PRETTY HOUSE WEDDING LACHUTE ROAD

YOUNG - ARMSTRONG

The marriage of Miss Florence Mary Armstrong, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Scott Armstrong of Lachute Road, to Mr. Harold Graham Young, son of Mr. W. C. Young and the late Mrs. Young, of Maryland, Que., took place on Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. W. B. Rosborough officiating. The wedding music was played by Miss Doris Armstrong, sister of the bride. Ferns, roses and peonies were used in the decorations of the house for the occasion, the ceremony taking place under a rustic arch entwined with peonies.

The bride, unattended, was given away by her father and wore a powder blue and navy printed chiffon suit with hat to match, and other accessories of navy blue, wearing a corsage bouquet of pale pink sweet peas and baby's breath. The wedding was a quiet one, only the immediate family being present. After the wedding supper, Mr. Young and his bride left by motor for a trip to the Maritime Provinces. They will reside at Shawville, Que.

OBSERVATIONS ON LOCAL HIGHWAYS

An application of calcium chloride to sections of the gravel highway around Lachute has served to lay the dust and add greatly to the comforts of driving. The Lachute - Grenville highway, and the centre of Main Street, Lachute, are notable instances. The Department of Roads might well continue this work on other highways; it is an improvement which, in goodly measure for the expense involved, will draw appreciation from those who use the roads and pay the taxes.

It is noted that White's Bridge is closed on account of its dangerous condition; however, the detour by way of the iron bridge is vastly improved, considering the condition of the river road at this section last year.

The St. Jerome highway still offers little attraction to drivers; and there can be little improvement in the surface until the loose gravel is replaced with something more substantial. There is no evidence of departmental efforts to straighten the road in accordance with petitions made by this town.

The front road from Grenville to Carillon, it is noted, shows a distinct improvement during the last two seasons, and this route, formerly avoided whenever possible, now affords a pleasant drive.

AUTOPSY ON DROWNING VICTIM AT PT. FORTUNE

The body of Gordon Wilson, 22, missing a week from his home, was found in the Ottawa river at the foot of the Carillon dam on June 24th., after intensive searching and dragging operations. A closer examination of the body revealed a severe skull fracture, and although this is believed to have been caused when the body was hurled over the dam, Coroner Trepanier of St. Clet, who viewed the body, ordered an autopsy.

The young man's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wilson, said he set out to bait his night-line in the river. When he failed to return, a search was organized and his clothes were found on the bank of the river, along with some soap and a towel. Since then, the river had been dragged and dynamite had been

Verdun Police Department Adopts Radio Motorcycle Patrol

FIRST CITY IN CANADA TO MAKE USE OF
NEW POLICE EQUIPMENT

Radio-equipped police motorcycles, capable of receiving all messages transmitted over station VYR, Montreal Police Department, were put into service recently in the City of Verdun, making it the first city in Canada to utilize the radio system on police motorcycles.

partment, were put into service recently in the City of Verdun, making it the first city in Canada to utilize the radio system on police motorcycles.

So far only two motorcycles have been equipped with the short-wave radios following several days of experimenting by engineers of the Northern Electric Company. The type of radio is similar to the regular short wave sets used in police radio cars, and the loud-speaker is made so that the voice of the announcer is heard even if the motorcycle is going at 80 miles an hour.

The honor of being the first two drivers to operate radio-equipped motorcycles goes to Constables George McIver and P. Gatinneau, of the Verdun police, who were placed on patrol duty.

All messages to these motorcycles will be sent out through the Montreal Police Radio station, and the calls will be known as "Motorcycle No. 5 and Motorcycle No. 8."

The radio receiving set is placed on the handlebars of the motorcycle, the supporting rods serving as aerial. The running of the motor does not interfere with the working of the set and reception is clear. These motorcycles will be on duty day and night and will co-operate with the police cars in Verdun.

Already several cities in the used to aid the operations. The condition of the body and the fractured skull gave indication of possible foul play, so Dr. H. H. Kirby of Hawkesbury was asked by Crown Attorney C. W. A. Marion to attend the autopsy and make an investigation. The autopsy was performed and cause of death was given as accidental.

ANGLICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC

St. Simeon's Sunday School held their annual picnic on Saturday last at Mr. John Pollock's grove. The weather was ideal and a splendid attendance of both young and old helped to make the picnic a thoroughly enjoyable one.

After the usual races, tea was enjoyed and ice cream vanished rapidly. A "peanut scramble" afforded lots of fun and the tug-of-war ended the afternoon's amusements, after which the gathering made their way home, tired, but unanimous as to having spent a very happy time.

BROWNSBURG HOLSTEINS SHIPPED TO U.S.

Claude M. Hinman, Deansboro, N. Y., has recently purchased 12 pure bred Holstein cattle from breeders in the lower Ottawa Valley district, the consignors including Argenteuil and Prescott County breeders. Five head were taken from the herd of the Estate of Geo. E. Lighthall, Vankleek Hill. The herd of A. A. McGibbon of Brownsburg also contributed five head, while the remainder of the shipment consisted of 2 head from J. S. MacVicar of Brownsburg.

$7,000 Loan Authorized for Relief Works at St. Jerome

A $7,000 loan for unemployment relief works was authorized by the St. Jerome local council last week.

At the same session, officials of the Sanitary Unit of Terrebonne County were given permission to hold a tag day within the limits of St. Jerome.

Speed-boat Capsized, Man Had Narrow Escape

Accidents reported in the use of speedboats are surprisingly few, considering the frailty of these craft and the speed at which they travel. A boat of the "sea flea" or "water bug" variety capsized at Lake Louise on Monday and the occupant, young Mr. Cook of Montreal, a Lake resident, was thrown into the water. He managed to gain a hold on the half submerged craft but fell back again, remaining under water for a prolonged period which alarmed the onlookers nearby. Several boats were soon on the scene to lend assistance, Mr. Cook having meanwhile clutched the speedboat, which was buoyant enough to keep him afloat.

In the 18th and early 19th centuries Germany was split into some 300 separate principalities.

Applications Considered for City Engineer But No Appointment Made

OTHER MUNICIPAL MATTERS RECEIVE
ATTENTION OF TOWN COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the Lachute Town Council was held on Wednesday at 8 p.m. there being present Mayor Dr. J. H. Mason, and Councillors J. W. McGibbon, Jos. Constantineau, W. J. Deacon, H. Lamarche, C. Durocher, K. A. McQuat, F. Deslauriers, G. A. Muir and O. Laurin.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. L. L. Legault, K.C., reported that the Town had lost the actions taken against the Baptist Church and the Cleres St. Viateur.

The matter of building a sewer on Harriet Street was discussed and left in charge of the Roads Committee.

Applications for the position of Town Engineer were opened and read, but a vote of the council was negative as far as making any appointment.

W. R. McFaul was appointed inspector of sewer works under direction of S. Ouimet, C.E..

LAKEFIELD FAMILY ARE SUDDENLY BEREAVED

LATE MRS. W. BEATTIE

The death of Mrs. Walter Beattie of Lakefield occurred at 11 o'clock Tuesday night, following a heart attack. Mrs. Beattie was only 34 years of age, her sudden and untimely passing being mourned by many friends in the community.

She was formerly Miss Minnie Inglis, a native of the Seignory. Here also she married Mr. Walter Beattie, who remains with a daughter and three sons to mourn their deep loss, the youngest child being an infant only 3 weeks of age. Mrs. Beattie was survived also by her sister, Mrs. H. W. S. Neill of the Seignory, and her mother, Mrs. Fred Fulton, Montreal.

Mrs. Beattie was Anglican by faith. Her funeral is being held today, Thursday, with Rev. A. E. Mount and Rev. C. W. P. Baugh officiating.

State of Maine to Develop 200,000 Horse Power from Bay of Fundy

Illustration (above) shows the famous tide rolling in. (Left) Light-house on Manan Island in Bay of Fundy near where Cobscook Bay tidal water electric development has been started.

A project under President Roosevelt's work relief program in the United States, will harness electrical power from the famous tides of the Bay of Fundy. It is expected to develop 200,000 horse power. Work on the structure is already under way.

Washington.—Because President Roosevelt likes to summer at Campobello Island, New Brunswick, the tidal waters of the Bay of Fundy on the American side are to be harnessed to provide electric power for the state of Maine, and perhaps for New Brunswick. The vast work relief program in the United States has appropriated a preliminary $10,000,000 to harness the tides for the first time in history, and at least $37,000,000 is expected to be spent on this project which relies on the attraction of the ocean waters to the far-distant moon.

For many years the high tides of the Bay of Fundy, rising a maximum of 27 feet, a minimum of 16 feet, and on a yearly average 18.6 feet, have been studied by power engineers. Negotiations have been carried on consistently between Canada and the United States, for the

OUTBREAK OF FIRE IN FIRE STATION

The usual procedure of rushing valuable fire equipment to the scene of an outbreak, was reversed in the early morning blaze which occurred over the week-end in Lachute fire station, when firemen hustled to remove their fire trucks from the threatening flames.

An alarm was sounded at 1.30 a.m. Monday, when Mr. and Mrs. P. Tessier, who occupy the apartment above the station, heard the noise of a defective water heating system downstairs and noticed smoke rising through the floor. Firemen rushed to the spot and found that a fire in the heating unit had ignited the walls and wood ceiling. The outbreak was promptly subdued with fire extinguishers taken from the trucks. The original motor pump was badly scorched before it could be pushed away from the corner of the building in which the blaze occurred. One

FLOWERS

Anyone having either garden or wild flowers to spare, will be doing a real good turn by sending them to the city where they are distributed to the poor and sick and to those less fortunate, who rarely get a chance to see the beauties of nature in the country. By so doing you too will be happy in knowing that you have made others happy.

Flowers can be left at the C. P. R. Station, where they will be taken charge of.

Large Liners Carry Less

Cargo Than Small Ships

The larger and more modern liners carry far less actual cargo than freight and tramp steamers which are half their size. Trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific express liners usually carry nothing except mail and a few automobiles.

Visitors are not allowed to enter the bridge or wheelhouse of a ship at sea during stormy weather. Some captains are very strict about this, rightly or wrongly, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune and prohibit passengers in both fair and bad weather from visiting the bridge or wheelhouse. The helmsman (or quartermaster) has both hands on the wheel; both eyes on (1) one or the other of two compasses, (2) course indicator (3) rudder indicator, all of which are actuated electrically. The first (or chief) officer is another name for the first mate. His duties usually are those of navigating officer. He gives the orders, direct or indirect, to the quartermaster, who always repeats the order and shifts the helm accordingly. Behind these orders are scores of intricate navigating and piloting jobs that take up 60 minutes out of every hour the vessel is at sea. Mathematics, skill, and judgment are the main elements. These involve the use of instruments like sextants, fathometers, radio compasses, barometers, anemometers, thermometers, charts, dividers, and binoculars.

Harvesting Brazil Nuts

Unusually Hazardous Job

Not a harvest in the world is gathered under more perilous conditions than the Brazil nut crop. Before even arriving within sight of the wild groves, where these delicacies thrive in the "green hell" of Amazonia, the peons, or native pickers, have to fight their way through hundreds of miles of swampland, infested with alligators, swimming snakes, and electric eels, while in the jungle itself the merest scratch from a liana, orchid or some other poisonous plant spells death. Jaguars are among the lesser perils.

Then, when the tinkest breath of wind runs through the giant castanhu trees, 80 and 100 feet high, on which the nuts hang in great pods, each weighing when mature not less than four pounds, these pods hurtle to earth with the velocity of bombs. Hundreds of natives are thus brained and maimed every season.

The deadly black shells, hastily collected from the forest floor—climbing the trees would be impossible—are immediately packed on the backs of mules, and carried to the nearest stream, where they are washed, in readiness for transport by boat to the barracoe or collecting station. Brazil, curiously, has no appetite for these luxury fruits. Great Britain and America are the largest importers.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

GROWING UP

I thought when school was over That I could stay in bed,
And sleep and sleep most all the time,
But I hear this instead—

"Come, Dick the cows are waiting
Down by the pasture gate,
Hurry them in for milking,
The work must not be late.

The calves are calling for breakfast,
Old Nellie is pawing for hay,
You'll have to attend to the chores, lad,
For your dad has a busy day."

Sis tells me I ought to be proud,
To be treated like a man,
And able to help my daddy,
And well—I guess I am.

WHEN THE MOON WAS FULL

Betty caught hold of the old elm tree to steady herself, she was so surprised and confused by Queen Bluebell's sudden request.

"I-I-I", she stammered "I-oh how could I get there?" "I will see that you get there safely, child; the question is, Will you come?"

"Without Bob!" the other stalling for time.

"Without Bob!" the other fairly snapped, "of course without Bob. What do we want with a boy. Besides Bob has nothing to do with this; why should he come?"

"If you will come this time, alone, little Betty, I promise you that I shall take you both to the Moon Fairies' Court another time. Just now I am in disgrace because of my broken crown and not in a position to ask for favors. When my crown is mended so that the broken parts will not be visible or I have been given a new one I shall have much more power."

Betty was quite terrified at the thought of going so far away from home without Bob, who was her protector in all their adventures. Queen Bluebell seemed to know just what was the matter and said softly "Do not be afraid, Betty, I shall see that no harm comes to you."

"I'll look after you too", the other fairy said, "but I would like to punish you in some way just the same, for breaking Queen Bluebell's crown and causing all this delay in our plans."

"Your plans?" Betty said in a questioning voice. "Yes, our plans. We had planned to bring soft sleep to the two newest babies that have just come into the world. They cry, cry all the time and do not seem to know how to sleep, and now we cannot go until Queen Bluebell has a new crown."

"I am sorry," Betty said, "and I am ready to go with you at once if it will help Queen Bluebell and the babies. "Can't we start right away?"

"Not until the moon is full", Queen Bluebell said, "but it will be in a very short time now, so we must get you ready." Her hands came together with such a loud smack that Betty was startled. Two tiny figures rose up in front of her as if they had come out of the ground.

"Prepare Miss Betty for a visit to the Moon Fairies' court, at once, Dewdrop please" Queen Bluebell said to the first little figure. "Give her shrinking drops and a bath, and you Fleet Wings get the coach ready."

Before Queen Bluebell had finished speaking Dewdrop held a tiny golden goblet to Betty's lips and Fleet Wings could be heard calling in great excitement "Velvet Wings, Golden Wings, line up, line up!" Betty shivered as she drank from the golden goblet and felt herself getting small, oh so small, small enough to get into the coach shaped just like a lemon lily and smelling just as sweet and have Velvet Wings, Silver Wings and Golden Wings carry Dewdrop and herself swiftly through the air until they came to a wonderful moon-lit bath filled with sweet scented waters. Tiny fairies fluttered around and Betty was lifted from the coach and placed in the bath. It was all so delightful that Betty forgot all about Bob and wished that she could stay in this wonderful bath if not forever, at least a long time. But that could not be. In what seemed to Betty only a few seconds, she was lifted out and patted dry with soft fluffy swansdown, dressed in a gown of gold cloth trimmed with dew-drop diamonds.

"Ready just in time" laughed Dewdrop, "the moon is full and I hear Fleet Wings blowing the bugle outside."

Betty had not noticed that they had been inside anywhere. Until then. She looked about her for a moment before Dewdrop told her to hurry and saw that soft velvety curtains had shut the bath off from the rest of the world. "What are they?" she asked in surprise; "they are so soft, my hands go right through them almost, yet I cannot feel them."

"Curtains of the night" chuckled Dewdrop catching her by the arm and hurrying her out into the moonlight and into a double seated golden coach. "Two lemon lilies", Betty whispered softly as she sat down. "I am glad you are sharp enough to notice your surroundings", a voice at her side said, "I like sharp people and sharp things and sharp tongues", the voice went on and Betty knew by that, that the fairy from the garden was beside her and that Queen Bluebell must be in the front seat.

The fairy beside her kept talking to herself, "I like sharp tongues, yes, and we will need them tonight as Queen Bluebell has enemies and we will have to be sharp to get ahead of them. I am sure that I heard Cracker the mischief maker in the garden tonight, and I am just as sure as I can be that he is just ahead of us making for the court of the Moon Fairies to try and harm Queen Bluebell with his tales, before she gets there."

"A tattle-tale is a dreadful thing—yes, a dreadful thing. Don't ever be a tattle-tale, little Betty. If you can't tell good tales about folks keep your mouth shut." Before Betty had time to say I will, a great blaze of light shone all about them. Sweet music surrounded them, but through it all a loud grating voice could be heard repeating, "Queen Bluebell has broken her crown, careless thing.. She should be stripped of her silken gown, clipped of her wings."

"I told you so" whispered the fairy in a fierce whisper, "Croaker, the Mischief Maker, has arrived ahead of us."

"Our Garden Enclosed"

By R. L. CALDER, K.C.*

To speak to all the youth of Canada is a very great privilege. I am grateful to the Young Men's Canadian Clubs for allowing me to exercise that privilege in this nation-wide broadcast.

In one of Pailleron's plays, a member of the French Academy, entering a salon where many young authors are gathered together, says to the hostess: "Introduce me to them." The hostess protests: "You mean, 'Introduce them to me,' don't you?" "No," says the veteran, "I have a sense of values. Introduce me to them. I am but the past. They are the future."

I too have the sense of values that should come with advancing age. This afternoon, as I speak to you, young men and women, my mind grips the proposition that the future is most particularly in you, in this country and at this time. What is your complex to-day will be the complex of Canada when you take up its organization and its control. Will your generation in that office be wise, cool and courageous, or will it be dispirited, beaten, bitter?

I urge you to stock up with courage. The morrow will call upon every ounce of it which you may possess. To-day you feel the sting of rare and difficult employment, you sense that things have been muddled by your predecessors, and, with not a little contempt, you watch them either confessing impotence by inertia, or dashing hither and yon upon ill-considered experiments. Yet a little while, and the problems will slip from our hands to yours, for solution. There is the danger that you may be appalled at the inheritance which thus is yours.

There is another danger. You may be tempted to think that nothing in the inheritance is worth taking over; that the past must be utterly broken with; that, not only must you dig down to the foundation of society, but that, to be logical, you must dig up the foundation itself and cast it away.

In this you must be mistaken. Mankind builds as the coral polyp does. Each shoaling multitude is born, makes its shell and dies, leaving the level a little higher for the next. And so there comes, first the reef, then the atoll, and at last the island.

Therefore it is now—when the world is in a state of flux, when everything is in question, when people have come to believe that to alter is necessarily to improve—that I would have you halt on the brink of change, to hear and heed the counsel Isaiah gave to Israel, when it, too, became unmindful of the past: "Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn."

I take it upon myself to recall to you your origin and breeding. I admit all men to have been born equal. I refuse to subscribe to the proposition that, whereas you can breed dogs and horses and cattle, you cannot breed men. Men are bred, as are all animals, by environment and heredity. Each race, according to its varying luck and opportunity, has developed certain characteristics which belong to it, and to it alone. These characteristics may not be better essentially, than the characteristics of others, but they are different. They are the product of a mental and moral evolution, of a social development, peculiar to that race. And, since they are so developed and so bred in it, they are the best, for that race at least, to retain.

Most of those now listening to me are British, by birth, by descent, or by joyful adoption. I charge you to ask yourselves what things our forefathers endowed us with, and whether we should jettison them to the tide of change. I want you to test these things and say whether they have, in the present circumstances, become so worthless as to be thrown lightly aside.

The first thing our forefathers bequeathed to us was a sense of fair play and plain dealing which they developed, I dare assert, to a higher extent than any race in the whole world. That sense underlies all their institutions.

These men that went before us were never theorists. They seldom inquired into what to-day are easily called "fundamentals." They never pursued an abstract principle to its last impracticability. They proceeded by the method of trial and error, ever asking:

"Is it fair, is it just, will it work?" That which was fair, just, workable they held good, and after trial, kept.

It was thus they slowly evolved the British constitutional method—essentially based on fairness, on moderation, on the recognition that the best plan of common action should be taken. To select it, all plans for the common good may be promoted by public speech, without let, hindrance or censorship.

Second. Ever animated by their sense of fairness, our forefathers evolved a system of criminal law, unique and outstanding. It excludes inquisitorial process, it precludes torture as a method of investigation. It demands that before a man is brought to punishment, he shall be safeguarded as follows:

Not the state, nor any official, but some man in his individual capacity must take the responsibility of laying a charge—in order that he may be mulcted in damages if he does it without warrant, or gaoled himself if he maliciously charges the innocent. The charge must be reduced to writing, in order that it may be certain and definite. It must be sworn to before a magistrate, in order that it may be a public act. It must be served on the accused upon his arrest, in order that he may know what is held against him. And finally, he must be advised, upon arrest, that he has a right to remain silent; the asylum of silence cannot be brutally invaded by the practice upon him of mental or physical torture.

By the observance of these prescriptions the Criminal Law of this realm has become the sporty and withal the efficient thing it is; adequately punishing the criminal without creating the "public enemy". Supplemented by the Writ of Habeas Corpus, it fulfils the noble promise of Magna Carta, "To no man shall we sell, deny or delay right or justice."

Thirdly. The innate fairness of our forefathers worked out a method of Trial by Jury—both at Criminal and Civil Law. After thirty years at the Bar, basing myself upon experience and observation, I proclaim it to be the closest approach to ideally just trial that we can hope to have in this world.

Fourthly, and again, in their fairness, our forefathers evolved a method by which the Citizen Master can at all times assert his mastery over his servant, the Civil Service. By invoking one of the six prerogative writs—Habeas Corpus, Quo Warranto, Mandamus, Injunction, Certiorari, and Prohibition—the citizen can preclude the civil servant from outstepping the bounds of his authority, and from bringing about that which the Bible puts among the intolerable things of the world, "a servant when he reigneth."

Finally, our forefathers bequeathed us the basic principle that all issues, whether between subject and subject, between sovereign and subject, or between the governing and governed, should be submitted, without distinction, to the common courts of the land. They acted upon the right assumption that if a man be set, as a justice is, above want by a sufficient salary, above fear because he cannot be removed from his charge, above hope because he cannot be promoted—that man should be capable of justice in deciding all issues.

You see, do you not, how firmly the prerogative and freedom of the citizen is bedded in the law? Tennyson put it rightly when he said of England, what once could be as truly said of Canada:

*"It is the land that freemen till.
That sober-suited freedom chose,
Where girt about by friends or foes
A man may speak the thing he will;
A land of settled government,
A land of just and old renown,
Where freedom broadens slowly down
From precedent to precedent."*

I know you will agree that these things are good. Let us here firmly resolve that we shall transmit them to our posterity, as they were handed down to us, not impaired but strengthened, not restricted but widened.

TRAP FOR FALSE ALARM FIENDS

A new development is reported from London, England, in the form of a trap to apprehend false-alarm fiends. When an alarm is turned in, a pair of nippers reaches out from the box and holds the alarmist by the wrist. He has to stay there until the firemen come with the key.

"CITY OF PERPETUAL MOURNING"

"Manchester is a city of perpetual mourning," declared Arnold Marsh, Secretary, National Smoke Abatement Society, at a conference of the Manchester branch of the society. "Even the great new library is losing its school-girl complexion, and unless something drastic is done it will take on the funeral hue of the Town Hall."

SUCCESSFUL POLICE INSTRUCTION

Describing the police school established last winter at Toronto through provincial and municipal co-operation as an "unqualified success," Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck said the spring course had justified continuation of the school next autumn. With exception of one, all the police officers attending were members of the Toronto force.

HALIFAX LOST APPEAL

Appeal of the City of Halifax versus Nova Scotia Light and Power Company Limited was dismissed by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The judgment affirms a decision of the Nova Scotia Supreme Court which found the company was not obliged to move its tracks to another location in Halifax as directed by the city engineer.

