From Vancouver to Quebec--Visits Home on Bicycle

FRENCH-CANADIAN LEFT WITH 50c. IN POCKET

PASSED THROUGH LACHUTE

Passing through this town last Thursday a sun-tanned French-Canadian, Ernest Marcoux, 33, leaned his bicycle on the hitching post long enough to pay his respects to The Watchman. It was his umpteenth stop in a 5,000 mile bicycle trek from Vancouver to Quebec City, on which he embarked last April with a cash capital of fifty cents. With a cleaning and pressing outfit on his carrier, Marcoux has worked his way across the continent begging no aid or assistance. He has viewed all kinds of scenery and bucked all sorts of weather.

The intrepid cyclist came east by the all Canadian route. From Cascades to Rossland in the Rockies, he pushed his wheel through 30 miles of snow, which reached a depth of three feet at its worst. At Gull Lake, Saskatchewan, he ran into a first-rate sand storm which held up all traffic including Marcoux and his diminutive vehicle. Between Moose Jaw and Regina he met gales and hail storms, but the worst road in his itinerary turned up in the region of Dryden and Dinarwic. Here for 8 miles he plowed through the bush on a mud trail over which caterpillar tractors were hauling cars in distress.

Crossing a railway bridge at Nipigon he struck a trailless country and hiked every foot of 400 miles through three railway divisions, from Schreiber to Cartier, Ont. At Amyot he thought he had struck the hottest place on the continent, where sand flies, black flies and mosquitoes were thick; where folks were oiled from head to foot in pungent greases all day and swarmed in mosquito netting at night.

Village of St. Hermas Observed 100th Anniversary

HELD MASS, BANQUET AND ENTERTAINMENT

The village of St. Hermas celebrated the hundredth anniversary of its founding with a High Mass, a banquet and an entertainment last Sunday.

Mass was celebrated in the village church, which was erected in 1850, replacing one which stood during the rebellion of 1837. The celebrant was the present parish priest, Rev. W. Leonard.

Following the religious ceremony, a banquet was held, at which village residents and visitors were guests of the municipality.

During the banquet, presided over by Mayor Cyr of St. Hermas, Urgel Demers, a former parish priest, now of Ste. Rose, Senator Arthur Sauvé, Ligouri Lacombe, M.L.A., Hon. Paul Sauvé, M.L.A., and Dr. Anatole Payer, coroner of the district of Two Mountains, were the speakers.

The first parish priest of St. Hermas was Rev. L. S. F. Bellet, who remained from 1837 to 1843. The present curé is the eighteenth, having been appointed in 1934.

The present mayor, Mr. Cyr, is the twentieth, in a municipality which has not changed its system of administration since 1837.

Oldest resident of the village is Charles Lalande, who is 91 years of age. The house where he was born and that of Arthur Daoust, which dates back one hundred years, are the oldest in the parish.

A blacksmith first thinks of the shape he wants the iron to be. He then works up some heat about it and proceeds to hammer the raw material into shape. It's something like that in building a life.

Lake Sir John Bridge to be Rebuilt Immediately

PROVINCE TO BEAR MAJOR COST

Mr. Geo. Héon was officially informed today by the Minister of Roads that the Sir John Lake bridge, which has been a source of danger for many years, and for which a new structure has long been promised, will be immediately rebuilt at a cost of $5,000. The municipalities of Gore and St. Jerusalem will contribute $600, respectively, the Provincial Government to provide the balance of $3,800 to make up the estimated cost. Instructions have been issued for immediate commencement of the work.

Councillors Reiterate Plea for New Highway Bridge Over the North River

AFFAIRS BEFORE MONTHLY MEETING, PARISH OF ST. JERUSALEM

The regular meeting of St. Jerusalem Parish Council was held in the Court House at Lachute on Monday afternoon. Mayor J. E. Walker presided, in the presence of Councillors J. S. Pollock, L. Boyd, S. Wilson, Jas. Clark, Alex. Doig, L. J. Boa and Secretary J. W. Gall.

Results of the recent parish election were reported, these and the minutes of previous meeting being duly adopted.

It was moved by Councillor Pollock, seconded by Councillor Wilson, that Inspector Fred Desjardins be instructed to have the montée fence repaired on the Vide Sac road.

A resolution that the Council petition Quebec Government to build a bridge over the North River to replace White's Bridge, was moved by Councillor Pollock and seconded by Councillor Wilson.

It was instructed that Z. N. Plouffe, superintendent, be notified to look after the water course requested by Wm. McFarlane and others, and also that Mr. Plouffe be ordered to attend to removal of noxious weeds within areas of the parish.

The secretary received instructions to communicate with Mr. Bourgeault, roads engineer, concerning the cutting of brush and weeds on improved roads, from the ditch to the fence.

A number of accounts were presented and payment authorized.

Hit-and-Run Driver in Accident at St. Jerome

Struck by an automobile which sped on after the accident, Gedeon Lavictoire, 45, of St. Jerome, suffered a fracture of the skull Monday morning on the highway one mile south of the town. He was treated by Dr. G. Latour, who found him in a serious condition. The victim was later removed to the St. Luke Hospital, Montreal.

Provincial traffic police were notified of the accident and opened an investigation. It was reported that they had not succeeded in tracing the automobile.

New Brownsburg Theatre to be Called "Capitol"

After a "referendum" taken among the residents of Brownsburg, it has been decided by the management that their new motion picture will be known as the Capitol—a name favored among a good percentage of the voters. Announcement of the opening will be made shortly.

200 Covering Yacht Races -- Masterpieces of Confusion

L. S. Shapiro, in "Lights and Shadows of Manhattan", regular column of the Montreal Gazette, remarks that about 200 newspapermen have been covering the yacht races at Newport but not more than six of them realize that a spinnaker has nothing to do with a healthful garden vegetable. Some of the stories are masterpieces of confusion, he adds.

SUBSIDIES AND MOVES FOR REHABILITATION OF CANADIAN YOUTH, COMPARED WITH THE U.S.

"The Ottawa Spotlight" By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 3rd.—In a modest, experimental way, the Canadian government is attempting to cope with the tragic problem of unemployed youth.

Many observers think this is the most deplorable after-effect of the depression. No less than 200,000 young people came to the age of responsibility during the depression era without finding steady work. They left school ambitious to find an interesting, important part in the world of activity, and found nothing. Many of them married without ever having had even a week's employment, and went on city or other municipality relief.

Dr. J. R. Brais Replaced as Coroner for Terrebonne

It was announced recently that Dr. J. G. Latour, of St. Jerome, had been appointed coroner for the district of Terrebonne, replacing Dr. J. R. Brais, who has held the position for several years.

Each living creature is supposed to have some purpose in nature's plan, but the road hog must have been a zoological error.

Though the improvement in business in the past two or three years has absorbed a fair percentage of these young people, there are still large numbers idle. Some of them only need the offer of a job to get back on their feet. Others have become 'soured' and slackened through years of enforced idleness, and need a course in training and general rehabilitation.

Last session the Dominion Government voted a million dollars as a start toward meeting this problem. Hard times were pleaded by the treasury board when this item was originally considered. The Youth Employment Committee originally wanted $7,000,000 spent on restoring Canada's young people to self-respect and steady employment. Their estimates were returned and pared down to $4,000,000. The Minister of

Routine Town Expenditures Lower Than Preceding Years

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING LAST EVENING

The regular meeting of Lachute Town Council was held in the Town Hall last evening, presided over by Mayor A. Rodrigue, with Aldermen O. Laurin, F. Deslauriers, W. J. Deacon, J. Speight, Jas. MacGibbon, K. McQuat and Secretary G. Filion present.

On motion of Ald. Laurin, seconded by Ald. Deacon, Mayor Jas. MacGibbon was re-elected for the ensuing three months.

It was moved by Ald. Laurin, seconded by Ald. McQuat, that the British American Oil Company be granted permit to install a motor and new pump house 10' x 12', and also a warehouse 36' x 16', which will be iron-clad.

Ald. MacGibbon reported that the regular routine expenditures, outside the cost of new waterworks extension, were less than in several years previous, and on motion of Ald. Laurin, seconded by Ald. Speight, the accounts presented were duly passed.

Ald. K. McQuat drew attention to the fact that a specific order had been placed on the minute book to the effect that the new fire pump should not

Lightning Destroyed Barn at East Hawkesbury

Lightning fired a large barn belonging to Joseph Leduc in East Hawkesbury and destroyed it, on Sunday night. The building contained a large number of turkeys, 25 tons of hay and several sets of harness. The loss is estimated at $2,000. Farmers who formed a bucket brigade saved nearby stables and Leduc's home.

be taken out for use at fires outside the town limits. Mayor A. Rodrigue being unacquainted with this ruling, had sanctioned Chief Geo. Y. Deacon to take the truck last Sunday to the Dansereau Mill fire in Grenville. But the Council were of the opinion that while it was right to render assistance in such cases, the old pump should be taken and the new pump retained in readiness for emergencies that might arise in town.

Quebec Police, Fire Chiefs Held Annual Field Day

MORE THAN HUNDRED PRIZES AWARDED

St. Andrews E.—The annual sports day arranged by the Province of Quebec Police and Fire Chiefs Association, which was also their fifth annual Golf Tournament, was an all day affair held at the St. Andrews East Golf Club on Thursday, July 29th. A very large number of entries had been received and more than a hundred prizes were donated for the various events. Play was commenced at 9 a.m. Noon luncheon was served at the club house, and the association's annual golf dinner at 6 p.m.—to one of the largest and most successful gatherings ever held.

Miracle of Loaves and Fishes Was Emulated at Political Picnic in 1907

"CATERER EXTRAORDINARY" SURVIVES TO READ THE TALE

The Ottawa Citizen's Saturday page of "Old Time Stuff" recalls an incident of 30 years ago remembered by older inhabitants of this county — and by one local resident in particular, who is eulogized as the miracle man of the day's adventure.

Most readers are familiar with the Biblical story of the loaves and the fishes (states the writer)—but how many have heard of the miracle performed by Omer Paquette, "caterer extraordinary" of Lachute, Quebec, at a great political picnic at Calumet, back in the summer of 1907?

Fully five thousand electors of the county of Argenteuil and their wives and sweethearts were at that monster gathering. It was a tremendous undertaking to feed so vast a crowd, but the resourceful Omer proved big enough for the job. It had been anticipated that about 2,500 people would have to be fed, and Omer made his plans accordingly; but when twice that number, and then some, many of whom had driven twenty to thirty miles to reach the grounds, put in an appearance, the Lachute caterer got busy on a scheme.

He borrowed a lumber wagon and went forth into the Village of Calumet where he commandeered almost every particle of food that lay on the shelves of the local provision merchants—and the multitude was fed. The miracle of such a feeding only lacked the gathering up of 12 baskets full of fragments.

The piece de résistance at that memorable picnic was the grand spread of pork and beans, sixty-four kettles of which had been cooked in the hot sand for the occasion. They were in such great demand that not a bean was left of that great supply.

It is told that the shelves of the local merchants were so depleted of food after Paquette's visit that emergency calls had to be sent to Ottawa and nearby municipalities for fresh supplies to fill the requirements of the villagers next day.

St. Matthew's W.A. Girls Spent Week in Camp

Grenville — The members of St. Matthew's Girls' Branch of the W.A. enjoyed their first camp last week, on the property of Mr. Fraser Watson, Cushing West. Owing to the inability of their leader, Mrs. R. Matthew, to accompany them, the camp was in charge of Miss Pearl Dawson. The weather proved unfavorable for camping, but the girls appear to have spent a very happy week. They received many courtesies from local residents, and were able to visit several points of interest in the neighborhood.

Lachute Firemen Summoned to Grenville Blaze

DANSEREAU SAWMILL DESTROYED SUNDAY

LIGHTNING CAUSE OF FIRE

Lachute Fire Brigade responded to a call from Grenville at around noon last Sunday when the Dansereau sawmill was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. Many motorists from Lachute hurried over the 17-mile drive to witness the blaze, which completely destroyed the sawmill, engine house and drying kiln of the Georges Dansereau & Fils Company, Ltd., with a loss estimated in the vicinity of $50,000 only partially covered by insurance.

The fire is a severe blow to Grenville, where between 75 and 100 men will be thrown out of work.

The lightning struck in the early stages of an electric storm which visited these parts, and was followed later by a heavy fall of rain and hail, which caused several cellars to be flooded and flattened areas of crops in the storm centre.

The blaze was discovered by a watchman, who called the Grenville volunteer fire brigade—but, unable to cope with the flames, calls were sent for aid to the Hawkesbury and Lachute departments. The Lachute brigade under Chief Geo. Y. Deacon made the 17-mile run over rough roads in 25 minutes.

No lumber in the yard was destroyed, but a small quantity near the mill was scorched. The Gatineau Electric Light and Power Company also suffered considerable loss to poles and wiring.

Youngster Had a Narrow Escape in Grenville Canal

RESCUED THROUGH QUICK ACTION OF 12-YEAR-OLD COMPANION

Grenville—While one of the oil boats was passing through the Grenville Canal recently, the cook aboard the ship invited Gilbert Arnold Jr. (known to his friends as "Gibbey"), Jeffrey Arnold, and Donald Pridham to follow the boat down the canal to where the bank was lower, and he would treat them to some pie.

The invitation was tempting and the boys rode along the bank on their bicycles—the two Arnold boys on one machine and Pridham on another. Pridham was riding ahead, when he heard a splash, and looking back he saw that the Arnolds' bicycle had gone over the bank, which sloped down to the canal at this point. Jeffrey was in the water to his waist; Gibbey had fallen farther in, out of his depth, and the lad was in difficulties.

Donald Pridham yelled for help, and noticing a long branch on the tow path, he caught this and shoved it out into Gibbey's face, telling him to grab it. Luckily the boy was able to grasp it and was helped out, after swallowing a lot of water.

Repair-men, working across the canal, saw the accident, but were not close enough to help. The lads are none the worse for their experience.

The two Arnold boys are sons of G. E. Arnold, prominent horse-man, aged 12 and 8 respectively. Donald Pridham, also 12 years of age, is the youngest son of A. MacI. Pridham of Westmount, who spends his summers in Grenville.

Historical Society of Argenteuil County

NEWS BULLETIN

Another interesting and important contribution to the history teaching library of our future museum is the gift from a member of the Society, of four volumes richly illustrative of the beauties of Chinese art in bronze, porcelain, painting, carvings in lacquer, etc., dating from the Chang Dynasty (1796-1122 B.C.) to anno domini 1800.

These beautiful tomes, issued by the Chinese Government to enlighten the western world about their national art treasures, tell the story pictorially of the International Exhibition of Chinese Art held in London from November 1935 to March 1936. They will prove a rich field of instruction for the student of ceramics and decorative art, and for students of missions and others interested in China.

While an important section of this historical library may be that displaying the Canadiana of the Ottawa Valley, there seems to be no reason why its function and range should not be extended to the teaching of history in general, for the education of its patrons. In this connection it should be mentioned that three of our members (life members) advise that the museum be made the home of a circulating library, distinct and apart from the stationary library of the museum proper, and at the service of the four adjoining counties destined to be its constituency.

Whippet Is Regarded as Greyhound in Miniature

The whippet, otherwise known as the poor man's race horse, is another interesting example of man's efforts at creation. It was first bred in the mill and mining districts of England for coursing and rabbit hunting.

Looks were unimportant to these laborer-sportsmen: speed and stamina were very important. Therefore, says a writer in the Washington Star, they used the greyhound for the former and the terrier, of one kind or another, for the latter. Later, when the dog was used purely for racing, and later still when dog shows became important, appearance began to count. Then a dash of Italian greyhound was added, those that showed their terrier ancestry too clearly were taboed and the whippet as we know it today was evolved.

And the whippet practically is a greyhound in miniature. Although the color is unimportant, most show whippets are fawn color. Their heads are narrow, wedge-shaped, with strong though not coarse muzzles. Their ears are carried back in repose or semi-prick at attention like the collie's. In body it is fully streamlined, a racing machine. Its legs, both front and back, are strong and muscular; its chest deep to provide plenty of lung room and its ribs, while not flat, are not too widely sprung. In addition to its speed and symmetry, the whippet is an attractive and affectionate pet, and often an efficient watchdog.

PROPHET Marconi

Thirty-five years ago last winter I stood on Table Head, on Cape Breton Island. Beside me stood a blue-eyed, blond-haired young man who, the night before, had proved for the first time that wireless messages could be sent in both directions across the Atlantic. We faced 2,000 miles of ocean, and pointing toward the smoke of a distant ship, Marconi said:

"Just out there a great liner sank only a few years ago and 550 persons were lost. There were fifty ships within fifty miles and no way to call them to the rescue. Some day every ship will have my wireless telegraph. It will save many lives. When it does, I will be repaid for all my work."

I printed Marconi's prophecy, and the world laughed at him for a crazy dreamer. He lived to see his wireless girdle the earth and carry voices and music into every home. He was a real prophet. He changed the world.

COOLNESS, manufacture own

In my recent travels around the South I have had the satisfaction of seeing some of my own predictions come true in a big way. Seven years ago in this column I first predicted that the air-conditioning of houses, stores, offices and factories was going to become a great industry. It was a new idea then. Now more than 500 companies are making and installing air-conditioning.

I have been riding all over the South in air-conditioned trains, sleeping in air-conditioned hotel rooms, eating in air-conditioned restaurants, trading in air-conditioned stores, visiting in air-conditioned homes and inspecting air-conditioned factories. It is literally true that we have learned to make our own weather—indoors.

What we need now is air-conditioned automobiles. We have heaters for use in cold weather, and I was told by a man who had just driven from California to Florida that along the roads across the great American Desert there are filling stations which sell the motorist a chunk of "dry ice" to put inside the car and reduce the temperature 15 or 20 degrees. Whoever thought of that was a genius.

FISH fertilizer

One of the first things which the Pilgrim Fathers learned from the friendly Indians was that the way to make Indian corn grow was to put a mackerel in each hill when the seed was planted. Fish are still the best fertilizer for many kinds of crops. In Nova Scotia, many years ago, I saw farmers spreading young lobsters on the fields and plowing them under.

All along the Southern coast of the United States, from North Carolina clear around to the Gulf States, catching menhaden and other small fish for fertilizer is a big industry. These fish run in huge 'schools' and millions of tons of them are netted every year and brought to factories along shore, to be ground up for plant food.

All life began in the sea, and it is still to the sea that we look for the means of sustaining life on land.

BOOZE and gasoline

I note one liquor advertiser is warning people not to drive if they drink, nor drink if they drive. It is eternally true that liquor and gasoline in combination make a deadly mixture.

Not long ago I attended a convention to which a hundred or so men had come from long distances, mostly in automobiles, a few in air-planes. There was a drinking party in a hotel room across from mine. I heard one man refuse a drink, because he had to start to drive home that night. "I'm going to fly my own plane home," said another, "and I suppose I should lay off, but I'll take just one more drink."

The flyer crashed the next day, trying to land at the airport in his home town. Two other members of the drinking party were in serious automobile accidents on their way home; the wife of one of them was killed.

Liquor and gasoline don't mix.

"Cash and Carry"

Jack Williams, of Lansdowne, states the Enderby (B.C.) Commoner—has litigation marketing skinned a mile. With no marketing boards to hobble him; no Supreme Court and Appeal Court ultra vires and intra vires decisions to ride him, Jack says to the public, "I have the fruit on the bushes—good quality. Come and pick it; bring your own containers." And he sets a reasonable pound price. The people do the rest. His 20 acre crop of small fruits, mellons etc., is cleaned up every year and everybody is tickled.

Young Brothers in Double Drowning Near Buckingham

Coroner W. J. Costello, of Buckingham, investigating the drowning of two Cyrville children in the Lievre River last Sunday, declared the deaths accidental. The two victims were brothers, Georges and Lucien Cleere, aged 16 and 13 respectively. Georges was drowned in a vain attempt to rescue the younger boy.

The two were members of a picnic party. They went swimming after dinner and Lucien slipped off a boom. His brother jumped in to save him but Lucien grabbed him around the neck and both went under.

Hawaii Got Turkeys in 1815

America is the home of the turkey until more than 100 years ago. In 1815 Queen Kaahumanu went aboard a trading schooner and saw turkeys. Capt. John Meek had obtained in Chile. Never had she seen such large birds before. Upon going ashore she told the king. The king went to the vessel and asked for the birds. Upon refusal he seized the turkeys and went ashore. The birds later escaped. On the slopes of the island's volcanoes and even in the United States national park wild turkeys are fairly numerous, believed to be descendants of those brought to the islands by Captain Meek.

Use for Palm Sunday Leaves

In Spain, the palms of Palm Sunday have not fulfilled their mission at the end of holy day services. Many Spanish families subsequently tie the leaves to balconies or over door lintels to ward off lightning. Elche supplies the leaves for nearly all Spain, the tops of its trees being bound to bleach the leaves to the desired whiteness.

Labor, urged to exercise economy, is said to have brought this down to $2,500,000. The treasury board, which has the final say, lopped it down to a million dollars.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

It is an arguable point whether the state should take over the full responsibility for the problem. Many people argue that the indirect way is best: wise fiscal policy, and it will stimulate private industry by finding openings for the young people, they say.

There is, however, a good example close at hand for state assistance. The Roosevelt administration in the United States has poured out millions on this work.

Last year the estimated expenditure was $671,250,000 in the U.S.

This was all devoted to the youth angle of unemployment, spent either through the C.C.C. or the National Youth Administration.

In contrast our million dollars looks trifling. On a per capita basis Canada would have to spend $50,000,000 or more a year to put on an equivalent show.

However, the million dollars being put up by the Dominion Government is to be supplemented by another million dollars from the provincial governments. If the latter were better off, the federal government might be disposed to raise the figure. Unfortunately, three or four of them are still only a jump from insolvency. Agreements have already been drawn up with the four western provinces, whereby their share of the million dollars will be spent.

In the United States actual state employment for long periods has been given, as well as training of various sorts.

USED FOR TRAINING

In Canada it is recognized that the modest sum will not permit of much more than a few weeks of training and apprenticeship, if the money is to be spread around where it is worst needed.

Forestry work, the agricultural training of youths in the 'dried-out' areas, the training of domestic servants, mining and prospecting, and what are called 'industrial learnerships' are embraced in the program.

The Youth Employment Committee has been retained as a sub-committee of the National Employment Commission, and if Mr. Dunning is able to produce a balanced budget next year it is quite likely that the sum to be spent on the rescue and re-habilitation of the 'Lost Generation' of Canadian youth will be stepped up sharply next year.

In the United States the Civilian Conservation Corps has numbered as many as 300,000 young men, and the National Youth Administration is giving training and employment to tens of thousands more. Courses have been given in such lines as concrete construction, agriculture, automobile repairing, automobile electricity, cooking, masonry, radio servicing, photography and surveying.

Flapper: "I say, do you always wear top-boots for motoring?"

Young Man: "Rather. The first time I tried to drive a car I spent twenty minutes trying to find the gear-lever and hand brake, and here I was sitting with them up my trouser leg all the time."

Relief - the Borderline

Lethbridge Herald.

A local resident writes:

"Our income for living is $49.50 a month, with a man and wife and two children to keep. We pay our own light, heating and taxes. Father has no regular employment, but rustles for jobs enough to pay the taxes so the other fellow can have his 'relief'. We had to get a little irrigation plot so we could live, and it does not leave us enough time to talk Communism. For clothes, father's old pants are made into a suit for Sonny."

There's more in the same vein. It's a story of the struggle of one of those border-line cases. If Canadians all were making the same kind of struggle our problem of unemployment and relief would soon be very much less important than it is today.

SHOT BY JEALOUS SUITOR, GIRL CLAIMS TOWN RESPONSIBLE

Counsel for Miss M. A. Fournier, 23, filed suit against the City of Riviere du Loup, Que., for $15,000 damages, holding the city was responsible for injuries the girl suffered, when shot almost two years ago by a jealous lover.

Miss Fournier was shot by Charles Rousseau, and A. C. Dobell, counsel for the girl, claimed Rousseau used a gun loaned him by a Riviere du Loup police officer. Rousseau, after wounding Miss Fournier in the shoulder, committed suicide.

Dobell, claiming the city was responsible for the alleged action of the officer, said the bullet fired by Rousseau went through the girl's spinal column, leaving her totally paralyzed from the neck down.

TOWN AHEAD $2,000.

When time came for the spring election in Leadville, Colo., it was estimated such an election would cost the taxpayers $2,000. With everybody seemingly satisfied with the present officials, the newspapers of the city raised the question, "why have an election at all?" All present office-holders would undoubtedly be re-elected anyway. After sounding sentiment the papers sponsored a movement to skip this year's election. How this was done legally is not clear, but no election was held, the present city officials remain in office and the town is ahead $2,000.

There were 47,000 trailers registered in Canada during 1936, an increase of more than seven thousand over 1935.

At Callander, of course, he inspected the Quints—who wouldn't! And at Mattawa, beyond the Capital, he sampled labor conditions in the East by working for a week as farm helper at 5 cents an hour—75 cents a day in 15 hour shifts, and moved on with the conviction there was more profit and less perspiration in the clothes-dressing business.

Marceux carried a note-book, which showed the evidence of his long journey in personal memoranda, news clippings and cancellation stamps from post-offices in the important centres through which he had passed. His transportation costs were confined to the purchase of two spokes for his bicycle, and he had repaired four blow-outs.

Arriving here from Calumet the traveller tarried long enough to tell us his story. His destination is Quebec City, and he will visit his mother at Ste. Anne de la Pêrade. He estimates he will have covered 5,000 miles.

Early Washington Assemblies
The Washington assemblies in the early period of the republic were ceremonious and exclusive affairs. Admission was obtained only by cards of invitation. No gentleman, whatever may have been his rank or calling, was permitted on the floor unless he was attired in full evening dress, with pumps, silk stockings, and flowing cravat, unless he belonged to the army or navy, in which case complete regiments were necessary.

Trailer Regulations in Vancouver

The new mode of travel, the trailer, has resulted in the drafting of a by-law in Vancouver to regulate the influx of trailer and "house car" tourists expected during the summer, reports The Municipal News.

The by-law provides that:

1. It shall be unlawful to locate any occupied trailer or house car anywhere in the city except in licensed auto camps.

2. Each cabin or trailer in auto camps must be provided with at least 750 square feet of space.

3. Adequate sanitary accommodations must be provided, and it shall be unlawful to use sinks, basins or other conveniences unless they are connected with a sewer or septic tank.

4. Any person convicted of an infraction of the by-law shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $100 or an alternative of a jail term not exceeding two months with or without hard labor.

The by-law was prepared with the assistance of the city medical health officer, the chief of police and the secretary of zoning matters and is accompanied by a report calling the Provincial Government's attention to trailer regulations adopted by the Manitoba Provincial Government in April this year. This statute provides that trailers cannot be used for permanent residence in any town, city or municipality and that all sanitary requirements must be met.

A preamble to the by-law points out that the majority of major cities on the Pacific Coast are faced with the problem of regulating the traffic.

PARADISE FOR TAXPAYERS

Taxpayers living in Randall township, Wis., should have no kick coming. There is a population of 900 in the township, including three villages, but summer vacationists from Chicago, 85 miles away, have found this region a delightful place to go during hot summer months. Taxes imposed on taverns, sale of cigarettes and roadside stands of all kinds patronized by the visitors fill the township treasury to overflowing every summer. So much so that no real estate or other taxes need be imposed on the permanent residents. State law regulates local expenditures, and when all public needs had been provided for, a surplus of $16,000 remained. The township board held another session and by being as extravagant as they dared under the law, voted an additional $3,000 for road improvement, $2,750 for schools, and $600 for a baseball diamond. Now they still have $9,650 they do not know what to do with.

