UNANIMOUS APPROVAL FOR 100 CLUB'S BIG HALLOWE'EN VENTURE

MASQUERADE BALL WAS COMPLETE SUCCESS

There were no half-measures in the Hundred Club's preparations for the Halloween masquerade ball, held Friday night in Lachute Auditorium. The approval expressed by the 125 couples and numerous spectators present was unanimous, so that it is to be expected this social event will become an annual affair.

Costumes worn by the dancers displayed both variety and ingenuity. The three judges, Mayor Dr. A. Rodrigue, Mr. L. E. Desjardins and Dr. J. H. Mason, had no easy task in comparing the merits of these costumes. After a colorful parade around the hall the winners selected were Mr. Gilbert Ayers and Miss Blanche Theoret as Romeo and Juliet, who received the club prize; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Giles, in costumes judged the best for originality, representing an old, old fashioned couple in night raiment—taking prizes donated by Mr. H. E. Desjardins; and President George Héon's prizes for

YOUNG LOUISA VISITOR IN ARCTIC EXPEDITION

Summer campers at Lake Louisa note with pleasure the recognition accorded to Robert W. Cooke, 25-year-old radio engineer, who left Sunday for Vancouver to join the Sir Hubert Wilkins expedition in search of the six Russian aviators lost in the Arctic.

Cooke, who is a regular week-end at his father's Louisa residence during the summer season, has spent eight years with the Marconi Company in Montreal. Soon after he was 15 he took a special course in the Marconi school and got his first certificate from Ottawa as an operator with a record of 98.7 percent. Then he took up electrical engineering and his expert knowledge in radio direction-finders has provided him with his big chance. Sir Hubert Wilkins selected Cooke for his crew, while in Montreal last week to complete arrangements for a continuation of his search for the Russian fliers.

The young radio expert, who lately completed a special course at McGill, plans to keep a diary of all his adventures so that he will be able to tell his friends about them when he returns.

Would-be Hold-Ups Think Local Proprietor Tough

On the pretence of business, three strangers entered Muir Bros' Gas Station here around the supper hour Saturday evening. Ross Muir, alone on duty at the time, left the premises to fetch a rim which they had asked for, but returned to find one of the customers tampering with his till—a trick which got the proprietor's "goat". Muir put up a fairish fight; grabbing an iron bar, in fact, he soon had the better of his clients. His brother George had arrived in the meantime and soon the visitors, admitting they had had enough, were allowed to go their way. Ross had his hand bruised in the scuffle, but nothing was taken from the cash drawer. The men were judged to be about 25, 28 and 40 years, respectively.

Some Interesting Facts on World Wheat Supply; Canada's Trade with U.S. and Great Britain

"The Ottawa Spotlight"
By "Spectator"

Ottawa, Nov. 2.—Since the beginning of the present crop year Canada has been shipping its wheat to world markets at the rate of approximately 2 million bushels weekly. This is about half the rate of shipments at this time last year. From August 1 to October 22 this year 21 million bushels had been shipped, compared with 43 million in the same period last year. The rate at which shipments are being made, however, is in accord with supplies available, and if proportionate exports continue until July 31st next, Canada will have only a normal, quite small surplus to carry forward with the new crop. On August 1 of this year the carryover was 37 million bushels. The year's harvest has been estimated at 188 million bushels. From the total of these two figures must be deducted approximately 100 million needed in Canada for food and for seeding purposes, leaving 125 million for export. If a small surplus of say 35 million bushels is held over, maximum sales will be 90 million. Of this over 20 million bushels have already been shipped, leaving only 70 million for the rest of the crop year. It will not be a difficult matter to dispose of this amount.

A young officer once came to Napoleon and reported the victories of his division for the previous day. "Never mind that," said the Little Corporal, "what have you done today?"

Appointed Teacher in New Northern Quebec School

Miss Leila M. Boyd, lately of Toronto and Sudbury, spent a few days with her father and sisters here last week on her way to Northern Quebec, where she has received an appointment as teacher in a new French Protestant school. Miss Boyd, who attended Lachute High School for a number of years after receiving her elementary education in Louisa, and acquired some knowledge of the French language, is a graduate of Toronto Baptist Seminary where she took the full four-year course and became proficient in French under the training of Professor Buhler. She spent some time in Sudbury assisting her brother, John, in his missionary work there and recently, upon proving her qualifications for the task, received special permission from the Department of Education at Quebec to teach in French at the new school above referred to, and has now entered upon her duties.

Before leaving Toronto Miss Boyd was presented with a substantial sum of money by members of Jarvis Street Baptist Church, with which the Toronto Baptist Seminary is associated, as a mark of the high esteem in which she is held.

GLENGARRY SCHOOLBOY ENDS NOTABLE CAREER AT 77 YEARS OF AGE

RALPH CONNOR BORN IN NEIGHBORING COUNTY

The death of Ralph Connor on Sunday held a touching significance for the folks of Glengarry, across the Ottawa River, where Rev. Charles W. Gordon, whose pseudonym of Ralph Connor won recognition among the literary world, was raised and received his early education. The log school house in a clearing cut from virgin forest at Athol, in Glengarry County, furnished the background for a number of his novels, which made fascinating reading for both young and old.

Poppy Campaign and Annual Service for Remembrance Day

Thursday next, Nov. 11, is Remembrance Day, anniversary of the day on which the Armistice was signed. The usual poppy campaign is being conducted by the local Veterans' branch and ladies of the Women's Institute are assisting in this good work, the proceeds of which are used for needy returned men. It is hoped that when canvassers call with these poppies citizens will remember those who lie in Flanders' fields, and give generously. Service will be held in Lachute Auditorium at 10.45 a.m. next Thursday, after which wreaths will be placed on the Cenotaph.

an author of high repute, and a padre with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in France during the World War, Ralph Connor's ministrations to his fellow-men terminated in the associations of his old pastorate at St. Stephen's, Winnipeg, from which he had retired in 1924. His distinction in the triple field of labor—as a minister, a writer, and a soldier—has seldom been equalled in one man, and his record is one of which his fellow countrymen are duly proud.

LIONS CLUB IS VISITED BY DISTRICT OFFICIALS

Quite a large membership of Lachute Lions turned out to greet the District Governor of the Ontario and Quebec division, L. W. Peterson, of Windsor, Ont., at their meeting held in Desjardins Hotel last Thursday evening, Oct. 28.

President Lion C. Tremblay and Lion H. M. Lavigne, who both returned recently from a trip to Europe, were given a rousing welcome. The guest speaker was introduced by ex-President Lion Gaëtan Valois, D.D.G.

Governor Peterson gave a most inspiring address on Lionism, stressing the duties and obligations in community welfare, in which he recounted many instances of effective service. He was heartily thanked for his timely message.

A pleasing feature of the meeting was the presentation, by Lion J. E. Walker, of a Past President's pin to the Rev. Henry Cousins, who suitably responded.

A number of members from neighboring clubs were present, including H. Lapierre, President of Buckingham, R. B. Walker, Past D.D.G., W. Henry, President of Montreal Lions Club, and George Mooney, ex-President, who all gave brief, helpful addresses.

Bridges Break Down on Laurentian Highway Detour

When two small bridges broke down on the detour between Ste. Therese and St. Jerome, where roadwork is in progress, week-end traffic had to be rerouted and finally traffic police organized two new routes, one for northbound and one for southbound traffic.

The detour passed from Ste. Therese to Ste. Monique and branched off at Ste. Monique to regain the old main highway near Lachapelle. But the heavy traffic proved too much for two bridges on this section of the road and it was impossible to pass. Traffic then had to go through the village of Ste. Monique and on to St. Augustin to take the St. Mary road to Lachapelle. But this road is narrow and on Saturday afternoon provincial traffic men were stationed at various points and northbound cars were directed through St. Augustin, while southbound traffic was sent along another branch road.

LIGHTNING CAUSED FIRE IN VILLAGE OF WEIR TUESDAY MORNING

STORE AND DWELLING DESTROYED BY BLAZE

Fire threatened the entire village of Weir on Tuesday when a stubborn blaze broke out in the property of Antoine Larose, completely destroying a house and store valued at $15,000.

The outbreak occurred during a heavy thunderstorm on Tuesday morning and is believed to have been caused by lightning. The fire spread rapidly through the rear of the store, then to the adjoining house, as volunteers from the district fought the blaze.

On motion of Ald. Durocher, seconded by Ald. Speight, Ald. J. MacGibbon was appointed pro-mayor for the ensuing three months.

Lachute Scouts Entertain at Party for Hallowe'en

The Lachute Boy Scouts were hosts at a party held in McArthur's Hall last Thursday evening. The program consisted of several somewhat original games, a fine performance of the art of magic, dancing, streamer-throwing and refreshments. Approximately 60 boys and girls were present for the festivities.

The thanks of the troop are extended to Mrs. Geo. Leggett for her invaluable help in the management of the refreshments, and to Edmund McFaul for his excellent exhibition of magic, which was, without a doubt, the highlight of the evening.

Suicide at Ninety-Nine

A strange story comes from Sofia of a man who committed suicide at the age of 99 because he did not want to become a centenarian. He was Dimo Singuleff, of the village of Strashimirovo, Northern Bulgaria. Although he enjoyed good health and was active for his age, Dimo complained that he was lonely and that all his friends had died. Several times in recent years he declared that he was tired of life and would prefer to die. Seeing no signs of a natural end to his life, he hanged himself in a stable within a week or two of his 100th birthday.

Shortage of Pennies

London banks are suffering from a shortage of pennies because large quantities of pennies have been taken to the seaside to meet the needs of the millions of holidaymakers, who use far more than the normal amount of coppers. Fun fairs and automatic machines result in many million extra pennies being required at resorts. In the autumn these pennies drift back to the banks, so that no extra demands were made on the Mint.

Thursday, November 11th, is Remembrance Day.—Be sure to attend service at 10.45 a.m. in the Auditorium, and wear your poppy.

One Hundred Miles of Gold!

QUEBEC PROVINCE HOLDS FABULOUS FORTUNE IN HOLLOW OF HER HAND

Shortly after the "break-up" in the spring of '32 a grizzled pair of prospectors edged out of the timbers at a point located a little way east of the Thompson river in what is now known as Dubisson township. They were hairy, dirty, fly-bitten and weary. Throwing their packs on the ground and lighting their pipes, they prepared for the night. They had trekked east out of Noranda.

"Wall, how do you like it, pard?" said one, over the frugal supper of sow-belly and tea.

"Nawthin' doin'" said his partner, "We're hittin' trail fer Chibougamau in the mornin'."

At daybreak they were gone, leaving as a memento of their visit the usual smelly remainders of a "night flop", with scattered embers of a dead camp fire.

As the crow flies it was only a matter of 70 or 80 miles from the place of their departure to where they had camped, but had these early prospectors only known that in their journey they had walked over ground which was literally saturated with gold this narrative so far as they are concerned might have been vastly different. They travelled on into the wilderness and vamped out of our story.

Contrast the scene described with another which occurred in the spring of 1937, just five years later. On the site where our pioneer prospectors camped for the night a thriving modern town of 6,000 inhabitants has sprung as if by magic out of the primeval forest. Everywhere is bustle and confusion. Streets are lined with automobiles. Trucks loaded with timber and merchandise vie with taxicabs for right of way. Gigantic chasses set on wheels of enormous proportions lumber over the dusty roads carrying ponderous machinery and equipment. And everywhere there are roads—big wide thoroughfares—constructed to take care of heavy and light traffic for many years to come. Overhead one hears the drones of immense passenger and freight airplanes headed in different directions. Power lines, telegraph and telephone wires stretch their tentacles over mountain and valley. Day and night, on land, air, lake and river, the everlasting advance is apparent. The whole scene reeks of big business and that forthright which always accompanies intelligent enterprise.

On a busy corner of our new town stand two men engaged in animated conversation.

"Aw, loosen up, Bill. I'll give you ten thousand fer that piece of ground" . . . and Bill replies, "Whada-ya think I am! Naw mister, nothin' doin'. So soon as that railway gets here in the fall my building will be up and reaching out fer revenue."

Three years before, or to be more exact, in the spring of '34, Bill had bought the lot under discussion for one hundred and twenty-four dollars—some say in trade.

Such, in brief, is the speed of development in the rich pre-Cambrian gold belt of the Province of Quebec. The dream-valley has become a reality—and that's not the half of it, as any citizen of Val d'Or will say. Fabulous tales are being told every day of fortunes made overnight and of potential fortunes which will be made in this greatest of mining districts in days to come. Truly the ground has not been scratched. The belt keeps expanding—opening like a gigantic treasure chest with new and spectacular surprises constantly revealed. The adage, "Gold is where you find it", is broad and has practically the same application today as in the old days of pack burro and pan. But crudities of the exotic past are being swept aside in the natural course of events by the hand of ever-progressing science. What once was guess and superstition has been superseded by intelligent workable theory and patient practice. Diagnosis of the case has been augmented to a point so defined that hazards which formerly made mining a speculative venture at high odds are being steadily eliminated. The mining engineer of today, operating on the great pre-Cambrian shield, can almost see from surface the mineral picture as Nature planned it underground.

Real capital does not have to be coaxed into the business and to this fact we in the Province of Quebec are greatly indebted. Governments, capitalists, private citizens in all walks of life, are thoroughly interested in the flow of yellow metal and are fully alive to the stimulating influence which its free movement lends to every known class of trade and commerce.

In the depression years, now happily passing, it is recognized that the gold mining industry was the bulwark of Canada's economic independence and that gold mining is today the greatest influence on the way of our economic recovery. In this regard the purchasing power of one Canadian mine over a period of comparatively few years amounted to the staggering sum of 23 million three hundred and thirty-nine thousand five hundred and one dollars. In one year this company expended 2 million four hundred and fifty-two thousand dollars for materials and freight, while 2 million eight hundred and forty-eight thousand four hundred and eight dollars were disbursed in the form of wages. . . The significance of these figures alone requires no comment.

OTTAWA, NOVEMBER 2, 1937.

discoveries of copper-gold were initially instrumental in launching the north-western section of the Province of Quebec on its spectacular gold mining career. Expansion of the industry however was tremendously accelerated by a later advance in the price of gold from approximately $20.67 to $35.00 per ounce. The high point has been reached in 1937, although its true significance will not be fully understood until 1938 when new and enlarged older plants reach their full capacity.

In the first eight months of 1937 gold production totals 455,910 ounces compared with 438,412 ounces in the corresponding period of 1936. With new plants contributing important quotas, and increased flow from enlarged existing plants, the prospect for 1938 gold production is excellent.

From the Township of Beauchastel on the west to Paspé on the east, a straight distance of about 80 miles, there are now 17 producing mines in active operation. In addition there are two properties idle, one under construction and three proposed. Regardless of a substantial reduction in gold recovery from the Noranda mine which for the past several years has been turning out 30,000 ounces monthly, a notable increase in gold output has been obtained.

This year Sigma, Stadacona, Fovell, Rouyn and Cournoyer entered the list of new gold producers and before the year is out Sladen Malartic will join them. Sigma quickly worked up to a daily rate of 500 tons, Stadacona to 300, and Cournoyer to 150. Powell is shipping 200 tons of silicious gold to the Noranda smelter and expects to increase this to 500 tons per day.

Sladen Malartic will start gold production about the end of the year at the rate of 250 tons daily. Sisco, the celebrated "old timer" which stood isolated and neighborless for a period of six years, is near the 600-ton mark and giving a better account of itself every day. Lamacque will double its 550-ton mill to a daily rate of 1,000 tons or better. Beatty Gold has gradually stepped up production to 1,800 tons per day while Canadian Malartic has expanded close to 700 tons daily. O'Brien Gold doubled its mill to 150 tons, and more than trebled its gold output. Perron Gold completed expansion to 350 tons this year, and Thompson Cadillac has advanced to 200 tons daily. Sullivan has raised its gold recovery and held the mill at 150 tons. McWatters, with a mill at 100 tons a day, continues to recover gold at a good profit. Shawkey, with 170 tons daily output, has maintained profitable operation for its mill. Arntfield is increasing from 150 to 200 tons per day. Belleterre Mines at Mud Lake maintains 150 tons a day. East Malartic looks as though it would be a big tonnage producer soon, and Francoeur has developed enough ore already to promote the idea of production. In Cadillac district Sapa is mill-minded, and Pandora, Central, Wood and Kewagama all are in the running for ore production. Pan-Canadian is talking mill installation.

So the story unfolds itself with kaleidoscopic rotation. The whole mining atmosphere of the Province of Quebec scintillates with an everlasting occurrence of the unusual. Action is quickened by injections of the red blood of youth and tempered by the guiding hand of experience. The trick is being performed in a most admirable manner, and over the visible circus waves the banner of true fundamental soundness. Nature has been more than lavish in her generosity to this young mining province. The enduring possibilities of her priceless stores of mineral wealth stand not alone; they are well backed by power and all the aptitudes necessary to carry this legacy of industry far toward the requirements of future generations.

Oddfellows Held Funeral Rites for Late Member

ALEX G. BROWN

The funeral of the late Alex G. Brown was held on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 30, in the Brownsburg United Church, service being conducted by Rev. S. J. Pike. The hymn, "When the Mists Have Rolled Away", was beautifully rendered by the choir.

The deceased was born at Louise, Que., Dec. 24, 1873, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gavin Brown. In January, 1908, he married Edith J. Boyd of Brownsburg Road, who predeceased him 27 years ago. Of this union were born two children, Leslie, of Falkland, B.C., and Edith of Brownsburg, who are left to mourn the loss of a loving father. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. E. A. Burden, of Ottawa.

Mr. Brown had spent most of his life in this district, and had been a watchmaker and jeweller in Brownsburg during the past 15 years. He was a member of the Masonic Order, and also a member of the L.O.O.F. for 33 years. Brethren of this Order held their service at the graveside, a large number being present to pay their last tribute of respect to one who had been a beloved member of the brotherhood.

Interment took place at Lachute. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Arthur Campbell, Fred Jordan, Jack Roberts, Jas. Gall, Robert MacArthur and Gilbert Demerise.

Beautiful floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which the late Mr. Brown was held.

Late James A. Harcourt Buried in New Glasgow

New Glasgow, Que. — James A. Harcourt, Mayor of New Glasgow, of which place he was a life-long resident, died suddenly on Tuesday morning, Oct. 28th, at Lac Remi, western terminus of Joliette branch of the C.N.R., where he was in charge of a construction gang. He had been taken suddenly ill on Monday afternoon, but appeared to have recovered in the evening. However, at 4 a.m. on Tuesday, he awakened the men and complained of feeling violently ill. A doctor was summoned but in spite of his efforts, Mr. Harcourt succumbed to an attack of acute indigestion, at 5 a.m.

His body was brought back to New Glasgow, and on Thursday afternoon the funeral took place from the United Presbyterian Church there. The family were prostrated by their sad bereavement, and this sudden death came as a great shock to the whole community, which had known him and so highly esteemed him, as a good neighbor and a kind friend.

Many representatives from county, municipal and fraternal circles augmented the large cortege which followed him to his last resting place. The Rev. Geo. H. Gagnon, who conducted the funeral service, paid a warm tribute to the sterling qualities of the departed—as a man, a husband, a father and a friend. The church was filled by a large congregation. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, and the quiet solemnity with which the last rites were observed bore testimony to the general feeling of sorrow at his untimely end. Mr. Harcourt had been a member of the Masonic Order, and brethren from Montreal, Lachute and other centers were also present at the funeral.

Mr. Harcourt was 58 years of age, and besides his widow and immediate family leaves to mourn his loss one brother and two sisters.

Friends in this vicinity express to the bereaved family their most heart-felt sympathy in their great loss.

First Clocks Wonderful

Examples of Maker's Art

The first clocks that were set up in church belfries and public buildings in the later Middle Ages were crude affairs compared with the scientifically precise instruments, but their general principles were exactly the same. They comprised a power source—usually weights—which moved wheel work, to which was attached some means of indicating the time. The rate of going was regulated by a vibrating body, at first a horizontal bar, later a balance wheel or pendulum, and the power was governed and applied a little at a time by a device known as an escapement, which alternately caught and released some part of the mechanism. It is the escapement in a watch or clock which does the ticking; it is truly the heart of the timepiece, writes Eugene Guild in the Washington Star.

The word "clock" comes from an old word meaning "bell," and the German word for bell is "glocke" to this day. Later, dials were rigged up, with a moving hand showing the time—an idea taken from the ancient Greek water clocks.

As time went on medieval craftsmen developed clocks which were marvels of mechanical ingenuity, if not of accuracy. The famous clock of Strasbourg cathedral is an example. It was put up in 1352 and has been twice rebuilt, each time with greater elaboration. It is three stories high, and stands against the cathedral wall somewhat in the shape of a great altar with three towers.

best home-made outfits—Miss Gladys Gilmour, Brownsburg, as a Victorian lady in ruffled dress of yellow crepe paper, and Mr. A. Fassio as a genial "gentleman of the highway."

The Auditorium was tastefully decorated for Hallowe'en. Geo. Buffham's orchestra, on their first appearance here from Ottawa, gave an excellent account of themselves. The unmasking ceremony was happily carried out at 12.30 a.m. Refreshments were capably handled by Mrs. R. Millar. Local Boy Scouts gave valuable assistance, and every detail of the evening contributed to a harmonious and pleasant function.

The Hundred Club's charity funds were augmented by net proceeds of well over $125.

HALLOWE'EN IN LACHUTE

(By the Same Local Humorist)

Sighs of relief were heard from property owners of Lachute when Monday last rolled around. To them it was more than just another wash-day. It was the day after Hallowe'en, when they must summon their courage and peek outdoors to see if the sidewalk was still there, or their front gate wrapped around the door-knob.

A local Bank carried on its business on the front doorsteps while a wrecking truck was sent for, to remove the obstacle so inconsiderately "plunked", as it were, against the front door. The accountant, it has been rumored, will adopt the cause of all the trouble as a method to "balance" his books.

Another disconcerting rumor around town was to the effect that Tim Buck, the Stalin of Canada, had moved his headquarters to Lachute. The cause of this untruth was a red flag waving in the town park. But fears of the advent of this "ism" were abated by the local Golf Club, which announced the loss of a similar flag from a depression in the seventh green. (Breathe in.)

The proprietor of a Main Street store was visited by an acquaintance who, for obvious reasons, preferred to be unknown—for across the plate glass window of this establishment was written in ten foot letters the brief salutation "Hi John!"

The person residing on Bedard Blvd. who almost broke his neck when he stepped out of his house in answer to a knock on the door and discovered that his doorsteps had been silently removed, has finally forgiven the conspirators of the gentle plot, saying that "he too was once a boy!"

A young man about town, an eminent Thespian, is still wondering about "that" phone call. A sweet voice informing him that the phone company was testing his line, and asking him to whistle while the repair men listened in, and whose obliging response was met with the query as to what brand of bird-seed he generally ate for breakfast—promptly set him on the warpath. Woo! Woo!

Then, of course, there was the car parked outside of the most frequented building on Foundry Street. The owner, on being "tipped-off" as to what had gone on outside, said threateningly, "If I find the air has been let out of my front tire, I'll—" and glared at the innocent-looking urchins about him, then started for the door. At the same time a flat-footed youngster, "Public Nuisance No. 1", started for the rear door, advising the victim first to find his front wheel. One meets such interesting people!

Keen-eyed observers will note that the Constable's hair turned grey overnight. Saturday evening the Court House was minus its "Park Here" sign, but it was seen later outside to lone cell of the town jail. It seemed a foregone conclusion to the pranksters that if found out they WOULD "Park Here"; so grasping the inference, your humble correspondent set out for home and bed, with all the fond memories of another Hallowe'en that was now passing.

W.M.S. Annual Thank Offering at Brownsburg United Church

The Women's Missionary Society of Brownsburg United Church held their annual thank-offering service last Sunday morning, with the C.G.I.T. and Mission Band groups joining in. The Junior Choir was also present in full strength and rendered a number of selections. Mrs. S. J. Pike conducted the service, assisted by Miss Helen McQuat and Miss Rosamond Pike, who read the scripture lesson and offered prayer, respectively.

Guest speaker for the occasion was Mrs. E. J. Shearman, vice-president of the Ottawa Valley Branch of the W. M. S. Montreal and Ottawa Conference. Mrs. Shearman gave a very illuminating history of the Christian Church, leading up to modern missions of the United Church, in which the women are taking such a large share.

At the close of her address Mrs.

Pike conveyed the thanks of the local groups to Mrs. Shearman, as well as of the congregation. Four members of the C.G.I.T. took up the collection, at which the dedication was sung by the Junior Choir.

Editor's Vision To Be Realized on World Cruise

The above picture showing the Empress of Britain and Sydney's great harbor bridge represents the dream of an Australian editor, who in making the composite picture from separate photographs at the time the bridge was opened could not have known that the Empress would ever visit the port "down under". Captioned "Splendid Empire Achievements" the picture showed the greatest single-span bridge ever built within the Empire and the ocean liner which, launched a year previously was, at the time, the largest ship built in the Empire since the war. Now comes the announcement that the Empress of Britain will visit Sydney during her 1937 Round-the-World Cruise, and with it the realization that, when the ship is there next April, at least one editor's dream will have come true. Not only Sydney will be visited while the big white liner is in the Antipodes; she will also take her cruise members to Melbourne and to the New Zealand ports of Wellington and Auckland. Her cruise starts from New York January 8 and will end there on May 16. Until heading for Australia she will follow the usual world cruise course.—Maiden, Gibraltar, Algiers, Naples, Athens, Palestine, Egypt, India, Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Siam and Hong Kong. Leaving New Zealand she will go to the Fiji Islands, also new territory for her World Cruise. Honolulu, San Francisco, Los Angeles and the Panama Canal Zone.

Ode to a Horse

(Phoenix Flame.)

Oh horse, you are a wondrous thing. No horns to honk, no bells to ring. No licence buying every year, with plates to stick on front and rear. No spark to miss, no gears to strip; you start yourself, no clutch to slip. No gas bills climbing up each day to steal the joy of life away. Your inner tubes are all okay, and thank the Lord they stay that way. Your spark plugs never miss or fuss; your motor never makes us cuss. Your frame is good for many a mile; your body never changes style. No speed cops chugging in your rear, yelling summons in your ear. Your wants are few and easy met; you've something on the auto yet.

"I have known some great men, not one of whom would admit that achievement was at the end of a smooth road with easy grades."

The Toll Bros'. Travelogue

Rev. E. Crossley Hunter, B.A., D.D., First United Church, Hamilton, writes—

"I can give unreserved and enthusiastic approval to the Travelogue presented by Ellsworth or Leroy Toll. It is, I think, the finest program of its kind that I have heard. The pictures are magnificent. First United Church was crowded to capacity and all were delighted. I believe theirs is the most popular entertainment in Canada this season. They bring the finest equipment and are worthy of every support."

The Toll Brothers will appear at Lachute United Church on November 26, at 8 p.m., in a unique evening's entertainment sponsored by the Lachute Women's Institute.

