I ENJOYED the Snapshot Guild article last week very much, for taking snapshots of my children is almost a hobby with me," wrote a reader. "I was hoping, however, that you would tell mothers how to include themselves in the picture with their children," she continued.

Perhaps others are interested in this subject. The self timer is a most fascinating little gadget and almost human in its operation. It is an inexpensive accessory that fits over the metal button or plunger, at the end of the cable release, which you press to take a snapshot with a folding camera. It cannot, however, be used unless the camera is fitted with a cable release.

Here is how it works. First you locate your subject in the finder and at the same time plan the space you will occupy when you step into the picture. Suppose you want to take a picture of Jane sitting in your lap as you read to her. You will have to have the camera on a tripod, table or something solid. Locate the chair in the finder—and be sure you can see all of the chair, especially the upper part of the back where your head will appear—for if you are not careful you will find you have decapitated yourself when the finished prints are returned.

If the picture is to be taken indoors you will have to apply all the rules of indoor snapshotting. The diaphragm should be set at f.8.3, the shutter speed at either 1/10 or 1/25 of a second and you will need one or two photo-flood lamps placed in an ordinary floor lamp (with the shade removed) to give more illumination to the side away from the outside light.

When the diaphragm is set at the proper opening with the correct shutter speed, the same as if you were going to snap the picture yourself, set the self timer for ten seconds or a minute, depending on how long it will take you to get into the chair with Jane comfortably seated in your lap, ready to listen to your story. Turn on the photo-flood lamp, slip the timer over the button at the end of the cable release, press the little release lever on the self timer and it starts buzzing away, and then—click—it has taken your picture.

In spite of the simplicity of the procedure Jane is going to get a thrill out of it and when the picture is snapped she'll probably be portraying a million dollar smile—and this will add much to the value of the picture.

You can purchase the self timer attachment from almost any store that sells cameras. They are not expensive and last a lifetime.

Some cameras have self-timers incorporated in the shutter so if you have this type of camera and have never used the self-timer you have missed a lot of fun and picture possibilities.

The Scout Comes Home

Hot and dusty, sunburnt, hungry, and incredibly dirty, their Boy Scout came home! Carrying an enormous, untidy swag, his hat battered out of shape by rain and wind, but whistling merrily, he strolled through the gate. Hushed protestingly by mother and sister into the waiting bath, he sang lustily the latest addition to his collection of Scout songs. His voice was cracked and husky with the dust and shouting of the Jamboree. They listened to him:—

"Oh, Sinbad was a mariner—
You know what sailors are!
He sailed the seven seas,
But once he sailed a bit too far.
He came upon a mermaid,
She was combing out her locks."

Suddenly he broke off, and started a new Indian song which sounded like a sweet lullaby, but with a Scout one never knows! Clean and shining with soap he was asked by his admiring family how he had enjoyed the camp life.

"All right," said he, "but what's for dinner? The best meal I had down there was the day I was cook!"

The parents pondered over the change in their offspring. The red scarf had been swapped for a green, the plaited woggle for a nut; his nose had a different hue. But above all there was a new assurance, a jauntiness as of one who had seen the world. He had powdered with boys of many lands. He had talked with "B.P."

WOULD YOU BE AFRAID TOO!

"I got a dreadful scare last night,"
Said Billy Boy to Jean,
"Something beckoned from outside,
When the wind was blowing keen.

I had cold chills all over me,
And creeps all through my hair,
To see that phantom gray-white thing
A-beckoning me out there.

I called my mother to come quick,
To chase the thing away
Before it got inside the house,
To harm me in my play.

My mother came and quickly laughed,
'You poor scared boy!' said she,

'It is just a little wind-tossed branch
Of your pussy-willow tree.'"

NELL'S DECORATION

Mother and Dad had just had a letter from Aunt Sue, who lived in the United States, full of all that had been done near her home on Decoration Day—the day when they decorated all of the graves of their old soldiers; and Billy and Jean had been talking it over outside as they played in the sand-pit.

"I wish we had something to decorate," said Jean rather wistfully.

"Decorate Fido!" said Billy with a chuckle. He knew that Jean had been afraid of Fido ever since she had accidentally stepped on his tail and poor old Fido, still half asleep and not realizing just what was happening him, had bitten her.

"I would rather be excused, if you please," said Jean with a very grown-up air. "I am not really fond of dogs, you know."

Billy chuckled again, but he would not tell Jean what he was laughing about. This made her angry, so she got up and ran off to play by herself in the big barn. There was a cosy nook down between the silo and the hay mow, of which no-one knew but herself. She had found it one day while looking for old Speckle's eggs.

She told her dollies all about the Three Bears and Goldilocks, and about the big bad wolf who had eaten Red Riding Hood—she told them several times over before she got them to sleep. Laying them softly down on the hay she covered them with her little red cape. When she had finished she sat watching to see that nothing disturbed them. Suddenly the thought that Red Riding Hood's cape must have been much the same color as hers, flashed through her mind. "I have Red Riding Hood's cape," she giggled, "but there is no wolf here."

Shifting her position slightly she attempted to peek out through the cracks where the boarding of the barn had shrunk in the sun enough to make quite a wide space—and she found herself looking in to two great yellow eyes! With a gasp of fear she drew back and stared at them. The great yellow eyes stared back at her. "Shoo," she cried, so loudly that the sound of her own voice in that little hollow nook startled her, but the great yellow eyes did not move. "It must be Red Riding Hood's wolf," she said in a frightened whisper, "but it can't get in at me, I am sure, so I will just have to stay here until it goes away — and if it never goes away I will have to stay here forever and ever, as no-one knows where I am."

Big tears trickled down her cheeks at the thought, and hung from her long eyelashes. The light, shining through the crack, shone on the big tear-drops and made it appear (as Jean told her mother after) "as though there were just lots and lots of yellow eyes looking in at me". This made her still more afraid, so that she lay down and covered her eyes with her hands to shut them out. In a short time she was fast asleep. She might have lain asleep a long time if it had not been for Nell. Nell was in the stable, as Jean's daddy was planning to drive into town with her. Nell did not like being left in the stable all alone, so decided that she would free herself and go out into the pasture where Dick and Dolly were enjoying the nice green grass; this dry old hay did not appeal to her at all.

Nell's efforts to free herself caused such a loud banging that Jean awakened up, and forgetting her dolls and the great yellow eyes, she crept hurriedly out of her hidden nook and ran to the house. Half-way she met her mother and daddie coming toward the barn to see what all the noise was about, and she turned back with them. When Mr. Floyd opened the stable door he stood looking for a few minutes, before saying, "Well Nellie, old lady, you are certainly well decorated." "Decorated!" squealed Jean, pushing past her mother and underneath daddie's arm to see who or what had been decorating Nell. — There stood old Nell with part of her stall hanging from her neck. The boards had been loosened at some other time when she had been trying to free herself, and this day they had broken away. Nell was free, but her decorations prevented her from getting out of the door, as it was too wide, and her tramping about, seeking a way to get out, had caused all the dreadful noise that had awakened Jean.

After Nell had been tied up again in another stall, Jean ventured around to the back of the barn, clinging to her mother's hand, to see what the terrible thing was with the yellow eyes, but there they only found two big yellow buttercups quite close to the crack in the barn! Daddie, who had followed them, laughed heartily, remarking that Red Riding Hood's wolf was out of date and Nell had been decorated because she was a real old veteran. Billy too, said "Well Jean, you got your wish anyway, you had something decorated!"

HARDWARE STORE FASCINATION

By Edgar A. Guest

Whenever I go to a hardware store,
I wander the counters round
And gaze at knobs for the kitchen door.

In a manner that's most profound,
I look at the glistening pots and pans
And the gadgets for shelf and wall.
The hammers and planes and electric fans
And I wish I could buy them all.

While mother is getting a packet of tacks

I stroll down the crowded aisles,
I linger to fondle a woodman's ax
And the chisels and drills and files.
And I fancy that deep in the heart of me

The boy that I was survives,
For, old though I am, still longingly
I look at the pocket knives.

There is something about a hardware store

Which, strangely, I can't resist,
And I think it's the joys I have hungered for

Which somehow my life has missed.
Though under the chill of the years,
I'd say

That many a passion cools,
A man will keep to his dying day

SPLENDID INFORMATION

"What Every Girl Should Know Before Marriage," was the title of a book recently published by an enterprising Rumanian publisher. He sold more than a million copies, mostly to girls. Buyers of the book sued him because, on receiving it, they found it to be a cooking manual. He won the case, however, as the judge thought the title was a fair description of the book's contents.

The Home of "Evangeline"

In 1755 there occurred in the little church at Grande Pré, on beautiful Minas Basin, one of the most poignant scenes in history. Some four hundred men and youths, most of the male population of the district, had gathered at the command of Colonel John Winslow, New Englander in command of the British troops. There he read to them, through an interpreter, the decision of Governor Lawrence and his council, which meant expatriation for all Acadians. As the peasants slowly realized the full import of the fatal words, even the stern soldier was affected by their stupefaction and grief.

Where the ancient Acadian church once stood another building has risen to help commemorate the sad events of those days. Nearby is a statue to Evangeline, the beloved character through whose story Longfellow has immortalized a people's despair. For here lived the originals of his mighty epic. Here the men who had been confined in the church were herded to the transports, in some cases to be separated forever from their loved ones.

Within the little park, carefully preserved as one of Canada's most precious historic sites, lies also the famous Evangeline's well, restored now to some semblance of its form as it used to serve the early residents. Ancient willows, probably sprouted from Norman shoots, could tell if given voice of the farm-folk in their Sunday homespun as they gathered at the church for the mass which was the great event of their week. Grande Pré saw many events of historic import both before and after the expulsion. But that episode in its story so over-shadows all others that the modern visitor thinks first and longest upon the tragedy of Evangeline and her people.

(Contributed)

I am afraid that some of my readers will find me far afield from the Canadian Mail Service—and I would say that in order to please some of my readers I have beaten back somewhat to an earlier date than where I actually started from.

Continuing my narrative from where I left off—seven years later, finding the people of the New Netherlands persisted in disregarding the measures taken for safety of their letters, the company repeated their order, and reinforced it by a fine of one hundred Carilus guilders for each infraction.

We find—fourteen years later, in 1664—that trade between England and her new possessions was of small proportions, and the opportunities for sending letters from one to the other were few. Lord Cornbury in 1702 informed the Lords of Trade that there were few vessels running between New York and ports in England, that he had to depend for his correspondence on Boston and Philadelphia, which places had regular communication with the mother country, and in 1708 Cornbury again complained that it took often fifteen months to hear from England via New York. But there were two other safe ways by which letters could be sent to England, viz, the Virginia fleet and the Mast Fleet of New England. But, although the three groups of colonies had each their own connection with England, until 1672 there was no communication whatever between these groups, nor was any thought to be necessary. The groups were separated from one another not only by space, but by social and political differences. The Puritans of New England and the Cavaliers of Virginia had little in common but the memories of a quarrel, which were still warm; and New York was still largely Dutch, though even at that date it was taking on the cosmopolitan character, which has since distinguished it.

As for the trade of the colonies, Woodrow Wilson later stated that in that time, "the main lines of trade ran straight to the mother country, and were protected, when there was need, by the English fleets, while both the laws of parliament and their own interests bound the trade of the colonies to England. While the navigation act of 1660 forbade all trade with the colonies except in English bottoms; forbade also the shipment of tobacco any whither but to England itself; and the act of 1663 forbade the importation of anything at all except out of England, which it was then once for all determined must be the entrepot and place of staple for all foreign trade. It was the Dutch against whom these acts were aimed."

As has happened so often before, however, that which could not be accomplished, through feebleness, and of the common interests, was brought about by the presence of impending danger. In 1672, war broke out between the English and Dutch, the object being maritime and colonial expansion. The stakes were the colonies in Africa, East Indies, West Indies and America.

The English having ousted their rivals from New York presented a strong front on the North American continent; and the only thing lacking was the cohesion among the several colonies. At the outbreak of the war, the king directed Governor Lovelace, of New York, to

The regular meeting of Lachute Council was held on the 4th. inst. at which were present Patrick Dunbar Esq. Mayor, and Councillors Desjardins, Fish, Dudderidge, Smith and McQuat. Councillor Dudderidge spoke in glowing terms of Mr. Dunbar's energy and assistance, working so hard to try and secure the bridges from being carried away in the flood. He therefore moved, seconded by Jas. Fish, that the thanks of this council are due to Mr. Dunbar.

An informal vestry meeting was held in St. Simeon's Church on Wednesday evening, May 6th., Rev. H. J. Evans presiding. The purport of the meeting was to enquire what amount could be raised for the present incumbent Mr. Saunders. Capt. Smith volunteered to visit the people of Wentworth and the Wardens were to make a personal canvas of the congregation.

At a recent meeting of the Quarterly Official Board of the Methodist Church, the board unanimously expressed their desire that the Rev. B. B. Brown would continue to labor with them, stating that the circuit had never been in better spiritual and financial standing than at present, which is claimed to be due to Mr. Brown's untiring efforts.

The house of Eugene LeFebvre was totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday morning. The fire was caused by some workmen leaving cement on the kitchen stove, which preparation they were using in roofing a new shed adjoining the house. The fire spread rapidly and beyond some groceries which had been removed to his new store on Foundry St., everything was a total loss. There was only $600 coverage of insurance. The solitary hydrant is an object lesson that we should purchase our own waterworks.

The sudden death of Mrs. Nat. Copeland which occurred at her home on Bethany Street on Wednesday, created great sympathy for those bereaved.

A special Memorial Service was conducted in the Methodist Church on Sunday for the late King Edward VII, in which Rev. B. B. Brown and R. E. Kingsley were preachers.

see what could be done towards establishing a regular postal communication between the colonies, and Lovelace arranged for a monthly service between New York and Boston. There was no road between the two places; and Governor Winthrop was asked to provide an expert woodman, who would guide the courier by the easiest road.

The courier was instructed to blaze the route, and it was hoped that a good road might be made along the trail pursued. The courier made his trips for a few months only, when New York was captured by the Dutch fleet, which came suddenly upon it. The town was restored to the English at the conclusion of the war in 1674 and, with the disappearance of danger, communication was dropped.

A few years later danger of more serious character threatened from another quarter, and again the colonies were compelled to recognize the necessity of yielding from the attitude of jealous independence which characterized them. Between the English colonists and the French in Canada there was a steady rivalry for the possession of the fur trade in the western country. Each had Indian allies, whose methods of warfare carried terror among their opponents.

The English were in numbers very much superior to the French; and if united and determined, could have overwhelmed them. The unwillingness of the English to take any action in common was costing them dearly, as the outlying numbers of their colonists were constantly harassed by the Indian tribes in league with the French.

Color of Meteors

The Leonid and Persid meteors have a blue-white appearance when they strike the earth's atmosphere and burn up. This is because they approach the earth head on and the relative speed of motion is, therefore, the sum of their velocity and that of the earth in its orbit, amounting to about 70 miles a second. The Andromedid meteors, on the other hand, are red, fish and fainter because they collide by catching up with the earth. Their relative speed of approach is only 11 miles a second. The difference is like that to be experienced in an automobile in a head-on vs. a rear-end collision while the two cars are moving.

The Neutron

The neutron is a subdivision of the atom whose existence was announced recently by an authority in England. It represents the first step in the evolution of matter from the elementary electricity. The atom is regarded as made up of electrons and protons held together by attraction between negative and positive electrical charges. The neutron is a combination of a single electron and a single proton, their electrical charges neutralized by their union. The neutron itself carries no electrical charge.

"Pickle" Robbed of Value

The Department of Agriculture's bureau of home economics says that the term "pickle" is applied to a wide variety of products, so it is not possible to make any general statement as to the food value of all of them. In most cases some of the vitamin content, if not all, is lost during the pickling process. The amount that is retained will depend upon the process, the extent to which there has been loss by solution and the length of time the pickle is held. There is very definite evidence that there is a slow loss of vitamin C in any product put down in salt, due to oxidation. The loss of ash constituents is largely dependent upon the extent to which the juices have been drained off or the brine has been soaked out.

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, May 7th.—It is not easy to tell, either from an examination of the business records, or from the performance of the stock market, whether things are getting better in Canada just now, whether they are marking time, or whether a mild recession has actually set in. The picture is a complex one, and the trends are mixed. The historians tell us that recoveries from depressions usually occur by a series of forward movements followed by periods of consolidation, during which the foundation is laid for another forward advance. It may be that the current period is paving the way for further recovery. We devoutly hope so, at any rate.

A rapid survey of our major problems indicates improvement in some fields, loss in others:

Employment: the April figures were disappointing. The number reported on pay-rolls fell quite substantially. While it is normally a 'between season' when the winter activities subside before the spring and summer ones begin. The drop this year was larger than usual. Unemployment relief in many areas grows more serious all the time. Fortunately the period of the year upon which we are approaching bears less heavily upon municipal budgets: fuel costs fall; clothing is a lighter item; vegetables and fruits will soon be cheaper and more accessible.

Railways: the two great systems show a curious contradiction in earnings. The first quarter of the year was less satisfactory for the Canadian Pacific, more satisfactory for the Canadian National than the similar period of 1934. The slow movement of grain has continuously impeded the recovery of the railway revenues. Movement of ore, pulp, lumber and miscellaneous commodities has stood up well. The improvement in the earnings of the Canadian National is gratifying to the Canadian taxpayer. Last year the loss on system cost the average householder $25. in taxes, whether he knew it or not. A balanced budget on the Canadian National would remove one of the bugbears and nightmares of our federal legislators.

BRIGHTER FEATURES

Wheat: price better, statistical position a little better; prospect of cutting the carryover to perhaps 150 million bushels, which is still 100 millions above what it should be.

External Trade: this is one of the brighter features. In the fiscal year ended March 31, every month, in both imports and exports, with one exception, showed a gain over the previous year.

Internal Trade: the mining industry continues to prosper, in the main, with the golds of course predominant. Coal mining is the dark patch. Automobile production and export has been the best in five years. The Easter trade in a few localities was the best since the depression began. Higher farm prices are beginning to help trade in a few localities.

There, in a sketchy way, is the present situation. The new crop in western Canada is being planted late, with better surface moisture than recently, but, in the drought areas, very little reserve. In the east, especially southern and western Ontario, drought and cold weather are causing much concern.

The re-arming in Europe on a disturbing scale will have its repercussions in Canada; and we may look for further debate on Canada's defences when the House resumes later this month. Empire defence problems are being discussed at London.

Canada spends about $1.20 per capita per year on its national defence. We have a couple of destroyers on each coast and a minesweeper somewhere or other. The permanent active militia numbers about 3,500, and we have a few score aviators and a squadron or two of fighting planes, most of them rapidly becoming antiquated. The blunt fact is, of course, that although we spent twelve or fifteen millions a year on our defence forces, they would be pitifully insignificant in event of attack. There are two quite contradictory schools of thought about our defences, both heard in parliament from time to time. One says: why spend even ten millions a year on such useless half-measures? The other says: we must proceed to build up a worthwhile defence machine. It is quite possible that the issue may be dragged into the next election campaign.

HOUSING PROGRAMMES ASSISTING TRADE

The various slum clearance programmes and the provision of better housing for the working-class population is bringing a measure of prosperity to the building trades in the United Kingdom, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. In addition to dwellings for the working-class population, a great demand has been accumulating since the war for more modern houses for the medium and well-off classes of the community. A large proportion of the bigger houses are considered entirely out-of-date and while many have been remodeled it is said to be impossible to make them as satisfactory as newly built modern houses. In addition a great many office buildings and factories have become obsolete. The rise in the standard of living should, it is anticipated, work upwards, which should greatly assist in bringing about a more prosperous industrial condition.

QUEBEC WOMEN'S INSTITUTES ASSISTED IN ROYAL ANNIVERSARY

Well to the front in rural celebrations of Monday's royal anniversary were the Women's Institutes of Quebec Province. Many of these possess flags and British ensigns, and these were used to emphasize the occasion, and were in many cases the only available flags in rural communities.

In some localities the celebrations were staged entirely by the Institutes, the school children forming parades, headed by flag-bearers. Bonfires and fire-works in the evening brought to a brilliant close this new and much welcomed holiday, in which virile seeds of loyalty and patriotism were sown.

—Rex Theatre's first evening show commences 7.30 (D.S.T.) as usual.

CRIPPLED SCOUTS BRING HELP TO VESSEL

An unusual Scout award case was that which won the Certificate of Merit for five crippled boys of the Scout Group of the Stewart Memorial Home of Bangor, Ireland. On a February morning they were making their way along the shore from a dormitory to the main Home, in the face of a gale, when they saw the small Belfast steamer Eileen in distress and drifting towards the rocks. They hastened as fast as they could—two on crutches, three with legs in iron forms—up a steep slope in the teeth of the gale, to the Home. The Coastguards were 'phoned, and in consequence five of the steamer's crew of six were saved.

His suggestion with regard to the North River revetment wall, on Main Street from the C.P.R. track to the Fire Station, drew new attention to the unsightliness of this object. The iron rods which protrude from the wall have been put to no serviceable use, and should be removed, he said. (These were presumably set for the erection of electric standards, or an ornate metal railing, and might be better used for the installing a number of lights than to remove them completely. The Watchman has pressed this recommendation on several occasions).

