LOADING VEGETABLES FOR THE WEST, NEXT TUESDAY-THURSDAY

STILL TIME FOR CITIZENS TO AID COMMITTEE WITH DONATIONS

The collection and loading of vegetables from the prescribed routes around Lachute have now been arranged for, and a refrigerator car will be stationed in the C.P.R. yards next Tuesday to Thursday to receive these goods for shipment to the drought areas of the West. Canvassers in the farming districts have been promised a generous supply of vegetables, to be collected by trucks for the final loading on the days mentioned.

Appeals have been issued among the various congregations and societies. A few cash contributions have reached The Watchman to date, but it is hoped that townsfolk may respond during the remaining week with donations of either money or canned foodstuffs.

The committee of church and service club representatives is meeting this evening at the Town Hall, to report progress and arrange the final stages of this effort. The chairman, Rev. W. LeCras, has received advice from the secretary of the central committee at Toronto that the car from Lachute will be consigned to the Director of Relief at Eaton, Sask.

Colonization Road Projects in Many Sections of County

Mr. George Héon has submitted a list of grants passed by the Provincial Government for work on colonization roads in this county. A. Riendeau, C.E., colonization department engineer, is supervising the various projects, instructions for their immediate commencement having been issued this week to foremen in charge. The list includes the following sections:

Injured Lumberjack Flown from St. Jovite to Montreal

Flown to Montreal in a government seaplane following a lumbering accident Saturday afternoon at Lake Cache, near St. Jovite, Mederic Seguin, 50-year-old lumberjack of Lac Mercier, is in a Montreal hospital recovering from a broken arm, internal injuries and a probable fracture of the skull. Seguin was struck by a falling tree.

The seaplane was moored at St. Jovite. It was being used by Dr. George Prefontaine, of the Department of Biology, University of Montreal, for restocking the Laurentian area with lake trout.

Fellow employees of the injured lumberjack summoned Dr. Prefontaine to the scene of the accident, and after first aid treatment had been rendered, it was decided to fly Seguin into Montreal for hospital observation.

"Spotlight" Writer Is Appointed on the Dominion Royal Commission

Wilfrid Eggleston, whose "Ottawa Spotlight" column has proved a welcome feature to readers of this paper, has been appointed to the secretariat of the Royal Commission on Dominion - Provincial Relations... He will be assistant to D. A. Skelton, chief of the research branch of the Bank of Canada, named secretary of the commission headed by Hon. N. W. Rowell. During his absence from the Press Gallery, although Mr. Eggleston will write occasionally for The Watchman, his column will be conducted by a colleague, Mr. Morris McDougall, who will present his observations in the same impartial, bright and informative manner characterized by our regular contributor.

Santa Fé Players Present Fine Comedy at Lakefield

Lakefield — The Gibb Parish Hall was crowded to capacity on Saturday evening when the Santa Fé players, of Montreal, presented their comedy "Oh, Clarissa." Mr. H. G. Baugh acted as chairman for the evening, and introduced the cast to the audience. During the two intermissions, community singing was enjoyed, led by one of the visiting artists. The comedy presented dealt with a new-fangled Hindu religion, which in the end turned out to be merely a trick for elopement of the fakir with the rich man's daughter.

The Women's Auxiliary, under whose auspices the play was brought to Lakefield, realized proceeds of over $17. Rev. C. W. P. Baugh expressed appreciation to the concert troupe at the close of the entertainment.

Traffic Officers to Watch Highways Through Villages

Realizing the number of unnecessary road accidents which occur in villages along the principal highways in the province, the traffic service of the Quebec provincial police is to apply rigorously the traffic law on regional routes, it is announced from the department this week.

Traffic officers have been instructed to keep a strict check on all motorists to see that there are no violations of the highway regulations. It is pointed out that victims of accidents have been, for the most part, children.

Still Picking Raspberries

The unusually mild weather for October finds garden produce still growing. Miss Myrtle Doig reports having picked a handful of raspberries from her garden on Tuesday... and those acquainted with Miss Doig will readily realize it was a fair-sized handful. Quebec Credit Stands High in the London Markets

British financial interests have every confidence in the province of Quebec, according to Gordon Ross, Quebec City banker who has just returned from a trip to England. Canada's position in the mind of British financiers is better than could be imagined here, Mr. Ross declared.

"London is full of confidence as regards the Province of Quebec," the banker said. "Our credit seems more solid than ever and we are being considered above other provinces. I attribute this to the fact that Quebec has never repudiated her obligations."

Close Successful Season With Lady Golfers' Final Meeting

The ladies' branch of the Lachute Golf Club brought a successful season to a close with its final business meeting held Tuesday afternoon at the club house. Prior to the meeting, a "three sealed holes" competition was played. The prize, donated by Miss Rodrigue, was won by Mrs. W. M. Cottingham. Mrs. H. Cousens, as captain, presented this prize.

The "ringer prize" for the season was also won by Mrs. W. M. Cottingham. This was presented by the President, Mrs. G. J. Cheley.

The Nominating Committee for next season's officers was appointed, as follows: Con-venor, Miss Pauline Paquette; Mrs. T. K. Haller, Mrs. J. R. Charron, Mrs. E. Beaton.

The date for the annual meeting was set for the first Tuesday in May, 1938.

Tea was served by Mrs. A. Taylor, convener of the Social Committee, after which the meeting adjourned.

SIR GEORGE PERLEY INITIAL SPEAKER IN NEW CBC RADIO SERIES

IN A REMINISCENT VEIN, OPENS "I REMEMBER" TALKS FROM OTTAWA

Selected to inaugurate a new CBC radio series of "I Remember" talks, on Tuesday evening September 28, was the Rt. Hon. Sir George H. Perley—one well qualified to entertain a Dominion-wide audience with his reminiscences. Sir George has a wealth of experience and a long career of service from which to draw his narrative. His personal recollections, in fact, are inseparable from the story of progress in this Dominion, while the text of his address also reveals a touch of biography particularly interesting to his Argenteuil friends; Sir George has addressed many audiences in these parts, but of himself he says little for the public ear... His remarks in this recent radio talk are published in full:

Fellow Canadians, Ladies and Gentlemen—At the request of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation I take pleasure in speaking to you for a few minutes this evening and giving you some of my reminiscences.

When we are young we are likely to think that conditions are more or less fixed in the world and will remain unchanged. Later in life we realize that they alter rapidly from generation to generation and it is amazing how great has been the progress of this City and of the Dominion of Canada during the span of my life.

When my father came to Ottawa it had about one-tenth of its present population and consisted of two small communities about two miles apart. The Eastern one was the original settlement. It was known as Lower Town and had grown and prospered through the building of the Rideau

K. of C. Parade Sunday to Notre Dame de Lourdes Shrine

OVER 2,000 PERSONS GATHERED FOR CEREMONY

The inaugural of the Notre Dame de Lourdes shrine on the Brownsburg Road, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, was well attended last Sunday.

The K. of C. parade was headed by the Lachute Brass Band, followed by several prominent fourth-degree officers of the order and some two hundred members and officers of the Lachute Council 2752. The procession left the Council headquarters at 10.30 and walked to the shrine, arriving there at 11.00 o'clock, where a high mass was celebrated and a sermon given by Reverend Father Louis of the Order of Capucins, Reverend Father Bouchard of Brownsburg officiating. Among the clergy present were Rev. Father Labelle, Rev. Father L. E. Cloutier, Rev. Father L. P. Savage, Rev. Father Rollin, and Rev. Father Bazinet. Seated in the first row of the congregation were Mr. W. H. Ayers, donor of the shrine, and his family, and the guard of honor comprised the following fourth degree members—Sir Knights Albert Chevalier, O.B.E., Master for Quebec District No. 1, L. P. Gravel, P. Heffernan, J. Bonnier of Montreal, Thos. Watchorn of St. Jovite, J. McDonald, J. D. Lepine and L. E. Dumais, Lachute.

This demonstration attracted parishioners from the entire surrounding district, the attendance being estimated at around 2,200 people.

Baptist Minister, Married Here, Is Feted at Ogdensburg, N.Y., on Silver Wedding

The Ogdensburg Journal of September 29 reports a happy gathering assembled to honor Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Kelly, on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary. Mr. Kelly is minister of the First Baptist Church in Ogdensburg, N.Y., and is well remembered in the Baptist field of Lachute and of this county, where he served acceptably as student minister many years ago.

Rev. and Mrs. Kelly (formerly Miss Alice McLaurin of Vankleek Hill) were married in Lachute 25 years ago. They have four children. Friends in these parts join in extending their congratulations and good wishes.

ELECTION BROADCASTING

Ottawa, Oct. 5th. — People round Parliament Hill are beginning to wonder if there isn't just a little too much radio broadcasting of election speeches for the peace and comfort of the ordinary citizen. The CBC is quite within its rights in giving the time assigned, and no one begrudges the national utility this lucrative source of revenue. It isn't either a matter of politics, for both sides have their inning over the air waves, but even the most ardent political partisan may be surprised by an excess of his own party's excellence and the turpitude and shortcomings of the opposing party; he may wish even on the eve of an election to take his ease before his radio listening to his favorite musical program or comedy skit. It seems probable parliament may regulate broadcasts of elections to key utterances and eve of election round-ups by leaders much as they do in Britain.

SECTIONALISM IN CANADA

Is there a more pronounced spirit of disunion and friction in Canada just now than there has been for years past? This disturbing idea has been frequently voiced. In a recent speech at Sydney, Mr. Herridge, whose utterances have the authority of a thoughtful man, who has held high office in Canada's foreign service, said: "We have no unity in Canada; we have an aggression of minorities, each one clamoring for its own rights... No nation is so disunited as we are." There has been from some quarters a pretty vigorous assertion of provincial rights. The question is whether on vital questions actual friction exists between the governments in Canada and whether if such exists the feeling has permeated the body of the people. The ancient "unity in diversity" between

Lightning Bolt Struck in Brownsburg, Horse Killed

Brownsburg — A horse belonging to James Hazel, a carter employed here by the C-I-L, was electrocuted during a brief thunderstorm which struck around Wednesday noon.

The animal was one of a team drawing the wagon and driven by Mr. Hazel. Both horses suddenly fell to the pavement outside of the company's entrance gate. The driver noticed smoke emerging from an electric transformer at the spot where the accident occurred. He assumed at the time that some of the current "shorted" on the roadway. By the time he could release the horses

SALT vital necessity

I visited a locomotive factory not long ago. It was a hot day, and the sweaty workers made frequent trips to the water-coolers for a drink. Beside each cooler was a box labelled "salt", and I noticed most of the men took a little tablet out of the box and swallowed it with their cupful of cold water. I asked why.

"It staves off fatigue and heat prostration", the foreman told me. "When a man sweats he loses salt as well as water. We thought it was silly when the company doctor first told us to take salt in hot weather, but now we see he was right. Seems you can't be well if you lose too much salt."

I checked up on that with my own doctor. "That's right", he told me. "Human life, like all animal life, began in the sea, and we're still fish inside. We must have salt to be healthy, and when we lose salt too rapidly, by perspiration, we must replace it. Sea salt is the best, because it contains other minerals, but it's hard to get. That's why sea bathing is better than freshwater swimming."

SALARY salt money

What the doctor said about salt set me to thinking. I remembered from my school days that the Latin for salt is "sal". I went to my dictionary to see how many common English words are derived from "sal", and the first one I found was "salary". It meant, originally, "salt money", for salt was the most precious commodity in early times.

Salt was universally used as money by primitive peoples, and still is in some parts of Africa and Asia. The world's great trade routes follow the trails of the salt-caravans over which this precious commodity was brought to the people of the inland towns. Today the traffic of the camel-trains of the Sahara desert is principally the trade in salt.

The word for "health" used by the old Romans was "salus". When we "salute" anybody we are wishing him or her good health. We still call a healthy climate "salubrious", and keep a box of salt or a chunk of rock salt in the cattle shed for the cows, who can't range around and find for themselves a salty piece of ground, such as the "deer licks" to which the wild creatures have access.

CHEMURGY farming

Motoring around West Florida a little while ago, I encountered dozens of farm motor trucks loaded with pine cord-wood. The farmers were hauling logs to the paper mill at Panama City, where 600 tons of paper a day are made from pine wood. It is a new and permanent source of income for owners of pine land, if they are careful not to cut the trees faster than new ones grow. The "slash" pine of the South grows big enough for pulpwood in seven years, so the owner who cuts only one-seventh of his wood every year has a continuous source of income. The demand for pulpwood is growing fast. Four more big paper mills are being built in Florida, a dozen more elsewhere in the South.

The discovery that Southern pine makes good paper came out of a chemical laboratory. It is the most important item, so far, in the new movement which is called "chemurgy." That means the use of products of the soil for industrial purposes. Farming in the future will not be centered on growing things to be eaten, but on raising crops to be converted, by chemical industry, into the materials of which a thousand articles of commerce are made.

Lit Fire With Coal Oil, Woman Burned to Death

Gabrielle Bazinet, 34, of Ste. Agathe, was burned to death last Thursday following the explosion of a can of coal oil with which she was lighting a stove. The house was razed to the ground. Firemen were called to the dwelling, three miles northeast of Ste. Agathe, but they were unable to cope with the blaze, being handicapped by the lack of water.

The house is the property of H. Walker of Montreal, and was occupied by A. Miron and his family. Miss Bazinet, a sister of Mrs. Miron, was alone in the house at the time.

As she poured coal oil on the flames the can exploded in her hands. Her clothing caught fire and she rushed from the house shouting for help.

Neighbors went to her aid and summoned a doctor. Before the fire in her clothes could be extinguished she had been badly burned about the entire body. She was carried to a neighbor's home, where she died in the afternoon.

Coroner Dr. G. Latour, of St. Jerome, disposed of the case with a verdict of accidental death.

Church Murals Show
Dark-Skinned Angels

Black-haired, brown-skinned angels, cherubim and seraphim, make the Oblate Order's mission church at Fort Good Hope, inside the Arctic Circle, the Mackenzie River's most noted show place.

The little wooden building housing the dark-hued heavenly beings was erected 70 years ago by Father Petitot and Brother Ancel, French missionaries. It has a night blue ceiling studded with gold stars. All wall space is covered with murals, pictures and other decorations made by the two almost entirely from materials available at the fort.

All lumber was sawed by hand and the original church, before repairs were effected in later years, contained no nails. It was pegged together. At first it contained no ornaments, but the two men, working for years, produced murals in reds, browns, yellows, greens and blues, using native materials and paint powders shipped to them by canoe and dog sled from "outside."

It was Father Petitot who thought of the brown-skinned cherubim and seraphim. The Indians, he reasoned, would be more likely to consider themselves candidates for a joyous hereafter if they saw the heavenly population reproduced in their own colors.

BROKEN FRAGMENTS

BY M. V. TRAYERS

I often call to mind a remark made by the mistress of a ladies' seminary, that it was "not quite respectable for persons to know about their insides." Looking through Huxley one evening recently, I had my faith in this lady's teaching in physiology mildly disturbed, and as the passage interested me so much I cannot forbear repeating it.

"Suppose it were perfectly certain that the life and fortune of every one of us would, one day or other, depend upon his winning or losing a game of chess. Don't you think that we should all consider it a primary duty to learn at least the names and the moves of the pieces: to have a notion of a gambit, and a keen eye for all the means of giving and getting out of check? Do you not think that we should look, with a disapprobation amounting to scorn, upon the father who allowed his son, or the state which allowed its members, to grow up without knowing a pawn from a knight?"

"Yet it is a very plain and elementary truth that the life, the fortune and the happiness of every one of us, and, more or less, of those who are connected with us, do depend upon our knowing something of the rules of a game infinitely more difficult and complicated than chess. It is a game which has been played for untold ages, every man and woman of us being one of the two players in a game of his or her own. The chess-board is the world, the pieces are the phenomena of the universe, the rules of the game are what we call the laws of nature. The player on the other side is hidden from us. We know that his play is always fair, just, and patient. But also we know to our cost that he never overlooks a mistake, or makes the smallest allowance for ignorance. To the man who plays well, the highest stakes are paid with that sort of overflowing generosity with which the strong show delight in strength. And one who plays ill is checkmated — without haste but without remorse."

About twenty-five years ago a system of measuring the blood pressure became part of an ordinary medical examination. At that time an Englishman named Hales endeavored to ascertain the pressure which blood exerts on the arteries. He procured a long glass tube and, opening the femoral artery of a horse, inserted the tube. The blood rose to a height of over eight feet in the tube. He therefore learned that the pressure was sufficient to support a column of blood of this height. Nowadays the doctor ties a rubber bag around your arm and pumps air into it until he reaches the point whence the pressure is greater than the pressure exerted by the heart. This pressure is registered by a column of mercury and is known as the systolic blood-pressure, the average figure for which is around 120 millimetres of mercury.

"The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly; You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it will somehow get by; Till the forms are off the presses it is strange how still it keeps, It shrinks down into a corner and it never stirs or peeps. The typographical error too small for human eyes Till the ink is on the paper, then it grows to mountain size; The boss he stares with horror, then he grabs his hair and groans, The copy-reader drops his head upon his hand and moans. The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be, But the typographical error is the only thing you see!"

Observed Feast of St. Theresa ... Pilgrimage to Shrine... Impressive Message by Rev. Father Louis, Superior of the Capucin Fathers in Montreal

By M. V. TRAYERS

The feast of St. Theresa of the Child Jesus was celebrated throughout the Catholic world on Sunday... The story of the little French girl whose meeting with the Virgin Mother is marked by the famous grotto and shrine at Lourdes, where millions of pilgrims have knelt in prayer and supplication, is of such recent memory that some of the direct descendants of witnesses to the principal in this beautiful manifestation are still with us.

On the road between Lachute and Brownsburg stands a lovely prototype of this French shrine. Heft and hewn from the rugged rock cliff, towering far up 'neath the fir-crowned summit, is placed a life-sized statue of the Virgin Mother gazing with tender appeal on the little French maiden, who is represented in genuflection in the area below. At the feet of the Virgin a small stream gurgles its way through the rocks—as does the miraculous water of Lourdes which has brought such untold relief from the miseries of the physical world to the many who had faith in its healing influences.

Circumambient steps lead from the castellated fane encompassing a gothic, inset on the front, with a font on either side, and continue past the shrubbed aspe to the beautiful flower-garden at the base. A wide gravelled walk leads from the entrance gates, which in themselves are a magnificent example of wrought iron craftsmanship. Like an oasis in a desert of disorder, this scene stands in ecstatic grandeur reaching to the winnowed clouds which crown its brow—to arrest our attention and divorce us from the trivialities of everyday to the incomprehensible greatness which lies beyond and above its rugged heights.

To the shrine on Sunday a pilgrimage of thousands of the faithful directed their steps. Along its flag bedecked sward trooped the penitents, to the roll of drums, wending their way to the summit, where the Rev. Father Bouchard, Parish Priest of Brownsburg, celebrated Benediction on a temporary altar erected in the area. Dominus Vobiscum and Father Bouchard asked the assembled multitude to hear the message of the Rev. Father Louis, Superior of the Capucin Fathers of Montreal. Father Louis took his place on a natural pulpit away up on the mountain-side. It was an inspiring sight. Father Louis recounted the beautiful story of Bernardette, to whom the Holy Mother delivered her message for the conversion of sinners and the bringing of peace to a distracted world, and eternal rest to the faithful departed. The learned Father's words carried away out over the vast throng in clear, well defined accents. The remarkable acoustics of the shrine threw his words to the limits of the great congregation assembled during the hour's discourse. Father Bouchard resumed the Benediction ceremony, at the conclusion of which this concourse of people descended the mountainside to the orchard below and thence to the waiting array by a very efficient police service. The Knights of Columbus marching in full regalia added a picturesque touch of color to the assembly.

Honorary Local Secretary for Quebec Music Festival 1938

The Quebec Musical Competition Festival Inc. have published the Syllabus for the 1938 Festival, to be held in Montreal during March, 1938. The Syllabus is causing considerable interest and is greatly in demand. It is anticipated that a considerably greater number of competitors will participate in the coming Festival.

The Committees have enlarged the Syllabus, increasing the number of classes from 149 to 265. These include 183 musical classes and 82 literary and speech classes. There are four championship classes with special trophies—two for Solo Singing, one for Adult Choirs, and one for Children's Choirs.

The Musical Competition Festival movement in other parts of the Empire has stimulated a wholesome enthusiasm for work in those who take part. It is also a means of making known promising talent... Local inquiries concerning the Festival may be addressed to Mr. C. L. Duncan, Lachute, who is the Honorary Local Secretary for the organization.

Ontario and Quebec, deep rooted in history, retaining cultural and racial differences, giving piquancy and a special flavor to Canadian life, and preventing stagnation in public life for the good of Canada. is not the issue involved. In Alberta as everywhere is well aware there is friction, plenty of it, between the provincial and the Dominion government. We will all have to wait to see how this thing will work itself out. The challenge by the provincial government of the Dominion's right to disallow provincial statutes is direct and vigorous. Despite this abrupt and disconcerting challenge which has as its vitalizing force an almost fanatical zeal for a new economic policy, there seems to be little cause to fear that the people of Alberta have any wish to "secede" from confederation. The provincial government repudiates any such idea. In the meantime we must wait and see what solution of the friction is found. It would have been strange if Canada had been spared the unrest which with economic suffering was the aftermath of the war and the depression, and which in other countries found expression in new political and economic theories and in some cases in new forms of government. Canada has its crop of economists with their penances and has unfortunately had sectionalism. This sectionalism, it must be admitted, has been aided rather than hindered by too strict an adherence to "provincial rights" on the part of some provincial governments. There has on occasions been lacking that spirit of co-operation so essential to the smooth working of the federal form of government. But this sectionalism is likely only a passing phase. Anyway it is only a family quarrel which we will patch up. For all the gloomy prophecies we may hear, the heart of Canada is sound. Let other countries have their "isms", to which they may raise graven images, Canadians will still wear the sprig of liberty in their hats, and will stick to their cradled faith in democracy.

DOMINION DIRECTORS FOR RE-EMPLOYMENT?

The chairman of the National Employment Commission, Mr. Arthur B. Purvis, who has made a survey of employment conditions in the Western provinces, is convinced that the Dominion should have some control of local employment boards. The employment service of the Dominion must be reorganized. By agreement with the provinces, he says, the Dominion should appoint vigorous directors to give steam to the job-finding activities of local volunteer committees of employers and labor. "The problem requires the same vigorous action as the drought question did", says Mr. Purvis. It is interesting to note that Mr. Purvis thinks the constitutional problem of provincial authority is "more apparent than real". The four Western provinces will have no objections to placing the job finding committees under the direction of Dominion directors and he is sure the same will be true of the central and eastern provinces.

HOME IMPROVEMENT PLAN IN MINING TOWNS

Home improvement loans have been a boon to mining towns, it is shown in latest reports from the department. There is of course no discrimination in the localities to which loans will be extended. They apply equally everywhere in the Dominion. In towns and cities of 5000 inhabitants upward, loans under the plan amounted on August 31 to over 6 1/2 million dollars, and this amount was advanced to 16,269 households. It is interesting to note that among the towns and cities of a population of 10,000 to 20,000 the centres making most extensive use of the plan were Timmins (229 houses, $167,883) and Sudbury (179 houses $107,292). In towns of 5,000 to 10,000 population the leaders were Kirkland Lake (215 houses, $161,964), Flin Flon (123 houses, $60,634) and Trail (158 houses, $54,763). Is it that mining towns were built rapidly and require more repairs to their houses, or are mining towns more progressive?

Home-Town Advertising Reliable

There is a great difference between advertising that is believed and advertising that is doubted.

Campaigns to "clean up advertising", to demand "truth in advertising", etc., never affect the home-town paper.

The reason is obvious. Your home town merchant knows he has just so many prospective customers. He knows his statements can easily be checked. But better than all, he has lived in an environment which makes even the thought of fraud obnoxious to him.

Do Motorists Read?

Most newspaper readers here are familiar with the blood-curdling publicity campaign conducted by Ontario's Department of Highways. With nauseating regularity, advertisements illustrated by scenes of shocking automobile tragedies have appeared in the papers with an appeal for saner driving and highway courtesy. Whether the photographs are real or "staged" has not been questioned. It is, in fact, immaterial. It might be reasonably supposed these gruesome tactics would have the desired effect. But not so. One Ontario exchange is moved to ask the above question, "Do motorists read?"

The question seems a legitimate one in the light of a report on motor accidents for the first six months of 1937 just issued by the Ontario highways department. For the disturbing fact is disclosed that despite unprecedented publicity and more newspaper articles against reckless driving than ever appeared before, the number of traffic fatalities in the period mentioned was greater by 68.6 percent than in the corresponding months in 1936.

Ghost from the Past

All is not well with Mussolini Junior, who is at present touring Hollywood to study American methods of movie production. With a greater faith in his love of the peaceable arts, Americans might accord a less dubious welcome to Vittorio Mussolini, 21-year-old son of the Italian dictator. His future motives may be constructive and honorable—but it seems there is a past, which the world, usually quick to forgive, has not yet forgotten.

Mussolini's host in Hollywood is Hal Roach, producer affiliated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Piloting his guest through the social strata of stardom, Mr. Roach has avoided the anti-Fascist elements with some success; but he met a snag last week, when Hollywood trade papers carried the following paid advertisement:

"Vittorio Mussolini arrives in Hollywood... He asked for—and received—the privilege of being the first Fascist aviator to bomb helpless Ethiopians... Anyone has the right to be in America, but we submit that his presence here is not an occasion for celebration or social fetes. Those who welcome him are opening their arms to a friend of Hitler and an enemy of Democracy."

A mild bombshell has rippled the surface of Hollywood's smug social life.—This incident is told by Montreal's Manhattan columnist, Shapiro himself, who is "doing" the movie city and reporting his adventures for the Gazette.

Thanksgiving Day, 1937

In this season of thanksgiving we have, indeed, much to be grateful for. The harvest is gathered and barns and silos are filled; and now as we stand on the threshold of a long winter we face the darkened period with confidence and hope... Let us therefore thank the bountiful Giver of All—He who has given so much to be thankful for.

As we take stock of our blessings at this time, we mark with deep gratitude the inventory which is ours. Nationalistic hatreds, commercial envies, class distinctions and religious suppressions may loom as dark clouds over our fellow-men in other lands; but we enjoy a freedom which has a greater significance because of our knowledge of those desolations.

Half starved millions sink in misery and wretchedness, ground down by taxation in a mad campaign of covetousness. Huge amounts of money, equal to Canada's whole national debt, are thrust into the maw of Mars, the insatiable God of War, while almost 4,000 miles of unfortified boundary separates us from a power with whom we live in amity and security.

Raw materials fill our granaries, storehouses, mines and warehouses. Yet we see a mad scramble in other countries, robbing their industries of materials and their creative forces of efficiency and output.—Truly Canada has much to be thankful for.

The spectre of hunger, or the pall of dictatorships strut their brief but horrible span across the stage of time—while our Democratic Dominion pursues with calm the execution of its God-given role, peace and economic welfare.

We are spared the tramp of marching feet and heart-rending scenes; our slumbers are undisturbed; our avocations pursued without fear for our security. And while our sympathies go out to grief-stricken fellow-men, let our assistance in the name of the Great Giver be generous and free. Let us abhor this man-made misery and viciousness; we owe it to ourselves and to our children.—"We cry a plague on both your houses."

Again, we have much to be thankful for. In the somber picture of international affairs our position is limned in brightness. The harvest planted by our forefathers is richer and more bounteous than even their most roseate dreams envisioned. Their foresight and planning have developed a stronger, wiser and a greater nation than they had ever hoped for. We are thankful to them, for the heritage they bequeathed to future generations. They took a land that scarce sufficed to maintain one hundredth part of our present population, and laid the foundation of this nation which is ours—and the much greater nation which it is destined to be.

Thanksgiving Day is a festival appropriate and seasonable, and this year marks a thankfulness greater than ever before, for our freedom and seclusion from the strife and insanity of a stricken world.

"The Welcome Book"

It is encouraging to learn that wherever the Word of God goes, and in whatever language it is printed, it is gladly welcomed by the people who receive it.

A missionary tells of the reception given the New Testament recently published in one of the dialects of Southwest China. He says, "I wish you could have seen the groups of men, women and children sitting out in the sun in our garden, or in the chapel, reading for the first time the Black Miao New Testament. They never seemed to cease to praise and thank God for sending them His Word in their own language."

The book that is thus welcomed among these people is also welcomed in many other lands where the Bible Society is at work. It is the aim of the British and Foreign Bible Society to give the Word of God to every man, woman and child in their own mother language. Last year the Society issued over 11,000,000 Bibles, Testaments and Scripture portions. The Bible is published in 711 languages. In addition to this the Society has about 1,000 colporteurs at work carrying the Scriptures among the people of the different countries.

Those who attend the Annual Meeting of the Lachute Branch on Sunday evening, Oct. 17, will hear of the work carried on among the Indians of Canada. The speaker, Rev. Jas. Adams of Montreal, will show a number of colored slides relating to the subject of his address.

Married at Louisa

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. J. Seale, Louisa, when Ethel Jane, daughter of the late Russell Joseph Seale and Mrs. Seale, became the bride of Gilbert Joseph Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Boyd of Louisa.

The ceremony was performed on the spacious veranda of the house, autumn leaves and flowers forming an arch at one end of the veranda. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, George, and was attended by her sister, Maria. Rev. C. W. P. Baugh of Lakefield officiated.

The bride was gown in blue satin, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The bridesmaid wore a rose satin dress with a corsage of pink carnations. Her accessories were in blue.

A reception was held after the ceremony. The happy couple are spending their honeymoon on a motor tour in Vermont.