Real Blue Blood

A blue complexion possibly will be the permanent result of a Californian's attempt to commit suicide, physicians said. The 22-year-old Oakland youth was found lying under a tree in Sequoia Park. Taken to Alameda County Hospital for observation, he said he had taken a large quantity of silver nitrate in an attempt to end his life. While his condition was declared not serious, physicians said the chemical would seep through his system, giving a purple tint to his skin.

Woman Averted Disaster

An unidentified woman flagged a Southern Railway freight train at Bull's Gap, Tennessee, with her baby and prevented it from crashing into a boulder. Engineer Felix Plummer said he saw the woman standing on the track, frantically waving the baby up and down in her arms. He applied the brakes. Around the mountain the train crew found a huge boulder on the track. In the excitement the unknown woman walked away.

One hundred and twenty years ago there were only seven of us working on the staff of the Bank—a cashier, an accountant, a paying teller, a second teller, a discount clerk, a second bookkeeper, and a porter—that was the entire staff. Today we are more than 6000, in more than 300 Branches, all working to render modern, experienced banking service.

Our Bank's career has been inseparably woven into the career of the nation and every part of it. Founded in 1817, the Bank at once became a financial pathfinder for Canada's pioneers. Through all the intervening, eventful, growing years of Canadian life, our Bank has kept strong and efficient—by pursuing a policy of safety for depositors and by keeping our services always abreast of modern conditions.

In times of expansion and depression, in the best and the worst of economic conditions; through peace and wars, panics and political upheavals, Canadians have learned to rely upon the unwavering safety and banking assistance of the Bank of Montreal. Older than the Dominion itself, yet young as the latest sound business enterprise of Canada, we are working as usual on our 120th Birthday.

THE SAFE, SENSIBLE WAY TO RELIEVE CONSTIPATION

Every one knows the dangers of constipation. Pills and drugs usually bring only temporary relief. That's because common constipation is due to meals low in "bulk."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains "bulk" that does not break down in the body as does that of many leafy vegetables. ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water and forms a soft mass that gently sponges the intestines.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a food—not a medicine. In addition to "bulk"—it gives vitamin B to tone up the system, and iron for the blood. It is a healthful way to get rid of constipation and all its evils.

Eat two tablespoonfuls daily with milk or cream—three times a day in severe cases. Or use it in making bran muffins, breads, in salads or soups. Guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

A Column for the Kiddies

Rising slowly from his chair Grandfather Perry, with the help of his cane, made his way to the window and watched the children crossing the fields to the neighbor's home where the party was to be held.

He chuckled softly to himself as long as they were in sight. "Tom will not be so anxious to be a cat again, I'm thinking. If he does, he will be a tailless one. I'll bet. Climbing fences has been a bit difficult for him in that costume, but it will do the young scamp a lot of good to find that things one would like to do are not always the easiest. Life is being made too easy for the children nowadays," the old man ruminated, "at least for some of them. If they had to work as their Grannie and I did as children, they would appreciate what is being done for them more. But after all, Tom and Dollie are not bad little folks; especially Dollie. She's a lot like her Grannie. Poor Grannie, I'm sorry that she has to stay in bed so much. I miss her so, but then we cannot expect to be always young. Heigh-ho, heigh-ho!"

By this time Grandfather Perry had made his way back to the fireplace and had pushed back into the flames a heavy piece of oak that had rolled onto the hearth. The blaze shot up and lighted that corner of the room which was fast growing dark.

"Aren't you afraid of spooks grandfather, sitting here all alone in the darkness on Hallowe'en night?" called a merry voice from the doorway of the room.

"The biggest spook to come in here would be yourself, lad," the old gentleman called back. "But come in and show yourself. I know your voice and have been expecting you ever since I heard the bus stop at the highway corner."

"Now Grandfather, you're too smart altogether. Here I was hoping to surprise you and you are not a bit surprised; but you just wait a minute until I think up a real surprise for you. Hallowe'en would not be quite right if I couldn't surprise you in some way. I have it! I have it! You just wait, Grandfather Perry!" The voice trailed off into silence and Grandfather Perry, sitting alone in the glow of the hearth fire, caught his breath sharply to hold back the sigh that was escaping him in spite of himself, as he heard his big grandson hurry along the hall and take the stairs two steps at a time. It did not seem so very long since he had been able to do that too, but now he found it very hard to go up one at a time.

But Rob was coming back, whistling merrily yet softly; whatever the surprise was, Rob had not been long in arranging it. Almost before he had time to think, Rob had crossed the room to where he sat and had placed on his knee a light little person wrapped in an elderdown comforter. In an instant Grandfather Perry's arms went around her. "Grandmother!" he cried tenderly, as he held her close, wrapping the elderdown tightly around her thin shoulders. "This is the best surprise a man ever had, Rob lad," he half sobbed. "Grandmother has not been downstairs for many a long day. Why didn't someone think of carrying her down before?"

How wonderful that Rob should surprise him in this way, on this night of all nights—their wedding night of long ago.

"Now, now, Grandfather!" chuckled Grandma Perry. "If you are going to cry about it I'll go right back to my bed again."

"You'll do nothing of the sort!" Grandfather replied heartily. "You'll just stay where you are, and we'll have a Hallowe'en party together. You and Rob and I, all by ourselves, too, if the other grown-up folk are too busy."

"But we're not, Grandpa. We are coming to the party, too," exclaimed his daughter-in-law. "Rob Senior is going to make some toast right here where we can all watch him, and I'll boil the small kettle by hanging it from the old crane you and Grandmother used when you came here to live first."

With much squeaking and protesting the old crane was turned from the wall and swung out over the glowing coals, and it was not long before the kettle was whispering and porring gaily, while Rob Junior and his mother brought a table and the tea things. In the very centre of the table Rob placed a mowly box. "Hallowe'en surprise for Grannie," he said, a bit gruffly. "Can you reach it to take the top off, Gran?" Quite surprised and excited, Grandmother Perry reached out her thin old hands and lifted the top from the box. "It's more top than box," she chuckled, as the entire box seemed to lift from the table. "Oh! oh! oh!" she quavered, then turned to hide her happy tears on Grandfather's shoulder as the contents of the box were revealed. A small wedding cake, exactly like the one she and Grandfather had had at their wedding, lay hidden under the box.

"Who's crying now?" Grandfather whispered, as he tenderly stroked her soft white curls. Instantly Grandmother Perry raised her face from his shoulder. "Rob, lad!" she said, her voice shaking. "Some good fairy surely put this thought into your head. I have been lying upstairs all day just wishing that I could have one more real nice wedding anniversary with Grandpa—and here it is. If the children were only here to enjoy it too, how happy I should be." As if the kind Hallowe'en fairies had indeed planned it, in answer to Grandmother Perry's wish a sudden rush of childish feet was heard on the veranda.

The "boys" were around on Hallowe'en for candies, apples and cigarettes. We noticed two ladies in the crowd, and they smoked too!

Lachute was recently visited by a party of lady geologists, students of McGill making an inspection of this vicinity, conducted by Sir William Dawson, Professor of Geology.

While two men were crossing the river near Viau's Bridge, St. Canute, in a flat-bottomed boat, the bottom gave way and both men were drowned.

There was something more than moving pictures at the Albert Hall this week. Mr. Bishop, while moving a stove upstairs, happened to slip when nearing the top, with the result that a general mix-up occurred, both making a race for the bottom—but Mr. Bishop landed an easy winner.

At the town council meeting a largely signed petition was presented by Mr. Henry Barnes for his appointment as constable for this town.

TURKEY RACKS

Chicken and turkey suppers are a fall epidemic, sweeping across the country. I heard a woman say that she had bought a couple of turkey racks. Not knowing what a turkey rack was, I asked for information. Looking rather pityingly at me, she explained that a turkey rack was the bones. It appears that after the turkey supper, they sell the rack for 25 cents, to use for turkey soup. This particular church group had used 35 turkeys for their supper and had sold all the racks. Do your own multiplying and see how much that added to the funds.

RECIPES

The question has arisen, where do I get my recipes? They come from a great many sources and it is not always possible to tell where they came from. Many of the best of them are my mother's; some are recipes we got in our cooking classes at Macdonald Institute; others I have used for so many years that their original source is not known. This accounts for the old recipes but there are always new ones. Some new recipes seem to burst out by spontaneous combustion and are all over the country at once. I have some good friends who send me the new things they have found out. And it is a friendly act, for, believe me, it is some chore to get two reliable recipes a week over a period of years. It is easy enough to get recipes, if one is satisfied with just a recipe, but all that I give you are tried and proven to the best of my ability. I seldom print a recipe, even those given to me by the most careful cooks, without trying it. Often there is just some little thing that makes all the difference in the result, and that I try to give you. Many recipes originate in my own kitchen. You will never know the many that are tried on my long-suffering family, and friends. As one friend remarked, "He did not mind being a guinea-pig for a good cause." Some of my recipes are entirely original, and for others I get the germ of an idea from some place or other, and work on it. Perhaps the recipe I have seen takes too much time or money and I build up a new one to fit the average pocket and to be less elaborate. I often see my original recipes reprinted. I have found several in cook-books that a chapter of the I.O.E. or a church organization has published. Lately there have been ever so many sent in to one of the daily papers which publishes contributions of readers. I like to cook and I enjoy experimenting, so I get a lot of fun in working out new ideas. Sometimes I feel woe-folly short of them, as if there couldn't possibly be a new thing to eat.

TRICKS IN ALL TRADES

Most mothers have to use ingenuity in seeing that their children get the right kind of food. Because a child does not like to drink milk does not mean that you cannot give the full quota. There are tricks in all trades. Let them eat it. Soups, desserts and so on. Maybe they like chocolate drinks. So make them with milk. One morning I ran into a neighbor's house and she was making a bread pudding. She was using four eggs, and as she was a careful woman I probably looked surprised. She told me that her oldest boy would not eat eggs and ate very little meat. So she fed him proteid foods in different guises. He was very fond of bread pudding, so she used extra eggs and saw that he had two liberal helpings. As she said, "He gets eggs that way and the extra egg the rest of us get won't hurt us any". He was fond of cheese dishes and specially of cheese fondue, so she often served it, and in it are three proteid foods — cheese, milk and eggs. There is a substitute for every food but milk. Children's tastes must be considered to a certain extent, but that does not mean that they need do without any necessary food.

SIMPLE AUTUMN MENUS

Savory stews and chowders, spicy steamed puddings and piping hot pancakes and muffins come into their own during the nippy autumn days when the "frost is on the pumpkin." And the beauty of these dishes lies, too, in the splendid way they simplify meals. A hearty stew is very satisfying and needs only two or three other dishes to complete the menu.

Lima bean chowder is one answer to the question of what to serve for the family luncheon or supper. Serve the chowder with hot corn bread, add a salad of curly endive with French dressing and finish up with apple sauce and ginger cookies.

Lima Bean Chowder

Two cups dried lima beans, 1/4 pound salt pork, 2 onions, 1 cup diced carrots, 2 cups diced potatoes, 1/2 teaspoon powdered thyme, 1/2 teaspoon white pepper, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 cups canned tomatoes, 2 cups milk.

Soak beans over night in water to more than cover. Drain. Cut pork in thin slices and cook over low heat until straw color. Remove and set aside. Peel onions and cut in thin slices and cook in fat until pale yellow. Take care not to let the fat get too hot because it will spoil the flavor of the chowder. Add beans and thyme and enough hot water to more than cover. Cover kettle and simmer until tender. It will take three or four hours. Then add potatoes, carrots, salt, pepper, sugar and tomatoes, and cook until vegetables are tender, about thirty minutes. Add milk and bring just to the boiling point but do not let boil. Add salt pork and serve.

Mulled Cider

Two quarts sweet cider, 20 whole cloves, 1/2 cup brown sugar, 8 sticks cinnamon, 15 whole allspice, 1/4 teaspoon salt. Combine ingredients and bring slowly to boiling point. Simmer fifteen minutes. Cool and let stand over night. Remove spices and reheat to serve.

If you have no sour milk in the house and need some for baking add 2 tablespoons lemon juice to one cup of sweet milk and it will "turn" immediately.

When separating eggs, if any of the yolk gets into the whites, the whites will not beat up stiffly. Remove the yolk by dampening the corner of a soft clean towel and dipping it in the yolk. The yolk clings to the wet cloth and every bit of yolk can be removed.

"Stove pipes", "funnel" and "pill box" are a few of the shapes of hats that were shown at the Paris openings. Bustles and draperies in the fashion of the 1880's were shown on the new dresses, and fur was used lavishly on hats as well.

Corn Bread

Two cups corn meal, 1 cup general purpose flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 2 cups buttermilk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 egg.

Mix and sift flour, sugar, salt, baking powder and soda. Add corn meal and mix well. Stir in buttermilk and add melted butter and well beaten egg. Turn into a buttered oblong pan and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) Bake corn breads and muffins on the middle grate of the oven for the most satisfactory results. Uniform heat at top and bottom produces a delicious loaf without a hard crust.

Efficient housewives usually budget their time and work on a schedule. Some women naturally work faster with their hands than others do, but if you have a certain amount of time allotted for certain tasks such as dish washing and bed making, you will learn to do things quickly even if you are inclined to be slow. Can you make a bed in three minutes? You should, so train yourself to do it and gain some extra time for reading and sewing.

FOR BETTER HEALTH

BY Dr. J. ROSSLYN EARP

THE CASE FOR JOHN DOE JR.

"The plaintiff in this case, your honor, is John Doe Jr., a minor whom I represent under the provisions of New York laws of 1945, chapter 104. If it pleases your honor, I shall prove by expert medical testimony, that the plaintiff has lost his sight through the disease called syphilitic iritis, and that his brain has also been attacked by the virus of syphilis so that he is in danger of losing his reason. I shall prove that this disease was transmitted to the plaintiff from the defendant Mary Doe, his mother, while she was with child; and further that she herself acquired the disease from her husband Joe Doe Senior who by his own confession suffered from the symptoms of syphilis before the time of his marriage. I shall prove that this disease was transmitted through negligence which, though this is not a criminal court, I shall venture to apostrophise as criminal negligence; since, had blood tests of the defendants been made before marriage, the marriage would have been postponed and, had a test been made of Mary Doe's blood at the beginning of her pregnancy, treatment would have been instituted which would have saved her baby from infection. I shall ask actual damages of $5,000 and exemplary damages of $10,000 to be assessed against each of the defendants separately."

Nothing but imaginary rhetoric? Yes, but it might come true. And remember every year in America 60,000 babies are born already infected with this disease.

The Housewife's Problem

More attention is being given to the problems of the consumer than ever before. With rising costs for everything he buys, the consumer, as such, is asking "how come?" and demanding an answer in language which he can understand.

The housewives in the Bronx in New York City recently organized a "buyer's strike", refusing to buy any more meat until the retail butchers lowered their prices. Five thousand meat-markets did no business for several days, until they finally capitulated and the price of meat came down.

Investigations on behalf of some of the new consumer organizations put most of the blame for high prices on the middleman. Direct distribution from producer to consumer, with no string of unnecessary brokers, jobbers and wholesalers taking toll from every item as it passes through their hands, is one of the ways in which prices can be kept down to reasonable figures.

His New Name

Every revolution throws up some curious quirks in human nature. In the French revolution they abolished nobility, prohibited religion and made a new calendar for themselves, and the story of M. de Saint-Janvier shows how all three worked out in practice. They abolished the "de" in his name because it smacked of nobility; the "Saint," because it reminded of religion; and the "Janvier" (January) because they had changed the calendar; so his name went down on the records as: "Citizen Nivoso, formerly De Saint-Janvier."

Dominion Stores have given to the public the facts relating to the service they perform in Quebec Province. And facts are stubborn things. Waves of criticism break against them in vain. Being facts they cannot be controverted.

It is a fact that Dominion Stores have improved shopping conditions for the public.

It is a fact that they have brought a wider selection of fresher merchandise within easier reach of the housewife.

It is a fact that they buy in huge quantities from local farmers and producers.

It is a fact that they are good tenants and liberal users of local utilities and services.

Dominion Stores throughout this Province, have aided the buying public in every one of their respective localities by inaugurating new and better methods of handling goods while selling at prices that benefit thousands upon thousands of individual householders and their families.

ROWELL COMMISSION CONFRONTED BY 12-MONTHS PROGRAM INQUIRING INTO TAXATION AND FINANCES

"The Ottawa Spotlight"

By "Spectator".

Ottawa, Nov. 9th.—The stage is now set for a painstaking inquiry into the taxation system of Canada, and the division of the load of government responsibilities.

The Chairman of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, the Hon. Newton W. Rowell, gave an interview to the press last week in which he outlined the program for the coming year.

There are four sources of information which are being utilized by the commission in its important survey:

1. Federal and provincial governments.

2. "Recognized public institutions", that is, those speaking for a body of public opinion.

3. A staff of research workers, employed by the Commission.

4. Individual witnesses the Commission may decide to call.

The briefs of the governments and the public associations will be made available, so far as possible, to those who can use them to advantage in furthering the work of the inquiry. (Continued on page 3)

University of Paris Honors Surgeon, Connected Here

Dr. Edward W. Archibald has been accorded a signal honor from abroad, in the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine conferred on him by the University of Paris. Occupied with the duties of his profession here in Canada, Dr. Archibald was unable to go to France, but the degree was presented for him to Hon. Philippe Roy, Canadian Minister in Paris, at a ceremony last week. The Dean of the Faculty of Medicine at Paris University praised Dr. Archibald's career. He is recognized today as one of the world's greatest surgeons, a distinction in which Lachute extends more than a passing congratulation—Dr. Archibald having married into one of this

Crashing Through Bridge, Truck Falls into Creek

A truck loaded with five tons of pressed hay crashed through a bridge on the road along North River, near Dave Berry's farm, on Saturday at around 4 p.m. The truck was driven by J. Lanthier of St. Clet, who was selling hay in the district. He was driving eastward over the bridge, when the flooring and beams gave way and the rear of the truck took a drop of 10 feet into the creek. The driver was unhurt and the mishap caused little damage to the vehicle, which was later lifted onto the road by two service trucks from Deacon's Garage.

POPPY CAMPAIGN AND ARMISTICE DAY SERVICE KEEP MEMORY OF YOUTH'S GREAT SACRIFICE

CITIZENS AND HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS GATHER AT CENOTAPH FOR LAYING OF WREATHS

The annual Remembrance Day service was held in Lachute Auditorium this morning. There was a good attendance of veterans and friends assembled in loving memory of those who, during the Great War, laid down their lives in the cause of right and humanity.

A timely address was given by Rev. Major Leslie Dunwell, Assistant Rector of St. George's Church, Montreal, who impressed the gathering with the seriousness of past and present-day happenings, and urged that we strive to maintain peace. Many beautiful wreaths displayed on the platform stressed the purpose and significance of the occasion. After the service in the Auditorium these emblems were carried to the Cenotaph nearby and there deposited.

Principal C. L. Hall with his High School staff and pupils, attended in a body to pay their tribute, each scholar wearing a poppy. The pupils listened attentively to Rev. H. Cousens who addressed them.

At the close of these impressive exercises, "Last Post" was sounded.

The local branch, No. 70, of the Canadian Legion, under whose direction the Remembrance Day activities were carried out, are indebted to all who assisted in the poppy campaign and in the annual observance.

They tender thanks for public support in their sale of poppies and wreaths, and particularly to the canvassers who have worked strenuously in making the effort a success.

Rector and Bride Honored at Grenville

Grenville.—The regular meeting of the St. Matthew's W.A. was held last Thursday, nearly all the members being present and a number of friends. Among other business, arrangements were completed for the Armistice Supper to be held on Thursday. Following this a delightful surprise was given to the Rector and his bride, when they were made the recipients of a pantry shower in which a large quantity of preserves and groceries were given. The presentation was made by the President, Mrs. R. B. White, who welcomed Mrs. Brueton as a new member of the branch and expressed wishes for her future happiness. Mrs. Brueton responded, expressing her appreciation of the appropriate and useful gifts. Mr. Brueton also spoke briefly. A very enjoyable tea was then served and the meeting concluded.

BROKEN FRAGMENTS

BY M. V. TRAYERS

Thousands of young Canadians, young men and young women, are counting the days till the end of the first term, when the Christmas holidays fling open the doors of the study halls and effervescent youth dashes home to spend the happy season with Mother and Dad.

It is a far cry from the time of the "little red school-house" when Dad trudged his weary way to school, and received his education for the modest sum of $2.50 per capita—and that for 50 percent of our present day population.

When we look at the position of Canada today, and the important influence her public men have in shaping the destinies of both the Empire and the world, we are forced to recognize the very potent power the "little red school-house" exercised on the minds of educational boys of yesterday. The mighty portals of educational institutions today represent such a enormous annual revenue that in comparison our "little red school-house" becomes dwarfed into insignificance. Today Dad's $2.50 worth of education costs over $1,000, or more than thirteen percent of our national revenue. In return for this enormous expenditure, what have we? We have two of the greatest assets of any nation on earth to-day. The highest literacy rating and youngest population. The cost is high but it is worth every cent of it.

Does anyone question the wisdom of higher education considering the number of highly educated people who are engaged in menial tasks or are numbered among the unemployed. Oh yes! quite a number of well-meaning people—like Alexander the Great—deplore the fact that there are no further worlds to conquer. Professions are overcrowded. The medical profession is overcrowded. Yet we have no cure for a common cold. We have no satisfactory anesthetic for child-birth. Cancer cuts down and sends to an early grave over fifty percent of our people, and heart disease is on the increase, rheumatism and gout are still with us. Our asylums are filled with the mentally deficient; the clouded brains of millions of our fellow-men enslave behind imbecilic brows. Dare you say the medical profession is overcrowded?

Dentistry is overcrowded. . . . We still suffer the pain of painless dentistry. . . . We wait until our teeth rot; we have no means of preserving them. In another two generations, we are told, we shall have no teeth at all despite the fact we clean our teeth once a day and visit our dentist once a year.

The comparison of our artificial light with the light of the sun equals one-tenth of one percent. The best that our scientists can do shows a 99.9 percent wastage in the process.

The energy of the greatest powerhouse in the world is all going to waste uncontrolled because we have been unable to harness the sun's rays. Grasshoppers devour our crops and insects of one kind or another cost us on this continent alone an estimated $3,000 per minute.

Overcrowded professions! . . . The rats are overcrowded but there is plenty of room on the ridge.

Longueuil Students Guests of Lachute High School

Last Saturday a number of boy and girl students of the Longueuil High School motored to Lachute to participate in a day of combined activities.

The visitors arrived at 3 p.m., and a softball game was soon under way, the local team proving victorious after a closely contested match. Adjourning to the banquet hall a fine repast was served to over eighty pupils. A speech of thanks was given on behalf of the visiting students, and was responded to in a brief message from the local school president, Victor Thorburn. Dancing was enjoyed until ten o'clock, at which time the guests departed. During the evening the party joined in several impromptu sing-songs.

The local students anticipate a return visit in the near future.