Mr. Rowe further suggested the planting of shrubs at regular intervals close to this wall. Of special interest was his reference to Main Street and the plans now under discussion to convert it into a boulevard. Here he visualized parking spaces and grass plots set alternately along the centre of the street, each green lawn to be centred by shrubbery. Honeysuckle was suggested as an attractive and hardy plant.

In addition to beautifying Lachute from the civic angle, the speaker thought a horticultural society might well be established among interested citizens, and in this regard promised the assistance of several experts from Ste. Anne de Bellevue, whose theoretical and practical aid would prove valuable in organizing a body of this kind.

Mr. Rowe was thanked for his interesting discourse by Mrs. G. Clunie, convenor of the afternoon's program.

CONCRETE PAVING for Economy Comfort Safety

To make paving budgets more productive of wider roads and longer roads, pave with permanent concrete. With it, upkeep is practically eliminated. It spells economy to the motorist, too, saving fuel and tires and retarding car depreciation. With its skid-reducing surface, clearly defined edges and excellent night and day visibility, concrete gives a degree of driving comfort and safety unequalled by other less durable materials. Advocate concrete for highways, streets, and all traffic-carrying surfaces.

RICH SENTIMENT IN 4-ACT DRAMA

typical of the house itself, which is so ancient everything is tumbling to pieces with age. Miss Polly comes in, and to the surprise of her visitors announces she is expecting her orphan niece, Pollyanna, on the train that afternoon. Her sister, Charity, who had married a missionary, had died 2 years ago, and now her husband was dead, so the child would come to her—much to her disgust, for she had no love for children!

Miss Polly discovers she has lost a much valued locket, and while she goes upstairs to look for it, Mrs. Cormody tells the story of the two sisters who in their youth had met and loved two young men, Pendleton and his friend, Dr. Chilton. The father ejected them both from the home. Charity was put under lock and key. However, her lover managed to get word to her, and persuaded her to elope. But this is discovered and she is sent to a mission field, where she marries a missionary. Miss Polly hears Dr. Chilton call her father a bad name, so she has not spoken to him for twenty years. Both men are still in the village, one a hermit and the other a doctor.

The gossip is enjoyed by the ladies, who decide to wait until Pollyanna arrives—which she does shortly, in a red check frock, a quaint hat and with a valise. Full of life she rushes to her aunt, who displays little welcome.

Polly, nothing daunted, immediately starts playing the "glad game" and entertains the visitors, then later brings out a present of a puppy and a kitten she has brought her aunt, and for a second surprise a boy, Jimmy Bean, who had run away from the orphanage to look for a mother—all of which causes a great uproar in the old home.

Act II opens in the "hermit's" home (as John Pendleton is called.) He is sitting in a gloomy library recovering from an illness, with his man Blecker attending him. The doctor, his old friend Chilton, calls, and while they talk tells him of the little maiden who has come to town and is playing such a big part in curing the ills of the people with her "glad game." Pendleton laughs and warns his friend not to bring her near him. Pollyanna, however, soon appears on the scene, coming through a tunnel which had been built by Pendleton, twenty years previously, to assist in his elopement. Once in his presence she unfolds to him a fairy tale as told her by her mother, which is the story of his old love affair with her. Then when he finds that she loved him even to the end, his heart softens, and Pollyanna persuades him to adopt her, as her aunt does not want her—so she fetches her little valise and exclaims, "I've moved."

In Act III Nancy, the maid, brings along Pollyanna's clean clothes, and Miss Polly follows, humiliated and indignant at her niece, and demanding her return immediately. When told that her aunt really wanted and loved her, Pollyanna embraces her with such warmth that her locket falls to the floor and opening discloses the picture of Dr. Chilton which Miss Polly has worn for the last twenty years. Pollyanna is not satisfied until Pendleton adopts Jimmy Bean, and after this decision is made, is about to return home to her aunt when Nancy, the maid, rushes in to say she is to go away to school. On the way home there is an accident, and poor Pollyanna is so badly hurt that it is feared Act IV opens five years later. Jimmie is a young man well dressed, well educated. Pendleton is still playing the good father to him, and Pollyanna and her aunt are expected home—also Dr. Chilton, who has been abroad with them and has persuaded Aunt Polly to redeem her promise of twenty years ago, and become Mrs. Chilton. Nancy and Blecker are content in seeing the others happy. They arrive, and Polly-

HISTORY

History should be a fascinating subject, but, as usually taught, it is as dry as dust. Dates and battles seem to comprise the bulk of the history teaching. History really should be about people and what is more interesting than people? The large number of biographies that are being read—and written—just now shows that grown-ups are interested in the lives of others. Most grown-ups are not so very far beyond children mentally, so biography should be interesting to children too, if properly presented. It seems to me that the History of England used in the Ontario Public Schools is about as uninteresting a volume as could be put into the hands of the children. It is a mass of unnecessary detail with no emphasis put on the really important parts. It is beyond the average child to sort out which is important and the work of the teacher is made even harder. Children love stories, and what is history but a series of stories about interesting people?

INTEMPERANCE

When people use the word intemperance, they usually mean intemperance in liquor consumption. Yet there are many other ways of being intemperate.

There are considerably more people who are intemperate over food than there are over liquor. There are a number of diseases that are closely associated with diet indiscretions. Sometimes people eat too much of certain foods and others too little of the required foods. The over-weight are usually intemperate on the food question. But there are others. One man who is so opposed to smoking and drinking that he is a fanatic on the subject is a most intemperate person. He eats very heavily of foods that he likes and then will be sick for days. His doctor has found what is causing the trouble and has given him a diet which is not too rigid as it just excludes a few things. As long as he sticks to his diet he is perfectly well but he has not sufficient will power to do this. He gets sick and puts in some miserable days, upsets his household, disturbs the routine of his office and makes a large amount of extra work for his staff. Yet that man would be horrified if anyone considered him intemperate.

END WITH A SWEET

Most people like to end a meal with a sweet and dietetically it is a very sound idea. Many of our eating habits which we appear to do by instinct have a scientific basis. We all like to have a meal, which as the saying is, sticks to the ribs—in scientific language, has a high satiety value. Sugar retards digestion somewhat, so the meal stays a longer time in the stomach. A meal ended with a sweet gives us the comfortable feeling of being satisfied or satiated and as it remains in the stomach for a longer time, postpones that feeling of hunger. So it is no wonder we enjoy our desserts.

ACCURATE MEASUREMENTS

The same recipe made by different people seldom tastes the same. This is due usually to differences in measurements and temperatures used in cooking. These days all measurements are given level and you cannot expect to have success if you do not measure accurately. If you want to see for yourself just what a difference there can be, fill a tablespoon with flour, put it in a cup and then see how many level tablespoons you will get from your full tablespoon. You'll be surprised. Use a standard sized measuring cup for your measuring. A glass cup for liquids is most convenient for the times when you must measure a part of a cup.

HOSPITALITY, A MOST GRACIOUS GIFT

True hospitality does not depend on fine appointments, but rather on fineness of spirit. This is the outgrowth of kindness of heart.

A gracious host or hostess entertains simply within his means, and without pretentiousness. There should be no attempt to entertain more lavishly than one can afford. We offer the best we have. A simple meal, well prepared and attractively served is an expression of art which can give pleasure to all who partake.

One of the delightful privileges in any family is that of being allowed to invite a friend to dine on the spur of the moment. Many interesting guests are thus brought unexpectedly into the family circle. To know that there may be a simple but delicious meal, well prepared and served, is a source of pride to all members of the family.

As hosts or hostesses we should never make apologies for anything. If the unexpected and unavoidable turns up in spite of the best laid plans, we will if possible see its humorous side.

It is indeed a fine art to entertain in such a manner that guests leave with reluctance.

A guest who is always welcome is one who adapts herself readily to the accustomed ways of the family. She takes an interest in all the members, from the grandparent to the baby.

The offer and the acceptance of hospitality are among the most treasured experiences of friendship, and as such it is an expression of art.

In the midst of the auction a man came forward and whispered at some length to the auctioneer. Then he went back and the auctioneer duly announced:—

"A pocketbook containing two thousand dollars in bills has been lost. If it is returned to me, the owner will pay fifty dollars reward and no questions asked."

There was a moment's silence, and then a voice toward the back of the crowd was heard:—

"Fifty-one!"

PORK CHOPS WITH CORN DRESSING

One of my fellow choir members has brought me a new recipe. What a pal! Her sister-in-law in the States sent it to her and says that she usually serves it to first-time dinner guests. I have not had time to try it but my friend recommends it highly.

Make a dressing of $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups bread crumbs, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup canned corn, 2 teaspoons sage, 1 teaspoon chopped onion, $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon melted butter, 1 egg. Make a little mound of dressing on each pork chop and bake a half-hour in a moderately hot oven of 450 degrees. This is sufficient dressing for from 6 to 8 chops.

SLICED COOKIES

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
2 eggs
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup walnuts
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon nutmeg about $3\frac{1}{4}$ cups flour
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup raisins
 $1\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoons soda
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon cream of tartar

Cream butter and sugar, add beaten eggs. Sift in dry ingredients and add nuts and raisins which have been put through chopper. Mix well. Form into two rolls and let stand overnight. Slice and bake in a moderately hot oven. This is one of our pet recipes.

ARE WOMEN LIVING UP TO THEIR PRIVILEGES?

With both a Federal and a Provincial election in the offing, the thoughts of voters naturally turn to their duties in respect to the use of the ballot. Women, especially, need to give attention to this matter, since the consensus of opinion seems to be that they are not living up to their duties and privileges in the matter of voting, and are making a mere perfunctory use of the ballot.

Whether this be true or not, certain it is that many of them are voting just as their fathers, husbands or brothers are doing, and thinking very little about the merits of the case, or seeking to understand what it is all about. This attitude simply means a double task for those who count the ballots, without doing either the voters themselves or the candidates either good or harm.

To listen, read, study, and then to form an independent opinion and vote for it is the right, as well as the duty, of voters of both sexes. There is no other weapon with which to right legislative wrongs other than the intelligent use of the ballot.

Members of Quebec Women's Institutes have a non-partisan department known as Legislation, which is intended to create in their minds a knowledge of how they can wield most effectively the power of the ballot for the best interests of Home and Country.

Postage Stamp Plates

Stamp collectors consider the word typography as a general term embracing all printing done from type and designs in relief without regard for the method used in duplicating the stamp subjects which make up the printing plate, says the Chicago Tribune. The individual designs may be type-set, stereotyped, electrolytically, or even stamped out in a coining press and are usually soldered to each other or to a mounting block in order that none of the parts may loosen in the printing. Typographic is cheap when compared to intaglio engraving, and is used by many countries for stamp printing, counterfeiting being minimized by the use of special papers and inks. Carelessness in assembling plates has produced some of the greatest errors in stamps either by allowing one stamp subject, or "cliche" as they are called, to be inverted, or by inserting a cliche of another value in a plate.

Land for the White House

The principal owners of the land on which the city of Washington is built were Daniel Carroll, Samuel Davidson, Notley Young and David Burnes. The land on which the White House stands belonged to David Burnes, an aged Scotchman, who very reluctantly gave up his 600 acres for the federal city when negotiations were in progress for buying up land for the National Capital. Daniel Carroll owned a large tract of land along the eastern branch of the Potomac river, which includes the site of the Capitol.

The Black Watch

The origin of the Black Watch dates from 1729. They wore the dress of their country, a tartan of dark color, which gained for them the Gaelic appellation of Frelendian Du, which translated is Black Watch. In contradistinction to the regular troops, who wore scarlet coats and were called Red soldiers. They engaged mostly in police work until 1740, when they were regularly organized into the Forty-second Regiment of the Line. Their war history began at the Battle of Fontenoy.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, May 12th., is "Adam and Fallen Man".

The Golden Text is: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3: 14, 15).

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (I Corinthians 15: 22).

"For right reasoning there should be but one fact before the thought, namely, spiritual existence . . . As in Adam (error) all die, even so in Christ (Truth) shall all be made alive'. The mortality of man is a myth, for man is immortal'. (Science and Health, pages 492, 545).

SUNNY LIVING starts at the table

How you feel and how you look depend largely on the foods you eat. The balanced menu provides the "bulk" to prevent common constipation—caused by lack of this essential fiber.

Common constipation frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet, in most cases, it can be overcome pleasantly and safely by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a natural food for normal individuals. It furnishes "bulk" in convenient and concentrated form. ALL-BRAN also provides vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this sunny way better than taking patent medicines? Two table-spoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If relief is not obtained, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

LACHUTE AND BROWNSBURG IN SOFTBALL LEAGUE

A meeting of the Interprovincial Softball League, in which Brownsburg and Lachute have again entered, was held at Hawkesbury on Friday last, with J. Lambertson of Brownsburg in the Chair. Mr. Lambertson, president of the league last season, was re-elected to that office, with R. St. Julien and W. W. Steele, of Hawkesbury, respectively vice-president and secretary.

The league this year comprises seven teams — three from Hawkesbury, one from Vank-leek Hill, Brownsburg Reds, Brownsburg Blues, and Lachute. The same rules were adopted as those in force during the past season. Each team will also appoint its own umpires for the season with the president appointing those to handle the playoffs. W. W. Steele, the secretary, is drawing up a schedule which will be presented at the next meeting, May 16.

Team representatives attending from this side of the River were O. Leroux, Brownsburg Reds, W. Moncrieff, Brownsburg Blues, and A. Farquharson, Lachute.

COMEDY PRESENTED AT BROWNSBURG

CREDITABLE WORK BY YOUNG AMATEURS

A very laughable comedy in three acts entitled Aaron Slick from Punkin Creek was put on by a group of young people of the Brownsburg United Church last Friday evening, directed by Mr. Cedric Wheeler.

On several former occasions this same group with three or more alternative players, have staged dramatic sketches, skits and plays, all of the humorous variety, their work though undertaken by amateurs, being for the most part of a very high order, both in acting and dramatization. They are to be congratulated for the fine spirit of the play, the careful and seemingly spontaneous interpretation of the parts assigned, showing thoughtful training, and carrying through in a breezy style the entire motif of the drama. This reached its climax near the end of the third act, calling forth round after round of hearty applause from the audience.

During the performance Mr. Laidlaw rendered a number of saxophone solos, accompanied by Miss Laura Lupien, and Mr. Frank Steere gave a variety of vocal numbers, with Miss Ivy Steere at the piano.

GOLF CLUB OFFICERS APPOINTED

J. R. CHARRON NEW PRESIDENT

At a meeting of the Lachute Golf Club, Ltd., held in the club rooms on May 9th., the following officers were elected for the season of 1935:

President, J. R. Charron; Vice-President, E. M. Jones; Directors, E. F. Ayers, L. L. Legault, W. J. Bryant, C. Tremblay, Wm. Cottingham, P. G. Roy, G. Valois and J. W. Gall. The president and vice-president of the Club, ex-officio, are directors according to the by-laws. The directorate elected G. Valois as secretary and J. W. Gall as treasurer.

Joint Captains, W. J. Bryant, E. F. Ayers, T. K. Haller, and P. G. Roy.

At this meeting it was explained that the Playing Club had resigned, and that the or-

ACCLAMATIONS FOR ARUNDEL COUNCIL

Nominations for Mayor and Councillors for the Township of Arundel were held in Staniforth's Hall, Arundel, on May 8th., and resulted in the following elections, by acclamation: Mayor, C. J. Staniforth; Councillors—A. B. Morrison, Thos. H. Graham, and Jos. E. Boyd. The other aldermen completing the Council are James Dobie, William Proudlock, and Ernest Labrosse.

PROFESSOR OF HORTICULTURE ON BEAUTIFYING OF SCHOOL GROUNDS

A most interesting illustrated lecture was given by Prof. Bunting, Professor of Horticulture at Macdonald College, before a special meeting of the Lachute Women's Institute on Tuesday afternoon at the High School. The subject was "Improving School Surroundings."

Professor Bunting particularly stressed the value of trees for this purpose, naming the most practical; he also emphasized proper spacing in planting, in order to derive the full benefit from each tree. Splendid examples of tree surgery were shown, with the advice that this should be done only by experts, as the technique was exacting; but the work was well worth while, as trees took, in most cases, many years to develop.

Flowers, cultivated and wild, came under discussion; and the suggestion was made that flowers blooming in spring, early summer and autumn, were preferable to those which blossomed in midsummer when the school grounds were vacant.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Prof. Bunting at the close of the lecture.

Mrs. Clunie, convenor of the May program, was congratulated upon the exceptionally fine treat she had provided on two occasions.

Members of sister branches of the Women's Institute, members of the High School teaching staff, Mayor Dr. J. H. Mason, and other prominent citizens were also present.

COUNCIL ELECTIONS IN ST. CANUT

Nominations for the Municipal Council of St. Canut were held last week, at which Mr. Jos. Bourgeois was elected by acclamation as Mayor, now in his third term. Arthur Longpré was elected by acclamation as Councillor to replace Mr. Harvey Miller, while Messrs. Clavel and A. McKenzie were also elected by acclamation as Councillors, both for their fourth term.

ganization would be operated by one body. Formerly the Incorporated Club, representing the share-holders, had rented to the Playing Club, which comprised the active playing members.

Ordinary routine business was attended to. The Treasurer's report showed a balance of profit, an announcement which was received with applause.

The question of having electricity on the grounds was brought up by the president; it was hoped that the farmers of the vicinity would join with the Golf Club to secure reasonable rates from the Gatineau Power Company for installation and service.

A word of praise was extended to the President of the Playing Club, Mr. Bryant, who was unfortunately not present, for his sterling services to the Club. President L. L. Legault, K.C.,

MOTOR CYCLISTS HELD RELIABILITY TESTS

LACHUTE SCENE OF GAY ASSEMBLY

Members of the Sports Motor Cycle Club visited Lachute on Sunday for their reliability trials. Most of the riders were familiar with this section, having held their trials here in previous years. The group comprised motor cyclists' clubs from the Montreal district and from across the Ottawa River.

The route chosen was, as previously, a circuit via the East Ward to Dunany, Louisa, Dalesville, Brownsburg and back to Lachute—this being a course which offers the most representative roads, both good and bad, with obstacles and pitfalls to the cyclist at strategic points which were under observation by the Club's officials. Off from the road were the mud-holes, the water-hazards, and the rough country over which contestants traveled to qualify, both on the performance of their machines and their proficiency as drivers. These points were designated by appropriate names, such as, the Fish Bowl, Pilgrim's Progress, Simple Simon, etc.

The riders were despatched at intervals from Lachute, being awarded points on their time over the entire route and on their skill in manoeuvring over the observed sections.

MATTHEW SCOTT NINETY-FOUR YEARS YOUNG

Lachute Watchman counts it a privilege, in tendering congratulations again to Mr. Matthew Scott, one of the community's oldest residents, on the observance of his 94th birthday. Such greetings are a perennial rite which it is hoped the Watchman may re-echo for many years yet, joining with this gentleman's host of friends and relatives in their good wishes.

Mr. Scott was 94 years of age last Tuesday, but he is young in spirit. He is seen walking in the vicinity every day, is a regular church goer, saws wood, and enjoys a few fishing expeditions each spring.

Nearly 70 years ago he saw active service in the Fenian raid, and has in his possession a medal dated 1866 testifying to this fact.

Mr. Scott has spent his entire life in Argenteuil, has always been keenly interested in politics as a staunch Conservative and friend of Sir George Perley. He takes keen interest in affairs of the day.

in the chair, stated a desire that this presidency might be offered to an active member of the Club, that he fully appreciated the confidence entrusted in him during the past two years, but he desired a successor. Mr. Charron was unanimously elected as President, and other appointments made as noted above.

The new president, assuming the Chair, passed opinion that the Club needed increased membership and must necessarily eliminate expenditures save for the general upkeep. He proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Legault for his unfailing services to the Club.

A new schedule of fees, offering lower rates, was drawn up, as follows:

Family membership $25.00; Gentlemen $10.; Ladies $5.00; Students and Juniors $5.00; Associate members $3.00.

In two very effectual ways citizens persist in hampering the work of Lachute's fire-fighters. Either they scamper to the telephone to make enquiries, or they immediately drive to the fire impeding the progress of firemen rushing to the scene, also crowding the street with automobiles around the fire.

The fire truck has the right of way in responding to a call. Since many of the fire brigade drive from other sections of town, independently of the truck, citizens must also clear the road for them by drawing aside—or better still, by allowing time for the men to assemble and get to work before they hurry to satisfy their own curiosity.

Need of greater consideration was evidenced this week in a call to the West End which, fortunately, was for an outbreak of minor importance. Occurring in the evening, this summons attracted numerous motorists to the spot, with result that many of them held up the progress of firemen and made a general confusion at the scene. All of which is an obstacle to effective fire protection.