Almost-Human Traffic Lights

It's a far cry from the early Stop-Go signal the cop used to trundle off the sidewalk as he took up his point duty during traffic peaks, to the Electromatic traffic-actuated light signals of today.

Such is the pace we are living at, however, that the manually operated signal is still in the memory of young Canadians. The rapid growth of vehicular traffic has rendered even the later "fixed time" light signal out of date. The unnecessary delays caused by waits on red lights when no cross traffic is present costs the motorist public too much.

Today is the era of speed and the new signals, test units of which are being installed by Northern Electric in many centres, are successfully meeting the needs of this traffic-conscious country and its wide climatic changes. No pads to drive over; just a magnet below the road surface detects the presence of the vehicle and operates the signals.

Je n'comprends pas!

Believe it or not—those who contend the Old World isolation of Quebec is a drawing card to tourists: Here is an observation by Mr. John Irwin who, besides being a summer resident of this county, is noted for a genuine interest in the progress of this province and countryside.

Mr. Irwin spoke at a conference of business men with Mayor Raynault, assembled recently to discuss the proposal of a World's Fair in Montreal.

Mr. Irwin's remarks, according to the Granby Leader, deserve a wide circulation. We circulate only those which pertain to the tourist industry in Quebec:

"As to tourists—we have one of the most wonderful provinces and we try to bring in tourists, but Ontario is beating us every month. Why?

"One reason—our dirty, dusty roads which drive tourists away after they have seen them once.

"And another point—to the tourist it doesn't matter a tinker's dam whether it is St. John or St. John's, but when he sees St. John on the map and then the signpost says St. Jean, he drives right through and thinks it's some other place. I know of people that have driven right through St. Andrews and didn't know they were there, because it is marked St. André. And then when they go a bit farther and find a fine broad cement highway they go right ahead to Toronto and never come back."

While quoting these sentiments The Watchman gives due recognition to the provincial roads program now well under way. Highway perfection, or even a fair comparison with Ontario's standard, is a far-distant ideal to aim at, but Quebec's Minister of Roads is making notable strides toward improvement of our traffic arteries, and thereby fostering the tourist-appeal of this province.

Fortunes in Old Books

One way to leave a fortune for your descendants to cash in on, is to buy a copy of the first edition of a book by an author who is destined to become great, and then wait a few hundred years until book-collectors begin bidding against each other for it. Another way is to rummage around until you find a copy of the first book ever printed from movable type. You can ask your own price for that.

An imperfect copy of the Gutenberg Bible, the first printed book, with 381 leaves missing, was sold at auction in London for $3,000. There are only 45 copies known to exist. The American Library of Congress paid $500,000 for one of the few perfect ones.

The printer who published the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays in 1623 and sold the book for $50 a copy, could not have foreseen that it would become so valuable that a collector in 1937 would pay $5,600 for an imperfect copy, which is what it brought at the same sale where the Gutenberg Bible was auctioned. The only perfect Shakespeare Folio known brought $72,500 when it was sold a few years ago.

The value of old books is determined by their rarity and condition, but even more by the fame of their author. Only half a dozen copies are known to exist of Edgar Allan Poe's "Tamerlane". If anybody finds a copy of that thin little book kicking around in an old attic he can get probably $10,000 or more for it.

But the Gutenberg Bible remains the choicest rare book of all time.

Hurrying Hurts the Heart

The world owes a great deal to the hustlers who have made possible our high standard of living. How great that debt is may be gathered from the following excerpt from Scientific American:

"In 1933, heart diseases caused 286,360 deaths in the United States. In 1935, this figure had grown to 312,333. Heart disease can almost invariably be traced to the patient's mode of living. Highspeed life contributes largely to the prevalence of heart diseases. Sane living, sane eating, sane drinking, and a more placid, slower speed of existence would go far toward reducing the ravages caused when the little pump so necessary to life goes awry. 'Take it easy and live longer' may be trite, but it is truer today than ever before."

A Practical Ministry

"A Clearing House for the many problems confronting people", has been opened by Dr. Clem Davies, a popular Christian minister of Vancouver, British Columbia. Moreover, this minister is helping thousands of people with his Sunday night messages announced under the general title, "A religion that cheers". Three thousand people were packed into the Georgia Street Auditorium on a recent Sunday evening and many were turned away.

With service clubs and other agencies and individuals boosting a "back to the church" movement, it is interesting to see the clergy making a genuine effort to prove that religion can do something more for a man than urge him, Sunday after Sunday, to forsake his sins and be faithful to the collection plate.

Tobacco Lesson in Big Business

Of all classes of "big business", the tobacco industry is the most consistently profitable, according to a study of business profits recently made by the Twentieth Century Fund. This is especially curious, because the tobacco industry, which is principally the manufacture of cigarettes, pays the highest percentage of taxes of any industry. Every package of 20 cigarettes, retailing at from ten cents upward, pays six cents as a direct tax to the U. S. Federal Government, besides all local, state and Federal taxes paid on the manufacturer's business, property and earnings.

The record shows that the 16 largest tobacco companies have fluctuated in net income, but have regularly paid increasing dividends every year, since before the beginning of the depression.

One reason for this may be one which the investigators fail to point out. The tobacco companies have been steady and consistent advertisers on a large scale. They have set up a system of distribution which makes their products available to everyone, everywhere, and have earned their profits in fractions of a cent on each unit of sale. They have made their money not swiftly but slowly and surely.

The "little fellow" in business may, and often does, make a higher percentage of profit on his invested capital than big business corporations do. But a well-managed big business, in the long run, will stand up under depression conditions which the small business often cannot survive. Investors in big business are content to earn five or six percent on their money. Most small businesses try to make a great deal more than that.

Stolen Tires Recovered and Suspect Held

CROWN ATTORNEY AND CONSTABLE TRACED STOLEN GOODS

In April last three new tires were stolen from truck wheels in the cellar belonging to Mr. I. Laurin, local fruit dealer.

The Crown Attorney and Town Constable Gervais quietly went to work on investigation and after months of sleuthing the three tires were discovered to be in use on local trucks.

Further enquiries from the owners brought out the fact these tires had been purchased from a local man, who as yet has not been able to give a satisfactory explanation of how he came to be in possession of the stolen articles.

The suspect, named Massie, appeared before local magistrates yesterday, and at the instance of Crown Attorney George Héon, who declared that it was his firm intention to purge the town of petty thievery, was held without bail for further questioning.

Free Press Essential to Democracy

Jack Bingham of Vancouver, B.C., recently wrote a prize winning essay on Democratic Government in Canada, which was reprinted in the Maple Ridge Gazette. He spoke of democracy as something that has suited the British temperament, "an intangible, aged-in-the-wood sort of thing that has been passed down from one generation to the next since the early days of the fifth century".

After mentioning the fact that a British-Canadian dictator could not satisfy all Canadians, and that a French-Canadian could not either, Mr. Bingham said:

"Democracy adequately satisfies the diversified needs and interests of its citizens; for in our parliament are aired problems facing the large manufacturer and the small merchant alike; difficulties encountered in the most far flung rural districts, and in the factory districts of the city, and the steps necessary to overcome them. A similar freedom of discussion would not be tolerated in a dictatorial state.

"A democratic system has no place for censorship of the press. The Fascist and Communist systems have. Indeed, such a censorship is essential for these systems to survive; conversely it would be a definite factor in the downfall of a democracy. A press functioning freely and voicing constructive criticism, as well as praise, is an essential feature of a democracy."

A NEW INTERNATIONAL BRIDGE PROJECT

New and important link between the United States and Canada will be the $3,000,000 "Blue Water" international bridge, sketched above, when completed late in 1938. Connecting Port Huron, Mich., on the American side, and Sarnia, Ont., on the Canadian side, the bridge will be 8,000 feet long and will provide a diagonal route from the middle west to New York and eastern Canada, shortening existing trails. Financed jointly by the governments of Michigan, Canada and United States, and a bond issue of $1,000,000, the bridge culminates 10 years of planning and promotion. Standing 152 feet above the waters of Lake Huron, the structure will permit passage of all lake traffic and command an impressive view of Lake Huron, at the junction with the St. Clair river. Several thousand persons attended the ground-breaking ceremonies.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SERMON TO VACATIONERS

The photographer, fairly close, took care to focus on the child, not on the distant scene. Exposure 1/100 second at f.8 on a fair day.

THIS year when you go on your vacation, resolve to come back with better snapshots than you did a year ago.

Determine to take more care with your lens stops, your shutter speeds and your focusing. Decide that before you take a picture you will give thought to the light conditions; whether the day is hazy, dull or very dull; whether a midday sun is shining from a clear sky or the less intense early morning or late afternoon sun; whether the light is increased by reflections from expanses of water or sand; whether your subject is in average shade or deep shade; whether under any of these conditions you are photographing nearby objects or a distant scene. Say you will consider these things each time and carefully adjust your camera to fit them.

Make up your mind that you will think also about the composition of each picture, that it shall have merit because of its pictorial qualities and that in each scene showing human or other beings there shall be something interesting.

Declare that you will bring back from this year's vacation no more out-of-focus pictures nor underexposed or overexposed ones, nor pictures blurred by camera movement; no more of those lifeless pictures of persons just posing, nor "scenic" as void of noticeable feature as an army blanket, nor any more conglomerations of meaningless composition shot at random for no good pictorial reason. Such pictures are, as you know, products of no ambition to make the best out of the possibilities of a person's camera, the film he uses and of himself as a photographer.

In terms of entertaining, eye-de-lighting, emotion-stirring and photographically excellent pictures, these possibilities are unlimited, and on vacations, whether you head for the ocean, mountain, lake, river, even the prairie or the desert, the opportunities for real pictures are unlimited. Do make up your mind this time to think before you shoot.

Special application: If you have never used a color filter, treat yourself to two or three of different types, or at least one average filter such as the K-2, and experiment with them before you start. Filters bring in clouds distinctly, cut through haze, combat too bright reflections from water or sea sand. Like deftly placed cosmetics on a lady's face, deftly used filters enhance beauty. Learn to use them. You will be surprised and delighted with the results.

BOY SCOUTS THE WORLD OVER

ROVER SCOUT MAKES NEW RECORD FOR 100 MILE RUN

A new record for running 100 miles was established July 3rd. by Rover Scout Hardy Ballington, of Durban, South Africa, when he covered that distance, from Box, near Bath, to Hyde Park Corner, London, in 13 hours, 21 minutes and 19 seconds. The previous record was held by an Englishman, Arthur Newton, who at the age of 51 covered the same route in 14 hours, 11 minutes and 30 seconds. Rover Scout Ballington did his training over the "Comrades Marathon" course, a 54 miles' gruelling run in mountainous country between Durban and Pietermaritzburg, South Africa.

ONTARIO'S NEW TRAINING CENTRE FOR SCOUT LEADERS

"Blue Springs Scout Reserve," the former Blue Springs Park, near Acton, Ont., the 100 acre property which is to be developed as a training centre for Ontario Scout leaders, was formally dedicated July 21st. The acquiring of the Reserve was made possible by a memorial contribution received from the family of the late Fred J. Mann, of Toronto, and a donation to the Provincial Council of the Boy Scouts Association by the late Col. R. W. Leonard, of St. Catharines. The keen interest of Mr. Mann and Col. Leonard in the Scout Movement was commemorated in connection with the opening of the Reserve by the unveiling of a rustic stone monument. The main entrance to the Reserve is marked by a stockade gateway, a reproduction of a pioneer day blockhouse.

HOW TO RESCUE A DOG FROM A WELL

Boy Scout ingenuity and the Scout rule of kindness to animals were exemplified by two Parksville, B.C., Scouts in responding to the yelping of a dog which indicated that the animal was in trouble. Tracing the sound, the boys located the unfortunate animal in an old, partly caved-in 45 foot well. Obviously it would be extremely dangerous to attempt a descent to the dog. The boys found another solution. They secured a box large enough to accommodate the dog, "baited" it with a sandwich, and lowered it by a wire. The hungry animal jumped into the box for the sandwich, and the boys hauled him up.

Measurement of Time Is

as Old as Time Itself

Time's measurement goes back to the beginning of time itself. As for modern time measurement, its beginnings are considered to be tangled up in the mysticism, superstition and sun worship of the Chaldeans, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. This ancient people originated the week of seven days from the sun and moon and the five planets: Venus, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn. These were their gods and they worshipped them. So they set aside one day each week for the worship of the sun, another for the moon and so on. The sun was their most important god and its day of worship was called sun day from which we get Sunday. The moon was the next important god and its worship day was called moon day or Monday.

The Chaldeans divided the time required for the sun to traverse its path through the belt of the ecliptic into the 12 constellations of the Zodiac. In this way they evolved the 12 months of the year. They also divided the day into 12 hours and then the hour into smaller units.

FISHING IS SUCH FUN

The greatest fun is fishing
In a cool, green shady nook (ing
And your heart seems almost burst-
When a big one's on your hook.

You watch it splash and tumble,
As you haul it slowly in,
Then you free your hook so carefully
Lest you get scratched on a fin.

Content, you settle down again
And cast your line once more,
While you watch a heron fishing
Over on the opposite shore.

He scoops up minnows quickly
That frolic near the beach,
And you envy him his long neck
That gives him such a reach!

UNDER AN UMBRELLA

Ted watched his Aunt Effie's face very closely, as she read the note which the other little boy had brought her, and he saw that she was smiling. When she had finished, she looked at him a few minutes, before saying, "This note is from your new friend Captain Rolfe of the Umbrella. He has invited you and me to lunch with him. Would you like to go?"

"Would I?" Ted almost shouted the words. "I would, of course, Aunt Effie—only—only—"

Ted hung his head as though he scarcely knew what to say next.

"Only you would rather go to visit Captain Rolfe all by yourself without any aunts tagging along. Isn't that what you want to say, Ted?"

The boy's eyes flew open in surprise. "How did you guess what I was thinking?" he cried.

"Perhaps I am a mind reader, Teddie Boy," the lady replied with a laugh. "And just to please you—you may go on by yourself for a time and I will come later."

"You don't want to go, really, truly, do you, Aunt Effie?" Ted asked.

"I never had lunch under an umbrella, and I think that I should like to," she said, "but you may go first and tell Captain Rolfe that I'll be along later. I want to finish this letter to your mother before I go, and take it to the mail box."

Ted waited for nothing further, but with a whoop of joy he scampered off across the sand towards the big umbrella.

His aunt watched him for a few moments, murmuring, "He's just like a little long-legged colt."

As Ted neared the tent and the umbrella he stopped running so that he would not be breathless when he arrived. He walked the remainder of the way slowly and more dignifiedly to the delight of Captain Rolfe who had been watching from a small opening in the tent. Coming to the door of the tent he greeted Ted with a smile and a gruff, "Well my lad, you haven't drowned yourself yet, I see!"

"No, Captain Rolfe, I haven't had time to drown myself. I have just finished breakfast," Ted chuckled, then added, "My Aunt will come along later. She is writing letters, but I wanted to come so much that I just couldn't wait for her."

Captain Rolfe smiled more broadly than ever at Ted's naive confession, and set a stool for him so that he might sit down where he could have a good view of the sea. For a few minutes Ted sat staring over the restless waters. "It's awful big, isn't it?" he said at last, turning to look at the Captain who was busy opening clams. "Have you ever been across it, Captain Rolfe?"

"More times than I can count on my fingers, laddie," the Captain replied with a laugh.

"Was it awfully rough?"

"Sometimes it was so rough you would think that the boat was climbing mountains; and again it would be so calm that it would seem as if the boat was cutting through a mirror. But it was seldom so smooth for very long, as there is usually motion of some kind on the sea."

"There's lots of motion today, Captain Rolfe," Ted remarked.

"It would seem like that to you, boy, but really it is not doing much more today than shaking its whiskers at us. A real big boat would not be shaken very much by the waves today.—They're just ripples compared to some that I have seen."

"Couldn't you tell me about some of the rough ones, Captain Rolfe?"

"I will some time later. Just now I have to give this lunch my particular attention, seeing that your aunt is coming to have it with us. But there is a box of shells that you might like to look at while I work."

Repotting a Window Garden

The success of next winter's window garden depends to a large extent on what is done with the plants now, says House Beautiful, as any specimen that is to be forced or grown under unnatural conditions must be carefully prepared for the extra strain placed upon it. Old plants kept from year to year flowering in winter, have been resting, and unless they are repotted in the spring, should be shifted now into a pot just one size larger. During hot weather they thrive better if the pots are sunk up to their rims in the ground under shrub or tree, where they will be in the shade at mid-day. To prevent investigating roots from working out in the soil, cover the drainage hole with surgeon's plaster, leaving just enough of an opening so that all surplus water can drain out, and turn the pots around occasionally to prevent one-sided growing and to break off any roots that may have crept through.

Keeps the Kinks Out of the King

While guns boomed to mark the passing of his 79th birthday, King Gustaf of Sweden played tennis.

Some doctors say that a man of forty should not indulge in tennis. It is considered by them to be a too strenuous form of exercise. Of course, it may make a difference if you have always played the game. In Sweden they think that tennis keeps the kinks out of their king—the oldest European monarch who is working at the job.

Saxon and Norman Names

We have Saxon and Norman blood in our veins. Similarly, our Christian names are a mixture of Saxon and Norman. Alfred, Edward and Edith are old Saxon names; John (originally Jean), William, Henry (formerly Henri), Herbert and Hubert, Robert and Richard and Peter are all Norman names. Sidney was originally St. Denis. But people ran it together like "St. denny," and presently it was pronounced and spelled Sidney. St. John is an old surname borne by some people. But that spelling has remained, although the name is pronounced as if spelled Sin-jon.—Pearson's Weekly.

TAKING DINNER IN JAPAN

The following is extracted from the description of a visit to Japan by three Canadian missionary ladies. The story is vividly told by Miss Lois Knowles, in an article contributed to "Tidings":

Our boat arrived at Kobe on Sunday at 5 p.m. As it was the Sabbath we did no shopping but the three of us took a taxi and drove around the city. The lights came on soon after we started and I have never seen such artistic and beautiful lighting of a city. Some of the streets were closed to motor cars but our driver stopped at the entrance and gave us a glimpse of them. We walked down one narrow street, part of which was covered by an arched roof brilliantly lighted and artistically decorated. The women and children dressed in their colorful kimono, the artistic display of Japanese goods, the brilliant lighting of the open shops, made a most fascinating picture. People bowed and smiled graciously as we paused to look at their wares, but our most interesting experience was a visit to a Japanese restaurant. As our driver's knowledge of English was very meagre we had difficulty in making him understand what we wanted. When we asked how many Europeans there were in Kobe he hesitated and then said "5-non.non.no"; a rather unique way of saying 5000. He took us to a shrine and said it No. 1 shrine. We decided he meant it was the most noted shrine in Kobe, so after several failures in making him understand we wanted a first class restaurant, we said "No. 1 Restaurant". He smiled and said, "Yes, I know." We stopped at a most insignificant and unattractive place and were led through a dark narrow alley. Soon we came out into an open courtyard with trees and flowers and a fountain, and entered the portico of the restaurant. There was a great flutter among a number of attractive looking Japanese girls. There were three large images at the back of this portico and I supposed we would be served our dinner under the shadow of those images. We were asked to remove our shoes; the floor was covered with Japanese matting and at the entrance were white pillows upon which we walked into the house. The girls themselves were in their stocking feet. They then led us into another room where there was an elderly woman. Of course, we could not understand their conversation, but it was quite evident that the older woman was not elated over our presence. However they must have decided that they could not turn us out. They told us dinner would cost us 2 yen each (about sixty cents). We agreed to that and were led through corridors over highly polished floors and out through narrow alleys and ushered into a room and immediately the sliding doors were closed. The room was about 8x10 ft and about 8 ft high. In the centre of the room was a polished table about 5x4 ft and about six inches high. This with arm rests for each of us was the only furniture in this room, which seemed like a doll's house. The girl brought in six large cushions and we sat down, two on each side, and one at each end. The walls were of stucco and panelled with bamboo, which gave a very artistic effect. A few beautiful lacquer trays and boxes adorned two shelves and a pretty bouquet of chrysanthemums added to the beauty of the room. Through the back door we looked out upon a picturesque garden. Now for the dinner. Her first act was to bring in two bowls of incense, and light them. Possibly this was an act of worship. Our waitress did not know enough English to explain it to us. Then she served some liquid (I do not know whether it was tea or soup) I have never tasted anything like it in my life, and I hope I never will again. It was salt, bitter and nauseating. As there was no other way to dispose of it we slowly sipped it down. Then she brought in six raw eggs and broke them into six little bowls and placed them before us. We supposed we were expected to take them that way, but I inwardly vowed I would not. The next course was hors d'oeuvres, which we were supposed to eat with chop sticks. They too were hard to take. We had noted that our table had two holes in the top covered with a wooden cover, and wondered what was their purpose. We learned later when our waitress brought in a pot of charcoal placed in a brass bowl of water which fitted into this hole. A pan was placed on the charcoal, greased and there on the table before us was cooked the concoction which we were to eat with our rice. There were thin long strips of beef, bamboo sprouts, mushrooms, something which looked like spinach, long thin stringy material which was gluey. There was no smoke from the charcoal. It was as clean as an electric stove, and gave out a great heat. She had previously served us with small bowls of rice and when this concoction on the fire was cooked she took out a small portion with chopsticks and proceeded to dip it into the raw egg which she had beaten in the individual bowls. To this we objected and suggested by signs that she pour the beaten egg into the pot and cook it, this she did. When all was ready a small portion was served with our rice and we began with our chopsticks. I was amazed that I was able to get anything at all, but managed, probably not very gracefully, to eat two helpings of rice. I am thankful I do not have to live on Japanese food. It cannot compare with our rice and curry in India. I don't think I could ever learn to like it. The waitress seemed afraid that we would not pay the price she had asked and several times during the meal she pointed to each of us saying "2 yen, 2 yen, 2 yen." When we were leaving her face was alight with joy as she showed another girl the money. It was probably three or four times the price charged to Japanese, and though the food was not worth it the experience was worth far more. When we left we were presented with a picture postcard of the place and a fancy box of matches. A servant was waiting to help us put on our shoes and we hurried back to our boat.

Four Year Old Boy Drowned at Seignior Club

Richard Robertson, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Robertson of Montreal, was drowned just off the dock of the Seignior Club, Montebello, on Sunday afternoon. The youngster with his seven-year-old brother, Ronald, was playing on the dock about 4 o'clock but his disappearance was not noticed until about 5 o'clock.

When T. B. Parks, swimming instructor, and some other persons noticed that the young boy was missing, a search of the grounds was made but with no success. Unable to find him on the property, grappling irons were secured and the water around the dock was dragged. Shortly after 7 o'clock the body was recovered in about 12 feet of water close to the edge of the dock.

Coroner Dr. W. J. Costello of Buckingham was called, but after investigation decided that no inquest was required.

Presentation to Rev. Labelle 25 Years in the Priesthood

PARISHIONERS MADE ART RECOGNITION OF ANNIVERSARY

A pleasing recognition was made by the parishioners of St. Anastasie when, after High Mass last Sunday morning, they assembled at the steps of the presbytery to greet their beloved priest, Rev. Ernest Labelle, and to congratulate him on his record of 25 years' service in the Catholic priesthood. The anniversary was marked by the presentation of a handsome grandfather clock. This was accompanied by an address of felicitation read by Mr. Arcade Ethier on behalf of the congregation, to which Rev. Father Labelle replied most feelingly. The gift was supplemented by a framed portrait of Rev. Labelle and a beautiful statuette of the Saint Curé d'Ars.

Activity Apparent in Apple Tree Selling

Nurserymen both in Ontario and Quebec have been quick to recognize the possibilities for replacing the apple-trees which were victims of untimely frosts last year. Canvassers are now busy all over the Province in an effort to induce farmers and gardeners to replace the dead trees with new ones next spring.

Entirely apart from the commercial aspect of this undertaking, there is real common sense and vision behind it, and it is to be hoped that residents in the rural districts may view the matter favourably, and plant apple-trees for posterity, although they may not receive much immediate personal benefit from the expenditure.

"Schoolboy Explorers In The North"

Thirty boys from Upper Canada College, Toronto, who have been on an exploration trip to the upper reaches of the Peace River in British Columbia have now returned from their six weeks' journey through the mountains. Their leader, Nicholas Ignatieff, who is a Master at Upper Canada College, and who is also a writer, together with one of the boys, will describe the trip in a broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation from Edmonton on Friday, Aug. 20, at 9.30 - 9.45 p.m. EST.

The party, which travelled by horse, consisted, besides the boys, of four masters of the school, a doctor, and nine guides. They kept in contact with the outside world by means of code and telephone radio transmitting sets. Their route took them on the east from the Peace River district to the country north of Prince George, in the west.

Recalls "Miracle Man" at Old Time County Picnic

Conversing with the Editor, one of our old and most interested readers remarked on the county picnic at Calumet in 1907, which was the subject of an article in the Ottawa Citizen's "Old Time Stuff" reprinted last week in these columns. This event, at which Mr. Omer Paquette distinguished himself as "caterer extraordinary", was probably the grandest rally in the annals of the Conservative party in Argenteuil. Five thousand people attended, and the picnic was a magnanimous gesture given by Sir George H. Perley, who was parliamentary representative for the county even at that early date.

Rival Suitor Victim of Shooting, at Shawbridge

Alleged to have shot a rival during a quarrel over a girl, Tancrede Leblanc, 25-year-old employee of a Shawbridge baker shop, appeared before Dr. Guillaume Latour, J.P., in the St. Jerome court house Monday on a charge of attempted murder. He was remanded to appear before Judge Lalande today, August 12.

The shooting occurred late Saturday night at Shawbridge. The victim, Joseph St. Denis, dit Trotter, of St. Sauveur, Que., is reported to be suffering from severe head wounds sustained when Leblanc allegedly struck him over the head with the butt of a rifle after wounding him only slightly with two bullets.

Provincial Police officers were summoned and took charge of the prisoner. St. Denis refused to go to hospital and was treated for his wounds by Dr. Latour.

It is not known exactly how the quarrel started. According to witnesses, Leblanc and St. Denis started to argue for the favors of one of the village girls. At the height of the argument Leblanc left the scene and went to his house, returning a few moments later with a rifle. When but a short distance from St. Denis, witnesses allege, he opened fire, but the bullet just grazed St. Denis' right arm. A second bullet grazed the victim's chin.

Seeing he had missed with both bullets, Leblanc allegedly attacked St. Denis with the butt of the rifle and struck him over the head before witnesses could stop him. He was held by local authorities until arrival of the provincial detectives.

Maskinonge Hauled From North River

It has been a common sight this year to note youngsters trying their luck with rod and line in the North River, and big hauls of "suckers" weighing several pounds have been caught.

Last Friday, however, Henri Trichard, and Camille Brisson, while trolling from a boat near J. Burke's property below the Ayers dam, pulled in several maskinonge — one weighing 12½ lbs., another 10 lbs., still another 4½ lbs., and two smaller ones of 2 lbs. each.