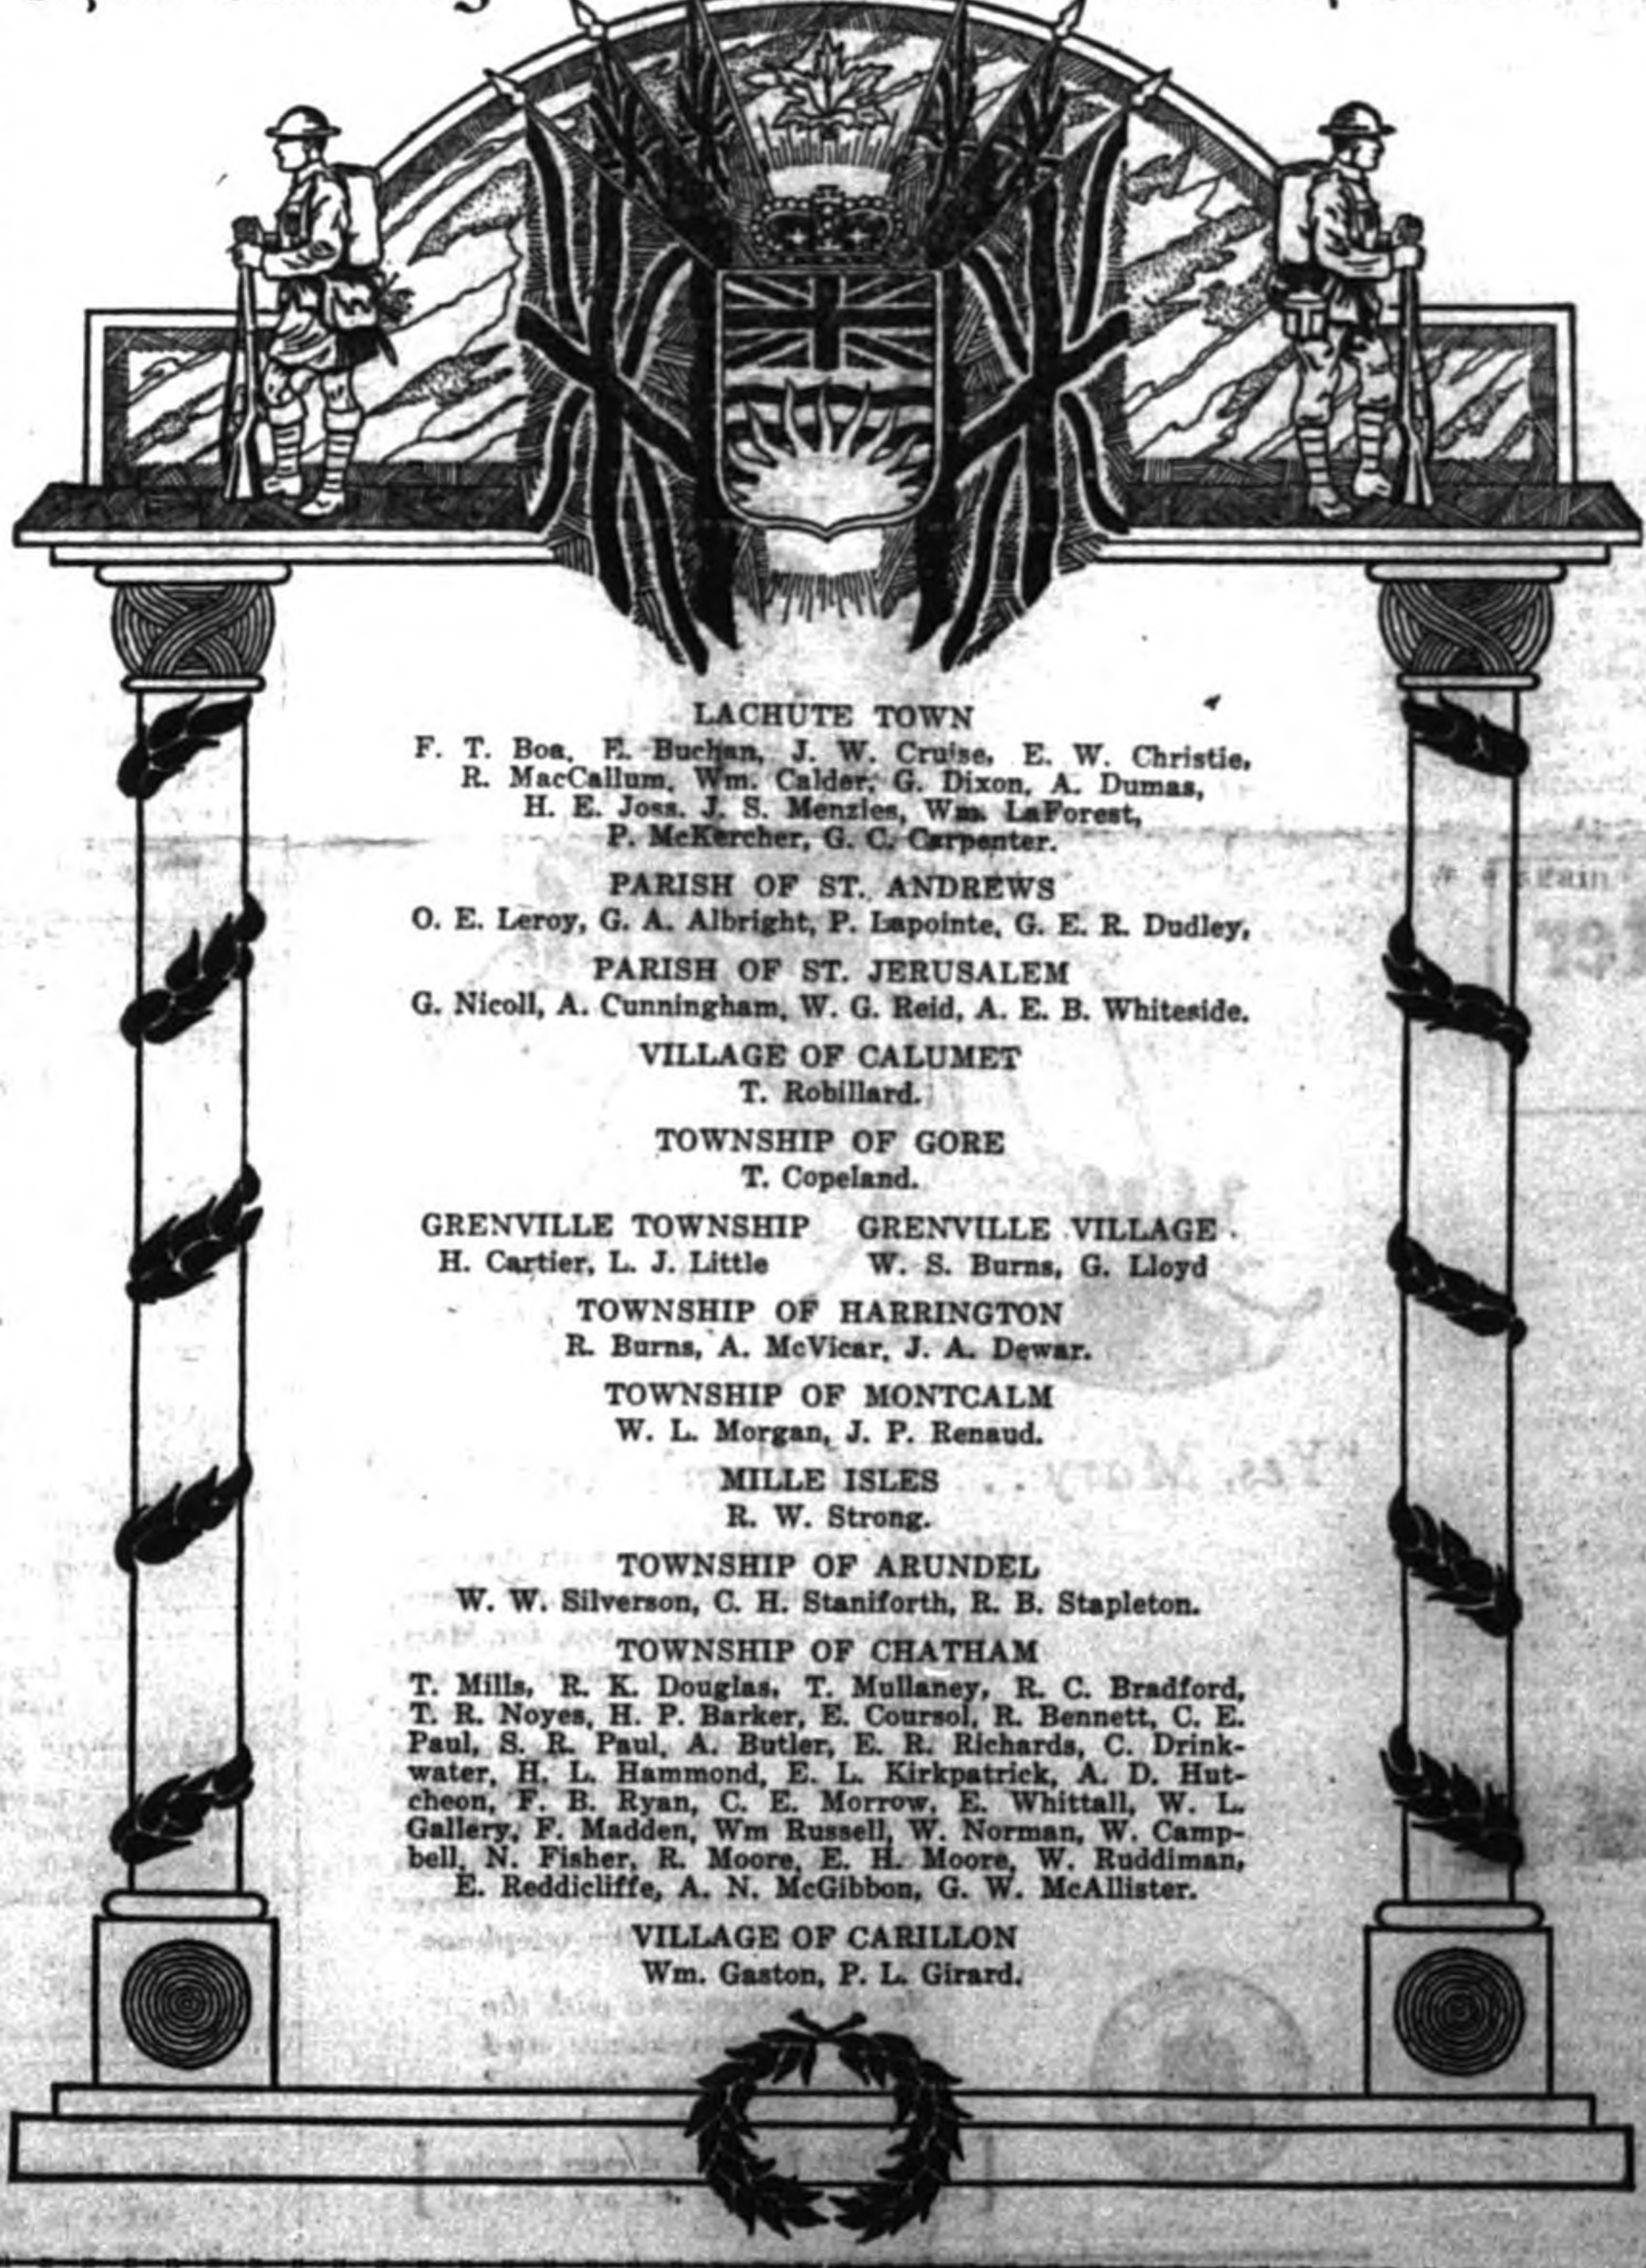

Sincere thanks of the pupils are extended to Miss Peggy Beveridge and Miss Barbara Miller who provided the excellent dance music.

Buckingham Considers New Street Lighting System

RECEIVES GRANT FOR PUBLIC WORKS

Buckingham town council last week voted acceptance of a provincial grant of $28,242.83 for the purposes of carrying out public works. Quebec Government offered this amount for local improvements on condition that the town discontinue direct relief for one year commencing Nov. 1, 1937.

A motion was also made for application to the department of lands and forests of the provincial government for a grant of $6,500 for purchase of a fire truck and ladder and installation of a fire alarm system for the town.

The council received estimates for a new street lighting system for the town.

Prime Minister Will Give Radio Address Tonight

Vancouver.—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King will join four distinguished promoters of world peace in speeches of fellowship and goodwill when the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, in co-operation with the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, presents over its national network this evening from 9.00 to 10.00 p.m. a special broadcast in commemoration of Remembrance Day.

This program, directed from Vancouver, will be of international interest. Besides the message of the Prime Minister, who will speak from Ottawa, there will be brief addresses by Brigadier-General Alex Ross, Dominion President of the Canadian Legion, who also will speak from Ottawa, and Daniel J. Doherty, National Commander of the American Legion, who will speak from Washington. Important messages, especially transcribed for the broadcast, by Major General Sir Frederick Maurice, K.C.M.G., C.B., head of the British Legion, and M. Jean Desbons, head of the French Ex-Soldiers' Organization, will be presented.

The Waves of the World

The waves are troubled, Lord, with war.
And conflicts sear the soul
Of men, who in thine image are,
They see no higher goal
Than fame by conquering with the sword.
The last to kill is theirs;
These troubled waves, Our Father,
Bid war give place to prayers.

In his business relations with the townsfolk of Lachute Mr. Cheley has won both esteem and friendship. During their residence here, also, Mr. and Mrs. Cheley and their family have been counted an asset in the social and community life of the town. Good wishes accompany them to their new sphere of activity.

Statue of Cleopatra is

Egypt's Chief Attraction

Though the Nile is lined with temples and statues erected to the honor of Egypt's ancient pharaohs, many travelers search especially for the one ruler who is most vivid in their minds and most expressive of Egypt's charm—Cleopatra. Actually, according to an authority, only one original likeness, sculptured in Cleopatra's own time, remains in existence—the statue on the temple at Dendera. This shows Cleopatra in the conventionally stiff, upright attitude, with the emblem of the goddess of love on her head and the little caesarion, her son by Julius Caesar, at her side.

The temple at Dendera is one of the best preserved in Egypt. But the fact that it retains its statue of Cleopatra is due to a curious circumstance. When Julius Caesar had been assassinated in Rome, his successor, Augustus, vindictively commanded that all statues of Cleopatra be destroyed.

A wealthy admirer of the great Queen, however, appealed to the cupidity of Augustus and bought immunity for her statues at the fabulous price of 2,000 talents—something more than $500,000. The image of Dendera, therefore, the only one remaining, may be ungraceful from the modern point of view, but must rank as one of the costliest statues known.

SOILS ANALYSED BY NEW METHODS

The complete chemical analysis of a soil is a tedious and costly operation and seldom yields data on which fertilizer needs can be based with any degree of accuracy. True, the total amounts of plant food substances present can be determined with precision but the proportion of these available for extraction by the growing crop cannot be estimated very closely. Consequently the saying arose that the only way to gauge the fertilizer needs of a given soil was to try the fertilizers in the field and note the crop response. A short cut is represented by what is known as the Neubauer method in which rye plants are grown on the soil under test, removed while still in the seedling stage, or 17 days after planting, dried in the oven and analysed. The amounts of the plant food substances found in the dry matter indicate in a measure the deficiency, abundance or excess of the available supply of these in the soil. Equipment for the Neubauer test was installed recently in the soils laboratory of the Department of Chemistry, O.A.C., Guelph, Ont.

KNOWLEDGE OF THE SOIL

The farmer's ability to judge his crop needs was conceded by Thomas Carlyle, a century ago, when he said, "The simple husbandman can tell his field and, by knowledge gained of its soil, plant it with the fit grain, though the deep rocks and central fires are unknown to him. His little crop hangs under and over the firmament of stars and sails through whole untracked celestial spaces, between Aries and Libra; nevertheless

One Hundred Miles of Gold!

"A VICTORY OF PEACE"

Since the dawn of history imagination of the world has been stirred with stories of war and rumors of conflict. Breaking out here and there with irregular puffs and explosions the news has never failed to upset the equilibrium of commerce and cause consternation. Business has been disrupted, social life has been shocked and wheels of material prosperity have been made to turn with eccentric motion because puppets have been elected to engage in the dubious sport of playing tag on the edge of a volcano. The process of getting a war under way and its subsequent action works pretty much as follows. After a great deal of bickering and wordy exchange puffs and sputters suddenly assume the proportions of a dark cloud which rolls over the horizon in ominous fashion. It stands menacingly still then bursts with terrific certainty, frightful force and catastrophe. The foundations of the universe are rocked to the depths. With the holocaust comes the downfall of dynasties, the slaughter of millions of innocent citizens. Out of the debris is salvaged an aftermath of reconstruction which takes years to accomplish and is never quite consummated. Analysis has shown that in the end no particular betterment of the original situation has resulted. The record of suffering and wanton destruction which accompanies the operation remains engrossed on the pages of history in paragraphs of intense morbidity and sadness. The scars of war of this sort can never be obliterated. Just where and when the war became identified with the skilled arts is difficult to determine but it is probable that its fusion with higher orders of attainment had its birth in ancient days when panoply was effectively used to fire the minds of a populace and later in the ballyhoo propaganda so useful in rousing enthusiasm of recruits towards the cause. Anyway we are taught to believe in "the art of war". Some time when good becomes the common goal of ill we hope that the phrase will be converted and supplanted with that of "the art of peace" but just when the bloody assortment of swords, daggers and stilettos will be battered into plowshares is, at present writing, difficult to say. Preparations for the next war seem to be perpetually in order.

Touching lightly the garment of peace some of the ways in the Malartic Mining Company are chuckling over a yarn concerning a Rip Van Winkle who it is related blew out of the saplings somewhere on the Harricana about last fly time. Squatting on a bunk house floor combing the tangles out of his whiskers he listened intently to a lurid tale from a prominent engineer who had seen service on the battle fields of France. In the middle of the narrative the old sordidness spoke up. "Well I declare," said he "When were all this?" After being informed he rubbed his gnarled fist over a toothless chin, took a big "chaw" of blackstrap and exclaimed, "By gravy, aint that a cornercracker. Guess I must a been way north when that happened. Too bad I missed her."

In the Province of Quebec modestly unobtrusive first cousins of the plowshare are enjoying a delightfully energetic entrance into society. Scions of the pick and shovel dynasty they come of a long line of ancestry which for generations has distinguished itself nobly in every country under the sun. These functionaries have rendered a service in opening up a wilderness the value of which is beyond estimation. Backed by an army of hard rock veterans, many of them heroes of the late unpleasantness, they are vitally instrumental in the conquest of an Empire whose mineral wealth is of such vast proportions that tales of Croesus and the famed Lamp of Aladdin pale into insignificance by comparison. With battalions of workers—soldiers of the pick and shovel—true emissaries of peace they wage a battle against mighty bastions of nature. Every day a new stronghold is captured, a victory won. In the vanguard of this army ride prosperity and favorable notoriety. All along the line the advance is general and though the area occupied is relatively small a fever of activity which beggars description prevails. The whole thing is of such extraordinary proportions that the task will take 1,000 years to perform. The legion of prime developers has worked into the Quebec field to stay. It is said that during this year prospecting was somewhat curtailed owing to an unsettled caused by the enactment of bill number 5 by the Quebec Government, but in truth the actual number of claims staked was well up. Candidates generally in the province in this regard were comparable with those which prevailed in other provinces where mining and prospecting are indulged in. There seems no doubt that bill number 5 was an error but it is also reasonable to assume that the error was not made to deliberately stifle an industry which is of paramount importance to the welfare of the country. That it will be modified or repealed shortly is highly probable. An interesting factor is that nearly all increases in gold milling capacity have been carried out on older properties which have been brought into production by the rise in the price of yellow metal.

In future Quebec gold expansion will depend more on the result of newer discoveries. Owing to a spectacular find of ultra rich gold ore found at the O'Brien mine in Cadillac Township numerous properties were incorporated and a great deal of work carried out in that district. At the moment activity is mainly confined to those on the strike of the favorable Cadillac rock series. Most properties are well financed. Extensive programmes have been arranged to explore their excellent possibilities and carry them into production. In the neighboring township of Malartic a most favorable condition is apparent. It is in the nature of a boom but differs from the Cadillac excitement because it is based on much more substantial ore developments. Canadian Malartic has achieved extremely low costs in mining its wide vein with the result that a fine profit is obtained from a production of 700 tons of 5 and 6 dollars ore per day. The adjoining property, Sladen Malartic, has developed enough ore for a 250 ton mill with big chances for generous expansion. Ore grade of around 9 dollars is expected. The adjoining property East Malartic has by diamond drilling indicated a tremendously large body of 7 to 8 dollars ore and a mill of 500 tons capacity is a near possibility. The 3 properties mentioned are on a line of strike which stretches east and west over 2 miles. It seems as though there are 2 important ore carrying veins running through the Malartic region. One to the south is associated with large bodies of low grade ore and one to the north which indicates a geological condition similar to that which is characteristic of the famous "K" zone at Siscoe in the Harricana camp. On this northern strike are located Lake Shore Malartic, Celta, Valco, Ascot West Shore, Paquette, Malartic and Bayside Malartic. These properties are well managed and have potential possibilities of an extraordinary nature.

Bayside Malartic Mines Company, which is headed by A. J. Douglas of Montreal as general manager, is in a particularly enviable position. On its Launay claims a quartz vein carrying unusually high values in free gold and silver has been opened. This vein is fully exposed for nearly one mile and has a width of from 26 to 30 feet. It is so strongly sheared that prominent authorities have pronounced it the most important disclosure which has been evidenced in Northwestern Quebec. It is singularly free from local overburden and presents such possibilities that recommendations for a mill to commence production immediately have been decided upon. A commercial body of high grade ore is in sight and as the situation stands the Launay claims of Bayside Malartic have promise of developing into one of the big paying producers of Northwestern Quebec. That the extraordinary showing persists to great depth seems certain. The vein is open at both ends and at this writing an additional 500 feet have been added to it. James Robar is in charge at the property. He collaborates with Mining Engineer A. D. Hoagland, who is Consultant at Shawkey Siscoe and other prominent gold mining properties in the district.

(This is the second of a series of articles on gold mining in the Province of Quebec. A third article will appear in our next issue.)

"Yes, Mary . . . and Tom's fine, too."

Old Mrs. Watson lives with her son Tom. Yet her only daughter Mary, miles away, is with her too, for Mary, though old-fashioned in many ways, is definitely telephone minded and never fails to call her Mother on Long Distance at least once a week — an inexpensive and supreme pleasure for both of them. As Tom Watson puts it, "though our family's scattered, we're never really far apart — with the telephone."

The church was decorated with a large flag and white chrysanthemums. In the United Church Rev. J. A. Mowatt gave a suitable discourse on Armistice Day and all that it implied, taking as his text the three words, "Remember Jesus Christ". A large Union Jack was hung at the front of the church with floral decorations. A good attendance and hearty singing contributed to a memorable service. The Anglican Church will keep the anniversary on Sunday, the 14th.

The Provincial Junior Red Cross are offering for sale by the children of the schools a very pretty calendar, one comparing very favorably with the Tiny Tim Special of a year ago, which proved a splendid souvenir and reminder of the work done by the organized children of the province in a group so well known and appreciated.

The calendar this year represents the two little English Princesses in a pose familiar to the public during the Coronation period. It is now on sale, although the week of November 28 to December 4 is to be especially known as "Calendar Week" when the various select teams throughout the province will be on the job to sell the calendar.

This year, as last, the Juniors are making an organized effort in this regard and are out to push sales to the limit of their time, strength and supply. Last year sales increased to the extent of many going without the calendar, $5,111.61 being cleared, with the result that 973 children from all parts of the province received medical care, a great deal of it being hospital treatment. Nor is any case refused, no matter how prolonged or financially burdensome, the Juniors lending their aid to all needy children requiring the attention of a doctor, a competent nurse, or a skilled surgeon.

The picture of the Princesses is by the gracious permission of Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth. You will want one. And 50,000 Juniors are on their rounds right now to make sales. Buy a calendar, even if it is on a Sunday. The better the day the better the deed. The Juniors are out to help the needy little ones of the province. Seventeen million other Juniors all over the world are doing the same thing. They need your money and you will want a calendar. Buy a "Little Princesses" Junior Red Cross calendar.

New Facilities, Motor-Coach Travel to Florida Resorts

Travel to Florida resorts this year is expected to be very heavy, according to R. G. Perry, Passenger Traffic Manager of the Provincial Transport Company.

New de luxe Express services have been incorporated into the through schedules with the result that Miami, the most southern Florida resort, is a scant 51 hours from Montreal! The frequent motorcoach schedules are exceptionally flexible. In short, one can go one way, return another, usually at no extra fare. Stopovers can be arranged at the larger cities or points of interest en route—permitting a leisurely sight-seeing journey or a short time-clipping trip.

—just as you prefer. So complete a network of routes stretches from north to south that you can arrange your trip through almost any intermediate city.

Convenient Rest and Meal Stops
These de luxe coaches make short comfort stops every two hours for passenger convenience. Meal stops of about 30 minutes' duration at well-selected restaurants three times daily.

Generous Baggage Allowance
You can carry 100 lbs. of baggage free of charge on your ticket. Baggage in excess of this limit may be carried at a small extra charge. Your baggage is carried right with you on the coach, and must be accompanied crossing the international boundary line. Upon your arrival at New York, Detroit, or Buffalo on your southbound trip, you can check your baggage right through to your destination.

Additional Information
Planning a trip is truly half its pleasure, although trying to assemble complete information in many cases is a tedious proposition. To help you enjoy the "planning" and to overcome the "assembling", write for Provincial's new Florida Booklet.

EDITORIAL

A NINETEEN-YEAR-OLD MEMORY

Nineteen years ago today the whole world was filled with rejoicing. The war was over. An Armistice had been agreed upon between the allied armies and those of the Central European powers. Four years of bloody warfare, the most tragic and deadly in the world's history, had come to an end.

More than eight and one-half million young men were killed in that great conflict. The Central Powers, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey, sacrificed three and a third million youths on the altar of war. The Allies lost more than five million of their young manhood. Germany's losses were the largest, 1,773,700 killed or died of wounds or disease; Russia's were next in number, 1,700,000.

Add to the number killed the tremendous list of wounded, of men reported "missing" whose fate has never been certain, and there is a total of more than thirty-seven million of vigorous youth whose lives were lost or their physical bodies injured in that terrible four years of war. Is it any wonder that among those who went through it there is a burning zeal for peace?

And yet today, only nineteen years later, we see the spectacle of a world again either at war or on the verge of war. We talked, back in those days, of a "war to end war". How foolish that sounds now! All the sacrifice of human lives has not taught the nations yet that war never settled anything.

MORE UNIFORM CANON FODDER

"If you want to breed normal children, you'd better not have too much brains. The higher the intellect, the poorer the possibilities of normal children."—So says Fritz B. Talbot, Emeritus Professor of Pediatrics at Harvard.

Sure, the more like peas in a pod, the less chance of any above average leaders. Then pound down the average a bit, and you have nice uniform, malleable canon fodder. Hitler and Mussolini could run a school along these lines, to perfection—and eventual extinction.

Masons Entertain D.D.G.M.

Last Thursday evening Laurentian Chapter No. 24 was honored by a visit from the Grand Superintendent, Rt. Ex. Comp. Alex. Nickle of Montreal, accompanied by several distinguished brethren. Purpose of the assembly was the conferring of the Royal Arch Degree, in which Ex. Comp. H. Brannan and his officers were highly complimented for their efficient work. Later in the evening refreshments were served and an enjoyable time was spent.

Lt.-Col. J. E. Seale received the marked honor of being elected as representative of the Grand Master in the Blue Lodge for this district. A large gathering of members and friends turned out on Monday evening to pay him homage. Wor. Bro. G. B. Dobbie and his officers conferred the Second Degree in a most efficient way and were highly complimented by the D.D.G.M. A tasty repast was arranged, which, with a splendid program by Montreal artists, completed a happy evening.

Rt. Wor. Bro. Seale gave an inspiring address on "Everyday Masonry", leaving many worthy thoughts with the brethren which will long be remembered. While Bro. Seale has been honored with the position of District Deputy, the local Masonic Order has also felt proud in having a man of such sterling qualities to act as representative of the Grand Master.

Visitors were present from Montreal, Grenville and Hawkesbury.

HOW'S YOUR WIT 'N WISDOM?

There may be no "half-wits" in Lachute. At least, we would hesitate to name a list. Someone else might decide to do the same, to our embarrassment.

However, it could also be said quite definitely that we have no "whole-wits" among us. Those who have studied the human mentality say that the mind is never full, that the brightest and wisest still have much to learn. You will notice we said nothing about nit-wits—which lets out those who didn't agree with you in politics when last you argued.

Robert Browning felt what modern scientists claim to have proven, namely, that there is "no end to learning." Of all the different groups of brain cells, with their special work of receiving orders, giving orders, controlling glands and so forth, we are particularly interested in the neurones. These nerve cells, we are told, are in different parts of the brain. They record impressions, relate them to previous experience and help us form good judgment. There is no limit to the combinations of ideas they can make. Hence the attaining of perfect understanding or wisdom is never a completed process, so long as we live.

A half-wit may never become whole, but there is hope for improvement for all of us.

A SEED BLOSSOMS

Dads whose children have abandoned those expensive hobbies chosen for them with parental care, need not despair. Howard Angus Kennedy, secretary of the Canadian Authors' Association, at the age of 79 went back to working pictures in wool—a pursuit which he discarded at the age of nine. He has completed the woollen roses he left unfinished 70 years earlier, and now he sits up nights working on more intricate designs.

SPECULATION IS NECESSITY

A wealthy man died a couple of years ago, and the inheritance tax investigators, charged with appraising his estate for tax purposes, have lately made their report. In his safe-deposit box they found certificates for thousands of shares of perfectly worthless stock, for which he had paid real money. Half a million dollars or more of his fortune had gone into these speculative "cats and dogs."

In the same safe-deposit were shares worth millions now, for which the dead man had paid no higher prices than for the ones which are now worthless. Shares in almost every great industry of today were highly speculative when the enterprises were originally promoted. Not many years ago a conservative brokerage house dismissed an employee for recommending to a customer that he buy General Motors. Men who put money into motion picture shares, telephone stock or Edison's visionary scheme for electric lights were regarded as reckless speculators.

To prohibit the promotion of a new enterprise merely because some bureaucrat thinks it will not succeed is definitely putting a brake on progress. Every successful venture was speculative at its beginning. And to prohibit profits for the investor in new speculation—if they win out—certainly discourages anybody with capital from taking a chance with his money.

When Japan has conquered, militarized and mechanized China—Mussolini, Hitler, Stalin and some others may wish the whites had started pulling together earlier.