Canal. We lived in the Western part of the Chaudiere which was the centre of the fast growing lumber trade. I have a letter written by my mother to a friend, when I was a little fellow, telling her that she had driven to Town to do some shopping. That meant going two miles on poor roads to the stores on Sussex Street. In between, there were at that time practically no buildings except the Barracks on what we now know as Parliament Hill. We had no paved streets and in fact they were not in as good shape in Ottawa as most of the country roads are today. Sidewalks were not found everywhere and those that we had were made of wooden planks. Rain water for household use was gathered in a tank in the attic and the water for drinking was brought around in puncheons sold by itinerant vendors from door to door. I well remember the time when we first had running water in the house and how delighted we all were. In those days everyone lived close to the ground. Hours were long for both the employers and the workers. Wages were low but living was cheap and, although there were not many amusements such as we have now, there was a general feeling of contentment.

At the time of Confederation I was going to school near the Canal and I walked a mile and a half there and back every day except when I could get a ride on some farmer's sleigh or wagon. In those days the only railway out of Ottawa was the one to Prescott and we had to take it no matter where we were going. In the season of navigation there were very good steamers down the Ottawa River. One was on the upper stretch between Ottawa and Grenville and the other ran from Carleton Place through the Lachine Rapids to Montreal. In between the two steamers a little gauge railway carried the passengers and freight over the portage. It took all day to go to Montreal that way but it was a very enjoyable trip. Even in 1878, when I went to the lumber camps for the first time after graduating at the University, we could only go as far as Pembroke on the present Canadian Pacific Railway and from there up by steamers, tramways, and portages. We had to change three times through these various forms of progression before we covered the one hundred miles to Mattawa.

In the fifties there was a prolonged and rather bitter controversy regarding the location of a Capital for Canada. Finally Her Majesty Queen Victoria was asked to decide between the contending cities. The Queen selected Ottawa, and time has shown the wisdom of that choice. The corner stone of the beautiful and dignified Parliament Buildings was laid in 1860 by the then Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII, and the Confederation of our Dominion of Canada came in 1867, when I was ten years old. At that time Sir John Macdonald—or John A. as he was generally referred to—was the most prominent Canadian. He lived here in this City where he was known and respected by everyone and he was not only our Prime Minister but he was truly an Ottawa citizen and our friend and neighbor. Many a time I have heard him, with his friendly smile and apt story, propose the health of the bride at Ottawa weddings.

During the early years after the formation of the Dominion the names of the Fathers of Confederation were of course household words. As many of them lived here in Ottawa I naturally as a small boy got to know their faces and looked up to them as our most important men. They did a great work and were outstanding in their day, but my impression is that the speakers and legislators of the present generation are their equals in ability.

In the election of 1874 Sir John was beaten by the Liberals under Alexander Mackenzie. Such a contrast as there was between those two Scotchmen! Both were honest and honourable but Mackenzie was somewhat dour and did not make friends easily while Macdonald was full of charm and the joy of living.

Macdonald soon returned to power and remained in control for the rest of his life. His wife, Lady Macdonald, was a woman of great ability and their home at Bainscliffe was the centre of social and benevolent as well as political activities. I remember being present at a dinner there in the winter of 1891—not long before Sir John's death. There were twelve of us young men then and we certainly enjoyed the honour and pleasure of dining with the chieftain. Strangely enough the general election came within four months!

During those years Wilfrid Laurier, as he then was, had become Leader of the Liberal Party and was making his mark in Parliament. He had much personal magnetism and made friends everywhere. My father was one of the Members for Ottawa when he died in 1890. More than once Laurier was his guest at dinner at our house where he was always welcome. For years the Province of Quebec had been Conservative and John A. was called by some Chief of the French-Canadians, but Laurier changed all that. With his happy manner and his picturesque figure he became the idol of his compatriots and who can wonder at it.

Then there came on the stage our great friend Sir Robert Borden, who passed away only a short time ago. He was a most able lawyer and advocate with a commanding presence. He was an effective debater in the House and fortunately was our Prime Minister throughout the Great War, as a man of his poise and quiet determination was sorely needed during those awful years. He was a great Canadian who was held in affectionate esteem, even by his political opponents, and whose death has left a gap hard to fill.

Until I was over forty years of age I took no particular interest in public affairs. The business which I was carrying on absorbed all my time and energy. However in 1904 I entered Parliament as Member for Argenteuil and, except during the years that I was representing Canada in England, I have sat for that constituency ever since. The House of Commons is the body which reflects the opinions, the spirit and the purpose of our Canadian democracy. Many a time I have heard it unfairly criticized as merely so many politicians. I have seen many Parliaments come and go and I disagree entirely with that view. I have had a good chance to understand and appreciate the quality of your representatives and I assure you that with few exceptions they have always been men of knowledge and integrity. They have served you faithfully and in a great many cases made considerable personal sacrifices in so doing. You can change them if they do not reflect your views but you should all have confidence in their honesty of purpose. You should strongly support and have faith in Parliament as the great bulwark of our Democracy.

I have not time to make reference to the great figures still living. The happenings of the past twenty-two years, the war, the depression, the revival, and the part played by our public men are so well known to my hearers that I need not refer to them.

During my eighty years this City of Ottawa has certainly made wonderful progress. Not only has its population grown about ten times as I said before, but its many natural advantages have been enhanced by wise planning, fine buildings and spacious parks. Today Ottawa represents the best spirit and genius of the Canadian people and has been made one of the most beautiful Capitals in the world. Well may we all be proud of Ottawa. It belongs to you and to the whole of Canada. I hope all within sound of my voice will be able to come and see your Capital. At the same time our Dominion has advanced with giant strides. From a group of scattered colonies containing less than two million people altogether we have become a strong self-governing nation within the British Commonwealth, and one of the chief manufacturing and trading countries of the world.

At the time of the American Civil War the Elgin Treaty was in force between Canada and the United States which gave us a satisfactory market for our lumber and agricultural products, but that Treaty was abrogated by the United States in 1866. This action on the part of our American neighbours worried us very much at the time, as it appeared likely to hurt us badly. Then was born what one of my friends has called the Boyce of Annexation. For some years this had considerable strength. It appeared in various guises such as Commercial Union and Unrestricted Reciprocity but the majority of our people would have none of it. As a matter of fact the abrogation of the Elgin Treaty turned out to be a blessing in disguise. It forced us to be more self-reliant and to find markets elsewhere. We had to develop our East and West traffic and build up our manufacturing industries under a National Policy so that we might consume our own raw materials and be more self-sustaining.

Now today, although suffering from the troubles and unrest which are prevalent throughout the world, there is no country where life is happier or property safer than in our own Canada, and I hope, my friends, that you are all comfortable in your homes this evening. All the same I hear some one say—What about the recent depression? Does that look as though we were prosperous in Canada? My answer is that conditions in other countries have been worse than here and that in the seventies we had just as hard times as those of the last few years. There was probably more willingness to tighten our belts in those days but there were soup kitchens and bread lines in many cities. Public spirited citizens assisted by subscriptions and in many other ways but there were large numbers of unemployed and considerable suffering. However, that depression passed and since then we have certainly learnt better how to deal with such troubles. In these recent days no one has been allowed to go without food or shelter.

In a business way and in every material standard of civilization we have steadily progressed but our position needs most careful thought and action from a constitutional point of view. Prior to Confederation our forefathers had many problems and acute differences of opinion to deal with. They were few in number scattered over an immense area with several distinct, disconnected Governments. Fortunately they were wise enough to meet together and find a compromise solution which was embodied in the British North America Act and led to the formation of the Dominion of Canada. That Act was a remarkable document and under it Canada has in these seventy years grown and prospered wonderfully. However the world has changed and now we find that this Act requires some amendments to meet present social conditions. Acute differences have arisen between the Dominion and the Provinces as to their respective powers. This uncertainty is dangerous to Canada's continued progress and should be cleared up. How can this be done? In my opinion the only way is for the people of good will of all shades of political thought to get together to discuss these questions in a friendly spirit as being all true Canadians. I do not think that this can be done by any one political party, but a friendly conference representing all interests would surely find a solution. My friends, you all love Canada as I do and I appeal to you all, more particularly the younger generation, to do everything you can to bring this about. That is what was done before Confederation and I refuse to think that we in our day are less patriotic than they were.

BOY SCOUTS THE WORLD OVER

AN UNPLANNED RESCUE DEMONSTRATION

An unplanned but successful "demonstration" at a district Boy Scout field day at McLean's ranch, on Swift Current creek, Saskatchewan, was the rescue from drowning of a small boy who got out of his depth in the stream. The rescuer was Scout James Falconer of the Gull Lake Troop.

A MOUNTAIN HIKE FOR CALGARY SCOUTS

A 100-mile hike over Rocky Mountain foothill trails, fishing and camping amid snow in July, was the summer's outing of older Scouts of the 2nd Calgary Scout Troop. Kits and supplies were carried by pack ponies.

SCOUTS TOOK PRIZES IN HORTICULTURE

AUNT JEAN HERSELF

BESS HAS STRANGE FANCIES

I would like to be a swallow
And fly to far-off lands,
To bathe in sunny waters
And sit on sunny sands.

I'd like to peek down chimneys
And see what is inside,
I'd like to skim o'er rivers,
On locust branches ride.

I'd love to live in Roseland
Where other birdies sing;
I'd love to stay all winter,
And not come back till Spring.

For a long time there was silence and Mollie's mother thought her asleep. But when a mouse in between the walls scuttled along, rattling loose plaster, and another little mouse ran squeaking after it, right by the head of Mollie's bed, the small hand lying so still suddenly closed around her mother's fingers and Mollie's little head dug its way deeper into the pillow. Then Mother knew that she had not been very soundly asleep, but was evidently trying to do as her mother wished and get rested for the morning, so that she might see Buntie's lambs.

Buntie had come back to the gate and this time she had brought her lambs with her, but a sudden rush of Toby over to the fence, growling fiercely, had driven them off before Buntie had had time to announce her presence. Mollie's mother, sitting where she could look out the window, had seen her come, and go just as quickly, in fear of Toby who lay down in front of the little gate as though to say, "I'll stay right here until this foolish sheep gets sense enough to stay away."

None of the other sheep came close to the house. They had not been fed there as lambs, and did not know of the hole in the wire fence as Buntie did.

An owl hooted hoarsely from the big pine tree; the unusual sight of the sheep wandering about the summer pasture disturbed and annoyed him. Those things, he thought, would frighten the little rabbits that came nightly to nibble at the carrots in the garden, and he would not be able to catch one as he had hoped. His hoarse hooting disturbed some sleepy birds, who chirped peevishly until Mollie opened her eyes again and said, "It's no use, Mummie there's too much noise!" I think everything must be sick tonight and can't go to sleep, like me. It's just one kind of noise after the other."

A voice from the doorway of the room remarked "Yes, Mollie girl, it's just one noise after the other, and now here's the biggest noise of all!"

"Big Daddie! oh Big Daddie!" cried Mollie, hopping out of bed again and dashing across the room to be caught up in her father's arms. "Yes, I got your message, dear," he said in answer to her mother's question, "and I have driven almost all night to get here. I'm glad to see that our little birdie here is able to run; she must be better."

"I am better, Daddie; and I'm going to see Buntie's lambs in the morning. Only I got to go to sleep first—but the noises won't let me."

"Well, well!" chuckled her father, "we will have to see about the noises. We'll let Mummie go to her own bed and rest, and you and I will just curl up here in your little bed and sing ourselves to sleep."

"Won't it wake Grandpa and the others?" asked Mollie.

"No, sweetheart, we'll sing too softly for that. Cuddle up close to Daddie now, for he is very tired driving so far and so fast, and wants to get some sleep himself."

With a contented little sigh Mollie crept close to her father, put one little arm around his neck, and in a very short time was asleep. Her Big Daddie, as she called him quite often, was with her and would keep her safe. She had tried at first to sing softly with him the old familiar croon with which he had often coaxed her to sleep as a tiny child, and which his Gaelic granny had sung to him, "Wee, wee-sha a wee-sha, wee-sha wee-sha wee", but her voice soon trailed off into silence, not to be heard again until the noises of the night had given place to the noises of the day and Buntie and Toby were renewing old friendships through the little wicket gate.

FOLLOWING FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS

Men are divided into two classes—those who want their sons to follow in their footsteps in their profession, or business, and the rest who want their sons to do anything but what they do for a living. There must be something particularly satisfying in the life of an editor of a town weekly newspaper, because, off-hand I can think of sixteen editors whose sons either have succeeded them or are associated with them in business. If I know of that many there must be many others. I am not counting daughters who are working with their fathers, but just the sons. Sometimes fathers would like their sons to follow in their footsteps but their sons have different ideas. Where both have the same wish it must mean that the father has found the right work as otherwise he could not imbue his son with the feeling of personal satisfaction. A joy and satisfaction in one's work is one of the greatest blessings in the world.

TRY BEING A FRIEND INSTEAD OF A PARENT

The fact that we are parents weighs too heavily on most of us and it might be a good idea to make a point occasionally of forgetting we are parents and make friends with our children. This was brought home to me by a little experience I had. My son and I were starting off on a jaunt together and as we got in the street-car I noticed that he had not combed his hair and I started to tell him about it. I checked myself because I realized it was too late then to do anything about it. The thought struck me that if I were with any other friend I would not say anything if their hair was not in the best of order. Why then should I tell my companion just because he happened to be my child? Why not be polite to him too? I decided that I would use him on this trip just as I would any other friend and not say a parental thing. Two things surprised me. One was what an interesting, intelligent companion he was when treated as a friend. The second was the amazing number of times I had to check myself from giving parental admonishments and how trivial and really unnecessary they were. The experience did me good and I have resolved to more frequently quit acting the mother.

SPRING BULBS

Time to think of bulbs for spring flowers. The prettiest planting of spring flowers that I have seen was a mixture of daffodils and hyacinths. Yellow daffodils planted in front of a white house, and in front of them a row of hyacinths, different shades of pink and rose with just an occasional blue hyacinth to make an accent. This planting was perfect as the white house made an effective background to show off the blooms with their softly blending colors.

THE CLIMAX OF A MEAL

There are some unfortunate people who do not like desserts and there are other unfortunate women who do not like making them. The friend who possibly makes the nicest desserts of anyone I know, never touches them, but she takes an artistic delight in turning out an attractive-looking, delectable dessert. I hate anyone to know what the dessert is going to be. I want that to be a surprise, to be the climax of the meal. When you read a book and as you approach the climax, you know exactly what is coming, you do not find it nearly as interesting nor as exciting as when you are wondering what is going to happen next and are a bit excited over it. That is the way it should be with meals. Make them interesting and a bit exciting and never let your family be able to guess exactly what is going to happen next. Getting a good meal should be an artistic achievement.

PUMPKIN PIE

Once upon a time I used to struggle with pumpkin, getting it cut up and cooked, but I do not bother with it any more but use canned pumpkin. It costs less, tastes just as good and is much less trouble. The pumpkin mixture in the following recipe will keep for several days if bottled and kept cold. A soggy pie is an abomination, so I bake one as needed.

1 can pumpkin, 2 cups brown sugar, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 2 cups milk.

Mix ingredients in order given. Pour into unbaked pie shell and bake at 450 degrees. For pumpkin pie de luxe, top with whipped cream and sprinkle with chopped candied ginger. Swell!

SQUASH PIE

When you are cooking squash for vegetables, take out a cup of mashed squash before the seasonings are added. Keep in a cool place and it will be ready to make pie with, the next day.

1 cup mashed squash, 1 cup milk, ½ cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon salt.

Mix ingredients and pour into unbaked pie shell. Bake in an oven of 450 degrees.

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

Nancy Hart's HOME NEWS

If you are giving a party where men predominate, serve pumpkin pie. Nearly all menfolk have a special weakness for this autumn dessert and there are few women who do not possess a strong hankering for it, too.

Of course you can top the pie with whipped cream if you like it that way, but after all, why gild the rose? If you feel that you must do something more or less out of the ordinary, try a combination of cream cheese and cream. Add heavy cream to Neufchatel cheese, beating it in until the mixture is light as whipped cream. Season with salt and spread roughly over pie.

As to the pie itself, there are ever so many ideas and tastes about it. Some like it heavily spiced, some like it firm like a custard and others like it fluffy like a soufflé, but everyone likes it thick and cut in large neat wedges.

In order to attain these various preferences you must do just the right thing. If you want a fluffy pie, you will beat the whites and yolks of eggs separately and fold the whites into the pumpkin mixture just before baking. A heavily spiced pie obviously has more spices in its make-up, while a firm, custard-like texture comes from not beating the eggs at all, merely stirring them thoroughly into cooked pumpkin before adding milk.

Lots of spice helps to make a pumpkin pie dark in color but its the nature of pumpkin itself and long stewing that accomplish the rich golden-brown traditional with pumpkin pie. Our grandmothers stewed their pumpkin in heavy iron kettles on the back of a big wood or coal range for hours, but the modern housewife is not equipped to do this. However, after the pumpkin is tender cook it uncovered and stew it down just as dry as possible. If you use canned pumpkin, stew in down, too, before you rub it through a colander.

Men Make Keener Motorists

The Digest for September 18 said: "Nation-wide tests conducted by the American Automobile Association show that men park better than women, have better vision, are less easily blinded by the glare of headlights, hear better, concentrate better; in short, are better equipped to handle the wheel."

"The trouble with women drivers, Professor H. R. DeSilva, head of Harvard University's traffic bureau, explained last week, is that they are muscle-bound. They get set mentally and physically. Their muscles refuse to respond at the speed necessary to modern driving conditions. Hence, he said, it is almost impossible to teach a woman over twenty-five to drive properly, and, naturally, they have more accidents than men.

"Except in the case of husbands contemplating divorce, it is not recommended that these facts be read aloud to wives, at least not with emphasis and gestures."

Old Age Litany

When stealthy age creeps on me unaware
And, undetected, robs me of my powers,
When I must learn to face infirmity,
Then from rebellion, Lord, Deliver me.
When all that is familiar fades away
And I must tread a new, uncertain path, Finding no landmarks save in memory
Oh then from sick self-pity, Lord, Deliver me.
And when the tide of life begins to ebb
And neither grief nor joy can stir
When time begins to merge into eternity,
Then from the craven fear of death, Deliver me.

—Una W. Harsen.

The Cloak Was Titled

That dress maketh the man was noted long ago. Titian, the famed Italian painter of the sixteenth century walked home in his working clothes unnoted, but returning immediately to the street again, in his court costume of purple velvet, every person he met bowed and did him homage. Disgusted, Titian, back in his studio, threw the cloak on the floor, exclaiming, "Thou, then, art Titian; so much for drapery!"

MOTHERS ARE RESPONSIBLE

The family looks to you to aid your doctor in keeping them well. You can help prevent much illness and poor health by guarding them from common constipation.

Most constipation comes from faulty diet—meals low in "bulk." This condition can be corrected so easily and pleasantly.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides the safe way to prevent constipation by putting "bulk" back in the diet. Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water, forming a soft mass which gently sponges out the system.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron. It is so much better for your family than constant dosing with artificial pills and drugs.

Two tablespoonfuls daily as a cereal, with milk or cream, or in recipes, are enough for the average person. Three times daily in severe cases.

VINCENT'S ANGINA

Vincent's angina, or trench mouth, is an infectious disease. It begins with a dryness and burning of the gums or with a sore throat. If the infection is in the gums they become swollen, tender, an angry red and frequently show raw bleeding surfaces round the teeth. In the acute stage there is fever with headache and listlessness.

The infection may be conveyed directly by kissing, by droplets coughed or spoken into the air or by the use of cups and eating utensils that have been already used by an infected person and have not been properly sterilized.

The infection is especially liable to take hold in a mouth that has been neglected. Jagged teeth, overhanging fillings, pyorrhea pockets create ideal conditions for germs. It is very probable too that the gums are made more susceptible to this infection by a diet deficient in Vitamin C.

It would be more easy to prevent the spread of infection if we knew more about the relative importance of the causes of infection. Some people believe that the disease is mainly spread by the cups and glasses used in soda water fountains, lunch counters and restaurants. Others, knowing how very numerous are the places where glasses are improperly washed and never sterilized at all, argue that if this method of spreading the disease were important everyone would have it by now.

Research is badly needed. In the meantime the glass rinsed in warm dirty water should be regarded as dangerous. The public could do a great deal to improve conditions if every customer would ask, before ordering a drink: "How has this glass been sterilized?" Until we feel able to afford trained sanitarians to do our inspecting for us, we must do our own—or take the consequences.

All benefit from CHAIN STORES

The housewife knows from experience what the chain stores mean to her. They give her unfailing sources of supply for dependable merchandise to meet practically every personal and household need. They sell her these tested goods in pleasant surroundings at economy prices. They save money for her every day of the year. They simplify shopping for both men and women.

The workingman, farmer and property owner profit in other ways from chain store operation. The landlord enjoys assured rentals and increased property values. The farmer has a dependable market for his produce. The workingman has steady work right here at home in plants from which the chain stores purchase huge volumes of goods for resale to the consumer in other provinces as well as in Quebec.

The chain stores mean work, a better standard of living and money saved—to thousands.

GROWING ENTHUSIASM NOTED AS EVENT RECURS

SUBSTANTIAL PRIZE LIST SUPPLEMENTED BY AWARDS FROM FIRMS AND INDIVIDUALS

The Western Quebec Plowing Match, which has become an annual contest arousing enthusiasm and drawing high merit among farmers of a wide district, is in progress today at Alex. Doig's farm, a mile east of Lachute. A good crowd is in evidence on the fields, and some fine turn-outs may be witnessed among the entries. There are nine classes in competition including team and tractor plows. The land is soft from recent rains, despite a touch of frost last night. Typical fall weather has favored the occasion, with a crisp, sunny atmosphere.

In addition to the prize money aggregating over $500, awards have been received by Secretary Alex. Bothwell from the following donors: The T. Eaton Co., Robert Simpson Co., Sir George Perlev, Canada Malt-Co., Mr. Albini Lamarche, Massey Harris Co., De Laval Co., and Mr. S. S. Campbell.

Geo. Hay is president, and Amedée Maisonneuve, vice-president, of the Argenteuil Plowmen's Association under whose auspices this event is held.

Lions Club Heard Address on Quebec's Gold-Fields by Member of Inspection Party

FIRE CHIEF STRESSED SIGNIFICANCE OF "FIRE PREVENTION WEEK"

An interesting session of the Lachute Lions Club was held in Desjardins Hotel on Thursday last. During the summer months noon-day luncheons have been the order of the day, but with the approach of winter the evening sessions have been resumed, and Mr. W. Churchill Smith, assistant manager of the Royal Insurance Company, Montreal, was the guest speaker on this occasion. He gave a detailed description of his trip to the gold regions of Northern Quebec as a member of the Board of Trade party, who made an inspection of many of the prominent mines, among which were the O'Brien, Sullivan, Cadillac, Mallartic and others. His talk proved the fact that he was "sold" on the mineral wealth of this province, and was enthusiastic of future possibilities for our youth and young manhood as the development of mines opened up a fertile field for many phases of labor.

Being Fire Prevention Week, Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon of Lachute also gave a timely address, in which he spoke of earlier conditions in town. Shortly after the town was incorporated in 1885, he said, the Council effected a loan of $6,700 by floating fifty year bonds at 6 percent. These were all taken up by the Standard Life Insurance Company, and it

Bobby O'Reilly Entertainer At St. Simeon's Concert

The entertainment furnished by the talented young Canadian artist, Bobby O'Reilly, was received with appreciation last Friday evening when he made his first appearance here at the Lachute Auditorium, under auspices of the St. Simeon's Guild. This young performer has been heard often over the radio, appearing as "Our Jimmy" of the Clark's Radio Hour, and though still of youthful years, not yet 18, his full two hour program, assisted only by Miss Peggy Beveridge who played the accompaniment for his varied numbers, afforded an evening of fine amusement. Bobby gave several selections on the bagpipes, and kept the audience in laughter with his humorous stories, jokes and tricks of magic. But it was his dexterity as a tap dancer which drew the greatest applause. Though not possessing a concert voice his songs were rendered in a happy manner, and it is safe to say that Bobby made a "real hit", and proved himself a popular entertainer.

Arriving Home Shortly From Trip to Europe

Notwithstanding the attractions of travel in foreign countries, the home-town holds an appeal all its own. A postcard just received from our respected townsman, Mr. C. Tremblay, who was in Rome on Sept. 29th, says: "Here under 'le beau ciel d'Italie', with ideal weather like June in Lachute. In Milan, Venice and Rome one goes into raptures, from wonder to wonder, over ancient art and historical treasure; but one does not forget his home-town and the true friends, back to genuine happiness." Mr. and Mrs. Tremblay are expected home the end of this week.

took the present 1937 council to pay off this debt. With its 600 gallon and 200 gallon triple construction hose trucks, ladders and hose equipment, Lachute possesses a system that has been duly recognized by the fire underwriters. There are now 65 hydrants throughout the town, as against 38 in 1924. With these improvements the fire underwriters reduced local insurance rates, in some cases as much as 33 1/2 percent. Now that the new water mains afford considerably greater pressure there is every possibility of Lachute citizens enjoying further reductions within the next few months.

Committees were named for the activities of the Club during the coming season, and thanks were extended to both speakers.

Victim of Baie Comeau Airplane Crash Making Good Recovery... Father Narrates Details of Mishap

VICTIM WELL KNOWN TO GRENVILLE RESIDENTS

Grenville — Mr. Edwin Pridham, who was badly hurt in an airplane smash Sept. 18th at Baie Comeau, Que., on the Gulf of St. Lawrence, is at last out of danger and on his way to complete recovery.

The day after the accident, he was flown to Rimouski, to the hospital there. His mother, father, and Grant and Jessie Pridham, motored down and were at Grenville, when they received word of the accident. They arrived in Rimouski Sunday before noon. Edwin did not recognize them until Tuesday evening. He was

Reclaims Stolen Car Found Between Lachute, St. Jerome

Jean Asselin, a resident of La Tuque, visited St. Jerome last Thursday to claim his automobile which was recovered on the St. Jerome - Lachute highway on Tuesday. The automobile had been stolen in Montreal and used by three men who attempted to rob a gasoline station in St. Jerome. The men were seen by Constable Richard, who fired five shots at them and struck one of the rear tires with a bullet, but the fugitives escaped. Later the car was reported abandoned on the highway between here and St. Jerome.

Asselin stated that the car had been badly used by the thieves.

Son of Famous Explorer in CBC Broadcast Talk

Ottawa, Oct. 12. — Edward Shackleton, F.R.G.S., son of the famous explorer, Sir Ernest Shackleton, who two years ago made a trip of exploration into Ellesmere Land and who is now visiting Canada, will give a broadcast talk describing his experiences in the Canadian Arctic. The broadcast will be presented over the national network of the CBC at 8 p.m. on Saturday, October 16, from Ottawa, under the title "The Unexplored North."

Edward Shackleton's expedition of 1934-35 was under the auspices of the Oxford Exploration Club and the Royal Geographical Society. The average age of the members of his party was 23.

Canada's Mystic Territories Beneath the Arctic Rim; Trans-Canada Highway... Entire Route Should Be Ready Within Two Years... Attraction to Motorists

"The Ottawa Spotlight" By "Spectator"

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Important domestic as well as foreign events have held the stage during the past few days. The Ontario election with its fanfare of campaign speeches has passed into history, and quite apart from its result has left as its aftermath the comfortable feeling that Canadians can still decide their differences by ballots, not bullets. Alberta is still the question mark which is worrying the government at Ottawa. There is no doubt the government will stand firmly behind what it holds to be its constitutional right to disallow provincial legislation which it considers inimical to public interest. What then will be the next move? Will the government of Alberta attempt to ignore the Ottawa government and carry laws into effect despite the federal government's disallowance? The future moves in this political chess game will be very interesting. The attempt to control the press of the province is causing much head-shaking. The act is felt to be undermining one of the pillars of British liberty. And yet despite the strong feeling that has been aroused by this legislation legal authorities are not as certain that this press legislation is ultra vires, as is the case with the banking laws. BROKEN FRAGMENTS BY M. V. TRAYERS

I think it was Colton who said, "How small a portion of our life it is that we really enjoy! In youth we are looking forward to things that are to come; in old age we are looking backward to things that are gone past; in manhood, although we appear indeed to be more occupied in things that are present, yet even that is too often absorbed in vague determinations to be vastly happy on some future day when we have time."

The importance of this world and its people in the mighty architecture of the universe is so small, so insignificant, that it requires an effort of thought to realize it. We hear and read so much about our own importance that we have a very inflated notion of it. Of course a widespread use, or shall we say misuse of superlatives, is in a large measure accountable for this exaggeration. We hear of the mighty armies of Germany, Italy or France; the tremendous amounts of money flowing into the insatiable maw of Mars, one hundred and twenty dollars with every tick of the clock; the Japanese legions and Chinese hordes—but if we reduce these loose phrases to something tangible, something easily understood, we will go a long way toward deflating this bubble of hyperbole with which we have surrounded ourselves. A thought from Van Loon reminds me of a very apt illustration.