Notable Reduction in Ranks of Unemployed... Dominion Attitude on Alberta Legislation

"The Ottawa Spotlight"
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 10th. — The theory that within its own field a province has sovereign powers, and must be left to deal with local problems in its own way, cuts a big figure in Dominion relationships. For political reasons, also, it has been wise for the federal government in the past to avoid stirring up unnecessary trouble by invading provincial territory. The unquestionable legal right of the Dominion government to step in and veto provincial legislation has very infrequently been exercised in the past, and if a few more years pass without it being used it will tend to die out completely.

Alberta's recent bang legislation brings to the fore in a very pertinent manner this question of Dominion attitude toward provincial legislation. Should the Dominion intervene? First, has it the legal right? Second, is it wise from a political angle to do so even if it has the right?

The stand may be taken that the province of Alberta has set about, in an unorthodox but commendable manner, to improve the lot of its citizens, and that while it is doing so, outside

Paul T. F. Jousse of Vankleek Hill Dead

FORMER RESIDENT OF LACHUTE, WELL KNOWN IN DISTRICT

Paul T. F. Jousse, for 35 years a jeweller and one of the best known residents of Vankleek Hill, died last Friday morning at his home following a short illness. He was 60 years of age.

Born at Waterloo, Que., he spent a few years during his boyhood in Montreal, later moving here to Lachute, where he learned the jewelry trade.

One of the most prominent members of Vankleek Hill Baptist church, he was a member of the board of managers there for several years. In addition he belonged to the Royal Arch Masons, A.F. and A.M., the I.O.O.F. and the Independent Order of Foresters.

Surviving besides his widow, two daughters, Bertha of Vankleek Hill, and Mrs. T. C. Walcott, of Montreal, one son, A. T. Jousse of Hamilton, and one brother, Eugene Jousse, now of Montreal.

The funeral was held from his residence on Sunday afternoon to Vankleek Hill Baptist church where the pastor, Rev. Norman McCausland, assisted by Rev. E. T. Newton of Niagara Falls, former pastor of Vankleek Hill, conducted the service, during which solos were rendered by Rev. E. T. Newton and Eugene Jousse, a nephew of the deceased and former townsboy of Lachute. The pallbearers were Dr. Metcalfe; Dr. McPhee, J. L. Campbell, B. H. Day, D. Fraser and Joseph J. Sinclair.

Interment was made in Greenwood Cemetery.

If certain poor people could have enough, and some affluent persons could be gotten busy, many interlinked problems would untangle themselves in the process.

Minor Outbreak of Fire in West End Shed

The Lachute Fire Brigade were summoned to a minor outbreak in a shed at the rear of Trudel Freres' garage in the West End, at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The shed is the property of Mrs. C. Poirier. A line of hose was connected with the river, and the blaze was subdued without difficulty. Little damage resulted from the fire, which was believed to have been caused by children playing with matches.

C.B.C. Topic Tonight — "If I Were a Country Editor"

This evening from 8.00 to 8.30 p.m. EST, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will broadcast the banquet being tendered delegates to the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association convention. The banquet is being given by the Nova Scotia Provincial Government at the Lord Nelson Hotel, Halifax, and prominent speakers will take part. Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Premier of Nova Scotia, will introduce John H. Casey, Professor of Journalism, University of Oklahoma. His subject will be "If I Were a Country Editor."

J. S. Giles, publisher of The Watchman, is representing this newspaper at the Halifax convention.

Slept by the Wayside Found Car Disappeared

Among the ho-hum routine of tow-trucks running to the rescue from local garages, a humorous incident occurred here last Monday. Driving toward the city a Montrealeur took the ditch between Lachute and St. Hermas. He asked a passer-by to call assistance from a garage in Lachute. Overcome by a drowsiness peculiar to those who imbibe for refreshment, the man lay in a field to await the tow-truck, and falling asleep he failed to hear its arrival. The garagemen, seeing no one on the spot, removed the car and brought it to Lachute. Meanwhile the motorist awakened, and finding his car had disappeared he begged a drive to Lachute. Through the assistance of the telephone exchange, he was able to locate his auto, and reclaiming it proceeded on his way to Montreal.

Petition Asks Closed Season For Their Protection

A petition being circulated in the Eastern Townships, which bears the names of many prominent sportsmen, asks the Federal Government to put a closed season on frogs or forbid the exportation of them — reports the Granby Leader-Mail. If the Government does not take immediate action to stop the wholesale slaughter of frogs in this province (states our contemporary) they will soon be completely wiped out. Thousands are being killed daily and they are fast becoming extinct, resulting in a marked increase in harmful insects the frogs destroyed each year. The frogs are hunted and killed from early spring—even before the spawning—until late fall by persons who prefer frog-killing to working by the day for small wages. The frogs are packed in ice and shipped to New York hotels where some of them fetch as low as 11 cents a pound.

The Spanish War, So Far, So Bad!

(Quoted with Permission from The Digest Review of Reviews)

The world pauses to note the first anniversary of its most disastrous civil war since the conflict between the American states. Just a year ago, 1931 revolution and 1936 reaction clashed in luckless Spain. On July 17 the army rose against the liberal republic in Spanish Morocco, crossing the Gibraltar straits to capture Cadiz two days later. Thus the war began with the Bilbao-Santander operations as its latest movement.

Looking backward again: Following Cadiz the rebel reaction captured Badajoz by the Portuguese frontier; then Irun and San Sebastian near the French frontier. Toledo, south of Madrid, came next. In late October the siege of Madrid began and the loyalist government moved to east-coast Valencia. Madrid held out, due largely to Kleber's skilful international brigade, and most of the rebel Moors (Franco's only good fighters) were decimated in the city suburbs. "Volunteer" Italians replaced the late lamented Africans. The black-shirts somehow took south-coastal Malaga in February. To date, only the Moors and Kleber's grim internationalists (on opposing sides) have done anything heroic to write home about. Franco's Irish went back to Eire; the loyalists Basques, good Catholics too, are down and out.

The mind will not produce its best without being laboriously stirred up, any more than will your garden.

Annual Regatta Successful Event at Lake Louisa

Ideal weather favoured the large gathering at Lake Louisa on Saturday, when the annual regatta took place. Competition was keen, and there were splendid exhibitions of swimming, diving, and boat racing.

The committee, headed by Mr. Wm. Mosley, deserve great praise for the work of preparation and the very successful results.

A goodly number made cash contributions, which were greatly appreciated and enabled the Committee to purchase prizes for the different events. Unfortunately there was not sufficient to award more than one good prize for each event, but it is hoped that this will be overcome next year by a larger subscription list.

During the evening a fire works display and sing-song were greatly enjoyed by all present.

Ottawa Exhibition Opening Next Week

Nine Days and Nights Replete With Outstanding Features For 50th. Anniversary Celebration

On Thursday of next week, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister, will officially open the Ottawa Exhibition and by so doing will inaugurate a nine-day celebration to mark the fiftieth anniversary of the Central Canada Exhibition Association. Indications are that it will be a real celebration replete with factors which will appeal to old and young, urban and rural residents.

For the first three nights, Chaudiere will be featured, a historical pageant depicting the Ottawa district from the early days. Episodes have been carefully selected and a cast of 800 will interpret them. Also on the first three nights will be The Cavalcade, introducing famous riders of the ages, costumed and suitably mounted. The midway and all the buildings with the exception of live-stock will be complete in every detail for the entire nine days.

Commencing on Monday, Aug. 23, there will be a complete change in the grandstand program. Outstanding in the night program will be The Revue of Tomorrow with stars of Broadway and Hollywood in comedy, dances, songs and gorgeous ensembles on a special stage with elaborate costumes and scenic investment.

Edwin Franko Goldman and his band will be heard in two concerts daily from Monday to Saturday, Aug. 23-28. For five evenings there will be a horse show in the Coliseum. Dog show, automobiles, pure food show, livestock, poultry and pets, flowers and fruit, women's handicrafts, junior agriculture demonstrations, hobby show, baby show, merchants' and manufacturers' exhibits, government displays and a hundred and one free attractions will provide entertainment and education. This year the Ontario Fish and Game Department is making an exceptionally fine display of live stock, game birds and wild animals.

One of the most thrilling acts in the show business today is that by Lucky Teter and His Hell Drivers. For over an hour for the first three nights of the exhibition they will flirt with death by doing the most amazing stunts with automobiles and motorcycles.

FERTILIZED PASTURES RESIST THE DROUGHT

"Fertilized pastures are still good, with unfertilized ones becoming poor" states a crop report for July, issued by the Quebec Provincial Bureau of Statistics. The statement contains food for thought, as the matter concerns food for the grazing animal and the means of increased profit for the farmer. For years the Department of Agriculture in Quebec has been urging the important advantages of fertilizing pastures, and its representatives in every county have organized and supervised demonstrations of the practice. The periodically published reports of many trials contain striking proofs of its economy, and many a farmer who formerly had been used to allow three acres of grazing land per cow finds that one acre of fertilized herbage suffices.

Pastures treated with a fertilizer high in phosphate are more abundant, more palatable, more nutritious, being richer in protein and minerals. Besides, they are ready for grazing earlier in spring and can be grazed later in the fall. Deeper, stronger rooting of the grasses is promoted by the high phosphate fertilizer; consequently they are more resistant to drought and do not fade away in summer. This explains the statement in the government report and points the moral.

The fall fertilizing of pasture is now recommended, and the effects of an application of an 0-16-6, applied at the rate of from 400 to 600 pounds per acre, in late August or September, or even as late as October, will be manifest in early spring.

SEED TREATMENT IS INEXPENSIVE

"All growers and distributors of seed have a very direct responsibility in the matter of seed-borne diseases", affirmed Dr. J. H. Craigie of the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory, Winnipeg, addressing members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, at Saskatoon. Referring to seed treatment as a protection against smuts and root rots, Dr. Craigie said that never in the history of agriculture have remedial measures been so effective, simple and inexpensive. He explained that when seed is treated with organic mercury dust not only are externally-borne organisms destroyed but the fungicide on the seed affords considerable protection to the germinating seed and young seedling against soil-inhabiting parasitic organisms such as those which cause damping-off and seedling blights.

Dr. Craigie commended the growing practice by seed-houses of treating much of their seed before distributing it and believed the practice would soon be general. Something might be done, he thought, to instill into the grower a consciousness that to grow a diseased crop is an unneighborly act, just as it is to allow one's farm to become over-run with weeds. In some districts central treating plants might be established; in others a portable seed-treating outfit might be used. H. J. Kemp of the Swift Current Experimental Station appeared on the program of the convention and delivered a most interesting address on the principles of the new automatic machine which he has produced for the purpose of treating seed grain with organic mercury dust.

facturer of razor blades computes that in Great Britain a total of 50,000 miles of hair is shaved from 125 acres of faces daily, the assumption being that the average man, including those with long faces, grows 48 square inches of bristles, 25,000 in number, and that these combine to yield 20 feet of hair each day. The accuracy of the calculation is not vouched for, but the smooth-faced statistician can figure it out!

In Emergency

there's nothing like the TELEPHONE

When something goes wrong with the plumbing or the wiring; when someone is hurt or takes suddenly ill; at the outbreak of fire; when unexpected guests arrive and extra refreshments are needed, and for a hundred and one other emergencies, large or small, there's nothing like the telephone. It is always ready to serve you and its cost is a pittance.

FAMOUS GENERAL VIEWS THE "WORLD" FROM MOUNTAIN TOP

This most unusual photograph shows General Smuts, world famous South African statesman, who spends his leisure hours climbing Table Mountain at Capetown. We see him in a contemplative mood as he stands on the edge of the mountain gazing at the wonderful panoramic view of Capetown below.

authorities should refrain from 'rocking the boat' in any way. If outside interests, whether private or governmental, step in and block Alberta's legislation, it is easy enough to see what the reaction of a portion of the Alberta electorate will be. They will say that vested interests, with a heavy investment in things as they are, will not permit novel attempts to be made to improve the economic lot of the masses.

INTERVENTION DOUBTFUL

It will take a most ominous invasion of Dominion powers on the part of Premier Aberhart to bring about a veto from the authorities here. The general attitude, from a political slant is: give the Alberta government all the rope it asks for. If steps are taken which threaten inequity or oppression to the individual, let the courts look after it. This has been the attitude of the Mackenzie King government since it came into power, and there is not much to suggest that even this latest outburst from Alberta will change things.

Some critics have been charging Ottawa with being weak-kneed and chicken-livered over the whole question of vote. Ontario passed power legislation which was obviously unconstitutional. Quebec passed laws which infringe seriously on the acknowledged right of free speech and free association. New Brunswick passed a law which contravenes the section of the B.N.A. Act dealing with freedom of trade between provinces. So did Manitoba. Alberta introduced its 'prosperity scrip' which violated three statutes, two of them federal and one imperial.

OTTAWA TOOK NO ACTION

Ottawa did nothing officially about any of these.

If, now, action is taken to disallow the Albert bank legislation one can imagine the outcry there will be, to the effect that while the fundamental rights of the citizen were endangered, nothing was done, but that when the banks were in danger, the Dominion government came to the rescue. One sees the political thorns which entangle the latest developments.

NUMBER OF UNEMPLOYED

The National Employment Commission has published a statement showing that in June 1937, there were estimated to be 932,000 persons receiving direct relief, a reduction of 133,000 from the figure twelve months before.

Of these, only a little more than one-fifth—say 200,000—were employable persons. This means that the number of unemployed, with any chance of ever becoming employed, is down to that number.

This meshes quite closely with the latest figures on industrial employment from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, which shows that employment is now within striking distance of the best levels of 1928 and 1929. Only the fact that 100,000 or more additional workers have entered the labor market in the past eight years prevents all the employed from being absorbed by the latest wave of business improvement. If it is true that there are not more than 200,000 unemployed, in a country where perhaps 2,500,000 are profitably employed, it has been brought down to a point where a little further advance would make the problem relatively easy to solve.

BRUCE BARTON Says:

THERE ARE NO LITTLE THINGS

"One day I summoned up courage to ask the head of our firm how he ever happened to make me an offer to join his business on so short an acquaintanceship. 'a very successful lawyer told me.

His answer was surprising. He said that for years he had been able to secure more business than he could properly handle. As a business getter he was a star; as an organizer of an efficient force he was a failure. He had hired brilliant young chaps out of law school, but somehow they never developed as he hoped. Being brilliant, they expected to get results easily, and if they were whipped a couple of times in court it broke their spirit.

"One night he went home and sat down before the fire to analyze his situation. He decided to look for an entirely different type of man; he listed the qualifications:

1. The man must not be too smart. He must have the habit of working hard for his results.

"2. The man must have been in college athletics, trained to fight for victory, and to keep up his chin in defeat.

"Having made this list, the lawyer asked his friends to recommend men who met the qualifications. One of them named me.

"So you see," my friend concluded, "it was that one little thing, to which I never attached the slightest importance, that made my whole career."

When you hear stories like this, and I have heard many of them, it makes you think that there are no little things. No operation is so insignificant that man can refuse to give it less than his best.

DESERVE AND ELIMINATE

A certain manufacturer, whose products already covered the field, announced his intention of adding still another item to the line. His banker was skeptical. "What excuse is there for it?" he demanded. "Does it meet any real need? Has it any special qualities that make it deserve to succeed?"

The manufacturer replied rather testily that he could not see what deserving had to do with it. There was an opportunity to get more business from a competitor, and he proposed to do so.

The banker protested. "That seems a poor foundation on which to build," he said. He was right. After an expensive and unsuccessful campaign the new product was abandoned.

Another company, whose volume had grown rapidly during the months of prosperity, came into dull times and began to examine its expenses. It discovered that nearly half its overhead could be cut without reducing profits. While things were rolling it had entirely neglected elimination.

The words apply with equal force to individual lives. How many useless habits we loaded in good times! Apparently hard times are necessary once in a while to compel us to eliminate.

As for the word deserve, who has not experienced the increased sense of power which comes when one knows in his heart that his plans and purposes are wholly right? Under the spell of such conviction we astonish forces. We deserve, and the stars in their courses seem to be fighting on our side.

WAGES near 1929 peak

The average weekly wages of workers in American industries have increased by more than 16 percent in the past year, although the length of the average work week has been reduced by 15 percent, the National Industrial Conference Board reports. That means that the average hourly wage of industrial workers has gone up much more than the weekly wage. The weekly earnings of factory hands are now almost exactly where they were at the peak of the "boom" in 1929, while the number now employed in industry is higher than it was then.

This would mean real prosperity if the buying power of wages were as great as it was in 1929, and on that point the Board's report is equally optimistic. The "real" weekly wage, adjusted to actual living costs, is 12 percent above the 1929 average.

Some will attribute this improvement in the American worker's condition to politics. Personally, I regard it as something which was inevitable, which would have come about faster if there had been less political interference.

NEGROES . . . Southern boons

A few weeks ago I visited a typical Southern plantation and had a chance to learn how the negro employees were treated. There are thirty families employed the year 'round on this ten-thousand acre tract, with extra help at cotton-picking and harvest times. The head of each family is paid $30 a month. They get living quarters and fuel free, and all they want of the foodstuffs grown on the place. Most of the cabins have gardens and flocks of poultry. The Negroes have their own community center or 'jook' where they have their dances and social affairs. In case of illness, they get free medical care.

How many Northern white workers, I wonder, have $30 a month left after paying rent, food and doctor's bills? Not many. In addition, the women and older children are given first chance on this plantation to earn extra money at picking time. The Negro foremen get $50 a month and better quarters.

I was reminded of what Booker T. Washington, the great Negro educator, said to me years ago. "The best friend of the Southern Negro is the Southern white man."

JERUSALEM . . . The Moslems

To every Christian, as to every Jew, there is something so sacred about the Holy City that it seems almost a sacrilege to abandon Jerusalem to the Mohammedans, as is proposed by the British commission which has drawn up plans for the new Jewish State of Palestine. "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning," sang the writer of the 137th Psalm. "If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I prefer not Jerusalem to my chief joy."

But while it is a sentimental shock to abandon Jerusalem to the Moslems, when one remembers the blood spilled in the Crusades and the World War to recapture it from them, the practical fact is that the experience of the past twenty years have proved that the Jews and the Arabs cannot occupy the same territory peacefully. So the new Jewish State will go back to the ancient home of the race, Samaria and Galilee, leaving most of Judea to the Arabs.

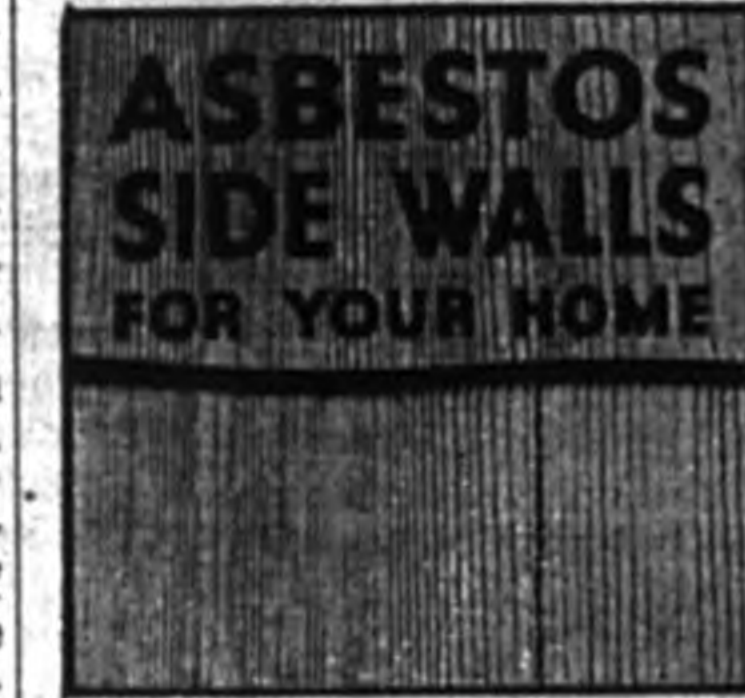

After all, the Ark of the Covenant was brought to Jerusalem by David from Shiloh, in Samaria.

Oft in the Silly Night

Thomas Wayling, in the "Overseas Notes" of Canadian National Railways Magazine for August, waxed enthusiastic over the whoo-ooo-oo of a Canadian whistle which resounded from a streamlined English locomotive, "Dominion of Canada". Pulling the whistle, as the engine embarked on its first run from King's Cross, was Engineer the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King—who was also thrilled, no doubt, to hear a good Canadian toot in contrast with the peep-peep of English engines. It made these latter sound "inadequate", writes Mr. Wayling.

However inadequate these modest peeps may be, it is notable that crossing accidents are conspicuous by their absence in Great Britain, where all level-crossings are protected by gates.

Could Prime Minister King, or Mr. Wayling, sojourn for a while in the town of Lachute, they would find little to thrill them in the note of a Canadian locomotive whistle, which is a constant nightmare to those who dwell near the railway tracks. The long, raucous, reverberant toots are the bane of a quiet life—penetrating the still night, interrupting Sunday church services and making conversation impossible with a quarter mile of the oncoming train. Train engineers have a believable horror of collisions at crossings, but we believe many of them are a trifle too dutiful in applying the whistle.

Boom Ahead - Beware!

One is apt, through force of habit, to refer to the depression as a continuing condition. It is well that we should remember certain aspects of the "slump era", for their lesson should not be lightly overlooked.

However, it takes us by surprise to find ourselves so soon on the verge of comparative prosperity. Individually, this may not seem the case, but collective figures tell a truer story.

In this week's pages two writers for The Watchman, whose analytical articles repay constant reading, point out some interesting facts. Wilfrid Eggleston, our Ottawa correspondent, notes that the figure for "employable" unemployed has struck a new low for recent years; there are 200,000 in this class, compared with 2,500,000 profitably employed. These figures indicate that a little further advance would make the unemployment problem relatively easy to solve. Meanwhile, in the United States, Frank Parker Stockbridge finds the earnings of factory hands exactly where they were at the 1929 peak. The real weekly wage, adjusted to actual living costs, is 12 percent above the 1929 average.

So "these depression days" are gone—passed.

In the dawn of a new prosperity, let us count the follies of the last—the reckless spending, the lack of foresight—and leave ourselves provided for a rainy day that must surely follow.

A Bit of Country

Rural dwellers may think longingly of the bright lights, the libraries, the schools and cultural attributes of city life. But at this time of the year their heritage of green surroundings is a gift unsurpassed by any attraction which pavement, stone and steel may afford to those who dwell amongst them.

A flower committee in Lachute is shipping regular consignments of garden flowers to underprivileged city folks. How rare a sight they may be to the poor, whose sunless homes lurk in the shadow of imposing architecture, is illustrated in a gesture last week to exhibit of little "bit of country" to pavement-bound youngsters in New York. The city's Department of Parks set a vine-enclosed garden on an auto-trailer and made a tour of the kiddies' playgrounds. The variety of plants on the big six-ton float called up visions of the country; among them were marigolds, black-eyed susans, cockscombs, fuchsias, forget-me-nots and roses—cheerful blooms which gladden the round of our summer days here in the country.

Civic Bonfire Every Month

Applause greeted the "civic duty" movement of the Indianapolis Chevrolet Dealers' Association which culminated recently in the public burning of more than 100 junkers at the Fair Grounds in Indianapolis, with 25,000 spectators in attendance.

The "burning of the witches" at Indianapolis was planned, advertised and carried out with the aid of the State Department of Public Safety, county and city safety organizations, and the police and fire departments. It was not a publicity stunt, for the Chevrolet dealers worked and remained in the background. It was not a sporadic safety stunt, for it will be held monthly during the summer months. All automobile dealers in the Indianapolis section were invited to take part in the affair, and indications are that many will participate in the next bonfire of the junkers.

Newspapermen in Indianapolis estimated that the value of the cars burned would total $75,000. The old automobiles were able to run under their own power to the Fair Grounds but they were of the type that the dealers judged a menace to other motorists, to traffic and to pedestrians. After the fire, the metal was sold for junk.

For Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

Canada's radio audience will be keenly interested in the announced plans for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to build two 50 K.W. stations—one at Vercheres, Que., and the other at Hornby, Ontario. These stations, contracts for which were let to the Northern Electric Company, Limited, will be of the very latest design and, with one exception, equal to the most powerful stations on this continent, bringing Canada well in line with our neighbors to the south. These stations are expected to be ready for use early this fall.

Development of Peat Bogs Projected in Prov. Quebec

London, August. T.—Possibility the Quebec Government may utilize extensive peat bogs throughout the province was seen in the return to London of Hon. Martin Fisher, Quebec Provincial Treasurer, after a survey of peat production methods in Denmark.

Fisher, unable to forecast such activity until Quebec Government has considered his report, stated he was favorably impressed by the fuel-production scheme. Quebec, he said, was bent on developing her natural resources, and the peat bogs might be included in this line of endeavor.

In Denmark he found the Government had subsidized a peat-producing plant operating in bogs similar to those in Quebec. He had investigated methods and results, and would lay the whole survey before his Government when he returns at the end of this month.

While in Denmark Fisher was also concerned with the co-operative agricultural marketing system as adopted in that country with considerable success. His report will also deal with that subject.

In London Fisher has been in touch with the Treasury in the hope of obtaining the services of a treasury expert to sit on the taxation commission, which is to review the province's taxation scheme. Fisher, chairman of the proposed commission, declares such a man may be procured if arrangements can be made for him to be temporarily relieved of his present duties. He hopes the commission will begin hearings in the fall, so that a report might be ready when the Legislature meets early in 1938.

Fisher, accompanied by his wife, will visit the Paris Exposition as official representative of Quebec, and County Cavan, in Ireland, before sailing for Canada August 21.

Married At Arundel

LE GALLAIS - BOYD

The marriage of Grace Elizabeth, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Boyd of Arundel, Que., to Mr. Bertram Edw. Le Gallais, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Le Gallais of Port Daniel, was solemnized at ten-thirty o'clock, Saturday morning at Grace Church, Arundel, Rev. Mr. Wolfendale officiating. The church was effectively decorated for the occasion with summer flowers. Miss R. Simon, cousin of the bride, presided at the organ, and "O Perfect Love" was sung by the choir. During the signing of the register, the organist played "I Love You Truly."

Given away by her father the bride wore a gown of white marquisette over satin, fashioned on long graceful lines with a cape to match. Ruchings and white flowers formed the high neckline which was fastened with a crystal platinum pin, a gift of the groom. The bride's veil of tulle illusion fell in a train and orange blossoms formed a coronet. She carried a white prayer book with streamers of pink roses and gypsophylla.

The bridesmaid Miss W. Smith wore an ankle length frock of pastel blue organdie, fashioned on princess lines with a matching hat. She carried a bouquet of gladioli and gypsophylla. Mr. Edgar Boyd, only brother of the bride, acted as best man. Mrs. Boyd, the bride's mother, wore a navy printed gown with accessories to match and a corsage bouquet of red roses.

A luncheon for immediate friends and relatives followed the ceremony at the Log Cabin Tea Room, Arundel. Later the bride and groom left for Ottawa and a ten-days motor trip to Gaspé, the former travelling in pastel blue flowered sheer over taffeta with navy taffeta coat and matching accessories. On their return they will reside at Trinity Bay, Que. The out-of-town guests were Miss Winnifred Smith, Mrs. Lloyd Bennett, Miss Gwen Bennett, Master H. Bennett, Mr. Geoffrey Lessard of Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. H. Simon, Lachine, Mr. and Mrs. Murray MacCullough, of Kilmar, Miss Florence O'Donnell, of Kingston and Miss Jean Ackerman of Montreal.