SUBURBANITES OBJECT TO CITY INCOME TAX

Payment of income tax to the City of Montreal has been withheld by a large number of wage-earners who are residents of suburban municipalities outside of the territory specified in the city's by-law, despite a decision handed down at the City Hall that they are liable for the tax. They contend that they are not liable for the tax as non-residents of the specified territory—in this opinion quoting as their authority Messrs. Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, one of Montreal's leading legal firms, who recently gave an opinion to the Town of Hampstead. Also they claim that, even if they are liable as wage earners employed in Montreal, the city has no right to exact a percentage of the federal income tax levy as the amount collectable, since in many cases a large part of their incomes are actually returns from real estate and other sources located outside of the territory specified in the by-law.

At the town council session of June 18, 1885, the following were present: Thos. Barron, Esq., Mayor, and Councillors R. G. Meikle, Elias Milner, James Fish; Thos. McQuat, Phineas Lane, Pierre Rodrigue, F. X. Bertrand, and Thomas Bedard, Esquires.

Mrs. Jessie James, widow of the once famous American Bandit King, will appear in Lachute with the New Nickel Plate Circus and Menagerie on July 3rd. The wife of the great Missouri outlaw will shoot an apple off the head of Texas Charley and perform other feats of skill and marksmanship.

We have to thank Mrs. F. C. Ireland for a dish of delicious wild strawberries, accompanied with sugar and cream—a great treat to the poor sick invalid (presumably written by the editor).

We have now got permanently settled in our new premises in the building east of Mr. Larmonth's Agricultural Implement Establishment on Foundry Street, and will be able to attend promptly to printing orders entrusted to us.

Chicago is henceforth to play the role of a great moral city, Mayor Harrison having declared war on gamblers in the city.

THE QUESTION OF RECIPROCITY

A newspaper is expected to serve its community. Municipal bodies, churches, societies, all and sundry, look to the paper to let the public know of their activities. Sometimes, in addition to reports after the event, they also expect advance advertising, which is carrying it rather far. To a newspaper, advertising is the source of its bread and butter.

But a newspaper likes to help all good causes. That is one of the satisfactions of journalism. A newspaper likes to feel that it is one of the factors engaged in building the community and promoting its interests.

But does not this function of a good newspaper call for reciprocity on the part of the institutions to which it gives publicity? These institutions have printing to be done—bills and programmes for their gatherings, stationery and many other forms.

Hasn't a newspaper some ground for thinking that these institutions should reciprocate by turning in the work for which they expect to pay as well as the news which they expect to be inserted without charge?

Whether they are justified or not, newspapers do have that sort of feeling.

Think it over, and see whether, under similar circumstances, you wouldn't feel the same way. —Huntingdon Gleaner.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, July 7th., is "God."

The Golden Text is:—"There is none holy as the Lord: for there is none beside thee: neither is there any rock like our God." (I Samuel 2: 2).

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"Sing praises to God, sing praises unto our King, sing praises. For God is the King of all the earth: sing ye praises with understanding. God reigneth over the heathen: God sitteth upon the throne of his holiness." (Psalms 47: 6-8).

"GOD. The great I AM; the all-knowing, all-seeing, all-acting, all-wise, all-loving, and eternal; Principle; Mind; Soul; Spirit; Life; Truth; Love; all substance; intelligence." (Science and Health, page 587)

A Long Time — The idea of eternity seems too vast for the human mind to comprehend until one is about halfway through paying for the motor car on the installment system. — Sunday Express.

HOLIDAY ENTHUSIASM IS SIGN OF BETTER TIMES

Any who have doubted the return of brighter days through evidence of increased business, must surely be convinced by the indications of a whole-hearted holiday spirit at this season. If folks have more money to spend on vacations there can be no doubt that things are "picking up."

This county may be peculiarly fortunate, but we believe not—the territory is only typical of other vacation resorts which are enjoying something of the old-time holiday enthusiasm. While there is a distinct upturn noted in the numbers visiting this section, it also appears that more people are occupying rented homes or building new ones. It is believed, however, that the hotels and boarding establishments are securing a proportionate share of the business—which is much needed, following a depression which hit them perhaps harder than any other lines of business.

TO LIBERATE THE CHAIN GANG

After long discussion, it appears that legal proceedings will be taken in Montreal against chain-letter operators—meaning those who have gone into the business on a grand scale. Questioned on governmental opinions of this "public curse", Premier L. A. Taschereau stated this week that the Attorney General's department were "studying" the matter.

While the machinery of the law gets slowly under way, and while experts are busy studying—it is more than likely the chain-letter racket will die a natural death. Public intelligence is remarkably lacking when these get-rich-quick schemes are in the wind; but the sucker mentality cannot be so deplorably dumb as to keep up a joke that is, first and last, on themselves.

THE GARDENER'S KNEES

An address by R. L. Calder entitled "Our Garden Enclosed", which The Watchman reproduces elsewhere in this issue, has little to do with gardening except insofar as Mr. Calder quotes some well known lines from Kipling, wherein the road to achievement is likened to the humble and laborious tasks which fall to the lot of any successful gardener.

As the topic is timely to the season, so also is Mr. Calder's subject fitting to these turbulent days and to the youthful citizens whom his remarks concern. His thoughts on the fundamentals of our civil code, and upon our institutions of law and order, are well worth considering in this era when hasty reforms are fashionable as a remedy for every ailment of society.

As with most of the articles featured in these columns, R. L. Calder's subject is selected for the profitable moral it contains, and is therefore recommended to the attention of our readers.

tides cross the international water boundary running through Passamaquoddy Bay and the Bay of Fundy. The scheme has not met with too much enthusiasm on the Canadian side, the fisheries and canneries expecting harm to their industry with the building of dams and power houses. On the American side the sardine canners have backed the scheme, trusting to engineering assurances that the dams would not harm their industry. Governor Brann of Maine has been in favor. President Roosevelt knows the tides because of his holidays on Campobello Island, and has signified his interest.

An All-U.S. Project

Because of non-participation by Canada, the power development is to be entirely in United States waters. The tides flow up Passamaquoddy Bay and Cobscook Bay, and out again into the Bay of Fundy, so to the ocean. Cobscook Bay is entirely in the United States, and all its entrances from Passamaquoddy Bay are to be dammed. As the waters from the latter bay flow into Cobscook Bay through the dams, they will drive turbines generating electricity, and the waters will flow out from a lower set of dams into the ocean.

Since the tides only run for two and a quarter hours, some of the electricity generated from the incoming tides is to be wired to a reservoir, already known as Haycock Reservoir, there to operate pumps to fill the reservoir. When the tides recede and the Cobscook power station becomes non-productive, the waters will be let out of Haycock Reservoir to drop 130 feet to the ocean and this drop will be utilized to produce electricity in the usual manner in which all hydro power houses create electricity.

Could Develop 500,000 H.P.

The entire harnessing of the tidal waters of the Bay of Fundy is calculated to develop between 500,000 and 700,000 horsepower, and to

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs
Specially written for The Watchman

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, July 2.—The session drags rather wearily on; the end finally appears to be in sight. It has been an industrious and prolific session. All in all, about 125 new statutes have been placed on the books, of which perhaps half were government measures. The "New Deal" has been enacted, such as it is. Unemployment insurance, social and labour legislation of various kinds endorsed, farm loans extended, a Grain Board provided, a beginning made—in the surtax on incomes—on a "Share the Wealth" program. From a government point of view, the record is meritorious. Coupled up with the legislation of last session, it is doubtful whether the records of Canada contain a period during which more momentous (I do not necessarily mean beneficial) legislation has been enacted.

Nevertheless, as the end approaches, the omens are not propitious for the government. One might as well face the blunt fact. The complete collapse of the Conservatives in New Brunswick, Premier Bennett's native province, was a bitter pill. The disclosure of the financial commitment of the government in wheat, which came out last Thursday, contains a lot of political dynamite in Eastern Canada. The Bennett ministry has grappled manfully with gigantic problems, but its touch has no magic to it, and even the most ambitious legislation is being mercilessly, and often effectively, attacked by the critics. The Housing bill, for instance, turns out to be a mere shadow when set alongside the housing needs of the country. Loans for fishermen, accepted as a gesture in the right direction, was nevertheless scored as hopelessly inadequate when measured by the needs of that industry.

THE WORST IS KNOWN

Well informed people knew that the McFarland stabilizing efforts in the wheat market had involved the treasury in obligations running into many millions of dollars; but the exact information was never revealed before. Now the worst is known; and it is pretty bad.

It may be a little difficult for the laymen to grasp the full significance of the figures tabled last week by the officials of the Canadian Co-operative Wheat Producers Ltd., but here is the essence of the situation in a few lines:

On May 31st., 1935—five weeks ago—the government agency held 228,562,000 bushels of wheat, which had cost it an average of practically 90 cents a bushel.

This quantity of wheat, by the way, is equivalent to the whole exportable surplus of last year's wheat crop, plus 50 millions from 1933. Or, if you like, the government agency still has all the exportable surplus of 1934 and 50 millions from 1933. The farmer sold his 1934 crop, but the Canadian taxpayer bought it—and still owns it.

The financial obligation in respect to the above holdings is near 200 million dollars. The federal treasury has guaranteed the lending banks against final loss.

THE PAPER LOSS

The wheat has cost about 90 cents a bushel current quotations are about 80 cents. The blackboard loss, or paper loss, is thus ten cents a bushel on 228½ million bushels—or $22,850,000.

But that is a purely hypothetical figure. If Canada started pouring wheat out on the world market, it might fall to 75 cents, 70 cents, 65 cents—who knows?

This, too, must be remembered—the wheat costs 10 cents a bushel a year to store, and finance. If we hold it, in a year's time the average cost will be a dollar a bushel.

Figure it out for yourself. Everything depends on the trend of wheat prices in the next three or four years, while the surplus is being disposed of. We have a tiger by the tail, and we don't know whether it will hurt more to let it go, or to keep hanging on. The parallel is not quite accurate, for in the long run we have no choice about the wheat—we must let it go, ultimately. The question is, what can we realize on it.

In ten or twelve weeks the 1935 harvest will begin flowing into the country elevators. Looks like a 400 million bushel crop. What on earth can we do with all this wheat unless we can find a way to dispose of our current stocks?

cost between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000. But since only the American side is to be developed, not more than 200,000 horsepower of electric energy is expected. Under present conditions, this is far more than the state of Maine requires, so that New Brunswick may use some of it. Promoters and the enthusiasts, however predict that the harnessing of Neptune and the moon to provide electricity will bring new industries to Maine to use up the entire production of power.

Tidal waters have so far not been developed for electric power. The highest waters, except for death-dealing tidal waves which rise out of the ocean at times, are in the Bay of Fundy, caused, it is said, by the many indentations in the coastline of Maine and New Brunswick. The ocean tides pile up in these bays and inlets, accounting for the extremely high waves which flow into Cobscook and Passamaquoddy Bays. The gravitational action of the sun and moon on the earth as it rotates, causes the tides. Now engineers are making surveys and borings, roads are being constructed and men are looking forward to work once more in the state of Maine, because of the vision that the action of the distant moon on the waters of the ocean can be harnessed to provide energy to drive electrical machines.

MARRIAGE IN LACHUTE

GRAHAM - SCOTT

The marriage took place on Saturday, June 29th., 1935, at the Manse, Lachute, Que., of Miss Ethel L. Scott, to Mr. Wm. A. Graham. The Rev. W. B. Rosborough performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Graham left immediately by motor for London, Niagara, and other points in Ontario.

Strawberry Festival at Grenville

The Annual Strawberry Festival at Grenville was a great success this year, in spite of the presence of the Midway Fair operating on the school yard opposite the Rectory grounds, where the Festival was held. The various stall holders and other helpers worked with a will and the parishioners responded generously to the appeal for cakes, cream, etc. At the end of a pleasant and busy evening all the stalls were sold out, the total receipts being slightly in excess of last year.

The orchestra of the Young People's Club of Trinity Church, Hawkesbury, provided the program and their contribution was much appreciated.

MEETING OF LIONS CLUB

The next regular meeting will be held on Wednesday, July 17, when it is hoped that all Lions will occupy their accustomed places.

The regular weekly meeting of the Lions Club was held at the Cosy Inn on Wednesday; attendance was rather limited, several members being absent for various reasons.

Items of importance were brought up for discussion and referred to the various committees for their attention.

Lion H. Johnson was boosted by Lion A. Fassio. Lions Rev. H. Cousens and T. K. Halter drew the lucky numbers and received Lion Johnson's prizes for the evening.

IN MEMORIAM

CARRUTHERS — In loving memory of a beloved wife and mother, Elizabeth Murray, wife of Henry John Carruthers, who departed this life July 5th., 1935.

Mother dear, we think of you And think of how you died To think you could not say good-bye Before you closed your eyes. No one knows a mother's worth Until she's taken from this earth. But when we see your picture A smile still seems to say, "Do not weep for me, dear family, We shall meet again some day."

—Inserted by her husband, family and son-in-law.

HARTSON—In loving memory of our dear Charlie, accidentally killed July 4th., 1931.

If all the world was ours to give We'd give it, yes and more, To see your loving smile again, And greet you at the door, How oft there comes before us Your dear face, kind and true— For death can never take away Sweet memories of you.

—Sadly missed by wife and parents.

PARISH COUNCILLORS DISCUSS WHITE'S BRIDGE

A meeting of the Parish Council was held last Tuesday in the Court House, there being present Mayor J. E. Walker and Councillors J. E. Armstrong, A. J. Scott, J. S. Pollock, J. G. Hadley, A. Nicholl and the Secretary, J. W. Gall.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted, and a number of bills presented, with payment ordered.

Much discussion arose over the closing of White's Bridge. It was considered to be in a dangerous condition and the council were of the opinion that the government should assume responsibility for its renovation. The council are now awaiting their action, which it is hoped will be forthcoming without further delay, as the condition is said to be causing great inconvenience to the public.

On account of the motor accident to A. J. Scott last week, J. E. Armstrong was appointed to succeed him as valuator.

ENJOYMENT

The ability to enjoy is a precious gift. There are people who cannot enjoy the success that is theirs because they are so busy striving for the next. People who enjoy their own possessions are to be envied. We are made differently. Some people feel that if a thing is theirs it is not of much value. Others have pride of possession so developed that they enjoy anything which is their own. Sometimes the people who have the most enjoy the least, as some of them are too mean to enjoy anything. One of the finest forms of enjoyment is to enjoy one's own family. Parents love their children but too often they do not actually enjoy them. Every mother, who has had more than one child, knows that they enjoy the second much more than the first. Fear enters into the picture here, because the average young mother knows so little about babies that every time the baby looks crooked she thinks there is something the matter. Then we learn that they are only little such a short time that we try to make the most of it. Learn to enjoy things as they come and not look too much to the past nor too longingly for the future. Enjoy the thing of the moment as if it were a flower in bloom, soon to wither.

THE EYE OF A STRANGER

Holiday time is here and when you start to get your clothes ready to go away, have you ever felt ashamed of yourself? I know I have. Too many stitches needed, too many buttons off, elastics that needed renewing and worst of all too many clothes that needed cleaning. I suppose there are women whose clothes are always in a state of perfection. I certainly envy them. It is an enlightening process to look at our possessions as if with a stranger's eye. If we go on a holiday we fix up our clothes; if we have visitors we fix up our houses. Sad but true.

TEMPT WITH CONTRASTS

Even though the weather is very hot it is a mistake to have nothing but cold foods. The stomach feels better with the gentle stimulation of heat. Some meals a hot drink is sufficient. A contrast of heat and cold stimulates the appetite. If you are having a dinner of cold foods, start in with a hot soup. Canned soups are a blessing in hot weather. If your meal is a hot one, begin it with a well chilled appetiser such as tomato juice or a jellied soup. Jellied soups to be at their best should not be too stiff. To my mind they are nicest when not stiff enough to hold their shape but just enough to be slightly thickened. Tomato juice or a jellied soup served with a cracker that is a little different, perhaps a cheese or a salted cracker, will do wonders in stimulating a flagging appetite on a hot day.

TO SAVE ICE

If it is possible to avoid it, hot foods should not be put in the refrigerator to chill as they affect the temperature considerably. It is surprising how quickly you can cool a hot dish if it is set in a pan of cold water. The dish pan is very suitable for this purpose. Change the water a couple of times and the food will shortly be cooled sufficiently to put in the refrigerator. By doing this you will shorten the time required for chilling and use much less ice. After all, water is cheap.

A STOCKING SAVER

Silk stockings are an expensive habit and in homes where there are several girls their cost is considerable. A mother who is forced to buy stockings of a different quality than formerly, tells me of one way she has found of saving. She says that the chief fault in the cheaper stockings is that they have not enough stretch to them and because of this a stitch would give at the knee and a run would result. To overcome this she puts in a tiny tuck at the lower part of the knee and this will stop the run. She says that the last few pairs she has used she has put in two tucks about a half-inch apart and has stopped all runs. No runs, no hits, no errors!

BEE GREENS

Cook greens and little beets separately. When cooked drain, chop and season the greens and pack in a bowl. Keep in a warm place, either over water or in the oven. Skin the beets and season with salt, pepper and butter. Turn the greens out on a dish and surround with the little beets.

STRAWBERRY AND RHUBARB CONSERVE

2 cups diced rhubarb
4 cups strawberries
1 cup seeded raisins
2 oranges, grated rind and pulp
1½ lbs. sugar
½ cup walnuts if desired.
Put rhubarb, raisins, orange juice and pulp, and sugar in a kettle and let stand over night. Then add strawberries and cook slowly until thick (about 35 minutes) stirring frequently. Add chopped nuts and pour into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin.

Undoubtedly they are in danger. In all our provinces, and in one particularly, serious inroads have been made upon them. Even in England the Chief Justice has sounded a warning that the encroachment is under way. I take the liberty of quoting from his book "The New Despotism." He says:

"It is not merely that in this instance Parliament is being out-manoeuvred, or that in that instance the Courts have been defied. It is that the whole scheme of self-government is being undermined, and that, too, in a way which no self-respecting people, if they were aware of the facts, would for a moment tolerate. Much nonsense, to be sure, is written about what is called democracy. It might be thought, on the testimony of some of its apologists, that democracy was a patent medicine—on the testimony of others that it was a fancy religion. But when once the fact is appreciated that democracy is really the name of a form of government, the essence of which is that every citizen in the State shares the responsibility for the good government of the State, and when it is further understood that in the opinion of many competent observers, by no means confined to this side of the Atlantic alone, the great achievement and the enduring pride of our history and institutions are precisely to have exhibited to the world, in an unexampled way, the art and practice of real self-government, as well in peace, as in war, the true dimensions of the present issue, and the true nature of the assault which is being resisted, become reasonably clear.

"Much toil, and not a little blood, have been spent in bringing slowly into being a policy wherein the people make their laws, and independent judges administer them. If that edifice is to be overthrown, let the overthrow be accomplished openly. Never let it be said that liberty and justice, having with difficulty been won, were suffered to be abstracted or impaired in a fit of absence of mind . . .

"It is manifestly easy to point superficial contrast between what was done or attempted in the days of our least wise kings, and what is being done or attempted to-day. In those days the method was to defy Parliament—and it failed. In these days the method is to cajole, to coerce, and to use Parliament—and it is strangely successful.

"The old despotism, which was defeated, offered Parliament a challenge. The new despotism, which is not yet defeated, gives Parliament an anaesthetic. The strategy is different, but the goal is the same. It is to subordinate Parliament, to evade the Courts and to render the will, or the caprice, of the Executive unfettered and supreme. The old King, as Rudyard Kipling sings in "The Old Issue", sometimes reappears under a new name:

DRUG STORES IN CANADA

Ottawa, Canada.—In Canada a most popular shopping centre is the drug store, but when the total sales of drug stores are compared with the total sales of drugs, patent medicines and compounds, etc., the impression is created that a drug store is more than the name implies. According to a recent census of merchandising and service establishments, there were 3,559 drug stores operating in Canada during 1930 and these had total sales amounting to $76,848,900. Sales of drugs, patent medicines and compounds, etc., during the same year through all merchandising establishments amounted to $51,178,000 and of this amount 85.3 per cent may be attributed to drug stores and 14.7 per cent to other retail stores.

GERMAN RAILWAYS PLAN FREIGHT CARS ON STREETS

The German railways' plan of meeting the store-door delivery of freight problem is described in the current issue of Canadian National Railways Magazine, now being distributed. The entire car is loaded on to a truck chassis from a stub-end railway siding and hauled to the customers' warehouse, or in the case of construction materials, delivered to the site of the job where it is required. The truck chassis used are equipped with rails onto which the car is run and loaded cars up to 60-ton capacity have been thus handled.

"All we have of freedom, all we use or know—
This our fathers bought for us long and long ago.
"Ancient Right unnoticed as the breath we draw—
Leave to live by no man's leave, underneath the Law.
"Over all things certain, this is sure indeed,
Suffer not the old King: for we know the breed.
"Howso' great their clamour, whatsoever their claim, Suffer not the old King under any name."

Some of you may dream of drastic change in the economic structure of our country. I would not quarrel with you for this, contemplating the sorry state we now are in. Hesitate, however, before you take down the social structure. Do not confuse the voyage with the vehicle. Our ship—Citizenship—can take us to any haven of heart's desire. It should not be scuttled through sheer love of sabotage. No one will doubt the advanced position of Sir Stafford Cripps, the strongest promoter of State Socialism in England. Speaking in Montreal, not long ago, he said: (I quote him from memory): "The British nations are fortunate in this, that all I have advocated, or that others may promote, can be brought about without a single change in Constitution of Parliament, of the law Courts, or of any part of the present mechanism of the State."

I have a special exhortation for those, listening to me, who are the breed of England, Scotland and Wales. It is their forefathers who kindled this light, who came across seas bearing it in their cupped hands. It is upon them that the duty is most particularly laid of seeing that it is not quenched.

Kipling in his poem, "The Gardener", makes the same appeal. Our special civilization is ours indeed—our garden enclosed, our spring shut up, our fountain sealed. Our garden enclosed must be kept trimmed and weeded.

"And half a gardener's work is done upon his knees."

And he says of England what is also true of Canada:

"Our England is a garden, and such gardens are not made
By saying 'How delightful' and sitting in the shade.
But when your back is aching and your hands begin to harden
You will know yourself a sharer in the glory of the garden."

FINANCIAL REHABILITATION (Peterboro Examiner.)

The municipality which curtails its overhead, refuses to make capital expenditures and uses reasonable pressure in collecting its taxes, should weather the storm without outside help: at least it should not ask that assistance until it has exhausted these other plans of financial rehabilitation.

PITY POOR ANNOUNCER WHEN HE STUTTERS THIS!

This may not be the longest place name in the world, but there is a station on the L.M.S. The station, probably "somewhere in Wales", is Llanfairpwll - gynyllgo - gerychwyrndr - bwallantysil i o g o - go goch. Now, you try and say it!

Zoo Animals Acquire Complexes

Among curious characteristics of animals confined in zoos noted by Dr. Raymond L. Dittmars, curator of mammals and reptiles at the New York zoo, is the apparent love of snow shown by California sea lions which are accustomed to their native habitat to warm ocean currents and sunny beaches. On the other hand those heavily furred denizens of the Far North, often seem agitating between deep ice crevices in the wild state, the polar bears, show themselves very reluctant to plunge into the ponds provided for them in zoos in mid-winter. In this latter connection Doctor Dittmars declares that the polar bears probably suffer less from the intense heat in mid-summer than some of the animals imported from tropic climes. The reason for this is that the bears can quickly get relief from the heat when they do find it unbearable by plunging into their own private ponds.

Ancient Shorthand

The art of condensed writing is no modern invention. The Egyptians used shorthand more than 1,700 years ago, according to evidence collected by H. J. M. Milne of the British Museum, London. The language of the shorthand was not Egyptian, but Greek, and Milne recently announced the discovery of a key to the ancient Greek shorthand, opening up to archaeologists and historians many priceless, but hitherto indecipherable, scripts.—Literary Digest.