If we were to procure a sufficient number of carpenters and supply them with enough lumber to lay out a floor just half-a-mile long and half-a-mile wide... Then we get them to build a frame around our half-a-mile square floor and make this also half-a-mile high, making a box half-a-mile each way—that is half-a-mile cube... Next we place our box on a delicate balance on the edge of a cliff such as the brink of the Grand Canyon or on a Japanese island projecting half way out over the sea (—We would select a Japanese island because the sea is deepest in that part of the world)... Having placed our box on a swinging balance, we get Gabriel to blow his trumpet calling all the peoples of the earth, even from the furthestmost ends as foretold in the prophesy—men, women and children... You and I, and all the people thinking the fulfillment thereof was at hand, would arrive at the appointed valley, which would be our half-a-mile cubic box, and after taking our appointed places all in the box, not one would be left outside. There would be plenty room for all... Balanced precariously on the edge of the cliff, swaying gently in the soothing wind—Crash! A Canadian beaver, intent on building himself a dam, has selected a small piece of material from under our resting place and we pitch headlong into the seething morass of the Grand Canyon or the placid surface of the ocean. (The place makes little matter, the result is the same). We sink down—down into eternity. Next day the sun rises just as it has ever done, but there is no "Watchman" to report that the self-important and highly rated peoples of the earth are no more. All have been destroyed, by the weakly push of a lowly Canadian beaver.

successfully removed, and he is now making a good recovery. Pridham's companion, Martin Dubé, of the Ontario Paper Co., Edmundston, N.B., suffered a broken leg and a pierced eardrum. The pilot of the plane, Bruce Watt, was badly cut out, managed to save the two passengers from being drowned. On account of a faulty heater, they had attempted to land on the Outarde River from a height of 2,000 feet. When the pilot attempted to straighten the plane before landing, the controls would not work and the machine dived into the river. The plane was a total wreck. The pilot was alone showing on the surface of the water; then Dubé appeared, and both men went down and brought Pridham from under the surface. Watt contrived to get them onto a wing of the plane, and both were unconscious. Settlers on the shore came to their aid and took them to a house. The Company president being there on an official visit, his plane was procured next morning to carry the victims across the Gulf to Rimouski Hospital, nearly 65 miles. The pilot was able to go back Sunday and attend to his plane. Dubé is also on the road to recovery. His broken leg is the fourth injury suffered in airplane accidents.

Two C.P.R. Cars Derailed in Midnight Collision WRECK ON RAILWAY TRACK AT LACHUTE

The fast freight which makes the Montreal - Ottawa run every night with marked regularity, was detained last Friday morning through an unusual happening. The train crew are accustomed, on arriving at Lachute, to uncouple the baggage car to turn it into the milk siding. This they did as usual, and pulled the "regular" over from the main line switch and started to back up. But with the incline of the track the train started to run down the siding and struck the baggage car and an empty box car, which were both badly damaged and thrown into the ditch. A wrecking train was soon on hand and the line was cleared for passage of the regular trains Friday morning.

Recall Tribute Paid to Dr. B. Wales, Retiring President of Historical Society

On the retirement of Dr. B. N. Wales as president of the Argenteuil Historical Society, it is interesting to record a tribute paid in his earlier days—his sterling services to the community having drawn expression from the townsfolk of Bury, Que., one of his former fields of practice as a physician of the true "family doctor" type. This was in 1906, just 31 years ago. Dr. Wales, as the initial president of our Historical Society, has been a prime mover in its inception and early growth. After an uphill climb it is gratifying to him, as he resigns the presidency, to witness the strides now apparent in this enterprise dear to his heart. This county is no less indebted to Dr. Wales than the community of Bury, which on his departure presented him with a gold-mounted cane, duly inscribed, and through its newspaper accorded him this further tribute:

Bury, Nov. 27, 1906.—A banquet was tendered Dr. B. N. Wales, Saturday evening, Nov. 24th. A large number of citizens assembled to say farewell to the genial doctor. Addresses were delivered by the Revs. J. B. Washer and George J. Crabb, and Major Danmore, after which Mayor Bennett, on behalf of the citizens of Bury, presented the doctor with a gold-headed cane and the following address:

To Dr. B. N. Wales: Dear fellow citizen, On the eve of your departure for St. Andrews, we, the citizens of Bury, desire to express our appreciation of you as a physician and a citizen. For twenty-eight years you have been one with us. As a physician you have been skilful, kind and courteous, always ready to respond to the call of the suffering, no matter how far away, or how stormy and disagreeable the weather. As a citizen you have always taken Stirring events of bygone days were recalled in a highly interesting address by Victor Morin, LL.D., of Montreal, Vice-President of the Royal Society of Canada, who was guest speaker at the Argenteuil Historical Society's annual meeting held in St. Andrews Town Hall last Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Morin spoke on the historical significance of Carillon, the site of the Society's proposed museum, and enthused his audience with a most graphic description of Dollard's sacrifice at Long-Sault, the Carillon Canal, and the Carillon and Beauport Railway, ending with very practical conclusions in which he referred to the generous gesture of Mr. Hungerbühler in turning over to the Historical Society the old Royal Staff Barracks, a building most appropriate for the purpose of a museum. He urged the construction of a replica of the wooden palisade in which Dollard des Ormeaux and his comrades sacrificed their lives for the salvation of their compatriots—so that the Fort des Ormeaux at one end of the village and the Historical Museum at the other could not fail to attract visitors to that notable portion of our country. And thus the people of Canada, and visitors from other countries, will open their eyes not only to the beautiful surroundings but to the memory of the great men who have built the nation, and the remarkable history of Canada.

"D.M.L." Again Adjudicator for County Dramatic Festival (CORRESPONDENCE)

—We are indeed fortunate in once more securing the consent of Mr. D. M. Legate, better known as "D. M. L.", of the Montreal Daily Star, to act as adjudicator. Those who took part in the Festival last year will remember the helpful criticism and advice which he gave the players at the get-together meeting after the contest.

This year there will be two trophies, the Lanctôt trophy for first place, and the Kuhring trophy for second. The first was won last year by the Lakefield Players, and the second by the Brownsburg Women's Institute. These cups are to become the permanent property of the groups winning them three times, but, prior to this event, will be placed in annual competition.

The two cups will be on view in the window of Frank E. Earle, Main Street, on Monday to Wednesday of next week.

Women's Institutes Honored... Invitation to Tea Given by Her Excellency, Lady Tweedsmuir

GUESTS HEARD INTERESTING LECTURE ON ART

Presidents of local branches of the Argenteuil Women's Institutes were honored with an invitation to attend a lecture and tea at Government House, together with the presidents of Eastern Ontario branches—who were each authorized to bring with them the member of their branch whom they considered most interested in art.

The result was that ladies from Argenteuil (Mrs. P. Martin, Mrs. P. McQuig, Mrs. J. Beattie, Mrs. A.

Graham, Mrs. G. Y. Deacon, Miss Lacey, Mrs. W. Shearnsmith, Mrs. G. W. Kuhring, Mrs. E. Morrow, Mrs. J. E. Seale, Mrs. E. J. Seale, Mrs. D. J. Rodgers, Miss M. Leckman, Mrs. G. S. Armstrong, Mrs. J. MacKenzie, Mrs. W. Jackson and Mrs. A. Goodfellow) motored to Ottawa on Friday afternoon and enjoyed Mrs. Silvercruys Farnam's lecture on art, witnessed her demonstration of modelling, and had tea with Her Excellency, Lady Tweedsmuir, who graciously welcomed her guests and introduced the speaker, Mrs. Silvercruys Farnam. St. Placide Farmer Saved Fine Through Technicality

Emile Lanthier, a farmer of St. Placide, appeared last week before the Montreal municipal tribunal on a charge of contravening article 10 of By-law No. 891 "concerning milk."

The regulation reads, in part: "Vehicles of any description used for the conveyance or delivery of milk shall be clean and shall be exclusively reserved for such purpose. It shall, however, be lawful to convey milk products and eggs at the same time as milk."

According to a report by two milk inspectors, the farmer, when leaving Montreal on September 10 after delivering a load of milk, was found to be transporting "different kinds of merchandise, with cases of empty milk bottles." The "merchandise" consisted of some bags of bran and some new farm implements. Lanthier was accused of "driving a vehicle used for the conveyance and delivery of milk, which was not clean and not exclusively reserved for such purpose." He pleaded guilty, and Recorder G. H. Semple imposed the minimum fine for a first offence of this nature, $10 and costs of $6.70.

Lanthier waited in line to pay the money. In the meantime, however, the recorder consulted the by-law and reached the opinion that the complaint was not drafted "according to law". No proof was made, he found, that the vehicle was not clean and, secondly, he ruled that upon its true interpretation article 10 of the by-law invoked "is applicable only where milk is being conveyed or delivered." In this case, he pointed out, there being no milk on the vehicle, no offence was committed.

The fine could not be revoked, so Recorder Semple did the next best thing. He stayed execution of the original judgment "forever." A message to that effect went out to the waiting farmer, who re-pocketed his money and beat a hasty retreat.

Marriage of Interest to District of Grenville

BENNING — COOKE

Of interest in Grenville, Que., where the bride was a former resident, is the wedding which took place in St. Matthias Church, Detroit, Mich., on Saturday afternoon, September 25th, at 5.30 o'clock, uniting Enid Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard H. Cooke, Detroit, and Mr. John David Benning, Windsor, son of Mr. John Benning, Chatham, Ont., and the late Mrs. Benning.

Rev. L. E. Midworth and Rev. Ernest Piper conducted the service. Mr. Hugh Ridout was at the organ and Mr. Charles Anderson sang "At Dawning". White asters on the altar lighted with tapers, and large baskets of white gladioli and asters at the chancel steps, were effective decorations.

The bride, given away by her father, wore an antique slipper satin gown cut on princess lines with long flared skirt. Her fingertip length veil was eggshell shade and was caught by a halo of orange blossoms. She wore sandals to match and carried white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Helen Jones, the maid of honor, was in Chartreuse green slipper satin, matching hat and bronze sandals, and carried bronze chrysanthemums.

Mr. Jack Butler of Windsor, was the groomsmen and Mr. Harold Smith and Mr. Richard Ridley, both of Windsor, were ushers. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents where white asters, pink and white gladioli and roses were used throughout the rooms. The bride's table was centred with flowers and lighted with tapers. The bride's mother received, in a Dubonnet silk velvet with matching accessories and corsage of gardenias.

After a short motor trip to Cleveland Mr. and Mrs. John David Benning will reside in the Royal Windsor apartments, Windsor. The bride's travelling costume was a beige wool suit with fox collar and brown accessories, with which was worn a corsage of gardenias. The bride is a graduate of the Henry Ford Hospital of Nursing and Hygiene at Detroit.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hay, London, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wallace, Tilbury; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Cooke, Jr., Hamilton, Ont.; Miss Alma Cairns, Hamilton, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Cooke, Windsor, Ont.; Mr. Walter Cooke, Windsor; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Butler and Mr. and Mrs. R. Todgaw, all of Windsor.

Died at Papineauville, Que.

LATE MRS. DAWSON COCHRANE

The funeral of the late Mrs. Dawson Cochrane of Papineauville, Que., who passed away suddenly on Monday, October 4th, in her 76th year, was held in St. Stephen's Church, Papineauville, on Wednesday afternoon, Rev. C. W. P. Baugh of Lakefield conducted the funeral service, assisted by Mr. H. G. Baugh of the Diocesan Theological College.

Born in Vankleek Hill, Ont., the deceased later moved to Papineauville, where she married John D. McLeod of Old Harrington, Que., who predeceased her some 14 years ago. Later the deceased married Dawson Cochrane of North Nation Mills, Que., who died a few years ago. An active worker in the community, the late Mrs. Cochrane was interested in all social activities, and was a faithful member of her church.

Interment took place in the Papineauville cemetery. Surviving are one sister, Minnie, and one brother.

Statement of Chain Store Purchases in Quebec Not Exaggerated, Says Secretary

"It is an under-statement, rather than an over-statement, when the Canadian Chain Store Association asserts in its advertising that chain stores in Quebec buy goods from Quebec producers and manufacturers to the amount of $30,000,000 per year", declares J. G. Johnston, secretary-treasurer, with reference to the reports of the retail merchants' convention in Quebec City recently.

"The amount of $30,000,000 which was questioned by one speaker was arrived at by members of this association from their records", continues the announcement. "Actually the total chain store purchases in Quebec must be considerably greater for the reason that there are quite a number of chains operating in the province which are not members of the Association and whose figures we did not obtain. Their purchases would probably total several million dollars more."

"The Association has endeavored to be extremely conservative in its declarations and it is regretted if anyone feels that the chains are claiming to be public benefactors to a greater extent than they really are. The greatest achievement of the food chains was to eliminate the excessive cost of wholesaling goods. Since that achievement, more than 15 years ago, wholesale merchants have improved their methods to such an extent that today the small merchant can buy goods almost as cheaply as the chains. That helps both consumer and merchant."

Recorder's Court to Be Established at St. Jerome

C. E. MARCHAND IS APPOINTED

Announcement was made last week that the Provincial Government had appointed Charles Edouard Marchand as recorder for St. Jerome. It was decided that the court would start to function shortly, in the city hall.

Alvarez Laplante, former city clerk, retired on pension, has been appointed clerk of the court. A recorder's court existed at St. Jerome between 1930 and 1933 with Joseph P. Belair, K.C., as recorder.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"This is just like being home!"

Bill Watson occasionally gets fed up on that out-of-town job. Work is oppressive. His pals are dull. Meals are tasteless. The outlook, generally, is bilious. Good, old-fashioned homesickness, that's what it really is — and Bill has a sovereign remedy, once he has diagnosed the case: a long distance call home. And it costs so little, too, that he has decided to forestall attacks by a regular schedule of weekly calls.

Bill's ideas are right in line with the rest of the family. The Watsons have come to appreciate fully the comforts, conveniences and low cost of Long Distance. Do You realize how little it costs to telephone?

DOMINION STORES

hasten Better Days for their Employees

As we have improved the standard of food shopping for the housewife, so we are endeavouring to improve the standard of working conditions for our employees.

Our Personnel Department is active in the interest and welfare of all employees, and its operations are being constantly widened. Group Insurance at a very low cost to the employees covers sickness, accident and life and has been in operation for many years. Other forward steps in food store operation, particularly relating to the reduction of working hours, have been inaugurated by Dominion Stores and this year all stores on the Island of Montreal will close at 1 p.m. on Wednesday during June, July and August. Every store manager who has been in the employ of the Company for a period of a year receives one week's holiday with full salary.

Conditions in other communities are being closely studied, with a view to extending this policy.

Dominion Stores realize the value of satisfied employees.

Dominion Stores Promotion

Montreal, Oct. 12.—The policy of Dominion Stores Ltd., to promote employees whose ability and loyalty is deserving of recognition, is merited by the promotion of Edouard Charlebois from Superintendent to General Superintendent of all Dominion Stores located in the French districts of Quebec Province.

Having joined Dominion Stores fourteen years ago as clerk and after serving in many various capacities, Mr. Charlebois was elected by company executives to supervise its French stores in the province because of his thorough understanding of French retail sales problems.

Born in Montreal and educated at Ville St. Pierre school and the Archbishop's Academy at Montreal, Mr. Charlebois has always enjoyed the respect and co-operation of his fellow workers and this promotion serves further to enhance his company's friendly relations with its many French-Canadian employees throughout the province.

Anthrax

Anthrax is an acute contagious disease of cattle and other animals. It may even affect man. In live stock it takes the form of acute blood poisoning. Men who handle green hides often get anthrax in the form of a skin disease that leads to a type of boils.

Difficult to stamp out, the germs that cause anthrax may lie dormant for years in the soil. The disease is highly contagious.

"THE OTTAWA SPOTLIGHT"

Weekly Review of National Affairs
Specially written for The Lachute Watchman
By Wilfrid Eggleston

the press act, however is held to modify or extend a section of the Criminal Code of the Dominion and is therefore invalid under the constitution. In regard to foreign affairs questions are likely to be asked in the next session of parliament why the Canadian delegates were not instructed to vote on the league of nations resolution on non-intervention in Spain. Senator Dandurand, however, did vote for the resolution asking for a convocation of the nine countries which had guaranteed the territorial integrity of China. A very favorable impression was created by President Roosevelt's Chicago speech condemning national acts of aggression, throwing the great moral force of the United States on the side of those nations who are struggling to maintain peace in the world.

EXTENSION OF WESTERN PROVINCES TO NORTH?

After consultation with the members of the Dominion parliament, Mr. Pattullo, prime minister of British Columbia, let it be known that the question of joining the Yukon Territory to British Columbia would be allowed to rest in abeyance until after the Dominion - Provincial Royal Commission on the financial relations between the provinces and the Dominion had carried on its investigations. There had been a tentative arrangement made some time ago that the Dominion would make a grant of $125,000 for five years to the British Columbian government when they took over the administration of the Yukon. Mr. Pattullo on occasions has referred to his interest in the future also of the Northwest Territories.

With the industrial growth of the territories the people of Canada will be called on some time in the future to decide whether a new province will be carved out of the territories or whether the boundaries of the four Western provinces will be extended to the Arctic borderland. The question is just now of particular interest in the area lying to the North of British Columbia as the extension of the 120th parallel of longitude, British Columbia's eastern boundary, would enclose the Mackenzie basin and a large part of Great Bear Lake. This section contains already established mineral resources of considerable value and its ultimate growth into an important industrial area seems assured.

Resourcefulness

It is comforting to note that in rural Ontario, resourcefulness is still native. This summer a party of city folk set out for a picnic on one of the northern lakes. The launch, luckily enough was manned by a local resident. When they landed on an island, many miles from human habitation, and prepared to have their meal, it was discovered that not one had brought a match. There were no Boy Scouts to make fire by rubbing sticks together and the prospect of a cold and tasteless meal yawned before them.

But the boatman was equal to the occasion. He built the fire, started the engine, soaked a piece of birchbark in gasoline, placed it near a spark-plug, held a screwdriver against the sparkplug head and near the cylinder head. The spark jumped from the screwdriver to the cylinder head, igniting the gasoline. The bark became a torch and the picnic was saved.

—The Printed Word

The population of these Northern territories is as yet quite small. The Yukon in the 1931 census had 4,230 and the Northwest Territories 9,723 people. If the Western provinces were extended to the Arctic they would each possess an imperial domain.

There is another reason why in the opinion of some observers the people of Canada should begin to take a closer interest in the northern territories, the Arctic islands. It is that, with the rapid advance in flying technique, some nations are turning their eyes to the Arctic. Norwegian papers have been giving some space to scientific expeditions of Germans and Russians to the island of Spitzbergen and other Northern lands. Greenland is also mentioned. There may be little of utilitarian value in our half million square miles of Arctic archipelago, but it is Canadian land and some observers believe that with the world shrinking in size so rapidly through the spread of aviation, it is the part of prudence for Canadians to be more conscious of their northern territories both mainland and island. This consciousness and a greater cohesion will come of course as the industrial development spreads northward.

TRANS-CANADA HIGHWAY

Some impatience is shown in the West to see the road cut through from Revelstoke to Golden. This 70 or 80 mile stretch is one of the last links in the transcontinental highway. Another section not yet complete is to the north of lake Superior. When these sections are finished the all Canada route from the Atlantic to the Pacific will be complete. The Golden-Revelstoke part of the road presents some difficulties as avalanches and slides in the winter drop masses of debris on the road, but the work is progressing. In Western Ontario the roadway was recently opened from the West to Schreiber. The roadway from East to West when finally constructed will be one of the greatest highways in the world. Its completion will be an added attraction for tourists. What a magnificent trip it will be for motorists to travel across the continent one way by the Canadian road and the other by the United States. By the end of two years it is believed the whole road will be in perfect working order.

Are We to Have Cheaper Licences?

Premier Hepburn has been making so much political capital in Ontario out of his promised reduction of license fees for automobiles that certain Quebec politicians are beginning to think that the day of "anything to hurt the motorist" is past and that it may be good political strategy to lift the auto-owners' burden a little. Therefore there are rumors that perhaps the license fees for automobiles may be reduced. It is certainly a welcome rumor and long overdue. But it will be hard to believe it before it is put into effect.

UNDER ARREST
Senator Hance J. Logan, of Parrsboro, N.S., was placed under arrest at Ottawa charged with false pretenses in the famous "Gypsum Queen" case.

Annual Meeting of the Argenteuil Historical Socy.

Though somewhat late in starting, the meeting got underway about 4 o'clock when a short business session was held. Mrs. W. Windsor read minutes of the previous meeting and presented her report showing a membership of 442, 30 of whom were life members, and a cash balance of $904.65 in the bank. This was most encouraging and public thanks were extended to Mrs. Windsor for her valued services as treasurer.

The election of officers then followed and Dr. H. B. Cushing was unanimously elected as successor to Dr. B. N. Wales, with Mrs. Windsor retaining the office of secretary-treasurer and Miss Beatrice Robertson as assistant.

Dr. Maude E. Abbott of Montreal and St. Andrews, second Vice-President of the Society, gave a paper on the "Story of Bellevue", the manor house above the Carillon Barracks.

Two gifts were presented to the Society for the new museum. A copy of Dr. Morin's "Traité d'Art Heraldique" was presented to the Society by the author. The Society also received a set of four framed paintings of the shields, with coats of arms, of the nobility of France, copied from the Heraldic Museum at Versailles, by Father François Xavier Lachance, a former member of the Pope's Guard, which were donated by Miss Alice Lee, of Westport, New York, to whom they were given some years ago by Father Lachance. Miss Lee sent the shields as a gift from the Champlain Valley which was for one hundred and fifty years a part of the Province of Quebec, feeling that they will now be of more interest to French Canada than to the United States. Presentation of the shields was made by her niece, Miss Mary Lee, of Westport.

Dr. Maude E. Abbott moved that the names of Mr. C. J. Staniforth and Miss Jane Brophy be transferred to the new Board of Representatives, and Mr. Drysdale and Miss T. Wales be placed on the Executive.

One of the important resolutions unanimously adopted was that the Society place itself on record, that the place names, whether French or English, should be retained in their original language (—as for instance, "Trois Rivières" should be kept, and not "Three Rivers"; also St. André Est should not be substituted for the original St. Andrews.)

The presentation of prizes to winners in the school-children's essay contest was then made by Dr. Cushing, who congratulated Miss Helen Weir upon her success. Unfortunately Miss Denise Raymond, winner of best French historical sketch, was unable to be present.

Dr. Cushing, in acknowledging his appointment as president, said that he was only continuing to act as assistant to Dr. Wales, and congratulated the society on its progress. The organization, he remarked, had started with no money and much hope, but now were landed proprietors with nearly $1,000 in the bank. "My aim," said Dr. Cushing, "is that we shall in the present year start the museum in the building which is now ours."

Dr. B. N. Wales spoke feelingly of the Society's prospects and relinquished his office in the presidency with the following address:—"Ladies and gentlemen, members of the Historical Society of Argenteuil County:

On this, the occasion of my resignation as your president, my valedictory address will be brief. Let me thank you for your co-operation during my three years' term of office, and congratulate you on what has been accomplished. The retrospect of the past three years recalls a dramatic scene in the presence of a large assembly of Argenteuil people, when the cairn of Argenteuil granite was unveiled and dedicated to the memory of that group of New England Puritans from Massachusetts, who built the first paper mill in Canada, and laid the foundation of one of Canada's greatest industries.

The occasion proved to be the auspicious moment to launch our Historical Society, but, at that time, little did we expect that the passing years would find us with such a rapidly growing membership roll (we now have four hundred and forty-two on the roll, including thirty life members), with valuable museum guide books, with a column in The Watchman devoted to our interests, and finally in possession of the Carillon Barracks, free from all encumbrance, exempt from future taxation, and with the rental from the ferry wharf to meet the cost of insurance. This massive structure, with a story so rich in historic interest, is like the famous Barracks Museums of Annapolis Royal and Fort Ticonderoga. Its walls have been undisturbed by the frosts and earthquakes of a full century; its halls and chambers are well arranged for a museum—large enough but none too large to meet the needs of the program urged by our guide books. This splendid gift of Mr. Hungerbühler deserves your loyal and united effort to make of it the ideal museum.

The last request of your retiring president is that you will strive to make the museum which you hope to create a response to the challenge that comes from Old England and New England, that, like the modern type of museum, yours may become the adjunct of the public school system, attractive to the antiquarian and visiting tourist, and appealing to the clergy and school teachers of the land. When, how, and why this ideal can be attained will be considered from time to time in the historical column of the Watchman.

Scientia, unitas, et veritas omnia vincunt. Let this motto be your emblem, engraved on your escutcheon in letters of gold. By adherence to this ideal you will in time reach your objective, however small your beginnings, and you will bequeath to posterity a heritage deserving of grateful remembrance."

At the close of the meeting the following resolution of thanks was passed by the gathering:

Moved by Dr. H. B. Cushing, seconded by Mr. J. P. Lantôt, K.C., and Resolved:

"That this Society wishes to express its profound appreciation of the valuable donation made by Miss Alice Lee of Westport, N.Y., to the Historical Museum of Argenteuil County of the comprehensive series of coats of arms of old French nobility copied in watercolours from the originals at Versailles, and mounted and framed in highly decorative style, which form the highly spectacular exhibit here displayed. This is a gift of particular importance and significance to a Museum situated in this part of French Canada and the society is correspondingly grateful.

"That the Society herewith expresses also its sincere thanks to Miss Mary Lee for bringing this rich historical material to us and for its presentation by her at this meeting."

It is safe betting that the largest block a man ever covered, is one he walks for the first time he's the power behind the perambulator.

"Colonial Expansion" A Joke

Some figures presented by the International Labour Office of the League of Nations are very interesting in view of the German and Italian talk about the need of more territory. Here they are: The United Kingdom—England, Scotland and Wales—has an area of 95,000 square miles and a population of 45,000,000. Italy has an area of 110,000 square miles and a population of 32,000,000. Germany has an area of 186,000 square miles and a population of 65,000,000. Great Britain, although she has rich dominions and colonies, is more crowded than Germany or Italy. Her people prefer to remain at home, just as the Italians and Germans. Apparently, remarks the Boston Post, colonial expansion as an outlet for Europe's crowded millions is a joke.

To Make the Thames Tideless

Old Father Thames, which runs in front of London's doorstep, is a tidal river, which until quite recently has been considered an asset in that the sea's surge not only carried traffic but secured away the refuse flung into the river by sewers. Engineering and navigation experts, however, have now reached the conclusion that the tide is a disadvantage in more ways than one. These men assert that the tide sweeps away only partially-treated sewage, which is released into the lower reaches of the river right up to the city. As regards navigation, they state that, although the tide remains useful for carrying heavy barges from point to point with no other help than the steering oar or rudder, yet this seeming advantage is outweighed by the many accidents caused to ships carrying bigger and far more valuable cargoes. Furthermore, the river is so usable only for one-quarter of the time and that only for one-way traffic. The experts' views have been accepted by some of the interests concerned and are likely to be put into practice before very long.

—Montreal Gazette.

Heart of Empire

"The Thames cannot boast of the length or width of the St. Lawrence, but its history is the pride of the English race, its rural beauty is a pleasure to all, and on its banks are famous cities including Oxford, the centre of a culture which has spread to all parts of the world, and London, the heart of the Empire. These associations form part of the heritage of the British Commonwealth." —Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King

A Tear-Down Week

With the multiplicity of "weeks" already on the calendar we are rather hesitant about suggesting another; but a suggestion comes from Port Arthur News-Chronicle that is at least worth more than passing consideration. It is a "Tear-down Week."

The idea is to get rid of a lot of unsightly, worn-out, useless buildings and other blots on the landscape.

Every town has its share of these excrescences; some mercifully hidden from the sight of the passerby, others frankly exposed to the public gaze. Old buildings—barns, houses that are just hanging together, tumble-down chicken-houses, dilapidated wood-sheds—not to mention some fences that are neither useful nor ornamental. We need not specify, everyone knows a few candidates for attention in a Tear-down Week in his own neighborhood.

Example -- Australia

Take a look at Australia... Reports from that country state that unemployment has fallen from the peak of 30 per cent in June, 1932, to 8.4 per cent, which is almost the normal rate.

The financial position of the Commonwealth shows a marked improvement. In twelve months the fund maintained in London to meet debt and other commitments has been increased by $50,000,000.

Bank deposits total $1,535,000,000 (a record) and they exceed advances by $228,650,000.

Australian railways are making money. In the case of the Victorian system, return on capital earned during the past year was 3.2 per cent. That is better than the railways of either England or the United States earned during the same period.

To the British investor Australia is ace high.

How, with a population considerably smaller than that of Canada, has the Commonwealth achieved this position?

The answer is that she did not wait for the return of prosperity to cure her ills. In the depths of the depression she took drastic measures to straighten out her financial tangles. Her economies cut deep. She readjusted her debt interest in co-operation with her debtors, not by repudiation.

Her taxpayers had to dig farther into their pockets. They had assurances that the results would be worth it. And their faith would seem to have been justified.

Australia may not be entirely clear of the woods, but she is farther out of them than Canada.

So far as this Dominion is concerned, the one policy our successive governments have been able to apply to such crippling problems as the railway sinkhole and the topheavy administrative set-up is that of "waiting for the return of prosperity."

Relative prosperity is here, but it doesn't seem to have done much in the way of reducing the nation's deficits. Nor will it.

With immigration shut off there is no likelihood of there being twenty or fifty million people to spread the burden of taxation and debt in time for this or the next generation to share the easement.

The simple fact is that, prosperity or no prosperity, the country's expenditures have got to be cut until they are within the capacity of eleven million people to carry.

Prospects Good for Hunting Season

Prospects for big-game hunting are unusually bright in Canada this fall. Reports covering the thousands of square miles of wilderness accessible by Canadian Pacific Railway show a plentitude of game and excellent conditions for hunting. Outfitters and guides across the country also report more reservations for hunting parties, both from Canada and the United States, than they have had for years.

Wild sections of Canada lying practically in the back yard of civilization have a wide variety of big game in addition to many types of game birds and smaller animals. Nova Scotia has moose, deer and black bear; New Brunswick, deer and black bear; Quebec, moose, caribou, deer and black bear; Ontario, moose, deer and black bear; Manitoba and Saskatchewan, moose, deer and caribou; Alberta and British Columbia, mountain sheep and goats.

caribou, moose, elk (wapiti), deer, and grizzly, brown and black bear; and the Yukon Territory and Alaska, practically the same as British Columbia.