PRESERVE NATURAL FLOWERS

Those who have seen framed pictures of pressed flowers may have wondered whose imagination and genius were responsible for these attractive novelties, and also, how anyone managed to preserve the flowers in such naturalness. Mrs. Mary Harrison Snider, of Davenport, Iowa, and her sister, Mrs. Cora Harrison Schafer, of California, originated the craft and devoted seven years to working out a plan for flowers of such hues as could be most naturally preserved. Mrs. Schafer's husband, a chemist, suggested the chemicals to perpetuate the natural colours of the flowers. The two women work separately and both have the privilege of gathering specimens in certain public parks. They were invited to hold a joint exhibition at the Century of Progress in Chicago, since when there has grown up a continued demand for their pictures.

August 14, 1934.

If all the world were mine to give,
I'd give it, yes and more,
To see her loving smile again
And greet her at the door.
How oft there comes before me
Her dear face kind and true,
For death can never take away
Sweet memories, Mother dear, of you.
Ever remembered by her son,
Herbert.

Holiday Down by the Sea

The Maritimes, where Canada begins, offer a combination of holiday attractions that have made the three sea-girt provinces very popular among Canadians and Americans alike.

The rare mixture of historic sites, scenic beauty, and opportunities for all types of out-door sports gives New Brunswick and Nova Scotia an unusual attraction for visitors.

The Algonquin Hotel, at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, holds its place as New Brunswick's leading resort by virtue of its splendid position on the bay of Fundy.

its two fine golf courses, and its facilities for fishing, boating, and other sports. Open from June 28 to September 7, the Algonquin is particularly popular among Americans because of the nearness of President Roosevelt's summer home at Campobello.

Across the Bay of Fundy—a delightful trip by the steamer Princess Helene—from Saint John to Digby, lies Nova Scotia. Visitors are always interested in that section where the poignant story of Evangeline was enacted. Canadian Pacific Railway hotels at leading holiday points in Nova Scotia include: The Pines, at Digby, open from June 25 to September 11; Lakeside Inn, near Yarmouth, open from June 28 to September 7; and Cornwallis Inn, at Kentville, in the heart of the Land of Evangeline, open all year. Chief amusements at these resorts are golf, tennis, motoring, sea fishing, boating, and bathing. The pictures above show Evangeline Well at Grand Pré; the "Princess Helene" which joins Nova Scotia and New Brunswick; Katy's Cove at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, N.B.; a typical Nova Scotia fishing schooner; and a social gathering at Lakeside Inn, Yarmouth, N.S.

WATERLOR PEACE PRIZE FOR BADEN-POWELL

Lord Baden-Powell, World Chief Scout, has been awarded the 1937 Waterlor peace prize of $10,000, "for valuable services to international good will by means of the Boy Scout organization." The Waterlor prize was founded by a Netherlander of that name, who left his entire fortune to endow an annual prize to be awarded the person contributing the most valuable service in the cause of peace.

WORLD SCOUT LEADERS CONFERENCE

Boy Scout Association leaders representing 34 different countries and the British Empire will meet at The Hague, Holland, August 10, 11 and 12, for the 9th International Scout Conference. The gathering occurs during the World Scout Jamboree being held in Holland from July 31 to August 13. The Conference will be preceded by a meeting of the International Scout Association Committee, with H.R.H. Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden in the chair.

A BONFIRE DOG RESCUE

The rescue of a dog from a Coronation bonfire was the unusual act of gallantry that won the Scout Gilt Cross for Assistant Scoutmaster Robert Sellman of Ighman, England. While helping keep the crowds back from the big beacon Sellman was informed that a dog had dashed into the base of the pyre and collapsed. Pulling his Scout hat over his face and turning up his collar, Sellman ran in to the fire, and in spite of the terrific heat of burning wood, oil and motor tires, groped for the dog, and found it. Immediately the animal seized his hand in its mouth. By this hold, and although his hand was badly lacerated, Sellman dragged the dog to safety. Unfortunately the animal was so seriously burned that it had to be destroyed. The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals awarded Assistant Scoutmaster Sellman the Association's Bronze Medal.

Fortune in Pants

In need of a pair of trousers, William Whittington, a relief worker at Ontario, Cal., went into a second-hand store and bought a pair for 50 cents. In a pocket of these reconditioned pants, he found a United States $5 bill dated 1866 which has on it the likeness of an Indian instead of the usual picture of George Washington. Whittington has sold the bill to a banker for $1,000, who says only two such bills are in existence. The banker will have it put up for sale at a collectors' auction and if it brings more than $1,000, he will divide with Whittington.

Young Messenger Lost Message in His Ear

London, Eng. — Eleven-year-old Arthur Sidney Edwards, of Nelson road, Hornsey, wants to be a King's Messenger when he grows up. Already he has shown aptitude for the work—but it has landed him in difficulties.

He was playing in Highgate Woods with a party of boys from the Hornsey Y.M.C.A. Boys' Club. As "King's Messenger", he was given a message to take through the "enemy lines" to headquarters.

He rolled the paper into a ball and hid it in his ear. When the "enemy" caught him they could not find the message.

Neither could Arthur. It had slipped into his ear and he could not get it out. Eventually he was taken to Hornsey Central Hospital, where the message was extracted—and duly delivered.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Aug. 15th, is "Soul". The Golden Text is:—"My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God: when shall I come and appear before God?" (Psalms 42: 2)

The following passages are selected from the Bible and the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:—

"How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God." (Psalms 84: 1, 2).

"Soul or Spirit signifies Deity and nothing else. There is no finite soul nor spirit. Soul or Spirit means only one Mind, and cannot be rendered in the plural." (Science and Health, page 466).

"You have only one needle and one record for your phonograph?"

"Yes; you see, as they both wear down the tune changes."

A DISAPPOINTED CAT

"Where are you going, Sparrow Wee?"
Said a pussy cat one day,
As she sneaked along the old stone wall,
That skirted the broad highway.
The sparrow bobbed his tiny head
And chirped a neat reply—
"That's my business, Mistress Puss,
And to mind it I always try."
"And this is mine", old Pussy said
And sprang for the sparrow wee,
Who chirped quite saucily, "Mrs. Puss, You're smart but you can't catch me!"

For a time after Captain Rolfe's speech, there was no sound but the sizzling of fish in the frying pan and the soft rattle of sea shells as Ted lifted them carefully and held them to his ears to listen to the hushing sound which came from inside them; and which some have claimed to be the crooning lullaby of mermaids singing themselves to sleep. The time passed so quickly that Ted looked up with a start of surprise when he heard his aunt's voice outside the tent and Captain Rolfe was welcoming her to his seaside home.

Later, as they sat eating the delicious dinner of baked clams and fried bass with mealy potatoes, Ted's aunt asked Captain Rolfe if he lived in the tent during the winter as well as in the summer.

"I used to spend the year 'round here, Miss, but lately I have found the winters too cold. I am getting real old you know and not so rugged as I used to be, so I move back a bit into the village. But I just count the days until I can live close to the sea again."

"Did you always live close to the sea?" Ted asked, eager to have a part in the conversation too.

"Always, Sonny, always. That is when I did not live on it. I went to sea when I was a bit of a lad. The folks did not want me to, but I signed up unknown to them and went, leaving a note on the kitchen table for my mother. I could not go away and not let her know where I was."

"Of course not!" Ted said, his eyes open wide at the idea of anyone not telling his mother where he was going.

"Did they not try to stop you from going, when they found out?" asked Miss Elliott, "or were you too far out at sea for that?"

"My father came down to the ship, Miss, but when I saw him coming I ran and hid in the bottom of the Captain's cupboard, amongst his long boots. I was so afraid that he would drag me back home."

"Did he not?" Ted asked excitedly.

Captain Rolfe looked out towards the sea for a moment, as though living the past over in his memory, before replying, "No, laddie, he did not. I expected he'd want me to go back; and perhaps he did, but my father was a stern man and thought that the best way to punish me was to let me go and learn my lesson. He had me brought up from the Captain's cabin, where the first mate had seen me going. But as I stood shivering before him all that he said, as he stood looking down at me, was 'Boy, you have made your bed, now lie on it'—meaning that in future, whatever happened me, I could look after myself. . . . I shall never forget my terrible loneliness as he turned and walked away and suddenly realized that I never would go home again to stay, for I knew that my father always meant what he said. If the captain, who was a rough man, had not ordered me to do some work right away I'm afraid that I would have lain down on the floor and cried like a baby. But there was no time, for Captain Flood had to be obeyed."

"Did you like to work for him?" asked Ted.

"I can't say that I did. He was a bit of a tartar. One could never move fast enough for him, and many's a time I was helped across the deck with the toe of his boot, and I am afraid that I was wicked enough to be glad when he broke his leg."

"The poor man!" Miss Elliott said in a pitying tone.

"He was a poor man!" said Captain Rolfe. "I realize that now, but he was too fond of his beer—which is not good for any man." Captain Rolfe held up his finger in front of Ted as though speaking to him alone. "It robs a man of his senses, or his money, and his power to walk steadily—and it makes an ass of him in general. This time that I am telling you about, the captain was drunk and fell again' a plank, and his leg snapped like a pipe-stem. And there he lay in his bunk for weeks, cursing like a mad-man, and often the one who carried him his food got it pitched in his face. Many a time I carried it to him and set it on the bench beside his bunk and ran away so quickly that he did not have time to hit me with anything."

(Trenton Courier-Advocate)

There was a porcupine on the road in front of the car the other day and it didn't appear to want to leave the roadway. So we got out of the car to chase it away when one of the women passengers cautioned us not to get too close to it as it might throw its quills at us.

We asked the lady if she ever threw her hair at anybody. Porcupines don't throw their quills. They don't have to. Mad dogs and foolish persons run foul of these quills when they touch the animal, the quills being loose for purposes of protection.

Indian women do some mighty fine work with porcupine quills, dyeing them various colors and using them in the making of moccasins and articles of adornment.

A TOURIST'S PARADISE

A party of four Americans, off the cruise boat Britannic, were on a Belt Line car in Halifax, seeing the city. When they came to the corner of Oxford St. and Cobourg Road, they saw a beautiful view of the North-West Arm. (Incidentally I have yet to see a Halifax person turn his head to look at it). Excitedly they asked the conductor to stop the car so that they might take a picture of it. They got that one. Then when they came to Dalhousie University they wanted a picture of it. The car was stopped to get pictures of the Public Gardens, Lord Nelson Hotel and finally they asked a Postie to pose beside the street car. They said that was the best one of all. The party of four had nine cameras. Halifax does things in a leisurely way, but I think even in Halifax to stop the tram-car to take snapshots must be a record.

THE SUMMER VISITOR

Man's inhumanity to women in the matter of summer visitors is hard to understand. People flock to a summer cottage without definite invitation. Each feels that he will be welcome, as very likely they would be if they were the only visitors. But when carload after carload turns up day after day, it becomes unbearable. I have known women come home from their cottage in the middle of the summer because they were exhausted from working after visitors. One family gave up their cottage on the mainland and moved to an island, which was not nearly as convenient, because no one could get to them unless by special arrangement. A woman whose year round home is by the ocean in a most beautiful place, has gone inland for the summer to escape visitors. Everyone likes to have company but not everyone likes unexpected company or too much. A hostess should be allowed to make her own arrangements and it is a wise rule to never go to a summer home without a definite arrangement. Women at cottages are not the only sufferers. A farm is a lovely place to spend a day in summer and many a farmer's wife never has a Sunday of rest. One family tried packing a picnic basket and leaving early in the day before visitors could arrive. They tried their own bush but that was not far enough away for the exploring guests, so they had to travel farther afield. The climax came when one Sunday, on returning home, they found that their relations had opened a window and climbed in, and had eaten all the food that was ready for Monday, and to add insult to injury, had not even bothered to wash the dishes.

A RESTFUL MEAL

A family was going on a picnic when the little girl asked her mother if she could have her share of the 'picnic' and stay at home, alone, just to be able to eat where and how she wanted. This was not allowed but in thinking it over, her mother decided that probably the steady grind of sitting up at a table, watching her manners, and always having to eat the things she should, was wearing. So the next day she made sandwiches and put them on a tray with some cookies, some fresh fruit and a glass of milk, and told her daughter to take her supper and a book, and eat just where she liked. Immediately the other children wanted to do this too. It was such a success that most days through the holidays, the children had their supper by themselves. They ate on the verandah, in various places in the garden, or on the back steps. But the choice was theirs. The children that were old enough, and that included a boy, helped get their own supper which was usually sandwiches. They had a restful meal with a book and the parents found it a pleasant change to have a quiet, peaceful meal with no disciplining necessary. The little girl who was underweight, ate about twice as much as she did ordinarily and put on weight. If the summer holidays are becoming a bit wearing, you might adopt this plan with success.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 cup blueberries, 1/4 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon. Sift dry ingredients. Add the blueberries. Stir in the milk, beaten egg and melted butter, which have been mixed. Stir only enough to mix. Bake in a hot oven of 400° for 25 minutes.

TARTAR SAUCE

1 cup mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon chopped sweet gherkins, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon chopped stuffed olives, 1 teaspoon chopped onion, 1/4 teaspoon salt.

Mix mayonnaise with the remaining ingredients which have been very finely chopped. Serve with the fish.

LAKE TROUT

Cold boiled lake trout is almost as good as salmon. Serve with cucumbers and salad dressing. If your fish is too large for immediate use, sousé the remainder. Cover with diluted vinegar and it will keep in a cool place for some days.

There's a Difference

English feminists are agitating to secure abolition of the titles "Mrs." and "Miss" as constituting a quite unnecessary and sometimes deprecatory distinction between married and unmarried women. Men, say these women, are not required to advertise their status in this regard. "Mr." might mean either a bachelor or a benedict. The point is this, dear ladies, that while there is nothing in a woman's appearance to indicate her marital relationship a married man has an air about him that needs no special title to emblazon his condition to the world. Choose any ten women in the street and we defy anyone to tell whether they are married or single. Hence a distinctive handle is desirable.

YEARS

I have tossed the years away
Like the gay balloons.
With which little children play
On June afternoons.
Carelessly I watched them flee,
Eager for the joys
That tomorrow promised me.
What were years but toys?
Now they far away have flown,
Should a vagrant year [known
Backward drift from realms un-
Shall I hold it dear?
No, for now with eyes grown wise,
I can dimly see,
Back of time and transient skies,
Lies eternity.

Public Food No. 1

Cleanliness Guards Purity

Dairy farmers, since the days of Gail Borden's first factory, have progressed steadily in their methods of producing pure milk and keeping it sanitary. All that science, modern equipment and trained men offer are used in Borden factories to back up the efforts of dairymen to guard milk's purity. In helping to establish present high sanitary standards for milk, dairy farmers and distributors together have promoted public health, reduced infant mortality and placed milk and its products first in the food lists of the nation.

"ALL-BRAN LIVES UP TO REPUTATION"

If you are troubled with common constipation, read Miss Bundy's enthusiastic letter:

"I used to feel poorly all the time—just down and out. After reading an advertisement about ALL-BRAN, I got a box. It has helped me ever since."—Miss Mary Bundy (address on request).

Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brings "bulk" to exercise the intestines; vitamin B to tone up the intestinal tract.

Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water. This soft mass gently clears the intestines in a safe, natural way—without any of the weakening action of pills and drugs.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—with every meal in severe cases. Serve as a cereal with milk or fruits, or cook into recipes. Remember—ALL-BRAN is a food—not a medicine. You buy it at the grocery store. Made by Kellogg in London.

Washable Bathroom Walls

Every bathroom cannot have tiled or waterproof walls. In modernizing a home the owner does not always feel justified in spending the necessary amount for this type of room. If so, other wall coverings may be used successfully.

Wainscoting of oil cloth or linoleum is a good substitute for tiling. It is easy to apply and may be used to obtain a variety of colorful effects. This washable material makes the problem of keeping walls clean a simple one. Junior's fingerprints may be eradicated by a mere flick of a damp cloth. Linoleum or other composition flooring may be used in place of a tile floor.

An excellent dressing table may be obtained by building a shelf across the walls in front of a window. This may be painted to conform with the other decorations of the room, a glass top may be made or it may be draped in the fashion of a boudoir table. A standing mirror placed directly in the window is a distinct aid to make-up.

Through the Home Improvement Plan of the Dominion Government credit-worthy homeowners may obtain funds from any Canadian bank with which to modernize the interior of their homes.

Letter of Mother Is Read to Auto Speeders

Philadelphia, July 5.—Fifty persons held on traffic violation charges heard a grim sermon from Magistrate John J. Eberhardt.

The magistrate simply read a letter from a mother. It said: "Dear Judge: My son was to come before you for a hearing because he passed a stop sign on June 5. My son was killed in an automobile accident on June 6".

SUMMER SALADS

Do you remember the trouble poor "Alice in the Looking Glass" had with her cakes? One made her shrink almost out of sight and the other made her uncomfortably large so that she had to work out a happy blending of the two to keep herself her own pleasant natural size.

Summer diet offers the housewife just such a problem in balance as "Alice's." Too many heavy foods are distasteful, if not absolutely harmful, while light foods constantly served become insipid and tiresome. So, in order to find a happy medium between the two hearty and the too dainty we turn to salads.

Summer salads, more often than not, fill dual roles. The fish and meat salad answers for main course as well as salad course and the fruit salad does duty for salad and dessert. Choose your salad and build your menu around it and your meals will be well balanced and interesting.

When the salad takes the place of the usual hot main course begin the meal with a hot soup and finish up with one of those favorite old-fashioned desserts like dumplings and cobbles and roly-polys. A hot vegetable like sweet corn or lima beans should be served with the main course.

The menu planned to include the salad and dessert combination may start with a chilled first course, go on to the usual hot main course and finish up with crackers and cheese and coffee. Jellied bouillon, chilled vegetable juice cocktail or a zesty appetizer such as sardine make splendid first courses for this type of meal. Since the dessert-salad invariably is a fruit combination, it's better not to make the first course of fruit.

These dessert salads are ideal for summer entertaining, too. Served with a tray of sandwiches and hot coffee they are refreshing and satisfying.

FROZEN FRUIT SALAD

One-half pound or 32 marshmallows, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 cups diced pears or peaches, 1/2 cup quartered marshmallows, 1 1/2 cups crushed pineapple drained from juice, 2 cups ginger ale, 1 cup mayonnaise, 1 cup whipping cream, 1/4 teaspoon salt.

Add lemon juice to marshmallows and heat over hot water or over a very low heat until softened. Remove from heat and stir until dissolved. Chill while preparing fruit. To chilled marshmallow mixture add ginger ale and mayonnaise. Stir in prepared fruits and fold in cream whipped until firm. Season with salt and turn into freezing trays. Freeze at coldest temperature until firm, then ripen two or three hours longer at normal temperature. Cut in squares and serve on chilled shredded lettuce. If you don't want to freeze in mechanical refrigerator, turn mixture into mold and pack in eight parts finely chopped ice to one part ice cream salt. Let stand two or three hours, freezing without stirring.

This recipe makes enough for eight large servings.

If you need more shelf room for books in your living room, consider framing a door or window with shelves. Use the top shelf that spans the opening for old china or any "oddments" you may have and see how much interest they add to the room.

—A new use for sponges has been discovered by a fastidious New York traffic officer who had difficulty in removing lint from his dark uniform. He tried a mermaid dry sponge and found that all lint was easily removed in a jiffy. Pass this hint on to hubby to show him you know a thing or two.

OR SO IT SEEMS (Guelph Mercury)

Women have a better sense of hearing than the average man. Some married women can even hear ash dropping upon the carpet.

Doctor: "Well, madam, what is your ailment?"

Old Lady: "Pains in my arms, doctor, I can hardly lift them over my head, and it's the same with my legs."

"What makes your wife so suspicious of your stenographer?"

"It so happens that my wife was my stenographer before I married."

FOR BETTER HEALTH BY DR. J. ROSSLYN EARP

ALCOHOL AND THE MIND

In the year 1923 a statistical study was made of all patients who were admitted during the previous year to mental hospitals for their first attack of mental disorder on account of alcohol. There were 2,693 such patients and 1,983, almost three-quarter of them, were between 30 and 55 years of age. To lose the use of one's mind at any age is tragic enough but to lose it in the full maturity of physical and intellectual life is a social as well as a personal tragedy.

These patients had been drinking heavily for a number of years. In many cases the health of the body had also been affected, the most common complaint being inflammation of the stomach. Several kinds of mental disorder are found among these patients. Some lost control of their emotions: They became disgruntled and easily angered, or facetious, careless and improvident. Others imagine enemies among their neighbors, become jealous without cause, a prey to fears that are unfounded. Others again are delirious, see creatures and hear voices that do not really exist.

But before there is such loss of contact with the real world as can be certified as insanity there are signs from which the wise may take warnings: dependence on drink to avoid discomfort; perpetual need for a "stimulant"; a desire to escape from the difficulties of life; broken sleep disturbed by dreams; tremor and diffidence. All these may come from drinking alcohol, may be temporarily dispelled by drinking more alcohol in a vicious circle. The circle can be broken but only under conditions of helpful discipline. Such conditions can rarely be provided outside of a special institution.

Lapps Originated in Asia

The Lapps are generally conceded to be a mongoloid people who originated in northeastern Asia, not far from Lake Baikal. They probably followed the edge of the inland ice as it shrank northward, at the end of the latest ice age, and wandered westward across the steppes of Asia to the Arctic regions of northern Europe. At one time they spread southward down the Scandinavian peninsula; but, persecuted by stronger tribes, they retreated to the frozen tundras of the Arctic, where most of them have remained ever since.

Gets Prison Term, Tire-Theft Case

GUILTY OF RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS

Arraigned on August 4th on a charge of receiving stolen goods, T. Massie, a young man of this vicinity, appeared again at the Court House in Lachute for trial yesterday. District Magistrate D. Lalande heard the case, involving the theft of truck tires from the cellar of I. Laurin, fruit merchant—which tires, valued at $175, had been sold to local truck owners at a third of their regular price. The arrest was made by Constable Gervais and the goods were recovered. Crown Attorney G. Héon was prosecutor at the trial, and Justice Lalande, finding the man guilty, imposed a sentence of one month in jail, exercising leniency in consideration of the prisoner's dependants and circumstances. The judge also reprimanded the three who had bought the stolen tires from the accused, pointing out that the low price he asked must inevitably have cast suspicion on his legitimate ownership.

The day was spent in community singing interspersed with band music provided by members of Lachute Brass Band under Bandmaster A. Guenette, and in sports well conducted by W. Jolicoeur and Dr. E. Lalande. A number of promising cases of sunburn were noticed in mid-afternoon, but probably the most popular spot on the grounds, (among

Took 5 Hours 30 Minutes to Settle Fire Insurance Claim

LOSS WAS MADE GOOD IN RECORD TIME

With records being established daily in every line of activity, a local "high" was set this week in the prompt settlement of an insurance claim.

At 2.30 Tuesday afternoon fire damaged the furnishings of a dwelling occupied by I. Desrosiers on Chatham street. The insurance agent was advised, who in turn notified the adjuster. The latter came promptly from Montreal to investigate, and a cheque was handed to the claimant at 8 p.m. The amount was small, under $100. The contents of the home were insured with the Rhode Island Fire Ins. Co., through the office of E. Deslauriers & Co., agents.

Third Bereavement in Local Family

The sympathy of this community is extended to Mrs. Cyril Boyd and her two little children, in the loss of a well-loved member of their family—Russell, at the age of 8 years and 16 days.

This is the third bereavement suffered in the family—the father, Cyril Boyd, having first passed away thirteen months ago, following a long illness; then a daughter, Glenneth, who died in January, and Russell, whose death occurred on Sunday of this week.

The lad had been recovering from an attack of jaundice, and had been running around, until Friday when his condition be-

News! Government Revenues Exceed Expenses; Possible Surplus This Year

EGGLESTON SEES ENCOURAGING TURN IN TIDE.
WITHHOLDS PREDICTION BALANCED BUDGET

"The Ottawa Spotlight"

Ottawa, August 17.—Government revenues are flowing in at a most encouraging rate. No new taxes were imposed last session, so that the increase is all due to greater activity in business. The income tax reflecting 1936 income, is millions ahead of last year. The sales tax is bringing in vast sums, and customs and excise receipts are also well above last year's. The government for the first time in seven or eight years is taking in more than it is spending—a very agreeable experience after so much deficit. It is too soon to make any useful prediction, but based on the experience of the first four months, the budget will balance next spring. If it does, it will surpass even the forecast of the Minister of Finance, who believed that he could keep the deficit down to $5 millions, but who expressed no hope that he could obtain a clear surplus above all. It will be a notable achievement, for which the credit should not go to this Finance Minister or that, but to the "forgotten man" of Canada, the ordinary taxpayer.

BIG INCREASE IN DEBT

Since the deficits began in 1931, Dominion Government expenditures have totalled about $850,000,000 more than government receipts, and the national

Tales and Recollections of a Fine Old County Family

(Contributed)

For some years I have written, in an off hand way, for the columns of The Lachute Watchman, hoping to keep the home fires burning as well as to help create an interest in our local paper that would tend to increase its circulation. I have fired my random guns on and at the subjects of the day as they came to view, and I am pleased to state that, to some extent, I have succeeded—for it is not an uncommon thing to meet some one who says "We are taking the local paper now in order to get the reading of your letters; we enjoy them very much". But, as you will see below, all are not of that opinion. Why should they be?

My last two letters, however, one on the state of political tutelage we suffer in the Province of Quebec, and the other on Meikle's Fair, have met with favorable criticism. In the latter case I was fearful that perhaps I had confused my recollections with other fairs, in western Canada; but one of my mother's younger contemporaries, who is still alive, has on reading it soundly rated me for being so moderate in my descriptions of Meikle's Fair and the great toasts among the quality that used to attend it—from the West Indies and the Southern and New England States—sons and daughters of planters—Louis Alcott and her sisters; Edward Westcott, the author of "David Harnam"; and his cousins the Maithys and Babcocks; and the Fairbanks, famous scale-makers. My great-grandfather's and -grandmother's people, the Treadwells and Platts of Plattsburg, took occasion to visit their relatives in Canada about that time of the year and be on hand

Cows Electrocuted in Last Thursday's Storm

In the severe electric storm which swept this district last Thursday, Douglas Bradford, North River farmer, lost two cows which were standing in the pasture near a wire fence. The animals, Grade Ayrshires of considerable value, fell in a position which indicated they had been in contact with the wire, and were electrocuted when the lightning struck. The loss occurred at around 5.30 p.m.

Brigade Answered Several Fire-Calls During Week

ADDED WATER PRESSURE ON GRACE STREET

Saturday morning was a busy session for the Lachute fire brigade, which responded to three calls within an hour. At 10 and 10.30 respectively chimney fires occurred at the homes of Jno. Blow and J. Normand, and at 11 a.m. a third call was received from Gordonville, where a summer cottage was consumed by fire. It was feared that neighboring frame houses in this summer community might take fire from flying sparks, and although the Lachute pump was summoned too late to save the building, a stream of water was played on the debris and further danger averted. It is understood a request had been sent to Ste. Scholastique, four miles distant, but no assistance was given by the fire department there.

On Monday afternoon local firemen quelled a blaze at the house of Wm. Morrisette occupied by I. Desrosiers on Chatham street, where an oil lantern used in cleaning out the cellar had exploded and flames had travelled up through the wall to the kitchen and attic. Damage, estimated at $300 on the house and contents, was covered by insurance.