Christianity as National Religion

The Armenians, not the Romans, were the first people to adopt Christianity as a national religion. The Armenian king, Tiridates, established the Georgian Armenian (Christian) church in 301, which was 33 years before Constantine proclaimed Christianity as the state religion of the Roman empire.—Collier's Weekly.

No Men Needed

In Europe women alone operate several women's prisons: in Chile, they comprise the official fire-fighting unit of one large municipality; and in Russia, they form the entire crew of several steam commercial ships—running these vessels successfully without the aid of a single man.—Frederic Foster, in Collier's Weekly.

CANADIAN EXPORTS GAIN

Ottawa, Canada.—Reflecting expanding foreign markets, Canada's domestic exports during April totalled $37,575,000 compared with $31,582,000 in April of last year. Exports to the United States totalled $15,717,000 and to the United Kingdom, $12,409,000.

Wheat exports increased from $2,390,000 to $4,288,000. Grains of all kinds mounted from $2,512,000 to $4,687,000, the United Kingdom increasing her purchase from $1,414,000 to $3,626,000 and the United States from $4,000 to $327,000. Alcoholic beverages rose from $995,000 to $1,123,000, and rubber exports, which were made up chiefly of tires and footwear, climbed from $838,000 to $962,000. Cattle exports increased sharply, rising from $301,000 to $1,067,000. Fish exports rose to $1,010,000 from $609,000.

Automobile exports at $2,774,000 increased considerably over April last year when the export was $1,460,000, due mainly to heavier shipments to the United Kingdom. Farm implements were higher, rising from $233,000 to $501,000. Aluminum exports rose from $99,000 to $174,000, and nickel exports were stronger than a year ago, rising from $2,446,000 to $2,724,000. Silver exports to the United States rose from $50,000 to $347,000. Acids increased from $146,000 to $204,000. Electrical energy rose from $244,000 to $252,000 all to the United States. Films rose from $156,000 to $244,000, mainly accounted for by the increase to the United Kingdom from $66,000 to $126,000.

SCRUBBING FLOORS!...

... makes floors easier to clean—

Never anything like it before. "Luxor" is an entirely new finish for floors and other surfaces. Easy to apply. Dries quickly. Makes old linoleums look new. Preserves new ones. Dirt and dust can't stick to its smooth, glossy, transparent finish. Stops scrubbing forever. One quart is enough for the average kitchen floor. Put it on to-night and walk on it in the morning. "Luxor" is also unexcelled for wood work, furniture, toys, boats, front doors and other surfaces requiring a hard, durable, waterproof finish. Requires no polishing. Superior to varnish or wax. One quart at $1.60 will refinish kitchen and bathroom floors two coats. Economical and better.

HAVEN't you noticed that your happiest hours occur on days when you feel your best?

Have more of these happy days. You and all your family. Guard health while you have it. Keep on the sunny side of life.

The greatest enemy of health is common constipation. It may cause loss of appetite and energy. Certainly it kills enthusiasm! Yet it can be banished by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" and vitamin B to relieve common constipation. Also iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. How much pleasanter to eat this delicious ready-to-eat cereal than to take patent medicines. Two table-spoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

HON. H. H. STEVENS TO LEAD NEW POLITICAL PARTY

SPONSOR OF PRICE-SPREADS ENQUIRY
ASSURED OF POPULAR SUPPORT

NEW PARTY CANDIDATES IN ALL
ELECTION CONSTITUENCIES

Hon. H. H. Stevens made announcement from Ottawa this week that he had accepted the leadership of a new political party. The party would have for its object a "reconstruction and reform programme" similar to that which he had been advocating for the past 18 months, the former Minister of Trade and Commerce stated. The name and platform of the new party will be duly announced.

The new party would be "in the fight" very soon, and anticipated putting up candidates in all constituencies in the coming general election. He would make a trans-Canada speaking tour as soon as the campaign was launched.

His decision was made after a conference with a provisional executive of the new organization, composed of Warren Cook, Toronto, Thomas D. Lisson, Hamilton, and Thomas V. Bell, Montreal, "three prominent and moderate-sized business men." The delegation had come to Ottawa from the different provinces representing various classes of people in Canada.

"On Saturday last," Mr. Stevens stated in an announcement issued, "a delegation representing many thousands of citizens resident in all parts of Canada waited upon me and presented a petition asking that I accept leadership of a party having for its object a reconstruction and reform programme similar to that which I have been advocating during the past months."

"This delegation, on behalf of those whom they represent, claimed the right to present this programme to the people of Canada, so that their views might be expressed thereon. Furthermore they declare, and I agree with them, that it is contrary to the spirit of true Canadian democracy that our country's economic life should pass under the control of a privileged class, which, unfortunately, is exactly what has occurred. It is contended also that it is the duty of the Dominion Government to protect our people from unfair exploitation, and to ensure to them equitable treatment, and to the youth of Canada a free opportunity for a normal Canadian livelihood."

"As I share these views, and realizing that both old parties are indissolubly involved in the present system of concentration of control of wealth, I have decided to accept this call to leadership, believing that in this way we can secure for the people the best opportunity to express their will."

Headquarters of the new organization will be in Ottawa. He would be a candidate in the general election, Mr. Stevens stated, although he did not indicate in what constituency.

Of the three delegates who had presented him with the petition, Mr. Cook was president of the Garment Manufacturers Association, Mr. Bell was head of a printing and binding business in Montreal, and Mr. Lisson was well-known in the publishing business in Hamilton.

Since resigning his portfolio last October as a Minister of the Crown, Mr. Stevens said he had received about 20,000 letters. They represented cross-sections of the country. With only one exception, these communications were uniform in one respect, the former Minister stated, "in the great bulk of them they urged me to announce myself as leader of the reform movement."

Federal Candidates in This Constituency Are Still Open to Surmise

Now that Parliament has prorogued there will naturally be great activity in political circles. Knowing that the elections could not longer be deferred, much speculation has been rife as to future developments, but the latest movement of Hon. H. H. Stevens in forming a new party has somewhat disturbed the order of these predictions. With four political groups in the running there is assurance of considerable action.

In Argenteuil there are signs of keen rivalry, as several budding young politicians are aspiring to Federal honors. It is generally known that Rt. Hon. Sir George H. Perley feels he has served the County for a goodly number of years and is anxious to be relieved of the duties which he has so faithfully and honorably filled. Just whether he will yield to pressure and again contest the seat, is not yet known. To one who has attained great distinction and brought such honors to the County, it would have been a fitting closure to his representation in parliament that the people of Argenteuil should have granted him an acclamation in recognition of the services he has rendered, not alone to the County but to the Dominion as a whole.

"When women's dresses are of such a style that they take only four yards instead of six, a third of the textile workers are thrown out of their jobs."

CLARK—MacKENZIE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. MacKenzie of Staynerville, Que., was the scene of a pretty event on Saturday, July 6th., when their daughter, Myrtle Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. John Douglas Clark, son of Mr. George Clark of Mabel, Que. The Rev. H. Cousens officiated. The ceremony took place on the lawn under an arch of evergreens, roses, and peonies. Mr. Robert Creswell, of Carleton Place, Ont., played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white organza with tulle veil arranged in fan effect held with a wreath of orange-blossoms. She carried a bouquet of roses, baby's breath, and maiden-hair fern. Miss Catherine Murdoch, cousin of the groom, attended the bride, wearing a gown of

Vankleek Hill to Have Landing Field

At Vankleek Hill and at Pontiac, near Quyon, the government plans to establish two additional emergency landing fields in connection with the trans-Canada airway. Hon. Grote Stirling, minister of national defence, informed the House of Commons recently.

Work will start this winter on the field at Pontiac, much of which is now wooded, as the first emergency field west of Ottawa.

Present emergency fields are located at Killaloe, Madawaska, Lake of Two Rivers and Scotia Junction in the Ottawa Valley.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY DIRECTORS PRESENTED WITH GOOD REPORT

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Argenteuil Agricultural Society was held in the Town Hall on Monday afternoon when, owing to absence of President W. H. Ayers, the chair was occupied by Vice-President J. H. Black.

Following the reading of the minutes Mr. A. Bothwell, secretary-manager, presented a lengthy report in which it was shown that the Society had come through with a small balance to the good. There had been a finer and larger exhibit of stock, it was shown, and a profitable session was spent in discussing ways and means for added improvements for next year's Exhibition. On the whole the directors were much pleased and grateful to all who had contributed to the success of the recent Fair.

SATURDAY NIGHT BAND CONCERTS RESUMED

The Saturday night band concerts, in Lachute Memorial Park, have re-commenced for the summer and are attracting interested listeners to enjoy this feature. Programs, comprising numbers by the best known composers, are presented by the town's brass band under the leadership of Mr. A. Guenette, and sponsored by the Molson's Brewery.

The performance brings to notice the increasing efficiency of the band, who from very elementary beginnings have attained a marked degree of attainment. Much credit is due to Mr. Guenette and his personnel, who have given unstinted time and practice to improve their talents.

50 YEARS AGO COUNCILLORS DRAFTED $10,000 BY-LAW TO PURCHASE FIRE ENGINE... AND PAY FOR PROCURING ACT OF INCORPORATION

Watchman files of 1885 throw light on Lachute's early strides to assume the semblance of a progressive village, incorporated and equipped with the appurtenances of a solid community. In the minutes of the Council (the latter comprising Thos. Barron, Esq., Mayor, and Councillors R. G. Melke, James Fish, Elias Milner, Thos. McQuat, Thos. Christie, M.D., P. Roderigue, Phineas Lane, F. X. Bertrand and Thos. Bedard) it is learned that a $10,000 loan. By-law was duly passed and presented for public ballot. Notice was posted in pen and ink, and there was a hitch in the arrangements, insufficient time being allowed according to the legal requirements.

Much discussion appears to have followed among the citi-

URGES EFFORT TOWARD FORMATION OF PUBLIC LIBRARY IN LACHUTE

(CORRESPONDENCE)
Carleton Place, Ont.

Editor:
I am hoping to see, before long, a more definite move in Lachute towards establishment of a public library. No doubt the response will be slow. This town, of less population, has a splendid public library and reading-room in the town hall; and the enterprising committee has recently made a plan whereby late editions—in limited number—are made available to readers who wish to pay three cents a day while reading a book. The revenue, in this way, pays for the books, and as they are paid for they are placed in the free circulation list. I, personally, feel a keen interest in Lachute's library-to-be.

Yours very truly,
(Miss) Mary A. Catton.

Role of Traffic Officers Not to Impose Fines, says Hon. J. E. Perrault

The annual convention of traffic officers of the Province of Quebec was held in Quebec city during the month of June.

Hon. J. E. Perrault, Minister of Highways and Mines, and president of the Provincial Tourist Council, under whose jurisdiction traffic officers come, informed them during a brief address that their role consisted of ensuring safety to traffic, educating the travelling public and of helping tourists visiting the Province.

"Your role," Hon. Mr. Perrault stated, "does not consist of imposing fines. Bear in mind the fact that the Government did not set you patrolling roads in order to increase its revenues. You are the friends and protectors of the public. Have traffic laws respected, but be courteous in having them respected. Hundreds of thousands of visitors come to Quebec each year from the United States and our sister Provinces; render them as much help as is possible; make them feel that they are at home on our highways and see that they return home with good impressions of the land which they have just visited."

"You have already put these suggestions into practice in the past," concluded Hon. Mr. Perrault, "and I have nothing but praise and congratulations to offer you. I wish, however, to recall the role that is yours in order that, during a new tourist season which promises to be more active and more prosperous than ever, you may have fresh in mind the orders you are intended to follow."

THIRTY FEET TRIMMED FROM NIAGARA FALLS

Niagara Falls, Ont.—Trimmed off in sections as neatly as if it had been sliced by a huge knife, the traditional vantage point of generations of honeymooners, Table Rock, has now disappeared. The last sector of overhanging limestone cliff was blasted into the gorge on Thursday last.

The demonstration, witnessed by thousands of spectators, emphasized the fact that the technique of dynamiting now approximates an exact science. Engineers of the Victoria Parks Commission and Arthur Michie of Queenston Quarries supervised the removal of this historic landmark. In a series of preliminary blasts, the shale on the surface was swept off as cleanly as if the Niagara crags were being polished up for the main event.

Technicians then charted in advance, the size, direction and spacing of the blast holes. For each operation, twenty-two holes, each two feet apart and 14 feet deep were drilled. Steel containers of dynamite and black powder were then fired simultaneously from a battery. The blasts sheared the face off the cliff in great slices blowing the rock in neat piles in the gorge below. The operations were carried out without the slightest danger to the mobs who milled about the scene and watched from every available sightseeing point.

The actual blasting took altogether only a few minutes and the overhang, which had become dangerous to spectators and sightseers, was completely removed. The line of the cliffs surrounding the gorge has been moved back thirty feet and the new face of the cliff is a perpendicular wall of solid rock to the bottom of the gorge 200 feet below.

Although, due to the late season, haying is only now getting under way, more than 850 farmers and their friends took time off on Saturday last to attend the first annual field day and picnic of the Quebec Branch of the Holstein Friesian Association. Hospitality in its pleasantest form was extended by T. B. Macaulay, owner of Mount Victoria Farm at Hudson Heights, Que., to those attending, for besides throwing open his lovely estate overlooking the Lake of Two Mountains and the distant Laurentian hills, he provided refreshments for the picnickers, and climaxed his generosity by donating one of his well-bred bull calves to the lucky winner of the draw.

Two strong classes of Holstein females were brought out for the judging contest in the morning, the placing and reasons for these being given by Prof. A. R. Ness of Macdonald College, Que., and Prof. O. Toupin, of Oka Agricultural Institute. These two experts, with animals from the Mount Victoria herd and the help of volunteer showmen, gave a very helpful demonstration on the art of cattle showmanship. Prof. Ness in English and Prof. Toupin in French. R. P. Charbonneau, secretary of the branch, had charge of the program.

During the luncheon interval ice cream and cold milk were served from a marquee erected among the many shade trees, and the visitors wandered at will among the flower beds and well-kept rock gardens, catching glimpses of some of the herd of elk which have now come to feel at home on the precipitous slopes, which drop from the plateau where the farm is situated to the level of the Lake.

After lunch Mr. Macaulay, looking remarkably fit in spite of his close-to-eighty years, welcomed the gathering with a speech which was most heartening. He told of how he first came to start breeding Holsteins, mentioning that he had previously owned two other breeds. His reason for turning to black and whites were quite practical. He wanted plenty of milk and plenty of fat. When he started, Holsteins only averaged 3.39 per cent butter-fat. He made up his mind that he would try to improve that average and set about getting a herd of cows which would average 4 per cent. It took him several years and some large sums of money to gather together the foundation animals of the herd his guests had seen today, but he did not grudge either, for he felt that his achievements in the line of breeding four per cent animals had justified it. Mr. Macaulay believes that in the blood of old Johanna Rag Apple Pabst, his $15,000 former herd sire, he has now founded a strain of Holsteins whose females breed true for heavy milk production and an average test of four per-cent butter fat, while the males are prepotent to pass on similar qualities. In fact he feels that his young stock today are better than the old bull, genetically speaking.

FLOWERS THAT CHILDREN LOVE

Bobbing, nodding, quivering,
Hearts a golden glow,
Wind-blown daisies
Sway to and fro—
Pearly-white their petals,
Slender-green their stem,
Dancing jigs and minuets,
Summer is crowned with them.
Bobbing, curtseying, wooing,
Every wind that sighs,
Dance little golden hearts,
'Neath the summer skies.

WHEN THE MOON WAS FULL

Betty became so excited that she jumped to her feet when she heard Croaker's voice, almost upsetting the Lemon Lily Coach in her excitement.

"Oh!" exclaimed Queen Bluebell in a startled voice, "you are rather sudden aren't you? It must be your nature."

Betty knew that it was her nature and thought of the many times she had wakened the baby with her sudden rushes into the house and the banging down of her school books on the table.

Thinking of the baby made her lonely. All at once home seemed so far away. She peeped over the side of the coach very carefully so that she would not upset it again, in hope of seeing something familiar, but found that she was looking into space—there was nothing beneath them but golden light. She was getting quite light-headed staring at it, when the coach stopped, so suddenly that she bumped her nose against one of the sharp points. "Other people are just as sudden as I!" she whispered to herself as she rubbed her nose vigorously.

"Yes," whispered her fairy companion, "Fleet Wings has gone so fast that he went dashing against the gate, which caused him to come flopping back amongst the others; that is why we stopped so suddenly, but here come the Queen's bearers to lift her from the coach."

The bump had made Betty not only forget her moment of homesickness but it had chased the dizzy feeling away and she felt quite ready for any adventure that might come to her. She was quite equal to proving to anyone that Queen Bluebell was not at fault. Just let her get at that old Croaker! Betty clenched her fists and prepared to do battle with him. "I am so much bigger than he is that he will surely run at the sight of me." She had forgotten the shrinking drops and the bath which had been given her to remove all traces of the world from which she had come and make her so like one of the other fairies that she could enter the court of the Moon Fairies without any trouble or questions being asked.

As the Queen's bearers carried the royal chair through the open gateway, the porters looked at her uncrowned head, and shook their own very sadly.

Croaker's tale must be true. They were sorry. They all loved Queen Bluebell and wondered just how she had come to be so careless.

Betty understood their thoughts, though they had not spoken them. "She didn't! She hasn't!" she began in an indignant voice, when the little fairy beside her suddenly clapped her hand over Betty's mouth and stopped her impetuous speech.

"Hush!" she whispered, "no one but tattle-tales tell things in the Court of the Moon Fairies until they are asked to speak."

Betty's strange, shrill little voice ringing out told all the other fairies that there was a stranger in their midst. They looked. Who was she? Where did she come from, and what band of fairies did she belong to? Again Betty seemed to read their thoughts and wanted to laugh. All that prevented her from laughing was a tiny whisper from her companion, "Look in the darkest corner."

Betty almost dislocated her neck turning so quickly from one corner to another to find the darkest corner. Everywhere it seemed so light. At last she found the darkest corner. An immense stuffed black cat was set upon a post, and in the shadow of it stood a wicked-looking fairy with a large sneering mouth. He was glaring at Betty as though he would like to harm her in some way but did not quite know how to go about it.

Betty shivered and caught hold of her fairy friend in sudden alarm. "Who is that terrible looking creature?" she asked. "It is Croaker, the Mischief-Maker," the little fairy whispered back. "He is wondering who you are. He ought to know you, as he must have seen you quite often. Ah! he is remembering. See how his eyes are changing, first to fear then to intense rage. He knows you have come to defend Queen Bluebell, I am quite sure. We shall have to keep an eye on him as he is not to be trusted, and he often moves so quickly that he has made great trouble before he can be stopped. He is well named."

Betty suddenly realized that she was not as big as she used to be, and was quite afraid of Croaker, whose glaring eyes fascinated her so much that she could not stop looking at him.

"Don't look at him, Child," the little fairy whispered. "don't look at him. He has not so much power over one who looks at him with contempt then looks away quickly. He knows that he is a wrong-doer, and he feels uncomfortable when he feels that other folk know he is contemptible. Look at that stuffed cat instead, and try to guess where it came from; that will help you to get your mind off Croaker."

Slowly but surely Betty got control of her eyes and looked at the black cat, trying to puzzle out just where she had seen it before. It was so very familiar looking.

"It looks like the Hallowe'en Witch's cat," she whispered at last, "but it could not be that one, and in the court of the Moon Fairies."

"You've guessed right!" chuckled the little fairy. "I am so glad; it proves that you are smart, and anyone so smart as you will surely be able to help Queen Bluebell."

"But however does the cat come to be here, and stuffed too?" Betty asked.

"The Hallowe'en Witch was so high and mighty that she thought herself much better than the Moon Fairies, and used to fly around and around the Moon on nights when it was full and make all sorts of horrid black shadows, in an attempt to spoil her beautiful mellow light. The Moon warned her that something terrible would happen if she did not stop doing that, but she just laughed in the Moon's face and made horrid faces. Just two months ago she came back again and flew about like an aeroplane, dipping and diving. The Moon Fairies were so angry that they flew out in a body and seized her cat as she was making a downward flop, and dragged it in here. It was so terrified that it died of fright, so we stuffed it with midnight air and set it up on a post. The old Witch does not know where it is yet—but I expect Croaker will tell her now that he has seen it tonight. She will have to get another cat before she can fly around again. She is quite helpless without her cat. Midnight, as she called him, was her Mascot."

Lovingly, Aunt Jean.

INDIANS MAKE GIFT OF TOTEM POLES TO PARK

Among the varied cargoes in recent weeks of S. S. "Prince John", which makes the fortnightly run through the Queen Charlotte Islands for the Canadian National Steamships, have been totem poles from the old Indian villages of Graham Island. Free gifts from the natives, the totems will adorn Prince Rupert's Acropolis Hill Park for the delight of tourists en route to Alaska and making the Triangle Tour. Specimens of the splendid handicraft of the proud and once mighty Haida Indians are becoming increasingly rare and the northern city is taking this step to preserve the totems for future generations. The only stipulation that went with the gifts was they should bear an engraved plate inscribed with the name of the donor.

The Place of Meeting

One might surmise that the first white men to reach the broad waters of Lake Ontario would have done so where they empty into the St. Lawrence, or possibly found their way from the English settlements to the southern shore. But, surprisingly, they emerged from the unknown forests to the north. In 1615 Champlain had come to the Huron country around Lake

Simcoe by way of the Ottawa River and Georgian Bay. Now he set out with a war party against the Iroquois, reaching Ontario by the Trent River system. But Etienne Brulé had been sent ahead to gather allies, and travelled by a shorter route. Thus it was that the youth who had been the first Frenchman to winter with the Indians is generally credited also with being the first to see Lake Ontario. And the spot was near the remote western end, at the little river Humber.

This was the recognized Indian meeting place, and the Humber became a link in one of the chief routes of trade and exploration to the far west. Finally the French determined to build a fort to consolidate their influence in the region and intercept the Indians as they descended the Humber and neighboring small rivers on their journeys from the Simcoe and upper lakes country to the English post Oswego. It seems that one Douville built a post at Toronto, "the place of meeting," in 1720. Thirty years later a permanent fort was established under instructions from Governor La Jonquière. In May, 1750, the Chevalier de Portneuf with five soldiers erected a stockade and small house, and stayed until July. Later, workmen built a proper fort and the following year Portneuf returned as commandant.

Thus Toronto, now the English-speaking metropolis of Ontario owes its beginnings to French Canada. The little outpost flourished for some years, named officially after Rouillé, minister of colonies. When the British threatened on the Niagara frontier in 1759 it was abandoned. The site, marked by a monument, is within the exhibition grounds.

Land, Industry and Taxation

THE PRESENT BASIS OF TAX RATING

(CORRESPONDENCE)

I ask the mayor of my township, and I have asked the reeve of the County of Argenteuil on different occasions, what is the basis of the tax rating in our county, and how is it applied? The reply has always been "By the valuation." Again I ask, on what is the basis of valuation fixed? And the reply comes, "It is fixed by the valuers regularly appointed by the township council." I ask then, "What scale do you give these valuers to work upon?" and I find myself back again at where I started, and no wiser than before I commenced, for not one of these men in authority knows more about it than I know myself. If it is the same in other townships of the county, and in other counties of the Province, then our valuating system is the greatest rule-of-thumb scrape imaginable, for I can find no table to guide me in arrival of a just conclusion of values applied anywhere. In some particulars I sympathize with the valuers, for they are appointed and turned loose on the public without any preparation whatever; they are told to use their own judgment without scale to guide them except the former old valuation roll, that may be right or may be wrong, for it was compiled in the very same way. On the other hand valuers appointed in Chatham have proved themselves the greatest lot of prospectors imaginable; as example I will cite one of my own cases.