An indication of the increased interest in hunting this year has been given by the number of applications coming to the general tourist offices in Windsor Station, Montreal, for copies of the two hunting booklets, "Open Seasons for Hunting" and "Fishing Waters and Game Haunts."

International President and Ottawa Members Visited Lachute "Hundred Club"

A well attended meeting of the Lachute "100" Club was held in Desjardins Hotel on Wednesday evening. Three guests from Ottawa were present, Dr. W. Meldrum, Mr. W. O'Brien and Mr. Lacoursiere.

Dr. Meldrum is the President of the International Association of "100" Clubs and the members present were interested to hear his report on the formation of a Constitution for the Club. This, he reported, was near completion and in a short time a copy would be forwarded to each Club for their study and criticism.

Mr. Lacoursiere's remarks were in French and he intimated that he thought the Lachute Club was one of the most active of any with which he has ever come in contact. Mr. C. L. Hall gave a very interesting talk on the present activities surrounding the Quebec Protestant School Commission.

The best people are the ones your wife knew before she married you.

Brownsburg W. I. Activities

The Brownsburg W. I. held their regular monthly meeting on Thursday, October 7. Mrs. Arthur Campbell read a paper on "Publicity."

Mrs. Lemuel Wilson gave a resume of her trip to England, during which she visited the Frome W. I. at Somerset. In the evening a supper was served at the Social Club to between 90 and 100 employees of the C-I-L.

The Brownsburg W. I. was represented at the Government House, Ottawa, on Friday last, by Mrs. Martin and Mrs. P. McQuaig, at a tea and a lecture which was both educational and interesting.

BRUETON — WHINFIELD

The marriage of Irene Elizabeth, daughter of the late E. C. Whinfield, and of Mrs. Whinfield, of Calumet, to Rev. Kenneth Noel Brueton, of Grenville, son of Mrs. Brueton, and the late Frederick Brueton of Sussex, England, took place on Saturday morning at Trinity Anglican Church, Calumet, the Rev. W. J. Ellis, rector of St. Aidan's Anglican Church, Montreal, officiating.

The bride wore a gown of white satin fashioned on long lines, a veil and matching accessories. She carried an arm bouquet of talliesman roses. Miss G. McQuat, of Montreal, in similar costume, was bridesmaid, while Mr. Eric L. Brueton, of Verdun, a brother to the groom, acted as best man.

Mrs. Stewart Campbell, of Lachute, an aunt of the bride, presided at the organ. The ushers were Mr. Edward Bridgen and Mr. Thomas Farman, Jr., of Calumet. The church was decorated with asters and autumn foliage.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Calumet and among the out-of-town guests present were the Rev. W. C. and Mrs. LeCrag of Lachute, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Dumouchel, of Montreal, Miss Ethel McQuat, of Montreal, Rev. E. G. and Mrs. May, of St. Agathe, Rev. Canon W. P. and Mrs. Garrett, of Hawkesbury, and Mrs. Eric Brueton and Miss Marjorie Brueton, of Verdun.

Following the reception Rev. and Mrs. Brueton left on a motor trip for Toronto and other Western Ontario points and for travelling the bride wore a costume of navy blue with hat and accessories to match. Upon their return they will take up residence in the rectory at Grenville where the Rev. Mr. Brueton is rector of St. Matthew's Anglican Church.

Eastern Canada Convention of Presbyterian Y.P.S. Held in Dominion Capital

The Presbyterian Young People's Society of Eastern Canada held its fourth annual convention at Ottawa on Thanksgiving week-end. This was one of the largest conventions of its kind ever held in Canada. Over one thousand delegates were present, including three members of the Lachute branch.

A business meeting was held Saturday morning, after which the delegates were entertained in an extensive tour of Ottawa and the Parliament Buildings. In the evening there was a banquet in the ball room of the Chateau Laurier. Right Rev. Hugh Munroe gave a very stirring address, which was broadcast from station CRGO.

Rev. Allen Reoch of Manichuria gave an address at the rally held at Erskine Church on Sunday evening and the convention closed at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Those attending as representatives from Lachute were—Mr. Colin Copeland Misses Jean and Bessie Black.

Death Removes Member of Pioneer Family at River Rouge

LATE THOS. A. MACADAM

The death of Thomas Archibald MacAdam, which occurred at 1 o'clock this morning, Oct. 14th, removes the last of the MacAdam family, who were one of the first families in River Rouge settlement, dating their residence from about 1849.

Mr. MacAdam was born on Sept. 30th, 1867, and though he had been in poor health for some time his death came as a distinct shock to his close relatives and neighbors in the community.

A loving wife and two sons, Ross and Stewart, are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral will be held from his residence Friday, Oct. 15th, service to be conducted by the Rev. Mr. Mowatt of St. Andrews East.

Many Miles of Chewing Gum Consumed Annually

Over 100,000 miles of chewing gum are sold every year, the major portion being consumed in the United States, states the Montreal Herald.

Chewing gum in its raw state is the juice of a tree known as the sapote, which grows in various parts of Central America.

The sapote is a graceful tree, with a straight trunk some forty feet high. It is tapped very much after the manner of a rubber tree, spiral cuts being made in the bark, through which the juice runs down the trunk to jars placed at the foot.

The sap, or "chicle," as it is called, looks like milk when it first enters the jar, but on exposure the color changes to a dull yellow, and thickens until it is almost like sirup.

The gum is taken out of the jars and boiled down in huge pots, after which it is kneaded and excess moisture is squeezed out. It is then moulded into large loaves, cooled, and wrapped in canvas for exportation to the chewing gum factory.

In the factory it is mixed and boiled in copper vats to the desired thickness, and sugar is added with flavoring essences.

Refrigerator Car for Relief of Western Sufferers Was Loaded to Capacity Today

The appeal for assistance to the drought-stricken Western Provinces met with a hearty response from all sections of this county, and the committee reports that the C.P.R. refrigerator car consigned to this community has been loaded to capacity with potatoes, vegetables, apples and quantities of canned goods.

Mr. A. Fassio, with his usual generosity, opened his two theatres in Lachute and Brownsburg for a benefit matinee, in which each patron paid an admission fee of two tins of canned goods. These performances resulted in the collection of over 500 tins.

The money donations handed over to the committee were duly expended on purchases of potatoes, and the outcome of this effort, which concludes with today's loading, has proved highly gratifying.

BOY SCOUTS THE WORLD OVER

AN INTERNATIONAL "SWAP" OF CAMPERS

An international exchange of Boy Scout campers—four Canadian Scouts for four American Scouts—was one of last summer's camp novelties. Four Montreal Scouts at Camp Tamaracouta were selected and sent to a Brooklyn camp in New York state for a two weeks' period, and four Brooklyn Scouts took the Montreal Scouts' places at Tamaracouta.

AN IMPERIAL SCOUT GATHERING

During the Jamboree, leaders of the principal Empire Scout contingents were called together by Lord Baden-Powell, as an Imperial Scout Committee, as Canada's representative, Mr. Stewart was made its first chairman. At the opening session reference was made to a statement by the Prime Minister of Canada, the Hon. MacKenzie King, at the last Imperial Conference, stressing the value of such Empire gatherings and the free exchange of experiences, information and opinions. Many matters of general Scouting interest were discussed. The next meeting of the Imperial Scout Committee will be held in Scotland in 1939, during the 3rd World Rover Scout gathering. In addition to Canada, the conference was attended by representatives of Australia, India, New Zealand, South Africa and Great Britain.

53rd Annual Convention of Provincial W.C.T.U. Held at Lennoxville, Que.

Three ladies from Cushing, accompanied by Miss A. McDowell of Montreal and Cushing, as the accredited delegate from the local Union, attended the 53rd Provincial Annual W.C.T.U. Convention at Lennoxville. Mrs. Usher, as first vice-president, presided over the convention for the entire three days in the absence of the president through illness.

Mrs. J. W. Maclean, Evangelistic Superintendent for the Province, consecrated the opening of the meetings and presided over the memorial service for the members who had been called by death during the past year. Mrs. A. Graham was much in demand as a reporter for the various papers, as well as for White Ribbon Tidings, and had the pleasant surprise of hearing one of her poems "God's Plan" read by Mrs. N. A. Reese of Atholstan, Provincial Superintendent of Loyal Temperance Legions, as a very fitting ending to her report. This poem Mrs. Reese had clipped from a magazine.

The only change in the provincial officers was that of second vice-president, who will be for a time Mrs. G. G. McCurdy of Lennoxville, so well-known to members of the Women's Institute in this county as the Editor of their little paper "Home and Country."

Members of Lennoxville Women's Institute provided the refreshments for the first day of convention, and one of the W.C.T.U. ladies, in reporting on W.C.T.U. work, mentioned the noble sister organization, the Women's Institute—which greatly pleased more than one person in the audience and convinced them that the two organizations were being drawn near to each other in one common bond and aim, the betterment of womanhood and of the world in general.

The principal guest speakers were Dr. Hill, M.D., of Sherbrooke; Rev.

T. W. Jones of Calvary United Church, Montreal; Rev. A. J. Milligan, pastor of Sherbrooke Baptist Church; Rev. F. A. Matthews, pastor of Lennoxville United Church; Rev. Dr. Scott of Granby United Church, and Canon Murray, a former pastor of Lennoxville Anglican Church, whose name appeared on the program by mistake as the present rector. In alluding to this Canon Murray said that it was a mistake as he was now a free-lance, owing obedience to no one but the one bound to him by matrimonial ties.

Apart from his humor Canon Murray was very earnest in his exhortations to members of the convention that they should never give up this work, no matter how much the enemy seemed to be gaining at times, but to press on realizing that this was indeed God's work, and they his workers.

Rev. Jones spoke along the same lines, stressing the need of this temperance work in all walks of life, and touching also on the mixed marriage question.

Rev. Milligan, as well as stressing the part that temperance and intemperance play in the health of the people, and admonishing people to keep their bodies holy and acceptable to God, also quoted from Elbert Hubbard's Scrap-Book, which blames "He who squanders his health for a short gratification of his own weak pleasure—as being a robber of the public and a wretch who has voluntarily disqualified himself for the business of Life, the part that God had assigned him, the general task of human nature." Rev. Milligan also traced the history of temperance work back to its inception. The first Temperance Society on record, he said, was that of St. Christopher, founded in Germany in 1517.

Dr. Hill of Sherbrooke, a medical doctor, based his talk entirely upon cases with which he had had personal experience in his daily round of duty. He deplored the lack of family worship in the home of today. This sacred and much needed service, he claimed, was being neglected; and this neglect responsible for much intemperance and the fact that the younger generation were treading the downward path so quickly and determinedly. The parents, with their indulgence of all their own pet follies, were much to blame for the condition of young people today—who saw nothing to hold on to, nothing with which they might guide themselves aright, in their parents' lives. This stirring address from a medical doctor who claimed that he daily saw young people going down to destruction simply by following in the footsteps of their parents, was one which might well cause us, of the older generations, to stop and think what we can do to remedy this state of affairs. —J. speaker claimed that during the war she had stood in the same room with a little Belgian girl telling a large audience of the wrongs of her people at the hands of the mutual enemy. In speaking of Art, Mrs. Silvercruys Farnam said, "Art has no nationality," and "Art is that in which head, hands and heart work in perfect harmony together," and that "Those who really live on after death in the minds of the people are those who have really given something of themselves to the world." In further urging that people use their spare moments in art of some kind, Mrs. Farnam said, "Idleness is the cause of a lot of illness in the world. When you are so busy that you have no time to be sick, you are so happy and content with your work that you will keep well." Mrs. Farnam based her assertion on her own personal experience. Some years ago she became ill and it was only a matter of time when she was to have been placed in a sanitarium for nerve treatments, when a friend visited her sick room and brought her a package of Italian plasticine, thinking to arouse in her a desire for life. She declared she never would use it, but the parcel intrigued her in spite of herself and made her so curious that eventually she began a listless sort of way to play with its contents, until under this new interest and occupation her nervous condition improved so much that in reply to her pleadings she was given a short time longer to recover and gain the necessary weight which they would think warranted her being kept out of the sanitarium. The desire for life and health grew with her interest in her work and in a short time she was completely well—and has never been sick since; which proves the often-argued case that "mind is master over all." All the time Mrs. Silvercruys Farnam was talking her fingers were busy adding a bit of plasticine here and there, smoothing it down to represent a face, creasing it a bit with her fingers to make the hair, the nostrils, the neck and so on. She advised artists, who would, she hoped, attempt to model something the moment they got home, to begin by copying a figure and not to start modelling their friends, in case of giving offence. Mrs. Silvercruys Farnam also claimed that our faces were mirrors of our inner lives and thoughts. "We make our own faces," she said. "We do not use sufficiently the gray matter with which God endowed us nor do most of us use our eyes. We can make our own happiness if we will but put forth the effort; so we will be happy only in accordance with the way in which we help ourselves to be happy, and that could in a measure be accomplished by filling our spare moments with work that is elevating and beautiful—in other words, attempting to create and reproduce something that will cause our name to live after us, long after we ourselves have passed."

After the lecture the assembly adjourned to the dining hall to mingle with old friends and make new ones, and to enjoy the delightful refreshments. Her Excellency stood outside the lecture-room and had each lady presented to her as they passed. —J. G.

"God Bless You" Sneeze

Started in Middle Ages

It is surprising to find how many people superstitiously say "God bless you!" when they hear you sneeze. This custom is believed to have originated in the Middle Ages when plagues and epidemics were rife, relates a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

Sneezing at such a time often indicated to the superstitious that the victim had caught the plague and so they said sympathetically, "God bless you," meaning "God help you!" At that time it was usual to accompany the words with the sign of the Cross.

Another old belief was that it was lucky to sneeze on the right and unlucky on the left. If a bridegroom sneezed on his wedding morning, his friends regarded it as a lucky omen, and strangely enough, this superstition persists in parts of Britain.

The Greeks considered it fortunate to sneeze in the afternoon, but foretold ill-luck for those who sneezed between midnight and midday.

Hints for Homebodies

Specially Written for Readers of The Watchman
By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

CHOOSE YOUR ACTIVITIES

Before the winter activities get too far advanced, it is a good idea to check up and see how many things you are doing. If you are not doing anything, then get busy and join one or more of your town's activities. On the other hand, if you are one of those women who always feel rushed and who never have time for anything extra, then you are into too many things. Check them over and give up some. It is not an easy thing to do, especially in a small place, when you are interested in all that goes on and your friends will not be able to understand and think you are letting them down. You will be a better wife and mother if your life is not bounded by the four walls of home, but there is a real danger of being out too much or having too much on your mind from too many executive positions. The capable and the willing woman gets the work piled on her.

THE AWKWARD TEENS

The awkward 'teens are more than just a catch phrase. They are a real trial to all concerned. When boys around fourteen or fifteen, and girls just a little younger, start being very awkward, remember it is a phase of their development, trying while it lasts, but they do grow out of it. They will not be able to cross a room without hanging into half the furniture. They will trip over their shadows. And at the table is worst of all. Perhaps it is because there are more opportunities of being awkward or perhaps we notice it more there. The cream pitcher or the water glass gets knocked over, the sugar is spilled, the gravy dish is upset and it is miraculous the way the forks fall off their plates. Grit your teeth and say nothing. Be noble and smile. They feel worse about it than even you do. They actually can't help it. They are growing rapidly and they grow unevenly and so do not co-ordinate properly. Help them by avoiding trying situations. Your little daughter, who has been all grace and light at your parties, suddenly objects to helping and probably does not want to appear at all. She can't tell you why but you probably feel annoyed and think she is developing a very nasty disposition after all you have done for her. Just help her by leaving her alone and she will get over it much quicker.

HALLOWE'EN PARTIES

Hallowe'en is a very easy time to entertain either old or young, as food, decorations and games can all be arranged to suit the occasion. The shops and your own ingenuity will supply more decorations than you can use. When it comes to food do not over-do it. A few suitable decorations are more effective than every last bite fixed up in some way. Some open-faced Jack-o-Lantern sandwiches may be made. Spread rounds of bread with any orangey colored cream

SUFFERED 40 YEARS FROM CONSTIPATION

"For 40 years, I had been praying for a lasting remedy for constipation and its evils. Finally, I tried Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Since that time (nearly 10 years ago) I have not taken any medicine. Have been well and entirely free from constipation."—Mrs. L. H. Kendig (address on request).

Don't let common constipation ruin your life. You can end it safely, without using drugs that soon lose their effectiveness.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day—with every meal in severe cases. Serve as a cereal with milk or fruits, or cook into appetizing recipes. ALL-BRAN absorbs more than twice its weight in water and gently clears away the wastes that cause headaches, tiredness and serious illness.

The vitamin B in ALL-BRAN helps tone up the entire intestinal tract. Buy ALL-BRAN from your grocer. Guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

cheese and make eyes with slices of stuffed olives, a raisin nose, and a pimento mouth. Your dessert may be a witch. Put a hat, made with a chocolate cookie and a half a marshmallow on a scoop of vanilla ice cream. Use raisins for eyes and nose and a strip of cherry for a mouth. If the hat is put on at a properly rakish angle, it is quite effective.

WATCH THE CURVES

When you start trying on the new dresses this fall those extra pounds are going to show up. Reducing is one of the things about which people have no patience. They want to do it all at once. It is a dangerous thing to take off fat too quickly, unless under a specialist's care and probably in a hospital, where each muscle will be individually and properly exercised to give it strength. Fat encases our abdominal muscles and consequently if there is too much fat, it will support the organs, instead of the muscles doing the work. If the fat is suddenly taken away the muscles cannot do the work, the organs will sag and all kinds of difficulties may occur, resulting in a worse condition than being too fat. —If the fat is taken away slowly enough, the muscles will gradually take up the slack and strengthen. The slower you reduce the better for the face. You have all seen people who have been reducing and they look positively haggard. The skin is elastic and has stretched over the fat. When the fat goes too rapidly the skin cannot keep pace and does not shrink quickly enough, so it lies in folds. A slow reduction will keep the skin of the face smooth without getting extra lines. A pound a week is plenty, and you can be satisfied with a half-pound a week. It will take a longer time but it is a lot easier to do and is just as effective in the end. If it is any consolation, it is a lot easier for the fat person to take off pounds than it is for the thin person to put them on.

MELBA TOAST

Almost every reducing diet includes Melba toast. I heard one woman say "Melba toast isn't fattening." It is just as fattening as the slice of bread from which it was made. The only difference is that it is palatable with less butter than bread. Its crunchiness seems to make it go farther than the same amount of bread. It is quite simple to make. Put thin slices of bread in a slow oven of 325 degrees until crisp and slightly browned.

—Saturday evening, October 23rd, is the date set for the meeting of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, to be held in the Auditorium. There will be the usual excellent program and fine supper.—Be sure to attend!

Yeast Breads

There is something in the air, the gleaming mornings and gold-and-scarlet days, the brilliant evenings hinting frost, the tingling, hungry autumn weather, that gives us new thoughts about foods and cooking and sends us to our kitchens eager to make good things to satisfy reviving appetites.

Of all the good things that come from the kitchen, crusty home-made bread is one of the best. Just to come into the house while bread and rolls are baking makes a body sniff with joyful anticipation of the moment they will come to the table.

Accurate measurements and close attention to temperature make it very easy to bake delicious bread and rolls. Almost any batch of dough can be stored in the refrigerator for several days so that warm rolls will be forthcoming for any meal.

The same foundation recipe is used for Parker House rolls, clover leaf rolls and many sweet rolls, with a few variations.

When dough is taken from the ice-box it takes from two to three hours for the shaped rolls to rise before baking.

Foundation Recipe

One cup riced potatoes, 2 cakes compressed yeast, ½ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon salt, ½ cup shortening (butter and lard mixed), 2 eggs, 8 cups flour, ½ cup water in which potatoes were cooked, 2 cups milk.

Scald milk and add shortening. Cool to lukewarm temperature. Cool ½ cup water in which potatoes were cooked to lukewarm temperature and add crumbled yeast cakes. Let stand until softened and add to milk with riced potatoes, sugar, salt and 3 cups bread flour. Add eggs well beaten and stir until thoroughly mixed, beating as hard as possible. Stir in remaining flour, brush the dough lightly with melted fat, cover closely and store in the refrigerator until wanted. Or let rise in a warm place (85 degrees F.) for an hour, shape in rolls, let rise again until double in bulk and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees F.). Remove from oven and brush with melted butter.

To shape rolls, roll part of the dough on a lightly floured board into a sheet about ½ inch thick. Cut with a biscuit cutter and make a crease slightly to one side of the center of each biscuit, using the dull edge of a case knife. Brush the edge of each biscuit with a little water and fold the bigger side over on the smaller side, pressing the edges firmly together. Arrange about 2 inches apart on a greased baking pan, cover with a towel and let rise.

For clover leaf rolls pinch off bits of dough and make into balls about ¾ of an inch in diameter. Put three balls in greased custard cups or muffin pans and let rise and bake as usual.

Sweet rolls are made by rolling the dough into a sheet, brushing with butter and spreading with nuts, fruit or cinnamon and sugar according to the kind of roll wanted. Roll up dough like a jelly roll, cut in cross wise slices about ¾ inch in thickness and let rise and bake as usual.

When setting a table for a luncheon and knife is not needed, the forks are placed on the right of the plate with the spoons. The napkin is placed at the left of the plate to balance the cover.

Include fresh fruit in the school lunch box for health's sake. Oranges are splendid because they stimulate the appetite and are rich in those protective elements, vitamins C, A and B as well as calcium. These elements have a tendency to prevent tooth decay and gum troubles and maintain resistance to cold and other infectious diseases. To make the

TUBERCULOUS PETS

The importance of cattle as carriers of tuberculosis has long been recognized. Tuberculosis in domestic pets is a subject that has attracted surprisingly little attention. Yet dogs and cats do get tuberculosis. Routine autopsies carried out in veterinary institutions seem to indicate that in some parts of the world dogs and cats suffer more often than in others. In Berlin three dogs in a thousand have tuberculosis; in France five dogs in a hundred. In Berlin the percentage of tuberculous cats is 2; in France 13.

Two Scandinavian investigators named Hyarre and Herlitz have reported six instances in which the pet seems to have been infected by a human friend. Here is one of them:

A poodle lived for seven years with a healthy mistress and remained well at that time. A visitor came to the house in spring of 1932; began to cough in May, 1932, went away in the fall and died from tuberculosis in February, 1933. She had been very friendly to the poodle and even fed him from her own plate. The dog began to cough in October, 1932, and next month was found by the experts at the veterinary college to have tuberculosis.

Sheep dogs, fox terriers and Airedales appear to be the most susceptible breeds of dogs. Male dogs, it is said, are more liable to tuberculosis than female dogs and cats more susceptible than dogs. Health seekers will be glad to be told that they should be careful not to infect their pets.

Because dogs and cats may catch the disease from humans, it does not necessarily follow that humans can catch the disease from dogs and cats. But the possibility is worth bearing in mind.

Miss Laura Davis spent the week-end visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Davis.

BROWNSBURG

Miss Blanche Ardill of Ottawa, spent the Thanksgiving holiday at her home here.

Mr. George Prosser, of Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., is visiting his family here this week.

Miss Jean MacKenzie, of Staynerville, was the week-end guest of Mrs. Hector Mason.

Readers will be interested to know that a prominent citizen of this town picked ripe strawberries here last week. What a town!

Congratulations to Miss H. Townsend, whose marriage is taking place this month.

The Misses Phyllis McAdam and Rosamond Pike visited Mrs. R. Dobbie in Cushing over the week-end.

Miss L. Blair, of Chicago, is visiting her sister, Mrs. David Tomalty, this week.

Miss A. Boyd was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Robinson recently.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. John Graham, who were married fifty-one years on Oct. 12th.

Rev. James Adams, B.A., B.Th. District Secretary of the Bible Society will be the speaker at Maple Ave. Brownsburg

The Skin's Heat

Meters that measure the temperatures of stars, used to test the heat of the human skin, show that, contrary to popular belief, colored skin is virtually no better protection against heat than white complexions. Although black paint absorbs heat, it is found that black human skin absorbs no more of it than white. The star meters, which pick up the human heat rays at a distance and thus do not upset the skin's natural response by contact, show that man's skin measures heat changes as sensitively as the most delicate thermometers. A normal person can feel a temperature rise at a rate of less than one thousandth of a degree per second. His subconscious faculties are aware of the change within three seconds and immediately set his skin "heat regulators" to work.

Red Flag

Since 1791 the Red Flag has symbolized revolution. By a decree of the National Assembly then sitting in Paris, the waving of a red flag was to be the final warning to a disorderly mob before the National Guard opened fire. It was flourished that year on the Champ de Mars; the mob did not disperse; several were killed; and the Red Flag became their symbol. It was first hoisted in England by the mutinous sailors at the Nore in 1797. Russia was the first country to adopt it as the national flag though the idea was suggested in the Second French Republic in 1848. Lamartine, the poet and Liberal leader, rejected the proposal, saying: "The Tricolor has been carried in triumph round the world. The Red Flag has only been carried in shame round the Champs de Mars."

Studebaker presents
3 great new 1938 cars!

NEW 1938 STUDEBAKERS

Lowest priced Commander...lowest priced President...in Studebaker history...and a new Six...the greatest dollar values Studebaker has ever offered!

DON'T SLAM THE DOOR!
You don't have to slam doors in a 1938 Studebaker. All models have unique rattle-proof rotary door latches. Just a gentle pull or push and the door closes lightly, tightly, and silently.

WHAT A MONEY SAVING CAR TO RUN!
Gas and oil savings in the 1938 Studebaker would be a credit to a smaller, lighter car. And the famous Fram oil cleaner is standard on all models. Automatic gas-saving overdrive is available at slight extra cost in Commanders and Presidents.

BIG and beautiful and completely new in every vigorous flowing line, the glamorous 1938 Studebaker has come to town in all its glory.

Until you see it and drive it, you can't even begin to imagine how thrilling and different a truly modern automobile can be.

Never since Studebaker cars were first built has a small amount of money bought you so much impressive Studebaker luxury.

And even the very lowest priced 1938 Studebaker includes as standard equipment without extra charge an oversize trunk... doors that close tightly without slamming... safety glass all around... twin windshield wipers, tail lamps and sun visors... a new horizontal transmission that makes possible a flat front floor... finest hydraulic shock absorbers... and independent planar wheel suspension gives you the unforgettably comfortable Studebaker Miracle Ride!

ANNUAL FLOWING MATCH, HELD LAST WEEK, ASSUMED AN INTERNATIONAL CHARACTER

Honors Well Contested in All Classes of Competition

WINNERS OF AWARDS

The president and directors of the Argenteuil Plowmen's Association may well be proud of the competition which was held last Thursday on the farm of Alex. Doig, near Lachute.

With competitors from two provinces and visitors from the American side, the match proved to be international as well as inter-provincial. The large increase in the number of entries was a clear indication of the interest being taken in this event.

René Renaud of St. Eustache proved to be the champion plowman. This young man, in his early twenties, won the Héon Trophy for best ridge in the competition, as well as first prize in the Scotch plow class.

The teams and equipment proved an interesting feature of the match. A splendid pair of Scotch Clydes, in harness from the land of the heather, won easily for John A. Walker; they were capably driven by Earl Stone.

In the Old Men's class, David Touchette was an easy winner, but he finished his ridge in time to act as judge of the tractor plowing.

Annual Bible Society Meeting Held at Evening Service in Lachute United Church

The annual meeting of the Bible Society was held last Sunday evening in the United Church, and proved one of the most successful in every way. The meeting opened with the Doxology and the Rev. W. Le-Cras offered the prayer of invocation. After the singing of a hymn the Rev. H. Cousens read the Scripture lesson and the Rev. W. B. Rosborough led in prayer.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by the Secretary, Mrs. L. Morris, and approved; a statement from the Treasurer was also read stating that $155.30 had been received from the canvassers, four of whom were yet to be heard from.

A vote of thanks to the canvassers for their faithful work in the different districts was passed, on motion by Rev. Mr. Rosborough. A resolution expressing regret at the death of Rev. Dr. McLennan, former District Secretary, and appreciation of the good work done by him, was passed on motion of Rev. Mr. Cousens, the whole audience standing in token of their approval. A vote of thanks to the minister and managers for use of the church was also carried.

A list of officers for 1938 as recommended by the Executive was read by the President, and

"Shower" and Presentation Given at Cushing West

(By Our District Correspondent)
Cushing W. — Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hartley, our popular young newlyweds, were on Saturday evening surprised to receive a visit from a number of their friends from the neighborhood, and "showered" with a number of pretty and useful gifts. It was also the occasion for a presentation to Mrs. Hartley Sr., from her friends here of a beautiful writing case and fountain pen, in recognition of her many kindnesses during the years she has spent in our midst. She also was the recipient of a handsome brooch from her fellow-members of Frontier Branch of the Women's Institute. Mrs. Hartley voiced her thanks by a gracious and humorous little speech, and after the presentation was over a pleasant social time was spent.

Mrs. N. Holland Guest Speaker Before W.I. Study Group

PRESENT-DAY AUTHORS TOPIC OF ADDRESS

The monthly study group meeting of Lachute Women's Institute was held in the High School on Tuesday afternoon, and despite the inclement weather a large number of ladies were present to welcome their guest speaker, Mrs. Norman Holland of Montreal, who spoke most interestingly on Present-Day Canadian Authors. The speaker was introduced by Mrs. H. M. Gall. The following is a synopsis of Mrs. Holland's talk:

Present Day Canadian Authors
Canadian fiction today reflects decidedly the universal realistic trend, but our literature is also the product of its own evolution. The contribution of pre-Confederation writing to that of later periods was probably in the way of British traditions and moral and religious ideals. That of the first post-Confederation school, of which Charles G. D. Roberts was leader, was aesthetic values and technical artistry. Survivors of this period, besides the founder, are Ralph Connor, Theodore Goodrich Roberts, Marshall Saunders, W. D. Lighthall, Duncan Campbell Scott, and Frederick George Scott.