JAS. CHAMBERS ELECTED MAYOR OF CHATHAM

VOTING ON SATURDAY FOR INCORPORATION

Voting for mayoralty and aldermanic seats was held on Monday in the Municipality of Chatham. The ballots cast did not measure up to expectation, for it proved that Brownsburg largely withheld its vote in view of the approaching referendum on incorporation, which, if passed, will make the 'Burg a municipality within itself.

James Chambers was elected mayor of the municipality, with a majority of 54 votes over Wm. J. Burke. W. J. Graham and G. A. Clarke had previously withdrawn from the contest. A total of 550 ballots was cast. The successful candidates for councillors were Geo. Moncrieff, Adrien Rochon and Albini Foucault. The remaining contestant was Leo. Carriere, Alphonse Ouellette having withdrawn.

Considerable more enthusiasm is expected in the Brownsburg limits next Saturday, when the referendum will be held on incorporation.

Sir Geo. H. Perley visited among county constituents here last week-end.

wishing to join are requested to pay their fees to Mr. Frank A. Scott, who has been appointed as grounds superintendent and collector of membership and green fees.

The course will be in playing condition by May 24th.

A very impressive Memorial Service and the unveiling of a tablet in memory of the officers and men of the 148th Battalion who gave their lives in the Gt-at War 1914-1918, was held in the Redpath Library, McGill University, on Sunday last. Among those attending from this county were Mr. and Mrs. Ewen Albright, St. Andrews; Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mason, Brownsburg; Mr. and Mrs. D. Davis, Morin Heights; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Giles and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Giles, Lachute.

NORTH RIVER YIELDS 15lb. PIKE

The spring season has proven again that the old North River is not quite depleted of fish. Following in the footsteps of Isaac Walton, a party of young men from Lachute were out fishing on the river last Monday. Irwin Clark and his friends landed a pike which measured 38 inches and turned the scale at 15 lbs. (And they assert, this is no fish story!) There were several other sizeable fish among the catch.

ARGENTEUIL WOMEN'S INSTITUTE ACTIVITIES FOR THE MONTH

Twenty members of Chatham Institute listened to a very interesting address by Dr. Côté on Child Welfare and Public Health, answering their roll-call by giving House Cleaning Hints. Canadianization and National Events were featured by Mr. Norman Todd, who gave current events dealing with "Our King's Flag" and what the emblems stand for. At another occasion this branch also entertained the school children, presenting them with jubilee buttons, and planted a "jubilee tree."

Frontier Branch featured Canadianization and National Events with an interesting paper compiled and read by Mrs. A. Graham on "Our King and the Jubilee Celebrations." Current events on the same subject was the requirement of the roll-call. Three papers were also read on topics of Agriculture, one by Mrs. Jas. Murdoch on the raising of tomatoes being especially interesting. Mrs. J. Douglas read from "Canada Week by Week" on the daring and enterprise of Quebec women in different branches of agriculture. Mrs. A. Graham read "Superstitions in the Garden" from The Countrywoman, official magazine of the Associated Countrywomen of the World. The meeting numbered ten members and one visitor.

Jerusalem-Bethany had thirteen members and one visitor to hear Nurse L. Harrison's instructive address on bed-making and bathing of the invalid, with a demonstration, Child Welfare and Public Health being their subject.

Lachute Branch was favored with a speaker from Macdonald College, Mr. F. Rowe, who in his interesting talk on Beautifying Home Surroundings gave many helpful planting hints, as well as discussion on the beautifying

DEATH UNDER TRAGIC CIRCUMSTANCES

FUNERAL AT ARUNDEL

Arundel, Que.—News of the tragic death of Victor Staniforth, of LaTouche, Que., came as an unspeakable shock to his family and the community of Arundel a few days ago.

The deceased, who was in his 32nd year, was employed by the International Pulp and Paper Co. for a number of years, and it was while at his work at Lake Mongrain, Que., that a pile of logs came tumbling down on him and crushed him to death.

The accident occurred on April 29th. The body was then removed to his home at Arundel for burial, which took place May 3rd, in the United Church and was conducted by the Rev. Chas. Cushing. More than three hundred sorrowing relatives and friends gathered to pay their last respect to one of

COMPANY OF JOLIETTE REGIMENT LOCALIZED AT LACHUTE

Lachute is to be the headquarters of a company of the Joliette Infantry, Regiment 83. Company headquarters and three platoons have been re-localized from Louiseville, Que., to this town. One platoon of the same "D" Company will be at St. Jerome.

Other companies are situated three in Joliette and one at Shawinigan Falls, these with the Lachute company forming the 1st. battalion of the regiment.

Notice of the change was received this week by Mr. Guy Legault of Lachute, who is commissioned as lieutenant in the local company.

A statement in The Watchman to the effect that Mayor Dr. J. H. Mason would attend a proposed boxing match in Lachute, was given out in error by the promoters. Dr. Mason, on being approached, referred these gentlemen to the Police Committee, who have jurisdiction on entertainments coming into town. Dr. Mason's attitude was misunderstood by them for a personal interest in boxing matches, which—the Doctor assures us—is far from the case.

LACHUTE FAMILY BEREAVED

MRS. H. HAMPTON DIED AT HER HOME

The funeral of the late Mrs. Henry Hampton was held on Tuesday from her residence, Main Street, Lachute, to St. Simeon's Church, service being conducted by Rev. W. LeCras, rector of the Parish.

Mrs. Hampton was in her 84th year. She was born in 1852 at Sandfield, Ireland, leaving that country when 13 years old, to come to Canada. She married twice, her late husband having predeceased her nearly 13 years ago after 40 years of happy married life.

Mrs. Hampton had been an ardent community and church worker in Lachute. She had latterly lived in retirement. Lovingly tended by her daughters, Misses Lily and Ruby, at home, she succumbed to illness last Saturday and was laid to rest at the Lachute Cemetery on Tuesday. A large gathering of friends and mourners attended the funeral. Pallbearers were Messrs. Henry Sutton, Matthew Jones, S. S. Campbell, John Campbell, and Elliott, and Allan Paul.

Besides her two daughters in Lachute, there remain a family of four children to mourn the loss of a kind and devoted parent. They are—Mrs. Jno. Mitchell of Montreal, Harry Hampton of Transcona, Man.; Gordon Hampton of Grenville, Que., and Willie Hampton of Vancouver.

Arundel's beloved and popular young men.

Mr. Staniforth leaves to mourn his loss a loving wife, formerly Miss Yvonne Lupien of Three Rivers, and a daughter, Mary; his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. Staniforth; six sisters, Mrs. Thomas Bishop, Mrs. E. H. Hillrich, Mrs. A. Ivall, all of Montreal, Mrs. Robert Boyd of New Lis-keard, Ont., Mrs. G. Maxwell of Shawbridge, Que., and Laura at home, and three brothers, Charles, Roy and Borden, of Arundel.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Charles, Roy, and Borden Staniforth, A. Ivall, R. Hillrich and G. Maxwell.

Many beautiful floral offerings were received.

KEEP ON TRYING

A rooster sat on a high rail-fence
And oh! how he did crow—
While a little chick with eager eyes
Was listening down below.
The chick stretched his tiny, feathered neck
And stood upon his toes,
And tried to imitate that sound,
Well—so the story goes.
The mother hen was scratching near,
And amusedly, Cluck, cluck, clucked,
"If you keep trying, Little Chap,
You'll crow when you grow up".

DEW DROPS

By Aunt Jean

Billy Boy was shaking the tulips rather roughly—first one then the other in spite of his little sister's protests. "They are only old red flowers", he said quite scornfully, in reply to her entreaties. As he said that, he shook a huge red tulip until its satin petals dropped upon the ground. As the last one fell, he drew his fingers back and rubbed them quickly.

"A something stung me!"
he muttered, trying to hide the immense blister so that his sister would not notice it and say
"it serves you right, Billy Boy, you should not damage mother's flowers. Even if, as you say, they are only old red flowers, they are mother's flowers and you should be careful of them."

"Huh! they'll grow again", thought Billy Boy, shrugging his shoulders impatiently. "Not this year", a shrill voice said, quite severely, "and they are my flowers too, as well as your mother's flowers. I carried them water in a silver cup every evening, then stayed by and saw that no-one robbed them of it. I have been awake all night and had just dropped asleep inside the one you destroyed, when you upset me out of it. I only wish I had seen you sooner. I should have shot all of your fingers instead of just one. I think I should shoot some more of them as a lesson to you." With that, a tiny fairy with shimmering silver wings with pale gold and blue tints shading through them flew up onto a crimson and gold tulip and aimed her silver arrow at another of Billy Boy's fingers.

Billy Boy screamed in terror,
"Ha! you do not like being hurt, I see", said the fairy quite severely. "Cowards do not like being hurt themselves as a rule.
And it's always a coward who hurts flowers and the fairies that hide inside their satin cups." "I did not know", stammered Billy Boy, "that fairies hid inside flowers."
"Fairies hide everywhere that they can do good, Billy Boy.
Your sister here could tell you that, I am sure." "Oh yes!"
Maybelle cried quite eagerly, "I have told him that quite often, but he has never believed it. Perhaps he will now."
"Will you?" the fairy turned swiftly to Billy Boy, her voice reminding him of the sharp sound that his toy whip made as he had wished it through the air a few moments before.
"I will", said Billy Boy,
"Cross my heart I will." His eyes were so earnest when he spoke, that the fairy's voice softened.

"Very well then, if you will,

FUEL SAVING DEVICE

Smoke is waste fuel. An increase of smoke means a corresponding increase in the amount of fuel wasted. In order to check this waste in the heating or power plant of any building, factory or industrial enterprise, a means of checking the smoke in the stack should be provided. And there is no better method than by employing the latest scientific development which renders the subject one of positive control, and eliminates guesswork entirely.

Such equipment, known as a Smoke Alarm Relay, has now been placed on the market by Weston, the well-known makers of precision electrical instruments.

A composite picture of the simple yet effective system they have just released in perfected form is here shown by courtesy of Northern Electric, the Canadian distributors of Weston products. An interesting booklet describing this equipment may be had from any branch of that Company.

QUEER STREET NAMES

Paris claims to have more queerly-named streets than any other city in the world. They include "Ash Trays Street", "The Street of the Bad Boys", "Good Children Street", "Fishing Cat Street", "Green Dog Street", and "White Peacock Street". Others streets are "Son-in-law", "Hot Cat", "Lovely Leaves", "Windy Wood", "Red Ball", "Big Bottle" and "Little Mugs". Besides queerly-named streets Paris has "English" streets. They include those bearing the names of King George V., Queen Victoria, Charles Dickens, Lord Byron, Isaac Newton and Captain Scott.

MUNICIPAL MANAGEMENT

Municipal taxation is directly related to municipal expenditure and municipal expenditure is directly related to municipal management. Therefore unless we have sufficient management we have inefficient expenditure and higher taxation. —Ottawa Citizen.

In the days of Columbus municipal patriotism was so strong in Italy that every city hated its nearest neighbor.

WINDS UNEARTH OLD CITY

Buried two centuries ago by a flood, Chuh-sien, in the Honan Province of China, has just been blown to light by this winter's winds. In the reign of Chien Lung, 200 years ago, Chuh-sien was a flourishing town. Then the Yellow River rose in flood, and Chuh-sien was buried in mud and sand. Year after year the winds of Asia have blown over this spot, removing layer on layer of sand, and this winter the work of two centuries is complete. An unusually violent windstorm has revealed the Western Gate and a street of the lost city. The authorities intend to carry on Nature's work and complete the excavations of Chuh-sien.

TO ELIMINATE OVER-CROWDING

A bill has recently been introduced into the House of Commons in England which, if adopted, should result in eliminating many of the slums of the British Isles. Under the new bill, a house will be regarded as overcrowded if there are more than two persons sleeping in one room, and if sleeping accommodation in separate rooms is not available for occupants of opposite sexes more than ten years of age, other than persons living together as husband and wife.

N. S. PLANS DEPARTMENT OF MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS

Organization of a Provincial Department of Municipal Affairs to supervise municipal finance in Nova Scotia is provided for in a bill brought down in the Legislature by Premier Angus L. Macdonald.

At the department's head would be a commissioner with general charge over municipal borrowing and finance and with power to authorize borrowings by the municipalities, who must now go to the Legislature for this permission.

The Premier's measure is similar in some respects to a bill introduced by and later withdrawn by the late Conservative Government in 1932, but provisions which evoked opposition from the municipalities at that time have been dropped. Similar legislation already has been adopted in several other provinces.

DEVICE TO PURIFY WATER IS CANADIAN INVENTION

F. G. Negus, of Bridgewater, N.S., former electrical superintendent of the Canada Car plant at Amherst and co-inventor of the Watt-Negus train control, declares he has an invention that will purify water by "coagulative action of electrolysis."

The system uses a new principle of thermostatic control and removes all impurities and insoluble solids, Negus claims, and yet retains the freshness of the water by preserving its natural salts and compounds.

While waiting for patents he has applied for, the inventor exhibited a working model in Halifax.

AN UNVEILING

The President's oration ended thus: "Not vainly London's War-gassed victims perish. We are a part of them, and they of us: As such they will perpetually be cherished. Not many of them did much, but all did what They could, who stood like warriors at their post. (Even when too young to walk). This hallowed spot. Commemorates a proud, though poisoned host. We honor here" (he paused) "our Million Dead; Who, as a living poet has nobly said, 'Are now forever London'. Our Bequest Is to rebuild, for What-they-died-for's sake, A bomb-proof roofed Metropolis, and to make Gas-drill compulsory. 'Dulce et decorum est ...' " "The Road to Ruin."

Independence War Started in Ohio

The War of Independence found its beginnings in Ohio. In 1774 Governor Dunmore of Virginia took up arms against the crown because of its attempt to deprive Virginia of her claims to a portion of Ohio, which was then mainly occupied by the Indians under the control of the British. One of the greatest battles was fought October 10, 1774, at the junction of the Ohio and Kanawha rivers. There General Lewis with 1,500 men defeated the Ohio Federated Indians under Cornstalk.

LADY MOTORISTS IN DISTANCE TRIAL

Ottawa, Ont., May 9th.—In an unusual distance motoring trial for feminine drivers, 37 Ottawa women drivers competed in a 125-mile economy race which demonstrated that the cost of operating a motor car to-day is considerably less than it was even five years ago. It was the first contest of the kind for women to be staged in the district.

The route for the fair contestants was from Ottawa to Johnstown and Morrisburg, then back to the Capital. The gasoline consumption of each car entered was checked by officials of the Ottawa Automobile Club.

First in the heavy car class was a Hudson Eight sedan, driven by Mrs. R. E. Davidson. For the 125-mile trip, the Hudson averaged 20.95 miles per gallon and on a ton-mile basis, its mark was 45.776 ton-miles per gallon. The average for all cars competing, large and small, was slightly over 20 miles per gallon, an average that was far exceeded by the Terraplanes entered in the smaller car classes.

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, May 14th.—The prime minister's health has such a vital bearing on the whole course of politics in Canada for the next five or six months that the most important news story last week came from London rather than Ottawa. It was to the effect that Premier Bennett had consulted specialists, had been told that his heart was constitutionally sound, but that he must have rest.

Assuming that this bulletin was authentic, all the political correspondents on this side now have to do is to calculate what this means so far as the active leadership of the party is concerned.

Of course nothing spectacular at all may happen for some time. Premier Bennett may continue to lead the party both in the House and on the political hustings, taking matters as easy as he can for a while, drawing upon his lieutenants more, using the radio for political addresses, and making public appearances as infrequently as possible. In such event the choice of a successor to the prime minister may be deferred indefinitely.

As a matter of fact, the most likely course of events is that the prime minister will see how he gets on after a couple of weeks' back in the House. He will, unquestionably, keep in close touch with specialists. If he finds he can carry a load without difficulty, he will be inclined to try a little more and see how that goes. It is not inconceivable that we shall see the old R. B. with all his fire and vigor in the coming campaign. From the viewpoint of the spectator, this would add immeasurably to the drama and color of the election. Any Liberals I have talked to on the subject would rather have R. B. against them than some other leader. The only leader they seem to be secretly alarmed about would be Hon. H. H. Stevens, judging from comment I have heard.

BUSY BEHIND THE SCENES

Although Ottawa has not produced any exciting news stories for a couple of weeks, there is quite a bit of doing behind the scenes. The legal draftsmen are writing legislation, and the law officers of the crown are studying the drafts to see if they will pass muster when the constitutionality is discussed. The cabinet is dealing with public works tenders, with unemployment agreements with the provinces, with the difficult problem in Saskatchewan, and rowing the two political camps are manufacturing and distributing ammunition. The Conservative leaders are getting a little anxious for some definite decision about the leadership, and the Liberal file of the Liberal party are wishing that Mackenzie King would come out with a program a little more engaging and dynamic than the one. A number of members come around getting caught up with their correspondence, taking care of other odd jobs they perform to accumulate during the season. In another week we shall be at it again full blast. The business men here and there are beginning to protest against the proposals to set up six or eight boards to regulate industry. What with the Reform Program as already set forth and the new measures to implement the price spreads report, there will be six or seven thousand additional civil servants required, and a tax bill of at least eight or ten millions a year will be incurred. Since the budget has not been balanced for years, this additional money will have to come from borrowing, or new taxes. On the other side it may be argued that even ten millions a year would be a small price to pay to get rid of the trade and employment abuses, the sweat shop conditions, the exploitation of the primary producer which were disclosed in the mass buying commission. So it would. The acid test is, however, will these new commissions end the abuse? The advocates will, no doubt, argue that they will. But there are a good many sceptics, in business circles and elsewhere.

DISTURBING REPORTS FROM JAPAN

The reports from Japan on trade reprisals are not reassuring. We are apparently going to permit one of our best customers to start a trade war against us, because we are not prepared to buy a little more freely from them. For every dollar's worth of goods we buy from Japan, we sell four dollars, and yet we impose on Japanese goods a currency dump which in many cases sends the rate up to 150 or 200 per cent. This is an issue which Canada, as a great exporting country, will have to face seriously before long. If we are not prepared to buy we cannot hope to go on selling; and such action as that of Japan last week gives vivid evidence of it.

R. L. Calder on Unemployment Problems Speaker at Lions Club

The regular fortnightly dinner of the Lions Club was held on Wednesday evening at the "Cosy Inn", with Vice-President Wm. Cottingham in the Chair. Lion J. A. MacKimmie was boosted by Lion K. McQuat and prize winners were Lions J. E. Walker and Angelo Fassio. As several members from the Montreal branch were present, they had the honor of taking back with them the "travelling lion", which has been held in Lachute since the inception of the Club.

The guest speaker of the evening was Mr. R. L. Calder, whom Lachute is proud to count among its citizenry, and his brief talk was accepted with marked appreciation. Mr. Calder spoke of a group of serious-minded men in Montreal who are deeply studying the problem of unemployment. He could not agree with the statements of certain leaders, who had asserted that one tenth of the population of Montreal would always have to be fed. "To me", said the speaker, "that spells defeatism. We have a country of vast resources, with unlimited wealth amidst great poverty, and the only salvation is to solve the problem of proper distribution. The priceless qualities of character and vitality are being undermined by idleness and doles, and the real solution is that our people may be given a chance to earn their own living in useful work." The matter of road building under systematized control, where politics must be laid aside and the profit motive eliminated; adoption of town planning as in England, where millions are spent with no political interference, were advocated as means of providing work. Rather than state-aided back-to-the-land schemes, Mr. Calder would have abandoned farms converted into 10 and 20-acre truck gardens, where intensive work could be done and small scale farming engaged in.

Lion E. Walker expressed hearty thanks to the speaker for his timely and sound address.

The speaker for June 5th., was announced as J. Alex. Edmison, and Canon Shatford for the June 19th. meeting.

Rev. David McLennan in Reminiscent Mood

SPEAKER FOR UNITED JUBILEE SUPPER

A favorite of the radio congregations, Rev. David A. McLennan of Emmanuel United Church, Montreal, delighted a local audience last Thursday evening, following a Jubilee Supper held by the ladies' organization of Lachute United.

Supper was served in the church hall — a repast which drew warm approval both in personal comment and from the platform. A large gathering were on hand.

Assembling later in the church, listeners were entertained by Rev. McLennan recalling, in a humorous vein, certain of his observations on visits to Scotland and England during recent years. Reference to spots in the south of Scotland brought to light many interesting phases of the country's past and present. Shades of Burns, and Scott, and the lovable Stevenson, greeted the wanderer in these parts. On Maxwellton Braes the romance of Annie Laurie became somewhat of a shattered illusion, as he learned of the unlasting devotion which had inspired an immortal song.—At Dumfries, scenes of Sir James Barrie's schooldays, which had perhaps afforded recollections for the groundwork and creation of Peter Pan.—At Edinburgh, the visitor's first port of call, an atmosphere of hail-fellow-well-met. Here, said the speaker, there was little evidence of superiority or snobbery. "Here everyone with oatmeal in his veins, or any remnants of the Shorter Catechism, must surely experience a feeling of pride."

From the impressive side-lights of this country, Rev. David McLennan stepped lightly to the City of London, where in he had unearthed many antiquated customs, rooted in the solemnity of early ages — customs which were observed to

FORMER LACHUTE RESIDENT DIED IN MINNESOTA

Word has been received of the death, on Wednesday, May 1st., of Mrs. John N. McGibbon of Sauk Centre, Minnesota.