Fine Work Evident in Year's Report of Lachute Branch Red Cross Society

During the year ending Oct. 31, 1937, the Lachute Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society has had 18 members, and six regular meetings were held—according to the secretary's report submitted for publication this week.

Relief was given to one family for a few months during the winter. One invalid chair has been in use most of the year. The Red Cross sheets have been used and the hospital beds have gone into seven different homes and have been in use 55 weeks in all.

Membership fees are now due, and may be paid to the treasurer, Miss A. Riddell.

Pretty Wedding at the Maple Ave. Baptist Church

BARKER-TOWNSEND
At Maple Avenue Baptist Church at 3.30 o'clock, Oct. 23, the marriage took place of Miss Hilda Ellen Townsend, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Townsend, to Mr. Frederick Thomas Barker, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Barker of Lachute Mills, Que. The Rev. E. H. Young, who made a special trip from Toronto, performed the ceremony. The church was decorated with ferns, potted plants and white roses. The arch under which the bride and groom stood was decorated with white roses, fern and white bells.
Miss Geraldine MacQuig, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music. Attending the bride as maid-of-honor was Miss Eunice MacLeod of Pointe au Chêne, Que., and Miss Amy MacQuig, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. The groomsmen were Mr. Fred Witham and the ushers were Mr. Edward Barker, brother of the groom, and Mr. Edward MacLeod, brother-in-law of the bride.
The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a white satin and lace gown made on princess lines and wore a hand embroidered veil held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. Her slippers were of white crepe and she carried a bouquet of Talamon roses.
The maid of honor wore a turquoise blue taffeta gown made on long straight lines with matching jacket and shoes. Her hat of the same material was made in coronation style with a shoulder veil to match. She carried red Johanna Hill roses.
The bridesmaid wore turquoise blue taffeta made on long straight lines. Her jacket was made in bolero style with puff sleeves, and shoes to match. Her hat was made of the same material in cap effect with shoulder veil. She carried red Johanna Hill roses.
Little Miss Elinor Tomalty acted as flower girl; she wore white chiffon and carried a basket of yellow and white baby mums. Master Bryant Prosser, who acted as page boy, wore a white silk shirt and navy blue trousers. Mrs. Townsend, the bride's mother, wore navy blue sheer georgette with navy blue accessories.
During the signing of the register Mrs. Geo. Creswell and Mrs. W. H. Tomalty sang "O Promise Me."
After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple left later for a trip to Quebec City and other points. For travelling the bride wore a navy blue crepe dress trimmed with white satin. Her coat was of grey tweed with grey wolf collar, and she wore navy blue accessories.

Fall Thank-Offering Meeting of Lachute United W.M.S.

The Lachute United Church was well filled with a large and appreciative audience of W. M. S. ladies on Wednesday afternoon, when their fall Thank-Offering meeting took place.
The chair was taken by the president, Mrs. Finley McGibbon, who opened the meeting with some thoughts on "What a Thank-Offering really is," followed by scripture reading and prayer by Mrs. J. H. Mason. A solo was sung by Miss Nichols of Chatham, N.B., and Mrs. Sutherland, the president of the Montreal-Ottawa Presbytery, gave a message of greeting. Mrs. Ross, returned missionary from Korea, brought greetings from the W.M.S. there, of which there are 23,000—telling of the many sacrifices the native Christians are making. Out of two meals a day they often "give one meal to the Lord." A duet was sung by Mrs. A. Taylor and Mrs. C. Duncan, and the guest speaker, Mrs. Forbes, Dominion President, was then introduced by Mrs. F. McGibbon, who in her remarks said how this afternoon had been looked for and anticipated. In her reply Mrs. Forbes spoke of the pleasant friendship which exists between herself and Rev. and Mrs. Rosborough, and the joy it was for her to be in the gathering giving a special greeting to the C.G.I.T. girls present. In a resume of the work she said "There are 175,000 members of the W.M.S. and 350 missionaries for which we are responsible, and our fellowship is the vital part of our work." As Dominion President she has travelled to all parts of Canada, but she dwelt especially on Saskatchewan and its great need through the loss of crops, going on to speak of a trip to the Orient which she took with her husband, Rev. G. E. Forbes of Weston, Ont. Reaching Japan, the large and beautiful cities, and the hospitality of the people, almost overwhelmed them. Starting with two suitcases they had to purchase three trunks to bring back their gifts with them. "So many have sore hearts over the war—and we must help the missionaries and stand by them to the end." In her talk on China she spoke of its progress during the past ten years, and how difficult it is for the girls, who come from these countries to finish their education here, to return and work as missionaries in the East. Lovingly she said, "Pray for China and our missionaries each day. Are we doing our best, as they are?" Mrs. Forbes is a fluent and easy speaker, and her message was received with close attention.
A vote of thanks was given by Mrs. R. Bradford, seconded by Mrs. John Hay. Auxiliaries were present from Cushing, St. Andrews, Brownsburg, Ste. Therese, St. Eustache, East Settlement and Montreal. Tea was served in the basement and an hour of happy reunion was spent.

Keeping the Memory of Youth's Great Sacrifice

PURPOSES OF THE POPPY DAY CAMPAIGN
There is a slight misconception with certain of the public who, having purchased last year, feel that a duty has been performed and that these emblems can be used again from year to year. The primary purpose of Poppy Day, however, is to recall the memory of those who fought and died for what they believed to be the right, for liberty, for justice, for democracy and for the protection of the weak. That all these ends may not have come out of the holocaust of 1914-18 is no fault of those who left home and country to "do their bit."
But the poppy campaign has another purpose, so important that one can scarcely consider it secondary. An outcome of the Great War was the appalling human misery it left in its train—the men who came back shattered in body and mind, to a degree that permanently unfitted them for a place in the hustling world of business and industry.
For those men there were established the "Veteran" shops, and their occupations would serve to maintain them to a large degree by their own effort. It is in these shops that the poppies and wreaths are manufactured, by men unfitted for other employment, and on the generosity of the public response depends in large degree the livelihood of those employed there.
In responding to the appeal one must not look upon the purchase of wreaths and poppies in the light of their material value, but in the true spirit of helping those who served and suffered in a great cause.

100-Year-Old Ledger from St. Eustache Store

One of our regular contributors recently disparaged the "good old times" . . . There has since come to our attention a storekeeper's ledger which has withstood the ravages of time for over a century.

From the information it contains one finds certain evidence that the old times were, in some respects, rather good. Rum, for instance, sold at 1 1/2d. a glass (spelt with an old-fashioned s). By the pint is cost 6d.

From items appearing in these accounts, which date back to 1836, it appears that one William Vart conducted a mill and a general store in the village of St. Eustache. We are told that Mr. Vart came from Newcastle-on-Tyne and settled in St. Eustache opposite the Roman Catholic Church.

Entries in his ledger show that buckwheat sold for 4 shillings a bushel; hay 1 shilling a bundle; 100 bundles straw for 10 shillings; pork six shillings per 100 lbs; shoes 4 shillings. It would also appear that Mr. Vart sometimes had to advance loans to his clients to cover these purchases.

Labor was apparently valued at 2s. 6d. a day, while a sheep "with wool on" sold for 15 shillings, and "one sheep without wool" 5 shillings.

For these interesting records we are indebted to Dr. J. H. Mason of Lachute, who also narrates that a rebel leader, Dr. Chenier, when killed by a bullet in the rebellion, was laid "corpus delicti" on the counter of the store, along with the cheese and edibles there displayed. The marks of canon-ball are still visible on the old church. This structure, and Mr. Vart's premises, were undoubtedly in the centre of the conflict.

William Vart, whose reputation as a merchant was a by-word in this countryside, has several descendants in this county, including Mrs. Wm. Miller, Mr. Thomas Miller, Mrs. Wm. Miller, Mrs. John Campbell, and the Mason families, including Dr. J. H. Mason and John Mason, and Mrs. Arthur Kennedy, his direct grandchildren.

GIANT TIN-DREDGER LEAVES FOR THE DUTCH EAST INDIES

The giant tin-dredger "Doa Joeng", the largest of its kind in the world, is shown being towed down the River Maas from Rotterdam en route to the Dutch East Indies. This dredger has been built in place of the large one that some months ago was wrecked on its way to India.

AUNT JEAN HERSELF

RUFFED GROUSE

Shy drummer of the fragrant woods,
Is it an army that you sharply call?
Sounding the alarm so suddenly,
'Gainst the green density of a cedar-ed wall.

Your colours blending with the vale itself,
The dull brown of grasses, seared with heat,
The red of sumach and of Autumn leaves.

The gray of lichens on your feathered feet!
Alert you stand, with high ruffed neck,
Your fan-tail widely spread.
Sending forth the call to warn your mate.

That she may escape the human foe
you dread.
If man could only realize that your life
And beauty were Our Father's will,
He would lay aside the cruel gun
And curb his lust to kill.

The sudden opening of the door followed the rush of feet, and two excited little ones dashed into the room.

"Oh Mother! Oh Daddy!
Just think! Lila's Uncle Jim that they have not seen for years arrived at her Granddaddy's house tonight, and Mr. Potter telephoned for them all to come over and see him. Dollie here heard Lila's mother saying that she was sorry but she had some children in for a party and she could not very well leave home." Dollie came tiptoeing in to where the rest of us were and told us and we just ran out and told Mrs. Potter that we'd had a lovely supper and a lovely peanut and apple 'scramble' and would she please let us go home now.—Just so's they could go over to Grandfather Potter's and see their Uncle Jim."

"And Mrs. Potter did what you wanted her to?" queried Rob Junior, coming out from behind Grandfather Perry's chair, where he had hidden when he had heard the children coming.

"Course she did, Bobbins!" said Tom, making a dive for the speaker, throwing his arms around his neck and his furry legs around his waist in a tremendous big hug.

"Help! Help!" shouted Bob laughingly. "Help! Help! I am being smothered by a big black cat.—Kind Fairy," he said, bowing as gracefully as he could with Tom clinging to him—to Dollie, as she stood staring in happy surprise at Grandmother smiling so happily at her from Grandfather's arms. "Kind Fairy, I am in the toils of a monster.
Will you not weave a magic spell and save me from him?"

For the first time Dollie seemed to realize that her big brother Bob was in the room. Smilingly she waved her tiny wand and repeated—

"Eeny meeny miny mo,
Come my minions, come—
Catch the black cat by the toe
And make him run, run, run."

In mock terror Tom let go of Rob and scrambled on all fours behind

Grandfather's chair, spitting and meowing like a frightened cat, while Dollie in turn clasped her arms around her big brother's neck and was caught up on his shoulder, where she sat smiling down into her gran-nie's eyes. "How do you like my costume, Grannie?" she asked roguishly.

"Very well, my dear, very well indeed. Your Majesty's maids have certainly made it to fit you perfectly!"
her grandmother replied with a merry little laugh, just as if she had not had a visit from Dollie before she left for the party to ask her first if she might use it. In fact, Grandmother Perry laughed at everything, that was said that night. It was so wonderful to be downstairs with her family once more, and wonderful, too, to have Rob Junior bring a low stool and sit where he could lean his head against her as he used to when a small boy. "Grandmother," he said, as she smoothed his hair just as she had done then, there is nothing in the world so soothing as the touch of your fingers.—and mother's tea," he added, with a smile at Mother Perry.

Mother Perry smiled back. She too was remembering the past. She was remembering when she had first come into that home, fearful of the task she had set herself, that of mothering young Bob whose own mother had died some years previously. She remembered her little fits of jealousy because Bob always seemed to prefer his grandmother to her—jealousy which fled away when Tom and Dollie had been sent to bless their home, and young Bob had whooped with delight when he saw them and asked incredulously, "Are they really ours, Mother? Can we keep them for our very own? Aren't they great! The dear wee—," and young Bob had gone down on his knees beside the basket in which they lay and showered kisses on their tiny hands. There was no more jealousy in her heart after that, nor any in Bob, for he loved the babies as much as any of them, and never missed an opportunity to make them happy if he could.

Later on in the evening, when he had carried Grandmother Perry up to her room and left her for Mother Perry to tuck into bed, he had made several more trips upstairs, first with his strong young arm around Grandfather Perry's shoulders; then with little Tom who lay curled up by the fire still in his black-cat costume, too sleepy to wake up and go to bed by himself, while Dollie, very wide-awake, danced along in front of him. "I expect Tommy ate too much candy," she said, "and it has made him sleepy." "And what about you, Fairy Princess?" Bob asked. "Did you not eat too much candy too?"

"No I just ate a teeny weeny bit.
I wanted to keep the rest and share it with Grannie tomorrow. You know she can't eat candy at night.
It makes her sick. And anyway, I couldn't go to sleep in Grannie's gown, I might spoil it."

"Of course you couldn't, Princess, and now shall I call your maid to help you out of it?"

"Please do, Bobbins—I am getting really sleepy, and I'm afraid my eyes won't hold themselves open much longer."

Mother Perry was all finished in Grandmother's room and came laughingly at Bob's call for a maid for Princess Goldenlocks, to help her little girl out of the wonderful dress and see that it was put carefully away again in the blue box with silver stars, on the shelf in Grandfather Perry's cupboard.

As Bob passed his wee sister's room later, he heard her murmur in her sleep, "Scrambles—and Grandma's and Grandpa's—and Bob's.... they're lovely."

BOY SCOUTS THE WORLD OVER

B.-P. AND HIS DOGS

When at home at Pax Hill, Hampshire, Lord Baden-Powell, World Chief Scout, begins his day at 6 a.m., with a walk accompanied by his three dogs. One of these is a big black 'Labrador', old and blind.
At every stile, relates Mr. J. F.
M. Stewart, of Toronto, a summer guest of the Chief Scout,
B.-P. helps the old dog over,
and guides him through the gates. When they turn back for home, the old dog presses his nose against his master, and is given his cane. Proudly carrying this, the dog goes ahead, and arriving in front of the house, walks slowly in a circle until the Chief Scout comes, and with a pat on the head, takes it from him.

JIMMIE BEARSKIN, BOY SCOUT

Scouting continues to spread among Canadian Indian boys.
A new unit is reported at an Anglican mission school at Fort George, on James Bay. The roll call of the troop includes Scouts Jimmie Bearskin, Johnny Fireman, Peter Bullfrog, Ronnie Lameboy and James Sealhunter.

BADEN-POWELL AT HOME

Stories of Lord Baden-Powell as a host at his Hampshire home, Pax Hill, picture the World Chief Scout as still full of the play spirit of boyhood.
"At dinner one night", related a recent Canadian visitor, "he gave us his idea of a Caledonia market—a jumble of people, shacks, booths and noise; and wound up with a lively portrayal of a coster selling 'marmalade.'"

A story told with great zest described a military reception when B.P. was a young officer in India. As a prank, he and another youngster carefully disguised themselves, and went as newspaper correspondents, the one "for a French paper", the other "for a London daily." Chuckling as though the affair had happened but yesterday,

B.-P. recounted the chats he had with various people present, including one elderly lady who was pleased to recall having met him in London the previous season,—when he was in India.

The Chief Scout was described as remarkably active, and
"at 81 as fine a specimen of a well preserved elderly man as one would find anywhere." He sleeps in a corner room which has no walls on two sides—practically in the open air; rises regularly at 6 a.m., and goes for a walk with his dogs.
On his return he goes through his mountain of morning mail, and has it ready for his secretary before breakfast.

The visitor marveled at the amount of work done by the entire family. "Sometimes there were three typewriters going—Lady B.-P. at her machine on Guide affairs, the Hon. Heather B.-P. on news matter for the press, and the Chief's secretary on his correspondence. A regular workshop!"

The teacher wrote on the margin of little Betty's report card:

"Good worker, but talks too much."

Betty's father wrote on the opposite margin when it was returned:

"Come up, some time, and meet her mother."

Caller—How is your master this morning?

Maid—Well, I'm pleased to tell you they've took an X-ray of his brain and found nothing there!

SUCCESSFUL MATERNITY WORK

There is no question but that there are unnecessary losses of life in child-birth, and our women's organizations should work with our governments to help prevent this loss. Education in the importance of early pre-natal care is one way of helping. How are we going to teach the fathers that it is their duty and privilege to see that their wives visit a doctor in the early months? The figures are not at hand, but I think it was in over 1700 cases which the Victorian Order of Nurses of Toronto delivered, not one mother died. The V.O. nurses have many things to their credit but I doubt if there is any more outstanding accomplishment than this.

CONTRASTS

A woman with a 16-year-old daughter said she thought it was time her daughter was growing up. She, herself, at 16, had been a woman, but Joan was a child. At 16 a girl should be interested in boys and going out and having a good time, and she wished Joan would soon start, instead of only being interested in sports and things she could do with other girls. A few days later, I heard another woman say that she was so worried about her daughter. She was only 16 but she was so sophisticated and grown-up. She felt she must be on the go all the time, and was more interested in boys than in anything else. There was plenty of time for all that later, and she wished Betty would be more interested in sports and the things she could do with other girls. Parents are seldom satisfied with their children. Whatever they are, they want something different.

FERNS

If your ferns are turning yellow at the ends and the leaves are dry and brittle, they are probably sunburned from too much summer sun. Florists advise cutting off the old fronds, as they have a coarser texture and are not as clear a green in color as the new growth. The stem-like pieces with no leaves on them will produce new ferns if the ends are covered with soil. It is better to keep these cut off as they sap the nourishment of the growing plant. Ferns do best with soaking and not surface watering. Soak them twice a week until the top soil feels damp, and sprinkle the leaves to keep them clean.

OVENS

There are several different fuels which you use for cooking. Some of you who are using wood or coal are probably wishing for gas or electricity. They certainly have their advantages, but there is always something to balance, and the wood and coal are better in some respects. If you have a fire on all day, it can be used for so many things. Baked beans, for instance. It is not worth the fuel it takes to bake them when you use gas or electricity, but when you have a coal fire going, and you can put your beans in the oven first thing in the morning and bake them all day, then that is a different story. Baked rice or an Indian pudding, both of which take three hours slow baking, can be tucked into your oven and no extra fuel used. Then soups can be put on the back of the stove and simmered slowly for a long time. All these things actually taste better than when done with gas or electricity. The electric oven never browns the potatoes that are tucked in with the roast as crisply as the other fuels do. The best cakes I have ever made were baked in a coal-oil oven, and that is not once, but different summers on different stoves. Right now I have the last word in automatic ovens with the heat controlled and kept at a definite temperature, but even at that, my cakes have not the same texture as the coal-oil oven gave them. A wood oven does something to the old-fashioned cake, the 1-2-3-4 cake, and gives it a flavor that no other fuel gives. Compensation is a factor in our lives, and we should never lose sight of it—the good to balance the bad.

TOASTED SPICE CAKE

$\frac{3}{4}$ cup butter, 2 cups brown sugar, 2 eggs (separated), 1 teaspoon soda, $1\frac{1}{4}$ cups sour milk, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, $2\frac{1}{2}$ cups flour.

Cream butter and sugar, add egg yolks and beat well. Add milk alternately with sifted dry ingredients. Pour into pan and spread batter with meringue. Beat the 2 egg whites until stiff but not dry, and slowly add 1 cup brown sugar, beating steadily. Spread meringue over raw cake batter. Sprinkle with $\frac{1}{2}$ cup broken nutmeats. Bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees for 50 minutes.

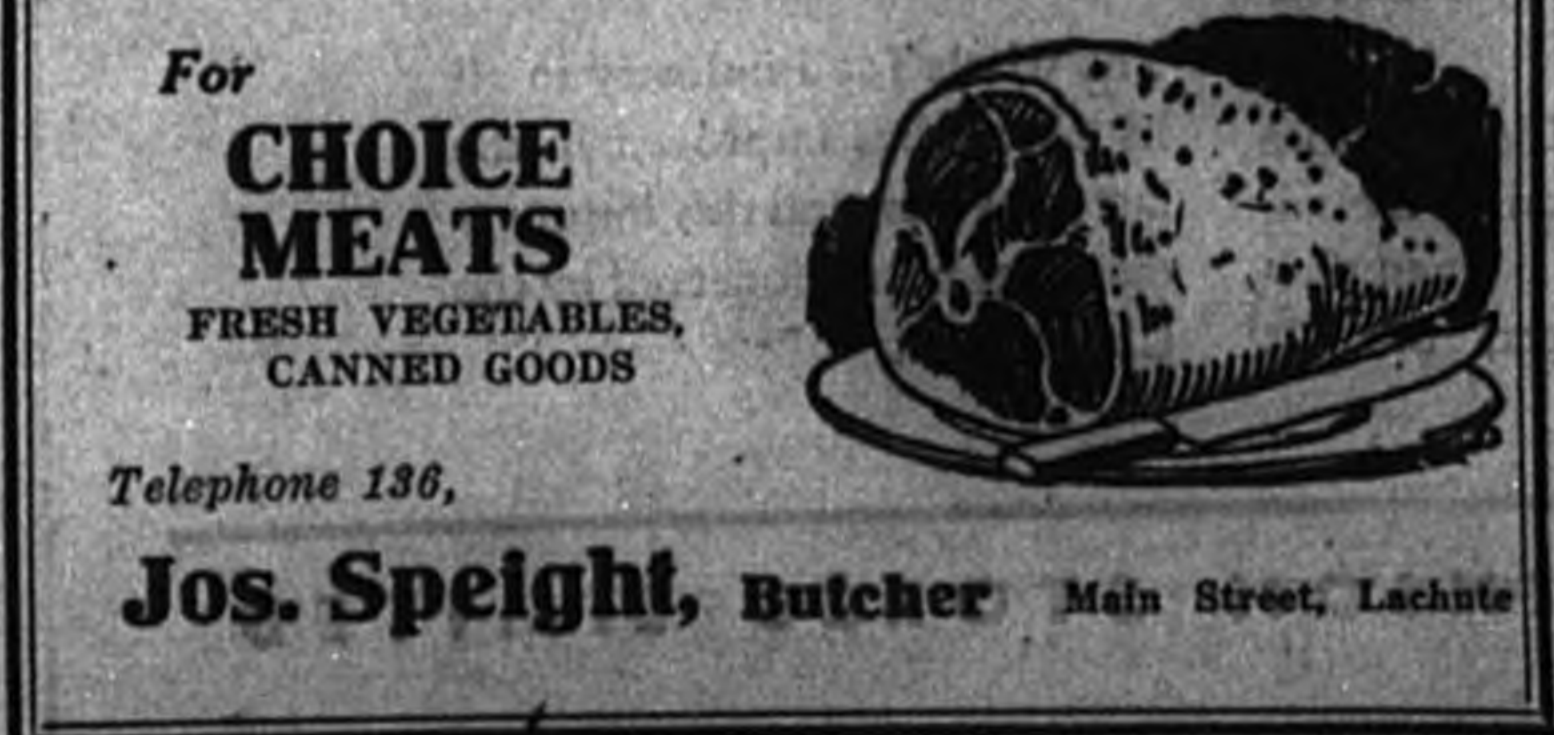

APPLE CRISP

Slice sufficient cored and peeled apples to fill a pudding dish, adding brown sugar between the layers; 1 cup well packed is about right for the average dish. Cover and bake until the apples are fairly soft in a hot oven of from 400 to 450 degrees. Cover with crumbs made by rubbing together $\frac{3}{4}$ cup flour, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup brown sugar, and $\frac{1}{4}$ cup butter. Return to oven and bake until the top has browned. Serve with cream and cool the pudding but do not chill. To our way of thinking this is the best of the many good apple desserts.

Wipe ivy leaves with a cloth dipped in milk if you would have your house vines a beautiful glossy green. Ferns and gardenias should be sprayed daily in order to keep their foliage bright and healthy.

USEFUL KEROSENE

Now that the holidays are only a few weeks off, you will want to tidy up the house a bit, remove a few paint spots, put a few old pots and pans back into serviceable condition, and give the furniture a rub-down. Kerosene, that old family standby of years ago, is featured in several helpful home-made preparations that will do wonders in lightening household tasks.

Should you have a perfectly serviceable pot or pan that happens to have a few rust spots, soak it in kerosene, wipe and polish it with a sand soap or bath brick, and you will soon have your pan as good as new.

Kerosene again comes in handy to remove paint spots from hardwood floors. Just rub the spots briskly with a cloth soaked in kerosene, then follow with a cloth that has been moistened in warm water. The paint spots will disappear as if by magic.

A good furniture polish is made of equal parts of kerosene, turpentine and vinegar.

Be sure to dig up dahlia tubers and gladiolus before the ground freezes. Cut off the tops and dig up the roots. Then remove the soil and let them dry a few days before storing them away packed in sand in a cool cellar where they will not freeze during the winter. Label them so you'll know where to put them for the best color effect in your garden next year.

If you are selecting new draperies for your living room, choose a fabric that will reflect light. You can create the effect of sunshine on the dreariest winter day with curtains that contain warm yellow tones.

EGGLESS GINGER COOKIES

One cup shortening, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 cup baking molasses, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sour milk, 1 tablespoon ginger, 2 teaspoons soda, $4\frac{1}{2}$ cups flour, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt.

Cream shortening and add sugar. Mix and sift flour, ginger and salt. Dissolve 1 teaspoon soda in molasses and add to first mixture. Add half the flour. Dissolve remaining soda in sour milk and add. Stir until smooth and add remaining flour. Chill for an hour and roll on a lightly floured molding board, cut with cookie cutter dipped in flour and arrange on an oiled and floured cookie sheet. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 8 to 10 minutes.

If your hair shows signs of dryness improve its texture before you have a new permanent. A course of scalp treatments at your beauty shop, of course, will be beneficial or you may give yourself a ten-minute scalp massage on alternate nights. On the other nights give your hair a vigorous brushing and "so to bed."

WISDOM TEETH

The third molars, or wisdom teeth, are particularly liable to cause serious illness and even death because of the frequency with which we have trouble in "cutting" them. The complications most often arise between the ages of twenty and thirty but may occur at any time after adolescence even into advanced old age. Men and women suffer equally but in both sexes the trouble is more often in the lower than in the upper jaw. The most common mishap is that only the front half of the wisdom tooth comes through and the gum forms a hood over the back half of the crown. Infection creeps under this hood and dangerous germs thrive in this little cavern. Attempts to remove a wisdom tooth while the gum around it is infected may result in a fatal spread of the infection.

Extraction of wisdom teeth is, however, an easy matter if taken in time. Abnormalities in the development of the third molars can be recognized by X-ray examination by the age of eleven years; that is to say several years before they are likely to cause any trouble. The time will probably come when careful parents will seek a dental X-ray of their children at this age to be sure that all is well and in order to forestall dangerous maldevelopment. The dental surgeon who recognizes abnormality at the age of eleven will continue to make X-ray

MOTHER HELPED BY KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

"I have suffered from terrible constipation since the birth of my first child. I tried everything. Very reluctantly, I tried your ALL-BRAN with no faith in it at all.

"Much to my surprise, I have not had to take any medicine since starting to use ALL-BRAN."—Mrs. Doris Eyre King (address on request).