Carolina Jubilee Singers at Brownsb'g United Church

Brownsburg — A packed house greeted the Carolina Jubilee Singers last Saturday evening in the United Church here. Long before the program started chairs had to be added to the seating capacity to accommodate the audience. Mr. Shaver and his party gave another good account of themselves, and their return to Brownsburg again will be looked forward to with equal interest and anticipation. Following the concert the singers were entertained downstairs with refreshments and a social time. As had been intimated, Mr. Shaver and his troupe were present at the service on Sunday morning and rendered appropriate numbers, leaving for Montreal during the afternoon.

Farmer Finds Woodpeckers Useful, Feed on Corn Borers

(By Our District Correspondent)

Cushing W. — It seems that the woodpecker is in some respects a good friend to the farmer. A local resident while working in his cornfield the other day noticed a flock of birds busily engaged nearby, and on investigating discovered that they were searching in the stalks for corn borers, of which they were making a meal. So here's an idea; why not start breeding woodpeckers in the interests of the corn crop?

Buick Car Stolen, Recovered in Montreal Next Evening

From a driveway at the rear of his house, Mr. L. L. Legault's car was stolen at around 5.30 o'clock Tuesday evening. Mr. Legault's son had left the car, a 1936 Buick sedan, intending to use it again in half an hour, but on his return found the machine missing. Provincial police were notified and given a description of the car and license numbers. The following evening at 6.30 o'clock Mr. Legault received a telephone message that the car had been found abandoned in Montreal.

Old Age Pensions

J. R. Forest, chairman of the Quebec Old Age Pensions Commission, announced that pensions amounting to $842,424 were paid out by the commission September 30.

More than $9,300,000 has been paid out to the province's old age pensioners since the commission was established last year.

Quebec Government contributes 25 per cent of the cost of the pension plan arrived at through an agreement between the Federal and Provincial Governments.

A Correction

In last week's report of the W. I. ladies' visit to Government House, one little word crept into the printing by mistake. The article should have said that "Mrs. Silvercruys-Farnam stood on the platform in that same room during the war, a little Belgian girl", instead of "with a little Belgian girl", as the printed article had it.

Mrs. Silvercruys-Farnam is a talented Belgian lady, and during the war gave several recitals of the wrongs endured by her countrymen. —J.G.

Main Street Store Robbed of Goods Valued at $800.

Early on Tuesday morning thieves broke into the tobacconist and confectionery store of E. Gagné on Main Street. The lower panel of the rear door was removed and after entering the culprits calmly collected about $800 worth of merchandise, even taking time to enjoy some chocolate bars and soft drinks. The loss is covered by insurance. Up to time of going to press, no arrests have been made, but police are investigating and suspicious characters are being watched.

In order to break in the door the intruders had taken an axe from a shed at the rear of Lafortune's store, next door. A slot machine had been broken and stripped of its contents, while another machine had been carted away intact.

Annual Field Day of Brownsburg Cons. School

This year was no exception to the high-standard and enjoyable athletic events which have always characterized the Brownsburg school sports. Principal D. Stanforth had his students on the grounds in happy mood early on Saturday and, assisted by Eddie Barker and Reg Wallace, went through a highly interesting program of 34 events with admirable dispatch.

The weather, fortunately, was very favourable, the little tang of winter's cold but served to add zest and sparkle to the performance.

One of the highlights of the program was the mile race, which was won by young Bobby Seary of Grade VII, a little chap of 13 years. This race promised to be a set-to among five boys of the higher grades, and students "in the know" could give one inside information on the respective merits of the prowess of Leo Brunelle and Bill Birch, with a vague hint of a dark horse among the three other boys of this same grade.

On the starting line these veterans patronizingly invited some of the youngsters to join in for the first lap or two, with the result that three small boys lined up, among whom was Bobby Seary. Away to an early start young Seary assumed a lead of perhaps half a lap; the other participants, assuming he could not continue at such a blazing pace, did not at once attempt to follow. At the end of the second lap Bobby, finding his lead so commanding, removed a heavy sweater which his hasty entrance found him wearing and set out at an even faster pace on the remaining laps. Much good-natured banter and conflicting advice from the "old sports" followed Bobby unheeding to the tape, on which he fell exhausted but victorious. Half a lap behind plodded Bill Birch, the only remaining participant.

Returning from the playing field, where it is said "the English character is moulded", to the "little red school-house" where it may with equal truth be said the Canadian character is moulded—a delightful repast was served by the students. Indoor games and entertainment provided enjoyment till well on in the night. Dancing to the strains of the students' orchestra, an impromptu aggregation of musicians, whiled away the pleasant hours. Finally the unearthing of a gramophone record with the title "It ain't going to rain no more" and the signature of Mr. W. J. Graham, two of the items required in a scavenger hunt, brought the day's enjoyment to a close.

Lions' District Governor to Visit Local Organization

The Lions Club meeting which was to have taken place this evening, Oct. 21st., has been postponed until the 28th. inst.

District Governor Peterson of Windsor, Ont., is expected to pay his official visit, and several visitors are also expected from Montreal.

Ottawa, October 19—Canada will take part in the coming conference of the nine powers who in 1922 signed a treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China. This country through its prime minister has declared it will do its best through "responsible and co-operative effort" to bring about conciliation in the East. In the meanwhile the Japanese plow across Chinese territory, and an anxious world, sceptical through the experience of Ethiopia, is still hopeful the moral force of so many nations may put some sort of brake on an aggressive nationalism. Canadians believe that a great deal depends on the sincerity and force of the attitude taken by the United States. They have unfortunately also seen in the past how bitter domestic political rivalry may hamstring that country's foreign policy. Buoyed up, however, by President Roosevelt's recent statements, Canadians feel that in a tactful, conciliatory but firm, flat-footed stand by the United States, backed by a similar stand by the other signatory powers, lies the main hope for the return of peace in the Orient.

Brownsburg Players Took Both Awards in Four-Play County Drama Festival

The four plays by groups in the Argenteuil Dramatic Society presented in Lachute Auditorium last evening, proved that there is much estimable talent and a number of potential celebrities in this community who might eventually outshine Mary Pickford. This is said in all sincerity; several of those taking part were true headliners. Four groups participated, and each performed in a highly creditable manner so that the selection of the winners was no easy task.

Unfortunately a telegram at the last moment told of the illness of Mr. Legate, dramatic critic of the Montreal Star, who had promised to act as adjudicator, and in consequence Messrs. C. L. Hall and C. Gillard, Mrs. A. Graham and Mrs. Reynolds, were appointed in this capacity. Their decision gave the honors to the two groups from Brownsburg, first of which was the Women's Institute in their presentation of "Ici On Parle Français", while

Boy Scouts Heard Talk on Dangers of Gasoline

On Wednesday evening the Lachute Troop Boy Scouts had a visit from Mr. Geo. Y. Deacon of the Troop Committee, who gave a talk on general aspects of fire prevention and demonstrated in a very practical way the dangers of handling gasoline.

At this meeting the "coming up" ceremony of a number of Wolf Cubs took place and the following boys graduated from the Pack to the Troop—Henry Cousens, Jr., George Deacon, Douglas Kettyle, Owen Riddell and Bobbie Todd.

SUGAR stimulant

When I was a boy we used to keep our horses looking "slick" by feeding them sugar. I suppose horse fanciers still use that method of giving the horse's coat a glossy appearance, and putting "pep" into the animal. I often see mounted policemen giving lumps of sugar to their mounts.

Doctors have told me, and I have found it true from experience, that the best quick "pick-up" when one feels fatigued is a lump or two of pure cane sugar. It is the most efficient stimulant. We all have a sugar factory inside of ourselves, in the liver, and when the body is called on for sudden exertion the liver pours more sugar into the blood to provide the needed energy. When you drop in at a soda-fountain for a dish of ice-cream or a sweet drink you are responding to Nature's demand for a stimulant. It's easy to take in more sugar than is good for the health, but it's the most convenient source of extra energy.

SPINACH . . . growing demand

A couple of miles from my country home is the largest truck farm I know anything about. They cultivate 6,000 acres, in only half a dozen vegetable crops. This year they had nearly a thousand acres in spinach alone, and they plan to grow more next year, the spinach demand is growing so fast. The people of the United States ate 116,000 tons of spinach last year, whether they liked it or not.

Parents began feeding their children spinach a few years ago because doctors agreed that it contains iron and other minerals in easily assimilated form. So many of the grown-ups of today were raised on spinach and grew to like it that they continue to eat it, while a new crop of spinach eaters comes along every year. I don't like it much myself, but for those who do I'm glad to pass along the good news that frozen spinach and canned spinach are just as wholesome as the fresh vegetable. Spinach contains the essential vitamins, "A" and "C" which ward off infections, strengthen the bones and prevent rheumatism. Go ahead, children; eat your spinach!

WATER chemical tricks

In a big industrial laboratory lately I was shown a new chemical for waterproofing fabrics. It can be used on cotton, rayon, silk or wool, and renders them absolutely impervious to water. It does not fill up the spaces between the threads of woven fabrics, so one wearing a suit thus treated can go out in the rain without getting his clothes wet.

A chemist friend tells me of another new trick, to make water wetter. The time and difficulty of getting some kinds of materials water-soaked is one of industry's tough problems; wool, cotton, and other things have to be soaked for dyeing. A new chemical called "tergitol", a synthetic alcohol, mixed with water in the proportion of one ounce to ten gallons, makes the water so wet that it "soaks in" at once. One use of this new "wetter water" is washing poison spray residue off apples. Another is removing old wall paper.

It struck me this treatment of water ought to make it easier

The annual meeting of Lachute branch of the Bible Society was addressed by the district secretary, Rev. Thos. Bennett, in the Presbyterian Church.

Gambling Debunked

Most parents, seeing boys gamble, will either take punitive action or shake their heads and ease the situation by agreeing that gambling is an instinct, that instincts are a part of human nature, that you can't change human nature. But Dr. J. Halsey Gulick, academy headmaster, did neither when boys in his charge played the slot machines.

He went to police headquarters, secured a confiscated gambling device, and had it set up in the mathematics room of his school. Then he arranged with the mathematics instructor to work up a problem involving the law of mathematical probability. The boys were to play the machine with "phony" money to solve the problem. And they discovered several surprising things.

They learned, for example, that a player hits the "jack pot" once in 4,000 times. At a nickel a "throw" that meant it would cost about $200 to win $5. They learned also that the next highest "payoff" was once in 2,000 plays, and made it cost $100 to win $1.

Probably Dr. Gulick smiled a bit—to himself. Perhaps he made a few notes for a book on boy psychology. But anyway, it is reported that gambling isn't so popular in his school as it was. —The Rotarian.

Gambling Victims Steal, Smash and Rob Slot Machine

Claiming they were tired of being fleeced by a slot machine, three young lumberjacks of St. Donat de Montcalm pleaded guilty at St. Jerome to the theft of a slot machine, valued at $100, and its contents of $12.

The offence took place when the trio went into the store of Willie Thoun at Lanthier, Que., and took the machine, carried it outside and smashed it open to take its contents. They were arrested by provincial police officers.

In pleading guilty the men said they were tired of going into the store to buy cigarettes and of being tempted to play the machine. They said they were willing to settle and pay the difference between what they had lost and the value of the machine and its contents. Niagara comes 26th in the District Magistrate Lalande's list of world waterfalls, the St. Jerome refused to accept Sutherland in New Zealand before the offer, and sentenced them to 1,900 feet in height, to Niagara's 167.

Big Business in Canada

Many will be surprised to learn that Canada produced fourteen and a half million pairs of shoes last year and 24,364,181 standard size light bulbs. The Canadian Resources Bulletin says the bulbs brought $4,117,871.

However, Canadian imports last July were $71,996,000, as compared with $53,821,000 for July 1936. Imports consist chiefly of iron, steel, farm machinery, automobiles, coal and petroleum. Other imports included books, woolen and cotton goods and electric apparatus.

what has happened to immigration into Canada. In the years 1911 to 1913 the average number of immigrants was 369,000; from 1919 to 1930 the annual average was 123,000 while in the years 1934 to 1936 the average figure was 11,800. Immigration has almost reached the vanishing point. That is one of the reasons why immigration is again being discussed. The old pre-war open door is ruled out. Such a policy has no advocates today, but a good many people are asking why with the return of a pretty fair measure of prosperity Canada could not absorb a moderate influx of selected settlers. It is held that it is only in times of deep depression when the wheels of industry have practically ceased turning that immigration into cities means a corresponding increase in the relief rolls. When business is improving the right sort of settler is an asset. He more than pulls his own weight. When industry regains vitality there is no direct mathematical relationship between immigration and unemployment. The main point, however, advanced by those favoring a moderate expansion in immigration policy is that not only domestic economic considerations but Canada's present position in a troubled world must be taken into account. With the rapid shrinking of the world's size, mainly through improved means of communication and transport, Canada no longer remains comfortably remote behind the veil of vast distances. This country is removed from a back seat into a chair in the front row of the nations, and what is the spectacle she presents to the eyes of nations who are suffering from over population? She is seen as a country of vast resources and a small population. The spectacle quite naturally might create envy. The task which many think lies before the Canadian people is to increase the country's population and more adequately utilize and develop her resources. In this a more generous system of immigration might play a part.

CANADA'S INDUSTRIAL IMPROVEMENT

Reports recently issued by the governmental bureau of statistics show that business activity in this country during the first eight months of 1937 was only about six percent under the boom year of 1929. The construction trade is still far behind. Building is creeping on but not nearly so fast as many other industries. Building permits in 1937 were 77 percent under 1929. Common stock prices and bank clearings were also below 1929 but the hectic days of stock gambling in 1929 will be recalled and lower prices in 1937 are not perhaps an unmixed ill. Automobile manufacturing although far ahead of depression years still lags behind 1929. The country's import trade is still down by 41 percent. On the other hand the mining industry far exceeds in activity any previous year in the country's history. Newsprint production is up 36 percent, and the electric power industry through the expansion in use of this form for both manufacturing and domestic uses, is up 58.8 percent. The general manufacturing industry in Canada has regained the position held in 1929.

MOVING PICTURES FOR EDUCATING CHILDREN

The use of moving pictures as an aid to imparting knowledge to the young, is growing quite rapidly in this country. There are now about 1,000 films in schools and about 360 motion picture projectors. This country, however, is still considerably behind several of the countries of Europe. It is said that the German government placed 7,700 and 32,000 films in the schools of that country last year. The Italians, French and Russians are also making extensive use of this method of education. There are 10,000 projectors in use in the schools of the United States. Canada started later than these countries but the movement is gaining momentum, and much more can be done in the future.

CUSHING WEST

Miss Dorothy Weir spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. Franklyn Keatley, of Ottawa, spent Sunday with his mother.

Miss Norma Cooke, of Hawkesbury, visited at her home here on Saturday.

Mrs. S. O. Hartley and her sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Paintin of Cowansville, spent the week-end as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hartley. Miss O. Hartley of Montreal was also a guest of her brother for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hartley and son, Kenneth, occupied their cottage over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tierney and two sons, of Buffalo, N.Y., were guests of Mr. W. H. Robert at Monalea last week-end, and accompanied by Mr. S. Robert motored to Montreal to visit friends on Sunday.

Mr. Gaunt, of Montreal, visited his family over the week-end.

Mr. Archie Kains, of Ottawa, visited Mrs. Kains at Greece's Point on Saturday last. He reports the condition of Mr. C. F. Kains, who is his guest in Ottawa, as fairly satisfactory.

Dr. Cushing, accompanied by his brother Mr. Jas. Cushing, visited his residence here on Sunday.

Mr. Billie Greig, who has been visiting relatives in Montreal for some time, arrived home on Saturday.

Mr. Eric and the Misses Margaret and Edna Young, also Miss Eileen Livie and Mr. Young Sr., motored up and visited their cottage on Sunday.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mrs. W. Windsor spent the week-end in the city.

Mrs. E. N. Draper and son, Frank, who have been guests at the rectory for some time, left for Ottawa on Friday.

Mrs. John Elder and daughter, Peggy, are spending the fall and winter months at the home of Mr. Robert Elder.

Miss Lee, of Boston, was a week-end visitor at the home of Dr. M. Abbott, leaving by motor on Tuesday for her home, accompanied by Dr. Abbott who will be her guest for some time.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church held their Thank-Offering meeting on Wednesday evening. Guest speaker was the Rev. H. Cousens of Lachute, who gave an excellent address along missionary lines.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Shipman and Mr. H. Little were recent guests at the home of Mr. Gilbert Hamilton.

The Carolina Jubilee Singers paid a visit to St. Andrews on Friday evening, Oct. 15th, under auspices of the United Church. A large crowd were in attendance at the Town hall, even the aisles being filled. A splendid program of a very high order was presented. Their rendering of old plantation songs, spirituals, and musical numbers gave pleasure to all. Rev. J. A. Mowatt thanked the artists and expressed a wish that they would visit our town again in the future.

The Rev. Thomas Ball conducted the service in the Anglican Church on Sunday—Rural Dean Booy, accompanied by Mr. Percy Burwash, motoring to Rawdon for the induction of the new incumbent, the Rev. C. Stone.

Much interest is being shown in the sale called the "Festival of the Seasons" to be given by the Y.P.S. of the Presbyterian Church, the following conveners, with their committees, having the booths—Miss P. Doig (Spring); Miss Eileen Weir (Summer); M. Hamilton (Autumn), and Miss R. Bradley (Winter). In the evening the young men are giving a hot dinner followed by a program, when a travelogue and moving pictures will be presented by Miss Mildred Douglas of Montreal.

On Tuesday evening the Good Fellowship Circle of the United Church met in the church hall, when officers were elected for the coming season—President, Mr. Montague; Vice-presidents, Misses Paxman and Christina Hooker, and Secretary-Treasurer, Jeanette Wales. A short program, with moving pictures, games and refreshments, closed a pleasant evening.

It is said that sitting in a draft does not cause a cold. The chilling of the body which the draft produces lowers the powers of resistance and germs which were hitherto harmless then produce their disastrous efforts. In simple language, therefore, we still contend that sitting in a draft produces a cold.

The Japanese Puzzle

It is never safe to assume that the standards of conduct which control our own actions are the same as those which are accepted by someone else. That assumption is often wrong as between individuals, usually wrong as between nations. Things that seem utterly inhuman and barbarous by the standards of a Christian people may be regarded as highly honorable and praiseworthy by those of a nation reared under a different concept of morals and religion.

Therein, it may be, lies the answer to the conduct of Japan in waging relentless warfare upon the civilian population in China. The bombing from the air of a single town might have been an accident to be apologized for. But when community after community is destroyed, thousands of women and children slain, peaceful fishing boats sunk and their crews left to drown, some further explanation is needed.

The Christian world has treated Japan as if it were a civilized power, its people motivated by the same respect for human life as the rest of the world professes. The Japanese people are intelligent and industrious, and speedily learned to practise the outward manners and customs of the white people's world after Commodore Perry forced the Mikado to open the doors of Japan to the world, eighty years ago. But it would seem that the rest of the world has not learned enough about the Japanese mind. We took it for granted that a nation of barbarians had completely changed its spirit in less than a century. Now Japan seems bent on proving that it is still a barbarous state.

Many people who can't properly adjust their own affairs can solve the Sino-Japanese problem while you snap your fingers once, possibly twice.

Big Men in Small Places

Those who have been privileged to hear, or who have read his public addresses these last few years, cannot help but realize that in Sir Edward Beatty the Dominion has a citizen of no mean order. In a recent discourse at Vancouver Sir Edward spoke on the subject of leadership—not the leadership of statesmen and politicians, but that pre-eminence of citizenship which is within the scope of Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith of Main Street. How much these strong, kindly citizens count in national progress... how much the minor communities of Canada contribute to nationhood... is not readily realized, but we may take it from one outstanding Canadian that their worth is measurable in magnificent terms. Quoting Sir Edward Beatty:

"The real leadership which we need in this country is not that of outstanding national figures making resounding speeches which sweep the country. It is the leadership of ordinary men and women in their own small spheres. It is the competent leadership of business men seeking profit; planning their purchases and their production as wisely as they can. It is the leadership of journalists trying to place the news of the day fairly before the people, and to give them intelligent opinions on public questions. It is the leadership of lawyers and doctors, clergymen and merchants in their local communities—trying to set a wise example of tolerance and goodwill, and trying to use their influence at all times in favour of honesty, thrift and intelligence in public and private affairs alike. Not the least important, it is the leadership which the teachers in our universities and schools can give our youth—above all by avoiding attempts to pervert history to suit a theory, or to misrepresent facts in order to make a story. On the quality of this leadership will depend the skill with which we apply the toll of an intelligent and courageous people to great natural wealth. I am confident that the leadership will be found as that the people are capable of following it, and that the wealth is there to be used."

In another part of his Vancouver address Sir Edward Beatty expressed his confidence in Canada and her people in words that cannot be repeated too often. Said this great Canadian:

"This country is one in which life and progress are a challenge to the physical strength and courage of a people, and, while it may take time for us to produce a national type from the many elements which go to make up our population, none of these elements is without its own particular and valuable contribution to the future of Canada."

"There are those who, facing peculiar manifestations of public psychology in these troublous times, would have us believe that the Canadian people, or many of them, are lacking in courage; are too readily led astray by demagogues offering wealth without toil; are not sufficiently wise to take their time in building lasting foundations for the nation. I disagree profoundly with all these theories. I have confidence in the high qualities of the Canadian people as they are, and that confidence is based on experience. Admittedly they can be led aside from the path of wisdom by visionaries, theorists, and demagogues seeking power—but not for long. Nor will they go very far away from safe paths."

F. E. Baume, editor of Australia's Sydney Sun, told a Montreal audience recently that it will take Japan 500 years to fully conquer China.

Goodwill Experiment

The story has been going the rounds—says an editorial in the Rotarian Magazine—of a city man who bought a farm. While examining the line fence, which had been a source of much quarrelling in the past, the neighboring farmer said:

"That fence is a full foot over on my land."
"Very well," said the newcomer, "we shall set the fence over two feet on my side."
"Oh! But that is more than I claim", stammered the surprised farmer.

"Never mind; I would rather have peace with my neighbor than two feet of earth."

"That's sure fine of you", replied the farmer retractably, "but I couldn't let you do a thing like that. Let's not move the fence at all!"

It is suggested that the next time you have a dispute about "rights", you try surprising the other fellow by giving him more than he claims, and then see what happens!

A Man Is Known by His Fenders

There are nearly as many schools of psychological thought as there are psychologists, so we feel at liberty to start another school of our own—says The Printed Word, an illuminating pamphlet issued by J. G. Johnston and Associates. The method which we advocate for examining the mind of mankind is to observe how people drive their motor cars. Take, for example, the citizens of Nova Scotia. They drive along their excellent winding paved roads as though they were sailing a Bluenose in a tornado. Timid inlanders, visiting that province and observing the approach of a Nova Scotia license plate, take refuge in a culvert. These furious manifestations of the natives are no doubt caused by heredity: the impatient feet of swashbuckling forebears tread heavily upon the accelerator.

In contrast is Vancouver, founded by inlanders. Although its gaze be now upon the sea, its origins lie with the precise railroad that picks its cautious way through the Rockies. So in Vancouver even the pedestrians obey the traffic lights, as though they were block signals and the Trans-Canada might be coming through.

Then there is Calgary, where they have a Stampede every day of the year. The city fathers have never bothered to erect stop street signs, for they would have been knocked down long ago and carried back to the reservations. They are good-hearted about homicide in Calgary, although there is no use expecting a motorist who has hit you to stop and pick up your body. They never stop for anything in a chuck-wagon race, so why turn sissy when riding an automobile?

The last notable place on the list is Sudbury, where they have twenty-seven car wrecks every pay day. When the miners come above ground, they emit loud yells and run for their cars. After that there is no other security for tourists than to go down and get a good safe job in the mines.

Annual Bible Society Meeting

was approved by vote of the meeting, viz:—

President, Mr. T. J. Barron; Vice-President, Mr. J. S. Giles; Recording-Secretary, Mrs. L. Morris; Corr. Secretary, Mrs. W. Bradley, Assistant Corr. Secretary, Miss Elizabeth MacKimmie; Treasurer, Mr. J. Skuffham.

The speaker for the evening, Rev. James Adams, B.A., of Montreal, gave a most interesting address on "The Indians of Canada" and the work done among them by the Bible Society.

His address was illustrated by a set of very fine coloured slides showing groups of Indians with their tepees and canoes. Others showed women at work, and pictures of buffaloes, beavers, moose, red fox and other animals upon which the Indians depend for their living. Photographs of several celebrated Indian chiefs were shown, one of whom had translated the Gospel of St. John into the language of his tribe. This chief was the famous Joseph Brant. There were photos also of several missionaries to the Indians and some showing their system of phonetic symbols by which the Indians were taught to read.

A collection was taken near the close of the meeting, amounting to $16.17. This, along with the amount above stated and some further receipts, brought the total up to $177.27. For the last two years Lachute has ranked third of all the branch societies of the Montreal Auxiliary in contributions.

After the last hymn the meeting closed with the benediction by Rev. Mr. Rosborough.

Montreal Brotherhood Visit Brownsburg

Brownsburg—A memorable service was held in the United Church Sunday evening when members of the Montreal Brotherhood Federation were present and participated in a very helpful and inspiring manner. The intention was a friendly visit to the meeting of the Men's League, which took place immediately following the evening service, but having arrived in good time the Montreal visitors were invited to take charge.

Some ten members of the Federation motored out and were welcomed by the Minister. Those taking part included Albert H. Veale, president of the Federation, who conducted the service, C. R. Racine, reading the Scripture lesson, J. F. M. Parkes, who led in prayer and also sang, Alex. Gordon who delivered an inspiring address. The choir was present in good numbers, Mr. Frank Steere rendering a solo very acceptably.

Immediately following the service the meeting, which was the opening gathering for the season of the Men's League, took place downstairs, in which the brethren from Montreal heartily joined. Another helpful aspect of the occasion was the tasty spread of refreshments by the ladies. Thanks to the ladies were voiced by the president of the Montreal group, Mr. A. H. Veale, supported by Mr. Wm. Guynn, General Secretary.

The sentiments of the Men's League were presented to the company in well chosen words by their president, Mr. Wallace Wilson. Arrangements were completed for the local delegation to the Brotherhood Convention in Montreal next Saturday afternoon and Sunday. They include Messrs. Frank Hazel, Jas. Cunningham, Jack Seary, Lloyd Roberts and C. E. Wheeler. At the meeting of the Men's League next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock a resume of the Convention will be given by the delegation attending.

100 Club Masquerade Ball Is Purely a Charity Effort

BUFFHAM'S ORCHESTRA ONE OF OTTAWA'S FINEST

For what is forecast as the social hit of the season—the Lachute Hundred Club's masquerade and fancy dress ball—a new orchestra has been engaged... new, that is, to local dance enthusiasts. Geo. Buffham with his seven-piece band plays regularly for the R.C.M.P. dances and at the Chateau Laurier; this unit is considered by some to be the finest orchestra in the Capital.

It is stressed this social event is arranged solely for the Club's charity funds. Those who attend will be aiding a good community enterprise, apart from enjoying an evening of rare pleasure with good friends. This is an invitation dance; the patronage will be selective.

The spirit of Hallowe'en will be carried out in the fancy costumes of the dancers. Prizes will be awarded for costumes. Although these are optional, masks will be worn, by order. A fine attendance is anticipated on this notable evening, October 29th, at Lachute Auditorium.

Safety Awards Go to Brownsburg C-I-L Plants

The Brownsburg Ammunition Division of C-I-L having gone 317 days without a lost-time accident, have become the winners of the General Manager's prize offered under the C-I-L No-Accident Record plan. At the National Safety Congress in Kansas City, Brownsburg Chemical Division was awarded one of the National Safety Awards for a perfect score in one of their safety contests.

Canadian Safety Fuse Co. has also been awarded the General Manager's prize under the No-Accident Plan.

Etiquet of Tea Drinking

Interests Japanese Girls

In the strenuous life of modern Japan, it is not uncommon for young women to take lessons in the etiquet of tea drinking, according to an authority in the Washington Post. All Japanese women want to master the tea ceremonial and the art of flower arrangement.

The tea ceremony is unique in Japan. Once a secular pastime—it was originally introduced from China by Buddhist monks of the Zen sect—it has come to be a cult of esthetic entertainment. And no matter how westernized a Japanese woman may become, she still enjoys taking part in the tea ceremony—one of the most impressive traditional remnants in Japan.

In this connection the etiquet of the tea ceremony provides that certain subjects are taboo while it is being carried out. The party isn't supposed to talk about money, or politics or religion but may discuss philosophy and traditions.

Chows Good Sledge Dogs

Natives of Northern China, born and reared to draw sledges over frozen wastes, the chow's steadfast, purposeful eye is indicative of their inbred ability to keep their gaze on the trail and their minds on the destination ahead. They have an amazing instinct to find their way through a country that is entirely new to them; and if they become separated from their masters in a crowd, they do not become confused as many dogs do, running this way and that, but very calmly and confidently thread their way through the throng until they find the man for whom they are looking.

THE GUARDS ARE 'AT HOME'

An interesting picture shows one of the Guardsmen at Caterham Barracks, in Surrey, England, escorting guests from a visit to the Gas Chamber.

No Better Friend

A better friend I'll never find
Or one that's half as true and kind
As my old dog, that day by day Grows fonder of me every way.