Mrs. McGibbon, who was formerly Miss Louise Crozier, was born near Lachute in 1862, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crozier who came to Canada from Scotland in their early youth.

In 1881 she married John N. McGibbon of Brownsburg, who was employed as a miller in Minneapolis, and the following year moved with him to Sauk Centre, where they have since resided. There, as a pioneer 53 years ago, she took an active interest in the community, devoting a great deal of time to church matters and the welfare of others.

The funeral service was held at the Episcopal Church, of which she was a devoted member, interment being made at Greenwood Cemetery.

Her husband, and five children, as well as a host of loving friends, are left to mourn her loss.

Hornby Settlement Plan Defended by Promoter

Brigadier-General M. L. Hornby has written the following letter to the Kingston Whig-Standard in reply to an editorial criticism on his scheme of organized immigration:

Lethbridge, Alberta.

To the Editor, "Kingston Whig-Standard"

My attention has been directed to an article, regarding British Immigration, which appeared in your issue of February 6. As it would appear that there is grave misconception as to the type of immigration which I am advocating, and also as to the details of my Plan of Settlement, I venture to reply to some of your arguments against a resumption of immigration.

At the outset, I must state quite definitely that what I am advocating is the organized immigration of selected British families, in conjunction with a policy of financed and supervised settlement on the land. I must emphasize, too, that the finance of any Settlement Plan, which is agreed between the Governments of Canada and the United Kingdom, is assured by the financial provisions of the 1922 Empire Settlement Act. That Act made available the sum of £3,000,000 annually from 1922 to 1937, for the purpose of promoting Overseas settlement. In order to obtain our proportion of this vote, all that is necessary is for our Federal Government to approach the United Kingdom Government in a businesslike way and with a definite scheme of settlement.

Your article, now under reference, puts forward two principal objections to a resumption of immigration at the present time—the objection of labor based on our existing deplorable condition of national unemployment; and the objection of farmers. If your space permits, I will deal with both these objections in detail. Before doing so, however, I should like to invite attention to the broad national aspect of a resumption of immigration at the present time.

Objective in the Past

The great development which took place throughout Canada, and particularly in the Canadian West, during the quarter century immediately prior to the present so called "depression", may be said to have had as its objective the raising of our national population to a total of twenty million, of which seven million was to be in the Prairie Provinces. That was the definite and avowed objective which we all had in view. Our development was, in fact, preparation for incoming new population, which we all know that Canada can support, and which we then were agreed and openly declared that she needs.

It was to that end that our Governmental structures in the Prairie Provinces were built up—our three Provincial Governments with their large staffs, costly buildings, and high annual overhead. On the basis of our present population, which is less than two million five hundred thousand in the three Prairie Provinces, there is no justification whatever for three separate provinces and three separate Governmental structures, with their high annual overhead. But there was ample justification for them in the light of our then objective of a seven million population; and there is still ample justification for them now, if we set ourselves to work without any further delay to realize our former aim and reach the population objective which we have set before ourselves for so many years past.

Similarly, the extensive public services of all sorts, which have been established in our three Prairie Provinces, are hardly justified by our present population—if only on the grounds that our present population cannot bear the financial burden of them. But they are amply justified if we set to work again, even now, to bring in additional population.

Our railway development, too, throughout the three Prairie Provinces, has had as its objective to furnish transportation services for a population at least twice what we at present have. If we had not had as our objective a population of at least five million in the Prairie Provinces, such extensive railway development would never have been undertaken.

Everyone who has lived in the Prairie Provinces during the last twenty years will agree that the national objective of a large increase in our population was the sole motive for the great and costly development of all sorts which we have carried out. Let us bear this in mind when we tackle the solution of the economic problems which confront us today. Have there been any changes during the past four years of so called "depression", either in our conception of our national destiny, or in the capacity of our country to support a larger population? No! There are no grounds whatever for abandoning our old objective; no reasons why we should not pursue with confidence our former aims.

Our Economic Problems

After four years of acute "depression", Canada is faced with three serious economic problems requiring immediate solution: Heavy taxation; railway deficits; unemployment.

While it may be true that there is no single remedy which will of itself alone solve any one of these problems, it is safe to say that a wisely formulated policy of organized immigration from Britain, in conjunction with a plan of supervised and financed land settlement, will go a long way towards alleviating the troubles that arise from them.

Burden of Taxation

The burden of our taxation can only be eased in two ways—either by reducing it, or by spreading it over a larger number of persons. Can taxation be reduced? Probably not very much. Moreover,—is it wise to still further reduce civil salaries and public employment, if we can find any other means of easing the burden of taxation for the existing population? In the judgment of many, our reductions have already gone far enough. The real solution of our problem of excessive taxation seems to be to bring in more people,—provided, of course, that they can be settled in such a way as to become self-supporting and not a burden on the communities in which they settle,—that is to say, provided that they can become effective taxpayers, and so share our taxation burdens with us. This after all, has been our aim in the past, for many years back, when we made the expenditures which we have now to carry by taxation. We must resume the pursuit of our old aims, if we are to pull out of our present taxation troubles.

Railway Deficits

What is the solution of the problem of insufficient revenues to make our National Railways economically a paying proposition? Fundamentally, there is but one solution—more traffic: larger passenger and freight traffics. Considerable alleviation is, of course, to be found in a reduction of expenses by co-ordination of services, and by improved methods of administration. But the amount that can be saved in those ways is not the full solution of the problem. The solution of the problem is heavier passenger and freight traffics, producing larger revenues. This can only be brought about by means of a larger population along the railway lines. It is true that, should trade revive, traffics would increase; but the amount of increase which can be looked for from an improvement in trade is not likely to be sufficient of itself to enable the railways to earn a return on the very large amount of capital which has been spent on their development, particularly in the three Prairie Provinces—development undertaken, I may again remind you, with the sole object of providing transportation services for a population at least double that which they at present serve.

What is the remedy for unemployment? There is only one remedy—work. Work is the only real solution for our unemployment problem. How are we going to provide work for our at present unemployed?

Is it to be by a further extensive program of public buildings in our cities? I doubt if anyone will agree with that. We have already a sufficiency of public buildings. They are not revenue producing. They do not provide an actual living for those in occupation of them. On the contrary, they necessitate the levying of additional taxes in order to maintain them.

Shall we create work by further railway development? The answer to this is definitely "No." It need not be discussed further, because at the present time our railway facilities are too great for our existing population, and indeed too great for a very much larger population.

Shall work be created by the construction of homes, and if so, whether in our cities or on the land? Let me remind you here that the construction of small homes is one of the most certain means of distributing wages to a large number of workers and over a large number of industries. If we consider all the materials necessary for the construction of small houses, lumber, hardware of many different descriptions, bricks, cement, paper, paint, etc., it is easy to realize how many industries and subsidiary industries are directly affected by the demand for such materials. Then there are the carpenters and artificers of various sorts employed on the

HON. T. D. BOUCHARD FOR QUEBEC CABINET?

There has appeared on the order paper of Quebec Legislative Assembly the notice of a bill by Premier Taschereau to create a Department combining Municipal Affairs, Trade and Commerce. This measure, it is considered, will provide for the entry of Hon. T. D. Bouchard, Speaker of the Assembly and Mayor of St. Hyacinthe, Que., into the Cabinet.

NOT DELINQUENT JUVENILES BUT DELINQUENT PARENTS

Charles A. Blevins, probation officer in a Texas county, suggested a most significant shift in emphasis concerning an important social problem recently when he stated that "delinquent parents, not delinquent children, cause juvenile crime." The significance of home life was the subject of Mr. Blevins' discussion, which indicated both that some parents have an insufficient understanding of what is just and decent, and that the juvenile mind frequently picks up through suggestion and association attitudes and views which the parents may not consciously have meant to impart.

To the extent that delinquency is attributable to heredity, the parents are wholly responsible, though apparently there is not a great deal they can do about it. In so far as it is due to environment, they are likewise largely responsible. Moreover in this instance there is a great deal that they can do about it. At the least, Mr. Blevins concluded, they can provide their children with a clean and decent place in which to live and an atmosphere which will encourage rather than discourage good citizenship and all of the things that go with it.

First Dog Sheep Herder

The Old English sheep dog perhaps was the first dog ever trained to tend the shepherd's flocks. The present breed is supposed to be the direct descendant, without cross, from the original stock that ruled the pastures of England in the Nineteenth century. The herding instincts have become highly specialized and the great strength, muscular development and heavy coat fits it to withstand the most rigorous climates and most fatiguing work. This dog is of striking appearance with a long, shaggy coat of gray, blue or grizzle. Any semblance of brown is undesirable. The average shoulder height is about 22 inches, with the females running slightly under this. It is bob-tailed and contrary to general belief it is not born tailless, but the appendage is docked in infancy.

The Code of Hammurapi

The Code of Hammurapi was promulgated by the Babylonian ruler of that time (2047 to 2025 B. C.) for the use of the countries throughout the Babylonian empire. The code is engraved on a block of black diorite nearly eight feet high, and was discovered in 1901 and 1902 broken in three pieces. There are 65 laws on the obverse and about 40 defaced at the bottom. The reverse contains 183. The code begins with witchcraft, which connects it with the religious code; passes through all grades of social and domestic life, ending with a scale of official wages for all classes of work men. It also deals with money transactions and the laws of property.

actual work of construction. And finally there is the furnishing of the houses with stoves and heaters; beds and bedding; tables, chairs and cupboards; carpets, rugs and linoleums; china, crockery and cutlery; cooking utensils, etc., etc. The range of industries covered by home building is in fact, so extensive that it may almost be said to embrace seventy-five per cent of all our national industries. The construction of large buildings in our cities, on the other hand, does not distribute employment and wages to anything like the same number of persons in proportion to the amount expended; and it makes no call on many industries on which small home building makes heavy demands. The construction of small homes seems then to be the best means of dealing with unemployment at the present time.

Canada's Policy

To sum up: We need more people to help us to carry the burden of the past development of this country; to help us to provide more traffic in order to produce revenue for our railways; and to help us to afford work to our present unemployed—work which can best be afforded by the construction of small homes. Does not the solution of our present difficulties seem to be, then, new immigration in conjunction with a policy of financed home building for the newcomers?

It is clear that the new people must be placed on the land. Our cities and towns are already full enough, while of land we have much vacant, or only sparsely occupied. On the land the new people can get a good living, raising for themselves most of what they need. They must be so settled that they will have the best possible chance of making themselves self-supporting and independent; and in such a way too that they will be content to remain here. Real homes on the land must be our aim.

We Must Sell Settlement

I am sometimes told that it would be improper for the Federal Government to make any effort to obtain additional population from Britain, if the necessary finance for settlement has to be provided by the United Kingdom. Such scruples are difficult to understand, and they do not help us to solve our problems. Why should there be any scruples about offering to sell settlement to the United Kingdom, when we know that she needs it; when we know that she has voted money to promote it; and when we know that we can offer settlement of a description which will be entirely satisfactory? We have no such scruples about trying to sell our wheat, or lumber, or other produce to the United Kingdom. Why, then, such scruples about selling settlement? Settlement, after all, is made up of what we have, what we produce, and what we manufacture. Settlement consists of land, of which we have plenty to sell; of houses and buildings, or materials to construct houses and buildings, all of which is produced in Canada out of our own primary products, and by our own workmen; of farm implements, produced in Canada out of our own material and by our own workmen; of foundation livestock, raised in Canada by our own farmers, the result of their own labor; of house furniture and equipment, clothing and food supplies, all of which are Canadian products, the results of the work of our own people on materials which we ourselves produce. What is the difference between trying to sell this, in the form of settlement, and trying to sell the various items to the United Kingdom separately, as we are today trying to do as part of our ordinary trade with the United Kingdom? What reason can there be for not making an effort to supply the United Kingdom with the settlement which she needs?

It would be far better business for us to sell at the above items in the form of settlement than to sell them to the United Kingdom separately. If we sell them separately, we ship them to the United Kingdom, and do not see them again. If we sell them in the form of settlement we retain them here, utilizing them to build up our country still further; and at the same time we obtain the population which we so much need to help us to carry our present burdens of taxation, railways, etc. And in doing this we provide our own people with work—work for many years ahead.

I urge every Board of Trade and every labor organization throughout Canada to take up this matter with their representatives in the Federal House of Commons, requesting them to move the Government to early action. Let us bear in mind that Canada has been developed in the past by British immigration and British capital. Through a resumption of British immigration, supported by British capital, she may again move forward by increased employment and better business generally to prosperity, if she so desires, and acts accordingly.

Objections

There is, I know, a deep rooted objection on the part of organized labor to any new immigration. That objection is based on the supposition that new immigrants would be competitors for existing jobs, which are scarce enough as it is; and that they would soon stand in the breadline and become a drain on our finances. Those ideas are founded on an entire misconception of what properly organized immigration and financed settlement means.

Considering the great volume of employment to be afforded by properly financed land settlement, there is no class in Canada which should be more in favor of new immigration than our manual workers.

I am well aware, too, of the objections which our farmers have to new settlement on the land, on the grounds that it will increase production, I have already dealt fully, in previous circulars, with such objections, and I need not do more than recapitulate them here. Farmers need not fear increased production by new settlers. It will not make itself felt for three or four years, and then, if it is properly organized and supervised, as it must be, it will be chiefly in the form of livestock, and other locally consumable products, rather than in wheat, for which we have now no market. Moreover, the increased employment for manual workers, in preparing ready-made farm homes for the new immigrants; in supplying new implements and tools to operate them; and in providing numerous necessary equipments and supplies, will create a demand for farm products—meat, butter, milk, eggs, etc.—and so will tend to raise prices long before any increase in the amount of agricultural products will be felt. And the local price of livestock will be further improved by purchases of foundation livestock for the new settlers. Purchases of land will tend to stabilize land values and to improve its price—a further advantage to farmers. As a farmer myself, I anticipate only advantage from a denser population, and a busier Canada, with more money in the hands of manual workers owing to better employment.

In this connection let me give you some figures, showing the proportions of Canadian farm products consumed internally, and exported:

Livestock:	Domestic Consumption	Export
Cattle and Beef	97.3%	2.7%
Hogs and Pork	95.4	4.6
Sheep and Lambs	99.4	.6
Butter	98.9	1.1
Poultry	98.3	1.7
Eggs	99.8	.2
Potatoes	96.9	3.1
Oats	94.1	5.9
Barley	88.2	11.8

These figures apply to the fiscal year 1933-34. Do they not tend to show that an increased demand for meat, cream, butter, poultry, and eggs, arising from increased purchasing power of our largest class of consumers, would soon absorb our present margin of less than 5 per cent in all the items mentioned? What would follow? Surely better prices for agricultural products would follow. I repeat that a resumption of immigration from Britain, in conjunction with organized, financed and supervised settlement on the land, would be a boon to our farmers.

Before I pass on from the question of the objections of farmers to a resumption of immigration, you will probably expect me to say something about our surplus of wheat. What is that surplus? We have the word of the general manager of the Canadian Co-operative Wheat Producers, Mr. John McFarland, that Canada's wheat carry-over will be well under 100,000,000 bushels on August 1st next. That was the statement made by him to the Saskatchewan School Trustees Association at Moose Jaw on February 14 last, according to the Calgary Herald of February 15. A carry-over of 100,000,000 bushels is only slightly above the pre-depression normal carry-over. In other words the bug-bear of a glut of wheat has gone overboard. Our fears in this respect are allayed. But it is as well to consider, at the present juncture, what was the cause of the glut of wheat, which has hung over us for the past three years. Was it over-production, or was it under-consumption? The answer, in my opinion is: under-consumption of wheat in Europe, due to decreased purchasing power of the masses, such under-consumption being aggravated, as far as Canadian wheat was concerned, by increased European production of wheat.

Insofar as the wheat glut of the past four years was due to over-production, it would be wise to curtail our wheat production in future, and to turn our attention to the production of coarse grains as stock feed. On the other hand, insofar as it was due to under-consumption, resulting from lack of purchasing power of the largest class of wheat consumers, manual workers, the solution of the difficulty lies in stimulating consumption by restoring the purchasing power of workers by increasing employment; and in view of our present comparatively small margin of production of meat, butter, poultry and eggs, over consumption, and of the probability that when employment improves, when the purchasing power of the workers comes back, and when their demand for the farmers' products becomes effective, that margin will become even smaller, is there not a further reason for advising our farmers to give more attention to the raising of coarse grains instead of wheat, using these coarse grains as stock feed?

A general election is close at hand. It is perhaps too much to expect that the matter can be dealt with in a comprehensive way before the election. But it is to be hoped that previous to and during the election careful consideration will be given to a policy of new immigration from Britain, in conjunction with a plan of financed land settlement, as a means of increasing employment, assisting our railways, and widening the incidence of our existing taxation.

this day, with little apparent reason for their continuance. The Jubilee aspect of this occasion was fittingly climaxed by Rev. McLennan's closing remarks. In an intimate reference to His Majesty's Christian principles and to the lofty ideals of our honored House of Windsor, he left with the audience perhaps a warmer devotion, a finer realization — and the National Anthem which concluded the evening was indeed a prayer and a tribute from loyal hearts.

Rev. W. B. Rosborough was chairman of the gathering. To his appreciative remarks Rev. Robt. Strange added a warm expression of thanks to the guest speaker, to the ladies of the church for their able catering, and to the church choir, who supplemented the program with two excellent renderings.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE

It is unfortunate that children in smaller towns and rural districts do not get lessons in Domestic Science and Manual Training. I have wondered if it could not be managed by co-operation among several municipalities. Now that the roads are kept open the year round, it seems as if something might be done about it. The cost need not be too expensive as simple equipment can be used. There is a great difference of opinion in mothers over the value of Domestic Science in the schools. I have been doing a little detective work on the subject and find that the women who do not like it are the women who do not allow their daughters to make the best use of it. The children who get the greatest good have mothers who allow them to do things the way they are taught at school without interference and provide an opportunity for them to do so. I know some mothers who have their daughters make at home, each week, the dishes that they learned at school. Children should be allowed to do things their own way and if they are not bossed, will enjoy doing it. Do not take the joy out of the children's work by too constant instruction, nor by belittling the methods used in school. After all, that is one of the reasons for taking Domestic Science—to learn new methods. Home and School Clubs and Women's Institutes might study the possibilities of co-operation, so that when times get a little better, they might open the way.

FREEDOM FOR PARENTS

We hear a good deal about freedom for children these days but it seems to me we might consider freedom for parents too. There are so many older parents who have no freedom whatever. Everything they do is decided for them by their children. It is meant for kindness but surely people should be allowed to do what they like when they get old. Children will take it upon themselves to decide where their parents will live, what they may do, the clothes they may wear, where they go, what they may eat, and so on. It is all done out of loving kindness but to me it always seems a form of impertinence. Older people are often very rebellious but say nothing as they recognise that their children are trying to be considerate. Don't make old people of your parents by wrapping them up in cotton wool. Let them do what they like. It may be the first time in their lives that they have been able to.

A MATTER OF OPINION

Queer isn't it, the way two people will arrive at diametrically opposite conclusions? I heard a woman say the other day that instead of buying one pair of good gloves, she bought two cheap pairs and in that way always managed to have a clean pair on hand. Another day, a different friend remarked that she found it paid to buy one pair of very good gloves, because they lasted seasons and she always had the satisfaction of wearing a good glove, and they seemed to stay clean longer than the cheap ones. In the end, these women paid the same price for their gloves. One stressed convenience and the other the quality. They each got what they wanted.

ACNE

There are so many young people of teen-age who suffer from pimples and blackheads, that it is almost thought to be normal. This condition is called Acne. If serious, Acne should be under a doctor's care. Milder cases may yield to home treatment. The first thing to be looked into is the diet. Excess sugars and starches, such as candies, sodas, pies and rich cakes, should be limited. Fats, such as fried foods, sausages and pork should be restricted. Thorough scrubbing of the afflicted parts (usually the face and back), should be a daily routine. Tincture of green soap, which may be purchased at the druggist's will be of benefit. Rub the lather into the skin and allow it to remain on for an hour. Wash thoroughly

COUNTRY BORN

We who were born
In country places
Far from cities
And shifting faces,
We have a birthright
No man can sell,
And a secret joy
No man can tell.
For we are kindred
To lordly things:
The wild duck's flight
And the white owl's wings,
To pike and salmon,
To bull and horse,
The curlew's cry
And the smell of gorse.
Pride of trees,
Swiftmess of streams,
Magic of frost
Have shaped our dreams.
No baser vision
Their spirit fills
Who walk by right
The naked hills.

Eagle Was on First Coin Issued by United States

When the bald eagle was up for discussion as to its being placed on the seal of the United States, says Scientific American, Benjamin Franklin opposed it and offered the American wild turkey as being more distinctly American than the Caspian old hawk. The eagle won and was adopted on June 20, 1776, as an emblem for the great seal; it was also placed on the first coin issued by the United States, in 1793.

This same old bird has been held in reverence and superstition regard as well as used in symbolism and heraldry, and depicted in all methods of art expression known to the North American aborigines back in prehistoric times.