An acre and a half of land on which a building has stood to my personal knowledge for over sixty years, I purchase for less than $500. To my knowledge said land and building has not paid its insurance during the 60 years, let alone its upkeep, and it has passed through about a half a dozen hands during the good and bad times. On enquiry I find it valued at $1200. When the valuers come around I state the case to them, and find that they have reduced the valuation to $1000. "But," I say, "that property was purchased last month for less than half that figure, and for the last sixty years it has not paid for insurance, upkeep and taxes; the owners have not taken in the half of it." The reply I get from the valuers is this: "Oh, you are fortunate to get it for $500; you will make money out of it... you can do this or that with it and, oh, you can make piles of money!" Mark this—they say I can do this or that and make piles of money out of it, but they forget that the last owners have done this and that and made nothing out of it; as to making the price of its insurance, upkeep and taxes it has been a total failure, yet these prospecting valuers think I can work some miracle and immediately become possessed of a profitable concern. In other words they tax me for a going concern of their own imagination—a business I have not yet established nor has anyone established during the last sixty years. This is but one of the cases that I can cite on properties where valuations are far above the actual cash paid for properties.

That there is a break-down in our present local system of valuation, it takes but on eye to discern, and the root of the matter is, I think, the inclusion in

Friday, July 8, 1910.

Mr. P. Chabot spent the early part of this week in Maniwaki and Ottawa.

Mr. G. F. Calder has removed his family to his summer home at 16 Island Lake.

The 11th. Battalion returned home Saturday from a most enjoyable encampment at Three Rivers.

Mr. E. H. Wilson with a party of friends returned on Monday from a very enjoyable trip in his launch, "The Arrow", to Beauharnois.

The plant of the Calumet Mining & Milling Co. in liquidation has been sold to Hon. J. K. Ward of Montreal for $11,000.

Mr. W. S. McBride has just built a motor boat fitted with a 3½ Fairbanks-Morse, which is now owned by Mrs. Holland at "Ivan Bower."

Celebration of St. Jean Baptiste on Dominion Day proved a great success. There were 12 allegorical carriages in the procession. The first represented Dollard with his palisade fort and Indian braves at the foot of the Long Sault Rapids (an effort is being made to erect a suitable monument to recognize this heroic deed). Then followed displays of the Shuttle Co., O. B. Lafleur, the Knitting Co.,

one basis of assessment of two values which are of a totally different origin and relation to taxation, viz.: land value and improvement value (i.e. value due to labor). Under the social conditions which prevailed when the present system was established, this cardinal mistake did not perhaps matter so much. But the evil results have developed in later times with increasing rapidity, owing to the extensions of manufacture and commerce and the increase and displacement of population, the effects of which are seen in the enormous growth of land values very irregularly distributed.

DO THEY MEAN "BUSINESS"?

The Watchman cannot help expressing what is perhaps a general surprise upon the appearance of a new party contesting for federal power.

Under leadership of Hon. H. H. Stevens, ex-Minister of Trade and Commerce, the body is instigated by business men and inspired by principles of reform. It may be hoped that strict business may be the guiding highlight of this organization, overshadowing the reform motive except as business principles in government demand change. A body holding power along these lines might afford the nearest approach to National Government—an ideal which party dogmas will not permit in Canada at this stage.

There are obvious maladjustments in our national administration, most particularly in our management of railways, which are as costly in the long run as the corporate business abuses which Hon. Mr. Stevens has attacked. Even on the state, the provinces and the municipalities, this unbusinesslike conduct of administration casts a heavy burden. Even on the man in the street, jobless because industries are idle—industries overtaxed to meet public deficits. If ever there was need of a business-man administration, it is now; and whatever the outcome, developments at Ottawa prove that this realization is dawning at last.

DIG AND THINK

Soon Canadians from Victoria to Halifax will be faced with the problem of marking their ballots in the coming Federal election. The question naturally arises, "For whom shall I vote?"

There is just one fair answer to that question, as long as we adhere to the principles of democracy in Canada. That answer means work. Dig for the facts. Think.

Opinions flicker about everywhere in abundance, but facts are hard to track down. Unfortunately, they are easier to find than facts and truth. Rumours, too, and selfishly and maliciously inspired untruths are all too plentiful at election time.

Digging for facts, and getting them, means hard work. Serious thinking is even harder work. Figures are dry in themselves, but not when they tell the story of a nation of human beings, made up of warm flesh and blood, having been saved from chaos or starvation!

Economic difficulties such as Canada and all the world face today will never be solved by outbursts of emotion or the baby-kissing tactics of old. Nor will the barber shop gossip and merely "votin' agin the Government" provide the right answer. Never before perhaps has there been better cause to plead for commonsense and cool unprejudiced contemplation by the voter than exists today.

Intelligent voting means intelligent representatives in Parliament where the laws of the land are made—or not made. Intelligent representatives in Parliament means intelligent governing of the nation and its business.

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs
Specially written for The Watchman
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, July 9.—The closing days of the session were conducted in a sweltering heat which provided a sharp contrast with the wild blizzard and the sub-zero temperatures which marked the opening nearly six months earlier. There was in the House of Commons the last two or three days an air of historic finality. It was the end of an era. Before parliament meets again, a general election will be held.

Many of the members were looking upon the Green Chamber, in their official capacity, for the last time. When the House resumes, no matter what the election results may be, it will be in a different atmosphere; and the personnel will have changed extensively. Perhaps no more than 125 of the 240 members will return (there being five vacancies already.)

Two matters of considerable concern to Canadian agriculture occupied a prominent place in the discussions of the final week. The first was the wheat board, to which reference has been made several times; the other was the cheese bonus.

A VERY DIFFERENT BILL

The wheat board bill came out of committee a vastly different enactment, in effect at last, if not in wording, from the one which went in. The original bill proposed a government monopoly for the handling of grain; it appeared to involve the destruction of the private grain trade, although there was some difference of opinion about this point. Perhaps it would be most accurate to say that it would have ended the Winnipeg Grain exchange, but that the private elevator and export houses would have survived. In any event the 'open market' would have gone.

The new bill retained the compulsory features only in a suspended form. They were left in as features which could be invoked upon emergency by order-in-council, but which would not be otherwise used. It features also the fixed or minimum price; and on the whole the new scheme is modelled after that used in the Argentine, whether wittingly or not.

The government, instead of providing a wheat handling and wheat buying monopoly, comes into the picture as a guarantor of a fixed minimum price, in the event the wheat farmer is not able to do better for himself elsewhere. In theory at least the Winnipeg pit and the private grain trade is undisturbed. The proposal is that the existing trade carry on as they used to do, with the government standing in the background with its fixed minimum price, ready to come to the rescue if the open market price collapses below a figure which the farmer might have reason to regard as a minimum guarantee for his product.

Those who have given the proposal much study assert that the price fixed as the minimum constitutes the crux of the situation. If it is set a little below the current market price, the private trade will handle the great bulk of the wheat and in time there will be opportunity, it is supposed the McFarland stocks, amounting now to 220 million bushels, to be disposed of. But if the 'minimum' or fixed price is set too high, and the open market price falls below it, then obviously the machine will not function. The government board will have to buy all the wheat; and the private grain trade, unable to quote a price competing with the government board, will cease to operate until such time as the open market price again rises above the government quotation. Under these circumstances, instead of disposing of existing stocks, the board might very soon find itself with 400 million bushels on hand, instead of the present 220 million.

THE CHEESE BONUS

The cheese bonus is a rather intricate and ingenious measure, about which there will be the most contradictory opinions. The cheese producer, who has been accepting 60 to 80 cents per hundred pounds for his milk, will be inclined to welcome it with enthusiasm, one supposes. Whether in the large national sense it is a step in the right direction will be much doubted in many quarters.

In effect, what the government proposes to do is to pay, beginning now, 1 1/4 cents, more if necessary, to those farmers delivering milk to cheese factories—the 1 1/4 cents being on each pound of cheese produced.

RECENT WEDDING AT BROWNSBURG

STEELE - BRUNELLE

The marriage of Miss Irene Brunelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brunelle, to Mr. Hector Steele took place recently at St. Joseph's Church Brownsburg, the Rev. Father Carron officiating.

At the service, which was solemnized at eight o'clock, the bride, given in marriage by her father, was dressed in pale pink organdy with cape collar, small hat and white shoes, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and white lilies. Miss Gertrude Bertrand, who acted as bridesmaid, was dressed in pink crepe with white felt hat and white shoes. Mr. Lucien St. Onge acted as best man.

Mrs. Brunelle, the bride's mother, wore a blue crepe dress with white hat and shoes, while the groom's mother wore blue and grey crepe, with a large black hat.

During the service anthems and a solo were rendered by members of the choir.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to immediate relatives and friends, at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Steele will reside in Brownsburg.

Farthing, Lord Bishop of Montreal, visited St. Simeon's Church last evening, when he administered the rite of confirmation to a class of six candidates, who were presented by the Rector, Rev. W. He then urged the candidates to keep close to God in prayer, to be regular in Bible reading and Church attendance, and to partake frequently of the Holy Communion.

WORK DEVELOPS HUNGER

There seem to be two classes of families—one class cannot provide food for their children and the other cannot get their children to eat the food they do provide. The average child of the present generation has become difficult to feed. They lack the hunger for wholesome food that is developed by work. They are not altogether to blame because there seems to be nothing to take the place of the chores of earlier days. Country air develops good appetites and too many have city appetites. We have been watching an appetite develop, with considerable amusement. A young lad, who has never been what might be termed a hearty eater and who is inclined to be picky about his food, has been working on a farm, from dawn until dark—literally. He says he eats three meals, twice a day and is always hungry. When he arrives home he eats anything and everything he can lay his hands on or perhaps I should say, get his teeth into. On the farm, he eats things with enjoyment that he never would touch before or if he did eat them, ate under protest. His appetite is a joy to behold. I wish all the boys with meagre appetites could spend a summer working on a farm.

NO MORE CHEAP BAKING POWDER

Usually you get what you pay for. If you want to get good products you must expect to pay a reasonable price. This has been brought home to me once again. A friend whose opinion I value recommended a baking powder which sells for about half the price of the brand that I have been using for years. Knowing her to be a good buyer I thought I would follow her recommendation but I did exercise some discretion and only bought a small can. I got what I paid for. My cakes were light enough—almost too light as they had no substance but broke at a touch. They rose unevenly and were uneven in texture as they had holes instead of being fine grained all the way through. Too late I remembered that my friend had remarked that she did not know what was the matter with her cakes these days as they tasted all right but they all fell to pieces. No more cheap baking powder will I buy.

PRESSING SHEERS

This year there are so many dresses and suits made of sheer materials and they seem to require an undue amount of pressing. Too much moisture makes them shrink unevenly and sometimes they will show the mark of the pressing iron. This can be avoided by wringing out the pressing cloth in water and then ironing it until most of the moisture is removed. Place this almost dry cloth over your sheer material and press as usual. You will find that it presses very easily.

CRACKERS

The biscuit manufacturers are turning out a variety of tempting crackers these days and the hot weather is a good time to try them out. Serve crisp salted or cheese crackers with a tomato juice or with a salad and it will tempt the flagging appetite. There are so many good kinds being made that it is a good plan to try the different varieties instead of sticking to the same kind. The English are the leaders in biscuit manufacturing but our own Canadian firms are running them a close second.

A TUB FOR TOTS

If you have not tried it you will be surprised to find how much fun small children can have with a tub of water in the back yard. They cannot all go to the beach for the summer but they can have a tub of water. Put them in bathing suits or sun suits so they will have full benefit of the sun because it shines at home as well as at the lake. Provide them with small boats, (imagination will turn any kind of stick that will float into a boat), and if they do not have to worry about keeping clean or dry they will have a wonderful time and amuse themselves for hours.

EAT FRESH VEGETABLES!

Now that the season of fresh home grown vegetables is here, it is a wise policy and a healthy one to make constant use of them in the family menu. Canned goods are all very well when the fresh ones cannot be secured except at prohibitive prices; but there can be no doubt that freshly grown vegetables are superior, both in flavor and as a matter of economical buying, to the canned goods.

Those who are fortunate enough to have their own gardens will recognize the difference in quality of flavor between the two classes. There is little comparison, for instance, between freshly picked corn on the cob, at just the right stage of ripeness, and the same vegetable as taken from a can. So while, of course, the surplus product must somehow be conserved to prevent waste, a good rule to follow is to "Eat what we can, and can what we can't."

Dolls Objects of Fear;

Used in Strange Rites

Dolls, which are today the best-loved toys of little girls, were once objects of fear or hate. They figured in strange rites of black magic and were specially cherished by women. They were used to terrify and cast spells upon rivals, enemies, or unfortunate husbands. After certain "magical" ceremonies, says an exchange, it was thought that whatever was then done to the dolls would be felt by the man or woman it resembled. Sometimes the doll was placed before a fire and allowed slowly to melt. As it melted the bewitched person was supposed to die of fear.

According to a distinguished German scholar, during the later Stone age every family needed these dolls to keep off evil, and manufacturing them became an industry. During excavation work the archeologists have found doll-sized idols made from all sorts of materials, from stone to terra-cotta, tin and bronze. Some were cut out of sheet-tin and look much like modern tin soldiers.

In early Asia and Egypt the tombs of important people were filled with quite a population of doll figures. These acted as substitutes for the usual wholesale human sacrifices. In other places it was the custom for a bride to sacrifice her dolls to the goddess Diana just before the wedding.

AUTO TOUR THROUGH SAGUENAY AND LAKE ST. JOHN REGION

Through the efforts of the Saguenay and Lake St. John Regional Tourist Bureau, an agreement has been reached with the Canada Steamship Lines and the Canadian National Railways which will facilitate a visit through this region by automobile for tourists proceeding to the Saguenay and Lake Saint John by steamship and railway.

In future, there will be a taxi service available for travellers arriving by steamer. Tourists will be able to board taxis at the Bagotville wharf in the morning, before the steamer leaves, and visit Bagotville, Port Alfred, Grande Baie, Chicoutimi, Arvida, Jonquire, Kénogami and reach Lake St. John at Saint Bruno. The journey around the lake will conclude at about nine o'clock in the evening, in time for the arrival of the vessel on which they will spend the night. This circular trip covers a distance of some 240 miles.

Those travelling by rail may leave the train at Chambord, Hébertville or Chicoutimi. Itineraries are so arranged as to correspond with day and night trains.

A flat rate has been set for this journey, including transportation by taxi, meals, etc. Transportation companies will offer tickets for this excursion at the same time as their own tickets, so that travellers will know before reaching the region exactly how much it will cost them to visit it.

Ticket-holders are assured of making the journey, no matter how small may be their number, at the fixed rate, while, in addition, they will be insured against all accidents for the duration of the journey.

A visit throughout the region by auto will complete a tour to the pleasure of the steamer trip, which enables one to admire the grandiose beauty of the Saguenay River, there is the thrill of driving through a young country where vast industries may be encountered, and where agriculture occupies a dominant position.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Sunday, July 14th., is "Sacrament."

The Golden Text is:—"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." I Corinthians 10:31

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him. . . . And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves: . . . And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." (Luke 22:14, 17, 19, 20).

"His followers, sorrowful and silent, anticipating the hour of their Master's betrayal, partook of the heavenly manna, which of old had fed in the wilderness the persecuted followers of Truth. Their bread indeed came down from heaven. It was the great truth of spiritual being, healing the sick and casting out error. Their Master had explained it all before, and now this bread was feeding and sustaining them. They had borne this bread from house to house, breaking (explaining) it to others, and now it comforted themselves."

SUTTON'S AMBASSADORS CLAIM DISTINCTION

The "Canadian Ambassadors" under the management of Myron Sutton have achieved a unique record in the musical sphere.

This orchestra, organized a little over three years ago in Niagara Falls, Ont., has had a phenomenal career. Many difficulties arose in organizing the group, due to scarcity of first class colored musicians in the Dominion, but with patience and careful adjustment the aggregation was welded into a team can justly claim to be Canada's Greatest Colored Dance Orchestra.

They have the distinction of being the only colored orchestra to appear before His Excellency.

The group have played in the leading clubs in Ontario and Quebec. Miss Evelyn Campbell, direct from New York, night clubs who is featured with the Ambassadors, will chase away the blues with her southern songs and dance specialties. See announcement of local engagement at the Black & White.

THE CANADA YEAR BOOK, 1934 - 35

In over 1,250 pages, this volume deals with every phase of the national life. The statistical summary of the progress of Canada included in the introductory matter gives a picture in figures of the remarkable progress which the country has made since the first census of the Dominion was taken in 1871, sixty-four years ago.

Attention may be called to some of the special features of the present volume, including Standard Time and Time Zones in Canada, of special interest to those who travel either in the flesh or by radio; a discussion of the Representation Act of 1933 and populations as in 1931 of the new electoral districts which will return representatives to Parliament. In presentation of results of the Census of 1931 Religions are cross-analysed by racial origin for the first time, and several new classifications are added to the section dealing with Birthplaces. Chapters are devoted to Mines and Minerals, together with discussion of the new discoveries of economic geology; to External Trade, Labour and Wages, including the industrial distribution of the gainfully occupied population. In the Public Finance

Chapter appears, for the first time, a comparative analysis of provincial revenues, expenditures, assets and liabilities on the basis agreed upon at the Dominion-Provincial Conference of 1933; material regarding national income is also included. Currency and Banking includes a description of the new Bank of Canada, and Miscellaneous Administration gives a study of liquor control, liquor sales and revenues arising therefrom, and the concluding chapter lists the honours and awards made by His Majesty the King to Canadian subjects to June 1935.

The volume is illustrated by many maps and diagrams and the latest available data are everywhere included.

Owing to the urgent need for economy in the distribution of Government publications, it has become necessary to make a charge to all individuals receiving the Canada Year Book. Persons requiring the Year Book may obtain it from the King's Printer, Ottawa, as long as the supply lasts, at the price of $1.50, which covers merely the cost of paper, printing and binding. By a special concession, ministers of religion, bonafide students and school teachers may obtain copies at the nominal price of 50c. each.

HOLSTEIN BREEDERS
AT HUDSON HTS.

for all line-bred to him, and contain in their make-up several four percent blood lines.

In one of the best speeches of the day, Geo. P. Clemens, genial young secretary of the Holstein Friesian Association of Canada, congratulated Mr. Macaulay on his farm and on his herd. He also paid tribute to the extreme care with which he had chosen the foundation animals of his first herd of cows, of the lengthy charts and pedigrees which Head Office at Grantford had worked out for him at the time. Mr. Clemens explained the herd survey work which was being carried out in Ontario and which was being inaugurated in Quebec this year, pointing out that in this way it was hoped to have complete data on needs and problems of all Holstein breeders in the province. He touched briefly on the history of the black and whites in Canada, mentioning that although they were the latest of the present breeds to come to Canada they now outnumbered all other dairy breeds put together. He claimed that latest census figures show that 54 percent of the pure bred dairy cattle in Canada are Holsteins, 25 per cent Ayrshires, 16 percent Jerseys, and all other pure breeds make up the remaining 5 percent. It was his belief that the present profitable export of their animals to the United States would continue for at least two years.

Stating that there were still far too many scrub pure breeds being milked, he urged that every breeder should set himself the task of breeding only from the top end of his herd and constantly try to weed out the unprofitable and off-type animals at the bottom. The time was not far away Mr. Clemens felt when registration certificates would also be a guarantee of quality and type. It is not expensive to test all the animals in the herd and thus find out just what the cows are doing.

Speaking in French, Rev. Father Godin, director of the Seminaire St. Therese and manager of a fine Holstein herd and demonstration farm, adapted a well-known Biblical text to make a very effective speech. After thanking Mr. Macaulay for his broad hospitality and for what he had done for the Holstein breed in Canada, Father Godin said that Holstein breeders, like other farmers needed to practice in their daily life and community activities faith, hope, and charity. One should have faith in their calling, faith in their work, faith in their breed. "It is the very finest kind of charity which Mr. Macaulay is showing us today," said Father Godin, "and we too can show charity to our neighbor by co-operating with him in community enterprise. Everybody can do something to make his district or his own herd better." He closed with a brief reference to the success which had been his in bringing on the quality and production of the small herd of nine or ten cows at St. Therese.

The results of the Judging Competitions for boys and for girls were as follows:—

Girls—Miss R. Coursal, first, Miss C. Ouillette, Chambly, second; and Miss Helen Wilson, third; among the boys John McKenzie, Lachute, was first; G. Daoust, St. Scholastique, second; and R. Paquette, St. Vincent de Paul, third. In the draw for the two bull calves donated, D. Jolibois, St. Norbert, who came with a party of 23 by bus from Victoriaville and points east, won the Mount Victoria calf, while Madame E. Laviere, Iberville, won the Raymondale calf. Just previous to the program of speeches and sports four animals from the Mount Victoria herd were paraded for inspection and many admiring comments were made on Montvic Rag Apple Bonheur (grand champion cow at last year's Royal, and all-American winner for 1934) and Montvic Chieftan, splendid young herd sire which is now taking the place of the bull.

SUNNY LIVING
starts at the table

How you feel and how you look depend largely on the foods you eat. The balanced menu provides the "bulk" to prevent common constipation—caused by lack of this essential fiber.

Common constipation frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet, in most cases, it can be overcome pleasantly and safely by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a natural food for normal individuals. It furnishes "bulk" in convenient and concentrated form. ALL-BRAN also provides vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this sunny way better than taking patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If relief is not obtained, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

GOVT. PROPOSES $600,000 GRANT LACHUTE-GRENVILLE HIGHWAY

PROVINCE MUST MAKE ADEQUATE OUTLAY
NO OFFICIAL OFFER OR AGREEMENT
YET MADE

In connection with trans-Canada highway construction projects in Quebec, a proposal under which the Dominion Government agrees to pay 50 per cent. of the cost of work totalling approximately $4,000,000, to include the sum of $600,000 on the Lachute - Grenville section, has been forwarded by Minister of Labor W. A. Gordon, to Premier L. A. Taschereau of Quebec, according to announcement this week.

Mr. Gordon said he was prepared to consider an additional programme of work on the Trans-Canada Highway in Quebec and incorporate it in a supplementary agreement, if the Quebec Government would submit proposals without delay. The agreement transmitted, however, includes the section above mentioned, in which this County is immediately interested.

The Quebec Public Works Department, through Ivan Vallee, Deputy Minister, has since issued the following official report in connection with these statements.

"No agreement has so far been entered into with the Federal authorities concerning the trans-Canada highway in the province of Quebec and the Provincial Government has not been officially advised that such an agreement has been considered by the Federal authorities.

"On the contrary, on June 19 last, representation was made to Hon. Mr. Gordon, Federal Minister of Labor, by Hon. Mr. Francoeur, to draw his attention to the fact that the Federal contribution to the project was not only not generous enough but actually insufficient. The trans-Canada highway does not mean the construction of a new road in this province but the widening and straightening of an already existing highway and such an undertaking means relatively high expenditures on account of the acquisition of land and the expropriation involved."

Mr. Francoeur asked Mr. Gordon if the Federal authorities would be ready to pay 50 per cent. of the total cost of the work, including the acquisition of land, expropriations and administration. Hon. Mr. Gordon on June 22 replied that Ottawa was unable to contribute towards the expenses upon such a basis."

It is understood by The Watchman that the original 50-50 offer covered only the expenditure involved for labor on these projects. It was an offer to meet the demands of unemployment relief and did not include outlays for material and expropriation of land.

Premier L. A. Taschereau and Parliamentarians Stop off at Lachute

Lachute was honored on Wednesday afternoon by a brief visit from the Provincial Premier, Hon. L. A. Taschereau, who, accompanied by Hon. Gordon Scott, Hon. Mederic Martin, Hon. Victor Marchand, Hon. J. F. Daniel, Hon. Raoul and Mr. Emile Grothe, were passing through Lachute to spend a couple of days north of this section in the quietude of Lac Grothe.