Unselfish to the 'nth degree,
In every way he proves to be,
And when my heart with grief is torn,
His sympathy he, too, will mourn.

If by perchance abides with me,
Somehow, he feels it instantly,
And by some antic will express
His knowledge of my happiness.

But sometimes, when I meet his eyes
And watch them fill with glad surprise,
I cannot help but feel that he Beholds the man I ought to be.

AUNT JEAN HERSELF

SELECTING A LEADER

There was such a busy gathering
By the old deserted mill,
And sounds of great excitement
Rang out with every trill.

The birds were getting ready
To leave for a warmer clime,
All they needed was a leader
To get them there on time.

After some very heated voting
They chose the biggest robin
Because he was no coward
But would keep on bob-bob-bobbing;

His eyes were keen and busy,
He was sure to find the route,
And when he saw an enemy
He'd scream out "Poot! poot! poot!"

THE SAUCY THING (Continued)

Daisy, who had been watching Muffitts' wild gallop around the pasture, had recognised her and had run towards her to snuff her lovingly and to bite her neck playfully as she used to do in the previous summer.
But Muffitts, in the stable so long had forgotten Daisy for the moment and would not allow her to come near. With a shrill neigh of displeasure she rushed at her, so angry-looking that Billy exclaimed from his perch on the top of the high gate-post, "Oh! the saucy thing! I didn't think she would act like that, Dad. Look! she is going to kick some of them." This as Muffitts turned and threatened them one and all with her heels.

"Don't worry, son, she won't kick them if they keep back. She has not recognised them yet, in her surprise at seeing them so unexpectedly. She will make friends with them soon."

Calling to old Toby to come out from amongst his wife's prize chickens and let them eat their dinner in peace, Mr. Blair hurried off to the house to get ready to go to the village. Billy sat on the fence as long as he had time to, and left rather reluctantly to pick potatoes when Sam called that they were waiting for him. Muffitts had not made friends with Daisy or any of the others, much to his disappointment, but threatened them with teeth and heels every time they approached her.

"The saucy thing," said Billy sorrowfully to himself as he walked away, "and I thought she would be so glad to see Daisy again." He did not know that Muffitts' nostrils had been so filled with scents and stable and harness, and of cows and human beings, that she had now almost forgotten her friends of last summer, and Daisy as one of them.
All she could think of just yet was that she had her freedom, and it keeping it meant keeping everything away from her, she would keep those horses out of reach! This sense of freedom, so lovely at first, was not so thrilling when it began to be near the stable supper-time. Muffitts raised her head and whinnied for her accustomed dish of oats, so many times that the baby colt trotted over to see what was the matter with her.
Muffitts stared at it in surprise for some time. She had never seen a horse as small as this before. Surely this wee creature could not harm her. She reached out her soft pink nose and sniffed it wonderingly.
Where could a creature as small as this have come from?

For some moments the two horses,

one tiny the other big and tall, stood silently sniffing each other, while the colt's mother watched with one eye as she cropped her supper from the fresh clover and every few minutes gave a short warning call to her baby, to be careful and not make too free with Muffitts. But Muffitts did not hurt it. She had decided that it was much too small and cute to be harmful, and was rather glad to have it stay close to her for a time.

Seeing that she was getting into a gentler frame of mind Bobs, the year-old colt attempted to come loser too, but although Muffitts did not threaten to kick or bite him she rolled her eyes back in a way that he did not like. So he stayed where he was.

This went on for a day or so, until gradually the other horses made friends with her. All but Daisy, who had been too dreadfully hurt by Muffitts' first reception of her to try to make friends again. Seeing that she did not attempt to be friendly, Muffitts, who was beginning to remember things, went after her, following her everywhere she went and it was not long until they were to be seen standing as they used to be season before with their heads resting on each other's necks. And when once more, lured to harness by a dish of oats, Muffitts let Billy slip a halter over her head and lead her away to do her share of the ploughing work. Daisy cried and cried after her. But there was no reply. Muffitts had gone back to work, and was too far away to hear her.

Today Anniversary of the Battle of Trafalgar

Today, October 21st, marks the anniversary of the battle of Trafalgar, when the British fleet whipped the combined French and Spanish fleets. That was in 1805.

Horatio Nelson, the British admiral, had but 27 ships. The combined enemy fleets totalled 33. Though Nelson lost his life, eighteen enemy ships were captured by his double column manoeuvring, and Napoleon's sea power was no more.

Nelson was only 47 when he was killed. Had he not pursued the French fleet to the West Indies and back to Trafalgar, Napoleon's 200,000 troops at Boulogne might have invaded England and the subsequent course of history been changed.

Nelson's last challenging words, "England expects every man to do his duty" appear in enduring bronze at the base of his monument in Trafalgar Square, London.

Courageous or Foolhardy?

Queen Mary is the name of a great ocean-going liner. It is also the name of a little ocean-going ketch owned by Captain W. A. Crowell of Nova Scotia.
This hardy 60-year-old fisherman recently sailed his little vessel alone from Halifax to Vancouver via the Panama Canal. Considering the hazards of storms and health, some will ponder whether the year-and-a-quarter trip proved courage or something else. His black spaniel, Togo, considered it just good fun.

When another can make you hate, he is in control—not you.

FRANK E. EARLE, Main Street

Mrs. N. Holland Guest Speaker Before W.I. Study Group

The second school, which came into existence in 1905, headed by Robert Service, was sensational and short-lived, and has had no permanent following. The only well-known survivor of the group, living in Canada, is R. C. Stead, for since the war Robert Service has remained in England.

The third period began in 1909 and lasted until about 1915. Its leader was the late Marjorie Pickthall and its writers followed the saner principles and methods of the first school, introducing the freshness of their later age. Its survivors are numerous, the most representative being Arthur Stringer, Lucy Montgomery Macdonald, Nellie L. Mc-Clung, Katherine Hale, F. W. Wallace, Frank L. Packard, Archie Mc-Kishnie, and the poets Lloyd Roberts and Wilson Macdonald.

The fourth and latest is the Realistic Period. Its chief exponents in fiction are Mazo de la Roche, Laura Goodman Salverson, Frederick Philip Grove, and Martha Ostenso, if we may claim the last-named from the States.

Stephen Leacock is Canada's greatest humorous essayist since Thomas Chandler Haliburton, of pre-Confederation fame. Other humorists having achieved national repute are Bernard K. Sandwell, and Beverly Baxter, who lives in England.

Canadian poetry has been slower to identify itself with the Realistic School than that of the States or England. Audrey Alexandra Brown of Nanaimo, B.C., is considered by many to be the greatest of the younger poets.

At the close a vote of thanks was extended by Mrs. J. Mason, seconded by Mrs. C. Clunie.

A pleasing feature of the afternoon was the presence of Mrs. R. M.
Beckett, President of the Women's Canadian Club of Port William, who brought greetings from there. Mrs.
S. S. Campbell gave a piano solo, and Mrs. A. Taylor sang "In the Garden of Tomorrow". The singing of the National Anthem brought an enjoyable meeting to a close. Refreshments were afterwards served in the dining room, when a happy time of reunion took place with the lady visitors. Mrs. Holland, whom the community is pleased to claim as a native of Lachute, presented four books of recent fiction for the Institute's library.

First Woman: "How long did you know your husband before you were married?"

Second Woman: "I didn't know him at all—I just thought I did."

Shoe Care

The life of a pair of shoes depends largely on the care given them. If possible, avoid wearing the same pair two days running. They are all the better for a rest.

Put them on trees immediately they are taken off. If damp, dry slowly in a warm room. Home-made trees for the children can be made by filling a cretonne bag, cut to the shape of the shoe, with bran or sawdust. Incidentally, they will absorb the moisture from the leather.

Patent leather will not crack easily if rubbed twice a week with vaseline. When cracked and old-looking, it freshens up wonderfully with a coat of good varnish. To darken fawn or tan shoes, rub with a rag dipped in ammonia, repeating the process if necessary; then polish with a dark shoe polish. To remove grease marks from light shoes, moisten a little French chalk with methylated spirits and rub well into the affected part. Repeat if the mark is obstinate.

—Exchagne.

EQUALLY DANGEROUS

"Too much dancing is likely to affect the heart", says a doctor . . . And so is too much sitting out.

"I've got to scrub out the toilet bowl and how I hate it."
"Better use GILLETTE'S LYE and flush off the stains."

No need to rub and scrub

Use Gillett's Pure Flake Lye once a week . . . it takes off yellow stains in a jiffy . . . keeps clogged drains running freely . . . banishes unpleasant odors. Use Gillett's Lye in solution* for all kinds of heavy cleaning tasks. It just washes the dirt away. Saves you hours of hard work. Always keep a tin handy.

* Never dissolve lye in hot water.

Specially Written for Readers of The Watchman
By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

WHAT MOTHER'S DON'T KNOW

The ice-man has just stopped along the street. A carefully brought up little girl, whose mother is almost over-careful of her food and who takes great precautions against contact with germs, called, "Mister, will you give me a piece of ice?" Obliviously he threw down a good sized piece. It was too big to handle. She looked at it for a minute, then picked it up and dropped it on the sidewalk. No luck. It didn't break. She tried three times before it finally broke. Studying the pieces carefully, she picked out one the right size and ran along happily sucking her ice. Maybe the germs will freeze. Anyhow the little girl does not care whether the sidewalk was dirty or not, and perhaps her mother will never know.

BLUE MONDAY

We hear of Blue Monday. But it is never Blue Monday to me. I get at least twice as much done on Mondays as on any other day in the week. If there were no Mondays, this column would never get written. Down here Monday is a big day to me—it is the day most of the Ontario Weeklies arrive. No matter what I am doing, I stop to read the home paper. I take jolly good care that I am not in the middle of doing anything I could not leave when the mailman arrives. The other Weeklies are put aside until I have time to read them but there is always time for news from home. Then both the Friday and Saturday editions of "The Globe and Mail" come on Monday. Tuesday is a bad day as there is no Toronto paper. I often wish I had enough will-power to save the Saturday paper to read on Tuesday. If Sunday is a day of rest it means renewed strength and energy for Monday.

THE LOWLY HAMBURG

When I buy roasts, or steaks or chops, I want the very choicest cut that I can buy. But I offset that expense by the frequent use of the cheaper cuts and Hamburg in many different guises appears in the menu. Sometimes I use a can of tomato soup, or part of a can depending on the number served, and make the gravy with the soup instead of water. Or I may brown the meat cakes in the usual way and just partially cook them, then put them in a casserole or baking dish and pour over them a can of tomato soup mixed with a little water. Bake in a moderate oven, until the meat is cooked. This is a good meat dish to choose when you are not sure just when dinner is to be served. Sometimes after my meat cakes are browned in the frying pan, I put a teaspoon of catsup or chili-sauce on them, turn and put the same amount on the other side, browning that in turn. This makes the grandest gravy. Today, I seasoned my meat cakes as usual with salt, pepper and scraped onion, and instead of forming them into cakes, moulded them to resemble thick chops, put a tablespoon catsup on each and put them on a greased pan and baked them for a half-hour in a moderately hot oven of 400 degrees. They were very good. Sometimes I brown the meat in a little bacon drippings, without forming into cakes, then add a can of soup, either tomato or vegetable and simmer slowly for about an hour. I tried mushroom soup, but to my surprise, it added very little flavor. Then there are meat loaves galore. Add a beaten egg and some bread squeezed out of water, if you want it to slice nicely. Have you made a stuffed meat loaf? Divide your mixture into halves. Put one half on a greased baking dish, cover with a thick layer of your favourite poultry dressing, and cover with the remainder of the meat. If you want this to slice nicely when cold, you had better add a little egg to the dressing. Don't feel apologetic when you serve Hamburg. Feature it.

GUM-DROP CAKE
½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, ½ cup milk, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 cup raisins, ¼ lb. gum-drops.

Cream butter and sugar, add well-beaten eggs. Sift in dry ingredients, adding alternately with the milk. Add raisins and gumdrops, cut in pieces. Be sure that the gumdrops are fresh and take out any black ones. This is an attractive looking cake, tastes good, is a bit different and keeps well. What more can you ask from any cake?

APPLE UPSIDE-DOWN PUDDING

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a medium sized frying pan and sprinkle over it 3 tablespoons brown sugar. Arrange apples, pared and cut in eighths. Shake in little cinnamon over this. Cover with the following batter:

¼ cup butter, ¾ cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, 2¼ cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Mix in the usual cake method, measuring the flour after sifting and bake at 375 degrees. This amount of batter is too large for a small family and I bake a part of it in muffin tins to re-heat the next day and use as peach short-cake (with canned peaches), or with a pudding sauce—thus providing two desserts in one fell swoop.

Windows

By Helen Welshimer

I scrubbed the windows of my house today, and suddenly
The sky that had been dim became A shining canopy.

The trees, whose dull leaves
Were dusty, crumbling things, Discovered vibrancy again
And danced on brighter wings.

I scrubbed the window of my heart,
Washed out false hopes, old sin,
Worn grudges, jealousies—tonight
New stars are shining in!

—From "Good Housekeeping"

We build our future, thought by thought
For good or ill, we know it not.
Yet so the Universe was wrought.

Thought is another name for fate
Choose then thy destiny and wait,
For love brings love and hate brings hate.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox

MELANCHOLY

"Thou wouldst be joyous, wouldst thou?" says Borrow. "Then be a fool."

It is quite probable that a tendency to mental depression is inherited and that if we should ever succeed in breeding melancholy out of the human race we should also have bred out all of our most sensitive and brilliant minds. On the other hand, if the eugenicists remove the feeble minded they will have taken from our midst the only group over which melancholy holds no sway.

Attacks of melancholy come and go, often without any discernible cause. Physicians learn to accept with reservations the gratitude of their depressed patients knowing fully well that the complaint is likely to recur. They know too that a fresh attack of depression may result from a fall in love or on the stock exchange. Malaria and influenza are most to be feared among infections. The strain of childbirth is another not uncommon cause. In such cases the doctor may help by hastening convalescence or by prescribing treatment to lessen strain and shock.

What of melancholy that comes and goes abruptly without apparent cause? In such cases the patient can get more help from within than from without. Experience teaches that the cloud will pass. Let him hold on to hope and so to courage. Let him avoid self pity, that most subtle and dangerous enemy of moral self control. As a steady policy both in depression and in health let him cultivate interests outside of himself. A life of wide and varied interests is in the end his surest line of defense.

Apple kucken and peach kucken are made by rolling a small amount of dough into a sheet about ¼ inch in thickness to fit a baking pan. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Then arrange slices of pared apples or peaches over the dough. Sprinkle with more sugar and cinnamon and let rise and bake as usual. Dried fruits can be used in place of fresh. Soak dried fruit for an hour in warm water and drain before using.

BAKED VEGETABLES

Do you ever bake your vegetables instead of always boiling or steaming them? Baking really is an ideal method of cooking most of the Fall vegetables because their flavor is preserved and none of the valuable mineral salts are lost in the water that necessarily is used for the boiling. As we begin to rely on canned vegetables more and more as the weeks go by we will find that they come in for their share of baking, too.

Besides, a worth-while economy of fuel can be effected if the vegetables are baked, since, with the oven going for meat or some other baking, one heating element does all the work. Carrots, beets, corn, cabbage, cauliflower, squash, lima beans, tomatoes, peppers—all the Fall vegetables lend themselves to baking. Onions are delicious baked in their husks and served with butter, salt and pepper just as you would baked potatoes.

Tomatoes are good baked whole without stuffing. Later in the winter canned tomatoes are invaluable in various baked dishes.

Beets are amazingly good baked just as you bake potatoes. Or they can be pared and diced and baked in a closely covered casserole with butter and salt and pepper and a bit of sugar and lemon juice.

There is an almost endless list that can be baked as simply and satisfactorily as they usually are boiled.

The vegetables known as "strong juiced" are better if they are par-boiled before combining with the seasonings for baking.

Many of the vegetable dishes are hearty enough to make almost a meal in themselves with a hearty dessert. Baked acorn or Des Moines squash are an example.

To remove grease spots from upholstered furniture dip a small, stiff brush into a dry-cleaning fluid and moisten an entire section of the chair at one time, rubbing lightly. Dry with a clean, absorbent cloth. Repeat if necessary, finishing one portion before beginning another.

It is important that fall-planted bulbs should be planted at their proper depth. While some kinds will find their own level after planting, gradually working their way up or down as the case may be, it's much better to set them right in the beginning. Be sure, too, to plant them right side up. In nearly every species the most pointed end is the top. Crocuses are set three inches deep, jonquils, four; tulip and hyacinth, five, and lilies and narcissus six.

Hiking enthusiasts who want to enjoy nature in comfort were cautioned by the leader of an adult hiking group against wearing high heels. Recommending well-fitting Oxfords with low built-up heels as the ideal footwear for hiking, he advised his followers to outfit themselves with sturdy garments that can withstand rough ups and down.

KITCHEN USES FOR LEMONS

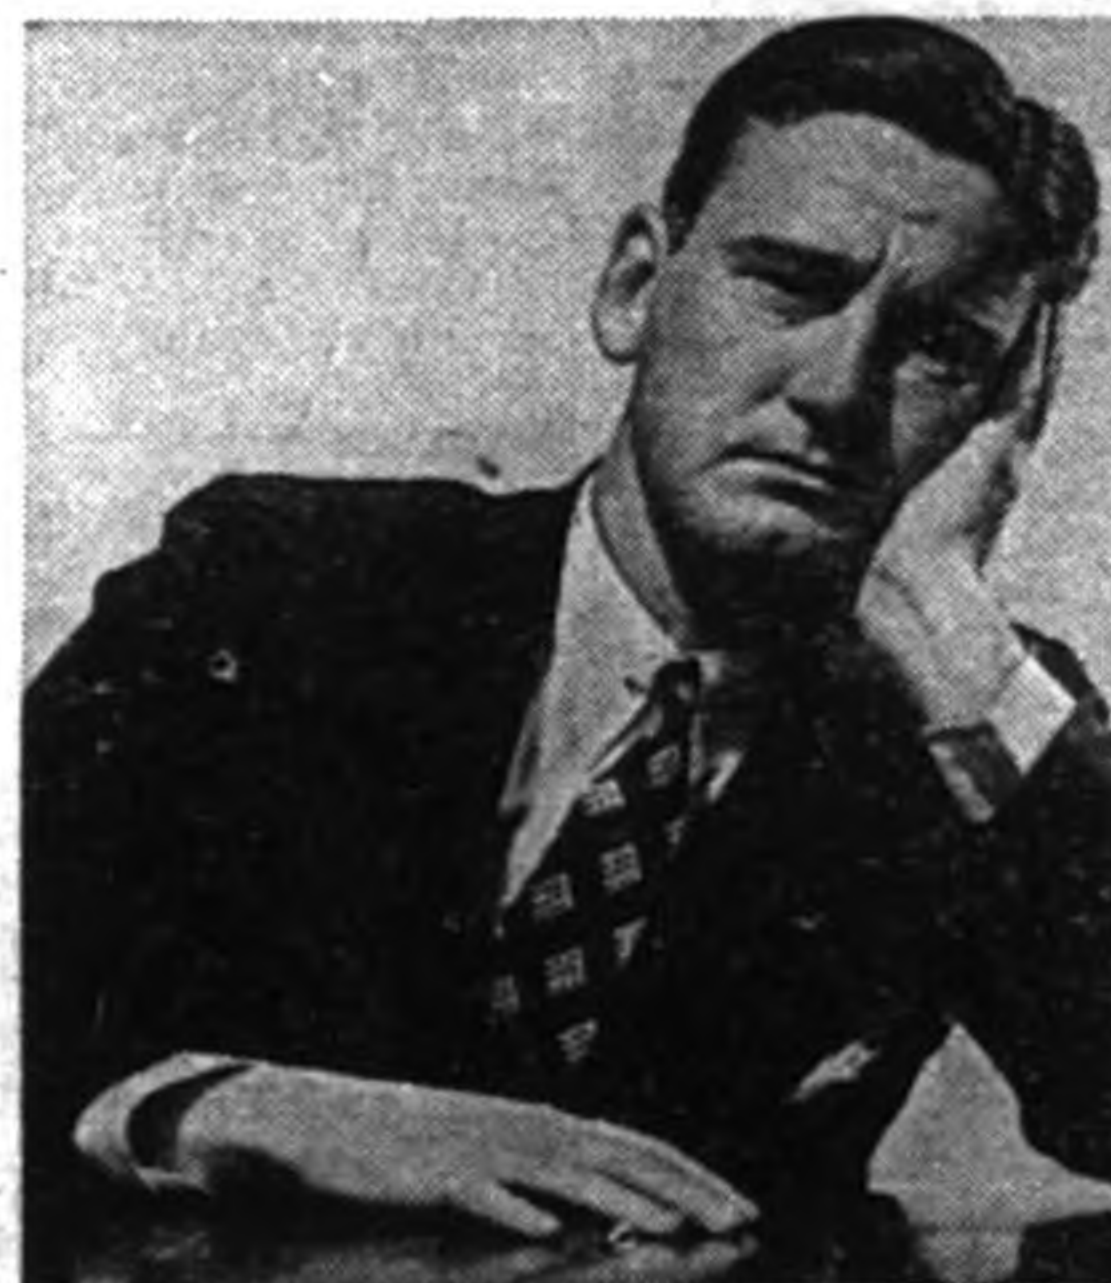

By Betty Barclay

For Aluminum Ware: When aluminum ware becomes dull or black, clean with a cloth dipped in lemon juice. Then rinse in warm water.

For Copper and Brass: After juice has been extracted, dip lemon rinds in salt to clean tarnished copper or brass.

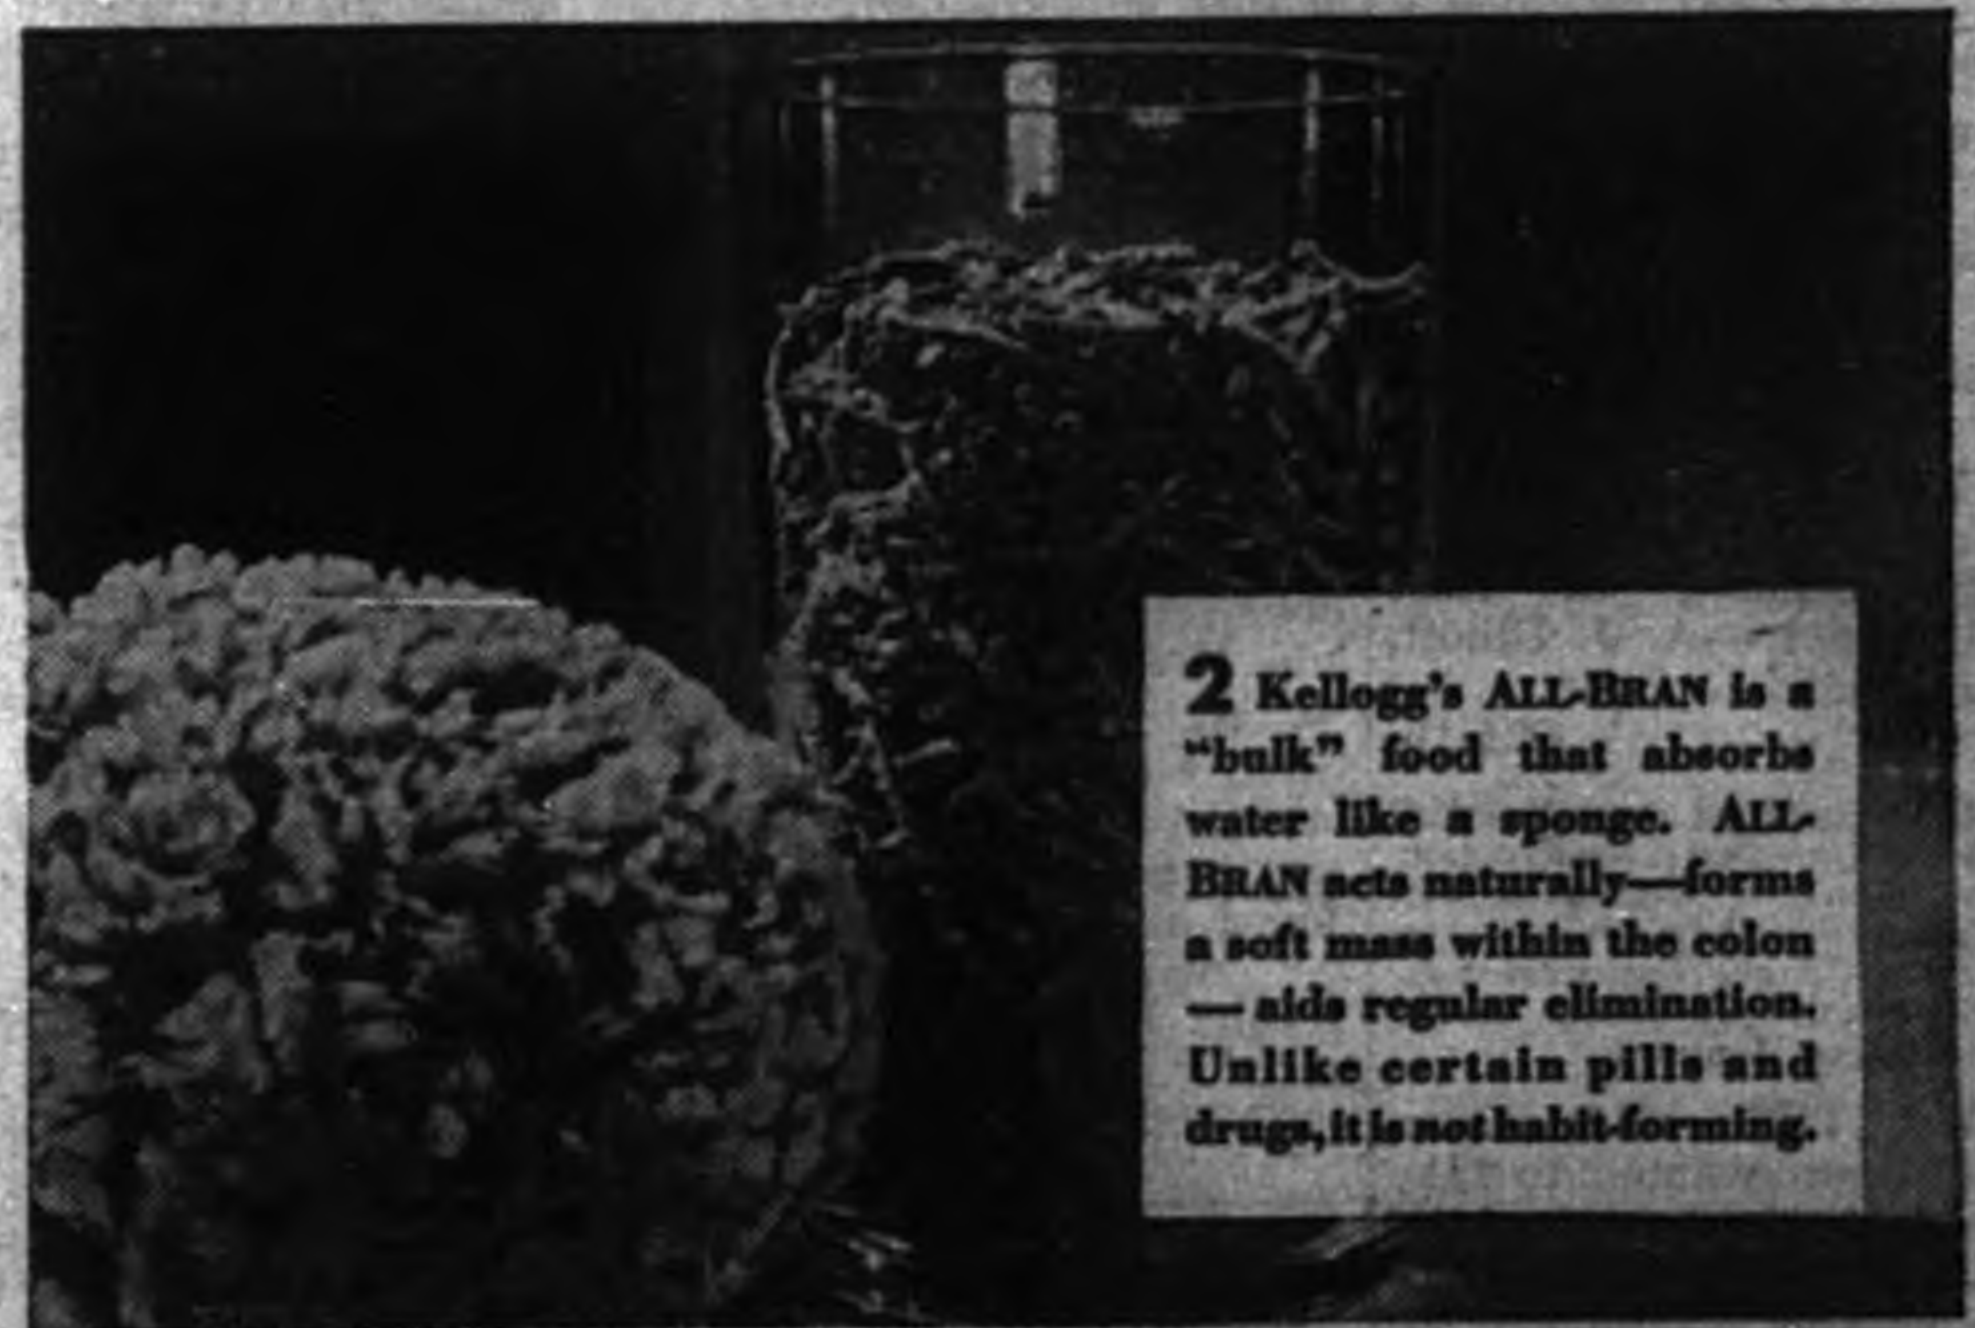

For Hands: Immediately after dishwashing, drop a little lemon juice in the palms and rub well over hands to keep them soft and white.