As one of the outstanding totemic animals, the eagle gave its name to many clans, tribes, and fraternities, religious and otherwise. In North America, nearly every clan or gens had an eagle emblem at some period in its history—it was depicted on pottery, basketry, textiles, headwork, suitwork, shields, crests, totem poles, house and grave posts, pipes, rattles, and nearly all objects pertaining to cult and ceremony of many old tribes.

A Baffling Beetle

Air-breathing beetles which, apparently, can live for months under the water without coming to the surface, are described by scientists of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington as a species of strange insects whose ways of life are so obscure that they are little known, even by professional entomologists. These insects are found in the cold rapid brooklets flowing through dark laurel thickets in the Great Smoky mountains. The adult beetles of this species show no special breathing mechanism which is not possessed by beetles which spend all their existence in the free air and to whom any extended immersion would no doubt be fatal. These beetles have no gills, so far as can be ascertained, by which oxygen is extracted from water.

with tepid water. If the skin feels too dry after this treatment use a little cold cream. As a rule a person with Acne should not use cold cream as the skin is apt to be too oily.

NEW RUGS

Carpet manufacturers tell us that the best way to lengthen the life of a rug is to keep it clean as the small particles of dirt imbedded in the rug will wear out the fibre. They recommend the daily use of the carpet sweeper and the vacuum cleaner to be used when necessary. The pile of the carpet will set through use, and they advise not using a vacuum too often while the carpet is new as the vacuum cleaner may loosen the pile until it is thoroughly set. After the carpet has been in use for a time, the vacuum cleaner is the only satisfactory method of keeping it clean.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, May 19th., is "Mortals and Immortals."

The Golden Text is: "In the way of righteousness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death." (Proverbs 12:28).

The following passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; And we shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free . . . Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death." (John 8:31, 32, 51).

"Man in the likeness of God as revealed in Science cannot help being immortal. Though the grass seemeth to wither and the flower to fade, they reappear . . . In Science, man's immortality depends upon that of God, good, and follows as a necessary consequence of the immortality of good." (Science and Health, page 81.)

"TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION" FOR PAST 25 YEARS"

Then ALL-BRAN Brought Welcome Relief

Read this voluntary letter from Mr. Lecour: "I have been troubled with constipation for the past 25 years. I tried practically every cathartic without results.

"Recently, I determined to give Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a fair trial. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has not only helped me, but I believe it is an actual relief for chronic constipation."—Mr. Henry E. Lecour. Address upon request.

*Due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.
Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. It also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. Often more effective than "bulk" in fruits and vegetables, as it does not break down within the body.

Isn't this natural food pleasanter than patent medicines? Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved, see your doctor.

GETTING IN SHAPE FOR LACHUTE FAIR

Less than a month away is the big event of the year—The Lachute Fair, June 12-13-14-15 are the dates and already there is considerable talk as to increased entries, for enquiries are coming in daily to Secretary A. Bothwell. The varied committees are settling down to work and a splendid program of horse racing, vaudeville, midway and fireworks, in addition to the grand exhibit of prize cattle and horses promise a record-breaker for our visitors. Keep the dates in mind. Talk it up and prove a real booster for the Fair.

REMEMBRANCE

CORRESPONDENCE

Perhaps there is nothing more sad to us who are advanced in years than the passing of those who in earlier years were so closely associated with us, especially in church and charitable work; and I feel keenly the loss of my very dear friend, Mrs. Henry Hampton. In those days she was truly a pillar of the English Church. Nothing was ever denied, of effort and money, to forward the best interests of the whole community.

So I ask you of the newer generation to remember, it is individual effort that builds and keeps up any church or community. May we all be bound up in the bonds of love to others.

FOUR MAJORITY FOR INCORPORATION AT BROWNSBURG

By a slim majority of only four votes, Saturday's public ballot in Brownsburg resulted in the decision for incorporation. The village will now be distinct from the Municipality of Chatham, of which it has hitherto formed a part. Results of the referendum have been forwarded to the Quebec Department of Municipal Affairs, from whom authorization for the incorporation and formation of a council is now awaited.

There were 86 votes recorded in favor, and 82 against incorporation of the village.

Batteries: Martin, Leroux and Proulx; Mingam and Underhill.

Umpires: H. St. Onge (at plate) Charlebois (base).

FORMER LACHUTE LADY RECEIVES JUBILEE MEDAL

At a presentation of the King's Silver Jubilee Medals made at a meeting of the Almonte (Ont.) Council, Miss Caroline Catton, formerly of these parts, was among the three honored recipients. Mayor McCallum of Almonte made the presentation.

Miss Catton is now matron of the Rosamund Memorial Hospital, and the award comes as a welcome recognition of the position she fills in ministering to the needs of the afflicted. T. A. Thompson, M.P., and Mrs. Thompson were also decorated with the King's prized tokens.

The Interprovincial Softball League will operate this season with six teams instead of seven, as reported last week. Hawkesbury Maple Leafs withdrew at a meeting in Hawkesbury just recently.

DAUGHTER OF MR. & MRS. H. AYERS DIED SUDDENLY

The sympathy of this community is felt for Mr. and Mrs. H. Ayers in the loss of their eldest daughter, Eva Pearl, who died rather suddenly this morning at the family apartment, Grove Hill Avenue, N. D. G. Miss Ayers had not enjoyed the best of health, but her condition had been much improved of late. On Wednesday evening however she was seized with a stroke, to which she succumbed this morning, Mrs. H. Ayers having meanwhile been summoned to her bedside.

Besides her devoted parents, the passing of Miss Ayers is mourned by her three brothers and three sisters, namely Mrs. E. Deslauriers (Isabelle), Lachute, Mrs. Payette (Blanche) of Notre Dame de Grace, and Miss Monique Ayers of Lachute, Thomas, Leonard and Richard Ayers also at home.

The funeral, according to arrangements known at this time, will be held at 10 a.m. (D.S.T.) on Monday, with service at the St. Julien Church, Lachute Mills.

SIR GEORGE PERLEY HAS LEFT FOR GATINEAU HILLS

Sir George Perley, wearied by the exacting state duties which he has fulfilled during Premier Bennett's illness, is taking a well-earned holiday in the Gatineau Hills. Accompanied by Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes, Sir George left Ottawa by seaplane on Monday, his destination being a fishing club at Echo Beach in the Gatineau district. Here he will enjoy a complete relaxation.

Those best acquainted with Sir George's strenuous routine during recent months have marveled at his unfailing energy. He has not spared himself in execution of all the tasks which have fallen to his lot, and perhaps no man in the Dominion is more deserving of a brief vacation.

MAYOR HOUE TO BE AT DOLLARD CELEBRATION

The Watchman is informed that Mayor Camillien Houe of Montreal will honor the gathering at Carillon on Sunday, May 26th., to celebrate the anniversary of the Long Sault and the heroism of Dollard Des Ormeaux. The occasion will mark 275 years since the battle in 1660 at the foot of the Long Sault Rapids, where a monument now stands to the memory of Dollard and his compatriots who made a gallant stand at that point.

The re-union of French Canadians assembled each year at Carillon to commemorate this occasion is enthusiastically attended. An address will be given in the evening by Mayor Houe, and the ceremonies during afternoon and evening will be accompanied with music by a parochial symphony orchestra.

ONLY THREE WEEKS TO LACHUTE FAIR

Less than three weeks and the big event of the year, the Lachute Fair, will be upon us. It is very encouraging and indeed pleasing to see so many of our townsfolk busy with the paintbrush and otherwise beautifying their premises. This will give a good impression to our visitors when the town extends welcome to them on the 13th., 14th. and 15th. of next month.

There are assurances of strong competition in all lines of exhibits at the Fair; enquiries are coming in daily for entry blanks.

The Fair has become most popular and its growth is largely due to the continued inter-

Fifteenth Annual Convention of County Women's Inst.

MISS H. B. McCAIN WAS SPEAKER FROM PROVINCIAL ORGANIZATION

The Fifteenth Annual Convention of Argenteuil Women's Institutes was held on Saturday in Lachute Consolidated School, with 96 ladies in attendance.

Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring, County President, in welcoming the delegates, claimed that the large attendance proved the esteem in which the organization was held in this county and thanked the ladies for attending. It was notable that the Morin Heights branch, farthest in distance from Lachute, had the largest number of delegates present.

The morning session was taken up with reports from the different County Convenors. Activities in Agriculture, Canadian Industries, Canadianization and National Events, Child Welfare and Public Health, Education and Better Schools, Home Economics, Immigration, Legislation and Publicity were reviewed in reports which the Institutes had reason to be proud of and which were well worthy of the wives and daughters of Argenteuil. The convenors on these subjects for the coming year are: Mrs. Harvey Miller, Mrs. Wyman McGibbon, Mrs. R. J. Ivall, Mrs. L. M. Hooker, Mrs. G. G. Mitchell, Mrs. Austin Kyle, Mrs. J. S. Giles, Mrs. Kenneth Sly, Mrs. Archie Graham—with Mrs. J. D. Davis, Hon. President; Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring, President. Mrs. Peter McQuaig and Mrs. E. T. Kettyle as Vice-Presidents, and Mrs. H. R. Ardill, Sec.-Treasurer, being their official advisers.

The reports covered every imaginable good deed, from care for the sick and needy, helping children to secure an education, helping to procure farm help, giving prizes in educational work, getting in touch with the councils for the removal of that "disease-breeder," garbage—to sending flowers and sympathy where such were due, and giving a welcoming hand to new Canadians. How the latter have recorded these first impressions of Canada deep in their hearts, has been proven by some papers on "First Impressions of an Immigrant in Canada" given at several branches during the year.

Under convenorship of Miss Margaret Walker, assisted by Cushing — The steam-tugs, "Dolphin" and "Florence", together with a fleet of blue barges, were recently sold by their owners, the Dennis Murphy Co. of Ottawa, to Messrs. Malone of Three Rivers. These boats have long been a familiar sight along the Ottawa, having made their first appearance in the very early eighties, and their disappearance marks another milestone in our changing times.

New Council Election For Rigaud

An election for mayor and five councillors in the town of Rigaud will be held May 27th., until which time the Quebec Department of Municipal Affairs conducts the business of the municipality since a mass resignation of the aldermen on April 15 last.

Nominations for office were held recently. Of the 12 candidates nominated, three are former members of the council who resigned, while the other nine are new to municipal affairs.

New Public Buildings Planned for Montreal

Above are shown three new buildings now under consideration in Montreal, to be constructed for various government purposes.

Upper left-hand corner shows the new postal terminal at St. James, Cathedral, Windsor and St. Antoine Streets. The building is to be six stories high covering an area of 130 feet by 338 feet. On the St. James Street level the basement will be a full storey with a sub-basement beneath. Construction is of reinforced concrete and steel throughout. Walls will be of brick, trimmed with stone, and the window spandrels will be metal, the floors are to be of terrazzo, and the walls of public portion will have a marble dado.

Upper right-hand corner shows the new Notre Dame de Grace Postal station. The building is to be constructed of brick with stone trim, and two stories high. It will occupy a space of 103 feet by 133 feet. The specifications call for entrance doors of bronze and marble floors and dados in the public portion.

Lower left-hand corner shows the new Custom House to be located at Place Youville, Normand St. and McGill. It will be eight stories high and occupy a space of 127 feet by 200 feet. The construction will be of steel and reinforced concrete throughout. Entrance doors and elevator enclosures will be of bronze. The floor of the main public portion is to be marble, and the walls are to be finished in marble.

All three buildings are the design of Mr. T. W. Fuller, Chief Architect, Public Works Department, Ottawa, Ontario.

Lachute Troop of Boy Scouts will attend the rally at the Forum in Montreal tomorrow, an event to be honored by the presence of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell. The Scouts will be taken to the city in cars. Other contingents from the County, it is understood, will take part in this mammoth rally and display, to include probably about 6,000 scouts.

Lord Baden-Powell's first appearance in Montreal was at a dinner on Tuesday at the Windsor Hotel, at which the Chief

The Pierced Rock of Gaspé

Ille Percée, the pierced rock of the Gaspé coast, is world famous as a geographical oddity. But for Canadians the region is dear for its historical and legendary associations as well. The great part that the Gaspé coast played in the early chapters of Canada's story, beginning with Cartier's landing in 1534, needs no emphasis. By the Rock Bishop Laval landed in 1659, to celebrate his first mass in New France and visit the scattered parishes of the east on his way to Quebec.

Jutting out more than 1400 feet into the sea, Percé Rock is joined to Mount Joli, on the mainland, by a low sandbar which is covered at high tide. The majestic rock-island towers nearly 300 feet into the air at its prow-shaped landward end, being considerably lower at the broader seaward end. Its remarkable feature is the high archway which pierces the narrow neck of the rock, high enough for a thirty-foot mast to pass through. Some sixty years ago this generous opening was reported to be but a few inches broad. Beyond the main mass of rock is a mighty column, the outer upright of another huge arch long since collapsed.

The power of the sea, steadily wearing the island away, is illustrated by early accounts of the pierced rock. Nicholas Denys, prominent in the early history of Acadia, first saw but one arch. On a later voyage there were three, one of which had fallen in. In 1815 one arch could accommodate the passage of a ship. Even now new arches are in the process of formation and as the rock crumbles away fossils of scientific interest are revealed. Native and early French-Canadian legend naturally weaves many tales around this fantastic rock. We are told that it represents the crumbling ruins of a bridge built by the giants to nearby Bonaventure Island from Mount Joli. Both Bonaventure and Percé are also famed as bird sanctuaries.

TROUBLES BESET OLD DOBBIN—CHEMISTS USE WOOD TO IMITATE HIDE

Dobbin's supremacy has been challenged by the motor car and now along come the chemists and begin to set up a rival for his hide. Not only is horse-hide threatened, but cowhide, pig-skin and other leathers. And the new fabric comes from a tree! Experiments with Canadian spruce have produced an article that has the grain and texture of leather as well as its durability. The forest resources of the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia as well as other provinces in Canada should be considerably enhanced in value as a result of the new discovery. Both New Brunswick and Nova Scotia have extensive stands of spruce, according to the Natural Resources Department of the Canadian National Railways.

CAREFREE

With a rattle of stones in his pocket
And a scuffling of feet in the grass,
Wee Billy runs out to the pasture
To watch the sheep go past.
Dad, with old Bob at his heels,
Is putting them over the hill
To the field where violets are nodding
To fairy moss, low, green and still.
The little lambs gambol quite gaily,
They've nothing to worry them—no,
They just skip along in the sunlight,
And watch where their mothers go.

Billy is very much like them,
No care or sorrow has he,
For mother and daddy are watching,
O'er their dear little laddie, you see.

AN UNEXPECTED INTERRUPTION

The Hyla family had decided to give a concert in the big pond down by the old stone mill, whose one-time busy whirling wheels had now been silent for years. In summer it was almost hidden from sight by tall bulrushes; "cat-tails" the children preferred to call them, but in the early spring, yellow cowslips and soft ferns framed it in green and gold.

"Just the time of year for a concert," said little Polly Hyla. "A real concert, not just a peep, peep, here and there."

Daddy Hyla looked grouchy, his lazy eyes closed. He had been peep, peeping here and there for months now, and was anxious to rest. He would be quite satisfied if he did not have to make another sound for a whole year.

"These children! these children!" peeped Mother Hyla, "they are not content to let things go on from year to year as they have always done. A concert indeed! at this time of the year, when we are all tired out."

"You need not let it bother you, Old Lady", peeped Billy Hyla, the saucy boaster, "we young ones can run a concert without you, I am sure."

Billy-the-Boaster settled his white necktie and peeped at himself in the water as he finished speaking, and thought how nice, how very nice he looked. He was so occupied with admiring himself that he did not notice what the others were saying until his sister Polly sprang past him, saying, excitedly "I am going to ask Grandfather Frog, right this minute, if he will lead us."

"Lead us where?" demanded Billy the Boaster.

"Lead us in the concert, of course! Give us the starting signals, as he has always done."

"Who wants his starting signals? Who wants that old out-of-date chap at our concert, I'd like to know?"

"But I" cried Polly, settling slowly down into the water, "who will lead us? We have to have a starting signal. If we don't, we will not start off together, and the concert will be ruined."

Billy the Boaster puffed himself up as big as two hylas, and said quite grandly, "I will give the signals myself. I will start the concert. Who has a better or sweeter voice than I have?"

A silly sounding little Tee-hee-he came from the willow tree above his head as he finished speaking, and a wheezy Hey, hey, hey from the old birch tree on the opposite side of the pond whose two lower branches, like gleaming white arms, were stretched out into its waters. Bob and Betty had christened it the "clean tree." They said it was always having its arms washed!

Over the creek a heavy splash told Billy the Boaster that Sharp Teeth, the beaver, was quite near, but he did not know that both Sharp-Teeth and Slido, the otter, had dropped in to the water at the same time, quite helpless with laughter at the thought of the sweetness of Billy's voice. Blue Cap the jay, and Perky the chick-a-dee, had been chuckling too when they made those funny sounds, but Billy the Boaster did not know that. He felt that something was wrong, that there was someone trying to make light of his boasting speech, but it only made him puff up again and stay puffed so long that his poor skin felt as if it must crack. He held his puffed-up breath as long as he could, until in spite of himself it escaped him in one long piercing p-e-e-p. The other little hylas thought it was the concert signal, and such a chorus of piping rent the air that Bob and Betty, who had stolen out of the house in search of Moon Fairies, when they should have been in bed, clapped their hands over their ears to shut out the sound, and Grandfather Frog tumbled off the lily pad in surprise.

The chorus kept on and on, until Betty cried with tears of vexation in her eyes. "I wish those horrid things would stop their noise. They will frighten the Moon Fairies, and we shan't see any of them at all."

Bob did not like to see Betty cry, so caught up a stone as big as he could hold in his two hands and dropped it into the pond. Following his example Betty threw in a stone too, so that the water in the pond rocked and splashed right down Billy-the-boaster's throat. The concert ended as suddenly as it began, and Bob and Betty sat down on the soft moss under the birch tree to wait until the Moon Fairies would come.

Lovingly, Aunt Jean.

Temperance Speaker to Visit St. Andrews and Lachute

The subject of beverage alcohol is one that is occupying a great deal of space in the press to-day. It is a question of international importance, and the countries not interested in at least some phase of the subject are few.

Just over one hundred years ago, the fight for total abstinence was begun in Great Britain. It began officially on that day back in the "thirties" of the last century, when the "Seven Men of Preston", headed by Joseph Livesey, signed the pledge of total abstinence. Ridicule and misunderstanding were the portion of those pioneers in the movement that has since become world wide in its scope, but they persisted in their fight, and to-day their successors number a great host.

The temperance worker of the present is supported in a way that would amaze the men of earlier times. Science has come to his assistance with an analysis of alcohol as a narcotic drug; medicine is repudiating its use in the treatment of disease; industry and commerce are shutting their doors against the drinker.

In Quebec Province the press carries enticing advertisements, we are told over the radio of the benefits of alcohol; alluring leaflets extolling strong drink are delivered in our homes by the postman—all to increase the sale of alcohol, and enhance the revenues of the Province. The Trade itself quite frankly admits that, if it is to survive, it must "capture the rising generation". This is a challenge to all who have at heart the welfare of our Dominion.

Dr. Coburn's itinerary to counteract this alcoholic propaganda among the youth and those concerned with their interests, includes both St. Andrews and Lachute, where he will speak on the dates mentioned above.

Auxiliary and Mission Band Combined at Cushing

The combination Missionary Meeting held in Cushing Community Hall on Tuesday of last week was an enjoyable one for all concerned. At the close of the Auxiliary meeting 22 children, pupils of the day school, the majority of them members of the Mission Band, marched into the club room in a very orderly manner and took an active part in the remainder of the programme, which consisted mainly of a pageant presented by eight of the Mission Band, representing a stirring plea for help from the different countries.

Miss Audrey Watson, the Band president, was featured as a young lady who gave only a few cents a week to missions because she was not interested, and spent decidedly more on candy, movies and other fripperies. As she sat thinking the matter over, an African girl suddenly appeared and put in a touching plea for help. Dorothy Burk acted this part, Catherine Cook following her, costumed as a Chinese girl making her plea for that country; Gladys Weldon represented India; Ruby Smith as Cherry Blossom from Japan; Doris O'Brien as coming from Trinidad; Irene Hull as our own Home Missions; and A. Burr as a typical Korean. The children presented their pleas so well that the young lady, whom they all addressed as Honorable Lady, was so touched, and so convinced of the need, that she was willing to sacrifice her candy and the movies so that she might help with the work. After they had stressed their needs, the remainder of the children, representing the young folk of the world, repeated verses in unison. While they were still in position, Catherine Cook sang very sweetly "Jesus Bids Us Shine", the remainder of the children joining in the refrain which—trained by Mrs. Maclean—they had turned into a motion chorus. To Mrs. Maclean is due the credit for the entire entertainment, as it was she who selected the pageant and suggested the joint meeting. With Miss Evans, the children's teacher, she spent the greater part of the noon hour daily training the children—who were indeed a credit to both ladies, from the beginning of the page and to the vote of thanks, given by the Mission Band for their invitation to the W. M. S. Meeting. The entire performance was flawless and very enjoyable.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, May 26th., is "Soul and Body".