An impromptu reception was held in the Auditorium at which were gathered members of the Town Council and a number of leading citizens, on behalf of whom Dr. J. H. Mason as Mayor extended a most hearty

SERIOUS AUTO ACCIDENT ON LACHUTE ROAD

TWO VICTIMS REMOVED TO HOSPITAL

In the early hours of Sunday morning two men escaped death with painful injuries in a highway accident while returning from St. Andrews to Lachute. One is Wm. Blakely employee of the Gatteau Power Coy. and resident of this town, and the other is Frank Norris of New York who had been staying at the Hotel Desjardins. Blakely sustained a compound fracture above the knee, while his companion had his tongue almost severed when their new Dodge coupe swung over the turn near Wm. Todd's, just this side of St. Andrews, plunged over a gulley and collided with a tree. The engine and front of the car were bent upward by the impact. Frank Norris bit his tongue with such force that it was almost severed; Blakely had painful bruises and cuts, besides a broken leg.

Dr. J. H. Mason, summoned from Lachute, rendered first aid. Calling an ambulance from Lachute he accompanied the victims to Montreal where they were taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital for treatment.

ST. JEROME RECEIVES BIG QUEBEC GRANT

Grants totalling nearly $100,000 have been awarded to St. Jerome by the Provincial Government. These grants were obtained through Hon. Athanase David, Provincial Secretary and member for the county.

The first grant is a sum of $60,000 to the Soeurs Grise de la Croix for the erection of a hospital in addition to their present home for old people. The second grant of $18,000 is for the widening of Scott Street from the city limits to Le Cordon, a distance of one and a half miles. This is on the Montreal - Ste. Agathe highway. Another grant to the amount of $20,000 is for the reconstruction of Droquin Bridge over the North River. The present structure a suspension bridge.

Messrs. Geo. Y. Deacon and Wm. Jackson were re-elected on the Protestant Board of School Commissioners on Monday of last week. Dr. A. Rodrigue was elected on the Catholic Board to replace Mr. A. Larocque.

12,000 MEN AT WORK ON QUEBEC HIGHWAYS

The Provincial Roads Department, since the beginning of the present season, has awarded contracts totalling approximately $1,650,000 for new projects and has continued work on contracts originally given out last year representing the additional sum of about $500,000, it has been stated by Hon. J. E. Perrault, Minister of Roads and Mines.

It is estimated that in the neighborhood of 12,000 men are finding employment on the various highway projects throughout the province.

SIXTEEN "MARCHERS" SEIZED AT LACHUTE

PART OF ORGANIZED
TREK TO CAPITAL

Part of an elaborate network designed to stop an organized trek of unemployed men to Ottawa, Provincial Police officers have been on the watch for several days here in Lachute, as in other centres on the main routes and railroads leading to Ottawa.

On arrival of the midnight freight from Montreal last Friday night over a score of detectives under Sergeant Haney, with C.P.R. police and traffic officers, were ready at the station to apprehend sixteen freight riders forming a section of the exodus of eastern transients toward Ottawa. Hundreds of unemployed were picked up in other sections around Montreal, bent on the same mission which appears to have been thoroughly organized on a wide scale.

The police searched the freight cars with flashlights and sixteen men were placed under arrest here. Lodged overnight in the town premises and well guarded, the men were taken back to Montreal in a patrol wagon Saturday morning.

BISHOP FARTHING AT GRENVILLE

In the presence of a large congregation, His Lordship the Bishop of Montreal administered the Apostolic Rite of Confirmation to eight candidates in St. Matthew's Church, Grenville, last Thursday. The Bishop also addressed the candidates, speaking of the joy of using their talents in the Lord's service. The Preface, an explanatory introduction, was read by the Rev. W. LeCras, rector of Lachute; the scripture passages by the Rev. C. Stone, of Montebello. The rector, Rev. K. N. Brunton, presented the candidates.

After the Confirmation the Bishop dedicated two memorials. One was a very handsome brass cross for the altar, presented by W. J. Ellis and Mr. A. MacI. Pridham in memory of the latter's father and mother, the late Alexander and Jessie Pridham. Mr. Alexander Pridham was an active and generous supporter of the Church, and was for many years church warden.

The other memorial was a brass tablet for the Endowment Memorial Board, presented by the family, in memory of the late Robert and Margaret Rayson. This is erected because of the bequest left by Mrs. Rayson for the endowment fund. Mr. and Mrs. Rayson were lifelong and faithful members of the church.

The Bishop was a guest at the Rectory during his stay in Grenville.

On Sunday morning last the church was again well filled. All the newly confirmed made their first communion. The rector conducted the service and preached a special sermon based on Acts 2, verse 42.

CALLS FOR FARM HELP UNAVAILING IN ONTARIO

An acute shortage of farm labor is reported in sections of rural Ontario, according to Government employment offices. The demand for experienced farm helpers exceeds the supply, and many branches of the Employment Service of Canada in Ontario have long lists of jobs on file.

The demand for farm labor is reported much keener than last year, due possibly to the bumper crops of hay and promising yields of grain.

LATE JAMES HAY LAID TO REST

RESPECTED MEMBER OF THIS COMMUNITY

The funeral of the late Mr. James Hay, whose death occurred at his home on Brownsburg Road last Sunday, was held on Tuesday and was very largely attended.

Mr. Hay was 68 years old and was the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hay of Chatham. In 1898 he married Mary McPhee, who survives with eleven children—four sons, Stuart, of South Africa, Gordon, Allan and Douglas of Lachute, and seven daughters, Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Mrs. Simon Wilson, Mrs. Raymond Underhill, Nellie, Elizabeth, Janet and Isabel, of Lachute, all of whom except the first named were present at the funeral.

The service was conducted by Rev. H. Cousens, B.A., pastor of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, of which the departed was a devoted member and elder. For many years he had also served the Argenteuil Agricultural Society as a director, and had always been an honored and respected member of the community.

The remains were interred in the Lachute Cemetery, and many floral tributes bore silent testimony to the esteem in which he was held. Mr. Geo. Hay of Lachute is the only surviving brother.

LOCAL BOY'S SUCCESS IN CYCLE RACE

It is noted with pleasure that young Bob Taylor of Brownsburg is making a name for himself in cycling circles in Montreal. Last Sunday fifty competitors entered the long grind from Rosemount to L'Assomption and return. The weather was inauspicious, as rain fell during the greater part of the race. Visibility was poor and altogether conditions were trying. Nevertheless, Bob Taylor mounted his "wheel" with hopes high and ambitions undimmed by success. This was Bob's first effort in good competitive company, and club rivalry was especially keen. At the half-way mark six entrants had fallen by the wayside. Twenty miles to go, Bob forged ahead and set a thrilling pace for his more experienced rivals. Fourteen more entrants gave up the chase before the finish-line hove in sight, leaving 30 competitors in the race. Bob led to the run-home where he was overtaken by R. Kelly of the Sylvester Club. An interesting duel followed, in which Kelly, who is a more experienced rider, flashed across the tape a bare few inches ahead of Bob, carrying the Wolfe Club colours into second place. The time, 2 hrs. 22 mins. was exceptionally good.

Arrangements are under way to promote a race from Montreal to Brownsburg, and in the near future Taylor will have an opportunity of exhibiting his wares to the home folk.

HON. A. DAVID PREFERS DEBT TO UNDERMINING MORALE

PROVL. SECRETARY SPEAKER AT STE. AGATHE

THINKS DOLE IS RUINING FUTURE OF
THOUSANDS OF YOUNG MEN

Speaking at Ste. Agathe in the neighboring constituency of Terrebonne on Sunday, Hon. Athanase David maintained that it is better to run this Province into debt, or even the Dominion of Canada into debt, than to mortgage the future of two generations of workers through imposed idleness linked with the dole.

The minister condemned the dole as "Canada's crime of the century", and admitting that he differed from others on the point, insisted on work rather than charity for a proud race. He spoke in the morning at Ste. Lucie and Sunday evening at Ste. Adele, each time approving the principle of colonization, but emphasizing that he wanted those on the land also to keep on the land.

Hon. Mr. David spoke on the triple theme of education, "woman in the home", and the need of work for the workless.

"Until the school mistress is better treated than the servant in the house, I shall not consider that I have done anything", said Hon. Mr. David, explaining the work of the successive Liberal governments in the field of public education.

He reminded the meeting that this crisis had proven that economic structures may crumble but that one thing, the human brain, remains intact; and noted that, whereas previous to the crisis nations were reaching for Utopia, today men of good will were studying seriously the problems of nations and to that extent the people would benefit by the result of their investigations.

The cry of the unemployed could not be ignored, the minister confessed. "But", he went on, "where possible woman should not take the place of the man. I understand that some women have to work. But those who do should not take the place of the father of the family but give him the opportunity of feeding his dependents."

"I come now to a problem that may not touch the country so much as the city but which, nevertheless, is of primary importance. For the past six years, we have been distributing the dole to those without work. What our people want is not charity; it is work. A proud race will never take charity when it could take work."

"Now, I may be blamed for what I say, but I believe it to be

"Glorious Twelfth" Fete of Local Orangemen

The "Glorious Twelfth", dear to the hearts of members of the Loyal Orange Association throughout the world, was fittingly celebrated in Lachute on Friday last in conjunction with arrangements sponsored by L.O.L. No. 2231.

Headed by piper and drums the parade, numbering close to two hundred members and including delegations of Shrewsbury, Lost River, Louisa, Dallesville, Arundel, Grenville and Morin Heights in addition to the ladies of Lachute Lodge, paraded the town with the flag of Empire and Lodge banner fluttering the breeze.

Following the parade the celebrants travelled by cars to Hammond's Grove to inaugurate the day's festivities with a basket picnic, after which a program of music and speeches was enjoyed with wrapt attention. The speakers included Rev. Baugh of Lakefield, Rev. Cushing of Arundel, and Rev. LeCras of Lachute, also Stanley Holt, County Master, and Harold Butler, Master of L.O.L. No. 2231.

A sports program, ably handled by Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Kuhring, was thoroughly enjoyed by both young and old, except perhaps for one young lady who inadvertently held on to a nail too long in the driving competition and emerged from the contest with a bruised thumb.

In the evening a dance was held in the Black and White Pavilion and was exceptionally well attended. A Montreal or-

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Prove Your Angling Ability

TODAY'S Snapshot Guild is directed to all wives, husbands, daughters and sons who follow the great outdoor sport of fishing. What has fishing to do with amateur photography? Just this. The Chicago Isaak Walton League, according to news dispatches, has included in its curriculum, in the fishing school conducted in Wisconsin, a "course of truthfulness." War has been declared against the angler who persists in telling about the "big one that got away." The law of the Isaak Walton League of Chicago regarding this phase of the art of fishing is very brief and to the point. Here it is. "Get your fish, take his picture or keep quiet."

No one in particular is being accused of telling little white lies about the "whopper" that got away but Chicago's Isaak Walton League law should be recognized throughout the world. The old adage about the cake might be revised to—"You can have your fish and eat it too" for although the fish may end its days in frying pan or broiler, a picture of it will live forever.

There is one thing to remember in taking snapshots on fishing trips. Just as you use different kinds of bait for catching various species of fish so you must vary your methods of taking snapshots under different lighting conditions.

Suppose, for instance, that you are deep sea fishing or out in the middle of a lake under the glare of a mid-July sun. One of your party gets that long-hoped-for jerk on his line. If you have one of the average folding cameras it should be ready for action with the diaphragm opening set at f/11 and the shutter speed set at 1/100 of a second. This setting of the diaphragm and shutter will serve two purposes. First—you will have the proper exposure and second—at 1/100 of a second you will stop the action as your lucky angler friend pulls the fish out of the water and into the boat.

If you have a box type camera use the second stop opening. In snapping the picture with this type of camera you will get the best results if you wait until the fish is safely in the boat and then snap the picture after the catch and when your subject is not in motion.

Let me caution you, however, against a common error. Don't forget to set your camera for distance if it is of the focusing type. If you have a fixed focus camera don't get closer to your subject than about eight feet unless you use a portrait attachment.

Now—suppose you are fishing on a river where the trees obstruct much of the light. Snapshooting under such conditions requires a different technique. Unless you have a camera with an f.8.3 lens or faster you had better forget about fast action pictures and confine your efforts to taking your subjects when not in rapid motion.

If you have a box type camera you should open it to a large stop and with the average folding camera open the diaphragm to f/8 or f/11 and set the shutter speed at 1/25 of a second. And remember—"Get your fish, take his picture or keep quiet."

JOHN VAN GUILDER.

LITTLE BROWN SCOUTS

"Scouting has done an immense amount of good all over the world, among races of every colour. When I was Governor of Ceylon, I saw little brown boys, too poor to buy any sort of uniform—they just had staves—organizing themselves into Scout Troops and obeying the Scout Law. It had a wonderful effect on them." — Sir Herbert Stanley, G.C.M.G., Governor and Chief Scout for Southern Rhodesia.

WEREN'T THEY NAUGHTY

Up the hill and over
And ever so far away—
Some naughty little breezes
Went capering one day.

They gathered up a cloud of dust
And tossed it in Bobby's face.
And scattered Betty's paper dolls
All about the place.

They beat against a window
Rattling every pane
And whistled loudly round the house
Until it began to rain.

Then those naughty little breezes
Went chuckling home, still bad.
And told the other breezes
That they'd made wee Betty mad.

WHEN THE MOON WAS FULL

Betty stood staring at the stuffed cat and wondering what the poor old Witch would do without him. She had never met a real witch, but thought perhaps they were not so bad as people made out, and she was wishing that she could get this witch another cat. "Oh goody," she whispered to herself, "that big cat next door to us, that eats all our chickens, would be just the right cat for the Hal-lowe'en Witch, but how will I get a message to her about him?"

A haughty looking Moon Fairy was just coming towards her as an immense black bat swooped over her head, so low that she heard him whisper quite distinctly, "Write instructions on a tiny kite when the moon is dark, and let it fly loose by the old pine tree."

The bat had to swoop over the second time before she got all the message; by that time the haughty Moon Fairy was quite close. "Two faced Betty," he said quite angrily. Betty stared at him out of wide frightened eyes and put up her tiny hands to feel her face. It felt just the same as it always did, only so tiny. "I have only one face, please, Mr. Moon Fairy," she said timidly. "I did not mean that you actually had two faces", he snapped. "I meant that you were pretending to be friendly with the Moon Fairies and all the time you were friendly with Madame Black Heart." "Madame Black Heart?" Betty faltered, "I do not know her. Who is she?" "Pretending, are you?" he snapped again, coming so close to Betty that he burned her face.

"Stop bullying that child," said her companion of the Lemon Lily Coach. "She does not know who you are talking about."

"Oh, does she not," the haughty Moon Fairy sneered back. "I come to call her into the inner court to tell her story of how Queen Bluebell came to have a broken crown, and I find her talking with Madame Black Heart's head messenger."

"I can't believe it!" said Queen Bluebell's maid-in-waiting, turning to look at Betty. "but this will have to be looked after. We must not keep Queen Bluebell and the Inner Court waiting. Every minute's delay means more trouble for the Queen. Come with me Betty," she said, taking her hand. Much relieved, Betty started to go with her but the haughty Moon Fairy seized her other hand and held her back. "None of your interference Miss Sharp Tongue!" he said to the Queen's maid, "I was commissioned to bring this young miss into the Inner Court and I am taking her, not you."

With that he jerked Betty's head so quickly that she stumbled against the pedestal which the black cat was set upon and brought it tumbling down, with such force that the midnight aid with which it was stuffed was forced out and the weird noise it made in escaping brought Moon Fairies trooping from all corners with little golden bows and arrows, all set to shoot whatever enemies might be attacking their kingdom.

The door of the Inner Court swung quickly open. "What is all this noise about?" demanded the Judge, standing in the doorway clothed in a long golden robe, the cape and hem of which were studded with blue stars that winked and twinkled as he moved. And why has there been such delay in bringing in Queen Bluebell's witness. Do you not know that the moon will soon be darkening and we will have to hold the case over?"

"Please, Your Honor," began the haughty Moon Fairy, "it is all this girl's fault. She knocked Midnight down and he exploded, and—" He was not allowed to finish, for Sharp Tongue cut in with, "Please Your Honor, it is not Betty's fault. Haughty Head jerked her against the pedestal because he was cross with her."

"Dear me! dear me!" said the judge, looking in surprise from one to the other, "these are indeed strange happenings in the Court of the Moon Fairies. Happenings that must be attended to at once, even if we do have to leave Queen Bluebell without a crown for another month."

THIS WILL BE A WARM CAMP FIRE

Beautifying the grounds about their log cabin, Rover Scouts of the 6th Edmonton Crew this summer planted young trees in the form of a fleur-de-lis. The centre of the symbol to be used as a fire circle. As reported in the Edmonton Bulletin, the trees selected were spruce, pine and "fir." Presumably the cold winter nights about the camp fire suggested the selection.

Striking while the iron is hot is a characteristic of the West that has gained the admiration of the rest of Canada. And so there is little surprise in the announcement that the Board of Trade at Invermere, B.C., has leased the bungalow camp at beautiful Lake Windermere for this summer, in anticipation of increased tourist traffic to the Canadian Rockies, which has been generally forecast in Europe, the Orient, and the United States.

The camp, which is being taken over by small but energetic Invermere, is one of the most delightfully situated in the Canadian Rockies. Built originally by the Canadian Pacific Railway, this camp has been successfully operated for the past several years as a private camp for girls. In the centre of an ideal vacation district, it is easily reached by main mountain highways. The famous Banff-Windermere road leads to it, a good alternative route being through the mountains from Cranbrook.

The lake averages about 68 degrees in the summer and is ideal for swimming and boating. Excellent trout fishing can be had in several creeks and smaller lakes near by and the lake itself has landlocked salmon of considerable size. Within a day's ride is the celebrated Lake of the Hanging Glacier, with six spectacular glaciers all concentrating in one moraine with an ice wall several hundred feet high which drops a continual succession of small icebergs into the lake.

The camp is a particularly good centre for a whole summer's rest and exploration, because many are the side trips that can be made by car, mountain-bred ponies, or on foot to adjacent spots of beauty or historic interest. Tennis courts and motor launches are available for the use of the guests.

There is accommodation for 42 guests in the camp, which consists of a large main building, with wide verandah, and of separate small bungalows, equipped with single beds, stove, clothes closet, rice furniture, running water, and electric lights. A double bath-house, with hot and cold running water, contains separate bath rooms.

Big Event for Quebec Sportsmen

A joint Field Day of the Members and Directors of the Quebec Association for the Protection of Fish and Game, and the Canadian Forestry Association, will be celebrated in the St. Maurice Valley from July 26th to the 29th inclusive.

Arrangements for this important event were made at a meeting of the two institutions held at Three Rivers on July 2nd., in the office of Mr. Philippe Bigué, K.C., Chairman of the St. Maurice Division of the fish and game association.

The meeting was attended by P. Bigué, Henri Kieffer, President of the Canadian Forestry Association, Henry Sorgius, President of the St. Maurice and the Laurentian Forest Protective Associations, Dr. Montpetit, C. E. LaBranche, J. M. Bureau, Provincial Commissioner of the Scouts Catholiques, L. Judson, Manager of the St. Maurice Forest Protective Association, and Andre E. A. Cartier, Secretary of the Q.A.P.F.G. and Robson Black, Manager of the Canadian Forestry Association.

The idea behind the joint field day in the St. Maurice Valley is to promote public cooperation and interest in the protection of natural resources.

This will be the first occasion on which the two public associations have met for a common purpose, and augurs well for a united programme on the conservation of forests, fish and game in the future. The meeting at Three Rivers devoted much attention to forming in alliance with the Scout organizations of the province, whereby the youth of Quebec will play an active part in the safeguarding of woods, waters and wild life.

On the 27th. of July, members and friends of the two societies will meet at Pointe-à-la-Mine, 18 miles north of Grand-Mere, and will attend a demonstration given by the Scouts in camp.

In the evening a programme of brief addresses, with graphic motion pictures, and the presentation of badges will take place.

The delegates will proceed to Vassal Camp, 20 miles south of LaTuque, where, through the kindness of Philippe Bigué and Edouard Bureau, the proprietors, they will enjoy the privileges of excellent accommodation and well-stocked fishing waters. Competitions in casting will be held.

All interested in the cause of conservation are invited to attend this unique excursion, the costs of which have been held to $2.50 a day, including sleeping accommodation and meals.

Those intending to be present should immediately notify the Quebec Association for Protection of Fish and Game, Three Rivers, c/o Tourist Bureau.

All the public are cordially invited to attend this rally, whether members of these associations or not.

The Rise of Sap in Trees

The exact cause of the rise of sap in the stem of trees is one of the problems of vegetable physiology that botanists have not yet been able to solve, says the Washington Star. The upward movement of crude sap toward the leaves is mainly through the ducts in the woody portion of the stem, while the downward flow of the elaborated sap from the leaves takes place chiefly through certain vessels in the layer just under the bark. It must not be supposed that the flow of sap in plants is analogous to the circulation of blood in animals. There is no central organ, like the heart, to regulate its flow, and the water taken up by the roots does not make one continual circuit of the plant body, but is distributed by general diffusion, partly through into the air through the leaves and partly through the plant body as food, wherever it is needed.

Outline of Health Insurance Plan Proposed for British Columbia

An outline of a "nearly perfect" plan for state health insurance which would safeguard the health of wage earners, farmers and other persons of small or moderate income, pay insurance benefits to the sick, and put doctors on the government pay-roll, was presented recently in Montreal before the National Conference of Social Work, by H. M. Cassidy, Director of Social Welfare, Victoria, British Columbia. He addressed a Social Action section of the conference.

The plan itself is one proposed for adoption by the Government of British Columbia—the first, Mr. Cassidy declared, to provide for a comprehensive system of health insurance in Canada. The British Columbia plan, he said, was presented to the Provincial Legislature last March "as a basis for discussion with a view to formulating finally a health insurance measure for adoption at the next session of the Legislature," and has been circulated among the people of the province for their informal consideration before any final action is taken.

Highlights of the plan, Mr. Cassidy said, are that when fully in operation it is designed to cover about 75 per cent of the population of the province; it insures both employees and others who are earning less than $200 per month and their dependents; and insures farmers and their families and indigent persons; it is a voluntary arrangement; it provides complete hospital and medical service for the ill; and is designed so as to be kept free of politics.

Earners to Help

"In principle," he said, "the plan represents a system whereby wage earners, farmers and other persons of small or moderate income contribute weekly or monthly along with their employers, if any, toward a central fund from which is purchased medical care and cash benefits for them. In addition, indigents and their dependents are covered by the plan with respect to medical benefits only."

"It is proposed that the scheme be financed for employees and their dependents by contributions made weekly or monthly by employers and employees." Contribution by employees, the speaker explained, is not to exceed 3 per cent of wages, and of employers, not to exceed 2 per cent of payrolls.

Mr. Cassidy stressed the point that the British Columbia health insurance plan differs in its scope from similar systems proposed in various American states and Canadian provinces. "The plan," he declared, "is very much broader than most of the schemes and this arises largely from an attempt on the part of the authors to combine in it three major principles of social medicine—the urban health insurance designed for workers in urban industry, public medical services for the indigent; and public medicine in rural communities."

The British Columbia plan is in line with recent developments to put more stress on medical than insurance benefits. It is estimated that for the wage earners and their families alone

(the only group to receive cash benefits) the cost of medical care will be five times as great as the cash benefits.

Five-Man Board

The British Columbia plan provides for management by a commission of five persons; the director of social welfare, the provincial health officer, and the chairman of the workmen's compensation board who serve without salary, and the administrator of health insurance and director of medical services who are the executive officers, to be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council. Both the commission and Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council are granted discretionary power to withdraw various provisions of the plan in order to make it fit the requirements of the period.

Mr. Cassidy stressed the importance of "going to the people" of the province.

"The Government of British Columbia," he said, "instead of introducing a bill in the Legislature and passing it after two or three weeks of debate has in effect taken the people of the province into its confidence with respect to its plan, and has asked them for their opinion. It is hoped that as a result of this highly democratic process of consultation there may emerge a scheme which will be well understood by the public when it finally becomes law, and it will have the cordial support of a very large section of the population."