THE FOOD WAY

1 Did you know that the most common type of constipation is caused usually by insufficient "bulk" in meals? Neglect of constipation may bring headaches, loss of appetite and energy. You feel miserable.

TO RELIEVE

2 Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a "bulk" food that absorbs water like a sponge. ALL-BRAN acts naturally—forms a soft mass within the colon—side regular elimination. Unlike certain pills and drugs, it is not habit-forming.

CONSTIPATION

3 Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or fruits, or cook into appetizing muffins, breads, etc. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Severe cases, with each meal. Buy this food at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Pirate Days

Until 1820 Turkish warships operating from North African ports as pirates used to terrorize the commerce of the Mediterranean. Captive sailors were carried off by them to the slave market in Algiers or the prisons in Salles. In the Seventeenth century Barbary corsairs used to waylay ships in the Bristol channel, and once a Salles rover was caught in the mouth of the Thames. It was from Malta that resistance was most effectively organized by the Knights of St. John, who held the island until it was surrendered by their grand master to Napoleon in 1798. The island passed to Britain by the peace of the Amiens (1802) and it is the headquarters of the Mediterranean fleet.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Oct. 24th, is "Probation After Death." The Golden Text is: "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." (Matthew 24: 13). The following passages are selected from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" (Psalms 27: 1) "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." (Psalms 23: 4).

"We cannot spend our days here in ignorance of the Science of Life, and expect to find beyond the grave a reward for this ignorance. Death will not make us harmonious and immortal as a recompense for ignorance. If here we give no heed to Christian Science, which is spiritual and eternal, we shall not be ready for spiritual Life hereafter." (Science and Health, page 409).

Notes and Comment from Brownsburg

We are pleased to note that Mr. E. Kerr, of the C-I-L works, has succeeded in winning the Arthur B. Purvis Trophy emblematic of golfing supremacy amongst the many divisions of C-I-L. Contestants from all over Canada participated. Disposing of the Toronto and Montreal entrants was no mean feat, and Mr. Kerr is to be heartily congratulated.

Though somewhat late in starting, the Highways Department deserves credit for the many needed improvements which have been carried out in and about this district during the past few months. Surfacing of the Lachute - Brownsburg road was among the many works attended to, but we are of the opinion that in their eagerness to cover such a vast neglected area, the Department did not take the time and care necessary to produce a lasting job. Admitting that this road has not been completed, we nevertheless contend that much expensive material has been wasted and will continue to be so, by the very poor condition of the shoulders. No binding material has been applied to hold this portion in place, and in addition to being a waste it is likely to become a danger.

In the village of Brownsburg a very bad condition of affairs exists. Two large culverts carrying the surface water under the road at the junctions are filled tight with silt, with the result the water flows down along the road surface. If this condition is allowed to remain until the spring rains pour down, the probability is that very extensive damage will be done to the roads, nullifying the efforts of the present attempt at improvement. Again, at the French Hill, a positive danger exists and it is high time repairs were expected before the courts will be called upon to decide the costs of an accident. These matters possibly come within the province of the Village Council; however, the fact remains.

PROMPT ARREST AND JAIL SENTENCE FOR TWO AUTO THIEVES

COUPLE APPREHENDED NEAR ST. HERMAS

RECEIVE PRISON TERM OF ONE YEAR

Recovery of a stolen car in 15 minutes and arrest of the thieves one hour after the robbery is a record which should discourage auto thieves in this town. Two young Montrealers who gave their names as Richard Larocque, 19, of 1000 St. Philippe street (said to be a former resident of St. Andrews), and Alphonse Legault, 18, of 724 Walker street, were arrested at 1 p.m. last Saturday just east of St. Hermas, after stealing a car from Foundry street belonging to Herbert Cowan, a mechanic at Deacon's Garage.

Standing trial at the Court House here Monday afternoon, before District Magistrate D. Lalande, Larocque and Legault pleaded guilty to the theft and the judge imposed the minimum sentence for such a charge, namely, a year in jail for both offenders.

The engine of Cowan's car, it appears, had been overheating. During the lunch hour on Saturday he had left the engine running and the radiator covered to heat up a radiator-cleaning fluid. He had gone into his house, and later his mother noticed the two youths entering the car; they had driven away before Cowan could reach them. Telephoning to Deacon's, he was soon joined by Sidney Roberts, in whose car they gave chase.

ENJOYABLE EVENT BY MARGARET RODGER MEML. CHURCH

The supper given by the ladies of Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church on Saturday evening measured fully up to the reputation established by them, and was well patronized in spite of the unfavorable weather. The concert which followed was also well attended and, judging from remarks overheard, the standard of entertainment was quite above the ordinary. Several music lovers remarked they had enjoyed every item of the program from start to finish.

The artists responsible for the arrangement of this fine program were a group of five young Montreal ladies, several of whom have won a high standing in musical circles there.

The piano selections by Miss Margaret Archibald were beautifully played, and it would be difficult to select any one as being finer than the others. Some of the listeners expressed great appreciation of Chopin's Polonaise Militaire and Waltz in B Minor, and of the manner (Continued on page 3)

New Company Takes Over Sash and Door Factory

Under the name of the Lachute Lumber and Manufacturing Company, Limited, a new concern has bought outright the mill and woodworking plant of Edmund Charlebois in Lachute Mills. The president and managing director is Marcel H. Gagné, who is now in full charge. He is exerting his efforts to instill new life in this old established business and to meet demands in millwork with every satisfaction. Mr. Gagné has spent 15 years in the lumber business, both in Montreal and in this locality.

PROVINCIAL TRANSPORT COMPANY PLANS NEW MOTOR-COACH TERMINAL FOR MONTREAL

INNOVATION SHOULD BE WELCOMED BY AUTOBUS PASSENGERS

The Provincial Transport Company will shortly build a motor coach terminal at the southeast corner of Drummond and Dorchester Streets, Montreal, on a site now occupied by the American Presbyterian Church. Demolition of the church building, and residences to the south thereof, will begin shortly.

The dimensions of the three storey terminal and office building will be 53' x 110'. Construction will be steel and concrete frame with exterior walls of brick finished with smooth white cement.

The central passenger waiting room will be 50' x 60'. At the east end of the passenger waiting room will be ticket offices, travel bureau and baggage rooms. The west end will house news and tobacco stands, refreshment counter, etc. Stairs will lead down to the rest and wash rooms in the basement.

The main entrance will be on Dorchester Street, in centre of the building.

Phone Line Installation and Pruning of Trees

The Bell Telephone linemen are still busily engaged in changing over the company's lines for the new system shortly to be put in operation. With the replacing of poles and cables, a considerable amount of pruning has been necessary on the roadside trees, but this work has been carried out with careful consideration. The power and telephone utility companies always recognize the fact that trees belong to the proprietors, and while it is necessary that the wires must be safely installed, the employees are cautioned to do their work with the least possible damage; they are impressed that trees are not replaceable, and they are an asset to the community. Citizens may feel confident that the linemen have endeavored to follow this ruling.

The outbreak started in the rear of Mr. Webster's house, and as flames spread rapidly to the upper storey Mr. and Mrs. Webster made a hurried escape in their night attire. The house and contents were completely destroyed. Mrs. Murray, sleeping in the next-door dwelling, made her escape, and although the contents of her home were saved, the house

Excavating for Construction New Catholic Girls' School

ALCIDAS LAURIN IS CONTRACTOR

Excavation work commenced Monday morning on a new Catholic girls' school, on a site between the convent and the Calder property, Grace Street. This tract of land was purchased from the convent by the Lachute Catholic School Commission. The contract was awarded by the Commission to Alcidias Laurin, who completed construction of the new St. Anastasia Church earlier this year. The school, which will cost approximately $26,000, is to be a two-storey structure 75 ft. by 51 ft., finished in brick, with a basement containing a hall and recreation rooms for the children. The class-rooms will occupy the upper floors.

was burned completely. The total loss is estimated here at around $4,000. Insurance was carried on both houses.

With no fire hydrants or equipment, nothing could be done by local citizens to subdue the fire. The Lachute brigade, arriving on the scene, pumped water from neighbors' cisterns and were successful in keeping the flames from Commodore Horace Davis' home and neighboring buildings only 15 feet from the blaze.

ing. Directly opposite, at rear, are the stairs leading to coach loading platforms, which extend south to rear of coach yard. This platform will have a canopy over its entire length.

The coaches will approach the terminal from the rear of the property and in leaving will pass on either side of the terminal building. The design shown is from a sketch by Messrs. Shorey & Ritchie, the architects, and expresses the nature and purpose of the building, which is in keeping with the modern trend in construction, design and equipment.

The upper floors will be used by the executive and general office staff.

The new terminal will be Eastern Canadian headquarters of the Provincial Transport Company, Colonial Coach Lines Ltd., Champlain Coach Lines, Inc., Frontier Coach Lines, Inc., Greyhound Lines and National Trailways System.

The real estate negotiations were handled by Messrs. C. S. W. Baker and J. P. Copland.

Historical Society of Argenteuil County

NEWS BULLETIN

The Executive of the Historical Society, under the presidency of Dr. H. B. Cushing, met in the vestry of the United Church, St. Andrews, on Saturday, Oct. 23rd, and arrived at the following important decisions:

I. To hold the next semi-annual meeting of the Society in the Carillon Barracks during the early summer of 1938, when the tide of tourist pleasure-travel is at its height, and for the special purpose of installing a Loan Exhibition of antiquarian relics on a scale that would warrant a charge for admission for local or tourist visitors who are not members of the Society.

II. To extend the length of this Exhibition period as long as it yielded a profitable revenue, after the cost of a pro tem caretaker (preferably a carpenter) was met, and at the end of this period, the lenders and donors reserve the option to withdraw their more valuable treasures till such time as the structure is ready for their more permanent security.

III. To devote the intervening months to organizing our members into permanent local branches of the Society, as has been done in Pte.

Fortune and Carillon, and co-operating with them in locating and cataloguing the kind of antiquities that would make this venture a signal success.

This line of procedure has been decided on for the following reasons:

(a) All can study at close range the various problems that are involved in laying the foundation of an ideal museum.

(b) The plan would be in accord with the advice of our guide books, to build gradually from the bottom to meet the needs of an expanding museum, and thus avoid the risk of regrettable mistakes.

(c) Such a preliminary loan exhibition affords time for the proper classification of the exhibits needed for the creative and educational aims of a history-teaching museum.

(d) In the meantime the income from membership fees will continue to augment our bank deposits.

(e) This plan for organized local branches of the parent Society will prepare the way for the drive for life memberships and for the larger endowment contributions, which has not yet matured.

SINO-JAPANESE CONFLICT MAKES THEME TIMELY

REV. G. K. KING SPEAKER AT UNITED CHURCH

Rev. George K. King, B.A., returned missionary from Honan, China, delighted a large congregation in Lachute United Church last Sunday morning with an account of the work in which, for many years, he has been engaged. Mr. King also addressed the Mission Bands of the church on Monday afternoon, and gave a very interesting illustrated lecture, under auspices of the Young People's Society, on Monday evening. Mrs. King rendered a delightful vocal solo at the Sunday evening service, and she and Mr. King gave a short but greatly appreciated musical program at the Monday evening meeting. Weather Delays Roadwork, Govt. Grants to be Extended Paving of Lachute - Grenville highway, Route 8, has been held up by a prolonged spell of rain, and colonization road projects in this district are also suspended in many sections. In the northern parts particularly a morass of mud is reported to be obstructing progress among road-workers. It is learned that, in consequence of the delays, government grants on colonization roads have been extended to June 30, 1938.

Detour at Closed Section of Laurentian Highway

The Mont-Laurier highway is being widened at a point between Ste. Therese and St. Jerome, and motorists this week have been obliged to make a detour through St. Monique. It is not known how long this detour will be necessary, as the time required in widening the road and constructing culverts depends largely on the weather.

MUSH AND SENTIMENT ASIDE, A VIEWPOINT ON CLOSE RELATIONS BETWEEN CANADA AND U.S.

"The Ottawa Spotlight" By "Spectator"

Ottawa, Oct. 26th. — The significance of the recent visit to Ottawa and Toronto of Mr. Cordell Hull, secretary of state of the United States, lies in the visit being a further symbol of the goodwill between Canada and our great neighbour. No one needs to look any farther than that for any special "significance." However the peace and goodwill between the two countries may have been hidden to death by speechmakers and scribes, they remain as a comforting fact in a troubled world.

A thing that is sometimes overlooked or given too little prominence is that this friendship has undoubtedly been playing a part in cementing understanding between the United States and the British Commonwealth, and particularly at this moment in history, anything that helps to build up the moral front for peace of the Anglo-Saxon nations is certainly all to the good.

The close industrial relationship between Canada and the United States has both its good and its disturbing side. The existing trade pact, as recent figures clearly show, has brought benefits to both countries and these benefits will probably grow further in time. Canada has been helped in her development by large capital investment from across the border. The motor tourist trade brings in a substantial revenue. (Continued on page 3)

REPORT OF RECENT WOMEN'S INSTITUTE AFFAIRS IN COUNTY

(So many reports were late last month, and many branches have not yet reported for this month, that the W. I. county Publicity Convener is beginning to wonder why!)

Brownburg held a meeting stressing Publicity, with a paper read on that subject written by the county Convener of Publicity; for October they held a card party in aid of the funds, and also had moving pictures shown by the Cunard Steamship Line, to augment their finances. These pictures were most interesting.

Frontier had an interesting educational meeting with Mr. Staniforth, principal of the Brownburg School, as guest speaker. They held a reception for the teachers and presented a bride with a gift of silver, also a nice pin to a member who was leaving the community. A rocking chair was sent as a donation to fire sufferers. The roll-call was the name of a Canadian College.

Found Dead in Caboose on C.N.R. Montfort Division

James Harcourt, well known in the Ottawa Valley section here, was found dead Tuesday morning in the caboose of a C.N.R. construction train at St. Remi, where he was engaged as a foreman on railroad repairs. Coroner Dr. G. Latour was told that fellow workmen who called him at 5 a.m. found him dead in his bunk. A doctor was summoned, who found that the vic-

"Ted" Hammond Feted at Bachelors' Gathering

Approximately 35 friends of Mr. Ted Hammond, Lachute Mills, held a bachelors' supper for him at St. Andrews Inn, St. Andrews East, on Thursday evening, October 21st. There were the usual toasts to the bride- and groom-to-be, and members of the party tendered in good-natured speeches their various forms of advice—fatherly, brotherly, family, legal, etc.

A beautiful chime clock was presented by Mr. L. W. Armstrong on behalf of the those present, and which he said might be accepted as an indication of the sincerity of the 'boys' in wishing him happiness.

Three Lamarche brothers, together with Mr. R. Legault, were present with their instruments, adding to the life of the party with many well-rendered selections. A number of community songs were sung and also several solos.

The evening was most enjoyable, and proved a considerable surprise to Mr. Hammond, who knew practically nothing of the affair until late that afternoon.

tim had succumbed to acute indigestion. The coroner pronounced a verdict of death due to natural causes.

Mr. Harcourt, 58 years of age, was a resident and former mayor of New Glasgow, Que.

PROGRESS for leisure

I was not sure of my welcome when I stuck my head in the kitchen door the other day, for my wife was putting up grape jelly, and "putting-up time" is not always the best time to interrupt domestic activities. Everything was calm, however. The big preserve kettle was simmering on the electric range, and there were utensils and gadgets around of which I didn't know the uses, but there was none of the heat, steam and air of tenseness which used to pervade the kitchen in preserving time when I was a boy. I said as much to my wife.

That started us both to talking about the progress of the world since we were young, and we agreed that for us and for most of our neighbors it's a better world to live in than it was fifty years ago.

PRICES are lower

My electric light bill was pretty heavy last month. We used the range and the vacuum cleaner and a dozen other gadgets more than usual, so it cost us nearly $8 for current. But when my father first put in electric light, in 1890, the rate was $1 a month for each bulb. As costs go down, quality goes up. My first automobile, in 1906, cost $1,000, top, windshield, horn and lights extra. It could do 25 miles an hour on a smooth road if I could find one. I drive a car of the same make now. An immensely better car, its cost, complete, is under $750. Forty years ago I paid $150 for a bicycle. Better bicycles now cost around $30, because so many more are made and sold.

The things which cost more than they used to are those in whose production the labor item is the largest factor. Wages are still going up. That is all right. Higher wages means that more things will be made by machines, with workers' wages spread over more units of production.

WAGES in movies

The highest wages in any line are paid to men and women who make motion pictures. For a star actor to get $100,000 for his or her work on one picture is not uncommon. The picture companies can pay high wages because they have such a big market for their product. Twelve million Americans go to the movies every day. That means that more than two million dollars a day rolls in, and a very small percentage of that, earned by any one picture, is enough to pay high wages and leave a nice profit.

Next to the movies, the highest average wages in any manufacturing industry are to be found in the automobile business. This industry employs many times more people than the movies do, if we leave out the theatre employees. Wages of $100,000 a year are not uncommon in the automobile business, and there is as great competition among the motor companies for the services of men who are worth that, as there is between the movie studios for star actors.

My time toward easier living, speedier communications, opportunities for enjoyment and time to get more out of life than a bare living have come about because somebody believed he could make a profit by producing things which we would buy. Some have made very large profits. Many more who have tried have suffered heavy losses. The so-called profit system should properly be called the profit-and-loss system. The risk of loss is particularly great when people try to create a market for something entirely new. There are nine or ten major companies making motor cars today. I can remember when there were 300. Most lost all they invested.

That is the history of every new invention. Before it proves itself by public acceptance great risks must be taken by the men who put their money into it. Henry Ford's first two companies went broke, before he hit on the "Model T" and gave the public a car which met the need of the times. The telephone was a financial failure for years. No "sane" banker would lend a cent to the pioneer movie producers.

I have nothing but admiration for the men who had courage enough to take long chances to provide new comforts. They are welcome to their profits. And I don't believe we would have many of these modern conveniences if we did away with the profit system.

BICYCLIST IS HELD IN DEATH OF CRIPPLE

Roland Touchette, 21-year-old cyclist of St. Jerome, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Marie Louise Lacroix, 23-year-old crippled girl who was killed by an autobus on October 11, was instructed to appear in court at St. Jerome this week. He was released on the bail of $950.

Main witness at a preliminary hearing before District Magistrate Lalande was Napoleon Bastien, who testified that the young woman was riding on the handle-bars of Touchette's bicycle, and when Touchette swerved and crashed head-on into the oncoming bus, she fell beneath the vehicle. Touchette escaped injury, he said, because he seized the front bumper and hung there till the bus stopped. After the accident the victim lay unconscious beneath the rear axle of the bus, which had to be backed before she could be picked up. She was sent to a Montreal hospital, where she died the next morning. A jury held Tou-

Other witnesses gave the same evidence as Bastien. No one, however, had actually seen the bus run over the woman. Medical evidence was that she had suffered a fracture of the skull and internal injuries.

United States branch factories give employment to Canadian workmen. On the other hand stock market collapses in New York are instantaneously reflected in Canada. They have their effect all over the world but in no country is the effect so immediate or so drastic. Any drop in the industrial barometer in the United States is also reflected in Canada although not so promptly or completely as in the case of the stock markets. There is at least the constant apprehension among Canadian industrialists. There is for example more reason from the standpoint of personal interest for a Canadian industrialist to watch closely the fate of New Deal legislation in the United States than for a business man in London to do so. The industrial systems of the two countries are too much like Siamese twins for entire comfort. There must naturally always be a close relationship but Canada must also seek to develop her economy on a broader foundation if she hopes in the future to lessen the effect of these disturbing industrial repercussions from the United States.

Not belittling in any way the importance of wide trade relations with the United States, Canada will also have to bend her energies increasingly to fostering and developing her trade with imperial and foreign countries and in carrying out her own industrial path.

SLIGHT PAUSE IN UPWARD SWING IN SEPTEMBER

Canada's curve of economic activity went slightly down in September. The decline was not noteworthy as the index of the volume of business was 123.0 compared with 123.4 in August. In common stock prices, one of the 46 factors used in compiling the economic index, there was the most drastic decline. These prices dropped 12 percent. Mining was slightly down, while the timber trade, including newsprint production, advanced. Manufacturing was about on a level keel. Compared, however, with September of last year this September showed a marked advance in practically every branch of industrial activity.

Canada's export trade in September amounted to 94.2 million dollars, which was 9.1 million under the August figure but 5.3 million dollars over September 1936. Shipments to the United States amounted to 44.0 million dollars compared with 35.1 million in September 1936. Sales to the United Kingdom were 33.2 million compared with 37.2 million. The decline in sales to Britain was due to decreased wheat shipments. Export of wheat to all countries amounted to only 7.5 million compared with 20.6 million in the previous year. Exports from the West coast showed a distinct gain, sales to Japan being 2.0 million compared with 1.5 million while exports to Australia rose 87 percent from 1.7 million dollars in September 1936.

The marked increase in Dominion government revenues for the first six months of the present fiscal year, that is from April 1 to September 30, is a pretty good guarantee of the stability and extent of Canadian industrial advance over last year. Customs duties, excise taxes and duties and some small sundry items reached a total of 159.9 million dollars, a gain of 31.4 million, while income taxes collected amounted to 96.46 dollars, an increase of 15.8 million. The total increase was 47.2 million dollars, or approximately 22 percent.

NATIONAL PARK ROADS

Everyone knows that Canada each year acts as host to millions of United States motor tourists, but not so many perhaps realize the growing part in the entertainment of these visitors being played by Canada's great national parks. Most of these game preserves and scenic marvels are reached by motor car. New and better roads are being built. Within the boundaries of the parks themselves are now over 800 miles of roads.

TRUCK DESTROYED BY FIRE, FAULTY IGNITION

A spectacular blaze occurred in St. Jerome last week when a truck belonging to the Laurentian Dowel Company, Limited, of St. Jerome, caught fire and the gasoline tank exploded while parked in a lane. It is believed the fire was started by a short circuit in the electric wiring of the vehicle.

The truck was parked near a house and the driver, Gerald Desloges, had alighted to make a delivery of wood. As he was walking back towards the truck, the engine of which he had left running, flames shot from beneath the hood. In a moment the entire body of the car was a mass of fire. Desloges sounded the alarm and firemen went to the scene. The truck was destroyed in a few minutes, however, the explosion of the tank completing the wreck.

Blind Pianist to Be Heard During CBC Radio Program

Mary Munn, a blind Canadian pianist who has established herself in music circles in England, will be featured with the CBC Little Symphony Orchestra on November 4, at 10 p.m. EST, during the next broadcast of the program "Canadian Concert Hall of the Air."

RETURNED MISSIONARY FROM CHINA TELLS OF CHRISTIAN PROGRESS

Mr. King is a son of the late Dr. W. G. King, of Buctouche, N.B., a grandson of the late Rev. Lewis Jack, one of the pioneer Presbyterian ministers in New Brunswick, and nephew of the late Dr. T. Chalmers Jack of North Sydney, N.S. Inspector L. J. King is a brother, and Rev. Chalmers Salter, minister of the United Church at Kensington, P.E.I., and Rev. Wilmer B. Rosborough, of this town, are first cousins of Mr. King's.

Mrs. King, who before her marriage was Miss Edna Baird of Fredericton, N.B., is an accomplished musician, and has used her splendid talents in this respect to supplement her husband's work in the foreign field.

A large congregation on Sunday morning gave close attention to Mr. King's account of the development and recent progress of the church's work in North China.

Forty-nine years ago a small band of men and women left Canada, with assurance of the interest and support of the Presbyterian Church, to establish a Christian Church in China. These pioneers settled in the province of Honan, north of the Yellow River, and on behalf of the Canadian Church accepted responsibility for evangelizing that area with its population of approximately 8,000,000 souls. It is a goodly land and the people, eighty percent of whom are farmers, are hard-working, industrious and friendly. With them the missionaries have known both adversity and prosperity. Famine, revolution and banditry have sometimes been the lot of the people, but through all changes the Christian Church has made slow but firm and steady progress. It has weathered all storms and has had an influence out of all proportion to its numerical strength. While the number of professing Christians in proportion to the population of the country today is not more than one in a thousand, it is significant that the proportion of Christians in a recent official list of the outstanding leaders in China was in the ratio of one to six.

A number of local congregations have been organized in North Honan. These have their own native pastors for the support of whom the local congregations alone are responsible. The missionaries work in collaboration with the native pastors, several of whom are university graduates, in forward evangelism in unorganized areas. The Church of Christ in China, in which are united the native churches that have grown up from the missionary effort of some sixteen societies (English Baptist, English Presbyterian, Wesleyans, American Board Mission, American Presbyterians, United Church of Canada and others), is now recognized by the National Government as an indigenous organization.

Among the group of pioneers who established work in North Honan was Mr. Wm. McClure, M.D., of Lachute, an honor student in mathematics at McGill. Dr. McClure resigned his position as superintendent of Victoria General Hospital, Montreal, to go to Honan. After nearly half a century of service he is the only member of the original band still living in China and actively engaged in mission work there. Miss Elizabeth McLennan, B.A., of Glengarry County, has also given some thirty years of devoted service in educational work. The young men and women of Honan, and in particular the Chinese Church, owe a great deal to the mission schools which introduced modern education to China.

The recovery of China from the disorganized and demoralized conditions of ten years ago has been most encouraging and indicates the underlying unity and strength of this age-old civilization. Under the leadership of Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek and his wife, Madame Chiang, reforms are apparent everywhere. The manner in which the National Government is withstanding the military attack now being made upon it is but one indication of the country's new unity and new life.

The Christian leaders in China today realize how colossal is their task

in which they were rendered by Miss Archibald. . . The soprano selections by Miss Ina Young were most delightfully sung and were heartily applauded. Miss Young has a voice of very fine quality. . . The violin numbers by Miss Joan Archibald were of high order, and were beautifully played. Everyone admired the skill with which she handled her instrument. Perhaps her artistic skill showed up best in her first and last selections, namely Sonata in G minor and Allegro by Handel. She played entirely from memory. . . The Scotch songs by Miss Harriet McCammon seemed to appeal strongly to the audience, judging from the heartiness of the applause. Miss McCammon is the leading contralto in the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul.

It would take up too much time and space to refer to all the items of this delightful program, but this brief résumé would be incomplete without mentioning the fine work of the accompanist, Miss Margaret Boa. An accompanist may not be as conspicuous as the soloist she is accompanying, nevertheless her part is a most important one and calls for a high degree of skill. Miss Boa did her part most excellently.

Perhaps a number that should be specially referred to was the Ave Maria sung by Miss Young, with violin obligato by Miss Joan Archibald. The high degree of skill shown by these young artists was apparent in their rendering of this beautiful composition.

One listener observed that this was the finest concert we have had since that given by Miss Juliette Rodrigue and that it would be a good thing if there were more frequent concerts of this sort. It is to be hoped that Lachute may have another visit from these young artists before long.

grounds of the Black and White Pavilion—"Something I remember of my grandparents." Current Events were read by Mrs. Strong. Mrs. L. Morris, County Convenor for Immigration, was the guest speaker. Plans were made for a card party and a dance.

Lachute reports two meetings, September and October. The former was a musical afternoon, and Mrs. S. S. Campbell also gave a paper in the interests of Child Welfare. This was a large meeting, and a reception was given to the teachers. The report of the Flower Committee was given and $15 donated toward prizes for the school. Twenty-seven members visited Lowney's Chocolate factory in Montreal on a picnic, also inspected the liner, Duchess of Atholl. For October they had an interesting paper on Magnesite and the Kilmar Mines, by Mrs. Jas. Hay Jr. The sum of $15 was donated for Saskatchewan drought sufferers. Twenty-four ladies were present to reply to the roll-call, which was "Minerals of Our County."

Lakefield had a visit in October from their county president who introduced two subjects into her address, Publicity and Legislation. Their roll-call was responded to with the name of a former Prime Minister.

Morin Heights, for their September meeting, had a lecture on Life Insurance by Mr.

Knight of Montreal, also a paper on the laws of Quebec as they affect married women, by the county president. Their roll-call was a favorite pickle recipe. Members also had an exchange of articles made from a yard of print. This branch has purchased a hospital bed in aid of the sick in their locality. They also presented Mrs. Dobson with a purse on her departure for England.

Pioneer had an extra meeting in September, when Miss M. Douglas presented moving pictures of the Coronation, also scenes from rural life in Scotland and England. At their regular meeting Mr. C. L. Hall of Lachute High School gave an interesting address on "True and False Education". Mrs. G. S. Armstrong welcomed the new principal, Mr. Brownlee, and his wife, also the staff of St. Andrews East High School. A small contribution was donated to Geneva Community Hall for lighting.

Upper Lachute - East End held a meeting in September at Mrs. T. Hume's, at which Teaching was the main topic, and the roll-call "A child's early health habit."

All of the eight branches had their president and her chosen guest in attendance at Her Excellency's tea and lecture by Mrs. Silvercruys-Farnan, sister of the Belgian Consul, at Government House, Ottawa.

Good-Will Ambassador
in New Principal

In these days when millions of lives are often affected by the words and deeds of a single man, it is interesting to note the welcome extended to an American as the new principal of McGill University. One recalls, also, that the grandfather of Principal Lewis W. Douglas, LL.D., was a Scotsman who lived an exceptionally useful life as a Canadian physician and scientist. He was, besides a scientist of rank, one time Chancellor of Queen's University and also a Governor of McGill.

Moreover, the new principal's father devoted his time to mining and finance, thereby being able to help many Canadian institutions, with sums ranging as high as $312,000 given to McGill.