The Golden Text is:—"My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God." (Psalms 84: 2).

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee. My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever." (Psalms 73: 25, 26).

"God is infinite, the only Life, substance, Spirit, or Soul, the only intelligence of the universe, including man... The Science of being shows it to be impossible for infinite Spirit or Soul to be in a finite body or for man to have an intelligence separate from his Maker." (Science and Health, pp. 330, 309.)

The newcomer rapped at the pearly gates, and St. Peter's voice called from within: "Who's there?"

"It is I," answered the newcomer.

"Well, get out of here. We don't want any more school teachers."

Historical Socy. Decision to Establish Museum

ical and artistic importance. He quoted the French law under which historic houses are preserved by the State, even though they may be inhabited, provided a certain portion of the property is open to inspection by the general public."

The speaker referred to the increasing support to the historic house movement in the United States. There are over 600 open to the public, nearly 300 of which are maintained as museums are owned by historical societies.

Mrs. Kains stressed the appeal of the Society's museum to visitors in the community. The Society was striving to record, primarily, the native culture and regional characteristics of this county. The building selected for this museum should be in keeping with this purpose and atmosphere. Maps must be on record to show development through time in the local routes of communication, from the first Indian trails before the white man came upon the scene.

The speaker made reference to Canada's early mail service, connected with the American and trans-Atlantic facilities inaugurated by Benjamin Franklin. The importance of pictures was brought to mind for the purpose of preserving visual records; pictures had proven invaluable to those who had undertaken to compile histories and commit them to print.

Illustrating ingenious methods taken to finance and captivate public interest in collections, reference was made to the experience of other groups somewhat similar in purpose to the local Historical Society.

"History is a fascinating story which children never tire of learning about, and few people appreciate the scope of modern museums or realize that they are concerned, not with entertainment of the people, but with education and the advancement of knowledge." Mrs. Kains concluded her remarks with a quotation from Abraham Lincoln—"I like to see a man proud of the place in which he lives; I like to see a man live so that his place will be proud of him." This was surely an end worth striving for—that our institutions might be worthy of our people and that all should respect the tradition and the history which those institutions conserve.

Mrs. C. Duncan, Mrs. K. McQuat and Mrs. R. A. Giles gave a very pleasing trio, their numbers, Garden of Roses and The Rosary proving most acceptable; they were ably accompanied by Miss Ruth Todd.

Rev. H. D. J. Brosseau of Grenville spoke at length on changing conditions, and how we should bestir ourselves to meet them. The process of collecting antiques forms an important link between the past and the present and serves to show man's progress in civilization. We are changing economically, intellectually, socially, physically and morally. The responsibility is ours to study well and progress in the right direction. Life is an adventure and new trends will determine how we are to prepare ourselves, body and soul, to meet the future life. We cannot understand the present if we do not understand the past, recognize the changes, and keep abreast with the times. There is nothing permanent, but always the element of uncertainty, with new problems to solve, and we must step forward to meet the new conditions.

Mrs. Windsor, Secretary-Treasurer of the Society, was pleased to report that the membership numbered nearly 225, and the Society would be pleased to enroll any further members who wished to forward the membership fee of 50 cts. A plea for co-operation in the work of this Society was graciously extended by Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring.

Messrs Owen and Douglas Todd gave a fine vocal rendition of Larboard Watch, which brought forth a rollicking encore. This was followed by singing of the National Anthem, which concluded a successful and enthusiastic meeting.

According to the provision of the Bill incorporating Lachute into a town, the first election of Mayor and Councillors will be held at the Court House on Monday next. The town must be properly assessed by men who will set at true valuation. Several gentlemen have been named as fitting to compose the new council. For Mayor Thos. Barron; West Ward, Jas. Fish, F. C. It is a significant fact that the first living freight carried over the continuous C. P. Railway, was a body of Canadian volunteers on their way to assist in putting down the rebellion in the North West. The Herald remarks: This, an un-military country, devoted to the walks of peace, in a few weeks has placed an army of five thousand men in the field; some of this force had been moved over three thousand miles, and all of them over two thousand miles.

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, May 21.—Here we go on the last lap of a long race—the final weeks of the Seventeenth Parliament, which began on July 28th., 1930, and ends automatically on August 18th., 1935, whether the members are still sweating away here at Ottawa, or not.

Looking back over the six sessions, I can't help thinking what a long an eventful parliament it has been. It bridges the Depression Era, having begun about a year after the slide started, and ending about two years after the upward trend began once more. It has been a tough time to hold office, there are grave problems still, and whichever party gets in when September rolls around, they will have their own merry time. Sometimes I wonder if party leaders aren't crazy seeking election in times like these, when trouble and grief and criticism in floods cannot possibly be escaped, no matter how they work or scheme, twist or turn. Why go looking for office when all you get out of it is a bad headache?

In spite of these observations, I'm sure the major parties will continue doing their darnedest to get into office. But if Mr. Bennett is beaten, and Mr. Mackenzie King wins, I shall feel more inclined to congratulate the former. There's all kinds of difficult times ahead before Canada's present problems are solved, judging by all signs and portents.

If I tried to boil down into a paragraph the Seventeenth Parliament, which this week began its final phase, I would do it something like this:

PARLIAMENT IN A NUTSHELL

Emergency session (1930) . . . tariffs . . . twenty millions to give work for the unemployed . . . more and better tariffs . . . the drought calamity in the West (1931) . . . still more tariffs . . . off the gold standard . . . the Beauregard mud-bath . . . the Empire at Ottawa signing agreements (1932) . . . more unemployment relief . . . the Duff report on our railway problems . . . the Marketing Act . . . Central Bank of Canada . . . horrible disclosures before the price spreads and mass buying committee . . . reform by radio . . . the Stevens episode . . . regulation of business . . . the shadow of the approaching election . . .

Took High Aggregate Medal in Sports

Sydney Drew, youngest member of a youthful trio who have won athletic honors for Lachute, both at home and elsewhere, carried off the medal for highest aggregate performance at the Religious Education Council track meet in Montreal recently. At the same annual meet last year Sydney took three firsts, two seconds and a third in Class I. This year, entering for six events in Class II for boys 14 and 15; he took one first, three seconds and one third, a performance which also won the high aggregate medal.

Young Drew will attend the Interscholastic McGill Meet on Saturday, when it is hoped he will continue his successes and win new laurels.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Which brings me to May 20th., 1935. There are three quite contradictory possibilities about this last half of the last session :

1. It may be brief, business-like, free from much political controversy, with the opposition assisting the government to place on the statute books all the necessary legislation to 'regulate' industry so that it can't allow such sweat-shop conditions again.

2. It may be long and highly controversial, with the government sticking to its guns, placing as much as possible of the required legislation on the statute books before parliament automatically expires in August.

3. The Opposition may lay down such a barrage that the Government will decide not to place the 'Regulation' measures on the statute books, but will, rather, dissolve parliament and go to the people on that issue.

If you ask me, I favor No. 2 or No. 3 as being the more likely. But the first half of the session fooled the soothsayers so completely that I wouldn't like to be positive.

PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

On June 27th. New Brunswick will hold a general election. The result will be followed with keen interest by the federal politicians, who make much capital out of it if their side wins, but who always say, if their party loses, that the provincial situation has no bearing on the prospects in the federal field.

New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island at present are the only provinces with Conservative governments. Five have Liberal administrations—Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, one a Liberal-Progressive government (Manitoba), and Alberta (which will also have an election in June, probably) a government of the organized farmers (the U.F.A.).

The success of the Sixty million dollar loan (all subscribed in a day) shows two things : the soundness of Canada's credit, and the quantity of ready money looking for investment. Apparently investors these days prefer government bonds at three per cent to mortgages at six.

"TARIFF WAR" BETWEEN PROVINCES

Restrictions on interprovincial business will be discussed by a delegation from the cities of Ottawa and Hull which will meet Premier L. A. Taschereau, of Quebec, at Montreal shortly. Mayor P. J. Nolan of Ottawa, and Mayor Theo Lambert of Hull, will head the delegation, which will be composed of representatives of the councils and Boards of Trade of the two cities.

Levying of licence fees by municipalities on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River on firms from Ontario doing business in Quebec and counter licences levied by Ottawa on Quebec firms selling goods in Ontario has developed into a sort of tariff war between the two cities. It is understood Mr. Taschereau will be asked to abolish legislation which authorizes licences for interprovincial business, especially as it pertains to the Ottawa Valley area.

Our Enterprising Contemporaries

The City of Cornwall has made notable strides in recent years, and in its commercial and civic progress has won favorable publicity. The Standard-Freeholder, published at Cornwall under management of Mr. Chas. McTavish, is a newspaper which is a distinct credit to its community. It is published semi-weekly, but has grown to the proportions of a "city daily." Cornwall's publicity, we suspect, is largely attributable to its Standard-Freeholder, for there is ample evidence of a town and a newspaper working hand-in-hand, to the success of both. It is an example which many communities might follow, to their benefit.

Progressive policy in the journalism of this paper has been followed by a material development, and the Freeholder is now a model of mechanical efficiency. The plant, opened last year, is admirably equipped, every process conducted systematically, with offices and machinery housed in a new and up-to-date building.

Another credit to the printing department of this concern is a booklet just received by

The Watchman. "A Modern Home for a Modern Newspaper" conveys an interesting impression of the Freeholder's plant, with descriptions and illustrations to incite the envy of any small-town publisher. This edition gives proof of our contemporary's faith in advertising, and we rejoice with our Cornwall confreres in the materialization of such ambitious plans, and the prosperity which has rewarded their untiring service to the public.

In connection with the Jubilee Celebrations observed at Granby on May 6th., a program booklet was issued by the Leader-Mail Press of that town—a copy of which has reached our desk. Generously illustrated, the program contains interesting information on the House of Windsor and the reign of King George, following these facts with pictures and descriptions of the town—the whole representing a valuable adventure in community advertising besides a pleasing effort by the publishers in marking the occasion of the King's Silver Jubilee.

Miss Grace Cleland, a sumptuous lunch was provided at noon hour by the different branches. This was in the dining room of the school, with its gleaming white tables and dishes loaned for the day by the St. Jerusalem Farmers' Club.

ADDRESS BY MISS MCCAIN

Miss Hazel B. McCain, Provincial Supt. of Women's Institutes, in her afternoon address touched on all points of Institute work, beginning with National Events in which she spoke briefly of the recent Jubilee Celebration of Their Majesties the King and Queen. In introducing Canadianization Miss McCain stated that "if we, in these years of depression, did not hold our heads just a little higher, with chin up and jaw squared, facing the depression with undaunted spirit, we would not be worthy of our pioneer ancestors who struggled to make Canada what it is today." Miss McCain urged maintaining the quality of our produce regardless of price, that low prices were no excuse for lowering quality. It was good for us to have the lean years, for only through struggle could we become strong . . .

In speaking of Education and Better Schools, the claim was made that, although much had been done for our boys and girls along that line, it was not enough; in order to keep pace with our children and lend them a helping hand, we must also have Adult Education. A result of Dr. Beck's visits among different branches had been the formation of Adult Study Groups, which had interested and proven of benefit to the students enrolled. Through them, said Miss McCain, we could fill our souls with the beauty of music, art, literature and study the lives of great persons who have gone before—all this without the worry of examinations! although (she remarked) examinations were necessary evils, forming milestones along the educational path.

Miss McCain admonished her hearers to instill in the boys and girls a high standard of home-making and home life; only through home life could come a high standard of national living. Discussing the Immigration question, — what had each one done, toward making our new Canadians feel at home in Canada— to understand them, and help them to understand us? It is only through a complete understanding of ourselves that newcomers may realize what it really means to be a Canadian. "Are we living up to our Canadian standards in helping the League of Nations, by giving them our support of membership?" the speaker enquired. We still have to work hard for Peace; the war-drum is sounding in Europe, and though we may escape being drawn into it, we cannot help but be affected by it. Mention was made of the Peace Garden which is being carefully planned and formulated to commemorate the years of peace between Canada and the United States; she remarked that Quebec's acre of that garden would cost $150. to put in into shape and $175. a year to maintain it.

Miss McCain offered to send copies of "The Jubilee Pageant" written by Mr. McRae, to interested branches, also "Caanda Week by Week" might be obtained from the Bureau at Ottawa, for the asking.

"Our duty is to our own organization, the Women's Institute," was another of Miss McCain's statements. "If we do not support it, who will? We should place our aims and work before the public in every way we can, through medium of the press, particularly our own organ Home and Country which is in dire need of support." Argenteuil, she was glad to note, was one of the most faithful counties in support of this journal. "In sending delegates to conventions" urged Miss McCain, "send only your best, then the best will come back to you."

The County President's address was, unfortunately, not handed to the Publicity Secretary, so cannot be included in this report. In it, however Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring thanked the Branches for their loyal support through the past year. In accepting re-election, she asked again for their co-operation in this great work — which gave such scope for the understanding spirit of fellowship. She requested that convenors prepare their reports of the year's work in readiness for their own annual meetings, where they should be read then handed to the County convenor for the annual convention.

W.M.S. Sectional Meeting in United Church

The Women's Missionary Society Sectional meeting of the Ottawa Valley was held in the Lachute United Church on Tuesday.

Mrs. R. Bradford, Sectional President, was in the chair and the morning devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Woodwork and Mrs. Shearman, members of the St. Eustache auxiliary.

Mrs. Rosborough then cordially welcomed the delegates, after which the President of the Montreal Presbyterian, Mrs. Loveys, was introduced and spoke of the influence we each exerted over others, that it must be either good or bad, that it can not be neutral.

Mrs. Patterson, Presbyterian Supply Secretary, gave a very interesting talk on her work, speaking of it as a service of love and kindness. She gave some very vivid pictures of the hardships among the Indians on the various reserves and among the Italians, Hungarians and Chinese in Montreal.

Mrs. Usher of Cushing, County President of the W.C.T.U., Mrs. Maclean of Cushing, Provincial Evangelistic Secretary of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Graham also of Cushing, Provincial Press Secretary, and Mrs. Granger, Presbyterian Temperance Secretary, all spoke in a most interesting way on the subject of temperance. They spoke of the seriousness of conditions at the present time and of the great need of temperance education among young people. They thought if we had faith enough to go ahead with this work that in time we would overcome the evil.

Mrs. John Gordon of East Settlement closed the meeting with prayer and the delegates adjourned for lunch, which was served by the members of the Lachute auxiliary.

At the afternoon session Mrs. McLachlan and Mrs. Cole, members of the Pt. Fortune auxiliary, conducted the devotional period, after which Mrs. Sutherland, Past President of the Presbyterian, gave an inspiring account of the Conference Branch which met in Quebec last week.

Mrs. King of Brownsburg then gave a beautiful rendering of "The Home Land" which was very much enjoyed.

Mrs. Lilly of St. Andrews, conducted the memorial service and paid loving and reverent tribute to one active and four associate Helpers who had passed on during the last year.

Mrs. Walter Scott, Presbyterian Secretary, was the next speaker, taking for her subject "Our great need is to take Jesus seriously." She said that people were seeing things in a different light now and were feeling the need of something, this state of things being an outcome of the economic depression and the only satisfactory reply was a spiritual one, the influence of Jesus.

Mrs. C. Duncan contributed a vocal solo entitled "Evening Prayer", which was much appreciated by the audience.

After the offering was taken, which amounted to 15.90, Mrs. E. S. Morrison gave the dedicatory prayer.

Miss Imobersteg told about the social service work she was doing and of the deplorable condition of many unemployed girls. She also brought words of gratitude and lasting apprec-

LOCAL SCOUTS WILL ATTEND BADEN-POWELL RALLY

Scout addressed a gathering of scout officials and organizers.

The "twenty-fourth" will be a great occasion for youngsters of Quebec enlisted in the Boy Scout movement, for they will have an opportunity of making first acquaintance with their Chief Scout, and with Lady Powell, the Chief of Girl Guides. Behind the lighter aspects of scouting, the practical work and instruction in crafts fascinating to the teen-age boy—there is a deep spirit of loyalty, religion and patriotism. The Chief Scout is indeed a hero to these youngsters. His exploits in campaigns which, to them, are remote items of history, has perhaps imbued him with a legendary heroism to his young followers this side of the Atlantic. His personal appearance among them is therefore opportune, and a happy circumstance which Canadian Boy Scouts will long remember.

Lachute is fortunate in having a troop of Boy Scouts, among whom, according to Scoutmaster Chas. Duncan, almost every lad has qualified for the Second Class badge. This is a creditable attainment, and although the local group is small, it is hoped the organization will increase in numbers.

CHANGES NECESSARY IN EDUCATION

At the present time there is a general feeling of dissatisfaction over our educational system. Teachers who do more than merely teach the prescribed curriculum know that our education has not changed to keep up with the changing times and does not meet our present day needs. Parents are not satisfied but too often do not know what is wrong. Home and School Clubs should spend more time on the study of the curriculum and ways and means of improving it. I feel that the Home and School Clubs are not giving enough leadership nor are they using the influence which they should have. The move to lessen the number of those who have to try examinations is a step in the right direction. Examinations have been a curse. Students do not strive for knowledge but merely try to learn the things which will help them pass some examination. They are stuffed with facts like the Strassburg geese. Teachers cannot be blamed for this because they are judged almost entirely by the success of their pupils in passing exams. The rural sections are notorious for this as a teacher is a go-through the Entrance. City schools are about as bad.

know of one teacher whose pupils have complained about his inability to teach for years. When any complaint is made to the authorities they say he must be a good teacher because he passes a larger percentage of his pupils than any other teacher on the staff. The truth of the matter is that the students, one after another, drop his subjects, until by examination time, none are left in his classes but the earnest students and it is no particular credit to any teacher to pass them. The shrinkage in the number in his class would be ludicrous if it were not so pitiful. But those in power apparently do not see this. Removal of examinations will make the students work throughout the year instead of cramming at the last minute. One boy who has more than his share of brains has wasted his time for years and has been a trial to his parents and teachers. His friends were much surprised to find him working this year. When questioned he said that he was not going to try exams if he could get out of it. This situation must be occurring many times and shows that the partial doing away of examinations is a step in the right direction.

FEAR CAUSES DYPEPSIA

If you told a person with dyspepsia that probably it was largely due to fear they would be highly insulted. But it is the truth. They worry and fuss and are frightened that a certain food may not agree with them and because of this fear it probably doesn't. Fear acts on the digestive juices and reduces them by half. So when a dyspeptic is frightened over a food, he (or she) reduces the chances of digesting it by half. It is foolish to go ahead eating foods that you find difficult to digest, but on the other hand you must be most careful not to build up a feeling of apprehension over certain foods as then they are almost sure to cause trouble.

PLANT FORSYTHIA FOR CUTTING

The late Winter is a time when most of us crave the Spring flowers. We may advance the season a little by bringing in cuttings from the Forsythia as they will blossom when placed in water. Sometimes we hesitate to do this because of disliking to damage the shrub which is used for ornamental purposes. A pleasant way of avoiding this is to plant a shrub in our back garden specially for cutting purposes. The plants are not very expensive and we will get our money back many times over.

Don't Forget the Garden!

Thousands of families throughout the country are planning now to use the available garden land to provide food. If people on the land would consider the number of meals that must be prepared during the year and estimate the actual earning power of a garden, more and better gardens would be planted in order to provide a continuous supply of summer and winter vegetables. A garden of one-quarter to one-half an acre in extent, properly cared for, will provide enough vegetables for an average family.

EARLY SWEET CORN

Early sweet corn brings the best price, hence the importance of planting as soon as possible. Successional sowings made at intervals of ten days in the same field are a good way to get early corn. Should the first planting succeed the second or third plantings may be hoed out, or if the first plantings be killed by frost the third or fourth planting may develop unhampered.

WEEDERS

Possibly one of the most satisfactory implements for the control of weeds in a growing grain crop is what is known as the finger weeder. This implement consists of a series of long slender teeth which form a very light harrow. The finger weeder may be used to advantage on annual weeds, shortly after germination, both before and after the grain crop has emerged and until the crop is some two to four inches high.

BRITISH WOMEN PREFER CANADIAN SILK HOSIERY

When milady in Britain dons her very best finery, the chances are that she pulls on a pair of Canadian silk stockings. Canada is the leading supplier of pure silk hosiery to the United States, which only as far back as 1929 was the chief source of supply, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. British manufacturers do not seem to be able to produce the higher qualities of silk hosiery in sheer and chiffon weights.

Fifteenth Annual Convention of Argenteuil W. I.

Among expressions of thanks voted during the session, apart from those of the resolutions committee, Mrs. Kuhring received great appreciation for the work of Education and Better Schools, which had been laid "as a mantle on her shoulders" at the last Provincial Convention, and which she had carried out so efficiently during the year. This was work previously done by Col. Bovey and his staff. The Publicity Convener also came in for a special vote of thanks, for her work during the year.