Use of radio patrol cars is responsible for the elimination of three police stations in Montreal. The recent closing of these stations leaves 30 police districts in the metropolis.

RECREATION FOR UNEMPLOYED YOUTH

An organized effort is being made in Toronto to promote recreational activities for unemployed young people. This is a great work. It is not enough that human beings should be fed and clothed. Their minds and bodies must be exercised if mental, moral and physical health is to be maintained.

BONDING OF CIVIC OFFICIALS

Because experience has shown that personal surety bonds by municipal officials are not always satisfactory, an amendment to the Municipal Amendment Act passed by the Ontario Legislature requires that the security of municipal officials shall be given by the bond, policy or guarantee contract of a guarantee company within the meaning of the Guarantee Companies Securities Act.

JUST EMERGENCY JOBS

Relief jobs are not intended as permanent employment. Often they are jobs that are not necessary, but are undertaken to enable men to support their families. Under these circumstances it would seem to be more important to make work possible than to insist upon a scale of wages that would cause many to hesitate to accept offers from private employers.

A brief correspondence from Lachute Town elector evidences that perfect unanimity was a distant cry of council procedure in the old days. Elector asks, "Why pass a by-law for any loan before an engineer's plan and estimate is made for the particular improvement for which loan is wanted? Why not begin good repairs by making the proprietors of land at Post Office and Hotel in the Centre Ward lower the hills opposite their places and level the front? Why not go to work intelligently and not throw away money to please the fancy of one of the council? Is the town fit for incorporation when there are only found two men in it who are considered fit for the offices? Would the town die if they died?"

GASOLINE BY THE POUND?

If the invention of solidified gasoline, just perfected by a New York scientist, is adapted to everyday needs, there will be millions of dollars worth of filling station equipment on the scrap heap. One can visualize fuel sold in brightly colored packages like ice cream bricks, or in cans—in which case the can-opener will be nestling under the auto seat along with the jack and the wrenches.

We can remember when, in war-time, cars were driven by coal gas held in gas-bag containers, which bellowed in the wind above the auto top. This was in Europe. But the oil interests brook no interference with the present vogues of fuel consumption. Inventions promising economy to the consumer have quickly been "absorbed"; so there is little prospect of solidified gasoline ever appearing on the market.

MONTREAL GAINING UNSAVORY REPUTATION

The following editorial is from the St. Maurice Valley Chronicle.

Commercial interests in other parts of the province have every reason to rejoice at the policy now being enforced in Montreal to make the motorist's life a nightmare. A visitor to the city in search of a parking-site is harried from pillar to post, and the metropolis has apparently engaged a special staff of police officers to levy fines on all unwary persons who offend one of Montreal's multitudinous traffic regulations.

It is common knowledge that the metropolis is deeply in debt, but visitors are narrow-minded enough to resent the earnest efforts now being made to collect the city deficit from traffic fines. Tourists passing through here after visiting Montreal declare the situation is unbearable, and their only desire was to cut short their visit and hasten to other centres where they would not be made the object of police persecution.

Montreal's traffic by-laws are weird and wonderful and seem to change overnight. Even frequent visitors are mystified by the numerous "one-way streets" and "no parking" provisions, and anyone who purposes doing a little shopping in the Montreal stores would be well-advised to add a five or ten-dollar bill to his outlay, as he is almost sure to infringe some by-law or other and will have a fine to pay.

From a purely selfish point of view, we trust that Montreal will continue trying to swell its revenues in this manner, for the metropolis is fast acquiring a reputation as a "tourist dead-fall" and thousands of visitors scurry away from there and down to the more hospitable and saner centres like Three Rivers, Shawinigan and Quebec, where they can make their purchases in comparative peace of mind.

BUSINESS IS BETTER

Confidence in the future of Canada is reflected in the value of building permits for the month of May. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics, compiling these figures, notes an increase in value of 58.9 per cent over May of last year. Permits to the value of 4,799, 285 were authorized during the month in 61 cities, compared with a value of $1,799,524 for May, 1934.

Manufacturers as well as builders look to the future with enthusiasm. Reports have come from cities and towns throughout Canada of increased production, and of intentions to step up manufacturing capacity.

In Brantford, Ont., Canadian Durex Abrasives Ltd., have let a contract for a $40,000 addition to their plant and $60,000 worth of machinery. Vernon B.C.—Schumacher Brothers will erect a mill at Squaw Valley for the manufacture the truth. I prefer to indebted a province or even a country, rather than mortgage the future of two generations of workers. In the end it will cost more. It would cost less to give work than to bring back to work men who have not worked for a long period, men sunk in indifference and idleness, haters of work.

Hon. T. D. Bouchard, Minister of Trade, Commerce and Municipal Affairs, supporting his colleague, announced that several municipalities in the province have asked for application of last session's law allowing municipalization of electricity within their limits.

Forests of the Sea
Trunks of seaweed eighteen inches in circumference, with branches and leaves like a tree, were discovered recently by a botanist in the Antarctic ocean. It remains to be proved whether they can be used as firewood. Unmapped jungles of vegetation lie beneath the waves. The marine explorer glimpsed a real forest of seaweed when investigating, in his bathysphere, the continental shelf off the coast of Chile. Some of the stems towered to a height of 600 feet, three inches higher than the world's tallest tree.

Banned Unfair Competition
During the Middle Ages, Belgium had very strict laws to prevent what it considered to be unfair competition. In at least one town, craftsmen and vendors of goods were not only forbidden to advertise but they were not even allowed to stand in their doorways for fear they might blow their noses or sneeze in order to attract the attention of passers-by.—Isaac Herszkowitz, New York City, in Collier's Weekly.

The Ottawa Spotlight

A Weekly Review of National Affairs
Specially written for The Watchman

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, July 16.—The revolt of Hon. H. H. Stevens from the Conservative party to set up a camp of his own did not cause the disruption and dismay which were, perhaps, expected. The political commentators may be underestimating the popular strength of this new factor. Mr. Stevens is a likeable fellow, a platform speaker of great emotional appeal, a hard worker, and a courageous battler. His strength lies in the current dissatisfaction of voters against the old parties; and in this respect he will have to share votes with Mr. Woodsworth. There has been much discussion of the effect his advent will have on political chances. The Liberals say that Stevens candidates won't cut into their support, and, indeed, by further division of the Liberal forces. Mr. Stevens will give them a larger majority than they could have obtained otherwise. The Conservatives refused to be frightened by Mr. Stevens' insurrection; they warn organizations that if there is any defection from the loyal party ranks over to Mr. Stevens, a new organization will be set up and a Bennett candidate chosen.

The C.C.F. spokesmen point out that the aim of Mr. Stevens is to reform capitalism, while on their part they are satisfied that capitalism will not work any longer: they are out to replace it with socialism. They argue that Mr. Stevens may cut into the Liberal and Conservative vote, but that it won't hurt them. So it all depends whose point of view you accept.

ENLIVEN THE ELECTION

The one certain outcome is that the election campaign will be further enlivened. Mr. Stevens is a good campaigner. He appears to be in good health and spirits. If he can raise the necessary finances and place candidates in every riding, he ought to win a few seats, anyway; and there is always the chance that a bold move of this kind may capture the imagination of the voter. His chances of obtaining sufficient seats to form a government, or even to secure the balance of power, are so remote that no odds could be secured, one thinks, on parliament hill. At the same time it would be a pretty safe bet that Mr. Stevens himself, and at least a small handful of followers, will be in the next parliament, providing a highly vocal opposition to the government of the day, no matter what complexion it may be.

The popular following developed by Mr. Aberhart in Alberta in a comparatively short time should be a lesson to those forecasters who argue that because third party movements have always failed in the past they cannot work in the future. It is possible that the Stevens movement may inspire the Liberals to come out with a rather more striking and comprehensive program than they had intended. The impression is that people will vote Liberal in the next election; but at least the people would like to be given a plausible reason for so choosing. So many are saying.

THE ELECTION DATE

The election date is being picked by the amateur prophets. There are grounds for believing that it will be early rather than late. August 26th. and September 3rd. appear to be the more popular dates just now. We ought to know very soon. The election lists will be revised and ready before the end of August. The same prognosticators are busy with cabinet changes and senatorial choices. The weekly newscaster is not so free to take part in this guessing contest, because while he is going to press with his predictions the government may announce the actual names, and make his predictions look pretty flat. Like Brer Rabbit, or the Tar Baby, who whoever it was, Mr. Bennett is laying low and saying nothing, either about the election date or the appointments.

SENATE VACANCIES

There are 17 vacancies in the senate and 30 odd appointments of importance in other spheres. The Conservatives will have a majority of 40 in the New Senate, that is there will be about 68 Conservatives to 28 Liberals, which suggests that if Mackenzie King gets into power there will be the setting provided for a spectacular clash of power between the Senate and Commons, in which event one may be sure the cry of "Senate Reform" will again be raised.

OBITUARY

THE LATE

MRS. ROBT. GORDON

There passed away at her home on Bethany Road, on July 14th., Mrs. Robert Gordon, in her 85th. year. Deceased was formerly Jessie McQuat, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McQuat of Upper Lachute, and with her husband, who predeceased her in June 1933, had been a life-long resident of this district, in which she had made a host of friends. Of a quiet and modest disposition, with always a smile and a word of cheer, she will be greatly missed by the many with whom she came in contact.

Mrs. Gordon leaves to mourn her loss three daughters and two sons, Jean at home, Mrs. Wm Nicol, of Newark, N. J., Mrs. Gordon Walker, Peter and George of Lachute.

The funeral service, held at her home on Tuesday, was conducted by Rev. H. Cousens, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of which she was a member, and was largely attended by many sympathizing friends and relatives, the beautiful floral tributes bearing silent testimony of the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

The pall bearers were Messrs. E. Wood, J. Walker, G. Walker, J. Drew, J. Miller and W. Murray.

A Great Lakes Holiday

With the increasing popularity of vacation trips on the Great Lakes, the Canadian Pacific has expanded its Great Lakes Steamship service to include calls at Port Arthur on westbound voyages as well as eastbound. The Great Lakes make this continent almost unique for an inland sea voyage, part of which is entirely out of sight of land. Attractions that have been drawing an increasing number of passengers include a change of air, refreshing coolness, magnificent scenery, complete rest, and all the joys of shipboard. The Canadian Pacific Great Lakes steamers this year have been outfitted with deck sports, including quoits, shuffleboard, and deck golf. Dancing and music bring pleasure to the evening hours. The schedule makes it possible to take an enjoyable week's trip, going either way, with overnight stops at both ends. Sailing Saturday, the round trip is completed the following Friday; Sailing Wednesday, the round trip is completed on Monday. The steamers leave Port McNicoll at 5.00 p.m. on Wednesdays and Saturdays, arriving at Port Arthur at 6.45 a.m. and Port William at 7.50 a.m. on Mondays and Fridays, in time to connect with train leaving dock at 8.00 a.m., eastern standard time, making connections with train No. 1 leaving Port William station for the West at 7.35 a.m., central standard time. On the eastbound trip departure time is 12.00 noon from Fort William on Saturdays and Wednesdays, 1.00 p.m. from Port Arthur, arriving in Port McNicoll at 8.00 a.m., eastern standard time, on Mondays and Fridays. Port Arthur was in the schedule for an eastbound call but the call on the westbound trip has not been in effect for several years. Attractive all-expense tours at very low cost have been arranged to provide happy combinations of rail trips overland and steamship cruises across the Lakes, with leisurely stop-over at famous vacation resorts. There is a nine-day westbound tour between Toronto and Winnipeg and a ten-day eastbound tour from Winnipeg to Niagara Falls, with return trip in both cases.

Match or Fuse Used to Fire First Powder Guns

The first weapon employing powder and small enough to be carried by a man was little more than a tube of metal from which a charge was fired by the application to the touchhole of a lighted match or fuse. The arquebus, forerunner of the musket, was of this simple design, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune. Fired by the aid of the so-called matchlock, it hurled a ball a maximum distance of 400 yards. Some time in the mid-Sixteenth century the duke of Alva (1508-1583) introduced into the Spanish army the smoothbore musket, which had a maximum range of 500 yards, but which, like the arquebus, was only accurate for about 100 yards.

Little improvement was made in the shooting efficiency of the smoothbore musket in more than 200 years, though the firing mechanisms of the weapons were successively changed from matchlock to wheel lock, from wheel lock to flintlock, and from flintlock to cap or percussion lock. Gradually the weapons were made lighter and lighter, until the soldier no longer was compelled to carry a forked rod upon which to rest his gun for firing.

A QUEER QUIRK

Most people who have children want to have a male child. I do not mean that they do not want girls, but the majority seem to hope that their first child will be a boy. How it is I cannot understand, but when it comes to adoption the picture is changed and nearly everyone wants to adopt a girl, a fair-haired girl with curls is the favorite, while the boys are left languishing. Human nature is full of queer quirks, but to my mind this is one of the queerest.

CHOOSE HOT WEATHER MEALS WITH CARE

To eat less in hot weather is the advice usually given. It is good advice too. Nature usually takes care of that as our appetites are less keen. Like every other rule it has its exceptions. Many times people actually require more food because they are working just as hard and sometimes harder than in the cool weather. Nearly everyone plays more and takes more exercise in summer than in winter, so if you are working harder and exercising more it stands to reason that it is not sensible to reduce the intake of food too much. Let common sense rule. Then again we are often told to eat less meat. Here also, the exception proves the rule. Even in summer we need protein foods and if we eat less meat, then we must replace it with another protein food such as fish, eggs, cheese or milk. Increase the quantity of vegetables, fruits and salads eaten but add hard cooked eggs or cheese to the menu. Nuts are a protein food but as they are rich in fat and proteid they must be used with discretion by people with weak digestion. Cottage cheese, which may be bought in packages in various forms or may be made at home, is a useful summer food. Although pasteurized milk will make cottage cheese it does not make as nice a flavoured cheese as unpasteurized.

COTTAGE CHEESE

Put freshly soured milk in the top of a double boiler and heat over water below the boiling point until the whey has separated. Strain through cheesecloth and let hang until thoroughly dry. Mix to smoothness with a little cream and season with salt and pepper. This may be served as a savoury with salads, or may be mixed with olives, pickles or peppers to use as a cheese or in sandwiches. Try serving it with crisp crackers and grape jelly for a dessert or for those evening refreshments.

A TOURIST TRIP

Few of us ever get over the childish feeling of enjoying getting something for nothing. I had dinner at a restaurant where they passed candied orange peel at the end of the meal. This was not on the menu, nor was it charged for; the pleased and surprised expressions on the faces of the diners was interesting to watch. It seemed to me to be such a good idea that I wanted to pass it on. The materials would cost very little as there are always plenty of orange rinds left after serving orange juice, and it ends the meal pleasantly.

CANDIED ORANGE PEEL

Cut the peel from 4 oranges in quarters. Cover with cold water and cook slowly until soft. Drain and remove the white portion with a spoon. Cut the yellow portion in narrow strips with the scissors. Boil 1 cup sugar and ½ cup water until the syrup will thread when dropped from the tip of the spoon. Cook the strips in the syrup for five minutes, drain and roll in granulated sugar. Store in tin boxes.

PICNIC SALAD

6 boiled potatoes
½ Bermuda onion
½ lb. bacon
2 hard cooked eggs
½ cup peas
1 head lettuce
Shred lettuce, cube potatoes, cut bacon in small pieces and cook. Combine and moisten with salad dressing, stirring lightly with a fork. Garnish with eggs and peas.

FRESH FRUIT ICE CREAM

1 cup strawberry or raspberry pulp
1 cup sugar
¼ cup cold water
½ pint whipping cream
1 tablespoon gelatin

Mash the fruit and add the sugar. Soak the gelatin in the cold water for 5 minutes, then dissolve thoroughly over hot water. Add to the fruit. Place mixture in freezing tray and chill thoroughly. When chilled add whipped cream and freeze without stirring.

POTPOURRI

Serve powdered ginger with watermelon.

Try a dressing of horseradish mixed with Worcestershire Sauce, on shrimps.

A little mint added to an iced drink improves the flavour.

ASSOCIATION IN MONTREAL HAS ISLAND FARM PLAN

A project has been outlined to Premier Taschereau of Quebec whereby, with the expenditure of a sum of provincial money, a population of some 5,000 people now living in Montreal on the "dole" would be placed on land on the Island of Montreal and in the immediate neighborhood, and thus win their way to financial independence—reports the Montreal Gazette.

The project was outlined by a delegation representing an organization called the "Association des Chomeurs Actives," a reasonable translation of which would be the "Association of Active Unemployed."

There is much vacant land on the island and immediate neighborhood, it was explained, and it was of a nature to form excellent market gardens. The association had been looking the situation over carefully and had a certain number of desirable families on the lists as being ready to settle on the land, once it was provided for them, together with needful accommodation. A desirable family, it was added, is one in which there are at least eight children, and counting the head of the family and his wife, a unit of 10 persons in all. It would be possible to settle 500 such families in rapid order, so there would be 5,000 people disposed of, and able to care for themselves once the land yielded sufficient produce which could be sold on the Montreal markets to produce the needed revenue.

The delegation did not go into the financial arrangements, except to explain to the Premier that the funds would have to come from Quebec, and be sufficient for the "carry-over" period. A lot of 20 acres of land per family would be ample and they impressed upon the Premier that there were many people on direct relief who wished to work the land, but did not want to go into the new settlements being carved out of the forests. On 20 acres of land within easy access of the city markets, a family would do well, the association believed. The Government would be expected to acquire the land, to arrange for the building of a house and barn, provide for the agricultural implements, and to see to it that the people are provided with maintenance until the market gardens are producing.

SECTION OF TRANS-CANADA HIGHWAY OPENED

Hon. Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Highways, officially opened the new Winnipeg to Fort William route. Building of this highway through New Ontario marks the next to the last step in the completion of the trans-Canada highway, spanning the Dominion from Vancouver to Halifax. A feature of the dedication was a 1,000 mile trip by a 200-car motorcade, which travelled from Winnipeg to Fort William via the old road, and then returned across the new highway.

CROP CONDITIONS ARE GOOD IN WEST

Crops are making good progress throughout Western Canada. Grain generally is ten days to two weeks behind last year, but the stand is much better. Grasshoppers are in evidence in some districts, but very little damage reported. Warmer weather is needed. Weather has been favorable for growth throughout Manitoba. Wheat is high and stooling well. Warmer weather will be of great assistance to all crops. Pastures are in excellent shape and, where grasshoppers are evident, combative measures are well in hand. In Saskatchewan crops are showing up well, but a little late. Grasshoppers are appearing, but very little damage reported. Pastures and gardens are good. Alberta reports that general conditions continue satisfactory. Wheat is twelve inches and higher above the ground and some are in shot blade. Slight damage is reported from hail and grasshoppers at scattered points. An average to better than average crop anticipated. The Peace River districts have rain. Crops are doing well, no damage reported, but warmer weather is needed.

PUBLIC HEALTH GRANTS CURTAILED

As part of its economy program, the Ontario Government has discontinued provincial grants of $400 per year to municipalities employing a public health nurse on a full time basis.

Reductions in public health subsidies were the subject of a resolution at the June conference of Ontario Mayors, who asked that they be reconsidered by the Government.

LONDON SLUM CLEARANCE CRITICIZED

At a conference of teachers and social workers in London, England, speakers recently charged that the much-boasted slum clearance and abolition campaign in Britain is rapidly resolving itself into a barrack and tenement building stunt "of the cheapest and nastiest kind."

WOULD RESTORE GATES AT QUEBEC

Mayor J. E. Gregoire of Quebec City has decided to ask the Department of National Defence for complete reconstruction of three gates to the city, the St. John Gate, the Gate du Palais and the Gate de la Cote de la Montagne. For several weeks workers have been removing the ruins of the St. John Gate because it has been reported as in a dangerous condition. Mayor Gregoire has complained about this and has asked that the historic value of Quebec be conserved.

EX-FIRE-CHIEF HERE

Among recent visitors to Montreal's Fire Headquarters was Ex-chief Arthur R. Dyer, A.M.I.C.E., of the London, England, Fire Brigade. He was on his way to visit his son at Vancouver and stopped to exchange notes at the Montreal department with Deputy Chiefs Quimet and Robert.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, July 21st., is "Life."

The Golden Text is:—"How excellent is thy loving kindness, O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings . . . and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures. For with thee is the fountain of life." (Psalms 36: 7-9).

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"Life is, always has been, and ever will be independent of matter; for Life is God, and man is the idea of God, not formed materially but spiritually, and not subject to decay and dust. The Psalmist said: "Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands. Thou hast put all things under his feet." (Science and Health, page 200).

of cedar lumber. Thessalon, Ont.—Crane Lumber Company has re-opened its lumber mill with 125 men employed. Simcoe, Ont.—Lealand Pickle Company has enlarged its plant and will add manufacture of jams to its operations. Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—Effective July 1, wage increases of 10 to 12½ per cent were effected by Algoma Steel Corporation. Cayuga, Ont.—Local factory secured by Dion Machinery Company will manufacture lathes, bands saws and other manual training school equipment. Arnprior, Ont.—Operations resumed this week by Braeside Lumber Mill with 200 men employed. Windsor, Ont.—Surplus of houses is getting low and a building permit for a residence was issued, the first since January, 1932.

These are but random instances. Readers in various sections are noting local evidences of an upturn in production—all of which implies that business is better, and must soon reflect encouragement in even the darkest phases of Canadian activity.

MAYORS EXCHANGED PICTURES

Mayor James Simpson and Mayor Camillien Houde are reported to have exchanged portraits as a gesture of good will. A full length likeness of Mayor Houde adorns the office of Mayor Simpson in Toronto, while a portrait of the latter is hung in the Montreal City Hall.

POLICE EXPERT FOR VANCOUVER

Superintendent H. Darling of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Criminal Investigation Department, Ottawa, has been loaned to the Vancouver Police Department at the request of Mayor G. McGeer. General unrest and communist activity are explained as reasons for bringing the city's police department up to a wider efficiency—for which purpose Superintendent Darling is now in Vancouver.

PRESS PAYS TRIBUTE TO YOUNG FIRE CHIEF

Donald Boulden, fire chief of Winnipeg, is one of the youngest fire department heads on the continent for a city the size of Winnipeg or larger—says an exchange. He is 38 years old.

Boulden is a hardboiled smoke-eater, who left England after his 17th birthday and arrived in Winnipeg one morning with 25 cents, no job and an appetite. Before night he was a farmer's hired man.

Months later he was back in town in the building trade, from which he turned to become a fireman.

Life in a fire hall was a matter of brass polishing, runs and checker games. The first two could not be eliminated, he saw, but perhaps if he cut out the checkers and studied he might get somewhere. So he fought skyscraper blazes in books, pestered station captains with questions and suggestions, and one day happened to notice that the city was looking for a new chief. "I suppose you'll try for the job, Don," one of the boys twitted him as he read the notice.

"I will," he answered, and he did, and he got it.

Then he wanted more education. Bulky envelopes came to and went from his address for some weeks. Donald Boulden was taking a correspondence course in dictation, business management and English composition.

With this advantage he was now ready to start a compulsory training school for his men, based on new lines and with each man in a separate class. His idea has always been that you can't train firemen with mass production methods.

TOWN LIGHTS EXTINGUISHED ONE YEAR

The 400 residents of Grain Valley, a small municipality in Missouri, have put away their flashlights and hung their kerosene lanterns in the shed. The street lights are burning again. They were turned off a year ago when the city was unable to pay the bill it owed a power company.

Land, Industry and Taxation

The normal effect of growth of population on land value is to increase it. The normal effect of growth of population upon labor products is to lower their price, for the greater demand means production on a larger scale and by improved methods. A large newspaper is sold for a cent, but is printed in a town office whose comparatively small site is probably of enormous value. The cheapness of the newspaper and the fearfulness of the site are due to the same cause operating upon unlike values. Other things being equal a great demand for buildings brings new methods and new machinery into play with the effect of cheapening their cost.