Common constipation is usually due to meals low in "bulk." Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies this needed "bulk."

Within the body, this cereal absorbs twice its weight in water, forms a soft mass, gently sponges out the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B to tone up the intestines, and iron for the blood.

Enjoy this food instead of taking weakening pills and drugs. Serve as a cereal, with milk or fruits, or cook into recipes.

ALL-BRAN is sold by your grocer. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

Remembrance Day Address by Rev. Major Leslie Dunwell

Seldom has a more stirring message sounded in the ears of a local audience than the thoughts so eloquently expressed by Rev. Major Leslie Dunwell, assistant rector of St. George's Anglican Church, Montreal, at the Remembrance Day service this morning in the Lachute Auditorium. The Watchman is privileged to publish a resumé of this discourse:

"Our purpose here today is to pay tribute to those who, nobly fighting, nobly fell, that we might live. We are gathered to honour those who battled that we might build, and this occasion is inspired not by mere sentimentalism. The wreaths that we shall place at the Cenotaph are a symbol of the debt we owe them. But more than that—we owe them the fulfilment of their sacred task, the ideal for which they died—peace. For theirs was a sacrifice in war to end war."

"As we look at the nations today we see a challenge to world peace; yet it is plain to all who think that pious opinions about peace will solve nothing. This poor old world of ours is witnessing today the results of pious opinion that refuses to look sanely at the roots of war."

"War is caused by selfishness, hatred, greed, suspicion and all the other vices that make man a beast. Treaties will be vain, acts of parliament futile, the League of Nations useless—until we can take out of the heart of man jealousy and hatred."

"War begins in the hearts of men—in your heart and mine. Peace can only come through human brotherhood, through sacrifice. Just as our comrades gave their lives in war, so we must be willing to make sacrifices for peace."

"It seems a strange thing to reflect that this world should need war to bring out the sublime and noble qualities of manhood. Surely our civilization is bankrupt if the heroism in man cannot be shown in peace. The more I think of our great problems today, the more I am convinced that we cannot do without the spirit of Him who died on the cross. That very cross exemplifies the spirit of brotherhood. We who saw that spirit in the trenches can never forget it. No words of mine can ever express that spirit of fortitude in the awful hell they endured. So we honour this army of the blessed dead today with silence."

"Time, we are told, heals all wounds. The danger is that we may forget these lads who left home with firm steps to do their duty. We are proud of them. It takes real men to lie for what they believe true. When there is nothing worth lying for in life, there is nothing much worth living for—So we shall always love and cherish their memory, for they gave their all in the struggle for human brotherhood. We owe them more than just remembrance. We owe them the fulfilment of their task. I am sure these gallant lads would say, 'Do not praise us, we have had enough praise already. Give up talking about our heroism.' Perhaps they would faintly smile at our memorials for them. But they would say 'For God's sake carry on where we left off. We fought for freedom—we fought for brotherhood—we fought for peace, and we fought that the youngsters would have a chance—Carry on!'"

"Only a few weeks ago I stood by a freshly opened grave—the grave of a young boy of 15 with no mother, no father. Bred in the gutter—he was not so splendid as some bred in the gutter. He had been in the hands of the police four or five times. His companions had been the same as himself; and he died of tuberculosis. I read the service, citing those words, 'Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God to take unto himself the soul of our dear brother here departed.'—I felt ashamed; it was a lie, a falsehood. We had waited till he was dead to call him 'our dear brother.' In the gutter as a

The new and improved methods of buying and selling, inaugurated by the 1,400 chain stores in the Province of Quebec and typified by Dominion Stores, have had a beneficial effect upon all of the 35,000 other stores. These new methods have been the yeast that has raised the whole shopping level to new heights of cleanliness, efficiency and economy.

The yeast of Chain Store methods has worked to the advantage of local manufacturers and farmers, too. It gives them an assured, steady market for their goods and produce. Dominion Stores alone, buy to the tune of over $5,000,000 in the Province of Quebec, going outside only when goods are not available. We buy in quantity, pay promptly and pass these advantages on to our thousands of local customers.

The whole food industry in all its phases has improved in the last ten years, and this improvement has been pioneered by the Chain Stores.

Tragedy at C.P.R. Level Crossing on Monday Morning

WELL KNOWN LADY IS KILLED INSTANTLY IN AUTO

HUSBAND AND FAMILY OF THREE BEREAVED

In the tragic death of Mrs. A. A. McOuat, whose car was struck at the Barron Avenue C.P.R. crossing Monday morning, Lachute suffers the loss of a townswoman known and esteemed throughout the entire community. News of her death, and the grim circumstances surrounding it, cast a pall of sorrow over the circles in which she had shared interest and given generously of her time. Mrs. McOuat had been a lifelong resident of this town.

The accident occurred at 11 a.m. last Monday. Driving down Barron Avenue toward the main thoroughfare, Mrs. McOuat appeared to be unaware of the approaching east-bound train, and her car was struck near the driver's seat. Carried by the locomotive a distance of 200 feet, and twisted by a switch-standard beside the track, the auto was badly crushed. The victim was instantly killed by the impact.

Inquest into the fatality was held Monday afternoon. The jury, empaneled by Dr. J. H. Mason, district coroner, heard evidence of Engineer G. A. Mould and others; their verdict stated that "all the usual precautions concerning the crossing had been taken and that we do not attach criminal negligence to anyone. Nevertheless we, the jury, knowing all the accidents and near accidents that have happened at the various railroad crossings in town, do hereby recommend that the C.P.R. be asked to install proper safety devices at these crossings."

Mrs. McOuat was an active worker in the Lachute United Church. Surviving are her husband; two daughters, Miss Janet, of Boston, and Miss Edith, nurse in training at the Montreal General Hospital; and a son, Gordon, of Lachute, to whom their host of friends extend deep sympathy.

She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gavin J. Walker, and of her immediate family there remain also two sisters, Misses M. and J. Walker, and her brother, Mr. J. E. Walker, of Lachute.

W. I. Study Group Topic "On Reading for Pleasure"

A large audience assembled in Lachute High School hall for the monthly Study Group meeting of the local W. I. on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. A. Chapman of Montreal was guest speaker for the occasion, giving a splendid address on the topic, "Reading for Pleasure". The chair was taken by Mrs. Geo. Y. Deacon who, in a few well chosen words, introduced Mrs. Chapman as the speaker, welcoming her to her home town and assuring her of the pleasure it afforded the local ladies to have her present.

Following the address, a vote of thanks was given by Mrs. W. LeCras, seconded by Mrs. F. McGibbon, after which a social hour was spent and tea served.

Mrs. Chapman's paper was interesting throughout. She introduced her remarks in the following vein:

WORTHLESS BANK-NOTES IN CIRCULATION HERE

CITIZENS WARNED

Two or three business firms of the district have been victimized by customers passing worthless bills which bear a striking resemblance to Canadian currency of five and ten dollar denominations. The bills, one of which is here illustrated, are a 1915 issue of the "State of Senora", Mexican Republic, printed by Pancho Villa during his reign of office. The five and ten dollar notes have been discovered in Montreal; and the Mexican Consul in Canada, being consulted in the matter, has stated they are absolutely worthless.

One of these bills was refused here recently by the treasurer of Chatham Township, where it was tendered in payment of taxes.

Local citizens, if offered this "phony" currency, are advised to take the name and address of the person in possession and to advise the Chief of Police, Alex. Gervais, without delay.

School Board and Staff Were Hosts on Parents' Night

GATHERING NUMBERED OVER 250 PERSONS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Last Friday evening the Protestant School Commissioners and the principal and teachers of Lachute High School held a reception for the parents of the children attending school. With the thought that such a gathering would make for better understanding and co-operation between the home and the school, invitations were sent out to all the parents. The response was most gratifying, as over 250 gathered in the High School, some having come from as far as Ste. Agathe, Arundel and Harrington.

About 85 guests were welcomed by the Commissioners, and by Dr. J. H. Mason and Principal C. L. Hall, who gave short addresses. The class-rooms were thrown open and the parents were free to visit the various rooms and talk with the teachers of their children.

At 10 o'clock refreshments were served, with the able assistance of pupils from Grades X and XI. Afterwards all enjoyed a social hour and the guests then took their leave feeling that they had spent a pleasant and profitable evening.

15 Slot Machines Are Seized in Neighborhood

A raid was made by Provincial Police officers to round up slot-machines in this district, Wednesday evening of last week. Fifteen machines were confiscated from restaurants and stores. Summonses will be served and the cases will be brought for court hearing. It is understood the seizures were made following a number of complaints from citizens in the town and neighborhood.

A "State of Senora" five pesos bill, similar to money which has been passed here for Canadian currency. These bills are valueless.

High School Students Have Own Weekly Newspaper

A new venture in journalism has commenced this week, with the first issue of a 4-page news-sheet for students of Lachute High School. The paper contains items of particular interest to the scholars and is well spiced with humor. It appears to be largely the work of George Powell, whose facile pen and journalistic leanings are the mainspring of this venture. The editor hopes, with due support, to enlarge its scope. Contributions from fellow students already show an interest in the experiment. The four pages are typewritten and mimeographed. The first issue numbers 80 copies, selling at five cents each.

Fire Occurred in Woodwork Factory at Lachute Mills

A fire of minor importance occurred Saturday at 11 a.m. in the mill of Lucien St. Jacques Lachute Mills. Prompt work by the fire department averted a serious blaze in the workshop, for there was considerable lumber on the premises. The fire started in the roof of an extension, caused by a spark from the exhaust of St. Jacques' gasoline engine. According to the proprietor, the fire brigade arrived within two minutes after he had phoned the alarm. The small amount of damage is covered by insurance.

MAIN STREET STORE BROKEN INTO, ROBBED

THIEVES ENTERED BY REAR WINDOW

The Leona 5c - $1 Store on Main Street was broken into early Tuesday morning. Thieves took time to select their haul and made their get-away with goods valued at over $100, including a roll of flannelette, a number of men's shirts, ladies' dresses, hose and purses.

Neighbors heard nothing of the intruders during the night but Constable A. Gervais, investigating, believed the robbery had occurred around 4 a.m. It appeared the thieves had entered first by a cellar window in the rear of the premises, but were balked by the door leading from the stairway into the store. They next procured a ladder from the Slater property next door and climbed to the main floor, entering by a rear window which they broke to release the catch.

Earth-Tremors Felt at Morin Heights and Ste. Adele

'QUAKE IN LAURENTIANS CRACKS SIDEWALKS AND CAUSES SCARE

In Ste. Adele and Morin Heights two distinct earthquakes were felt Friday, and similar tremors were reported throughout the same Laurentian district. No damage, however, occurred except the falling of some china in a few houses apparently near the centre of the disturbance, and sidewalks reported cracked in St. Jerome, where a machine in a local factory also toppled off its base.

The first tremor seemed to come from the vicinity of Mont Laurier, and was felt strongly at Ste. Agathe and at Morin, while the second 'quake, was strongest at St. Jerome and Ste. Adele. The two 'quakes were accompanied by a rumbling sound. The meteorological bureau at St. Jerome recorded the first tremor at 9.44 a.m., and the second one at 11.58 a.m. and their length as being 45 and 50 seconds respectively.

2 Held Responsible for Cyclist's Death at Grenville Bay

STRUCK HEAD-ON BY CAR IN DAYLIGHT COLLISION

TRUCK DRIVER ALSO INVOLVED

Arthur Pilon of Grenville, a railway section-hand well known in the vicinity, was killed almost instantly on Monday when his bicycle was struck head-on by an automobile driven by Victor Bougie of Calumet. The accident occurred at Larose's corner, Grenville Bay, at 4.10 in the afternoon. Mr. Pilon, who was 42 years of age, was cycling home from his work. He sustained a fractured skull when struck by Bougie's car, which was travelling toward No. 8 highway.

Evidence heard by jurymen under Coroner Dr. J. H. Mason showed that Pilon was only three feet from the ditch and in his proper position on the road. Bougie's car, meanwhile was on the left hand side, and the driver had not seen the cyclist. Coming out of the "Y" onto the Grenville Village road was a truck driven by René Mayer of Hawkesbury. Bougie contended this truck was on the wrong side of the thoroughfare; consequently he also had to take the left hand side in order to pass.

At the inquest, held Monday night in Gascon's undertaking parlors, the jurymen decided that Bougie, driver of the car, and Mayer, driver of the truck, were equally responsible for the death of Arthur Pilon through disregarding provincial highway regulations, and requested that "the whole matter be submitted to the Department of Justice for consideration."

Officer Ferguson of the Ontario Traffic Police came from Hawkesbury to investigate the accident, later communicating with A. Leger, the local traffic officer.

It is not so wretched to suffer loss as to be incapable of enduring it. —Great Thoughts.

Pontifical Order Was Conferred Here Sunday

W. H. AYERS, E. F. AYERS RECEIVE DECORATION

At High Mass last Sunday in St. Julien Parish Church at Lachute Mills, His Excellency Mgr. Georges Gauthier, Archbishop-Coadjutor of the Diocese of Montreal, presided at the investiture of the Order of St. Gregory the Great, with title of Commander, upon two prominent citizens of this town, Messrs. W. H. Ayers and E. F. Ayers. The insignia of the Order was received by them from the hands of Mgr. Gauthier in the course of a highly dignified ceremony.

This is the highest decoration bestowed by His Holiness the Pope to members of the Roman Catholic Church, and the honor was conferred in recognition of their marked services for the Church.

The Rev. L. E. Cloutier, Parish Priest of St. Julien, and Rev. Ernest Labelle, Parish Priest of Ste. Anastasie, assisted His Excellency the Archbishop-Coadjutor, and Rev. L. J. Rodrigue officiated at High Mass.

Finally, in the words of Parker's text book, page 7:

"If the museum of history will take to heart the story of Neodemos, and right heartily seek this new birth, it will become a factor of tremendous power in education for all classes."

THE CHALLENGE OF SERVICE

For the present writer, it is no easy task to continue reviewing the standard textbooks of the American Museums Association in a manner to reveal their value.

Much has been written for this column to assure the Historical Society and its Executive that in laying the foundation of the future museum no safer guides can be found. But there are other lessons of weighty consequence to be considered.

If this coming museum, by its exhibits, is to tell a truthful story of the past and cherish the memory of our pioneers; if the organization is to preserve its democratic spirit and its universal appeal; if the museum is to become a radiating centre of progressive thought for this wide region of the Ottawa Valley (of which the historic Barracks is the geographical centre)—then the principles and programs outlined in our admirable text books should be adopted and applied. By taking to heart the teachings of experience and the lessons of history (as to when history should and should not repeat itself) and by encouraging the "bonne entente" of the two great races which form the mass of our population—races which have a common ancestry from the Normans—we may achieve a real and patriotic result. Furthermore, the museum should be in charge of a trained administrator, with a free hand and discretionary liberty, under the supervision of Trustees to adminis-

Men have never known much about the bottom of the sea. Perhaps science will never find a way to explore the ocean's floor and map all of its mountains and valleys, but new discoveries are being made all the time.

The latest of these is that the bottom of the sea has hundreds of deep canyons, or clefts in the rocks which form the body of the earth, some of them as long and as wide as the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. There isn't any way to account for these ocean valleys except by guesswork. Scientists are trying to make the most plausible guesses.

The guess which seems most likely to be true is that almost all the parts of the globe now covered by water were once dry land. The waters were frozen into ice-caps, miles high, over the two poles of the earth. As the sun grew hotter and the ice began to melt, enormous rivers flowed forth and gouged out deep channels for themselves. But in the course of millions of years so much of the ice turned to water that it filled all the lowlands, creating what is now the ocean, and those old river channels are now just deep gashes in the ocean's floor. Maybe that's true. It sounds interesting, anyway.

AGE of earth

The age of the earth is one of the questions to which men of science are ceaselessly trying to find the answer. Their general belief is that our planet is from two thousand to three thousand millions of years old, and that life has existed on it for more than two million.

Half a million years ago there were palm trees growing in northern Greenland. Then the climate changed and that whole northern hemisphere, down to as far south as the Ohio River, was covered with ice a couple of miles thick. Man and all other animals had to move toward the Equator as the ice advanced. Then the ice melted and man moved north again. Three times that has happened. The Third Ice Age has not yet ended. Every century the earth gets warmer and more of the polar ice melts and the northern regions become more habitable.

A thousand years from now our grandchildren of the thirtieth generation may pick oranges in Canada and go to the beaches of Hudson Bay for a warm winter vacation.

PICTURES . . . easier to take

I have been an amateur photographer all my life. I made my first camera when I was sixteen. There isn't anything much more fun than taking pictures, and it never was so easy for anybody and everybody to take good pictures as it is today.

The latest cameras will take pictures almost in the dark. Indeed, by the use of the new infra-red plates, photographs can be made where there is no light at all, so far as the unaided eye can determine. The new flashlight bulbs make it possible to get pictures at any hour of the day or night.

By the use of pictures, newspapers and magazines are much more interesting today than they used to be when I was a young man. The old Chinese saying that one picture is worth ten thousand words may not be literally true, but it is a way of saying that we learn through our eyes easier than through our ears. I think the young folks of today know a lot more than those of my generation; they see so many pictures, in newspapers, magazines and the movies, showing them how the world and its people look and act.

One Hundred Miles of Gold!

MINING CAMPS REPLACE RELIEF CAMPS

"I do not think it impossible to double our gold production. In 1910 Canada produced more than 10,000,000 dollars worth of gold. Twenty-five years later she produced 116,000,000 dollars worth. Last year the production was $130,329,000. Think what the doubling of our present production would mean in the way of employment. Let our motto for the next five years be—Mining Camps instead of Relief Camps." Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines.

These words were well spoken and Mr. Crerar deserves great credit for the wonderful encouragement and protection which he is giving the mining industry in Canada. Canada produces a vast variety of metals but none more important than gold. The world is hungry for it and will take every ounce we produce at a fixed price. In the last few years we have doubled our production of gold and last year (1936) we produced gold to the value of 130,000,000 dollars. Mr. Crerar believes that in the course of another few years, gold production can be doubled, and goes on further to say: "It is not too much to expect that a production of gold in Canada from 200,000,000 to 250,000,000 dollars a year would give the following results:—

1. Decisively and permanently settle the problem of unemployment.
2. Bring a constructive and probably a permanent solution to our railroad problem.
3. Create a greater market than at present for food stuffs, clothing, structural materials and every conceivable product of factory and farm.
4. Revitalize the whole economic life of the Dominion.
5. Open up careers for coming generations of University graduates.
6. Ease the financial burdens of the Dominion, provinces and municipalities.
7. Alleviate the burden of our international indebtedness.

Buried to the Neck

Rock and dirt buried Luther Alvea of Mountain View, Ontario, all but neck and head when he was shoveling in a gravel pit on his father-in-law's farm.

In terrific pain from a broken leg, he cried for help. Wind carried his voice in the wrong direction. Despite his agony he wriggled until he freed his pinioned arms. Gradually he dug himself out. He dragged himself to his truck. Crawling in, he drove home and summoned help.

That is a story of grit.—We do not know what we can do until we are put to the test. So often reserve forces, of which we little dreamed, see us through. The things we fear or dread today may be easy of solution when we actually measure up to them with courage.

8. Assure the stability of the Canadian dollar and finally—
9. Stimulate the opening and development of our resources in those north lands about which we have little present knowledge.

In times past Canadians were loud in their lamentations that so much of our country was not suitable for farming; that it was a rocky wilderness, barren and cold so far as products of the soil were concerned. That rocky wilderness has suddenly come into world wide prominence and caused rejoicing because of its mineral riches.

Today the output of our mining industry is at the rate of over 1,000,000 dollars of products every working day of the year. It directly employs over 85,000 people whose average wage exceeds that of any other. Mines are tremendous contributors to railway traffic. The freight bill to railways alone is more than that of all the agricultural and animal products of the Dominion combined. Take for example blister copper shipped from Noranda to the refinery at Montreal. One quarter of a million dollars annually is paid for transport of this commodity. Actual cash station receipts at Noranda, apart from traffic to and from that station that is paid for elsewhere, are around one million dollars a year. Amos station, a new baby in the mining picture, comes to the front with cash receipts exceeding 500,000 dollars per year. All kinds of business hangs on the flank of the mining industry. Consider the model towns which have been constructed and are being constructed around our prosperous mines. Furniture fittings and a general social set-up accompanies this construction and to estimate the far-reaching effect of general expenditure connected with this home making campaign which is becoming more active each day would require much paper, many pencils and a catalogue of total world trade. Radios, refrigerators, everything from a piano to a piano. Then there is a wealth of mechanical equipment for mines with timber for mine props, explosives, chain rope and a million of other necessary appliances for operation. Aeroplanes, tractors, boats, marine engines and motor cars swing into the picture until every conceivable commodity used by moderns is listed in the category of supplies. And that is not all by any means. What about capital? It is estimated that it costs 1,000,000 dollars to bring a gold mine into production and more than that for a base metal mine. The celebrated "Flin Flon" mine ate up 30,000,000 dollars before it yielded its wealth to its sponsors. Every cent of this vast sum was spent in Canada, mostly in equipment and labor. To swing the great Noranda into line cost 25,000,000 dollars and one expansion of International Nickel Company, including the Smelter at Copper Cliff cost 50,000,000 dollars. Are not such figures as these sufficient to make Canadians mine minded and cause them to be proud of the mineral heritage which nature has so lavishly bestowed upon this country? Canada is about, if she has not already done so, to step into second place among the world's gold producers. Eighty-five percent of the surface of this country consists of the pre-cambrian exposure known as the Canadian shield and of the Cordilleran mountain ranges of the Pacific coast. No geological formations anywhere are more rich in minerals and nowhere are there similar metal bearing formations of anything like the extent. If you can visualize 85 percent of the total area of Europe as being covered with similar geological formations, then you have an exact idea of Canada's metal bearing Empire. So great is the mining activity which the metal age has already brought to Canada that if one will travel from east of Quebec in a direct line for 1,000 miles, one will find an almost continuous line of mining camps. And if one starts from Quebec in a north westerly direction, one can follow a line of mining camps for 2,500 miles clear up to Great Bear Lake in the Arctic Circle. The world never knew such intensive and far reaching mining development as that. Those who see the picture as a whole and see it in relation to the ever growing needs of the world for gold and the industrial metals—those who know of the mighty mines and the metallurgical plants which Canada already possesses and what mighty mines are in process of development may well understand that prosperity is advancing upon this country in a golden flood. Five years at the present rate of development will see not a single unemployed and able bodied man in Canada. Five years from now poor, made rich through mineral investments. All because mining has brought prosperity—not only to miners, but to every other kind of industry. Now are you mine minded?

"THE OTTAWA SPOTLIGHT"

Weekly Review of National Affairs
Specially written for The Lachute Watchman
By Wilfrid Eggleston

is desirable to have a uniform law throughout the Dominion on a matter of national interest, and this was pointed out by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in his recent letter to all provincial premiers. What will be the terms of the new act, if through joint action it is possible to introduce such an act in the next session, it is impossible to say. It will unquestionably be worked out carefully, and will combine the fruits of the experience of other countries and the special needs of Canada. The cost of the insurance would doubtless be defrayed by contributions from employees, employers of industry and the government in settled proportions, and the act will include in its scope the use of employment offices now administered by the National Employment Commission. It will be an act considerably wider in its field than the one passed by the last parliament. In itself unemployment insurance is not a cure for unemployment. It is rather a means of mitigating distress at a time of widespread unemployment. It lays plans for the future, and its main principle is that anyone thrown out of employment in bad times can accept the insurance as his right. He has in good times paid his dues to the common fund. It therefore adds dignity to labor.

HOW FAR SHOULD GOVERNMENT ACTION GO?

There was a time when government's functions were confined to police duty and the preservation of the state against foreign aggression. In modern times the duties of governments have extended far beyond this. There are essential social services which modern civilization demands should be administered by the government, and there is doubtless still much to be done in this regard in Canada. Industry also has to be regulated by the government to prevent abuses and the exploitation of one class by another. The question is how far this expansion in the work of the government should go in the future even if the government is a democracy. In a democracy as opposed to a dictatorship the people have control through the ballot. . . . This is an effective guarantee of the people's political liberty. But there is the ultimate straw that is fatal to the taxpaying camel. There is, also, always the danger even with the most beneficent and most democratic form of government that our ancient heritage, the liberty of the people, should become too closely regulated. Liberty is naturally a "native of the rocks" and doesn't thrive so well as a hot house plant. Nowhere is the dislike of autocracy stronger than in Canada where the pioneer spirit is still alive. The phrase "rugged individualism" has become almost an epithet, but it would be a sad day for this country if in the years to come the tree of individual initiative had become gradually pruned down by governmental action to the point where it had lost its vitality.

GROWTH IN THE TOURIST TRADE

The growth of the tourist traffic in Canada this year is quite striking. The number of visitors to Canada, mainly by motor car, in 1937 will equal or exceed that of 1929, when the stock boom was at its height—prior to the smash in October of that year—when visitors were "flush" and had the spending spirit. Over 3 million cars came to Canada in the first eight months of this year and before the year is out 20 million people will have visited this country, that is nearly twice Canada's population. It is estimated that these visitors will have spent in Canada during the year from 300 to 350 million, and this means much to Canada's tradesmen.

What brings this host to Canada? Advertising? That helps of course, but it is much more; more than the improved roads, camps and Canadian hospitality, which ensures the visitors a cordial reception, not forgetting the Dionne quintuplets, an attraction not to be underestimated. It is Canada's scenery, her wide stretches of mountain, lake, farm and prairie, where so much land is nearer to the natural state than in the United States, the national parks, the distinctive, old world atmosphere of Quebec, and the lure of Canada being a foreign country, a friendly foreign country, alike in so many respects but different in others, where visitors to any section from the Maritimes to B.C. can feel quite at home and yet every hour see something new.

Blue Whale Is Largest

Heavier Than Elephants

Of the many species of whale, the blue whale, or, as he is sometimes called, the sulphur bottom, is the largest. The whale is not a fish, as is commonly supposed, but a cetacean, says a writer in Pathfinder Magazine. A cetacean is a mammal that lives an aquatic life; a mammal is an air-breathing, warm-blooded animal that bears and suckles its young; a fish is a cold-blooded vertebrate, living in water and breathing through gills instead of lungs, and having fins instead of fingers or toes.

Equipped with enormous heads, one-fifth to one-third the size of the body, but apparently without any neck, whales have small eyes that are set well back. These massive creatures can remain under water for half an hour if necessary, but usually they come to the surface every eight or ten minutes to breathe, then remain on the surface about two minutes, blowing eight or ten times. They are hunted chiefly for their oil and whalebone, a single specimen sometimes yielding an amount worth nearly $5,000.

One of the largest blue whales of which there are authentic records measured 88½ ft., but the average is 76 ft. The weight of a large blue whale is more than that of five elephants.