Mr. Paul LaHaye of St. Jerome, Country Sales and Export Department of the National Breweries Limited, has recently been elected Vice-President of the Quebec Provincial Hockey League. Mr. LaHaye, formerly of this town, is well known in sporting circles throughout the province. As an amateur boxer he held the Light Heavyweight Quebec Provincial Championship from 1918 to 1921 and the Dominion Light Heavyweight Championship in 1921. He was also a sparring partner to Jack Dempsey. Friends of Mr. LaHaye will join in congratulating him on his well deserved recognition.

CALEDONIA SPRINGS WAS A BOOMING HEALTH RESORT HALF CENTURY AGO

The Watchman of August 12, 1887, gave the following description of Caledonia Springs, a nearby resort which was at the peak of its popularity 50 years ago.

The season at Caledonia this year has been a very lively one in point of numbers. The Grand Hotel has been crowded during the past four weeks.

The Springs are reached by three modes of travelling. First, by rail to Calumet. Secondly, by the Steamer Benito, on which you can pay 25c and buy a cigar, to L'Original, where the third mode of travelling is commenced and the Caledonia Coaches carry you to the Springs, a distance of nine miles. The countryside is flat and devoid of scenery.

The Grand Hotel is a large summer structure. To a stranger the following would first attract his attention. A collection of people on the piazza consisting of young, old, lame, halt, but not blind. You do not imagine for one moment that all are cripples; at the height of the season, the cripples are almost lost sight of. Playing euche, draughts, dominoes, croquet, tennis at the bowling alley, and playing the piano are the chief amusements.

The Springs are but a short distance from the Hotel. The water in the first spring is called the "gas water," because it is constantly evolving carburetted hydrogen. About 35 feet distant is the saline spring. This water is salty to the taste and acts as a purgative. Ordinarily, the saline is used in the morning, a quart pitcherful being heated and placed at the door of every room. After breakfast the sulphur is drunk, and in the evening the gas water.

Altogether a brief stay at the Springs should be beneficial to one who is needing a rest.

WATCHMAN PUBLISHER ATTENDED ANNUAL CONVENTION OF ASSOCIATION AT HALIFAX

INTERESTING SPEAKERS

Combining pleasure with business, the editor of The Watchman spent a few days last week in mingling with his confreres at the 18th Annual Convention, which met at Halifax from August 12th. to 14th. A fine representation from all provinces were on hand, many of whom were accompanied by their wives.

With usual liberality the railway and steamship companies extended transportation privileges, the C.P.R. supplying a special train from Windsor Station for greater convenience of the party which numbered over 200.

A pleasing break in the journey down was the trip across the Bay of Fundy from Saint John to Digby where we were entertained at The Pines, given freedom of the beautiful hostelry, many enjoying the opportunity of their first salt-water bathing.

Guest speakers for the occasion were Joseph H. Casey, Professor of Journalism, Oklahoma University; Mrs. Jessie Allen Brown, writer of "Hints for Housewives"; J. George Johnston, Secretary, Chain Stores Association; Miss F. E. Clowdworth of Toronto, Secretary of the Association of Canadian Advertisers; Rev. A. Stanley Walker, Professor of History, University of King's College, Halifax; and Louis Blake Duff of Welland.

The business sessions were all most interesting and helpful, much valued information being passed along in the general discussions, and timely addresses were interspersed with the varied civic functions.

Adjourning at noon on the first day we were treated to a motor drive via the Dartmouth Lakes as guests of the City of Halifax, and a luncheon at "Green Acres" furnished by the Barber-Ellis Paper Company, the ladies of the party being taken on board the S.S. Lady Drake as guests of the Canadian National Railway.

Aged Woman Electrocuted Near Ste. Agathe, Que.

TOUCHED WIRE FENCE
IN CONTACT WITH POWER LINE

Mrs. Narcisse Brazeau, 76-year-old resident of Ivry, just north of Ste. Agathe, was instantly killed when she touched a fence charged with electricity from a broken power line.

The electric wire, it is understood snapped a short distance from the Brazeau home and fell across the fence. Fire broke out in a fence post opposite the house and Mrs. Brazeau attempted to extinguish the blaze with a pail of water. In some manner she came in contact with the charged fence wire and was electrocuted.

Her husband, attracted by the flames, reached the scene to find his wife's clothing on fire. He received a slight shock as he attempted to rescue the woman, but his condition was not serious.

Papineau County Woman Passes Her 101st Milestone

Papineau county's oldest resident, Mrs. Edouard Maheu, of Masson, observed her 101st birthday last Saturday.

The venerable lady's eyesight is remarkably sharp; she is still able to read without the use of glasses. Her alacrity is also amazing, for she needs no assistance in getting about and can walk just as firmly and quickly as many women much younger than herself. Mrs. Maheu displays a keen interest in the modern trend of living and is quick to express herself on the changing styles.

Mrs. Maheu has lived in Masson for 69 years. Her husband is dead. A native of Ste. Scholastique, born on August 14, 1836, she is the eldest child of the late Mr. and Mrs. Pascal Belaire.

On her last birthday, Mrs. Maheu said she had not made an application for an old age pension, but since that time she asked for a pension and is now receiving it.

Drought Proof Wheat Is Sought by Ottawa

Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director of Experimental Farms, said last week at Ottawa that extensive studies were being made to develop a variety of wheat which will grow "under abnormal conditions of low precipitation."

Dr. Archibald told the National Association of Local Government Officers of Great Britain, visiting in the Capital, that he had just returned from several weeks of study in the Saskatchewan drought areas and that he was "hopeful" certain varieties of wheat now developed might be made adaptable to the semi-arid areas.

Lady Golfers Active at Lachute Course

The ladies' branch of the Lachute Golf Club held their monthly supper at the clubhouse on Thursday, Aug. 12th, with Miss Agnes MacDougall and Mrs. Kilgour Wilson as convenors. Due to the storm the attendance was not as large as usual.

During the month of August, the lady golfers are playing two-weekly competitions, on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

Play for the President's Prize is now in the second round, while the qualifying round for the Avers Cup started on Tuesday of this week.

Honored by Members of Lachute Hundred Club

At an impromptu supper last night in the dining room of Desjardins Hotel, members of the Hundred Club gathered to honor Mr. Hugh McEntyre, a fellow Centurion who joins the benedicts next Saturday. Good wishes were freely expressed, for success in his approaching marriage and for long years of happiness. On behalf of the Club, President Geo. Héon presented the honored guest with an electric mantel clock. Brief speeches of congratulation were interspersed with community songs, and a pleasant meeting concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

Old-Time Rivalry Between Lumber Gangs on Ottawa and Rouge Rivers

RIVERMEN IN PITCHED BATTLE ON HAWKESBURY'S MAIN STREET

Back in the days of river driving and square timber rafting the Ottawa river produced a galaxy of sun-bronzed giants who would just as soon fight as eat—says a reminiscence article in the "Old Time Stuff" page of the Ottawa Citizen. While it is true that the great majority of these red-shirted men of the forest and river were employed in the great lumber camps of the Upper Ottawa and Gatineau rivers, it is a fact that the now silent forests of the historic county of Argenteuil, many miles east, west and north of Grenville, once echoed to the songs and shouts of lumberjacks as they went about their work of felling trees and preparing logs for the spring drives down the various tributaries to the Ottawa.

In those days there was far more uncut bush on the Ottawa above Grenville than anywhere else. And in those roistering, fighting days of river rivalry, stirring scenes were enacted in the taverns and on the main streets of Grenville and its sister town, Hawkesbury, across the river. The exploits of these fighting gentry and their memories live in local annals all up and down the Ottawa.

Great Rivalry

There are many still living at the head of the Long Sault who recall those turbulent years or who retain excellent memory records of stories handed down by their forebears. One of these is William Timbers, veteran resident of Hawkesbury, whose father, the late James Timbers, was for many years connected with the Hawkesbury Mills when they were still in the control of the Hamilton family. Mr. Timbers recalls that there was great rivalry between the men who came down the Ottawa on the great square timber rafts and those who drove the logs down the tributaries of Argenteuil county. This rivalry, he says, often found an outlet in the form of pitched battles on the main street of Hawkesbury. At one time the Goulins worked large timber limits on the Rouge river. In the spring of each year they drove their logs down the Rouge and rafted them at the head of the Long Sault on the Ontario side. The foreman of the south shore crowd was John Kirby, who, Mr. Timbers says, "was no lady's man" when he got embroiled in a fight. He could cut a wide swath through the sturdiest of opposition.

Bitter Conquest

Kirby used to drive the men in wagons from Hawkesbury to Point Fortune. But there were occasions when, before they were ready to start on their journey to Point Fortune the square timber fellows would come over from Grenville. That was always a signal for hostilities to begin. Then right out on the main boulevard, about where Hersey's Creek is, they would go at it hammer and tong. The swarthy Kirby leading his cohorts in a desperate onslaught against their foes. They would fight for hours at a time—until one side or the other was vanquished.

Such were the scenes of long ago in the now peaceful settlement of Hawkesbury.

GRAZING METHODS, HOW COWS BROWSE

"Learn grazing management by watching the nose end of a cow. Too many animal husbandmen are inclined to consider only the performance at the other end." In these and other epigrammatic expressions the importance of close grazing was emphasized by Professor D. B. Johnstone-Wallace, Agronomist, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., who spoke on the subject of "The Improvement and Management of Pastures in the Northeastern States" at the annual conference of the Federal Provincial Pasture Committee, held at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in June.

Professor Johnstone-Wallace considered that the proper type of pasture is one consisting of a dense covering of grass and clover, resembling a good lawn ready to cut with the lawn mower, and should not exceed four inches in height at any time. When the grasses become tall and fibrous they are unpalatable, less nutritious, and the animals waste much valuable time in grazing. A cow's time is worth something, and part of it should be devoted to rest and rumination.

Early grazing should be carried to the point of punishing the grasses severely, since only in this way can the clover by given the necessary encouragement. Once the clover is well established it will pass on to the grasses some of the nitrogen which it gathers from the atmosphere, and both can then live together in mutual harmonious co-operation. But the grasses should never be permitted to get too far ahead of the clover, as the latter can't stand shade, and close mowing of tall herbage is recommended. Apart from its lack of nutriment, tall, fibrous grass is in the way and prevents the animals from grazing the undergrowth properly. Farmers who cannot bear to see their pastures grazed to the bone in early spring and who hesitate to mow down the tall grasses going to seed, might reflect on the adage about snoring the rod and spoiling the child.

PREVENTING SOIL EROSION

Regarding fertilizers for pastures, the primary need for phosphate was indicated clearly, being illustrated by the speaker with photographs of turves and plants from areas variously treated. One of the most interesting pictures shown depicted soil profiles of two plots at Cockle Park, Northumberland, England. In a space of 20 years one had received periodically liberal applications of a high-phosphate fertilizer, the other being unfertilized. The top soil of the unfertilized plot was only an inch deep, overlying a tight, impervious subsoil, while the deep rooting herbage of the fertilized plot had formed a rich topsoil to a depth of 12 inches. This brought up the subject of soil erosion on sloping land, concerning which much is heard today. A dense turf and soil of open texture afford the best protection against erosion, by holding and absorbing the rainfall which runs off the sparsely covered, hard, shallow soil and carries with it earth that can fill be spared.

INFLUENCE OF SOIL HEAT

Professor Johnstone-Wallace contended that the superior pastures of England are due to temperature rather than to precipitation and produced records to prove that the average annual rainfall in an English county, noted for its dairy industry, is considerably less than that of a county in New York State. The summer temperature in England, however, is very much lower, and pasture is depressed by excessive soil heat. This could be controlled in some measure by an adequate covering of wild white clover, and at Cornell summer soil temperatures have been lowered as much as 8 degrees by this protecting plant.

When I Was Once in England

When I was once in England I saw a hawthorn tree And such a lovely thing I felt I never more would see.

But once again in England I saw a moor with heather Spread like a purple mist In rainy summer weather.

And when I was in England A nightingale was near And such a lovely thing I felt I never more would hear.

But once again in England I walked beneath a shower Of skylark melodies In misty morning hour.

debt of Canada has increased by approximately that sum. In 1930 it stood at $2,177,763,959. It has now passed the $3,000,000,000 mark. It is almost ten times what it was when war broke out in 1914. Some people wonder if it can ever be paid. Even during the years of 'boom' which led up to 1929, the Dominion Government only succeeded in paying off about $275,000,000, and if the Canadian National deficit is considered, the reduction was smaller than that. In 1923 it was at its first post-war peak, of $2,453,776,869. By 1930, as mentioned above, it was down to $2,177,763,959. But by the end of 1932 all the gains of the previous decade had been lost, and through 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936 it continued to soar.

No one can tell if it will ever be paid off. But it seems reasonable to suppose that the burden of it will be reduced. The interest rate has been pared down considerably, and the per capita burden falls also as the population of the country rises.

The picture is not as gloomy as some commentators would like to make out. The interest being paid out this current year is lower than it was in 1934, and lower, for that matter, than it was in 1923 and 1924, even if the total debt has risen in the meantime. The per capita cost of meeting the interest is about $12.50 as compared with $12.76 in 1929, $13.92 in 1926 and $15.88 in 1921. Those, therefore, who give the impression that the burden of the national debt is steadily growing heavier are quite wrong. It is substantially lighter than it was just after the war, and, in spite of the depression, is lighter than it was when the peak of the boom years was reached.

FUTURE POLICY

If Hon. Charles Dunning remains as Finance Minister (there are inaccurate reports that he has been invited to assume an important milling directorship) it is safe to predict that in the next two or three years an effort will be made to reduce the debt again, and to continue the process of re-funding at lower interest rates. As soon as the budget shows a surplus, there will be a clamor for reduced taxation. To a certain limited extent, this demand will probably be realized. The sales tax is admittedly excessive: It should come down from eight per cent as rapidly as possible, and the Liberals are on record as being favorable to reduction. The sugar tax of a cent a pound is a tax which bears most heavily on the householder with a large family. As soon as the budget balances, some relief in these two spheres may confidently be expected. But the other taxes will remain as they are, and the income profits and gold taxes may even be increased. The idea will be to benefit from the fat years so that the national exchequer can be put in shape where it could stand another recession of business. This was not done as thoroughly in 1926-29 as many financial experts advised. If a little more had been written off the debt in the good years the government would have felt easier about borrowing more freely in the depths of the depression, when government spending seemed necessary to take up much of the slack caused by the cessation of private spending.

Some Sayings of a Great French Novelist

Yesterday, Aug. 18, marked the death of Honoré de Balzac in 1850. Among his pithy comments on men and life we find the following:

"It is a singular fact that many men of action incline to the theory of fatalism, while the greater part of men of thought believe in a divine providence."

"If those who are the enemies of innocent amusements had the direction of the world, they would take away the spring and youth, the former from the year, the latter from human life."

"The motto of chivalry is also the motto of wisdom: to serve all, but love only one."

Add to road hazards — one section of fence. Provincial police are investigating an odd incident in which an automobile driven by a Conestoga man ran into a wire fence stretched across a public roadway. It was said a farmer put the fence up to keep cattle from wandering.

Chief Builds Fire-Truck, at Considerable Saving to Town

Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., is richer in city property by approximately $8,000, wrote Harold Poitras recently in the Montreal Star. The municipality has profited through the work of Police and Fire Chief Esdrase Lepine, who labored during his leisure hours for two years building a fire aerial hose truck, worth $9,000, which he has given to the municipality for the benefit of public safety.

Many Improvements

Chief Lepine, born and bred in Ste. Anne de Bellevue, always wanted to accomplish something outstanding for the welfare of the town. In the many years that he has been in charge of the city's protective services, he organized a most reliable volunteer fire brigade; put into effect a new "dot-dash" alarm system, operated by the water works whistle, and made numerous other improvements. But all this was not enough for him. He wanted to do something "real big."

One day he thought of a way of safeguarding his city from fire without having to summon Lachine's fire-fighting apparatus 20 miles away. Build a hose truck for the city, that was his plan of overcoming this difficulty. As a youth he had studied a little about engineering, and this provided him with some knowledge of preparing plans and executing them. The city approved the plans and gave $700 for the purchase of a hauling auto-truck for the front of the apparatus.

Always Busy

Every minute of his spare time found Chief Lepine either in his shed at home fashioning out some intricate woodwork, building the ladder, or at the city blacksmith shop forging and cutting some metal part for the trailer. He prided himself on his success and he refused to allow anybody to help him with his work. Three hundred dollars more was spent by the city for the different materials he used.

Today, a beautiful hose truck, equipped with a 50-foot aerial ladder, several portable ladders, and a rear steering apparatus, painted in scarlet and decorated with gold floral designs and striping, all done by the chief, is the proud possession of Ste. Anne de Bellevue. It is similar in every detail to those used in large cities.

Behind the Scenes With Our Fellow Editors, Canadian Weekly Newspapers

At 7 o'clock a complimentary dinner as guests of the Province of Nova Scotia was tendered us and a royal welcome extended by Premier Angus MacDonald. At noon on the second day we were entertained to luncheon as guests of the Halifax Herald, who furnished all members with a novelty pencil as a memento of our visit.

PREMIER A. L. MACDONALD WELCOMED VISITORS

Among highlights of the speeches was an address by Premier A. L. MacDonald of Nova Scotia, who, in welcoming the newspapermen, declared that a noble and high type of journalism existed in Nova Scotia. The newspapers were leading in the adult education of the people he said. Premier MacDonald told the delegates a tablet in Province House marked the site of the first printing press in Canada which began operation in 1761. In the following year the Halifax Gazette was published and became the first newspaper in Canada.

GREAT RESPONSIBILITY

The statement the press was the "poor man's university" was never more true on this continent than today, remarked Professor Casey in his very fine address. This sphere as an educational medium, however, was one of great responsibility. "Some newspapers accept this responsibility more than others," he continued. There were sensational newspapers and those that were constructive. The part the newspapers played in interpreting public sentiment and in moulding public opinion gave a splendid opportunity for real service.

PICTURES PRESENTED

Presentation of marine pictures taken of Nova Scotia beauty spots was made by Hon. A. S. MacMillan, minister of highways, to the women present. He also presented membership certificates in the "Order of Good Times", oldest social club in America and founded at Annapolis Royal by Champlain in 1606, to the men.

President L. J. Bennett, of Carmen, Man., president of the Association, was chairman. Three newlywed couples were among the delegates.

PRESIDENT SPEAKS

"Examination of papers from all parts of the Dominion reveals that many member papers are doing an increasingly better job of providing leadership in community service," declared Mr. Bennett, President of the Association.

"The newspaper in any community" went on Mr. Bennett, "is actually the only influence serving to bind together the various elements comprising that community. The churches divide it; fraternal and service societies segregate its members into cliques and groups; the modern mode of life tends to separate neighbors and make them as virtual strangers; only their home newspaper provides a common bond. Only through its services do the people get to know and appreciate one another."

NO "WOMEN'S ANGLE"

"There is no such thing as a 'women's angle'. Women are interested in everything men are and a lot more," Mrs. J. A. Brown declared. "They may not have as deep an interest as men, but their interest is more extensive. Gone is the day when all women wanted in a paper was a recipe." She spoke on "A Reader's Digest of the Weeklies".

A luncheon, held in the Lord Nelson hotel, convention headquarters, was tendered by The Halifax Herald and The Halifax Mail.

EARLY EXPERIENCES

President A. Stanley Walker of King's University, humorously referred to his early journalistic experiences with his school paper and in tracing the development of printing remarked that one of the earliest printed English papers he had seen was a copy of the Commonwealth Mercury, printed in 1658, which is in the library of King's university. He spoke of the influence wielded by weeklies and said he wondered if the French revolution would have gained the force it did had it not been for the weekly papers flourishing at that time.

Today, said President Walker, there was a retrogressive state of mind, a backward thought of public opinion all over the world. Many apparently new ideas were being propagated, which in reality were old ones, and bad ones at that.

He spoke of Russia, Germany and Italy and declared the whole of Europe was being forced back to barbarism under the emotion of fear.

PRIZES AWARDED

The Wolfville Acadian won the gold wrist watch, donated by Printer and Publisher for the best first page, scoring a total of 76 points. H. P. Davison received the award, which was presented by Harry Nicholson. The Drumheller, Alta., Mail was second.

MacLaren was presented with the old trophy, which his paper had won three times and which now becomes his permanent possession. Simcoe Reformer was second.

Government - the Unseen Force?

A general ignorance about the fundamental principles of democracy was evidenced, and partially explained, by Eric Broderick, 14 years of age, in the July Kiwanis Magazine.—Said Eric: "Democratic government! Democratic government! What do I, a boy of 14 years, know of democratic government? Yet I am a Canadian, my parents are Canadian for generations back—back as far as 1806 we have been Canadian. And yet I don't know anything about Canadian Government. I was rather ashamed to admit this ignorance, but nevertheless I asked Dad: 'About this Canadian Government: is it different from a democratic government in any other country?' Then he said a strange thing: 'Son, we must have a pretty good government, if boys your age don't know anything about it!' Then he went on to say that the best thing about the Canadian Government was that it wasn't too apparent in our daily lives." This same boy, in the conclusion of his essay, said: "I have had to ask a good many questions to write this essay. I have never had any occasion to enquire into our government before, although I have often wondered why some other countries have so much trouble with their governments."

Readers may add their own impressions, that in certain phases of activity government becomes too obtrusive—while in others, where intervention might improve matters, government just isn't where it ought to be!

Cities Grow Faster Than Towns

Here's something to think about. Ontario's cities are growing much more rapidly than its towns and villages or than its townships.

In the ten years from 1925 to 1935, for instance, the population of Ontario cities increased by 22 per cent. while that of the townships rose by only 11 per cent. and that of the towns and villages by 5.3 per cent.

Similarly, while the population of the cities rose by 22 per cent. that of the province as a whole increased only 14 per cent.

Looked at from another angle, in 1925 the population of the cities made up 43.4 per cent. of that of the whole province, whereas in 1935 that proportion had risen to 46.4 per cent.

What does that trend portend for the future?

Speed "Governor" on Autos Urged at Police Chiefs' Meeting

Autos Used in Practically Every Major Crime, Said Chief Geo. Smith of Winnipeg

Suggestion was made by Chief George Smith, of Winnipeg, at the convention of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada, that authorities be requested to enact legislation forcing motor manufacturers to install a "governor" which would not permit a car to travel faster than fifty miles an hour, and that the authorities also be requested to pass laws preventing known criminals from obtaining automobile licenses. A third suggestion made by Chief Smith was that a law be passed prohibiting the use of short wave radios in automobiles unless by a permit from the chief of police.

The suggestions were deemed so important by the members who listened to Chief Smith's paper, that it was decided to refer the matter to the legislation committee for study.

Chief Smith gave a paper on automobile theft, which he said was one of the great problems of the police today.

"In the old days we used to say: 'cherchez la femme' but now we say 'find the automobile' and that is our problem," said Chief Smith. "Formerly police autos and motorcycles could cope with automobiles, but today we find that the cars are made so speedy that it is impossible to catch the thieves. It has also been found that the automobile is used in practically every major crime reported to us nowadays."

"I believe also that all accidents are due to speed, and I think that one way of obtaining better conditions would be to have laws forcing the manufacturers to place a 'governor' on their cars which would not allow the vehicle to travel faster than fifty miles an hour."

"In the matter of radios we have found that many criminals now have radios in their cars, and when the broadcast of a crime is given they are away before police can swing into action."

BERLIN 700 YEARS OLD

Berlin celebrates its 700th birthday from August 14 to 22. It is probable that Berlin did exist even before 1237, but the earliest extant records regarding the city date to that year. An exhibition "700 Years of Berlin" is being held in the Exhibition Grounds at Kaiserdam, and a historical pageant depicting the development of the city will be staged.

CENTURY OF PEACE MONUMENT

Placed in the Grounds of the Canadian customs house at Lacolle, Que., some 50 yards north of the international boundary, a memorial to the century of peace that has existed between this country and the United States was unveiled on July 22nd, in the presence of a representative gathering of members from Kiwanis Clubs in both countries.

The monument, which is one of several that have been erected by the Kiwanis International on the boundary, was placed at Lacolle by the Ontario, Quebec and Maritime Kiwanis district of Canada, and the New Jersey district of the United States.

THE MOTORIST'S PRAYER

Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye,
That no man shall be hurt when I pass by;
Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of thine.
Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear me company
From the evils of fire and all calamity.
Teach me to use my car for others' need,
Nor miss through love of speed
The beauties of thy world; that thus I may
With joy and courtesy go on my way.

Manse lawn, which furnished a striking background. The reception was held at the bride's home where upwards of one hundred sat down to a delicious repast. During the reception the bride and groom were suitably toasted, the happy couple being presented with an inscribed bible by Rev. S. J. Pike, to which the groom replied in a few well chosen words. The marriage certificate booklet was also given its round for the signatures of well wishers.

Following the reception the bride and groom left for Montreal and New York and other points in the United States and Canada, the bride travelling in a pale blue suit with white accessories. On their return they will reside in Brownsburg. The large collection of gifts indicate the high regard in which the young couple were held. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. L. Demerse, Mr. and Mrs. R. Flynn and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Baldwin, all of Montreal.

A procession of cars and trucks, numbering over 40, passed westward through Lachute early yesterday morning—presumably on the way from the Montreal Agricultural Show to attend the Ottawa Exhibition. A good number of the cars bore American license plates, and several had trailers for the grand rally at Meikle's Fair. My reader drew attention also to the extra fine library the Meikle family had in those days—which I had often heard my mother speak of, as well as having heard Mrs. Warwick and Mrs. MacGibbon of Mount Maple often mention it, and the wonderful telescope the Meikies had in their possession.

Some ask today who the Meikies were and where they came from, and no doubt at my mother's knee I asked the same thing myself, as she amused us children by telling us of all that happened in those days. She told us the Meikies were well-to-do Paisley bodies who had emigrated to Canada in the early days about the time others of their friends had gone to the West Indies and Southern States, and that was how they had such a goodly number of old friends to come to see them at times. Some came by canoe down the Backette River to Cornwall, then portaged from the St. Lawrence River to the South Nation River somewhere in Dundas County, and then down its winding course to the Ottawa River. In the days of run-away niggers from the South this was known to them and their friends as the "hidden trail" by which hundreds of them made a dash for freedom and got to Canada while their pursuers made a mad rush for the head of Lake Champlain in order to prevent them from entering Canada by the Richelieu River. Others came on horseback with their fine Naraganset pacers, fording and swimming some of the rivers en route. This was how my great grandmother, Margaret Platt, came to Canada in 1793 and settled in St. Andrews, long before there was a Meikle's Fair.

Horse Shoes and Nails as Rent

Each year the city of London pays quit rent to the crown for a piece of waste ground known as the Moors, in Shropshire, and a tenement called the Forge, in the parish of St. Clement Danes. The city has long since lost trace of both these properties, but it still pays quit rent. The Moors is paid for in bundles of faggots, which the city collector cuts with a new hatchet and a new bill-hook. For the Forge he pays six horseshoes and six nails. The money takes place in the law courts and payment is required by the king's remembrancer with the words "Good service" and "Good number."

from Pastures to Palaces

Giotto, who painted many of the frescoes in the church of San Francesco in Assisi, Italy, was a shepherd-boy when the painter Cimabue discovered him drawing sheep on flat pasture stones, says Robert M. McBride in "Hilltop Cities of Italy."

Cimabue taught the lad to paint, and today Giotto's frescoes are among the most sought out by visitors to this medieval church.