Moreover, the value of things produced by labor is a wasting value. A house begins to decay from the time it is erected. Labor constantly applied can at best only arrest its decay; some day it will wear out and have to be renewed. No increase of population can maintain or increase its value as a structure. But increase of population does not only maintain but enhance—the value of the land upon which it stands.

Site values and building values being thus different and even opposite in character, in many respects—it appears that a system which treats them exactly alike, as our present rating system does, is unfair and unwise.

Even if we accept its theory that rates under the present system, in the long run fall upon the owners of the land values, we are forced to admit that the method of levying them is unfair for they are not levied upon all land according to its value, and mostly upon land that is occupied and used and even then not according to its value, but according to the value of the use that is being made of it. It is impossible to arrive at a fair basis for the rating of the owners of land values by mixing up, under the head of rateable values, the value of land with the value of houses, shops and machinery which the industry of the owner, or the industry of others, has placed on the land. If the rates, by an inexorable law, strive to reach the landlord, it is only justice that they should be proportioned to his share of the land value and not to the exercise of his industry. No landlord who is making the best, or even a reasonably good use of land, need fear for himself the effects of such a change as the rating of land values and the exemption of improvement values.

But under any possible theory of the incident of the rates, the present system is condemned. Take the case of an ordinary dwelling house. The three persons necessarily interested in its erection are a land holder from whom the use of the site is obtained, a builder, and an occupant who wishes to live in the house. The rates must be paid by one or more of these. If they fall entirely on the land holder they are, in effect, a fine upon him for allowing the land to be put to a good use, while his neighbors may still be holding similar land idle for the rise. It is a deterrent to development. If the rate falls wholly on the builder, they are constituted a tax upon the building industry, which provides one of the chief necessities of life in our climate. If they fall wholly upon the occupant, as he often believes they do, in addition to the full rent which he pays for use of the site and the house, he may well complain that in paying the rates he is contributing to a fund which is largely spent in raising the price of land against himself for the benefit of the landlord who gets all the enhanced value for nothing. The argument is but little weakened if the burden of the rates is really distributed between two of them, or all three.

By refusing to put his land to any use whatsoever, the landlord can escape the local rates altogether. His land may be agricultural. He grows no crop, nor will he allow anyone else to do so. Some agricultural workers who might find employment on it come upon the poor rate, or go to swell the over-crowding of a distant town. Nature uses his untilled acres as a seed-bed for weeds, which prejudices his neighbors' good husbandry; stagnant water forms pools on the land, and breeds 'stinging' creatures to annoy the neighbors' children. In return for these incivilities the neighbors, more industrious than he, have to pay his rates as well as their own!

He may be holding up a vacant site in or near a town, where houses are badly wanted and builders are out of work. But he pays not a cent towards the sanitary rate for relief of the victims of overcrowding, or towards the poor rate for those whom he is driving into destitution.

Then ALL-BRAN Brought Welcome Relief

Read this voluntary letter from Mr. Lecour: "I have been troubled with constipation" for the past 25 years. I tried practically every cathartic without results.

"Recently, I determined to give Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a fair trial. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has not only helped me, but I believe it is an actual relief for chronic constipation."—Mr. Henry E. Lecour. Address upon request.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. It also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. Often more effective than "bulk" in fruits and vegetables, as it does not break down within the body.

Isn't this natural food pleasanter than patent medicines? Just eat two tablespoons daily. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved, see your doctor.

MONTREAL-HULL ROUTE IS TERMED "NEGLECTED HIGHWAY"

CITY EDITOR DRAWS ATTENTION TO FACTS LOCALLY OBVIOUS

PROVL. GOVERNMENT'S APPARENT INDIFFERENCE IS COSTLY IN TERMS OF BUSINESS

The Montreal Daily Star makes reference to a "Neglected Highway" but by public spirited men of this county it is disgustingly thought of as the "Forgotten Road"—for the condition of the Montreal-Hull route bordering the Ottawa River has many times been referred to the provincial authorities, and despite many promises the Department of Roads remains oblivious to its present state and its latent possibilities.

Lachute Watchman has repeatedly stressed the need for reconstruction of the Pointe-au-Chene bridge, which is a menace to traffic on this road. Boards of Trade and Councils in the County of Argenteuil have petitioned the government for its renovation, with no encouragement save vague promises, which obviously do not mean a thing.

It may be presumed from an editorial in last Saturday's Montreal Star that the editor has had reason to travel this road in person, and that while disgusted with its neglected surface, he has still been impressed with its scenic environment and its possibilities from the viewpoint of tourist business... Here is what the editor has to say:

"If the Government really wants to do something for this Province it will waken up to the absurdity of the present situation where the 'North Shore' highway between here and Ottawa is concerned. Here is a road between the Canadian metropolis and the Canadian

C.C.F., RECONSTRUCTION PARTY POLICIES OUTLINED IN BRIEF

PRESS GALLERY CORRESPONDENT SEES EXCITEMENT IN FOUR-PARTY ELECTION CONTEST

WILFRID EGGLESTON, IN "OTTAWA SPOTLIGHT"

Ottawa, July 23.—Two political parties, yet unborn in 1930, will appeal to the Canadian electors in the forthcoming campaign, — the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation (the C.C.F.) under the leadership of J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., and the Reconstruction Party under Hon. H. H. Stevens.

Both these parties have in the last few days issued election manifestoes or programs. These are too long even to summarize adequately in this weekly digest, but I am presenting here the main sentiments and promises on Canada's major public issues:

CAPITALISM: Must be abolished and replaced by a new social order — a planned and socialized economic order which will make possible the most efficient development of all our resources and the most equitable distribution of the national income. (C.C.F.)

A change in the economic system is needed. The shattered national economy must be reconstructed (Stevens).

PUBLIC WORKS: Both parties come out in favor of extensive public works. The C. C. F. manifesto proposes a far-reaching program of public expenditure including housing, slum-clearances, hospitals, libraries, schools, community halls, parks, recreation centers, reforestation projects, rural electrification. The Stevens party insists that all public works undertaken should be designed to serve public needs... wherever possible they should be self-sustaining. Specifically promised are: completion of the trans-Canada highway, highways from southern boundary to national parks, development of tourist resources, country-wide reforestation, removal of level crossings, housing. The two programs are strikingly similar on this point.

Postmaster H. M. Gall

It is interesting to note that, although this year marks the 50th. anniversary of the incorporation of Lachute, the post office in this town has now been operating continuously for one hundred years.

In 1835 the first post office was opened, when Mr. H. Hutchins was appointed postmaster. Mr. John Meikle, who was among pioneer settlers of this countryside, coming in 1827 from Scotland, took over the office in 1851, since which time supervision of the local mails has been under control of one family, for the present postmaster, Mr. H. M. Gall, is a great grandson of Mr. George Meikle. The latter assumed the office of postmaster in 1868, upon the death of Mr. Meikle Senior, and occupied the position until he died in 1877. Mr. George Meikle is a familiar figure in the recollections of many still living in Lachute.

It was in 1899 that Mr. Gall's father, Mr. Hugh Gall, became postmaster. During his officialdom the present postmaster commenced work as a young man. The present office has been erected only a quarter of a century, and when Mr. H. M. Gall became interested in the management of His Majesty's Mails, the office was located in premises which are now occupied by the Canada Café on Main Street. This was thirty years ago—presenting a long record on the part of Mr. Gall.

their delegate, Mrs. Napp, also held a lawn social later in the month.

Lachute members had an encouraging report of their work in connection with Lachute Fair, also a fine report of the Convention from Mrs. C. Duncan.

Jerusalem - Bethany's delayed meeting was well attended, and all enjoyed Miss Hilda Hume's paper on Canadian Industries. They also held their June meeting, unavoidably delayed, at Miss Walker's home and heard a very interesting report of Convention doings.

It was not however until 1906 that he was appointed assistant postmaster to his father. Mr. Gall, incidentally, has given much time and effort in community interests; he has served 12 years in the Town Council, and 2 years as Mayor.

The 84 years, since 1851 when his ancestors first entered the business, constitute a long and most remarkable record, during which the Lachute post office has been operated by one family from generation to generation. This is probably unique in family annals.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY MEDAL PRESENTED

BRAVERY RECALLED IN MISHAP LAST WINTER

(By Our St. Andrews Correspondent)

On Tuesday of last week, St. Andrews gathered in the Town Hall to express its appreciation of the courage and gallantry displayed by Mr. René Giroux in rescuing the life of little Wilfred Bedard, who had broken through the ice of the North River, on March 13th, last. Mr. Giroux, seeing the lad clinging to the edge of the ice, ran out over the thin ice covering the rapids immediately below the bridge, and, standing, at the edge of the hole, pulled the boy to safety.

The meeting was presided over by the genial Mayor of St. Andrews, Mr. W. J. Pitcairn. Rev. Father Dulude presented the Royal Humane Society medal to Mr. Giroux, accompanying the presentation with an address, in which praise of Mr. Giroux's courage was happily blended with words extolling the value of sacrifice.

Master Wilfred Bedard presented his rescuer with a fine Crucifix, at the same time expressing his gratitude. Mr. Gilbert Hamilton presented Mrs. Giroux with a beautiful bouquet of flowers. Mr. Giroux thanked his friends in English and in French. Short addresses of appreciation were also given by Rev. Dean Booy, Rev. Mr. J. Macaskill, Dr. B. N. Wales, Mr. H. Davis and others. After singing the National Anthem in English and French the meeting concluded.

TWO BROTHERS PASSED WITHIN SHORT TIME

FUNERAL OF LATE ROBT. CLELAND

The death of Mr. Robert Cleland, which occurred on Friday last, at the age of 76 years, followed closely upon the passing of his brother William just seven weeks ago. Born in the Parish of St. Jerusalem, he had been engaged in farming until twelve years ago. He then moved into Lachute, where he has been an honored and respected member of the community.

The funeral was held on Sunday last from his residence on Foundry Street, service being conducted by the Rev. Dr. Ballyntyne, of St. Andrews East. He leaves to mourn his loss a beloved wife and only sister, Mrs. T. J. Smith, of Aurora, who is the last member of the Cleland family.

The remains were interred in Lachute Cemetery, followed by a large number of relatives and old-time friends.

ACTIVITIES OF COUNTY WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

Chatham Branch had for their roll call "A Cooling Beverage." Convention Report was given by a delegate from the branch and Current Events were given by Mrs. A. Campbell.

Frontier Branch heard very interesting reports from their two delegates, Mrs. Maclean and Mrs. Murdoch, also a report of the Executive doings at Macdonald College from the County President, Mrs. Kuhring, who was present and told also of the Adult Education Group meeting after the W. I. Convention closed. Mr. Kuhring gave a talk on First Aid and Artificial Respiration in drowning accidents, illustrating his talk by showing how patients were restored, using a boy as the supposed patient. Thirteen members and sixteen visitors enjoyed this meeting.

MAIN ST. IMPROVEMENTS PASSED BY TOWN

EXPECTED TO COMMENCE NEXT WEEK

At a public meeting in the Auditorium on Monday evening, called for the purpose of discussing the most effective manner of handling the Main Street improvements, the consensus of opinion was in favor of paving from curb to curb. In accordance with this wish the Council passed a resolution, also relieving the Roads Department of any responsibility for damage or claim arising during and after the paving of the street within the town's property. The Provincial Department has instructions to proceed, and it is fully expected work will now be rushed through to completion.

CLUB HOUSE SUGGESTED FOR LAKE LOUISA

FISH AND GAME CLUB OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

A meeting of the Lake Louisa Fish and Game Club was held recently, when various problems pertaining to the welfare of the Lake and summer residents were discussed. Former officers were re-elected, as follows: Wm. Deacon, President; T. Furlong, Vice-President; R. A. Giles, Sec.-Treasurer.

It was decided that the Annual Regatta would be held on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 3rd. It was also proposed to build a Club House, where both young and old can gather to enjoy themselves during the season. A committee was nominated to consider the best way of handling this project.

Already a large number have joined this Club, but more members are needed in order that success may be assured to the work of the organization. The membership fee is $2.00; cards may be secured from the secretary, R. A. Giles.

STRANGE LIGHTS

Flitting, flitting here and there,
Little points of light,
Piercing through the deep, deep dark
Of the summer night.

Up and down, in and out
Over hill and dell—
Betty wonders what they are,
Can dear mother tell?

Little tiny moths that fly,
Underneath their wings,
Are their shining sides that gleam

As the cricket sings.

As they lift each tiny wing
Up and up so high—
Mother says, "Why Betty dear,
That's a firefly!"

WHEN THE MOON WAS FULL

"Oh!" cried Betty in alarm at the thought that perhaps Queen Bluebell would have to do without a crown for the next month. "Oh! please hurry and do not punish Queen Bluebell for what has been all my fault!"

The Judge looked at her with kind eyes. "You are very brave my child to make a statement like that in a courtroom. You do not know just what sort of punishment it might bring. But come inside and take your place in the witness box."

The witness box was a very pleasant place, but being so close to all those Moon Fairies made Betty feel very warm. So warm that she felt quite faint for a moment and caught hold of the desk in front of her to steady herself. Her weight was too much for the frail piece of furniture. It commenced to topple over. "There!" cried Haughty Head, hoping to turn this accident to his advantage. "see that! Everything that she touches she breaks!"

Betty felt his words were quite true. First she had broken Queen Bluebell's crown; Mid-night had exploded because of her stumble; and now she had almost broken the courtroom desk. Yet she had not meant to do any of those things; life surely was a strange tangle.

Someone was arguing with the guard at the door of the inner court. Betty saw that it was Croaker, the Mischief-Maker. "Oh, let him come in" she said, "I am not afraid of him". ("Look at him quickly then turn away with contempt!" Sharp Voice had said, and Betty had obeyed her and felt quite light hearted about it. Croaker would have no more fears for her now.)

Croaker looked quite cross when he heard Betty and slunk into a corner of the inner court when the guard admitted him. He felt that all his work had been undone if Betty was not going to be afraid of him, and stood anxiously listening to the Judge questioning her.

"Please dear, kind Judge Will you not let me tell you all about it in my own way? I will tell only the truth. Please do, dear sir. It will save so much time. Perhaps then Queen Bluebell will get her crown. I want her to have it. Oh, I want her to have it."

It was quite doubtful if Betty would have had her way if the voice of a sentinel outside the door had not been heard calling. "Make haste, the shadows are lengthening, the shadows are lengthening!"

"Speak quickly then, Little Betty" said the Judge, and sat down on a seat shaped like a toad-stool, thickly coated with gold.

Betty obeyed, and told how she had thrown the cushion out of the hammock without looking where it was going and without any idea of hurting anyone or breaking anything; that she did not know anyone was near; that it was not Queen Bluebell's fault but hers, and she thought that Queen Bluebell should be given a new crown—at once, before the moon got too dark.

Croaker mumbled remarks all the time she was talking, until the Judge said quite sternly, "Kick that fellow outside and do not let him enter again. How can we decide, with him chattering all the time." He had not finished speaking before a troupe of moon fairies had seized Croaker and hustled him outside with gleeful chuckles. They all hated Croaker and were delighted to have an opportunity to humble him.

When he had gone and silence was restored once more, the Judge continued—"You have all heard Little Betty's tale. How many of you are willing to accept it and give Queen Bluebell another crown at once?"

"We are! we are!" all the little Moon Fairies shouted. "On condition", added Haughty Head, "that Betty fills Mid-night with air for us once more." "I will, oh I will," Betty exclaimed eagerly in her desire to help Queen Bluebell. "Just give me a pump and I will pump and pump until he is stuffed once more."—The Judge replied, "Call the Court Jeweller at once."

In a few moments a tiny man robed in a jewelled gown came in bearing what Betty thought was the most wonderful crown she had ever seen, on a tiny golden tray. Bowing low before Queen Bluebell he presented it to her. "But!" she stammered, "You were not asked to make it for me. How does it come that you have one all ready?"

"If it please Your Majesty, and Your Honor too," said the Court Jeweller, bowing before the Judge also, "I felt that Queen Bluebell had not been to blame and had a crown gotten ready for her. I hope that it fits." It did, and was presented to her with great pomp and ceremony, while outside the dark shadows grew longer and longer. "Hurry the Queen's coach," cried Sharp Tongue, "so that we may get back to earth before the dewdrops dry up."

Almost before Betty could count ten, the Queen's Lemon Lily coach was at the door and she was being lifted into it, this time beside the Queen. "Oh!" Betty protested, "I cannot go until I have stuffed Midnight with air."

"Take this golden blow-pipe between your lips, and by the

SWARMS OF LOCUSTS STOP AFRICAN TRAINS

In South Africa, railways have to contend with locusts; in Canada they have snowstorms.

A recent visitor to Saint John, N.B., who arrived in that city over Canadian National Railways from Halifax, N. S., and who has represented his company for the past two years in South Africa, states he was once on a train which was held up by locusts which covered the tracks to a depth of three or more feet in places. The wheels of the locomotive could make no headway, slipping on the rails which were covered with the locusts. At times, he remarked, the sun is blotted out by the clouds of locusts in flight and they do great damage to agriculture, stripping every bit of vegetation for miles. Methods adopted to combat locusts included digging great trenches, as in Biblical days, when the locusts were in the younger or jumper stage, millions of the locusts hopping into the huge ditches where they were buried by crews of men. Locusts in the flying stage are sprayed with a strong arsenic preparation from airplanes. The natives, however, have no objection to the locust, as they are very fond of them as an article of food.

Bicycles manufactured in Canada during 1934 numbered 32,674, worth $651,620 at factory prices. There were 40,000 sold during the year, which included about 7,400 imports.

time we reach the earth Mid-night will be filled with air again. Hurry, child, I have such a wonderful gift for you that I can scarcely wait to give it to you." Betty took the honey-tasting blow-pipe between her lips and blew into it as they dropped down, down towards the earth. Suddenly Sharp Tongue seized the blow-pipe, doubled the end of it swiftly and glued it with golden elastic "Midnight is stuffed once more, Little Betty, and Queen Bluebell has her crown and you are free to go to your Aunt—who is calling you."

"Betty, Betty, where are you, child. You should not have stayed out so late." Her Auntie May's voice came to Betty as from a great distance as she struggled to open her eyes wide enough to see through the darkness. The moon was no longer full and Betty wondered how she came to be sitting on the ground by the old stump, also what Auntie May was doing there. Without giving her a chance to ask questions, Auntie May hurried her into the house, gave her a hot drink and put her to bed, and all in a moment Betty had drifted off into dreamland.

As she lay in bed next morning, puzzling her head about her strange experience, her father called her to come into mother's room, he had something to show her. Betty kicked off the covers and ran, to find him bending over a tiny, daintily wrapped bundle that was lying beside her mother. "See Betty!" her father said, "what the fairies brought you. A dear little baby sister."

Betty dropped to her knees beside the bed and laid her lips on the tiny rosebud fingers. "Queen Bluebell's gift, Queen Bluebell's gift," she murmured. Her mother heard the rapturous words, and being an understanding mother, she asked no questions, just smiled happily at her little girl's pleasure. Betty had been wanting a baby sister for so long.

"What would you like to call her, darling?" she asked. "Queen Bluebell!" said Betty at once. Her daddy laughed at the idea but mother replied, "I have always liked Queenie for a name; and she has such dear blue eyes that I am sure Bluebell will just suit her for a second name." So Little Betty had to be satisfied with that.

The moment the proprietor begins to make any use of his land he becomes liable to pay rates. He cannot even put his building site to the very poor use of enclosing it with a board-fence for advertisements, without becoming liable to assessment. He cannot even grow the poorest crop or build the veriest shack, without incurring the penalty of having to pay higher rates. If he works his hitherto unused land, in good heart, cultivates it highly, fences and drains it well, erects good buildings; if he covers his town lot with a block of well-planned offices or flats with modern improvements, the inaudible bidding of the hypothetical tenant forces up his assessment, and he has to begin to pay heavy rates—just because he has now done something to keep the people off those rates.

Small holdings and better cottages are admittedly the two most crying needs of our agricultural districts, if the land is to be better cultivated and the people kept in our villages. Yet this is the kind of treatment which is meted out to those who till the one and build the other.

A young married man builds or buys a house. In later years, as his boys and girls grow up, he realizes the need of more bedrooms; he adds a story. He builds a bathroom, throws out a conservatory. He has spent his own money on his own house, and perhaps he has borrowed it to do all this, but he on March 14th. last, two young boys, no doubt disregarding parental warnings, ventured too far on the ice of the North River, and had it not been for the presence of mind shown by one of St. Andrews' young men crossing the bridge at the time, both would have been drowned.

The only person to see these two boys in their precarious plight was René Giroux, stepson of John Haspeck, baker of St. Andrews East.

René fully demonstrated the saying familiar to English people the world over, "Actions speak louder than words." He immediately went on the ice at the risk of his life, absolutely unaided—and it is well known that the spring current at this point is a veritable rapid. He managed to save young Bedard, and young Beaulieu, who was hanging on to his classmate, was forced to relinquish his hold and the current drew him under the ice. To date no trace has been found of his remains.

What is everybody's business is nobody's business, is a saying applicable to such episodes, and in all probability, René Giroux's identity would have been overlooked. However, St. Andrews E. some years ago recognized the heroism of Mr. Percy Hamilton in connection with a Rivière Rouge incident, for which he received a parchment certificate, today the pride of the Hamilton fireside. Had it not been for Percy Hamilton's persistency in bringing Girreally requires these improvements for the ordinary comfort of his family, incidentally giving useful employment to labor in attempts to conform to a standard of health, decency and culture. These are not crimes either in moral or law. But they are punished by an annual increase of taxes on improvements.

I read a story some years ago of a widow in a city, who bought a small business and spent most of her savings in so doing. This business was carried on in the parlor window of a working-man's house on a poorly lighted street. She paid a local shop-fitter to put in a modern shop front. A dark corner was now better lighted, at the cost of the widow's increased light bill. The local authority, thanklessly but in accordance with the law, increased her assessments and her rates went up, costing her $10.00 a year extra. For which of her good deeds was the self-respecting and supporting lady stoned—who was trying to keep herself of the town.

Of course if the improver, on experience of treatment which our rating system accords him, objects strongly enough, he can escape the penalty by removing the traces of the crime. If the widow had removed the shop front and restored the small inconvenient window, she might after some trouble have obtained the reduction of her assessment.

The destructive effects of taxation upon industry are, for obvious reasons, seldom shown in such a way as above quoted; the analogy is not so much with the windows that were blocked up to avoid the window tax as with the windows that were never made at all. Like mice in the pantry, bad taxes spoil more than they eat; prevent more than they destroy. They serve as preventive checks to industry and development. Unfortunately this fact disguises the real effect of our rates for it is impossible to give statistics of houses that would have been built if we had not discouraged the building, or of the improvements that would have been made but for the threat of a punitive increase of rating. Yet there can be no question as to the broad facts.

(To my readers I would say that many of the above deductions should be in quotation)

FULLY DEMONSTRATED IN ST. ANDREWS EAST
RECOGNITION OF BRAVERY

(Contributed)

On Tuesday, July 16th., the Town Hall of St. Andrews East could not accommodate the French and English speaking Canadians desirous of paying their respects to this young man.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor William Pitcairn who, in well chosen words, explained the object of the meeting, to present a Bronze Medal, with Bar for Bravery, from the Royal Canadian Humane Society to René Giroux for rushing to the rescue of two young boys on the North River last March.

The following gentlemen, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. René Giroux, were on the platform: Rev. Father Dulude, who gave a splendid address and pinned the Society Medal on the hero's breast; Dr. B. N. Wales, well-known historian and author; A. Euclide Ladouceur, ex-Mayor and County Warden; Rev. Mr. Booy, M.A., of Christ Church, St. Andrews East; and Horace Davis, for many years Commodore of St. Andrews Motor and Boating Club, who spoke in French and English.