Duping the Ducks

Each season an elder duck will produce about half a pound of elder down, but it must be tricked into doing so, says Samuel J. Beckett in "A Wayfarer in Norway." Artificial nests are placed in the haunts of the bird, and there the ducks lay their eggs. As the eggs are systematically taken away, the bird continues to sit for long periods, all the time plucking the valuable down from her breast for the nest. Lokta is one of the centers for the elder down industry.

Look for the Best in Everybody and Everything

My barber, past 77—reputedly the oldest in New York—is healthy, active, happy, without a grudge against anybody or anything, without a grudge against life—writes B. C. Forbes, in Forbes Magazine. When I sought to ascertain his philosophy which had produced such a long and satisfactory life, he replied: "I have always looked for the best in everybody and everything. And I have rarely been disappointed. I enjoy my work—I get up at 5.30 every morning. I enjoy my quiet family life. I have a good appetite. I sleep like a child. I envy nobody."

I wonder how many ultra-busy men have as satisfactory a philosophy, how many of them get as much out of life, how many of them will reach such an age healthy in body, contented in mind, envying nobody's lot?

What we have once enjoyed we can never lose.

—Great Thoughts.

The Public Built the CHAIN STORES

Chain Stores would not have lasted a month without the support and the appreciation of the public. They were planned to give such service to the public, goods at so reasonable a price, served in such clean and attractive surroundings, and of such excellent quality, that the public would return day after day to get more of the same kind of goods and service.

It is the public that definitely has benefited through the Chain Stores. It is the public that supports them. And it is to the public that the Chain Stores look for their continued well-being.

While serving the public, Chain Stores have not forgotten to be good neighbours; to pay their rent promptly; to patronize, as far as possible, local manufacturers and producers. They are an asset to any community where they are found. Ask the public.

The Education of a Duke

The Duke of Windsor is learning a bitter lesson—that no one who has once been a world figure can ever again do as he pleases without becoming the target of criticism.

The former King-Emperor and his wife cancelled their trip to America because of criticisms originating with organized Labor. The critics were not unfriendly to the Duke and Duchess, but to Charles Bedaux, their Franco-American friend, who had arranged to show them around. Rightly or wrongly, Labor regards Mr. Bedaux as its enemy because he invented a widely-used system of keeping tabs on the daily output of workers in industry and graduating their pay in proportion to what they produce. Labor also resented the Duke of Windsor's visit to Germany to study labor conditions, because the Nazi policy toward labor unions is disliked in America.

There is no ground for doubting the Duke's sincere desire to learn more about the way the mass of common people live, and to try to do something about it. It is to be hoped that he will find a way to visit America later, under better auspices.

Philosophy on Main Street

The dictionary says that a philosopher is "one who lives according to the rules of practical wisdom; one who meets or regards all vicissitudes with calmness."

—With this definition in mind, aren't we philosophers all? Of course, some are calmer in the face of trouble than others. But go where you will in this town or the next, you will find good philosophers. On Main Street are business and professional men who often have to make the best of a bad situation. In the country round about are housewives, mechanics, clerks, bookkeepers and men and women of other trades, who take as calm and sensible a view of their problems as the Stoics of old. Each one of us has a goodly store of practical wisdom personally acquired. The open-minded have an additional stock, gleaned from observation, conversation, sermon, picture, lecture, radio and books.

The practical wisdom which has saved the day for men before can save it again.—If not in words, then in cheerful grin and hearty hand-clasp, let us greet our neighbor with a warm, "Hello, philosopher!"

The Law in England

The other night, at about 10 p.m., taking a short cut to a friend's house through Victoria Station, I came across a fruiterer's shop open and offering for sale some delectable plums, a basket of which I thought I would buy as a present for my friend.

When I sought to make the purchase the storekeeper directed my attention to a notice: "Open for the convenience of Southern Railway passengers only." As he firmly declined to advise me on means of becoming a legal passenger, I took myself to the suburban booking office, and requested "A cheap ticket, to buy plums, please."

In the end I paid 2d for a third single to Battersea Park. Thus legalized, I bought my plums under the nose of an unsmiling policeman, who looked at, but did not scrutinize, my ticket.

The Longest Bridge in Europe

An interesting article in the Scientific American of recent date, by R. G. Skerrett, has to do with the longest bridge in Europe.

Mr. Skerrett introduces the reader to conditions in Denmark by saying: "Denmark, with her Diesel-motored 'Lightning Trains' and her splendid new bridges, is effectually reducing the handicap laid upon her by nature. The kingdom embraces more than a hundred islands, great and small, that have made the problem of rapid transit a difficult one; and Denmark is a thoroughly progressive country."

"To cross her numerous domestic waterways as well as the water gaps that separate her from neighboring nations, Denmark has developed fleets of typically modern train ferries. The largest and finest of these link opposing shores at strategic points and especially along her rail trunk lines that are tributary to ports served by steamships and rail connections leading to the capitals of Europe. But the best of train ferries are slow compared with express trains, and every unbridged water gap entails delays and possible inconvenience, particularly when thick weather hampers the navigator. Accordingly, within the last few years, Denmark has embarked upon a program of bridge building, and the aim is to abandon the use of ferries wherever it is economically practicable to substitute steel spans. The latest and most noteworthy of these structures is the Storstrom Bridge, which was opened to traffic last December."

"The Storstrom Bridge is the longest bridge built to date in Europe, and it spans a body of water that lies along the important and much traveled route between Copenhagen and Berlin."

The bridge saves trains spending 2½ hours being ferried from Gedser, across the Baltic to Warnemunde. The value of time in Denmark is emphasized by the fact that the bridge cost of $6,120,000 is said to be justified by this one saving.

Besides the railroad and motor traffic lanes, there is a nine-foot-wide walk to accommodate pedestrians and cyclists. "Denmark is over-run with domestic and visiting cyclists." The bridge is 10,532 feet long.

While the number of licensed vehicles in Britain has increased 20 percent in the last six years, pedestrian fatalities have dropped 18 percent.

Well Known Citizen and Family Are Bereaved

LATE MRS. L. LAFLEUR

It is with deep regret we record the death of Mrs. Louis Lafleur, who passed away after a long illness on Nov. 16th, aged 54. Mrs. Lafleur before her marriage was Miss Berthe Gravel. She was born in Montreal. A loving and devoted mother, and a kind friend and neighbor, she will be missed in the community. Besides her husband she leaves to mourn her passing four daughters, Misses Marguerite, Suzanne, Jeannine and Pierette Lafleur, and four sons, Rev. Louis Roger Lafleur, O.M.T., Lionel, Dr. Jules Lafleur, and Jean Marie. The funeral took place at 10 o'clock this morning from Ste. Anastasie Church, interment following in the Roman Catholic cemetery.

"To live in the hearts we leave behind, is not to die."

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL

Funeral ceremonies for the late Mrs. McOuat, held Wednesday afternoon at her residence on Grace Street, were largely attended by friends, from far and near and sympathizers in every walk of life. Rev. W. B. Rosborough officiated, with the assistance of Rev. H. H.

Cousens. Rev. S. J. Pike of Brownsburg pronounced the benediction. Most eloquent of the public feeling which was borne with her to the grave. Employees of Mr. McOuat held wreaths and tributes lining the pathway to the hearse. Members of the Masonic and Oddfellows Orders and of the 100 Club assisted with the wreaths, and four conveyances carried them in the cortege. Burial was made at the Lachute Cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Ernest Mount, Fraser McOuat, Thomas Graham, A. Rutherford, R. Charron, and H. M. Gall.

Rev. B. B. Brown Preacher at Brownsburg United Church

The anniversary services of the Brownsburg United Church were held last Sunday, with a gratifying attendance. The afternoon service, which took the place of the evening session, was under auspices of the Men's League, their second public gathering for the season. The preacher for both the morning and afternoon was the Rev. B. B. Brown, of Wesley Church, Montreal, a former pastor, who brought stirring messages on "Cherishing the Church" and "Will Religion Make a Man Unmanly?" The choir rendered special music at the morning service, while the male quartette gave another of their popular numbers in the afternoon. Mr. Brown expressed delight at renewing acquaintance with former friends of Brownsburg, as well as offering congratulations for the interest and success manifest by the people in the cause of the "Master's Kingdom." During the morning service the minister, Rev. S. J. Pike, gave a brief résumé of the history, leading up to the present church life. An interesting incident in this record was the fact that Rev. Mr. Brown took part in the opening and dedication service of the present building on Sunday, Dec. 20, 1908. Mr. Brown also preached the centennial sermon at Lachute United Church in 1932.

Flood Conditions Reported in Town of Hawkesbury

OTTAWA RIVER HIGH, CREEKS OVERFLOWING

Due to recent heavy rains flood conditions were reported last week-end in the vicinity of Hawkesbury. Several creeks in the district overflowed their banks and traffic in some sections of town was at a standstill for some time due to flooded streets. Old timers stated similar conditions have very seldom existed except during spring break-ups.

An official at the Hawkesbury pumping station stated the level of the Ottawa River there was eight and a half feet on Sunday. During 24 hours it had risen from 6 to 7 inches.

Truck Crashed Through Bridge Near Mont-Laurier

TWO MONTREALERS DROWNED IN RIVER

Horace Beaulieu, 25, and George Demers, 18, both of Montreal, were drowned near Mont Laurier Saturday afternoon when the pulpwood-laden truck in which they were driving crashed through the flooring of the MacLaren Bridge and settled in 25 feet of water. Three companions of the two victims succeeded in saving themselves. The bodies of Beaulieu and Demers were recovered after an all-night search.

Beaulieu was driver of the truck which, carrying a two-ton load, crashed through the bridge into the water.

MODERATOR HERE FOR UN. CHURCH ANNUAL LAYMEN'S SUPPER

"Christian fellowship is our mutual bond in Christian service, which breaks down all barriers."—This was the message brought by the Right Reverend Peter Bryce, D.D., Moderator of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, addressing a men's gathering in Lachute United, on their annual get-together last Monday evening.

A tasty supper was served by the ladies, followed by a few minutes spent in community singing led by Mr. C. Duncan, with Miss Ruth Todd as accompanist. The local circuit was fully represented with exception of two communities, Avoca and Arundel, over 100 gentlemen attending.

Rev. Wm. Munro, D.D., Secretary of the Ottawa - Montreal Conference, and Rev. Bruce Hunter, minister of St. James United Church, Montreal, were also guests of the evening. Dr. Munro gave a brief review of the objectives and standing of the church's Missionary and Maintenance Fund.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Bryce was then introduced by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough. Dr. Bryce had no formal address to make; his message was in the nature of an informal "talk". He described his various trips over the East and West of Canada, giving a graphic insight into the many hardships endured by the Western Provinces, with first-hand impressions of the reverses encountered and the heroism there displayed. He told of the generous response for the relief-stricken areas; how last year 280 cars had been shipped, while this year there had been 817, representing shipments to the value of nearly three-quarters of a million dollars. Several very touching incidents were related in passing. Dr. Bryce also referred to the growth of the United Church, and the closer bond that was becoming evident between the churches. "The work to which Christ has called us in the various departments of our church speaks to us for a re-dedication of ourselves to His service", he urged.

When Mistakes Are Made

Have you ever noticed when a garage man makes a mistake, he adds it on your bill; when a carpenter makes a mistake, it's just what he expected; when a preacher makes a mistake, nobody knows the difference; when a lawyer makes a mistake, it was just what he wanted because he has a chance to try the case all over again; when a judge makes a mistake, it becomes the law of the land; when a doctor makes a mistake, he buries it; but when the editor makes a mistake—good night!

Shot 200-lb. Bruin in Tree Near Lakefield

HAD CAUSED DAMAGE TO ORCHARDS

Wilbert Sherritt of Lakefield, while hunting Monday evening in a sugar bush about half a mile from his home, was attracted by the barking of his dog at the foot of a big maple tree. On looking up, the hunter discerned a dark object which resembled a black bear. Two shots from his gun brought the quarry to the ground—and it proved to be a large bruin over 200 lbs. in weight and measuring more than 6 ft. in length. This is considered an opportune catch in Lakefield, where the marauder had done considerable damage to apple trees and had been a menace for several months in the district.

BROKEN FRAGMENTS

BY M. V. TRAYERS

We settle things by a majority vote, and the psychological effect of doing that is to create the impression that the majority is probably right. Of course, on any fine issue the majority is sure to be wrong.

Think of taking a majority vote on the best music: jazz would win over Chopin. Or on the best novel: many cheap scribblers would win over Tolstoy. And any day "a prizefight will get a bigger crowd, larger gate receipts and wider newspaper publicity than any new revelation of goodness, truth or beauty could hope to achieve in a century."

There is a lot of truth in that quotation from Dr. Emerson Fossdick. If we swing the pendulum to the other extreme and take a quotation from Burke, in support of what that great statesman probably didn't have in mind when he wrote, "Society cannot exist unless a controlling power upon will and appetite be placed somewhere; and the less it is there is within, the more there must be without."

It is ordained in the eternal constitution of things, that men of imparate minds cannot be free. Their passions forge their fetters—we should find ourselves agreeing with Mussolini, Hitler and Stalin that their particular brand of government is the granite rock upon which the peace and security of the world must be built. We have often heard of "peace at any price," but there may perhaps be a price which we are not prepared to pay. Whether by majority vote or dictatorship, it is certain that the less government we have the better. The form of government is unimportant; it is the spirit that matters. We agree with Gladstone when he says: "The proper function of a government is to make it easy for the people to do good and difficult for them to do evil."

Between those two extreme methods of government lies a third, which endeavours to retain all the virtues of majority rule without acquiring any of the viciousness of the dictatorship. This method of establishing government recognizes the rights of minorities in the representation and administration of public affairs and is based on proportional representation.

Proportional Representation has been tried in Western Canada. Australia has just concluded an election held under this system. It has been in force in Ireland for a number of years. I say "in force," because the Irish never liked it; it was imposed by England at the time of the treaty which created the Irish Free State. The Republicans used it with such good effect that it did not work out quite as its originators expected. The City of New York is still awaiting the counting of the votes and the figure of expenditure after its first venture with the system of fair play for minorities.

This system of representation is more adaptable to a thickly populated area than to a sparsely extended one, and cannot be applied to a straight-fight election, where only two candidates seek election for one vacancy. In countries where the two-party policy prevails and constituencies are arranged of one member, a considerable change is required before Proportional Representation can be adopted. Both in Ireland and in Australia as many as four and five electoral were combined, and representation increased when the change from the old system to Proportional Representation was made. The effect of such wide representation made it possible for a voter in Argenteuil to cast his vote for a candidate in Three Rivers. The two greatest objections to the system are its costly operation (it is estimated that the present election will cost the City of New York well over one million dollars, whereas the single-vote system worked out at less than a quarter of that sum) and its belated returns. A description of its operation would take more than the space at my disposal but at a later date it may be possible to review the system from another angle.

Canadian Pacific Has Newest In Locomotives

Power, speed, an attractive semi-streamlined appearance, and the ability to haul heavy transcontinental trains more than 800 miles without change of engine are the outstanding features of 30 new 4-6-4 locomotives, numbering from 2820 to 2849, recently brought out by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

H. B. Bowen, chief of Motive Power and Rolling Stock, Canadian Pacific Railway, has embodied in the design of the locomotives the popular semi-streamlined appearance which he first developed in the 3000 class Jubilee type engines, as well as many of the other interesting details which were developed in connection with the Jubilee design, and which have been proven to be satisfactory in service.

Even more important than the trim appearance of the new locomotives, however, is their performance. Five of them, equipped with booster, each has a tractive effort of 57,000 pounds, which means that one engine can haul 4,789 tons or a weight approximating that of 100 loaded freight cars. As for staying power—they will be used on long runs such as the 813 miles of heavy grades and sharp curves between Toronto and Fort William and the 832 miles between Winnipeg and Calgary, where they will operate without change of engine. Latest engineering developments are incorporated in these newest Canadian locomotives, making them ideal either for fast passenger or heavy freight trains.

This new group of locomotives together with 20 lighter locomotives of the 4-4-4 type now under construction, combined with the power already in service will give the Canadian Pacific Railway one of the largest fleets of powerful modern locomotives on the North American Continent.

THE LEAVES FIND WORK

Some little faded maple leaves
Were listlessly playing
When a merry breeze came rustling
By

And it was saying, saying—

"Come race with me to other lands, Far o'er the hills I'm going,
Jack Frost is coming very soon
And soon it will be snowing."

The little leaves went scampering off
But the way was very long,
They stopped to rest by a yellow rose

And listen to her song—

"Stay little leaves, oh stay with me
And warm my poor, chilled stem, Let wild winds roar and puff and blow

We have no need for them."
The little leaves crept very close
And warmed the poor chilled flower,
And helped it bloom another year

Next morning bright and early Tom and Dollie stole downstairs and out to the stable where their father and the hired man were milking, for their accustomed cup of warm milk.

"Where's Betsy Bobbitt?" Tom demanded, going into an empty cow-stall. "Has she not been in the stable this morning?"

"No, sonny," said Tim, the hired man. "She was not with the other cows this morning, and I hadn't time to wait and look for her just then.
I'll go back later and hunt her up."

"Can't Dollie and I go, Daddy?"

her!"

"I think perhaps you had better merrier, you know, son."

"Aw, Dad, please!" begged Tom,

QUEBEC TO ENCOURAGE SCOUT CAMPING IN NATIONAL PARKS

Plans for special camp sites

BOY SCOUTS WIN MORE SCHOLARSHIPS

Two of the year's important

$1,000 and the other of $675, were captured by Boy Scouts.
The first, the Lord Atholstan scholarship at Queen's, was won by Troop Leader Donald

A ROPE SPINNING MISSIONARY

Boy Scout rope spinning has not been thought of as training for missionary work. Former Rover Scout Firmin Sauve of Ottawa, home on furlough from a station of the Christian and Missionary Alliance at Timbucto, on the southwestern fringe of the Sahara desert, told of the success of a demonstration of rope spinning in helping establish friendly relations with the fierce fighting, long unapproachable Tauregs, or "veiled riders" of the great desert.

A display of rope spinning in the market place of Timbucto attracted the attention of a group of the veiled camel men and demonstration of walking on the hands and other gymnastic stunts which appealed to their love of physical prowess finally established a friendly understanding. In return the young Canadian was taught the desert way of making fire with flint and steel and some mysterious quick-igniting tinder, and other desert "scoutcraft". As a souvenir he brought back a Success of "Canada 1937" Broadcasts Responsibility of Some 250 People

With the return to the air of the second series of "Canada 1937" broadcasts Imperial Tobacco brings to a coast to coast Canadian audience 45 minutes of varied radio entertainment designed to please listeners of every taste. Every Friday evening at 10 p.m. E.S.T., "Canada 1937" links Montreal with the current news centers of Europe in Transatlantic interviews with world renowned commentators; with the Roving Radio Reporter on a trip across Canada; with New York's Great White Way for latest film news.
The musical portion of the broadcast originates in the Canadian Metropolis, also the mixing-point with complete control over the entire program.

Broadcast in the Dominion over a nation-wide chain of 37 stations with weekly contacts with points as far removed as world news dictates it will readily be seen that this ambitious program involves a maze of network facilities, telephone and telegraph and allied radio facilities.
A dozen or more organizations co-ordinate their efforts in this weekly program.

The complete success of "Canada 1937" is the immediate and individual responsibility of some 250 people. In radio nearly every individual is a key-man. Lapses on the part of technicians, station operators, or errors at the originating or control points will ruin the program no matter how careful the organization.

At Montreal, where a major part of the program originates, 73 persons are engaged comprising musicians, singers, music arrangers, technicians, telegraph and telephone control men, producer-writer, and an announcer.

Elsewhere in Canada approximately 163 people are required mainly in technical capacities. The New York pick-up and control point requires the services of about 8 men, while London and other European links raise the personnel total to some 250.

Hints for Homebodies

Specially Written for Readers of The Watchman
By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

FIND THE RIGHT WOMAN

Municipal elections will soon be here again. Politicians, to accomplish much, must be trained. And there is no better training ground than that of municipal affairs. It is futile to say we should have a woman on our council or on our Board of Education if we haven't a suitable woman for the job. There is no reason on earth why a woman should be elected if she cannot do the work just because she is a woman. First find your woman. When you have the proper woman, then get behind her and because she has the necessary qualifications, do all in your power to have her elected. Women have not come to a full realization of their power and the power of their votes. If they really stood together and worked for what they wanted, they could accomplish a great deal. Running a municipality is really glorified housekeeping and the right woman can be very useful.

A DIVERSITY OF OPINION

When there is a diversity of opinion, it is often a difficult thing to say which is right. Maybe both are, all depending on the point of view. A woman was holding forth irately about her church having a Rummage Sale. She would give them nothing for it. It was disgraceful for them to sell things and make money out of the poor people who needed the articles. Why couldn't they give them the things? Then I heard a woman talking who works by the day to support her family. She said she did not know how she would ever manage if it weren't for the Rummage Sale. She was able to clothe her family for very little and the materials in the clothing she got were so much better than she could afford to buy. As long as she could do a day's work, she wouldn't accept charity but she was glad of the chance to buy things cheaply. So there you are. Two people with different points of view and both think they are right. Certainly, it is the people who do not want charity and who have very little to do with that have the hardest time getting along. The others who will take anything they can get seem to manage better.

PLAN YOUR WORK

There is considerable work to do in any house but that work will be easier to do if it is planned systematically. Some of you may say, "the work has to be done, what difference does it make if it is planned or not?" Things done by routine are easier to do and the mental and nervous strain are lessened. The care of the house usually falls into a natural routine but the meals, which are a large part of the work, do not as easily fall into routine. Careful planning does lessen the work. This I have proved by experience. Like most of us, I am a busy woman, but if our today's meals are planned yesterday, I can get a great deal more work done in the morning. You know how it goes. You wonder what you are going to have for dinner, half-heartedly, without putting your whole mind to it. Then you decide you will have a roast but by the time you have decided, it is too late to order. Maybe you decide to have a lemon pudding, then find there are no lemons in the house. All this deciding and making up your mind, again, are tiring. Nothing is harder work than coming to a decision. If you take a minute or two the night before, to plan your meals for the next day, you are ready first thing in the morning to do the necessary ordering, or to start the foods that take long cooking in time. Unless you have tried it, you can have no idea of how much help consistently planning the day's meals ahead of time can be.

PUFF PASTE

A reader has asked why her puff paste does not look right.

She says she follows directions and that it tastes all right but instead of having several layers, it has only one or two. It sounds as if it were rolled too thinly. If the paste is too thin, it cannot have layers, as there must be material to layer. Puff paste is rolled thicker than other paste for this reason. I often make a modified puff paste. Just use the ordinary paste that has been chilled, then dot it with butter, fold over and press down the edges to enclose the air. I do this three times. The things I make most frequently from this are pastry cases for creamed foods, cheese straws, and jelly pastries. To make the cases, cut a round for the bottom. Then by using that same cutter and a smaller one, make rims a quarter inch in width. Moisten the edge of the bottom round and press on one rim, build up until you have used four rims, moistening each and pressing lightly to the one below. Bake in a hot oven of 500 degrees. Cover one half a sheet of pastry with grated cheese, and salt lightly. Fold over and press down the edges to enclose the air. Do this three times. Cut in strips and bake in a hot oven of 500 degrees. Serve with soup or salads.

JELLY PASTIES

Cut pastry with a star cutter and bring each point almost to the centre, moistening and pressing down lightly. Bake in a hot oven of 500 degrees, fill the centre with jelly. These are nice for afternoon tea.

Old Fashioned Mince Meat

Two pounds lean beef, $\frac{3}{4}$ lb. suet, 5 pounds apples 4 cups seeded raisins, 2 cups cleaned currants, 1 pound shredded citron, $\frac{1}{2}$ pound candied orange and lemon peels, 2 pounds brown sugar, 1 cup molasses, 4 cups sweet cider, 1 cup boiled cider, 1 cup meat stock, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 tablespoon grated nutmeg, 1 tablespoon powdered cinnamon, 1 teaspoon powdered cloves, 1 teaspoon allspice, 1 pint brandy.

Old-time cooks preferred the tongue to any other part of the beef although the neck, heart and other cheap lean cuts can be used. Cook meat in boiling water to cover, until tender, removing scum as it rises. When meat is tender, boil rapidly to reduce stock to one cup and add 1 teaspoon salt. Cool meat in stock. When cool remove from liquid and carefully trim away any bits of fat, bone or gristle. Put lean meat through coarse knife of food chopper and add strained stock. Put suet and pared and cored apples through food chopper. Chop raisins coarsely. Put all ingredients except brandy in preserving kettle. Bring to boiling point and then cook slowly for two hours. Add brandy, put into sterilized jars and seal. This will make about six quarts of mince meat.

There's an old superstition that each member of the family should stir the mince meat during its cooking because he who stirs shares in the good luck, health and happiness foretold for the household.

When you serve mince pie for dessert plan the meal with due regard for the calories found in the pie. And for those festive occasions which demand pie for tradition's sake, make the servings small and reduce the calories in the preceding courses as much as you can. For example, have a plain green salad with French dressing and serve vegetables dressed with salt and pepper and butter, avoiding rich mayonnaise and cream sauces.

Do Not Trust Strangers

There are always some new schemes to get something for nothing. A new one was tried in one village not so far away from here recently.

A party of four men stopped at a house and represented that they were experts in the work of repairing and relining chimneys, and that at this time of year chimneys should be put into safe condition for the winter. On receiving permission to inspect the chimney and if necessary to make repairs, they displayed a great deal of activity, which ended in a few hours, when they reported the work done and demanded $45 in payment.

The lady of the house very naturally was dumbfounded at this exorbitant charge. After some argument they reduced the charge to $12.50, and indulged in threats if this was not paid. One of the party finally accepted $5 and departed.

Subsequent investigation showed that no real work had been done by the quartet of swindlers.

Householders cannot be too careful in dealing with strangers. The safe rule is to buy from or have work done by people or firms who are well known either from personal experience or by their advertisements in the local paper.

Today's smartest tailored suits are more feminine than the mannish models that used to be tops in style. A new and softer note is furnished in such trimming details as velvet collars and fur borders, bands, lapels and pockets. Shoes to wear with these suits are snug and form-fitting and very comfortable, with walking-height heels covered with matching materials or built up of little uncovered layers that are nick-proof and resilient.

A TRIBUTE TO THE COW

"The cow is a most wonderful laboratory. She takes the grasses of the pasture, and the roughage of the field, and converts them into the most perfect food for man. In that food there is a mysterious something which scientists have found essential to the highest health of the human race, and which can be found nowhere else. Men have sought for centuries the fabled Fountain of Youth. The nearest approach to that fountain which has yet been discovered is the udder of the cow. Without her milk, children languish, the vigor of the adult declines, and the vitality of the human race runs low." —A tribute by Hon. Frank O. Lowden, Stannissippi Farm, Illinois.