THE DISCONTENTED FROG

An old frog sat in a deep, dark pool. And croaked from beneath a log. "This water is warm as warm can be. It's really no life for a frog."

He puffed his sides like a big balloon. Then stretched out his tongue with a click.

For a big fly dangled before his eyes. From a string attached to a stick.

He snatched at the pretty, tempting fly.

And was caught and dragged from the pool.

As he dangled there in hot mid-air. He longed for the waters cool.

"It's hotter here," he said, "than there."

"Oh dear! What a life for a frog! There isn't a drop of water here. Nor even an old green log..."

If I ever get back where I belong, What a happy frog I'll be— But he didn't, dears—for Johnny had His poor old legs for tea!

UNDER AN UMBRELLA

Ted chuckled at the thought of Captain Rolfe setting the Captain's food down and running away as fast as he could. That part of it, he thought, must have been fun.

As if understanding the meaning of Ted's chuckle, Captain Rolfe continued, "Yes, laddie, that part of it was fun and real exciting! At times, as the Captain was pretty quick and more than once I got a hot potato in the back. By that time I had learned to dislike him very much and I am ashamed to say, I used to turn and stick out my tongue, when I was far enough away from him."

"What did he say when you did that?" chuckled Ted.

"Well, my little mannie, he said things I would not care to repeat in the presence of a lady, or indeed anywhere now since I am old and have gotten a bit of sense. I can realize now that the use of bad language should never be. But I heard so much of it then, every day of my life, that I thought it was quite the proper thing for every sailor to do. But Captain Flood had all his men beaten when it came to using bad words. Even the time of the big storm he used them quite common-like."

"The big storm!" Ted said interestedly—and anxiously, for Captain Rolfe had stopped talking and was gazing out to sea again as if he had forgotten that anyone but himself was present. "Won't you tell us about the big storm, Captain Rolfe?" he asked, laying his small hand on the Captain's knee.

"Aye, that I will, laddie. I just got lost in the past, I guess. I was seen the ship beat-beating agin' the rocks, with me a-clinging terror-stricken to the flagpole, while the Captain lay in his bunk a-screamin' and swearin' and beggin' the men to save him an' not to let him die like a rat in a trap. Ted's eyes were big with excitement, and his Aunt Effie was saying softly and pityingly, 'The poor, poor man. The poor poor man!'"

"Aye," said Captain Rolfe. "He was a poor man, linn' there helpless in his bunk, first screamin' and swearin', then cryin' and offerin' all the money he had in the world to the man that would come back and carry him to safety in the small boat. I was like one paralyzed with fright, but I just could not go and leave him. The men were beggin' me to jump and they'd catch me, but I just could not leave the Captain to die alone, so I stayed with him. When it got dark it seemed worse, although the storm was not so heavy, but the lamps were pretty well broken. Only one would burn, and it was just enough to make the place more ghost-like than ever, as the timbers of that old ship creaked and scraped agin' the rocks. The Captain begged me to give him the rum canteen but I was too much afraid. I was afraid that, crazed with the liquor, he might manage to crawl out of the bunk and perhaps get overboard, and I would be left alone. I lay on the floor near his bunk, sayin' my prayers between whiles, when I wasn't listening to the creak and whine of the timbers.

"Then morning came and the storm was over and the sea as calm as a baby asleep. So, staggering to my half-numbed feet, I ran to look over the side of the ship and was astonished to find that she was caught fast between two big rocks and could neither move out nor sink, unless we had another gale a-blowin' from the other side."

"Fearful of that, I ran to take down all the sails before I wakened the captain, who had worn himself out with his crying and was fast asleep. It was hard to make him understand at first just what had happened, but when he got real awake-like he tried to crawl out of the bunk, and he hurt himself, a bit more. He was glad to hear about the ship being held by the rocks, but he was afraid that it would not hold together long."

Sinful Salute

Six children of Mr. and Mrs. August Ludke were expelled from Oxon Hill, Md., consolidated rural school because they refused to salute the United States flag. Their parents belonged to a religious sect known as "Jehovah's Witnesses" who declare such a salute is a violation of the commandment "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." The county board of education approved the expulsion and the case was taken into court. A verdict in the circuit court of Upper Marlboro, Md., upheld the action of the board. The parents refuse to give in and will continue teaching their children at home.

BOY SCOUTS
THE WORLD
OVERNOW OVER 2,800,000
BOY SCOUTS

Boy Scout world-census figures for 1937, just compiled by the International Bureau, reveal a new record increase of 340,000. The figures bring the world total membership to 2,812,074. The last world census, taken in 1935, gave a total of 2,472,014. Scouting is active today in 49 countries, counting the British Empire as one.

TRYING TO FILL 25,000
EMPTY "BOY SPACES"

The Herculean job of feeding some 25,000 Boy Scouts is reflected in some of the catering figures of the American National Scout Jamboree recently held in Washington. For the 75,000 "boy meals" served each day the cooks ordered 250 tons of foodstuffs. This included 900 bushels of potatoes, 13,000 pounds of bread, 25,000 quarts of milk, 4,000 pounds of butter, 50,000 eggs and 1,200 gallons of canned vegetables, such as tomatoes, corn, succotash and string beans—after consuming which the boys went out into the arena and played Indians-and-cowboys.

A BOY SCOUT CLIFF
RESCUE

The rescue after two hours of effort of a young woman clinging to the face of a cliff was an achievement this summer of the 6th Bridgewater Boy Scout Troop, Somerset, England. A young man and his fiancée had been caught by the tide in a cove, and attempted to scale the cliff. The young woman was unable to complete the ascent, and her companion, finally gaining the top, discovered the Scouts, and called upon them for help. With rope and tackle the Scouts descended the cliff by another route, then ascended to the young lady, secured her with their lines, and climbing ahead, hauled her by stages to safety.

Iced Coffee for Cool Drink

By Betty Barclay

The secret of good iced coffee lies in its freshness and proper strength, just as it does in the hot breakfast beverage. Yet many housewives who make excellent hot coffee do not do so well with the iced variety. Sometimes this is because they do not brew it fresh each time, but make it from what is left over from breakfast. Sometimes it is because the coffee is allowed to stand for a long time before it is served, so that it loses its flavor and aroma. And sometimes not enough allowance is made for dilution by ice so that the coffee is weaker than it should be.

When the coffee is to be poured hot over ice in glasses it should be brewed double strength, with two heaping tablespoons to each cup of water used. As soon as it is made it should be served or else placed in an air-tight container so that none of the flavor and bouquet will be lost.

Another excellent way to make iced coffee is to brew it slightly over normal strength—two level tablespoons to each cup of water—and place it in an air-tight jar in the refrigerator to chill. When ready to serve it may be poured into tall glasses each with one small piece of ice to keep it cold.

An unusual flavor may be imparted to iced coffee merely by mixing it thoroughly in a shaker with ice, powdered sugar and cream, instead of merely putting the different ingredients in the glasses and stirring them together. Just enough ice to chill the drink should be put in the shaker and it should be churned briskly so that it foams when poured out.

Hints for Homebodies

Specially Written for Readers of The Watchman
By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

A PICNIC CITY

Halifax might very well be called the Picnic City. There is a veritable procession of people walking with picnic baskets on nice Saturdays, Sundays, holidays and Wednesday afternoons. This city is like no other city that I have ever seen. There are plenty of picnic places within walking distance or within easy reach by tram-car. There are miles of shore on either side of the North-West Arm; and then there is the lovely Point Pleasant Park with its shore line. The Halifax people know how to walk, and apparently old and young do not mind lugging a picnic basket. For those who drive there are so many beautiful spots within a few miles, that it is difficult to choose.

NOISES

How quickly we become accustomed to strange noises, or as the psychologists call it, conditioned. Those who visit in a city cannot sleep because of the noise of the street-cars or the milk-men. The city person in the country is disturbed by the sound of the birds or the crowing of the roosters. Each locality has its special noises. A church just a few doors from us rings the Angelus each morning. The first few mornings it wakened us, but now we never hear it unless we happen to be awake. The aeroplanes are frequently overhead as we live near the airport. At first we heard every plane. Now it has to be a very low flying one to attract our attention. Halifax is built on rock and all excavations have to be blasted. When we first came it seemed as if there was almost continuous blasting, and we heard every one. Now we never notice them unless they are very close. Wouldn't life be dreadful if we heard every sound?

DO WE TALK TOO MUCH?

To continue the above paragraph, I firmly believe that one of the most frequent causes of inattention and disobedience of children, is that we talk to them too much. We talk on and on until they become so accustomed to hearing us, that they actually do not hear what we say. If you are having difficulties, do an experiment to see if you, yourself, are to blame. Try not talking so much. Tell them what you need to say in as few words as possible, with no embroidery. Be sure that you have their attention before you start, and then restrain yourself. You may be surprised.

TO SEE OURSELVES

The need to see ourselves as others see us, is just as great as it was in the days of the immortal Bobbie. The occasional person has the gift of choosing the right clothes to bring out their best points and detract attention from their poor ones—but alas, not many of us have it. As I sat on our verandah, I watched the passers-by. One short fat woman, with heavy shoulders and a short neck, had on a frilly collar and broad straight hat. She looked as if she had no neck at all, and was much dumber than need be if she had been properly dressed. A very bow-legged woman passed. She had on light shoes and a quite short dark dress. The skirt came to just where the bow started and the contrast of the light shoes, the flesh stockings and the dark dress attracted attention to it. A couple of inches on the length of her skirt would have made all the difference in the world in her appearance. By way of a change, a thin tall one passed. She had a striped dress with the stripes running up and down and a small high hat, and they made her look like an animated beanpole. Some of the before and after pictures of movie stars show us what expert dressing can do. What a pity we lesser mortals can not be put into the hands of experts and be shown what not to do.

LEMON MILK SHERBET

If you have an electric refrigerator and the children are clamoring for ice cream, let them make it themselves. Lemon milk sherbet is so simple that even a quite small child can make it. It is not expensive and is not rich, so even the very small ones may have it safely. To our way of thinking it is one of the nicest of the ice cream recipes. Teach the children to grate the lemon carefully so that none of the white is grated, as that will make it bitter.

Juice of 2 lemons grated rind of 1 lemon
1 1/4 cups sugar
1/4 teaspoon lemon extract
2 cups milk

Mix the sugar and lemon, add the milk gradually, stirring until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Pour into freezing tray. When partly frozen turn into a chilled bowl and beat for a minute. Return to freezer tray and freeze until firm.

HOT MARSHMALLOW SAUCE

1 cup sugar
1/2 cup boiling water
1/2 lb. marshmallows
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cook the sugar and water without stirring for 5 minutes. Add the marshmallows, which have been quartered, and the vanilla and stir until the marshmallows are melted. Keep hot over hot water. Serve with ice cream.

Her Ignorance About Parliament Corrected

Oxford, Eng.—If Parliament were fully representative of the community, it would have as members one or two criminals, a few lunatics, some hefty children and in a true democracy, an elderly donkey, said Miss Margery Fry, speaking at the summer school of the Howard League for Penal Reform. The next speaker, George Benson, Labor member of Parliament for Chesterfield, retorted: "I can assure Miss Fry that Parliament is fully representative, and our democratic system is far more perfect than she seems to realize. We have criminals, lunatics, children and even donkeys in the House of Commons."

The Pre-School Child

"As the child emerges from babyhood", says an article by Dr. L. A. Paquegnat in the last issue of Health magazine, "the 'leap from the lap' brings to the parents considerable relief from a long period of painstaking care. Comparatively speaking, an amount of almost uncanny invulnerability now supervenes. It is true that new disorders make their appearance and that the acute infections assail as never before but, nevertheless, the child now gets along much better on very ordinary care."

Too little thought, according to this writer, is given to the permanent damage which results from illness, infections and faulty habits. He goes on to say: "A host of physical defects and abnormalities which in their inception are peculiar to the immature and indiscreet years of early life escape the attention which they merit. The child himself does not help the situation any. He is a notoriously poor complainer. Capable of tapping a huge reserve, he carries on apparently well in the face of physical odds. His ability to do so masks the real complexion of his health, and elders thoughtlessly, perhaps without knowledge, have become accustomed to leaving well enough alone."

"There is another side to the picture. The pre-school age is a wonder age. Not only does physical health take its root there; the seed of intellect and soul germinates. Impressions and attitudes are shaped and habits start which not only greatly influence health but which also set the child on the road to being socially acceptable, successful in business or trade, or the reverse."

WELL DONE

Smith: "Done well with your vegetable garden this year?"
Jones: "Not bad. We had it for dinner yesterday."

WHAT A WRECK CONSTIPATION MAKES

Constipation can dull your whole life. Headaches, poor complexion—tired, lifeless days are often the results. Also, many serious diseases. Get rid of common constipation now with a ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

ALL-BRAN brings you the two things your system needs to act naturally: "bulk" and vitamin B to help tone the intestines.

Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs more than twice its weight in water—forms a soft mass, and gently clears the intestines of wastes. It acts naturally.

Pills and drugs seldom cure constipation. You just keep on increasing the dose and switching from one laxative to another.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day, three times daily if needed. Serve as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in recipes. Sold by all grocers—made and guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

PICKLES FOR WINTER

Tart and spicy condiments are delicious with meats and every woman takes pride in having a variety in her preserve cupboard. And although the ingredients are the same year after year there are ways of giving a different flavor to favorite old stand-bys.

Mint leaves added to chutney-sauce make it a delicious accompaniment to lamb.

Celery seeds give added zest to pickles and relishes.

All the old-fashioned savory garden herbs give an unexpected taste when a leaf or two is added to a jar of pickles.

CHUTNEY SAUCE

Twelve sour green apples, 12 small green tomatoes, 3 green peppers, 2 medium sized Spanish onions, 1 pound seedless raisins, 6 tablespoons salt, 1/4 pound green ginger root or 2 tablespoons ground ginger, 3 tablespoons mustard seed, 1 cup chopped mint leaves, 2 1/2 cups dark brown sugar, 1 1/2 quarts vinegar.

Wash tomatoes, remove stem end and chop coarsely. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons salt and let stand over night. Drain. Pare core and chop apples. Peel and chop onions. Remove seeds and white fiber from peppers and chop flesh. Mince ginger. Put apples, tomatoes, onions, peppers, ginger and raisins in preserving kettle. Add sugar and remaining salt to vinegar and bring to the boiling point. Boil five minutes and pour over mixture in preserving kettle. Add mustard seeds and mint and cook slowly until vegetables are tender and mixture is thick. It will take about one hour. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

SWEET GHERKINS

The secret of crisp pickles lies in obtaining a correct bacterial action in one direction and at the same time preventing the unpleasant bacterial action which causes spoilage and softening. Common salt, the plain barrel variety, has been found to be the most effective agent for this purpose.

One peck gherkins, 1 1/4 lbs. barrel salt, 3 teaspoons powdered alum, 4 quarts cider vinegar, 4 ounces mixed pickling spices, 2 1/2 cups granulated sugar.

Wash pickles and put in a deep crock. Sprinkle with salt, cover with water, weight to keep pickles in brine and let stand four to six weeks. Drain from brine and rinse in clear water. Return to clean crock, add alum and enough warm water to cover gherkins. Cover with a plate and let stand over night. The next morning drain and rinse in clear water. Wipe. Put vinegar, sugar and spices in preserving kettle and bring to the boiling point. Boil eight minutes and pour over cucumbers in crock. Let stand five days. Drain off vinegar, add 2 cups sugar and bring to boiling point. Pour boiling hot over pickles. Let stand five days longer. Every five days pour off vinegar, add 2 cups of sugar and pour over pickles until they are sweet as you want them. Then put in sterilized jars, cover with hot vinegar and seal.

BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLES

Four quarts cucumber slices, 12 onions, 1 cup salt, 4 cups vinegar, 3 cups sugar, 2 tablespoons mustard seed, 2 tablespoons celery seed, 1 tablespoon turmeric, 2 or 3 hot red peppers.

Peel onions and slice. Mix with cucumber slices, sprinkle with salt and let stand three hours. Rinse with cold water. Chop hot peppers and put all ingredients in preserving kettle. Bring to the boiling point and boil fifteen minutes. Put into sterilized jars and seal.

An unusual and very good cake icing is made by putting 1/2 cup jelly in a bowl in a pan of hot water. Add a dash of salt and one unbeaten white of egg. Beat with a rotary beater until the mixture is stiff enough to stand up in peaks. Spread on cakes and serve at once.

A European foot specialist advises women to wear low-heeled shoes if they would walk with a poised and graceful step. He says that most women walking in high heels take short quick steps because the free foot must too quickly support the body. Certain it is that the woman who does her own work needs broad low heels on sturdy well-made shoes to prevent aching muscles as well as a teetering gait.

AT LAST

"Girls Ready-to-Wear Clothes", says an advertisement headline. And about time, too.

FOR BETTER HEALTH BY DR. J. ROSSLYN EARP

WHY BABY CRIES

There is the mother who worries too often. There is also the mother who too seldom responds. It is not always kind to "let the baby cry."

It is part of a mother's job to learn why the baby cries. The cries that are best left alone are those which demand attention and those which express indignation when the royal whim has been disregarded. The latter may be very obstreperous and may be accompanied by breath holding which makes the baby go black in the face. Do not worry, mother, this is probably the last card in his pack of tricks.

But you should worry if he cries because he is hungry. Did you weigh him before and after his meal? Are you observing the growth curve of his weight? If it is summer, he may be thirsty. He will need his drinks of water between meals just as you do. If he is very small he is unable to change his position: it is your job to turn him over when he complains. Has he just been fed? Very likely he has swallowed a lot of air and is very uncomfortable. Hold him upright and pat him gently on the back. The indigestion from which we suffered in infancy is now called either "food allergy" or "improper formula". Crying from either of these causes is intermittent. If it is food allergy you must try to find out which foods are at fault. Look out for milk, eggs, wheat and spinach.

Never neglect the frantic scream of pain. Even a few hours delay may endanger the baby's life. Baby cannot tell you that it is his ear which hurts, but your doctor has ways of finding out and he alone can tell you what must be done.

Brownsburg W.L. Enjoyed Visit to the Capital

Last Thursday, Aug. 12th, a party comprising 15 members of the Brownsburg Women's Institute journeyed to Ottawa for a day's outing. On arrival, and after having partaken of light refreshments, the group drove to the Parliament Buildings, where they were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cole—the former being private secretary to Sir George H. Perley. Escorted by a guide, the ladies made a tour of the buildings, including the Peace Tower—in which they were much impressed with the fine carvings, the ceiling designs and stately stone-work.

The party were then conducted to the Senate. Viewing among the Commons benches the seat occupied by Sir George Perley, Argenteuil County's representative, a burst of spontaneous applause was heard from the visitors. They were shown the reading room, the memorial room with its Book of Remembrance which has taken five years to compile and will be completed, it is expected, in another two years. The library was also visited, this being the only part of the old building left after the great fire. Returning to the main entrance the visitors were informed by their guide that they had walked altogether 2 1/4 miles in their tour of inspection.

The principal parts of the city were then viewed in an auto trip which terminated at the "Wayside Inn" in country surroundings. During lunch at this hostelry, Mr. Cole in a few words expressed the regrets of Sir George and Lady Perley that they had been unable to accompany the ladies.

The branch president, Mrs. Paul Martin, thereupon moved a warm vote of thanks to Sir George Perley for his kind hospitality, and to Mr. Cole for the interest which he and his charming wife had shown the success of the outing.

Snapshots were taken, and the party proceeded by car to the Experimental Farm, where two members of the staff conducted them over the farm. The flowers presented a gorgeous picture, especially the roses in bloom. The sunken pool constructed on the site of an old cellar, was also a pleasing spot.

The party returned to the city, where they took supper and left for home in a down-pour of rain.

CANADIAN ANNOUNCER
AT YANKEE STADIUM

Ottawa — Ringside descriptions of the fight on August 26 for the heavyweight championship of the world between Joe Louis, world champion, and Tommy Farr, heavyweight titleholder of the British Empire, will be broadcast tonight by the CBC. Faced with a charge of attempted murder as the result of a drinking party quarrel in which he allegedly attacked Jos. St. Denis, dit Trotter, after firing two shots at him at Shawbridge, Que., on August 7, Tancrede Leblanc, young baker's employee of Shawbridge, was committed to trial at the next term of King's Bench Court at St. Jerome, when he appeared before Judge J. A. Lalande for voluntary statement.

According to police and witnesses heard at the preliminary inquiry, a week ago, Leblanc and St. Denis were members of a motoring party, including two girls, which broke up about midnight August 7, after an alleged quarrel between the two men. Leblanc, it is alleged, returned to his home to get a gun, then came towards St. Denis shouting "I'm going to kill you!"—then, after firing two shots at the man, attacked him and beat him over the head with the butt of the weapon. St. Denis was not seriously injured.

The pair arrested gave their names as Arthur Laverdure, 27, and Paul Heroux, 23, but gave no address.

"SOMETHING FINE AND INSPIRING", OPPORTUNITY TO WORK... SKILLED LABOR SHORTAGE FORESEEN

Comment on the Alberta Legislation Show-down

"The Ottawa Spotlight"
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, August 24th.—The employment situation in Canada, in general, is far more hopeful than seemed possible a few months ago. This is emphasized by the first annual interim report of the National Employment Commission. As recovery proceeds, unsuspected new problems are, of course, coming forward. At present, for instance, while there are probably 200,000 employable people in Canada out of work, there are also acute shortages in certain skilled trades and occupations. Unfortunately, once the first advance of industry has absorbed all those most willing and most able to get back into industry, the next

JURY DECIDED DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

It was revealed that Lapierre had been subject to epilepsy since childhood, and it was thought he had been overcome by an attack and fallen on the railway bank. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Pigeon Mail Carries District Newspaper Correspondence

Homing pigeons sped from various points in Steuben county last week, bearing news of outlying communities for publication in the Evening Tribune of Hornell, N. Y.

In what was both a departure from conventional "country correspondence" transmission and a revival of one of the world's oldest methods of communication, the Tribune began a regular "air mail" service for its state news department.