An incident, most pathetic to many, was the presentation by little Bedard of a Crucifix to the man who had saved his life.

The guest of the evening was perfectly helpless with regard to speech, as the demonstration was volcanic in showing appreciation of his sterling qualities. "For he's a jolly good fellow," "Il a gagné ses Epauettes", "O Canada", and "God Save the King", terminated another Nite of Nites in Dear Old St. Andrews East.

SEIGNORY CLUB ANNOUNCES ANNUAL HORSE SHOW

THREE AGRICULTURAL
CLASSES FOR DISTRICT
EXHIBITORS

Over 50 classes for practically every kind of horseflesh have been announced for the fourth annual Horse Show of the Seignory Club, to be held on the new show grounds at Montebello, August 15-18. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police will perform their striking musical ride, His Excellency the Governor General has extended his patronage, several new trophies have been presented, and a smart turnout of Canadian and American spectators is anticipated.

There will be three agricultural classes for exhibitors living in the Seignory Club district; one for a single mare or gelding, the other two for teams shown before an appropriate vehicle. The juniors have three events, two equestrian classes open to horses and ponies for under 12 years and between 12 and 18, and one knock-down-and-out stake.

The saddle classes are divided into six events. Harness classes are twelve in number. Hunter and performance classes will be ridden over six different courses in the ring, and are twenty in number.

Flat races will be staged for local farmer entries, for ladies, for a special sweepstake, and for a trophy. Steeplechases will be run for the historic Hendrie Trophy, formerly competed for at Bluebonnets, and dating back to Goodwood in 1859, and for a sweepstake. Trotting and pacing races will be held on Sunday. Hunter field trials are a new and exciting element that should be very popular.

A Few Words to You About the C.N.R.

During 1934 the average number of persons employed by Canadian National Railways was 74,774, and the wages paid them came to almost one hundred million dollars. This represented, both as to number employed and amount of payroll, an advance over 1933, and practically the whole increase in personnel was due to re-employment of those whose services had previously been dispensed with owing to lack of business.

The average mileage of road operated in 1934 was 23,676 miles, making Canadian National Railways the largest single railway system in the Western Hemisphere.

In 1934 the total freight transported by Canadian National Railways amounted to 44,719,477 tons, an increase of eighteen per cent over the previous year. The average haul of freight was 326 miles. The value of this freight is not ascertainable, but it must run into many hundreds of millions of dollars, and comprising all kinds of necessities and luxuries, contributed to the welfare and happiness of every man, woman and child in the Dominion.

Canadian National Railways carried over 10,000,000 passengers during 1934. This was also an increase over 1933. These paid in fares $16,331,299, or an average of $1.62 per passenger with an average journey of seventy-one and three-quarter miles.

These figures, without embellishment or amplification, show the vastness of the public services rendered by Canadian National Railways. The system is conducted on an economical scale as is consistent with the highest standards of railway operation. The improvement in business in 1934 over the previous year enabled more people to be employed... more wages to be paid... more service to be rendered. Also, more money was available to be spent among Canadian producers and Canadian merchants.

A continuation of this improvement in our business will carry on and enlarge these good results... the whole country will benefit. This year Canadian National Railways is co-operating in an extensive way in the national movement to diminish unemployment and to restore industrial activity... to help banish the depression, and bring better times for everyone.

Canadian National Railways feels justified in asking for your co-operation. A greater use by Canadian citizens of the facilities offered by this system—transportation, express, telegraphs, hotels—will materially help not only us, but all Canada... and you will receive full value for every dollar spent.

During the present Summer season the C.N.R. is providing special fares and excursions between points throughout Canada. These are exceptional travel bargains. The nearest C.N.R. agent will be glad to give full particulars.

POLITICAL LANDSLIDE IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Fast on the heels of a decisive Liberal victory in New Brunswick, the complete collapse of Conservatives in Prince Edward Island this week stirs optimism in supporters of Mackenzie King in Federal affairs—considering these trends to indicate a sure upturn in the fortunes of the party.

The Liberal conquest in P. E. I. was literally unanimous. Thirty seats were taken and the opposition completely obliterated. The Liberals thus have an "emphatic mandate", but without an opposition they will miss lots of fun in their deliberations and the triumph must lose something of its savor.

The forecast of Federal voting, from indications of these recent elections, remains to be verified; but there are other considerations, and a new party, not to be overlooked. Good Liberals should hesitate to take these signs as unquestioned approval of their policies. The distress of the times is at the root of prevalent discontent, and in this era human nature turns automatically agin' the government, despite the merits of its personnel.

HON. T. D. BOUCHARD TAKES STAND TO BATTLE "TRUSTS"

A fighting attack against "frantic speculation at the expense of the people" by public utilities and industry, and the avowal that he had entered the Liberal Cabinet of Premier L. A. Taschereau to continue a life-long battle to force trusts to "change their tactics and content themselves with reasonable profits," featured an address by Hon. T. D. Bouchard, newly-appointed Minister of Municipal Affairs, Trade and Commerce in the Quebec Government, at a Liberal rally held in St. John's, Que.

Charges of opponents of the Taschereau Government that the Liberal regime was one protecting the trusts, were refuted by the new Minister. "There is only one Government which is facing the trusts in this province and which will dominate them if they do not change their tactics and content themselves with reasonable profits," he said. "It is that Government which has said to the electricity companies by recent legislation that if rates to consumers are not reduced when evidence shows that they are too high, Quebec will develop its own power to protect the people."

Speaking of "Reforms," Mr. Bouchard asserted—"They are not made in a day. Good, sound legislation cannot be created in a year, nor is it built up by the distribution of political pamphlets at political meetings. Out of experience built up through the years a parliament acquires experience, and builds up a country sanely and soundly. Social and economic legislation adopted in Quebec within recent years proves this."

Still at Same Fight

Hon. Mr. Bouchard outlined at length his efforts for upwards of 30 years—since 1905—to obtain municipalization of electricity and lower electricity rates in Quebec. Absolute control by private companies of the hydraulic power resources of the province was disastrous for Quebec, the Minister asserted. Speculation on the natural resources of the province resulted, trusts came into being and "the consumers suffered."

He had been criticized, he said, for accepting a Taschereau Cabinet post—"but to those who look for evil where it does not exist, who seek to destroy those who do not hold their own viewpoints, I will say that if Bouchard had wanted to be minister 15 years ago he could have had the position, but he chose to serve the people of his province otherwise. The position I have now accepted gives me the opportunity to continue the fight I began years ago, serving citizens of both urban and rural Quebec."

During the recent session of the provincial Legislature, he continued, Quebec had stepped to the fore with legislation in regard to electricity. First an independent commission had been created to hear municipalities' complaints as to electricity rates and decree changes if necessary, and to give most complete municipalization rights to municipalities if the majority of their ratepayers demand them. Then, to the Quebec Streams Commission, powers tantamount to those held by Ontario's Hydro Commission had mission being permitted to undertake development of power and its sale to municipalities on a wholesale basis for retail distribution. Thirdly, power to extend electricity to rural areas, the Government extending transmission line grants to feed farming areas in the provinces was also adopted.

Bogey of Speculation

No government, said Hon. Mr. Bouchard, could check the crisis or solve the unemployment problem unless it went at it in a direct manner—"by applying to industry, to speculating financial houses, to banks, the same recipe I asked the Quebec Government to apply to power companies." He had not joined the Taschereau Government, he said, "to deny my work of the past 30 years," but to continue it on behalf of his fellow-citizens. No government—be it Liberal or Conservative—could check the crisis and unemployment just so long as "speculation continues rampant, just so long as workers and farmers have to slave to pay dividends on capital, just so long as fabulous salaries are paid to individuals who do not earn them."

Today, he averred, "we have the shameful spectacle of Canada using its tariff to prevent people from buying things they need at reasonable prices, and forcing them to buy from trusts in Canada, the prices of which are from 40 to 50 per cent higher. I remember when manufacturers were content to earn a profit of 5 per cent, but today they are amassing as high as 50 per cent. This is what we are fighting; are you with us?"

He concluded with an appeal to the people of Quebec to "back us in our battle on your behalf."

TARIFFS: The Stevens' party proposes to maintain the tariff to protect Canadian industrial workers and farmers from unfair competition in countries where the standards of living are lower than in Canada. However it promises lower agricultural implement duties and lower duties on all classes of primary textiles. The C.C.F. scores both older parties, one for offering tariffs as a cure-all which failed, the other from vainly promising to lower tariffs. The C.C.F. does not in this manifesto make any promises one way or the other.

CONCENTRATION OF WEALTH: The C.C.F. manifesto says "the essential task before us is to oust this arbitrary irresponsible plutocracy from power." The Stevens program proposes raising the taxation on higher incomes.

THE FARMER: Mr. Stevens would create a Dominion Agricultural Board for the Control and marketing under a democratic scheme of all agricultural products, the idea being to enable the farmer to successfully withstand the encroachments and competition of the large organized secondary interests. The C.C.F. says "the farmer must be guaranteed an adequate minimum income as the first charge on his production."

THE CONSTITUTION: The C.C.F. says the amendment of the B.N.A. act is urgently necessary so as to give the national government adequate powers to deal effectively with economic problems which are essentially national in scope. The Stevens program calls first for full use of federal powers now existing before attempts are made to amend the constitution. Both parties would protect minority rights.

FINANCE: The Stevens party stands for nationalization of the central bank, and an investigation into social credit and other monetary proposals. The C.C.F. would socialize our banking and financial machinery, presumably the central bank along with the chartered banks and other institutions. The latter adds "we cannot allow ourselves forever to be held in the gutter by these so-called sacred obligations to bondholders."

SOCIAL LEGISLATION: The C. C. F. stresses social insurance. Both advocate extension of existing labour legislation.

ATTITUDE TO OTHER PARTIES: The Stevens platform asserts that the "shibboleths and incantations of the old political parties will not rectify faulty engineering". It does not mention C.C.F. The latter's manifesto scores Conservatives and Liberals alike in vigorous language and states that "The Stevens party presents a vote-catching program of superficial reforms."

The C.C.F. program contains a special plank on Peace, which is not mentioned in the Stevens manifesto.

YOUNG MAN BECAME VIOLENT. ARRESTED AT POINTE FORTUNE

Preliminary hearing in the case of John McKinnon, 20 years old, of Pointe Fortune, was held yesterday at L'Orignal. The young man was arrested and lodged in jail last Thursday.

It is alleged that, demented by jealousy, McKinnon attacked another man named McLaughlin of the same village, striking him on the head with a hammer. Later, it is reported, he attempted to burn down the dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith. Mr. Smith aimed at him with a gun or rifle, hitting the man in the hand.

At this juncture, Traffic Constable McClure was summoned to the scene from Hawkesbury; he arrested McKinnon and took him to L'Orignal, where charges were laid against him before the district magistrate.

ONE TENDER FOR BRIDGE

Only one tender was received by the Chatham Municipal Council for construction of the Dalesville bridge. The amount of this bid was $15,000 and was not accepted by the councillors. The bridge, it is noted, requires 6,000 cubic yards of filling at the approaches, on account of straightening the road, and the Council feel that this work should be undertaken by the Provincial Roads Department.

Town Lady Feted at Summer Home

WARM TRIBUTE PAID TO MRS. G. DELORME

The summer cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Delorme at La Baie, near St. Andrews E., was the scene of a celebration in honor of Mrs. Delorme last Wednesday, when some 125 friends gathered together—an assembly which gave marked evidence of her popularity and paid tribute to her reputation for energetic and willing assistance in charitable enterprises around town.

Mr. and Mrs. Delorme played excellent hosts at their camp, "Delormia", which was decorated for the occasion with maple leaves and seasonal flowers. Fuchre occupied the attention of the lady guests during the afternoon, tea and late dinner being served during the course of the festivities. A surprise presentation was made to Mrs. Delorme on behalf of her friends by Mrs. N. Allard and Mrs. I. Gibeau. The gifts comprised a complete copper and silver tea service with a handsome tea wagon, and also boudoir furnishings—tokens of sentiment which touched the hostess most deeply.

The party dispersed at around midnight, after an occasion thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended.

Montreal-Hull Route A "Neglected Highway"

capital which has been allowed to get into such a perfectly disgraceful condition of neglect that the whole of the very considerable through motor traffic between the two cities goes through Ontario. What money has been spent on highways between here and Ottawa—with the exception of a section this side of Lachute—has gone to the expensive Dorion - Rigaud cut-off, an excellent piece of work, but essentially a part of the Ontario highway from Ottawa.

"The Montreal - Hull road has everything to recommend it that a highway should have: beautiful scenery, easy grades, shorter mileage than the Ontario route, an access to Montreal which is far better than the tiresome and dangerous so-called highway along the Lake Shore, and finally an absence of toll-bridges. The latter fact may, however, not be the strongest argument in the eyes of the Government in favour of the all-Quebec route. Altogether it is hard to imagine why the road should have been practically abandoned until now more than half of it is so hopelessly washedboarded and so dusty as to make driving most unpleasant. The small section of really good road on this side of Lachute is too short to induce the through motorist to choose the North Shore road. Ontario highway builders have meantime seen the importance of the Montreal - Ottawa route and are maintaining an excellent road, with the considerable profit that such roads always develop for roadside industries—such as restaurants, tea-rooms and hotels.

"Why should all this be lost to this Province? The Montreal-Ottawa route is admittedly not one of the trunk highways of Quebec, but it is surely too important to be left in its present state of neglect while countless cars—and the money that goes with them—roll back and forth through Ontario."

"In a closer understanding between Britain and the United States we have a perfect solution for the problems of peace and war that beset this distracted world today." —Viscount Hailsham.

Parish Priest, Rev. Father Marsolais, Died Tuesday

News of the death of Rev. Father Marsolais, who for upwards of twelve years so faithfully ministered to the needs of this community as priest of the Parish and Church of Ste-Anastasie, was learned with deep regret by his many friends. He had been in poor health for eight years and became seriously ill some time ago, when he became an inmate of the Hotel Dieu in Montreal. There, despite every care and attention, he passed away on Tuesday night. The funeral is being held at St. Alexis, Que., on Friday at 11 o'clock, (D.S.T.)

Attractions For All in Ottawa Exhibition

BIG ANNUAL EVENT IN CAPITAL, AUG. 19 TO 24

If any section of the community has been overlooked in the plans for the 1935 Ottawa Exhibition, the directors and management do not know about it. The program and features are such as to appeal to young and old, urban and rural residents. During the week of August 19 to 24, six full days and nights, Lansdowne Park doubtless will be the Mecca of thousands from an extended district who will do their part to make a new record for the popular exhibition, the largest, annual one-week exhibition on the continent.

For music lovers there will be Create and his band in two free concerts each day. The great maestro will bring with him the strongest organization of musicians he has ever assembled, and also an outstanding prima donna. One reason for this is that owing to the few bands which have survived the depression he is able to get the very best artists, the great majority having played with him at one time or another.

For those who like thrills, there will be automobile races on the last two days of the week, and horse races for the first four days, as well as sensational and daring feats in the vaudeville program. In the evenings the outstanding offering will be the Revue of Revues, pretty girls with real talent, dainty dances, good comedy, novelty ensembles, elaborate staging and gorgeous gowns. Reminiscent of the New York Hippodrome in its palmy days will be the disappearing water ballet, presented for the first time on an outdoor stage.

Government displays, dog show, pure food show, automobile show, livestock, poultry, pets, baby show, child welfare demonstrations, displays by merchants and manufacturers, hobby show, women's handicrafts, Women's Institute demonstrations, junior agriculture competitions, evening horse shows, a new midway with latest in rides and shows, Highland dancing, sports, and scores of other factors have been combined to make one memorable week.

Prize lists for the various departments, including the dog show, are now available on application.

NOTICE

"Well," replied the other, "not often. She can throw pretty straight for a woman."

A REAL FRIEND

One of my friends is moving to another city and as she is very popular, a great many parties have been given in her honour — so many that she has found it difficult to find time to make the necessary preparations for moving. Another friend who has to do a good deal of official entertaining said to her "I want to do something for you. I don't like parties, but I can sew. Let me come over and help get your own and the children's clothes ready." So she arrived at nine o'clock the next morning and sewed and mended all day. I call that real kindness.

FEEDING THE BABY

When the days are very hot is not time to start giving the baby a new food. According to their schedule it may be time to start but it is wiser to postpone it until the weather moderates. Hot days are trying enough for the baby without adding to their difficulties. When a new food is first given the quantity should be very small. It is best to start with a half-teaspoonful. Certainly it seems like a lot of trouble to cook something and then just to use that small quantity, but it will pay in the end. After the baby has become accustomed to the small quantity then gradually increase the amount until the desired quantity is given. If his majesty, the baby, dislikes the new food, (perhaps he doesn't like the taste or more probably the feel of it), forget all about it for a week or two, then start over again with a half-spoonful. It is much better to do the fussing now, than to try to make a child like a food which he dislikes, later on.

TO SAVE BAKING

The oven should be used as little as possible in the summer as it heats up both the house and the cook. Most of us have families who feel abused if they do not get cake, so let us keep them in good humour and yet do as little as possible. One easy way is to buy sweet crackers such as vanilla, Graham or chocolate wafers and fix them up a little. Marshmallows are useful for this purpose. Put a marshmallow, or if the wafer is small just use a part of one, on a cracker and pop in the oven until the marshmallow is melted and slightly browned. Another way of dressing them up is to put a blob of icing on them or to put them together with some jelly or thick marmalade. Fig bars, cut in strips and iced, are a pleasant change. Sometimes plain cakes may be purchased or cup cakes that taste quite good if they are iced at home. When a cool day comes I like to make an icing that will keep if stored in bottles ready for the hot day or the unexpected company. This recipe is a true and tried friend.

CREODE ICING

2½ cups brown sugar
½ cup corn syrup
2 eggs
¼ cup water
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Combine sugar, syrup and water and cook until it forms a soft ball when dropped in water or to 242 degrees. Pour slowly over beaten egg whites while beating constantly. Add vanilla and beat until almost cold and until it will hold its shape. This icing will keep in a covered jar. If too stiff to use after storing add a little hot water.

SPICED GOOSEBERRIES

7 lbs. gooseberries
4 lbs. sugar
1 pint vinegar
1 tablespoon cloves
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon allspice

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, July 28th., is "Truth."

The Golden Text is — "Thou hast redeemed me, O Lord God of truth."

The following correlative passages are selected from among those comprised in the Lesson-Sermon to be read from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: —

"And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame,

GIVING THE CLASS FAILURE A CHANCE

Almost every school grade will have had a pupil who has registered failure during the past few weeks. These examination failures are problems which often do not terminate with school life, but mark the adult, of which the pupil is the embryo, cluttering society with misfits and inefficient.

It might help to solve these problems if the blame could be laid at the door of those responsible for them. It is to be feared, however, that school life discovers the mistakes too late for cure, since little individual attention is possible under the usual educational routine. The pupil too often continues to miss his grade year after year, until he leaves school with a sense of failure which may easily lay the foundations for the life-long handicap of an inferiority complex.

Intelligent study of the class failure, both at home and in school, will sometimes discover latent possibilities hitherto unsuspected. The child who abominates geography may reveal an intense interest in growing things. If this bent is encouraged, he will soon see for himself the necessity of knowing geography in order that he may know more about the native homes of the plants and flowers he loves. If his bugbear is mathematics, and he has a love for the mechanical, the vital connection between the two will urge him to study the textbook that he may use its abstract calculations in concrete illustrations. If he is fond of indiscriminate reading, his attention may be turned to history and the higher types of literature. If he scribbles or draws, he can be taught by sympathy and gentleness that neither habit will be of any use to him without a solid groundwork in general education. Even the dullard, seemingly impossible of being taught, unless actually an idiot, has some open sesame to mental development, and this should be carefully watched for and developed until work along these lines becomes a habit, and instead of a failure, there is a person capable of doing one thing well, and possessed of the self-respect which results from such efficiency.

The Week's Fashion News

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman
By the Montreal "FASHION SCRIBE"

Fashion Scribe has a nose for news, and she is right on the spot where fashion events are making people sit up and take notice. Keep a sharp eye on her sayings . . . and you'll be as well posted as the Montreal folks about the latest styles there, and the newest doo-dads for the home.

What do Montreal Store Windows Say This Week?

Oh lady, lady, everything is linen suits and white coats and dresses. One window card says of them, "They're practically perfect and perfectly practical." Printed dresses don't show wrinkles easily, and are style news especially when in a rich, deep shade of red called Dubonnet, with white. Printed chiffons are "delightfully cool and pleasantly priced," says Morgan's. Many a window shows shirtwaist dresses. And there are adorable "Shirley Temple" dresses for children, just like those the movie starlet wears. One of these has a bar of music in colour near the hem. Another has a scattering of a, b, c's in childish handwriting all over the dress.

The swim suits for grown-ups often have huge flower designs splashed on them, and are called Tahitian prints. A beach window at Eaton's that drew throngs had white-capped waves actually painted on the glass front, and native Tahitian girl outfits displayed, curious with their "shredded wheat" skirts and woven grass brassiere tops. The Tahitian influence on fashions is important. Simpson's Beach Club window showed shorts with halter necklines sometimes ending in sailor collars, and wool suits in bright shades with complicated arrangements of straps, or the so-popular halter neckline.

What is New in "Wife-Savers?" — Handy little tongs to clasp frying doughnuts or frozen ice-cubes around their middles. Kitchen knives with rabbit-y teeth that slice potatoes quickly into thin wisps for fried chips" (these slicers are also fine for scaling fish). A new steel wool pad on a convenient handle makes short work of cleaning pans. And each of these household helps costs no more than three ice-cream cones.

What are Montreal Women Knitting? Boucle yarns are extra popular. And new unbleached cotton "string" yarns. Of the latter you can make a knitted suit for 75c, believe it or not. One smart knitter told me it took five skeins, 15c a

SLOVENLY ENGLISH

Anyone who is called upon to speak in public should try to avoid slovenly pronunciation. Go over your words with a critical ear so that you will not offend your listener's ears. Here are a few of the words we heard a woman speaker use, a woman who fills a high position which should call for education and culture. She pronounced executive as executive; she said literchoor and jogerphy; spoke of Tronta, and treasurer lost a syllable and became treasurer. Her 'u's were uniformly bad and ever so often did we hear Chewsdays. Her whole report seemed to consist of things that happened on a Chewsdays. Then of course there was the constitoon. Some speakers do not seem to know that our language has the letter 'u'. In concluding her remarks she asked for koperation. At least that is what it sounded like. Enough attention is not paid to enunciation in schools and too many teachers themselves enunciate poorly. Speech is a matter of ear and if we hear poor speech that is what we are apt to use. Canadian accents, with the exception of the Maritimes, is inclined to be flat and it seems too bad to mar it still more with slovenly enunciation.

His call on the son was a matter of less than a minute on the 15th inst., and 2 minutes on the 16th; this lapse of time showed considerable improvement in Ward's condition. The father's surprise to learn the respect and love of the citizens for W. A. (as the son is called by the citizens of Wetaskiwin) was really pathetic, and Mr. MacAllister expresses grateful thanks for the wholehearted good wishes of the people of Wetaskiwin for Ward's speedy recovery.

First Gliders in Mexico

Gliders were used by the Aztecs in Mexico 500 years ago, according to Prof. M. Tenenbaum, the Polish archaeologist, who has been exhibiting his proof before scientists in Madrid, Spain. It is an engraved stone which he found in his nine years of research among the ruins of the empire destroyed by the conquering Cortez. It shows what a Franciscan missionary described as "an ingenious application having widespread wings fabricated from the stork's feathers." The Aztecs worshiped birds, and King Nezahualcoyotl founded a school of aviation that his people might become more like their gods. He himself used to glide from the heights of the mountains into the deep valleys. His subjects wore goggles not unlike those of today.