The Convention was favored by a beautiful rendering of "When the Roses Bloom" and "My Irish Rose" by Mrs. R. A. Giles, Mrs. J. Duncan and Mrs. K. McQuat, also with piano solos by Miss Helen McFaul which were indeed appreciated.

Standing in reverent silence for a few moments, the Convention paid tribute to the sisters who had passed during the year, also in sympathy with Mrs. R. W. Kennedy so recently bereaved.

The Resolutions Committee then brought in the following resolutions, which were duly adopted, and the convention closed with the National Anthem.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

Whereas—During the past year Pioneer branch has been called upon to mourn the loss of one of its first members, Mrs. Ed. McGregor, and Morin Heights branch a beloved member and faithful Secretary, Mrs. T. McCullough,
Be It Resolved—That the Argenteuil County Women's Institute, in Convention assembled, convey to the respective branches, and the deceased members' families in particular, sincere sympathy in their loss.

Whereas—The Argenteuil County Women's Institute in Convention assembled, gratefully appreciates the privilege of being allowed to hold this Convention in the Lachute High School.
Be It Resolved—That the sincere thanks of this assembly be extended to the Chairman and School Commissioners.

Whereas—We have all enjoyed to the full the delightful luncheon provided by the various branches, and particularly because of the fact of being able to sit down and enjoy it without any effort on our part in arranging and serving it,
Be It Resolved—That the heartiest thanks of this meeting be given to Miss Walker and Miss McQuat, Joint Convenors, and all their assistants on the Luncheon Committee who so ably assisted them.

Whereas—The Jerusalem Farmers' Club kindly loaned the dishes for our use today,
Be It Resolved—That the grateful thanks of this gathering be sent to this Club.

Whereas—This Convention realizes the difficulties in arranging a suggested yearly programme, and it having been the duty of Argenteuil County to provide such a programme for the current year for the Provincial Board,
Be It Resolved—That we give our thanks to Mrs. Kuhring as Convener, and to her Committee for the work such a programme entailed.

Whereas—It being recognized that an extra amount of labour has been allotted to the Provincial Convener of Education and Better Schools, this being our President, Mrs. Kuhring, by the handing over to this Convener by the Dept. of Extra Mural Relations of McGill University, the supervision and planning of the programmes for the Adult Study Groups,
Be It Resolved—That the appreciation of this Convention be expressed to Mrs. Kuhring for her extra efforts in this connection.

Whereas—We all very much appreciate Miss McCain's presence with us today and her help throughout the year,
Be It Resolved—That we gratefully express our thanks to her for her continued interest on our behalf.

Whereas—It is the desire of the Women's Institute to include music in its programmes, and the items so ably rendered today have proved a delightful diversion from the business part of our meeting,
Be It Resolved—That our heartiest thanks be extended to those friends who have given us so much pleasure this afternoon.

Whereas—This Convention has proved itself an unqualified success in every way,
Be It Resolved—That we extend our sincere thanks to all who may in any way have helped to make it such a success.

Whereas—The local Press has ever proved itself willing to donate space and give publicity to the activities of the Argenteuil County Women's Institute,
Be It Resolved—That the thanks of this meeting be conveyed to Mr. Giles and the staff of The Watchman.

Whereas—A Convener is retiring from service in this capacity today,
Be It Resolved—That a hearty vote of thanks be given her for her work in the past.

Whereas—The faces of some of our honoured members, who, due to illness are prevented from being with us today, are greatly missed, among whom are noted our Honorary President, Mrs. John Gordon, Mrs. J. Cooke and Mrs. Massiah,
Be It Resolved—That this meeting places itself on record as having felt a distinct loss at their absence and wishes for them a speedy recovery.

Whereas—We members of the Women's Institute are intensely interested in all international affairs and have still in mind the many horrors of the late War,
Be It Resolved—That we make it our business to talk PEACE whenever opportunity presents itself, and do not entertain any consideration of WAR with its consequent horrors.

DISTRICT NEWS

ST. ANDREWS EAST

The new tennis and badminton courts are about completed. This is a fine piece of work and reflects great credit on the builder, Mr. Snowden.

Rev. and Mrs. Robt. Millar, who formerly filled the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church here, have taken up residence in St. Andrews East again. Their many friends extend to them a hearty welcome.

Dr. Ballantyne has been ill with a bad cold, and on Sunday morning, Rev. H. Cousens of Lachute occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church and preached an eloquent sermon on the subject "Heaven." Dr. McColl read the lessons. On the Sunday previous Dev. Dean Booy took the evening service and preached an inspiring sermon from the subject, "The Three Great Invitations."

The Dramatic Club of the Presbyterian Church have been working very hard on their play entitled "The Prairie Rose", which they will present very soon. Many of the old players, with a few additions form the cast. Their plays have been well received in the past and this should be no exception. The truly Western setting of the play is a pleasing feature in itself. The President, Mr. Wm. Bradley, with his wife as assistant coach, are doing everything they can to make this entertainment a success.

THE "BORN AGAIN" PERPETUAL LIBERAL COMMITTEE

(Correspondence)

I am proud to have been accused of repeating myself, for the same accusation has been laid at the door of great politicians and writers, viz, Cobden, Burk, O'Connell, Gladstone, Dickens, Scott, Macaulay, and others of repute. Macaulay's reply was "Yes. I repeat myself on purpose, at least three times, and then the public, if what I say is any good, keep on repeating it for me for all time. The third time I say it, the public that have read or heard it perfect it in their memory and repeat it to others, and the life of my quotation is insured for all generations, and is on everybody's lips. On suitable occasions I will be remembered and quoted." The truth of his saying is being lived out, for new editions of his works are being brought out every day. —And while I do not lay claim to any such greatness, I consider it an honor to be something like these gentlemen in repeating myself.

I hope my readers will remember my story of the old minister who was willing to change his text but not his sermon, which regularly every Sunday morning began—"Who this Nicodemus was, commentators were not agreed."

The story of this Nicodemus is familiar. Nicodemus, a Pharisee and ruler of the Jews, came to Jesus by night, and Jesus, knowing well that he was anxious about himself but ashamed to come in daylight, reproved him and told him that he must be born again. But, my readers, turn up the story and read it for yourselves; it will be more satisfactory to you.

It is said that the world goes in cycles, and 1935 is marching on ("Just loving the people is Canan in view, but it is being paid quarterly to have them love you.") The Messianic mission is still going on, and other missions have sprung up; for instance political missions. I am told on authority that old Nicodemus has a great many grandchildren and descendants, and they are excellent in 1935 at night-walking, and in finding methods of resuscitation—with a capacity to be born again on the 27th of April 1935. As there are no available minutes for the public ear or eye, we will never know how this was accomplished, for it was done behind closed doors for the sake of expediency, it is said. Sir Wilfred Laurier said this was an ill-omened resort of cowards, and not allowable to be used to enforce the British constitution, only when the enemy's ships were in our harbours and the enemy's cannons threatening our gates—for it was the resort of cowards.

And I have heard old Dr. Christie repeat this often; though I am told by the would-be present-day liberals that the men who founded this principle are all dead. It is to be regretted that they, old Dr. Christie included, have not left better or finer behind them to wear their shoes and give British subjects their British liberties.

—C. F. Kains.

Have you found the SUNNY PACKAGE
on your grocer's shelf?

It's a delicious ready-to-eat cereal. Millions of Canadians have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a safe, effective means of correcting common constipation—the kind caused by lack of "bulk" in the menu.

Laboratory measurements show that ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in this tempting cereal is more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables—because it resists digestion better. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass. Gently, this cleans out the intestinal waste.

Isn't this natural food better than taking patent medicines? Two table-spoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases with each meal. If this fails to give relief, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or cook into appetizing recipes. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains much more needed "bulk" than part-bran products. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

BULLET WOUND FATAL TO LAKEFIELD MAN

FOUND SHOT IN BARN NEAR HOME

Tragedy overshadowed the community of Lakefield in the death of John Silverson, a young man of 28 years, son of William Silverson, who died from a bullet wound in the head on Tuesday at around the noon hour.

An inquest was held under Dr. J. H. Mason, district coroner, at which evidence was given by the father to the effect that the young man had suffered severely from an injury to his eye, caused by a whip while he was driving with logs about two months ago. He had been under hospital treatment since then, and had returned from Montreal on the morning of the tragedy. He had slept awhile, eaten his dinner, and had gone to the barn adjacent to the home. The father then heard a noise which attracted him to the building, and found his son lying near death with a bullet wound in the head and a rifle lying nearby. The young man died within a few minutes.

Having heard the evidence the jury returned their verdict, stating that the victim had met death by his own hand while mentally deranged as a result of suffering and worry.

BROWNSBURG REDS TIED WITH VANKLEEK HILL

The second game of the Interprovincial Softball League was played at Vankleek Hill last week, when the Brownsburg Reds and Vankleek Hill played an 11-11 tie. Brownsburg will return to Vankleek Hill for the replay.

NARROW ESCAPE WITH LOAD OF LOGS

DRIVER LEAPS AS TRUCK ROLLS OVER BANK

Driving a weighty load of hardwood logs toward Lachute, Jos. Pagé of Bedard Boulevard escaped death by quick action when he lost control of his truck on Tuesday. The accident occurred as he was climbing the steep hill east of Brownsburg. The vehicle lost traction, and began to roll backwards, Pagé being powerless to hold the heavy load with his brakes. Seeing the danger, with steep banks sloping from the road, the driver jumped, and the machine overturned. The weight of the logs completely crushed the cab, in which he would have met instant death had he not leaped in time.

The truck was removed later to Mason Motor Sales, Lachute, but was too badly damaged to discover what had caused the trouble. Pagé expressed an opinion that the axle had broken.

This work will afford labor for local men until about the end of August, it is estimated.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE AT HARRINGTON

A disastrous fire occurred in the community of Harrington on Saturday afternoon, when the residence of Victor Mac-Vicar, with store, gasoline station and the Rivington Post Office, was razed to the ground. The alarm was given immediately the fire was noticed, and neighbors rushed from miles around to give their assistance. Owing to the dry weather and strong winds, however, the fire swept quickly through the buildings.

Loss is estimated in the neighborhood of $7,000. According to a press report from Hawkesbury, the outbreak was thought to have been caused by children playing with matches in an out-building where hay was stored.

Father and Son Banquet a Pleasing Event at St. Andrews East

St. Andrews E.—The Father and Son Banquet under auspices of the Sunday School of the Presbyterian Church, held in St. Andrews on Thursday last, was a decided success in every way. The supper, under the convenorship of Mrs. J. P. Bradley, was very fine, and forty-five boys and fathers sat down at a beautifully laid table. The crystal and silver, with huge vases of plum blossoms, made a very effective setting for the occasion.

Bobby Watson presided, and after a toast was drunk to the King, he called on Leslie Gates to propose a toast to "Our Dads", in whose honor the banquet was held. Mr. Wm. Blair responded, and a toast, proposed by Clifford Blair, followed in honor of "Our Visitors", to which Jack Jeffrey, of Montreal, replied in a very pleasing manner. The next toast to "Our Sunday School Teachers" was sponsored by Master John Bradley, and although a small lad, he did it remarkably well. Margaret Hamilton, one of the teaching staff, replied and thanked the parents for their hearty co-operation in the work of the Sunday School.

Raymond Blair proposed the toast to "Our Sunday School", and Dr. Ballantyne replied, first complimenting the chairman Bobbie Watson, and the other boys, on their fine speeches.

The guest speaker of the evening, Rev. H. Cousens, B.A., B.D., was then introduced by the chairman, and gave a very fine address, one that will be long remembered by those present.

Rev. and Mrs. Robt. Millar, Mr. William Jeffrey of Montreal, Mr. Harold Brown of Montreal, were also present.

Montreal, the bride wore a gown of white satin, made on silhouette lines, and fashioned with yoke and puffed sleeves of crystal lace, a small hat with veil, and an emerald pendant, the gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of rapture roses. Her sister, Mrs. Wm. Robb,

Uncertainty in Conservative Campaign Plans ... Leadership in the Balance ... Wheat Problem to the Fore

THE OTTAWA SPOTLIGHT
A Weekly Review of National Affairs
Written Specially for The Watchman
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, May 28.—A cloud of uncertainty settled down on parliament during the opening week, resulting from the curious position of Premier Bennett, who told the House a few minutes after it met (a) that his doctors gave him hope that with rest his health would be completely restored (b) that he had been urged not to return at this time to lead the house (c) that he had felt it his duty to return in spite of their advice and (d) so long as he was there he hoped to be of value in indicating his estimate of the legislation before the House.

This left the Conservative leaders just as much in the dark as ever. Mr. Bennett intends to retire, but when? Before the session is over? Or after the election campaign? Coupled with the mystery which cloaks the date of the general election, it creates a most puzzling and unsatisfactory situation. Any clear-cut announcement one way or another will be welcomed. And in the meantime there is a good deal of wire-pulling and soliciting and scurrying-around generally by aspirants for the leadership of the party, at such time as the present prime minister elects to retire. One hears that there is a boom for Meighen. The rank and file seem more im-

PASSING OF MRS. IVALL OF CHRISTIEVILLE

(By Our Correspondent)

Morin Heights — The people of this community were shocked to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. Robt. J. Ivall (formerly Miss Jennie Jackson) of Christieville, Que., which occurred at the Royal Victoria Hospital on Sunday morning. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, May 28th., from the United Church, Morin Heights, and was conducted by Rev. Geo. Perrigarde. The church was filled with sorrowing relatives and friends. Beautiful flowers bore silent tribute to her memory. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, and one daughter, Veronica, to whom her friends take this opportunity of extending deep sympathy.

Rev. John Coburn Was Temperance Speaker at United Church

On Sunday morning last Rev. John Coburn, D.D., National Field Secretary of the Board of Social Service and Evangelism, for the United Church of Canada, spoke in the Lachute United Church in the interests of "The Quebec League Against Alcoholism."

Taking as his text the words (found in Samuel 17: 47) "The battle is the Lord's" he dealt with the giant evil of Intemperance in a very strong and telling way. He first referred to the issues which are at stake in the battle which the forces of righteousness must wage continually against this formidable and unscrupulous foe. These issues are Safety, Health, Morality, and especially the welfare and happiness of the youth of our land.

Dr. Coburn also dealt with the strength and resources of the enemy which we are being called upon to fight. The liquor traffic can boast of almost unlimited financial resources, of the backing of the Press, because of the money which it has at its disposal, and, for the same reason, the connivance, if not the active support of the leading political parties of this and other lands.

The preacher also referred to the resources which we have at our disposal, such as Modern Science which, during the past few years, has done more than ever before to emphasize the poisonous and deleterious effects which alcohol has upon the body of the individual and upon the physical stamina of the people as a whole. We also have on our side the Schools, in which children are taught that

ESCAPED PRISONERS ARE SOUGHT HERE

THEFT OF AUTOMOBILE AT PTE. AU CHENE

Provincial detectives appeared in Lachute over the week-end on the trail of three prisoners escaped from jail at L'Original. Last indications suggested that the men were in hiding somewhere between Grenville and Montreal.

Forcing a hole through the ceiling of the building in which they were confined, the three men, two awaiting removal to Portsmouth penitentiary and the third waiting trial, broke jail and are still at large.

The men are: Jack McAuley, Ottawa, Edward Clarke, Chatham, N.B., convicts on 7 and 5 years sentences respectively, and Leopold Desjardins of Hawkesbury, who was to appear in county court this week, charged with assaulting a police officer.

It was reported Sunday that they had headed in the direction of Vankleek Hill.

The reported theft of an automobile at Pointe au Chene, this side of the Ottawa River, led Provincial Police in this direction, and they are now making a search in the area between Grenville and Montreal.

McAuley and Clarke were two of a trio who stole an automobile owned by an officer of the R.C.M.P. near Ottawa, May 2nd., drove to Alfred, broke into a store and a garage, then continued to Chute-a-Blondeau, where they wrecked the automobile, hid a large quantity of stolen goods in a rowboat, fled upon being noticed, and were finally captured by a posse of Ontario Provincial Police after an all-day chase.

INNOVATIONS AT THE LACHUTE FAIR

EVERY PROVISION TAKEN TO ENSURE SUCCESS

With pardonable pride in their County Exhibition, the people of Lachute will welcome visitors from far and near to share in the educational treat and the pleasures of fine entertainment afforded by the Lachute Fair, June 12-15. The Lachute Women's Institute have again undertaken to handle the dining hall and refreshment stand, a fact which gives assurance that the public will be well catered to both as regards service and quality of meals.

The Lachute Spring Fair has gained an undisputed reputation, and the directors are working energetically to make this year's exhibition surpass all others. Men are now busy on the grounds and painters are at work on the buildings, so that everything will be spick and span in readiness for the opening day, which is not far distant now.

A new feature this year will be a boys' and girls' Calf Club Competition, which is in charge of J. P. Fleury, representing the Federal Department of Agriculture, Jas. MacKenzie representing the Fair, and A. Bothwell representing the Quebec Department of Agriculture.

The Secretary has received notice from the Federal Live Stock Commissioner that yield mares of any age may be shown in the registered draft classes this year.

In order for the Society to comply with the various regulations every exhibitor is urged to make his entries before the closing date, June 3rd.

(From the Amherstburg Echo)

The Echo discovered a new way to beat hard times, right on the streets of Amherstburg. It was a Ford car of early vintage still doing its duty every day for a farmer in this vicinity. The car was 1914 make, open, well ventilated top, and though it showed signs of wear and tear ran just as fast and noisily as it always did, consuming less gas per mile than any other machine of its kind in the community. If every owner could get 21 years' service out of his car and administer all his affairs on a similar basis, Amherstburg banks would not have safes large enough to contain the savings deposited from this district.

THE MOUSE WHO OBEYED

Old Min was sneaking, sneaking,

After a wee field-mouse...
—Oh Mistress Mouse do hurry
And get into your house!

For if you don't, you'll feel sharp teeth

Then greedy Min will lick her lips

Until I hear them smack.

Did Mistress Mousie hear me?
She must—for she behaved
Just as I wanted her to do,
And so her life was saved.

WHOSE BUSINESS IS IT?

By Aunt Jean

"I'll show you whose business it is!" Irish Nora, who helped Aunt Kate with her housework, dashed angrily out onto the verandah, brandishing her broom as she ran. "I'll teach ye t'come buildin' yer nest on the verandy, ye spalpanes that ye are! It's nothing but straws and sticks that I do be after havin' t' swapep up ivery blissid minit. Who wants a bird's nest on the verandy I'd like t' know?"

As if in defence of its action a bird with a rose-colored, shield-shaped patch on its breast lifted its wings just enough to show their colored lining, and called softly to its little brown mate whom anyone might have taken for an ordinary sparrow, had she not stood up on tiptoe and moved her wings to show the sulphur-yellow underneath. "Whose business is it!" he sang, nodding his little black head as if in defiance of Nora, who stood brandishing her broom. From the opposite side of the plum tree where the two birds had taken refuge the little brown mate called back, "Whose business is it!" "The impudence av thim", scolded Nora, who was a master hand at translating bird language, "t'defy me, an' me with the broom in me hand."

"Watch thim now—do, darlins", Nora said coaxingly to the twins who, after an attack of scarlet fever, had come up to Aunt Flo's to get some color into their pale cheeks, "Watch thim, so that they will not be comin' back the blissid minit that me back is turned. I must get back to the kitchen or it will be no dinner you will be after gettin' this day."

Satisfied with the children's promise to watch the birds, Nora went back to her work, leaving May and Fay swinging quietly in the sunshine.

For a time the two birds made no move to resume their nest-making, and the sun began to feel a bit too warm for comfort.

"I don't believe those birds are going to come back, and this sun is getting much too hot for me" said May, "I move that we go around the other side of the verandah. We can come back often to see what they are doing."

"I think the sun is just lovely", responded Fay, "it is making my back feel so warm and comfy, but if you want to move I'll move with you."

The old couch was so soft on the other side of the verandah, and there was such a lovely bed of peonies at this side of the house to admire, that the twins forgot all about their promise to Nora for a time. Suddenly Fay cried, "Oh May, the birds!" Dashing around the end of the house they saw that the birds had come back almost at the moment they had moved, for part of a nest had been built again, and the verandah was again strewn with straws and small twigs.

"My! oh my, but Nora will be cross," giggled May. "Let's not tell her" ventured Fay, "I will get Uncle Ted's broom out of the carriage shed and sweep this stuff up." Fay raced across the lawn; she was back in a few minutes and had the straws and twigs all out of sight before Nora peeped out to see if all was well. Nora smiled with pleasure when she saw there were no straws on the verandah. "You blissid darlins," she said, "Yez did kape thim varmint away." Before the twins had time to answer she was turning to go back into the house, when out of the corner of her eye she caught a glimpse of the partly-built nest.

"'Twas out av the eye in the back av me head" she said, "that I glimpsed it." In a minute her broom was bringing the poor little nest crashing to the ground. "Dade an it must av been aslape that ye were, not t' see them at it," she muttered, as she swept the verandah clean again. "Dade and we must have been" chuckled May, half under her breath, "not to remember that the wee bit of nest would soon catch Nora's eye."