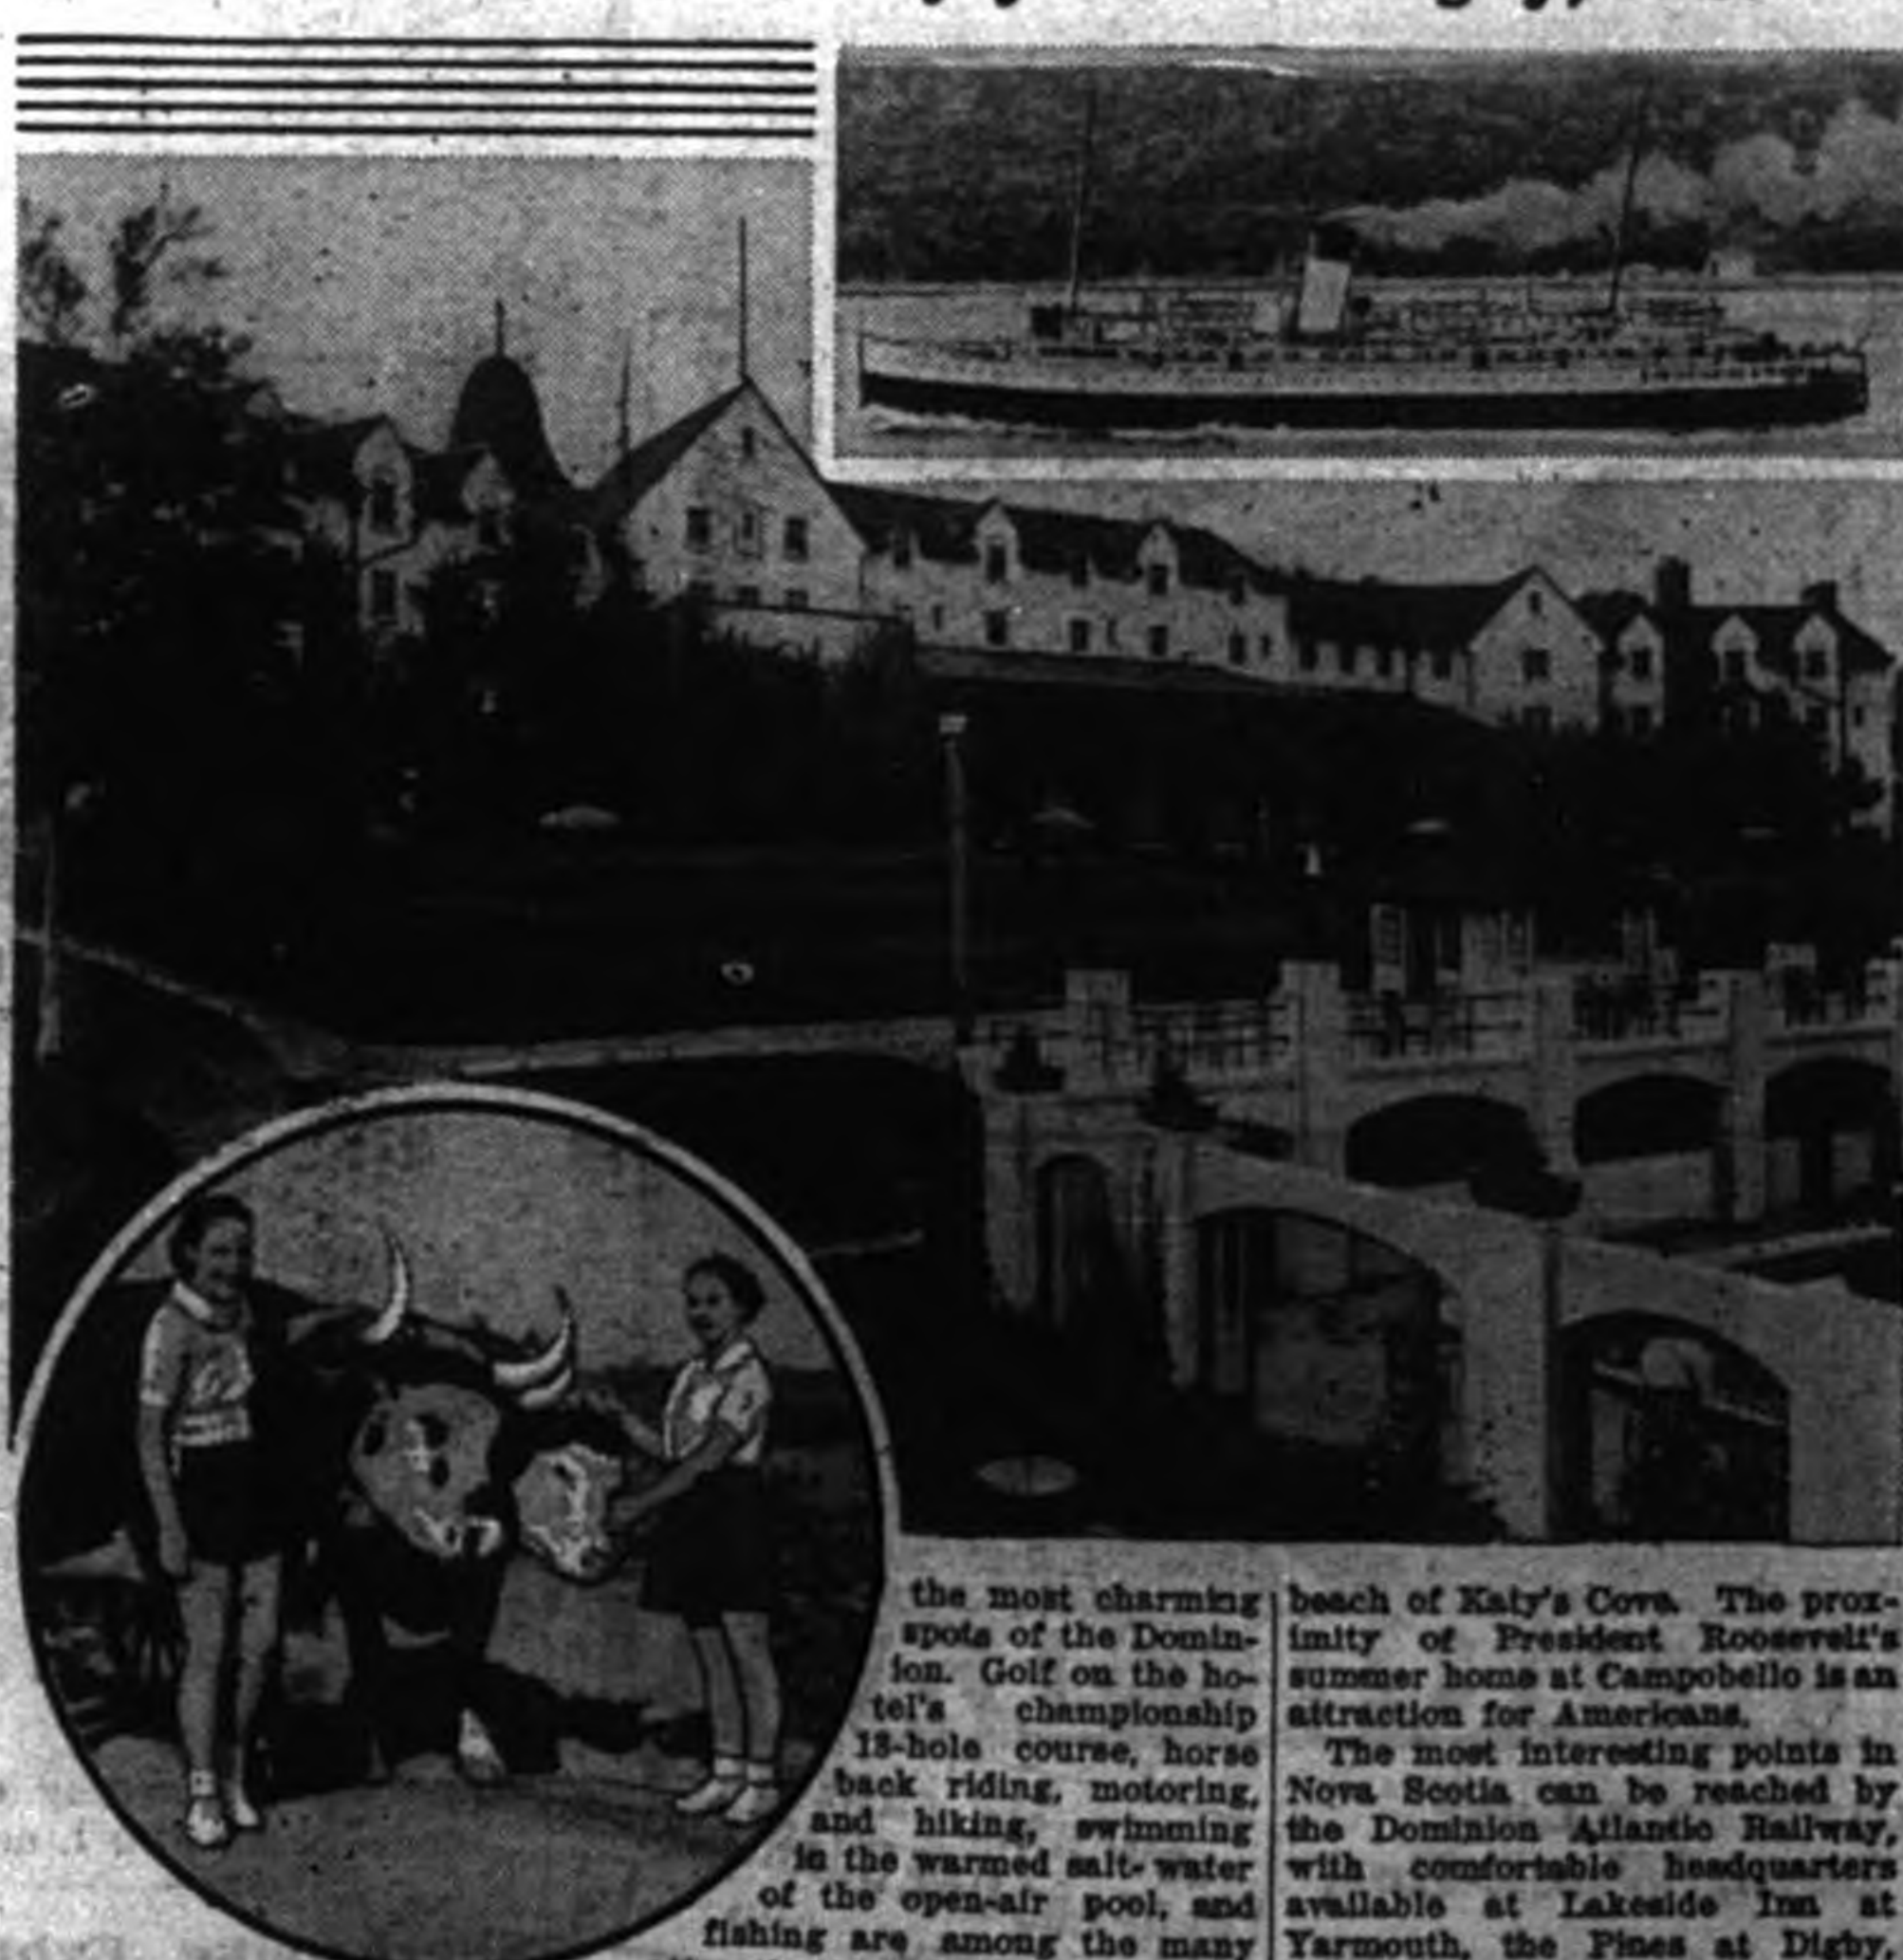

Six of the fleet birds, released by Mrs. Mabel Sandford on Keuka Lake, traversed the 23 miles to the homing loft atop the Tribune building. Thirteen birds are reported ready for service, and will be distributed to the newspaper's correspondents throughout its territory. Nineteen more are being trained and will be ready for duty soon.

The news is written out in complete form on thin paper, and sent in ring carriers attached to the bird's leg.

Fine Attendance for the Capitol Theatre Opening

Brownsburg — Over 200 patrons attended the Capitol Theatre opening here Saturday night, and were treated to a full performance including two big features one of which, Artists and Models, was featured as a premier showing in the province. Lady patrons received each a flower upon entering the theatre, and Mr. Tommy Burns, prominent in Montreal theatrical circles, gave a few inaugural remarks and as master of ceremonies interspersed the program with his own brand of humor. Week-day shows at the Capitol, it is understood, will commence at 7.30, and Sunday shows at 5.30 p.m.

Canadian Editors Enjoy Visit to Digby, N.S.

Their visit to the quaint fishing town of Digby was one of the highlights of the trip recently made by 150 Canadian newspaper editors and their wives who gathered from all over the Dominion for the important annual convention of Canadian Weekly Newspapers at Halifax.

Crossing the Bay of Fundy from Saint John, N.B., to Digby, N.S., on the Canadian Pacific's fine steamer, the "Princess Helena," was a unique outing for some of the inland editors. Digby, they found, was a pleasant ocean resort in a picturesque countryside.

Their visit also included the Canadian Pacific Railway's Pines Hotel, above, located in one of the most charming spots of the Dominion. Golf on the hotel's championship 18-hole course, horse back riding, motoring, and hiking, swimming in the warm salt-water of the open-air pool, and fishing are among the many attractions of this popular vacation spot. This summer the hotel, which remains open until September 11, has housed hundreds of guests enthusiastic about the charms of the Maritimes as a holiday resort.

For visiting westerners the charm of the Maritimes begins at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, New Brunswick's leading resort because of its splendid position on the Bay of Fundy and the facilities for holiday pleasures at the Algonquin Hotel there. Fishing, boating, riding, golf and other sports occupy the time of more energetic visitors, while others delight in nothing more than soaking up sunlight on the sandy beach of Katy's Cove. The proximity of President Roosevelt's summer home at Campobello is an attraction for Americans.

The most interesting points in Nova Scotia can be reached by the Dominion Atlantic Railway, with comfortable headquarters available at Lakeside Inn at Yarmouth, the Pines at Digby, and the Cornwallis Inn at Kentville. Yarmouth, on the south-western tip of the province, is on the picturesque coastline. Tuna fishing is a popular sport for the more adventurous, while there are opportunities for other summer pastimes. Cornwallis Inn is in the centre of the Annapolis Valley and the Land of Evangeline is the favorite resort for visitors who want to see Grand Pre, where the Evangeline Memorial Park enshrines a perfect replica of the old St. Charles Church, in which Evangeline and her compatriots worshipped before they were sent from the country. There are many other beautiful drives in the district.

hence the work in the development of its museum can only progress as income permits.

An admirable suggestion comes from one of our Directors, that one chamber of the museum be devoted to exhibits that tell the story of the heroes of the Long Sault, and their martyrdom at the hands of their Iroquois assailants. This would attract the attention of visiting tourists to the imposing cenotaph on the lot nearby, the Dollard Memorial. Should for any reason the care of this neglected plot, in the centre of which the monument stands, come into the hands of the Historical Society in return for hoped-for government aid in this Barracks - Museum enterprise, a double purpose would be served.

This miniature park should be made and kept beautiful in commemoration of the tale of heroism, and such a chamber in the museum should reflect its spirit, and its Indian relics be the expression of the Indian period of the history of this valley.

As Thomas and others have said—"Carillon is Canada's Thermopylae." And we might add, Dollard in her Leonidas.

Historical Society of Argenteuil County

NEWS BULLETIN

Now that the Carillon Barracks is a possession of the Historical Society, and the organized drive is about to be launched for the attainment of its three-fold objective—1,000 regular members, 100 life members (the $20 subscribers) and an initial bank deposit of not less than $10,000 to which the corporation is committed, and later as suggested by the Executive an ideal endowment fund of $30,000 to be striven for—it is well to remind our ever-widening membership, now numbering 420, that in accepting this splendid gift without a previous bank deposit, we are under a binding obligation to honour this trust the donor has reposed in us.

Surely all will prove worthy of it by giving every assistance to the organizers of this county-wide canvass, to meet the wishes of our benefactor. Prospective members can be assured that in joining the Society no liabilities are involved further than the annual membership fee of 50 cents, and loyalty to its interests, for it is fundamental in its prospectus that no debts can be contracted,

Faulty Farming In Middle-West Reaping Harvest

Canada, unwittingly perhaps but undeniably, has been prodigal of her western heritage, and there has been much waste of its substance through recklessness. There was a time, not so long ago, when thousands of adventurers from the eastern provinces, the United States and Europe responded to the call to come and put the plough to the rich virgin soil of the prairie. There was nothing to it, no need for previous farming experience; all one had to do was to tickle the soil and make it laugh golden grain. And so butchers and bakers and candlestick makers had a fling at it. Omar, the tentmaker, knew as much about farming as any of them, when he referred to "those who harvested the golden grain and those who flung it to the wind like rain." Some are now reaping the whirlwind literally, especially those who settled in the "short grass" country extending from south-western Manitoba, through southern Saskatchewan to southeast Alberta. It was easy, too easy, to turn the first furrow in this fertile sod which never should have been broken, a realization which came too late. While the moisture supply lasted good crops were grown, until recurrent years of drought taught that moisture is the limiting factor and had to be conserved. Thus grew the general system of allowing a third of the land to lie fallow every year during which it is cultivated only for the retention of moisture and suppression of weeds. There was the other vicious system, adopted by the improvident and greedy, of extending the acreage, so that a whole section of 460 acres might produce a crop of wheat equal to that once grown on a half. And so these soil-mining pioneers proceeded unrestrained in their work of destruction, until the exposed top soil was carried away on the wings of the wind, darkening the skies over Winnipeg, while on the wheat exchange there wheat was marked up another cent a bushel. Conversely, a shower of rain in Alberta would send the price down, to the dismay of the speculator in the world's staple food.

SUFFERING SASKATCHEWAN

In the premier wheat-producing province of Saskatchewan the situation is desperate, says B. Leslie Emalle. In the south are farmers, so called, who are content if they harvest one good crop in five, but have not had one in six years. There are children of four who have never seen rain, the only precipitation during their young lives having been in the form of snow. Many of these children are afflicted with silicosis from the dust which penetrates even the houses, despite storm-windows which are permanent fixtures. One may be asked to admire the fortitude and optimism of these unfortunate people; but it isn't farming, and the sooner these lands are evacuated and induced to grow grass again, if that is now possible, the better it will be for the general welfare of the country.

Manitoba is the one bright spot where crops are generally good, thanks to fairly generous rains and to the greater development of mixed farming which includes the growing of sweet clover hay. Alberta, too, is good in spots, though the Edmonton district has not fared so well as usual.

A trip from Saskatoon to Rosthern, in the last week of June, afforded an opportunity to see and feel the effects of heat and drought. On either side of the highway stretched fields which, with the hopefulness of spring, had been seeded to grain, now scorched and wilted by the merciless sun and drying winds. Some wheat had headed out at four inches in height, but most of it lacked the vigour for that effort at reproduction and offered a scant meal to the grasshoppers of which a plague had been predicted. Certain districts reported, by the way, that the grasshoppers are not a menace, there being no crops for them to destroy! and others that the hoppers were developing cannibalistic tendencies! The way, strewn with corpses of gophers bent on suicide beneath the juggernaut cars, led to the Dominion Experimental Station of Rosthern, where the condition of crops, though subnormal, gave evidence of greater cultural care. Of special interest here was a series of wheat, barley and oat plots on which the remarkable influence of the new organic mercury dust in controlling root rots was demonstrated, the experiments being described by Dr. P. M. Simmonds of the University of Saskatchewan.

A DESERT OASIS

At Rosthern, Sask., the farm of Dr. Seeger Wheeler, a former world's wheat king, stands out like an oasis in the surrounding drought-stricken plains. Bordered by windbreaks of poplars, the fields flaunt crops which would provoke the envy of the average farmer in any season. Similar evidence of prosperity was found on the neighboring farm of Dr. Wheeler's brother, Percy. How is it done? The answer is significant and may indicate the remedy for many western woes: A little farm well tilled, for the Wheeler brothers knew the principles of good husbandry and that a quarter-section of land provided ample scope for their industry. Intelligent rotation of crops and cultivation, keeping in view the need for conserving soil moisture, are practised. Besides, both Wheeler brothers use fertilizers extensively and neglect no means to assure success. Percy Wheeler's quarter contains 110 acres of arable land of which he crops only half each year, allowing the other to lie fallow and accumulate moisture. While many a farmer of the district is striving vainly to make a living from 500 acres of grain, Percy Wheeler is banking money from his fifty acres. Real prosperity will return to the West only when it is realized that a quarter section is enough for any man, and when an intelligently conceived scheme of government control is created for the protection of our western heritage. Abandoned farms there are aplenty, and more will have to be, in the southern sections where perpetual drought prevails. In other parts there may be occasional visitations of drought, hail, early frost, rust and grasshoppers, but farmers of the Wheeler type will never be on relief.

The Humble Potato

The potato is a wholesome food. It should not, of course, be made the chief part of the diet, for it consists largely of starch. It contains too, an excellent quality of protein greatly superior to the protein of cereals of any sort.

Besides, the starch of a well-cooked potato is much more easily digestible than cereal starch of any kind. Cooked potato starch digests in one-sixth of the time required for the digestion of the same amount of oatmeal starch.

In order to maintain one's health and to be able to resist diseases such as colds, pneumonia and influenza, one's blood must be kept alkaline. Use of potatoes as food helps materially in this direction.

Milk and potatoes make a fine food combination. Even buttermilk is an excellent addition to the potato. The fine complexions, robustness and great longevity of the Irish are attributed to the wide use of buttermilk and potatoes. Mashed potato flavoured with Savita, an extract of yeast with a delightful mushroom flavour, suggestive of chicken soup, is greatly relished by both adults and children. Potato soup with the milk of soy bean and flavoured with Savita is rich in vitamin B and aids greatly in body building.

Children should not be fed on a continuous diet of breakfast cereals. The ash of these cereals is of an acid character. The contained vitamins of denatured cereals is small. In consequence, the alkalinity of the blood fails to be maintained and growth and other necessary materials are lacking. People would be healthier, and in a few generations taller, stronger and longer-lived, if they consumed more potatoes and other fresh vegetables.

Children should be fed some potato every day after the sixth month. A purée prepared with potatoes and cream or rich milk is an excellent breakfast dish for young children or even infants who are being weaned.

This purée may be fed in small quantities as early as the third month, the amount being gradually increased as the child grows older.

Canada Year Book 1937 Now Off the Press

COPIES AVAILABLE FROM THE KING'S PRINTER

Publication of the 1937 Canada Year Book is announced by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This is the official statistical annual of the country and contains a thoroughly up-to-date account of the natural resources of the Dominion and their development, the history of the country, its institutions, its demography, the different branches of production, trade, transportation, finance, education, etc.—in brief, a comprehensive study within the limits of a single volume of the social and economic condition of the Dominion. This new edition has been thoroughly revised and includes in all its chapters the latest information available up to the date of going to press.

The 1937 Canada Year Book extends to over 1,100 pages, dealing with all phases of the national life. Attention may be called to some of the more important features of the present volume. Chapter I, treating of the physiography of the country, has been almost entirely re-written and a special section on Economic Geology. A special article, "Faunas of Canada", prepared by R. M. Anderson, Ph.D., of the National Museum of Canada, appears at pages 29 to 52. The results of the Quinquennial Census of 1936 are included, with a special section on "Occupations of the Canadian People".

Re-organization of work of the Civil Service under the new Departments of Transport and of Mines and Resources, has provided an opportunity to revise and recast the statistics concerned with these phases of administration. Chapter XVIII—Transportation and Communications—has been entirely recast and now gives a clearer picture of the relationships of the different services involved. A section on "The Press" is included at the close of the chapter. The operations of the Bank of Canada are now established in the financial system of the country and it has therefore been considered advisable this year to recast Chapter XXII—Currency and Banking.

The accession of King George VI to the Throne and the Coronation of the new King on May 12 are marked by the reproduction of official photographs.

Persons requiring the Year Book may obtain it from the King's Printer, Ottawa, as long as the supply lasts, at the price of $1.50, which covers merely the cost of paper, printing and binding. A limited number of paper-bound copies have been set aside for ministers of religion, bona fide students and school teachers, who may obtain copies at the nominal price of 50 cents each.

Chrysanthemum Held Sacred

In China the chrysanthemum is revered as a sacred thing, and pilgrimages are made yearly to the River Kai where natives drink of the petal-strewn waters in the hope of gaining long life. The type of chrysanthemum which grows there is a tiny plant or bush, with blossoms little larger than a "bachelor button." It is called chrysanthemum indicum and is a far cry from the giant ostrich feather types we grow in the United States. Whereas we wear our flowers and decorate our homes with them, the ancients worshipped them. In Japan a yearly festival is held in their honor, at which time a festive drink is made from the petals. The imperial emblem of Japan represents a sixteen petaled chrysanthemum.

"CALEDONIA" COMPLETES ANOTHER CROSSING

The "Caledonia", Imperial Airways' monster flying ship which appeared last week in Montreal, alighted on the River Shannon, Irish Free State, Saturday morning from Botwood, Nfld., thus completing the third round trip of Imperial Airways planes over the northern trans-Atlantic route since survey flights were first started in July. The Caledonia's flying time was 11 hours 30 minutes, which was the fastest crossing of any of the experimental commercial flights.

THE SITUATION AT PRESENT

What is the present employment situation in Canada? The commission recently issued a brief summary, which is still further condensed here:

1. A vigorous increase in Canadian employment soundly based on expanding exports at improved prices plus renewed investment of capital.

2. Certain 'spots' where recovery has lagged or failed, such as the drought areas.

3. Agencies of re-employment are uncoordinated and ill-equipped.

4. A system of aid is in vogue without adequate safeguards, tending to discourage re-employment.

5. A fluctuating and expensive policy of public works for providing employment.

6. Those unemployed rapidly deteriorating in employability.

7. An emergency winter problem of single homeless adults who tend to concentrate in urban areas.

PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

The Employment Commission, having 'sized up' the problem, suggests that the following steps be taken:

(a) Launch a comprehensive housing policy, including assistance to low-rental housing.

(b) Re-organize and extend the Employment Service, to increase the efficiency of placement.

(c) Revise the system of grants-in-aid.

(d) Organize a Dominion-Provincial program of reconditioning, for those who have been unemployed, to assist them get in shape to compete in the labor market.

(e) Curtail public works to release funds for more effective attacks on the unemployment problem.

(f) Organize a farm placement plan and a supplementary plan to meet the winter emergency problem, to take care of upwards of 50,000 persons.

A GRAVE STEP

When the Mackenzie King government disallowed three Alberta measures it exercised what was a disagreeable duty with serious political implications. Though disallowance has been exercised 113 times since Confederation, in recent years the practice has almost become obsolete.

The Ottawa view was that the Alberta measures clearly violated the spirit and letter of the British North America Act, and threatened to confuse and disorganize the business of the province and to some extent of the Dominion. Also that to deny citizens of Alberta the courts of law was a retrograde step which a free country could not permit.

The Royal Commission on taxation and social legislation will soon begin hearings. While there have been criticisms that eminent financial authorities were not included, on the whole the personnel has been greeted with general approval. A few years ago a British authority would almost certainly have been included, but we are swinging away from that theory to the view that Canadians are best fitted to study Canadian problems.

Turning the Stomach to Impress the Mind

"If you customarily pass without clear vision a long way ahead, make sure that every member of the party carries identification papers—it's difficult to identify a body with its whole head bashed in or torn off. The driver is death's favorite target. If the steering wheel holds together it ruptures his liver or spleen so he bleeds to death internally. Or if the steering wheel breaks off, the matter is settled instantly by the steering column plunging through his abdomen."—In this lurid manner J. H. Furness, in "Sudden Death", stresses the danger of a common fault among motorists.

It is questionable whether this "sensationalizing" of tragedy will achieve its end in teaching drivers a lesson. The Ontario Department of Highways is conducting a safety campaign along the same lines, publishing vivid illustrations and issuing a personal appeal in advertisements to catch the attention of motorists. Other methods have failed; gentle warnings are unavailing, and Death stalks the highways still at every turn.

An acute problem needs a drastic remedy, and however revolting these tabloid tactics may be, they are worth trying. They might, in fact, be used to advantage in the Province of Quebec.

How's the Family Getting on?

—The question is so frequently asked, by one friend of another. Usually the answer is "fine" or "not so good"—alluding, of course, to the family state of health.

The friend who makes this commonplace inquiry does not expect to be told about your domestic differences or personality clashes. As a rule you wouldn't tell. But right here so much happiness is made or marred.

Values are usually relative. The Jones are well off compared to the Smiths who are poorer. At the same time they may be poor compared to the Astorbills.

Some of the recent news items should make most of us feel that, relatively speaking, "everything's fine at home."

For instance, there was the Zody family of Cleveland. Father Zody hadn't spoken to seventeen year old son Earl for twelve years. When father knocked mother down in an argument the other day Earl fixed him so he wouldn't speak to anyone—with a shotgun.

Mrs. Katherine Davidson of Dayton, Ohio, was hailed into court because she broke a shop window with a slipper blow intended to smash friend husband's cranium. When the judge gave her a choice of going home peacefully with friend husband or going to jail, she chose jail.

Cheer up! How's the family getting on?

This Musical World

The piano makers report the biggest business in many years. Not long ago piano sales had fallen off so that many thought the industry was on its last legs. The radio was killing it, they said.

Now it turns out that radio has stimulated interest in music, and the world of youth is feeling the urge, as never before, to produce its own music. The whole musical instrument market is experiencing a boom. Nobody knows how many aspiring boys and girls are learning to toot trumpets and saxophones, play the fiddle or the steel guitar, or do musical tricks with strange instruments, but the total must run into the millions. And that doesn't take in the budding crooners, torch singers and tap-dancers. Among the most popular programs on the air are the amateur hours, when ambitious musical youngsters strut their stuff. The volume and quality of the talent and near-talent which these affairs bring into the open is an index of the current enthusiasm for self-made music.

Quack, Quack!

"—We're soon going to find out whether we've got a Broadcasting Corporation, or what. They've banned hard liquor from the air. On beer, they're pondering. If whiskey's no good, neither's beer. And if neither of them are any good, then neither are the thousand and one patent medicines whose blarbs becloud the airways a great part of Montreal's day."—Ashley W. Cooper in the Montreal Gazette.

The Cost of Distribution

It used to cost a dollar to get a dollar's worth of goods into the hands of the consumer. Now, according to some recent studies by economists, it costs nearly a dollar and a half. If that is so, it would seem to have some bearing on the perpetual bugaboo of the high cost of living.

Perhaps in all the schemes put forward to bring about an economic balance between production and consumption, we have been tackling the problem from the wrong end. Perhaps the trouble is not overproduction but underconsumption, and that comes about because too many middlemen take a toll along the highways of commerce, between the producer and the consumer.

It certainly seems logical to believe that the producer could get just as much, and sell more goods, if people did not have to pay that toll of $1.50 on every dollar's worth the producer sells. The producer might even be able to sell cheaper if more people bought his goods.

Of course, the people who carry goods to market have to be paid for their services, but do we need so many of them, especially when it comes to the necessities of life? If a lot of the wholesalers, jobbers, commission men and others who stand between the producer and the retailer could be cut out, there would be a considerable saving which the retailer could pass on to the consumer.

If that is so, then there is something queer about the tendency to pass laws penalizing the producers who do their own distributing to consumers, and legalizing the fixing of minimum prices.

The Wagon and the Star

Hon. Francois J. Leduc, Quebec's Minister of Roads, when questioned on a reported rift between himself and Premier Duplessis, remarked at Brome Lake recently that he was "too busy to find time to fight with his confreres or anyone else."

He asserted much more highway construction and repairs were being effected now than in 1931 although expenditures were $3,000,000 lower than six years ago. There were 35,000 men busy on road work and the two-year program now under way, he said, was designated to give Quebec a highway second to none in the Dominion.

Hon. Mr. Leduc is, admittedly, cutting a wide swath in Quebec's mess of highways, but he will have to work exceedingly fast to give us a roads system "second to none in the Dominion" within the space of two years. All credit to his high ambitions—but chronic back-aches and deplorable bottle-necks leave us skeptical, so that we are loath to take his promise too seriously.

Wedded at St. Denis
Church on Saturday

McENTYRE — ROBIN

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday last, August 21st, at St. Denis Church, Montreal, when Miss Marie Paule Robin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Elzeur Robin of Montreal, was united in marriage to Mr. H. J. McEntyre of this town, son of Mrs. and the late Mr. Daniel McEntyre, Montreal.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a tailored grey suit with earthed accessories and her corsage bouquet was of Talisman roses. Mr. Henri Dufault supported the groom.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the residence of the bride's parents, the couple leaving later for Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. McEntyre will reside here in Lachute.

Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. F. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. R. Caron, Mrs. D. McEntyre, Dr. Jules Lafleur and Miss Jeannine Lafleur of Lachute, Miss Ruth LaPrairie, Mrs. P. A. Lafleur of Verdun, Mr. and Mrs. Marc Gravel, Mr. and Mrs. Henri Dufault, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Giles, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Giles and Miss Kay Giles of Lachute, Mr. Alex. Robertson and Miss G. Titman of Tremblayville, Mr. D. Titman, Mrs. R. Lortie and Mr. Ernest Lortie of Lachute, Mrs. Adelard Martel, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Martel, Mr. and Mrs. J. Evening Marriage at Brownsburg United Church

NORTHUP — WHEELER

The marriage of Miss Rhoda Julia Wheeler, daughter of the late John A. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler of Brownsburg, to Mr. Harry Small Northup of Parent, Que., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Northup of East Scotch Settlement, N.B., took place at the Brownsburg United Church at 6 o'clock Monday evening, the minister Rev. S. J. Pike officiating. The church was tastefully decorated with autumn flowers and foliage.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. M. D. Wheeler, of Waterford, Conn., was dressed in Coronation gold taffeta and brown lace ensemble and carried a bouquet of white gladioli and gypsophelia. Miss Olive Wheeler, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. She wore a gown of orchid taffeta with white accessories, carrying a bouquet of golden gladioli with gypsophelia.

Mr. Frank Steere acted as best man, while Mr. Cedric Wheeler was in charge of the ushering. The Wedding March was played by Mrs. C. J. Wheeler, who also rendered appropriate music during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony and the drive around town a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, during which the happy couple were suitably toasted and presented with an inscribed bible by Rev.

Mr. Pike. The certificate booklet was also given its round for well wishers' signature. Mr. and Mrs. Northup will tour the West on their honeymoon, the bride travelling in a navy suit with navy accessories. On their return they will reside at Parent, Que.

A variety of gifts, with a number of tea and shower gatherings prior to the wedding, indicate the high regard in which the happy couple are held. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Wheeler and son Richard, of Waterford, Conn., and Mr. J. Curtis of Montreal.

Moderator Hits at Human Killing

Rt. Rev. Peter Bryce scores "Awful Massacre" in Spain, and Shanghai.

Rev. Peter Bryce, Moderator of the United Church of Canada, issued a statement yesterday in Toronto, protesting against the "awful massacre of men, women and children" in Shanghai and Spain.

Declaring he could "no longer be silent," the Moderator said: The ghastly carnage caused by the bomb in the crowded department store section of the International Settlement at Shanghai has filled the world with horror.

"The man in the street fitly describes it as wholesale, stark, brutal murder, and no diplomat can change this judgment of the great mass of the people," he said. "They are sick with the horror of this fearful blot on our civilization."

"The mighty power of sentiment against all that is involved in modern warfare may yet save the world from disaster if it is expressed."

Baseball Donkeys Never Misused, Declares Owner

According to Edgar V. "Bud" Smith, owner of the troupe of donkeys which will appear here in a donkey baseball game arranged by the Lachute Lions Club for Sept. 1st, (next Wednesday evening) at the Exhibition Grounds—the donkeys are never mistreated by the players who urge these beasts in an effort to get them to go in the right direction. "You see, the donkeys can fish it out better than the business men can take it, so they are treated with due respect," he explained.

Health More Catching
Than Disease

A silver-tongued orator once remarked that God, in his infinite wisdom, had made one serious mistake: "He should have made health more catching than disease."

Now, if one seriously considers the subject (writes John W. S. McCullough, M.D.), this is exactly what the Creator did. He made health far more catching than disease. The majority are born with good, healthy bodies. These bodies should be all right if they were not tinkered with and needlessly exposed to danger. While certain forces in nature tend to provoke disease, the protective forces are overwhelmingly in the majority. Take the infant in its mother's arms. Nature has provided a proper sort of food for it, the mother's milk. Almost invariably if the use of the breast is maintained, the infant will remain well. It is only when artificial food is substituted that opportunities for trouble in this regard arise and disease creeps in.

Proper food, again, protects the child against the infections.

There is no need to expose the child to the malign influences of scarlet fever, small-pox or diphtheria, to name a few of the infections, that once contracted, are the basis of many chronic illnesses.

Nine-tenths of the hearts of men, women and children are primarily healthy, yet heart disease is our highest cause of death. The reason for this is that infection of one kind and another has overwhelmed the body defences to a greater or lesser degree.

Habits in eating, drinking and smoking invite disease. Health is frequently thrown away with a recklessness that is amazing.

Youth frequently takes a flying leap into the clutches of venereal disease without a thought of the consequences, if, indeed, he knows anything of the risks he is running.

The average man and woman possessing an automobile, takes reasonable care of this expensive machine, has it overhauled at intervals, greased, oiled and the tires checked for safety, but the same man or woman neglects to have a periodical overhaul of the body.

Members of Palm Family Form an Odd Collection

The various members of the palm family form an odd collection. Some are dwarf, but a foot or two high; others tower aloft 100 feet. Many, nearly all, are of single columnar shafts, but some are freely branched and others consist of many stems, rivaling the bamboos in this respect. Some have both sexes on the same plant, others differ in sex. Some flower and fruit annually, to a grand old age. Others make a large growth without flowering and then, in a supreme and life-crowning effort, put forth a flower stem 30 feet high, and perish from exhaustion.

There are palms that have tiny fan-shaped leaves a few inches across; others enjoy leaves many feet in diameter. Some have tiny ostrich-plume leaves, and some give rise to fern-shaped fronds 30 feet long. Some trunks are dwarf or entirely absent, while climbing rattan palms have lengthy trunks. Certain palm seeds are less in size than a grain of wheat, and then there are others with coconuts, or with the "double coconut," a fruit never seen here, states a writer in the Los Angeles Times. The latter hails from the Seychelles islands and weighs fifty pounds. It is so large that it requires several years to grow and mature. Usually palms perfect their seeds in one season, as do nearly all plants. A few pines and oaks are exceptions to this rule.

If you have never seen a Donkey Baseball Game, you don't know what fun really is. You will have an opportunity next Wednesday, and you must not miss it, for you will see some ludicrous action both on the part of the donkeys and their riders. It is a genuine comic stunt in which the stubborn donkeys play pranks and seem to sense the situation by refusing to reach their bases until they are good and ready.

Many Common Words Are

Records of Past Events

Many words in common use are records of events or personalities of the past. In some cases, states a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine, the meaning has not changed since it was first introduced. In others the passage of years has altered its form altogether.

When we light a "bonfire," we give no thought to St. John, in whose honor in the Fifteenth century fires made from clean bones (bones-fires) were lit.

The "Jerusalem" artichoke has nothing to do with Palestine; its proper name is the girasole (sunflower) artichoke. Carelessness and popular appeal has given it its more romantic name, and even soup made from artichokes is known as Palestine soup.

"Rotten Row," in Hyde park, London, was originally known as the Route du Roi, being the Plantagenet kings' road from Westminster to the royal forests. "Pall Mall" received its name because a game in which a palle, or iron ball, was struck through an iron ring with a mallet, was played there.

We use the phrase "to the bitter end" as though referring to the harsh dregs of wine or medicine. Originally it was a nautical expression meaning the end of a ship's cable, that part of it which is abaft the bitts—two pieces of timber to which the cable was attached when the ship rode at anchor.

The Church And Its Mission

Some people specialize in humorous or semi-humorous anecdotes dealing with religion. In fact, certain pastors of the jovial type carry them as part of their stock in trade.

Our personal feeling has always been that religion and jesting didn't mix, but we must admit that we are partial to that yarn about the country parson who cured an old lady of gossip.

This elderly parishioner had climbed his buggy for a lift to the nearest village. The journey was long and to while away the time the passenger proceeded to regale her minister with the latest scandal of the village. A certain young lady was not as good as he might be. . . .

"Indeed," cried the parson, "then, sister, let us pray for her," and stopping the carriage he prayed by the roadside long and lustily.

When the voyage resumed the lady remarked, by way of amends, that perhaps the poor girl wasn't to blame. It was common knowledge that her mother was a hussy and her father a drunkard.

"Then let us pray for them, too!" cried the man of God, again stopping the carriage. This time he prayed for a full hour and insisted on the sister joining in.

By this time the lady had got the point. "I'm afraid I'm nothing but an old busybody," she explained.

"Then let us pray for you," said the parson, gently. But this time he did not stop the carriage. . . .

There is a moral to this tale and it is not merely that time-honoured counsel, "Be charitable to your neighbors."

The moral is that the church, in emulation of that simple country parson, should refuse to take sides in matters of private hatred. All are God's children and his minister should have love and tenderness and good counsel for all.

The church has a great mission today. It cannot be preserved by keeping out of touch with contemporary problems—on the contrary, by helping to solve them it may fulfil a glorious destiny.

But it must keep clear of partisanship, must reject the doctrine that one group of people are the elect and that another of a different social stratum stand near damnation.

There are many creeds in the Christian body, but this idea at least is heresy to all of them.

I like to feel the summer sun
Shine down upon my back,
When I am wading in the creek

"All day the Captain and I waited and listened, hoping that some of the men would come back for us now that the sea was calm, but no one came. The Captain raged and swore, but it did him no good. It only harmed him, because towards evening he seemed to my frightened senses to be getting quite weak and I was greatly afraid that he would die and I would be left alone on the ship. Many times that day I wished that I had gone with the others of the crew, but when we found out later that none of them had been rescued, I was glad that I had remained behind."

"But," cried Ted excitedly, "You got off the ship safely, Captain Rolfe?"
"Aye, that I did," replied the Captain, his eyes twinkling as he looked over at Miss Elliott, who smiled understandingly back at him. The foolishness of the question suddenly presented itself to Ted's mind, for he slapped his knee and said, "How silly of me to ask you that question. Why, you would not be here talking to us now if you had not escaped."
"Quite right, Sonny. For the sea seldom gives up what it swallows, as you will find if you go too close to it—as you did the other day."

Ted looked a bit uncomfortable but managed to grin up into the Captain's face. "Please tell us more about the big storm," he said. "I can hardly wait to hear how you were saved—and I know Aunt Effie is as anxious as I am to hear what happened."

"Well," said the Captain, "we waited all that day, quite anxiously, and hungry-like, as the salt water had got into the greater part of the food and anyway, being only a lad, I did not know much about cooking or serving meals. When night came, a stiff breeze began to blow and I grew sick with the fear of what was going to happen before morning, for both the Captain and I felt sure that the heaving of the sea would loosen the ship and we would either sink or float away out into the rough waters, with no one to steer us or no one to help us in any way."

"I lay down close to the Captain's bunk—not that I was so fond of him, but when one is alone and in trouble even a bitter enemy is company. But I did not sleep very well. I would just doze off, then wake up in a fright, so that when morning came and the sea was calm again I went so soundly asleep that I did not hear the unusual noise of a boat coming alongside—nor did the Captain, who was asleep too. In fact, I did not waken even when I was lifted and lowered into the boat; then what a surprise I got to wake up and see myself surrounded by strange sounding men. The Captain was in the boat too, and when he saw my look of surprise he laughed shakily. I think it was the first time that I had ever heard him laugh; it surprised me so that I feared he had lost his mind, but he hadn't. He was just that glad to be saved that he forgot his evil temper long enough to laugh and say 'You are on y'ere way!' France, boy. Does that surprise ye?"

"It did, for I knew that our ship was not supposed to be anywhere near France when the storm set in, but we had been driven from our course a goodly bit by the fierce winds. I knew, too, that the men who had saved us were French seamen. From a lighthouse they had sighted the top of the ship heaving about, just before sundown the night before, but had waited for daylight and calmer waters before coming to see what it meant."

"What did they do with you?" Ted asked breathlessly.
"Well, they took the Captain to a hospital, where he lay for months. I went there too and helped around the kitchen for my board, until another ship was sailing that wanted a cabin boy, and away I went on it and never saw the old Captain again. I was not sorry either, although his temper seemed to have improved a bit since he had come ashore."

Mae West -- She's Coming to Town!

Well trained, clever, glamorous (more or less), subtle, fascinating (more or less) "Mae West" is coming to town.

She has been definitely booked for an engagement here on Sept. 1st. She is to perform in the Exhibition Grounds, where seating room promises to be at a premium. She is to be one of a company and will be one of the "stars" of the troupe, perhaps the leading star.

Yes, "Mae" is to be one of the Donkey Nine in the baseball line-up. She knows the game, and her local Lions Club partner who plays with her will require to know too. He thinks he does. We'll see.

The remainder of the donkey troupe also have high-sounding names, including — J. Wellington, Whimpy, Amos 'n Andy, Sally Rand, Pop Eye, Napoleon, Winchell, Rubinoff, Deacon, Garbo, Mahatma Gandhi, Al Smith and Madam Queen.

A BARGAIN!

He cupped his hands round his mouth and screamed "Fore!" once again. But still the woman seemed not to hear. Then in one supreme effort the golfer shouted "Three ninety-eight!"
And the woman turned around immediately and stepped out of the way!

On the other hand—fondness often makes the mind grow absent.

From Vimy Line to Bright Lights — and Radio Stage Just Twenty Years After

ORIGINAL DUMBELLS IN REUNION AT TORONTO

On Saturday, August 28, at 8.30 p.m. EST, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will present "The Original Dumbbells" to radio listeners in a show which will originate from Toronto.

Twenty years ago the Dumbbells, fourteen young Canadians who had served in active service on the western front, commenced an enterprise that led from an improvised stage back of the Vimy line to the leading theatres of London, Brussels and New York, followed by years of professional theatre success across Canada and the United States. Organized as one of the Court Parties of the Canadian corps to provide diversion for the troops resting back of the line, The Dumbbells, choosing their name from the insignia of the 3rd Canadian Division, played before thousands of Canadian soldiers for two years, under the management of Capt. M. W. Plunkett, and came ohme to become the most unique and best known organization of entertainers that Canada has ever applauded.

This week in Toronto, the Dumbbells will stage a reunion marking the twentieth anniversary of their first performance in August, 1917. A dozen men of the original Dumbbells company will gather from all over Canada and the U.S. to stage their reunion program, produced from the stage of the little theatre at Christie Street Hospital, where many of their old comrades still reside.

Anecdotes of their early days are worth recalling. About "Marjorie's" first costume, for instance. It was made of canvas, trimmed with absorbent cotton, tipped with iodine to make imitation ermine. It cost sixty cents. One of the last frocks worn by the same beautiful lady was a wedding creation which was bought for six hundred dollars. Then there is the story of the young Canadian lieutenant who "fell" for the leading lady, rushed her with notes and gifts of flowers. . . until one fine day. Among the treasures still preserved in Marjorie's wardrobe is a necklace sent by the Duke of Windsor when he was Prince of Wales.

The boys also like to remind their old friends how the female roles were established. No-body wanted to play the girl parts and the first show called for five boys and five girls. So they drew lots . . . numbers for the boys and blanks for the girls. Ross Hamilton drew a blank . . . and the name he chose was in honor of a beautiful Montreal girl he left behind when he went over with the 9th Field Artillery.

These and other incidents will be recalled when the Dumbbells gather Saturday for their reunion, twenty years after.

A Twenty-Year-Old Hawk

Ottawa.—More than twenty years ago, one W. V. Shouse, of Clayton, New Mexico, caught a large hawk and attached to its neck by means of a leather collar, a bell and a tag bearing his name, address and the date. Then he let the bird go. In the spring of 1937 this hawk was found dead at Strongfield, Saskatchewan, and proof of its long life was substantiated by the return of the collar, bell and tag to Mr. Shouse, now living at Booker, Texas, who positively identified them.

Presumably this bird attained the age of at least twenty years. Its belling and subsequent recovery show how it is possible to accurately record life histories of native wild birds. Because of the bell Mr. Shouse knew that the hawk spent the winters of 1918 and 1919 at Clayton, New Mexico. The bird is also reported to have nested in the same tree at Strongfield, Saskatchewan, for the last four or five years prior to its death.

FOG

To a landlubber like myself, fog is quite intriguing. There is such a difference between fog and mist. Somehow the fog is a soft pleasant thing—if you have not had it too many days in succession. Last night I lay awake for an hour or more listening to the boats and their fog signals. At first there was just the fog-horn to be heard. Then a boat whistled, with its definite interval between whistles, for fog. Shortly you could hear another boat, and then a third one started. There was a steady whistling as they blew one after the other. The vessels must have been fairly crawling along because there seemed to be no change in position of the sound for a long time. It reminded me of the three bears. One had a high thin voice, one had a deep, hoarse voice; then there was one in between. Gradually the high one sounded farther away until it faded out completely. It must have been going out and the other two coming in to the harbour. The deep sounding whistle stopped abruptly so I concluded it had docked. Then for some time the last boat continued its regular whistle until it too ceased. And there was nothing to be heard but the monotonous sound of the fog-horn.

MAKE THE BEST OF WHAT YOU HAVE

When a girl is attractive it is no miracle in these days of expert make-up and easily found smart clothes. When a middle-aged or older woman is attractive looking, that is another story. There is a freshness of youth that always has an appeal but the life of a woman is written on her face. Her thoughts, her emotions and her way of life have all made their mark. Youth can wear anything and get away with it but the older woman has to choose her clothes with care and have them in perfect condition and properly put on before she can look well. Women cannot have the special attractiveness which youth alone has, but they can make something else for themselves. We all of us know women who were considered pretty girls who have faded into colourless women. They had nothing but good features to build on or perhaps did not feel that anything else was necessary. On the other hand, we know women who were plain looking girls and have developed into good looking women. They have had character and it has made an indelible impression. So many women dread grey hair and yet it improves the appearance of many a formerly plain woman. There is something especially attractive about the contrast of grey hair and a fresh face, so women should not grieve if they turn grey before they think they should. Gray hair softens the face, whereas dyed hair makes it harder. One of the things that many a woman does not discover is that while the hair is turning, she cannot wear the colours she could before with the same becomingness. Women who have found black becoming and have always had a black dress on top, sometimes never discover that their day for black is over for the time being at least. They continue to wear it and it drains away all their colour. They worry about looking old whereas they could subtract years from their looks if they would change their way of dressing. A shade of navy, with life to it, is often the best substitute for the formerly becoming black. Our looks do not remain static and our way of dressing should change with them. Many women try to cling to youth by dressing too youthfully. Nothing makes a woman older. One need not choose old clothes, but there are plenty of smart styles suitable for the middle-aged woman that will make her look younger than the too young ones. Make the best of the looks that are yours and dress suitably.

MEASURING SPOONS

Do you use a set of measuring spoons or do you continue in the old-fashioned way to make a guess, more or less, accurately to a half spoonful? A set of measuring spoons saves time and is exact. The coloured ones are attractive looking, but, alas, they break very easily. I take apart the sets of colored spoons as they can readily be distinguished, but the aluminum spoons I leave together as they seem to have an uncanny power of burying themselves under the rest of the kitchen silver. It is an easy matter to wash off the spoon you have used as soon as you have used it, then you do not have to wash the whole set. If you haven't measuring spoons, loosen up and spend a few cents on them. If you buy only one set, I would advise putting your money on the aluminum ones as they are more lasting.

COFFEE FLIP

Make coffee as usual and add cream. Chill. Put a serving of vanilla ice cream in a glass and fill with the chilled coffee. I have found this a pleasant summer refreshment for either afternoon or evening. I usually serve cucumber sandwiches with it, and cookies.

SHRIMP SALAD

1 can shrimps
1 cup diced cucumbers
2 chopped hard cooked eggs
¼ cup diced sweet pickles
Remove the black line from the shrimps. Cut in pieces. Add remaining ingredients and mix with salad dressing. Serve on lettuce.

CARAMEL ICE CREAM

¾ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup water
4 egg yolks
1 pint whipping cream
Put the sugar and butter in the top of the double boiler and place over direct heat. Cook slowly until browned, being careful not to burn as this will give a bitter taste, but brown it so that it will have a caramel flavour, not a butterscotch one. When sufficiently browned, add the water and stir until the caramel is dissolved. Pour this over the beaten egg yolks and return to the double boiler. Cook over hot water until thickened, stirring frequently. Fill the bottom of the double boiler with cold water and let the mixture stand in this until cooled. Changing the water several times hastens the process. Whip cream and fold in the caramel mixture. Put in freezer tray and freeze without stirring.

JOINT EXPEDITION

A burglar, who had entered a poor minister's house at midnight, was disturbed by the awakening of the occupant. Drawing his weapon, he said: "If you stir, you are a dead man. I'm hunting for your money." "Let me get up and strike a light", said the minister, "and I'll hunt with you." —The Sentinel.

Eastern Canada's Giant Earner

Dairy products brought farmers of Eastern Canada more than $171,000,000 during 1936. This represents over 40% of the total farm income for Quebec, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces. It is more income than is produced by any other single farm product—ten times as much as from wheat and more than double the revenue from oats.

For thousands of farm families milk is a year-around source of money, a steady dependable income paid each month or oftener. To make this steady income possible, people must be reminded constantly of the goodness of milk and milk products. Borden helps to do this job by keeping milk foremost in the minds of millions of buyers, making ever larger markets for dairy products.

BUFFET PARTIES

Vacations are almost over and most families are ready to settle down to the normal routine of work and play. Friends are eager to greet each other after weeks of separation, so it seems an excellent time to give a party. Buffet parties are an easy kind to give because everything is done before the party begins. All the food is put on the dining table and side table for each guest to help himself. This eliminates most of the serving for the hostess although of course she must be alert to replenish the food on the dining table.

If you like, the napkins and individual silver service can be put on small tables scattered through the house or you can arrange the napkins and silver on the dining table, flanking the plates.

Another point to keep in mind when planning the menu is to choose dishes that will not spoil if they have to wait and that are easy to serve. Individual molds and large forms are splendid on these two counts. The menu should not be elaborate but it should be made up of foods providing pleasant color contrast. "Hardy" foods usually are colorful because they stand up bravely after they leave the refrigerator or stove.

A tray of assorted hors d'oeuvres, a hot dish, a salad, hot rolls or biscuits, fresh fruit and cookies and hot coffee makes an adequate menu to work out to suit your individual taste.

The hot dish should be one of the popular favorites and may be as inexpensive as you wish. Dried beef, fish, ham, chicken or sweetbreads can be combined with a well seasoned sauce to make the hot savory.

It's hard to beat a tomato salad of some description this time of year. Stuff medium sized uniform tomatoes with a mixture of diced chicken, celery, pineapple and white grapes combined with mayonnaise. Serve in a crisp lettuce cup. Or combine shredded new cabbage, diced cucumber, threads of green pepper and cubes of pineapple with French dressing and use to stuff tomatoes. All fish salads make good stuffings, too, and if you haven't used fish in your hot savory, the fish salad would be delicious.

Cheese biscuits are delectable with salads and are quite unusual. You can make them up, cut them and put them in their pan ready for baking several hours before you will need them. Keep them in the ice box until ready to bake. Put them in the oven as the first guest comes in and they will be ready to serve and piping hot when the last guest arrives.

CHEESE BISCUITS

Two cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons shortening, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 cup grated cheese, ½ cup milk.

Mix and sift flour, salt, baking powder. Work in shortening with pastry blender or tips of fingers. Add cheese and mix lightly. Cut in milk with a knife. Toss on a lightly floured board and knead very slightly. Roll into a sheet about an inch thick and cut with a small biscuit cutter. Bake in a hot

Wife of U.S. Postmaster Here for Recent Wedding

SPOKE OF HUSBAND'S UNUSUAL MEMORY

Mrs. Elizabeth Farley of New York, wife of the United States Postmaster, attended the Ayers - Boucher wedding at Lachute Mills last Thursday. Interviewed by a Star representative at the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal, the visitor characterized Mr. James A. Farley as "pretty well the perfect husband."

"What about this wonderful memory of Mr. Farley's?" the Star reporter asked. "Does it apply to things at home as well? Does he always remember to do the odd bit of shopping you ask him to do?"

"He remembers everything", Mrs. Farley replied. "It isn't just the name and faces of people whom he meets. I think it's a gift of some sort."

"Yes, but does he remember things around the house and family?"

"He remembers dates", Mrs. Farley said firmly. "He remembers anniversaries. I think", she laughed, "you can't ask for more than that in memories. He's pretty well the perfect husband."

"I don't take any part in politics at all", Mrs. Farley remarked. "Of course I must act as a hostess in Washington now and again. But that's all I do—

The new boon represents one of the most practical uses of koroseal-coated paper; this is paper to which has been applied a thin coating of the recently-discovered rubber-like substance called koroseal by scientists of The B. no women's clubs; no political speeches."

Hospitable Atmosphere in the Living Room

The housewife who wants her living room to radiate hospitality while it maintains an air of dignity may well choose panelled walls as a background for the furnishings. A room that has become tiresome will take on new life with panelled walls.

One housewife decided on this means of bringing the interior of her house up to modern fashion. She did not feel that the expense of making structural changes to the house was justified, so concentrated her efforts on the rooms in which the family spent most of its time.

The wall panels used were in an interesting design. The wood was not of a uniform size and the irregularity kept the room from too formal an atmosphere. Over the mantel small squares of the panelling formed a design, obviating the necessity of any wall decoration.

Chinese tiles were used in the fireplace, striking a note of colour against the sombre background of the wood. The floor was refinished, and leaded windows replaced the regulation ones which had formerly graced the room. To complete the effect the owner had gay chintz covers made for the furniture and matching drapes hung.

FOR BETTER HEALTH

BY DR. J. ROSSLYN EARP

SPLIT FINGERNAILS

They are troublesome and unsightly, but they are not dangerous. Perhaps that is why so little is written about them in the medical text books.

Fingernails split when they become too dry. This happens in general diseases that result in poor circulation of the finger tips. In these cases the nail gets dry because it is ill nourished and the best way to restore its food supply is to treat the disease. Besides some rather rare diseases of the nerves which control the blood supply such diseases as tuberculosis, diabetes and kidney disease may result in split fingernails.

The nails may also be dried out by the local action of certain chemicals. Much soaking in soda may have this effect. Certain nail polishes, polish remover and cuticle remover have been blamed, but little is known about this hazard. Bear in mind, however, that such strong chemicals as potash lye may be sold for removing cuticle, and that there is no federal law to control the composition or advertising of cosmetics. Of course, there ought to be one.

As local treatment for this condition, you may use a nightly application to the cuticle of Balsam of Peru, 50 per cent in castor oil to stimulate nail growth. Split nails may be protected by zinc oxide strapping and the nails should be cut with scissors because the use of a nail file on brittle nails is likely to make them split.

Statistical Studies in An Ottawa Bureau

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics in Ottawa, presided over by Dr. R. H. Coats, comprises several branches, each dealing with some specific part of the survey. Officials of the bureau revel in figures, though they may not juggle with them. They can deliver on demand statistics of endless variety, all the way from crops to crime. Once in a decade they concern themselves seriously with the increase in the population of the Dominion and call it taking the census. At other times they are engaged in compiling figures on production, exports and imports and can reveal the activities and output of Canadian farms, fisheries, forests, factories and mines.

W. H. Losee, chief of the minerals, metallurgy and chemistry branch, is responsible for the compilation of fertilizer statistics and has earned praise for the skillful manner in which he has handled what was once an awkward and chaotic situation. His statistics are accurate, and he will check closely the new figures which record a fairly increased consumption of fertilizers this year. But there's no denying them or the farmers who have awakened to the need for fertilizers.