"A house without books is cheerless," said an Italian author and scholar. How cheerful is a room full of books! How they immediately capture the eye, and how much enjoyment they can give! One does not have to be a highbrow, if one reads only for pleasure. Here the books stand in a little room, within anyone's reach, the fruits of the richest minds of the entire world brought into useful and useable form, arranged according to countries, languages, and contents. One section will transport you into past centuries, another into distant countries; this one will talk to your mind, that one bring a smile to your lips, a third invites you to meditate, a fourth will let you dream. Another will bring tears to your eyes. Here are shelves with books for dreary, melancholic, spiritless days; others with books for days on which one is possessed by tremendous zeal for work.

The giant dictionaries and the big works with pictures and the beams and rafters of the little room; books in brilliant leather and gilt edges are the aristocrats; the soberly bound classics are impressive in their dignity; other volumes have beauty and elegance; others simplicity; and then there are the little pocket editions which come with you to the train or bus, from coat pocket or travelling bag, from suitcase to night-table, content only to be used as a companion for the odd spare minutes. In the whole company you have your favorites, your old dependable friends, your acquaintances, your teachers, and your benefactors.

From my earliest childhood books have brought great and enduring pleasure. The summer I was "going on five" my dear father taught me to read. He was not particularly patient, and at first it was rather a labour. The Look and Say method was employed, accompanied occasionally by a little cuff, and much scorn for my apparent inability to remember the word LAMB when told it for the fifth time. Pride—or whatever passes for pride with a child—was piqued, my eyes soon opened, and so quickly as quite to surprise my fond parent I found myself able to read; a rather tiny Columbus setting sail over the great unknown sea of literature. I remember picking out little items from the Daily Witness—thinking that small items were for small people—also the Readable Paragraphs from the same paper (this is of course pure Greek to the younger generation before me). It did not convey much meaning, but the pieces had to be read, being my size. I was never read aloud to, though required to do a certain amount of reading aloud myself, necessary for many reasons, the most important being to check up my beginner's pronunciation of our revered, beautiful and loved, but very variable English language. I well remember the shout of laughter with which my pronunciation of "the Isslee of Widge" was greeted. Yet the laughter didn't seem to bother; my mistakes were not repeated for the amusement of grown-ups, and I do think that it is the re-telling (with ornament) of her mistakes which makes for trouble, and may possibly turn a child against reading altogether. Parents and children, especially little children, do not misunderstand each other if let alone; a child eager to learn does not mind her father laughing at her so long as he helps her, and in my own case through all our lives together that help was never lacking. I can and do daily thank my father and his memory for his care and patience, and for the lifelong pleasure which it has given me.

From her initial ventures in the art of reading, Mrs. Chapman continued with a fascinating review of literary masters; the writers of children's fiction and the Victorians who had left an indelible record of their surroundings; the historians whose novels embodied a wealth of tradition and fact happily woven in story; and the modern authors with their trend of realism.

The speaker, in conclusion, dealt with the aims and purposes of the Association of Canadian Bookmen, and made enthusiastic mention of the Book Fair which opens on Saturday at the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal.

Gentlemen Prefer Blondes

Sir James Crichton Browne throws unexpected light on why gentlemen prefer blondes.

He suggests that the secret is exophthalmic goitre, which occurs more frequently in blondes. In its early stage it produces "a type of woman who is clever, volatile, lively and temperamental, with large lustrous eyes, distinctly attractive to the other sex."

Tell this to a blonde and you'll see the temperament all right!

All we love deeply becomes part of us.

—Great Thoughts.

Beginnings of the Game Laws
Two hundred years ago the Indians in Kentucky set aside game refuges for bears and created what may have been the first game law in America. Bear fat, bear meat and bear skins were the most prized returns of the hunt. Large areas were set aside as "beloved bear grounds" where only a limited number of animals could be killed each year, so that a permanent supply of these animals would be maintained.

Our Boss is the Public

It is the public that comes into our stores for quality goods at reasonable prices. If our Boss is not satisfied, we have failed and he — or she — has the remedy in his — or her — own hands. If our Boss is satisfied, we have done our duty, and our Boss continues to deal with us.

Dominion Stores, wherever they are located, depend upon the good will of the public—a good will which is obtained through service and goods of fine quality sold at reasonable prices.

Though we do only a small percentage of the food business in the Province, we have set a standard of operation — both buying and selling — that has raised the level of food merchandising all along the line — to the advantage of the public and of the many progressive independents who have adopted these modern methods.

MAN INSTANTLY KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

Theophile Jolin, 54-year-old resident of Greece's Point, was instantly killed at Vachon's Corner, just west of St. Philippe, at 7 o'clock Monday evening when struck by a car driven by Laurence Legault of Chute-à-Blondeau. Jolin was walking homeward from St. Philippe when the accident occurred.

A jury was empanelled by the district coroner, Dr. J. H. Mason, of Lachute, and after hearing the evidence returned a verdict of unavoidable death by accident.

Jolin, who was a part-time employee in the government canal works, had seen service in France with the 87th Battalion. He had attended the Remembrance Day ceremonies here on November 11th with fellow veterans of the county. He is survived by his wife and a family of ten, besides his aged father and mother.

Plan Safety Check-Up of Motor Vehicles in Quebec

TRAFFIC OFFICERS WILL INSPECT ALL CARS AND TRUCKS

Preparations have been completed for a province-wide check-up of all motor vehicles, and on Monday 350 members of the provincial traffic force inaugurated their investigation throughout Quebec. Assured of full co-operation and assistance from all municipalities, the motorcycle policemen have launched a campaign for increased safety on the highways.

Examination will be made of every automobile and truck, according to the instructions given by Major Charles Girouard, director of the traffic division of the Provincial Police. The number of the motor and of the tires and the weight of the vehicle will be sought, while drivers will be requested to show licences and registration cards and indicate whether or not their brakes are in working order. Ability to satisfy the officers' probe will entitle the driver to a small yellow ticket denoting that all requirements have been filled.

Ex-Heavyweight Champion Likes Lachute Products

JACK DEMPSEY VISITS LOCAL MILLS

Jack Dempsey, former world's heavy-weight boxing titleholder, visited Lachute on Tuesday to look over the Ayers Mills and their products, which are almost as widely renowned as the boxer himself. Dempsey came here in company with Paul LaHaye of St. Jerome, who was formerly his sparring partner. Mr. LaHaye escorted his guest to the Ayers Mills, where he was introduced to many of the staff. A number of young ladies procured his autograph and those with whom he conversed and shook hands were impressed with his genial personality. The visitor was later taken to the Wilson Paper Mills, where he also showed keen interest in the products and process of their manufacture.

The ex-fighter next visited Lachute High School with Mr. LaHaye, whose son Paul is receiving his education there.

Store Keepers Fined for Possession of Slot Machines

Two owners of slot machines in this town pleaded guilty to possession of the machines before District Magistrate Donat Lalonde at St. Jerome on Monday. One, because it was his first offence, was fined $20 and costs, and the second, who was up for the second time, was fined $25 and costs. Both machines were ordered confiscated.

Three other Lachute storekeepers pleaded guilty to a charge of being in possession of "pin-play" machines and were fined $5 and costs.

Lions See Need of Healthy Interests for Town Youth

The bi-monthly meeting of Lachute Lions Club was held in Desjardins' Hotel last evening, with President C. Tremblay in the chair. Following the supper an hour's discussion brought out much of real interest.

An earnest effort to do something for the youth of this community, to offset the lure of pool rooms and the gambling devices found in so many of the small restaurants, resulted in a strong resolution being sent to the Town Council urging the proper enforcement of regulations governing pool rooms with respect to minors.

The secretary reported that Mr. A. Fassio had offered an evening at the Rex Theatre for a special performance in aid of the club's charity fund; particulars and date will appear in next week's Watchman.

In respect for one of their officers recently bereaved, the Hundred Club deferred their regular supper last evening. LACHUTE BOY SCOUTS ISSUE ANNUAL APPEAL, WILL REPAIR DISCARDED TOYS AND PLAYTHINGS

A group of local Boy Scouts at work in their Toy-Repair Shop.

BRING CHRISTMAS CHEER TO NEEDY CHILDREN

For the tenth successive year the Lachute Troop of Boy Scouts will form a link in the coast to coast chain of Scout Toy Repair Shops.

The local Scouts are now making an appeal to the public for discarded or damaged toys, games or books suitable for children. This appeal is being made early so that the Scouts may have an opportunity of making the necessary repairs to toys which are received in a damaged condition. Toys received in this manner will be made ready and held for distribution at Christmas time amongst the needy children of this district as well as Western Canada.

No doubt many people have small quantities of paint left over from various jobs, for which they have no further use. These leftovers could be used to good advantage by the Scout Toy Repair Shop as many of the toys received require a new coat of paint to freshen them up.

Mr. Ralph McOuat, of the Farmers' Supply Company, has again very kindly offered the Scouts the use of a workshop in their building, free of charge.

Some toys have already been received and arrangements are now being pushed ahead so that an early start can be made on the repair work. Scouts will be glad to call for donations of toys to this worthy cause, or contributions of this nature may be left at the Farmers' Supply Company building on Foundry Street (opposite the C.P.R. station).

The Lowly Waste-Basket

Among all the great, good things that stand and wait to serve unobtrusively, the wastebasket has uses that justify an ode in the pedestrian prose of the editorial. Of all the files, the wastebasket is the most useful and generally the most accurate. The wastebasket is not only a solution of clutter. It is a symbol of the brave crossing of the Rubicon of decision.

Who has not been turned into a vacillating, wracked Hamlet by documents accumulating on desk, in drawers, on window sills? To throw or not to throw that becomes the question. Certainly the wastebasket should not be grudging an occasional panegyric; above all, it should not be grudging a goodly share of the contents of most desks.

Canada Purchases Petroleum from Latin America . . . Reciprocal Agreements With Several Tropic Countries Show Widening Scope of Canada's External Trade

"The Ottawa Spotlight" By "Spectator"

Ottawa, Nov. 23rd. — The trade agreement just signed by Canada with the small Central American republic of El Salvador, while not affecting a large volume of trade, is nevertheless another link in the chain of Canada's reciprocal trade agreements with other nations. We sell wheat flour, some chemicals and paper to Salvador and buy in return some coffee, fruit and fibres, the total annual trade being under 100 thousand dollars, but this agreement is another step in our policy of fostering commercial relations with Latin America, with which we have a large volume of trade. For twelve months ending September of this year Canada's total trade with 12 leading countries of South America, Central America and the Caribbean amounted to 47 million dollars, which was 15 million over the year ending September 1936. There were substantial gains both in imports and exports. In the period ending September 1937 we bought from these countries goods to the value of 27 million

Returning from Snow-swept U.S., Find Canada Bare

FOUR MOTORISTS REPORT INTERESTING TRIP

A party comprising Edward Jones, Jos. Raymond, James MacKimmie, of Lachute, and Donald Butler of the Seignior Club, Montebello, left two weeks ago on a motor trip through the States. They returned on Monday evening, and reported a thoroughly enjoyable time. In their jaunt of 4,500 miles they visited Washington, New Orleans, Memphis and other southern points. The roads over the major part of the route were excellent, with a considerable stretch of the new four-lane super-highways, over which the travelers experienced the fullest thrill of motoring. They were delayed at Cleveland by heavy snow, which they encountered until nearing the Canadian border. Arriving thus far they experienced genuine surprise to find the highways bare of snow — which is somewhat unusual for this time of the year.

Auto Thieves Run Wild, Disrupt Light, Phone Service

An automobile, reported stolen in Montreal on Monday, created havoc the same evening near St. Augustin where it was driven into three electric light poles, breaking them down. Light and telephone services in the village were cut off when the poles were damaged at 8.30 in the evening. The occupants of the car, which was demolished, fled through the fields apparently unhurt.

Following the smash, Constable Joly of Ste. Scholastique found a paper inside the vehicle bearing the name and address of the owner, Sam Leopold, a Montrealer. It was found that the car had been stolen in the city.

Elderly Resident Is Found Dead Near Louisa

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a jury in the case of Thomas H. Letts, found dead in an outbuilding near his dwelling at Louisa shortly before 11 o'clock last Thursday morning. Letts was 79, English, and lived in retirement with his wife at the old Curran farmstead, nine miles north of Lachute.

He left the house at around 10 o'clock and his wife, going outside to look for him, found the man lying on the floor of the outbuilding. She summoned help from neighbors.

Dr. J. H. Mason, of Lachute, conducted an inquest and it was learned that Letts had felt unwell for the past two days. It was believed he succumbed to a heart attack. Three children survive, Mrs. Harry Hammond, T. Harry and Ralph Letts, all of Montreal.

Cyclist Acquitted in Death of Cripple at St. Jerome

Roland Touchette, standing trial in connection with the death of Louisa Laeroix, a crippled girl who was run over by an autobus in St. Jerome while riding on Touchette's bicycle, was acquitted last week by District Magistrate Donat Lalonde. The court decided the evidence showed that the victim was "half to blame" and the charge of criminal negligence against Touchette, laid following a verdict by a coroner's jury, was dismissed.

Que. Colonization Minister Here Last Week-end

ASSURES DEPARTMENT'S GENEROUS SUBSIDY NEXT SEASON

Hon. Henry L. Auger, Quebec Minister of Colonization, and his deputy minister, Mr. Laforce, paid a visit to Lachute last week-end as guests of Mr. Georges Héon, and together they visited most of the colonization road projects in this constituency. The visitors expressed themselves well satisfied with the work accomplished to date, considering the interference of wet weather this fall. Mr. Héon was asked to submit, as soon as possible, demands for road improvements next year—for which a generous budget should be allotted to this territory. Argenteuil municipalities are advised to act accordingly and outline their most pressing requirements in colonization roads.

Hon. Mr. Auger and Mr. Laforce were entertained informally at dinner by Mr. Héon on Sunday evening.

Telephone Change-Over Made In System at Ste. Agathe

OLD REEL-CRANK SETS ARE REPLACED

A step ahead of the town of Lachute, Ste. Agathe is enjoying the more modern phone system upon which line-men are also working in this area. On Monday the old-fashioned crank instruments were abandoned in Ste. Agathe, and subscribers now reach central by the simple operation of lifting their receivers. A similar change was made in St. Jerome a year ago. In Lachute the Bell Telephone's line-men are carefully insulating all cables for the more delicate requirements of a central battery system, before installing the crankless receivers. It is the company's intention to replace all the older fashioned sets through the Laurentian district.

Sydney B. Barron Died in Vancouver, B.C.; Burial Here

Word was received here last Friday, from the Plantagenet Masonic Lodge of Vancouver, of the death of Sydney Bellingham Barron. His death was due to heart failure while at his work in Vancouver last Thursday afternoon. Mr. Barron was in his 54th year. The remains were brought here for burial, which took place today in the Lachute Cemetery.

Born at Lachute in 1884, he received his education at the Lachute Academy. In 1911 he went to Alberta, and in 1913 he went from there to Vancouver. He was for several years Secretary of Tranquille Sanatorium at Kamloops with head office in Vancouver. During that time he studied accountancy and became a chartered accountant and built up a business in that city. During the last year he was working as an accountant with the Civil Service.

He had many friends in Vancouver who mourn his death. He attended the Presbyterian Church and was interested in a number of benevolent activities. He was fond of athletic sports, although the handicap of physical disabilities prevented his participation in the more strenuous forms.

He is survived by three older brothers and five sisters, all of whom reside in eastern Canada.

Accidental Death Verdict, Man Trampled by Horse

Accidental death was the verdict returned by a jury under Coroner Dr. G. Latour in the case of Jean Telegramme, a farm hand of New Glasgow, who was trampled to death by a horse on Nov. 16th. Telegramme was feeding two horses in the stable of Theophile Castonguay, at New Glasgow. One of the animals was nervous and when Telegramme got too close the horse shied and knocked the farm hand over. He fell beneath the horse's hoofs and was trampled upon. Hearing the man's shouts, Castonguay, his employer, rushed to the stable and found Telegramme unconscious and terribly injured. He died shortly afterward. He had suffered a fracture of the skull and practically every bone in his body was broken.

Telegramme was from France. He was 75 years of age, and had been working for many years at the Castonguay farm. He had no relatives in Canada.

WINTER PROTECTION OF ROSES AND PERENNIAL PLANTS

By A. H. Walker, Lecturer in Floriculture.

The number of rose plants which are winter-killed each year is far larger than would be the case if more attention were given to their protection in the fall, and also to their uncovering in the spring. The rose is a relatively hardy plant and, in countries where twenty degrees of frost is quite common, no protection is necessary. This may occasionally be true under our conditions if there are heavy snowfalls before severe weather sets in, and if snow remains all winter. Under these circumstances, protection should be given as follows:—
Protect the roots from sharp early frosts by placing a few inches of any dry litter on the soil around the plants, leaving the wood exposed so that it may be thoroughly ripened by airy cold conditions, enabling it to stand lower conditions of temperature later. Ordinarily, protection is not necessary until the end of November, when sufficient dry litter such as leaves or straw manure should be placed on the plants to ensure adequate protection. This later covering also reduces the possibility of damage by mice, since they will by then have established their winter quarters.
Uncovering in the spring requires more careful attention than the winter covering, for the covering material must be removed gradually as the snow melts and the litter thaws out. The wood is thus gradually insured to exposed conditions and growth is retarded until natural processes begin. Frosts are not likely to injure the exposed wood, as it has been gradually prepared for full exposure and will stand any weather conditions from then on.
Perennial plants require no other protection than snow, provided there is sufficient snowfall in early winter. However, since these conditions cannot be depended upon to prevail, the usual practice is to spread on a few inches of rough manure by the end of November. This will give enough protection until sufficient snow has fallen to protect the plants throughout the winter. As early as possible in spring the manure should be drawn off the plants and dug into the soil around them.

One Hundred Miles of Gold!

MINING, THE GREAT STABLE BASIC CANADIAN INDUSTRY

Almost within the last five years mining in Canada has come to be recognized as the greatest and most stable of the basic industries of the Dominion. Its output last year reached a new high value of more than 361,000,000 dollars, which compares with slightly more than 191,000,000 in 1932. The industry now ranks next to agriculture as a primary producer and holds second place in Canada's export trade.

Last year, 1936, mining operations in Canada afforded direct employment for 90,000 people, whose salaries and wages are estimated at 110,000,000 dollars. Dividends paid by the industry exceeded 80,000,000 dollars, a new record and a gain of 20,000,000 dollars over the previous year. Expenditures in Canada during the year by the mining companies, for supplies and equipment, are estimated at 100,000,000 dollars.

Of this the mines of Ontario expended 47,000,000 dollars; those of British Columbia and the Yukon 17,400,000 dollars; Quebec 16,200,000 dollars; Manitoba and Saskatchewan 8,000,000 dollars; Nova Scotia 6,000,000; Alberta 5,000,000, and New Brunswick 300,000 dollars.

The wide-spread influence of these expenditures on the industrial life of the Dominion can be better appreciated by a breakdown of the disbursements. It is estimated, for instance, that expenditures for freight amounted to 15,000,000 dollars; electric power to 12,000,000; fuels to 11,000,000; explosives to 6,500,000; machinery to 6,500,000; lumber and timber to 6,000,000; electrical equipment to 3,000,000, and rock drills and parts to 1,500,000 dollars. Other items include 5,500,000 dollars for insurance; 1,700,000 dollars for building material; 2,700,000 dollars for smelter fluxes and refractories, and 2,500,000 dollars for chemicals and floating agents.

The above expenditures by mining companies do not include those made by prospectors, exploration companies and the many small mining syndicates, nor those made by the industry's 90,000 employees for food, clothing and housing.

A survey of the official returns for 1936 shows that gold continued to hold its position of leadership, its output valued at 130,850,000 dollars being greater than that of all other metals combined.

The gold mining industry was increasing its production during a period when most other Canadian industries were curtailing operations, and it continues to set the pace for mineral development throughout the country. The daily milling capacity of gold producing plants was increased by close to 3,000 tons through an entry into production of 32 gold properties, and now exceeds 37,000 tons, or considerably more than double that at the close of 1931. Present indications are that at least 30 more properties will enter production during 1937 and in the meantime the list of properties giving promise of eventually becoming successful producers, is being steadily extended.

Gold production in Canada is likely to reach a value in excess of 150,000,000 dollars this year, or an increase of approximately 20,000,000 dollars over 1936. Indications are that every gold-producing province will contribute to this increase, as reports of greater activity are to hand from practically all of the important gold producing areas in the Dominion.

Last year, 1936, Quebec contributed the greatest percentage of the increase over 1935.

The average of salaries and wages paid to employees in the metal-mining industry in Canada is considerably higher than the average pay in any existing industry, not excepting that of the Ford Motor Company. Moreover, the work is steady and continuous for the 300 working days of the year.

At the close of each working day the mineral industry of Canada adds another million dollars to national income.

This wealth is dispersed in wages, equipment, materials, clothing, food, taxes, dividends and reserve.

The Noranda Mine, 350 miles north-west of Montreal, has the second largest output of copper in Canada. It produces, also, gold, silver, selenium and tellurium. The total production of minerals at Noranda—all from one property—reaches a yearly value of 15,000,000 dollars. Noranda is the world's leading copper-gold producer.

In 1926 Noranda was a prospect. Since that time it has paid to its employees 22,000,000 dollars in wages. Last year Noranda purchased 3,000,000 dollars worth of supplies. One hundred and thirty-five different companies in the Province of Quebec benefited directly from these purchases; 990,000 dollars was received by the railways for freight and express charges. And these are only a small part of the record of benefits which, directly and indirectly, have been disbursed by this outstanding Quebec mine.

The comparatively small section of Canada's mining territory composed of the Sudbury, Cobalt, Porcupine and Kirkland Lake areas, has already yielded over 1,500,000,000 dollars in mineral wealth.

From 1911 to the end of 1936 Hollinger Gold Mines distributed 232,315,284 dollars in wages, purchases of supplies, taxes and dividend payments.

Since 1914 the Kirkland mining camp has produced over 260,000,000 dollars in gold and now produces approximately 40,000,000 dollars a year.

In the Kirkland camp is the richest gold mine on the American continent, and the second richest in the world.

With your car safely in the garage, seems as though you are prepared for anything that can happen. Don't even need a telephone any more.

Sickness, fire, accident, whatever it may be—and some of these things come occasionally to all of us—is your car quick enough, sure enough? Maybe the roads are blocked. . . . Maybe a tire is flat. . . .

Every Canadian should be vitally interested in Canadian mines. We have a heavy proportion of the world's wealth housed within our borders, and must realize the exciting facts about this heritage which is a guarantee of our future greatness.

Canada has the men with the ability to find and develop mines, and to solve the metallurgical problems incident to the recovery of mineral products which this age demands. Canada has vast areas of geological structures which are favorable to the occurrence of minerals, and sympathetic, helpful governments which offer services invaluable to prospector, miner and metallurgist.

and sold to them a total of 20 million. Our purchases consist of various products of the Tropics, coffee, fruits, sugar, cocoa beans, tobacco, with oil in large quantities from Columbia, Peru, Venezuela, and Ecuador, and India corn and hides from Argentina. These are simply some of the main items. We bought nearly 13 million dollars worth of goods from Argentina during the past year. We imported a great deal of maize (Indian corn). Our exports are very varied, covering both natural and manufactured products, potatoes, (from the Maritimes to Cuba), wheat and wheat flour, rubber products including vehicle tires, prepared fish from the Atlantic and Pacific fisheries, sawn Douglas fir from British Columbia to the Southern Pacific coast countries, powdered and condensed milk, newsprint for the newspapers of Brazil, Argentina and other countries, farm implements and electric batteries and equipment. Here again the list is incomplete, but it will be seen that we have made a good beginning in our trade with these Spanish and Portuguese speaking countries of the American continent. As these countries expand industrially in the future our trade can expand as well, as long as we look after it.

An interesting feature of our import trade with Latin America is the extent of our oil (petroleum) purchases. We have an expanding production of high grade oil in our Turner Valley fields in Alberta but these wells supply only a small part of our requirements. Refiners bring great quantities from United States oil fields but a large number of the automobiles travelling the roads of Canada are running on gasoline made from the oil which spurted up from the wells of the northwest and western part of South America.

CANADA'S FOREIGN TRADE

There was some falling off in Canada's export trade in the month of October compared with the previous October. The total exports of domestic products amounted to $102,747,000 compared with $110,999,000, a decline of $8,252,000. It was wheat which accounted for this decline and more. Wheat exports were $13,273,000 compared with $28,950,000, a decrease of $15,677,000. There was an increase of $7,425,000 in other products, although this increase did not reach the average advance which has been shown during the past few months.

The explanation of the decline in wheat sales is simple enough. Last year the wheat board and other selling agencies were engaged in bringing down the Canadian surplus of grain to normal limits. This

AUTORAILER . . . Come-Back

When railroads began to be built, a little more than a century ago, the building of public highways stopped. The idea was that railroads would be for the use of anybody who wanted to run vehicles on them, so Federal and state governments gave them subsidies in land and cash. In practice it was found that a railroad couldn't be used as a public highway, and road building was resumed.

Now paved roads and the automobile have caused the practical abandonment of many short branch railroads, but an ingenious Canadian inventor has made a vehicle called an "autorailler" which runs on rails or highways with equal ease. The autorailler is being tried out in regular service over a 90-mile stretch in New Brunswick, on the first railroad ever built in Canada.

There are lots of branch rail lines where a vehicle which could run on highways to pick up passengers or freight, then on rails to carry them to the next town, would be very useful. The autorailler is worth watching.

GLASS To be Worn

For two or three years new fibres of finely-spun glass have been woven into fabrics for garments and draperies. It seems impossible but it is true that glass can be made as tough and elastic as cotton.

The latest thing in spun glass is called "glass wool". It looks like cotton batting, but is much lighter, and it is being used for heat insulation. It is so cheap that it can be used economically to spread over gardens to protect plants and flowers against frost. It comes in bales and unrolls like carpet, but it is so light that a child can easily pick up a bale bigger than a barrel.

This new glass "mulch" lets a little light through, so that plants covered with it are green when uncovered in spring. It does not harbor vermin and it is practically indestructible.

That is only one of the marvels of glass making which modern science has developed. Several large buildings with all-glass walls have been built. Some day we may all live in glass houses.

MACHINES Create Jobs

I have maintained for years that machines do not decrease employment but rather tend to create more jobs. I have seen that come about in the printing trades, with which I am most familiar. Now the Machinery Institute, as the result of a careful study, comes to the same conclusion.

Population in America has increased 72 per cent since 1899, but factory employment is 83 per cent higher than it was then. The working day is shorter, but the number of man-hours is nearly a third larger. This is due, the Institute reports, to the vast increase in demand and production of all kinds of goods, made possible only through machines.

It is not always true, however, that less labor is required per unit of finished product.

Machines not only increase production but also make improvement in quality possible, and in the automobile and some other industries the demand for better quality has actually resulted in the employment of more workers for each unit produced.

for Motor TrafficNo Hills, Intersections or Speed Limit on the New Reichs Auto Bahnen Road; Pedestrians, Cyclists Barred

In Germany they are looking from ten to fifty years ahead in the construction of highways. Old, winding traffic arteries are being supplemented by a great ribbon of concrete, which is slowly but surely being unwound across the country in an almost level stretch. This ribbon is broken-up into two lanes on one side and two on the other, with a broad stretch of greensward and flower-beds between.