For an hour or more the Rose-Breasted Grosbeaks (who were really anxious to build their nest in that particularly safe corner) and the girls played hide-and-seek with each other; the birds would fly onto the vines and peep down at them, uttering thin, sharp-sounding little eeks when they saw the girls were still on guard. This was great fun, especially for Fay, who had an imaginative mind. "I am sur that bird is winking at me" she giggled. "Do you suppose he is trying to coax us to move away and let them go on with their work?" "Perhaps he is" May replied, "and I hope that when we are at dinner they will get busy and build again. I would just love to see that next built there. They are such 'If-at-first-you-don't-succeed, try-try-again-birds', that they deserve to be allowed to build where they want to." "I am afraid Nora won't let them though", sighed Fay.

But she did! Uncle Ted said, when he heard the story at the dinner table, "Let them be, Nora, they know best. They know my early potato patch is just across the fence from the verandah, and they're especially fond of potato-bugs and beetles. When the bugs are done they will move on somewhere else."

"We will help keep the verandah clean," begged the twins, almost in the same breath. As Nora promised to leave the birds alone a clear soft whistle of "Whose business is it!" floated in through the open window, and as if in reply, a white-throated sparrow off in the cedars called back, "Can-a-da, Can-a-da, swe-et Can-a-da," as if to say that it was Canada's business to protect her birds. And it is, children, Canada's business and your business—and mine too, to help protect our birds.

Next story "Amongst the Flowers".

Lovingly, Aunt Jean.

The steamer "Empress" made her first trip to Carillon on Saturday, May 21st., and once again we hear the pleasant sound of the G.O.P. as it speeds on to Grenville with Mr. Albert Halsey as conductor.

School No. 2, Cushing, closed on Friday last, after a successful term under Miss M. Fitzgerald of Carillon.

The town council meeting, presided over by Mayor J. E. E. Valois, was held on Wednesday and Councillors Paquette, Lafleur, Raymond, Miller, Berry, MacKimmie and John McGibbon were also present. Routine business was gone through after Louis Boivin again presented his petition for license to keep hotel in the West End. It was accepted and dealt with in the usual way.

Miss Florence Corlett, one of our finest of vocalists, and Miss James, who are recent arrivals from England, will surrender their spinsterhood by being participants in a double wedding, which is shortly to take place in Brownsburg.

A service was conducted at the house, by his Masonic Brethren, after which the body was removed to the Church of the Redeemer, where service was conducted by the Rev. G. W. Phillips, choosing very appropriately for his text "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." He was borne to his last resting place by six of his Masonic Brethren, namely Messrs. Jos. Seale and Carl Seale, of Morin Heights, Van Forbell, of St. Jovite, Dr. W. L. Morrison and Herbert Cooke, of Arundel, and Mr. P. Cantin of Weir. Interment took place in the Arundel Cemetery.

alcohol is not a stimulant, as used to be commonly supposed, but a narcotic drug, and that ultimate effects are harmful in the extreme. At this point he emphasized the need for the influence and example of the home if the teaching of the schools is to have the desired effect.

But above all God is opposed to the traffic in alcoholic liquors. Christ must reign till he has put all enemies under His feet, and when that day comes the liquor evil will be there. In this connection Dr. Coburn quoted with warm approval those great words of Lowell—

"Though the cause of evil prosper,
Yet 'tis truth alone is strong;
Though her portion be the scaffold,
And upon the throne be wrong,—
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch above His own."

In introducing Dr. Coburn and referring to the subject on which he was to speak, Mr. Rosborough spoke of Temperance Societies which were instituted in Lachute and Chatham in the years 1832 and 1831 respectively, the original documents concerning which had been placed in his hands by an interested lady of the congregation who, at present, has them in her possession. These documents are of such historical interest that they are included in this report.

MINUTES OF INAUGURAL MEETINGS OF LOCAL SOCIETIES 1831 - 1832

At a meeting held in Chatham on the 1st. day of June 1831, for the purpose of forming a Society for the promotion of Temperance, the meeting having been opened by prayer, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted—Resolved

3rd. That at each anniversary the officers shall report to the said Society all their proceedings and the number of members belonging to the Society and appoint the place of the next meeting.

TWO PERCENT!

Just as the Montreal City Council has appreciated to what extent a two-percent sales tax augments the city revenue, the buyer seems also to have reckoned the cost. Much adverse comment was expected by the councillors who pushed this impost, but they cannot have foreseen that the tax would detract from the business of their city merchants, as it doubtless has done.

It seems strange that retailers even here in Argenteuil should be benefiting by a mere two-percent rise in city prices. But this is a fact, since open highways have been bringing week-enders into rural centres. Local grocers, tobacco and candy dealers, have passed comment this early in the season, that visitors from Montreal must be buying less at home.

It had already been evidenced that, on higher priced purchases such as automobiles, buyers had taken their business outside of Montreal and saved a considerable sum. The matter of saving in smaller articles seems, however, secondary to public resentment of the tax, and folks are buying their week-end cigarettes outside simply to avoid the tax.

The Montreal merchant is the loser, and as time goes on the City Council may be moved to reconsider their move, in the general interests of their citizens.

INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS IN GERMANY

The Labor Court of Berlin has upheld the action of an employer in dismissing an employee who listened to broadcasting from a Moscow station—in his leisure hours at home! Liberty was never adopted as a device upon the Teuton shield, but we doubt if the suppression of personal liberty can ever achieve power, supremacy, or whatever is the national objective of Germany.

THE EPSTEIN MONSTROSITIES

Following a decision to remove eighteen Epstein statues from the London premises of the Rhodesian Government, Jacob Epstein, noted sculptor, has resigned from the Royal Academy with indignant protest. Epstein is an exponent of so-called modern art, an epidemic which invaded artistic practices a few years ago and bereft them of their art. Realism gave way to the grotesque; no orthodox form was recognized as art in that time. None could understand these creations—none save those who distorted beauty to make them.

It is rather pleasant to know that the world is coming to its senses. In every illustration of Epstein's work which came to our notice, there was nothing but ugliness and abuse of true form. Like ourselves, the Rhodesian Consulate cannot understand art, but judging by their latest move at least they have an eye for beauty.

QUESTIONABLE THANKS

"The task of the present generation is to rebuild a world wrecked by its elders." The remark is a far cry from the tributes so often paid to pioneer effort in this country, and to the achievement of our ancestors. It is so unusual that one stops to question the basis of this statement, uttered by so sound a thinker as E. W. Beatty, K.C., LL.D., D.C.L., chancellor of McGill University.

Mr. Beatty has a reputation for balanced vision and keen foresight. And perhaps he is right again. The rising generation, collectively speaking, can have small veneration for their immediate forbears whose management has burdened them with public debt. Nor will present administrations be honored in posterity so long as the cost of government far, far exceeds public revenue. . . . for posterity is saddled with the difference. Future Canadians will fall heir to our mighty traditions—yes, and to our mightier obligations.

WHEAT PROBLEM AGAIN

The wheat situation grows more acute, and the Canadian delegates at the world wheat conference have a heavy responsibility on their shoulders. So does John I. McFarland here. Our wheat has been moving very slowly, and the promise from the west is for much heavier yields from the drought core than we have had. Two half-crops have come and gone, and we still have a carry-over three times as large as normal. What then can we expect if we get a 'bumper'? Such a development would give us the worst wheat glut yet. The action of McFarland in refusing to allow October option to be posted on the Winnipeg exchange is causing much inconvenience to millers and export interests, who would like to buy now for October delivery, but can't. The view here among grain men is that in a few weeks at latest the government will have to make up its mind about a wheat policy. The holding policy is proving dangerous, no matter how beneficial the price may be to the western farmer. The government can hardly permit the price to break on the eve of a general election; which might happen if they began to sell freely abroad. It's the old story: the tiger by the tail.

As for Japan, it seems as though we are going to act sensible and concede something to a good customer. We have been applying a dump duty almost equivalent to 100 per cent on Japanese goods, on the theory that depreciation of currency gives a nation an unfair advantage. Now we are adopting the view that after a while the advantage ends and less protection against such a country is necessary. The benefit of such moderated tariff will extend to all such countries, fifteen in all.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

After seven years spent in this country, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ashworth and their son are returning to Lancashire, England, where they will in future make their home. During the past week they have been entertained at various farewell suppers and teas by their friends, who, while regretting their departure, wish them 'Bon Voyage.' They sail on the Duchess of Athol on Friday.

Mr. Fernand Legault left yesterday aboard the Empress of Australia for an extensive tour in Europe. He will stay awhile in Paris, then crossing to the British Isles where he will visit Oxford and Cambridge. Returning to the Continent his itinerary will include the World's Fair at Brussels, Berlin, cities in Switzerland and Italy and other points of importance—altogether a most interesting tour. Mr. Legault will be home late in August in time to resume his studies at the university. He has now completed his second year in law.

Whyte, of Detroit, was matron of honor, wearing a gown of aquamarine blue lace, and a large white hat. Miss May Munro, of Montreal, was bridesmaid and wore a gown of peach moire silk, with large hat of the same color. Their bouquets were composed of a pastel shades of sweet peas.

Miss Lillian Smith, of Montreal, played the wedding music, and Mr. Ronald Dawson, of Lakefield, was best man for the groom.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Windsor Restaurant, where yellow daffodils formed the table decorations.

HELPING TO BUILD THE BRITISH 'ROUND-THE-WORLD HIGHWAY

In 1880, the Canadian Pacific Railway was organized for the purpose of completing a line to span the continent.

The Bank's directors, confident of the future of the Dominion, placed a generous share of the Bank's resources behind the project, which was completed in 1886 and formed the transcontinental link in the "British 'Round-the-World Highway." Subsequent events have shown that this undertaking contributed more than any other to the settlement and development of Western Canada.

The Bank promptly opened branches at Vancouver and Victoria, subsequently at points along the railway which since have become thriving cities.

This is one of many experiences showing how the Bank of Montreal, looking forward with Canada from the beginning, has been a useful factor in the development of the country. In the future, the Bank expects to continue that usefulness—to continue to look forward with Canada, toward the nation's future destiny.

THE GROWTH OF THE DRAMA

The growth of interest in the Drama in this country has been remarkable. Almost every church, school, lodge and club in the country has given a play to capacity houses. The interest has not been confined to the cities and towns but rural communities have done their share too. It is good entertainment for both players and audiences. We have been interested spectators at the Western Ontario Drama Festivals and the improvement from year to year has been marked. Players seldom made the same mistakes that other players have made the year before. This year competition seemed to be stressed less and there was a real festival atmosphere before the series concluded. The idea of winning is not the main thing although, of course, it is very pleasant to win. Remarkable talent has been found in the most unlooked for places and it is very pleasant to see this developed. Lord Bessborough will be long remembered for the encouragement and leadership he has given to the Drama in Canada.

INTEREST IN HISTORY

Historical Societies are being formed in more centres each year and people are beginning to realize that the history of their family and the history of the place in which they live is worth recording and learning. Probably it is a sign that, as a country, we are growing up. We should remember to keep records, letters, and papers, because eventually they too will be history, to those who come after us. The Wellington County Historical Society had a competition of snapshots of local places of historical interest. This idea seemed such a good one that I am passing it on. It should be a very fertile field of work for either Women's Institutes or Home and School Clubs. If we can promote interest in local history in the schools we are laying a good foundation.

TO SHAMPOO A RUG

In the larger centres it is possible to send out your rug to be shampooed, but most of you will have to do it yourself, if you want it done. Fortunately this may be done quite satisfactorily at home; a shampoo once or twice a year will benefit a rug. The chief thing to remember is that the back of the rug must not get wet. Make a very heavy lather of mild soap or soap chips and use only the lather. Let this be lukewarm before using and then scrub a small section of the rug at a time. Wipe with a cloth rung out of clear lukewarm water. Let me emphasize again that the rug must not be wet through to the back. If it is possible, use soft water but if that cannot be obtained soften the water with a little borax. Do not use ammonia. If a small stick or a comb is used to make the pile stand erect while it is still damp, it will improve the appearance of the rug when dry.

LEMONS

To be without a lemon in the house is a catastrophe, to my way of thinking. They improve the flavour of so many foods and they are such a valuable addition to our diet from a nutritional standpoint, as they supply the vitamin 'C' which cannot be stored, but must be eaten from day to day. I did not realize that I used lemons more freely perhaps than many do until my maid remarked that she had worked in a good many homes and she had never seen anyone use a lemon for anything but lemon filling or lemon pie. Just out of curiosity I looked back to see what I had done with the last dozen lemons. And here is what happened to them. To-day I made a dessert out of odds and ends. There was some stale cake, some raspberry jam and some cream on hand. I whipped the cream, added the cake crumbs and the raspberry jam and then sharpened it with considerable lemon juice. We had creamed fish and I sprinkle the juice of half a lemon to a pound of fish and let that soak in while I make the cream sauce. Lobster sandwiches took considerable juice to bring out the flavour. A tuna fish salad took its quota of lemon juice.

THE PRIMARY OBJECT OF EDUCATION

The problem of education in this twentieth century is, as it has been in the centuries that are past and will continue to be in those which are to come, how to influence and direct the thinking of the people, through the school life of the child, so that the national characteristics which are shown to the world will be of the highest possible type. The pupil in the public schools needs to be taught national needs, and the purpose and results of international intercourse, with an inspiration to assist in the general welfare of mankind.

Not only do pupils need instruction along practical and economic lines for, important as these are in themselves, they lead to destructive competition and unrest unless carefully handled. Competition in art, music, literature, social welfare and kindred subjects are much more important in the cause of the advancement of world civilization, and well-being, and to these great causes the schools may well be an all-important contributory factor.

Quebec Women's Institutes count among their projects assistance to all schools in their vicinity, along the lines best calculated to inspire a worthy citizenship, and that they may the better appreciate the task before them, the members are themselves studying art, literature, law, and every phase of social welfare work.

Mr. Thompson—I'm convinced that China needs a firm hand.

Mrs. Thompson—I've told the new maid that, but it's no use.

Wedges of lemon were served with perch and with a salmon loaf. Incidentally we use sea foods at least twice a week to help supply the iodine we all need. Lemon juice was added to fresh fruit salad. Then another day I gathered up all the bits of preserves left in the bottles and mixed them all together and added considerable lemon juice and topped with whipped cream. I made chicken sandwiches from canned chicken and found that a little lemon juice improved them. Then we had a 'Chicken Salad' made from a shank of a veal and lemon juice did wonders for it. Mayonnaise Dressing took some more and I used it instead of vinegar in French Dressing. We used lemon juice in an Orange Bavarian Cream and I made a jelly using some left-over peach juice as part of the liquid. It seemed to taste rather sickly sweet so I went the lemon juice. There are many other uses for lemon juice but these happen to be the ones I have used recently. If you do not use lemons freely in your cooking, just try them and see if you do not think that they are an improvement. If you feel that they are expensive for daily use, look on them as a dose of medicine, and maybe that will satisfy your conscience.

Scientists have discovered a chemical clock within the brain which estimates time. This is no novelty, having been used by the weaker sex for years in keeping appointments.

This week's Rex program, presenting the Silver Voice of the Silver Screen, in the person of Grace Moore, is a feature which has drawn generous plaudits from the city film fans. This star is a vocal celebrity of the times. Her role in One Night of Love is a masterpiece to be seen by all.

Late Miss Pearl Ayers Laid to Rest

The Choir, composed of vocalists from Montreal, was under the direction of Mr. Jos. Saudier, choirmaster of St. Louis de France, Montreal, and rendered the beautiful Mass of Requiem by Yon.

The pall bearers were the three brothers of the departed—Tom, Leonard and Richard, her two cousins, Gilbert Ayers and Joseph Dumais, and Hubert Tremblay.

She leaves to mourn her loss her father and mother, three brothers Tom, Leonard, Richard, three sisters (Isabelle) Mrs. E. Deslauriers, (Blanche) Mrs. G. Payette, and Monique.

Telegrams of sympathy were received from numerous friends. Mass offerings and flowers were sent by more than a hundred sympathizing relatives and friends.

Three landaus bearing flowers preceded the procession. Interment was made in the Lachute Catholic Cemetery.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, June 2nd., is "Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced."

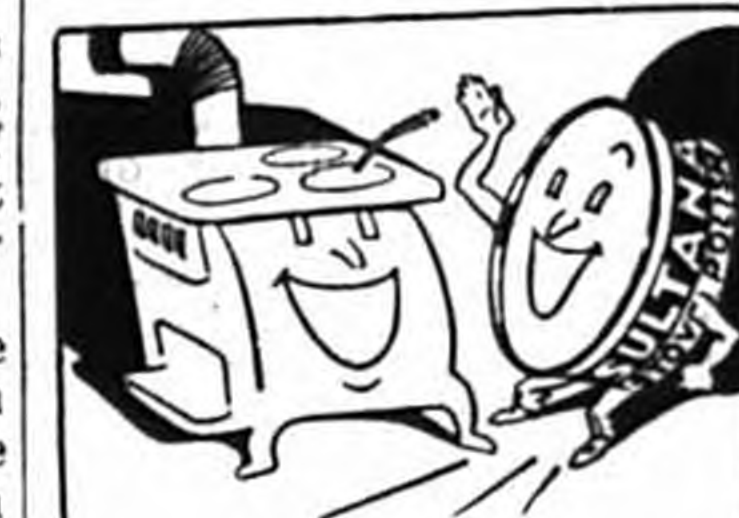

The Golden Text is:—"When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed for ever." (Psalms 92: 7).

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." (Isaiah 54: 17).

"Evil thoughts and aims reach no farther and do no more harm than one's belief permits. Evil thoughts, lusts, and malicious purposes cannot go forth, like wandering pollen, from one human mind to another, finding unsuspected lodgment, if virtue and truth build a strong defence." (Science and Health, pp. 234, 235).

LOCAL SCOUTS ATTEND RALLY IN MONTREAL

The local troop was fortunate enough to be taken to Montreal by automobile, through the services of a number of kind friends, and had a most enjoyable and profitable day, for the display was well worth seeing. In addition to the Lachute Scouts, troops from Brownsburg, St. Andrews East, Arundel, Weir, Morin Heights, and Grenville were also represented.

The purpose of the Rally was, primarily, to let the Chief Scout see the Scouts of Montreal and surrounding districts and, at the same time, to give the boys an opportunity of seeing the Chief Scout in person. Approximately four thousand Scouts and two thousand Wolf Cubs took part in the varied program, which commenced promptly at 3 o'clock and continued throughout the afternoon, without a hitch or lull, till the close at 5.30.

Wolf Cubs opened the proceedings by forming a great circle round and round the Arena, and four of their number took Lord and Lady Powell each by the hand and led them out to inspect the great gathering of some 2,000 cubs. Following this procedure the Scouts staged a "Historical Pageant of Canada", starting with the days, before the advent of the white man and ending with the King's Silver Jubilee. This was immediately followed by a demonstration of "Pioneering", showing many of the activities common to scouting, such as bridge-building, erecting tents, signalling towers, flag poles, and a host of other things. Hardly had these things been dismantled and taken away before another band of Scouts were on the floor on "Badge Parade", giving an idea of some of the lines of training followed to enable the boys to gain these badges.

The second item by the Wolf Cubs followed. This consisted of demonstrating various games used in their training; they finished their turn by forming up in certain positions, lying flat down on the floor and spelling out in perfectly formed letters "Lord Baden Powell."

The grand finale came when four thousand Scouts were formed up in the arena, the colours of the various troops solemnly paraded, and the gathering sat down to sing a group of Scout songs. At the conclusion the Chief Scout spoke, giving them kindly words of praise and encouragement, and asking them to "Keep in mind, every one of you, that you are a member of a team. Remember to do everything to make your team better than the others. Remember that you belong to Canada and play the game for her, so that she may be the best among the Dominions." He went on to tell them to "Work! . . . Not for your own glory and aggrandisement, but for Canada's reputation, that she may be one of those to show to the world the example of peaceful, happy and prosperous nations, working together. Do your best! In a few years you will have grown up into men, trained to serve Canada." The words of the Chief Scout came out clearly and forcefully and will long be remembered by the boys and everyone within hearing of his voice. In days to come the boys who were privileged to be there will be able to recall the thrilling scene of the "grand old man of scouting" standing before them in the simple uniform of a Scout.

After the National Anthem, the Chief Scout called for three cheers for the King. These were given in rousing fashion and were immediately followed by three rousing cheers for the Chief Scout himself.

LOVES TO EAT THIS CEREAL, IT CHECKED HER CONSTIPATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Helped Miss Kesterke

We quote from her letter: "Three years ago, I became constipated. I tried many laxatives. But as soon as I got used to each kind, I began to get the same trouble."

"Last summer I was on my vacation. They served Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I just loved it. I eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every morning, and ever since I have not had to take any more laxatives."—Miss Margaret Kesterke. Address on request.

*Due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN is also rich in vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle. It resists digestion better than the fiber in fruits and vegetables, so it is often more effective.

Isn't this food safer than taking patent medicines? Two tablespoons of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. If seriously constipated, use with each meal. See your doctor, if you do not get relief.

Use as a cereal, or in cooking. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.