The fact that Lewis William Douglas has spent important years as a U. S. citizen should make him an effective ambassador of goodwill between Canada and her neighbor to the South.

Ontario's Licence Plates

The annoying experience that the Ontario Highways Department is going through in the matter of the 1938 automobile markers should be a valuable warning to similar authorities elsewhere—says the Montreal Star.

The 1938 Ontario marker is quite the handsomest and most pleasing on the road, a combination of orange letters on a blue background, a very attractive colour scheme. Unfortunately, a short distance away it is illegible to most eyes, thereby ruining one of the main purposes of the licence plate, the identification of the car bearing it. It now seems probable that the markers will be called in and new ones issued. It will cost the Province $30,000 and a lot of bother, but a marker that plays into the hands of the hit-and-run driver or the fleeing criminal by making his identification very much more difficult is too dangerous a thing to remain in use.

Women on the Warpath

When the women-folk decide they want something they generally get what they go after. That is one reason why there seems to be a chance that sooner or later the taxation racket, in America at least, may give place to a system of raising revenue for government purposes under which every citizen will know, all the time, just what his own contribution is. For a group of ladies calling themselves the League of Women Buyers and Taxpayers, with headquarters in Chicago, has started out in a big way to make the people of America tax-conscious.

The League is hunting up the hidden taxes, that everybody pays but few know they are paying, and circulating the facts about them among the people who have to watch the domestic budget; that is to say, the housewives. They are pointing out that every loaf of bread has to pay 53 taxes out of the price the housewife pays for it, that there are 116 different taxes on every gallon of gasoline bought for the family car, 172 taxes on medicine bought at the drugstore, or more taxes paid by the consumer than profits to the farmer on wheat, milk and meat.

An old saw says that we can escape everything but death and taxes. The ladies point out in one of their bulletins that even in death we do not escape taxation, for 157 indirect taxes are hidden in the undertaker's fees.

Motion Pictures of Traffic Tragedies

The police department of Quincy, Mass., is trying a new cure for reckless driving. Violators of certain traffic rules are sentenced to periodic showings of a gruesome moving picture taken of traffic crashes in which drivers or passengers were killed or maimed. The first showing was witnessed by 100 violators, both men and women, who were so shocked by the realization of what an auto crash may mean some of them vowed they would never drive a car again.

Oddfellows Gather for Funeral of Brother Member

LATE EDWARD TURNEY

Funeral rites of the Oddfellows Order were held for Edward Oscar Turney, who died at his home in Dalesville last Friday after several months' illness. Rev. C. Hardie officiated at a largely attended service in Dalesville Baptist Church Sunday afternoon, with Rev. S. J. Pike of Brownsburg assisting. Burial followed in the Dalesville cemetery.

Mr. Turney was 48 years of age, and had farmed in Dalesville, where he spent practically his whole life. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Margaret Titley; his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Turney, Brownsburg; two daughters, Eva and Lucille; and three sons, Elmer, Kenneth and Matthew. Another daughter, Mrs. O. Gunn, predeceased him last March. Mrs. James Graves of Windsor, Ont., is a surviving half-sister.

The bride received many useful gifts. On Oct. 15th, Miss Mount was entertained in Montreal at a kitchen shower, where she also received many acceptable gifts.

Late Mrs. Daniel Currie

The remains of Grace Elizabeth Todd, wife of Daniel Currie, of 4641 Clanranald avenue, Montreal, were brought here to Lachute for interment in the Protestant Cemetery Tuesday afternoon, following a funeral service at her residence. Mrs. Currie died on Saturday at the age of 73. She had been a resident of Montreal since 1907, and was active in Presbyterian Church circles, first at Pointe St. Charles and later as a member of Ephraim Scott Church. She was a life member of the missionary society of the latter. She was a native of Geneva settlement, in this county.

Surviving are her husband, two sons — Daniel James of Montreal, and Gordon Marshall of Ottawa; four daughters, Mrs. W. H. Irvine of Ottawa; Mrs. Gordon McRae, Huxley, Alberta; Mrs. A. B. Taylor, Toronto; and Mrs. A. J. Jamieson, Montreal; three brothers, John Todd of St. Jerome; Robert Todd of Lachute; Henry Todd of Vancouver, B.C., and a sister, Mrs. J. P. MacKimmie of this town.

Come and spend a social hour in Lachute United Church hall, Saturday afternoon next. Tea from 3 to 6, by the Pioneer W. I.

100 CLUB'S HALLOWE'EN
MASQUERADE BALL, BIG HIT TOMORROW NIGHTOTTAWA ORCHESTRA ON FIRST VISIT

A special committee of the Lachute One Hundred Club has imbued the Auditorium with a Halloween motif in decoration schemes. The Club's masquerade ball tomorrow night, with Geo. Buffham's seven-piece orchestra from the Capital, should prove the most popular hit of the season, if present indications are correct.

This is an invitation dance; the attendance will be selective. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. Although fancy dress is optional, masks must be worn by all comers.

The event is in aid of the Hundred Club's charity funds, and those who attend will be doubly repaid in knowing that the proceeds will be well spent among local poor.

Patrons of the dance, who will also act as judges, are Mayor A. Rodrigue and Miss Juliette Rodrigue, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Desjardins, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Mason. The balcony of the Auditorium will be reserved for judges and special guests. Buffet refreshments will be in charge of Mrs. R. Millar, and will be available at popular prices.

Provincial detectives will be on hand to avert any possibility of theft from parked cars—a misfortune experienced by dancers at a previous function in the Auditorium.

the side of the road before reaching St. Hermas. Here Cowan and Roberts were met by Traffic Officer Jos. Leroux, who had been notified by telephone. Together they made enquiries, which showed that the two lads had begged a ride in a truck to Lacombe's Garage and had afterwards set out on foot toward Montreal. The search party drove on to Belle Riviere, and turning back again toward St. Hermas, met the two men on the road. They were arrested by Officer Leroux and brought back to Lachute. After giving false names, the couple were later identified and admitted the theft. They were detained until arrival of Provincial Police from Montreal on Sunday, and were brought back to Lachute for trial next day.

Lachute High School Team Breaks Softball "Jinx"

(Contributed by a Local Humorist)

What a fall there was, my countrymen! Canons to the left! Canons to the right! Into the Valley of Defeat marched the Brownsburg School Nine!

The wonder of the age, my friends, has taken place. Thursday last shall go down in history as the day when the Lachute High School softball squad defeated the 'Burg team for the first time in 1937.

The game proved the most exciting one played to date, as the play was closer, thus keeping the runs side by side, and hope was not abandoned till the bitter (?) end, when it proved rather useless to keep on hoping. The local boys, a trifle bewildered, but "feeling like a million", let loose with thundering voices the old school yell which had been, in defeat, so long silent, but which certainly had not been forgotten.

It has since been rumored that none of the 'Burg squad showed up at school on Friday morning, due partly to the fact that all members of the team seemed to be suffering from some mysterious "sunburn of the face" and partly because the elders of the town were seen sitting on the steps of the school waiting for the morning session to start, with double-barreled shotguns slung across their knees and ominous looks in their eyes. "Napoleon" Bill Hewitt too, after wrapping up his "deserting" curve, was seen in the vicinity of the post-office with a mysterious parcel to be sent to Waterloo. In the meantime "Wellington" Bates is getting round-shouldered from an acute attack of slaps on the back. "Da Jeem" Smilie is reported back among the bush-leaguers, and Col. upper has withdrawn his bid for them, saying that even the "Jernts" are as good. At any rate, if you happen to be in Brownsburg one of these days, and find a hushed air about the place, or see the flag on the Post Office dangle disconsolately at half-mast, well—you'll know the reason why!

Delicate Boilers
Though at sea it is "water, water everywhere," that water is of no more use for the ship's tubular boilers than for human consumption. In fact, humans may drink with impunity water which will destroy a naval boiler. The modern tube boiler requires distilled water, just as a motor-car does. Too much air produces rust, the least salt causes overheating and distortion, whilst any taint of oil causes erosion of the turbine blades. But whilst boilers can be kept clean and efficient, the ship's bottom is necessarily exposed to sea-water and sea-life. An item of at least $150,000 appears annually in naval accounts for the removal of barnacles in dry-dock, and it has been estimated that rust destroys 20,000,000 tons of iron and steel every year.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

DISAPPOINTED SPOOKS

The Autumn moon was shining down Upon some dry corn stooks, Where waiting there, for Hallowe'en, Lay hidden—naughty spooks. They had planned, oh so many tricks, To play on honest folks— Some were cruel, some were not, And some were silly jokes. Old Mr. North Wind spied them there And chuckled up his sleeve, "I'll play a few wild tricks myself, To make those bold spooks leave." He tore the corn stooks all apart And tossed them far away, He chilled the spooks until they fled And quite forgot to play.

THE HALLOWE'EN SCRAMBLE

Dollie and Tom were looking over their invitation to the Hallowe'en party to be held in the school hall. It had witches and black cats all around it for a border, and it said, "You are invited to a Scramble at the School Hall on Saturday, October 30th, at six o'clock in the evening"—and it was almost that time now! "That must mean supper," said Tom, who was fond of good things. "It does not say so" said practical Dollie, who thought that it would be better to have at least a few of mother's cookies to eat before leaving home, just in case there would be no supper. "So many folk have tea at five o'clock, you know Tom, that they might never stop to think that we country children do not have tea so early."

"I won't say no to the cookies, Doll, I can eat mother's cookies and the supper too, if they have any, and I'm sure you could too." "That would be bad for your digestion, young man," chuckled Grandpa Horner from his armchair by the fire, rapping his stout cane on the floor to attract their attention to what he was saying. "It's bad for your digestion I say, to eat too often; better leave mother's cookies for a poor old man like me who is too old to take part in 'scrambles' any more!" Dollie ran to her grandfather's side and slipped her arm around his neck rather plyingly. She thought he was really regretting the fact that he could not go to the School Hall with them, but one look into his twinkling eyes reassured her. "Grandpa Horner! you are just an old fraud!" she whispered, her face close to his. "I thought you were really unhappy, and all the time you were just joking."

"Aye, lassie, I'm just joking. It would not be any fun for your old granddad to go to your young 'scrambles' as you call them. I have a deal more fun just sitting here remembering the old days when I used to go to Hallowe'en parties myself. We called them 'parties' in those days, not 'scrambles' although I guess that we scrambled about just as much as you will tonight. I'll be thinking about the old days when you are at your party, children."

"Doesn't it make you sad to think of old days, Granddaddy?" Dollie asked.

"Not so sad as one would think, Dollie. When one has lived a clean life one has so many happy memories to live amongst when one gets old, and I am living among my memories these days, as I sit in my chimney corner, just like the Little Jack Horner of your story books." Kissing Dollie, he said, "You are very like your Grannie, my sweet, and I wish your mother would look up the costume she wore to a Hallowe'en party when she was about your size, and let you wear it tonight."

"Oh Granddaddy, may I wear it? I know just where it is. It is in that blue box covered with silver stars that is on the top shelf of your clothes cupboard."

"Why, so it is Dollie. What a good memory you have, to be sure. Just like your Grannie in that too. Come back and let me see you before you go, dear."

Just before leaving for the party the children came to let their grandfather see them. "Aye, very like, very like" he said, feasting his eyes on Dollie as she stood before him, a dainty little fairy with a tiny golden wand, her golden curls just peeping from beneath the little blue cap she was wearing with the costume to keep her warm. "But!" said he with a chuckle, as he turned to look at Tom, "I don't like the company you keep"—for Tom was going as an extremely ugly black cat. "I warn you, Mr. Cat, your tail is very apt to get stepped on before the evening is over." "I'll hold it up," laughed Tom, "if things begin to get too rough". To be continued.

"A Ticket to Heaven"

Short Story

Specially written for The Watchman
By Blanche A. Draper

"Hello, Mr. Wilson," said a small boy of eight as he stopped at the little signal box by the railway track, over which he had passed on his way home every summer for the last six years while living at his summer cottage.

"How's yer self Tommy?" replied Wilson. "And where would ye be wantin' a ticket for to go today?"

"Oh, guess I'll have a ticket to heaven today, Mr. Wilson. See—I've got twenty cents I earned picking berries—been out since seven o'clock—twenty cents is a lot of money eh?"

"Sure is, Tommy, and I bet you got good and sunburned picking them berries." . . . He paused and mopped the perspiration off his brow, and his eyes twinkled with merriment as he wondered how he was to answer Tommy about his 'Ticket to Heaven', for he had played 'Tickets' with him in make-believe fun for many years, and often Tommy had whispered that his secret ambition was to be a railway-man and give out tickets on the train. Mr. Timothy Wilson's Irish heart loved the boy, and so every summer he watched for him, and stored up a supply of cigarette tickets for Tommy as his 'Pass' to cross the track.

"Well, Tommy, me boy," he said as he reached in his overall pocket for a ticket. "Here's yer ticket to heaven—and bless my soul if it hasn't got blue birds on it. Faith and it's a sweet blue bird ye are yer self. Better run along home now wid yer berries before the four-twenty comes along. Watch out fer that there heap of stones by the track Tommy—like as not ter-morrow the men 'ul be here fixin' fer ter mend this 'ere crossing."

Tommy was slowly moving away—calling out "Good bye, see you tomorrow", when he reached the pile of stones. And just then a large truck slid down the hill around the bend. With tremendous force it knocked Tommy down and crushed his head beneath the wheels.

Mr. Wilson rushed out, frantically calling to Tommy, but little Tommy didn't hear. The 'Ticket to Heaven' lay beside him. The blue-birds shone with a sunlit light; the berries a dirty red patch, mingled with the sand of the road and Tommy's life blood.

"He's got his ticket t' heaven," mumbled Wilson, as he set the signals for the 4.20.

—The End—

St. Andrews E., Oct. 20, 1937.

"I suppose you'll miss your boy when he has gone back to college?"

"Yep," replied Farmer Corn-tassel. "He's got all the livestock so they won't move unless he gives 'em the college yell, an' I can't remember what it is."

Coming Out of a Spin

Aviators say that the Chinese do not make good fliers, because they are fatalists and when they go into a spin, fold their hands and do not know how to come out of it.—Our ability to get out of a spin is one of the most important things in life. There are plenty of people who are all right as long as things go well, but just as soon as things go wrong, they metaphorically fold their hands and do nothing about it. The person who accomplishes things in this world is the person who does something when things go wrong and does not say, what is to be must be. The depression showed us what a number of fatalists there are. Too many are incapable of doing something for themselves. The world owes them a living. The rest of us have to work for it.

TAX REBATE FOR VALUE OF SCOUT WORK

"Moved, that the taxes on the property B.F.W.R., p.9, 10, owned by the Niagara Falls and District Boy Scouts, be waived for the year 1937, in consideration of the value of their Scout work." This was a resolution passed at a recent meeting of the Willoughby, Ont., Township Council.

A TENT PITCHING RECORD

Pitching a 10x12 tent Northern style, using seven poles and two guystays, in 80 seconds, and taking it down, packing it and piling the poles in 61 seconds, a feat of the Kirkland Lake Scout Troop team, was one of the achievements of the 6th Annual Northern Ontario Scout Jamboree, at Iroquois Falls. Other contests, included pioneer bridge building, tree felling and fire lighting.

YOUTHFUL "TOILERS OF THE SEA"

The old British trawler "Espero", used in the filming of "Victor Hugo's 'Toilers of the Sea'", is now the prized floating home of Guernsey Sea Scouts. The old vessel, which had been abandoned by the moving picture people, and had sunk in St. Peter Port Harbour, was purchased at auction by Rev. G. A. Tait, and handed over to the Scouts. The youthful men of the sea are now restoring and refitting the old craft under the direction of a ship's carpenter.

Linoleum Is Distinctive, Durable Floor Covering

The housewife who is looking for a distinctive floor, and one that is easy to keep clean, might bear in mind that linoleum is adaptable to every room in the house.

In the nursery, where bread and jam are likely to be dropped, it makes an excellent floor covering. In the sewing room, where threads and scraps litter the floor on work days, in the sunporch where mud from the garden is tracked, in the hall where wet footprints may be found on every rainy day, and in the kitchen and bathroom, it is a practical covering. Special designs may be chosen for living, dining, and bedrooms that are as attractive to look at as they are practical. These floors may be waxed.

Linoleum which is permanently laid is eligible for installation under the Dominion Government's Home Improvement Plan.

Diet for School Children

Close attention to the foods supplied to school children should be paid, particularly during the fall and winter, when increased mental activity, the demands of sports and the playground, as well as the growing condition of the child make adequate feeding imperative.

The practice now prevalent in many schools of discovering the quality and quantity of food the child has eaten for breakfast is to be commended. It is a deplorable state of affairs when the school child is allowed to commence the day on a piece of cake, simply because other foods of a more healthful kind are refused. The trouble lies much farther back, and can only be remedied by firmness and patience and unremitting care. Mothers who allow their children to refuse cooked cereals, eggs, and kindred healthful breakfast foods at the age of two or more, are laying up trouble for themselves when the child is old enough to go to school. A breakfast of healthful foods should be insisted on from early childhood, and will

As told by the Chief Scout, when the man fell, the Canadian lads, instead of laughing, "as 99 out of 100 boys would have done", ran out, helped the man up, and had him in to tea, while they cleaned and dried his clothes. The victim of the accident was so impressed by the kindness of the young Canadians, that he later went to Canada, "to see what kind of a country produced such good fellows."

"In the end," continues the Chief Scout's story, "he found he liked Canada so well that he settled there. He started in business, and made a success of it. But, best of all, he joined up with the Scout movement, and is now a keen and successful Scouter."

HOMES

We often hear it said these days that the home is passing, —it is not what it used to be. In one sense that may be so. On the other hand there are more homes than there ever were before. It used to be that if a woman was not married, she could not have a home of her own and very likely many of them regretted not having a home of their own as much, if not more, than they regretted not having a husband. Now they do not need to marry to have a home. There are more and more women establishing their own homes. It may be a house, it may be an apartment and it may only be one room, but they make their four walls a home. I know three women of mature years who have lately started homes of their own. One built a house, one re-modelled and the third managed to buy just what she wanted. Are these women house-proud? Never have I seen a bride as pleased with her home as any one of these women were. They had all planned and worked for their homes for years and now that they have them, they certainly enjoy them. — Women are not the only ones, as there are many bachelors who have their own apartments and make a home for themselves. In the ideal home, the sexes come assorted but these are not always happy homes and the home an individual has established may be.

THE THERMOMETER TELLS

Women seem to measure their hospitality by their food and when they are going to have company the first thing they think of, is "What am I going to give them to eat?" This is a natural reaction but there are other things to be thought of, too. Is your house warm enough? There is only one way of knowing and that is by using a thermometer. Most women want it to be at least seventy or even a degree or two over, if they are sitting around. Under seventy is all right when one is moving around, but as a rule when there are guests present, they are sitting. We all know houses; you know them as well as I do, that when you are going to them you wear a woolen dress or if you are in evening dress, are sure to take along a jacket, because you very well know that if you don't you are sure to be cold. So keep an eye on the thermometer and greet your guests warmly. On the other hand, don't make it too hot for them.

FREEZE YOUR BULBS

Bulbs grown indoors will be more successful if, after they are planted in the pots, they are buried outside, pot and all, until after the frost has come. Then bring them into the cellar and proceed as usual.

LEMON PIE

1 cup water, juice and rind of 1 lemon, 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon butter, 2 tablespoons corn starch.
Grate rind of lemon into a sauce pan and pour the water through the grater to take out all the rind. Add sugar, (reserving 2 tablespoons for meringue) juice of lemon and butter, and bring to a boil. Beat the egg yolk and add the corn starch which has been mixed with enough water to make a paste. Then pour the hot mixture into the egg and corn starch, stirring as you pour. Return to the fire and cook slowly until thick, then cook for three minutes longer, stirring steadily. Pour into a baked pie shell. Make a meringue by beating the egg white until stiff, then add sugar gradually while beating. Dot the pie with teaspoonfuls of meringue and bake in a slow oven of 325 degrees until gently browned. Serve cool, but not chilled. Occasionally it is necessary to use a little more corn starch if the lemon has been very juicy. Usually 2 tablespoons level, but not levelled off with a knife, are sufficient. Do not add more con starch until the mixture has been cooked as it is not often necessary. If you must add some, mix a teaspoon with a little water. This recipe does not make a thick stodgy filling but one that is creamy. And always remember that a filling gets thicker as it cools.

ORANGE HARD SAUCE

Cream 1/2 cup butter, add 1 cup icing sugar, 2 teaspoons orange juice and 2 teaspoons orange rind. Beat until light and fluffy. Serve with hot gingerbread or any other hot pudding.

Short, sharp, critical words can cause as much pain as a rusty, ragged piece of tin ripped through the flesh.

Children of a Common Mother

One of the most impressive demonstrations of international good will that pervaded the recent Pan-Pacific Women's Conference held in Vancouver (writes Elizabeth Bailey Price) was a ceremony at the Peace Arch at Blain, erected on the international border to commemorate a hundred years of peace between Canada and United States. It took place during those tense days when we marvelled at the dignity, poise and silent grief of the women of the Orient, who we saw were watching with straining eyes the headlines of the daily papers telling that war between their countries was a matter of hours.

I can see little Mrs. Tsune Gauntlett standing under the simple, significant arch that lovely summer day. To right and left waved the Stars and Stripes and the Canadian Ensign. Behind her were two iron gates permanently clamped back, with this inscription above . . .

Children of a Common Mother, May These Gates Never Be Closed. Her brief, simple speech might have been a prayer for peace. She was followed by Miss Mei-Uy Chen of China who said so feelingly "There is no place in the world today I'd rather stand, than under a peace arch."

I think that day, we Canadian and American pilgrims never realized more the significant inscription on the Canadian side of the arch; "Brethren dwelling together in unity", than when we sang a new international anthem, which includes the first verses of "God Save the King", and "My Country 'Tis of Thee", and a new third verse:

"Two empires by the sea,
Two nations great and free
One anthem raise,
One race of ancient fame,
One tongue, one faith we claim;
One God, whose glorious name
We live and praise."

"I've got a new idea. Fortune in it."

"What now?"
"It's an alarm clock that emits the delicious odors of frying bacon and fragrant coffee."

Doughnuts for Hallowe'en

No Hallowe'en frolic is complete without doughnuts and sweet cider, so it behooves the hostess to get out her fat kettle and start to work.

The terms doughnut, fried cake and cruller are used interchangeably, but there really is a technical difference between them. Not that it matters much, because one is just as good as another and we seldom meet a genuine doughnut these days anyway.

Doughnuts are bits of yeast dough sweetened and fried in deep fat. Our grandmothers made them and also made a point that they be called doughnuts and not friend cakes.

Fried cakes are of the nature of quick bread dough sweetened or of a cake dough made thick enough to roll, cut in rings and fry in deep fat.

Cruller is a Dutch word and means twist. Since the dough of crullers is the same as that of fried cakes, the shape is the distinguishing feature.

So there is something in a name after all.

Then there's the old controversy about the indigestibility of fried cakes. If they are well made and you don't eat too many of them they are just as easy to digest as any other rich cake. The temperature of the fat determines whether the cakes soak fat and become too greasy for easy digestion.

The proper blending of materials is important, too. Thorough mixing is necessary but care should be taken not to over-mix the dough. Each ingredient should be thoroughly incorporated in the mixture as it is added, but prolonged beating results in hard, tough fried cakes. Chill the dough for an hour or longer before rolling. This makes it easy to handle with the minimum amount of flour and insures tender, fluffy cakes.

If you add 1 tablespoonful of vinegar to the frying fat the cakes will absorb less fat flavor. Always add the vinegar when you put the fat on to heat. Do not try to add cold vinegar to hot fat. If you forget it in the beginning, let it go until the next time you make fried cakes.

Remember that chamolais and doe skin gloves should not be washed on the hands. These leathers become soft when wet and are easily torn. Work them around in warm sudsy water, pressing the suds gently through the gloves. Then rinse thoroughly in clear water the same temperature as the first water. Finally rinse through a light suds. Squeeze out the moisture by rolling in a dry Turkish towel. Smooth out wrinkles and gently stretch in shape. Then blow into them to make them dry evenly. While still damp work the leather between the fingers and stretch slightly. Finish drying.

Baked Acorn Squash

Four acorn squash, 1 pound sausage.

Scrub squash and cut out the stem, cutting deep enough to remove seeds. Fill cavity with sausage and bake 1 1/2 hours in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) Serve one squash to each person.

While baking the squash make a dish of scalloped potatoes and baked apples. This cooks the whole dinner in the oven.

Serve a crisp cabbage and pepper salad with the dinner. Dress up the baked apples with a dab of whipped cream, with a spot of bright red jelly for garnish.

"Never Fail" Fried Cakes

One cup hot mashed potatoes, 4 tablespoons butter, 3 eggs, 1 1/4 cups sugar, 4 cups flour, 6 teaspoons baking powder, 1 cup sweet milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon vanilla, few gratings nutmeg.

Add butter and sugar to hot mashed potatoes and mix well. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Add well beaten eggs to first mixture. Add milk and dry ingredients alternately, mixing lightly after each addition. Add vanilla and nutmeg. Cover closely and let stand in refrigerator for an hour or longer. Roll a small amount of dough on a floured molding board into a sheet about 1/2 inch thick. Cut with a doughnut cutter dipped in flour and fry in deep hot fat (375 degrees F.) If you don't use a fat thermometer, the fat should be hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread in sixty seconds. Cook two minutes on one side, turn and cook two minutes on the other. Drain on crumpled paper and dust with powdered sugar.

If you aren't serving hot coffee, mulled cider is a delicious old-fashioned drink to accompany fried cakes.

Fresh ink stains can be removed by covering with salt before the ink dries. When the salt absorbs the ink use a fresh application of salt slightly dampened.

Doctor: "Why do you have BF7652 tattooed on your back?" Patient: "That's not tattooed, doctor. That's where my wife ran into me with the car when I was opening the gates."

ANTHOCYANINURIA

Kenneth, aged six, came running with John's little pot. John, aged two, trotted along behind. Both childish faces shone with an excitement that was compounded of pride and fear. Kenneth felt important as the bearer of startling evidence, John in the accomplishment of an unprecedented feat. Within the pot was the liquid which John had just produced. It was a rather vivid red.

Now if mother had been scared, had looked startled, had cried, "Oh dear, whatever is that?" then the children's anxiety would quickly have changed to panic. Fear would have struck deep into the plastic minds and left its scars perhaps for life. But mother showed not even a trace of surprise. All she said was beetroot, and from the tone of her voice the youngsters knew at once that whatever lay behind the mystery it was nothing that they need fear.

Then mother explained to them that when little boys or girls eat lots of beets some times the color from the beets goes into the blood, from the blood into the kidneys and comes out into the urine. If she had been a doctor talking to grownups she might have added that the beetroot dye is named anthocyanin and the passage of beet-stained urine goes by the grand name of anthocyaninuria. That's something for you to be proud of, isn't it, John; even though it is commoner than you supposed?

Extra markets for milk products

The Dominion's use of milk in fluid form is increasing steadily, but it falls far short of the approximately 16 billion pounds of milk produced yearly by Canada's 4,000,000 milk cows.

Research and salesmanship have found and made other markets for 9 billion pounds of milk that consumers don't drink every year.

Since 1857 Borden, through research and selling, has played a leading part in developing extra markets for both milk and manufactured milk products.

It is these extra markets that have helped dairying become one of Canada's biggest sources of farm cash.

Fire destroyed the dwellings of Mr. Thomas Webster and Mr. Alan Murray during the early hours of Sunday morning. The fire, which was of unknown origin, had gained considerable headway before being noticed and the occupants of both homes had a narrow escape. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. and Mrs. Webster as they lost everything, barely escaping in night garments.

The good people of St. Andrews spent an enjoyable evening at the Town Hall on Saturday, Oct. 23, under the auspices of the Church of England. The audience was kept in a state of merriment by the dramatic performances, a one-act comedy and a two-character sketch by the Lakeland Players, and an amusing one-act comedy by the St. Matthew's Players, Montreal. A vocal duet by Miss Hilda Shaw and Mr. R. Brown and dramatic readings by Miss Laura McGrail and Miss Shaw drew much applause. Miss McGrail's well executed tap-dancing added variety to the entertainment. The Rev. R. S. Booy thanked the visiting artists who had so kindly contributed to the success of the program.

Visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Neve for the week-end were Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hodgson, the Misses Madeline and Frances Hodgson, Mr. Philip Blackwell, Miss Lorna Jay, Miss Laura McGrail of Ottawa, Mr. James Hill and Mr. Jack Meade of Montreal.

CORONATION PICTURES

On Friday last Miss Mildred Douglas exhibited moving pictures of the Coronation to an appreciative audience in the United Church, St. Andrews. In spite of rain, a good number had assembled. Children and adults followed the golden coach and the colourful procession through the streets of London with fascinated interest. The colored pictures of English gardens and of rural Scotland were also of rare beauty. At the close of the exhibition the Rev. J. A. Mowatt thanked Miss Douglas, on behalf of the congregation, for so generously sharing the delights of her recent journeyings in the British Isles. A further opportunity of seeing the pictures will be afforded tomorrow evening, 29th, when they will be shown in the Presbyterian Church.

First California Mail Service

On April 19, 1847, the first regular mail service in California was established when the United States military authorities inaugurated a semimonthly "government express." Army despatches, private letters and newspapers were carried, free of charge, between San Francisco and San Diego by two soldiers on horseback, who started from these towns on alternate Mondays. Meeting the following Sunday at Dana's rancho, near San Luis Obispo, they exchanged mails. Each soldier then started back to the point from which he had come, arriving there in time to begin another trip the following Monday. The rush of settlers to California, following the discovery of gold, necessitated the establishment of Post Office department routes, which supplanted this original service.