Known as the Reichs Auto Bahnen Road, this highway is barred to pedestrians and cyclists, while there are no intersections or patrolling police officers and the speed limit is the limit of your car.

The thrill of travelling over this new highway was experienced by M. P. Hofstetter, prominent Toronto business man, who recently returned from a two-months' tour of Europe. Mr. Hofstetter, who is a native of Basel, Switzerland, outlined in an interview the remarkable transformation he had found so far as German highways were concerned.

He pointed out that a few thousand miles of this new road had been built and that it extended from the Dutch border as far as Heidelberg. "Construction work," continued Mr. Hofstetter, "is still proceeding. These highways are absolutely safe and there are very few accidents. The average speed of the German cars is 40 miles an hour because they are small cars, but you can travel as fast as you wish if your car can 'take it'. I was travelling 85 miles an hour in my Oldsmobile sedan, in which I toured Europe, and believe me, it is the best way to travel in some of these countries." Mr. Hofstetter enlarged upon this point. "You see, they do not bother you so much at the border. They think you are wealthy and of some importance when they see you in a car."

Mr. Hofstetter disclosed how the German authorities deal with reckless or dangerous drivers. He pointed out that there are bridges which span the new highway at different points, and on each bridge is an observation post. Should a man be observed zig-zagging or driving in a dangerous manner, the official at one post telephones to the observation post farther ahead. By the time the car reaches this post, an officer is waiting. The driver is ordered to stop and, as a rule, is not permitted to continue his trip.

Asked if he had to pay any toll charge, Mr. Hofstetter replied that the only country where he had been called upon to pay a charge was in Holland, where he paid at the rate of sixty cents a day.

Plan Check-Up of Automobiles

Major Girouard has requested his men to visit garages and examine licence plates carefully to determine whether the plates are genuine or have been tampered with. It is estimated that there are 180,000 motor vehicles of all kinds in the province and 100,000 in the district of Montreal; it is impossible to estimate how much time will be required to complete this task. The co-operation of motorists, however, is expected to speed up the efforts of the officers, who have been urged to be courteous and do their duty with tact and diplomacy.

WALES GOING BILINGUAL

Any witness at the assizes who prefers to do so may give evidence in the Welsh language, ruled Mr. Justice du Parc at recent court sittings in Carnarvon, Wales.

FINED UNDER OLD BY-LAW

Joseph Capener, convicted under an old city by-law in London, Ont., was fined $3 and costs for throwing an article on the street. Police charged that Capener threw an apple that struck the side of an automobile.

MAYOR BECOMES A MOTHER

The Mayor of Greentop, Mo., is a new mother! Mrs. C. H. Vanosdol, wife of a young physician and mayor of the village of 300 population, gave birth to a baby girl. The four other council members also are women. Two of them are mothers.

ODD APPLICANTS FOR RELIEF

Odd recipients of relief among the inhabitants of Bonn, Germany, are a Negro tribe, lions, tigers and performing fleas. They belong to a circus, which has now gone bankrupt, and the town is looking after the whole show, numbering 130 performers, in addition to all the animals.

NEW BRUNSWICK ROADS

New Brunswick is proceeding with a long-term program of highway improvement. Eventually hard surfacing will cover most of the 1,500 miles of the province's main highway system. As a result of intensive road construction during the past few years, nearly 500 miles of the coastline and trans-province arteries have been paved, and another 250 miles are now being surfaced or are being graded in preparation for paving during the next year or so.

KINGSTON MAN PAYS BACK RELIEF

In 1932 a Kingston, Ont., man received relief from the city to the extent of $140. Recently this same man went to the City Hall and handed the mayor $147, an amount in excess of the sum received when he was in dire need. He stated that after he had been assisted by the city he had been able to secure a job and in this way had been able to provide for himself and family, and to put a little by to pay back the city.

CASTLE BUILT ON LAND—SPECULATION PROFITS

Sir Henry Pellatt surprised the guests at a luncheon in his honor at Casa Loma, a familiar landmark to tourists visiting Toronto, by revealing that this huge castle, now the property of the city because of unpaid taxes, "did not cost him a cent."

The castle is being operated by a service club as a sightseeing proposition, the proceeds going to the club's work for children.

Sir Henry explained he had bought up all the land surrounding the site and had little trouble cutting it up and disposing of it at prices which made it possible to build the castle. Sir Henry, who occupied it for some years, intended it eventually for a military museum.

Because it was to be a museum, the property was exempted from taxes for five years. When the city jumped the taxes to $1,000 a month at the end of that time, Sir Henry said, "I walked out the front door and said 'gentlemen, you can have it.'"

Publicity Convenor Reports Month's Activities Among County Women's Institutes

Brownburg Branch held a very interesting Canadianization meeting with the Rev. S. J. Pike as guest speaker. Mr. Pike spoke of recent Canadian happenings, also of the gold mining and other industries. Their roll-call was "Name a Canadian war hero."

Frontier Branch heard a paper by the County President on the "Present Conflicts" and planned help for fire sufferers, also a social evening and treat for the children, for their next meeting. Members held a pantry shower for fire sufferers, and request a shower of scrap books for the Children's Memorial Hospital, for their December meeting.

Jerusalem - Bethany also heard an address given by the County President on Canadian Health. Their roll-call was "Do's and Don'ts for the Sick Room." The provincial Home Economics outline was read and plans for Christmas cheer were made; also a beautiful quilt and infant's teddy-bear blanket was presented to a young married lady who had moved out of the district. A miscellaneous shower for fire sufferers had previously been given.

Lachute Branch heard "The Story of Confederation", an address prepared by the convenor of Canadianization and National Events, Mrs. C. Duncan, and read in her absence by Mrs. Ralph McQuat. Their roll-call was the "Name of a Father of Confederation". Mrs. Geo. Y. Deacon gave a very interesting account of the lecture on Art and the W. I. ladies' visit to Government House. A donation of money was made to the library, and poppies were sold by the branch in aid of the Canadian Legion.

Morin Heights also sold poppies in aid of the veterans and heard an interesting address given by Miss Bragg, entitled "What Shall Make Us a Truly Great Nation" and "A Dominion Day Confession of Faith." Their roll-call was "Why I am proud to be a Canadian." Two new members were welcomed and a life-membership presented to Mrs. Rufus McCullough.

Lakefield served luncheon at the annual Farmers' Club plowing match; sold poppies for Armistice Day; they replenished first aid kits in two local schools; welcomed the new teacher and presented a gift to a member who had just become a bride.

Pioneer Branch made plans for a Christmas tree; read Institute notes of the neighboring province, from Ottawa Farm Journal and the Farmer's Magazine; also read the poem "Neighbors". Their roll-call was "Recipes", in which one recipe was from England. Mrs. Arnold Parker read an interesting article on "Making a Comforter". This branch held a tea and home-cooking sale in October, also gave a layette to a needy home and other articles of clothing; donated money to pay a nurse; gave a donation to fire sufferers. The members heard a talk by Mrs. J. S. Giles on her Saguenay trip, and read the convenor's outlines for Home Economics and Legislation. Miss Morrin, Legislation Convenor, read an article on "Legislation as it applies to Women" and the Secretary, Mrs. McKenzie, read a paper on "Practical Legislation."

Upper Lachute - East End had nine members in attendance to answer their roll-call with the name of a provincial cabinet minister. Current National Events were read by Mrs. Elliott, also an article on health.

Schipperke Is Blackest

Dog of Various Breeds

The schipperke (pronounced skip-erke) is the blackest dog of all breeds and it was in faroff Belgium that they won their first merits, according to a writer in the Los Angeles Times. Around the barges that float on the Flemish canals runs a wide ledge and there these small dogs would keep watch, barking an alarm at danger and assisting the barge captains so efficiently that the name of "little skipper" was bestowed upon them.

They have one very noticeable characteristic — the complete absence of a tail. The majority are born tailless.

The average "Skip" weighs about twelve pounds. Their general appearance is that of a small cobby dog, intensely alert, and exceedingly dainty. The head has a fox-like expression with its pointed muzzle and sharp, erect ears. The eyes are dark, oval in shape, and very expressive.

Try This On Your Friends

Three artists were trying to see who had painted the most realistic picture.

"Why, I painted a picture of Abraham Lincoln which was so life-like that I had to shave it every day," said the first artist.

"Oh, that's nothing," said the second. "I once painted a picture of a piece of marble which was so like one that when I threw it in some water it splashed like real marble and sank."

"Well, now," said the third, "I painted a picture of a hen, and, thinking it no good, threw it into the waste basket, and it laid there."

Over Sixteen Millions Spent on Road Works

When the Quebec Roads Department completes its work this year there will have been spent between 16 and 17 million dollars, according to Hon. Francois J. Leduc, Minister of Roads, as quoted in the Montreal Gazette. This sum is within the limits of the appropriations voted by the Legislature.

The expenditure of this sum will mean that from 20,000 to 25,000 men will have been employed at reasonable wages, and when the roads on which work has been done are completed it will be possible to show this province is able to compete on a favorable basis with other provinces, the minister said.

Help That Hinders

A young lad decided to become a collector of beautiful moths. He watched with breathless interest as a beautiful moth struggled to free itself from the cocoon.

As the struggles seemed to yield results too slowly, the young man took his scissors and cut away a bit of the cocoon.

The moth came out readily enough, but it never flew. It appears that only through struggle does the strength get from the body to the wings.

The lesson in this, for young people, is obvious.

AUNT JEAN HERSELF

A PRAYER

When I grow old, Lord, let me live
Where tumbling waters singing go,
Through ferny glens and fragrant meads,
Dear childhood haunts of long ago.
Oh, may I hear their lulling croon
As I lie down to rest,
Before I reach, like them, the tide
Of ocean's stormy crest.
And may their beauty calm my soul,
Their songs bring peace to me,
As death's dark waters o'er me roll,
Like mighty rivers of the sea.

THE SCRAMBLE

While Mr. Perry and Tim were exploring the depths of the cedar clump, Bob had the children laughing over the wild dash they all had made for the fence when Betsy Bobbitt was pursuing them. "I'll bet," exclaimed Bob, "that was even a bigger scramble than you had at the party last night. Now wasn't it?" "I'll say it was!" said Tom. "I never ran so hard in my life. It seemed silly too, to be running from old Betsy. Why, we pet her every day and she has never been cross with us before."

"I'm afraid I shall never want to pet her again," sighed Dollie. "Her eyes were terrible."

"I think you will find her your quiet old Betsy in a few days again. She is excited today and I think she had good reason, perhaps." That Betsy Bobbitt had good reason to be excited was quite evident when, in a few moments, Tim came out of the clump of cedars carrying a tiny white calf with a black and white face and some very black spots on its side. "Jupiter! Jupiter!" he was saying—then "Two of them, no less! Twin calves, by all that is wonderful."

"Twin calves!" Tom shouted, falling backwards off the stone in his excitement. He had never heard of twin calves before. Jumping up he and Dollie ran towards the fence just as their father came out of the cedars carrying another white calf very much like the first one, while Betsy Bobbitt was running behind him and trying to push her nose underneath his arm that she might keep watch over her baby.

"Come along, Betsy," Mr. Perry was saying coaxingly. "Never mind, old lady, we're not going to hurt your pets." Then, sharply, "Keep out of sight, Bob! She does not seem to recognize you." Betsy was again making angry noises deep down in her throat; she had caught a glimpse of Bob as he started to cross the fence to follow the group home.

"It's tough luck on me, isn't it Puss?" he said, looking down at Dollie, who was waiting for him on the other side of the fence. "Poor little Bobbie can't go to the party, it seems," he added with a grin. "But you can run along, dear. I'll come later when I am sure they have your wild pet safely tied in her stall."

"I'll wait for you, Bobbitts," said Dollie. "You'll be lonely here. I do hope they hurry though, and get Betsy in. I'm getting hungry for my breakfast."

"So am I!" Bob agreed rather absent-mindedly. Dollie's words about him being lonely had set him thinking—how many times he had been lonely for this particular spot, when he first went to the city to work. How he had longed for the soft rustle of the pine trees, for the fragrance of the cedar boughs that leaned over the fence and brushed his face as he plodded back and forth, harrowing, after his father had sown the grain; for the sound of old Skip's bark as he raced after squirrels, and the drum of partridges beyond the wheat field. But Tom was calling excitedly, "Hurry up, Dollie, and come to the barn. Daddy has put the calves in the box stall!"

"Sure we'll hurry, Tom!" Bob shouted back, swinging Dollie into his shoulder and starting off towards the barn.

Bob insisted on bringing Grannie down to breakfast with them. They had it in the room where Grandfather Parker sat, and what an exciting time the children had, telling their grandparents about their wild scramble to escape Betsy Bobbitt's horns when she rushed out of the cedars. "Wouldn't you like to see the twin calves, Grandmother?" Dollie asked.

"I certainly would," her grandmother replied, a bit wistfully. "Well, you shall!" exclaimed Bob. "I'll take both you and Grandfather over to the barn in the car after breakfast, and Dollie and Tom can lead the calves out for you to see. They will be strong enough to walk by now."

"Oh joy!" shouted Tom, "Won't that be fun, Grandmother?"

"It will indeed, laddie. Now hurry and eat your breakfast so that you will be ready. You do not want to have to scramble at the last minute, do you?"

"No Gran, I think I have had scrambles enough to do me for a while."

Forward, March!

Many nations have expressed pride in the ability of their soldiers to march in spite of hardships, but mere humans must take a back seat to several of the lower forms of animal life when it comes to marching.

The white ants are famous enough but the warrior ants are the real marchers of the animal world. They travel eight or nine abreast, with the ants behind using the actual footprints of those in front. On the march they look like a black ribbon which twists and turns around rocks and trees until the end of the march is over.

Stand in front of this column and immediately you will be covered with a vicious biting army. Knock them off if you wish but as long as you stay where you are others will swarm up to take the places of those dislodged. Your ears, nose and even your eyes will be filled. Get out of that line of march if you want to live. These warrior ants are fighters.

The Author of "Gulliver's Travels"

Dean Swift stung men to activity with a whip of short, sharp, incisive words. But to those who would run too much to his style it is no more than fair to warn them that he died insane.

He was born 270 years ago next Tuesday—Nov. 30, 1667. Before he was five he could read any chapter in the Bible. However, his college years were a disappointment to friends who expected much. He preferred to select studies according to his own liking rather than follow the regular course.

It is said that he had political ambitions and that because he was unable to realize his dreams he dipped his pen in vitriol and harassed men who did win positions of power. In this manner he is said to have had a greater influence over his age than if he had held office.

His failure in matters of the heart, and the early death of "Stella" whom he had loved as a child and had watched grow into beautiful womanhood, took much of the joy out of his success in "The Battle of the Books" and "Gulliver's Travels", especially the latter.

Though a man of sadness, discouraged with humanity, he was the source of great merriment to others. Addison called him, "The most agreeable companion, the truest friend, and the greatest genius of his age."

Many do not know that he was the originator of the following homely sayings: "Bread is the staff of life," "A penny for your thoughts," "The sight of you is good for sore eyes."

He was buried in the same coffin with Stella, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, of which he had been dean.

His epitaph tells much: "Here lies the body of Jonathan Swift, D.D., dean of this cathedral, where burning indignation can no longer tear his heart. Go, traveler, and intimate if you can a man who was an undaunted champion of liberty."

BOY SCOUTS THE WORLD OVER

Boy Scouts from distant points at the year's international Scout Jamboree in Holland included 8 from Venezuela, 9 from Siam, 12 from Japan, 25 from China, 5 from Iran, 30 from Mexico and 30 from Iceland.

BOY SCOUT ARTISTS IN FLOWERS

Three brilliant beds of autumn flowers before the headquarters hut of the 1st Parry Sound Scout Troop, on the local fair grounds, was one of the exhibits which attracted the attention of flower lovers at the annual fall fair. The Scouts are making plans for a more extensive display next year.

A SCOUT STRETCHER OF COATS AND POLES

An opportunity for practicing approved Boy Scout-style first aid was provided unintentionally by one of their number during a Saturday hike of the 1st Sudbury, Ont., Scout Troop, when Scout Fergus Ducharme fractured a leg. Splints were improvised and a stretcher made of coats and poles, and the patient carried out to the highway.

ANOTHER SCOUT CLIFF RESCUE

Latest in the list of cliff rescues by English Boy Scouts was the finding and saving of three London girls who found themselves trapped by the incoming tide and had taken refuge in a cave up the face of the cliff. When they failed to return at nightfall, searchers were sent out, and were joined by camping Scouts of the 161st North London Troop. Two of the boys located the girls, and after jumping a four-foot crevice, reached them, and got them up the cliff to safety.

Jingle Bells, Engine Bells

A telephone call at Bonaventure Station, Montreal, serves as a gentle reminder for all children to begin their "good behaviour", for Christmas is approaching. The call was from a little lady who wanted to know how much it would cost and how long it would take to go and visit Santa Claus at the North Pole. Not to belie the name "Information Bureau", the operator informed the child that it would take a long time and cost much money. She was told she would have to travel to the sound of engine bells as far north as the Canadian National trains could go, and then fly the rest of the distance by plane. The little lady said she would think it over.

Rev. Amos J. Thomas, M.A., B.D., Centenary United Church, Hamilton: "The Toll Brothers' travelogue was the most enjoyable I have ever heard and was enthusiastically received by a very large audience. The pictures were unusually beautiful, the presentation thrilling and fascinating. It was an educational and inspirational entertainment which left one with a desire to hear again the story of these clever and courageous adventurers."—See and hear this unique entertainment at Lachute United Church Friday evening, Nov. 26. OXEN

When I first came to the Maritimes, oxen struck me as being funny. But my amusement has turned to admiration. Most of them are such good looking beasts, so obviously well-cared for, fat and sleek with shiny coats. They impress you with their strength and the way they go about their business, heads down and pulling strong. We watched the ox-pulling contest at the Nova Scotian Provincial Exhibition. Just to see these animals was a pleasure. Their coats were so shiny and well-brushed. And their harness! Didn't it shine! The largest pair, (I think 'yoke' is the word I should use but am frightened to for fear it is not right), pulled 6300 pounds. The driver put his knee on their snouts to pull their heads down, cracked the whip and they started to pull. You could see the muscles on their powerful shoulders stand out; they braced their legs, and slowly started with their load, (which was boxes filled with lead, loaded on a stone-boat). Then there was the cutest little pair of two-year olds. They were driven by a Miss Zwicker of Bridgewater. She looked to be in her teens and was a little bit of a girl. Probably she will not grow any more, but her oxen will. They were harnesses, not like the other oxen, but in a regular harness like that used for horses, and they pulled a ton. I never saw anything more business-like, nor anything that attended to their business better than the oxen. Conditions that exist over a period of years have a purpose behind them. You realize the suitability of the use of oxen after you see them doing jobs that horses could not possibly do — such as pulling cart-loads of sea-weed to use as fertilizer, (locally known as sea manure), over boulders three feet in diameter. Nova Scotia drives plenty of cars and trucks and oxen, but not so many horses.

PARENT EDUCATION

I hope that many of my readers are studying parent education. If you have not started, it is not too late to start a group. It is truly named "parent education." It is very sobering and extremely disconcerting to find many of the things you find wrong with your children to be the result of wrong handling on the parents' part. Most of us seem to expect that when we have a child we automatically know how to be wise parents. Love is not enough. We are ready to learn how to do any other job but when it comes to one of the most important in the world, we trust to instinct. We demand that our teachers know their jobs and are trained but as parents we are not ready to learn. It is an almost universal experience to find that, as one studies parent education, the whole house runs smoother and there is less family friction. There is a lot to be learned in getting on with people and there is no better place to start than in one's own family.

THREE MEALS A DAY

One of the difficult things in keeping house is to choose the meals so that you do not have the same thing too often. Did you ever try making lists of foods? When you have a few minutes, maybe while the vegetables are boiling for dinner, take your pen in hand and write down all the desserts you can think of. Then take your cook-books and the collection of reipes you have gathered from time to time, and look them over, adding favorites to the list of those recipes you have always meant to try but just never got round to it. Do the same thing with meats and then with supper dishes. When you are trying to decide what to have for meals, take your lists and either have them in rotation or choose the one most suitable. The lists will remind you of foods you have forgotten about. It is queer the way we make a thing over and over for a time and then forget all about it, maybe for years. The list will help revive old favorites. Make a list, too, of company menus. Sometimes when you have company you have food which appears to be thoroughly enjoyed. Perhaps you have chosen foods which complement each other and make a satisfactory meal. Put it down on paper so that you will have something to shoot at again. List easy combinations for afternoon tea, or for your bridge snacks at night. It is not much trouble to make these lists and it will save energy.

COOKING BACON

If your bacon is cooked in the centre and soft at the ends, it has been cooked at too high a temperature. Bacon is the exception that proves the rule, that meat should always be started to cook at a high temperature to sear the meat and keep in the juices. Bacon should go into a cold pan and be cooked slowly, pouring off the fat if necessary.

CREAMED TUNA

Drain a half-pound can of tuna in the colander and run cold water through to remove oil. Mix with a cup of cream sauce, 2 chopped hard cooked eggs, and season with a little scraped onion and salt and pepper. Put in a baking dish, then cover with buttered crumbs and bake about a half-hour in a moderate oven until the crumbs are browned. This is one of the handy dishes that can be made in the morning and tucked in to bake while you are setting the table, after an afternoon out.

ICE BOX COOKIES

1 cup brown sugar, 1/2 cup melted butter, 1 egg, 1 1/4 cups flour, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 1/2 cup nut meats, 1/2 cup dates, speck of salt, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Mix ingredients in order named. Form into roll and chill in ice-box. Cut in slices and bake at 400 degrees.

Girls away at school will delight in the "mam'selle" hand bags made of suede antelope with carved catalin tops. These bags are perfect for a trip to town that includes a bit of shopping and the matinee, too. Both dressy and roomy, the new bag fills this double role, but is not too elaborate to go with college girl clothes. They are to be had in almost any color, so choose one to match your suit or strike a vivid touch of contrast.

No Christmas tree will have more gaudy colors than the current issue of compacts and boudoir accessories. Now that the coronation colors have disappeared from the fashion picture and the King has fitted himself comfortably on the throne seat, new compacts of catalin, combined with tapestry, leather, metals and mesh chain are now showing up in a line of Rex colors, cardinal red, burgundy, green pearl to emulate the jewels that one who is Kingly is supposed to wear. The new compacts range in shape from round ones trimmed with tapestry and justly termed Marie Antoinette, to those of mere modern motif rectangular in shape and named Barclay Square.

They Made a Ton of This Plum Pudding

Working in the tiny kitchens of two dining cars, one at Montreal and one at Winnipeg, C.N.R. chefs have made a ton of plum pudding to be served to travellers this Christmas.

Here is the recipe, an old English one, for a family-size pudding. It will make two and a half pounds, ten generous individual portions.

Ingredients

1/2 lb. bread crumbs, 1/2 lb. beef suet, 2 oz. flour, 1/2 lb. brown sugar, 2 oz. mixed peel, pinch salt, 1/4 teaspoon baking soda, grated rind and juice of half a lemon, 1/4 pint of milk, 3 eggs, 1/2 lb. sultanas, 1/2 lb. raisins, 1/4 lb. currants, 1/4 oz. cinnamon, 1/4 oz. nutmeg, 1/4 oz. allspice, 1 1/2 oz. brandy.

Procedure

Mix the dry ingredients together thoroughly, then add the beaten eggs, milk and brandy, and mix all together thoroughly. Grease inside of pudding bowl or covered mould to prevent pudding from sticking. If pudding bowl is used, cover bowl with floured gauze tied tightly around bowl to keep moisture away from pudding. Boil pudding for three hours. Heat thoroughly before serving, then unmould on dish. Serve with sprig of holly on top.

Serve with either hard or custard sauce, made as follows:

Hard Sauce

Ingredients—1/4 lb. butter, 1/4 lb. powdered sugar.

Procedure—Mix butter and sugar until the mixture becomes snow white; add a few drops of lemon extract. Roll in wax paper, place in refrigerator until hard. Cut in slices. Serve slice on top of plum pudding.

Custard Sauce

Ingredients—2 eggs, 1/2 cup powdered sugar, 2 cups milk, 2 table-spoons corn starch.

Procedure—Beat up eggs, corn starch, sugar together thoroughly; add milk; beat together again. Place in double boiler. Allow mixture to become hot at same time beating it up to prevent it from becoming lumpy. Add few drops vanilla extract. Allow mixture to thicken. Serve hot over pudding.

If it is desired to serve brandy with pudding, unmould plum pudding on dish, place sprig of holly on top of pudding, pour brandy around base and light it with match.

Milk money... is HOME TOWN money

Steady circulation of milk money means steady business in a dairy community.

Milk money flows back into the community to the dairy farmers and to the men at the milk plant. It then circulates to the local storekeepers, the doctor, the dentist, and other home town people. It helps support schools, libraries, churches, hospitals, fire and police departments, and other home institutions.

It is Borden's job and Borden's privilege to contribute to this steady circulation of milk money by building new markets and bigger markets for milk and its products.

Tea for every Taste

"SALADA" TEA

Can You Make Good Tea?

Nearly everybody makes a pot of tea on occasions, and with many thousands it is the custom to do so several times a day. Yet it is a curious fact that all do not know how to get the full flavour from their tea. For instance, it is a most important point to use only freshly drawn, cold water to fill the kettle. Water that has already been boiled or water from the hot tap should never be used as it has lost much of the aeration which gives the desired sparkle and life to a cup of tea.

When the kettle has been filled with this fresh, cold water, bring it quickly to a boil. Have ready a crockery teapot and scald it out, so as to warm the earthenware thoroughly. Pour out this water, and into the warm pot put one teaspoonful of good quality tea for every cup it holds. Then add one teaspoonful "for the pot", as the old rule goes. Steam issuing from the kettle in a steady plume will indicate the water is at full boil, and this is the moment to fill the teapot. Cover with a tea cosy if you have one, or at any rate, allow it to stand for a full five minutes before pouring. The ritual of tea making is very simple but must be carefully observed if the full flavour is to be enjoyed.

MUTUAL BENEFITS

Quebec Province and Dominion Stores are each receiving benefits from the other: the well-being of each is of the greatest importance to the other.

We have made an investment in this Province, and the public have made an investment in us — not only have we many Quebec stockholders, but those manufacturers and suppliers who count upon our purchasing power, are also interested in our prosperity.

We have raised living standards by placing a wider variety of better, fresher foods within easier buying reach of a greater number of people. And the Province of Quebec has provided us with these people to buy our goods.

So both the Province and Dominion Stores are dependent in a measure on each other. What helps one helps both. This applies to the people of the Province themselves for manufacturers, farmers, and buyers of our goods, all have a stake in our prosperity.
